As my friend, Mr. Husenbhai Laljee, said so clearly, Indian growers had not gone there at the point of the bayonet, nor had they gone there at the instigation of a Christian Cross, nor had they gone there with the power and the strength and prestige of a great Empire as the British Empire. They had gone there as regular traders, as regular businessmen. Their only weapon, their only strength, has always been their integrity, their willingness to deal with others on a par. They have never tried to steal a trade from others as Mussolini is trying to do. They have never tried to find a place for themselves under the sun as Japan had done in Manchukuo only the other day. They had not gone there because the Hindu Rajas or the Nawabs were behind them, but they have gone there because of their own efficiency, and they stand there and they will continue to stand there only so long as they continue to be efficient traders as well as cultivators. My friend, Maulana Shaukat Ali, is very anxious that nothing should be said or done in this House which might in any way jeopardise the interests of the clove growers in Zanzibar. I am in complete agreement with my friend, that nothing should be said and nothing should be done to jeopardise their interests, but who is it who really is harming the interests of the Zanzibar clove growers? It is not Indians who do it. It has not been stated so by anybody, not even by the Clove Growers' Association of that country, but it is the Britishers, it is the British traders who are really at the bottom of all this mischief. Who is interested in this Clove Growers' Association which was rejuvenated only the other day? It is the Europeans or their nominees, and not one Indian is really represented on this Association. And, therefore, in whose interest does this Association claim to have been established there? Not in the interest of clove growers, but in the interests of Britishers themselves. Well, Sir, Honourable Members may wonder how it is that the Britishers come in here. Britishers come in here in an extraordinarily mischievous fashion. They come in first of all as guardians of clove growers and save them from the clutches of the Indian moneylenders and Indian traders, and yet what is it that they want to do? They want to have the right for themselves to deal in the clove marketing trade, and they want for themselves the right to license or not to license any Indian trader and it is up to them to say whether the licence fee should be Rs. 400 or Rs. 5,000 .....

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I do not wish to interrupt my friend in his speech, but I think it is just as well to point out that the licence fee is not fixed by the Clove Growers' Association but by His Highness the Sultan of Zanzibar.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : By whom is it fixed, Sir?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : By the Government of Zanzibar.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Well, the licence fee is fixed by the Government of Zanzibar, but the Government of Zanzibar does not seem to be the real representative of the clove growers. It seems to be an interested party. It is this Government which has thought it fit to pass six decrees within a short period of 12 days; it is this Government which almost dares for its own purposes even the Colonial Secretary, if not the Secretary of State for India, and how can the interests of the Indian traders be safe in the hands of a Government like this? And this is a Government, Sir, which is entirely a tool in the hands of the Colonial Government,—the Colonial Government which has become notorious in the recent past for having broken that excellent, fine and impartial declaration of Lord Passfield embodied in that White Paper. And, Sir, I find that my friend, Sir Girja Shankar, will have no objection to Indians becoming cultivators. There are some Indian cultivators today, but how can they remain cultivators hereafter? If any one of those Indians finds it necessary to sell away his land he can sell it, not to any other Indian, but to a non-Indian. And if he wants to save the clove growers of Zanzibar, how can they be saved if they are at liberty to sell away their lands to everybody else in this world except Indians? What provision is there to prevent the Clove Growers' Association itself from taking usufruct mortgages of the clove growers' lands and even from purchasing the lands of clove growers? If the Clove Growers' Association can purchase those lands from clove growers and afterwards sell out those lands to Europeans and everybody else except an Indian, how can the clove growers be saved? Again, how can the Indians improve their land holdings? Can they purchase from anybody else except an Arab, except a Negro? No. They cannot purchase from anybody. They cannot purchase even from amongst themselves, and, therefore, in course of time, the only result would be that all Indians there will become landless and they will be obliged to ply the trade which my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, abhors, the middleman's trade.

I do not want a middleman, I am opposed to him, but the best way to avoid a middleman is for the State itself to undertake the marketing of those cloves. Does the State propose to do that? No, never. What the State proposes to do is to hand over the business to a private organisation. And what is this organisation? It only came into existence the other day. My Honourable friend, Sir Girja Shankar, said, that it has been in existence since 1927, but it was far from the truth. What was in existence in 1927 is entirely different from what has come into existence today. Mr. Strickland who has become famous for his very valuable reports on Co-operation in other countries as well as in India had not in his mind a Clove Growers' Association like the present. The present Clove Growers' Association has been brought into existence by interested parties in order to assist European businessmen and not the clove growers. I, therefore, suggest, that it is better for my Honourable friend to address his swan song and the motto, "do unto others what you would wish others to do unto you", more to his masters, the Britishers, than to us. When the question of separation of Burma was mooted, as soon as it was mooted, the Indians at the Round Table Conference accepted it at once. That shows that Indians are not at heart imperialistic. When this question of protecting the clove growers was mooted on the floor of the House, everybody got up and said, we do not want these people to be harmed. But at the same time, to the extent to which our Indian traders can be protected and helped in the plying of their legitimate trade the Government should certainly come to their rescue. And what is the answer we get? "We cannot retaliate." Yes, we cannot retaliate, we know that, because this Government is a subordinate Government,—it has been said ad nauseum. True, but what is it that we are to do in the meanwhile? We cannot do anything to force the hands of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, we happen to be a subordinate Government. That is why, this is an additional reason why we should do our best to achieve Swaraj in this country. One of the Leaders of the European Group was mocking at us whenever we said Swaraj. Yes, he does not want us to gain Swaraj because he knows once we get Swaraj we won't allow such indignities to continue. He does not want us to get Swaraj because once we get Swaraj he cannot remain a European and go on enjoying all those special privileges while refusing to grant even the ordinary legitimate trade facilities for us in any part of the British Empire. He does not want us to get Swaraj in this country because he knows that the British Empire, the very next day, will shatter to pieces. Therefore, I stand here, not to ask this Government for a paltry benefit for the time being, because I know whatever they can do subject to the disabilities that they are in today, will not go anywhere near to helping my countrymen in Zanzibar or in any other part of the world. I do not want this Government to go down on their bended knees and with a begging bowl to the Secretary of State for the Colonies. He was my junior at Oxford. He was a socialist and now he may not be a socialist. I am still a socialist and I became a socialist very much earlier than he. I was one of the founders of the Oxford Labour Club. And I claim here better treatment for my fellowmen in other countries in the name of socialism, and I do not want any imperialist privilege for me. But, at the same time, I want my national honour to be safeguarded—not by this Government, I know this Government cannot safeguard our honour, but by the Government that we are trying our best to achieve. And I want those of us here who are Indians—I want them—at least in words of mouth—to associate themselves with us vigorously and declare that they are prepared to take every possible constitutional step to safeguard the interests of India, and India's honour and India's name and prestige. (Applause.)

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : I appreciate the intricacy of the task which the Honourable the Education Secretary had to perform here this afternoon. But all the same I cannot disguise from myself the feeling that his speech, in spite of the generosity which he showed in accepting my Resolution, was rather disappointing. As I just said, I am not unaware of the difficulties of the position in which he is placed, but there are occasions when too much of caution is as undesirable as too much of daring. I submit that when Indian interests had been clamouring for relief for the last one year and a half and there had been no response whatever in a concrete shape it was high time for the Government of India to make an unambiguous and unequivocal declaration of their determination not only to uphold the interests of Indians in Zanzibar, but also to vindicate Indian self-respect and national pride here. I am sorry that, as on so many other occasions, they have again been found wanting on this. I am not surprised, for the history of Great Britain has the words "Too late" written in it in the boldest letters, from page to page and from line to line. Sir, the position has been clearly placed before the House. The Honourable the Education Secretary gave us the other side of the picture, if I may say so. Yet he cannot blame us very much if we cannot give preference to his ipse dixit as against the report of Mr. Menon who studied the question on the spot, devoting ample time and all his resources to it in order to arrive at the truth as to the correct state of affairs in Zanzibar. His statements have been mostly in variance, wherever they have not been in agreement with me, with Mr. Menon, and in so far as Mr. Menon had first hand knowledge, I would rather be guided by him than by the Education Secretary to the Government of India. My Honourable friend pointed out the difference which he noticed in my tone. I may repeat that I am one of the realists in this House who will not be a party to anything that would in the least tend to prejudice the Indians who are settled abroad even if we fail to achieve anything effective to help them. I am aware of the helplessness of the present situation, but I would suffer agony in silence rather than be provoked into blurting anything. That may recoil upon my people abroad. That is the explanation, if one were needed, for the appeal that I made to the Government of India, but I would also like the Government of India to bear in mind what I believe Lord Amptill once observed that if the Government failed in protecting the rights of Indians abroad, it would lead to grave consequences. Do they even now not realise to what enormous extent the friction and the bitterness in this country is due to the treatment accorded to Indians in British dominions and British protectorates? I would just like them to take their minds back a little and to think of the history of this country since the return of Komagata Maru. I will not say more. I will ask them to remember what has been happening since the Sikhs returned from Canada and they may yet learn a lesson, if the Government of India can ever learn one. We were told that the steps that had been taken in Zanzibar were almost on a par with what had been done in our own country recently. I would like to know if the Government of this country is prepared to enact a measure to the effect that the jute growers of this land will be given relief in the matter of their debts but will not be allowed to sell their stock to the British merchants who export jute from this country to other countries. I would like to know if the British Government or the Secretary of State for the Colonies is prepared to make a law by which the labourers in rubber estates, the Federated Malay States, will be relieved of their debts and will not remain under any obligation to those who use them in methods, cruel and atrocious, for exploitation and for self-advantage. I will not multiply the instances, but the British Empire, howsoever we may regret it, and I am one of those who do, stands for exploitation and one could enumerate such instances not only in scores but in hundreds, if one were to apply oneself to this pastime. May I know when did this light dawn upon the Resident of the Zanzibar Government that this sort of protection was needed for the clove growers in that land. How is this decree to bear upon and affect the Zanzibar Distilleries, Limited, which has been registered in Zanzibar with the object of acquiring from the Zanzibar Government a licence to distil clove oil in the Protectorate?

“The capital of the company is £14,020 divided into 20 Founder's shares of £1 each and 140 ordinary shares of £100 each. The Directors of the Company are Mr. E. W. Bowill, Mr. D. A. J. Buxton, Mr. W. Jenkins and Mr. F. G. Pentecost, while the Manager in Zanzibar is Mr. J. Vincent.”

I would ask the Education Secretary to kindly enlighten us as to how many of these people are clove growers, to enlighten us how many of these are the native inhabitants of Zanzibar itself and how this monopoly of the Zanzibar Clove Growers' Association is to work hereafter. Sir, the Education Secretary told us that the Zanzibar Clove Growers' Association was not at all different from the association that was founded in 1927. Does he not know that that association was founded on a co-operative basis and that it had as many as 7,000 members while this association has not a single clove grower? I may also tell him that I am not unaware of the recommendations made by Sir Allan Pim or Mr. Strickland but they had suggested that all activities for the protection of the clove growers should be organised on a co-operative basis and they had definitely given their opinion against the creation of a monopoly. They had advised the Government not to do exactly what they have done! Sir, I should like to know from the Government of India what they have done in the matter of the appointment of a Trade Commissioner at Mombasa. The proposal was made to them long ago. Had such a Trade Commissioner been appointed in time, things would not have taken the course they have and the injury to Indian interests would not have been as grave as it has actually been. The Education Secretary asked us to wait and see how these decrees work and what effect they have on Indian interests and Indian trade. It is just like asking us to wait and see how the poison works in the system, until the body is dead and buried but we cannot afford to wait till that disastrous end. You cannot afford to see the man die under the influence of poison, even to enable a doctor to study the disease with a view to arrive at a correct diagnosis. Sir, in these circumstances, the Government of India should authoritatively declare that they stand for retaliatory measures and that they will introduce such measures without delay. I want them just to give an ultimatum to the Secretary of State for the Colonies and to the Zanzibar Government and if things are not set right, then to behave at least for once as a Government whose duty it is to safeguard the interests of Indians. I may tell the Education Secretary that I fully subscribe to the principle “Do unto others as you would be done by”. I would be ashamed if I stood for anything except equity, justice and fairplay but the gravamen of the charge as I have placed it before the House is this, that the Zanzibar Government has forged and framed these decrees, especially with a view to insult and to prejudice and injure the interests of Indians. In fact, the Attorney General admitted that the decrees had a racial purpose. My friend talked of the protection of the clove growers. He spoke of the relief of indebtedness. That is rather a strange method. Are the debtors to be completely absolved? There is to be a moratorium and it is admitted by the Zanzibar Government that the Africans and Arabs have no money to pay. The Indians who alone could liquidate the debts cannot purchase the property. What is the natural, logical corollary? The only means by which the debts could be liquidated and settled would be through transfer of land in part; but it cannot be transferred to Indians and others have no money to purchase. What is the consequence? Those to whom money is due will neither get the land nor the money and yet we are told that it is a just and a fair measure by one who, in theory at least, represents the interests of the overseas Indians in this matter. Sir, I have nothing much more to say.

5 P.M.

Honourable friend is speaking now of the Land Alienation Decree. I never said that the Land Alienation Decree, to the extent that it is racial, is a fair measure; in fact, I tried to make it clear that the Government of India adhere to the recommendation of Mr. Menon that they shall contest that decree.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant: Well, Sir, I am thankful even for small mercies, and I hope that as the Honourable the Education Secretary accepts the proposition that the Land Alienation Decree is unjust, unfair and insulting to Indians as such, some remedy will be found; but, as we also know that he has not succeeded so far in his efforts to get even this decree reversed or amended by the Zanzibar Government or the Secretary for the Colonies, let us trust that he will now adopt retaliatory measures, if not on any other ground then on the basis of the unfairness and the iniquitous character of this Land Alienation Decree and on account of the racial arrogance and racial insolence which is involved in it and is its integral and inseparable part. In fact that carries a greater sting than anything else. So, having failed in his endeavours in that direction, I hope he will now press for the enforcement of retaliatory measures. Sir, I am one of those who know that no nation, no country, no individual can assert and vindicate his or her position unless the nation or the Government is a part and parcel of a free and unfettered organism and organization. We are determined to concentrate upon that one objective and upon that panacea, but so long as we do not attain that position, it is our misfortune to appeal to the Government of India for the protection of the rights of Indians abroad, as there is no other way open before us. I hope, Sir, if not for anything else, we will have their sympathy for the agony which this process involves to us. (Loud and Prolonged Applause.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai.

[18TH SEP. 1935.]

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I suppose, Sir, I really have not a right of reply without your permission ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : As the subject is rather important, the Honourable Member may reply.

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I have just two points I should like to speak about, Sir, and nothing more. My Honourable friend, Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant, said that there has been established a certain firm in Zanzibar for the purpose of distilling cloves, and he seemed to see in that some move to link up the Clove Growers' Association with the company itself. I think, Sir, that the two are entirely unconnected, because, even if there had been no Clove Growers' Association in existence at all, that would not stand in the way of a company establishing itself in Zanzibar to purchase cloves in order to distill cloves. There is nothing of a monopolistic character in that. And, as regards my Honourable friend saying that he had expected me to make a more categorical statement than I made, from explanation I gave earlier, I think my Honourable friend could not expect the Government of India to say more than what I said at this stage.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Well, I am sorry I had a better estimate of the Government of India. That is all.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council to take all effective steps in the interests and to vindicate the position of Indian nationals settled in Zanzibar."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 19th September, 1935.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 19th September, 1935.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN.

Mr. Gurunath Venkatesh Bewoor, C.I.E., M.L.A. (Director General of Posts and Telegraphs).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

LIGHTING ARRANGEMENTS AT STATIONS OF THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

488. *Mr. B. B. Varma : Are Government aware that passengers are put to great inconveniences for having no lighting arrangements at most of the stations of the Bengal and North Western Railway, till just before the arrival of the train when a few dim lights are put up ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : On most railways, the practice on all except the more important stations is to light the platform lamps a little while before a passenger train is due in, but the lamps in waiting halls and sheds are kept burning so long as there are passengers waiting for a night train. Government are not aware that the practice on the Bengal and North Western Railway is different in this respect, but I am bringing the Honourable Member's question and my answer to the notice of the administration.

SUPPLY OF WATER AT STATIONS OF THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

489. *Mr. B. B. Varma : Are Government aware that arrangements for supply of water are not made on most of the railway stations on the Bengal and North Western Railway and the passengers are put to great inconvenience especially during the summer season ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The Agent, Bengal and North Western Railway, states that there are 94 stations on the system at which the total number of watermen permanently employed is 128. In addition, during the hot weather months, 106 temporary additional watermen are engaged.

At the larger stations, there are also hydrants at suitable places on the station platforms and water is supplied to passengers in trains by watermen provided with wheeled water tanks and buckets.

At the smaller stations, an adequate supply of fresh water is kept in buckets in the station verandahs and watermen or other staff specially deputed for the purpose carry water in buckets to passengers in trains. At stations at which engines take water, hydrants are also provided for the supply of fresh water to passengers.

The Agent reports that these arrangements have been found to be adequate.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is the Honourable Member aware that sufficient water is not kept at those stations ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Is my Honourable friend talking from personal experience of the Bengal and North Western Railway ?

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Yes, Sir.

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have no personal experience of that Railway.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will the Honourable Member try to ascertain the facts ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The facts have been ascertained and have been stated in reply to the question.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that because Government are going to acquire this particular line in two years' time, they are not prepared to spend money on the administration of the Railway ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The assumption of my Honourable friend is not quite correct. Government have not yet made up their mind as to whether this line should be acquired. It is correct to say that the option to acquire it arises two years hence.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : When we discussed this question in 1931, Government clearly stated that they extended the privilege only for five years, and no more.

Mr. P. R. Rau : Two options were given by the Company—one in 1937, and one in 1942.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : In view of the fact that money is very cheap now and it may not be so cheap in 1941, will Government seriously consider to acquire this line as early as possible ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : This is a point which will have to be considered next year.

OPENING OF BOOKING OFFICE AT MUZAFFARPORE.

490. *Mr. B. B. Varma : (a) Are Government aware that booking office at Muzaffarpore, Bengal and North Western Railway, is not open for 24 hours to the third class passengers and hence the public are put to inconveniences ?

(b) Are Government aware that in the morning, afternoon, and evening, several trains leave Muzaffarpore and there is one booking clerk to attend to all the windows ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state how many booking clerks are provided to attend to first, second and intermediate class passengers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The Agent, Bengal and North Western Railway, states :

“(a) that the third class booking office is open for 24 hours, and he has had no complaint either from the public or from members of his Local Advisory Committee on this point ;

(b) that during the busy periods of the day there are two booking clerks on duty ;

(c) that there are eight booking and parcel clerks, but only one is detailed to work in the upper class booking office and this is considered to be sufficient.”

EMPLOYEES OF THE INDIAN TEA CESS COMMITTEE.

491. *Mr. B. B. Varma : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indian employees of the Indian Tea Cess Committee, with their salaries and length of service ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I lay on the table a statement furnishing the information asked for.

Statement showing the number of Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indian employees of the Indian Tea Cess Committee with their salaries and length of service.

GRANTS MADE TO PROVINCES FOR THE IMPROVEMENT IN THE CONDITIONS OF THE CULTIVATION AND MARKETING OF SUGAR-CANE.

492. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether a grant of about four lakhs of rupees has been made to the United Provinces Government by the Government of India this year, from Excise duty, for the improvement in the conditions of the cultivation and marketing of cane ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether similar grants have been sanctioned for other provinces in India for the same purposes ?

(c) If the reply to part (b) above be in the affirmative, will Government please lay on the table a statement showing names of such provinces and the amounts paid to each of the provinces ?

(d) If the reply to parts (b) and (c) above be in the negative, will Government please state whether they intend to give such grants to such other provinces, where sugarcane is being produced and sugar is being manufactured in large quantities ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). A statement showing the provisional allocation to various provinces of the subsidy out of the proceeds of the sugar excise duty is placed on the table.

(d) Does not arise.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Have the Government of India asked for a report from the United Provinces Government about the manner in which they spent the money and whether they are convinced that the money was usefully spent ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The Government of India, before making the allocation, considered the schemes which the Government of the United Provinces had put forward. I do not exactly remember whether they have been asked to submit a report at the end of the year.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will the Honourable Member kindly say what amount has been allotted to the Bihar and Orissa Government ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The figures are in the statement. The amount allotted to the Bihar and Orissa Government is Rs. 2,90,000.

[19TH SEP. 1935.]

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Have Government already sent that money or have they only informed the Bihar and Orissa Government that the amount will be remitted ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : We have informed the Government of Bihar and Orissa that this money is available.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Have they prepared any scheme up till now ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : As in the case of the United Provinces Government, the Government of India had schemes from the Government of Bihar and Orissa also.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : May I suggest.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member cannot make suggestions now, he can put questions.

MUSLIMS IN CERTAIN CATEGORIES ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

493. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the total number of Station Masters employed at principal stations in grades V and VI and what is the proportion of Muslims amongst them ;

(b) total number of Station Superintendents on the North Western Railway ; how many Muslims are employed as Station Superintendents, if not, why not ;

(c) total number of Traffic Inspectors employed on the North Western Railway ; how many are Hindus, Sikhs and Muslims ;

(d) total number of Controllers, Deputy and Chief Controllers over the North Western Railway ; how many are Europeans, Hindus, Sikhs and Muslims ;

(e) what steps do Government propose to take to increase the ratio of Muslims in the above categories ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) to (d). Information regarding communal representation in railway services is given in the Annual Administration Report of Indian Railways. Government regret they are not prepared to supplement, with figures for individual categories of staff, the information given in that Report.

(e) As stated in paragraph 5 of the Memorandum of Supplementary Instructions, a copy of which will be found in the Library of the House, the orders of Government prescribing percentages for minority communities are to be applied to vacancies (as distinct from posts) in each grade or division of a service to be filled by direct recruitment and not to vacancies to be filled by promotion, which will continue as at present to be made solely on merit and seniority.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Will the Honourable Member tell me the page of the Annual Administration report at which figures for the North Western Railway are given separately ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : If my Honourable friend will meet me in the lobby, I will try and lead him through the pages of the report.

BALUCHI REGIMENTS AND SOLDIERS EMPLOYED DURING THE GREAT WAR.

494. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the number of Baluchi Regiments engaged during the Great War ;

(b) the number of Baluchi soldiers from Sind and Baluchistan employed during the Great War ;

(c) the number of Baluchi Officers and Indian Commissioned Officers employed during the Great War ;

(d) the number of Baluchi Units and Regiments disbanded after the Great War ;

(e) the number of Baluchis employed as officers and other ranks in the Indian Army at present ;

(f) the number of Baluchi Officers employed in Army Reserve during the Great War and at present ;

(g) the policy of Government regarding recruitment of officers, Indian Commissioned Officers and other ranks, in the Makran and Chagai Levy Corps in Baluchistan ;

(h) the names of various battle fronts where Baluchis were sent during the Great War ; and

(i) the number of Baluchis who died while on duty during the Great War ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Ten, viz., five pre-war battalions and five new battalions.

(b) On 1st January, 1916 .. .. . 496

On 1st January, 1917 .. .. . 526

On 1st January, 1918 .. .. . 681

On 1st January, 1919 .. .. . 1,575

(c) Separate figures are not available to show the number of Baluchis who served as Viceroy's Commissioned Officers during the Great War. There were no Indian Commissioned Officers during the Great War.

(d) Four. These battalions were raised during the Great War.

(e) No serving Indian Commissioned Officer is a Baluchi. Our records do not show whether any Baluchis are serving at present as Viceroy's Commissioned Officers. The number of Baluchi other ranks serving on the 1st January, 1935, was 58.

(f) As far as I can trace, the answer is ' Nil '.

(g) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given to part (d) of question No. 519, asked by him on the 25th February, last.

[19TH SEP. 1935.]

(h) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to Appendix "H" of the publication "India's contribution to the Great War", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

(i) It is not possible to give the number of Baluchis who died during the Great War, since casualties were not recorded by classes.

EMPLOYEES OF THE POLICE FORCE AND BALUCHISTAN CIVIL SERVICE KILLED IN THE EARTHQUAKE.

495. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the number of employees (exclusive of police) in the Baluchistan Civil Service who died in the recent earthquake ;
- (b) the number of employees in Baluchistan police force who died in the recent earthquake ;
- (c) the number of police officers who died in the recent earthquake disaster ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that Government have called for services of all the retired Baluchistan employees from the Punjab and reinstated them all in the posts which have fallen vacant on account of the recent earthquake disaster ;
- (e) whether the services of employees reinstated will be considered as temporary or permanent ;
- (f) whether it is a fact that Government have recruited the police force for Baluchistan from the Punjab ; if so, why did they not recruit them from Sind which is the home and asylum of Baluchis ; and
- (g) with reference to the Honourable Member Mr. Ahmed Ibrahim Haroon Jaffer's supplementary question, dated 27th February, 1935, regarding Home Department resolution, giving 25 per cent. services to the Muslims, whether the said resolution is applicable to the inhabitants of Baluchistan ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) 114.

(b) and (c). 126. This includes 15 Head Constables and six other officers of higher rank.

(d) and (e). No, Sir. Only five retired Extra Assistant Commissioners, one retired Tahsildar and one retired ministerial Government servant, have been re-employed on a purely temporary basis.

(f) Yes. It was necessary to recruit immediately a large number of men trained in the use of arms, and this could only be done through the Inspector-General of Police, Punjab, and Recruiting Officers in that Province. There are no Recruiting Officers in Sind, and any attempt to raise men there would have involved very great delay.

(g) The supplementary question referred to is not traceable, but the Home Department Resolution in question is applicable with certain exceptions to all services under the administrative control of the Government of India including those in Baluchistan.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I did not hear the answer of the Honourable Member to the question : Why did they not recruit them from Sind also ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I had better read out the reply to that part. I said :

"There are no Recruiting Officers in Sind, and any attempt to raise men there would have involved very great delay."

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : May I know whether the Government of Baluchistan approached the Sind Government to supply trained policemen for working in the earthquake areas, just as they approached the Punjab Government ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I want notice.

FINANCIAL ADJUSTMENT BETWEEN SIND AND BOMBAY.

496. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Mr. J. Nixon has been appointed by the Government of India to go through the question of financial adjustment between Sind and Bombay on the separation of the former ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay on the table a list showing the duties entrusted to Mr. J. Nixon ?

(c) Do Government realise that the question of separating finance of Sind from the Bombay Government regarding pension, liabilities, debts, etc., etc., is a very complicated one ?

(d) To which authority will Mr. J. Nixon submit his final report on the separation of finance of Sind ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state whether Mr. J. Nixon's Report will be considered as final and acted upon, or it will be scrutinised again by some experts ?

(f) Do Government intend to appoint a Board consisting of experts of impartial nature to verify the report of Mr. J. Nixon ?

(g) Will Government be pleased to state whether in case a Board is formed for the scrutinisation of the aforesaid report, representatives of Sind will be allowed to sit with the Board Members in order to give their criticism on the report ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a), (b), (d) and (e). One of the duties of Mr. Nixon as Additional Secretary in the Finance Department is to examine the financial adjustments consequent on the creation of the new province of Sind and to submit the case to the Government of India. The Secretary of State will in due course pass final orders.

(c) Yes.

(f) and (g). Government consider it unnecessary to appoint another Board or Committee to deal with the financial affairs of Sind.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : May I know whether Mr. Nixon's report will be placed before Sir Otto Neimeyer who has been appointed to conduct the financial enquiry ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Not formally, because Mr. Nixon's duty is to separate the finances of Sind and Bombay. That is purely an accounting arrangement, and it has nothing whatever to do with the enquiry which Sir Otto Neimeyer is expected to undertake.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : When Mr. Nixon's report is ready, will it be published for eliciting public opinion of Sind and Bombay, or will it be sent direct to the Secretary of State ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : It will be time enough to consider that when the Secretary of State has passed final orders.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that this officer will consider the financial adjustments between the Central and the Provincial Governments ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : He will have to do a great deal of work in connection with that, providing material and so on, but he will have no judicial or arbitral function in relation to it.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Does it not follow that he will have to consider also the mutual relations between the Sind and Bombay Governments in order to settle the relations between the Central Government and each of these two Provinces ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The initial subvention of Sind is quite a different story from the separation of accounts of Sind and Bombay.

BARRAGE CANALS IN SIND.

497. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to paragraph 79, page 43, of the report of the Sind Administrative Committee which runs as follows :

"We are surprised however to find that in 1932-33, the very first year of the working of the Barrage Canals, although there was, contrary to anticipations, a net surplus of Rs. 19.86 lakhs over working expenses, the surplus was allowed to merge in the general revenues of the Government of Bombay instead of being utilised towards part payment of the unpaid interest, on capital."

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether the contents of the above paragraph are true ?

(c) If the reply to part (b) above be in the affirmative, what action do Government propose to take in the matter, so as to do justice and fair-play to Sind ?

(d) Has the attention of Government been drawn to paragraph 77-A of the Sind Administrative Committee Report, page 42, which runs as follows :

"Prior to 1932-33, receipts from the sales, leases, etc., of lands in the Barrage area were not utilized even towards payment of interest on capital. It appears that they merged in the general revenues of the Government of Bombay, but we have not been able to ascertain the reasons for this appropriation. The amount involved was about Rs. 12½ lakhs. In our opinion, it should have been credited to the Loan Account in the same way as the receipts of 1932-33."

(e) Will Government be pleased to state whether the contents of the above paragraph are true ?

(f) If the answer to part (e) above be in the affirmative, what action do Government propose to take so as to do justice and fairplay to Sind ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a), (b) and (c). The quoted statement is not correct. The Administrative Committee failed to take into account the net revenue of the superseded, absorbed or abandoned canals. The correct figures are being worked out and will be adjusted properly.

(d), (e) and (f). The implication of the quotation is incorrect. It was apparently due to a misconception on the part of the Administrative Committee of the necessary accounting processes.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Can the Honourable Member inform me what correction is made up till now ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Not without notice.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE FUTURE ADMINISTRATION OF SIND.

498. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. H. M. Patel, I.C.S., has been appointed by the Government of India to enquire about the arrangements of the future administration of Sind ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, to which authority will Mr. Patel submit his Report ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether Mr. Patel's Report will be published and open to criticism or considered as final ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a list of duties entrusted to Mr. H. M. Patel ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to form a Board for scrutinisation of the aforesaid report, and if so, will representatives from Sind be consulted before the Report is finally passed ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a), (b) and (d). Mr. H. M. Patel has been placed on special duty by the Government of Bombay to draw up a detailed scheme of the administrative arrangements necessitated by the separation of Sind. The Government of India have received, through the Local Government, his report dealing with the accommodation immediately required by the new Government, and it is at present under their consideration.

(c) The answer to both parts of this question is in the negative.

(e) There is no such proposal under the consideration of Government.

COLLECTION OF CUSTOMS REVENUE BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN KATHIAWAR AND OTHER STATES.

499. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have recently made any agreement with Kathiawar and other Native States of India to the effect that in future Customs Revenue would be collected by Indian Government, and the Government would reciprocate the same by payment of certain sums of money to the Indian States ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) above be in the affirmative, will Government lay on the table a copy of the said new agreements ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to part (d), may I know if the Honourable Member made any enquiries after the receipt of this question from my Honourable friend, and are Government satisfied that this kind of smuggling does not take place, apart from complaints ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : In so far as any Government can be satisfied that smuggling does not take place, yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have the Government of India approached the Kathiawar States and put it to them, that this smuggling may take place, and have they received any assurance from them that they have taken or will take every possible step to prevent any such smuggling ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : My own view is that the smuggling, if any, is a very unimportant part of a very important problem.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION IN THE MATTER OF PROMOTIONS IN THE MECHANICAL DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

501. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya : (a) Are Government aware that racial discrimination is still maintained in the matter of promotions and that Europeans and Anglo-Indians are promoted to higher grade under the Works Managers in the Mechanical Department, East Indian Railway in preference to Indians ?

(b) Are Government aware that European and Anglo-Indian Journeymen are promoted to the higher Chargemen's grade in preference to Indian Chargemen T. T., irrespective of their training ? If so, why ?

(c) Are Government aware that Europeans and Anglo-Indians are promoted to the grade of Assistant Foremen in preference to better qualified Indians ? If so, why ?

(d) If the answers to parts (a), (b) and (c) above be in the negative, will Government please supply the names of those who were promoted to the grade of Chargemen and Assistant Foremen since 1934, with the following particulars :

- (i) Names of the Workshop employed ;
- (ii) Training ;
- (iii) Technical education ;
- (iv) General education (University Examination passed) ;
- (v) Present pay ; and
- (vi) Pay of the grade ?

If not, why not ? Are Government prepared to stop such practice ? If not, why not ?

(e) Will Government please supply separately the percentage of Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indians promoted to the grade of Charge-man and Assistant Foreman under each Works Manager, in the Mechanical Department, East Indian Railway, since 1933, with the following :

- (i) names ;
- (ii) dates of appointments ;
- (iii) present pay ; and
- (iv) dates of promotions ?

If not, why not ?

Mr. P. B. Rau : (a) The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that these allegations are incorrect.

(b) and (c). The Agent reports that promotions in each workshop were made according to seniority with the following exceptions :

Lucknow Carriage and Wagon Shops.—One European who was third on the list of chargemen was promoted as Assistant Foreman in preference to two senior Anglo-Indians as they had no qualification or experience as a blacksmith.

Lillooah Workshops.—One Anglo-Indian and one European were selected for promotion to the grade of chargemen in supersession of two Indian Mechanics because the former were considered to be more thorough in their work and to have a better control over their men than the latter.

(d) and (e). I lay on the table statement giving the information asked for.

REPORT OF THE TARIFF BOARD ON PROTECTION TO THE GLASS INDUSTRY.

502. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether they have received a letter from the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Cawnpore, regarding the Tariff Board's Report on protection to the glass industry ;
- (b) whether that letter expresses dissatisfaction at the manner in which the question of protection was handled by Government ; and
- (c) whether Government propose to revise their opinion in the matter ; and if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) and (b). Yes, Sir.

(c) No, Sir. The decisions of Government as stated in paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 of the Government of India, Department of Commerce, Resolution No. 458-T. (14), dated the 22nd June, 1935, were taken after full and careful consideration of the case in all its aspects and there has been no change in the position since.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : In view of the fact that, since the publication of the Government decision, there has been expressed general dissatisfaction both in this House and outside about the attitude taken up by Government, will Government be good enough to re-examine this question and see if there is any case which deserves to be considered by them, so as to enable them to revise their opinion, and give protection to this national industry ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Government have carefully considered all that has been said and which has been brought to their notice concerning their decision in this matter since the publication of the decision. Government have not seen anything in what has been said and what has been brought to their notice which should induce them to change their decision.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are Government satisfied that the present decision which they have published is adequate to give the necessary protection to this glass industry ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The present decision does not give any protection to the glass industry. It affords a certain amount of relief to the glass industry till the question can be re-examined in the terms of the decision announced.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : When do Government propose to re-examine this question ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The relief given is for three years, but I am at liberty to state that if conditions change radically with regard to the supply of soda ash in the country itself, I shall, on being convinced of that radical change, be prepared to examine this question again when the change takes place.

Mr. B. Dae : Have Government examined the statement of the Federation that there is dumping of Japanese sheet glass, and what the Indian industry wants is protection against Japanese sheet glass ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That is a different question altogether and does not arise on this.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Sir, may I put one question ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Sir, I want to make a submission. I have been standing three times, but have not got a chance, and that is my difficulty. This is an important matter and has not been exhausted yet. So I would like to ask a supplementary question.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order. In the opinion of the Chair, the matter has been fully discussed.

POSITION OF INDIANS IN KENYA AND ZANZIBAR.

503. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether their attention has been drawn to the statement of the Rev. C. F. Andrews in an interview to the United Press about the position of Indians in Kenya and Zanzibar ;
- (b) whether they have taken or propose to take any steps to prevent injury to the business of Indians in Kenya and Zanzibar ;
- (c) whether they propose to publish the report of the Commission which was appointed last year with the Chief Justice of Zanzibar as Chairman and Mr. Tyab Ali as its Indian member ;
- (d) whether it is a fact that already more than six thousand Indians out of forty thousand have left Kenya ; and
- (e) when Government propose to appoint a Trade Commissioner in Kenya ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) I would refer the Honourable Member to the statement that I made yesterday.

(c) It is understood that the Government of Zanzibar, with whom rests the responsibility for publishing the report, has the matter under consideration.

(d) Government have no reason to believe that there has been any abnormal movement of Indians from East African territories during the past year.

(e) The question of appointing an Indian Trade Commissioner at Mombasa, who will also have within his jurisdiction Zanzibar and certain other areas, is at present under the consideration of the Government of India.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With regard to clause (b), may I ask my Honourable friend what the latest position is with regard to Indians in Kenya ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Sir, I have answered questions with regard to Indians in Kenya during the Session. There are two outstanding points : one is the question of the highlands, and, as I informed Honourable Members some days ago, our representations have been made to the Secretary of State for the Colonies who has been considering them. There has been no change in the position. As regards marketing, I would refer the Honourable Member to what His Excellency the Viceroy said the other day in the course of his address.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : As regards the highlands, may I take it that Government are satisfied that no Order in Council will be passed, till this Government have had their fullest say in the matter ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : We have communicated to the Secretary of State for the Colonies the text of the discussion that took place in this House and also a memorandum on the subject. Our information is that the Secretary of State for the Colonies is considering those representations and that no Order in Council has been passed so far. And I think my Honourable friend may rest assured that the Secretary of State for India, who has been fully apprised of the position and is conscious of the strength of feeling on the subject in this country, is watching the situation within the Cabinet.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will the Government of India press very earnestly on the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that no Order in Council with regard to the reservation of the highlands should be passed, till this Government has had its fullest say in the matter ? Will they try and get an assurance of that kind ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Sir, the Secretary of State for the Colonies stated, in answer to a question in the House of Commons, that no decision will be taken until the Government of India's representations had been fully considered.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With regard to clause (e), may I know approximately when Government propose to come to a conclusion on this matter, and whether Government realise the seriousness of feeling in this matter, and for once will they expedite their decision ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The question of the appointment of a Trade Commissioner at Mombasa for East Africa is one for the Honourable the Commerce Member who, I think, has already answered a number of questions on this subject in this Session.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know from my Honourable friend whether from those "enough" answers, my friend has formed any estimate,—I have formed none,—of the approximate time, by which or about which, this appointment will be made ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I do not really think that guesses and approximations are at all of any practical value.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know if, before the end of this year, calendar or financial, this appointment will be made ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I cannot at this stage anticipate what the budget position of the Government of India at the time will be.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Sir, my last question has not been answered.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair thinks sufficient has been asked and answered.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Sir, I submit that our only hope of expediting these matters is by repeating the thing to them and thus spur them on to more activity. And, unless we do this, they will never do anything.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Then, the only thing the Honourable Member can do is to pass a Resolution.

PROTECTION OF THE INTERESTS OF INDIAN TRADERS IN ABYSSINIA.

504. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government state whether Government have taken any steps to protect the interests of 2,500 Indian traders in Abyssinia ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given on the 3rd September, 1935, to his short notice question on the same subject.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is there any change in the position ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I propose to answer a short notice question on the subject tomorrow when, I hope, the Honourable Member will get all the information which is at my disposal.

AMALGAMATION OF THE EAST INDIAN AND EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAYS.

505. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether discussions are going on between the authorities of the East Indian Railway and the Eastern Bengal Railway with regard to the project of amalgamation of the two railways under a single administration ; and

(b) whether Government have been apprised of the same ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : In view of the fact that the Railways are running at very great loss, will Government consider the amalgamation of the two in the interests of economy ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The question has been considered, and it has been found that the amalgamation of the East Indian and the Eastern Bengal Railways into one system will make it unwieldy.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I take the Honourable Member's answer to mean that no such negotiations can take place, without the knowledge of Government ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : My Honourable friend can take that as correct.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : The Honourable Member says it will be unwieldy. May I remind him that in Germany the mileage of railways is equivalent to the mileage of the entire railway system in India and that still it is under one administration ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The area of Germany is quite different from the area of India.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Since they have a number of Divisional Superintendents, the question of area would not arise. It is only the mileage which is important.

REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE OTTAWA TRADE AGREEMENT.

506. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether it is a fact that Dr. Matthai, Director General of Commercial Intelligence and Statistics, has completed his review of the second year's working of the Ottawa Pact ;
- (b) whether the Report has been submitted to the Commerce Department of the Government of India ; and
- (c) whether the Report will be published, and if so, when ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given by me to part (b) of his question No. 290.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : If my memory is wrong, the Honourable Member will correct me, but may I know whether this report will be published in good time before the matter comes up for discussion before this House ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I am making my best efforts to place the report before the Honourable Members before the end of this Session : I am not quite sure whether I shall be able to do so, but, as soon as it is possible, it will be circulated to Honourable Members—long before the matter comes up for discussion in the next budget Session.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmed : May I ask whether the Honourable Member will give an opportunity to this House to discuss that report, because the last report was not discussed by the Assembly ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Yes : as I have stated several times in the course of this Session, an opportunity to discuss the whole question will be afforded in the budget Session. I believe an undertaking to that effect was given and it will be honoured.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will a Committee of this House be given an opportunity of studying this question in detail as was done during the last occasion ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : If any desire to that effect had been conveyed to me early in this Session, it might have been possible to set up a Committee also : if Honourable Members are anxious to have a Committee set up in the meantime, and they will get into touch with me, I shall see what can be done in that connection.

REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE OTTAWA TRADE AGREEMENT.

507. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state when they propose to place the Report on the Ottawa Pact and its working before the Legislative Assembly for its consideration ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given by me to part (c) of his question No. 234.

REFORM OF THE INDIAN INSURANCE LAW.

508. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether they have received any representation from the Committee of the Indian Life Assurance Offices Association of Bombay on the need for the reform of Insurance Law in the country ;
- (b) what steps they propose to take on the representation ; and
- (c) when the said legislation will be introduced in the Legislative Assembly ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) Yes.

(b) The representation is under the consideration of the Officer on Special Duty appointed to examine the desirability of amending the insurance law in India, who is expected to make his report in October next.

(c) On receipt of the report of the Officer mentioned above, a decision will be taken as to the mode of further procedure. Government will expedite as much as possible introduction of this Bill.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if any insurance companies or associations are being consulted in the preparation of this Bill ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Sir, I know that a very large number of representations have been received from various bodies ; but, having no notice of this question, I cannot say who those bodies are.

ARTICLE IN THE Sind Observer ENTITLED " POWER-ALCOHOL ".

509. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether their attention has been drawn to the leading article in the Sind Observer of the 18th July entitled ' Power-Alcohol ' ;
- (b) whether Government have examined or will examine the matter ; and
- (c) what steps they propose to take to utilise molasses ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) to (c). Government's attention has been drawn to the article referred to by the Honourable Member. The article suggests that millions of tons of molasses are leaving India after manufacturing sugar. The Government of India's information is that the production of factory molasses in India may be 360 thousand tons in 1935-36. Allowing for an internal consumption of 160 thousand tons, the surplus awaiting utilisation will be only 200 thousand tons. Government have not given any monopoly to any firm for the export of this surplus. The company referred to in the article is a purely private concern and is undertaking the export of molasses from India as an ordinary trade venture, because it expects that, owing to the fall in exports of molasses from Java from 400,000 tons to 120,000 tons per annum, there are markets outside India which can absorb Indian molasses. The suggestion that an experimental factory should be started to find out the commercial possibilities of power-alcohol has not been acted upon, as it has been calculated that power-alcohol produced from modern plant, even under favourable circumstances, could not compete with petrol. Experiments for ascertaining whether molasses could suitably and successfully be used in India as fertilisers and cattle food and for road surfacing are in progress.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With regard to the answer to the last part of my question, may I know what is the basis of the information on which my Honourable friend says that power-alcohol manufactured from molasses cannot compete with petrol? Is it on the basis of information supplied by anybody in this country or from other countries?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Ad hoc arithmetical calculation undertaken in this country.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : By whom?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : By the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Did it carry out any experiments itself, or did it merely go upon any other data available?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Such data as was available to it : it was not necessary to carry out any experiments.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government carry out some experiments to find out if it is at all possible to manufacture this power-alcohol to compete with petrol?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : It seems to me that it is not necessary to prove that two and two make four.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is it as obvious as all that?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Even if the experiment about producing petrol has failed, has it been tried to find out whether they cannot produce any form of crude oil which may be used for burning purposes?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I have not yet heard that you could distil oil from molasses.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I mean any burning substance which may serve the purpose of crude oil.

Sardar Sant Singh : Does the Honourable Member know that this experiment has been carried on in the Mysore State and has proved successful?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : It is not a question of being successful or not : I have dabbled in chemistry myself, and I find that experimentally it has been possible to produce even diamonds in a laboratory, but it is not a commercial proposition.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : How old is my Honourable friend's chemistry? It must be at least 35 years old!

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : No, Sir : only 20 years. (Laughter.)

CONVERSION OF INDIA STERLING PAPER AND RUPEE PAPER.

510. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the editorial comment of the Indian Finance of the 20th July on the need for plans for the conversion of 3½ per cent. India Sterling Paper and 3½ Rupee Paper ; and

(b) whether there are any proposals in that direction, and if so, when they will materialise?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I regret that I am unable to satisfy the Honourable Member's desire for information on this subject.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know the reasons why he is compelled to be so uncommunicative?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Whatever I say, somebody will try and make money out of it ; and some of those who try to make money will certainly lose it. Then the enterprising journal to which the Honourable Member refers will complain either about the action or the inaction of the Government. I do not propose to give it a two-way option.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am not asking for any details : I am simply asking whether any such conversion proposals are being considered.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I repeat that I am unable to tell the Honourable Member.

Mr. B. Das : Does the Honourable Member refer to the peculiar conditions of the Bombay Stock Exchange?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have not used any prejudicial words.

REPORT ON THE INDIAN COMPANY LAW.

511. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the report on the investigation conducted by Mr. Sushil Sen, the special officer appointed to conduct investigations into questions connected with the Indian Company Law, has been submitted to Government ;

(b) whether the report will be published for the information of the Legislative Assembly, and of the public ; and

(c) if not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). No. The report is a purely departmental report.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if Mr. Sen is engaged in considering the insurance law alone or also mutual provident funds?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I thought I answered a supplementary from the same Honourable gentleman either yesterday or the day before : Mr. Sen is considering company law and insurance law.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Does the Honourable Member know that, with regard to provident funds also, there is a complaint, and I would like to know if the same officer or any separate officer has been deputed to go into that question ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Is that under company law or what ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : That is exactly what I am asking, whether any change is going to be made in the company law with regard to these mutual funds which are disturbing the country ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Mr. Sen has been appointed to consider company law and insurance law : on company law he has made his report : on insurance law he expects to make his report within the next month. If provident funds is part of company law or insurance law, he must have considered it. If he has not, it will be considered departmentally.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : When was this report on company law submitted to the Government ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I am afraid I cannot give my friend the exact date : but it is now about a month.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Does this report recommend any amendment in the company law ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : If so, when do Government hope to be able to place proposals before this House to amend that law ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I think I have answered the question that we may have to take other steps before placing the Bill before the House. but, so far as the Bill is concerned, I think I said on the last occasion that we hope to introduce it in this House next year.

ROTEST BY THE SOUTH AFRICAN AND NATAL INDIAN CONGRESS AGAINST CERTAIN SECTIONS OF THE NATAL RURAL DEALERS' LICENSING LAW AMENDMENT ORDINANCE.

512. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the fact that a Deputation from the South African and Natal Indian Congress interviewed the Minister of the Interior in South Africa ;

(b) whether the Deputation protested against sections 1, 2 and 4 of the Natal Rural Dealers' Licensing Law Amendment Ordinance ; and

(c) whether Government have made any representations in this matter, and if so, with what result ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) The Agent of the Government of India in South Africa made representations to the Administrator of Natal and his Executive Council as also to the Minister of the Interior. The Executive Committee has promised to give instructions to magistrates that the measure is not directed against Indians and should be impartially administered.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have Government since received any information that, in the actual administration of this measure, no harm has resulted to Indians ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : As a result of the representations made by the Agent of the Government of India, this measure did not receive assent until, I think, a fortnight ago. So there has been no time to gain experience, but the Agent has himself informed us that he and his Secretary propose to keep a close watch on the working of this measure to see that it is not administered against Indians.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government call for reports from time to time on this matter from the Agent ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The Agent submits six monthly reports besides the fortnightly reports which are submitted to the Member in charge.

RAILWAY EARNINGS.

513. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the latest figures of Railway earnings compared with those of the last two years ;

(b) what steps, if any, are being taken to improve Railway earnings ; and

(c) whether there is any idea of co-ordinating road and railway transport so as to get the maximum advantage to the country from both ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I would refer the Honourable Member as regards (a) and (b) to the reply given by the Honourable the Railway Member to his question No. 405 on the 9th September, 1935, and as regards (c) to the reply given to Mr. Lalchand Navalrai's question No. 23 on the 5th February, 1935.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is there any improvement ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With regard to the answer to clause (c) of the question, have Government considered or are they considering the conflict of interests which exists between Local Governments which are in charge of roads and the Government of India who are in charge of Railways, and do they propose to take any steps to bring about some understanding between these two competing authorities in the interests of the general revenues of this country ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : If my Honourable friend will read the statement of policy which was issued by the Government after the meeting of the Transport Advisory Council in January last, he will find what efforts have been made by Government to arrive at a compromise which would satisfy all interests.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I have read that paper and the Report of the Rail Road Conference, but may I know whether Government are satisfied with the inconclusive conclusions of that Conference which led nowhere, and whether any attempt is being made anywhere to make the best of both road and rail transport and stop the ruinous competition which helps nobody ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am afraid I cannot accept my Honourable friend's opinion that these conclusions lead nowhere. As a matter of fact, Local Governments have agreed to a certain amount of control of traffic.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know, Sir, if, as a result of these conclusions, with which my friend is satisfied, though I am not, there has been any visible improvement in railway earnings anywhere ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not know whether they are due to that, but passenger earnings, during the current year, are, I think, better than last year.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is the Honourable Member aware that, in order to avoid road and railway competition, the construction of certain bridges across certain rivers in the Tinnevely District and Malabar is being stopped ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The question is being considered.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Is it a fact, Sir, that, on account of raising the fares for third class passengers since 1934, the earnings of the railways have gone down ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : If my friend is referring to the North Western Railway, the facts are otherwise, but the fares have been reduced.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it the policy of the Government to prevent the construction of bridges which are badly needed, to avoid the road competition with the railways ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That is not the policy of the Government.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Why is it then that the construction of bridges has been stopped ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I did not say it is being stopped.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have Government got a policy on this matter, and what is that policy ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : It is exactly due to the policy that my friend has been urging upon Government that the question is being considered whether the construction of certain bridges would or would not be conducive generally to the increase of railway traffic and the convenience of people using those roads.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What is the present policy of the Government ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The present policy is that, if a road is likely to compete with Railways, that road should not have preference over other projects not competing with Railways.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know, Sir, if keen competition between Railways and motor service is still going on ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Oh, yes ; in many places.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : In the consideration which Government are bestowing to the construction of bridges across the rivers in cities, will Government give sufficient weight and importance to the needs and desires of the rural public and their demands for rural road transport ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : To their needs, most certainly.

INDIAN VICTIMS OF SOUTH AFRICAN FLOODS.

514. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the accompanying extract from the Madras Mail about Indian victims of South African floods ;

(b) whether Government have received any further information on the matter ; and

(c) whether relief has been given to the Indians adversely affected ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) Government have received information that as a result of the floods that took place on the 13th June, some 2,000 Indians in Durban and its suburbs were affected. The damage caused is estimated at £10,000.

(c) The Agent of the Government of India in South Africa reports that adequate relief is being afforded to the sufferers by a Central Indian Flood Committee, representing various Indian organizations. The Corporation of Durban and the Natal Administration will be approached shortly, if necessary, to supplement private effort.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government keep in touch, and satisfy themselves that sufficient relief is given to the sufferers ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I can assure my friend that the Agent is keenly alive to the importance of this matter and keeps us informed every fortnight.

PARAGRAPH IN THE Indian Finance ENTITLED "CLIVE STREET GOSSIP".

515. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the marked paragraphs in "Clive Street Gossip" of the Indian Finance, dated the 13th July ;

(b) the reasons for the difference in fares between the East Indian Railway on the one hand, and the Bengal Nagpur Railway and the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway on the other ; and

(c) why wash-basins of the type referred to have been installed on the South Indian Railway ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes.

(b) I would refer my Honourable friend to the reply given by the Honourable Sir Guthrie Russell to the Honourable Pandit Prakash Narain Sapru's question No. 67 in the Council of State on the 13th August, 1934.

(c) The reason was fully explained by the Agent, South Indian Railway, in a letter which was published in Indian Finance four weeks later which I have no doubt my friend has read and from which, if you, Sir, will permit me, I shall read the following extract :

" * * * This question of water supply to carriages has received constant attention of our Mechanical Department and it has been found that coaches ride much more smoothly—especially on the metre gauge with the tanks located underneath the carriage bodies and, therefore, this method has been evolved for pumping water into the basin. I would say that complaints against this method are rare and received only when pumps are abnormally tight as evidently occurred on this particular occasion. We are now experimenting with an electrically operated pump by which the pressing of a button only is necessary to draw water."

Mr. S. Satyamurti : On a point of order, Sir. If Honourable Members can refer to answers given in the other House, then it is very difficult for us....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair thinks it gave its ruling on that point. If the answers have been already published and made available to Honourable Members, there is no reason why they should be repeated here again.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : It is rather inconvenient to us ; anyway, I shall make a representation to you later on. But with reference to the answer to clause (c), may I ask my friend whether he realises the enormous inconvenience that is felt by the public, because one has got to be a gymnast or an athlete to get water out of the pump ? May I know why they cannot devise a simpler system ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Everybody realises the inconvenience involved, and the Agent has stated that they are experimenting with an electrically operated pump by which the pressing of a button only is necessary to draw water.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : When will they instal it ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am afraid I cannot say when.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will my friend press the Railways concerned to expedite this matter ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am sure the Agent does not require any pressure. He is considering it of his own motion, but I shall certainly communicate to him the supplementary questions and answers.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : The pumps require always pressure, but the Agent may not.

DRIVERS IN THE JHANSI DIVISION OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

516. *Mr. B. B. Varma : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the scales of pay for A, B, and C Grade drivers working on the main line or branch line, mail or passenger train or goods train in Jhansi Division of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that all drivers employed in the highest grade in Jhansi Division belong to Anglo-Indian community ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that there is not one Hindu, Muslim or Indian Christian driver working on the main line, either passenger or goods trains ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state that all Hindu, Muslim and Indian Christian drivers in Jhansi Division on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway are confined to the last two lowest grades out of six grades allotted for drivers in this Division ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that nearly 50 per cent. of the total number of drivers in Jhansi Division do not belong to Hindu, Muslim, Indian Christian or Parsi community and are in A grade, main line passenger drivers' grade ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Railway Board in their memorandum on racial discrimination submitted to Members of the Legislative Assembly in 1931, admitted absence of representation of Indian employees in the highest grade either as drivers or guards and in spite of the orders of the Railway Board, there is not one Indian driver or guard working passenger trains in the main line in Jhansi Division of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

(g) Will Government be pleased to furnish the following information regarding the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, Division by Division, the number of drivers and guards respectively employed from each community as mentioned in the Railway Board Annual Statistics, in each grade working main line—passenger and goods trains—and branch line—passenger and goods train—respectively, to show the extent of racial discrimination prevailing at present ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The scales of pay are given in the statement, "Great Indian Peninsula Railway—Revision of Scales of Pay for New Entrants", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The scales apply to the whole line and not merely to the Jhansi Division.

(b) to (f). I have called for particulars and will place the information on the table of the House in due course.

(g) Government regret they are unable to furnish the information as its collection would involve an expenditure of time and labour that would be entirely incommensurate with the value of the results to be obtained.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are any racial considerations made in these appointments at all ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No, Sir ; the policy of the Railway Board has been communicated to all Agents that it is the desire that there should not be any racial discrimination in these matters.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is the present state of affairs due to the past, and is any attempt being made to redress inequalities ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : It is very difficult at a moment's notice to redress all the grievances of the past.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I know, Sir, in view of the fact that there are apprehensions in the minds of many railway employees that there is racial discrimination in this matter, whether the Government of India will be pleased to make an inquiry and publish a report on this ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I don't think, Sir, any special inquiry is necessary. The Agent has been informed of the desire of the Government of India that there should not be any racial discrimination in this matter.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : In view of the fact that the Government of India themselves admit in their report made in 1931 that in certain matters preference is shown to certain communities, may I ask whether the Government of India will reconsider the matter and ask for information and publish a report on this question ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : If my Honourable friend will give me any particular instance in which he feels discrimination has been practised, I shall be quite prepared to take it up ; otherwise, I do not think an enquiry is necessary.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : How can the Government of India get convinced unless they collect the information ?

(No answer.)

ARCHAEOLOGICAL SUPERINTENDENTS IN CHARGE OF MONUMENTS.

517. *Mr. C. N. Muthuranga Mudaliar : Are Government prepared to consider the desirability of placing in charge Muslim Officers as Archaeological Superintendents to circles where Muslim Monuments predominate and Hindu Officers to Circles where Hindu or Buddhist Monuments predominate ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Government are unable to apply communal principles to postings of Archaeological officers. Their endeavour is, and always will be, to post officers to posts for which they are best suited.

Mr. C. N. Muthuranga Mudaliar : In view of the fact that some of these Hindu monuments are still places of worship admittedly, do not Government consider that Hindu officers will have better access to such monuments ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : My Honourable friend's question assumes that those places which are used by Hindus for purposes of worship are or need be visited by Muslim officers. That is not the case.

DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS TO THE VARIOUS ARCHAEOLOGICAL CIRCLES.

518. Mr. C. N. Muthuranga Mudaliar : (a) Will Government place on the table a statement of distribution of funds to the various Archaeological circles, for purposes of preservation, conservation and excavation work ? What is the basis of the distribution ? Are Government aware of the fact that funds allocated for the Southern circle are very inadequate ? Will more funds be allocated for this circle in future ? Are Government aware of the fact that the Southern circle is in matter of extent much bigger than many other circles ?

(b) Have Government made a complete survey of the places that are worthy of excavation ? If they have not done that already, are Government prepared to take up the work at an early date ?

(c) Are Government aware of the fact that two prehistoric sites have been discovered in South India, one at Perumbair in the Chingleput District and the other at Adicchanallur in the Tinnevely District ? Have extensive and proper excavations been carried on in those places ? Are Government prepared to explore the site fully and do the needful at an early date ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) A statement is laid on the table.

(b) No such complete survey has been undertaken but Government have in their possession lists of the more important sites for purposes of excavation. For financial reasons it is not possible to carry out an exhaustive survey.

(c) The sites referred to were excavated by an Archaeological Officer over 25 years ago. Further progress with the excavations could not be made for want of funds. The question of conducting further excavations at the sites will be considered when funds become available.

*Distribution for 1935-36 not yet made.

Excavation grant for the current year (1935-36) has not yet been distributed. Funds for excavation are allotted with due regard to the requirements of the various circles while those for conservation are allotted in order of urgency of repairs to the monuments in the different circles. Having regard to the curtailed budget grant of Archaeological Department Government do not agree that the funds allotted to the Southern Circle have been inadequate. It is not possible to increase the allotment for the Southern Circle so long as the existing financial stringency lasts. Government are aware that the Southern Circle extends over a much wider area than some other circles but its monuments are in a better state of preservation than in some other provinces.

Mr. C. N. Muthuranga Mudaliar : What is the answer to part (a) of the question ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : A statement is laid on the table.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Government passed a Bill some time ago in which they said that they can let out the excavation to foreigners. Was any attempt made to ask any foreigner to carry on this work in view of the fact that the Government of India are now suffering from financial stringency ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : There is a question on the Order Paper a little bit later on, and I would ask my Honourable friend to wait till that is reached.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Has anybody applied till now to excavate ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The answer is a repetition of what I have already said to my Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.

TAKING OUT OF INDIA SOME IMPORTANT ARCHAEOLOGICAL FINDS.

519. *Mr. C. N. Muthuranga Mudaliar : (a) Is it a fact that some important archaeological finds have been allowed to be taken out of India to foreign countries ? Are Government aware of the fact that some fine sculptures from Amaravati now find a place in the British Museum, the Musée Guimet in France, the Metropolitan Museum of New York and the Boston Museum ? Were they taken with the full knowledge of the Government of India ? If so, how did Government allow such things to happen ? Are Government prepared to stop such things in future ?

(b) Is it a fact that Government have permitted foreign Archaeological societies to carry on excavations in select sites in North India ? If so, what are the societies that have been granted such privileges ? What are the places such societies have been permitted to work on ? Could not Government find funds to carry on the excavations themselves ? If for any reason Government could not take up the work at once, why did not Government wait till funds were available ? Are Government prepared to see that foreigners are not allowed to meddle with our monuments ?

(c) Are Government aware that some agents of foreign scholars are attempting to remove beautiful specimens of Hindu Bronzes ? Do Government propose to prevent such things ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Not since the passing of the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904, so far as the Government of India are aware. The antiquities referred to by the Honourable Member were probably taken out of India before this Act was passed. Section 17 of the Act to which I have referred is designed to prevent an exodus of antiquities of any value.

(b) A licence for the excavation of a site at Chanhuduro in the Nawab Shah District of Sind has been granted to the American School of Indic and Iranian Studies. Government regret that funds to carry on excavation on any large scale cannot be made available until the financial situation improves. The ancient sites, both historic and prehistoric available for excavation in this country are so numerous that it is highly improbable that more than a very small fraction of them could be explored by official agency during the next hundred years. Outside assistance under proper safeguards is, therefore, to be welcomed. Such safeguards will be found in section 20-B of the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act and the rules made thereunder.

(c) Government have no information but if the Honourable Member will quote specific instances, they will consider the question of taking suitable action.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is the Honourable Member aware that, as recently as two years ago, a French scholar went to a place called Shantasala in the Kistna District of the Madras Presidency and took away some very valuable gold coins and also bronze statues ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : My Honourable friend has imparted information which I shall make the basis of an enquiry ?

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : Do the Government of India keep any list of these finds sent out of India, and, if so, where ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I have already informed my Honourable friend that such finds as were sent out were sent out before 1904. It is not possible for Government to make a list of finds which were sent out of the country without their knowledge.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : The Honourable Member has just now said that at Chanhuduro some American company has been given some sort of licence. Will he kindly explain what sort of company it is ?

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I never said that any commercial company had been given a licence for purposes of excavation. What I said was that a licence had been given to the American School of Indic and Iranian Studies, which is a very learned society.

WATER BASIN ARRANGEMENT IN SOME OF THE BATH ROOMS OF SECOND CLASS COMPARTMENTS ON THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA RAILWAY.

520. *Mr. C. N. Muthuranga Mudaliar : (a) Are Government aware that in some of the bath rooms of second class compartments on the Madras and Southern Mahratta and other Railways, the water basin is fixed just above the commode ?

(b) Are Government aware that arrangements noted above cause great inconvenience to passengers accustomed to Indian style ?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of issuing necessary instructions for changing the arrangements so as to suit passengers living in Indian style ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) and (b). No.

(c) Government will bring this complaint to the notice of all Railways so that they can consider what action is possible to remedy the inconvenience referred to.

COLLECTION OF INCOME-TAX FROM Nidhis AND FUNDS IN MADRAS.

521. *Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : (a) Is it a fact that the Income-tax Officer, Madras, has wrongly collected income-tax from several Nidhis and Funds though they claimed exemption on the ground of their being mutual benefit societies ?

(b) Was the attention of Government drawn to the Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court, dated the 5th December, 1934, in O. P. No. 197 of 1933 ? If so, what steps have been taken to refund the amounts wrongly collected ?

(c) Is it a fact that in spite of applications for review of the order levying the tax and for refund of the same, no orders have been passed ?

Mr. A. H. Lloyd : (a) Income-tax was collected from various Funds which had claimed exemption on grounds similar to those put forward by the assessee in the case which ended in the judgment of the Madras High Court to which reference is made in part (b) of the question. The tax was collected in accordance with the law as interpreted by the authorities at the time when the assessments were made.

(b) and (c). The attention of Government has been drawn to the judgment mentioned. A number of applications for revision had been kept pending until the result of the reference made to the High Court in that case was known. They were taken up after the question whether an appeal should be made in the Privy Council by Government had been considered and a decision not to make such an appeal arrived at ; and in those cases in which the facts were found to be similar to the facts in the cases which had been decided against Government in the Madras High Court refunds were ordered. There are one or two cases still to be disposed of in which the examination of the facts is not yet completed.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Has any application been made to the High Court of Madras for leave to appeal to the Privy Council in any case ?

Mr. A. H. Lloyd : I have said in my previous reply that we considered the question of appealing to the Privy Council and decided not to do so.

PRICES CHARGED AT THE RAILWAY BOOK-STALLS OF MESSRS. A. H. WHEELER AND COMPANY.

522. Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal : (a) Will Government please state the terms of the contract of Messrs. A. H. Wheeler & Co., with the railway authorities ?

(b) Is it a fact that the charges of the aforesaid firm are abnormally high ?

(c) Is it further a fact that the above firm charges Rs. 1-2-0, 1-2-0, and annas 0-10-0 for single copies of the strand, Wide Word and Weldons ?

Ladies Journal, respectively, whereas they are sold for Re. 1, Re. 1 and annas 0-8-0, respectively, even in the small places like Jodhpur ?

(d) Is it also a fact that omnibus books of s. 7|6|- are calculated at -|12|- a shilling thus bringing their prices to Rs. 5 or so whereas these books are sold at less than Rs. 3|5|- even in small towns ?

(e) Are Government aware that shilling novels are sold at a rupee and six penny novels at eight annas by Wheeler & Co. ?

(f) What steps, if any, do Government intend to take to put an end to these monopolistic prices ?

(g) Will Government please state how this contract was entered into and when will it expire ?

(h) Is the above contract in the nature of a monopoly ? If so, why ?

(i) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of calling tenders from others for this contract ?

(j) Is it a fact that Government do not grant license to any other agencies to sell books, papers and periodicals at the stations ? If so, why ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Bookstall contracts are given separately by each Railway Administration and the terms of these contracts vary on the different railways. Generally, provision is made for the firm having an exclusive right to provide bookstalls for the sale of newspapers, books, periodicals and the usual travellers' requisites at rates not exceeding the prices usually charged by firms carrying on similar business in certain large towns. Provision is also made for the payment of an annual fee. I am placing in the Library of the House a copy of the agreement which the North Western Railway Administration have with Messrs. Wheeler and Company. This indicates broadly the lines on which agreements have been executed by the firm in connection with their contracts on other railways.

(b) This is a matter of opinion.

(c) to (e). I have not enough detailed information on this point to verify all the figures quoted.

(f) Government will draw the attention of the Railway Administrations concerned to this question to consider whether any action is necessary or feasible.

(g) and (i). Contracts on State-managed Railways have been given for a period of five years and were placed after calling for tenders. The dates on which the existing contracts expire vary, but Agents will no doubt call for fresh tenders in due course.

(h) and (j). A monopoly is considered necessary in order to induce a reliable firm to take on a contract for all the important stations on a railway. The sales at the less important stations are very small, and the firm cannot earn a reasonable profit without a monopoly.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if the Railway has got any control over these booksellers as regards prices ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The only control that they have is what the contracts give them.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if the contract gives power to the Railway to reduce the prices or to fix the prices ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I understand one of the terms of the contract is usually that they should sell these things at rates not exceeding the prices usually charged by firms carrying on similar business in the larger towns.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if the Railways have ever gone into the question to find out whether the prices are high or low ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have already informed the House that attention of the Railway Administrations will be drawn to this question and then they will consider whether any action is necessary or feasible under the contracts.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will the Honourable Member send a copy to the Agents ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Yes.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Wherever a monopoly is given for the sale of any article, whether books or eatables, does the Railway Administration see that they charge a minimum economic price ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With regard to these bookstalls, I have already said that the contract has a term which provides that the prices of these books and periodicals should not exceed, ordinarily, similar prices in the larger towns.

RESEARCH CONDUCTED UNDER THE LAC CESS COMMITTEE.

The question of the work to be undertaken to improve the cultivation of lac was considered by the Indian Lac Cess Committee in November, 1934, and at their next meeting held in March, 1935. The Committee approved of a scheme, prepared under their instructions by the Director, Indian Lac Research Institute, for a demonstration campaign in lac growing areas. Work on the scheme, the main object of which is to endeavour to bring the research work of the Institute to the notice of cultivators and others interested in the lac industry, has already been started.

2. The following resolution was passed by the Indian Lac Cess Committee in November, 1934, in regard to the suggestion that, on the expiry of the contracts with the Bio-Chemist, the Entomologist and the Physico-Chemist at the Institute, these posts should be advertised with a view to seeing whether suitable Indians are forthcoming on less pay :

“ The Indian Lac Cess Committee has given careful consideration to the question whether the senior appointments at the Lac Research Institute should be advertised when the present contracts expire. In view of the fact that the immediate need is continuity in Lac research and completion of the work in progress, the Committee resolves that, subject to the approval of the Governor-General in Council, the contracts of the Entomologist, Physico-Chemist and Mr. Thakur, be renewed for a period of two years on existing terms and with the present sanctioned scale of increments.” As this recommendation was made, with the proviso that the Committee will review the general position in regard to the research programme of the Institute and consider what investigations are required in future, the staff necessary to carry them out, suitable scales of pay for such staff and the method of recruitment the Government of India have accepted it and have sanctioned renewal of contracts of the Bio-Chemist, Entomologist and Physico-Chemist for a period of two years from the 1st January, 1935, 26th July, 1935, and 7th February, 1936, respectively. The Bio-Chemist has since applied for and been granted leave for 1 year from the 1st January, 1936, with permission to retire on the expiry of leave. It is proposed to advertise the post both in India and in England.

3. As regards the entertainment and car allowances, the Government of India have decided that the entertainment allowance drawn by the present Director should be continued as she has not been given any increment in her pay. The allowance will automatically cease when the present Director proceeds on leave preparatory to retirement. As regards the motor car allowance the Director has agreed to forgo it.

4. The question of the reconstitution of the Indian Lac Cess Committee and amendment of the Indian Lac Cess Act is still under consideration.

BUILDINGS OF HISTORICAL IMPORTANCE OCCUPIED BY THE MILITARY AUTHORITIES.

(a) The following is a complete list of buildings of historical importance at present occupied by the military authorities :

1. Govindgarh Fort, Amritsar.
2. Delhi Fort, Delhi.
3. Agra Fort, Agra.
4. Allahabad Fort, Allahabad.
5. Star Fort, Jhansi.
6. Supply Depot, Fyzabad.
7. Fort Calcutta Range, Fyzabad.
8. Ahmednagar Fort.
9. Belgaum Fort.
10. Bombay Castle.
11. Fort St. George, Madras.
12. Attock Fort.

No 12 is being handed over to the Civil authorities.

(b) The military occupation of these historical buildings tends towards their preservation rather than deterioration, because annual repairs and maintenance work are carried out by the Military Department while the Archaeological Department takes care to preserve the architectural or archaeological features of the monuments with which they are concerned. Notwithstanding the military occupation, every facility is afforded to the public to visit these historical buildings. Government do not, therefore, consider it necessary to act upon the suggestion that buildings now in military occupation should be evacuated, especially as it would cost little over one crore of rupees to construct new buildings for the accommodation of the displaced military establishments.

WILLINGDON BRIDGE OF THE CALCUTTA CHORD RAILWAY.

The amount of tolls collected during the year 1934 over the road traffic on this bridge was about Rs. 42,690.

The number of tickets sold was about 6½ lakhs, of which a little more than 5 lakhs were on account of passengers and the balance on account of vehicles and animals.

Information promised in reply to unstarred question No. 58 asked by Mr. V. V. Giri on the 9th September, 1935.

PROCEDURE FOLLOWED IN FILLING UP OF VACANCIES IN THE ELECTRICAL DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that vacancies in the higher grades of the Supervising Subordinate staff of the Electrical Department are filled by selection from amongst the senior men in the next lower grades after an oral examination by a selection committee composed of not less than three officers of the Electrical Department. When the record of NOTICE and other qualifications are equal, seniority is the deciding factor.

MOTIONS FOR ADJOURNMENT.

ALLOCATION OF CERTAIN RESOURCES BETWEEN THE CENTRAL AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order.

12 NOON. I have received notice of two motions for adjournment by Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra and Dr. P. N. Amerjea which are in identical terms. They propose to ask for leave move the adjournment of the business of the House today for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, as follows :

"The terms of the Communiqué, dated Simla, the 17th September, announcing the appointment of Sir Otto Niemeyer to undertake an inquiry to make recommendations to His Majesty's Government regarding the allocation of certain resources between the Central and Provincial Governments which shall have to be settled by order in Council under the Government of India Act, 1935."

I wish to inquire whether any Honourable Member has any objection.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Leader of the House) : Sir, object to this motion, not because Government have any very strong objection to the discussion of the question on its merits, but because the matter involves a question of principle. We had yesterday a notice from the Leader of the Congress Nationalist Party of which Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra is a member, and you were pleased to fix a time for allowing that motion to be discussed. Later, when the matter came up, we were told that the notice had been withdrawn. We are now having another notice for discussing the same matter from another gentleman of the same Party. Now, Sir, no set of rules can possibly guard against all conceivable situations. As you are familiar, situations may arise in courts which may not be covered by any specific provisions of any rule, at which, nevertheless, may constitute an abuse of the processes of the court. I submit that this is an abuse of the rules. Today Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra may not move his motion. Tomorrow some other member may put in a similar motion. Is there any reason why Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra did not give notice yesterday ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : He did give notice, but in different terms, and he has withdrawn that notice.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : We are now discussing only this particular notice. We are now discussing a notice which, to use his language, supersedes and withdraws the previous notice. I want to know where the question of urgency comes in. This process may go on not only for two days but for seven days, in fact the whole of the Session. My friend may or may not move his motion today and you will realise, Sir, what it leads to. If any Member finds, that on the day on which the motion is put down, he will lose on the division or he has not sufficient strength, all that he has got to do is to withdraw the motion and ask some other Member of the Party to give a motion the next day and try to get it through.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Suppose it is a bonâ fide notice and the Honourable Member thought yesterday that, as another Honourable Member had already given notice, it was unnecessary for him to give notice again of the same motion ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The very short answer to that is that surely there is not much use in having a party system, if the Party Leader gives notice and the individual members of the party are not bound by it.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Leader might have acted independently as an ordinary Member of this House.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : That is a fact of which one could not take, say, judicial notice, but that is a fact of which notice could be taken. The Leader is recognised by you when you send communications to his Party.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : It must be remembered that all the parties here are not well knit.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The Leader makes a motion, and, later on, sends a notice that he is not going to move his motion. It is only common sense to assume that it must be known to the members of the Party, and, in any case, they should suffer for action of their Leader.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : May I draw your attention to one matter in this connection. Suppose 15 Members give notice of the same motion on the same day. Then, one man withdraws it on the first day, then the second man withdraws it on the second day, and so on. In this way, the motions may be continued to be withdrawn until the day they find themselves in majority.

Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Why not ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Supposing the 15 Members have been acting independently and in a bonâ fide way ?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (Presidency Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Mr. President, I am afraid I could not follow what the Honourable the Leader of the House was saying. It appears that the Honourable the Leader has taken shelter behind certain technicalities. I find that he is more obsessed with matters about Party Leaders, party questions, and so on, than with rules and Standing Orders. The position is this. I gave notice of a motion for adjournment just in time before the Assembly sat to transact business and I came to know later on that Mr. Aney had also tabled a similar motion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That notice is no longer before the House.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : For some reason or other, he withdrew it and I then gave a fresh notice and that still stands. My friend, Dr. Ziauddin, suggests that 15 motions of this kind may be brought, that is highly improbable. The point for you to consider, Sir, is this. If for some reason or other, one Member withdraws his motion, does it mean that any other Honourable Members, who have given notice of similar motions, are debarred from exercising their right? If that were so, it would be a serious curtailment of the privileges of the Honourable Members of this House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair thinks the Honourable Member has not followed what the Leader of the House said. What the Leader of the House said was that he took objection because the Leader of the Honourable Member's Party gave a notice and withdrew it, and that one of the Honourable Members of the Party, of which Mr. Aney is the Leader, has given a similar notice.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : In this connection I would like to point out that the notice was not given by Mr. Aney as the Leader of the Party. I have given my notice as a Member of this House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair would like to know from the Honourable Member if he knew that Mr. Aney had given notice.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Not at the time when I gave notice. I only came to know just on the eve of the sitting of this House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Can the Honourable Member give the Chair an explanation as to why the Leader of his Party withdrew his motion?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : I do not know. I was informed late in the day that the motion was withdrawn.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : An important question has been raised in connection with this notice of motion for adjournment of the House, by the Leader of the House. The facts are that yesterday the Leader of the Nationalist Group in this Assembly gave notice of a motion for adjournment in connection with the appointment of Sir Otto Niemeyer, but, later in the day, he withdrew the notice and refused to move the motion which stood in his name. Today, another Honourable Member, belonging to the same political group, has given notice of a similar motion respecting the appointment of Sir Otto Niemeyer, and the objection that has been taken is that, under the circumstances which the Chair has mentioned, Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra ought not to be allowed to move this motion and that the Chair should rule this motion out of order. The Chair asked the Honourable Member, Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra, to say what he had to say as regards the withdrawal of the motion by Mr. Aney. The Chair does not wish on this occasion to deal with any hypothetical questions but only with the question that has arisen in this case. In the absence of any proper explanation as to why, after the Leader of the Nationalist Party had withdrawn his motion yesterday, another member of the same party should have given notice of a similar motion today, the Chair must disallow this motion that has been sought to be moved today. (Applause from the Official Benches.)

Dr. Banerjea, also a member of the Nationalist Party, has given notice of an identical motion today. Does the Honourable Member wish to move it?

Dr. P. N. Banerjea (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I have nothing further to add, but I may say that the Leader of our Party, Mr. Aney, withdrew his motion without consulting any of us, and that he had given notice of it in his individual capacity. I have also given notice of my motion in my individual capacity. I may add that the question of urgency does not arise in this case, because the communiqué was published in the papers that we received in Simla yesterday morning.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : What is the date of the Honourable Member's notice?

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : Yesterday afternoon, Sir, that is to say, as soon as it came to my notice that Mr. Aney had withdrawn his motion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair has heard the explanation given by the Honourable Member, Dr. Banerjea, and it is not satisfied that there is any justification for this motion.

RESOLUTION RE QUETTA EARTHQUAKE.

Mr. P. S. Kumaraswami Raju (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevely : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, (Applause) I beg to move the following Resolution which stands in my name :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that a Committee consisting of officials and non-officials may be forthwith appointed to investigate and report whether the situation arising out of the recent earthquake in British Baluchistan and particularly in the town of Quetta was properly handled, particularly as regards the search for and rescue of the living, wounded and buried, the salvage of property and the transference of the wounded and injured outside the affected area."

I may be permitted to preface my speech with the assurance that I have very carefully gone through the pamphlet published by the Government of India which has been circulated to Honourable Members of this House. I may also state at the very outset that I fully appreciate the valuable work done by the authorities in Quetta for the alleviation of suffering and distress. In moving this Resolution, therefore, I am not actuated by any spirit of carping criticism, or lack of appreciation for what has been done, but I am only anxious that certain matters, which still require elucidation, should be fully enquired into by a Committee which commands general public confidence, and the lessons of this disastrous experience which Quetta has passed through should not be lost to the public. From the criticisms which have at various times appeared in the Press, the Government, I am sure, have realised that the public is not entirely satisfied with the conduct of affairs at Quetta, that there is still a good deal of suspicion in regard to the actions and motives of the Government in certain respects, and that there has been a general demand for a thorough enquiry to sift the details. I desire to impress upon the Government that in a matter of this kind, which admits of no political considerations, both the Government and the public stand to gain a good deal by an open enquiry of this kind. There is nothing to hide. On the contrary, there is everything to be said in favour of giving full publicity to all the facts. It is only by an open enquiry that both the Government and the public can know whether the administration was able to cope with the unprecedented situation arising from this shocking catastrophe, whether their policy and methods in meeting this catastrophe were adequate and in every respect justified, whether there is any truth in any of the allegations made, and, lastly, whether, as a result of this experience, there are any lessons which the public can usefully draw. I have absolutely no doubt that if an enquiry of this kind is held, it would furnish materials which would be of valuable assistance in future years. It is not a matter for the Government alone. As there has been so much loss of life and property, it is a matter which vitally affects the public. An enquiry would reveal in what respects the work done was commendable, in what respects it was defective, what was actually done, what should have been done, and what should not have been done. I contend that full knowledge regarding all this is essential.

Sir, the recent earthquake at Quetta has been graphically described in the red pamphlet :

“ At three minutes past 3 A.M. on the morning of the 31st May, 1935, the irresistible processes of geological evolution caught Quetta by the throat—shook her for 25 vicious seconds—and left her, dead. The terror had spread for over 70 miles from Kalat through Mastung and Sariah, leaving in its wake broken hamlets and crushed villages.....A sudden dynamic convulsion; a surging, implacable wave roared over the surface of the earth and made Quetta—in less than half a minute—a shamble, a catacomb. In its pitilessness, its suddenness and its cold-blooded finality, this earthquake must have the impious privilege of depriving Kangra and Bihar of their melancholy notoriety.”

About forty to fifty thousand people are estimated to have perished under its ravages. Sir, the red pamphlet has described in detail the relief work undertaken by the military authorities. We are all grateful to them, and to all the other agencies, who helped in the relief area. Undoubtedly, but for the prompt assistance that was given on the days immediately following the tragic occurrences, the loss in life would have been immensely greater, many more would have died or have become permanent invalids. (Hear, hear.) I certainly join in congratulating the authorities for whatever prompt work was done.

Sir, it would, however, be unwise if we allow our feelings of gratitude for what has been done to blind us to the need for a full and impartial enquiry into all matters connected with it. It is impossible for me to go in detail into all the matters which such an enquiry may legitimately enquire into, but I may mention a few which trouble my mind. Firstly, we learn from Mr. West's report on the earthquake of 1931 that he had given a distinct warning to the Government. He had pointed out that it was an earthquake area, and that during the last half a century there were more than twenty earthquakes, some of them serious. He had said that the buildings in the town were in a dangerous condition and were not suited to an area which was susceptible to earthquakes and suggested precautions of the kind taken in Japan and other earthquake ridden countries in the world. Now, why was not this warning conveyed to the people of Quetta, and why did not the Government pay sufficient attention to Mr. West's warning?

Secondly, Sir, in an unexampled tragedy of this nature, calling for colossal relief work, any Government, however great its resources may have been, should have been ready to accept whatever outside help was offered. In fact, they should have invited all possible non-official help. Here, Sir, we have on record that many non-official organisations offered their services voluntarily of their own accord, for dispensing relief to the earthquake sufferers. Mahatma Gandhi and Babu Rajendra Prasad, the President of the great Indian National Congress, offered their services immediately after the receipt of the news of this great tragedy. These offers of help were rejected with thanks. Why were these offers of help rejected? The Government have had the experience, only last year, of how the Indian National Congress could co-operate with the Government in fighting the ills of the country. The experience of Bihar and the great energy with which the Congress contributed towards the relief of that part of the country could not have been forgotten by the Government within such a short time. Besides, according to the Government's own estimate, the damage done by the earthquake at Quetta was colossal. Why then did they reject the help offered by non-official agencies?

No proper answer has been given by the Government for these questions, either in the communiqués and pamphlets issued by them or in the replies to questions on the floor of this House. The answers which they have given strengthen the suspicion, in certain quarters, that the Government have been trying to keep away certain things from the public. In these circumstances, it is but natural that various rumours have arisen. I do not propose to refer to them. Sir, these rumours may be true or may not be true. But one thing is certain. The fact that the Government did not allow men of such outstanding reputation as Mahatma Gandhi and Babu Rajendra Prasad to visit Quetta cannot be dismissed as of no consequence.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik (Home Member) : Babu Rajendra Prasad never asked to go to Quetta.

Mr. P. S. Kumaraswami Raju : If they had been allowed to visit the place, they would have certainly made valuable suggestions, and it would have restored public confidence, while by the refusal of permission, the Government have only laid themselves open to the charge that they are anxious to hide something. The only way to retrieve this mischief is by holding an open enquiry.

Thirdly, Sir, the Government are aware of the grave public dissatisfaction which arose from the delay in publishing the names of Indian casualties. While European names were available on the very first day, it was several days before we had the names of even the Indian officers and clerks in Government service who were killed or injured. Why was not an effort made from the first day to give information regarding survivors and casualties among the Indian population? Was this a blunder? If so, who was responsible?

Fourthly, Sir, an explanation is due for placing the control of the situation for such a long period in the hands of the military. Could not the Government of India have made immediate arrangements to relieve the military and take charge of the area ?

Fifthly, Sir, there have been several complaints regarding the way relief work was done, salvage operations, identification of persons and property, abduction of women, missing individuals and so on, into which it is unnecessary for me to go in detail. Even on the floor of this House, a question was put regarding missing jewels worn by women rescued to which no answer was given. It is impossible to say anything definitely about these allegations, but an enquiry will, I am sure, throw a good deal of light. It is not with a view thereby to blame the Government, or to throw aspersions on their conduct, that I refer to these things ; but I believe that it would be helpful to the Government itself if it allows an unprejudiced committee to look back on these events and form its own judgment. For instance, it has been said that more lives could have been saved if salvage operations had not been stopped so early. I am aware that the Government do not admit the suggestion, but if the public is to be satisfied, this should be corroborated by an independent enquiry. There has also been dissatisfaction, Sir, in regard to the fact that no independent non-official medical man was associated with Colonel Russel.

For these reasons, Sir, I strongly urge that the Government should appoint a Committee of officials and non-officials to go into the whole matter. This is neither an unusual nor an extravagant suggestion. If the Government agrees to it, it would not only be in accordance with the wishes of the general public but it would give an opportunity to the Government itself to establish beyond doubt what they claim to have done in Quetta, and also to rebut the charges and allegations which have been made from time to time.

Sir, I commend this Resolution to the acceptance of this House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Resolution moved :

" That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that a Committee consisting of officials and non-officials may be forthwith appointed to investigate and report whether the situation arising out of the recent earthquake in British Baluchistan and particularly in the town of Quetta was properly handled, particularly as regards the search for and rescue of the living, wounded and buried, the salvage of property and the transference of the wounded and injured outside the affected area."

Sir Hormasji Peroshaw Mody (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Mr. President, I feel that the House should not support this Resolution. If the object of my Honourable friend was merely to evoke a discussion and to ventilate on the floor of the House certain controversial issues which have caused a great deal of uneasiness in the public mind, then I admit a very useful purpose would have been served by this proposition ; in this connection, I recognise the very temperate way in which my Honourable friend has put his case and I was particularly glad to note the appreciation which he expressed with regard to the efforts of the authorities and which he said he did not want to detract from. But, Sir, if the object is to go further, and not being content with evoking a discussion, to cast a definite doubt on the value of the great work done by the civil and military authorities and the survivors of the disaster, men and women, Indian and British, then I am definitely against the proposition. (Applause from Official Benches.) Sir, the problem which was facing the authorities was an extremely difficult and abnormal one. I doubt if in the history of the world there has been a tragedy comparable to that of Quetta in its intensity, its suddenness, its concentrated horror. At dead of night, thousands of people were killed in their sleep, many more thousands were buried alive, and let us hope that their sufferings were short-lived and that they met a quick and merciful death. If an invading army equipped with all the weapons of destruction which science has brought into being had bombarded the town, it could not possibly have inflicted a fraction of the havoc which was wrought by the blind fury of nature in the incredibly short space of less than half a minute. What were the problems which, in these circumstances, the authorities had to face ? It is well known that the civil arm was paralysed ; the police lines had been wrecked ; many members of the police force had been killed, and a number of the civil officials had also met their death. The military were the only arm which was ready to act, and how did they face the task ? We have been supplied in the last few days with a couple of blue books, or, to be more accurate, one blue and one red, and, unless these books tell a positive lie, we are in a position to appreciate what was done.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Have you seen the green book ?

Sir Hormasji Peroshaw Mody : Yes, I have seen all the colours of the rain-bow.

The problem that was facing the authorities was immediately to bring out the dead, to attend to the sufferings of those who had been injured, to dig out those who had been buried alive, to provide shelter, food and a great many other things for the homeless, to maintain communications in an area which is not too well supplied with communications, to safeguard property and to protect the population which was left against epidemics, insanitation and all the horrors of this tragedy, and in a thousand and one ways to take prompt action. If these books are any testimony to the work that was done, I find that a great many of these matters were tackled straightaway that very night and, Sir, if it had not been for a certain unfortunate circumstance, the present controversy would never have arisen at all. The representatives of the press were on the spot, and their testimony and that of the survivors and of those who were allowed to visit the area is unequivocal ; they all alike speak in the highest possible terms of the work of the military and civil authorities. I will read, Sir, only two or three quotations from this blue book. The first quotation is from the Hindustan Times of the 6th June :

" In spite of the immensity of the task, all the arrangements made by the authorities are excellent."

A later extract from the Free Press Journal says :

" The action and steps taken by the civil and military authorities on the spur of the unexpected tragedy or within a week after the loss in giving all humanly possible relief to the dead, dying and living are simply laudable and richly deserve praise from all quarters."

And, finally, I quote the testimony of another strongly nationalist paper, the National Call :

" So far as Quetta is concerned, there might be serious dissatisfaction in some quarters regarding Government ban against the entry of prominent non-officials but leaving behind it a mass of thousands and thousands of tons of debris which it will take months and months,—not weeks or days, much less hours, but months and months,—to remove. The streets themselves were obliterated and houses were completely unrecognisable. Then, Sir, secondly there was the time of the disaster, in the early hours of the morning when the whole population was wrapped in sleep and people were unable to make any effort to save themselves. Then, Sir, thirdly, there is the actual experience of the men on the spot. During the first day when they worked like heroes to rescue survivors their efforts were rewarded fairly liberally, and a large number of people were saved. On the second day signs of life became less and less. On the third day very few people indeed were brought out alive, and on the fourth day, so far as I am aware, there was only one case, the miracle of the woman to whom I have just referred, which rewarded their efforts. Then, Sir, there is the rather ghastly, but at the same time necessary, evidence which has been supplied by the results of the excavation work that has proceeded since the disaster. From the 10th June until about the end of August about 600 corpses have been recovered from the ruins of Quetta. There may have been more since, but I am taking the figures up to the end of August. These corpses were removed, under conditions that are almost too appalling to contemplate, by the devoted efforts of the Boy Scouts working under Mr. Hogg from the Punjab. And I should like to pay my tribute now to the extremely valuable work that they have done. Now, Sir, of these, 117 bodies, European and Indian, were taken from the ruins of the Civil Lines; the remainder came from the city. Of these 117, all except three were found in their beds. Only three had succeeded in escaping from their beds and the remainder were killed instantaneously while they slept. In the city out of the 500 or so bodies that were recovered only eight were found outside their houses; the remainder were all inside their houses and were killed instantaneously; and those that did manage to escape into the streets were killed immediately by falling ruins. It is not necessary here to go into very ghastly details, but an examination of the bodies that have been recovered does prove conclusively that 98 or 99 per cent. of the people who died were killed immediately by the earthquake. Then, Sir, finally there is the evidence of the spirit of the workers during those first three days. I have here a sheaf of records describing the exploits of individuals, British and Indian soldiers and their officers, during those first few days. I have no time to read them now. I hope they will be known one day. They tell a story of heroism and perseverance which it would be hard to beat. Now, Sir, the persons who performed those heroic deeds happened to be soldiers, but I would ask the House, if they possibly can, to forget that fact for a moment. I would ask them to regard these men as simple human beings, which they were; and I would then ask them to ask themselves whether any human beings, much less men who had just done what these men had done, could bring themselves to relax their efforts and to sit idly by with folded hands whilst the chance of saving one single life still remained. Sir, it does not ring true and it is not true.

Now, Sir, I hope the House will understand me when I say that it has given me no pleasure whatever and no satisfaction to drive this point home. It is perhaps one of the most distasteful tasks that I have ever had to perform, to stand up here and prove or try to prove that death came quickly and that the calamity was enormous. But, Sir, that has been forced upon us by the way in which this Resolution has been put, and I hope that if I have succeeded in convincing Honourable Members that this main charge is baseless and that every possible step was taken to save human life, my words will not have been in vain.

Now, Sir, there are just two more points that I should like to mention before I sit down. The first point is this. There is no place in India, probably no place in the world, which was better equipped than Quetta to meet a disaster of this kind. Its 12,000 troops, its arsenal, supply depôt, hospitals, large medical and mobilisation stores, which fortunately were not destroyed, might have been supplied by express design to meet a calamity of this kind. Of these 12,000 troops a very large number, possibly more than half, were immediately employed on the multifarious duties which are described in our pamphlet. The remainder were sent to work, to try and save human life in the city, and Honourable Members should have no doubts in their minds as to the promptness and effectiveness of the way in which these troops were used, if they will look for a moment at the map that we have hung outside in the lobby and which shows the dispositions made by General Karslake himself in the early hours of the morning of the 31st May.

Now, Sir, it may be said that more than five thousand troops were needed for rescue work after a disaster of this kind. We admit that, if assistance had been forthcoming in those first 24 or 48 hours, that assistance would have been gladly welcomed. But, Sir, the plain facts are these. During those first three days there was no prohibition of entry into Quetta; actually during that time three thousand people did come to Quetta on their own business or out of curiosity. During that time little or no organised assistance from outside appeared in Quetta and the troops were left to deal with the situation practically unaided. And, Sir, after those three days outside assistance would have been useless from the point of view of saving life. And that, Sir, brings me to the second point that I wish to make. It is very easy for armchair critics to be wise after the event. It is easy to say that the water supply did not actually fail and that the food supply actually was sufficient. It is easy to say that the railway was not actually broken: it is easy to say that epidemics did not actually occur; it is easy to say that further earthquake shocks did not take place—actually there were one or two very serious earthquake shocks—but those were the possibilities that General Karslake had to face on the morning of the 31st, and any or all of them might well have taken place. General Karslake's responsibilities were already enormous. The death roll had been colossal and I say, and say it with complete confidence, that General Karslake was absolutely right in taking every possible step to prevent any further possible loss of life. General Karslake, I say, was the right man in the right place. He and the troops under his command rose to a situation of unparalleled difficulty in a way that ought to command, and, I believe, does command, the admiration of the whole world; and I, therefore, say that this Resolution which attempts to criticise General Karslake's dealing with this situation is misguided, misconceived and uncalled for.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon (Sind: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I rise to speak on this Resolution, because, not only am I living in Sind, but, when this earthquake occurred at Quetta, the refugees and the wounded came to Karachi, and I had opportunities of meeting about 3,000 people who came to Karachi either as wounded or as refugees. I was one of the members of the executive committee who looked after one whole camp in Karachi: I have met every day at least 1,200 people, and, on talking with them, I found that the Government and the military and civil authorities had done their best in giving them help. It is an undeniable fact that the people have received the greatest help from the authorities after this disaster. But, after fifteen days, they commenced to murmur about their property and their relations and their shops and belongings in Quetta and said that they had no money left: among these refugees and wounded, were many rich shop-keepers and merchants, as also servants and artisans and others. After listening to what they said, I will only say this: that whatever the civil or military authorities did was quite well; but they did not consider the feelings and the conditions of the people—in what condition they were in the Punjab or Sind or Shikarpur or elsewhere. There were lots of rumours in the city that I heard from these people: they were complaining very seriously about the martial law proclaimed after the earthquake. Many of the refugees told me that they were not allowed to dig out this debris—they said they might have got some of their property and they might have saved some of their relations and they might have done many other things besides—I do not know how far they are correct: but knowing human nature, I think they would have done this work very well and they would have done it much better with the help of the Government. I do not know how far this is correct, but I heard that after two days of the earthquake, the Commanding Officer and the Civil Officer met together in committee and wanted to decide whether martial law should be proclaimed or not. According to the rumours, the health authorities were against martial law and the engineering authorities were against martial law, and they opposed the Commanding Officer saying that martial law should not be proclaimed, and that, with the help of the population, they could remove the debris and save their lives and property. I cannot say how far this is correct. I was not in the meeting, nor have I authoritative information: but I also heard that those officials, who were opposed to this martial law, have been removed from Quetta to some other places....

Mr. J. G. Acheson (Foreign Secretary): There is no truth in that allegation.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon: If it is not so, I am very glad, and I accept the Honourable the Foreign Secretary's statement....

Mr. J. G. Acheson: I can assure the Honourable Member that he is not right.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon: Besides that, the Honourable the Foreign Secretary and the Army Secretary will, of course, agree with me that the Baluchistan administration is not like the administration of the Punjab or United Provinces or Bengal—it is quite a different form of administration about which I do not want to say anything at this juncture: but everybody knows that the only authority in Baluchistan is one or two men—say the Commanding Officer or the A. G. G. or some other political officer. They have very little idea of how to deal with these civilians or the civil population. In Baluchistan, the administration is ordinarily like martial law—I do not know if I am correct or not, but I think the normal administration there is like martial law. I live near by, and I have many relations and friends in Quetta who are trading there: so I know somewhat better than some others what the feelings of those sufferers are and how much they have suffered. They told me, and I do not deny it, that the authorities did very well in the beginning, but failed to do any good to the people after that beginning. Today they are living in a very destitute condition, and still they are unable to take any of their belongings left in Quetta. Not only that. I know of one instance—a Hindu lady: she is the widow of a gentleman who was serving in Baluchistan in a very high position and she came to Karachi and could not get anything to eat: she was living on the support of her relations. She has got a book in which her husband kept some money with the shroffs and those shroffs are unwilling to give a single pie to that lady, and she is compelled to file a suit in the Karachi Court: but the Karachi Court says: "This suit must be filed in Quetta, and not in Karachi." There are many more things of a similar nature that I can relate about Quetta. I said some time back that the administration normally in Quetta is such that it is martial law. After this earthquake occurred, very reliable, very big people, honorary magistrates, title holders and others were in Quetta, but they were not consulted as to how to give rescue to the people or how to conduct salvage operations. Sir, till now, not even a single Committee has been appointed by the British Baluchistan authorities to co-operate with them in the work of affording adequate relief to the earthquake sufferers in Quetta. There are many loyal people still vigorously working to give relief to the sufferers in Quetta, but unfortunately the authorities in British Baluchistan have so far completely ignored them. Of course, my Honourable friend, Sir Homi Mody, has opposed this Resolution for reasons best known to himself, but I for one, Sir, feel that he has given a very wrong advice to the Government, and I don't think that Government will be well advised in accepting his advice or in opposing this very important Resolution. (Hear, hear.) Sir, many accounts have been published by many individuals relating to the Quetta disaster, and I shall not refer to them, but I can confidently assert that many of the things that are published in the red pamphlet as well as in the green book are perfectly correct. My question to the Government is this: what is the harm in appointing a Committee? If such a Committee, as the one suggested in this Resolution, is appointed, they will be able to go through all matters very carefully and they might even support the action so far taken by the Government, but perhaps the Government are afraid that such a Committee might even say or bring to light some things deprecating the action of some of the officers which will not be palatable to the authorities. Besides all this, the work connected with Quetta has not yet been finished. There are several applications pending from merchants, and money-lenders before the authorities in Quetta, and those applications have not yet been disposed of. There are many people who have asked me to approach the Government requesting them not to charge any court-fee in some of the cases, and to ask Government to appoint a tribunal to consider each case on its merits. The salvage operations are not yet over and much still remains to be done. Therefore, Sir, if such a Committee, as the one suggested in this Resolution, is appointed, they will be able to go through all these matters very carefully and to suggest what other and more expeditious methods could be adopted to give relief to the sufferers. If the Government will accept this Resolution with a slight amendment and appoint a Committee,—I do not know if the President will allow me to make an amendment in the wording of the Resolution or if the Mover will agree with me,—it will go a long way to dispel all suspicion in the minds of the public. My amendment is, how to proceed further with the moneylenders, with the merchants, with the salvage operations, and how to give further help to the refugees and sufferers. If this amendment is accepted, I do not know whether it will be accepted or not,—it will be a great help to every one. Before I close, Sir, I would again strongly urge upon the Government most sincerely to please accept this very reasonable Resolution (Hear, hear), because, Government can also get more help and more suggestions from a Committee of the kind suggested here, because they will also be able to work in co-operation with the Government. The Committee will also be able to go into all matters very carefully with the Government and they will be able further to say that Government have done well, they have done very good work, and that their critics are wrong. I, therefore, support this Resolution very strongly, asking the Government to accept it. (Cheers.)

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Sir, believe me, I have risen with a very heavy heart to speak on this motion. Coming as I do from Sind which has been a victim of this unprecedented calamity, because, most of the sufferers in Quetta were our own kith and kin, and, some of them, friends, who died,—I am very serious when I speak on this Resolution. Sir, at the outset I must assure my Honourable friend, Mr. Tottenham, that I have no desire to bring into disrepute the Government or the military authorities for any racial discrimination, but I cannot agree with him in the least when he says that all that was needed has been done by the Government at Quetta. I join issue with him on that point. Sir, the red pamphlet has been given to us.....

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The yellow one by the Congress.

An Honourable Member : The green one.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am just coming to it. Sir, I am neither a Congressman, nor an extremist, but I merely ask the House whether what is demanded in this modest Resolution is reasonable or not? That is the issue that you have to decide. Now, as I was saying, this red pamphlet has been distributed to us from the Government side. A rebuttal of it, based also on Government information, on Government communiqués and on Government telegrams sent to England, is also contained in the green book which is in the hands of Honourable Members. On the one side there is the Government telling us that they have done well, while on the popular side there is a strong complaint that Government have not handled the situation properly, they have not done enough. Therefore, as the burden lies on the Government, let us consider what is the best course to adopt to decide this matter. Will it be by saying: "Oh, you people on the other side are wrong, or you on this side are wrong"? Sir, I feel that it will be to the interest of Government, as my learned friend from Sind Seth Haji Abdoolah Haroon just said, to see that they sift this question properly. If the Government have any fear or suspicion that a Committee of the kind suggested in this Resolution will decide against them, then only there can be justification for their shrinking and opposing this modest Resolution, otherwise, Sir, I think this is the most reasonable Resolution. Coming then to Sir Homy, he thinks that we are here for the condemnation of the military and, therefore, he made out his case by showing from that pamphlet that the military have done what they possibly could. But may I tell him that he has missed the real issue? I give him the point that has to be decided. I come from Sind and being near Quetta I was in a position to know the facts and I had also correspondence and telegrams from time to time with Quetta authorities and the Honourable the Agent to the Governor General and I got replies. Therefore, I am in a position to know some things which others may not be knowing. The place where I live is about 260 miles from Quetta. The borders of Sind towards Quetta are about 200 miles. This earthquake was an act of nature of course, and we must say, "Thy Will be done". So far, it is all right, but there is a responsibility upon humanity principally the Government and it is very necessary for Government to clear themselves and show to the world that they have not been slack in their rescue and relief operations. On the night of the 31st at about three o'clock in the morning, the earthquake happened in Quetta and it had extended towards Sind. I personally was startled with my little children and we were wondering what was going to happen. You can imagine our state of mind then. Next day morning when we heard what had happened in Quetta we were out of our wits. What did we do? Naturally you will expect, and that was done, full train loads of people started from Sind to go up to Quetta to give first aid to their near and dear and kith and kin and also other people. They went as far as they were allowed to go, that is, as far as Sibi, and then they were held up.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : When?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : It was on the first day, the very first day, and this can be proved. If you are going to say "No", I will not take that, I will tell you to have an enquiry. Full train loads were going to Quetta and they were held up. You also find in this green book which has been placed in my hands:

"On 31st May, a rescue party of the people of Dera Ghazi Khan started in lorries for Quetta but it was stopped at Loralai after it had covered considerable distance and was compulsorily turned back."

I shall give you something more, my own personal experience, nothing more than that can be needed. It has been said that the excavations were stopped on the night of the 3rd. I join issue on that point. It had been closed on the 2nd June, and not the 3rd. I have got enough materials to prove that. However, all these things should be investigated. Look at the reply I get from the Agent to the Governor General. May I say, Sir, that I have my own personal distress also? Information from Quetta came that the whole family of my sister were destroyed. Therefore, imagine my feeling. I went on looking into papers and found that people were being held up at Sibi. So I thought that there would be no useful purpose served by my going without asking for permission. I wired to my sister, I could not know where she was or where her family were. Her family consisted of her husband, her son, two grandsons, one granddaughter and one daughter-in-law. The next day I sent my brothers to go up to Quetta. They went as far as Shikarpur and were held up.

An Honourable Member : What day?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : On the 2nd. On the second when they reached Shikarpur, they say they saw fully packed up trains going, but they were not allowed to go further. A man who was coming from Quetta gave them the information that my sister was in the train. They found her in a pitiable condition ; she showed them her little grand-daughter with her and told them that all the other members of her family had been destroyed. She said also that there was no help given at that time to her for the purpose of excavation. She was, on the contrary, taken away to the camp where the other people were. So she was helpless. I sent a telegram to the Agent to the Governor General asking for permission that I should personally go and help my relations and others. The reply that came is this, and it is dated the 3rd :

"While deeply sympathising with you regret impossible grant you permit visit Quetta now under martial law and entry prohibited."

I had made a second request and I gave them a description of the house where my sister's family lived and asked them to go and excavate it themselves. The reply that I got was :

"Impossible excavate further dead bodies for medical and sanitary reasons."

This is dated the 3rd.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has exhausted his time.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I do not think I have said even one-fourth of what I have got to say. However, if five or six minutes are given to me after lunch, I will try to hurry up and finish.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member can have five minutes more.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : A deputation had been sent to Quetta headed by Diwan Bahadur Murlidhar with the Honourable Mr. Ali Bux, Member of the Council of State, and Seth Chainrai. What they have said has already appeared in the papers. Diwan Bahadur Murlidhar says that on the 2nd June he and others saw the Commissioner in Sind and they were shown a wire from the A. G. G. stating that from that day the town was going to be sealed and that no more excavations would take place. Further on, Diwan Bahadur Murlidhar says :

"I believe that if the Honourable Sir Norman Cater had a free hand and had not been handicapped by the military, he would have allowed volunteers from all parts to help and co-operate with him in this stupendous task. The batch of Multan volunteers led by Messrs. Shamlal, Mulchand and Parmanand, who arrived soon after, have done excellent work during their stay. They worked in serving and cheering the injured in the hospitals. They are about 70 in all and these 70 men would have worked day and night in clearing the debris to save lives. Numerous bands of such volunteers would have come to do rescue and salvage work entirely at their own cost. I myself sent such an offer by wire."

Now, it has been said that there were no organisations and no associations which would have come forward with offer to help. This green book is a complete answer to what the Honourable the Army Secretary has said. From that, it would be seen that even the Congress Association with Mr. Choithram, as President, wired on the 31st and there were other telegrams on the same date. The points at issue are these and they cannot possibly be decided unless and until a committee has investigated them. The points are whether the time allowed for rescue work was adequate ; whether the rescue work was not stopped prematurely ; whether it was not a blunder not to send for or to refuse help from outside when offered to them ? From the materials that I have placed before the House, I hope I have convinced the House, and also my friend from Sind, Sir Ghulam Hussain, that the Government did bungle on these points, and that they did not manage this in a proper manner, though I must say that all credit is due to the troops for the excellent work they have done within their strength and the time allowed but beyond that, who is responsible ? The higher officers who said that they would not allow any people to come in and help.

Now, Sir, I must say, through you, that the very way in which the Government conducted themselves was apt to create in the minds of men suspicion, distrust and grave concern. They on the spot very well organised themselves, did the relief and salvage work, and extended the hand of humanity to the best of their available capacity, but still the Government's inherent distrust of the populace led them to shut the door against some responsible men and associations, thus creating a feeling that all was not well at Quetta. It must be realised what an impetus did the woes and wails, cries and complaints—whether just or not—of the unfortunate, panicky and naturally dissatisfied sufferers of the gruesome disaster, impart, in an inflammable state of atmosphere, that already was surcharged with panic, apprehensions and dissatisfaction, on account of prohibition on entry for possibly saving their kith and kin. The Government failed to measure and appreciate sufficiently the anxiety and agony of men, the essentially different constitution of the Indian mind, and the characteristic sentimental disposition of an Indian. Think of thousands of women that lay waking and weeping, crying and cursing, praying and persuading themselves, all at the same time, in the hope that their dear ones and also the economic main-stays of their existence, might return safe and alive. Strike up your imagination and humanity to think of it.

I know how suffocatingly packed up trains of men, with full loads of provisions for a number of days, passed Shikarpur and Jacobabad for Quetta. People were prepared to stand on one leg all the time till they reached the place and they actually did till Sibi. Again people there were, for the sake of their dear ones, clung to the foot boards and handles when the trains hurried to Quetta at full convenient speed in response to the S. O. S. call. I do not mean by this that they all should have been allowed entry inside the stage of tragic drama, but I wish to show the urge of humanity and sacrifice in them. I, at the top of my voice, claim that in an Indian there is a great urge and capacity for endurance, service and sacrifice. He is a great sufferer—and fears God. The Government's persistent arguments of the possible shortage of supply of provisions and water and the outbreak of an epidemic are not worth the importance and weight that the Government attach to and claim for them. My reply to that in a nut-shell is that Government's nervousness was exaggerated and out of proportion. To my mind, an Englishman fears an epidemic more than he does God. My advice to him rather is to fear more the dissatisfied state of feeling so growing prevalent in an average Indian—an Indian worth the name. I do not wish to be unduly severe or wicked when I say that Government stopped the work rather too early. They ought to have continued it for some time more. Even if no person might have been extricated alive, Government would have spared themselves these unpleasant charges and given us an opportunity to thank them to a measure such as Gods would have envied. The Government, in the usual way of a bureaucrat and an Imperialist, relied solely on the opinion of their official advisers and did not, in their great wisdom, seek some opinion of non-official experts, as to the apprehension of an outbreak of epidemic. Don't tell me it was not possible. At such a critical juncture, where politics might well not have been introduced, the Government once more displayed that traditional bureaucratic frame of mind and applied Cromwell's policy of 'thorough'. I say, Sir, if they had allowed responsible, organised and recognised men and associations they could easily have warded off this unhappy onslaught. They would have, I am sure, in men that had worked in Bihar exactly the persons that, contrary to their fears, would have earned them that praise and good-will, which they sorely stand in need of. In short, the Government have been unnecessarily nervous, afraid, slack and rigid. But before I close, I once more pay my genuine tribute to those men on the spot, civil and military, who rendered such invaluable service. I am also conscious of the services and am grateful to those English girls and women that, consistently with the traditions of their sex, served to the utmost of their capacity and humanity. I am also all praise for the North Western Railway and postal authorities and men who rose equal to the occasion. But, Sir, I cannot excuse the Government of India for not having done all that they could have done and what they were expected to do. Sir, with these words, I support the Resolution. (Loud Applause.)

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

Mr. G. Morgan (Bengal : European) : Mr. President, I rise to oppose the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, and, in doing so, I would like to bring to the notice of the House the actual words of the Resolution moved. It seems to me, listening to the debate this morning, that we were wandering away from the Resolution and did not actually realise what it meant. With your permission, Sir, I would like to read the following words from the Resolution :

" was properly handled, particularly as regards the search for and rescue of the living, wounded, buried, and so on."

That refers to the rescue work from the 31st of May. My Honourable friend, Mr. Abdoola Haroon, spoke of the future. If this Committee was going to be appointed, he would like to see what was to be done in the future with regard to the salvage of property and so on. That is not what the Resolution wishes to make out. My friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, mentioned one specific instance which was in connection with stoppage of entry which I think, is a convincing proof that so far as one could gather from the reports it was more or less justifiable. Now, Sir, unless this House is prepared to say that the statements in the two books issued by Government, that is, the blue book and the red book, are untrue—and that, Sir, I contend this House cannot with any decency do,—it must be acknowledged that the work done by the authorities and the troops, not forgetting the Boy Scouts, in Quetta, especially the work between the 31st May and 3rd June deserves our unstinted admiration and praise. I doubt whether any finer work has been done in the history of the world under similar conditions.

First of all, I would ask Honourable Members to consider what would have happened had the earthquake travelled a further two miles northwards. No troops would have been available at all and I doubt whether we would have even heard that there had been an earthquake on the 31st of May. Now, owing to a providential escape, this part of the earthquake did not travel north where the Cantonment is, and where there were 12,000 troops available. If Honourable Members will read pages 4 and 5 of the red book, they will realise the magnificent work which was done at 6 A.M. on the 31st of May, 2½ hours after the earthquake occurred and practically during pitchy darkness. General Karslake and Sir Norman Cater were able to allot definite areas covering the whole of the City and the Civil Lines to the troops for rescue work. If Honourable Members will look at the map at the end of the red book, they will see what that means. Now, Sir, on page 9 of the red book we read :

" Sufficient be it for us to notice that the whole energy and might of a most competent and efficient military garrison were directed to the salvation of the lives and property in the devastated areas."

That is a very definite pronouncement.

On page 15, referring to certain allegations which have been made, of the red book we read :

" The extraordinary allegation that the Indian inhabitants did not receive their full share of rescue work, and that volunteer organisations from other parts of the country could have saved more lives if given permission to enter Quetta is refuted by the history of events as recorded in this chapter. It is incredible that such an allegation was ever put forward."

Then, Sir, certain remarks have been made about casualty lists. There, again, I can only refer to page 15 of the red book where the position is fully explained. If Honourable Members are fair in their criticism, they would realise that everything possible was done. Sir, a great deal has been made of the fact that the authorities refused outside aid. Now, let us review the situation. These organisations were not on the spot and I would ask Honourable Members not to forget that the earthquake took place in the very early hours of the 31st of May and action had to be taken as soon as possible. General Karslake had divided the whole place into definite areas at 6 A.M. and by the late afternoon of the 2nd June the military authorities having satisfied themselves that there was little or no hope of rescuing any more people alive, closed entrance, to the City on the imperative recommendation of the medical authorities. The medical authorities were definite that there was a great danger in not closing the City and taking the refugees out as soon as possible. Now, Sir, in this little pamphlet which I hold in my hand and which has been prepared for the Members of the Assembly there were many allegations. On page 2 there is an extract from a letter sent by a Military Officer in Quetta to Sir Walter Leslie, Adjutant General to the effect that by the evening of 31st May units in Bazaar and City : " had but dealt with the fringe of their areas ". Now, those words in the pamphlet are underlined and the insinuation which it is capable of is that more troops were used in other parts than in the City. In other words, the pamphlet, in my opinion, tries to make out that more care was taken to rescue people in other parts than was taken in the City. All reports go to show that this allegation cannot be sustained. Sir, it is sought to make out a case for outside organisations not being allowed to come into the City. Now, Sir, could any organisation have been on the spot by the afternoon of the 31st of May? Any organisation arriving after the 1st of June would have been of no use to rescue the living. Again—and this is a very important point—on the 2nd of June at 2-50 P.M. another serious shock of earthquake occurred and the authorities came to the conclusion that they could not possibly permit an influx of more people into the City not knowing what the result was of the second shock. The water supply and the rations were a constant source of anxiety. To emphasize that, I will read a short extract from page 3 of the blue book :

“Owing to continued prevalence of earth tremors, the necessity of harbouring supplies and the heavy demands made on the Railway transport for the carriage of necessities and the evacuation of personnel,”

—That is a very important point in dealing with this particular question—

“the admission of private individuals into the Quetta area must unfortunately be prohibited. Until further notice, therefore, no private individual will be allowed to pass beyond Rohri unless in possession of a pass.”

Sir, by the second of June the possibility of there being other survivors was extremely remote and by the evening of 3rd June, as we read on page 10 of the red book :

“The stench was so unbearable and dangerous that further intensive work, on the strongest medical advice, had to be abandoned.”

Now, Sir, suppose for a moment the authorities had not acted on that medical advice and an epidemic had broken out. What would my Honourable friends have thought of the authorities and the military then? The living would have been amongst the dead and I do not know what would be said under those circumstances. But, Sir, this did not mean that all work of rescue was stopped as seems to be the idea of most of my Honourable friends opposite. It is definitely stated in the red book that patrols in gas masks were going through the City to see if by any chance there were any living still to be found in the debris. This movement was going on till the 7th June. Now, Sir, it has been rather emphasized that nothing was done after 2-50 on the second of June; but that is not so. On 7th June an extensive patrolling ascertained that not a living soul remained in the City.

Sir, I will again refer to this pamphlet. On page 10, it is stated that :

“all non-official opinion is quite unanimous that outside labour, professional as well as volunteer should have been allowed to come to help in the rescue work, and that many more lives would thereby have been saved.”

This is a general statement which is very difficult to substantiate. Where were these people? When could they have come in? As we know any organisation arriving after 1st June could not have helped to save lives. But, Sir, there is more to it than this. The authorities had to think of the water supply and rations, also the second earthquake shock at 2-50 on 2nd June made them fear for the safety of the railway on which they had to depend for supplies and had the railway collapsed the fact of more people coming into Quetta would have matters very much worse.

Now, Sir, a short note on page 23 of this pamphlet reads :

“This proves that if those who had actually arrived at Quetta station or places nearby had been allowed to enter, their aid would have saved many lives.”

This statement is based on the fact that some Sikhs had been able to do some admirable rescue work at Mastung. Now, Sir, could one or two thousand anxious relatives searching for the entombed in Quetta have been of any real use? Could they have been enrolled as a labour corps under proper discipline? Of course, not, and, therefore, I consider there would have been danger, rather than help.

Now, speaking definitely on the Resolution before the House, it is very easy to sit at a desk and make allegations. I would ask my Honourable friends whether any of them has been in a severe earthquake, because I have and have never forgotten the earthquake of 1897 which played such havoc in Bengal and Assam and I can only repeat that all the praise given to the authorities and the Troops was thoroughly well-deserved. His Excellency the Viceroy and His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief have testified to the marvellous work done by the troops and the least we can do is to give the troops our own unstinted admiration. (Hear, hear.) Sir, again I repeat I am speaking strictly to the Resolution and no words of mine can convey the indignation that we felt when we read this Resolution which had now come before the House in the terms in which it is stated.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has already exceeded his time limit.

Mr. G. Morgan : I shall finish in one minute, Sir. We ask, why was this, to our mind, ungenerous Resolution brought forward. The Honourable the Mover of the Resolution has stated that he is not wanting in admiration of what has been done. But if that is the case, I think his Resolution should have been worded entirely differently. If it is merely enquiring into some items such as my Honourable friend, Mr. Navalrai, brought forward, that can easily be done not in a Resolution of this description.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will Government accept the Resolution, if it is amended?

Mr. G. Morgan : That is for you to find out. All Honourable Members who have spoken since the Resolution was moved have emphasized their admiration for the work which has been done, and I am glad it is so. But really I cannot see what the object was in bringing forward a Resolution of this kind when the minds of Honourable Members are full of admiration for the work that has been done. I hope the Honourable the Mover will see his way to withdraw his Resolution. (Applause.)

Sir Ghulam Hussain Hidayatallah (Sind Jagirdars and Zamindars : Landholders) : Sir, I will not take up much time of the House. I will only make a few observations on this Resolution. The object of this Resolution is whether the authorities have handled properly the search for and rescue of the living, wounded and buried, the salvage of property and so on. What did we hear from the Mover of the Resolution and his two supporters? All admiration and unstinted praise for the authorities, for the work that had been done. And my friend, Hajee Saheb from my part of the country, further quoted the independent testimony of the survivors or the refugees that had come to Karachi whom he had met; and he told us that every one praised the work of the authorities. Therefore, I fail to see what is the good of bringing this Resolution when the Mover and his supporters praise the work of the authorities there. Where then is the necessity for an inquiry, when the authorities have properly handled the situation?

Sir, I now come to my friend, Hajee Saheb. He has perhaps mixed up the Resolution with his suggestion. I agree with him about his anxiety as regards the distress of the survivors and he was very anxious that certain concessions should be made to those survivors in regard to court-fees and jurisdictions of the Courts, etc., if I understood him rightly. I should like to ask my Honourable friend whether by supporting this Resolution he will gain those objects. Certainly not; but I am prepared to agree with him that Government should make certain concessions to these men. Then as regards his criticism of the martial law, my Honourable friend seems not to have read this literature. Why was there the necessity of military administration? Because there was no civil administration. All the policemen were dead, the civil servants were dead and it required some time to set up an administration to take charge; I draw his attention to the good work done under the martial law by the military authorities which has been praised in these books by the non-officials of the city of Quetta.

Now, Sir, I come to one of the allegations that have been made against the authorities there. This sad news flashed across the country early on the morning of the 31st. Everybody came to know of this calamity. Naturally those who had friends and relations at Quetta were very anxious about them. They wanted to know whether they were living or dead. When they could not get any information and when they saw that the list of casualties among Europeans was published, that created a greater suspicion in the minds of the Indians that perhaps the Indians in Quetta were not meted out proper treatment and that partiality was being shown to the Europeans. I might inform this House that that was my own impression until I read the explanation of Government. The European casualties were few in number because they were a handful of people. They were either in civil or in military employment or were connected with banks. So it was easy to identify them and as soon as they did not go to their work next morning everybody understood that they were dead, or their death was reported by their friends and servants. But look at the Indian population there in the city. There were nearly 50 thousand people; the policemen were dead, the civil officers were dead, the municipal registers were destroyed; how could anybody get any information as to who was living and who was dead? Yet I must say to the credit of the authorities that within a few days they published a casualty list of six thousand people. It is very easy to sit in this House and make speeches but we must face the realities of the situation.

Then, another complaint was made that outside help was not admitted. For instance, we heard from Mr. Lalchand Navalrai that the Sind Congress Committee sent a telegram on the 31st May, but at what time it was dispatched to Quetta it shown. And what are the contents of that telegram:

"Sind Congress Committee prepared organise relief earthquake distress. Kindly wire if can lead with relief party specially for cremation, burial and attending women and children."

The very work for which they wanted to go was already being done by the authorities. Even the refugees have said that that work was very well done. We must take into consideration the fact that all telegraph communications were cut off, and as we know the first telegrams were sent out of Quetta about the 2nd June. Moreover, by this time the authorities there must have received shoals of telegrams but they had to attend to more important work of rescue, medical relief and other things. It is very easy to complain that a telegram was not replied to, but that can be done in normal times and not in abnormal times. However, the Congress got a reply late in the night of the 2nd. Even if the authorities had given them permission to go to Quetta, the first train which they could have taken was on the 3rd, which leaves Karachi at 12 o'clock noon and is known as the Quetta Mail, and they would have reached Quetta on the 4th. But nobody was needed there after the 4th. The most important days were the first three days, 31st, 1st and 2nd. Again, entries were banned in Quetta for very important reasons, one of them being that there were repeated earthquake shocks in Quetta, and secondly, there was the danger of epidemics. If instead of these mild shocks severe shocks had occurred damaging more life and property, and if Government had not banned the entry of people, my friends on the opposite side would have blamed Government saying that Government knew that earthquake shocks would occur and yet they allowed outsiders to come in. Then as regards the danger of epidemics, that was also the opinion of experts. If against the advice of experts, Government had allowed outsiders to enter there and an epidemic had broken out, then also Government would have been blamed because knowingly they allowed them to come in.

Now, Sir, about the rescue work, they continued, as the previous speaker has explained, up to the 6th and 7th and the salvage work was also continued. I will now quote from a book which has not been published by Government nor by the Congress but by one Mr. Sethi, Municipal Commissioner, Amritsar:

"The following statement of Bibi Harnam Kaur, a Sikh woman of Amritsar, who was rescued from Quetta after remaining buried for nearly six hours, was published in the Statesman, the Hindustan Times, the National Call, the Leader and a number of other English and Vernacular newspapers:

"Interviewed by the Associated Press she stated that she had little hopes of coming out alive since the whole thing happened so suddenly. Many poor people living in kutcha buildings have been saved, while the richer people living in palatial buildings were amongst the worst sufferers." Continuing she said: "The behaviour of the British and Indian soldiers in the salvage operations were excellent. The task was the most difficult—beyond human comprehension." She said that she was thankful to the British soldiers who had heard her cries and had brought her out. While in Quetta she had not heard of any complaints of misbehaviour or hardships caused to sufferers by soldiers. On the contrary, they were very kind and helpful. She had watched them take out many people. She emphatically denied the allegations of any distinctions made by them in extricating people whether they were Europeans or Indians, rich or poor. She said that all such talk was based on ignorance since the people out here could have no idea of the magnitude of the work."

[Sir Ghulam Hussain Hidayatallah.]

I recommend the reading of this book from pages 24 to 29. Not only has a Sikh woman given this statement, but municipal commissioners and others also have praised the work of the military. I need not take the time of the House by reading out quotations from various press comments. Every one of them, friendly or unfriendly, has praised the work of rescue, salvage, etc. I think it is hardly fair for this House to criticise the good work of the authorities in Quetta. The Mover of the Resolution and his supporters have praised the work. In my opinion they deserve well of this House and of the country. With these words, I oppose the Resolution.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang (East Punjab : Muhammadan) : Mr. President, I rise to support the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, and, in doing so, I must at the outset express surprise at what appears to me to be a misconstruction of the Resolution, and, as far as I am able to understand, of the spirit in which that Resolution has been moved. It has been assumed by some Honourable speakers who preceded me and notably by my Honourable friend, Sir Ghulam Hussain Hidayatallah, that a charge sheet has been framed against the Government, that the intention of the Resolution is nothing short of passing a vote of censure on the Government, and that the demand for the appointment of a committee of inquiry is really prompted by a desire to secure the conviction of Government for certain offences. Now, as far as I am able to understand the matter especially after listening to the speech of the Honourable the Mover, which the Army Secretary had the fairness to describe as a very temperate one, I submit that this motion should not be taken as an attempt necessarily to censure the Government. The object of the Resolution is simply to get more truth about the happenings at Quetta after that deplorable catastrophe, the earthquake. I may say straightaway that I have not had the advantage of receiving a copy of the red pamphlet which has been referred to by so many speakers : in fact only a few minutes ago I borrowed this copy from my Honourable friend, Seth Abdoola Haroon. I have not had the advantage or disadvantage of reading the green pamphlet which has been referred to by my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, although I do admit that I received the small yellow pamphlet referred to by Sir Ghulam Hussain Hidayatallah ; also one day I found the blue pamphlet published by the Government on my desk. The fact that this valuable contribution to the literature on the subject—this red pamphlet—should not have reached every Member of this Honourable House.....

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : A copy was addressed to every Member of the Assembly.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang : Excuse me : I have not received it either at my residence or here in my seat : very good : the privileged Members might have got it.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair understands from the Secretary of the Legislative Assembly that copies of this pamphlet were circulated to all Members.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang : I refer to that fact in order to show the defect of the system by which necessary and relevant information is circulated to those who are concerned with it. Suppose after reading this pamphlet my views on the subject had been materially changed, I ought to have got it in time ; but it never reached me. This is only by the way. I may say that I am keeping a perfectly open mind on the question, especially because very soon after this earthquake I received private information about the way in which the troops stationed at Quetta were doing their best, and I may say that what I heard from a friend of mine, who was there on the spot, was to the credit of the troops : I am not prejudiced in any way against the manner in which the troops handled the situation and in which the authorities on the spot did their work. In fact, from the information that I got at that early stage, when controversies had not arisen, I was very favourably impressed, and I consider it my duty to say it on the floor of this House that I join every one in this House who has paid a tribute to the work of the army and the authorities there. My point is simply this : that after the army and the authorities on the spot had been carrying on their work for a number of days, certain complaints arose. Some of those complaints found expression in the press and in the course of the speeches that have been made on the floor of this House today some complaints have been specifically referred to. Possibly other Members in their speeches will refer to some other specific instances in which people have had reason to complain. What this Resolution demands is an inquiry and nothing more. The Resolution does not assume any guilt on the part of the authorities who handled the situation after the earthquake. Now, where is the harm if Government say with Sa'di—

"An rá ki hisáb pákast, az muhásabá chi bákast"

"If my account is perfectly clear, I do not fear an audit ; you people want an inquiry, come, have it. Everything is fair and square, you will find that nothing is wrong ; we are prepared to accept an inquiry."

I submit, Sir, the spirit in which this Resolution has been proposed, as far as I am able to judge, is one of wanting more light to be thrown on the many questions which have been raised relating to the management of the situation created by the earthquake, and to that extent, I think, it will be the height of statesmanship on the part of Government to offer an inquiry,—instead of acceding to the demand for an inquiry, they should offer an inquiry and say : "We are perfectly sure that everything has been done correctly, you people have some complaints, you think that certain mistakes or errors have been committed, you want an inquiry,—all right, come, have an inquiry". It may be urged, Sir, that an inquiry would entail expenditure of time and money, but I submit, Sir, that all that expenditure of public time and money will be amply justified, nay more than justified by the results, because the questions involved are of vital importance. The earthquake at Quetta was an unparalleled event in the history of India, if not in the history of the world. Well, a very large number of people were affected by the earthquake and the allegations which have been made against the way in which things were managed concern the good name and reputation of so many officers and of the Government itself. Well, the issues involved are very vital. Where is the harm, I ask, in acceding to this demand for inquiry ? In fact, it will be very good if you have an inquiry in the way wanted by this Resolution. I may, Sir, submit in passing that it has become the habit of Government, whenever a fair demand for an inquiry is made, to oppose that demand. Only a few months ago, we had the Karachi firing. There were very loud complaints, there were so many demands for an inquiry, but all those demands were stubbornly refused. I doubt, Sir, if it was wise to refuse those demands for inquiry. What is the result? There are thousands and thousands of people in India who believe that really it was in order to hide the ugly facts that the Government did not grant the demand for an inquiry. Why, only the other day, on the 21st and 22nd of July, there was firing at Lahore in connection with the Shahidgunj Mosque dispute. All kinds of rumours were current in the Punjab. 14 responsible press men issued a joint statement making serious allegations and demanding an inquiry. A responsible public body like the Punjab Muslim League passed a very strong Resolution and demanded an inquiry, but there is no sign yet of those demands being listened to. This is the way in which, on every occasion when the public wants the matter to be inquired into, the Government turns a deaf ear to such demands. I submit, Sir, it is in the interest of the Government itself, in the interest of its good name, and its reputation, that the demand for an inquiry made by this Resolution should be granted. In fact I expect the Government will accept this Resolution and not challenge it. With these few words, I strongly support the Resolution.

Mr. J. G. Acheson : Sir, it has fallen to my lot to speak about that portion of the Resolution which deals with the evacuation of the sick and wounded from Quetta after the earthquake and also with the salvage of property. But before I proceed to deal with these matters, I would like to say a few words with reference to what was stated by the last speaker. He as well as some other speakers on the other side have tried to persuade the House that in some way it is to the advantage of the Government that they should accept this Resolution and that they should agree to a Committee of inquiry. I venture, Sir, to differ very deeply from that proposition. In effect, it amounts to this, that the Government is to accept the position of the accused in a Court; before a prima facie case has been established against it, before the complaint has been filed, before the affidavit of the complainant has been taken, the Government is asked to step into the dock. I submit, Sir, that that is not a fair proposition, and lest I should be accused of exaggeration, I would say that I have listened to every speech made by the Opposition very carefully, and I have heard nothing from beginning to end, except suspicions and allegations, without a shred of evidence to support them. If any Honourable Member were under any illusion on the point after hearing the very moderate speech of the Mover of the Resolution, I think, Sir, that illusion must have been shattered when he heard the eloquent and lengthy speech made by my friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, a gentleman belonging I believe to the legal profession. As Mr. Lalchand Navalrai warmed up to his theme he actually went so far as to produce from one of his pockets the charges against the accused neatly written and framed! I have little doubt if he had been allowed another quarter of an hour, he would have produced from another of his pockets the judgment fully drafted,—and no doubt condemning the accused to death. For these reasons, Sir, and I think every reasonable Member of this House will support me,—I object very strongly and vehemently to the terms of the Resolution—reasonable though it may appear, to an unthinking mind.

I now come to the two specific points on which I have been asked to speak. With the first, I do not propose to detain the House long because, as far as I have been able to hear them, no reference whatever has been made today in any of the speeches of gentlemen supporting the Resolution to the question of the evacuation of the sick and wounded from Quetta. From the silence of Honourable Members on the other side, I think it can be assumed that there is even less than the usual flimsy foundation for this particular allegation that there was any kind of neglect or ill-treatment of the sick and wounded who were evacuated from Quetta. Therefore, Sir, I will very briefly detail the facts, because although it may be said that it is dangerous to excuse oneself,—the French proverb says whoever excuses himself accuses himself,—nevertheless in this case, all that the Government wish to do is to place the House in full possession of the facts. They have nothing to fear and nothing to conceal.

As regards the evacuation of the wounded which, as I say, occupies one-third of the Resolution, it has not been dealt with by any of the supporters of the Resolution. The facts are that in the first fortnight after the earthquake, no less than 30,000 persons including very many sick and wounded and injured were evacuated from Quetta. One's imagination tends in time to become deadened by the stupendous figures in connection with the earthquake, but I would ask the House just to think what those figures mean. After the first day or so,—I am not quite sure when the first relief train came to Quetta,—a stream of relief trains began to come to Quetta bringing food, provisions, medical stores and so forth, and taking away those survivors who wished to leave Quetta, and that, I think, Sir, included every living soul in Quetta who had not got official occupation there. Not a single soul was evacuated from Quetta against his will. A certain number of patients had to be evacuated from hospitals which naturally suffered from overcrowding after the disaster, and in addition to this, there was a stupendous rush of terror-stricken people in the scene of disaster. The terror of the earthquake was weighing on the minds of all, and all were animated by one desire, one impulse, to remove themselves as quickly as possible from the scene of the terrible experience through which they had passed. The railway service, however, coped with that emergency, and I think it speaks volumes for the efficiency of the railway administration that they were able to carry out this enormous evacuation as expeditiously and as efficiently as they did. On the way to their places of destination all that was possible was done for the refugees at the stations en route in the way of refreshments, assistance, medical comforts, etc., but the principal assistance was that which was given to them at the stations of arrival. And here I may say that this work of attending to the refugees on arrival at their home stations and in their home towns and villages was the really great work which the public were able to do to assist the refugees. This was the form of assistance which was asked for by the Government, and in respect of which the Government's appeal obtained such a magnificent response. The problem was not so much to send additional men to Quetta, but so far as possible to decrease the number of souls in the stricken city.

[Mr. J. G. Acheson.]

I turn now to the salvage of property. The case for the Opposition on this point was stated very reasonably, if I may say so, by my Honourable friend from Karachi. He represented the hardship which was caused to a number of survivors owing to the difficulty attending restoration to them of their property. The story can be simply told. It is not quite clear when the salvage of property was actually started, but it may be taken that for the first twentyfour hours the energies of all concerned on the spot were fully occupied with the salvage of life and not of property. During the second and third days individual salvage began, and on the third day, as far as I can make out from the reports, a certain amount of organisation was introduced in the salvage of property concurrently with the work of search for survivors. On the fourth day a salvage corps had already been established and efforts were being made to recruit further salvage corps from outside. It was at this stage that the medical authorities peremptorily and imperatively stopped further operations on the ground of grave risk of an epidemic. This was on the 4th June. There was then a gap from the 4th June to the 16th July when the first report of the Chief Medical Officer was available. On receipt of this report it was decided, though with some misgiving in view of the terms of the report, that it would be safe to start preliminary operations such as clearance of debris from the principal streets, and so forth, to prepare for the salvage of property in such houses as were only partially damaged, to which access was comparatively easy and in which there was reason to believe that there were no dead or only few dead buried. Steps were immediately taken to this end. Simultaneously, about this time further steps which were essential to the starting of a systematic salvage operation were also taken, namely, the issue of claims forms which were published in the form of an advertisement in the papers. This was a very essential measure because it enabled the authorities in Quetta to ascertain whether the inhabitants of each quarter were when the turn of their quarter came for salvage operations. Another step which was taken was the drafting of a Salvage Law, and this, I think, meets one of the points made by my Honourable friend, the Member for Karachi, in that the Salvage Law provides cheap and entirely gratuitous decisions of a semi-judicial nature as regards the disposal of property. If I am wrong on that point, I should be glad to be informed by my Honourable friend and I shall look into the matter.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : No, you are right.

Mr. J. G. Acheson : Thank you. From the outset, this work of salvage was entrusted to an officer who is well-known to many Members of this House. I refer to Colonel Parsons, and those Members who have had the privilege of knowing this officer will agree with me that he is not a man who allows grass to grow under his feet. Under Colonel Parson's guidance a fleet of lorries was engaged, a large salvage corps was recruited and, I believe, put under a sort of military discipline which was very necessary in view of the arduous nature of the work, and the materials for laying down a light railway were obtained. Since the work started—I am rather anticipating now—since the work started, no less than eighteen streets have been cleared in addition to the two suburbs of Nachari and Kasi which Honourable Members will know. The property returned to the owners already totals Rs. 7½ lakhs. The chief difficulty now is, I understand, to procure the presence of the claimants of property in sufficient time to keep pace with the work of salvage. I had better go back,—I am rather anticipating, I am afraid—the work of salvage of individual houses of the kind which I have described was started on the 1st August after the receipt of the second report of the Public Health Commissioner who by this time was satisfied that operations could safely begin on a limited scale, and I am happy to inform the House that a systematic salvage of all houses without restriction is now in full progress.

To sum up then, it will be seen that the suspension of the work of salvage work was forced on Government by imperative medical advice, and I ask Honourable Members to imagine what the nature and volume of criticism would have been if Government had disregarded that advice and if, in consequence, they had been faced with an epidemic among the surviving population of Quetta. What we have heard today in the way of criticism would have been a mere whisper compared with the storm which would have been about our ears raised in that event. The second point is that the salvage work has proceeded so quickly that, as I have said, it has been difficult to procure sufficient claimants to keep pace with the work. My last point is that the salvage has been accompanied by no looting and by no epidemic disease—two very great achievements to which I have heard no reference made I think by any of the speakers on the other side. These facts, along with those that have already been laid before the House by my Honourable friend, Mr. Tottenham, will, I think, convince any Member who had not already made up his mind before the debate, that there is not the faintest or the flimsiest reason for asking Government to accept a commission of enquiry on the handling by its servants of this national crisis—a handling which has been the subject of praise all over the civilised world. Sir, I vehemently and emphatically oppose this Resolution and call on all Members whose votes are not already pledged, to join me in opposing it. (Applause.)

Mr. Bhulabhai J. Desai (Bombay Northern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I take the responsibility of having drafted the Resolution, though, by reason of the chances of the ballot, it fell to my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, to move it before the House. Many interpretations have been sought to be put upon it, many insinuations are read into it and it is a matter of regret to me. The only explanation that I can give is the usual psychological one, which I hope my Honourable friends know very well—that you read too much into what obviously is a matter of enquiry, and not necessarily a charge. It is either a case of guilty conscience. Why do you read more into this Resolution than what in fact it says ? Why do you undertake to say, "We are accused of not having done our duty. Therefore, don't pass this Resolution" ? Why don't you, as men entirely unbiassed in mind, having done your duty,—why all persons must have an unstinted admiration for what was done—why do you read more into it than what the Resolution says ? But you do so in the hope that by so doing you will bring round a few friends by saying "Oh, we are condemned persons and, therefore, please vote for us". That certainly ought not to be the attitude of the gentlemen opposite who are in charge of a big Government,—the so-called national Government of this country. They ought to stand above this ingenious, somewhat astute and somewhat purposeful method of catching votes.

[Mr. Bhulabhai J. Desai.]

Sir, in all the great calamities that have occurred, calamities of nature and particularly that which has been most frequent in this country, namely, famine—it has always been the purpose and the duty of Government to hold an inquiry even before that particular event is over as to whether or not the rescue or the relief operations, as they were called, have been carried out in a manner satisfactory to the Government, satisfactory to the public concerned and also for the purpose of providing a lesson for the future. I am one of those who have a vivid memory of the year 1901 when the Macdonald Commission came out and when famine was still raging in large parts of Gujerat and other parts of the country and did the Government then say that an inquiry could not be made as to whether the operations were rightly handled, whether the Government and their officers were ready with every kind of resource, for the purpose of future guidance. In an unprecedented calamity of this kind I would not blame any Government whatever for not having more than what it has at its disposal at the time. That is never the dispute. Let us not make a mistake of imagining that because the soldiers did their duty—I will take it—more than their human duty—we are trying to blame them. I will assume that it was their duty to do what they were called upon to do. I would not be cynical enough to say that if they had failed in their task they would have come in for blame but you cannot at the same time ask us to present an address of congratulation to them for doing what I submit they were bound to do. All honour to them that they did it but, to come and suggest that because we are asking for an inquiry into what might have been omitted, what more might be done and what lessons we may learn for the future, we are trying to blame them—well that is a piece of logic which I cannot understand. It is a method of argument which I cannot possibly understand and have not yet understood. My friend, Sir Hormusji Mody, might understand it, but certainly I have had a little more logic and a little more of business in persuading judges of the Courts to see the right point of view. It is no use pretending that by this Resolution we are condemning anything that is done. What we are attempting to do is to have an inquiry into what was done, what more could have been done with a view to taking a lesson for the future, so that in cases of calamities of this kind, the Government may not find itself unprepared. Geological science has progressed and in fact Government has been in possession of a considerable amount of information with regard to those deltas, those belts, as to whether calamities of this kind may be apprehended at some future date. You must, therefore, remember, that I wish the House not to read more into this Resolution than what it says. When any Member from this side of the House moves a Resolution, it is going to be your attitude “we must put our back to the wall and fight in the last trench”. I think that will be the last trench of a demoralised government which will look on questions from this point of view. Why do you accuse yourself before we accuse you? All we are trying to do is to find out what was done. How can you, within the limits of a quarter of an hour, hope to satisfy this House or the rest of the country as to whether what was done was enough. Why should you shirk an inquiry, if all the glorious deeds on which you ask for our commendation have been already done? If that is so, you will come out all the better out of this inquiry, all the more unscathed and all honour will be given to you. But you come and say “Who are you to come and tell us what we are to do? We are the Government of this country. What we have done we have done and you shall rest content with that.” Well, that is a position which I am here to repel.

I ask you to read the terms of the Resolution and see whether the stimulated address of my friend, Sir Hormusji, has any basis at all. The terms of the Resolution are these and I submit that any responsible government, having nothing to conceal, would immediately agree to accept it. The terms of the Resolution are these:

“This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that a Committee consisting of officials and non-officials may be forthwith appointed to investigate and report whether the situation arising out of the recent earthquake in British Baluchistan and particularly in the town of Quetta was properly handled.”

Now, what is wrong in that? It does not lay the charge on you that you have mishandled. Where is the accusation. My friend, Mr. Acheson, suggested, that Government is called upon to be accused at the bar—of whom?—of the committee which they will set up? The words are: “whether it was properly handled”. If they are so confident of the work which they have done, they ought cheerfully to consent to this inquiry and say “we will have it. After all, it is not merely a matter of prima facie proof. I wish it were possible to arraign you all before a Criminal court.” Then things would take a different shape; but that is not the issue at all. We are here dealing with a much more conciliatory, much more sensible and much more prudent Resolution and after all in every country, whether the Government is responsible or irresponsible, the Government owe it to the people of the country to remove all suspicions from their minds. My friend, Sir Hormusji, suggested, there may be an error of judgment. Let me assume for the sake of argument that there is this suspicion, that there was an error of judgment. It is due to the people at large that you should remove their suspicions. It is up to you to come forward and prove that there was no basis for any suspicion or rumour. But if you say: “you must give us your reasons for your suspicions about our mishandling and it is only then that we shall go before a court of inquiry”, then it is a really a case of who excuses himself accuses himself. All we ask is for an inquiry. If all the glowing accounts that you have given of your conduct are correct, what have you to fear? Are you afraid that some of these unfortunate sufferers will come before the inquiry and give their experiences which may not tally with your accounts? We cannot rest satisfied with your assurances that everything that could be done was done. We want the country to be satisfied. I, therefore, submit, Sir, that when we ask for an inquiry in terms which convey no charge, no insinuation but which undoubtedly demand an inquiry whether or not that matter was properly handled, that it is not a matter that any Government, without, as I say, a guilty conscience and with possession possibly of information which they dare not, and do not wish to, disclose,—it is not a matter that any Government can ignore. If, Sir, neither of these circumstances exist, they ought to cheerfully accept this Resolution: in fact it is the very resistance to Resolutions of this kind which creates and confirms the suspicions of all those people throughout the country as to the manner in which the situation has been handled. (Hear, hear.)

And, now, Sir, I will take you, within the short time at my disposal, to the next two branches of the Resolution which call for an inquiry. The Resolution says "particularly". Yes, why do we particularize,—and particularly in the town of Quetta, was properly handled, particularly as regards the search for and rescue of the living, wounded and buried, the salvage of property and the transference of the wounded and injured outside the affected area". Now what is wrong with that Resolution? What is the suspicion behind it? If you say: "we have rescued every person who could have been rescued; we have assisted every wounded that we could have assisted, and we have otherwise properly disposed of all people that have unfortunately struck down by this calamity", what, then, is the objection to our Resolution? What is the insinuation behind it? Sir, I cannot understand it.

But, Sir, there are certain documents published by or under the authority of Government which do really call for an inquiry, for it is easy to make oneself the object of pity and sympathy and to say—"here I am doing my duty, dying to do my duty, dead almost in the act of doing my duty, and here are these ungrateful people who are wanting an inquiry". Well, Sir, that is not, that ought not to be the way of a dignified and an innocent Government. Here, for instance, are certain facts namely, that at 3 A.M. in the night of the 31st May this horrible earthquake took place,—and there is an account given of the rescue work in an earlier statement published in the Times of India by the military officer addressed to General Sir Walter Leslie, and you have got a graphic and full account given at the very time, not made up afterwards, which will give you, Sir, the actual course of events that took place. He says, Sir, that: "on the 1st of June rescue work began at 7 A.M. and continued till 6 P.M.". That is the first statement that he makes. Then he continues, and I will continue the same subject of rescue—and he further says:

"Conditions in the bazaar were getting pretty bad." Then at page IV he says: "Second June was a very bad day for the troops and could hardly have been worse. Rescue work started at 7 A.M. and continued until about 2-30 P.M." And then he says: "It was decided at mid-day that rescue operation must cease."

That, Sir, is the account as given in that report that was submitted. Now the same account appears, namely, what was read out by my friend, the Honourable Mr. Tottenham, but the most amazing of all the salvage stories is that of the Indian woman in the city who was buried for two whole days and then it was found that she gave birth to a child! Then, Sir, from the very statement published by Government at page 10 of the red book, it appears that during the interval, meaning thereby, I presume, "up to the end of the mid-day of the 2nd of June", well, the eye-witness records that "during this period nine corpses were being exhumed for every single live person found". Now why must I take it from those who were in charge of these operations that every single person who may have been rescued was dead by the mid-day of the second of June? It is indeed—and I speak with great restraint—it is one of the most callous statements to make? Sir, human life is valuable, as I hope my friends recognize,—and why must it, therefore, have been taken for granted, and now I will deal with the point as to why I say it ought not to have been taken for granted. It was not because a person here was suffering from an epidemic disease; it was the type of case where say a wall merely of a house tumbled down by reason of this movement of the forces below the earth: and who dare say that though the top-most story may have fallen down, there were not and could not have been very many—as evidenced by the facts disclosed of the case of this woman giving birth to a child after two days of interment, and numerous other similar cases—cases of persons being supported by rafters or otherwise such as were sufficient to keep human beings going and keeping them from being crushed to death who might still have been alive. And now all that is said is that you must assume that at the end of the mid-day of the second of June everybody who could be saved was dead. I submit, Sir, having regard to the nature, the very nature of this calamity, you cannot assume that many persons might not have been entombed and still be alive between the 1st of June and the mid-day of the second of June. Then, Sir, not only that; the matter does not rest there. When a telegram was sent to the Government, the very first answer that they gave was this. The Karachi reply was sent by the Commanding Officer: "No effort is being spared to recover the survivors from the debris of the city.....promiscuous digging has closed.....". But what is the systematic excavation? "Troops detailed were able to cope with all the work"!

Now, either we are to praise the heroism of the six thousand persons engaged in the maintenance of what you may call "utility services" and the remaining six thousand detailed for the purpose of this work! Sir, an immense calamity of this character surely would call for many, many more men indeed being occupied whole days together! And here it is solemnly and seriously said that when 26,000 persons were still buried and entombed, that the six thousand persons detailed were well able to cope with all the work! Sir, I am quite willing to give whatever credit is due to the troops, and we are grateful to them for whatever services they rendered and for which we pay, but at the same time I am not prepared to take every statement that the Government make at its face value. I am here to say that they ought to have realized that the paltry number of six thousand persons doing this duty was certainly most cruelly inadequate for the purpose, for, indeed time was the essence of the matter. Any intelligent person could have realized that the six thousand persons detailed for this work were of little value for the purposes of this huge task, which could easily absorb sixty-thousand men within the space of this time. And yet it is said—"we have done all we could"; and I will give you an idea, Sir, of when and how it could have been well tackled. I will give you, Sir, what is after all common knowledge. Karachi is fourteen hours' journey, Sukkur is seven hours' journey, Shikarpur is five, and Lahore is sixteen: and there must have been large numbers of people at work on the railway lines and otherwise who could surely have been drafted within a space of sixteen hours for undertaking this great work of humanity. And yet I am to be told here—"give us your praise: you are charging us; we have employed six thousand people on this work". But, after all, six thousand men surely were not at all enough to cope with the work that was to be done. And yet, when offer of help was volunteered, this Government turned it down! Sir, I ask your leave to read the answer they gave! Sir, it is not a personal question, it is a great question concerning people undoubtedly who were there. Sir, on the 1st of June the people of Shikarpore, through the Local Relief Committee made more extensive arrangements and chartered a special train to convey volunteers, foodstuffs, doctors, nurses and medical equipment. A large number of implements for excavation were also purchased. The special train was actually sanctioned by the authorities at Sukkur and was to leave at 4 P.M. on the first but was cancelled two hours before departure, that is at 2 P.M. on that day. Therefore, it is a matter of trifling with life! You say they are dead. Undoubtedly they are dead! May their souls rest in peace! But nonetheless we cannot accept the excuse that more might not and ought not to have been done. I still make no charge. Government during the course of that inquiry may be in a position to show that it was impossible to get more than 6,000 men to do the work of excavation for the purpose of saving life on the 31st, 1st and 2nd. But it is up to them to show it. After all, we have known what resources they employed and the facts are there. They had only 6,000 men and they would not have any more. Is this House ready to pronounce that they did not need more than 6,000 men and that these 6,000 men were sufficient for the purpose of carrying out excavation work and to save some of the 26,000 lives which were lost? Are we here merely to commend their work and to present them with addresses? Sir, they are burking the issue. We are not here to charge those who have done the work. They have done their work well in the sense that all the 6,000 people put their shoulder to the wheel. We are here to find out whether more men ought not to have been there. We are not saying whether these 6,000 men did not do their work properly but whether it was not up to them to have rescued in a larger measure during the period of time when it was possible to do so. It was a case in which people might have been so entombed and so covered that it might have been possible to rescue them. In fact, it is common ground that only wherever the soldiers heard any sound of a living person crying for help that they attempted to see whether or not it was possible to rescue a living person. But was that enough in a case of this magnitude? Then, Sir, there is another thing to which I must refer. What happened after the 2nd of June? This is what the report says:

"From the 3rd of June to Saturday evening, the 8th of June, troops were hard at work from 7 A.M. to 6 P.M. digging out the property of residents in Civil Lines and Cantonment area."

Now, Sir, what right the man in charge of these operations had to detail the soldiers to do this work? Even if the operations had proved to be futile it was his duty to have employed every single man that was available within the limits of the Quetta City for this rescue work for life even if it had turned out that they could rescue even one life out of one hundred. They had no business to turn away these 6,000 men from the work of rescuing life to the work of rescuing beautiful China. If these 6,000 men were allowed to continue their operations in the "native quarters", and had been able to dig in the hope and expectation that one more life might have been saved, I would have said: "All honour to them." But, on the 2nd of June, they said: "We shan't do any more. We assume that everybody is dead." And then they go on to do this great work and say: "It is amazing to find the amount of stuff that had been recovered." Sir, what is more amazing to me is that some more lives were not recovered out of that debris. They say: "It is amazing the amount of stuff that was recovered undamaged; furniture, clothing, even jewellery, silver and glass was in many cases dug out from beneath the bricks, etc." Sir, if it was possible to dig out the debris ten feet high in order to get jewellery, silver, glassware, furniture and clothing, might they not have dug ten feet debris in the city during those days, even on the mere off-chance of finding some persons alive? This is a charge that I make but it is not a charge in the sense of making anybody answerable for it. But the point on which I lay great stress is this that the assumption and declaration that on the afternoon of the 2nd of June every single human life had been dead and, therefore, it was not at all necessary to do any further work for the purpose of rescuing life and utilising those persons who were available for the purpose of finding out clothing and jewellery in the Civil Lines and the Cantonment area was a grossly atrocious act. The report goes on to say:

"The troops have been particularly successful in salvaging what the dentists call dental plates. All the owners have had their property restored to them intact and undamaged."

I say no more damaging statement could have emanated from any responsible Government when they say this:

4 P.M. "On the 2nd of June, we assumed that everybody was dead, but we did not assume that every piece of furniture had been broken. We must dig ten feet in order to find furniture, but we must not dig five or ten feet deep and continue to do so for the purpose, or even on the off-chance, of saving human life." That is why we have the second part of the Resolution which says: "particularly as regards the search for and rescue of the living, wounded and buried". Sir, why should anybody assume that on that fateful day, the mid-day of the 2nd of June, everybody had been dead and it was quite unnecessary to use even the resources that were available—let alone anything else—for the purpose of saving more lives? I am afraid I have not got much time at my disposal but there is one other point to which I must call the attention of the House. Offers were received from the Red Cross Association and other bodies and I honour all those who did that great humanitarian work. I wish to emphasise again and again that I honour every single man who engaged himself in this rescue work and did what he could. But that is not the issue. The real issue is: Firstly, why did you not try to have more men and, secondly, did you not apply your available resources to the higher and the better purpose? That is the issue and it is the issue which cannot be burked. That inquiry, I hope and trust, Government for their own purposes and not for the purpose of clearing their character will accept. Of course, they are honourable men and far above any charge but nonetheless there is such a thing as the people of India otherwise they would not have anybody to govern. And, in order to satisfy these people of India, it is necessary to have a committee of inquiry. After all, it is not the Treasury Benches alone who concentrate within themselves and within their own souls all the available vitality and all the useful vitality of this land. I hope and trust that they will imagine that there is a humanity besides those who sit on the other side of the House and those who choose to associate themselves by reading red books and other books. I say, therefore, Sir, that it is not the work they did that is condemned. What is condemned is the manner in which they did that work. I have no time to go into the details but the details are all available and will be available if my friends still think it worth while consenting to have a committee of inquiry. Offers were made from time to time from every available source not more than ten hours journey from the scene of disaster in order to render assistance but those offers were turned down with this remark: "We have enough resources and they are adequate enough to cope with the work." Either it was an error of judgment or it was the deliberate policy of Government. Nonetheless if that was the attitude that he took, why should not he stand an inquiry. If he said: "I have got 6,000 men and I have got 60,000 lives to save and I don't care whether they are saved or not but, for some reason or other, I won't allow you to come in", he should be prepared to face an inquiry also and justify his conduct. After all, the people who cared to go were volunteers and they would not have blamed anybody if anything happened to them as the result of the dangers which were mentioned. They were going there in the hope of saving their own brethren, their own kith and kin and their own children whom they would have liked to save even at the risk of their own lives. On such occasions you must take risk and they were prepared to take it. After all conditions were not so bad at Quetta at that time. Water did not fail; sanitation did not fail; epidemics did not break out. Therefore, what I am suggesting is that for the second part of my Resolution, on the materials put by the Government themselves they have made out a perfectly clear case of inquiry.

The third part of my Resolution is:

'the salvage of property and the transference of the wounded and injured outside the affected area.'

I have no time to address myself in detail to the question of salvage of property but it is put in there for the important reason that the task of this committee would be to suggest measures in order that this property may be restored to their true owners in the most expeditious way possible. For indeed there is always an economic disaster following upon such a calamity, limited though it may be, and such disaster should be met and cleared in the shortest possible time. Coming, Sir, to the transit arrangement for the wounded and the injured, I beg to leave to say a few words before I conclude. This is the report shortly made after it had occurred:

"The first train which reached Karachi conveying the Indian wounded contained 288 patients. It was not an ambulance train but an ordinary troop train. The patients with fractured arms, legs, and hip bones were brought all the way from Quetta in a troop train with three berths one over another. An eye witness states that the whole train was stinking as it arrived at Karachi. The sanitary arrangements were inadequate and defective, especially as the movement of patients with broken limbs lying on the two upper berths was difficult. Some patients had developed gangrene. Four had died on the way. Doctors and nurses with the train were insufficient. When the train arrived at the Karachi platform, many of the patients despite their broken limbs had to be taken out through the windows of the compartments."

It is admitted by them that, up to the 8th of June, no ambulance train brought any Indian wounded.

Sir, I have done. My submission to you is this. My Honourable friend, Mr. Acheson, said, he was appealing to those who had not already made up their minds. May I humbly re-echo his words. May I humbly say that to those who have not made up their minds merely to allow the Government, as I said, each time, to adopt this particular obstinate and stubborn attitude of saying, "who are you to question us"—We are not questioning you. We are only humbly knocking at your door in order that you may lay the whole information about all the work you did at the disposal and before an impartial enquiry. But there is a two-fold purpose in this Resolution. It is first to find out what has been done and what ought to have been done and why every offer was rejected and secondly this Commission of Enquiry would also have the purpose of suggesting means and measures and ways of expeditiously dealing with this unfortunate chapter in so far as its economic aspect is concerned. Much more than that, we will know what had been done. We will then know how much has been done and how much we will have to do in future when a calamity of this kind occurs, so that the Government of the future would be prepared as to the best way and the most efficient way of meeting a calamity to the extent to which such unprecedented, unanticipated and unexpected calamities are capable of being met. Sir, I do appeal to the good sense of the House not to raise wrong issues, not to pretend and save their conscience that they have answered them. We are not charging that the troops did not do what they were called upon to do and, therefore, any amount of praise of them is not going to cover the real purpose of the enquiry. All honour to those who did the work. On behalf of those whom I represent, insignificant though we are in power (Laughter), but significant as we are in numbers, on behalf of those whom we represent, and we claim to represent (Hear, hear), it is on their behalf that every assistance given is most suitably and appreciably acknowledged, but we are not going to allow that to be an excuse for burking an enquiry. Therefore, let the issue be clearly faced. We make no charges, enquiry. Therefore, let the issue be clearly faced. We make no charges, we make no insinuations. I would have been very glad if the Government were arraigned at our bar, but at present all we are asking for is to set up a committee, and ask the Government to place all their materials honestly and straightforwardly and candidly and fully. Let us have our say, let the sufferers have their say and let the Commission then pronounce upon it. Therefore, I ask those who have not made up their mind, I call upon them in the name of India, in the name of those who have suffered, in the name of those for whom you pretend to sit here, even though nominated or elected, I call upon each one of you to support a Resolution which conveys no insinuation and which only demands an enquiry. (Applause.)

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: Sir, before I address myself to the specific issues raised by this Resolution, I should like, with your permission, Sir, to say one word to voice the feelings that must, I think, be uppermost in the minds.....

Sir Cowasji Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Mr. President, you have now called upon the Honourable the Home Member. Does it mean, Sir, that the debate is over? I want this information. The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition spoke for 32 minutes. Does it mean that the debate is over and the Honourable the Home Member is replying or will other speakers be allowed after the Honourable the Home Member?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That question does not arise now.

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : May I point out, Sir, that it does arise in this way. The rule is that only 15 minutes are allowed to a speaker, but, by your gracious orders and your permission, the Leader of the Opposition has been allowed 32 minutes. I do not see why other speakers should be deprived of their privilege of addressing the House. I want to know whether I will be deprived of my privilege of speaking.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair has at present called upon the Honourable Sir Henry Craik to address the House, and, when he has finished, and, if the Honourable Member, who has addressed this question to the Chair, rises, then, the Chair will consider. (Hear, hear.)

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Before I address myself to the specific issues raised in this Resolution, I should like to say one word to voice the feelings of sorrow and sympathy which I think must be uppermost in the minds of every one of us when we consider the terrible calamity which is the subject of our discussions today. It is no conventional expression of sympathy that I voice because it seems to me that there were features about the Quetta tragedy, its terrible suddenness, its finality, its completeness which make a peculiarly poignant appeal even to a generation like ours which has lived through the four most terrible years in recorded history. The tragedy of that peacefully sleeping city wiped out of existence in one second of time surpasses in its stark horror anything I think that occurred even during the four years of the Great War. I think our second thought must be this. How puny a creature is man when confronted with these terrible forces of nature and how infinitely trivial are our petty struggles and disputations and disagreements ! One would have hoped that at a moment like this, the entire sentiment of the whole country without one dissentient voice would have found expression in a resolution of sorrow for the dead and a single-minded desire to do all that is possible to comfort and succour the survivors. Unfortunately, this was not to be. Although the disaster has called forth the deepest sympathy of the whole world and the steps that have been taken to cope with it have evoked the admiration of the whole world, it was left to the Party opposite to strike a note of discord, and in its incessant desire to use any weapon to destroy the prestige of the administration, to use its own words, it has brought forward a Resolution which as I hope to show is founded on prejudice, on unfounded rumours and on distortion of facts.

The speakers for the Resolutions have disclaimed any idea of blaming the troops or the men on the spot. But the three points covered by the Resolution are specific and definite. All of them relate to the action taken by the troops and the men on the spot and all of them call for an enquiry in regard to that action. It is idle to assert, as the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition has asserted, in one breath, that you bring no charge and in the next sentence to bring forward what he himself described as "a most atrocious charge". If that is the Opposition Leader's logic, then in his own favourite phrase I make him a present of it. This specious claim for an inquiry cannot, I submit, for a moment be sustained. We are asked why, if Government have nothing to conceal, do they not agree to an inquiry and indeed why they have not themselves asked for an inquiry ? That is not my view at all. We inquire when we think there is anything to inquire into. In this case we are perfectly satisfied that our officers and our men did all that was humanly possible in a most difficult situation ; and we are content to accept the verdict already given by the entire civilised world in no hesitating way, that they did their duty in the most humane and courageous manner possible. Throughout these incidents the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Government of India have been in daily and hourly touch with the men on the spot. No step was taken without our fullest approval and nothing was done of which we were unaware. We are not going to cast on the honour of the army, British and Indian troops alike, the slur that would be implied by accepting this Resolution.

Sir, the charge against Government as it was originally framed in the motion of adjournment tabled on the first day of this Session, but not moved for some obscure reason of which I have no knowledge, was that we had refused to grant permission to two political leaders to proceed to Quetta. Our reasons for refusing permission to them were based on no political grounds ; the prohibition was general and everyone was treated alike. The reasons had been explained at length in statements issued by Government, but as they have been discredited or disbelieved by speakers this afternoon, I feel it my duty to repeat them. The reasons why entry into Quetta was refused after, but not before, the 2nd June, when a second and much worse shock of earthquake occurred, were as follows. There was a very grave risk of failure of the water supply. We are told, it did not in fact fail and where was the risk ? It was almost a miracle that it did not fail. Water is brought from a great many miles away and any one of these shocks,—and there have been almost daily shocks since the end of May,—might have broken down the water supply. The second reason was the risk of interruptions on the railway. The railway line on this side of Quetta has many long tunnels and it is only a single track line. One bad shock brings down one tunnel, and the place is cut off from the outer world except by road or by air. Then thirdly, there was the danger of the outbreak of serious epidemics. There again Honourable Members who spoke for the Resolution have taken the sneering line that there was no danger because there was no epidemic. That seems to me to be a completely fatuous line of argument. With thousands of corpses and millions of flies feeding on those corpses, in a place where typhoid, malaria and cholera are always endemic, there was the very gravest fear of an outbreak of disease ; and the more people in the place, the graver the fear. It was only the extremely fine work done by the doctors on the spot and the rapid reinforcement of medical personnel and the supply of medical prophylactics and necessities that averted that danger. Fourthly, there was the scarcity of food supplies and the total absence of accommodation of any kind. That is one thing to which no speaker today has referred. Every house in the place was either flat or was too dangerous to live in, and the only accommodation available was the tents which the military were able to supply. By the 2nd June the supply of tents had been exhausted and there was no accommodation for any one else of any kind whatever. Many of the wounded survivors were at that time necessarily lying out in the open because there was no cover to put them under. Fifthly, there was the necessity of conserving all forms of transport by rail, road or air for the carriage into the affected area of medical personnel and medical stores, and for the carriage out of the area of the wounded and refugees who desired to be evacuated. And lastly, there was the danger, which subsequent experience proved to be very well founded, of further shocks of earthquake causing possibly loss of life, in any case loss of nerve, and increasing the difficulties of those who had to deal with the panic-stricken refugees. The situation by the 2nd June. was in short one where there was no need of any further help on the spot. People were being evacuated as quickly as possible; the first duty of the authorities then was to evacuate these panic-stricken people and the sick and wounded from Quetta so that none should be left but the able-bodied and the unwounded, who would naturally be more capable and better fitted to resist disease.

In such circumstances, the arrival of any additional relief party would have merely been embarrassing to the authorities. I should like again to emphasise that up till the 2nd June there was no prohibition. As Mr. Tottenham has pointed out, anybody who arrived up to that date was allowed to come into Quetta; and several small relief parties did arrive and something like 3,000 individual visitors. But, after the 2nd June, any more would have been a hindrance rather than a help and would have greatly added to the difficulties of the men on the spot who had most urgent work to do. Relief work was then in the hands of a large and splendidly disciplined force of men. Casual helpers under no discipline, possibly indifferently led, who had to be fed, accommodated, housed and medically looked after, could have been of no assistance whatever. They would merely have been so many more mouths to feed and would merely have meant turning out into the open people who had a better right to shelter than themselves. The scope for relief work then was in the relief camps started in various parts of India and in these camps splendid work was done by voluntary workers including, I am glad to acknowledge, many Congress organisations. But in Quetta itself at that time there was no scope for unofficial relief work.

I do not know that I need refer further to the question of the exclusion of these two political leaders, but I would make one observation on this point. Mr. Gandhi did not apply to go to Quetta till the 6th June. He then wrote a letter which reached Simla on the 8th or 9th. Even had permission been given to him he could not possibly have arrived there till the 11th or 12th at the earliest. The Congress President, Babu Rajendra Prasad, never made any suggestion that he should go to Quetta himself, but merely asked that relief parties should be allowed to go.

Sir, the gravest of the three charges against Government is as regards the search for and rescue of the living, wounded and dead. I should have thought that Mr. Tottenham's speech this morning had fully met the case on that particular point, but evidently from the speech we have just heard it has not carried the conviction that it ought to have to the Benches opposite. The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition has said it was a callous and a brutal assumption to make that there were no survivors after the 2nd of June. Nobody ever made that assumption: no such assumption was made; it was thought probable—and I think on very good grounds—that those who were buried under the ruins must all have perished by that time; but no assumption was made that there were no living persons under the ruins, and the search for possible living did not stop on the 2nd of June as has been asserted, but went on continuously till the 7th June. It is true that on the 2nd of June the conditions in the city were so appalling and insanitary that work had to be temporarily suspended, because it was not safe to let men go on working without gas-masks of some kind. But the patrolling of the city went on continuously after that date and by the next day, I think, gas-masks had been served out and parties were working regularly with gas-masks. By the 4th June, a regular salvage corps had been organised of local labour, and was at work again on an intensive scale. The misunderstanding as regards that particular point, I think, has largely arisen from the use in one of the statements of the expression: "The city has been sealed." That was understood to mean that an impenetrable cordon of troops or police had been drawn round it and that nobody, military or civilian, was allowed to go inside. I admit that that was a very misleading expression. In actual fact it only meant that all excepting the military were cleared out of the city on the 2nd of June and that thereafter the only parties allowed to work in the city were military parties. But it does not imply—and that is the point that I want to drive home—that work of searching for possible survivors in the city ceased on the 2nd of June: it did not so cease: it went on continuously till the intensive drive through the city on the 7th June showed conclusively that there could not be a living soul in the city. That precaution which was described as "sealing up" was taken on sanitary grounds. It was impossible, without grave risk of infection from thousands of putrefying corpses, to allow anybody to work there except under the strictest medical precautions and the strictest control and discipline.

I have said that the people on the spot made no assumption that nobody could possibly be alive after the 2nd of June: but the people on the spot did consider that it was most improbable that there were any survivors after that date and, as a matter of fact, the only case of a survivor being dug out alive after the afternoon of 2nd June was the woman who was dug out with a baby on the 4th of June—what has been described as a miraculous escape. The conversation I had the other day with Mr. Hogg, to whom Mr. Tottenham referred, the Leader of the Boy Scouts, who did such magnificent work in handling and disposing of corpses, seemed to me the best possible corroboration of the view taken by the men on the spot on that point. Mr. Hogg went to Quetta on the 10th June and stayed there with his burial parties, as he called them, of Rover Scouts till the 23rd of August when he was struck down by sun-stroke and came here on a few days' holiday: he has now gone back to resume the splendid work that he was doing. All the corpses dug out by the salvage parties were handled by Mr. Hogg's three burial parties: whenever a salvage party came across a corpse, they called up one of these burial parties and Mr. Hogg saw every corpse himself: there were by the time he spoke to me over 600 of them; and he assured me that hardly one of them had not been killed instantaneously. There were none that showed any signs of struggle, and the few, the very, very few, that were found outside their houses and not lying on their beds, were buried under sometimes 8, sometimes 10, sometimes 12, and sometimes more feet of rubble and debris. Their death too must have been instantaneous or practically so. That is the strongest corroboration of the correctness of the deduc-tion drawn by those working in the city, that it was exceedingly improbable that after the first forty-eight hours, there could have been any survivors.

Much has been made both in this House and in the newspapers of the statement that in the Bihar earthquake many people were dug out after five or six or seven days. That seemed to be assumed as a priori correct. But I had the curiosity the other day to write to the Bihar Government and ask them whether they had heard of any case of such a rescue; and I was told that there was no case whatever on their records, and that though certain stories to that effect had been going about at the time, there was no authentic and proved case of such a rescue. In any case even if there had been an authenticated case, it would prove nothing. The conditions of the Bihar earthquake were completely different from the conditions of the Quetta earthquake. In Bihar the earthquake took place at 2 o'clock on a winter afternoon. Nobody would be asleep at that hour or hardly anybody; and most people would be either out of doors or sitting on their verandahs, and naturally a very large number succeeded in escaping. Moreover, the destruction of buildings was nothing like on the same scale as at Quetta. Many buildings were no doubt destroyed, but there was no case, so far as I know, of the complete and utter destruction of a whole town or even of an entire bazaar. In Quetta city I believe it is correct to say that every building went flat at once.....

An Honourable Member : So was the case at Monghyr—two miles long and one mile broad.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : In Quetta city, I believe, not a single building was left standing and there is no analogy between the extent of the loss of life in Bihar and in Quetta: in Bihar the earthquake was spread over a much wider area, but the loss of life was infinitely less. (Interruption.)

Now, those who assert that many could have survived after the first two or three days have tried to bolster up their theory by a most malicious and cruel story—cruel because it must have caused pain to the man's relations—that appeared in the press of a man who had dug himself out of a shop—a sweetmeat seller's shop, no less than 47 days after the earthquake. This was all related most categorically and circumstantially: the man's name was given and so on: the story of how he had been buried in his shop and how he dug himself out with the iron ladle with which he stirred his sweets. That struck us at once as a most peculiar story and we made investigations. It was found that though there was a man of that name living in Quetta, and though he did keep a sweet shop, he never slept at his shop, but he slept in his house at some distance from his shop; no living soul has since seen him since the earthquake, and the inference is that he as well as his family perished, not in his shop at all but in his house. The inventive malice that can produce a story like that, entirely false and utterly unsubstantiated, is really almost incredible, but I have seen in the press other stories almost as absurd as that. There was one, I remember that appeared in a paper, a strong supporter of the Congress party and a paper that pretends to be very reputable, the Hindustan Times,—it claims to be that,—there was a story of an Anglo-Indian called Brookes, who at the relief camp in Delhi had told the representative of this paper of his own horrible experiences in the earthquake. It was stated that he was serving in the Government Dairy Farm or Grass Farm,—I forget which,—at Quetta, and when his house collapsed, he was left with his head and shoulders sticking out, but his wife was less lucky, as only her hands were above the surface. Some soldiers came along and they pulled him out at his urgent request. After they had been hacking about with their spades—and it was said that they broke several peoples' arms and legs in their indiscriminate digging operations,—they came near the debris where his wife was lying helpless, and he said "Rescue my wife, her hands are still moving", but he alleged that they callously walked away and left her to die. That story was printed with every circumstance of detail, with every appearance of truth. We made investigations, and we found out that not only was there no man of the name of Brookes employed by the Grass Farm, Dairy Farm or any other department in Quetta, but for six years there had been no one of that name on the roll of any Military department in Quetta. The Grass Farm was outside the zone of the earthquake, and no damage was done there at all. Brookes himself was found to be a drunken, half-witted loafer who was taking shelter in the Delhi relief camp along with other refugees, and he is now, so far as my inquiries have carried me, in a lunatic asylum. That is the sort of stuff out of which foul charges are manufactured against the soldiers!

There was another instance about which my friend, Mr. Satyamurti, was good enough to make inquiry across the floor of the House the other day, and this came to our notice in this way. At the end of a political meeting in England which was addressed by a lady whose name must be familiar to many Honourable Members, the Duchess of Atholl, an Indian from the audience came up to her and handed her a letter which he had received from his brother in Karachi. The brother related the experiences of a friend who had kept a draper's shop at Quetta. The draper had told his friend in Karachi, who had written to his brother in England, the following story, that his shop collapsed, that though he himself was uninjured, he saw many people all round buried under the debris, and British soldiers came along and deliberately tore off the rings from the hands of dead or dying women. They then looted this man's shop and helped themselves freely to his stock. He then in despair went to the officer in charge of transport and asked for a pass on the railway. The officer refused to give him a pass unless he paid him a bribe. That was pretty detailed and pretty circumstantial, names were given and so on. We got hold of the brother in Karachi. We got hold of the actual draper. The former was described by the officers who interviewed them as an unreliable youngman and likely to be influenced by unreliable stories. But the actual man (the draper), who had been in Quetta, denied the truth of every allegation repeated in the other man's letter and denied that he had ever made any such statements. That is the kind of thing with which we had to compete in the press. But that by no means exhausts the abominable stories.

A Cawnpore paper published a statement alleged to have been made by a gentleman called Dr. Muhammad Ismail, Medical Officer to His Highness the Khan of Kalat. This Doctor is said to have told a representative of a paper that if salvage operations had not been delayed, many more live persons could have been saved from the debris, and the complaint was that the work of digging was not done properly and that the soldiers worked very carelessly. Well, there again was an allegation we could follow up. We found Dr. Ismail, who is or was the Medical Officer to His Highness the Khan of Kalat. He denied that he made any statement of that kind to any newspaperman. He is alleged to have made the statement to a newspaper correspondent at Amritsar. It was discovered that he never even left his railway carriage at Amritsar on his journey to his home which was further south. He had made no mention of the subject of Quetta or relief work during the whole of his journey to any correspondent of any newspaper, either in Amritsar or elsewhere.

Then, there was another story in the Hindustan Times, that stalwart organ of the Congress party. Here again full names were given. Patram, son of Ishwardas, contractor, made written statement, it was said, to the camp authorities at Quetta, the substance of which was that his Munshi had notes worth Rs. 500, when some soldiers turned up and snatched away the money and distributed it among themselves. We traced with some difficulty Mr. Patram, who actually turned out to be a mason working on daily wages. He made a statement to the effect that British soldiers took away no money of his, but on the contrary they helped him in every way they could, and had treated him with the greatest kindness. (Official Cheers.)

Then a Saharanpur paper produced what I may call a really horrifying story of the atrocities committed by the military. Terrible stories of women who were refused help, and who recounted "the diabolical nature of the military administration". The military forcibly took away what jewellery they could get hold of. No name was mentioned, and we could not follow it up, but the paper was challenged, and the editor admitted that the whole story was an absolute lie from beginning to end and published an apology. I have said enough to illustrate the kind of stories, the kind of foul slanders that have disfigured a certain section of the press. Then I am asked to agree to an enquiry which, in spite of the moderation of the speeches made in this House, is, in essence, based on that kind of rumour, that kind of allegation. In every single case where it was possible to follow up the allegation, it was followed up and shown to be entirely and utterly without foundation except a foundation of malice and hatred. As I say, in essence the demand for an enquiry is based, as was admitted by many Honourable Members who spoke on the Resolution, on the fact that there are rumours about, and I have given you some specimens of these rumours. Into such rumours I entirely refuse to enquire further than I have done. If Honourable Members opposite would realise the contempt and indignation roused among the troops themselves by this kind of horrible slander, they would have hesitated before bringing forward such a Resolution.

The Leader of the Opposition has favoured the House with one of his usual brilliant orations. This time he indulged beforehand, like a popular prima donna, in a preliminary flourish of advertisement. We were told in another organ of the Congress Party, Roy's Weekly, just before the Session began.....

Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Is it a Congress organ ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Is it not ? Then, all I can say is, I do not know why it publishes accounts of the debates in this House in the way in which it does. However, that paper said in an issue of last month that the Leader of the Opposition would speak on Quetta. Then, mind you, there was an adjournment motion contemplated, but apparently the Leader of the Opposition thought that it was better to have a wider field for his talents. We were told that his speech would be "the most sensational speech of the Session", that the Leader of the Opposition would not say a word that we was not "heavily docketed with incontrovertible facts". We were warned in advance that all those who wanted to hear his epoch-making speech should immediately apply for tickets to the gallery. I do not know whether the House considers that his speech has lived up to that preliminary puff. For myself I admit I entirely enjoyed it, and with all sincerity I congratulate the Leader of the Opposition. I have never heard a worse case more ably presented. (Cheers.) His case is as weak as any one I have ever heard. Specious pleas are put forward. "Grant an enquiry. What have you to lose ? You have nothing to hide. Grant an enquiry. We make no charges". And in the next breath most disgraceful charges are made ! In fact, we are to go into the dock, as the Honourable the Foreign Secretary said, with the charges ready framed against us, and to submit ourselves to what I suppose would be called an impartial jury largely composed of Honourable gentlemen opposite.

An Honourable Member : Are we not impartial ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Thank you, very much. We are not going to accept that invitation.

Sir, we have often heard from Honourable Members opposite the use of the term exploitation,—that we are exploiting the starving masses of India and so on. Is there a lower form of exploitation than exploiting this dreadful tragedy which has horrified the whole world, in order to gain a political advantage ? That is the lowest form of exploitation I can imagine. Sir, as I have said, every step taken at Quetta was taken with the approval of His Excellency the Viceroy, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and the whole Government. If anything wrong has been done, we assume the responsibility. The responsibility is not that of the men on the spot ; the responsibility is ours. And we are to walk into the dock on these unspecified and unprovable charges ! If we are satisfied with what our agents have done, why should we agree to an enquiry ? (Cries of "Oh !" from the Congress Party Benches.) As regards the men on the spot, as I have said, we are perfectly content to leave their actions to the judgment of the world at large, and I claim that the civilised world has pronounced its verdict in an unmistakable fashion on the splendid action taken by the troops, on the courage and humanity with which they discharged their duty. We shall not have an enquiry, and we shall not be deflected from our decision by any arguments put forward by a political party whose only object is to employ any means, to exploit any incident in order to discredit the Government. (Loud Applause.)

Some Honourable Members : Let the question be now put.

Mr. Bhulabhai J. Desai : I am quite ready if they want further discussion. It was not our object to shut out discussion, but we had no other alternative but to ask for a vote. We have only this last non-official day allowed for Resolutions. If any one is under the impression that we wanted to shirk discussion, he is under a misapprehension. What we did desire was a decisive vote of the House one way or the other, and I do not mind if they do not want it.

Sir Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : The leader of a party has been insulted in a manner which I have never known before. Whatever may be the intention of the learned Leader of the Opposition, he always says one thing and means another thing.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) Order, order. The Chair cannot allow a matter like this to be discussed. There has been a division, and it has been declared that the “ Noes ” have it. The discussion will proceed either today or will continue on another day, if one is allotted. (Honourable Members on the Government Benches : “ No, no.”) Then the Chair is prepared to sit till six or half past six.

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : Although I am under certain disabilities, I trust the House will really excuse me for intervening at this stage. As I was not in India when this terrible calamity occurred I was not able to follow the controversy between Government and some very worthy citizens of India on what should be done and what should not be done or what should have been done and what should not have been done at Quetta. I was unfortunately not present here this morning for no fault of my own. Suffering under these disabilities, I venture to say a few words.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant, one of the Panel of Chairmen].

From what I could make out from the speeches made this afternoon, it appears that neither the Mover nor any of the speakers who may have preceded the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition ever intended to contend that the army at Quetta behaved in any other than in the most creditable manner. That, I understand, was the trend of the speeches and, what is more, I understand that the Mover of the Resolution actually said so. Now, Sir, if that be the intention of the Mover or the Resolution and of others,—I do not include amongst all those who intended not to cast a slur upon the army, the Leader of the Opposition,—I mean if all those who intended that no slur should be cast upon the army, I would ask the House to read the Resolution a little more carefully. Sir, what does the Resolution ask the proposed Committee to consider? "... particularly as regards the search for and rescue of the living, wounded and buried". Who was responsible for that search? None other but the army that was present at Quetta at the time of this terrible catastrophe! It was the army who could alone serve the devastated area by "a search for and rescue of the living, wounded and buried". No other organization could have done this work, Sir, and, it was merely by chance, by the act of Providence, that the army was enabled to do this work, for, as somebody said, if the earthquake had taken just slightly another turn, there might have been no army to do this work: and, therefore, the investigation that is desired is to see whether the army that was there at the time did do its work of rescuing the dying and the wounded properly. Then, again, what else does this Resolution want?—to report on—"the transference of the wounded and injured outside the affected area". Well, Sir, in the first instance, again, it was only the army who could help; the other organizations came into existence for this purpose at a much later date: and, therefore, let it not be said that we do not read this Resolution correctly when we state that it was originally framed with the idea of a nasty, dirty insinuation that there was something wrong, something suspicious in the way in which the army acted in the first five days. I maintain, Sir, that that is the insinuation behind this Resolution, and it is that insinuation which has been so strongly repudiated by, I understand, all my friends on the Congress Benches except the Leader of the Opposition. Sir, never has it been my misfortune to listen to a more grossly atrocious speech than the one delivered by Mr. Bhulabhai Desai (Cries of "Hear, hear" from the Official and some of the Independent Benches). Sir, my Honourable friend himself used the words "grossly atrocious". Never has it been my misfortune in this Assembly to hear a more atrocious, and a more grossly atrocious, speech (Cries of "Hear, hear" from the Official Benches),—a more illogical speech, containing more specious arguments, unworthy of a Leader of the Opposition (Cries of "Hear, hear" from the Official Benches), unworthy of a great lawyer. (Cries of "Hear, hear" from the Official Benches.) Does he believe he was addressing a police Court? Sir, he first admitted that he was the author of this Resolution, that it was his marvellous brain that produced this wonderful Resolution! Well, Sir, all I can say is that my Honourable friend has three mentalities,—one when he drafted the Resolution, another when he began his speech, and a third mentality, very much like the first, when he began really to tackle what he thought was an argument: he really intended, when he drafted this Resolution, that there should be a sting in it. Now, having found the temper of the House not inclined to take that view, he tried to change it. Then, when he began to read the Resolution to the House, he found he had to put up some justification, and his mentality went back to the original day. Sir, he first stated that he endorsed the speeches which were meant to convey that there was no insinuation against the Army in this Resolution. He asked—why should anybody read into the Resolution any idea or sentiment that was never intended to be conveyed? Well, I can understand that. I can understand a man sitting down to draft a Resolution and conveying in that Resolution in black and white ideas and sentiments which he never intends. That has often happened. There is nothing very strange about it. But he did not stop at that. He went much further, and went on to accuse the men on the spot on that occasion of having a mentality which did not care for the life or for the sufferings of humanity, for he said—"what does life matter to these men?"—These men who, in the middle of the night, were called out to serve afflicted humanity, and who, perhaps, were really only doing their duty and who did it really well,—for them to be accused in this way to-day,—against them to use such a malicious insinuation that they had no regard for life and suffering—and these are the words he used—is monstrous! Then he went on to state that because in his imagination they did not go on in their search for the dead—which was contradicted by the Honourable the Home Member, and which I believe has been contradicted on more than one occasion before—he went on to say that this was a grossly atrocious act! Now, Sir, if this is the kind of justification for this Resolution which we have read correctly and which is intended to be an insinuation against those Indian troops,—not only against British but against those Indian troops at Quetta who were there heroically doing their duty (Hear, hear), who were instrumental, Sir, in saving thousands of lives, then I shall refuse—if I call myself an "Indian"—to associate myself with that speech, the dastardly speech made by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition. (Cries of "Hear, hear" from the Official Benches.)

Mr. Chairman, I regret that you should be in the Chair, a worthy representative of the Congress, when I am forced to make a speech like this. But, after all, I feel and I hope and trust many of my friends on the Congress side also do believe—that their Leader over-stepped the mark. (Cries of "No, no" from the Congress Party Benches.) Let me hope that he did it unconsciously. (Cries of "No, no" from the Congress Party Benches.) If he did it deliberately, then I have no further words to state. I have only used the very words that were used by the Leader of the Opposition. I have not used words which he has not used himself. They were all men of honour and acted like men of honour and there were Indians who acted with the greatest credit to their country and the Leader of the Opposition called them men who acted atrociously. He has doubted their bona fides; he has doubted their humanity; and I, as an Indian, will not listen to this in silence. Mr. Chairman, all I have got to say is that there has been more than enough justification for our believing that the Resolution was intended to be an insinuation—a veiled insinuation if you like—against men who acted nobly and honourably. I won't say that they acted like heroes because I do not like exaggerated terms but I will content myself by saying that they acted honourably and I for one will not go into the lobby to support a Resolution which is a disgrace to our own people.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative): Sir, I had no mind to intervene in this debate today because I thought that the question had been discussed sufficiently but for the speech which my Honourable friend, the Leader of the Independent Party, Sir Cowasji Jehangir, has made. It is that speech which compelled me to break my silence. And I thought that before recording my vote on this Resolution, if it comes to vote at all, I should have my say. I want, at the outset, to protest strongly against the manner in which my friend expressed his difference with my Honourable friend, Mr. Bhullabhai Desai, the Leader of the Opposition. His opposition to the views propounded by the Leader of the Opposition is not a surprise to me but the way and the vehemence with which he put forth his views was nothing but—to use his own language—simply atrocious.

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : That word was used by the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. M. S. Aney : But it was worst for you to have used it, knowing that it was a bad word. My Honourable friend singled out this expression from its entire context in the speech of the Leader of the Opposition and tried to show that the Leader of the Opposition described the work of the military, who undoubtedly did good work, as a piece of atrocious act. That I positively say he never meant and it was interpreted in a wrong way. It was a deliberate and mischievous interpretation that he put on it. With all the harmony that exists between various Parties, I never expected that he would go so much out of his way and try to characterise the whole expression of his views as 'atrocious'. I am sure in his sober moments he will certainly repent for having said what he did. I have no doubt about that in my mind. I have been working in this House for so many years and I know him. He probably never meant what in a moment of fit and excitement he unwittingly gave out.

Sir, I will try to take as detached a view as possible of all the facts that have been brought to our notice during the course of this debate on this unfortunate calamity that occurred at Quetta. I will not try to import into it any feeling or heat whatsoever. I would like to look at the question only from one point of view—whether a case for an inquiry has been made out or not. Whether a case has been made out and whether such a case, if made out, would amount to any insinuation against the military are two different matters. The whole question has been clouded here on account of the particular angle from which it has been looked at by this Party and by that Party. If the facts that have been brought before us show that there is a prima facie case for an inquiry into the matter, then I believe there should be no difficulty for the Government to accept this Resolution if we are prepared to make a frank and candid statement that there is no intention to cast the slightest insinuation against those who have taken part in these rescue operations and have acted so nobly and heroically in saving human life. With that clear assurance given to us, it is possible for us to take a detached view of the facts that have been placed before the House. I shall place only two facts for the consideration of the House. It is admitted that at some stage the rescue work was stopped. That fact is admitted by both the Parties. According to the red pamphlet, which is an official and more authentic document according to them, it was stopped on the 3rd of June.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : It was stopped on the 7th of June.

Mr. M. S. Aney : According to Government, it was stopped on the 7th of June. Now, it has been stated here in another pamphlet that the work was stopped either on the 3rd of June or on the 2nd of June. I shall read out to you an extract from the letter of the correspondent of the Times of India who was probably present on the spot and who gives his opinion after having seen things for himself. It is from the Times of India, dated the 20th June. He says :

"I need not enlarge the conditions under which the troops worked. They were too ghastly to bear description. (He is referring to the stink and so on.).....It was decided at mid-day (he is giving the description of 2nd of June) that rescue operations must cease."

Now, here are two versions. The person who was an eye-witness said that the decision was taken by the authorities that the rescue operations must cease on the 2nd of June. There might have been excavations going on up to the 7th of June for various purposes. It is not said that all work must stop. But here is a statement of an eye-witness to the effect that decision was taken to stop rescue operations on the mid-day of 2nd of June. There is another version here. The two versions are conflicting. The one version is given by the correspondent of the Times of India. He does not belong to the Congress or the Extremist party. In this letter you will find that the correspondent of the Times of India has given credit to the work that has been done by the troops. With all that he has said, I should like to associate myself and I will take off my hat to the soldiers, noble ladies and all others who have done their work most admirably. I associate myself with all the compliments that have been paid to the troops. At the same time, you will see, Sir, that here is a person who is not at all biased against the Government. On the other hand he is interested in upholding the honour of the troops as much as the Honourable Members of the Government are interested in upholding that. This correspondent makes a statement that during the mid-day of the 2nd June a decision was taken to stop rescue work. It is an important piece of evidence before the House. The House has to decide whether, in view of these two conflicting versions, it is not necessary to find out what is the exact position. I submit, Sir, that a prima facie case has been made out for a Committee to enquire into the truth about this matter because the question of stoppage of rescue work has got much to do with regard to the ultimate decision which we can take upon the general question whether there was any possibility of further saving any human life or not. It is only when we are able to find out exactly the hour at which rescue work was stopped, we will be able to come to a proper decision about the question whether further more human lives could have been saved or not. Prima facie, there are two versions given by witnesses whose veracity cannot be easily impeached. Even if nothing else has been proved excepting this one thing which we have got from the correspondent of the Times of India, I maintain that a prima facie case has been made out for an enquiry.

The next point is this. We were told that up to 2nd June persons were allowed to have free access to the City of Quetta. It is stated in this book also and Honourable Members of Government repeat that. If my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, has succeeded in proving demonstrably anything, it is that on his own personal knowledge, train-loads of people on hearing of the news of the great calamity that overtook

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

Quetta on the morning of 31st May, were going to that place and they were stopped at Sibi. That is a statement which has been made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, on the floor of the House. I am not prepared to think that he made that statement without knowing the meaning of what he was saying. He referred to the stoppage of people from going in trains to Quetta at Sibi and he also referred to some other stations beyond which the people were not allowed to go. I cannot say whether it was or was not a proper step for the authorities to stop the people from going in trains at those stations. The fact remains that the people who wanted to render help to their relations who might have been the victims of the calamity were not allowed to proceed to Quetta to render such help, sometime before 2nd of June. Immediately after they got the news of the calamity in Quetta, they went to afford relief to their relatives, but they were not allowed.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not accept the statement that anybody arrived at Quetta on June 1st.

Mr. M. S. Aney : I am only trying to show that here is a piece of information which is different from that of the Government.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : To the best of my belief, the line was damaged, and no trains could get through to Quetta on the 1st.

Mr. M. S. Aney : I do not vouch for the accuracy of this version. That only strengthens my plea that there are two different versions and two conflicting explanations which deserve to be considered very carefully by the Government and this House. In the absence of any further evidence coming forth is it possible for this House to come to a decision as to whether what the Honourable Member on the Government side says is the reality and what the non-official Member says is absurd? It is difficult for us to accept the statement of the one as against the statement of the other. I am sure my Honourable friend, the Home Member, is acting upon the information supplied to him by his officers at Quetta. He is not in a position to give first hand information based on his own personal knowledge. It is quite possible that the information supplied by the correspondent of the Times of India who was on the spot and by my Honourable friend, who was living in the vicinity of the tract where the calamity took place, is the correct one and that subsequent information given to Government by somebody else may not be quite correct. My point is this. I am not going to impeach the veracity of anybody. I am trying to put before the House the fact that there is at any rate a doubtful point on which two conflicting versions are there. The proper solution of these two important conflicting versions has got much to do to enable us to know whether all has been done to rescue the people there, whether the excavation and salvage operations were properly done and so on. If we know the real version we can decide with some degree of certainty whether all that was possible to be done was done and whether anything more that was possible was left undone. To make up our minds on that point, it is necessary for us to ascertain all these facts. I believe there has been sufficiently conflicting opinions on this point coming from quarters whose veracity it is not possible for us to question. Simply because one Party says, 'Yes' and the other party says, 'No', nobody is in a position to state which is the correct version. We do not know how far those people on whom the Government relied for accurate information gave such correct information. We, therefore, do not know whether what the correspondent of the Times of India says is the true version or what the Government say is the true version. If I have succeeded in proving the Government say is the true version. If I have succeeded in proving that on these two points which are of vital importance for the sake of knowing the exact nature of the rescue operations and when they were stopped, there is evidence of a conflicting nature before the House, then I think a prima facie case has been made out for an enquiry. We should know whether the particular remedy that was taken, whether the steps that were taken were sufficient to cope with a calamity of such magnitude. If I have made out these two points to the satisfaction of the House, then I think I am entitled to ask both Parties to forget their differences, forget all the possible insinuations which are alleged to contain in the language of the Resolution. I would ask the Government and the Independent Party to accept the candid explanation given before the House by those who have sponsored the Resolution and I would appeal to them to consent to an impartial enquiry such as that suggested in the Resolution. I think, having proved both the points, I am entitled to ask both the Parties to take a detached view of the situation, and I believe if they would do that, we will come to the conclusion that there is a prima facie case made out for asking the Government to institute an enquiry of the kind suggested. I would have appreciated the observations of my Honourable friend, Sir Cowasji Jehangir, and even of the Honourable the Foreign Secretary and of the Honourable the Home Member if they had suggested some suitable alterations to the Resolution to meet their objections. If my Honourable friend, Sir Cowasji Jehangir, had suggested some amendment to make the Resolution less offensive in his eyes, I would have gladly understood his position. If any such suggestion had been made, I think the Congress Party would have also considered it. On the other hand if the object of my Honourable friend, Sir Cowasji Jehangir, and his friends, is to see that the enquiry is stopped, then we take strong exception to the attitude of those who persist in such obstinacy against the Resolution. I think the Honourable the Home Member and his colleagues standing behind him would see that it is eminently desirable to have an enquiry in order to show to the public at large that all the steps taken by Government were adequate or inadequate to cope with the situation in Quetta. I concede that the Government had to do everything at a very short notice with troops numbering about 6,000. They had to do everything within three or four days with such small resources of men. I am prepared to say that they did everything in their power that was humanly possible for them to do and that they did everything that was necessary to be done. But we are not able to pronounce any opinion on the question whether it was not possible for the Commander in charge of the troops to allow outside help. It is only if we have a dispassionate enquiry of the kind suggested in the Resolution that we will be able to come to the right decision on all these points. If we look at this question not so much from the point of view of the possibility of any insinuation or any charge or observation being implied against those who had done their work nobly, if the inquiry is conceded, but from the point of view of finding out what should have been done then, then we will succeed in drawing proper lessons that may be useful to us to cope with similar calamities if, unfortunately, they should recur again anywhere. If the House should take the latter view, then I am sure there would be no difficulty for Honourable Members on this side of the House whether they belong to the Independent Party or no party or whether they belong to the official party or any other party to record their vote in favour of the motion for holding an enquiry into this matter. Sir, with these few observations, I support the motion before the House. (Applause.)

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I want to intervene in this debate not because I have practical experience of the earthquake in Quetta or I would not have been here to speak, but because I heard the whole story from persons who themselves had first hand experience. Five of my students were in Quetta at the time of the earthquake and they survived. Three brothers, who were there, told me when they came back to Aligarh that their grandmother, by some divine instinct, advised the whole family to sleep outside in the verandah and only one female servant was sleeping inside. The result was that the whole family was saved with the exception of this particular female servant who was sleeping inside. These students, who were there at the time of the actual catastrophe, who were there for several days subsequently, told me verbally about the splendid work which the military did in rescuing the people, and in providing every possible comfort. Of course I do not go by the reports of the newspapers because I know what value to attach to them and how far they can be relied upon. I myself have been a victim of these newspaper rumours and I have seen a number of articles published in various papers speculating the amount of salary which I should be drawing as Vice-Chancellor of the Aligarh University ; and not a single paper has ever published the fact that according to the statutes of the Aligarh University the Vice-Chancellor is not entitled to any salary, honorarium or allowance of any kind sumptuary or otherwise. Even when I have to do the work of a Professor it must be honorary. No newspaper ever pointed this fact although a large number of them had been quoting as an established fact the amount which I must be drawing as Vice-Chancellor of the University. Therefore I do not go by the reports of newspapers but I go by the evidence of persons who have actually been in the scene of action, who have gone and seen everything for themselves and whose opinions are not prejudiced. They are all students and some of them are schoolboys of ages 13 and 15. There is no reason why they should tell me anything which is not true. And they spoke very highly of the splendid work which the soldiers had done for them and for everybody else, and they all praised enormously the work which they had seen themselves.

Then, another difficulty has arisen now to which I should like to take this opportunity of drawing the attention of Government and it was also hinted by my Honourable friend, Haji Abdoola Haroon. The refugees who have been sent away are now living with their relatives and friends. They can accommodate them only for a short time but not for a long time, and the question naturally before them is how to rescue their property in minimum time. This is one of the most important matters for investigation, how the property belonging to these people may be handed over to them with the minimum amount of delay.

Now, coming to the case of these Aligarh students who came to Aligarh they had not a single penny to pay their arrears nor they could pay their college dues. We have this relief to them. We admitted them free ; but I wonder whether other refugees who had gone to their relatives or friends would be given the same relief as was given to our Aligarh boys.

Now, as regards entry into Quetta, as soon as we heard that there was this catastrophe a large number of Aligarh students volunteered to go and help in the salvage work. I telegraphed immediately that a party of Aligarh students were willing to offer their services for this work, but I was told that the whole thing was under the control of the military and it was not necessary to have the help of these students for whom there was neither food nor accommodation.

Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya (Benares and Gorakhpur Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : When was this ?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I do not exactly remember, but it was immediately after the report was published. Sir, I got a wire from the Officer in charge whose name I do not remember, as I have not got the papers with me here, to the effect that they will not be useful. The same reply was given to other volunteers and it is verified by the report published in this blue book. I will not read the details but I will draw the attention of Honourable Members to page 49 of this book which is published by the Bureau of Public Information. The Hindustan Times reports a statement made to them :

“ From my experience of the situation in Quetta, I am convinced that the authorities acted wisely in banning entry of outsiders into Quetta, as otherwise rations would have been exhausted, causing a serious situation.”

The Free Press also says :

“ With all the wealth of Quetta lying buried in the debris, we can appreciate the need of circumspection in allowing the entry of outsiders into the ruined city.”

The Forward also says :

“ The Government may have good reasons to take some steps to regulate the entry of outsiders into the devastated area. Probability of the failure of water and food supply as well as of infection are strong reasons why any and every person should not be allowed entrance into Quetta.”

I do not lay stress on what is published here. Our students were rather anxious to go to Quetta and help the authorities there, but the authorities for reasons which I can well appreciate and understand did not like that outsiders should interfere in the work which they planned out in a particular manner. Then they advertised for medical help. We also offered 40 beds, if there be any need, but the wounded persons were all accommodated in the hospitals of neighbouring Provinces and none of them came as far as the United Provinces and, therefore, our offer was not availed of. From the experience of the persons who were there actually in the field I came to the conclusion that the Military had the situation well in hand. Now coming to the question of—stopping salvage work after the third day, I am not a medical man and I am no authority to say whether salvage work ought to have been stopped on the fourth day or not. It is for the medical people to determine ; but as a practical man I can only say this, that after three days the chances of finding alive a wounded person were rather remote, and it is exceedingly difficult to locate and search for men still alive in such a wide field of devastation.

In conclusion, I emphasise once more the point that a committee may be appointed,—to find out a speedy method of restoring the property to their lawful owners, and help to remove the financial miseries of survivors.

Mr. Ghansham Singh Gupta (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I only want to make one point and I do not think I shall take more than five minutes. It is said that the conditions in Bihar and the conditions in Quetta were different. That is admitted. My point is that on the first two days people were rescued alive. Therefore, it is clear that people were living in the first two days and that they did not die, because the conditions of Quetta and the conditions of Bihar were different. There were living persons. Now if there were living persons after two days or within two days and they were rescued, then it cannot be said that they were not living after two days. If persons were living after the earthquake then the only medical point of view that there can be was that they would have died of suffocation. If they died of suffocation they must die within a few hours and not within a few days. So, so far as the question of their being alive is concerned, the difference between Quetta and Bihar does not matter. Then if there were living persons inside the debris after two days, it is not a question for medical men to say whether a man who has not died at the first shock and who has not received any injury can or cannot remain alive for five or six days. It is ordinary common sense, I think : it is not a question for the medical man to say that a man who has not died of suffocation and who is inside the debris can or cannot remain alive, if he has remained alive for more than two days, after that time for three or four or five days. This is the point which I cannot understand and this is the point which I want to make out.

Sir Muhammad Yakub : Mr. Chairman, the esteemed and respected Leader of the Opposition has, this afternoon, delivered another very fluent and eloquent speech, which has won for him the status of a successful Leader of the Opposition Party.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

No doubt, Sir, the speeches of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition are couched in very flowery and fluent language : they attract attention all round and the same was the case this afternoon. But if we apply the test of cold logic to the substance of his speech, we find after sifting and removing the flowery phrases, that very little substance can be found in it. This afternoon he was trying to show that there was a prima facie case for instituting an inquiry into the after-effects of the disastrous earthquake at Quetta. We have to see whether he has succeeded, in the smallest degree, in establishing his proposition. Mr. President, the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition spent about 15 minutes in saying that the Resolution did not mean any attack on those who saved the lives of the people, those who worked hard for days and nights in performing their duty ; and then he said that if a man performs his duty he does not deserve any commendation or any approbation. I would ask Honourable Members of the Opposition themselves whether they would accept this argument or whether they will put any value on it. If this were true, then no processions of Congress leaders should be taken out, no addresses, in bombastic language, should be presented to the leaders of the community when they go from town to town, because they only perform their duty—they are patriots and they are doing nothing more than performing their duty. So, if the performance of duty does not demand any approbation from the public, then, of course, it is for the opposition to judge what course they would in future take with their leaders : and it is all the more surprising when such an argument comes from an astute lawyer like the Leader of the Opposition.

His other argument was that when a disaster, or a calamity of this nature, happens, naturally there must be an inquiry. Unfortunately, only a year before the Quetta earthquake, we had another disastrous earthquake in Bihar. Of course in intensity that earthquake was not so severe as the one in Quetta, but still many hundreds of lives were lost in that earthquake and property worth lakhs and lakhs of rupees was involved. Was there any inquiry demanded about that earthquake ? Did the Members of the Opposition, or anybody in the country, say that as a calamity has fallen upon the country there must be an inquiry ? On the other hand, we find that the Bihar Earthquake Fund was opened by the worthy Congress president and in the country there were rumours, there were suspicions raised about the manner in which that subscription was spent. We saw in the papers also that money which was collected for the purposes of the earthquake in Bihar was spent over the last Assembly elections. (Laughter.) When this was the state in the country, did the Congress institute an inquiry to find out whether the money was properly spent or not ? Then, where is the force in saying that when there is a calamity of this magnitude an inquiry must be instituted ? Arguments like these are not worthy of a great lawyer like the Leader of the Opposition.

The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition said that there was some possibility, even after three days, if the work of rescue had been continued on a gigantic scale, as it was done for the first two days, some chance of some living person being discovered. But, do we not know under what difficulties this work of rescue was continued even for two days ? The heroic Indian soldiers, at the risk of their lives, put on masks on their noses and faces and they were performing this voluntary duty. Now, would it be wise, would it be patriotic even to say that the lives of these heroic men or a large number of them, should be endangered only on the assumption that it was possible that some people might be living or may be found in the debris ? I really am surprised. Most of these soldiers who were working under these hard conditions—some of them, at least, had their own relatives involved in the calamity, their houses had fallen, they were suffering under a great calamity and they were still working, with masks on their faces, and the stink was so severe that nobody could stand there. The probability was that if they had gone there after three days in such large numbers, they would themselves have got the poison and a large number of these heroic Indians would have died. Is it proper to say that they should endanger their lives merely because the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition thinks that probably a rat or dog living might be found in the debris ? Such is the force of the arguments which were used by him.

Again we know that this earthquake calamity fell three or four minutes after three o'clock, early in the morning ; and it is proved, and has not been denied, that within half an hour a number of soldiers were present in the city and were doing rescue work. Some of them reached there at 5, some at 5/30 and some at 6 A.M. But by that time all the available soldiers in Quetta were performing rescue work. They did that work labouring under so many difficulties. They had to face the difficulty of water, there were incessant earthquake shocks, almost every day, for a few days, but in spite of all these difficulties, these people were there, for over two days in large numbers doing most magnificent work. Has anybody on the side of the Opposition even suggested what other methods could have been adopted, what other more expeditious devices could have been found, to do relief work in a more efficient and expeditious manner than what was done there? Sir, I was not at Quetta, but I had met some of the earthquake victims. I have also read a lot about the happenings at Quetta in the newspapers, not only in Anglo-Indian papers but also in the Nationalist papers, and I find that most of them have not levelled the charge that any life was lost in Quetta due to the negligence of the soldiers working there. Sir, I shall not weary the House by recounting how the work was performed there. That has been narrated by many of the speakers who preceded me. I propose to deal only with two points which were raised by my friend, Mr. Aney. My friend, Mr. Aney, like a clever lawyer, knew he had a very weak case to argue, because he himself said, at the outset, that he did not want to take part in this debate, but he made his speech only because he wanted to defend the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition, and did not want to oppose the Resolution seriously. Like a clever lawyer as he is, he tried to put at least two points and said there was room for an inquiry. His first point was that he had read in some statement in an Anglo-Indian paper that a decision was taken that that rescue work should be stopped at noon on the 2nd June. Now, if my friend were to advance such an argument in a Court of law, I ask him to say whether he would not be asked to show proof as to whether this decision was acted upon or not. Taking the statement at its face value, I admit it is correct,—a decision was taken that at noon on the second day rescue work should be stopped, but has my friend got any material to produce that this decision was acted upon and the work was actually stopped at the time stated by the correspondent in the press? He tried his level best to coin some argument, and the only argument he could produce was this, that a decision was taken. I submit, Sir, that this argument is not sufficient to justify the instituting of an inquiry.

Then, my friend's second argument was that the Honourable Mr. Lalchand Navalrai said that a number of people were stopped at a certain station and they were not allowed to proceed to Quetta on the second day. I submit that statement of my friend may be quite correct, for, Sir, have we not examined the difficulties which were confronting the authorities at Quetta? Are we not aware of the fact that each and every house in the Indian quarters was demolished? Do we not know that there was scarcity of water? Do we not know that there was great scarcity of food and provisions for the wounded and injured persons who were lying there? Is there any force in the argument that because my friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, made his statement therefore, we should institute an inquiry? These were the only two primâ facie facts which my friend, Mr. Aney, through his ingenuity, was able to advance before the House.

Now, Sir, it was asked—why do you shirk an inquiry? Why are you afraid of an audit? To this, I submit that it is not a question of your accounts being correct. We all know that the heaviest calamity has fallen on that small spot of the country. We also know that property and goods valued at lakhs and lakhs are lying buried under the debris. Now, the process of removing the debris and recovering the property is proceeding apace. Very valuable property is buried under the debris, and if at this moment, when this important work is going on, we allow a foreign committee to sit in judgment of their work and if we allow witnesses to go to Quetta it is quite clear that the influx of the people and the work of this Committee would greatly interfere with the more urgent and more important work of removing the debris and recovering the property of the people, and, therefore, I submit, that the present time is most inopportune, it is the worst time to institute an inquiry, suggested in the Resolution.

Then, again, if we accept this Resolution, the question will arise as to who should be the members of the Committee. Only 6 P.M. the other day a Committee was appointed by the Government in the Punjab. There was a section of the press which said that they had no confidence in the members, that those members were not proper representatives, that they would not accept their Report. The same case would happen here. If certain non-official members were appointed, I am sure that more than half the press in the country would raise the cry that they were Government men, that the country had no faith in them only because they were nominated by the Government. Then it would also be said: "Oh, Government men are in a majority and others are in a minority". Then there would certainly be a Note of dissent and probably a minority Report also with it. Now, if there were two Reports, what would be the criterion to judge as to which Report should be accepted, and to which Report effect should be given. So I submit, Sir, that it has been established beyond doubt that there is no case for an inquiry on this subject. ("Hear, hear" from Official Benches.) On the other hand, the Commanding Officer and other officers and men under him, both Indians as well as Europeans, who performed the heroic and magnificent work of rescue operations, deserve the approbation and congratulations at the hands of this House. (Official Cheers.) Sir, if we do not value or appreciate the work of our own countrymen, then all our cry for Indianization of the army, and things like that, is only a cry in the wilderness. (Cries of "Oh, Oh" from the Congress Party Benches.) With these words, Sir, I oppose the Resolution.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan (Member for Commerce and Railways): Sir, I intervene for a very few minutes at this stage in the debate. Although over 3½ months have passed since the terrible morning of the 31st May, I have no hesitation in confessing that I still approach the subject of Quetta with a great deal of awe. Sir, it is not my purpose this afternoon to level charges or to condemn the making of charges. A good deal of that has already been done. But there are one or two matters with regard to which I desire to place certain factors before the House.

One matter to which I wish to draw the attention of the House is why Government found it imperative to refuse permission to relief parties to proceed to Quetta after the second or third day of the disaster. It is easy after any kind of calamity, sitting in comfortable conditions and circumstances, to pass armchair judgments upon what should have been done and what should not have been done. There has been no event of any importance in the world with regard to which critics subsequently looking back could not have pointed out factors which would have been far better managed by them than were managed by people who had actual charge of the situation. The fallacy underlying that kind of attitude of mind is that it forgets the actual conditions under which the situation had to be handled. And, if for one brief moment we shall try to revive in our minds the conditions under which rescue work had to start in Quetta and had to continue there, I think we would be far less critical and far more admiring of the work that was done and accomplished under the most trying conditions. I am aware that a mood of praise and admiration has been rendered from all sections of the House to those who were employed in this kind of work. Nevertheless, I submit that the conditions under which that work started and had to be continued have not been sufficiently kept in mind. Everybody here is aware that this great calamity overtook the sleeping town of Quetta a few minutes after three o'clock on the morning of the 31st May. Within twenty five minutes of the calamity a certain section of the troops had already been turned out and were on their way to the devastated city to render such assistance as they could. And it must not be imagined that while the town was in that condition the troops that had to render assistance were under normal conditions. They had themselves passed through this nerve shaking experience. I am lost in admiration of men who, within twenty five minutes of an experience of that kind, an experience which would shake the strongest nerves for weeks, were ready to turn out and to go and do their duty out of a sense of common humanity and out of a sense of common brotherhood. (Cheers.) Then within two hours of it, the entire military force available at Quetta had turned out and was engaged in rescue work. That does not reveal an attitude either on the part of General Karslake, who most fortunately was in command of Quetta on the 31st May, or on the part of his troops in Quetta, to neglect any chance that offered itself of rendering such aid as was possible to the injured and the wounded and to rescue those who were buried under the debris. This rescue work continued under most trying conditions. Everything had been upset. Although the railway track continued to be serviceable, one of the culverts had been damaged and had to be repaired. There was a grave danger of any of the eighteen tunnels, which the railway line between Sibi and Quetta has to pass collapsing at any moment as tremors and even severe shocks continued for days. Some of the *karez*s from which drinking water is obtained in Quetta had already collapsed. There was serious danger of the water supply being upset altogether. These were only some of the difficulties with which the troops had to contend. On the other hand, in that isolated part of the country, there was grave danger of marauders, hearing of the disaster, making a combined attack upon the city to loot and plunder. Order had to be kept, some sort of an organisation had to be set up among the survivors who were too terrified to shift for themselves. All food supplies in the City had been destroyed and the army had to throw open their own provisions for the maintenance of the survivors. These were the conditions under which the work started and had to be continued. We must not imagine that it was a sort of stage show or an army manoeuvre, after preparation and notice of what had happened and what was about to happen. In the conditions prevailing at Quetta General Karslake was the best judge of how much material he could utilise for rescue work, and he being of the opinion that the forces at his disposal were as much as he could usefully employ for that work, permission to relief parties to proceed to Quetta would only have added to the confusion and hindered the rescue work. That is one factor which I wanted to stress.

I think during the debate we have been too apt to regard the relief work at Quetta as a sort of demonstration under ideal conditions as the result of which we had to award praise or blame. It was heroic work carried out under most terrifying conditions. The question is not what should have been possible under ideal conditions. The question is what was humanly possible under the conditions that prevailed and continued to prevail at Quetta, and the question is whether what was humanly possible under those conditions has or has not been done. The Honourable the Home Member has informed the House that His Excellency the Viceroy and his Government were in hourly touch with conditions at Quetta, and although what we did or what we left undone is no measure or standard for Honourable Members opposite, all that we can on this side assert is that with the fullest sense of responsibility that involved upon Government under the shadow of this terrible calamity Government were at all hours most watchful that nothing should be omitted that was possible, which would help either the injured or those that had survived and had to be looked after. It is quite possible—and I say it in no spirit of cynicism—that any other Government, composed of another set of human beings, might have done better, or even have done very much better. But the Government can only be judged from the standard which is applicable in the sense whether they did do what was humanly possible for them to do. But, Sir, I did not stand up merely to reinforce the point of view of Government. It can be said, it has been said: "You are always very self-complacent, you are always quite self-satisfied, you think that all that was possible was done by you, but we are not satisfied. You did all that was possible for you to do, but in any event it was possible for other people to have done very much better and you do not come up to that standard." In such a calamity it would be difficult to get first hand evidence. But fortunately, first hand evidence of a character to which I venture to think no objection could be taken on the opposite side is available, and at a very early stage I did satisfy myself, as an individual, Member of Government or no Member of Government—that whatever was humanly possible had been actually done on the spot by the people who were in charge of the situation, and that, on the basis of evidence to which I shall refer in a moment, and to which, as I have said, I venture to think Honourable Members opposite could take no objection. That, Sir, is the evidence of a gentleman who is a lawyer and a municipal commissioner at Multan, who, shortly after learning the details of this calamity at Quetta, organised a fairly big relief party and managed to get to Quetta before control was established and whose help was welcomed and utilised to the fullest degree during the week or so that he and his helpers continued to be at Quetta. That gentleman is Chaudhuri Sham Lal. After his return from Quetta, he issued a statement to the press to which wide publicity was given at the time. He then came up to Simla and among various people, he also did me the honour of paying me a call.

[Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan.]

He reminded me that we had been associated together in Lahore in a certain connection and I had a long conversation with him over the details of the work that had been going on at Quetta. That, Sir, was pure non-official and unbiassed evidence. In the meantime, certain rumours had been started in the press, and although as I have said I was fully satisfied from official accounts that whatever was possible was being done, yet, having noticed some of these rumours to which currency had been given in the press, I pointedly questioned Chaudhuri Sham Lal with regard to these matters and I was assured by him in a heart to heart conversation, confined entirely to us, when nobody else was present, that none of the allegations that were being made in the press were justified in the slightest degree except one and that I am bound to state. In one instance there was a complaint against an Indian soldier that he had interfered with a trunk which contained some property and he was promptly punished. Well, now, this is the party that went to Quetta and this is the statement that Chaudhuri Sham Lal made in the press. He says :

"Soon after the harrowing details of the havoc wrought by the earthquake in Baluchistan were received in Multan, I immediately organised a large relief party and proceeded to Quetta. It included volunteers from the local D. A. V. High School staff, Arya Samaj, College section, Sewa Samiti and Krishna Dal, prominent among whom were Lala Sukhu Ram, Doctor Vishnu Dutt, Bhagat Parmanand, Seth Rup Narain, Mr. Nand Lal and Seth Jindu Ram. We had taken a fair stock of provisions and medicines with us and further increased our supplies from Chaman and Pashin."

The composition of this relief party and the names of its leaders are given here and I am perfectly certain that they would give entire satisfaction to Honourable Members opposite at least from this point of view that if any of these gentlemen during the week or so that they were in Quetta noticed any omissions on the part of the military or on the part of such civil authorities as could hastily be set up after almost the entire civil establishment had been wiped out, they would certainly not have failed to give expression to their dissatisfaction with the manner in which the rescue work was going on. In the rest of the statement which it would take too long to read out, Mr. Sham Lal has nothing but praise for everybody, troops, British as well as Indian, ladies, British as well as Indian and such volunteers as were available, with regard to the spirit of co-operation and humanity which all of them displayed in dealing with a very difficult situation. Now, Sir, that is the kind of evidence which would bring conviction to the minds of every one and my own conviction over this matter which I would respectfully place before the House is based not only upon knowledge of all the details which went to the organisation of the official rescue work but also upon assurances received from men like Chaudhuri Sham Lal with whom, as I have said, I had a long conversation and who satisfied me, as he had already stated in his statement to the press, to which I have referred, that there was nothing done during their presence in Quetta to which any reasonable objection could be taken. One matter I will make particular reference to with regard to what Chaudhuri Sham Lal told me. He has made a reference to that in his statement to the press also. He and his volunteers helped in the rescue work inside the town and he gave me a solemn assurance, because I was naturally anxious to satisfy myself on this point, that the rescue work was continued so long as there was any reasonable hope of rescuing human life. Sir, I am entirely at one with Honourable Members on the other side regarding the sanctity of human life and the necessity of directing efforts towards saving every single human life that it was possible to save. I questioned Chaudhuri Sham Lal rather closely on this point and he told me that he and his men worked along with the military on the rescue work in the City and that the work was not stopped till the stench became so overpowering that human beings could not bear it. As I have said, Sir, I only wanted to put these facts before the House before it comes to a decision on the motion under discussion.

One point has been raised by the Honourable Member from Karachi, and it has also been emphasized by my Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, that with regard to the salvage of property and the distribution of property, some measures ought to be taken in which outside opinion might be associated with the work that is being carried on. With regard to that, I have been authorised by the Honourable the Home Member to make this statement : he would have made it himself but for the fact that he has already spoken in this debate—that while not prepared to agree to any inquiry regarding the past, Government are quite ready to agree to the appointment of an advisory or consultative committee to assist the authorities with regard to (a) the salvage of property and (b) the questions connected with the resettlement of the civil population. Government are further prepared to extend facilities to parties of Members of this Honourable House who may care to visit Quetta and see the condition of things for themselves. Sir, with these words, I oppose the motion.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am aware of the lateness of the hour at which I have stood up. The importance of the subject and the remarks that had been made are my apology for intervening at this stage. Sir, I regret that a gentleman of the position of Sir Cowasji Jehangir should have made the speech that he made today, which was utterly unworthy of him. I will not say more. It was just like the pleading of a man who has no case and seeks shelter in rank abuse against his adversary. Sir the Honourable the Home Member found a substitute for reason and argument in vehemence of language. He told us that he had never known such a vile exploitation of a calamity for political purposes. I have never heard a more audacious statement than that. I should like to put a few questions to the Honourable the Home Member as to when, according to him, this process of exploitation began. Even he, I hope, will have the generosity to concede that earthquakes are not controlled by the Congress Party. A Government like this may control earthquakes as King Canute once pretended to control the waves but a popular party can never put forth any such claim. Then, Sir, does he suggest that the Congress organizations were responsible for the rumours and the reports that took root and that spread from one end of the country to the other from the very day the earthquake occurred ? Does he hold us responsible for what was said from one end of the country to the other ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : If he says that, then I have no more to argue with him ; and, if he thinks that the Congress organization set afloat a number of rumours and reports immediately after the occurrence of the earthquake with a view to preparing the ground for this Resolu-

[Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant.]

Member was not personally present on the spot. He cannot personally vouch for the correctness of the statements he has made.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, I can.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : After, all, he has collected information from others. All that the Honourable the Home Member could say is that he believes that his information is correct. He cannot assert that he has personal knowledge and that he has himself perceived that these facts are correct. And that makes all the difference in the world. People can arrive at two different conclusions on the basis of the same data and why should not the Honourable the Home Member, when he feels the necessity of refuting the statements of facts that have been made here, give a chance to an independent and impartial tribunal to adjudge between the two versions so that it may give its own impartial findings on them? They are holding the authority and the power that they happen to, today and it is easy for him to say "we will not have an inquiry" but will that satisfy the public mind? Will all the doubts and the suspicions that are entertained be removed and allayed on that account? Nothing of the kind. On the other hand, it will have the reverse effect. So, it is worth his while even at this late stage to reconsider the position and to agree to an inquiry. Sir, it is easy to say that those responsible for this Resolution are actuated by malice just as it would be easy for others to retort that those who debarred public men from going to Quetta at the hour of need of Quetta were actuated by malice. It was because the Government had taken lesson from the firm hold that the public had gained during the time of the Bihar earthquake by disinterested service of the people that they denied them the opportunity of serving their brethren at Quetta. Sir, it is easy to attribute motives; it is easy to befog and sidetrack issues; it is easy to make noise and smoke. But that does not help anybody one way or the other. We were told that it was not possible to save life after three days. I heard, while these papers were being read, that the operations were stopped during the night even on the very first day! They were conducted in the day time and were suspended in the night! I was surprised to hear this. I wonder if people in Quetta do not die in the night under debris, otherwise I see no reason why these rescue operations should have been suspended in the night. That, by itself, is a clear omission which shows that there was carelessness, recklessness and—I will not use a stronger expression—callous disregard for that sanctity which human life demands and deserves. Sir, much could be said but it is a late hour and I would not like to take more time. I hope the Resolution will be adopted and accepted by the House.

Several Honourable Members : The question may now be put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Does the Mover of the Resolution want to reply?

Mr. P. S. Kumaraswami Raju : No, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that a Committee consisting of officials and non-officials may be forthwith appointed to investigate and report whether the situation arising out of the recent earthquake in British Baluchistan and particularly in the town of Quetta was properly handled, particularly as regards the search for and rescue of the living, wounded and buried; the salvage of property and the transference of the wounded and injured outside the affected area."

GRIEVANCES OF THE INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYEES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

526. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya : (a) Is it a fact that the Honourable Member-in-charge, Department of Industries and Labour, stated in the Council of State on the 25th February, 1935, that the Works Committees of the Government of India Presses are ordinary departmental channels through which representations can be made to the authorities?

(b) Is it a fact that the Honourable Member stated on the 25th February, 1935, in the Council of State that any grievances represented through the ordinary departmental channels would receive the most sympathetic consideration?

(c) Is it a fact that the Works Committee in the Government of India Press, Calcutta, represented the following grievances of the industrial hands to the Honourable Member through the Controller of Printing and Stationery and the Manager on the 18th December, 1934 :

- (i) that the concession of 15 minutes late attendance after normal working hours which the said press employees used to enjoy for a long time in the past, has been discontinued;
- (ii) that payment for meal hour is not allowed to the press-employees whenever they are requisitioned for morning overtime work; and

(c) No such representation has been received.

(d) This apparently relates to a matter of nine years ago and I am unable to trace the receipt of any such representation.

(e) Does not arise.

GRIEVANCES OF THE INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYEES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

527. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya : (a) Is it a fact that the Honourable Member-in-charge, Department of Industries and Labour, stated that any grievance properly represented through the ordinary departmental channels would receive the most sympathetic consideration?

(b) Is it a fact that the Industrial employees of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, submitted memorials in November, 1933, to the Controller of Printing and Stationery through the Manager, Government of India Press, Calcutta, praying for granting of medical leave from the date of appointment as before?

(c) Is it a fact that the industrial employees of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, further submitted memorials to the Honourable Member through the Controller and Manager in August, 1934, praying for granting of medical leave from the date of appointment as before?

(d) Is it a fact that the several binders of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, submitted a petition for making them permanent on the 20th July, 1930, and which was returned by the then Manager with a note which said amongst other things that "I am certain that those who can claim a fair amount of service will have their posts converted to permanent posts before very long"?

(e) Is it a fact that the temporary binders in the Calcutta Press claiming services from 12 to 22 years submitted memorials to the Honourable Member through proper channel in September, 1934, with a prayer to include them in the permanent staff so that they may enjoy the privileges of Government service?

(f) If the answers to parts (a) to (e) be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member-in-charge, be pleased to state whether the grievances as in parts (b) to (e) have been redressed and how? If not, why not?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) to (e). Yes.

(f) The question refers to two prayers of which one, namely that relating to medical leave, has been granted. The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Finance Department Resolution, dated the 8th August, 1935, which was published in Part I of the Gazette of India, dated the 10th August, 1935. The other prayer is under consideration. The latter part of the question does not, therefore, arise.

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes, as far as practicable.

(b) I understand that the principle is not being followed completely in the Calcutta Press as some difficulties have been experienced in giving effect to it. The Controller of Printing and Stationery is enquiring into the matter.

(c) I regret that I cannot furnish the information required by the Honourable Member as its collection would involve an amount of time and trouble disproportionate to the result.

PROTECTION OF INDIANS IN ABYSSINIA.

531. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal : (a) Will Government please state what steps, if any, they have taken to protect the Indian settlers in Abyssinia, in the event of war breaking out between that country and Italy ?

(b) How and by whom was India represented at the League of Nations when the dispute between Italy and Abyssinia was brought forward before that body ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given on the 3rd September, 1935, to a short notice question on the same subject by Mr. Satyamurti.

(b) The only authority of the League which has hitherto handled the dispute is the Council of which India is not a member.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is the Honourable Member aware that the Assembly has met and has considered this question ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : No, Sir.

CANCELLATION OF THE PASSPORT OF MR. MASANI OF BOMBAY.

532. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal : Is it a fact that the passport of Mr. Masani was impounded as a result of reports submitted by the Government of India ? If so, will Government please lay a copy of the report on the table ? What is the basis of the report ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : With your permission, Sir, I will answer questions Nos. 532, 547, 556 and 632 together. I would refer the Honourable Members concerned to the replies given by me on the 12th September, 1935, to Professor Ranga's question No. 315 and the supplementary questions on this subject. I am unable, on grounds of public interest, to lay any of the correspondence on the table of the House.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Was this Government consulted, before the Secretary of State granted a passport to Mr. Masani to go to certain countries in Europe ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : And what was the information which this Government gave on that consultation ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am not prepared to reveal that.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Did this Government take at any time the position that Mr. Masani's holding certain opinions on reform of society disentitled him to travel to certain countries ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Is the Honourable Member aware that the Secretary of State said in the House of Commons that Mr. Masani had advocated violence ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes : I understand the Secretary of State said that he seemed to recollect something of that sort.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Did the Government of India inform the Secretary of State that what he was saying was false and did they see to it that an Indian subject was not libelled like that ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : There is another question on the paper about this.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that Mr. Masani is one of the General Secretaries of the All-India Congress Socialist Party, which is wedded to non-violence ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am aware that he is one of the Secretaries of the All-India Congress Socialist Party.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : The question referred to by the Honourable the Home Member may never come up this Session : will not the Honourable Member reply at once ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has referred to some question which comes later ; is that likely to be reached this Session ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say : I should think it was doubtful.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is the Honourable Member aware that the Congress Socialist Party is a part of the Indian National Congress and is also wedded to non-violence like the Congress itself ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I understand that the Congress Socialist Party is a part, but not a very concordant part of the Congress.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is he aware of the fact that its main creed is non-violence ?

(No answer.)

533. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal : (a) Is it a fact that the export of oil and oil cakes from India to Great Britain have fallen during the last two years ?

(b) Is it also a fact that Great Britain proposes to raise the duty on India's oil and oil cakes ?

(c) What steps, if any, have Government taken to prevent Great Britain from taking that step ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) No.

(b) Government have no reason to believe that this is so.

(c) Does not arise.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Did Government make any inquiries after receipt of this question with regard to clause (b) ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Why did not Government make any inquiry ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Because, if anything was in contemplation of that description, I have no doubt that Government would be informed of it in due course.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is it the Government of India's position that the Government in Great Britain will not levy any such duty, without consulting the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That is not the Government's position.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Then, how do the Government of India expect to be consulted ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : As there is a good deal of communication going on all the time, I did not say they would be consulted, but that they would get information.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Officially, or through the newspapers ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Officially.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will the Government of India be given an opportunity to state their case before Great Britain makes up its mind and imposes a duty ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That I cannot say ; but, before a final decision is taken, I have no doubt Government will have an opportunity of putting their views for His Majesty's Government to consider.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to part (a), may I know what the latest figures are ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The latest figures are Rs. 126.9 lakhs for 1934-35.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : How does it compare with the previous years' figures ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : It compares with Rs. 95.8 lakhs for 1932-33 and Rs. 106.6 lakhs for 1933-34.

FACILITIES FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE CHILDREN OF THE INDIAN AND EUROPEAN STAFF OF THE INDIAN RAILWAYS.

534. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal : (a) Will Government please state the facilities they give for the education of the children of the (1) Indian, and (2) European staff of the Indian railways, respectively ?

(b) Will Government please state the reasons why they give greater facilities to the children of the European staff ?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of helping the children of the Indian staff up to the High School Standard which is the minimum educational qualification for engagement in the service ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The information is contained in the " Rules governing the grant of assistance from railway funds to employees of State-managed Railways towards the education of their children", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

(b) The present rules are the same for Indian and European staff.

(c) This is one of the questions for discussion at the next meeting of the Central Advisory Council for Railways.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is the Honourable Member aware that, at the last Delhi Session, I gave notice of a question inquiring as to what steps the Eastern Bengal Railway administration was going to take for giving facilities for the education of the children of its Indian employees ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The facilities are contained in the rules to which I have already invited the attention of the Honourable Member.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Does the Honourable Member remember that at the last Session the Honourable Member told me that nothing so far had been done for giving such facilities to the children of its Indian employees, while much had been done for the Anglo-Indians and Europeans ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not remember to have said anything of the kind.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Is there any arrangement for training in vernacular in places where their mother tongue is not the language ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I suggest my Honourable friend might read the detailed rules and then ask me questions on that.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is it not a fact that the Eastern Bengal Railway Administration is paying a certain amount by way of allowances to the European and Anglo-Indian employees in proportion to their pay and to the number of children, whereas nothing has been done for Indians ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The first is correct, but not the second. Indian employees are also entitled to certain assistance under the rules governing the grant of assistance.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is it not a fact that the allowance referred to by the Honourable Member is disproportionately small compared with that given to the Anglo-Indian and European employees ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The rules contain all the information that there is available in the matter, and I would ask my Honourable friend to study the rules before asking questions.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Where are the rules to be got from ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : In the Library of the House.

PAYMENT OF INTEREST ON SECURITY AMOUNT DEDUCTED FROM THE PAY OF THE RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

535. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal : (a) Will Government please state if they propose to pay interest, on the security amount deducted from the pay of the railway employees since February, 1931, at the Government rate ? If so, when ? If not, why not ?

(b) Do Government intend to refund the securities of those members of the railway staff whose provident fund account exceeds the amount of security asked for ? If so, when ? If not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Government decided in February, 1934, that interest should not be paid in future from railway funds on security deposits in cash. If a person depositing cash security wishes that his deposits should earn interest, such deposits can be made in the form of Government securities or the amounts deposited in post office savings banks and hypothecated to Government.

(b) No. There is no connection between the two.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Sir, Seth Govind Das has authorised me in writing to ask his questions on his behalf : No. 536.

STATE PRISONERS IN DIFFERENT PROVINCES.

536. *Mr. Sri Prakasa (on behalf of Seth Govind Das) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of State Prisoners in the different provinces of this country ?

(g) Do their personal allowances vary according to the provinces of detention ?

(h) If so, how is the difference in allowances in the different provinces based ?

(i) What is the provision made for their recreation ?

(j) Will Government state whether these provisions vary in the different jails of various provinces ? If so, what are the reasons ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a), (b) and (f). I would refer the Honourable Member to the statement laid on the table on the 14th August, 1934, in reply to question No. 555. I now lay on the table a further statement bringing the information given there up to date.

(c) and (d). As regards the expenditure incurred on State Prisoners I would refer the Honourable Member to part (b) of the reply given by me on the 8th March, 1935, to question No. 738 on this subject.

(e), (g) and (h). In accordance with the requirements of the Regulation, suitable provision is made for the State Prisoner according to his rank in life, and to his own needs and those of his family. The allowances are fixed after careful consideration of all the facts of each case. The personal allowances vary according to the requirements of each State Prisoner and to local conditions.

(i) and (j). Games and implements for recreation are provided under the rules on consideration of the requirements and local circumstances of each case, and such expenditure as is reasonable is sanctioned.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : How is the Honourable Member able to find out and decide the rank of a prisoner and the needs of his family ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : By making inquiries.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : What is the source of the inquiries ? To whom are those inquiries directed ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : To the Local Governments concerned, and the officer in whose charge the prisoner is, and, if necessary, from the prisoner himself.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : From the members of the family of the prisoner also ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is the premium on the life policies held by the prisoners paid by the Government ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : In one or two exceptional cases those premia were paid, I believe, but not as a rule.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : May I know why special consideration was shown in the case of one or two prisoners and not in the case of all prisoners who hold life insurance policies ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I don't see that Government are under any obligation to pay premia on life policies.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Then, why does it pay in the case of one or two prisoners ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I said that, in the case of one or two prisoners, premia were paid, but not as a general rule.

Sardar Sant Singh : May I know, Sir, whether the reply given to part (a) of question No. 536 giving the number of State Prisoners in the different provinces of this country includes the ex-Maharaja of Nabha also ? Does this number include the ex-Maharaja of Nabha ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I want notice of that question, Sir.

Sardar Sant Singh : Why notice ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : There may be a large number of State Prisoners. The Honourable Member may recollect all the names.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have now looked up the tement I laid on the table in August last year, and I find that it does include the ex-Maharaja of Nabha.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Are Government aware that frequent complaints are made by State Prisoners about the inadequacy of provisions ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : They often make representations.

STATE PRISONERS IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES JAILS.

537. *Mr. Sri Prakasa (on behalf of Seth Govind Das) : Will Government be pleased to state :

- the number of State prisoners at present in the central and sub-jails, separately, of the Central Provinces ;
- whether sub-jails are adequately equipped, with regard to medical and recreation facilities for State prisoners ;
- the facilities extended to them for exercise and games ;
- whether their personal allowances have been reduced as a result of their transfer to this province from another, if so, to what extent and for what reasons ;
- whether Central Provinces is regarded as a cheaper province than any other, such as Bengal and Madras ; and
- what the relevant motive of the Government is to keep transferring State prisoners from one province to another and particularly to sub-jails ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a), (b) and (c). There are four State Prisoners in the Central Provinces, all of whom are confined in Amoh, not in the jail building proper but in a separate building formerly used as a tahsil which is adjacent to the jail and has a yard which allows them ample space for exercise. They are allowed to move out freely in the yard and have been provided with parallel bars and badminton court. The health of the prisoners is satisfactory and the medical facilities available to them are adequate.

(d) and (e). The rate of personal allowance is fixed in consultation with Local Governments after taking into consideration local conditions. The Bengal State Prisoners now confined in the Central Provinces get a personal allowance of Rs. 20 per mensem. In the case of one of the prisoners transferred in April, 1934, from Madras, where the rate of personal allowance is Rs. 32 per mensem the allowance was reduced to bring it to the level fixed for the other State Prisoners in the Central Provinces.

(f) The suggestion behind the Honourable Member's question is quite incorrect. The transfer referred to in my reply to parts (d) and (e) was made at the request of the prisoner concerned.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is it a fact that State Prisoners in jails and sub-jails are subject to ordinary jail rules ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No. There are special rules dealing with State Prisoners.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Are they governed by special regulations in jails and sub-jails ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, there are special rules for them.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Are they always transferred at their request ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Not always. In this particular case, the suggestion was that Government transferred the prisoners without consulting him. In this particular case, the prisoner asked for a transfer.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Will the Honourable Member kindly keep a copy of the special rules on the table of the House ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think those are confidential.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Do these rules vary from jail to jail ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I must have notice of that question.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Is the allowance paid directly to the prisoner concerned or it is kept for him at the jail gate ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I must have notice.

FACILITIES FOR PLAYING GAMES OUTSIDE THE JAIL COMPOUNDS ALLOWED TO STATE PRISONERS.

538. *Mr. Sri Prakasa (on behalf of Seth Govind Das) : Will Government be pleased to state :

- whether State prisoners in this country are given the facility of playing games outside the jail compounds in certain jails and not so in some others ;
- the reason for this discriminative treatment ;
- whether the discriminative decision entirely rests at the sweet will of the jail officers ; and
- whether one rule with regard to such treatment is applied to all State prisoners in all the jails ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Facilities for exercise vary according to local circumstances. Arrangements are made by the Superintendent with due regard to the maintenance of jail discipline and the safe custody of the State Prisoners. They are allowed to exercise in the open air in the mornings and evenings, and where conditions permit and they so desire arrangements are made for badminton, Indian clubs, and other forms of exercise.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Are they allowed to have doctors from outside ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, if necessary.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Who is to decide the necessity of an outside doctor,—the prisoner himself or the jail authorities ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Medical Officer of the jail.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : It is the Superintendent, I take it. In my province, the Medical Officer is the Jail Superintendent, and I take it that he decides whether any further outside medical aid is necessary or not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Not always.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : In case these prisoners are allowed to have outside medical men, who pays for medical treatment ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : To the best of my belief, Government pay.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Not out of their allowance ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No.

STATE PRISONERS IN THE DAMOH SUB-JAIL IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

539. *Mr. Sri Prakasa (on behalf of Seth Govind Das) : Will Government be pleased to state :

- whether they are aware that the State prisoners in the Damoh sub-jail in Central Provinces have had distinguished Congress careers in Bengal ;
- since when the majority of the terroristic crimes commenced in Bengal ;
- whether they possess a full dosier of their career in connection with the Indian National Congress ;
- whether these State prisoners were arrested before most of the crimes under terrorism commenced ;
- whether these State prisoners, now in the Damoh sub-jail, were arrested for revolutionary activities ;
- whether they will be pleased to lay such record on the table to give an opportunity to this House to judge the justification of their detention over five years ;
- what the full record of their detention since 1915 is ;
- the crimes and the laws under which they were so detained and arrested from time to time ;
- whether their detention, without trial, under the Defence of India Act, and the Bengal Regulation III of 1818, in 1915, has any connection with their detention at present of 5½ years, and, if so, what they are ;
- whether they desire keeping these prisoners under detention without trial for their entire lives ;
- why Government do not prosecute them in a Criminal Court of law and prove their guilt, if guilty they really are ;

(l) if they cannot prosecute them in a court, whether they propose to consider the desirability of releasing them at this time of peace ;

(m) if so, when they are likely to be released ; and

(n) if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (c) to (i). It is a fact that the persons referred to in his question, who were described by the Government of Bengal, in 1931, as "active revolutionaries and leaders in the present terrorist movement", were also prominent members of the Congress in Bengal. According to my information one of them was the Secretary and another the Assistant Secretary of the Bengal Provincial Congress Committee, while a third was the President of the Chinsurah Congress Committee. Each of them was detained under the Defence of India Act or Regulation III of 1818, on account of their terrorist activities, before 1920. All four were released in 1920. They were again detained first under Regulation III and later under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1925, between 1923-24 and 1928 when again all four were released. They were again arrested under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1930, and in 1931 their detention was changed to Regulation III in order that they might be confined in a place outside Bengal. I cannot in the public interests lay on the table of the House the evidence which justifies their present detention which has been examined by two Judges and found by them to be sufficient for that purpose.

(b) After a period of intensive preparation in 1928-30 terrorist crimes became numerous in 1930 and were at their height in 1931 and 1932.

(j) to (n). The prisoners will be detained so long as their detention is necessary in the public interests. They have not been prosecuted because the evidence against them is not of a nature that can be put into Court.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : In view of the fact that these people have been kept in detention for five years without trial, will Government consider the advisability of releasing them on parole so that they may have at least some family life ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What is the evidence which is in the possession of the Government, but which is not fit for Courts to look at ? Is it the information of informers and spies, or anything more than that ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have said that I cannot, in the public interest, lay it on the table of the House, nor can I disclose it here.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I want to know what is the nature of the evidence. Have Government got the statements of any independent respectable witnesses ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am not prepared to add anything to what I have already said.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is it only the evidence of spies and informers ?

Dr. N. B. Khare : Why do not Government put these people on open trial ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have explained that.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government pay allowances to their dependents and their families ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That does not arise out of my reply.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is it not a fact Sir, that most of these people were arrested long before the outbreak of any terrorist crimes in Bengal ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have given details in my reply.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : May I know who were the two Judges who sat to consider this matter ? Who are those Judges ? Are they Judges of the High Court or Sessions Judges ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Sessions Judges.

CENSOR CENTRES FOR CENSORING THE LETTERS OF STATE PRISONERS AND DETENUS.

540. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the number of censor centres in this country where the letters of the State prisoners and detenues are being censored ;

(b) the number and permanent staff attached thereto ;

(c) the nature of their functions ;

(d) the kind and parts of communications deleted by them from the letters of or for the prisoners ;

(e) the annual expenditure of such offices ;

(f) which Government (Central or Provincial) meets the expenditure so incurred ;

(g) whether the staff so attached is sufficient to dispose of the work from day to day ;

(h) whether Government receive frequent complaints with regard to the delay in delivery of such letters ;

(i) what actions, if any, do Government take to remedy the evil ;

(j) whence the staff attached to such offices are drawn ;

(k) whether there are any Inspectors of Police or from the special branch of the Intelligence Department of the Government in this staff ;

(l) whether the practice of this office is to delete the matters even with regard to bad state of health whether of the prisoners or their people while exchanging communications ;

(m) whether this office brings out any annual administrative report ; and

STATE PRISONERS IN BAD HEALTH.

(n) whether they are prepared to lay on the table a copy of such report ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) to (c), (g), (j) and (k). I presume the Honourable Member is referring to the arrangements made for the censorship of the correspondence of the Bengal State Prisoners and Detenus. The Government of India are not concerned with detenus in Bengal, but in the case of those detained in the Camps there and in the Deoli Camp Jail, the censorship is done by the Camp Commandant. In the case of other Bengal detenus and State Prisoners detained in jails outside Bengal, the censorship of their correspondence is done in the Central Intelligence Bureau, Calcutta, by a staff consisting of two Inspectors and two Sub-Inspectors who also review books and examine manuscript note-books found in possession of State Prisoners and detenus, in addition to attending to the censorship of the correspondence of terrorist convicts in the Andamans. The staff is overworked, especially at times when large batches of letters are received.

(d) The main object of censorship is to prevent communication with members of terrorist or revolutionary organisations and such references are deleted as well as false statements and improper language or matters relating to Government policy and information in regard to jail administration.

(e) and (f). Information is not readily available and I cannot, therefore, say what expenditure, if any, is charged to Central revenues.

(h) and (i). Complaints are occasionally received and these are passed on to the Local Government for investigation. Delay in censorship is due to enquiries having to be made regarding persons mentioned in correspondence, and often results from disregard of the standing rules which require the writers of letters to furnish particulars of persons named in correspondence so as to facilitate enquiries.

(l) It is not the practice to delete portions referring to the state of health either of State Prisoners or detenus or of their relatives except when such portions grossly exaggerate the facts relating to the prisoners themselves with a view to providing material for propaganda. When such deletions are made by the Central Intelligence Bureau, Calcutta, enquiries are made simultaneously from the jail authorities to ascertain the real facts.

(m) No.

(n) Does not arise.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Are Government aware that several complaints had been made by State Prisoners in Madras in regard to clause (l) of the question, that portions of their letters relating to their health had been deleted by the censors ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have already answered that.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Have Government received any complaint to that effect ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have said that complaints are occasionally received.

541. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the number of State prisoners who are at present in bad health ;
- (b) those that are in very bad health ;
- (c) the names of the prisoners and the jails they are detained in
- (d) names of State prisoners (with the names of jails) who are suffering from violent type of tuberculosis ;
- (e) the names of the jails that are regarded to be the best for such maladies ;
- (f) whether State prisoners in those jails are kept in separate wards ;
- (g) whether all the State prisoners that are suffering from phthisis are kept in such jails ;
- (h) if not, whether they will arrange to transfer all phthisis patients to such jails which are regarded good for such diseases ;
- (i) whether there are any helpless cases among them ;
- (j) whether they propose to consider the advisability of sending them to sanatoriums or to release them to live or die amidst their relations and family surroundings ;
- (k) if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). The health of a State Prisoners confined in jail is reported to be satisfactory. Three State Prisoners have in the past not kept the best of health, but have lately improved.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) There is no case of any violent type of tuberculosis among the State Prisoners. One State Prisoner, who has a phthisical family history, has suffered from tuberculosis but for some time he has not had any signs of active disease and his present state of health is satisfactory.

(e) to (k). Do not arise.

Mr. G. Morgan : Is the Honourable Member in a position to state how many of these State Prisoners are in very much better state of health than before they became State Prisoners ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Why should not the Honourable Member himself go there ? He may also improve in health !

Mr. Sri Prakasa : In view of the fact that Superintendents of Jail are themselves Medical Officers, will the Honourable the Home Member take steps to see that qualified outside doctors examine the health of these prisoners from time to time ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That is done when it is necessary.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Who are the three people referred to in part (b) of the question ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : One is Jiban Lal Chatterjee in the Central Jail at Bellary, Madras, one is Rasiklal Das in the Bareilly Central Jail, and the third is B. K. Rakshit Roy, also in the Bareilly Central Jail.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government consider the advisability of publishing an annual report about the health condition of each one of these State Prisoners ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : We get a six-monthly report about their health.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government consider the advisability of publishing the report, so that the public and the relatives of these prisoners may have the benefit of it ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : There is no intention of doing so.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : May I know what steps have been taken in this particular tubercular case ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot give that in detail, but I know that for some time the man has not shown any sign of active disease, and his present state of health is satisfactory.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Does the Honourable Member mean that the detenu has been cured of his disease ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : It looks as if he has been cured.

DELAY IN THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE APPOINTMENTS TO THE LISTED POSTS OF THE UNITED PROVINCES JUDICIAL SERVICE BY THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION.

542. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Are Government aware of the general dissatisfaction expressed during the last Budget Session of the United Provinces Legislative Council about the delay in announcing the appointments to the listed posts of the United Provinces Judicial Service, by the Public Services Commission ?

(b) Are Government aware that at present three posts amongst the District and Sessions Judgeships of the United Provinces and four posts amongst the Agra Sessions and Subordinate Judgeships and consequently and likewise in Oudh are lying vacant since the 14th November, 1934 and the 16th June, 1933, respectively ?

(c) Are Government aware that this delay in the announcement of promotions entails great hardship on all the Judicial Service people in regard to postings, reversions and taking of leave, etc. ?

(d) Are Government prepared to prevent delays in future and to ask the Department concerned (i.e., the Public Services Commission or others) to call for the recommendations to the listed posts from the Allahabad High Court and the Oudh Chief Court six months before the vacancy occurs ?

(e) Does the delay in selections amongst the Subordinate Judgeships under the Chief Court of Oudh act as a bar to selections under the Allahabad High Court or vice versa ?

(f) Will Government please state if the delay is due to the Public Services Commission or to some other agency ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) to (f). The question, except so far as it concerns the Public Service Commission, is one which concerns the Local Government and could be more appropriately asked in the local Legislative Council. The duty of the Public Service Commission under their Functions Rules, 1926, is limited to advising the Governor General in Council whether the candidates nominated by the Local Government have the requisite character and ability for the service to which it is proposed to appoint them. The Commission have no power to call for recommendations to fill vacant listed posts. There has been no delay on the part of the Commission in dealing with the recommendations of the Government of the United Provinces.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : Am I to take it that these cases are lying with the Local Government or with the High Court and that the Public Service Commission has no hand in it ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Public Service Commission was asked for advice, and, as I have explained, they have given that advice. There was no delay in giving that advice.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : What I wanted to know was, are these cases lying with the Local Government or with the Chief Court or the Allahabad High Court ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say.

NON-APPLICATION OF THE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT ACT TO CANTONMENTS IN CENTRAL INDIA.

543. *Mr. M. Asaf Ali : (a) Will Government please state to which of the non-regulated provinces, administered areas, and cantonments, the Sarda Act has not yet been applied ?

(b) Is it a fact that the said Act has not been applied to Cantonments in Central India ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) I place on the table a statement showing the Administered Areas and Cantonments outside British India in which the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, has not been applied. I am in some difficulty as to the significance of the Honourable Member's reference to "non-regulated" provinces. He presumably realises that by virtue of its extent clause the Act applies proprio vigore to the provinces formerly known as non-regulation provinces and that the only areas in British India to which it does not apply proprio vigore are certain of the areas declared to be backward tracts under subsection (2) of section 52-A of the Government of India Act and certain other so-called deregulationised areas. The Government of India are not aware whether the Local Governments concerned have applied the Act to any of the areas in question.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[20TH SEP. 1935.]

(b) The Act has not been applied to Cantonments in Central India, but the matter is under discussion with the Agent to the Governor General.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Can the Honourable Member kindly throw some light on the subject a little further and tell us why these cantonment areas have been excluded from the operation of this Act? Is there any reason for it?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : As far as I know, these are cantonment areas outside British India, and it does not rest with the Government of British India to extend the Act.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Is it suggested that cantonment areas are not included in British India? By whom are they administered?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think that question ought to be addressed to the Foreign and Political Department. Some of the cantonments are used as cantonments and some are abandoned cantonments, I think.

EXHIBITION OF THE FILMS "INDIAN SPEAKS" AND "BENGALI".

544. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) Have Government been informed by the Secretary of State for India what steps, if any, have been taken to stop the exhibition of the films "India Speaks" and "Bengali"?

(b) What has been the effect of such steps?

(c) Have any effective steps been taken by the Secretary of State for India or by the Government of India to prevent any future production and exhibition in any country of films vilifying India?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the representation addressed by the Government of India to the Secretary of State for India in this matter and the reply of the Secretary of State thereto?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) to (d). I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply given by me on the 16th September, 1935, to Dr. Banerjea's question No. 377.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : May I know if Government have got any definite policy as to how to fight against the campaign of vilification against Indians?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I gave a very full reply on that point in my answer to Dr. Banerjea's question.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : Has the attention of Government been drawn to a telegram from Geneva which appears in the Advance in which it is stated that certain vagabonds are being paraded all over Switzerland for an "Indian show". These persons are made to stand in shabby dress and among them there are some women and children? (Cries of "Shame!").

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : What date is that?

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : Will Government kindly take note of this? I will hand over the extract to them.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Are posters of these films exhibited in public streets of foreign countries? I ask this in view of the fact that the Honourable Member is perhaps more interested in posters than in films themselves.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say about the film "India Speaks", but, as regards the film called "Bengali", which, I understand, is the same as the "Lives of a Bengal Lancer", certainly such posters are exposed.

DEFAMATORY PASSAGES ABOUT INDIANS IN A PUBLICATION ENTITLED "SOUVENIR PROGRAMME OF MALAYAN CELEBRATIONS".

545. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) Has the attention of the Government of India been drawn to the article "Modern Singapore" that appeared in His Majesty King George V Silver Jubilee Souvenir Programme (Malayan Celebrations) edited by one James H. Martin and published by T. B. Rogers & Co., Ltd.?

(b) Have Government noticed that in a certain passage in that article (at page 84 of the Souvenir Book), a most insulting and unwarranted attack was made on the whole of the Indian community in Malaya?

(c) Are Government aware that the said article caused bitter resentment and indignation amongst the members of the Indian community and for a time, it threatened a serious breach of peace in Malaya?

(d) Are the Government of India aware that in view of the Governor's message appearing on the 1st page of the Souvenir Book, the general impression in Malaya was that the said article and the sentiment expressed therein had the sanction and approval of the Colonial Government?

(e) Will the Government of India be pleased to state what steps have been taken by them in respect of the publication of the said article?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a), (b), (c) and (e). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to Mr. Satyamurti's question No. 224 on the 9th September, 1935.

(d) Any such impression should have been dispelled by the published expression of His Excellency the Governor's regret that the reputation of the Indian community should have been subjected to an odious and unjustified attack.

REFUSAL OF ADMISSION TO INDIAN STUDENTS IN ENGLAND TO A SWIMMING POOL.

546. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the fact that two Indian students in England were refused admission to a swimming pool even after the sale of admission tickets to them on the ground that they were coloured people ?

(b) If so, has the Government of India taken any steps to make amends to the aggrieved students and to put a stop to such a thing in future ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) and (b). The Secretary of State for India investigated the matter in July last. The swimming pool in question is owned and controlled by a commercial firm which excludes non-Europeans and has expressed its inability to relax the practice in favour of Indian students.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Referring to these swimming pools, is the Honourable gentleman aware that even in Delhi, the Capital of India, certain swimming pools are not open to Indians ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : That does not arise out of this question.

CANCELLATION OF THE PASSPORT OF MR. MASANI OF BOMBAY.

†547. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the fact that the passport—for travel on the continent—of Mr. Massani, a Bombay Congress socialist, has been cancelled in England ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons for the impounding of the said passport ?

(c) Was the said order passed at the instance of the Government of India ? If not, were the Government of India consulted, before the said order was passed, by the Home Government ?

POSITION OF THE INDIAN EMPLOYEES OF THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT IN BURMA AFTER THE SEPARATION.

548. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they have considered the position of the employees of the Post Office Department, especially of the Indian Ministerial staff, now serving in Burma, under the separation ;

(b) whether their interests are likely to be adversely affected ; and

(c) whether Government will take steps to see that their legitimate interests are safeguarded ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 532.

Mr. G. V. Bewoor : With your permission, I shall reply to questions Nos. 548 and 549 together. The position of employees of the Central Government in Burma, after separation, is at present under consideration, and the Honourable Member may rest assured that Government will take such measures as may be necessary for the protection of their interests.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will those steps be taken before separation becomes a fact ?

Mr. G. V. Bewoor : Yes, Sir.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED AT THE MEETING OF THE RANGOON POSTAL UNION.

†549. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the resolutions passed at the meeting of the Rangoon Postal Union ;

(b) whether Government have considered the suggestions contained therein ; and

(c) what action Government propose to take thereon ?

VISIT OF THE HONOURABLE THE COMMERCE MEMBER TO COCHIN.

550. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state whether the visit of the Honourable the Commerce Member to Cochin was in connection with the arriving at a settlement with regard to the Cochin Port ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know what is the work that the Commerce Member did in Cochin, in regard to this matter ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : If the Honourable Member will explain what he means by the work I did there in connection with this matter, I shall be happy to answer the question.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am referring to work connected with the settlement of the outstanding questions between the Government of India and the Cochin Government, with regard to the future of the Cochin port.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Consultations were held with the authorities in Cochin.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What are the outstanding questions ? Are they administrative and financial, or are there any other questions outstanding ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : With regard to financial questions, a provisional agreement has already been arrived at. The other questions relate both to the administration of the harbour as well as to the jurisdiction to be exercised over the harbour.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With regard to the question of jurisdiction, what is the claim of Cochin and what is the position of the Government of India ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 548.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I do not think that is a matter which I could deal by way of question and answer.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : At what stage do the negotiations now stand ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : They are still proceeding.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Has work been stopped on the further progress of Cochin harbour, or is it going on ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The third stage has been completed and the matter rests where it was when it was completed.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I take it that the fourth stage has not begun ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know how long Government anticipate these negotiations will take before they are concluded and the last stage taken in hand ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That depends mainly on Cochin.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have the Government of India forwarded their final views to the Cochin Government on these two outstanding matters ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The Government of India hold certain views with regard to these two questions, and the Cochin Government are in possession of those views.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is there going to be a conference on this matter ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : If at any time the hope arises that a conference might lead to a final settlement of the question, the Government of India will most certainly be prepared to call a conference.

POSITION OF INDIANS IN ZANZIBAR.

551. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the reply of Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, Secretary for the Colonies, in the House of Commons in answer to a question from Mr. Paling (Labour), about the position of Indians in Zanzibar ;

(b) whether the Government of India was consulted in the matter, and if so, what their advice was ; and

(c) whether they propose to take further action in order to press the Indian point of view on the British Government, and through the British Government, on the Sultan of Zanzibar ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). Government have recently received the text of resolutions on the subject which were passed at a mass meeting of Zanzibar Indians held on the 30th June, 1935. It is understood that copies were also sent to His Majesty's Government and apparently the communication had not reach the Secretary of State for the Colonies at the time he gave his reply to Mr. Paling's question. The matter is receiving the attention of the Government of India.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have the Government of India received copies of the resolution ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : That is what I have said.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have they forwarded them to the Secretary of State for the Colonies ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The Secretary of State for the Colonies has received copies of the Resolutions direct, and what the Government of India have to do, if they wish to do anything, is to send their own comments to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have they done so ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The matter is still under consideration.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I put the usual question, and ask how long the Government of India hope to take before coming to a settlement ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I think I can enlighten my friend. I hope it will be by the third week in October.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am greatly relieved.

NEWSPAPERS PUNISHED FOR ADVERSELY COMMENTING ON GOVERNMENTS' POLICY IN QUETTA.

552. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India issued a circular to the Local Governments regarding action to be taken against the Press adversely commenting on the Government's policy in Quetta ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the same ?

(b) Will Government lay on the table a statement giving the names of papers and the amount of security forfeited in this connection ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to make a comprehensive statement regarding the losses sustained by Government because of earthquake ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state, if any non-official agencies were permitted to administer relief in Quetta ? If so, what are their names ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state the names of individuals and associations who were refused permission to enter Quetta for purposes of administration of relief ?

(f) Will Government state the reasons for refusing permission to Mahatma Gandhi ?

(g) Are Government aware of the fact that the Government's refusal to allow Mahatma Gandhi and others to visit Quetta led to the spreading of all sorts of rumours ?

(h) Are Government prepared to appoint an enquiry committee consisting of non-official Members of the Legislative Assembly to enquire into and report on the adequacy of measures adopted by Government to administer relief to the earthquake victims ?

(i) Will Government be pleased to state if any military stores have been damaged by the earthquake ? If so, what ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to parts (a) and (b) of Mr. Satyamurti's starred question No. 401 on the 16th September, 1935.

(b) Such a list was laid on the table by me in reply to Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal's starred question No. 365 on the 13th September, 1935.

(c) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given to part (a) of Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon's starred question No. 163 on the 6th September, 1935, which gives the losses as regards buildings. No figures of other material damage have yet been collected.

(d) and (e). The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given to Mr. Satyamurti's starred question No. 283 on the 11th September, 1935.

(f) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to Mr. Satyamurti's starred question No. 219 on the 9th September, 1935.

(g) Government are aware that there were rumours but they are not prepared to express any opinion as to their cause.

(h) No.

(i) Yes. The preparation of the list of stores damaged would involve an expenditure of time and labour which would be incommensurate with the value of the results.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What is the value of the military stores ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That question should be addressed to the Army Department.

LAWS RESTRICTING THE LIBERTY OF THE PRESS.

553. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving the names of laws restricting the liberty of Press at present in force, in British India ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I lay a statement on the table giving the information required. In addition to the Acts mentioned there are, as the Honourable Member is no doubt aware, certain provisions in the Indian Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code which deal with the publication of incitements to sedition and to communal and religious animosity.

Statement of the Laws dealing with the Activities of the Press.

1. The Indian Press (Emergency Powers) Act, 1931, as amended by,
2. The Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932 (Sections 14—16).
3. The Indian States (Protection) Act, 1934 (Section 3), and
4. The Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1934 (Sections 6—8).

GRANT OF GENERAL AMNESTY TO POLITICAL PRISONERS BEFORE THE INTRODUCTION OF NEW CONSTITUTION.

554. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Is it a fact that Government is contemplating to grant amnesty to all political prisoners before the introduction of the new Constitution as was done in 1919 before the introduction of the present Reforms ? If so, will they be released in time to enable them to participate in elections if they so choose ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The answer to the first part is in the negative. The second part does not arise.

PRISONERS CONVICTED IN CONNECTION WITH THE CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE MOVEMENT NOT YET RELEASED.

555. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : What is the total number of prisoners in India who were convicted in connection with the civil disobedience movement and who have not yet been released from jail ? Will Government state the reason for not releasing them so far ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The total number of civil disobedience prisoners who were still in jail at the end of July last was 31.

As regards the second part of the question I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to parts (b) and (c) of Mr. S. Satyamurti's starred question No. 782 on the 9th March, 1935.

CANCELLATION OF THE PASSPORT OF MR. MASANI OF BOMBAY.

†556. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Is it a fact that the Government of India requested the Secretary of State for India to impound the passport of Mr. Massani, Bar-at-Law, Bombay ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the letter ?

INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING PASSPORTS.

557. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Will the Government of India state if it has issued any instructions to the Local Governments regarding granting passports ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What are the instructions, Sir ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : They are confidential.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Have Government issued special instructions regarding the issuing or refusing of passports to Socialists ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are the Government of India using this right to give or refuse passports, as a means of punishing the holding of certain political opinions and the propagation of them ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What are the criteria by which the Government of India want Local Governments to be guided in the issuing or refusing of passports ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Public interest.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 532.

RETURN OF MR. SUBHASH CHANDRA BOSE TO INDIA.

558. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Will Government state how long will B. Subhash Chandra Bose not be allowed to return to India ?

(b) In view of the unconditional release of B. Sarat Chandra Bose, do Government propose to consider the feasibility of removing restrictions from B. Subhash Chandra as well ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). Apart from the fact that his passport is only valid for certain foreign countries, no restrictions are at present imposed on Mr. Bose.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee : Will Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose be allowed to come back to India ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes—unless any restriction is imposed before he returns. (Laughter.)

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Why was Mr. Bose released at all ? Was not this House informed that he was a dangerous man, when we met in Delhi ? How has "public interest" suddenly changed in his favour ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That does not arise out of any answer I have given.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE GRANT FOR RURAL UPLIFT.

559. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Will Government be pleased to make a comprehensive statement regarding the manner in which the grant of rupees one crore and thirteen lacs for rural uplift has been distributed in the provinces ? Will they also lay on the table the schemes of rural uplift prepared by the various governments for utilising the grants ?

(b) Will Government state what proportions of this, if any, will be spent in removing illiteracy ?

(c) Will Government be prepared to state the total number of persons who have been engaged under the scheme in the various provinces ? Will Government state the maximum and minimum salary sanctioned to them ?

(d) Are Government aware that these persons are being used to carry on anti-Congress propaganda in villages ?

(e) Are Government prepared to issue strict orders that these persons should not take any part in the elections to local boards or legislatures ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) and (b). The Honourable Member is referred to the statement laid on the table in reply to question No. 162 asked by Mr. Basanta Kumar Das.

(c) Information is not available.

(d) Government have no reason to suppose that this allegation contains any element of truth.

(e) Such persons are appointed for the performance of specific duties. The Local Governments will no doubt satisfy themselves that they discharge those duties and do not engage in politics.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government see that the discretionary funds placed at the disposal of these Collectors are spent on the purpose specified in the communications and papers making these grants ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not think the Government of India should act as a policeman over the Local Governments : the grants have been made for specific purposes, and the Government of India will assume that the Local Governments will spend the grants on those objects.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Sir, in regard to certain provinces, certain conditions have been specifically laid down—especially in Bengal and Madras—conditions under which the Collectors should spend these discretionary funds, but in other provinces no such conditions have been fixed at all, and there the Collectors are entirely free to spend the funds as they like.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : These grants have been made for the welfare of the villages, and we take it they will be so spent.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : What was the answer to clause (d) of the question ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg :

"Government have no reason to suppose that this allegation contains any element of truth."

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Why is it that, in suggesting the items of the proposed expenditure, the Government of India have not included among the items any expenditure for the improvement of rural industries ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The Government did not circumscribe in any way the freedom of Local Governments in putting forward such schemes as they liked ; the Government of India themselves suggested certain kinds of scheme which they would be prepared to accept without question, but the Local Governments were perfectly free to propose what schemes they liked, outside that list, and a good many of them, in fact, have done so.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Did not the Government of India themselves suggest certain schemes ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : This is exactly what I have said.

INTRODUCTION OF THE BALLOT SYSTEM OF VOTING.

560. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Are Government aware of the difficulty experienced by the illiterate voters in keeping their votes secret in provinces where they are required to mark the ballot paper ?

(b) Are Government prepared to consider the feasibility of introducing throughout India ballot system similar to that as obtains in Bihar to obviate this difficulty and to ensure the secrecy of the ballot box ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) No.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to my reply to starred question No. 658 asked on the 5th March, 1935, by the Honourable Member himself.

GOLD EXPORTED FROM INDIA SINCE ENGLAND WENT OFF THE GOLD STANDARD.

561. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Will Government state the total weight of Gold exported from India since England went off the gold standard till the 25th August, 1935 ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the answer that I gave to starred question No. 201 asked by Mr. S. Satyamurti during the current Session.

COUNTRIES RESTRICTING THE FREE FLOW OF GOLD.

562. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Will Government state, if they are in a position to do so, the countries in which the State has restricted the free flow of gold ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the answer that I gave on the 18th February, 1935, to starred question No. 324 asked by Sardar Sant Singh.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : What are the steps being taken by other countries to prevent the export of gold beyond their boundaries ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I must have notice of that.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government consider the advisability of yielding to public opinion for once and prohibit the export of gold at least ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That is not a proper form of question, and the Chair will not allow it.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Question No. 563.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That has been disallowed.

†563. *

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Question No. 564.

HARDSHIPS OF PRISONERS IN THE CELLULAR JAIL, ANDAMANS.

564. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Are Government aware of an article published in Advance, dated the 27th June, 1935, on Andamans in reply to Dewan Bahadur Chetti's report ? If so, what action did Government take on it ?

(b) Is it a fact that the cells in Cellular jail are smaller than cells in Bengal jails and they are ill-lighted and ill-ventilated ? Is it also true that cells situated on ground-floor are damp ?

(c) Is it a fact that rain-water leaks inside some of the cells and they have not been repaired notwithstanding the fact that it has been repeatedly brought to the notice of Jail Superintendent ?

(d) Is it also a fact that the Chief Engineer has twice declared Block No. V as un-inhabitable, and the prisoners were consequently removed from that building, and were retransferred after the rainy season ? If so, are Government prepared to consider the feasibility of demolishing Block V and rebuild the cells on an improved model ? Are Government prepared to direct that necessary repairs be immediately made to save the prisoners from inconvenience ?

(e) Is it a fact that the working sheds in the cellular jail are in a tottering condition and have no ceiling, and are covered with corrugated tin ? If so, are Government aware that prisoners experience a lot of hardship to work under these sheds because of equatorial climate ? Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of providing roofs or covering them with tiles instead of corrugated sheets ?

(f) Is it a fact that the Cellular Jail was originally meant for lodging for short periods, of prisoners sentenced to transportation, prior to their being housed in other quarters outside the jail, and it was not built with the idea of keeping prisoners confined for longer periods ? Is it also a fact that the sanitary arrangements are as unsatisfactory as has been stated in the aforesaid article, viz., the drains are seldom disinfected and the latrines are totally inadequate ?

(g) Is it true that the water, prisoners get, is rain water stored in tanks outside jail, and that the supply is not adequate specially during the periods when rains fail ?

(h) Will Government state what arrangements, if any, have been made for filtering of water for drinking ? Is it correct that the dysentery epidemic breaks out in the jail almost every year ? If so, have Government made any enquiry as to its cause and what steps, if any, have been taken to prevent its recurrence ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) Government have seen the article published in the Advance newspaper of June 27, 1935, and have made enquiries about the allegations made in it, practically every one of which was found to be false.

(b) The cells in the Cellular Jail are of practically the same size as the cells in the Bengal Jails. The cells are in three storeys, and have good ventilation and an excellent outlook. The ground floor is free from damp.

(c) No.

(d) This is not a fact. In August, 1934, the Executive Engineer noticed a horizontal crack along the springing of the arches of the second floor of wing No. 5. Though the crack was not serious, immediate steps were taken by the Executive Engineer to carry out the necessary repairs. The work took about two months, as it was necessary to order the material from Calcutta, and during that period the second floor of wing No. 5 was vacated. No further cracks have been noticed since, and Government see no reason for demolishing it.

(e) The work-sheds were thoroughly repaired in 1934. They are large, airy, in excellent repair and have watertight roofs.

(f) The Cellular Jail was not built solely to house prisoners for short periods only ; it was intended also for the confinement of prisoners who could not be released in the Settlement. The statement that the sanitary arrangements are unsatisfactory is untrue. The drains are cleaned every morning and flushed with seawater. They are inspected every evening, and any rubbish seen is immediately removed. They are also daily treated with standard Cresol solution. The latrine accommodation is more than sufficient.

(g) and (h). The drinking water for the Cellular Jail (and for the greater part of Port Blair) is drawn from a catchment-area tank which, as elsewhere, receives rain water ; but the water is filtered before reaching the jail and is boiled and cooled before being issued as drinking water. The water supply was improved in July, 1934. The quantity is sufficient to supply about 40 gallons per prisoner per day. It is also incorrect to say that an epidemic of dysentery breaks out in the jail almost every year. The incidence of dysentery in the Cellular Jail in 1933 (the last year for which we have comparative figures) was much less than in the jails in most provinces in India.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : May I ask, Sir, if the Honourable Member has any personal knowledge of these jails ?

L228LAD

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have never been to the Andamans, but I have obtained a long report from the Chief Commissioner and I have also had a long conversation on the subject with Colonel Barker who was stationed for many years in the Andamans and who visited it recently.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Has any responsible officer of the Government of India been deputed by the Honourable Member to inspect for himself the actual conditions prevailing in these jails ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think Colonel Barker has already proceeded to the Andamans or is about to go.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Has Mr. Chetty made any recommendation regarding the further improvement of jail life in the Andamans ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say off-hand. That does not arise.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Sir, I have not been able to follow the answer to clauses (f), (g) and (h).

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not see why I should read them again. The Honourable Member will see them in the official report.

So far as I can see, I do not think it will be necessary for the House to sit beyond Wednesday, the 25th.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PLIGHT OF INDIAN SUBJECTS IN ABYSSINIA.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the news published in the Hindustan Times of the 10th September, 1935, page 3, under the heading "Plight of Indian subjects in Abyssinia" ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state whether the British Consul has asked the Indians to send their families back to India within eight days ?

(c) Is it a fact that Indian British subjects have been told by the British Consul that the British Government have no responsibility in their case ?

(d) If so, will Government be pleased to state whether in similar circumstances during previous wars the British Government took responsibilities for Indians and their properties ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) Yes.

(b) For some time past British Consuls under instructions from His Majesty's Minister, Addis Ababa, have recommended to all British subjects without distinction to send their families out of the country if they could do so without inconvenience. No time limit has, however, been set.

(c) Of course not.

(d) Does not arise.

LIMIT OF EXCHANGE APPLIED TO INDIAN SUBJECTS IN ABYSSINIA.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Is it a fact that it has been announced that the Bank in Abyssinia will give Indians exchange up to Rs. 300 for their money, and no more ?

(b) If so, will Government please state whether this limit of exchange applies only to Indian British subjects, or to European British subjects as well ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether any differential treatment is being meted out to Indians in this respect ? If so, why ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) and (b). The Bank of Ethiopia, which is an Ethiopian institution, has practically no foreign exchange to sell to anyone. Sale has accordingly been restricted to travelling expenses for persons leaving the country. Nevertheless, on a representation from His Majesty's Minister, a fair share in the exchange available has been reserved for Indians.

(c) Does not arise.

REGISTRATION OF PROPERTIES OF INDIANS IN ABYSSINIA.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Is it a fact that registration of properties of Indians in Abyssinia by the British Consul has been stopped ? If so, what are the reasons ?

(b) Have the properties of British subjects other than Indian been all registered now ? If so, why has registration of Indians' properties been refused ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) and (b). Consular registration of inventories of property is allowed to all British subjects including British Indians. I am unable to say how far the British and Indian communities, respectively, have availed themselves of this privilege.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Will Government take steps to intimate to the Indian settlers there that there is such a provision and they can easily take advantage of it ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I believe they are already aware of it.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : How many Indians have taken advantage of it till now ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I am afraid I cannot give answer to that. I have not got the information.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Have arrangements been made that Indians will feel no difficulty in this matter ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : Certainly, Sir.

ALLEGED CONDITIONS APPLIED ON CERTAIN INDIANS IN ABYSSINIA.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Is it a fact that Indians willing to reside in Zeila and Behra have been asked to keep ready money with them, or else they have been threatened to be ejected ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, do these conditions also apply to all other British subjects ? If not, what is the reason for this differentiation ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) and (b). No such conditions have been applied or even contemplated.

RETURN OF INDIAN WAGE EARNERS FROM ABYSSINIA.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) What arrangement have Government made for the return to India of such Indian wage earners and their families from Abyssinia as have got no money with them to defray the expenses ?

(b) Are Government prepared to pay for the costs of the return passage for the Indian labourers and their families and other destitute Indians now living in Abyssinia ? If not, why not ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) and (b). Under the existing practice British Indian subjects who are stranded in foreign countries are repatriated at Government expense on their giving undertakings to repay the amount which the Government may spend on such repatriations. This practice will be observed if necessity arises.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : In cases where they are unable to pay the amount, what will happen to them ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : That seems to be more a matter for private charity.

CANCELLATION OF CERTAIN GALLERY PASSES.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order : I have to inform the House that I have received a letter from the Honourable Member, Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal, saying that he wishes to raise the question as to the cancellation of certain Passes to the galleries of this House under my orders. I cannot allow such a question being raised. I may, however, inform the House that I acted in the discharge of my responsibility in that matter upon the information that I received for the safety of the House, and I may also inform the House that there have been very few cases in which I have had to cancel Passes already issued.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to present the report of the Public Accounts Committee (Parts I and II) on the accounts for the year 1933-34. Perhaps, in making this presentation, I must ask the Members of the House, in view of the fact that the report will be discussed on Wednesday and it covers a very large range of subjects, to be good enough to give notice to the representatives of the Departments concerned of the subjects which they wish to raise during that debate.

6. Excesses.—In the following cases the actual expenditure exceeded the voted grants and an excess vote of the Assembly is accordingly required :—

7. A brief explanation of the more important excesses is given below :—

Item 1.—The voted charges under this grant represent mainly payments to the Posts and Telegraphs Department for savings bank and cash certificate work. The excess was due to the increase in the post office savings bank transactions during the closing months of the year, the volume of which is not susceptible of accurate estimating.

Item 2.—The excess was caused by the reimbursement to the Burma Government of arrear charges (from 1930-31) in connection with the survey of the Northern Shan States.

Item 3.—Heavy decline in inspection work for Railways and consequent fall in recoveries caused the excess.

Item 5.—The excess was due to more leave salary charges of retrenched personnel and the omission through misunderstanding on the part of the Account Officer to provide for them in a supplementary estimate.

Item 6.—The revenue surplus for 1933-34 was anticipated to be Rs. 1,28,89,000 and it was decided to transfer the entire surplus to the Fund for reconstruction of Earthquake damage. The actual revenue surplus however amounted to Rs. 2,71,66,180.

Item 7.—This represents the Central Government share of the cost of reconstructing and repairing the provincial government buildings, etc., in Bihar and Orissa damaged by the earthquake. A supplementary grant could not be obtained from the Assembly as it was not possible to estimate before the close of the year the actual expenditure likely to be incurred. It has since been decided to transfer this expenditure to the Fund for the reconstruction of earthquake damage.

Item 8.—The excess was due to larger payments of gratuity to retrenched personnel and to smaller amounts transferable to revenue mainly in the Posts and Telegraphs Department.

8. We recommend that the Assembly assent to the excess grants detailed above which the Governor General in Council will place before them in due course.

9. Rule 52 (2) of the Indian Legislative Rules requires that we should bring to the notice of the Assembly every reappropriation from one grant to another, every reappropriation within a grant which is not made in accordance with such rules as may be prescribed by the Finance Department and all expenditure which the Finance Department have requested should be brought to the notice of the Assembly. We are glad to be able to report that there have been no reappropriations falling under these categories during the year, nor have the Finance Department requested us to bring to the notice of the Assembly any particular item of expenditure.

II.—Important comments on matters arising out of the accounts for 1933-34.

10. Accuracy of budgeting, control over expenditure, etc.—It will be seen from the figures given in paragraphs 4 and 5 above that the results of the year under review compare favourably with those of the two previous years except under expenditure charged to capital. In making this comparison, however, it should be remembered that the years of 1931-32 and 1932-33 were exceptional in view of the retrenchments then in progress.

We went through the Appropriation Accounts in great detail and were struck by the large number of major variations between the estimates and actuals. Even in cases where variations under the totals of the Grants were not great, the variations in individual sub-heads were very large indeed. This was specially the case in the case of Civil Works and Posts and Telegraphs grants. We understand that, until two years ago, there were no proper rules for budgeting for Civil Works and we hope that, as a result of the rules then issued, the appropriation accounts of later years will show some improvement. As regards the Posts and Telegraphs Department, previous Committees have commented on the serious faults in budgeting and control of expenditure. Last year's Committee was furnished by the department with a memorandum explaining the various steps taken or under contemplation to remedy the defects noticed, and to effect improvements in the procedure concerning budgeting and control of expenditure. Judging from the results of the year 1933-34, we too are definitely of opinion that budgeting and control of expenditure in the department were far from satisfactory and the Auditor General particularly brought to our notice the continuance of the over-budgeting under the Repairs grant which had been a marked feature of the preceding ten years. We realise that the effect of the steps taken by the department could not have become noticeable in the accounts now under review but we hope that future appropriation accounts, at least from 1935-36, will show the results of the action taken by the department.

The grant for the Survey of India was another grant under which there were large variations due mainly, we understand, to the difficulty of estimating the work to be done for provincial governments and consequent recoveries from them. We realise the difficulties but desire that the Finance Department should, in consultation with the Education, Health and Lands Department, try to remedy the defects as far as possible.

We specially desire to impress upon the various departments that, though variations within a grant are less important than variations in the grant as a whole, even here large variations are to be deprecated as showing a certain indefiniteness in estimating.

11. Supplementary Grants.—The Accountant General, Central Revenues, has brought to our notice 6 cases in which supplementary grants obtained from the Assembly proved to be unnecessary. We were informed that the Finance Department is at present considering the whole question of more effective control of expenditure and the procedure for obtaining supplementary grants. In this connection we suggest that the Finance Department should consider whether, when they go for a supplementary grant to the Assembly for a portion of the amount required for a scheme as a whole, the balance being met by reappropriation from savings elsewhere, the particular sub-heads under which the savings are available should not, in the case of large savings at least, be shown in the supplementary demands presented to the Assembly. We understand that a similar procedure is in force in Great Britain.

12. Accounts of separate funds created for special expenditure.—During the last two years the Government of India have created a number of funds from the revenue surpluses for special expenditure such as reconstruction of earthquake damage in Bihar, development of Civil Aviation, Broadcasting, etc. We suggest that progressive accounts of expenditure from the various funds should be included in future appropriation accounts.

13. Audit of Customs revenue.—We agree with the Auditor General that the revised system of concurrent audit of Customs revenue which was introduced on a temporary basis 3 years ago should be made permanent.

14. London Stores Department.—The last year's Committee recommended that, in view of the large drop in the value of stores purchased through the London Stores Department, the question of reducing the strength of that Department and of making it a part of the Indian Stores Department should be considered. We are informed that the Government of India have decided to depute Sir James Pitkeathly, the Chief Controller of Stores, Indian Stores Department, who will be on leave during the winter of 1935-36, to make a detailed examination of the working of the London Stores Department and to submit a scheme for the amalgamation of the two departments.

15. Mathematical Instrument Office, Calcutta.—We discussed with the representative of the Education, Health and Lands Department the question of reducing the size of the Mathematical Instrument Office, Calcutta, as a result of the decision of the Army Department to get their work done through their own agencies and of the receipt of smaller demands from Provincial Governments and other Departments of the Government of India. We were informed that the Surveyor General had proposed certain reductions to the extent of about Rs. 20,000 a year. We feel that these reductions are considerably less than the loss of revenue from the Army Department, and that it should be seriously considered whether more drastic reductions are not possible. If, even after these reductions, it is found that the office is not able to pay its way, the question of closing it down should be taken up.

16. Unauthorised Excluded Funds in N.-W. F. P.—We understand that there are about 30 such funds of which the important ones are the Motor Lorry Depreciation Funds and the Khassadar Fund. We are informed that the Motor Lorry Depreciation Funds have already been closed and that orders have also been issued to close the Khassadar Fund, detailed instructions having been issued to regulate the various budget grants relating to the Khassadars. The other funds, which are minor ones, are being scrutinised and orders are being issued to close the funds which are unnecessary and to continue those that are necessary under proper sanction and regular audit. We desire that a further report on this matter should be included in the next year's audit report.

17. Financial position of the Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department.—We have perused the Memorandum furnished by the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, on the commercial prospects of the Department and on the various measures taken to reduce the expenditure and increase the revenue of the Department. We are glad to note that a loss of about half a crore incurred in 1933-34 has been converted into a surplus of about Rs. 37 lakhs in 1934-35, though this result was attained after suspending the allocation to the Depreciation Fund to the extent of about Rs. 27 lakhs. In 1935-36 the Department anticipate a loss of about Rs. 13 lakhs after restoring about Rs. 19 lakhs of the provision for the Depreciation Fund, providing Rs. 27 lakhs for the restoration of the remainder of the pay cut and allowing for increments in the pay of the staff. So far as we can make out the Department should be able, on the present basis, to produce a balanced budget in the near future. We are sidered at great length whether the general financial position of the Department could be improved by restricting the amount of the contribution to the Depreciation Fund. The non-official Members of the Committee thought that this was somewhat in excess of the amount required and recommended that the question should be carefully considered by the Finance Department. The Chairman undertook that this should be done.

18. Report of the Military Accounts Committee.—We append the Report submitted by the Military Accounts Committee (Annexure A) constituted to make a preliminary examination of the Military Appropriation Accounts and connected documents. We endorse the recommendations and observations of the Committee both in its Report and in the proceedings of its meetings. We desire to lay special stress on the importance of completing the revision of the Army Regulations as soon as possible.

III.—Miscellaneous Observations.

19. As in the previous year, we append to our Report minutes of our proceedings which we consider should be treated as part of the Report. We assume that, in accordance with the established practice, such action as may be necessary will be taken by Departments on the observations and recommendations contained in these proceedings.

20. We wish to thank the Auditor General for the assistance which he rendered to us throughout the proceedings. His great knowledge and his patient willingness to impart it have been beyond praise. We should like also to express our great appreciation of the work of our extremely competent Secretary, Mr. K. Sanjiva Row, C.I.E.

ANNEXURE A

Report of the Military Accounts Committee.

We were constituted in pursuance of the recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee of the year 1931-32 to make a preliminary examination of the Military Appropriation Accounts and connected documents. The results of our examination are, as usual, embodied in the proceedings of our meetings (Annexure I), which should be treated as a part of our report, and it is unnecessary for us here to do more than refer to the more important points.

2. Control over expenditure.—We are glad to note that the Auditor General considers that "so far as control of expenditure in bulk is concerned, the financial administration of the year has been shown to be careful, efficient and, in the abnormal circumstances mentioned by the Financial Adviser, successful". There is, however, room for still further improvement, and we hope that this will be achieved in future years as a result of the efforts that are being made by the Army authorities.

3. Military Engineer Services expenditure.—We have been through the review of expenditure on Military Engineer Services prepared by the Financial Adviser. In pursuance of the views expressed by the previous Committees, the Financial Adviser has carried out a detailed examination of variations between the estimates of cost of individual works and the actual expenditure incurred. In order to make the review more informative, the Auditor General has suggested—and we agree with the suggestions—that—

- (1) variations from (a) original estimates, and (b) the year's appropriation in the case of works of major importance or higher value, should be exhibited in the Appropriation Accounts; and
- (2) a detailed account of the utilization of the Military Engineer Services Reserve should be given in the Appropriation Accounts.

We understand that these suggestions have been accepted by the Financial Adviser.

The various steps which the Army authorities are taking in order to improve control of expenditure, regulation of contracts and other financial matters are mentioned in paragraphs 11 and 25 to 28 of the proceedings.

4. Revision of Army Regulations.—In view of the numerous irregularities due to the complexity and obscurity of the existing regulations, the previous Committees, at the instance of the Auditor General, had recommended that steps should be taken to simplify and amend the existing regulations. The Army Secretary hoped that two important sets of regulations would be completed within twelve months. We consider that this is a very important matter and the Army Department should take every step possible to complete the revision earlier, if possible.

5. Financial Irregularities.—The action taken by the Army authorities under the orders of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, in pursuance of the statement made to the Committee last year by the Army Secretary, is explained in the note attached to our proceedings of the 8th August 1935. This year's report again includes an undesirably large number of cases of financial irregularities pointing to the same conclusion as was reached by the Committee last year. We realise that these irregularities occurred prior to the issue of the special instructions referred to above, and we hope that the effect of these instructions will be reflected in the results of future years. Some of us think that negligence has not in the past been punished sufficiently seriously, and indeed a number of the cases specifically referred to by the Auditor General afford a prima facie confirmation of this view. The more important of these, we have discussed with the Army Secretary and on one of them in particular the whole Committee considered that his explanations were, to say the least of it, unconvincing and we have requested some further information in the case. We hope that the Army Secretary will be able to communicate this to the Public Accounts Committee in time for them to consider it before drafting their Report. In any case we assume that, in view of the instructions which have been issued by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and the impending simplification of the regulations, it will not only be clear that the Army authorities take a serious view of negligence or inefficiency but also that they will in no wise admit ignorance of the regulations as an extenuation of shortcomings under these heads. The natural corollary of this should be a manifest tendency for the punishments awarded in such cases to become heavier in future.

6. Authorised War reserves of stores.—The Quartermaster-General and the Master-General of the Ordnance have furnished the necessary certificates in regard to the existence in stock of the authorised war reserves of stores on the 31st of March 1935. Copies of these certificates are attached to our proceedings (Annexures II and III).

1. The Committee took up the examination of Appendix A to the Appropriation Accounts prepared by the Financial Adviser, Military Finance. The Committee accepted the explanation given or the action taken in regard to the cases mentioned in the Appendix subject to the following remarks.

2. Item 1—The Administration of Military Engineer Services expenditure.—This was postponed for consideration when the Engineer-in-Chief appeared before the Committee.

3. Item 2—Revision of Army Regulations.—The Committee was informed that, the general principles that will govern the revision having been settled as intimated to the Committee last year, the revision of 'Regulations for the Army in India' and 'Pay and Allowance Regulations' had been in hand since the 1st September 1934, that very definite and important progress had been made, but that it was not possible to say when the revision of those books would be completed. The draft Defence Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules to govern civilian personnel serving under the Army Department were referred to the Secretary of State early in 1934. As a result of certain criticisms made by him, the volume had been re-cast into a comprehensive book of regulations for this category of personnel, and it was hoped that it would be completed within the next two months. The Committee after discussion with the Army Secretary was of opinion that the revision of regulations was a very important matter, and the Army Department should take every step possible to complete the revision as quickly as possible. The Army Secretary promised to try his best to have the 'Regulations for the Army in India' and the 'Pay and Allowance Regulations', which are the most important ones, in a revised form by the time the Committee meets next year.

Item 3—Compilation of statistics showing losses due to the sale of surplus and obsolete stores.—This item was postponed for consideration with paragraph 5 (b) of the Auditor General's letter.

4. Item 4—Military Engineer Services Reserve.—The Auditor General desired that, as it has been prescribed that the reserve should be utilised for unforeseen works, a detailed account of its utilisation should be given in the Appropriation Accounts to enable audit and the Committee to see that it was properly utilised. The Committee agreed.

5. Item 5—Revision of rules for the Depreciation Reserve Fund of Ordnance and Clothing Factories.—The Auditor General said that on further examination he had decided not to press for any change. The Committee agreed.

6. Item 6—Revision of equipment tables.—The Committee was informed that the tables had been revised. The Military Accountant General was satisfied with the revised tables.

7. Item 8—Improvement of supervision and proper liaison with Finance to prevent frauds.—Consideration was postponed till the next day.

8. Item 9—Improvements in the procedure for recovery of rent, water and electric charges and conservancy tax.—The Military Accountant General informed the Committee that he had issued instructions that these bills should be sent to the units concerned, and that recoveries should be made from the pay bills. As regards the conservancy tax, it has been decided that these charges should be levied except in the case of certain very poor people.

9. Item 10—Judge Advocate General's rulings in certain cases.—The conclusions reached by the Government of India are given in the annexure to the Quarterly Statement of outstanding items.

10. Item 12—Statement comparing the cost of important items of manufacture with Home Priced Vocabulary Stores rates.—The Committee agreed to the discontinuance of this statement as it served no useful purpose.

11. Item 13—Trained works accountants for Military Engineer Services audit.—The Military Accountant General informed the Committee that he had agreed to take over certain trained Public Works Department accountants who will also train others. The Committee desired to have a report of the success or otherwise of the new arrangement after two years.

12. The Committee then took up the consideration of paragraph 5 (a) of the Auditor General's letter, namely the possibility of amplifying the first part of Appendix E to the Appropriation Accounts so as to give information regarding a larger number of categories of stores. At present there are certain important omissions, for example, mechanical transport stores. The Auditor General explained to the Committee that this information would be useful for exercising greater financial control. He said that there was no difference of opinion so far as the principle was concerned between him and the Financial Adviser, Military Finance; the whole difficulty lay in devising a procedure whereby these statistics could be obtained without undue extra expense. The Committee desired that every effort should be made to give fuller information in the next year's report. Mr. Das also desired that in the memorandum of the Financial Adviser regarding stores transactions, figures for the amount of stores purchased in India and outside India should be given separately. The Deputy Financial Adviser agreed to do this.

13. Item 3 of Appendix A and paragraph 5 (b) of the Auditor General's letter—Exhibition in a valued statement of surplus and obsolete stores disposed of during the year.—The Auditor General explained to the Committee that the Financial Adviser had accepted the advisability of preparing a valued statement of surplus and obsolete stores discarded in the course of each year as one method of check over the exercise of control in respect of the purchase of stores. A statement in respect of the year 1934-35 had actually been prepared and submitted to audit and this provided the Financial Adviser with a prima facie case for enquiry into certain discards of M. T. stores. The Committee desired that the statement should be utilised where necessary to improve the present 'provisioning' arrangements and to prescribe suitable limitations on store holding.

In this connection the Auditor General brought to the special notice of the Committee the former absence of a proper system of provisioning, the overstocked condition owing to this reason, and the necessity of a valued account of all surplus and obsolete stores in the Royal Air Force. The Army Secretary circulated a note (copy attached) explaining the steps taken to improve the system. The Auditor General stated that he thought that measures had been taken locally to remedy the defects in the provisioning system, and that as far as he could see they were reasonably satisfactory. He urged that Government should issue authoritative orders regarding a provisioning system and its stock limits. The Army Secretary assured the Committee that the Royal Air Force Headquarters and the Army Department realised the importance of the matter and were giving very close attention to it. He acknowledged that the Auditor General's interest in the question had been instrumental in focussing attention upon it.

14. Paragraph 6 of the Auditor General's letter—Special expenditure on Territorial Force (Appendix L to the Appropriation Accounts).—The Army Secretary informed the Committee that they were surrendering a sum of Rs. 5,85,000 to general revenues.

15. The Committee then took up for consideration various financial irregularities mentioned in paragraph 7 of the Auditor General's letter. As regards these irregularities, the last year's Committee had observed "they also desired to record their opinion that the punishment awarded in some cases was entirely inadequate and that the administrative authorities appear to take far too lenient a view of cases where the furnishing of false certificates was deliberate". The Auditor General in his letter says: "In last year's report I was constrained to observe that the cases brought to notice taken as a whole seemed to afford evidence that there was considerable laxity of view and an insufficient sense of responsibility in financial matters, not in the administration as viewed in the abstract but amongst individuals. It is regrettable that this year's report should again include an undesirably large number of cases pointing to the same conclusion". The Committee desired to draw the pointed attention of the Army authorities to these remarks. They realised that the irregularities mentioned in this report occurred prior to the issue of special instructions by H. E. the Commander-in-Chief and hoped that the effect of these instructions would be reflected in the results of future years. Some members of the Committee also felt that negligence had not in the past been punished sufficiently seriously, but after the special instructions issued under the orders of H. E. the Commander-in-Chief punishments for negligence or slackness should tend to become heavier.

16. Paragraph 24 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit.—The Committee desired to record that the cost or the inconvenience involved should not be the sole criterion in considering whether a prosecution should be launched. All relevant factors, such as the amount involved in the fraud and the seriousness of the fraud, should be taken into account.

17. Paragraph 29 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit.—The Army Secretary informed the Committee that this particular fraud was still under investigation but that the Army Commander had appointed a standing committee in each district of the Northern Command consisting of the Assistant Director of Medical Services and two officers of the garrison concerned, one of the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel and the other a field officer of the Royal Indian Army Service Corps, to visit hospitals periodically, enquire into their administration and submit reports to Command Headquarters. The question of instituting such committees in other Commands was also under consideration. The Committee desired that an investigation should be conducted to see whether there was any defect in the system of accounts which facilitated the fraud.

The Committee then adjourned till 11 A.M. on the 8th August 1935.

ANNEXURE

Royal Air Force Stores.

In answer to the main criticism that the system, or lack of system, in the matter of "provisioning" has led to the holding of excessive stocks of stores, the Royal Air Force authorities do not claim that their system is perfect, and they acknowledge that the Auditor General's interest in the matter will help to secure the improvement that they themselves desire.

On the other hand they do claim that they have evolved a definite system, that for many years they have been endeavouring to improve it, that they have brought about many improvements by their own efforts and have still further improvements under consideration, and that their task is rendered particularly difficult owing to the rapid scientific development that is taking place in the construction of aircraft and aircraft engines and the fact that most of the stores they require are unobtainable in India.

In particular they desire to bring the following facts to notice—

- (1) the present "qualification" of the audit certificate is based on the assumption that the Government of India have not given their authority to the stock limits which now govern the Royal Air Force provisioning system. This is not the case. Between 1927—1931 the stock limits were reduced and the acceptance by the Government of India of the new limits was obtained in the process of reporting the Royal Air Force retrenchments to the Secretary of State in 1932. The only mistake was that this acceptance was not communicated to the audit authorities. The A. O. C. is taking action to regularise the position and is now applying for formal sanction to cover the issue of Equipment Tables to consuming units on the basis of the stock limits approved.
- (2) It is this very reduction as a measure of economy—rather than the defects of the system itself—that has largely accounted for an accumulation of excess stocks, many of which consist of surpluses returned to the depot by consuming units.
- (3) On the Army side, Mobilisation and War Reserves are held and shown separately from working stocks. On the Royal Air Force side there is no such distinction and a considerable portion of the stocks, which may seem to be excessive, are really emergency reserves.
- (4) Even if stock limits of so many months supply are laid down, it is particularly difficult in the Royal Air Force to make absolutely correct estimates of monthly requirements, especially when new types of equipment are introduced, as they often have to be, either for the sake of increased efficiency or because the maintenance of the old type eventually becomes more expensive.
- (5) Whatever may have been the case many years ago, stores are now never purchased except on detailed indents which are seen and priced by the Military Finance Branch. There is no question of India's being compelled to purchase stores sent out by the Air Ministry or leaving it to the Air Ministry to despatch such stores as they may consider necessary up to a monetary limit intimated by the Indian authorities. When a new type of aircraft is introduced, some advice from the Air Ministry is necessary as regards the initial provision of spare parts, but the policy is to work as far as possible on Indian experience of similar types.

- (6) The fact that surplus stores are held is admitted. They represent the accumulation of several years and will take time to dispose of economically.

Obsolescence is a constant factor and a certain quantity of obsolescent stores must eventually pass into the category of obsolete stores.

The Royal Air Force will welcome any means of confining stores in these categories to the narrowest possible limits. They are already rendering a quarterly return of disposals, which can be prepared on the lines finally approved on the Army side. Their sole object is to keep their aircraft efficient in peace and war and so long as due recognition is given to the peculiar features mentioned above, they hope that the present discussions will lead to a definite improvement which can form the subject of report to the Military Accounts Committee next year.

18. The Auditor General first raised the question whether the convention that 24 hours notice should be given if the Committee desired to take up any case not mentioned in the Auditor General's letter should not be denounced. He explained that formerly the Auditor General included in his letter practically every item on which the Committee should make enquiries but was now trying gradually to break away from this practice and to leave it to the Committee to decide which particular items they should take up. The Committee agreed that the convention should be denounced, but if the witnesses desired, the Committee ought to allow them reasonable opportunity for looking into the papers relating to the case in greater detail.

19. Item 8 of Appendix A.—Improvement of supervision and proper liaison with Finance to prevent frauds.—A note (copy attached) was circulated to the Committee explaining the action taken under the orders of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in pursuance of the statement that was made to the Committee last year by the Army Secretary.

20. Paragraph 25 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit.—The Military Accountant General explained that he had taken special steps to tighten up audit in the case of irregular units in which this and some other frauds occurred.

21. Paragraph 31 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit.—Some members of the Committee were of opinion that this was one of the cases in which inadequate punishment had been awarded on the administrative side as compared with the Military Accountant General's side. Arising out of the explanation given by the Army Secretary, the Auditor General remarked that on the civil side action had been taken by the Railway Board and was probably being taken in other Departments to explain that departmental enquiries should not necessarily be delayed pending decision of criminal cases, as at a later stage the evidence might disappear and the departmental enquiry could not be brought to any conclusion at all. He desired that a similar practice should be followed on the Army side. The Committee agreed with the view of the Auditor General and desired that a report should be made to them as to the action taken.

22. Paragraph 32 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit.—As regards the punishment of one of the officers concerned, the Army Secretary explained that he was tried by Court Martial on certain charges and was acquitted. After acquittal the Army Commander and the Quartermaster General took the view that, although he had been acquitted of a criminal charge, he had shown himself inefficient and slack in the performance of his duties and that he ought to be got rid of for inefficiency. The Commander-in-Chief decided, however, that in accordance with the custom in the Army after a man had been tried for certain charges and acquitted, no further departmental action should be taken against him on the same set of facts. The Army Secretary, who explained that he had not yet seen the papers himself, was not sure whether this was the legal position or whether it was based on custom only. The Committee was not at all satisfied with the position as they felt that it should be permissible to take departmental action against an officer for negligence and inefficiency even if he had been acquitted by a court of a criminal offence. The Committee, therefore, desired that the Army Secretary should further investigate the matter and intimate the result to the Committee, if possible before the drafting of the report of the Public Accounts Committee.

23. Paragraph 35 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit.—The Military Accountant General explained that this was another case in an irregular unit where steps have been taken to tighten up audit. Some members of the Committee were of opinion that this was another case in which the punishment awarded was inadequate.

24. The Committee then went through paragraphs 46, 22, 23, 33, 37, 38, 39 and 45 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit.

The Committee then adjourned till 2.30 P.M.

Note by the Army Department.

In item 8 of Appendix A of the Appropriation Accounts of the Defence Services for the year 1933-34, and in paragraph 15 (a) and (b) of the Proceedings of the Military Accounts Committee held on the 25th June 1934, which are reproduced in the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the accounts of 1932-33, it is stated that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief ordered, in connection with the financial administration of Army expenditure, that the serious attention of local military authorities should be drawn to the two following directions in which he considered improvement was most necessary, namely :—

- (a) Improvement of supervision, and
- (b) proper liaison with Finance.

2. The following action has been taken to implement His Excellency's orders :—

- (i) A revised edition of the pamphlet entitled "Notes on the Prevention of Fraud" and
- (ii) a circular memorandum No. B.29799/1 A.G.-8, dated the 20th September 1934, on the subject of liaison with Finance, have been issued by the Adjutant General in India.

3. A copy of the pamphlet referred to under (i) was circulated to the members and a copy of the circular memorandum is attached.

Memorandum.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has recently had under consideration the standard of financial administration in command and lower formations. While considerable advance appears to have been made in recent years towards a more satisfactory state of affairs, His Excellency believes that there is still great room for improvement, and he is particularly impressed in this connection with the advantages to be obtained from a closer co-operation between units and their accounts and audit officers; a subject on which you have been already addressed in A. G.'s No. B.17456/9/A.G.-13, dated 12th September 1932.

2. There is a tendency in some quarters to regard the duties of accounts and audit officers as confined to the mere keeping of accounts, the checking of bills and the prevention or detection of fraud. A more irresponsible view is that their general function is to criticise and obstruct. These are grave misapprehensions. It is a primary duty of the accounts and audit department to help wherever possible with financial advice and to ensure prompt payment of all legitimate claims. They should be able to give the financial state of a unit, formation or service and inform the administrative authorities early of any expenditure that appears to require looking into. Detection and exposure of errors long after they have taken place must be replaced as far as possible by assistance in preventing errors. The officers of that department are the only trained staff on which the administrative authorities should rely for this form of assistance. It is therefore essential that their services should be fully utilised and that if errors are to be prevented or losses obviated, they should be freely consulted at every stage of a financial transaction and particularly at the beginning.

3. In recent months the Controllers of Military Accounts have opened in their respective offices a "Financial Advice" section which examines accounts figures and transactions with a view to the discovery of possible economies in administration or to the stoppage of waste. Various suggestions emanating from this source have doubtless already been considered in commands, and the work being done holds promise of genuine usefulness. His Excellency trusts that full advantage will be taken of it by carefully examining any suggestions offered. It should not, however, be left solely to the accounts and audit authorities to initiate suggestions, but in their day to day control over expenditure and efforts at economy, administrative officers should make free use of their accounts figures (as would a private individual in the conduct of his own business) and in doing so, should refer freely to the accounts department for guidance. With the same object in view—sound and economical administration—commanding and administrative officers should ensure that the queries of the accounts department receive full, clear and accurate replies without delay. Accounts officers on their side should ensure that the queries are really necessary and essential. In many instances difficulties can be settled by personal discussion without recourse to correspondence. These measures will at least diminish, though it cannot be hoped that they will entirely eliminate, the possibility of fraud and loss.

4. The preceding paragraphs deal with the Military Accounts Department which is the internal instrument of financial control functioning on behalf of the Finance Department of the Government of India. Outside the organization there exists a separate statutory authority charged with responsibility for the efficiency of the audit not only of the expenditure of the defence services, but of all expenditure in India from the revenues, of India, and of its correct accounting. This "statutory audit" commonly called test audit is conducted on behalf of the Secretary of State for India under the general control of the Auditor General in India.

His Excellency desires to emphasise the fact that co-operation with the statutory audit authorities, on the part of officers of all commands, staff, units, etc., is fully as essential as is co-operation with the Military Accounts Department, and that every facility should be given to the Director of Army Audit and to his officers and staff entrusted with this duty, and advantage taken of the assistance which they should always be ready to offer.

5. A copy of these orders is being sent to the Military Accountant General and to the Director of Army Audit with the request that they will please take any steps they may consider desirable in their respective departments to encourage that cordial co-operation with the Army to which in the interests of effective financial supervision, His Excellency attaches the highest importance.

25. The Engineer-in-Chief explained to the Committee the various steps taken by him to strengthen the financial control over Military Engineer Services expenditure. He explained that everything centred round the system of contracts which hitherto had been normally made on the basis of measurements and schedules of prices as there was no trained staff of quantity surveyors to prepare bills of quantities. This system gave an enormous amount of additional work to all concerned including the audit and accounts staff and offered numerous occasions of friction. The regulations also allowed certain opportunities to the executive staff to get works done which were not included in the original contracts and estimates, with the result that the finished works varied from what had actually been approved. In order to get over all these difficulties he had now secured a trained staff of quantity surveyors who were now training the staff in India. His idea was that ultimately all new works, where the scope of the work can be foreseen, should be carried out under lump-sum contracts. This should enable Government to get much cheaper tenders and the scope of the work would also be exactly defined. He had also made it quite clear that no diversions from the original contract would be allowed except as provided for in the contract itself. Of course, the system of lump-sum contracts could not be applied to maintenance which must necessarily be done in most cases by measurements. Even in these cases the quantity surveyors will, first of all, be able to prepare much more accurate schedules, will check the actual measurements in cases of importance and also check all the measurement work that comes in before it is actually paid for. He admitted that there was room for tremendous improvement in the whole of their measurement of maintenance work ; that was due not to any slackness or carelessness, but because the staff have not had the necessary training. These surveyors have been of enormous help and every day he saw an improvement—in saving money on maintenance and in improving the method of contracts for new works.

26. In reply to a question by Mr. Das, the Engineer-in-Chief explained that the quality of the work would not in any way suffer as detailed specifications would be included in the contract and there would be regular inspections to see that these specifications were adhered to.

27. As the Chairman desired to have the views of the Auditor General on the new system, the Auditor General said that it was claimed that the new system increased efficiency of financial control and did not diminish facilities for audit, but he would have to watch the position carefully to see whether the claim was actually justified. Audit was certainly not a hostile critic. He added that the system of lump-sum contracts had not been very successful in other departments, but that was mainly due to defective estimates, defective drawing up of contracts, and employment of unsuitable contractors.

28. The question of acceptance of the lowest tenders was then discussed. The Engineer-in-Chief explained that there were detailed instructions now that, if the lowest tender was not accepted, the agreement of the C. M. A. should, whenever possible, be obtained before acceptance of another tender ; in every case the officer accepting the tender had to put in writing, for the information of the Military Accounts Department, the detailed reasons for not accepting the lowest tender. If the Military Accounts Department did not accept these reasons as satisfactory, the case was referred to the Engineer-in-Chief. The Military Accountant-General explained that during the last six months there had been no such case.

After some further discussion regarding the Military Engineer Services expenditure, the Engineer-in-Chief withdrew.

29. The Committee then considered paragraphs 18, 34 and 36 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit. The Committee then took up for consideration the Commercial Appendix, the Financial Adviser's Review and the Auditor General's comments thereon. In view of the large losses incurred in the Medical Stores Depots and Ordnance Factories, the Committee expressed the opinion that the Army Department should consider whether they should not take steps to reduce these losses by taking advantage of the existing and expanding trade facilities in India. The Military Accountant-General and Army Secretary explained that the so-called "losses" in the Ordnance Factories were in fact the differences between the issue (P. V. S.) rates and the cost of production. Such "losses" could be concealed by varying the P. V. S. rates which would then lose their value as a standard of comparison from year to year. The fact was that the factories were maintained for war production ; their overhead charges could not be varied (as they might be in a commercial business) according as production increased or decreased ; and attempts were now being made to evolve a system of accounts which would display, separately and fairly, this "war insurance" element which necessarily entered into the cost of all production. The Army Secretary also assured the Committee that, whenever there were satisfactory facilities for the supply of Army stores from trade sources, advantage was always taken of them. As an instance he referred to the closing down of two clothing factories. The Committee expressed the opinion that this was a very important point which should always be borne in mind by the Army Department.

30. The Committee after examining the Commercial Appendix and the Home Auditor's report in detail adjourned.

The Committee discussed the following points :—

- (1) The check applied to see that the money voted by the Assembly was being spent within the scope of the demand, and that the expenditure charged against a particular demand related clearly to that demand and to no other ;
- (2) Financial control over expenditure to see that money was not spent in excess of the grant, and that surrenders were made where there were likely to be savings ; and
- (3) The powers of reappropriation of the various spending authorities.

2. In reply to a question by one of the members, it was explained to the Committee how and why the unutilised revenue surplus of a year went automatically for reduction or avoidance of debt unless it was intercepted before the close of the year and earmarked with the approval of the Legislative Assembly for specific purposes.

3. The Auditor General explained to the Committee that, in order to simplify the Appropriation Accounts and to bring them more into line with British Appropriation Accounts, he was reducing the number of columns in those accounts from 6 to 4. The first column will show the head with the details of the original grant, supplementary grant and any modifications ; the second column will show the final appropriation ; the third column the actual expenditure ; and the last column the excess or savings as compared with the final appropriation.

4. The Committee then considered the various important accounts changes mentioned in paragraphs 4 to 17 of the Accountant General, Central Revenue's Report.

5. The Committee then went through paragraphs 19 to 21 of the Accountant General, Central Revenue's Report giving a brief summary of the financial results of the year, which has been included in the report for the first time this year, in order to give the Committee a complete picture, including receipts, of the financial position of the Government.

6. The Committee then examined the general results of the appropriation audit during 1933-34 given in paragraphs 33 to 35 of the Accountant General, Central Revenue's Report.

The Committee adjourned till 2-45 P.M.

7. The Committee took up the consideration of the various appropriation accounts relating to the Finance Department.

8. Grant No. 20—Stamps.—The large savings under this head were explained as being due to the special condition of work, which necessitates retaining some provision as a reserve to meet sudden unforeseen demands for the products of the press. The Auditor General suggested, and the Committee agreed with him, that if a reserve was required under this grant, it should be shown as such under a separate sub-head and should not be provided under the ordinary heads of expenditure.

9. Grant No. 25—Interest on ordinary debt.—The large savings under this grant were mainly due to the conversion of a larger number of loans than anticipated in the budget, the non-payment of the interest on War Debt to His Majesty's Government and the reduction of the provision made for "reduction or avoidance of debt". The Committee generally was of opinion that it was not right to reduce the provision for reduction or avoidance of debt in the course of a year merely to avoid a revenue deficit or to provide for any special items of expenditure.

10. Grant No. 26—Interest on miscellaneous obligations.—The voted excess under this grant was due almost entirely to larger payments to the Posts and Telegraphs Department for Post Office Savings Bank and Cash Certificate work. The Committee agreed to recommend to the Assembly that assent should be accorded to the excess grant.

11. Grant No. 27—Staff, Household and Allowances of the Governor General.—In reply to a question by one of the members, it was explained that the expenditure on "contract allowance" and on "State conveyances and motor-cars" was not audited under the orders of the Secretary of State. The Auditor General explained at a later meeting that in respect of these items he had arranged to obtain from the Military Secretary a certificate that the amounts had been spent for the purposes for which they were intended.

12. Grant No. 71—Currency.—Some members of the Committee were of opinion that in the case of the defalcation mentioned under this grant, the superior officers escaped with lighter punishment than the lower paid staff. The Committee decided that, if on going through all the appropriation accounts they found that this was generally the case, they would draw special attention to the matter in their report.

13. Grant No. 72—Mint.—With regard to the non-verification of stores in the Bombay Mint, the Finance Secretary stated that he had later information that the verification was actually done in 1935. The Committee desired that instructions should be issued to the Mint Master that it was very important that the verification of stores should be done every year. The Committee also desired that the question of writing down the obsolete stores should be considered.

14. The Committee also went through the Appropriation Accounts relating to Grants Nos. 43-Audit, 74-Superannuation Allowances and Pensions and 76-Miscellaneous.

The Committee then adjourned till 10-30 A.M. on Tuesday, the 13th August 1935.

Education, Health and Lands Department.

Mr. K. P. S. MENON, I.C.S., Additional Deputy Secretary, Education, Health and Lands Department.

15. The Committee took up the examination of the appropriation accounts and connected documents relating to the Department of Education, Health and Lands.

16. Grant No. 48—Survey of India.—The Committee was informed that the large variations under this grant were mainly due to the difficulty of estimating the work to be done for provincial Governments and consequent recoveries from them. The Committee realised the difficulties, but desired that the Finance Department, while scrutinising the estimates, should, in consultation with the Education, Health and Lands Department and the Surveyor General, take into consideration the past variations and try to make the estimate as accurate as possible.

17. The Committee then took up for consideration the question of reducing the size of the Mathematical Instrument Office, Calcutta, as a result of the decision of the Army Department to get their work done through their own agencies and small demands from provincial Governments and other Departments of the Government of India. The Committee was informed that the Surveyor General had proposed certain reductions to the extent of about Rs. 20,000 a year. The Committee felt that these reductions were considerably less than the loss of revenue from the Army and the Department should seriously consider whether reductions on a higher scale were not possible; if even after these reductions it is found that the office is not able to pay itself, the question of closing it down should be seriously considered.

18. Grant No. 51—Botanical Survey.—The Committee agreed with the Auditor General that every effort should be made to improve the accounting arrangements at the Government of Bengal Quinine Factory, Mungpoo. As regards the surplus stock of quinine held by the Government of India, Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai informed the Committee that they have decided to keep a reserve stock of 150,000 lbs. Excluding this, the surplus was only 79,000 lbs. out of which they were distributing 44,000 lbs. to the provinces for free distribution subject to the condition that their own distribution was not in any way reduced owing to this free supply by the Government of India.

19. Grant No. 53—Archæology.—The Committee desired to have a report next year on the question of the new rules proposed for the accounting of works expenditure in the Archæological Department.

20. Grant No. 59—Agriculture.—The Committee did not agree with the view expressed by the Director of Agricultural Research Institute at Pusa that the maintenance of valued stores account was not necessary. The Committee considered that these accounts were important, and that they should be maintained. They therefore desired that the Education Department should issue necessary instructions to the Director.

The Committee adjourned for lunch till 2-30 P.M.

21. The Committee went through the appropriation accounts relating to Grant No. 61-Civil Veterinary Services and the portion of Grant No. 82 relating to Andaman Forests. The Committee also considered the memorandum furnished by the Department of Education, Health and Lands regarding the separation of the commercial accounts of the Mathematical Instruments Office, Calcutta, into two portions, namely, serviceable stores and workshops. The proposal of the Education, Health and Lands Department was that a regular commercial account should be maintained only in respect of the workshops, while in respect of serviceable stores section only a revenue and expenditure account should be maintained. The Committee did not come to any conclusion whether a mere revenue and expenditure account in respect of the latter was sufficient.

22. The Committee then took up the consideration of the appropriation accounts relating to the Finance Department.

23. Grants Nos. 76A—Expenditure on retrenched personnel charged to revenue and 96A—Expenditure on retrenched personnel charged to capital.—The Committee agreed to recommend to the Assembly to assent to the excess grants which arose owing to a misunderstanding. The Accountant General, Central Revenues, explained how the misunderstanding arose and what steps he had taken to prevent its recurrence.

24. Grant No. 76C—Transfer to Fund for reconstruction of earthquake damages.—In this case also the Committee agreed to recommend to the Assembly to assent to the excess grant. The Committee desired that a progressive account of the expenditure from this fund and similar other funds should be included in the appropriation accounts of the Accountant General, Central Revenues. The Auditor General agreed.

25. The Committee then went through Grants Nos. 77-Refunds, 86-Expenditure in England under the control of the Secretary of State, 87-Expenditure in England under the control of the High Commissioner, 88-Capital outlay on Security Printing, 93-Capital outlay on Currency Note Press, 96-Commuted Value of Pensions and the non-voted appropriation for Territorial and Political pensions.

26. The Committee then adjourned till 10-30 A.M. on the 15th August 1935.

35. The Committee examined in great detail the review on the accounts of the Central Publication Branch and the audit comments thereon. The Committee noted with concern the remarks of the Audit Officer that a test audit of the accounts for 1932-33 revealed innumerable irregularities in the maintenance of the stock of publications, etc., and in the accounting thereof. Mr. Clow admitted that the remarks of the audit officer were justified, and explained in detail the various difficulties in the way of rectifying the irregularities. He further explained that at present there was a large number of superfluous publications and they were having a general clean-up. After this was completed, they proposed to have an actual verification of stock and to open new registers with the actual stock-in-hand. The Auditor General remarked that no improvement could be expected until the standard of the staff was raised. The Committee desired that special steps should be taken to this end.

36. The Committee was informed that the question of allocation of Ecclesiastical expenditure between the Civil and the Army Departments was still under the consideration of the Government of India. The Committee expressed some dissatisfaction at the delay in settling this matter and hoped that it would soon be brought to some conclusion.

37. The Committee then went through the appropriation accounts relating to Grants Nos. 22-Irrigation, Navigation, etc., 49-Meteorology, 50-Geological Survey, 63-Aviation, 69-Miscellaneous Departments, 75-Stationery and Printing, 76-Miscellaneous and 97-Delhi Capital Outlay. The Committee agreed to recommend to the Assembly to assent to the excess grants under Grants Nos. 50 and 76.

38. The Committee then adjourned till 10-30 A.M. on Friday, the 16th August 1935.

39. The Committee continued the examination of the appropriation accounts and connected documents relating to the Industries and Labour Department.

40. Grant No. 70—Indian Stores Department.—The Committee discussed in great detail with the Chief Controller the appropriation accounts of the Indian Stores Department, the policy of the Department in helping Indian industries, etc. The Committee was informed that the Government of India would very shortly come to a decision regarding the question of reducing the strength of the London Stores Department and making it a part of the Indian Stores Department. The Committee decided to postpone any comments on this question till the decision of the Government of India was known. The Committee agreed to recommend to the Assembly to assent to the excess grant under this Grant.

41. Grant No. 73—Civil Works.—Some members of the Committee expressed the opinion that there was considerable scope for improvement in the budgeting for civil works. The Auditor General explained that formerly there were no proper rules for budgeting for civil works, but definite rules were prescribed two years ago and there ought to be some improvement in the appropriation accounts of later years. The Auditor General desired to know whether any decision had been reached as to the terms on which certain assets were transferred to the New Delhi Municipal Committee. The Committee was informed that assets costing about Rs. 1,73,00,000 were handed over to the Municipal Committee at a written down value of Rs. 60 lakhs, and the question of sanctioning a loan to the Municipality to cover this was under consideration. The Committee desired that the Finance Department should look into this matter also while considering the question of audit of the Municipal accounts previously raised by the Auditor General.

44. The Committee then took up the examination of the appropriation accounts and connected documents relating to the Foreign and Political Department.

45. Item 7 of the quarterly statement—page 334 of the Appropriation Report—Unauthorised excluded funds in the North-West Frontier Province.—The Committee was informed that the total number of such funds was 30 including 3 recently discovered by the audit officer. Of these, the important ones were the Motor Lorry Depreciation Funds and the Khassadar Fund. The Motor Lorry Depreciation Funds have already been closed. As regards the Khassadar Fund, orders have been issued to close the fund and detailed instructions have been issued to regulate the various budget grants relating to the Khassadars. These orders were issued with the concurrence of the Auditor General in May last and steps are being taken to carry them out and to close the fund. The other funds are minor ones, and each one of them is being scrutinised and orders are being issued to close down the funds which are unnecessary and to continue those that are necessary under proper sanction and regular audit. 48. The Committee took up the examination of the appropriation accounts and connected documents relating to the Central Board of Revenue and the remaining two appropriation accounts relating to the Finance Department.

49. Audit of customs revenue.—The Auditor General explained to the Committee the system of audit of customs revenue in force three years before, and the revised system of concurrent audit which was introduced then on a temporary basis. He said that, as the new system had worked smoothly and was better than the old one, he had gone up to the Government of India to make it permanent. The Committee agreed with the Auditor General that the new system was better and should be continued.

50. The Committee then went through the appropriation accounts in respect of Grants Nos. 16-Customs, 17-Taxes on Income, 18-Salt, 19-Opium and 77-Refunds.

51. The Committee then examined the appropriation accounts in respect of Grants Nos. 98-Interest-free Advances and 99-Loans and Advances bearing interest.

52. The Committee then adjourned till the next day.

53. The Committee took up the examination of the appropriation accounts and connected documents relating to the Posts and Telegraphs Department.

54. Para. 3 of the Auditor General's letter—Financial position of the Department.—In 1933-34 the Department incurred a loss of about half of crore ; in 1934-35, after suspending the allocation to the depreciation fund to the extent of about 27 lakhs, the revised estimate showed a profit of about 14 lakhs, and the budget for 1935-36 anticipated a loss of about 13 lakhs after :—

- (1) restoring about 19 lakhs of the provision for the depreciation fund ;
- (2) providing 27 lakhs for the restoration of the pay cut ; and
- (3) allowing for normal increments in the pay of staff amounting to about 15 lakhs.

The Committee was informed that the approximate actuals of the year 1934-35 were better than the revised estimate, and that they showed a surplus of about 37 lakhs. The various steps which the Department was taking to reduce expenditure and to increase revenue were explained to the Committee, namely introduction of revised scales of pay, giving effect to such recommendations of the Postal Enquiry Committee as were accepted by Government, the reduction in telephone and telegram charges, the introduction of the 1 anna letter, etc. The general conclusion reached was that in the near future the Department should be able to produce a balanced budget, though they may not be able to produce a disposable surplus. In this connection the question of the contribution to the depreciation fund was discussed in great detail. The Committee was informed that no final decision had yet been reached as to the exact amount of the contribution, but it was generally agreed that the existing contribution was rather on the high side, and that the Finance Member should consider very carefully to what extent it could be safely reduced. Some of the unofficial members of the Committee were of the opinion that if the contribution to the depreciation fund was restricted to the amount that was absolutely necessary, it might be possible to have a disposable surplus either for the improvement of postal facilities or for the reduction of rates.

Incidentally, the Committee was in general agreement with the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, that, instead of a Depreciation Reserve Fund calculated on a pseudo-scientific basis, the department should constitute a Renewals and Replacement Reserve Fund on the basis of what is actually required year after year to cover renewals and replacements with a small margin ; the contribution to such a fund should, of course, be subject to periodical review.

55. The Committee then took up the Memorandum on the percentage of the cost of establishment to expenditure on works in the Department. After considerable discussion they came to the conclusion that, if these statistics could be developed so as to afford a useful basis of comparison between different circles, they would be useful, but if they could not be utilised in that way, there was prima facie reason for abandoning them.

The Committee then adjourned till 2-30 P.M.

ANNEXURE A.

Memorandum on the financial position of the Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department furnished by the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs.

(NOTE.—Figures unless otherwise stated are in thousands of rupees.)

1932-33.

The accounts for the year 1932-33 closed with a loss of 41,89, the expenditure charged to revenue being 10,97,29, while the revenue was 10,55,40.

1933-34.

The following statement compares the actual results of 1933-34 with the anticipations, namely, the original estimates made before the beginning of the year and the revised estimates prepared near its end :—

|                                | Budget Estimate. | Revised Estimate. | Actuals. |
|--------------------------------|------------------|-------------------|----------|
| Revenue .. .. .                | 10,81,34         | 10,76,74          | 10,72,62 |
| Expenditure .. .. .            | 11,38,64         | 11,27,46          | 11,24,56 |
| Profit (+) or Loss (—) .. .. . | —57,20           | —51,72            | —51,94   |

The decrease of 8,72 in the revenue as compared with the budget estimate is chiefly due to a fall of 12,12 under sale of stamps which was partially counter-balanced by an increase of 4,27 in telephone receipts, the variations under the other heads cancelling each other out. Fortunately, the actual expenditure during the year was less than the budget estimate by 13,98 the improvement being chiefly the result of the efforts to restrict expenditure and an increase in the credits to working expenses consequent on increased Savings Bank transactions. The final loss on the working of the Department was thus about Rs. 5 lakhs less than the original estimates.

The revenue during 1933-34 showed an increase of 17.22 over 1932-33. This improvement was, however, not real, as it includes a receipt of about Rs. 15½ lakhs on account of interest on the Depreciation Fund consequent on the conversion of the Sinking Fund into a Straight Line Depreciation Fund with effect from the accounts for 1933-34 and the increase in revenue on this account was more than offset by the larger contribution required to be made to the Depreciation Fund under the revised system. The real improvement in revenue was thus only Rs. 1.68 lakhs, but, small as it is, it is indicative of the turning of the tide. The expenditure increased by Rs. 27¼ lakhs as compared with 1932-33 and the loss for the year was therefore about Rs. 10 lakhs more than in that year. If, however, allowance is made for the net additional expenditure of Rs. 5.35 lakhs on account of the Depreciation Fund adjustments under the revised method and on account of the restoration of one-half of the cut in salaries amounting to Rs. 28 lakhs there is a net improvement in 1933-34 of about Rs. 23 lakhs over the working of the previous year, as, excluding these items, the loss on the year's working would be about Rs. 19 lakhs as against Rs. 42 lakhs in 1932-33.

1934-35.

The budget and revised estimates for 1934-35 were as follows :—

|                        | BudgetEstimate,1934-35. | RevisedEstimate,1934-35. |
|------------------------|---------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| Revenue .. .. .        | 10,71,26                        | 11,05,35                         |
| Expenditure .. .. .    | 10,85,73                        | 10,91,54                         |
| Profit (+) or loss (—) | —14,47                          | +13,81                           |

The trend of receipts towards the close of 1933-34 appeared to justify a more cheerful outlook, and after allowing for the reduced postage and telegram rates the revenue estimate for 1934-35 was placed at very nearly the actuals for the preceding year. On the expenditure side the contribution to the Depreciation Fund was, as a temporary measure, limited to Rs. 9 lakhs representing the sum required for meeting the cost of renewals and replacements during the year. It is about Rs. 27 lakhs less than the contribution required to be made under the normal operation of the rules and about Rs. 35 lakhs less than in the previous year.

The improvement in revenue during the first 7 months of the year exceeded expectations and the revised estimate allows for this. The slight increase in expenditure in the revised estimate is chiefly due to the payments connected with the retrenchment concessions being larger than anticipated. It should also be mentioned that these concessions were extended until the close of the year in order to enable the Department to complete its retrenchment plans. The year is, on the whole, expected to close with a profit of Rs. 13.81 lakhs.

The actuals for the year available so far which will probably be modified slightly by accounts adjustments before the accounts are finally closed indicate that the revised estimate will be realised. Comparing the revised estimates for 1934-35 with the actuals for 1933-34, the revenue shows an increase of about Rs. 33 lakhs while expenditure is less by Rs. 33 lakhs. It must, however, be remembered that the bulk of the decrease in expenditure is accounted for by the reduction in the contribution to the Depreciation Fund mentioned already. Even after allowing for this special reduction the expenditure for the year shows a substantial decrease over the previous year if allowance is made for the normal increments to the pay of staff which amounts to about Rs. 15 lakhs a year.

Prospects for 1935-36.

The estimates for 1935-36 assume that the improvement in trade and economic conditions generally will continue and the revenue has been placed at 11,32,57 or an increase of about Rs. 27 lakhs over the revised estimates for 1934-35, while the expenditure is estimated at 11,45,58 which is about Rs. 54 lakhs more than the revised expenditure estimate for 1934-35 and the year is expected to close with a loss of Rs. 13 lakhs. The main items which have contributed to the worsening of the position as compared with 1934-35 are the restoration of the remainder of the cut in pay costing about Rs. 27 lakhs, the normal increment in the pay of the staff amounting roughly to Rs. 15 lakhs and the partial restoration, pending further investigation, of the provision for depreciation not at its old rate but still at a rate which is Rs. 19 lakhs higher than it was in 1934-35.

It may be mentioned that the estimated revenue for 1935-36 is higher (by about Rs. 3 lakhs) than the highest revenue earned during the past 10 years. But if allowance is made for the interest on Depreciation Fund balances (which is credited to Revenue since 1933-34 as explained already) the revenue expected in 1935-36 will be found to be less than the highest figure reached in 1929-30 by about Rs. 12 lakhs. The expenditure (even after the restoration of the salary cut) is, however, less than in the two years immediately preceding the year in which the salary cuts were introduced and the loss in the year's working is also expected to be less than in any of the years from 1927-28 to 1933-34.

On the receipt side the possibility of securing more traffic is being examined. For example, the rates for telephones have been overhauled and reduced and new productive works calculated to bring in more traffic have been undertaken. The effect of the reductions in the postage and telegram rates made last year is being watched carefully. As regards expenditure, no further economies on a large scale can be expected in the near future. There will in due course be some savings as a result of some of those recommendations of the Telegraph Establishment Enquiry Committee which have been accepted by Government. The Report of the Postal Enquiry Committee has also been received and is under examination, but it is not possible to say at present what savings, if any, can be secured. The special expenditure on retrenched personnel will disappear, but it will to some extent be reflected in an increased pension bill. The revised scales of pay introduced recently will appreciably reduce the pay bill of the Department. It will, however, be some years before its full effect will be visible. On the whole, therefore, if the improvement in trade conditions which commenced in 1933-34 continues, the Department should soon be able to balance its budget.

56. The Committee went through the appropriation accounts of the Posts and Telegraphs Department in detail. They were struck by the large number of major variations between the estimates and actuals. The Auditor General drew the special attention of the Committee to the consistent over-budgeting under the Repairs grant during the last ten years. Even in cases where variations under sub-head totals were not great, this was only the result of large excesses and savings under the detailed heads. The Committee was informed that there were serious faults in the system of budgeting in 1933-34 and previous years, and that the Department had taken steps the result of which would be noticeable in later appropriation accounts. The Committee expressed the opinion that though variations within a grant are less important than variations in the grant as a whole, even here large variations are to be deprecated as showing a certain indefiniteness in estimating in detail. Judging from the accounts of 1933-34, the Committee was definitely of opinion that budgeting and control of expenditure in the Department were unsatisfactory and hoped that the steps which had already been taken by the department would improve the position in future years.

57. The Committee desired that the Stores and Workshop Suspense accounts should be shown separately in future Appropriation Accounts.

58. The Committee accepted the suggestion of the Auditor General that the balance sheet on page 119 of the Appropriation Accounts should be discontinued as it served no useful purpose.

The Committee then adjourned till 11 A.M. on Thursday, the 22nd August 1935.

60. As regards the general principle raised in paragraph 22 of the proceedings of the Military Accounts Committee, the Army Secretary gave a general explanation of the rules, etc., relating to procedure by court martial and in particular emphasised the differences between military and civil law which made the normal canons of the latter only partially applicable to the former.

61. The Committee endorsed the recommendations and observations of the Military Accounts Committee. They desired to lay special stress on the importance of completing the revision of the Army regulations as early as possible.

| The unauthorised local funds in the North West Frontier Province Agencies are of very long standing originating generally with the inception of the Agencies. The Government of India have impressed on the Local Government the necessity for closing down all such funds which cannot be regarded as genuine local funds, and to submit proposals for bringing the transactions into Government account. This necessitates a detailed examination of every item of revenue and expenditure of each fund and a separation of genuine local funds from legitimate Government transactions, and the issue of orders by the competent authority sanctioning the expenditure, inclusion of budget provision and so on. This is a complicated matter involving some time, but the necessary action to attain the objective is being actively taken by the Local Government and the Government of India. Orders have already been issued for closing down the Khassadari funds and the motor lorry depreciation funds which were amongst the largest of such funds. The detailed proposals for regularising the remaining funds in Waziristan have been received and are under consideration in consultation with the Comptroller. |
| A list of other funds and the detailed recommendations of the Local Government are awaited. The latter have been pressed to submit proposals for reaching a final settlement before the budget for 1936-37 is taken up.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |

ANNEXURE.

The four rulings of the Judge Advocate General to which reference was made in paragraph 50 of the Report of the Director of Army Audit, paragraph 11 of Auditor General's letter and paragraph 24 of the Report of the Military Accounts Committee, have been further examined and the following conclusions reached in regard to them :—

- (i) Government are entitled to recover overissues by deductions from pay only when they are specifically empowered to do so by Act of Parliament, by Royal Warrant, or by an Act of the Indian Legislature.
- (ii) An overissue made through an error as to the facts is legally recoverable as a public claim either from the recipient or from the person responsible for the overissue ; and Government may waive recovery from the recipient without prejudice to their power of recovery from the person responsible.
- (iii) An overissue made through an error as to the law (which includes regulations) is not legally recoverable from the recipient, but is recoverable from the person responsible for it when it amounts to an irregular expenditure of public money of which no satisfactory explanation is given by that person. It has been decided, however, to continue the past practice of attempting first of all to get the recipient to make good the overissue, before making recovery from the issuing officer. This appears to be the more equitable procedure as the recipient must as a rule have been in possession of the facts of the case and in any case has enjoyed the benefit of the overissue.
- (iv) In view of Army Department Office Order No. 48 of 1931 and India Army Order No. 628 of 1933 (attached), no further action is necessary to ensure that irregular expenditure is not regularised until all possible recoveries have been made.
- (v) It is illegal to make recovery save where an ascertained loss or an ascertained part of a greater aggregate loss has been identified as having been occasioned by the wrongful act or negligence of the particular officer from whom the recovery is sought to be made.

COPY OF ARMY DEPARTMENT OFFICE ORDER NO. 48, DATED THE 3RD NOVEMBER 1931.

Losses.—In any case of loss caused to Government through the irregular or erroneous action of any officer or officers, the question of the recovery of the amount of the loss, in whole or in part, from the officer or officers concerned, must be fully investigated and settled before the case is recommended to Government for the loss to be written off.

COPY OF INDIA ARMY ORDER NO. 628 OF 1933.

Losses.—Questions relating to losses or irregular expenditure of money or stores will only be submitted to the authority competent to dispose of them after a full examination. The extent, if any, to which the officer responsible for the loss or for sanction of the irregular expenditure can be held personally liable will be considered. A recommendation will be recorded in each case as to whether the amount of the loss or irregular expenditure should be recovered in whole or in part from the officer concerned. Reasons in full for this recommendation will be submitted to the competent authority.

APPENDIX III.

LETTER FROM SIR ERNEST BURDON, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., I.C.S., AUDITOR GENERAL IN INDIA, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, FINANCE DEPARTMENT, NO. 172-REF. 4-35, DATED THE 31ST MAY 1935.

SUBJECT :—Appropriation Accounts (Civil) 1933-34 and the Audit Report 1935.

In accordance with the provisions of rule 15 (1) of the Auditor General's Rules framed under Section 96 D(1) of the Government of India Act, I have the honour to transmit herewith two copies of the Appropriation Accounts of the Central Government (Civil) for the year 1933-34 and the Audit Report, 1935, together with two copies of the Commercial Appendix to these documents, prepared by the Accountant General, Central Revenues, for submission to the Public Accounts Committee and for necessary action by the Government of India.

2. Two copies of the accounts of receipts and disbursements of the Secretary of State and the High Commissioner for India, on behalf of the Central Government, under the heads other than those relating to Military Services, for the year 1933-34, together with two copies of the relevant Appropriation Accounts, and the reports thereon, prepared by the Auditor of Indian Home Accounts, are also forwarded.

3. I append as usual the following subsidiary statements :—

Statement A*—giving particulars of all Central Voted Grants and Non-voted Appropriations for the year 1933-34, the expenditure incurred against them and variations between the two.

Statement B—showing the excesses over voted grants which require the vote of the Legislative Assembly.

Statement C—showing excesses over Non-voted Appropriations which require the sanction of the Government of India, Finance Department.

4. The Appropriation Accounts and the Audit Report of the Accountant General, Central Revenues, together with the Appendix containing Commercial Accounts, have, as usual, been examined in detail under my instructions and I find them generally to be in order. There is one new feature which has been introduced under my instructions, namely, a brief summary of the financial results of the year has been included in chapter II of the report. The essential purpose of the report is to give the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislative Assembly a formal opportunity of reviewing the financial administration, and it seems that at the least it may be convenient to present on such an occasion a picture, if only in outline, of the complete account, including receipts. The Appropriation Accounts of expenditure against grants, etc., illustrate only one aspect of the financial administration.

5. Following the practice introduced last year which has been approved by Government and the Public Accounts Committee I have added a "Key" statement (Statement D) in which I have brought together

(a) Firstly, a reference to each of the Appropriation Accounts of grants and appropriations for which each of the several departments of Government is responsible, and *See Appendix II.

(b) Secondly, linked with the references to the Appropriation Account of each grant, etc., enumerated as in (a) preceding, all points of importance arising out of each account which the Accountant General has brought to notice either in his general analysis or elsewhere.

The purpose of the "Key" statement is to give practical assistance to the departments of Government and the members of the Public Accounts Committee in carrying out the examination of the accounts and the report which now devolves upon them.

6. The last enclosure to this letter, Statement E, gives particulars of the overdrafts on current account taken by the provincial Governments at the expense of the Central Government during the year under report. A comparison of the figures with the corresponding figures of 1932-33 indicates that some improvement has again been effected. Further, I understand that as part of the financial arrangements to be adopted under the new constitution the balances of the provincial Governments are to be held entirely separate from the balances of the Federal Government, and that as one consequence of this the provincial Governments will in future be solely responsible to provide ways and means for themselves and will no longer be permitted to obtain overdrafts gratuitously from the Central Government.

APPENDIX IV.

LETTER FROM THE AUDITOR GENERAL, TO THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT,
GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, NO. 99-REP./6-35, DATED THE 27TH MARCH 1935.

SUBJECT :—*Appropriation Accounts (Posts and Telegraphs Department)
1933-34 and the Audit Report 1935.*

With reference to rule 15 (1) of the Auditor General's Rules framed under Section 96D (1) of the Government of India Act, I have the honour to transmit herewith, for submission to the Committee on Public Accounts, and for necessary action by the Government of India, two copies of the Appropriation Accounts of the Posts and Telegraphs Department for the year 1933-34 and the Audit Report, 1935, issued by the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs.

2. The Accounts and the Report have, as usual, been subjected to a detailed examination in my office. I have satisfied myself that the Accounts are in order and that the Report contains all the information necessary for the purposes of the Public Accounts Committee.

It will be seen that the report, while it is brief, is at the same time comprehensive ; and there is nothing of substance which I can add to it. For the convenience of the Public Accounts Committee, however, I invite particular attention to the Accountant General's discussion of the following topics :—

- (a) The financial position of the Department—paragraphs 55 to 56.
- (b) The standard of financial administration—paragraphs 80 to 88.
- (c) The balance of stores in stock—paragraphs 60 to 62.
- (d) The percentage cost of establishment employed on works—paragraph 89.

3. The financial position of the Posts and Telegraphs Department is not yet satisfactory ; but for the first time in recent years the accounts show some signs of improvement and of an approach to a more stable and certain position. It will be seen also that the year was marked by active effort to improve the financial administration of the Department in system and in practice. I am sure that the effort has been well directed ; and I trust that the results disclosed by the accounts of the current and subsequent years will show that it has been successful.

APPENDIX V-A.

LETTER FROM THE AUDITOR GENERAL, TO THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT,
GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, NO. T.336-REP./5-35, DATED THE 5TH JUNE 1935.

SUBJECT :—Appropriation Accounts (Defence Services) 1933-34 and the Audit Report 1935.

I have the honour to forward herewith for necessary action two copies of the Appropriation Accounts of the Defence Services for the year 1933-34 prepared by the Financial Adviser, Military Finance, together with two copies of the Audit Report, 1935, prepared by the Director of Army Audit.

I also transmit herewith two copies of the accounts of receipts and disbursements of the Secretary of State and the High Commissioner for India on account of the Central Government in respect of Defence Services for the year 1933-34, together with two copies of the relevant Appropriation Accounts, and the Reports thereon prepared by the Auditor of Indian Home Accounts.

It is understood that these documents will, as usual, be subjected to a preliminary examination by the Military Accounts Committee before being presented to the Public Accounts Committee.

2. Outstanding questions.—I presume that the Military Accounts Committee will, as usual, first go through the list of questions outstanding from previous discussions (Appropriation Accounts—Appendix A). Some of the questions included in this appendix are of considerable importance.

3. Appropriation audit.—I invite attention to the Financial Adviser's review of the financial administration of the year and of the results of his appropriation audit which is given in paragraphs 1 to 25 of the text preceding the Appropriation Accounts. As in previous years, the analysis thus given is full and accurate, and I consider that, so far as control of expenditure in bulk is concerned, the financial administration of the year has been shown to be careful, efficient and, in the abnormal circumstances mentioned by the Financial Adviser, successful.

4. Review of Military Engineer Services expenditure.—I next invite attention to the special review of the Military Engineer Services expenditure of the year given in paragraphs 147 to 162 of the Financial Adviser's presentation of the Appropriation Accounts. From paragraph 159 it will be seen that the Financial Adviser has carried out a detailed examination of variations which have occurred between the estimates of cost of individual works and the actual expenditure incurred. This is in pursuance of a view expressed in recent years (cf. item 1, Appendix A—outstanding questions) that particular attention should be given to this aspect of the financial control of Military Engineer Services expenditure. The Director of Army Audit has not found it necessary to express any comment of his own as regards such variations, and I understand that actually control in this respect has shown improvement. At the same time, I wish to make the two following suggestions for the future, namely—

- (1) that variations from (a) original estimates and (b) the year's appropriation, in the case of works of major importance or higher value, should be exhibited in the Appropriation Accounts ;
- (2) that a detailed account of the utilisation of the Military Engineer Services Reserve might also be given in the Appropriation Accounts.

The latter of these suggestions is prompted, inter alia, by the decision so far reached on item 4 of Appendix A—outstanding questions.

There are other passages of interest which bear upon the question of improving the whole system of administration of Military Engineer

As in previous years, the analysis thus given is full and accurate, and I consider that, so far as control of expenditure in bulk is concerned, the financial administration of the year has been shown to be careful, efficient and, in the abnormal circumstances mentioned by the Financial Adviser, successful.

4. Review of Military Engineer Services expenditure.—I next invite attention to the special review of the Military Engineer Services expenditure of the year given in paragraphs 147 to 162 of the Financial Adviser's presentation of the Appropriation Accounts. From paragraph 159 it will be seen that the Financial Adviser has carried out a detailed examination of variations which have occurred between the estimates of cost of individual works and the actual expenditure incurred. This is in pursuance of a view expressed in recent years (cf. item 1, Appendix A—outstanding questions) that particular attention should be given to this aspect of the financial control of Military Engineer Services expenditure. The Director of Army Audit has not found it necessary to express any comment of his own as regards such variations, and I understand that actually control in this respect has shown improvement. At the same time, I wish to make the two following suggestions for the future, namely—

- (1) that variations from (a) original estimates and (b) the year's appropriation, in the case of works of major importance or higher value, should be exhibited in the Appropriation Accounts;
- (2) that a detailed account of the utilisation of the Military Engineer Services Reserve might also be given in the Appropriation Accounts.

The latter of these suggestions is prompted, inter alia, by the decision so far reached on item 4 of Appendix A—outstanding questions.

There are other passages of interest which bear upon the question of improving the whole system of administration of Military Engineer

Services expenditure. Paragraph 56 of the Audit Report refers to certain new arrangements and new machinery which are being introduced for the purpose of strengthening financial control. Item 13 in Appendix A—outstanding questions—reproduces the proposal made by the Public Accounts Committee last year, namely, that the Military Accountant General and Auditor General should examine the desirability of having trained Works Accountants for Military Engineer Services audit and that they should make joint recommendations. Owing to delay for which I am afraid my own Department is responsible this question has not yet been pressed to a final conclusion. I note, however, that in the course of the year further evidence has been forthcoming which strengthens my belief that the existing system under which the Military Accounts Department does not undertake to produce trained Works Accountants, like the Divisional Accountants in the offices of Civil Accountants General and in the Civil Public Works Department Divisions, is definitely unsatisfactory. In departmental discussions of the year the question was also raised whether it is right that the system of accounts, audit and disbursement prevailing in the Military Engineer Services cum the Military Accounts Department should be so widely divergent from that which long experience has shown to be desirable in the Civil Public Works Department: and actually in the course of last month a Committee was appointed which has already reported and has dealt with this matter in a very satisfactory way. On all matters of important principle the Engineer-in-Chief, the Financial Adviser, Military Finance, and my department are now definitely agreed, and I trust that the recommendations of the Committee which include a measure of specialisation in the training of subordinate accounts staff will soon be adopted.

5. Appendix E—Stores Transactions.—Attention is invited to paragraphs 68 to 70 of the Audit Report. There are two questions outstanding in regard to the adequacy of the information furnished in this appendix, the presentation of which has been instituted as a result of discussion in the Military Accounts Committee on the Accounts of 1929-30. These questions are—

(a) The possibility of amplifying the first part of Appendix E so as to give information regarding a larger number of categories of stores. At present, there are certain important omissions, for example Mechanical Transport stores.

(b) The exhibition in a valued statement of surplus and obsolete stores which have been disposed of during the year. At present no information in regard to these is furnished, but the Financial Adviser, at my request, has undertaken to maintain figures of losses (which may of course be inevitable losses) on disposal of obsolete and surplus stores. A beginning has already been made with this, and here also as in (a) above there is a question of the possibility of exhibiting losses under all important categories of stores, and also the question of how far the information so tabulated can be used as an instrument of control and of detecting cases of overstocking. The matter will be pursued by me in consultation with the Financial Adviser but the Military Accounts Committee might, I think, usefully give their consideration also to this matter and form an opinion whether what is being done is likely to be advantageous.

The question of the adequacy of the present arrangements for the control of expenditure on stores also arises out of the qualification in the audit certificate of the Military Accountant-General given in paragraph 38 of the Financial Adviser's Appropriation Accounts. The question is not a new one, vide item 6 of Appendix A—outstanding questions. As regards Royal Air Force Stores in particular, the question of improving the present "provisioning" arrangements and of authoritatively prescribing suitable limitations on store holding has received special, though only preliminary attention, during the past year, and the Military Accounts Committee when they meet will, I have no doubt, wish to have any further information then available on this important subject.

6. Appendix L—Special expenditure on Territorial Force.—The Director of Army Audit expects to have final figures available by the time the Military Accounts Committee meet. The point of concrete financial importance will be whether the amount refundable to general revenues has been agreed upon and refunded.

7. Financial irregularities—Report of the Director of Army Audit, paragraphs 6 to 51.—The question of the number and the significance of financial irregularities occurring in the administration of the Defence Services received special attention in last year's report when I was constrained to observe that the cases brought to notice taken as a whole seemed to afford evidence that there was considerable laxity of view and an insufficient sense of responsibility in financial matters, not in the administration as viewed in the abstract, but amongst individuals. It is regrettable that this year's report should again include an undesirably large number of cases pointing to the same conclusion. The following appear to be the most important types of irregularity reported on this occasion—

- (1) Cases of serious fraud attributable to lax supervision and also in some instances to ineffectual audit by the Local Audit Branch of the Military Accounts Department—vide paragraphs 24, 25, 31, 32, 35 and 46. The case reported in paragraph 29 also merits attention.
- (2) Cases of inadmissible money claims supported by incorrect certificates—vide paragraphs 22, 23, 33, 37, 38, 39 and 45. In connection with these and the remarks in paragraph 8-C of the Audit Report it is relevant to quote the observation made last year by the Military Accounts Committee.

"They also desired to record their opinion that the punishment awarded in some cases was entirely inadequate and that the administrative authorities appeared to take a far too lenient view of cases where the furnishing of false certificates was deliberate."

I hope that the instructions which last year His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief undertook, to issue, to ensure more stringent observance of financial principles, will be reflected in the results of future years.

APPENDIX V-B.

LETTER FROM THE AUDITOR-GENERAL, TO THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT,
1935.

Audit Report 1935.*

In continuation of my letter No. T-336-Rep.5-35, dated the 5th June 1935, forwarding copies of the Accounts and Report mentioned above, I have the honour to forward herewith for necessary action two copies of the Commercial Appendix to the Appropriation Accounts of the Defence Services for the year 1933-34 and the Report of the Director of Army Audit thereon.

2. I also forward herewith two copies of the General Review of the Financial Adviser, Military Finance, on the accounts of the manufacturing concerns of the Army for 1933-34. The asterisks and their explanatory remarks appearing on pages 8 and 9 of this Review may be treated as cancelled as the figures in question have since been finally accepted by the Director of Army Audit.

3. This is the first occasion on which a general review on the accounts of the manufacturing concerns of the Army has been prepared by the Financial Adviser, Military Finance. In my opinion this review is excellent, and, in point of substance, this year's presentation of these commercial accounts is quite the best that has so far been made. It is hoped that there will be a further improvement next year when the Financial Adviser's review, the commercial accounts themselves and the report of the Director of Army Audit are brought together in one volume.

4. There is nothing in the Financial Adviser's General Review or in the report of the Director of Army Audit which I desire to qualify. There are however certain individual matters which have attracted my attention and to which I wish to draw the attention of the Public Accounts Committee. These are :—

(1) Okara Farm.—Utilisation of profits (paragraph 8 of Financial Adviser's General Review).

(2) Medical Store Depots and Workshops.—The loss on working, the method of costing and the allocation of the cost of the Stores Section of the Director-General, Indian Medical Service (paragraphs 10 to 12 of Financial Adviser's General Review).

(3) Ordnance and Clothing Factories.—

(a) Issue rates, etc., (paragraph 10 of Director's report and paragraphs 23 to 25 of Financial Adviser's General Review).

(b) Comparative cost of manufacture in England and in India (paragraph 28 of Financial Adviser's General Review).

(c) Stock balances, etc., (paragraphs 12 to 14 of Director's report and paragraphs 17 to 19 of Financial Adviser's General Review).

(d) Irregularities in Building Block Register (paragraph 20 of Director's report).

APPENDIX VI.

Memorandum furnished by the Central Board of Revenue regarding the fixation of a monetary limit below which extra statutory remissions of revenue in the Northern India Salt Revenue Department need not be included in the statements to be submitted annually to the Principal Auditor.

In August 1932, the Government of India, with the concurrence of the Auditor General, issued certain rules for the exhibition of losses in Government Accounts and Appropriation Accounts. Under Note 1 below Rule III, Section I (Annexure), Heads of Departments are required to submit annually to the Principal Auditors concerned statements showing the extra-statutory remissions of revenue and abandonments of claims to revenue sanctioned during the preceding year, unless the Local Governments concerned have fixed monetary limits below which individual remissions need not be included in the statements.

2. In the Kohat Division of the Northern India Salt Revenue Department salt is supplied free of duty and price to the workers in the quarries, the weighment coolies at the Depot and the preventive staff. This concession has been enjoyed by these people for many years. The Government of India have reconsidered the question of the continuance or otherwise of this concession and have, after careful consideration, decided that it should continue and have regularised the existing practice by formal orders. The concession involves the extra-statutory remission of revenue on account of duty. As the duty and price on salt are realised in accordance with an Act of the Legislature and the rules made thereunder by the Governor General in Council, their remission is to be reported to the Principal Auditor unless a limit below which they need not be included in the statements is fixed in consultation with the Public Accounts Committee. The remission of duty granted on this account during 1932-33 amounted to Rs. 281-10-3. No remission of revenue is involved on account of price as the salt at Kohat is the property of the quarry owners and no price is paid to them for the salt supplied free to the staff.

The Government of India propose that the limit below which the remission of duty at Kohat should not be included in the statement should be fixed at Rs. 500.

ANNEXURE TO APPENDIX VI.

EXTRACT FROM RULES FOR THE EXHIBITION OF LOSSES IN THE GOVERNMENT ACCOUNTS AND IN THE APPROPRIATION ACCOUNTS.

SECTION I.—Rules for the guidance of the Executive Officers.

III. Heads of Departments should submit annually to the Principal Auditors concerned statements showing the remissions of revenue and abandonments of claims to revenue sanctioned during the preceding year by the local authorities in exercise of the discretionary powers vested in them and which are not mandatory under a specific provision in a statute or statutory rule. For inclusion in these statements, remissions and abandonments should be classified broadly with reference to the grounds on which they were sanctioned, and a total figure should be given for each class. A brief explanation of the circumstances leading to the remission should be added in the case of each class.

Note 1.—A Local Government may make rules defining remissions and abandonments of revenue for the purpose of this rule, and may, after consultation with its Public Accounts Committee, fix monetary limits below which individual remissions need not be included in the statements.

APPENDIX VII.

Memorandum on the simplification of the procedure of apportionment of receipts and expenditure in the Posts and Telegraphs Department furnished by the Financial Adviser, Posts and Telegraphs (vide paragraph 23 of the proceedings of the third meeting of the Public Accounts Committee at page 32 of Volume I of the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the accounts for 1932-33).

In the memorandum presented to the Public Accounts Committee last year which is printed as Appendix XI at pages 96—119 of Volume I of the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the accounts for 1932-33, the system of apportionment obtaining at present, between the constituent branches of the Posts and Telegraphs Department, of receipts and expenditure which relate to more than one branch has been described. A suitable allocation of the receipts and expenditure is necessary in order to know the financial result of the working of the several branches and it has been generally accepted that the distribution made is fair to the branches concerned. The question was, however, raised in the third meeting of the Public Accounts Committee held on 30th June 1934 whether the existing method of apportionment was not very elaborate and meticulous and whether it was not possible to devise a simpler method of apportioning the cost which might be revised periodically.

2. The matter has been carefully examined in consultation with the Auditor General and the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs. Broadly, the allocation is made on the basis—

- (1) of ad hoc enumeration or calculations ; or
- (2) of booked accounts figures, the actual distribution being made according to fixed percentage or by the application of simple arithmetic or in some cases a lump sum being fixed for a period of years.

3. The existing method of arriving at the adjustments referred to in the second category mentioned above are simple enough and no change is considered necessary.

4. In regard to the first category, however, it has been found feasible to simplify the procedure. The more important cases are briefly mentioned below :—

- (i) Telegraph share of the cost of combined offices.—As explained in paragraph 14 of the memorandum cited in paragraph 1 above the distribution was hitherto made with reference to an elaborate calculation, every year, of the work done by combined offices in respect of telegraph traffic. It has been decided to discontinue this and to determine the telegraph share by multiplying the number of transactions during the year by the average cost per transaction during the last 3 years. The position will be reviewed after 2 years and the rate per transaction will, if necessary, be revised in the light of further experience.

- (ii) Telegraph share of revenue derived from the sale of stamps.—

As an experimental measure, the departmental telegraph offices have recently been intimated to keep an account of the value of postage stamps affixed to inland telegrams so that the telegraph share of revenue might be computed directly and the question of modifying (or dispensing with) the special annual enumeration and compilation which also serves other purposes will be considered after some experience is gained of the new arrangement.

- (iii) In the following cases of interbranch adjustments also, special compilations of statistics will be discontinued as it has been decided for purposes of adjustment to fix a lump sum figure for a period of 3 years :—

- (a) Cost of conveyance by post offices of mail matter of other branches ;
- (b) Issue of service telegrams by other branches ; and
- (c) Despatch of postal service telegrams to Ceylon.

APPENDIX VIII.

Memorandum on the percentage of the cost of establishment to expenditure on works in the Posts and Telegraphs Department, furnished by the Financial Adviser, Posts and Telegraphs, with reference to paragraph 66 of the Proceedings of the Public Accounts Committee relating to the accounts of 1931-32, Part I.

A reference is invited to item 19 of the Statement of recommendations made by the Public Accounts Committee which are outstanding (Appendix I).

The question of compiling cost statistics showing the percentage of the cost of establishment to works expenditure in the Posts and Telegraphs Department has been the subject of examination for some years. Various methods of compilation were attempted, but it was eventually found that the results so obtained were not of much practical value and were not susceptible of comparison between one Circle or Division and another. The principal difficulties in the way of compiling suitable cost statistics are briefly as follows :—

- (1) The bulk of the staff engaged on the work relating to the telegraph and telephone lines and apparatus and plant is there chiefly to ensure the maintenance of telegraph and telephone communications. The work that they do does not bear a definite relation to the works expenditure involved. In other words, the staff is regarded as a sort of insurance against interruptions and will largely have to be retained even if their work measured in terms of 'works' expenditure shows a variation.

- (2) Although the subordinate staff is largely determined with reference to the line mileage (or number of telephone connections, etc.), yet the formula is not uniform as varying standards have had to be fixed in order to make allowance for the difficulty of the country in which the work has to be done (according as the line is along Railway or otherwise) and the nature of the line (Telegraph, Telephone, control wires, etc.), required to be attended to.
- (3) Again, the maintenance expenditure generally allowed per mile of line is also not uniform and varies with the nature of the country and the importance of the line to be attended to.
- (4) Further, the inclusion of expenditure on capital works vitiates the percentages. As such works are undertaken on commercial considerations and are not executed uniformly in all divisions and circles the variations caused by this factor alone are obvious. The establishment employed on capital works consists partly of the regular staff (especially the superior supervisory staff) and partly of special staff.

2. The matter has been examined with a view to isolate as far as possible the disturbing factors mentioned above and cost statistics have now been prepared for two Circles. In compiling them, all expenditure on capital works (including revenue portion) costing above Rs. 5,000 together with the additional staff specially sanctioned therefor has been excluded for the reasons mentioned in the preceding paragraph. Further, only the staff below the rank of Divisional Engineer is taken into account, as it is chiefly the cost of the lower supervisory and subordinate staff which has an intimate relation to the volume of work executed, and for the same reason all overhead charges relating to Direction and Control, Accounts and Audit, etc. have also been excluded. Before, however, these statistics can be properly interpreted it will still be necessary to apply certain corrections. In actual practice, this will largely mean verifying the basic data with reference to which the staff has been regulated. The problem, therefore, resolves itself into one of satisfying ourselves as to the adequacy of the basis of calculations of staff. As stated already, the bulk of the staff is determined with reference to formulae which have been reached after a careful and detailed examination of the requirements of the Department over a long period of years, and whenever any large increase in staff is demanded the position is reviewed exhaustively with reference to all the relevant factors such as the statistics of line and wire mileage, the number of telephone connections and the special features of the localities concerned. The cost statistics may, however, be expected to provide, subject to the corrections envisaged in the preceding paragraph, an independent background and to ensure a periodical review of the standards adopted in determining staff. It is proposed therefore to compile these statistics in future as a temporary measure purely for departmental use. The position will be reviewed after two or three years, and if experience shows that the statistics are not of much practical value for purposes of control they might have to be given up.

3. The statistics have been prepared departmentally from the figures communicated by Divisional Officers supplemented by the information available in the audit office and have not yet been checked in audit. The remarks of the Accountant General are being invited on the adequacy of these statements and also whether the figures of each division are easily susceptible of verification with the figures in the audit office.

Both the Auditor General and Accountant General have, however, seen them informally and they are inclined to think that they will probably meet the requirements. After they have scrutinised the proposal in detail, instructions will be issued to Heads of Circles for the submission of such statements in future commencing with the year 1934-35.

APPENDIX IX.

Memorandum furnished by the Department of Education, Health and Lands regarding the Mathematical Instrument Office—(Commercial Accounts).

The Mathematical Instrument Office is divided into the following sections of each of which accounts are, or conveniently can be, separately kept :

- (1) Workshops including material Store.
- (2) Serviceable Store.
- (3) Dump and Repairable Store.
- (4) Office.

2. Of these No. (3) is by a decision of 1924 already treated as not expected to show a profit; dump, mobilization, and repairable stores do not bear their share of interest on capital and the cost of management is excluded from the Profit and Loss account. No. (4) is part of the overhead charges allocated to the other sections.

3. Of the remaining two sections :—

(1) The Workshop section should be so constituted that over a period of some years there should be no loss to Government, provided it is not called upon to bear more than its fair share of general and other overhead charges.

With this proviso, if there is a continual loss then either labour or supervision charges or both should be reduced or prices for work should be increased. Alternatively if manufacture of certain instruments cannot be made to pay, it might be abandoned. The section therefore can fairly be regarded as commercial.

(2) The Serviceable Store section is however on quite a different footing. It provides a service of great importance to such technical departments as the Survey of India, Railways and Public Works Department. It must carry a large stock of instruments if it is to satisfy its customers. Designs are constantly changing but while some indentors will insist on the latest model, say of a theodolite, others will prefer an older model which they have been accustomed to use. Many different patterns must therefore be stocked and as the price of a theodolite may be as much as Rs. 2,000, it can easily be seen that the value of stock, on which interest has to be debited, must reach a high figure. Moreover the greater the stock the greater the cost of supervision and stock taking. Further since the demand for many classes of instruments is irregular, it must often happen that they remain in stock for over 2 years by which time the whole of the 10 per cent. profit on a subsequent sale has been swallowed up by the interest on capital only and nothing is left to meet supervision, rent, pensionary contribution and other overhead charges.

The section's sole source of profit however is the surcharge above the book values that is recovered from purchasers. This surcharge is now 10 per cent. for imported, manufactured and repaired stores and 5 per cent. for locally purchased stores. These percentages were very carefully worked out to balance expenditure in 1923 at a time when issues from the section amounted to between 4 and 5 lakhs, when interest on capital (a heavy charge on this section) was about 3½ per cent. and before several items of the present overhead charges, e.g., audit fee, had been levied. With the reduction in issues to about 2 lakhs and an increase in the rate of interest to over 5 per cent. it is obvious that this section must run at a loss. Practically speaking no economies in running the section can be made, for the direct charges are negligible and consequently the loss on the section can be reduced only by increasing the receipts, i.e., the rate of surcharge, or by reducing the overhead charges the section has to bear.

4. The Government of India after careful consideration have come to the conclusion that neither of these alternatives is satisfactory. The first would merely transfer the expense to other departments of Government while the second would mean either imposing an undue proportion of overhead charges on the Workshop section or masking the full amount of overheads that falls on the office as a whole. There is however a third possible course, i.e., to debit this Section with its fair share of overhead charges but to disregard any resulting loss and it is this course that has commended itself to the Government of India. Essentially this section is much more of the nature of a Service Department than of a Commercial Department. The conditions under which it works, that it has to maintain stocks of new or repaired instruments for departments which are bound to deal with it, and that it cannot adopt ordinary commercial methods of running, make the section much more like, say, the Stationery and Printing Department or the Indian Store Department.

5. The Government of India have therefore, in consultation with the Auditor General in India, sanctioned the separation of the commercial accounts of the Mathematical Instrument Office, Calcutta, into two portions, serviceable stores and workshops, each with its own Profit and Loss account, in order to secure a more reliable basis for determining the commercial success or failure of the office.

APPENDIX X.

Memorandum on overhead costs of Salt at Sambhar and Khewra furnished by the Central Board of Revenue on the 27th August 1935.

The Central Board of Revenue was asked to prepare a note for the Public Accounts Committee on the wide disparity between the overhead cost per maund of salt at Sambhar and at Khewra as displayed in the table contained in paragraph 91 of the Commercial Appendix to the Appropriation Accounts (Civil), 1933-34.

2. The attached table analyses in a convenient form the figures for these sources contained in the cost sheet which appears in paragraph 101 of that Appendix. It will be seen that the overhead cost per maund for 1933-34 was made up as follows :—

|                              | Sambhar.     |    |    | Khewra.      |    |    |
|------------------------------|--------------|----|----|--------------|----|----|
|                              | Annas. Pies. |    |    | Annas. Pies. |    |    |
| (1) Royalties .. ..          | 1            | 11 | 12 | 0            | 11 | 21 |
| (2) Service of Capital .. .. | 0            | 7  | 09 | 0            | 3  | 07 |
| (3) Other overheads .. ..    | 0            | 2  | 39 |              |    |    |
|                              | 2            | 8  | 60 | 1            | 2  | 28 |

It will be seen that the difference is more than covered by the royalties payable to the Jaipur and Jodhpur Durbars at Sambhar. There are no royalties payable at Khewra.

3. At Sambhar (a salt lake) salt is made by solar evaporation ; at Khewra it is extracted in the form of rock salt by mining. Not only are the overhead charges less at the former place, but so also is the prime cost (manufacturing or excavation, respectively). The result is that despite the heavy incidence of royalties, the combined cost of Sambhar salt is less than that of Khewra salt (3 as. 8.27 p. against 4 as. 4.93 p.). Physical differences account for the greater cheapness of Sambhar salt, both in prime cost and in general overheads ; this advantage is largely, but not wholly, removed by the royalties factor.

APPENDIX XI.

Memorandum furnished by the Chief Controller, Indian Stores Department, showing some instances in which the operations of the Indian Stores Department have resulted in savings to the using departments.

It will be appreciated that no reliable comparison of the operations of different purchasing agencies can be made unless it can be shown that tenders were called for at the same time for precisely the same goods, and that packing, terms of delivery, method of payment and conditions of testing and inspection were identical. Such coincidences rarely occur, but generally it may be stated that the three chief factors which operate, either in combination or severally, to secure very low prices against Indian Stores Department tenders are—

- (1) The co-ordinating and bulking of demands.
- (2) The application of expert technical knowledge which leaves the purchasing agency free to depart with confidence from expensive proprietary types and qualities or special selections or preferences put forward by indenting officers.
- (3) The elimination of numerous varying designs and qualities and the adoption of a few standards for general use.

The following examples, typical of many, have been selected to show how in different circumstances and in different ways economies have been effected :—

- (1) An indent for an oil engine driven electric generating set was received, and as this set was required to be installed in a power station where a certain make of plant was already installed, the indenter preferred that the order should be placed for the same make of plant. Such preferences usually spell inflation of price by the particular manufacturer. The estimated cost given in the indent for the make of plant required was Rs. 47,387. Competitive tenders were called for by public advertisement, and tenders were received from the makers of the plant already installed and for other makes of plant. After consulting the indenter the order was placed for a different make of plant at a total cost of Rs. 37,872.
- (2) Electric lamps to the total value of approximately Rs. 7 lacs are purchased by hundreds of indentors throughout India against the Department's annual lamp contract. Under this contract the Indian Stores Department is able to obtain the best makes of lamps conforming to the standard specification at lower prices than any other purchaser in India. If each individual indenter out of the hundreds who require lamps, were to make his own purchases, he would have to pay at least 7½ per cent. more than the price which he is required to pay when purchasing against the Indian Stores Department's contract. In this way a total annual saving of at least Rs. 50,000 is effected.
- (3) An indent was received for the supply of 5 electrically driven bore hole pumps. This indenter had already made enquiries for these pumps, and in his indent specified that the Indian Stores Department should place the order with a certain maker at a total cost of Rs. 45,000. The indenter was addressed and was told that it was proposed to invite tenders, and certain essential information was called for to enable a specification to be drawn up. The indenter replied that the maker he had mentioned in his indent knew all about the requirements and asked that an order be placed forthwith. The Indian Stores Department replied that it could not agree to this procedure and insisted on getting full information of the requirements. On receipt of this the Department called for public tenders, and with the indenter's approval an order was placed for another make of pump at a total cost of Rs. 25,837. This resulted in a saving of Rs. 19,163 or approximately 42 per cent. It is also of interest to note that following the experience with the make of pumps which was ordered at this lower price, the indenter afterwards asked the Indian Stores Department to place repeat orders for this cheaper make which had proved most satisfactory.

- (4) An indent was received from a large Government Department for electric cable. A proprietary brand was specified. The Indian Stores Department insisted on calling for public tenders, and placed the order for exactly similar cable at a price which showed a saving of Rs. 4,663 over the price quoted for the brand specified by the indenter.
- (5) Orders to the value of approximately Rs. 2 lacs are placed by the Indian Stores Department for train lighting batteries annually. Before the Indian Stores Department took over the purchase of these for certain large Government buyers, orders were confined to one or two well-known and well-tried proprietary brands. When the Indian Stores Department commenced to purchase, the indentors were pressed to try other reputable makes, and as a result of introducing this competition savings of at least 10 per cent. have been effected.
- (6) An indent was received for 30 electric sterilisers required for a certain hospital. The indenter specified a certain make and specially asked that the order should be placed for this make at a cost of Rs. 150 each. The Indian Stores Department invited competitive tenders and received a tender from another firm offering exactly the same make of sterilisers at Rs. 107-8-0 each. The order was placed at the cheaper price. In this way the Department obtained for the indenter exactly what he wanted at a saving of 29 per cent.
- (7) Large quantities of Electrodes are required by different Government Departments. The total purchases amount to approximately Rs. 1½ lacs. Before the Indian Stores Department purchased this material, each of the numerous indentors purchased his own individual requirements. The Indian Stores Department collects the requirements of each indenter and combines them. An annual contract is then made for the combined requirements. As a result of the Indian Stores Department's activities, the requirements of large and small users are arranged at a very low price. The saving effected to the larger buyers is in the neighbourhood of 10 per cent. and to the smaller users 30 per cent., as a result of the Indian Stores Department arranging an annual contract.

- (8) The Inspector General of a certain province had in former years placed his contracts for boots and leather equipment with a particular firm in Cawnpore. When this business was entrusted to the Indian Stores Department competitive tenders were invited with the ultimate result that a saving in expenditure amounting to 14 per cent. was effected, although the Indian Stores Department contract was placed with the same firm. Since that time still further reductions in prices have been made, and other sources of supply have been utilised.
- (9) The purchase of khaki pugree cloth for the Police force of another province was made at a price which was 30 per cent. lower than that previously paid by the Police when purchasing direct from an importing firm. The material purchased by the Indian Stores Department was of Indian manufacture and of a quality equal to the imported material. This reduction in cost was achieved by bulking the Police demand with that of the Army which amount to 16 lacs of yards annually.
- (10) Khaki drill is purchased by the various Departments of Government, and the aggregate quantity is very large. Formerly Departments, such as the Police, made their own purchases, and various imported cloths were bought. The very large annual requirements of the Army are purchased by the Indian Stores Department from an Indian mill, and for the past few years the practice has been to collect the requirements of indenting authorities all over India and to combine them with the Army demand. The total amounts to about 1½ million yards, and the smaller indenting authorities are now supplied with an Indian made cloth fully up to the imported standard of quality in prices ranging from 10 to 15 per cent. lower.
- (11) The Superintendent of a Jail placed an indent on the Indian Stores Department for a quantity of khaki twill cloth. This had formerly been purchased direct in an imported quality. The Indian Stores Department purchased an Indian made cloth of equal quality at a reduction in price of 9 per cent.
- (12) Khaki great coat cloth required by certain Police officers is now purchased from mills in India, whereas formerly imported material was used. The difference in price in favour of the Indian cloth is approximately 10 per cent. Another Police officer informed the Department that he was purchasing greatcoat cloth at Rs. 5-10-0 per yard. He was informed that the Indian Stores Department could purchase as good a quality from another Indian mill at Rs. 3-14-0 per yard. He wrote in reply that as a result of the information given to him his supplying mill had reduced the price to Rs. 4 per yard.
- (13) The Police Department of a certain province issues cotton banians to the Police, which they had been purchasing

- direct at Rs. 1-4-8 each. The Inspector-General was dissatisfied with the quality he was receiving, and hence the matter was referred to the Indian Stores Department who made arrangements for supplies of an improved quality of Indian make at Rs. 0-12-0 each. This accounts for a saving of Rs. 8,000 annually.
- (14) A certain Department of Government had been in the habit of making purchases of tents from a particular Jail. When this business was handled by the Indian Stores Department competitive tenders were called for, and contracts were made at prices 40 per cent. lower than those previously paid.
- (15) A certain State Railway had for some years entrusted its clothing contract to a particular firm of suppliers. When this business was undertaken by the Indian Stores Department proper specifications and drawings of all the items were framed and the business was given out to open competition, with the result that very substantial savings in expenditure have been made which are estimated to amount to Rs. 1,50,000 annually.
- (16) In purchasing carpets for certain State Railways the Indian Stores Department has been able to supplant imported carpets and to supply indigenous ones at a saving of about 20 per cent. in price.
- (17) The Indian Stores Department enters annually into a contract for supply of Indian made cement to indentors all over India. The approximate total value of cement delivered annually against this contract amounts to Rs. 16,00,000. A special discount of Rs. 3 per ton or roughly 6 per cent. is given to the Indian Stores Department.
- (18) A certain indenting authority had commenced negotiations for the supply of a very large quantity of insulating boards. A certain price had been mentioned, but when the matter was subsequently handled by the Indian Stores Department a reduction in price amounting to 8½ per cent. was obtained.
- (19) Every year the Indian Stores Department enters into a contract for the supply of lubricating and fuel oils for the State Railways and other indentors. In the past when these numerous indenting authorities had been making their own purchases there had been a tendency to confine the selections to certain tried proprietary brands. The contracting firms being aware of these preferences have been able to inflate prices. When the Indian Stores Department took over this business this situation was appreciated, and from that time on it has been the established practice to call a conference in the Indian Stores Department Head Office of the larger indenting authorities. In this way it has been possible to demonstrate to users the financial effect of a persistent adherence to a particular brand, and the interchange of the results of practical experience of other types and brands of oil, coupled with test results obtained from the Government Test House, have been instrumental in breaking down these prejudices and in obtaining a very much lower general level of prices. It has been possible to compare the prices of the brands indented for with the prices of those actually purchased with the consent of the indenting authorities as a result of the Conference. The figures given below furnish this comparison :

| Year.   | Total purchases if brands asked for were given. | Total purchases of brands purchased. | Saving.  | Saving per cent. |

A contract is arranged annually for the supply of an indigenous oil to Railways on a sliding scale of rates varying on quantities drawn during the year. The following statement shows the savings effected by the bulking of demands for various Railways :

The services of the Stores Department are utilised by officers of all the Provincial Governments in India more or less for the purchase of their requirements. Though the Local Governments are entirely autonomous in this respect, the Bombay Government have laid down that all purchases in India above Rs. 500 each in value shall be made through the agency of the Indian Stores Department subject to executive orders regarding purchase of stores from Jails or Government Workshops or the Stationery Department not being affected. As regards the purchase of certain classes of stores through the Local Government's Stationery Department, the question was recently examined in a conference of Divisional Commissioners in the Presidency. The finding of this conference, an extract of which follows, is illuminating :—

“ We have the honour to report that we have discussed in conference the question referred to us under Government Memorandum, Finance Department No. 393-B., dated the 22nd December 1934. The heads of departments, the Collectors of Districts and in some cases the District Judges have been consulted. As to the first point referred to us whether supply be centralised or decentralised, the consensus of opinion appears to be that the cloth supplied by the Superintendent of Stationery is not satisfactory. It does not wear well and the coloured cloth is reported to fade in a short time. The Inspector-General of Police reports that if the supply of cloth is entrusted to the Indian Stores Department, he would agree to centralisation of supply, but not otherwise. The Inspector-General of Police's opinion is supported by the Manager, Photo Zinco Press, who indents on the Indian Stores Department Circle, Bombay, for large quantities of cotton cloth. He states that a special textile section under a textile expert for the purchase of textile goods is attached to the Indian Stores Department and that he has been satisfied with the quality of the material and with the very reasonable price quoted. We are of opinion that in future all supplies should be obtained from the Indian Stores Department Circle, Bombay.”

The Central Provinces Government have also ordered that “ in the case of purchases in India above Rs. 500 in value indenting officers must use the agency of the Stores Department unless they can show that they can themselves purchase the materials more cheaply or, in a case of urgency, more expeditiously.”

The Accountant-General, Madras, drew the attention of his Government to the advantages which might be gained by the Jails in that Presidency by utilising the Indian Stores Department annual contracts. The Madras Government issued orders to the Inspector-General of Prisons to utilise the contracts of this Department. The Accountant-General also reported in the Appropriation Report for 1931-32 a few instances of losses sustained by the direct purchase of stores by certain officers of the Madras Government instead of obtaining their requirements against the contracts arranged by this Department. Extracts from a letter from the Accountant-General, Madras, to the Inspector-General of Prisons and from the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the accounts of 1931-32 are attached.

The Indian Stores Department has for some years past been receiving an increasing number of demands from Indian States, Municipalities and District Boards for such materials as fuel oil, lubricating oil, petrol, cement road dressing materials, etc. Details of purchases made for these authorities will be found in the Annual Reports of the Department.

Requests are also occasionally received from the authorities of Colonial Governments and the Crown Agents for the Colonies for the purchase and inspection of their requirements. Several private firms and public utility companies have also expressed a desire to be permitted to utilise the contracts arranged by this Department, which, however, cannot be permitted under the rules. These demands for our assistance are conclusive evidence that these authorities find it to be more economical to make their purchases through this Department than to purchase direct.

A detailed examination of our past records would furnish material for many more instances of savings which have been effected in the expenditure of using Departments through the operations of the Indian Stores Department, but as this examination would take considerable time it is thought that the instances herein quoted will suffice for the purpose the Public Accounts Committee have in view. It will also be remembered that the working of the Indian Stores Department was the subject of a critical and searching examination by the Retrenchment Committee in 1931, and the findings of that Committee which are fully recorded in their report were entirely favourable to this Department.

Section III—Comments on general matters arising out of the present report.

20. PURCHASE OF STORES.

(Page 204—Paragraph 6 of the Accountant-General's Report.)

The instructions issued by the Government in regard to the purchase of stores require inter alia that indenting officers, when calling for tenders, should also consult the Indian Stores Department, Delhi, so that indents may be placed through that department.

The Accountant-General has reported that in the following three cases loss to the extent of Rs. 2,595 was sustained by Government due to the non-observance of these instructions :—

(i) In one division, 110 tons of Charminar brand of cement were purchased during 1930-31 and 1931-32 from a firm at Rs. 48 and Rs. 49/4/0 per ton, respectively, though the Indian Stores Department had entered into a contract with the same firm for the purchase of cement during the above period at Rs. 36/12/0 and Rs. 40 per ton, respectively. As the purchase in question was not effected through the agency of the Indian Stores Department, the firm declined to receive payments at lower rates. The head of the department has impressed on the divisional officers the need to utilize the agency of the Indian Stores Department, if the rates notified by it are found advantageous.

(ii) In another division, the tender for the supply and delivery of 62 tons of Lakshmi brand cement at Rs. 64/8/0 per ton in preference to the Charminar cement at Rs. 54/8/0 per ton was accepted on the ground that a consignment of the latter brand received on a previous occasion was found "to be setting within 10 to 15 days". The head of the department, however, agreed with the Superintending Engineer, that to declare Charminar cement unsatisfactory because a supply of four bags received in October 1930 was found to be setting within 10 to 15 days was a hasty decision and observed that orders regarding the general purchase of Charminar cement had already been issued in 1926 and that necessary precaution to receive the supplies in water-proof bags during the monsoon season so as to prevent setting should have been taken by the Divisional Officer.

(iii) In a third division, 88 tons of Lakshmi brand cement were purchased at Rs. 67/3/0 per ton, while the rate notified by the Indian Stores Department for the supply and delivery of Charminar cement was only Rs. 58 per ton.

The following note was placed before us by Government :—

"In December 1929 the Government observed that indenting officers did not make sufficient use of the agency of the Indian Stores Department, Delhi, for the purchase of articles manufactured in India and drew their attention to the system of "rate" and "running" contracts which had been entered into by the Indian Stores Department for a large variety of stores and desired that indenting officers when calling for tenders should also consult the Indian Stores Department, Delhi, so that contracts might be placed with them if the rates quoted by them were found to be economical. These instructions are generally followed by the officers of the Department.

"As regards the three cases mentioned by the Accountant-General, further detailed enquiries go to show that in the first case, cement for works in the division was required in small quantities and at different times of the year and it was therefore not possible to forecast the annual requirements in advance for arrangements being made through the Indian Stores Department.

In the second case the works for which the cement was required were very urgent—they were in connection with the repair of cyclone damages. The Divisional Officer did not, therefore, consult the Indian Stores Department, but obtained the approval of the Superintending Engineer for the purchase of Lakshmi brand cement.

In the third case, the cement was required for a large number of closure and repair works which were extremely urgent, as they had to be carried out before the advent of the South-West monsoon, and it was not therefore possible to indent and wait for a particular brand of cement.

In the circumstances, the Government have considered it unnecessary to enforce pecuniary liability on the officers concerned."

We concur in the views of the Chief Engineer in regard to the purchase of Lakshmi brand cement in preference to the Charminar cement [item (ii) above] that the Superintending Engineer's order displayed an error of judgment.

We consider that the proposal that the Indian Stores Department should be addressed in order to ascertain whether, when small indents are placed with the local stockists, the benefit of "running" contract rates could not be obtained should be further examined and that in the mean while, all quantities of cement should be sought to be obtained through the Indian Stores Department, before orders are actually placed with the local stockists.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER NO. T-12-JAILS-1-22-392, DATED THE 17TH JULY 1931, FROM THE ACCOUNTANT-GENERAL, MADRAS (T. 12 SECTION), TO THE INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF PRISONS, OOTACAMUND.

SUBJECT :—Purchase of stores for Jails through the agency of the Indian Stores Department.

With reference to the correspondence ending with your letter No. 11534, dated 7th July 1931 on the above subject, I have the honour to observe that, though the distinct advantages of purchase of stores through the agency of the Indian Stores Department were realised by the Jail Department when arrangements with the Indian Stores Department for the supply of crude oil to the Alipuram Jail from 1st April 1930 were approved by the Inspector-General of Prisons, no action was taken to obtain similar supplies to the Central Jail, Coimbatore through Indian Stores Department. The result is that the Alipuram Jail was obtaining its supplies of the oil from 1st April 1930 to 14th September 1930 at Rs. 53/6/0 per ton, and from 15th September 1930 to date at Rs. 60 per ton, while the Central Jail, Coimbatore, was getting its supplies at Rs. 70 per ton direct from the Madras Branch of the Burmah Shell Oil Storage and Distributing Co. of India Ltd.

2. As a result of enquiry made in audit, steps have since been taken to obtain the requirements of diesel-oil to the Central Jail, Coimbatore, through Indian Stores Department, only from the second week of February 1931.

PART II—RAILWAY ACCOUNTS.

Position as regards estimating and control of expenditure.

1. The following table compares the original estimates made before the beginning of the year, the revised estimates prepared near its end and the actual results :—

| (6) Surplus (+), Deficit (—)                     | .. | .. | .. | —7.77             | —7.78    | —7.96    |

2. The budget estimates for 1933-34 anticipated a net deficit of Rs. 7.77 lakhs which was increased to 7.78 lakhs in the revised estimate. The actuals proved to be slightly worse resulting in a deficit of Rs. 7.96 lakhs which was met by a loan from the Depreciation Fund. As in the past two years, the prescribed contribution to general revenues could not be paid during the year under review. The figures in the above table show that the variations between the actuals and the Budget and Revised estimates are very small. The deterioration of 18 lakhs as compared with the revised estimate was principally due to increased interest charges on account of actual rate of interest on capital expenditure being more than the rate adopted in the estimates.

3. The following table compares the final voted grants with the expenditure against those grants :—

5. Excesses over voted grants.—The excesses over voted grants which require to be regularised by excess votes of the Legislative Assembly are shown below :—

| Demand No.                                                                    | Final grant. | Actual expenditure. | Excess.   |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------|---------------------|-----------|
| 4. Administration .. .. .                                                     | 10,30,00,000 | 10,34,63,107        | 4,63,107  |
| 6. Companies' and Indian States' share of surplus profits and net earnings .. | 56,50,000    | 56,65,149           | 15,149    |
| 10. Temporary withdrawals from Depreciation Fund .. .. .                      | 7,87,11,000  | 8,05,33,325         | 18,22,325 |

The excess under Demand No. 4 was mainly due to an unexpected payment of Municipal rates and taxes on the Eastern Bengal and Great Indian Peninsula Railways, to larger contributions for hospitals and medicines and to the charges in respect of special class apprentices having been debited to this Demand instead of to Demand No. 11. A larger increase in the earnings of certain branch line companies than anticipated caused the excess under Demand No. 6. The excess under Demand No. 10 represents the increase in the deficit of the Railways. The percentages of the excesses in the three cases are 4, 3 and 2.3 respectively. There were excesses during the year under three Demands against four in the preceding year. We recommend that the Assembly should assent to the excess demands which will be placed before them by Government in due course.

6. The excesses over non-voted appropriations were only two during 1933-34 as against six in 1932-33.

7. Taking the total railway expenditure both voted and non-voted, there was a saving of 4 lakhs or .04 per cent. under expenditure charged to revenue and a saving of 3.03 lakhs or 17.42 per cent. under capital expenditure. The position in this respect compares as follows with the last three years :—

Expenditure charged to revenue (excluding appropriations to and from the Reserve Fund).

Under expenditure charged to revenue the variation in the total as compared with the final allotment amounted to .04 per cent. only and the variations in the totals of the individual demands also were not large. This result was, however, achieved in many cases by large excesses counterbalancing large savings within the Demands. We also noticed several cases where either no funds were allotted for expenditure which could reasonably have been foreseen and provided for or insufficient or excessive provision of funds was made. We realise that, in a large concern like the Railways, the Railway Board has to work on the totals of each demand rather than on individual subheads. We also realize that original estimates may be subject to alteration on account of unforeseen items, such as, larger or smaller volume of traffic than originally estimated, accidents, floods, etc. Even after making allowance for all these, we are of opinion that there is considerable room for improvement. The Railway Administrations should see that the totals allotted by the Railway Board are distributed among the individual subheads with greater accuracy.

Under Demands for capital expenditure on the other hand even the total expenditure diverged very far indeed from expectations. For example, under Demand No. 8, the total expenditure amounted only to 5.81 lakhs against an allotment of 8.92 lakhs. We were told by the Financial Commissioner that the capital programme was settled several months in advance, that it was very difficult for Railway Administrations to make accurate estimates so much in advance and that many factors entered into the picture over which Railways had little control. The Financial Commissioner has informed us that he is drawing the attention of all Railway Administrations to the large difference between the amounts they have been demanding and the amounts they have been actually able to spend and that he will endeavour to correct the tendency to overestimating in preparing the programmes for 1936-37. We consider that the Railway Board should take all possible steps to secure greater accuracy in estimating.

While examining the question of the control of the Railway Board over Railway Administrations we have considered whether a more effective control could not be exercised if the Board were enabled, by a further delegation in minor matters, to relieve themselves of any necessity for interfering in questions of detail and so to leave themselves free to concentrate on securing effective control in matters of first class financial importance.

8. Irregular reappropriations.—Rule 52 (2) of the Indian Legislative Rules requires that we should bring to the notice of the Assembly every reappropriation from one grant to another and every reappropriation within a grant which is not in accordance with the prescribed rules. During the year under review the following reappropriations were sanctioned by Railway Administrations which were not strictly within the powers delegated to them :—

(1) Grant No. 4.—The Bengal and North-Western Railway reappropriated Rs. 16,000 from the sub-head "Worked Lines" to the sub-heads "Establishment" and "Miscellaneous".

(2) Grant No. 5.—The Bengal and North-Western Railway transferred Rs. 69,000 from the sub-head "Worked Lines" to the sub-heads "Repairs and Maintenance" and "Operation other than fuel".

- (3) Grant No. 6.—In allotting the sum of Rs. 13,48,000 to the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway under this head the Railway Board omitted by oversight to distribute it under the two sub-heads of the grant. The Railway Administration made good this omission and distributed the total between the two sub-heads. Though this was the right thing to do, it was technically incorrect.
- (4) Grant No. 8.—The North-Western Railway made a reappropriation of Rs. 2,48,000 between works costing over one lakh each and other works. Two other Railways made reappropriations between track renewals and other sub-heads, namely, the Assam-Bengal Railway to the extent of Rs. 56,000 and Bengal-Nagpur Railway to the extent of Rs. 29,000.

9. The total deficit during the years 1931-32 to 1934-35 amounted to about Rs. 32 crores. In 1935-36 the budget anticipated a deficit of only Rs. 2 crores, but judging from the actuals of the first few months it appears that the deficit will be much greater unless there is considerable improvement in earnings during the remaining months of the year. The position is actually more disquieting than these figures indicate, because under the present accounting system certain expenditure which according to sound financial principles should be charged to revenue is being charged to capital. The Auditor General in his letter forwarding the Appropriation Accounts to the Government of India says as follows :—

“ In paragraph 42 of his Review the Financial Commissioner expresses regret that it has not been possible to proceed much further with the examination of various important questions essential to a proper financial settlement for Railways, such as the correct amount to be set aside for depreciation, the principles of allocation of expenditure between capital and revenue, and the amortisation of railway capital at charge. In paragraph 9 (b) of my letter submitting the Railway Appropriation Accounts for the year 1930-31 I drew attention to certain paragraphs (paragraphs 208—213) of the Audit Report which discussed disquieting tendencies towards over-capitalisation, and I emphasised the necessity of immediate examination of the problem so that Government should be prepared with a well-considered scheme in connection with the setting up of a Railway authority under the new constitution. In paragraph 28 of their Report on the Appropriation Accounts of 1930-31 the Public Accounts Committee stressed the necessity of early decision on the various problems thus indicated. The tendencies towards over-capitalisation that were brought to notice three years ago are still in operation, and during these three years net Railway earnings have failed to meet interest charges by 27.39 crores. Evidences of improvement are unhappily still uncertain. In the meantime, the preparation of the scheme for Railways under the new constitution must be in an advanced stage, while, according to the admission of the Financial Commissioner, Railways, the complicated financial problems connected with this scheme are still far from settlement. This is a position which seems to me to be exceedingly unsatisfactory.”

We were informed that the whole question of Railway finance was engaging the serious attention of the Government of India. There was no difficulty in arriving at a theoretical solution of the problems of allocation between capital and revenue. Ideally, the depreciation fund ought to be turned into a reserve for renewals and minor improvements and a definite provision for amortisation should be made out of revenue. The former would involve an increased allocation of something like 2 crores a year to cover expenditure which is at present being wrongly charged to capital while the latter ought to be something like 5 crores a year. The trouble was however that the Railways were failing to meet from Revenue their ordinary interest charges even on the present basis of charge. The deficit on this account was nearly 8 crores in 1933-34, about 5 crores in 1934-35 and in February 1935 it was estimated at 2 crores for 1935-36. But it is now clear that what appeared to be a process of continuous improvement has suffered an interruption and that unless the remaining months of this year show a great change, the deficit for 1935-36 may not be materially less than that for the preceding year. Even so, as has already been pointed out, this understates the real position by something like 2 crores. The question thus becomes not so much one of a slow tendency to over-capitalisation because of a somewhat lax accounting system but of the inability of the railways as a whole to show a profit even on the present system. To this matter we devoted a great deal of attention. We were informed that interest charges would show a gradually declining tendency and might in 5 years time fall by about 2 crores. We understand moreover that the new scales of pay for new entrants will ultimately produce a saving of about 3 crores a year but this will of course take a whole generation to mature fully. Apart from these, the Railway Board think that no more than economies of a minor administrative order are now obtainable. There is obviously not in these any assurance of a return to solvency in a measurable time, much less of any surplus for amortisation of debt or contribution to general revenues and, if the position is as stated by the Railway Board, solvency can only be restored by increasing traffic receipts. We are well aware that a restoration of economic prosperity is the most satisfactory means of effecting this but we do not see in the present condition of world affairs any certitude that this will be at all rapid. We think therefore that it is vitally necessary that the Railway Board should conduct an exhaustive review of their freight and fares policy and should consider every possible means of increasing their revenue. Apart from what is normally understood by reviewing freight policy, we urge that they should press on with their consideration of the steps required to meet road competition. We do not at all intend to imply that the expenditure side should be neglected. We are most reluctant to accept the Railway Board's estimate of the possible further economies and we think that the search for them must be relentlessly pursued. But we are prepared to believe that an increase of receipts is, in present circumstances, likely to be the more important factor in the restoration of financial stability.

Incidentally some of us would like to call attention to the fact that Railway Finances are being made the instrument of Government policy towards particular industries with the result that burdens are thrown on the Railways which ought to fall on the general taxpayer. An instance of this is the reduction of the output of Railway collieries to help the Indian coal industry. We were informed that, if Railway collieries are worked to their full capacity, the Railways will be able to produce coal at least as cheaply as the market rate and thus avoid a loss in the working of the collieries amounting approximately to 12 lakhs. On the assumption that this statement is correct, a considerable proportion of us feel that it is not right that a commercial concern like the Railways should be made to subsidise the coal industry.

We hope we have made clear that we regard immediate and continuous attention to the solution of these problems as of vital importance to Indian interests. Some of the non-official Members wish to place on record their views in regard to the failure to press to an earlier conclusion an examination of the working of the separation convention. Under the Resolution passed by the Assembly regarding the separation of railway from general finance, the convention should have been revised periodically after being tried provisionally for at least 3 years. The explanation given by the Financial Commissioner for not revising the convention is recorded in paragraph 3 of the proceedings. If however the convention had been revised earlier, the question of the proper allocation of expenditure between capital and revenue would have come up for consideration earlier and an examination of the question of allocation between capital and revenue could not have failed to disclose that the surplus was really less than it appeared to be under the old allocation. In the face of this, it is doubtful whether Government would have felt justified in embarking on the very large capital expenditure of the "prosperity" years. In that case the unremunerative capital at charge would clearly have been reduced and the present financial problems would have assumed a less intractable aspect.

Miscellaneous.

13. The Director of Railway Audit has brought to our notice a case in which the North-Western Railway were unable to recover from the auctioneers about Rs. 44,000, being the sale proceeds of scrap metal auctioned. The decree obtained by the Railway Company could not be enforced as the debtors were paupers. The Director of Railway Audit reports that in this case (1) the agreement was not signed by each member of the firm of auctioneers as required by the rules, and (2) the Railway Administration did not exercise its right of not allowing the removal of the auctioned material until the full amount due had been received from the auctioneers. We recommend that the Railway Board should issue necessary instructions with a view to avoid such omissions in future and they should also impress upon the Railway Administrations that proper care should be taken in selecting auctioneers.

14. We understand from the Auditor General that the Railway Codes are generally out of date. We agree with him that the Railway Board should immediately take up their revision and complete it before the new Statutory Railway Authority comes into existence.

15. While going through the Quarterly Statement of outstanding items, we found that the departments generally took a considerable time in taking action on the recommendations of the Committee. The departments should try to avoid such delays in future. In this connection, we recommend that a special meeting of the Committee should be held some time during the Delhi session, if so desired by the members, to examine the action taken by the departments on the various recommendations and suggestions of the Committee.

16. We append to our report minutes of the proceedings which we consider should be treated as part of the report. We assume, that in accordance with the established practice, action will be taken by the department on the observations and recommendations contained in these proceedings.

6. The Committee continued the general discussion on the financial position of the Railways and then took up the various points mentioned in the Auditor General's letter.

7. Paragraph 3 of the Auditor General's letter.—The Committee agreed with the Auditor General that certain comments on defects in budgeting and in current control of expenditure, which are included in this year's report of the Director of Railway Audit, should in future be included in the Financial Commissioner's review. The Committee also desired that the Financial Commissioner should take steps to see that the appropriation accounts reached the Auditor General on the due date.

8. Paragraph 6 of the Auditor General's letter—Financial irregularities.—(i) Paragraph 58 of the Audit Report.—The Auditor General stated that the Agent of the particular Railway admitted the mistake and assured him that he had taken steps to secure that it would not occur again.

(ii) Paragraph 59 of the Audit Report Allocation of expenditure on rolling stock.—The Financial Commissioner explained that most of the Railways had accepted the revised classification, and that he thought the new formula proposed by them would probably be accepted by all without much difficulty.

(iii) Paragraph 138 of the Audit Report.—Some of the members of the Committee felt that the loss to Railways in this case was due to proper care not having been exercised in selecting auctioneers. The Committee desired that instructions should be issued by the Railway Board—

- (a) that proper care should be exercised to select auctioneers of certain financial standing ;
- (b) that the auctioned material should not be allowed to be removed until the full amount had been received from the auctioneers ; and
- (c) that the agreements with the auctioneers should be signed by duly authorised persons.

9. The Committee then went into the other paragraphs of the Audit Report mentioned in paragraph 6 of the Auditor General's letter.

The Committee then adjourned till 11 A.M. on Saturday, the 24th August 1935.

10. The Chairman brought to the notice of the Committee certain unauthorised and improper press reports of the proceedings of the Committee. The Committee desired that the Secretary should issue a statement to the effect that the reports were not only unauthorised and improper, as the proceedings were private, but also completely inaccurate.

11. The question of the codification of the Railway rules and regulations was then taken up. The Auditor General informed the Committee that the Railway codes were generally out of date and expressed the opinion that, in fairness to the new Railway Authority, they should be revised and brought up to date before that authority came into existence. The Committee agreed with the Auditor General and desired that this matter should be taken up immediately by the Railway Board.

14. Unanticipated credits.—Under grant No. 5 there were unanticipated credits to the extent of about 29 lakhs which were utilised for expenditure, and but for the utilisation of these credits a supplementary grant of about 23 lakhs from the legislature would have been necessary. The Committee was informed that, according to the previous recommendation of the Public Accounts Committee, where substantial unanticipated credits are to be utilised to incur fresh expenditure, which would not have been incurred but for such credits, the approval of the Standing Finance Committee has to be obtained, as grants were voted net, however, it was not constitutionally unlawful to appropriate unanticipated credits to increased expenditure. Under this grant it was not a case of incurring fresh expenditure which would not have been incurred but for the credits, but an excess over ordinary expenditure in the closing months of the year which in the ordinary course would have led to an excess grant. The excess would have been 23 lakhs in an estimate of over 30 crores.

15. The Committee discussed with the Chief Commissioner the general administration of the Railways and their financial position, especially the steps that might be taken to improve revenue, reduce working expenses, increase the facilities for third-class passengers and to meet the rail-road competition.

16. While examining the financial position of some of the railways, the Committee was informed that the railways were at present granting certain special concessions as a result of the general policy of the Government of India. The Committee desired to have a note from the Railway Department showing to what extent these concessions reduced the Railway earnings. One instance of this is reducing the output of railway collieries to subsidise the Indian coal industry. The Committee was informed that, if railway collieries were worked to their full extent, the railways would be able to produce coal at least as cheaply as the market rate, and thus avoid a loss on working of Railway collieries amounting roughly to about twelve lakhs. On the assumption that this statement was correct, a considerable proportion of the members of the Committee expressed the opinion that railway collieries should not be so worked as to subsidise the coal industry.

17. The Committee then went through the balance-sheets and profit and loss accounts of railway collieries. They desired that the Auditor General should consider whether the form in which these are at present prepared could not be improved.

18. The Committee desired that the Railway Department should examine and send a note to the Committee to show whether there is any basis for the allegation generally made that the rates of freight at present charged operate in such a way as to help the export of raw materials and the import of foreign manufactured goods to the detriment of Indian industries.

The Committee then adjourned till Tuesday, the 27th August 1935.

Proceedings of the 17th meeting of the Public Accounts Committee held on Tuesday, the 27th August 1935, at 12 noon.

19. The Committee considered the Memorandum furnished by the Railway Board on the financial results of the electrification of the B. B. & C. T. and G. I. P. Railways, and generally accepted the views of the Board about the financial effect of these schemes. They desired to have next year a similar report on the electrification of the South Indian Railway. They then took up the quarterly statement of outstanding items. The Committee expressed the opinion that there was considerable delay in taking action on their recommendations and desired that every effort should be made to expedite their disposal. Special reference was made to item (1), namely, concessions for military traffic, which has been outstanding from 1928-29.

20. The Committee then adjourned and agreed to meet some day during the session of the Assembly to consider the draft report.

ANNEXURE.

LETTER FROM THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, RAILWAY DEPARTMENT (RAILWAY BOARD), TO THE AGENTS OF CLASS I RAILWAYS, No. 1867-B., DATED THE 30TH NOVEMBER 1934.

SUBJECT.—Treatment of Grants made by Local Governments to Railway schools in the Railway accounts.

It has been brought to the notice of the Railway Board that the procedure obtaining on railways in accounting for grants made by Local Governments to Railway schools is not uniform. In some cases these grants are treated as reductions of expenditure, while in others, the accounts of these schools are kept outside the Railway accounts, only the amount of net grant paid by the Railway being shown as an item of expenditure in the Railway accounts. In the latter case, expenditure which ought to have been included in the accounts and the appropriation accounts of the Railway is kept outside Railway accounts and accounted for as the expenditure of a private body.

2. The correct procedure that should be followed in such cases is as follows :—

The expenditure on Railway schools proper should be provided in gross in the Demands for grants, the amount received from the Local Governments being deducted therefrom, provided the amount is received in the same financial year. Grants received after the close of the financial year should be treated as receipts and the same treatment should be accorded to fees recovered from the pupils.

In the case of other schools run by Local Governments or private bodies to which grants in aid are given by the Railway (Railway aided schools) the grant given from the Railway funds should be treated as expenditure.

3. I am directed to request that the correct procedure as outlined above be followed with effect from the accounts of the year 1935-36, and this should be taken into account when the budget estimates for the next year are prepared.

APPENDIX II.

LETTER FROM SIR ERNEST BURDON, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., I.C.S. AUDITOR GENERAL IN INDIA, TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, FINANCE DEPARTMENT, No. 193-REP./7-35, DATED THE 22ND JUNE 1935.

SUBJECT :—Appropriation Accounts (Railways) 1933-34 and the Audit Report 1935.

With reference to rule 15 (1) of the Auditor General's Rules framed under Section 96 D (1) of the Government of India Act, I have the honour to transmit herewith two copies of the Appropriation Accounts of the Railways in India for the year 1933-34 together with two copies of the Audit Report prepared by the Director of Railway Audit, for submission to the Committee on Public Accounts and for necessary action by the Government of India.

2. I have the honour also to transmit herewith two copies of the Review of the above Appropriation Accounts prepared by the Financial Commissioner, Railways, together with two copies each of the Capital Statement, Balance Sheet and Profit and Loss Accounts of Railways in India and of Balance Sheets and Profit and Loss Accounts of Railway Collieries for 1933-34.

3. Financial Commissioner's Review.—The Financial Commissioner's present Review approaches much more nearly than his last to the model which has been generally agreed upon in discussions which have taken place in the Public Accounts Committee in recent years ; and I wish to express my appreciation of the trouble which the Financial Commissioner has taken to adapt the Review both in form and in substance to the requirements of my Department and of the Public Accounts Committee, and also to produce it at an earlier date. At the same time I think it is possible for the Review to be still further improved, and in this connection I wish to refer to what is said in paragraphs 3 and 4 of the Audit Report. As the Director of Railway Audit has indicated, Chapter I of his report contains a number of comments on defects in budgeting, and on various defects also in current control of expenditure, as revealed by appropriation audit, which to the extent that they are of importance would have proceeded more suitably from the Financial Commissioner himself as the controlling officer, and might properly have found a place amongst other comments of a similar character which he has actually included in his Review. I presume the Financial Commissioner will now consider these comments, particularly those in paragraphs 11 to 22 of the Report, and will be prepared to furnish further explanation if this should be desired by the Public Accounts Committee.

Again, while the Financial Commissioner's Review was received by me on the 29th of April, the Appropriation Accounts themselves were not received by me until the 3rd of May 1935 as against the prescribed date, the 15th of April 1935. I trust that it will be possible to avoid in future similar delay in the submission of the Appropriation Accounts, as such delay is liable to react unfavourably on the preparation of his Review by the Financial Commissioner and on the preparation of his Audit Report by the Director of Railway Audit.

4. Excesses and Irregular Reappropriations.—The excesses which occurred over the final appropriations and which require to be regularised by the vote of the legislature in the case of voted expenditure, and by formal sanction by the Governor General in Council in the case of non-voted expenditure, are set forth in Section III of the Financial Commissioner's Review.

The irregular reappropriations which require to be brought to the notice of the legislature are stated in paragraph 82 of the Review, the Director of Railway Audit's comments being in paragraphs 33 and 34 of his report.

5. Railway Finance.—The general position.—In paragraph 42 of his Review the Financial Commissioner expresses regret that it has not been possible to proceed much further with the examination of various important questions essential to a proper financial settlement for Railways, such as the correct amount to be set aside for depreciation, the principles of allocation of expenditure between capital and revenue, and the amortisation of railway capital at charge. In paragraph 9 (b) of my letter submitting the Railway Appropriation Accounts for the year 1930-31 I drew attention to certain paragraphs (paragraphs 208—213) of the Audit Report which discussed disquieting tendencies towards over-capitalisation, and I emphasised the necessity of immediate examination of the problem so that Government should be prepared with a well-considered scheme in connection with the setting up of a Railway authority under the new constitution. In paragraph 28 of their report on the Appropriation Accounts of 1930-31 the Public Accounts Committee stressed the necessity of early decision on the various problems thus indicated. The tendencies towards over-capitalisation that were brought to notice three years ago are still in operation, and during these three years net Railway earnings have failed to meet interest charges by 27.39 crores. Evidences of improvement are unhappily still uncertain. In the meantime, the preparation of the scheme for Railways under the new constitution must be in an advanced stage, while, according to the admission of the Financial Commissioner, Railways, the complicated financial problems connected with this scheme are still far from settlement. This is a position which seems to me to be exceedingly unsatisfactory.

6. Financial Administration.—The following are individual matters relating mainly to the subject of Railway financial administration which appear to me to be of more than ordinary interest and to which the attention of the Public Accounts Committee may be specially directed:—

- (i) Paragraph 58 of the Audit Report.—An irregularity in accounting.
- (ii) Paragraphs 59 and 60 of the Audit Report.—Two important cases relating to the allocation of expenditure on rolling stock which I brought specially to notice last year, and which have not yet been finally settled.
- (iii) Paragraph 62 of the Audit Report.—Loss on the abandonment of the Dacca-Aricha Railway project.
- (iv) Paragraph 81 of the Audit Report.—Payment of interest by one Railway to another on the cost of wagons which are either no longer in existence or no longer in use.
- (v) Paragraph 88 of the Audit Report.—Breach of orders in relation to an important contract.
- (vi) Paragraph 111 of the Audit Report.—Loss on purchase of iron obtained from England.
- (vii) Paragraphs 112 to 114 of the Audit Report.—Irregularities and errors in the East Indian Railway Stores Accounts.
- (viii) Paragraph 132 of the Audit Report.—Shortage in stock of scrap material.
- (ix) Paragraph 133 of the Audit Report.—Shortage in stock of teak wood logs.
- (x) Paragraphs 135 to 138 of the Audit Report.—Defects in or non-enforcement of agreements.
- (xi) Paragraph 148 of the Audit Report.—Loss due to failure of an accounts office to recover charges due.
- (xii) Paragraph 170 of the Audit Report.—Fraud in an accounts office.

(xiii) Paragraph 177 of the Audit Report.—Loss due to an accounts office omitting to submit bills.

(xiv) Paragraph 193 of the Audit Report.—Consequences of postponement of expenditure.

7. The general conclusion which may be drawn from the Audit Report taken as a whole is that, due regard being paid to the magnitude and variety of the financial transactions which are involved, the standard of financial control attained by the Railway Administrations and the Railway Board may be said to be adequate.

APPENDIX III.

Memorandum by the Railway Board on paragraph 109 of the Director of Railway Audit's Audit Report on the Accounts for 1933-34 regarding Irregular Balances under the Workshop Manufacture Suspense Account on the North Western Railway.

Expenditure incurred in railway workshops is ordinarily debited to a 'suspense' head in the first instance, this head being cleared gradually by the transfer of the relative debits to the departments for which the work is done. One of the important items of work done by the railway workshops is the manufacture of duplicates and other materials for the Stores and other departments of the railway. As supplies were made of the manufactured articles from time to time to the departments concerned, the suspense head is cleared by the transfer of a corresponding debit at an estimated rate called the 'issue rate'.

2. Under an ideal system of costing, the balance at a given moment under the head 'Workshop suspense' should represent the value of the articles in the course of manufacture in the workshop, at that point of time, the value including not only the cost of the materials but the labour already spent on them up to the given point of time. This, however, is only a theoretical ideal; and even with an elaborate system of costing, 'inefficient' balances under the head 'Workshop suspense' are inevitable, that is to say, the book balances under 'Workshop suspense' would differ to some extent—though only slightly—from the actual value of the materials in the course of manufacture.

3. If issue rates are revised at sufficiently frequent intervals in accordance with the varying costs of production, the 'inefficient' balance will naturally not be very large. A suitable workshop accounts procedure ought to provide for the periodical examination of costs and the consequent revision of rates and the adjustment of already accumulated—estimated—'inefficient' balances. But where costs are not so reviewed or revised for a fairly long time and periodical adjustments of costs not made, the 'inefficient' balances accumulate to large figure. When the figures so accumulate, the exact ascertainment of these 'inefficient' balances, is, a matter of difficulty, since it necessitates a careful stock-taking of the articles in the course of manufacture in the workshops and the appraisal of the value of the materials and the labour already consumed in those articles. Apart from the large staff required for the purpose, such verification would seriously interfere with the normal working of the shops.

4. On the North Western Railway owing to failure to analyse and adjust 'inefficient' balances for several years, the balances under 'Workshop suspense' rose to an unusually large figure which clearly indicated, even without a stock-taking, that a large part of it was 'inefficient'. A survey of the workshop undertaken during the Christmas holidays of 1932 revealed that the inefficient balances were of the order of Rs. 5 lakhs; and as a result of further investigation the figure was estimated at Rs. 4,75,747 as detailed below:—

5. The most important cause which led to the accumulation of such a large inefficient balance was the failure to revise issue rates for a long period but there were other contributory causes also, such as failure to 'reconcile' different sets of figures, incorrect adjustments (including omissions to make adjustments), the retention of materials in the shops both manufactured and un-manufactured, both serviceable and unserviceable and also, to a small extent, which can be traced, embezzlement of wages and theft of materials. An elaborate analysis was made by the Chief Accounts Officer in the course of 1933, as a result of which several irregularities of procedure came to light, all of which had contributed to the large figure. Adequate steps have since been taken to set right the various defects in procedure that came to light and instructions have been issued to the Accounts Officer in charge of the workshop to submit a detailed report to the Chief Accounts Officer annually as the result of the review of the balance on 31st December each year. Necessary action has also been taken duly on the cases relating to embezzlement of wages and theft of materials.

6. The Railway Board have examined the whole position in consultation with the Controller of Railway Accounts and have brought to the notice of the Agent the various directions in which, in their view, there has been lack of check and supervision. They asked the Agent to examine the matter further in consultation with the Chief Accounts Officer and submit a report on the subject, indicating therein what disciplinary action has been or is proposed to be taken to bring home to the employees concerned the serious failures in essential and fundamental checks. The reply has been received and is under consideration.

APPENDIX IV.

LETTER FROM THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, RAILWAY DEPARTMENT (RAILWAY BOARD), TO THE AGENTS, ASSAM BENGAL, BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN, BENGAL-NAGPUR, BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA, BURMA, EASTERN BENGAL, EAST INDIA, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA, MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA, NORTH WESTERN, ROHILKUND AND KUMAON AND SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAYS; THE MANAGER, JODHPUR RAILWAY; THE AGENT, H. E. H. THE NIZAM'S STATE RAILWAYS; THE CHIEF MINING ENGINEER, RAILWAY BOARD; AND THE CENTRAL PUBLICITY OFFICER, INDIAN STATE RAILWAYS, No. 1728-B., DATED SIMLA, 21ST AUGUST 1935.

Railway Appropriation Accounts for 1933-34 and the Director of Railway Audit's report thereon.

I am directed to draw your attention to the Auditor General's remarks on the report of the Director of Railway Audit on the appropriation accounts of Railways for 1933-34 (Appendix II). The Railway Board are glad to note, and they have no doubt your administration will appreciate the general conclusion drawn by him in the last paragraph of his letter which runs as follows:—

"The general conclusion which may be drawn from the Audit Report taken as a whole is that, due regard being paid to the magnitude and variety of the financial transactions which are involved, the standard of financial control attained by the Railway Administrations and the Railway Board may be said to be adequate."

2. While the Board have no doubt that you have already carefully studied the report of the Director of Railway Audit and taken all steps necessary to apply to your railway the lessons to be learnt from the various cases of irregularities mentioned therein, they desire to draw special attention to a few points which they consider important:

Paragraphs 11 to 22; 29 to 32; 34 to 37; 39 to 45 and 46 to 54. Budgeting and control of expenditure.—The Board trust that steps will be taken to eliminate, as far as possible, the defects brought to notice, such as the omission to provide in the budget for certain fixed and recurring charges, failure to distribute final allotments over sub-heads of grants, irregular reappropriations, changes in classification and wrong booking of expenditure.

Paragraphs 71 to 76. Expenditure on new equipment.—Attention is drawn to the instructions issued on the subject in Railway Board's letter No. 33/256-S., dated 8th July 1933. The Board trust that these instructions are now being carefully followed and that new equipment and appliances are not obtained in large numbers or quantities without the administration completely satisfying itself as to their suitability for the purpose for which they are intended.

Paragraphs 82 and 83. Incurring of expenditure on behalf of other Departments.—The Board consider it important to ensure that, before any work which involves a recovery of a portion or the whole of it from another department of Government is undertaken the approval of that department should be obtained to the full extent of their liability in the matter, just as in the case of private bodies the amount involved is recovered in advance.

Paragraphs 85 and 88. Contracts.—The Railway Board consider that the fundamental precaution to be taken in arranging for the execution of works on contracts cannot be too strongly and too frequently impressed on all the officers concerned, namely, that no contractor or contractors should, except in a case of extreme urgency, be allowed to commence the work to be entrusted to them without a definite understanding in writing as to the terms (including the description of the work to be done, the rates at which they are to be paid, etc.), on which they are to execute the work.

Paragraphs 90 to 97. Employment of staff on works other than those to which their pay is charged.—The Railway Board regret to notice from the report of the Director of Railway Audit that this irregularity has not disappeared entirely.

Paragraphs 108 and 109. Inefficient balances in workshop accounts.—The Railway Board regret to note that large inefficient balances were allowed to accumulate in the workshops of certain railways without special steps being taken by the executive and accounts departments to analyse them, to ascertain the causes which led to them and to devise methods of avoiding a recurrence. The main causes for such accumulation were, it is observed,

- (a) want of proper care and watchfulness in the fixing and revision of rates for outturn from workshops, waste, scrap, etc., from time to time,
- (b) initiating a vital change in the accounts procedure without the necessary accounts, assistance and supervision,
- (c) the undesirable practice of manufacturing articles in excess of requirements, and
- (d) the absence of the fundamental check of issues from one department with the receipts in the department to which the issues were made.

The Railway Board desire to impress on Railway Administrations the necessity of having a frequent examination made of the state of the suspense balances in their workshops.

Paragraphs 112 to 114. Stores accounts.—The serious irregularities disclosed in these paragraphs were apparently part of the general and prolonged disorganisation of stores accounts on the East Indian Railway, and can, the Board trust, be taken to be far from typical of the state of affairs on railways generally. Nevertheless they desire to draw the attention of all railways to the serious consequences that may ensue by initial neglect of prescribed procedure and the failure to take timely action. It will be observed that the serious differences that were allowed to accumulate between the balances of stores on the general books of the accounts office and the balances on the books of the executive officers were due to the failure for a considerable period to reconcile these balances and to maintain correct price ledgers and check them properly at periodical intervals with the results of stock-taking.

Paragraphs 115 to 129. Purchase of stores.—Some of these cases show a regrettable want of co-ordination in the preparation of indents between the department requiring the stores and the department responsible for their purchase. Others show an equally regrettable failure to make a careful estimate of requirements before making a purchase. The Railway Board trust that as a result of the instructions contained in their letter of 10th November 1934 there will be few or no such cases in future.

Paragraphs 137 and 138. Auction sales of scrap through auctioneers.—The Railway Board trust that adequate steps are now being taken to safeguard the interests of the railway and to ensure that money due to the railway is paid promptly and that the scrap sold is not ordinarily handed over before the price is received by the railway.

Paragraphs 172 and 173.—The Railway Board trust that railway administrations are taking steps to settle outstanding questions as speedily as possible.

APPENDIX V.

Report by the Railway Board on the financial results of the electrifications of the Bombay Railways.

The attached statements which have been prepared in consultation between the Railway Administration and the statutory auditor concerned show the financial results of the electrification schemes on the Great Indian Peninsula and Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railways for the years 1930-31 to 1934-35. These have been prepared on the same basis as those which were prepared by Mr. Nixon as Director of Railway Audit in October 1933, and were placed before the Public Accounts Committee last year. The figures for the Great Indian Peninsula Railway show the result of all the schemes in a consolidated form as they are inter-dependent.

2. The figures for the two railways are summarised below :—

3. On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway the decrease in the percentage in 1933-34 is due to certain adjustments between capital and revenue, and expenditure incurred for the first time on the normal periodical overhaul to electric locomotives. In 1934-35 the expenditure on overhauls and repairs increased.

4. The more favourable results obtained on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway as compared with the results on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway are due to the fact that the gross capital expenditure in the former case was reduced to a much larger extent proportionately by the credit for the steam stock released. The actual value of this has proved to be even larger than was originally estimated.

5. The percentages given above have been worked out after taking the net outlay as equivalent to the gross outlay reduced by the cost of steam stock released because of the electrification and also by the extra outlay that would have been required for increasing traffic if no electrification had been carried out. This last is, as pointed out in last year's memorandum problematical. Increased traffic has not materialised to the extent anticipated and it is possible that some part of the estimated saving should be neglected. If the whole of it is neglected, the percentages will be as follows :—

|                 |      | Great Indian Peninsula.Per cent. | Bombay, Baroda and Central India.Per cent. |
|-----------------|------|--------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------|
| 1930-31 .. .. . | 3.12 | 3.18                                 |                                                |
| 1931-32 .. .. . | 3.58 | 3.46                                 |                                                |
| 1932-33 .. .. . | 3.49 | 3.77                                 |                                                |
| 1933-34 .. .. . | 3.24 | 4.61                                 |                                                |
| 1934-35 .. .. . | 2.87 | 5.58                                 |                                                |

6. As was pointed out last year, the real percentage of net savings for each railway probably lies between the figures in paragraphs 2 and 6 and, in all probability, more near the former than the latter. In both cases it is reasonably certain that extra outlay would have been necessary in any case even if electrification had not been introduced, in order to improve the capacity of the line, though it is not now possible to state with any degree of accuracy the number of additional steam locomotives which it would have been necessary to purchase immediately. In the case of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, for example, it would have been necessary in the absence of electrification to quadruple the line and the cost of this would have been so high as to be prohibitive. It has been estimated that, though the additional expenditure for additional steam stock would not all have been spent at once and some portion of it could have been deferred until the full increase in traffic was in sight, land for additional track facilities required for steam working would certainly have been required at once and the cost would not have been less than a crore of immediate expenditure and might have been considerably more. There would also have been a considerable expenditure necessary on the renewal of the existing stock. The estimate, therefore, of expenditure avoided by electrification is more likely to be an under than an over estimate.

APPENDIX VI.

To ascertain whether further economies were possible on India Railways, the Government of India obtained, by the kindness of the London Midland and Scottish Railways, the services of Mr. Pope, General Executive Assistant to the President of that railway. Mr. Pope who has been closely in touch with the various processes of rationalization put into practice in recent years on the London Midland and Scottish Railway was in India from December 1932 to February 1933.

2. In view of the shortness of Mr. Pope's visit, it was decided that he should concentrate his attention on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and inaugurate a detailed analysis of important activities of railway operation—"job analysis"—on that line. It was arranged to associate with him certain officers of other railways who could observe his method and, if necessary, continue the investigations after his departure from the country. The following were the officers selected for the purposes:—

Mr. J. A. Bell, Divisional Superintendent, East Indian Railway.

Lt.-Col. C. F. Carson, R.E., Divisional Superintendent, North Western Railway.

Mr. R. C. Case, Deputy Transportation Superintendent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway.

Mr. G. S. G. Higginson, District Transportation Officer, Bengal Nagpur Railway.

Mr. G. A. R. Trimming, Deputy Chief Mechanical Engineer, East Indian Railway.

3. Mr. Pope and these officers worked on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway during the months of January and part of February 1933. By the end of February, Mr. Pope presented a report to the Railway Board, copies of which are in the Library of the Legislature. In his covering letter, which is printed at pages vii and viii of the Report, Mr. Pope pointed out that already a large number of economies had been effected on Indian railways and there were no big individual economies left except the better use of locomotive power, and possible further amalgamation of railways, both of which are now under separate consideration. He, however, was emphatically of opinion that considerable savings would be found possible if a detailed analysis of every operation conducted on a railway "job analysis" were undertaken. For this purpose, he pointed out that it was necessary to have a continual organised research and investigation.

4. In accordance with this recommendation, which is further elaborated on page iv of the Report under the "Summary of conclusions and recommendations", it was decided to start job-analysis on all State-managed Railways, and the State Railway officers who were originally associated with Mr. Pope were selected to carry on the various investigations. Later similar organisations were started on most Company-managed railways as well and at the present moment such organisations exist on ten railways, as shown below :—

5. These officers continue to draw, while engaged on this work, the pay which they otherwise would have received. They have, since their appointment, organised a small staff to assist them in their operations. On some railways it has been found necessary to have an additional officer to assist in the investigation. The total cost involved during 1933-34 is estimated at Rs. 3 lakhs.

6. When this research work was initiated, the Railway Board asked Railway Administrations to report progress every six months to indicate what economies had been recommended by these officers. The first six monthly progress reports from the important State Railways have now been received and show that, while the research work is only in its initial stages, the analyses already undertaken cover a large variety of railway operations ; including, indeed, such widely diverse matters as administrative organisation, intensive use of locomotives, reduction of shunting charges, savings in shed maintenance, painting of structures, reduction in the use of stationery, bigger loads of trains, improved routing of traffic, better utilisation of scrap, and many others. Moreover, on the principle of no saving being too small to be ignored, small economies have been suggested in such items as the process of copying correspondence, the clearing of points, the use of lights and fans, and even in the curtailment of number of newspapers taken. So far as can be gauged at present, it is apparent that substantial savings in working expenses may be anticipated from the work now being carried on by these officers, justifying the small special research organisations which have been set up on each railway. Brief particulars of the savings anticipated on the four State-managed railways shown in their first six monthly progress reports are given below :—

(a) On the East Indian Railway it is anticipated that, in connection with only 9 items of railway operation, savings amounting to Rs. 1½ lakhs have been effected during 1933-34 and it is hoped that this may increase to two lakhs in 1934-35. In addition, 26 other items are still under investigation and if the savings anticipated on these materialize they will amount to about 3½ lakhs.

(b) On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway altogether 64 different items of operation have been analysed, and the possible savings up to September 1933 are placed at 2½ lakhs, which it is anticipated may increase to 6½ lakhs during the whole year. It would, however, be optimistic to assume that the administration will benefit to this extent immediately as the powers of retrenchment must, to some extent, be gradual.

(c) On the North Western Railway some 11 different items of operations have been analysed but as these have been conducted at many different stations (as for instance shunting costs, shed maintenance, etc.), the aggregate number of analyses undertaken up to the submission of the progress report amounts to no less than 78. If all the recommendations are finally accepted the savings estimated on an annual basis would amount to 12 lakhs ; of this amount already 5½ lakhs have been accepted as attainable by the departments concerned. It is estimated that during the year 1933-34 1½ lakhs may be saved.

(d) During the first six months of "job analysis" on the Eastern Bengal Railway a large number of detailed analyses have been carried out covering operations in the Mechanical Traffic, Engineering, and Stores Departments. During the present year the savings resulting from these are estimated at over 2 lakhs, a figure that, it is hoped, will increase considerably in future years.

7. The results to date after six months careful detailed analysis of such operations as have already been examined on four railways may be classified as below :—

It should be realized that all these figures, including even that of the East Indian Railway in the first column, should be accepted with reserve.

for retrenchment must be a slow and deliberate process. It is felt, however, that the results, so far, are sufficiently encouraging; more especially as "job analysis" has been in force for a comparatively short time. It should, moreover, be borne in mind that this process of research has only so far been applied to a certain number of operations and there are still large numbers waiting to be examined. On the London Midland and Scottish Railway the process of 'job analysis' was started some years back, and is still being carried on, as there is much ground remaining to be explored.

8. In addition to the 'job analysis' organizations working on each railway, the Railway Board themselves are examining certain other subjects recommended in Mr. Pope's report, among them being:—

- (a) the better use of locomotives;
- (b) the better use of railway land;
- (c) the more careful listing of surplus track, equipment, and accommodation;
- (d) additional research and experiments;
- (e) improved workshop practice, especially in regard to standardization of pattern design, the use of scrap, and the compilation of 'cost' data;
- (f) possibility of reducing hot axles.

As regards item (e) a small Committee is now engaged in investigating the compilation of "cost" data.

9. In recommending the initiation of 'job analysis' on each Railway Mr. Pope emphasized that no individual or railway has a monopoly of ideas or efficiency, and to ensure the proper pooling and wide application of all available economies he suggested that officers engaged on this research should hold periodical meetings to exchange ideas. This suggestion is being followed.

10. As the Committee are aware, Mr. Pope's services have again, through the kindness of the London Midland and Scottish Railway, been secured for Indian Railways during this winter; and he has been employed in making a more detailed investigation into the other State-managed Railways and examining the work done during the year by Railway Administrations themselves.

APPENDIX VII.

Memorandum by the Railway Board on the progress of 'job analysis' on Indian Railways up to 31st March 1934.

In February last, the Railway Board placed before the Standing Finance Committee for Railways a memorandum describing briefly the results of Mr. Pope's first visit to India, and explaining that small organisations for conducting a detailed examination of all railway activities—called by Mr. Pope 'Job Analysis'—had been set up on principal railways. A summary of the results of this work, as claimed and estimated then, was given, and these were shown to be sufficiently encouraging to justify a continuation of the organisations.

2. Further reports on 'job analysis' from certain railways are now to hand, giving the progress up to the end of the official year 1933-34. These show that the work is being continued with vigour and with an encouraging degree of success. The more interesting features of these reports are summarised in the following paragraphs:—

3. (a) On the East Indian Railway considerable savings have been effected during the official year 1933-34, generally under three headings:—

- (i) Economies in expenditure on fuel by substituting cheaper for more expensive coal and obtaining coal from nearer collieries;
- (ii) Better utilisation of scrap metal; and
- (iii) Reduction of staff.

The total savings, effected during the year, amounted to Rs. 7,01,083, which has been checked and certified as correct by the Chief Accounts Officer, while the total cost of the 'job analysis' organisation during the year amounted only to Rs. 77,691.

It is reported that investigations under 20 separate heads are also in progress, covering such extensive ground as the organisation of the Stores Department, running sheds, sick line work, station work and marshalling yards; and including such varied items as the increased loads of goods trains, the intensive use of coaching stock, reduction in the use of stationery, reclamation of oil from used waste from axle boxes, the use of pulverised coal in stationary boilers, and the compilation of fuel and commercial statistics on Hollerith machines.

(b) On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, the cost of 'job analysis' during the year 1933-34 amounted to Rs. 56,680 and the savings effected to Rs. 4,29,482, chiefly under wages. Since the initiation of the work on this railway, no less than 136 separate investigations have been started, covering many widely divergent activities. The cost of staff in many of the departments has been, and is still being, scrutinised, and considerable reductions have been found possible. The Nagpur Division has been merged in the Bhusaval Division and further important developments are forecasted in the intensive use of locomotives, regarding which a separate report will shortly be available.

(c) On the North Western Railway the cost of 'job analysis' for the year 1933-34 amounted to Rs. 32,000 and the savings effected during the same period to Rs. 12,66,749. One of the most important investigations undertaken on the North Western Railway dealt with the maintenance of track and resulted in savings amounting to Rs. 5,23,629. This saving has been effected under "Maintenance of Way and Works", the bill for which generally accounts for about 15 per cent. of the working expenses of railways. Another Rs. 2½ lakhs has been saved by careful analysis of shunting and other activities at stations, and a further sum of over a lakh by improved methods of utilising scrap. Analysis is still being continued in connection with track and other maintenance, the operation of running sheds, and the working of marshalling yards and goods sheds. Considerable work still remains to be done in the analysis of the work of clerical staff, and further reports are shortly promised in connection with the work done in certain Stores depots. It is also hoped to initiate shortly an important investigation, aiming at further co-ordination of all mechanical workshops.

(d) On the Eastern Bengal Railway the cost of 'job analysis' for the year ended 1933-34 amounted to Rs. 63,000 per annum, whereas the annual saving effected on one item alone, viz., reduction of station staff, amounted to more than this sum. Actually a conservative estimate places the economies effected during the year at Rs. 2,14,864. This figure is chiefly made up of wages.

One interesting detailed investigation conducted on the Eastern Bengal Railway dealt with the maintenance of Block Instruments and Fixed Signals. Every operation, however small, in connection with this work was scrutinised and tested, and it was found that, if conducted to a reasonable time table, the work could be carried out with considerably less staff. The savings effected during 1933-34 amounted to Rs. 38,000.

Investigations into the better use of locomotives and coaching stock have already produced substantial results. On two districts the daily mileage of locomotives has been appreciably raised, and on the Calcutta suburban services, it has been found possible to provide increased trains with fewer coaching rakes. These analyses are still proceeding.

Further savings are forecasted in purchases of less quantity of high grade coal, and the abandonment of certain telegraph lines, with a consequent saving of rent.

(e) On the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway 'job analysis' started later at the beginning of October 1933. The economies actually effected have not been reported, but the annual savings which have been recommended and accepted are estimated to be Rs. 3,52,862 whereas the annual cost of the job-analysing organisation is anticipated to be Rs. 58,789. The principal saving anticipated is under the heading 'intensive use of engines', accounting for nearly Rs. 1½ lakhs. Analysis of the work in certain workshops and traffic stations is expected to result in a further saving of about Rs. 1½ lakhs.

4. The table below shows the savings effected on the five railways mentioned above, together with the cost of the job-analysing organisation on each railway for the year 1933-34 :—

APPENDIX VIII.

COPY OF LETTER No. 8593-F., DATED THE 21ST AUGUST, FROM THE RAILWAY DEPARTMENT (RAILWAY BOARD), TO THE AGENT, NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY, REGARDING IRREGULAR BALANCES UNDER WORKSHOP MANUFACTURING SUSPENSE ACCOUNT OF THE LOCOMOTIVE WORKSHOPS, MCGHALPURA, FURNISHED TO THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE IN SEPTEMBER 1935 IN ACCORDANCE WITH AN UNDERTAKING GIVEN BY THE FINANCIAL COMMISSIONER OF RAILWAYS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE.

With reference to the correspondence resting with your letter No. 256-S/21/3/1933, dated the 22nd July 1935, I am directed to state that the Railway Board, after a very careful perusal of the explanations given, consider that the explanations are far from satisfactory.

2. To begin with, the Railway Board observe that the main cause for the accumulation of the inefficient balances in the workshop manufacturing suspense account was the radical change made in April 1928 in the procedure of booking expenditure, and that this radical change, which, in the opinion of the administration, required really an expert accountant to initiate and supervise, was left to be inaugurated by the Production Engineer without any assistance from the Accounts Department. They also observe that this change was made in consultation with the then Chief Auditor of the railway and, so far as can be ascertained, without the written approval of any authority higher than the heads of departments concerned. The Board do not think that such vital changes in accounts procedure should have been initiated without the consultation of higher accounts or administrative authorities, and are of the opinion that the then Chief Auditor should have paid more attention to evolving a suitable accounts procedure to fit in with the reorganisation and to placing at the disposal of the Production Engineer a person with the necessary experience of workshop accounts to assist him in details.

3. Another cause for the growth of the inefficient balance in this case was, it is noticed, the irregular system, which was then in force in the workshops, of manufacturing material in excess of requirements. It is stated that this was probably a legacy from the past when all expenditure in the workshops was charged to revenue repairs. That such a state of affairs should have been allowed to continue reflects, in the opinion of the Railway Board, seriously on the efficiency of the supervision exercised over the working and management of the workshops.

4. The Railway Board further observe that no explanation has been offered on the first point raised in their letter No. 8593-F., dated the 12th June 1935, namely, the failure to exercise the fundamental and obvious check of the quantities of articles manufactured in the shops with the quantities issued and of the quantities issued by the shops with the quantities acknowledged by stores. For this also the Railway Board must hold the Audit and Accounts Department, and in a lesser degree, the workshop management, responsible.

5. In conclusion, I am to state that the Board feel greatly disturbed by the state of affairs revealed by this case, and trust that you are taking steps to impress on all the workshop staff, both accounts and executive, the lessons to be learnt from this case and that you are taking adequate measures to prevent the recurrence of such cases.

the terms of reference had been got into proper shape, there was no very considerable delay before the announcement was made to the public. Incidentally, at that time, it was also discovered that the term 'tribunal' was, in the terms of the wording of the relevant sections of the Bill, an inappropriate term to apply to this committee. I suppose it was considered too late then or unnecessary to change its title. But official minds were aware that the word 'tribunal' was not the proper one to apply to this body. I have thought it advisable to put these considerations, which came to my personal knowledge, before the House in the hope that they might clear up some misapprehensions which seem to have existed in the minds of Members of this House at the last adjournment debate.

Sir Henry Howard and I were appointed in December, 1930, to survey the ground which we thought should be covered in this matter of the financial adjustments between India and Burma. We signed our report in April, 1931, and it was formally published in September of that same year. And, when I say formally published, I mean that it was formally laid on the table of this House, it was delivered to the Press and copies were placed on sale at the Government depots. Perhaps, as one of the joint authors of this report, I may be permitted to express a certain amount of disappointment that there was not a bigger run on it, because, I think, only two copies have been sold since it was open to be purchased. And yet, Sir, that memorandum was sufficient to inform non-official opinion in India, if non-official opinion in India had been interested in this subject, that this was a matter which involved at any rate 50 or 60 crores of capital money and which had repercussions on the budgetary position of the Government of India to the extent of some three crores or so. Sir, as a mere financial official of Government it does seem to me that non-official opinion has at times made itself very much more voluble in matters which concern the taxpayers of India less. For, within the next three years or so, let me say up to the end of 1934, non-official opinion in India gave expression to views on this not unimportant matter on only three occasions. And of those three occasions, two were at the instance of the Government itself.

The first occasion was when the Howard-Nixon memorandum was presented to the Standing Finance Committee. I was asked to attend all the meetings of that Committee and several Members of the Committee consulted me out of office hours to ask for explanations of the various statements in the memorandum. During the course, both within and without the Committee, of my giving what help I could to its members, I undoubtedly offered for their consideration various alternative renderings that had passed through my mind and which at various stages I had discarded in favour of the final recommendations which I made in the Howard-Nixon report. And I think, I may say without injustice to the members of the Standing Finance Committee, that where in a few cases they did offer alternative renderings to those put into the Howard-Nixon report, in every instance, except one, those alternatives originated from me and had, therefore, been considered by me at an earlier stage of the proceedings.

The Standing Finance Committee completed its labours in March, 1932, and its report was formally presented to the predecessors of this House in the early days of April, 1932. There was a debate which occupied two days. In this House at the moment I believe there are not many Members who took part in that debate. However, I do not think I am doing them an injustice if I say that they never seriously got down to the financial issues. And I think that that statement is best confirmed by the fact that the House on that occasion came to the conclusion that they would wish to postpone consideration of this subject,—a mode of dealing with a difficult matter which some of my friends opposite will probably say is not confined merely to Legislatures.

The third occasion on which non-official opinion expressed itself at all on this subject during these three years was in a document which is called "Report on the financial obligations between Great Britain and India" and is headed "The Congress Select Committee". I propose at a later stage of my speech to return to some of the statements made in the report, and I will content myself at this stage by making only two observations about it. The first observation is that if, what to me appears to be the intricate matter of dividing up the assets and liabilities of the Government of India between India and Burma can be disposed of, as apparently in this report it is intended to be disposed of, in 16 lines of print, then Sir Henry Howard and I made very unnecessarily heavy weather of the matter. And secondly, if my information is correct, this report seems to have suffered very much the same fate as the report of the Standing Finance Committee of the old Legislature, inasmuch as, it has been left in a state of suspended animation in the absence of its formal adoption by its parent body.

Perhaps, Sir, it was not an unfair inference to make from the paucity of the expression of non-official opinion for a space of three to 3½ years when Government concluded that non-official opinion in India had nothing more to say on the subject. And, Sir, if I may go a little ahead of the time-table to which I have got at the moment, I would refer to a letter addressed to the Government of India by the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry, dated the 13th August, 1935, a copy of which was published in the papers. This letter set out,—and if I may say so, set out very ably,—some of the issues which were concerned in this problem. But, Sir, I think I am being fair to the letter in stating that it did not purport to offer any views as to how these various issues should be treated. So that for the last three or four years there has been no idea put forward by non-official India of any financial consequence which had not already passed through the minds of those who, from time to time, have been responsible for advising the Government of India in the matter.

Sir, when Sir Henry Howard and I were put on to tackle this problem we were given no voluminous back papers to read because there were none. So far as I am able to gather, except possibly in regard to the case of Northern Ireland, previous to this, no systematic attempt had ever been made in such circumstances as these scientifically to distribute the assets and liabilities between two partners. The whole field of principle was open to Sir Henry Howard and me to explore. And in due course we came to the conclusion that there were, even on theoretical grounds, only three possible manners of approaching this problem. Two of those possible methods of approach I would describe as historical, and I would like to give some slight, but I am afraid inadequate, account of what those two methods of approach would mean.

The first method I would call the analysis of debt method. It would assume that in general the revenue transactions of the past had been conducted for the mutual benefit of the two countries and that on the whole should be regarded as closed and done with, except in so far as those transactions had in any respect affected the debt position. For it was the opinion of all of us that it was in the matter of the distribution of the debt that the main problem arose. The process would mean that we should go back to 1826 when Burma first appeared on the scene and trace out the rise and fall of the public debt of Indian and attempt to ascribe specific causes to each rise and to each fall. And if that cause was a cause which could be attributed to Burma that item would be made over to Burma's account, and if that cause could be attributed to Continental India then India would assume the corresponding responsibility. That method of approach has a certain plausibility about it and yet there are some theoretical objections that one can urge against it, apart from practical ones. There does seem to me to be something wrong about a process which means that a debt, incurred perhaps 100 years ago on some specific object, but which, in the meantime, in some manner or other, has been paid off, should be resuscitated and charged to one or other of the parties. Also, as a practical difficulty in this method of approach, I would refer to the very large number of items which would be found in such an analysis as this, where the debt would have been caused on joint account, neither specifically for the purpose of one party nor for the purpose of the other. I refer to such items as debt liabilities incurred in the unfortunate days when the Government's yearly finances result in a revenue deficit. There have been occasions where debt has been incurred by Government in maintaining the currency, and I think I may include in this group the cost of military operations on the frontier. In regard to each of these, it would be necessary to assign a fractional share of responsibility to Burma, and it would also be necessary to decide whether each of these events should be shared between Burma and India specifically having regard to the circumstances attending it, or whether one fraction should be applied to all liabilities of this nature.

Then, again, there is another difficulty. It is not the practice of the Government of India, nor, I believe, of many Governments, to go out into the open market and borrow for specific purposes. At the beginning of the year, the Government of India in the Finance Department takes a survey of the likely receipts during the next year; the receipts, let me say, from the deposits of Provident Fund contributors, receipts accruing from the Post Office Savings Bank, and in other ways; and, finding a gap between the disbursements which they want to make and the receipts which they seem likely to get, they go into the market and raise the amount of money necessary to fill that gap. So that when Government engages on some capital undertaking, such as the building of New Delhi, it cannot ordinarily say whether for that purpose it is using interestfree money deposited for instance by local bodies or cheap Savings Bank money or part of the dearer ordinary Borrowings of the Government.

But certain persons who have most strongly advocated this analysis of debt method of approach have in their minds particularly debts which have been incurred through military operations. There are difficulties particularly in regard to such items. It is not the usual practice of Governments to keep a commercial balance sheet when they are running a war. At a time of war, the expenditure of civil departments usually goes up, and in any properly arranged balance sheet that would have to be a factor to be taken into account. One would also have to take into account what would have been the normal cost of military defence of the country, and also the fact that the normal cost may have moved upwards or downwards as a result of the military operations.

But some of the gentlemen whom I have heard refer to this method of approach, especially when they are considering this problem of India and Burma, have had in their minds more particularly the three so-called Burmese wars. The first Burma war took place in 1820 something: Its cost has been variously placed by authorities at anything between £3 millions and £15 millions. How much it did cost I am not able to say. But in any consideration of how that particular liability should be apportioned, it would almost certainly be necessary to take into account the fact that as a result of that war an indemnity of one crore was paid. And I suppose it would also be necessary to take into account the fact that that one crore of rupees was paid not into the coffers merely of continental India but into what then became the joint coffers of India and Burma. Further still, in dealing with the first Burma war, it would be necessary, I think, to take into account that as a result of the war, part of what is now the British province of Assam was annexed. The second Burmese war was a little war. The third Burmese war was not really a war at all. It was a military occupation which extended over several years, and again various figures have been given by various authorities as to the cost of that military occupation. But it has been very pertinently pointed out that the military occupation of Upper Burma as a consequence of the third Burmese War involved the administration of Upper Burma and, at that time what in ordinary circumstances would have been called the civil administration of Upper Burma was conducted by the military. Certainly, the Burma people, if they had to take over the cost of the third Burmese War, would ask that the cost of the civil administration should be deducted from it.

But there are other people who have been interested in this particular method of approach who have had in their minds a rather wider point of view and that is that there should come into account some third party. Honourable Members will have read the newspapers as I have, and will have noticed that in the Burma Legislature a resolution was passed suggesting, that instead of the Burma people taking upon themselves the liability for the amount of debt assigned to them in the tribunal's report, it would be a very good thing for Burma if His Majesty's Government would take it on. (Opposition cries of "Hear, Majesty's Government would take it on.") I have no doubt the people of Burma would have been equally satisfied if the Government of India had agreed to take it on. (Honourable Members: "No, no.") I do not doubt that they would have made no complaint if the Government of Abyssinia had offered to take it on. Sir, this problem, as it was set out in all the earlier documents on the subject emanating from the Round Table Conference, has been spoken

REPORT OF THE TRIBUNAL ON FINANCIAL SETTLEMENT BETWEEN INDIA AND BURMA AFTER THE SEPARATION.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to move :

" That the Report of the Tribunal appointed to advise on the formulation of a financial settlement between India and Burma in the event of separation be taken into consideration."

Sir, I do not propose to make any remarks on this motion at the moment except one, and that is that I think it would be to the convenience and advantage of the House if Mr. Nixon, who has taken part in these negotiations from the beginning, were to make a preliminary statement and if I were to reserve any remarks that I may find it necessary to make till a subsequent stage in the debate. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Motion moved :

" That the Report of the Tribunal appointed to advise on the formulation of a financial settlement between India and Burma in the event of separation be taken into consideration."

Mr. J. C. Nixon (Government of India : Nominated Official) : Mr. President, I am called upon to take part in these proceedings for the purpose of attempting to lay before the House what in the official mind have appeared to be the specific issues in this matter of adjustments between Burma and India, and to attempt, at the same time, to give the House some of the considerations which were in the minds of those responsible for advising the Government of India as to the course they should adopt in regard to these issues.

The phrase, " neutral and impartial tribunal ", first occurred in a letter from the Government of Burma, and I take it that their intention in proposing this form of procedure was to eliminate what would have been the alternative manner of dealing with this problem ; which would have been that the Burma Government would have made out a case and submitted it to the Government of India ; the Government of India would have considered the Burma Government's case, made out its own case, offered its comments on the Government of Burma's case and submitted the whole matter to the Secretary of State for his decision. By that process the Government of India would have been in the advantage of having the last word on the subject before the matter came up for judgment. I conceive that the purpose of the Government of Burma in suggesting this alternative procedure was to attempt to put the Government of India and the Government of Burma into a position of equality with respect to one another. I also conceive that the intention behind the use of the phrase ' neutral or impartial ' was to eliminate from the deciding authority any representation of either the Government of India or the Government of Burma.

Certainly, in many of the earlier documents on the subject, and particularly the documents which emanated from the Round Table Conference, it was contemplated that Members of the Standing Finance Committee of the two Legislatures would be associated in some form or other with the proceedings of the Tribunal. However, in the latest authoritative pronouncement on the subject, the report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, although there is a reference to the impartial tribunal, there is no reference at all to the association with the proceedings of the tribunal of members of the Standing Finance Committees. It may be that that omission was not intentional ; it may be that it would not be fair to draw an inference from that omission. But it does occur to me that it is possible that the Members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee had before them the reports of the two Standing Finance Committees and read into those reports, what I think I myself read into them, a certain diffidence expressed by the members of the committees as to their capabilities and qualifications for dealing with this somewhat intricate subject.

The decision of the Joint Parliamentary Committee that they were recommending to Parliament the separation of Burma must have come to the notice of the India Office some time in September, 1934, and was communicated to the Government of India. At that time had the Government of India been looking round for non-officials to associate with the tribunal's proceedings, they would naturally have chosen members of the Standing Finance Committee who had spent a considerable time in soaking themselves in the subject. But I need hardly remind the House that the Assembly which was in existence at that time was shortly coming to an end, and I hardly think that the present House would have felt that their interests and their responsibilities would have been properly represented had the members of the Standing Finance Committee of the dying Legislature been appointed to represent the non-official interests of India. It could not have been until February of this year that the new Standing Finance Committee could have been brought into existence and certainly some time must have elapsed before those Members could have got themselves acquainted with the subject. This would have meant a very considerable delay in bringing into operation the Tribunal and that was a delay which His Majesty's Government, at that time apparently, felt it was unwise to face.

I was not present at the debate on the adjournment motion last Session, but I have read through the proceedings and I gather that certain Honourable Members there had a complaint in regard to the lateness of the announcement of the composition of the Tribunal and of its terms of reference. I think, Sir, I can throw a certain amount of light on that matter and I can assure the House that the delay in making the announcement was neither deliberate nor inadvertent. Certain terms of reference for the committee had been drafted in the India Office and had been sent out to India and Burma for scrutiny. I do not remember now whether these terms were altered when they came out to this country. However, it was quite evident to everybody that the terms of reference eventually decided upon did clearly enough indicate the scope of the Tribunal's work, and I have every reason to believe that that draft of the terms of reference was actually made over to the members of the Tribunal when the Tribunal was first called together. But it must have been about Christmas that somebody, I do not know who, discovered that the terms of reference, as drafted, did not accord with the relevant sections of the Bill. The matter was made over to the legal officers of the India office. It is possible that they took somewhat longer over the matter than was necessary. But I might remind the House that the Bill itself was only published in the latter part of January, 1935, and, I believe, that after of as an apportionment of the assets and liabilities between Burma and India....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Today being Friday, the House has to be adjourned earlier than usual. The House now stands adjourned till a quarter past two of the clock.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

Mr. J. C. Nixon : Mr. President, I just want to make two further observations on the subject which I was dealing with before lunch. I was remarking on the fact, that so far as the question before the House is concerned, the earlier documents in the matter had referred to dividing assets and liabilities between two parties, India and Burma, and the terms of appointment of the Amery tribunal were framed in the same manner. So that, whatever Honourable Members opposite may have to say in regard to this subject, they can hardly throw blame on to the Members of the Amery Tribunal for refusing to go outside the terms of their reference.

I would like now to say a few words on the second possible historical method of approach to this subject which I would describe as the debtor and creditor method. This method would suppose that year by year, since Burma first came into the picture in 1826, it would be possible to compile an account showing the various monies which had been raised on behalf of Burma and spent on behalf of Burma and a yearly balancing figures set down. And at the time of separation those balancing figures should be added up and would represent either what Burma should pay India or on the other hand what India might have to pay Burma. The question of compound interest, as the authors of the Congress Report have remarked, might have to come into consideration in a method of this nature. Just to illustrate some of the practical difficulties of that method of approach, I would refer to some of the differences which occurred between Sir Henry Howard and myself in dealing with the accounts of even so recent a year as 1929-30. For one purpose it would have been convenient for us if we could have distinguished between the receipts which were referable to Burma and those which were referable to continental India in the method of Income-tax. As Honourable Members of this House know, the place of assessment, under the Indian Income-tax Act, is a matter largely of the convenience of the income-tax authorities or of the convenience of the assessee. For instance, the Imperial Bank is, I understand, assessed in Calcutta, although its operations of course cover Burma. On the other hand, the Burma Oil Company, which must make a very large proportion of its profits in India, is assessed for income-tax purposes in Rangoon, and in the published accounts, its payments are shown as a receipt under Burma. Sir Henry Howard and I had a certain amount of talk as to how we could adjust these facts, and at the end we had to confess that the only way to do so was to guess. The difference between our guesses for the accounts of the year 1929-30 amounted to 20 lakhs. Sir Henry Howard suspected that my guess was in favour of India and I thought, that Sir Henry Howard's guess was in favour of Burma. I have no doubt that if any attempt were made to go over the accounts of each year since the time that Income-tax was instituted, the person who made the guess,—I call it a guess because it is nothing more than a guess,—on behalf of India would always guess in favour of India and vice versa, so that, in regard to this matter alone,—we are taking only the last 45 years into account,—there is room for a difference of opinion of, at any rate, five to ten crores. Again, Sir Henry Howard and I came up against the problem of the Posts and Telegraph Department. It is only in recent years that Government have attempted to set out the working of the Posts and Telegraph Department on commercial lines so as to be able to say whether any particular section of it is run at a profit or loss. And even so, they have not attempted to make separate profit and loss statements for individual geographical parts of the Indian Empire. I did, as a matter of fact, get the Posts and Telegraph Department for the year 1929-30 to make a special compilation for Burma in order to arrive at some rough conclusion as to how that section of the department was working. They did not purport to put any great reliance in the figures which they produced for me, and, I am sure, that that department would be the first, if I gave them the problem of doing that process year by year back to when the Posts and Telegraph Department first started, to declare the matter to be impossible. Then again, if one were tackling the question in this manner, one would have to take into account the cost of the army. About a crore and half rupees are spent in Burma on the Indian Army, and the rest in India. But no one would pretend, at least nobody representing India would pretend, that that  $1\frac{1}{2}$  crores of expenditure in Burma represents the proper contribution which Burma should be making to the cost of the Indian Army. On the question of how exactly the contribution of Burma to the cost of the Indian Army ought to be computed, I am not ready with an answer, but I am pretty certain that any suggestions I might make would be very strongly opposed by anybody representing Burma.

I refer to this method, what I have called the debtor and creditor method, particularly because, so far as I have been able to understand the Report of the Congress Select Committee, this is the manner of approaching the problem which that Committee has selected to follow. I am not quite sure whether I understand what this Report purports to do in regard to Burma, or whether it really purports to indicate the financial adjustment which should take place between the two countries in the event of separation. (Some Congress Members : "No.") I can only say that some of my Congress friends have certainly quoted at me the figure which is given here, 102 crores, and in their minds this is the answer to that problem. Also I notice on one page of this Report a footnote which rather indicates to me, although it does not prove it, that at any rate one of the authors of this Report looked on it in this way. However taking the Report for what it is, I would like to refer to one or two figures in it. Before I do so, I would draw the attention of the House to a small asterisk which appears on page 60, against which a footnote indicates that that figure is subject to re-computation. I can, therefore, assume, I think, that the other figures against which there are no asterisks are not subject to re-computation, but are final figures. And I want to refer to two items which appear among these final figures. There is a sum not exactly specified but forming a part of 22 crores which, according to this Report, Burma is liable to repay to India on account of losses incurred in running the Burma Railways in the way of revenue deficits and interest. I do not know whether the authors of this report had access to the same papers from which I studied the position of the Burma Railways, but there is no reason why they had not because all the papers I consulted were documents readily available to them. It is true, that at one time, the Burma Railways had cost Government Rs. 30 lakhs, but, in my mind, it is equally true that since that date they have repaid to the exchequer that Rs. 30 lakhs and a very handsome sum in addition. I am quite sure that my Honourable friends from Burma would say that in any approach to the problem along these lines there would be no question of Burma paying India for deficits on the running of the Burma Railways, but, on the contrary, a very serious question would arise as to the amount which India has received on account of the profits that have accrued, at any rate, in recent years from the running of the Burma Railways. I would also just like to note here that in this account there is no mention of a small sum of Rs. 30 crores or so which the Burma Railways cost, capitally, and which, according to my conception, Burma would certainly have to pay to India. I do not know whether that omission from this Report is deliberate or inadvertent, but it seems to me to be rather serious. The second small item in this Report which I would like to refer to is one of a crore a year—and, by the way, this is again not one of the figures subject to re-computation—a crore a year for the last 45 years to represent what Burma should reimburse to India on account of the services of the Indian Army. So far as the Howard-Nixon memorandum throws light on the problem, it indicates that at any rate, in about the year 1929-30 Burma was contributing a sum of the order of Rs. five crores a year towards the upkeep of the Indian Army, of which Rs. 1½ crores were spent in Burma and the other Rs. 3½ crores in India. I believe Burma thinks that this contribution of Rs. five crores was rather larger than the amount which Burma ought to have contributed for that purpose. On that point I am not in agreement with them, but I am satisfied that at that stage they were making a contribution towards the cost of the Indian Army of that order of figure. I am also as certain that if one were to approach the problem in the manner which I have described—the debtor-creditor method—no question would arise of Burma paying one crore a year for the last 45 years extra to what she has already subscribed for the purpose. My Burma friends are much more likely to suggest that, of the sum of money which Burma has already subscribed to the upkeep of the Army, some portion should be reimbursed to them.

This method indeed would lead to an analysis year by year, as I said, of the sums of money received and spent or obligations undertaken on behalf of the two countries. It would mean an analysis of figures and an analysis of facts; and, so far as my opinion is worth any thing, I would say that neither the figures nor the facts any longer exist from which this method could be pursued. Further than that I will say that this method assumes a relationship between the two parties which, in fact, did not exist, at any rate, up to the year 1921, and, even since the year 1921, has existed only in a very partial form.

For these reasons and for others, Sir Henry Howard and myself discarded the historical approach to the solution of this problem. The conclusion we came to was that we would have to take the assets and liabilities as they happened to exist on the date of separation and not go into the past to see who had been to blame or who should receive credit for the past. And our object was to try and formulate an equitable plan of dividing that body of assets and liabilities in terms of the circumstances at the date of separation. As it happened, the Amery Tribunal concluded that that, or at any rate something similar to that, was the proper principle to apply to this problem. I get from some of the things which the Tribunal said during its deliberations the phrase which should perhaps be applied to this method—and I would call it the dissolution of partnership method. No one would pretend that the relationship in the past between India and Burma was that of partners; but as lawyers know, in Courts every day there is a variety of case which comes up for decision in which certain assets and liabilities have to be apportioned, and, in general, the Courts apply a common principle to that type of case even though the case could not be described as a dissolution of partnership.

I would now, Sir, like, in the time that remains to me, to show the application of this principle, which I have described as the dissolution of partnership principle, affects some of the more specific elements of the problem. I do not propose to dwell very long on the currency matter. Burma does and did require to know what would happen in regard to that large body of assets behind the currency in the event of Burma, at some future date, deciding to have its own currency. But it was apparent to Sir Henry Howard and to me, and it has become more apparent since, that the two Governments, and indeed I believe everybody interested in the problem would at any rate for some time after separation desire that there should not be added to the complexities of the situation a change in the currency, and an agreement between the two Governments to that effect has been embodied in a memorandum which was circulated to Honourable Members at the same time as the report of the Indo-Burma Tribunal. As a consequence of that agreement, in due course, an amending Bill to the Reserve Bank of India Act will be presented to this House. The Tribunal, having been told that it was not intended to divide the currency assets at the time of political separation, concluded, therefore, that the matter did not come within their terms of reference, but they did cast a glance at this subject for the following reason. During the negotiations between the two Governments the Burma Government pointed out to the Government of India that there were certain recent elements in the Government of India debt which could be clearly traced to currency operations. They suggested that the proper manner of sharing those liabilities was one based on currency factors. The Government of India did not agree, but they were not prepared to make an issue of the matter with the Burma Government; in fact, they were prepared to make, if this amounted to a concession, a concession of it. However, the Tribunal, being more prompted, if I may say so, by the logic of the situation, refused to isolate these particular elements of the public debt of India. They considered that these should be treated the same as any other part of the public debt of India and divided in the ratio to which I shall presently refer.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[20TH SEP. 1935.]

[Mr. J. C. Nixon.]

In the matter of debt, it is the practice of Government, in its accounts, to divide it up into two portions. Against one portion are specified certain assets, and it is understood in our accounts that specific amounts of the debt can be associated with those assets. It was the opinion of Sir Henry Howard and myself—agreed to by the two Governments, and eventually accepted by the Tribunal—that the proper manner of partitioning that portion of the debt was that the party which came into possession of the asset should take the corresponding amount of debt shown against that asset in the public accounts. The Tribunal somewhat departed from that general rule in the case of the Railways where they made an adjustment on account of certain repayment of railway capital which occurs year by year. I must confess that in that respect the Government accounts are not altogether consistent with themselves. There is avowedly an anomaly in the Government accounts on that point and Sir Henry Howard and the Tribunal were too shrewd to miss it. As regards the balance of the debt which is not represented by assets of any sort, the problem arises as to how it should be shared between Burma and India. Sir Henry Howard and I concluded that the proper manner of dividing it up was in accordance with factors dependent upon the respective revenues raised in the two countries, but there remained between us a fairly large gap as to what should be taken into account in defining those revenues. The Government of India supported my view of the case. The Government of Burma made certain modifications in Sir Henry Howard's original views when they argued their case before the Tribunal. But this was an issue where the Tribunal insisted on taking its own lead. It was not prepared to accept an unqualified principle that the proper manner of dividing this balance of debt was in strict accordance with the respective revenues raised in the two countries. It would be a little difficult for me,—in fact I think I should regard it as impossible,—to summarise the arguments of the Tribunal when dealing with this question of the ratio, and I shall have to direct the attention of Honourable Members to paragraphs 52 to 64 of their report. There is one feature, however, in their argument which I would like to refer to and that is that the Tribunal considered it was relevant to take into account the differential effect of the protective policy of the Government of India on the customs revenue paid by the inhabitants of Burma as compared with the customs revenue paid by the inhabitants of continental India. I would, Sir, with your permission, read out their final conclusion on this subject. It is in paragraph 64 of their report :

“ We do not propose to assign any precise weight to these different alternative arguments for a ratio of contribution below that of the actual revenue contribution of recent years. But our study of all the various aspects of the question and of the arguments and figures presented to us has led us to the conclusion that, for our particular purpose of arriving at a just financial settlement, the proper ratio in which Burma should contribute in respect of the liabilities outstanding at the date of separation (subject to certain qualifications in connection with currency) should be 7.5 per cent.”

Up to this point, Sir Henry Howard and I had been dealing on comparatively amicable terms. The differences between us were differences of detail rather than of principle. But, when we came to the question of pension, we found we were miles apart and the gap never seemed to close. Briefly put, the view which I held of pensions, both military and civil, was, that they were a liability which, looked at in a capitalised form, was no different in nature from the balance of generalised debt and that, therefore, they should be shared between the two countries in the same ratio as was applicable to the balance of debt.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask one question ? Will you please explain this point. The ratio that was determined previously was 10½ per cent. and now they have reduced it to 7½ per cent. What is the data for this change ?

Mr. J. C. Nixon : It is true that the Howard-Nixon report, so far as it represented the views of myself, calculated the proper ratio at ten per cent. or thereabouts, taking only the revenues into account. It is also true that the Tribunal have chosen the figure of 7½ per cent. I expressed my inability to summarise the arguments by means of which the Tribunal had arrived at that 7½ per cent. figure and I do not think that I can do any more than direct Honourable Members to the relevant part of the Tribunal's report.

I was talking on the matter of pensions. I had said that I had viewed the pensionary liability as being very much in the same class as the balance of debt not represented by assets. On the other hand, Sir Henry Howard considered that the liability of Burma in the matter of pensionary obligations should be measured by the proportion of the departments which Burma proposed to take over after separation. For instance, Burma proposes after separation, as I understand them, to employ troops which will cost it about a crore and a half and it considered that its proper share of the military pensionary liabilities should be measured by the figure of a crore and a half as against the whole cost of the Indian Army, which, at the time we were dealing with this, was about 50 crores. So that they considered that their proper share of military pensions was about three or 3½ per cent. On the other hand I said that it should be ten per cent., and, as I have just said, the Tribunal considered that it should be 7½ per cent. The Tribunal accepted the principle advocated by the Government of India although the actual financial advantage of their decision is certainly reduced by the fact that they have pitched on 7½ per cent. as the sharing ratio. In order to indicate to Honourable Members the magnitude of this liability, I would remind them that the net pensionary bill of the Government of India at the present time, including civil and military pensions, is of the order of eight crores of rupees a year and if one wants to think of that liability in capital terms one would have to multiply by some such figure as eight (and, I may say, not by 15, as has been suggested by a recent contributor to the Hindustan Times). The application of this principle to pensions goes further than in regard to the active pension list of which I have just given you the figures. It was acknowledged by all the parties concerned that a liability will also lie on Burma in regard to what has been called part-earned pensions which are the pensions which will arise in the future of which a portion can be attributed to pre-separation service. And the same principle—that India is due to receive from Burma 7½ per cent. of the total of that liability—applies to this factor. It is a little difficult for me to indicate to Honourable Members the magnitude of that liability but, according to certain calculations which I have made, I put the total of that liability down at a figure of between 80 and 90 crores capitally. I said it would be very difficult to work out the amount. In order to arrive at an irreproachably accurate figure, I think I might very well describe the problem as impossible, and it was because of that in the Howard-Nixon Report I proposed a composition. On a rough calculation I considered that Burma would owe India something of the order of five crores on account of part-earned pensions. I am not prepared to say that the figure should not be four crores or six crores. I think I am prepared to say that it is not ten crores. It is round about the neighbourhood of five crores. On the other hand, as I conceived the problem, owing to the fact that a disproportionate amount of the buildings and land used for departmental purposes is found in continental India and not in Burma I could see that India would be due to pay to Burma some compensation on that account. Again the figures are very vague. I collected some and guessed at others, and I came to the conclusion, without cooking the result, that the amount which India might be held to owe to Burma on that account was, by accident, also a figure of the order of five crores. And my suggestion was that these two vague and difficult-to-calculate elements should be considered as cancelling one another out. The Tribunal were not able to accept this suggestion of mine. They thought that my calculations were not as accurate as might be arrived at in the matter and they left the more accurate determination of the figures to the application committee.

I promised in an earlier part of my speech to refer again to the report of the Standing Finance Committee and particularly to those points where they offered alternative renderings to the recommendations which I originally made in the Howard-Nixon Report. I may say that in the Howard-Nixon Report Sir Henry and I had assumed rather implicitly that the eventual liability of Burma to India should be expressed in the form of a rupee obligation. The Standing Finance Committee had recommended that part of that liability should be expressed in sterling and the rest in rupees. That notion had occurred to me while I was writing the Howard-Nixon Report but I rather came to the conclusion that it did not automatically cut out the risk which I have no doubt was in the minds of the members of the Standing Finance Committee. However, I must say that I could see no harm in the suggestion. My instructions were to press that request before the Tribunal, which I did, and I pressed it in the belief that it would be readily acceded. The Tribunal asked on what grounds I would attempt to assess how much of the liability should be expressed in sterling, and I gave them three or four possible alternatives. I must say I was rather surprised to see that they did not concede that point. Another of the points on which the Standing Finance Committee view was somewhat different from the suggestion made by me originally was in the matter of the asset which is described as the "military land scheme, Bombay" and against which an amount of debt of about two crores is exhibited in the accounts. In regard to that asset the Standing Finance Committee suggested that instead of using the figures of the published accounts, we should ask that that particular property should be valued and adjusted at its valuation. There is no doubt that what was in their minds was that the present value of that property was undoubtedly well below what it originally cost. The Government of India, on considering that suggestion of the Standing Finance Committee, thought that it would be inconsistent to have a valuation in regard to this one asset while they were not asking for a valuation in regard to the other assets. In the case of some of the other assets the case might go in the opposite direction because we have assets worth more than they originally cost. On this point, therefore, I received no instructions from the Government of India. Then, the Standing Finance Committee suggested that India should press a claim against Burma on account of the accumulated leave which will be to the credit of officers at the time of the separation. It is known to Honourable Members that Government servants accumulate a certain amount of leave and take it in blocks from time to time. They do not necessarily take a fixed amount of leave every year. I had referred to this point in the Howard-Nixon memorandum. My solution of it was to throw it in with the composition as the amount is comparatively small. But I must say that at the same time I had some doubts as to whether it was a properly adjustable item, or whether it was not more correct to view it as rather a current day to day item with which we were not concerned. I, however, pressed this claim before the Tribunal under the instructions of the Government of India, but, as can be seen from the report, the Tribunal has negatived it.

But a more important aspect of the subject with which the Standing Finance Committee dealt was the matter of what I have called "dead assets", or the buildings and land in the use of the Departments of the Government of India, which, generally speaking, have been bought out of revenue and against which generally no debt liabilities stand. The Standing Finance Committee expressed in their report a point of view which, as a matter of fact, I had originally given them,—that it was a conceivable attitude to take up that the destination of any assets which had been acquired in the past out of revenue resources should be considered as automatic, and that the luck of the party which got possession should stand. They did not suggest in their report that this should be actually pressed as a claim, but they did suggest that it was a point of view which the Government of India should bear in mind. The instructions which I received from the Government of India were very prominently to bring this point of view to the notice of the Tribunal. I did that, and I argued it, if I may say so in all modesty, rather well (Laughter)—so well, indeed, that at one time I nearly believed in the theory myself. But, as a matter of fact, I was not able to convince the Tribunal that an asset was any the less an asset because it had no debt attached to it. It is acknowledged that an asset with debt liabilities is an asset, but the suggestion I had to make to the Tribunal was that it ceased to be an asset after the debt was paid off. I think all Honourable lawyer Members of this House will in their heart of hearts believe that the Tribunal, at any rate on that point, was correct.

Sir, the last proposition which I want to refer to in the report of the Standing Finance Committee is the one in which they recommended that the Government of India ought to obtain from the Burma Government, after separation, a separate contribution on account of the Indian Army, on the ground I think that even though the two countries were separated, Burma must, by reason of its geographical position, get a certain amount of protection from that army. I am not prepared to combat that argument at all, but the Government of India in fact gave me no instructions on the point because on the advice I gave them that this consideration was really outside the terms of reference of the Committee. It concerned continuing arrangements between the two countries after separation and was not one of the assets and liabilities to be divided at the time of political separation.

Sir, I may now sum up in a few words the proposals of the Tribunal so far as they affect the Indian case, and I will do so by saying that on principle the Government of India have won their case, but the amount of damages awarded to them is less than they claimed. On the other hand, Burma finds itself in the position that it will have to pay up more than it bargained for.

But Honourable Members will also be interested to hear what, if the recommendations of this Tribunal are brought into effect, will be the effect on the budgetary position of the Government of India. On this matter I must speak with caution. The necessary figures for a calculation appear many months after the event; but I have attempted to make as close an estimate as I can and I say that if Burma had been separated from India on the first of April of the current year on the terms of this report, the effect on the budgetary position of the Government of India would have been a deterioration of something of the order of two crores. (Applause.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair has received notice of three amendments, one is from Mr. Gauba, the other is from Mr. Das and the third is from Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji. All the three amendments are almost identical in terms. The Chair is feeling some doubt as to whether the first amendments are in order and whether their effect is not that of a direct negative. The Chair would like to hear Mr. Gauba and Mr. Das on that point.

Mr. K. L. Gauba (East Central Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, the motion before the House is that the report of the Tribunal be taken into consideration and the negative of that would be that it should not be considered. My amendment is that the report be rejected by the Government of India. Therefore, I submit that that is an entirely different matter and the amendment is admissible.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Does it not amount to the same thing ?

Mr. K. L. Gauba : No, Sir. I submit it is different.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : All right. The Honourable Member had better simply move the motion. All the three motions may be moved and then there will be discussion on all of them.

Mr. K. L. Gauba : Sir, I formally move the motion that stands in my name, namely :

"That the Report of the Tribunal appointed to advise on the formulation of a financial settlement between India and Burma in the event of separation be rejected by the Government of India as unjust and inequitable to India."

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I move :

"That the Report be rejected as being unfair to both India and Burma."

Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji (Indian Merchants' Chamber and Bureau : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I move :

"That the Report be rejected as being inequitable to both India and Burma, and that, in consequence, the Government of India be requested to move the Secretary of State for India, that, in accordance with promises made in this Assembly, the assurances given at the Round Table Conference and in the Report of the Joint Select Committee of the British Parliament, the problem of Financial Adjustment between India and Burma be investigated into afresh by another Tribunal, with representatives of both India and Burma thereon to make recommendations on the question of distributing the Assets and apportioning the Liabilities between the countries affected and concerned, after proper hearing of the case from all the parties concerned, and before final steps are taken in the matter."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Amendments moved :

"That the Report of the Tribunal appointed to advise on the formulation of a financial settlement between India and Burma in the event of separation be rejected by the Government of India as unjust and inequitable to India."

"That the Report be rejected as being unfair to both India and Burma."

"That the Report be rejected as being inequitable to both India and Burma, and that, in consequence, the Government of India be requested to move the Secretary of State for India, that, in accordance with promises made in this Assembly, the assurances given at the Round Table Conference and in the Report of the Joint Select Committee of the British Parliament, the problem of Financial Adjustment between India and Burma be investigated into afresh by another Tribunal, with representatives of both India and Burma thereon, to make recommendations on the question of distributing the Assets and apportioning the Liabilities between the countries affected and concerned after proper hearing of the case from all the parties concerned, and before final steps are taken in the matter."

There will now be discussion on the amendments and the original motion.

Mr. K. L. Gauba : Sir, I hope Mr. Nixon will not think me uncharitable when I refer to the very excellent and lucid address, which he has just concluded, as having missed the main question before the House. He seemed to labour under the misapprehension that this House was considering the Howard-Nixon report, the Congress report and the report of the Standing Finance Committee. Looking at the clock, Sir, one noticed that during 60 out of the 70 minutes in which the Honourable Member very ably occupied the floor of the House, he dilated upon the three matters, which are really not before us at all. The matter before the House today is the report of the so-called Tribunal appointed by the Secretary of State.

Here, Sir, I would like to state definitely that we do not criticise Mr. Nixon's advocacy of India's case before the Tribunal, nor do we criticise the very excellent report which he published in conjunction with Sir Henry Howard. What we are out to discuss today is the extent to which the report published by the so-called Tribunal (on the 15th of March, 1935), can be accepted by this Assembly or by either of the two countries interested. I would also like, at the outset, to make it absolutely plain that in moving the rejection of the Amery Report, we, on this side of the House, do not want any kind of unfairness to Burma. We stand for fairness to Burma, just as we stand for fairness to India. The question whether Burma can pay a particular sum which India ought to get is really beside the point. What we have to see is this : What is due to India and how can India get it ?

[Mr. K. L. Gauba.]

Sir, I propose briefly to touch on the so-called arbitral character of the Amery Committee, which has been euphemistically referred to as an arbitral Tribunal. You know, Sir, that none of the parties to the case were before that Tribunal, except in the person of the officials nominated by the respective Governments. The people of Burma and the Legislative Council of Burma, the people of India and the Legislative Assembly of India, knew absolutely nothing of these proceedings until the proceedings were well advanced and the report had practically been signed. The intimation pertaining to the appointment of this so-called arbitral Tribunal was not made till the 16th February this year. It was only later stated that the Tribunal had actually started work on the 21st December, 1934. On the floor of this House the Honourable the Finance Member made a statement on the 26th of March, which he had to retract on the 28th of March. He did not know on the 26th March that the report had been actually signed in London.

The question of the personnel of the Tribunal has already been debated in the Assembly; and it is not necessary to go over the ground again. I think there are no two opinions in this country or in Burma as regards the personnel of the Tribunal. Neither the people of India, nor the people of Burma, had any confidence in this Tribunal, nor, was it a Tribunal in the terms in which it was promised to both these two countries. The whole business has been a piece of sharp practice,—if I may say so,—about this Tribunal. The Tribunal—I will refer to the pledges presently—was appointed behind the back of the people of Burma and the people of India. This Tribunal was not a Tribunal of financial experts, it was not a Tribunal of judicial experts. This Tribunal consisted of a Colonel Amery, an ex-Secretary of State for the Colonies, Sir Sydney Rowlatt, who holds a K.C.S.I., for various services rendered to India—we know what those services were—and Sir Walter Nicholson, a civil servant in the Aviation Department. (Laughter.) This, Sir, is the personnel of the Tribunal which has to decide the question, where crores of rupees of the two countries are involved! If the Secretary of State had himself done the job, it would have been much more honest than the appointment of this utterly worthless Tribunal.

These proceedings, we have seen, are referred to as arbitration proceedings. Well, Sir, an arbitrator might arrive at an erroneous decision; he might make a mistake. In such circumstances one does not question the findings, which are presumed to be bona fide. But where fraud intervenes—I see the Honourable the Finance Member looking at me,—I repeat it again,—where fraud intervenes.....

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: Fraud on whose part?

Mr. K. L. Gauba: Where fraud intervenes, it vitiates the arbitration. Fraud may be in the reference; fraud may be in the arbitral proceedings; and finally fraud may be in the conclusions to which the arbitrators subscribe. I submit, Sir, that on all three grounds,—it is a very bold statement to make, I know—but on all the three grounds, this report is vitiated by fraud on both countries.

Let us take the first question—the terms of reference. Over and over again, the proceedings of the Round Table Conference and the Burma sub-committee of the Round Table Conference refer to a just settlement between the two countries. Over and over again, if you see the various reports of the proceedings, the term used is 'a just settlement'. The terms of reference to the Amery Committee are "to determine as equitable apportionment between the two countries of assets and liabilities". I submit that the term "assets and liabilities" is quite a different matter to "a just financial settlement". In the case of "a just financial settlement", so many other questions can rightly and legitimately come in; so many other questions would be within the Tribunal's purview, questions which cannot be relevant in a mere mechanical distribution of assets and liabilities. Thus the liability for wars or post-separation pensions under heads of military charges. The Honourable Member, who has just spoken, referred to the historical approach and he spent a lot of time in ridiculing or in indicating that the historical approach was really not the proper approach to the subject. But in any question concerning India and Burma, the historical approach is a vital approach. After all, India has spent, according to his own estimates, between 10 and 21 crores on Burma wars. We do not say that these 10 to 21 crores are to be paid by Burma. We say that these 10 to 21 crores ought to be paid by the people in whose interests those wars were waged. (Applause.)

Next, Sir, I turn to the fraud apparent in the proceedings. Here I would refer Honourable Members to the debate which was held in this House on 5th April, 1932. Sir George Schuster referring to this Tribunal, in the course of the debate, in which you, Sir, took so conspicuous a part, said, "the sub-committee of the Burma Round Table Conference practically accepted the recommendations of the Government of India". He read and quoted the report of the sub-committee, and went on to say, "this is a point on which I would call the special attention of the House, that is, the Burma sub-committee recommended, not only that the expert's statement of the case should be considered by the Standing Finance Committee, but that the two Standing Finance Committees should be actually associated with the proceedings before the Tribunal". You would note, Sir, that we have had this debate on the 5th and it was continued on the 6th April, 1932. The urgency for the debate was stated by Sir George Schuster to be that the Burma elections were about to be held in the autumn of that year and also a likely hurry in the appointment of the Tribunal. The Honourable Members of this House wanted a postponement of the discussion to the Simla Session, but the Finance Member, of that time, opposed it on the ground that as both those matters were urgent, it should be discussed then and there. That was in April, 1932. The year 1932 passed, the year 1933 went by, the year 1934 had also practically elapsed when, at the end of December (1934), this committee was appointed. Now, to come forward with the specious excuse that the Finance Committee of this House could not be associated with the enquiry on account of the elections,—all one can say is that it works like a very shady business indeed. The Government had two and a half years at their disposal to appoint this committee, but they did not appoint one. The Government waited and waited and at last appointed a committee when the old House had been dissolved and when fresh elections had taken place and when it was impossible to associate a Standing Finance Committee with that enquiry. But, that is not the only point. After all, if the Government could not get a committee of this House to be associated with the enquiry, was India absolutely bankrupt of any financial expert who could be associated with this enquiry? Was Burma devoid of any Burman financial expert who could be associated with this enquiry? Mark You! And this is worth noting that you have had till now three financial enquiries beginning from the Meston enquiry, and every time you have kept out Indians from association with these enquiries. What is the reason? (Honourable Members: "Shame.") I leave it to the House to judge.

Now, let us come to the findings of the Tribunal. In the terms of reference, we have seen how there was back-sliding.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Chair has not fixed any time limit for this debate. But it is usual for the Chair, with the consent of the House, to allow 15 to 20 minutes for every speaker in such cases. Having regard to the number of Members who desire to speak on this subject, it seems to the Chair that it would be best for it to fix a time limit and the Chair suggests to the House that the time limit in this case be 20 minutes with discretion to the Chair to give any Honourable Member more time if the Chair considers it necessary.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad: May I just say that this is not a Resolution on which there may be fixed a time limit. But still it is open to the Chair to fix a time limit on any debate. But this is a very important question about financial adjustments and I request you to give us the full time and allow us to discuss it fully even if the debate is not finished today.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Chair has taken that fact into consideration. The debate is not likely to be finished today, and the Chair believes Government are prepared to give some time next Monday. Even then, it is necessary to put some time limit, subject to discretion being left to the Chair to extend it in particular cases. The Chair does not want to be too rigid, but it suggests to Honourable Members, who are going to speak, that they must have regard to other Honourable Members who desire to speak on this important subject, and the Chair suggests that 20 minutes should ordinarily be the time limit.

Mr. K. L. Gauba: Sir, I will try to conclude as briefly as I can, but the question is really so important and so complicated that I would request your indulgence for a few minutes, if I happen to exceed the time limit.

I was referring to the question of the third line of attack on this report, namely, the findings. As I said, Mr. Nixon, very cleverly and very brilliantly avoided the Report in 60 out of the 70 minutes for which he occupied the attention of this House. Let us refer to the question of the ratio, which was mentioned by Mr. Nixon. The Honourable Member read out the findings of the Committee, namely, paragraph 64 at page 15. He stated that Honourable Members would find out for themselves the reasons upon which the Commission had arrived at the ratio of 7.5. Well, Sir, I have read this report from beginning to end and fairly carefully, and I think other Members also have read it. I do not think those reasons are in this report at all. And for very good reasons. -- Mr. Nixon had made a careful calculation of a ratio at ten per cent. The Committee or the Tribunal wanted to find a lower ratio. So the best way to do it was to fix the ratio without assigning reasons. They have thus given absolutely no reasons at all on so vital a question, namely, the ratio upon which the liability of Burma is being assessed.

Sir, on the question of the quantum of debt the procedure adopted by the Committee is also open to the gravest objection. Mr. Nixon and Sir Henry Howard in their report estimated the rupee and the sterling liabilities on the 31st March, 1930, at 1,100 crores. The Committee has estimated it variously on a variable basis of interest,—and one does not know where they got that line of procedure from,—between 924 crores and 999 crores on the variable basis of interest being charged at 3½ per cent. and 3¾ per cent. The difference in these figures alone is the very trivial sum of 200 crores. Another instance is the 39 millions which have been taken off the liabilities standing against Railways. The Railways, as we know, have charged no depreciation on their account until after 1924. Well, the Committee wants to have it both ways. They want 39 millions or the 40 crores and they also want the assessment of the assets of the Railways as they stand at present, namely, depreciation only having been charged from 1924. Personally I have no objection, and I do not think anybody would have any objection, if the assets of the Railways are valued on the basis of a commercial valuation and the depreciation is reckoned accordingly, or else the system adopted prior to 1924 of the 40 crores which have been taken off the liabilities should be conceded.

Coming to the question of payment, here too, Sir, we find most interesting propositions. The Standing Finance Committee of this House, as also the Howard-Nixon Report, clearly stated that any amount found against Burma should be a first charge on the revenues of Burma. Now, Sir, what has happened is really another interesting piece of trickery. Certain loans have been raised in the past by the Government of India or the Secretary of State on the revenues of India. Those revenues included, not only the revenues of India, as we understand it under the Government of India Act, but also on the central revenues from Burma. Now what has been done under the Government of India Act, in a most amazing piece of draftsmanship, is that in the separation all the loans which were raised on the joint security of the revenues of Burma and India have been transferred to the security of the revenues of India and the revenues of Burma have been freed from that liability. Sir, I do not think there is any parallel to this. I will explain it by one example. You have a partnership or a company. The company or the partnership raises loans on its assets. Then a division or dissolution comes about and they split up into two companies or concerns. Well, those assets, even after division, are bound by the charges that have already been created upon them. Now, Sir, certain monies and loans have been raised on the revenues of India,—the revenues of India meaning the revenues of geographical India as also the revenues of geographical Burma. Now that separation comes about how can you take off the charge on the revenues of Burma and saddle the revenues of India with the entire responsibility? Under what law or code can you do this? The provisions I would refer you to, are sections 177 and 178 of the Government of India Act. I will read out section 178:

"All liabilities in respect of such loans, guarantees and other financial obligations of the Secretary of State in Council as are outstanding immediately before the commencement of part III of this Act and were so secured on the revenues of India shall as from that date be liabilities of the Federation and shall be secured upon the revenues of the Federation and of the provinces."

I submit that this is a provision—whether it is legal or illegal remains to be seen hereafter—for which no parallel exists in constitutional history.

[Mr. K. L. Gauba.]

I submit that this provision is contrary to morality as also to decency. You have raised monies on the security of the revenues of Burma : how can you remove the security from those revenues ?

As I have submitted, the whole case boils down to this,—whether this report can be said to be based on equity, justice and good conscience. It cannot. I would submit here in conclusion that the separation is not of India's seeking : it is not very much of Burma's seeking. It is the seeking of a certain set in England and a certain set in Burma. It is the result of a very definite course of Imperialism. What the exact motive is one does not know : all we know is this : ever since this question of separation was sprung upon the Round Table Conference—it came as a surprise as Sir H. P. Mody will probably tell the House—ever since that time, the question of separation has been absolutely driven, and the financial settlement also has been driven in the same manner, irrespective of the promises to the people, and irrespective of the promises to this Legislature. We know that a large part of the unproductive debt—Mr. Nixon has referred to it in his report—is largely due not to the needs of India but on account of the war that India had to engage in. Now, the assessment of these liabilities must be made on basis of an historical approach, which Mr. Nixon so lightly repudiated. If Burma cannot pay all these liabilities, which India has incurred, well, those who had these obligations incurred must pay up to India.

An Honourable Member : They will never pay !

Mr. K. L. Gauba : A period of 45 years is made out for the repayment of this loan. Who knows what will happen in 45 years ? Our point is this : if you want separation of Burma, for whatever purposes you may want it, it is for you to pay the bill of separation. (Opposition cries of "Hear, hear.") We are not concerned with instalments from Burma—whether it is two crores, or three crores or one crore.—You wanted the separation of Burma and you should pay the price for the separation of Burma.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has now spoken for thirty minutes.

Mr. K. L. Gauba : With these words, I move my motion.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, at the outset, I wish to make it clear that we, congressmen, stand by the resolution of the Karachi Congress over cessation of Burma and if my Burmese friends or a majority of them want separation, we wish them good luck. At the same time we would like them not to throw more on our liabilities than they can help. The motion which I have tabled is not so much to condemn the recommendations of this Tribunal—because this House by a majority condemned this Tribunal in that adjournment motion which was moved in the last Session—we have no confidence in this Tribunal as it did not represent the spirit in which it was promised to be appointed by the Round Table Conference : I do not find the two gallant Knights from Bombay here who were so vehement in their speeches yesterday—and both of them were members of the Round Table Conference and, if I am right, Sir H. P. Mody was a party to the promise which he exacted at the Round Table Conference that the Standing Finance Committee of this House would be associated with the Tribunal. What happened ? I listened to the very pleasant speech of my honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, whom I welcome to this House once again, but he went over grounds that do not hold. The Tribunal met some time in February : but no members of the Standing Finance Committee were sent out. The real truth is that the present Finance Member was new at the time ; he did not know the fair promises that were given by his predecessor on the floor of this House in 1932 and to which my Honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, was a party,—he was a Member of this House and a Joint Secretary to the Government of India in the Finance Department at the time. The then Finance Member gave an assurance, but the Government was afraid of the Congress. The Government knew, by the result of the elections, that the Congress has come by a majority and if the assurance of Sir George Schuster was to be carried out, some Congress Members, at least, would find themselves represented either as associates or members of the Tribunal. Sir, Mr. Nixon has asked us to be generous or rather to be fair to this Amery Tribunal. I do not wish to take any notice of this Amery Tribunal ; but I blame the British Government and the Secretary of State for appointing a tribunal to which the whole issue of the financial questions which would arise out of the separation of Burma was not referred to. I do not know who else I shall blame, but I blame the Government of India partly because they did not insist on their commitments to this House. Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, dilated on the work of an impartial Tribunal. How could he say that the Tribunal was neutral and impartial ? Britain is a party to the separation of Burma.....

Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadian Urban) : Britain is the author.

Mr. B. Das : As my friend, Mr. Satyamurti points out, Britain is the author. Now, if Britain is the author, Britishers cannot be fair arbitrators and cannot arbitrate impartially. Sir George Schuster deliberately asked this House four points, and one point he mentioned in the debate of 1932, was, that we should express an opinion as to the personnel of the Tribunal. I did suggest that the Chairman should be a member from the League of Nations, and another Honourable Member of the House suggested that members could be found from the British Empire. If the Capitation Tribunal could find a Chairman in Sir Robert Garran from Australia and two Members from India and two Members from Britain.....

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : What was the result of that Tribunal ? The result was three different Reports.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Because they were honest.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I do not condemn that Capitation Tribunal. The personnel of this Tribunal should have been constituted of members from the Dominions, from Australia or South Africa, no Britisher ought to have found a place there. The fact is that the British Government wanted the separation of Burma from India, and, therefore, any decision of this Tribunal is to be regarded with great suspicion and it has naturally gone so much against us. I must recognise the good work done by my honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, in connection with the

[Mr. B. Das.]

Howard-Nixon Report and also subsequently. If one reads through this Amery Tribunal's Report, it would be seen that my honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, tried to represent our case very ably; he stuck to his guns; he demanded that India should demand a ratio of ten per cent. in the matter of the settlement of the liabilities and assets. Although he found himself in difficulty to express definite views in regard to the military burden of Burma, it is an issue which should not be deferred but settled simultaneously along with the general issue of ratio of liabilities and assets. He did not express his own views over the ratio, but he simply asked us to read through the paragraphs 59 and 60 of the Tribunal's Report. It is surprising to see the non-financial outlook of this Tribunal! They talk of the protective tariffs which India enjoys. My honourable friend, Sir Homi Mody, is not here to tell us his views or to tell us what benefits India enjoys through protection. It says that because India is deriving a certain amount of benefit in protective tariff, so the share of the Burmese receipts which are calculated at 9½ per cent. should be reduced to eight per cent. One cannot understand how this could happen, and, after Burma is separated, all the customs revenue will go to the Government of Burma and will not remain with the Government of India. How can the Tribunal agree to this silly idea and suggest the reduction of the Burmese contribution and arrive at the figure of eight per cent., unless it has some sinister motive to reduce the 10½ per cent. which Mr. Nixon demanded should be 7 per cent. I do not want to take even one pie more from Burma than is India's due, but, I believe I have read the Howard-Nixon Report and also this Tribunal's Report, and I maintain that India's demand should not be less than 10 per cent., and, therefore, this Report is unacceptable.

With regard to the military burden of Burma, the Tribunal did not consider it at all. Why did they feel diffident: In one place they say:

"The problem of the defence of Burma as a separate State in the British Empire will no doubt involve consideration of the share she should properly take in the common defence."

Sir, we have been accustomed to the Simon Commission Report, the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report and the Government of India Act. We find India is saddled with the octopus of military burden to the tune of 45 crores. If Burma is to separate, Burma should take her proportionate share of the military burden, and if Burma could claim ten per cent. of the share of the assets and liabilities or even 7½ per cent. of the share as this Tribunal has suggested, then Burma must bear 7.5 per cent. of the Defence cost in the least. I ask the Honourable the Finance Member who will no doubt reply later,—I ask him to tell us whether the Government of India asked the Secretary of State to tell the Tribunal to examine this question, or if, as the Howard-Nixon Report at one place pointed out,—they were afraid of the Army Council in London—that it would be referred to a Committee subject to the sanction of the higher authority, meaning the Army Council in London. Has the Government of India in contemplation such a Committee to allocate the fair share of the military burden of Burma?

Sir, I do not like to go into the historical analysis of things or into the historical issues of the debt position. Thinking in my mercantile way, I would like to come to a fair settlement in regard to the ratio which, as I have said, is ten per cent., and, as I said in the last Session, while I condemned the Government in that adjournment motion, I again say that Burma should contribute ten per cent. of the military burden to India, and that will come to 4½ crores, which will give the Finance Member Rs. three crores more for nation-building work in the provinces. This morning when we were interjecting that England should pay, the Finance Member said: "the cat is out of the bag." I do not say that England should pay the share of the loan incurred by India in the matter of conquest of Burma. I do not wish to go into the past history, but if England wants the separation of Burma, let an impartial Committee allocate the share of the military burden, and it will never be less than ten per cent. There cannot be one set of laws for one party and another set of laws for another party, and the futile argument of the Burmese Government,—I hope the representative of the Burma Government will speak later,—the futile argument of the Burma Government that Burma has got only one division of the Army and 1½ crores is enough for Burma's military burden, is a silly argument, and no fair-minded Britisher or Indian will agree to it, unless he wants to dance to the tune of his master's voice.

At this stage, I wish to protest against the slur which Mr. Nixon cast on the previous Assembly of which, Sir, you and I were Members. My honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, said that the Members in the previous Assembly did not face the situation boldly and frankly. I must point out to Mr. Nixon that if this Assembly is stronger, the previous Assembly was no less strong in the expression of its views. Of course, the present Finance Member does not possess the persuasive voice of Sir George Schuster who in his own persuasive ways wanted to shelve the whole discussion on Burma finance and refer the whole thing back to England. But then we all protested, and, as my honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, pointed out, we had a two days debate. We did not go into the technical details, although some of us pointed out that 10½ per cent. should be the minimum figure in the matter of Burma's contribution towards the military burden or even towards India's debts, over pensionary charges and other liabilities. Sir, it was very unkind of my honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, to say that we did not examine the issues then. If anybody has failed, it is the Government. Let me hope my honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, did not express similar sentiments before the Tribunal that the Legislative Assembly did not express any view. He was supposed to represent the views expressed in the Assembly debates before the Tribunal as well. I am sorry my Honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, misunderstood the whole situation and misinterpreted the views of the Assembly. Mr. Nixon is to share the blame, as much, because he occupies a position in the Government of India; he cannot lay it at the door of the Government of India during the transition stage. The promise was blithely given by Sir George Schuster and, Sir, the Congressmen coming in large numbers into the Assembly has evidently upset the mental equilibrium of the Government of India. Sir, I am not going into details of the financial issues. I have said that I will be satisfied and India will be satisfied if the ratio is fixed by an impartial tribunal—not a tribunal of Britishers, but anybody that may belong to the British Empire, and not to the British Parliament or the British Government. Burma's military burden should be settled. If that is done, I think a satisfactory basis for a solution of the financial questions between India and Burma could be arrived at.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, alluded to the currency agreement. I have gone over it and I think it represents a fair sense of the situation, and in fact, the Standing Finance Committee recommended similar steps in 1932. I was not a member of that Committee, but one thing that I should like to know is, if Burma desires to separate her currency assets from India whether it will be entitled to ten per cent. of assets as I demand it, or  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the assets as this Tribunal has fixed it. I would like to know whether there is any other idea in the mind of the Government and if they wish to give more. In fact, the Howard-Nixon Report itself said that Burma should get 21 per cent. of gold and 35 per cent. of the silver reserve. Why should there be different theories, different principles in the matter of sharing the currency reserve? If the Finance Member or the Government of India are determined, through their master Lord Zetland's orders, that  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. should be the percentage in the settlement of financial dues let India and Burma, I want to know why it should not be provided in the Act of separation that after separation, Burma should be entitled to  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the currency reserve that we have got in India?

My Honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, did not like to repeat Sir George Schuster's analysis of the position of debt. Sir George Schuster, while he made his speech in 1932, said that Burma's debt at the time of separation, if it separated in 1932, would be Rs. 66½ crores; while the Howard-Nixon report said it should be Rs. 62 crores. I would like to know whether the Honourable Mr. Nixon argued India's case on the basis of Rs. 66½ crores, or even he increased the demand on the head of Debt. My Honourable friend, Mr. Gauba, has pointed out, and my Honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, did the same, about the jugglery in figures after taking into account the railway capital account, which the Tribunal indulged in. These are little things which do not appeal to me. These are minor issues, but I do complain that Mr. Nixon should have yielded in the end that India should bear the burden of the Bombay Military Lands which have gone down very much in price, and in fact, when those lands are sold, the proceeds will go to the army department and will not be returned to the taxpayer in any shape or form. To sum up, what I do demand of this Government to do is to represent to the British Government that this Assembly has no confidence in the Amery Tribunal's Report, as it was not asked to review the whole financial position and financial relationship between India and Burma, and, therefore, this Assembly asks the British Government to appoint an independent and neutral tribunal to go into the whole question and fix the military burden of Burma and thereby give relief to India's finance to the extent to which Burma will share the burden of Defence, and to fix a ratio over liabilities and assets equitable and fair both to Burma and India and not to fix it simply because Burma will be separated very soon and find itself in the clutches of Britain and that Britain wants to spare herself a share of the luxury of that separation.

U Thein Maung (Burma : Non-European) : Mr. President, we wish to place before this House the views of the Burmese people on the Report of the Tribunal in order to remove the impressions that may still be there that Burma has done unduly well or well at all, and that the Burmese people are or should be quite satisfied. As my Honourable friend, Mr. Nixon, has very rightly pointed out, we lost on principle and we shall have to pay much more than we bargained for, and I must say that we are thoroughly dissatisfied with the Report of the Tribunal.

We claim that Burma should be completely free from any liability in regard to the unallocated debt of India; and we are fortified in this claim by Mr. Nixon's own note, dated the 27th May, 1931, which is at pages 97—102 of the Proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee, Volume XI. From the figures in paragraph 11 of that Note, it will be seen that for the ten years preceding 1914-15, India received Rs. 34½ crores approximately by way of surplus out of the central revenues from Burma. From 1914-15 up till 1920-21—a period of seven years—the surplus revenues amounted to Rs. 30½ crores. Assuming, as stated in paragraph 12 of the same note, that the result of the Howard-Nixon investigation of figures for 1929-30 is to suggest that Burma's contribution to central revenue, after meeting its own local charges, is of the order of Rs. three crores annually, the amount of the surplus revenues paid to India from 1914-15 to 1929-30 would be about Rs. 57½ crores. Even making every allowance for overhead charges and other charges met in India, which should not exceed Rs. 1½ crores annually, there should be a balance of something like Rs. 30 crores in favour of Burma; and, as the Finance Committee of the Burma Legislative Council has rightly pointed out, this should completely free Burma from any liability in regard to the unallocated debt. I may add that the actual central gain from Burma, that is, the excess of central revenue collected in Burma over central expenditure on Burma, from 1904-05 to 1933-34, is nearly Rs. 177 crores.

In the alternative and without prejudice to the above claim, we urge that deductions should be made from the present debts of the Government of India for the purpose of determining Burma's share of the liability :

- (a) for debts which were incurred before the annexation of Burma and paid up thereafter, and
- (b) for debts which represented the costs of the Burmese wars or the costs of any other war or military operation outside India.

Burma never had a share in the benefits of the former and the latter were really incurred—not for the benefit of India or Burma—but in the interests of Great Britain and they should, in fairness to India and Burma, be paid by Great Britain as has already been pointed out by the Honourable Members of this House.

As regards the ratio of Burma's liability, if any, for the debts of India, it should have been fixed on the basis of benefits received—i.e., on the basis of the geographical distribution of the benefits conferred by the policy and expenditure of Central Government, inasmuch as Burma can, in fairness, be asked only to pay for such benefits.

Commercialized debts allocable to Burma and her share of the dead assets are the fairest indices of the extent to which Burma has benefited by the said policy and expenditure and neither of them exceeds four per cent. of the respective totals. We claim that Burma's share of the commercialized debts and dead assets is the fairest basis and that four per cent. is the fairest ratio.

Failing that and without prejudice thereto, the Tribunal should have fixed the ratio on the basis of population and on that basis the liability of Burma would be about five per cent. only. In this connection we need hardly remind the House that we have recently been given our share in the rural development fund on the population basis without any special weightage or allowance whatsoever as in the case of Assam, the N. W. Frontier Province, Bombay and Punjab, although admittedly Burma is the least developed part of British India in spite of its being the most heavily taxed province. This, by the way, is quite in keeping with the general treatment we have received at the hands of the Government of India ever since we came under it—the general treatment which compelled us to seek and obtain separation.

Failing to accept the population basis, there might have been some justification for fixing the ratio on the basis of relative national wealth or income and according to paras. 61 and 62 of the report the ratio on this basis would have been in the neighbourhood of 6½ per cent. only. In this connection it may be noted that the Meston Committee also held, after due consideration of her relative capacity to pay, that Burma's contribution to any all-India deficit should be 6½ per cent. thereof.

We submit that the Tribunal acted most arbitrarily in adopting the 7½ per cent. ratio. They obviously allowed their judgment to be influenced by the amount of central revenue collected in Burma, subject to certain allowances and adjustments which were obviously necessary.

The ratio on the basis of central revenue is most unfair to Burma. Mr. Nixon himself has admitted in para. 27 of the aforesaid note 'Taxation in Burma is higher per head than anywhere in India'. The incidence of taxation is heavier in Burma, as Burma has been taxed in the interests of India and Indian industries; and to fix the ratio on the basis of central revenue is to perpetuate the admitted grievance of Burma and to compensate India for lost opportunities of exploiting her and making her pay out of all proportion to the central expenditure on her.

Now, Sir, I come to the pensionary charges. The fairest basis for division of liability for pensionary charges is the proportion which the pay and allowances of the pensionable establishments employed in the administration of central subjects in Burma bear to the pay and allowances of the Central pensionable establishments in United India subject to an adjustment as regards Burma's share of liabilities arising out of the supervisory functions of the Government of India.

On that basis, Burma's share of the central civil pension is only 6.1 per cent. and her share of the military pensionary charges is only 3 to 3½ per cent. and yet the Tribunal has recommended that the absurdly high ratio of 7½ per cent. should apply not only to debts but also to the capital value of pensions.

We claim that, after application of a proper ratio, Burma's share of the liabilities should be reduced by a rebate on account of her payments to the central revenue far in excess of central expenditure on her as set out above.

We also claim that Burma's share of the liabilities should be distributed between Burma proper and areas which are excluded or partially excluded as set out in the Eleventh Schedule to the Government of India Act, 1935, since at least the Federated Shan States, among the excluded areas, would have a Federal fund and would be able to pay their share thereof.

I turn now to the method of payment. We are dissatisfied with the recommendations that the first instalment should be payable six months after separation and that the entire debt should be repaid within 45 years.

The Tribunal has ignored the request that there should be a moratorium—a short respite of five years after separation—

4 P.M. during which Burma should not be required to make any payment on account of the principal debt, although such a period is absolutely necessary to enable Burma to secure a cash balance and to provide funds for the capital works which may be necessary as the result of separation. The request is a very reasonable one and it should have been granted, inasmuch as Burma is to remain within the Indian currency system for at least five years after separation and the Reserve Bank for India is to manage and control her coinage, currency and monetary policy during that period.

The recommended period of redemption is far too short. In framing the scheme for debt redemption in 1924, Sir Basil Blackett based his proposals on a redemption period of 80 years for productive debts and fifty years for unproductive debts. The redemption period of the British debt to the United States of America has been fixed at 62 years. Following these precedents, the equated payments should have been calculated on a period of not less than 60 years. Surely, Sir, neither the British Government nor the Government of India can grant us a period shorter than the one for the payment of their own debts.

We hope that the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India would give due consideration to our claims and grievances, as set out above and as embodied in the recent Resolutions of the Legislative Council of Burma, and that the recommendations of the Tribunal would be accepted with modifications and adjustments in the light of our further representations and that non-official representatives of both India and Burma would be appointed to the Application Committee to avoid further mistakes and, what is more important, to avoid further discontents.

Sir, we do not ask for any favour or concession. We do not want to do India out of what is justly due to her. We only want the voice of the two countries to be heard, and justice to be done as between them (Hear, hear) with the help of their accredited non-official representatives. (Loud Applause.)

Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji : Sir, I must congratulate the Honourable Mr. Nixon on the way that he placed his case before us and on the part that he played in bringing about the memorandum and placing the views of the Government of India before the Tribunal. (Hear, hear.) It was very clever of him indeed, but I must point out that he stated in the morning that the people of India apparently were not taking that much interest in these affairs judging from the trend of the sale of two copies of his memorandum. But I may mention to him that those copies, when asked for, were never available to us anywhere ; and only last January, when I applied to the Librarian here, I came to know that copies were marked " confidential " and they could not be available to the public.

Mr. J. C. Nixon : Sir, on a point of personal explanation, that is not correct.

Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji : I have got a copy here marked " confidential ".

Mr. J. C. Nixon : It should not then be in your possession, Sir.

Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji : Whatever it is, we asked for it in Bombay and we could not get it. That being the case, we were not in a position to prepare our case in the absence of that memorandum, really speaking, in the absence of an invitation from the Government of India to us and in the absence of any expression or desire on their part to consult us on the subject before they laid their views before the Tribunal. So the indifference that is attributed to us does not hold any water. Sir, in moving the amendment that stands in my name, I need not repeat what is so well-known as to the history of this matter. Sir, I ask in the amendment I have moved that the Report be rejected because it is inequitable both to India and Burma. It is not my intention to show in what particular details the Report is inequitable ; but I would like to show how the very constitution of the Tribunal which has prepared it, and the procedure under which it has been prepared, tend inevitably to make the Report unfair and unacceptable to the two countries directly affected by it. The Tribunal, Sir, was constituted, in direct opposition to the promises given on the floor of this House, that when the matter came to be finally adjudged, the Tribunal adjudging it would have upon it representatives of this country and of Burma. These assurances were repeated at the Round Table Conference ; and if one reads correctly the meaning of para. 482 of the Report of the Joint Committee on Indian Constitutional Reforms, it reiterates the same assurance.

Sir, the Amery Tribunal had not only no representatives upon it of either India or Burma, it did not even hear any representation from these two countries.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury, one of the Panel of Chairmen.]

I am aware, Sir, that officials of both these countries' Governments were heard by that Tribunal ; but, as I shall show later on, official representation is not enough in such cases to represent fully the countries' point of view. A Tribunal, Sir, which consists only of the representatives of one of the parties to a case, and would not even hear representatives of the other parties concerned, cannot make a fair and equitable award ; and, were there no other reason to reject this Report, I submit, Sir, the personnel and procedure of the Amery Tribunal would alone suffice to entitle both India and Burma summarily to reject its Report.

We were told, Sir, the last time this matter came up for discussion in this House, on an adjournment motion, that if the House wanted to make any representation, the Government of India would forward its proceedings to the Tribunal. This assurance was given to us by the Honourable the Finance Member himself. But, Sir, even while the Honourable Member was offering this bait, the Tribunal had already signed its Report !!! Sir, had the House been so minded as to take the Honourable the Finance Member at his word, and devise some method of preparing such a representation, there was no means of placing it before the Tribunal in time to make it consider it before coming to its decision. I remember, Sir, the Honourable Member described this unhappy episode, a day or two later, as a case of unintentional misleading. Take it as you like, the fact remains that, Sir, even this House had no opportunity, even if it could and would make any representation. A Report, Sir, which had been arrived at without any hearing of the parties primarily concerned, cannot but be condemned by every one with the most rudimentary sense of justice. Sir, even if we had sufficient time to prepare such a representation, this Assembly is, I submit, in all deference, not a suitable body to prepare and submit a case on this country's side on a matter of such importance and complexity. The problem before the Tribunal is admittedly so intricate, so many detailed calculations are involved in it, so many considerations of principles have to be taken into account, that such a large body as this Assembly cannot, even if it were so minded, prepare any satisfactory representation on such manifold and complicated issues. The problem must, if it is at all to be satisfactorily solved, be investigated into, no doubt, by a truly impartial Tribunal, with adequate representation of all the three countries concerned, and after proper hearing being given to the representatives of such non-official public opinion as is to be found in each country. I have, therefore, demanded, Sir, the operative part of my amendment, that a fresh Tribunal be appointed, and the matter be re-investigated into by that body, giving proper hearing to all the parties concerned, before the Secretary of State finally decides on it.

I shall indicate hereafter, Sir, what I think ought to be an unexceptional composition for such a Tribunal. But here let me observe that Government had before them, even while this matter was being investigated, the precedent of the Capitation Tribunal, which was appointed to advise on only one specific issue. It was an issue as between parties whose association still continues, and is presumed to continue as long as God wills it. On that Tribunal, Sir, there were Indian jurists of the eminence of Sir Shadi Lal and Sir Shah Suleman. Before that Tribunal, likewise, appeared representatives of India and of the War Office, to argue their respective points of view. But, Sir, despite this analogy, and in spite of the far more complicated nature of the problem before the Amery Tribunal, there was no Indian or Burman appointed on that body, nor was any representative of this country or of Burma invited to give evidence before it. Sir, with these fundamental defects, how can we accept the Report of such a Tribunal ?

Sir, I have already admitted that the official representatives of the Government of India and of Burma did appear before that Tribunal, and aided it in arriving at its conclusions. But, Sir, recognising fully the ability and impartiality of such officers, does that necessarily preclude us from demanding that non-official viewpoint needs to be also represented before such a Tribunal ? Sir, the Government in this country seems to think that knowledge and experience and wisdom in such matters is the sole monopoly of their officers. I humbly submit, Sir, that I do not share that view and that there are, in this very matter, sufficient indications to show that my belief about some modicum of knowledge being found outside even the sacred ranks of the Indian Civil Service could be held by many besides myself. But even assuming, Sir, for the sake of argument, that the knowledge, experience and ability of these officers of Government are beyond cavil, may I give the illustration, once again, of the practice before Courts of Law in many parts of the British Empire? Not the most distinguished and experienced advocate, appearing before a judicial Tribunal, would shun the aid and briefing by a solicitor. Sir, because a solicitor briefs or coaches a counsel, does the latter become the less an efficient advocate? Even if the case for this country and for Burma must be represented only by officers of Government, could they not have associated with them, as advisers, assessors, or aids representatives of non-official opinion on the matter? They have not done so; and to the extent that these official representatives have, for want of such aid and briefing, failed to take into account some of the most important points affecting the judgment, we are entitled to say, Sir, that our case has not been properly pleaded; and that, accordingly, for the sake of mere justice, it needs to be re-investigated into.

Sir, official representatives of the type of Mr. Nixon or Sir Henry Howard, are unable, by their very position, to take into account certain obvious considerations that materially affect issues like those before the Amery Tribunal. Without doubting their honesty and loyalty in the least, one may point out for instance, that they have allowed the Tribunal to assume,—and they have made their own representation on the assumption—that there were only two parties to this case: India and Burma. Non-official opinion, however, is convinced, Sir, that there are three parties: India, Burma, and Britain,—the last not the least important nor the least concerned. Sir, I cannot go into the reasons which lead us to entertain such a view without exceeding unduly the time limit for my observations. But, the House will, I hope, agree, Sir, that, at least this is a viewpoint which needs to be submitted to a Tribunal appointed to adjudicate on such problem.

Similarly, Sir, there is the question of the viewpoint from which the problem has to be approached. The official representatives have, apparently, allowed the Tribunal to hold that the only correct viewpoint for approaching this question is to regard that the existing Government of United India is not a partnership between two existing entities; but that it is a single Government, which at the date of separation, will go out of existence, leaving behind it certain assets and liabilities, which the Tribunal regard it as their task equitably to distribute and apportion false, it is morally unjust, and necessarily leads to an indefensible judgment. Sir, the Tribunal offer no reason for their view that this is not a case of dissolution of partnership. They do not even seem to have given a thought to yet another alternative viewpoint, viz., that of a Joint Family, one member of which seeks a partition of the family property. Sir, non-official opinion in India and Burma holds that those two countries are joined not only by the material bonds of common economic interests, but that they have still stronger bonds of common culture and common ideals, which will hold us together even if for purely material concerns we seem to be temporarily separated. Sir, I mention this matter only to show, that the judgment of the Tribunal would be materially different, according as it approaches the question from the viewpoint of simply distributing the assets and apportioning the liabilities of a defunct entity between two brand new creations; or, secondly, of taking the accounts of a partnership concern on the dissolution of the firm, or, thirdly, the partition of a Joint Family, members whereof are tied together by bonds of blood and culture, ideals and worship, and may, for all the appearances to the contrary today, find it to their mutual advantage once more to reunite when their present causes of friction or dissatisfaction, if any, are ended. Sir, the Tribunal not having even considered such alternative viewpoints, and official representatives of the two Governments apparently not having drawn the attention to these possible alternative viewpoints, this Assembly cannot, I submit, Sir, in justice or decency, accept this Report without causing irreparable damage to the lasting interests of both India and Burma.

There is, again, the matter of the actual issues considered by the Tribunal, on the number and nature of which, also, non-official opinion may quite conceivably take a different view from that of the official representatives. Sir, may I mention, only for the sake of illustration in support of my argument, the case of the public debt of India? The Tribunal has taken without scrutiny the aggregate of the Debt. If properly analysed that debt would, I venture to submit, be apportionable radically differently from the apportionment advised by the present Tribunal. The cost of the Burmese Wars and annexation; the deficits in the Burman local administration ever since Burma became part of the Government of India; the share of Burma in the so-called War Gift,—these are instances which spring to one's mind at the first glance at paragraphs 9 and 10 of the Report. We, on this side of the House, think, Sir, that the cost of the Burmese Wars and annexation ought not to be charged either to India or to Burma; and, so far as those amounts add to the total of the Indian Public Debt, the same should be reduced and the amount debited to Britain, who has received the whole of the benefit from such wars and conquests. Similarly, Sir, we are also persuaded that the so-called War Gift of over 189 crores of rupees being initially invalid, ought not to be charged against this country or Burma; the more so as for the present all war debts are in suspension. The Tribunal, in paragraphs 16 and 21 of their Report regard this item as an exception in the total of the Public Debt. Burma is, I am aware, made directly responsible for her share of the principal and interest, if and when such payments are resumed. But the amount of real liability on this account is unjustly over-stated; and, inasmuch as the entire gift is, in non-official opinion, of doubtful validity both India and Burma ought to be exempted from it.

I could, perhaps, Sir, multiply such instances indefinitely. I mention them simply as illustrations to give point to my argument that the Report of the Tribunal is necessarily inequitable to both India and Burma, and ought, therefore, to be rejected. Let me mention, Sir, the case of the Ratio of division recommended by the Committee, as itself needing further scrutiny. I will not prejudge the issue by stating why I consider the Ratio recommended to be inequitable and much less would I state what Ratio I would consider to be just and proper. But, Sir, while such cardinal points are open to serious difference of opinion, grave dissatisfaction is bound to arise with the Report of the Tribunal. How then can we accept its recommendations, without permanently injuring our mutual interests ?

I doubt, Sir, if even in the actual calculations and the principles of apportionment, the Tribunal have advised, there cannot, also, be genuine difference of viewpoint and opinion. The treatment of assets like buildings, Roads or Railways ; or of their Reserve and Depreciation Funds ; or of Currency and Gold Standard Reserves ; or of accruing liabilities on account of Pensions, Provident and Family Pensions Funds ; might quite naturally, and in perfect good faith, lead to difference of opinion, even amongst the most experienced experts. Without asserting that the actual recommendations of the Amery Tribunal in respect of all these items are necessarily unjust, I cannot conceal it from this House that such a suspicion is bound to attach to their recommendations, so long as no Indian or Burman representatives, equally versed in such matters, were allowed even a hearing before the adjudication was made.

In uttering these sentiments, Sir, I am actuated by yet another sacred consideration, which I will briefly place before this House. Sir, it may be that the result of a proper investigation may reveal factors and considerations which are today naturally not emphasised by those who are determined upon separating India from Burma ; but which, when revealed, might quite possibly induce these two sister countries in the future to annul the proposed separation. Sir, I know those considerations would not be for the impartial Tribunal to pronounce upon. But the very investigation may make revelations which might induce these countries to reorient their whole national course. Sir, with such hopes in our hearts, how can we help demanding, while it is still time, that the matter be reinvestigated into de novo, and according to the procedure I have suggested ?

Sir, let me add one word, at this stage, explaining, beyond the possibility of misunderstanding, our fundamental attitude in this matter. By objecting to this Report, we Indians are not to be understood as desiring to add to the liability of Burma towards India. Far from it. All that desire is that the matter be properly investigated into by an impartial Tribunal such as was promised ; and with adequate safeguards that all relevant facts, materials and considerations should be submitted to that Tribunal before it makes its recommendation. And may I add, Sir, that if, as a result of such a proper and exhaustive investigation, the eventual liability of Burma is found to be much less than what the present Tribunal has recommended, India would not only freely accept such a decision, she would be really glad that a younger and less advanced sister starts upon her new life with a lesser burden than was at first proposed. We would not only be just towards Burma but even be generous, if only in memory of the long years of our association and affection, if only in the hope and wish that the door for future reunion should not be barred for her between India and Burma. Sir, I realise that any such hopes would be doomed to disappointment, if, in our settlement, we adopt the Shylockian attitude. But, Sir, while we would contribute to Burma's progress all that we can in justice and even in generosity, we must at least know that we are being just as well as generous. I am sure Burman brothers reciprocate this sentiment entirely, in this House and in Burma.

Sir, let me now make a suggestion as to the kind of a Tribunal, which would not only be truly impartial but whose experience, fitness and authority no one would dispute for a moment. Sir, I think if a Tribunal is constituted, having the Presidents of the Indian and Burman Legislative Assemblies upon it, and presided over by the Speaker of the British House of Commons, no one will question in the least degree the Tribunal's authority, impartiality, or competence to adjudicate upon such issues. Sir, lest it may be regarded as an impossible or fantastic suggestion, permit me to mention the precedent of the Irish Home Rule Conference in 1914, and which was presided over by the Speaker. Sir, the end of that Conference is, I know, ominous in history ; but that does not prevent me from quoting its analogy, if only as a precedent to save me from a charge of making an absurd suggestion.

Sir, my task is done. I have, I trust, laid out sufficient considerations to make the House realise that the present Report is inequitable, and must consequently be rejected ; and that a fresh Tribunal be constituted to reinvestigate into the matter, and make fresh recommendations, which may be then acted upon by the powers that be. Sir, I hope the House will accept my amendment. (Applause.)

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Sir, before I develop my arguments in connection with the question at issue, I should like to ask one or two questions. Is it or is it not a fact that the Right Honourable Colonel Amery had been the Colonial Secretary under the British Government ? The answer is, yes. The next question is, is it or is not a fact that Burma after separation will come under the Colonial Secretary ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Then, under whom will it be ? Will it be under the Secretary of State for India ? Or will there be a special Secretary of State for Burma ?

Mr. A. H. Lloyd (Government of India : Nominated Official) : Under the Secretary of State for India and Burma. There will be one Secretary of State for both.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : This subject was first laid before the Standing Finance Committee in 1931-32. Several Members including myself very strongly pressed at that time that the whole question should be approached on historical basis, and that we must look into the whole question systematically. At that time, we could not calculate the figures because we were not in possession of the materials. At the same time, we had a strong feeling that, with the historical approach, our dues will be much greater than those calculated either by Mr. Nixon or by any other authority. The Honourable the Finance Member, Sir George Schuster, on 5th April, 1932, supported the same view. He attempted in the course of the debate that if you calculated on the historical approach, then our Indian dues will be greater than what was calculated in the Nixon-Howard Memorandum which was placed before the Standing Finance Committee at that time. This is the real question on which I stand even today, namely, that we should make this calculation on the basis of historical approach. It is not correct that we should take our assets and liabilities and divide them in some particular manner. This is not a question of a firm going to the Insolvency Court. This is not a question of insolvency that we should take the assets and liabilities and divide them between the various partners. It is a question of the separation of the two partners in a business concern. We should consider the whole question from the historical point of view, that is, the amount of money that has been spent by the Indian revenues on the development of Burma year after year. Now, if Government do not agree to our reasonable request to approach the question from the historical point of view, and they look at it from the point of view of the Insolvency Court and then to divide between the two, then the question of ratio, that is in what proportion they should be divided, is a question of vital importance. Now, Mr. Nixon put a certain figure, and it was based on entirely scientific grounds. He took the revenue of Burma and divided the revenue of Burma by the revenues of the provinces and the Central Government, and came to the approximate figure of 10 or 10½ per cent. So we can support this on account of its scientific basis of calculation. But the other figures which are given are purely hypothetical. The population basis is suggested. I say, why do you take the population basis? Why not the area basis? Why not take the area of Burma and the area of British India and divide it? Why not count the lakes and rivers and the cattle, etc., of the two countries? These are exceedingly unscientific, but the most unscientific method is the one adopted by the Tribunal. That is to say, Burma wants five per cent. and India wants ten per cent., therefore, let us have 7½ per cent. This method of division is followed by old women. One man wants one thing and the other man demands one thing, and let us take arithmetical mean. Why not Geometric, or Harmonic or any other mean. My friend, Mr. Nixon, is a mathematician, and he knows that if one man demands X and the other demands y, the proper share is  $\frac{mx + ny}{m + n}$  : m and n should be determined by large number of data. Old women always suppose m and n to be one. This reminds me of one of the mathematical retorts which Alberuni used in his book "Qānoon Masudi" in connection with the measurement of one degree of the earth. He described the method used by Ptolemy who calculated the side of a rectilinear figure of 360 sides described outside a circle and he calculated also the side of the rectilinear figure of 360 sides inscribed in a circle and took the mean of the two. Yakoob El Kandi, on the other hand, found the value of 15|16 degree, which he could obtain by addition formula without trisecting an angle, and then he added 1|15 to it in order to get the value of one degree. Alberuni was roused to anger, and he said that both calculations give correct figures to two places of decimals, but Ptolemy knew what he was doing and Yakoob El Kandi did not know what he did. I may use Alberuni's enthusiastic language and say that Mr. Nixon knew what he was doing and this Tribunal did not know what they were doing. It is impossible to arrive at any ratio which may satisfy both Indians and Burmans and if such figure is impossible, if the values of m and n, as I have said, cannot be calculated, then the only other alternative is to have a historical approach. And this is really the way which can displease neither the one nor the other party. The representative of the Burmans has suggested the ratio 4 on the basis of the national debt, 5 on the basis of population. Both are entirely arbitrary, and it cannot give any correct ratio. Therefore, to my mind, this idea to have a fixed ratio in proportion to which the whole of the debt ought to be distributed is a thing which will never be arrived at, and it is useless to make any attempt to do it. It will never please Indians and it will never please Burmans. Therefore, I say that the only way which will satisfy both India and Burma is to have a historic approach. We carry on calculations year by year and arrive at the required figure.

There is one other point to which I should like to draw the attention of the House and which I maintained on the last occasion when the thing came up for discussion before the Assembly, and that is about the period of payment and the method of payment. Of course, somebody suggested 30 years and the Burmans demanded 60 years; and, like the old women's method, the Tribunal suggested 45 years. But what is the guarantee that during this period the payment will be made? We have just heard that they want a moratorium for five years; where is the guarantee that after these five years there will not be another moratorium for ten years, and so on?

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

It is an important question, and we cannot possibly fix the period of payment in this particular manner. To my mind, there are three alternatives which are essential. I said in my speech on the 6th April, 1932 :

"I maintain, and I am strongly in favour of the arrangement that the Government of India should continue to be the currency authority both for India and for Burma until such time as our dues are paid up."

This is an important point, that is, till such time as our dues are not paid up, India should remain the currency authority, and the Reserve Bank of India should be also the Reserve Bank of Burma. This is one kind of security by means of which we can see that all the debts are paid up. There are two other securities, and I give the other two alternatives. The second security is that Burma should pay up the debt by issuing a loan on the security of her revenues and let the creditors of Indian loan be paid out of the new loan which Burma may float on the security of her revenues. In that case, the payment to the Indian creditors will be made by the Burmese Government, and not by us, and it will then be a question between the Burman Government and her creditors to decide in what period they should pay up. Let her float a loan for herself on the security of her own revenue, and, from that loan, they can pay up the loan of the Government of India. The third alternative that I suggest is that the British Government should stand security for the payment of the Burman Loan. We cannot have the security of the Burmese Government, we must have the security of the British Government if debt is to be paid by instalments. Therefore, simply to say that the debt should be paid up by instalments in so many years is no satisfaction to us. We want a solvent security.

So much about the amount and the manner of payment of debt. Now, I come to the Railway problem. This problem, to my mind, is exceedingly simple. One thing I should like to mention about the Railway, which is important, though somewhat irrelevant. I have great apprehension about our Railway debts by the proposed Railway Authority. They are required to pay 32 crores a year in interest charges. The authority may say : " We do not consider the railways are worth 800 crores now : evaluate them and find out their present value—it may be only 400 crores and we will pay only 16 crores." We will thus suffer an enormous loss of 16 crores every year. It will be very unfair. Burmans will also demand immediately that their railway debts should also be reduced to half. Then the question of railway depreciation fund, which the Tribunal has discussed, does not arise at all ; because, I am sure, by the time the separation is made, there will not be a single penny left either in the depreciation or in the reserve fund of the railways. The reserve fund has been eaten up entirely. The report has entirely overlooked this fact that for the last three years the one per cent. of the capital at charge has not been paid to the Indian Revenue at all and we must take our loans before the Railway accounts are settled. This is an exceedingly important point which the Tribunal has entirely ignored. After the payment of this debt and the current year's deficit, nothing will be left in the depreciation fund.

Mr. Nixon complained that the Assembly did not take sufficient interest in the financial adjustment, and he gave certain examples. I have already said that I was not in favour of the separation of Burma ; but I also said that I am not concerned in this question. The Assembly was indifferent to discuss the details of an incidence with which it was not in agreement. He then mentioned something about a profit and loss account of the Posts and Telegraphs Department. I do not want to go into details in this matter : but this Department is losing greatly on the new experiments it is carrying out, and the cost of these experiments must be borne equally by Burma and India and not exclusively by India.

Now, I come to one of the most important issues to which I specially draw the attention of the Member in charge of Finance and my friends on this side, and that is the question of the distribution of the army. The Indian army can be divided into two classes, one required for the internal peace and internal protection, and the other for Imperial defence. As regards the first, I suppose a portion of the present army will go to Burma and we will be relieved of its expenditure. In addition, there is the army maintained for Imperial defence : that is no concern of India alone, and there is no reason why we should maintain the whole of it. I say a portion of this also should be transferred to Burma—they can post it on their north eastern frontier or anywhere they like : but if we keep the whole of the defence army, then Burma should pay some portion of the cost of the maintenance of this army. It is entirely unjust that we should be made to pay the whole cost. Burma should not say : " We will not pay for its maintenance ; but when we have occasion to use it, we will pay the cost of the operations then." That is not sufficient. It is the maintenance of the army during peace time—its training, etc., which is really important, and towards which Burma should contribute. This aspect has been entirely ignored by the Tribunal. They have paid no attention whatever to this. I strongly urge that as soon as this separation is effected, then the army bill should be substantially reduced by assigning to Burma a portion of the army we now maintain for internal peace and for Imperial defence. The cost of the maintenance of the army is approximately the income we derive from the customs : and, as we will lose the customs, we now realise from the port of Rangoon we must not go on maintaining the same army we are now doing and bear the entire cost, but we must reduce our expenditure by the amount of loss of customs. It is quite unfair to Indian revenue by transferring a portion of our present army to Burma.

The question of pensions is a difficult one : but there is not a single difficult problem which cannot be solved unless it is proved that it is impossible to solve it.....

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Squaring the circle !

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Yes : It is impossible to solve and it has been proved that it is impossible.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Why do you separate Burma then ? Stop it.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : One point has not been clearly brought out in this matter. The general secretariat of India is as much a part of India as it is of Burma : it is, after all, the centre, not a provincial affair. Therefore, the pensions of all officers who serve in the Central Government, including military officers, and the cost of maintenance of the India Office and all the overhead charges ought to be included, and divided between two countries. In that manner, a fair and equitable division can be obtained. I am not in favour of capitalising the pension charges, because, in that case, the whole burden will fall on India, and our debt may or may not be paid, and it may come under a moratorium, and we may receive nothing. Let the Burmese Government take the direct responsibility and pay their share direct to the Secretary of State for India and Burma, so that we may be relieved of the burden. The payment of our debts is very doubtful. We cannot go to war with Burma to realise our debts. We can only go to the Secretary of State and ask him to do justice to us, and we will be entirely at the tender mercies of the Secretary of State.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has only five minutes more.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I just point out, Sir, that there are not many speakers who wish to speak on this.....

Some Honourable Members : There are many.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Five minutes more, and the Chair will adjourn.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Then, I shall finish my observations today.

Sir, there is one point which was raised by my friend, U Thein Maung, to which I should like to make a brief reference. He referred to the loans taken by the British Government from America and by other Governments, but the case is entirely different here. Burma has taken no loans from us, and, therefore, the example cited by my friend is not applicable. As was pointed out by my friend, Mr. Gauba, we have been co-partners, and, as such, it is really a question of fair distribution and not a question of the payment of debts.

There is one more small point to which I should like to advert for a moment, and that is our unprofitable debts. They have put down the military ground in Bombay and the expenditure on New Delhi as a burden on India. This is also not very fair. Take the case of New Delhi; it is not a thing to be sold, and it is hardly fair that we should treat these things as cost incurred by India alone; the cost incurred on these should be reckoned as general expenditure of the Government of India, and we need not evaluate the values which are not yielding any profit to any country. With these words, Sir, I would very strongly recommend that we do request the Secretary of State for India to consider these points very carefully before coming to any decision. My four main points are: (1) the allocation of military expenditure between the two countries on a fair and equitable basis which should be the proportion of customs revenues. This is really an important thing. If military expenditure remains as it is, and our income from which we pay the military expenditure is diminished, then India will be very much handicapped. My second point is that the  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. ratio which has been fixed is very arbitrary. There ought to be some scientific basis by means of which this figure should be fixed, and if no scientific basis could be arrived at, then historical approach is the only right course to follow. My third point is that there should be some kind of guarantee for the payment of debts. Burma should float a fresh loan. It should be definitely decided that the Reserve Bank of India should continue to function for both the Governments, and it should remain the currency authority till all these debts are repaid by Burma. My fourth point is that certain items which are included as unprofitable debts are not correctly entered. In the end, I would again urge very strongly that we should approach the problem from a historical point of view. The problem is difficult, but it is not impossible to solve.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 23rd September, 1935.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 23rd September, 1935.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

SCALE OF DIET GIVEN TO CERTAIN PRISONERS IN THE CELLULAR JAIL, ANDAMANS.

565. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena: (a) Will Government state how does the scale of diet given to division II prisoners in the cellular jail compare with that given in Bengal jails?

(b) Is it a fact that there was a change in the scale of diet in the case of division III prisoners after the hunger strike by them involving the loss of three lives? Is it also a fact that the new scale is meant for good and well behaved prisoners only and it can be stopped by way of punishment? If so, will Government state the number of prisoners in whose cases it has been reduced? Do Government propose to consider the feasibility of modifying this rule and seeing that the scale of diet is under no circumstance reduced?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the statement laid by my predecessor on the table of the House on the 5th December, 1933, in reply to Mr. Mitra's starred question No. 942. The allowance of vegetables and potatoes is slightly higher in the Andamans. In other respects the scales are identical.

(b) Certain changes were made in the scale of diet prescribed for C class terrorist prisoners. The revised scale of diet is not subject to good behaviour and cannot be reduced as a punishment. The question of modifying the rules, therefore, does not arise.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena: Will the Honourable Member read the statement that was laid on the table of the House in 1933?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: It was laid on the table of the House on the 5th December, 1933.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena: If my Honourable friend has got the statement with him, he may read it out now, so that I may put supplementary questions, if any.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: It is too long to read.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena: Will you, Sir, allow me to put supplementary questions tomorrow on this?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Yes.

COMPLAINTS BY PRISONERS IN THE CELLULAR JAIL, ANDAMANS, AGAINST THE TREATMENT OF DR. TODD.

566. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Have Government received any complaint by the prisoners against the treatment of Dr. Todd ? If so, what action did Government take in the matter ? If not, will Government enquire as to what has happened to the applications made by the prisoners to the Superintendent as stated in the article, in the Advance, dated 27th June, 1935 ? Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of appointing a medical officer, who has had experience of some civil hospital ?

(b) Is it a fact that there are several qualified medical practitioners amongst prisoners and that they offered to work in the Hospital but permission was not granted to them ?

(c) Is it a fact that a large percentage of the prisoners suffer from malaria and have lost in weight ?

(d) Is it also a fact that Mr. Sudhanshu Sen is suffering from T. B. and has lost about twenty pounds in weight and still arrangements have not been made for proper medical aid and adequate nourishing diet for him ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) No complaints have been received by the Government in regard to the treatment of prisoners by Dr. Todd. The Superintendent of the Jail is competent to deal with all applications and prisoners have facilities for bringing their grievances to the notice of the higher authorities, if they desire to do so. Government do not propose to institute any enquiries in the matter. Dr. Todd is a competent medical officer and Government see no reason for replacing him by another officer. The medical arrangements of the jail are under the general supervision of the Senior Medical Officer, who is an I. M. S. Officer.

(b) Yes. There was no need to make use of their services as the medical staff provided by Government is adequate.

(c) The incidence of malaria in the Cellular Jail in 1933 (the last year for which we have comparative figures) was less than in the jails in a number of the provinces in India. In the first seven months of 1934 the admissions into hospital on account of malaria averaged about ten per cent. of the prisoners : in the same period in 1935 the admissions have averaged little over five per cent. of the prisoners.

(d) Prisoner Sudhanshu Sen was examined by the Senior Medical Officer on June, 14, 1935, who found no sign or symptom of tuberculosis. He has lost about ten pounds weight but he is given careful medical treatment and is on a special diet.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Are Government taking any steps to eradicate malaria from these jails ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : We are taking all possible steps.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is the Honourable Member prepared to allow external medical help in the case of this tubercular patient ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : He is not tubercular. I said the Senior Medical Officer of the Settlement, who has nothing to do with the Jail, examined him and found no sign or symptom of tuberculosis.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Why is then this loss of ten pounds weight ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say without seeing the medical report, but there are many other causes of losing weight than tuberculosis.

BOOKS FOR PRISONERS IN THE CELLULAR JAIL, ANDAMANS.

567. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Will Government be pleased to state subjectwise the total number of books in the jail library and their cost ?

(b) Is it a fact that Government recently granted Rs. 300 (three hundred) for purchasing new books and the prisoners asked that books on History, Geography, Economics and general science be purchased out of it, but their request was not accepted and books mostly on fiction were purchased ? Are Government prepared to sanction a sum of at least rupees two thousand for the purchase of new books, the selection to be made by the prisoners themselves subject to the approval of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Education Department ?

(c) Is it also correct that about 200 books were deposited by the relations of the prisoners and most of them have not been given to them on the pretext that the Superintendent has not been able to scrutinise them ? Do Government propose to consider the advisability of making arrangement for the deposit of such books with some official in India for approval being sent to the prisoners without much delay ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The Government have not the information.

(b) An initial grant of Rs. 500 was made for the purchase of books and a further provision of Rs. 100 has been made by the Bengal Government for 1935-36. I understand that the prisoners were invited last year and have again been invited this year to submit a list of books they would like to read, but the final selection must necessarily depend on the suitability of the books for the majority of the prisoners and the funds available. Government do not consider that any larger grant is required for the purchase of books or that the existing procedure for the selection of books requires a change.

(c) I have no precise information about the number of books received at the Jail from outside sources ; but I understand that a large number of books, including proscribed communist literature received by the local authorities, are entirely unsuitable for issue to the prisoners. Government do not consider that any change in the existing procedure for the issue of books to the prisoners is necessary.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Who makes this final selection ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The local authorities,—I believe the Chief Commissioner.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is any educational authority consulted ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That I cannot say without notice.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is it a fact that books supplied by outsiders have to pass through a Board of Censors for approval before they could be passed on to the prisoners ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, that is the practice.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Is it a fact that many books deposited by the relations and friends of these prisoners have not been reviewed by the Censor up till now ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have no information.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Will the Honourable Member kindly make enquiries in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No. I have no reason to think that there is any undue delay in reviewing the books.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : The Honourable Member can take it from me that I have received complaints from their relations and friends that they have deposited books, but they have not been given to the prisoners yet.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : If the Honourable Member will send me the complaints he has received, I will investigate.

NEWSPAPERS SUBSCRIBED FOR THE PRISONERS IN THE CELLULAR JAIL, ANDAMANS.

566. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Will Government state the names of papers and the number of copies subscribed for the prisoners ?

(b) Is it a fact that the prisoners offered to subscribe at their own expense the Daily Statesman and the weekly issue of Manchester Guardian, but they were not allowed to do so ? Do Government propose to consider the advisability of allowing some daily paper and increasing the number of copies of the papers already supplied and also supplying Andaman Bulletin, published from the Chief Commissioner's office ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The following papers are supplied to the terrorist prisoners confined in the Cellular Jail, Port Blair :

|                                              |    |            |
|----------------------------------------------|----|------------|
| (1) Illustrated Times of India Weekly | .. | 10 copies. |
| (2) Statesman Weekly                  | .. | 4 copies.  |
| (3) Sanjibani                         | .. | 12 copies. |
| (4) Bangabasi                         | .. | 6 copies.  |

(b) Yes. The terrorist prisoners in the Andamans are supplied with a greater variety of papers than in any Bengal Jail. Government see no reason for supplying the Andaman's Bulletin or any other daily paper. The question of increasing the number of copies of some of the papers at present supplied to the prisoners is under consideration.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : May I know if there is any particular ban on papers like the Hindustan Times, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, the Ananda Bazar Patrika, for being used by prisoners in the jails ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Such papers are supplied as are thought suitable.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to the answer to part (d) of the question, may I know the reasons why prisoners were not allowed to subscribe at their own expense for the Daily Statesman and the weekly issue of the Manchester Guardian ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I understand that the Chief Commissioner is considering the question of supply of other papers than those I have mentioned, which the prisoners may desire to obtain at their own expense.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am asking specifically with regard to the Daily Statesman and the Manchester Guardian whether there was a request as stated and the request was turned down, if so, why.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have no information.

PROVISION OF FACILITIES FOR OUT-DOOR GAMES IN THE CELLULAR JAIL, ANDAMANS.

569. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Is it a fact that gymnasium in jail is fitted with only one horizontal bar and with one set of parallel bars ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of providing facilities for out-door games ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The gymnasium in the Cellular Jail contains Horizontal and Parallel Bars, Vaulting Horse, Dumbbells and Indian Clubs.

(b) So far as I am aware it is not the practice to allow out-door games to prisoners in jails in India. Government, therefore, see no reason for providing any such facilities for prisoners confined in the Cellular Jail, Port Blair.

AFFAIRS IN THE CELLULAR JAIL, ANDAMANS, UNDER THE PRESENT SUPERINTENDENT.

570. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Is it a fact that the present Superintendent of the jail has risen from the rank of a warder ?

(b) Will Government state how long he has been the Superintendent of the jail ?

(c) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of transferring him and sending some other person who has had experience of dealing with educated prisoners ?

(d) Have Government received any petition from the prisoners representing their grievances and for appointing non-official visitors ? If so, what action have Government taken ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Superintendent has the right of withholding the petitions sent by the prisoners to the higher authorities ? If so, are Government prepared to make it a rule that such representations should be forwarded by the Superintendent with his remarks to the authority concerned and that the prisoners making any representation should not be punished for doing so ?

(f) Is it a fact that Messrs. Probir Goswami and Sudhendu Dam were whipped and Dam was suspected of suffering from T. B. and was dragged from hospital and was whipped? If so, will Government state the reasons for inflicting this punishment?

(g) Will Government state the names of prisoners who have been whipped during the last twelve months and the reasons therefor? Are Government prepared to abolish the punishment of flogging in the cellular jail?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) Before he entered the Madras Jail Service in February, 1917, Major Upshon, the present Superintendent of the Cellular Jail, held non-gazetted appointments under the Madras Government.

(b) He was promoted to the Madras Jail Service on February 20, 1917. He became Superintendent of a District Jail in 1919 and of a Central Jail in 1925. He was appointed Superintendent of the Cellular Jail in August, 1933.

(c) Government see no reason for taking the action proposed by the Honourable Member.

(d) Yes. Government have passed orders on the grievances of the prisoners which were considered to merits attention. The question of appointing non-official visitors for the Jail is under consideration.

(e) I will state what the rules are. The Chief Commissioner exercises full and absolute control over the discipline and management of the prisoners. The Deputy Commissioner is required to visit the Jail once a month and to submit an inspection note to the Chief Commissioner. It is the duty of the Superintendent to hold a parade every Monday morning to hear complaints, but this does not preclude any prisoner from approaching the Superintendent at other times with a legitimate complaint. The rules do not provide for prisoners sending to higher authorities petitions containing complaints: but any matter which the Superintendent could not deal with himself he would naturally refer to the Chief Commissioner if he considered that it should be brought to his attention. The Government have no reason to suppose that a prisoner making a genuine complaint is punished for doing so. They are not prepared to require that the Superintendent shall submit to higher authority every petition which a prisoner may wish to send.

(f) Probir Goswami was awarded 20 stripes for assaulting the Chief Jailor and Sudhendu Dam 30 stripes for assaulting the Superintendent. Both prisoners were examined by the Jail Medical Officer and certified as medically fit for the punishment. Dam was not suspected of suffering from tuberculosis but he was admitted into hospital for slight fever on November 4, 1934. He had no fever from November 5 to 12th on which latter date he assaulted the Superintendent.

(g) No prisoners other than Probir Goswami and Sudhendu Dam have been whipped during the last twelve months. Government do not propose to abolish the punishment of whipping for grave prison offences.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Is not Sudhendu Dam the same prisoner who has been reported to have lost ten pounds in weight?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir. The other man's name is different.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : May I know if these petitions from these prisoners representing their grievances are disposed of by the Honourable Member himself or by the Jail Superintendent?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : By the Chief Commissioner.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Has not the Home Department anything to do with the disposal of these cases?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : If the Chief Commissioner considers the subject of sufficient importance, he would send them on to the Home Department, but ordinarily he disposes of these petitions himself.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : May I know the answer to part (e)? I have not been able to follow it.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : It is fairly long, and I have already read it once.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : If the Honourable Member is not prepared to read, then they should be laid on the table at least half an hour before question time. Otherwise, we are deprived of our right of putting supplementary questions.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Sir, these are questions relating to political prisoners which are of absorbing interest to the country and we shall not be doing our duty to our country and our constituency if we do not get sufficient information about them. The Honourable Member always gives his answers so quickly and in such a low voice that we cannot follow him, and we cannot put supplementary questions. With your indulgence, I would suggest that these answers relating to the State Prisoners should be sent to us beforehand. Otherwise we should be permitted to put supplementary questions tomorrow.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : There are two courses open to the Honourable the Home Member, either to read out the answers again or to lay them on the table.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I had better read it again to save trouble. [The Honourable Member read out again the answer to part (e).]

Prof. N. G. Ranga : What is the answer to part (d).

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has already read out the answer.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Have Government considered the petition of these prisoners for the appointment of a non-official visitor, and, if so, what is the decision?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have already said that the question of appointing non-official visitors for the jail is under consideration.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to clause (g), may I know what are the reasons why Government are not prepared to abolish the barbarous punishment of flogging in the Cellular Jail?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : It is necessary in the interests of discipline.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is the Honourable Member aware that Major Upshon has the credit of having ordered the largest number of corporal punishments while he was Superintendent of the Jail in Rajahmundry ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am not aware that he has ever received corporal punishment.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Does the Honourable Member think that is it really possible for these petitioners to get redress of their grievances, if the Jail Superintendent is the very person against whom these petitioners have complained ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That is a matter of opinion.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : I understood from the Honourable Member's reply that all petitions in the normal course go to the Superintendent. My grievance is that if such grievances relate to the very conduct of the Superintendent, is the Superintendent the proper person to dispose of these petitions ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That is a matter of argument.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : When did Government last consider the question and came to the conclusion, that " discipline cannot be enforced without flogging " ? What was the nature of the inquiry ; who inquired ; and what are the materials on which the Honourable the Home Member says that, without flogging, discipline cannot be enforced in the Cellular Jail ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Does the Honourable Member want to know what is my experience ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am asking the basis of the Government's opinion that " discipline cannot be enforced in these cellular jails without flogging " ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The " basis " is " experience ".

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Has the Honourable Member any experience of jails at any time ? Has he visited them at any time ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have been in charge of jails for four years, and when I was a District Magistrate, I visited many jails and enquired into many jail offences.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Has the Honourable Member made any inquiries into specific cases where there were complaints against flogging ? Will the Honourable Member make any such inquiries ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot undertake to do that.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that some of the prisoners in the Andaman jails were once prisoners in the Rajahmundry jail and were then flogged under the orders of Major Upshon before he was transferred to the Andamans ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir, I have no information to that effect.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it a fact that Major Upshon has been appointed Superintendent of the Andaman jails, because, he has had, to his credit, the largest number of corporal punishments inflicted and carried out under his own instructions ? (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government inquire now and consider whether non-official visitors cannot be appointed to a committee,—non-official visitors appointed by themselves,—and come to a conclusion on the need or otherwise for continuing this barbaric practice of flogging ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am not prepared to do that.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : May we know the reason why ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That question cannot be further discussed.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : How long will Government take to discuss the question of the advisability or otherwise of appointing non-official visitors to the jails in question ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I expect to discuss the question—as I have already said in reply to another question—with the Chief Commissioner who is going to visit Delhi this cold weather.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Cannot that be done by correspondence, Sir ?

(No reply.)

SUPPLY OF MORNING TEA TO PRISONERS IN THE CELLULAR JAIL, ANDAMANS.

571. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Is it not a fact that the weather of the Andamans is moist and damp and the prisoners suffer from cold, and are Government prepared to consider the advisability of supplying morning tea to the prisoners ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Andamans, like Bengal, receive a heavy monsoon ; but the climate cannot be called cold : the mean temperature is higher than in Bengal. Tea at the early morning meal is supplied to B class prisoners in the Andamans but not to C class prisoners. Government see no reason to depart from this arrangement.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is not the climate more damp than in Bengal ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The mean temperature is lower.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : May I ask for what reasons Government have arrived at the decision that tea should not be supplied ? Is it on the ground of cost, or what ?

(No answer.)

PROTECTION OF INDIANS IN ABYSSINIA.

572. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Will Government state what action, if any, it has taken to protect the life and property of Indians in Abyssinia ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given on the 3rd September, 1935, to a short notice question on the same subject by Mr. Satyamurti.

REFUSAL OF ADMISSION TO INDIAN STUDENTS IN ENGLAND TO A SWIMMING POOL.

573. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Has Government's attention been drawn to the letter of the London Correspondent of the Roy's Weekly, dated the 29th July, 1935, regarding the fact of two Indian students having been refused admittance to a Local Swimming Pool in London on the ground of colour ?

(b) If so, what steps do Government propose to take in such matters once for all ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta's starred question No. 546 on the 20th September, 1935.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member what the reason was for not taking any action ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : My Honourable friend can know from me what it was : it was that the Secretary of State made inquiries and found that this was an entirely private concern over which Government have got no kind of control.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : May I know what was the justification for refusing admittance after tickets were actually sold ? Tickets were then actually sold by the company to some Indians, though the company has now discontinued the practice of selling these tickets. After selling the tickets, does it not stand to reason that those to whom tickets were actually sold should have been given admittance ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The gentlemen concerned have got the ordinary civil remedy.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I take it that it is a fact that Government have no control whatsoever, in any form, over that company ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Yes, Sir.

CLASSIFICATION OF THE STAFF OF THE READING BRANCH OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESSES.

574. *Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang : (a) Is it a fact that there are two classes of employees, Industrialists and Clerks, working in the Government of India Presses ?

(b) Is it a fact that the members of the Reading Branch are classified as "Industrialists" ?

(c) Is it a fact that prior to 1920 they were recognised as ministerial servants ?

(d) Is it a fact that the employees of the Reading Branch do only reading and writing work and do not use any tools, instruments, implements or machines of any kind in the discharge of their duties ?

(e) Are Government aware that the Controller of Printing and Stationery in his memorandum No. C.P.O.-12/74/28, dated the 23rd September, 1929, declared the members of the Reading Branch as being ministerial servants ?

(f) Is it a fact that members of the Reading Branch of Government of India Presses are persons "solely employed in a clerical capacity in a room or place where no manufacturing process is being carried on" ?

(g) Is it a fact that the Calcutta High Court in the case Crown vs. H. Watson (1934) declared Proof-Readers to be clerical workers and not industrialists ?

(h) If the answers to parts (c) to (g) are in the affirmative, are Government prepared to classify members of the Reading Branch of the Government of India Presses as ministerial servants and not industrialist workers or labourers ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a), (b), (d) and (e). Yes.

(c) I understand that prior to 1920 there was no distinction between clerks and readers or other staff as regards classification.

(f) I am inclined to the view that the correction of printed matter, which is the work of the Reading Branch may be itself a manufacturing process.

(g) No.

(h) Does not arise.

COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF PERSONS WHO HAVE COMPLETED 25 YEARS OF THEIR PERMANENT SERVICE.

575. *Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India have issued orders for the compulsory retirement of persons who have completed 25 years of their permanent service ?

(b) If so, when would these orders be given effect to ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

COMMUNAL COMPOSITION OF THE STAFF OF THE RESERVE BANK OF INDIA.

576. *Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang : (a) What is the total strength of the Reserve Bank of India ?

(b) How many of the employees are Hindus, Muslims, Sikhs, Christians and Anglo-Indians ?

(c) Was the recruitment made in accordance with the instructions contained in the Home Department Resolution No. F-14/17-B/33-Ests., dated Simla, the 4th July, 1934 ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) and (b). Government have no information.

(c) The recruitment of the staff of the Reserve Bank is entirely a matter for the Central Board of the Bank.

PROMOTIONS IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

577. *Mr. Sham Lal : (a) Does a Jemadar of the Indian Medical Department normally take about 21 years to get promotion to a Subedarship ?

(b) Is it a fact that an ordinary soldier with ordinary intelligence under ordinary peace conditions can rise to the position of a Subedar, Subedar-Major, or even to the rank of Honorary Lieutenant in 21 or 22 years ?

(c) Are Government aware that Military Sub-Assistant Surgeons who entered the service after 1918 cannot hope to get promotion above the rank of Jemadar, however intelligent and hardworking they may be, as a very large number of the Sub-Assistant Surgeons were taken in service in 1918 under the system of promotions now in vogue ?

(d) Are Government prepared to make promotion of such Jemadar (Sub-Assistant Surgeons) of the Indian Medical Department to Subedar, Subedar-Major, on time-scale basis just as it is in the case of the Indian Medical Service Officers ?

(e) Are Government prepared to increase the percentage of Honorary King Commissions being granted to such officers from 1 per cent. to 2 per cent. and remove the grievance and discontent existing among the service ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) The normal period of service before promotion to the rank of subadar is 26 years.

(b) It is only the exceptional men who reach these high ranks, and even they do not do so in 21 years.

(c) Of the 246 sub-assistant surgeons recruited in 1918, only 106 are now in the service. The senior among them will be promoted in due course, but as the cadre of subadars and subadar-majors is limited to ten per cent. of the total strength, promotion is bound to be slow.

(d) No, Sir.

(e) No, Sir. The Indian Medical Department have the same percentage of promotions to Honorary Commissioned rank as other branches of the Indian Army and they have no real grievance in this respect.

ALLOWANCES GIVEN TO MILITARY SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS ON TRANSFER.

578. *Mr. Sham Lal : (a) What daily allowance or travelling allowance will an Indian Officer of the Indian Medical Department (Military Sub-Assistant Surgeon) get on permanent transfer from Alipur, Calcutta to Meerut when travelling with a family of four members, all travelling II Class ?

(b) Is it a fact that he gets only five annas a day in lieu of rations from which he is supposed to meet his food expenses (which are always high on journeys), cooly charges and other incidental and miscellaneous charges ?

(c) Are Government aware that an Indian Officer of the Indian Medical Department (Military Sub-Assistant Surgeon) has to spend about half of his pay on the moves in the interests of the service of the State ?

(d) Do Government propose to make the provisions of Form 'E' applicable in the case of Military Sub-Assistant Surgeons in case of their transfer, which provisions at one time were in force ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) A military sub-assistant surgeon of the Indian Medical Department on transfer travels on second class warrant, which covers not only the conveyance of himself, and his family and his servant but also of the authorised scale of baggage by rail or road, as the case may be. No travelling or daily allowance is admissible.

(b) Yes, but the five annas are not intended to cover cooly charges and other miscellaneous and incidental expenses.

(c) In view of the facilities which the warrant system affords, it is difficult to accept the statement as correct.

(d) No, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Are there European military sub-assistant surgeons ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : No, Sir.

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST INDIAN MILITARY SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS.

579. *Mr. Sham Lal : (a) Is there any difference in accommodation granted to Indian Officers of the Indian Medical Department (Military Sub-Assistant Surgeons) as compared with other Indian Officers of unit or formation ?

(b) Are there any special reasons for this discrimination against Indian Officers of the Indian Medical Department (Military Sub-Assistant Surgeons) ?

(c) Is it a fact that no Darbar Hall or Baithak is provided for Indian Officers of the Indian Medical Department (Military Sub-Assistant Surgeons) whereas such Darbar Halls or Baithaks are provided for in the accommodation provided for other Indian Officers of the unit or formation ?

(d) Is it a fact that only one lamp is given to the Indian Officers of the Indian Medical Department while two lamps are given to other Indian Officers ? Are Government aware that the former being more educated and being professional men, require more lamps than the latter ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Yes. The scale of accommodation allowed to Indian Officers of the Indian Medical Department is somewhat less generous than that allowed to regimental Viceroy's Commissioned officers.

(b) No, Sir. As a matter of fact, the question of providing Indian officers of the Indian Medical Department with the same scale of accommodation and lamps as regimental Viceroy's Commissioned officers has been considered three times in the last ten years, but it has not yet been possible to proceed with the matter on account of lack of funds.

(c) Yes.

(d) Yes—but I cannot admit that officers of the Indian Medical Department need more lamps than other Indian officers.

WATER SUPPLY OF THE CITY OF KARACHI.

580. *Sir Ghulam Hussain Hidayatallah : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they have received a representation from the Mayor of Karachi on behalf of the Karachi Municipal Corporation praying for certain assistance from the Government of India towards the scheme of that Corporation for bringing water from the River Indus for the purpose of augmenting the water supply of the City of Karachi ;

(b) if so, what they propose to do in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

Sir Ghulam Hussain Hidayatallah : Is the Honourable Member sure that they have not received any representation ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : As sure as is humanly possible.

MANUFACTURE OF PETROL FROM COAL IN INDIA.

581. *Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : (a) Will Government state whether they are aware that petrol has been produced in large scale from coal in England by the Imperial Chemical Industries Company ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of manufacturing petrol from coal in India ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes.

(b) No ; the process at present is uneconomical.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : May I ask if Government have really investigated into the matter, Sir ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : We are familiar with the facts, Sir.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Are Government aware that there is plenty of coal available in India ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Yes, plenty. (Laughter.)

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : What is the difference in conditions of production of coal out here and in England ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : There are very big differences between conditions here and in England. Even in England, it has not proved commercially successful ; it is dependent on a substantial remission of the excise duty. England has no internal supplies of oil worth speaking of ; then, there is the very large problem of unemployment there ; there is a large mining population unemployed.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Is there not a large amount of unemployment even in India ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Not among the miners, as far as I am aware. Our production of coal is very nearly what it was several years ago, and the figures of production are rising again.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Will Government consider the advisability of investigating into the matter again ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir, because it requires an extremely heavy subsidy, and, having supplies of petrol within our borders, I do not see any reason why we should produce it by a more expensive method and subsidize the owners of coal and those who use petrol.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are Government aware that petrol is being sold almost at monopoly prices in this country, and is much dearer than in many other countries, including the country of my Honourable friend ? Will Government, therefore, examine this question and see if petrol cannot be supplied at a cheap rate, as it is being supplied in other countries ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I think the Honourable Member can take it from me that petrol cannot be produced cheaper by using coal instead of using the methods that are now in force.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I know what is the difference between the quality of the coal that is produced in England and the quality of coal that is produced in India ? How is it that one kind of coal can produce petrol and the other cannot ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The qualities of coal differ from seam to seam and from field to field.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Is the Honourable Member aware that with the separation of Burma, the supplies of petrol within our borders will become very little ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The separation of Burma will lessen the supply of petrol in India which will be then practically confined to Assam and the Punjab.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Will that supply be sufficient for the country ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Not the supply from Assam and the Punjab alone.

MOLASSES PRODUCED IN INDIA.

582. *Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Will Government state :

(a) whether they are aware that an enormous amount of molasses is being produced in India because of the rapid rise of the white sugar industry ;

(b) whether they have explored any way of utilising this immense amount of molasses ;

(c) whether they are aware that in Java, Queensland, Hawa and other countries, molasses has been utilised as manure very successfully ; and

(d) whether they propose to consider the advisability of finding some such way for utilising molasses ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) and (d). Yes. Experiments on the use of molasses as manure and for road surfacing and making acetic acid are already in progress at several centres in India.

(c) Government are informed that an examination of the reports of experiments in these countries shows that the results obtained with crude molasses are erratic and contradictory.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Will the Honourable Member give the report of these experiments in due course ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : This experiment is being conducted largely under the aegis of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research, and I think my Honourable friend, if he is curious as regards the results, will find them in the report of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Are Government making any experiments with these molasses being used as fuel ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Experiments on that point have been made already, and I gather that the results have not been very satisfactory.

Maulana Shaukat Ali : Are Government aware that, in the old sugar factories, called Khandsars, they used molasses for making vinegar, both black and white, what they called mugattar. As an investigation is being conducted into the use of molasses, cannot Government induce people to make experiments of converting molasses into vinegar on a large scale as there is a great demand for vinegar ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : My own idea is that the establishment of what might be called a large scale factory production of sugar in this country makes the utilisation of molasses for the purpose of producing vinegar very undesirable.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Are Government carrying out any research for producing alcohol from these molasses ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I answered that question day before yesterday.

Maulana Shaukat Ali : May I know why it is undesirable to produce vinegar ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I will answer that question like this : unless the population of this country actually start drinking vinegar with their morning tea, there will not be enough use for the vinegar.

Maulana Shaukat Ali : Not much pickles and chutnies are eaten in this country, and they are a very good remedy for many diseases. There is a great demand from the poor people to eat pickles and chutnies if they can only be produced at cheap rates.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That is not a question.

CONDITION OF INDIANS IN FIJI.

583. *Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : (a) Will Government state whether they are aware of the fact :

(i) that large numbers of Indians have settled down in Fiji ;

(ii) that they are in a miserable plight ; and

(iii) that the system of land tenure obtaining there works great hardship on the Indian population ?

(b) Will Government state whether they have made any representations to alleviate their conditions ?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of impressing upon the Government of Fiji to evolve a better system of land tenure and give better treatment to the Indian community ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) (i). Yes.

(ii) The Indian community have made representations regarding elections to the Legislative Councils and there is the question of land tenure. Apart from that the Government of India have not recently heard of any grievances.

(a) (iii), (b) and (c). I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply given by me to Mr. C. N. Muthuranga Mudaliar's starred question No. 183 asked on the 6th September, 1935.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : With reference to the answer to clause (a), (ii), is it not a fact that with time people get accustomed to these hardships and they do not complain any more and that the absence of complaints is no proof that there are no complaints ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Well, Sir, that seems to me to be a hypothetical question.

GRIEVANCES OF THE EMPLOYEES OF THE EAST INDIAN AND EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY PRESS.

584. *Dr. P. N. Banerjee : (a) Is it a fact that the Honourable Mr. D. G. Mitchell stated in the Council of State on the 25th February, 1935, that the Report on the grievances of the employees of the combined Press for the Eastern Bengal and the East Indian Railway had been presented and assured that the same was receiving the very sympathetic consideration of the Railway Board ?

(b) Is it a fact that in a mass meeting of the employees of Railway Presses, Calcutta, held under the presidency of S. J. Amarendra Nath Chatterji, M.L.A., at Calcutta on the 27th April, 1935, a resolution was passed requesting Sir Guthrie Russel to give a sympathetic consideration to the Notes on the Administration of the Railway Press, submitted by Press Employees' Association, Calcutta ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Committee reported in paragraph 21 that the complaint made as to the inequitable methods adopted in calculating the revised pay in 1930 is serious and they had to examine in greater details the correctness of the calculation made in 1930 ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Committee is of opinion that the principles laid down by the Railway Board have not been followed in fixing the initial pay at the time of revision of pay in 1930 ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Committee's conclusions regarding the inequitable adjustment of pay are that there have been variations in carrying out the orders of higher authorities in regard to the fixation of initial pay in 1930 ?

(f) Is it a fact that in letter No. 2263-E.G., dated the 20th March, 1934, the Director, Railway Board, directed the Agent, East Indian Railway, Calcutta, to make arrangements to report on each of the points raised by the Press Employees' Association in their Note?

(g) Is it a fact that in paragraph (4) of the Note submitted by the Press Employees' Association it was pointed out that the details regarding the grievances of the inequitable fixation of initial pay of the industrial employees could be found in their Memorial, dated the 12th January, 1931?

(h) If the answers to parts (f) and (g) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state:

(i) whether the memorial, dated the 12th January, 1931, was placed before the Committee for their consideration; and

(ii) whether materials were placed before the Committee by the Agent to show how the initial pay was fixed in 1930? If so, what are the materials that were placed before the Committee?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) to (g) and part (i) of (h). The reply to all these questions is in the affirmative.

(h) (ii). Government have no detailed information as to the materials placed before the Committee, but have no doubt that all relevant facts were taken into consideration by them. I may add that the recommendations of the Committee have been accepted.

INDENT FOR TWO MONO MACHINES FOR THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY PRESS AT CALCUTTA.

585. *Dr. P. N. Banerjea : (a) Is it a fact that the Agent, East Indian Railway, has recommended in his Annual Report for 1934-35, for the indent of two Mono machines for the Press at Calcutta, to cope with the work of the Composing Branch?

(b) Is it a fact that the following staff and materials are indispensably necessary for the running of a single Mono machine:

(i) One Mono mechanic,

(ii) Mono-operator, and one Caster,

(iii) Two Compositors,

(iv) Outside assistance for occasional repairs,

(v) Spool used in machine,

(vi) Expenditure on gas,

(vii) Expenditure on electricity with separate dynamo,

(viii) Expenditure on lead?

(c) If the answer to part (b) be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state the expenditure that is to be incurred under each head?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) In the report it is stated that steps are being taken to increase the capacity of the composing branches by installing more monotype machines and labour saving equipment.

(b) and (c). Government have no information.

FIXATION OF THE INITIAL PAY OF STAFF IN THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY PRESS.

586. \*Dr. P. N. Banerjea : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. P. R. Rau laid a statement on the 18th July, 1934, showing that the mean average of piece-earning rate per hour and class rate  $\times 200$  was taken as the method of fixing the initial pay of the men in the East Indian Railway Press?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member in charge be pleased to state:

(i) whether this mean average was taken in case of each individual industrial employee;

(ii) how this mean average was calculated; and

(iii) what is the mean average taken in case of an industrial employee whose hourly rate was annas four and earnings on piece-rate was Rs. 100 per mensem?

(c) Is it a fact that in telegram No. 229-E.G., dated the 26th November, 1930, it was stated and the principle was followed that the fact that men can earn piece-work in addition to monthly rates should not be lost sight of in fixing the initial pay of the industrial employees of the Press?

(d) Is it a fact that working on piece-rate has totally been stopped at the Calcutta Press? If so, since when?

(e) If the answers to parts (c) and (d) are in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether any increase in pay has been granted to the industrial employees in view of the staffing of piece-rate working?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes, in connection with starred question No. 258 asked on the 5th December, 1933.

(b) (i). The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that the reply is in the affirmative.

(ii) I lay on the table a statement showing the details of the method adopted in fixing initial pay in the case of piece-workers in the East Indian Railway Press.

(iii) I am unable to furnish an answer in the absence of information as to the number of hours actually worked on piece rates.

(c) Yes.

(d) The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that working on piece rates has been stopped since the 1st March, 1933.

(e) Government are informed that no increase in pay, apart from increments accruing according to the time-scale of pay, has been granted.

L237LAD

Statement showing the details of the method adopted in fixing initial pay in the case of piece-workers in the East Indian Railway Press.

The following formula was adopted :

Mean average of

$$(a) \frac{\text{Piece earnings in a period}}{\text{No. of hours worked in the same period}} \times 200$$

$$(b) \text{ Hour rate } \times \frac{162}{152} \times 200$$

The figures 152 and 162 were calculated as follows :—

$$(A) \frac{\text{Total hours of work per week} \times 52 \text{ weeks}}{12 \text{ months}}$$

$$= \frac{35 \times 52}{12} = 151\frac{2}{3} \text{ or } 152.$$

$$(B) \frac{\text{Total attendance hours per week} \times 52 \text{ weeks}}{12 \text{ months}}$$

$$= \frac{37\frac{1}{2} \times 52}{12} = 162\frac{1}{2} \text{ or } 162.$$

NATURE OF DUTIES DISCHARGED BY THE READERS AND COPYHOLDERS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESSES.

587. *Dr. P. N. Banerjee : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the nature of duties that are discharged by the readers and copy-holders of the Government of India Presses ?

(b) Is it a fact that these duties can be discharged more efficiently by educated employees than by the uneducated ?

(c) Is it a fact that the workings in the binding department require not so much educational qualification than that which is required in the reading branch ?

(d) Is it a fact that educated applicants are being appointed in the binding department of the Calcutta Press whereas less qualified men get the job in the reading branch ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reason therefor ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to lay a statement showing the appointments made during the last three months in the reading and binding branches respectively of the Calcutta Press together with the names of the employees with their educational qualifications and relations with any employee in the press, if any ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to paragraphs 184 and 185 of the Handbook of the Government of India Presses.

(b) and (c). Yes.

(d) Certain men having educational qualifications equal to or above the matriculation certificate have been appointed as binders in the Calcutta Press. As regards the reading branch of the Press, of the men appointed recently, some possess such educational qualifications, while

COMPOSITORS, BINDERS AND DISTRIBUTORS DISCHARGED FROM THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

588. *Dr. P. N. Banerjee : (a) Is it a fact that several compositors, binders and distributors of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, were discharged due to reduction in the year 1923-24 without any payment as compensation ?

(b) Is it a fact that there are Government circulars in the Railway and Postal Departments to the effect that whenever any suitable vacancy occurs in the department the retrenched hands should be given the first preference in the matter of filling up those vacancies ?

(c) Is it a fact that recently several posts in the Composing and Binding Departments of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, fell vacant and the several retrenched compositors and binders of 1923-24 applied for their re-appointment in the said posts?

(d) Is it a fact that outsiders have been appointed in large number in preference to retrenched hands?

(e) If the answers to parts (a) to (d) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for appointing outsiders?

(f) Is it a fact that those posts have already been filled up? If so, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state:

(i) how many posts in the Composing and Binding Sections, respectively, fell vacant recently;

(ii) how many retrenched compositors and binders and how many outsiders applied for their employment; and

(iii) how many retrenched compositors and binders and how many outsiders have actually been appointed?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a), (b) and (c). Yes.

(d) Yes, a few retrenched employees have also been appointed.

(e) They were considered to be more suitable on administrative and technical grounds.

(f) The answer to the first part is that most of the vacancies have been filled. As regards the second part the particulars are as follows:

(i) 18 and 7, respectively.

(ii) 35 retrenched compositors, 35 retrenched binders and 234 outsiders.

(iii) No retrenched compositors, 3 retrenched binders and 18 outsiders.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : With regard to part (a), may I know if these retrenched hands have applied for posts, and do Government insist on their possessing the same qualifications as the new men?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Not necessarily, Sir. There is also a difficulty about age, as the retrenchment was a matter of good many years ago.

APPOINTMENT OF THE RELATIVES OF RETIRED EMPLOYEES IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESSES.

589. *Dr. P. N. Banerjea : (a) Is it a fact that there is a circular that relatives of the employees who are retired, or are going to retire in the Government of India Presses, will get preference regarding appointments in suitable vacancies?

(b) Is it a fact that during the last two years several appointments as clerks, copy-holders and readers were made from amongst the relatives of the employees of the Government of India Press, Calcutta?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) I assume that this part of the question relates to the Stationery and Printing Department of the Government of India.

If so, the answer is that the Controller of Printing and Stationery recently issued a circular on the subject.

(b) Yes.

APPOINTMENT OF THE RELATIVES OF RETIRED EMPLOYEES IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESSES.

590. *Dr. P. N. Banerjea : (a) Is it a fact that there is a Government circular to the effect that sons and relations of Government employees, who have retired or are going to retire, should get preference in matters of appointment?

(b) Is it a fact that several appointments as copy-holders have been made in the Government of India Press, Calcutta on the 1st August, 1935? If so, have they been filled by the relations of the employees? If not, why not?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) There is no general Government circular of the sort referred to by the Honourable Member, but I would invite his attention to the reply given by me to part (a) of the question I have just answered.

(b) Four men were appointed as Copyholders on 1st August, 1935, out of whom three are related to Press employees.

MOVEMENT FOR SEPARATION OF CERTAIN INDIAN BORDER TERRITORIES FROM OTHER PARTS OF HINDUSTAN.

591. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they are aware that there is really a movement going on, called "Pakistan" demanding from Government—British and Indian—, separation of certain Indian border territories from other parts of Hindustan?

(b) Is it a fact that a document purporting to demand separation of "Pakistan" from Hindustan has been issued by one Mr. Ali and is being circulated amongst Members of Parliament, peers, politicians and press in England and other organizations?

(c) If not, what action has the British Government and the Indian Government taken in that behalf?

(d) Has that document been confiscated and proscribed or not? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). I have seen the cutting referred to by the Honourable Member and a document signed by a gentleman who calls himself President of the Pakistan National Movement; but I do not know to whom the document has been disseminated. So far as the Government are aware, the so-called movement is run by some students in England, and is not operating in India.

(c) and (d). I am not aware that any action has been taken by His Majesty's Government. The Government of India have taken no action, and consider no action necessary.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if Government approve of the publication of such documents and pamphlets?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not know that Government have ever even seen those pamphlets.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : The pamphlets have been circulated in India. I have got a copy, and, if the Honourable Member wants, I will send it on to him. Will he then take action ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not see it is necessary to take any action.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : What is meant by the word " Pakistan " ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Honourable Member had better see the extract.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is there any literature on the subject ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : According to the Honourable Member who put the question, a lot of literature has been disseminated in England, but, so far as I know, it has not been disseminated in India.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state if the first article which was written from England was inspired from the North-West Frontier Province, and the students, who signed it there, are now given posts in the Frontier Province, one of them as a publicity officer ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have no information on that at all.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Will the Honourable Member make enquiries about this young man who has been made a publicity officer and whose father has just been made to retire ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not think the matter is important enough to make enquiries.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is there any political motive behind this ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question has been called.

RESIDENTIAL ACCOMMODATION FOR GOVERNMENT SERVANTS IN NEW DELHI AND SIMLA.

592. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) What arrangements have the Government of India made in New Delhi and Simla for the accommodation of their Secretariat and its attached offices staff and how many family quarters in all there are at each of these places ?

(b) What percentage of the establishment were allotted Government family quarters in Delhi during the last season and what is the percentage in Simla during this season ?

(c) What percentage will be allotted for the next Delhi and Simla Seasons respectively at each of the Headquarters of the Government of India ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Government quarters for the ministerial establishment at Simla are hardly sufficient for about 5 per cent. only ? If not, what are the exact figures ?

(e) Are Government aware that due to shortage of quarters a large majority of the staff have got to engage private houses for their accommodation in Simla on heavy rentals ?

(f) Are Government also aware that many of them have to engage houses which are situated outside Simla Municipal boundaries and far off from offices and are deprived of the amenities provided by the Municipality as well as by the Government of India itself ?

(g) Are Government further aware that all these Government servants who reside in such suburbs of Simla have to do so for want of sufficient accommodation in the city or to avoid high rental of the houses in the city proper or to get better accommodation for the rents they can afford to pay ?

(h) Will Government please find out and place on the table a statement showing the number of Government servants who reside in each of the suburbs situated outside municipal bounds together with the names of such suburbs wherein bigger number of the staff of the Government of India offices reside ?

(i) Are Government aware that due to the revision of scales which now hardly makes particularly a third division clerk to meet his both ends meet while living single only, it is very hard for the Government of India staff to rent a house in even some of the suburbs which are located within municipal area, and as such they have got to go to a locality where the rents can suit their pockets ?

(j) Are Government also aware that the rents of the houses within municipal limits are so exorbitant that the low paid staff cannot afford to reside in Simla proper or nearabout ?

(k) Do Government propose providing Government quarters (family) in Simla also to all of its employees as in Delhi ? If not, what are the difficulties ?

(l) If the reply to preceding part be in the negative, are Government prepared to locate some of the offices permanently at Delhi in order to permit of the remaining Government servants, who have all these years lived in localities outside municipal area and have suffered on account of the distance of the offices from those suburbs and whose children have suffered for want of educational and other facilities, shifting to houses situated in municipal area ?

(m) If it is not possible, what are the difficulties ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The information has been called for and a reply will be placed on the table of the House in due course.

FACILITIES AND COMFORTS FOR GOVERNMENT SERVANTS LIVING OUTSIDE THE MUNICIPAL LIMITS IN SIMLA.

593. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Will Government please state the facilities and comforts provided by it to the employees of the Government of India offices who are not allotted Government quarters in Simla and compelled to reside outside municipal limits ? If none, what are the reasons ?

(b) What facilities by way of medical, educational, water supply and electricity, are provided by the Government of India for their employees residing in such suburbs ?

(c) What measures have the Government of India adopted therein for the safety of their employees ? If none so far, why ?

(d) Which court of law they have to resort to in case of dispute and why cannot the Government of India provide some special facilities for its employees to attend Government courts only ? If not, why not ?

(e) What are the taxes charged by the Government of India or any other authority from the tenants of the houses in such localities and how much of it comes to in all in each locality ?

(f) Was the house or sanitary tax of 2 per cent. introduced with the approval of the Government in one of the suburban localities ? If so, when and on what understanding was it allowed to be introduced and whether since the introduction any sum has ever been set apart for the betterment of the locality, in respect of educational, medical, electricity and sanitary facilities ?

(g) Are Government aware that the population of one of the suburbs so situated has increased by more than double during the past few years but none of the amenities enumerated above have so far been provided by the Government of India ? If so, are Government aware that instead of increasing the number of water taps, the supply of water through the existing taps was decreased to the minimum thus causing a great inconvenience to the residents ?

(h) Do the Government of India now propose to provide all the amenities mentioned above, and also those which are enjoyed by those who reside in Government quarters to those staff of the Government of India who are compelled to live outside Simla municipal bounds ? If not, why not ?

(i) If the reply to the preceding part be in the negative, do Government in the alternate propose to adopt some other measures whereby the interests of Government of India staff residing in such localities are safeguarded in all ways and have the realised amount of taxes entrusted to a small committee of the residents of localities for the provision of all the facilities and amenities enumerated above every year ? If not, what are the difficulties ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) to (e). Government are not responsible for the provision of special civic or legal amenities to their employees, nor do they subject them to any special form of taxation. They have no information as to taxes levied by other authorities empowered to do so. Both in and outside Simla these employees share, with other classes of the population, such facilities as the authorities concerned provide for all. As an exceptional case, the Government of India make special arrangements for medical attendance and also subsidise certain educational institutions which cater primarily for the requirements of the migratory section of their staff.

(f) and (g). In the absence of the name of the locality Government regret that they are unable to give the Honourable Member the information asked for.

(h) and (i). I would refer the Honourable Member to the general statement of Government's position which I have given in answer to parts (a) to (e) of his question.

SHORTAGE OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

594. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Are Government aware that due to the shortage of Government quarters for the ministerial staff of the Government of India, many of its clerks in order to avoid congestion within municipal area, are compelled to reside in localities called Bharari, Sanjauli, etc., which are said to be situated outside the Simla municipal area ?

(b) How much amount is contributed every year by the Government of India or any other Government for the maintenance of Simla Municipality in any form or shape ?

(c) Are Government aware that the employees of the Simla municipality living in municipal bungalows or quarters situated outside municipal limits, e.g., Sanjauli, are provided with almost all sorts of municipal amenities whereas the employees of the Government of India who are living in such a locality, denied all such amenities ?

(d) Are Government aware that the Government of India employees who reside in Simla outside municipal limits not only pay income-tax to the Government but also purchase almost all kinds of their requirements from the Simla Bazars and indirectly greatly contribute towards the income of its municipality ?

(e) Are Government also aware that water taps and electricity are provided in municipal bungalows and quarters situated outside the limits of municipality for the benefit of municipal employees but if a Government of India servant asks for such amenities, the municipality for whose maintenance the Government also greatly contributes, at once refuses to supply any of these things ?

(f) Are Government also aware that sanitary conditions in the areas outside municipal bounds are bad and what control the Government of India has got to safeguard the health of their employees living in the area due to bad sanitation ?

(g) Do Government propose to come to the rescue of its employees to get facilities, e.g., water supply, electricity supply, improvements in sanitary conditions, education of their children and dispensaries, provided for their benefit ? If not, what are the difficulties ?

(h) In case the Government of India is unable to accede to the suggestion made in part (h) above, do Government propose to build more Government quarters in Simla in order to provide all of the Government of India staff so that all kinds of amenities provided either through the Simla municipality or directly by the Government may be enjoyed by all of its employees ? If not, what are the difficulties ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Government are aware that there is a shortage of Government quarters in Simla for the ministerial staff and that some members of that staff reside of their own choice in localities outside the Simla Municipal limits.

(b) The contributions made by the Government of India and the Government of the Punjab to the Simla Municipality have averaged Rs. 38,652 per year during the last three years.

(c) and (e). Certain menial servants of the Committee such as water-works keymen and linesmen whose presence is required all the 24 hours in the premises where they reside are provided with water and electricity. Ordinary municipal employees, however, who choose to live outside municipal limits, are treated like other members of the public and do not receive these privileges.

(d) This may be so.

(f) and (g). As areas outside municipal limits fall within the jurisdiction of Indian States it is not possible for Government to exercise in those areas the control or provide facilities that are possible in British India.

(h) No. The requirements of the Government of India in Simla under the new constitution are by no means certain, and it would be unwise to embark on a large building programme now. In any case funds cannot at present be made available for new works in Simla.

WATER METER RENT REALISED FROM GOVERNMENT SERVANTS IN NEW DELHI AND SIMLA.

595. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India possess in Simla many of its own buildings for the accommodation of its officers and the clerical staff ?

(b) Are Government aware that the water supply to all of these buildings are made by the Simla Municipality ?

(c) Are Government also aware that all such buildings and quarters are fitted with water meters like those in Government quarters in New Delhi ?

(d) Are Government aware that the Simla municipality do not charge any rent for the water meters so fixed ?

(e) Are Government further aware that as against no charge for the water meters in Simla quarters, the New Delhi Municipal Committee was allowed by the Government of India to charge rent at the rate of Re. 1/- per water meter or per quarter ?

(f) Are Government aware that due to the revision of the scales of pay of the Government of India staff, the pay of a third division clerk has come down to Rs. 60/- a month only and every year the recruitment is made to this grade only ?

(g) Will Government please state the total deductions made separately on account of house rent, water supply (including meter rent), electric supply (including meter rent), furniture supply, or any other service from a clerk who gets Rs. 60/-, 80/- and 250/- a month respectively ? Are Government aware that this residue of pay (after so many deductions on account of accommodation, etc.), is not quite sufficient for maintenance of an Indian clerk who generally has many dependents besides his family and children ?

(h) Are Government aware that the minimum charge at New Delhi on account of water supply is Rs. 2|8/- ? On what grounds this charge was fixed and how long is it likely to be allowed to continue ?

(i) Are Government aware that a low paid clerk hardly spends a rupee on account of water supply if he has got to make his own arrangements in a privately rented house ?

(j) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of doing away with water meter rent in New Delhi also ? If not, why is the Government staff being treated so differently by the Simla and New Delhi Municipalities ?

(k) Are Government also prepared to bring down the minimum charge for water supply in New Delhi Government quarters from Rs. 1|8/- for 4,000 gallons to -4/- per every thousand gallon without fixing any minimum charge and realise the charges on what is actually consumed ? If not, what are the reasons ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a), (b) and (c). Yes.

(d) No. The Simla Municipality charges rent for meters.

(e) The New Delhi Municipal Committee charges meter rent at Re. 1 per mensem.

(f) The initial pay of a Third Division clerk is now Rs. 60, but I should point out that the men who are not provided with Government quarters are given house-rent allowance in Simla and Delhi and, in addition get compensatory allowance during the Simla season. Moreover direct recruitment is not confined to the Third Division, but is made to the First and Second Divisions as well.

(g) A statement is laid on the table.

Whether the residue of pay after all deductions is sufficient or not is a matter of opinion.

(h) Yes.

The charge of Rs. 2-8-0 on account of water supply was fixed at—

(1) Rs. 1-8-0 upto 4,000 gallons in a month, and

(2) Re. 1-0-0 for meter rent per month.

The possibility of making a reduction will be examined.

(i) Government have no information.

(j) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given on the 7th December, 1933, to part (c) of Mr. Maswood Ahmad's question No. 1313. As already stated, meter rent is charged for in Simla as well as New Delhi and there is no difference in treatment.

(k) Government cannot commit themselves to any of the Honourable Member's suggestion but will consult the municipality regarding the possibility of a reduction.

Statement showing total deductions made in New Delhi on account of different services from a clerk who gets Rs. 60, 80 and 250 a month respectively.

REFUSAL BY THE NAZUL OFFICER, DELHI, TO ACCEPT MONEY FROM THE RESIDENTS OF NAIWALA, KAROL BAGH.

596. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Is it a fact that the Government charges rent for the sites leased out to the residents of Naiwala, Karol Bagh, Delhi ? Is it also a fact that the lease money is payable on the 1st of January and 1st of July every year ?

(b) Are Government aware that some residents of the area had disputes with the Lambardar of that area and consequently the Lambardar does not go to make collections ?

(c) Is it a fact that some residents made application to the Nazul Officer to permit them to pay the lease money in the Government Treasury directly and actually sent the amount through their servants and by money orders which the Nazul Officer declined to receive ?

(d) Is it a fact that according to the terms of the lease deed the Deputy Commissioner, Delhi is bound to accept the lease money when tendered ? If so, do Government propose to issue instructions to accept the amount when tendered in person or through money orders ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) The answer to the first half is in the affirmative. As regards the second half, Government have no information.

(c) and (d). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to starred question No. 451 asked by Sardar Sant Singh on the 17th September, 1935.

DIFFERENTIAL TREATMENT IN THE ALLOTMENT OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI AND SIMLA.

597. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Is it a fact that some of the orthodox clerks quarters are allotted to Indian gazetted officers who are allowed to occupy unorthodox quarters in Delhi ? If so, will Government be pleased to state why this concession has been allowed to Indian officers of the class of gazetted Superintendents only ?

(b) Is it a fact that Indian clerks who declare themselves unorthodox and who occupy unorthodox quarters in Delhi are refused the same concession of living in orthodox quarters in Phagli ? If so, what are the reasons for this differential treatment ?

(c) Is it a fact that New Delhi quarters were classed as orthodox and unorthodox both for the officers as well as for the clerks ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state since when the classification into orthodox and unorthodox has been abolished so far as the officers quarters are concerned ?

(e) Are Government aware of the impression that the concession of allowing Indian Superintendents to occupy orthodox clerks quarters has been incorporated in the rules of allotment of Government quarters only to benefit a few Superintendents of the Public Works Branch of the Department of Industries and Labour ? If not, do Government propose to state the number of Indian Superintendents and Assistants of the Public Works Branch of the Government of India who are occupying Phagli quarters and will Government be pleased to state how many of such Superintendents and Assistants of the Public Works Branch are occupying unorthodox quarters in Delhi ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes. Under the rules in force before 1933 "A" class orthodox quarters in Simla were allotted to Superintendents, Assistants and Clerks receiving emoluments of more than Rs. 300 per mensem. There was no upper pay limit. When the new rules were introduced in 1933 these "A" class quarters were reserved for Government servants drawing over Rs. 300 but less than Rs. 600 per mensem. The Government of India decided at the time that officers whose emoluments on the 15th June, 1932, were Rs. 600 or more per mensem and who were allotted "A" class quarters for the financial year 1933-34 or the summer season 1933 should not be required to vacate those quarters. It is under those orders that three officers who occupy "D" class officers' houses in New Delhi are still in occupation of orthodox "A" class quarters in Simla.

(b) Yes. But in the circumstances just explained, I do not think that there is any differential treatment.

(c) and (d). Orthodox houses are provided for officers in class "D" only. The distinction between orthodox and unorthodox has, therefore, not been abandoned entirely for officers.

(e) The allegation is unfounded. One Superintendent and four Assistants of the Public Works Branch are occupying quarters at Phagli. The Superintendent alone occupies a "D" class officers' house in New Delhi.

HOUSE RENT ALLOWANCE DRAWN BY PERSONS SHARING GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

598. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether house rent allowance is allowed to be made a source of income to the Government of India employees ? If not, will Government be pleased to state how many men of the Government of India who are entitled to house rent are allowed to draw house rent at the old rates of house rent when actually sharing a Government quarter either in Phagli, Summer Hill or Kaithu ?

(b) Are Government aware that the men of the Public Works Branch of the Government of India are allowed to draw house rent at the old rate while sharing a Government quarter allotted to relations of such employees ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) I presume that by "income" the Honourable Member means "profit". There is no rule to the effect that Government servants may not share quarters, but all Government servants who entered service after 1924, when the rates of house-rent allowance were raised, have to furnish a certificate to the effect that the allowance drawn does not exceed the house-rent paid. Government servants in service before 1924 who drew the lower house-rent allowance under the old rules, which did not provide for the production of a certificate, were given the option of remaining on the old rates of allowance drawn under the old rules or of coming on to the enhanced rates under the new rules. For Government servants who draw the allowance under the new rules, the allowance cannot be a source of profit. For Government servants who still draw the lower allowance under the old rules, the allowance may, in certain circumstances, be a source of profit. Since, however, the allowance itself is lower, there is reason to suppose that such instances are rare, and Government are of opinion that the collection of the information required would involve a disproportionate expenditure of time and labour.

(b) No. The position is explained in the answer to part (a) of the question.

GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA OCCUPIED BY THE STAFF OF THE PUBLIC WORKS BRANCH.

599. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : Will Government be pleased to state the number of quarters in Kaithu, Phagli and Summer Hill, which are being occupied by men of the Public Works Branch of the Government of India and their near relations like brothers, sisters and brothers-in-law ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The number of quarters occupied by the personnel of the Public Works Branch at Kaithu, Phagli and Summer Hill is nil, nine, and one respectively. I regret that I am unable to give information as to the relations of the men concerned.

BASIS OF ALLOTMENT OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

600. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India hold the view that Public Works Department is not a commercial Department in so far as the renting of Government quarters is concerned ? If so, will Government be pleased to state why the Department which has borrowed so much capital for investing on building of quarters should not be run on commercial lines ?

(b) Is it a fact that on the ground of the Department not being run on commercial lines the four-roomed buildings which are also the members' quarters in Summer Hill are rented to men on smaller salaries getting Rs. 50 to Rs. 150 and belonging to attached and subordinate offices whereby Government derives only Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 a month as house rent according to 10 per cent. on pay basis ?

(c) Is it also a fact that men of the Secretariat Departments who forego Rs. 400 to Rs. 450 by way of rent for seven months actual occupation are not allotted those quarters ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state the rent Government would derive if the quarters in Simla are allotted according to seniority basis and not on juniority basis ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes. I would remind the Honourable Member that the object of providing Government servants with residential accommodation is administrative rather than commercial.

(b) and (c). No. I understand that the Honourable Member is referring to the "A" class quarters at Summer Hill. These quarters are intended primarily for Government servants whose emoluments are over Rs. 450 but less than Rs. 600 per mensem. Under the housing rules quarters in Simla are distributed into three classes, and allotments are in the first instance made to the entitled officers of each class. Surplus quarters in "A" class go first to surplus "B" class applicants and secondly to surplus "C" class applicants.

(d) The information is not readily available.

DIFFERENT PRINCIPLES FOR ALLOTMENT OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI AND SIMLA.

601. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : Is it a fact that the New Delhi quarters are allotted to the Government of India employees on the seniority basis for deriving income on the capital invested ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for following two different principles for allotment of Government quarters in the two places like Simla and Delhi ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given on the 18th March, 1933, to parts (a) and (b) of starred question No. 710 by Mr. Lalechand Navalrai.

RENT CHARGED FROM MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE FOR QUARTERS IN SUMMER HILL, SIMLA.

602. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Do Government propose to state why Members of the Indian Legislature are charged on the basis of capital outlay? If so, why should the members be charged the assessed rent for Government quarters allotted to them?

(b) Is it a fact that a member's quarter, or quarter of the same type is allotted to Government employee drawing smaller salary and thereby Government derive in most cases a rent of Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 a month for such quarters? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why such a heavy rent of about Rs. 80 to Rs. 100 is charged per mensem from the members for the same accommodation and for the same quarters in Summer Hill?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) I am not sure what my Honourable friend means. All rents assessed under the Fundamental Rules are based on capital outlay, and Members of the Indian Legislature are charged rent assessed under Fundamental Rule 45A. This is a concessional rent payable by Government servants.

(b) When "A" class quarters at Summer Hill are surplus to the requirements of "A" class officers, they are allotted to applicants of "B" and "C" class. But this is no reason why Government should reduce the rent recoverable from "A" class officers and Members of the Indian Legislature.

RULES FOR ALLOTMENT OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

603. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Is it a fact that the present rules of allotment are based on the principle of giving advantage to the junior employees? If so, will Government be pleased to state why the 'A' type quarters in Kaithu and Tutikandi have not been converted into 'B' type quarters to give advantage to junior men?

(b) Is it a fact that there is a building called "Wheatfield Cottage" in Kaithu which used to be classed as a 'B' class quarter before? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why this "Wheatfield Cottage" was later on classed as a lower type of quarter, namely, 'C' type?

(c) Do Government propose to re-classify the "Wheatfield Cottage" into a 'B' class? If not, why not?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Allotments are made by juniority in each class. To convert all 'A' class quarters at Kaithu and Tutikandi into 'B' class would deprive 'A' class applicants of accommodation at these places.

(b) and (c). The four quarters comprising Wheatfield Cottage have always been in 'C' class, and no question of re-classifying them arises.

"B" AND "C" CLASS QUARTERS IN KAITHU, SIMLA.

604. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) How many 'B' class quarters are there in Kaithu and what is the ratio of 'B' class quarters to 'C' class in Kaithu?

(b) Do Government propose to convert some of the one-storied 'C' class quarters into 'B' class by the combination of two 'C' class quarters together? If not, why not?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) There are four 'B' class and 38 'C' class unorthodox quarters in Kaithu. The ratio of 'B' class to 'C' class is, therefore, 1 to 9.5.

(b) No. There are already 30 'B' class quarters elsewhere, and the number of 'C' class quarters is insufficient for the demand.

DIFFERENT LIMIT OF PAY FOR ALLOTMENT OF ORTHODOX AND UNORTHODOX QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

605. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Is it a fact that the maximum pay limit for the two-roomed and three-roomed orthodox quarters is Rs. 150 and Rs. 300, respectively, whereas such pay limit for the unorthodox quarters is Rs. 300 and Rs. 450, respectively? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for this different pay limits for the orthodox and the unorthodox quarters?

(b) Do Government propose to bring down the pay limit of the unorthodox quarters to the same limit as is prevailing for the orthodox quarters in Simla? If not, why not?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state why the European employees and the unorthodox Indian employees should be compelled to accept lesser accommodation? Is it a fact that the condition of service of the orthodox and unorthodox employees are the same?

(d) Is it a fact that the pay limit for two-roomed and three roomed and four-roomed European quarters were fixed long before the quarters were re-classed as unorthodox quarters? If so, do Government propose to bring down the pay limit for such quarters? If not, why not?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state what rent will be realised by Government from all the unorthodox quarters if the pay limit for the different types of unorthodox quarters is brought down to the same level of the pay limit for the corresponding types of orthodox quarters?

(f) Is it a fact that the maximum pay limit fixed at present for the three-roomed orthodox quarter is Rs. 300 and that for the same type of unorthodox quarter is Rs. 450, with the result that a man of the second division of the Secretariat as soon as he acquires a lien on a three-roomed orthodox or unorthodox quarters, retains such quarters till retirement and does not give any chance to any other men below him to get advantage of such quarters?

(g) Do Government propose to fix the maximum pay limit for both orthodox or unorthodox three-roomed quarters at Rs. 299 so that whenever a second division man gets to Rs. 300, he will be allotted a four-roomed quarter thereby making room for others in the three-roomed quarter and also getting advantage for himself of the best available quarters towards the end of his service?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Married clerks' quarters in Simla, both orthodox and unorthodox, are divided into A, B and C classes according to the accommodation provided. The three classes of unorthodox clerks' quarters at Summer Hill are sometimes referred to as four-roomed, three-roomed and two-roomed quarters but this is not an official designation. Assuming that the Honourable Member is referring to "C" and "B" class quarters, the reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The pay limits for unorthodox quarters are considerably lower than those which were in force before 1925, and were designed to ensure a fair distribution of the accommodation available. Moreover, the unorthodox accommodation is on the whole better than the orthodox accommodation, and this in itself is a justification for the distinction to which the Honourable Member refers.

(b), (d), (f) and (g). The pay limits were settled in consultation with the Imperial Secretariat Association when the rules were revised, and Government do not propose to make any change.

(c) No one is compelled to occupy Government accommodation. I have already said that unorthodox accommodation is on the whole better than the orthodox accommodation. The reply to the last part is in the affirmative.

(e) Government do not consider that the labour involved in the collection of the information will be commensurate with the result.

ASSESSED RENT OF "B" AND "C" TYPE UNORTHODOX QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

606. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Is it a fact that the assessed rent for 'C' type unorthodox quarters in New Delhi is Rs. 52 whereas the assessed rent of a 'B' type quarters is only Rs. 40 ?

(b) Do Government propose to remove this anomaly by the system of pooling the rents of 'B' and 'C' unorthodox quarters ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) The assessed rents are Rs. 52 for 'C' class and Rs. 40-8-0 for 'B' class unorthodox quarters.

(b) The revaluation of quarters in New Delhi is under consideration.

PERMISSION TO GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES WITH COLLEGE GOING CHILDREN TO RETAIN THEIR QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI ON PAYMENT OF RENT ON A 10 PER CENT. RENT BASIS.

607. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : (a) Is it a fact that if any of the Government of India moving staff who has been allotted a Government quarter in New Delhi has to leave behind him his family for the sake of higher education of his children, he is charged the assessed rent of the building from the last working date in Delhi of his Department ?

(b) Are Government aware that in the absence of colleges in Simla the moving staff of Government who have grown up college-going children, both boys and girls, are to leave behind their families in Delhi till the Delhi colleges close for the autumn, but they are denied the privilege of retaining their houses unless they are prepared to pay assessed rent of their quarters ?

(c) If so, do Government propose to allow such families with college going children to retain their house in Delhi on payment of the usual rent on a 10 per cent. pay basis till the college closes ?

(d) If not, are Government aware that the denial of such concession forces many parents to leave their children in hostels at a heavy cost ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes.

(b) The ten per cent. concession is allowed only to the Government servants concerned while they are actually residing on duty in New Delhi. The assessed rent charged to them when they leave their families in New Delhi is itself a concessional rent.

(c) No.

(d) Government have no information.

LIEN ON A LOWER TYPE OF QUARTER OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA STAFF.

608. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : Is it a fact that the non-moving staff of the Government of India are allowed the privilege of retaining a lien on a lower type of house to which he is inelligible owing to his increase in pay ? If so, will Government be pleased to state whether the same concession is allowed to the moving staff of the Government of India ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given on the 20th March, 1933, to parts (c) and (d) of starred question No. 799 by Mr. Maswood Ahmad.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE GAEKWAR OF BARODA IN RESPECT OF KATHIAWAR PORTS.

609. *Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : (a) Will Government state whether they are carrying on negotiations with His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda in respect of certain ports in Kathiawar in view of the coming Federation ?

(b) What are the objects and the result of these negotiations ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Negotiations are in progress with a view to securing an equitable arrangement in regard to Customs. The negotiations are not yet complete. They have no direct connection with the question of the States' entry into the Federation.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : If they have no direct connection, have they any indirect connection with the question of the States' entry into the Federation ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The Honourable Member must remain content or must remain discontent with the information I have already given.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is it a fact that the negotiations with Baroda have been completed on the basis of the Government of India paying them some crores every year ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is the report in the Press to that effect false ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I cannot add anything to what I have already said.

RESERVATION OF A CERTAIN PERCENTAGE IN GOVERNMENT SERVICE FOR THE ASSAMESE.

610. *Srijut N. C. Bardaloi : (a) Are Government aware that the Assamese race was a powerful one, having their own culture, civilization, literature and history ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Assam Valley was taken by the British only about a hundred years ago ?

(c) Are Government aware that people from the rest of India flocked to the newly acquired province and occupied high Government posts and monopolised the Bar and the trades ?

(d) Are Government prepared to consider the situation and reserve for the Assamese a certain percentage in all the services directly under the control of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) I do not propose to express an opinion on historical points which may be in dispute, but I believe it is correct that the Assamese are a separate people with a separate history of their own.

(b) Yes, in 1826.

(c) I understand that this is an overstatement. At the time of the British occupation, Assam was thinly populated and undeveloped. A large number of people from other parts of India came into Assam, and entered the services and certain professions.

(d) I would refer the Honourable Member to the Home Department Resolution, No. F-14/17-B.33-Establishment, dated the 4th July, 1934, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. It would not be consonant with the policy of the Government of India to reserve any vacancies for the Assamese as such, but those Assamese who belong to minority communities are eligible for the percentages reserved for such communities. I might add that a recommendation of the Assam Unemployment Enquiry Committee, similar to the Honourable Member's suggestion, was in May last brought to the notice of those Departments of the Central Government in which recruitment is made by local areas and not on an all-India basis.

HOLIDAYS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

611. *Sardar Sant Singh : (a) What was the number of holidays given in the Government of India Secretariat in 1922, and on what account was each of those observed ?

(b) What is the number of holidays at present observed in these offices as compared with those granted by the Local Governments within whose limits the headquarters of the Government of India remain ?

(c) When was the present system of observing holidays in these offices introduced and on what account was it adopted ?

(d) How many holidays were originally sanctioned, when the system of granting holidays was changed and how many were added as a result of the representation of different Associations, etc. ?

(e) Is it a fact that the main reason for reduction in the number of holidays was the great need for economy, all round, in those days ?

(f) Are Government aware that though a similar suggestion was made to the Provincial Governments by the then Retrenchment Committee, they either did not at all reduce the number of holidays or, even if any one of the Provinces did so, there was a nominal reduction ?

(g) Are Government aware that even at present the number of holidays observed either in the Punjab or Delhi is at least three times the number of holidays enjoyed by the Government of India offices ?

(h) Are Government aware that due to the grant of very few holidays in the Secretariat, its employees consider that their health is being undermined as they have to do office work for long hours almost daily ?

(i) Are Government aware of the feelings amongst the members of the establishment of the Government of India that with the revival of normal times the authorities have not yet considered the advisability of according them the same old concession in regard to the grant of holidays enjoyed by them for centuries together or to revise orders which as a special measure have entailed hitherto great pressure upon their health ?

(j) Are Government aware that all the attached offices of the Government of India which are located permanently at Delhi enjoy all the holidays given by the Delhi Local Government ?

(k) Are Government further aware that as soon as any of the office of the Government of India is located permanently at Delhi, it begins to enjoy all the holidays of the Delhi Administration ?

(l) Are Government now prepared to re-consider the last revised orders in regard to holidays which were introduced as an experimental measure and allow all the holidays which the Secretariat used to enjoy in 1922 ? If not, what are the reasons ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) There was no uniformity in respect of the holidays observed in the various Departments of the Government of India Secretariat in 1922, but the number of such holidays and the occasions on which they were granted were approximately the same as in the Punjab and Delhi. Saturdays in the months of September and October were also observed as holidays.

(b) Thirteen closed and six sectional holidays are observed in the Government of India Secretariat as also the last Saturdays of summer months in which there is no closed holiday (other Saturdays being observed as half holidays), the number of holidays in the Punjab is 38 and in Delhi 35. In these places the last Saturday of every month may also be observed as a holiday if the state of work permits.

(c) The present system was introduced in 1923 on the grounds stated in paragraph 1 of the Home Department Office Memorandum No. D. 4562-Public, dated the 20th October, 1923, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

(d) Ten closed and six sectional holidays were originally granted when the present system was introduced in 1923 and in 1930 they were increased by three closed holidays plus holidays on the last Saturdays of the summer months in which there is no other holiday.

(e) Economy was one of the grounds for adopting the present system of holidays.

(f) Some of the Provincial Retrenchment Committees recommended the reduction of holidays in provinces but the Government of India have no definite information how far their recommendations were accepted by the Local Governments concerned.

(g) It will be observed from the answer to part (b) of the question that the position is not as stated by the Honourable Member.

(h) No.

(i) Representations from the Imperial Secretariat Association were received in 1929 and 1930, asking for restoration of the old scale of holidays. Government are not aware that any general discontent now prevails in the matter.

(j) and (k). Attached and subordinate offices of the Government of India which remain in Delhi all the year round follow the local practice in regard to holidays.

(l) No. Government consider it better to have a smaller number of real holidays than to have a large number of holidays which for a large portion of the staff were only nominal, as was the case before the adoption of the present system.

CONSTRUCTION OF NEW RAILWAY STATIONS AT LUHATHAHA AND DUMRA.

612. *Mr. B. B. Varma : (a) Are Government aware that the courts and other offices in the town of Motihari, District Champaran, are to be shifted to another site in village Luhathaha and at Dumra from Sitamarh in the District of Muzaffarpore ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state if new railway stations are proposed to be constructed at the new places ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The Government of India have no information. The matter concerns the Local Government.

(b) This question will be considered when occasion arises.

DEMAND AND FORFEITURE OF SECURITIES OF NEWSPAPERS.

613. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the number and names of the newspapers from whom securities have been demanded during the last three years ;

(b) the number and names of the newspapers whose securities have been forfeited ; and

(c) whether there is any all-India policy in the matter of the demand and forfeiture of securities from newspapers ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). I would refer the Honourable Member to statements Nos. III and IV. which were laid on the table in connection with the reply given by me to Seth Govind Das's short notice questions on the 4th September, 1935.

(c) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to part (b) of Mr. Avinashilingam Chettiar's question No. 1389 on the 3rd April, 1935.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Since the answer was given on the 4th September, has there been any demand for securities or forfeiture of securities ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say that now.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to the answer to part (c), I am referred to an earlier statement made. May I know, as in the case of the Quetta earthquake and comments thereon, have the Government of India issued, from time to time, or at any time, any circular to Local Governments laying down an all-India policy in the matter of demand for securities, or forfeiture of securities from newspapers ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : If the Honourable Member will refer to the answer to part (b) of question No. 1389, he will find that also. That answer was as follows :

"The Government of India have issued certain general instructions to Local Governments in regard to the administration of the Press Act, the general purport of which was that while the Act should be so administered as to achieve the object for which it was enacted, care should be taken to see that no undue hardship was caused in cases in which the Local Government were satisfied that the newspaper or press was not likely to offend against the provisions of the Act. It was also suggested that admonitions or warnings should be given in suitable cases, and that editors and others should be able to obtain advice from an officer of Government if they so desired."

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is it part of the instructions of Government that, wherever Governments are satisfied that there is not adequate or satisfactory evidence to go before a Court of law, but where the unfortunate newspaper has incurred the displeasure of Government, the Government should proceed under the Press Act, and not prosecute the newspaper ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No such instructions were issued as far as I am aware.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is it part of the general instructions which have been issued to Local Governments classifying presses as friendly and unfriendly press ?

(No answer.)

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Who gets the amount forfeited ? The Government of India or the Local Governments ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think the Local Governments.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : In view of the strong feeling expressed in this House and outside on the administration of the Press Act, will Government consider, apart from the repeal of the Press Act, that the administration of the Press Act is done in a more humane and in a juster manner ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think the Act is administered with great humanity and justice.

LIFTING OF BAN FROM THE KHUDAI KHIDMATGAR AND OTHER CONGRESS ORGANISATIONS IN THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

614. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Will Government state what action has been taken on the Resolution passed by the Legislative Assembly regarding the lifting of the ban from the Khudai Khidmatgar and other Congress organisation in the North-West Frontier Province ?

(b) Will Government lay on the table a statement showing the names of the institutions which are still unlawful ?

(c) Will Government state from which institutions the ban has been lifted since January last ?

(g) It will be observed from the answer to part (b) of the question that the position is not as stated by the Honourable Member.

(h) No.

(i) Representations from the Imperial Secretariat Association were received in 1929 and 1930, asking for restoration of the old scale of holidays. Government are not aware that any general discontent now prevails in the matter.

(j) and (k). Attached and subordinate offices of the Government of India which remain in Delhi all the year round follow the local practice in regard to holidays.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The Government of India have no information. The matter concerns the Local Government.

(b) This question will be considered when occasion arises.

LIFTING OF BAN FROM THE KHUDAI KHIDMATGAR AND OTHER CONGRESS ORGANISATIONS IN THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

614. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : (a) Will Government state what action has been taken on the Resolution passed by the Legislative Assembly regarding the lifting of the ban from the Khudai Khidmatgar and other Congress organisation in the North-West Frontier Province ?

(b) Will Government lay on the table a statement showing the names of the institutions which are still unlawful ?

(c) Will Government state from which institutions the ban has been lifted since January last ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The Government of India considered the recommendation contained in the Resolution and decided to send a copy of the Resolution and the debates to the Local Government.

(b) and (c). I would refer the Honourable Member to item (10) in the statement I laid on the table on the 14th February, 1935, in reply to his own questions Nos. 272 and 273. The ban has not been removed from any of the organizations named therein.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Will the Honourable the Home Member state why the ban on the Khudai Khidmatgars has not been removed? Can Government attribute anything to their behaviour which is against the law which has caused Government to continue this ban?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That question should be addressed to the Local Government; it is in their discretion to remove the ban.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Did the Government of India consider the Resolution passed by this House and did they come to any conclusion on that matter?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Did they communicate that conclusion to the Local Government?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say without looking at the communication addressed to the Local Government, but I imagine they probably did.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I take it, therefore, that the Local Government were asked by the Government of India not to remove this ban?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : As I said, I have not got the letter addressed to the Local Government.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Did the Government of India ask the Local Government to remove the ban?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : May I take it that Government still maintain their hostile attitude towards the Congress?

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : May I know to what conclusion they arrived at after considering the Resolution passed by the Assembly?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Not to act on it.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know the reasons why Government concluded that they should not accept the Resolution of this House and remove the ban?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Those reasons were fully stated in my speech on the Resolution.

RECRUITMENT OF STAFF FOR THE RESERVE BANK OF INDIA.

615. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) With reference to starred question No. 1150 answered on the 29th March, 1935, will Government be pleased to state if they have been informed what arrangements have been made for the recruitment of staff for the Reserve Bank of India over and above the employees transferred from the Currency Department and the Imperial Bank of India?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state the time, extent and manner of such recruitment?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang's question No. 576.

REMOVAL OF DISQUALIFICATION FOR ELECTIONS ARISING OUT OF CONVICTION BY CRIMINAL COURTS.

616. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) With reference to the speech of the Honourable the Home Member made on the 11th February, 1935, on the Resolution regarding removal of disqualification for elections arising from conviction by criminal courts in certain cases, will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state the general principles which have been laid down by the Government of India for dealing with applications in individual cases for the removal of the said disqualifications?

(b) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state the views of the different Provincial Governments, regarding the policy to be followed in dealing with such applications?

(c) Have Government considered the desirability of taking such steps as may be necessary for removal altogether of the provisions for such disqualifications under the new constitution?

(d) Have Government formulated their policy with regard to the statutory rules to be enacted on the question of such disqualification under the new constitution? If so, will Government state it?

(e) Have Government considered the desirability of making a distinction between persons convicted in connection with civil disobedience movement and other prisoners in the matter of the said disqualification?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). The general principles to which I referred were laid down for the guidance of Local Governments in view of the situation at the time and were not intended to be of universal application. The situation was that Government anticipated that there would, at the general election which was then approaching, be a considerable number of candidates who were disqualified on account of convictions in connection with the Civil Disobedience Movement, and the main principle was that when there was nothing more against a candidate than such a conviction the disqualification should be removed, provided that the candidate was not at the time still in jail. I should, however, like to emphasise the fact that the procedure followed last year was designed to meet a particular situation, and that under sub-rule 2 of Rule 5 of the Legislative Assembly Electoral Rules each application must be considered individually on the merits and that the Local Government has power to reject an application without reference to the Governor General in Council.

(c) and (d). I invite the Honourable Member's attention to the provisions contained in sections 26 (1) (e) and 69 (1) (e) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

(e) Under the provisions quoted above power is given to the Governor General or the Governor, as the case may be, to reduce the period of disqualification at his discretion, and Government consider it impracticable to make a distinction on the lines suggested.

ISSUE PRICE OF THE LATEST RUPEE LOAN.

617. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state :

(a) whether his attention has been drawn to the editorial comment in the Indian Finance of the 3rd August on the issue price of the latest Rupee Loan of Rs. 15 crores ;

(b) the reason why the issue price was fixed at Rs. 96-8-0 ; and

(c) whether this has not entailed a loss of Rs. 37½ lakhs to the taxpayer ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) Yes.

(b) The issue price was fixed with reference to the market conditions obtaining at the time of issue, and after obtaining the best advice which it was open to me to obtain.

(c) No.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to the answer to clause (b), may I know whose advice was obtained in fixing the issue price at Rs. 96-8-0 ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir ; that is a domestic matter.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Was any expert consulted at all, except the Honourable Sir James Grigg ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Yes, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : How many were consulted ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I cannot say, but quite a number.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Indian or British ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Both.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : And did they all agree at fixing the price at Rs. 96-8-0 ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Yes, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to the answer to clause (c), was there any loss at all, and, if so, what was the loss ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Whose opinion is that ? Is that the Honourable the Finance Member's own opinion, or is it based on any expert advice ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Mine, and all informed opinion.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know what is the informed opinion except the British one ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : As I said, all informed opinion.

CONTRACT FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE NEW HOWRAH BRIDGE.

618. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the comment on the construction of the new Howrah Bridge under the heading "Clive Street Gossip" in the Indian Finance, Calcutta, of 3rd August ;

(b) whether the Government of India have been consulted in this matter ; and

(c) whether the contract for this great work will be given in India ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) I am unable to make a guess. The Honourable Member is reminded that under section 5 of the Howrah Bridge Act, 1926, the matter is statutorily within the competence of the Howrah Bridge Commissioners, subject to the approval of the Local Government.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is it a fact that Herr Hitler has approached the Port Commissioners with an offer to take this contract on condition that he will spend all the money in India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I believe, Sir, there is a question put down with regard to that matter, and, when that is reached, a reply will be given.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have the Government of India been kept informed of the progress of this matter by the Port Commissioners at Calcutta ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I do not understand what the Honourable Member means by progress in the matter. Does he mean as to what tenders were received and what those tenders were, and so on ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : The progress of all matters connected with the construction of the new Howrah Bridge.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The matter stands thus. Tenders were invited and they were put in with the Consulting Engineers in London ; and, naturally, nobody else outside could have any information as to what those tenders were.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : In view of the very great national importance of this great work going to India, if possible, may I know if the Government of India will press the view on the Port Commissioners of Calcutta and see that this work does not go out of this country ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : As I have already said in my reply, the matter lies between the Howrah Bridge Commissioners and the Local Government. The Government of India do not, directly at any rate, come into the picture at all.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : But will they advise the Local Government that in the interest of the national economy of this country, this contract ought not to go out of this country ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I do not think Government would be justified in giving instructions of that kind with regard to this matter to the Local Government.

ENQUIRY INTO THE ALLEGATIONS OF DISCRIMINATIONS BETWEEN INDIANS AND EUROPEANS IN THE MATTER OF RESCUE AND SALVAGE OPERATIONS IN QUETTA.

619. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether their attention has been drawn to the resolution of the Working Committee of the Indian National Congress passed on the 1st August, 1935, at Wardha, opining that many more persons under the debris in Quetta after the earthquake could have been rescued, if digging operations had been undertaken on an adequate scale and had not been stopped after two days, and if the help offered from the public had not been rejected ;
- (b) whether they examined the position from this point of view and what their conclusions are ; and
- (c) whether they propose to conduct an enquiry into the allegations of discriminations between Indians and Europeans in the matter of rescue and salvage operations ; if not, why not ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The Honourable Member's attention is invited to Chapter IV of the pamphlet " The Quetta Earthquake, 1935 " and to the record of the debate on the Resolution which was moved by Mr. P. S. Kumara-swami Raju in this House on the 19th September, 1935.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to clause (a), may I know if Government have examined this matter with all relevant expert opinion which they have obtained, and they are satisfied that no more persons could have been saved if the digging operations could have been continued on an adequate scale, beyond the date and hour at which they were stopped ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Yes, Sir ; that should have been obvious from the replies that we gave in the course of the Resolution which was discussed last Thursday.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am asking whether any expert inquiry was made by Government with the help of people who know something about what they are talking, to be satisfied that nobody could have been saved if the operations had been continued ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Who was the expert ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Mr. Hogg.

TRANSFER OF THE CIVIL AND MILITARY ADMINISTRATION OF GILGIT TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

620. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state the financial implications of the transfer of the civil and military administrative control of Wazarat of Gilgit Province of Kashmir State from the Kashmir Durbar to the British Government ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : Attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given on the 13th September, 1935, to his question No. 338. As I stated then in reply to a supplementary question, a saving of nearly Rs. one lakh is anticipated.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is any payment made by the Government of India to the Kashmir State for this transaction ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : No, Sir.

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Information promised in reply to starred questions Nos. 1554, 1555, 1556, 1557 and 1558 asked by Mr. S. Satyamurti (on behalf of Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal) on the 5th April, 1935.

EXPERIENCE REQUIRED FOR RUNNING EXPRESS AND MAIL TRAINS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1554. The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports :

- (a) There is no rigid rule to this effect.
- (b), (c), (d) and (e). Promotion to the relieving guard's cadre is primarily a matter of selection and seniority is not the only deciding factor.

PROMOTION TO THE RELIEVING GUARDSHIP ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1555. The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports :

- (a) The normal line of promotion to the relieving guard's cadre is as under :

- (b) Not normally.
- (c) As stated in reply to parts (b) (c), (d) and (e) of question No. 1554, promotion to the relieving Guard's cadre is primarily a matter of selection and seniority is not the only deciding factor.
- (d) and (e). There has been one case recently on the Asansol division. Orders have already been issued that the normal line of advancement given in reply to part (a) is to be followed.

"B" GRADE CONTROLLERS PROMOTED TO RELIEVING GUARDSHIP ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1556. (a), (b) and (c). The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that the departure from the normal avenue of promotion referred to in the answer to this question has, as stated, been met by the issue of orders that the normal avenue of advancement is to be followed. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply to part (d) of question No. 1555.

(d) The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that the orders in question are that promotion to the relieving guard's cadre is primarily a matter of selection subject to the line of advancement indicated in answer to question No. 1555 (a) normally being followed.

INTERVIEW FOR PROMOTION OF "B" GRADE GUARDS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1557. (a) As no specific cases have been quoted by the Honourable Member, Government are unable to obtain the necessary information.

(b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply to part (a) of question No. 1555, which gives the normal line of promotion to the relieving guard's cadre. The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that promotion from grade II to grade I also depends on the candidate's qualifications and suitability with due regard to the fact that grade I of guards is the main source of supply from which higher grade assistant station masters and yard masters are obtained.

PROMOTION OF CERTAIN CONTROLLERS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY TO RELIEVING GUARDSHIPS.

1558. (a) and (b). Presumably the Honourable Member is referring to grade II Section Controllers. If so, his attention is invited to the reply to part (d) of question No. 1555 and the replies to parts (a) to (d) of question No. 1556.

(c) The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that if by 'practice' is implied a systematic departure from the orders mentioned in answer to question No. 1556, part (d), no division is implicated.

(d) No.

(e) The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that the Divisional Superintendent enquires into all genuine grievances requiring his intervention and attends to such appeals as may lie to him under the rules.

Information promised in reply to unstarred questions Nos. 313 and 314 asked by Dr. N. B. Khare on the 9th April, 1935.

GRANT OF CERTIFICATES TO GUARDS BY THE DISTRICT MEDICAL OFFICER OF THE MORADABAD DIVISION, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

313. The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports :

There is no such case on the Moradabad Division. It would appear however that the question refers to the case of ex-guard E. I. Pearce the circumstances of which are as follows :

Mr. Pearce was injured on duty on 23rd February, 1933. On the 17th June, 1933, the District Medical Officer, Moradabad, issued a certificate that Mr. Pearce was unfit for further service in the following terms :

"Physically unfit and permanently incapacitated for further Railway service on account of possible ununited fracture of Medical Malleolus and defective movement of right ankle joint. He is fit for a job of sedentary nature", and stated in his covering letter as follows :

"I am herewith sending M 28 in favour of Guard E. I. Pearce, as I do not think he will ever be fit for a job involving running duties."

On receipt of this District Medical Officer, Moradabad, was asked what he meant by "Running duties" to which he replied on the 20th June, 1933, as follows :

"I mean by running duties, any duties involving walking about."

It will be seen that the District Medical Officer did not amend his original certificate but only explained what he meant by the term "running duties".

(c) Ex-guard E. I. Pearce was examined by a Medical Board at the East Indian Railway Headquarters on the 28th July, 1933.

(i) This was after orders of discharge had been issued.

(ii) No recommendation for leave to be granted to Mr. Pearce was made by the Medical Board.

(iii) No.

(b) As stated above the District Medical Officer recommended Mr. Pearce for a sedentary job. The possibility of utilizing Mr. Pearce's service as an Assistant Station Master or in the control in the event of a vacancy arising, were fully considered but as it was not considered that he could fill such posts efficiently and as there was no other posts of a sedentary nature available he was discharged.

(c) The Medical Board which examined Mr. Pearce on the 28th July, 1933, did not recommend leave to Mr. Pearce but suggested he might appear before a board after nine months to show that he was fit for duty.

Mr. Pearce was due no leave.

(d) The finding of the Medical Board was that there was evidence of the possibility of a fracture and that he was unfit for the duty of a guard or any other duty that might necessitate rapid movement in order to avoid moving trains or wagons or any duty which would keep him on his feet for prolonged periods. They found that the disability was due to the accident which occurred in the course of guard Pearce's duty but held that his refusal to undergo the treatment advised by the Surgeon-in-charge, King George's Hospital, Lucknow, was unreasonable.

(e) When an employee is declared permanently incapacitated for further Railway service it clearly means that he cannot serve the Railway in any capacity whatsoever ; whereas if he is not fit for duties involving walking about he can still be retained in the service provided that he can be given a post the duties of which do not require him to move about, i.e., he could be employed as a typist, signaller, clerk, etc., provided that the employee possesses the necessary qualifications and ability for the post.

INCREMENTS TO STAFF IN THE MORADABAD DIVISION, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

314. (a) Reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. It may, however, be added that the Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that he now finds that an error crept in the information furnished in reply to parts (d) (i) and (ii) of question No. 921 asked by Mr. S. C. Jog on the 30th August, 1934. The increments of the four ticket collectors referred to in the previous reply were stopped on account of their failure to pass the triennial examination in ticket collectors duties and not on account of their failure to pass the goods accounts examination.

(b) Yes, in accordance with the executive orders issued by the Railway Board qualifications in 'First Aid' are obligatory in the case of running staff other than those who are not required to be literate and for supervising staff in all workshops and running sheds. Such qualifications are not obligatory for staff already in service but the possession of such qualifications by staff already in service prior to the issue of the orders are taken into consideration in selection for promotion. The discretion was, however, left to the Railway Administrations to decide which other staff should be retained in First Aid.

(c) Any employee possessing the necessary qualifications and who is otherwise considered suitable for the post of a Station Master of a flag station may be posted there irrespective of whether he was recruited as an Assistant Station Master or not.

(d) The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that the Rules for recruitment and training of out-door clerks under transportation staff and coaching and goods clerks under Commercial staff which are contained in the Rules referred to in the question are applicable to relieving clerks.

(e) As already stated in reply to part (a) of question No. 921 asked by Mr. S. C. Jog on the 30th August, 1934. Fundamental Rule 24, prescribes that an increment shall ordinarily be drawn as a matter of course unless it is withheld. An increment is withheld if the service is not approved, i.e., if the conduct of an employee has not been good or his work has not been satisfactory. An increment may also be withheld by a competent authority for good and sufficient reasons.

(f) Government are informed that on the East Indian Railway where an examination is prescribed for a particular category of staff, promotion to such a category must necessarily depend on the passing of the examination. The fact of an employee qualifying for increments for his own scale or grade does not necessarily determine his fitness for promotion to another grade for which he may not be qualified.

(g) If the Honourable Member will specify the Rules to which he is referring I shall attempt to frame a reply.

(h) Firemen as Shunters.

Shunters as Drivers.

Drivers as Assistant Running Shed Foremen.

(i) (j) As already stated in reply to parts (d) (iii) and (iv) of question No. 921 asked by Mr. S. C. Jog on the 30th August, 1934, the practice (which was found to be incompatible with the Rules) had been that the locomotive running staff officiating in higher grade were not granted increments. The date from and the manner in which this practice came to be adopted cannot be traced at this distant date.

(k) The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports that the practice referred to in part (i) was reported by the Divisional Superintendent, Lucknow, who was of the opinion that it should be changed. The matter was dealt with by correspondence and was ultimately decided by the Agent. There is no report on the subject.

(l) 1st September, 1934.

(m) It is not clear what sanction is referred to by the Honourable Member.

(n) The old Oudh and Rohilkund Railway scales of pay of drivers are as follows :

(o) and (q). In accordance with the practice referred to in reply to parts (i) and (j) above the staff were not eligible for increments and the question of earning such increments did not therefore, arise. As already stated the practice was not compatible with the rules and the Agent on re-consideration of the matter decided to re-fix the pay of the staff from the 1st September, 1934.

(p) The Honourable Member is referred to Fundamental Rules 27 and 35.

(r) No.

(s) It is not the policy of the Government to give retrospective effect.

(t) Rule 31 is as stated in the question. As regards the reasons for not granting the increments the Honourable Member is referred to reply given to parts (i), (j), (o) and (q) above.

(u) The reply to the first part is in the negative. As regards the latter part the Government adhere to their policy of not making payments with retrospective effect.

MANUFACTURE OF LOCOMOTIVE BOILERS IN RAILWAY WORKSHOPS.

Boilers of the type recently built at Ajmer have never as yet been imported and therefore an accurate price comparison cannot be given.

VACANCIES IN THE ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

The Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, reports :

(a) Sixty posts have been abolished on the permanent subordinate cadres of the Engineering Department. These posts were unfilled for periods ranging from one to six years.

(b) The amalgamation of the construction and maintenance branches, and the curtailment of works and other measures have caused an excess of permanent posts, which have not been filled since they fell vacant and have now been abolished. Temporary staff against the lump sum provision may be given permanent appointments when posts still required on the permanent cadre become vacant, but they may be discharged previously owing to further reduction of work.

(c) No.

(d) As regards the Mechanical, Transportation and Traffic Departments, the answer is in the affirmative, but as regards the Engineering Department—Technical staff, except Permanent Way Inspectors and Bridge, Signal and Interlocking Inspectors, the answer is in the negative as they can rise to Rs. 375.

(e) Yes—except in special circumstances leave vacancies of Superior Service officers are filled by Superior Service officers provided as a leave reserve. Subordinates are however promoted to officiate in Lower Gazetted Service leave vacancies.

Information promised in reply to parts (c), (d) and (e) of unstarred question No. 57 asked by Mr. V. V. Giri, on the 9th September, 1935.

APPOINTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT OFFICERS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

(c) No employment officer has been appointed in the electrical department.

(d) Grievances of the staff are put up by the foremen and chargemen concerned or by the head of the office to their district officers who decide those grievances which are within their powers. Grievances which are outside the powers of the district officers are forwarded to the Chief Electrical Engineer after proper enquiry into the case by the officers, together with their recommendations for necessary action.

The establishment matters of the district staff of the electrical department are dealt with by the District Electrical Engineers with the assistance of the assistant electrical engineers. Where no district electrical engineer has been posted, this is done by the Assistant Electrical Engineer in charge.

(e) Does not arise.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 374 asked by Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal on the 16th September, 1935.

WANT OF A BRIDGE AT THE RAILWAY CROSSING NEAR THE AGRA CANTONMENT STATION ON THE AGRA-JOGNAR ROAD.

(a) Yes.

(b) Government are informed that no undue hardship is caused thereby, as the shunting operations which interfere with the road are so regulated that the gates are opened for road traffic every 10 minutes.

(c) and (d). Requests for an overbridge were received by the Railway Administration both from the District Board of Agra and from the United Provinces Government in 1927, but the matter was dropped by those authorities, when it was explained to them that they would have to share the cost.

(e) Government are informed that no such action has been taken.

(f) Government consider that no action is called for in view of the circumstances explained in (b) above.

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, the following Message has been received from the Council of State :

"I am directed to inform you that the Council of State has, at its meeting held on the 21st September, 1935, agreed without any amendment to the following Bills which were passed by the Legislative Assembly at its meeting held on the 16th September, 1935, namely :

1. A Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, for certain purposes ;
2. A Bill to supplement the Central Provinces Courts Act, 1917 ;
3. A Bill further to amend the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, for a certain purpose ; and
4. A Bill further to amend the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, for a certain purpose."

THE INDIAN COFFEE CESS BILL.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I rise to move :

"That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be taken into consideration."

Sir, as I said on the occasion when I asked for leave to introduce the Bill, this Bill is being put forward at the request of an overwhelming number of those who are interested in the coffee planting industry in India.

The principle of this Bill has already been accepted and given effect to in measures like the Cotton Cess, Tea Cess and Lac Cess Acts, and the principle is that Government, where they are satisfied that there is an overwhelming demand on the part of a certain interest to help them, to help themselves by means of legislation, would undertake legislation to that effect provided such legislation is not likely to affect injuriously any of the interests concerned. In this particular case, Government are satisfied on a census taken of the views of coffee planters in India that the demand is supported by over 80 per cent. of the coffee planters, and also, that if their wishes are given effect to in this connection, they are not likely injuriously to affect either the coffee interests or any other interests. The amount of duty that is proposed in this Bill is one rupee per cwt., but the intention is that to begin with the rate of duty should not exceed eight annas per cwt. The object is that the sum collected from the imposition of this duty should be devoted, mainly, to begin with, to propaganda outside India for the purpose of encouraging sales of Indian coffee....

An Honourable Member : Outside India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I said mainly outside India ; as a matter of fact the object is that sales of Indian coffee, in competition with Kenya coffee, should be encouraged, as figures show that there is a good deal of propaganda being carried on by the Kenya coffee planters on behalf of their coffee, and that propaganda is beginning to have effect and Kenya coffee is beginning, at the expense of the Indian coffee, to increase its sales in foreign countries. As I have submitted there is not much controversy with regard to the object of this Bill so far as least as the coffee planting interests are concerned. Those interests are confined to the Madras Presidency, Coorg, and the states of Mysore, Cochin and Travancore. All five administrations, that is to say, the Governments of Madras and Coorg and the Governments of the States of Mysore, Cochin and Travancore, are unanimous in requesting the Government of India that this legislation should be undertaken ; and, as I have already said, apart from the Governments and administrations concerned the coffee planters themselves have come up to the Government of India on repeated occasions that this piece of legislation should be put forward. As a perusal of the Bill will show, it is proposed to set up under clause 4 of the Bill a Coffee Cess Committee to administer the fund which would be available to the committee as a result of the imposition of this cess for the purposes set out in the Bill.

I may be permitted to dwell a little longer over clause 4. Perhaps Honourable Members might be interested to hear how the membership of this committee is likely to be composed so far as the various interests affected are concerned. Clause 4 proposes that this committee shall have 20 members : five of these members shall be nominated by the Governments and administrations concerned, that is to say, one each by the Governments of Madras and Coorg and one each by the Governments of Mysore, Cochin and Travancore. Eleven persons representing the coffee growing industry will be nominated as follows : three to be nominated by the Mysore State : a little over half of the area under coffee lies in the Mysore State and it will thus be realised that Mysore is not being given more representation than it actually deserves on that basis. Two persons to be nominated by the Local Governments of Madras and Coorg, respectively ; and it is expected that these nominations by the Government of Madras and Coorg will be made in order to secure representation for unassociated planters, that is to say, those who are not members of the two associations to whom representation is given under the two following sub-clauses : three persons to be nominated by the United Planters Association of Southern India ; three persons to be nominated by the Coffee Growers' Association : that makes up 11 plus 5 ; 16. The remaining four are to be distributed as follows. Three persons representing trade interests, nominated by the Governor General in Council, and one person representing the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research, nominated by the Governor General in Council. That is how it is proposed that this committee should be made up.

I have tried to form some idea as to how the members of this committee would be distributed as between Indian and European interests. So far as the number of coffee planters is concerned, and I believe also, so far as the area under cultivation is concerned, both the number and the area on the Indian side is larger than on the European side ; that is to say, there are a larger number of Indian planters of coffee as against Europeans and there is a larger area owned by Indian planters than by European planters ; and I anticipate that the nominations to this committee from that point of view would work out somewhat as follows : I have here both the minimum figures which we anticipate would go to particular interests, and also the maximum figures which we anticipate might go to particular interests. Beginning with the first category, five persons representing the agricultural departments of the Local Governments of Madras and Coorg and the States of Mysore, Cochin and Travancore, we think that almost always all these five members are likely to be Indians ; but on the other hand it is possible that occasionally one of them might be a European. So that the distribution is likely to be five Indians against no Europeans or four Indians as against one European. Under the second head, sub-division A, three persons nominated by the Mysore Government,—we are anticipating that all three will be Indians, but we are willing to base our calculations on the basis that it might be that occasionally two would be Indians and one would be European. Two persons nominated by the Local Governments of Mysore and Coorg,—as I have already said, this representation would go to the unassociated planters, almost all of whom are Indians, and, therefore, both these seats would go to Indian planters. Three persons nominated by the United Planters' Association of Southern India,—I think I am right in anticipating that two of these will be Europeans and one will be an Indian, and the same with regard to the three to be nominated by the Coffee Growers' Association. Out of three persons representing trade interests to be nominated by the Governor General in Council, to begin with at any rate, it might be that two might be Europeans and one Indian, although we hope that later on this might work out more to the advantage of Indian interests, and the person to be nominated by the Imperial Agricultural Research might be a European or an Indian,—one could not say how it is likely to go, it might be either one or the other. On this calculation, Sir, when the representative of the Imperial Agricultural Research is an Indian, the representation would work out as 14 Indians and six Europeans, and it is a most advantageous proportion for Indian interests. If he happened to be a European, then the figures would be 13 and seven. On the other hand, the least representation that is likely to go to Indians on the basis that I have put forward, and even supposing that the representative of the Imperial Agricultural Research was also a European, would work out at 11 and nine, but I anticipate that it will really never be lower than 12 and eight, that is to say 60 per cent. to 40 per cent. I thought perhaps it might be helpful to Members if they knew how, so far at any rate as an estimate could be made at the present moment, this representation was likely to work out.

There is one matter with reference to clause 3 that I might explain at this stage. A reading of clause 3 would show that if this clause were applied in the form in which it stands and in which it is likely to form part of the Act, coffee exported from British India into any of the States who are coming into the scheme, that is to say, Mysore, Cochin and Travancore, or coffee exported from one of these States to another, would be liable to the cess, but that is proposed to be rectified by notifications under section 23 of the Sea Customs Act, so that there is no cess levied upon coffee which is exported from British India into any of the States, or exported from any of the States into British India, or exported from any of the States to another State. That is proposed to be done for the reason that if subsequently any of the States for any reason wanted to go out of the scheme, that could be set right by cancelling the notification so far as it affected that State without having to come up for amendment of the Act on that point.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (Presidency Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Have these three States agreed to join the scheme ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Yes, as I have said, this Bill is supported by the unanimous request of the five Governments concerned, namely, Madras, Coorg, Cochin, Mysore and Travancore.

Then, the only other matter to which I need allude at this stage is that the Bill is proposed to be confined in its operations to British India, except Burma. That, Sir, is being done at the express request of the Government of Burma. They were approached in the matter, and their wishes were ascertained as to whether they would wish to come within the scope of this Bill, and they said that inasmuch as there were only small areas under coffee cultivation in Burma and the exports of coffee from Burma were negligible,—the quantity produced in Burma is consumed in Burma itself, they would wish to be left out of the scheme, and it was in deference to their wishes in the matter that they have been excluded from the operation of the Bill. If they were in the scheme, the situation would be this. The cess would be levied upon any coffee exported from Burma, and then it would not be a matter whether it was their own coffee or it was Indian coffee exported from India. Now that they desire to be left out of the scheme, the scheme would work out in this manner, that any coffee that goes out from India to Burma would be subject to the cess, and if Burma wishes to export any coffee from Burma, it would go cess free. These are the only observations that I think I need make at this stage, and I hope that the Bill would commend itself to all sections of this House, and that its passage will not be delayed, for this reason, that the export season of coffee begins somewhere about the end of November, and this demand for the levy of a cess is now nearly two years old. If this Bill were not passed now and the cess could not be levied at the latest about the middle of November, one more season would be lost, and the Bill will be entirely useless for one year, and as all the interests concerned are anxious that these funds should be available as early as possible for the purposes set out in the Bill, I hope the passage of the Bill in this House will not be delayed. Sir, I move.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : On a point of information, Sir. I shall be thankful to the Honourable Member if he will let us know whether the propaganda on behalf of the Kenya Government, to which he has made reference, has had any direct appreciable adverse effect on Indian trade, and, if so, to what extent. Is the Honourable Member in a position to give us some figures as to how the Indian coffee trade has been affected by the Kenya propaganda?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I do not know whether the Indian coffee trade has been entirely affected by that, but certainly that has some share in it. Four years ago,—I am giving rough figures,—the export of coffee from India was 292,000 cwts. and odd. It has now fallen in the last three years to 140,000 cwts. and odd. I think these are more or less approximately correct.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is it 142,000 cwts.?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : From 292,000 cwts. and odd to 140,000 and odd.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Motion moved :

“That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be taken into consideration.”

There are notices of amendments standing in the names of Messrs. Nilakantha Das, Avinashilingam Chettiar and U Thein Maung, and Pandit Nilakantha Das has another amendment in sub-clause (2) of clause 8. The Chair proposes to ask the Honourable Members, who have given notice of amendments, to move their amendments formally, and then there will be a discussion on the motion before the House and on these two amendments.....

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I want to suggest that these two amendments may be moved separately, because, one amendment is for circulation and another is for reference to a Select Committee.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair finds that the Honourable Member has not given the date by which opinions have to be received. By what date does he want the opinions to be received? He merely says that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon,—by what date?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : With your permission, Sir, I may add it now, by the 15th of January 1936. My amendment will then read as follows :

“That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 15th of January, 1936.”

Sir, I move it.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Then the Honourable Member's amendment is :

“That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 15th of January, 1936.”

What is his next amendment?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : My next amendment is for reference to a Select Committee.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Mr. Chettiar has also given notice of it.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I shall only think of moving it, if my first amendment fails.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has not given the names of Members of the Select Committee.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Yes, I have given the names, they are practically the same as those given by Mr Chettiar.....

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I might explain, Sir, that I gave the amendment in the names of both of us, and the list of names of members of the Select Committee was also given in the names of both of us.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Very well. The Honourable Member's second amendment is an alternative amendment. In the opinion of the Chair, it will be better in the circumstances and much more convenient if Mr. Avinashilingam Chettiar moves the second amendment.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Sir, I move :

“That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan, Dr. F. X. DeSouza, Dr. R. D. Dalal, Mr. Pradyumna Prashad Singh, Mr. F. E. James, Mr. H. A. Sathar, H. Essak Sait, Mr. Umar Aly Shah, Dr. P. N. Banerjee, Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena, Mr. Samuel Aaron, Mr. B. B. Varma, Prof. N. G. Ranga and the Mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five.”

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : I would like to add the name of my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : I have no objection, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Amendment moved :

“That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan, Dr. F. X. DeSouza, Dr. R. D. Dalal, Mr. Pradyumna Prashad Singh, Mr. F. E. James, Mr. H. A. Sathar, H. Essak Sait, Mr. Umar Aly Shah, Dr. P. N. Banerjee, Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena, Mr. Samuel Aaron, Mr. B. B. Varma, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Pandit Nilakantha Das and the Mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five.”

Pandit Nilakantha Das: The Committee proposed in this Bill is perhaps contemplated like the one on tea already established. But I can say that there is a good deal of difference between the two industries, tea and coffee. As an industry, tea is very big. However, that question is not before us now. So far as we are concerned today, tea is a separate issue. I say, there is no necessity at all for an independent Committee like this for coffee. The object of the Committee is to undertake research investigation into both the industry and agriculture of coffee, and to organise its sale both inside and outside India. If you examine the coffee industry, first of all I may say that it is a very small industry. It is confined to a particular locality in south India.

An Honourable Member: There are other parts also.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: I am coming to that. The latest figures that are available are for 1933-34, and, according to that, the acreage under cultivation of coffee is about 184,000 acres. We have been given official figures for fifteen years, and, during these years, there has been a gradual increase of acreage. There has been an increase of 68,000 acres during this period, out of which Mysore is responsible for 45,000 acres, and next comes Coorg and Madras. Cochin and Travancore are practically negligible. In Madras too, the increase is not so rapid. Whatever the increase, I am afraid, there is not much scope for coffee in this land of India. At best the increase cannot be more than 50,000 acres more. Coffee grows only in a particular climate and on a soil which is congenial to it. Mr. N. G. Mukherjee, in his Handbook on Indian Agriculture, says:

"This crop requires a hilly, well drained, rich, ferruginous clay soil, e.g., forest land, particularly rich in Nitrogen. Coffee prefers altitudes varying from 1,000 to 5,000 feet height. The temperature best suited for this crop is 60° to 80°F. It grows best in a humid climate, i.e., where there is some rain every month, but the total rainfall should not exceed 150 inches per annum. Frost is fatal to coffee plants. Heavy clouds and strong winds are also objectionable."

In another place, he says that dense forests also are very objectionable. Such soil and such land can be found only in a few places in India. Suitable soil for this plantation was first spotted in the forties of the last century, and, since then, though there has been a regular progress in acreage, except during one or two years, coffee has not spread into other parts of India, and, considering the soil on which it grows, there is no likelihood of its growing elsewhere. This has also been corroborated in the evidence before the Agricultural Commission by Mr. Munro, the scientific expert of the South Indian Planters' Association, who also says that it will grow from 1,000 feet up to 6,000 feet height. Sir Ganga Ram asked:

"What is the minimum height from sea level for growing coffee, tea, cinchona?"

The answer was:

"Coffee will grow up to a height of 6,000 feet."

That is, it is a crop which grows only on highlands shaded by forests, with soil nitrogenous, and constant rain and without any hailstorm or high wind. So, it is confined to a particular area, and there is not much chance of its growth elsewhere in India.

This Bill is intended for this small and scopeless industry in India and coffee is not food, but, to say the least, it is a beverage, if not a drug. The Bill is meant to promote agricultural and technological research and sale, both in and outside India, of coffee. I say, the Government have full provision for all this. The Government have the Imperial Agricultural Institute, Provincial Agricultural Departments, arrangements for industrial research, Marketing Boards and Overseas Trade Commissioners, and so on and so forth. What is the necessity for this independent committee for this small industry? This is the solicitude of Government for coffee. But when questions of rice, cocoanut, and copra, which are not only food, but the mainstay of our people and regarding which measures are emergent, arise and are pressed, what do the Government do? They never think of independent committees like this. These crops are much more in need of agricultural and technological research and as well as organised sale.

Now, these are the objects which are sought to be achieved by this Bill for coffee. Let us see how far these things are needed at all in this particular case. There are already in existence private organisations for all this so far as coffee is concerned, and they are efficient. The South Indian Planters' Association and the Coffee Planters' Association have efficient arrangement for research in agriculture and industry and for organising sale, and agriculture. This South Indian Association was at least well organised in the days when the Agricultural Commission visited India. The Commission was satisfied that they were working in co-operation with Government Agricultural Departments, and Mysore had by that time established a special agricultural organisation for the investigation of coffee. Mr. Munro, who is the representative of this Association, says before the commission that this association differentiated about different crops for their agricultural research work and they were getting all help and co-operation possible, which cannot be increased, he says, from the Agricultural Department of the Government.

Then, again, my Honourable friend, the Mover of the motion, has said that it is more external propaganda for sale than internal. This is the apparent object, let us examine it.

The Chairman of the Agricultural Commission asked Mr. Munro:

"Has your association a representative organisation or representative individuals with whom it is in touch in the London and other markets?"

"A.—Yes. The South Indian Association."

"Q.—Is it within your knowledge whether that means complaints from the consuming centres as to the way in which the produce is packed or graded or as to its condition reach the ears of the planters?"

"A.—It may come by that way or it may come through the Agents who are handling the goods at the other end."

"Q.—Is it your impression that planters get early and reliable information about any complaints?"

"A.—Yes."

"Q.—You don't suggest any improvement in that direction?"

"A.—No."

"Q.—You think that marketing information is always at the disposal of the planters?"

"A.—Yes, it is quite efficient."

So, this Coffee Planters' Association is an organised institution maintained by themselves, and they are looking after their own business efficiently. There is no need for a committee as proposed here, and if any cess is to be imposed now by Government, it may be imposed for the Imperial Agricultural Research Association or provincial agricultural departments. We have got also, as I have said, our Industries Departments and marketing organisations. We have also got our Trade Commissioners abroad. If they want that a cess should be levied and some arrangement must be made for their benefit, then they may avail themselves of all these institutions of the Government. If the Government want to help them, they may even earmark the money and use it for that purpose. What is the use of having an independent organisation of the planters in order perhaps to make our people cry after a time for Indianisation even in that committee, as it usually happens. The planters ought to have full confidence in the Government and in our Trade Commissioners, in our marketing organisations, our research investigations for industry and agriculture. Government ought not to allow themselves thus indirectly to declare to the world that their own arrangements cannot satisfy our agricultural interests or industrial needs.

This coffee is a small industry only confined to a small area. It cannot be expanded, and, in the case of the planters, it has got a very good organisation. We are now out to give them an independent body, to make money for them by a cess and to give them freehand to make propaganda for sale, not at all outside, but, as I shall presently show, inside this country.

I am afraid the Government have been duped into this Bill. Only the organised planters or the organised industrialists are expected to have the ears of the Government. I shall presently show that this measure is not good for the small coffee cultivators. It is rather to oust them from the field that this organisation is contemplated, and it is only for the purpose of keeping the refuse in this country and sending the best quality coffee abroad that this measure is intended.

We see from the 1933-34 report, that 55 per cent. of the acreage under coffee is in Mysore, 22 in Coorg and 22 in the Madras Presidency. Cochin and Travancore are together one per cent. They are being mentioned, but I don't find that they are much interested in this Bill. Cochin has only got 1,900 acres and Travancore has got less than a thousand acres. If you see the account of the last 15 years, you see that the acreage has increased only in Mysore and Coorg. In Mysore, it has increased from 55 thousand acres in 1919-20 to 101 thousand acres in 1933-34, Coorg from 32 to 39.

Now, let us see what the same Mr. Munro, the representative of the South Indian Planters' Association, their scientific expert, says in his evidence before the Agricultural Commission.

The question was put :

"Have you experience of the area in which small cultivators are growing the same crop as planters do on holdings contiguous with the planters' holdings?"

The answer was :

"In Coorg, about half the coffee is held by Indian planters, and, in Mysore, the bulk of the coffee, I should say, about two-thirds."

The Chairman asked :

"Run by small people?"

"A.—Yes."

"Q.—By ordinary cultivators?"

"A.—Yes, by ordinary cultivators."

When the question was asked :

"Have the practices of the planters been copied at all by the small cultivators?"

"A.—To a certain extent, but they certainly do not cultivate to the same extent as the European does."

"Q.—They do not copy so freely?"

"A.—They do not."

"Q.—Is that due to the limitations of their economic position, or is it due to a slightly greater conservatism?"

"A.—On this particular point of the borer, the average Indian cultivator will keep a great deal more shade on his coffee, in order to keep out the borer; the consequence is that with heavier shade he gets less crop; he is not willing to risk the loss of his trees by borer in order to get a bigger crop."

"Q.—He cannot afford to take the risk?"

"A.—He could, really, if he got a bigger crop, and had more money at his command to replant up any bored trees there may be."

So they are just like our ordinary cultivators; they have no money to invest, they cannot reap any advantage from all these scientific investigations of the planters for the good of their small coffee crops and plantations: and their number, as my friend, the Mover of the Resolution, has just now said, is more than fifty per cent,—and that is my calculation, that is, two-thirds Mysore and half of Coorg, so it comes to fifty per cent or more. And there might be others even in the Madras Presidency. So these small planters will in no way benefit from all the scientific research and investigation or in any other such blessed things as they have no means; they have got each a small acreage for his own cultivation; and the thing is, they can sell their coffee much cheaper than the big planters. For, it is generally our experience that the village artisan, as well as the village cultivator, can sell his goods much cheaper than the goods produced by an organized industry, for the village cultivator does not mind his own labour expenses—that is the main factor.

Here let us consider the question in connection with the export of coffee. We are not at all told if Government have got any figures, any memorandum, any representation from the small planters. If the Government have got any, we are certainly not given these? I am afraid, all this export propaganda is being not only organised, but monopolised by big planters at the expense of the small cultivators. Now, Kenya was not the only problem which we are asked to solve so far as our coffee export is concerned. I am afraid, it is not a great problem at all. Indian coffee may stand competition with Kenya coffee. So perhaps Kenya is being trotted out in this connection here. The real problem is elsewhere. My Honourable friend in charge of the Bill did not give that information. I am afraid he did not give it purposely. I believe he knows it, the main problem in Brazil. When our coffee trade grew in the sixties, seventies or eighties of the last century, and it practically was the only best coffee in the world's markets, then Brazil was not in the field. Now, as I know from books and records, eighty per cent of the world's coffee is produced by Brazil, and world's markets have been captured by Brazilian coffee, because the forests and the slopes and the altitude and the rains, all these are very congenial for coffee in Brazil, so that vast areas of coffee plantation can be undertaken in Brazil. Hence Brazil has got now practically a monopoly of the world's markets. Now, if our planters will expect any export of coffee, they must fall back upon quality alone. If they can produce a better quality, then alone can they sell their coffee outside India : and, with a view to improving this quality, they will now organize so that they may sell this good quality coffee abroad. Consequently, they will sell only the refuse in this country, and this refuse coffee of big plantations will compete with the coffee of the small growers, who now practically monopolise the home market.

Is propaganda necessary in the home market ? No propaganda is necessary at all for home consumption of coffee. I find that, in 1925, the home consumption of the Indian coffee was 20,000 cwts., and, in 1933, it was 120.7 thousand cwts., and, in 1933-34, as I have calculated it, it is 123,000 cwts. Which coffee has been consumed in this country ? In seven years, the home consumption of Indian coffee has been more than six times, and import of foreign coffee into India has been completely stopped. So where is the necessity for any propaganda for home consumption ?

Dr. F. X. DeSouza (Nominated Non-Official) : What was the home consumption in 1929 ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : It was 105.2 thousand cwts.; in only one year. If my friend wants the information, 1932, it went up by 138,000 cwts.; it has fallen a little, but it is gradually rising since. It came to 120,000 cwts. in 1933, and, in three months' time, the yearly calculation for 1933-34, rose to 123,000 cwts. But in 1923 it was only 20,000 cwts.; and now the restriction of coffee imported into India has abolished all import. That is found in the report of 1933-34. I hope it continues even now, and I hope the Government will see to it that no foreign coffee is imported into this land any more.

Now, as to the exports, I find that the decennial average before the war—taking into account the years 1870-71, 1880-81, 1890-91, 1900-01, 1910-11, the decennial average is 285,000 cwts. a year for exports.

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : What years ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : All this is the decennial average—that is, for 1870-71, 1880-81, 1890-91, 1900-01, 1910-11 ; and the average income on this calculation obtained by the planters annually was Rs. 129 lakhs. In those years, internal consumption of Indian coffee was negligible. Now, in 1933-34, the export was 186,000 cwts, and the internal consumption was 123,000 cwts.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : In 1933, the figure was 185,995 cwts. ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I am correct, I believe ? The export was 185,995, or, in round numbers, 186,000 cwts., and the internal consumption was 123,000 cwts. They now together sell Rs. 309 lakhs. The production practically comes along with the increase in acreage. For this year, 1933-34, though the acreage under coffee cultivation is 182 thousand acres, the actual acreage from which coffee was harvested was 156,000 acres only ; the others were new plantations, or whatever it may be ; so the increase comes along with the acreage.

The wholesale price which was declared in India in 1933 was Rs. 72 per cwt. and the total amount in 1933-34 at this rate comes to Rs. 223 lakhs.

An Honourable Member : From which book is the Honourable Member quoting these figures ?

Pandit Nilkantha Das : These figures I am quoting from the "Times of India Year Book". They have made this money. There is no loss. In fact, if we analyse the whole thing, we shall find that a fabulous profit is being made even now. Mr. N. G. Mukherjee, in his book called the "Handbook of Indian Agriculture", says (page 334) that, in a well-cultivated estate, an expenditure of Rs. 80 per acre is incurred on superintendence, field labour, freight and everything, and there is an additional expenditure of Rs. 50 per acre for manures and their application. According to him, this is the best way of cultivating it. He says that, in some coffee estates, a total expenditure of Rs. 80 per acre is incurred, but the result obtained is proportionately poorer ; and as the area is manured only in alternate years, the total expenditure comes to Rs. 80 plus half of Rs. 50, i.e., Rs. 105, say, about Rs. 110 per acre in a well kept garden. The annual average outturn of ordinary gardens is something like 3 cwt. and the outturn of a garden which is well kept may be even 4 cwt. per acre. In fact, Mr. Munro says, during his evidence before the Agricultural Commission, that in a well-kept garden, it is sometimes even as much as 6 cwt. The same author (the late Mr. N. G. Mukherjee) goes on to say that if a crop is sold at 60 s. per cwt. then it is sold at a profit. That is to say, if it is sold at Rs. 45 per cwt., which was the then exchange value of 60 s., there is a margin of profit. But if it is sold at 40 s., or Rs. 30 per cwt., then there is no profit. Let us then say, the minimum outturn in a well-kept garden is 3 cwt. per acre, and the average of the outturn from small and big, well-kept and ill-kept gardens will be between 2 and 3 cwt. per acre. If we assume that the outturn from a well-kept garden is even so small as 3 cwt., then the price at the rate of Rs. 45 per cwt. comes to Rs. 135. And if you spend Rs. 110 for all kinds of expenses, then you have a clear profit of Rs. 25 or about 20 per cent. on your investment. But, now, what has been the price ? Of course, at a time the average was 140 s. per cwt. and then when in 1923 on account of Brazil's competition it came down to 127 s. per cwt. there began calamitous uproar from the planters that Indian coffee was going to be ruined. Now, what has been the condition ? It is Rs. 72 per cwt., that is to say, it is more than 108 shillings per cwt.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Rs. 72 is not the present price. The present price is between Rs. 50 and Rs. 55 per cwt.

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : The present price is under Rs. 45 per cwt. and it varies according to the quality.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Even if the price is Rs. 45 per cwt., the margin of profit comes to about Rs. 20 per cent. on the investment. So, the condition of the planters is not so bad as it is depicted to be.

But the real apprehension of the planter is that his outside world market is failing. There he can now expect to sell quality alone ; his quantity won't do. Sir, I am told that if Indian coffee is well-prepared and well-graded, it can fetch better price than even Brazil coffee. So, for the outside market, our planters depend upon quality alone. As for the inside market, it is now practically monopolised by these poor small coffee cultivators, for they can easily undersell the big planters. Now, the attempt of the big planters apparently is in future to capture this internal market now open to the cultivators. The planters, by organised propaganda among our poor people, especially in the villages, will sell among them their ungraded refuse coffee cheaper than the produce of the ordinary cultivators. On account of propaganda, poor villagers will get addicted to coffee, and then they will buy cheap coffee without considering the quality at all. I apprehend that is the whole game.

We have received no memoranda from the ordinary cultivators to convince us about their demand for this measure, but we have been told that there is some propaganda which shows a universal approbation for this measure. We would, however, like to know what is that propaganda? Who made it? And, how the opinion of the cultivators was gauged? I know that the planters are an organised body and they must have appealed to the Government. They might have sent their representations and they might have pressed the Government for enacting a measure like this. But what is the propaganda referred to in the "Objects and Reasons", as also by the Mover of the Bill?

We are also told that the Mysore Government is pressing for the measure. For Coorg and Madras, our own Government is responsible. Probably every one in this House knows that Governments are generally led by those who are very vocal and are well organised. What about the poor coffee cultivators? What do they actually feel about this measure? What will they do after this Bill is passed into law?

Therefore, we want to know what this "propaganda" is and what its ascertained effect actually stands for. We cannot take it as a gospel truth from those who are always led by louder voices or by better organised pressure. My Honourable friend, the Mover, will not perhaps deny it. So, I say, let this whole thing be dropped, and, if a cess is to be collected, it should be collected by the Government of India, and it may be earmarked and spent for the purpose for which the planters say they want it; but it should be spent by our own Department. That will be the best thing to do. We do not like any Association or independent committee like this. What is the good of these people, who are very vocal, demanding these sanctions from the Government when they can very well avail of the Government institutions and the Government Department. In fact, before the Royal Commission, their scientific expert, who was the representative of the Association (Mr. Munro), said that everything in this connection was satisfactory and the Royal Commission themselves expressed their satisfaction that the Agricultural Department of the Government are fully made use of and they are working in co-operation with the planters. This being the case, what makes our Government think that there is a necessity for the establishment of such an Association?

An Honourable Member : It has been already done in case of tea.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : As for tea, it is a separate issue altogether, and we are not talking of tea now. Coffee is, after all, a small industry.

You will get less than a lakh of rupees probably 60 or 70 thousand this year. What will they do with this money? How can they make any propaganda outside India with the small amount, besides scientific investigation, internal propaganda as well as the expenditure of the committee itself? So, I say, they want our sanction to make propaganda in our villages to sell their refuse coffee in competition with our poor coffee-growers who are disorganised.

I now come to the effects of coffee on the nation as a whole. Of course, if we can get better graded coffee, that may be a luxury. Many of our better class people have taken to tea and now they are taking to coffee with the result that there is a large increase in its consumption.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official) : May I ask the Honourable Member who are the better class of people?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : The better class of people are those who know whether the coffee is good or bad, whether it is graded or not, and whether it has been kept for a long time and the poison has been destroyed altogether, or whether there is still poison in it to cause hilarity and sleeplessness.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : It is perfectly clear, Mr. Joshi is not one of the better class of coffee drinkers.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I am afraid he is not. The object of the present law is to introduce coffee drinking even in villages where only the price will tell. I have also narrated before stories in this House when we discussed tea-cess last Session. The poor villager sometimes has got only six pice a day on which to maintain himself and his family. If he takes to drinking tea, he will take one pice worth of tea dust full of mud both morning and evening. He goes to the village grocer and purchases tea full of dust worth one pice. Then, he puts it in a vessel full of boiling water, probably one seer and five chataks of boiling water, and then he will add some salt and then drink the whole thing just as a cow drinks its water mixed with husk powder. This is the condition in our villages so far as tea drinking is concerned. The villagers get only the refuse, for, with the poor villagers, price is the only consideration. The better class of people will be deprived of their cup of coffee, because it will be sent outside India for consumption on the Western Continent.

Now, India is not the only country which produces coffee. Brazil has got the monopoly of the world's market, not Kenya. That is my information. So, the better class or quality of coffee will be sent out and the refuse will remain in the country for the consumption of the poor villagers. I am afraid that is the whole game as I have already hinted. It appears to me that if opinions are elicited and all people know what it is going to be and if people know all about the circumstances in which we are discussing the subject here, then we shall be enlightened by their views on the subject. Heavens are not going to fall if this measure is passed into law after a small delay of four months. It does not matter if only one season is gone, we shall probably give you the sanction after eliciting public opinion. We already gave sanction for the tea cess. I have no objection to give similar sanction for the coffee cess, but you must separate the money and earmark it and manage the funds under your departmental control or do whatever you like with it. But we do not like to have this committee, this organisation of planters who will simply oust the poor cultivators from the field. That is my apprehension. I submit that this aspect of the question has not been considered by the Honourable Members. You want to dump the refuse on the poor villager. Thereby not only his economic position will be ruined, but also his health will be undermined and thus the whole country will be ruined.

I know that coffee is being drunk now-a-days by fashionable people. If, however, coffee is drunk after a meal, its baneful effects are negligible. But, as Honourable Members are aware, coffee is drunk by the poor people with empty stomachs. What will happen if bad stuff of coffee is introduced into these villages with our sanction behind it? I appeal to the House to look at the question from the point of view of the health of the poor villagers. The poor villager does not even get one and half annas per day to maintain himself and his family. If you introduce coffee into the villages and make the villagers also slave to this coffee drink, then they will be ruined. I will read out to the House for its information the opinions of eminent medical men about coffee. In their book on "Food and the Principles of Dietetics" by Robert Hutchison, M.D., F.R.C.P., Physician to London Hospital and Hospital for Sick Children, and Mr. V. H. Mottram, M.A., Professor of Physiology at King's College, London, they say (pages 361—367) :

"Influence of Tea, Coffee and Cocoa on Digestion."

"The influence of these beverages on salivary and gastric digestion is, on the whole, unfavourable. If there was even five per cent. of the infusion in the digesting mixture, practically no digestion of starch takes place. The most elaborate investigation of the action of these beverages on digestion in the stomach has been made by Fraser. He found that tea and coffee both retard peptic digestion."

Then, again :

"The retarding influence of tea and coffee on peptic digestion has also been established by Roberts, Ogata and Schultsenstein. The former is of opinion that the tannic acid only accounts for about one-half of the inhibitory effects exerted by tea. On the whole they are agreed that coffee has less influence than tea, provided it is of the same strength, but, inasmuch as the former is usually a stronger infusion than the latter, its effects in actual practice are equally powerful."

"Apart from their modifying influence on the chemical processes of digestion, it must be remembered that these beverages sometimes affect the stomach more directly. Thus, the tannic acid and other astringent substances met with in strong infusion of tea may act as irritants to the mucous membrane of the stomach, especially if empty; and the same is true to an even greater extent of the coffee and other products produced in the roasting of coffee. It is in this way that these beverages may sometimes excite or keep up a condition of chronic gastric catarrh."

Then further on :

"In cases where the digestion is enfeebled and where the ferments are doing their work with difficulty the presence of these beverages in the digesting mass may make all the difference between failure and success in the process. * * * So tea and coffee should both be avoided. * * * As has been previously pointed out, the irritating effects of these beverages on the stomach are more likely to be manifested when the latter is empty."

"There are no available observations on the absorption of tea and coffee. The action of tea and coffee on the body depends entirely upon the tannic acid, caffeine and volatile oil which these beverages contain."

After discussing the ill effects of coffee and tea in their chemical analysis and action, etc., they go on to say :

"The question has been much debated whether or not caffeine lessens the waste of the body. * * * Indeed all experiments go to prove the contrary, namely that caffeine tends to increase rather than diminish tissue waste. It does not prolong life in starvation, although it may perhaps lessen the feeling of hunger. Experiments with the ergograph too have shown that tea and coffee are in no sense muscle foods, although they can temporarily increase muscular power by abolishing nervous fatigue, so long, at least as the muscles are not completely exhausted."

We may conclude then that tea and coffee are in no sense foods, in that they can neither build up the tissues nor provide them with potential energy.

The nervous system in childhood or after middle life is peculiarly susceptible to these baneful effects."

Dr. B. N. Ghosh, F.R.F.P. & S. (Glasgow), in "A Treatise on Hygiene and Public Health" says (page 222) :

"Coffee causes stimulation of the nervous system and there is a feeling of exhilaration and diminution of the sense of fatigue. Strong coffee taken after dinner tends to retard the digestive process; it should therefore be avoided by dyspeptics. Caffeine lessens the feeling of hunger but does not prolong life in cases of starvation, and it increases tissue waste. In comparative experiments with whole companies of soldiers on the march under like conditions, Leistenstrofer, on behalf of the German Government, found that when the soldiers were well supplied with food, those that were given tea or coffee could endure more prolonged and more severe marches than those that did not get tea or coffee. If no food was supplied fatigue appeared first in the tea and coffee drinkers. Tea and coffee therefore increase the power for continuous physical work so long as the supply of nutritive material is ample, but cause early exhaustion when food is withheld (Bastedo). Excess of coffee drinking causes nervous disturbances, palpitation, insomnia, and liability to attacks of neuralgia."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Does not the Honourable Member consider that he has recited these opinions at sufficient length? Is it necessary to prolong the debate in this way?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I was simply quoting them here and there. Last time when, perhaps inadvertently, I said that tea was poison I was laughed at in this House. People generally think that this beverage is a food and is a nutritive substance; but it is not. It is a luxury. For certain classes of people it may be good,—I do not dispute that. But now you are going to introduce it into our villages and that is what I object to. But I do not object to its being directly controlled by Government. Let it be propaganda or anything; I do not object to that. I agree to your cess but I do not like an independent body, interested organisedly in the plantation, taking into their hands the whole money and making whatever they like with it, and that with our sanction behind them.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) in the Chair.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Sir, I was going to show how it is injurious to our village people who do not know anything and who are not able to take care of themselves. As I have said very often, I have no objection to educated people taking to coffee or tea or tobacco or anything else. They are able to take care of themselves. Dr. W. G. Savage in his "Food and Public Health" says (page 76) :

"In view of the heavy consumption of tea, it is important to consider how far this habit is detrimental to health.....Taken in habitual excess, tea may lead to a prejudicial stimulation of the nervous system. More serious is its possible effect upon the digestive organs, to be ascribed in the main to the amount of tannic acid which it contains. This substance is an astringent ; as such it exerts a prejudicial action upon the stomach and other organs with which it comes in direct contact, and is one factor in the production of certain types of indigestion.

Coffee : This is another comparatively recent importation, with much the same general characters as a beverage as tea ; it is, however, far less drunk in this country. (He means England.) It contains the same alkaloid, caffeine. A cup of strong black coffee will contain about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  grains of caffeine and a certain amount of tannic acid. Its actions as a stimulant and as a cause of indigestion are much the same as those of tea."

This is an expert from the Punjab, Dr. N. R. Dharmavir writing on the heading of "Tea and Coffee Habit" in his book "Public Health in India". He says (pages 51-53) :

"A quarter of a century ago, the drinking of tea or coffee in the Punjab was confined to a few educated people, and the student occasionally took it for the purpose of removing drowsiness at night. Now the practice is very common. In fashionable society, tea parties are the rule and tea is quite a regular meal.

In other parts of India tea drinking has, I think, been common for a very long time even among the poorer classes. This may be true or not, but the fact remains that this habit of tea and coffee drinking is on the increase. It is useful to enquire whether the habit is good or detrimental to health.

It is thus apparent that tea and coffee have no food value. They are merely a luxury and give to life a few moments of pleasure. They may be useful occasionally to remove fatigue and sleepiness but at the other end of the scale, their ill-effects are many and varied when taken in excess, and in the tea or coffee habit it is sometimes just as impossible for the consumer to gauge when the limit has been reached as in the alcoholic habit. Constipation, Dyspepsia, Anaemia, Neuritis, itching of the skin, nervousness, insomnia and many others are the injurious effects which make the life miserable.

Any but an occasional or medicinal use of tea and coffee should be deprecated, and young persons should absolutely avoid these beverages."

It is a drug, just like tobacco or alcohol. In his book "Ideal Health or the Laws of Life and Health", Alexander Bryce, M.D.C.M., D.P.H., says (pages 79-80) :

"The Caffeine Craving : Civilisation has for so long depended upon the stimulus provided by tea and coffee, that it has been stated in some quarters that these drugs are essential articles of our diet. The mere fact that the greatest vigour of body and mind is compatible with complete abstinence from them should serve to controvert such an opinion. That it should prevail, however, rather lends support to my view that a large section of the community is under the influence of a caffeine craving. The truth of this contention can easily be demonstrated by almost any one who is bold enough to cease drinking tea and coffee for even a week. The unbearable headache which will torture his day and nights and the constant hankering after a cup of tea will soon convince him that he is under the spell of the drug. It will also be a wholesome reminder to some who have been in the habit of deriding the 'craving' for alcohol.

An enormous amount of will-power is necessary to break off the habitual use of any drug, and tea and coffee are no exceptions to the rule. For, after all, every cupful of tea or coffee is equivalent to a dose of a drug, and not by any means an infinitesimal dose, but the full pharmacopoeial allowance. Each cup of tea or coffee contains the equivalent of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  grains of citrate of caffeine, a white drug kept on the shelves of every chemist in the world. I would commend this fact to the attention of the by no means inconsiderable section of people who are so loud in their denunciations of the medical man who occasionally allows himself to prescribe a 'drug' of the more conventional category. A drug is a drug whether it be self-administered in sips from a china cup or gulped down from a nauseous bottle with or without a medical prescription.

There are many who are distinctly injured by the use of coffee as of tea. It should be eschewed by the highly nervous by those who suffer from palpitation or almost any heart condition, by dyspeptics and bilious people, and it should never be given to children.

It may be stated generally that those who rely on tea and coffee as stimulants are laying up for themselves a store of trouble, as the reaction must be faced some day.

Taken to excess—and this is always a relative term—nervous and gastric disturbances are certain to arise. These include giddiness, headache, tremors, insomnia, flatulence, loss of appetite, and biliousness."

This is a drug as good or as bad as any other drug. Nowadays, for some years we are having people investigating vitamins, R. H. A. Plimmer and Violet G. Plimmer, Associate of the Royal Sanitary Institute and Professor of Chemistry in the University of London have written a book on "Vitamins and the choice of food". And, incidentally, they have referred to coffee. At page 153 of the Book it is stated :

"Chocolate, cocoa and coffee as seed products are possible sources of B-Vitamin, but the quantity in which these beverages are usually consumed and their method of preparation rule them out of consideration as a source of B-factor."

Sir, last but not least, I have ransacked as many books as I could lay my hands on in all the libraries that were available to me in Simla, but I have never found any expert opinion in favour of drinking coffee or tea.....

Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : We are experts.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : So I have never said a single word about educated gentlemen whose will power is properly developed because they can take care of themselves. But unfortunately this vicious habit of tea and coffee drinking is going to the very doors of the villagers and I have shown how in my part of the country, where coffee is now practically absent, people are taking to tea. People who are suffering from starvation and poverty, people who cannot afford to pay a pice for giving milk to their children, are taking to tea and coffee and are spending two pice a day on the drug. After all, Sir, after this measure is passed, you will be able to get only about Rs. 60,000 or Rs. 70,000. As I have already pointed out, quoting Mr. Munro, the expert representative, the planters are not in need of any information as regards foreign trade. Their organization and arrangements are perfect and complete, and therefore what is the necessity for having an independent organization with this sum of sixty or seventy thousand rupees ? As I have clearly shown, it is merely to oust the small cultivator from their place and to introduce rubbish articles in the name of tea and coffee in our villages that you are thinking of setting up this independent organization. I know it will be done. 20 or 30 years ago nobody knew what tea was in our parts, but those interested in the sale of tea sent round propagandists and demonstrators into almost every village, who made small fires for boiling water, made the tea and supplied it free of charge at the very door of the villagers, and now the craving of the average villager for tea is so strong that, as I have said, he would even not give milk to his children but would spend even 2 or 3 pice a day for tea sacrificing all other necessities. Therefore, I have strong reasons to suspect that this sum of sixty or seventy thousand rupees will be spent for propaganda purposes, with the result that the small cultivator who does not care for his cheap labour and who can sell good things cheap in this country will be deprived of his small plantation. If I am labouring the point so much it is because I am very keen on this subject. This subject, Sir, is connected with our nation building. It is not in plantations and factories alone that nation building can be attempted; we should also look to the health of the consumers as well as to the interests of the small growers and small industrialists.

Sir, here is a book called "Good Food, how to prepare it" by Cornforth. In this book he has described the preparation of various kinds of foods, but only incidentally he has devoted a small chapter to beverages, at page 212, but he has given no hints on their preparation. He goes straight to the subject and says:

"Tea and coffee contain two harmful substances, tannin and caffeine. Tannin has a tanning, or astringent effect upon the lining of the stomach and upon albuminous foods. It interferes with salivary and stomach digestion. Caffeine is one hundred times as deadly a poison as alcohol. This will account for the statement made by Dr. D. H. Kress—'Tea is worse than Beer'. One pound of average tea contains 252 grains of caffeine. Twenty grains of caffeine is sufficient to kill a man. In one pound of tea there is sufficient poison to kill twelve men, two rabbits and fourteen frogs. One cup of tea contains from one and one-half to one and three-fourths grains of caffeine, and three or four grains of tannin. Therefore, it takes a little more than twelve cups of tea to contain a deadly dose of caffeine....."

Mr J. A. Milligan (Bengal : European) : Sir, I rise to a point of order. May I ask, Sir, whether the subject before the House is tea or coffee?

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) : The Honourable Member is probably explaining his point by analogy with tea.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I never referred to tea unless it was very necessary. These remarks about tea refer to coffee as well. The sentence that follows will satisfy the Honourable Member :

"A cup of coffee contains the same amount of caffeine and tannin as a cup of tea. Sleeplessness, stomach trouble, palpitation of the heart, headache, constipation, nervous disorders, arterial and kidney diseases, and liver trouble are some of the diseases caused by the use of tea and coffee."

Now, I believe my friend will understand me.....

Mr. J. A. Milligan : Sir, I again rise to a point of order. I must protest against the opportunity being taken of a discussion on coffee to make a slashing attack on tea.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : My friend should then request the President to cut out the word 'tea' in the Report and substitute 'coffee'. I cannot avoid quoting from this Book in support of my contention.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Substitute coffee.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : This author further goes on to say :

"Tea and coffee blunt the sensibilities and make those who use them oblivious of consequences. This is the reason that a cup of tea will make a tired woman feel equal to doing a big washing on Monday morning."

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

"Water is the natural and perfect beverage."

So the author of this Book does not discuss tea or coffee.....

An Honourable Member : Next comes milk.

Sir Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : What about chocolates?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : It is nothing but cocoa.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That is also harmful?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I am afraid, I have taken much time of the House to show the harmful effects of both tea and coffee by quoting in support of my contention the opinions of some eminent people and medical men. I do not know there may be other opinions which may throw better light for the Members of this House. So I ask for opinion. The question of milk was raised in connection with coffee as the best drink.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : It is not necessary to go at length into the respective merits of these things.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : No, Sir. I am talking in connection with coffee. In our villages tea can be drunk without milk, but coffee is so strong and bitter that without milk it cannot be drunk.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member can perhaps leave that to the coffee drinkers. (Laughter.)

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I am simply going to show that our children cannot get milk when coffee is brought to the doors of our villagers. If coffee becomes the habit of our people, our children cannot get sufficient milk; already they are not able to get milk in proper quantities. In our villages, milk supply is very poor. When elderly people will want milk for their coffee, children will have to be starved. That is what I was going to explain. That is the general complaint of my friends from Southern India. They say that on account of coffee drinking their children are deprived of milk; their children are given coffee instead of milk, and in their opinion, coffee should be forbidden so far as children are concerned. That is also the expert medical opinion, as I have quoted. In our books there are lessons for children where it is said that coffee and tea are poison. Now, in spite of those lessons we are to make counter propaganda in favour of coffee and tea at the very doors of the parents and guardians of those children. They will have to unlearn at home what they learn at school, or it will be something like the old idea of the earth being round at school, but flat at home. Probably, in course of time when luxury comes to be taxed by provincial Governments themselves, this coffee habit will supply a fresh source of income. Our villagers will be taxed for drinking coffee as they will be taxed for smoking tobacco.

[Pandit Nilakantha Das.]

Now, it is evident that there is no necessity for this Committee. If anything is to be done for these planters the Government may themselves do it through their departments. We have no evidence even to show that there is a surplus stock of good coffee year by year without being sold. We have seen that internal consumption is going up by leaps and bounds without any propaganda, and I am sure this increase is due to our educated people who take to coffee. So far it is all right, it may be a concomitant of civilisation in which we have got to live. I have no objection to that and I said nothing against a bracing cup of tea which my Honourable friends like to enjoy. But my contention is that there is really no necessity for any more foreign propaganda, it was efficient even in 1927. This money is going to be simply spent and that with our sanction on giving free coffee to our villagers by way of propaganda and thus our villagers will be harmed in several ways. Not only that. When quality is the only question, in foreign market the best quality of coffee will be sent abroad and the rubbish will be sold in this country among our villagers.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has already spoken for an hour and a half.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I am summing up, Sir. The main points I want to press are that the proportion of the acreage of plantation of coffee will remain always almost insignificant ; it is perhaps one in two thousand in our acreage under cultivation in India, and similar will be the proportion, of both temporary and permanent workers, in coffee production including all the growers interested in the industry and the agriculture—the proportion will remain the same. There is no likelihood of its ever increasing, and there is, as I have shown, enough margin of profit today in coffee. The consumption never leaves any surplus stock. The internal consumption is going up as rapidly as possible.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member is repeating himself.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I am summing up the whole thing. The House has a right to know why this Committee is so urgently necessary, and we have not been enlightened on that.

Mr. J. A. Milligan : I may be doing an injustice to my Honourable friend the Pandit, I may have misunderstood him, but I certainly gather that he is not a devotee of either coffee or tea. On the last occasion, at a meeting of this House in April, when tea was the subject of discussion, the Honourable the Pandit then advocated that the tea cess, if sanctioned, should be devoted to the purchase of milk to be given to children rather than to the corruption of their parents by leading them into such a bad habit. I had hoped that his association with such gentlemen as Mr. Sri Prakasa and Mr. Saksena would have converted him to a more reasonable view, but I very much regret to find today that he is in exactly the same frame of mind with regard to tea as he was on that occasion and that he has now added coffee to the same category.

The various points of this Bill have been so ably and comprehensively dealt with by the Honourable the Commerce Member that it is difficult to say anything without repeating his words. The history of coffee for many years has been a history of steadily going down the hill owing to foreign competition. Up till a few years ago the coffee grower had a means of escape in that he could pull up his coffee and plant tea, and quite a number of coffee growers resorted to that practice. But for the last three years this has not been legally available to the coffee grower, and in any case, had it been so, the condition of the tea industry would have made such a change as this comparable only to jumping out of the frying pan into the fire. At last the coffee grower has taken a leaf out of the tea grower's book and proposes to do the one thing which promises a real solution of his troubles. That is, to put his hand into his pocket, collect a fund and try to improve his markets. He deserves the encouragement and support of this House in this effort to solve his own problems, and the fact that this House showed such a sympathetic attitude towards the tea industry in similar circumstances may well encourage the coffee growers to hope that this Bill will be received without any serious opposition.

The Bill contains no new principle. It is practically identical in character and purpose with the Indian Tea Cess Act, an Act of which this House has expressed its approval on more than one occasion. In addition, the other criterion which would have to be fulfilled before the Bill could be taken immediately into consideration, namely that those who are affected by it should be overwhelmingly in support of it—that criterion has been more than amply fulfilled in this case. Out of 162,764 acres to whom reference was made in the matter, only 2,936, that is, less than two per cent, objected to these proposals. The proposal is not to put any tax on coffee which will raise the price to the Indian consumer. It is only exported coffee which will come within the operation of this Bill. Personally I can see no other point in the Bill which requires such prolonged delay as will be involved by circulation for opinion or even reference to a Select Committee, particularly when, it is borne in mind what this will mean to the producer, that is, a whole year's delay in the inauguration of the scheme.

The question of the composition of the Committee, about which I am certain a number of Members are interested, has been so ably explained by the Honourable the Commerce Member that there is no advantage to be gained by referring this Bill to a Select Committee or circulating it for opinion. The Commerce Member has made it perfectly clear what the composition of this committee will be and I do not think that any one in the House will say that the composition of the committee as outlined by the Commerce Member is unsatisfactory. It was my intention to appeal to the Mover of this amendment and to his colleague who jointly moved the next amendment to withdraw their amendments and allow this Bill to be taken into consideration forthwith but I am afraid that the objections of the Honourable the Mover are so personal and deep-seated that he is unlikely to adopt this course.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : How was it personal ?

Mr. J. A. Milligan : May I say that it appeared to me that many of the views which were voiced by the learned Pandit were not shared even by his own colleagues and they were certainly not shared in other parts of the House. (Voices : " Question.")

8 P.M.

An Honourable Member : You take a great responsibility in saying that.

Mr. J. A. Milligan : Am I to understand that there is a body of opinion in this House which shares the views of the learned Pandit against tea and coffee as a beverage. If that is so, I can only say that it fills me with deep regret.

One or two small points I should like to touch upon before I sit down. Other speakers would deal more comprehensively with the wider issues raised by the Honourable the Pandit's speech. He asserted that fabulous profits are being earned by coffee growers in South India. I can only say that he has chosen the correct adjective. It is a fable. There are many growers who are applying to Government for loans to carry on which can be described by the word 'fabulous' in the sense in which the learned Pandit used the expression.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I quoted expert opinion upon it ?

Mr. J. A. Milligan : I do not think I misunderstood the learned Pandit. Another point on which the learned Pandit has either not completely informed himself, or has been misinformed, is this. He suggested that coffee drinking is confined to the better classes and that the object of this cess is to spread this vice and spread it in such a way that it will seriously harm the poorer classes. From the knowledge that I have gained from the operations of the tea propaganda staff, I know that coffee drinking among the poorer classes in South India is very prevalent indeed ; and just to give you an example that it is so I would mention that if in South India you go out shooting or fishing you give your men what they call "coffee money". There is no such expression in Northern India as "tea money". It is called coffee money in South India.

An Honourable Member : Toddy money ?

Mr. J. A. Milligan : No, coffee money. There is one matter in which I must tender my grateful thanks to the learned Pandit. I understood him to say that when the tea cess proposals come up again he will agree to their being sanctioned on the ground that the tea industry is such a large industry that its proposals ought to be put through. I would deprecate very strongly the point made by the learned Pandit that the object of this cess is in some way or other to oust the smaller cultivators. I am absolutely sure that that idea never crossed the minds of the framers of these proposals, and in evidence of that, we have only to look at the support accorded to the proposals in Mysore State which has 85 thousand acres out of 162 thousand acres under coffee. The support was unanimous. The whole of the 85 thousand acres support these proposals ; and the same is true of Coorg which has 37 thousand odd acres. The whole of the 37 thousand odd acres have supported these proposals.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Let them make representations and then we shall consider.

Mr. J. A. Milligan : Am I to understand that the Honourable Member is suggesting that the figures I hold in my hand are not authentic ? If so, it is quite easy to satisfy the Honourable Member on that point. I shall not detain the House any longer. I shall only express the hope once more that the Honourable the Movers of these two amendments will see fit to withdraw their amendments and allow this Bill to be taken into consideration forthwith. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : Representing as I do a large number of coffee growers, mostly of the smaller variety, I think it my duty to intervene in this debate for a very few moments. I venture to think that the learned Pandit in his very elaborate speech has entirely misconceived the issues before this House and, I think it necessary, that those issues should be clarified and put before the House in a clear cut and lucid form. The facts are these. Here is an industry in which a large amount of capital, more than ten crores of rupees, has been sunk. More than half of this capital belongs to Indians, not of the financier class but of the farmer class. It employs more than one hundred thousand wage earners from the congested parts of Mysore and the west coast of India, and it exports in normal times as much as two crores of rupees worth of produce, to that extent adjusting the balance of trade in favour of India. Unfortunately, during the last three or four years, the industry has passed through a period of unexampled depression. The prices have fallen below the actual cost of production. The result has been that the planters have been obliged to neglect cultivation and in consequence pests like borer, leaf disease and green bug have devastated the plantations and many planters are now wondering what will happen to them next and whether they will have to abandon their plantations and they feel that they will have to do so unless some steps are taken immediately to remedy the situation.

At last, Sir, the planters have pulled themselves together. Being as they are under five different Governments, separated as they are by long distances and by different languages, it was impossible for them hitherto to come together, but common misfortune has combined to make them pull themselves together for the purpose of concerting common action. Sir, they have decided to tax themselves in order to raise funds for the purpose of approaching Government to organize a Committee for the purpose of improving cultivation and marketing and propaganda for coffee. The argument of the Movers of the two amendments, on the opposite side, was that there was really no need for urgency ; if you have waited for so many years, why can't you wait a year longer ? Sir, the reason is, that the export season is in the month of November, and if this Bill cannot be passed before November, 1935, it can only come into force in November, 1936, by which time the condition of some of the plantations will have become hopeless. I say then to this House that the point at issue before Honourable Members is—are you prepared to allow an industry in which Rs. ten crores—and more than half of it belongs to your countrymen—of money have been sunk, which employs more than 100,000 labourers, which exports nearly Rs. two crores worth of produce (Hear, hear),—are you prepared to let it go, in order that you may "deliberate", meanwhile, and see whether your villagers will or will not be injuriously affected by propaganda and whether the alleged deleterious effects of coffee will not justify this House in discouraging its general use. It is absolutely necessary, Sir, to put the issues in this blunt manner so that, if this matter goes to the vote, Honourable Members will know what they are voting for. Are they voting for the destruction of this industry, because, Sir, if this legislation is not passed now, this industry is as good as ruined. Or are you prepared to vote for this measure so that the planters may apply the remedy at the earliest possible moment ?

I venture to think, Sir, that, after all, this motion for reference to a Select Committee or the motion for circulation for eliciting public opinion is merely a dilatory motion, because, the only persons most affected are the planters, who are prepared to tax themselves. There is no other class of person who will be injuriously affected by this measure. My Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das, says "what is the object, by means of propaganda, of multiplying the needs of the poor villager whose earnings are not more than an anna or two a day?" Sir, is this the attitude to be adopted by my friends opposite? Sir, the cry of my Honourable friends on the other side has always been that the standard of living of the poor villager should be raised and that the industries of this country should be encouraged. Now, Sir, the main reason of encouraging an industry is to create and multiply wants and thereby creating demands for some industrial product or other. Then, Sir, my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das, dwelt upon what he considered the deleterious effects of coffee. Well, I shall not follow him into a discussion of the medical aspect of the question, but this much I know that coffee is a staple drink in the Southern Presidency. In every town in the Presidency of Madras there are large numbers of coffee houses which cater for the needs of a very large clientele; every villager consumes coffee and, as Mr. Milligan has said "coffee money" is the way baksheesh is given in Southern India. Now has Madras suffered in consequence? Sir, so far as I know, Madras differs from the rest of India in several respects. But its main distinction is that the Presidency excels the rest of India in subtlety of intellect. Everybody knows and appreciates the Madrassi's subtlety of intellect. Everybody realizes the Madrassi's financial shrewdness....

[23RD SEP. 1935.]

Mr. S. Satyamurti : All due to coffee !

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : If anybody disbelieves me, I would ask him to read the current law reports and to pay visits to the Financial Department of the Government of India and analyse its personnel. Does not the major portion of the personnel consist of Madrassis? Has the coffee-drinking habit in any way affected either the moral or the intellectual position of superiority of the Madrassi?

So far, Sir, as intellectual stimulation is concerned, we know the views of the poet Pope who was an habitual frequenter of the coffee house along with the other literary celebrities of his time. Now what does he say? Speaking of coffee, he said that it is a beverage :

"That makes the politician wise (Hear, hear)

And see through all things with his half-shut eyes (Hear, hear)."

I am quite sure, Sir, if my Honourable friend from Orissa, Pandit Nilakantha Das, had been a devotee of the coffee habit, he would have seen, with half an eye, through all his own arguments which had, Sir, no substance at all. (Laughter.)

Sir, the value of coffee is also in its stimulating properties for both mind and body, and these properties are too well-known to be mentioned. Coffee acts as a most efficient substitute for alcohol. While coffee has all the stimulating effects of alcohol, it has none of the poisonous or other deleterious effects associated with alcohol, for, otherwise, Sir, in what way can you explain this phenomenon that in all Muhammadan countries where under the injunctions of the Prophet alcohol is forbidden, coffee is the favourite drink of the people. Take Egypt, Turkey, Arabia, Persia. Sir, the best coffee I have ever drunk was in Egypt, and probably other Honourable Members have had the same experience.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Sir, is it a wise argument to say that the Mussalmans have adopted coffee as a substitute for alcohol?

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : And here I draw the attention of my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, the labour leader. Sir, there cannot be a better substitute for alcohol among the working classes of this country than coffee (Hear, hear), and the reason why I tell you that is that the great labour leader, John Burns, strongly held that view. John Burns was known to be a teetotaler and was rather looked down upon in the ship where he worked and used to be dubbed as "coffee pot Burns". (Laughter.) (A Voice : "What about Robert Burns?")

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : Sir, John Burns advocated the drinking of coffee as being the best substitute for the drinking of alcohol amongst the working classes of the population; and, if prohibition, Sir, is ever going to be a practical proposition in this country, I would certainly ask my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, to take to the coffee drinking habit.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I already drink coffee.

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : I am very glad to hear that, and to popularize it by propaganda amongst the working classes.

There is no doubt about the wonderful stimulating effect of coffee for intellectual purposes. Sir, I have already said what the ideas of the poet Pope are. The same views are held by great men in different spheres such as Balzac and Dryden, the great English poet and Beethoven the musical composer. Every one of them have attributed their inspiration to coffee drinking. Sir, I do not wish in any way to make use of my place in the Assembly for purposes of propaganda for coffee. All that I intended to say was to counteract, as far as possible, the poisonous propaganda of my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das.

What are the objections raised by my Honourable friend? He said that the total acreage under coffee is 182,000 acres and the conditions are such that it is impossible to increase that acreage. Therefore, he asked what is the use of forming this Committee? The point is that we do not want to increase our acreage; we want to keep up the acreage already under cultivation because our acreage, in consequence of depression and adverse circumstances, is now dwindling. Then he said why do you require a Committee, why not allow a Government Department to run it? He urged that the action of the Committee would not be favourable to the small grower but it will only be favourable to the big planters. I quite agree that it will be much better if there was a Government Department to run this propaganda. In fact, other Governments have done it. Look at the Government of Kenya. They run coffee industry as a Government Department. They appoint Trade Commissioners for the purpose of popularising coffee in every place where there is a demand for it, such as, Aden. In London they have an advertising agency by means of which the Kenya coffee has made enormous strides during the last few years. I remember visiting a grocer's shop in Bond Street four or five years ago and asked for a pound of Mysore coffee. The grocer told me that he could supply me with Mysore coffee which was being sold at 3s. 9d. a lb. but he could give me a much better substitute, namely, the Kenya coffee which was being sold at 3s. 6d. a lb. Now, everybody knows that Kenya coffee can come nowhere near the Mysore coffee in point of flavour and "liquor", and yet if it is possible for a grocer in Bond Street to tell me, a Mysore coffee grower, that Kenya coffee is better and cheaper, it shows to what extent the propaganda of the Kenya Government can go. Sir, the effect of this propaganda by the Kenya Government has been that while in 1913-14 the export of Kenya coffee was 2,000 tons, in 1930 it rose to 30,000 tons whereas the export of Indian coffee has fallen from 14,000 tons in 1913-14 to 7,000 tons in 1933-34. Can anybody contemplate a position like this with equanimity? This position, I maintain, is entirely due to the propaganda of the Kenya Government and should certainly be counteracted by propaganda on behalf of the Indian grower. I venture to think that it would be the duty of the Indian Government to do this propaganda but we know the policy of our Government. Our Government, when it is a question of protecting an Indian industry, say: "We cannot do it very well because it raises the price and works a hardship on the poor cultivator." But when it is a question of protecting agriculture, they say: "We believe in laissez faire because it will be best for agriculture". That being the policy of our Government, it is hopeless to ask them to start this propaganda on their own. Therefore, the only means by which we can do it is by means of a Committee which will work on the lines of the Indian Cess Committee, the Indian Cotton Cess Committee and Indian Lac Cess Committee.

Sir, I do not wish to detain the House very much longer, but there is one little point which my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das, made and to which I would like to refer. He said that this is a dodge by the big planters to squeeze out the small planters. My Honourable friend, with all due respect to him, is talking through his hat. This measure is a measure by which the big planters have volunteered to pay a cess on exported coffee; for their own benefit and for the benefit of the small planters. It is only the big planters who export coffee. Small planters sell their coffee in this country. Whatever benefit may accrue to the coffee industry by this cess, which is paid by the big planters, will be to the advantage not only of the big planters but also of the small planter. Therefore, the smaller planter, instead of being injured, will actually be benefited by the self-sacrifice on the part of the big planter. No doubt, later on it is proposed that the cess will be not on export but on production. But till such time comes, it will be really a contribution made by the big planter for the benefit not only of the big planter but of the smaller planter also.

Then he said that the refuse coffee that will be left in this country, if export is stimulated, will be poisonous and will ruin the health of the Indian villager. Sir, there is nothing more untrue than that statement. The coffee that is exported to Europe is known as "parchment" coffee and the coffee that is kept for use in this country is known as the "native" coffee. There is little or no difference between these two varieties of coffee except in mode of preparation. Of course the look of the parchment coffee is better and the English people go by looks. But the native coffee has a better flavour and is much more pleasant to the taste. I, for one, always prefer what is known as "native" coffee for my personal consumption. Sir, I do not wish to detain the House any longer.

I think the amendment before the House is purely a dilatory motion and in order to rescue the coffee industry from ruin, I feel certain that this Honourable House will vote that this Bill be taken into consideration immediately.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Sir, I do not wish to take more than a couple of minutes. The only point to which I would like to draw the attention of the House is clause 4 of the Bill. The Honourable Member said that there will be 12 Indians and possibly eight Europeans on this Committee. Sub-clause (1) (ii) (a) of clause 4 says :

"Three persons nominated by the Government of the Mysore State. (b) two persons nominated by the Local Governments of Madras and Coorg, respectively."

The Honourable Member presumed that they will always be Indians, for which presumption there is no authority in the Bill itself :

"(c) Three persons nominated by the United Planters' Association of Southern India."

I presume, Sir, it is an association comprising mostly of Europeans, and the representatives that come from that association will, therefore, be all Europeans. The next category is three persons nominated by the coffee growers association which also, I hear, though there are some Indian planters on it, is really dominated by Europeans. Last comes three persons to be nominated by the Governor General and one representing the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research. My own plea here today is that the representation of Indians must be quite adequate. I will only suggest to the Honourable Member to introduce an amendment in the Bill by which these appointments of Indians will be guaranteed and nothing more. If that guarantee is forthcoming, I do not mean to press the motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee.

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury (Assam : Muhammadan) : I want to say just a few words in support of the motion made by the Honourable the Commerce Member. After hearing the long and eloquent speech of my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das, I am not satisfied that there is any need for circulating the Bill or even referring it to a Select Committee. This Bill is a very simple and non-controversial measure. All that it seeks to do is to create a coffee cess fund by imposing a cess on the coffee that is exported from India and also to create a committee to administer this fund. The only question with which we are concerned is about the constitution of that committee. I am satisfied from the speech of the Honourable the Commerce Member that the Indian interests have been very well represented on that committee. From the calculations that he has made, it is apparent that, in any circumstances, a majority of the members of that committee will be Indians. This Bill has been introduced in response to the demands from the coffee interests as the referendum that was made among the coffee growers shows that an overwhelming majority was in favour of this Bill. I think, Sir, more coffee is grown in Mysore than in British India—in the Madras Presidency and Coorg—and both the Mysore Government and the Madras Government including the Coorg Administration have all pressed for the passage of this

[Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury.]

Bill. I think the House will be well advised to facilitate the passage of this Bill and to help the coffee industry without referring the Bill to a Select Committee this Session.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras ceded Districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, it is surprising to me that only one aspect of the question has been considered and that unlike in local bodies gentlemen who have got interest in the subject under discussion seem to have a predominant voice in this Assembly. Tea growers and coffee growers, tea growers' association and coffee planters' association think that it is the primary work of the Assembly and the people at large to safeguard the interests of the small industry. The other side of the question as to how far it is desirable to advocate or propagate the drinking of coffee has been practically left to the background. It is really unfortunate that we have come to such a stage when next there will be a Bill brought in by the Commerce Member or some other Member on behalf of the Government, on behalf of vine growers and poppy producers in this country to safeguard the interests of the poppy producers or the vine growers in this country.

It is rather unfortunate that an Honourable Member belonging to the European Group spoke as if he had an absolute knowledge of the conditions in the Madras Presidency. I come from a village in the Madras Presidency and I can speak with much more authority on behalf of those people there than my Honourable friends from the European Group can purport to speak on behalf of that community there. Sir, Honourable Members of this House will feel sorry to learn that for a pinch of salt for the gruel or rice kanji the poor villager has to go to the market to purchase or to borrow, and, sometimes, he takes the rice kanji even without salt.

Now, Honourable Members of this House are asked to vote for a measure which will make the life of the people in the villages more costly by running after sugar and milk and coffee powder. The villager if he gets into the habit of coffee drinking will have to arrange to get his coffee powder first, then get sugar and then milk. Honourable Members of this House do not seem to understand the gulf of difference between the one and the other. As is well known, Madras Presidency is the hottest part of India. When we started picketing toddy shops during the last Civil Disobedience Movement with a view to trying to prevent them from drinking toddy, the Government themselves advocated toddy drinking and arranged toddy shops to be brought close to the doors of these poor people. One argument that was advanced against removing toddy shop to the centres of towns was that people who drink may be ashamed of drinking if the shop was in the centre of the town. On the other hand Government thought it best to bring toddy shops to their very doors and thus opened up attraction for the poor people to drink. What is the result? Supposing I happen to live in the locality where a toddy shop is located, first I gradually become accustomed to its smell and sometime later on, I take to it as a medicine and finally become a confirmed drunkard. During those days when we wanted to introduce prohibition, Government advocated by propaganda the drinking of toddy on the ground that Madras Presidency being a hot country, a cool drink like toddy was required by the poor people, especially the labouring classes. Now, we are asked by this Bill to introduce among the masses coffee drinking in a hot Presidency like the Madras Presidency. Perhaps Honourable Members who come from the northern parts of India might have already got accustomed to this tea drinking, and my own view is that tea drinking and coffee drinking are injurious to the health of the people of the country. I, therefore, submit, that no steps must be taken by this House which will ruin the health of the people and which will not be in the interest of the population of the Southern Presidency.

My Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das, read out the medical opinion of great authorities about the injurious properties of coffee. He read various extracts from medical journals in condemnation of coffee and tea drink and as proving that they are very deleterious to health. I would ask my Honourable friends here whether there is a single medical opinion which is in favour of tea and coffee drink. No doubt after we have got ourselves accustomed to it, we may say that it is not poison. But it is a poison when you first take it. Later on, when you become habituated to coffee drinking, the poisonous effects disappear, with the result that you require a much stronger stimulant than mere coffee or drink. I was told that a person who got himself habituated to toddy drink later on began to drink methylated spirits not being satisfied with the stimulus afforded by toddy or wine drinking. In the Madras Presidency, when certain associations wanted to preach temperance, a grant was made by the Madras Government to provide coffee hotels and tea clubs close to toddy shops. Those persons who wanted to drink toddy first went to the coffee hotels where they took coffee or tea, not for the coffee or tea contents, but I am certain for the sugar and milk that is provided either in tea or coffee and, immediately after taking tea or coffee, within less than two minutes, those very persons went to the toddy shop and took toddy to their heart's content. This is not the way in which Honourable Members can deceive themselves that this is one of the means of driving out drink evil from this country. No doubt my Honourable friend, Dr. DeSouza, who is a planter himself, suggested to us that we might rest content with a committee to popularise coffee drinking habit because that will remove toddy drinking evil from this country; he was assuming that drink evil will disappear very soon from this country and he exhorted the Honourable Members of this House to take a pledge to increase coffee consumption instead.

Sir, I personally know a schoolmaster who draws Rs. 19 or 20 a month and has three or four children and spends away all the Rs. 19 on drinking coffee. He sends away his wife and children to his father-in-law's place. Every morning he takes coffee and one or two iddlis and thosais and the same in the afternoon and then in the evening he goes home absolutely empty-handed. This is a luxury which is absolutely unsuited to our country. If civilisation in this country, according to my Honourable friend, Dr. DeSouza, comes only in the wake of coffee drinking, I would say good-bye to this, let not our civilisation stand upon such flimsy material as this. Tomorrow, it may be said on behalf of the tobacco growers that we must encourage the habit of smoking among not only men but also among women, in order to be civilised. That is a sight which I have been accustomed to seeing during the past 20 days in Simla, men and women smoking together and freely exchanging their cigarettes. I should be ashamed of such a civilisation if it takes its root here. I am not casting any aspersion on any class or community. What may be suited to a cold country may not be suited to this country. Sir, I do not take it myself; I have never drunk either tea or coffee, but I will tell you how the tea or coffee habit has crept into our villages. The moment you send a boy to school and he goes to Madras, he takes to this coffee drinking. When he comes back his parents who have never drunk tea or coffee give him coffee as a favour, and that is how the coffee evil spreads. Even to this day, I can assure Honourable Members that it has not become such an evil in our parts yet. Should we help a small industry which after all bears to the total exports from this country a proportion of less than .6 per cent.? The total exports, even during these days of depression, according to the Blue-books, came to 147 crores of rupees in the year 1933-34 and you will be amazed to find that the total export of coffee is not more than 192 lakhs; that is, it is less than .6 per cent. Is it by protecting such a small industry that we should declare to the world that we are civilised? Is it for our Government to say, "We have made these dark men civilised by introducing coffee into their households"? It is a disgrace.....

Sir Cowasji Jehangir (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Is this civilisation?

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : That is what the Honourable Member has suggested. If you do not agree with it, please vote with us. If that is the emblem of civilization, I would say good-bye to it.

Sir, I do not propose to take the time of the House much longer than saying a few more words and support the motion so ably moved by my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das. I know it fell on deaf ears; Honourable Members on the other side were smiling and sometimes they got on to a roar of laughter because it is impossible for them to shake off the habit of drinking tea or coffee. They make their children drunkards; and I read in the history of England of a Prime Minister, whose name I will not mention, who was so habituated to drinking wine that fearing lest in his old age he might lose his job and might not be able to drink wine, he made his children drink. The idea was, that if he could not afford money to drink, his son would get habituated to it and would get bottles of wine which he also might drink in his old age. I can understand the mentality of Honourable Members because they are so much accustomed to it that the very thought of abolishing it is nauseating to them and they laugh at it. Honourable Members may take it that in the 43 millions of Madrassis, there may not be even four lakhs who have become confirmed coffee drinkers. And I say that if by this Act it is intended to make propaganda in favour of coffee drinking in my Presidency or outside or in any part of India, I am stoutly against it. With respect to the object of the Bill, if it is intended to help exports to foreign countries by the imposition of this cess, I have my own doubts as to how far an imposition of this kind will benefit the exporter. We find that of all the countries in the world which grow coffee, the Southern Presidency produces the smallest quantity. I will take only one instance, from the report of the average cultivation and yield of world production. In the year 1932-33, in Brazil, the acreage that was under cultivation was 7,904,000 acres and the yield was 2,200 million pounds. In Columbia 740,000 acres were under cultivation of coffee and the yield was 473 million pounds. Now we will see what the acreage and the yield was during that period in India. In the year 1932-33 it was 78,700 acres in British India and in the Native States, 98,000 acres, in all 1,76,700 acres. In a small country like Venezuela it is more than 470,000 acres that was under cultivation in a particular year. So that even in a small place it is three or four times as much as is produced in the huge continent of India. The yield here was also not more than 32 million pounds in the year 1932-33, whereas in Brazil it was 2,200 million pounds. You can compare 32 million pounds with the 2,200 million of Brazil. I do not know how with the small cess that is proposed to be put upon this coffee, you are going to compete with the foreign market. The only hope is if in return for all that we have done or are offering to Great Britain under the Ottawa Pact, they choose to purchase more from us than Brazil or Kenya Coffee. I find also from the statistics collected that the export of coffee to Great Britain has been declining. The real remedy is to induce Great Britain to purchase more coffee from India instead of this roundabout course of trying to impose a cess and then trying to create a propaganda in every country in favour of drinking this coffee. Here we find that in the year 1932-33, England imported 52,000 cwt. of coffee and France 54,000 cwt. In the next year, i.e., in 1933-34, the 52,000 cwt. of England came down to 50,000 and the 54,000 cwt. of France increased to 57,000; and this was in spite of all the benefits that we are conferring on England and the disadvantages that France is suffering by this extraordinary Ottawa Pact under which we are labouring. Therefore the real remedy has been left in the background. My Honourable friend, who rose on behalf of the tea planters, supports the Bill lest he should be misunderstood, if he stood only for the tea cess and not for the coffee cess. They all row in the same boat. My Honourable friend, Dr. DeSouza, is a planter himself. I would only request Honourable Members of this House not to be carried away by such considerations which are absolutely one-sided. It is said as if by drinking coffee we will have a remedy for all the evils in this country. If it can take the place of food let us take it. Every country in the civilised world puts a ban on luxuries; they do not totally prohibit them but they impose heavy duties on them, but articles of food are not banned. The other day, in the budget Session, when the Finance Bill was under consideration, in the case of a large industry in Southern India of tanning hides and skins, an industry which engaged nearly 33 lakhs of men, the small export duty of five per cent. was removed; and I do not know if the Honourable Members who spoke on the other side did not vote in favour of that measure and on behalf of Government. Now, they say that the planters here who are engaged in an industry to the extent of a crore and two lakhs must be protected, as if, if they are not protected, the 300 million people will be starving and dying in this country and the whole world will go to the wall. Why should the export duty of five per cent. on the hides and skins industry have been removed? It is to help the foreigners so that they may flourish. It is a disgrace, and are we to stand by it? And after all what is left to us?

[Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar.]

Take the match industry and the sugar industry. Are we using the cess for match production and sugar production? Whether the Commerce Member or the Labour Member is a dark Indian or a white Englishman, it is all alike; the mentality is the same.

I would, therefore, say, it would be much better if they will circulate this Bill for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon—and not the opinion of these small growers in provinces or small plantation owners: that is not what I would ask: I would ask that every medical gentleman in this country should certify that this Bill is a proper one. It is not right or proper that you should take this drink to the very doors of the men who hunger and starve for a morsel of rice at mid-day and who cannot get a pinch of salt for their kanji. I know of a barber who snatched away the upper cloth from his own son and pledged it so that he could get his evening drink of toddy. Are you now trying to create another class of men—higher perhaps in the social scale—the middle class men, and make them suffer from a similar cause? You pay them perhaps 20 rupees out of which the man has to buy milk, sugar and coffee and what is left? He may perhaps get a belching after drinking so much of coffee, but it will not be the belching of a well-fed man and you will merely get the appearance of its being all right with him. You are merely trying to create another set of drunkards. Our religion says that drinking toddy is an absolute vice—it is one of the things that one ought not to indulge in: that is what the Hindu religion says. I know that in other countries there is the doctrine of trans-substantiation which they invoke and they say that bread and wine are transformed into something else—that is their religion and I have no quarrel with it—but my religion condemns any kind of intoxicating drink and here is the Government wanting to encourage another kind of drunkenness in the people. To whatever state of degradation some of us might have come to, because of our association with or having become civilised by contact with this Government in the land, let us not at least carry this one torch of civilisation to the village: let us keep it out. I am not accusing any Honourable Member in this House. I merely want every one to appreciate the difficulty of the villager. One of my Honourable friends stated that when he was taken in a rickshaw or driven in some other kind of conveyance, the man wanted some money for a drink of coffee. I know: I have been moving about, not in one district, but five districts. I had to spend a lot during the election time—I had to engage conveyances when the drivers demanded money for coffee or anything—I knew it was for toddy: but of course my friend's experience is novel: perhaps being in the heart of Madras, the rickshawalla wanted coffee as being easier to get. That experience may be true of Madras city, but it is not true of the places outside Madras, and, therefore, I beseech that this Bill may be circulated. If these coffee planters have not been able to sell their articles in foreign countries by the absolute worth of their material, let them wait for some time more. One November is not going to stand in the way. Let us get opinion: if there is a body of opinion which says that coffee is good for a country like India, we can take it up later. I have been advised that our children who grew lean by drinking coffee should get more fat—and not merely should we give them cow's fat, that is, ghee and such like, but that we should get something we cannot get in India, like whale oil or cod liver oil, etc. Under these circumstances I request that you will allow this Bill to be circulated for opinion.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan: Sir, I do not think it is necessary for me to take up an appreciable amount of the time of the House in replying to the debate on this motion. But I do propose briefly to offer some observations on some points that have been sought to be made during the course of the debate. Curiously enough, some of the points sought to be made by the same speakers were self-contradictory, and it is, therefore, rather difficult to meet those points because if each point is to be taken up and replied to, my replies may be correspondingly contradictory and I do not desire to adopt that course.

A good deal of time was spent on trying to demonstrate to the House that the coffee industry is in a very flourishing condition and that, therefore, it does not require any further fillip. Other speakers have endeavoured to show that the premise is not correct. But even if it was correct, I doubt whether it is a sound argument to say that if you can improve an industry in the country you should not do so unless the industry is sinking to such a condition that without your help it would be extinguished altogether....

Mr. Krishna Kant Malaviya (Benares and Gorakhpur Divisions: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Does that not apply to the glass industry also?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan: However, I am perfectly certain that Honourable Members will agree that if by means of the imposition of this cess, within the next two or three years, we can raise exports of coffee from the level to which they have sunk to the level at least at which they were in 1931-32, that is to say, from a value of 1.2 crores to say about 2.5 crores, that is not a result which ought to be despised if this little help which the coffee planters are willing to bring to the industry from their own pockets can achieve that result. A very great deal of the time of the House was taken up in trying to demonstrate that coffee is a very injurious drink and anything that helps its export even to other countries ought to be discouraged on general moral grounds and also on the ground that all harm ought to be prevented to the poorer classes of this country. As it happens, I personally have a good deal of sympathy with that point of view. I do not take either alcohol or coffee, nor do I use any tobacco....

An Honourable Member: What about tea?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan: As for tea, I take only three cups a day of very very light tea, and, therefore, I have a good deal of sympathy with the point of view that was put forward and has been put forward by the two Honourable Members, Pandit Nilakantha Das and Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar. But then I am afraid it would be a hopeless task for only three sane men to attempt to convert to sanity a whole insane world! On the other hand one hears so much about self-determination that if other people who are addicted to this vice and the people who provide the means of indulging in this vice think that the production of this particular kind of poison ought to be encouraged, I am afraid the three sane Members of this House must give way on that point! We were told in the course of the debate that tea and coffee were practically on the same level with regard to this matter : and yet curiously enough the Honourable the Pandit went on to say that inasmuch as the tea industry is a very large industry you might go on encouraging it : but as coffee is a small industry you ought not to encourage it.....

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I did not say that exactly : I said tea is a very big industry and that question is not here now : it is a separate issue. That is what I said. I did not say anything in favour of it.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Sir, I stand corrected, but that was my impression ; and, as I said before, I was rather surprised at that argument because if the Honourable the Pandit was really convinced that his premises were justified, he should have launched an attack against the tea industry which produces far more poison than the coffee industry which produces far less.....

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I did it in Delhi.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Apart from that, after hearing the greater portion of his speech this morning before lunch, I saw this morning's Hindustan Times and here is an advertisement in it which stares us in the face. "As a giant refreshed with Indian Tea", and the giant is half a page long—"Indian tea gives life and energy". Here is an advertisement occupying the whole length of the page assuring us with perfect confidence that Indian tea, and Indian coffee also presumably, give life and strength. However, as I said, I am personally of the view which the Honourable the Pandit holds ; but then I am afraid that is not of much avail. We must take things as we find them ; and, if we find that even a small industry can, to a certain extent, be fostered and to some extent redress the balance of trade with regard to which Honourable Members opposite as well as the Government are so anxious at this moment, I am sure it would be good policy to encourage the fostering of that particular industry.

There is one matter, Sir, on which I desire to touch in passing with regard to the position vis-a-vis Great Britain. One 4 P.M. Honourable Member said : "The true remedy is to try to induce Great Britain to take in larger quantities of Indian coffee". As a matter of fact, Indian coffee as well as Kenya coffee, I think all Empire coffee, does enjoy a certain amount of preference in Great Britain. I believe the extent is a penny a pound. But the difficulty is, as I tried to explain when moving my motion, Kenya carries on a great deal more propaganda in favour of its own coffee than India does, and the result is that the benefit of this preference goes more largely to Kenya than it does to India, and it is in order to redress this state of affairs that coffee growers in India are anxious that they should have a fund,—to be sure it will be rather small to begin with,—out of which they could also carry on propaganda in Great Britain as against Kenya in order to obtain a larger share of the coffee trade than they do at present.....

Babu Baijnath Bajoria (Marwari Association : Indian Commerce) : Will the Honourable Member say if the proceeds of this cess will be utilised for propaganda in foreign countries or in India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : As the Bill explains, the cess will be for the purpose of encouraging the marketing and improving the production of coffee and also for propaganda, and, I imagine, that mainly the propaganda will be outside the country. The Bill does not bar propaganda inside the country, but what the coffee growers are anxious about is to encourage the export of coffee, and, therefore, the propaganda will be mainly outside.....

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Why not restrict the propaganda only to foreign countries ? Then much of the opposition will disappear.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I do not know that there is much opposition on that point. As I have said, anybody would realise that if the coffee growers in this Committee that is going to be set up are to use to the best advantage the proceeds of the cess that would be available under the provisions of this Bill when it becomes an Act, those proceeds will have to be used outside India in order to encourage the export of coffee. Figures were quoted to show that the industry was in a very prosperous condition. Sir, I am afraid the figures do not support that contention. In 1930-31 the United Kingdom took in 78,488 cwts. of coffee, in 1934-35, in spite of the preference, only 27,978 cwts. were exported to the United Kingdom. France has been referred to in the course of the debate, but even there in 1930-31, it took in 107,704 cwts. as against only 52,995 cwts. in 1934-35.....

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Guntur cum Nellore : Non-Muhammadian Rural) : What is the Empire Marketing Board doing ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Therefore, my submission is that it is high time that the coffee growers were assisted in this effort so that they should themselves provide funds for carrying on propaganda with regard to Indian coffee in order that larger quantities might be exported.

As regards the contention that somehow or other the levy of this cess is likely to injure the small coffee grower, I am afraid I cannot agree with it. Whenever an industry begins to be adversely affected, it is the small industrialist, the man with a small capital, who is affected first, and, therefore, if no help is afforded to the industry whatever, the first people to succumb will be the small growers rather than the big growers who can wait till things improve or utilise their own resources for the development of their trade without waiting for the help of the Legislature in order to improve their condition, and if this cess is to be of any help to anybody, I think in the end it is likely to be more beneficial to the small grower rather than to the big grower.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 15th of January, 1936."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Does Mr. Chettiar wish to press his amendment that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee ?

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member did not say that he wanted to withdraw his amendment ?

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : No, Sir ; I want it to be put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

" That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan, Dr. F. X. DeSouza, Dr. R. D. Dalal, Mr. Pradyumna Prashad Singh, Mr. F. E. James, Mr. H. A. Sathar, H. Essak Sait, Mr. Umar Aly Shah, Dr. P. N. Banerjee, Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena, Mr. Samuel Aaron, Mr. B. B. Varma, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Pandit Nilakantha Das and the Mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

" That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

" That clause 3 stand part of the Bill."

U Thein Maung (Burma : Non-European) : Sir, I move :

" That in clause 3 of the Bill, for the words ' or to Burma ' the words ' and Burma ' be substituted."

It has been stated both in the Statement of Objects and Reasons and in the course of the Honourable the Commerce Member's speech today that Burma has been excluded from the scope of the Bill as desired by the Government of Burma. Either the Government of Burma have made a serious mistake or they have been very badly misunderstood. In any case, they should not have given the reply without consulting public opinion and the Government of India should not have taken advantage of what is an obvious mistake, especially when the Local Government's opinion had not been formulated after consulting public opinion, and when their opinion, as we maintain, is against public interest and opinion in Burma.

We were told by the Honourable the Commerce Member that the Bill was a non-controversial one. However, we find that it is not only controversial but also involves very large questions of principle as regards trade relations between India and Burma.

Sir, Burma does not export coffee and there is no prospect of her doing so for many years yet, although the soil in several parts of the country is probably fit for coffee plantation. So, we have nothing to lose and everything to gain by Burma being not excluded from the scope of the Bill.

However, we have no objection to Burma being excluded in the sense that the coffee cess is not to be leviable in Burma and that the coffee planters of Burma are not to have any benefit of the proposed cess fund.

At the same time, we strongly object to Burma being excluded in the sense that the cess is to be leviable on Indian coffee which is exported to Burma. It would be a serious breach of faith on the part of India to create a new cess and apply it as against Burma after the agreement which has been incorporated in the Draft of India and Burma Trade Regulation Order. The agreement clearly contemplates the maintenance of the status quo ante and it is absolutely against the spirit thereof to introduce and apply any new cess as against each other in the interval between the publication of the agreement and the actual separation of Burma from India. In this connection we wish to refer the House to clause 3, sub-clause (1) of the Draft Order, which reads :

" Except as otherwise provided in this Order :

(1) no customs duties or cesses shall be leviable in British India on goods imported from or exported to Burma by sea other than those, if any, leviable at the date of separation."

We also wish to refer the House to the special provisions made in the agreement as regards the cess duties on cotton, tea, and lac, which are already in existence. These provisions are contained in clause 7 of the Draft Order, and we submit that if it had been known at the time of the negotiations for the agreement that the Government of India contemplated imposing a cess on coffee, special provisions on similar lines would have been made in the agreement itself. We further submit that the proposed cess contravenes clause 4, sub-clause (2) of the Draft Order incorporating the agreement. This sub-clause reads :

" Except as otherwise provided in this Order.....

(2) all goods imported from or exported to a customs port in British India to or from a customs port in Burma shall be deemed for the purposes of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, to be goods imported from or exported to another customs port in Burma, as the case may be."

We feel, therefore, that Burma is being excluded from the scope of this Bill because the Government of India know that Burma does not export coffee, there is no cess duty to be realised there, that Burma will not grow enough coffee even for her own consumption in the foreseeable future, and that, as a result of exclusion, India would be able to have some revenue out of coffee exported to Burma. We regard this as the first and unworthy attempt at legislation to hit Burma on account of and even before separation. We only hope that this is not a foretaste of how the Government of India would honour or dishonour the trade agreement after separation. I move this amendment in the interests of justice, good faith and mutual understanding between the two countries.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Amendment moved :

" That in clause 3 of the Bill, for the words ' or to Burma ' the words ' and Burma ' be substituted."

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Sir, I was extremely sorry to hear the Mover of this motion charge the Government of India with a breach of faith in connection with the proposal to exclude Burma from the operation of this Bill. I repudiate that suggestion altogether. There is not the slightest hint of a breach of faith in the proposal to exclude Burma from the operation of this Bill, and that, for two principal reasons. One is that the parties to the trade agreement, or rather the proposed trade agreement, are the Government of Burma and the Government of India. The proposal was fairly put before the

[Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan.]

Government of Burma and whether the Government of Burma have acted in good faith towards their own people or not it is for them to say, but I do assure the Honourable Member that there has been no misunderstanding on the part of the Government of India with regard to the attitude of the Government of Burma. In reply to our telegram this is what they have said and Honourable Members can judge for themselves whether the Government of India have misunderstood their intentions :

" Your telegram, dated the 15th August, No. 7-G.C. This Government would prefer exclusion Burma from proposed Coffee Cess Act as quantity of coffee growing in Burma very small and consequently export negligible."

Secondly, the draft trade agreement says that no export duties shall be levied except those that are in operation at the date of separation. Surely it could not be expected that neither the Government of Burma nor the Government of India should do what might appear to them to be very desirable in the interests of their trade simply because from a certain date a certain agreement comes into force which will not affect conditions which might have been brought into being by that date. However, as the House will see we acted perfectly fairly towards Burma. We cabled to them the object of the Bill and the provisions that we intended to put into operation by means of this Bill and asked them whether they would wish to come within it or keep out of it and they said that they would rather keep out. The truth of the matter is not any jealousy as against the coffee growers of Burma, but that Burma appears to be in this matter self-sufficient. They do not appear to import much coffee from India nor do they appear to be exporting much coffee to other countries. Our only anxiety is that no quantity of coffee going out of India should escape cess and, therefore, there are two ways of doing it, either to levy this cess upon all quantities going into Burma or ask the Government of Burma to come into line and to agree to impose a cess upon any coffee which, after it had been sent to Burma from India, was sent out of Burma. Unless the Government of Burma are prepared to agree to this latter arrangement in order to prevent leakage and to make the levy of this cess effective, we are reduced to the position that we must exclude Burma from the scope of this Bill. I hope, Sir, the Honourable Member will realise that no sort of trick is sought to be played upon Burma and this arrangement has been arrived at in perfect good faith between the two Governments.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

" That in clause 3 of the Bill for the words ' or to Burma ' the words ' and Burma ' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

" That clause 3 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

" That clause 4 stand part of the Bill."

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrulla Khan : Sir, I want to say a few words on this clause. The Honourable Member who wanted to move the motion for reference to a Select Committee, Mr. Avinashilingam Chettiar, has had some conversation with me with regard to his anxiety as to the scope of sub-clause (i) (b) of clause 4. The Honourable Member wanted some assurance that the hope that I had expressed would be carried into effect. I am happy to be able to assure him that the Government of India are prepared to instruct the Government of Madras and the Coorg Government that the two members to be nominated under this sub-clause should be drawn from the class of Indian planters who are not members either of the United Planters Association of Southern India or of the Coffee Growers' Association.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

" That clause 4 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 4 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 5 and 6 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Mr. Ranga has just handed in an amendment to clause 7. The Chair cannot allow this to be moved as reasonable notice has not been given. He explains that he could not give notice beforehand as he was under the impression that the motion for reference to a Select Committee might be carried. He had no right to assume any such thing. The Chair cannot, therefore, allow it.

The question is :

" That clause 7 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 7 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

" That clause 8 stand part of the Bill."

Pandit Nilkantha Das : Sir, I move :

" That in sub-clause (2) of clause 8 of the Bill, for the words ' and increasing the consumption in India and elsewhere ' the words ' in places other than in India ' be substituted."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has spoken quite enough on that point.

Pandit Nilkantha Das : If this Bill were simply confined to places other than villages in India, that would cover my point.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has dealt with that point fully.

Pandit Nilkantha Das : I have not made myself clear. ....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has made his point perfectly clear.

[Mr. President.]

The question is :

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 8 of the Bill for the words 'and increasing the consumption in India and elsewhere' the words 'in places other than in India' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That clause 8 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 8 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 9 to 13 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Sir, I move :

"That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be passed."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That the Bill to provide for the creation of a fund for the promotion of the cultivation, manufacture and sale of Indian coffee be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE JUBBULPORE AND CHHATTISGARH DIVISIONS (DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS VALIDATION) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill to remove certain doubts and to validate certain proceedings of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad be taken into consideration."

Sir, the position, shortly speaking, is this. The Court in the Central Provinces had no original or appellate jurisdiction over European British subjects until 1923 when the Criminal Procedure Code was amended. By sections 4 and 266 of the Criminal Procedure Code as amended in 1923, this jurisdiction was conferred on the Judicial Commissioner's Court in the Central Provinces. Before the amendment had been passed in 1923, at a time when the Judicial Commissioner's Court had no jurisdiction over European British subjects, there was a notification by the Home Department of the Government of India, dated the 21st April, 1913, and this notification was issued under section 8 of the High Courts Act. The result of this notification was that the original and appellate jurisdiction over European British subjects in the Central Provinces was shared between the High Courts of Allahabad and Bombay, a portion going to Bombay and a portion going to Allahabad. That was the position, Sir, as a result of the notification of 1913. Now subsequent to the amendment of the Criminal Procedure Code in 1923, this notification was withdrawn by the Government of India by another notification which is dated the 1st September, 1923. This was issued under section 109 of the Government of India Act. This notification purported to end the criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects exercised in the Central Provinces by the Allahabad and Bombay High Courts. Now, Sir, recently the Government of the Central Provinces have discovered that what was happening was that, whereas the decrees nisi in divorce proceedings were going from Courts in the Central Provinces to the Judicial Commissioner (as they ought to in the opinion of the Governor General in Council), so far as the Divisions of Jubbulpore and Chhattisgarh were concerned, they were still going to the High Court of Allahabad. The situation was this, that apparently the Bombay High Court had taken the view that by the result of the subsequent notification, the Allahabad and Bombay High Courts were out of it and the whole thing ought to go to the Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces. But from these two Divisions these decrees were still going to the Allahabad High Court. Upon that, the Government of the Central Provinces formally communicated with the Chief Justice of the Allahabad High Court pointing out that, in their view, as the result of the withdrawal of this notification, the Allahabad High Court had nothing further to do and that all decrees should go before the Central Provinces Courts including the decrees of Jubbulpore and Chhattisgarh. Unfortunately, the learned Chief Justice of the Allahabad High Court took the view that, in spite of this notification, the Allahabad High Court retained jurisdiction to deal with these decrees coming from the Central Provinces, and the argument, shortly speaking, of the learned Chief Justice of that High Court was that, inasmuch as section 106 of the Government of India Act laid down that they would retain such jurisdiction as was vested in them, therefore their jurisdiction was not gone. The position, shortly, was that the view of the High Court, Bombay, the view of the Government of the Central Provinces and the view of the Governor General in Council are agreed that the Allahabad High Court should not be further troubled. The Governor General in Council has been advised that the view of the Courts of the Central Provinces and of Bombay is the correct one : and they believed that as the jurisdiction which was conferred on the Allahabad High Court was not a jurisdiction which they had by reason of a Statute or by Letters Patent but was the creature of a Government notification, it could also be destroyed or taken away by another Government notification, which in fact did issue, as I told this House, in 1923.

THE JUBBULPORE AND CHHATTISGARH DIVISIONS (DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS 1679 VALIDATION) BILL.

Now, Sir, that shortly is the position and I do not know that I should go at greater length in this matter, or place the arguments of Allahabad Court at greater length. The situation at the present moment is rather an incongruous one. While the Central Provinces as a whole is owing the allegiance to the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces, the decrees from these two divisions are going to the Allahabad High Court. All that is wanted by this Bill is that we want to remove this doubt and to validate such proceedings as obtained in the divorce cases where European British subjects are concerned. Sir, this is the nature of this Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill to remove certain doubts and to validate certain proceedings of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad be taken into consideration."

Mr. Sri Prakasa (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move :

[Mr. Sri Prakasa.]

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar, the Honourable Sir Henry Craik, Sir Cowasji Jehangir, Dr. P. N. Banerjee, Mr. G. Morgan, Mr. Ghansiam Singh Gupta, Khan Sahib Nawab Siddique Ali Khan, Mr. N. M. Joshi, Mr. D. J. N. Lee, Mr. L. Owen, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, Mr. Sami Vencatachalam Chetty and the Mover and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

In moving the reference of this Bill to a Select Committee, I intend to take the House fully into my confidence and to state quite candidly the exact purpose that lies behind this motion. So far as I am able to judge, the High Court of Allahabad is guilty of a serious lapse. It has taken unto itself powers that do not belong to it, and that had definitely been taken away from it by law. I read in this Bill the desire of the Government that this House should condone the serious mistakes of the Allahabad High Court. As some people are very sensitive where Courts are concerned and lawyers are terribly afraid of their High Courts, I have taken very great care that in the Committee that I have proposed there should be no lawyer.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I thought the Honourable Member had included me.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I had excluded the Honourable the Law Member and even myself from my original list ; but those, who are more familiar with the ways of this Legislature than myself, informed me that the law demanded that the Law Member must be in every Select Committee ; and that convention required that the Mover also should also be there ! So now the eminent lawyer in the form of the Law Member is there and a very humble lawyer who has only a very nodding acquaintance with law, namely, myself, is also there. Sir, I think it is a serious situation that the Allahabad High Court has created. Ordinarily, the maxim is that ignorance of law is no excuse. For the layman, evidently, it is no excuse ; but for Judges who are paid to administer the law, whose sole business is to know the law and to interpret and apply the law, ignorance of law seems to be a sufficient excuse for breach of law ; and Government feels justified coming and taking the help of the Legislature in order to condone the wrongs that the judges have done. So far as I am concerned, I can be no party to this. I personally think that the law-maker is higher in status than the law-interpreter and the law-applier and, therefore, I think the Legislature is a body which can certainly discuss the conduct of the Judges of High Courts.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : No, no. The Honourable Member cannot do that.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I know I am treading on very delicate ground ; but, Sir, I shall try to say as much as you can possibly allow me to say about the High Court of Allahabad. Judicially and extra-judicially, the conduct of the High Court has not been above suspicion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has started on wrong lines already. The Chair hopes the Honourable Member has carefully read Article 57 of the Manual of Business and Procedure.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Sir, the book is not before me, but I take it that this Article debars any reference to High Court Judges.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Then, this should be read out. It says :

"A Member while speaking shall not.....

(iv) reflect upon the conduct of His Majesty the King or the Governor General or any Governor or any Court of Law in the exercise of its judicial functions."

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Then, Sir, I should like to ask for your ruling on a definite subject. Is this Bill itself in order ? Does it not itself question the judgment of the Court and cast reflections on the conduct of the judges ? If that is so, then you may kindly rule the whole Bill out of order and I will have nothing more to say.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Bill is perfectly in order as this Assembly is quite competent to declare that certain proceedings are valid, and it is for the House to say whether such a declaration should be made or not.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : If, Sir, Government are authorised, as I understand, from what you have just said, to declare that certain proceedings of Courts of law had been invalid and that they should be validated, then I hope you will allow me to claim the right that as a Member of this Legislature I have also the right to say.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The proceedings are sought to be declared valid and not invalid.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : But, Sir, this Bill, so far as I can see, seeks to validate certain acts of the Allahabad High Court which the Government thinks were invalid. Is not that the position ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : To remove doubts, as two constructions are possible.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : That may not be calling a spade a spade ; that may be calling it an agricultural instrument. Removing doubts means the same thing as declaring those acts to be invalid, otherwise where is the use of the words 'validating certain proceedings of the High Court'. If these proceedings were not invalid, there is no necessity of validating them. I should like to have your ruling before I proceed.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair has already given its ruling that this Bill seeks to validate certain proceedings of the Allahabad High Court and it is competent for this Assembly to pass a law to that effect.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Now, Sir, if this Assembly happens not to have confidence in any particular High Court, I hope it has the right to say that it is not going to validate those proceedings.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair has given its ruling and the Honourable Member must proceed on the basis of that ruling.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I will confess straightaway, Sir, that my law is very rusty and you must stop me as soon as you feel that I am on the wrong track.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Leader of the House) : Sir, with your permission, I desire to make a statement.

A representation signed on behalf of all the parties, Congress, Independent, Nationalist Congress and Europeans as also by several Members not belonging to any Group has been made to me that five Bills relating to social matters, viz.,

- (1) Removal of social disabilities among certain classes of Hindus (By Mr. M. C. Rajah),
- (2) To amend the law governing Hindu Women's rights to Property (By Dr. G. V. Deshmukh),
- (3) Validity of marriages among Arya Samajists (By Dr. N. B. Khare),
- (4) Validity of marriages between different castes of Hindus (By Dr. Bhagavan Das),
- (5) To amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (By Mr. B. Das), may be set down on an official day. On the understanding that this will not be referred to as a precedent laying down a principle, I intend to put down these five Bills for introduction only on the agenda for Wednesday, the 25th September at the end of the business. As the agenda paper for that day has been issued, I propose to issue a supplementary paper including these items.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock, on Tuesday, the 24th September, 1935.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ESTABLISHMENT OF AN INSTITUTE FOR ANIMAL AND HUMAN NUTRITION RESEARCH.

621. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research has before it a proposal for the establishment of an Institute for Animal Nutrition Research and Human Nutrition Research ;
- (b) whether the Linlithgow Commission urged the establishment of both the branches simultaneously and why there has been delay in this matter ; and
- (c) whether they propose to take any action in this direction ; and if so, when ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a), (b) and (c). The Royal Commission on Agriculture in India referred to the work being done on animal nutrition problems in the Physiological Chemist's Section at Bangalore and to the investigations conducted under the Indian Research Fund Association into deficiency diseases and malnutrition of human beings. They recommended the development of both branches of nutrition work and suggested the ultimate establishment of two institutes. A scheme was prepared for the establishment of a Central Research Institute for animal nutrition as early as 1929 but it could not be proceeded with for lack of funds. The matter has been considered at frequent intervals since but the financial obstacle has, unfortunately, persisted. A fresh scheme for founding an animal nutrition institute on a modest scale is engaging the active consideration of Government at the present moment. Human nutrition work is being continued at Coonoor.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With regard to animal nutrition research, what is the financial commitment of the modest scheme which is now being considered by Government ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : Speaking from memory, something like 2½ to 3 lakhs non-recurring and about a lakh a year recurring.

( 1685 )

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair will try to do that.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I simply say this that we have a High Court in India which, it seems, has been doing things which it has no power to do. I submit that opportunity should be taken of this to review the situation and to see whether the High Court has not been exceeding its powers in other directions as well.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That the Chair cannot allow the Honourable Member to do. The Honourable Member knows that perfectly well.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I know nothing. I simply know this that I have personally very little confidence in the Allahabad High Court.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair would ask the Honourable Member not to make such reflections on any High Court.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I wish to ask you, Sir, whether I can at this moment refer to any action taken by the Allahabad High Court in its administrative capacity or not ; not in its judicial capacity but in its administrative capacity.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : No, it cannot be done. The speech must be relevant to the subject matter before the House.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I take it that I can only say that I am against the Bill and that the proceedings of the Allahabad High Court should not be validated.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair cannot find argument for the Honourable Member.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I do not want you, Sir, to find out arguments for me. I have myself got plenty of them.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Provided they are within the Rules and Standing Orders.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Personally I think this Bill is against the Rules and Standing Orders. I do not think the Government can question any action that a High Court has chosen to take. According to the Standing Orders that you have read out, the Government is debarred from taking such a course. I now find myself at a loss as to how to proceed while speaking on my motion. I wish I had consulted some eminent lawyer before I tabled this motion because I really thought that I should be able to review the conduct of the Judges of the Allahabad High Court in connection with this Bill. But that I take it you will not permit me to do.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair certainly would not allow the Honourable Member to do it. The Chair has made this perfectly clear.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Therefore, I can only say that this Bill should be referred to the Select Committee that I have proposed so that the Select Committee might be able to add some clauses to this Bill and may find out other acts that need validation and bring them before the House in the form of a consolidated Bill. I personally will say that there is no use in validating the particular proceedings which seem to be exercising the mind of the Government. They only deal, I take it, with a few divorce cases. I cannot understand really why the Judges of the Allahabad High Court should have exceeded their powers particularly in divorce proceedings. These are always very unfortunate proceedings and a lot of dirty linen is washed in public and many scandalous statements are made and heard in such proceedings. I am surprised that in this particular class of cases only the Judges should have exceeded their powers. Supposing we do not validate the act, what happens ? One of three things can happen. One is that the divorcees can regard the judgments given as invalid and, therefore, of no effect and if they can possibly make up their differences, they can do so and live as husbands and wives again. I think that can happen. No harm will be done to any one, and much good to the persons concerned. Another thing that can happen is that if they still do not like each other, they continue to live separately. If they choose to live separately in that case too, no harm is done to any one else. Thirdly, it is possible that taking that the High Court has acted within its powers, they have married other parties. Well, then, it is the concern of no one to interfere in their affairs. Therefore no trouble can possibly arise to any party if this Bill is not passed and if the proceedings are not validated. I do not see any reason why these proceedings should be validated. If the High Court has done anything which it ought not to have done, let it suffer. If the parties have gone to a High Court which had no power to decide, on this question, then let the parties suffer. I do not see why the Indian Legislature should be called upon to condone acts of a High Court or a party in cases which cannot but involve scandal. I, therefore, propose that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee ; and if this Select Committee thinks it proper, it may perhaps see other things which the Allahabad High Court has done and which it may find it necessary to bring before this House. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of the Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar, the Honourable Sir Henry Craik, Sir Cowasji Jehangir, Dr. P. N. Banerjee, Mr. G. Morgan, Mr. Ghansiam Singh Gupta, Khan Sahib Nawab Siddique Ali Khan, Mr. N. M. Joshi, Mr. D. J. N. Lee, Mr. L. Owen, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, Mr. Sami Venkatachalam Chetty and the Mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five.”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That the Bill to remove certain doubts and to validate certain proceedings of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad be taken into consideration.”

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Sir, before I proceed further with the matter today, I have to submit that a certain point has been put before me by the learned Leader of the Opposition and that may require a slight amendment of this Act which we can do on Wednesday if we come to the conclusion that it ought to be done for greater safety. I would, therefore, ask you, Sir, not to proceed with the further stages of the Bill today, as only two minutes are left to five.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government do their best to make provision for it in the next year's budget, in view of the very great importance of this subject for the cattle of this country ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : My Honourable friend will realise that at this stage it is not possible to make a commitment because it is impossible to foresee what the financial position is going to be next year ; but I can assure him that the matter will receive the most sympathetic consideration.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : As regards human nutrition, may I know who is in charge of the work at Coonoor now, and are Government or is he considering the desirability of evolving a nutritious diet on a scale which the poor people in this country can afford, and make it available to the people as early as possible ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The successor of Sir Robert Mackerrison at Coonoor is a gentleman named Ackroyd who has very wide experience of nutrition work abroad ; and with regard to the second point mentioned by my Honourable friend, I believe he has already taken up the matter and actually issued a pamphlet showing how a man may live on two annas a day and have a very nutritious diet.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I ask whether the results of this research will be made available to the people in all the languages of the country, as early as possible ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : As my Honourable friend is aware, that is primarily a matter for the Local Governments, but I shall have the suggestion of having it translated into the different languages considered.

PROHIBITION OF WOMEN FROM WORKING UNDERGROUND.

622. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether their attention has been drawn to the statement made by the Under Secretary of State for India in the House of Commons that two women were killed in a recent mining disaster in Bihar ;
- (b) when they propose to prohibit women working underground ; and
- (c) the reasons for delay in this matter ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes.

(b) The employment of women underground in mines was prohibited with effect from the 1st July, 1929, except in the coal mines in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa and the Central Provinces and the salt mines in the Punjab. In the case of these exempted mines the regulations promulgated by the Government of India in 1929 provided for a gradual percentage reduction each year in the number of women employed underground so as to lead to their total elimination by the 1st July, 1939. The question of advancing this date is at present under the consideration of the Government of India in consultation with the Local Governments and the Mining Boards concerned.

(c) There has been no delay.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know what is the number of women or the percentage of women now working in the exempted mines, up to the latest date for which figures are available ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I am afraid, I have not got that in my head, but I imagine it is somewhere about 14 per cent.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know if Government will take immediate steps to prohibit the employment of women without waiting for 1939 ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : As I said at the end of the answer I gave to part (b), we are considering this question in consultation with the Local Governments and the Mining Boards concerned. As the Honourable Member is probably aware, a Convention was adopted at Geneva on this subject this year and will have to be considered in that connection.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : When will Government be able to bring up legislation, if necessary, or take administrative action to prohibit the employment of women underground ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Legislation is not actually necessary, as the Government of India have been invested with rule-making powers under the Mines Act. Any rules that are published would require to have three months' notice after the Mining Boards have been consulted.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government expedite their decision in this matter as much as possible ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Yes, Sir. We are considering it at the moment, and I hope as soon as we are relieved from the arduous labours of this Session, we will be able to come to a decision.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Was any compensation paid to the families of these women ? If so, how much ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I cannot say ; it would depend on whether their dependants filed applications under the Workmen's Compensation Act or not.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Have Government tried to ascertain the facts ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I see no reason to do so. Not only is it open to them to file applications but the Commissioner is specially entrusted with the duty of calling the attention of the dependants to the possibilities under that Act.

MANUFACTURE OF GUNS IN INDIAN ORDNANCE FACTORIES FOR THE USE OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

623. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the extent to which guns are manufactured in Indian Ordnance Factories for the use of the Indian Army ;
- (b) the results thereof ; and
- (c) when all India's requirements in this respect are expected to be provided locally ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a), (b) and (c). Practically all the guns required for the use of the Army in India are already manufactured in the Indian Ordnance Factories with satisfactory results.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What is the significance of the word "practically" ? What are the gun requirements which are not wholly manufactured in this country ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The only exception is that when the army takes into use a new pattern of weapon, we have to begin by getting that weapon from the manufacturers in England up to a certain quantity ; and then we get the patterns out here and make them up in our own factories. It is only for a limited period that we buy in England.

GOVERNMENT'S POLICY WITH REGARD TO THE TRIBES ON THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.

624. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) their definite policy with regard to the tribes on the North-West Frontier ;

(b) the cost incurred by Government in Frontier operations during the last three years ; and

(c) whether they propose to replace their present policy by policy of friendly adjustment with the tribes, and if not, why not ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given on the 12th September, 1933, to Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad's question No. 880 and to the reply given by me to a similar question during the present Session ?

(b) The expenditure on operations on the Frontier during the last three years amounted to Rs. 39.64 lakhs. This includes the cost of road construction.

(c) The present policy of Government is in effect one of friendly adjustment with the tribes and the question of changing it does not, therefore, arise.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state if his attention has been drawn to an article in the United Service Magazine by "Mouse" forecasting the policy of the Government in the tribal area ? He has stated how to subdue the tribes one after the other, and to create military governors there and to charge no revenue or taxes. May I ask the Honourable Member if Government, by creating these military areas, have got at the back of their minds to control and direct these tribesmen from time to time into the administered area, to loot there and thus constantly keep up the disturbances on the Frontier and further always to create suspicion in the minds of the Hindus and the rest of India ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : My answer to the first part of the question is that the article in question, of which I have heard, represents the views of a private individual only, and Government are in no way responsible for it. The second part of the question contains a number of implications and insinuations, and, therefore, does not call for a reply.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I ask if it is not a fact that the people in tribal areas pay customs duty as the customs barrier is on the other side ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : Certainly, on such goods which they consume which come through Indian ports of entry and are dutiable.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : So they do pay taxes ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : Indirectly, yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to clause (c) of this question, I did use the phrase "friendly adjustment" myself ; but I am asking whether the Honourable the Foreign Secretary understands that phrase in the sense in which I used it : is it the policy of the Government to recognise the independent or quasi-independent position of these tribes, and come to a settlement with them as between friends or allies, or is it their policy to subjugate them and make them real subjects of the British Raj ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I do not think I have anything to add to the very full statements of policy already made by me during this Session. I think that I have understood what the Honourable Member means by "friendly adjustment" and have replied to it, taking it in the ordinary plain sense of the expression.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Do Government, therefore, recognise that these tribes might remain independent and yet friendly with the British Government ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : The object of Government is that these tribes should be on friendly terms with the Government. Government do not admit that these tribes are independent tribes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What is their political status ? Are they independent, quasi-independent, or are they subjects of the British Government ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : That has already been answered on a previous occasion in this Assembly.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I do not understand that answer : I want an answer which I as a layman can understand : what is the political status of these tribes, according to the British dictionary ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : The status is that of British protected persons, or it was that until the new Constitution Act ; there has been some alteration of status in the new Constitution Act ; but, at the moment, I am not prepared to go into a dissertation on the legal niceties of the position : that is rather a matter for the representative of the Legislative Department.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government give up fighting these tribes then, and sue for peace with them ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : Government do not fight the tribes : they fight the Government from time to time.

ENQUIRY INTO THE INCOME-TAX SYSTEM IN INDIA.

625. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) when the enquiry into the Income-tax system in India foreshadowed by the Honourable the Finance Member last April will be started ;

- (b) what its composition and terms of reference will be ; and
- (c) what opportunities will be given for non-official opinion to express itself before the body conducting the enquiry ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I would refer the Honourable Member to previous answers on this subject—in particular those to No. 35 and No. 367.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is there any further answer to clause (c) of the question ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No : that is dealt with pretty fully in the answers to which I have referred.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have Government come to any conclusion as to the nature or extent of non-official opinion which will be made available in this inquiry ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : A communication has been addressed to some representative commercial bodies suggesting that, in the first instance, they should send written memoranda, and that, in the centres to which the experts are going, they can make oral representations.

ENQUIRY INTO THE FINANCIAL RESOURCES OF THE PROVINCES ON THE EVE OF THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

626. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) when the inquiry into the financial resources of the Provinces on the eve of the new constitution coming into force would be held ;
- (b) what its composition and terms of reference will be ; and
- (c) whether the enquiry will include financial experts of the Provinces and also of the Federation or only of the Provinces ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : An announcement on the subject has already been made.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Sir, I am asking only clause (c) of this question, as an announcement has already been made by the Government with reference to clauses (a) and (b).

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I was giving an answer to the whole question by asking the Honourable Member to wait till the short notice question had been asked and answered : but I am not sure that that particular point is included in that question. But that is covered by the terms of the announcement that the inquiry will be conducted by one expert who represents neither the provinces nor the centre.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I ask with regard to clause (c) of the question, whether financial experts of the provinces or the Federation or of both will be associated as assessors or in any other advisory capacity with this gentleman ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No : I think their association with the inquiry will be in the capacity of witnesses.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : There will be no advice offered to him either by this Government or by the Provincial Governments ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Call it advice if you like : I call it evidence.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will they submit memoranda to him ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Indubitably.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will they be offered as witnesses for oral examination by this gentleman ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have not the slightest doubt, yes.

REVISION AND CLASSIFICATION OF GOODS TRANSPORTED ON RAILWAYS.

627. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether they are considering the revision and classification of goods transported on the Railways ;
- (b) when they propose to come to a conclusion thereon ; and
- (c) whether opportunities would be given for non-officials to express their opinion before they make up their mind in the matter ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) and (c). I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply I gave to his question No. 127 on the 5th September, 1935.

(b) I regret I am unable to say now when a conclusion will be reached.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know whether Government realise the need for expedition in this matter, and may I know the reason for the inability of my Honourable friend to make a statement as to when they propose to come to a conclusion on this important matter ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Sir, Government fully realise the need for expedition in this matter : the only reason why I am unable to give a reply to his question is that I am not an astrologer.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Apart from being an astrologer, does it require anything else for the Honourable Member to decide, when they can come to a conclusion on matters pending before them ? It does seem to me that this House should be treated with a little more courtesy, and that answers should be given to questions which have been pending for a long time with Government.

Mr. P. R. Rau : It is impossible for me to forecast the future in this matter.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will my Honourable friend tell me what are the obstacles in the way of coming to a conclusion in the next two or three months ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The question is far too complicated to expect that we shall be able to arrive at a conclusion in the next two or three months. The first thing that Government is trying to ascertain is what statistics would be required as a preliminary measure before we can consider the proposals to reclassify the whole of the goods classification : and on that we are awaiting a report from the Indian Railway Conference Association, which we expect will be received in October. It is only after that report has been received and examined that we shall be in a position to settle what is the procedure we shall adopt.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government take every possible step to expedite a conclusion on this matter ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Yes.

INDIAN AND EUROPEAN OFFICERS WORKING IN THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

628. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- how many Indian and European Officers have been working in the Finance Department (Civil) of the Government of India in Simla and Delhi for the past fifteen financial years, their designations and their salaries ;
- whether there is any policy of Europeanisation being followed in respect of the staffing of this Department ; and
- if so, the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) A statement is laid on the table.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise.

Statement.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Question No. 629.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Sir, before I answer this question, there is a point of order that I want to raise. I have noticed that some of the Honourable Members opposite are in the habit, after questions have been put and answers have been given, of making comments on the nature of the answers that have been given : sometimes they are even of a complimentary nature—as was the case with regard to my last reply : very often they are otherwise, but that is not my objection : it is open to them to do what they like ; but I have noticed that these comments also go down in the reports and are printed. These are not parts of the questions and answers, and I respectfully request that you will be pleased to give a ruling as to whether these should be printed or not. I am not objecting to Honourable Members making comments—they can please themselves ; but these comments should not form part of the printed record of questions and answers.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : As a matter of fact, any comment or criticisms made, after a question has been answered, cannot be treated as part of the proceedings; and I, therefore, direct that such comments should not be embodied in the published proceedings.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIANS AS CHAIRMEN OF PORT TRUSTS IN INDIA.

629. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to letter No. 232-P. & L.-5/35, dated the 18th July, 1935, from the Government of India, to the Indian Merchants' Chamber, Bombay, will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the reasons why they consider it will be contrary alike to public policy and to interests of Ports to make a statutory provision that the Chairmen of Port Trusts shall be Indians ;
- (b) whether they have considered the fact that so far there have been no Indian Chairmen of Port Trusts though these Port Trusts are to serve the interests of India first ; and
- (c) whether they propose to take any action with a view to satisfy the legitimate demands of Indians that the Chairmen of Port Trusts shall, as far as possible, be Indians ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to section 96 of the Government of India Act, 1919, and section 111 (1) of the new Government of India Act. Moreover, any restriction of the kind contemplated would limit the field of selection, and any limitation of the field of selection would react against the best interests of the ports.

(b) It is not true that there have been no Indian Chairmen of Port Trusts.

(c) I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given to his question No. 731 on the 8th March, 1935, and to the supplementary questions and answers thereto, where the whole matter is discussed in great detail.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know what are the reasons which prompted the Government to say that to make a statutory provision that Chairmen of Port Trusts shall be Indians was contrary to public policy ? What is the public policy which Government had in mind ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That was clause (a) of the question : I have read out a detailed reply to it.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : My Honourable friend has given reference only to sections of the old Act and the new Act. Government published a communiqué, if my memory serves me aright, stating that a provision like this is contrary to public policy. I am asking, Sir, what, apart from the statutory prohibition in the matter, is the public policy in the mind of the Government contrary to which they thought this provision would be, if it was made ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : In addition to the provisions of the Statute to which I have made reference in my answer to part (a) of the question, I believe I did say that any restriction of the kind contemplated would limit the field of selection, and any limitation of the field of selection would react against the best interests of the ports.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Does not public policy in India at least, Sir, require that Chairmen of Port Trusts should be Indians ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I have no doubt, Sir, that, as time passes and a larger number of Indians can be appointed to the Port Trusts on a larger number of occasions than heretofore, the Chairmen will be Indians.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What are the reasons, Sir, why Government consider that a statutory provision to this effect would adversely affect the interests of the ports ? Will not Indian Chairmen guarantee the interests of ports, at least as diligently and as efficiently as European Chairmen ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : It is a question of selection in each case out of a certain circle of people who are likely to serve the interests of ports best, and out of that circle it might be possible that on some occasions a European would be the best choice and on some occasions an Indian would be the best choice.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is it the case of the Government, Sir, that, so far no Indian has been available to serve in the various Port Trusts of India,—competent, efficient and honest enough to be a Chairman of the Port Trust ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That is not the Government case.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Then, why was no Indian appointed so far to any of the Port Trusts ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : There is another question put down on that, and it will be answered when it is reached.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I want to ask why the Government do not propose to take any action.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I beg your pardon,—it is part of this question. It is not true that there has been no Indian Chairmen of Port Trusts.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : How many Indians have been appointed Chairmen of Ports Trusts so far ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I believe on three or four occasions.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : In Bombay, has there been any so far ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : In Calcutta ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No. In Aden and Chittagong, there were Indian Chairmen.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : In Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, or Karachi, the most important ports, there have been no Indian Chairmen ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That follows from my previous reply.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I want to ask about part (c),—as to why Government don't propose to take any action to satisfy the legitimate demands of Indians that Chairmen of Port Trusts shall, as far as possible, be Indians.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That has been fully answered. (Laughter from the European Benches.)

STATEMENT OF THE JAPANESE AMBASSADOR IN BOMBAY ABOUT THE INDO-JAPANESE PACT.

630. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the statement of the Japanese Ambassador in Bombay early this month about the Indo-Japanese Pact ;

(b) whether they propose to start negotiations on that basis ; and

(c) when they propose to come to a conclusion in that matter ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) The Honourable Member no doubt refers to a statement by His Excellency Monsieur Matsushima, an officer of the Japanese Foreign Office, inspecting Japanese Consulates abroad.

If that is so, (b) and (c). Government do not consider that a personal expression of opinion by a Japanese official provides a basis for negotiations.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Apart from that, will Government consider the desirability of starting negotiations with Japan, considering the amount and the nature of trade between the two countries and their geographical position ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : When the present Indo-Japanese Trade Agreement is drawing towards the close of its period, naturally Government will have to consider something of that description.

FEETHAM COMMISSION REPORT ON THE OCCUPATION OF COLOURED PERSONS OF PROCLAIMED LAND IN TRANSVAAL.

631. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they have received the Feetham Commission Report appointed to inquire into the occupation of coloured persons of proclaimed land in Transvaal ;

(b) whether copies of the report will be made available to the Members of the Legislative Assembly ; and

(c) what action they propose to take thereon ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) and (b). Only Parts I and II of the Report of the Transvaal Asiatic Land Tenure Act Commission have been published ; copies of these have been placed in the Library of the House.

(c) The Government of India await the views of their Agent in South Africa and the local Indian community. After consideration of these they will take such action as may appear desirable.

CANCELLATION OF THE PASSPORT OF MR. MASANI OF BOMBAY.

†632. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the questions and answers in the House of Commons about the impounding of the passport of Mr. Masani, Joint Secretary of the All-India Socialist Party ;

(b) in what terms the request of the Government of India to the Secretary of State to impound his passport was couched, and whether their correspondence on the subject will be placed on the table of the House ;

(c) the reasons for this request ;

(d) whether it is a fact that the Government of India considered that Mr. Masani's activities in connection with communism made it desirable that he should not travel abroad and, if so, what the basis of this opinion of the Government of India was ;

(e) whether the Government of India have come to the conclusion that communists do not deserve a passport for travelling abroad ; and

(f) whether they have come to the conclusion that persons holding communist opinions are to be treated differentially by the Government of India and they are to be punished for the holding of opinions ?

INCREASE IN PENSIONS OF LOWER-PAID POSTAL EMPLOYEES.

633. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they have taken any action in regard to the increasing of pensions of lower-paid postal employees ; and

(b) when they propose to take up and decide this matter ?

Mr. G. V. Bewoor : The Honourable the Finance Member is going to answer another question on the same subject a little later and I ask the Honourable Member to await that answer.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know, Sir, whether the Postal Department has no answer in this matter ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : It is a general question.

Mr. G. V. Bewoor : It is a general question referring to inferior servants, and Mr. Joshi has question No. 642 on the same subject. The Honourable the Finance Member will reply to it and that reply will cover this question as well.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : My question is about the postal employees.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 532 answered on the 20th September, 1935.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : My answer will cover postal employees also.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I want an answer from the Department concerned as to what is going to be done with regard to postal employees ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That is part of another question.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : No, Sir ; I do not concede that it is part of another question. The Finance Department for financial reasons may not agree to it, but I want the Postal Department to press this question.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Perhaps the Honourable Member will wait and see what the answer is.

FALL IN EXPORTS AND RISE IN IMPORTS.

634. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the fact that the fall in exports in the quarter of April-June from India amounted to Rs. 11.92 crores, i.e., 47 per cent. as compared with the same period of last year ;

(b) whether even gold exports are falling ; and

(c) whether imports have been steadily increasing by Rs. 2 crores during the last two months ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) The total exports of private merchandise and treasure during the quarter April-June, 1935, amounted to Rs. 43.89 crores as compared with Rs. 54.32 crores in the corresponding months of 1934, a decrease of Rs. 10.43 crores or 19 per cent. This decrease was, however, due to a fall in the exports of gold as indicated in part (b) of the reply. The exports of private merchandise during the period April-June, 1935, actually showed an increase of Rs. 98 lakhs or about three per cent. as compared with the corresponding period of 1934, the export figures for the two periods being Rs. 39.04 and Rs. 38.06 crores, respectively. The latter figure is for the earlier period.

(b) Exports of gold during April-June, 1935, were valued at Rs. 4.09 crores as compared with Rs. 15.70 crores during the corresponding period of 1934. In July, 1935, there was, however, a marked increase when the exports amounted to Rs. 6.04 crores as compared with Rs. 4.09 crores during the quarter ending June, 1935, and Rs. 5.83 crores in the corresponding month of 1934.

(c) No. During the months of June and July, 1935, the latest for which figures are available, the imports amounted to Rs. 9.92 and 10.06 crores, respectively, as compared with Rs. 9.56 and 9.90 crores in the corresponding months of 1934.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to the answers to clauses (a) and (b) of the question, Sir, in view of the fact that in spite of the increase in the export of private merchandise on the whole, the exports have been falling, will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state what steps Government have taken or contemplate taking, with a view to redressing the balance of trade ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That refers to the decrease in the export of gold, and I think that is a question for the Honourable the Finance Member to answer.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : No, Sir. My point is that the entire value of exports, in spite of increase in the export of private merchandise, has fallen. May I know, in view of that fall in the total value of exports, what steps have Government taken or they propose taking in order to redress the inequality ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : As I have said, that is a matter for the Finance Department.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is not the Commerce Member concerned with the export and import trade of this country ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Yes, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am asking him, therefore, whether he contemplates taking any steps to promote the export trade of this country apart from gold ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Apart from the exports of gold, if the question is confined to that, I have on several occasions submitted to Honourable Members the various steps the Government of India have taken or contemplate taking and the difficulties that exist with regard to certain steps that have been suggested by Honourable Members opposite with regard to agreements with various countries. I thought the Honourable Member's question was directed to the export of gold, and that is why I stated that that part of the question would be answered by the Honourable the Finance Member.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government take steps, in view of these disturbing figures, to promote the export trade of this country ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Some of these are in the stage of correspondence and negotiations with foreign countries. It is not only the Government at this end which can expedite these steps, but they must await the pleasure of the Governments of the countries with whom they are carrying on negotiations.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : May I also add that I do not know in what respect the Honourable Member finds the figures disturbing, but so far there has been no difficulty in India buying foreign exchange at a good price.

REGULATION OF THE BARTER OF IMPORTED GOODS AGAINST EXPORTS IN ITALY.

635. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether their attention has been drawn to the Ministerial Decree having been promulgated by the Government of Italy with the object of regulating the barter of imported goods against exports ;

(b) whether they have examined this matter carefully ; and

(c) what action they propose to take to safeguard Indian interests ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The arrangements for private barter of goods came into force only very recently and there is no indication of their having seriously affected Indian export trade with Italy. The Government of India are, however, carefully watching the whole situation arising out of the restrictive measures imposed by Italy with a view to taking such action as may be desirable in the interests of Indian trade.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What are the latest figures of Indian exports to Italy up to the time for which figures are available to the Honourable the Commerce Member ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Does the Honourable Member want a comparison of the figures or does he want the latest figures ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : The latest figures.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The latest figures for the period April to July of 1935, are, exports to Italy, 1,72,02,643, imports from Italy, 58,33,360.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Has there been a fall, or a rise or is it stationary ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I did think that the Honourable Member would want a comparison, and I can give him a comparison of the figures. For the corresponding period of 1933, that is to say, April to July, 1933, the figures are as follows. Exports to Italy, 1,81,68,712 ; imports from Italy, 71,50,333. The balance in that year in favour of India was 1,10,18,379. In the corresponding period of 1934, that is to say, April to July 1934, exports to Italy, 1,84,20,287 ; imports from Italy, 79,94,480. The balance in favour of India was 1,04,25,807. For 1935 I have given the figures already. The balance in favour of India was 1,13,69,283,—larger than either in 1933 or 1934.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not a fact that our exports of ground-nut to Italy have been falling ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That does not arise out of this question.

STORES FOR RAILWAYS PURCHASED THROUGH THE INDIAN STORES DEPARTMENT.

636. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- the extent to which stores purchases for Indian Railways are being made through the Indian Stores Department ;
- the reasons why all such purchases are not being made through the Stores Department ; and
- whether Government are prepared to consider the desirability of using the Indian Stores Department only for this purpose ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) During 1934-35, the percentage of stores purchased by State-managed Railways, through the Indian Stores Department, was 31½ per cent. of the total. This percentage has been calculated on the total purchases of stores made by those railways. There are, however, certain classes of stores, which are not handled by the Indian Stores Department, such as stone, bricks, lime, ballast, etc. Also the purchase of certain stores (namely, rails, fishplates, wagons and underframes, sleepers and coal) is centralised under the Railway Board. These items should be excluded in forming an idea of the extent to which the Railway purchases have been transferred to the Indian Stores Department. The proportion of Indian Stores Department purchases on this basis may be taken to be 60 per cent. approximately.

(b) and (c). The policy of Government is to make all purchases for State-managed Railways through the Indian Stores Department when any advantage is gained thereby either to railways or to the State as a whole. To achieve this, periodical meetings are held between the Railway Board and the Chief Controller of Stores, Indian Stores Department, to consider what additional items of stores can be handed over to the Indian Stores Department for purchase.

So far as Company-managed Railways are concerned, their contracts with the Secretary of State do not permit Government to give them instructions with regard to the methods of purchase.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know, so far as these purchases are centralised in the Railway Board, whether they are all made through the Indian Stores Department ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No, Sir. They are made by the Railway Board themselves.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Not through the Indian Stores Department ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know the reason why the Railway Board do not utilise the machinery of the Indian Stores Department for their purchases ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : There is no special advantage in that, for instance, take the case of coal. There is no special advantage gained by entrusting the purchase of coal to the Indian Stores Department. Take the rails for instance. The Indian Stores Department inspect the rails but the purchase is made under the terms of a contract arranged between the Railway Board and the Tatas.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : In view of the fact that the Indian Stores Department is being maintained by Government, will the Railway Board consider the making of purchases through them wherever there is no disadvantage to the railways ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have already said that the policy of the Government is to entrust the purchase to the Indian Stores Department whenever any advantage is gained thereby either to the railways or to the State.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know, with regard to Company-managed Railways, if any proportion of their purchases is made through the Indian Stores Department, or are they all made outside ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : A certain proportion is being purchased by the Company-managed Railways through the Indian Stores Department, and I believe that that percentage is increasing.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will the Railway Board urge upon the Company-managed Railways, apart from compelling them, to make as many purchases as possible, through the Indian Stores Department wherever, as the Railway Board have laid down, there is advantage to the Company-managed Railways?

Mr. P. R. Rau : We have already done that, and we propose to continue exercising whatever pressure we can bring to bear upon them for that purpose.

MANUFACTURE OF LOCOMOTIVE BOILERS AND LOCOMOTIVES IN INDIA.

637. *Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) to what extent, if any, Locomotive Boilers and Locomotives are being manufactured in India ;
- (b) whether the Railway Board have examined the position ; what their conclusions are ; and
- (c) when Government hope to make arrangements for manufacturing all Locomotive Boilers and Locomotives in India for their Railways ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) From 1930-31 to 1934-35 an average of thirteen locomotives together with their boilers have been built per annum in the Ajmer Workshops of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway.

(b) and (c). I would refer the Honourable Member to the speech made by the Honourable the Railway Member on the 4th of September on the subject.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have the Government considered the position arising out of the passing of that Resolution by this House ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Do the Government propose to consider that Resolution passed by this House ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I have nothing to add to what I have stated in my speech on the Resolution.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : The Resolution was passed after the Honourable Member's speech. My question is whether Government propose to consider the Resolution which was passed ? His speech was made before the passing of the Resolution. I am asking whether after the passing of the Resolution the Government propose to consider this. I am entitled to an answer on that point.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Nothing that was said during the course of the debate has served to change my view in that respect.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Has the passing of the Resolution produced any effect on the Honourable the Commerce Member's mind ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, except to think that on occasions this House is apt to take a very unreasonable view of things.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : On a point of order, Sir. Is it right on the part of any Honourable Member to characterise any Resolution of this House as unreasonable ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : There can be no reflection made by any Honourable Member on this House.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I was asked a particular question as to what effect the passing of the Resolution had on my mind. If I had to be truthful I had to say what effect it had on my mind. If the Honourable Member is prepared to withdraw the question I am prepared to withdraw the answer. If the question is repeated, I will have to give the same answer. And what answer can I give except to say what effect it had on my mind ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I submit, Sir, that the Honourable Member must withdraw his answer.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Then the Honourable Member cannot insist on asking what effect it had on my mind.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Whatever the effect might be on the mind of any Honourable Member, he cannot express in this House any reflection on the House.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : My reply is that I refuse to answer that question.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I want the Honourable Member to withdraw the word he has used. The word has been used and it has gone into the records. The Honourable Member must withdraw.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I cannot give an answer to that question except the one I have given as it relates to the effect it had on my mind.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I insist that the Honourable Member must withdraw having regard to the categorical ruling given by you, Sir.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That is the reply which I substitute.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I know whether the Government of India have considered that Resolution ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Yes.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask what the result of their consideration is ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That the Government have not changed their views in the matter.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : When I asked that question, the answer was, No, and when Mr. Joshi asks the same question he says, Yes. Which is the correct answer ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I thought that on the first occasion the question was whether the Government had changed their views.....

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I did not say reconsidered, I said considered. I want the House to be treated with some respect.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : If the question was whether the Government had considered it, my reply is, Yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : When did they consider it ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : After the Resolution was passed.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Was there a meeting of the Council for the purpose ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That is a question which no Honourable Member is entitled to put to any Member of Government.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What is the answer to my point of order, Sir ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That the answer may be substituted,—that I cannot answer that question.

EXCLUSION OF THE CHITTAGONG HILL TRACTS FROM THE GENERAL CONSTITUENCY FOR ELECTION TO THE BENGAL LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

638. *Dr. Thein Maung : (a) Will Government please state if the Chittagong Hill Tracts are excluded from the general constituency for election to the Bengal Council ?

(b) If so, what is the reason for it and whether Government propose to request His Majesty's Government to include these Tracts within the electoral district ?

(c) Are Government aware that many of the people classified as 'animists' are as a matter of fact Buddhists ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) Yes.

(b) The Montagu-Chelmsford Report recommended the exclusion from the jurisdiction of the reformed provincial Governments of backward areas where the people were primitive and there was no material on which to found political institutions. The Chittagong Hill Tracts were included among such areas because they consist of an area of very sparsely populated hills and ravines which are covered with dense jungle and the inhabitants of which belong to a variety of primitive tribes. The point raised in the latter part of the question is under consideration.

(c) The Honourable Member presumably refers to Bengal but if he will read the Bengal Census report and Tables, 1931, he will find that there is no return of the number of animists so I do not understand why he should ask if Buddhists have been returned as animists.

REPRESENTATION OF BUDDHISTS IN GOVERNMENT SERVICES.

639. *Dr. Thein Maung : (a) Are Government aware that qualified Buddhist candidates find it impossible to get posts in the Government Services in India proper ? If so, what is the cause ?

(b) Will Government state how many Buddhists are employed in the All-India Services ? If they are not adequately represented, are Government prepared to take action to have them represented ?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider the desirability of reserving some of the posts for Buddhist candidates on the same principle as adopted in the case of other minorities ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) Government have heard no complaint regarding any difficulty felt by Buddhist candidates in getting posts in the Government service. If the Honourable Member has any particular case in mind, I will have it investigated.

(b) There are 26 Buddhists in the Indian Civil Service and five in the Indian Police and one known Buddhist in the Indian Medical Service (Civil Branch). As regards the other all-India Services, recruitment has either been stopped or suspended, and Government do not think it would serve any useful purpose to collect similar information in respect of such Services.

(c) There are very few Buddhists in India outside Burma and Bengal. The Resolution of 4th July, 1934, does not apply to Burma. In Bengal, Buddhists are eligible for appointment in the quota of vacancies reserved for 'other minorities', as explained in the second part of the Home Department Office Memorandum of the 15th May, 1935, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

REPRESENTATION OF BUDDHISTS IN THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

640. *Dr. Thein Maung : (a) Is it a fact that the Archæological Department is over-represented by some communities ?

(b) In view of the large number of Buddhist ruins under the control of the Archæological Department, are Government prepared to consider the desirability of giving training to Buddhist candidates ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) I take it that the Honourable Member wishes to know whether there is any community over represented in the Archæological Survey of India. On that assumption, the answer is in the negative.

(b) The training of apprentice scholars in the Archæological Survey of India has been suspended owing to financial stringency. The question of its revival will be considered as soon as the financial outlook improves. When the system of apprentice scholars is revived the Honourable Member's suggestion will receive careful attention.

ENQUIRY REGARDING THE WORKING OF THE CHILDREN (PLEDGING OF LABOUR) ACT.

641. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have made any enquiry regarding the working of the Children (Pledging of Labour) Act II of 1933 ?

(b) If so, do they propose to publish a Report on the working of the Act ?

(c) If the answer to part (a) above be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to make any enquiry and publish the report ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) Government have no such enquiry in contemplation.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government think that no good will come out of the inquiry ? Why do they not propose an inquiry ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : It would be extremely difficult to conduct a satisfactory inquiry into an Act of this kind, as it is partly civil law and partly imposes criminal penalties. Particulars could no doubt be secured of the number of prosecutions but they would not give an adequate idea of the manner of the operation of the Act....

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Are any of the Provincial Governments securing these statistics regarding the working of this Act ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Not so far as I am aware, unless they have included particulars in their criminal statistics ; but I do not think there is a separate entry relating to this rather small Act.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government consider the desirability of asking the Provincial Governments to collect these statistics ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : As I have already explained, a mere record of the number of successful or unsuccessful prosecutions would not afford any adequate indication of the operation of the Act.

INCREASE IN THE RATE OF PENSION PAID TO THE INFERIOR GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

642. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state whether they have taken steps to increase the rate of pension paid to their employees belonging to inferior service, and if they have, will they be pleased to state when the increased rate will come into operation ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The Government of India have formulated a scheme for improving the pensionary conditions of inferior servants under the Central Government and it is hoped that final orders will be issued in the course of the current financial year.

PROVISION OF CRÈCHES IN FACTORIES.

643. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state which of the Local Governments have made use of their power under section 33 (2) of the Factories Act for the provision of Crèches in factories ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Final rules under the Factories Act, 1934, have so far been issued by the Governments of Burma and the Central Provinces. The rules made by the latter contain provision for rooms for children under section 33 (2) of the Act. Draft rules under the Act have been published by the Governments of Bengal, Madras, the Punjab and the United Provinces, who have made provision for rooms for children, and the Governments of Bihar and Orissa, Bombay and the North-West Frontier Province who make no such provision.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : What about the Madras Government ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The Madras Government propose to make provision in their draft rules.

FACTORIES USING POWER BUT NOT COMING UNDER THE FACTORIES ACT.

644. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state the number of factories which use power but do not come under the Factories Act ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No figures are available. Approximate figures of the number of such establishments employing ten or more persons were collected by most of the Local Governments for the Royal Commission on Labour in 1930, and the Commission estimated the total at not less than two thousand.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not a fact that a periodical census is being taken of the factories in different provinces in which power is being used ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Yes, we have particulars of them, if they have come under the Factories Act.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India will ask the Local Governments to collect statistics of factories which use power ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : That would be an extremely difficult thing, especially as these establishments are not inspected.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I put a question ? There are some small sugar factories worked by hand and not by machinery, which have got farms attached to them. Will the factory include the farms as well when considering the total number of workmen ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I am not a lawyer, but I have no doubt there are Honourable Members opposite who for a proper fee would be very ready to advise my Honourable friend. (Laughter.)

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not necessary to take a licence when power is used ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : It is not necessary.

FACTORIES EMPLOYING FIFTY PERSONS OR MORE BUT NOT USING POWER.

645. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state the number of factories which employ fifty persons or more but do not use power ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Accurate statistics are not available but on the basis of particulars supplied by Local Governments in 1930 the Royal Commission estimated the number as in the neighbourhood of a thousand.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not possible for the factory inspectors to ascertain these facts ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : It probably would be. I imagine that the estimate that was prepared in 1930 was framed on the basis of particulars collected from the factory inspection staff.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government consider the desirability of asking these inspectors to submit periodical reports on the number of factories in which 50 persons or more are employed ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Unless the factories are brought under the Factories Act, the inspectors have no power to enter them and I do not see how they can get fully reliable particulars. I do not imagine that the position has changed since 1930.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not possible for Government to change the rules under the Factories Act, so that factories, which employ 50 persons or more but do not use power, could also be brought under the operation of the Factories Act?

Mr. A. G. Clow : It is legally possible to do that by notification.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Have Government considered the desirability of doing it?

Mr. A. G. Clow : That is a matter for the Local Governments, and obviously a good deal depends upon the extent to which they are able to provide adequate inspection staff.

LEGISLATION FOR THE COLLECTION OF STATISTICS AS RECOMMENDED BY THE ROYAL COMMISSION ON LABOUR.

646. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state when they propose to bring forward Legislation for the Collection of Statistics as recommended by the Royal Commission on Indian Labour?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The matter is under consideration.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : How long has this matter been under consideration?

Mr. A. G. Clow : For some time. It is not a question that can be taken up independently. It is considered in connection with the possibility of collecting other statistics as well.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government can give some estimate of the time within which they will be able to come to a decision on this question?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Sir, as statistics are in the portfolio of the Honourable Member for Commerce, my friend can address his question to him.

TRAINS ON DIFFERENT RAILWAYS NOT CARRYING THIRD CLASS CARRIAGES.

647. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) which of the trains on different Railways do not carry any third class carriages ;

(b) what inconvenience is caused to the Railways by attaching third class carriages to all trains ; and

(c) whether they have examined the question whether by not attaching third class carriages to certain trains where they are not attached, these trains are run at a loss or not?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) So far as Government are aware, the trains on which third class passengers, except servants of upper class passengers, are not carried are the following :

3 Up and 4 Down Frontier Mails between Bombay and Peshawar.

5 Up and 6 Down Calcutta-Punjab Mails between Howrah and Saharanpur.

(b) The number of trains not carrying third class passengers is, as the Honourable Member has no doubt noticed, so small that it is obvious that it is only when the train cannot normally carry the additional load that a third class carriage is not attached.

(c) Government are asking the Administrations concerned to examine this suggestion.

PROVISION OF ELECTRIC FANS IN THIRD CLASS CARRIAGES.

648. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the amount of capital and running expenditure which is estimated for the provision of electric fans in the third class carriages ;

(b) what amount they propose to provide for this purpose in the immediate future?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The capital required to provide fans in third class compartments of Class I Railways is roughly estimated to be from 1½ to 2 crores of rupees and the recurring expenditure at about Rs. 30 lakhs per annum.

(b) Government regret they are unable to provide any money for this purpose in the immediate future.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will the Honourable Member please tell me if electric fans are being introduced in intermediate compartments or not?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not think that arises out of this question, Sir.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask why the Government of India do not propose to provide any money for this reform in the next Budget?

Mr. P. R. Rau : In view of the financial position of the Railways, Sir.

SEPARATE RESTAURANT CARS FOR THE USE OF THIRD CLASS PASSENGERS.

649. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state on how many trains separate restaurant cars are provided for the use of the third class passengers?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Separate restaurant cars are not provided for the exclusive use of third class passengers, but I presume my Honourable friend is referring to the arrangements for providing refreshments, otherwise than in dining cars which are generally used by first and second class passengers.

I place on the table a statement summarising the information available in the time tables of railways as regards the trains on which such arrangements have been made.

South Indian Railway.—Buffet cars for Indian passengers run on the following trains :

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask why separate restaurant cars are not provided for the third class passengers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The reason is that the Railways concerned do not consider that such cars would be sufficiently patronised to justify it.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, whether Government will make some experiments in these directions ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Why, Sir

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : For the reason already stated by the Financial Commissioner.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that, on the N. W. Railway they did provide such cars for third class passengers sometime ago, but they were given up ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : They were not reserved for third class passengers. There were restaurant cars for Hindus and for Muhammadans as distinguished from those which catered according to the European scale.

An Honourable Member : They were not reserved exclusively for higher-class passengers ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Are Government considering any proposals for the increase of these Indian refreshment cars ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir.

The policy in regard to increasing the number of such cars must be reconsidered in the light of the fall in earnings.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Is it not a fact that, on the Bombay side, third class passengers do patronise the restaurant cars ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Sir, if the Honourable Member looks at the statement I have just placed on the table, he will see that, on the G. I. P. Railway, there is a restaurant car which provides Indian food on the Grand Trunk Express train between Delhi and Balharshah, and a compartment is also allotted on the Poona Mail and Express trains for vending tea, coffee, fruit and Indian sweetmeats, etc. On the B. B. and C. I. Railway, two compartments are reserved for Hindu and Muhammadan catering.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Has there been any increase in the number of trains to which these Indian restaurant cars are attached, during the last few years ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think my Honourable friend must give me notice of that question.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it a fact that the Hindu and Muhammadan restaurant cars have been given up on the North Western Railway ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : They are still run on some of the sections.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Is it not a fact that third class passengers cannot get their refreshments from the restaurant cars that are usually attached to the mails, because very often the waiters refuse to serve third class passengers ? I can say that from my own personal experience.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : So far as "purchase" is concerned, all passengers can purchase any refreshments they like from the restaurant cars ; only the restaurant cars themselves cannot be used except by the higher class passengers.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Is it not a fact that they refuse to supply refreshments to third class passengers in the compartments in which they are travelling ? If this is so, cannot the Honourable Member inquire into the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That I am not aware of.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : He may make sure and give instructions accordingly ? Can he not ? No harm will be done by enquiring ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : As a matter of fact, I cannot understand why, apart from any isolated instances, that should be so, because, after all, selling a bottle of soda or of lemonade to any passenger would bring them custom.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Sir, it is not a question of merely a bottle of soda or of lemonade, but, also of tea, for instance. I may want tea, but they refuse to give it to me unless I travel in a higher class compartment.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The same applies to tea, Sir.

QUESTION OF PLACING THE SUPERVISOR OF LABOUR DIRECTLY UNDER THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

650. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether they have recently considered the question of placing the Supervisor of Railway Labour directly under the Government of India instead of his being under the Railway Board ;
- (b) if so, what their decision is ;
- (c) if not, whether they propose to consider the question at an early date ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) The Government consider that the Supervisor of Railway Labour should, as at present, remain under the Government of India in the Railway Department.

(c) Does not arise.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the " Government of India in the Railway Department " means the " Railway Board " or independently of the " Railway Board " ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I am unable to follow the question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Sir, under the Government of India, there is an organization called the Railway Board. My question is, whether the Supervisor of Railway Labour will be under the Railway Board or will perform his duties independently, under the Government, without being under the Railway Board ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I have replied to that in the answer I have read out to part (b) of the question.

An Honourable Member : May I ask the Honourable Member to repeat the reply, because I did not hear the reply ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I said :

" The Government consider that the Supervisor of Railway Labour should, as at present, remain under the Government of India in the Railway Department."

QUESTION OF PLACING THE SAFETY INSPECTORS DIRECTLY UNDER THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

651. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) if they have recently considered the question of placing the Safety Inspectors under the Indian Railways Act directly under the Government of India instead of under the Railway Board ;
- (b) if so, what their decision is ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Under section 4 of the Indian Railways Act, Government Inspectors of Railways are appointed by the Governor General in Council and are required to report to him.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that the Railway Statutory Committee appointed in London recommended that these Inspectors should be under a body other than the Railway authorities ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think that is so. In section 131 (3) of the Government of India Act of 1935, a definite provision has been made that " the Federal Government or its officers shall perform in regard to the construction, equipment and operation of railways such functions for securing the safety both of members of the public and of persons operating the Railways as in the opinion of the Federal Government should be performed by persons independent of the authority of the Railway Administration ".

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not a fact that for some of the railways the Safety Inspectors have not given the necessary certificate ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : What necessary certificate does my Honourable friend refer to ?

Prof. N. G. Ranga : About the safety of the railway lines—whether they are in proper condition or not. I have in mind, for instance, the B. B. and C. I. Railway for which the necessary certificate was not obtained by the Railway Board in 1933-34 ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : This does not arise out of this question, which is whether Safety Inspectors should be under the Railway Department or under another Department.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Sir, a reference has been made to the Government of India Act of 1935. Has it come into operation yet ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Why, then, is a reference made to it ?

PUBLICATIONS DISTRIBUTED FREE TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CENTRAL LEGISLATURE.

652. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) which of their publications are distributed free to the members of the Central Legislature ?
- (b) whether they propose to consider the question of supplying all their publications free to members of Central Legislature or at least of enlarging the free list in consultation with a special committee of the Legislature appointed for the purpose ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) I am unable to give the Honourable Member a list of the Government publications distributed free to Members of the Central Legislature which must always be incomplete owing to the appearance of new publications from time to time. The position is as was stated in the reply given on the 27th February, 1935, by the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce, to part (d) of Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar's unstarred question No. 121.

(b) Government do not propose to take the action suggested.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Is there any list showing how the publications are being supplied? Is there any list either in the Library or elsewhere showing which publications are at present being supplied free or otherwise?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir. The list is constantly changing. Thus, a new publication appears, and it may be supplied, or it may not be supplied.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : What will be the total cost of publishing two hundred more copies of the free publications?

Mr. A. G. Clow : It would be very large indeed, Sir.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Is the Honourable Member aware that, year after year, from time to time, a number of such publications used to be made available in the Delhi Session, and it has only recently been abandoned? Is the Honourable Member aware that several Honourable Members of this House have received intimations from the Manager of Publications that extra copies are or are not available to Honourable Members of the House?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Such circulars are issued from time to time, when publications are found to be surplus to requirements in the Central Publication Branch.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Are they then distributed after that period free?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I am not sure which publication the Honourable Member is referring to?

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : The Trade Review, for instance, for 1933-34, and many other such publications.

Mr. A. G. Clow : Does he refer to circulars concerning publications issued free or advertised for sale? The former relate only to publications which are surplus to requirements.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Sir, as the clauses which I had wanted to be answered have been deleted, I do not wish to put my short notice question.

12 NOON.

FOREIGN AND INDIAN INSURANCE COMPANIES DOING BUSINESS IN INDIA.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Will Government state :

(a) the number of foreign and Indian insurance companies doing business in India ; and

(b) the amount of business done by foreign and Indian companies for the last year for which statistics are available?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) The number of foreign and Indian insurance companies working in India in 1933 which is the latest date for which figures are available was 47 and 194, respectively.

(b) The premium income earned in India by foreign and Indian insurance companies was Rs. 26,24,000 and Rs. 6,01,09,000 respectively.

ENQUIRY INTO CENTRAL AND PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Sir, I apologise to you and to the House for the length of my question.

Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they were consulted by the Secretary of State for India over the appointment of Sir Otto Niemeyer to undertake an enquiry into Central and Provincial finances under the Government of India Act ;

(b) whether the terms of reference were settled in consultation with the Government of India ;

(c) the reasons why the questions mentioned in sections 140, 146 and 147 of the Government of India Act are not included in the terms of reference ;

(d) why the financial relations between the Indian States and the Federation are not included in the terms of reference ;

(e) whether any procedure with regard to taking of evidence or consulting public opinion has been laid down, and if so, what it is ;

(f) whether any opportunity will be given to this House to express its opinion on these vital questions before the enquiry is completed ;

(g) the materials which will be placed before him for reviewing the present and prospective budgetary positions of the Government of India and the Governments of the Provinces ;

(h) whether the enquiry includes the questions mentioned in paragraphs 272 and 273 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report, and specifically whether this Report will form the basis of the assurance to be given to Parliament by His Majesty's Government on the financial position mentioned in the last sentence of paragraph 275 of the Report ;

(i) whether the enquiry will include the prospect of a net profit on the working of the Railways of five crores, as contemplated in the Percy Committee Report which has now disappeared, and the question of jute export duty, and the contribution of a portion thereof to the Provinces concerned ;

(j) whether the enquiry will consider the question of the remission or the payment back to the Provinces of the proceeds of income-tax, and if so, what proportion thereof ;

(k) whether there is any chance of the results of this enquiry postponing the inauguration of the new Constitution ;

(l) whether the expert will be entitled to come to his own conclusions on the figures of provincial and Federal budgets, apart from the figures submitted to him by the Governments concerned ; and

- (m) how long the enquiry is proposed to take and whether the Report of the enquiry will be placed before this House for an expression of its opinion?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) and (d). Section 140 (2) is included, but Section 140 (1) is not presumably because it is a matter for the future Federal Legislature. Sir Otto Niemeyer has been appointed to advise His Majesty's Government generally in regard to questions in which Orders in Council have to be issued in order to inaugurate Provincial Autonomy. The financial relations between Indian States and the Federation, which are presumably in the Honourable Member's mind, have not to be solved at the time of the institution of Provincial Autonomy and moreover have little if any affinity with the problems between the Provinces and the Federation.

(e) No.

(f) I can give no undertaking that an official day will be assigned for the purpose before the enquiry is completed.

(g) All materials considered to be relevant by the various Governments in India will be placed before Sir Otto Niemeyer and he will naturally be at liberty to call for any further information which he may require.

(h), (i) and (j). I would refer the Honourable Member to the terms of the press communiqué issued on the 18th instant.

(k) I cannot say what action Parliament will see fit to take in the matter.

(l) Certainly.

(m) I am unable to state how long Sir Otto Niemeyer will need to complete his investigations. I am also unable to state whether His Majesty's Government will require an expression of the opinion of this House before making its final decisions.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to the answer to clauses (a) and (b), may I know whether the terms of reference as finally settled follow the lines recommended by this Government?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The Honourable Member may not know as it is a matter between the Government and the Secretary of State.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to the answer to clause (c), may I know with regard to sections 146 and 147 of the Act, why this inquiry has nothing to do with it?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : That is the same question in another form.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know whether the Honourable the Finance Member does not consider that the possibility of contributions from the States to the Federation being remitted in whole or in part, either in cash or in any other manner, has a relevant bearing on the future financial position of the Federation and its capacity to make contributions to the deficit provinces, or to remit a portion of the jute tax or a portion of the income-tax?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not think it has any direct connection.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know with regard to the answer to clauses (e) and (f) of this question, whether the Commissioner has got absolute liberty in this matter, that is to say, with regard to the taking of evidence or the consulting of public opinion, or whether he is prohibited from taking any evidence or consulting any public opinion?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : There is no prohibition or limitation on his freedom of action in that respect whatever, but, of course, there are certain physical limitations as to taking evidence. If I may express my personal opinion, it seems to me that it is mainly a matter for the Local Governments concerned. If they want to collect opinions from the public, they can pass them on to him if they think they are relevant. But that is only my personal opinion.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know why the Government of India say that this House should not be given an opportunity to express its opinion?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I did not say that. I said: "I can give no undertaking that an official day will be assigned".

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With regard to answer to clause (g), may I know whether the memoranda will be submitted by the respective Governments, and if the Commissioner may change his mind or form his own opinions on these, what will be the materials that will be available to him?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : All relevant materials and also any materials that he may ask for.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : With reference to paragraph 273 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's report, may I ask one specific question? I am inviting my Honourable friend's attention to the last sentence which runs thus:

"On this point (that is, the point of the financial solvency of the proposed Federation) Parliament must at the appropriate time receive a direct assurance from His Majesty's Government."

I will confine myself to the Honourable Member's answer. So far as the inauguration of Provincial Autonomy is concerned, will Sir Otto Niemeyer's report form the basis of the assurance which His Majesty's Government will give to Parliament about the solvency of the provinces?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : In reply to this question, I think I had better read a sentence from the Press communiqué:

"The Government of India Act, 1935, provided that the allocation of certain resources between Central and Provincial Governments in India shall be settled by Order in Council, of which drafts will have been laid before Parliament; and His Majesty's Government have undertaken that a special inquiry will first be held, so that they and Parliament may be furnished with an independent review of the financial position of the provinces and the Centre....."

The rest is irrelevant for this purpose.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am asking whether, for the assurance of His Majesty's Government, so far as the Honourable the Finance Member is aware, there is any other inquiry, except the one which will be conducted by Sir Otto Niemeyer ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not think so. This is the inquiry which is intended to give Parliament an independent review of the financial position of India.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will the Government of India send their conclusions or opinions on the report of Sir Otto Niemeyer to His Majesty's Government before they make their recommendation to Parliament ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have not thought about it ; but I think that it is quite possible.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government consult this House before they send their opinion on the report of Sir Otto Niemeyer ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I cannot give any undertaking about it.

POSITION IN THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the latest position in the North-West Frontier Province ;
- (b) the number of men and officers, British and Indian, who are engaged in the operations therein ;
- (c) the object of these operations ; and
- (d) when the operations are expected to conclude, and with what result ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) The unrest on the Hazara border has, I am glad to say, completely subsided as have also the disturbances in Dir. As regards the Mohmand situation a Government Force has established itself at Nahakki in Kamalai Halimzai country. As a result of the combined land and air operations carried out up to date, the formed lashkars have dispersed though there are still some gangs in the vicinity of the troops and sniping still continues. The latest news is that the Burhan Khel, Isa Khel, and Kamalai Halimzai have made complete submission, and there are indications that the remaining offending sections will shortly make overtures for peace. Elsewhere the Frontier is quiet.

(b) 16,000 of all ranks including followers.

(c) As stated in the Press Communiqué of 12th September, to secure tribal overtures on which an adequate settlement can be made.

(d) When the tribes have accepted the peace-terms and have shown by their behaviour that they intend to carry them on honestly. The result is hoped to be the removal of the Mohmand menace to the peace of the Peshawar border.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Will the Honourable Member state if the real object of the Government is to take Nowagai and from there connect a road right up to the road which connects Malakand with it ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : The answer is in the negative.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Will the Honourable Member state what means Government will adopt to create a peaceful and conciliatory atmosphere amongst the troops ? Are Government going to use the same kind of people who are always deceiving Government and creating these troubles or are Government going to use some other people who will give them honest advice ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : This question appears to contain an insinuation. I should like, however, to take this opportunity of pointing out that all these people, with reference to this question and to the previous supplementary questions, are all indubitably under the suzerainty of His Majesty the King Emperor.

Dr. Khan Sahib : I want to put another supplementary question.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair would warn the Honourable Member that he must not make insinuations or reflections while he is putting supplementary questions.

Dr. Khan Sahib : I am speaking absolute truth, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : It is not a question of absolute truth or not. The point is, he must not make any criticism or cast any reflection while putting his supplementary questions. The question must be confined to obtaining information and not to casting any reflection.

Dr. Khan Sahib : My question is this. Will the Honourable Member state as to who are the people who are going to be used for carrying on this negotiation between the troops and the Government ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : The Political Officer with the Forces will deal directly with the tribes in the matter. The officer in question is Captain Bacon of the Political Department.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Apart from acts of hostility, are there any points in dispute ? If so, what are they, and are they capable of settlement between the tribes and the British Government ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I have already pointed out in my speech on the adjournment motion on this subject, earlier in the Session, what are the main points in dispute. The main point in dispute is that these persons are habitually and wantonly engaged in acts of aggression against the peaceful inhabitants of Peshawar district and against the forces of Government. That is the only matter in dispute.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Will the Honourable Member state the date on which the tribes attacked Peshawar area ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I cannot give the exact date. But it has already been communicated to the Press in Communiqués.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Approximate date or a rough idea about the date of attack, about the names of villages which they attacked, and so on ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : The post of Shabqadr was one of the posts which was attacked. The Munda post is another. These were two of the posts which were attacked among others.

Dr. Khan Sahib : Were these attacks made after the advance of the army or before ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : Before.

THE CANTONMENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham (Army Secretary) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, for certain purposes.

THE INDIAN CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT (REPEAL) BILL— contd.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Legislative Business. Further consideration of the following motion moved by Mr. B. Das on Friday, the 29th March, 1935 :

“ That the Bill to repeal the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, be taken into consideration.

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi (Assam Valley : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I was speaking the other day about the Partition of Bengal, and I did not conclude my speech then. During the days of the Partition of Bengal, a conference took place at Barisal. All the leaders of Bengal, including the late Surendra Nath Banerjee, and C. R. Das, Aurabinda Ghose (who is at present living) and many other great leaders, whom Bengal respects and reveres, tried to hold that conference at Barisal. That was a perfectly constitutional affair. In that conference, those leaders were assaulted and insulted and the conference was broken up.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order. The Chair would remind the Honourable Member that this matter has been debated for a number of days, and the Chair would ask Honourable Members, who wish to speak again on this subject, not to repeat what has already been said.

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi : This point relating to the Barisal conference was not debated in connection with this Bill. It was referred to in connection with the other Bill relating to Criminal Law which was introduced by Government.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That makes no difference. If the matter has been debated in connection with this Bill or with another Bill, it makes no difference.

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi : I will make my observations in my own way to prove that the Act of 1908 is no good.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member must not repeat himself or refer to what has already been said by other speakers. He must conform to the Rules and Standing Orders.

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi : What I wanted to say is this. This discontent and unrest was not the doing of the young men of Bengal alone, it is the doing of the authorities also by their mishandling of the situation.

Now, I come to other instances which, to my mind, explain the present position of Bengal, and any amount of oppressive laws on the part of the authorities will not stop the present unrest unless the root cause is removed. My Honourable friend, Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi, said the other day that the root cause has been removed. I say that the root cause has not been removed, it is the branch cause that has been removed and the root has gone deeper down. What is the root ? I shall briefly state the facts to prove my statement. It is a fact that the annulment of partition was a stroke of statesmanship, and many of the persons who were on the other side and who were great agitators in those days were brought into line by the action of Government, but those persons who took part in these revolutionary affairs or murders or who took to lawlessness before the annulment of partition, what became of them ? They were hounded, not only like criminals but, like wild beasts throughout India. Even after that, no attempt was made by Government to bring them to their side and thus to bring peace to this country by conciliating them. I know of a case in Gauhati. After the partition of Bengal, some Bengalis remained in a house peacefully at Gauhati and they were doing business. They remained there for about a year. Nobody knew they were revolutionaries. After a certain time a detective policeman went there to arrest them with the help of the local policemen. There was a pitched battle at night. Some of them were arrested and they were tried by a special tribunal and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. If only those persons had been brought round and allowed to do the peaceful business they were doing at that place, their feelings would not have been roused and they would have remained useful citizens. But no, they were again sent to jail. I know one of them who was an inmate of the Nalanda House and who ran away from there. I met that man some time later in a meeting of the Congress and I asked him what he was doing. He said he was doing khadi work. He said he had given up all those activities because, through Mahatmaji's favour, he had taken to khadi work and to non-violence and he was doing well. I asked some of the people in the khadi business and they told me that he was one of the best and most useful workers. That is the sort of work which some of these people, who had once taken to terrorism, are able to do if they escape being hounded by the police. They should be brought round and their feelings ought to be assuaged. But, instead of that being done, they are hunted by the police from pillar to post and from post to pillar, all throughout India, because some time back they happened to belong to the revolutionary party. They may not be murderers or dacoits, but still they are hunted.

This state of things went on and, as I said the other day, but the Jallianwalla Bagh outrage excited the whole of India. There was not one Indian who did not feel terribly excited over this Jallianwalla Bagh incident. Then, Sir, after the Jallianwalla Bagh and the crawling order which excited the masses of India came the Dyer fund. And what is this fund ? Government officers were of course engaged in suppressing these people who were fighting against Government, but after the good deed of General Dyer the Dyer fund was started. And who subscribed to it ? Most of the European gentlemen who are non-officials, and even the Anglo-Indians. Did not that irritate the Indians more than anything else ? Did the authorities then take steps to put that association under

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[24TH SEP. 1935.]

[Srijut N. C. Bardaloi.]

this Act of 1908 and declare it unlawful? What was it? It was nothing but a challenge to Indians and to the honour and self-respect of Indians. You make them crawl and you kill them, and because the authorities took some steps against the man who did it, in order to pacify the feelings of Indians, the non-official Europeans and even Anglo-Indians joined together and raised a fund for him. That was another fact which actually brought on this non-co-operation movement. The Honourable the Law Member in reciting the 56 cases tried to prove that Congress members became anarchists or anarchists became Congress members. It is the sort of thing that sometimes the revolutionaries join the Congress and afterwards they again become revolutionaries. And, therefore, the Honourable the Law Member pressed it with great force and cited 56 cases in which anarchists or terrorists were found to be Congress members. Sir, I know it for a fact that when Mahatmaji went to Bengal and Assam he actually discussed this point with many Congress members and with men who knew much about this movement. He asked them to give up the path of terrorism and violence and to join the non-violent movement as that was the only way to fight the British Government and it was better than violence. At his bidding a lot of people who were of that fraternity actually gave up terrorism and came to join the non-co-operation movement as non-violent non-co-operators. The late lamented Bepin Chandra Pal once said in his stentorian voice,—and I remember it even now,—“I am not a non-co-operator but do not repress this non-violent movement so much because if you do so it will go underground again”. Government paid no heed and the non-co-operation movement of 1921 was crushed with all the vigour that Government possessed. After that there was tranquillity for some time. I want to ask whether this Act of 1908 had the least effect upon the minds of the people when they actually went out to defy Government and to practise Civil Disobedience. Honest men when they feel that Government are doing something wrong to the country, and when they feel that they have got no other weapon except the non-violent method and Civil Disobedience, go on in spite of this Act of 1908. The passing of this Act to suppress the Congress movement does not mean anything; it is just like a sportsman shooting at a duck which is sitting on her eggs because she will not run away. The Congress offices are always open, the names are registered, they do not do anything behind the scenes or hide anything. And so these policemen take the help of this Act of 1908 and by overdoing promote terrorism, as I cited some examples the other day. This sort of thing will not suppress this non-co-operation movement. As a matter of fact at present there is no non-co-operation movement and there is no necessity for this Act. As regards terrorism, will this Act of 1908 help Government in any way? Do the terrorists keep open offices and do they do anything openly? The Honourable the Law Member cited a lot of cases in which lists of terrorists were found. He said their names were entered in a register. I cannot controvert that statement as it was proved in a court of law but I have got my own doubts. Anyway, this state of things went on and, afterwards, we know how the authorities always flouted public opinion. The Congress sat from year to year, they passed Resolutions, they made suggestions, and the authorities always disregarded them. The Congress Resolutions were always considered as so much waste paper. And what happened? Mahatmaji had nothing else to do but to have recourse to Civil Disobedience and the great Dandi march began. What happened at Dacca before that? The facts with regard to the Dacca riot have been stated at length by my Honourable friend, the Deputy President. Those who read the newspapers in those days knew what happened at this Dacca riot, and many people believe that this riot was engineered, and they had good reasons for thinking it to be so. The Honourable the Deputy President said the other day that three or four days before the rioting began Government servants were warned that there would be a riot and were asked to keep provisions ready. All the guns were taken away from the Hindu houses and then the rioting began. I understand that Mr. Griffiths, the present District Magistrate of Midnapore, was then at Dacca. I should like to know what steps he took to prevent this riot or rescue people's houses and properties from being looted and plundered.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths (Bengal : Nominated Official) : Sir, on a point of personal explanation. I spent four whole days and nights protecting Congress Hindus from attacks by the Muhammadans.

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi : Muhammadans or Hindus, whatever they may be, when it is a question of plunder, there is no difference between Muhammadan and Hindu hooligans. The Hindu or Muhammadan hooligans are poor : they live from hand to mouth and they do not get one full meal a day and these people when they get a chance to plunder, they do it and nobody can prevent it. But I want to ask my friend what he was doing and how many did he rescue when all this was going on, when the looting was taking place, when the houses were burning, and policemen were merely standing by and doing nothing. We got these accounts from the papers and my Honourable friend, the Deputy President, has repeated them here. Do we not know what was happening in Dacca at that time? Have we not read of the heroic action of two Bengali girls—all honour to them—who protected their house by means of brickbats which they threw on the hooligans? Where was the police then? And where was my Honourable friend when shops were looted and houses were burnt and when millionaires and rich men became paupers in a day, because the looters came and set fire to their houses and looted their things? Where was the police then? Where were the Europeans? Did they suppress the riot? Did they rescue these people? Did they rescue anybody? They did not do anything. And what about the mentality of the young men who were at Dacca? They thought rightly or wrongly that it was you, the Government men who set up these hooligans to commit all these acts : they have a clear recollection of what took place : they have suffered and become beggars : can any of them have any affection for this Government? If the Government did not protect them, if the Government did not do anything to save them how can they have any other feeling than of this kind? The Honourable the Deputy President has given instances and I can give some also from my own personal acquaintance with some of the sufferers on a later occasion. I know one of them who was beaten by the police. Was it not a shame to beat a retired Indian District Magistrate at his old age in the presence of his wife, daughters and son? Would the son or wife or the daughter have any affection left for this Government after this respectable gentleman had been assaulted? His name has been given by my friend, the Deputy President. Things went on like this and the soul of Bengal was actually pierced. There was agony on all sides. This terrorism on the part of the hooligans, supported as it was thought by the Government men because they remained inactive, actually preyed upon the minds of the people. What did the Government do? If the Government had taken immediate steps and saved these people, if the Government had put down these hooligans, then probably the people would have at once got respect for the Government. Bengal has suffered and, therefore, the Bengalis have become unruly. I do not say that they should go and commit murders, but am giving the real psychology of how these people have become unruly and taken to this sort of crime.

Now, about Chittagong. After Dacca came Chittagong. I need not state all the facts that happened there. The terrorists, to our shame, committed murders; and, in spite of our non-violent creed, in spite of the fact that we do not injure or murder people, the bureaucracy, to their shame on the other hand almost, murder the terrorists and not only the terrorists, but also the innocent people whom they suspect to be terrorists. The police say they are terrorists and, on suspicion, they are sent outside Bengal and detained for years and years without giving them any chance of proving their innocence: well, that is a sort of murder. I can cite a lot of examples in which these detenus have been kept and sent to distant places merely on suspicion, without any kind of trial: some of them were shot; some died; one hanged himself and committed suicide; another man died of disease—perhaps he might have been treated better elsewhere: one man went mad; and there are innumerable cases in which wailing mothers and wailing wives have sent applications after applications to the Government asking that the detenus might be tried, that they should not be kept in detention on mere suspicion and thus be killed inch by inch. These persons who are detained like this without any trial are sometimes treated not like human beings. Well, their relations, their wives and children—will they be very loyal to this Government? Will they have much affection for this Government? When there is so much bitterness in the minds of these 2,000 or 3,000 young men of Bengal suffering like this—multiply this 2,000 or 3,000 by their relations and friends and admirers: how many do you get? How many men are there in Bengal who are still suffering? Have Government done anything to help them? Nothing.

After Chittagong we come to Midnapore. Midnapore is now engaging the attention of the Government of India. At Midnapore, during the non-co-operation movement, we have seen a lot of pictures in the papers, how at Contai these people went to make salt, how they were assaulted, how they were beaten and how many of them got terribly injured. These non-violent men were beaten. The District Magistrate of Midnapore said, the other day, that whenever civil resisters go and picket, they begin with non-violence but they end up by being violent. I ask him how many soldiers and how many constables have been beaten by these picketers, how many Europeans have been injured by these civil resisters and in how many places? I have not heard of any so far. Of course, in the past, in places like Chauri Chaura things happened; but now how many non-co-operators have been convicted of assaulting policemen or beating policemen?

Mr. P. J. Griffiths: 189 in my district.

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi: I am glad of the information; but I perfectly remember the movement of non-co-operation going on without any violence on their part. Anyhow what I say is this: on the one side people go and do everything non-violently, peacefully: their creed is suffering, and they get beatings and at every beating they merely call 'Mahatma Gandhi ki Jai' or 'Vande Mataram' and they go on getting these beatings. I know places where it happened like that. On the other hand you get these people who beat the volunteers, those who actually treated them violently come forward with the grievance that they are the injured party: that the party which used the lathi is the injured party: that was the position. That sort of thing went on in Bengal in spite of this Act of 1908. These occurrences took place in 1930. Congress offices were closed up; properties were confiscated; but that did not stop it. I know in Calcutta in a meeting there was a lathi charge and a lot of people were injured: some lost their limbs, and some got broken heads and limbs: but in the next day's paper we found it was a mild lathi charge. I do not know what a mild lathi charge is—possibly it was inspired by the Government officials; otherwise it cannot be described as a mild lathi charge. So, when I get accounts of mild lathi charges, I know what they are. As I say, this sort of action on the part of the Government will not stop the Bengal people. I said in the beginning that the Bengal people are highly sentimental. When they do not see any other way they take to terrorism. The murders at Midnapore have been referred to. Do we not regret the murders of three District Magistrates at Midnapore? As a matter of fact, when I read about the last murder and about the wails of the poor widow I felt like crying myself. I felt very sorry: everybody feels sorry for it; but somehow my friends on the opposite Benches do not feel that we are sincere in what we say and they think they alone are sorry and nobody else. If they do that, they do it because of their own mentality. Do they ever feel sorry for those who are wailing for the detenus, viz., mothers and wives who are wailing because their sons and husbands are pining away in distant jails? Do they ever feel for those who are detained in jails without trials? You do not feel sorry for them; you do not give them a decent trial. What is it that you want? I say that, in my younger days, the people were saying that British Raj is like Ram Raj. Why did they call it Ram Raj? Because they thought that British justice was the best in regard to meeting out justice to a subject nation. But now, what do they see? British people have forgotten what justice is.

An Honourable Member: This is now Ravan Raj. (Laughter.)

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi: What is the thing that people want now? They want justice and nothing but justice. You have got your law courts, you have got eminent Counsels like the Honourable the Law Member, you have got your informers and spies,—now bring all these detenus into the open and put them on trial in open courts, and punish them if you find them guilty after giving them a fair trial. None will say anything to it. There have been so many cases of hanging and trans-portations for life, imprisonment for varying terms for murders, dacoities and various other criminal offences, but does anybody say anything about the punishment you mete out to the guilty? Why don't you try these men even now? Punish them if they are found guilty; if they are not found guilty, then let them off. Let them lead an honest and virtuous life.

[Srijut N. C. Bardaloi.]

Now, Sir, can you actually make Bengal calm and peaceful? No. Bengal can be calmed down only by kind treatment. The only way you can calm down the Bengalis is to try the detenus and if they are found guilty, punish them; if they are found innocent, then release them at once.

Sir, His Excellency the Governor of Bengal is trying to give some land to some of the unemployed youths, specially to detenus and terrorists, but will that satisfy them? Among the detenus there are many people who are not dying for want of food. As I said, try them in the open courts, and do not allow your policemen and spies to hound them and create cases for the courts. Only recently there was a case in which it was found by the Magistrate that a revolver or a bomb was planted by the police. There are agents provocateurs, and you have to take care of them. Only by giving these detenus an open trial you will be able to bring about peace and contentment in Bengal. If this is not done, if you go on with your repression,—you may, for the time being, suppress the movement by means of your military and police, you may bring in laws like these to suppress the people,—but if you go on with your repression, the time is coming when you will have to keep policemen in charge of almost every house in Bengal. Even now you make policemen march through the villages to strike terror in the minds of the poor people, but if you go on like this, the time is not far distant when you will have to place one soldier or one policeman against the house of every Bengali youth who lives there. Even now you have got curfew orders, individual cards, identifying cards, and all sorts of humiliating things for them, you have placed all these humiliating things against the manhood of Bengal, but, as I said, if you go on like this, the time will soon come when you will have to keep a detective, a constable or a soldier in front of the door of every Bengali youth. Therefore, I suggest, Sir, these sort of irritating things will do no good to anybody,—do not bring in these laws. The other day we threw out by a majority an important measure like the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, and what happened? It has been certified. Sir, what is our position here? Why do we come here? Is it for the purpose of getting ourselves flouted? This measure also, whatever we may say here, is bound to be kept on the Statute-book, but I say sincerely, that this sort of repression or suppression will not do. You will have to reform yourselves, you will have to change your mentality, otherwise you will also have to suffer just as the people suffer. (Cheers from the Congress Party Benches.)

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik (Home Member): Sir, as you observed a short time ago, this subject has been debated in one form or another now for eight days, and the arguments both for and against the particular measure we are discussing have been worn so threadbare that I do not on my part propose to contribute anything to them either one way or the other. What has brought me to my feet has been the entirely unsubstantiated, undocumented and ex parte statements that have been made by various speakers on the other side blaming Government for a state of affairs which has necessitated this special legislation. The last speaker, Sir, poured out a long string of accusations which, naturally enough, are not within my immediate knowledge, but on one point about which he asked one of his numerous rhetorical questions, he challenged us to give him an answer. He got an answer which considerably disconcerted him, and I have no doubt if I had the time or if my friends had the time to look up the actual facts regarding many of his other allegations, we would find that they are completely unsubstantiated and completely one-sided.

One particular speech, however, was made in the course of this debate by the Honourable Member from Rohtak which happened to deal with matters within my personal knowledge, and in the course of it he cast various reflections on myself and on officers who were then serving under me. I propose to show that that speech was from beginning to end an almost entire misrepresentation and distortion of facts and that such truth as it contained was twisted out of all recognition. I propose to show not only that the charges which the Honourable Member brought forward against Government officers were grossly exaggerated, but that he himself was guilty of far more serious misconduct on his own part.

An Honourable Member: Yes?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: I will show that. I have chapter and verse. The object of that speech was to show that Government through its executive officers abuse any special powers given to it and that, therefore, no special powers should be given. The Honourable Member went further and alleged that by the use of these special powers Government have practised oppression, and, therefore, were responsible for the origin of the terrorist movement. He alleged that terrorism started in the Punjab after what he called the assault by the police on Lala Lajpat Rai on the 30th October, 1928. His syllogism, if I may so put it, ran thus. His first premise was that there was no terrorism in the Punjab before October, 1928. His second premise was that in October, 1928, Lala Lajpat Rai was beaten by police. The conclusion was, therefore, that Government was responsible for the rise of terrorism in the Punjab....

Mr. Sham Lal (Ambala Division: Non-Muhammadan): On a point of explanation, Sir. It was not my conclusion. It was the statement of the approver in which he said that after Lala Lajpat Rai had been beaten they decided on murder. It was not a conclusion, but a fact, and it is part of the evidence of the Crown witness.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: The Honourable Member says that it is not his conclusion but it was based on the evidence of the approver. The approver he refers to is a person called Inderpal, a convicted murderer, who plotted murder and was sentenced to death for it and is now undergoing transportation for life. Not only that, a convicted murderer who to save his own skin gave away the whole case against his associates, and not only that, but one who as a witness was found guilty of committing perjury by the Court. If that is the Honourable Member's corroboration....

Mr. Sham Lal: On a point of explanation, Sir. This was the case of the learned Public Prosecutor. There were certain parts of the

[Mr. Sham Lal.]

Crown witnesses' evidence which were accepted by the learned Public Prosecutor, and I challenge my Honourable friend....

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not give way. This is not a point of personal explanation at all, and I refuse to give way. The Honourable Member on the testimony of this murderer and perjurer witness alleged that there was no terrorism in the Punjab before October, 1928. As a statement of fact that is, of course, entirely inaccurate. The Honourable Member has evidently forgotten the two Dusserah outrages which were the worst outrages from the point of view of casualties of any that took place in the Punjab. One, I think, caused the death of nine and wounded fifty people, the other caused the death of ten and injured fifty-eight. These outrages happened at the Dusserah festivals of 1926 and 1928, before any such incident....

Mr. Sham Lal : They were not political murders.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : They were political murders. I think I can claim a good deal more knowledge of this than the Honourable Member. The Honourable Member has entirely ignored the fact that the principal terrorist gang in the Punjab, led by that "splendid hero" Bhagat Singh, who did not even kill his man himself but merely shot him as he lay helpless and unconscious on the ground—long before 1928 and was well-known to the police.

Mr. Sham Lal : On a point of order, Sir.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No point of order has arisen. Bhagat Singh was a leading member of the Naujivan Sabha, an association that was in existence long before 1928. Bhagat Singh was actually arrested but was discharged because at that time—that was the beginning of 1927—no sufficient evidence was available. His gang was the direct descendant and comprised the remnants of the gang which committed the Kakori dacoity in the United Provinces in 1925. It is absurd to assert, and it is entirely unsubstantiated and uncorroborated, that there was no terrorism in the Punjab before 1928.

The second premise of the Honourable Member is that on the 30th October, 1928, in the course of a demonstration by a disorderly crowd against the arrival at Lahore of the Simon Commission, Lala Lajpat Rai was assaulted by the police. That again is entirely untrue. An enquiry was held by the Senior Commissioner of the Punjab and it was found that this disorderly crowd placed deliberately some political leaders, Lala Lajpat Rai and one or two others, at their head and tried to force their way through a barbed wire barrier which they knew had been erected to keep them back. That was a deliberate act of defiance which every one in the crowd knew perfectly well would have only one result and which was intended to have only one result, and that was to bring the crowd into conflict with the police.

Sardar Sant Singh (West Punjab : Sikh) : Does the Honourable Member mean....

Some Honourable Members : Order, order.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The crowd, according to plan, came into conflict with the police. A sergeant was knocked down by the crowd and into the gap caused by his fall they pushed forward their leaders and they in turn had to be pushed back by the police. The only blow that fell on Lala Lajpat Rai fell on his umbrella. He was not hurt himself at all and the best proof of that is that, although he was at the time a very sick man, he made a speech the same evening lasting for an hour and a quarter and spoke with all his usual vigour and showed no signs of any physical disability whatever.

Sardar Sant Singh : Oh, I see ! What a shame !

A few Honourable Members on the Congress Benches : Deliberate lies.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair cannot allow that sort of expression.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : If any one was to blame for what happened, it was the people who so foolishly insisted on placing these political leaders in the forefront of a mob that they knew was bound to come into conflict with the police.

The Honourable Member, having misinformed the House to that extent, went on to draw certain inferences out of the Lahore Conspiracy Case in which he appeared as principal defence counsel. That was a case that lasted for a very long time, in which the Honourable Member drew very handsome fees from Government. The Government appointed and paid for the Counsel for the defence in that trial which lasted for over three years. The Honourable Member, I think, got about half a lakh of rupees in fees and as a result of that, rose from the position of a comparatively unknown mofussil lawyer to the position of a Congress leader and a Member of this House. He made a great point out of the question of detention in police or judicial custody of a certain approver in that case, and, in connection with that point, he made a strong personal attack on myself, alleging that I had defied the orders of the High Court and that I had abused the powers of the executive and so on. The actual facts were these. The approver in question was detained, and detained for very good reasons, according to the practice that had invariably been followed in all such cases, without objection in the past, in police custody. The reasons were obvious, first, that the approver being a member of a gang of very desperate murderers was naturally in grave danger of his life if he were compelled to remain in the same jail as the associates, whom he had betrayed, and secondly, that if he was in a position where his associates could tamper with him there was every chance—as they were entirely unscrupulous people,—there was every chance that they would induce him to retract his statement, and that is in fact what he eventually did. For those reasons the approver in question was kept, according to the usual practice, in police custody. He made certain allegations that he was being ill-treated. Those allegations were found by the High Court to be entirely false. My Honourable friend read many quotations from the High Court judgment but he did not read this. The Judges said :

"We are not satisfied that, in spite of being in police custody, which was subsequently held to be illegal, Indar Pal was either subjected or threatened to be subjected to any such ill-treatment as would make his statement inadmissible..... Apart from his own statement, there is no evidence to show that he was in any way ill-treated by the police."

[Sir Henry Craik.]

His own statement being, of course, perfectly worthless. An application was made to the Tribunal which was trying this case that he should be transferred to judicial custody. That application was rejected by the Tribunal but on appeal it was accepted by the High Court who held that it was illegal,—that the practice, which as I have said had been an age-long practice, of keeping approvers in police custody was illegal. The approver was accordingly transferred to a jail after special arrangements had been made so that he could be kept separate from his other associates implicated in this criminal conspiracy. For a day or two, but not longer, till those arrangements were completed, he was kept in the Fort in Lahore, which for that purpose was declared to be a jail. Immediately the High Court held that that was illegal, in fact, I think, before their decision was actually communicated to Government, he was removed to a jail. So much for that point. There was no defiance of the High Court orders and there was no application to the Government of India for an Ordinance. All these are figments of the Honourable Member's fertile brain.

Now, Sir, before I proceed further to deal with the Honourable Member's allegations, I think the House should be made aware of what was the main nature of this Lahore Conspiracy case. The principal charge against this gang, which consisted originally of 21 or 22 people, was what were known as the booby-trap bombs. The secret society which perpetrated these diabolical offences was known as "the Atishi Chakar", or the fiery wheel or circle. On the 19th June, 1930, there occurred simultaneously a series of outrages at six separate places in the Punjab which, for devilish ingenuity, have not, I think, been surpassed by any terrorist outrage anywhere else in India. Simultaneously on the morning of that day, small explosions occurred in untenanted or empty rooms in houses in Lahore, Amritsar, Gujranwala, Sheikhupura, Lyallpur and Rawalpindi. I would ask the House to remember Rawalpindi, because I will have to come back to that place later. The object of these small explosions was to ensure that the police should immediately proceed to investigate their causes and the police promptly did this in every case. In every one of these rooms there was arranged a diabolically ingenious trap, which contained a much more violent explosive, so arranged either in a small box or some kind of vessel that it should explode immediately it was touched. As a result of these second explosions in Gujranwala, one police officer was killed and several were wounded. As a result of the explosion in Lyallpur, one police officer was very seriously wounded and subsequently died and a second was blinded in one eye. That officer who was blinded was the eldest son of an old friend of mine and I remember his lingering in agony for many months and eventually he had to be invalided out of the service and though he is still comparatively young, he is now a broken man. Fortunately, in the other four places, this abominable plot was not successful, though in some cases some of the police officers had very narrow escapes. In one case, the explosive was in a closed box and instead of opening it or picking it up as most people would have done, the police officer turned it over with his foot, so that the bomb instead of hitting the detonator slid up against the lid of the box. Anyhow the plot was successful to this extent that two police officers were killed, several were wounded and one was blinded and had to leave the service. I do not know if Honourable Members who were so lavish in their praise of murderers the other day extend their meed of praise to those who brought about these results. For my part, I feel nothing but the most intense indignation for these abominable crimes.

It was the people who were guilty of that plot who were tried in the Lahore Conspiracy case. The Honourable Member speaking the other day gave the impression that the case was fabricated and supported by perjury and so on.

Mr. Sham Lal : On a point of explanation. I did not say that the case was fabricated. What I submitted was that the evidence was fabricated.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : But the Honourable Member entirely omitted to mention the result of the case. He gave the impression, perhaps unwittingly, that the only features of this case of any importance were the perjury and forgery alleged to have been committed by police officers. He omitted entirely to mention that of the twenty-one or twenty-two persons sent up for trial, 16 were convicted. The case was withdrawn against one as he was too ill to appear in Court. Four or five were discharged. The other 16 were convicted and the High Court which heard the appeal upheld the conviction of 14 out of the 16. The case was obviously one of extreme difficulty. Although the principal outrages were committed in the middle of June, the police officers could not get a clue till the end of August. In the end, the case resulted in the conviction of an overwhelming majority of the accused.

In decanting at great length on the sins of omission and commission of the police, the Honourable Member relied to a considerable extent on the statements of Inderpal. He also quoted certain extracts from the appellate judgment of the High Court. He conveniently omitted to quote a very relevant and very important sentence. The High Court said, and this was quoted by the Honourable Member, that "the trial has become so complicated and prolonged so inordinately merely because the police did not place a true picture of the investigation, as it proceeded, before the Court". The next sentence he omitted to quote and I will quote it. This is how it ran :

"But in fairness to the police and the magistrates concerned we feel bound to record that it has not been shown that there was any deliberate attempt to introduce any falsehood into the case or to implicate any innocent person. The desire to suppress all discrepancies and inaccuracies apparently sprang from over-zeal but it has led to disastrous consequences."

Then, a great deal was made about the alleged substitution of a page of Inderpal's statements. He made an enormous number of statements, and he constantly contradicted himself and lied :

"We are prepared to believe"—said the Judges of the High Court—"that this substitution was made with Inder Pal's consent, but the emphatic denial of the magistrate on this point throws a great doubt in our minds on his fairness as a magistrate and his veracity as a witness."

Now, Sir, the investigation in this case, as I say, was a very long one ; the trial itself lasted for three years, and it was a long time before the police got on to the track of the murderers. Throughout the course of these investigations, and throughout the trial, they had to contend with the very greatest difficulties,—with unscrupulous attempts on the part of the defence to tamper with the witnesses, and with all sorts of plotting, intrigues and machinations to try and ensure the failure of the case. (Hear, hear.) It is not altogether unnatural that in a case involving the death and wounding of so many of their comrades, the police should have shown a certain amount of over-zeal (Interruptions), but as the Judges of the High Court said, there was no attempt to implicate any innocent person, and there was no attempt to introduce any falsehood of any kind. The case was eventually, after the most careful, and possibly one of the most prolonged trials in the history of criminal jurisprudence in India, entirely or almost entirely successful. (Hear, hear.)

The Honourable Member said, quite untruly, that the police officers concerned had been promoted and given titles and honours by the Government. That statement, Sir, is entirely and completely incorrect. The Government held a careful investigation into the matter: no officer was promoted, one at least was severely censured, and it is entirely untrue to say that anyone was rewarded with a title or the grant of rank. (Interruptions). I do not give way. He further alleged that what happened in this case showed that 75 per cent. of the entire police in the Punjab were corrupt and perjurers. That, of course, is a fantastic and wild statement. (Interruptions.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I took down his exact words :

“ 75 per cent. of the entire police force are corrupt and perjurers.”

As a matter of fact, in this particular case, a very large number of police officers were engaged. The case concerned, as I have said, not only the Central C. I. D., but it concerned the police of no less than six districts, and possibly more than the six districts where the explosions took place. The number of police engaged in the case must have been at least fifty or sixty. Against only four of them were any charges made, or any malpractices alleged,—and that is what the Honourable Member chooses to distort into “ 75 per cent. of the entire police force of the Punjab ”. (Hear, hear.)

Sir, I have said that the police had to contend, in this case, with grave difficulties and with persistent attempts on the part of the defence to tamper with the witnesses for the prosecution. Now it is a good thing, I find as a rule, to follow the old proverb that “ people who live in glass houses should not throw stones ”. (Ironical cries of “ Hear, hear ”), and another pertinent proverb is that “ the pot should not call the kettle black ”.

Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : So you are black.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have here, Sir, documentary evidence to show that persistent and successful attempts were made by the defence to tamper with the witnesses for the prosecution, and that the Honourable Member who brought these charges was himself implicated up to the hilt in these attempts. (Hear, hear)

Mr. Sham Lal : On a point of order, Sir, the Honourable Member is making a most serious charge against me. ....

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am making a most serious charge. And the Honourable Member himself made a most serious charge against me.

Mr. Sham Lal : Then the Honourable Member should have prosecuted me. These must be the reports from the very C. I. D.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Mr. President, on a point of order—I am not able to lay my hands on the number of the rule, but I believe I am correctly repeating the exact words, which are : “ no Member, while he is making a speech, should make a personal charge against another Member ”. I will give you that reference presently, and I submit that the Honourable the Home Member is now making a serious personal charge against another Honourable Member.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Honourable Member made a most serious personal charge against me.

An Honourable Member : Why didn't you object then ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I did object. I contradicted it. (Interruptions.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May we have a ruling on this point, Sir ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : There is no doubt that no Honourable Member of this House is allowed to make a personal charge against another Honourable Member. (Loud Applause.)

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am replying, Sir, to a most grave personal charge made by the Honourable Member against my honour and against the honour of the officers concerned.

An Honourable Member : You did not object.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am replying to that charge ; I am entitled to place before the House the evidence which I have to show that the charge was not only unfounded but malicious.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : As to the point of order, the Honourable Member is perfectly entitled, if he is attacked, to defend himself. (Loud Applause.) (Interruptions.)

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : As regards the Rawalpindi outrage, there were at least two witnesses from Rawalpindi who were prepared to swear to the identity of one of the accused persons as having been seen near the scene of the outrage either just before the explosion or just after—I forget which—anyhow the point is not material. Anyhow those were vital witnesses of identity. Their names were Syed Alam and Karam Din. There was a person living in Rawalpindi called Gopal Singh,—an employee of a certain contractor there. On the 20th March, 1933, this Gopal Singh—who appears to have been an agent of the defence—wrote to the Honourable Member, who was the leading counsel for the defence, a letter, of which this is a literal translation :

“ Dear Lala Sham Lal,

I have tried to approach Syed Alam. He has become all right.....Please send a copy of the statement that he has made.”

(Interruption by Professor N. G. Ranga) : Is that Mr. Ranga again ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair would ask the Honourable Member, Professor Ranga, not to go on interrupting like this.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik :

"I have tried to approach Syed Alam. He has become all right. Please send a copy of the statement that he has made and the amendments you want in detail (Laughter) so that he might be instructed. Please send the statement soon, as I have to go to Murree after finishing this work soon. Also please send a copy of the statement that Karam Din (that was the other witness) has made together with the amendments you desire in detail. (Laughter.) You will have to send the statements of both the persons."

Enclosed with this letter was a loose sheet, not in a separate envelope, addressed to Krishan Gopal, one of the accused persons—the accused man against whom these two people were going to give evidence.—He was staying apparently with the Honourable Member. His postal address, at any rate, was the same. The enclosure read as follows :

"I have settled with Syed Alam : Karam Din also agrees. The bargain has been struck at Rs. 100. We have decided to deposit it somewhere. We will have to give it to them when they have given their statement. (They would not trust them.) Please send the amount as soon as possible as I have to go to Murree soon....."

Mr. Sham Lal : May I point out, Sir, that that man was tried for tampering with prosecution's evidence and the case was withdrawn by the Crown. (Cries of "Shame, shame" from the Congress Party Benches.) Why did they withdraw the case?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I know that perfectly well. It is clear that my arguments have gone home with the Honourable Members opposite from whom I never expected the ordinary courtesies of debate. What did not come out in that case was the Honourable Member's personal complicity in this disgusting transaction. (Continued Cries of "Shame, shame" from the Congress Party Benches.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair would ask the Honourable Members not to go on shouting in this way.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Sir, my Honourable friend, the Home Member, is perfectly entitled to reply to any charge which an Honourable Member of this House might have made against him by making a categorical statement, but I submit that no personal charge against the Honourable Member can justify his making a counter and vile personal charge against another Honourable Member. I request you, Sir, to give a ruling to keep up the dignity of the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair has already given its ruling that there should not be any personal charge made by one Honourable Member against another Honourable Member in this House. But, if an Honourable Member is attacked, he is perfectly entitled to defend himself, and, in defending himself, if it is found necessary to point out that one Honourable Member, who made the charge, made it recklessly or without evidence or without any reference to facts, he is entitled to point that out.

As the Honourable the Home Member is likely to take some time, the Chair thinks it had better adjourn the House.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Sir, before I proceed with the main narrative of these somewhat sordid events, I must correct one statement that I made this morning. I am very anxious not to say anything that can possibly be considered an exaggeration. I said this morning that one of the police officers who was wounded by the "booby-trap" bombs had to be invalided from service because he lost the sight of his eyes. I am glad to find that I was mistaken in that. Though the officer lost the sight of one eye and though the medical board actually recommended that he should be invalided, as the sight of the other eye was expected to be lost, eventually the skill of the oculist managed partially at any rate to save the sight of one eye and I am glad to say that it was found not necessary to invalid him from service, but it has been found possible to give him light duties such as he is physically capable of performing. That is a small correction I should like to make.

Now, Sir, before luncheon, I read to the House a letter addressed to the Honourable Member from Rohtak by a man named Gopal Singh of Rawalpindi. I should like the House to remember the date of that letter. It was received on 21st March, 1933. On the 22nd March, a reply was sent to this man Gopal Singh at Rawalpindi, not by the Honourable Member from Rohtak, but by the accused person Krishna Gopal who was then on bail and who was closely concerned with this evidence that was coming from Rawalpindi. I will read that letter :

"Bother Sardar Gopal Singh,

I am in receipt of your letter and have understood the contents. Don't you worry. Arrangements will be made regarding the money. The money however can be delivered when he comes to this place,"—that is when the witness comes to Lahore from Rawalpindi—"You can assure them through some reliable person. I shall explain to you full particulars on my return to Rawalpindi, as these home affairs should not be reduced to writing."

The last clause is a very wise observation. The rest of the message is irrelevant and so I need not read it. Now, Sir, that was on the 22nd March, 1933. I should like the House to mark what the sequel was. On the 26th May, 1933, that is two months later, these two witnesses with whom the defence had been tampering were produced before the Tribunal and I will read—I will not give my own version of what happened—I will read an account written on that very date by an eye-witness who was present in Court. The account runs as follows :

"There was a considerable amount of excitement in the Tribunal's court today,"—(that was 26th May, 1933), "when Karam Din, the witness was being re-cross-examined by Kapur", (that was the Junior Defence Counsel). "The latter started to ask him a question with regard to certain matters of identification in Rawalpindi. Karam Din suddenly burst into tears and wept for a considerable time. The defence and the accused were over-joyed at this as they thought that his tears were the fore-runners to allegations he was going to make against the police. Sham Lal and Kapur joined with the Judges in an effort to calm him down so that he might have a fair hearing. Eventually peace was restored and Karam Din stated that his distress was due to the fact that a friend of one of the accused, Krishna Gopal, had approached him in Rawalpindi and had asked him to commit perjury in favour of the accused, that the person who had been to him in Rawalpindi was Gopal Singh and that he (Gopal Singh) had obtained instructions from the defence Counsel regarding the answers which Karam Din was to give to the questions that would be asked him by the defence in this case. As he had failed in court to carry out what has been told to do, he was afraid of what would happen to him when he went back to Rawalpindi and he, therefore, craved the Court's protection. This bomb-shell caused considerable consternation and the Tribunal held, after discussion and after hearing the protests of the prosecution Counsel, that as Karam Din had not in fact gone back on his statement the attempts to make him commit perjury were irrelevant in this case and the matter therefore should not go on record. They, however, said, that they would bear the matter in mind and would be prepared to listen to any reference concerning this made by the prosecution at any future date. Karam Din was told that if he cared to submit an application the President would see that it received consideration. I understand that he is submitting a petition to the Tribunal asking for protection. The result of all this was that when Sayyid Alam, the second witness from Rawalpindi, appeared, the defence asked him only one or two questions of little importance, although this Sayyid Alam is probably the most important Rawalpindi witness and his re-examination was expected to last for hours. Karam Din stated in court that Sayyid Alam had also been asked in Rawalpindi to go back on his statement."

Now, Sir, if any corroboration is required as to the genuineness of the letters and correspondence which I have read out to the House, that statement recorded at the time, by an eye-witness, is surely the fullest possible corroboration that human ingenuity could devise.

I will now inform the House what the sequel was. This man Karam Din went back to his home in Rawalpindi and he went before the District Magistrate. I think he had submitted a petition to the Tribunal at Lahore who forwarded it to the District Magistrate for disposal. Karam Din was summoned by the District Magistrate and made before him a statement on oath confirming all that I have hitherto recounted. He spoke of the attempts to tamper with him and so on, the threats that had been given to him regarding what would happen to him if he did not alter his statement. On that Government decided to prosecute this man Gopal Singh, the Rawalpindi agent who had got at these two witnesses, and a prosecution under section 214 of the Penal Code was actually started in the Court of a Magistrate at Rawalpindi. The Honourable Member from Rohtak in one of his numerous interruptions this morning made great play of the fact that that prosecution was ultimately withdrawn. I will explain exactly why it was withdrawn; and here again I will not use my own words but I will quote from a letter written by the Superintendent of Police at Rawalpindi explaining the circumstances. It says:

"Upon an affidavit sworn by Karam Din we have lodged a complaint under section 214 of the Indian Penal Code against Gopal Singh in the court of the Cantonment Magistrate, Rawalpindi. When the case was called the defence counsel contended that the case could not proceed unless Krishna Gopal, accused in the bomb case, is first convicted of the substantive offence, and in support of this he quoted a Madras ruling. His contention appears to be sound though it is possible that the Legal Remembrancer could produce some ruling to the opposite effect. I must confess that at the moment I can find nothing to oppose the Counsel's contention and would be grateful if you would let me know when the original case against Krishna Gopal pending before the Special Tribunal is likely to be decided."

That letter was written on the 28th August, 1933, and the Superintendent of Police was told in reply that the Tribunal was at the moment having a vacation, that it was impossible to say when the case would finally be decided by the Tribunal and that it was of course impossible to say what would be the verdict in the case of Krishna Gopal. Eventually this man Krishna Gopal was acquitted and it was, therefore, held that it was not possible to proceed with the charge against Gopal Singh. That, Sir, was the only reason why that prosecution was withdrawn. It may be asked why with these facts in our possession Government did not produce them before the Courts, either before the Tribunal which was then engaged in the trial or before the High Court, with a view to reporting the professional misconduct of one of the High Courts' officers. That course was carefully considered but it must be remembered that at the time this evidence came into our possession, that is to say, in March of 1933, this extremely lengthy trial had then been proceeding for a period of over two years, and it was impossible to foresee how long it would take to reach its conclusion. Had we taken steps either to bring to the knowledge of the Court that attempts were being made to tamper with witnesses or to bring to the knowledge of the High Court that the principal counsel for the defence was in our opinion guilty of grave professional misconduct....

Mr. Sham Lal : Sir, on a point of personal explanation....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member should go on; he is not making any charge against the Honourable Member.

Mr. Sham Lal : Yes. I may inform the House that I did not represent Krishna Gopal.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Had we taken either of those courses we would have seriously prejudiced the accused persons in their defence. Further, we should probably have made it necessary for this very long and very expensive trial to commence all over again from the beginning with a new counsel; and it might have been a perfectly good plea to put in that the new counsel was not acquainted with all the details of the case. Most of the evidence had been recorded by then and it might have been necessary to start the entire case again from the beginning.

3 P.M.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras ceded Districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, on a point of order, how is all this relevant?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : There is no point of order; it is perfectly obviously relevant. I am explaining why we did not take.....

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Sir, when a point of order is raised, is it for the Honourable Member to reply that it is perfectly relevant, without giving an opportunity to the Chair to give its ruling?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair gave its ruling already.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That, Sir, seems to me a completely adequate explanation for the failure to take what might have been suggested was an obvious action on the information in our possession.

I have only this to add, that if the speech of the Honourable Member from Rohtak is a fair specimen of the Congress or his party's case in favour of this legislation, then all I can say is that it is no case at all. I can only say that I am amazed, and I think the House too must be amazed, at the effrontery that can put forward a case such as he put forward the other day in support of this legislation.

Maulana Shaukat Ali (Cities of the United Provinces : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I was very anxious that this House and the country should be spared the acrimonious discussion we have had over the Criminal Law Amendment Bill and other repressive laws, and if you remember, Sir, I made an earnest appeal on my bended knees that these should be withdrawn and the country should be given a chance, so that we could work in a calmer atmosphere in the Constitution that is coming. I am sorry that there has been a good deal of display of temper, and I think it has not been the monopoly of this side (Congress) only. We have seen and heard the Honourable the Home Member, and I was surprised that a responsible official of his age and his experience should have made assertions which no one, who feels for his country, could easily tolerate. Unfortunately we on this side are only an opposition ; they administer the law, they rule the country and they have not got to suffer for the bad laws that they make. I speak today, because I am a worker in the cause of Islam and in the cause of my country, and I have suffered also from the bad laws that they made. Government's Benches have been talking very lightly of murders and sympathy with murderers, but if we use the same kind of argument that they use, I can ask the Honourable the Home Member, what about the 69 murders that were committed in Karachi ? Sir, when this case of Abdul Qaiyum came to our notice, we made a serious effort to stop such cases in future. He had killed another man in Karachi, and the Islamic law on the point was very clear. As you know the Holy Qoran says :

"Lakum fil kasas la hayat."

"Which means that the secret of life lies in taking life for life." We waited with some of our friends on the Honourable the Home Member. He was very kind and very patient, and we put our case before him and he heard us very patiently. It was decided by Government that as Abdul Qaiyum had taken one life, he ought to give his life. We have no quarrel with that decision, but we expected in the cause of peace in the country that the Honourable the Home Member would have sent for us, and, if he had done that and asked our advice, I am certain that some of us would have gone to Karachi and would have arranged to take the body of Abdul Qaiyum to a place where thousands would have joined the funeral prayers and paid the last honours to the deceased and the 69 valuable lives and so many wounded would have been spared. I am afraid, believing in their monopoly of good sense and wisdom, the officials do not want to listen to us and they do not want our advice : they only want our votes to help them to pass such laws. I for one, who have suffered through bad laws and have been forced into a position which I never like, declare frankly that you cannot expect us to put our necks into the noose like this voluntarily. The Criminal Law Amendment Bill has been passed. Personally I do not see any reason for these repressive laws of 1908 to spoil and disfigure the Statute-book. They only make the country bitter and more bitter, and they are of no use or efficacy. I was a Government servant for 17 years—meritorious service and fine record. But things happened to my faith in India and outside in Moslem Lands and we decided that we could not keep quiet : and I and my late brother and those who thought with us, including some of the greatset Ulemas in the country, men well-known for their character and for their piety, were hauled up and forced into a position which we did not like. If the Government make bad laws and punish us afterwards for our belief, then, it must lose our support. My loyalty is conditional. As long as I am allowed to practise my faith as freely as I want, I would be willing to be a subject of His Majesty the King Emperor. But if you pass such laws and force me into a position which I as a good and God fearing Muslim, thinking of my eternal life, am not prepared to accept, then you punish us and send us to prison. What was this Karachi state trial to which we were subjected ? My brother, myself, Dr. Kitchlew, Maulana Hussain Ahmad, Pir Ghulam Mojaddid and Mufti Nissar Ahmad were tried at Karachi and Government wanted to give us life sentences, but we got only two years each. We had preached only what the Holy Qoran ordained on every Muslim : and I would like to ask those Muslims who always go and vote with the Government to listen and say if I am quoting the Qoran correctly or not. I ask Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi, Mr. Yamin Khan, and other Government supporters to let the House know what they think about the Qoranic Text :

"Waman Yaktul Momenan Motaamedan, fa jazaohum Jehannam, etc."

"If one Muslim intentionally goes and kills another Muslim, then his punishment is Jehannum, eternal fire and God's wrath, and so forth."

Suppose our Muslim brethren are threatened and attacked unjustifiably in Palestine or Syria or elsewhere, then that very fact changes our politics. To please Italy and wean it off from the Triple Alliance, Tripoli was given to her, Morocco and Algeria was given to France ; Egypt was taken over by England itself, Persia was to be divided north and south, the north was to go to Russia and the south to England. Each time England wanted to get into an advantageous position, they did so at our expense. I am a Muslim, thank God. I have not invented my faith, nor has my friend, Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi nor Mr. Yamin Khan, nor any of my other friends there, who support the Government : they are not responsible for our faith. Over 1,300 years ago, the last of the Prophet (God's peace be on him) came and he gave us our laws and we cannot accept any laws that clash with them.

From 1908, when I was in Government service, you have tried these repressive laws. Day by day, the condition in India is getting worse, and I want to warn the people responsible for them. I want to co-operate with them, but they make it impossible for me to do so. Every day the condition is getting worse. I know what the effect of the Criminal Law Amendment Act debate and today's debate will be on the country. I am not a very learned man. I do not know much law, but I understand one thing probably more than most, and that is mob psychology. The speech which you had cheered,—the Honourable the Home Member's speech today will create millions of terrorists. The time has come when Government must change this attitude, and if they do not change it, and if they do not withdraw these repressive laws, it will be bad for us and worse for them. I am against all repressive laws. By all means frame laws for thieves, evil-doers and murderers : but you cannot include us in that category—we are God-fearing respectable people. I tell you, not one blackguard, not one thief, not one murderer, not one habitual criminal can ever be checked by these laws. You merely bring bitterness into our hearts. I have no bitterness in my heart, I have not allowed it, but the bitterness is getting into the heart of the country, and I say frankly, that if things go on like this for another ten or fifteen years, there will be a bloody revolution in this country. Why these laws now? The new reforms are coming: we will be in the place which the officials occupy now. The Constitution is not what we wanted or what we expected or what we deserved. Yet, many of us will work this Constitution and we are often told that our co-operation is wanted. I say: "I will give them that co-operation on certain conditions" and I also say: "bring a great deal of pressure on our friends Congressites here that they must work the reforms and give the reforms a fair chance". But with what face can I go to them and ask them to work this Constitution with these laws on the Statute-book? A few years hence, when we will be in charge of our own affairs, we will be perfectly entitled to look after our own affairs and make our own laws. I mean no disrespect to my Honourable friend, the Law Member. He is a very able man, and I know he has come here at great personal sacrifice giving up his huge practice, to take up this work. But he will agree with me that there are as good people in Bengal as he. He himself will say so. There is my friend, Sir Muhammad Zafrullah, whom I know intimately: there are as good people among the Muslims as he—I mean no disrespect to him. I am proud of him, and I am proud of all Indians who sit on the front benches; they carry on the work of this House and the administration of this country with great capacity: but I for one will honestly tell them through you, Sir, and I will tell the whole House that those who think that India will lapse into chaos, the day the English disappear, are very much mistaken. If one fine morning we find that every Englishman and Englishwoman and every administrator have developed angelic wings on their shoulders and flew away from this unfortunate and unwanted country and gone back to their own beautiful land, I assure you, Sir, there may be an astonishment, and temporary dislocation of work for a week or few days, but within ten days the administration will be as good, if not better than what it is today. (Opposition Cheers.) The time has come to conciliate. You have tried all measure of repression. I have been a prisoner, and I know prison life. I told you the other day about habitual criminals. I say at the rate that you are going, you will soon make 350 million of Indians habitual criminals. Every repressive law means that the criminals also develop further capacity and ingenuity to commit more crimes and get hardened. Every day, new laws are being created for repression with no effect. I hear my friend, Mr. Morgan (European Group), laugh. Let me tell him I was a loyal subject. I wanted to be a good Muslim also. For all practical purposes I thought as they did and I wanted to be a friend: even now after a period of 20 years as an outlaw and rebel I want to co-operate with them. But what do I get? A great wrong was done to the Moslems at Karachi. Non-official Moslem members of both Houses, responsible men all of them, decided that as Government was not going to make an official inquiry we must go and ease the situation, soothe the Muslims, soothe their feelings and see that in future such things did not happen. With what result? Our entry into Sind was banned and I was to be finished—I was put down on the black list of the Government. My letters are being opened; and I appeal to my Honourable friend the Home Member—I do not know if he has read them—to read them kindly and see that they reach me alright. My wife's letters, love letters from my family and all kinds of letters addressed to me are opened. (Loud Laughter.) For the last 20 or 25 years, they have carried on this game, and, so far thank God, the Honourable the Home Member has found no letters to incriminate me. And yet I am a peace maker, Sir, in spite of all kinds of harrassment. They want my assistance, as they cannot carry on without me. I want to go to a place on a peace mission, suddenly the police officers and other Government officials want to show their displeasure and demand a security of Rs. 3,000 from my paper the Daily Khilafat. I started from Bombay for Sind, and a telegram was received all along the G. I. P. line that an eye was to be kept on me. At 2 o'clock after midnight, at Bhusaval, where they change for Nagpur side, a man comes and asks me: "Have your servants got tickets", because he wanted to know whether I was going to Delhi or to Nagpur. I always keep my heavy shoes beside me, and I would have thrown my shoes at this disturber of night's rest, but I desisted. The poor Railway official was prompted by a police man to wake me up against all railway rules. I went to Bhopal to meet my daughter-in-law and my sister-in-law, Begum Muhammad Ali, and also to pay respects to H. H. the Nawab Saheb of Bhopal. The police report had already gone ahead that Maulana Shaukat Ali was travelling by a certain train and his movements should be watched. Sir, the day I arrived in Simla to attend the Assembly Session and entered my host's house in Summer Hill, there was a police man with folded hands sitting on the verandah of the post office to watch my movements. When I go by rickshaw, these policemen, as they cannot follow me, ask the rickshaw coolies all about my movements. Thank God, I have been a very good boy in Simla. (Laughter), and there is nothing against me so far. I think the police must have given a very good report about me, and the Honourable the Home Member must have thought that, "unlike Lala Sham Lal, Shaukat Ali was a very good man". (Laughter.) Sir, I had never studied any revolutionary literature until I was sent to jail. The first book that I read was during the Karachi jail, Carlyle's French Revolution belonging to the Jail Library. We were to be imprisoned there for 20 years, but the Court gave us only two years. The second book that I read was Tharaud on "Civil Disobedience" and the third book was also given to me by the Jail Superintendent in Rajkot from his own station club library; and all these books dealt with the Irish question, and, later on, I came across the History of the American War of Independence. But, Sir, I have been watching all movements including the events of the Great War. I was not on the English side, because Islam was in danger and my Khalifa was forced to fight in self defence, and, therefore, I had to side with my Muslim brethren, and for me as against my faith, no Kingdom, no Empire, no loyalty, no Criminal Law Amendment Act would count, and, I am sure, every God-fearing Muslim will agree with me and fight for the safety and glory of Islam. But Sir, in the last war, India gave many thousands of men,—Hindus, Muslims, Sikhs and members from all communities. In 1917, when I was in prison, the late Mr. Montague promised on behalf of England, Self-Government for India within ten years. And we expected that we will get our promised reward; but, this is the year of Grace, 1935, and we see no signs of any reward ; on the other hand, we see very ugly signs or rewards like the Criminal Law Amendment Act, the Rowlatt Act and other Acts to keep down the people of this country. A great poet in India, a great friend of mine, told me once : " This Criminal Law Amendment Act is putting a seal on my brain and political muse ! " and I agree with him. Sir, the other day, we had a poets' gathering in Simla, and I think my friend, Mr. Yamin Khan, was sitting behind me ; and whenever a poet sang beautifully, I said to him, Criminal Law Amendment Act. My friend said, " No ! " A second time he also repeated a shame-faced " No ! ", but the third time, when a fine verse was sung, I said : " Criminal Law Amendment Act " and he said " Yes !!! ". (Laughter.) The only reward we got for our services in the last War was the Rowlatt Act—the Black Act as it is called. As soon as the War was over, they enacted the Jallianwalla Bagh scene in which Sir Michael O'Dwyer and General Dyer took a prominent part. They were lauded to the skies as saviours of the British Empire. It was said they had saved the British Empire. The Britishers subscribed and gave General Dyer a big purse and a " Sword of Honour " for his meritorious services to the Empire. And yet, after barely a year, the non-co-operation movement came in, and people of all classes and communities, Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs worked together for righting of the wrongs, and the future historian of India will chronicle all these events.

[Maulana Shaukat Ali.]

I am a worker for peace—triangular peace. Now, how can I go and ask my friends to work peacefully in the cause of the country ? I personally like the Honourable the Home Member very much, he is an honest man, but when he has been a party to the introduction of these Rowlatt Act, Criminal Law Amendment Act and such like Acts, under which people were made to crawl on their bellies, to write poetry on the ground with their nose, how can I ask the people to remain calm ? The Congress started the Civil Disobedience Movement, in spite of all your repressive Acts,—of course I was opposed to the Civil Disobedience Movement, because it was a sectional movement, started in spite of my advice and opposition to it, and my friends, Sir Ghulam Hussain Hidayat-alla and Dr. Deshmukh know it that I and my group fought against it. Yet though it was a sectional movement, it was four times stronger than the non-co-operation movement, in spite of all your Criminal Laws and other laws which have disfigured the Statute-book. Do you think you have been able to save India ? Do you think criminal laws of this character will ever be able to save this country ? I am afraid, Sir, they are making every decent minded man a revolutionary. Sir, I would appeal to the Honourable the Home Member as also to the Honourable the Law Member to please withdraw this measure. You have to conciliate the people of this country. Reforms are coming, you are going to give power into the hands of the people. Why do you produce bitterness in our hearts ? In your wisdom,—of course you think you have got the monopoly of wisdom,—in your wisdom you think we are all fools, we will blindly surrender to what you say and give you the votes you want. Under the present conditions, I would rather put the noose round my neck than vote for Government Repressive Laws. I even now beg of the Government to withdraw all these repressive laws. The Indian Penal Code is quite sufficient. Give us a chance for peace. I am not afraid to die, I am an old man. My father died at the age of 32, my brother at the age of 50, and my children died young, and I have lived my life, a very interesting life I can assure you, these 62 years, and I do not mind dying. But let us think of these young men, Muslims and Hindus, of Bengal or of any other province. Power is going to be given to us. The country is not going to stand any nonsense and to be treated as babies. I am not a baby. (Laughter.) For 600 years, my people have been soldier administrators. I am not that miserable thing which officials call " babu " or " banya ", I am soldier and fighter, and I knew this game. I say, in the interests of everybody, more in the interests of England, and also in the interests of India,—everybody's life should be happier if Government retrace their steps and give up this old road that has led them nowhere. If they do so, their administration will probably last longer. What may happen after fifty years, God alone knows. But if you trust India and win the goodwill of the people, India will be a happy country and England too. This is my appeal. If the Government want my vote, I won't give it to them as long as these repressive laws are on the Statute-book. I am a single man here, and I have no party, but in the next election I hope to have a very good party in this House. I say nobody will vote for you unless there is a change of heart and unless great and brave people as you are you stretch your hand and shake hands of the brave people of India, and then India, England and the whole world will be happy. (Applause.)

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya (Burdwan Division ; Non-Muhammadian Rural) : It is needless for me to say that I stand to support Mr. B. Das's Bill for the repeal of this obnoxious law and not to allow it to stultify the Statute-book any longer. In the last Delhi Session, when this Bill was under discussion, the Honourable the Law Member had taken great pains to read out from his book a list of names,—name after name he read on, but for what purpose I could not understand. Since 1905 we have been struggling for our inherent rights and several movements have come and gone and we, in Bengal, have identified ourselves with every movement. Sir, there came revolutionary movement before non-violent non-co-operation movement in Bengal, and naturally if there were some men who had been violent previously, they have been found to be in the non-violent movement when it was started in Bengal in 1921, and it required no proof. We never denied that there were some people in charge of District Congress Committees who were men previously pledged to or connected with violence, and when Mahatma Gandhi introduced this non-violent non-co-operation movement in Bengal they wanted to become non-violent, and it is a pity that Government did not like that they should be non-violent. If we examine the laws that are now governing Bengal, I feel inclined to say that Government prompt and incite Bengal to more violence. The whole responsibility for violence rests with Government and not with the Bengali people. With regard to this law, another question which the Honourable the Law Member asked, in reply to a statement by the Deputy President of the House in his last Speech—that " Hunger for food and hunger for freedom " made Bengal young men violent—he asked, " hunger for food and hunger for freedom is prevalent everywhere ", and why should there be violence in Bengal alone ? I may take the liberty to remind him of an old story from the pages of history. When Lord Clive was planning his campaign against Siraj there was a conference of the nobilities and gentries of Bengal to decide whether they should help the English to drive away Siraj from the throne or Musnad. There was one lady, a great lady, a Rani of Ranis, I mean Rani Bhabani whose name is sacred, whose memory is sacred,—she warned those gentlemen, those noblemen of Bengal not to excavate canals and bring crocodiles from the seas. Today Bengal is expiating the sins of her forbears. Bengal is expiating for their sins by giving her lifeblood. Up till 1905 Bengal had given slavery brand loyalty to England. Slavery I call it—because they remained mendicants for their rights and privileges, and it was not until Lord Curzon's speeches on the University Bill and his partition of Bengal, that Bengal rose from the torpor, Bengal rose from the slumber and took to direct action. During the partition days, under the leadership of the then Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjee, the boycott movement was launched. He said that so long as England and the British Government in India would not modify the partition there would be no end of boycott because a nation of traders would be moved only when their pockets were touched. That was the beginning of the movement. How did the bomb come? The first bomb that came was when, Sushil Kumar Sen, a boy of fifteen, was given a sentence of fifteen stripes, for he had paid in their own coin some three or more European Sergeants who attacked him in a melee in the Presidency Magistrate's Court. The action—the brutal action of the sergeants who belaboured the boy was never called into question, they were never punished, and that was the origin of the first bomb. His friends took it to heart to avenge that wrong. A boy of fifteen was given 15 stripes, and that in the name of law and order! When Khudiram Bose and Profulla Chaki had gone to Muzaffarpur and by mistake killed two ladies instead of Mr. Kingsford, their target elect—everyone in Bengal was sad. The two youngmen never thought of killing those ladies, they wanted to avenge the wrong done by Mr. Kingsford, the magistrate.

Sir, I do not for a moment stand here to support terrorism. I stand here only to show that it is the actions of the magistrates and officials in charge of Government that are responsible for terrorism in Bengal. In the name of law and order, they have insulted law and their own codes and they have introduced this cult of the bomb. Sir, in this connection I should like to read an extract from the Rowlatt Committee's report :

“He (Vivekananda) organised centres of philanthropic and religious efforts under the supervision of Ramakrishna Mission and carrying much further the teachings of his master, preached that Vedantism was the religion of the world and that although India was now subject to a foreign power, she must be careful to preserve the faith of mankind. She must seek freedom by the aid of the Mother Shakti. Vivekananda died in 1902. His writings and teachings survived him, have been popularised by the Ramkrishna Mission and deeply impressed many educated Hindus. From much evidence before us, it is apparent that this influence was perverted by Barindra and his followers in order to create an atmosphere suitable for the execution of their project. So indeed was the teachings of the Bhagvat Gita or Lord's Song of the Mahabarat Epic recited by Sri Krishna, the incarnation of the creator of the world before the great long ago battle of Karukshetra. But neither the religious teachings of Vivekanand nor the exultation of Sri Krishna in the Bhagvat Geeta would have afforded so moving a text to preach from had not the whole world, specially the Asiatic world been electrified and amazed by the victories of Japan over Russia at a time when within this country circumstances occasioned by certain Government measures specially favoured the development of Barindra's plans. Early in the century, Lord Curzon, then Viceroy, had introduced the University Bill which provoked much controversy and was interpreted by politicians as designed to limit the number of Indians educated in English and thus retard national advance. That was their idea and opinion. In Bengal, where as we have seen, English education had been largely adopted, opposition was intensely bitter and while the dispute was in progress, the Government projected partition of Bengal. It was the agitation that attended and followed on the latter measure that brought previous discontent to climax and afforded a much desired opportunity to Barindra and his friends.”

The members of the Rowlatt Committee deserve thanks for the saving grace to admit that it is the flouting of public opinion in Bengal that is responsible for the discontent and the bomb. Had this present law been in force then, the Ramakrishna Mission would have been its victim and the world would have been deprived of the great and noble service of this mission. If Swami Vivekanand had lived, he would have been a victim of this law if it was in force then and he would have been in jail. The partition of Bengal came and that was responsible for most of this discontent. During this partition agitation, the extremists and moderates formed themselves together into one group of politicians and they conducted a campaign against the partition which the Government declared to be a settled fact. Now, I have shown how the cult of the bomb was started and now I want to show how it spread. After Profulla Chaki died, Khudi Ram was under trial and ultimately executed. The Alipore Conspiracy case was started. Twelve young men were arrested and placed on trial and the trial went on for a year. The supposed leaders were Arabindo Ghose and Barindra Ghose. This is well known to everybody. Since 1906, this cult of the bomb and this revolutionary movement went on increasing in spite of all laws. In 1906 we had only two cases. In 1907 we had seven cases, in 1908 we have 21 cases, in 1908 five institutions were declared unlawful and there were 16 cases. In 1910, there were nine cases, in 1911, there were 14 cases, in 1912, 14 cases, 1914, 18 cases, 1915, 31 cases, in 1916, 12 cases, in 1917, 9 cases and then in 1922 came Mahatma Gandhi's movement, in 1922, there was one, in 1923, nine cases, in 1924, eight cases, in 1925, three, in 1926, one case, in 1927, there was one, in 1928, three cases and in 1929-32 there were seven cases. Regulation III of 1818 and regulation lathis were all in use and nobody could stop terrorism in spite of all laws. Terrorism is not and cannot be suppressed by law. Those who readily lay down their lives for any such idealism or foolishness as you call it, no law can stop them, no law can prevent them from their activities. It is very well known to everybody. The law is for those who obey law. Terrorists never mind any law. They have been inspired by laws of their own. They are actuated by their own sense of self-respect and a nation's prestige and they cannot live the lives of ordinary men. They are guided by their own light which burns within their souls. Consequently, even if this law is passed by this House, it can never stop terrorism, because so long as terrorism of the British Government will remain, terrorism of the people will continue to stay. There may be lull but they cannot be extinct.

Sir, I shall now come to the Civil Disobedience Movement of 1930, and I shall take Midnapore first. I shall start with the movement in Midnapore in 1930, and I know my Honourable friend, Mr. Griffiths, is here. I shall give this Honourable House an idea of how that poor district was governed in 1930. Sir, people who were aloof from the Civil Disobedience Movement will endorse every word I say in this House—men who are in the good books of the Government, men who are held in great esteem, men who have unbroken faith in the sense of justice of the British. Sir, with such men, an enquiry committee was formed to

Sir, with such men, an enquiry committee was formed to inquire into the atrocities of the Government in Midnapore during the Civil Disobedience Movement. Sir, during the previous debate my Honourable friend, Mr. Griffiths, gave us in his inimitable language and in a very impressive and eloquent speech an account of how simple-minded and enthusiastic young men were recruited to the ranks of terrorism by sinister agencies. Sir, it is, I say the action of the Government and not anybody else's action that forced these young men to join the ranks of terrorists and to run after the lives of those who were responsible for such atrocities in the name of law and order. Sir, everybody here is acquainted with the nature of the non-violent non-co-operation movement and the Civil Disobedience Movement. The main feature of both the movements is to accept "suffering and sacrifice" by defying certain "unrighteous laws"—laws which should not have seen the light of the day to stultify the Statute-book, and such laws were chosen to be broken by the Leader of the country. You know, Sir, that Mahatma Gandhi chose to break the salt law, and young men and young women from all parts of the province marched forward to manufacture salt in Contai, and this was on the 6th of April; and the 25th of April had been fixed as a day to stop the payment of the Chaukidari tax. So, Sir, this was the method of the struggle. Every one of the workers was pledged to remain non-violent, to observe non-violence in mind, language and deed. Sir, there was not one who could be charged with violence; there was not one who could be charged with any objectionable conduct, and they suffered in silence from all these atrocities during that work. Sir, I do not blame the district authorities for seeking to stop that attempt at breach of laws by the Congress workers, but, Sir, they made unprovoked assaults on the villagers; they damaged, destroyed and removed private properties; they threatened physical violence to people who did not follow them as slaves; they exacted promises and undertakings from poor villagers by assaults and threats; they forcibly took possession of buildings belonging not only to private individuals but to public bodies, like national schools, and they kept in some of the places of inadequate accommodation men in detention at Contai, and then there was wholesale detention without charge and without trial, and sometimes without food and drink of men who were only suspected to be sympathetic with the movement. Sir, I do not know if the Honourable the Home Member has in his possession the report of the non-official enquiry committee consisting of such distinguished and esteemed gentlemen as Mr. J. N. Basu, the great Liberal leader, Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta, our Deputy President, the late Mr. B. N. Sasmal, M.L.A., Mr. K. C. Neogy, M.L.A., Mr. P. B. Sen, P.R.S., Mr. P. C. Banerjee, Mr. L. C. Wahid Hussain, Advocate, Calcutta, High Court, Mr. J. N. Maitra, Councillor, Calcutta Corporation, and some other Members of the Bengal Legislative Council. Does anybody here who knows these names ever imagine that what they have inquired into and reported upon is all false? Sir, it is because, on the contrary, they stated what were facts, after proper inquiry, that this report was banned, and it could not be published for the public. Truth is very unpalatable specially to cowards and men with guilty conscience. (Hear, hear.) I say, Sir, if the Honourable the Home Member or the Leader of the House had the courage to place on the table of this House this report, then this House would have been able to understand the real situation at Midnapore during the Civil Disobedience Movement.

Sir, I shall now start with a few sketches of most inhuman fresh assaults which the members of this Committee saw with their own eyes. It was in Contai. The victims were (1) Bains Pradhan, of Baltalia, (2) Indra Jana of Bagdhia, and (3) an elderly woman named Suryya. Next they visited the scenes of looting and damaging of property in Subarnadighi village. There, one Mohendra Nath Samanto's house was entered into by the police, his house was pulled down, his articles were scattered, his papers, documents, etc., were thrown all over the yard, and the paddy bags were cut open and scattered. Next, the members visited a house close by and saw, to their horror, a girl of eighteen years, in an advanced stage of pregnancy, Ambu by name, breathing with difficulty, her eyes closed, with tears trickling, and she complained of her breasts being twisted, and of her being kicked about on the hips! (Hear, hear.) Sir, these people surely had not taken any part in the breaking of the "Salt Act", but they were suspected of being sympathisers. Sir, the local officers did not like that the visitors should have further opportunities of seeing these atrocious acts and to have further evidence of these oppressions. They were arrested by the S. D. O. for the time being but better sense prevailed and they were set at liberty. However, they recorded statements, observed wounds, inspected damages to property, although they were hampered, and they regretted to notice such want of administrative sense of executive capacity in the local officials concerned. In the afternoon, they reached Mirzapur, nine miles from Contai; they visited the Library Association where they would take evidence, and found the houses and the buildings of the national school all occupied by the police! Then the members took down these cases of assault and witnessed fresh marks of wounds on their bodies. From there they went to Nachinda and took the evidence of thirty eye-witnesses, and many of them were women who had marks of assault on their bodies!! (Hear, hear.) Sir, the martial spirit of the British Government was here manifested on the bodies of women in Midnapur, without any provocation on their part!! Sir, the Assistant Surgeon of Contai, a Government servant, will bear witness to this. In Contai town at Saraswatitala, an unprovoked assault had been made on the 8th of May, 1930, and the buildings of the national school, which had the reputation of being one of the best of schools in the district, if not the best, had been taken possession of by the police, and constables were lodged in that building on the 25th May. On the 25th May, there had been no case of any act of violence in Contai on the part of the villagers and yet all the teachers of this national school have been externed from the district. Can you imagine, Sir, how thoughtlessly the local authorities have acted and have been still persisting in this blunder? Is this the way by which the Government of India mean to bring peace to the country and restore law and order? Teachers are sacred and the profession of teaching is holy, as they by their examples build the character and by their elevating and ennobling teaching they make the future character of the nation. But, Sir, this Government do not leave anybody untouched, unscathed and unhurt. On the 26th of May at Kholakhali a large number of persons—all sufferers—wanted to hear witness. Seven were examined and most of them bore marks of assault on their bodies, assault by canes, lathies and kicks. One woman, named Kumari Dasi, was roughly handled to faint. In Egra, Babu Pashupati Maiti, a teacher, on his way to school, was assaulted with canes by police, because he put on Khaddar. In Gupinathpur—in village Bayenda—in discriminate assaults on bodies of villagers were inflicted and the Committee had seen fresh marks of assaults on bodies of many who appeared to give evidence. At Pratapdighi Patashpur thana shooting took place on 1st of June, 1930, resulting in the death of two persons. The father of one of the two persons killed was examined. Sir, the committee inquired if there had been any attempt on the part of the villagers to attack the police—any sort of provocation. There was nothing of the sort; only the movement was there. Looting of money, loss of silver and gold ornaments, was the common feature of these assaults. Sir, I can go on quoting this sort of assaults, this sort of oppression and this sort of tyranny on the part of the Government for hours together—if not days. But I think it is useless. It is not in Contai alone that these atrocities were perpetrated but they were perpetrated in many other places in Tamuk and Sudder sub-divisions. I will give you the instance of Charpalia. Now, Charpalia is a village in the police station of Egra, sub-division Contai. The committee visited the place on the 28th September, 1930. The tragedy of drowning is harrowing and exposes the bestiality and brutality of the Government in its nakedness. The site of the tragedy is a narrow lane between a large tank on one side of a fence in front of the house of Khirode Chandra Jana. On the 8th September, 1930, there was unprovoked assault by the police with lathies on a large number of villagers who had fallen into the tank opposite that house. Five dead bodies were found in the tank. On the 7th September some officials including Circle Officers, police officers, visited Charpalia with several policemen. Policemen were placed partly in the house of Brojo Mandal and partly in Khirode Jana's house. On the 8th September, a large number of people went on a deputation to the Circle Officer and they pleaded their inability to pay the Chaukidari tax on account of poverty. They wanted either remission or time. They were supplicant while parley was going on between the Circle Officer, the President of the Panchayat and the representatives of the people. Order was given to test the strength of the police lathies on the unarmed men without the least provocation. They were driven between the two detachments of police, one in front of Khirode Jana's house and the other at the back of Brojo Riandal's House. Sir, violence was absolutely one-sided. If they had any inclination to violence, they could have overpowered the police as they could have been out-numbered and lathies and brickbats could have been secured. Being attacked from rear and the front 200 men jumped into the tank to escape death and wound. People tried to get out of the water but the policemen standing on the bank belaboured them with lathies. They were severely hit on their heads and those who were swimming were pelted with hard sods. Sir, shall I go on describing this any further? I do not think the House requires it. I shall ask Mr. Griffiths if he requires any further enlightenment on the achievement of the executives of the Midnapore during the Civil Disobedience Movement. Sir, I have already said that five dead bodies floated in the tank and three of them had their heads smashed. I would like to ask the Honourable the Home Member if he had awarded police medals to these cold-blooded murderers of innocent men. Sir, do you know whom they had killed? Three of these persons were 20, 17 and 14 years of age. One Rudra Sasmal had gone to pay the Chaukidari tax. Sir, Charpalia has become the pilgrimage of the people of Midnapore and of the neighbouring district. Government may, if they like, raise Charpalia to the grounds or turn it into a bog.

Sir, I believe I have given sufficient food for consideration to the Honourable the Home Member and the Leader of the House. In spite of all this, most of the youngmen remained non-violent. I do not want to quote here any further deeds of oppression of the police on individuals who had taken part in the movement. Sir, it really puts me to shame to go on describing the atrocities committed on innocent people by the police in the name of law and order under the very nose of the district officers. Sir, I think it is now time for me to conclude my speech. But before I do so, I wish to make an appeal to the Honourable the Home Member. I request him to forget for the moment that I am an old revolutionary who is addressing this Honourable House. I have come here as a legislator and as such I feel inclined to tell this House the defects that I observe in these laws and to give a guidance to the authorities. I know our people better than they do and I know my young friends better than they do. All those persons who are now under detention are my friends, younger brothers and comrades. I feel for them because they have been kept in confinement for six years simply on suspicion created by informants. How long will they be there? On the eve of the reforms, of which the authorities are so proud, I would ask them not to stultify the Statute-book with this repressive law. This law cannot save India. It is only a policy of conciliation that can save India. Sir, England has already lost India just as Austria lost Italy when Mazzini was scheming his secret societies and sending his secret messages and pamphlets from England under the protection of the English people. Sir, England did not know that America was lost in spite of warning by Edmund Burke. The Czar of old Russia did not know that he was going to lose his kingdom and the whole royal family would be murdered. Sir, Lenin was a murderer; DeValera was a murderer; Mazzini was a murderer and you call these youngmen of Bengal murderers? I do not feel shame to call them murderers of the type. In every clime and age such murderers were born in the past and will see light in the future. Do not try to insult the intelligence of India by confounding between murderers and martyrs. They are all martyrs. We cannot forget the difference between the two classes of people I mean Dyers-O'Dwyers and these murderers. I cannot subdue my temptation to mention just three names out of these terrorists who are dead, names of which any nation should be proud. Sir, Kanai Lal Dutt, a young boy of 20 or 21 died, not to save his own life, but to save the life of many innocent souls. Narendranath Goswami the approver was made to entangle many an innocent man in that Alipur conspiracy case. The result was this, Kanailal sacrificed his life to save good many innocent lives. The jailor knew of what stuff he was made and what sublime character he possessed and how high his soul was soaring when he was waiting for his death in the condemned cell. Second man was, Sir, Jotindra Nath Mukherji—a man of such a character as to be found rarely in any country. Such characters are born in the world few and far between. Sir, ask the jailor of the time—of what stuff Dutt was made. Ask Sir Henry Wheeler and Sir Charles Tegart about Jotin Mukherji and they will endorse every word of appreciation of mine. These gentlemen were not murderers but martyrs. To call them murderers is to insult martyrdom.

Now, Sir, it is time for me to conclude, and I do so with an appeal to the Government not to press for keeping this obnoxious law on the Statute-book. I appeal with all earnestness that the law which has not served any useful purpose should not disfigure the Statute-book any longer.

Mr. Bhulabhai J. Desai (Bombay Northern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I had no intention of taking part in this debate, particularly because while speaking on the Bill of 1932 which was sought to be revived and made perpetual, there were certain important matters of principle with which I have dealt but the events which occurred today have made it necessary for me to perform what I feel a duty which I owe to those sitting on this side of the House. But before I deal with them in detail, it is also my desire to express in a very few brief sentences my own experiences of the manner in which the Act of which sections 15, 16 and 17 and 18 survive has been worked during the last four or almost five years, and of the way in which it has been operated. At the time when this Act was passed in 1908—and I have gone through the speeches with great care—it was stated in this House, on behalf of the Government, that a crime leading to violence and involving murder and looting was a crime that they could not detect and wanted to put down and for that purpose they wanted to be armed with special powers. As they always have done—and I do not wish to go over the ground which I have covered last time—either through negligence or through astuteness, this is what is incorporated in section 15 :

“ Association means any combination or body of persons whether the same be known by any distinctive name or not. Unlawful association means an association which encourages or aids persons to commit acts of violence or intimidation or of which the members habitually commit such acts.”

If the Act had stopped at that, it would certainly have served all the purpose for which it was intended. But, as is always the case and notwithstanding the charges that have been made I venture to repeat that the Government of this country in particular during the last some 20 years have always armed themselves by rushing legislation either through this House or its predecessor, created a scare and they have got what they wanted, in the first instance by the professed objects which they have in view, either as I said by a piece of ingenuity or otherwise they have got incorporated clause (b) which this House or its predecessor ought never to have passed and which they passed believing and hoping and trusting that the executive was what they professed themselves to be governing this country for its common weal and good and not for the suppression of all forms of national life and national consciousness. It was for that reason, though I do not wish to be uncharitable, but at all events it was with a view to catch whatever they thought was unfavourable to themselves whatever they thought was likely to hold its head against their supreme and sublime power that they had enacted in the law clause (b) or what has been declared to be unlawful by the Local Governments under the powers hereby conferred. It is those wide words, followed by the power conferred on the executive under section 16, which has made the Act pernicious in its operations, atrocious in all the work that it did. Sir,

I am often told to give facts. I challenge the other side to take the map of India as large as they like and plant the national flag which we adore on every single town or village in which an association was declared unlawful during the last period of four years and I defy them to see anything in that map at all. In other words every single association that stood for nationalism, and I know numerous ones in my part of the Province including those which had for their purpose no other than prayer and encouragement of other types of noble aim or physical exercise purpose intended for the purpose of amelioration of this land, was declared illegal by them having got this charter in their hands, an unholy charter used for unholy purposes. That is the way in which this Act has been worked. I am witness to the fact that in 1930—and all the law reports of all the Indian High Courts will bear witness to that fact—when every single case went up, in most of them fortunately I was associated for the defence during the first year until I myself became the victim of this particular Act, and I remember very well how this section 17 was applied. That section runs :

“ Whoever is a member of an unlawful association or takes part in meetings of any such association contributes or receives or solicits a contribution for the purpose of any such association or in any way assists the operations of any association shall be punished.”

The last part, “ assists the operation of any such association ” has been put to uses of which even the Courts of law became themselves ashamed. I know a case, and I will give you only one, where a meeting was going to be held at Chaupati sands which, even though the Bombay Congress Committee was declared unlawful, at all events purported to have been signed by somebody under the auspices of that association. The Commissioner of Police having come to know of that meeting himself published a proclamation under the Bombay Police Act prohibiting that meeting. A newspaper, a most respected and a most moderate one, one that has not yet come under the scrutiny of this vigilant Government published first the report that they had information about the meeting that was going to be held. Immediately below that, in the same column they published the proclamation of the Commissioner of Police and yet this Government, taking advantage of the language of the Act, put up the Editor for trial on the ground that he, by publishing the information as to that meeting, was assisting in the operations of the unlawful association. When I appeared before the Court, two Judges presided and I put it to them, was it unlawful to publish the words of the Commissioner of Police which said :

“ Whereas it has come to notice that a meeting is advertised to be held at Chaupati sands I hereby prohibit the same.”

That part was perfectly legitimate to be published in the newspapers and yet they said the section does not say that it is by any unlawful operations of any unlawful association. In other words, it is all very well to rely on promises made at the time when these Acts are passed, when the executive, with all care and protection of the millions of this land, come to you to be armed with authority. We have learnt by experience to see the use to which they can put it and the degree of insincerity and hypocrisy which they themselves have been guilty of, by reason of their own professions which they do not keep. Because their own Advocate General appears and stands before the Court saying, “ My Lord, what have you got to do with the promise of the executive except to give effect to this Act?" Where is the word "unlawful" before the word "operation"? It may be any operation, however lawful, however benevolent, however good, however progressive, however useful; but so long as we the condemned persons choose to do the right acts, even the right acts become unrighteous, and that becomes an offence under what is called the law of the land. It is, Sir, these two sections which now survive, and reading clause (b) and reading sections 16 and 17, it is one of those charters which have been abused during all the years of its existence in a manner that calls for a vote of this House for the purpose of its repeal. I would have undoubtedly given you a great deal more of detailed information about the working of this Act, had I the time at my disposal, but I have intervened in this debate for another purpose too.

I felt, Sir, during the time that the Honourable the Home Member was addressing the House this morning,—much as I respect his self-possession and his experience,—that he should not have really allowed himself to be carried away in the manner in which he did. Next to you, Sir, the Members on this side of the House look to me to protect their honour and their sense of respect, and it is, therefore, my duty to examine very briefly, and enter a humble but emphatic protest against the manner in which the privilege of the House was used. My Honourable friend, Mr. Sham Lal, only made charges, or what he called repeated the charges, proved against the police in the judgment of the High Court itself. The sentence on which he relied was this:

"We trust that the lesson to be learnt from this trial will be taken to heart and police officers who have at all times to perform a difficult task will never again disgrace their force and cause such a waste of public time and money as in this case."

He had, therefore, the authority of the judgment of the High Court in what has been described as a protracted trial to justify the position that he took up. His only ground was that the executive are apt to abuse the powers given to them, either by scaring the House, by creating a fright or by exaggerating dangers, and that, therefore, we should beware lest we should entrust them with too much power in advance, notwithstanding the promises of their good and benevolent use. My Honourable friend, Mr. Griffiths, seems to think that you can make any law you like and surrender the life and liberties of the people so long as the executive promises to use it mildly. I do not take such a view of the law or of the responsibility of this House. And when my Honourable friend got up to protest against the abuse of the law, as illustrated in the case in which he had the honour to appear, he came in for a personal charge against him. I am not here to question the correctness of the ruling of the relevancy of the episode. I would like to close it myself if I could, honourably to myself and honourably to those with whom I am associated. But he came in for a direct charge of having disgraced his profession and having disgraced himself. And to make it worse the Honourable the Home Member said that for reasons of prudence alone they did not take any action against him in the High Court of Judicature, forsooth with a view to save expense,—the last infirmity of which they can be accused. And yet, Sir, on what was that based? On two letters, one of which purports to have been addressed to one Sham Lal and presumably intercepted by the police. And if this is the manner in which documents are to be used in order almost to blackmail this side of the House, for indeed it is quite possible to produce any document which any man may produce and put it in the hands of the Honourable the Home Member, he may be perfectly entitled to believe that it is right or just or correct; but I trust that in his better judgment and in his calmer moments he will see that if a similar process were repeated against him from this side of the House he would be the first to protest against it as being almost infamous on our part. And yet that is the charge which he did not flinch from making on materials on which no responsible man and much more the Honourable the Home Member should act. As I said, I am one of those who have done my level best, almost against the grain sometimes, to maintain the traditions of a House of this character. I do not pretend to be a man who has been versed in them as you, Sir, have been. And yet the fact remains that there is something innate in a man's education and character which prevents him from doing things which after all our honour demands that we shall not do. And, Sir, it is that respectful protest that I wish to make. And the process of reasoning went like this. He says there were these two letters written, one to Sham Lal and one to Gopal Singh. After that certain events took place in Court; after that a certain statement was made in Rawalpindi; after that a prosecution was undertaken which was withdrawn; and yet, without the basic foundation which I hope and trust my Honourable friend will acknowledge that my Honourable friend, Mr. Sham Lal, did not appear for Krishna Gopal at all. And yet we have been entertained to an exhibition both of temper and of accusation which I think he will only do well not to repeat. What we do, therefore, is to enter our emphatic protest.

So far as his own conduct of the case was concerned, the Judges who tried it have said this:

"We cannot close this judgment without expressing our gratitude to the learned counsel on both sides for the great assistance they have given in this complicated case. They have shown complete mastery of details and the case has been presented on both sides with fairness and accuracy. Their ability and industry had shortened the hearing," etc.

Sir, on a former occasion also I entered my protest against what I called the argumentum ad hominem which cannot prove anything at all. And yet it is surprising to me that with that self-possession for which he is distinguished, the Honourable the Home Member still thought that by levelling a personal charge against Mr. Sham Lal the repeal of this Act would in the least degree have been affected. It almost looks, at least to my mind, as if having no better argument you try almost to foully and falsely accuse your opponents. That, I submit, is not the proper function of debate either on this side of the House or the other, and I shall stand for that principle and see that it is obeyed, so far as I can control the proceedings of this House, by advice, suggestion, persuasion or even a respectful appeal. That is the standard for which we stand in support of the traditions of this House, I say that two of these sections are formal and as regards the other, it is now time—it has lived 27 years in ignominy and to the prejudice and detriment of India and the national cause and it should now die a deserved death.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, in a way I feel grateful to the members of the Government for having revealed their attitude of mind and the policy for which Government stand today. It seems that the Government of India are so very decayed in their super-strength that they have to deliver speeches like those which came from the Honourable the Home Member and the Honourable the Law Member which are unworthy of any Government, not to speak of the present Government of India. Sir, I do not wish to refer to the long speech that the Honourable the Law Member made—lasting for three and a half hours : I would only interpret it by reminding the House that it is the old story of the wolf and the lamb ; whether the lamb itself polluted the water or his father did it or his grandfather did it, was no matter of concern to the wolf : and he promptly proceeded to devour the lamb : similarly, the Honourable the Law Member will not allow and will not tolerate the lambs of the Congress on this side. As for the Honourable the Home Member he showed a temper which I did not expect from a Home Member of the Government of India and I say his exhibition of temper was unworthy of him. I would only remind him of the writing of another very great—perhaps a greater—bureaucrat than himself, who was a General of the Indian Army and who became the head of the Irish Constabulary in Ireland in 1920. After being the head of the Black and Tan methods in Ireland and doing all the crushing he did to suppress the Sinn Fein movement in Ireland, he came to the following conclusion, and I believe my Honourable friend, Sir Henry Craik, after he retires from his present task, will do the same. He said :

“ Had I known what I was in for in 1920, when I consented to go to Ireland to take part in suppressing the Irish Sinn Fein revolution, I should, in the words of Mr. Baldwin, ‘ never have touched it with the end of a barge pole ’. One lives and learns.”

I believe Sir Henry Craik will say the same thing and will reflect in the words of General Crozier in his book on the Black and Tan Movement in Ireland :

“ Having seen a great deal of force in use, having applied that force for over thirty years, having experienced the utter failure of force, I must needs look for other weapons with which to achieve the object—the welfare of mankind.”

Sir, when in office no bureaucrat will think of these lines. When they retire, when they think of the other world in their peaceful moments, they will think of this. We are tired of the Black and Tan methods which they applied, whether in Bengal or in Bombay or in the Punjab. The speakers on this side have proved to the hilt that this Act should not exist and should be repealed and I, therefore, hope that the House will take my Bill into consideration.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That the Bill to repeal the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, be taken into consideration.”

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That clause 2 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : Sir, it was not my intention to speak on this Bill, a Bill of which I believe, this House and the country outside is heartily tired, but I have been prompted to speak by the remarks which I heard from two Honourable Members in particular who have taken part in the debate. As I listened to, what with due respect I must call, the wild, unrestrained and thoroughly irrelevant speeches of my friend the Honourable Member from Assam and my friend, Mr. Chattopadhyaya, I found it impossible to contain myself. For some considerable time I found it difficult to discover any logical principle of relevance between their speeches and the Bill under consideration, but after listening for some time, I realised what the game was. The game was to vilify the Government, to persuade the audience that whatever Acts have been carried out by Government in the past have been unjustified and to argue therefrom that the Government in future will inevitably make unfair use of any powers with which it may be entrusted. This is the only argument against this Bill which I have heard advanced either today or last week. That argument has been supported by, what with due respect I must characterise, as a tissue of misstatements having no shadow of foundation whatsoever.

I turn first to the statement which the Honourable Member from Assam made in his endeavours to support this thesis. He was good enough to state that Government could not be trusted because, among other things, the officials of Government had engineered the Dacca riots. He went so far as to say that Government was so certain of the coming of these riots that every official in Dacca was warned four or five days beforehand to lay by a large stock of provisions. Sir, I happened to be an official in Dacca at that time, and I can assure the House that that statement has no foundation whatsoever. No official was given any warning. (Some interruptions and laughter from the Opposition side.) It is all very well for Honourable Members opposite to laugh and to assume that I am not telling the truth in this particular matter. Sir, I am in a much better position than the Honourable Member in question to state the actual facts. (“Hear, hear” from Official Benches.) I was in Dacca at that time....

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi : On a point of personal explanations, Sir....

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : I do not give way, Sir.

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi : I merely want to make a personal explanation.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member is not giving way. Let the Honourable Member continue.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : I happened to be in Dacca at that time, and I can assure the Honourable Member that I personally received no such notice whatsoever.....

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi : (When the speaker was continuing) : I wanted to say that I spoke from information received from the Deputy President's speech and other contemporary accounts.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : My house happened to be in the middle of the bazar. Surely, if Government had considered it necessary to warn officials of the impending riots, I who lived in the bazar should have been the first to receive such warning, but no such warning was ever either given or contemplated by the authorities,—(Some Honourable Members were laughing at this stage) and the Honourable Members who laugh have no personal knowledge of the facts whatsoever.

Again, Sir, as another instance of the Government's failure to preserve law and order, we were told that during the Dacca riots policemen were standing by doing nothing, watching houses being burnt and watching people being attacked. I wonder if the Honourable Member from Assam has any idea at all as to the strength of the police force present at that time. I will tell him for his information that the total police force in the town of Dacca, on the day when the riots broke out, was 200 men. The great bulk of the Dacca police force had been drafted to Barrackpore to deal with the trouble in Calcutta, and another large section of that force had been sent into the interior of the district to deal with troubles created by my friends of the Congress. Thanks to their activities, thanks to the fact that the police were preoccupied with putting down the objectionable features of the Civil Disobedience Movement, there were 200 police constables available in Dacca to deal with the Dacca riots. My Honourable friend may possibly not know that Dacca is a very large town, that the rioting took place in every quarter of the town, and that the length of the streets concerned amounts roughly to 50 miles. If my Honourable friend is anything of a mathematician he will soon realise that we had on an average four policemen to every mile of road. Do my Honourable friends opposite suggest that four policemen can protect the lives and property of one mile of road in the middle of flaming riots? There is another side to this picture. Government made every possible effort to obtain auxiliary forces to deal with these communal riots, and, first and foremost, they enrolled special constables. Certain gentlemen of the town did join as special constables, but I believe I am right in saying that not one single member of my Honourable friend's party saw fit to offer his services to the authorities for the preservation of law and order. (Laughter.) Honourable Members may laugh, but these facts are susceptible of proof and I am prepared to prove them. My Honourable friend from Assam was not content with making assertions against Government. He saw fit to talk of the Europeans. He said, what were the Europeans of Dacca doing during the riots? The answer to that is simple and it is very creditable for the European community. Almost, without exception, every European non-official present in Dacca or in the neighbouring town of Narayanganje offered his services to the Government as a special constable. Lorries were mobilised, and in each lorry was stationed a party consisting of three or four Europeans, one official and as many police constables as could be found. Those lorries toured continuously round Dacca town day and night, and what did they find? They came to a house and found somebody setting fire to it. They put down the fire and arrested the miscreant, if he had not already run away, and while doing that, in practically every case, for the first two days, they found that somebody else had started a fire further down the road. I do not think even my Honourable friend from Assam could have collected, in so short a space of time, a better organisation or a more efficient body of men to deal with such a situation. I must apologise for dealing in such great detail with a subject which is not strictly relevant to the Bill under discussion, but I can only say that as my Honourable friends opposite have made statements of that kind, the basis of their allegation that Government is unfit to exercise greater power, I am entitled to reply to those statements. I have, therefore, one more point to make in connection with the Dacca riots. My Honourable friend, the Deputy President, speaking the other day, was good enough to state that on the night preceding the riots a meeting was held in Dacca town in the house of a local Muhammadan at which officials were present and at which the forthcoming riots were discussed. I am very glad for the sake of his peace of mind to be able to assure my Honourable friend that that statement has no foundation whatsoever. (Cheers from Official Benches.)

[Mr. P. J. Griffiths.]

Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : There were witnesses to that effect before the Committee of which I was the President.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : My Honourable friend is under a disadvantage ; he gets his information second hand, but I am speaking of what I myself saw. But to return to the speech of my Honourable friend from Assam. He was not content with making extravagant assertions about the conduct of the officials in Dacca. He saw fit to turn his attention to the district in which I happen now to be employed. With reference to my district, he said, " You had these people going down to make salt, you had Civil Disobedience, you had many Congress workers who were assaulted, but on the other hand, how many Congress workers did you have convicted for assaults on the police or on the members of the public ? "

Mr. B. Das : My Honourable friend is dealing with Dacca riots. We are now discussing clause 2 of the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Clause 2 deals with repeal.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : I have sympathy with the objection of the Honourable Member, but I will remind him that if I am irrelevant, the fault lies with his Party and not with me. In the course of his remarks regarding my present district the Honourable Member from Assam was good enough to ask how many cases occurred in which workers in the Civil Disobedience Movement were concerned in assaults. I was very pleased this morning to have the opportunity of giving him an answer. That answer I repeat—it is 189. I do not know whether in addition to these cases of assault my Honourable friend was listening the other day when the Honourable the Leader of the House gave him details regarding the Chachua Hat murder case and the Chachua Hat riot case. He may possibly remember that on that occasion certain Congress volunteers had gathered together. A small body of police visited the place and in their anxiety not to shed blood endeavoured to disperse that body with lathis. They failed in their endeavour and had to take refuge in a house near by. Reinforcements were called for, but before those reinforcements could arrive, two police officers were brutally and cruelly murdered. That, Sir, was done as a result of the subversive activities of the Congress Party. I pass on to another very peculiar point which my Honourable friend from Assam thought fit to make. He brought to light the case of a bomb which had been planted by an evil minded informer in the house of an innocent person. I presume he was referring to the case which took place in the town of Midnapore not long ago. He laid great stress on the fact that this case was sent up by the police, the wicked police who could possibly never act honestly, and when this case came from the wicked police to the honest and upright magistrate, then that magistrate discovered that the whole case was a concoction. As usual, my Honourable friend has completely mistaken the facts. The facts are that during the course of the police investigation it was the police themselves who discovered that this had been planted. The very officer to whom information was brought was the first to discover that it was a wicked and ingenious plot. (Cheers from Official Benches.) The prosecution of the informer was lodged by the police in consultation with me, and any suggestion that that particular incident shows the corruptibility or dishonesty or the inefficiency of the police is too grotesque to deserve notice. There is only one more point made by my Honourable friend with which I think it is worth while to deal. In support of his case about the iniquity of the present Government, he drew a touching picture of the condition of the detenus. I must confess that if I had not known him longer he would have almost brought tears to my eyes by his description of the poor detenus deprived of medical aid. What are the actual facts of the case ? I will speak again, not of what I have read in some remote book, but of what I know from my own personal experience. In my own district there has been a detention camp of which Members might know.

An Honourable Member : What is " my district " ?

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : I am not concerned with your district. But as things stand, there is a detention camp in the district of Midnapore. The average income, previous to admission to that detention camp, of its present inmates has been calculated and works out on a generous calculation at Rs. 14-8-0 a month. There is such gross poverty that in their ordinary village homes it is quite impossible for these gentlemen to obtain the services of the Civil Surgeon or of any expert doctor. At present, Sir, when they are ill, the entire medical resources of the Government are at their disposal and this, Sir, is not theory but practice. I can assure Honourable Members that at least ten inmates of the Hijli Detention Camp were treated by the Civil Surgeon during my last month in Midnapore. I think that sufficiently disposes of the attempt of the Honourable Member from Assam to throw mud against the Government.

I turn now, and here I shall be as brief as possible, to the suggestions—shall I call them insinuations—made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya. If I had been new to this country and if I had been a stranger to Mr. Chattopadhyaya's usual style of oratory, I should have been troubled and distressed in mind. I should have verily believed that the Government must indeed be a Satanic one, if this kind of thing could go on under its aegis ; but, Sir, I was not distressed or troubled in mind, because I remembered the previous occasion when exactly the same kind of statement was made by exactly the same Honourable Member. That statement also concerned my unfortunate district. We were told that troops in the district of Midnapore had gone into a certain village, brought out the women from the houses and had them stripped naked. My Honourable friend, the Leader of the House, took the trouble to write a personal letter to Mr. Amarendra Chatterjee and asked him if he would give him any details or any kind of facts in support of that allegation. That was in March this year. My Honourable friend, the Leader of the House, is still waiting for his reply from Mr. Amarendra Chatterjee.

An Honourable Member : He never received the letter.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : On a point of personal explanation. I did send a letter to Mr. Amarendra Chattopadhyaya. I am not aware, it was miscarried. I did not send it by post. I sent it through a peon book. I have not got the document here. I wrote to him that if he would give me some information about the name of the village and so on, I can inquire into the matter.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya : It is news to me. I never received any such letter.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saxena (Lucknow Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask a question of the Leader of the House ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair cannot allow it.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : I have no means of knowing what happened to that letter. I can only inform this House that the letter was sent and, it is unfortunate, that that particular letter, out of the thousands of letters which are sent by the Law Member during the year, should have been miscarried.

But, Sir, as I listened to the speech of the Honourable Member, I thought at one time that it would be necessary to deal with it in some detail. That idea was dispelled when he came to the end of his speech and I heard a strange, indeed a lamentable, eulogy of people whom I call murderers but whom the Honourable Member prefers to call martyrs. It is strange and significant that Honourable Members on that side of the House, however much they might theoretically deplore terrorism, are always ready to find some redeeming feature in the character of the terrorist murderer. My Honourable friend says that Kanaiya Lal Dutt is a man of whom any nation might well be proud. Speaking for myself—and perhaps I might remind the House that Kanaiya Lal Dutt was the murderer of an approver—I should be ashamed to belong to any nation which could be proud of such a murderer.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member must remember that he is speaking to clause 2 and not on the general debate.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : I will confine myself strictly to the scope of clause 2. Clause 2 is the substantive clause of this Bill and in debating this clause, the question we have to settle is whether the Criminal Law of 1908 is necessary or not. Now, Sir, when I listened, some days ago, to the debate on the Criminal Law Amendment Act, I had a good deal of sympathy with my friends on the opposite side of the House. I realised that their position was a difficult one. I realised that they were.....

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of order. Having passed the motion for the consideration of the Bill, the House has accepted the principle of the Bill and the principle of the Bill is that the Act of 1908 be repealed. It is not open to the Honourable Member or to any other member to cover the same ground over again. I submit that all his arguments are entirely irrelevant and out of order.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : As I read clause 2 of the Bill, it says : "The Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, is hereby repealed." I understand that as we are discussing the Bill clause by clause, clause 2 is also open to discussion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Clause 2 embodies the principle and the real object of the Bill and that has been discussed threadbare upon the motion for consideration. There is no amendment of which notice has been given to this clause. So the Chair must rule that no general discussion can go on any further.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : May I ask, Sir, not in a contentious spirit but as a new Member of the House, exactly what is within the scope of the discussion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : If there was an amendment, that amendment could be discussed. The House has already given its verdict on the general principle of the Bill. So, the principle of the Bill is no longer before this House.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : May I put in a word on this ? Without giving notice of any amendment, an Honourable Member can oppose any clause of the Bill. The peculiar situation here is this. Under one clause, the Bill repeals all the clauses of the Criminal Law Amendment Act. Therefore, the result of one clause is that 5 or 6 or 8 clauses of the old Act are going. Therefore, every clause of the old Act is relevant in a discussion on clause 2. That is my submission.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : What is the effect of the decision of the House ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Supposing the House had decided on a Select Committee motion, that also means accepting principle of the Bill, but am I to be told that no clauses can be altered or amended ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The House has committed itself to the principle of the Bill, and, therefore, the Chair cannot allow this general discussion to go any further.

Mr. P. J. Griffiths : May I speak on the principle of the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That has been decided upon already.

Sir Cowasji Jehangir (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I rise to oppose this clause, and I want to give my reasons for doing so, and I hope I may be permitted to give my reasons very shortly for the benefit of my Honourable friends.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Will the Honourable Member please speak up. The Chair cannot hear a word.

Voices : Nobody hears him.

Another Voice : He has got a sore-throat.

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : I am giving my reasons very shortly, Sir, as to why I oppose this clause and why I would urge the House to throw it out. Mr. President, we have heard a great deal about terrorism.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Do not address us. Address the Chair.

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : I think my Honourable friend, Dr. Deshmukh, does not understand what it is to address the Chair. I am addressing the Chair. Mr. President, both the Honourable Members on this side of the House and on the other side of the House have confined their attention merely and perhaps completely to terrorism. Now I would like to draw the attention of the House to another evil of a very serious nature from which we in Bombay suffer, namely, communism. (Hear, hear.) (Voices : "Oh, Oh !") Now, Sir, I hope and believe, nay, I am really sure, that there is not a single Honourable Member on the side of the Opposition who is at heart really a communist. There may, no doubt, be many who are advanced socialists. Sir, I claim, in my own humble way, also to be a socialist (Laughter and Voices of "Oh, Oh !"), but not an advanced socialist. I repeat that I am sure there is not a single Honourable Member on this side of the House who is really, at heart, a communist. Now, Sir, I wish we were in a position to be able to say that there were really no communists in the right sense of the word in my Presidency. I am afraid there are many, Sir, there are many who desire to subvert the present social order of things ; there are many who will take every opportunity, as they do, to hamper trade and industry, and there are many in my part of the world who will encourage strikes—not to benefit the labourer—but only in order to encourage "disorder", in order that the social state may be changed,—and who, are, we are informed, financed from another part of the world. Sir, I will give you just one little incident that occurred to me some years ago. I had to deal with an extensive labour strike, when many labour leaders saw me two or three times a week. One of my friends had a silk shirt on and my attention was drawn to it, I asked him : "Mr. So and So (I am not going to mention his name), I see you have got a silk shirt on ?" His reply was, "yes, I have, and the money to buy it did not come from your pocket, it came from Moscow". (Voices : "Oh, Oh !") That was in the Secretariat of Bombay when I was a Member of Government, in charge of labour,—and that was the answer I got.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh : He pulled your legs !

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : Now, Mr. President, there are many in my city who will be only too willing to act—not against Government, but against us all, against you and me, to upset the ordered state of social life : And I understand that although this Act may not have been passed originally for the purpose of being able to tackle this great evil, it is today of considerable use for this purpose ; and, therefore, when my Honourable friends are in power, they will have to bring on the Statute-book some other Act which will enable the Provincial Governments to fight one of the greatest evils we have had to contend with and shall have to contend with in an increasing degree in future.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order. The Honourable Member is making a "second reading" speech. He ought to have spoken, if he wanted to make general observations, at the time when the motion was under consideration. The Honourable Member is not in order in discussing the principles of the Bill now.

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : Mr. President, I have not been able to hear you....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member, the Chair said, is not in order in dilating upon the general principle of the Bill, which has already been decided upon by the House.

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : I am opposing the passing of this clause, Sir, which affects the general principle of the Bill, and if you still rule me out of order, then I will resume my seat.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That is really the Chair's ruling. The Honourable Member did not hear the Chair properly, but that is its ruling.

Sir Cowasji Jehangir : Then, I will urge upon the House, Mr. President, before, I sit down, that the House do reject this clause, unless and until there is some other Act on the Statute-book which will help Provincial Governments to fight this living evil, the increasing evil of communism, an evil which threatens to ruin our country and all the future prospects of our peace, happiness and prosperity. (Loud and prolonged Cheers.)

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Sir, May I respectfully point out that clause 2 of this Bill contains three sub-clauses. One repeals the Criminal Law Amendment Act, and the other two contain provisions which in the course of this lengthy debate have not been so much as mentioned. There has been no discussion whatever on sub-clause (2) or sub-clause (3) of this Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : But there is no amendment ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Surely it is in order to oppose sub-clauses (2) and (3) ? I should like to oppose them not only on their merits because they are the worst piece of draftsmanship I have seen for a long time.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order : The Chair finds in May's Parliamentary Practice (page 403), the following :

"The chairman (I take it the Chairman of the Committee of the House) proceeds to read the number of each clause, which is thus brought under the consideration of the committee ; and to call on the members who have given notices of amendments. A member is not at liberty to speak generally upon a clause, upon its being called by the chairman, there being no question before the committee until an amendment has been moved, or the question proposed, 'That the clause stand part of the bill.' If no amendment be offered to any part of the clause, the chairman at once proposes the question, 'That this clause stand part of the bill,' and when this has been disposed of proceeds to the next clause. If no amendment be offered to any part of the clause, the chairman at once proposes the question, 'That this clause stand part of the bill,' and when this has been disposed of proceeds to the next clause."

The question is that this clause stand part of the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : May I have your permission, Sir, to make a few remarks in connection with this point of order ? I will again quote what you have quoted just now :

"A member is not at liberty to speak generally upon a clause, upon its being called by the chairman, there being no question before the committee until an amendment has been moved (that has not been done in this case) or the question proposed, 'That the clause stand part of the bill'. (That you have done.) If no amend-accepted and sub-clause (1) of clause 2 has been passed, the two subsequent sub-clauses provide that :

[Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan.]

"(2) All proceedings and prosecutions pending on the date of the coming into force of this Act shall be deemed to be withdrawn.

(3) All sentences of imprisonment or fine or both that may remain to be undergone or paid by those convicted under the Act shall cease with the coming into operation of this Act."

My respectful submission is that it would be open to Honourable Members to speak on this clause and oppose the motion that this clause do stand part of the Bill on the ground that if this clause passes, certain dire consequences are bound to follow and on that ground to show that this clause should not form part of the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair finds there is a ruling given on 29th November, 1932, but having read that ruling, the Chair is not quite sure whether it goes to the full length of what is contended on one side of the House, namely, that there can be no discussion on the principle of the Bill upon a consideration of a clause when no amendment has been moved or even given notice of. The question raised, as the Chair has already intimated, is of considerable importance, not only to this Bill, but to the procedure of the House generally, and the Chair is unable to give a final ruling on this point just now. The Chair would consider the point carefully and give its ruling afterwards. There seems to be no more time now to carry on the debate, and the Chair will, therefore, adjourn the House till tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 25th September, 1935.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 25th September, 1935.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

EMPLOYMENT OF PERSONS BELONGING TO THE UNTOUCHABLE CLASSES IN THE DEPARTMENTS UNDER THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

653. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) what special provision they have made for the employment of persons belonging to the untouchable classes in the departments under the Government of India ;
- (b) if they have reserved any fixed proportion for them ; if not, why not ;
- (c) whether any instructions are issued to the heads of departments in this respect, and if so, what they are ;
- (d) if the Special Officer appointed to watch the progress of the employment of minorities, will also watch the progress made by the untouchable classes in this respect ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a), (b) and (c). The untouchable classes are treated as part of the depressed classes for the purpose of communal representation in the services. The orders that apply to them are contained in paragraphs 3 and 7 (1) (vi) of the Resolution of the 4th July, 1934, and in paragraph 1 of the Home Department Office Memorandum No. F. 14/6/34-Ests. (S.), dated the 15th May, 1935, which has been placed in the Library of the House. Paragraph 3 of the Resolution of the 4th July, 1934, explains why no definite percentage of vacancies has been reserved for them.

(d) The Special Officer will watch the progress made by the depressed classes, which include untouchables.

FREE PASSES FOR THE INFERIOR SERVANTS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

654. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether inferior servants on State Railways are given the same concessions as regards free passes on the line on which they are employed and on other lines, as is given to the men belonging to subordinate service ;
- (b) if there is a difference what it is and why it is made ;

(c) whether Government propose to consider the question of extending the facilities given to inferior servants in the matter of supply of free passes ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) to (c). The practice as regards pass concessions on the line to which an employee belongs varies on different railways. I lay a statement on the table giving the information available.

The Railways over which differences exist as between inferior servants and subordinates are being asked to consider their elimination.

The issue of foreign line passes is a matter for mutual arrangement between railways under rules framed by the Indian Railway Conference Association. In accordance with these rules, inferior staff and subordinate staff (except clerical staff) drawing less than Rs. 40 per mensem are not eligible for passes. Under present conditions, Government are not prepared to suggest to the Conference Association any extension of the existing privileges.

Statement.

Eastern Bengal Railway : Third class passes are given to inferior staff irrespective of the pay drawn, whereas for subordinates the class of pass is determined by pay.

East Indian Railway : Passes to inferior staff are not given for dependants or attendants and separate passes are not given for their families. Except in special cases, the issue of passes for inferior staff is restricted to their home station, and such staff are eligible for three sets of passes only after three years' service.

Great Indian Peninsula Railway : The concessions given are those admissible to subordinate staff coming within the salary limits for third class passes.

North Western Railway : The concessions given to inferior staff are the same as those given to the subordinate staff.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government consider the advisability of restricting the privileges now given to higher paid officials in regard to the issue of these free passes and of giving the benefit of those savings to these lower paid officials ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : As my Honourable friend is aware, restrictions have recently been imposed on the privileges admissible to higher paid staff.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not a fact that considerable money is being spent by the Railways on the saloons that are placed at the disposal of many of these railway officials ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : That has nothing to do with passes, Sir.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will it not be possible for Government to give up the practice of placing these saloons at the disposal of these higher officials and thus save some money which can be spent for the benefit of the lower paid officials ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order ; that does not arise on this.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government will consider the question of giving passes to inferior servants on what you may call foreign lines amongst the State Railways themselves ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No, Sir ; as I have already said, we are not prepared to agree to any extension of existing privileges at the present moment.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask why they do not propose to extend those privileges ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : On financial considerations.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : On financial considerations, should they not bring equality among all classes by curtailing the privileges of certain classes of people ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Those privileges have already been restricted to a certain extent.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether it is the policy of Government to discriminate among classes on the basis of their salaries and their economic position ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No discrimination is practised. Each is treated according to the grade in which he is.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : If it is not discrimination, what is this treating of people according to their grades ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The answer has been given.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Sir, as regards question No. 655, there is obviously some mistake. My question was, "does not come within the purview", etc., whereas it is printed as "does come within", etc. In these circumstances, I should like to ask you, Sir, whether you will permit the question to be put in the way in which I had intended to put it, and, if Government are not prepared with the reply, permit them to print their reply in the records of the Assembly.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Are Government prepared to reply to the question as amended ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : There is no obvious mistake in the question. Mr. Joshi informed me about two minutes ago that he wanted to alter the whole tenor of the question and had intended something entirely different. I have an answer ready to the question as it stands on the paper which I am prepared to give, and if the Honourable Member cares to put supplementaries after that, I will do my best to answer them.

Mr. Joshi : All right, Sir.

REGULATION OF WORK IN HAZARDOUS OR DANGEROUS OCCUPATIONS AND TRADES.

655. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they have made any enquiry as regards regulating work, from the point of view of safety and health, in hazardous or dangerous occupations and trades like work on Railway siding, construction of high buildings, Fire-works making, tanning, bangle making, etc., when the work in these occupations does come within the purview of the Factories Act ;

(b) if they have not made any enquiry, whether they propose to do so ;

(c) if they have made enquiry what their conclusions are ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) and (c). The issue of rules under section 33 (4) of the Factories Act is under consideration in consultation with Local Governments. As regards the operations named by the Honourable Member I might explain that fire-works manufacture is regulated by a separate law, the Indian Explosives Act, and work on railway sidings subject to the Factories Act is a matter for regulation by rules made by Local Governments.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India would make an inquiry about the desirability of regulating work in the occupations mentioned by me when the work does not come within the purview of the Factories Act ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : As I have already said, as regards fireworks, these are regulated whether they come under the Factories Act or not. As regards railway sidings which lie outside the factories, they are a matter for regulation under the Railways Act. In certain other directions, we are making inquiries in connection with a Convention passed relating to occupational diseases.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India will continue the inquiry as regards regulating for the sake of safety ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No general inquiry is under contemplation at present.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether they will consider the question of making an inquiry ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I think a general inquiry of this kind would be an extremely expensive affair and would not give results commensurate with the labour and expense involved. It is primarily a matter for Local Governments in whose hands the administration of labour lies.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India is aware that in Great Britain there are regulations for the preservation of safety in these hazardous occupations ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : There are a number of regulations regulating dangerous trades, I believe.

LICENCE GRANTED TO ISA BROTHERS FOR OPENING MUSLIM REFRESHMENT ROOMS ON STATIONS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

656. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of railway stations in the six divisions of the East Indian Railway at which Isa Brothers have got a licence for opening Muslim Refreshment Rooms ?

(b) Have Isa Brothers got the licence of Tea Shops or licence for the sale of other articles at any station on the East Indian Railway ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to mention the names of the stations at which they have such licences ?

(d) Have Government got any information whether Isa Brothers personally supervise these restaurants or they leave the administration in the hands of their servants ?

(e) Are Government aware that they have different prices for the different waiters who serve the passengers on the same platforms ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Seven.

(b) Yes.

(c) A statement is placed on the table.

(d) The Agent states that besides employing supervisors the proprietors themselves pay periodical visits of inspection.

(e) The Agent states that this is not so ; and that the rates charged are in accordance with the schedule of rates approved by the Administration.

List of Stations at which Messrs. Isa Bros. have contracts for Tea Stalls, etc.

Moghalsarai to Tarighat and Sasaram (inclusive), Manpur to Sasaram (exclusive) and the Daltonganj Branch.

Allahabad, Bhaupur, Rura, Phaphund, Etawah, Mainpuri, Tundla, Aligarh, Khurja Junction, Bulandshahr, Moradabad, Bareilly and Najibabad.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Sir, the next four questions also relate to the same matter : may I, therefore, ask supplementary questions to all these questions at one time in the end ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Yes.

LICENCE GRANTED TO KAPOOR AND COMPANY FOR OPENING HINDU REFRESHMENT ROOMS ON STATIONS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

657. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of railway stations in the six divisions of the East Indian Railway at which Kapoor and Company have got a licence for opening Hindu Refreshment Rooms ?

(b) Have Kapoor and Company got the licence of tea shops or licence for the sale of other articles at any station on the East Indian Railway ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) be in affirmative, will Government be pleased to mention the names of the stations at which he has such licences ?

(d) Have Government got any information whether Kapoor personally supervises these Restaurants or leaves the administration in the hands of his servants ?

(e) Are Government aware that he has different prices for different waiters who serve the passengers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Nine.

(b) Yes.

(c) A statement is placed on the table.

(d) and (e) : The replies to these parts of the question are the same as to parts (d) and (e) of the previous question.

List of Stations at which Messrs. S. L. Kapoor and Company have Contracts for the Stalls, etc.

Barh (exclusive) to Dildarnagar (exclusive), Patna to Gaya (exclusive), Jhajha to Barh, Sahebganj Loop up to Dharara and South Behar, Mandah Road, Meja Road, Sarsaul, Cawnpore Central Goods Shed, Bhaupur, Rura, Jhijhak, Phaphund, Achalda, Bharthna, Etawah, Kosma, Bhongaon, Mainpuri, Jumna Bridge, Aligarh, Khurja Junction, Bulandshahr, Dankaur, Benares Cantonment, Moradabad, Lhaksar, Chandausi and Raja-ka-Sahaspur.

PASSES GIVEN TO ISA BROTHERS AND KAPOOR AND COMPANY BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY ADMINISTRATION.

658. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of passes given to Isa Brothers and Kapoor and Company by the East Indian Railway administration including those given by the Divisional Superintendents ?

(b) What is the monetary value of a first, a second, an intermediate and a third class pass ?

(c) Have Government ever calculated the loss to tax-payers by awarding these passes to these contractors ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Messrs. Isa Bros. . . . . 19
Messrs. S. L. Kapoor and Co. . . . . 33

(b) The monetary value depends on the mileage travelled.

(c) The issue of these passes is considered necessary by the administration to enable the contractors to carry on their work.

AUTHORITY GIVING CONTRACTS TO THE CONTRACTORS AT STATIONS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

659. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to mention the authority who gives the contracts to the contractors at different stations on the East Indian Railway ? Is there any check by which Government can avoid giving the contracts to the same persons in different divisions ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I presume my Honourable friend refers to the refreshment and vending contracts. The grant of these is within the competence of the Divisional Superintendents concerned, except as regards the contracts for refreshment rooms for first and second class passengers which is under the control of the Chief Operating Superintendent.

Government see no objection to the contracts in the various Divisions being given to the same firms if they are competent to undertake them.

FIXATION OF PRICES OF ARTICLES OF FOOD FOR SALE AT RAILWAY STATIONS.

660. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to mention the authority which fixes the prices at which licensees should sell articles to the travelling public ?

(b) Do the Railway authorities fix the size of the plate and the quantity of meat, while fixing the prices of plates ?

(c) Is it not a fact that these licensed restaurants charge four annas for one ounce meat ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) I presume my Honourable friend's question has reference to railway refreshment rooms, the tariff of which is subject to the approval of the authority empowered to give the contract. This may be the District or Divisional Officer in some cases, or the Chief Traffic Manager or other officer of the same standing.

(b) and (c). Government have no information, but I am bringing the Honourable Member's question to the notice of Railway Administrations with a view to their enquiring into the matter and considering the feasibility of regulating the tariff of charges according to the quality of food supplied.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I ask whether the system of giving refreshment contracts in a large number of stations together with tea stalls and various other things to one person is for the benefit of the passengers, or, for whose benefit it is ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The object is undoubtedly for the convenience of passengers.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I know, if under these monopolies, which have been given, whether passengers have not to pay much more than they would otherwise have to do if contracts are given to local persons ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The information at the disposal of the Railway Board does not substantiate that.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I am sorry that the Railway Board depends entirely on the reports they get, whereas we depend upon our personal experience, and that is far more reliable than the reports they receive. May I also add that the Railway Board never see these things for themselves as they travel in saloons and every one 'in attention' when they travel, whereas we travel like ordinary passengers : are we not, therefore, the greater authority in these matters ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The Agents of the Railway Administrations have the benefit of the advice of members of the Standing Advisory Committees.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I understand the answer is that the Agents know better than the travelling public about the prices and quantity and quality of food supplied by these contractors ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Any complaints usually come to the notice of the Agents in some way or other, and, though the Agent may not be a better authority than all the travelling public put together, there is nothing to prevent his being a better authority than an individual member of the travelling public.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Just as we are bringing before Government and with the same result. As regards supervision, the Honourable Member said that they occasionally go and supervise the work, but usually they leave it to their servants to administer. Is not my Honourable friend aware that large contractors do not give full quantity, and that the quality is also bad ? I speak from my own personal experience.

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have no reason to doubt my Honourable friend's experience.

(c) Are Government aware that some years ago the Public Service Commission used to examine the successful candidates in typewriting by conducting such an examination themselves ?

(d) Are Government further aware that the practice mentioned in part (c) above was somehow given up by the Public Service Commission which introduced the practice of requiring the candidates to submit such certificates a few months after the examination ?

(e) Are Government aware that as a result of the recent change a number of candidates, many of whom may be first class graduates and undergraduates, will be debarred from taking the examination simply because they will not be able to furnish the certificates with the application ?

(f) Are Government aware that as a result of this recent change introduced by the Public Service Commission, the private institutions mentioned in the application form have found an opportunity of extracting fees to the extent of Rs. 40 for granting a certificate in typewriting which is more than double the admission fee, from candidates most of whom are obliged to spend much more to go to Lahore from their native places. ? Why is the Public Service Commission promoting the interest of such private institutions ?

(g) Are Government further aware that in this particular case the Public Service Commission is required by the Government of India to hold a competitive examination for the typists and routine clerks which is classed as Third Division of the Imperial Secretariat ? If so, is it not one of the legitimate duties of the Public Service Commission to test the speed of candidates in typewriting as well ? If not, how ? If the reply be in the affirmative, why have the Public Service Commission changed the past practice ?

(h) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of themselves holding in future the examination of the successful candidates only in typewriting as they have been doing previously ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) The facts are as stated by the Honourable Member, except that the date for the submission of typewriting certificates has been extended until the 2nd October, and these certificates are issued by Government institutions as well as private ones.

(b) It is not intended that candidates should begin to learn typewriting only after the issue of the notice of the examination.

(c) and (d). Yes.

(e) Proficiency in typewriting is a more important qualification for third division clerks than high academic qualifications.

(f) Government are not aware of this.

(g) and (h). There are serious practical objections which make it difficult to examine a large number of candidates in typewriting, and it is unlikely that candidates who are unable to produce the certificates at present required would be successful in competitive examination. Government are, however, prepared to consider the possibility of including typewriting in the examination.

REPORT OF THE BURMA TRIBUNAL ON THE FINANCIAL ADJUSTMENT.

663. *Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they intend to give a date early in the coming Session of the Assembly for discussion of the Report of the Burma Tribunal on the financial adjustment ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the Memoranda that the Government of India submitted through their representative before this Tribunal ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if they intend to make available to the House all papers that their representative submitted before the Burma Tribunal ?

(d) Have Government submitted their views on the report of the Burma Tribunal to the Secretary of State since that report was published ?

(e) Will Government please lay on the table all correspondence that passed between them and the Secretary of State since the report was available to them ?

Sir, I don't wish to put the first part of the question, but I should like to put the other parts.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (b) The Government of India submitted no Memoranda to the Tribunal except one describing the future monetary arrangements between the two countries, the substantive part of which has been published.

(c) No.

(d) No.

(e) The only correspondence which has taken place between the Government of India and the Secretary of State was in regard to the publication of the report.

CONTRIBUTIONS MADE TO THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

664. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the yearly contribution of India towards the expenditure of the League of Nations at Geneva ;

(b) the yearly contribution of the other State members ;

(c) the total amount of money paid out of the Indian exchequer for the League of Nations from the time India became a member upto the year 1934 ;

(d) the total number of officials and employees belonging to each State member who work in the different organs of the League ; and

(e) the total amount drawn as salary each year by these officials and employees belonging to each State member ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) and (b). I would refer the Honourable Member to the General Summary of Ordinary Contributions on page 5 of Part I of the League of Nations Budget for 1936, a copy of which is in the Library.

(c) The total sum paid in contributions up to the year 1934 is approximately rupees one crore fifty-seven thousand eight hundred and twenty.

(d) and (e). The Honourable Member is referred to pages 1276 to 1287 and pages 1339 to 1369 of the Official Journal, 15th Year, No. 10, Part II of October, 1934, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. R. S. Sarma : Sir, will the Honourable the Leader of the House tell this House as to how often, during the last two or three years, has this question, similarly worded and couched in the same language, been put in this House and answered?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : An answer is not necessary.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I also point out, Sir, that the repetition of this question so often is due to the fact that the Assembly has never had a chance of discussing this question, and 'question' is the only method of debating the subject?

INDIA'S MEMBERSHIP OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

665. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when and at whose instance and with what object India first became a member of the League of Nations and on what conditions?

(b) How and by whom are the Indian delegates to the League elected or appointed? From whom do they derive their authority to represent India?

(c) Do the Indian delegates act on their own independent judgment or upon instructions received from every body? If upon instructions, who gives the instructions? What is the system under which the instructions are formulated and conveyed?

(d) What is the status of the delegates as compared with that of the other State Members?

(e) Is the public opinion of India consulted through the Legislature or otherwise by the Indian delegates before advocating or accepting a certain policy on any question of national importance?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) As a signatory to the Treaty of Peace named in the Annex to the Covenant, India automatically became an original Member of the League of Nations under the operation of Article 1 of the Covenant. The objects and conditions of membership will be clear to the Honourable Member from a perusal of the Covenant.

(b) They are appointed by the Secretary of State acting in consultation with the Government of India and derive their authority from that appointment.

(c) They receive their instructions from the Secretary of State acting in consultation with the Government of India, and within the terms of their instructions are free to exercise their discretion. For the system under which instructions are formulated and conveyed the Honourable Member is referred to the relevant sub-paragraph in paragraph 25 of the Memorandum on the International Status of India presented to the Indian

Statutory Commission : He will find this Memorandum on page 1632 of Volume V of the Memoranda submitted to the Commission, a copy of which is in the Library.

(H) The status of all delegations is identical.

(e) No, but the Honourable Member may take it that public opinion in India is taken into consideration when the instructions to the delegates are prepared.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Do Government think that the enormous expenditure of one crore and odd is justified in view of the fact that the public in India has never been consulted whenever the Government of India tried to give instructions to their delegates?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member is arguing.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : As I understand my Honourable friend's question, he wants me to express an opinion on it, which I would rather not do.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government consider the desirability of consulting public opinion in India through the Legislative Assembly in future before they give instructions to their delegates to the League of Nations?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : As at present advised, I think that is a wholly impracticable idea.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Why is it so?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question please.

RESIGNATION BY CERTAIN COUNTRIES OF THEIR MEMBERSHIP OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

666. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) Are Government aware that the following countries have resigned their membership of the League of Nations, viz.,

(1) Germany, (2) Japan, (3) Brazil, (4) Costa Rica?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of India's withdrawal from the League? If not, are Government prepared to consult the opinion of this Honourable House on the advisability of such withdrawal?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) Yes.

(b) Government are not prepared to contemplate the withdrawal of India from the League and consequently do not propose to take the action suggested in the second part of the question.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : What is the advice given by the Government of India to their delegates in regard to this?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : How does it arise?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are the Government of India not prepared to consider the advisability of India withdrawing from the League, or are there any advantages which India derives from continuing in the League ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I have answered that question previously, and I submit that a general question like that ought not to be put as a supplementary to a particular question.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know first with regard to part (b)....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member cannot discuss a question of policy.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Do Government propose to consider the desirability of India's withdrawal from the League—that was the question, and the answer is "No". I am asking, Sir, what are the reasons why the Government do not propose to consider the desirability of India's withdrawal from the League ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : It is a matter which rather involves a question of policy.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : If they can state the reasons briefly, they can.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member cannot put a.....

Mr. S. Satyamurti : The answer to part (b) of the question is a categorical "No". I am asking for an elucidation of that—what are the reasons for this "No" ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : If the Honourable Member can answer it, let him give an answer.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : It is not possible to answer it here in detail, but I may remind my friend that this question has been answered by me repeatedly, and may I give my friend one of the numerous answers ? A similar question was put by Lala Rameshwar Prasad Bagla on the 23rd July, 1934.....

Mr. S. Satyamurti : We were not here.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The Honourable Member was not here, of course. But this is what I said :

"Government have received no protests and have never contemplated resignation from the League, a step which in their opinion would represent at once an abandonment of an international duty and an abdication of international status."

Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : Before I put the next question, I must express my thanks to the Honourable the Finance Member for very kindly supplying me with a copy of the reply in advance.

INCOME-TAX PAID BY TEA COMPANIES IN BRITISH INDIA OWNING TEA GARDENS IN THE TRIPURA STATE.

667. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) Is the Honourable the Finance Member aware that Tea Companies situated in British India owning tea gardens in the Tripura State are required to pay income-tax on the entire amount of their total net profits while only 40 per cent. of such income is assessed in the case of tea gardens situated in British India ?

(b) Is the Honourable the Finance Member aware that some Tea Companies situated in British India owning gardens in the Tripura State pressed a claim on the Income-tax Officer, Tipperah and Noakhali Division, for allowing exemption of 60 per cent. of their total net profits from assessment under proviso 2 of section 4 of the Indian Income-tax Act and that the said claim has been disallowed by the Income-tax Officer, Tipperah and Noakhali Division, on the ground that the profits from tea gardens in the Tripura State do neither "arise" nor "accrue" within the State as the tea manufactured in the said State is sold in British India and the sale proceeds are received directly from the brokers by Companies situated in British India ?

(c) Have the Government of India received two representations, one from the Tippera Chamber of Commerce and another from the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce in which they have urged that the Income-tax Department has taken an extremely wrong view of proviso 2 of section 4 of the Income-tax Act and that the erroneous and far-fetched interpretation put by the Income-tax Department on the said proviso is calculated to defeat the object of the amendment of 1933 as incorporated in the said proviso ?

(d) Have Government considered the desirability of issuing departmental instructions as to the correct interpretation of proviso 2 of section 4 of the Income-tax Act in connection with the Tea Companies situated in British India owning tea gardens in the Tripura State and of pointing out that the above-mentioned interpretation of Income-tax Department is erroneous ?

(e) If the last question is answered in the negative, are Government prepared to consider the desirability of taking immediate steps for amendment of the Income-tax Act with a view to place the Tea Companies owning tea gardens in Indian States on the same footing with the tea gardens in British India as regards assessment of income-tax ?

Mr. A. H. Lloyd : (a) Yes.

(b) No ; but I am prepared to take it from the Honourable Member.

(c) Yes.

(d) The Government of India do not agree that the interpretation of the law adopted by the Income-tax Department is incorrect.

(e) In view of the representations which have been received, the Government of India have decided to ask for the advice of the experts, who are shortly to be appointed, upon this subject.

RESPONSIBILITY OF A SUPERVISING POSTMASTER FOR THE WORK DONE BY HIS SUBORDINATE CLERKS.

668. *Mr. Sri Prakasa (on behalf of Mr. Sham Lal) : Will Government state whether a supervising postmaster is held wholly and solely responsible for the work done by his subordinate clerks and whether the clerks are exempted from all responsibilities ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No.

CONTRACT FOR SELLING SWEETS AND OTHER Eatables AT THE AMBALA RAILWAY STATION.

669. *Mr. Sri Prakasa (on behalf of Mr. Sham Lal) : (a) Are Government aware that the contract of selling sweets and other eatables at Ambala Railway Station has been given not to a professional halwai but to a Babu who has sublet it to some other person ?

(b) Are Government aware that there is a general complaint that the contractor supplies unwholesome things and charges exorbitant rates ?

(c) Are Government aware that the present system of giving contracts to any persons regardless of their profession causes much inconvenience and loss to Railway passengers ?

(d) Are Government prepared to revise the present system of contracts and introduce the system of giving licences to professional men of the locality only ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The Agent, North Western Railway, states that the contract has been held since 1932 by Messrs. Daulat Ram and Company, who have held similar contracts at Meerut Cantonment and Meerut City for over eleven years and have been working satisfactorily at these stations, and that there is nothing to show that they have sublet their contract.

(b) The Administration have not received any complaints of this nature. The prices charged are in accordance with rate lists supplied by the Divisional Superintendent and the contractors have strict instructions to exhibit these rate lists and not to charge more than the rates shown therein.

(c) and (d). The Agent states that under the present system licences for vending eatables at stations are given only to professional vendors.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Are these rates the same as are prevalent in the town in which the restaurant is situated ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think I have explained on a previous occasion that these rules are fixed after consultation with local civil authorities and after consideration of the rates prevailing in the city. I cannot say definitely in this particular case whether the rates are the same as in the city or not.

EXTERMENT OF MR. GOKULDAS, SON OF PADARATH DAS, BY THE GOVERNMENT OF FIJI.

670. *Mr. Anugrah Narayan Sinha : (a) Are Government aware that Sjt. Gokuldas son of Sjt. Padarath Das, has been exiled by the Government of Fiji for a period of three years from Fiji where he has been domiciled and has been virtually interned in India ?

(b) Are Government aware of the offence committed by the said Gokuldas and will they be pleased to state it ?

(c) Is it a fact that no allowance is given to him and he has to shift for himself while under exile from his country ?

(d) Are Government aware that Gokuldas is penniless and has been going about in search of employment but has not been able to secure any and has therefore been forced to lead a life of vagrancy ?

(e) Are Government prepared to secure for him a suitable allowance for maintaining himself during the remaining portion of the period of his exile ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a)—(e). So far as Government are aware, Mr. Gokuldas was not exiled from Fiji. He is not interned in India nor is he under any sort of surveillance. Government have no information regarding any offence committed by him in Fiji. In view of the position described above the question of granting him an allowance does not arise.

Mr. Anugrah Narayan Sinha : Is he at liberty to go back to Fiji ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I do not know.

Mr. Anugrah Narayan Sinha : If he wants to go back to Fiji, will Government interfere with his movements ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I cannot say what the intentions of the Government of Fiji in regard to this gentleman are. But such enquiries, as I have been able to make, show that he was not externed from Fiji.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE INCOME-TAX OFFICER OF PATNA FROM THE INDCOME-TAX CASES OF THE SHAHABAD DISTRICT.

671. *Mr. Anugrah Narayan Sinha : (a) Are Government aware that the jurisdiction of the Income-tax Officer of Patna was withdrawn from the income-tax cases of the district of Shahabad in Bihar and Orissa about two years ago ?

(b) Is it a fact that cases from Shahabad district have now been transferred to the file of the Income-tax Officer at Gaya ?

(c) Are Government aware of the inconvenience caused to the assessee of the district of Shahabad in representing their cases to the Income-tax Officer at Gaya in place of Patna which was the case previously ?

(d) Are Government prepared to consider the hardship and inconvenience caused to the income-tax assessee specially of the town of Arrah (in Shahabad District) from where the bulk of the assessee come and place them again under the jurisdiction of the Income-tax Officer at Patna ?

Mr. A. H. Lloyd : (a) and (b). The Government of India understand that the position is as stated.

(c) The Government are not aware that there is any serious inconvenience caused by the arrangement. Arrangements are made to avoid such inconvenience by requiring the Income-tax Officer to spend a considerable amount of his time on tour visiting the important towns in the whole of his charge.

(d) The complaints that have been made will be borne in mind if at any time it becomes possible, without interfering with the efficient and economical administration of the department, to re-arrange the jurisdictions of Income-tax Officers in the Province.

RULES FOR THE REFUND OF MISSING OR LOST CURRENCY NOTES.

672. *Mr. Anugrah Narayan Sinha : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the proposed rules for the refund of missing or lost notes that are published in pursuance of a provision in the Reserve Bank Act ?

(b) Are Government aware of the great hardship that will be caused to the public, in case the above rules are adopted, when currency notes are either inadvertently torn or mutilated or lost in transit or in any other way ?

(c) Are Government prepared to suggest such changes in the rules as are calculated to better protect the interests of the public in case of loss of notes for any valid cause ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of the House a copy of the Bank of England rules on this subject ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state the value of such notes as were reported to have been either lost or missing for which no refund had been given by the Currency Department in the years 1930 to 1934 ?

(f) Is it a fact that pay order issued upon a Government Treasury is payable only to those in whose favour it is issued, if they attend in person and is not realisable through any Bank on their behalf ?

(g) If the facts as stated above are correct, do Government realise the hardship and inconvenience caused to the payees in such cases and are they prepared to change the existing rules or adopt any other course that may avoid delay or inconvenience ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) Yes.

(b) The rules issued by the Bank follow the former Government rules on the subject and Government do not think that any hardship will be caused by their adoption.

(c) Government do not consider any changes necessary.

(d) The only information which the Bank of England have for publication is contained in a brief notice which is issued to persons desirous of tracing Bank notes of the denomination of £5 and upwards. I place a copy of this notice on the table.

(e) The desired information is not available and its collection would involve so much time and labour that Government do not consider that it would be justifiable to undertake it.

(f) and (g). Yes. This is because pay orders issued on a treasury are not negotiable under the Negotiable Instruments Act. The intention is that in future, when possible, pay orders (in the form of Bank drafts) will be drawn direct on the Reserve Bank or the Imperial Bank in places where the Government treasury business is done by either of these banks. Such drafts are negotiable. Government do not, however, propose to make any change in regard to pay orders drawn on treasuries where there is no branch of the Reserve Bank or the Imperial Bank.

NOTICE.

Regulations relating to Bank of England Notes, etc., alleged to have been lost, mislaid or stolen.

1. Any person desirous of tracing Bank Notes, Post Bills, etc., lost, mislaid, or stolen, with a view, if possible, of recovering the property, may, upon payment of a registration fee of 2s. 6d., cause the numbers, dates, and other particulars of such Notes, etc., to be entered, together with the name and address of the applicant, in a book kept in the Issue Office (4th Floor) at the Bank of England for that purpose :— Bank Notes, however, being payable to bearer on demand, the Bank cannot hold themselves under any responsibility should notes so entered be paid on presentation, whether from inadvertence of the clerks of the establishment, under an order from the Governors, or from any cause whatever.

2. The proper officers of the Bank will endeavour, if the circumstances of the case permit, to delay payment of the notes, etc., and to give information of their presentation to the person who has given notice, and paid the registration fee ; but such notice shall not be in force for more than twelve months from its date.

3. Many bank notes, etc., the subject of notice, are presented at the bank by bankers and other undoubted holders for value, and must be paid on presentation ; in these cases the bank cannot do more than endeavour to give the earliest information to the giver of the notice.

REFUSAL OF ADMISSION TO INDIAN STUDENTS IN ENGLAND TO A SWIMMING POOL.

673. *Dr. N. B. Khare : (a) Is it a fact that two Indian Muhammadan youths were recently prohibited from swimming in a swimming pool in the United Kingdom, as a result of the colour bar ?

(b) If so, are Government prepared to take steps to prevent such occurrences in future ?

(c) If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta's starred question No. 546 on the 20th September, 1935.

Dr. N. B. Khare : May I know if it was a mixed bath ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I am not in a position to say whether it was a mixed bath or a single sex bath.

Dr. N. B. Khare : Why was this colour bar in operation ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : That is a question which ought to be addressed to the authorities who are responsible for running the swimming bath.

Dr. N. B. Khare : Is it not a fact that these gentlemen were prevented from entering after they had purchased tickets ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I have answered that question the other day,—that at first there was a complaint on the ground that the railway company had actually issued tickets, and people, after having purchased tickets, were not admitted to the bath. That practice has been discontinued by the railway authorities.

(At this stage, Dr. N. B. Khare and Mr. Lalchand Navalrai rose in their seats to put further supplementary questions.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That question has been answered before. Next question.

RECRUITMENT TO THE TRAINING RESERVE WOMEN'S MEDICAL SERVICE.

674. *Dr. N. B. Khare : (a) With reference to the notification in the Statesman, Delhi, dated the 3rd May, 1935, regarding recruitment to the Training Reserve Women's Medical Service, how many applications for admission to this service have been received by the Chief Medical Officer, W. M. S., and how many Indian lady graduates are admitted ?

(b) What is the personnel of the Selection Committee which scrutinises these applications and when did it meet in Simla for the purpose ?

(c) Who are the lady graduates deputed this year for acquiring British Medical qualifications in the United Kingdom ?

(d) What are the criteria for admission to this service ?

(e) Is there any non-official member on this Committee, and, if so, who is that ?

(f) Were the old applications pending for several years put up before the Selection Committee or circulated to its members ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) 35 applications were received and four vacancies were filled.

(b) The Selection Committee consists of :

The Director-General, Indian Medical Service,

The Surgeon to His Excellency the Viceroy,

The Chief Medical Officer, Women's Medical Service, and Dr. Alice Pennell, O.B.E.

The Committee met on the 20th June, 1935.

(c) A statement is laid on the table. The object of deputation is further study which need not be in the United Kingdom.

(d) The minimum educational qualifications required are the possession of a degree in medicine of an Indian University. In making the selection, post graduate experience is also taken into consideration with a view to seeing whether the candidate would be able to benefit by a course of study abroad and take charge of large hospitals.

(e) Yes, Dr. Pennell.

(f) Yes.

Statement.

The following members of the Training Reserve of the Women's Medical Service have been selected for prosecuting further studies in the United Kingdom :

1. Miss Ivy Massick (Anglo-Indian).

2. Miss Edith Smith (Anglo-Indian)—to obtain the D.M.R.E. of Cambridge.

3. Miss Sharyn Pandit (Indian)—has been awarded a Rockefeller Scholarship and is proceeding to America and England for training in Maternity and Child Welfare work.

4. Miss Mary Purienkarpil John (Indian).

Dr. N. B. Khare : With regard to part (c) of the question, how many of them are Europeans and how many Indians ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : There are no Europeans, Sir.

FACILITIES FOR DELHI UNIVERSITY STUDENTS FOR ADMISSION TO AN ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

675. *Dr. N. B. Khare : (a) Is it a fact that a student of the Hindu College, Delhi, had applied in April 1935, for permission through the Secretary to the Honourable the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, for appearing at the Competitive Examination of the Thomason Civil Engineering College, Roorkee ?

(b) Is it also a fact that he was refused the permission applied for ?

(c) If so, will Government please state the reason for prohibiting a student from competing for the examination ?

(d) Is it the policy of Government that no student of the Delhi University should go to the Thomason Civil Engineering College, Roorkee ? If so, what are the Engineering Colleges open to the Delhi University students for the study of Engineering ?

(e) Are Government aware of the fact that Delhi University students are not held eligible for admission to the Engineering Colleges of other provinces ? If so, are Government prepared to take immediate steps to improve the lot of the Delhi University students ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes, in March, 1935.

(b) and (c). The Government of India decided in 1925 that students resident in centrally administered areas who obtain from the minor Local Government concerned permission to appear at the entrance examination of the Thomason College and are admitted to the College may receive financial assistance from the Government of India. In the case to which the Honourable Member refers official permission was refused on the ground of financial stringency and because the Government of India were already paying an annual grant of Rs. 3,100 to the elder brother of the applicant. The refusal of permission does not necessarily debar a student from entry to the College and the applicant was advised to make his own arrangements with the College authorities.

(d) No. The second part does not arise.

(e) Students, not resident in the Bombay Presidency, are not at present admitted to the Poona College of Engineering, but Government are not aware of any specific bar elsewhere. The second part does not arise.

HOURS OF DUTY OF TICKET COLLECTORS ON THE JUBBULPORE RAILWAY STATION.

676. Mr. Sri Prakasa (on behalf of Seth Govind Das) : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the number of ticket collectors on the staff of the Jubbulpore Railway station ;

(b) the number of hours they are rendering duty per day ;

(c) from what hour to what hour they render duty ;

(d) whether they are provided with quarters in the Railway premises ;

(e) whether they are given any house rent allowance ; if so, how much ; if not, why not ;

- (f) whether Government are aware that they are required to work from 12 noon till 12 midnight ;
- (g) whether they are given extra pay for the extra hours of work ; if so, how much ; if not, why not ;
- (h) since when the hours of duty and shift have been started and on whose orders ;
- (i) for what reasons it has been fixed ;
- (j) why this time of duty has been fixed from 12 to 12 instead of 8 to 8 or 6 to 6 ;
- (k) whether Government are aware of the serious hardships the ticket collectors have to undergo as a result of leaving their work at 12 at midnight to go to their homes in the city for meals and rest ; and
- (l) whether Government contemplate changing the hours of duty and the hours of shift immediately ; if so, when ; if not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Eight excluding the Head Ticket Collector.

(b) Twelve.

(c) Their hours of duty are from 8 to 20 hours and from 20 to 8 hours, the change in duties taking place weekly.

(d) No.

(e) No. Ticket Collectors are not eligible for free quarters and are, therefore, not given an allowance in lieu thereof.

(f), (i), (j), (k) and (l). The Honourable Member is apparently referring to a roster introduced from the 5th June, 1935, as an experimental measure, with a view to distributing the work evenly, according to the trains to be dealt with, among the two batches of collectors. The roster was withdrawn and substituted by the duty hours stated in my reply to part (c) above from the 18th August, 1935, for the reason that the hours were inconvenient to the men. The collectors represented their difficulties through the Divisional Staff Council and their request for a revision of the roster was granted.

(g) Yes, when they are due to it under the Hours of Employment Regulations.

(h) The roster is decided by the Divisional Traffic Manager on the authority of and in accordance with the Hours of Employment Regulations.

NON-ISSUE OF WEEK-END INTERMEDIATE AND THIRD CLASS TICKETS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

677. Mr. Sri Prakasa (on behalf of Seth Govind Das) : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether they are aware that week-end third and intermediate class return tickets are not issued on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway at concession rates ;
- (b) if so, for what reasons ;

- (c) whether Government propose to consider the advisability of issuing return concession tickets in the future ; if so, when ; if not, why not ;
- (d) the names of the State Railways where concession return week-end third and intermediate class tickets are issued ; and
- (e) the special reasons for the non-issue of week-end intermediate and third class tickets on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Not as a general rule ; but I understand third class week-end return tickets are issued from Bombay (Victoria Terminus), Byculla and Dadar to Nasik Road and Pandharpur and from stations in the Agra area to Delhi and New Delhi.

(b), (c) and (e). The question of introducing return tickets is a matter primarily for the consideration of the Railway Administrations concerned who are always ready to grant concession tickets if they are satisfied that these are likely to bring additional revenue. I will convey the Honourable Member's suggestion to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, for consideration if it has not already been examined.

(d) Week-end return tickets are issued on the Eastern Bengal Railway for third class and on the East Indian Railway for intermediate and third classes.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Do Government propose to introduce a sort of uniformity in all railways in the matter of these week-end tickets ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No. Government have already asked Agents to consider all these questions for individual railways.

INDIAN TRADE COMMISSIONERS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

678. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the number of Trade Commissioners appointed on behalf of India in foreign countries ;
- (b) the names of the countries where Trade Commissioners have been appointed and their headquarters ;
- (c) their qualifications and the salaries they draw ;
- (d) whether they have separate offices, or whether they are attached to the British embassies in those countries ;
- (e) the names of the Commissioners so appointed ;
- (f) under whose directions they work, either of the Government of India or of the Chief Commissioner for India ;
- (g) whether they send suggestions to the different industries in India in regard to the qualities preferred in those countries from India ;
- (h) the total annual cost of maintaining each of the Trade Commissioners' offices ;
- (i) what they have done in the matter of introducing Indian products in foreign markets ;

- (j) what their activities are in general in this matter at present ;
- (k) whether they have considered the advisability of taking such Commissioners from the mercantile community or from the different chambers of commerce in this country ; and
- (l) whether Government propose to do so in the future ; if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a), (b), (c), (e), (f), (h), (i) and (j). The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Pandit Nilakantha Das' starred question No. 521 on the 25th February, 1935. I lay on the table a statement showing the salaries drawn by each of the Indian Trade Commissioners in London, Hamburg and Milan.

(d) The Indian Trade Commissioners at Hamburg and Milan have their own separate offices. The office of the Trade Commissioner in London forms part of that of the High Commissioner for India.

(g) No. I may, however, invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the statement giving the principal duties of Indian Trade Commissioners which was laid on the table of the House with reference to part (c) of Prof. N. G. Ranga's starred question No. 54, asked on the 6th February, 1935.

(k) Yes. A member of the mercantile community has already been appointed to the post of Indian Trade Commissioner at Milan.

(l) The matter will receive due consideration as and when the occasion arises.

Statement showing the salaries drawn by the Indian Trade Commissioners.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : With reference to part (g) of this question, what procedure is adopted by the Government of India to make available their suggestions to the different departments of Industries and Agriculture in the various provinces ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I am afraid my Honourable friend did not hear the answer that I read out to part (g). I said :

"No. I may however invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the statement giving the principal duties of Indian Trade Commissioners which was laid on the table of the House with reference to part (c) of Prof. N. G. Ranga's starred question No. 54 asked on the 6th February, 1935."

If the Honourable Member likes I can read out that statement.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : That is not necessary. May we know how the various Provincial Departments are expected to avail themselves of the suggestions made by these various Trade Commissioners sent to the Government of India in regard to the marketing of different Indian commodities ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Reports are published and there are direct communications. For instance, one of the duties laid down on page 432 of the report to which I have referred is to furnish commercial information directed to the development of Indian export trade required by Departments of the Government of India or by Local Governments, by Indian States, by the High Commissioner for India or by the Director-General of Commercial Intelligence and Statistics.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Are not the Provincial Departments of Industries and Agriculture placed on the list of those to whom the Trade Commissioners are expected to send their periodical reports ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I would not like to answer that question without notice.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Will Government consider the desirability of placing them on the list of those to whom these periodical reports are supplied ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Not until I have looked into the matter with regard to the previous question.

EXPENDITURE ON THE INAUGURATION OF THE NEW CONSTITUTION AND THE DELIMITATION COMMITTEE.

679. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the estimated approximate expenditure on account of the inauguration of the new constitution in India ;
- (b) the estimated expenditure for the Delimitation Committee announced recently ; and
- (c) whether the different provinces are to pay their quota for their individual province, or whether the expenditure is to be met by the Central Government ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) If the Honourable Member is referring to the cost preliminary to the setting up of the new Constitution no total estimate has yet been made. If, however, he is referring to the additional expenditure involved in the new Constitution, I would refer him to paragraphs 267 to 273 of the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee on Indian Constitutional Reform.

(b) Rs. 1,34,500.

(c) The expenditure against (b) will be borne by the Central Government.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are the figures in the paragraphs of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report to which the Honourable Member referred final ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : They are only estimates.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have the Government of India applied their mind to these figures, and are they satisfied that they are approximately correct ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have no reason to believe that they are incorrect. The accuracy of some of these figures will arise in connection with the institution of the new provinces.

EXCHANGE RESTRICTIONS AFFECTING INDIA.

680. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether the export trade of this country has been reduced as a result of the exchange restrictions ;
- (b) to what countries the export trade from India has been adversely affected and to what extent ;
- (c) what action they contemplate taking in the matter ; and
- (d) what are the countries that have imposed restrictions on Indian trade in their countries ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a), (c) and (d). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to part (b) of Mr. Mudaliar's starred question No. 186 and to parts (a) and (e) of Mr. Avinashilingam Chettiar's starred question No. 6.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the Accounts relating to the Sea-borne Trade and Navigation of British India for March, 1935, which show the principal variations in the export trade of India in the past three years. The Government of India are not in a position to offer an opinion as to the extent to which these variations are due to exchange restrictions.

ISSUE OF ONE RUPEE NOTES.

681. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether they contemplate issuing one rupee notes again ;
- (b) if so, their specific reasons for it ; and
- (c) when they are going to issue the one rupee notes ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I can see nothing in the present situation which makes necessary or even desirable the issue of one rupee notes.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Are these one rupee notes still exchangeable or not ? I happen to have one.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have not seen one for a good many years. Some are still in existence as museum specimens.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Why is it that the Government of India do not bring these one rupee notes into circulation ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I said that I can see nothing in the present situation which makes necessary or even desirable the issue of one rupee notes. There is not a Douglas Government in existence in India yet !

DEFINITIONS TO BE FOLLOWED BY THE BOARD OF FILM CENSORS IN INDIA.

682. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether they have laid one definition to be followed by all the Boards of Film Censors in India ;
- (b) whether there have been differences in the definitions of the different Boards ;
- (c) if so, in what respects ;
- (d) the reasons for those differences ;
- (e) whether Government laid definitions as to what constitutes an educational film ;
- (f) if so, what the definition is ;
- (g) whether the definitions of the educational and other general films in this country differ from those of the other countries of the British Commonwealth ; if so, why ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a)—(d). I would refer the Honourable Member to the canons of censorship set out in Appendix G to the Indian Cinematograph Committee's report and to the observations in paragraphs 241 and 252 of that report on the practice of the Censorship Boards. The Committee found that all the Boards were applying very similar, if not identical, canons. The application of these canons to individual films is largely a matter of opinion and some difference between the Boards must necessarily be expected occasionally in a vast country like India where local conditions vary greatly.

(e)—(g). No rigid definition of educational films has yet been prescribed in India. I would however invite the Honourable Member's attention to paragraph 158 and 201 of the Cinematograph Committee's report and to Article I of the League of Nations Convention for facilitating the international circulation of films of an educational character. As India has ratified this Convention, the definition of an educational film contained in that Article, a copy of which is laid on the table, may be taken as that which has been adopted by this country.

ARTICLE I.

The present Convention shall apply to films which based on didactic methods have eminently international educational aims and fall within one of the five following categories :

- (a) Films designed to supply information with regard to the work and aims of the League of Nations and other international organisations which are generally recognised by the High Contracting Parties ;
- (b) Films intended for use in education of all grades ;

- (c) Films intended for vocational training and guidance, including technical films relating to industry and films relating to scientific management ;
- (d) Films dealing with scientific or technical research or designed to spread scientific knowledge ;
- (e) Films dealing with health questions, physical training, social welfare and relief.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Is it a fact that the Board of Film Censors mainly scrutinise the films from a political point of view and utterly neglect the moral view point as a result of which several films of low moral tones are exhibited to the detriment of the morality of the people, specially of young boys and girls ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not think that arises out of this question.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : How do the Government of India exercise their control over the Board of Censors ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The Honourable Member had better put down a question.

NOMINATION OF INDIANS TO THE BOARD OF FILM CENSORS IN INDIA.

683. *Seth Govind Das : (a) Will Government please state whether they are prepared to see that more than sixty per cent. of the members nominated to the Boards of Film Censors in India are Indians ?

(b) Are Government prepared to see that at least 30 per cent. of the members are taken from the Indian industrial interests ? If so, when ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) and (b). The constitution of the Boards of Film Censors in India is a matter primarily for the Local Governments of the Provinces in which such Boards have been established and I am sure that the Governments concerned give full consideration to the various interests which should be represented on the Boards. I will, however, send a copy of the Honourable Member's question and of my reply to Local Governments for their information.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : What about the representation of the users of these films ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The Honourable Member's supplementary question will also go to the Local Governments.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Is it not a fact that there is a vast difference between the views of Europeans and Indians generally as to what are objectionable films from a moral point of view.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not think that arises out of this question.

LICENSED COOLIES ON RAILWAY STATIONS.

684. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether the licensed coolies of the railways fall within the category of railway servants ;

- (b) if so, whether they get any of, or all, the facilities of a railway servant, such as medical assistance, housing facilities, etc. ; if so, where and to what extent ; if not, why not ;
- (c) whether the licensed porters have to pay anything to get their licence ;
- (d) how much they have to pay and to whom ;
- (e) whether they have to render any free service to the railway in the form of loading parcels and unloading them from trains ;
- (f) if so, whether they are paid anything for these free services ; if not, why not ;
- (g) whether this rendering of free service to the railway, over and above the payment of licence fee, is a condition of their agreement of engagement ;
- (h) whether Government are aware that they have to render free service for the officials of the railways ;
- (i) if so, why they are not paid for such services by the officials concerned ;
- (j) whether Government propose to enquire into the matter and regulate against this evil ;
- (k) whether Government propose to see that they are paid for services they render to the railways in loading and unloading parcels, etc., to and from trains ;
- (l) whether the cost of loading and unloading parcels and luggage is included in the charge of booking (freight) ; and
- (m) if so, why the coolies are not paid for their labour ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) The practice in this respect is not uniform.

(d) to (m). I have called for information from railway administrations and will lay a reply on the table in due course.

TRANSPORTATION, COMMERCIAL AND TRAFFIC INSPECTORS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

685. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the number of (i) Transportation, (ii) Commercial, and (iii) Traffic Inspectors on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ;
- (b) their respective grades of salary ;
- (c) the percentage of Indians in each of the above groups as against Europeans and Anglo-Indians ;
- (d) the number of Indians out of the three groups in each case who are temporary ;
- (e) the number of Indians appointed or promoted to these services during the last decade since the Indianisation programme has been introduced ;

(f) the number of Europeans and Anglo-Indians who have been appointed or promoted from lower services during this period ; and

(g) the reason for this discriminative treatment ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to questions Nos. 685, 687 and 688 together. The available information is contained in the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Classified List of subordinate staff on pay of Rs. 250 and above and in Appendix F to Volume I of the Railway Board's Administration Report on Indian Railways, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

STATION MASTERS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

686. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the number of Station Masters on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in the A grade (395—450) ;
- (b) the number of Indians as against Europeans and Anglo-Indians separately ;
- (c) whether the salary of an Indian Station Master of the A grade differs from that of an European or Anglo-Indian of the same grade ;
- (d) whether the same case is applicable to the B grade Station Masters also ;
- (e) whether, for instance, the salary of an Indian Station Master at Katni Junction varies from that of an European or Anglo-Indian Station Master ;
- (f) if so, the reason for this discrimination ; and
- (g) why it is not applicable to Cabinet Ministers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) and (b). There are two station masters in the grades of Rs. 425—25—450. Neither of them is an Indian.

(c) to (f). Government understand there is no racial discrimination and that an Indian station master in any grade is eligible for the same rate of pay as a European or Anglo-Indian in the same grade.

(g) Does not arise.

FUEL INSPECTORS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

†687. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the number of Fuel Inspectors on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ;
- (b) the number of Indians amongst them ;
- (c) the salaries they draw in each case ; and
- (d) the number of Indians on temporary service ?

LOCO. INSPECTORS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

†688. *Seth Govind Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the number of Locomotive Inspectors on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ;

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 685.

(b) the number of Indians amongst them ; and

(c) their salaries in each case, along with that of the Europeans and Anglo-Indians ?

NOMINATIONS OF MEMBERS TO THE INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH BUREAU.

689. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that an Industrial Research Bureau has been opened by the Government of India ?

(b) Is it a fact that a meeting of the Advisory Council for the industrial research and intelligence was held in July last ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether the members of this Advisory Council were nominated by Government and, if so, were they nominated on the recommendations of the different Industrial Associations ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether any member of the Bengal Industries Association was nominated to this Bureau? If not, why not ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state the names of the different industrial organisations or the Chambers of Commerce whose members were represented on this Advisory Council ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to state the items of research that have been entrusted to the new Industrial Intelligence and Research Bureau ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c), (d) and (e). The members were selected in the manner recommended by the Industries Conference. They were not nominated by Chambers of Commerce or other organizations.

(f) The items for immediate investigation relate to paints, the suitability of vegetable oils for certain purposes, Portland cement, lime and cement concretes, dry cells, sands and feldspars, and the production of glass suitable for the manufacture of bangles on a cottage industry basis.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Are Government aware that the handloom weavers number ten millions of people in this country, and yet they are not represented on this Industries Conference, and, therefore, they have had no chance of getting themselves represented on this Research Bureau ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I do not see any particular reason why they should be represented in the Research Bureau.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not a fact that various interests are represented on this Industrial Conference and on the Research Bureau ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : We do not give representation to "interests" on either of these bodies ; the persons sent are sent to put forward the views of Governments mainly, and a few persons are selected for their expert knowledge of particular questions or subjects likely to come up.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Is it one of the duties of the Research Bureau to advise prospective industrialists with a view to enabling them to start industries ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The Bureau will also deal with industrial intelligence.

REPRESENTATIVES TO THE INDUSTRIES CONFERENCE.

690. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that the provinces and the States have been asked to send representatives for participating in the seventh Industries Conference ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether the representatives of the different small industrial organisations will also be invited to this Conference ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes : most of the provinces and certain States have been invited to send representatives to the Seventh Industries Conference.

(b) No : because the Conference is convened for the purpose of enabling the various Governments to discuss matters of common interest to them and is already as large as is convenient.

U Thein Maung : Has invitation been extended to the Government of Burma ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I think there is no Industries Department in Burma. As far as I recollect, they did not attend the previous Conference, but it was certainly open to them to do so.

U Thein Maung : Have they been invited to send any representative to this conference at all ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Speaking from memory, I think they were, at any rate to the previous Conference, and they were given information of this.

CLASSIFICATION OF PAPER.

691. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the article headed " Paper import and Tariff Board ", " classification ", " Calcutta Associations representations ", published in the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 7th July, 1935 ? If so, will Government be pleased to state whether the representation has been given due consideration ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the decisions arrived at by them on that representation and the reasons for coming to their final conclusions ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) and (b). The representation in question is understood to have been addressed to the Tariff Board in connection with the enquiry into the question of the classification of paper for tariff purposes. The Report of the Board on the subject was received last week and no decision has yet been arrived at.

TENDERS FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE HOWRAH BRIDGE.

692. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the editorial headed " The two crore Derby " published on page 2 of the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 7th July, 1935 ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to represent Indian interests in the acceptance of tenders for the construction and supply of materials for the proposed construction of Howrah Bridge under the Port Commissioners of Calcutta ?

(c) Is it a fact that Government gave an assurance that Indian industrial interests will be safeguarded when tenders will be accepted ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The matter is statutorily within the competence of the Howrah Bridge Commissioners and the Government of Bengal, on both of which bodies Indian interests are directly represented. The Government of India have no further information on the points raised by the Honourable Member.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Are the Port Commissioners of Calcutta negotiating with a German firm to give this contract to them on the basis that the firm will purchase an equivalent amount of Indian goods ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Government have no information.

EXHIBITION OF OBJECTIONABLE CINEMA FILMS.

693. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Are Government aware that there is a strong public feeling in India against the exhibition of objectionable cinema films and dissemination of vulgar advertisements of such films ? If not, has the attention of Government been drawn to the editorial comments published in column 4, paragraph 2, page 8 of the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 7th July, 1935, regarding this subject ?

(b) Do Government propose to take proper steps to stop the exhibition of such films ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) and (b). My Honourable colleague has seen the Press report to which the Honourable Member refers. As he is aware, a Bill providing for the censorship of cinematograph posters and other forms of film advertisement is now under reference to a Select Committee of this House. In regard to the exhibition of objectionable films, I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the observations contained in paragraphs 241—248, 251 and 252 of the Indian Cinematograph Committee's report. While the Committee observed that it is largely a matter of opinion as to what constitutes an objectionable film and that it is possible that such films are occasionally passed for exhibition, they are generally satisfied with the standards applied by the Board of Censors and by the manner in which these Boards were discharging their difficult duties. The Act provides power whereby the certificate granted in respect of a certified film may be suspended by a Local Government. The remedy is, therefore, for objectionable films to be brought to the notice of Local Governments.

HINDUS AND THE RAILWAY SERVICES.

694. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the article headed " Hindus let down in the Services ", " Punjab Hindu submit memorial to the Secretary of State ", " Discrimination in the Railway services ", published in the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 6th July, 1935 ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state whether any reference has been received on this subject by them from the Secretary of State? If so, will they be pleased to lay the correspondence on the subject on the table of the House? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Government have seen the article referred to.

(b) No such reference has been received.

MAXIMUM ASSESSED RENT FOR GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

695. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : With reference to the reply to part (c) of starred question No. 462, in this House on the 7th August, 1934, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why a maximum assessed rent is fixed for all Government quarters on the basis of capital outlay on such buildings? Is the renting of Government quarters administrative and not commercial?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The fair rent of the accommodation is fixed, and the occupant pays that rent or ten per cent. of his pay whichever is less. Administrative considerations certainly enter into the arrangements for renting Government quarters.

MONEY INVESTED IN THE BUILDING OF QUARTERS IN SIMLA AND DELHI AND INTEREST PAID FOR SUCH DEBTS.

696. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Will Government be pleased to state, separately for Simla and Delhi, the total amount of public money invested in the building of quarters which are rented to Government servants and the total interest paid for such public debts out of the revenues of India every year?

Mr. A. G. Clow : A statement giving the information required is laid on the table.

Expenditure on residential buildings for Government servants.

Place.

Rs. lakhs

(to end of 1933-34).

|                            |       |
|----------------------------|-------|
| (1) Simla .. .. .          | 74.00 |
| (2) Delhi Province .. .. . | 3.6   |
| (3) Delhi .. .. .          | 22.95 |
| (4) New Delhi .. .. .      | 183.0 |

Items (1) and (4) include the cost of residences for Members of the Indian Legislature. Final figures for additional outlay during the year 1934-35 are not yet available. The addition for that year in respect of items (1) to (3) is inconsiderable, but the addition for New Delhi amounts to nearly Rs. 51 lakhs, bringing the total of item (4) to the end of 1934-35 to Rs. 234 lakhs.

2. Interest charges.

The outlay on items (1) to (3) was charged to revenue and no interest is payable upon it. The interest charges on item (4) varied every year according to the rate of interest in force and the expenditure incurred up to the end of the year. Interest charges are not separately adjusted in the accounts, and their determination on a pro forma basis for each year would involve very great labour. Adopting the average rate of interest for the years 1917-18 to 1934-35, namely 5.2 per cent., the interest charges at present on Rs. 234 lakhs amount approximately to Rs. 12.17 lakhs per annum.

BASIS OF RENT FOR MEMBERS' QUARTERS.

697. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons why the rent for members' quarters are on the basis of assessed rent? Is the Central Public Works Department not run on commercial lines?

(b) Do Government propose to run the Central Public Works Department residential buildings on commercial basis? If not, why not?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Members of the Indian Legislature are charged rent assessed under Fundamental Rule 45-A. This is the concessional rent payable by Government servants. The operations of the Central Public Works Department are governed by rules and are not commercial.

(b) No. To do so would very largely defeat the objects with which residential accommodation is provided.

ALLOTMENT OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

698. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that several men occupying 'A' type unorthodox quarters in Summer Hill have been forced to vacate such quarters on the ground that their pay is more than Rs. 600? If so, why have men, drawing more than Rs. 600 but occupying 'A' type orthodox clerks quarters in Simla, been allowed to stay in such quarters in spite of the statement made by Government in reply to starred question No. 419, dated the 7th August, 1934 in this House that 'A' class orthodox clerks' quarters in Simla are meant for men drawing pay above Rs. 300 but below Rs. 600?

(b) Are Government aware that this benefits only a few Superintendents of the Public Works Branch of the Department of Industries and Labour? If not, do Government propose to enquire into the matter? If not, why not?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Four officials have recently become ineligible for "A" class quarters at Summer Hill. As regards the second part, the position is explained in the reply given on the 23rd September, 1935, to part (a) of starred question No. 597 by Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali.

(b) The allegation is unfounded and Government do not propose to take any action in the matter.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Is it a fact that European officers are given preference in the allotment of Summer Hill quarters over Indian officers?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir; I understand there is no discrimination at all. The rules apply equally to all officers.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if any preference is given to Members of the Legislative Assembly for whom these quarters are intended?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Certain quarters are reserved for Members of both Houses of the Legislature.

ALLOTMENT OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

699. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that 'A' class accommodation is being allotted to Europeans of the Army Headquarters, who are paying a maximum of Rs. 400 as house rent for such quarters and, if so, is it a fact that the unorthodox Indians of the Secretariat Departments who are foregoing a house rent allowance of Rs. 400 to Rs. 450 are being refused the same accommodation ?

(b) Do Government propose to remove this discrimination by allotting such 'A' class accommodations to persons of the Secretariat Departments who will be foregoing a house rent allowance of not less than Rs. 400 a year ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) "A" class unorthodox accommodation at Simla is intended for Government servants whose emoluments exceed Rs. 450 but are less than Rs. 600 per mensem. No distinction is made between Europeans and Indians. It is evident that under the 10 per cent. rule the rent recoverable from a junior officer entitled to "A" class accommodation may be considerably less than Rs. 400 for seven months' occupation. House rent allowance at the new rates is graded according to pay and all officers entitled to "B" class unorthodox accommodation are eligible for an allowance of Rs. 400 or Rs. 450 for the Simla season. They draw this allowance only when they are not provided with Government accommodation and up to the amount of the rent actually paid by them for private accommodation. The maximum allowance is intended to cover payment of rent for private accommodation not merely for the Simla season but for the whole year.

(b) As I have already indicated there is no discrimination. The allotments are made on the basis of emoluments, and the rent payable by rent-paying tenants is not comparable with the amount of the Simla house allowance.

ALLOTMENT OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

700. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) With reference to the reply to starred question No. 419, dated the 7th August, 1934, in this House, will Government be pleased to state why men drawing Rs. 600 and above have been allowed to retain 'A' class orthodox clerks' quarters in Simla ?

(b) Do Government propose to remove all such men from the Phagli quarters and allot those quarters to men who are entitled to such quarters, in accordance with the reply quoted above ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply just given to starred question No. 698.

ALLOTMENT OF GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

701. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) With reference to the reply to part (g) of starred question No. 419, dated the 7th August, 1934, in this House, will Government be pleased to state when the Imperial Secretariat Association was consulted ?

(b) Is it a fact that the said Association was consulted when the Summer Hill quarters used to be classed as "European quarters" and when European employees of the Civil Offices elected the old rates of house rent ? If so, do Government propose to consult the said Association now that the classification of European quarters has since been changed into "unorthodox quarters" ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) In 1925.

(b) When the Imperial Secretariat Association were consulted in 1925, the distinction between European and Indian Clerk's quarters was in force. This distinction was removed in 1931, and the draft of the rules now in force, which were issued in 1933 and embodied the revised designations of the quarters concerned, was referred to the Imperial Secretariat Association in May, 1932. In the circumstances, Government do not consider that further consultation with the Association is required.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT'S OFFER WITH REGARD TO THE CONTRACT FOR THE HOWRAH BRIDGE.

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury : (a) Is it a fact that the German Consul-General at Calcutta, acting on behalf his 12 NOON.

Government, had an interview with the Chairman of the Bridge Commissioners in charge of the contract for the new Howrah Bridge, and made an offer that, in case the contract for the bridge is given to a German firm, his Government would spend an amount equal to the contract money in the purchase of commodities from India ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state whether any offer of any sort has been made by the German Government either to the Government of India or to the Bridge Commissioners with regard to the contract for the Howrah Bridge ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, they have taken or propose to take to insure that this large contract is retained in India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) As was pointed out by me on the 23rd instant in reply to question No. 618 by the Honourable Member, Mr. Satyamurti, the power to dispose of this matter is vested by statute in the Howrah Bridge Commissioners subject to the approval of the Local Government. The Honourable Member's question is presumably based on statements made in the Press. As the Bridge Commissioners are now engaged in the consideration of the tenders for this work, Government think it would be extremely undesirable at this stage to make any inquiry or inquiries of this description from the Commissioners as to the accuracy or otherwise of statements which have appeared in the Press.

(b) No communication on the subject has been received from the German Consul-General by the Government of India. As regards the Bridge Commissioners the position is as stated in my reply to part (a).

(c) The Honourable Member is referred to my replies on the 23rd instant to Mr. Satyamurti's question No. 618 and to the supplementary questions arising therefrom.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Did I understand the Honourable Member to say that the Government of India have absolutely nothing to do with this matter ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I have on several occasions explained the position that this matter lies entirely within the competence of the Howrah Bridge Commissioners subject to the approval of the Bengal Government.

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury : Are Government aware that the Tariff Board recommended :

“ At the same time we consider it a matter of the utmost importance that when a large public undertaking of this description is under consideration, every effort should be made to utilise to the fullest extent the material resources and manufacturing capacity available in India ” ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I am prepared to take it from the Honourable Member.

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury : In view of this recommendation of the Tariff Board, do the Government of India propose to take any action in this matter, drawing the attention of the Bridge Commissioners to this report of the Tariff Board ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I have no reason to assume that the Bridge Commissioners are not aware of this portion of the Tariff Board's report.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I ask if the Government think it expedient or not to give advice to the Local Government and the other authorities concerned not to take any contract from outside ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Why not ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : For the simple reason that the matter does not lie within the competence of the Government of India.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Has any correspondence in this matter at any time recently passed between the Port Commissioners of Calcutta or the Local Government of Bengal or both and the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The Government as the result of questions received from certain Honourable Members of this House did make inquiries as to where the matter stood and the information received has already been supplied to the House in answer to questions previously put.

DELAY IN THE DECLARATION OF RESULTS OF REGISTERED ACCOUNTANTS' DEGREE EXAMINATIONS.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they have received a telegram from the Honorary Secretary of the Indian Society of Accountants and Auditors, Bombay, protesting against the procrastination in declaring the results of the Final Examination for the Registered Accountants' degree, held by Government in the beginning of April, last ;

(b) what the reason for the postponement of the publication of these results is ; and

(c) whether they propose to publish the results of the Examination immediately, and if not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) Yes. The examination was, however, held from 26th to 29th April, and not in the beginning of April.

(b) Delay has occurred owing to the fact (a) that certain of the candidates in neglect of the examination instructions answered questions on the wrong answer-books thus involving needless interchanges of answer-books between the various examiners, and (b) that the results of the examination were such as to necessitate their very careful re-consideration by the examiners and ultimately by the Public Service Commission.

(c) Yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : It is immediate.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Yes.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know what was the nature of the results, and where do the Public Service Commission come in in assessing the results of the examination ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I am not prepared to disclose the nature of the results, but the Public Service Commission might well come in for the purpose of consultations as to the action proposed to be taken by the Department before the publication of the results.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Do I understand the Honourable the Commerce Member to say that the Public Service Commission can direct the examiners to increase or decrease the marks ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I have not said that.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Then, what is the inference or the advice or the suggestion which the Public Service Commission can make to the examiners ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Not to the examiners, but to the Department.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Where does the Department come in in publishing the results of the examination ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The examination was held under the supervision and the superintendence of the Department.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Has the Department any jurisdiction apart from publishing the results sent up to them by the examiners ? Does the Department interfere with the results of the examination ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir. If any advice had been received from the Public Service Commission which necessitated another reference back to the examiners, that might or might not have been done.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am asking for some light. I am asking, Mr. President, whether the Department or the Public Service Commission did interfere, by way of advice or suggestion, with the declaration of the results of the examination? I presume, examinations are by means of papers and the word of the examiners is final. May I ask if their word was final, or was there some communal readjustment?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : There was not the slightest idea of any communal or other readjustment of that character.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What is the nature of the advice which the Department or the Public Service Commission can give in this matter?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : All bodies like Universities and other bodies, which hold examinations, do scrutinise the results when they are received from the examiners, and the body that finally scrutinises those results may come to the conclusion that a reference back on certain matters may or may not be desirable to the examiners. That is the kind of consultation to which I have referred.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is the position this that the Department can ask the examiners to revise the results?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The Department cannot ask them to revise the results.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Then, what can they do?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : They can ask them to re-value the papers from a certain point of view.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Only to increase the passes?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : If the Honourable Member thinks that in this particular case the examiners were asked to increase the number of passes or the Department forced them to pass a larger number of people, that is not so.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Then, what is it?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has now perhaps sufficiently explained the position.

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, the following Message has been received from the Council of State :

"I am directed to inform the Legislative Assembly that the following motion was passed in the Council of State at its meeting held on Tuesday, the 24th September, 1935, and to request the concurrence of the Legislative Assembly in the said motion :

"That this Council do recommend to the Legislative Assembly that the Bill to provide for the better administration and governance of Hindu Temples in the city of Madras and the endowments attached thereto be referred to a Joint Committee of the Council and of the Legislative Assembly and that the Joint Committee do consist of 12 members."

REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE SCHEME OF PREFERENCES RESULTING FROM THE OTTAWA TRADE AGREEMENT.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I lay on the table the report* on the working of the scheme of preferences resulting from the Ottawa Trade Agreement for the year 1934-35.

THE JUBBULPORE AND CHHATTISGARH DIVISIONS (DIVORCE PROCEEDINGS VALIDATION) BILL—contd.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The House will now proceed with the further consideration of the Bill to remove certain doubts and to validate certain proceedings of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Leader of the House) : Sir, on the last occasion the matter was almost finished, and you were good enough to give me time to consider whether I should not put in an amendment by way of extra caution as a result of the suggestion which came from my Honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Somebody else must move the amendment, and not the Honourable Member.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : My Honourable friend, Sir Lancelot Graham, will move it.

What I am saying now is that we want to move an amendment which will make it perfectly clear that somebody may not raise the question that today we are giving jurisdiction and, therefore, affecting the jurisdiction of the Central Provinces Court and it may be said that both the courts are having concurrent jurisdiction. We are, therefore, simply putting a word only to make the position perfectly clear.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

Sir Lancelot Graham (Secretary : Legislative Department) : Sir, I move :

"That in clause 2 of the Bill, before the words 'has had', and before the words 'shall have' the word 'alone' be inserted in each case."

Honourable Members who have heard the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill will realise the purpose of this amendment which is of the nature of drafting amendment introduced ex majori cantela to prevent a possible claim to exercise jurisdiction in these matters in the Allahabad High Court. We think, Sir, the contingency is altogether remote, but there is just that possibility and this amendment is introduced to stop that little gap. We have to thank the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition for the suggestion which has resulted in this amendment. Sir, I move.

*Not included in these debates, but copies have been circulated to Honourable Members and are also available in the Library.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That in clause 2 of the Bill, before the words ‘ has had ’, and before the words ‘ shall have ’ the word ‘ alone ’ be inserted in each case.”

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That clause 2, as amended, stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That the Title and the Preamble stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. Sri Prakasa (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muham-madan Rural) : Sir, my only desire in giving notice of this amendment* was that in the Bill some word or words should be inserted somewhere to show that this Legislature was not prepared to condone any action of any court of law that goes beyond the powers vested in that court.

Sir Lancelot Graham : On a point of order, Sir. Is not the Honourable Member merely reflecting on the conduct of the High Court ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Isn't that so ?

Mr. Sri Prakasa : I remember your ruling, Sir, very well. My Honourable friend, Sir Lancelot Graham, need have no anxiety about that. I was just going to say that—and that will satisfy my fastidious friend over there—that in view of the fact that the word “ alone ” has been inserted in the right place, I feel that my purpose has been fulfilled, because it is clear that before this the Central Provinces Court alone had the right to do what the High Court of Allahabad wrongly did. When the word “ alone ” has been inserted, my purpose has been fulfilled, and I, therefore, do not propose to move my amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That the Title and the Preamble stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was adopted.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I move :

“ That the Bill, as amended, be passed.”

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That the Bill, as amended, be passed.”

The motion was adopted.

“ That in the second paragraph of the Preamble to the Bill, after the word ‘ also ’ the word ‘ unfortunately ’ and after the word ‘ taken ’ the words ‘ without authority ’ be inserted.”

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham (Army Secretary) : Sir, I move :

“ That the Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, for certain purposes, as reported by the Select Committee, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon.”

Sir, when I originally moved for reference of this Bill to a Select Committee last April, I gave an undertaking that we would consult the all-India Cantonments Association and obtain their opinion on the Bill and lay it before Honourable Members of the Select Committee before they were called upon to meet and discuss the Bill. That, Sir, was done. The all-India Cantonments Association, or perhaps I should say one or two of the younger and more enthusiastic Members of that Association, who possibly will grow wiser as they grow older, were pleased to take up a destructive attitude towards this Bill. I am all the more glad that the Select Committee did not follow that lead. They preferred to take up a constructive rather than a destructive attitude ; and the result has been, by a judicious mixture of youth at the prow (as represented by the all-India Cantonments Association) and wisdom at the helm (as supplied by the Select Committee), that the Bill has escaped ship-wreck and has, I am glad to say, its way into calm waters.

Now, Sir, I do not wish to take up the time of the House by a detailed exposition of the provisions of the Bill and the alterations that the Select Committee have made in it. The House will have an opportunity of discussing details more fully at a later date. All I need say is this, that a large number of clauses in the original Bill, to which the Government at no time attached any very great importance, have been omitted. The clauses in the original Bill to which the Government did attach considerable importance have been retained, but their drafting has been very considerably altered in favour of, what I might call, the popular point of view. For instance, the principle has been accepted of replacing military executive officers by civilian executive officers, but it has been agreed that the Cantonment fund should not pay the whole of the salary of these civilian executive officers, but that the Government should pay half. Similarly with the clauses about water-supply and building. The general principles of these clauses have been retained, but provisions have been inserted which I hope will adequately safeguard the interests of the civil population in these matters. But, Sir, the Select Committee have gone a great deal further than that. They have introduced two entirely new principles which I think are of great importance to the civil population in Cantonments. In the first place, they have recommended that elected representatives of the people should normally have a voice in the administration of all Cantonments, not only in the administration of a limited number as at present ; and, secondly, that the elected representatives of the people should have a predominating voice in the administration of the purely civil areas in Cantonments. The first of these involves the abolition of all nominated Boards and also of that form of one-man-rule which is now known as ‘ corporation sole ’. The second involves the statutory appointment of a Bazar Committee consisting of the elected members of the Board which I hope will be entrusted with the detailed administration of bazar areas in future. These, Sir, are two very large and far-reaching changes of great importance.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[25TH SEP.]

[Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham.]

There are, I know, certain other matters with regard to which the Select Committee very properly realised that it was impossible to make a statutory provision in the Act, but with reference to which I gave certain undertakings on behalf of Government that I would do my best by means of executive instructions to improve matters, so as to avoid the constant disputes which are now apt to mar the administration of cantonment areas. I do not think I need go into the details of these undertakings at the present moment. The only two points that I wish to make now are, firstly, that by a spirit of reasonable compromise we have succeeded in revising the Bill in a way which I hope will satisfy the aspirations of the civil population in cantonments without prejudicing military interests therein; and, secondly, that in doing so we have so altered the character of this Bill that it would not be fair to ask the House to pass it now until we have received the opinions of the Local Governments and the military authorities thereon. I very much hope that both the Local Government and the military authorities will be able to accept the proposals that we have made and that the Bill will eventually come before this House at the beginning of the next Delhi Session in substantially its present form.

Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Motion moved.

"That the Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, for certain purposes as reported by the Select Committee, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon."

Mr. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammads Rural) : Sir, I am very glad to note that the Army Secretary was glad to be able to pay a compliment to the reasonable attitude taken by the non-official members of the Select Committee. I can assure him that we are on this side always for a reasonable compromise. It was a rare occasion for me to see that many of the points that we pressed in the Select Committee were accepted by the Army Secretary. And if the same atmosphere of wishing to have a reasonable compromise prevails when public opinion is ascertained after this republication and circulation, I am sure there will be nothing like opposition from this side. I agree with the Honourable Member that the Bill has been radically changed. I do not say that we have carried all that we wanted to carry. There are certain matters which we wanted to be incorporated in the Bill, but we were assured by the Chairman and also the Army Secretary that constitutionally those things could not be incorporated in the Bill. I am glad, however, that he has made a statement here, that those matters will be incorporated in executive instructions or instruments of instructions, if he is so pleased to call them. The real bone of contention is about disputes in regard to lands in what is called the residential area. The lands are in the possession of the civil population for many long years and nobody can say whether they own the land or Government owns it. I think it is not really a question of title but it is really a question of possession; and if they are left undisturbed in their possession and if Government in a generous mood of compromise makes a generous offer of long lease at a nominal rent and on reasonable conditions, I am sure the cantonment problem, so far as the administration is concerned, will be solved and solved for good. I am also glad that with regard to the one intention we had in the Select Committee, namely, to bring the cantonment administration in line with the administration available in the near municipal area, we have succeeded. The statutory sub-committee to manage practically all municipal matters is a good advance, and I am sure that a provision will be made in the Bill that whatever the sub-committee decides will not be normally disturbed by the Officer Commanding or by the Board as such. Such a provision, if it is possible to incorporate it, should be incorporated; otherwise, as the Honourable Member stated, it should be done in the instrument of instructions. Sir, there are also other matters but this is not the occasion when I should take the time of the House. I am sure, however, that we can carry our points, given the necessary atmosphere which is promised here. Therefore, I support the motion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, for certain purposes, as reported by the Select Committee, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon."

The motion was adopted.

DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS.

EXPENDITURE ON THE DEVELOPMENT OF CIVIL AVIATION MET FROM THE FUND.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member) : Sir, I move :

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of 'Expenditure on the Development of Civil Aviation met from the Fund'."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Motion moved :

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of 'Expenditure on the Development of Civil Aviation met from the Fund'."

Mr. Asaf Ali has given notice of an amendment which proposes to discuss the question of principle which cannot be discussed at this stage. Greater economy in preparing increasing landing grounds.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali (Delhi : General) : In that case, I shall have to oppose this grant.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member wishes by this motion to urge the matter of adequate and effective provision for training of Indians as Aircraft Inspectors, Assistant Aircraft Inspectors and higher class Ground Engineers; and also greater economy in making and increasing landing grounds. These are questions which cannot be discussed on this motion.

Mr. A. G. Clow (Secretary, Department of Industries and Labour) : Sir, may I offer an observation? I do not wish to raise any objection on the ground of short notice though I only received this half an hour ago, because I recognise the difficulties under which Honourable Members have been labouring. But I would submit for your consideration that of the two points that my Honourable friend has put down, the first is not in order because this grant which we are now considering does not relate in any way to the appointment of inspecting staff. It relates entirely to works.

[Mr. A. G. Clow.]

The second point, I quite agree, is entirely in order and I shall be ready to reply as best as I can to any observations which the Honourable Member has to offer. But I would ask you to request the Honourable Member to confine himself to the second of the two points which he has set down.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Yes, that is a question which can be discussed.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Sir, I move that this demand be reduced by Rs. 101, and I wish to urge greater economy in making and increasing landing grounds. I should like to make it perfectly clear at the outset that I should be the very last person to oppose the development of civil aviation in India. I should like to see my country well equipped in all matters which may be considered the necessities of modern life ; and I consider that civil aviation is certainly becoming very rapidly a necessity of modern life. It is no longer a luxury. But at the same time I must say.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Is the Honourable Member only referring to the question of economy ?

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : I am confining myself to the question of the construction of aerodromes, landing grounds and matters of that description. I must say that the amount that is being expended on the preparation of landing grounds, aerodromes and other connected works is wholly incommensurate with the results which I find reported. For instance, we find that there are about 17 aerodromes throughout India ; and on these 17 aerodromes, so far, the Government have spent something like 69 lakhs—they propose to spend a good deal more money now. I think they have spent Rs. 69 lakhs since 1930, and their receipts in 1933-34 amounted to Rs. 45,000 all told : in 1935-36 they amounted to about Rs. 88,000 and odd, which included fees for licences, certificates ; and allowances were made for customs duties and various other things : of course I am excluding petrol tax : including petrol tax this amount would be larger. My point is that these landing grounds and aerodromes are being largely used now by services which may be called trans-India services, that is to say, by the K. L. M. company, by Air France, by the Imperial Airways and by the Trans-Continental Airways—they are being mostly used by these services which are hardly of any use to India. In other words, we are spending all this money on aerodromes and landing grounds which are not primarily for the use of India and which do not, in any way, benefit us even indirectly ; because, even the petrol tax which you realise does not in any way repay the Government for the amount invested in the construction of these landing grounds and aerodromes. I may also add here that the additional constructions, which the Civil Aviation Directorate is about to undertake, will necessitate the employment of a large number of highly paid staff, including Aircraft Inspectors, tors, technical officers, aerodrome officers, assistant aerodrome officers, ground engineers and others. That also means an indirect burden on the tax-payer for no rhyme or reason ; particularly when we bear in mind the fact that in 1927 a promise was definitely vouchsafed to this Assembly that Indians would be sent out for training. Ten Indians were to have been sent out for training in 1927 : we do not know what has happened to them, how many of them have come back and whether these trainees are employed anywhere or they are not. Moreover we were told that it takes about three years to train Indians abroad : I believe the cost of the training of about two persons for three years abroad would not exceed Rs. 34,000 .....

Mr. A. G. Clow : I am very reluctant to interrupt the Honourable Member ; but I suggest that under cover of his second point on the notice paper he is really bringing in what he wanted to say on the first point : this is hardly a matter coming under greater economy in making and increasing landing grounds.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : I am only trying to show that the construction of these landing grounds will mean employment of so many more people and we are not sure of what use they can possibly be to us, because no Indians are likely to be employed in spite of the fact that we have spent so much money. I believe I am entitled to make that point .....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member's point is that, if Indians are employed, there will be less expenditure.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Exactly, Sir : that is my point. Now, I was suggesting that about 34,000 rupees are required for the training of two Indians abroad for three years. In 1932, the Standing Finance Committee definitely asked that Indians should be sent abroad for training. A scheme was prepared for sending out four Indians and in 1932, for reasons of economy and financial stringency, that very scheme was dropped. This is how this Assembly is treated and this is how the Standing Finance Committee is treated and in spite of that we are now asked to allow the Civil Aviation Directorate to undertake very large works amounting to about Rs. 20 lakhs : and all this 20 lakhs is going to be spent on the construction of landing grounds. Even as regards these landing grounds—to which I come back to please my Honourable friend, Mr. Clow—I have had some little experience, not exactly of preparing them but of examining the accounts of some private companies who have prepared landing grounds, for instance, the Himalaya Transport Company. They have prepared landing grounds somewhere near Kalka and various other places, which have not required more than Rs. 45,000 ; whereas we find here that on the maintenance of landing grounds alone, thousands of rupees are going to be spent. These 17 landing grounds that exist in India today include aerodromes and require an expenditure of as much as 95,000 a year for maintenance. That is wholly incommensurate with the results. I think instead of its being a remunerative concern, it is really becoming a losing concern. Under these circumstances.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member cannot go into the question of policy now : he can only discuss economy in the expenditure which it is proposed to incur.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : I am only trying to point out the fact that whereas according to private enterprise only Rs. 45,000 to Rs. 50,000 is more than enough to prepare the whole ground including the aerodrome, here we find as much as Rs. 180,000 and Rs. 120,000 and even Rs. five lakhs in one place. This is absolutely extravagant : in fact I am prepared to say.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The demand is only for Rs. 1,000.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : It is a token demand.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member can only ask Government to reduce within those limits.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : I am simply asking the Government to exercise greater economy and closer control over this expenditure.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : It ought to have been discussed when that grant was before the House.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : I am afraid it was not at the time.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Surely this is not a new service ?

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : I am not suggesting that it is : I am only just trying to prove that greater economy is possible and ought to be exercised. To my mind the expenditure is preposterously lavish : in fact I think it is reckless ; I do not want to detain the House longer ; it is on this ground that I oppose this grant.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member should formally move his amendment.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : Yes, Sir ; I formally move :

“ That the demand for a supplementary grant for a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 in respect of ‘ Expenditure on the Development of Civil Aviation met from the Fund ’, be reduced by Rs. 101.”

Before concluding, Sir, I should like to say one word. If the necessary and satisfactory assurances are forthcoming from the other side, I don't think I shall press it.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Motion moved :

“ That the demand for a supplementary grant for a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 in respect of ‘ Expenditure on the Development of Civil Aviation met from the Fund ’, be reduced by Rs. 101.”

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Guntur cum Nellore : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask for some information, Sir ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Yes.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Sir, I find at page 3 of this blue pamphlet that the Government of India have spent about Rs. 7,000 for the establishment of a landing ground in Cuddappah. I should like to know whether this is the total sum that is proposed to be spent on the establishment of the landing ground, or whether much more money would have to be spent in future on such things as the improvement of landing ground and so on, because I find in some cases the cost of improvements to landing grounds comes to as much as a lakh of rupees. I want to know if this sum of Rs. 7,000 is being provided only as a beginning.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The demand is only for Rs. 1,000.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : I am referring to the total. I would like to know whether this sum of Rs. 7,000 is being provided for a landing ground at Cuddappah only as a beginning, and if so, how much more the Government of India propose to spend for that particular purpose, and whether also they hope to construct buildings and other structures for the staff who may have to be stationed there. I should be much obliged if the Honourable Member will give us information on these points.

Mr. A. G. Clow : Sir, I have listened with considerable interest to the observations offered by my friend, Mr. Asaf Ali. If I followed him correctly, the main part raised in the first part of his speech was that this expenditure was being incurred very largely for the benefit or at least the use of foreign companies travelling across India, and the benefit to India was comparatively small. To a certain extent, that is true of one of the routes, that is the main route across India from Karachi via Calcutta to Rangoon. But even that route, I would remind my Honourable friend, is of substantial assistance both to Indian aviators and to Indian traffic. There are also, of course, two other rather important routes in operation, that running from Karachi via Madras to Colombo, and the other running from Karachi to Lahore, the former being operated by Tatas and the other by the Indian National Airways, and if the House will refer to the Explanation of details at page 3 of this little pamphlet, they will find that the expenditure is distributed over different lines. I admit that the expenditure on these big aerodromes is not at present a commercial proposition, in the sense that we do not get a return in the form of tangible and visible assets corresponding to our outlay. But I think the Honourable Member will recognise that we are dealing here with a form of enterprise which, as he will undoubtedly agree, is in its infancy, and I am sure that, on reflection he will also agree that it is important that this should be undertaken at this stage by the State. Honourable Members opposite, I think, are for the most part strongly in favour of the policy of having the Railways run by the State, and certain Railways have had to be purchased in recent years.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Reserve Bank also.

Mr. A. G. Clow : If we were to neglect our duties on this very important route, not merely an Indian route but really a world route, for India is going to occupy a central position in aviation in certain respects, I think there would be a tendency for private enterprise to fill the gap, and we would later find ourselves faced with vested interests, in some cases foreign interests. I think he will agree that the policy we have adopted of seeing that we have a satisfactory basis of aviation in India, entirely under State control, is one which looks to the future and one which is in the circumstances wise.

As regards the actual details and his suggestion that economy was possible in landing grounds, I do not doubt that under the vigilant eye of the Honourable the Finance Member and others, every economy that is possible now will be secured. I agree that there is a very big difference between the cost of different landing grounds. I remember a case where a Collector told me that he had made a landing ground at a cost of eight annas. He was in a district where there was a lot of what we, in the United Provinces, call usar which, as my friend knows, is flat land practically devoid of all kind of vegetation, and he persuaded an enthusiastic Zemindar, for whom it had no commercial value at all, to allow it to be demarcated. I do not know if it is still a landing ground. It is also true that some landing grounds can be prepared comparatively cheaply. It depends very largely on the use and the regularity of use to which you are going to put your landing ground. For example, I think the Himalaya Air Transport Company are developing small landing grounds in one or two places at probably rather a small cost.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : What about army landing grounds ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The Honourable Member did not refer to that in his speech, but they cannot be used for regular services. They can be used by private aviators from time to time, and we are actually considering the conditions on which they will be available for civil aviation, but what we are really dealing with is mainly the big routes to be used mainly for commercial flying. An example of a cheap landing ground is the one to which my friend, Mr. Ranga, referred, the one at Cuddappah. The amount entered here for that landing ground is Rs. 7,000, and I understand that that is very nearly the whole cost. It will cost probably about Rs. 8,000 before it is finished. That is, of course, not a landing ground at present in regular use by a commercial line. But if you are to have regular landing grounds on main commercial line, you must have a far higher quality, you will have to use them at all seasons, and particularly in the monsoon when we have difficulties in India that are probably considerably greater than in most other countries where flying has developed. We have, for example, to provide runways, which is a fairly large item among the details which have been furnished to Honourable Members. We are going to provide in places for night flying, and that is an expensive item. You will find, in the items here, about Rs. three lakhs on the lighting of aerodromes on certain routes, and that, of course, is only a part of the ultimate expenditure that will be involved. You have to provide buildings for the aerodrome officers, and for hangars. Thus there is a very big difference between providing a really first class aerodrome properly equipped and worthy of the country on a regular commercial route, and providing an occasional aerodrome where an ordinary amateur or a man travelling occasionally on business can safely land, provided the weather conditions are satisfactory. I hope that I have said enough to satisfy my Honourable friend that we will bear in mind the desirability of avoiding every possible case of extravagant expenditure. Aviation is admittedly an expensive matter, at the present day, but as it develops, as we hope it will develop, India will reap in various ways, tangible and intangible, great harvests in years to come. (Applause.)

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : May I know what is the idea of lighting the air routes and whether lighting in air routes exists in any part of the world ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Lighting is absolutely essential if you are going to have night flying. We have already a little lighting in, for example, Karachi, but the route is not really equipped for night flying as yet. The work is in progress.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Will the Honourable Member kindly tell me whether there is any scheme for training and employment of Indians in the technical departments of civil aviation ? It was promised last time and in this scheme it might have been included.

Mr. A. G. Clow : This is a scheme of works. The provision for inspection and employment comes out of different funds altogether. This is a fund for developing certain works. The expenditure on hangars, for example, is giving very considerable employment to Indians. All the hangars are being made of Tata's tested steel on all the big aerodromes.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon (Sind : Muhammadan Rural) : Is it a fact that instead of having a landing ground at Jacobabad some people have urged that the landing ground should be at Shikarpur or Sukkur ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Sukkur was certainly considered, but Jacobabad was regarded as more suitable for certain reasons, particularly because of its greater suitability in certain seasons. It means a very small addition to the length of the route.

Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : Is the Honourable Member aware that the commercial people are mostly living in Shikarpur and they have asked that the landing ground should be changed from Jacobabad to Shikarpur ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I am afraid I cannot say off-hand whether Shikarpur was considered, but I know the rival claims of Sukkur and Jacobabad were considered. This is the first time I have heard of Shikarpur's claim but I am willing to take it from the Honourable Member that the people of Shikarpur have a natural anxiety that it should pass through their own place.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : I have heard my Honourable friend, Mr. Clow....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member has no right of reply.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras ceded Districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I want information on a point which I have not been able to understand. At page 3, I find a provision is made for a portable hangar at Lahore at a cost of Rs. 5,000. Down below, under the heading "General", "Construction of hangars at Karachi, Rangoon, Calcutta, Allahabad, Delhi, Lahore, Bombay, Akyab and Madras", Rs. five lakhs. Here is Lahore again in this sum of Rs. five lakhs. Why are there two provisions for a hangar at the same place ? Again, I want to know how many of these are new works and if there is a scheme for purchase of aeroplanes by the State in order that they may be used for civil aviation purposes.

Mr. A. G. Clow : As far as the first question is concerned, the answer is that they relate to different matters. A portable hangar is a very different thing from permanent hangars and it is a much less expensive item. The hangar accommodation at Lahore has proved somewhat in-

1818

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[25TH SEP. 1935.]

[Mr. A. G. Clow.]

adequate for the needs, and this portable hangar is a very small item—Rs. 5,000—, and it is complete in itself. The hangar is under erection. As regards the second point, the answer is that this contains no provision whatever for the purchase of aeroplanes. This is a works programme and not one for the purchase of machines.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Is it part of the general scheme to purchase aeroplanes and keep them on behalf of the State so that they may be used for aviation purposes? In view of the analogy that the Honourable Member drew from the State Railways in his speech just now, is there an intention of purchasing aeroplanes on behalf of the State in order to run them in the interests of aviation?

Mr. A. G. Clow : That is not really relevant, I suggest, to the present point. We are considering certain works. The Honourable Member is perfectly entitled to raise that question when the regular aviation grant comes up next Session.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria (Marwari Association : Indian Commerce) : On a point of information, Sir. Will the aerodrome at Dum Dum be developed or a new aerodrome be erected on the Budge Budge road?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I believe that question is under consideration. I am not able to give an answer now.

(Mr. M. Asaf Ali rose in his seat.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : If the Honourable Member wishes leave of the House to withdraw the motion, he cannot make a speech.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : I do not want to make a speech. I only wanted to say, after hearing my Honourable friend, Mr. Clow, that while I am not prepared to accept his assurance on the point of the use of the army landing grounds, because I think the Government ought to be able to make it possible for civil aviators to use the army landing grounds...

Mr. A. G. Clow : I am sorry to interrupt the Honourable Member. I explained that they are doing that,—that that question is under active consideration, and that arrangements will be made by which, under certain conditions, army landing grounds will be available to civil aviation. What I said was that we obviously could not use the army landing grounds as regular aerodromes on a big commercial route where there is constant traffic.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : In those circumstances, I do not think I shall press this motion to a division. I beg leave of the House to withdraw the motion.

The motion was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

✓ Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I desire to speak on the main motion. The Honourable the Finance Member is sometimes orthodox, and sometimes unorthodox in his financial canons. I find myself somewhat in a difficult position, to understand exactly the scope of this supplemental demand, but I am sure he will throw light upon it. At page 2 of this green book, there is a note at the bottom which reads like this :

“ A sum of Rs. 20,09,000 is required in the current year to meet expenditure in connection with the development of civil aviation for which a special fund of ✓

Rs. 92,57,000 was constituted with the approval of the Legislative Assembly in March last. The details of this expenditure are as follows.”

They are given on page 3. Then on page 4 there is another note :

“ As the whole of this expenditure will be met from the special fund mentioned in paragraph 1 the net amount required in this Demand is nil ; but a token demand is presented in accordance with the undertaking that detailed schemes met from the Fund will be brought to the notice of the Assembly.”

I take it the meaning of these two notes and of the present motion made by the Honourable the Finance Member is that, although by a vote of this House this sum of Rs. 92,57,000 has been set apart out of the revenue surplus for this expenditure, the detailed heads of expenditure, as and when money is required for them, will come before this Honourable House for its approval. Otherwise, I do not see the purpose of this motion made by the Honourable the Finance Member ; and the token demand of one thousand is put in, in order to enable the House to discuss the particular items of expenditure proposed and make comments thereon with a view to influence, if possible, the decision of the Government, either by speech or by a vote, if necessary. From that point of view, you will notice that this demand itself was passed in this House last year by your casting vote. I am not making any comment on that. I am merely stating that the motion was by the Honourable Sir James Grigg on the 28th March, 1935, that a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 92,57,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1935, in respect of the Transfer to the Fund for the Development of Civil Aviation, and the Honourable the Finance Member explained that really it was a case of accounting, although, I would remind him, that he has stated before the House once that he was not very happy over charging to capital, schemes which cannot be proved to be remunerative, but anyhow it has been done, and today the motion of the Honourable the Finance Member, as I understand it, is to seek the approval of this House for these various items on page 3. I want to know what these round figures are based on. They are all good round figures. What are these estimates? Who submitted these estimates? It is all one lakh, two lakhs, one lakh and 80 thousand, three lakhs, five lakhs and so on. Where do they get these figures from? It seems to me that these estimates are more often made, in order to get much more than they require, so that they may not have to come for a supplementary demand to us. They are not based on such information as this House is entitled to have. I do not know if the Standing Finance Committee had details of the estimates. Perhaps if they had, the Government will give those details to us. Otherwise, it seems to me that these figures are..... ✓

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member wants all the details?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Not at all. I want to know on what basis this five lakhs is wanted.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Those five lakhs are the amount expected to be spent on this programme under that particular head in the current financial year.

✓ Mr. S. Satyamurti : I want to know who is the expert engineer or aviator who has put down these figures? What is the basis of these ✓ figures? These figures must mean something, and cannot be rough estimates. I want this House to know, before it is asked to vote 18,57,000 who are the authorities whose expert knowledge was invited for this purpose. They come along and simply shove these figures at us. I want to know what is the basis? That is the first point.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): It is not the practice to give detailed figures on these estimates, but the Honourable Member in charge should explain how these estimates have been arrived at.

Mr. S. Satyamurti: I do not want any detailed estimates covering many pages. All I want is some intelligible guide in order to see that we are not asked to vote blind-folded. I have some experience of these estimates in the Public Accounts Committee, and I can tell you that these figures often err on the wrong side. Then, Sir, take the items. One lakh is wanted to improve the existing landing ground at Chittagong and then a lakh and 80,000 is wanted for the construction of administration block of building in New Delhi. Are we dealing with a poor country or the richest country in the world? Why do you want 1,80,000 for administrative buildings in New Delhi for running civil aviation? We have never heard of it. The Government of India have notions of economy which are not known to any civilised Government, or a Government which is responsible to the people. They simply ask for monies, as if it were nobody's property. Then you ask for three lakhs for the lighting of Karachi-Calcutta, Akyab-Rangoon and Bombay-Madras air routes. What is the basis of these estimates? Then, I want to raise this point—how much of this money is going to be spent in this country for buying Indian-made articles? I think this House has expressed more than once its very definite opinion that, to the extent to which money on any works of the Government can be spent in this country, it ought to be spent in this country; and, I believe, the House has gone even to the extent of saying that there should be a price preference, I do not know the exact percentage, I believe it is ten per cent., for Indian-made articles as opposed to foreign articles. I have a hazy recollection that, recently this department started a scheme for lighting these aerodromes, and they bought the machinery from outside the country. There was a great deal of adverse criticism in the Press on that matter; and I should like to have an assurance from the Government that, to the extent to which it is possible, this money will be spent in this country for the purchase of Indian-made articles. That is a point on which I am sure that every section of the House will be with me—that this money ought to be spent in this country. I want to know again whether all this work is going to be done by inviting rupee tenders, or by arranging private contracts. That again is a matter which involves public funds and I should like to have an assurance that, wherever it is not impossible, the work will be done by inviting rupee tenders in this country, and to the extent to which they make any purchases they will use the excellent machinery of the Indian Stores Department. I do not know if Honourable Members have read the appendix to the Public Accounts Committee's report which sets out the advantages the State and other purchasing departments get from making their purchases through the Indian Stores Department. I should like to have a categorical assurance that, so far as any purchases are made, they will be made through the agency of the Indian Stores Department. I also want to know, whether they are going to invite tenders for both materials and construction together or they are going to separate them—buy the materials and supply them to the contractors for merely doing the construction work.

There is also on page 4 an item 'Pay of officers' and so on. On this matter, I want to raise a point which I have raised more than once. If, for the present, we are not able to get Indians competent enough to be in charge of these departments, and if we are to employ non-Indians, I think it ought to be made part of the terms of the contract that they ought to train competent Indians to take their place at the earliest possible moment. I refuse to be a party to this continued employment of foreigners, without even a hope that as soon as possible my countrymen will be in charge of these great and expanding departments. These are all the points on which I should like to have an assurance either from the Honourable the Finance Member or the Honourable Mr. Clow, in order that this House may know that this money is really required and is not asked for in the careless way, which I have found characterises the estimates of Government departments usually in such matters. Secondly, I should like to have an assurance that this money will be spent in this country, as much as possible, on buying Indian materials; and, last but not least, the non-Indian officers who are appointed will have, as part of the conditions of their appointment, to train Indians to take their place at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. A. G. Clow: Sir, I can only wish that my Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, had extended to me the courtesy that my Honourable friend, Mr. Asaf Ali, did of informing me beforehand of the detailed points which he proposed to raise.

Mr. S. Satyamurti: On a point of personal explanation, Sir, as the word "courtesy" has been used, I expect Honourable Members on the opposite side to extend to us also the courtesy of being prepared to meet all these obvious points.

Mr. A. G. Clow: I venture to say, Sir, that, with the possible exception of Mr. Satyamurti about whom I am not able to say anything, there is no Member of this House who can carry in his head the kind of encyclopaedia that would be required to answer off-hand all the detailed questions that he put. I will, however, try and do my best briefly to deal with the more important points that arise out of his speech. Dealing first with the general question of the estimates, these are prepared by a special staff which has been engaged for the purpose. We have instituted five works divisions under the charge of a Superintending Engineer. They are responsible, in the first instance, for the preparation of the estimates but, naturally, before they are passed, they come under the scrutiny, and normally the very close scrutiny, of financial experts.

Mr. S. Satyamurti: Who are they?

Mr. A. G. Clow: The staff, naturally, under the charge of my Honourable friend, the Finance Member. I cannot say who is the particular officer in every case; I do not suppose he has always been the same one.

Then as regards the use of Indian materials and the employment of the agency of the Indian Stores Department, the policy which my

[Mr. A. G. Clow.]

Honourable friend desires is, as far as possible, being followed. I mentioned in reply to a previous inquiry that we were completing these hangars out of Tata's steel, and I would like just to mention that the Stores Department came in very useful there. The tenders were put out to contract—I think that is one of the points my Honourable friend asked—and the firm that contracted for the aerodrome in Rangoon proposed to use foreign steel. They were approached at the instance of the Indian Stores Department and they agreed to use Tata's steel for the purpose. (Hear, hear.)

As regards the expenditure in Delhi, my Honourable friend referred to the construction of an administrative block of buildings, now actually under construction, at a cost of Rs. 1,80,000. I cannot now give him all the particulars of the detailed buildings under construction in Delhi; I suggest my Honourable friend might pay a short visit to them either on his way through Delhi or during the next cold weather and see the progress that is being made himself. But when you have a big aerodrome you naturally want substantial buildings. You want, for example, some kind of shelter for your passengers, where they can wait in bad weather; you want some sort of building for mails where they can be securely kept; you want a control office of some kind. Then, the companies want offices, and I may say when we put up offices for the companies, the policy normally is that they should be our property and the companies should pay rent for them, rather than that the companies should be able to put up at our aerodromes their own private offices which would be their own property and their own possessions. Then you want office accommodation for meteorology, and the wireless staff, with a view to the warning of pilots of the conditions which they are likely to meet, and so on, and you want some kind of restaurant for pilots; you may want a restaurant of some kind if the aerodrome develops. (Laughter.)

Mr. S. Satyamurti : A lakh and eighty thousand ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : This will I hope be one of the very biggest aerodromes in India, and that is not by means an excessive charge. Then, I think he referred to the electric lighting at Karachi. That of course is not just ordinary electric lighting; it is lighting that is wanted for night-flying, for marking and for guiding pilots on to the aerodrome, and that is naturally an expensive form of lighting and an expensive item of expenditure. But if you are going to have night-flying, at all, it is essential that your pilots should be able to fly with confidence, and with safety.

I hope I have dealt with the details of the more important points my Honourable friend referred to. As regards the training of Indian staff, I would again repeat that that is a point to be more suitably raised when the demands for grants for officers come up. If my Honourable friend will look up the establishment grant on page 4 of this pamphlet, he will find that it relates only to a few meteorological observers, stenographers and others, and no question of the employment of British or other personnel arises in this case. I suggest my Honourable friend might defer his suggestions or criticisms on that, until an opportunity will arise when the regular demand for civil aviation appears. Sir, I may perhaps add one word at the risk of being irrelevant; that it is a point, I know, that exercises constantly the minds of those in charge of this Department.

particularly Mr. Tymms, who has put in so much labour on this work. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of ‘ Expenditure on the Development of Civil Aviation met from the Fund ’.”

The motion was adopted. ✓

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

EXPENDITURE ON THE DEVELOPMENT OF BROADCASTING MET FROM THE FUND.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of ‘ Expenditure on the Development of Broadcasting met from the Fund ’.”

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Motion moved :

“ That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of ‘ Expenditure on the Development of Broadcasting met from the Fund ’.”

The Honourable Member, Mr. Satyamurti, has given notice of an amendment by which he really wishes to discuss a question of principle which cannot be done under a Supplementary Grant.

✓ Broadcasting should be made available for Political Propaganda under Reasonable Condition. ✓

✓ Mr. S. Satyamurti : Sir, the only question I want to discuss by this, I have mentioned in my notice of motion, that is to say, to urge that Broadcasting should be made available for political propaganda under reasonable conditions. I may mention, Mr. President, that this supplementary grant which is asked for by the Honourable the Finance Member includes inter alia building work on the Delhi broadcasting station including the mast foundations and also equipment for the whole Delhi broadcasting station, the total coming to 3 lakhs 38 thousand. I want, Sir, that, when this House is asked to vote this sum of over 2½ lakhs, this House should have an opportunity of stating and getting the vote of the House if necessary, on the policy covered by the actual supplementary demand before the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : This matter of broadcasting has already been discussed in the Delhi Session. The whole principle as to what purpose broadcasting was to be used for was then discussed, and, according to the practice and the rulings that have been laid down on Supplementary Demands, the Honourable Member cannot go into a broad question of that character.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I speak, subject to correction, Sir, but, I think I am right in saying, that this kind of lump grant of 92 lakhs, of 72 lakhs or 20 lakhs to a particular fund to be assigned in toto, without any details being given at that time merely as a fund to be spent by the Government, as and when the need arises, is almost unprecedented in this House...

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That is another matter, but the Honourable Member cannot now discuss the question of a general principle.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I may point out, Sir, that the practice to which you referred applies to original demands which contain full details and which are voted by this House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : If it were a new service. The Chair gave a ruling only at the last Delhi Session. The ruling was given on the 27th March, 1935, which runs thus :

“The Chair wishes to make it perfectly clear that as regards the demands that refer to schemes which have already been sanctioned by this House, there can be no question at all of discussing any question of principle or policy.”

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I entirely agree with that ruling. But here no scheme has been sanctioned. What this House has sanctioned is to put this money into the fund. No details were given at that time.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Is there no scheme given ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : No, Sir. If you will kindly look into this book containing details of the supplementary grant, you will find that, for the first time, they are making definite proposals to spend this portion of the money. Originally, in Delhi, the Government wanted so much lump sum to be put in a fund, and the House sanctioned it. There were no schemes placed before the House at that time. I entirely agree that, if schemes had been put forward before the House then and the money was sanctioned, then I am out of court now to raise the point again. I cannot really raise any question of principle with regard to those schemes. My submission to you, Sir, is this ——— that this is one of those demands where the House was asked and where it did vote a lump sum to be put in a fund. The manner of spending it was never placed before the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Did not the Honourable Member raise this point then ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I did raise it then, and you gave a ruling, Sir. May I remind you, Sir, that on a similar motion when I said that there was no new service, you said, “I will not allow it to be made a precedent, I rule this may be in order”. You ruled with regard to a similar demand for a transfer of a fund without any details of schemes being given after I elaborately argued.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member said that, since details were not given, they were not going to support it. That is another matter. Now, to discuss the question as to how this grant is to be utilised for the purpose of broadcasting is discussing a question of policy which ought to have been discussed at the time when the grant was made.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : There were no details, on which we could discuss them. There were no schemes placed before the House. I entirely agree with you, Sir, that if any details were placed before the House then and if we did not avail ourselves of that opportunity to discuss and allowed the grant to go by default on our part, then we cannot take advantage of the present opportunity to discuss the same. I cannot blame anybody for our own default. But the Government placed no schemes before the House then.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member can throw out the grant now, but he cannot discuss questions of policy.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I merely point out what the result will be. The result will be that this House in respect of such lump grants will have no opportunity of discussing schemes at all.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The House had the fullest opportunity of discussing it at that time.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : When there were no schemes placed before the House !

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : When this grant was voted, when the broadcasting scheme was sanctioned, the House had the fullest opportunity and Honourable Members were at perfect liberty to point out to the Government in what way the grant was to be applied and how the scheme was to be worked. The opportunity for discussing any such question was at that time, and not now.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : But you will find, Sir, there were no schemes at all then placed before the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : There was the broadcasting scheme.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What could I discuss about that, Sir ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Broadcasting for what purpose, that was the question that ought to have been discussed at that time.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : If you look at it in that way, Sir, then I am helpless. I may submit to you then, that, so far as this particular grant is concerned, I oppose this grant and will ask the House not to vote for the Delhi broadcasting station this sum, unless it is going to be used for political propaganda. Will I then be in order, Sir ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member can only raise the point that, since sufficient details are not given, he opposes it.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : But details are now given. My objection is this, that I do not want the House to vote for the Delhi broadcasting station, this sum of Rs. 2,58,000.

[Mr. President.]

then discussed, and, according to the practice and the rulings that have been laid down on Supplementary Demands, the Honourable Member cannot go into a broad question of that character.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I speak, subject to correction, Sir, but, I think I am right in saying, that this kind of lump grant of 92 lakhs, of 72 lakhs or 20 lakhs to a particular fund to be assigned in toto, without any details being given at that time merely as a fund to be spent by the Government, as and when the need arises, is almost unprecedented in this House...

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That is another matter, but the Honourable Member cannot now discuss the question of a general principle.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I may point out, Sir, that the practice to which you referred applies to original demands which contain full details and which are voted by this House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : If it were a new service. The Chair gave a ruling only at the last Delhi Session. The ruling was given on the 27th March, 1935, which runs thus :

"The Chair wishes to make it perfectly clear that as regards the demands that refer to schemes which have already been sanctioned by this House, there can be no question at all of discussing any question of principle or policy."

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I entirely agree with that ruling. But here no scheme has been sanctioned. What this House has sanctioned is to put this money into the fund. No details were given at that time.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Is there no scheme given ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : No, Sir. If you will kindly look into this book containing details of the supplementary grant, you will find that, for the first time, they are making definite proposals to spend this portion of the money. Originally, in Delhi, the Government wanted so much lump sum to be put in a fund, and the House sanctioned it. There were no schemes placed before the House at that time. I entirely agree that, if schemes had been put forward before the House then and the money was sanctioned, then I am out of court now to raise the point again. I cannot really raise any question of principle with regard to those schemes. My submission to you, Sir, is this — that this is one of those demands where the House was asked and where it did vote a lump sum to be put in a fund. The manner of spending it was never placed before the House.

[Mr. S. Satyamurti.]

spent out of this fund till after the supplementary demand has been approved by this House. It is not fair to this House to bring a supplementary demand for monies part of which is already spent. I should like to know the authority for it. Then they say :

" They will then be in a position to decide which of the various schemes should be proceeded with against the provisions available in the fund, and which should be held over until further provision is granted."

This is an eminent example of the nebulous way in which Government have placed this transfer to the fund before this House. They themselves have no programme in their own minds ; they themselves do not know what are all the schemes which will have to be brought for broadcasting in this country, nor do they know which of them should precede which. Then I want to know with regard to the statement in paragraph 4 on page 2, financial effect of the proposal :

" Total actual expenditure involved—

(i) non-recurrent—Rs. 16,500."

That Rs. 16,500 represents details of the cases of the Temporary Works Division of the Wireless Department, which will be asked to prepare an estimate for six months. But I find that the actual demand as printed in the green book is for Rs. 3,81,500 to be met from the fund. Although the Finance Member now moves for Rs. 1,000 as a token demand, is this House now being asked to vote for Rs. 16,500 for the Works Division to prepare estimates, or is this House being asked to vote for the entire sum of Rs. 3,81,500 ? I think we should have some explanation of that matter. Then, I ask the question which I asked under the Civil Aviation Grant—building work at the Delhi Broadcasting Station, including the mast foundations, Rs. 80,000 : Equipment Rs. 2,58,000 : what are the major details of these two items and what are the estimates based on ? Are these articles to be purchased in India or through the Indian Stores Department, and is the policy of Swadeshi going to be pursued ? I do not want a mere non-committal answer that the Government is committed to this policy : we know that : what I want to know is something more germane, nearer to the facts, as to what are these materials and whether Government have made up their minds to strive their best to obtain these materials in India. I think the House must have some information on that matter.

Then I raise this point that if there is to be a broadcasting station in Delhi, it should be available for political propaganda, subject to reasonable conditions. It is done by the British Broadcasting Corporation.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member need not discuss that : he may leave that subject.....

Mr. S. Satyamurti : They have said that they will not allow the broadcasting station to be used for political propaganda.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member can make that a ground for opposing the motion.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : That is what I am doing. You have ruled my amendment out of order, and I have too much respect for the Chair to try to do indirectly, what I have been asked not to do directly. But I am opposing this grant for the Delhi broadcasting station because, in answer to a supplementary question, some time ago, the Honourable Mr. Mitchell, the Member in charge, said " We are not going to allow this station to be used for such purposes ". The Controller of Broadcasting is a stranger who will come here with no notions of India, and he will decide for us what we ought to do. This Government decides most matters, mostly on the advice of people who are least competent to give them that advice ; and this is one of the cases where they are going to ask a stranger to India, a man who comes for the first time, to advise them as to whether they are going to allow this broadcasting station to be used for political propaganda. I may inform the House that the British Broadcasting Corporation allows politicians to use broadcasting apparatus under certain well-defined conditions. I believe, Sir, when you were recently in England as a member and leader of the Empire Parliamentary delegation, you were invited to broadcast on the British Broadcasting Station. If England can stand an Indian President of an Indian Assembly to use her broadcasting apparatus, it seems to me the heavens will not fall if my Honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, or the Leader of the House.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair thinks the Honourable Member is again trying to discuss broad questions of policy which has already been ruled out of order.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : You cannot rule this argument out of order. I feel very strongly on this matter.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That the Chair can quite understand.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am not moving my cut motion at all. It is dead and buried : I am now stating what the House should do : it ought not to vote this sum for the Delhi broadcasting station, unless they are going to allow the apparatus to be used for the education of my people, on sound lines. I want to know the arguments of my Honourable friends on the other side as to why the Leader of the Opposition or the Leader of the House or the Leader of the European Group or the Leader of the Independent Party or the Leader of the Nationalist Party, should not also be allowed to propagate their views on the political future of this country ; and as my friend, the Chief Whip, reminds me, I am not pleading for any favour for this party or that party. If we get one chance, we will give equal chances to others : our propaganda is so sound and our doctrines are so irresistible, that we can meet any arguments that may be advanced. We ask for no favour, but mere justice. I merely put it to my Honourable friends in this House whether in this country where literacy is so poor, where the people cannot read newspapers, where the people cannot afford to buy newspapers, whether it is not much more necessary in India, than even in Great Britain, that this broadcasting should be made available for political propaganda.

Secondly, I do not know what are the various programmes they are going to broadcast ; but I do suggest that one important feature of this broadcasting programme should be to reach our villages, which are becoming drab, almost uninhabitable, and all this cry of back to the villages which we hear in convocation addresses, on platforms, and on ceremonial occasions is intended not to be acted upon, unless we make the villages, to which we want our people to go, worth living in ; and it seems to me that if by broadcasting we can reach our villages with news, with items of propaganda, not only on politics but on public health and on various other matters which are of vital interest to our villagers, we shall be doing something to make this expenditure, which is rather large in a poor country like India, on broadcasting, well worth our while. Moreover, according to the Lothian proposals, to give practical effect to which we shall have a supplementary demand presently, that is, the Hammond Committee, about 35 millions of our people are going to be enfranchised. Most of them are illiterate.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member ought not to cover that ground—that is really a question of principle which ought to have been discussed on the main grant. What ought to be done with broadcasting is a matter which ought to have been discussed on the original grant.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am opposing this whole grant.....

An Honourable Member : You are opposing broadcasting.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am opposing the Delhi broadcasting station.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : A scheme has been sanctioned ; and the time for raising all these issues was when the original grant was moved, and not now. This is a supplementary demand, and it is not open to Honourable Members to discuss broad questions like that : otherwise there will be no meaning in a supplementary grant. If this is a new service, the Honourable Member would be quite in order.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : If I cannot broadcast my views even here, then God help my countrymen ! I shall say nothing more ; but I feel that this country cannot afford the expenditure on this Delhi station, unless it is going to be allowed to us, to broadcast social and political programmes among our countrymen, so that our country can take her proper place among the nations of the world. I, therefore, feel that this amount should not be voted by the House, unless the Government gives an assurance that they will, in using this money for building this broadcasting station, allow the broadcasting apparatus to be used for propaganda which will appeal to the imagination of my people.

Dr Ziauddin Ahmad : On a point of order, may I just draw your attention to page 5 of these demands ? It is stated at the bottom of that page, in the note, that it is token demand only. It is not a real demand to meet this supplementary expenditure : and I think, since this is a token demand only, we are entitled to discuss the policy as in token cuts.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Token demand does not mean that. As the Chair understands it, it means that, for the purposes for which this supplementary demand is asked for, if the token demand is granted, the House shall be taken to assent that the amount which is mentioned here can be spent for that purpose.

Mr. M. S. Aney : May I ask, Sir, whether there is any precedent for a token demand being ever put in the form of a supplementary grant in this House ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Yes ; very often. Government put forward a small demand in order to make out a case for the main demand to be authorised by the House.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : May I point out in this connection that the House sanctioned a certain fund for broadcasting : but it did not sanction the method of expenditure. That is why a token cut has been brought forward and, Sir, we can discuss the policy of that.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair has explained that. The question ought to have been raised then. Honourable Members ought to have found out then what the Government were doing when they asked this money : for what purpose they were going to utilise this broadcasting fund. That was the time. The Chair takes it, when that question was not raised then, the principle was accepted that a broadcasting service should be instituted here at so much cost for which the money was granted, that is, broadcasting for the purposes which the Chair takes it the Government considered would be useful to the country.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Sir, I want to say a few words in connection with this demand. Within the limits of your ruling, Sir, I will submit some inconveniences which arise from the manner in which the demand has been put. When the original demand was placed before the Assembly on the last occasion, the general principle of the demand was no doubt accepted. I am not now for one moment attempting to controvert that position and trying to take up the time of the House by saying that no money ought to be spent on broadcasting purposes. But a demand for a thousand rupees has been made, while the total sum required is Rs. three lakhs and odd, and the present demand is now made in the form of a token demand. Now, it is not open to me to submit that so much money ought to be spent on Delhi broadcasting and so much on any of the other ten stations that you have in this continental India. You have now more than ten broadcasting stations all over the country,—it is not open to me now to say that your expenditure under one item is in excess of the necessity, and that other stations than Delhi are far more important and so more money should be spent there. In that way, if the demand instead of being put for a thousand rupees had been put for three lakhs, 81 thousand, it would have been open to me to make a cut under this head or under that head, not in pursuance of a particular policy or in view of any objection to the policy of broadcasting itself in the whole country, but, with a view to draw the attention of the House and also of the Government to the importance of a particular station, and if a station is not taken up at all, that particular station ought to be taken up as a broadcasting centre. In that way objection can be taken to the amounts asked for. Now, as it is, with the sum of one thousand rupees, what is it that I can do ? A sum of two lakhs 58 thousand has been asked for equipment of Delhi broadcasting station. I find, for instance, that Madras, being at one end of India, is much more important in my province than even Delhi, and is it open to me now under this token demand to say that two lakhs 58 thousand ought not to be spent in Delhi because there will not be any sum left for Madras? If that position is not accepted, then it is open to the Government to tell me, coming as I do from the extreme corner of India, that I should be satisfied with what little the Government is prepared to spend upon my province. I would, therefore, submit, that in the allocation of funds for every station, the opinion of this House must be taken. It ought not to be said: "Oh, you have accepted the principle of spending so much money and you cannot say any more on it". You can as well say that you have sanctioned 88 crores for the maintenance of railways in India, 93 crores on the maintenance of administration, and since we have accepted all that, we ought to accept your sovereignty and keep quiet without scanning the budget. I would, therefore, submit, Sir, far from impeaching the principle on which the fund was created, the following suggestions.

3 P.M.

(1) The total ought not to be spent on one station, and other stations which have not been kept in view should also be included in that programme. That will be a legitimate objection. How is it possible for me now to include the other stations in this token demand? If I reduce a thousand to a hundred rupees how much would Government be able to spend on each station? Is this the proportion on which they would spend three lakhs and 81 thousand and odd? If I reduce the thousand to a hundred, it will be one tenth of a thousand, then how much would they be able to spend on each?

Secondly, Sir, if you will kindly see at page 5, you will find that the Honourable the Finance Member made a mistake when he said.....

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I did. If I might explain, that staff is entirely intended to work within the programme which has been sanctioned by the House.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : It is not what he said earlier. As the Finance Member said, let us confine ourselves to the improvement of the Delhi broadcasting station with respect to which details were already submitted to the Finance Committee and the House, but it is not so, as he now submits.....

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I did not say that.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Then what did you say?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I said that it has been submitted to the Standing Finance Committee.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : At page 5, under head III, sub-head A, Establishment charges Rs. 16,500.—now I find that this sum is to be spent upon an establishment which has come into existence for the purpose of drawing up a scheme, or a programme of work. Now, in what places these schemes will be undertaken, how much is going to be spent on each scheme at each particular station is not stated. This amount is not intended for Delhi broadcasting station alone. Is it now open to me to say that this sum of Rs. 16,500 is an additional unnecessary item of expenditure when you brought a gentleman all the way from England as an expert paying him Rs. 2,000 a month, and giving him a small establishment of one or two clerks? Is it now open to me to say that you should distribute this amount among all the other broadcasting stations in various parts of India? Of course, it is open to the Government to say that there ought to be a separate establishment. That is a point on which there can be difference of opinion. In any case, I submit that Rs. 16,500 is too large an amount to be spent. A separate establishment is brought into existence and an expert is being brought out from six thousand miles away. I would ask under what head can you bring this objection? I am certainly within the four corners of your ruling if I say I am entitled to take objection, without impeaching the purpose for which the fund was created, that this huge amount need not be spent on establishments. That is the other objection which I cannot take under this token demand of one thousand rupees.

Thirdly, Sir, it is proposed to spend a large sum of money on buildings. For the time being you may have these buildings provided you allow the public to use them. Is it not now open to me, with respect to the Delhi station, to say that just as the telephone service, telegraph service, the posts service is used by the public, the Delhi broadcasting station should also be allowed to be used by the public on payment of a certain sum of money by private individuals subject to the condition that the subject which is broadcast is not objectionable. Of course the word 'objectionable' is undefined and indefinite as we see when it is applied to cinemas and other things, but if the subject is objectionable on political or moral grounds do not allow its use. But if, as my friend, Mr. Satyamurti, said, it must be thrown open to all political parties under certain limitations, I would submit it would be a dangerous thing to accept that proposition, but if his suggestion is that the Broadcasting station at Delhi ought to be made available to all, under certain restrictions or limitations, then the suggestion would be readily acceptable....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member seems to be going beyond the supplementary demand.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Therefore, it is open to me now to say that this is the occasion to point out that the Delhi broadcasting station should be thrown open to the public, though not the other stations, on payment of certain fee. Under what head am I to bring it? Sir, even though I accept the principle and I am bound by the principle already accepted, it is still open to me to say that a sum of three lakhs and odd should not be spent, and if I don't object to it now, it will be open to the Government to say "Oh, we have spent away all the money on one important project, and you once again vote 20 lakhs for others". I would, therefore, request that you should, in the fitness of things, rule that this token demand should be withdrawn and a fresh demand for Rs. 3,81,000 should be placed before this House so that opportunity may be given to all Honourable Members to say, there must be a cut under this head, not a token cut on a matter of policy, but a substantial cut, to say that Rs. two lakhs need not be spent on buildings alone, that Rs. two or three lakhs need not be spent on the Delhi station alone, that Rs. 16,500 need not be spent on establishment, and so on.

With respect to other matters, I may make one or two submissions. Even at the time when this fund was created I had my own suspicions, however humble I may be. My suspicions have been confirmed since. My Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, explained how through broadcasting so much of literature and literacy would be carried to the very doors of the villagers, but he forgot that it involves additional expenditure.

[Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar.]

This is only for broadcasting, but for each receiving set which the villages will be provided with there will be an additional cost of Rs. 700 or 1,000, and there will be a recurring expenditure of Rs. 15 per month for each set. It requires so much of electric power and what will happen if the place is not a municipality or any station where electric current is not available. My friend forgets there will be an additional demand for nearly one or two crores of rupees, and that will fall upon the taxpayer who is starving for want of money and for want of food. A huge exhibition was held in England with broadcasting materials and other things, and evidently this is a fruitful source of dumping all those materials on India. I would, therefore, say, even with regard to the purchase of materials and accessories, if a foreign country produces those articles, India is made the dumping ground for all those materials. We can very well do without broadcasting for some time, but having accepted the principle in the last Assembly whether we knew the further implications of it or not, let us at best say, and I want to drive home that point, that out of the Rs. 20 lakhs that have been provided in this for the purpose of broadcasting, let some amount be applied for the purpose of encouraging the production of the materials of that industry. If I am not wrong, the exhibition in England was opened by His Majesty the King Emperor, the King of England, and the whole material was taken recently two or three months ago from England to Scotland for the purpose of exhibition, and it was said that it was one of the biggest exhibitions ever held with regard to broadcasting materials and receiving sets. That is their pride. But are we in a position to pride ourselves that in the near future or in the remote future we are producing broadcasting materials and receiving sets? Let our money not be wasted upon purchasing materials from foreign countries and let us not look to the foreign country for the purchase of those materials. If a man purchases a motor car or a receiving set, or even if a present is made of a receiving set to him it means that subsequently he sells himself to the foreign country for purchasing additional materials from time to time. That is our experience. Therefore, I beseech, that a sum of rupees should be set apart from this fund for the purpose of encouraging the production of those materials in this country. Again, in answer to a question put to the Government by an Honourable Member of this House as to whether the expert who was engaged for five years under a contract or agreement is prepared to train a certain number of Indians before his term of office expires, we were told that no such agreement was entered into. I say that such an agreement ought to have been entered into and it must be a condition of his employment that he must train up people here so that they may take his place by the time his service expires and it may not be said that he must be continued for another period of five years because there are no men available to take his place. Let a small school be attached to give instruction in the art of broadcasting so that no additional expenditure may entail upon us in the future. Then I understand there is no definite scheme relating to the entire grant of Rs. 20 lakhs; it is a piecemeal scheme that the Government brings before us. I want information with respect to one matter. The Madras Broadcasting Station is sought to be improved and the Bombay Broadcasting Station is sought to be improved. Who are the owners of the present broadcasting station at Madras? What will become of the apparatus now in existence? Is it by way of subsidy to that station? What is the range? 20 kilometres I am told is the power. In the white paper that was circulated the last time when the fund was created, I found that the ultimate range was only 200 miles, and it is only in the dead of night that one could be able to hear the programme. I do not know how many people will go on sitting till 12 o'clock at night, if it is really to be useful, to catch murmuring sounds, and if there is some atmospheric disturbance even those murmurs could not be heard. It must be seven o'clock or evening if the programme has got to be heard. There must be a sufficiently broad range. When my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitchell, was asked a supplementary question, he said that he was not aware of the range. Even now we have not been supplied with the details. It is said that the power of the broadcasting set is 20 kilowatts or something of the kind, but the range is not given. But I require information as to whether if a programme is got before the Delhi Broadcasting Station at a convenient hour of the day it will be possible for anybody with a receiving set in Cape Comorin to hear it. And if not, let not good money be wasted after had over such a broadcasting station. Therefore, I would say that the entire manner in which this demand has been placed before the House is not a proper one—not that I am impeaching the very purpose of it, but accepting the purpose, there are still a number of objections that could be raised, a number of suggestions that could be made as to how this Rs. 20 lakhs could be spent instead of being wasted. Therefore, I would ask you to rule that this demand should be withdrawn and a definite and more clear demand should be placed before this House, in order to give Honourable Members an opportunity of making cuts or giving suggestions by means of amendments with respect to each item.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Sir, I feel some difficulty, and I rise to explain that difficulty, in understanding a token demand like this. I am told, and you have explained it, Sir, that this token demand of Rs. 1,000 is really meant to secure the sanction of this House to a sum which the department requires, namely, Rs. 3,81,000, in the current year to meet expenditure on certain schemes. Though it is a formal or token demand made before us, if that demand is accepted by this House, it means that it is giving its sanction to the expenditure of Rs. 3,81,000 which the department proposes to spend in the manner detailed at page 5 of the Book. Now, the difficulty is this. Some of my Honourable friends have already pointed it out, but I want to emphasise this. Supposing we want to discuss this scheme in detail and we want to suggest that any particular items of expenditure in the scheme, which is going to cost us, in total, a sum of Rs. 3,81,000,—or that any particular part of that scheme is useless or is not wanted, or is wrong, and, therefore, that expenditure should go or be reduced what is the way in which we can make that suggestion before the House now? The only remedy is to throw out this demand in toto or move a token cut of Rs. 10 as my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, suggests, and that amount of Rs. 10 is to be understood to mean a sum amounting to even one lakh or more which we may want to cut out of the total expenditure for the scheme. A token cut to a token demand—the whole thing looks so very fictitious. Is it not better for the department to come forward with a demand for the real amount which it wants for the year? The provisions relating to supplementary grants which are mentioned in rule 49 are meant to require the Government to place for sanction actual estimates before this House. It is true that in law the Government have got the right to bring a token demand if they can get that amount by reappropriation from the money already sanctioned. We have sanctioned Rs. 20 lakhs to create a special fund. Therefore Government think that they have got money already on which they can draw to any extent they like and it is not necessary for them to come forward with a demand for the actual amount that is required to be spent during the year as the purpose could be served by a token demand. But when the House demanded an undertaking from the Government before sanctioning the sum of 20 lakhs for the special fund it wanted to be informed of the whole scheme and the entire expenditure to be placed before it for its sanction and to have an opportunity of expressing its opinion, if necessary, on every detail of the scheme. That purpose is defeated to a great extent by the Government by moving a token demand like this. My Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, suggests that a token cut can be moved. I doubt whether a token cut can serve this purpose effectively. We are giving the Government actual money in hard cash, and why should we then have token demands and token cuts? Let the actual demand be placed before us and let us have a real opportunity of discussing the merits of the scheme and showing that the actual demand is fictitious or extravagant to some extent and can be, therefore, reduced or diminished if necessary. Although in law they have a right to do so, I think it is unfair to this House that the Government should come forward with a token demand like this for a grant which amounts to Rs. 3,81,000. The procedure may be technically legal, but I protest that it is certainly not equitable and fair to this House.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : I find that I am not quite competent to argue to your satisfaction about the point of order raised by my Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, in regard to this supplementary demand, although I am in complete agreement with what he has said in maintaining that it was most unfair on the part of this Government to have come forward once for the sanction of this House for a particular fund, then having got that money to come again whenever they like from time to time with various supplementary demands for various schemes of their own. At the same time, I would like to take up this particular Delhi broadcasting station. As far as this Delhi station is concerned, we are not told what sort of staff they are going to have, for how many years they have contracted with foreigners that they have imported into this country to help them run this station and we do not know for what particular purpose this station is going to be utilised. My Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, is anxious that it should be used for political purposes also. I would certainly have agreed with him if we were enjoying swaraj in this country.

An Honourable Member : Political education.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Unfortunately we know how this Government uses every opportunity that it gets in the way of educating the people.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member cannot make a political speech.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : I am not encroaching on your ruling. At the same time I must take the House into my confidence. We were told the other day how the speech of the Honourable the Leader of the House, in connection with Mr. Das' Bill, was circularised all over India.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member must confine himself to the supplementary demand.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Knowing already how Government will use all the opportunities they get, we are afraid that Government will also misuse this broadcasting station for so-called political education against the Congress and against every progressive movement in the country. I should, therefore, like to know for what particular purpose this broadcasting station in Delhi is going to be utilised.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member ought to have put that question when the grant was asked for.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Unfortunately I am allowed to talk only about this particular broadcasting station. We are asked to grant this money to the Delhi broadcasting station for the first time and I must say a few things about this, however unpalatable it may be to the Treasury Benches on the other side. One particular officer is supposed to be brought out.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member cannot go into the purposes of broadcasting. That is a general question which cannot be discussed.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Here is an item of Rs. 27,000. We are not told how this sum is going to be spent. I take it that it is going to be spent on establishment also, including the pay of the particular officer who has been brought out from England or who is going to be brought out. I really wonder where is the necessity for any such officer, because, after all, the Delhi broadcasting station is expected to broadcast in the vernacular such as Hindi and Urdu and this officer should be a man who knows the vernaculars and not an Englishman.

Mr. A. G. Clow : I do not want to stop the flow of eloquence of the Honourable Member but the pay of the officer has nothing to do with the amount under discussion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair should have expected the Honourable Member in charge to explain what this demand is meant for, in which case all these difficulties could have been obviated.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : If any officer is brought out from England, he should be brought out only on one condition, that he should train his substitute, so that we may have a broadcasting station run by an Indian and not by a foreigner. Then again take the question of equipment, Rs. 2,58,000. How much of this is going to be spent in India, on Indians and Indian materials and how much is going to be spent abroad and on foreign materials. We ought to have an assurance that the largest portion of this amount is going to be spent in India, for the benefit of Indians and the advancement of Indian industries.

Mr. A. G. Clow : Sir, we have had a long series of disquisitions partly on constitutional and partly on financial questions. I cannot claim expert knowledge of any of the issues elaborated by Mr. Ayyangar and Mr. Aney but I would suggest to the latter that he was a little hard in suggesting that we have done anything unfair. Actually this Assembly voted a sum to Government of 20 lakhs. At the time, I think the Honourable the Finance Member was asked whether and in what form there would be any control over the detailed expenditure. Speaking from memory, I think, he gave an undertaking that when it was proposed to meet charges from the amount, they would be placed before the Standing Finance Committee. All the items now shown as adjuncts to this token grant have been so placed. As regards the suggestion that we should withdraw the token demand and ask the Assembly to vote three lakhs, assuming that the Assembly concurred in the suggestion, that would be putting three lakhs into our pocket, because you have already been good enough to give us Rs. 20 lakhs and we should have another three lakhs as the result of the vote.

I would like, therefore, to come to what is more within my province. Some questions were raised by various Honourable Members regarding this Delhi station. The Honourable Mr. Satyamurti started off by suggesting that we were embarking on a Rs. 30 lakhs scheme and that the Assembly would later find itself committed to ten lakhs more than it has voted. Now there is a little misapprehension about this. There is a possible comprehensive scheme which would include various items ; it would include, for example, as a very pressing and important part, the provision of 20 kilowatt medium-wave stations at Delhi and Madras and of 20 kilowatt medium-wave transmitters for the existing stations at Bombay, and Calcutta. Then there would be four receivers for the four medium-wave stations, and it would be possible to provide four short-wave transmitters. That is what our experts advise as a complete framework for a broadcasting organization. At a very rough estimate they calculated that that would probably come to a sum of about Rs. 30 lakhs. That does not mean, however, that either we or the Assembly are committed to any such comprehensive scheme. And as we believe in proceeding cautiously and seeing that we do not outrun any funds that may be given, the whole position is being reviewed, and there will be no expenditure until after the schemes have been submitted to the Standing Finance Committee. The Assembly may therefore rest assured that the Standing Finance Committee—which, if I may say so, is a place where we can go into much greater detail than the floor of this House—is in a position to exercise a very thorough scrutiny over these matters.

As regards the staff for the station, I tried to interrupt my Honourable friend, Professor Ranga, but his flow of words was so profuse that I was unsuccessful. What I wanted to say was that, so far as I am aware, there is no European employed in this station at all. The officer in charge at present is an Indian, and the engineer is an Indian. I think my friend was confusing the control of the station with the headship of the department, for which an officer has recently been imported with experience from the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Does the Government intend to run broadcasting on commercial lines like the Posts and Telegraphs Department ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : That question was raised by my Honourable friend, Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar. He suggested that we should have a station where anybody could come in and pay a few rupees and be allowed to transmit his thoughts and ideas over the ether.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Provided they are not objectionable.

Mr. A. G. Clow : Sir, there is a good deal of that in the United States, where you can, I understand, listen to the latest dance music, interspersed with advertisements for baby food and all sorts of advertising matter. But my own conviction is that the British have followed the sounder method, and that with limited possibilities of transmission, limited hours, and limited wave lengths and especially in a country of this kind, broadcasting should be utilized only for cultural and entertainment purposes. I do not think the advertising system is by any means a happy one, and I think we must look for the return from broadcasting in what may be described as “uplift” rather than in the rupees that my Honourable friend wishes to see coming in. At the same time, as my Honourable friend is probably aware, we are only indirectly financing broadcasting services now ; we are at present balancing those services from the import tax on broadcasting apparatus.

Then my Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, came finally to the question whether we should use this particular station for political purposes. Sir, that is a difficult and important question. I think he was given part of his answer by Professor Ranga, though I did not agree entirely with the terms in which he put it. I should have thought that if we had come forward with a proposition that the station should be used for political purposes,—and remember that this is a station which, unlike the British system which is under a corporation, is under direct Government control,—if we had come forward with a proposition that it should be used for political purposes, Honourable Members might have felt a little diffident about any station where Government would be able not only to say who is going to speak but would also be able to say what they are going to say. (Hear, hear.) Personally, Sir, I regard the Government's present proposals more in the nature of a self-denying ordinance. (Laughter.) I think Honourable Members opposite will agree that they have many megaphones, and that the voice of Government is apt to be a small and occasionally a still voice. (Laughter.) I do not think Government would suffer from the presentation of their case but I do not expect that all Honourable Members would agree entirely with me on that point. There really are fundamental and important difficulties. If there is to be political propaganda, and if you are to choose who are to be the speakers, that is in itself a most difficult task. I do not think my Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, himself would feel very happy, even if his own party selected him. If, for instance, two or three speakers were wanted to speak and if my friend, Mr. Satyamurti, were to allow a certain man or some few men to speak, he might be a most unpopular man with 37 or 38 members of his own party. Similarly, if I were to choose from this distinguished House a few persons who were to broadcast their political views, I think I would find myself extremely unpopular after the decision had been made.

Now, Sir, there is a far more difficult question than the choosing of speakers, and that is deciding what they are going to say, because you

[Mr. A. G. Clow.]

Obviously cannot put up a speaker and let him say anything he likes. The question of pre-censorship involves great difficulties. I would suggest that even in England this question has not been entirely free from objections, and these objections, I may remind the House, have tended to come from persons in opposition to Government rather than from persons in agreement with Government. In England, it has also to be remembered, their political differences do not go so deep as ours unfortunately do in this country : there is a much larger common basis of what I may call "accepted conceptions". And it is, therefore, easier there than it would be in this country, where you have people with diametrically opposite views, often rather bitterly expressed.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have you heard of Churchill ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I have heard of Churchill. Finally, we are starting off with a new organization, and it would, so to speak, queer the pitch enormously if, at the start, we were entrusted with the task of directing and controlling political propaganda either for or against the Government. It was suggested that we were dependent entirely on the views of a gentleman who had recently arrived from England. That is not at all the position. This matter was very carefully considered a few years ago and what I regard as a self-denying ordinance was the conclusion reached by Government for the time being. I suggest to my Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, that that is not a necessarily permanent decision for all time. I am very far from saying that wisdom will die with the present generation, with the present Government or with the present people in this House. And if conditions, as they developed, made it desirable to reconsider it, it would always be possible to do that. I am firmly convinced for the present that it is sound that at the very inception of our broadcasting programme we should, as far as possible, keep off grounds which are controversial and which, therefore, must give some offence to some people. (Loud and Prolonged Cheers.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of 'Expenditure on the Development of Broadcasting met from the Fund'."

The motion was adopted. ✓

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Sir, I move :

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,83,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of 'Miscellaneous'."

Sir, it is quite obvious from the List of Supplementary Demands what this particular Grant means, but perhaps I should say a few words in further explanation. This grant is required to cover three special inquiries which are to begin this cold weather. One is the Delimitation Committee, to be presided over by Sir Laurie Hammond, the second is the Secretariat Procedure Committee, to be presided over by Sir Henry Wheeler, and the third is a special financial inquiry to be conducted by Sir Otto Niemeyer. Press Communiqués have been issued about all these, and the facts of each of them are well-known to Honourable Members of this House, but I thought I would just like to explain that the money is required for the voted portion of the expenses of these three inquiries. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Motion moved :

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,83,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of 'Miscellaneous'."

Delimitation Committee—General Policy.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the demand for a supplementary grant of a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,83,000 in respect of 'Miscellaneous' be reduced by Rs. 100."

I move this amendment to discuss the general policy concerning the Delimitation Committee. Honourable Members will find details of it at page 6 of this green book, where the voted grant asked for now is Rs. 86,000. Now, Sir, this Delimitation Committee was appointed by His Majesty's Government and the announcement was made on 31st July last. Thanks to the courtesy of the Honourable the Law Member, I have with me a copy of the terms of reference to this Committee. I am not suggesting by my own motion that this Committee ought not to have been appointed, nor have I anything to say against the personnel of this Committee as such. The franchise proposals for the Provincial and Federal Legislatures under the Government of India Act have got to be worked out by some committee or other, and this Committee may be as good as any other committee. My point is that the manner in which the material is being prepared for this Committee, the manner in which certain questions are being disposed of by the various Provincial Governments in consultation with the Provincial Delimitation Committees which they have set up, and the answers which I have received from the Honourable the Leader of the House, on more than one occasion to my original and supplementary questions as to the possibility of this House not being consulted at any time before these proposals are given statutory effect by the British Parliament, these are the points which I want to raise by means of this own motion of mine. This Committee, Sir, is entrusted by His Majesty's Government with the task of preparing a complete scheme of delimitation for territorial constituencies, together with the proposals for the nature of the allocation of special constituencies, to use a compendious phrase. Now, Sir, the provisions of the Government of India Act governing these matters are naturally very elementary. They have left the most important question to be decided on the recommendation of the Delimitation Committee later by the British Parliament. Section 18 of the Government of India Act, sub-section (3), prescribes merely this, that "the representatives of the Council of State shall be chosen in accordance with the provisions in this behalf contained in the first Schedule to this Act", and then, when we turn to the Schedule, we find that the proposals are hereafter to be prescribed. They simply say that of these 156 seats to be filled by representatives of British India, 150 seats shall be allocated to the Governor's Provinces, Chief Commissioners' Provinces, etc. ; and according to rule 5, there will be territorial constituencies and they have got to prescribe hereafter all these various qualifications. Curiously enough, at a very late stage, in the House of Lords, Lord Zetland accepted the method of direct election for the Council of State or the Federal Upper House as it is called. I shall be obliged to the Honourable the Law Member if he can give us information, if he is in a position to do so, with regard to the points which His Majesty's Government stated will be decided before this Committee started investigation. Sir, this is what they say :

"Lists of castes and tribes, including the scheduled castes in the various Provinces and the qualifications of voters for the Council of State and the Provincial Upper House have yet to be determined ; while unfortunately the detailed investigation required in connection with franchise will involve some further delay, His Majesty's Government hope that before your investigation commences, it will be in a position to inform you of the recommendations which they propose to publish for the information of Parliament on all these matters and they desire that your investigations should provisionally proceed on the basis of these recommendations."

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : As regards those informations, I am afraid I am not in a position to give any further information. My Honourable friend was good enough to write to me yesterday giving me three points which we shall discuss here for which I am very much obliged to my Honourable friend. I am quite prepared to deal with these three points. In fact, if I may say so with great respect, they are quite substantial points. I am sorry I have no further information in my possession.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I do not find fault with the Honourable the Law Member for that. I simply asked a question and if he can give me further information, I shall be much obliged. If not, I shall take a suitable opportunity to get that information. Then, Sir, with regard to the Federal Assembly, all the qualifications have been prescribed with regard to electors, and seats have been allotted to the various Provinces, but these constituencies have yet to be delimited for all these electorates. What has happened now is this. In various Provinces, and certainly in my Province of Madras, the Local Governments have appointed what are called Consultative or Advisory Committees for making recommendations for the Provincial franchise and constituencies and the members for these committees have been selected mostly from the Legislative Councils. I want to remind the House of a fact which they all know, that in most Provinces and certainly in mine, these Councils have over-stayed their time by nearly three years. They were elected about six years ago. They should have ceased to hold office three years after that. They are now merely nominated Members of the Governors of those various Provinces. They are no longer there in any representative capacity, and yet the Provincial Governments, for reasons best known to themselves, have chosen mostly Members from those Provincial Legislatures who represent nobody but themselves ; and in my Province they have chosen for the Chairmanship of that Committee a gentleman whom we had the honour of defeating at the polls about six years ago. Somehow or other, this Government seems to feel that whoever is defeated at the polls is peculiarly competent to give them advice on fundamental matters. It is a thing which no democrat can understand, but it is only this Government which can understand it. The other day, I referred to Diwan Bahadur Ramaswami Mudaliar whom I had the honour of defeating in the name of the Congress ; and when I asked why he was appointed on the Tariff Board, my Honourable friend the Commerce Member said that he was a very excellent man. Very well, he may be, but I take it that these gentlemen are appointed, not because they are geniuses in electoral problems or because they are great authorities on democratic constitutions and how they work, but because they are presumed to represent the opinions of the people of this country.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Was not Gladstone or Balfour defeated ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I think the Honourable the Leader of the House, even by a flight of imagination, cannot compare either himself or me to the distinguished members of the British Parliament. Gladstone and Balfour defeated each other on fundamental issues for the benefit of their country. We defeat the other candidates, because we consider them to be enemies of the country. They in England are all friends of their country, but differ only on programmes and not on betraying or serving their country. We defeat those men who betray our country.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The defeated say, you are misleading and betraying the country.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Honourable Member need not pursue that matter.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Yes, Sir, I will not proceed with the point ; but I suggest that to appoint to a provincial committee to make proposals on these fundamental problems men whom the electorates have rejected is certainly not getting at public opinion. Then, Sir, what happened is this. These provincial committees make proposals and they are accepted by the Government with or without modifications, and this unfortunate committee,—I say nothing against the personnel,—which starts work in October is compelled by His Majesty's Government to report early in January. I will read that paragraph :

"His Majesty's Government desire me in conclusion to impress upon you the great importance of completing your investigations at as early a date as possible. As you are aware, it will be necessary for His Majesty's Government, in the light of the recommendations of your Committee, to submit detailed proposals for consideration by both Houses of Parliament, and until Parliament has taken a decision on those recommendations it will not be possible to proceed with the first requisite for the introduction of the new provincial constitution, namely, the preparation of electoral rules. It is thus of great importance that no avoidable delay should occur in making available to His Majesty's Government the recommendations of your Committee. They fully recognise the arduous character of the task which your Committee will be required to perform and the short space of time into which those inquiries must be compressed. But, as you are aware, much preparatory work of the greatest value has already been performed by the Provincial Governments and by the committees which they have associated with their provisional investigations. The results of those investigations will be available to you and His Majesty's Government feel no doubt that you will find them not only of much value in themselves but of such a character as materially to lighten your labours."

That alarms me. This Committee is sent out, and I know they will be here for about three months, and they have got to deal with eleven provinces, and I think in about seven or nine of them, there are going to be bi-cameral Legislatures, and there will be two Legislatures here ; and they have got to make proposals for all these constituencies, delimitation, and also the manner of voting, labour representation, women's representation, commerce, landholders, university, and so on and so forth. What will happen is that these reports of the various provincial committees will be thrust upon them ; but I hope they will be able to see through them and make proposals which will satisfy the general requirements of a genuine democratic electorate. But I am afraid from the way in which these Provincial committees are being set up and are working and the Provincial Governments are agreeing with them and publishing their proposals, that they may stampede these people.

Now, Sir, I am not familiar with the proposals in other provinces, but I know just two or three features of the proposals made by the Madras provincial committee and accepted by the Madras Provincial Government. They have recommended a system called the single non-transferable vote in plural constituencies. The Madras scheme is that they are going to have a certain number of single-member constituencies and no question of double voting arises there. Then, they are going to have two sets of double-member constituencies, some of which are for representing the Harijans under the Poona Pact. They get in the province about 30 seats, and for them there will be 30 constituencies provided. So far so good. But then they have ingeniously recommended what is called the single non-transferable vote. I speak, subject to correction, but I think that in no country with whose constitution I am familiar, there is this device of what is called the single non-transferable vote. Except the country of Spain, where I am told this occurs, but which has lost its democracy, I think that in the British Empire, confining myself to the British Empire, now, there is no such thing as this. Moreover, I think in a country like India, where for the first time millions of people are being enfranchised, most of them illiterate, a simple system of voting, with which they have been familiar all these years, is much better than all these fancy devices. Even with regard to the much better scheme of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote, the Lothian Committee rejected that scheme.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Does the Honourable Member really want to discuss these questions? This is a much wider issue and can hardly be discussed on a motion like this.

Mr. S. Satyamurti: We are dealing with elections and constituencies.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): But this Committee will deal with the delimitation of constituencies.

Mr. S. Satyamurti: No, Sir, with voting also. I will read the sentence:

"The point is however one which your Committee will no doubt consider in the light of local conditions and of the views expressed by the various provinces concerned. His Majesty's Government would however be glad if in any case in which you think it desirable to recommend the establishment of a multi-member constituency you will consider the use of the single non-transferable vote, a question which, as you are aware, has attracted considerable attention in discussions in Parliament on the Government of India Bill."

That is one of the terms of reference of this Hammond Committee. They are asked to recommend, inter alia, what system of voting should prevail in what are known as multi-member constituencies; and I am submitting to you and to this House that, even with regard to the much better known device of the single transferable vote in a system of proportionate representation, the Lothian Committee on the whole expressed themselves against it:

"It has many forms, from that of the single transferable vote in constituencies returning three to five members (or alternatively of the single non-transferable vote) to the system of cumulative voting. Public opinion throughout the world has not as yet come to any clear conclusion on the matter, for both systems are in operation in different countries. But, broadly, it may be said that the single member system tends to provide stable party majorities in the legislatures, and to be more convenient for voter and candidate as the constituencies are smaller, while the proportional system gives a fairer representation of opinion but multiplies parties and magnifies the size of constituencies", etc.

Then, Sir, with regard to the cumulative vote they have recommended that in all multi-member constituencies and for this reason:

"Under this system every voter will have the right to use as many votes as there are candidates. He may use these votes as he desires, 'plumping' them all for one candidate or distributing them. This method can be adopted whether the 'coloured box' system is used or not."

My submission is this. The system of voting now prevalent in Madras for all elections, including the local bodies, the local Legislature and to this House is what is known as the distributive system. Each voter has as many votes as there are seats to be filled up by candidates. He is free to give his votes to the maximum of the seats which have to be filled up, or he may give one or two, if the seats are "three". But the Lothian Committee recommend the system now prevailing in the city of Bombay, namely, a voter can give two votes to one candidate if there are two seats to be filled up. Therefore, the Lothian Committee recommends the principle that every voter must have as many votes as there are seats to be filled up, whereas the single non-transferable vote means that each voter has only one vote; and it is worse in the case of the single non-transferable vote: because, in the case of the single transferable vote if the candidate for whom he has given his first vote is either elected by the required quota, or is eliminated by getting less than the minimum, the second and third votes automatically get transferred to others. Even that is absent in the case of the single non-transferable vote. But, apart from the undemocratic nature of this device, my most serious objection to this is that it violates the spirit, if not the letter, of the Poona Pact, on which Mahatma Gandhi staked his life, and to which His Majesty's Government is a consenting party. Even the Joint Parliamentary Committee, which went into this question, although it expressed some doubts about the superiority of the Poona Pact to the Communal Award, ultimately recommended acceptance of the Poona Pact under the then existing circumstances, although they expressed a hope that, so far as Bengal is concerned some settlement might be possible. So far as the Poona Pact is concerned, the essence of that Pact is this: that Hindus and the so-called depressed classes should vote together in the same constituencies, that the caste Hindu must go to the so-called depressed classes and the so-called depressed classes should go to the caste Hindu for their vote, so that in course of time, to the extent to which political education can do it, these distinctions may be wiped out or at least forgotten, and the Hindu community may develop solidarity among itself. In the case of the single non-transferable vote, what will happen is this : that each voter will be sued only by his own castemen, be he caste Hindu or depressed class man, for his vote. He has only one vote, and, therefore, the whole spirit of the Poona Pact will be destroyed. I gladly recognise that this is not the last word on the subject ; but I do plead with the House and with the Honourable the Law Member that, if the Poona Pact is to be observed, not only in letter but in spirit, this single non-transferable vote must go. It serves no purpose whatever, and will accentuate differences between the caste Hindus and the so-called depressed classes. They are really recreating separate electorates for the depressed classes.

My next point, which I have also given to my Honourable friend, the Law Member, is about the representation proposed for universities in the provincial Legislatures. Sir, personally, I feel that the ideal system of representation ought to be one man one vote, that all special constituencies for landlords, for commercial magnates, and for various other classes including universities, ought to go. But that is not in our power just now. The Government of India Act contemplates all this representation. The present system prevalent in Madras is this : that all registered graduates, that is to say graduates of seven years' standing, those who have graduated seven years before the date of the election, get the right to elect their representatives to the Madras Legislative Council. But the provincial committee have recommended and the Provincial Government have accepted a curious proposal, by which all these graduates will be disfranchised hereafter, and the franchise will be confined to the senates of the three universities, Madras, Annamalai, and Andhra. These three senates between them comprise about 400 to 500 names : today, the constituency is 15,000 to 20,000 in number ; and while, in every other direction the franchise proposals contemplate extension of the franchise, in this case only, it is intended to restrict the franchise from 15,000 to 20,000 to 400 or 500 people....

Mr. N. V. Gadgil (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Because you were returned from that constituency.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : .... a third of whom happen to be nominated by the Governor of the province. It does seem to me that it is certainly going backward. My Honourable friend, Mr. Gadgil, reminds me that that constituency committed the mortal sin of returning me. Yes. They returned me, once by an overwhelming majority, and again unopposed ; but I plead, in extenuation of that, that while undoubtedly I plead guilty to the charge of being a Congress politician, I happened and still happen to belong to the Universities of both Madras and Annamalai, as a member of the Senate, Syndicate, and of the Academic Council, of both the Universities ; and I claim to be a University man, just as much as any other man can claim to be a University man. My predecessors were my friend, Mr. C. R. Reddy, whom the Government appointed as the Vice-Chancellor of the Andhra University, and Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar who was a distinguished member of the Senate of the Madras University. Therefore, the argument that the graduates all have returned non-university politicians does not stand any examination. The real reason is this : "hope springs eternal in the human breast", as some one said the other day : and my friends of one political party in my province, afraid of facing large electorates, want to create at least one pocket borough for themselves ; and, therefore, they make this extraordinary proposal that we should have a constituency of 400 or 500 people in the place of something between 15,000 and 20,000 people. I do plead that this kind of going back on the general extension of the franchise is not consistent with the entire scheme of the Lothian franchise.

I want to make only one more point. I think I asked the Honourable the Law Member, more than once, for some kind of undertaking that these proposals, after the Hammond Committee have evolved them, and before the Government forward them to His Majesty's Government with their recommendations, should be placed before this House. I could not get a very satisfactory answer. I want to urge one argument, if I may, as to why these proposals even for the provincial Legislatures should be placed before this House for their approval or for their expression of opinion. Apart from the interests of this House as representing all the provinces, this House is directly concerned with at least the franchise for the Provincial Lower House ; as you know, the Provincial Lower Houses are the electorates for the Federal Lower House. They are the people who are going to elect those who will succeed us on these Benches. Surely, this House has some interest in knowing how these electors of Members of this Honourable House are going to be elected in their turn by their own constituencies ; and, therefore, it does seem to me that this is a matter on which this House may ask to be consulted.

There are subsidiary problems concerning women's representation, labour representation, and other problems, with which I do not propose to deal because I have not given notice, but undoubtedly there are these three points : the need for giving this House an opportunity, at a suitable time, before the Government makes up its mind finally, to express its own opinion on the Hammond Committee's proposals, the proposal of the single non-transferable vote in multi-member constituencies returning Harijan and caste Hindu candidates which is against the spirit if not the letter of the Poona Pact, and the proposed restriction of the university franchise. These three are matters on which I think this House is entitled to a satisfactory answer from the Honourable the Law Member representing the Government. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Amendment moved :

"That the demand for a supplementary grant of a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,83,000 in respect of 'Miscellaneous' be reduced by Rs. 100."

There are several notices of amendments with respect to the other portions of the demand. There is one about Special Commissions of Inquiry, Special Financial Inquiry. This Delimitation question should perhaps be discussed first.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I know, Sir, if this demand includes also the grant for Sir Otto Niemeyer's Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : That comes later under this head.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The whole demand.....

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Sir, I propose to deal with three points raised by my friend, Mr. Satyamurti, of which he gave us notice yesterday and which he has discussed today. As regards the point about the single non-transferable vote, that if that is accepted, it will be opposed to the spirit of the Poona Pact, and I am not in a position to entirely differ from him though expressing no opinion of my own. My reading of the situation is this. Under the Fifth Schedule of the Government of India Act, para. 6,—I need not read the section,—where a seat is reserved for scheduled castes, there must be at least one unreserved seat. That is the operation of section 6, and I tried to work it out by an example to see if my friend's point has substance, although I said I may not be in a position to entirely differ from him. I took the example of a constituency where there is one reserved and one unreserved seat, and I also, for purposes of working it out and having a clear idea, took as hypothesis that there are 50 scheduled caste votes and 50 caste Hindu votes. I started on the footing that the system is of single non-transferable vote. The position is that 50 scheduled caste voters must select at a primary election 4 candidates,—and I shall call them A, B, C and D. They are elected by the 50 scheduled caste voters. There is also unreserved seat and supposing there are two candidates, X and Y, for it the position seems to be this. The election proceeds simultaneously with regard to both these seats. Now, if each voter has a single non-transferable vote, of course there is nothing in the law and the Schedule to prevent a caste Hindu from voting for the scheduled castes or vice versa, but the probability is that a caste Hindu will vote for a caste Hindu X or Y, while a scheduled caste man will vote for his caste fellow. If that is the position, then the result will be,—I have worked it out again,—this. Supposing X has got 30 caste Hindu votes and Y has got 20 caste Hindu votes, 50 being split up between X and Y; and A, B, C and D, and assume for the sake of argument, they get 20, 10, 10 and 10 respectively. The result will be that X has been really elected solely by caste Hindu votes, and A, out of A, B, C and D has been elected wholly by scheduled caste votes. Therefore, there may be some force in the contention urged by some Honourable Members, that the result is as if there have been two separate electorates in the Hindu constituency. I said, Sir, to that extent I am not prepared to entirely differ from my friend. And I also worked it out, on the other footing—I will not tire the House by taking them through figures,—and find that if it were a transferable vote, then one section will be likely to influence the other section. To that extent, I may be able to agree with my friend. But my point is this. As my friend himself read out, this is one of the matters which has been specially referred to the Hammond Committee under section 6 of the terms of reference. Therefore, the position is that there is nothing to prevent anybody from making a representation to the Hammond Committee now urging the point which my friend opposite so lucidly argued in this House. All that we can do now,—I do not venture to give any advice,—but all that we can do now is to point out that it is open to anybody to urge these grounds before the Hammond Committee. But if my friend's real object is to draw attention to the fact that this single non-transferable vote will operate against the spirit of the Poona Pact, then all his arguments here, I daresay, will be considered by the Hammond Committee either suo motu or somebody will place all these arguments and these proceedings before them. As Hammond Committee will judge, I need not express any considered opinion on this matter.

Then, Sir, a similar observation applies to the second point which he took, namely the restriction of franchise for the University seat. I express no personal opinion, because I really ought not to express any personal opinion in this House, in a matter, which has been referred to Hammond Committee, but the point is there. My friend points out that the graduates' franchise of a seven years' standing is gone and it is now limited or restricted. Again, I say, Sir, this is a matter which ought to be considered, and I am sure, it will be considered by the Hammond Committee, and it is open to those who are interested in getting the views of the Local Government upset by the Hammond Committee, to influence that Committee by their arguments and by representations and achieve the result desired by them.

As regards the third point as to whether this House will have an opportunity to discuss this question, I did make a clear statement, but that is not satisfactory to my friend. What I did say was that, if I may use the colloquial expression, so far as the federal part of the thing was concerned, that would be placed before this House for discussion. There was a clear undertaking or promise that this House would be given an opportunity for discussing those portions. What my friend is dissatisfied with is, that I could not give an undertaking as regards the provincial part. As regards provincial part, I was not in a position to give a definite undertaking that it will come up before this House for discussion, and if I am not even now in a position to give any definite assurance that that will be done, some of my reasons are these. I do not for one moment suggest that this House is not at all interested in the provincial portion. I am not taking up that attitude, but I must say that it is not a matter of primary concern to this House. I am not taking my stand entirely on that. Another of the objections will be that if we undertake to have this discussed in the Central Legislature, to say nothing of the time that may be taken here, we have got to remember that as regards the federal portion there is no such great hurry as regards the provincial portion, and our fear, apart from other reasons, which I indicated in answer to supplementary questions—our fear, if we give an undertaking, is that it may result in the inauguration of the provincial autonomy being delayed, because there will be discussion in this House, later on that has got to be considered, then it has got to be sent up before any final action could be taken. That is one of my reasons, in addition to the reasons which I gave before, for my inability to give an undertaking to this House that the provincial part will be discussed. But the undertaking which I gave before, I do not want to go back upon and that still remains—that the discussion of the federal portion will be placed before this House. I have nothing more to add. I once more beg to draw the attention of Honourable Members that the Hammond Committee is just arriving and all these arguments should really be placed forcibly before them by those who are interested in the matter.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : In rising to support this amendment I wish to say a few words about

[Dr. P. N. Banerjea.]

Bengal. In that province a delimitation committee was appointed some time ago and the Government of Bengal made certain additions and alterations in the report submitted by that committee. Both the report of the committee and the additions and alterations which were made by the Government of Bengal have been found to be very unsatisfactory. One of the most unsatisfactory features of the proposals of the Government of Bengal relates to the University franchise in Bengal. At the present moment this franchise extends to a membership of over 10,000 persons. The Government of Bengal proposes that in future the franchise should be restricted only to the members of the Senate and to those registered graduates who have paid their subscriptions at the rate of Rs. ten a year for the last two years. The result of the acceptance of this proposal will be that the franchise will be restricted to about 300 persons. Is it justifiable to reduce the number of voters from 10,000 to 300? People in Bengal say that this is an attempt to create a pocket borough and I believe there is a great deal of truth in this statement. Then, Sir, there are certain inconveniences which the voters in the different parts of the country, particularly in the mofussil of Bengal, will have to suffer. In order that these defects may be removed, it would be right and proper that the report of the Hammond Committee should be considered by this House. The Honourable the Law Member pointed out the difficulty of the Assembly being consulted in a matter of this kind. It will involve delay, he says. But, even if there be some delay, this matter is of such great importance that this House should not be deprived of an opportunity of being consulted. There is another consideration which urges me to make this suggestion. The Bengal Legislative Council has been in existence for over six years. This is the seventh year of its existence; and we all know that in 1930 nearly one-third of the number of members of that Council resigned their seats and these seats were filled by persons who belong to a particular school of political thought. That House has, therefore, ceased to be representative, and it is not right and proper that the question of franchise in Bengal should be considered by the Bengal Legislative Council as it is at present constituted. For these reasons I suggest that the report of the Hammond Committee in all its aspects should be considered by the Assembly.

Srijut N. C. Bardaloi (Assam Valley : Non-Muhammadan) : I also want to join my voice to that of Dr. Banerjea regarding one matter which concerns Assam. A delimitation committee was set up to consider about the franchise in Assam and it decided how the four labour seats should be distributed. Now, we all know that in Assam there are labourers in tea gardens and labourers in the factories. There are also labourers who go and work in the tea gardens from outside. The delimitation committee has come to the conclusion that labourers who live inside the tea gardens would select a mukhi (representative) from among them. In each tea garden the labourers will select a mukhi, and from a group of tea gardens several mukhis will come together and select one man. The effect will be that the labourer who will be selected will be directly under the planters. Any one, who has got any idea of what tea plantations in Assam are, knows that the tea gardens are a sort of kingdom by themselves. Without the permission of the manager or the sub-manager nobody can get into the tea garden; not to say of the labourers, the mohurrirs, the clerks, etc., are also just under the thumb of the manager. In such circumstances these four seats will be a sort of a present to the planters. The planters—Europeans and others—have already got too much representation. This outstanding fact that the labourers are not being represented by their own men or that they will not be able to do anything freely is patent on the face of it. As a matter of fact, the labourers who work in the factories outside tea gardens are not included among the voters. The labourers who remain outside the tea gardens but go and work inside the tea gardens as day labourers are not included, but only the labourers who live inside the tea gardens would be able to select. Under these circumstances it is a great wrong done. As my Honourable friend, Dr. Banerjea, has said, the Council which is sitting now is an old Council sitting for about six years. Many of the members of that Council resigned some time back and the present Council is not considered to be representative of the opinion of the people. So, I hope that the report of the Hammond Committee will be discussed in this House in all its aspects and in that way only justice may be done.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I cannot claim here that I have got any provincial Council. Perhaps after next January or April we shall not share even in the Bihar and Orissa Council as it is at present constituted. We have got ten members in all in the Bihar and Orissa Council, out of whom one is a zemindar and one is nominated. The only eight members were elected, as in all other provincial Councils, six years ago.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta).]

In other provinces, there are Councils, be they nominal or substantial, where this delimitation and other associated questions will be discussed as has been just said by the Honourable the Law Member but I do not know how provinces like Orissa and Sind will get an opportunity for considering the report of the Delimitation Committee. We are given to understand that a small Council of these ten members will be formed in Orissa from the beginning of the next year, i.e., even before the new Constitution is introduced. And these members, who will be de facto nominated members so to say, should not be considered competent for obvious reasons to consider at all the delimitation question in Orissa. I believe that is also the case with Sind. So, as two new provinces are going to be formed and they have no Councils, nominal or substantial, where this question can be discussed, I press particularly that the Hammond Committee should be made to take note of this important aspect of the question, and that an opportunity ultimately should be given to this House to consider the report of the Delimitation Committee. With these few words, I support the motion.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Some of the proposals of the Madras Delimitation Committee had been criticised adequately and rightly by my Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, but there are certain other aspects of the recommendations of not only that Committee, but also of the Committees in various other provinces, which I would like to touch upon in the few minutes at my disposal. I find that the urban classes have been given too much weightage and too much representation in the Constitution that we have had till now and also the Constitution which we are going to get.

I can understand if the citizens of a few towns are given some separate representation for themselves, but, Sir, it is impossible for any one to justify the kind of double representation that they get by, first of all, having some members to be elected by themselves, and, then, again, having the right to take part in the election for the whole of the district in which they also can vote. In that way, they are able to vote twice, once for their own candidate for their own town, and a second time for the candidates that stand for the whole of the district of which their town happens to be a part. This is a great injustice to the rural classes, and I hope that the Central Delimitation Committee will take note of it and will see that these urban classes are either merged in the masses in the country or kept separate in their own separate constituencies and are not given any special weightage and votes to be exercised in the general constituencies also.

Secondly, coming to the question of women, I find that the Lothian Committee had recommended that the wives of property owners, who are voters, should also be given votes, that is, the able bodied women and the women of proper age; but the Madras Government as well as the Delimitation Committee have concluded that such women need not have any votes at all, and, in that way, they propose to restrict the right of women to gain votes even to the extent that was permitted and granted by the Lothian Committee. Then, again, the women of the whole of the Madras Presidency are to have only six seats, but I find from the recommendations of the Madras Delimitation Committee that the urban classes of two towns in one district, Coconada and Rajahmundry alone, are to have the privilege of electing two women, and the rest of the Presidency, men and women taken together, are to elect only four women. Sir, this really curtails the privilege of women and also makes it impossible for the women of the rest of the province to enjoy even this little bit of a privilege that has been offered to them by the Joint Parliamentary Committee as well as by Parliament. Sir, I suspect that this is proposed, because the Madras Delimitation Committee does not want women who represent progressive opinions and who stand for progressive causes, who have had the courage to go to jail, who have had the courage of standing for the country, and, therefore, have won the praise and the love of the masses. They want to restrict the choice of these two women to these two towns where they hope that their own loyalists would have some chance, and, incidentally, by fixing these two seats for women from these two towns, the importance of towns in Madras is brought out, and it is made too much of, because the Madras Ministry as well as the Madras Government seem to be more fond of the urban classes than of the rural classes.

Coming to the question of labour representation, I find myself unfortunately in disagreement with some of my labour friends and leaders in the country. Unfortunately for us, the leaders of labour who represented labour at the Round Table Conference have not paid much attention to unorganised labour, especially the labour which is not employed in factories. Government have been under the impression till now, and, wrongly so, that only those who are employed in organised factories, especially those factories which have been brought under the operation of the Factories Act, are to be considered to be labourers, and others need not be recognised at all as labourers and may as well be ignored. This has resulted in these unfortunate millions and millions of labourers not being recognised by this Constitution and finding no place at all in any of the Provincial Councils. I want to know what is to happen to all these handloom weavers whom, I am sure, my labour friends as well as the Government of India will accept to be workers. According to Government records, they number more than ten millions in this country. What is to happen to them? Where do they come in? They are not to have any seat at all in any of these Provincial Councils, and how are they to be represented, Sir? As things now are, because there are certain seats in every province which are thrown open for nomination, the Local Governments have tried, in some provinces at least, to give some representation to the handloom weavers, but, tomorrow, when you get this "provincial autonomy", you will find that the Provincial Governments will not have any choice at all in nominating any of these handloom weavers to the local Assemblies, and, what is more, they would not be able to have votes or to have their own representatives in the Legislatures. Sir, I know that the special representation that has been granted for labour in this country is really too inadequate, and I would certainly like that it should be doubled, if not trebled, but unfortunately I know also that this Government is not amenable to reason, and this Government has already made up its mind, and once this Government has made up its mind, it is as obstinate as the Himalayas. (Hear, hear.) Therefore, Sir, I would like the Government to bring to the attention of the Delimitation Committee the necessity for granting some representation for all these millions of workers who are unorganized, who have not got many friends to speak for them, either in the Central Legislature or in the Provincial Legislatures, and who are not able to look after themselves, who are not even able to approach the provincial Delimitation Committees with their needs and demands and to ask that they are given some representation from out of the special representation that is set apart for labour, even if this Government cannot make up its mind to allot some more seats to labour as a whole.

Then, Sir, even in regard to the so-called organized labour, the Government is playing ducks and drakes. The Madras Delimitation Committee is hard put to it to see that the real leaders of organized labour do not get into the future provincial Legislative Assembly. All these Committees are doing their very best to see that labour is divided against itself, and that the real leaders are flouted by everybody, and that the so-called leaders of labour, who are simply those who declare themselves to be leaders basking in the sunshine of official favour and favouritism, get every chance of getting admission to these Councils. (Hear, hear.) Sir, there is a distinguished friend of mine who had the honour of representing organized labour at the Round Table Conference along with my Honourable friends, Mr. Joshi and Mr. Giri. That is Mr. Shiva Rao, who sent in his memorandum to the Madras Delimitation Committee, but somehow it has so happened that his memorandum has been mislaid, and one of the members of that Committee, a Knight of this British Empire, has given out to the Press a wrong statement, supposed to be the views of my friend, Mr. Shiva Rao, according to which only the self-styled and ministry-made leaders of labour can get into the Legislative Assembly of the Madras Presidency, and not the real leaders of labour. I, therefore, Sir, would suggest that the Central Delimitation Committee should be asked to go in detail and very carefully into the recommendations as well as the materials gathered by these provincial Delimitation Committees, and see that no injustice is done to any section of the people of this country and also try to realize justice to the fullest degree that they can really achieve it, in trying to secure proper representation for labour in the future Central as well as Provincial Legislatures.

Sir, I sincerely hope that the Central Delimitation Committee will be given a carte blanche for investigating into these problems, and I may express the hope that they are expected patiently to hear the representations of various classes of people and that they are also expected to present their report, not only to this Government, but also to this Legislature, so that the Central Legislature can have a final say in regard to its own proposals. Sir, it is most essential that this Legislature should be given every possible opportunity and every assistance in discharging its functions and responsibilities to the masses who have sent the Honourable Members here, so that it would be possible for this Legislature to assure itself that no injustice, even within the terms of this unsatisfactory Constitution Act that we have, is caused either to the millions of handloom weavers and other cottage workers numbering millions in this country or to the voiceless organized and unorganized labour, drawn from men, women and children and from all over India. (Loud Applause.)

Several Honourable Members : I move that the question be now put.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Sir, under the new Federal Assembly, one seat only has been reserved for Indian commerce in Bengal, which, I submit, is totally inadequate to represent the diverse and in fact considerable interests of Indian commerce in Bengal. Sir, the Bengal Delimitation Committee has recommended that an electoral college of fifteen persons should be formed consisting of :

- six members elected by the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce,
- three members elected by the Bengal Mahajan Sabha,
- three members elected by our Marwari Association, and
- three members elected by the Muslim Chamber of Commerce.

And they have proposed that these persons should elect one member for the Federal Assembly. So it will be seen that if members of the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce and the Bengal Mahajan Sabha combine together, then there is no chance whatsoever for a member of the Marwari Association or the Muslim Chamber ever being elected to the Federal Assembly of the future. Sir, I think this is a very impossible and unfair position, and we cannot possibly tolerate this, Sir. Sir, the community to which I belong, the Marwari community, has very large commercial interests at stake in Bengal—much more in fact than those represented by any of the other Chambers of Commerce, viz., either the Bengal National Chamber, or the Bengal Mahajan Sabha, or the Muslim Chamber of Commerce. Sir, at the present moment the practice obtaining is this, that the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce, the Bengal Mahajan Sabha and our Association send one representative here, by rotation. I think that this wholesome practice should be retained, because thus only will each association have a chance of sending its representative here. Otherwise, Sir, there will be no chance for the Marwari Association or the Muslim Chamber to send a representative here.

Several Honourable Members : I move that the question be now put.

[At this stage, Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant rose to speak.]

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) : As there are only a few minutes left, and, after all, we cannot conclude this debate today, the Chair does not think it is necessary to accept the closure. Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I have risen to make a few remarks lest my silence should be misunderstood. I presume that these proceedings will attract the notice of the President and members of the Hammond Committee, and that is why I consider it necessary to intervene in this debate. Sir, we of the Congress are interested in the matter as the Congress has practically decided to capture the Legislatures. What use we will make of them has not yet been determined or decided. Anyway, Honourable Members opposite need not worry about that ; that is more or less a domestic question for us to decide. But we would like the constituencies to be formed in a reasonable manner. Sir, I regret to say that, so far as my Province is concerned, I am convinced, and so are many others, that there is a deliberate design to so de-limit the constituencies as to keep out every person who is suspected of holding an advanced or progressive thought or opinion in the Province. (Hear, hear.) There is a systematic conspiracy to this end and it is countenanced by the high and the mighty, if not initiated by them with a view to have only tame Legislatures and docile Cabinets even under the farcical scheme of reforms which finds place in the Government of India Act. As a prelude to that constituencies are being sought to be so formed that any man possessed of advanced views and real stamina may be kept out to the extent it is possible for those who are managing and manœuvring the affairs today to so arrange things. The Delimitation conference was so shamelessly packed that Mr. C. Y. Chintamani had to ask the Government to be excused from serving on that committee. Every effort is being made to form pocket boroughs so that zamindars may make full use of their position and influence with their dependent tenantry and so far as possible their return may be facilitated and ensured. In fact I have been told that the candidates, whom those in power want to be returned, have been either finally selected or approved tentatively and now the constituencies are being so formed as to facilitate things for all and for each of them. That, Sir, is the report and from what I have seen and heard I am inclined to believe it. I submit, Sir, that is not the spirit in which I presume the Government in England wants the scheme to be worked. We have been repeatedly told by the Secretary of State that he is anxious to see goodwill restored. Well, political opinions and political controversies apart, there are certain fundamental principles of conduct and elementary canons of decency and honesty which should not be departed from by people in any walk of life. Even Governments, however much they may be addicted to machinations, are expected to adopt a minimum standard of integrity.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

702. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) With reference to the reply to starred question No. 419, dated the 7th August, 1934, in the Legislative Assembly, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for holding the view that unorthodox accommodation is on the whole better than orthodox accommodation in the face of the comparative statement below :

| B Class—Orthodox.                                                                      | B Class—Unorthodox.                                                                                                        |

(b) Is the above comparative statement correct, and if so, do Government propose to give the same accommodation to the men drawing the same salary, irrespective as to whether they belong to orthodox group or to the unorthodox group ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) and (b). The statement made by the Honourable Member is not quite correct. The 'B' class unorthodox quarters at Summer Hill have a store room ; and the living rooms are more spacious than those in the orthodox quarters of the same class.

FREE CONVEYANCE BY RAIL BETWEEN SUMMER HILL AND SIMLA AND ALLOWANCES OF ARMY HEADQUARTERS STAFF.

703. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that men living in Summer Hill unorthodox quarters and belonging to the civil offices are to pay railway fare from their own pockets and also for their school going children, whereas the men belonging to the Army Headquarters and their school going children are given free conveyance by rail from Summer Hill to Simla ? If so, what are the reasons for this differential treatment between the two classes of Government servants ?

702. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) With reference to the reply to starred question No. 419, dated the 7th August, 1934, in the Legislative Assembly, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for holding the view that unorthodox accommodation is on the whole better than orthodox accommodation in the face of the comparative statement below :

B Class—Orthodox.

B Class—Unorthodox.

3 living rooms, 1 servant's room, 1 store, 1 kitchen, 1 W. C., 1 bath and 2 verandahs.

3 living rooms, 1 servant's godown, 1 kitchen, no store room, no verandahs and one W. C. and bath combined ?

(b) Is the above comparative statement correct, and if so, do Government propose to give the same accommodation to the men drawing the same salary, irrespective as to whether they belong to orthodox group or to the unorthodox group ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) and (b). The statement made by the Honourable Member is not quite correct. The 'B' class unorthodox quarters at Summer Hill have a store room ; and the living rooms are more spacious than those in the orthodox quarters of the same class.

FREE CONVEYANCE BY RAIL BETWEEN SUMMER HILL AND SIMLA AND ALLOWANCES OF ARMY HEADQUARTERS STAFF.

703. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that men living in Summer Hill unorthodox quarters and belonging to the civil offices are to pay railway fare from their own pockets and also for their school going children, whereas the men belonging to the Army Headquarters and their school going children are given free conveyance by rail from Summer Hill to Simla ? If so, what are the reasons for this differential treatment between the two classes of Government servants ?

(b) Is it a fact that Government in the past justified this differential treatment on the ground that men belonging to civil departments are entitled to house rent allowance from Government, whereas men of the Army Headquarters do not get it? If so, will Government be pleased to state whether the Army Headquarters staff, when moving down to Delhi, receive a local allowance during their stay in Delhi? Is it a fact that this allowance on an average comes to about Rs. 400 every year, and is not received by men of the Secretariat and other civil offices?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the rates at which this local allowance is allowed to the men of the Army Headquarters and other attached offices?

(d) Is it a fact that the staff of the Army Headquarters remaining in Simla during winter also draw a coal allowance? If so, will Government be pleased to state the average coal allowance drawn by the clerical staff of the Army Headquarters during the year 1934-35?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Army Headquarters personnel have received free conveyance from Summer Hill for many years because their conditions of service are different from those of the personnel of Civil Departments.

(b) The answer to the first part is in the negative, to the second part in the affirmative and to the last part in the negative.

(c) A statement is laid on the table.

(d) The coal, or winter allowance as it is technically called, is admissible on a sliding scale to certain clerks employed in civil as well as military offices during the winter season, if they are stationed in Simla. The collection of the information asked for in the concluding part of the question would involve an expenditure of labour incommensurate with the result to be achieved.

ALLOTMENT OF SUMMER HILL QUARTERS, SIMLA.

704. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that there are 45 'A' class quarters in Summer Hill? If so, will Government be pleased to state how many of such quarters have been allotted to Members of the Indian Legislature in each of the years since 1932 and what is the total rent derived for such quarters during each of those years?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the total amount of rent derived during each of those years from the rent of the rest of the 'A' class quarters?

(c) Is it a fact that for 1936-37 'A' class quarters are being allotted to junior most men of the attached offices in preference to senior men of the Secretariat, though the latter are foregoing a very heavy house rent allowance of Rs. 450?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state the total amount of rent to be realised from the tenants of 'A' class Summer Hill quarters which have been allotted to the Government of India employees in 1936-37?

(e) Is it a fact that if all these 'A' class quarters would have been allotted to men drawing a salary of Rs. 300 and above, according to seniority, Government would have realised at least about Rs. 16,000 for 40 quarters?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) Yes. Seven quarters were reserved for Members of the Indian Legislature in each of the years 1932, 1933 and 1934. The numbers of these quarters actually occupied in these years were 7, 6, and 5, respectively, and the rents recovered were Rs. 578-11-0, Rs. 585-1-0 and Rs. 670-1-0, respectively.

(b) The information is not readily available and is being collected. It will be laid on the table in due course.

(c) The surplus 'A' class quarters have been allotted to applicants in 'B' and 'C' classes for whom no quarters of these two classes are available, in accordance with the allotment rules.

†NOTE.—New entrants are not entitled to this allowance. They are, however, given house rent allowance in Simla and Delhi if not provided with Government quarters and in addition they receive a compensatory allowance during the Simla season.

(d) Rs. 3,000 approximately will be realised from the rent paying tenants and Rs. 5,500 will be withheld as house rent allowance from others who will be occupying the quarters rent free.

(e) I regret that I cannot express an opinion on the amount of the rent which might have been realised in the circumstances stated. Realisations depend on the actual pay of the tenants.

ALLOTMENT OF SUMMER HILL QUARTERS, SIMLA.

705. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that junior men getting Rs. 50 or 60 a month, are being allotted 'A' class quarters with two servants' godowns, whereas men drawing Rs. 300 to 449 are being allotted 'B' class quarters with less accommodation and with one servant's godown? If so, do Government propose to remove this anomaly in the present allotment rules? If not, why not?

(b) Are Government aware that junior men, allotted 'A' class accommodation, are making such allotments a source of income by subletting the houses and the godowns, whereas senior men with larger families are being refused this accommodation, though they are paying higher rent? If not, do they propose to enquire into the matter? If not, why not?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons which prevent them from allotting 'A' class quarters to men drawing Rs. 300 and above and allotting the 'B' class and 'C' class quarters which will fall vacant by this process to juniormost men, at present occupying 'A' class quarters, thereby removing such anomalies?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) and (c). I presume that the Honourable Member refers to the "A" class unorthodox quarters at Summer Hill. Some of these quarters are usually surplus to the demand of the officials entitled to them, and the surplus quarters are allotted first to "B" class officers who have failed to obtain "B" class accommodation and secondly to "C" class officers who have failed to obtain "C" class accommodation. If the number of "B" class officers who have failed to obtain accommodation in their own class is small an unduly large number of "A" class quarters goes to "C" class officers. The remedy is probably a reclassification of quarters and the possibility of this is being examined.

(b) No. Cases of unauthorised subletting when they are detected are visited with severe penalties. I do not consider that any special enquiry is necessary.

HOUSE RENT CHARGED FROM THE OFFICERS AND STAFF OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN DELHI.

706. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that 10 per cent. of pay is charged from the staff of the Government of India as house rent in Delhi? If so, will Government be pleased to state the percentage rate at which the rents are charged from the superior officers occupying Government quarters?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state when this 10 per cent. of pay basis was fixed?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether any depreciation is allowed on the building every year in fixing the assessed rent of such houses? If not, why not?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) All Government servants in Delhi who are allotted Government accommodation pay the standard rent under Fundamental Rule 45A, or ten per cent. of their emoluments, whichever is less.

(b) The "10 per cent. rule" has been in force for well over 40 years. I regret that I cannot give the precise date on which the rule was made.

(c) No. The assessed rent includes elements for interest on capital cost, municipal and other taxes, and ordinary and special repairs. It is a fair assumption that if ordinary and special repairs are regularly carried out the depreciation is negligible, and the inclusion of an element for depreciation would lead to constant changes in rent and, therefore, to administrative difficulties.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Does this ten per cent. apply to superior officials as well as the subordinates?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Yes ; it applies to both.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Equally?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I think so.

RENT COLLECTED FROM THE OFFICERS AND STAFF OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN DELHI AND COST OF MAINTENANCE, ETC., OF QUARTERS.

707. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Will Government be pleased to state the total amount collected by way of rent from all the Government buildings rented to officers and staff of the Government of India both in Delhi and Simla during the last five years and the total cost of maintenance and repairs, including over-head charges during those years?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The exact information asked for by the Honourable Member is not readily available, and Government do not propose to collect it as the result would not justify the labour involved. The Accountant General, Central Revenues, has, however, included a review of the position in his reports on the Appropriation Accounts for the year 1931-32 and subsequent years. The particulars for New Delhi are given for 1929-30, 1932-33 and 1933-34 and the particulars for Simla for 1931-32 and 1933-34. Copies of the reports will be found in the Library of the House.

BRINGING OF IDLE SENTINEL COACHES FROM CERTAIN RAILWAYS TO THE KALKA SIMLA RAILWAY.

708. *Babu Baijnath Bajoria : (a) Is it a fact that there are a few sentinel camel coaches of the same gauge as the Kalka-Simla Railway, lying idle on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and the Kangra Valley Railway? If so, will Government be pleased to state the capacity of these coaches?

(b) Is it a fact that these coaches are run by diesel oil engines? If so, will Government be pleased to state the cost of running such coaches per mile per passenger?

(c) Do Government propose to bring those idle coaches on the Kalka Simla Railway and run them as a shuttle train between Summer Hill and Simla and vice versa? If not, why not?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that, if such coaches are not brought up on the Kalka-Simla Railway for running purposes, there is a proposal for treating these coaches as scrap iron?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No.

(b) No.

(c) No. There are no idle coaches : even if there were, they could not be used on the Kalka-Simla Railway as they would infringe the running dimensions permissible on that Railway.

(d) Does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know what are these camel coaches?

Mr. P. R. Rau : They are self-propelled vehicles containing small steam engines.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Is the Kalka Simla Railway being run at a loss owing to motor competition?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Certainly.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Do Government intend to reduce fares on the Kalka Simla Railway to attract more traffic?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Fares were reduced some time ago, but it was found that the reduction of fares was of no use.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Why do Government send their postal mails by road motors, while the trains are running at a loss?

Mr. G. V. Bewoor : The mail is sent by rail as well as by road.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Why should they not send it all by rail? Why are they sending a portion by road at all, when they are running this Kalka Simla Railway at a loss?

Mr. G. V. Bewoor : Because the timings of the trains do not suit.

PROMOTIONS TO ADMINISTRATIVE GRADES ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

709. *Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : (a) Are Government prepared to make a sifting enquiry into the cases of promotion to administrative grades, made since September, 1934, from officers of the Engineering Department on the East Indian Railway?

(b) How many cases of supersession occurred, and why?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I propose, Sir, with your permission, to reply to question No. 709 and question No. 738 which is in identical terms.

There were three cases in which officers of less seniority were preferred to certain officers senior to them for administrative posts, appointments to which are made by selection and not by seniority.

Government do not consider an enquiry necessary. The arrangements were made with their prior approval.

PROPOSED DIVERSION BY THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT OF THE GRANT FROM THE PETROL FUND TOWARDS RURAL RECONSTRUCTION.

710. *Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : (a) Is not the petrol tax entirely earmarked for road development?

(b) Is there a proposal by the Madras Government to divert the grant from the Petrol Fund towards rural reconstruction?

(c) If so, what action do Government of India propose to take thereon?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) No. Only 25 per cent. of the net receipts from customs and excise duties on motor spirit is allocated to the Road Account.

(b) The Government of India have seen no such proposal. All expenditure in British India from the Road Account is subject to their approval.

(c) Does not arise.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is there any part of this fund available for anything except road development?

Mr. A. G. Clow : A certain part of the fund is allocated for work in connection with the development of aviation.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Apart from that, I take it, there is no part of this fund available for rural reconstruction?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Was it not the original intention that the petrol tax should be applied to the development of roads only?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I cannot remember the original intention. It is obviously equitable that that part of it, which is derived from the development of aviation, should be applied by analogy to improving facilities for aviation.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Is it when the roads are bad, that it should be applied to other purposes?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir; where the roads are bad, it is obviously necessary to apply it to roads, but it is intended for new development.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Does the Honourable Member know that, in the Bombay Presidency, so far as Sind is concerned, they have not been using this fund for roads?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Does the Honourable Member mean to suggest that it has been misapplied to other purposes?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Not misapplied. What I mean to say is that the original intention was that this fund should be used for road development, and that it should not be diverted to other purposes.

Mr. A. G. Clow : As far as I am aware, Sir, it is not being diverted to other purposes.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will the Honourable Member make inquiries?

Mr. A. G. Clow : Not unless the Honourable Member gives particulars that it is being misapplied.

UTILISATION OF THE PETROL FUND FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF ROADS.

711. *Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : (a) Is it a fact that the contributions from the Petrol Fund to the provinces are utilised only for schemes of road development costing Rs. 15,000 and above ?

(b) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of insisting upon the road schemes undertaken from out of the petrol tax, being scrutinised by the Government, Public Works Department Engineers, with respect to the plans and estimates, as well as during the execution and the final check-measurement ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) The Government of India have imposed no such condition.

(b) No. The Government of India are concerned only to approve projects as suitable to be financed from the Road Account and it is for Local Governments to see that works are executed efficiently.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Are Government aware that till recently there was a rule framed by the Madras Government that in cases where the Local Board Engineer and the District Board President did not agree in regard to the execution of a work from this fund, the matter should be referred to the Government, and recently it has been abrogated and made the President's opinion final leading to a lot of nepotism ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir ; I am not aware of it.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Will Government make inquiries, because, Sir, it is within my knowledge that a work costing nearly a lakh of rupees in which the Local Board Engineer and the District Board President had disagreed, and the District Board President had his own way and had the work done, in the name of, I cannot say contractors, but in his own relative's name which was soon found out ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir ; the execution of these works is a matter for the Local Government. The Government of India cannot supervise the actual execution of the projects.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : With respect to the Local Government, why should it not be made a condition that the P. W. D. Engineer in the P. W. D. should exercise some control over it as in the case of all works over Rs. 10,000 undertaken by Local Boards and finally approved by the Executive Engineer in the P. W. D. ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The Local Government obviously must exercise its own discretion as to the manner in which it should supervise the execution of the works. I am not aware that the ordinary methods in respect of expenditure on the road schemes differ from the methods that they use for the supervision of other engineering projects.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : When this matter is brought to the Honourable Member's notice, and, inasmuch as the fund is raised centrally and distributed to the provinces, will he consider the advisability of sending on this suggestion to the provinces so that much of this fund might not be diverted to other purposes or misapplied ?

Mr. A. G. Clow : I suggest that the Honourable Member should bring this matter to the notice of the Madras Government.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : I am sorry I am not a Member of the Madras Council.

PROGRAMME FOR RURAL UPLIFT IN MADRAS.

712. *Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : (a) Are Government aware that the Government of Madras propose to constitute an Economic Council with a ten-year programme of work for rural uplift ?

(b) Is there a proposal to use the contribution for the Rural Development Fund for the purposes of the aforesaid Economic Council ?

(c) Is there a proposal to grant a loan of five crores to the Madras Government for purposes of the Economic Council ? If so, on what terms and conditions and on what security ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a), (b) and (c). No.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I ask if this categorical answer of one word to all the three questions means that the Madras Government have not sent in any proposal to them, or the Government of India are not aware of any such proposal ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Both, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know if the Government of India are now contemplating financing any such schemes spread over many years, considering the very doubtful state of their finances ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : If they are, I have not heard of it.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : I want information, Sir ; it is a long time ago that I sent in these questions. What does the Honourable Member mean by saying that he is not aware of any such schemes contemplated by the Madras Government ? Does he mean he has no information or even when he has made inquiry he has found no answer forthcoming, or no inquiry has been made, if so, why has it not been made, otherwise what is the good of giving the answer to part (a) of the question as "No" ? Does the answer mean there is no such proposal ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : "No" means that the answer to the Honourable Member's question is "No".

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : I am not able to follow the Honourable Member's reply, Sir ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The answer is "No", the Government are not aware.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Very well, then what is the purpose of giving notice of a question before ten days ? Did the Honourable Member make inquiries of my question from the Madras Government ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Why not, Sir ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Because it is their business, and not mine.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Is there no proposal to finance the Local Government's proposal ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have answered that.

BIRTH CONTROL PROPAGANDA IN INDIA.

713. *Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an article, styled "a letter from Berlin and Economierigour in Germany", appearing in the Hindu of the 12th August, 1935, setting out the measures proposed to be taken by the German authorities for increasing the population by offering inducements to peasants, handicraftsmen and middle class tradesmen by granting loans on condition that they should be repaid at the end of a term only, if sufficient growth in the family is not shown ?

(b) Are Government aware that a plan 'for more babies campaign' for encouraging bigger families and for impressing upon the public, the national importance of a high birth rate, has been evolved by the Government of Britain through its war office and other departments ?

(c) Is there a proposal to start birth control clinics in India ? If so, why ?

(d) Do Government propose to penalise birth control propaganda in India and direct that pensioned officers ought not to take part in such propaganda ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) No such proposal is under the consideration of Government.

(d) No.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Was there no proposal with reference to the answer to part (c) of the question that birth control clinics should be established all over India in the district headquarters ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I have answered in the negative.

PROHIBITION IN ITALY OF THE IMPORT OF GOODS FROM INDIA AND OF INDIAN INSURANCE COMPANIES FROM CARRYING ON BUSINESS.

714. *Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Have any, and if so what, retaliatory measures been taken against the Italian Government for its action in prohibiting the import of goods from India and in prohibiting only Indian insurance companies from carrying on business there ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Government are not aware that the Italian Government have prohibited the import of goods from India or that they have exercised any discrimination against Indian insurance companies.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Is it not a fact, Sir, that the only Indian Insurance Company which was carrying on business in Italy has been banned or prohibited from doing its business there ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Is the Honourable Member aware that his predecessor in office.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : This question has been discussed very often.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : The information placed before the House by the Honourable Member's predecessor was that such restrictions.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : All right, the Honourable Member may put the question.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : Is the Honourable Member aware that his predecessor admitted that there were such restrictions imposed on Indian companies doing business in Italy and that he was negotiating with the Italian Government ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : What I have replied to is not that there are no restrictions, but that there is no discrimination.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : Between Italian and Indian Companies ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Between Indian companies and any other non-Italian companies carrying on business.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are there any Italian companies doing business in India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I would require notice of that, Sir.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Will the Honourable Member inquire and find out if there are any such and discriminate against them in India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : As I have said, I have discovered no discrimination against Indian companies in Italy. As a matter of fact, after notice of this question was received, this matter was brought to the notice of the Indian Trade Commissioner in Milan, and he has investigated the question, and he informs us that he has not been able to discover any discrimination.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : If such restrictions have been imposed upon the carrying on of business by Indian companies in Italy, why should not similar restrictions be imposed on such of the Italian companies as are doing business in India ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Restrictions have been imposed on all insurance companies generally in Italy. They are not encouraging at the moment new insurance companies in Italy.

DEMOLITION OF A HINDU TEMPLE BY THE RANGOON DEVELOPMENT TRUST.

715. *Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : (a) Are Government aware that the Rangoon Development Trust recently demolished a Hindu temple of Sri Padmavati Awman, built about 60 years ago by, and for the worship by, Indian sepoys in the Rangoon cantonment area ?

(b) Is it true that the demolition was made so as to obtain more land for the extension of golf links ?

(c) Are Government aware that the image of the Goddess was unceremoniously carried away and is locked up in the 'Trusts' store room, in spite of the remonstrances by the sepoys and other worshipping public?

(d) Has a copy of the resolutions, passed at a public meeting held by the ex-Indian sepoys on 5th August, 1935, at Myenigon, been received by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and if so, what action has been taken thereon?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The temple to which the Honourable Member refers has been removed by order of the Rangoon Development Trust in view of a scheme for the development of this part of Rangoon. I lay on the table a copy of the Press Communiqué issued by the Government of Burma on the 23rd July last, which explains the facts and from which it will be seen that the worshippers were consulted in the matter though they have no right to the site in question.

(b) No. The Rangoon Golf Club has applied for a lease of an area including the site of the temple but no orders have been passed on the application and the decision to develop the area was made on grounds wholly independent of the application.

(c) I understand that the Rangoon Development Trust was obliged to take charge of the image owing to the fact that the two parties interested in the temple were unable to agree as to which should take charge of it. It is still in the possession of the Trust but is treated with due respect to religious feeling and arrangements have been made for daily worship to be performed by a Brahmin. The parties concerned have been informed that the image will be handed over on a joint representation being made, but they are unable to compose their differences.

(d) Yes. The resolutions have been forwarded to the Government of Burma.

Press Communiqué.

Some dissatisfaction has been expressed at the action of the Rangoon Development Trust in removing the Hindu Temple on Upper Voyle Road to another site, and the Local Government thinks it desirable to explain the reasons for the removal. The land on which it stands was formerly part of Rangoon Cantonment, and the military authorities apparently permitted it to be used by the troops in the old Lascar Lines for a temple. Since the transfer of the troops to Mingaladon the temple which is built of temporary materials, has been mainly used by the inhabitants of Myenigon. The managers have no title of any kind to the site, which is vested in the Rangoon Development Trust, and during the present year, in view of the Trust's intention to develop and lay out the surrounding area, they were required to quit. The Trust entered into negotiations with two parties of the regular worshippers, both of whom held meetings and both of whom at first agreed to accept the Trust's offer of cash compensation and a free grant of a new site in Myenigon. The signatures of over 40 worshippers were appended to the letter in which one party signified their agreement. This letter expressed gratification that the new site was to be in East Myenigon. In May, however, after further meetings at which resolutions were passed protesting against the action of the Trust, the temple representatives withdrew their agreement; and they joined the Burma Provincial Hindu Sabha in an appeal to the Chairman against the Land Officer's order for the evacuation of the site, on the ground that the temple had existed for many years and that its removal to another place would be contrary to the Hindu religion. The Chairman's order dismissing the appeal pointed out that the Development Trust had removed a number of Hindu temples to new sites from time to time by agreement with their managers, and that no religious objection had been raised. Moreover, if there had been any strength in the argument based on religious objection, the two bodies of worshippers would not have agreed to the exchange of sites in the first instance. The land is required for the improvement of the neighbourhood, and the new site, which it is proposed to allot free in Myenigon, will be more convenient for the worshippers and should thus help to benefit the temple funds.

23rd July, 1935.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : With reference to the answer to clause (b), is not a fact that the extension is used for the purposes of having golf links? Otherwise, what is the other purpose?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, the Rangoon Golf Club has applied for a lease of an area including the site of the temple, but no orders have been passed on the application, and the decision to develop the area was made on grounds wholly independent of the application.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar : For what purpose is the development intended?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I require notice of that.

RE-IMPOSITION OF EXCISE DUTY ON COTTON.

716. Dr. T. S. S. Rajan : (a) Have Government received any representation from Lancashire Cotton Committee, or other similar bodies in the United Kingdom, requesting them to levy a cotton excise duty in India? If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table of this House a copy of the correspondence relating to this subject?

(b) Are Government contemplating the reimposition of the cotton excise duty on financial consideration, apart from the requisition from interested quarters?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) No.

(b) In matters of taxation Government do not announce their intentions in advance—whether those intentions are positive or negative.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : May I know if the Honourable the Finance Member is aware of the strong feeling against this excise duty when it was in existence, and that it should not be revived in any form or to any degree in this country?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The answer to the first part is "Yes". I did not hear the second part.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Is the Honourable Member aware of the strong feeling that it should not be revived?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I am aware of that opinion.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Is it not a fact that the handloom weavers did protest when this cotton excise duty was abolished, without showing them any compensatory benefit and that the handloom weavers even today are not so very much averse to the re-imposition of the excise duty provided of course that the interests of the Indian mill industry are not damaged?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I gather that opinion on this subject is not unanimous in the Party opposite.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are Government aware, quite apart from any communication, of any move on the part of the Lancashire Cotton Committee on the lines indicated in the first part of the question ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I personally am not aware of any such thing.

BOMBAY-LANCASHIRE PACT.

717. *Dr. T. S. S. Rajan : (a) Have Government given effect to the Bombay-Lancashire pact and if not, why not ?

(b) Are Government aware that Indian mercantile opinion is opposed to the Bombay-Lancashire pact ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) and (b). The Honourable Member's attention is directed to the Debates on the Indian Tariff (Textile Protection) Amendment Act, 1934.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Are Government aware that the Indian mercantile community is opposed to this pact ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : May I draw the Honourable Member's attention to the previous question and the supplementary questions on this subject answered on the 13th February, 1935 ?

Mr. S. Satyamurti : What is the position of Government ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The position of Government has not changed. Exactly the same questions were put on that occasion.

INDO-BRITISH TRADE AGREEMENT.

718. *Dr. T. S. S. Rajan : (a) Are Government aware of the decision of this House with regard to the Indo-British trade agreement which was supplementary to the Mody-Lees pact ?

(b) What action do Government propose to take on the decision of this House with regard to this question ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) Yes.

(b) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the replies given by Sir Joseph Bhore to the supplementary questions to question No. 206 by Mr. S. Satyamurti on the 13th February, 1935, to which I have just drawn attention.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Have Government considered this question, at any time after the answer was given ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : As a matter of fact all the relevant considerations and every question that could possibly be put on that occasion were fully discussed and Government gave full replies, even to the extent of answering a question as to whether the matter had been receiving the attention of the Executive Council or not.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : That question was answered six months ago. I am now asking whether Government have considered this matter any time after that date ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The question was then directed to finding out whether Government had changed their mind and the Government gave their replies after considering the decision of the House. Government do not reconsider every question on every day of the year, with a view to coming to a different decision.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I am glad that the Government are consistent. Did Government consider this matter before they appointed a Textile Tariff Board and invite British interests to give evidence ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Government naturally considered the matter at the time of the appointment of the Board.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : Have Government given six months notice for the termination of the Ottawa Agreement ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : The question does not relate to the Ottawa Agreement.

RECOGNITION OF HOMŒOPATHY AS A STATE MEDICAL SCIENCE.

719. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal : Will Government please state whether they intend to recognise Homœopathy as a state medical science ? If so, when ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : The practice of no species of medical "science" is prohibited and the question of recognition does not, therefore, arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member if these homœopathic physicians are recognised by Government ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I have already informed the House that, inasmuch as the practice of no kind of medicine is prohibited, the question of recognition does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : In the case of allopathy, the sub-assistant surgeons are registered. Therefore, I want to know whether these men are also registered.

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : My Honourable friend will be aware that registration is under Provincial Acts and not under Central Acts.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Has the Honourable Member no information whether the homœopathic sub-assistants are registered or not ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : I have not yet known a homœopathic sub-assistant !

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am asking whether these homœopathic practitioners are registered ?

The Honourable Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai : They are not registered.

CASTE NAME OF JATAVA COMMUNITY.

720. *Pandit Sri Krishna Dutta Paliwal : (a) Are Government aware that the community known in the United Provinces, Central India, Delhi Province, the Punjab, and Rajputana as Jatava, Jatuve, Jatuva desire to be designated by their real and correct name Jatava (Yadav) ?

(b) Have Government received any representation from the above community to that effect?

(c) Do Government intend to give official sanction to the caste name Jatava (Yadav) to the community mentioned above? If so, when? If not, why not?

(d) Do Government intend to instruct the Provincial Governments to the effect that the above caste name of the Jatava community be registered and used in public documents and the official papers?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) I am aware that such claims were made at the last Census.

(b) I cannot reply positively to this question, as it has not been found possible to make a complete search among the records.

(c) and (d). I do not think it is the function of the Government of India to sanction a particular name for a community; and it can hardly be expected that the Government of India should issue a direction to a Provincial Government as to the name by which a community in that province should be called.

PERSONNEL AND REPORTS, ETC., OF THE TARIFF BOARD.

721. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Will Government lay on the table a statement showing :

- (a) the personnel of the Tariff Board as it was constituted from time to time; and
- (b) the questions referred to the Tariff Board, with the following particulars with reference to each question :
  - (i) the date of reference to the Board;
  - (ii) the recommendation of the Board with the dates of their report and of its publication; and
  - (iii) the decision of Government, with the dates when the decision was reached and when it was published?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the statement laid on the table of the House in reply to Professor N. G. Ranga's question No. 479 on the 23rd February, 1935. Since then Messrs. G. Wiles and H. R. Batheja have been reverted to their respective Provinces.

(b) (i), (ii) and (iii). I lay on the table a statement showing the details asked for so far as they are available. The recommendations of the Tariff Board on each enquiry are set out in the Reports, copies of which are supplied, on publication, to every Member of the Legislature and are also placed in the Library of the House.

Statement showing the enquiries made by the Tariff Board with dates of reference to it, and the submission of reports and the decisions of the Government of India thereon.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know why these gentlemen were reverted to their appointments ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : So far as I am aware, Mr. Wiles obtained another appointment which he preferred to the one he was holding, and Mr. Batheja, I believe, for reasons of health wanted to be relieved of his duties, but, in any case, I might emphasise that each Board is constituted for a particular inquiry, and, when a new inquiry is started, it is open to Government to appoint any Board for that particular inquiry.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Will Government be pleased to state in how many cases, during the last five years, they have disregarded the recommendations of the Tariff Board in favour of the imposition of protective duties ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That obviously is a question which I cannot answer in reply to a supplementary question.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is it a fact that Government have, of late, shown a tendency to disregard the recommendations of the Tariff Board wherever those recommendations have been in favour of the imposition of protective duties ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : A question put in that form is tendentious and I cannot answer it.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : May I know how the question is tendentious ? I am asking the Government whether it is or it is not a fact : I do not insinuate anything.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : It is tendentious.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Have Government accepted all the recommendations of the Tariff Board in favour of the imposition of protective duties in the last five years ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : In how many cases were such recommendations made ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Of that, I would require notice.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : In how many cases were such recommendations not accepted ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : My previous answer covers this part of the question.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is it a fact that such recommendations were uniformly accepted during the past five years ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I cannot say, Sir.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Sir, is it a fact that the Indian Fiscal Commission as well as the Industrial Commission were in favour of a permanent Tariff Board in place of the ad hoc Tariff Boards being appointed for particular industries ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Of that, I would require notice ; it does not arise out of this question.

REFERENCE OF THE QUESTION OF THE INDIAN TEXTILE INDUSTRY TO THE TARIFF BOARD.

722. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) Do Government intend to refer the question of the Indian textile industry to the Tariff Board in the near future ?

(b) Do Government intend to ask the Tariff Board to examine this matter in the light of the provisions of what is known as the Mody-Lees Pact ?

(c) Is there any intention of changing the personnel or constitution of the Board and of substituting a European or an official in the place of the present President of the Board ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a), (b) and (c). The Honourable Member is referred to the Commerce Department Resolution No. 341-T. (12)/35, dated the 10th September, 1935, which was published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary of that date, copies of which are in the Library.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Why was the personnel of the last Tariff Board substituted by these individuals who were appointed by this Resolution for the purpose of examining the question of the British textile industry ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I have already answered that question in answer to a supplementary question by the Honourable Member, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Will the debate on the Indo-British Trade Agreement be referred to this Board ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I do not understand what is meant by referring the "debate" to the Board.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Will the volume, containing the report of the proceedings held on the floor of this House with reference to the Indo-British Trade Agreement, be sent for consideration to the Tariff Board that has been appointed to consider the question of the textile industry ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : If the Board ask for it, certainly.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Then, Government do not, of their own initiative, consider it advisable or expedient to send to the Board the opinions expressed by the Members of this House on the questions which the Board is going to consider ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : Sir, it is for the interests concerned to place such material before the Board as they think will be relevant for the purposes of the inquiry which the Board is going to hold.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is it a fact, then, that Government, of their own accord, will not send any papers to this Board at all ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : No, Sir, not of their own accord.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Government then will not send them any material whatsoever ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : I have already said that it is for the interests concerned to place such material as they choose which they think to be relevant to the inquiry before the Board.

Mr. T. S. Avinashilingam Chettiar : What material, then, do Government propose to place before the Board ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS OF CERTAIN COMMODITIES.

723. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) Will Government lay on the table a statement showing the comparative figures for the months of April to July for the current and the preceding year, of the exports and imports of India of :

(i) raw produce,

(ii) manufactured goods, and

(iii) (1) gold and (2) other precious metals ?

(b) What is the nature and the extent of the balance of trade in each of the last four months, if the item relating to gold and silver is not taken into account ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) The information asked for by the Honourable Member is given in the Accounts relating to the Sea-borne Trade and Navigation of British India for the month of July, 1935, a copy of which is in the Library of the Legislature.

(b) The balance of trade in merchandise in each of the last four months. April to July, 1935, was as follows :

Rs.
(Lakhs.)

|               |     |                     |
|---------------|-----|---------------------|
| April .. .. . | 54  | Adverse to India.   |
| May .. .. .   | 348 | In favour of India. |
| June .. .. .  | 295 | do.                 |

DIFFERENCE IN THE CUSTOMS AND EXCISE REVENUE.

724. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) What is the difference for the months of April to July, 1935 and 1934 in the matter of (i) customs, and (ii) excise revenue ?

(b) In which cases have the imports gone up and from which countries and why ?

(c) What steps have Government taken for the revision of customs and tariffs so far ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) and (b). The figures desired by the Honourable Member are available from the monthly statements showing the total gross Indian sea and land customs revenue and from the Accounts relating to the Sea-borne Trade and Navigation of British India for July, 1935. Copies of these publications are placed in the Library. It is not possible to give reasons for all the increases and decreases under the various items.

(c) I would refer to my remarks in the Assembly on the 6th March last (page 1777) and again on the 11th March (pages 2152-53).

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Have Government arrived at any decision regarding the revision of the customs tariff ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : If the Honourable Member will look at my remarks, to which I have just referred, he will see that there are certain conditions preliminary to any decision on that point to be fulfilled.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : And I conclude that those conditions have not yet been fulfilled and, accordingly, Government have not yet arrived at any decision ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The Honourable Member can conclude that up to the time of the last Budget ; six months have elapsed since the last Budget. In any case, if I have arrived at any conclusion in these six months, I would not tell the Honourable Member till the next Budget. (Laughter.)

INCOME AND EXPENDITURE OF STATE RAILWAYS.

725. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) How does the income and expenditure of each of the State Railways for the first quarter of the current financial year compare with that of the last year ?

(b) Will Government state the yield from passengers and goods traffic in each case ?

(c) How do Government account for the variations ?

(d) Have Government any intention of revising the Railway tariff, specially for goods ?

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Have Government any intention of revising the railway tariff, especially for passengers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think, Sir, that the reply given to Mr. Satya-murti's question covers all these points.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is it a fact that the state of the railway finances is really deplorable ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : That is a matter of opinion ; I can only say that everybody interested in railways hopes for improvement as soon as possible.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Are Government taking any measures in order to effect economies in the administration of the Railways ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : That question has, on several occasions, been answered during the course of this Session.

VACANCIES IN THE KING'S AND VICEROY'S COMMISSIONED RANKS.

726. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) What is the total number of normal vacancies every year :

(i) in the King's Commissioned ranks in the Army located in India, including both British and Indian arms ; and

(ii) in the Viceroy's Commissioned ranks in the Indian Army ?

(b) Are any persons directly recruited to the latter ? If so, how many and since when ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) (i). About 220, of which about 100 are in the British Service.

(ii) About 320.

(b) The practice of granting a few direct Viceroy's Commissions has existed for many years. The average number for each of the last three years is six.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Who are " directly " appointed as Viceroy's Commissioned Officers ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The persons who are suitable therefor.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is it necessary for them to possess any military qualifications before they are so appointed ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : They are generally people who come from military families and whose fathers and other relations have served in the army, and, therefore, have military traditions. That is the general rule.

CADETS OF THE INDIAN MILITARY COLLEGE, DEHRA DUN.

727. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) How many cadets is the Indian Military College, Dehra Dun, intended to turn out annually ?

(b) How many of those cadets will receive King's Commissions, and what number will be absorbed in posts held by Viceroy's Commissioned officers so far ?

(c) Will the pay and prospects be identical in both cases and also with those of the British Officers holding King's Commissions ?

(d) What will be the financial effect of the replacement of the present system by direct recruitment from among the cadets of the Military Academy ? Will it deprive members of the regular Army of the opportunities for promotion which were available so far ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) The annual intake of the Academy is 60 cadets for the Indian Army and 20 for the Indian State Forces. The output is intended to be in the neighbourhood of those figures.

(b) All except the Indian State Forces cadets will receive the King's Commission.

For several years to come, practically all Indian Commissioned officers, except those posted to the Indian Regiment of Artillery, will replace Viceroy's Commissioned officers.

(c) The pay and prospects of all officers commissioned from the Indian Military Academy will be identical. Their rates of pay are roughly the same as those of British officers serving in their own country, while the scale of promotion is identical with that of their British contemporaries in the Indian Army.

(d) The pay charges of an infantry battalion when fully Indianised will probably be several thousand rupees less than those of a non-Indianised battalion.

The rank and file of the former will not have the chance of rising above the rank of Warrant Officer in their own units, but they will be eligible for promotion to Viceroy's commissioned rank in non-Indianised units.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is there any difference between the pay and emoluments of Indian officers holding the King's Commission in India and British officers holding the King's Commission in India ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Yes, Sir, there is a difference.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : What is its extent ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I could not say off hand what the amount of the difference is.

Sardar Mangal Singh : Are Government prepared to take more cadets to the Dehra Dun College in view of the large number of vacancies in the King's Commissioned officers every year ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I think the Honourable Member is referring to my answer to the last question which referred to the number of vacancies.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST CERTAIN PEOPLE IN THE REPORTS PUBLISHED IN CERTAIN NEWSPAPERS ABOUT QUETTA AFTER THE EARTHQUAKE.

728. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) Have Government noticed the communications and grave charges pertaining to the behaviour of certain people in the reports about Quetta after the earthquake, published in the Daily Herald and the Daily Worker of London ? If so, have Government made any enquiry in the matter ?

(b) Will Government please lay the report of the enquiry on the table ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply I gave to Mr. S. Satyamurti's starred question No. 7. on the 17th September, 1935.

ACQUISITION OF THE ROHILKUND AND KUMAON RAILWAY.

729. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) Have Government not yet decided to take over the management of the Rohilkund and Kumaon Railway ?

(b) Is it a fact that by far the major portion of the Rohilkund and Kumaon Railway belongs to the State ?

(c) What will the acquisition of the remaining portion held by the company cost ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Notice of termination, if decided upon, is to be given before the end of 1936. The question is under consideration.

(b) The portion owned by Government, namely the Lucknow-Areilly Section, comprises 312 miles out of a total mileage of about 711.

(c) Between 2 and 2½ crores.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Are Government aware of the fact that there is a general dissatisfaction with the present methods of the administration of the R. & K. Railway ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Sir, my Honourable friend has brought various instances of what he considers mal-administration to my notice.

AVERAGE SALARY, EMOLUMENTS AND EXPENSES ON THE EDUCATION OF THE CHILDREN OF BRITISH AND INDIAN SOLDIERS.

730. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) Will Government lay on the table a statement showing full details of the average salary and emoluments of (i) a British and (ii) an Indian soldier ?

(b) What is the average amount spent by Government on the education of the child of (i) a British and (ii) an Indian soldier ?

(c) What is the total number of children of British soldiers in service ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) I lay a statement on the table.

(b) (i). Rs. 184 a year.

(ii) Government do not undertake the education of the children of all Indian soldiers, but they provide special arrangements for each of them as desire to make the Army their profession at the King George's Royal Indian Military Schools at Jullundur, Jhelum and Ajmer. These Schools contain about 770 pupils and the approximate annual expenditure per pupil is Rs. 367.

(c) The information required by the Honourable Member is not readily available. Our records, however, show that there were 3,188 children of British soldiers attending schools on the 1st February, 1935.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : What is the average expenditure incurred by the Government on the education of the children of Indian soldiers per capita ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I could not work that out in answer to a supplementary question. I have given all the information available. The amount spent on the education of children of Indian soldiers is the amount required to pay for 770 children at Rs. 367 per head per annum. The total cost would be the result of that multiplication sum.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is it a fact that the expenditure per capita would not come to over one anna ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I could not say off hand, but I should think it was very unlikely.

INDIANS, EUROPEANS AND ANGLO-INDIANS IN THE VARIOUS PORT TRUSTS.

731. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how the various Port Trusts are constituted, giving the names of the Chairman and members of each ?

(b) Is it a fact that certain Resolutions moved in the Council of State in 1922 and 1932, recommending the Indianisation of the services of the Port Trusts, were accepted by Government ?

(c) Will Government lay on the table a statement showing the number of Indians, Europeans and Anglo-Indians in the various Port Trust services in posts carrying pay of more than Rs. 400 per mensem for the last ten years ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : (a) I lay on the table a statement giving the latest information available.

(b) It is presumed that the Honourable Member refers to the Honourable Sir Pheroz Sethna's Resolutions in 1922 and 1932 asking respectively for measures to be taken "to increase the number of Indians in the higher grades" and "to secure a substantial improvement in the matter of Indianizing the services" of the Port Trusts. Both these Resolutions were accepted by Government.

(c) The information is being obtained and will be laid on the table when received.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Are Government in a position to state what action has been taken in pursuance of those Resolutions and what has been the increase in the number of Indians in higher posts in these services since 1932?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan : So far as the higher posts are concerned, part (c) of the question relates to these posts, and I have already submitted that information is being obtained and will be laid on the table when received. So far as the first part of the question is concerned, Government have reason to believe from the information that they have been receiving that Indianisation is steadily increasing.

EXPLOSION IN BAGDIGI COLLIERY IN DHANBAD.

732. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) Is it a fact that a large number of miners were killed and injured as a result of an explosion in Bagdigi Colliery in Dhanbad?

(b) Has any compensation been awarded to the dependants of the deceased and the injured? If so, what?

(c) What was the cause of the explosion?

(d) Was any action taken against any person in this connection?

(e) What steps do Government intend to take in order to prevent a repetition of such disaster?

Mr. A. G. Clow : (a) 19 were killed and seven injured as a result of the explosion in the Bagdigi colliery.

(b) I have no information; but it is open to the dependants of deceased miners and to injured miners to prefer claims under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

(c) This has been under investigation by a Court of Inquiry appointed by the Government of Bihar and Orissa under section 21 of the Indian Mines Act, but their report is not yet available.

(d) and (e). These questions will receive due consideration after the Court of Inquiry has reported.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Do Government not call for any report from the local authorities when such incidents happen?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The position is that, as a rule, when a very serious accident happens, the Government of the province in which the accident occurs appoints a Court of Inquiry under the Mines Act. That Court has been sitting in the present case. I believe their report has been presented to the Local Government, but I have not yet seen it.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Do Government not call for any information from the local authorities as to the award of compensation to the dependants of the deceased in consequence of such accidents?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is it not desirable that they should do so?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir, I do not think so. The position is that the Act provides for the grant of compensation to those who apply. There is also a provision enabling the Commissioner to call attention of the dependants of deceased workmen to the possibility of filing an application. It is for them to decide whether they should file an application or not.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Is not the protection of labour one of the subjects for which the Government of India are responsible?

Mr. A. G. Clow : No, Sir. The Local Government are primarily responsible for that.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : And not the Government of India?

Mr. A. G. Clow : The Government of India are only responsible in so far as it is at present a reserved subject, and they have the powers of superintendence, direction and control.

ARMY LENT FOR PRODUCING THE FILM "SOLDIERS THREE".

733. *Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : (a) Is it a fact that two battalions, namely the Welch and Devons, were lent by the Army Headquarters to participate in a mock fight against Shinwar tribesmen in the Khaibar Pass in order to make up a scene for the film "Soldiers Three" under the direction of Mr. Geoffrey Barker ?

(b) Was any ammunition used by the said battalions in the fight ?

(c) Is it a practice of the Army Headquarters to lend the services of the Army in India for such purposes ?

(d) Do Government approve of this action of the Army Headquarters ?

(e) Do Government intend similarly to encourage the Indian film producers by lending them the fighting forces, armies and other military material and articles ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) The 2nd Battalion, the Welch Regiment, and the 7th (Bengal) Mountain Battery took part in the scene connected with frontier fighting. The 1st Battalion, the Devonshire Regiment, participated in the filming of cantonment scenes at Alipore.

(b) Yes. Blank ammunition was used.

(c), (d) and (e). I would refer the Honourable Member to Appendix XLVI Regulations for the Army in India, which gives the conditions under which Government may loan troops to approved private firms (including Indian film companies) in connection with the production of films. One condition of course is that all expenses are paid by the Company. The Honourable Member will find a copy of the Appendix in the Library.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the army was ever lent to any other Company for the purpose of preparing a film ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I think this is the only firm to which they have so far been lent.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : What was the amount paid by this Company for the use of the army or on account of the ammunition used in this sham fight ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I am afraid I shall require notice of that question. I have not got the figures in my head.

Prof. N. G. Ranga : Was that the only firm which had applied for the loan of army ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : This is the only Company that has applied so far.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Do Government regard it as a legitimate use of the army ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Yes, Sir. If they did not regard it as legitimate, they would not allow it.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : Government are never capable of making any mistake ?

(No answer.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question, No. 734.

Mr. M. Asaf Ali : May I, Sir, ask a supplementary question to question No. 733 ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : No, next question has been called.

EXAMINATION IN LEAVE RULES HELD BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY AUTHORITIES.

734. *Sirdar Jogendra Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the examination in Leave Rules held by the East Indian Railway authorities ?

(b) Is the staff branch in the Divisional Office on the East Indian Railway a technical branch ? If so, what are the technical qualifications or training prescribed for officers and clerks in this branch ?

(c) What facilities, if any, have been provided for the training of staff officers and clerks ?

(d) Are clerks in other branches, such as Commercial, Transportation, Engineering, Locomotive and Carriage and Stores, required to pass an examination in the rules pertaining to the respective branches ? If not, why not ?

(e) Is the examination compulsory or optional ?

(f) Is it a fact that certain staff Superintendents have issued orders that clerks have to pass this examination and failure to do so shall be punishable ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the authority for doing so ?

(g) Is any similar examination held for clerks of staff branch on any other Railway, or was it ever held on the late Oudh and Rohilkund Railway ? If not, will Government be pleased to state the necessity for its introduction by the East Indian Railway authorities ?

(h) Are (i) the clerks in the Accounts and Audit Departments who have to perform the duties of auditing the work of the executive and draw higher scale of pay, (ii) the officers and supervising subordinates in Divisional Offices, (iii) the clerks in the head office, and (iv) the clerks dealing with staff in other departments than the Railway, required to pass this examination ? If not, why are the clerks in the staff branch of divisional offices alone compelled to pass this examination ?

(i) Are not the scales of pay for clerks in staff branches the same as in other branches (Commercial, Running and Stores) of a Divisional Office, and is there not a common seniority list for the whole office ? If so, why are the clerks in staff branch alone required to obtain this additional qualification without any remuneration ?

(j) Are Government prepared to make a thorough enquiry into the question with a view to bringing out uniformity and eliminating hardships to certain section of the staff ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Government are informed that an examination in leave rules for certain sections of the staff has been in force on the East Indian Railway for a long time. They are making enquiries as to the practice followed in this matter on the other State-managed Railways and will consider whether a uniform procedure should be prescribed for all these railways.

ELIGIBILITY OF TELEPHONE OPERATORS TO PENSION.

735. *Mr. Anugrah Narayan Sinha : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the services of all telephone operators who were holding permanent posts substantively on the 8th July, 1919, are pensionable under Article 155 of the Telegraph Manual ?

(b) If so, is it a fact that the above rule is applicable to the cases of those operators who were permanently appointed on 1st March, 1919 ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the number of such telephone operators as were appointed to permanent posts on the 1st March, 1919, in the Bihar and Orissa division ?

(d) Is it a fact that these operators are entitled to pension under Article 155 above referred to ?

(e) If so, has the sanction of the Head of the Department been conveyed to them, and has it been entered in their service-book ? If not, do Government propose to expedite the order ?

(f) Has any order been passed as to provident fund contribution in the case of those operators who were appointed in permanent posts after the 8th July, 1919, and are not therefore eligible to pension under the aforesaid Article 155 ?

Mr. A. G. Glow : (a) The Honourable Member apparently refers to paragraph 155 of the Manual of Appointments and Allowances of officers of the Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department, according to which the services of all telephone operators, who were holding permanent posts substantively on the 8th July, 1919, are pensionable, and the services of those who were not holding permanent posts substantively on that date, or who were appointed substantively after that date with retrospective effect from or from before that date, are not pensionable.

(b) Yes, if they were not appointed substantively after the 8th July, 1919, with retrospective effect from the 1st March, 1919.

(c), (d) and (e). The information is being collected and a reply will be placed on the table of the House in due course.

(f) The question whether these officials should be granted pensionable status or admitted to the benefits of a contributory provident fund was considered some time ago but owing to the unfavourable financial situation it was not pursued. It will be taken up for consideration when the financial position of the Department has improved.

HIGH PRICES OF ARTICLES CHARGED BY AN ARMY CONTRACTOR AT RAWALPINDI.

736. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : (a) Is it a fact that the Officer Commanding, No. 1 Company (N. C.), I. H. C., Rawalpindi, appointed for the unit a contractor (not on the approved list of Government) in the beginning of 1934 and that the Officer Commanding allows higher rates than the prevailing local market rates ?

(b) Are Government aware that the men of the I. H. C. Corps, who are most low paid of all the Indian military units, are hard hit by the high prices of articles charged by the said contractor ?

(c) Is it a fact that the original agreement was typed and signed at the contractor's shop in the bazar ?

(d) Are Government prepared to consider the desirability of instituting an enquiry into the affairs of No. 1 Company, I. H. C., and of taking steps to redress the grievances of the poor men of that unit ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) No.

(b) No.

(c) No.

(d) Does not arise.

TESTING OF THE INFORMATION SUPPLIED BY POLICE INFORMERS.

737. *Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta : Have Government issued any instructions as to the method and agency by which the information of the police informers should be tested before any action is taken thereupon ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : It is for the Local Governments to see that the investigating staffs are so trained and educated that they invariably test the information given by informers before taking action on it. The Government of India have no reason to believe that there is need for them to issue orders in this matter. If the Honourable Member has in mind a case which recently occurred in Bengal, it should interest him to know that it was the investigating officer himself who suspected the bonâ fides of the informers and had them arrested and prosecuted.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Do I understand that the Honourable Member, who is in charge of law and order and administration of justice, has absolutely no control, and that he never lays down any policy as to how these informations of the police informers should be tested ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have said that it is for the Local Governments to see that the investigating staff are so trained and educated that they invariably test the information.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Do the Government of India lay down no rules of procedure or do they give no instructions in the matter ?

(No answer.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Next question No. 738.

†738. *Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Are Government prepared to make a sifting enquiry into the cases of promotion to administrative grades made since September, 1934 from officers of the Engineering Department on the East Indian Railway and state how many cases of supersession occurred, and why?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 709.

Mr. P. R. Rau : That has already been answered along with question No. 709.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : I want to put a supplementary question on this. Will Government lay on the table a statement showing such cases?

Mr. P. R. Rau : There are only three cases.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Will Government lay a list of those three cases?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Is my Honourable friend in order in putting supplementary questions on a question which was answered twenty minutes ago?

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : I was not present when my question was answered. I am putting my question No. 738 only just now.

Mr. P. R. Rau : That was answered along with question No. 709.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : But I was not here when you answered my question along with another question which was not mine.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The answers to questions are given to the House, and not to any particular Member.

Mr. Mohan Lal Saksena : Now, I want your permission to put supplementary questions.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : That is not allowed.

739. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : (a) With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 1354, dated the 2nd April, 1935, in this House, will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Travelling Ticket Collectors, now designated as Travelling Ticket Examiners, are classed as Traffic Train Staff in paragraph 362 of State Railway Open Line Code, Volume II?

(b) Is it a fact that Traffic Train Staff under State Railway Open Line Code are entitled to mileage allowance for the journey performed by them while on duty?

(c) Is it a fact that it was the Chief Operating Superintendent, East Indian Railway, who acting in the name of the Agent abolished the mileage allowance of the old Travelling Ticket Inspectors of the East Indian Railway in 1931?

(d) Is it a fact that the sanction of the Railway Board was never obtained by the East Indian Railway administration for the abolition of the mileage allowance drawn by the old Travelling Ticket Inspectors?

(e) If the reply to part (d) be in the negative, will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the Agent's recommendations on the point and the reply of the Railway Board thereto?

(f) On what date did the Railway Board issue orders for the abolition of mileage allowance to the old Travelling Ticket Inspectors?

(g) Will Government be pleased to state if there are any class of employees on the East Indian Railway (other than the Travelling Ticket Examiners) who perform certain duty in the running train and are not paid mileage allowance?

(b) Government have no information.

(c) No, unless he is empowered by the rules in the Code to make departures from them.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : Was he empowered in the case that was mentioned in my previous question No. 739?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Yes, Sir. I have already said that orders of the Railway Board were not necessary in that case.

MILEAGE OR RUNNING ALLOWANCE PAID TO THE STAFF ON STATE RAILWAYS.

741. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : (a) With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 1099, dated the 28th March, 1935, in this House, will Government be pleased to state under what Fundamental Rule, mileage allowance can be classed as pay ?

(b) What is the difference between " classed as pay " and " treated as pay " ?

(c) What is meant by " other emoluments " as contained in Fundamental Rule 9 (21) (a) (iii), and does the mileage allowance treated as pay fall within this Fundamental Rule which defines Pay ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Under Fundamental Rule 9 (21) (a) (iii).

(b) When allowances are classed as pay they are subject to all the conditions in the Fundamental Rules and other rules governing pay : when they are treated as pay, such treatment is usually for a particular specific purpose.

(c) Other emoluments comprise monetary concessions which do not already fall within the definition of pay in sub-clauses (i) and (ii) of Fundamental Rule 9 (21) (a). The reply to the second part of the question is in the negative.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : What is the difference between " classed as pay " and " treated as pay " so far as the purposes of provident fund and pensions are concerned ? Is there any difference between the two ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No, Sir. I am afraid, I cannot undertake to give an exposition or interpretation of the Fundamental Rules in answer to a supplementary question in this House ?

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : I am unable to understand the distinction that has been drawn by the Honourable Member between " classed as pay " and " treated as pay ". In what circumstances would he call it " classed as pay ", and in what circumstances would he call it " treated as pay " ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : A full answer has been given in my reply to his question.

APPLICABILITY OF OLD SCALES OF PAY TO THE TRAVELLING TICKET CHECKING STAFF ON THE EAST INDIAN AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAYS.

742. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the old Travelling Ticket Examiners of the North Western Railway were given the option of retaining the old scales of pay applicable to the substantive post held by them in a permanent capacity as a Travelling Ticket Examiner ?

(b) Is it a fact that the old Travelling Ticket Inspectors of the East Indian Railway were also given this choice ?

(c) Are the contents of letter No. 822-E.G., dated the 16th August, 1933, from the Railway Board, applicable to the said employees of the East Indian and North-Western Railways ? If not, to whom do they apply and why are they not applicable to the other employees ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Special Ticket Examiners, who prior to the 1st June, 1931, held permanent posts as Travelling Ticket Examiners in a substantive capacity were granted the option of retaining the old scale of pay.

(b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the information laid on the table on the 2nd September, 1935, in connection with part (d) (ii) and (iii) of question No. 318 asked by Dr. N. B. Khare on the 9th April, 1935.

(c) No. The letter referred to applied only to the staff of the North Western Railway. The East Indian Railway staff were governed by the orders contained in Railway Board's letter No. 822-E.G., dated the 22nd December, 1932.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : Do the Railway Board apply different principles to different railways so far as the staff is concerned in their pay ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : There is no reason why they should not vary in detail.

APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN PARAGRAPHS OF THE STATE RAILWAY OPEN LINE CODE, VOLUME II, ON STATE RAILWAYS.

743. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : (a) With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 1355, dated the 2nd April, 1935, in this House, will Government be pleased to state the result of their enquiries on the subject ?

(b) Are the Government of India required to know or not, if and when the provisions of State Railway Open Line Code are revised, modified or annulled ?

(c) Are the powers of revising, modifying or annulling the provisions of State Railway Open Line Code vested in any authority other than the Railway Board or the Government of India ?

(d) If it is the right of the Railway Board or the Government of India only to revise, modify or annul the provisions of State Railway Open Line Code, then why could the information asked for in starred question No. 1355 on the 2nd April, 1935, not be available in ten days, the period of notice of the question ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The information was laid on the table on the 6th September, 1935.

(b) and (d). Revisions or modifications of the provisions of the Code are made by the Government of India ; but as many such revisions are contained in executive orders and the Code itself has not been generally revised it was not possible within a short period to collect all the orders.

(c) No.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : Will the Honourable Member state when the Code was revised ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The general revision was a long time ago. I cannot give the exact date.

PAY OF TRAVELLING TICKET INSPECTORS, ETC., ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

744. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : (a) With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 1361, dated the 2nd April, 1935, in this House, will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that at a joint meeting of the Operating, Accounts and Railway Board Officers, held at Calcutta on the 3rd May, 1927, it was decided as under :

" The travelling ticket inspectors and their Divisional Inspectors taken over by the Operating Department will draw the pay of the Accounts Department plus average mileage " ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Director of Finance, Railway Board, framed rules in pursuance of the minutes of the said meeting ?

(c) Is it a fact that the rules thus framed were finally approved by the Agent, East Indian Railway ?

(d) Is it a fact that these rules were honoured up to 31st May, 1931, and in contravention thereof the pay and the allowances of the said employees were reduced from 1st June, 1931 ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the rules in accordance with which the Travelling Ticket Inspectors on transfer to Operating Department were paid the pay of the Accounts plus average mileage ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The meeting was purely a departmental meeting and was not empowered to decide any question finally. Government are not prepared to disclose its recommendations.

(b) and (c). No rules were framed but the orders of the Agent, East Indian Railway, were taken where necessary.

(d) and (e). As no rules were framed these parts of the question do not arise.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : So far as the rules of the Department are concerned about the pay and status of the people who were transferred from the Accounts Branch to the Operating Branch, is there anything confidential that cannot be divulged to the House ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Yes, Sir. Discussions between departmental officers are treated as confidential, but the decisions and orders that were passed are not confidential.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : I want to know the final decisions that were arrived at.

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have already said that no rules were framed as a result of that meeting.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : Then, under the circumstances was the transfer made without any rules ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Orders were passed that the transfer should be made, but the rules regarding the details of the transfer were not framed at that meeting.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi : Perfectly correct ; but the orders that are passed may be communicated, because those will be treated as rules. There must be some systematic thing under which one can be transferred from one Department to another, whether you call it by the name of order or by the name of rules. What I want to know is if the rules are not forthcoming, will the orders be forthcoming ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Orders were passed to transfer this particular staff from the Accounts Department to the Operating Branch. I am not aware that any rules were framed stating exactly what the procedure was in connection with such transfers.

ENLISTING OF ARAINS IN THE ARMY.

745. *Mr. H. M. Abdullah : (a) Will Government please state the total population of Arains in India in 1931 ?

(b) Is it a fact that Arains were recruited in the Indian Army in various capacities and rendered meritorious services during the Great War ?

(c) Is it a fact that many members of the tribe have held and are holding commissions in the Army ?

(d) Are Government aware that contrary to instructions contained in the India Army Order, No. 807 of 23rd September, 1924, the Arains are not being enlisted in the Army by recruiting officers ?

(e) How do Government justify the stoppage of Arains in the Army ?

(f) Do Government propose to issue express instructions to the recruiting authorities to enlist Arains ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) 757,603.

(b) They were enlisted in some numbers during the Great War, 12 Noon. but their record is merged in that of the Punjabi Mussalmans of whom they form a sub-class.

(c) I have no definite information.

(d) to (f). There is no restriction on the recruitment of members of this sub-class and Government see no reason to issue any instructions in the matter.

Mr. H. M. Abdullah : Are Government aware that many instances exist when Arains were selected and approved as fit recruits in all respects, but, as soon as they put in Arain as their caste, they were rejected ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : No, Sir ; Government are not aware of that.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the distress of those Quetta merchants who, having lost their goods and property in the earthquake, are unable to meet the claims of their creditors in respect of goods ordered before the earthquake ?

(b) Will Government please state whether they have made any enquiries in this behalf, and, if so, what are the results of such enquiry

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the distress of those Quetta merchants who, having lost their goods and property in the earthquake, are unable to meet the claims of their creditors in respect of goods ordered before the earthquake ?

(b) Will Government please state whether they have made any enquiries in this behalf, and, if so, what are the results of such enquiry in respect of (i) the number of merchants thus affected ; (ii) the volume of their obligations left unsecured as the result of their losses during the earthquake ; and (iii) the nature of the relief deemed adequate and proper for such emergency ?

(c) Do Government contemplate any action, whether by way of ordinary legislation or executive Ordinance, to afford the necessary relief to genuine cases of such distress due to the damage done by the earthquake ? If so, will Government be pleased to state if they would take this House into their confidence before deciding upon the policy in this behalf ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether they themselves have ordered any suspension or remission of Government dues in respect of taxation on Quetta merchants by way of income-tax or customs or any other Central or Local Government taxation ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). No detailed information regarding the number of merchants affected or the extent of the obligations referred to is available to Government but the views of the local authorities in Sind and Baluchistan on the general subject have been obtained. The questions whether relief is necessary and, if so, what form it should take, are now under the urgent consideration of Government. Time will not permit of Government consulting this House, but it is probable that before arriving at a decision they will consult the Committee which is being constituted in pursuance of the statement made by the Honourable the Commerce Member in the course of the debate on Quetta in this House on the 19th September.

(d) No.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if the people of Sind and the Punjab will be consulted with regard to this consultative committee ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : I do not think it arises directly out of this question, and I am not in a position yet to make any statement on the composition of the committee, a matter which is now under consideration.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra : Is this Committee going to be composed of Members of this House or of outsiders ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : That is still under consideration, as I have said, but the intention is that it should consist of both.

Sardar Sant Singh : Are Government considering the desirability of extending the period of limitation, as plaintiffs or defendants, for persons who lost their property in the Quetta earthquake, in order to give them facilities, so that their claims may not be time-barred ?

Mr. J. G. Acheson : That, Sir, is one of the methods which has been suggested for affording relief to these persons. But I may remind the Honourable Member, if he needs any reminding, that a moratorium or an extension of the period of limitation is a very two-edged weapon and will require the most careful consideration before it can be applied. The difficulties are both practical and legal. The suggestion is, however, receiving urgent consideration.

Translation of an article headed "Quetta Earthquake" which appeared in the issue of the "Kistna Patrika" of Masulipatam, dated the 22nd June, 1935.

Though Quetta is a Military Station, all the inhabitants thereof are not military people. There are many Pathans and Hindus living there long since independently unconnected with the military (authorities). Many people who had gone there for purposes of trade or to meet some relatives, from the Punjab and Sindh live there. Quetta being a cool place, many people resort to it during the summer, to enjoy its coolness. It is surprising that when such a place has fallen into the jaws of death, the Government should deny an opportunity to relatives (of the victims) to go and see them and to fellow countrymen (of the victims) to voluntarily render assistance to them. We make bold to say that it is not merely surprising but also very cruel. Any (other) Government in any (other) country would not have imposed such an unnatural ban as this. Quetta town is not the only place that fell under the affliction of the earthquake. More than a hundred villages in its surroundings have been devastated. There is no means to ascertain what assistance is being rendered to the people of those villages. The State of Kalat also has been affected by the disaster. It is regrettable that entry of outsiders into this whole area should be banned. That the military authorities alone can do everything (that requires to be done in the area) is sheer bunkum. About 60,000 people have perished and an area of about 2,000 square miles has become a mass of debris. Houses without number have crumbled. It is not yet possible to estimate how many crores of rupees worth of property lies buried in the debris. What is the meaning in saying that the Military also is sufficient to deal with the catastrophe? This work is not one that can be leisurely done. Much wealth lies buried in the devastated houses; delay will result in its destruction. The rainy season, too, has set in. Timber and other materials of the houses will become soaked and rotten and be of no future use whatsoever. All are not rich. All cannot purchase fresh timber to reconstruct their houses with. * * * Efforts are not yet made to take out all these things. The Government say by way of explanation that owing to bad smell emanating from the rotting corpses in the debris, it is dangerous from the point of view of health to approach them. Why should the bodies lie in the debris till they began to rot? If Relief Organizations from outside had been allowed access into the area, the bodies would not have met with this fate. Who can say how many had been alive in the debris for the first three or four days and perished afterwards for want of rescue? Those who followed the events in connection with the Bihar earthquake are not unaware of cases of people surviving, though they had remained buried under debris for a week or ten days. Owing to procrastination (now in Quetta) till corpses began to rot, the chance of making a search after excavating the debris has been averted. Excavations were undertaken in Bihar throughout the area at once, there having been no ban then. Not even a single soul that was alive, was left out. Not even a single corpse met with the fate of rotting without burial or cremation. * * * Though outsiders had been allowed freely there was not even a single case of looting in Bihar. No property was stolen. Properties were duly handed over to their respective owners. Considering this matter at least, the Government should not have imposed any kind of ban in Quetta. We do not know why the pretexts that had not been put forth in the case of Bihar should be advanced now. It was not argued then (in the case of Bihar) that foodstuffs were not available for outsiders. * * * Outsiders themselves took waggon-loads of foodstuffs, cloth, etc., sufficient to cover their own needs as well as those of the afflicted, to Bihar. The Government (now) argue that outsiders are forbidden to enter, in the interests of health, since corpses have been allowed to remain till they rot. If volunteers had been allowed (into the area) forthwith, there would have been no necessity to put forth this plea. Quetta is not a richer region than Bihar. Looting not having taken place there (Bihar), there is no reason to fear that it might occur here (in Quetta). All the reasons adduced by the Government are similarly untenable. * * * Why has Mahatma's co-operation been rejected? Is it because he would encourage looting or would not observe principles of sanitation, if he went to Quetta? Even His Majesty the King Emperor awarded the Kais-i-hind Medal to him in grateful recognition of his services. Such a lover of (humanitarian) service has been prevented from setting foot in Quetta. What should one say of such an order? Over and above everything, they (the Government) ask in a spirit of taunting why assistance should not be rendered to the people sent away from Quetta. Hospitals have been opened for their benefit in Bombay, Karachi, Lahore, etc., and aid is being rendered to them there in every way. But, strictly speaking, aid is necessary in the region of Quetta and not outside. The houses that have collapsed

"Accusation against the Quetta military by Devaraj! No proper attention given to saving of life; imposition of restriction is wrong!", an article which purports to be reproduction from "S. K." in which Acharya Kripalani, the Congress Secretary, is reported to have made the following observations:

Mr. Devaraj Sethi of the Servants of People's Society, immediately on getting the news regarding the Quetta Earthquake, had proceeded to the devastated area. From there he proceeded to Lahore on the night of the 7th by cart and while he was travelling he wrote to me a letter which will clearly show to everybody what has been going on in Quetta. His letter is as follows:

I met several people in the Indian Military Hospital and talked to them. I had a talk also with those on the race-course. I met some of the authorities and sought to make enquiries. I visited several parts of the city in a lorry and tried to acquaint myself with the situation with a dispassionate mind. Diwan Bahadur Muralidhar saw the A. G. G. yesterday and discussed matters with him for three hours. I met him on his return and ascertained the official view. On the whole, I came to the following conclusion:

- (1) The Government and the military have done wrong in preventing non-official people from entering the devastated area. If these had been permitted, they would have rendered immense help.
- (2) Indifference of the military.—The work of removing the debris should not have been stopped nor the efforts in that direction slackened. I saw a child of three removed alive from under the debris after four days. Pandit Gyanachand has seen a man removed alive from under the debris after four days. If the debris had been removed expeditiously, hundreds of persons could undoubtedly have been rescued, as also property to the value of several lakhs. But the men of the military department were greatly alarmed and they did not pay adequate attention to the saving of life.
- (3) There was no lack of medical relief to the injured, but much more relief could have been given from non-official agencies.
- (4) It is reported that a certain expert of Simla has suggested that Quetta should be closed down for a period of twelve months. This news was published by beat of tom-tom on the race-course. But Diwan Bahadur Muralidhar told me that this had not been finally decided upon. Another friend informed me that the matter will be decided on the 25th. But I think that our prime duty is to agitate for the prompt removal of the debris. This being an extremely hot month in Quetta, there could be no fear of any obnoxious smell. If we should succeed in getting the authorities to agree to the prompt removal of the debris, we shall have done adequate service to the survivors. I think it is absolutely necessary to do this. We should try to achieve this object forthwith by means of concerted action.

Article headed "Lives can even now be saved" which appeared in the issue of the "Free Press Journal" of Bombay, dated the 7th June, 1935.

Bombay, June 6.

The General Secretaries of the Bombay Provincial Congress Committee have sent for publication the following telegram received from Sjt. Jairamdas Daulatram and Acharya Kripalani in regard to Quetta Earthquake Relief measures:

Public relief made impossible.

Public relief at Quetta has become impossible. Military authorities have disallowed entry. Well-known public workers like Sjt. Jamshed Mehta, Ex-Mayor of Karachi, and even title-holders are refused permission although they are prepared to make their own arrangements and not draw on local resources.

Much life and property could have been saved and possible danger of epidemics avoided if adequate labour were imported and public offers for co-operation were accepted.

Whole population including injured has evacuated. Rumours are rife about abandoning excavation and burning city with petrol. All 20,000 lives lie under debris are assumed to be dead only after three days.

Life can be saved even now.

Public feel that even now life and property can be saved if immediate public co-operation from Sind, Punjab and the rest of the country was accepted.

Public meetings in Sind are condemning the attitude of the authorities. They have sent wires to the Secretary to the Viceroy. All possible help to the sick and refugees is being given by public bodies at various stations in Sind.

Lives Can Even Now Be Saved.

Great resentment prevails in non-official and Congress circles in the City over the Government ban on non-official agencies and other public workers from entering Quetta with a view to giving necessary help to the 'Quake victims.

The ban has created a very unhappy situation, the gravity of which is heightened by the receipt of telegrams from influential public workers that a lot of life and property may yet be saved if non-official co-operation is accepted by Government in the relief measures.

Government's defence not impressive.

The Government of India communiqué, justifying the ban, does not appear to have impressed any one, and what is particularly regretted and resented is the fact that even the General Secretaries of the Congress, Acharya Kripalani and Mr. Jairamdas Daulatram, and such tried workers like Dr. Jamshed N. B. Mehta and Sadhu T. L. Vasvani should have been prevented from entering Quetta to organise relief work in the affected areas.

What one cannot understand much less appreciate—is why Government should go out of its way and deliberately prevent non-official agencies, especially the Congress, to rush to the succour of their fellowmen in their dire distress.

Bounden duty.

On an occasion like the present, when a calamity of an unprecedented nature has occurred, it is the bounden duty of Government to explore all avenues of affording relief to the needy, and to that end, exploit every sentiment in the country.

It cannot be said that the Government are unaware of the fact that, just as there are some persons in the country who would like to subscribe only to the Viceroy's Relief Fund and to none other even so there is similarly a large section of the population which would like to subscribe to a Fund started by the Congress or other non-official agency, but may not be willing to pay a pie to the Viceroy's Fund.

Why, it is asked by many, should not this patriotic sentiment in the people be exploited in order to afford adequate relief to the sufferers in the 'Quake area?

The ban is foisted presumably on the plea that Quetta is a military station, and that martial law has been declared in the affected area. This is certainly a hollow plea which does not cut much ice. For, it is common knowledge that, whatever might have been originally intended, several of these so-called military stations, like Quetta, Deolali, etc., have long ceased to be military stations. A large civilian population have settled down there, and their interests cannot be overlooked for any reason.

Civilian elements.

Taking the case of Quetta, Civilians formed about 75 per cent. of the population; and the thousands of relatives and friends of the victims of the recent disaster are naturally anxious that all necessary aid ought to be given to the injured.

Besides, since the whole town is lying buried under debris, even the labour to remove the debris and extricate the living, if any, has got to be imported from outside; but the Government ban comes in the way.

Government's assumption.

Perhaps, Government are under the impression that all those who are caught under the debris are dead. If they are really thinking so, they are sadly mistaken, for, it is not unknown to medical men that human life under such circumstances can last, without even any outside succour, as long as two to three weeks.

The inference.

Under these circumstances, therefore, unless Government realise the gravity of the situation and remove the ban at once, the public should be excused if they draw the inevitable inference that Government do not wish to give a chance to non-official bodies, especially the Congress, to offer direct aid to the sufferers, because such an opportunity would be utilised to strengthen the ties of friendship between the Congress and the people. Besides, the present crisis presents a golden opportunity for the Congress, if allowed, to render humanitarian service to a neighbouring province and thus cement inter-provincial and inter-communal friendship.

Anxious for credits.

The Government attitude, on the other hand, makes one think that they want to monopolise all the credit for themselves in the matter of rendering relief to the sufferers.

For these reasons, the Government ban on entry of private individuals into the 'quake area is resented throughout the country and it is understood that even in the city, a protest meeting may soon be convened to voice public feeling in the matter.

Despite the ban.

Meanwhile, despite the ban, the Congress is not keeping idle and efforts are being made to form an influential All-India Non-official Relief Committee in order to organise relief work.

B. P. C. C. moves.

In this connection it is also learnt that the B. P. C. C. has wired to Babu Rajendra Prasad asking him to announce immediately the personnel of the Non-official Committee. The Congress President, before he proceeded to Poona on Tuesday last after completing his suburban tour, was met at V. T. by local Congressmen and was fully informed of the entire situation as well as of the need for an influential non-official Committee. It appears that Babu Rajendra Prasad agreed with the suggestion and also indicated that if need be, he would himself go to the 'quake area to organise relief work.

Will Government welcome this hand of co-operation from the Congress President or will they stick to their ban?

Article headed "Anomalies of Quetta Relief" which appeared in the issue of the "Free Press Journal" of Bombay in its issue, dated the 9th June, 1935.

Babu Rajendra Prasad has received a reply from the Viceroy explaining the reasons for the ban on non-official relief agencies wishing to proceed to Quetta. "The Government", states the telegram, "have ample resources to deal with the situation in Quetta itself, but those desirous of participating in the relief work can render valuable assistance by helping the refugees evacuated to the Punjab and Sind." Refugees from Quetta, whether in the Punjab or Sind, or indeed wherever else they may be found to be, deserve all the assistance that non-official relief committees can give, and will, we have no doubt, receive it in an abundant measure. But the fact that the needs of the refugees must be looked after elsewhere, is no reason why non-official relief workers should be prevented from proceeding to Quetta. Government say they have ample resources to deal with the situation locally. We can well believe their assertion. But the mere possession of resources is not all that is needed for efficiency in relief operations. The resources must be fairly used, and the public must have the faith that they are being fairly used. The decision of the authorities to virtually seal up the earthquake area with a stringent military cordon, shut out from access to it tried veterans in public service like Babu Rajendra Prasad and Mr. Jamshed Mehta, and to work in the dark rather than in the open, is not calculated to inspire a spirit of trust and confidence in the public mind about happenings in Quetta.

Another point raised in the telegram to the Congress President refers to the peculiar conditions in Quetta. "Conditions in Quetta", we are told, "are very different from those in Behar; every single addition of persons going will add greatly to the difficulties of those who are engaged on relief operations of greater magnitude and danger". We are only too painfully aware of the peculiarity of conditions in Quetta to which pointed reference is made by the Government. But it is a peculiarity which, by its very nature, should have guarded the Government just against the kind of policy they have been giving effect to, instead of being deemed to provide any justification for it. Quetta was a military station with a mixed population of Europeans and Indians. The Government have not, by their past, succeeded in creating the impression that they can be trusted to give equality of treatment, in adversity or prosperity, to Indians and Europeans alike. Already, there is visible a striking disparity in the official arrangements made for the transport of European refugees and the publication of information about European dead, as compared with the manner in which the Indians victims of the disaster have been, and are being, handled. The hand of God in the earthquake has not apparently cut across the bed-rock of racialism on which British rule rests, and helped it to transfer its moorings to fresh values based on broad humanitarian considerations. The interests of the heirs of the civil Indian population that died at Quetta require to be watched by guardians in whom the latter can repose some trust, guardians better able to impart a human touch to their mission than military authorities can ever hope to do. As regards the difficulties of those engaged on relief operations, it is hardly decent for the Government to assume that men like Babu Rajendra Prasad and Mr. Jamshed Mehta are incapable of appreciating them, or capable of adding to them. The ordinary common sense of people cannot be bamboozled by these unconvincing official explanations. We can only conclude that the Government do not want to allow the Congress and allied public institutions to establish by solid work in Baluchistan the sort of prestige they won by their labours of love for the people of Behar. Humanity is evidently being sacrificed to misdirected Frontier policy.

Translation of an editorial note headed "Bribery" which appeared in the issue of the "Rozenama-e-Khilafat", dated the 7th June, 1935.

Bribery, generally speaking, is rampant in India. No work can be done unless and until a bribe is offered. Particularly the condition prevailing in courts and offices is very peculiar. There, a bribe has to be offered at every step. If any one is lacking even a little in this respect, the work which is already completed, is spoilt, nay, the office men further spoil his work by way of warning and punishment so that in future no one may display such improper courage. It is necessary that he should, on entering the compound (of the court), have some money in his pocket, and that money should not have any connection whatsoever with any "reserve fund", but that it should pertain to the "current account". Without this it is impossible to expect any kind of success (there).

The bribery referred to, about which the above complaint has been made, is a general calamity from which a person concerned is neither immune nor can remain immune. Therefore no course is left except to put up with it and to offer prayers (for the betterment of affairs). The Indians are so much used to it that now they have become accustomed to it. Unless and until they themselves offer a bribe, they cannot sit still, and as soon as they offer a bribe, their uneasiness is set at rest. Then they do not feel any anxiety about the future of their work. This state of things is extremely condemnable (and) the sooner it is put a stop to the better it would be. The earthquake that visited Quetta and the way in which a beautiful city was converted into ruins in a moment and 70 per cent. of its population were killed was an admonitory example of the transitoriness of human life. Those, who possessed insight, ought to have taken a lesson from this calamity and tried to improve their manner of living. But man's nature is a strange thing indeed; he does not care a bit for these earthly and heavenly calamities but remains busy pursuing his wicked designs. What a tyranny it is that on the one hand a terrible earthquake visits Quetta which in a few moments lays waste the whole beauty and the whole population of the city, while on the other, looting by the tribal marauders commences, and Government is compelled to proclaim martial law. What a terrifying spectacle of revolution in human life!

Leave aside this too. The latest reports that have been received surpass all others in their details, and are not only a source of shame for human morality but are a source of shame for humanity itself. The condition of those who could not escape with their lives in the earthquake shock, is already known. Those who were left under the debris are still lying there and very many of them are not only lying under the debris, but are alive and are living in a way that they can convey their voice to others. Since martial law is in force in the city, not only outsiders, but the local people as well, have no permission to do any (rescue) work. All the rights and powers have been entrusted to the military. The military suggestion is this that in order to clear the atmosphere of the city it is essential to set fire (to the debris) which clearly means that those who are lying alive under the debris and dying by slow stages, should be consigned to the flames alive. This report has created general restlessness. The soldiers are taking out the people from under the debris, and from some reports it appears that (they) are rescuing only such persons as are able to pay for their lives in cash. Accordingly bids are given, ranging from Rs. 100 to 1,000, and people are rescued at this rate. We cannot say how far this report is correct, but it has been published in several responsible newspapers. Anyway if this report is correct then it is extremely shameful indeed, for Government as well as for India and also for man's superiority and greatness (over other beings). This tragedy was general in its scope and therefore the sympathy and relief also should have been general. If sympathy is given in return for bribes, then what value will be attached to it? We appeal to Government to contradict this rumour in case it is false; and if, God forbid, it is true, then Government should put a stop to it.

Translation of an article entitled "The Great Duty. The Cry of Pain and the Note of Sympathy", which appeared in the issue of the "Medina of Bijnor", dated the 21st June, 1935.

The hot springs of human eyes are constantly flowing over the devastation and destruction of Quetta. The capacity for suffering and the power of patience and control want to play their part but every sigh of persons steeped in miseries upsets the arrangement of the peace of the soul. India from one end to the other becomes immersed in the wide ocean of pain and anguish. Those who had to depart have departed. The souls of Muslim martyrs have already appeared with proud faces before the will and power of God, but those who are coming from Quetta are bringing with them the lengthy tale of their woes. They declare that God may forbid that any one should behold what they have seen. Hearers tremble even to hear the introduction of the tale. Fear and terror encircle them and the hands restlessly turn towards the ears.

A day is fixed for death and it invites him to death at the destined time. Man also knows and recognizes the present and future of his life. He realises and realises full well that the cup of his life will crash in ninety years if not seventy.

Those who believe in religion and religious tenets and those who do not, those who insist on a day of judgment and those who deny it, all admit that there is a limit to this life and that limit is the final one. But the method of deaths at Quetta was (of a class) altogether apart from any that can come within general (human) conjecture. What could never be thought or dreamt of happened and so suddenly and in such an unexpected manner that the (whole) universe of human life was upset.

Bloody spectacle.

Eyewitnesses have seen that houses large and small, strong buildings and sturdy mansions were lying scattered on the ground not to mention the lowly, the greatest, notables, raises, seths, and high officials were lying on the roads in such a way that there was no one even to cast a glance at them. Infants of two or three years were shedding their last drops of tears on the corpses of their mothers. New and young brides were reciting the dirges of their dreams of enjoyment; not one or two but hundreds of young girls (lit. virgins) were writhing (in agony) on the roads draped in robes dyed with blood. Again thousands of lives were giving reports of their existence from under tons of earth and were surviving in a fruitless expectation of immediate aid. And it would not be strange if souls tenacious of life may still be lamenting the prohibitory orders and gasping for the last breath.

Quetta is the seat of Government and like large cities is divided into many parts. In the south-east there is the Indian population and in the south-west there is the civil lines. Beyond the lines was the cantonment and in between was the Habib Nala which the Europeans called the Thames. In 1888 Mr. Hugh (sic.) prepared its plan and decorated the roads with fruit trees of various sorts brought from Kandhar. Lytton Road, the most beautiful road of India, was prepared and one terminal of it was taken up to the Bolan Pass. The Cantonment was built on 12,492 acres and the Civil on 1,286 acres. Modern Quetta was built before 1882 at a height of 5,500 feet. But the Quetta of 1935 was quite different from that of 1882 in its attractiveness and means of pleasure. In the words of the Viceroy it was another London of this world or a younger brother of London. But what is it today, the last scene of human destruction.

Deplorable Destruction.

Uncontrolled nature has demonstrated its design in Quetta. The will of God has been achieved with all its awe and omnipotence. Now we have to ponder what our duty is. It may not even be our duty but what have we to do for the sake of our lives, property and children as a token of gratitude for (these) blessings.

Duties are of various kinds. Some duties fall to the Government and others to the public. Government has according to its claims and the statements of its department of information discharged its duty. It has been stated that after the earthquake the white soldiers were first to appear in the city in the form of angels. They started immediate aid. The Agent to the Governor General came out accompanied by the military officers and so far as it was humanly possible he met (mitigated) the sufferings with full effort. Medical aid was provided, immediate steps were taken to safeguard health, necessary means of subsistence were supplied and arrangements were made to send the refugees to their homes. In short it was a brilliant achievement of military organisation exhibited at a very critical time and was proof of the fact that all the arrangements were in every way complete and beyond exception. The high-sounding statements regarding the excellence of its arrangements published directly or indirectly by the Government in the press have undoubtedly been framed with great ability and there is no reason why we should hesitate to acknowledge their veracity. We offer heartfelt thanks and feelings of satisfaction for these arrangements. The Government may be foreign, still whatever has been done on its behalf for the people of this country has at least to some extent mitigated the present sufferings and this is certainly not a matter to be overlooked.

The Sin of the Government.

But we are responsible also to the people of the country and cannot ignore public opinion simply on the basis of official statements. The situation is so pathetic that we regard it as a sin to raise any objection merely for the sake of objection. But we must have regard for what has already happened. We see that Government is singing its own praises. There is no important statement in its support. The lips of the wounded coming from Quetta are sealed. But every word of those who have given their statements disregarding all considerations (of expediency) is so saturated with grief that we can in no way regard it as false.

The most important objection against Government is that it took an important and dangerous responsibility on its weak shoulders alone. It not only did not take any help from the public but it spurned every kind of aid and the arguments put forward for this are so absurd that no Government in the world has ever advanced such arguments. On the basis of the experiences of Behar we believe that many thousands of lives for which it was possible to survive were sacrificed simply for this policy. We know full well why this severity of prohibition made its appearance. We know that (consideration of) Frontier policy and military secrets possess special importance. But no matter in the world can be more important than life or more valuable than human blood. People are not so aggrieved about property but those who have left their relatives buried are shedding tears of blood simply for the thought that if they had obtained outside aid within a few days many lives would have been saved. The Government troops no doubt did not spare themselves. The officials also worked very wholeheartedly. But (both) official and non-official reports have admitted the relentless all embracing nature of the situation (devastation) and it has been acknowledged that the devastation was so vast that it transcends the bounds of imagination.

Corroborative Statements.

A statement to which we attach semi-official importance bears the following words:—"It is beyond human power to restore Quetta after the manner in which it has been destroyed by the earthquake". Was it not a colossal blunder to deprive the public of aid at the time of such terrible suffering and does this not prove that numberless lives (people) were buried alive simply because ordinary helping angels could not come to their aid like the military angels. The earthquake area was 130 miles long by 25 miles broad. Public aid was certainly needed in such a wide area. Government could under its laws give an ordered shape to this aid. It could impose restrictions. But it was not justified in its prohibitory orders.

The wounded and sufferers who gave their statements on June 11 to press correspondents of Punjab have with writhing hearts revealed the fact that if digging is not delayed, live people can still be found under the debris. As live people were found so long as the digging continued, this statement appears to be reasonable and worthy of consideration.

Mr. T. R. Bhasin who went to do relief work on behalf of the Red Cross Society says: The prohibition of digging is aggravating the doubts and suspicions of the public. People believe that many are still alive. This view of theirs is correct because many persons were taken out (alive) from under the debris after four or five days. If the army had allowed the public to dig under its superintendence (lit. organization) many lives would have been saved.

Dr. Muhammad Ismail, Medical Officer of the Nawab of Kalat, has also admitted in his statement of June 11, that if digging is not delayed, live people can still be found under the debris.

Lala Munshi Ram Jain who went to Quetta with the Military Relief Party also says: The Government has made a grievous mistake in issuing prohibitory orders against relief parties. If they had been allowed to proceed there, thousands of lives would have been saved.

In the presence of these statements what answer can Government give to these survivors who regard it to be more responsible than natural calamity for the death of their countless relatives. All the excellences of Government are admitted, but this single mistake is so colossal that it can in no way be wiped off the history of the destruction of Quetta. Government can make no amends for it but it can certainly lessen the unrest in public opinion from another standpoint by an immediate change in its policy.

Protection of Property.

Another result of the prohibitory policy of the Government is that the ruined persons are anxious about their belongings. Most of the survivors are empty-handed and lack the ordinary necessities of life. They complain that the military guards did not allow them to take away their belongings and thus the future of their lives is dark and they have not got even a piece.

May be that the military scheme may be inspired by honest motives and without it discipline could not be maintained but we hear that the sufferers are not satisfied with the conduct of the military guards and they are to a great extent expressing despair regarding (the recovery of) their property. We may trust to the wisdom of the military officials in this respect but the future alone will show how far the ordinary military guards have justified this trust. We desire that the people should be assured by means of unofficial communiqué and they should be told that there are no grounds for such doubts and suspicions regarding the military organization (administration). This announcement should be made with full responsibility so that those whose wealth is buried may be finally satisfied. We have before us the Simla Communiqué of June 14 in which the Government of India has assured the owners of property. This is the first communiqué of the Government of India which is somewhat detailed and can satisfy the public. We hope that after short intervals Government will continue to publish its proposals in this manner and will discharge this great duty of its, which devolves on it morally and legally.

In this connection, there is the next problem of relief for those who have left Quetta leaving their property buried there. It is duty of both the Government and the public to provide for the immediate needs of these people. The first work is to instruct the District officials to prepare lists of them. The second work should be to render them immediate help out of the Viceroy's Earthquake Fund and to submit reports to Government about their goods, property and future and if official rules permit means should be provided for their aid in future.

Translation of an article headed "Horripilating stories of the atrocities of the military" which appeared in the issue of the "Vikas" of Saharanpur, dated 16th June, 1935.

On inquiry from the earthquake sufferers it was found that their greatest grievance was about the treatment of the military. The representative of the Arjun (Delhi) has in his lengthy article mentioned several instances of this kind. Two boys twelve or fourteen years old said that the military wounded by shots those who refused to leave Quetta. One old woman said that she was forcibly removed by soldiers while she was sitting weeping over the debris of her house, under which the whole family was buried. A girl said that she had come to her husband's place a week before. In the earthquake her husband was seriously injured, but she was not allowed to see him for the last time and was forcibly sent away to the railway station.

The husband of a woman died and her twenty-five years old son was buried under the debris. He was alive and was crying to his mother to take him out and give him water. She was trying to take him out when she was driven away by the soldiers. She was crying that she was not so much sorry for her dead husband as for her son buried alive. These instances place before us the highly diabolical nature of the military administration. It is the height of injustice to order any body to go out of Quetta who has any wounded relation lying in the hospital or half buried in the debris but alive.

Several men coming from Quetta told the representative of the Vikas at the Saharanpur railway station that the military forcibly took away what little money they could secure from the ruins of their houses. Reports have been received of several women being deprived of their ornaments. Those who returned from Quetta generally complained that if outside help had been accepted hundreds and thousands of lives could have been saved but the Government in the interest of the military did not allow any body to go there in order to prevent the military from coming into contact with the general public and specially the nationalist party. In this manner many lives were lost.

Translation of an article headed "The distressed Indians and Europeans deplorable discrimination" which appeared in the issue of the "Tej", dated the 18th June, 1935.

In the course of the leading article under the caption "The distressed Indians and Europeans deplorable discrimination", the editor remarks that one cannot blame nature for the havoc wrought by it. But what is to be seen is whether every possible effort is being made to alleviate the sufferings of the Quetta victims. But closing the door to public relief, the Government have taken upon themselves the entire responsibility of helping thousands of victims. The protection of all the property which is lying buried under the debris has also devolved upon the Government and it is to be seen whether the authorities can satisfactorily discharge this responsibility. Proceeding the editor observes that most of the refugees who were extricated from under the debris have narrated different stories of relief work by the military, which are so grim that even if a word of them is accepted as true, it is sufficient to nullify the benevolent aspect of all the relief work done by the Government. It has been stated for instance that most of the military soldiers demanded the price of saving the lives of those buried under the debris, and they realised it as far as they could. It is said that many women were thus obliged to hand them over their ornaments. It is also alleged that in certain places women and girls were subjected to immoral treatment. To usurp what is left of the property otherwise totally destroyed and to violate chastity under the pretence of relief work are acts of ruthlessness and wickedness. The editor is not prepared to believe for a moment that such acts can be committed in the presence of responsible officers nor in the absence of authentic verification does he think it justifiable to presume that the serious allegations which are being brought against the military soldiers are correct. But the complaints made by the refugees cannot but influence the sentiments of the public. The Government should give the assurance that during the relief operations which are expected to last longer no opportunity would be given to the military to indulge in any kind of improper act. Another question which arises is the manner in which the relief fund started by H. E. the Viceroy would be expended. The victims include both the Indians and the Europeans and the number of the latter is quite insignificant as compared to the former. Moreover, the Indians have suffered heavy losses in property whereas the Europeans were only temporarily residents of Quetta and therefore the loss of property sustained by them is proportionately less. The treatment offered to the Indian and European victims contains a tinge of racial discrimination. First class berths were provided to the European victims and the proposal of giving them relief on a vast scale and having them in bungalows at Simla, is under consideration. On the other hand the poor Indians, and even the rich who have been rendered destitute are being evacuated in trains after trains to Lahore and Karachi. Their future is quite uncertain. The deplorable distinction which has so far been witnessed is not a happy augury. If the Government want recognition of their hard and onerous work in Quetta, then they shall have to prove that their sole care are not the Europeans, but also the Indians.

Translation of an article headed "The Congress and the Quetta Relief, the Government should realise their responsibility" which appeared in the issue of the "Tej" of Delhi, dated the 14th June, 1935.

In the course of the leading article under the caption "The Congress and the Quetta Relief, the Government should realise their responsibility", the editor remarks that the latest news received from Quetta confirm the opinion of the President of the Congress that even after several days some of the people buried under the debris can be extricated alive. A report goes to show that an infant was dug alive after six days, and similar was the case with a Sikh. These are the incidents which have come to light, and one cannot say how many more living souls still confined under the debris would leave their bodies simply because salvage operations have been suspended. The editor would not characterise the suspension of excavations as analogous to abetment of murder, which is a very serious offence, because attributing such an offence to the Government would mean discrediting the very useful and praiseworthy acts being done by the Government in connection with relief work in Quetta, but at the same time he has the right to enquire in what term except that of abetment to murder can the loss of life which is likely to be due to the suspension of salvage operations in Quetta, be described, and who has to be held responsible for it. If the statement of Acharya Kripalani that salvage operations were suspended not on account of the fear of the outbreak of any epidemic diseases, but on account of the want of workers, is correct, the Government by closing the door to relief by the public has not committed simply a mistake, but an inhuman act. Referring to the measures being taken by the Congress for the relief of the refugees, the editor hopes that any step which Babu Rajendra Prasad would take in this direction in consultation with Mr. Gandhi would have the support of the public. He would insist upon the Government to realise their responsibility even now by giving an opportunity to public organisations and leaders to assist them in relief operations.

Translation of an article which appeared in the issue of the "Qaumi Gazette" of Delhi, dated the 11th June, 1935.

In the course of a news item entitled "Piles of dead bodies are being burnt with petrol", an account of an interview of a press representative with a woman survivor passing through Lahore is published, to the effect that many dead bodies are still lying buried under the debris, and there is no one to extricate them. The people lying buried under the debris are crying for help, but no one listens to them. Moans are being heard from all sides there. Most of the injured are still there. Dead bodies are collected in heaps and burnt with petrol, and no distinction is made between the Hindus and Muslims.

Translation of an article which appeared in the issue of the "Arjun" of Delhi, dated the 4th June, 1935.

Commenting upon the Quetta earthquake, the editor in the course of the leading article remarks that in view of the difficult situation with which the authorities are faced at Quetta, uncertainty about the number of casualties is only natural, but what is deplorable is the indifference of the authorities towards Indian lives. From the manner in which reports are being published, it appears that the surviving officials of Quetta have a greater concern for the lives of the British than of the Indians. Not only the exact number but even the names of the British who have either been killed or injured are being published from the very first day, but on the other hand with one or two exceptions, not only the names of Indian victims have been omitted, but their number has also been roughly estimated. Though on account of the overwhelming population of Indians, it is not easy to form an estimate of casualties, yet the doubt that the same efforts have not been made to find out the number of Indian casualties as has been made for the British casualties is not altogether baseless. The authorities could easily give the names of prominent Indian victims like those of the British victims. For instance the names of the five Indian Extra Assistant Commissioners who were killed could easily be available for publication, as also of other prominent Indians, whether killed, injured or surviving in order to relieve the anxiety of thousands of their friends and relatives. Continuing the editor appeals to the Government not to impose any restrictions on non-official relief agencies which may want to proceed to Quetta for the help of the sufferers. The editor also suggests that the Silver Jubilee Fund should be immediately diverted to the relief of the victims, and hopes that nothing would give to His Majesty greater satisfaction than such diversion.

Translation of an article which appeared in the issue of the "Arjun" of Delhi, dated the 6th June, 1935.

In the course of the leading article under the caption "The earthquake in Quetta, and relief work, the peculiar policy of the Government", the editor remarks that the policy of the Government in the matter of the relief of the quake-stricken in Quetta is quite unintelligible. It is difficult to understand clearly what do they want to do. On the one hand they do not permit anyone to proceed to Quetta for relief work, and on the other H. E. the Viceroy has started a relief fund for which appeals are being made. At the same time the authorities in Quetta are evacuating all the survivors, and all their efforts are diverted towards clearing the city. When Quetta will thus be evacuated, only ruins will be left there. Who will then receive help? Will the bricks, stones and the ruins be the recipients of help? How will the money which is being contributed to the Viceroy's Relief Fund, be used. There is another problem of vital importance from the point of view of the survivors and relatives of those who have been killed in the disaster. What would become of their property worth lakhs of rupees which is lying buried under the debris. On the one hand they have been stricken by the earthquake and on the other they have been externed from Quetta. It means giving kicks to the dead. Quetta was not inhabited by Government servants only, but also by thousands of persons who were permanently carrying on business there. They had all their property and valuables in Quetta. Where would such people take refuge after being turned out of Quetta? These are the people who are most deserving of help. The question of property and refuge is equally applicable to the wage-earners of the Government. The Government might continue to pay them their past and future wages, but what would become of their immoveable property which is lying buried under the debris, and how would the property of the dead victims of this class be transferred to their relatives. How and when would the kiths and kins of the dead get news about the fate of the latter. These and various other questions are arising out of the peculiar policy of the Government and are intensifying the discontent and anxiety prevalent among the public. Suspicions are being entertained in regard to the intention of even the Government and the authorities, and are being strengthened further by the differential treatment offered to the British and the Indian victims. When people find even the name of every British child, either injured or dead to the utter exclusion of the names of prominent Indians, when they find foreign organizations like the Red Cross Society, etc., at liberty to proceed to Quetta in the face of the refusal to permit any Indian to proceed there, and when they see the injured Indian orphans and others being sent out of Quetta in third class compartments and the British being either retained there comfortably in hospitals or being evacuated by means of aeroplane, they cannot help entertaining strong doubts in the intention of the Government and the authorities. As the Indian public is weak and it lacks unity and is not accustomed to making the deaf ears of the Government hear its voice, there is no possibility of the authorities changing their policy, but the responsible officials of the Government should remember that it is good or the bad treatment offered by them to the people on such occasions which generates anti or pro-Government feelings among the public. They should not, therefore, adopt a narrow minded, but a broad minded attitude in such matters.

Translation of an article which appeared in the issue of the "Arjun", dated the 13th June, 1935.

In the course of the second series of an article under the caption "Dreadful earthquake at Quetta and after. Events related by the sufferers who witnessed them" written by a special correspondent of the "Arjun" it is stated that an old lady was holding a baby who was only seven months old, and when he (the correspondent) enquired as to whose baby was it, she replied that out of the 12 members of her family she was the only one left alive. Being overpowered with grief she began to run hither and thither when she saw that baby lying by the side of its dead mother, she then took it in her arms and thought it to be the last hope of her life. After narrating this the old lady began to weep bitterly.

Referring to the course of events related by a Pandit to the contributor of the article, the correspondent remarks that when he enquired from the Pandit about the welfare of a relative of his (contributor's) he stated that only about eleven hours prior to that eventful night, his (correspondent's relative's) wife came to the Pandit and asked him whether he would give her coaches for coaches from the next day if she wanted to get through the examination. She then returned to her house. At night when he awoke he heard great noise out in the street and he thought that it was storm. But then he felt consecutive shocks and heard the noise of falling buildings. He at once ran towards the door to unchain it, but as it had become bad he could not open the door. After a short moment he found a wall of the verandah coming right down over him. He then managed to get out of the house somehow and saw that it was all dark outside and houses were falling in large number. Camps were pitched in a garden but they were also closed after a short time. The Almighty did not even allow the miserable public of Quetta to bewail for their dead. Pathetic cries and heart rending wailings were heard all round. In that dense darkness of the night the people who escaped from the disaster began to run to and fro. In the morning they saw that all the big houses and lofty buildings were then levelled to the ground and the opulent and the poor were all alike. The occupants of these buildings appeared to have gone into deep slumber and at some places half buried men were seen crying for help. But the majority of them were counting their last breath by seeing that horrible scene of that place, as in spite of their being alive their bodies were engraved under a huge weight of debris and there was no hope of their escaping death. The Pandit himself tried his best to save money but then what could one man do. A mistress of his school was crying for help, but he could not do anything to get her out of the debris. By the rising of the sun, cries of water, water also began to be heard. At that moment batches of heartless Balochis began to invade the earthquake-stricken area in order to carry on loot and plundering them. But then military was posted there and by the evening the whole of the town was cleared of men. It is a heart rending tale to narrate how the mothers, wives and sisters left their children, husbands and brothers in these hilly lands of Quetta which were all dry. On their alighting from trains, the hearts of the externees were full of pathos and grief and they could hardly utter a word.

The contributor cannot say how far the Government was justified in posting military at the earthquake-stricken area. But he has no hesitation to state that every body was quite discontented with the military order. How ruthlessly and harshly the military turned out the bewailing men and women out of the city was on the lips of all and sundry. In this connection it may be said that as the public were not prepared to leave their dead and their property at that place, it was but essential to practice some hardness. But as was stated by the two boys of Shyam Chaurasi, named Madan Gopal and Amrit Lal, it appears that those who refused to vacate the place were fired at by military men. Thus two persons were fired at in their very presence by the military. They were young boys of twelve and fourteen years of age and all their relatives had died in the earthquake. The correctness of such like events has been supported by many of the externees. An old lady stated that all her relatives had succumbed to the earthquake and while sitting over the debris of her ruined house she was shedding tears. But when the soldiers saw her sitting there they forcibly removed her from that place. The grievance of the majority of the externees was that they were forced to leave their relatives helplessly buried under the debris but who were still alive and no arrangements were made afterwards even to excavate them. The British soldiers not only gave no help to the excavation of the living, but at the same time put hinderance at many places as well. There is no doubt about it that many soldiers helped in bringing out these living persons buried under debris, but then the actions of many others were not only deplorable but were inhuman as well. Among the different complaints heard by the correspondent, it was said that some wicked persons even took off the jewellery of those ladies who were breathing their last. Some soldiers demanded money in lieu of the help they rendered. Two Muhammadans of Sialkot related to him (the contributor) many similar events. It is true that such like inhuman and brutal deeds were not common, but if they are true, then it is a great blot on the Army Department and the military order at Quetta. From what the correspondent has actually heard, he has come to the conclusion that though the official communiques and telegrams of the Associated Press have tried to white-wash all these complaints yet he would say that great carelessness has been observed in unearthing the alive from under the debris and so great sin has been committed against the humanity. If there were not sufficient men, then men from outside should have been allowed to go there and work. He (the correspondent) fully believed that if the Government would have shown a bit more sympathy, and would have allowed non-official relief parties to proceed to Quetta, then thousands of lives would have been saved in a few days. It is rather difficult to believe that the august Government would have proved incapable of arranging for food, etc., for a thousand or more men who would have gone there for relief work. It is opined by all those who have come from Quetta and others that the Government has given preference to the points of military importance to human feelings. It was wrong to say that the Government were afraid of an aggression from Afghanistan, etc. The real thing is that the military mind is always stubborn and it did not want that a cantonment should be opened to the public. It is for this reason that the Government sealed the lives of thirty-four thousand persons who are dead, and their property worth crores of rupees within the military walls at Quetta.

Translation of an article which appeared in the issue of the "Arjun" of Delhi, dated the 14th June, 1935.

In the course of an article under the caption "The aftermath of the terrible earthquake at Quetta, incidents witnessed and heard by the sufferers", the representative of the Arjun in continuation of the previous article remarks that the wife of one Sardar Ram Singh of Amritsar has returned from Quetta as a widow. She alleges that her young son Prem Singh aged 24½ years remained crying out to her for help from underneath the debris for two days, but being unable to remove the fallen bricks, etc., and thus to rescue him she made repeated entreaties to the soldiers to extricate him, but all of them replied that they had no orders to excavate. The poor mother then received orders from the British regiment to leave the place, and in great agony she was separated from her only son. She is not so sorry for the death of her husband and other relatives as she is for having left her son buried alive in the grave. Similar stories are related by several refugees. It is also said that whenever any one got some of his articles and the military soldiers suspected them to contain some money or ornaments, they at once made the owners to return it at the point of the bayonet, enquiring as to what proof they possessed to its ownership. If some articles had to be returned in this manner, the question arises as to where have such things gone—whether in the pockets of the military soldiers or in deposit somewhere. It is also being complained that the Indian refugees in the camp were given only two loaves or some gram each, while there was an ample supply of tinned food for the Europeans, and they were in every way more comfortable than the Indians. The contributor of the article admits that these statements might be somewhat exaggerated and the authorities had undoubtedly to work under very trying conditions, and omissions were only natural. But what is needed on such occasions is that those in charge of the situation should have deep sympathy with the sufferers. Such a sympathetic attitude cannot be expected from soldiers on account of their natural temperaments. On account of the breakdown of normal arrangements, public volunteers who could really console the sufferers, should have been allowed to proceed to the spot. The Government by refusing access to the servants of the public have committed a great sin against humanity. It often appears in the press how rescue parties muster strong whenever any ship sinks, an aeroplane is lost or some volcano bursts. Several days are spent in tracing out every single individual and corpse, and no rest is known until one is left untraced. Cables and wireless are in motion and aeroplanes are out for search. But twenty six thousand persons fall victims to the earthquake and the public is not even informed how their dead bodies and properties were being disposed off. Criticising the grounds furnished by the authorities in support of the prohibition of the entry of the public into Quetta the contributor observes that what is done is done and the hopes of the survival of the semi-dead should now be given up. The proper arrangements for the survivors and their property can only be made by taking non-official organisations and individuals into confidence. Concluding the contributor suggests the institution of a regular enquiry into the complaints and allegations of the refugees and the punishment of the delinquents, if any.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Honourable Members will remember that the other day the Chair ordered that a certain reply given by the Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan should be expunged from the records as it contained a reflection on this House. On going through the records, however, the Chair finds that this cannot be done without omitting the point of order that was raised and my ruling on that point. The Chair, therefore, allows both the original reply of the Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan and his later reply which he intended to substitute for his first reply to be kept on the record, and the Chair directs that the questions and answers, as they have been recorded, will form part of the proceedings.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I have no doubt that as this was receiving your consideration, it is for that reason that we have not received the record for revision and that it will now be sent to us to see that no mistakes have crept in.

MISCELLANEOUS—contd.

Special Financial Enquiry—General Policy—contd.

Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I desire to state, for the information of the Honourable the Finance Member and the House, that this motion is not a motion of hostility but of intellectual curiosity, a genuine intellectual curiosity, as to how a circle can be squared. The Honourable the Finance Member in interjecting one of the speeches on the Indo-Burma Tribunal's report said, "how to square a circle". I propose to ask that question of him, unless he chooses to follow Euclid and lay down a postulate that a square shall be a circle for this purpose.

Now, Sir, this Committee has been appointed and the terms of reference are reproduced in page 6 of the White Paper circulated to us along with the supplementary demands. It reads like this :

"The Government of India Act, 1935, provides that the allocation of certain resources between Central and Provincial Governments in India shall be settled by an Order-in-Council of which drafts will have been laid before Parliament ; and His Majesty's Government have undertaken that a special enquiry will first be held as to whether they and Parliament may be furnished with an independent review of the financial position of the provinces and the Centre."

That is the first term of reference as I understand it. They want this unfortunate gentleman Sir Otto Niemeyer to perform many impossible tasks, the first of which is to give an independent review of the financial position of the provinces and the Centre. The second task is to offer "technical advice upon these financial questions which have to be determined by an Order-in-Council".

Then the formal terms of reference begin :

"To make recommendations to His Majesty's Government, after reviewing the present and prospective budgetary positions of the Government of India and of the Governments of the Provinces, on matters which under sections 138 (1) and (2), 140 (2) and 142 of the Government of India Act, 1935, have to be prescribed or determined by His Majesty in Council (subject to the approval of both Houses of Parliament) and on any ancillary matters arising out of the financial adjustments regarding which His Majesty's Government may desire a report."

I do not envy this gentleman this task. I think his terms of reference are wide and confusing enough, and His Majesty's Government keep a reservation. They may ask him to report on any matters which may arise out of these financial adjustments. Now, Sir, my first point is that the reference, if it is to be necessary statutorily, is too limited in its scope. I invite the attention of the House to the relevant sections of the Government of India Act, 1935. Those provisions begin with section 136. Section 136 by itself is merely a definition, and, therefore, there is no need to refer this to this Commission. But I should like to know why section 137 is not referred to this Commission. Section 137 says :

"Duties in respect of succession to property other than agricultural land, such stamp duties as are mentioned in the Federal Legislative List, terminal taxes on goods or passengers carried by railway, or air, and taxes on railway fares and freights, shall be levied and collected by the Federation, but the net proceeds in any financial year of any such duty or tax, except in so far as those proceeds represent proceeds attributable to Chief Commissioners' Provinces, shall not form part of the revenue of the Federation, but shall be assigned to the Provinces and to the Federated States, if any, within which that duty or tax is leviable in that year, and shall be distributed among the Provinces and those States in accordance with such principles of distribution as may be formulated by Act of the Federal Legislature :

Provided that the Federal Legislature may at any time increase any of the said duties or taxes by a surcharge for Federal purposes and the whole proceeds of any such surcharge shall form part of the revenue of the Federation."

I ask whether the future financial position of the Federation and the provinces can be determined with any accuracy, if this section is not referred to this Commissioner.

[Mr. S. Satyamurti.]

Then, I see that section 138 (1) and 138 (2) are referred to the Commissioner. I have no quarrel with that ; but I should like to know why section 138 (3) is not referred to the Commissioner. That sub-section says :

"Where an Act of the Federal Legislature imposes a surcharge for Federal purposes under this section, the Act shall provide for the payment by each Federated State in which taxes on income are not leviable by the Federation of a contribution to the revenues of the Federation assessed on such basis as may be prescribed with a view to securing that the contribution shall be the equivalent, as near as may be, of the net proceeds which it is estimated would result from the surcharge if it were leviable in that State and the State shall become liable to pay that contribution accordingly."

This sub-section and subsequent two or three sections in which the financial inter-relation between the States and the Federation comes in are wholly left out of the purview of this inquiry. I quite recognise that the States are very sensitive, and the Federation is supposed to function, without the States contributing anything worth contributing, but getting all that they can out of the Federation ; and, therefore, very naturally, His Majesty's Government being anxious to force the Federation at any cost do not want Sir Otto Niemeyer to have anything to do with the Indian States. But I should like to know from the Honourable the Finance Member, if he is satisfied that the future financial position of the Federation can be given in any accurate terms, without examining the future prospective contributions either from the Federation to the States or from the States to the Federation ; and yet this section 138 (3) has not been referred to this Commissioner.

Then we have section 139. I only want to say one word on that. In the earlier committees, the Percy Committee and the Peel Committee which went into Federal finance, a great deal was said of the possibility of a corporation tax. But with one stroke of the pen, 139 (1) says :

"Corporation tax shall not be levied by the Federation in any Federated State until ten years have elapsed from the establishment of the Federation."

I suppose if the Federation survives ten years' time, then they can have it.

Next, I should like to know why section 140 (1) is not referred to this Commissioner. You will notice that section 140 (2) is so referred. Section 140 (1) says :

"Duties on salt, Federal duties of excise and export duties shall be levied and collected by the Federation, but, if an Act of the Federal Legislature so provides, there shall be paid out of the revenues of the Federation to the Provinces and to the Federated States, if any, to which the Act imposing the duty extends, sums equivalent to the whole or any part of the net proceeds of that duty, and those sums shall be distributed among the Provinces and those States in accordance with such principles of distribution as may be formulated by the Act."

We are supposed to have an inquiry into the financial adjustments between the Federation and the provinces and the States, and yet levying them and the manner of distribution are not referred to this Commissioner. What is the acrobatic feat this Commissioner is going to perform ? He is like a horse with both eyes blinded and yet asked to run a race. I do not see why section 140 (1) is not referred to him, but curiously enough section 140 (2) is referred to him that simply says :

"Notwithstanding anything in the preceding sub-section (He must not look at that sub-section !) one half or such greater proportion, as His Majesty in Council may determine, of the net proceeds in each year of any export duty on jute or jute products shall not form part of the revenues of the Federation, but shall be assigned to the Provinces or Federated States in which jute is grown in proportion to the respective amounts of jute grown therein."

I asked a question of the Honourable the Finance Member the other day, as to whether these terms of reference were settled by His Majesty's Government after consultation with this Government. Consistent with precedent, he refused to tell me. But I think I shall not accuse the Honourable the Finance Member, knowing him as I do to be fairly acute in these matters, to be responsible for this truncated reference of piecemeal sections of the Government of India Act to this unfortunate Commissioner.

Section 142 is referred to the Commissioner : I have no quarrel with that. But sections 145, 146 and 147 are not referred to the Commissioner. Of course, they refer to their Highnesses of the States. Section 145 says :

"There shall be paid to His Majesty by the Federation in each year the sums stated by His Majesty's Representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States to be required, whether on revenue account or otherwise, for the discharge of those functions, including the making of any payments in respect of any customary allowances to members of the family or servants of any former Ruler of any territories in India."

How, is this Federation's financial position to be decided by this Commissioner, if he cannot consider within the scope of the terms of reference what may be asked by His Majesty's Representative, to wit, the Viceroy, to be paid by way of these customary allowances, etc. ? Then section 146 says :

"All cash contributions and payments in respect of loans and other payments due from or by any Indian State which, if this Act had not been passed, would have formed part of the revenues of India, shall be received by His Majesty, and shall, if His Majesty has so directed, be placed at the disposal of the Federation, but nothing in this Act shall derogate from the right of His Majesty, if he thinks fit, so to do, to remit at any time the whole or any part of any such contributions or payments."

Undoubtedly, the Government of India today gets payments to a considerable extent for various purposes from these States. This section says that it will not hereafter go to the Federation : it will go to the Crown, and the Crown may assign so much of it or so little of it as it pleases to the Federation, and the Crown may dispense with the whole or any part of these contributions. What is the financial position of the Federation going to be ?

Section 147 (1) says :

"Subject to the provisions of sub-section (3) of this section, His Majesty may, in signifying his acceptance of the Instrument of Accession of a State, agree to remit over a period not exceeding twenty years from the date of the accession of the State to the Federation any cash contributions payable by that State."

That also goes. But all these matters are outside the scope of the terms of reference of this Commissioner.

[Mr. S. Satyamurti.]

Then this Act of Parliament also provides in one of the later sections—section 310—for His Majesty's Government playing deputy Providence to this Federation. Section 310 says:

"Whereas difficulties may arise in relation to the transition from the provisions of the Government of India Act to the provisions of this Act, and in relation to the transition from the provisions of Part XIII of this Act to the provisions of Part II of this Act.....His Majesty may by Order in Council.....make with respect to a limited period so specified such temporary provision as he thinks fit for ensuring, that while the transition is being effected and during the period immediately following it, there are available to all governments in India and Burma sufficient revenues to enable the business of those governments to be carried on; and make such other temporary provisions, etc., etc."

I congratulate His Majesty's Government on having this kind of Midas' touch, that they are going to provide somehow or other for all Governments in India and Burma sufficient revenues to enable the business of those Governments to be carried on. But that is not referred to Sir Otto Niemeyer.

Then, Sir, let us see exactly, apart from the sections of the Act, what the financial effects are, grim and ugly as they are, according to the authorities most competent to pronounce on these matters. The Joint Parliamentary Committee, Sir, who inquired into this matter went into this question of finances very carefully, and at page 160 of their Report they say this. Budget Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure of Central and Provincial Governments in 1933-34. Total net revenue for the Central Government they put down at 7.16 crores, including Nil under Railways, unlike the Percy Committee who put down five crores, and the expenditure they put down at 77.91 crores, leaving a very small balance. As regards the provincial revenues, they say that the total revenue will be 77.91 crores, and the expenditure will be 79.78 crores,—a deficit. Having said this, they go on to point out this:

"Both Centre and Provinces have, however, been severely affected by the world economic depression"—a blessed phrase which covers all sins of all Governments; if anything goes wrong anywhere, you put it down to the world economic depression.—"and the financial position of both has been severely strained. Rates of taxation have had to be increased in all directions, and every department of Government has had to submit to retrenchment; but the way in which the strain has been borne is a tribute to the essential soundness of the present financial system. Past experience of the existing system leads to two conclusions on which there is general agreement: (a) that there are a few Provinces where the available sources of revenue are never likely to be sufficient to meet any reasonable standard of expenditure."

Here, Sir, I would make one amendment, that there is no province in India where the available sources of revenue, under the present system, are ever likely to be sufficient to meet any reasonable standard of expenditure of a civilized Government. And (b) "that the existing division of heads of revenue between Centre and Provinces leaves the Centre with an undue share of those heads which respond most readily to an improvement in economic conditions". I differ from that conclusion. As regards the Central Revenues, today, Railways which were intended to give five crores a year are rapidly running towards an economic precipice.

Then, Sir, as for Customs, the moment your gold exports cease or even show a serious sign of decrease, in spite of the facile optimism of the Honourable the Finance Member, he will find the customs revenue falling heavily. As for Income-tax, it is the next biggest source of revenue of the Central Government, and yet all Provincial Governments and all expert committees have got one common nefarious purpose of pocketing at least 50 per cent. of that for the provinces. There is not one Committee which has not laid its unholy hand on this source of revenue.

As for salt and opium, they are small heads of revenue. As for Post and Telegraphs, they are a department which we may hope one day to be run on an economic basis; but I am reflecting popular opinion, both inside and outside this House, when I say that, whatever saving there is in that department, must go first and foremost to the reduction of the high postal rates. Therefore, I do not see how the Government of India can ever hope to balance their budgets, unless they shut their eyes to the future and say sufficient unto the day is the deficit thereof.

Then, the Joint Parliamentary Committee also says this:

"There is little doubt that, from the economic point of view, it is desirable that the Provinces should, if it is practicable, share in the proceeds of taxes on income."

Then, Sir, in para. 255, however, they seem to realise the difficulties in this proposed distribution of income-tax.

"It must be admitted that the White Paper proposals for dealing with taxes on income present many difficulties, but the problem does not admit of any facile solution, and, except for the suggestion made above, we do not ourselves feel able to propose an improved scheme. We should add that the actual method of distribution between the provinces of any share in the taxes on income is a technical problem of some complexity, and we do not think that it is part of our duty to suggest a detailed scheme."

They left it there. They made one suggestion, however, in para. 258, and it is this:

"The White Paper proposes that the Provinces should have exclusive power to impose taxes on agricultural incomes, which are not at present subject to income-tax. We approve this proposal."

I do not know, Sir, if that is one of the terms of reference to Sir Otto Niemeyer's Committee. I am afraid not. The Government is too cautious in such matters, and will not have the courage to recommend one source of revenue which democratic opinion in this country will heartily support, that is to say, taxing agricultural incomes.....

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member): You will get your chance.

Mr. S. Satyamurti: I said democratic opinion.

Then, Sir, I go on to paragraph 263, in which the question of Indian States and the Federation from the financial point of view is discussed, and they refer to the States' maritime customs, the land customs duties imposed by Indian States, and financial adjustments between the Federation and the States. I tried my best during this Session to draw out the Finance Member on all these matters. Naturally he has preserved his sphinx-like silence. Perhaps, if I had been in his position I would have done the same thing. (Laughter.) But Sir Otto Niemeyer is not treated more fairly. I am not called upon to draw up a financial picture, but he is called upon to do so, and he is not told how many crores are to be paid by the Federation, for getting a uniform customs policy. That is a matter which, I think, is very pertinent to this inquiry, otherwise we will have got no Report worth having. I should be glad to hear from the Finance Member that before Sir Otto Niemeyer starts his inquiry or before he completes his inquiries he will be told exactly how these ticklish questions of customs duties, especially in relation to maritime States, are going to be settled and on what basis.

Then, Sir, in paras. 272 and 273 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, they state their general conclusions :

"The general conclusion, therefore, is that, though not formidable new financial burden would be thrown on the taxpayers of India as a whole as a direct result of the constitutional change proposed, the necessity for giving greater elasticity to provincial resources, the subventions to the deficit provinces and also the separation of Burma, will impose a further strain on the finances at the Centre."

I have made a rough calculation. My conclusion is that it will cost in the neighbourhood of seven crores for this Federation,—the contribution to all deficit provinces, the separation of Burma and the settlement with the Indian States in regard to customs matters,—all these will cost about seven crores. If I am wrong, I shall be glad to be corrected.

Then, Sir, in para. 273 the Joint Parliamentary Committee say this :

"It has been argued in some quarters that constitutional changes should be postponed until the financial horizon is clearer, but the additional difficulties attributable to the change (and such as they are relate mainly to Provincial Autonomy and not to Federation) are but a small part of the financial problem which has in any event to be faced, and is, we hope and believe, in the process of solution." I see no such hope.

And they finally say :

"We do not conceive nor do we understand that it is intended that any expert body could be charged with the duty of deciding whether the position was such that the new Constitution could be inaugurated without thereby aggravating the financial difficulties to a dangerous extent. On this point, we have said that Parliament must at the appropriate time receive a direct assurance from His Majesty's Government."

In answer to one of my questions, the Honourable the Finance Member was pleased to state that Sir Otto Niemeyer's inquiry will form the basis of the assurance which His Majesty's Government will give to Parliament in due course that the new changes can be inaugurated without aggravating the financial difficulties to a dangerous extent. If that is so, I should like to know whether the present terms of reference, strictly limited as they are, are calculated to give either the Commissioner or His Majesty's Government or Parliament the assurance contemplated in this paragraph of the Joint Parliamentary Committee report.

So much for the Joint Parliamentary Committee and its conclusions, but, Mr. President, there was a committee presided over by Earl Percy and that committee went into this matter of Federal finance and I should like to read a few of the conclusions of that report to show to the House how, in some cases, this problem seems to be almost impossible of solution. On page 4 of the Percy Report, we have the federal forecast. That was in 1932, and they come to estimate the total revenue at 84.60 crores. Do you know how?—by putting down five crores as net revenue from the Railways. I do not think the Honourable the Finance Member will differ from me when I say that that five may be on the wrong side very soon. They also put down income-tax at 18 crores, the net being 17 crores 20 lakhs as part of this 84. At a modest estimate, if we give up nine crores of income-tax, 50 per cent. for distribution among the provinces and this five crores of Railways which have already disappeared are taken out, what will remain is 70.60 crores and the total expenditure is 80.10 crores, leaving a deficit of 10 crores. Then they come to provincial finance and they have given the figures on page 5 :

|                   |    |    |    |    |        |
|-------------------|----|----|----|----|--------|
| Madras            | .. | .. | .. | .. | — 20   |
| Bombay            | .. | .. | .. | .. | — 65   |
| Bengal            | .. | .. | .. | .. | — 2,00 |
| United Provinces  | .. | .. | .. | .. | + 25   |
| Punjab            | .. | .. | .. | .. | + 30   |
| Bihar and Orissa  | .. | .. | .. | .. | — 70   |
| Central Provinces | .. | .. | .. | .. | — 17   |
| Assam             | .. | .. | .. | .. | — 65   |

All the minus figures have no asterisks but the plus figures have the asterisks and there is a note below which says : "In estimating for these surpluses, we have adopted the figures placed before us by the Governments concerned". So, they do not take any responsibility for the plus figures. With regard to excise, they give us this warning. We, Congressmen, are pledged to prohibition of alcohol, and, therefore, they say :

"It will, we think, be generally agreed that a Province which deliberately foregoes revenue in this manner cannot fairly ask for special treatment in the distribution of income-tax at the expense of other provinces."

Then, Sir, with regard to expenditure, they themselves lay down that the scope of retrenchment in the provinces is very limited and they conclude :

"We regard it, therefore, as essential that the Government of India and the Local Governments should give this matter their immediate attention and should endeavour to concert measures to secure equilibrium in the provinces during the intervening period. It is hardly necessary to add that our forecast of federal finances depends upon the assumption that the Government of India, too, will find it possible to pursue, in the intervening period, a policy which will not jeopardise the initial federal surplus anticipated by us."

I have already said that this is bound to become a deficit. Then they suggest certain additional sources of revenue for the Federation and the provinces, and I will merely read their conclusions. You will find that the sources are as plentiful as snakes in Iceland ! They begin by saying, referring to the excise on tobacco :

"The difficulties in the way of a federal excise may be overcome in course of time, but it would be unsafe for us to rely on this in the near future."

[Mr. S. Satyamurti.]

Then, they are enthusiastic about excise on matches; but, I think, in this country an excise on matches is bound to be very unpopular, at any rate so far as they are cottage industries. Then they say as regards other excises:

"We do not feel warranted in relying upon the introduction of such measures in the early years of federation."

On Monopolies they say:

"The only new federal monopoly of this kind that has been suggested to us is broadcasting, the revenue from which must be entirely problematical."

Then, as regards commercial stamps, they entertain some hope, but their recommendation is that commercial stamps should not remain a source of Federal revenue. They have some hope of corporation tax, but the Government of India Act has postponed it by at least ten years after the Federation. As for provincial taxes, they say, referring to the taxation of tobacco:

"There is unfortunately no material which would enable us to estimate the yield of any of these forms of taxation. The provincial taxes will take some time to mature, but eventually they may be expected to form at least a very useful additional source of provincial revenue."

As regards succession duties, they say that the facts would not justify reliance on them as a source of revenue in the near future. As regards terminal taxes they say:

"We are not prepared to regard terminal taxes as a normal source of revenue."

As regards taxation of agricultural incomes, they say it may be done but "we are aware of no reliable data for estimating the yield of such taxation", and, therefore, their conclusion is this:

"We have confined ourselves to an examination of new sources, and in this field the results of our survey are not encouraging."

In the federal sphere, the excise on matches is the only tax, and they come to the conclusion that they can then have 7 or 7½ crores as a Federal revenue. I have stated enough as regards the Percy Committee's conclusions on federal and provincial sources of revenue to show that it is impossible for the Federation or the provinces to look in the near future for any considerable addition to their revenues. I have referred already to the proposed distribution of income-tax to the various provinces. The minimum demand is 50 per cent. in some cases, and even 75 per cent. in others and the Peel Committee themselves have stated that so far as customs duties are concerned they are bound to fail, a conclusion with which I entirely agree. There is only one last word that I want to say and that is to draw the attention of the Honourable the Finance Member to the leading article in the Hindu of the 18th September, entitled 'The Financial Enquiry'. The last paragraph reads thus:

"A proper decision on the fixing of the percentage of income-tax to be assigned to the provinces however involves considerations of fundamental importance concerning the trend of Provincial and Central finances in the future and their ultimate relative position under the new constitution. If it is found that under the proposed division of resources and responsibilities, the financial position of the Central Government will become immensely stronger vis-a-vis the Provincial Governments and independently of them as well, then, that will be a justification for assigning a higher percentage of income-tax revenue to the provinces than if it is expected that the finances of the provinces will considerably improve under the reforms. If their difficulty (that is the Government of India) is temporary, then the best way out of the difficulty would be to extend the period during which they might retain the income tax assigned to the provinces, while making the assignment to the provinces on a generous scale. The fact must never be lost sight of that it is the Provinces which are saddled with growing responsibilities and which need growing resources to spend on ever-expanding nation-building activities."

Now, Sir, I do not want to arouse provincial jealousies or the jealousies of the provinces against the Federation. I think the present position is this. Both the Federation and the Provinces are in a parlous financial condition. No doubt this Government won't listen to any advice, but, if it does, it would be well-advised to postpone these costly, unwanted reforms which nobody wants. Now why do you want to square a circle, when nobody wants to square that circle? And, so far as the provinces are concerned, Mr. President, although the Centre may be in a very difficult position, the provinces want as much money as they can get. Today, there is no doubt that all the spending Departments are going to be in the provinces: education, sanitation, public health, village improvement, roads, water supply, etc., and where are they, I ask, going to get the money from? Sir, every province is now taxed to its utmost capacity. There is a feeling here that we Madras are not taxed as much as in other provinces. I say, in the province of my Honourable friend to my right, and in mine, the land tax is the highest. Both the United Provinces and Madras pay the highest land tax; then, in another province, that of Bombay, the income-tax is very high, and then in Bengal, they have the jute tax. Similarly, every province is taxed to the utmost, and I do not think there is any Provincial Government which can dare to propose any increase of taxation. That being so, how are the provinces going to be financed? You say you want this experiment to be carried out. I am not talking politics, I am talking finance: what, I ask, are the Ministers going to do? They cannot touch the salaries of all these officers from top to bottom; their salaries have been protected, and we cannot touch them, and we cannot increase our revenues. What about the provinces, what about the Federation, what about their sources of revenue? These are difficult and delicate problems, and I suggest that a committee like that proposed in this demand consisting of one gentleman, whose terms of reference are restricted, and who is asked to report within three or four months on these intricate problems will lead us nowhere. Sir, the position requires an honest and independent financial inquiry by people who know how this country needs increasing revenues, and how we cannot get that unless there is retrenchment, which, however, is prohibited by the Government of India Act, especially in the scales of salaries of high officials, and unless there is retrenchment in the huge expenditure of defence of this country; and if all these things are kept out, I am afraid the experiment of the Honourable the Finance Member, who is here to justify it, will end exactly, in the same way, in which all such attempts to "square circles" have ended in the past. (Loud Applause.)

Several Honourable Members: I move that the question be now put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved:

"That the demand for a supplementary grant of a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,83,000 in respect of 'Miscellaneous' be reduced by Rs. 100."

[Mr. President.]

The Chair finds that there are similar motions in the names of Dr. Banerjea and Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant, and the Honourable Member, Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant, has also another motion on the same subject, that is, "that the demand be reduced to Re. 1". The Chair would inform him that, if the Honourable Member wishes to move that motion, he can only do so on financial grounds.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant : I do not intend to move it at all, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Dr. Banerjea.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, the question of the financial re-adjustment between the Centre and the Provinces has been under discussion now for seven years. The Simon Commission was the first to investigate it....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Order, order. If the Honourable Member is going to discuss the general financial position of the Government of India and the Provinces on this motion, the Chair thinks he would be going beyond the scope of the motion. Honourable Members have got to restrict themselves to the terms of the motion, that is, the appointment of this Commission and the financial adjustments between the provinces.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : Sir, I will confine my remarks to this particular issue, which, however, is a very narrow one. The matter which will be considered by Sir Otto Niemeyer is a very important one. On the decision of this financial expert will depend the future well-being, not only of the provinces but of the States and the Federation. The questions which are involved in this subject are also of a very complex character, and these questions have baffled the efforts of several Committees and Commissions. Is it, in these circumstances, desirable that questions of such importance and complexity should be referred to the decision of a single person? Sir Otto Niemeyer is a great financial expert, and I have no doubt that he will do his best to come to conclusions which will be satisfactory to all the parties. But two heads, they say, are always better than one, and three heads would perhaps be better than two. (Laughter.) So I suggest that the financial enquiry should be referred to a Committee of three persons, one European and two Indians. There is no lack of talent in India, and there are a great many persons who have studied questions relating to Indian finance in a very thorough-going manner. Therefore, there is no justification for appointing one single person to undertake such an important and complex question. Sir, I do not question the honesty or the ability of Sir Otto Niemeyer, but I think that the terms of reference are extremely restricted. Section 140 (a) should have been referred for expert inquiry. I do not know whether Sir Otto Niemeyer will be entitled to go into the Budget of the Central Government and find out if any retrenchment is possible in that Budget. It is very essential that a real retrenchment should be made in the Central Government's Budget; otherwise, it would be impossible to find adequate funds for the provinces. The great drawback of the financial system in the past has been that there has been a lack of balance and harmony in the finances of the different parts of the country. The Central Government has spent a very large amount of the total resources of the country for its own purposes, and very little of these resources has been left to the Provinces. The time has come when these anomalies should be removed. I am sorry I do not agree with my Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, that section 137 should be referred to the financial expert. This section of the Government of India Act deals with taxes which belong to the Provinces and the States, and no great advantage will ensue by referring this question to an expert.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : Let him have a picture of the whole thing.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : No harm would ensue if he should obtain a picture, but suppose he goes further and suggests that the duties mentioned in this section should be levied immediately. That may place some of the Provincial Governments at a great disadvantage. However, the terms of reference are very narrow and restricted. Further, the procedure suggested is not what it should be. No formal evidence is to be taken; but if this inquiry is to be of a thorough-going character, it is essential that all sections of opinion in India should be entitled to give evidence. It is suggested that evidence may be given through the Local Governments. Why? It is very difficult to understand why public bodies and individuals should be prevented from tendering evidence direct before Sir Otto Niemeyer. Lastly, I suggest that even if it be impossible to change the personnel of the inquiry, the procedure should be made such that the investigation will satisfy all the provinces.

The importance of this inquiry cannot be exaggerated as the future of the new Constitution will depend entirely upon the success or failure of this inquiry. I hope, therefore, that adequate steps will be taken so that the inquiry is made as thorough as possible. It is not yet too late. Unfortunately, the Finance Member's reply the other day was not very convincing. He did not give us any assurance as to the method by which this inquiry will be carried on, nor did he give us any assurance that the report of this Committee will be brought before the Assembly for discussion and adoption. I hope the Finance Member and the Government of India will reconsider this decision in these important matters in order that the future financial relations between the Federation and the provinces may be placed on a very stable and satisfactory footing.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Sir, I think we can unhesitatingly agree with the last speaker's estimate of the importance of this inquiry for the future of India. There is no doubt that it is of vital importance to the future of India, both Centre and the Provinces. Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Satyamurti, showed, I think, what is unusual for him a little inconsistency in the early part of his speech. He, first of all, was inclined to shed tears of pity for Sir Otto Niemeyer at the magnitude of his task, but the latter part of his speech was pretty fully occupied with complaints about the number of things that had been omitted from the terms of reference. He gave a list of 10 or 12 such things. I will deal with the complaints first. On second thought, I think

[Sir James Grigg.]

Then there was another point raised by Dr. Banerjea and I think the substance of his complaint was not really that a Committee of three is better than a Committee of one. I personally disagree with that very violently, but still that is an academic question. But I think the substance of his complaint was that there were not associated with Sir Otto Niemeyer two Indians. I do not wish for one moment to challenge his statement that there are lots of capable Indians in the economic and financial sphere, but is he quite sure that the non-association of Indians directly with this enquiry is such a crime? The essence of the enquiry is that, it has got to be completely impartial and impartial between all the Indian interests concerned. Though my Honourable friend, Pandit Pant, does not agree with this, the moment an Indian is appointed to this enquiry, he either will be, or will be thought to be, a representative of some particular interests, either his Province or his caste.....

Mr. Satyamurti : Then, why do you appoint Indians to the Treasury Benches?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : That is a separate question. Anyhow I do not gather the Honourable Members opposite have ever accused us of impartiality. As I said they will be or will be thought to be representative of some particular interest either their Province or their community or their caste or of some particular economic interest.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : Caste has nothing to do with finance.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : No communalism in finance.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I think the Honourable Member is a little optimistic and on inadequate grounds. In the end directly you start to appoint Indians to this enquiry, you will have to satisfy all shades of Indian public opinion, every single interest will have to be represented. Then the enquiry will cease to be an enquiry and will become a public meeting or a series of public meetings and you will not get one report but twenty reports. I think, on reflection, Honourable Members opposite will come to the conclusion that the Secretary of State has in fact selected that form of enquiry which is best calculated to give fair and expeditious results. Admitting that this is so for the moment and I ask my Honourable friends opposite to admit it for the moment, I can say, though I do not intend or presume to comment on the personal choice that the Secretary of State has made, and can say from a personal knowledge of 20 years of Sir Otto Niemeyer that I do not believe any more impartial or any more capable person could possibly have been found to do this job. (Applause.)

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I beg leave of the House to withdraw my motion.

The motion was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,83,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1936, in respect of 'Miscellaneous'."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras ceded Districts and Chittoor : Non-Muharamadan Rural) : Sir, I want some information on this head as to when the original fund was created and whether it was placed before this House before this fund was created and also the details and purposes for which this amount is intended.

REPORT OF THE TRIBUNAL ON FINANCIAL SETTLEMENT BETWEEN INDIA AND BURMA AFTER SEPARATION.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) : The House will now resume consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir James Grigg as well as the amendments* moved by Messrs. K. L. Gauba, B. Das and Mathuradas Vissanji :

By Mr. B. Das :

By Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji :

"That for the original motion, the following be substituted :

'That the Report be rejected as being inequitable to both India and Burma, and that, in consequence, the Government of India be requested to move the Secretary of State for India, that, in accordance with promises made in this Assembly, the assurances given at the Round Table Conference

Babu Baijnath Bajoria (Marwari Association : Indian Commerce) : Sir, before I proceed to discuss the merits and demerits of the report, there are certain important points which deserve serious consideration. First I would like to ask the Government of India as to what is their idea in bringing this matter before the House for discussion after everything has been decided upon.....

Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadian Urban) : You have to ask your Government.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : I am asking them. It is our Government as well as yours.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : No ; not mine.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) : Order, order.

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : It is just like our Hindi saying :

"Pani peekar jat poochhina."

i.e., a thirsty Brahmin after drinking water from an untouchable asks him what is his caste ? The consideration of the report at this stage, is exactly the same thing. Sir, what is the good of having only an academic discussion on this matter. I ask the Government of India, shall our opinion be duly considered ? Is there any chance, whatsoever, of the suggestions made in this House being accepted and the conclusions arrived at in the report of the Burma Tribunal being amended in any way ? I am afraid the answer will be in the negative. If I intervene in this debate I do so only to record the protest of our Association which I have the honour to represent in this House. The protest that I make is the way in which the Tribunal was appointed. To my mind a great injustice has been done to the whole of India, by not associating Indians with the said Tribunal.

Sir, The Government of India, in paragraph 93 of their Despatch dated the 20th September, 1930, to the Secretary of State for India, realising the extremely difficult issues which would require not only close analysis by experts but also the necessity of holding an even balance between conflicting claims of the two countries, suggested that the problem should be solved by drawing up through mutual co-operation between the two Governments an agreed statement of the case for reference to an "Impartial Tribunal". They could not ignore also one of the main considerations that the public opinion in both the countries should feel satisfied that each of them is being fairly treated in the proposed adjustment. The Sub Committee of the first Round Table Conference on Burma, appreciating the considerations put forward by the Government of India, recommended in their report dated 9th December, 1930, to the first Round Table Conference a proposal that the case about the adjustment after being thoroughly explored by the experts of the two Governments should, in the first place, be placed before the Standing Finance and in the Report of the Joint Select Committee of the British Parliament, the problem of Financial Adjustment between India and Burma be investigated into afresh by another Tribunal, with representatives of both India and Burma thereon, to make recommendations on the question of distributing the Assets and apportioning the Liabilities between the countries affected and concerned, after proper hearing of the case from all the parties concerned, and before final steps are taken in the matter."

[Babu Baijnath Bajoria.]

Committees of the Indian Legislative Assembly and the Burma Legislative Council and that the representatives of the two countries should be associated with the work of the Tribunal. This recommendation of the Burma Sub-Committee was adopted on the 16th January, 1931, by the first Round Table Conference Committee and it was further confirmed by the Round Table Conference at its 8th Plenary Meeting on the 19th January, 1931. The Prime Minister, in his speech on the same day, gave an undertaking regarding Burma to the effect that "the Government will pursue the decisions of the Sub-Committee". In view of these undertakings, the public and the Legislature in India naturally lived under the impression that whenever the question of separation of Burma was settled by the Joint Parliamentary Committee steps would be taken by the Secretary of State for India to act up to the recommendation of the First Round Table Conference to solve this question. But, Sir, nothing of the sort was actually done. Sir, I admit the Honourable Mr. Nixon is a very capable official and placed India's case before the Tribunal, to the best of his abilities but with him should have been associated a couple of Indian financial experts, preferably non-official. Indeed the Government of Burma's case was advocated by three eminent personalities and, therefore, Mr. Nixon was very much handicapped in fighting a lone hand.

The next point on which I wish to record my protest is about the one-sided biased judgment passed against India. Sir, the Tribunal has passed its judgment summarily and I am in thorough agreement with the views of the Federation of the Indian Chambers of Commerce where it has taken exception to the summary decisions of these following points, viz.:

- " (1) Whether the assets and liabilities only of the Central Government should be calculated, or whether all assets and liabilities of all Central and Provincial Governments, constituting India and Burma, should be taken into account ;
- (2) In calculating the liability, whether the liability arising out of Burmese wars should not be assigned wholly to Burma, instead of only in the ratio of 7.5 per cent. ;
- (3) Whether the deficits to the Burman budget contributed to from the general revenues of the Government of India for several years, should or should not be reckoned amongst the liabilities assignable wholly to Burma ;
- (4) Whether the liabilities already liquidated by India from taxes, to which the Burmese contribution was meagre, should or should not be reckoned for this purpose ;
- (5) Whether the valuation of the assets is correct at book value less depreciation ;
- (6) Whether the value of forests at Rs. 12 lakhs represents only the value of Government of India forests or all forests including Burma forests ;
- (7) Whether book-value of New Delhi, military land in Bombay and the list of dead assets (a list, admittedly imperfect), should be regarded as conclusive ;
- (8) Whether the ratio of 7.5 per cent. is a fair ratio, having regard to the greater potentiality for population in Burma, greater forests and mineral wealth, higher standard of life and greater taxable capacity ;
- (9) Whether the net assets to be assumed by Burma in the share of Burma's liability and share of Burma in excess of liability over assets, should remain as a debt from Burma to India, or whether such debt should be assumed by the United Kingdom with a corresponding reduction of liability of Indian Sterling debt ;

- (10) Whether such debt should, if assumed by India, carry a rate of 3-1/4 per cent. which is the Government of India's own borrowing rate today, while the lending rate to States and Provinces is very much higher ;
- (11) Whether it is desirable to convert the amount of total liability assignable to Burma into an annuity of 45 years, or any particular period ;
- (12) Whether the arrangements in respect of the regulations between the monetary systems of India and Burma as agreed between the Governor General in Council and approved of by the Secretary of State, are fair and proper ;
- (13) Whether the position created by the proposed new Burmese coinage in due course and the obligation to retire Indian rupees does not impose on India an unfair liability ; "

The Committee, therefore, lodged their emphatic protest against the gross injustice which has been done to the interests of both the countries generally and India in particular.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member) : What answers does the Federation give to these questions ?

Babu Baijnath Bajoria : The Federation have put these questions and they want that an impartial tribunal should be established to decide these points.

None can deny that the annexation of Burma was made with Indian men and Indian revenues. The whole cost of the Burmese wars was debited to the Indian revenues. Burma has been developed mostly with Indian capital and Indian labour till Burma oil fields were discovered and British capital flowed into Burma. Sir, the separation of Burma is just like separation of a limb from the whole body which the future will prove is neither beneficial to the body nor to the amputated limb. India has sacrificed so much of her revenue resources all these years in developing the country. India has been a very good customer of Burmese products. Indeed India's total average imports from Burma have been 26 crores of rupees annually while India's total average exports to Burma have been only ten crores of rupees annually. The balance of trade has been in Burma's favour to the tune of 16 crores of rupees annually. Sir, it is the Indian consumers of kerosene and petrol who have contributed to the prosperity of the oil fields of Burma. It is the Indian consumers of these articles who have sacrificed so much by having a high duty on imported oils and petrol to give the Burma oil a vast field of sale. But, Sir, I am surprised to find, that in paragraph 60 of the report, no mention is made about the petrol. A sentence in that report is very indicative of the way in which the Tribunal passed its judgment when they came to the figure of 7½ per cent. as the basis of apportionment in spite of the figure of 9½ per cent. suggested by the figures of actual revenue totally collected. The sentence, I shall read from the report :

" An indication, however, of the character and extent of the readjustment involved is furnished by taking the figures relating to four of the most important items in the customs list, viz., cotton, piece-goods, white sugar, steel and kerosene and weighing them on the hypothesis that the domestic product had been subject to an equivalent excise, but making allowance for duties paid on imported materials such as dyestuffs and machinery."

Sir, in this connection of the ratio of apportionment, it will be interesting to note that the ratio worked upon by Sir Walter Leyton was 10 per cent. and, whereas the Howard-Nixon memorandum arrived at a slightly higher ratio but which was never challenged by the Government of Burma in the past. I do not object so much to the general principles laid down by the Tribunal for determining the ratio, but what I do object is the inclusion of such items of asset being taken into consideration as the tributes paid by Indian States. This is a non-economic revenue and this asset is an uncertain quantity owing to the inauguration of the Federation. Sir, in my opinion the ratio should be determined on the basis of Income-tax, customs revenue, spirit and kerosene excise and salt according to their local origin of collection. On this basis we get the following data from the quinquennial average of 1929-30 to 1933-34 :

|                                      | India includingBurma. | Burma only.        |
|--------------------------------------|---------------------------|--------------------|
| 1. Customs (gross) .. .. .           | 38,33,57 thousands.       | 3,17,92 thousands. |
| 2. Income-tax (net) .. .. .          | 17,20,05 Do.              | 1,87,81 Do.        |
| 3. Motor spirit excise .. .. .       | 2,72,31 Do.               | 2,02,94 Do.        |
| 4. Kerosene excise .. .. .           | 2,10,69 Do.               | 1,79,44 Do.        |
| 5. Salt (1925-26 to 1929-30) .. .. . | 5,56,12 Do.               | 32,51 Do.          |
| Total .. .. .                        | 65,92,74 Do.              | 9,20,62 Do.        |

From the above figures it may be conclusively proved that the ratio should be fixed at 13.96, i.e., 14 per cent. instead of the figure of 7½ per cent. as recommended by the Tribunal.

Then, Sir, in the paragraph 63 of the report it is stated as follows :

"It has been argued that the fact that the overwhelming bulk of the military expenditure, amounting to nearly 50 per cent. of the net Central revenue from taxation, is disbursed, by way of pay, pensions, rations, equipment or transport, in India, constitutes a substantial benefit in which Burma has very little share."

This argument is fallacious. In taking into consideration the military expenditure the only point to be considered is whether Burma did get her necessary protection from the Indian Army in times of need. The Indian army is maintained for the peace and tranquillity of the whole of India including Burma and troops are maintained at different centres in different provinces. If any account is to be taken into consideration about the benefits derived by way of pay, pensions, rations, equipment or transport by India, it will have to be done not by way of comparison of the whole of India on the one hand and Burma on the other. The comparison should be made as to the benefits derived under those heads by each of the other provinces and Burma.

Next point which I do not like in the report is about the arrangement of combined working of the currency and the Reserve Bank. Sir, agreement arrived at between the Government of India and the Government of Burma, it is mentioned :

"The Reserve Bank of India will manage the currency and carry on the business of banking in Burma.

The bank will issue distinctive notes which will be legal tender in Burma but not in India, and Indian notes will cease to be legal tender in Burma after a reasonable interval. The Government of Burma will have the right after due notice of issuing distinctive Burman coins.

The agreement is to be terminable on two years' notice by either side with a minimum period of three years from the date of separation. On termination of the agreement, the Government of Burma will be free to sever its connection with the Reserve Bank and to make such arrangements of currency and the control of credit."

When Burma is being separated from India and is being transferred to the Secretary of State for Colonies, I would prefer, if even in these fields of administration a complete separation is effected from the very beginning of the separation so that there may not be any further trouble about adjustment in case of a decision to have for Burma a separate reserve bank and a currency of her own. There is no doubt that within a few years of separation of Burma from India, the question will arise about a separate currency system and, therefore, it is better that Indian currency system and the Reserve Bank should have nothing to do from the very inception of a separate Burma. Sir, within the limited time at my disposal, it is not possible for me to criticise the report at a great length but from what I have stated above, it is apparent to me that the Report is not in the best interests of India and is, therefore, not acceptable to me. I would like that a fresh Tribunal, on the lines suggested by my friend, Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji, should be appointed to impartially arbitrate on this complicated problem. Sir, I support Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji's amendment.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair has received notice of two more amendments, one by Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang, Mr. Husenbhai Laljee and Mr. Essak Sait to Mr. K. L. Gauba's amendment.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang (East Punjab : Muhammadan) : I formally move :

"That in the amendment by Mr. K. L. Gauba to the original motion, the words 'and Burma' be added at the end."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Amendment moved :

"That in the amendment by Mr. K. L. Gauba to the original motion, the words 'and Burma' be added at the end."

This is the same as Mr. B. Das' amendment. Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant has also given notice of an amendment.

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I move :

"That at the end of the motion, the following be added :

'and the same be rejected as, among other reasons, no non-official representatives of India and Burma were associated with the enquiry and inasmuch as the terms of reference were too narrow in that the apportionment of burdens was restricted to India and Burma alone.'

Sir, I am moving this amendment as it represents the consensus of opinion on this side of the House ; otherwise, I for one would have been satisfied even with the amendments that are already included in the order paper. Sir, the questions covered by this motion are of an intricate and technical character. I, however, hope to deal with only the salient points in a common sense manner. Before I do so, Sir, I should express my appreciation of the speech delivered by my Honourable friend, Mr. Nixon. (Hear, hear.) I was particularly impressed by his mastery of the subject and his lucid exposition of an intricate and complex subject. (Loud Applause.) I wish, however, he had not strayed into the political arena. Sir, a political boomerang is a difficult thing to handle, and sometimes it comes back with added force, to a man who is not practised in its use. Moreover, the Honourable the Finance Member is a host by himself (Laughter), and he does not need much in the way of assistance. Sir, Mr. Nixon's fine oration was marred by what he said in respect of non-official opinion. The harmony of his tune was disturbed thereby; Sir, he referred to and laid some emphasis upon the apathy and the indifference of non-officials. Sir, I wish he had not considered it necessary to make any comments of that type. They did not fit in with the theme of his speech, and it would have been much better had he left them alone. Sir, a writer compared an expert to a geometrical line having length without breadth. But such uncanny people are very few, and when they do not find others equally weird with themselves, they get confused and perplexed. Sir, I would not say more about Mr. Nixon's jibes and sneers against non-officials, whether in this House or as members of the Standing Finance Committee or of the various commercial organizations in the country. Sir, I also feel that Mr. Nixon ought not to have taken upon himself the thankless task of offering an apology on behalf of the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State did trample upon solemn undertakings, and no genuine defence can be put forward by anybody; the somersaults that he performed in quick succession one after another, and the way he dealt with the Government of India, were just in accordance with the reputation that he possesses. I was surprised to find, Sir, the Honourable the Finance Member telling us one day that the report of the debate would be sent to the Tribunal and then informing us on the very next day that the matter had been finally disposed of, and the report had been signed! I had thought that, with the much vaunted dawn of Federation in this country, the Government in England would have learnt to behave better and to show greater courtesy for the Government in this country, but we have been disappointed: and if this illustrates the attitude of the British Government, then God save us from the Federation!

[Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant.]

Sir, coming nearer to the subject, I may say at once that I have absolutely no desire to extort even a shell from Burma. I am one of those who feel that good-will between Burma and India is of much greater value, and a factor of much greater weight, and of an essentially more wholesome character, than a few rupees that Burma may be made to part with. (Loud Applause.) I am also prepared to say, Sir, that we, the people of this country, have reason to be thankful to Burma for the courtesy and the spirit of accommodation that has been invariably shown by that ancient race to their neighbours in this vast country, and, above all, I prize their good-will, and I say that whatever arrangements may be brought about, they should be made with the willing consent of Burma; and if Burma is not willing to pay any part of the debt that she may be owing to this country, I am one of those who think that if our country had been independent, we would have voluntarily surrendered the amount that might have been due to us. (Hear, hear.)

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: And bill Great Britain for it!

Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant: The Finance Member asks: "and bill Great Britain for it?" Sir, I say, yes, and I repeat it, and will give him the reasons. Sir, Great Britain is today getting from us at least Rs. 75 crores per year in various forms—that is the minimum amount I am giving—and I think the Honourable the Finance Member will not dispute that. He will also accept that even so late as in the year 1914 the unallocated or the unproductive debt of our country practically did not exist: in fact, the cash balance in hand in 1914 exceeded the amount of the unproductive or uncovered debt in that year, so that if the agents of Great Britain had properly handled affairs, there would have been no unallocated debt today, and neither India nor Burma would have been asked to make any contribution towards any unproductive, unallocated debt. Our present position is mainly due to the "war loans" and the expenditure incurred at the time of the war. It came roughly to about 190 crores! These war debts, with the loss on the sales of silver, and the deficits in the Budgets of the Government of India, for several years in succession after the war, more than account for the present deficit. I say, Sir, that, in these circumstances, it is certainly proper, it is fair, it is but just that England, which has enabled many an embarrassed country, from which she has got no benefit whatsoever, to tide over difficulties, should make us a generous gesture. Sir, what is the present state of affairs in the world? England has refused to honour her bills and has not paid even the symbolical payments that were promised to be made to the United States of America in lieu of the war debt? Other rich countries have similarly evaded payment of their dues. So, in these circumstances, to insist on our shouldering the entire burden of the war debt is unfair. It is a sheer accident that the British liability for the war debt today, in the form of the sterling loan, extends only to the limit of 22 crores. Assume for a moment that the whole of this war debt had been raised in the form of sterling, then what would have been the state of affairs today? According to the accepted policy and practice of all other countries, England would have also extended the benefit of the moratorium to us and in consequence no money would have been claimed or realised from us on account of the war loan at all. I am not making an extravagant claim when I ask the Honourable the Finance Member to represent it to the British Government that it is a sheer accident that the major portion of the war loan to the extent of about 170 crores was raised in the form of rupee loan and not in the form of sterling loan. There is hardly any real difference in character between the two debts. So, I submit that it is but just and equitable that Great Britain should take up this responsibility not because of any pressure on our part but realising the difficulties of the situation and also because it can afford to do so and it would also be in perfect accordance with the present International morality and practice. So, when the Honourable the Finance Member asks me whether England should foot the bill, this is my reply. I hope he will see the reasonableness of it and will work as the servant of India. He has told us more than once that he is here to represent the interests of India, so why should he not join hands with me in making a reasonable, forceful and perfectly legitimate request to England to meet this deficit and to relieve both poor India and Burma of this liability which they are not in a position to meet. Sir, I should like to assure the Honourable the Finance Member that he should not think that my statement that, if India had been free, I would have preferred to surrender even the amount due by Burma than press Burma, is not genuine or sincere. If India had been independent, I would have adopted that attitude because I attach enormous importance to mental attitudes of nations and I also believe in good-will as being a more important and potent factor than base lucre. So, Sir, when I said that, I was expressing my innermost feelings. I may as well ask after all what do we really gain by getting one or two crores more? So long as the fundamentals of the present system remain unchanged, it makes no difference to us whether one or two crores a year come into our lap from another country or not. The Honourable the Finance Member knows that during the last five years he has revised the schedule of taxes in such a way that new taxes have been added to the tune of 48 crores. Well, Sir, when 48 crores a year have been added to our burdens when the country is involved in unprecedented economic depression, could it make, after all, a very great difference if a few thousands were put one way or the other. So long as the system of Government and the finances of this country are ordered by another nation and by other people, it is a mockery to me how a particular adjustment is made between Burma and India. This country is spending at least 15 crores more on the army because the army consists to the tune of one-third of foreigners. If Indians alone were recruited to the army, we would have made a saving of about 15 crores without reducing the strength of the army. Similarly, there are other factors. Even in their new regime 80 per cent. of our finances will be at the arbitrary disposal of the representatives of the British Parliament and the British people. So, what difference will it make to me whether a few thousands are added or are taken away? So long as I am not the master of my household, it is in reality no more than a book transaction and it is immaterial to me that the entries are made in the books. We are no better than helpless victims of an imperialist autocrat. It is just like the common estate of a superior landlord. So far, he treated the whole estate as one and now it suits his convenience, idiosyncrasies or designs it may help the purpose of exploitation here and enterprise in his own country better—whatever may be the reason, he now thinks that it is desirable that the book entries must be placed on a different footing and that there should be two registers instead of one, but all the same he will continue controlling the finances in both countries. It will in reality be in his power to say—I impose these taxes and I withdraw these taxes. It will be for him to say—I spend this amount in this manner and I order that this be not spent in this manner. In these circumstances, what, after all, is the real outcome of this adjustment or of this allotment? So, I submit that so long as there is not a real basic change in the fundamentals of the system of Government and administration in this country, all these arrangements are no more than farcical and hypocritical.

[Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant.]

I am required on this occasion, however, to deal with the report of the Amery Tribunal. It is perhaps of no more than an academic interest. But even as it is, I would perhaps be failing in what is expected of me if I did not make a few observations on this report. Sir, this report is vitiated and utterly unacceptable from whichever point of view one may look at it. An award is the final outcome of three stages. Firstly, you have a tribunal; secondly, investigation and consideration; and, thirdly, the findings and decision. Here in all these three stages the proceedings have been of an erratic and erroneous type. Firstly, taking the constitution itself, the tribunal consisted of gentlemen, men of experiences, but persons who are neither experts in finance nor familiar with the affairs of this country, nor possessed of any judicial acumen. I have known Mr. Amery as a conservative member of the House of Commons and have also read something about him. But this is the first time when I have seen Mr. Amery being pitchforked in a place like this. That is about the constitution.

Now, about the procedure. Sir, there were solemn pledges by the Government that the representatives of India and Burma would be associated with this enquiry. That undertaking found place in the first report of the Burma sub-committee of the Round Table Conference. It was also repeated later. Sir George Schuster gave solemn assurances in this House that the representatives of the Standing Finance Committee would be associated with this tribunal. Then, Sir, there were other occasions when the same facts were again repeated in order to reinforce the assurance that had been previously given. But now we find that not an Indian, whether official or non-official, whether expert or otherwise, was associated with this enquiry at any stage whatsoever. Then the enquiry was so very cryptic that even the Government of India did not know when it started or when it closed. Even they were kept absolutely in the dark. Sir, the British Government and the Government of India have of late uniformly adopted a very fine method for bringing about the advent of Swaraj in this country and it is this. That from every measure and from every step that the Government avowedly take in order to bring the day of the advent of Swaraj nearer every Indian should be excluded because India is fit to be self-governing in their view and because now they have made up their minds to confer complete Swaraj on this country! The method they have adopted for demonstrating their faith in the capacity of the people of this country is really curious! Indians should be excluded from every committee of enquiry connected with this advent of Swaraj in this land! This tribunal, Sir, was one of the illustrations of this principle which seems to be the creed and the guiding principle of the Government of India of today.

Now, we come to the third and final stage, that is the award itself. I submit that the award is wrong and defective on merits. In fact it is no award. It does not give any reasons for the assertions which are included in it. It is no more than a series of dogmatic assertions unsupported and unsubstantiated by any argument or by any facts and figures. I will just make a few remarks as to how the result that has been arrived at is manifestly wrong. Firstly in determining the amount of unallocated liability the tribunal has made material errors. Sir, I think there was no justification for adding forty crores, I think that is roughly the amount on account of redeemed stock and extinguished annuities of railway debt. Mr. Nixon and Sir Henry Howard dealt with that point and both of them also gave a long note explaining their position. Both of them agreed, that considering that this amount had been paid up long before 1924 and the accounts and the figures had since crystallized and become a part of the approved and accepted system for several years, this amount should not be added to the assets. Even Sir Henry Howard agreed with this view ; but in spite of that, the tribunal has added this sum to the assets and has deducted it from the total liability. That, Sir, is entirely wrong. You can proceed only in one of the three ways as Mr. Nixon explained the other day. It might be the historical method, or it might be the creditor and the debtor method, or the 'empirical' method. The tribunal has proceeded more or less on an empirical basis, in accordance with the entries in the technical and other reports of the Government of India. Now, if the tribunal wanted to reopen the question then it ought to have taken up the question of depreciation, and if the amount of depreciation were reopened then I submit the assets of the railways would have dwindled considerably and the uncovered debt would have increased in the same proportion. It is obviously unfair to add 40 crores to the assets without reopening the question of depreciation. Then, I also feel that the tribunal ought not to have saddled India with the debts incurred on account of New Delhi. The mere fact that the liability happened to be earmarked at that time, the debt being raised in the name of New Delhi instead of the amount being paid out of revenue does not make any difference in the nature of the assets. It is not a commercial asset and I think it ought not to have been taken into account at all. I also feel that so far as the dead assets are concerned, these should not be taken into account at all. After all when we find out the number of men at any place, we do not include the dead men there though the word 'men' may be common to both. Dead assets are not assets at all. I do not see any reason why they should have been taken into account in determining the uncovered amount of liability.

[26TH SEP. 1935.]

Then, I feel that the tribunal did make a blunder in determining the ratio of the obligations payable by Burma in relation to India. I do not know, Sir, how the tribunal arrived at this conclusion. I have read their report with some care and I am not yet able to find out the reason. Sir, the facts are plain enough. Both Mr. Nixon and Sir Henry Howard agreed that the entire revenue central as well as provincial should be taken into account ; and when there is a complete separation between the two countries you cannot reasonably overlook any source of revenue. The distribution between the provincial and the central sources of revenue is no more than formal or administrative. We know the history of our provincial finances. In the former days, the provinces used to get doles from the Government of India, then there were the periods of periodic settlements renewed from time to time : after that, there was the age of the Meston Settlement and subsequently the Government of India remitted the contributions payable by the various provinces under the Meston Settlement. Sir, there is no real distinction between the Central and the Provincial sources of revenue. Both should have been taken into account. Then, Sir, the tribunal has taken the income from income-tax into account and has excluded that from railways. If the income from income-tax can be so determined that you can localise and determine the amounts contributed by each country, I think it should be taken into account. It is undoubtedly a correct measure of the trade and industry and fiscal and economic condition of each country. The only reason, I think, why the two experts agreed to ignore it was because of the impossibility of determining the local source of income-tax correctly.

Then, Sir, they have not included the railway income. It would not have been to the advantage of India ; India has benefited by the exclusion thereof, but I see no reason why justice should not have been done to Burma. We are not here to plead the cause of India only, we are here to plead the cause of justice, and I think railway income should have been included. But it is hardly a material factor today as the railways are hardly yielding any income worth the name. One of my friends tried to make out the ratio on the basis of the main sources of central revenue. He arrived at the conclusion that the ratio would come to about 14 per cent. I do not agree with that view, but taking the figures given by Mr. Nixon and accepted by Sir Henry Howard, it should range between 9.5 and 10.5; and there is absolutely no justification for a ratio of 7.5. I venture to think that it will really be tantamount to squaring a circle if a ratio of 7.5 is demonstrably established. I do not find myself in a position to understand this figure of the ratio at all.

Sir, I do not want to take more time over the technical questions as to pensions. The position seems to me to be plain enough. Assuming Burma were not separated from India what would be her contribution towards the pensions that have been earned so far, whether they have been fully earned or whether they have been partly earned ? It would be just in proportion to her contribution towards the revenue of this Government of India including Burma, and the separation of Burma from India ought not to make any difference in the position, and Burma should still be held to be liable in accordance with the principles of equity to the same extent. Mr. Nixon gave this separation the analogy of a dissolution of partnership. That is not correct. The true analogy, as I find it, is that of the division of a joint Hindu family. It is exactly in accordance with the principles governing partition in a joint Hindu family that the assets and liabilities in the case of these two countries might be dealt with.

Sir, as to currency I have not much to say against the findings of the tribunal. But there is one thing which I should like to know, and I make this enquiry in all earnestness, whether we have been asked only to perform here the farce of a post mortem examination on a report which is to be foisted on us, whether we will it or not, and whether it be just or unjust, or whether the question is open and the Government of India are in a position yet to get the question reconsidered and decided in a manner that may be satisfactory to both countries ? I may say here that what I want is this that there should be Indian and Burman jurors associated with financial and judicial experts, and whatever decision is arrived at, it should carry with it the full assent of the non-official representatives of Burma and India. And if I had any voice in the matter in influencing the jurors representing this country, I would advise them to go to the utmost extent possible in order to meet the wishes of the people of Burma. It is from this point of view that I wish this question to be looked at. And whether you determine the matter on a historical basis or whether you determine it on an analytical basis, I think there are at least two or three items in respect of which the responsibility should be assumed by the United Kingdom. The cost of the Burman wars should be met by the United Kingdom. I need not argue it at any length. We were told that it was difficult to determine the amount. Let the United Kingdom pay the minimum amount that it is prepared to accept as having been incurred in the wars and military occupation, and to that extent relieve both India and Burma. And secondly, to the tune of the expenses and the contribution connected with the Great War, considering the state of affairs in the whole of the world and the way war debts are being handled all over, it would be but fair and proper if England were to take that responsibility on herself and absolve Burma and India. If this is accepted there will be no liability left over to be apportioned between the two countries. I hope the Government of India will move in the matter in such a manner that both these countries may be benefited and saved from ruin. Otherwise the financial machine is so overloaded that it may collapse and break down any time.

[Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Amendment moved :

“ That at the end of the motion, the following be added :

‘ and the same be rejected as, among other reasons, no non-official representatives of India and Burma were associated with the enquiry and inasmuch as the terms of reference were too narrow in that the apportionment of burdens was restricted to India and Burma alone ’.”

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, the Indo-Burma Tribunal have taken it for granted that Burma will be separated, and such separation has been provided in the Government of India Act recently passed. So far as we Indians are concerned, it is our opinion that this is the business of the Burmans to decide ; we do not claim the right to decide whether Burma should remain united with India or be separated from her. But we do hope and trust that the people of Burma will take care to see that Burma is not separated in the interests of any other country. Whether Burma is separated or remains united with India, we shall all hope that the most cordial relations will continue to subsist between the peoples of these two countries.

This brings me to the question why Burma was conquered. Sir, an Irish member of the British Parliament gave on one occasion a vivid account of the cause of the Third Burmese War. He said that Burma was conquered because King Theebaw was drinking. Was it any concern of the British Government whether King Theebaw was a drunkard or whether the country suffered from any misrule at that time ? Sir, the fact of the matter is that Burma was conquered in the interests of Britain in pursuance of a policy of Imperial expansion and exploitation of the rich resources of that country. It was stated in the minority report of the Welby Commission that the cost of the Burmese wars should have been taken over by Britain and the Indian witnesses before that Commission, including Sir Dinshaw Wacha and the late Mr. Gokhale, urged this course. But this was not done.

Now that Burma is going to be separated from India we should urge that in the financial adjustment that will take place between Burma and India the question of Britain's liability should also be taken into consideration. It was estimated that the cost of the three Burmese Wars was something like 20 to 25 crores, and it was further estimated in the minority report of the Welby Commission that the cost of carrying on the military administration of the country during the years 1885-86 to 1895-96 was something like 15 crores. If to this be added the deficits which occurred in subsequent years, we may say that the total amount spent on Burma out of the revenues of India comes up to 50 or 60 crores, if not more. I am not placing before you any particular figure ; but I am urging that the matter should be properly investigated. I should like to state in this connection that Burma was conquered against the wishes of the people of India. In 1885, at the first session of the Indian National Congress, a resolution was adopted protesting against the annexation of Burma. The main reason why the Indian people protested against the annexation of Burma was that a financial burden would fall on her shoulders. What was then feared did come true afterwards, and now is the time for a settlement of accounts.

The question, therefore, is whether at the present moment a tribunal should consider only the financial relations between India and Burma or should take into consideration also the liabilities of Britain. There are three parties, in fact, to the transaction, but it is surprising that the terms of reference to that Amery Tribunal were extremely narrow and restricted.

Coming to the personnel of this tribunal, what do we find ? We find that none of the members of the tribunal has any reputation for financial ability. They were appointed not as financial experts but merely to make a rough-and-ready adjustment of the relations between the two countries, India and Burma. Nor did the majority of the members of this tribunal possess any experience of the conditions prevailing either in India or in Burma. In fact only one member of this tribunal had some sort of acquaintance with India—I mean Sir Sydney Rowlatt. But his connection with India was of such a nature that we all deplore that he was appointed a member of this tribunal. If Mr. Justice Rowlatt had not written his infamous report, the history of India during the last two decades might have been entirely different.

I have already said a word about the terms of reference. These terms should have been further expanded. But if the personnel of the tribunal and the terms of reference were unsatisfactory, the procedure of the tribunal was still more unsatisfactory. The tribunal did not take any non-official evidence either from India or from Burma. There was one official witness from the Government of India, and three official witnesses from Burma. In this connection I should like to know why it was thought sufficient for the Government of India to be represented by only one person against three from Burma. I do not question the ability or honesty of Mr. Nixon. But I do think that if a larger number of representatives were sent from India, the case might have been argued in a far more emphatic manner than it actually was. Then again, why was not non-official opinion taken into consideration ? No non-official bodies in India and no non-official members were consulted, and the whole thing was done in a hole-and-corner and a most perfunctory fashion, so much so that even the Government of India did not know when the tribunal had commenced their labours and when they had finished their proceedings. This is most unsatisfactory.

Reference has been made already by other speakers to undertakings which had been given by persons in authority, and I will not dilate on that point. But I will discuss the findings of this tribunal. When we come to this part of the subject, we find that the tribunal carried out their duties in a most unscientific manner. In regard to the assets they took into consideration certain dead assets which ought not to have been taken into account; and in regard to liabilities they omitted to take account of certain very important items. In this connection it was thought necessary by the tribunal that the past should be altogether ignored. Why, I do not know. The circumstances of the present are to a very large extent the result of the past activities of the Government of India, the Government of Britain, and the Government of Burma. Therefore, the past cannot and should not be entirely ignored.

As regards the ratio of payment by Burma, the Tribunal themselves said: "We do not believe that it is possible to formulate any theoretical principle or to select any single criterion or a set of criteria". Is this satisfactory? Is this a proper and scientific way of dealing with a complex question? They say that they took into consideration all circumstances, but did they actually do so? No,—they omitted many important circumstances from their consideration. For instance, they failed to take account of the deficits which had occurred in the Budgets of the Government of Burma for many years; they also failed to take into account the fact that a large part of the cost of railway construction had been met out of the central revenues for a long time. There are various other matters which this tribunal failed to take into account, and the result is that the ratio at which they arrived was merely the result of a haphazard test. There was no proper basis upon which this ratio could be arrived at. In the Nixon-Howard memorandum, the ratio accepted was 10.5 per cent. But I must say in this connection that Mr. Nixon omitted to consider the income-tax receipts on the ground that it was very difficult to find out the origin of these receipts. Was that any real ground for omitting this important item? It would not have been altogether difficult to find out an approximate amount which might be regarded as the origin of the income-tax receipts in Burma and in India. If that had been done, the ratio which was arrived at by Mr. Nixon would have come up to a higher figure. If the net revenue of the Government of India was compared to the net revenue of the Government of Burma, the ratio would have come up to about 13 per cent. The net revenue of the Government of India in the year 1933-34, the last year for which accounts are available, was 75.5 crores, and the net revenue of the Government of Burma during this period was about ten crores. I do not myself attach any importance to this particular ratio, but I say that if a rough-and-ready test was to be adopted, this was a better test than the test adopted in the Amery Tribunal Report. What I urge is that there should be a proper investigation of the whole subject, because this important subject was considered in a very perfunctory manner.

Sir, in view of these serious defects in the Report of the Amery Tribunal, what is our duty? I think our clear duty is that we should reject this Report in toto ("Hear, hear" from Congress Party Benches), and should urge that a fresh Tribunal be appointed which should consist either of persons who are not interested in the transactions of any of the parties, namely, Britain, India and Burma, or which should be representative of all the three parties. Sir, this is a very serious matter for India as well as for Burma, for, as Mr. Nixon pointed out to us the other day, the acceptance of the Report of the Amery Tribunal would mean a loss of no less than two crores of rupees to the Indian Budget. But more than that, it may lead to undesirable relations between India and Burma. For all these reasons, Sir, I am strongly of opinion that the Report should be rejected, and that a fresh Tribunal be appointed to go into the whole question of the relations between Britain, India and Burma. (Hear, hear.)

Sir Hormusji Peroshaw Mody (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Mr. President, in supporting this amendment, I desire to state my reasons very briefly. Unfortunately, every move connected with the question of the separation of Burma from India has had a rather peculiar history. The path may be said to have been liberally strewn with pledges and assurances which for one reason or another have not been carried out. I am not going to support the amendment on some of the grounds that have been urged. I am not questioning the competence of the Tribunal which conducted the inquiry and which has submitted this Report, nor do I doubt the ability and thoroughness with which the case for India was presented by my friend Mr. Nixon. (Hear, hear.) We know Mr. Nixon, and we are sure that the case could not have been in better hands, and that, in so far as he was concerned, he has done everything possible to present the view point of India. (Hear, hear.) But, Sir, experts have their proper place. I am not going to subscribe to the definition of an expert which was given by a cynic who said that an expert is a fellow who tells you what to do with your affairs after you have done something else with them. I say experts have their uses, but if it were held that, having appointed an expert of undoubted competence, everything required had been done, and that non-official opinion need not be consulted or associated with any inquiry, then I am afraid a great deal of the purpose of having democratic or legislative institutions would vanish.

Sir, I take my stand on what the predecessor of my friend, Sir James Grigg, said in this House only a year ago when he gave a sort of assurance, that the Standing Finance Committee or some such non-official agency would be associated with the inquiry. If it is contended that that was not a definite assurance, then I submit with great respect that the Government of India ought to be very careful before giving any sort of assurances which it is not intended to carry out. In this view of the case—the constitution of the Tribunal and the inquiry being of the nature that they were—my position is that I decline to take any responsibility for accepting this award. ("Hear, hear" from the Congress Party Benches.)

As regards the more contentious part of the amendment, namely, the allocation of the burden between Great Britain, India and Burma, it is not my case that any particular portion of the burden should be borne, as a matter of fact, by Great Britain. I am not going to say that the cost of the Burmese wars or any of the other operations, whether political, military or economic, should be distributed in such a way that Great Britain should also bear a part of the burden, but I am not going to go any further than that and admit that no case for inquiry whatsoever exists. I do not propose to follow my friend, Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant, in this part of his admirably restrained and well reasoned speech. All that I say is that having appointed a tribunal of your own choice, a tribunal which undoubtedly enjoyed your confidence, you should have taken care to see that the terms of reference were as wide as possible and I see no reason why they should not have been so wide as to include an inquiry into the question of liability on the part of Great Britain. Do not forget, Sir, that the separation of Burma from India has been brought about under very peculiar circumstances. I do not want to offend any of my Burmese friends by commenting upon it. I could say a great deal if I wanted to, having been associated from the very commencement with this question at the Round Table Conferences, and I know what assurances and pledges were given during those discussions. However, that is not the point. What I am urging is, that in view of the very peculiar circumstances which have attended the separation of Burma from India, at least there was a case for an inquiry. It may be that the tribunal may have rejected, contemptuously or otherwise, any contention on the part of either India or Burma that a part of the liability should be borne by Great Britain. That is a different matter, and does not affect the issue that there should have been an inquiry into the question. You will remember that the Simon Commission made a suggestion that a part of the military burden should be borne by Great Britain in view of the fact that the military forces in India were maintained not merely for Indian purposes, but also partly for Imperial purposes, and there would have been nothing unusual in the terms of reference to the Tribunal, if they had included the question of the liability or otherwise of Great Britain with regard to the burden of debt of India and Burma.

[26TH SEP. 1935.]

[Sir Hormusji Peroshaw Mody.]

I do not know whether this discussion was intended to serve any useful purpose, or whether it is to be regarded as a mere formality which had to be gone through. I do not know whether the Government of India will take good care to represent to the Secretary of State the strong feeling which has been manifested in this House. I hope, Sir, that Government will take into consideration everything that has been urged on this side of the House. There is one matter at any rate in which they can still right the situation, and that is by associating non-official Indian opinion with the Application Committee which is going to be set up. It may be that the principles are settled, but there is a great deal left to the Application Committee, namely, the appraisal of assets and the like. These and other matters of importance are going to be relegated to the care of the Application Committee and I hope that my Honourable friend, the Finance Member, will see to it that there, at any rate, non-official Indian opinion does not go unrepresented.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammedan) : You are satisfied with very little.

Sir Hormusji Peroshaw Mody : If I were satisfied with little, I would not be supporting this amendment. I am not bound to accept my Honourable friend's reasons, I have my own reasons and view-point in these matters. If my friends do not want non-official opinion to be represented on the Application Committee, they can please themselves, but I suppose, they would come forward at some later date with an adjournment motion that Government ignored non-official opinion even on the Application Committee. My mental attitude is against ploughing the sands. I want something constructive done, and I want that the strong opinion, expressed on this side of the House, should be communicated to the Secretary of State, so that the decision on these matters of vital importance may be influenced to a certain degree, and that when it comes to applying those principles which have been embodied in the Report, care would be taken to see that non-official opinion is represented.

Mr. F. B. Leach (Burma : European) : I much regret to get up at this hour of the afternoon and take part in a discussion which the last speaker has just suggested will probably serve no useful purpose. I will endeavour not to detain the House for a longer time than I can help but there are one or two points which I should like to put forward on behalf of Burma and so far there has been only one short speech from any representative of Burma.

I should like to join most of the other speakers in thanking Mr. Nixon for the clear and impartial explanation that he gave of the points at issue in this case. I am sorry that I cannot extend the same congratulations to all the other speakers. Some of the speeches made on Friday were frankly a disappointment to me. I had hoped to hear a reasoned discussion of this report and of its findings, instead of which three quarters of the speeches made on Friday dealt almost entirely with one point, namely, the composition of the tribunal. Now, I have no quarrel with any Members of this House who hold the view and express the view that non-official representatives should have been associated with this tribunal but I do venture to protest at some of the expressions which were used about the members who did constitute the tribunal, simply because there were no non-officials associated with them. The members of this tribunal were three in number. One is an ex-Cabinet minister with a European reputation as a man of affairs and a writer on historical and political subjects. Another has been an eminent judge of the King's Bench for 20 years and the third is a distinguished civil servant with some 35 years' service. Well, Sir, whatever opinions may be held about the proper way of constituting a tribunal of this kind, I do not think it is right to use phrases like "a piece of sharp practice", "jugglery with figures", "fraud", "silly idea" and "contrary to morality", in talking about a tribunal constituted as this one was. I am very glad that the speeches that have been made today have not continued this tone. Now, Sir, as I say, it is quite justifiable to urge that there should have been non-officials associated with this tribunal. I do not propose to deal with that point but there is one thing I should like to say. Even if non-officials had been associated with it, I do not think that the members of the tribunal or any other members who might have been appointed as arbitrators in such a case would have allowed the discussion to go as far outside the terms of reference as some speakers have made it clear that they wish to go. The terms of reference were to advise as to the basis on which a just financial settlement between the Government of India and the Government of Burma, when separated, should be made. Well, Sir, it is not the fault of the tribunal that they were not allowed to consider what share of the liabilities of the Government of India should be taken over by the United Kingdom. It was not put to them, and various Members who have suggested that this should have been one of the terms of reference are in fact criticising either the Secretary of State or the British Parliament and it is no good vituperating the tribunal on that account. That is all I wish to say about the composition of the tribunal and the terms of reference.

It has been suggested that the tribunal approached this matter in an entirely wrong way and they should have adopted the historical approach. Well, Sir, in paragraphs 9 and 10 of their report they have given their reasons for not adopting the historical approach. The only thing I have to say is that, had they chosen to take that line and to adopt the historical approach to the problem, that would have done no harm to Burma. Sir, in his speech this afternoon, my Honourable friend, Dr. Banerjea, estimated that the cost of the Burmese wars would amount to a sum of Rs. 20 or 25 crores, that another Rs. 15 crores were spent for the settlement of Upper Burma in the earlier years of its administration, and that there were subsequent deficits, in all bringing up to Rs. 50 crores or possibly 60 crores the total amount spent by India on Burma. I would point out, Sir, on the other hand, that for the last thirty years Burma has been a very profitable province to the Government of India.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : All this might be investigated, I suggest.

Mr. F. B. Leach : And I believe that the contributions made by Burma to central revenues in the last thirty years might have well accounted for all the money spent by central revenues on Burma in the previous years.

Then, Sir, we have the question of how this fraction, which the Tribunal have fixed at  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., should have been fixed. Dr. Banerjea and one or two other speakers would have fixed it as high as 13 per cent.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : On a point of personal explanation, Sir, I did not suggest that,—if he had carefully listened to me.

Mr. F. B. Leach : I apologize to the Honourable Member ; I thought he said 13 per cent. I have got down his words.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea : I said : if the net revenue of the Government of India was to be taken into account as compared with the net revenue of the Government of Burma, then the figure would come up to 13 per cent.

Mr. F. B. Leach : I am sorry if I have misunderstood the Honourable Member ; it is extremely hard to hear from this side of the House. Anyhow it was suggested that it should be over ten per cent. Now, there are various ways of calculating this figure of course, and the Howard-Nixon memorandum did suggest  $10\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., but I would point out, on behalf of Burma, that it is not, I think, fair to fix this proportion solely on a consideration of the revenues paid by the two countries. There are many other aspects which have got to be considered. There is one point, for instance, in paragraph 48 dealing with dead assets. It is pointed out by the Tribunal that the dead assets in the whole of India amount to about 91 crores, the value of dead assets in Burma being about  $3\frac{1}{4}$  crores. Well, you can take that as showing that Burma has not been treated, in material ways, as well as she deserves, in consideration of the amount of revenue paid by her. The value of the dead assets—the buildings, roads, and so on—in Burma is only about  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the total amount in India. I do not see why Burma cannot ask that this consideration should be taken into account just as much as the proportion of revenue which she pays. But that of course is not the whole point. There are many other aspects which must be considered. Now, Sir, the Honourable Member, Dr. Ziauddin, in his speech also objected to the historical method.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : No, I very strongly supported the method of historical approach, and I did that also in 1932.

Mr. F. B. Leach : I beg the Honourable Member's pardon. I understood him to say that the revenue method was the only scientific method. I think that is correct ?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I repeated Great Britain's words that Mr. Nixon's ratio of  $10\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. has some scientific basis, while the Tribunal's ratio of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. had no scientific basis.

Mr. F. B. Leach : That is really what I intended to suggest that the Honourable Member had said—that the revenue method is the only one which has a scientific basis. Well, Sir, the Honourable Member is a distinguished mathematician, and I do not wish to argue with him on mathematical problems, but what I do maintain is that this problem is not one which can be settled on a purely mathematical or, as he prefers to call it, a purely scientific basis. There are other considerations which must be taken into account.

There are what the report alludes to as imponderable considerations, and I will try and show that it is perfectly fair that these should be taken into account. Now, Sir, in stating this proposition I am very glad to be able to quote from a speech by a distinguished member of the Congress Party made earlier in this Session. In speaking on the Criminal Law Amendment Bill the Honourable Member, Dr. Deshmukh, with considerable ingenuity managed to bring up the subject of protection. What he said in that speech was :

“ Sir, I say that all vital industries of the country must first be started, irrespective of whether they are profitable or not, because, Sir, besides calculating the return in pounds, shilling and pence, it gives employment to labour, it improves the status, the manhood of the nation, it improves the level of life. It has so many indirect advantages, which cannot be calculated in rupees, annas and pies.”

Now, Sir, I hold that the thesis which Dr. Deshmukh laid down in that speech is equally applicable to this case of Burma and India, and it exactly corroborates the position taken up by the Tribunal in their paragraphs dealing with the ratio, viz., paragraphs 52 to 64. It corroborates what they say in paragraph 53 :

“ We do not believe that it is possible to formulate any theoretical principle or to select any single criterion or set of criteria by means of which the relative contributions can be precisely determined.”

Well, Sir, I consider that these “ imponderable considerations ” are particularly applicable to Burma. Burma has—there is no question about it—not only not benefited from, but has actually suffered from, the policy of protection adopted in India for the last twelve years. The industries which that policy was intended to support do not exist in Burma. Therefore the only effect of that policy has been to raise the prices of commodities in Burma : and Burma has not received any of the immaterial or psychological advantages which Dr. Deshmukh speaks of as improving the level of life, raising the manhood of the nation, and so on,—those advantages which cannot be calculated in rupees, annas and pies. Therefore, Sir, I would ask this House whether there is any justification, any good justification, for our objecting to the Tribunal taking the line that this is not a problem which can be worked out in rupees, annas and pies; we have got to take into account what they call those imponderable considerations; and, taking these into account, they have finally arrived at the figure of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. It is, of course, quite easy to scoff at this figure on the ground that it is arbitrary. To a certain extent, it is arbitrary if by 'arbitrary' you mean that it is not the result of mathematical calculation. But, Sir, I maintain that this is not a mathematical problem. It is wider than that. It is, in fact, a problem in equity of which only part of the arguments can be mathematical or scientific. There are, however, certain mathematical considerations and, of course, errors in mathematics are quite unpardonable. But we have had no errors from the mathematical point of view in the calculations of the Tribunal mentioned. On the other hand, the Honourable Member who spoke first, Mr. Gauba, said, as far as I could understand him, that the Howard-Nixon report had estimated the liabilities of the Government of India at 1,100 odd crores—I regret I could not catch the exact figure and the Tribunal had reduced this figure to 999 crores, thus showing a very large decrease. He suggested that their calculations must be incorrect. Well, Sir, I presume that he was alluding to the figures in Annexure K of the Howard-Nixon Memorandum which show a grand total of liabilities to the Government of India of 1,149½ crores. I presume he was also quoting from line 2 on page 24 of the Tribunal's report which shows liabilities of 999 crores. But that is only the permanent debt. There is a large number of other liabilities in the succeeding lines, which bring the total amount of liabilities to 1,400 crores. He seemed to me to be comparing part of the statement in the Tribunal's report with the gross total in the Howard-Nixon Memorandum.

Mr. K. L. Gauba (East Central Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise on a point of personal explanation. I referred to rupees and sterling liabilities in the two reports, namely, that of the Amery Committee and the Howard-Nixon report. The latter report assesses the liabilities at 1,150 crores and the former between 924 and 999 crores.

Mr. F. B. Leach : I am sorry I still cannot follow where my friend, Mr. Gauba, has got his figure of 1,120 crores from. The calculations are made differently in the two reports and it is very difficult to compare them. There are certain corrections which have got to be made and I have to the best of my ability made these corrections by omitting items which occur only in one report and not in the other. By taking the items of liabilities which do appear in both reports, I get the figure in the Howard-Nixon Memorandum of 1,118 crores and in the Tribunal's report of 1,269 crores, that is to say, an increase of about 150 crores. Of course, we must remember that these figures do not relate to the same year. The Howard-Nixon Memorandum is up to 31st March, 1929, and the Tribunal's report is up to 31st March, 1933. I cannot vouch for the absolute accuracy of the figures that I now give but I do think that there is no ground, whatever, for saying that the Tribunal has shown a large decrease in the total liabilities of the Government of India as compared with the figures which are shown in the Howard-Nixon Memorandum.

Then, Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. B. Das, made a suggestion which, again, I may have misunderstood. But I understood him to suggest that Burma should continue, for military purposes, to be attached to India and to employ the Indian Army and further that it should continue to contribute some ten per cent. of the total military expenditure in India.

Mr. B. Das : I said nothing of the kind. I wanted the army expenditure to be divided. Burma should bear  $4\frac{1}{2}$  crores or ten per cent. of the 45 crores that India and Burma at present spend on the army.

Mr. F. B. Leach : I am sorry if I also misunderstood my Honourable friend, but I must ask Honourable Members not to attribute it to any wilful intention on my part but to the bad acoustics of the Chamber.

Then, Sir, there is the question of the period, which the Tribunal has suggested as 45 years and it was very strongly criticised by one of the speakers on the opposite Benches. I will not say which Honourable Member criticised it in case I might have misunderstood him also. I candidly admit that 45 years is an entirely arbitrary figure but in respect of this claim, bearing in mind the fact that Burma asked for 60 years, I would point out that India has, I think, no right to claim that Burma should make the payment in a shorter period than that which India claims for the repayment of her own debt, which is 50 years for the unproductive debt and 80 years for the productive debt. As the productive debt is larger than the unproductive, the average would be about 70 years, so I do not think any complaint can be made that the period of 45 years is too long.

Mr. K. L. Gauba : Why not make it 100 years ?

Mr. F. B. Leach : That would be too long. There is a big difference between 45 and 100 years. With regard to this period of 45 years, it was suggested also by one speaker that it was too long and India might not be able to recover the amount. There are only two reasons why India should not be able to recover this amount. One is that Burma would be unwilling to pay her debt and the other is that she may not be able to pay her debt. If there is any Honourable Member in this House who entertains the feeling that Burma will repudiate her debt, I am sure my Honourable friends who represent Burma on the opposite Benches will assure him that there has never been any such suggestions in Burma. There has never been any suggestion of unwillingness to pay the amount which is fixed by a responsible authority. As for her inability to pay, he is a bold man in these days who can prophesy what may happen to any country in a period of 45 years, but unless there is some unforeseeable catastrophe in this period, I see no reason why Burma should not be able to continue to pay the amount which it is likely that she will have to pay.

Sir, there is another remark which I would like to make about the reasons for separation which has been alluded to by several speakers. Sir Hormusji Mody made some rather cryptic remarks to the effect that he knew more about separation than he was willing to say. But there was another Honourable Member who did suggested that separation had been forced on Burma by a set of people in England from Imperialistic motives. (Voices from the Congress Party Benches : " Yes, yes.") As there are Honourable Members who agree with that view, I should like to say that I hope they will go again to my Honourable friends who represent Burma and who are sitting behind them and I think they will receive an assurance from them that that is not the case. I had thought that this myth was dead, but as it has been resurrected I should like to do what I can to put it into its coffin and bury it. It is absolutely beyond my power of belief that there is any foundation for it. I can assure Honourable Members that if they went round England to look for imperialists interested in the separation of Burma, they would find it extraordinarily difficult to discover any.

Mr. Sri Prakasa (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : They are all in Downing Street.

Mr. F. B. Leach : The number of people who either know or care anything about the separation of Burma can be counted on the fingers of your hands. What advantage any imperialist is going to get out of the separation of Burma, I have never yet been able to find out.

Mr. Sri Prakasa : Then why not separate from England.

Mr. F. B. Leach : I do not see how that is relevant to the present question. The separation of Burma has been talked of for many years ; almost as long as I can remember it has been vaguely talked of. It came to the front very definitely after the Montagu Chelmsford Reforms and it immediately became the main plank in the platform of Burmese politicians. It is perfectly true that opinion has been divided in Burma, not so much on the question of separation as on the terms of the separation and on the time at which it should come into force. But I should like to assure this House that it is from the Burmese themselves that the demand for separation has come and it has not been pressed upon them by Europeans, either in England or in Burma. In fact I may say from my personal knowledge that the opinion of Europeans, either in England or in Burma, either official or non-official, was very divided on the subject. They are by no means unanimously in favour of it.

Well, Sir, in conclusion I should like to say that I am in a rather curious dual position. I have to speak here as a representative of Burma and also as a representative of the European Group in which I am, on this occasion, in a minority of one. The other Members of the European Group are representing India and I represent Burma. Sir, I can say this, that though on certain points I consider that Burma could have been more favourably treated, and though on certain other points the other Members of the European Group consider that India might have been more favourably treated, we are as a whole agreed that this report is a reasoned and impartial and equitable solution of a very complicated problem and that it should, therefore, be accepted. Sir, I do not wish to detain the House any longer. I have only to say that on behalf of the Group as well as on my own behalf I wish to oppose the amendments to reject the report.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Before the last two speakers, I myself might have justifiably felt somewhat in a mood of depression because the speeches of my Honourable friends, Pandit Pant and Dr. Banerjea, reminded me of Dr. Johnson's description of a leg of mutton that was presented to him at Oxford, ill-cooked, ill-dressed and ill-served. That seems to be their opinion of the Amery Report. However, the debate has ended up at any rate with a eulogy of the Report and so my depression has somewhat disappeared. This debate originated, as the House knows, in a promise on my part that it should have an opportunity of expressing its views before the draft Order in Council, embodying the decisions of His Majesty was laid before Parliament. The object of the debate will be fulfilled if the proceedings of the Assembly, during these two days, are forwarded, as they certainly will be forwarded, to the Secretary of State. Our purpose thus being to give the non-official Members of the House a chance of expressing their views, I do not feel called upon to traverse at any great length the contentions put forward by the various speakers. Nor do I think that it would be appropriate if the official Members took part in any voting which may take place on the amendments before the House.

I might reasonably stop there, but if I may be allowed to abandon my position of aloofness for a few seconds, I will make one or two general comments on the debate. Mr. Gauba's speech was, as the last speaker has already said, a series of somewhat reckless, but of course privileged, accusations of fraud against all and sundry. But, as he produced no arguments of any kind, I think we can safely ignore it. For the rest I have heard no new opinions on the problem viewed simply as one of separating the finances of India and Burma and this seems to show that the House had no new contribution to make to the solution of the specific problem laid down by the Government of India Act. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad advocated the historical method of approach. But I am bound to say I found him less convincing than usual. He said that certainly all problems were solvable, but he did not give us any hint as to how this particular circle was to be squared.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : The squaring of a circle has been proved to be impossible. My friend has not proved that it cannot be solved by historical approach.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : My Honourable friend, Mr. B. Das, if I am not maligning him—I do not think I am—would have been content if the full claim put forward by Mr. Nixon on behalf of the Government of India had been accepted. I think Mr. Bajoria put forward the same point of view. U Thein Maung would, I gather, have been content, similarly, if the full claim of Burma had been met by the tribunal. I think he did at one stage hold out a hand to Congress and advance a contention which fitted very badly into the rest of his argument. Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji treated us to a discourse on the cultural affinity between India and Burma. I am rather tempted to paraphrase the remark which was made by a former Secretary of State for India and say that if he had been listening to what he had been reading, his views would have caused even himself some surprise. He also put forward the contention that if a tribunal on which India was directly represented had awarded Burma better terms than those which the Amery Committee advocated, India would have been only too glad to pay. This proposition was, I noticed, received with marked coldness by the House. For the rest the debate has been a continued reiteration of the proposition that the report is unfair both to India and to Burma, and it is to be noticed that every one of the amendments before the House commits itself, either directly or indirectly, to this proposition. The Honourable Member from Bombay may try to delude himself that it does not mean this, but I am quite clear that if the amendment which his colleague from Bombay and the Congress Party have collaborated to place upon the paper does not mean that, then it does not mean anything at all. Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant made this quite clear, crystal clear, though he did, I think, draw a red herring across the trail in his preliminary remarks in which he said that India did not want to be semitic at the expense of Burma and that he would be quite willing to give Burma anything they asked for provided Great Britain paid. As regards Mr. Gauba it is true that he put forward, at one stage, a rather less categorical amendment, but, on reconsideration, he evidently addressed himself as Danton did on a famous occasion, "No weakness, Danton", and refused to be behind his Congress friends in taking part in something which seems to be very like an anti-British demonstration. Now, under the terms of the Government of India Act it is quite impossible for the award of any tribunal to be unfair both to India and to Burma. The problem posed is simply to discover a just method or a fair compromise for the division of existing assets and liabilities between the two countries. But, clearly a problem like that, unless it is one of the class of problems to which there is a mathematical solution and only one mathematical solution, clearly a problem like that cannot be solved to the satisfaction of both parties; and so we have to fall back on some device for posing a completely different problem, and that is the transfer of all the disputed liabilities to a third party. This is of course quite in accordance with the usual thesis of the Party opposite. And the Pandit in his remarks made it quite clear that he was advancing a particular case of a general proposition. That general proposition, as I understand it, is that Great Britain owes India something like 750 crores. I think the exact figure is 729.2½th crores, subject to recomputation of some items. This is a proposition rather like that of the late Michael Collins. At the time of the negotiations with the Irish Free State, in 1921, Michael Collins advanced the proposition that Great Britain owed Ireland 3,000 millions, but in the end the claim was settled by the payment of six millions in the opposite direction. (Laughter.) However, that may be, Parliament has already decided against that particular contention of the Party opposite and there is no need for me to argue against it, although there is a great deal that can be said about it. At this late stage and after a very long debate in which views have been very fully expressed, I do not want to say any more except that my duty is to place the Secretary of State in full possession of the opinions,—and may I say too, without fear of being misunderstood, the feelings,—which Members of the House have chosen to express.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Of the amendments that have been moved, Mr. Mathuradas Vissanji's amendment is the most comprehensive. The Chair will, therefore, put that first to the House. The question is :

"That for the original motion, the following be substituted :

"That the Report be rejected as being inequitable to both India and Burma, and that, in consequence, the Government of India be requested to move the Secretary of State for India, that, in accordance with promises made in this Assembly, the assurances given at the Round Table Conference and in the Report of the Joint Select Committee of the British Parliament, the problem of Financial Adjustment between India and Burma be investigated into afresh by another Tribunal, with representatives of both India and Burma thereon, to make recommendations on the question of distributing the Assets and apportioning the Liabilities between the countries affected and concerned, after proper hearing of the case from all the parties concerned, and before final steps are taken in the matter."

The motion was adopted.

THE REMOVAL OF CIVIC DISABILITIES BILL.

Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah (Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the removal of Social Disabilities among certain classes of Hindus.

While doing so I should like, on behalf of myself and on behalf of those friends whose Bills find a place on the agenda today, to express our thanks to the Honourable the Leader of the House for giving us this facility to introduce them today.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide for the removal of Social Disabilities among certain classes of Hindus."

The motion was adopted.

Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE HINDU WOMEN'S RIGHTS TO PROPERTY BILL.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) :

Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Hindu Law governing Hindu Women's Right to Property.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to amend the Hindu Law governing Hindu Women's Right to Property."

The motion was adopted.

Dr. G. V. Deshmukh : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE ARYA MARRIAGE VALIDATION BILL.

Dr. N. B. Khare (Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to recognise and remove doubts as to the validity of intermarriages current among Arya Samajists.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to recognise and remove doubts as to the validity of intermarriages current among Arya Samajists.”

The motion was adopted.

Dr. N. B. Khare : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE HINDU MARRIAGE VALIDITY BILL.

Dr. Bhagavan Das (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhamadan Urban) : Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to validate marriages between different castes of Hindus.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to validate marriages between different castes of Hindus.”

The motion was adopted.

Dr. Bhagavan Das : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929.

Sir, I am grateful to Government for permitting me to move this social legislation and I hope they will take steps to circulate it so that it may be considered and passed at the next Session.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929.”

The motion was adopted.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE MOSLEM PERSONAL LAW (SHARIAT) APPLICATION BILL.

Mr. H. M. Abdullah (West Central Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to make provision for the application of the Moslem Personal Law (Shariat) to Moslems in British India. The object of the Bill is fully explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons attached to the Bill. I have nothing to add to it at present.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The question is :

“ That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to make provision for the application of the Moslem Personal Law (Shariat) to Moslems in British India.”

The motion was adopted.

Mr. H. M. Abdullah : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

REPORT OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member) : Sir, I move :

“ That the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the Accounts of 1933-34, Parts I and II, be taken into consideration.”

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of order, Sir, may I ask, will the Assembly continue tomorrow ? If not, is it fair to introduce this thing at this late hour ? It may be taken up in the Delhi Session, because, a good many of us would like to speak on this subject.

An Honourable Member : We shall discuss it at Delhi.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The Chair will first put the motion before the House. Motion moved :

“ That the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the Accounts of 1933-34, Parts I and II, be taken into consideration.”

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : All I need say about this, I think, is that I do not think it would be fair to introduce this motion at this late stage if there was any intention to close the discussion. But I wish to say, without in any way specifically binding down the Government, that it is the intention of Government to try and find a little spare time on some day in the Delhi Session.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : At the beginning of the Session ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not want to bind myself specifically. Government will try to do their best to meet the general desire.

Mr. S. Satyamurti (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : After the motion has been moved, it is not in the hands of the Government to say they will try and find time : it must come on the first official day in the Delhi Session. This is an important subject, and we want to have at least one day for this.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Surely, Sir, my answer does make that clear : but it is for the Government to arrange its own business.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : It has now been moved ; it is now in the possession of the House.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : I want this position to be made clear : if, during the recess, the Session gets prorogued, what happens ? Does this continue ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : The debate will be adjourned.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : You will adjourn it, Sir : but the Viceroy may prorogue it : that is my trouble. We want the Leader of the House to give an assurance that he will give a day for this at the earliest possible moment.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : May I make the position clear ? I do not think there is any occasion for either the heat or the enthusiasm which has been displayed. The motion is now before the House : we have got to put it in the list of business : but as regards the exact date on which it shall be put in, we do not want to be unreasonable : that is all we can say.

Mr. S. Satyamurti : That is a sweet note on which to close this Session.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : What the Chair wants to know is this : whether the House is going to sit tomorrow.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I understand that that is not desired by anybody.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) : Then, the Chair has to get the leave of the House as regards this motion : is it the pleasure of the House that this motion should stand over till the Delhi Session ?

Honourable Members : Yes.
