LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY DEBATES

(OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE EIGHTEENTH SESSION OF THE FIFTH LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY)

VOLUME III—1943

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Monday, 26th July, 1943

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House in New Delhi, at Eleven of the Clock, being the First Day of the Eighteenth Session of the Fifth Legislative Assembly, pursuant to Section 63-D(2) of the Government of India Act, as set out in the Ninth Schedule to the Government of India Act, 1935. Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim, K.C.S.I.), was in the Chair.

MEMBERS SWORN:

- The Honourable Dr. Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque, C.I.E. (Member for Commerce, Food and Industries and Civil Supplies);
- The Honourable Dr. Narayan Bhaskar Khare (Member for Indians Overseas);
- The Honourable Sir Asoka Kumar Roy (Law Member);
- Sree G. Rangiah Naidu, M.L.A. (Madras City: Non-Muhammadan Urban);
- Khan Bahadur Sheikh Habibur-Rahman, M.L.A. (Nominated Non-Official);
- Mr. S. C. Chatterji, M.L.A. (Nominated Non-Official);
- Mr. Noel Victor Housman Symons, C.I.E., M.C., M.L.A. (Government of India: Nominated Official); and
- Mr. Saiyid Rashid-uz-Zaman, M.L.A. (Government of India: Nominated Official).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

SECRETARIES, ETC., AND STAFF IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA DEPARTMENTS AND THE AMOUNT OF THEIR SALARIES.

†1. *Mr. R. R. Gupta: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state:—

(a) the number of Secretaries, Joint Secretaries and Assistant Secretaries in the various Departments of the Government of India in March of the years 1918, 1930, 1934, 1938 and 1943, separately;

(b) the total amount paid in each of these years towards salaries and allowances, if any, to these officers; and

(c) the number of staff, and the amount of salaries paid to the staff working in the Central Secretariat in 1918—1930, 1931 and 1943 separately?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) to (c). The compilation of a statement of this kind for each Department of the Government of India would involve an amount of time, trouble and expense which would not be justifiable in war time. The Government of India therefore regret their inability to undertake to make the necessary inquiries in the matter.

(i) The number of civilian casualties in these raids on British India was 110.

(ii) Of this number 72 were wounded.

(iii) Damage to property was negligible.

(iv) to (vi). The matters raised in these questions are the concern of the War Department to whom questions regarding them should be addressed.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: May I know what was the number of casualties in Singerbil Raid?

Mr. N. V. H. Symons: I made it clear in my answer to starred question No. 69 on the 12th of February that we were not prepared to give individual figures for individual raids and gave the reasons.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member whether these raids, which caused some damage to property or casualties, were really directed towards military targets but only hit the civil population by chance, or were they also directed towards the civil population?

Mr. N. V. H. Symons: I think the Honourable Member will find that that question will be answered when I answer the next question.

CIVIL DEFENCE MEASURES IN PLACES RAIDED BY JAPANESE PLANES.

7. Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Civil Defence be pleased to state when the last meeting of the Standing Committee of Civil Defence was convened, and how it was that he did not think it necessary to call the Standing Committee of Civil Defence up to date?

(b) What arrangements had been made for the protection of the non-fighting Civil population in the places raided since April 2nd?

(c) What was the total number of Civic Guards and A. R. P. workers and officers in Bengal, Assam and Orissa before and after the raids by Japanese planes?

(d) What arrangements have been made for the protection of the Civil population in Arakan where fighting and raids are occurring now-a-days?

(e) When did the Honourable Member pay visits to the raided places last, and will he be pleased to lay on the table a detailed statement of the incidents in connection with the raids?

(f) What special precautionary measures have been taken for the protection of the Civil population in industrial areas of Bengal after the experience of raids in Bengal?

Mr. N. V. H. Symons: (a) 10th November, 1942. The next meeting has been called for 31st July. Meetings of the Standing Committee are called whenever the Honourable Member in charge of the Department desires its advice on major questions of general policy.

(b) A statement is laid on the table.

(c) The figures are not available in the Government of India but I may say that neither casualties nor desertions have been reported from the Provinces of Bengal, Assam and Orissa in connection with their A.R.P. Services as a result of recent raids.

Civic Guards are the concern of the Home Department to whom any questions concerning them should be addressed.

(d) Arakan not being in British India, no arrangements have been made by the Civil Defence Department of this Government.

(e) The Honourable Member for Civil Defence has not visited the raided places all of which, in British India, were primarily military targets.

I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to parts (i) (ii) and (iii) of his starred question No. 6 and would add that civilian casualties which occurred in five of the seven raids directed against military targets in S.E. Bengal were collected and treated under the special A.R.P. arrangements made for labour working on military projects and for villagers in the vicinity of military targets which have been described in the statement just laid on the table. In one of these raids a village in the vicinity of a military target received some bombs and in this case alone slight damage to civilian property was sustained.

(f) Full A.R.P. measures are in force as described in answer to starred question No. 59 on the 16th September, 1942 and no special measures are necessary. In the industrial areas of Bengal, as elsewhere in India, where the Civil Defence Services have been put to the test in recent months they have given complete satisfaction and no changes in the system have been required.

Statement.

The raids on British India between April, 2, and July, 22, have all been directed against military targets in South East Bengal. The arrangements made by the Government of Bengal for villages in the immediate vicinity of military targets are:—

(i) At each military target there will be a collecting post with a doctor, two first-aiders with necessary medical equipment and two First Aid Parties with cars and staff concentrated in a depot. These collecting posts are in a position to operate in the vicinity and can be supplemented, when necessary, from a small reserve consisting of a number of ambulances, first aid party cars with personnel, a trailer pump, and a spare vehicle for the carriage of equipment kept centrally in the area for the purpose.

(ii) Warnings are passed down to villagers in the vicinity for dissemination by means of hand-operated sirens, the beat of gongs and other similar methods.

(iii) Instructions are given to villagers to dig trenches and to take shelter in them when they get a warning or hear bombs falling. They are taught simple first aid and the best method of dealing with fires; they are made acquainted with arrangements for reporting casualties and the presence of suspected unexploded bombs.

(iv) To supplement medical resources in any particular area a mobile surgical team of 3 doctors has been established at a central point.

(v) In addition to the arrangements made by the Government of Bengal, special arrangements exist for labour employed on military targets in areas of Bengal lying East of Calcutta. They include slit trenches for 100 per cent. of the labour, adequate first-aid arrangements, arrangements for the transfer of casualties to civil hospitals, a system of raid spotters and visual and audible warning signals.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know why does the Government allow the civil population to live near the military areas which are vulnerable?

Mr. N. V. H. Symons: The Government does not prevent them from leaving if they wish to leave.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: But when there is danger, the Government should, on the contrary, ask those people to leave, and they should also make the necessary arrangements for them. Have the Government taken any steps in that direction?

Mr. N. V. H. Symons: No, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the Government do it now?

Mr. N. V. H. Symons: No, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the matter be placed before the Standing Committee?

Mr. N. V. H. Symons: Matters can only be placed before the Standing Committee on which the Honourable Member in charge of the Department desires its advice. I will bring this matter to the notice of the Honourable Member in charge.

DEMOLITION OF MUSLIM GRAVES ON BAIRD ROAD, NEW DELHI.

8. Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state whether the attention of the Government of India has been drawn to an article published on page 4 of the Daily Payam of Delhi, dated the 24th May, 1943, regarding demolition or digging out of a number of Muslim graves by a Hindu Contractor on the Baird Road, New Delhi, near the temple of 'Kali'? If so, what action has been taken by the Provincial or the Central Government, and with what result?

(b) What is the number of graves so dug out?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The question should be addressed to the representative of the Education, Health and Lands Department.

DEFENCE OF INDIA RULES DECLARED ultra vires BY HIGH COURTS AND THE FEDERAL COURT.

9. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable the Defence Member be pleased to state how many times the High Court and the Federal Court have held some of the rules framed under the Defence of India Act to be

MR. GANDHI'S LETTER TO MR. JINNAH.

2. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to place on the table a copy of the letter of Mr. Gandhi, which he addressed to Mr. Jinnah?

(b) Why was it not delivered to Mr. Jinnah?

(c) Did the Government of India consult the British Government before stopping this letter?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) No.

(b) and (c). I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the Press Communiqué issued by Government on May 27th, 1943, a copy of which I place on the table. I have nothing to add to this Communiqué.

Press Communiqué.

The Government of India have received a request from Mr. Gandhi to forward a short letter from himself to Mr. Jinnah expressing a wish to meet him.

In accordance with their known policy in regard to correspondence or interviews with Mr. Gandhi the Government of India have decided that this letter cannot be forwarded and have so informed Mr. Gandhi and Mr. Jinnah. They are not prepared to give facilities for political correspondence or contact to a person detained for promoting an illegal mass movement which he has not disavowed and thus gravely embarrassing India's war effort at a critical time. It rests with Mr. Gandhi to satisfy the Government of India that he can safely be allowed once more to participate in the public affairs of the country, and until he does so the disabilities from which he suffers are of his own choice.

HOME DEPARTMENT;

New Delhi, May 26, 1943.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member if this letter is a sealed letter up to this time and not shown to any one?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I have already answered that question by referring the Honourable Member to the Communiqué issued on the subject.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I only want to know whether that letter has been a sealed letter or whether it has been shown to anybody up to this time.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The question was whether Government would please place on the table a copy of the letter and it seems to me that any other question relating to the letter is not relevant to the question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Has the letter been placed on the table?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I have replied to that question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: My question is whether a letter which could not reach the addressee and was withheld was shown by Government to anyone.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: It has not been shown to any member of the public, if that is what the Honourable Member means.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if the Governor of the Punjab has shown it to some people?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I am not aware of any such thing.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Apart from the public, has it been shown to any Government official?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: It has been handled in the Secretariat in the ordinary course.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH MR. WILLIAM PHILLIPS re PERMISSION TO SEE MR. GANDHI

3. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to place on the table a copy of the letter of Mr. William Phillips in which he sought permission to see Mr. Gandhi, and also a copy of the reply which the Government of India gave to Mr. William Phillips?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Government regret that they are not prepared to accede to the Honourable Member's request.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Why is Mr. Gandhi treated as an untouchable and is not allowed to be seen by any one?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I do not think there is any question of untouchability here.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I want to know the reasons why he is being treated in such a manner as if he is an untouchable or a harijan and is not allowed to be seen by any one.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: If the Honourable Member will refer to the communiqué which I have just placed on the table and which has already been made public he will find the reasons.

INDIAN PRISONERS OF WAR IN JAPAN.

4. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable the Defence Member be pleased to state the number of Indian prisoners of War in Japan?

(b) What is the number of Japanese prisoners of War in India?

(c) What are the facilities given to the Indian prisoners of War in Japan?

(d) Is it a fact that the Indian prisoners of War are not treated according to the International Law? If so, what representations have the Government of India made to the Japanese Government?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: (a) The number of Indian personnel so far notified as being prisoners of war in Japanese hands is 1,270.

68,499 Indian personnel are still unaccounted for and it is believed that the majority are prisoners of war in Japanese hands.

(b) It is not in the public interest to disclose the number of Japanese prisoners of war in India.

(c) Very little information has been received regarding the treatment of Indian prisoners of war in Japanese hands. So far Representatives of the Protecting Power and Delegates of the International Red Cross Committee have not been allowed by the Japanese authorities to visit camps in which Indian prisoners of war are detained. His Majesty's Government have made strong protest through the Protecting Power to the Japanese Government, but so far without avail.

(d) Such information as is available indicates that in many cases prisoners captured by the Japanese have been most brutally treated. Specific cases have been referred to His Majesty's Government with a view to lodging a strong protest through the Protecting Power.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Has the Honourable Member got the names of the prisoners or only the total number?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: So far as I am aware, we have no names of prisoners and as a matter of fact even these numbers we were not able to get for a very long time. The Japanese have been most difficult in this matter.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know what treatment is being given to Japanese prisoners in India?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: We always try to follow the International Conventions which we have entered into, and it does not mean that if another nation breaks these treaties or agreements into which they have entered we should also follow suit.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Cannot the Government of India make an appeal to the international Governments (Voices of "Where are they?") or through some other channel seek to see that Indian prisoners are treated in the same way, failing which retaliatory steps should be taken here?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: We are doing our best but, as I said, the Japanese are most difficult in this matter.

Sardar Sant Singh: Did the Japanese Government make similar inquiries about their prisoners of war in India?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I do not remember; I shall require notice of that question.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Do not the Government of India consider it better not to treat the Japanese prisoners in accordance with the Conventions and thus invite a representation by the Japanese Government?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I said that it is very difficult for this Government to break any of the treaties which they have entered into through the international organisations and if we start breaking them we do not know how far the others will go in maltreating our prisoners of war. And when their ideas are already so low I think it is to the interest of our prisoners still in their hands that we must not make the situation any worse than it is now.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: The Honourable Member said that the Indian prisoners in Japanese hands are most brutally treated. In that case is it incumbent on us to follow the International Conventions and would it not be better to invite representations from the Japanese Government with regard to the treatment of their prisoners?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I will explain the position by giving a little example. If our prisoners in their hands are a hundred thousand and their prisoners with us are a thousand and we say we are going to cut off the heads of their one thousand prisoners with us, they will also cut off the heads of our hundred thousand prisoners with them. Does the Honourable Member want me to do that?

RUPEE NOTES AND PAPER CURRENCY IN CIRCULATION.

5. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state—

- (i) the value of Rupee notes;
- (ii) the value of Five Rupee notes; and
- (iii) the total value of paper currency;

in circulation up to June 30th, 1943?

(b) What measures have been adopted by Government to check the inflation?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) (i) No distinction is maintained in the accounts of the Reserve Bank between rupee coin and one rupee notes. (ii) and (iii). Information as to the value of five rupee notes in circulation is not readily available. The total value of currency notes in circulation will be found in the weekly accounts of the Reserve Bank which are published in the Gazette of India.

(b) I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given to part (b) of Dr. Banerjee's question No. 117 in this House on the 21st of September last. More recent measures in the Central sphere, apart from taxation and borrowing, taken with this end in view are:

- (i) Summary provisional assessment of Excess Profits Tax;
- (ii) Compulsory deposits of Excess profits;
- (iii) Restriction of the extent to which purchase of raw materials and bonuses to employees will be allowed to count for Excess Profits Tax purposes;
- (iv) Control over new capital issues;
- (v) Prohibition of forward contracts and options of certain commodities including bullion; and
- (vi) Cloth and yarn control.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if the Reserve Bank or the Government of India keeps any silver or gold in place of the notes issued?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: A statement is published by the Reserve Bank to indicate the assets which are held against the note circulation.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Then may I take it that they are so held?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The Honourable Member is surely aware that a considerable quantity of gold is held in the reserve.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Will the Honourable Member state what he has done with regard to bonuses, to limit them or to lay down any rules and regulations?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The matter is at present under consideration and the Chambers of Commerce have been consulted.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: How long will it take before the orders are issued?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I cannot say; we have not received replies from all these bodies.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Will these orders include dearness allowance?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I do not think the rule as drafted covers dearness allowance.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Do Government consider forfeiture of press deposits as one of the best means of checking inflation?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: No, Sir, that action is not taken in pursuance of anti-inflationary schemes.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: May I know if paper currency is now in excess of the statutory limit of gold and silver reserve?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: No, Sir, it is not in excess of what is laid down by statute.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will the Honourable Member give me the definition of the word 'inflation'? What I want to know is the limit: If the number exceeds that limit it is inflation and if it does not increase it is deflation. What is that number at the present moment?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am afraid that question will require a treatise to answer it.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Then how will you find whether it exists or does not exist?

(No answer was given.)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: With reference to the six measures which the Honourable Member described, have they resulted in checking the inflation at all?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, Sir. There has been a most notable improvement in the general situation, and the general index has not only ceased to move upwards but has actually begun to move downwards.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: By how many points?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I think it has moved down by six points, but I would emphasise that in dealing with inflationary tendencies the important thing is to arrest the upward movement. That in itself is a tremendous result to achieve, and any downward movement is proportionately more welcome.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Are Government justified in describing it as remarkable?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: If my Honourable friend has made any study of the history of this kind of thing, he will come to the conclusion that the word 'remarkable' is not unjustified.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Why does the Honourable Member accuse others of not studying. Does he study anything?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That question does not arise. The Honourable Member can argue that later.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Where?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Not in the question time.

JAPANESE AIR RAIDS ON FENI, COX BAZAR, CHITTAGONG, ETC.

6. Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: Will the Honourable Member for Civil Defence please state if it is a fact that between April 2nd and June 26th, there have been several air raids by Japan on Feni, Cox Bazar, Chittagong, Dibrugarh, Imphal and near about Sylhet? If so, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state—

- (i) the number of casualties in all the places, separately;
- (ii) the number of people wounded not fatally;
- (iii) the damage to private and Government properties;
- (iv) the number of enemy planes employed in such raids;
- (v) the number of enemy planes destroyed and brought down and the number of enemy planes damaged; and
- (vi) the number of planes of the Allied Nations employed to fight, and the number of such planes destroyed and damaged in such fights?

Mr. N. V. H. Symons: During the period between the 2nd of April and 6th June, 1943, there were seven raids on British India and three on Indian states. All the raids on British India were directed against military targets in South East Bengal.

ultra vires? Which High Courts have held the rules ultra vires and which are those rules?

(b) Is it a fact that recently the Federal Court in India held Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules to be ultra vires?

(c) Has any expert judicial officer revised these rules in order to see if they were valid or invalid?

(d) Do Government propose to appoint some of the Judges of the Federal Court and the High Courts to examine these rules with a view to seeing if all the rules are consistently and properly framed within the rule-making power given to the Government under the Defence of India Act? If so, when? If not, why not?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: (a) and (b). Rule 26 was held to be ultra vires of the Defence of India Act, as it then stood, in a judgment pronounced by the Federal Court on the 22nd April, 1943. The Government of India are aware of no other occasion on which any rule under the Defence of India Act has been held to be ultra vires either by the Federal Court or by a High Court.

(c) No. Government depend on their normal legal advisers for satisfying themselves regarding the validity of rules.

(d) No. The rules are examined from this point of view by Government legal advisers before they are framed.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member who are those legal advisers who have framed these rules in which one rule is found to be ultra vires?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: The legal advisers of this Government are the Law Department headed by the Law Member.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is the Law Member doing this alone?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: The Law Member is responsible and he is quite competent to deal with this matter.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I know he is; I do not want to be told about that. What I am asking is whether the Law Department do this work by themselves, or do they co-opt any people, or is it left to the sweet will of the Law Department?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: When you say that the Law Member is competent to deal with this matter, why do you ask for others?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Competent judges make mistakes; don't they? Therefore I am asking as to whether it is only one officer who is doing this business, or is it done in consultation with any experts, or in a committee. If not, say so.

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: Government are satisfied that their Law Department are quite competent to deal with it and they do not need any other assistance.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Is it not a fact that the Law Member had no hand in the framing of the Ordinances?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I require notice of that question.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Is the Honourable Member aware that the Home Department has quite a lot to do with the framing of these Rules under the Defence of India Rules?

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Does not the Government know who framed the Rules?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: Ordinarily every Department concerned with any Rule is consulted before the Rules are actually published.

Sardar Sant Singh: Who frames the text of the Rules to give them the legal touch.

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: The text of the Rules is framed by the Law Member in consultation with the Department concerned.

JAPANESE RAIDS OVER EASTERN INDIA AND THE PRESENT WAR SITUATION.

10. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the War Secretary be pleased to state how many times, since the last session of the Legislative Assembly, Japan has raided the Eastern borders of India including parts of Assam, Chittagong aerodromes, and Calcutta and its suburbs?

(b) How many aeroplanes of the enemy were brought down or destroyed during the raids mentioned in part (a), and how many British and American aeroplanes were destroyed by the enemy? What is the number of such casualties, and what damage was done by these raids on either side?

(c) Does the Honourable Member propose to make a full statement on the present condition of war in the East and the West and in North Africa; and for that purpose do Government propose to call a secret meeting in order to take the Honourable Members of the Legislature into their confidence? If not, why not?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) Ten times.

Six allied aircraft missing (two of the pilots are safe). Military damage caused by these raids was negligible.

(c) On the understanding that you, Sir, would be prepared to issue directions in the sense of those issued in connection with the Secret Session held on the 27th February 1942, Government will be glad to arrange for the discussion of the war situation on a formal motion to be moved at a secret meeting to be held in the course of the current Session. If this arrangement is made, a full statement on the war situation will be made by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in the course of the debate and in the circumstances I do not propose to make a statement on this occasion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): If a motion like that is going to be made I shall take steps to see that the public gallery is cleared, except the gallery which will be reserved for the Members of the Council of State. I shall also direct that the proceedings will not be taken down as ordinarily.

FAMILY BUDGET OF A PEON.

11. Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Has the Honourable the Finance Member considered the budget of a peon getting Rs. 20 per mensem as pay and having a normal family of a wife and four children?

(b) Does he propose to examine the condition of such a family which has got no other income?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) and (b). A peon in Delhi who draws pay of Rs. 17 and lodging allowance of Rs. 3 is entitled in addition to:

(i) dearness allowance of Rs. 8-8-0 per mensem;

(ii) the supply of wheat or rice at concessional rates. The value of this concession for a peon with a family of the size referred to by the Honourable Member would, at the rates prevailing when the scheme was introduced, be Rs. 13 p. m.

Government consider that by granting the above concessions they have given considerable relief to the staff concerned, who cannot be completely protected from conditions created by the war.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: He has mentioned these rates. Is he aware that these rates are not given at any place except Delhi?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: There are different concessions in different places for Central personnel. I am not aware whether any considerable number of peons belonging to the Central Government are employed in the U. P.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Yes, the Post Office.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The concessions to the Postal and Telegraph personnel have been given in accordance with a different rule.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: The concessional rates are different from the dearness allowance, and I should like to know whether these rates are given to all the servants of the Government of India.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: They are given in localities in which these concessions appear to be called for and in which it is possible for the Central Government to make the necessary arrangements.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Will the Honourable Member state how he arrives at the figure of Rs. 13?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am afraid I shall have to take the Honourable Member through certain details which I could hardly give just now.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Does he want to assure us that these Rs. 13 is a real figure and not only a paper figure?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: As far as I am aware the supplies are being made.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Of all the articles mentioned therein?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I mentioned wheat and rice. Both of these are being supplied.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: In drawing up the Budget, we also considered the rent of the house and the cost of clothing but the Honourable Member has said nothing about them.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Certain peons have quarters supplied for them and most of them have clothing supplied. So that, I do not think the Honourable Member's question arises.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: May I say that these people include persons who are drawing only Rs. 20 p. m. and that in the circumstances it might pay them better if they committed a dacoity, provided their children with a few thousands and went to jail themselves!

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Are these concessions the same for all the principal parts of India or does the Honourable Member vary these concessions?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The concessions are different in different localities. For instance, conditions are different in Calcutta from those in Nagpur, and again from those in Delhi.

Mr. Lalchand Navalsai: Is it a fact that the Honourable Member and also the Member for Railways have seen representations from those to whom the concessional rates have been given detailing and showing that these rates are not sufficient and that they should be increased?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The question seems to me to concern mostly the Honourable Member for Railways.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question. Sardar Sant Singh.

REPRESENTATION FROM SARDAR DIWAN SINGH MAFTOON, PROPRIETOR, The Riyasat, DELHI.

12. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state if he received any written representation from Sardar, Diwan Singh Maftoon, Proprietor, The Riyasat, Delhi, who is in detention in Ferozepore Jail, under Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules, contesting the answer given to my question about him? If so, have Government considered the representation? If so, did they make any independent enquiries?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: A representation has been received from the prisoner and examined. I have nothing to add to the reply which I gave to the Honourable Member's question No. 269 on the 9th March, 1943.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know from the Honourable Member, if, in view of the serious allegations brought against the police officers, he has employed any independent agency to go into the question whether Sardar Dewan Singh Editor of the Riyasat was participating in any subversive movement?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: In my previous reply referred to, I have quoted the following sentence from the judgment of the Court:

"Throughout the whole course of the case, the police have been the subject of attack. I feel compelled to describe this attack as, in all respects, absolutely baseless, and in almost all respects foolish."

This was the judgment of the High Court.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask the Honourable Member, apart from the judgment of the High Court, whether in the representation certain serious allegations have been made about the mala fides of the persons who reported against him? Will he employ any independent agency to make an enquiry whether he participated in any subversive activity?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No, Sir. The High Court is good enough for me.

Sardar Sant Singh: As the cases cannot go to the High Court, will the Honourable Member be justified in dealing with those cases on the report of those very persons against whom open allegations were made in the High Court, though the High Court might have come to a different finding?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

DETENTION OF ABDUL AZIZ OF RAWALPINDI.

13. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state if it is a fact that Abdul Aziz, a Socialist Leader of Rawalpindi, has been under detention under Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules since 1940?

(b) Is it a fact that he was one of the detenus in the Deoli Camp?

(c) Is it a fact that after the discontinuation of the Deoli Camp Jail he was transferred to the Gujrat Jail in the Punjab? If so, in what Jail is he detained, and what is the condition of his health? Was his case reviewed? If so, when?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) Abdul Aziz was detained under the orders of the Punjab Government. The Government of India are not aware of the date of his detention.

(c) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. The Government of India have no information with regard to the second part.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know from the Honourable Member if, before passing the order under Rule 26, which the Government of India alone can pass, the Government of India were consulted in the matter or not?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The Honourable Member is wrong in supposing that only the Government of India can pass orders under Rule 26.

DETENUS AND FACILITIES ALLOWED TO THEM.

14. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state:—

(a) the number of the present detenus;

(b) the number of interviews allowed, the monthly allowance given to these detenus, and the amenities allowed to them about a year ago and now;

(c) if a province where the detenus happen to be, is at liberty to modify the instructions of the Government as regards allowance, interviews; and

(d) under what conditions detenus are released; if a Provincial Government can use their discretion in the matter?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) The total number of persons in detention under rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules on the 1st June, 1943, was 11,717 excluding North-West Frontier Province for which figures are not available.

(b) The Government of India are concerned only with Security Prisoners detained in the Chief Commissioners' Provinces, whose treatment is governed by the Central Government Security Prisoners Order, 1942, a copy of which has been placed in the library of the House. No recent amendment has been made in this Order but under clause 21 thereof its provisions are to some extent modified in their application to Security Prisoners detained in connexion with the Congress movement. A copy of the relevant Order dated the 5th September, 1942, was laid on the table on the 17th March, 1943.

(c) Each Provincial Government is empowered under sub-rule (5) of rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules to determine the conditions under which security prisoners shall be detained in that Province.

(d) The power to direct the release of a security prisoner lies with the authority directing that prisoner's arrest and detention. In the case of a security prisoner detained under the orders of the Provincial Government full discretion rests with that Provincial Government.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if the Government of India are informed when orders are passed under Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules by the Provincial Governments?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member if the Provincial Governments keep the Central Government informed of the persons that are detained and those that are released?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No. We only receive certain informations about the numbers detained. We do not get information about the persons or the reasons.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I take it that general instructions are laid down by the Central Government for Provincial Governments regarding the release of the security prisoners or their treatment? If so, have the Government laid down that security prisoners or detenus, even if they are ill, should not be released till they are almost confined to their death bed?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The Government of India have issued no such instruction.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: With reference to the answer to part (b) of the question, may I know if any monthly allowance or amenities are allowed in the case of security prisoner, Maulana Husain Ahmad Madni?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No. Such people do not get allowances. They are allowed to receive remittances of funds sent to them from outside, but all their requirements are provided for in the place where they are detained.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: With reference to the answer to part (d) of the question, may I know whether the case of this security prisoner falls under the category of that in which the Provincial Government can order release?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Yes. I have already said that the Provincial Government have full discretion to release prisoners.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Will the Honourable Member kindly inform the House if there have been fresh cases of detention under Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules after it was declared ultra vires by the Federal Court?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I have no exact information, but probably there have been other cases of detention under Rule 26 subsequent to the amendment of the relevant clause of the Defence of India Act.

FOREIGN EVACUEES IN INDIA.

15. Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state:—

(a) the total number of evacuees in India, and the countries they came from;

(b) the expenditure at present incurred by Government on maintaining them; and

(c) if there is any agreement between this Government and the Government of the Country the evacuees came from, in respect of expenditure incurred in maintaining or looking after them; if so, what the nature of the agreement is?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) The Home Department are concerned with evacuees who are European British subjects or subjects of allied or neutral Foreign States. I lay on the table a statement giving the information in respect of these evacuees.

It is estimated that the total number of Indian and Asiatic evacuees in India is about five lakhs. It is not possible to give accurate figures according to the countries they came from, but nearly all of them came from Burma.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the answers given on the 16th September, 1942, to Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra's questions Nos. 64 and 65. The scale of advances shown in the statement laid on the table on that date still continues to be in force in respect of those who are residing outside Evacuee Camps. I lay another statement on the table which gives the scales of financial assistance given to evacuees who have been accommodated in Evacuee Camps.

(c) Yes. The Governments concerned have agreed to reimburse to the Government of India the expenditure incurred from Indian revenues. Accordingly, the expenditure on European British subjects from all countries except Burma is debited to His Majesty's Government. In the case of European Burman and Anglo-Burman evacuees from Burma, the expenditure is debited to the Government of Burma. The expenditure on Poles and on subjects of the Netherlands East Indies is already being recovered from time to time from the Polish Government and the Royal Netherlands Government. The expenditure on evacuees of other allied or neutral foreign states is recovered through the Consuls of the countries concerned.

The approximate number of European British subjects or subjects of allied and neutral foreign States who have been evacuated to India is given below:—

Number of evacuees from (a) Balkans	1,079
Number of evacuees from (b) Malaya	1,797
Number of evacuees from (c) Burma	2,632
Number of evacuees via (d) Turkey	602
Number of evacuees from (e) Port Blair	22
Number of evacuees from (f) S. Russia	8
Number of evacuees from (g) China	29
Number of evacuees from (h) Iraq	122
Number of evacuees from (i) Japan	27
Number of evacuees via (j) Ceylon	16
Number of evacuees via (k) Afghanistan	1
Number of evacuees from (l) Australia	3
Number of evacuees from (m) Poland	2,636
Number of evacuees from (n) Netherlands East Indies	15
Number of evacuees from (o) Countries not known	571
Total	9,560

Statement showing the monthly rates of advances paid to evacuees residing in the British Evacuee Camps at Coimbatore and Ootacamund.

Single adult	Rs. 65
Married couple	Rs. 120 per couple.
Dependants over 12 up to a total of 3	Rs. 45 each.
Dependants over 12 years over a total of 3	Rs. 35 each.
Children 6-11 years up to a total of 3	Rs. 28 each.
Children 6-11 years over a total of 3	Rs. 25 each.
Children under 5 years	Rs. 25 each.

NOTE.—Evacuees do their own marketing and cooking within these advances which are given for maintenance only. These are not intended to cover other charges, e.g., accommodation in the camp, light, water, supervision, medical treatment, education of children and transport. Taking all these charges into account, the monthly average cost of an evacuee in the camp, comes to Rs. 135 approximately.

Scale showing rates of maintenance allowance prescribed for Polish refugees residing in the Polish Refugee Camp at Kolhapur.

(i) Adults	Rs. 53-12-0 each.
(ii) Children of 12 years and over	Rs. 45 each.
(iii) Children from 6-11 years	Rs. 28 each.
(iv) Children under 6 years	Rs. 25 each.

The average monthly expenditure per child in the Polish Children's Camp at Balachedi in the Nawanagar State is approximately Rs. 60.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: With regard to Anglo-Burmans and Anglo-Indian evacuees from Burma, their expenses are debited to the Burma Government. Have the Burma Government got any source of revenue at the present moment?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I understand that they are being financed by His Majesty's Government.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: If I understood the Honourable Member aright, the Central Government takes care of the European evacuees, and I presume the Provincial Governments do it in the case of the Indians. If so, why?

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Racial discrimination!

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Indians are looked after by the Honourable Member for the Indians Overseas Department.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: But why?

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Will the Honourable Member make enquiries whether some of these evacuees are making a living in this country and still continuing to get this assistance?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Well, I have not enquired into the circumstances of each individual evacuee. Those who are not in the evacuee camp may possibly have got other employment, but I have no information. If the Honourable Member will give me instances, I will go into them.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Will the Honourable Member make enquiries with regard to a certain community that has come from other parts of the world to India who are making a very handsome living at the cost of this country and still drawing the allowances that the Honourable Member is good enough to give them?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That is rather a vague field for investigation. If the Honourable Member will be good enough to give specific instances, I will gladly go into them.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: The Honourable Member has only to refer to the Press and the complaints in the Press about a certain class of people who are in this country making an excellent living, and I am told, also drawing allowances from the Honourable Member's Department?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I am afraid that my study of the Press is not sufficiently detailed to enable me to understand to whom the Honourable Member is referring.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Double advantage!

RENT CONTROL DIRECTIONS ISSUED BY DISTRICT MAGISTRATES IN THE PUNJAB.

16. Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the Defence Member been drawn to the directions issued by the District Magistrates in the Punjab presumably under Rule 81(2)(b) of the Defence of India Rules controlling the rents and regulating the letting and subletting of accommodation residential or non-residential?

(b) Were the Government of India consulted in the matter?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: (a) The Honourable Member probably refers to orders which have been issued by certain District Magistrates in the Punjab under rule 81 (2) (b) of the Defence of India Rules. If so, the answer is yes.

(b) No.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if under the Defence of India Rules, the powers delegated by the Central Government to the Provincial Governments can be delegated by the Provincial Government to the District Magistrates?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I presume that the action taken by the Provincial Government or their officers is in accordance with the law.

Sardar Sant Singh: It is not a question of presumption. Either it is in accordance with the law or it is not. May I know if the Honourable Member has consulted the Law Department, of which he has been so proud recently as to whether the power can be delegated to a District Magistrate?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: May I ask if the Honourable Member himself has taken the trouble to study the rules and is he in a position to say that the action taken is illegal or against the law?

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: On a point of order? Can a member to whom a question is addressed ask a question of the member who is putting the question? Is that in order?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That is not the ordinary way of answering questions.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask the Honourable Member, in view of the text of the order forwarded to him, whether he has consulted the Law Department if under rule 81 (2) (b), where the power is given to the Provincial Government alone, the Provincial Government can delegate such power to the District Magistrates. Is not that order illegal?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I presume that the order is in accordance with the law and the answers that I have given are in accordance with the opinion given to the Defence Department. I cannot add anything more.

CONSTITUTION AND THE WORKING OF THE INDIAN SOLDIERS' BOARD.

17. Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable the Defence Member please state the constitution and working of the Indian Soldiers' Board with special reference to the inquiry and disposal of applications for leave by Indian soldiers overseas?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: The Indian Soldiers' Board as such is not concerned with the applications for leave. Applications for leave on compassionate grounds may be forwarded by the Commanding Officer of the Unit concerned to the Deputy Commissioner or Collector for verification when he considers it desirable. The Deputy Commissioner or Collector who is also the President of the local District Soldiers' Board where there is one may make enquiries through the District Soldiers' Board or employ his own revenue subordinates or pass on the case to the Civil Liaison Organisation whichever he considers most suitable.

The District Officer on receipt of the report makes a recommendation to the Commanding Officer concerned.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I am thankful to the Honourable Member for the information regarding the procedure about inquiry but I should like to have some information about the constitution of the Indian Soldiers' Board?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: You have got a separate question on that, I believe.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I have no recollection whether I have sent a separate question.

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: If you will put down a question, I will answer it.

N. A. A. F. I. ORGANISATIONS.

18. Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable the Defence Member please state:—

(a) if he is aware of the N. A. A. F. I. organizations; and

(b) whether it is possible to run canteen organisations on the same lines; if not, why not?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: A statement is laid on the table of the House.

Statement.

(b) Being attracted by the N.A.A.F.I. idea like the Hon'ble questioner, in September, 1942, I requested the Director of Canteens to make a review of the existing Canteen systems and organizations with a view to their improvement wherever possible. Whereas the Canteen contractor system has worked and does work excellently in peace-time within India, it has proved unsuitable for service with the armed forces in the field. Consequently, so far as troops in war areas are concerned, we have already adopted the N.A.A.F.I. idea. So far as troops within India are concerned the Canteen contractors provide the most convenient and efficient method of serving the troops. This agency has been established for a long time and has tided us over a period of enormously increased activity remarkably well. The expansion in the service provided by the contractors to meet the increase in the number of troops within India calls for our appreciation.

2. In recent years the whole Canteen contractor system has been overhauled. The name of every Canteen contractor has to be registered with the Quartermaster General in India before a contract is given to him. All goods for Canteens are purchased through a central organization presided over by an officer, Sir John Abercrombie, who is appointed and paid by Government and who is a Government servant. The contractors have to pay to this organization, the prices fixed by Government. At the other end, the contractors have to charge from the troops fixed prices for all goods and under orders of Government they have to keep printed lists of all goods with their prices marked against each item in every canteen, so that every soldier who walks into a canteen can read in this list the prices fixed for all the goods sold in the Canteen. Consequently, the profits of the canteen contractors have been cut to the very minimum.

3. On account of the nature of the needs and the small financial resources of the Indian soldier it is seldom that he will find his way into a canteen. The counterpart of the canteen so far as he is concerned is the regimental bania's shop. Units who wish to deal with the Canteen Stores Department register their Banias with the Quartermaster General in India, after which they are entitled to purchase their requirements from the Canteen Stores Department. A very large proportion of Indian Units have so registered their Banias, thus enabling the Canteen Stores Department to purchase requirements in bulk with resultant cheapness to the Indian troops through the Regimental Bania. In operational areas, however, militarised canteens cater for and are patronised by Indian and British troops equally.

4. In my recent tours in various parts of the country I have heard nothing but praise for the Canteen contractors who have proved to be excellent servants of the soldier and who have on many occasions contributed liberally at the request of the regimental officers towards the improvement of amenities for troops. Whether an organisation run by Government servants would serve the needs of the soldier as well as the present canteen contractors and their staff, must be doubtful. It must be remembered that it would take a long time to recruit the trained and organised staff necessary to replace the contractors. We also have certain obligations under the Memorandum of Association of Canteen Contractors e.g., we have to disturb their business as little as possible and to give them a year's notice before winding up their business completely. I see no prospect of Government taking any such course during the present war so far as work inside India itself is concerned.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Does that statement disclose how this organisation is financed?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: So far as I am aware, it pays for itself?

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: That may be. How was this institute started? Where did the capital come from?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: The capital must have been provided by His Majesty's Government.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Why does not the Government of India provide capital on similar lines for the Indian Soldiers' Board?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: In this statement, I have given you the system under which our canteens work. Our canteens are working under a system of canteen contractors who are members of a syndicate and all the material sold in these canteens is purchased on a co-operative basis through this syndicate. The syndicate is presided over by Sir John Abercrombie who is a Government servant and it is he and his committee who make the purchases. These things are sold to these contractors at fixed prices and these contractors are allowed to sell these goods in the regimental canteens also at fixed prices. Another thing to remember is that these canteens exist only in British regiments and not in Indian regiments. In the Indian regiments, the canteen is represented by the baniya's shop, because the Indian soldier's pay is low and he cannot afford to go to these canteens. The banyas are also authorised to buy from these canteens such material as they wish to sell to the soldiers at exactly the same prices as those charged in the British regiments.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I am again thankful for the information given. Why cannot this Government supply the funds and purchase the material and work, on a co-operative basis, these canteens. Where is the difficulty?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: The Government are in a position to do these things but the only thing is when a thing like this can be done and whether it will be beneficial from the point of view of the Government or the soldier. I have given you the full facts in the statement. So far as this war is concerned, it is impossible to change over from the canteen contractor system to the Government system. I have seen many of these canteens working and my own impression is that these canteen contractors are rendering excellent service. They are practically the servants of the regiments. Whether the Government agency system worked by Government servants will be equally efficient as the present system is to be seen in the future but so far as the present war is concerned, it is impossible to change over from the canteen contractor system to a Government system or the N. A. A. F. I. system for the British troops.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: May I know whether the Honourable Member is aware of the great demand for these free canteens for Indian troops in the main centres of India? May I ask further whether the Honourable Member is aware that in one place where such a canteen works it has been proved that they are very necessary and fully availed of and greatly appreciated? If the answer to my question is in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member see to it that funds are provided all over India to establish such canteens for Indian soldiers? I am not talking of the European soldiers. I am only referring to Indian soldiers?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I should like to take this opportunity of paying my tribute to these organisations and the persons who are rendering

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member will only answer the question.

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I say that a great deal is being done for the Indian soldier. Sir Cowasjee Jehangir knows, that, in Bombay voluntary organisations for Indian soldiers have provided free canteens in many places.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Only in one place.

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: No, no. You are thinking of Bombay. I am talking of the whole of India, not of Bombay alone.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Are there any other places?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: Yes. Come to Lahore and I will show you one working at the Railway station. I agree that more canteens are needed for the Indian soldier. Whether we can introduce a system under which we can persuade the Government to pay for all these canteens is a question mainly of finance and nobody will be more pleased than myself to do it if we had the money.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Is the Honourable Member aware that the N. A. A. F. I. make a profit of more than 10 per cent.?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

LEASE-LEND AID TO INDIA.

19. Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari (on behalf of Mr. K. C. Neogy): Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state:—

(a) whether his attention has been drawn to various reports emanating from the United States of America in regard to the value of Lease-Lend aid given to India, particularly to a report of the United States Office for War Information wherein it is stated that Lease-Lend aid to India is valued over 295 million dollars;

(b) whether his attention has been drawn to a message dated Washington, March 12, 1943, wherein it is reported that the Lease-Lend Administrator, Mr. Edward Stettinus, mentioned that 595 million dollars of Lease-Lend aid had been extended to India upto 1st March, 1943;

(c) the nature and amount of Lease-Lend goods so far received in India;

(d) how much out of the above total has been for the benefit of China; and

(e) how much out of the above total has been debited to His Majesty's Government on account of such goods or aid as is being utilised on behalf of His Majesty's Government?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: As I said in the course of my reply to the Finance Bill debate on the 17th March, 1943, we are engaged in the task of completing our records of lease-lend aid and reconciling them with those which the Indian Supply Mission in America have been asked to maintain. We are actively pursuing this and have made good progress. It will however be some time before the task is completed; and until this stage is reached it is not possible to quote any figure or to attempt to determine the respective share of India and His Majesty's Government. As soon as I am in a position to do so, I hope to give the necessary information to the House at a suitable opportunity.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know if under the arrangement any limit has been reached and that only up to that limit India will get these commodities under this lease-lend bill from United States of America?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: As far as I am aware, no such limit has been fixed, but it is the case that appropriations are made from time to time by the United States authorities and presumably in building up these appropriations, they make allocations or work out allocations to different countries.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is the Honourable Member in a position to mention the aid which India has given under lease-lend arrangement?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I think there is another question in regard to reciprocal aid.

PROCEDURE FOR ALLOCATION OF LEASE-LEND LIABILITIES BETWEEN THE BRITISH AND INDIAN GOVERNMENTS.

20. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to refer to the statement made by him on the 17th March, 1943, in the Legislative Assembly while explaining the methods of allocation of Lease-Lend expenditure to His Majesty's Government and the Government of India, respectively and the difficulty in making an accurate appraisal thereof, as also to his statement that well-known per capita rates for the issues made to the American Forces could be adopted for giving the information concerning reciprocal Lease-Lend, and state (i) the exact procedure adopted in allocating the respective liabilities of His Majesty's Government and the Government of India in regard to Lease-Lend aid received in this country; and (ii) the exact amount of per capita rates adopted by the Government of India in assessing the cost of such services as rations, clothing and travelling expenditure of the Forces of the United States of America and the cost of repair jobs done for American transport in India?

(b) As regards the aforesaid per capita basis, is a similar procedure adopted in other countries, such as England, Australia, New Zealand, etc., giving reciprocal aid to the United States of America? If so, what is the per capita basis adopted in those countries for the purpose of calculating these items of expenditure?

(c) Is it a fact that in regard to the reverse Lease-Lend aid given by Australia to American Forces stationed in that country, the actual values of the services and the quantities of items of food, etc., consumed by the Forces of the United States of America are taken into account in assessing the reciprocal Lease-Lend aid given by Australia to the United States of America?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) (i) The problem in India is to allocate between His Majesty's Government and the Government of India the Lease-Lend stores arriving in India for their joint use. Had Lease-Lend not been in existence the one Government or the other would have had to pay for these stores, and the allocation of Lease-Lend stores arriving in India will follow the financial liability which would otherwise have arisen for providing the stores. The liability attaching to the receipt of Lease-Lend stores whatever it may be is of course assumed by the Government to which they are allocated in this way. Accordingly lease-lend aid to railways, posts and telegraphs, and other civil concerns—public and private—in India, is allocated to India. In the case of Lease-Lend supplies sent to India for defence purposes the allocation between the Government of India and His Majesty's Government is determined in accordance with the principles of the Financial Settlement and therefore depends upon the nature of the stores and the manner in which they are ultimately utilised. India is thus allocated Lease-Lend stores the cost of which if they had not been lease-lent, she would eventually under the Settlement have had to bear herself. Such defence stores consist mainly of tanks and M.T. vehicles of all kinds since His Majesty's Government have accepted complete liability for providing other non-indigenous stores and equipment required for India's expanded army and air forces. The problem of the best practical method of allocating Lease-Lend aid between India and His Majesty's Government is now being tackled, and I shall be happy to give the Honourable Member details of the procedure eventually adopted in this matter as soon as it has been worked out.

(ii) From an examination of the actual transactions involved it became apparent that the issues of rations, clothing, etc., to the U.S.A. forces in India under Reciprocal Aid arrangements were not sufficiently regular or uniform to enable their value to be assessed even approximately by the capitation rate method. It has accordingly been decided for the present to adopt direct method of assessing the value of these supplies and services.

(b) and (c). The Government of India have no information on the subject at present in view of the reply to part (a) (ii) the points do not arise.

INSTRUCTION TO SUGAR FACTORIES IN GORAKHPUR DISTRICT FOR CONTRIBUTION TO WAR LOAN.

21. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state whether the attention of the Government of India has been drawn to a complaint that Sugar Factories in the district of Gorakhpur (United Provinces) have been instructed by the local officials to contribute a sum of rupees one lakh each towards the War Loan or Bond as a part of the Special Defence Savings Drive in the United Provinces launched by His Excellency the Governor?

(b) Is it a fact that the said instruction is practically operating as a compulsion?

(c) If any such instance has been brought to the notice of the Government of India, what action has been or is proposed to be taken in the matter?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a), (b) and (c). A representation on the subject was received and has been passed on to the Government of the United Provinces. The matter is one entirely within the competence of the Provincial Government.

DEARNESS ALLOWANCE TO CENTRAL GOVERNMENT SERVANTS ON THE PUNJAB SCALE

22. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state if his attention has been drawn to the decision of the Punjab Government sanctioning Dearness Allowance of 20 per cent, to Government employees drawing salaries between Rs. 75 and Rs. 250 per mensem? If so, do Government of India propose to sanction a similar sum to the employees of the Central Government?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I have seen a statement in the press to the effect mentioned by the Honourable Member but I believe this matter is still under the consideration of the Punjab Government. In regard to the second part of the question, the Central Government has adopted an All-India Scheme of dearness allowance and does not automatically adhere to the scheme prescribed by any particular province.

DESIRABILITY OF CREATING AN INDIAN BRANCH IN THE WELFARE AND AMENITIES DIRECTORATE.

23. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Defence Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that the Army Department has constituted the Directorate of Welfare and Amenities solely for the purpose of looking after the amenities of the troops and the provision of entertainment for their amusements?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that the said Directorate is composed entirely of European Military Officers?

(c) Is it a fact that some of these officers do not understand and can not speak any vernacular language?

(d) Is it or is it not a fact that these officers of the Welfare and Amenities Directorate have naturally little or no taste and knowledge of Indian music, singing or dancing?

(e) Is it or is it not a fact that while half a dozen Concert Parties have been provided for British troops, the number of parties actually on tour for Indians is not more than two in existence? If not, what is the correct number of Indian parties with their names, and the places where they were constituted, and under what conditions, i.e., their composition and the qualifications of their actors?

(f) Is it or is it not a fact that the Concert Parties for British troops are composed of highly paid personnel of professionals in the art of music and dancing, while those for the Indian troops consist mainly of ordinary bazaar nautch girls and male singers with no talent chosen in a haphazard manner by the European staff? If not, who chooses the personnel of the Indian Concert Parties now in contract with the Military, and on what standard of qualification?

(g) Is any Indian Concert Party at present acting and touring with troops overseas? If so, what is the name of that Party, and its personnel?

(h) What is the number or proportion of Indian soldiers serving in India and overseas to the number of British troops serving under the Indian Command?

(i) What amount of money, separately, was spent by the General Headquarters on entertaining British and Indian troops during the year 1942 and the first four months of 1943?

(j) Have Government considered the advisability of creating and constituting a branch in the Directorate of Welfare and Amenities of an Indian section composed purely of Indians both from among the Indian military officers and civilians from outside?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: A statement is laid on the table.

Statement.

(a) No. The Directorate of Welfare and Amenities in addition to looking after the amenities of the troops and the provision of entertainments is also responsible for their Welfare Education and for Family Welfare. It also holds a watching brief on all other matters affecting the Welfare of British and Indian troops in India.

(b) No. At Headquarters two officers deal with entertainments, one is British and the other Indian, and as both British and Indian troops have to be catered for, this seems a fair division.

(c) Does not arise, particularly as some of the staff are concerned with British troops only. The officers who deal with British troops may not know the vernacular language, but officers who come directly in touch with the Indian troops all do. For example, the section which deals with the Welfare Education of Indian troops contains 4 British officers of the Indian Army and 13 Indian officers of the Indian Army.

(d) All officers working under the Welfare and Amenities Directorate do not deal with dancing and singing only. As mentioned above, a great deal of the work concerns Welfare Education and Family Welfare of the troops, but those who deal with the entertainment side of the activities of this Directorate do possess a knowledge of Indian music, singing and dancing.

(e) No. There are three, Concert Parties at present for British troops and four run by General Headquarters for Indian troops in India and an additional Party is being organised as from September. In addition to this, Southern Army run an Indian Concert Party, Eastern Army are arranging for two from 22nd August, and Central Command is organising 2-3. General Headquarters Concert Parties are engaged through impresarios—2 by Mr. Dziubinski and 2 by Mr. Haren Ghosh. None of the parties consists of less than 15 persons. In addition to the parties organised by General Headquarters, and by Armies a large number of lower formations and units have organised their own entertainment parties and General Headquarters is encouraging these activities in every way.

(f) No. British General Headquarters Concert Parties are composed of mixture of amateurs and professionals; Indian Concert Parties are all professionals, selected by the above mentioned impresarios, and are of a high standard.

(g) Yes. Two Indian Concert Parties are touring with troops overseas—one raised by Mr. Dziubinski and the second by the Punjab Co-operative Society. The latter is shortly returning to India and is being replaced by another Party raised by Mr. Dziubinski.

(h) It is regretted that this question cannot be answered for security reasons.

(i) Money spent for entertainment of British troops during the year 1942, and the first four months of 1943, was approximately Rs. 92,500 excluding travelling expenses. Expenditure on entertainment of Indian troops was approximately Rs. 1,79,000 excluding travelling expenses.

(j) Does not arise.

SCHEME FOR CREATING AN INDIAN BRANCH IN THE WELFARE AND AMENITIES DIRECTORATE.

24. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Defence Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that a concrete scheme with full details to work out the same for creating the Indian branch of the Welfare and Amenities Directorate was submitted to the Director General, Welfare and Amenities, in February this year and it was highly appreciated and accepted by that Officer after careful consideration? Has that scheme yet been put into force? If not, why not?

(b) What military rank does the officer-in-charge of the Concert Parties for Indians occupy? Does this officer travel with the Entertainment Parties, and is this officer also in-charge of the Entertainment Parties for British troops? What are the qualifications of this officer in the technique of Indian music, singing and dancing?

(c) Is it or is it not a fact that the officer-in-charge of Concert Parties for the Indian section of the troops invariably occupies a rank senior to officers commanding the various units in a station, or the officers-in-charge of units and battalions?

(d) Is it or is it not a fact that this officer-in-charge of Entertainment Parties goes round after the singers have finished their songs to solicit credentials from the officers-in-charge of units and battalions to show good work of the Concert Party?

(e) Has or has not this practice been mainly adopted by way of creating evidence of the good work done by the present Directorate for the benefit of Indian sepoys?

(f) Are Government aware that the Indian section of the military is not at all satisfied with the existing arrangements for their entertainment?

(g) Is it proposed to lay the draft of the concrete scheme referred to in (a) above on the table together with all the papers of acceptance of the same and all the correspondence concerning the same?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: A statement is laid on the table.

Statement.

(a) Government Departments are constantly receiving suggestions from members of the public with regard to many matters. The Director General of Welfare and Amenities is no exception. As the Honourable questioner has not given the name of the person who made the particular suggestion which he has in view, I am afraid, I am unable to answer this question. But he may rest assured that any scheme submitted by any person will always receive the very best consideration of the Director General, if any such schemes are not accepted, the only reason for such non-acceptance can be that on close examination, they were found to be unworkable or defective or unnecessary because of the existing practice being in consonance with the suggestions made.

(b) The Manager of Indian Concert Parties is appointed by the impresario engaged to raise the Party and has no military rank. He travels with his own Party and is not in charge of any Entertainment Party for British troops. His qualifications are judged by the impresario who raises the party.

(c) This is not understood. The Manager of an Indian Concert Party, as explained in (b) above, does not hold a commission and, therefore, is not senior to officers commanding units, etc.

(d) Government have no information but even if a man tried to find out what opinion others have of his work, such a course cannot be exceptionable.

(f) No. No report to this effect has been received.

(g) In view of the answer to question (a) above, does not arise.

DESIRABILITY OF CONSTRUCTING A MOSQUE IN THE INDIAN MILITARY ACADEMY, DEHRA DUN.

25. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the War Secretary please state if it is or it is not a fact that when the construction of the Indian Military Academy at Dehra Dun was at first undertaken, a sum of about Rs. 10,000 was kept for a mosque and a similar amount for a worshipping place of other communities? If not, what are the facts?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that no mosque exists at present in the Military Academy at Dehra Dun and the Muslims employed there feel considerable difficulty in offering prayers?

(c) In view of the considerable number of Muslims working in the said Academy, do Government propose to consider the advisability of meeting their religious needs by constructing a mosque there? If not, why not?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a), (b) and (c). The information required is being obtained and will be laid on the table in due course.

HEALTH OF MR. RAFI AHMAD KIDWAI, A DETENU IN BAREILLY JAIL.

26. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai, an Ex-Minister of the United Provinces, who is a detenu in the Bareilly Jail is having a slight temperature for the last eight or nine months and has lost more than 30 pounds in weight? If not, what is the fact?

(b) In view of the delicate health of Mr. Kidwai, do Government propose to consider the advisability of releasing him unconditionally or at least on parole for a proper treatment?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) I have no information.

COMPLAINTS OF DETENUS IN BAREILLY JAIL.

27. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that one Sher Jang was arrested under the orders of the Government of India and is a detenu in the Bareilly Jail?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that eight prisoners were repatriated from the Deoli Jail to the Bareilly Central Jail as detenus?

(c) Is it or is it not a fact that Sher Jang and these detenus are keeping very bad health and have lost from 10 to 20 pounds in weight?

(d) Is it or is it not a fact that these prisoners are not allowed to sleep in the open even in the hot summer days?

(e) Is it or is it not a fact that these detenus were allowed to write post cards to their homes in November, 1942 for winter clothing, but were not allowed to make a request for anything else, even for shoes and cotton clothing?

(f) Is it or is it not a fact that the detenus wrote the post cards that very day but the cards were posted on the 3rd January, 1943, and the clothing received was actually given to the detenus at the end of January, 1943?

(g) In view of the continuous complaints of the detenus, do Government propose to consider the advisability of making an enquiry into the complaints, and to give the necessary relief?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) Yes.

(b) No. 60 security prisoners were transferred from the Deoli Jail to the Bareilly Central Jail of whom six were Central Government prisoners and the remainder prisoners of the United Provinces Government.

(c) to (g). I have no information to the effect stated, but I have called for a report and a further statement will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

INDIAN OFFICERS FOR TRAINING IN ORDNANCE DEPOT AT KASU BEGU, FEROZEPUR CANTONMENT.

28. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the War Secretary please state if he is aware—(i) that quite recently sixteen officers of the Indian Army were selected for training in the Ordnance Depot at Kasu Begu (Ferozpur Cantonment) under orders from higher authorities and half of these were to be Indians; (ii) that this order was whittled down by including a Jew and an Anglo-Indian; (iii) that all the officers were given theoretical training and put to a written test in which the Indians did better than the Europeans; (iv) that the officer commanding has reported that all the Indians are unfit for appointment in the Ordnance Branch, and that the Anglo-Indian only should be selected; and (v) that Indians are not given any opportunity for any independent practical work in the Advance Department?

(b) Does he propose to call for the result of the written test, and to see how the officers who acquit themselves better than Europeans are being declared unfit for this work?

(c) What does he propose to do to improve the conditions of service of Indians in the Advance Department of the Indian Army?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) (i) and (ii). Sixteen Indian Army Officers recently underwent a course of training at Kasu Begu Ordnance Depot. They formed part of a batch of 403 Infantry officers posted by the Military Secretary, General Headquarters, to the Indian Army Ordnance Corps. These officers were distributed for training amongst Ordnance establishments throughout India. Of the sixteen sent to Kasu Begu eight were British, six were Indian, one was a Jew and one an Anglo-Indian. No orders were issued that half of this party were to be Indian and half British, and no question as to differentiation between nationalities ever arose.

(iii) The training was both theoretical and practical and in the written test on theoretical training the first six were placed in the following order—

(1) British officer. (2) Indian officer. (3) Anglo-Indian officer. (4) Indian officer. (5) Indian officer. (6) British officer.

In the practical training tests however the British officers did better than the Indian candidates.

(iv) No, Sir. Of the 16 officers under training, seven British, two Indian and one Anglo-Indian were reported on as fit for retention. The remainder were recommended for return to their infantry units.

(v) Indian Officers are given the same opportunities as British Officers for practical work in the Ordnance Department.

(b) No, Sir. The written tests comprise only one method by which an officer's capabilities can be assessed. An officer's personality, powers of leadership and command and administrative ability can only be assessed by observations over a period by experienced instructors. The Chief Ordnance Officer, who is responsible for the training, is the best judge of an officer's suitability for posting in the Indian Army Ordnance Corps.

(c) Indian Commissioned Officers of the Indian Army Ordnance Corps receive the same rates of pay as those in other branches of the Services. In addition they draw Indian rates of Corps pay. For the purpose of promotion, they are treated in exactly the same way as other officers of the Indian Army Ordnance Corps.

MAXIMUM PERIOD OF STAY OF EUROPEAN AND INDIAN MILITARY OFFICERS AT GENERAL HEADQUARTERS.

29. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the War Secretary please state the maximum period of stay of a European Military officer at the General Headquarters as against an Indian, and what the reasons are for disparity, if any?

(b) What does he propose to do in the matter?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) and (b). Although in peace time the normal maximum period was four years, in war time there is no prescribed maximum period of stay for an officer at General Headquarters. Officers, whether British or Indian, are transferred to and from General Headquarters as the exigencies of the service demand.

I have examined the figures of officers who left General Headquarters within the last six months, and I find that the maximum stay of a British officer was one year, 11 months and 25 days, while the maximum stay of an Indian officer was one year, six months and six days. I can assure the Honourable Member that there is no disparity in treatment between British and Indian officers in this matter.

RETIRED EUROPEAN AND INDIAN I. C. S. OFFICERS RE-EMPLOYED BY GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

30. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state the number of European and Indian I. C. S., retired officers re-employed by the Government of India, and the salary as well as the pension drawn by each of them?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The information asked for is being collected and will be laid on the table of the House.

GIVING OF EUROPEAN SECRETARIES TO INDIAN MEMBERS OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

31. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state the reasons and circumstances under which each of the Indian Member of the Executive Council of His Excellency the Viceroy has been given a European Secretary, and how long this policy is likely to be continued?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The facts are not as stated in the first part of the question. The second part does not arise.

LEASE-LEND AID AND LOANS FROM THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

32. *Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state: (a) the total amount of money borrowed up-to-date from the United States of America (i) with security (ii) without security; and if the money so borrowed was with security, the nature of the security offered or given; and

(b) the total value of goods procured up-to-date from the United States of America under the Lease and Lend System, and the security offered for repayment, if any?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) Nil.

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Information promised in reply to parts (a) and (b) of starred question No. 34, asked by Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha on the 11th February, 1943.

EXPENDITURE BY PORT HAJ COMMITTEES ON FACILITIES FOR PILGRIMS.

(a) The following amounts were spent by the Port Haj Committees for the provision of facilities and amenities during the years 1934-35 to 1939-40 :—

Year.	Port Haj Committee, Bombay.			Port Haj Committee, Karachi.			Port Haj Committee, Calcutta.
	Rs.	A.	P.	Rs.	A.	P.	Rs.	A.	P.

NOTE 1.—The cost of establishment of the Port Haj Committees which assist Haj pilgrims, is not included in the above figures.

NOTE 2.—The expenditure incurred from Central Revenues on the vaccination and inoculation of pilgrims and the Police employed at the ports of Bombay, Karachi and Calcutta is not included in these figures.

NOTE 3.—The figures shown in Table (vii) on page 127 of the Special Hajj Inquiry Report do not represent the net income of the Port Haj Committees as 1/3rd of the pilgrim-pass fee received from Indian pilgrims was paid to the Provincial Haj Committees concerned.

(b) The facilities other than those detailed in Part II of the 'Manual of Instructions for Pilgrims to the Hejaz' (1938 Edition), are as follows :—

Bombay.—Repatriation of poor and destitute pilgrims from Bombay to their respective homes.

Karachi.—Hire of kanats, tents, etc., for pitching them in the compound of Pilgrim Camp.

Construction of compound wall of the Pilgrim Camp.

Calcutta.—Repatriation of poor and destitute pilgrims from Calcutta to their respective homes.

To

The Secretary to the Government of India,

Department of Commerce, New Delhi.

SUBJECT:—Activities of the U. K. Commercial Corporation.

SIR,

The Committee of the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry have carefully considered the Press Note, dated 30th July 1942, issued by the Government of India, on the activities of the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation in India. They welcome this explanation about the various aspects of the U.K.C.C. but, while giving due weight to the various considerations mentioned therein, they regret they do not feel that the Press Note is reassuring in regard to the important issues in connection with this Corporation which have been raised by this Federation and other Indian Commercial bodies. They would, therefore, like to examine the Press Note and submit their views to the Government.

2. The Corporation, as the Government acknowledge, is an organisation financed and controlled by His Majesty's Government. This fact alone makes it more influential and powerful and places it in a position of greater advantage in the matter of its purchases and sales. The Committee cannot still see the propriety of permitting an organisation of this character to introduce in the foreign trade of India, exercise ordinary trade functions in this country and operate in competition with Indian commercial interests under conditions which definitely give it a specially favoured position. The Committee cannot help feeling that this commercial organisation has been imposed upon India by the British Government and it is apparent from the Press Note that the various Departments of the Government concerned, such as Commerce, Supply and Transport, consider it their duty to provide whatever facilities the Corporation demands. The Committee are not aware whether any such similar organisation is functioning in any of the Dominions like South Africa, Australia or Canada, and fail to understand why such an expert organisation to assist and encourage trade and exports is reserved for the particular benefit of this country. It might be added in passing that the Chairman of the U.K.C.C., Lord Swinton, is the Governor of West Africa, which indicates the political and economic importance and the widespread ramifications of this organisation. There is no doubt that the U.K.C.C. does enjoy in several respects a monopolistic position in the matter of India's exports. This is all the more surprising in view of the fact that owing to occupation of several countries by the enemy and the difficulties of sea transport, India is in a particularly advantageous position for supplying various materials, raw and manufactured, especially to the countries in the Middle East. It is these countries, therefore, which should be anxious to obtain supplies from India and India need hardly be anxious to invoke the aid of the U.K.C.C. to provide supplies of these articles, even as in the case of food grains, at the cost of depletion of her own stocks.

3. The Committee are not impressed by the contention of the Government that the privilege enjoyed by the U.K.C.C. is in respect of trading in commodities of essential war importance. At the present time, most of the trade is for one reason or another in materials connected with the war; restrictions in respect of priorities and shipping have reduced civilian trade strictly so called, to a comparative insignificance. Moreover, if the fundamental object for setting up such an organisation is to handle commodities of military importance which cannot be done by private trading interests, it should strictly concern itself with articles like arms, munitions, railway materials, machinery, etc., which cannot be carried through normal commercial channels; the Corporation should not deal with articles in which Indian commercial interests have traded for years and even after the outbreak of this war such as piecegoods, yarn, jute, jute manufactures, sugar, wheat, shellac, tea, oil and oil-seeds, rice and other raw materials and manufactured goods. If an outside body, which was originally and avowedly established for advancing British exports and sale of British manufactures in the Balkans is permitted to intervene in the trading of these commodities and purchase and sell them, then it is a clear infringement of freedom of trade and interference with its normal channels. The position becomes still more objectionable from the Indian view-point when it is remembered that this Corporation utilises all Government, semi-Government and transport agencies for its own transactions and carriage while this privilege is denied to Indian shippers and traders in their own country.

4. The Press Note states that the Corporation handles operations which cannot be performed adequately by normal Commercial enterprise or which lie beyond the scope of private trading concerns. The fact is that so far as sales to Russia, for example, are concerned, certain transactions were actually effected directly with the Soviet Government by Indian merchants, without the intervention of the U. K. C. C., and payments were made at the time of shipment by the Reserve Bank of India on behalf of the Russian Government. As regards Iran also, shipments of sugar were made to that country from India by Indian shippers and irrevocable Letters of Credit were opened by the Iran Government in favour of certain Indian firms. But Indian exporters were subsequently reluctant to enter into fresh business because of the Government grant of monopoly of exports of sugar to Iran to the U. K. C. C., through their Notification of 18th April 1942. Similarly, merchants also used to send hides to Iran to its tanneries though they are not permitted to do so now. Some tyres and tubes also went through India to Iran after the outbreak of the war, and gunnies, which were largely bought, were also stopped. Although till now, tea is being exported by private traders to Iran, there are persistent reports in Calcutta market that the trade in this commodity will also be handed over by the Government to the U. K. C. C. The Committee cannot accept the contention that because war communications with Russia, Iran and other countries in the Mid East have become difficult, it is necessary to hand over the transactions, in connection with supplies to these countries, to an outside body like the U. K. C. C. There are also established traders who did business with Saudi Arabia in rice and other food-stuffs from Calcutta, Burma and Bombay, although, as the Press Note itself admits, the Corporation effected shipments of rice to Saudi Arabia on two occasions at the request of the Saudi Arabian Government as also of Burma rice to Ceylon on behalf of a London owner. The Committee would point out that the very fact that the Saudi Arabian Government made this request to the Corporation or that the London owner delegated this work to the Corporation is due to the influence wielded by this body and is an illustration of its privilege. Similarly, the Government themselves acknowledge the error that was made in regard to shipments of oil and oil-seeds, which shows not only how this Corporation functions in a manner so as to ignore even the Government of India and acts directly under the orders of His Majesty's Government but also provides another instance of the manner in which the Corporation has introduced in normal channels of trade. In the face of all these facts, it passes the Committees' comprehension as to how it can be reasonably argued either that the merchants themselves are not prepared to take the risks of trading in the present abnormal times or that the Corporation has not, in fact, tended to supplant established shippers and divert normal channels of trade.

5. The Press Note had contradicted the example given about the sale of sugar in Persia at an exorbitant price in order to disprove the contention that the Corporation is making undue profits and has stated that it retains 'no more than a reasonable margin to cover expenses and payment for services'. The Committee would like to know whether the Government of India themselves are aware of the prices at which the U. K. C. C. makes its purchases in India or sells in the markets supplied by it, and whether they have taken any measure to see that the margin pocketed by the Corporation out of this difference does not amount to undue profits. The Committee would like to know, for example, in the specific case of sugar, as to whether the Corporation purchases sugar in India at the controlled rate of Rs. 12-3-6 per maund, and what is the exact price at which such sugar is actually sold by the Corporation itself in Iran. It is of little avail to argue that 'the high prices at which sugar is reported to be sold in Persia are the resultant of a number of local factors', unless the Government of India give definite information as to the price charged by the Corporation, and are prepared to assure the public that they have control over the prices at which the Corporation sells these articles purchased in India in markets abroad. Incidentally, it might be observed that the benefits of the Corporation's earnings are not derived by the Indian Exchequer, so that India is not a gainer in that respect. The Government are at pains to make out in the Press Note that the Corporation makes its purchases from exporters in the line, but it should not be overlooked that the percentage reserved by the Corporation for itself could very well have been appropriated by the buying countries if it had not intervened. The attention of the Committee has also been drawn to the fact that in making its purchases, the U. K. C. C. demands unpriced invoices from the seller and it is presumed from this that the Corporation would fill the prices at its discretion, thereby not disclosing the rate at which it has really obtained the goods. The Corporation is a commercial organisation and the public in India, where it functions, is surely entitled to know in what manner it operates so far as its prices and profits are concerned. If the Government of India are unable to throw any light on the subject, it is incumbent on them to address His Majesty's Government on the subject and make a public statement in consultation with them.

6. The Committee would now briefly refer to some of the specific commodities referred to in the Press Note. As regards wheat, for example, the Press Note states that 'responsibility for arrangements for requisition and supply was centralised, at the request of the Ministry of Food, in the U. K. C. C., which was specially equipped to perform that task', and that 'there had been no previous exports of wheat from this country to Persia and consequently no organised machinery to deal with such exports'. Apart from the question of effect of such wheat exports to other countries on the stocks of foodstuffs in the country, which would naturally not be the concern of a body like the U. K. C. C., it is pertinent to enquire whether if India's wheat trade had no such experience despite the large exports handled in the past by Indian shippers and merchants, what were the special expert knowledge and experience which this Corporation, established only a couple of years ago, had to handle this trade. In regard to sugar again, it seems as though the Government have gone out of their way in order to divert the mode of transport and interfere with normal channels of trade in order to hand over this trade to the U. K. C. C. When the Indian sugar industry was already exporting sugar to Iran by land, through normal trade channels, it is difficult to understand the necessity of permitting exports to Iran by sea through a foreign agency particularly when there is a serious dearth of shipping tonnage and when the overland route could have been encouraged instead of being closed down. A position was thereby created wherein exports by sea by the U. K. C. C. were considered to be normal while the hitherto normal exports by land by Indian exporters were found 'to interfere with the arrangements for the distribution of sugar' and were consequently sought to be limited on the plea of growing shortage of sugar in India. The nett result has been the substitution of Indian exporters by the U. K. C. C. and the Indian Sugar Mills Association were informed by the Government that 'no fresh licences will be issued for export to Persia except to the U. K. C. C.' It is only a technical question as to whether the stocks are directly made available to the U. K. C. C. or through the Ministry of Food. Besides, this Federation has urged in the past that the Ministry of Food should make its purchases in India through the Government of India and that could easily have been arranged in respect of sugar exports instead of delegating this work to the U. K. C. C. The Committee have already dealt above with certain other commodities. They cannot, therefore, help observing that the position attained by this organisation is not different from that of a monopoly when business houses interested in the trade from this country to Near Eastern countries cannot get licences for export of commodities and when the privileges and facilities enjoyed by the Corporation are such as no individual trader or business house can expect from the Government of India. The attention of the Federation has, for example, been drawn by some of its Member-Bodies to the effect that the Corporation is obtaining priorities and special facilities in respect of railway bookings, while it need hardly be pointed out that so far as shipping is concerned, the British Ministry of War Transport would provide all requisite facilities to this Corporation functioning on behalf of the British Government. The Committee might further point out in this connection that arrangements have also been arrived at a couple of months ago by the U. K. C. C. with the Turkish Government whereby Turkey's trade with the British Empire would be maintained through the medium of the U. K. C. C. The Agreements between this Corporation and the Turkish Government were significant for India since all trade between this country and Turkey would in course of time be handled by this Corporation and it seems doubtful whether in that case the existing exporters to Turkey would be allowed to carry on their usual trade with that country which has been steadily growing in recent years. It should be pointed out in this connection that it is not merely a question, important though it is, of earnings and profits. Because the U. K. C. C. operates on its own, it appoints its own agents and representatives abroad and thereby deprives Indian merchants, exporters and shippers of the opportunity of establishing direct contacts with commercial interests and markets outside India which would be of no small benefit to Indian commerce in the years after the war.

7. As regards the use which the Corporation has made of the Supply Department for making its purchases, as explained in the Press Note, it is well-known that the Supply Department makes its purchases at certain controlled rates. If this Corporation is, therefore, allowed this price advantage, it is hardly fair to the Indian commercial and industrial interests. It is true that the Press Note states that where such purchases are for the purposes of ordinary civil trade, however valuable that trade may indirectly be in the military sense, the Corporation is not granted any price advantage not available to commercial houses in India, but it is not clear as to why the Supply Department undertakes these purchases on behalf of the Corporation and as to what is the procedure which is being followed in regard to other purchases which do not come within this category. It has been stated in the Press Note that these special advantages are given by the Supply Department because it secures the avoidance of competitive buying which would react adversely on the prospects of the Supply Department obtaining their own requirements in the requisite quantities or at satisfactory prices. If, however, this implies that the activities of the U.K.C.C. constitute competitive buying and may have adverse reactions, it does tend to support the contention that the Government of India should not permit such activities.

8. The Committee feel that if the Government are anxious that operations which cannot be adequately performed by ordinary commercial interests or which lie beyond the scope of private trading concerns should be carried out by an independent body, there is nothing to prevent them from setting up an Indian agency for the purpose of handling such export trade. No national government responsible to the people would have agreed at the dictation of His Majesty's Government to provide all assistance in the shape of priorities, facilities and price advantage to an outside agency, and permit it to operate in its markets and capture its export trade to the detriment of its own merchants and exporters. The Committee have particularly to emphasise in this connection the adverse repercussions which such an organisation is likely to have in the post-war period on India's trade. They regret that Government are completely silent in their Press Note as regards the suggestion put forward to them by Indian commercial bodies regarding the establishment of an Indian agency or organisation to carry on the work performed by the U.K.C.C. as also regarding the post-war effects of such an organisation. The Committee cannot accept the view which is sometimes urged that this Corporation is a measure of war exigency. In the first place, they would like to enquire whether the Government of India have got any assurance or guarantee from His Majesty's Government that this organisation will not be permitted to continue its operations and be dissolved at the end of the war. It should be stressed in this connection that the United States of America have also got a similar organisation called the 'Defence Supply Corporation', which handles export trade with America and is already exercising control in respect of several commodities exported from India, such as shellac, gunnies, etc. Moreover, before this war, foreign trade was already becoming a branch of foreign diplomacy in Europe and America. The keen and intense rivalry between England and Germany, for example, in the Balkan States and the whole of Eastern Europe, as well as between these countries and the United States in South America and other countries for capturing the markets showed that the question of foreign trade was becoming a political issue. The Board of Trade had devised various methods of pushing British export trade and the British Treasury was subsidising these exports and different organisations like the Export Credit Corporation were set up to further this object. The importance of maintaining exports for a country like Britain in the years after the war will be vital particularly because of the heavy financial indebtedness of the United Kingdom to the U. S. A. and the need to maintain adequate imports and prevent the sterling from unduly depreciating. It is, therefore, evident that the British Government will adopt all possible measures to develop Britain's export trade and will make such agencies as the U.K.C.C. a permanent and integral feature of their national economy. In fact, such organisations have been described as pillars of British prosperity and would be consolidated and expanded in the years after the war. The Committee would, therefore, like to impress on the Government of India the imperative necessity of their representing this important aspect of the matter to His Majesty's Government, and to obtain complete assurances to the effect that this organisation will neither be permitted to interfere in India's trade nor should it be allowed to take advantage of its present position to stabilise itself in order to serve the interests of British exporters and manufacturers. The Committee consider that this is the fundamental reason why the Government should conduct their operations in regard to India's exports through an Indian agency.

9. The Committee trust that the Government of India will give their careful consideration to the points of view submitted by them.

I have the honour to be,

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE.

From

S. N. RAY, Esquire, I.C.S.,

Joint Secretary to the Government of India,

To

The Secretary,

Federation of Indian Chamber of Commerce and Industry,

28, Ferozshah Road, New Delhi.

SIR,

I am directed to invite a reference to your letter No. F. 2218/589, dated the 25th September 1942, on the subject of the activities of the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation in India, and to express regret for the delay in sending a reply.

2. The Government of India are aware that the Indian commercial community view with considerable misgivings the entry of an organisation having the financial backing of His Majesty's Government. The Government of India realise that there exists an impression in Indian business circles that the Corporation's ultimate goal is the establishment of ascendancy over India's export trade with neighbouring countries and that that the Corporation enjoys certain privileges and concessions in regards to civil trade which are denied to private exporters. This basic misconception regarding the Corporation's functions and activities would not have arisen if it had been more generally known that the Corporation's present activities in India consist, as to some 90 per cent., of inter-Governmental supplies for Russia which are not dealt with on a profit making basis at all and could otherwise be effected only through the Supply Department of the Government of India. The Corporation's share in India's export trade with other countries has been insignificant and has consisted, for the most part, of minor shipments for which His Majesty's Government have had to assume responsibility for special reasons and to some extent, of such items as jute goods needed to pack their own purchases in Turkey and other Middle East countries. How small these exports have been may be judged from the following figures:

Country to which exported.	Percentage of the total exports from India during the period April 1942 to February 1943, representing proportion of export made by the Corporation as principal during the same period.
Arabia	3.2
Egypt	2.1
Palestine and Syria	1.3
Iraq	0.03
Persia	5.9
Aden	0.1
Sudan	0.4
Other Middle East countries.	Negligible (total value about Rs. 2.6 lakhs).

The figures given above show that the Corporation have not hitherto made any appreciable incursions into the ordinary civil trade, while as regards the future, it may be assumed that no extension of the Corporation's activities will take place without the Government of India being fully consulted in the matter.

3. In the light of the information given in the preceding paragraph, it will be realised that much of your apprehensions are without foundation. The Corporation has mostly confined itself to arranging and handling supplies against certain inter-Governmental transactions and there are no reasons to suppose that its activities are likely to result in permanent control by United Kingdom interests of India's trade with the Middle East countries. The Government of India's attention has in this connection been drawn to a statement made by the Minister of Economic Warfare in the House of Commons to the effect that he was not prepared to give any assurance that the activities of the Corporation will be terminated after the end of the war. It is understood that His Majesty's Government feel that any such undertaking would preclude the use of the Corporation's machinery for any purpose in the unpredictable and difficult conditions which may exist in the period following the war. The agency of the Corporation might be found useful, for example, to meet the exigencies of recovery and reconstruction in the territories now under enemy occupation but in so far as Indian interests are concerned, it may be assumed that the Government of India will always be ready to take up with His Majesty's Government the question of any interference with private trade by the Corporation.

4. In view of the foregoing statement of the position it is perhaps unnecessary to stress the point that no special significance need be attached to the Corporation's handling of certain specific consignments of rice, yarn and wheat in 1941-42, although this is referred to in the letter under reply as illustrations of the Corporation's interference with Indian trade. The exact circumstances in which the handling of these particular consignments was entrusted to the Corporation were fully explained in the Press Note issued in July 1942.

5. The functions undertaken by the Corporation in certain Middle East countries and the establishment of subsidiaries in those areas have naturally attracted some attention in India, but it is not correct to say that the Corporation enjoys any monopoly of trade in those areas. The Corporation's activities are subsidiary to the functions and policy of the Middle East Supply Centre which concerns itself, in consultation with the Governments of the respective territories, with the framing of import programmes for the essential civil requirements of those areas. The Centre is compelled by shipping considerations and by the economic necessities of the countries in question to limit imports to bare essentials, to programme ahead, to take steps to secure equitable distribution and to make the area self-supporting to the greatest possible degree. That these arrangements hardly displace commercial channels in so far as exports from India are concerned will be evident from the figures given in paragraph 2 but it is necessary to explain some points in further detail. For example, the Middle East countries are mostly self-sufficient in regard to oilseeds, but to the extent to which Aden has been compelled to draw some supplies from India, it has been arranged that orders should be placed through normal commercial channels. Again, with reference to the alleged agreement between the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation and the Turkish Government whereby Turkey's trade with the British Empire would be maintained through the medium of the Corporation, the position is that the Turkish Government have found it convenient, for reasons of their own, to arrange some supplies through the Corporation from sources other than India; but in so far as Commercial shipments from India are concerned, the Corporation do not exercise any control and have openly expressed themselves, as not interested in assuming any responsibility for the sponsoring of such shipments. Similarly in regard to exports of tea from India under the block purchase scheme, the reports in the Calcutta market that the trade in this commodity would be handed over to the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation have proved to be groundless. The arrangements are that the Tea Controller for India purchases the exportable surplus of Indian tea on behalf of His Majesty's Government, and arranges distribution to the various consuming countries. He utilises the services of a panel of established exporters in this country in selecting and allocating the teas required for the different markets, and the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation do not enter into the picture. On the importing side, the Governments of the countries themselves act as sole buyers in most cases, while in others it is understood that steps have been taken to utilise the services of normal importers.

6. Particular reference has been made to the part played by the Corporation in handling exports of certain goods from India to Persia. The facts have already been explained in the Press Note issued in July 1942. Since then, the supply of hides to the Persian factories engaged on war work has had to be suspended owing to the necessity for conserving stocks in India. Lorry tyres and tubes are supplied through the Corporation specifically for use in the special war transport services in Persia while in regard to sugar the proposal to send some small supplies for distribution in East Persia through the Corporation has not yet materialised. It is necessary to repeat, in view of the misapprehension which prevails in the matter, that no sales of Indian sugar have yet been made by the Corporation in Persia. Exports of jute goods to Persia have never been canalised through the Corporation, but the volume of exports through ordinary commercial channels has had to be restricted to essential requirements.

7. With regard to the allegation of profiteering made against the Corporation it has already been stated that supplies to Russia are not made on a profit making basis. The Government of India have been informed that, taking its activities as a whole, the Corporation operates at a loss and even in particular cases where profits may seem to arise, there is generally some off-setting factor. It has been stated that the Corporation demands unpriced invoices from sellers and that this is done deliberately with a view to concealing the rate at which it has obtained the goods. This, however, is not at all correct. The real position is that in respect of supplies to Russia, full priced invoices are first obtained from suppliers and despatched to London where the financial settlement with Russia is finalised. Goods are then despatched by various routes, and the so-called "unpriced invoices" are really specifications of the goods which are required as enclosures to the Bills of Lading or the Railway receipts.

8. Most of the criticisms against the policy of the Supply Department in respect of purchases made by them for the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation have already been answered in the Press Note issued in July 1942. The Supply Department make purchases on behalf of the Corporation only in so far as it is necessary to meet the essential requirements of Empire and allied countries in regard to commodities which are controlled and are in short supply. About 90 per cent of such purchases are for Russia and the only alternative to these supplies being handled by the Corporation would be for the Supply Department themselves to undertake the entire work.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

S. N. RAY,

Joint Secy. to the Govt. of India.

MACHINE-GUNNING ON A MOB FROM AIR NEAR RANAGHAT IN BENGAL.

- (a) Yes.
- (b) The Chief Minister of Bengal is referring to the same incident as that mentioned by the Deputy Commander-in-Chief in his reply to question No. 66 in the Council of State on the 25th of September, 1942. The facts are that the pilot of an aircraft saw a crowd on the railway line near Ranaghat about 16 miles south of Krishnagar. The aircraft dived five times over the crowd in order to ascertain whether or not they were saboteurs. As it was not possible to make this certain and as the crowd did not disperse the Pilot fired 15 rounds over their heads with no intention of causing casualties. No bombs were dropped and there were no casualties. The occurrence took place on the 21st of August, 1942 and a report of the incident was received by the Bengal Government on the 22nd August. The discrepancies in the Chief Minister's statement may be due to a misunderstanding of the material laid before him.
- (c) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative, and liaison was maintained through a civil liaison officer of the Bengal Government attached to Military Headquarters in Calcutta. Air Force patrols acted in accordance with instructions received from those headquarters.
- (d) Orders to Pilots were issued by the Defence Service authorities in accordance with instructions relating to the use of regular forces in aid of the civil power. Pilots were told to fire on persons who, so far as they could judge, were committing acts of sabotage or looting, and aircraft sorties were employed to reconnoitre and patrol lines of communication not otherwise adequately protected. Strict orders were given that no bombs were to be dropped and cannon were not to be fired. Restrictions were also placed on the number of machine guns which could be used by multi-machine gun fighters.

DEATH OF MR. NAOROJI DUMASTA.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): Sir, it is with great regret that I have to refer to the death of our friend Mr. Naoroji Dumasia, who was a Member of this Assembly when he died on the 22nd of June last. Mr. Dumasia was an elected Member of this House from the 29th November, 1923, to the 21st January, 1926, and again from the 21st August, 1930, till the end of the fourth Assembly some time in 1934. Mr. Dumasia died at the age of 73 after a prolonged illness which became serious in the first week of last June. He was one of the oldest journalists in the Bombay Presidency and had a career extending about 50 years during which he was associated with Indian statesmen and leaders of political thought in different parts of the country. He was the oldest member of the editorial staff of the Times of India. He was a member of the Bombay Municipal Corporation for 10 years and for some time of the Bombay Improvement Trust and also of the first Bombay Legislative Council created under the Montford Reforms. Later on, he came to this House. In this Assembly, in recent times, because of his illness, he did not speak very often, but whenever he did he spoke with the courage of his convictions. Sir, we deeply mourn his loss and beg of you to convey to his family our deepest sympathies in their bereavement.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions, Muhammadan Rural): Mr. President, I join the Honourable the Leader of the House on behalf of my Party in mourning the loss of one of our veteran colleagues. As the Honourable the Leader of the House has stated, he had been in public life for a very long time. He started his career long before some of us were even born and he rendered useful services in the spheres of life in which he was engaged. I request you to convey the sympathies and the condolences of our Party to the members of the family of Mr. Dumasia.

†Not included in these Debates, but a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.—

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Sir, I associate myself and my Party with the expression of sorrow which has been uttered by the Honourable the Leader of the House at the death of Mr. Dumasia. He was a public man for a long time and rendered useful service to the country in a variety of ways. I also desire that we should send our condolences to the bereaved family.

Sir Henry Richardson (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, Mr. Dumasia was liked and respected by all Members of this House and we in this Group much regret the passing of this very loyal and friendly colleague. We join most sincerely in the sentiments which have been expressed.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I rise to join in the tribute that has been paid to Mr. Naoroji Dumasia who was a Member of our Party. It is painful duty for me that we should have to perform once again this painful duty so far as my Party is concerned. He is the second veteran of our Party whom we have lost. After the tribute that has been paid by the Leader of the House I have very little to add except to say that I come from the same city from which he came here and in our city we can never forget the name of Mr. Dumasia as one of the oldest journalists, and a public citizen in the public life of Bombay. As a member of the Municipal Corporation, he did all he could for the welfare of the people and I must say that his activities in that capacity never showed any bias of any communal type whatsoever. That is a great trait for which we must certainly admire a person specially who has done so much service and specially more in these times.

With regard to this Assembly, as the Leader of the House has pointed out, he served this Assembly on three occasions, but I can tell you, Sir, that as a member of our Party we have lost in him a Member who was very free and frank in our deliberations and in this House. We seldom have people who speak out their minds without any reservation and freely and frankly. His loss has been a great loss to us and I beg of you to convey our tribute to the family of the deceased.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I share the sorrow that has been expressed by the Leader of the House and by the other speakers and I associate myself with the tribute that has been paid to the memory of the deceased, Mr. Naoroji Dumasia, who, as the Leader of the House has pointed out, had rendered for a long time valuable services as a journalist. I shall forward the condolence of the Assembly to the bereaved members of the family of the deceased.

MOTIONS FOR ADJOURNMENT.

REFUSAL OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA TO FORWARD MAHATMA GANDHI'S LETTER TO MR. M. A. JINNAH.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have received notice of a motion for adjournment of the House from Sardar Sant Singh. The Honourable Member wishes to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, refusal of Government of India to forward the letter of Mahatma Gandhi to Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah, M.L.A., President of the Muslim League in May last.

I want to know the facts from Government about the refusal to forward the letter.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell (Home Member): Sir, the Government of India made the public know the fact that they had refused to forward this letter in a Communique of the 27th May last where they said that the refusal was in accordance with their known policy in regard to correspondence or interviews with Mr. Gandhi. A similar case arose at the last Session when it was sought to move the adjournment of the House on the ground of refusal of Government to allow the Bombay Conference Delegation to interview Mr. Gandhi, where I also pointed out that this policy had been in existence for a considerable time and that there was nothing new in it. On that, Sir, you held that this was not a new or an urgent matter coming within the meaning of the rules. I submit, Sir, that this case is exactly of the same kind and there is no question of policy to discuss.

[Sir Reginald Maxwell.]

Sardar Sant Singh (West Punjab: Sikh) My submission in this respect is this.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): How do you distinguish the two cases?

Sardar Sant Singh: This is not a question which relates to the policy of the Government which they had enunciated before as it is argued by my Honourable friend the Home Member. The position is that the Government of India are committed to the policy of bringing about an agreement between the various communities in this country, and here was a chance of bringing about that agreement. They stood deliberately in the way and thus flouted their own declared opinion. Therefore the Government of India require to be censured on this point.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): As the Honourable the Home Member pointed out, that policy is nothing new.

Sardar Sant Singh: I am saying that this is a new point, namely, the non-forwarding of the letter to Mr. Jinnah which was intended for the purpose of bringing Mahatma Gandhi and Mr. Jinnah together and to bring about an agreement between the two major communities in this country. For this act the Government of India require to be censured.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I hold that this motion is not in order. The policy relating to communication between Mr. Gandhi and the outside public is nothing new. It was in existence, I believe, during the last Session also when a similar motion was ruled out of order. I hold that this motion is not in order.

REFUSAL OF PERMISSION TO MR. W. PHILLIPS TO SEE MAHATMA GANDHI.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next motion is also in the name of Sardar Sant Singh. This has been disallowed by the Governor General on the ground that the motion cannot be moved without detriment to the public interest. I ought to mention to the House that the motion relates to the refusal of the Government of India to grant permission to Mr. W. Phillips, the personal representative of Mr. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, to see Mahatma Gandhi.

DEPRIVING CERTAIN LOCAL GOVERNMENTS OF THEIR POWER TO CONTROL FOODSTUFFS WITHIN THEIR RESPECTIVE JURISDICTIONS.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next motion is in the name of Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury. He wishes to move:

"That the House do adjourn to discuss a matter of urgent public importance, namely, the action of the Government of India in issuing Notification No. 5-DC(28)43, dated New Delhi, the 18th May, 1943, under the Defence of India Act, 1939 (XXXV of 1939), amending proviso to sub-rule (2) of Rule 81 of the Defence of India Rules and thereby depriving the Governments of Bengal, Assam, Bihar and Orissa of their power to control foodstuffs within their respective jurisdictions and making null and void all orders passed by the said Governments up to 18th May, 1943, in this connection and thereby forcing up prices of foodstuffs in the Provinces of Assam, Bihar, Orissa, specially of rice beyond the capacity of purchasing power of the population of these Provinces."

Is there any objection to this motion being moved?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque (Food Member): Sir, the whole question including this will be the subject-matter of debate in this House in connection with the motion which I have tabled. Sir, I feel that a question like this cannot be discussed in isolation from all other factors that are in operation, and the conclusions which he has drawn are not also correct.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That is, on the merits.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: Yes. In view of the fact that another motion which has been tabled has not yet been discussed, this motion will not be in order.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): What is that motion?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: To discuss the food situation, including the discussion of the subject which has been taken up in this adjournment motion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): This motion raises a specific question.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: That specific question also will come within the scope of the Resolution which I have tabled.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury (Assam: Muhammadan): No, Sir. This is quite a separate thing. It is a specific question. This motion has been tabled in order to discuss this matter which is of urgent public importance, namely, the action of the Government of India in issuing the notification under the Defence of India Act.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Is there any objection to leave being granted?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I object.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): As objection has been taken, will those Honourable Members who are for leave being granted rise in their places?

(Less than 25 Honourable Members stood up.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Less than 25 Members have stood up and so, leave is refused.

FAILURE OF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL'S COUNCIL TO PROTEST AGAINST LEGISLATION BY ORDINANCES.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next motion is in the name of Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya. He wants to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, viz., that the Governor General's Council failed to protest against the practice of issuing laws through ordinances by the Governor General on his own individual responsibility without consulting either the Governor General's Council at a meeting or the Legislative Assembly and thereby lowering the dignity of both. I think this is too general and vague and so it cannot be allowed.

DEPRIVING CERTAIN LOCAL GOVERNMENTS OF THEIR POWER TO CONTROL FOODSTUFFS WITHIN THEIR RESPECTIVE JURISDICTIONS.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): No. 12 of which notice has been given by Maulvi Abdul Ghani is the same as that of Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury and is therefore barred.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani (Tirhut Division: Muhammadan): Sir, I am referring particularly to Bihar and Orissa.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That does not make any difference; the question raised is the same.

MALADMINISTRATION IN DISTRIBUTION OF WHEAT.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next motion is in the name of Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad who wants to discuss the maladministration in distribution of wheat leading to miseries of the people in spite of the presence of sufficient stock of wheat in the country.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I do not want to move it because this is also covered by the previous motion.

FAILURE TO BRING IN CIRCULATION SUFFICIENT NUMBER OF SMALL COINS.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next motion is in the name of the same Honourable Member who wants to raise the question of the failure of Government in bringing in circulation sufficient number of small coins leading to the rise in prices of small coins.

I think this question was debated at the last Session on Mr. Bajoria's motion.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadian Urban): It was not about hoarding but only about the scarcity of coins.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman (Finance Member): The motion, Sir, is substantially the same as was debated in the last Session. The only change in the situation is that it has improved in various parts of the country and that the output of coins has also greatly increased.

Dr. Sir Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions: Muhammadian Rural): Sir, the Finance Member promised in the last Session that he would be minting small coins in large numbers and the trouble would be at an end. But the trouble is now all the greater and for a paper rupee note you only get 13 or 14 annas so that its purchasing power is less than one rupee in small coin. That is why we want to discuss it here.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I think this motion is not in order as it raises practically the same question that was debated in the last Session on the motion of Mr. Bajoria.

FAILURE TO PUT INTO OPERATION THE RECIPROCITY ACT AGAINST THE COLONIAL AFRICANS RESIDING IN INDIA.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next motion stands in the name of Mr. Deshmukh who wishes to discuss the failure of Government to put into operation the Reciprocity Act against the colonial Africans residing in India at present after the passing of what is known as the Pegging Act by the Union Government of South Africa.

I understand a day has been allotted for the discussion of this matter?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare (Member for Indians Overseas): Sir, I am moving today for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Reciprocity Act and also to discuss the situation arising out of the Pegging Act.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): Sir, as the matter is exceedingly important and we know that Members of this House and the public outside are very anxious to know the position, Government are prepared to give a day for the discussion of this vitally important question.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh (Nagpur Division: Non-Muhammadian): Sir, in the circumstances I withdraw the motion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next motion is the same as the previous one.

FAILURE TO SUPPLY FIRST-AID EQUIPMENT, MEDICINES, ETC. ON THE MAIL TRAIN WHICH COLLIDED WITH GOODS CARRIAGES AT BORGAON NEAR AKOLA.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Then by another motion Mr. Deshmukh wishes to raise the question of the failure of Government to supply materials necessary for first medical aid, medicines, stretchers, etc., and equipment such as electric torches, etc., on the mail train which recently collided with goods carriages at Borgaon near Akola which resulted in greater loss of life and limb and property than it otherwise would have been if the train had been equipped as mentioned.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall (Member for Railways and War Transport): Sir, I do not appear to have received notice of this motion although I am aware of its existence.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh (Nagpur Division: Non-Muhammadian): I sent a notice on the same day as I sent it to the President.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): If he has not received the notice it cannot be moved.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: But I do not necessarily wish to stand on that as it may have gone astray. I would say, however, that this matter of the accident at Borgaon is under investigation by the Chief Inspector of Railways under the Posts and Air Department; and in the circumstances if this adjournment motion were moved I should not be able to make a comprehensive statement until that report is received. I would also point out that there was first-aid equipment on the train and also full medical relief equipment on the train, and in the circumstances I would suggest that my Honourable friend should withdraw the motion.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: The matter under inquiry relates to the responsibility for the accident; the motion relates not to that but to the absence of first-aid equipment on the train.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Will not all these matters that are mentioned in the motion be gone into at the inquiry?

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: No, Sir; that is intended to trace the culprits who by negligence or otherwise caused this accident, and will not relate to things which I seek to discuss by this motion, i.e., inadequacy of medical aid.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I would merely say that if the adjournment motion were moved I should not be able to make a much longer speech than I have already made.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Is there any objection to leave being granted?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Sir, I have no objection but I would again appeal to my Honourable friend to withdraw the motion because I do not think it will serve a very useful purpose.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The motion will be taken up at 4 o'clock, but according to the convention of this House, if the business on the agenda is finished earlier than 4 o'clock, the motion will be taken up as soon as that business ends.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Yes, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to amend the Reciprocity Act, 1943."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE AMENDMENT BILL.

The Honourable Sir Asoka Kumar Roy (Law Member): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to make certain provision for appeals in criminal cases tried by a High Court exercising original criminal jurisdiction be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, Sir Syed Raza Ali, Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan, Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj, Sir George Spence, Mr. P. J. Griffiths, Sardar Sant Singh and the Mover and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Sir, I believe this motion will be entirely uncontroversial. Honourable Members will recollect that the Bill was circulated on a motion moved by the Honourable the Law Member on the 16th of February last. The opinions received disclose unanimous approval of the principle of the Bill. I need not at this stage refer to the various points of detail which have been raised, but if the House will accept my motion, I have no doubt they will be carefully considered by the Select Committee. I do not think that on this motion I should take up the time of the House any further. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved.

"That the Bill to make certain provision for appeals in criminal cases tried by a High Court exercising original criminal jurisdiction be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, Sir Syed Raza Ali, Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan, Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj, Sir George Spence, Mr. P. J. Griffiths, Sardar Sant Singh and the Mover and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): I will not take up much time of the House. I must say that this amendment is very much overdue. I will explain in a few words what this Bill aims at. At present, there is no right for a person convicted by a High Court under the original jurisdiction to appeal to anyone.

Originally, when British rule came into force, there were Courts called King's Courts and also Company's Courts. Then, the King's Courts came to be called Supreme Courts and the Company's Courts remained as such. At that time there was no appeal allowed against the decisions given by the High Court. Subsequently when the Charter was made, then, too, the Charter provided no appeal, especially with regard to the three High Courts—the High Court of Calcutta, the High Court of Madras and the High Court of Bombay.

It will be seen that subsequently the Criminal Procedure Code provided for appeals in the Provinces, but not by these three High Courts which remained exclusive for deciding in any way they liked without there being any opportunity of their decision being contested. Therefore, Sir, from time to time, there has been a complaint that the High Courts should not be allowed to leave those decisions unredressed by a higher Court. It is very necessary that when there is a decision given by any Court there ought to be an appeal. That gives confidence to the people. Now it may be said that because it is a High Court, therefore there should be no remedy to the people for going to any Appellate court. This would be erroneous, because Judges are not infallible.

I am very glad that Government have now awakened to the necessity of this amendment. I give credit to Sir Sultan Ahmed who first introduced this Bill when he was Law Member. Now that he has the Honourable Sir Asoka Kumar Roy with him, I feel sure that a very satisfactory Bill will come out of the Select Committee.

Of course, there are provisions in the contemplated Bill which require to be amended and considered. They have also been very briefly described in the opinions that are now before the House, and certain opinions are such that they will carry weight, and I hope they will be given full consideration.

As we are considering the principle of the Bill, I submit that it is necessary to refer to certain points. To begin with, Sir section 411A allows the appeal. With that we are all agreed. When we come to 411A(b) then I think that some change is required and the Select Committee should consider it. Now the appeal is being given, but I think the work is being done half-heartedly in spite of the procedure that is being adopted.

The procedure is this. At present appeals are allowed by the Bill. For instance, in Karachi, appeals are permitted from the High Court decision while the High Court sits as a Sessions Court. But that appeal goes to it on a point of law. The demand of the public is that appeals should not only be allowed on a question of law but also on a question of fact. In that respect I find a provision here, but it is half-hearted. I think the Honourable Members responsible for this should take courage in both their hands and say that there will be appeals also on the question of fact and let not it be hedged, or restricted or barricaded in such a way as to make it anything but as good as it would be otherwise.

In para. (b) they say that "with the leave of the Appellate Court, or upon the certificate of the judge or judges who tried the case that it is a fit case for appeal, against the conviction on any ground of appeal which involves a matter of fact only, or a matter of mixed law and fact, or any other ground which appears to the appellate Court to be a sufficient ground of appeal" then the appeal on facts will be heard. With regard to that, my submission is this. To say, first of all, that a Judge who has decided the case should give a certificate appears to me to be not a good and salutary provision. How would the Judge who decides the case like his judgment to be set aside? Virtually in most cases we shall find that such certificates are refused; for what do we find in these days? Apart from the fact that they commit mistakes, we find another thing, that will bar them from giving a certificate. The impression we have or the public have is this, that in some cases their convictions are counted for promotion, many other things are done which are taken into consideration. In that case how would they like that their convictions should be set aside or their errors pointed out.

Sir Syed Raza Ali (Cities of the United Provinces: Muhammadan Urban): The Honourable Member is dealing with a Judge of the High Court. Surely, it is not the conviction by the High Court that counts either for promotion or against it.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Well, I am talking generally. It may be that the High Court Judges may be sitting on a higher pedestal, there is no doubt that they have got more intellect. I will admit all that, but all the same they are liable to make mistakes. And when they make mistakes,—no one would like [Mr. Lalchand Navalrai:] that what he is doing should be criticised, and from that point of view this provision ought to be amended or considered well in the Select Committee.

Coming to the question of leave of the High Court, this will be double trouble to the High Court; this is duplication. First of all, when the appeal comes, the question arises whether the High Court should go into the question of fact. Of course, on the question of law they will go into it. But so far as the question of fact is concerned, the High Court will have to decide and then give permission. Then they should go through the whole record to find out whether there is a question of fact of such a nature that they should give leave. Then when the case comes before them regularly they have to go into the whole question over again. Why do you give them double trouble, and also that will take time. Therefore, forthwith say that on the question of law as well as of fact, when it is a first appeal from the first trial court it should be considered from all points of view.

I find that the provision under section 434 is being omitted. Section 434 is a salutary section. When a conviction has been made and there is a question of law in which there is some doubt, then it is referred to other Judges or other High Court. I should like to know from the Honourable the Law Member why that provision is going to be omitted and why it should not remain. I submit that all possible help should be given to the person who is convicted, that the decision given in the case should be free from all defects. I hope the Honourable Member will explain why it is proposed to omit that section instead of retaining it.

In clause 2 I find:

"Notwithstanding anything elsewhere contained in any Act, or Regulation, an appeal under this section shall be heard by a Division Court of the High Court composed of not less than two judges, being judges other than the judge or judges by whom the original trial was held; and if the constitution of such a Division Court is impracticable, the High Court shall report the circumstances to the Provincial Government with a view to the transfer of the appeal under section 527 to another High Court."

In connection with this, defects have been pointed out, which the House would find at page 3 of the Opinions. The defects are these.

Under the heading, N.-W. F. Province, we find:

"Sardar Raja Singh considers that the Bill is a step in the right direction while Mian Ziauddin and Lala Diwan Chand Obhrai, are of opinion that the Bill does not concern this province as this Court exercises no original criminal jurisdiction."

Further on, we find:

"It makes no provisions for the transfer of 'applications for leave' . . ."

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): May I suggest that these opinions will have to be considered by the Select Committee and they will be considered there? My Honourable friend is a member of the Select Committee.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I do understand that fully but what.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member himself will be on the Select Committee too.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I understand that, but my point is this. There may be certain Members in this House who may say something about this and that will be helpful to the Select Committee. I will not take long. I am only pointing out—if you say, that I may say, page so and so, I will do so, but my belief is that other Members may also contribute something.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Other Honourable Members will take care of themselves.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: But what I mean is this. When a transfer is made, then it is for the Court to say that the case should be transferred. But supposing that the Court does not make any order, there is no provision made for it. If it is transferred by the Provincial Government and then it goes again to another High Court and that High Court does not consent.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I think the Honourable Member is not sticking to his original resolution.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Honourable Members on this side were very generous, but what I meant to say was this. However I have one more thing to say. May I know whether the contempt of court cases also would come under this or not? What we find is that the High Courts have got the power to try contempt of court and I should think that they are original cases under the original powers of the High Court. Therefore it should be made absolutely clear that this provision of appeal should also apply to contempt of court cases. I would like to hear the Honourable the Law Member on that point. I would only point out that recently there have been some excesses or some defects, where the High Courts have gone into the question, and in that regard the Contempt of Court Act may have to be amended. I do not know if the Government are going to bring in another Bill, but I say that an appeal should be allowed. There have been cases where it cannot be said that there have not been excesses and abuses. If Honourable Members have read that well known pamphlet of Mr. Gauba, Lala Harkishen Lal's son, it points out many defects and certain abuses with respect to the jurisdiction regarding contempt of court. Therefore, that also should be either included in this Bill or provision for that should be made.

Then I am glad to see that from the Division Bench, an appeal to the Privy Council has been allowed. I have nothing more to say.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh (Nagpur Division: Non-Muhammadan): I should

1 P.M. like to say just a few words. As I am not a member of the Select Committee, I think I am entitled to speak unless the Law Member prevents me by appointing me as a member of the Select Committee.

This Bill proposes to confer a right of appeal on the convicted person as well as the Government. So far as the convicted person is concerned, I thoroughly agree with what the Bill proposes to do and with what has fallen from my friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai; but so far as the right of appeal for the Government is concerned, I am not in favour of it. The High Court comes to a decision. There has been an investigation and a full trial has been gone through. Under those circumstances I submit that there should be no right of appeal from the judgment of the High Court given to the Government. Then, so far as the right of appeal given to the accused is concerned, it should be a full right, not merely on matters of law but also on evidence or fact. As it is, if you take these two sections, 435 and 439, of the Criminal Procedure Code—on matters of law, the accused has a remedy. So, on the question of evidence and finding of fact, if any extension of the right of appeal is to be given, it should be given and it will really count for something.

Another thing I wish to say is this. I have been helped in this matter by my friend, sitting on my right, the Congress Member (Mr. Sami Vencatachalam Chetty). So far as the conferring of the right of appeal on the convicted person is concerned, there is a very elaborate procedure but so far as the Government is concerned, the Government has not got to go through this elaborate procedure of applying for a certificate as the wording of the present provision stands. With these few remarks, I support this motion for Select Committee and these observations may be taken into consideration by the Select Committee.

The Honourable Sir Asoka Kumar Roy: I am glad that the principle of the Bill has been accepted. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai and Mr. Deshmukh have made certain observations with regard to the details of the Bill. I have no doubt that their observations will be carefully considered by the Select Committee.

Honourable Members know that this Bill was introduced to remove an anomaly. There was no appeal provided for under the law against judgments of the High Court in the exercise of their ordinary original criminal jurisdiction. There was a limited right to go to a Full Bench upon a certificate of the Advocate General or upon any question of law being reserved by the trial Judge himself. It was felt for some time past that a right of appeal should be given to an accused person in matters arising out of the exercise of original criminal jurisdiction by the High Courts and this Bill owes its origin to that feeling. The principle of the Bill has been accepted by everybody and I am sure any important points which have been raised will be considered by the Select Committee. I need not say anything more.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill to make certain provision for appeals in criminal cases tried by a High Court exercising original criminal jurisdiction be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, Sir Syed Raza Ali, Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan, Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj, Sir George Spence, Mr. P. J. Griffiths, Sardar Sant Singh and the Mover and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The House will now take up the adjournment motion. I need not remind the House that the debate will terminate at the end of two hours.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): As it is time for the House to adjourn now, may I suggest that the debate on the adjournment motion be taken up after Lunch?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Very well, if that will suit the convenience of the House.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang (one of the Panel of Chairmen) in the Chair.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

FAILURE TO SUPPLY FIRST-AID EQUIPMENT, MEDICINES, ETC., ON THE MAIL TRAIN WHICH COLLIDED WITH GOODS CARRIAGES AT BORGAON NEAR AKOLA.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh (Nagpur Division: Non-Muhammadan): Sir, I move:

"That the Assembly do now adjourn."

While making this motion I want to make one point very clear. It is not my purpose to fix the guilt on any particular individual regarding the collision between the two trains, one being the goods train and the other the down Mail coming from Bombay. It is not my purpose either to contradict the official figures as regards the persons who were killed and who were injured. I will confine myself to the specific purpose of this motion which I have mentioned very clearly, namely, that when the accident did take place, the passengers were hurt and injured; some of them were lying very near the compartments and some were inside the compartments and their limbs were somehow interlocked; when passengers were in that condition, no proper medical aid was given. My main complaint is that there was no proper medical aid which could be administered to these persons who were lying in that pitiable condition. I was told that there was medical aid. Before I tabled this motion, I made inquiries from railway officers and from the passengers who travelled by this mail train. One of them happened to be a doctor, the son of a doctor friend of mine. When the accident took place, there was not sufficient light. The collision was heard at a distance where there is a village called Borgaon, people came from there and when they saw the passengers in that condition, they administered water to those who were thirsty and gave such other aid as the ordinary villagers are capable of doing. But fortunately some doctors and some soldiers were also travelling by that train. When the doctors got out and saw this pitiable condition, they started working but they found that there was not first medical aid or such other things which could help them to administer some relief. I was told here that they had first medical aid. I will tell you the character of the medical aid. It is a small box which is carried in the guard's van. I have learnt from the guards and the drivers themselves that they are given some sort of training in administering first aid. But just imagine the sort of first aid that they carry. They carry a few bandages, a bottle of tincture of iodine and cotton wool and even these things are not sufficient for more than one or two cases. I think I carry more first medical aid in my small bag than these guards and drivers are expected to carry. My friends have seen, as a matter of fact, that I do carry some first medical aid with me. So, when these doctors got out of the compartments, they did not know what to do with the wounded passengers. But they started thinking about the thing and wanted to have some appliances and some other handy things which would help them to remove the persons who were in that predicament to which I have referred. They wanted to remove those who were wounded to some distance from the place where the accident took place so that they could be conveniently treated.

Now, there were no stretchers in the train. This statement cannot be contradicted. It is not their practice to carry any stretchers in the vans. They carry only a small box. There is nothing else which could be of any use to the doctors. I have made inquiries and I have learnt that on the Nizam's State Railways they do carry one or two stretchers in the guard's van. Sir, this accident has not taken place all of a sudden. There have been accidents in India for the last two or three years, particularly on the East Indian Railway. And there have been cases of sabotage also. So, this was not the first accident of its kind and therefore the railway authorities cannot say that they did not know that any such thing is likely to happen. These have been matters of frequent occurrence. So the Government should have taken the necessary precautions.

So far as the lights are concerned, there were two or three kerosene lanterns and some oil is given to them to use in these lanterns. This much light was not sufficient. On some railways—and this is certainly the case in the case of foreign railways—to safeguard themselves against such an emergency, they do carry electric torches, they carry stretchers and they also carry sufficient surgical material to be of use to doctors who may be able to render help to the injured persons. Then, they should carry some stimulants for those passengers who have fainted or for those who need them after some preliminary treatment. In view of the fact that the Government is not careful or vigilant about the safety of the passengers and also in view of the fact that such accidents have taken place very frequently, we must say that the Government has made no attempts to improve matters. Even the education, with regard to first medical aid that is given to the guard and the driver is very poor indeed. I am not surprised that this perfunctory first medical aid is given to them. It is perfunctory because they do not consider it of any importance. I have made inquiries and found that there is nothing for them to put their hearts into it because they do not get any extra allowance or extra pay for being acquainted with this first medical aid. As it is one of the conditions that the guard and the driver must have this knowledge of first aid, they get acquainted with it anyhow. But the principal thing is that even if there are other passengers who want to render help to the wounded and injured, there are not enough things by which the wounded passengers could be given relief. That is the primary object in moving this motion. It is enough to censure the Government for not observing their duty towards the third class passengers from whom they get the major portion of their income. Third class passengers were the persons who suffered most in this respect. Very few upper class passengers were affected. We know the condition in which third class passengers travel; they are packed like sardines. If there were more casualties, I shall not be surprised. The Government derive much of their revenue from third class passengers. The formation of the train is such that anyhow first and second class passengers are safe and third class passengers alone suffer. Very few precautions are taken. They take only a small box containing medicines to save the lives of passengers. My intention was and is that Government should hereafter make due provisions and not neglect their primary duty as they have done till now in spite of the accidents that have taken place on the East Indian Railway which also formed the subject matter of adjournment motions several times in this House. In spite of those adjournment motions from Members coming from Bengal and Bihar, the Government remained callous and did nothing during the last two or three years to prevent accidents of this character. Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): Motion moved:

"That the Assembly do now adjourn."

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Sir, accidents on railways have been very frequent in recent years. Almost at every Session of the Legislative Assembly, adjournment motions are moved relating to railway accidents. I myself have been responsible for moving several adjournment motions. But what has the Government done? The Government have not taken any active steps to prevent these accidents. At least we do not know what steps they have taken to prevent the railway accidents. On every occasion that an accident took place, human lives have been lost and on the present occasion a large number of lives has been lost. It is not the purpose of the present motion to discuss the question of guilt or otherwise of the driver or other officers of the railway, because I am told by the Honourable Member for War Transport that it is the subject of an enquiry. Even then no persons have been put on their trial.

An Honourable Member: Certain persons have been put on trial.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Whatever may be the present situation, the present motion does not go into the question of the guilt of certain persons or the innocence of certain persons. But the present motion raises the question which is not of a political character, but is of a humanitarian character. It is the duty of the Government to prevent accidents and to prevent loss of life as far as possible. For that purpose they should provide adequate equipment on the railways for giving first aid. Then they should also make arrangements for their proper treatment at as near a place as possible. These things have not been done in the present instance; these precautions have not been taken. That is why the adjournment motion has been tabled. My Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, has pointed out that the villagers were the first to render assistance. All credit to them. Then came the doctors and they tried to be very helpful. But what can doctors do without any equipment? There were no surgical appliances, there was a bottle of tincture iodine and so forth. Of course, when so many persons were killed and when so many were injured such appliances and medicines were very inadequate. It is on account of the inadequacy of the appliances and medicines that a large number of lives was lost. It may be said that what is past is past. But if we refer to the past, the reason is that we have to learn our lesson for the future from our past experience. If it is ascertained, if it is proved, that the equipment was inadequate for giving medical aid, then the Government should so provide in future that in case of an accident, as few human lives be lost as possible. That is the contention. There is no politics in it. It is a humanitarian question, and I hope the Honourable Member for War Transport will look into the question from a broad point of view and provide against such things happening in future.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman (Patna and Chota Nagpur cum Orissa: Muhammadan): Sir, I do not propose to discuss this in the light of a censure motion. But I do think it necessary that in the present conditions in which we live, where the number of railway accidents have assumed rather an alarming proportion, the Government ought to revise their ways and they ought to take proper steps and proper care not only to eliminate the chances of accidents but also to face facts and make necessary arrangements for such medical equipment to be carried in passenger trains as would be considered reasonably sufficient and good equipment for the first aid arrangement. The capacity of a train to carry passengers varies probably between 300 and 500. I do not mean to suggest that medical equipment should be carried to give aid to 300 or 500 passengers. It may be reasonably expected that 20 per cent of them may have fatal effect or even some effect where immediate medical aid may be necessary and, therefore, I suggest that medical equipment should be carried for about 60 persons to 80 persons on the average. I have not seen the medical box which is supposed to be carried by the guard in the guard van. Relying on the statement which Mr. Deshmukh made on the floor of the House just now that they carry medical equipment sufficient only to give aid to two or three injured persons, well, certainly that is pitiable. Under normal conditions, i.e., before 1934 accidents were not so frequent as they are now since 1935. Many circumstances have been responsible for this, sabotage being one. Apart from the fact that they should not occur and that how and why these occur, we have to face facts and Railways should make due arrangements to meet the situation. I do not want to make any particular suggestions as the Mover did, i.e., about stretchers and torches and kerosene lamps, etc., but I must say that as the Persian proverb goes—

"Maslehet been wo kar asan kun."

Translation of which is: "See the time and do what is needed". The medical department on the railways is probably consisting of the best persons to advise as regards the sort of equipment to be carried in order to cope with these accidents and an immediate inquiry should be undertaken on those lines. That is my only submission in this connection.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I thought that after the Mover moved his motion the Honourable Member in charge would reply so that we could understand the position and offer our criticisms one way or the other. Sir, the allegations made on this motion are very serious and if the facts are as have been stated, we would be showing our weakness if we do not call it a censure motion. It would surely be a censure motion if the allegations are true. We are told in the first place that medical aid was not sufficient. If that is so, Government should meet this serious charge. With regard to this insufficiency of medical equipment my Honourable friend said that he had made inquiries from passengers in that train and also from other quarters and come to that finding. We do not know what the evidence is on the other side. Of course, there cannot be a medical train going with every train and, of course, no one expects that a particular train is going to meet with an accident; but sufficient material and equipment is very necessary. The small box carried by the guard is not sufficient and there should be more equipment and material there. Therefore the excuse about the small box of the guard cannot come from the other side.

The second allegation was that the lights were insufficient. Of course, a kerosene lamp is carried by the guard and also by the driver but my friend was referring to the absence of torches, and I must say that a sufficient number of electric torches should be carried in a train in order to have better facilities at the time of accidents. The stretchers and other things are small matters, but the point that weighs with me is that sufficient medical aid should be provided. The next thing is that whenever there is an inquiry into a railway accident it is always a departmental inquiry, and the public have an idea that it is not an impartial inquiry because it is always conducted by one of their own officers. I know it is the Chief Inspector who does these inquiries but very often the inquiry has been found to be defective or unsatisfactory; and it is very necessary that the public and the passengers should have complete confidence in the inquiry. Therefore I suggest that if the inquiry is made by the Chief Inspector there ought to be co-opted some judicial officer or magistrate.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall (Member for Railways and War Transport): Sir, I submit that that has nothing to do with the motion which is confined to the adequacy of medical supplies.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): The Honourable Member had better confine himself to the motion. There is no question of any defective inquiry being held.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Then I would say that if the Chief Inspector says that the medical arrangements were sufficient it would not command our confidence unless some impartial judicial officer were associated with him. It is only thus that Government can absolve themselves from all blame.

Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I do not think that this motion has been brought at a very happy moment. If the matter is not, exactly sub-judice it is surely analogous to it because there is a departmental inquiry being held. It has even gone, I am told, beyond the stage of a departmental inquiry and as such we should not discuss it. But since the Chair has given its ruling we have got to abide by it.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, said that guards carry with them a first-aid box containing some tincture iodine, bandages and lint. This little box in itself was not enough to deal with accidents that might occur in a running train. I am one of those who think that in the days when we had experience of ill-conceived sabotage, probably we should have been justified in making the guards van a small dispensary or a hospital, but as it is, my Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, cannot expect every train that carries passengers to behave like a hospital train. What is wanted is a small quantity of such medicines which might be administered in cases when there is an accident. If the idea is that we should have a number of torches, a number of stretchers and a few gallons of tincture iodine, and other appliances that might be required, I cannot possibly support this motion. I wonder whether this is possible. I do not know what is the state of things in England, but I do not think any passenger train there has all these appliances. Incidentally, my Honourable friend said that he himself carries a number of medicines with him.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I will give you when the necessity arises.

Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur: It hardly occurred to me that my Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, was such an unhealthy person.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: It is for persons like you. I am not a selfish man.

Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur: If those humanitarian motives are in his view, then probably he is justified.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, said that drivers and guards ought not only to have these first-aid appliances, but they should be recruited from the medical profession. If that is the idea, I think it is a good suggestion. But if it is a case of the guards having very good medical education before they enter upon their duties—in the way of first-aid, they probably have sufficient knowledge—I really do not think it is necessary.

Then my Honourable friend also made some remarks regarding the Chief Inspector of Railways who is holding the enquiry. I think that is absolutely irrelevant; I do not want to say anything regarding that. I think, if the Railway authorities had taken the precaution to provide the train which met with this accident with such first-aid material as is ordinarily on the train, they have sufficiently discharged their duties.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, it was not my desire to speak after the speeches I heard on this motion, but after hearing the views of the Honourable Member who has just spoken, I cannot resist making some remarks. The loss of 70 lives to my friend seems to be a very insignificant affair.

An Honourable Member: It was more than hundred.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee: It was first given out at 90, but subsequently the number came down to 70, and I have reasons to believe that that figure is more correct.

We are passing through war days and thousands and thousands of men are being killed every day, and if that is the mentality of my Honourable friend, I have very little to say. I wish he had seen some of the people who had lost their sons and who had seen that their sons were buried under the debris for three hours. I wish my Honourable friend had seen that there were people who were shouting for hours together and they could not be located because there was no light at that time. The accident took place between 4 and 4-30 A.M. It was a dark night. To ask for provision on the train for a few hurricane lamps for such an occasion is not asking for much. Do you think guard's lamp and driver's lamp can look after four hundred passengers? When you are spending crores of rupees every day, what is there, after all, if you spend five hundred or a thousand rupees on equipment on each passenger train. This will be a capital expenditure which you will not be required to recur except at the end of 5 or 10 years. If there are no accidents, this equipment will not be used. In fact, these first-aid appliances, suggested by my Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, are such things which can be kept in the guard's van, and after three or four years these can be given over to hospitals. There is—I repeat—no recurring expenditure involved in it, and to say that we should not have even some torches would not, to say the least, be a wise counsel.

Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur: I never said so.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee: But you don't want it.

Our trains carry five to seven hundred passengers through jungles and through such stations where for miles you cannot get even drinking water, leave aside medical practitioner or any kind of medical outfits. Under these circumstances if an Honourable gentleman were to suggest that in the guard's van you should have sufficient first-aid outfit for, say, one hundred passengers, it should be considered as very reasonable. Every ship carrying passengers going out of the harbour has got to carry the necessary equipment according to the number of passengers it carries. Laws and bye-laws are laid down that a steamer carrying so many passengers should have so much outfit, dispensary and what not. But here when we speak what do we find? We find no sympathy and the position is different. If you think that always the nature of accidents which you can have in railway travel are just a window paint falling upon the finger, or a bruise somewhere on the body while getting down from a compartment and for which an outfit worth Rs. 25/- is kept is sufficient then I must say, it is not fair and right. This must now be put right without delay, we cannot allow this position to remain.

So far as this accident is concerned, I have made enquiries in the matter. The Railway authorities, as soon as they came to know about this accident, did all they could. They sent out doctors and nurses from Bombay and everything that could be done was done. This is all very creditable. Very great care was taken at the hospital and at Wardha station and the railway people are looking after those who were injured right up to now. That is really good. But what we want now is and I quite agree with my Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, that in the trains you must have first-aid and other necessary outfits and you must have lamps and torches, so that if, at all, accidents do take place, people, in searching for their kith and kin lying under the debris, will not in the first instance be groping in the dark for want of enough light and secondly to give them medical relief. I, therefore, say that adequate first-aid outfits and a few hurricanes and torches is not a great thing for the railway administration to provide at once and it must be done. That is all I have got to say on this motion.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Sir, a terrible accident has occurred and we are all naturally disturbed at the suffering which took place. But to say, as Dr. Banerjee said, that these accidents are of very frequent occurrence, is an inaccuracy, and I should like Dr. Banerjee to remember that there are thousands of trains travelling up and down the lines in India and millions of passengers travelling, and the incidence of accidents even in these times when the trains are overcrowded is very low indeed, and is really very creditable to the operation of the railways. But when an accident of this kind happens, it is only natural that members of the public and Members of this House should wish to look into the circumstances, and that is the reason why, in spite of the fact that my Honourable friend did not submit a notice either to me or to the Department, I agreed this morning to admit discussion of this motion because I motion. I am not prepared to take it from anybody that my facts are incorrect, because I have made personal inquiries. It is the usual practice of the Government not to take sufficient precautions. They do not take enough medical aid. How can we think of a major accident on every train, they say. I do not want every train to have a major accident. Accidents have happened several times. Unfortunately they have happened in this country several times, more than in other countries. Therefore, I say that the Government, in the light of what has been said by me and my friend, Mr. Hooseinbhoj Lalljee, and others, should be prepared to go into this matter and furnish more adequate medical relief. I do not know whether the Railway Member is prepared to say that he will take steps to improve matters. Unless he says that he will take steps on the lines of the suggestions I have made, I am not prepared to withdraw my adjournment motion.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Under the amendment of the Act, all those killed and injured will be paid compensation, whether they claim it or not. I am speaking of the amended Act.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Certainly they will.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: What is the sense in saying that? How do you know the names of the persons who have been killed? No claim may be made unless somebody comes into the court and gives the names of the persons concerned.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: The Honourable Member runs away with his eloquence. All those who have been killed will have to be identified and under the amendment of the Act, they will get compensation, whether they claim it or not. It is possible that some injured people will go undetected but those who have been killed will have to be identified and they will get compensation under the amendment of the Act, limited compensation though it might be.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Four or five persons could not be identified at all.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): The question is:

"That the Assembly do now adjourn."

The motion was negatived.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, 27th July, 1943.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 27th July, 1943

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN:

Rai Bahadur Naresh Chandra Ray, M.L.A. (Government of India: Nominated Official).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

LOWERING OF THE EDUCATIONAL QUALIFICATIONS FOR EUROPEAN AND ANGLO-INDIAN CANDIDATES FOR TICKET COLLECTORS POSTS IN ALLAHABAD DIVISION.

34. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railway be pleased to state whether his attention has been drawn to an Employment Notice by the Divisional Superintendent, East Indian Railway, Allahabad, which appeared in the Hindustan Times, dated the 1st May 1943?

(b) Which authority has fixed the educational qualifications of "Working knowledge of English" for European and Anglo-Indian candidates forming a panel of Ticket Collectors?

(c) If the orders were issued by the Divisional Superintendent or the General Manager, who authorised them to deviate from rules, which lay down the Matriculation examination as the minimum? If the orders were issued by the Railway Board, why were the qualifications for candidates of other communities for employment on other State-managed Railways not also so lowered?

(d) Do Government propose to stop the racial discrimination and different practices on various State-managed Railways? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Yes.

(b) The qualification referred to is contained in the rules issued by the Railway Board.

(c) The advertisement conforms to the rules issued by the General Manager, East Indian Railway. The minimum qualification is not matriculation in the rules issued by the Railway Board which apply to all candidates whatever the community they may belong to. As regards the last part, it is open to a Railway Administration to prescribe a qualification higher than that laid down in the Railway Board's rule if it should consider such a course desirable. I do not consider it necessary to insist on absolute uniformity among all Railways in this matter.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member why, when qualifications have been fixed at least in the E. I. Railway by the Railway Board, such qualifications have not been fixed so far as other railways are concerned? Why is it left to the General Managers?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The answer to that has been given in my reply to part (c).

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Have the Board gone into the reasons for having a higher qualification in other railways and less qualification in E. I. Railway?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: That, Sir, as I have already explained is at the discretion of the administration.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: When there is that discretion, why is there a change in some railways?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member is arguing. He is not putting a question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the Board then consider whether that is in accordance with the discretion and whether that discretion should be changed or revised?

[Sir Edward Benthall.]

hoped that some practical suggestions would come from my Honourable friends as to what should be done in the future.

I should first, perhaps, recall once more that the whole matter of this accident is under investigation. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, who has, I think, left the House, as he is perhaps not sufficiently interested to hear the explanation, said that he was not prepared to accept the examination of the Inspector. I should like to point out that the Inspector of Railways, who makes an enquiry into these cases, is not a servant of the Railway Department. He is an independent Inspector who makes his report to an entirely separate department, so that his investigation is impartial. He is charged primarily with finding out the causes of the accident and the people, if any, who are to blame. I will say nothing more of that because there are staff who are actually being prosecuted at the moment: but he is also charged with looking into any connected circumstances, and among those connected circumstances he has an obligation to make any comments that he may think fit upon the medical treatment of people who may be injured or killed in an accident.

I think that Mr. Deshmukh could not have been fully informed upon the circumstances of the accident. I think he said that the people who first came to the rescue of the unfortunate injured people were the neighbouring villagers. Well, I am informed that there were, in fact, four doctors travelling on the train, two of them railway doctors, and that these medical men immediately rendered first aid by making use of the First Aid box, which was, of course, inadequate for an accident of this dimension, but who also improvised to meet the circumstances. Mr. Deshmukh said: 'What could a doctor do if he has not adequate medical supplies?' Well, a doctor who is worth his salt knows what to do in a case like this, and as the report says they set about immediately improvising splints and bandages, and thereby I understand, saved a number of lives. Not only that but shortly afterwards, there was assistance from local doctors. I will explain the importance of that in a minute. There was also assistance from the relief train which came upon the scene.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (Presidency Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural). What was the actual interval of time between the occurrence and the arrival of the relief train?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: You do not keep a relief train on the spot! There was also considerable assistance given by 19 British Other Ranks who were travelling on the train and who rendered very valuable assistance in extinguishing the fire and helping the dead and the injured. You will see, therefore, in the first place that the Honourable Member was unjustified in his statement that inadequate aid was rendered.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: On account of lack of equipment: he did not blame the doctors.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I blame the Government for the inadequacy of the equipment.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Let me pay the tribute to the doctors and those who did assist, which Mr. Deshmukh does not see fit to pay. I am saying that the doctors rendered very notable assistance on this occasion in the interim before the relief train could come.

Let us examine the whole problem. As I understand it, the suggestion of the Honourable Member, or some of the speakers at any rate is that each passenger train should carry enough equipment to provide for a major accident. That was really what my Honourable friend said, that is what it amounted to. In other words, you should start out on the assumption that every train is going to meet with an accident. Well, that is not the principle on which provision is made. The principle on which provision is made is that the train will not meet with an accident. For ordinary accidents, inseparable from any moving objects, you carry a First Aid equipment. The First Aid equipment is not designed to cope with a major accident of this sort. The principle for dealing with major accidents of this sort is the prompt removal to hospitals of those who are injured. It is the plan that the relief train, which carries a special medical carriage on it, should be on the spot at the earliest possible moment, and that that relief train should supply the necessary medical equipment. For this purpose the relief train is adequately furnished with supplies for major accidents. It is not even suggested that those in charge of the relief train should necessarily apply First Aid to the injured, as everybody knows that First Aid inadequately and unscientifically applied may very easily result in damaging rather than healing the patient. So the principle of the plan is to move to the spot of a serious accident a relief train as soon as possible and to remove the injured to hospital. But I should also mention that it is part of the system of the railways that station masters should have in their possession a list of medical practitioners in their neighbourhood so that if there is an accident in or near their station, they will at once be able to get into touch with local medical aid.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Is that the present system?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: That, I understand, is the present system. Obviously, that is a sound system. Whereas you cannot carry special doctors on every train, to enlist local aid is a very desirable thing. I mention this because it was said by my Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh—I have not got his exact words, but he indicated that the Government were callous in this matter and gave no attention whatsoever or thought to the poor people who might be injured in accidents on railways. I would suggest that the careful thought which has been given to the laying down of all those regulations in the past shows that Government have not been callous and that, whether or not the first aid box is sufficient for a major accident—whether or not that is the case, Government have gone most carefully into the measures to be taken to relieve accidents of this sort, and if my Honourable friend wishes, I can show him on some other occasion the rules and regulations in connection with the procedure.

As regards the scale of the medical relief provided in these accidents—that I think is the kernel of the question. The scale laid down to be carried by each train and by relief trains has been carefully thought out. It is settled on the advice of the medical section of the Indian Railway Conference Association, an association of all the principal Railways in India. It is on their advice, on the advice of the medical men of the railways that these scales are laid down.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: When was this scale fixed and that advice received?

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: Before you were born!

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: It must be thirty years ago.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: 1929 is the date of the last paper on the subject that I have here.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: However, you may place our views before them and they may revise their opinion.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: These scales were laid down by the medical men of the railways and after each accident the adequacy of medical relief is naturally reviewed by the Inspector who is making the inspection. And as a matter of interest, although we have not officially received the final report, we have had an interim report from the Government Inspector which says:

"I think the injured persons received prompt medical attention and there was no undue delay in the relief train reaching the site of the accident."

That shows that the Inspector in this case is also examining the question: and from time to time Inspectors do make suggestions as to what additional medical equipment or medical arrangements should be made on the train.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): The Honourable Member has one minute more.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I will close, Sir, by saying that, while we cannot undertake that every train shall start out on the assumption that it is going to have a major accident, we will carefully examine the question of whether the first aid boxes carried on the train are adequate. We will take the advice of the medical section of the Indian Railways Conference Association, but I cannot admit on this occasion that there was any neglect either on the part of the Government or on the part of the railway servants. Sir, I oppose.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: May I ask a question? What would be the objection to appointing a tribunal to investigate the whole matter instead of relying on the report of the Government Inspector?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: This question was gone into some years ago and it was decided—I presume with the approval of the House,—for I was not here at the time that the Inspectorate of Railways should be removed from the Railway Department in order that they might be a separate and independent body, and so far as the Government are concerned, they accept that position.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: The House has always insisted on a tribunal.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): In this debate I find that both on the side of the prosecution and on the side of the defence there are many common points. Both sides admit that medical aid was provided to a certain extent. The only difference is about the degree—that the medical aid provided was insufficient to the number of the injured, or it may be said, to the number of the passengers. Otherwise, the Railway Department admits that every train does not carry such a great amount of medical equipment as may be available in a well fitted hospital. The Honourable the Railway Member on the other side also says that if there are any valuable suggestions coming forward the Railway Department will consider them. Many points being in common, and the difference being not very much, I do not see how my Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, or Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, can divide the House on this question. The accident happened on the 4th June, but no report from the Inspector has come yet. The period that has elapsed since the accident is not a small period; it is a pretty long period, and I think the Railway Department ought to go into this matter.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have just explained that this is not a matter for the Railway Department but for another Department. I would also ask whether the Honourable Member does not think it fair that people who are under a serious charge should have the charge most carefully enquired into.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: This may not be a matter of the Railway Department, it may be the matter of another department. But I urge that the Railway Department should approach the Government and say that such serious accidents happening, reports must come very soon. To say on the floor of the House that it is not a matter concerning the Railway Department is not a sufficient reply to the objection which I have just made. The Honourable the Railway Member has given a good certificate to some doctors and to some other people. I may inform the House that the Muslim League was also on the spot. There were many members of the Muslim League who rendered very valuable service to the injured. Therefore, I think that this is no great occasion for any very great difference between the two sides of the House, and, therefore, the House ought not to divide on the question.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I am very glad that this adjournment motion has given an opportunity to some Members to open their mouths, who have been all along keeping quiet, and to deliver sermons. As a matter of fact, to start with, I was confining myself to certain facts. I started with facts. The first thing that I said was that I did not wish to go into the causes of this accident. I did not wish to fix any guilt on any person, but in spite of that, when I find that some persons have gone into the matter my surprise is very great. Another misconception on the part of certain Members is that they thought that I had been advocating that a compartment full of medicines or a carriage full of doctors should be attached to every passenger train. It was a perversion of what I said, it is a misconception of what I said. All that I said was that there should be stretchers, there should be more medical aid, more outfits than are there. How does it mean that I was thinking of a great medical train or a great compartment filled up with all surgical appliances, operation tables, nurses and so on. What made them think so? It was the weakness of their case. Those who wish to support the Government had nothing else to say to support the Government. I cannot otherwise think why matters should have been so exaggerated and perverted as to put into my mouth something which I did not say. As regards those who said that it was not possible to keep anything in the guard's van, have they ever thought about? Do they think that the guard's van is not roomy enough to have a few stretchers put up against the wall of the compartment? Have they ever thought what space it would occupy, what space a few torches would occupy? The box, if it is a bigger one,—would it be a great inconvenience to the guard? How would the operation of the guard be handicapped? Have they ever thought for a single moment about all those things which I have been putting before the House? What I said was that the first medical aid should be increased, that there should be more appliances than are ordinarily to be found nowadays. I referred to callousness, because there have been major accidents during the last three or four years. They have been the subject-matter of adjournment motions in this House. This is the first time, of course, we are coming before this House in this particular way for censuring the Government, not for the accident, not for how it was caused but because of the fact that there was less equipment than there should be. My friends say 'Look here, you are charging us with callousness'. Of course, I do. In spite of these accidents, you will not take the warning and provide for the safety of the lives of the third class passengers. The third class passengers are the passengers who generally suffer the most and if in this particular country, the lesson has not been learnt by the Government, it is because the third class passengers are poor and do not know how to claim compensation. Otherwise you would not have been so negligent, if you had been required to pay damages to all these people who have been killed or maimed. How are trains run in foreign countries? Have you ever inquired? In America, for instance, there is the guard's van in which stretchers, electric torches and medical aid appliances are kept. All these things are kept there. Have they handicapped the running of the trains? I tell you the instance of this very country. In the Nizam's Railway, in the guard's van, stretchers are carried. How had you say it is not possible? Then, Sir, it has been said that medical aid was given. I say it was not given. I say that medical relief arrived at 12 o'clock.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: What time did the train arrive from Nagpur?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: 10 o'clock.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: It did not reach before 11 or half-past 11.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: One train arrived at 10.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I tell you that till the time the relief arrived, number of men were in a state of suspense between life and death. They could have been saved by an injection or two, if there were stretchers and they had been taken to a different place. They would then have had a chance to live. I said so in the very beginning when I opened my case. I want to speak about this dispassionately. Arrangements are made but they are poor. I do not say that no medical relief was given. I said that the medical relief train arrived late. There were certain persons at Borgaon. There is a hospital there. I made inquiries about it. It is poorly equipped. They could not render any help. A few passengers who were hurt were taken to this hospital after some time. I do not say that nothing was done. What I say is that if there were more medical aid, more lives could have been saved. Those persons who lost their limbs were locked up under the debris, so to say, in those conditions for a length of time. I made a full inquiry from the guard, driver and others as to what happens on other railways and then I tabled this all the shops. During the month ending 1st June, 1943, the total quantity of foodstuffs sold exceeded 4 lakh maunds as against a little over 2½ lakh maunds in the month ending 15th April. The prices of commodities were first stabilised at those at which they were being sold in February, 1943; it was subsequently decided to reduce these prices by an average of 20 per cent. and this reduction became effective during June, 1943. This has resulted in further substantial relief to employees in areas like the Eastern region where market prices are high. Continuous efforts are being made to wring every railway employee within the scope of these shops.

(b) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, I have seen no general complaints about the quality of the wheat. As regards the third part, no alteration of the price is at present contemplated.

(c) The reply to the first part is in the negative. As regards the last part, it is understood that there is in Sind at present no demand from the staff for rice and efforts are being concentrated on procuring and selling other articles for which there is a demand.

Since the answer to this question was drafted I have seen figures to show that at the end of June the total number of the staff who have received ration cards is 6,21,000, which represents 89 per cent. of the staff of the railways and the figure of the total quantity of foodstuffs sold to the staff has gone up from four lakhs to six lakhs of maunds.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: What is the system of calculation on which they are given? If the rate at which they are supplied is Rs. 6 per maund at what price did the Railways buy them and are they supplied at 50 or 40 or 80 per cent. less than the cost price?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: It varies throughout the country. My Honourable friend has mentioned wheat. I will instance the North Western Railway. There, I think I am correct in saying, wheat is being sold at Rs. 6. The price paid by the railways depends on the market price.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Is it a fact that the railway administrations purchase these foodstuffs at considerably low prices and sell them to their employees at higher rates.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: At what price is the railway purchasing the wheat?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The railways buy at the market price which varies from day to day.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: What was the price this month or last month?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I shall require notice of that.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: Why is standard cloth not being supplied?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: We indented for one million yards of standard cloth for delivery between 15th May and 15th June, and we have received some small deliveries on one or two of the railways. I have just had a telegram to say that despatches have been made to all the other railways except two, but I am unable to give any precise figures.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: What is the total amount which the railways will lose by supplying wheat at a cheaper rate than the cost price?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: That figure is being calculated but I am unable to state now precisely what it is.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: The Honourable Member said there is no general complaint about the quality of the food supplied. But I have heard complaints myself and will the Honourable Member, therefore, send a copy of this question and the allegation to the General Manager so that instructions may be issued to see that food of good quality may be supplied?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: It is the constant interest of the railway administration to see that the quality of the wheat that is supplied is good.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Therefore, will they render further help in the matter by sending this question?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I do not think that that step will be particularly effective because, as I said before, the administration gives daily attention to this question.

ARRESTS OF ABDUL SAMAD KHAN AND OTHERS OF QUETTA UNDER DEFENCE OF INDIA RULES.

38. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state if it is a fact that Abdul Samad Khan, Arbab Abdul Qadir, Baran Khan, Abdul Ghafoor, Malik Said Mohammad, Sardar Jit Singh Sahney and Seth Daulat Ram were arrested under the Defence of India Rules in Quetta (Baluchistan) on the 20th August, 1942? If so, on what charges? Have any of them been released? If so, what are their names?

(b) Have these released persons been permitted to enter Baluchistan? If not, why not?

(c) Has any representation been received from those who have not been permitted to return? If so, what has been the fate of the representation?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) The individuals in question were arrested and detained under sub-rule (1)(b) of Defence of India Rule 26, because it was considered necessary to take this action for the maintenance of public order. All have since been released.

(b) Daulat Ram of Dadu District, Sind and Jit Singh Sahney of Rawalpindi District, Punjab, have been ordered not to remain in Baluchistan as their presence there has been considered politically undesirable.

(c) A representation from Jit Singh Sahney was received on 18th May, 1943, by the Baluchistan Administration who do not propose to take any action on it for the present.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if there is communal discrimination in giving permission to the Muslims to go back to Baluchistan and refusing it to non-Muslims?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I do not think so.

Sardar Sant Singh: As there is an impression that there is communal discrimination in this matter will the Honourable Member kindly make inquiries from the administration?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I do not know about the impression but I am prepared to inquire.

Sardar Sant Singh: Is the Honourable Member aware that these two persons who have been refused permission to go back have got properties there which they have got to manage?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I have no information.

OPERATION OF THE AMERICAN EXCLUSION ACT ON INDIANS.

39. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state: (a) how the American Exclusion Act of 1924 affects the Indians;

(b) if any attempts were made by the Government of India to remove the disabilities arising out of the Act itself or the rules thereunder; if so, what; if not, why not;

(c) if the Agent General of India took any steps in this regard during the last two years; and

(d) if any steps are being taken now to remove these disabilities; if so, what?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) The Honourable Member no doubt refers to the Immigration Act of the American Legislature of 1924. Information as to how the Act affects Indians is contained in paragraphs 3 to 6 of the Statement which was laid on the table in reply to question No. 2054 asked by Sardar Mangal Singh on the 12th December 1938.

(b) Negotiations were undertaken with a view to the conclusion of a Treaty of Commerce with the United States with the main object of bringing Indians within the definition of aliens entitled to enter the country to carry on trade and so exempting them from the definition of "Immigrant" as given in Section 3 of the Act. These negotiations were postponed as they raised commercial issues of primary importance between the United States of America and India, which were not susceptible of treatment during the progress of the war.

(c) Yes. In connection with certain Bills before Congress to lighten restrictions against Chinese the Agent General has enquired whether Indians could receive parity of treatment with Chinese.

(d) The matter is under consideration.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Is it a fact that the position today is virtually the same as it was prior to 1938 in spite of the efforts made?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: As I said in answer to part (d), the matter is under consideration.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: My question is, is it correct to say that the position today is what it was prior to 1938?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: Except this that the matter is being considered.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I know what steps are being taken at present which will lead us to believe that the matter is under consideration?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: The Honourable Member has to accept my statement for that.

POST-WAR EMPIRE AND INTERNATIONAL AVIATION POLICY.

40. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member representing the Posts and Air Department be pleased to state whether the Government of India have been consulted by His Majesty's Government in regard to (i) the formulation of a post-war Empire aviation policy; and (ii) schemes of international co-operation for air services? If so, what is the nature of the communications received and their replies to the same?

(b) Have Government consulted the Indian public and commercial bodies as well as the Indian Aircraft Companies in regard to these matters? If not, do they propose to do so?

(c) Have Government received any intimation from His Majesty's Government in regard to the convening of an Empire Air Conference, and have they been invited to participate in such a conference?

(d) What will be the composition of the delegation they propose to send to such a conference when convened, and will this delegation include representatives of the Indian commercial and industrial interests?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: (a) Certain exchanges of views of a purely exploratory and provisional nature have taken place between the Government of India and His Majesty's Government on the subject of the post-war development of civil aviation. Government are not prepared to mention the nature of these communications in view of their very provisional character.

(b) The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. Such consultations will take place at a suitable stage if Government consider it necessary to do so.

(c) and (d). As regards the first part of (c), the question of convening a conference is still under consideration and no decision has been arrived at as yet. The latter part of (c) and part (d) do not arise.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Has the Honourable Member's attention been drawn to a press report dated 24th July, 1943, in which it is stated that India has received an invitation to participate in the Empire Aviation Conference? Is this a fact?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: No, Sir. I have seen the report. It is incorrect.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Do I take it that this question is not even under consideration?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: It is under consideration as I have already stated.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Has the Honourable Member seen any report of discussions that have gone on in the House of Commons of late regarding the question of an Empire Aviation Conference, and whether it is a fact that the British Government contemplate the calling of a conference after consulting the various members of the Empire as well as India, and have the Government of India been asked to express their view as to whether such a conference is desirable or not?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: I have seen the debate in the House of Commons, and, as I have already stated, there has been an exchange of views: The question of convening a conference is under consideration but no decision has been arrived at as yet.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: I quite appreciate that. The point is, have the Government of India expressed a view in favour of calling such a conference?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: Sir, I have stated that an exchange of views has taken place but I am not prepared to mention the nature of these communications.

LETTER BOXES REMOVED BY RIOTERS AND POSTAL AUTHORITIES DURING RECENT DISTURBANCES.

41. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Secretary of the Posts and Air Department be pleased to state the number of letter boxes removed by the rioters and postal authorities during the recent disturbances?

(b) How many of them have been replaced by the department so far?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: (a) With the exception of the Provinces of Bihar and Orissa, for which figures are not yet available, the total number of letter boxes damaged or removed by rioters was 1,299 and the number withdrawn by the Postal authorities was 1,280.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know why Bihar and Orissa have not been able to give the figures as yet? It is more than 10 months now.

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: It is not a question of ten months. We asked for the figures, but they have not been able to collect them up-to-date and therefore they have not yet been supplied. I am prepared to give those figures when I receive them.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Have they sent any report so far, or not?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: Yes, but you must remember that I had to ask for these figures to reply to this question, and, unfortunately, Bihar and Orissa has not yet been able to collect these figures.

DESIRABILITY OF CHANGING THE ROUTE OF AIR MAILS TO BRITAIN.

42. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: Will the Secretary of the Posts and Air Department be pleased to state whether Government propose to change the route of the air mails to Britain in view of the improved situation in the Mediterranean?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: The air services to the West of India are operated by the British Overseas Airways Corporation (which is under the control of His Majesty's Government) and not by the Government of India. The question of adopting a quicker, and if possible an all-air, route for air mails between India and the United Kingdom is already under the consideration of His Majesty's Government.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST TELEPHONE OPERATORS AT CALCUTTA EXCHANGES.

43. Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi: (a) Will the Secretary of the Posts and Air Department be pleased to state if his attention has been drawn to the editorial comments in the Calcutta edition of the Statesman of the 29th June, 1943, and also to the Dainik Basumati (a vernacular Daily of Calcutta) of the 26th June, 1943, about the lack of attention and dereliction of duties on the part of the Telephone Operators at the Exchanges in Calcutta resulting in serious inconvenience to the subscribers? If so, has necessary action been taken to remedy this state of affairs?

(b) If the answer to the latter part of (a) be in the negative, do Government propose to make an enquiry, and to take prompt action?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: (a) Government have already seen these comments and enquired into the matter. There has undoubtedly been some deterioration in the quality of the telephone service in the Calcutta area. This has been due mainly to the following causes:

(i) A very large increase in the number of subscribers.

(ii) Abnormally heavy traffic during the busy hours which is beyond the capacity for which the existing equipment was designed.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: As I have already explained, Government does not consider it necessary to insist on absolute uniformity amongst all railways in this matter.

ARRANGEMENT FOR PAYMENT OF INSURANCE PREMIUMS FROM RAILWAY EMPLOYEES PROVIDENT FUND.

35. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether any arrangement exists to allow payment of insurance premiums of approved Insurance Companies from Railway Employees' Provident Fund? If not, is it proposed to make such a provision? If not, why not?

(b) Is it a fact that contributions made by an employee towards the Provident Fund cannot be forfeited for any liability to Government, as such forfeiture is only confined to Government's share of contribution and interest thereon? If so, will Government consider the grant of facilities to railway employees to pay insurance premiums from their Provident Fund savings which do not exceed their share of contribution?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Railway employees are permitted to substitute, in whole or part, for subscription to the Railway Provident Fund, insurance premia for policies taken in the Government Post Office Insurance Fund and not for policies taken from any private Insurance Company. It is felt that subscribers to the State Railway Provident Fund need this protection in the matter of their holdings in the Fund which partly take the place of pension.

(b) Reply to the first part is in the affirmative. Reply to the latter part is covered by reply to (a) above.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Why is it that discretion is being given only with respect to Postal Insurance Fund and not with reference to private insurance companies?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have explained that in my answer to part (a).

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know why, when representations have been made by the employees that they have got facilities from private insurance companies, they have not been allowed to avail of such facilities?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: That, Sir, is precisely what I answered in my reply to part (a).

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know whether any representations have been made by the employees and whether they have been given any reasons for refusal of the request?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I am not aware of any such representations.

SELECTION FOR RECRUITMENT TO POSTS OF ASSISTANT INSPECTORS OF WORKS ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

36. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether a selection for recruitment to posts of Assistant Inspectors of Works on the North Western Railway was held in May, 1942? How many candidates from different divisions were selected, and what was the quota allotted to each of them?

(b) Is it a fact that another selection for recruitment to the posts referred to in part (a) above, was held early this year, but as Muslim candidates were not available, members of other communities were taken against the minority communities' posts? If so, how many, and to what communities did the selected candidates belong?

(c) Is it a fact that persons recruited in the 1942 selection have not been confirmed on the plea that they were taken against posts reserved for other communities? If so, how is this policy proposed to be reconciled with the Government of India, Home Department Resolution No. 14/13/38-Esta. (5), dated Simla, the 15th July, 1938, to the effect that the balance of the posts reserved for the minority communities, if filled by other communities, will be carried over only for one year?

(d) If the confirmations have been stopped during the course of the War, do Government propose to assure the employees appointed against vacancies reserved for minority communities that they will not be discharged to make room for the members of minority communities, if and when they become available? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) A recruitment of Apprentice Assistant Inspectors of Works was made in May 1942. As regards the second part, the information is as follows:

Lahore	3	and	8	Quetta	Nil	and	4
Delhi	6	and	3	Rawalpindi	6	and	11
Multan	1	and	5	Karachi	1	and	4
Ferozepur	3	and	3

(b) and (c) I have called for information and a further reply will be laid on the table of the House.

(d) The rules regarding the filling of vacancies reserved for members of minority communities will be observed, and there is no intention to depart from them.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Is it the rule that if any candidate of any particular community is not available in a particular year, that post is reserved for that community in the next year?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Yes, Sir. But this particular question refers to filling the vacancies after the war.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Even in this case, during the war, is the principle laid down by the Railway Board that if any particular community candidate is not available in a particular year, that vacancy will be reserved for that community in the next year.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Sir, the Honourable Member is raising rather a complicated question. I suggest that he puts down a question to which I will give a careful and full reply.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: May I know whether no Muslim candidate was available throughout India?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: It is not a question of any Muslim candidate being available throughout India. This question refers only to the N. W. R.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: May I just tell the Honourable Member that very recently for about 50 seats in Aligarh for admission in the Engineering College, I received 500 applications from Muslims who were B.Sc.'s and Intermediates in science?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member is giving information.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: There is no point in saying that Muslims are not available. I can give any number of applicants to fill these posts.

OPENING OF CHEAP SHOPS FOR RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

37. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) With reference to the Honourable the Railway Member's reply to my starred question No. 250, asked on the 5th March, 1943, regarding opening of cheap shops for railway employees, will he please make a brief statement on the progress made since then?

(b) Is it a fact that wheat is supplied to employees on the North Western Railway at Rs. 6 a maund? Is it of good quality? Will it continue to be supplied at this rate for the whole year?

(c) Is rice being supplied in Sind? If so, of what qualities, and at what rates? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The number of staff on all State-owned Railways reported to be within the range of grain shops during June was 6,18,700, the number of employees to whom ration cards had been issued being 5,39,331. This represents 89.85 per cent. and 78.32 per cent. of the total staff on these Railways. The commodities covered by the scheme include in addition to the staple foodgrains, spices, sugar, gur, kerosene oil, standard cloth, tea, matches, etc., although all of them are not yet on sale in

(iii) Depletion in the number of trained and experienced operators due to a large number of resignations in 1942, on account of the abnormal conditions prevailing in Calcutta, and their replacement by new and inexperienced staff.

(iv) Abnormal rate of sickness this summer leading to heavy absenteeism.

(v) Inordinately long calls indulged in by some subscribers.

It has been decided to install additional equipment to meet the heavy calling rate and certain other remedial measures with a view to improving the service are under examination by the Posts and Telegraphs Department, but it will take some time before the full effect of these measures can be felt.

Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi: Is my Honourable friend aware that in five out of ten telephone calls one gets repeatedly wrong number, or on enquiry from the operator he is informed: 'the number is engaged'?

Sir Gurnath Bewoor: I am not aware whether that is correct, but I have admitted that the service is not as good as it should be and that is due to the inexperienced staff. As regards being told that the number is engaged, the Manager reports that many subscribers unfortunately refuse to believe the operator when he tells them that the number is engaged. In this connection it will be of interest to the Honourable Members that on watching certain numbers we discovered three instances in which one local call was 1½ hours in duration, another 1½ hours, and the third one 6½ hours.

Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi: Is my Honourable friend aware of the constant interconnections, which seldom took place before, and that these interconnections have created a horror in the mind of the public as they do not consider it safe to talk on their private affairs with reliance lest they be overheard?

Sir Gurnath Bewoor: I am aware of that complaint and we are taking action to remedy it.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: May I ask the Honourable Member that besides the reasons which he enumerated for the inefficiency of the service one other is the transference of the telephone service in the Calcutta area from the hands of a private company to the Government?

Sir Gurnath Bewoor: No, Sir, because it is exactly the same staff and the same management which is now managing the telephones under the Government.

RESERVATION OF SECOND CLASS COMPARTMENTS IN THE TOOFAN EXPRESS FROM DELHI ON THE 1ST JULY, 1943.

44. Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state whether any applications for the reservation of Second Class compartments as distinguished from "berths" in the Toofan Express which started from Delhi on the evening of the 1st July, 1943, had been received? If so, how many Second Class compartments had been reserved in that train?

(b) How many Second Class compartments in all, besides those marked for the Military personnel, were there in the said train, and for what total number of passengers was seating accommodation provided in those compartments?

(c) How many Second Class tickets were issued from the Delhi Station for the said train?

(d) How many Second Class tickets were, as a result of checking, found to be held by passengers changing from other trains to the said train?

(e) Is it, under the rules, necessary for reserving a compartment to pay the number of fares equal to the number of passengers for whom seating accommodation is provided in a compartment?

(f) If the answer to (e) be in the affirmative, had the full number of fares required by the rules been paid for the train and for the date, in question?

(g) Can a Second Class passenger who has not got a berth or a seat reserved for himself lawfully travel in a Second Class compartment if he accommodates himself on the floor or any other unoccupied part of the compartment without encroaching on the berths or seats reserved for other passengers in the compartment?

(h) If the answer to (g) be in the affirmative, has a Ticket Collector or any other Railway Official any authority to eject such a passenger from the compartment?

(i) If the answer to (g) be in the affirmative and the answer to (h) be in the negative, has the Station Superintendent, Delhi, received a complaint, dated the 3rd July, 1943, to the effect that a Ticket Collector unlawfully ejected an M.L.A. from a Second Class compartment in the Down Toofan Express on the 1st July, 1943, on the false plea that the compartment was reserved although the compartment was neither reserved in fact nor labelled as such (the 5 berths only being labelled as reserved)? If so, what action has been or is proposed to be taken in the matter?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) I am informed that one application for the reservation of a full 2nd class compartment was received, and one such compartment was reserved.

(b) Nine providing seating accommodation for 82.

(c) 32 tickets were issued during the period between 16 and 24 hours on the 1st July, 1943. This does not take into account tickets which may have been purchased earlier or from city booking offices or held by through passengers.

(d) I am unable to say as no record of passengers holding through tickets and changing from one train to another is kept at junction stations.

(e) No. A compartment can be reserved on payment of fares equal to the number of berths in the compartment.

(f) Does not arise. But all passengers occupying berths were in possession of tickets.

(g) and (h). The Honourable Member is referred to sections 109 and 63 of the Indian Railways Act No. IX of 1890, a copy of which is in the library of the House. The Honourable Member is also referred to sections 120 and 132 of the Indian Railways Act No. IX of 1890.

(i) I understand a complaint from the Honourable Member was received by the Station Superintendent, Delhi, who enquired into it and has sent a letter of explanation to the Honourable Member which I trust has satisfied him.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: May I ask the Honourable Member whether the M. L. A. travelling in the Toofan Mail, who has complained, was travelling at Government expense?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have no information, Sir.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Would he enquire whether the M. L. A. was travelling at Government expense, and, if so, whether he was drawing 1st class fare or 2nd class fare?

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: With your permission, Sir, I would like to say that it was I, and I was travelling at my own expense.

EXCESSIVE FREIGHT RATES ON SUGARCANE CHARGED BY THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

45. Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari (on behalf of Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi): (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state if it is or is not a fact that the freight charged on the transport of cane on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway (meter gauge in the United Provinces) is Re. 0-1-3 per maund for a distance of 50 miles whereas on the East Indian, Great Indian Peninsula, Bengal and North Western and Rohilkhand & Kumaon Railways, it works out at 5-8, 6-5, 8-4 and 11-1 pies, respectively?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that the raw material as well as the manufactured material of the Sugar Cane factories being controlled by the various Provincial Governments, the margin of profit in the sugar factories is duly limited and the sugar factories located on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway are very much handicapped by the high rates of freight on that Railway?

(c) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of bringing down the rates of freight on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, in conformity with rates of other Railways, and to remove this complaint of the sugar industry?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The rates for sugarcane to the factories on the B., B. & C. I. Railway for a distance of 50 miles are about 11 pies per maund and not 15 pies. The other rates given by the Honourable Member are substantially correct.

(b) So far as I am aware it is only in the U. P. and Bihar provinces that the price of cane is controlled by the Provincial Governments. The price of sugar is controlled by the Central Government. I am not aware that the freight rates on the B., B. & C. I. Railway have handicapped the sugar factories located on that Railway.

(c) No.

EXCESSIVE CHARGES FOR SUGARCANE STACKING BY THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

46. *Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari (on behalf of Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi): (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway charges Rs. 24 per annum for a small piece of land on which cane is stacked prior to being loaded on the railway wagons for transport, while the other railways do not charge more than Rs. 5 per annum?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway demand a sum of Rs. 75 as expenses for drafting an amendment for the inclusion or exclusion of a plot, in the agreement regarding places on which sugarcane is stacked while no such high charges are made by other Railways?

(c) Do Government propose to consider the desirability of reducing the charges to bring them in conformity with other Railways?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) to (c). The terms on which railway lands are leased to the public, and the conditions of agreement, vary with the conditions prevailing in individual localities. The Railway Board have no information of the details of these arrangements by individual railway administrations. Individual cases of hardship can be brought to the notice of the railway administration either direct or through the medium of the Local Advisory Committees.

NECESSITY OF INCREASING THE RATE OF DEARNESS ALLOWANCE FOR LOW-PAID STAFF OF SHAHDARA-SAHARANPUR LIGHT RAILWAY.

47. *Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari (on behalf of Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi): (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state if it is or it is not a fact that the Dearness Allowance given to the low paid staff of the Loco department of the North Western Railway is Rs. 11 per month, and in addition six maunds of wheat at concessional rates?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that the Loco staff on the Shahdara-Saharanpur Light Railway gets a Dearness Allowance of Rs. 7 per month only? If not, what are the facts?

(c) In view of the great disparity in the pay of the staff of the Shahdara-Saharanpur Light Railway and the North Western Railway, and the high prices of commodities, do Government propose to consider the advisability of pressing on the Shahdara-Saharanpur Light Railway the necessity of increasing the rate of Dearness Allowance for the low paid staff, and bringing it at least on a level with the North Western Railway?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The Dearness Allowance to loco staff on the N. W. Railway is Rs. 11 in B areas for those on pay up to Rs. 125 per month. As regards the supply of wheat at concessional rates, this is limited at present to 15 seers per adult and 7.5 seers per child subject to a maximum of 60 seers per family.

(b) I have no specific information but believe that the Honourable Member is correct in his statement.

(c) The reply is in the negative.

NECESSITY OF RAISING THE PAY OF LOCO-WORKMEN ON SHAHDARA-SAHARANPUR LIGHT RAILWAY.

48. *Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari (on behalf of Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi): (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that the Loco-workmen on the North Western Railway get a salary of Rs. 45—75, while the Loco-workmen on the Shahdara-Saharanpur Light Railway doing exactly the same work get Rs. 30—50 per mensem?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that even the scale of Rs. 30 to 50 is only a nominal one, and in practice most of the workmen get only Rs. 30 per mensem?

(c) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of pressing upon the Shahdara-Saharanpur Light Railway authorities the necessity of raising the pay of the workmen to the level of the North-Western Railway workmen, and giving them proper increments in time? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) It is not clear what the Honourable Member means by loco-workmen but if he refers to fitters in loco sheds, their scales of pay on the N. W. R. vary from Rs. 1/2 to Rs. 2/4 per day. I have no information concerning the rates of pay of staff on the Shahdara-Saharanpur Light Railway.

(b) I have no information.

(c) No, because Government do not interfere in matters of detail as regards Company-managed Railways.

ANNUAL REPORT ON PILGRIMAGE TO IRAQ.

49. *Mr. H. M. Abdullah (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha): (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state whether an annual report on the pilgrimage to holy places in Iraq is received by the Government of India?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, are copies placed in the Library of the House?

(c) If the answer to (b) is in the negative, does he propose to place them in the Library, and also to supply them to Members of the Central Haj Committee?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) Government of India receive an annual report on the work of the Indian Section of the British Consulate, Baghdad which also contains information about the pilgrimage to Iraq. No separate annual report on the pilgrimage to holy places in Iraq is received.

(b) and (c). As a measure of war economy publication of this report has been suspended but typed copies of the latest report for the years 1940 and 1941 have been placed in the Library of the House and supplied to Secretary, Standing Haj Committee for circulation among members.

RESTRICTIONS IMPOSED BY IRAQ GOVERNMENT ON INDIANS.

50. *Mr. H. M. Abdullah (on behalf of Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha): (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state whether any restrictions are imposed by the Government of Iraq on Indians—pilgrims and others—for their stay and business? If so, what?

(b) Are similar restrictions imposed on Iraqi Nationals in India?

(c) What is the total number of Iraqi subjects who are residing in India for purposes of trade?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) No restrictions are imposed by the Government of Iraq on Indians for business in Iraq. As regards their stay in Iraq, the Iraqi Residence Law is applicable to all foreigners alike and does not discriminate against Indians in particular. A copy of press note dated the 10th January, 1940, in which the Iraqi Residence Law of 1938 has been explained is laid on the table. The fee for a residence book has since been increased to one dinar (= Rs. 13-6-0).

(b) Does not arise, there being no residence law applicable to foreigners in India similar to the Iraqi Residence Law.

(c) Government have no information.

Press Note.
No. F-25/30/39-Pub.
New Delhi, January, 10, 1940.
PILGRIMS TO IRAQ.

NEW RESIDENCE LAWS EXPLAINED
Haj pilgrims intending to visit Iraq will do well to get themselves acquainted with the provisions of the New Iraqi Residence Law, passed, in 1938. Under this law all foreigners entering Iraq are required to report to the police within 15 days of arrival; if they desire to stay longer than three months, they must apply to the passport or police authorities for residence books within three months of arrival.

Recent experience at Baghdad and Basra tends to show that Indian pilgrims particularly those who are illiterate, are likely to encounter difficulties when they attempt to leave Iraq unless their pilgrim passes bear the appropriate endorsement by the local police authorities showing that they have complied with the formality of registration at a police station or, in the appropriate cases, of taking out residence books. Reporting to the police involves attendance at a police station and the passports should be stamped by a Passport Officer on arrival at Basra or other place of entry. In addition, foreigners should produce three passport photographs when reporting to the police or applying for residence books. As the cost of such photographs is probably lower in India than in Iraq, pilgrims may, in their own interest, provide themselves with the required number of photographs before leaving India. Women in purdah are exempted from the necessity of producing photographs.

A fee of 250 fils (Rs. 3-5-6) is charged for residence books issued to foreigners wishing to stay longer than three months in Iraq.

Foreigners intending to reside in Iraq for more than the period granted to him shall:

(1) Apply before the expiry of the prescribed period to the Residence Officer for the purpose of obtaining permission to reside for a period of one year. The Residence Officer shall not grant or reject the permission except with the approval of the Minister of Interior or any person authorised by him.

(2) Every foreigner, permitted to reside under paragraph (1) above, shall be provided with a residence book granting him the right of residence in Iraq for a period of one year, and; at least one month before its expiry, he should apply to the Residence Officer for its extension which may be renewed.

(3) In the event of losing a Residence book, a foreigner, shall apply immediately to the Residence Officer for the purpose of obtaining a duplicate copy of the book lost.

(4) A foreigner shall produce his residence book to the Police authorities whenever asked to do so.

(5) A foreigner holding a residence book shall, when changing his place of residence from one town to another, report to the Police headquarters of the district of his new place of residence, producing his residence book. The Police headquarters shall take the necessary particulars from the book and report the movement of the foreigner to the issuing Residence Officer.

CONTEMPLATED ABOLITION OF THE LOWER GAZETTED SERVICE ON STATE RAILWAYS.

51. *Bhai Parma Nand: Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state:—

(a) whether the abolition of the Lower Gazetted Service on State Railways is still under consideration;

(b) what the reasons are for the step thus contemplated;

(c) if it is a fact that members of the Lower Gazetted Service are actually drawing higher salaries than officers in the junior scale of the superior service;

(d) if it is a fact that the proposal, if accepted, will entail an extra expenditure;

(e) how many Indians and Anglo-Indians or Europeans will be promoted to the superior service as a result of this proposal; and

(f) if it is proposed to give some years' seniority to the promoted members of the Lower Gazetted Service so as to supersede the junior members of the superior service?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Yes.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the memorandum at pages 47 to 52 of the Proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee for Railways, Volume XIX—No. 1.

(c) The old scale of pay of the Lower Gazetted Service being Rs. 350 to 800, it is likely that many members of that service are drawing more pay than junior scale officers of short service or who are on the revised scale of pay.

(d) Yes.

(e) I am unable to say until the final form the proposal will take is known and the details have been settled.

(f) No, the intention is that the officers promoted en bloc to the superior service will be placed after confirmed junior scale officers for purposes of seniority.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know at what stage the proceedings are with regard to the change from the lower to the higher grade?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: It is before the Standing Finance Committee for Railways, who have met and discussed this question on several occasions. I understand, although I am not a member of that Committee, that there is to be another meeting on the 31st at which it is hoped that final conclusions will be reached. If no final conclusion is reached on that occasion we may have to consider taking action without further delay.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the Honourable Member say what is the consensus of opinion up to now of the Committee?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: A great many opinions have been expressed and it would take a long time to give a statement to the House.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: What is the view of the Department?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The view of the Department is as set forth.

MUSLIM PROTEST AGAINST WORDS USED BY MR. R. P. MATHUR OF SUPPLY DEPARTMENT.

52. *Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Has the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department seen the article published on page 5 of the Dawn, dated July 10, 1943, under the heading 'Supply Department, Mussalmans Protest'?

(b) Did Government make any enquiries about the words used by one Mr. R. P. Mathur, C.P.I.?

(c) What action, if any, did Government take in this matter? If none, why?

(d) Were there other complaints of a similar nature against the officer mentioned in (b)?

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: (a) Yes.

(b) The Chief Controller of Purchase (Supply), head of the Purchase Branch, Directorate General of Supply, personally investigated the incident and was satisfied that no expression derogatory to the Muslim community was used by Mr. Mathur, who had occasion to warn two Mohammadan clerks of two different sections—one for late attendance and the other for not starting his work at 10-30 A.M.

(c) Does not arise.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is it not a fact that some Muslim employees in the Supply Department resigned on account of this act?

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: One Muslim employee resigned.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: If the case was so serious that he had to resign his post as a protest you cannot call it a trifling matter.

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: I did not say it was a trifling matter but the investigation showed that no expression had been used to which the Muslim community need take any objection.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask the Honourable Member if it is a fact that the enquiry was made by Muslim high officials?

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: The enquiry was made by the Chief Controller of Purchase (Supply), Mr. K. G. Morshed.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if it is a fact that the resignation which was referred to by Dr. Sir Zia Uddin was made six times by this man and six times withdrawn?

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: I have not heard that before.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will you make enquiries if it is a fact or not that in the first five resignations no kind of allegation was made which was made on the sixth resignation.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is it not a fact that the same gentleman used similar remarks to a contractor from Jullundur and when a protest was made those remarks were withdrawn?

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: I have no information to that effect, but I will make enquiries about this particular incident.

(Interruptions.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Order, order. Next question.

SUPPLY DEPARTMENT ORDERS FOR ARTICLES FROM UNITED PROVINCES SMALL SCALE INDUSTRIES.

53. *Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department please state:—

(a) the value of the articles prepared by the small scale industries ordered by the Supply Department from the United Provinces since the beginning of the war;

(b) how many of such orders were complied with; and

(c) the value of the orders (excluding locks) placed with Muslim firms?

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: (a) and (b). The value of orders placed with small scale industries in the United Provinces since the beginning of the war is Rs. 3,36,93,000, of which orders valued at Rs. 2,37,60,000 have been executed.

(c) It is not possible to give the value of orders placed with Muslim firms owing to the difficulty of distinguishing between Muslim firms and other firms.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will the Honourable Member please state what is the reason for not executing the orders amounting to more than one crore according to his own statement?

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: Well, Sir, out of orders totalling Rs. 3,36,00,000 already Rs. 2,37,00,000 worth of orders have been executed. I presume the other one crore is in the course of execution.

REALIZATION OF THE COST OF THE INDIAN ARMY IN IRAN FROM THE IRANIAN GOVERNMENT.

53A. *Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state whether Government are realising in any form from the Iranian Government the cost of the Indian Army in Iran?

(b) If the reply to (a) be in the affirmative, what is the amount that is being realised, and in what form?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) and (b). It is contrary to the public interest to give any information on this matter.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

HOLIDAYS GRANTED IN RAILWAY OFFICES.

1. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether it is a fact that employees in the Railway administrative, Divisional and allied offices are entitled to holidays declared under the Negotiable Instruments Act, and such other local or sectional holidays which the head of the department may in his discretion grant?

(b) If the reply to part (a) above be in the affirmative, were any holidays cancelled on the State-managed Railways? If so, which, and was any compensatory leave granted to the employees affected by such cancellation? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) While staff in administrative divisional and allied offices are generally permitted to avail themselves of declared public holidays, it is within the discretion of the administration to require staff to work on such days if the public interest so demands.

(b) Government have no information whether any Railway Administration decided not to observe any particular public holiday. Government have also no information if under such circumstances staff were granted compensatory leave, but staff do not have the right to such compensatory leave the grant of which is within the discretion of the administration.

BLOCK IN PROMOTION OF CERTAIN CLASSES OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES FROM GRADE I TO II.

2. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether it is a fact that 503 grade II posts were sanctioned to relieve block in promotion of certain classes of employees, from grade I to II, in September, 1941?

(b) Is it a fact that it was ruled that promotion to these appointments were to be made in strict order of seniority subject to fitness with the personal approval of the Divisional Superintendent in all cases?

(c) Is it a fact that several employees have been deprived of relief of promotion given in the Railway Board's scheme, without the approval of their Divisional Superintendents? If so, why? Is it proposed to review the position? If not, why not?

(d) What steps are proposed to be taken in future to ensure that orders issued by a competent authority are faithfully carried out? If none, why?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Yes, by the reduction of a corresponding number of Grade I posts.

(c) Government understand that on the Delhi Division, with the approval of the Administration, the actual upgrading of the particular posts was done with the approval of the Divisional Superintendent, but the promotions to these posts were ordered by Divisional officers who were competent to do so. Government also understand that a few senior employees were not promoted as they were considered unfit. Government see no reason for ordering a review.

(d) Government are satisfied that the competent authority has sufficient means of enforcing its orders.

RAILWAY DEARNESS ALLOWANCE RATES IN CAWNPORE AND OTHER AREAS.

3. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state:

(a) whether it is a fact that the rate of Dearness Allowance admissible to railway employees in the Cawnpore area with effect from the 15th March is Rs. 16 or so much as is admissible in Bombay and Calcutta; if so, why;

(b) whether the different rates of the Dearness Allowance admissible in different areas have been based on population; if so, what is the population of Cawnpore and of other cities (excepting Bombay and Calcutta) having a larger population than Cawnpore, where lower rates are admissible; and

(c) why the rate of the Dearness Allowance is lower in other cities having a larger population than Cawnpore?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, Government consider that conditions in the three places are so similar that the same rate of Dearness Allowance is justified.

(b) Areas A, B and C are based on population, Area X is not; the second part does not arise as the classification of Cawnpore is not based on its population.

(c) The reason for the higher classification of Cawnpore is given in the reply to part (a).

DEARNESS ALLOWANCE OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEE OCCUPYING A RENT-FREE QUARTER.

4. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state:

(a) whether it is a fact that 10 per cent. of pay is added to an employee's wages if he is in occupation of a free railway quarter to determine his wages for the purpose of admissibility of the Dearness Allowance;

(b) the amount added to an employee's wages if he is occupying a quarter, the assessed rental value of which is less than ten per cent. of his pay; and

(c) when an employee is actually given the privilege of a free quarter of lower rental value than 10 per cent. of his pay, why this much percentage is added to his pay for the admissibility of dearness allowance?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) In areas where staff would be given an allowance of 10 per cent. of their pay in lieu of free quarters if they were eligible for such an allowance, the value of free quarters to be added to an employee's wages would be 10 per cent.

(c) The question of taking into account assessed rent is under consideration.

INSUFFICIENT WAITING ROOMS ACCOMMODATION AT THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY HOSPITALS.

5. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state the average number of candidates and employees attending the Divisional and other railway hospitals on the North Western Railway for medical examinations?

(b) What is the average duration of time for which they are detained on the examination day?

(c) Do any waiting rooms exist in such hospitals for these men? If so, of what kind, and of what capacity?

(d) If the waiting rooms are insufficient to accommodate all examinees, is it proposed to increase the existing accommodation in such waiting rooms? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The average number of persons attending the places where such examinations are conducted on the prescribed days is 17 to 18.

(b) About three hours at a large centre.

(c) No, such waiting rooms as exist are intended primarily for sick persons.

RELATIVE SENIORITY OF PROMOTED GRADE II GUARDS ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY

6. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) With reference to the Honourable the Railway Member's replies to parts (b) and (c) of my starred question No. 248, asked on the 5th March 1943, will he be pleased to state the date from which the different rules regarding the reckoning of seniority of Train Clerks, Ticket Collectors, etc., who were taken as Guards, come into force?

(b) Are these rules in conformity with the Notification No. 148 which appeared in the North Western Railway Gazette No. 39, dated the 27th September 1926? If not, when was this Notification superseded?

(c) Is it a fact that some Guards employed in the Karachi Division have sent a representation in April last protesting against the wrong fitting in the Guards' Branch of employees imported from other posts in 1929 and after? If so, why are the rules referred to by the Honourable Member not being observed, and how was the Guards' representation disposed of?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The orders that in the case of Guards Grade I, Ticket Collectors, Train Clerks, etc., promoted as Guards Grade II, the order of merit of their passing out from the school will determine their seniority were issued on 7th July 1936. The orders regarding confirmation alternately from two separate lists were issued in April 1938, and the confirmation of guards who were then officiating was made in accordance with these orders.

(b) The answer to the first part is in the negative. As regards the second part, the orders were superseded in 1927 and again amended in 1936 to their present form.

(c) Government understand that the Railway has under examination a representation received from the Guards on the Karachi Division.

SUPPLY OF WAGONS TO BENGAL AND BIHAR COALFIELDS FOR LOADING COAL.

7. Mr. K. O. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member for War Transport be pleased to state:

(a) the number, separately, of coal mines now working in the Bengal and Bihar coalfields with daily bases of (i) 6 to 10 wagons; and (ii) 5 wagons and under during the quarters ending the 31st March, 1943, and the 30th June, 1943;

(b) the total number, separately, of rakes and half rakes supplied in the Bengal and Bihar coalfields for loading coal during the months of March, April and May 1943 and the number allotted to collieries with daily bases (i) 6 to 10 wagons; and (ii) 5 wagons and under during the said periods;

(c) the total number of wagons allotted for loading coal in each of the above months in the Bengal and Bihar coalfields, and the total number allotted to collieries with daily bases of (i) 6 to 10 wagons; and (ii) 5 wagons and under during the said months;

(d) the total number, separately, of special allotment of wagons in the Bengal and Bihar coalfields for loading coal during the months of March, April, and May 1943, and the number allotted to collieries with daily bases of (i) 6 to 10 wagons; and (ii) 5 wagons and under during the said months; and

(e) the total number of wagons allotted to the Bengal and Bihar coalfields under the Provincial Quota system during each of the months of March, April and May, 1943, for each province, with separate total monthly quotas?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) to (d). A statement together with an appendix to the statement is laid on the table.

(e) The information asked for in part (e) is not readily available for the month of March, 1943. Its collection would involve an amount of time and labour which would not be justifiable in war time.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The Railway Units (D. of I.) I.E. have been organized on the B. & A., S. I., E. I., B. N. and M. & S. M. Railways.

(b) These Units have been organized with a view to secure the effective maintenance of railway services at the present time. Officers and railway servants enrolled in these Units are required to undergo elementary military training but Government do not propose to give full military training to these personnel as such training is not considered necessary; nor is it possible to do so as the personnel are heavily engaged in their normal duties.

(c) European, Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European Railway servants enrolled as combatants in these Units draw ration allowance at Re. 1-1-0 per diem while Indian Railway servants similarly enrolled draw Re. 0-8-0 per diem.

(d) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, such difference is due to the provisions contained in Army Regulations.

RAILWAY EMPLOYEES CONTINUING AS MEMBERS, ETC., OF THE ANGLO-INDIAN AND DOMICILED EUROPEAN ASSOCIATION.

13. Mr. Ananga Mohan Dam: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if it is a fact that in spite of definite orders, responsible Railway employees are still members and office bearers of the Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European Association?

(b) Do Government propose to take disciplinary action against those officers who take an active part in such political bodies, contrary to Government instructions?

(c) Is it also proposed to call for records of the Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European Association?

(d) Is it a fact that Anglo-Indians get a number of privileges in Railway services, especially in the matter of Education Allowance and initial pay which is Rs. 35 per mensem?

(e) What is the policy underlying these undue advantages to this particular community?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Government have no information whether Railway employees are members and office-bearers of the Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European Association but there is no ban on their becoming members, provided that their activities as such do not offend against the provisions of the Railway Servants' Conduct Rules.

(b) In the event of a breach of the Railway Servants' Conduct Rules coming to the notice of Government they will take whatever action they consider that the circumstances warrant.

(c) No.

(d) Under State Railway rules Anglo-Indians get no special privileges in respect of educational assistance. Anglo-Indians recruited to categories in which the community has a special reservation in recruitment are guaranteed a minimum wage of Rs. 55 per mensem.

(e) The policy underlying the minimum wage has been explained in the Honourable the Home Member's reply to Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad's starred question No. 123 asked on 22nd February, 1941.

APPOINTMENT OF A SPECIAL MUSLIM OFFICER FOR LOOKING AFTER THE INTERESTS OF MUSLIM EMPLOYEES IN RAILWAYS.

14. Mr. Ananga Mohan Dam: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if it is a fact that Government have appointed a special Muslim officer to look after the interests of Muslim employees in Railways?

(b) Do Government propose to appoint a similar Hindu officer to look after the interests of the Hindu employees of Railways whose prospects are in danger? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) No.

TERMS OF SERVICE OF WORKERS ON MUNITIONS PRODUCTION IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES AND RAILWAY WORKSHOPS.

15. Mr. Ananga Mohan Dam: (a) Will the Honourable the Supply Member be pleased to state the terms of service of workers including the supervisory staff employed on munitions production in the Ordnance Factories and Railway Workshops?

(b) Is it a fact that Chargemen engaged for munitions work in the Railway get only seven days' casual leave, whereas those employed in the Ordnance Factories get one month's privilege leave in addition to casual leave and a bonus of one month's pay per year?

(c) Do Government propose to take steps to grant equal establishment privileges to all staff engaged for munitions production work either on Railways or on Ordnance works?

Mr. J. A. Mackeown: (a) Two statements (I & II) showing the terms and conditions of service of:

(i) Workmen and Non-gazetted Supervisory staff in Ordnance Factories; and

(ii) Workmen in Railway Workshops engaged on munitions production, are appended herewith.

(b) Chargemen engaged for munitions work in Railway Workshops are governed by the Railway Rules under which no leave other than casual leave is admissible if the employee has put in less than 3 years' service. If the employee has put in 3 years' service or more, but less than 10 years' service, he is allowed 10 days' leave each year with pay. Casual leave is allowed according to Railway practice and does not exceed 15 days in a year except at Kancharapara Workshops where under a local Railway order only 7 days' leave is given in a year. The temporary Chargemen in Ordnance Factories are, however, entitled to earned leave at 1/22nd of the period of duty and can accumulate such leave up to a maximum of 30 days and in addition are eligible for a bonus equal to one month's pay for each year of approved service.

(c) No. Staff employed on munitions work at (i) Railway Workshops and (ii) Ordnance Factories are governed by separate rules applicable to their respective services under the Railway and Ordnance Factories. No distinction can be made between men doing the same class of work in the same workshop; for example, two chargemen, one supervising a number of machinists making locomotive parts and the other the same number of machinists on munitions work, cannot be regarded as performing different duties which might entitle those employed on munitions work to be brought under Ordnance Factory leave and pay rules.

(7) Bonus.—Temporary non-gazetted workers (whether wholly or partly employed on munitions works) who have completed one year's continuous approved service before the date of cessation of hostilities will be eligible for bonus equivalent to one day's pay for each completed month of continuous employment during the war.

OFFENSIVE REMARKS BEFORE A DEPUTATION OF THE SIKH STAFF BY THE SUPERINTENDENT, TRAFFIC ACCOUNTS BRANCH, LAHORE.

16. Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Is the Honourable the Railway Member aware:

(i) that a deputation of the Sikh staff and other non-smokers of the Compilation Branch of the Traffic Accounts Branch, North Western Railway, Lahore, represented to their Superintendent their difficulties about water arrangements as they could not take it from the room where the smoking pipes were placed in large numbers;

(ii) that they also requested for a separate room for seating themselves during the recess period; and

(iii) that the Superintendent instead of sympathising with them said that he had seen Akalis smoking in trains and that Sikhs should go to river Ravi to take water, and to bask in the sun during the recess period, etc.?

(b) Is it a fact that the Sikh Rights Protection Society, Lahore, protested against these uncalled for and humiliating remarks made by the Superintendent?

(c) Is it a fact that the Superintendent totally denied having received such a deputation, and that the same reply was passed on to the Sikh Rights Protection Society?

(d) Were any enquiries held before passing on the reply?

(e) Does he propose to hold an enquiry in this case now and what steps does he propose to take against this official?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) (i). Government understand that no such deputation waited on the Superintendent.

(ii) and (iii). Do not arise.

(b) Yes, a complaint making the allegations was received.

(c) and (d). Yes.

• STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Information promised in reply to unstarred question No. 15 and parts (a) and (b) of unstarred question No. 16 asked by Mr. K. C. Neogy on the 11th February, 1943.

JUTE ACREAGE IN BENGAL.

15. (a) and (b). In October, 1941, before the outbreak of war with Japan, it appeared to the Government of India, on the basis of information available with them, that, in order to meet the demand from consuming countries overseas, including the United States of America, and domestic requirements, it would be necessary for Bengal to grow a 10 anna crop during 1942-43. The Government of Bengal were accordingly apprised of this view, which they accepted. Subsequently, however, as a result of the developments in the war situation in the Pacific, the Government of Bengal approached the Government of India suggesting reduction of the 1942-43, crop to an 8-anna level, to which the Government of India agreed. A copy of the Bengal Government's Press Communique, dated 24th March, 1942, which sets out the position clearly, is attached.

(c) Exports to the United States of America of jute and jute goods fell short of the anticipated off-take by that country, chiefly owing to unforeseen shipping difficulties following the extension of hostilities to the Pacific. The Government of India had given no promise of any kind to the Government of the United States of America as suggested by the Honourable Member, but had merely ascertained, for the purpose of facilitating the regulation of the jute crop in 1942-43, what the requirements of consuming countries overseas, including the United States of America were likely to be during that year.

As regards the last part of the question, the Government of India agreed to view sympathetically any request from the Government of Bengal for accommodation necessary to finance reasonable measures taken by them with a view to preventing jute prices from falling.

BENGAL GOVERNMENT PRESS COMMUNIQUE, DATED 24TH MARCH, 1942.

On 1st December, 1941, Government issued a notification under the Bengal Jute Regulation Act fixing the acreage to be sown with jute in 1942, at ten-sixteenths of the recorded acreage in 1940. Licenses have been issued in accordance with that order.

The decision to fix the acreage in Bengal at ten annas of the 1940 acreage was taken by Government after careful consideration of the supply position and the probable world demand during 1942-43, as far as it could be calculated at that time from the estimated demands for jute manufactures from all the principal consuming countries. The Government of India were also consulted and this decision was approved by them.

The entry of Japan into the war and the deterioration of the position in the Pacific have however introduced new factors which could not previously be foreseen. Government have therefore again considered the situation and with the approval of the Government of India, have now decided that a full 10 annas crop in 1942, in present circumstances likely to prove excessive. It is however the considered opinion of both Governments that the acreage under jute in 1942, should not fall below 8 annas of that of 1940, if all probable requirements for urgent and important war purposes in the allied countries are to be met.

Government therefore announce that although the licenses issued to growers entitle them to grow jute on ten annas of the recorded 1940 acreage, they very strongly advise all growers to plant jute on 8 annas (one half) of the 1940 acreage. In other words, the licenses which they hold should be regarded by growers as licenses for 8 annas and not for 10 annas of the area recorded in their names in 1940. On all the remaining lands growers should plant food crops, especially paddy, in order to prevent any possible shortage in Bengal of the principal food of the people.

Government confidently appeal to all growers of jute to accept this advice and act accordingly.

JUTE ACREAGE IN BENGAL.

16. (a) No. The Official Report of the Bengal Legislative Council Debates of the 25th September, 1942, does not contain any such statement.

(b) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the answer to Parts (a) and (b) of Question 15.

MOTIONS FOR ADJOURNMENT.

DEATHS BY STARVATION IN ORISSA.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): This is an adjournment motion by Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury. I am not sure whether he gave any notice to me. Did the Honourable Member send me a notice of it?

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury (Assam: Muhammadan): I sent in a notice to the Secretary.

(Secretary explained to the President that the notice was sent to him.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): This is an adjournment motion "to discuss a matter of urgent public importance, namely, failure of Government to prevent death of many a person for want of food in the Province of Orissa as stated by Mr. Pyari Sankar Roy, Parliamentary Secretary of Orissa Government in the Orissa Legislative Assembly, on 3rd July, 1943, vide statement in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of 5th July, 1943".

That can be dealt with on the day when this food question is discussed.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: But this raises a specific question relating to Orissa.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The shortage of food affects lots of persons and the matter that the Honourable Member wishes to discuss can be discussed on that day.

REFUSAL TO ALLOT A DAY FOR DISCUSSING GOVERNMENT'S MONETARY POLICY.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next adjournment motion is in the name of Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad. He wishes to discuss "the refusal of the Government of India to allot a day for discussing the monetary policy of the Government of India, which is the root cause of the present economic troubles of the people of India".

This monetary policy has been in existence for some time. I am not sure that any Member is entitled to ask for a day to discuss it by an adjournment motion.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): The monetary policy, no doubt, is always there, but I wanted to draw attention to the refusal of the Government to discuss war time policy.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That is not a good ground for adjourning the business of the Assembly. I hold the motion as being out of order.

POLICY OF THE RAILWAY BOARD IN GIVING DEARNESS ALLOWANCE NOT BY INCREASING SALARIES.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next notice is by the same Honourable Member. He wishes to discuss "the policy of the Railway Board in giving dearness allowance not by increasing salaries, but by purchasing large stock of wheat at high prices and exporting it to places by back door methods for the use of their own employees which resulted in raising the price level of wheat on one hand and introducing corruption due to mal-administration on the other hand".

That, again, is a question which can be discussed when the motion regarding the food situation is taken up.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: This is a somewhat different question. There are three points which are involved.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have read them out. But all those three points can be very well covered in that discussion.

FORFEITURE OF SECURITY OF The Hindustan.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next notice is in the name of Sardar Sant Singh. He wishes to discuss "a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the forfeiture of security of The Hindustan, a Hindi daily newspaper of Delhi, for writing an editorial 'Britain and the British Empire' in its issue of 3rd July, 1943".

I understand that the Editor or the Manager has a right of appeal to the High Court.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell (Home Member): Yes, that is a fact.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): If that is so, the matter will have to take the ordinary course of law. I am sure the Honourable Member can himself argue the case before the Court as well as here.

FAILURE TO CONSULT NON-OFFICIAL OPINION ON THE INTERNATIONAL CLEARING UNION SCHEME.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next notice is in the name of Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta. He wishes to discuss "the failure of the Government of India to take non-official opinion in the Assembly into confidence in face of the serious menace to the economic and financial interests of this country involved in the provisions of paragraphs 23, 24 and 25 of the proposed scheme of an 'International Clearing Union' published under the authority of His Majesty's Government which is calculated in the name of international co-operation to perpetuate the subordination of India to Great Britain in so vital a matter as Currency and Exchange".

Did this International Clearing Union come into existence after the last Session?.....

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Central Division. Non-Muhammadan Rural): Yes, Sir, The report was published on the 1st July.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): All right.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman (Finance Member): The position is, Sir, that there are now three proposals which have no official sanction, which have been put out for discussion in all countries regarding a possible international monetary system.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Does the Honourable Member mean that there is no official sanction for these proposals?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: No. At this stage no Government has accepted responsibility for them. There are plans which have been worked out by experts and which have been put, so to speak, on the international table for anybody to discuss or modify or make any counter suggestions.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): No scheme has been put forward by the British Government?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: No. It has not got the authority of the British Government. It is a scheme the authorship of which belongs to Lord Keynes, but no responsibility for it has been accepted by His Majesty's Government. They have merely taken the step of allowing it to be put forward without any commitment whatsoever.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Has any communication been received by the Government of India with regard to that?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The Government of India have merely received copies of these schemes, and the Government of India have, as soon as they received these copies and were able to print them, sent them to all Members of this House and to various other bodies which might be interested to formulate their proposals. I also stated in the course of the last Session that I hoped to be in a position to give an opportunity to this House to discuss these schemes on a suitable occasion. I submit, therefore, that no question arises of any failure to consult non-official opinion regarding any particular feature of one of these schemes.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Will you give an opportunity for discussion?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: May I submit that the statement of facts is not correctly set out. The publication "International Clearing Union" was issued under the full authority of His Majesty's Government. The Government of India were consulted long before this pamphlet was issued. In England it is a Government which is responsible to public opinion, but here it is a Government which has not got that honour. Therefore, the Government of India has the greater obligation that they should take the public into confidence.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): As a matter of fact, copies have been sent to all Members of this House, and, I suppose, to other interested bodies?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: May I say that there are three very dangerous proposals in this publication?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): But the Honourable the Finance Member has said that the House will be given an opportunity to discuss it.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: When? Already the scheme is being implemented.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: That is a gross misstatement of fact.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: It is an absolute correct statement of fact. It is being implemented in Canada. Either the Honourable Member pretends not to know or he wants to cover his ignorance.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I repeat it is entirely wrong.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I accept the statement of fact as given by the Honourable the Finance Member.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: If you accept that, I am very sorry, but it is not a correct statement. Let me say in particular that his denial about Canada is not correct.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): This is a question whether there has been any official statement of policy on the part of the British Government or any official commitment on the part of the British Government which would in any way affect the Government of India; and having regard to the statement made by the Honourable the Finance Member, I must hold that there has been no such commitment.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: What is the statement?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I rule the motion as being out of order.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: To settle the matter, may I read.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: When will he give an opportunity to the House, after everything has been implemented?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: May I read one sentence from the introduction to the official copy of these proposals?

"The Government (that is, His Majesty's Government) is not committed to the principles or details of the scheme. Any proposals for a satisfactory international monetary mechanism after the war can only be framed after full consideration of all aspects of the very difficult problem. It is hoped that these proposals will afford a basis for discussion, criticism and constructive amendment together with similar plans having similar objectives which may be prepared by experts of other Governments."

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: When will this opportunity be given to experts of other Governments? There is no knowing. That is the main point of my motion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable the Finance Member says that opportunity will be given.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: When will it be given?

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: During this Session?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I do not think a useful debate can take place during this Session. These proposals have only been before the country for two or three weeks. There are matters which require considerable study. I hope that interests concerned, Chambers of Commerce, the Federation of Indian Chambers and other similar bodies, would remit them to a competent Sub-Committee to study them, formulate their considered opinions on them and in due course forward them to the Government, and when the country has had time to formulate its views this House might then have a useful debate.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Next Session?

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): May we know within what period you will call a meeting to consider? Can you give some idea?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I think it is quite possible that by the next Session a useful debate might be held.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Why are commercial interests only invited? Have the rest of the people no interest in the matter?

JUDICIAL CONDEMNATION OF THE BOMBAY GOVERNMENT'S METHOD OF DEALING WITH THE SABOTAGE MOVEMENT AT NANDURBAR.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next motion is also in the name of Mr. Jamnadas Mehta. He wishes to discuss "a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the judicial condemnation by the law courts in the province of Bombay of the methods of dealing with the sabotage movement by the Government of Bombay at Nandurbar, where boys and girls who were returning from school were indiscriminately shot last year resulting in the deaths of some of them and in serious injury to a much larger number".

This surely can be discussed in the Legislative Assembly of Bombay. You cannot discuss it here.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: There is no Legislature in Bombay.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The High Court has passed an order in this case and it is for the public to take up the matter. The motion is ruled out of order.

EXCESSIVE INFLATION OF THE PAPER CURRENCY.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): There is another motion of which notice has been given by Mr. Jamnadas Mehta. He wishes to discuss "a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the unparalleled figure of nearly 750 crores of rupees to which the Government of India have inflated the volume of paper currency in this country regardless of the fact that it has destroyed the security of livelihood of nearly 400 millions of its people and introduced the economic chaos which now threatens to engulf India as a result thereof".

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The point at issue is the monetary policy of the Government which, I believe, is to come under discussion on a Resolution in this Session but in any case the underlying matter is one which was discussed at considerable length during the last Session. The situation is in no way different from what it was then. I clearly indicated then in the course of my Budget speech and in subsequent discussion what were the points at issue and I submit that there is no difference in essence between the matter which my Honourable friend has brought forward and the position which was discussed during the last Session.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): A definite figure of 750 crores is mentioned here.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: In the course of the Budget speech, I referred not only to the situation as it existed at that moment but the situation as it would exist thereafter. It was quite clear that further expansion of currency might occur and indeed has occurred, although in other respects the situation has greatly improved since that time. It never was any part of the Government's case that the volume of the currency would remain static for all time.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: There is no substance in the opposition of the Government. The figure at which the currency now stands is so unparalleled. It is 50 per cent in excess of what the figure was when the discussion took place and every single rupee of currency that is now added in the paper currency is a danger.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable the Finance Member says that there is a Resolution dealing with this matter, which will come up for discussion.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I understand that the Resolution referred to has secured a place in the ballot. It may come on today or failing that on the 6th August.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): What is that Resolution?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: That Resolution is not at all relevant. It is Resolution No. 3 in the name of Mr. Umar Aly Shah. It is substantially different from my motion. I am not concerned with the rate of interest or anything of the kind.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The question of monetary policy is one organic thing.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member can discuss this very question in connection with that Resolution.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Where is the guarantee that it will be reached?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): In all likelihood, it will be reached. This is enough as has been repeatedly laid down. On the ground that there is a Resolution which is likely to be reached this Session, standing in the name of Mr. Umar Aly Shah, raising a question which would cover the very point sought to be discussed in this adjournment motion, I rule it out of order.

NOMINATION OF THE PANEL OF CHAIRMEN.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have to inform the House that under sub-rule (1) of rule 3 of the Indian Legislative Rules, I nominate Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang, Mr. K. C. Neogy, Mr. Hooseinbhooy A. Lalljee and Sir Henry Richardson on the Panel of Chairmen for the current Session.

RESOLUTION RE TREATMENT OF POLITICAL PRISONERS AND DETENUS—contd.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The House will now proceed with the further discussion of the Resolution moved by Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari on the 25th March, 1943.

Sardar Mangal Singh (East Punjab: Sikh): Before I deal with the points raised by the Honourable the Home Member in his speech when he spoke on this Resolution last time, I wish to make a short personal statement before the House, which incidentally concerns every elected member of this House. I mention this personal matter because I think it is connected with the fundamental rights and privileges of the Members of this House. When I was released in November last year on medical grounds, I was given a notice by the Punjab Government under which I was required not to join in a meeting or assembly of five or more than five persons. I will read only a few lines from the notice which are relevant to the issue. This was the order:

"Whereas the Governor of the Punjab is satisfied with respect to the person known as Mangal Singh, M.L.A. . . . with a view to preventing him from acting in any manner prejudicial to the defence of British India, the public safety, the maintenance of public order or the efficient prosecution of the war it is necessary to make an order . . ."

This is the order:

Now, therefore, in exercise of the powers conferred by Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules, the Governor of the Punjab is pleased to direct that the said Mangal Singh shall not, (i) without the permission previously obtained in writing from the District Magistrate, Ludhiana, join or take part in any procession or meeting of five or more persons other than a purely religious procession or meeting. . . .

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Why does the Honourable Member think that it applies to this Assembly?

Sardar Mangal Singh: I am coming to that point shortly. Now, whenever I wanted to attend any meeting of the Board of Directors of a business concern, I always took the permission of the Deputy Commissioner. But when I wanted to come here to attend this House, I thought that it was not necessary to take the permission of the Deputy Commissioner. But I referred the matter to him just to know his reactions.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I do not know why the Honourable Member should have referred the matter to anybody at all.

The Honourable Member is a Member of this House and he has every right to speak here.

Sardar Mangal Singh: In reply to my letter the District Magistrate said that I could not attend this House unless I took previous permission from him in writing. I crave the indulgence of the Chair as well as of the House to read this short letter which is quite germane to the issue. He said:

"I am in receipt of your letter dated the 21st January, 1943, wherein you have raised the question whether in view of the gagging order No. 17575-B.D.S.B., dated the 18th November, 1942, served on you by the Punjab Government under Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules you can attend the meetings of the Central Assembly or those of the Committees at Delhi, without the permission of the District Magistrate, Ludhiana. I answer that question in the negative in so far as the order enjoins in clause (i) that you 'shall not without the permission previously obtained in writing from the District Magistrate, Ludhiana, join or take part in any procession or meeting of five or more persons other than a purely religious procession or meeting'. The Central Assembly comprises of more than five members and probably the same remark holds true in respect of most of its Committees also. Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules was framed under the Defence of India Act No. XXXV of 1939, which lays down in section 1(2) (a) that the Act extends to the whole of British India and it applies also to British subjects and servants of the Crown in any part of India. So the gagging order in your case holds good not only in the Punjab province but in the whole of India including Delhi and other Provinces and native States."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member has read out a very interesting opinion, but the Honourable Member knows himself quite well that anyone who is a Member of this House and who wishes to speak and catches the eye of the Chair is entitled to speak. The Honourable Member can now go on to deal with the Resolution.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division: Muhammadan Rural): But, Sir, there is one point for the Chair to decide. If the Honourable Member had come to this House without obtaining the permission of the District Magistrate what protection would the Chair afford to him?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member surely knows very well that once he is in this Assembly and he catches the eye of the President, he is entitled to speak. That is sufficient protection for him and he had no business to consult anybody regarding that.

Sardar Mangal Singh: But I submit, Sir, that I am likely to be prosecuted by the Punjab Government when I go there. But I have come to this House today to assert my rights as an elected Member of this House. I think that except yourself, Sir, nobody can suspend me. . . .

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Certainly. The Honourable Member has every right to speak at the meetings of this House.

Sardar Mangal Singh: This, in a way, gives some idea as to how the Defence of India Rules are being worked out and this was the point which I wanted to submit to the Honourable the Home Member.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell (Home Member): On a point of order, Sir. The object of this Resolution is not to discuss the general working of Rule 26 but to discuss the conditions of detention of prisoners.

Mr. Hooseinbhooy A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): On a point of order, Sir. I submit that a Member who attends here to speak on a certain Resolution has a right to make it clear under what circumstances he is attending and as to what his position is in the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): He must speak to the terms of the Resolution.

Sardar Mangal Singh: Certainly. Why I decided to come here today, Sir, is due to the fact that when I read the speech of the Honourable the Home Member, I found there were certain inaccuracies in it. Probably he was not correctly informed.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member refers to the treatment of prisoners?

Sardar Mangal Singh: He was not correctly informed particularly about the detenues confined in my province. I have not gone to the Library to prepare my speech. But I am speaking from my personal knowledge. I have gone through this Mill and I have been in the police lock-up and in the jails before the 9th August and after the 9th August. On this point I wish to submit to the Honourable the Home Member whether he is prepared to go back to the position which was laid down by himself after the Deoli hunger-strike? It is clear from his speech that he is conscious of the weakness of his case. Sometimes he says that it is the responsibility of the responsible Ministries in the provinces. By this time, the country knows what is the hoax of this provincial responsibility and how the responsible Ministers and Ministries are functioning in the provinces. Sometimes he takes cover behind some of the Centrally Administered Areas. I will ask the Honourable the Home Member how he is treating the political prisoners from Delhi itself? When they were in the jail of Delhi they were given a different treatment and since the time they have been sent to the Punjab jails, all those privileges have been taken away and they are being treated like other prisoners in that province.

In his speech the Home Member says that these detenus are not ordinary detenus; they are rebels and they are the enemies of the Government. I make a present to the Honourable the Home Member and ask how he is treating his own enemies? How are the Germans and Italians being treated in the Camps in this country? If you want to treat those detenus as your enemies, by all means treat them as such and give them the same treatment as you are giving to Germans and Italians in this country. If you want to treat them as friends, then treat them as friends and give them the same treatment as you were giving to other detenus before the 9th August. On the 9th August when we went into jail, new rules were circulated to all the jails and a new class of prisoners was created called the civil disobedience prisoners, 1942, and we knew what that meant. Before the 9th August every detenu, irrespective of his social position and status, was given 12 annas in the jail; he was given Rs. 17/8 as clothing allowance; he was allowed to supplement his food up to Rs. 10 per mensem and he was allowed interviews. He was given papers and books and was also given charpais. He was provided with other facilities, including games.

Now, what happened after the 9th August. A new class of prisoners was created—the civil disobedience prisoners, 1942, a new brand, a new model of 1942, was created. How were they treated? No newspapers or books were allowed to them. Although the Honourable the Home Member said that books were allowed, yet speaking from personal knowledge and speaking with responsibility, I can say that books are not allowed even today in the Punjab jails. Is the Honourable the Home Member prepared to contradict that statement, that no interviews have been allowed today in the Punjab jails with the relations, even if the prisoner is ill or his relations are dying. On this point the Honourable the Home Member says that while they allowed interviews in certain Provinces, there were cases of sabotage and all that. I say that is entirely incorrect. The first Province which permitted interviews was Sind. I do not think there has been any case of sabotage in Sind. In the only Province where the Congress leaders were not arrested some of them are still outside, I mean N.-W. F. P.; there is not a single case of sabotage, because the Congress leaders exercise their influence. It is only in those Provinces where the Congress leaders were suddenly removed and when there was no one to guide them in this matter that these cases occurred. So that, the statement that these cases occurred because interviews were granted is entirely wrong. How were these people treated? We were given six annas a day. Before the 9th August, a prisoner was given twelve annas a day, and Rs. 17-8-0 and you can supplement your food upto Rs. 10 a month, you can accept some eatables from your friends at the time of interview. All these were stopped. We were only given six annas a day, no charpais were allowed. All prominent Congress Workers were thrown in Shahpur jail where there was no structural accommodation, only chholdaris were pitched and the place was wet. There was not even sufficient provision even according to the rules, there were no medical arrangements, the people suffered from malaria for a long time even without getting proper medical attention. I submit that the Government of India should not hesitate to accept this Resolution as amended by my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi. His amendment is very important. I appeal to the Honourable the Mover to accept this amendment and I submit the amended Resolution should be accepted by the House and the Government also should have no hesitation in accepting it. It only asks the Government to revise their policy in respect of the treatment of prisoners. It does not go any further. Does the Honourable the Home Member require another hunger-strike to effect a revision of the Government policy? I hope the House will accept the Resolution as amended and I hope the Government also will implement it. Sir, I support.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated: Non-Official): Sir, my Honourable friend Sardar Mangal Singh, by narrating his personal experiences, has made my work somewhat very easy. The Resolution is intended to secure humane treatment, a treatment consistent with human freedom, for the security and other political prisoners at present detained in jails in India. Sir, I have moved an amendment to that Resolution. My amendment is not in opposition to the Resolution at all. It is only intended to clarify the issues and put the question also in some greater detail. I am suggesting by my amendment that the Government of India, in consultation with the Provincial Governments and in consultation with the Committee of this Legislature, should revise the policy underlying the treatment of political prisoners in this country. I have suggested that the conditions at present prevailing in Indian jails should be revised so as to be consistent with the principles of humanity and as I said, consistent with the principles of human freedom.

Sir, the Honourable the Home Member in the speech which he made during the last Session said, in the first place that it is difficult for the Government of India to lay down the policy in this matter, as the policy is in the hands of the Provincial Governments. In this matter, Sir, I would like to point out to the Honourable the Home Member that in the case of a large number of political prisoners who are detained in Indian jails, the policy was laid down by the Government of India, they were detained in accordance with the policy formulated by the Government of India. Therefore, if they were detained in accordance with the policy formulated by the Government of India, the Government of India should take upon themselves the responsibility of laying down the principles according to which these people should be detained in the jails in all the Provinces. Then, Sir, the Honourable the Home Member in his speech pointed out the difficulties which he feels in securing improvements in the conditions at present meted out in Indian jails. I would first state the last point mentioned in my amendment. I have suggested there that in India when people are detained without trial, there should be at least some method of reviewing the cases. For instance, in Great Britain, when people are detained in the jails without trial, the Government have provided for an Advisory Committee. Any person detained without trial can approach that Advisory Committee. He is told what the charges are against him. He is also given an opportunity to disprove the charges against him. Sir, in India, the Government of India have made no such provision, neither have the Provincial Governments made any provision. I therefore suggest by my amendment that the Government should take immediate steps to appoint an Advisory Committee or appoint Advisory Committees in all the Provinces which will review the cases in the same manner in which these cases are reviewed or considered or examined in Great Britain. The Honourable the Home Member in his speech made last Session had agreed that in the case of some political prisoners, some kind of review was desirable, that is, those prisoners who were detained for their own activities. But, Sir, the method of reviewing followed by the Government of India and by the Provincial Governments was thoroughly unsatisfactory. The detenus were not told what exactly were the charges against them, and they had not full opportunities of disproving the charges against them. The Honourable the Home Member then says that in the case of those people who are detained on account of Congress movement, that kind of review was not practicable or desirable, I do not exactly remember now what he said. But even in the case of those people who are detained on account of the Congress movement, in the first place there may be a number of people, who were detained not because they had done anything, but because they belonged to the Congress. It is true that in the case of those people who are detained only for belonging to the Congress, the review is not likely to be of much use, but will be of much use or some use at least as affecting the policy of the Government of India. In his speech, the Honourable the Home Member has said that the Congress movement, when he made that speech, was going on actively in the Provinces. I do not know whether the statement made by him at that time was correct or not. But today it is not correct. Today the Congress movement has practically died out, at least that part of the movement which included violence and sabotage. Therefore it is time now for the Government of India as well as the Provincial Governments to review their policy, not the cases of individuals, but review their whole policy and release all the political prisoners either detained after trial or without trial. I therefore feel that the time has come for reviewing not the individual cases of political prisoners but reviewing the policy of detaining these people without trial or even after trial. I hope, Sir, that the Government of India and the Provincial Governments will review this policy and release the political prisoners in all provinces as the movement on account of which they were detained does not now exist in a form of violence and sabotage.

Then, Sir, I would like to bring before the Legislature the cases of persons who are transferred from one province to another. A large number of security prisoners have been transferred from Madras to Amraoti, and in order that the Provincial Government should be able to square the account I am told that an equal number of political prisoners from the C. P. have been transferred to Madras. Sir, I have heard a large number of complaints about the prisoners at present detained in Amraoti. These people come from Madras and they are accustomed to a certain climate and food and certain other conditions; and in the Amraoti jail they are not only very uncomfortable on account of the extreme heat but a large number of them suffered in health. My friend, Mr. Giri, who was a Member of this Assembly has suffered in health; he now gets rheumatic and other pains in his leg. The case of Mr. Satyamurti is well known. Another gentleman, Mr. C. N. Muthuranga Mudaliar, was recently released on account of illness. But there are other persons in Amraoti jail who are not keeping good health either on account of the climate of the place or on account of the conditions in that jail. I suggest to the Government of India to recommend to the Madras and also the C. P. Government to transfer these detenus to their original provinces.

Then, Sir as regards conditions in jails I do not wish to speak in detail on this occasion, but I should like to point out to the Government of India that in certain jails people have suffered on account of bad conditions. For instance, in Bombay in a prison at Belgaum people suffered on account of an epidemic disease like cholera. I do not suggest that Government took no steps after the epidemic arose; they did take steps to prevent the evil of that epidemic. But I should like the Government of India and the Provincial Governments to maintain such conditions in these jails that people will not suffer. Not only were conditions bad in Belgaum when the people suffered but the curious thing is that it was found afterwards that the epidemic was due to bad bajree supplied in that jail. Some of the detenus wanted food to be ordered from outside but they were told not to do so although the real disease was due to bad food supplied in the jail itself.

Moreover, I would like to say a word about the facilities given to the detenus as regards communications with outside, specially as regards interviews allowed to them with their friends and relatives. The Honourable the Home Member in his speech made last Session said that it was not desirable to allow the detenus to have contact with their relatives or friends. In this connection I will draw attention to the fact that all interviews take place in the presence of the jail authorities and there is hardly any opportunity for either the detenu or his relatives to maintain secret communication with each other.

He has mentioned some case where a detenu tried to smuggle some information through his relative. But he knows that the fact was made known. Therefore there is no possibility of the detenus and their relatives maintaining secret contact with each other if the facility for interviews is given to these detenus. I, therefore, feel that the Government of India should accept the suggestion which I have made. In the first place they should appoint a committee of this House to consider the whole question regarding the treatment given to the detenus in all provinces. I agree that improvement in the treatment of the detenus cannot be secured without the co-operation of the Provincial Governments. I have, therefore, suggested in my amendment that the Government of India should secure the co-operation of the Provincial Governments in this matter. If a committee of this House is appointed I have no doubt that the Government of India will place before this Committee the views and proposals of the Provincial Governments. These Governments can then appoint their representatives to co-operate with the committee of this Legislature. But I feel that the policy governing the treatment of the detenus in this country should be co-ordinated by the Government of India, whether the administration of the policy be left to the Provincial Governments or not. The Provincial Governments certainly may have a certain freedom but the policy underlying the treatment should be a policy formulated and approved by the Government of India and this Legislature in co-operation with the Provincial Governments. There must be co-ordination between the various provinces in this matter.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member's time is up.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I shall not proceed very much further but say this that in putting people in jail Government of India formulated the policy themselves, may be in consultation with the Provincial Governments. Therefore they should also take the responsibility of forming a co-ordinated policy in fixing the principles underlying the treatment given to the detenus and political prisoners in Indian jails.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division: Non-Muhammadan): Sir, at the outset I am reminded today of one name which was mentioned more than any other on the last occasion during the debate on this Resolution. It was the name of the late Mr. Satyamurti. He was my friend and colleague and we worked together as Secretary of the Congress Party for several years. But he is now no more; the hand of death has intervened between him and us and his case has practically lost all importance so far as these mundane affairs are concerned.

Coming to my amendment, I must express my thankfulness to the Honourable the Home Member for taking the earliest opportunity to reply to the Resolution as well as the amendments. I have, therefore, got the advantage of the reaction of Government to the Resolution as well as to my amendment; but I must say I am disappointed. I expected a statesmanlike reply with some imagination of an administrator, especially in these bad times. But I am sorry to say that I find a trace of the same superannuated woodenness in his reply. What does he say? He puts forward the same plea that the Central Government or, for the matter of that, the Central Legislature can have nothing to do with provincial matters, be the province under the autocratic rule of a Governor or under a popular ministry. I was not prepared to hear such a reply. It is always said in this House that the Central Government can have nothing to do with matters concerning the provinces and this legal opinion of the Government of India I might have taken as true—for I am myself a layman—had it not been for the fact that very recently some of the legal decisions of the Government of India have been reversed by various Courts in the country. I think when the British Parliament was enacting the Government of India Act, 1935, specially Section 102, it had before it the report of the committee on Australian Constitution, which said that during the last war on account of judicial decisions the Federal Government of Australia had become practically a unitary Government, and under this provision, after the promulgation by the Governor General of a state of emergency in the country, I take it that this Government has turned into practically a unitary Government and, therefore, the Central Government and this House can control all the affairs in the country, either in the provinces or at the Centre. I am a layman and I do not know; there might still be some technical difficulties and legal obstacles, but I am sure it will not be difficult for the Government of India, especially the Legislative Department, to overcome such difficulties. I take this opportunity to extend my cordial welcome to my Honourable friend, Sir Asoka Kumar Roy, to this House as the Law Member. He is now the head of the Law Department and if there is any defect in the organization of the Department or if he wants any more assistance he will doubtless re-organize it, secure all the necessary assistance he requires, and I am sure he will repeat his legal victories in the provincial sphere at the Centre, and we shall never hear in future—especially in these bad times when the administration is under proclamation of emergency—that the Central Government and the Central Legislature are not competent to interfere in provincial matters, or even to advise them effectively.

The Honourable the Home Member has told us that Members of the Central Legislature have no status to advise the Provincial Governments. I know that perfectly well. Whoever ever claimed that status, I did not claim it in my amendment. What I demand is that some members of the Legislature or public men in the country should, by arrangement of the Central Government, interview the detenus and political prisoners in the provinces in order to ascertain whether they have changed their views and are prepared to co-operate in the war measures, and if they are satisfied they should recommend their release. There is no question of status or anything of the sort. The Government of India ought to be able to select some of their non-official friends to help and co-operate with them in this matter in the way in which such co-operation should be offered and accepted.

Again, the Honourable Member asks what guarantee is there that those prisoners should be taken to have changed their views. I am simply sorry that he has uttered this counsel of despair. What is the policy behind this detention and imprisonment? I think the Government should always try with determination to rally round all opinions in the country for co-operation, and I am glad he has plainly said that these are precautionary measures and not measures of revenge, and I wish that he would look for all sorts of ways and means to see that those prisoners are released and are utilized in the improvement of the present situation.

I may here refer to the demand of the Mover of the Resolution as well as the other amendments. Before doing that I may tell my Honourable friend the Home Member—though the matter is very delicate—that, as far as I know, the circumstances in my province are such that if I go and interview the prisoners in jails I can ascertain their views and can recommend their release if they have changed their mind. I am quite sure that there will be many other Members in the House, as well as members of the public outside this House in this vast land of India to do the same thing as effectively or even more than effectively. Besides, the war situation has now changed and the policy of the Government should change accordingly. Mussolini has abdicated. He is now under arrest, and the Allies are at the gates of the Italian mainland. Germany on the Russian front is also in a tight corner. In the Far East Japan is shaky. I am appealing for those patriots who are in jail. I know many of them, and I know that probably 99 per cent. of them will be useful to you in present circumstances. They will help us; they will help the Government; they will help in the affairs of the war and in the business of the nation.

So now let me say one word to my friends, the Mover of the Resolution and the movers of the other amendments. They want release of these prisoners in a covert way: I want it openly. I prescribe and propose a practical method for their release. I never believe that my friends will be satisfied with these crumbs of concessions, as they have put it—a candle here, a letter there, or eight annas more a day to supplement food and things of this kind.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member's time is up.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: What they say in a covert way, I say openly that methods and means should be devised to release them and that these patriots should be used for the betterment of the present situation in the country.

Mr. R. R. Gupta (Cities of the United Provinces: Non-Muhammadan Urban): I stand to support the amendments which were moved by my friend, Mr. Neogy, and myself. Sir, I come from the Province which is characterised as the most notorious province in the matter of dealing with the political prisoners, a province which has in no small measure contributed towards the political suffering in the country. I will be failing in my duty if I do not let the Government know what is going on in the United Provinces behind the prison bars under the name of law and order.

Sir, there are several concentration camps in several Central jails, but I will confine my observations only with regard to one or two of these jails. There is a Fatehgarh Central Jail in the United Provinces, in which political detenus are confined. From 9th August all the privileges and rights were withdrawn from that jail also as from other jails. Neither letters, nor interviews nor even petitions to Government were allowed to the prisoners. Then, Sir, one more class of prisoners was added, namely, that class which was ordered to be kept aloof from all other prisoners who were concentrated there. Sir, that class was meant for such prisoners who were bad characters or goondas. In spite of the understanding of the Central Government with those detenus who were transferred back from Deoli, after the Deoli hunger-strike, as a result of the efforts of Sardar Mangal Singh, that there will be no differential classification of detenus, the classification system was again introduced after 9th August, even against those detenus. Then, Sir, the United Provinces Government itself framed rules for the prisoners who were in detention that they will not be punished by handcuffs and bar fetters, but that punishment has been awarded to the prisoners, among whom are included M. L. As. of the United Provinces.

As regards the health of the prisoners, one man from Cawnpore, who is perhaps still there, weighs only 91 lbs. The same person, Sir, I have come to know from an unimpeachable authority, was given the work in the mill inside the jail. While he was doing that work one day he fainted and after that he was produced before the jailor. The jailor awarded him the punishment of beating. He was beaten. During that punishment he vomited blood and he was transferred to hospital. When he returned back from hospital, again he was awarded the same labour. Again he could not do that work. Again he was produced before the jailor. Again he was awarded the punishment of beating and again he vomited blood, and now he is in hospital again.

To give you another story. Two men were awarded the punishment of beating. In protest they went on hunger-strike. They fasted for 40 days. Afterwards they were tried before a Magistrate for breach of jail discipline. During the course of their examination they narrated the story of their beating and they also pointed out that they vomited blood. That blood has been sent to the Lucknow Hospital for examination.

Then there is the third case of one Mr. Chandra Bhal Johri, who was a Member of this Honourable House. He was arrested in Benares while he was on his sick bed. He was kept in Benares jail for a long time, in spite of his protests and his requests that this jail did not suit his health. After a long time he was transferred to the Lucknow Jail. Previously also when he had been interned his health was not good and he was kept in hospital. He was not removed from that jail to hospital till he was so bad that the authorities could not keep him any longer inside the jail. Then he was sent to Balrampur Hospital. There he was lying ill. No intimation was given to his family members, nor were they allowed any interview with him. One day when he was in an unconscious condition his wife was intimated by telephone, "Now you can come and see your husband". She went there and found him unconscious. Immediately she ran up to the Secretary of Home Department of the United Provinces. Of course, it was a little late.

an interview with her. But when she explained the position of her husband, she was told, "All right. I will verify from the doctors, and if they will say that the condition of the man is such that he cannot survive, then I will order his release." On this condition he telephoned the jail authorities and when he was assured that the man would not survive, his release was ordered. The gentleman was brought out of the hospital, he was lying unconscious for 4, 5 or 6 days and then he died. The other story is a story relating to the Bareilly Central Jail. In that jail many of those Congress members who were responsible for running the much heralded Congress Government of the United Provinces are imprisoned. The position in that jail is still worse. Very recently, perhaps on the 23rd July a statement was published in a local paper here, which shows that people are taken out in batches and beaten in the same batch by ex-convicts. Some of them vomited blood during the process of that beating and many of them were men who were highly placed in society in this country. Reports go to show that neither non-official nor official visitors have visited the jail for a long time with the result that prisoners are left at the mercy of the same over-zealous jail authorities who are always trying to gain notoriety because they think that it is by that notoriety that they will gain promotion and better appreciation from the Government. I wrote a letter to the Adviser of His Excellency pointing out these misbehaviours and requested "If you permit me to visit the jail, I will give an assurance and my word of honour that not a word will be revealed, I will report the same in private to you, I will not publish it to the press". But that opportunity also has been denied to me. It was only after my public appeal in the month of April that one letter in one month has been allowed to political prisoners in the United Provinces. Even that letter has to pass through so many censors that it seldom takes two or three months before it reaches its destination. I assure you, Sir, I am a friend of your Government, but I feel that in your name a great mistake is committed by these over-zealous officers, and I have, therefore, thought it my duty to bring all these facts to your notice. After all, these prisoners who are confined in jails will come out one day. I do not suppose you think that every one of them will be killed inside, some of them will survive and they will come out. When they come out they will have to narrate these stories to the civilised world. When these stories are heard by other countries, what will they say? They will say that a Government which is supposedly fighting for democracy and humanity is practising the same methods inside jails which the Germans are practising in the concentration camps. I am sure that is not going to help in your war effort. Therefore, I appeal to your generosity—please consider these questions, not on any other ground, but purely on political as well as humanitarian grounds.

There is one more consideration. Many persons who have been arrested during that time were arrested purely on the report of the local police. They had never taken part in the movement and they could not expect that they were going to be arrested. They might have had several matters of importance, however small these might be in other peoples' eyes, but for them they will be very important. They could not make any arrangements for attending to them. Now they have been sent to jail and have been cut off entirely from the outside world. They are not allowed any sort of communication from their nearest and dearest. Many of them might have got civil suits, income-tax cases, etc. Neither could they attend to them nor could they advise anybody else on their behalf. You can understand what an irrational agony they must be passing through and that you can avoid by granting them a few interviews and better facilities for communication. I do not think the Government are going to lose anything by granting these facilities. After all, so far as the sabotage movement is concerned, that has been crushed and finished. You are gaining victories after victories every day. If at all, I am sure the contact of these prisoners with the outside world will go to create a feeling of security and peace and reduce the anxiety of the people. Secondly, if at all it will result in reducing the brutality of those persons who are charged with the authority of managing the jail administration and who are behaving in that manner, perhaps not according to your instructions, but of their own over-zealousness. Therefore, I hope my appeal will not go in vain.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury (Assam: Muhammadan): This Resolution has got two parts. One is a recommendation that there should be drastic changes in the policy of the Government in regard to the treatment of political prisoners and detenues, and the other recommendation is that Members of the Central Legislature should be allowed to visit the jails in which these detenues are imprisoned and bring to the notice of proper authorities the inconveniences, if any, that the detenues are suffering from An Honourable Member: Kindly speak up.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh (Nagpur Division: Non-Muhammadan): The Honourable Member is ill. Can he come a little nearer?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Yes.

(The Honourable Member then came nearer and occupied a seat in the second row.)

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: The speakers who have preceded me have given examples of personal tortures, personal sufferings and personal inconveniences that were the lot of detenues and political prisoners. Any civilised Government would take note of these things. For political differences one should not be tortured bodily and physically. I think that is the rule in the entire civilised world. After all, political differences are only temporary. I understand that the number of detenues is very large and that it is not possible to give equal treatment to all the detenues. But if the officers who are entrusted with these detenues do their duty, nobody has got anything to say. There are officers who are very dutiful. Nobody has got any complaint about them, but there are zealous officers and over-zealous officers from whom the danger of ill-treatment comes in and the worst of it is that if any complaint is made against these over-zealous officers, the higher authorities do not pay any heed. It cannot be said that the eleven thousand and odd detenues are all enemies of the Government. Far from it. Political differences are only temporary. Today one may be holding extremist views. Tomorrow he may be holding a moderate view. Today one may be a dear friend of the Government. Tomorrow he may not be so and vice versa. We have seen politicians changing their political views so often and even today one of them holding very radical views is now adorning the Treasury Bench. What I mean to say is that on account of political views, tortures should not be given to any political detenue. The man whom you consider to be your enemy today may be your friend tomorrow. George Washington was an enemy of England and who thought that the Americans would be friends of Britain. Today you see America is something like a guiding angel to Britain and with their help Britain is winning this war. Who knows that the people who today hold independent views will come to the help of Britain in the same way in future.

Now, Sir, instances of ill-treatment of detenues have been given by my predecessors. I need not multiply them. Only I have got to speak about a particular case. I am speaking of a gentleman who was in prison before. As soon as he was released, he was again arrested and taken as a security prisoner. About him one weekly paper, Medina, brought out certain insinuations and this is the case I should like to bring to the notice of the authorities. For the information of the House, I shall read out only one or two lines from the issue of the 17th June 1943:

"Khoosun jab se ap Moradabad se Naini Jail men muntaqil kiye gae hain "A" class ke bajae "B" class men rakhe gae hain aur is men bhi nehayat sakht taklifon men apko muhtala kar deya gaya mastan rat ko ek aisi jagah men band kiya jata hai jahan is shadeed garmi ke zamane men intakahi saaabut ka samna karna parta hai."

You see the gentleman holds a very high position in society. He is a man of vast learning and education, a born leader and any country would have been proud of such a man. If he had been born in England, who knows he would not be a rival of the Right Honourable Winston Churchill. If he had been born in Russia, he would have been a rival of Stalin. If he had been born in the United States he would have been a rival of President Roosevelt. He is such a man. As a speaker, he is second to none in this country and other countries too. Such a man has been ill-treated. He has been changed from A class prisoner into B class prisoner and at night he is confined in a room which is not only unhealthy but ill-ventilated and in this hot weather one can easily understand what physical suffering he has got to undergo every night when he is confined in his room. When this was published in the paper, some of my friends came to me with the paper and asked me to preside over a meeting of theirs in this connection. I dissuaded them and told them that this is not the time for agitation as it is war time but I promised them that I would bring the matter to the notice of the authorities so that, if true, the gentleman might get some relief. I wrote a letter to the gentleman in charge (Home Member) here describing the suffering and requesting him personally that he should intervene if the complaints are true. I have been in this Assembly for the last seven years. I am a pretty senior man in this Assembly and I thought that as a matter of common courtesy a reply could come but unfortunately our executive authorities have not the honour of belonging to a responsible Government. They have not the honour of belonging even to a responsive Government. They are therefore not only irresponsible but also irresponsible to all complaints. I then put a number of questions in this House, after waiting for 15 days, because I did not get a reply. So, I thought of heaving a sigh of relief by bringing the matter to the notice of the House and getting a reply from the authoritative quarters. That is the reason why I have been compelled to speak on this Resolution. Otherwise, I had no intention of speaking. This is what is happening to a man of such eminence. Silence in these matters is a very dangerous thing. Many interpretations can be given to this sort of silence. It may be interpreted that the gentleman in question is not living. All sorts of conjectures are being made as no reply was given to me. Then again if the allegations published in the paper are not true, then it is doing a great harm to the jail authorities and the authorities who are in charge. So, it would have been right if a reply were forthcoming to my letter. It is not the correct way to deal with things in this fashion and the time has come, as the Resolution puts it, when drastic changes in the policy of the Government should be made to revise the treatment meted out to the political detenus and security prisoners. From this single example the House may come to the conclusion that everything is not going well with the detenus and even a most eminent man like the gentleman I have referred to, Maulana Husain Ahmad Madani, is not free from ill-treatment. So, the time has come when the Government should change their policy and make a drastic change in the treatment of their detenus. Sir, I support the Resolution.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Sonthal Parganas: Non-Muhammadan): Sir, I thank you for giving me an opportunity to speak on this Resolution today. Like my friend, Sardar Mangal Singh, I have also had some personal experience because I am also fresh from the jail from the province of Bihar. Before I narrate what the treatment of prisoners there is, which is the subject-matter of this Resolution, I wish to begin with some personal story which is surely in connection with the point raised by the Home Member himself. While going through his speech I found that he said that the smallness of the number shows that persons were selected for detention with due discrimination and there was no policy of indiscriminate arrests. It is with regard to this statement that I respectfully beg to point out how indiscriminate arrests were also made. In my own case, it is a matter of public knowledge that I had left the Congress because of my differences with them on several matters and it was long before the last movement was even started. I had attended even the Budget Session of 1942 and apparently the disturbance began in August of that year. So, there cannot be any reason for my arrest and I have repeatedly asked the Government of my province and the district officials if they have got anything to show against me and whether they had any apprehension so far as I was concerned. They turned a deaf ear to all my requests. Having committed one wrong, they wanted to save their face by continuing the wrong by keeping me under detention. And whenever the question was raised with the Central Government, the usual plea was that provincial autonomy is a subject that cannot now be touched by the Central Government.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Provincial autonomy under section 93.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: It was left to the Provincial Governments. However, I must be thankful to His Excellency the Governor of Bihar for his intervention. When he visited the jail, I narrated my story to him. He took my case into consideration and I was then released. But the question of saving the prestige of the Government again came up and I was asked to sign the so-called undertaking. Though His Excellency had intervened, the District Magistrate brought one day a typed draft of that undertaking to me which purported to have said that I have dissociated from the Congress subversive movement and that I solemnly undertake not to hold any communication with my brother Rash Behari Lall and other absconders.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member can continue his speech after lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) in the Chair.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: Sir, I was saying before lunch that the draft of the undertaking purported to have said that I have dissociated from the Congress subversive movement and that I solemnly undertook not to hold any communication with my brother Rash Behari Lall and other absconders. Both these proposals were so absurd on the very face of them that I pointed out to the District Magistrate, who was very courteous and kind, and he made a note of it and he said that he would inform the Government. I pointed out to him that there was no proof that I associated myself with subversive movements and, therefore, there was no ground for me to say that I have dissociated now. As regards holding communication with my brother, he was living with me in the same jail, in the same room for the last three months. I pointed out the absurdity of asking me to say that my brother is absconding and that I will not hold any communication with him. He made note of this discrepancy and said he would inform the Government. But the beauty of the thing was that I read in the newspaper of 23rd April morning in the jail that His Excellency the Governor of Bihar has been pleased to release Babu Kailash Bihari Lall as he gave an undertaking that he dissociated himself from the Congress subversive movement and that he would not hold communication with his brother and other absconders. In the evening I was released. So such absurd things are done. I do not know with what object.

Now, Sir, with this background, I will give you a picture of how I was huddled in the jail. On 9th September when I was just preparing to start for attending the Assembly, early morning two Sub-Inspectors came in a sedan car to escort me to jail. I thought it was a mistake on the part of the police officers. Under that impression, I at once wrote out a petition to the Divisional Commissioner and sent a telegram to His Excellency the Viceroy and the Honourable Mr. Aney that when I was proceeding to attend the Assembly, I was detained and requesting them to be kind to intervene. So far as my information goes, these telegrams were suppressed. Subsequently my letter to the Honourable Mr. Aney and to Dr. Sachidananda Sinha were also suppressed. They were not forwarded. In December, I was offered a release. Seeing that those letters of mine had no effect, I thought that after all the police was the final authority to decide the course of action. I was under the misapprehension that the District Magistrate had a hand in it, but later on I found that the District Magistrate had no hand in it, but the police officers were playing all this havoc. When the Government found that I was unnecessarily detained, they told me that I would be released provided I gave an undertaking. I protested and pleaded that I have told the authorities that I had nothing to do with any subversive movement, that I was not in the Congress organisation, but that still if the Government insisted on my giving an undertaking, it can only be with a view to humiliate me in the eyes of the public, as an undertaking sounds so much heinous and it seems they demand such an undertaking for that reason. The Superintendent of the Jail told me that if I was not prepared to give such an undertaking, he would make a report to that effect. Then it was I remained rotting in jail till the Governor came and then I was released on 23rd April. There was no justification for my arrest. The Government simply to save their face got the undertaking from me that I would not join the Congress subversive movement and that I would not hold communication with my brother and other absconders, while as a matter of fact my brother was in the same room in the same jail with me. Even under the guise of saving their face, there was no justification to ask such absurd things.

So far as the treatment in the jail was concerned, I may say that I happen to be a non-official visitor for the Central Jail also. I find in the speech of the Honourable the Home Member when he was asked "what would happen when non-official visitors are themselves put in jail", he replied "Then, they are there all the time". I was a non-official visitor of the Bhagalpur Central jail and I was there all the time. This being my position, I can very well make a suggestion according to the wording of the Resolution which says: "to allow members of the Central Legislature to visit prisons and interview political prisoners so that the attention of the Central and the respective Provincial Governments may be drawn to such restrictions and other inconveniences imposed on the prisoners with a view to the elimination of such restrictions".

So, Sir, under this very Resolution, perhaps my Honourable friend did not know that there were already two Members of the Central Legislature all the time in the jail and who therefore could make a report about the conditions prevailing in jails. Thus those two Members would fulfil the conditions laid down in the Resolution. Even from that point of view, I fulfil the condition.

Now, Sir, what is the position in jails? I will only mention one or two points. The trouble in the jail was with regard to the quality of food, the quantity of cloth, interviews, letters, accommodation, lock-up, and so on. Over all these points my Honourable friend has already said. At the rate of six annas per meal, twelve annas are being given. It can be easily imagined, how in these days, the prisoners in jail would fare with such low rations and no wonder there is such a hue and cry over that. Then with regard to the quantity of cloth the upper class prisoners can get clothing from home but third division prisoners were in difficulty and they were living practically in a naked condition. The state of things about letters has been described by previous speakers and conditions remain the same. In my own case for two months I was not allowed any interview or a letter, and no District Magistrate or any other official visitor ever visited the jail during four months of my stay there. My mental condition can easily be imagined and it was a torture to me not to have an interview with anyone. Then about lock-up, in the case of third division prisoners I heard even recently when I came out of jail that there was some beating of the prisoners, although it was not a lathi charge. I once had occasion to see a lathi charge. Some political prisoners were caned in the centre of the jail and other political prisoners cried "Bande Mataram", and for this offence an indiscriminate lathi charge was made and hundreds of prisoners were injured. Such things really happen but they can be avoided by sympathetic handling. The worst part of it is that whatever happens in jail, attempts are always made not to allow information to leak out.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The Honourable Member's time is up.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: Then there are pin-pricks and even ex-Parliamentary Secretaries get such treatment from ordinary warders that they feel humiliated. Such things too can surely be avoided.

Then as regards allowances, in my province I read somewhere in the papers that even men of the position of a High Court Advocate were given Rs. 30 a month whereas people of lesser social standing were given Rs. 50 a month. I do not mean to object to the payment of Rs. 50 but some principle should be followed in giving these allowances and the status of a man should be taken into consideration without the element of punishment being introduced into it. In the matter of classification also, it should not be on the ground of punishment.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The Honourable Member should bring his remarks to a close now.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: Sir, I support the Resolution.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Sir, before I speak on the Resolution and the amendments I propose to move an amendment of which I have given notice.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): When was the notice given and to whom?

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I gave notice at about 2 o'clock today but it makes no difference.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): At this late stage I should not be justified in admitting any amendment without the consent of the House, but let us know what the amendment is.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: My amendment is that in lines 2 and 3 the following words be deleted: "in general and those convicted for political offences since August 1942, in particular".

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Is there any objection to this amendment being moved?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Sir, it does not seem to be a very material amendment and I have no objection.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The Honourable Member may move it.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Sir, I move:

"That in lines 2 and 3 of the Resolution the following be deleted: 'in general and those convicted for political offences since August 1942, in particular'."

The question about political prisoners and detenues has two aspects. One is the statesmanlike aspect which you will find has been taken in a meeting of the Liberals in London which demanded the release of political prisoners in India. These Liberals were looking at this question from a broader aspect of bringing about a fresh outlook on the present political situation in the country. They never had the fears raised here by the Home Member who has been referred by the Mover of the Resolution not as a die-hard but as an honest die-hard. These bogeys were not before them. But here we urge the humanitarian point of view with regard to these detenues and political prisoners; and the Resolution asks that the present rules may be revised so that they may be given humane treatment, the sort of treatment which existed and which should have been improved upon before the movement of 1942 started. I have read and those who have listened to the speech of the Honourable the Home Member would be surprised to find that there is nothing which has been said against the amendment of Mr. Joshi which stood on a sounder basis, and there again nothing has been said against that particular amendment except reviewing the cases. We were told, Sir, that the Members of the Central Legislature have got no powers. We knew it, of course, otherwise we would not have come before this House; we would have exercised our rights. The very fact that we come here and ask that there should be consultations between the Members of this Legislature, the Provincial Governments and the prisoners shows that we have got no powers; we desire that such consultations should take place which would be a very desirable thing for those who wish to bring about a better state of affairs in so far as the treatment of political prisoners is concerned.

[Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh.]

I would like to refer to one or two remarks made by the Honourable the Home Member in his speech. In regard to the question of destitution of the families of some of the detenus, he said that no instance had come to his notice either from the persons who were detained under the orders of the Central Government or from those who were detained under the orders of the Provincial Governments. I can cite a very pathetic case which was reported in some of the newspapers, and I hope the Honourable the Home Member will do something in this case if nothing has been done up till now. It is a case from Lahore: One Abenash Chandar, a boy of 11, has made an appeal to the public. His brother is a detenu. His other brother, who was earning about Rs. 21 and was maintaining his mother and was looking after the education of this boy, is affected by tuberculosis. His mother is ill. This lad has appealed to the public in general. Why? Because it is a case of destitution. The boy does not know how to maintain the members of his family, to keep their bodies and souls together. Sir, it will be observed from other instances which have been narrated in this House from the personal experience of speakers regarding the sort of treatment about their food, their clothing and allowance, that these are pathetic instances. I do not want to add to that list, but I should like to mention certain cases from my province: There are two ladies in Jubbulpur Central Jail. None of them was an active member of the Congress, none of them had done any propaganda work, or anything of the kind. One of them happens to be the daughter-in-law of a person who was very much associated with the Congress—the late Jamnalal Bajaj. The crime of this lady appears to be that she is the daughter-in-law of this gentleman; because so far as my knowledge goes she never associated herself with any Congress Propaganda or had taken any active part in this organization. She is ill. That such ladies, who have taken no part in the Congress movement and whose antecedents can be gathered, should be put in the jail simply because they happen to be related to some persons who took part in the Congress movement seems to be a queer logic and a queer justification for Government's action. Another lady, Prabhavati Jakatdar, who is detained, was a nominal President of the Provincial Congress Committee. She did not take any prominent part in the movement; she was a president just for a short time. It can be verified by the Provincial Government or anybody else that this lady did not take prominent part and she did not commit such acts to which the Government could have any objection. The fact that she was the President of the Provincial Congress Committee for a short time by itself is no justification, from my point of view, to condemn this lady to jail. She is suffering from several ailments. When one comes across such cases in which there cannot be the slightest justification for punishment, one is really thunderstruck at the policy which the Government is following.

Now I come to the question about interviews. One of the grounds put before this House was that the relatives of detenus cannot be allowed to have interviews with them because the Members are reminded of what was going to happen in the case of Jai Prakash Narain whose wife was allowed to have an interview with him. He said that it was good for the country that the Government stepped in and prevented the mischief. To put forward one solitary instance as a ground for preventing interviews of other persons with these detenus, persons who are closely related to them, can be hardly justified. And if things were to proceed on these lines that one instance justifies a particular line of action, then I wish the Railway Member would learn a lesson from the Honourable the Home Member. What I mean is that if there is one major accident on one section of the Railways he should conclude that there would be a major accident with every train and he should take all necessary precautions. There is a kind of bird called swallow which migrates about the summer time from England.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Your time is up.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Just a few words more. If this swallow runs away from England it does not mean that the summer has come. One swallow does not make a summer. Therefore to put forward this one particular instance about Jai Parkash Narain's wife is a very lame excuse to prevent interviews in future between the detenus and their wives. Sir, I support the Resolution with this present amendment and my amendment.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Amendment moved:

"That in lines 2 and 3 of the Resolution the following be deleted: 'in general and those convicted for political offences since August 1942, in particular'."

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): The Resolution will appear to the whole House to be very reasonable and a very humane one.

3 P.M. It asks that better treatment should be given to the detenus and the political prisoners. When we know who these prisoners are, we cannot, but say that it is very necessary that better and more humane treatment should be given to them. From time to time since 1942, and even before that, there have been complaints that instead of the treatment getting better it has become worse. Today this House has been informed of actual instances to show how that treatment is being meted out to them, and I am very glad that each Province has given some instances. When I have put questions on this matter, the Honourable the Home Member has always said: 'Give us individual cases and I will enquire into them'. Well, Sir, here today we are giving you individual cases of a nature in which your interference is very necessary.

Now the Resolution itself asked that better treatment should be given to these prisoners, or that they should be released. In the second part the methods by which the better treatment may be given to them is that the Members of the Legislature should be allowed to visit these prisoners and find out their condition and then do something. But I feel that there is some defect in the Resolution dealing with the method that is called for. Whenever we come before this House and say that we personally know that the treatment is not good, the other side either contradicts it or puts us to proof. Now, if we go and visit the jails, find out those difficulties and present them to the House, on the other side the Home Member will get up and say that he has received reports from his own officers to the contrary. Therefore, I submit that the method asked for in the Resolution is not adequate. I would prefer the Resolution of Mr. Joshi, which has also been supported by my friend, Mr. Deshmukh. It asks that a Committee of the Legislature should be appointed in co-operation with the Local Government to find out their condition and to meet with their requirements, and I submit that I would like to support that amendment.

Before I put up the case of prisoners in my own Province with respect to the treatment they are receiving and the amenities they are not getting, I cannot but say that the information that we have got today from the Honourable Sardar Mangal Singh has simply startled us. Sardar Mangal Singh has told us that a District Magistrate called upon him and asked him not to attend the Assembly, because the order was that he should not go from such and such a place. Now I say that this conduct of the Magistrate appears to me to be most impertinent and disgraceful. Under whose orders was Sardar Mangal Singh attending the Assembly? He was attending under a summons from the Viceroy. And is this Magistrate over and above him? This Magistrate takes upon himself to override the directions of the Viceroy. A question was put by the Chair asking why he indulged in such writing with the Magistrate and so forth. What can he do? I have always thought that the policeman and the Magistrate on the spot have more powers than the King and the Viceroy themselves. As soon as something is done they arrest the person concerned and then they wait for the orders of the Viceroy or the Home Member. Therefore, if he had not taken this precaution he would have been arrested there and then and this would not have reached us here. This is not a simple matter. The House should take the matter up and get it vindicated, and that in future there should be no such act done by any Magistrate. I will go, Sir, on your behalf to say that I would wish that the Government on behalf of that Magistrate should offer an apology to the Honourable Member of this House.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

Then I come to the Resolution itself. I will tell you what are the indignities and difficulties with regard to the prisoners, detenus as well as political prisoners, in Sind. The first and foremost thing that I would bring to the notice of the House is this; our Government in Sind is not working under Section 93 and yet we find difficulties for these prisoners with regard to their transfer from one jail to another. That is a great difficulty in Sind. Those who know the climate of Sind, especially of Upper Sind, would themselves feel that it is inhuman that people living in Karachi should be locked up in Upper Sind where there is so much excessive heat in these days, instead of being transferred to a Karachi jail where the climate and the place would agree with them. There was some agitation on this point but there was very slow response on the part of the Cabinet.

Now as instances, I will say that there are very respectable men who have been members of the Sind Assembly. They are Sri Jairamdas Daulatram, Professor H. H. Malkani and Professor Gunshan. They are still in Sukkur Jail, even though there have been so many representations on their behalf.

I would therefore submit that in these days they should be transferred to Karachi where the climate is better. Situated as they are in jail in Upper Sind they have not any amenities to face the heat over here, since they cannot come out in open nor can they live like in their own houses. They are locked up in those cells and they have hardly any open space to sleep. What I would submit is that so far as the Upper Sind prisoners are concerned they should be transferred to Karachi. But if they could not be so transferred, then I would suggest that electric fans should be provided for them in the jail. I am not making this request without precedent.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: European prisoners are always supplied.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: In the Punjab when people were imprisoned under the civil disobedience movement, electric fans were given to them, and I do not know—it may be that even now some do get fans. If so, why should not the same be done in Sind? At least those in Upper Sind must have fans. I would submit that those prisoners who now remain in jail for over a year should be released. The movement is not so very severe, or stern now, and therefore these gentlemen should be released. There is one thing which I want specifically to bring to the notice of the Honourable the Home Member with regard to release. Most of the names I have given are those of the members of the Sind Assembly. It is not in the interests of the Sind Government to let them out. As soon as they are out, there will be a tussle again about the ministry. The Sind Government will, therefore, never agree to release them. It is the Central Government that should take the necessary steps to let these gentlemen out.

Another point I wish to refer to is about the difficulty of these prisoners with regard to business transactions. These men were put in jail when they had done certain businesses. They were half done, certain cheques had to be issued, certain other things had to be done. But they are not allowed to do all this from jail. They are refused permission to sign papers and send them out. The third thing I would point out is with regard to the allowances to the detenus. There are some detenus whose families are not being allowed any maintenance. I have brought one case to the notice of the Honourable the Home Member. He was kind enough to communicate with the Sind Government and that related to Professor Alum Gidwani's wife. She applied for maintenance and I had spoken to the Home Member about it last time. Up till the time I was there nothing had been done, but subsequently I am told that some allowance has been sanctioned. I understand there is some difficulty there also. I hope the Honourable the Home Member will make an enquiry into it.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The Honourable Member's time is up.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is no time today running very fast, especially this afternoon. I want only a few minutes more and I shall finish. Therefore I submit that that case should be enquired into, and if she has got no allowance she must be given one. She has got no other provision, I can assure the Honourable the Home Member about it. I am told that she is being given allowance from today, and not from the day from which her husband is in jail.

Let me come to ailing detenus. There are so many respectable prisoners in jail who are suffering from some illness or other and they are not being released, nor is any sufficient help given. One is Miss Sarala Jagumal, a Cambridge University Graduate, another is Miss Jethi Sipahimalani, Deputy Speaker of Sind Assembly, again Mr. Vishindas J. Shrivdasani, who is a Doctor of Literature. There is also Mr. H. D. Morriwala who is reported to be suffering from fever. Only one word more. I will refer to the case of one . . .

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Central Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Why not put the clock back for the Honourable Member's sake?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Why don't you do it? If the House so wishes, it will be done. One minute more.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Your one minute seems to be too long.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Mr. M. S. Sharma is reported to be suffering from goitre which is a serious malady. Its cure lies in an operation of thyroid gland. He has not been released, though the Civil Surgeon gave a certificate. (Interruption.) If he has been released I shall be very glad, but if not, I hope the Honourable the Home Member will look into that case also. Regarding the classification of prisoners, something should be done because there is a difficulty with regard to it. Releases on parole are very slow. In one word I may say that the Provincial Government is not generous in this respect; it is not giving the prisoners what they reasonably require. As my time is over I will sit down; otherwise I have much to say.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): There are certain obvious disadvantages in having to resume a debate after a lapse of four months; unless one is endowed with a stupendous memory, one is apt to make mistakes as to what was exactly said on the previous occasion. And it seems to me that the Honourable the Home Member, in spite of all the extraordinary qualities he is endowed with, has not got a very dependable memory. When he was getting rather restive because of the reference made by my Honourable friend, Sardar Mangal Singh, to the operation of the Defence of India Rule 26, I looked up the Debates and found that a reference to this particular point was entirely relevant because of the reference which the Honourable the Home Member had made at page 1474 of the Debates on the last occasion. What do I find there? He mentioned this Rule by its specific number and went on to defend the policy on the ground that the Government had been very considerate, that they were not indiscriminate and so on and so forth. He gave statistics to show that the Government had been very discriminating in using the powers under that Rule.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: On a point of order, Sir. What the Honourable Member is now saying is a reflection on the ruling given by the President this morning. The President ruled a certain discussion as being out of order and it is not for the Honourable Member to comment subsequently on the decision so given.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: I make no reflection at all. If the Honourable President had been told that a reference was made specifically by the Honourable the Home Member himself to this particular point, the ruling might have been otherwise.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The Honourable Member is still arguing against the President's ruling.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: That apart, reference was allowed to be made to this particular point when my Honourable friend, Mr. Kailash Behari Lall, was speaking; as far as I could gather, a large portion of his speech dealt with this particular point.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): A general reference to the operation of Rule 26 is probably not in order, especially in view of the ruling of the Honourable the President but I should think that the Honourable

[Mr. Deputy President.]

Member has a right to criticise the speech of the Honourable the Home Member on this Resolution.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Apart from that, I should like to point out that the amendment moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, asks for a review of these cases. What does that mean? It asks this House to agree to a recommendation that the merits of each case should be gone into, and that indirectly leads to the question of the administration of the Defence of India Rule 26.

Now, Sir, I should not like to dwell any longer on this point; and I should like to come to the other points made by the Honourable the Home Member. Lest I do him any injustice, I should like to follow the reported speech. In one part of his speech, the Honourable Member said that, so far as detenus who had been detained without trial before August 1942, were concerned, their treatment, since their release from Deoli, as prescribed in the revised rules of the Government of India, was humane and liberal; and then he went on to say that security prisoners detained in connection with the movement of August 1942, are governed by the same rules but there are certain modifications which have been based on the reasons and objects of the detention and these modifications must be regarded not as penal but as precautionary. Now, Sir, if, according to him, the previous set of detenus are treated in a humane and liberal manner, and if there has been any departure from those rules in the case of those detenus who have been detained for their alleged participation in the movement of August 1942, it can be argued that their treatment is not humane and liberal. The Honourable Member's opinion that the modifications must be regarded not as penal but as precautionary will not pass muster, although my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das, seems to be quite satisfied with this assurance. (Interruption by Pandit Nilakantha Das.) He accepted the assurance that the treatment was not penal but precautionary and he was glad to be assured on that point.

Now, Sir, in what respects do the new rules constitute a departure from the old ones. The Honourable the Home Member says that the modification, in the first instance, is that they are treated as belonging to a class intermediate between class 1 and class 2 of the previous set of rules, and that their scales of diet are also intermediate between these two classes. Then, again, certain privileges in regard to interviews, writing letters, etc. are also much more restricted. Take the question of food. Does the Honourable Member consider that the reduction in the standard, if not the quantity of food, which he has brought about by this modified instruction, is of a precautionary nature and not penal? Does the Honourable Member hope that this House will be convinced by this sort of argument? And how was this instruction interpreted in the Provinces? I shall have occasion to go into the case of the Punjab very shortly. In the Punjab, men like leaders of the Opposition in the legislature of the Punjab, and other prominent men, were put on a diet costing six annas a day, not six annas per meal, but six annas a day. That was the prescribed cost of the diet for the Leader of the Opposition and other members of the Punjab Legislature, not to mention other prominent non-officials who had been detained. My Honourable friend says it is precautionary and not penal! That six annas was intended to cover not merely food but also fuel, and everything else. They were not permitted to supplement this magnificent sum with any contribution from any of their friends, and this was definitely a precautionary measure, not penal! He says that these people are even more dangerous than those who have been convicted on definite counts for participation in the movement of August 1942. I have an impression, it is for the Honourable Member to verify what I am stating, that of late, due to the right of appeal having been granted in cases that were tried under the Special Courts Ordinance, a number of people have filed appeals. I am not going to the Provinces. I am taking up the cases that are happening here in Delhi. In the case of a number of people who were actually convicted, it has been judicially found that there was no iota of evidence against them and they are being released by the Judge of Delhi. Will the Honourable Member make an inquiry into this matter. It is very convenient for him to assume that those who have not been put on their trial are rebels, and that they do not deserve any considerate treatment.

Now, Sir, time is running. I had very many points to deal with. Instances after instances of cruel and barbarous treatment meted out to the detenus in the different provinces have been brought to notice. I have a long list of such cases compiled out of newspaper files. Moreover, I had occasion to look up the proceedings of the Punjab Legislative Assembly—those that are available in the Library—and tried to summarise the grievances which were put forward in the course of debates and questions on several occasions in October and November last; and these grievances, as summarised by me, run to 8 typed foolscap pages. They constitute most sickening reading. All kinds of allegations were made, and not a single one has been refuted. A parrot sort of reply was given in every case. "I will just read out one for the information of the House. It was said that it is not in the public interest to give a reply to these questions on the floor of the House but if the Honourable Member so desires, a reply could be sent for his private information. (An Honourable Member: "Who gave the reply?") I think the Parliamentary Secretary. The questions insinuated all sorts of atrocities, ill-treatment of prominent men, members of the Legislature being confined in prisons reserved for tuberculosis patients, prisons which had been condemned and recommended for abolition; women being beaten; and when we come to references about the Lahore Fort, we have a statement made by the late lamented Sir Sikander Hyat Khan. He said that some detenus were transferred to the Lahore Fort by the Government of India and they did not stay there for more than 20 days. Naturally, he did not want to take any responsibility for this particular type of persons. Will the Honourable Member explain the partiality of the Home Department for these old Mughal Forts and their subterranean vaults? I had occasion to write to him as early as January about certain reports that reached my ears as to the use to which certain subterranean vaults in the Red Fort at Delhi were being put. I had no intention of raising this issue on the floor of the House as I had addressed him on this point. Since then a question was asked by an Honourable Member.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Will the Honourable Member quote my reply?

Mr. K. C. Neogy: I am sorry I have not got the reply with me; but the Honourable Member said that he was satisfied that the allegations were untrue. But the fact remains that in a very recent article a prominent daily newspaper has given details of the allegations. Reference was also made to this particular fact by my Honourable friend the Mover; and here in this newspaper we have a reference to this underground prison in the Red Fort at Delhi where prisoners are detained without trial. Names are given and also the period spent by each. The information, they say, is received from communications from released persons who have sojourned in it. Here are certain very serious allegations; though I have not myself had the opportunity of verifying the truth or otherwise of these allegations. The Honourable Member says that Members of this Legislature have no particular status with reference to the Provincial Governments, but certainly they may have something to do with the areas directly under the control of the Government of India. Delhi is one of those areas. I make a sporting suggestion to the Honourable Member. Will he make an informal inquiry into this matter, not by constituting a formal Committee? Will he allow my Honourable friends Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang, Maulana Zafar Ali Khan, Dr. Banerjee, Sir Henry Richardson (whom I find fast asleep), Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, Pandit Nilakantha Das, Sardar Sant Singh, Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi and Mr. Joshi to get down to the underground cells referred to in this article and in the debates of this House, and let them satisfy themselves as to their fitness for detention of persons of this type, and let them also talk to those people who have any experience to relate of their brief sojourn either there or in the Lahore Fort? Will the Honourable Member accept the suggestion? I do not suggest any formal inquiry. Let these gentlemen, or any of them who might like to be associated with this inquiry, be taken down to the Delhi Fort in the first instance, just to have a view of the place; and if they felt like summoning those detenus who were there for some time, only then they might ask them to be produced, not otherwise. This is an offer which the Honourable Member should accept, if he really cares for his reputation.

Sardar Sant Singh (West Punjab: Sikh): Sir, I will not take much time of the House. I intervene in this debate only because I want to say a few words in regard to what I have been saying about the Defence of India Rules and the way in which they have been working and the reasons why statesmen take a different view of those who are detained under those Rules and the treatment that is being meted out to the detenus. The House will remember that on the day when the Defence of India Rules were under discussion in this House I cried hoarse and said that, having the experience of the old Defence of India Realm Act, I knew that they were likely to be abused. I pressed the Government to hold out an assurance to this House as was held out in the House of Commons that the Rules will be worked with humanity and with consideration taking into account the fact that the detention is not after trial and conviction but it is an act of the Executive Government. There were some gentlemen who did not see eye to eye with me on this question, but a strange thing happened to one of them. An Honourable Member of the Council of State on a certain occasion learnt that his own relation was arrested under the Defence of India Rules. He rushed up to Gujranwala and there met the Superintendent of Police and told him that he was one of those who had supported that Act. He said that he was not Sant Singh who opposed it but then he found that he was wrong and I was right. So, after a good deal of trouble the man was released. This is an attitude of mind which shows that even those who were the supporters of the Government at the time when the Defence of India Rules were under discussion in this House and the Upper House have come to realise that it is a weapon of tyranny and not a weapon intended for the purpose of the defence of the country.

The second point which I want to make out is this. In section 2 of the Act it is given that for three purposes the Defence of India Rules will be used. Firstly, to stop all those activities which go to hamper the war effort, secondly to maintain public tranquillity and, thirdly, to maintain law and order. Now, we were assured on the floor of the House that beyond that the Defence of India Rules will not be used. But today, looking at the number of the Ordinances and the Rules that have been issued during the last three years, we find that all the legislative powers of the Legislatures have been overruled and the Defence of India Rules have been brought into action to provide for those contingencies which were never contemplated when the Defence of India Act was promulgated. I appreciate the position, I am not ignoring the position that in the extraordinary times through which the country is passing on account of the war there is a justification for arming the Executive with some power. But what I demand is that that power should be used in a manner which should substantially be a procedure of the court of law, if not actually the procedure of the court of law. Here what I find is this that when a man is first arrested under Rule 29 he is kept in the police lock-up for a couple of months, which this rule permits. They say that he is kept for a couple of months in the police lock-up for the purpose of interrogation. I do not find in the Criminal Procedure Code any provision by which an accused person can be interrogated. However, leave this question aside. He is interrogated and interrogated for such a long period as two months. If the interrogations of a person are placed before this House, we will be able to understand what those interrogations are that go on for such a long period as two months. When these two months are over, the Government passes an order under Rule 26 in order to detain him. Then, further on, there are cases in which the person detained under Rule 26 is being prosecuted in a court of law. If the Government detained a person to prosecute him on the allegations on which he is being detained, the detention order is not justified. The detention order is meant where the charge cannot be brought publicly and the man is not to be tried in an open court. But if the Executive Government decides to prosecute him, then it clearly means that the Executive is prepared to lay a charge openly in public and justify their action in a court of law. These two things cannot go on simultaneously. In one case which I am defending myself, these two things are going on. Somebody asked me why in this case I should not ask for the discharge of the accused, because there was no evidence against him. I told him that I did not want to do so, that I did not want to ask for the discharge because the accused got better treatment when he came to court than he would if he were in jail. We go on prolonging the case now because the accused will get better treatment outside the jail. Things are happening like that.

There are many illustrations which I can give, there are so many cases which I can before the Honourable the Home Member. I am not asking that he should kindly look into those cases, if I want, I shall certainly write to him about any particular case which requires such scrutiny. Here on the floor of the House, I want to discuss the question of the policy, and what sort of treatment should be accorded to such prisoners. May I ask the Honourable the Home Member whether it is fair to look at every case from the policeman's point of view. The policeman's point of view has been described by eminent jurists as regarding a man as guilty until he has proved his innocence in a court of law. Are the Home Department and those who are in charge of administering the Defence of India Rules going to say in this manner that every Indian is guilty, that every Indian is against war effort unless he proves his innocence? Then, Sir, such a state of affairs is awfully bad. You have to rely from the very nature of the thing on the report of certain officers who are in the police. Human institutions are such that we ought to depend upon them, but there should be some scrutiny. If Great Britain and the Parliament can appoint an Advisory Committee to scrutinise such actions of the police where the police is reported to be more honest and more straightforward, surely in India it requires that some such Advisory Committee should be constituted to look into the reports that come and see whether they are justified or not. The other day, I brought to the notice of the Home Department the case of Sardar Dewan Singh of Riyasat who is crying hoarse behind prison bars. He informed the authorities that he has never been associated with any political activity, he has never been a member of any political party, he had the misfortune to have a big fight with the local police officials. Then when he was convicted of having forged notes, or something like that, he went on appeal to the High Court. There he pressed his case that that was all due to the enmity with police officials. The High Court exonerated him, no doubt for the purpose of that case. As soon as he was acquitted, the very police whom he maligned in his arguments before the High Court reported against him and he is now detained. He has sent representations. I had the benefit of reading that representation, he is crying hoarse over it, that he had nothing to do with any subversive movement. Similar is the case with Sardar Sardul Singh Caveeshar who was detained in Lahore Fort for a very long time. I do not remember exactly the period, probably six months. He was detained.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: Under the orders of the Government of India as pointed out by the late Sir Sikandar Hayat Khan.

Sardar Sant Singh: In the Punjab Assembly, it was said that no person was detained for more than 15 days. When it was ventilated in the Punjab Assembly, the reply was that it was not in the public interest to discuss about it. Surely this state of affairs cannot be gratifying to anybody in India. The Government of India can take shelter behind the fact that it is an act of the Provincial Government. But I submit the Government of India are morally responsible. They are not merely legally responsible, but also morally. When an Act is passed by the Legislature, it is the legal responsibility of the Government of India to see that the Act is administered in a humane manner.

There are so many other instances which I do not want to touch upon. One thing which I noticed by reading the newspapers from time to time is that persons are released on account of ill-health and they soon die when they come out. There are so many instances. Will not the Honourable the Home Member take proper precaution to see that people are released at the proper time at any rate when they can be given proper medical treatment and when there is still a chance of recovery? This is a state of affairs which no man can look with satisfaction in this country. Now, especially when the war situation has improved, when the country is more tranquil than at this time last year, may I ask him that he should appoint some Members of the Legislature and give them an opportunity to look into the treatment that is actually being meted out to the detenus in the various jails? He should see that some amenities are provided for them. After all they are not members of the criminal tribes, they are not revolutionaries, they are not guilty of any violent crime. It is a precautionary detention brought about by circumstances over which we have no control. If it is a precautionary detention, they may be treated like men and not like brutes. Therefore, I submit that some action is urgently called for by the Government of India. I ask them that in their own interest, in the name of good administration of the country, they should accept the principle underlying the amendment of Mr. Joshi. He has moderately put the whole position and wants some moderate action to be taken, or in the alternative the Government by their own action should appoint an Advisory Committee to look into the case of several persons so that they may not entirely rely on the police reports, but that the police should feel that there is somebody to look into those reports and find out whether there are indiscriminate arrests and unnecessary hardships caused. Therefore I support the Resolution with the amendment of Mr. Joshi.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Mr. Deputy President, the Resolution before the House has been under discussion since the last Session of the Assembly. My excuse in taking part in the discussion at this late stage is that we wanted to know and be in possession of all the facts and arguments that could be advanced either in support or against this Resolution before the Muslim League Party as such could express its views on it. Sir, I have very carefully studied the speeches of the Honourable the Mover of this Resolution and the Honourable the Home Member. I have listened to all the speeches that have been made today on the floor of the House with great attention. Let me at the very outset say that as far as the demand for better treatment, for humane treatment, for decent treatment to detenus and political prisoners is concerned, you have our fullest sympathy and we will give our fullest support. It is a well-admitted fact that a man who is detained without trial is regarded as innocent in the eyes of the law and in the eyes of all honest and decent people. But there are occasions when a Government may in the larger interests of a country take some action which in its judgment is necessary to preserve peace. But that is no reason why such persons should not be treated as decent human beings but like criminals who have been proved guilty of heinous offences. The Resolution demands better treatment for two classes of prisoners, i.e., those who are detenus and political prisoners, and others who have been convicted since August, 1942. I am rather surprised that the Honourable the Mover of the Resolution, as was pointed out by the Honourable the Home Member, did not say anything regarding those who were convicted after August, 1942; and I cannot help feeling, and I hope my Honourable friend will forgive me,—that the inclusion of that class of prisoners was only meant as a pat on the back for those who were guilty of having created a very serious situation in the country.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly: Non-Muhammadian Rural): Sir, on a point of information I should like to correct my Honourable friend. I did specifically mention those people who have been convicted under the Defence of India Act and Rules and special Ordinances. If the Honourable the Home Member made a mistake I am not responsible. It is there in the proceedings.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: I have studied the speech; however I will not enter into that argument. But since then an amendment has been moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, wherein he desires to delete the cases of those who were convicted for offences committed after August, 1942; and as far as we are concerned, we will support this amendment because we cannot possibly by any action, implicit or explicit, give our support to the movement which has been responsible for great loss of life and property and for creating a situation in the country the like of which is not to be found since 1857. Therefore, as I said, we have the fullest sympathy and we will give our fullest support to this Resolution, so far as it concerns the demand for better and humane treatment of all these detenus and security prisoners who are detained by Government without being put on trial before a court of law.

The Honourable the Home Member in his speech while opposing the Resolution tried to justify the action that Government have taken so far in this respect. We have today heard speeches and cases have been stated not on hearsay evidence but on the testimony of those who have themselves suffered under the orders of detention passed by this Government. The Home Member may say that the allegations are not true. I am not prepared to doubt statements made so vehemently by Honourable Members of this House who have had personal experience of these matters. There could not have been this feeling if there had not been something wrong somewhere. There must be something rotten in the state of Denmark. Otherwise I do not think these Honourable Members would have come forward and occupied the time of this House by narrating their own experiences without any justification. And after all what is it that the Resolution demands? And before I deal with that I should like to make another point clear. We have studied all the amendments and we have come to the decision that we will support the amendment which was moved by Mr. Joshi. With regard to Mr. Deshmukh's amendment I have already stated our position. Let us examine the position if this amendment of Mr. Joshi were passed. It only wants that the policy in regard to the treatment of detenus and political prisoners should be revised in cooperation with Provincial Governments and in consultation with a committee of this House so as to provide for better living conditions in jails, better communication with outside, adequate provision for their families and an impartial review of their cases at an early date. To my mind there is nothing in it to which any Member of this House, at least an elected Member, can take exception. It does not ignore the Provincial Governments; they are to be consulted as also a committee of this House. I shall deal in a few minutes with the question of whether a committee of this House is to be consulted or not in such matters. But there is nothing in it that we need object to. Do we not want that these people who are as innocent in the eyes of the law as we are here should be given a treatment which every decent human being deserves? Is it not incumbent upon Government who are responsible for detaining these people and for depriving a family of its breadwinner to provide for the maintenance of these people? If they have any evidence in their possession and conclusive proof that these people are guilty of some heinous offences, the only right course open to them is to go before a court of law and get its decision. But as long as they do not take that step it is surely the duty of any decent Government to treat these people as decent human beings.

The Honourable the Home Member objected to taking into confidence and to consulting a committee of this House. I have got his speech before me. He stated while objecting to the amendment of Mr. Joshi:

"I do not think that it would be appropriate for the Government formally to associate with themselves a committee of the legislature to deal with matters which on the face of them require executive decision and action."

I am afraid, Mr. Deputy President, I do not see the logic of it. If you want to carry the goodwill of the people with you, you have got to take the representatives of the people into confidence and consultation, and let me say that [Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan.] specially in the case of a Government like the present one, whose policy and whose control is foreign though the composition may be swadeshi, it is necessary for a Government of this type not to ignore and not to treat with contempt the opinion and the feelings of the people of this country. Had it been a Government of the people then the Honourable the Home Member might have had some justification for bringing forward such an argument, and I can assure him that if it had been a Government of the people he would have never made such a statement on the floor of this House. Therefore, Sir, in the interest of the Government themselves, in the cause of satisfying the people of the country that the treatment of the Government is that of any civilized Government, they should have no objection to accepting this proposal.

Sir, my Honourable friend, Sardar Mangal Singh, paid a compliment to the Governments of Sind and North-West Frontier Province and said that because of their policy there the sabotage movement did not exist, because of the policy that the Congress were treated in a different manner there the sabotage movement did not get root in those provinces. With due deference to his opinion, I submit that the sabotage movement could not and did not succeed in those provinces because these are the provinces where the Mussalmans are in an overwhelming majority; these are the provinces where the Mussalmans, as a community, had kept completely aloof from this movement. That is the reason, Mr. Deputy President, and not the reason which is stated by Sardar Mangal Singh. But, Sir, I again request the Honourable the Home Member to consider the proposal that is being placed before him and that has been placed before the House. As I have stated, my Party has decided to support the Resolution and the amendments of Mr. Deshmukh and Mr. Joshi. Before I sit down, Mr. Deputy President—and I feel from your attitude that my time is probably up—I would only say that I do appeal not only to all the non-official Members of this Honourable House, but to Government themselves that they should accept this Resolution as amended by these amendments which I have supported, and they should not sit satisfied that everything is all right but they should make an effort to find out and improve the lot of those who have been deprived of their liberty and freedom by your executive action.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: The Resolution is a very modest one and its scope is extremely limited. If I had been the framer of the Resolution, I would certainly have given it a wider scope. But something is better than nothing, and it is on this principle that I support the Resolution as amended by the amendments of Mr. Joshi and Mr. Deshmukh.

Now, Sir, what is the demand made in the Resolution and in the two amendments? The demand is for an enquiry, and after enquiry for giving humane treatment to detenus and political prisoners. Is that an unreasonable demand? It may be said, and it has been said by the Honourable the Home Member, that humane treatment has already been meted out to the detenus and political prisoners. I say that that is a wrong statement.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

I have received numerous complaints from different parts of the country and I have personal knowledge of cases where detenus and political prisoners have been very badly treated. And if we read the files of newspapers, what do we find? We find cases of the most inhumane treatment being meted out. We all know certain instances. Two members of this House—the late Mr. Satyamurti and the late Mr. Bhalchandra Johri—lost their physical health during detention in jails and they were let out of the jails only when it became known that they were about to die. Now, can this be called humane treatment? Two other Members of this House related this morning their own personal experiences as they pointed out to this House how inconsiderate is the attitude of the Provincial Governments. They pointed out that without a shred of evidence against them they were detained. My Honourable friend Mr. Kailash Bihari Lal—I have pointed out to this House several times before,—was not a member of the Congress organization; he was a member and an office-bearer of the Nationalist Party. He had not joined the sabotage movement at all and still he was detained in jail. And, further on,—look at the fun of the whole thing,—he was asked to give an undertaking to the effect that he would not help his brother who was described as an absconder—but who really was living in the same jail with him. This is a funny story that he has related and I know personally that the facts related by him are absolutely correct. My Honourable friend, Sardar Mangal Singh, said that the Provincial Government of the Punjab wanted to have jurisdiction over the Central Assembly and gave a gagging order so that he might not attend this Assembly and take part in its proceedings. Would the Home Member justify such action? Whenever we put cases before him, he says it is for the Provincial Government to decide, but are such acts on the part of the Provincial Governments to be justified? In the case of the Punjab you may say that it is a province which enjoys an autonomous Government, but what about Bihar? Bihar is governed under Section 93 of the Government of India Act and the Central Government has full control over the administration of that province. But in that province things have occurred which are disgrace to the administration of India.

Now, Sir, our friends have narrated all the stories that have come to their knowledge. I personally know of many other things. But I am not going to detain this House with a narration of them. What I want is to draw the prominent attention of the Honourable the Home Member to what is demanded in the course of the Resolution and the two amendments. What is demanded is an enquiry. Is not that a reasonable thing to demand? He may say that this enquiry is to be made by Members of the Legislature. But that is not exactly what is wanted. The enquiry is to be made by the Government, but with the Government should be associated Members of the Legislature,—not members belonging to one particular party. Would such a body do anything which would be harmful to the interests of the country? Would such a body do a thing which would prove harmful to the maintenance of law and order in India? I fail to understand why the Honourable the Home Member should object to such an enquiry being made.

Then, again, what is wanted after the enquiry? It is that humane treatment should be given. That is to say, adequate food, adequate clothing, and adequate family allowances should be given; they should be allowed to communicate with their friends, and those who require medical treatment should be afforded such treatment, and detenus and prisoners should be accommodated in places where the conditions are sanitary. These are all the things that are wanted. No Member of this House has demanded anything else. Mr. Joshi has further demanded that a review of these cases should be made and that if it is found that these persons are not guilty or have suffered in health or are about to die, they should be released. Is that an unreasonable demand?

I appeal to the Honourable the Home Member to take these facts into consideration and not to be guided by a policy of false prestige but to do the right thing at least once on this present occasion.

I support the original Resolution, together with the amendments of Mr. Joshi and Mr. Deshmukh, and I hope that this amended Resolution will be accepted, not only by the elected Members of this House but also by the Government.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: The question be now put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

“That the question be now put.”

The motion was adopted.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: I thought the Government was going to say something about the Resolution at this stage, because the Honourable the Home Member promised on the last occasion that he would make another speech.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I think, I can speak after the Mover.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I will allow the Home Member.

Mr. T.T. Krishnamachari: May I speak after the Home Member?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Will, the Honourable Member go on with his reply?

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: I am very grateful, Sir, to the elected Members of this House and to the Honourable Mr. N. M. Joshi for the support they gave to my Resolution. I would like to state at this stage that I am willing to accept the amendment moved by my friend, Mr. Deshmukh, viz., the elimination of one sentence in my Resolution, and also the amendment moved by my friend, Mr. Joshi. I hope, Sir, that the other amendment moved by my friend, Mr. Neogy, will not be pressed as the Resolution as amended by Mr. Joshi will be quite complete in itself. I am unable to accept the amendment of my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das. As I stated at the outset, it is not my object to ask for the release of these people who are in prison. The purpose of my Resolution was definite. It was to ask for better treatment of political prisoners and detenus, and I do not wish to accept any amendment that takes it out of the modest scope of my original intention. Sir, I would like to correct a mistake made by my Honourable friend, the Home Member, which unfortunately was repeated by the Honourable the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party. I did, Sir, specifically state at the outset that I contemplated three classes of prisoners to come within the scope of my Resolution. One happens to be those detained for a temporary period under rule 129 of the Defence of India Rules; secondly, those detained under rule 26; and thirdly those classes of prisoners convicted and sentenced to a term of imprisonment under the Defence of India Rules. So I maintain that my Resolution covers the whole lot of people who have been convicted for political offences or dealt with in any other manner for political reasons under Rule 26 or are detained temporarily at the pleasure of the police and the magistrate. Sir, I hope my Honourable friend, the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party has not been misled in this matter. But I do say that I have no objection at all to eliminating any specific reference to any particular class of prisoners. The greater comprises the less. Political prisoners and detenus comprise all people whether convicted after August, 1942, or before, and I am quite content to accept the unqualified support to the amended Resolution, the resolution as amended by Mr. Deshmukh and Mr. Joshi that has been given by the Honourable the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party.

I would like to touch on one or two matters mentioned by the Honourable the Home Member on the last occasion. There is no justification, I maintain, for the creation of a new class of detenus. It is not penal, he said. I agree. It was not, however, necessary for precautionary purposes to harass people in detention. The second point of which much was made by the Honourable the Home Member was this. He reiterated that the Central Government, placed as it is today, cannot interfere in matters that are purely provincial. Leave alone the constitutional aspect, which has been shown times without number as being merely a sort of smoke-screen, as the Central Government has interfered in provincial matters times out of number, let me take the constitutional aspect out of this argument altogether, let me put it to Government, you create a weapon and put it into the hands of the Provincial Governments, are you not morally bound to see that that weapon is properly used? If the Provincial Governments rebel and you have no statutory powers to bring them to heel, withdraw the powers that you have delegated to them. Sir, let me ask, can the Members of this House really feel that Sir George Boag is the autonomous Madras Government, or that Sir Tennant Sloan is the autonomous United Provinces Government, or Mr. X the autonomous Bombay Government, or Mr. Y the autonomous Bihar Government, or Mr. Z the autonomous Central Provinces Government? They are just part of the bureaucracy which carries on government. Are you not bound to see that those laws which you have asked them to handle are properly and humanely carried out? Sir, one can put it on other grounds as well. Was there not a Congo Commission? Was not an international Commission set up to enquire into the atrocities in Belgian Congo?

Why don't you do the same? I want you to create such a commission; if not, at least accept the amendment which Mr. Joshi has moved and which the Honourable the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party has supported. Create a committee of the Legislature. Let them with your help and through you bring moral pressure to bear on the Provincial Governments. That is all I ask; I do not ask for anything more.

The second fact that I wanted to draw the attention of the House to is this. The Honourable the Home Member mentioned that generally speaking, a security prisoner whose health is such that he can no longer take any active part in the movement is released by the Provincial Governments and he has heard of a considerable number of such cases? True; if the Provincial Governments do not release him, he gets released completely from the purview of your Acts and Rules. He goes to where he belongs ultimately, and that is the very reason why we in this House are asking for better treatment for those detained in prisons. Take the number of deaths that have occurred in my own province. Recently there have been four deaths in prison—deaths from typhoid, from cholera, and so on. Who is responsible? Can you not see that your prison food arrangement is responsible for bringing on cholera? Can you not see that your prison sanitation is responsible for bringing on typhoid? Do you really mean to say that you will only release people who have come to such a physical condition as my late lamented friend, Mr. Satyamurti, was in, so that, there after it might not be possible for them to do any mischief? Is that your idea? If that is your idea, let me tell you here and now that from the interviews I have had with those persons who have been released, I learn that 30 to 40 per cent of people who are now in prison today will be in the condition of absolute physical wrecks when they come out in a year or thereafter. If that is the idea of the Government, why all this pretence of being sympathetic, why all this pretence of being afraid of interfering with constitutional proprieties? In the case of the detenus you won't bring them to trial, and they must suffer silently because you will keep quiet. In the case of those convicted under the Defence of India Rules there is provincial autonomy functioning and the Central Government cannot do anything. I would like to draw the attention of the House to another fact. Why do we want this Resolution? It is because the Government's conscience must be roused, and people must know what is happening. Here in this House Mr. Kailash Bihari Lal said "I had my brother who was supposed to be absconding and whom I was supposed to be aiding in the same cell for three months but I could not tell people that I have not committed any offence." There is a black out on what is happening in prisons because no interviews are permitted. If it happens that something leaks out, if it happens that those people who come out speak of it, what they say cannot be given publicity. If newspapers publish it—and only one newspaper the Hindustan Times had the guts to publish these reports. What is it characterised as? I have heard it said that a Government official in Delhi is terribly annoyed about it all. "There is one newspaper which has got the gumption to publish reports of these atrocities. It is characterised as atrocity-mongering". A new addition to the bureaucratic vocabulary: If you tell the truth, you are atrocity-mongering! You ought not to tell the truth so publicly that people die in jails. Perhaps you will be permitted to tell it privately in the ears of Sir Reginald Maxwell and he will then ask that they be let out to die outside the jail instead of dying inside. You are crying aloud all the time that you are fighting, you are shedding the blood of your youngsters in thousands and you who are sending them in bombers to die and never to return, all for humanity's sake, I am not asking you to release these people who are in prison. You might review those cases if you like, but first and foremost, let me be assured that those who are in prison, who are convicted or detained, are treated as human beings, treated as you treat the Italian or the Japanese prisoner whom, as the Honourable the Defence Member very correctly pointed out the other day, you cannot really ill-treat because of the hundreds and thousands of our own people in Japanese hands. If newspapers tell us this, is that atrocity-mongering? I would like to refer to one instance where the Central Government has got to take action.

That is the case of Mr. Rameshchandra Arya, a Hindi journalist who died in Aligarh. The Provincial Government had issued a communiqué that he committed suicide. It appears, he felt dizzy, and wanted to join other prisoners but was not allowed to do so and so he fell into a well and died. Let me ask the Honourable the Home Member if at least for information's sake he had asked the Provincial Government if they had conducted a postmortem examination. The magistrate held an enquiry and was satisfied. But was any post-mortem examination conducted? Did the doctor find that there were contusions on his body. If that is the humanity for the sake of which this country has been revolutionised into a war economy under which every one has got to suffer, how can you expect us to really sympathise with you and throw ourselves heart and soul into the struggle?

I would mention one other fact and it is this. The other day I spoke, about Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru's daughter. Let me now refer to the case of his brother-in-law, Mr. R. S. Pandit. He has had a heart attack, he has been ill for a long time. He was taken to Balrampur Hospital from Bareilly Hospital I presume. But how was he taken? He was taken in a crowded third class compartment. Is that human treatment? Is that being very humane? What do we ask? Why transfer people from one place to another in such a manner, if you cannot do it properly, why don't you release the men if you cannot give them proper medical treatment? One of the persons belonging to my province who is now being kept in Amraoti prison is one Mr. Kuppasami Mudaliar has developed pus somewhere in the region of the sinus. It was being tapped every week and pus was taken out by the civil surgeon of Nagpur. But the civil surgeon who is capable of making the operation has left and nobody else is able to do this difficult operation in this region, and the man smells horribly. His fellow prisoners say, please remove him at least for the sake of sanitation in the jail. But he has not been released. I do not think it is possible for me to rouse the conscience of Sir George Boag in my own province, nor will the Central Government interfere. Mr. Deshmukh mentioned about women prisoners in the C. P.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member's time is up.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Half a minute, Sir, and I will finish. The case of women prisoners everywhere is bad. I was told that in Ambala prison there have been instances of women having been locked-up for 24 hours at a stretch. Feeling sure as I do of the support of the majority of the elected Members—I request the Government to accept this modest Resolution, not only accept it but carry out its modest demands in the name of humanity. You do not know how much it is going to help to make the lives of those people who are in prison easier, the hope that there is going to be some better treatment for them. This is a modest Resolution which I think ought to be accepted and I appeal to the Government to accept it. If they would not, well, humanity will judge them.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I should much have liked to be able to meet the wishes of at least some section of this House in dealing with this Resolution and I could almost have accepted the Resolution as proposed to be amended by Mr. Joshi and Mr. Deshmukh, but the words I could not accept on behalf of the Government are these, "in consultation with a Committee of the Legislature specially appointed for the purpose". These are the words over which I find difficulty. Apart from that, Government could, to all intents and purposes, accept the principle of the Resolution so amended.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: What would be the harm?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That is the whole difficulty. I am afraid Honourable Members do not quite understand where this Central Legislature stands in relation to such a matter. The whole of the discussion on this Resolution has, to a large extent, been on entirely nebulous ground. We cannot, for a moment, attempt to convert the Central Legislature into a sort of Provincial Legislature or, more especially, to give it power to supersede the Provincial Legislatures of provinces where popular Ministries are functioning. One of the principal instances quoted by my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, was a series of complaints made in the Punjab. There is a province in which a popular Legislature has been functioning ever since the beginning of the present Constitution. It has a Ministry which is in office by the will of the electors and the Punjab Legislature is the proper place in which complaints should be made. If those complaints are not listened to and if there is a general body of opinion among the elected members of the Legislature who put that Ministry in power which does not approve of the action of the Ministry, they can turn it out and put in another Ministry which is prepared to carry out their will, but that situation cannot transform the Central Legislature into a body which can take the matter out of the hands of the Provincial Legislatures. (An Honourable Member: "What about the U. P. and Bihar?") The fact that ministries do not exist in some provinces does not give the Central Legislature any additional status in those provinces, no additional status whatsoever. We may not like the present Constitution but that is neither here nor there. We have to abide by it and I cannot have the Central Government put into a false position, as it would be if it accepted the Resolution as it is proposed to be amended by Mr. Joshi.

Now, I want to explain to the House what the correct procedure is. We have actually been following it. The Central Government cannot step in and supersede the Provincial Governments on matters within the Provincial field but we can do and have been doing a great deal by way of suggestion, advice, inquiry and so forth, to see that the Provincial Governments generally in dealing with this matter conform to certain standards which we regard as necessary and that there is a reasonable degree of uniformity among them. We have not been idle since the last debate in this House. The first thing we did after the last debate was to raise certain questions with provinces as regards their plans for reducing the number of security prisoners. We also took up the point which emerged from the judgment of the Federal Court in regard to the delegation of powers under Rule 26 to officers subordinate to the Provincial Governments. As a result of that consultation, Provincial Governments have been reviewing the cases of persons detained and since this question was last debated in this House, I am informed that a total number of 4,623 persons detained have been released by the Provincial Governments themselves. But apart from that, in the light of the last debate, we wrote a letter to the Provincial Governments enclosing a copy of the debate which, of course, then included only the Honourable the Mover's initial speech. We drew the attention of the provinces to a number of matters in which we thought this House was interested. We asked for further information about them and expressed certain views. In particular, we asked for their opinion on the subject of non-official visitors and for more information as regards the principles on which non-official visitors were appointed.

Now, if there was time, I could give the House a good deal of details of interest regarding the facts so elicited. We have found in the course of this correspondence that there was certain divergence of practice in the provinces and in matters which we regarded as essential we are trying now to level up the standards generally. We have, after scrutinising their replies, addressed a further letter to the provinces, only a short time ago, in which we expressed our general views on a number of matters, such as the classification of Congress security prisoners, the scale of diet, correspondence, interviews, the supply of newspapers and books, funds from outside, family allowances and non-official visitors. On all these matters we have been in correspondence with the provinces. One thing which this correspondence does reveal is that security prisoners, whether the old style security prisoners or those detained in connection with the recent movement, do obtain in all provinces substantially better treatment than convicted persons and that is my answer to one remark that fell from my Honourable friend, Nawab Liaquat Ali Khan, when he said that these persons ought not to be treated as criminals. The rules prescribing the conditions of detention in all cases give them a very considerable advantage over convicted criminals. For instance, the allowance of correspondence is much more. The classification for purposes of diet allowance is again equal to the A class of convicted persons in provinces where the classification is still retained and in provinces where there is only one class, the diet is superior to the lower class, that is to say, no security prisoner may have a diet which is as low as that of a C class convicted prisoner.

In regard to non-official visitors, which is a matter in which the House expressed considerable interest before, non-official visitors are permitted to see security prisoners of all kinds, including Congress security prisoners in all provinces, and provinces generally did not think that it would be useful to appoint members of the Central Legislature as such to be non-official visitors. But some of them have expressed no objection to considering them for such appointment and in several provinces members of the Provincial Legislatures are already being appointed as visitors, either by nomination or ex-officio. We must, I think, apply the proper perspective in any survey of jail conditions in India. It must be remembered that in ministerial provinces, they represent what the popular Governments of those provinces consider suitable for all classes of prisoners. If conditions in jails are really so unsuitable to the standards of life in this country, why are not complaints made in the legislatures of those provinces which are responsible for them? And in non-ministerial provinces the conditions existing now are substantially those which resulted from a long period of office of the Congress ministries. It is strange that Congress men should now say that these conditions are unsuitable for human beings. Security prisoners even now get better treatment than the corresponding class of convicted persons and they are allowed many luxuries and privileges, and we could not do much more without upsetting the whole standard of jail administration. I was rather intrigued lately to read an article re-printed in the Hindustan Times from the Spectator of England dealing with the treatment of security prisoners in the United Kingdom. I had on the basis of that article, although I cannot vouch for all the information it gave, a comparative statement drawn up showing the differences in the various regulations applying to such prisoners in the United Kingdom compared with those in force in this country. I find that the comparison is by no means unfavourable to us. In the matter of interviews, they have interviews once a week. Under the Central Government Security Prisoners Order interviews are allowed once a fortnight. There is not very much difference there. In regard to letters, in the United Kingdom in practice they appear to receive two letters a week. Under the Central Government Security Prisoners Order they are allowed 4 outward and 8 inward letters. They can write 4 and receive 8 letters.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City Non-Muhammadan Urban): In what period of time?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: In a week. Then, again, take exercise. I find that only one hour's exercise a day is prescribed for security prisoners in the United Kingdom. I think that prisoners here have considerably more liberty. Again, I find from the same article that certain tasks are assigned to such persons as are detained in England. They are required to do four hours associated labour per day and those who refuse to work remain in their cells locked up. I would like to know what would happen if we tried to give Congress security prisoners labour for four hours a day in this country. As regards recreation and association, no facilities are provided in England, but persons detained are allowed to use their own apparatus, if any, for indoor games. In most jails in this country, as the House knows, such facilities are freely provided even to the extent of playing grounds. Finally, as regards the lock-up. The persons in the United Kingdom are locked in their cells from 4-30 P.M. until 7 A.M. every day. I should like to know what sort of a howl there will be if we attempted to lock up our Congress security prisoners from 4-30 P.M. in this country.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: With a temperature of 118.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Now, there is one point which was mentioned several times and that concerns the inter-provincial exchanges of prisoners which have taken place between Madras and the Central Provinces. We have again been in correspondence with both these provinces on the subject although we recognise that they are free to take their own line for their own prisoners. They both wrote that these exchanges had been necessary in the interests of discipline and prevention of unauthorised communication. But we have drawn their attention to the fact that if any province sends its prisoners to another province where the climate or the diet are liable to be unfamiliar, both provinces incur a very special responsibility for looking after the health of their prisoners so transferred and seeing that their health does not suffer from unfamiliar conditions. That principle we have enunciated for guidance and I am sure they will follow it because they have themselves recognised that prisoners whose health is bad should be returned to their own provinces.

Some reference has also been made to the case of our late lamented friend, Mr. Satyamurti. On that question, I took great care to get all the information I could from both the Central Provinces and the Madras Governments. The Government of the Central Provinces has been good enough to supply me with copies of all the reports, applications and communications which took place and with full particulars of the whole case. From a careful study of these documents I have come to the clear conclusion that the Central Provinces Government and their officers had no reason to suppose that Mr. Satyamurti's condition was in any way precarious so long as he was in their care. He was looked after by the Civil Surgeon, Amraoti, Major Scott, who visited him almost daily and there was also a very careful examination and report by Dr. Abraham, the Medical Staff Officer to the Inspector General of Civil Hospitals, who said that his condition as a whole was far from alarming.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Was his health good?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No. He was under treatment the whole time, as I have said. Finally, I have here a copy of a letter from Mr. Satyamurti himself. This was dated 9th November, that is to say, two months after he had gone to the Central Provinces. In this letter he stated that he had no desire now to be transferred to Madras partly because he was too weak to travel and partly because he felt that the treatment in the hospital, that is, the Irwin Hospital, Amraoti, was doing him good. I have a copy of his actual letter here. His words are: "I, therefore, request that you will be so good as to sanction my stay in this hospital for treatment as long as the Civil Surgeon finds it necessary for the restoration of my complete health and strength." I may remind the House that it was not until nearly three months after his re-transfer to Madras that he unfortunately died and he had been released by the Madras Government nearly two months before that event occurred. He died as a free man.

Well, Sir I have little more that I could say about this Resolution now without going into many matters of detail for which the House would not at present have time. I will only remind them once again that on the principle—what I regard as the substantial principle—of the Resolution as amended by Mr. Joshi, the Central Government are taking a great deal of interest in the conditions of detention of security prisoners and are having a great deal of correspondence with the provinces with a view to securing uniformity of standards in matters which we regard as important and which this House regards as important, and I anticipate that as a result of that correspondence there will be considerable improvement in certain provinces in matters of freedom of correspondence and possibly in the matter of interviews. But I might make one remark in conclusion and that is that whenever a Congress movement has proved a failure, we always meet with these harrowing stories of jail treatment and accounts of the pitiable state or nearn of the prisoners. These are the almost invariable sequel to a failed Congress movement. I regard this as the preliminary bombardment designed to soften the position, in modern parlance. The next demand will be for the release of all these prisoners on the ground that they are repentant and will not resume the movement if they are released. I will not now go on to discuss that point because the Honourable the Mover himself has said that the object of the Resolution is not to press for the release of these prisoners. But I could say a good deal more on that subject.

In conclusion, I would only ask the House to take an entirely realistic view of what the Members of the Central Legislature can do or undertake in a matter of this kind which is almost wholly within the provincial field and I can only assure them that the Central Government is itself on their behalf taking all the steps that are possible or necessary in this matter.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: What about the Commissioner's Provinces? What about Delhi?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I shall now put the amendments.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Sir, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my amendments. The amendments, were by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. E. L. C. Gwilt (Bombay: European): I want with your permission, Sir, to move one amendment. It relates to the words which the Honourable the Home Member suggested should be taken out.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): If the Honourable Member wishes to make a speech now, I cannot allow it.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: The Honourable Member simply wants to take out certain words which the Honourable the Home Member objected to, namely, "in consultation with a committee of the legislature".

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): But he has not got any such amendment in his name. I cannot allow him to move any such amendment at this stage.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Sir, I cannot accept the constitutional position enunciated by the Honourable the Home Member that this House has really no constitutional right in this matter. The Honourable the Home Member knows that we have been discussing this subject and I submit, therefore, that a Committee of this House is quite competent to deal with this subject. I do not know why there should be any constitutional difficulty in accepting the amendment.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I submit that it is a reflection on the Chair to suggest that the discussion we have had this morning and this afternoon is unconstitutional because it involves a criticism of the Provinces. If the House can discuss these provincial matters, surely, a committee of the House can also discuss them.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Order, order. There is one amendment of Mr. Deshmukh which I will put first. The question is:

"That in lines 2 and 3 of the Resolution the following be deleted: 'in general and those convicted for political offences since August, 1942, in particular'." The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That for all the words occurring after the words 'in particular' the following be substituted:

'be revised in such a way, in co-operation with the Provincial Governments and in consultation with a Committee of the legislature specially appointed for the purpose, so as to provide to them better living conditions in the jails and prisons and better means of communications with the outside world and adequate provision for the maintenance of the families of those who may need it and to provide for an impartial review of their cases at an early date'."

CURRENT YEAR ARRANGEMENTS FOR HAJ PILGRIMAGE.

54. *Mr. H. M. Abdullah: Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas please state if Government propose to make arrangements for pilgrimage to the Hedjaz this year? If not, why not?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Government communiqué, dated the 22nd July, 1943, on the subject which has been published in the press. I place a copy on the table.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
DEPARTMENT OF INDIANS OVERSEAS.
New Delhi, the 22nd July, 1943.
PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

The Government of India have seen statements in the press to the effect that it has been decided to permit a Haj pilgrimage this year from India. These statements are entirely without authority. While it is the desire of Government that a Haj should be arranged it at all possible the final decision must depend upon factors beyond Government control. No decision has yet been taken. The Muslim public may rest assured that as soon as a decision is reached it will be given wide publicity.

Kunwer Hajee Ismaiel Alikhan: The Government communiqué is not very clear. Do the Government intend to send pilgrims this year?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Government have not taken any steps.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Will the Honourable Member be in a position to say when a definite opinion will be expressed by the Government, because the communiqué only says that the Government is trying to make some arrangement?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Very shortly.

Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha: What are the difficulties anticipated by the Government with regard to the performance of the Haj? If there are certain secret things not to be divulged in the House, will the Government take the Haj Committee into confidence?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Yes, we will attempt to do so as far as we can.

Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha: Has any special officer been appointed by the Government? If not, who is being consulted in these matters?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Government has to consult various Departments.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Has any officer been appointed, because we understood one was appointed?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: No, Sir. Not yet appointed.

Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha: Do Government know that it is the general desire among Muslims that they should be allowed to perform the Haj and that there is a general resentment among the public in view of the present impasse?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Government are aware of it.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: What steps are Government going to take in order to remove the present state of feeling?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: They will issue a communiqué and explain the position as far as they think fit. They have not taken any decision yet.

Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha: Is there any truth in the report that as the Scindia Shipping Company is to take a share in the business of the Haj traffic, the Turner Morrison object to making any arrangements for the Haj? Have the shipping companies any say in the matter?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I want notice of that question. It does not arise.

CATTLE PURCHASED FOR SUPPLYING MEAT TO THE AMERICAN FORCES IN INDIA.

55. *Mr. R. R. Gupta: Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state:—

(a) the number of cows and bullocks required to be supplied to the American Forces stationed throughout India, monthly;

(b) whether the American Forces purchase food, meat etc., for themselves directly or through military contractors;

(c) if there is any specific condition for the supply of any particular kind of cattle to them for slaughter;

(d) if it is a fact that the American Forces insist on getting only such cows and bullocks as are young and in their prime;

(e) if it is a fact that certain regular cattle fairs, where agriculturists generally buy their cattle, have been abandoned by their organisers, because they were afraid that good cattle may be forcibly bought by the military contractors for purposes of slaughter; and

(f) if it is true that agriculturists are finding it difficult to buy good bullocks owing to the forcing up of prices by the heavy buying of the Forces of the United States of America at any price; and if this has not affected the "Grow more Food" campaign, due to the lack of the required number of good bulls in the hands of the agriculturists of the Punjab, the United Provinces and Bihar?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) The information asked for by the Honourable Member cannot be published.

(b) American troops in India are supplied with meat by the Royal Indian Army Service Corps, who purchase through military contractors.

(c) No.

(d) The American Forces do not receive cows or bullocks, as such, but meat. Purchases of meat made for them by the Royal Indian Army Service Corps are made according to the instructions issued by the Government of India, whereby working cattle and cattle in their prime are not accepted or tendered for inspection.

(e) Government have made inquiries but have received no information of any cattle fairs having been abandoned for the reason mentioned by the Honourable Member.

(f) The agriculturists' difficulties are not attributable to the cause suggested by the Honourable Member. The prices of all livestock have increased in sympathy with the general trend of prices. Specific factors have been increased costs of feeding the brisk demand among the cultivators themselves who have a reduced range of commodities on which to spend their unusually abundant resources, transport difficulties and restrictions on movement and, in some areas, a shortage of stock following on a series of rainless seasons. The Governments of the Provinces mentioned by the Honourable Member consider that there is no general dearth of bullocks in those provinces now as compared with normal times and that the 'Grow More Food' campaign has not been affected by any bullock shortage except in a few localities in the United Provinces.

Mr. R. R. Gupta: Does the Secretary know that the prices of bullocks have gone up from Rs. 200 per pair to Rs. 1,200: and it is beyond the means of the agriculturist to buy them at this price? And if they cannot substitute their cattle, then how can the 'Grow More Food' campaign be brought to a successful end?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I do not deny that the cost of cattle has gone up. At the same time that is to some extent met from the cultivators' point of view from the price he is getting for his produce.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the Government will make any special effort to save the milch cattle, and whether milch cattle is included among the working cattle?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Milch cattle cannot be purchased by the Royal Indian Army Service Corps for slaughter.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Is the rise in the price of the bullocks from Rs. 200 to Rs. 1,200 due to the general rise in prices, or is it due to the shortage of bullocks in the country? Because if there is a shortage in the country, that will continue after the war, and if it is due to the general rise of prices, it may decline as soon as the war is over.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Our information is that there is no such shortage of bullocks. In those areas where there have been bad seasons, there is a shortage.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: May I know whether the supply of beef to the Military Department has been given to a Hindu Bengali at Calcutta?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Will the Honourable Member, please repeat his question.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: May I know from the Honourable Member whether it is a fact that the supply of beef to the Military Department has been given to a Hindu contractor in Calcutta?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I do not think that arises.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Regarding part (f) of this question (because the first part is very general) have Government enquired from all the provinces regarding the difficulties of securing bullocks?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: No, Sir. We addressed the three provinces quoted in the question of the Honourable Member.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Did the Government enquire that in the Bombay Presidency there is a scarcity of bullocks?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: No, Sir. The question did not refer to the Bombay Presidency.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: The first part of this question is a general question. The latter is specific. Has Government made full enquiries from all the provinces?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: We enquired of the three provinces referred to in the latter part.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Government

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Mr. Neogy.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member give the reasons for refusing to supply statistics asked for in part (a)?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Security reasons.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Well, does the Honourable Member realise that the replies so far given will go to confirm the apprehensions in the minds of the public, unless the statistics are furnished? Has the attention of the Honourable Member been drawn to a specific report which has appeared in a very respectable journal to the effect that in Gaya alone the number slaughtered is 4,000 a day?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I have not seen the report.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member aware that as a part of the publicity campaign carried on by the National War Front, the agriculturists are being advised to dispose of their surplus cattle?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I was not aware, but there is not much doubt that India has a surplus of cattle.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member give us statistics to show as to whether the present policy of the Government is to conserve the minimum cattle necessary in the different areas, and is the Honourable Member going to satisfy this House that the policy referred to in this question will not in any way affect the minimum number of cattle that it is absolutely essential for carrying on agricultural operations?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I think that Mr. Neogy himself has a question on this point.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: But you will refuse to answer that by refusing to supply statistics.

Mr. R. R. Gupta: Have you fixed any control over price for purchase of cattle by the army people? Secondly, I would like to know what you call workable cattle and what you call unworkable cattle—have you fixed any age limit? Have you fixed any weight for the cattle, have you fixed any other indication by which it may be understood that these are workable cattle and these are not workable cattle? My information goes to show that cows which were giving milk, good cows, have been bought for slaughtering purposes . . .

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member is making a speech.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: So far as prices go, this department is not responsible for them. So far as age goes, an age of ten years has been fixed.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member this? He is not definite as to by how much the price has increased. Does the Honourable Member admit that it is from Rs. 200 to Rs. 1,200?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I was not asked by how much prices had increased and I have not got the information here.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Did Government receive any representation from any organised associations regarding the number of cattle slaughtered and scarcity of cattle or agricultural bullocks?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Yes. We have received one or possibly two such representations.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AND GOVERNMENT OF SOUTH AFRICA ON THE PEGGING BILL.

56. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas be pleased to place on the table the correspondence that passed between the Government of India and the Government of South Africa on the Pegging Bill which was recently passed in South Africa?

(b) Did the Government of India invite the attention of the British Government on the subject and request them to interfere on behalf of the Government of India? If not, why not?

(c) What retaliatory steps do Government propose to take against the Government of South Africa?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) The correspondence between the Government of India and the Union Government on the Pegging legislation recently passed in South Africa is confidential and cannot be published.

(b) His Majesty's Government were made aware of the correspondence with the Union Government and of Indian sentiment in the matter.

(c) The question is under consideration.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member if Mr. Amery has said that the British Government will not interfere in that matter?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I am not aware of it.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: In view of the fact that a discussion on this subject is to take place day after to-morrow, will Government be pleased to circulate the documents bearing on the subject to the Members of the Assembly?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: No.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the Government of India does not want an intelligent discussion on this subject?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: They want discussion. That is why they have given a special day for it.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: If they want discussion, will they reconsider their attitude and circulate the documents for information of Members of this House before the debate takes place?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I regret that I am unable to do so as certain documents are confidential.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: They may not circulate documents which are confidential, but they may circulate documents which are not confidential.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: All are confidential.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Then how can any discussion take place?

Mr. K. C. Neogy: We can hear neither the answer nor the question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: How can we discuss if all documents are confidential?

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Do I take it that correspondence is still going on on this subject between the Government of India and the Union Government of South Africa, or has it ceased?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I regret I cannot answer that question.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: The latter part of (b) is, "Did the Government of India request the British Government to interfere on behalf of the Government of India?" Was any request made or not made?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: The reply specifically was, "His Majesty's Government were made aware of the Indian sentiment in the matter."

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Was this sentiment communicated to His Majesty's Government and was His Majesty's Government requested?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: It was communicated.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Will the Honourable Member give replies in such a manner that the other side may hear?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I think the Honourable Member ought to speak up.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I suggest that the Honourable Member may be permitted to occupy the Front Bench at least temporarily, so that we may hear his answers to questions?

(The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare then took his seat on the Front Bench.)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Will that make any difference to the answer?

RATIONED NEWSPRINT QUOTA OF THE WEEKLY AND DAILY NEWSPAPERS.

57. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Civil Supplies be pleased to state the maximum and minimum quantity of newsprint allowed to a single weekly and daily newspaper under the rationing system?

(b) Is it a fact that to some of the newspapers even a full ream is not allowed?

(c) Has it been brought to the notice of the Honourable Member that a newspaper cannot continue its publication under this quota?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) The highest monthly ration of a single weekly newspaper is about 27 tons and of a single daily newspaper about 26 tons. The lowest monthly ration allotted to a newspaper is 10 lbs.

(c) The smaller newspapers were generously treated under the graduated scale of cut which was brought into force, with the agreement of newspapers' interests, with effect from April 1943. Under this graduated scale, bigger newspapers were allotted only 45 per cent. of their "basic consumption" while the smaller newspapers were allotted 100 per cent. of their "basic consumption".

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: With reference to the answer to part (b) of the question, why is the answer, Yes?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: Because, Sir, that is a fact.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is it a fact that Government is not in possession of sufficient newsprint as to give the number that is asked for, or do the Government purposely not give the number required?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I should have expected after so many years of war that everybody could understand that position.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: But the point is whether Government is in possession of the quantity or not?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: If Government were in possession, Government would not have stored newsprint with a view not to give it to the newspapers.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: In that case why is not a sufficient number given to the newspapers?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I am afraid, in spite of my loudest voice, the Honourable Member has not been able to catch my answer.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: With reference to the answer to (c), there are definite instances where vernacular papers are given less quota, say, about 60 per cent., but the Honourable Member has just said that 100 per cent. quota is allowed.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: As I have said, the principle is fair arrangement for all in accordance with certain arrangements which have been made with the newspapers concerned. It is difficult for me to answer a general point like this, but if any specific question is asked or I am written to about a specific newspaper, I promise to look into the whole matter.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Fair arrangement implies that quotas have been fixed. If so, what is the quota for this particular newspaper?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I do not know what newspaper the Honourable Member was referring to. I have said, a graduated scale of cut. For example, it stands to reason that a newspaper whose circulation is only 100 or a newspaper which is only consuming about 20 reams should not have its quota cut to the extent that a newspaper with a very large circulation in the country can have. We have therefore to go by certain fair standard, which is the graduated scale that has been introduced.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Is there any committee co-ordinating with the Controller who makes this allotment?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: There is no definite committee attached to the Controller as far as I am aware. But when these arrangements were made newspaper interests were consulted, and at every stage we are trying to consult the newspaper interests concerned.

SUPPLY AND DISTRIBUTION OF STANDARD CLOTH.

58. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Civil Supplies be pleased to state the actual quantity of the Standard Cloth supplied to the different provinces?

(b) Has it been brought to the notice of the Honourable Member that the quantity supplied to the different provinces so far does not satisfy the public demand?

(c) Is the Honourable Member aware that the methods adopted to distribute the Standard Cloth are very unsatisfactory?

(d) Do Government propose to increase the quantity of the Standard Cloth, and to revise the methods of its distribution?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) 28.6 million yards.

(b) Yes, but the quantities being supplied are rapidly increasing.

(c) No.

(d) Government have placed orders for the supply of 1,150 million yards for delivery in equal monthly instalments to be completed by January 1944. With the coming on the market of cloth hitherto hoarded, Government feel that substantial relief will be afforded to the people and therefore that no increase in the quantity of Standard Cloth ordered for the current six monthly period is necessary.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Has the Honourable Member fixed the time and place for the exhibition of this standard cloth?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: We have not fixed any place for exhibition but if it is the desire of any Member, I will be prepared to make some arrangement to give a demonstration of it.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: I was given to understand by the Secretary that it will be exhibited in one of the rooms of the Council Chamber?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I was not aware of it but I will certainly take note of it and try to do my best accordingly.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: Have Government got any information about the quantity of the hoarded stocks?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: It is very difficult to make an estimate till the end of this month but in view of the fact that the wholesale dealers have repeatedly been not only making representation but carrying on propaganda as much as possible that they will not be able to sell within the time fixed, the only conclusion is that there is certainly a fair amount of hoarded stock.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: May we take it that in anticipation of a fair amount the mills have not been indented for?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: It is not a fact. We have given an order for the supply of 1,150 million yards to be delivered in six months, without taking note of the hoarded stock in the country. If the contingency mentioned by the Honourable Member arises, Government propose to take necessary action in the matter.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: What is the substantial relief by way of lower prices to which the Honourable Member refers?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: Prices of cloth have already come down 30 to 40 per cent. Increased relief is likely to be given when the standard cloth is put on the market.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Is the Honourable Member quite correct in his statement that the prices have come down or is it only his belief?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: It is not my belief but I am a victim of both the high and the low prices.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Are the Government aware that the cloth merchants and the mill owners are likely to form a combination to make your orders infructuous?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I do not anticipate that. The mill interests have been in the fullest co-operation with us but I can assure the Honourable Member that if any such contingency arises Government will be prepared to deal with that situation in as effective a manner as they can.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask the Honourable Member that on account of the fullest co-operation between the Government and the manufacturing interests of cloth, the poor consumers' interests are likely to suffer?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I categorically deny that. The whole attitude of Government has been to benefit the largest consumer interests in this country and a statistical study of the present position will convince any reasonable man that that conclusion is the only logical conclusion.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Is the Honourable Member aware that on the Cotton Textile Control Board, out of 25 members of that Board 15 members represent the manufacturing interests and the consumers are represented, I think, by only two members?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I am aware of it but I certainly do not accept that simply because mill-owners' representatives are there, that will necessarily affect the consumers' interests. In fact, our whole attitude has been to keep control over that body and look to the interest of the consumers in the broadest possible manner.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Who represents labour on this committee?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I want notice of it.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Is it a fact that Mr. Joshi is on that committee?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: That is my impression.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Is not Mr. Joshi good enough for ten other representatives?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I have not yet had a trial of strength with Mr. Joshi.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Is it a fact that the representation of the Legislature on this body has now been curtailed?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I am not in a position to answer that question just now but if my friend will put down a question, I shall answer that.

RETALIATORY STEPS AGAINST THE PEGGING BILL OF SOUTH AFRICA.

59. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas be pleased to make a statement on the floor of the Assembly regarding the Pegging Bill enacted by the Natal Government against the rights of the Indian population of Natal?

(b) Will he be pleased to lay on the table the correspondence that passed between the Natal Government and British Government in India?

(c) What are the damages to the properties of the Indian citizens of Natal caused by enacting this law, and how many Indians are affected by this Bill?

(d) What steps has the Honourable Member under his contemplation to force the hands of the Natal Government to withdraw this Pegging Bill, and when will such steps be taken?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) and (d). Government propose to initiate discussion of this question by means of a motion this Session.

(b) I regret again the correspondence referred to cannot be placed on the table of the House as it is confidential.

(c) The Act does not deprive any person of property already in his possession. It is designed to prevent further acquisition of property. It is therefore not possible to say how many Indians are affected in a material sense.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Will Government circulate copies of the Pegging Act to Members of the Assembly before the discussion takes place, so that the discussion may be carried on in an intelligent manner?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Yes, Sir.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Does this Bill affect the inheritance of the people who are already in possession of the property?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I want notice of that question.

INDIANS REMAINING IN ENEMY OCCUPIED COUNTRIES IN FAR EAST AND BURMA EVACUEES.

60. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas be pleased to state if any news about Indians in the enemy occupied countries in the Far East may be obtained through neutral or Red Cross Services?

(b) What is the number of the Indian civil population left in Burma, Malaya, Singapur and Java who could not be evacuated before the occupation of these places by the enemy?

(c) What is the total number of evacuees from Burma (i) who have been provided with occupation, and (ii) who have not been provided with any occupation in India? How many of these employed are Anglo-Indians and how many Indians?

(d) What amount has been earmarked by the Government of India for financial aid to the Burma Evacuees, and what amount has been spent?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) It is possible to obtain information about individuals in respect of the following countries only namely, Japan, Japanese occupied China, Indo-China and Siam through the agency of the Protecting Power viz., Switzerland and the International Red Cross Committee. The responsibility for providing the information rests on the Japanese Government, the Protecting Power and the Red Cross services being only intermediaries. So far 7,662 enquiries have been forwarded and information has been obtained in 1,164 cases.

(b) The total number of the Indian civil population left behind in Burma and Malaya (including Singapore) is estimated to be approximately 5,00,000 and 7,45,000 respectively. Separate figures for Indians stranded in Singapore and Java are not available.

(c) It is regretted that accurate information is not available. The establishment of machinery to obtain it is now in hand.

(d) A sum of Rs. 1,43,00,000 approximately was spent during the last financial year in connection with the arrangements made for the reception, dispersal and maintenance of Indian evacuees; of this sum, nearly 70,00,000 was granted as financial assistance to evacuees and dependents of Indians stranded in enemy occupied countries. A sum of one crore has been provided in the budget for the current financial year to meet expenditure on the maintenance of Indian evacuees and dependents of Indians stranded in enemy occupied territories.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Would the Honourable Member correct his answer to part (c) of the question in the light of the answer which I myself got to a somewhat similar question some time ago in this House, giving quite adequate and full information as regards the employment of evacuees under Government and may I request the Honourable Member, after he has removed his misapprehension on the point, to bring that statement up to date?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I am not aware of the answer that the Honourable Member has got. It is not before me here. Unless an occupational census of these evacuees is taken, it is not possible to give any accurate information. That is why I gave the answer that the machinery for obtaining it is now in hand.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: I wonder if the Honourable Member is in a position to state whether the Anglo-Indians referred to in part (c) of this question comprise Anglo-Burmans or Burmo-Anglians, if I may use the term; what is the process by which an Anglo-Burman or a Burmo-Anglian gets converted into an Anglo-Indian for the purpose of securing jobs under Government in India?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I think this question does not arise out of this. You had better give me notice.

UNSATISFACTORY ARRANGEMENTS FOR ACCOMMODATION OF MEMBERS OF ASSEMBLY AT SIMLA.

61. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state if it is not the duty of the Estate Officer, Central Public Works Department, to arrange for the accommodation of the Members of the Assembly when they are wanted temporarily at Simla for attending Committee meetings?

(b) Is it not their duty to see that the Members are not put to any inconvenience on account of light or bad arrangements for accommodation?

(c) Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that the Cart Road quarters which were set apart for the Assembly Members viz., 2, 3 and 11 during the Hindu Law Committee Sittings were more inconveniently arranged in comparison with No. 20? Is the Honourable Member prepared to enquire into the matter of selecting these quarters for the Assembly Members by the Estate Officer during Committee meetings in May and June?

(d) Will the Honourable Member consider changes in the arrangements in these quarters after proper enquiries?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) The Estate Officer's duty is to allot such accommodation to the Members of the Central Legislature as is specified by Government in consultation with the House Committee.

(b) All the quarters are planned so as to avoid, as far as possible, any inconvenience to Members.

(c) The quarters on the Cart Road were built according to approved plans. Quarters Nos. 2 and 3 are on the highest level and were reserved for the Members in consultation with the House Committee of the Legislature, as they were considered to be very conveniently situated. The arrangement of the rooms in Nos. 2 and 3 differs slightly from that of the rooms in No. 20. Some Members consider a particular arrangement of the rooms in a house convenient irrespective of the level of the house, while others may prefer quarters at a higher level irrespective of the arrangement of the rooms. It cannot therefore, be said that quarters Nos. 2 and 3 are more inconveniently arranged than No. 20. No. 11 was not occupied by any Member of the Legislature, as it was exchanged for No. 20. In the circumstances explained, no special enquiry is called for.

(d) As already stated, the quarters for the Members of the Legislature were reserved in consultation with the House Committee of the Legislature. No changes seem necessary unless the House Committee expresses a desire for them.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: May I ask if the Members who attended the Sub-Committee meetings in Simla were asked to deposit a sum of Rs. 75 as security before they could get electricity and water?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I must have notice of that question.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Does the Honourable Member know that Members have been asked to deposit money here in Delhi?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I have no idea.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I ask if there is any officer appointed to go round these quarters and look to the comforts of the Members?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I have no idea.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the Honourable Member then appoint some officer?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I will make inquiries in the matter.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: How many meetings of the House Committee are held during every Session?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It is for the House Committee to decide how many times they should meet.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Have you any information on the subject?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I remember there was a meeting of the House Committee during the last Session.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if some of the Members of the House Committee have died and have they been replaced by some other Members?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I am very sorry to hear the news, but I am sure the House will take such steps as are necessary to fill the vacancy.

PROVISION OF A RICKSHAW STAND AT THE CART ROAD QUARTERS, SIMLA.

62. Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: Will the Honourable Member for Labour be pleased to state if Cart Road quarters in Simla are kept for occupation by the Members of the Central Legislature? If so, does he propose to ask the Municipal Committee of Simla (i) to set up a Rickshaw Adda near about the quarters for the convenience of the Members; and (ii) not to charge security deposit for temporary occupation of the quarters by the Assembly Members for electric light?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: As the Members occupy a very limited number of quarters on the Cart Road for short periods at a time, Government do not feel justified in approaching the Simla Municipal Committee for the provision of a rickshaw stand in the locality. The supply of electric energy in Simla is the concern of the Simla Municipal Committee and Government regret they are unable to interfere with the Municipal arrangements in this respect.

REMOVAL OF INTER-PROVINCIAL BAN ON FOODGRAINS IN THE NORTH AND EAST REGION.

63. Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: Will the Honourable the Food Member please state:

(a) the reasons and necessity of removing the inter-provincial ban on food grains from Bihar, Bengal, Orissa, Assam and Assam States;

(b) the reason for singling out the area newly created by him;

(c) whether Bihar is a deficit Province in matters of food grains and food stuffs since its creation; and

(d) the reason for not lifting the ban on food grains from Provinces other than the newly created North and East region?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) and (b). The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the Press Communique dated the 18th May, 1943, a copy of which is laid on the table.

(c) Normally Bihar is deficit in respect of wheat and rice but the 1943 Bihar crops have been exceptionally good and Bihar was considered to have an exportable surplus during the current year.

(d) The policy appropriate to different areas in India is constantly under review by the Food Department, and at the time, the action taken was appropriate only to the Eastern Region.

PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

NO RESTRICTION ON MOVEMENT OF FOODGRAINS.

As the rice situation in North-East India shows little improvement, despite a sufficiency of domestic supplies, the Central Government have decided to remove all restrictions on the free trading of all foodgrains and their products in Assam, Bengal, Bihar, Orissa and the Eastern States except in respect of two areas concerning the first and last named. From May 18, therefore traders will be free to move and to sell stocks throughout this larger block of territory and no barriers to free trading will exist. The local administrations are taking parallel action to force stocks into consumption under the Foodgrains Control Order.

FOOD DEPARTMENT;
New Delhi, May 17, 1943.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Is the Honourable Member aware that since the ban was lifted from the market, the price of rice in Bihar shot up from Rs. 10-2-0 a maund to Rs. 20 a maund within one week?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I was in that one week in one district of Bihar and, while I admit that the price did rise, I do not admit the accuracy of the figures of the Honourable Member.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Is the Honourable Member aware of the quantity of rice that was taken away from Bihar, particularly during that period?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: No.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Will the Honourable Member make an inquiry and find out how it has affected the province?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: We have been making inquiries.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: With reference to clause (a) of the question, may I know whether the ban was removed with the approval of the Governments concerned?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: A decision had to be taken on this question, but I wish to discuss this question in detail when the Food Resolution is brought before the House. It is impossible to discuss a question like this in reply to a supplementary question. All I can say is that whenever there is an emergency like food it is not always possible to consult all concerned. We had to take certain emergent steps as rescue measures. At the same time, there was a Conference held before this Press Communique was issued and as far as we can find out from the reports and the views of the Directors of Civil Supplies of the different Provinces, that was the method which was considered to be advisable in the circumstances.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Did the Honourable Member consult the Honourable the Home Member as regards the constitutional aspect of the question which involved the supersession of the authority of the Provincial Governments? We discussed this very point yesterday.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I do not think I admit that it is a supersession of the constitutional responsibility of the province, but all our difficulties are due to the constitutional disabilities from which we suffer.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Did the Bihar Government agree to the arrangement mentioned in this question?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: As I have said, it is not the Bihar Government. This decision was taken by the Department in view of the emergent situation that had arisen at the time. A Conference was held on the 10th of May in Calcutta in which the Adviser to the Bihar Government, if I mistake not was present and in which the Directors of Civil Supplies of the other two Governments were also present. There is no doubt that they were in favour of certain other course of action. But if the situation was such that the Government of India considered that it could only be saved by free trade or by modified free trade, they were inclined in favour of the free trade.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: May I ask whether the ban was removed merely as an experimental measure?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I do not think in the matter of civil supplies any Government can carry on experiments.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is the Honourable Member aware that as a result of this arrangement some capitalists from Calcutta went to Bihar to purchase rice at any price and in any quantity they could get and suddenly the price went up?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: My difficulty is that in order to reply either in the affirmative or in the negative I have to accept some of the facts which my Honourable friend has stated. It is undoubtedly true that a number of people were there, but these people were those who had a very large number of industrial labourers to feed and people who had to keep their municipalities and civil life in proper order. I do not deny that the price did rise, but for the time being there was no other escape from the course which we took. I can assure the House that in the opinion of the Government of India if that action had not been taken, we would have been in a complete paralytic condition.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Could not this action be taken a little earlier?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: We all may become wiser after the event.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member ought to confine himself to answering the questions as concisely as possible as there is going to be a debate on this subject.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: If the Honourable Members will give me before the debate the points on which they want elucidation, I shall try my best to meet every question that has been raised.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: Is it not a fact that this experiment has been reversed because it was found detrimental to the interests of the province?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I do not accept, first of all, that it is an experiment nor do I accept that it has been detrimental. I take a large view of the matter in the interests of India as a whole and therefore the decision which we took was the best in the circumstances.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

RETALIATORY STEPS AGAINST THE PEGGING BILL OF SOUTH AFRICA.

64. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas be pleased to state whether he is aware that the recent discriminatory legislation passed by the South African Government has caused great unrest amongst the Indian Nationalists there and a great concern over it in India? If so, what steps does the Honourable Member propose to take to effectively afford relief to the Indians in South Africa?

(b) Is the Honourable Member aware that his predecessors in office have publicly stated that so far as questions connected with overseas are concerned, there is no difference of opinion between the Government of India and the people, but Government are helpless in the matter? If so, what new methods does the Honourable Member propose to take to overcome the existing obstacles in the way?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Amery, the Secretary of State for India, has stated in Parliament that His Majesty's Government have refused to interfere in this matter? If so, what alternative remedy does the Honourable Member propose to apply?

(d) Is the Honourable Member prepared to apply the Reciprocity Act and such economic and other sanctions as are open in this country to vindicate the Nation's self-respect against the racial discriminatory policy now statutorily recognised in Natal?

(e) Is it a fact that the Secretary of State has refused to take up India's case with Field Marshal Smuts and he has no intention of permitting the adoption of any economic sanctions by the Government of India? If so, does the Honourable Member propose to explain his policy on this very vexed question, and to put facts plainly before the House?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) and (d). The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply already given to parts (a) and (d) of Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya's question No. 59 this morning.

(b) It is correct to say that there is generally unanimity of opinion between the Government of India and the people on overseas questions. I am not aware what statements by my predecessors in office the Honourable Member has in mind. As regards future action I would ask the Honourable Member to await the discussion on this subject to be held this Session.

(c) and (e). I must refer the Honourable Member to the answer given by Mr. Amery to a question in the House of Commons on 22nd April, 1943.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member whether he is quietly following the former policy of the Government, which is "to do nothing", or is he following a new policy?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Wait and see.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With reference to part (c), the Honourable Member referred us to the answer given by Mr. Amery in the House of Commons. We have to depend upon the version of such answers as appearing in the newspapers. Would he be pleased to place on the table of the House an authorised version of the answer? I dare say he has got an authorised version. Sometimes it is not quite safe to depend upon newspaper versions of answers on such important matters. Will the Honourable Member consider that?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I will consider that.

REGULATION OF EXPORTS OF FOODGRAINS AND RESTRICTIONS ON FORWARD CONTRACTS.

65. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Does the Honourable Member for Commerce propose to make a full statement on the policy of the Government of India regarding permission for imports into and exports from India?

(b) Which are the foreign countries to which exports of food grains and other commodities can be made from India? Are any permits granted for that purpose? If so, are they granted by the Central Government direct or through the Provincial Governments, and what officers have been entrusted with that work?

(c) Have any restrictions been placed on making forward contracts by the people in India? If so, in what parts of India, and on what food grains or other saleable commodities?

(d) Has any such restriction been put on the forward contracts of oil seeds and black pepper? If so, in which provinces, and since when, and for what reasons?

(e) Are Government aware that owing to the sudden restrictions imposed the prices of these articles are seriously affected and merchants suffer a very heavy loss?

(f) Do Government propose to reconsider their policy and to give sufficient previous notice to the public while imposing restrictions? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) It is not possible to make a full statement on export and import policy in answer to a question. Briefly, imports are regulated and confined to articles in essential demand to ensure the best utilisation of available shipping and to conserve difficult currency while exports of important commodities are regulated according to economic warfare considerations and to the supply position of each article in relation to our own civilian and war requirements.

(b) The broad position is that exports of certain goods are prohibited to all destinations, those of certain others are permitted to particular destinations, principally countries normally dependent on India for supplies, and other controlled goods are allowed to be exported to all allied and neutral countries, subject to varying degrees of restrictions. All exports outside India are controlled by the Central Government, licences being issued by the appropriate Departments of Government or by Export Trade Controllers at the ports.

(c) Yes. The Government of India have prohibited future trading in wheat, gram, raw cotton, cloth and yarn, bullion and the following classes of oilseeds, viz., groundnut, linseed, mustard seed and rapeseed or toriaseed.

(d) On certain classes of oilseeds only but not on black pepper. The prohibition was imposed in order to eliminate speculative activity in the oilseeds market which had forced up prices to unprecedentedly high levels. It extends to the whole of British India, and came into effect after the close of business on 31st May, 1943.

(e) Government are aware that prices have come down.

(f) Wherever possible sufficient notice is given to the trade, but Government must retain the right to act swiftly when this is necessary in the interests of the economic stability of the country.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: With reference to part (a), may I know whether the question of imports and exports also will be considered and the facts put before the House during the discussion on food debate?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: If it relates to the question of export and import of food, I shall be prepared to answer that.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Has the Honourable Member considered this fact that the policy of asking the Agents to purchase these food grains at any price and in any quantity has really raised the price level and lowered the purchasing power of the rupee?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: A thesis can be written on the causes of any event in war conditions today. It is very difficult to answer this question in the form of a short answer. Anyhow, I shall be prepared to answer these questions during the food debate.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: I challenge the Honourable Member's views on this and the previous question. He never consulted the Legislature on this important point.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I think it was Edmund Burke who said that challenges are serious things.

Seth Yusuf Abdoolah Haroon: Is he banning the forward contract of black pepper also?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: That is a request for action. I do not know whether it arises at all.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): If the Honourable Member is not prepared to answer, he need not answer.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: If I am certainly asked to answer here and now, I will not be able to do so. If a question is put down, I will. We had to take immediate measures where the situation was such that without taking such steps, it would be impossible to keep the situation under control.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With reference to the recent announcement that exports of rice will not be permitted hereafter, will the Honourable Member state the countries to which rice has been sent of late from India? Is he in a position to give an approximate idea of the quantities of rice so sent?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: That question does not arise. It is for you to decide, Sir. A point like this would be better pursued in the food debate.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: It is relevant to part (b).

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): If the Honourable Member is not prepared, he need not answer.

WATER SUPPLY IN NEW DELHI AND DELHI.

66. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable the Labour Member be pleased to state the arrangements that have been made for the supply of sufficient water for all purposes in New Delhi and Delhi itself to remove the inconvenience caused by the scarcity of water in these very hot days?

(b) Is it a fact that the Jumna river-bed was being straightened to get water to the pumps? If so, how far has that scheme progressed, and will the water brought therefrom be sufficient for all purposes in both Delhi and New Delhi?

(c) What arrangements are proposed to be made to cool the water which in these summer days gets too hot in the pipes?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) In order to improve the supply of filtered water, five additional filters were installed this summer, and two large pumping sets have been ordered from England and are expected in India in October. The scarcity of unfiltered water was due to a sudden fall in the level of the Jumna. In order to raise the level of the water, a series of bunds was put up across the channel. The situation has since improved and there is now no shortage.

(b) Experiments for training the river so as to divert its dry weather channel along the right bank, on which the pumping station is situated, are being conducted at the Central Hydro-dynamic Research Station, Poona. A committee of experts recently appointed to investigate the matter have submitted their report which is being examined.

(c) No arrangements for cooling the water are feasible.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Why is it not feasible? Is it because it is too cold here?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: The Honourable Member is entitled to draw his own conclusions.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is it unusually cold here?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I leave my Honourable friend to draw his own conclusions.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Why don't you utilise the Defence of India Act for this purpose?

STEPS FOR REMOVING THE GRIEVANCES OF INDIANS AFFECTED BY THE PEGGING ACT OF SOUTH AFRICA.

67. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas please state:

(a) if he is aware of the public opinion in India expressed on the platform and in the press against what is known as the Pegging Act passed by the Government of South Africa;

(b) what steps have been taken to remove the grievances of the Indians affected by this Act; and

(c) if he is aware that this Act prevents indirectly as well as directly the carrying on of any trade or business by Indians in European quarters in the cities where this Act is made applicable?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) Yes.

(c) It is not clear what the Honourable Member means by directly and indirectly. If he means that an Indian will not in future be able to carry on trade in premises situated in predominantly European areas but not already occupied by Indians the reply is in the affirmative, but the Act does not apply in the case of premises in such areas lawfully occupied by Indians before the 22nd March, 1943.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I know whether the Government of India consulted the Standing Emigration Committee on this South African question?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Not yet.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Why?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: They will be consulted very shortly.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Standing Emigration Committee be consulted before the discussion or after the discussion of this question in the House?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Perhaps after the discussion.

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin: Is it a fact that Government only consulted those whom they considered important and kept out others whom they thought unimportant?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Not at all, Sir.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Who selected these worthy gentlemen who I understand came up to Delhi some time ago to tender advice to the Honourable Member in charge on this subject?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I selected them.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Did it ever occur to him that perhaps the Legislature would expect the Standing Emigration Committee to be given preference in such matters?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I have not decided that I will not invite them.

SOUTH AFRICAN BANKS, INSURANCE COMPANIES ETC., IN INDIA.

68 *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas please state:

(a) if there are any South African Banks in India; if so, where;
(b) if there are any South African Insurance Companies in India, if so, where; what the extent of their business is; and

(c) if there are any South African firms in India doing import and export business; if so, where; and what the extent of the trade import as well as export,—between South Africa and India is?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) and (b). No.

(c) Government is not aware of any South African firm in India doing import and export business. According to the Joint Stock Companies' returns, there is only one South African Company in India which is located in Calcutta and is dealing in real estate business.

The total British Indian trade with the Union of South Africa in the year 1942-43 was:

	Rs.
Import	2,24,96,969
Export	10,34,99,175
Re-Export	10,55,371

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT'S POLICY re PURCHASE AND MOVEMENT OF FOODGRAINS

69. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the Food Member been drawn to Major General Wood's broadcast of the 16th April last, in which he announced that the Government of India intended to buy foodgrains to the value of something over 100 crores of rupees during the next 12 months, that the amount of foodgrains to be surrendered by provinces and States which had more than they required as well as amounts to be received by those in deficiency had been determined, and that the Central Government was going to buy foodgrains to move them from one place to another, and also to build up a reserve stock to establish and maintain an equilibrium of supplies and prices all over the country?

(b) What were the provinces in deficiency, and what were the quantities as determined upto the time of the announcement, that each of these provinces in deficiency was to get out of the 100 crores worth of grains or more to be purchased?

(c) What has been the total quantity of foodgrains purchased upto the 15th June, and how much of it (i) has gone to provinces other than Bengal, (ii) has been taken into the reserve stock, (iii) has been sent to Bengal prior to the 16th April; between the 17th April and 17th May; and between the 18th May and 15th June?

(d) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the Press report that the Central Government will be lending 5½ crore rupees worth of grains to Bengal? What quantity of foodstuffs does this amount represent in tons? Is this quantity to be in excess of what was adjudged as Bengal's share as contemplated in the aforesaid announcement of the 16th April?

(e) Was the Central Government's responsibility for moving foodgrains from one place to another, as announced on the 16th April, affected in any way by the withdrawal of restrictions on inter-provincial transfers of foodgrains announced on the 17th May last?

(f) How has the said withdrawal of restrictions on the inter-provincial movement of foodgrains operated in practice, and how far has the situation in Bengal improved as a result thereof?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) Yes.

(b) The provinces which were considered to be in deficiency were Assam, Bengal, Bombay, Madras, N. W. F. P., Orissa, Ajmer-Merwara and Delhi. It is not in the public interest to give the amounts of their estimated deficits.

(c) A statement is placed upon the table.

(d) The Government of India have seen the Press report in question. It is incorrect, since there was no question at any time of lending 5½ crore rupees worth of grains to Bengal.

(e) Yes, Sir, within the Eastern Region.

(f) The withdrawal of restrictions has resulted in a larger flow of supplies into Bengal.

Statement.

	Tons.
(i) Total quantity of foodgrains purchased upto the 15th June, 1943	9,97,400
(ii) Quantity despatched out of the above to Provinces other than Bengal up to 15th June, 1943	6,49,400
(iii) Quantity taken into reserve stock	Nil
(iv) Quantity sent to Bengal prior to the 16th of April	83,800
Between 17th April, 1943, and 17th May, 1943	11,900
Between 18th May, 1943 to 15th June, 1943	26,300
The balance represents quantities purchased but awaiting despatch or quantities despatched to States.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I know whether this promise made by Major-General Wood is going to be implemented?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: It has been the effort of the Food Department ever since the basic plan was started, and from even before, to try everything humanly possible to meet all commitments. But there are so many limiting factors, which I will explain to the House on the Resolution, that we have not been able to meet as much as we would ourselves wish to.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Then was this bombastic statement of Major-General Wood merely intended as propaganda?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I do not agree that it was bombastic. But it is a fact,—which might have given rise to this misapprehension,—that two loans, one of 1½ crore rupees and another of 4 crores, i.e., nearly 5 crores in all were made to the Bengal Government to enable them to purchase rice in Bengal. There was also a loan of 1½ crores to finance the purchase of wheat and millets. In addition there was a ways and means advance of 1½ crores but this was not solely for food purposes, and I apprehend that there was some misapprehension somewhere.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: How far have the pledges been implemented up till now?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I shall answer that question during the food debate.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Are Government aware that the total quantity of foodgrains produced in this country is not worth much more than Rs. 100 crores?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I personally have not calculated that, but I know my own province and there the total food production in rice is roughly about 8 to 10 million tons and a simple calculation will give a figure near to my Honourable friend's figure.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: But do the foodgrains at all total 100 crores in normal times, not at the inflated rates?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: It is very difficult now to enter into a statistical debate.

Mr. E. L. C. Gwilt: May I ask the Honourable Member whether Major-General Wood's statement to the effect that Government proposed to purchase a 100 crores of rupees worth of grain was not an expression of an honest intention and whether or not when Government went into the market to buy the grain they found that most men's hands were against them and that the stocks had gone underground and whether among them were individuals who were men in authority, and if so, whether the Honourable Member is prepared to state the names of the individuals concerned?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: It is very difficult for me off-hand to calculate the value of foodgrains which we proposed under the basic plan not only to supply to Bengal but to all provinces of India. But I will have these figures calculated on the estimated price of that time and will place them before the House during the food debate. As regards the reason why that basic plan failed there is no doubt from facts which are well known that every form of obstruction was placed,—though not deliberately,—which made the plan ineffective. As to who did it and why, I would have been very glad to state, but at a time like this I do not like to discuss this and possibly to alienate the sympathies of people who may have obstructed us, because the problem is far too serious for me to tackle.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is it a fact that the production of rice in Bengal is practically equivalent to their consumption and that they allowed the rice to be exported outside at enormous profits to a few individuals?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: The Central Government's responsibility is not to sit in judgment over provincial acts. And even if there is any act of omission or commission on the part of Government, namely, that they exported food commodities before the present crisis came, the problem today is whether the Government of India would penalise that Government or help them now when they are in difficulty. I think that question is therefore immaterial.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Why does the Honourable Member hesitate to give the names of those who are obstructing and what co-operation does he expect from them?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: Supposing I have some provinces which are the only surplus provinces in the whole of India and from which foodgrains are to be supplied to the deficit areas. Any judgment on conduct which may or may not be right may, humanly speaking, be misunderstood. Of course, to a general extent I propose to give every fact to the House during the food debate. But I feel that it is not in the interest of the country as a whole that the question of responsibility or judgment should be discussed on this issue. We have to deal with established facts today.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: I have no desire to embarrass the Honourable Member in the very difficult task which lies ahead of him, but is the Honourable Member aware of the statement made by responsible Ministers in Bengal charging the Government of India with failure to implement its promises?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: I am not yet aware. But I have been hearing every Government in the world being charged with all kinds of faults. But if true and if the Bengal Government would realise the extent to which this Government have tried to help that province and other provinces as well, they would not have said one thousandth part of what they may have said.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: It is not a question of helping Bengal, but in helping Bengal should we introduce misery in other provinces and raise the price level for all the consumers in India?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: That question cannot be discussed in reply to a question.

REPAIRS TO THE TAJ MAHAL, AGRA.

70. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands be pleased to state why the dome of the Taj Mahal Agra is scaffolded?

(b) If it is for repair purposes, when will the repairs be completed, and what will be the estimated cost of the repairs?

(c) Why were the repairs necessitated?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) The scaffolding has been erected to enable a detailed examination of the dome to be made in order to ascertain what repairs are necessary.

(b) and (c). The report of the Committee which examined the question of the necessity for repairs has been referred to an expanded committee of experienced engineers and architects as mentioned in my answer of 30th March, 1943, to starred question No. 435. The report of the committee is awaited.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know whether actual work has commenced or not?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Repairs that are obviously called for are being done.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know how much time will it take to do the necessary repairs completely?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: We have not received the Committee's report as to what has to be done.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: Is the present scaffolding put up for a close examination of the dome or for its repairs?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: The scaffolding was erected for carrying out a close examination and it was hoped that whatever repairs were necessary would be done with the same scaffolding but now we propose to dismantle it after the examination is completed as it is likely to become unsafe.

MUSLIM ASSISTANT ESTATE OFFICERS IN CENTRAL PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

71. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Labour be pleased to state the number of Assistant Estate Officers in the Central Public Works Department?

(b) How many of them are Musalmans?

(c) Is the ratio of Muslims maintained?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) Four; one post being vacant at present.

(b) None.

(c) Not at present, but the ratio of Muslims will soon be adjusted as the Federal Public Service Commission has been asked to recruit a Muslim for the vacant post.

CONSTRUCTION OF NEW BUILDINGS AT GHAZIABAD.

72. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Labour be pleased to state if his attention has been drawn to the leading article in Dawn of the 29th June, 1943, under the caption 'Thick Waste'? If so, what is the reason for building these houses at Ghaziabad and not near about New Delhi?

(b) Is it a fact that, these houses will be temporary constructions for the period of war? If so, is he aware that accommodation for the Gazetted personnel of the Government of India is inadequate in New Delhi? If so, why do not Government propose to construct houses which may be of use to the Gazetted staff after the war?

(c) What use will Government make of the houses at Ghaziabad if these are not required by the Defence Department after the war?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) Yes. But the facts stated in the article are not entirely correct.

(b) and (c). The matter is under consideration, and no definite decision has been reached.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST TONGA DRIVERS AND TAXI DRIVERS OF DELHI.

73. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Is the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands aware that there is no control over tongas and tonga drivers in Delhi?

(b) Is he aware of the fact—

(i) that tonga drivers decline to hire their tongas on rates fixed by the Municipal Committee;

(ii) that no tonga is available on the hourly basis; and that the policemen controlling the tonga traffic decline to help passengers when appealed to?

(c) Are Government aware that the Delhi Administration has utterly failed in this respect? If so, what steps do Government propose to take to remedy this inconvenience of the public?

(d) Is the Honourable Member aware that taxi drivers charge Rs. 30 a day for a journey of 30 miles in Delhi proper? If so, what are the scheduled rates, and how do Government propose to enforce them?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) The licensing of tongas in Delhi is in the hands of the Delhi Municipal Committee, whose licences are by agreement accepted by the other municipal authorities as valid for the areas of their jurisdiction also.

(b) The rates have recently been under revision; a new set of rates has now been notified which will come into force on the 6th August. Pending the introduction of the new rates it is probable that tonga drivers have in some cases pressed their customers for higher fares than were permissible under the old schedule.

(ii) Traffic constables are not permitted to intervene in disputes between tonga drivers and customers regarding the fares payable by the latter, but all complaints of overcharging made to the municipal authorities are carefully investigated and appropriate action taken.

(c) No. If the special problems created by war conditions in Delhi and the present economic conditions are taken into account, the tonga arrangements are by no means unsatisfactory. In so far as abuses have occurred they are due largely to the fact that the number of tongas is insufficient to meet the present demand, increased as it is by motor spirit rationing. In March last year the Delhi Municipal Committee authorised the issue of licences for an additional 610 tongas, but owing to the expense of manufacturing new vehicles it has not yet been possible to complete this number.

(d) Copies of the old schedule of rates and the new schedule are laid on the table. Complaints of over charging in particular cases should be made to the Secretary of the Delhi Municipal Committee.

SCHEDULES OF REVISED TONGA RATES FOR DURATION OF THE WAR OR UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

Schedule I.

For any journey wholly within Delhi, Civil Lines and New Delhi, the rates by time shall be as follows:—

NASRULLAH KHAN, P.C.S.,
Secretary, Municipal Committee, Delhi.

STATEMENT BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA re FOOD ADMINISTRATION IN INDIA.

74. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the Food Member been invited to the statement made by the Secretary of State for India on July 1st regarding the Food Administration in India?

(b) Is this statement correct? If so, what officers are responsible for it and what action has the Government of India taken against those who were responsible for the plans being less successful?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) I have seen a Press summary of the statement which the Secretary of State is reported to have made about the difficulties of the food situation in India which have been mentioned by myself and my predecessor in office from time to time. I have not, however, seen any statement by the Secretary of State which purported to be a condemnation of the Food Administration in India.

GUILDHALL SPEECH OF MR. CHURCHILL AND REFERENCE TO INDIA.

75. *Sardar Sant Singh: Has the attention of the Leader of the House been drawn to the Guildhall speech of Mr. Churchill referring to "the vast sub-continent of India which we trust will presently find full satisfaction within the British Commonwealth of Nations"? If so, were the Government of India consulted before or after the speech?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I have seen Press reports of the speech referred to. The reply to the second part of the question is in the negative.

SCHEME FOR COLLECTION AND PUBLICATION OF MUSLIM EPIGRAPHICAL RECORDS.

76. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state whether the article entitled 'Muslim Epigraphy' published in the Delhi edition of the Dawn, dated the 16th June, 1943, and the book entitled 'Revealing India's Past' published in 1939, have been brought to his notice?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that Epigraphia Indica was started for collecting and publishing epigraphical records, and that Muslim inscriptions formed a component part of the scheme?

(c) Is it or is it not a fact that seven volumes of this publication were published for the period 1888 to 1893?

(d) Is it or is it not a fact that out of these seven volumes only one volume contained only a few Muslim Epigraphs and the rest were devoted to the Hindu antiquities?

(e) Is it or is it not a fact that the remedy for this defect was adopted, by creating the post of a part-time Epigraphist for Muslim inscriptions for publishing a record in a separate journal, to be called, Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica?

(f) Is it or is it not a fact that the second volume of the latter publication dealt with the period 1909-10 and was published by Dr. Horowitz, a Professor of the M. A. O. College, Aligarh?

(g) Is it or is it not a fact that Dr. Horowitz conceived the idea of collecting and publishing the Muslim Epigraphs in accordance with the dynasties and rulers?

(h) Is it or is it not a fact that this scheme was pursued only in two volumes, in 1911-12 and 1913-14 and discontinued thereafter? If so, why?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) No. Seven volumes were published for the period 1888 to 1903.

(d) and (e). Yes. The Muslim Epigraphs were published separately as part IX of the Epigraphia Indica in Volume III and eventually developed into the Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica.

(f) and (g). Yes.

(h) Yes. The scheme of publication of inscriptions according to dynasties was completed up to the Slave dynasty but was discontinued owing to want or sufficient material in hand.

SCHEME FOR COLLECTION AND PUBLICATION OF MUSLIM EPIGRAPHICAL RECORDS.

77. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if it is or it is not a fact that since the inception in 1907 of the scheme for the collection of Muslim Epigraphs only 14 issues dealing with 495 inscriptions have been issued up to the present?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that out of these inscriptions the majority, i.e., about 234 deal with the Hyderabad State, and the other Provinces are poorly represented?

(c) Is it or is it not a fact that since 1913-14 the post of the Muslim Epigraphist has been occupied by an official of the Hyderabad State who is given an allowance of Rs. 150 per mensem for this work? If not, what is the position?

(d) Is it or is it not a fact that the said official has no staff or establishment to help him in the work? If not, what is the strength of his staff, and what are their expenses?

(e) Is it or is it not a fact that while the Epigraphia Indica reserved for the Hindu Epigraphs publishes 4 issues in a year, the Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica publishes one issue almost of the same size once in two years with an average of 35 inscriptions? If not, what are the facts?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) and (b).—Yes.

(c) Yes, since 1915.

(d) The official has had with him a mechanic and a peon on Rs. 25 and Rs. 14 p.m., respectively.

(e) Eight parts of the Epigraphia Indica and one part of the Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica are published biennially.

ADVISABILITY OF IMPROVING THE CONDITION OF MUSLIM EPIGRAPHY.

78. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if it is or it is not a fact that a sum of Rs. 60,000 is spent by Government on the Hindu Epigraphy while the amount spent on Muslim Epigraphy is not more than Rs. 1,800? If not, what are the correct figures?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that inscriptions on copper plates are receiving the attention of Epigraphia Indica, but no attention has yet been paid to the Farmans written on paper and which from the perishable nature of the record require greater and more immediate attention?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) In the year 1942-43 the expenditure in connection with Hindu Epigraphy including the office of the Government Epigraphist for India, and the Superintendent of South Indian Epigraphy was Rs. 56,763. The expenditure on Muslim Epigraphy, including publication charges, was Rs. 3,624.

(b) The articles published in the Epigraphia Indica include those on copper plate inscriptions as well as stone and rock inscriptions, while lithic records in Persian and Arabic are published in the Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica. Farmāns are as a rule dealt with by the Imperial Record Department and other Record Offices.

ADVISABILITY OF IMPROVING THE CONDITION OF MUSLIM EPIGRAPHY.

79. Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if it is or it is not a fact that the deplorable condition of Muslim Epigraphy was fully noticed in the book entitled 'Revealing India's Past' containing contributions from the present and past experts of the Archaeological Department?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that a scheme for bringing the Muslim Epigraphy to its proper standard was drawn up by the then Deputy Director General of Archaeology, Khan Bahadur Moulvi Zafar Hasan, in 1931-34? If so, does the Honourable Member propose to lay that scheme on the table of the House?

(c) What steps, if any, have been taken by Government for improving the condition of the Muslim Epigraphy in view of the scheme aforesaid and the observations in "Revealing India's Past"?

(d) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of improving the Muslim Epigraphy as suggested in the article by appointing two Gazetted Officers (Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent) and entrusting to them the epigraphical survey of all the Provinces in India; and publishing the results of their research in the Epigraphia Indo-Moslemica which should be brought out at least twice a year? If not, what is their scheme in this respect?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) It was suggested in the book referred to that more attention should be given to Muslim Epigraphy.

(b) and (c). The scheme was considered by the then Director General of Archaeology but was dropped owing to financial stringency. The reply to the latter half of part (b) is in the negative.

(d) Government do not propose to make any change in existing arrangements at present, but propose to examine the question when the financial situation improves.

PETITIONS OF PENSIONERS OF THE SURVEY OF INDIA, DEHRA DUN FOR DEARNESS ALLOWANCE OR RE-EMPLOYMENT.

80. Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if it is or it is not a fact that the pensioners of the Survey of India, Dehra Dun, have applied to the Surveyor General of India, for a dearness allowance or in the alternative for being re-employed in their posts for the duration of the war?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of accepting either of the two suggestions mentioned above? If not, why not?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) Yes.

(b) The re-employment of retired officials otherwise than on public grounds is not permissible. The question of granting relief to small pensioners is under consideration.

PURCHASE OF CATTLE FOR SUPPLYING MEAT TO THE ARMED FORCES.

81. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands be pleased to state the number of cattle slaughtered in India to supply meat to the army stationed in India, in the years 1940-41, 1941-42 and 1942-43, separately?

(b) What is the number of cattle slaughtered in India for meat to be dehydrated and exported for the use of the armed forces outside India, in the years 1940-41, 1941-42 and 1942-43, separately?

(c) What steps have Government taken to see that working cattle and the cattle in prime of life are not purchased on behalf of the military authorities, as well as sold by the people, in order to stop the destruction of the working cattle?

(d) What steps have Government taken to see that cattle are not withdrawn from the rural areas on account of the attractive prices offered for the purchase of cattle to meet the meat requirements of the fighting forces?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) The required information is not readily available.

(c) The Government of India have issued instructions to all Armies and Central Commands, and a clause has been inserted in all military contracts for the supply of beef, that working cattle used for ploughing and transportation will not be accepted and should not be tendered for inspection.

(d) The instructions already issued by the Government of India in respect of working cattle used for ploughing and transportation also act as a safeguard against the sale of useful cattle at attractive prices to military contractors, as such cattle, even if tendered for inspection, would not be accepted by the latter. Government are, however, examining the necessity for a stricter enforcement of the instructions issued in this behalf.

SECURITY DEPOSIT FOR DUE PAYMENT OF ELECTRIC AND WATER CHARGES FOR GOVERNMENT BUNGALOWS DEMANDED BY NEW DELHI MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

82. Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands kindly say whether he is aware of the fact that the New Delhi Municipal Committee have recently started the practice of demanding security deposits for the due payment of electric and water charges for all Government bungalows occupied by Government officers?

(b) Is this a new or old rule? If this rule was in existence before, why were such deposits not asked for?

(c) Has this rule been brought into force because some officers delayed payments of their bills owing to transfers on active service? If so, why have the Municipal Committee enforced this practice in the case of civilian officers who are permanently attached to the Government of India offices and who are not likely to be transferred anywhere?

(d) Is it not a fact that in the case of non-payment of dues the Committee can realise the amount through the department concerned?

(e) Is it a fact that some Electric Companies in the United Provinces pay interest on such deposits?

(f) Will the New Delhi Municipal Committee, if they consider such deposits essential, pay a reasonable interest on the deposits? If not, why not?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) and (b). The system of requiring a deposit has been in force in New Delhi for many years past, but until recently was not enforced against Government officials. It was recently decided by the Municipal Committee to enforce it against the latter, partly to secure uniformity of treatment and partly because a number of cases had occurred in which officials had left Delhi without settling their bills.

(c) It does not appear to be the case that all the officials in default have gone on active service and in any case it would not be practicable to discriminate in the way suggested between one set of officials and another.

(d) No. The debts being private, the departments have refused to accept responsibility for collecting them for the municipality.

(e) Information regarding the practice in the United Provinces is not available.

(f) The deposits, when paid in cash, are kept in a current account since they are refundable at any time and no interest accrues to the Municipal Committee. For this reason interest is not paid to the depositor by the Municipal Committee.

CANTEENS FOR DECK PILGRIMS.

83. Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas please state whether the canteen (referred to in rule 81 of the Indian Pilgrim Ships Rules) for deck pilgrims is maintained on the upper or lower deck of pilgrim ships?

(b) If it is maintained on the upper deck, how much space is occupied by it?

(c) Is that space included in the airing space reserved for pilgrims? If so, what action do Government propose to take in the matter?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a), (b) and (c). The circumstances differ on different ships. I lay on the table a statement which gives the required information. I would refer the Honourable Member to sub-sections (2) and (3) of section 193 of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, for information how the airing space is to be determined.

OFFICERS AND SUBORDINATES ON PILGRIM SHIPS.

84. *Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas please state the different kinds of officers and subordinates employed on pilgrim ships?

(b) What posts can be filled by Muslims without detriment to the navigation of ships?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) and (b). Information is being collected and a reply will be laid on the table in due course.

CURRENT YEAR ARRANGEMENTS FOR HAJ PILGRIMAGE.

85. *Khan Bahadur Shaikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas please state whether Government propose to permit Indians to proceed to the Hedjaz for the performance of Haj pilgrimage this year, and to provide a sufficient number of ships to meet the demand of the Indian Muslims?

(b) Does he propose to consult the Central Haj Committee at an early date?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to my reply to starred question No. 54.

(b) The Committee will be consulted if necessary.

APPOINTMENTS OF SOUTH INDIANS IN THE IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

86. *Sardar Sant Singh: Is the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands aware that the Director, Imperial Agricultural Research Institute has since 1936 filled not less than 30 vacancies by South Indians, whether temporary, officiating or permanent? If not, what is the actual number of appointments in classes I and II and subordinate services which have been filled, and what is the number of South Indians as compared with Punjabees?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: A statement showing the distribution province by province of Indian officers appointed to Class I, Class II and subordinate services at the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute, is laid on the table of the House. The statement shows that Punjabees have secured more appointments, permanent or temporary, in each category than South Indians in the various services at the Institute.

CONFIRMATION OF A SOUTH INDIAN CATTLE SUPERINTENDENT BY THE DIRECTOR, IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

87. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state the reasons of the Director, Imperial Agricultural Research Institute, for confirming a South Indian Cattle Superintendent in spite of the adverse opinion of his immediate officer?

(b) Is there any other case of a similar nature?

(c) Does he propose to state the facts of each of the cases?

(d) What are the powers of the Director and those of the heads of different sections?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) to (c). There have been two cases of the kind referred to by the Honourable Member, one of a South Indian and the other of a Bengali. In each case the adverse comments of the officer's immediate superior were found by the Director, after exhaustive inquiry, not to be borne out.

(d) Powers of appointment (including confirmation) and discipline with regard to Class II posts at the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute vest in the Director.

CASES OF IRREGULAR APPOINTMENTS IN THE IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

88. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if it is regular and not objectionable to appoint any person to a permanent post, to confirm him without any probationary period and without asking for a medical certificate of fitness, etc., to give him lien and to relieve him all at once?

(b) Is he aware that such cases have occurred in the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute?

(c) What action does he propose to take in cases of such irregularities?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) to (c). There was no irregularity in the case referred to by the Honourable Member which relates to the appointment of an assistant who was an Associate of the Institute and had been in temporary service since September, 1936. As he had already put in over five years' service in a temporary post, no probationary period was considered necessary when he was appointed to a permanent post in March, 1942. He was permitted to accept service in His Majesty's Land Forces and, although proof of his physical fitness was available in the certificate of his suitability for military service, the medical examination was not dispensed with but took place at Dehra Dun where he reported for military training. As in other cases of permanent staff relieved for military duty, he has been given a lien on his post for the duration of the war.

APPOINTMENT OF A SOUTH INDIAN IN THE AGRICULTURAL SECTION, IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

89. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if it is a fact that the Director, Imperial Agricultural Research Institute, appointed a South Indian, a relative of his, with Engineering qualifications in the Agricultural Section though he did not satisfy any of the conditions of the advertisement?

(b) What was the number of applications received, and how many applicants were there from the Punjab who actually satisfied the conditions of the advertisement?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) The candidate appointed by the Director on the recommendation of the Imperial Agriculturist satisfied all the conditions of the advertisement including the possession of a Science degree and post-graduate training. He had certain Engineering qualifications also and experience which were considered a further recommendation in view of the duties of the post to be filled. The candidate is a South Indian but is not related to the Director.

(b) 141 applications were received from candidates with a degree either in Agriculture or Science, of which 20 were from the Punjab.

TEMPORARY AND OFFICIATING APPOINTMENTS IN THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

90. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Law Member please state the number of all temporary and officiating appointments filled up in the Legislative Department in different grades since 1939?

(b) To which province does each of the persons appointed belong?

(c) How is it that no Sikh has so far been taken, and are the Home Department orders regarding communal proportion followed?

Sir George Spence: (a) 4 Assistants and 15 Clerks.

(b) Madras 3, Bengal 2, United Provinces 5, Punjab 5, North West Frontier Province 1, Delhi 2, Travancore 1.

(c) One of the persons appointed being a Sikh the first part does not arise. The answer to the second part is in the affirmative.

MOVEMENT AND PRICES OF FOODSTUFFS IN THE EASTERN ZONE.

91. *Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: Will the Honourable the Food Member please state:

(a) why free trade was not introduced in the Eastern Zone before the 18th May, 1943;

(b) why the Provincial Governments in this Zone were allowed to introduce restrictions on the movement of foodstuff, specially of rice and in keeping down prices;

(c) why on the 18th May, 1943, all previous restrictions on the movement of foodstuff, and on the prices previously fixed were done away with and why the Notification No. 5-De/28/43 of the 18th May was issued; and

(d) why the orders of the Provincial Governments passed before the 18th May restricting the movement of foodstuff and prices were made null and void?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) to (d). Before the 18th May, 1943, the Government of India were working to a plan under which certain surplus Provinces were to despatch specified quotas of foodgrains to certain deficit Provinces. For the working of this plan it was necessary that Provincial Governments should have the power to control movements of foodstuffs and their prices. Before this plan could become fully effective in the Eastern Region (consisting of Bengal, Assam, Bihar, Orissa and the Eastern States Agency) a serious shortage of rice, accompanied by a steep rise in prices, was apparent in Bengal which made it necessary, as an immediate measure, to remove all restrictions on the movement of foodgrains and on prices in order to allow supplies and prices within the Region to find a more normal level.

RICE PRICES IN BENGAL, BIHAR, ORISSA AND ASSAM.

92. *Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: Will the Honourable the Food Member please state:

(a) what the prices were of rice in Bengal, Bihar, Orissa and Assam before the Notification No. 5-De/28/43, was issued on the 18th May, and what the prices were at these places within a fortnight after the issue of the Notifications on the 18th May and 18th June 1943;

(b) the reason for an abnormal rise in prices of rice after the said Notification was issued;

(c) why no check was put on dealers and stockists of rice for raising prices prevailing before the restrictions were done away with on the 18th May last;

(d) the approximate amount of profit made by dealers and stockists in the Eastern Zone after the free trade was introduced; and

(e) if Government got any share of the profits?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) A statement is laid upon the table.

(b) Prices rose in Bihar, Orissa and Assam owing to pressure of competitive buying as soon as the statutory restrictions on trade movements and prices were removed, and did not fall substantially in Bengal owing to certain administrative restrictions imposed by neighbouring Provinces.

(c) It was hoped that with the removal of restrictions on movement, supplies, and in consequence prices, would find a more normal level.

Statement.

	On 13th May 1943.	Price of Rice. On 1st June 1943.	On 18th June 1943.

(ii) Bihar	From Rs. 9-3 to Rs. 16	From Rs. 10-11 to Rs. 18.	From Rs. 10-11 to Rs. 23.
(iii) Orissa	From Rs. 6-8 to Rs. 11-7.	The lower figure is not available but prices ranged up to Rs. 17-12.	From Rs. 9-8 to Rs. 20.
(iv) Assam	Rs. 18	Rs. 25	Rs. 32

The prices prevailing on the 18th of May are not readily available. The prices indicated for Bengal, Bihar and Orissa are for two centres in each of these Provinces and the prices for Assam refer to Shillong.

DEATHS DUE TO STARVATION IN ORISSA.

93. *Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: (a) Will the Honourable the Food Member please state whether his attention has been drawn to the statement made in the Orissa Legislative Assembly on the 3rd July, 1943, by Mr. Pyari Sankar Roy, Parliamentary Secretary to the Government of Orissa, on deaths due to starvation of some 70 persons in that Province (vide statement published in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 5th July 1943)?

(b) If the reply to (a) be in the affirmative, what action, if any, was taken to supply food to these victims?

(c) Is it not a fact that this number relates to only one district of Balasore?

(d) What is the total number of deaths due to starvation in Orissa after the 18th May, 1943?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) I have not seen the actual statement of the Parliamentary Secretary but have seen only the Press report. The report of the Orissa Government just received in reply to our telegram says that those persons were generally old and infirm and that it was not known how many of the deaths were due to starvation. Previous to this, we had no report from the Orissa Government.

(b) The report of the Orissa Government states that relief measures have been in progress in Balasore district for some time, but that it is not known what specific steps were taken to feed the people referred to in the statement.

(c) Yes.

(d) No such cases have so far been reported to the Government of India.

INDIANS CONNECTED WITH INDIAN ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

94. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas please state:

(a) if there are any Indians connected with the Indian Army, Navy and Air force in South Africa;

(b) the treatment they are having as regards their residence and travel;

(c) what amenities they are having; and

(d) what the expenses incurred on their maintenance are in South Africa, and who pays for these expenses?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: This question should have been addressed to the War Department.

REGULATION OF ACREAGE PRICES OF JUTE IN BENGAL.

95. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Commerce be pleased to refer to my unstarred questions Nos. 14, 15 and 16, dated the 11th February, 1943, relating to regulation of jute acreage in Bengal and the influence exercised on behalf of the Government of India on the Government of Bengal for the cultivation of jute in excess of the desire of the representatives of cultivators on the Advisory Board on Jute Regulation, and the discussions on this subject, in its relation particularly to the "Grow More Food" movement, in the Bengal Legislature, and lay on the table a full statement in answer to the said questions?

(b) Has the attention of the Honourable Member been drawn to a Press statement issued by the Chief Whip of the Bengal Congress Parliamentary Party in the first week of this month, alleging—

(i) that an agreement has been entered into by the Indian Jute Mills Association for fixing certain maxima prices of jute for the coming season;

(ii) that this has been done with the full knowledge of the Provincial Government and "possibly of the Central Government as well";

(iii) that the prices have been fixed in view of the expectation that the Government of the United States of America would place a large order for the supply of hessian, provided its prices do not exceed a particular figure;

(iv) that there has been a tripartite understanding between the interests concerned in the United States of America, the United Kingdom and the Indian Jute Mills Association in this connection; and

(v) that the prices fixed are lower than what could be legitimately expected by the cultivator in view of the War orders from different parts of the world, coupled with the internal demand?

(c) Does the Honourable Member propose to lay on the table a full statement on the above allegations, and to explain what part, if any, has been played by the Government of India in this transaction?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the replies to his unstarred questions Nos. 15 and 16 of the 11th February, 1943, laid on the table of the House on the 27th July, 1943.

(b) and (c) The question should be addressed to the Member representing Supply Department.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

INDIAN EXPORTS TO MIDDLE AND NEAR EAST THROUGH CERTAIN AGENCIES.

17. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Commerce be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing exports from India during the last three years, year by year, to various countries in the Middle and Near East, as well as Turkey, through the agency of (i) the Indian exporters; (ii) the British exporters; and (iii) the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation?

(b) Does the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation operate in India as a principal agency as well as an agency of His Majesty's Government through its various Departments such as the Ministry of Supply, Ministry of Food, etc.?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) The figures asked for are not available as statistics of exports are not compiled according to the nationality of the exporters or according to the particular agency by which exports are effected. The statement below gives, however, an approximate indication of the percentage share of the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation in the total export trade to the countries specified during 1942-43.

(b) So far as the Government of India are aware, all buying operations of the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation in India are conducted on their own account and not on behalf of departments of His Majesty's Government.

AVERAGE PRICES PAID ON BEHALF OF GOVERNMENT FOR PURCHASE OF WHEAT, RICE AND OTHER FOODGRAINS.

18. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Food be pleased to refer to my unstarred question No. 11, dated the 11th February, 1943, regarding exports, imports, etc., of foodgrains, and make a statement on the average prices paid on behalf of Government for the purchase of wheat, rice and other foodgrains, month by month in 1942, separately, and how these compare with the actual prevailing prices at which they were available to the public in the principal centres of consumption thereof?

(b) Does the Honourable Member propose to make a similar statement, month by month, in respect of the past months of 1943?

(c) Were any instructions definitely given to the purchasing agents of Government about the maximum prices payable?

(d) Is he aware of the wide-spread reports that the purchasing agents of Government operating in the districts of Bengal have actually purchased rice at prices much in excess of the prevailing rates, thus artificially forcing up the general level of prices and indirectly encouraging the dealers to withhold their stocks from the normal markets in the hope of obtaining higher prices from these agents?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Azizul Huque: (a) and (b). Statements are placed on the table in respect of the Punjab, where the Central Government's purchasing organisation was operative up to mid-April, 1943. In other Provinces purchases were controlled by the local Governments concerned.

(c) Yes, in the Punjab.

(d) The Government of India are not aware of any such reports. Purchasing Agents in Bengal are appointed by and act under the directions of the Bengal Government.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

SPECIAL INSTITUTIONS FOR MUSLIMS UNDER CENTRAL GOVERNMENT AND EXPENDITURE THEREON.

19. Mr. Ananga Mohan Dam: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands be pleased to state the total number of special institutions for Muslims under the Central Government, and the expenditure incurred thereon?

(b) What amount is spent by the Central Government on Muslim education by way of scholarship, special institution, etc.?

(c) Do Government propose to spend a proportionate amount on education for Hindus?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) and (b). The Aligarh Muslim University which may, in a way, be regarded as an institution catering for the special needs of the Muslim community in the matter of University education, though it is open to all persons of whatever race, creed or class, receives an annual grant of Rs. 3 lakhs from Central Revenues. There are no special scholarships or special institutions for Muslims maintained or aided by Government in the Delhi Province or Baluchistan. Information in respect of Ajmer-Merwara has been called for and will be laid on the table of the House when available.

(c) The Benares Hindu University is already receiving the same financial assistance from Central Revenues as the Aligarh Muslim University. The general policy of the Government is to afford the same educational facilities to all communities.

THE INDIAN MERCHANT SHIPPING (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Khan Bahadur Sheikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha (North-West Punjab: Muhammadan): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, be taken into consideration."

Sir, as will appear from the Bill itself, it is very short, simple and non-controversial. It aims at nothing more than a slight increase of penalty money—from Re. 1 to Rs. 3 only—to be paid to the cabin pilgrims as compensation if they are detained at Jeddah and have to wait for a pilgrim ship for their return voyage. The Act at present provides the same scale of compensation, viz. Re. 1, for both deck and cabin passengers.

For the information of the House, I will read out the section in the Indian Merchant Shipping Act which is sought to be amended:

"Where any pilgrim who has been carried to the Hedjaz by a pilgrim ship with a return ticket issued in British India within the previous eighteen months is, owing to his inability to obtain accommodation on a ship for which the return ticket is available, detained at Jeddah for a longer period than twenty-five days from the day on which he presents his ticket to His Majesty's Representative at Jeddah, notifying his desire to embark for the return passage, the master, owner or agent of the ship in which such pilgrim was carried to the Hedjaz shall pay to the Governor General in Council in respect of such pilgrim such sum not exceeding double the whole sum received by such master, owner or agent in respect of the return ticket as the Governor General in Council claims as the cost of repatriating the pilgrim, together with a sum of one rupee for each day after the expiry of the twenty five days aforesaid during which the pilgrim has been detained at Jeddah."

Sir, when the cabin passengers pay much higher amount of money to the shipping companies for their steamer fare and food charges, it is simply unreasonable that they should be treated on the same footing as the deck passengers when they are detained at Jeddah for no fault of theirs, but on account of negligence or mismanagement on the part of shipping companies. Their standard of living is very high and if any compensation is to be given, it should be paid according to the status and position of the passengers and it should be commensurate to the fare charged from them by the shipping companies. It is not always that the companies have to pay this amount, as provided in the section sought to be amended. It is only a penalty clause provided to put a pressure on the shipping companies, so that they may make proper earlier arrangements for the convenience of pilgrim passengers. When there are so many other improvements to be made in the pilgrim voyage, which are under consideration of the Government, why should this very urgent and necessary amendment, aiming at early arrangements to be made for the return of pilgrims, should not be accepted by the Government.

The House will remember that during the last Session the Honourable the Leader of the House opposed the circulation of certain Bills on the ground of scarcity of paper. In view of that, I wonder why the Honourable Member [Khan Bahadur Sheikh Fazl-i-Haq Piracha.] in charge has tabled a motion for circulation of this Bill, especially when the Bill is a very simple one, to which, I think, there will be no opposition at all except perhaps from the interested shipping companies. I was, however, under the impression that the Government should have no objection to the consideration of this Bill.

Sir, I hope the Honourable Member in charge will be pleased to reconsider his motion for circulation and withdraw the same. But if for certain cogent reasons he is determined to move it, I would have no objection to accepting the same if he would change the final date for inviting the opinions from 30th November, proposed by him, to 15th October or some such other date, as would allow the opinions to be received in time for the Bill to be placed before the next Session of the Assembly, which, I understand, will be held sometime in November next. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved.

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, be taken into consideration."

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare (Member for Indians Overseas): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 30th November, 1943."

Sir, the Honourable Member who has moved this Bill has said that this is a very small measure and that Government should have no difficulty in accepting this right away. No doubt the raising of the detention fees from Re. 1 to Rs. 3 is a very small matter, but the principle involved is not small at all, because it implies a discrimination between the poor and the wealthy among the pilgrims. Besides, the wealthier passengers are able to take care of themselves. So there should be no differences made with regard to them. It was necessary to ascertain Muslim opinion as to whether it was justifiable to differentiate between the poor and the wealthy. I therefore press my amendment, Sir.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division: Muhammadan Rural): The Honourable Member has not given a reply to the proposal which has been put by the Mover of the Bill, viz., that he is prepared to accept the motion for circulation if the Honourable Member proposes to get the opinion by the 15th October to enable the Bill to be taken up in the next Session; but if the date remains at 30th November, then it means that the Bill cannot come before the next Session. Is the Honourable Member willing to accept this?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I will accept that.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Instead of 30th November, it will be 15th October.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Yes, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved.

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 15th October, 1943."

Mr. E. L. C. Gwilt (Bombay: European): Sir, whilst I have no desire to oppose the amendment that this Bill be circulated, nevertheless there are a few remarks I wish to make. The Bill proposes to amend sub-section (1) of section 209A of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act of 1923, which provides that if a pilgrim holding a return ticket is, owing to his inability to obtain accommodation on a pilgrim ship detained at Jeddah for a longer period than 25 days, the shipping company concerned is bound to pay a sum of one rupee for each day after the expiry of 25 days.

The Bill before the House seeks to amend that sub-section to provide that in respect of a cabin class pilgrim the sum shall be increased to Rs. 3 a day. In my opinion, Sir, it is undesirable to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act during war time when conditions are abnormal, for as Government will realise there is no possibility of that particular sub-section being enforced under present conditions when the shipowner has very little control over his vessels and cannot under any circumstances accept responsibility for delays and detentions. I would mention, Sir, that in respect of pilgrimages allowed since the outbreak of the war, the Government of India have recognised that with the control of shipping, requisitionings, etc. section 209A is not possible of enforcement. I would also point out that as a result of the Report of the Special Haj Enquiry conducted by Mr. J. A. Rahim, it is generally anticipated that considerable amendments will be necessary to the Indian Merchant Shipping Act so far as it pertains to the pilgrim trade and to the Indian Pilgrim Ship's Rules.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: On a point of order I want to know whether the Honourable Member is opposing the consideration of the Bill or the amendment?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): This is no point of order. The Honourable Member may draw his own inference.

Mr. E. L. C. Gwilt: I said that I did not oppose the amendment. I am of the opinion that it would be advisable to leave the consideration of the amendment that this Bill seeks to make, until such time as the major amendments of the Act can be considered, which certainly will not be until some time after the cessation of hostilities. I am opposed to the increase to Rs. 3 a day in the case of cabin class pilgrims on principle. The original object of the section was to alleviate the distress in the case of pilgrims of the poorest class who might be stranded in Jeddah. Those pilgrims who can pay cabin class are not likely to be in distress, and there seems to be no reason why the shipowner should be penalised in respect of well-to-do people who can afford to pay cabin class and can easily afford to maintain themselves during any enforced delay at Jeddah. I think I am correct in saying that the shipping companies concerned have always opposed the principle of section 209A, unless it could be proved that the pilgrim was detained at Jeddah through a deliberate default on the part of the shipowner; and they have maintained that the section could not be enforced if, due to acts of God such as a marine casualty to a vessel, the shipowner was unable to place his vessel at Jeddah at the correct intervals to bring back returning pilgrims.

I would emphasize that the pilgrim shipowner is already over-burdened with various responsibilities and liabilities placed on him by part 4 of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, and if this additional liability becomes law, there will be no alternative but for the shipowner to increase his fares to cover any such contingency. The effect then must necessarily be that those who will not benefit by the proposed amendment, if this Bill were ever put on the Statute-book, must pay for those who may.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang (East Punjab: Muhammadan): I support the motion for circulation moved by Dr. Khare in view of the Mover's offer to abide by the circulation motion in case the last date in the motion for circulation for eliciting opinion be changed from 30th November to 15th October. Dr. Khare having agreed to change the date, there is no dispute about the Bill being circulated. I want to deal with the points raised by our Honourable friend, Mr. Gwilt. I really cannot understand how many necessary and desirable reforms can be postponed till the very illusory time when the war will come to an end, and how long we can afford to wait for pressing and necessary reforms to be introduced simply because the war is on. After listening to the reasons given by Mr. Gwilt, I think that the matter boils down to this, that the shipping companies as a result of war time duties and conditions are not in a position to observe punctually any programmes of ships coming to Jeddah for the purpose of repatriating pilgrims to the Hejaz, and that being the case and they being handicapped on account of war conditions, the proposed provision for increasing the penalty from one rupee to Rs. 3 per day in the case of cabin class passengers would not be just and fair. But I think that the Merchant Shipping Act as it stands provides for the levying of a penalty only in cases of any negligence or wilful neglect on the part of the shipping companies, and circumstances which may serve as an excuse for the shipping companies are already in the contemplation of the law, and there will be no particular additional handicap for the shipping companies if this amendment is enacted into law. The excuse of circumstances over which they had no control and under which they failed to repatriate the pilgrims from Hejaz will still be available to them under the law. Mr. Gwilt, referred to a number of reforms which are in contemplation as a result of the Special Haj Enquiry held by Mr. J. A. Rahim and the consideration of his suggestions which is going on. But I think that we should enact an amendment of the kind before the House without keeping it pending and waiting till the whole bundle of reforms suggested by Mr. Rahim is decided upon. The very reasonable proposal made by Dr. Khare that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon, which is agreeable to the Honourable the Mover of the Bill, appears to me to meet all the requirements of the case. The public will have, including, of course, the shipping companies, an opportunity to offer their points of view. Opinions will come, they will be duly taken into consideration and then the House will finally consider the Bill. I submit that the reasons given by Mr. Gwilt are inadequate and we should not wait till the end of the war to enact a very small but evidently desirable amendment to the Shipping Act. I support the motion for circulation.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani (Tirhut Division: Muhammadan): This Bill was introduced in the last November Session and the Government have not yet made up their mind regarding the amount paid by the shipping companies as halting allowances to the pilgrims. The amendment proposed is a very trifling one, a very modest one, which requires no opinions of the public, because all those interested in the pilgrimage are unanimous on this point. The Government have been sleeping over the matter for about a year and now they have come with this plea of circulation. I do not think that this kind of motion should have been made by the Government Benches. However, the question is about halting allowances to pilgrims who had already purchased return tickets. They have paid their fares and due to the fault of the company they have to stay at Jeddah. And they are not going to be paid for each day just after their pilgrimage, but after a stay of 25 days continually if these companies do not manage to accommodate them in their steamers, then in that case the companies have to pay one rupee a day to each pilgrim. But no consideration has been given to the class of accommodation for which they held the ticket. All classes, whether first, or cabin class,—all used to get one rupee a day. Gold and silver and other materials have equal value in the market as allowances in cases of all classes of passengers. I think the Government should have made up their minds and come to the rescue of the pilgrims and taken up the consideration of this Bill instead of bringing in a dilatory motion. However, as the Honourable the Mover has accepted the circulation motion, I hope Government will see their way to it that the Bill comes up before the House during the next Session so that it may be enacted into law. As regards the plea of my friend from the European Group, I do not see that there is anything in what he said, namely, that we should wait till such time as all the amendments recommended by the Haj Enquiry Committee can be incorporated in a complete Bill and then this matter along with the other measures should be considered. I do not think that this suggestion can do any good. I support the motion moved by the Honourable Mover of the Bill.

THE MEMBERS OF THE CENTRAL LEGISLATURE PAYMENT OF SALARIES BILL.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division: Non-Muhammadan): Sir I move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the payment of salaries to the Members of the Central Legislature.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is: "That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide for the payment of salaries to the Members of the Central Legislature."

The motion was adopted.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

[NEW SECTION 93A.]

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi (Meerut Division: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code, (New section 93A).

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code (New section 93A)."

The motion was adopted.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 29th July, 1943.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Thursday, 29th July, 1943.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN:

Mr. Ammebal Vittal Pai, O.B.E., M.L.A. (Government of India: Nominated Official).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

REPATRIATED INDIAN PRISONERS OF WAR.

96. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable the Defence Member be pleased to state the total number of Indian prisoners of War upto May 31st, 1943?

(b) How many of them have been repatriated so far?

(c) Is it a fact that in comparison with the British and Dominion prisoners the number of Indian wounded prisoners, who have been repatriated, is small?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: (a) The total number of Indian personnel who have been notified as prisoners of war upto 31st May, 1943, is 12,777.

(b) 133 Indian prisoners of war have been repatriated from Italy. No wounded and sick have so far been repatriated from Germany or Japan.

(c) There has been no exchange of Prisoners of War as such. The only prisoners who have been repatriated are sick and disabled—irrespective of their nationality. Under Article 69 of the Prisoners of War Convention any prisoner of war has a right to demand examination by a Mixed Medical Commission, consisting of two neutral and one national doctors.

Only those prisoners have been repatriated who have been recommended by this Mixed Medical Commission.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if there were any Sindhi prisoners? I believe there are some prisoners of war from Sind. Have they been repatriated; and, if so, how many?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I realise fully that I should have known how many Sindhi prisoners of war were there, but I am afraid I have not the information.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Will the Honourable Member say whether the number of British and Dominion prisoners of war who have been repatriated was more than the number of the Indian prisoners of war?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: Their number is larger than that of the Indians repatriated but they have all been recommended by that Medical Commission on account of sickness and not because of their nationality.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With reference to the information given by the Honourable Member that one national doctor is included in the Medical Commission, will he be pleased to state whether an Indian doctor can be insisted upon to participate in the work of the Medical Commission when the case of an Indian prisoner of war is considered?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: The word 'national' in that case means belonging to the nation who holds the prisoners of war.

BAN ON BROADCASTS OF URDU TALKS BY THE ALL-INDIA RADIO.

97. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state if it is a fact that the All-India Radio does not accept any talk if the broadcaster wants it to be broadcast as an Urdu talk?

(b) Is it a fact that Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru has never been invited to broadcast, because he insists on broadcasting in Urdu and not in the so-called Hindustani?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) No.

BAN ON BROADCASTS OF URDU TALKS BY THE ALL-INDIA RADIO.

98 *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state how many Urdu talks have been broadcast from Delhi and Lucknow since the installation of these stations?

(b) Is it a fact that although Delhi and Lucknow are the centres of Urdu, yet the All-India Radio authorities insist on broadcasting from these stations in the so-called Hindustani? If so, why?

(c) Does the Honourable Member propose to suggest to the Controller of Broadcasting to have separate broadcasts in pure Urdu and Hindi from these stations as an experiment and collect statistics as to the number of respective listeners?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) The information asked for is not readily available as no statistics are kept and its collection would involve an amount of time and labour that would not be justified in war time.

(b) The term Hindustani is used because it conveniently covers both Urdu and Hindi and under this title many talks both in Urdu and Hindi have been broadcast.

(c) Talks in Urdu and Hindi are already being given. As regards news, Government consider that the proposed step would unnecessarily restrict the number of listener to each bulletin. The concluding part of the question does not arise.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: With reference to part (b) of the question, may I ask whether any particular definition has been prescribed for Hindustani, Urdu or Hindi? If so, who has prescribed that definition?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I am going into this question myself very carefully and I hope I will be in a position to come to a definite decision as regards this matter. There have been questions raised in the House as well as outside on this subject and it had been a problem which is to be solved and I hope I will be able to solve it.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will the Honourable Member either issue a statement or lay a statement on the table on the conclusion arrived at by him?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: Most certainly.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if any talk has been broadcast from All-India Radio station in the Punjabi language?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I have no information.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member make inquiries if it is not tabooed?

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: May I bring to the notice of the Honourable Member that the simultaneous use of the expressions Hindustani and Urdu for the same idea causes very inconvenient confusion. Will the Government once for all issue a statement declaring that Urdu should be used in respect of the language which is called Hindustani?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

THE GWYER-ALL-INDIA RADIO INCIDENT.

99. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state the terms of contract between a broadcaster and the All-India Radio?

(b) Is the All-India Radio bound to broadcast a talk after the contract is signed?

(c) Can the All-India Radio authorities delete any portion from a talk without showing any reason?

(d) If the reply to (c) is in the affirmative, why was an enquiry made in the Gwyer-All-India Radio incident?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) I presume the Honourable Member is referring to the terms of the contract with talkers. If so, a copy of the contract form in question is placed on the table of the House.

(b) No.

(c) Yes.

(d) The discretion allowed by Government to a subordinate authority is always subject to the general superintendence, direction and control of the Government of India.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: With reference to part (c) of the question, may I ask on what grounds portions are deleted?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: Condition 2 of the contract with the talkers states:

"The contract is subject to acceptance of the final manuscripts by the Director and the manuscript should be in the hands of the Director not less than 10 days before the date fixed for the broadcast. Manuscripts if accepted shall be the property of the All-India Radio."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

APPROVED LISTS OF NEWSPAPERS FOR GOVERNMENT ADVERTISEMENTS IN THE DELHI PROVINCE.

100. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state if it is a fact that in the Delhi Province Government advertisements are only given to the newspapers which are on the approved list, maintained by the Chief Commissioner?

(b) What are the rules regulating this approved list?

(c) Why is this list maintained?

(d) Is it a fact that the name of any paper criticising the policy of the Chief Commissioner or the Local Government is not placed on the list, or if it is already on the list, it is removed?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) Yes.

(b) There are no special rules. The main criterion in deciding whether a newspaper should or should not be included in the list is its circulation.

(c) To ensure that the advertisements are sent to those newspapers which are the most suitable for Government advertising, suitability being determined principally by circulation.

PERSONS CONVICTED UNDER DEFENCE OF INDIA RULES DECLARED ULTRA VIRES AND UNDER SPECIAL COURTS ORDINANCE.

101. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state the number of persons kept in confinement; province by province, under the Defence of India Rules which were declared ultra vires by the Federal Court? How many of them have been released, and how many have been kept in confinement as security prisoners in different places? How many have been rearrested under Regulation III of 1918?

(b) How many special courts have been abolished as a result of the finding of the Federal Court?

(c) Is it not a fact that by a subsequent ordinance persons kept in confinement and who were tried by Special Courts, have been given the right of appeal? If so, what facilities have been given to them for filing such appeals? Did they apply for bail? Will Government allow them to interview their relations and lawyers freely for making arrangements for appeals? Why do not Government release and try them in the ordinary Courts under the Criminal Procedure Code?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) The Honourable Member appears to be under a misapprehension regarding the effect of the ruling of the Federal Court to which he refers. The ruling disclosed a discrepancy between the wording of Defence of India Rule 26 and the wording of the Rule-making power in the Defence of India Act, as a result of which the Rule was held to be ultra vires of the Act. But this did not mean that all persons detained under the Rule were to be automatically released. The technical flaw was corrected at once by a validating ordinance, and it is only the Calcutta High Court that has held that ordinance itself to be invalid. An appeal against that ruling is now pending in the Federal Court and is due to be heard shortly. Meanwhile I understand that as a result of habeas corpus applications in the Calcutta High Court certain security prisoners in that Province have been released, some of whom have been re-arrested under Regulation III. But I have no information as to the precise numbers involved; nor of course is there any question of similar releases or similar re-arrests in Provinces outside the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court.

(b) The special Criminal Courts Ordinance was repealed on 5th June, 1943, with the result that all Special Courts set up thereunder were abolished from that date.

(c) Yes. These persons have the usual facilities for filing appeals. I have no information whether they have applied for bail, but there is no reason to believe that adequate facilities for consultation with their legal advisers have not been granted. In view of the opportunity now given to each such person to appeal against his conviction under the Special Criminal Courts Ordinance, the Government's view was that re-trials were unnecessary.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know, if before passing that Ordinance setting up special courts, the Government consulted their Law Department and were satisfied that they were doing what was strictly legal?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Yes, Sir.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know where did the flaw come in that the Federal Court had to find out that it was ultra vires legislation?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: It was the Calcutta High Court, I think, that held so, not the Federal Court.

Sardar Sant Singh: In view of the fact that certain legislation passed hurriedly by means of Ordinance is found to contain provisions which are ultra vires, will the Government see the advisability of consulting the Legislature before passing such repressive Ordinances in future?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The Legislature is not our advisory authority in legal matters.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: With reference to part (b), the Honourable Member was pleased to say that a mere declaration of a rule as ultra vires would not invalidate the rule itself and still the detention under that rule would be legal. Is that the position taken up by the Honourable Member?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I am not able to argue matters which will shortly come before the Federal Court.

IMPERIAL SECRETARIAT JAMADARS AND PEONS ASSOCIATION'S RESOLUTION ON NON-REVISION OF THEIR SCALES OF PAY.

102. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the Finance Member been drawn to the resolution recently passed by the Imperial Secretariat Jamadars' and Peons' Association expressing their disappointment at the scales of their pay not having been revised by Government in view of the prices of all articles having risen abnormally? If so, what relief do Government propose to give to these Government servants?

(b) Is it a fact that it is not possible for these servants to meet the bare necessities of life even on Rs. 1-8-0 a day and that the smallest wage earned in the market is at least one rupee a day? If so, do Government propose to increase their salaries, and arrange for them to get cheap foodstuffs? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) and (b). Government have seen the Resolution referred to. After a careful examination of the question, Government decided in June 1943 that the revision of basic pay rates could not be considered. Temporary relief to meet high prices has however been given by means of dearness allowance (which now amounts to Rs. 8-8-0 for the staff in question) and by a scheme for the concessional supply of wheat and rice in Delhi and Simla. The net benefit of this concession, at the time of issue of orders, was estimated at Rs. 9 a month for a family consisting of two adults and two children. Government consider that these temporary measures, afford substantial relief to inferior servants. It may be true that casual labour can earn at least a rupee a day in present conditions but I would ask the Honourable Member in making comparisons to bear in mind that apart from permanency of employment and the temporary benefits I have mentioned the class of Government servants under reference is eligible for certain other concessions, e.g., housing, clothing, pensions for which ordinary labourers are not.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if after the revision was made, there has been again representation to the Honourable Member that the provision relating to revision has not been sufficient for them?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I dare say that is so.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is the Honourable Member aware that they contemplate to go on strike?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am not aware of that.

DESIRABILITY OF GRANTING EXTRA ALLOWANCES TO MINISTERIAL STAFF ENGAGED ON WAR WORK.

103. Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please make a statement whether he is prepared to recommend extra allowances to the Ministerial staff engaged on war work in consideration of the loss of holidays and the extra hours of work they are daily required to put in?

(b) Is it not a fact that the existing salaries and allowances of the Ministerial establishment are not sufficiently attractive to induce the right type of candidates to take up service in the Departments, and are not the Departments of Government feeling considerable difficulty in filling these vacancies?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) No, Sir. Under Fundamental Rule 11, unless in any case it is otherwise distinctly provided, the whole time of a Government servant is at the disposal of the Government which pays him.

(b) The Departments of Government are finding some difficulty in filling the vacancies referred to. The war has resulted in a great expansion of both Government and private clerical establishments and there is a general shortage of qualified clerical personnel. Government believe that the recruitment difficulty is due to this shortage rather than to the nature of the terms offered.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know from the Honourable Member whether the holidays notified in the Gazette are not to be availed of by persons who are employed in the Government of India as of right?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: No, Sir. I do not think they can be availed of as of right. I think it depends upon the state of business in the Departments.

Sardar Sant Singh: Even gazetted holidays?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, even gazetted holidays. It may interest my Honourable friend to know that I have not enjoyed a single free Sunday for possibly over a year.

SIKHS DETAINED IN THE PUNJAB UNDER DEFENCE OF INDIA RULE 26.

104. Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state:—

(a) the number of Sikhs detained in the Punjab under rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules?

(b) how many of them are members of the Shromani Gurudwara Prabhandak Committee and Shromani Akal Dal;

(c) the period of their detention; and

(d) whether their cases were ever reviewed since their detention; if so, when they were last reviewed?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) I have no information as to the number of Sikh security prisoners detained under the orders of the Punjab Government. There are 10 Sikh security prisoners detained under the orders of the Central Government or of the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, who are at present accommodated in jails in the Punjab.

(c) One has been detained since November 1940; two since February and March 1941; one since March 1942; two since August 1942; and four since the earlier months of the current year.

(d) All such cases are frequently considered.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if the Honourable Member cannot get the information from the Provincial Government?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The Honourable Member, if he wants to know it, can have a question put to the Provincial Government.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I remind the Honourable Member that when such questions are put to Provincial Governments, they refuse to reply under the plea that it is not in the public interest? Under the circumstances, may I ask him to get this information?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): It is a reflection on the Provincial Governments. Next question.

NON-COMPLIANCE OF ASSURANCE GIVEN TO LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY re INTERVIEWS TO SECURITY PRISONERS.

105. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state if his attention has been directed to the current comment in the Hindustan Times of the 1st July, 1943, inviting his attention to the non-compliance of his assurance given to the Legislative Assembly that security prisoners detained in connection with the recent disturbances are, however, not allowed interviews but are permitted to write two and receive four letters per week only?

(b) Has he made any enquiry into these allegations? If so, is he prepared to issue instructions to all jails in India to carry out the above undertaking given to the Legislative Assembly?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) Yes. I would, however, remind the Honourable Member that my reply of March 17th last to Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kani's question, an extract from which is quoted in the Hindustan Times comment, referred only to security prisoners actually detained in Chief Commissioners' Provinces.

(b) No.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if there are prisoners from the Centrally Administered Areas who have been sent to the Punjab and are in Ferozepore jail?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if it is a fact that they are not allowed to write two letters and receive four letters as was the understanding given by the Honourable Member. Is it a fact that they are allowed to write one letter and receive one letter?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: As I explained to the House in the debate on Tuesday last, we are in correspondence with all the Provincial Governments as regards uniformity in matters of that kind.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I know so far as these detenus from the Centrally Administered Areas are concerned, whether the Provincial Governments over-ride the instructions laid down for the detenus who are detained by the Central Government?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Yes, Sir. Under sub-rule 5(a) of Defence Rule 26, the power of determining the conditions of detention of security prisoners rests with the Provincial Government of the Province in which the prisoner is detained, regardless of whether the order of detention was made by the Provincial or the Central Government.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I take it that they can over-ride the instructions of the central authorities in matters such as interviews, letters, food and everything?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: There is no question of over-riding instructions. The prisoners while they are in charge of Provincial Governments are subject to the Regulations which they themselves have made.

ANTI-CORRUPTION COMMITTEE.

106. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the War Secretary please state since when the Anti-Corruption Committee has come into existence?

(b) What is the present personnel of the Committee, and what is the qualification of each member?

(c) How many cases of corruption were investigated by the Committee since its existence? Against how many action was taken, and with what result?

(d) How many of the persons thus proceeded against were Europeans, Anglo-Indians, Hindus, Muslims, Christians and Sikhs?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) and (b). There is no Anti-Corruption Committee, but there is a Special Anti-Corruption Police Staff working under the War Department.

(c) 227 cases have been investigated. Of these, 122 cases were put into court, with the following results:

Convicted	55	Pending	56

78 cases are under investigation.

(d) Number of persons proceeded against in court or departmentally:—

Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indian		Muslims	53
Christians	56	Sikhs	37
Hindus	204

Sardar Sant Singh: What is the reply to part (b)?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: As I have already said, there is no such committee and therefore the question does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I have the figures separately for Europeans and Anglo-Indians proceeded against?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have not got the figures separately.

SUPERSESSION OF SENIOR INDIANS IN INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE BY JUNIOR EUROPEAN OFFICERS.

107. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the War Secretary please state:

(a) if senior Indians in the Indian Medical Service have retired as a protest against unfair treatment; if so, how many;

(b) if senior Indians in the Indian Medical Service have been superseded by junior European officers for commands and special jobs; if so, what the reasons were for their supersession; how many such supersessions were made;

(c) if junior European Captains and Majors have been promoted to special jobs as Lieut.-Colonels and Colonels; if so, how many;

(d) in such cases of promotion to special jobs if no Indians who were senior to them with better service records and better qualifications, were available; and

(e) if senior Indian Majors and Lieut.-Colonels are being asked to do minor work which the junior officers do; if so, how many?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) The answer to the first part is in the negative; the second part does not arise.

(b) 220 European officers have been granted acting promotion during the present emergency as against 264 Indian I.M.S. officers. Information regarding the reasons for supersession in each individual case is not readily available and its collection would involve an amount of time and labour that would not be justifiable in war time.

(c) and (d). 45 European Captains and 47 European Majors have been promoted as Lt. Colonels and 10 European Majors and 4 Captains have been promoted as Colonels. I may add that 14 Indian Captains and 27 Indian Majors have been promoted as Lt.-Colonels and 3 Indian Majors have been promoted as Colonels. The proportion of European to Indian Regular Officers, (from among whom such promotions are made), is approximately 16 to 9.

The policy is to select for special appointments the most suitable officers irrespective of race or seniority.

(e) There are 21 senior officers of the Indian Army Medical Corps who do not hold appointments commensurate with their seniority. Of these 8 are Europeans and 13 are Indians. Of the Indians, 2 hold responsible Specialist Appointments from which they cannot be spared and the remaining 11 are in medical category 'C'.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Have any Indians in the I.M.S. resigned?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: No Indian Officer of the I.M.S. has resigned as a protest.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Have any senior Indian I.M.S. officers resigned at all?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Yes; 32 senior Indian I.M.S. officers has retired during the war. Of these, 9 retired before attaining the age of superannuation and the reason in each case was invalidment. The rest retired after attaining the age of superannuation.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: Was any medical examination made of those who were invalided?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: It must have been made.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is it a fact that Indian Majors and Lieutenant-Colonels were made to do minor work which is usually done by junior officers?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Yes-Sir. I have said that there are certain officers who do not hold appointments commensurate with their seniority.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: With regard to part (c), has the Honourable Member included the personnel in the Supply Department holding ranks of Colonels and Majors who are not only promoted but also demoted there?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: No, because this question relates only to the Indian Medical Service.

SILVER RUPEES IN CIRCULATION.

108. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state the number of silver rupees in circulation in the years 1938 and 1939, immediately preceding the war?

(b) What was the number of silver rupees minted in those years?

(c) What was the average number of rupees minted in one year during the period of ten years preceding the war?

(d) Has there been any withdrawal of silver rupee from circulation since the beginning of war? If so, how much?

(e) What is the number of silver rupees withdrawn from circulation by the demonitization of the silver rupee of the time of Queen Victoria and King Edward VII?

(f) Were the coins so withdrawn melted? If not, what happened to them?

(g) If the answer to (f) be in the affirmative, were new silver rupees minted out of the silver so obtained? If so, what is their number?

(h) How many present silver rupees can be coined out of the one silver rupee of the time of Queen Victoria?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) The information is not available.

(b) and (c). No rupees were minted during the 10 years preceding the war.

(d) and (e). The information is given in the Reserve Bank's Annual Reports on Currency and Finance for 1940-41, 1941-42 and 1942-43; copies of which are available in the library of the House.

(f) Yes.

(g) Withdrawn coins are taken to Government's Stocks of silver from which silver is taken as and when required for coinage. Returns showing the number of quaternary rupees minted are published in the Reserve Bank's reports on Currency and Finance.

PAPER CURRENCY IN CIRCULATION.

109. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state the amount of paper currency now in circulation in India?

(b) What is the strength of the Reserve backing this paper currency?

(c) What used to be the average or normal amount of paper currency in actual circulation during the period of ten years preceding the war, and the strength of the Reserve backing that currency?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) and (b). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the weekly accounts of the Reserve Bank which are published in the Gazette of India.

(c) The information is available in statement XXXV on pages 82 and 83 of the Report of the Controller of the Currency for the year 1934-35 and statement XXIX on page 91 of the Reserve Bank's Report on Currency and Finance for 1941-42 copies of which are available in the library of the House.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: Did the Honourable Member see these pages and volumes when preparing the reply?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, and I have got them with me now.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: Then why did he not quote these figures instead of referring to them?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Because I do not conceive it to be my business to give information which is available in regularly published returns.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Has the Honourable Member's attention been drawn to the fact that the momentum of these notes in circulation, i.e., the quantum multiplied by the velocity, is just the same today as it was at the beginning of the war, in spite of the inflation of notes?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am afraid I have not made the precise calculations referred to by the learned Doctor but I believe there is considerable force in what he has said.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: While discussing inflation and deflation here, did he not consider this question?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, Sir; in the course of my budget speech I pointed out that a good deal of the currency, which had been issued was completely immobilized in hoards and therefore it could not be said to exert any pressure on the price level.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Did he mention the speed of circulation in his budget speech?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, Sir, I did refer to that specific point and I gave some figures of the relation of bank deposits to banks clearings.

STEPS FOR STOPPING INFLATION.

110. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that the present high prices of commodities are mostly so in terms of the paper currency circulating in the country but are not so when compared inter se, with each other?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that the rise in prices is mostly due to the fall in the value of the paper rupee? If not, what is the reason?

(c) What steps have Government taken for stopping the inflation and effecting deflation, and with what results?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) I am not sure that I understand what the Honourable Member means by his question, but I think I can best reply to the first part by stating the obvious fact that prices are by definition the values of commodities in terms of money; and to the second part by referring to the equally obvious fact that since the prices of some commodities have risen more than others, the relative values of commodities inter se do not correspond to the pre-war parities.

(b) I would refer the Honourable Member to paragraphs 50-55 of my speech introducing the Budget for the current year.

(c) I invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply I gave to part (b) of Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto's question No. 5 on the 26th July, 1943. It is not possible to assess the result of each individual measure but the general effect will be apparent to the Honourable Member if he will follow the course of commodity and bullion prices as reported in the press from day to day.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is not stabilisation of prices one of the foremost duties of the Finance Member?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, I agree.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Then what action has he taken as Finance Member in regard to foodstuffs?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: There is a special Food Department to deal with the food question and it is a matter in which I naturally take an exceedingly active interest.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will Government consider this fact that by raising the prices of wheat and rice they are devaluating the rupee on account of which the stabilisation of prices is disturbed and it seriously affects the monetary policy of the country, from which the Finance Member cannot keep aloof?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The Government has certainly done nothing to raise the price of wheat as far as I am aware.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: If any of his colleagues take an action which is contrary to the established monetary policy of the country, then is it or is it not the duty of the Finance Member to step in as a representative of the taxpayer?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am afraid I cannot discuss the exact relation of my colleagues and myself, but I can assure the Honourable Member that we do endeavour to keep in step in matters of this kind.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: If the Honourable Member is not prepared to safeguard the interests of the taxpayer, I should like to have an opportunity to lodge a protest on behalf of the taxpayer.

(No answer was given.)

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: With reference to part (b), has the Honourable Member actually examined the rise of prices and has he come to the conclusion that the rise of prices is not at all due to the fall in the value of the rupee?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I think that a separate question has been asked on that point, but to say that the rise of prices is due to the fall in the value of the rupee or to say that the fall in the value of the rupee is due to the rise of prices are merely two ways of stating the same thing. It is the old story of the hen and the egg: which came first?

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: What I want to say is that the rise of prices of different articles is almost on the same level. Then so far as rupee is concerned, it must have fallen down in price.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: That is what I deny. It is not the case that the rise of prices inter se, as my Honourable friend puts it, is on the same level. There are remarkable inequalities in the advance in prices, and, therefore, they cannot be uniformly attributed to a purely monetary cause. For instance, the rise in the price of tooth paste is very different from the rise in the price of sugar or kerosene.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Face powder seems to be cheaper in Delhi.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: How do you know?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Wherever I go I see many ladies using it so profusely and thickly that their skin cannot breathe fresh air.

NON-CONVERSION OF PAPER CURRENCY INTO SILVER RUPEE.

111. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that during the last Great War (1914-18), the Government of India had taken steps to continue the conversion of the paper currency into silver rupee?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that during the course of the present war that conversion has not been maintained? If not, how long was it maintained?

(c) What are the reasons for this departure?

(d) Have the high prices of commodities prevalent in the country been to any extent due to this inconvertibility? If so, to what extent?

(e) In view of the adverse effects of the inconvertibility on the prices of commodities, do Government propose to consider the advisability of taking steps for restoring it? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) Yes; currency notes remained convertible into silver rupees during the last Great War.

(b) and (c). Reserve Bank notes are still convertible into rupee coin. The Government of India one rupee notes are, however, legally the equivalent of rupee coin under the Currency Ordinance of 1940. It was decided to issue one rupee notes to supplement the rupee coinage, an increased absorption of which took place as a result of war conditions and to make them the legal equivalent of rupee coin in order to conserve stocks of silver, which has assumed far greater importance to war industries than during the last war.

(d) This is a matter of opinion. But I may say that Government do not consider that the price level has been affected to any appreciable extent by reason of rupee notes having been made the legal equivalent of rupee coin.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: With reference to part (b), the Honourable Member has stated that notes above the value of one rupee notes are still convertible into silver rupee. May I know if the Reserve Bank is bound to give silver rupees in return for these notes?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I said no. For that purpose one rupee notes rank the same as rupee coins.

ADVISABILITY OF RESTORING OLD STANDARD TIME.

112. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state which factories (and in which part of the country) were adversely affected by the former standard time which used to be observed in India?

(b) What is the number of such factories, and what is the estimated amount of loss to those factories caused by the keeping up of the standard time?

(c) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of restoring the old standard time? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The question should have been addressed to the Honourable the Labour Member.

WORKING OF THE INDIAN NATIONAL WAR FRONT.

113. *Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please lay a statement about the working of the Indian National War Front?

(c) What has been its achievement?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) A statement regarding the work of the National War Front during its first year is being prepared and will be laid upon the table of the House shortly.

(b) The statement will also contain the amount spent.

(c) The achievement of the National War Front or any other propaganda organisation must necessarily be a matter of opinion on which Members should judge for themselves.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: With reference to the reply given to the last part of my question, I would like to mention that every district officer has invented his own method of propaganda and some of these methods are very very intelligent. May I ask the Honourable Member whether he will not receive a report of the work done by various provinces and various district officers and then express his opinion as to which of them proved to be the most effective methods. In Aligarh I know the propaganda is being carried on by barbers and astrologers and that is much more effective than speeches.

(No answer was given.)

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that these War Fronts are non-official bodies?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: Yes.

Mr. H. A. Sathar H. Essak Sait: Arising out of part (b) of the question, can the Honourable Member tell us the amount spent on this National War Front?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: It would be more useful if that was found in the statement. I can give the amount, not the details. The total amount is most likely—I am not quite sure—about 33 lakhs.

REPRESENTATION FROM INDIAN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANIES FOR FIXATION OF A MAXIMUM TAXATION LIMIT ON INCOME.

114. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state whether he has received any representation on behalf of the Indian Life Assurance Companies praying for the fixation of a maximum limit for the taxation of the income of such Companies for the duration of the present War? If so, what action is proposed to be taken thereon?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes. The matter is under my consideration.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Has the Honourable Member's attention been drawn to the observation in Capital dated 15th July, 1943, that if the present rates of taxation continued, it would become difficult for the Companies to meet their obligations to their policy-holders?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I have seen that statement made in several quarters, and the whole question is at present under consideration.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Having regard to the gravity of the matter, may I hope that the Honourable Member will arrive at a quick decision?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I hope to arrive at a quick decision, but I must point out that the matter is one which would require legislation in order to be adjusted; it could not be done at any moment.

POSTPONED QUESTION AND ANSWER

COLLABORATION BETWEEN THE CIVIL AUTHORITIES AND THE AIR FORCE EMPLOYED FOR MACHINE-GUNNING SABOTEURS OF RAILWAY LINES DURING LAST DISTURBANCES.

33. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the War Secretary be pleased to refer to the supplementary question, asked by me in the Legislative Assembly, in connection with starred question No. 67 of the 12th February, 1943, and state whether in so far as the Air Force was employed for the purpose of machine-gunning the saboteurs of railway lines during the disturbances in August 1942, as mentioned by the Honourable the Home Member, the Force was acting in collaboration with the civil authorities concerned?

(b) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to refer in this connection to the starred question No. 457, asked by me in the Legislative Assembly on the 31st of March, 1943, regarding machine-gunning on a mob from the air near Ranaghat Railway Station in Bengal and give a complete answer thereto?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) and (b). I would refer the Honourable Member to the statement which has been laid on the table in reply to his starred question No. 457 asked on the 31st March, 1943.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: I have seen that statement. Will the Honourable Member please enlighten the House on the question as to whether it is a fact that the magistrates have a definite part to play in connection with the employment of troops, particularly land troops, in aid of the civil power; and that the magistrates have absolutely no function to discharge if the air force is similarly employed in aid of the civil power?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: That is correct.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Has the legal aspect of the matter been examined?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Yes, Sir.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: And may I know what the opinion of the Law Department is on this particular point?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I think the procedure adopted is quite correct.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member be pleased to lay on the table the opinion of the Law Department on this particular point?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I want notice of that question.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: The Honourable Member said that the District Magistrate had nothing to do with the Air Force in the matter of machine-gunning from above . . .

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Air action is taken on the request of the civil authorities. What I understood my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, to ask me was whether a magistrate would accompany an aircraft, and it was in that sense that I said that a Magistrate had no part to play in connection with aircraft action.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: What part do the liaison officers, to which reference has been made in his reply today in connection with this firing problem, play?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: The air action to be taken was settled in consultation with the Civil Government and the Civil Government's Liaison Officer.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: But in the particular case firing was resorted to from the air and there is no indication in the reply to show that there was anything like consultation with the Civil Authorities either on the spot or at the headquarters in Calcutta.

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Sir, Aircraft action was taken in consultation with the Civil Authorities.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Does it not amount to this that the Air Force was given a blank cheque?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: No, Sir. Definite instructions were issued to the Air Force, as I have already referred to these instructions in the statement I have laid on the table.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member please state whether the Civil Authorities had any opportunity of going into the particular case referred to by me in my question, before the aircraft was permitted to fire upon an innocent crowd of people?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: The aircraft took action in accordance with the general instructions issued in consultation with the Civil Authorities.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: That is what I mean by a blank cheque.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Does a part of the general instructions include the firing on innocent coolies working on the railway lines? Will the Honourable Member say whether the Civil Authorities gave directions that coolies actually working on the railway lines should be fired at?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have already quoted the instructions in reply to part (d) of question No. 457.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: Has the Honourable Member got any details of the actual plans of the Civil and Military Authorities regarding the shooting by the aircraft and if such information is available has it been seen?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have already said that the general plan of action was settled by the Civil and Military Authorities.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: Was that in writing or was that in words?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Instructions were issued in writing.

Sardar Sant Singh: With reference to the plan, was it recorded in some official record?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have not seen the local official record.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With reference to the statement made by the Chief Minister in the Bengal Legislature that he knew nothing about this incident until long after it had happened, will the Honourable Member be pleased to explain what he means when he says that the discrepancies in the Chief Minister's statement may be due to a misunderstanding of the material laid before him? Can the Honourable Member tell me whether any material was laid before him and what it was?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Sir I have based this part of my answer on the report received from the Bengal Government.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: We know that there has been a dual Government in Bengal and its black portion does not know what the white portion does.

THE INDIAN BOILERS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Labour Member): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Boilers Act, 1923, be taken into consideration."

This measure is a very simple measure. It is a non-controversial measure and it does not involve any matter of principle. Having regard to these considerations, I do not propose to deal at any very great length in explaining the provisions of the Bill. It will be sufficient if I tell the House the circumstances which have led Government to bring in this amending Bill. Briefly, the circumstances are these.

On the 23rd February 1942 there occurred in a mill in Bombay a boiler accident which resulted in a very serious loss of life. When this accident occurred an enquiry was made by the Government of Bombay in order to ascertain the cause of this accident. It was found as a result of the enquiry that the explosion was due to something that was wrong in the apparatus which is called an "economiser". To put it specifically, it was pointed out that the tubes of the economiser, which I understand are technically called "feed pipes", had been weakened as a result of long internal corrosion. This result of the enquiry came as a matter of surprise to Government because under the Indian Boilers Act, 1923 there is a provision made for the Boiler Inspector to regularly inspect boilers and issue certificates that the boilers were in working order. The question arises as to how the Boiler Inspector permitted himself to issue a certificate knowing that the feed pipes of the economiser had become unfit for work. It was then found out that having regard to the regulations issued under section 28 of the Indian Boilers Act, it was not the duty of the Boiler Inspector to examine the feed pipes or any other auxiliary apparatus that was connected with the boiler, and it is because of this fact that the feed pipes were not examined in the case of this particular boiler which exploded. It is to remove this lacuna that the present amending Bill has been brought in.

The present Bill makes two amendments. The first amendment is to introduce a new clause (cc) to section 2, which is an interpretation clause. It adds a new term called "feed pipe" and defines what is a feed pipe. The second amendment is to enlarge the scope of what is called a "steam-pipe". According to the law as it stands to-day, the steam-pipe means the main pipe only and under the amendment the steam-pipe will now include not only the main pipe but also the feed-pipe. After this amendment has been carried, it would be possible for Government to amend the regulations framed under section 28 in order to make it obligatory upon the Boiler Inspector not only to examine the steam-pipes but also the feed-pipes. It is because of this that the present Bill has been brought in. Sir, I move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Boilers Act, 1923, be taken into consideration."

Mr. C. G. Miller (Bengal: European): There is one small point on which I would seek enlightenment from the Honourable Member. It relates to the system of feed-pipes known as the economiser. This is an adjunct to but not an essential part of a boiler and I take it that the Inspector would not be legally entitled to refuse a certificate for a boiler being in good condition because of there being some defect in the feed-pipes provided the owner undertook to disconnect the feed-pipes?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: My friend will understand that it is not possible for me to give a categorical answer, but as I am advised, he is quite correct in making the assumption that he has made.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Boilers Act, 1923, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I move that the Bill be passed.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE RECIPROCITY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Honourable Dr. Khare—Item No. 3.

Sir Henry Richardson (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I rise to a point of order before the Honourable Member moves the motion standing in his name. We have received last night at 10 o'clock certain amendments to the Bill the consideration of which the Honourable Member is about to move. I want to know whether these amendments were received in the office at the proper time, which I think should be 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning, that is to say, 32 hours before we actually received them.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I think the Standing Orders require two days notice. I suppose the amendments were circulated within less than two days time.

Sir Henry Richardson: The amendments were circulated at 10 o'clock last night.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Which amendments is the Honourable Member referring to?

Sir Henry Richardson: There are five of them and we received them last night at 10 o'clock.

Sir Syed Raza Ali (Cities of the United Provinces: Muhammadan Urban): May I just point out that the Bill was introduced on the 26th.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I understand that the amendments were only received yesterday in the office, some time yesterday.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: The Bill itself was introduced on the 26th July, 1943. My Honourable friend, Sir Henry Richardson, knows but too well that an important meeting of the Committee that was called . . .

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Notice of the amendments might have been given on the 27th.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: When the Session is just starting it is very difficult. May I suggest a way out? My Honourable friend, Sir Henry Richardson, would, I hope, be only too willing to waive the plea of want of time, but if he is not prepared to do so and if he insists on his pound of flesh, the best thing would be to adjourn the debate to-day and take up the Bill on another day. Some of the amendments of which I have given notice raise questions of substance.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I quite follow. If it is going to cause any inconvenience to the House, because they are all substantive amendments, I think the House ought to have time. Unless the House is prepared to go on with the Bill now, I would not waive the Standing Order myself.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare (Member for Indians Overseas): I stood up in time as regards the point of order. I submit whether an amendment is in order or not can only be considered when the amendment is actually moved and not before that. I have risen only to move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I suppose there will be time when the amendments are moved.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I have not yet brought in my motion that the Bill be taken into consideration, and before that, the Honourable Member got up and raised this point of order.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): The Bill itself has not been before the House for five days which is the usual rule. If that defect is condoned, I do not know whether the other defect should not be condoned.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): When was the Bill introduced?

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: On the 26th July.

Sir George Spence (Secretary, Legislative Department): Only three days are required.

Sir Henry Richardson: The Bill that is coming up before the House—the reason for it is because of bad drafting. But the Honourable Member wants to run the risk again. My whole point is that the amendments must be in time.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: In that case you ought to have objected to the Bill being taken up for consideration before five days are over.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Under the circumstances, as objection has been taken I think the motion must stand over. Honourable Dr. Ambedkar.

THE MOTOR VEHICLES (DRIVERS) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Labour Member): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to amend the Motor Vehicles (Drivers) Ordinance, 1942, be taken into consideration."

"This is a simple measure. As the House will remember, there have been several Ordinances by which the services of several persons have been requisitioned by Government.

An Honourable Member: How many in all?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I am afraid I have not got the information but I think the general fact is quite well known. The Ordinance which requisitions the services of motor drivers is one of those. After the Ordinance was passed it was discovered that there was one provision which was present in other Ordinances, but was absent in the Motor Drivers Ordinance. That provision was that there was not anything in the Ordinance requiring the owner to re-employ a motor driver after his services were dispensed with by the authority which had requisitioned his services. It is to fill this gap that the present Bill has been brought in. The purposes of the amendment are three-fold. The amendment declares the employer's liability to re-employ a driver where his services have been dispensed with by Government. Secondly, it lays down a method for the settlement of disputes as to the liability of the employer. The Bill provides reference to authority nominated by the Provincial Government on their behalf; and thirdly, there is a penalty for non-compliance with the orders passed by the authority. Other provisions in the Bill relate to the limitations on the right of employment which has been given to a motor driver and they are two-fold. In the first place, a motor driver must have been in continuous service for a period of six months before he can claim the right to re-employment. Secondly, he must have applied for re-employment within two months from the date of discharge from the national service. These conditions being satisfied, this present Bill puts him on the same level with other persons whose services have been requisitioned. I have nothing more to say with regard to this Bill. With these remarks, Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill to amend the Motor Vehicles (Drivers) Ordinance, 1942, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Clause 2.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Sir, this is the main clause of the Bill, clause 2, so far as I can make out. I see that the reason for the Bill is to find employment for such motor drivers as may have been requisitioned by Government for war purposes and the attempt is to make the previous employer employ that motor driver under two conditions, provided he has been in the employment of the original employer for six months and he applies for employment within two months. But, Sir, if that motor driver had become unfit for service and he applies for re-employment, the original employer has only one remedy and that is to go to an authority that will be appointed by the Local Government to arbitrate the matter. In the first place, the employer is deprived of the services of a driver who is a rare commodity in these days of great demand for motor drivers and then when motor drivers are to be found in large numbers, fit, efficient and well trained, the owner is made to take a man who may have become inefficient due to the strenuous services he may have had to perform and when he refuses he has to go to a court of arbitration. Now, there is nothing in the Bill which shows what sort of a court of arbitration is to be appointed or who is to be appointed and what are the measures the previous owner has to take and what amount of inconvenience he will have to suffer, what it will cost him to prove that the motor driver is inefficient or has become inefficient. I think that is putting too much of a burden on a man who willingly gives up the services of an efficient motor driver and I would ask the Honourable Member to make these points more clear in the Bill and not leave them for the Local Governments to decide later on. I may point out to the Honourable Member that if the previous employer desires to dodge the provisions of this Bill he may be able to do so. What is required is only a month's notice for dismissal, unless there is a contract. He will not contest the application for re-employment. He will re-employ him and within a short time give the driver a month's notice and there is no remedy in this Bill for such a step taken by a dishonest employer. These are two defects in the Bill which I think ought to be remedied. It is too small a measure most probably to go to a Select Committee. If the Honourable Member will take these points into consideration, he may take time over it. I think the Honourable Member will be doing well by the public and this Honourable House.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: With regard to the observations which have fallen from my Honourable friend, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, I am bound to say that he has really given a very big and a dark colour to what is likely to happen when an employer is called upon to reinstate his former driver. He seems to think that this matter, once it becomes a subject-matter of dispute, would assume a form which lawyers call a long civil suit. But I am sure it will be shorter than a shortcoat. We have made provision that the Provincial Government will appoint an authority and I have no doubt that that authority will be an authority which would be satisfactory to both sides.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: How are we to know that?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: We must trust the Provincial Government to do its best.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Does not the Honourable Member know that when such an authority is appointed, the rules and regulations are very elaborate and that it always causes considerable inconvenience, however simple the issue may be.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It cannot be so inconvenient as to make it difficult for people to settle the matter expeditiously and I therefore think that there is really no very great substance so as to compel me to withhold this measure. I think the points that may arise will be points of very small dimensions which could be settled without much difficulty or worry to either side.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE MINES MATERNITY BENEFIT (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Labour Member): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to amend the Mines Maternity Benefit Act, 1941, be taken into consideration."

It might be desirable if I explain to the House why this amendment has become necessary. Under the Mines Maternity Benefit Act, a woman working in the mine is entitled to maternity benefit for a period of 8 weeks, at the rate of 8 annas per day. This period of 8 weeks is divided into two parts of four weeks each, one part preceding delivery and another part succeeding delivery. The four weeks before delivery is a period of optional rest during which a woman may work and get full wages or absent herself and get the maternity benefit. With regard to the four weeks succeeding delivery, it is a period of compulsory rest during which the woman must not work. In fact it is unlawful and criminal for her to work, and be content only with the maternity benefit. Section 5 of the Maternity Benefit Act provides for the payment of maternity benefit and if Honourable Members will refer to the words as they stand in line 9 of that section, they will find that the words as they stand are 'absent from work'. Now, it has been suggested that these words, particularly 'absent from work' or rather 'from work' are words which are ambiguous and I will briefly explain to the House why it is suggested that these words 'from work' introduce a certain amount of ambiguity.

It is said, suppose the mine was closed by the owner on a particular day, would the woman be entitled to maternity benefit? It is suggested that she would not be, because the implications of the words 'absent from work' mean that there is work, but when a mine is closed there is no work. Therefore, the existence of the words 'from work' has introduced this ambiguity. I have compared section 5 with the five different Maternity Benefit Acts which have been passed in the different provinces and I find that these words 'from work' do not exist. Consequently, it has become necessary to remove this ambiguity by removing these words. The amendment is sought to be carried out by two different amendments. One is to delete the words which have caused this ambiguity from section 5 and make the section read to the effect that 'for every day during the four weeks preceding delivery the woman would be entitled to maternity benefit. With regard to the days on which she chooses to attend—and as I told the House, the four weeks preceding delivery are periods of optional rest when she may choose to go and earn her full wages or stay at home and be content with maternity benefit—we have added a proviso that she shall not be entitled to any maternity benefit at all. With these words, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill to amend the Mines Maternity Benefit Act, 1941, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved:

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I feel that the Honourable the Labour Member has done well in bringing forward this legislation in order to correct what I might call a mistake of the Act. But, Sir, I would like to ask the Honourable Member for some information regarding what his Department is doing to remove the greater evils that at present exist in the mining area and from which the miners suffer. We are dealing with the problem of helping the women miners who work in the coal area, but recently I read in the papers that the Government of India is considering the question of allowing women to go under the mine and work which is prohibited under the law. I am told that the Government of India is considering this question. I would like the Honourable the Labour Member to consider, in the first place, why shortage of labour has taken place in the mining area. My own information is that the miners at present suffer very much on account of the low wages which they are being paid by the owners. The wages in the mining area have been very low for a long time and the miners have suffered very much. Their standard of life is very low. The Royal Commission on Indian labour had recommended that the question of wages should be considered. Besides the wages being very low, the miners, especially in coal mines, suffer on account of the inadequacy of the dearness allowance paid.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I think the Honourable Member is going into questions which do not arise.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I simply want the Honourable Member to tell us whether he proposes to take up this important question.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member has no business to ask him now.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I am not making a long speech. The Honourable Member has done well in bringing forward this measure. At the same time, he should take up the bigger questions very soon.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE RECIPROCITY (AMENDMENT) BILL—contd.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I wish to inform the House that I was under a mistaken impression that the copies of the Bill the consideration of which was sought to be moved by Dr. Khare had not been supplied to the Honourable Members in time. A statement was made by Dr. Banerjee that 5 days notice should be given. That is not correct; only three days notice is required. Copies of the Bill had been supplied three days before now. That being so, Dr. Khare was perfectly right in insisting that he should be allowed to move for consideration of the Bill.

As regards the amendments, notices were not given two days before today. Therefore, these amendments will stand over. I will allow Dr. Khare to move for the consideration of the Bill and the Bill will be considered clause by clause not today but on another day. Dr. Khare can now go on with his motion.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to amend the Reciprocity Act, 1943, be taken into consideration."

In moving this motion, I will not take much time of the House because the principle underlying this amending Bill has been accepted by the House so late as the last Budget Session. Recently, when it was thought that there was a possibility of applying this measure to the nationals of South Africa, it was found that this measure was defective and imperfect, it was therefore necessary to amend it. The principal section which we seek to amend today is only declaratory in nature. We had been given no power to impose specific disabilities on the subjects of those territories living in India. It was doubtful also whether section 6 would give effective power to Government to make rules. It was thought, therefore, desirable to amend this Bill and bring a measure before the House so that the intentions of giving power to Government might be fulfilled without any lacuna being left behind. In pursuance of that desire, I have got this Bill before the House. I do not think it is necessary to say much on this point and waste the time of the House. I, therefore, commend this Bill for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved:

"That the Bill to amend the Reciprocity Act, 1943, be taken into consideration."

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Sir, since the motion has been made by the Honourable Member I would like to make a few remarks on this subject. Sir, this Bill has not been tabled for consideration a minute too soon. As the Honourable Member pointed out, this Bill is the result of certain legislation that was passed by the Union Government after this House adjourned after the Budget Session in April last. One would therefore expect, one would have expected, I should say, the Government to make a clean breast of the whole thing and explain fully the circumstances which had led them to bring forward this amending Bill. Instead of that the Government have adopted a very dubious, a doubtful and, I am sure, objectionable course in making an allegation in the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to this Bill which would require a careful analysis because that makes a reflection on the capacity not only of the Select Committee to which the original Bill was referred in February last but also on the capacity and ability to judge of important questions on the part of this House itself. May I, Sir, invite your attention to the Statement of Objects and Reasons? It says "the Reciprocity Act No. IX of 1943 as it stands is virtually unworkable in practice". This means that the measure was drafted, considered and passed by people who did not know anything about their own business, including the Government. (Interruption.) Well, so far as the Government are concerned, they have not got much reputation to lose. But certainly there are some of us who are jealous of such little reputation as we might possibly have. May I, Sir, in this connection invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the Report of the Select Committee to which the original Bill was referred? Sir, that Report is signed by two Honourable Members sitting on the Treasury Benches, one is Sir Sultan Ahmed and the other was Mr. Aney who was then Member in charge of the Overseas Department. Both of them signed the Report of the Select Committee dated 18th February, 1943. Not only that, Sir, there is something more. The Secretary to the Department, Mr. Bozman, who I am sorry is not present here today, and who has been associated with this Department for a number of years and whom some of us look as an expert adviser, was present throughout the meetings of the Select Committee. There is something more to follow. There is a Government draftsman, who is generally believed to be an able man and who, so far as I know, is a competent draftsman. Mr. Bartley was present at the meetings of the Select Committee throughout. Not a single objection was taken on this score either by the Honourable Mr. Aney who was in the Chair or by Mr. Bozman or by the Government expert.

Now, Sir, I must say in fairness to Sir Sultan Ahmed that he was not present that day, he being out of the station. All the same, here is this document signed by the then Law Member. If the measure was so defective and so hopeless and so faulty as to be unworkable in practice, was it not the duty of the Law Member after reading the report to tell us that the whole thing was a rotten measure and will not work?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That is the reason why they have brought forward this amending Bill.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: No, Sir. The reason why this amending Bill has been brought is very different and that I will state presently. I do not want to kick a dead horse. May I make a reference to the speech of the Honourable Member who was in charge of the Bill on 3rd March, 1943 when the original Bill was under consideration? Mr. Aney having resigned, the Government spokesman was Mr. Bozman, and this is what he had to say on the merits of the Bill, which is now alleged by Government to be unworkable in practice. Mr. Bozman pointed out in the course of his speech "as a retaliatory Bill it is to be regarded with care and, when it becomes an Act, to be administered with care." May I ask the Government Benches if a Bill is unworkable in practice, how can you possibly work it with care. If it is unworkable, you cannot make any use of it. This is playing with words. Mr. Bozman went on to say, "I must, I submit, be Government's care to see that when this Act is applied no such adverse effects shall be caused to India by its application". On that day

Mr. Bozman was clearly of opinion that the Bill could be made use of and it could be applied, but on account of certain reasons it would be the duty of the Government to act with care. When did they discover that the Bill was unworkable? My submission is really this. The Government these days have a tendency to find scapegoats. When they blunder, when they err, when they make mistakes, they excuse themselves by laying the blame at the door of somebody else. That is exactly what the Government of India seem to have done in the present case. On 3rd March, this measure was a perfectly good measure capable of being put into practice, its provisions could be applied, and the only exhortation that was made was that the provisions should be used with care on the part of the Government. Today it is found to be unworkable in practice. That is a reflection on the Committee to which this Bill was committed and also to this House. On behalf of this House it is my duty to lodge a protest against the manner in which the Government have acted in using those words in the Statement of Objects and Reasons.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Member for Information and Broadcasting): May I know whether the Honourable Member feels that the Act as it stands is workable? Whoever may be responsible for it is immaterial, but is it workable on merits?

Sir Syed Raza Ali: We are arguing in a vicious circle. If it is unworkable why did the Government spokesman not say so? What was he doing between 19th February and 3rd March. I am really surprised at the courage of my Honourable friend in putting that question to me. Government Members know that it is unworkable and inapplicable and that it will not be put into practice and yet they put their solemn signatures to it. Is this the way in which members of any Government are expected to act? Is this the way, if I am not too personal, in which the late Law Member and the present Information Member as a responsible Member of Government is expected to act?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: Sir, my answer to that is that I am not responsible at all. I was not there to begin with. My Honourable friend, Mr. Aney, was presiding and not I. There is no reflection on anybody. My friends were all members of the Select Committee. If there is any reflection at all, it is a reflection on the Act as it has been passed.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The whole House is responsible for the Act. But the Honourable Member has dealt with that point long enough and he had better deal with the Bill now.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: As to the reasons, the real reason is that public opinion has been very much stirred on account of happenings in South Africa and anti-Indian discriminatory legislation being passed by the Union Government. Irresponsible though this Government may be, they also feel that the time has come when they must do something in order simply to justify their existence if for nothing else. Public opinion in this country has been stirred from corner to corner and from province to province; and I must acknowledge that my Honourable friend Dr. Khare has acted in a reasonable manner, both as an Indian and as a Member of Government, which would commend itself to the public. He called a meeting on the 7th of this month which he wanted to be very representative. Unfortunately the meeting did not prove to be as representative as he or others would have wished, but all the same it was a representative meeting on the whole. It is not for me to disclose what happened at that meeting but I am sure I can say this that this present measure is the result of the advice given in a very unequivocal, strong and definite manner to the Honourable Member by those who were present there. But the better course for Government would have been, instead of making a scapegoat of somebody else, to acknowledge this fact and say what has led Government to amplify and amend Act IX of 1943.

The Bill contains six or seven clauses but there are two main points on which we should be quite clear as to what our policy is going to be. One is the date on which this Bill would come into force. The original Bill gave power to notify a date when the provisions of the Bill would be put into force by [Sir F. E. James.] There was no possible shadow of doubt whatever about it. Those who gave that advice at that time I think were responsible for the unanimous verdict of the intelligent Members of this House recommending that the Bill as then amended be adopted. We need not waste time on the events of past history.

Here is a Bill which we regard this time will be workable. If not, the House will demand Dr. Khare's head on a charger and that with some justice.

An Honourable Member: They will send him to Ceylon.

Sir F. E. James: (But from my own reading it looks a very considerable improvement on the previous measure. But I am bound to say I feel embarrassed, when I remember coming away from the Select Committee after we had laboured many hours on the original Bill with the gratifying feeling that our duty had been done, only to find that we had made a mess of the thing and that we had misled the House into doing so.

It is a sad commentary on the position in the Empire today that a Bill of this nature should be considered necessary by this House, or by any Parliament in the Empire. In company with some Members of this House I recently paid a visit to the Middle East where we had the great privilege of visiting many of the Indian units which have been gaining for themselves great honour in the battlefields of Africa. We talked to many commanders of divisions and corps. We talked to the Commander-in-Chief of the Middle East. We talked to some of the Commanders in the Tripolitania area where the Eighth Army was fighting. We heard one unanimous view that the Indian units in the divisions in which they served were second to none, second to none of the Dominions, second to none of the other units from the different parts of the Empire which had taken part in these great and historic campaigns. That being so, what a tragedy it is that this House should be asked to enact a Bill with one intention, namely, to apply in a retaliatory manner those measures of discrimination in this country which are unfortunately imposed upon Indians in other parts of the Empire. I feel strongly that this method of approach to what is a difficult problem in certain parts of the Empire is not the right method and will never produce a lasting solution. We in our Party cannot complain of the desire of the House to place on the Statute-book a Bill of this character. At the same time we also feel equally strongly that the solution to these great imperial racial problems lies not in retaliation, not in provocation and subsequent retaliation, but in other methods under which the weapons that we are now placing in our hands are sheathed, and in their place consultation and conciliation are employed.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (Presidency Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): And supplication.

Sir F. E. James: While we are therefore at one with other Parties in the House in accepting the principles of this Bill and in seeing that it passes through its various stages in this House, we would like also to say here, and if we can make our voice heard in other parts of the Empire also that this is not the end of the matter and should not be the end of the matter, that if the Empire is to continue to exist as an association, a free association of peoples of different races, a solution must be found in a different way. No one can complain that Indian public opinion feels that it has been provoked too long and that it must take into its hands a method, the weapon of retaliation; still a solution will not be found in that way. Therefore, I hope that in the discussions on this Bill and possibly in the discussions on the Resolution concerning South Africa to-morrow or the day after, some of my colleagues will, with us, direct their attention to some other way in which possibly these difficult problems in the various parts of the Empire may be better solved and solved in a more lasting and satisfactory manner. Having said that, on behalf of my Party I support this Bill and hope that the House will pass it with unanimity.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman (Patna and Chota Nagpur cum Orissa: Muhammadan): I am glad that the Honourable Dr. Khare is bringing up this Bill at the time moment, although it is still late enough. I would not have intervened in this debate but for certain remarks which my Honourable friend, Sir Frederick James, made just now, and I must confess to a feeling of surprise that, in spite of the fact that he and his Party would support the Bill, he was rather reluctant in the support and he did not think that the approach was very correct.

Sir F. E. James: May I say I did not say that? I said that it would not provide a lasting solution.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: In his opinion this is not a solution and the method of retaliation might provoke the Governments of the Dominions and we may not prove sufficiently strong to impose our decisions on them or retaliate in the manner in which we would like to. I think the only deficiency which may be with us is that we are not as yet an independent nation, to compel others to give us the same treatment as we give them in this country. This Bill does not propose any very strong measures of retaliation but only says that we will try to treat those people in the same manner in which they give treatment to us in their parts of the Empire. I would just remind the House as to how we have been treated all along. We have been making requests not only to the Dominion Governments but also to His Majesty's Government to interfere in the matter and they never thought it necessary to do so, for their own reasons. I wonder whether this approach even will be of as much use as we would have liked it to be. I think that is the minimum we could do at this moment and I hope that this will at least convince the Dominion Governments that we are preparing ourselves to a stage where we may be compelled to adopt methods by way of legislation. With these few remarks, I support the present Bill.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, the first question that arises is whether we should or should not congratulate the new Member who is piloting this Bill. For my part, I would not be very enthusiastic at this moment but would wait and see what his policy is going to be. I put a specific question to him the other day asking what his policy would be. I pointed out to him that the policy of the Government has been most defective and suicidal to the interests of the nationals in South Africa and I also pointed out that up to now the Government has remained more or less impotent to help the nationals of India on this point. We read in the papers that even the Secretary of State, Mr. Amery, expressed that he and the British Government could not interfere in the matter. I put a question on that also and his reply to that was not definite. The Honourable Member said that he does not know that. We want a real remedy and, therefore, I have been asking the Overseas Member to adopt his own policy, because the other policy has failed. Therefore I think I would not admire his wisdom of pressing today that this Bill should be discussed. He should have waited till tomorrow's discussion and then he would have seen the imperfections in this Bill. Several matters will be suggested to him tomorrow and it would be in the fitness of things that they should be considered and then suitable modifications could be made in the Bill. It may be necessary then to ask the Chair to either waive the Standing Order or to allow sufficient time for further amendments to be made.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendments can be put in when the time comes. The Honourable Member can go on with his speech.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I am telling the Honourable Member that he is too hasty in asking us to discuss the Bill today.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have allowed the motion to be moved today.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I am conscious of that. I am telling him that he should not have asked for it.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member had better go on with his speech.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: The point that has to be considered is what has happened up to now and whose fault is it that the Bill which has been passed, namely, the Deshmukh Act

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member can continue his speech after Lunch.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): With respect to the business of the House from Monday next, for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday next week there will be a combined list of business comprising the outstanding legislative business of the Session, that is to say, any items on today's list which remain to be disposed of and the consideration and passing of the War Injuries Compensation Insurance Bill and the Delhi University Bill as reported by the Select Committee and also, subject to your consent, under the proviso to Standing Order 58, the Honourable the Commerce Member's Resolution recommending participation by Government in a contemplated scheme for the relief and rehabilitation of areas devastated by the war. On Thursday the war situation will be discussed on a formal motion by myself; and Friday, as Honourable Members are aware, has been allotted for non-official Resolutions. This will leave the Food debate outstanding. We understand that there is a general feeling that one day will be insufficient for the discussion of the food situation and I would ask you, Sir, to direct the Assembly to sit for the transaction of official business on Monday, the 9th and Tuesday, the 10th August. The business for these days will be any items on the list for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next week which are not disposed of on those days, followed by the Food debate; that is to say, the House will get two full days for the Food debate if the business for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next week is disposed of on those days, and otherwise two full days less the amount of time occupied in completing that business.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Mr. President, the Honourable the Leader of the House most probably has naturally suited his own convenience but I am afraid he has forgotten the very important fact that the Food problem is the most important problem to be discussed in this House. Legislation in my opinion is of secondary importance compared to the food problem. To have postponed the discussion of the food problem right to the end of the Session, in my humble opinion, is not doing justice either to Government or to this House and I would therefore suggest that the food problem should take precedence over all legislation and should be discussed as soon as possible. I would suggest that the food problem should be discussed on the 4th as was originally arranged. Legislation can wait. Let us get over this most important question. I would most respectfully urge that the Leader of the House should take this point into consideration.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: There would have been no objection at all but as we are allowing two days for the discussion of the food situation, that is the reason why we have fixed the 9th and 10th. Otherwise, if it is to be only one day, then our original proposal may stand but I am sure it is the wish of the House that the discussion should be for longer than one day.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Why not the 4th and 5th. Why should legislation take precedence over this very important question?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: Because I have made inquiries and it will be difficult to disarrange the plan for the discussion of the war situation. The secret session has been fixed for the 5th of August.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Then let the 3rd and 4th of August be fixed for considering the food situation.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I fear, so far as we are concerned, the utmost that we could do has been done by us. We want to have a full discussion of the food situation. But perhaps my Honourable friend wants that discussion to take place earlier and thus become free and go away. He does not want to take part in the legislative business.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: But that is no reason why the House should be kept waiting.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I direct on the desire of the Leader of the House that the Assembly shall sit on the 9th and 10th of August.

As regards the Resolution recommending participation by Government in a contemplated scheme for the relief and rehabilitation of areas devastated by the war, the Standing Order requires 15 days' notice. But under the circumstances I should be prepared to accept shorter notice if I do not find that it will interfere in any way with the convenience of the House.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the clock, Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) in the Chair.

THE RECIPROCITY (AMENDMENT) BILL—contd.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Before the House rose for Lunch, I was saying that this subject was very important and also a very vexed one. The Honourable Member for Overseas Department is more or less on his trial to show us what drastic measures he is going to take. The former Government failed to do anything. Though I greeted the Honourable Member from a distance, yet I knew him as my colleague on this side of the House. I also know that the Honourable Member will do justice to this matter. I have no doubt about that. It is a question on which, I must acknowledge that the Honourable Member has taken a good step in the very beginning. As soon as he has taken charge, he has taken the matter into his hands. This was the most important item of his portfolio. Having taken it, I was also glad to see that he called certain gentlemen interested in the matter in a conference and now he has introduced this Bill. Therefore from what I know of him and from his work when he was on this side of the House, I am certain that he will not leave this subject half done. He will try his best to see that what is necessary must be done, no matter if we are going to have retaliatory measures. Any measure which can help our nationals should be done by the British Government. Now, I will leave the matter there because we are going to hear so much about this tomorrow. Not only that, the Honourable Member will have to implement this Bill. There are many more points which will be brought to his notice tomorrow. He will have to consider all of them. He will have to use not only statutory powers but also executive powers. I hope whatever he can do, he will do.

With regard to the unworkable nature of the former Bill, I do not want to waste much of the time of the House. After all it is a matter which was done in good faith. I know it will be ungenerous and I think we will be ungrateful to Dr. Deshmukh who took the trouble of rousing the Government and forcing on them this Bill which the Government would not otherwise have cared to. In that respect I thank him very much and he also deserves the congratulations of this House. So far as the unworkability of the Bill is concerned, I do not agree. The Bill gave powers to the then Government to do what they could. If that Bill had been implemented and the rules had been made thereunder, by this time something would have been done. We know that the former Government were feeling that they could not do anything in the matter. So they were not taking up the matter in the manner in which they should have done wholeheartedly and find out some measures to meet the situation. Therefore, I should say at once that the former Act was not unworkable. If the Act had been implemented, we would have got many ways of meeting this question. But as the intention was not to work it out, therefore it was that they made no rules, they kept quiet until the Honourable Member has got into this Department and he has seen that the Bill should be implemented and something should be done. For that, we are also thankful again to the nationals outside who have been carrying on a persistent agitation from time to time and who have been rousing us. We have every sympathy for them. The officers and nothing was done. The Pegging Act was passed, the agitation was started and we were advised to sit quiet in times of war and not alienate the feelings of those whom we were helping. The people whom we were helping and for whose security we shed our blood should go on doing what they like and we should not mind it; we should go on helping them! This sort of philosophy of suffering comes down from Mahatma Gandhi and now from the Indian Government Members when it is a question of the welfare of Indians. It is simply shocking, it is a matter for surprise. After passing this Act the Union Government did not sit quiet; it carried on its policy of ousting and expelling the Indians from their residential houses and from the shops where they were carrying on their business. They went to this extent, that if any Indian formed a part of a corporation of which other European members were the partners . . .

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: On a point of order; all this can be said to-morrow.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I have said that I have congratulated you.

Sir, it is a good thing that my friend has brought this Bill. He would have been failing in his duty, when the South African Government had gone so far, if he sat quiet. Under the Pegging Act, they have started prosecutions. They do not allow the Indian any ease or rest. What excuse could this Government have had if they did not proceed in the matter? Dr. Khare would have been condemned by meetings from the public platform and the press. As I said in the very beginning, I was . . .

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member need not repeat what he has said.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I want to say what they could do and why some of the amendments should be accepted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The amendments will not be considered today.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Then, Sir, as I have said, it will be a good thing if the House supports the motion for consideration of this Bill.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): I rise to congratulate the Mover, the Honourable Dr. Khare. We must acknowledge that it is the first occasion on which the Government of India have risen to the occasion in time. This Bill has been on the anvil for more than two years and every time an attempt was made to bring it before the House, my friend Mr. Deshmukh was prevailed upon by the Treasury Benches not to move it, not to insist upon it. The excuses were that we were in the war, that Field-Marshal Smuts was very busy with the Prime Minister of Great Britain discussing the war situation in Africa, and that he was doing all he could for the war and that we must help him; consequently he did not press for the Bill. But things went the other way about. We were only concerned with the war and not the Field-Marshal and when we brought in this Bill we were told by the Treasury Benches that they were in full sympathy with us, and that we should pass it in a manner that would not give them any provocation lest I feel now that they feared that the Field-Marshal make a treaty with Germany. However, Sir, when this Bill came before this House we always believed that Government, as invariably they have been so far as overseas questions are concerned, would be in full sympathy with us. But I never believed that all throughout there was the same objection which kept the Bill from coming before the House for two years, viz., that this Bill should not go through or should not be effective during the war, or probably at any time.

The charge has been laid that the Bill is unworkable. We have been always very fortunate to have 90 per cent. gentlemen on the Treasury Benches who are eminent lawyers. It has always been the practice of the Government of India to have such men, who are supposed to be the intelligentsia of the people, and who are expected to be relied upon to indicate correctly what the sentiments of the people are and what they desire. Well, this Bill has passed through their hands as Treasury Benchers and I am sure because it involves a question of Indians overseas and of things beyond Government of India sufficient care was taken in the Executive Council as well to see that it did not provoke Field-Marshal Smuts and that at the same time something was done as an eye-wash to pacify Indian public opinion. I am really very sorry that under such circumstance the charge should have been framed against this House that it passed a Bill that was unworkable, in other words that it was eye-wash. My friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta said something about face powder. I do not know whether that was also at that time also very cheap and it was applied throughout as a white wash in this House. Whatever it is, our feelings are very bitter.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Central Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): I never said that face powder was applied by the Honourable Members of this House.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: It may be that somebody else did. But we feel very bitterly about it, since during the war when we show consideration for nearly two years, being deadly and mortally afraid of displeasing Field-Marshal Smuts, that on the other hand that very Field-Marshal passes laws after this law has been passed, and still our Government sits still until the public raised their protest and until we had an Honourable Member who fully sympathised with the people's aspirations. Then it was that this Bill has been now brought forward. We want an explanation to that.

Then, Sir, we are told that rule-making power has again to be given to the Government. My friend, Mr. Deshmukh has told us that we suspected, and we still suspect—and let my friend Dr. Khare take a real example from what has happened to this Bill if he is really acting according to the wishes of the people of the country, and I hope that he will make proper provision for rule making and the rules will come into force as soon as possible.

With these words, Sir, I once more congratulate Dr. Khare of being able to realize with the people of this country from one end to the other—not the little conference that we had; it was a formal conference and quite nice; I was one of the members—that during the war when our Government has kept us out for over 2 years from doing anything with regard to this matter and when Field-Marshal Smuts is now attacking us irrespective of the condition of the war and treating us like pariahs, that something should be done without any further delay.

Sir F. E. James (Madras: European): Sir, the introduction of this Bill illustrates two very valuable facts. The first is that even the most intelligent of men can be misled into making mistakes; and the second is that this House is always able to correct any sins of omission or commission of which it may have been guilty.

I do not congratulate my Honourable friend, Dr. Khare, on this Bill, because he is only doing what he should have done. If this Bill is passed praise should go to my Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, who was really responsible for fostering a measure based on principles to which this House has agreed. I was a little surprised when I learnt that the Bill that this House passed on a previous occasion was in fact unworkable. A number of intelligent Members of this House sat for some time and considered the previous Bill and they signed a unanimous Select Committee Report. The last sentence of that Report reads:

"We think that the Bill has not been so altered as to require republication and we recommend that it be passed as now amended."

Naturally the House would accept a report of that kind. What the Committee should have said was: "We think that the Bill as now amended is unworkable: we recommend that it should be thrown out of the window." Therefore the House is certainly not to blame in assuring that the Select Committee had considered the Bill and found that it was workable. I do remember, I cannot go into the discussions of the Select Committee obviously, that the point as to the workability of this Bill was raised at a certain stage in our discussions and that we were assured on the best available authority that the authorities there in South Africa have all been against our nationals. I submit that the former Bill could have been worked. But that is past now. What this Bill wants now is this. Clause 5 substitutes a new section for section 6 of Act IX of 1943. It says:

"The Central Government may, by notification in the official gazette, make rules for carrying out the purposes of this Act."

This is again a power that is being given to the Government and the only consolation we will have is that the Honourable Member is in a mood to see that the rules are carried out. That is the only consolation we have. From past history we are disappointed. Even the former section gave power to the Government to make rules. Now the rules which are to be made are "in particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, rules made under this section". The Rules will provide:

"(a) for the setting up of machinery to ascertain the disabilities in respect of any of the matters specified in section 3 to which persons of Indian origin are subject in any British possession."

Now this could have been done before. Not that there was any statutory impediment in doing that. They could have passed this rule. The second provision is:

"for the establishment of a suitable agency to administer the rules and for defining its functions and powers."

This also could have been done by the former Government. The third provision is:

"for specifying the disabilities that shall, when a direction has been made under section 3 be imposed in British India on persons not being of Indian origin who are domiciled in any British possession and for the imposition on them of the disabilities so specified".

Now, Sir, this also could have been done departmentally. Of course a specific provision is being made in clause 5, with regard to the condition of those domiciled in the British possession who are members of the armed force. For them power is being asked to be given and we have no objection to that. Therefore these rules, I submit, may be made but we do not agree that these are the only rules to be made. There may be other suggestions tomorrow and other rules may have to be made. We want to strengthen the hands of the Honourable Member so that this subject may be properly dealt with.

Then, Sir, I will only refer to what Sir Frederick James said with regard to other measures that should be adopted. I agree with him that if this matter can be settled in a compromising and conciliatory spirit that would be best for both countries. But we know the facts and the facts are that they are immovable on this point. The authorities there do not care for anything and every day they are passing their Acts to the prejudice of our countrymen. We have on our part tried the method of conciliation and when we fail in that we are forced to adopt this retaliatory measure, and the Honourable Member also sees no other alternative but to pass this Bill. In the end I wish to point out that the measure should not be such as to be unworkable but should be thorough and complete.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Sir, I rise to support this Bill but in doing so I should like to sound a note of warning of the actual position in which India stands. This is not a new question. It has agitated public opinion in this country for the last 30 or 35 years. We have had debates in this House on the question of the treatment of Indians in South Africa on more than one occasion. Now things have unfortunately come to a crisis in war time. I was hoping that if the South African Government felt that it was necessary to take further steps against the Indians in South Africa they would have had the patriotism and common sense to wait till after the war. But they have thought otherwise and I consider their action against Indians during war as unpatriotic to the commonwealth of nations of which they are members and, according to General Smuts, proud to be members. But we must not forget the very difficult position in which India is placed and I should like to emphasise the ineffectiveness of this Bill. To me it appears merely a gesture of resentment. We will pass it but what is the effect of it going to be? We can have gestures of resentment in other ways; there have been public meetings throughout India and what is much more important is that throughout the period of agitation during the last 35 years we have had the support of the Government of India from the time of Lord Hardinge. This is one of those questions on which India is practically agreed; all sections of public thought are agreed and Government are agreed. What other steps can we forge to bring South Africans to their senses? This Bill provides for rules to be made by Government the result of which would be the same treatment to South Africans in India that they mete out to Indians in South Africa. That is the long and short of this Bill. I am told there are one hundred South Africans in India as against hundreds of thousands of Indians in South Africa. Suppose we did impose the strictest restrictions on these hundred South Africans, is it going to have the slightest effect on South Africa? These one hundred South Africans will leave India; they are connected, I am told, with one business firm in Calcutta and they will just wind up and go away. Some may remain under the plea that they are Englishmen but all admittedly South Africans will leave the country. What is the effect of that going to be?

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, may I interrupt the Honourable Member just for a minute? It seems to me that his remarks are based on the assumption that this Bill is going to be used against South Africans. I wonder if he has got any assurance from Government or from the Honourable Member in charge to that effect, because that would very much simplify matters and enable us to understand the position.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: I am not doubting the honesty of Government, specially when we have Dr. Khare with his previous history behind him as the Member in charge. I take it that Government will make full use of this Bill and will do all that they can to see that India does exert her very best efforts to bring South Africa to her senses. And the past history of Government's actions show that we need not doubt that position.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): We should doubt it.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Why should we doubt it? Here is Dr. Khare who has brought forward this Bill and who is going to make these rules, and there is my Honourable friend the Nawabzada and others to see that these rules are as effective as they possibly can be.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: If we were in a position to see that there would be no necessity for rules.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: I wish that was true and that we had real Swaraj, and my friend the Nawabzada was on the Treasury Benches to take such action as would bring South Africa to its knees. But I doubt whether we will be in that position because India is in a difficult situation. India has thousands of her people in South Africa but there are only a hundred South Africans here. And India's relations with South Africa are of such a character that if any reprisals are thought of, the damage will be much greater to India than to South Africa. I am of opinion that the only method of bringing South Africa to her senses is trade retaliation. Treating the hundred South Africans in some way or another is not going to be of much use, but the only method which will make them wake up and think is trade retaliation. And there one has got to consider who is going to be damaged more, India or South Africa? And that is the only effective manner in which South Africa or any other country in this materialistic age can be brought to its senses.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan (East Central Punjab: Muhammadan): Is not the Honourable Member somewhat too optimistic? India is a part of the British Empire and South Africa is part of the British Commonwealth. There is difference between Empire and Commonwealth, and India cannot retaliate.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Human nature does not change, do what you like. It is your strong arm that is going to be effective. No amount of words on public platforms, no amount of words in this Assembly is going to be of any use. It is your strong arm, and the only manner in which you can show your strong arm is, as far as I can see by trade retaliation. I am of course expressing my own opinion.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: You are in favour of violence.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Yes, always. I am not in favour of non-violence. I do not believe in it because it is against human nature, and I do not believe in non-violence because Providence made violence. Providence gave my friend, Dr. Banerjee, two hands to use; God gave my friend, Dr. Banerjee, a tongue to speak, and he gave him two legs not only to walk but to kick, and what Providence did no man is going to undo. When my Honourable friend, Dr. Banerjee, was a baby and something was done which he did not like, what did he do? I bet he used his hands first and his teeth when they began to grow. That is what Providence did and no man on earth is going to undo it. It is no use talking to me about non-violence. I definitely say that if I could use violence against South Africa I would do it, provided it will not go against our countrymen there.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): No more discussion about non-violence please.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Sir, I was interrupted by a member of your own Party. If you will kindly stop him from interrupting me.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): You have already said enough about non-violence.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Sir, I am quite prepared to go in for violence if it is going to be effective, but I am not going to do so if it is going to do harm to my own countrymen. In regard to trade relations, we have hundreds of thousands of our countrymen there and, unfortunately, we cannot go in for such measures as we would like to without doing them harm. Therefore, we are in a very difficult position. I say to the Honourable Members, with a full sense of responsibility, that when this Bill is passed, it will merely be a gesture of resentment; they should not expect too much from it and from the rules that may be framed under it, because it is the intrinsic position of India vis-a-vis South Africa that is difficult. But the time may come, and I hope and pray that it will be not far distant, when India will be strong enough, powerful enough to make its words more effective than they are today, words behind which there is a real sanction, words which will carry with it the weight that they deserve to carry coming from a country with a population of four hundred millions. That position has not been attained today and, God willing, it may be attained if our countrymen choose that it shall be attained, but not as they are going on today because in that way those days will never come. But if our countrymen choose that they shall come by unity, by genuine strength—then we will have our say with South Africa on equal terms, and not till that day. And, therefore, I warn the House not to attach too much importance to gestures of resentment like these.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, I must say that I am feeling a debt of gratitude for the kind references made to me before this House from all sides. So much so that my Honourable friend, the Member from Sind, also paid me in his afternoon speech great credit for my action in introducing this Bill. In the morning, before lunch, he definitely said that he did not want to congratulate me but when he comes after lunch he forgets what he said in the morning. I think, the lunch did the trick.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Was it better sense, or no sense?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Absence. But, Sir, although I thank the Members from the bottom of my heart, I neither deserve any credit nor do I claim it. The whole credit for acceptance of the principle of reciprocity by this House goes to the Honourable Member from Nagpur, Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh and I give it to him. At the same time, the credit for bringing this Bill before the House so quickly goes to the Government.

Sir: Government is blamed always when things are done slowly; it is said that it is a slow bureaucratic machinery. And, Sir, as was seen in the morning, when things are done very quickly—for we gave just three days notice for bringing forward this Bill—we are also taken to task for not giving sufficient time, so much so that obstructions were raised for its passage from some quarters.

Generally, on this Bill no adverse comments have so far been made, and there is no time to make them now, I believe, and that shows that the Bill is good. A Member, I do not see him in his seat now, when he rose up to speak in his formidable manner, in his grave manner, and words began to fall from his lips in a slow measured tone and in a deliberate manner and he began to make grave charges against the Government, my heart began to freeze within myself. I thought before long I would be converted into ice-cream! But, Sir, ultimately I found that in spite of all his formidable manner there was no substance in his charge. He let down from his lips some words as 'objectionable', 'dubious' and 'that Government should make clean breast of it'. But there is nothing of which the Government have to make clean breast of; they have been quite straightforward and frank. As far as I know, the assent of the Viceroy was received sometime in the 1st week of April. It is July now and it is the first Session after that and if Government brings forward a measure to correct the inaccuracies in the Act as quickly as that, I think the Government ought not to be blamed for it, but should be given credit for it.

Sir, much was said about the attitude of the Government towards the original measure of which this Bill is an amendment. Some said that the Select Committee was to blame and some said that the House was to blame. I think that in this matter nobody is to blame at all. If any reflection is to be made against anybody it is against human frailty. We are all human both in the Government as well as in the Assembly.

Sir, doubts have been raised on the floor of the House about the efficacy of the Bill. I grant that. There is no doubt that if the Bill is passed it will make no impression. It is patent to anybody. Emphasis has also been laid on the fact that retaliation should not be made a weapon for a permanent solution of this vexed problem. I grant that. After all, it is proper to say that questions arise between man and man and country and country which by representation and conciliation could be settled. But if all these things fail, then what would my Honourable friend suggest in place of retaliation? May I ask him whether submission is always the way and what should be done after negotiation and representation have failed? I hope that things might change and that the tempest which has arisen might settle down. I do not know. The future alone can say.

Some misgivings have been expressed by certain Honourable Members about the honesty of Government. My Honourable friend, Mr. Deshmukh, said that when the Government allowed this Bill to be passed in the last Session it was dishonest.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I said it was either stupid or dishonest. I did not say it was stupid.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: That is the Honourable member's opinion. But Government has not been dishonest. I say when the Government took the first opportunity they could take to remedy the defect, I think it is not dishonesty at all, but it is rectitude, or promptitude if I may say so.

Amendments have been moved to compel the Government to do certain things specifically and within a certain time. There should be no necessity for it. I am sure we will frame the rules as soon as possible. Nobody should have misgivings about it.

I think I should not speak much more on this point and I commend the motion for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The question is:

"That the Bill to amend the Reciprocity Act, 1943, be taken into consideration."
The motion was adopted.

[Mr. J. D. Tyson.]

and of the trader and of the public and which we think will also be particularly useful for any expansion of the export trade of India after the war, can in the long run only take place if quality control is to an increasing extent self-supporting. The Government are prepared to bear the cost of quality control for so long as the graded commodity is establishing itself in the market but once the graded commodity has established itself in the market as a graded commodity and is valued by the public, because they know that they are getting a commodity of guaranteed purity and guaranteed standard, we feel that the further development of grading with respect to that commodity and the maintenance of grading with respect to that commodity should be borne by the commodity itself, setting free Government money for the application of marking and grading to other commodities.

The House will, I hope, appreciate that this is simply enabling legislation that I am moving at the moment, and, in asking the Legislature to amend the Act to give Government power to recover these charges, I wish to repeat on the floor of the House the principles by which Government intend to be guided in imposing the levy on any particular commodity at present subject, or later to be made subject, to the Agmark system. I repeat that we recognise that the graded product must be given time to establish itself in the market. We, therefore, propose, as the Statement of Objects and Reasons says, to recover the cost of quality control only in the case of commodities the grading of which has so established itself that there is a steady demand for the graded products; and, in such a case we propose to fix the rates of recovery in consultation with the trade concerned and to fix rates sufficient only to cover the expenditure incurred by Government on quality control. In other words, we do not intend to fix rates to make a profit for Government. We have consulted Provincial Governments and the principle of the proposal has been almost unanimously accepted by them.

The House will see that the amendment also covers recoveries for publicity carried out for any particular Agmark commodity. Publicity of this kind is not normally the function of Government and we would not propose to undertake it unless the particular trade interested in the commodity in question, perhaps having no organised publicity of its own, agreed generally to central publicity on behalf of a particular Agmark commodity or group of commodities. We do not want to butt in where people have their own publicity organisation but we thought it might be useful to take power to assist in publicity for individual commodities if the trade concerned considers it to be helpful.

In conclusion, I would remind the House that of the various classes of commodities covered by the schedule to the parent Act only some are at present subject to the Agmark system, the system of grading and marking. The trades concerned, the producers and dealers, will of course be consulted before the Act is applied to any of the remaining commodities in the Schedule. That is the existing practice and there is no intention of departing from it. Even when a commodity is brought within the system of grading and marking, the employment of the Agmark system is entirely voluntary for the producers or the traders in that particular commodity. No one is compelled to grade or mark his product merely because we make the Act applicable to that particular product. Finally, the recovery which we now seek power to make will be made only from those producers or dealers who voluntarily come into the Agmark system in respect of the commodity in question. There is no question of a compulsory levy on the trade as a whole or a compulsory levy on all commodities that are graded under the Act. We shall treat each commodity separately as occasion arises and I would add that the safeguard that exists for the dealers in any particular trade is that we can only hope to recover the costs of quality control if the article that is graded can bear the extra burden. Sir, I move.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Motion moved.

"That the Bill further to amend the Agricultural Produce (Grading and Marking) Act, 1937, be taken into consideration."

Mr. E. L. O. Gwilt (Bombay: European): I shall be grateful if the Honourable Member will give me some information, or a little more information, about the amount of money which is going to be spent in publicity. He has made it clear that the Bill is to enable Government to recompense themselves for money spent on publicity in respect of a particular agricultural product and I would like to ask him whether that means that if eggs, for instance, are going to be "Agmarked", it is those people who voluntarily offer their eggs for marking and grading that will pay for the publicity in respect of their own particular product. I take it that there is no intention of treating it as a general overhead amongst all the agricultural producers who are contributors to the scheme.

The other point is also in respect of publicity. Government, I believe, spends money on advertising the name "Agmark" itself, not necessarily on any particular product. I would like to hear from the Honourable Member how the money is to be recovered on an advertising scheme of that nature.

The third point is in respect of Inspectors. The Bill, or rather the Act, provides for Inspectors and I shall be grateful if the Honourable Member will tell me how these Inspectors are appointed and how in practice they have carried out their duties.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): In the Statement of Objects and Reasons, it is stated that the expenditure falls under two heads, namely, expenditure in connection with the preparation of labels and expenditure on the supervision of grading. Further on I find that another expenditure is mentioned, that is the testing of samples. This is also the third object under this head. Is it meant to be a sort of a cess or a new tax on the consumers as I know that every tax or cess that has been levied by the Government falls ultimately on the consumers. The traders do not care for such taxes at all. They know that ultimately they can raise the prices and there will be no difficulty for them. Besides, is the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research not competent to deal with this question and to take up the expenditure? The Government of India and the public are to a certain extent a sort of subscribers. So, why this new cess or tax is being proposed under this Act? I am afraid it is a sort of back-door income which the Government wants to have again from the consumers. There is nothing more that I have to say now, but when we come to clauses I may have something to say. I repeat that this cess or tax should not be in the form as is mentioned in the Statement of Objects and Reasons so that the public may be saddled by it.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Sir, may I ask two questions? In the first place, agriculture is a provincial subject and I wish to know whether the Provincial Governments will be associated with the work of administering this Act. Secondly, this Act will affect agriculturists, traders and consumers. Will the representatives of agriculturists, traders and consumers be associated with the work of administering this Act? These are two questions on which I wish to have information.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, I am grateful to Honourable Members who have intervened in the debate to ask questions designed to clear up the position. I will do my best to answer them. I understand Mr. Gwilt's question to be whether the money which will be collected under this amended Act for publicity will be devoted to publicity for Agmark products as a whole or will be confined to publicity for specific commodities. The answer is that publicity for Agmark, such as one sees in posters or which one did see before the paper shortage discouraged them, is done by the Marketing Department. It is not proposed to make any recovery from the trade on that account. What we had in mind—and it is a matter that may never arise—was that if some particular trade, not very well organised, wanted to come under the Agmark Act and said that they wanted some publicity for their commodity, then the Central Government would be prepared to help them on a "no cost" basis to Government. They would get the benefit of all the publicity that the Government does for Agmark products as a whole, but if it came to a question of doing special publicity for one commodity—let us say eggs as eggs have been quoted—if it came to a question of doing special publicity for Agmark eggs, then the trade concerned would finance that publicity and Government would not themselves launch publicity

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Asoka Kumar Roy (Law Member): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, be taken into consideration."

The case for the Bill is fully explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. Honourable Members are aware that British Indian Courts have frequent occasion to issue commissions for the examination of witnesses residing in Indian States. Such commissions are issued to the Political Agent for the State concerned. As the law stands at present the Political Agent is required to execute the commission himself or to have it executed by an officer subordinate to him. The Political Agent and his officers have no power to compel the attendance of any witness and the co-operation of the Darbars is not always forthcoming. Even when the witness is ready to appear, much inconvenience is caused when the witness happens to reside at a distance from the headquarters of the Political Officer.

In these circumstances Political Officers on occasions send commissions to a State Court for execution. This practice has no legal authority and evidence taken on commission by a State Court is not legally admissible in the British India Courts. Honourable Members realise that such a state of affairs is undesirable and should not continue. The present Bill proposes to empower the Political Agent to forward a commission issued to him by a British Indian Court for execution by a State Court recognised by the Crown Representative for this purpose. The Bill does not render the Political Agent incompetent to execute the commission himself or through a subordinate of his own. It merely renders legally available the alternative of sending the commission for execution by a State Court recognised for the purpose. Honourable Members will have observed in the Statement of Objects and Reasons that a similar Bill which was introduced in and passed by the Council of State in 1921 evoked some opposition in the Assembly and was allowed to lapse. I ought to tell Honourable Members some of the facts regarding the previous Bill.

That Bill was introduced on the 19th September, 1921, in the Council of State and was passed by the Council of State. The matter came before the Legislative Assembly on a motion for consideration of the Bill as passed by the Council of State. On that occasion there was opposition by Sir Hari Singh Gour and he took two points. He raised the question as to the procedure which would be followed by a State Court in executing the commission, and he further raised the question as to how a witness giving false evidence on a commission executed by the State Court could be dealt with. As to the first point, it is quite clear that the matter would be regulated by the law of the State and I have no doubt that in all States whose Courts are found to merit recognition by the Crown Representative for the purpose in view the same procedure would be followed as obtains in British India. On the second point, the false witness would be punishable by the State Court in accordance with the law of the State. I cannot feel that any legitimate objection to the Bill can be based on either of these points. I should emphasise that this is merely an enabling provision. A Commission for the examination of witnesses is a matter in the discretion of the Courts. Examination of witnesses on commission is an exceptional procedure necessitated by the desire on the part of the Legislature to promote the ends of justice. When you have commissions for the examination of witnesses residing within the jurisdiction of a State, you necessarily must be to some extent in the hands of the State Courts. Honourable Members are aware that commissions out of jurisdiction are as much known to English law as to the Indian, and I do not think that the evidence of a witness recorded out of jurisdiction is inadmissible merely because the foreign court has a procedure of its own or because the court issuing such a commission cannot touch the witness so examined if he is found at the trial to have perjured or prevaricated. Honourable Members are all aware that the examination of a witness on commission can never be as satisfactory as examination in court. But all countries recognise the desirability of having commissions for examination of witnesses outside their jurisdiction. All countries recognise the difficulty caused by a material witness being in such a place that his attendance cannot be compelled by a court. It is then that a commission for the examination of the witness becomes necessary. Honourable Members who have read the Bill and the Statement of Objects and Reasons will realise that this Bill is really intended to facilitate the examination of witnesses on commission—witnesses who reside in Indian States and who cannot be compelled to come to the British Indian courts for the purpose of giving evidence. With these words I move. I ought to mention that I have received to-day notice of an amendment for reference of this Bill to a Select Committee. I may say that I am prepared to accept the amendment if the House so desires, so that all questions which might be raised by Honourable Members could be thoroughly examined and thrashed out in the Select Committee. Notice of the amendment was received by me to-day but I am making no point of it. I am prepared to accept it if it is allowed to be moved. That is all I have to say.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, be taken into consideration."

As no objection is taken, I allow the amendment to be moved.

Mr. H. A. Sathar H. Essak Sait (West Coast and Nilgiris: Muhammadan): Since no objection has been taken, you will permit me to move my amendment even though the notice is not within time. I move:

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable the Law Member, Sir George Spence, Sardar Sant Singh, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj, Mr. P. J. Griffiths, Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang, Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali and the Mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the committee shall be five."

Since this amendment has been accepted by the Government I need not dwell at length on the necessity or the need for moving this amendment. The Statement of Objects and Reasons states that a similar Bill was introduced in this House in 1921 and that the House was not in a mood to pass it as it was introduced. The Bill then lapsed. Surely, when the Government were introducing a Bill in this House which formerly had been negatived by this House or this House had not accepted, they should have given us time to consider the Bill very carefully, but I am sorry that Government made this motion for consideration straight away. However, they have seen wisdom and are agreeing to Select Committee. Therefore I move.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The question is:

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable the Law Member, Sir George Spence, Sardar Sant Singh, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj, Mr. P. J. Griffiths, Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang, Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali and the Mover, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

THE AGRICULTURAL PRODUCE (GRADING AND MARKING) AMENDMENT BILL.

Mr. J. D. Tyson (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands)

Sir, I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Agricultural Produce (Grading and Marking) Act, 1937, be taken into consideration."

In commending this short Bill to the House I have little to add to what has been said in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. The principal object of the Bill is to ensure that Government have power to make recoveries in suitable cases, from the trade concerned, of the cost of "quality control", that is to say, cost of sample-taking and testing. Control of this kind is very necessary in the interests of the public and in the interests of the dealers under the "Agmark" system. At present expenditure on quality control is borne entirely by the Central Government and there is no power to recover cost of quality control from the trade concerned even where the trade is willing to bear the cost. The expansion of the Agmark system, that is to say, the system of grading and marking agricultural produce, which we think is in the interests of the producer for that purpose but would have to work with the people who deal in that commodity and draw up a scheme of publicity with them and agree with them as to the cost of such a scheme. And I may take this opportunity of saying that in administering the Agmark Act Government are very dependent upon the co-operation of the trade in each commodity. Without that co-operation and without our arranging the grading and standardization and the rules, to fit the views of the trade, we could not possibly expect anyone to participate in exploiting the Agmark system. We cannot get on without the co-operation of the trade in each commodity that comes up under the system. So the answer, I think, to Mr. Gwilt on that point is that we do not at present recover the cost of publicity for Agmark as a whole from any trade at all and we do not propose to do so. Only if those connected with some individual commodity approach Government, then we will arrange a scheme with them and recover the cost.

As regards the inspecting staff for carrying out quality control, arrangements differ naturally with the different commodities. We want different kinds of staff for dealing with Ghee, perhaps, than we want to deal with fruits. Then, again, it is not only a matter of the inspecting staff but very often you require laboratory staff as well. I can say straight away that as regards laboratory staff we naturally have duly qualified chemists and duly qualified assistants. The qualifications of Inspectors differ. I have only got details about one set of Inspectors. Those who inspect sann hemp. There are seven of them and the basic qualification is a degree plus experience and knowledge of fibres and they work under a Chief Inspector. I may say generally, with regard to the quality control of Agmark, that we have had no complaints about the quality of the Inspectors. We have had some complaints that there are not enough of them and that is one of the reasons why we should like to have more money,—to have more Inspectors to assist in this control.

Then, Mr. Azhar Ali seemed a little doubtful about the kinds of expenditure that there are. There is already some very small expenditure recovered from the commodities that come under the scheme, such as the cost of the labels that are pasted on the graded product to show that it is an Agmark product and what its grade is and the cost of the stencils and apparatus required for making these labels. That is already provided for in section 3(f) of the Rules and is recovered. Over and above that we have to incur expense on staff and equipment to take samples and test them: and if we are approached by the trade in any particular commodity, then they must bear the cost of doing publicity for the Agmark products of that commodity. I am afraid it is not practicable to expect the I. C. A. R. to bear this expenditure. The funds of the I. C. A. R. are intended for financing research. This has gone beyond the stage of research. I may say also that this is not an attempt to get what Mr. Azhar Ali called "a back-door income" for Government. I have already said that Government do not wish to make money out of quality control. They only wish to see a source of supply for expanding it in future without calling on Central Revenues. Otherwise, we fear that the desired expansion of the Agmark system will be hampered.

Finally, Sir, Dr. Banerjee asked me whether Provincial Governments would be concerned in the administration of this Act. It is a Central Act but we shall certainly hope to have, as we have at present, the assistance of Provincial Marketing officers in helping with quality control. Dr. Banerjee asked me one other question, namely whether representatives of the producers and the traders will be associated in the administration of the Act. Well, I think I have answered that already. They must certainly be associated. People who produce a commodity are associated from the very beginning of the administration of the Agmark Act in respect of any commodity because, to put it briefly, we cannot move a step without their assistance. We do not make the Act applicable to any of the scheduled commodities until we have got a pretty fair agreement among the dealers in the trade concerned that it is a desirable and practicable thing. When we are going to extend the Act to a new commodity, we first of all say, "Will you come along and meet us and advise us as to the grades of the commodity that we should set up and the standards we should demand for the various grades?" And really, from first to last, we have to carry the trade with us.

Dr. F. N. Banerjee: What about the consumers?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Well, I do not know how we can associate the consumers with it. We publish rules for objection and I suppose the consumers can put in their objections and they will certainly be considered. The consumers, of course, stand to gain by the application of grading, for then they will have an article the purity of which is guaranteed.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Now, Sir, the I. C. A. R., has got a big staff for grading and marking of different commodities, it has also a very big office in the Provinces too. Will it not be convenient to transfer this work to them so that no more expenses may fall and the cost may not be realised from the public?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: No, Sir. As I said before, the province of I. C. A. R., as the name itself denotes, is research: and besides, we envisage grading and marking as destined ultimately to cover almost the whole of the production of India and the cost of quality control when things reach that stage will be far beyond anything which could be financed from I. C. A. R. funds.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The question is: "That the Bill further to amend the Agricultural Produce (Grading and Marking) Act, 1937, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN ARMY AND INDIAN AIR FORCE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. C. M. Trivedi (Secretary: War Department): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, and the Indian Air Force Act, 1932, be taken into consideration."

Sir, this is a simple and uncontroversial measure, and its purpose is explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. Clauses 2 and 3, and 6 and 7 amend the Indian Army Act and the Indian Air Force Act on the lines of the amendment in 1942 of the English Army Act and the English Air Force Act. Under section 50 of the Indian Army Act and section 26 of the Indian Air Force Act, only a court-martial has the power of ordering a penal deduction from the pay of an officer where loss, damage or destruction has been occasioned by the commission of an offence. Clauses 2 and 6 extend this power to the authority dealing summarily with a charge against that officer of an offence. The amendment will place officers subject to the Indian Army Act and the Indian Air Force Act on the same footing as officers subject to the Army Act and the Air Force Act.

Under section 86 of the Indian Army Act and section 91 of the Indian Air Force Act a person charged only with attempted desertion can be found guilty of desertion. We do not consider that this is fair, and following the amendment of the English Acts, clauses 3 and 7 provide that a man charged with attempted desertion cannot be found guilty of the substantive offence of desertion.

Section 103 of the Indian Army Act and section 108 of the Indian Air Force Act already provide for the substitution by the commuting authority in court-martial cases of a valid for an invalid sentence. It is desirable that a similar provision should exist as regards findings. Clauses 4 and 8 therefore provide for the substitution of a valid for an invalid finding.

[Mr. C. M. Trivedi.]

Sections 114 and 115 of the Indian Army Act make certain provisions for the disposal of property of deceased persons. Section 116 at present extends only the provisions of section 114 to the case of lunatics and persons missing on active service. It is desirable that the provisions of section 115 should also be extended to lunatics and persons missing on active service. Clause 5 provides for this. Clause 10 makes a similar provision in the Indian Air Force Act.

When the Indian Army and Air Force (Military Prisons, and Detention Barracks) Act, 1943, Act XIV of 1943, was in passage through the Legislature in March last, the necessity for amending section 116 of the Indian Air Force Act was overlooked. Clause 9, which provides for the communication of certain orders to officers in-charge of Military and Air Force prisons, repairs that omission. Sir, I move:

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, and the Indian Air Force Act, 1932, be taken into consideration."

Mr. H. A. Sathar H. Essak Sait (West Coast and Nilgris: Muhammadan): My Honourable friend has been very scanty in the information that he has given us just now. I should like to have some elucidation of clause 8 where he says the substitution of a valid finding or sentence for an invalid finding or sentence is provided. He just read out those words and said nothing in explanation thereof. I hope that when he comes to deal with the clauses he will just explain what he means by them.

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: If the Honourable Member reads clause 8 he will find the meaning very clear. An invalid finding is one which cannot be supported by facts or law, and this clause provides for the substitution of a valid finding for an invalid finding by a commuting authority.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, and the Indian Air Force Act, 1932, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clayuses 2 to 10 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): Sir, as the Honourable the Finance Member has fallen ill he cannot move the motion which stands in his name.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 30th July, 1943.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Friday, the 30th July, 1943.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ALLOTMENT OF WAGONS FOR COAL AND FOOD GRAINS SUPPLY TO CERTAIN PLACES.

115. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Honourable Member for War Transport be pleased to state in detail and lay on the table a statement regarding the allotment of wagons for coal supply from the coal fields of Jheria and Ranigunj to Delhi and Bengal, during April, May, June and upto 26th July, 1943?

(b) Did the Honourable Member receive complaints about the scarcity or inadequate supply of coal to Delhi and Bengal during these months, and was coal sold at controlled rates in Delhi and Calcutta and neighbouring districts?

(c) What number of wagons were allotted for transport of wheat, bajra and rice from the Punjab, United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa, to Bengal and other provinces, and what quantity of these commodities was transported, province by province, during these months?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) A statement is laid on the table giving the allotments of wagons distributed under the Provincial Quota Scheme to Bengal and the Punjab including Delhi, during April, May and June, 1943. I have not readily available the figures for Delhi month by month in detail.

(b) Yes. Coal was sold at the controlled rate in Delhi, and generally at this rate in Calcutta, where a few cases were reported of rates higher than the controlled rate being charged.

(c) Wagons are not allotted for food grains as they are for coal. Railways were asked to concentrate on movement of food grains, but the actual number of wagons which carried these grains from different provinces to Bengal during the months mentioned are not readily available and cannot be ascertained without undue labour and trouble.

Statement.

No. of wagons allotted under the Provincial Quota System to the Provinces of Bengal and the Punjab (including Delhi).

	Bengal.	Punjab (including Delhi).
April 1943	1,082	240
May 1943	1,739	533
June 1943	2,241	406

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know from the Honourable Member if it is a fact that wagons have been allotted for race-course horses from Bombay to other places?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Race-course traffic has been curtailed and distance limited.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if it is a fact that the restrictions put upon the movement of race-course horses through wagons are very nominal and wagons are still given for that purpose?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The instructions are that wagons should not be given for that purpose if it interferes with any other important traffic.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: With reference to part (b) of the question, did the Honourable Member receive complaints about the scarcity of coal?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have had complaints.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member whether there is an adequate number of wagons available now and also whether there is an adequate quantity of coal?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: There are inadequate raisings of coal in fields outside the Bihar and Bengal coal fields. There are difficulties in getting an adequate number of wagons for the transportation of coal from the Bihar and Bengal coal fields.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if the Honourable Member possesses a sufficient number of wagons to be able to allot them to the people when they ask for them?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I may inform the Honourable Member that the scarcity of wagons still persists.

RECRUITMENT OF TEMPORARY ENGINEERS ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

116. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Further to unstarred question No. 49 and answers thereto in the Legislative Assembly on the 15th March, 1943, will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state if suitably qualified Civil Engineers, as required under the conditions of the advertisement were available in the subordinate ranks of the Railway?

(b) Is it a fact that men of the required or even higher qualifications already in Railway service were barred from open selection and non-experienced officers were appointed?

(c) Why were these temporary Engineers not recruited through the Federal Public Service Commission?

(d) Is it a fact that condition No. 3 of the advertisement stated that the possession of practical experience would be desirable? If so, why were the qualified Civil Engineers in the subordinate ranks of the Railway, who had practical experience ignored?

(e) Was it laid down in the advertisement that a higher initial salary not exceeding Rs. 450 per mensem would be allowed to any candidate holding special qualifications and practical experience? Was any consideration given by the Selection Board or the General Manager to the appointment of any person on higher pay?

(f) How many men were recruited on the initial salary of Rs. 350 per mensem after three months' training, and how many were recruited on a higher initial salary not exceeding Rs. 450 per mensem?

(g) Is it not a fact that some Civil Engineers who had not been confirmed in the Subordinate Cadre, actually applied for these posts, but they were not considered?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) I understand there are subordinates on the N. W. Railway with the academic qualifications prescribed.

(b) The selection was confined to persons not in Railway service.

(c) It was not considered necessary as these were temporary appointments; the Federal Public Service Commission concurred in this view.

(d) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, it was considered advisable to fill these posts by outside recruitment as the men in service were not suitable.

(e) The answer to both parts is in the affirmative.

(f) Five and none.

(g) I understand that the two subordinates who applied held permanent posts in the subordinate cadre. They were not considered as it was decided to fill all the posts by outside recruitment.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: With reference to part (f), may I know how many of them were Muslims, Hindus and Anglo-Indians?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I do not think I have that information available on the file, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if these temporary men have been taken in order to be retained against the competent and qualified subordinates?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir. I understand that they are purely temporary war appointments.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: With reference to part (c) of the question, may I know whether the Public Service Commission will confirm these appointments or they will have the option of revising, and also whether these men have been recruited on permanent basis, or not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Sir, I shall require notice of that question.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: The Honourable Member may at least tell us as to what has been the practice.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I shall require notice of that question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know whether the Honourable Member is aware of the fact that some of the direct recruits who have been taken temporarily are not fit to occupy those posts, but still other subordinates who have applied for those posts have been refused?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I am informed that the General Manager is satisfied with the result.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Is it a fact that those recruitments have been made at the whims of the officers who were in charge of those recruitments without due regard being given to the qualifications of individuals.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The Honourable Member has made a statement and not asked a question, and the statement appears to be inaccurate.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: We do not get sufficient replies already.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member has already put many questions. Next question.

DECISION TAKEN re APPOINTMENT OF JUDICIAL OFFICERS TO HEAR APPEALS, ETC. ON RAILWAYS.

117. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: With reference to the Honourable the Railway Member's reply to the debate on a resolution by Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, to consider whether judicial officers be appointed to hear appeals on Railways and to review personal cases, does the Honourable the Railway Member propose to make a statement whether any decision has been taken in the matter? If so, will he make a brief statement giving important particulars of the scheme? If no action has been taken, when is he likely to come to a decision?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: With reference to the first two parts of the question, I would point out that the offer to consider whether we can find judicially trained as well as judicially minded officers was made on the assumption that Mr. Jamnadas Mehta's Resolution moved on the 18th February, 1943, would be withdrawn. It was however pressed to a division on the 25th March, and lost. I have, however, carefully considered this matter and come to the conclusion that the course suggested is impracticable. The last part does not arise.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know if the Honourable Member has also considered the advisability of entrusting this work to the Recruitment Commission which has been appointed on the North Western Railway as an experiment for the present?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if the Honourable Member is aware that that Commission has not much work to do, and, if so, whether he would be prepared to pass on this work to them?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I am informed that it is very busily employed.

RECENT APPOINTMENT OF FIVE CLERKS OF THE MINORITY COMMUNITIES IN THE KARACHI DIVISIONAL OFFICE.

118. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether it is a fact that certain clerks were recently appointed in the Divisional Office, North Western Railway, Karachi? (b) Is it a fact that the General Manager, North Western Railway, asked the Divisional Superintendent, Karachi, to provide for five clerks belonging to the minority communities who had been nominated by the North Western Railway Subordinate Service Commission for posts referred to in part (a) above by adjustment of transfer of the General Community clerks to posts outside the Divisional Office? If so, why?

206

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[30TH JULY, 1943]

(c) Will the Honourable Member please refer to the Government of India, Home Department Resolution No. F. 14/17-B./33, dated Simla, the 4th July, 1934, and say under what specific provision the order of the General Manager, North Western Railway referred to in (b) above giving favoured treatment to certain communities can be justified? If no such provision exists, do Government propose to issue instructions that the legitimate claims of all communities be safeguarded in the Railway service? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The Honourable Member has not specified the period to which he refers. I understand that 5 clerks were appointed in May, 1943 and 4 in June, 1943 to the office of the Divisional Superintendent, Karachi.

(b) I am informed that the General Manager, N. W. Railway, has issued no such orders; the second part does not arise.

(c) Does not arise in view of the reply to part (b).

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: With reference to part (b), I have not been able to follow the Honourable Member clearly. Is it a fact that those five clerks were made to supersede the General Community clerks?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Sir, I answered part (b) by saying that I am informed that the General Manager has issued no such orders. The second part of the question does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I can tell the Honourable Member that it is a fact that it has been done and therefore I ask will the Honourable Member make an enquiry in order to find out who has done it if no such orders have been issued by the General Manager?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I am not satisfied that it has been done.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: The Honourable Member may take steps to satisfy himself. It is not enough merely to say that the General Manager has not issued the orders. I am asking whether such a thing has actually happened and, if so, will the Honourable Member take steps to correct it?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I think I answered the Honourable Member's question as he put it, but I will go into the matter.

DETERIORATION OF EFFICIENCY OF THE KARACHI DIVISIONAL OFFICE.

119. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether it is a fact that about 15,000 claim cases and references are pending in the Divisional Office, North Western Railway, Karachi? If so, what action is proposed to be taken to expedite their disposal and an early settlement of public claims? If none, why?

(b) If the reply to the first portion of part (a) above be in the negative, what is the actual number of the pending claims and references?

(c) Has the number of clerks in the Commercial Section of the Divisional Office, North Western Railway, Karachi, been increased since September, 1939? If so, how much, and are all these men working in the Commercial Section, or some other Sections? If so, why?

(d) Is it a fact that the efficiency of the Divisional Office as a whole has deteriorated owing to the appointment of persons of minority communities with lower qualifications than are prescribed for the clerical posts before the war? If not, what are the reasons for the deterioration of efficiency? If the deterioration of efficiency is due to the shortage of clerks, is it proposed to employ more men? If not, why not?

(e) If the reply to the first portion of part (a) above be in the affirmative, is it proposed to adopt the recommendations contained in paragraph 179 of Mr. Desouza's Report regarding filling of temporary posts without maintaining communal ratios? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) No; the other parts do not arise.

(b) The number of cases pending on 30th June, 1943, was 1,554.

(c) Yes, by 18 additional temporary clerks who are all working in the Commercial Branch.

(d) The answer to the first part is in the negative. As regards the second part it is true that there has been a slight lowering in the efficiency of divisional offices due principally to a large number of temporary clerks and also to the scarcity of suitably qualified candidates, while discipline under present conditions is not entirely satisfactory. As regards the third part, additional posts are sanctioned as and when necessary and the question of discipline is receiving attention. The last part does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know whether these clerks were made to work in the commercial ranks because, there was much work to be done?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Yes, Sir.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST DEPUTY CHIEF ACCOUNTS OFFICER FROM THE SUB-HEADS IN TRAFFIC ACCOUNTS BRANCH OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

120. Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state if a complaint by telegram was received from the Sub-Heads in the Traffic Accounts Branch of the North Western Railway alleging that they have been abused by their Deputy Chief Accounts Officer for not appearing in an examination prescribed by him? If so, was an enquiry held into the matter? If not, why not, and if held with what result?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have called for information and a reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

FALL IN THE COAL SUPPLIES TO INDUSTRIES.

121. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for War Transport please state if it is a fact that a large number of industrial concerns in the country have been reduced to the verge of closing down for want of supplies of coal?

(b) Is it a fact that supplies of coal to industries have been greatly reduced on account of the programme undertaken by the Government of India for building up forty days' stock of coal for Railways?

(c) If the reply to (b) be in the affirmative, how did the Railways' stocks of coal come to be depleted to such an extent as would require to be replenished at the cost of the closing down factories manufacturing the essential war and civilian needs?

(d) Are the Government of India aware that the building up of forty days' stock of coal for Railways would take about three to four months during which period the industries (including major industries like textile and sugar) will be greatly handicapped and their production likely to be considerably reduced?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) A number of industrial concerns have been having difficulties in regard to their coal supplies and some have had to close down for short periods.

(b) Yes, during the past 2 months.

(c) Loco coal stocks were depleted in the first instance, owing to short raisings in the coalfields outside Bengal and Bihar and to the short supply of wagons in the Bengal and Bihar coalfields. Other factors which contributed to depletion of stocks were the disturbances in August and September, 1942 and the cyclone on the East coast in November. During the winter and spring supplies to essential industries could therefore only be maintained at the expense of Railway requirements. When it became apparent that Railway stocks were reaching a dangerously low level, steps were taken to place supplies to Railways back on to the priority to which they were entitled and to rebuild their stocks which had in many cases fallen below the level of industrial stocks.

(d) Government are aware that the building up of Railway stocks up to 45 days by the target date of 30th September is having adverse effect on the requirements of industries. Government are putting into operation certain proposals which it is hoped will relieve industries materially, but it is essential that industries should exercise the fullest economies in the consumption of coal and make use of every form of alternative fuel if they are to maintain their present pitch of production.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: As regards the proposals which Government have under consideration, with reference to his reply to (d) of the question, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether these have been communicated to the commercial bodies for their opinion.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The proposals are not yet complete and they are, as a matter of fact, being discussed today in Delhi with the Controller of Coal Distribution. But preliminary discussions have taken place with the commercial bodies.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Are the proposals in the shape of temporary proposals to tide over temporary difficulties, or are they likely to be made permanent?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: They are comprehensive.

Sir Vithal N. Chaudavarkar: Will the Honourable Member tell the House what alternative fuels he has in mind for Ahmedabad and Sholapur?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: In Ahmedabad wood fuel has been used to a considerable extent, and we hope still further use will be made of it, and the same applies to other parts of the country. Several industries are doing their best to make use of wood fuel to assist in the position. In other parts oil fuel may be a possible substitute.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member in a position to indicate generally the broad features of the proposals he referred to?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir. I think I had better not enter into those details today, but I will say that one of the steps being taken is to reduce the rates at which railway stocks are being built up.

CASH AND SMALL COINS RECEIVED FROM SALE OF PASSENGER TICKETS BY EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†122. Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state the cash receipts by the East Indian Railway in the months of June, 1941 and 1943 from the Booking Offices selling passenger tickets under the account 'Railway Fares'?

(b) What is the value of small coins received by the East Indian Railway Administration under the heading mentioned in (a) in the months of June, 1941 and 1943?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) and (b). I am enquiring whether the information is readily obtainable. If it is so, a statement will be laid on the table.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT NEAR BORGAON, AKOLA.

†123. Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please give a detailed account of the Railway accident near Borgaon, Akola (Berar)?

(b) What is the finding of the Inspector?

(c) Was it due to the negligence of the Railway staff of Borgaon, Great Indian Peninsula?

(d) Is it not a fact that Mr. Abbas Ali, Advocate of Khandwa, who was travelling by that train was found dead under the debris, and that his body was removed and buried at Akola?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) At about 05-35 hours on Friday, the 4th June, No. 1 Down Mail, ex-Bombay to Calcutta, ran into the rear portion (consisting of 15 vehicles) of 105 Down goods train at mile 372 between Akola and Borgaon stations on the G. I. P. Railway. These 15 vehicles had been detached just outside Borgaon Station as the engine was unable to pull the whole load.

The impact was severe. The engine capsized, its front end being smashed up and frame bent. The tender was also badly damaged and the next vehicle was completely wrecked. The underframe of the second vehicle "telescoped" into the third vehicle, which was a Restaurant Car. The fourth vehicle was damaged. The front bogie of the fifth coach derailed. The remainder of the train did not suffer much damage.

As the collision occurred, all lights were extinguished, but a fire was observed in the wreckage of the Dining Car at about 07-00 hours which was extinguished by some British Other Ranks who were passengers on the train.

The brake-van of the goods train was badly smashed and thrown to the left of the engine of the mail train. The next four wagons were also smashed up and capsized. The sixth vehicle was derailed, the remaining 9 were not damaged or derailed.

According to the latest information, the total casualties, including deaths in hospital, number 76 killed and 148 injured.

(b) and (c). The final report of the Inspectorate has not yet been received.

(d) and (e). I am having enquiries made and will lay a reply on the table in due course.

FALL IN THE COAL SUPPLIES TO INDUSTRIES.

124. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for War Transport Department be pleased to state whether he has received any representation on behalf of the industrial concerns in the different provinces, since April last, complaining about the shortage in the supply of coal due to the paucity of the available railway wagons? If so, does he propose to make a detailed statement of the position, province by province, indicating the difficulties experienced by the different industries and the steps, if any, that have been taken to ease the situation?

(b) Is it a fact that several concerns engaged in the execution of war orders have had to curtail their activities due to the shortage of coal? If so, does the Honourable Member propose to make a separate statement regarding this point?

(c) What is the position of the rice and flour mills in the list of priorities for the purpose of allotment of coal wagons, and which are the industries that enjoy a higher priority than the rice and flour mills for this purpose? What is the comparative position of the tea gardens, jute mills, cotton mills, and glass factories, separately, in the list of priorities for the purpose of allotment of coal wagons?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Yes. Complaints regarding shortage of coal have been received within the last 6 weeks from the Indian Chamber of Commerce and the Bengal Millowners' Association and also from the Provincial Governments of Madras, Bihar and the United Provinces. The situation is due to the falling off in coal raisings in the coalfields of Central India and Hyderabad State, the acute wagon position and the necessity of building up local coal stocks. The Controller of Coal Distribution could not in consequence allocate adequate quantities under the Provincial Quota System and to industries classified under item 'H' of the Priority list for coal despatches. The position has however been under review for some time and it is hoped very shortly to introduce a rationing scheme under which quotas of coal are to be refixed, in consultation with the Departments concerned, for each industry in accordance with its past consumption, its essentiality, and the quantity of coal and transport available. It is hoped that when the scheme becomes effective, supplies will be more regular, though on a somewhat reduced scale.

(b) This has happened in some cases. As I have said, the whole question is under consideration.

(c) A copy of the existing Priority list for coal despatches is laid on the table. This list, however, has not been operated with such strictness that classes lower on the list are not given supplies till the requirements of those higher in the list have been fully met. Allotments are adjusted from day to day in the light of the wagon position so as to balance supplies to each class according to the needs of the country, and special ad hoc assistance is given where possible to industries whose stocks are low. Rice and flour mills come under two groups: a small number of flour mills engaged on war orders fall under class 'H' while the majority of flour and rice mills are classified under 'J' and obtain their supplies from the Provincial quotas. Jute and cotton mills and glass factories are grouped under class 'H' and the tea industry has been given a separate classification under 'M'.

Statement.

The existing Priority List is as follows :

- A. Shipment Coal—Naval Coal. Coal required by Defence Departments for Water Traffic and Bunker Coal.
- B. Loco. coal, Indian General Navigation & River Steam Navigation Cos., and Port Trust Cos.
- C. Essential Electric Supply concerns, Oriental Gas Co., Bombay Gas Co., and water works.
- D. Iron & Steel Works, Tatas, Steel Corporation of Bengal, Indian Iron & Steel Co., Kulti.
- E. Defence Services requirements for Aerodromes, Road Building, Garrison Engineers, and Ordnance Factories.
- F. Cement Works.
- G. War Priorities, Red List Firms.
- H. War Priorities, Cotton Mills, Jute Mills, Rolling Mills, Sugar Industry, Cotton Gins and Presses, other Miscellaneous firms and other Engineering Concerns.
- I. Works of Public Utility (other than Essential Electric Cos., such as Tramway Cos., Municipalities and Petty Steamer Services).
- J. Miscellaneous Industries not directly on War Work—Domestic consumption etc., (Distribution given by Provincial Coal Controllers).
- K. Coke Ovens, both inward and outward traffic.
- L. Other Sanctions issued on behalf of the Chief Mining Engineer, Railway Board, and not classified above, Public.
- M. Coal for Tea Industry.
- N. Coal for Brick Burning for Public and Civil supplies.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Has the Honourable Member received a complaint on the score that tea-gardens have been treated more favourably than rice mills in spite of the rice shortage nowadays so far as the allotment of coal wagon, is concerned?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: That is not my experience, Sir. I have had, I think, more complaints from the tea-gardens than from the rice mills.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Has the Honourable Member received a complaint to that effect? A complaint, so far as I know, was communicated on the 13th July from Calcutta by the Indian Chamber of Commerce on this point.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Yes, Sir. I now recall such a communication.

Sir Vithal N. Chandavarkar: Is it a fact that wagons were made available for the transfer of an industrial concern from a British Indian Province to an Indian State?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have heard that statement and investigation is proceeding.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Did the Honourable Member refer to any rationalization scheme in this connection?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir. I did not refer to that. But a rationalization scheme is under consideration.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will he be pleased to give the broad features of this scheme?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Again, Sir, I think I had better not go into those details which I understand are being discussed with the commercial bodies principally concerned.

Sir Cowasjee Jahangir: Was this reply prepared before or after the floods in Bengal?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I think after.

Sir Cowasjee Jahangir: Does it take into account the floods and the consequences of those floods?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The consequences of the floods are serious, particularly to coal for distribution eastwards. But I do not think that alters anything that I have said in my answer.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

COLLECTION OF COST OF LIVING INDEX NUMBERS ON BEHALF OF THE RAILWAY BOARD.

20. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) With reference to the Honourable the Railway Member's reply to my unstarred question No. 48, asked on the 10th March, 1943, in regard to the expenditure incurred by the Railway Board on the compilation of the cost of living index numbers, will he be pleased to state whether any figures of the cost of living index numbers are now being collected on behalf of the Railway Board, and whether they are published? If so, where? If not, why not?

(b) Where do the central organisations for the collection of cost of living index numbers exist, and what is the material supplied by them to the Railway Board? If the same has been published, does the Honourable Member propose to refer to such a publication?

(c) Which provinces which are receiving grants from the Railway Board for the collection of cost of living index numbers supply this information to the Railway Board, and is the same incorporated by the Railway Board or the provinces in any authorised publication? If so, which are those publications?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative; figures concerning the cost of living in selected rural centers are being collected on behalf of the Railway Board, the answer to the second part is in the negative. As regards the last part, the information is not yet sufficiently detailed to justify publication.

(b) The central organisation for the collection of cost of living index numbers exists at the headquarters of the Government of India; all the material collected by the organisation is at the disposal of Government Departments. The material collected has not been published.

(c) No province is receiving a grant direct from the Railway Board although the Railway Board bear a portion of the Central Government's share of the cost of the Provincial Schemes. As already stated the information has not yet been published.

NON-ACCEPTANCE OF PRIVATE MEDICAL PRACTITIONERS' CERTIFICATES.

21. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) With reference to the Honourable the Railway Member's reply to my starred question No. 133, asked in September last, in regard to the acceptance of private medical practitioner's certificate without the statutory need of reference to the Railway Doctor, and his reply to unstarred question No. 50, asked on the 15th March, 1943, stating that matter was still under consideration, will he be pleased to state whether a decision has been reached in the matter? If not, when is it likely to be taken?

(b) Since the complaint refers to the North Western Railway subsidiary rules being in conflict with the main rules framed by the Railway Board, why was the subsidiary rule not immediately amended to fit in with the parent rule?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The North Western Railway have now cancelled their subsidiary rule on the subject.

(b) Government can see no impropriety in the length of time taken for the issue of the orders referred to in the reply to part (a).

INSTRUCTIONS re RESERVATION FOR MINORITY COMMUNITIES IN ESTABLISHMENT SECTIONS OF RAILWAY OFFICES.

22. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether the Railway Board have issued any instructions that a certain percentage of posts in the Establishment Section of an office be reserved for minority communities? If so, why, and what is the percentage so fixed for each community?

(b) Will the Honourable Member please refer to the specific provision of the Government of India Resolution, dated the 4th July, 1934, on the reservation for recruitment of posts for minority communities in the subordinate service under which reservation in the Establishment Branch is being made? If no such provision exists, under what other rule is this being done?

(c) Is it proposed to apply the percentage to offices as one unit, or branches, sections and sub-sections as well and, if so, why?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative; as regards the second part, the Railway Board consider it desirable that no particular community should be handicapped by the preponderance of any one community in the Establishment Offices of Railways. As regards the third part, the intention is that the representation of the minority communities in Establishment Branches on each Railway shall correspond to the overall percentage fixed for such communities on the Railway.

(b) Although there is no specific provision in the Government Resolution of 4th July, 1934, the orders issued by the Railway Board are covered by paragraph 6 thereof which make the orders therein applicable to all direct recruitment with certain exceptions; as also by Supplementary Instruction 5 issued in amplification of the Resolution.

(c) Generally, the orders are applied to all direct recruitment, by Departments or classes or grades as may be convenient. Government can see no objection to applying the orders to smaller units if they consider such a course necessary; they, however, do not contemplate a revision of the existing procedure.

NON-OBSERVANCE OF CERTAIN ORDERS re APPEALS IN KARACHI DIVISION, NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

23. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) With reference to Sir Andrew Clow's statement in February, 1942, in reply to the debate on a cut motion by the late Sir Henry Gidney that orders had been issued to the effect that the appellate authority should briefly record the grounds of the appeal and the reasons for dismissing it, will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state whether these orders are being followed on the North Western Railway? If so, does he propose to lay a statement on the table of the House for the period 1st January to 30th June, 1943, when the appellate authority on the Karachi Division of the North Western Railway observed these instructions?

(b) Why are these instructions not being observed in full or in all cases? Is it proposed to insist that an appeal which is not disposed of in accordance with Sir Andrew Clow's undertaking, would not be considered as having been properly decided, thus giving cause for another appeal to a further higher authority? If not, how is it proposed to enforce these instructions?

(c) Does the Honourable Member propose to lay a copy of the orders issued by the Railway Board on the points mentioned in Sir Andrew Clow's speech? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) I am informed that these orders are generally followed on the North Western Railway. As regards the second part, I regret I cannot undertake to collect such details under present circumstances.

(b) As regards the first part, I have no reason to believe that the orders are not generally complied with. As regards the second part, the reply is in the negative. As regards the third part, if such cases come to notice the appellate authority will be instructed to comply with the instructions; the attention of the authorities has been drawn to the orders and the necessity for complying with them.

(c) No, as the orders are confidential.

LONG WORKING HOURS FOR RAILWAY RUNNING STAFF.

24. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) With reference to the Honourable the Railway Member's reply to starred question No. 273, asked on the 10th March, 1943, giving an undertaking for a fresh investigation in regard to the long running hours for running staff, will he be pleased to state the result of his investigations?

(b) Is it a fact that Guards and Engine crew are continuously on duty for about 12 hours and even more on the passenger or mail trains link system? If so, why cannot the links be revised to reduce them to 8 hours per trip? If not, why not?

(c) Is it a fact that Goods Train Guards and crew are continuously on duty for 20 hours and even more on certain working trains on the North Western Railway?

(d) Is it proposed to fix a maximum limit of 10 to 12 hours for Guards and crew working on Goods Trains? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The question has been looked into and Government are satisfied that as a rule running staff are not required to be unduly long hours on duty although there are occasional exceptions which the Railways are endeavouring to eliminate.

(b) Government understand that there may be some instances of the kind. As regards the second part, the reply is in the negative, since Government do not consider such action necessary as they are satisfied that the conditions generally are reasonable.

(c) Government understand that there is one such case on the North Western Railway and the Railway is taking steps to relieve the staff at some intermediate point in order to prevent unduly long hours.

(d) The reply to the first part is in the negative. Government do not consider such action either necessary or practicable but the matter will receive attention if and when the application of the Hours of Employment Regulations to running staff is taken up after the war.

FREQUENT DROPPING OF LEAD PLUGS AND CONSEQUENT FAILURE OF ENGINES ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

25. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state if it is a fact that lead plugs in the locomotives on the North Western Railway were filled with silver or some such better material before the war? Is it a fact that the same are now filled with a cheaper material, thus causing frequent failure of the engine and the dropping of plugs?

(b) Does the Honourable Member propose to lay a statement on the table of the House, separately, for each Division of the North Western Railway for the periods (i) 1st April, 1939 to 31st March, 1940; and (ii) 1st April, 1942 to 31st March, 1943, showing the dropping of lead plugs?

(c) Is it a fact that on the Karachi Division of the North Western Railway, a large number of Drivers has been penalized for the dropping of lead plugs? If so, why; when the railway is unable to use a better material owing to the war exigency?

(d) If the reply to the first portion of part (c) above be in the negative, what is the number, separately, of employees so penalized on each Division of the North Western Railway during the two periods mentioned in part (b) above?

(e) What instructions do Government propose to issue to ensure that employees are not penalized for mishaps, etc., occurring due to want of good material, thorough repairs and difficulty in replacing engines which have done their guaranteed mileage owing to war? If none, why?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The answer to both questions is in the negative.

(b) No.

(c), (d) and (e). Although no change has been made in the composition of the lead plugs, there has been a serious increase in the number of lead plugs fused due to carelessness on the part of the engine crews. The necessity of taking disciplinary action has, therefore, increased, and unless there is an improvement, it will be necessary to enhance the penalties.

COMPENSATORY ALLOWANCES TO SUBORDINATE SERVICE EMPLOYEES OF KARACHI PORT AREA OF NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

26. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state what compensatory allowances are paid to the employees in subordinate service of the Karachi Port area of the North Western Railway, and what the rates thereof are?

(b) Are Firemen treated as members of the subordinate service? If so, are they entitled to the same rates of allowances as are paid to the members of the subordinate service employed in the Karachi Port area? If not, why not?

(c) Is it proposed to do away with this anomaly in the matter of payment of compensatory allowances to Firemen and other members of the subordinate staff? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The information desired by the Honourable Member is contained in paras. 1 to 3 of Appendix V to the State Railway Establishment Code, Vol. I, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

(b) Presumably the Honourable Member is making a distinction between subordinate and inferior staff. If so, he will see from the rules referred to in the reply to part (a) of the question that special allowances in Karachi area are allowed to both subordinates and inferior servants. As regards firemen, those in grades III and IV are considered subordinates while those in grades I and II are considered inferior servants. Both categories draw allowances at rates applicable to each.

(c) The Honourable Member will see from the reply already given that there is no anomaly.

CONDEMNATION OF THE COWARDLY ATTACK ON MR. M. A. JINNAH.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I move:

"That this Assembly condemns the cowardly attack on Mr. M. A. Jinnah and congratulates him on his providential escape."

Sir, it is not necessary for me to say much about the motion which I have the honour to place before this Honourable House. The subject-matter of the motion is one about which there cannot be two opinions and the personality of Mr. Jinnah is such that it does not need any introduction. He is one of the greatest sons of India and is well known all over the world. The news of the cowardly and dastardly attack on Mr. Jinnah on the 26th of this month in Bombay has shocked every right thinking man irrespective of caste, creed or colour, from one end to the other of this sub-continent. I have no doubt in my mind that every Honourable Member of this House would condemn this outrage. We are indeed happy to know that God in His mercy has saved the life of Mr. Jinnah and I am sure every section of this House will join me in congratulating him on his providential escape. As for the Muslim League Party, it is not possible to express adequately in words our feelings of relief, joy and thankfulness to God for saving the life of our Leader to lead us and guide us. Qaide-Azam Zindabad.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved: "That this Assembly condemns the cowardly attack on Mr. M. A. Jinnah and congratulates him on his providential escape."

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): I whole-heartedly associate myself with the motion. Sir, I am sure there is no one in this House nor any reasonable person outside who does not condemn such a dastardly and cowardly attack on Mr. Jinnah. It is a matter of great relief that his life has been saved and therefore we offer our hearty congratulations to him. Sir, this is an absolutely non-controversial motion and I am sure the House must have been relieved to hear that Mr. Jinnah is 'absolutely safe and sound. It is a matter of grave concern and anxiety to the House when a Member of this House is attacked and it is a matter of congratulation not only to Mr. Jinnah but a matter of congratulation to us that his life has been saved.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (Presidency Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Did Government condemn the outrage on Allah Baksh?

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon (Sind: Muhammadan Rural): He was not a Member of this House, and Sind Government had condemned the outrage.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Central Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): I, like every one else here, rejoice that Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah's assailant could not successfully carry out his terrible intention; I feel relieved that Mr. Jinnah escaped with slight injuries, and I congratulate him on that happy escape. This is only as regards Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah. I absolutely deprecate any attempt to involve this House in a motion of this kind. I am not at all sure that this is a good precedent. What is it that we congratulate Mr. Jinnah upon, personally and politically? Personally I congratulate him, but there are hundreds and thousands of people who daily escape with small injuries but . . .

Nawab Siddique Ali Khan (Central Provinces and Berar: Muhammadan): But they are not Members of this House.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I am coming to that. You do not congratulate the hundreds and thousands of people who escape small injuries.

An Honourable Member: Quite right.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Why do we congratulate Mr. Jinnah? Either for his membership of this House or for his political eminence. Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah does not even show us the courtesy of coming here.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: He is too big for it.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: He does not even come here. That is the contempt which he shows for this House.

Nawab Siddique Ali Khan: Question.

(Interruptions from the Muslim League Party.)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: You will not be able to silence me by any shouting. I am not giving way. I am not going to be silenced by any such shouting.

Some Honourable Members: Go on.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I will have my say—that as a Member of this House Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah treats this House with such scant courtesy that he does not deserve any such commendation. If as a member of a political party he is to be commended it is a bad precedent. Every time a member of some political party is assailed, you will have to agree to such a motion unless you want to show that this was only reserved for Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah, President of the Muslim League. And what is the record of this political party? A High Court Judge has told us that for the massacre of the Sukkur Hindus the instigation came from this Muslim League.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: No, Allah Baksh was responsible, is the Court's finding.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: You can read the report of Mr. Justice Weston. (Interruption from the Muslim League Benches.)

Sir Syed Raza Ali (Cities of the United Provinces: Muhammadan Urban): Will the Honourable Member quote from the judgment of the Judge of the High Court? That is the practice. Will he quote?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member (Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta) is not giving way.

Nawab Siddique Ali Khan: On a point of order, Sir.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I shall certainly bring the report of that enquiry if necessary.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member must resume his seat as a point of order has been raised.

Nawab Siddique Ali Khan: Is the Honourable Member in order to refer to what happened in Sukkur in connection with this motion?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Because Mr. Jinnah, is the President of the Muslim League, I suppose that is the reason why Mr. Jamnadas Mehta says that because of the alleged attitude of the Muslim League in that matter he would not support this motion.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Did the Muslim League condemn the Sukkur massacre? Did they condemn the foul murders of scores of Hindu leaders which took place? They instigated murderers and they treated them as heroes, and they brought the whole public life into contempt.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Did the Muslim League condemn Allah Baksh's death?

Mr. Muhammad Nauman (Patna and Chota Nagpur cum Orissa: Muhammadan): Yes. Did you do?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I am not now concerned with that, but I know that scores of Hindu leaders of the greatest eminence including Swami Shradhanand were foully murdered. The Muslim League had not a word to say. Can such a party be said to have come with clean hands to this House, when its leader is sitting mum, when murders of political leaders of other parties are going on galore, that we should be asked to associate ourselves with such a motion. Let them come with clean hands first. He who seeks equity must first do equity. You do not deserve any such consideration as political leaders. You are instigators, abettors of murderers and you come here before me with this motion?

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: You are instigating.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I will not allow such a thing to be perpetrated and I deprecate the Government so coolly surrendering their judgment to a motion of this kind and disturbing the business of the House. I say it is a bad precedent. For Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah personally I have very great affection. He is a gentleman of polished manners and social graces. I would like to be with him, I have been with him, I have had many socials with him. I am as happy as anybody else at his safety but I must say you are not doing this personally for Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah. It is for the Leader of the Muslim League. Under what pretence are you doing it? I cannot understand why the business of this House should be interfered with in this outrageous manner for the sake of the political leader of a party whose hands are not clean, whose hands are red with murders.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Shame on you!

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Shame on those who deny facts.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: This party has never done that.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Shame on those who deny the facts.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division: Muhammadan Rural): Lie, absolute lie.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I don't want further to discuss this matter, except to say this that for Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah's escape I am grateful to Providence and I wish him long life and prosperity and health, but for Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah as the President of the Muslim League I have not got the slightest sympathy. In fact, he is going to disrupt my country if he can, but I am not going to bring that issue here. But look at the past. Murders of leaders of the Hindu community have been committed and not one word of sympathy has been said to the bereaved family or the affected community by him. Therefore, I am not willing to associate myself with the motion and I would be surprised if any Party in this House should associate with people whose hands are not clean.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I am sorry that the debate should have taken this turn. After all, it was a simple and non-controversial motion, offering congratulations to Mr. Jinnah on his miraculous escape and nothing more. So far as Government are concerned, we have associated ourselves with it, because he is a member of the Assembly and the attack was certainly dastardly and cowardly and we congratulate him on his escape, because he is a Member of this Assembly.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Will you do it for every member?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: If you are attacked and if your life is saved, I will do it.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I was assailed by the Congress six months ago, but not a mouse wept in this House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): It is a matter for regret that a debate on a motion like this should have taken this turn. I did not stop the Honourable Member, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, from making his remarks on the alleged attitude of the Muslim League Party of which Mr. Jinnah is the leader as they could not be said to be irrelevant. But I do hope that Members who take part in this debate will not go into matters which have only an indirect bearing on the motion before the House.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Mr. President, I consider it a privilege to be allowed to associate myself with the Resolution that has been moved by Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan, not in his capacity as the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League but as a citizen of India and a Member of this House. I take this opportunity of doing so, as perhaps the oldest friend of Mr. Jinnah in this Honourable House. I have known him for the last 42 years.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Then you are older.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: . . . and perhaps much longer and much better than any other Member of this Honourable House, including all members of the Muslim League Party and therefore I repeat I consider it a privilege to be allowed to associate myself with this Resolution. I am not going to enter into any political discussion (An Honourable Member: "Why did you leave his party?") and I deprecate most strongly the speech just made by an Honourable Member of this House. I deprecate it most strongly in the interests of my country.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I deprecate your speech.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: I deprecate it in the interests of my country, not in the interests of the Muslim League or the Congress but in the interests of Mother India.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Where is Mother India?

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: That there should be an Honourable Member of this House who could put up such an exhibition on an occasion like this is a disgrace to him, and to this House.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: It is a disgrace to you.

An Honourable Member: Is the Honourable Member entitled to use the word 'Disgrace'?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): He is entitled to express his own opinion.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Then his conduct is disgraceful.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: We Indian must remember that when we speak in public we speak to an international audience on an occasion like this. We have been told that we are not a united country. It was only yesterday in a debate I had occasion to say that India was a united country on the issue before us. Well, Sir, if there are such exhibitions as this, is there any reason to complain or to blame those who contend that even on the smallest matter, even on the most solemn occasion we cannot refrain from showing our communal bias. There is no communal question before us. An Honourable Member of this House, a Leader of a party, who has been a leader of a party for years, of which I had the honour of being a member, has had the unfortunate experience of being attacked by a fanatic and has had a miraculous escape and if we think it fit to show our thankfulness to Providence on that escape we are doing something that is an honour to ourselves and a duty to ourselves and this Honourable House. I associate myself fully and wholeheartedly with the Resolution and I trust that this Resolution will be conveyed to Mr. and Miss Jinnah on behalf of all his friends in this House. I further trust that in matters like this—it does not matter who it is or which member of this House has escaped a catastrophe, we shall be ready to show our whole-hearted sympathy with him and his family and his friends.

Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj (Nominated Non-Official): Mr. President, I desire to associate myself with the sentiments expressed by Sir Cowasjee Jehangir in supporting the motion of my Honourable friend Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan. It is very unfortunate that Mr. Jamnadas Mehta should have chosen this occasion to give vent to his personal feeling . . .

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: No.

Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj: . . . personal views at any rate on the attitude of the Muslim League Party. I cannot claim to know Mr. Jinnah for such a long time as Sir Cowasjee Jehangir but he was always very sympathetic towards the attitude that I have taken on questions concerning my community and whatever contribution he may or may not have made to the various questions and problems that stand in the way of India attaining her freedom and her national destiny, the fact remains that so far as the minorities are concerned he has made it possible for those communities to organise themselves and to fight for their uplift. It also shows to the public in India and elsewhere that merely because a community is organised on its own basis, it cannot be treated as a purely anti-national party. No foe of Mr. Jinnah can ever maintain that Mr. Jinnah has at any time let down the interests of India. If anything, he is one of the few politicians who is known for his independence and integrity. I associate myself with the Resolution and I support the motion.

Sir Henry Richardson (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, on behalf of my Group, I support wholeheartedly this motion and join with those previous speakers who have condemned this outrage, which we deplore. While we have no knowledge of the causes which led this misguided man to make this attack, there can be no possible excuse or justification for the act and we sincerely congratulate Mr. Jinnah on his providential escape.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Sir, I associate myself and my Party with the Resolution which has been moved by my Honourable friend Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan. I do not think that the question of Mr. Jinnah being the leader of the Muslim League Party is a relevant one on this occasion. If Nawabzada Sahib had not moved that Resolution, I myself would have moved it. It has been pointed out that Mr. Jinnah is a great personality in the country and he has rendered services to the community in a variety of ways. But there is another aspect of the question. Of late, there has been a growing tendency in the country to regard murder as a political weapon and unless public opinion asserts itself definitely, emphatically and strongly against it, there will be a great deal of difficulty in the future and this misguided view which has been taken by some will lead to the most disastrous consequences for the country.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I rise to associate myself with the Resolution that my friend Nawabzada Sahib has moved. Many words are not required of me to support this Resolution as I entirely agree with the remarks that have fallen from the Leader of the House and my friends Sir Henry Richardson and Dr. Banerjee. But I may be permitted to say a few words as I claim to belong to his community, as I claim to be one who has been living in the same city as he has been and I claim to be one who has had the privilege of working with him for several years. I do not claim as great a friendship as my friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, but I do feel that I know a great deal of this great man. Up till very recently the one thing that nobody ever denied to Mr. Jinnah was that he was one of the straightforward, frank and honest gentlemen in the country. No corruption, no flattery, no honour did he aspire. We have few persons to admire of this calibre in this country. It is also a fact that he has rendered to this country a great service for many years. He has been held up till very recently a great hero by the Indian nationals and we have in the City of Bombay a Congress House known as 'Jinnah's People House'. Whatever may be the position with regard to his activities recently in the Muslim League, it can certainly be said that so long as he is at the head of that body corruption or misdeeds must be taken to be far away from him. That is my own personal belief, and I do not think I am wrong and I may further tell you that I honestly feel that a man of that type who has been taken as a great man all this time can never allow things to happen which have now been recently alleged against him. There have been very recently serious allegations made against him which I admit I hear off and on, but I do appeal to my countrymen as Dr. Banerjee has said, that we ought to be very careful not in the least way to encourage any disastrous attack such as this on our leaders or for the matter of fact on anyone. In fact, nobody does it, but the least thing coming from any side in these days may bring forward a thing of this type which has happened now and if that happens that will be a great wrong and a great loss to the country. With these words I support wholeheartedly the Resolution that has been moved by my friend Nawabzada Sahib and I beg of you to convey our congratulations to Mr. Jinnah.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Sir, I move that the question be now put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That this Assembly condemns the cowardly attack on Mr. M. A. Jinnah and congratulates him on his providential escape."

The motion was adopted.

MOTION RE THE RECENT PEGGING LEGISLATION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare (Member for Indians Overseas): Sir, I move:

"That the position arising out of the recent Pegging legislation in South Africa be taken into consideration."

Sir, in response to one of those periodic waves of anti-Asiatic prejudice which from time to time besmirches the name of South Africa and which the Union Government found difficult to resist there has been recently enacted there the Trading and Occupation of Land (Transvaal and Natal) Restriction Act, usually known as the Pegging Bill. It has the two following effects:

(1) In the Transvaal it extends for a further three years the provisions of the interim legislation enacted for the year in 1939 and extended for another two years in 1941, by which purchases of property by Indians in areas not already subject to other restrictions are prohibited without the special permission of the Minister.

(2) In Natal it prohibits Indians from purchasing property and Europeans from selling property to Indians in predominantly European areas in Durban without the Minister's permission and provides for the extension of similar provisions to other areas in Natal on sufficient cause being shown after enquiry. There have been hitherto no statutory restrictions upon the acquisition of land by Asiatics in Natal, though provision exists for the insertion of an anti-Asiatic clause in title deeds.

Indian emigration to Natal began in 1860 upon the request of European planters through the Governor. Reports reached India that the emigrants were ill-treated and Indian emigration declined to such an extent that planters continued to complain of a shortage of labour. An enquiry held in the colony revealed that the reports were well founded; apart from other ill-treatment, wages were habitually held in arrears and in many cases not paid at all. Emigration to Natal was stopped by the Government of India in 1866. It was reopened in 1874 on the enactment of measures by the Natal Government which provided that the indentured labourer, on the expiry of his indenture, might commute his return passage to India to a parcel of land for free settlement.

European fears of Indian expansion in Natal expressed themselves as early as 1880 and in 1887 a Commission appointed by the Natal Government reported that "the majority of white colonists are strongly opposed to the presence of the 'free' Indian as a rival and competitor either in agricultural or commercial pursuits". As a result of pressure by the white colonists the enactments providing for free settlement of ex-indentured labourer were repealed. In 1894, the Natal Parliament passed a measure depriving Indians of the parliamentary franchise. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, in refusing to recommend the Bill for Royal Assent, said "the Bill involves in a common disability all natives of India without exception and provides no machinery by which an Indian can free himself from this disability whatever his intelligence, his education, or his status in the country. To assent to this measure would be to put an affront on the people of India such as no British Parliament could be a party to". And, in speaking to the Colonial Conference in 1897, Mr. Chamberlain said "we ask you also to bear in mind the traditions of the Empire, which makes no distinction in favour of or against race or colour and to exclude by reason of their colour or by reason of their race all Her Majesty's Indian subjects or even all Asiatics would be an act so offensive to those people that it would be most painful, I am quite certain to Her Majesty to have to sanction it".

[Dr. N. B. Khare.]

Her Majesty's potential suffering appears to have caused little concern to many of the white colonists in Natal who stuck by their policy of using Indians for their own enrichment while denying them ordinary human rights and privileges, comparable to the policy of the snake in the fable, which lets the rat make a hole and then occupies it itself. Some, however, saw the inequity of such a policy. In 1907, a Commission in the Colony reported that "absolute and conclusive proof has been put forth before the Commission that several industries owe their existence and present condition entirely to indentured labour. The Indians are industrious, law abiding and on the whole sober in their habits and it has been proved that their presence has had no injurious effect on the morals of the 'whites' or the 'natives'". In 1908, Sir Leige Hulett, speaking in the Natal Parliament, said "The condition of the colony before the importation of Indian labour was one of gloom, it was one that then and there threatened to extinguish the vitality of the country, and it was only by the Government assisting the importation of labour that the country began at once to revive. The coast has been turned into one of the most prosperous parts of South Africa". There were those in England too who felt themselves compelled to voice their disapproval of the Natal policy. In 1908 Lord Curzon said "in the first place, as regards South Africa itself, the Indian 'coolie' or at any rate the educated man who is behind the Indian 'coolie' and has conducted this agitation, sees that the 'coolie' or the artisan is invited and even encouraged to emigrate from India. We send him to a colony which he enriches by his labour and then the society there appears to turn round upon him as if he were a pariah dog". These are not my words, but those of Lord Curzon. He further says: "He is penalised there not for his vices but for his virtues. It is because he is a sober, industrious, frugal and saving man that he is such a formidable economic danger; and then the Indian remembers that at any rate in a large number of cases he has fought for the British Empire in South Africa and that it was largely owing to his efforts that Natal was saved".

In Transvaal, the Provincial Government was always in favour of a declared policy of segregation. By a law of 1885 amended in 1887, Asiatics were forbidden to live except in such areas and locations as may be set aside for them on sanitary grounds. This law and its interpretation was the subject of much controversy between His Majesty's Government and the Republican Government, a controversy which was reflected in a speech by Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War and an ex-Viceroy of India, who stated a few weeks after the outbreak of the Boer War that of all the misdeeds of the Boers, none filled him with so much anger as their treatment of British Indians and proceeded to paint a lurid picture of the political evils which might have been expected to follow in India itself if England had failed to put an end to such insolent injustice. After the Boer War, the Transvaal became a Crown Colony. In 1902 and again in 1904 the Governor, Lord Milner, put forward proposals for the registration of Asiatics. In 1902, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain rejected the proposal and said that it would be impossible to defend what would practically be a continuance of the system of the South African Republic against which Her Majesty's Government had so strongly and repeatedly protested. It is an irony of fate that the self same insolent injustice as described by Lord Lansdowne is being perpetrated even today on the defenceless South African Indians by the British and the Boer combining into a double barrelled gun for the annihilation of Indian interests in South Africa.

In 1904, Mr. Lyttleton while agreeing to the introduction of an Immigration Ordinance to restrict the entry of Indians in the future by applying a dictation test in a European language, refused to sanction legislation taking away rights for which Indians had contended in republican days and which had subsequently been assured to them. European opinion in the Transvaal was, however, by no means satisfied and continued efforts were made to impose further restrictions upon Asiatics. In speaking of the Immigration Restriction Act of 1907, which incidentally gave rise to Mr. Gandhi's first passive resistance movement in South Africa, Lord Morley said "the Act may work grave injustice since British Indian subjects who had before 1902 acquired domicile in the Transvaal but having temporarily left the colony, had not registered themselves may under its provision be debarred from re-entry". In 1908 the Townships Act and the Gold Law which consolidated the position regarding occupation and ownership in proclaimed land and contained stringent provisions against Asiatics and 'coloured persons' were passed.

In 1910 the Union of South Africa was established and from that date forward matters affecting Indians became a Union Government responsibility, though the laws of the constituent parts of the Union remained in force. In 1913 an Immigration Bill was introduced and passed which was the cause of Mr. Gandhi's second and more spectacular passive resistance campaign. It was in relation to this legislation that the Viceroy Lord Hardinge speaking in Madras said:

"Recently your compatriots in South Africa have taken matters into their own hands by organising what is called passive resistance to laws which they consider invidious and unjust,—an opinion which we who watch their struggle from afar cannot but share. They have violated, as they intended to violate, those laws with full knowledge of the penalties they have the sympathy of India deep and burning—and not only of India but of all those who like myself without being Indians themselves have feelings of sympathy for the people of this country."

In 1914 Mr. Gandhi came to terms with General Smuts and the passive resistance movement ended, but under the Immigration Act all Indians were, by an order of the Minister, deemed undesirable and consequently became prohibited immigrants. At the Imperial War Conference in 1917 and 1918 General Smuts said:

"Once the white community in South Africa were rid of the fear that they were going to be flooded by unlimited immigration from India, all the other questions would be considered subsidiary and would become easily and perfectly soluble. . . . the fear, which formerly obsessed the settlers there has been removed; the great principle of restricting immigration for which they have contended is on our statute book."

Mr. Burton, speaking on behalf of South Africa, said:

"It is only fair to say and it is the truth that we have found that the Indians in our midst in South Africa who form in some parts a very substantial portion of the population are good, law-abiding, quiet citizens and it is only our duty to see that they are treated as human beings with feelings like our own and in a proper manner."

Speaking elsewhere of the troops who had served under him, General Smuts said,—

"I wish here publicly to repeat that I have had no more loyal, devoted and brave troops under me than those troops from the Indian Empire and I think the young South Africans who went with me, who fought side by side with those heroes from Asia today have more kindly feelings than they had before towards the Indian population of South Africa."

These sentiments apparently have now gone with the wind! Feelings however were not so easily modified and as a result of pressure by the Government of India and the Secretary of State a Commission was set up in 1920 to consider the question of Indian trading and property rights. This Commission, in recommending against "compulsory segregation of Asiatics" said:

"We find ourselves wholly unable to support the policy of repression which was advocated by some of the witnesses. Indiscriminate segregation of Asiatics in locations and similar restrictive measures would result in eventually reducing them to helotry. Such measures, apart from their injustice and inhumanity would degrade the Asiatic and react upon the Europeans."

[Dr. N. B. Khare.]

The Union Government nevertheless, willingly or unwillingly, found the pressure of European opinion too strong, and in 1925 General Hertzog's Government introduced the Areas Reservation Bill. Dr. Malan in introducing the Bill said that the measure frankly started from the general supposition that the Indian was an alien element in the South African population and that no solution of the question would be acceptable to the country unless it resulted in a very considerable reduction of the Indian population. As a result of representations from the Government of India the Bill was postponed and in 1926 the Round Table Conference was held in Capetown which finally concluded the Capetown Agreement. It was in regard to this legislation that the Viceroy Lord Reading said at the opening of the Legislative Assembly in 1927 that it appeared to contain a radically objectionable principle. Lord Olivier, speaking in the House of Lords in 1926 on the same subject, said:

"That is more than pressure, it is oppression. It is not to be wondered at, when Indians in India see their relatives exposed to this oppression, that they become restive and ask, 'What is the use of our belonging to an Empire which guarantees to protect us, if again and again the promises that have been made in the name of that Empire to our kinsmen are not to be maintained and those kinsmen are to be subjected to oppression to induce them to relinquish the privileges that they have acquired'?"

He added—

"I have stated that Lord Reading's opinion and certainly the opinion of any one connected with the India Office is that these oppressive enactments are a distinct infraction of the rights of Indians which His Majesty's Government are bound to honour, to maintain and safeguard."

He pleaded—

"Let us have some kind of moratorium from the continued pressure upon them (the rights of Indians in South Africa) which is being exercised to the great disturbance of our own Imperial relations with India."

The foregoing shows clearly enough how from the earliest days of Indian immigration into Natal the white population of South Africa has been guided by no other motive but gross self-interest. When times were bad they did not hesitate to implore India to help them and were ready to make any promises to get the labour they so sorely needed. But when time improved they were eager to repudiate their promises and to invoke any means at their disposal to oppress and insult the very people who had come to their assistance. His Majesty's Government and many prominent British statesmen have consistently protested and striven against the South African attitude but as time has gone on, their protests and their efforts have become weaker and of less avail. By passes, licenses, registration, taxes, tests and reservations regarding property and trading and by denying the elementary right of the franchise to people born and bred in their country, the white Governments in South Africa have done their utmost to humiliate and hedge in their Indian population. To this has been added social and public indignity of many kinds; refusal of entry to shops, hotels, places of amusements, restrictions on the use of public conveyances, separate counters at post offices and similar degradation. A man of such robust common sense as the present Prime Minister, Mr. Winston Churchill, writing of the Indians in Kenya said: "Is it possible for any Government with a scrap of self-respect for honest dealing between man and man to embark upon a policy of deliberately squeezing out the native of India from regions in which he has established himself under every security of public faith?"

That sentiment, so forcibly expressed, applies with equal pertinence to the history of Indians in South Africa.

And yet, at a time when Indian troops have given their lives in countless gallant actions in African soil and are ready for further sacrifices in the same cause for which South Africa is fighting, at a time too when that same great man, Winston Churchill, is leading all the peoples of the Commonwealth in the sternest struggle that has yet been seen, all those noble sentiments are forgotten, all those high principles enunciated by former British Ministers and statesmen are ignored and the last indignity is imposed upon the Indian people by the latest so-called 'Pegging' legislation in South Africa. It is worthy of note that the Union Government's action has the support of Dr. Malan whose followers, constituting some 40 per cent. of the white population, stand openly for secession from the Empire and neutrality in the war. It may be that Field Marshal Smuts has accepted this position only for the purpose of the general election, but India can derive little satisfaction from such a reflection. The original Interim Act prohibiting Indian purchases of property in the Transvaal was passed in 1939 for two years only, to tide over as they said a difficult period. It was extended in 1941 for another two years and has now been again extended for three years. It is small wonder if Indians regard the recent enactment as designed to be a permanent measure. Nor should undue weight be attached to apparent disunity among the Indians in South Africa. There is disunity among the Europeans too, between the seceders and the non-seceders, but on this issue they are at one. So too are the Indians, whose differences arise from other causes.

The crux of the situation is that South Africa prevails because she is a Dominion and Indians there have to suffer because India is a dependency. Under the circumstances the moral responsibility of Britain which is the trustee of India is very great. She cannot ignore that she owes a duty just as great to the dusky millions in India and the quarter million in South Africa as she owes to the whole people of her own race in any territory in the British Commonwealth of Nations. The constitutional drawback from which India suffers does not detract from the inherent justice of the case of Indians in South Africa and some means must be found for maintaining the dignity and prestige of India, and of the Government of India, even in war time. It should not be forgotten that the Union Government's action is an affront to the Government of India as well as to Indian sentiment. Fortunately in this matter the people of India and the Government of India are at one, and the Government of India have already publicly characterised the recent legislation as repugnant, unnecessary and inopportune. Had India been independent she would have considered this a casus belli against South Africa. But we may not think lightly of breaking away from the British Commonwealth of Nations because the ideal of co-operative interdependence on a footing of absolute equality is better than the ideal of isolated independence. There may also be a forlorn hope of representations yielding valuable results after the election fever in South Africa has cooled down and specially after thumping got by General Smuts. But representation unbacked by any action is valueless, as said by Lord Hardinge on a memorable occasion. As for action an amended Reciprocity Act is already before the House for consideration and the possibility of applying other feasible and proper measures is being carefully examined.

Sir, yesterday I was put several questions about the correspondence that took place between the Government of India and other authorities on this question, and also, about what the Government of India did in this matter before this Bill became law in South Africa. Therefore, Sir, I will tell the House the purport of the communications which were issued by the Government of India and the replies received by them in a chronological order, so that the House can realize what the Government of India has done so far with a view, if possible, to prevent the passing of that legislation or at least to postpone it.

16th March, 1943.—High Commissioner's telegram dated 13th March, 1943, intimating (i) Union Government's intention of "Pegging" position in Durban or in Natal pending receipt of Mr. Broome's report and the enactment of legislation on certain lines, and (ii) also of renewing the Trading and Occupation of Land (Transvaal) Restriction Act of 1939 for a further period of two years. Though it was known that Mr. Broome was conducting his second enquiry into Indian penetration, this was the first intimation regarding the pegging legislation and the Minister had still not made up his mind.

25th March, 1943.—The Government of India asked High Commissioner to represent to the Union Government that the Government of India maintained objection to statutory segregation and that pending receipt of Broome's report, any action by them would prejudice issue and advised him to adopt same attitude.

27th March, 1943.—The Government of India informed the High Commissioner that press reports here referred to European demand for immediate legislation and the Minister's threat to Indians of legislation with retrospective effect and asked for full information.

27th March, 1943.—High Commissioner's telegram dated 26th March intimating that he had conveyed Government of India's objection to statutory legislation.

28th March, 1943.—Instructed the High Commissioner telegraphically to secure an assurance that the Government of India would be given an opportunity to comment. The High Commissioner sent on this request to the Union Government on the 30th March, but it was ignored.

29th March, 1943.—High Commissioner intimated that the Minister had made the speech on 22nd March, in which he explained that Government's attitude was to await the Broome Report, but that if, as anticipated, legislation was found necessary, it would have retrospective effect from 22nd March. On 26th March this was debated in the Union Assembly. Anti-Asiatic speeches were made by European members and the Minister stated that the problem was not merely of penetration into European areas but also of proper housing for Indian community and that the Union Government was anxious to avoid offending susceptibilities of the Government of India which has played so vital a part in the war effort.

31st March, 1943.—High Commissioner telegraphed summary of Broome's Report.

4th April, 1943.—High Commissioner intimated that Field-Marshal Smuts was very perturbed by the extent of penetration disclosed in Broome Report and desired immediate legislation.

7th April, 1943.—The Union Government publicly announced their intention to legislate and to introduce a Bill on 10th April 1943. Draft of Bill handed by Minister to High Commissioner.

8th April, 1943.—Press communiqué issued by the Government of India expressing regret that the Union Government had not given them an opportunity to comment and had also paid no attention to their representation for the non-extension of the Interim Act in the Transvaal.

8th April, 1943.—Telegraphic second representation to the Union Government through the High Commissioner pointing out the inadvisability of undertaking the proposed legislation in war conditions, particularly in view of their assurance to Sir B. Rama Rao in October 1939 that no legislative action on racial lines would be taken for the duration of the war. Strong objection to statutory segregation was reiterated and suggestion was made that solution by voluntary restriction of purchases of property be explored.

8th April, 1943.—Telegram to Secretary of State telling him that the Union Government had not replied to the Government of India's representations and also informing him that reactions of the proposed legislation in India would be serious and unhappy.

8th April, 1943.—Press Conference held to explain the position.

10th April, 1943.—Government of India's protest handed over to the Secretary, External Affairs Department, by Dr. D. I. R. Muir at 6 p.m., on the 9th April and verbal request made that the Prime Minister may withdraw the Bill from next morning's Order Paper and to reconsider the position.

10th April, 1943.—Bill introduced in the House of Assembly; second reading being for the 14th April.

11th April, 1943.—High Commissioner telegraphed Union Government's reply to our second representation. The Union Government stated that hopes expressed in 1939 that the position regarding Indian penetration would be maintained or, at any rate, would not further deteriorate had not been realized as shown by Broome's Report, and that this had compelled them to legislate as otherwise there was fear of racial feelings.

12th April, 1943.—High Commissioner telegraphed how Union Government's reply was unsatisfactory and gave no reasons why Government of India were not informed of their intention to legislate. This is the courtesy shown to the Government of India.

His Majesty's Government asked their High Commissioner to impress upon Union Government need for conciliation.

13th April, 1943.—(Third protest): Third protest to the Union Government through the High Commissioner. It stated:

(i) Issues involved were of high importance to relations between two countries during war as also in post-war period so as to call for utmost efforts by both Governments to avert danger of lasting breach.

(ii) Existing licensing laws in the Transvaal operated as an effective barrier against Indian occupation of trading sites and that in view of first Broome report and the subsequent statistics there was no justification for continuing the Interim Act.

(iii) Suggested as a practical compromise that pending report of proposed Commission to examine housing and other civic needs of Indians, all intended transfers of land between Europeans and Asiatics should be subject to prior publication before confirmation and administrative arrangements should be made for hearing of any objections by a joint committee or by an impartial judicial committee.

14th April, 1943.—Personal telegram to Secretary of State informing him of the Government of India's representation to the Union Government and also telling him that feeling in India continued to run high.

14th April, 1943.—Third protest handed over to Field Marshal Smuts (copy to Mr. Lawrence). Second reading of the Bill.

21st April, 1943.—High Commissioner telegraphed his own proposals for non-statutory solution, viz., status quo regarding purchase of property but acceptance of principle of zoning in regard to actual occupation and appointment of a commission for the purpose.

21st April, 1943.—Last suggestion made by the Government of India was that provision be made in Bill empowering Governor General to bring it into force when he thinks fit, and that Act be held in reserve as guarantee of good behaviour. In the meantime suggested machinery in our third representation be put into force. This was handed over to Secretary, External Affairs on the 22nd April, while second reading debate was on in the Senate.

21st April, 1943.—Second reading of Bill passed.

22nd April, 1943.—High Commissioner informed that he could put forward his proposals first, keeping ours in reserve as last attempt.

25th April, 1943.—Union Government's reply to Government of India's third protest received. They found alternative suggestions unacceptable and were convinced that no action short of that envisaged by the Bill would either produce breathing space or atmosphere necessary to enable a permanent solution of problems to be found. They also said that by the Capetown Agreement or by their decision not to proceed with legislation contemplated in 1926, Union Government did not in any way surrender their freedom to deal legislatively with Indian problems in future.

26th April, 1943.—Bill passed third reading.

27th April, 1943.—Press communiqué issued by the Government of India expressing disappointment over Union Government's failure to adopt Government of India's suggestions and stating that the legislation was repugnant, unnecessary and inopportune.

Sir, this is the sorry tale which I have had the misfortune to recite to the House today.

Sir Syed Raza Ali (Cities of the United Provinces: Muhammadan Urban): Will the Honourable Member say something about the Capetown Agreement? Does the Capetown Agreement that was made in 1927 still subsist between the Government of India and the Union Government or not?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I think it is a point of argument.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: That is a question of fact. Give us the facts.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I think it still subsists.

Sir, I have taken a long time of the House and I thank the House for the patient hearing. I shall now await with great interest various suggestions which will be coming from the House in this matter, and I assure the House that we will give all the suggestions very careful consideration.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved:

"That the position arising out of the recent Pegging legislation in South Africa be taken into consideration."

There is an amendment in the name of Mr. Deshmukh.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh (Nagpur Division: Non-Muhammadan): Sir I move:

"That the following be added at the end of the motion: 'with a view to enforce the Reciprocity Act, and adopt measures to redress the grievances of Indians in South Africa'."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That the following be added at the end of the motion: 'with a view to enforce the Reciprocity Act, and adopt measures to redress the grievances of Indians in South Africa'."

Now the discussion will go on.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Will there be any time limit?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I cannot impose any time limit, but if Members wish to do so themselves, I shall be very glad to carry it out.

Sir Henry Richardson (Nominated, Non-Official): Sir, having had the advantage of sitting very near the Honourable Dr. Khare, I can congratulate him on the very admirable and full review of this unfortunate history which he embodied in a very long speech just made. It would be unfortunate, Sir, if the House gained the impression that Dr. Khare's vocal efforts were any indication of the other efforts which we hope he is going to make in other directions. I am sure that in the debate that is going to follow we shall give Dr. Khare encouragement and joy to think about any proposals that will be made and for the efforts that he will make and we hope that they will so encourage him that the next time he speaks everyone will be able to hear every word he says.

As long as we have sat in this House the European Group have consistently associated themselves with the various measures that have come under consideration for the safeguarding and improving of the position of Indians Overseas. One of our members, the late Sir Darcy Lindsay, was indeed a member of the deputation which visited South Africa in 1924-25 at the invitation of the Union Government to discuss the Areas Reservation and Immigration Bill. It was as a result of this Conference that the Cape Town Agreement was reached and this possibly marked the most successful stage that negotiations with the Union have ever reached.

Sir, we on this side have always maintained that a responsibility rests upon every self-governing Dominion to ensure that its minorities are fairly treated and are not subjected to discrimination. It is not merely a duty, it is common-sense because any one who looks to the future must realise that the presence in a country of dissatisfied and unhappy elements cannot but lead to future trouble. We have, therefore, no hesitation in supporting wholeheartedly the statement issued by the Government of India on the 27th April last and we agree entirely with the opinion then expressed that the recent legislation passed by the Union Government, in which the Government's racial discriminatory policy has been given statutory recognition in Natal, is repugnant, unnecessary and inopportune. It is repugnant because it introduces statutory compulsion instead of friendly compromise; it is unnecessary because no case has been made out for legislation. The Broome Commission did not report any such penetration as would justify legislation. If there had been reason to fear such penetration, a friendly enquiry as to the reasons behind such action should have been possible and this might well have resulted in measures unconnected with legislation which might have settled the problem. The action is inopportune because it accentuates differences within the British Commonwealth of Nations at a time when the optimum of agreement is necessary. Whatever reasons, however, may have inspired the Union Government in their recent actions, I cannot agree with those who feel that it indicates a lack of appreciation of the great part which India has played and is playing in the war and I sincerely hope that no political considerations will be permitted to cloud this issue. We understand fully the feeling of resentment and exasperation which this country now experiences but our aim must be to find remedies rather than to give way to unproductive thought or action.

At a time like this it is human to consider retaliatory measures and indeed in this imperfect world, occasions must arise in which nothing but retaliation will meet the demands of an aggrieved public. People may say: "We have tried negotiation and conciliation, but we have failed: what are we to do further to bring home to the opposite party the fact that the position is intolerable?" Once again I would ask the House to look into the future. I do not suggest that the action of the Union Government should be disregarded; they have attempted to meet a difficult situation by methods of compulsion which are not acceptable. But I do ask this House to realise that if and when in the course of time these objectionable measures are removed, and their removal may not be easy, the rescinding of retaliatory measures may equally prove to provide obstacles. My main point, however, is the same as that made yesterday by my colleague, Sir Frederick James, namely, that neither statutory compulsion on the one hand nor retaliatory measures on the other can ever lead us in the direction of a permanent solution. We have been discussing the Reciprocity Act and yesterday Sir Cowasjee Jehangir made it clear that he regards this measure as no more than a gesture. It is possible that the measure, even if its value is no higher than Sir Cowasjee puts it, may bring home to the Union Government the extent to which Indian opinion has been moved, but I agree with him that it does no more to effect a permanent settlement. We may continue with compulsion on the one hand and retaliation on the other until tension reaches a breaking point, but what will we have effected? When negotiation fails, the logical outcome is brute force and surely the world realises that this remedy kills as much as it cures.

Now, Sir, many Members of this House may be saying: "But where does this lead us?" The Group has given its support to the Reciprocity Bill that is now being enacted although we see in it no permanent remedy. But we do see that the feelings of the country regarding the matter must be made clear. What can we do to arrange something of more permanent benefit?

Obviously India cannot allow the matter to stand as it is, but I feel the House should consider the strong feelings which exist amongst many in the country, that in any course of action on which we embark, we should not, in attempting to help Indians overseas, do anything which would really hurt or injure them thereby making their position worse than it is. This is not a new point—it has been put forward on previous occasions and although it is now stated that exasperation has driven India to the utmost limit of endurance, surely we must still examine carefully any proposed retaliatory measures in order to be sure that we are not taking steps which will not only prejudice the case of Indians overseas but might have a boomerang effect, returning the violence of our throw on their heads and our own. In any case, since the High Commissioner is returning to this country in September surely it would be prudent to defer any retaliatory action under the Reciprocity Act or otherwise, until the Government of India and representatives of this House have had an opportunity of discussing the whole matter with the High Commissioner. Meantime I agree that His Majesty's Government definitely still has some responsibility towards India and this responsibility must remain until India is able to take up the reins of the self-government which is coming. His Majesty's Government might well request the Government of the Union to invite a further delegation to visit South Africa from India and once again to discuss the future of the Indian community there in circumstances of peace and in an atmosphere of conciliation. After having read the debates in the Union Legislature, I feel that there are grounds for hoping that much good might result. Field-Marshal Smuts in his speech to the South African Assembly used these words. He said:

"The country must be fair to its Indian people. The Government and the people of the country are bound to carry out the policy of the Cape Town Agreement. Complaints by Indians about their treatment should be investigated. They should not be made to feel that they are outcastes."

Sir, however much it may be felt that the action of the Union belies these words, they have been supported by other speakers, notably, Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Hoffmeyer and I am certain that there are many in South Africa who would favour conciliatory action with a view to effecting a permanent solution. In an atmosphere of exasperation, the suggestion of a delegation may give little immediate satisfaction, but although less spectacular than retaliation, I believe negotiation is more likely to yield permanent results. Unless the Indians in South Africa feel that their conditions are so intolerable that they must leave the country which happens to have become their home it may be assumed that they will in the future have to live and work with the people of South Africa. In that event, we all desire they should pursue their avocations as peaceful and happy citizens and the question before us now is "Will this measure be made easier or more difficult by retaliatory measures?" Most certainly we must be firm, but we must not forget the old saying:

"And oft as said I've heard defended
That least said is soonest mended."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I understand it is generally agreed that there should be some time limit for the speeches that are going to be made on this motion. It is suggested that Leaders of Parties should speak for half an hour and that 20 minutes should be allowed to other speakers. Is that generally acceptable to the House?

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): May I suggest that an exception might be made in the case of Sir Raza Ali who enjoys a special position in this matter?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I suppose he will be satisfied with the same privilege as the Leaders of Parties?

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Half an hour will be ample in my case.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): An exception will be made in the case of Sir Raza Ali who will be allowed half an hour if that meets the wishes of the House.

(Voices: "Yes".)

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Sir, at the outset of my speech, I must make a reference to the loss which has recently been suffered by the Union of South Africa by the death of its Governor General, Sir Patrick Duncan. Sir Patrick Duncan was a South African and had been settled in South Africa for more than 40 years. He was a man of very progressive views and what is more, I believe, to the point, was a very good friend of the Indians that have domiciled in South Africa. Sir Patrick Duncan was well known not only for the breadth of his views but for his ability and he was one of those who were included in the famous kindergarten of Lord Milner. The term 'kindergarten' includes all those young men whom Lord Milner invited to come to South Africa and help in the administration of the country. I remember the very many acts of friendship and friendliness that were done to us by Sir Patrick Duncan and his wife, Lady Duncan, both in 1925-26 when a deputation was sent out by the Government of India to the Union Government, as also during my three years stay in that country later. We sympathise, I hope that will be the sense of this House, I speak for myself, and I believe that this House will sympathise with the Union Government and the people of South Africa, as also with Lady Duncan and the bereaved family in the great loss that they have suffered.

Now, Sir, a very clear exposition of the position of Indians settled in South Africa was given by my friend the Honourable Dr. Khare. As he pointed out, there is no difference of opinion on this question. As a matter of fact, at no stage of this question was there any difference of opinion between the people and the Government of India. To our credit, we can claim that this is one of those few questions on which the people and the Government have always been able to see eye to eye. My sole object here today is to help the Overseas Department to the best of my poor ability. Unfortunately, it is too much for us to expect the Governor General to give more than a fraction of his time to the question of Indians overseas. All the same, I am glad to say that there have been three Governors General who did their level best to prevent the imposition of further restrictions and the further curtailment of the rights of our people in South Africa. Dr. Khare has already quoted from the speech of Lord Hardinge made in Madras in the year 1913. I know personally the great service rendered to and the great interest taken in the Indian question by Lord Reading to whose efforts was due the success of the deputations that were sent out by the Government of India to South Africa, one in 1925 and the other in the year 1926-27 of which latter deputation the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah, Member for Education, Health and Lands, was the Leader. Of this deputation, the Right Honourable Srinivasa Shastri and Sir Darcy Lindsay, to whom Sir Henry Richardson referred, were the members among others. Now, I should not minimise the services rendered by Lord Irwin, who took a personal interest in this question and to whose efforts mainly was due the success achieved by the Cape Town Agreement which, I am glad to know from the Honourable Dr. Khare, still subsists between the Government of India and the Union Government. On this I will have something to say later on. But it seems that a change has come over the Government of India's policy since the year 1941. That policy has ceased to be purposeful, resolute and vigorous during the past two years. The time at my disposal will not allow me to embark on this theme at any great length. I would, however, in passing refer to what happened in Burma and how the agreement was reached by the Government of Burma and the Government of India and how facts were suppressed from the Standing Emigration Committee which led to a hue and cry from end to end of the country. The question was raised in the Assembly as well.

The next question that was tackled in that year was the question of relations between Ceylon and India. The Honourable Member in charge, who was a very experienced man, paid a visit to Ceylon. Unfortunately, the impression on India was that the descendants of Ramchandrajai of old felt frightened of the might and main of the countrymen of Ravana. That question has not been finally decided yet and I am very glad that it was not finally decided in 1941 because it would appear that if a decision were to be taken on our relations with Ceylon in that year, perhaps a similar fate would have overtaken us and we would not have had a more satisfactory agreement than we succeeded in having with Burma. Then, there is another important point and that is the reason why I put that point specifically to my Honourable friend Dr. Khare. The net result of all these toils and troubles, tears and sweat, to quote Mr. Winston Churchill, was that an agreement was made between the Government of India and the Union Government in 1927. Strange to say or I should say it is fortunate to say that the Deputation under the leadership of Sir Muhammad Habibullah that was sent out by the Government of India was so strong that it succeeded in persuading the Union Government to invite India to send its representatives to South Africa to look after the interests of Indians there. That was a very great point scored indeed. As a result of that persuasion, the Right Honourable Srinivasa Shastri consented to go to that country as the first [Sir Syed Raza Ali.] Agent General of India to serve his people. The position of the Agent General till 1941 remained the same. Of course, I speak subject to correction. I think that this great change that was made in the functions and duties of the Agent General was effected in the year 1941 and that was the one saddest blunder ever committed by the Government of India. The position since 1927 had been that India's Agent General was the leader of the domiciled Indian community. He had to guide them in their deliberations; he used to give them advice; he used to attend to their grievances which ranged from a refusal to obtain a passage on a certain boat to questions of greater political importance. On every occasion he used to help his people. In fact, it was taken for granted that he should guide them and lead them and be a friend, philosopher and guide of the Indian community there. That office has been glorified into a grandiloquent title of "High Commissioner for India". But the fact is this that the High Commissioner for India no longer represents and can no longer make representations on behalf of the domiciled Indians in South Africa. He represents the Government of India and the Government of India alone and his main duty is to pass over such messages to the Union Government as he may receive from the Government of India.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: He is a mere post office.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: He is, as my friend Dr. Banerjea points out, a mere post office and it is the Government of India, I am afraid, who have reduced this unfortunate ex-Agent-General and the present High Commissioner to the position of a cypher. What is the justification for this and what have they gained? Wherever anything goes wrong with reference to its relations with the countries where our people have domiciled, the Government of India always take shelter behind the Standing Emigration Committee. Now, the Standing Emigration Committee does give its opinion on such questions as are referred to it by the Government of India. May I ask from the official Benches whether the question of the change in the duties of the Agent General was ever referred to the Standing Emigration Committee, which, after all, is supposed to be an expert Committee? The Government of India seldom bring those questions before the Standing Emigration Committee on which really the Committee is in a position to offer them sound advice.

The position with reference to the interim Act, which was re-enacted as the Pegging Act in April 1943, is a very confused one. Very shortly stated, the position is this that an interim Act was passed applicable to Transvaal alone and thereby Indians were prevented from acquiring property in predominantly European residential areas. Now, the Indian population of Transvaal, I am speaking from memory, is something in the neighbourhood of 30,000. Now, Sir, this year the provisions of that Act were made applicable for the first time in the history of India's relations with South Africa to Durban also and to such areas where Indians may be found to have penetrated and this thing could be done by executive order. Now, Sir, our population in Natal is, I believe, something like 180,000 to 190,000, again speaking from memory. The real Indian question relates to Natal. It is Natal where Indians are mostly settled, it is Natal where Indians are carrying on most prosperous business and it is to Natal that this thing was made applicable. Now, Sir, the question of segregation has been the subject of dispute between the Government of India and the Union Government for the last nearly 40 years. The main point is this. I say that, so that the House may be able to judge as to what the stake involved in the present struggle is. The Union Government claimed that they had the right to segregate Indians, namely, to demarcate special residential areas where only would it be permissible for Indians to reside. The attitude taken up by the Government of India, the old bureaucratic Government of India which I find on this question, on a number of occasions proved more independent, more helpful and more useful than the present supposedly democratic Government, always took the view that it was not open to the Union Government to segregate Indians, if Indians of their own free will wanted to settle in any Indian area, they can do it, but the Government had no right to impose its will on the Indian population in South Africa. We succeeded in this point, by "we", I mean the people of India and the Government of India, in warding off this danger right from the year 1903 down to April 1943. This is the first time that segregation has been imposed on Indians in Natal. Yet, I am surprised that a Cabinet Minister, who is generally supposed to be a friend of our people and who as the leader of the Delegation that visited India in 1936, made a number of speeches containing pleasant and encouraging statements. I am referring to the Honourable Mr. Hofmeyer who found himself in a position to support the Government with regard to the application of the principles of segregation to Natal. That is what we in this country do not realise. (Interruption.) About his resignation, I know its history only too well. That would take me five or six minutes. He opposed the Pegging Bill which was re-enacted with reference to Transvaal where only 30,000 Indians reside. But he supported the Bill with reference to its application to Natal where something like 200,000 Indians live. That is the point. I do not think it is necessary to go into that and emphasise that point.

A number of very apt and cogent quotations have been given by the Honourable the Mover of the Bill. My Honourable friend Sir Henry Richardson, who is nothing if not an optimist, has held out the hope that after all better sense might prevail with South Africans. He has also ventured, if I may say so, to quote from General Smuts. Sir, it is a most dangerous thing to quote anything from General Smuts, if he knows anything about General Smuts, one of the most distinguished statesmen of the British Commonwealth of Nations. If he knew anything, he must have known something about the history, then he would have thought twice before quoting General Smuts. May I give two quotations from General Smuts. The first is from a speech made by him in Union Parliament in April 1925:

"We shall gather on our heads the hatred of the whole of Asia. We shall feel the weight of that hatred in the years to come. The Bill will be taken as an outrage not only by Black Africa but by Yellow Asia. We, a handful of whites, are ring-fencing ourselves, first with an inner ring of black hatred and, beyond that, with a ring of hatred of the whole of Asia, for while only a few Asiatics are directly affected by this Bill, the inclusion of their name will win us the hatred of hundreds of millions of Asiatics from the north of Asia to the south."

Here is another quotation from a speech which General Smuts made in the Union Parliament a year later. This is Field Marshal Smuts, the champion of the rights of the poor, the defender of those who have no defenders in South Africa. This is how he delivered himself in 1926:

"An extension of the colour bar at this moment when the Prime Minister is on the point of bringing forward a new native policy, would be disastrous. Native opinion is largely in revolt. The natives are seething with discontent all over South Africa. It is not only the natives who are making difficulties. There is no doubt that when the Asiatic Bill is passed then the trouble will begin. We know it is coming. The Asiatic Bill must lead to the gravest troubles of administration. I knew that in 1924. In these circumstances, the Colour Bill gratuitously produced here is a firebrand flung into a haystack."

Yet, it is this same Field Marshal Smuts under whose Premiership, this most hateful measure has been placed on the Statute book.

I will hurry through a few more important points. One important point is this. It is said that Europeans have a genuine complaint in finding European residential areas penetrated by Indians. Sir, that is a most lame excuse. It is the excuse of the old wily wolf who reproached the innocent lamb that it was kicking up the dust in the boat in the midstream. There is absolutely nothing in that. The fact is this; this Bill applies to Greater Durban. Durban has been expanding during the past 60 years. When Indians went and settled there they used to live in the heart of Durban. As the city expanded its limits were also extended, with the result that those Indians who had properties in the heart of the city were bought off by the Europeans from time to time. Money is one of our weaknesses, unfortunately it is a particular weakness of those Indians who have settled in South Africa.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member has two minutes more to finish his speech.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: I will try to finish. These Indians were bought off and they went and purchased property several furlongs off. As Durban extended that area also became incorporated into Durban and they again sold out their properties and occupied properties at a further distance, and this thing has been going on. Therefore there is no such thing as Indians penetrating European areas. It is only an excuse and a very lame excuse at that.

Sir, a question was asked,—and that was repeated by Sir Henry Richardson,—as to what permanent remedy we can find. The ex-Law Member and the present Law Member are both present here, and it is a constitutional question of the highest importance. It is for them to tell us what the ultimate solution can be. I as an individual have given some thought to the question and my idea is that the only solution of this trouble which will occur again and again between various members of the British Commonwealth of Nations is to have a body on the model of the League of Nations of blessed memory, with this vital difference that whereas the League of Nations made it a rule that all decisions should be unanimous, a body representing the British Commonwealth of Nations should make it a rule that all decisions should be arrived at by a majority of votes only. If such a body were existing and this question were referred to that body, they would certainly be in a position to decide by a majority of votes which one of us two, we or South Africa, was in the wrong. It is not for me to hold out a threat to South Africa and what can the poor representative of a helpless country like India do?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member's time is up.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: I am finishing. But this much I can say that if a man is persecuted constantly he will fight. I do not think Indians can fight Europeans and use weapons against them which are used by Europeans against non-Europeans; but one thing they can do. There is such a thing as a common non-European front. Indians are a helpless community but surely it is open to them to join the non-European common front. And on this question let me tell you that they will not ask the Government of India for advice: Government have done what they could and we know that. Unfortunately Government have not been out to help them; they are going to help themselves. Now, as to practical suggestions, it is for my Honourable friend Dr. Khare to move in the matter, but as one who is interested in the question and who has studied the question, I may make a few suggestions at least for the careful consideration of the Government of India. It is not a question, I may say, of the Government of India placating this House or public opinion; they have got to do something. We are passing through a crisis and pleasant words will not do. Promises will not be sufficient and people want the Government of India to act and act instantly.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member must close his speech now; he has already exceeded his time.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: If you will permit me I will just make a few suggestions; I will not take more than a minute. Let them prevent the export of foodgrains and gunny bags from India; let them prevent the import of wattle bark and wattle wood and all wattle products. Thirdly, let Dr. Khare's Bill be passed at once and let the Government of India take courage in both hands and make rules within the next two months at the outside and put those rules against South Africans in India in force. Lastly

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member must close his speech now; it is not fair to other Honourable Members.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: I have done, Sir. Lastly, they should recall the High Commissioner, although I do not attach much importance to that; but the High Commissioner can do no good, thanks to the heroic efforts of the Government of India.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Sir, the Honourable Dr. Khare has given a full history of the South African question and I will not cover the same ground again but will confine my remarks to some of the points which have not been dealt with by him or not sufficiently emphasised by him. The settlement in South Africa first began in the year 1860 and Indian labour was not only demanded but encouraged by the offer of many facilities such as grants of land. This went on for a considerable time and guarantees were given for the proper treatment of Indians not only by the Government of South Africa but by the British Government. In Natal, on the occasion of the Queen's birthday, a proclamation was issued to the effect that there would not be any discrimination in regard to race or colour between man and man in that colony. Then, again in 1897 Mr. Joseph Chamberlain said at the Colonial Conference that there was to be no discrimination on the ground of colour or race in South Africa. Now at this time, it may be remembered, in some parts of South Africa a racial feeling was growing and the British Government said that one of the reasons why it went to war with the Transvaal Government was the ill-treatment of Indians. After the termination of the South African War Mr. Joseph Chamberlain emphatically asserted that henceforward there would be full equality of all races throughout South Africa. But that was not to be, and racial feeling grew in every part of the South African Dominion. In 1908, Lord Curzon, the great imperialist, said:

"In the first place, as regards South Africa itself, the Indian coolie, or at any rate, the educated man who is behind the Indian coolie, and who has conducted this agitation, sees that the coolie or the artisan is invited and even encouraged by our Government to emigrate from India. We send him to a Colony which he enriches by his labour, and then society there appears to turn round upon him as if he were a pariah dog. He is penalised there, not for his vices, but for his virtues. It is because he is a sober, industrious, frugal and saving man that he is such a formidable economic danger in the situation. And then the Indian remembers that, at any rate, in a large number of cases, he has fought for the British Empire in South Africa, and that it was largely owing to his efforts that Natal was saved. Now, if I may follow the Indian on to a wider field of argument, he claims the full rights of citizenship of the British Empire. I do not think it is for as to blame him for that."

And, then, he went on to say that the feeling was growing in India in recent years and that the feeling was so strong that it would be impossible to check it unless better treatment was meted out to Indians in South Africa. Other Statesmen of Britain and of the British Empire laid stress on these facts and as has been pointed out by the Honourable Dr. Khare and Sir Raza Ali, successive Governors-General took up the cause of India and fought for proper treatment of Indians. In the year 1914 there was an agreement, known as the Smuts-Gandhi Agreement, which helped to smoothen matters for sometime, but which did not settle the question fully. Between 1924 and 1927, racial feeling grew again in South Africa and took a very serious form. Several Bills were introduced, two deputations visited Africa, and as a result of the negotiations between India and South Africa, supported by the British Government, the Capetown Agreement was arrived at. Now, Sir, the attitude which was taken up by the Government of India at that time is to be found in the speech of Lord Reading delivered on the 21st January, 1926. He said:

"There had been continuous progress in the legislation in South Africa prejudicial to the position of Indians and tending to make it increasingly difficult for them to prosper or even exist in the Dominion, and further anti-Asiatic legislation had been recently introduced and was now pending before the Union Parliament. The purpose of this legislation was to empower urban authorities compulsorily to segregate Indians and confine their rights of trading and of acquiring property to the limits of the areas assigned to them."

Then he went on to say:

"We have never doubted the right of South Africa to guide the course of their own domestic and economic legislation, but in our view there are far wider considerations involved in this legislation than local economic policy alone. In our opinion they have an important bearing upon the Empire as a whole. The proposed measures are not, in our view, in accordance with those principles which bind the Empire together in a community of sentiment, and we hope this aspect of the proposals may yet commend itself to South African opinion."

This matter was raised by Lord Olivier in the House of Lords, and Lord Olivier, being an ex-Secretary of State for India, commanded great deal of influence there. Lord Birkenhead, the then Secretary of State for India took up the cudgels in favour of the Government of India. The result was the Capetown Agreement.

[Dr. P. N. Banerjee.]

During the last three or four years attempts have been made in various ways to over-ride this Capetown Agreement and, as a matter of fact, to nullify it altogether. The Government of India has made representations to the South African Government. But I have not read anywhere any pronouncements similar to those which were made by men like Lord Reading or Lord Hardinge or Lord Curzon.

Then there is another difference. The Government of Britain always sided with the Government of India in the fight for India's rights in South Africa, but on the present occasion what do we find? We find Mr. Amery saying in the House of Commons in reply to a Conservative Member that the Government of Britain had nothing to do with that matter. There had been no correspondence even between the Government of Britain and the Government of South Africa. The whole matter was left to the hands of the Government of India. Now, it is a well-known fact that India is weak, that India is still a subject country and in this crisis to say that the matter was left entirely in the hands of the Government of India was certainly a dereliction of duty on the part of the British Government. When India becomes self-governing, India will never invite the intervention of the Government of Britain in these matters, but so long as India remains subject to Britain and the Government of India remains a subordinate branch of the British administration, it is the incumbent duty of the British Government to fight the battles of India. But, unfortunately, so far the British Government has not raised its little finger to help the Indian Government.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member will continue his speech after lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Three of the Clock, Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) in the Chair.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Sir, when the House rose for lunch, I was discussing two changes which occurred in regard to the South African question in recent times. In the first place, I pointed out that whereas Viceroys like Lord Hardinge, Lord Reading and Lord Irwin took a very firm stand in this matter, we have had no pronouncement from His Excellency Lord Linlithgow on this question. I also pointed out that, whereas on previous occasions the British Government wholeheartedly supported us in our efforts to improve the condition of Indians in South Africa and to prevent disabilities being imposed upon them, the present Government of Britain had not lifted its little finger to help us. Now, in addition to these two changes another change has come about, and that is the change in the attitude of General Smuts.

My Honourable friend, Sir Raza Ali, quoted from the speeches of General Smuts in 1926 and 1927, and I will not repeat them. But there is one passage which he forgot to quote, and which I will quote now. He said:

"A year ago I warned the Union Government that the effects of their policy would not stop in South Africa but would provoke a world's conflict."

Now, Sir, the same General Smuts, who is credited with a great deal of foresight in the matter of handling political situations, has turned his face and what he now suggests is that penetration by Indians must be prevented. He says that the country was faced with a position that in Durban, which was a European city and which the Government were determined should remain a European city, large-scale penetration was going on and in his view this penetration must be stopped.

Now the question is: Has there been a penetration? And is the present attitude of General Smuts justified? To that the answer is given by no less a person than Sir Shafaat Ahmad Khan, the High Commissioner for India in South Africa. This is what he says with regard to this Pegging Act:

"India has been subject to a series of humiliating laws which have deprived it of social freedom and political rights. The community has been deprived of rights of representation in local bodies and public services, in Parliament as well as in the universities. It is denied admission even to hotels, cinemas, places of culture; is subject to colour bar, for which history affords no precedent. It seems the greater the progress made by the Indians the greater are the restrictions imposed on their development. There was no justification whatsoever for the Pegging Act. There would have been no encroachment on the European areas, had proper provision been made for housing. Promises in this regard in the past 20 years were not fulfilled. In any event, the amount of penetration which took place did not justify the Act which had been condemned by world-wide opinion."

Further, he says:

"The Pegging Act has dealt a heavy blow to the hopes for the amelioration of Indian conditions. It was a stigma which had aroused the conscience of the civilized world. The Act had played into the hands of Berlin and Tokyo which applauded it as propaganda against the United Nations."

Now, Sir, Sir Shafaat Ahmad Khan is the holder of a responsible position and he is not an agitator like most of us. He held a very important position in the University of Allahabad, and was a member of the Round Table Conference.

The question now is whether Durban is a European city. The population of Durban consists of 90,000 Indians and 100,000 Europeans. Can it be called a European city? Our answer is an emphatic 'no'.

Then, again, what is the provision made for the residence of Indians. Indians have been given a very small space within which they have to huddle themselves together, whereas the Europeans have kept for themselves very large and spacious grounds in which they can live in comfort. Now the complaint of the Indians is that they have to live in conditions which are most insanitary and they demand that in order that they may live in proper sanitary conditions this bar in the way of Indians occupying lands in other parts of Durban should be removed. Is that not a just demand? Is that an unreasonable demand? I say 'no'.

Then, Sir, comes the question whether any discrimination is involved in it. Some of my European friends say it is not a question of discrimination. But, then, what is it? If segregation of the Indian community from the European community is not discrimination, what is it? And further, if you give a very small space, a very small area of land to the Indians and give large areas of land to the Europeans, is that not discrimination? It is discrimination of the worst sort.

Sir, the next question is whether the moment which was chosen by General Smuts and his Government for introducing this legislation was an opportune one. Indians shed their blood in North Africa and West Africa in order to protect South Africa from being invaded by Germany. And what has been our reward? Our reward has been humiliation. We have been ill-treated, we have been humiliated.

The question now is, what remedies should we adopt to have the Act repealed? While discussing the amendment of the Reciprocity Act yesterday my Honourable friend, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, said that the application of the Reciprocity Act would be a mere gesture of resentment. But is a gesture of resentment an unnatural one in such circumstances? Humiliation after humiliation is being heaped upon us, and are we to remain content with what has been done by the Union of South Africa? We may be powerless to raise our hands against South Africa. My Honourable friend says that if he had the power he would act violently towards South Africa. But I would not go so far as that. Have we not the right even to show resentment? But our European friends also take the same view as Sir Cowasjee that we should not show any resentment.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): On a personal explanation, Sir. I never said that we should not pass the Bill. I said that the Bill when passed and the rules made thereunder you will eventually find that it is merely a gesture of resentment. But I did not say you should not do it. I supported it. I do not know what my Honourable friend is talking about.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: All right. I accept his explanation.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: What does the explanation mean?

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Whatever it may mean.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Trade and commerce and nothing for the honour of India.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Mr. Deputy President, my Honourable friend, Sir Syed Raza Ali, is either hard of hearing or hard of understanding. If my words were not clear to him I am afraid it is not my fault. I can give him arguments, but I cannot give him brains.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: God save me from my friends!

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: That is a very stale and coarse joke, which was indulged in by my Honourable friend, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir. My Honourable friend, Sir Henry Richardson, said that retaliatory action would have no effect.

Sir Henry Richardson: I said, no permanent effect.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: I stand corrected. But it will have some temporary effect. Even if there be some temporary effect, we must have recourse to retaliatory measures. But what is the concrete suggestion, alternative to retaliatory measures? He does not believe in brute force. He says that brute force has the other side also; it can produce evil effects. But then, what is his remedy? He answers, let us send a delegation. In other words, we will have to go down on our knees and implore the Union of South Africa to give us some favours.

Sir Henry Richardson: I never said that.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Then what is the meaning of going on a deputation when our representations have been turned down without the slightest degree of consideration having been given to them.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The Honourable Member has one minute more.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: What is the time given to me?

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Half an hour.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: I took only ten minutes before lunch.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Central Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Fifteen minutes.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: No, Sir. There is some mistake. My friends here will tell you that I spoke for 10 minutes.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: You spoke for 15 minutes.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): I understand you spoke for 13 minutes before lunch and now you have spoken for 17 minutes.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Now, coming to the remedies I would suggest the following. In the first place, a rigorous application be made of the provisions of the Reciprocity Act. Secondly, I would suggest that notice be given immediately to terminate the trade agreement between India and South Africa. Thirdly, I would ask Government to examine very carefully the articles in regard to which we should prevent export or import. Economic sanctions are needed. Even if there is some slight economic loss to us the self-respect and dignity of India demand that economic sanctions should be resorted to. Fourthly, I suggest that the High Commissioner and the Trade Commissioner should both be recalled. This is the view of the Indian Congress in Natal. Lastly, there is the question of a common non-European front. Some of our leaders are opposed to this policy, but whether we are opposed to this policy or not, a non-European front is bound to come in South Africa if the present policy of the Government of that country is persisted in. We see in the debate on the Pegging Bill the native representatives supported the Indian claims. That is an indication that the common front is sure to come whether we like it or not. These are measures which will have to be taken by the Government of India, and I hope the Honourable Dr. Khare will show his courage, strength and resourcefulness to apply these remedies and will lose no time in applying them.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): I rise to support the motion that has been moved. I must congratulate the Honourable Member on his having given us this very early opportunity. I must also say that it is very seldom that we have heard from Treasury Benches such a free and frank speech as my Honourable friend, Dr. Khare, has delivered in this House. I think he has placed before us all the facts known to him and we can very well say that on these facts there is no case left at all for the South African people now to plead that sufficient indulgence has not been shown to them for their inhuman actions. May I ask my friends on the Treasury Benches here as to the reasons why this country was plunged in war against the South Africans, I mean Transvaal. If at that time this country was plunged into war against the South African Transvaal for reasons which were much less provocative, much less humiliating and much less inhuman, I do not see how the British Government and my friends the European gentlemen can today tell us to put up with the present humiliating and inhuman conditions? I repeat what face have they got now as our trustees to ask us to bear when they made us fight these very South Africans for much less humiliation. Not only that but here we have got facts laid before us from the Treasury Benches to prove that since 1860 promises were given to us for equal rights by Great Britain. My main grievance therefore is against Great Britain, who claims to be our trustee. Natal and Durban have been always in possession of Great Britain. They are today also of Great Britain. It is this part of the country which we helped them to make prosperous and because we supported, all this humiliation is being allowed by them to be practised upon us. Remember these were not South African colonies. It is the revenge that the South African European people are taking from us for helping all along the British to maintain Natal and in the war against them. The Honourable Member in charge has just quoted as I have said the authority of no less a person than Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Lord Curzon, Lord Lansdowne and others that it was the Indians who helped Great Britain to keep up Natal and Durban for them from South Africans. It is because of all that and that alone that in the first instance the South Africans are showering these humiliations upon us and still here my friends opposite would tell us: have forbearance and patience. Do they wish us to wait until we are thrown out into the sea, because as they say they are our trustees. What is the position in India at present. We are told by Britishers 'You trust us because you are not united. It is our care and bounden duty, our honest care to see that you people are happy. Nobody robs you. There is peace and order, that there is no humiliation of one by another of you.' Your army, navy and your taxation which is under us is keeping up your honourable position, your happiness and your prosperity. For the sake of humanity in this world we are fighting with all this. May I now ask my friends why in this great war this country has been plunged in. Why we are asked and why have we been giving you in this great war our willing co-operation? It is because we believe and we wish that the tyranny of one class of man against the other shall not any more prevail. It is only for this reason and no other. What right has Great Britain to take those near and dear to me to fight in this war if not for this humanitarian reason. If so, why should and how can Great Britain now keep quiet when we are treated inhumanly. Day in and day out, we have been told they were pleading with South Africa to resist and ultimately the High Commissioner for Great Britain, we are told, also intervened. No satisfactory reply was made even then. We are told we made a begging request to them to please hold on. No reply is even then made and after all this humiliation what do we find our great trustee doing, I mean Mr. Amery? He says as His Majesty's Secretary of State for India that they have got nothing to do in this matter with the South Africans. Why may I ask, because they are European and form part of the British Empire. Why because they are in possession of the land which we made prosperous and now given over by the Britishers to South Africans. A badcheesh on our account was given to them. Is this fair? Is this a position which Great Britain can justify before the world at large and at this time of the year and more particularly when the public in India are all asking what our trustees are doing for us. Can you say that you are doing your duty and have been making an honest endeavour to maintain honour and prosperity of your ward. I want to know from the Treasury Benches, I want to know from Mr. Amery what right they have got to take my people to fight for others and not for our own selves. (An Honourable Member on the Treasury Benches: "Address the Chair.") I am addressing the Chair, but I pointed to look towards you as you are responsible more than anybody else. It is not an ordinary thing. I feel it. I am one of those who have been suffering. I want you to go and have an experience yourselves as to what are the conditions in East Africa, South Africa and Somaliland. I have been there, and I would like very much to see you there and then tell me how you feel. Just now you have heard from your colleague you are not allowed to go to a post office to post your letter except through a separate door and on a separate counter. An Indian is not allowed to go to a first class cinema. He cannot travel with an European in a first class compartment. There is therefore no use in saying that you are looking after us. You have 2 millions of our people to fight in the name of humanity. Are not these South Africans worst than the Germans and the Japs? It is a fact well known, which my Honourable friend, the Member in charge, has not brought out, that so far as the Asiatic laws are concerned in South Africa, the Japanese are excluded, even to this day, although he is an enemy of Great Britain. With the mighty British power behind them, they have made this distinction. That is there on the statute and no one can deny that even today a Jap can go there and enjoy equality of status but not my Honourable friend, the Leader of the House. You gentlemen on the Treasury Benches are part and parcel of this trusteeship to look after these and we helpless poor people. (An Honourable Member: "They are helpless.") I know we and they are helpless but our friends opposite will not admit it. If you are helpless, then please make room for somebody else and the sooner you do it the better. Act according to your conscience. Tell us frankly that you cannot do anything and see what we can do, if we are not interfered with. Now, Sir, a lot has been said by my friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangir here,—I am sorry he is not here—as to what will happen to those two lakhs of Indians now in South Africa. Does he not know that it is their care and their look out and those who have got dealings with them who have got their voice and not the voice of Sir Cowasjee Jehangir? I do not know which gentleman of the European Group has been to South Africa to see the conditions there. Perhaps Sir F. E. James has been there, still I think he would welcome South Africans even here into the European group. I do not know whether strictly speaking a South African Boer is a European or not but he would still grace the European Group Benches all right. If it serves their purpose, they will even consider some other race as Europeans. A German is an European and he would be admitted.

Well, Sir, the point that I was making is this that it is the people in South Africa who are concerned. You have got ample evidence, you have got the views of the Congress and you have got the views of the people that they do not want any more to remain in that condition and very rightly too. What right have you then got to say that they shall remain there in that condition? Have you sent them any help at any time? Have you got any right to say that you have become their grand-fathers or their trustees? What right have you got to consider something against their wishes on their behalf. The South African Indians do want for sake of honour that you sever your connection from Boers and we and they are prepared to bear all the consequences. Why don't you declare war against South Africans, may I ask? You often say that some people in India are against the present war and therefore you can put them into the jail. But what about those large number of people who are helping the present war purposes and yet their kith and kin are being ill treated? Must we go and beg of these South Africans? Must we not even use sanctions against them? Must we treat them as our equals here in our country? What is the position today? The great Field Marshal Smuts in the last war and in this war has praised the sacrifices and boldness of Indian soldier and he is the very man who in the midst of the war, as my friend Sir Syed Raza Ali pointed out, arrogantly stands up and passes this inhuman Act. Not only that but he sends out some South African officers and I am ashamed and pained to say that there are here South African commissioned officers under whose tender care our dear Indian soldiers are kept even today. Even if there are five South African officers, I wish each one of them to be sent away. I say it is a very risky thing that these people should be in India in charge of our soldiers. We have never believed and can have no faith in these people, specially when Field Marshal Smuts says that we are fighting for the cause of humanity, but he himself does the worst kind of thing possible. Can you trust these people? Why are you hesitating to take action against them? The South African Indian wants it and we also want it. The last war by British against South African Boers was also for such inhuman reasons. In fact, at that time there was much less provocation than the present one. The present war which we are fighting is also for the same reason. We do not want to remain as slaves and as dishonourable people. I think we ought not to countenance any more speeches of the type which would tell us even now to consider this question further with Boers. We have come to know definitely that the South African Indians want us to take action and they do hope that all the 40 crores of their Indian brethren will not forsake them. They do not want to remain as beggars, pariahs and as untouchables. They are prepared to bear all these consequences. Why should you bother yourself about them?

I have got record also to prove how they have treated the Japanese in such circumstances. They wanted to treat them also as badly. Therefore the first thing that the Japanese did was to tell them that Japanese navy was ready and further that they would not buy their wool. As soon as that was declared, a large portion of the real South Africans immediately said that the Japanese should be treated as equals and they are enjoying that position. At the present moment, you are in a position to effectively tell them that we will do all we can. It is a pity that although we have got Great Britain as our trustee, yet we cannot go to fight against the brutal men of the type of South Africans. They are more brutal than the Germans and the Japanese. Still we shall not do all we can, this is painful.

Sir, very recently some people have come from South Africa and they tell us that the definite policy of the Boers is that throughout Africa Asiatics must be removed except such of them as would remain as slave and on their sufferance. I can also point out that it was in 1918 when I had the privilege of leading a deputation of East African people before the then Viceroy of India, Lord Chelmsford. At that time we proved to the hilt that it was a few South Africans who went to East Africa who put up the English people there to remove the Indians from East African highlands. That thing is still going on in the British Colonies. This is a move which is not only against the South African Indians but against Indians as a whole wherever they be in Africa. I may say it is designed against all the Asiatics. They want to remove them from those places where Europeans think it is their monopoly to live. It is since 1918 that this thing is going on. It is all a tall talk which is intentionally made to wait for this and for that. Every day they will go on doing it. Here I am very sorry to say, as the South African Indians now frankly tell us, it was Mahatma Gandhi himself who with the British officers in South Africa requested, persuaded and forced the South African Indian not to join hands with the people of the soil. They are 80 lakhs and they and we would never have come to this position if we had co-operated. The Europeans in South Africa are only 16 lakhs from all over Europe and the Indians are 2½ lakhs. It is because of such policy that all the Asiatics including Indians have to suffer and will suffer still more. I am very sorry because of this policy and I hope my friend Sir Syed Raza Ali will also bear me out when I say that a man like Mahatma Gandhi has made that mistake. It has been the policy—we now feel to believe—of Great Britain also to see that we remain there without any friends. Any attempt made by the South African Indians to join hands with the people of the soil who are being humiliated as much as ourselves or probably little more has been and was being frustrated. My friend Sir Syed Raza Ali will excuse me when I say that he also advised as other Agents the South African Indians at times as Agent to the Govt. of India to keep away from the people of the soil.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: But this advice will not be heeded any more.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee: I am pointing out the policy that is there now. The very serious policy is there that the Indians should be ousted not only from South Africa, East Africa, North Africa and wherever they may be but that they should not come in contact with the people of the soil. Who is responsible for this policy?

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan (East Central Punjab : Muhammadan): Why have you forgotten Canada, New Zealand and Australia in this connection? There also the same policy prevails.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee: I do not know those countries; I am connected with this country only. I have lot of dealings with them and my own near and dear ones are there.

I can tell you frankly that two things are quite clear to me. The more time you allow, the more difficult it will be for you to do anything. The result would be that you will see that Indians there have got to come out here disgraced and starving. It is the definite and decided policy of South Africans and other Europeans to see Indians out of South Africa when they know that Great Britain who claims to be our trustee is not going to do anything. Even the Queen's Proclamation under which I owe my allegiance to His Majesty the King Emperor demands that my honour and prestige and position should be protected. But what has been done? Has any soldier been sent to protect my honour? Has a single ultimatum been given to save my honour? I feel British Cabinet Members are not fulfilling the pledge that His Majesty has given me for owing my allegiance to him that he will protect my honour wherever it is outraged. It is most unfair, it is most disgraceful. Whatever little measures we adopt, let us make a bold exertion to fulfill them. I have been speaking on this subject since 1920. Many of my friends whom you may call agitators or seditionists, or whatever else have been speaking about this. The Government have now in their possession sufficient facts to demand of Great Britain that she should uphold her trusteeship and fulfill her duty and the promises given in the Proclamation that my honour will be protected. I am not satisfied with the steps that have been taken. You may pass this motion. If my soldiers are to fight for the honour and for wiping out the humiliation that is inflicted upon others, then we demand that our soldier should be at liberty to fight for the honour of Indians first and foremost.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, we are discussing today a very important question. But before I go to the proper subject of discussion, I would like to thank the Honourable Member for Overseas Department for having agreed to my request and circulated to the Members copies of the Pegging Bill and a very useful note. I would like the Honourable Member and his colleagues to follow the practice of complying with the request of the Members of the Legislature wherever we would like to be enlightened on a subject. In Great Britain on occasions like these, white papers are issued giving full information to Members. Then, Sir, I would like to make another remark in connection with the Honourable Member's method of dealing with this question. The House is aware that this Department has a Standing Advisory Committee to advise the Honourable Member as well as this Legislature on matters connected with the Overseas Department. I feel, Sir, that the problems which the Government of India had to consider regarding the Pegging Bill were so important that the Emigration Committee should have been consulted. I know, Sir, that the Government of India had called a conference of leaders of public opinion in this country and some Members of the Emigration Committee were also invited. From a mere practical point of view, let me admit very frankly that a formal meeting of the Emigration Committee could not have given much more information or better advice to the Government of India than the conference did. But, Sir, I feel that when we are considering questions in a legislature, it is better to be formal, it is better to be constitutional. The Legislature has appointed an Emigration Committee to advise the Honourable Member for Overseas Department. It is our right, our constitutional right to insist on being consulted in a formal manner. I know that the Honourable Member until recently belonged to an organisation where people outside the legislature could control Members of the Legislature and the Government. I would like the Honourable Member now to revert to the good old democratic method of giving greater authority to the legislature than to any outside leaders however high their position may be. I would therefore like the Honourable Member to follow hereafter the democratic method of consulting his constitutional advisers. The Honourable Member could have easily called a meeting of the Emigration Committee, and invited the leaders or all those people who were in a better position to give advice and join the meeting of the Committee. I do not wish to dwell on this subject any longer.

As regards the problem which we have to consider on account of the passing of the Pegging Bill by the Government of South African Union, I feel, Sir, that the Europeans in South Africa have got a double policy. So far as the Indian community in South Africa is concerned, they would like to exploit Indians as long as Indians would permit Europeans to exploit them. If exploitation is not practicable, then the Europeans would like to squeeze out the Indians from South Africa. They wanted Indian workers to develop their agriculture and other industries, but they wanted them as indentured workers so that they could exploit them and get cheap labour. When they could not do that and when these workers were followed by Indian traders and some men belonging to other professions, they wanted to squeeze out the Indian community at least to the extent to which the Indian community refused to allow to be exploited by the European community for their own selfish ends. In securing this double object, the European heaped upon the Indian community all manners of harassment, persecution and humiliation. Indians could not own lands in certain localities. They could not trade without some restriction, they could not travel on certain parts of railways and they could not travel except on certain parts of trams. They could not enter South Africa without restrictions. Now, Sir, the Indian community naturally put up a stiff fight against this persecution by the Europeans out of selfish motives, and I feel that it is my duty on this occasion to pay my tribute of admiration to the South African Indian community for putting up a brave fight under very difficult circumstances. They have been continuing this fight for a number of years and I hope that in spite of difficulties and discouragement they will continue to fight in order to secure a position of equality and full citizenship. I feel, Sir, that these Indians who are fighting for their status in South Africa are fighting not only for themselves but for the status and dignity of the Indian community all over the world.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: May I ask whether the Indian people there have got any franchise or representation in the legislatures?

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I never said that the Indian community in South Africa has the franchise. Not only have they no franchise for the legislature but they have no municipal franchise either and their condition is really one of humiliation. But I feel that in their very difficult position they have put up a brave fight. Let me also on this occasion pay my tribute of thanks to those European members of the Union Parliament who stood by the Indian community and, in a House where Indians are not represented, represented the case of the Indian community. The Indians have carried on this fight under great difficulties. I have no doubt that we all agree that in this matter of defending the rights of the Indian community in South Africa and in other overseas countries the Government of India have generally stood by the Indian community. But I feel that they have not done as much as they could. My Honourable friend Mr. Hooseinbhoy Lalljee was right in taking the Government of India to task and telling them that although they may have done something they have not done everything that was possible for them. I do not like the Government of India to be whining and say that Great Britain or the British Government is the trustee for India and should act as trustees. Can not the Government of India, if they understand their strength and if they are a united body, compel the British Government to do what is right by Indians? Government of India may be in a subordinate position and unable to do certain things against an independent dominion, but they can certainly tell the British Government that they cannot carry on the government in India. And they can say this in a united voice and I am sure the British Government will do ten times more for the solution of this problem than they are willing to do today. I therefore feel that the Government of India cannot free themselves from their responsibility for the position in which we now find ourselves. It is true that steps are to be taken by the British Government, but we have got strength enough. If the Government of India will stand united and firm they can tell the British Government very frankly that they cannot go on administering India if the British Government will not do justice to Indians in South Africa or any other place. My Honourable friend Mr. Lalljee said that a great blame lies on the British people themselves for our inability to secure justice from South Africa. In the first place who are the people against whom our people have to carry on the fight in Natal? It is the Britishers and not the Afrikanders. Then Mr. Lalljee was also right in referring to what the Britisher was doing in East Africa. On the highlands a German can go and live, an Italian can go and live but not an Indian. We realise why the British people and the British Government cannot secure justice from South Africans; they will have to do justice to Indians within their own territories. But we in this House must tell the British Government, and through the Government of India, that something has to be done on this occasion. We cannot tolerate the injustice of segregating our people in South Africa.

Let me assure you, Sir, that I as an Indian am not anxious to live in the neighbourhood of a Britisher, nor are the Indians in South Africa fond of living in the neighbourhood of Britishers. Today they may have occupied certain parts in the neighbourhood of what may be called British localities because they have not enough space. It has been stated that for a population of 24,000 Indians the total area of the locality is 200 odd acres, while six times that area relatively is given to the Britisher or to the European. And therefore if the Indian has sought to live in the neighbourhood of the European it is not because he cares very much to live in his neighbourhood but because he has no other space to go to. I therefore feel that the case of the Indian is very strong, and if the Government of India will become firm and use all the influence which they possess they will be able to secure justice for our people in South Africa. By nature I generally favour methods of negotiation and so also by temperament, as long as it is possible to do so. But in order that it may be successful there must be a desire for negotiation on the part of both parties and not on one side only. I appreciate what the Leader of the European Group said that we should try the method of negotiation, but there is a limit after which it becomes impossible. I therefore feel that this House should give a clear indication to the Government of India to use all the measures which it is possible for them to adopt in order to secure justice for the Indian community in South Africa. We shall soon pass the Reciprocity Bill; let them give effect to the steps which may be taken under that Act. I know it is a gesture but let us begin with a gesture. If we begin the fight we may develop strength while we continue the fight. Therefore let us do what we can under the Reciprocity Bill. Let us also do what we can by using economic sanctions. There is no doubt in my mind that if we adopt economic sanctions this country will have to make some sacrifices, but you cannot conduct a war and a fight without making sacrifices. Therefore if this country wants to save the honour of the Indian community in South Africa it must be ready to make sacrifices.

The Government of India, I feel, should adopt these and other measures which are possible, and if they find that on account of a position of subordination they cannot do anything else to save the honour of the Indians in South Africa they must tell the British Government that they will not be responsible for the Government of this country. I hope, Sir, that this Legislature will give a direct mandate to the Government of India

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): The Honourable Member has one minute more.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: to take all the necessary steps to secure justice and to safeguard the honour of the Indian community in South Africa, and if the Government of India cannot do it, let the Government of India go to the British Government and tell them that they will not be responsible for the governance of this country.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: I think I can honestly congratulate the Honourable Member in charge on having, after all, made up his mind to give us a very brief gist of the correspondence and the negotiations that went on between the Government of India, His Majesty's Government and the Union Government, after having stoutly refused two days ago to tell us as to whether there was any correspondence still subsisting between them.

Sir, as far as I could hear the Honourable Member, I was greatly interested in the chronological summary of the negotiations which he gave, and if there was one item in that chronological summary of events that interested me more than any other, it was the reference about the last representation—may be the last or it may be about the last—made by the Government of India to the South African Government on this question. As far as I could follow, the gist of that representation was that the Government of India was prepared to agree to this Bill being passed on condition that it would not be put into operation except at the discretion of the Governor General. Now, Sir, I wonder if the Government were misled on that occasion by the rather mischievous analogy of the position of the Governor General under the Constitution in India. The Governor General in South Africa is the head of a responsible Government, and he has no discretionary authority either to suspend action under any legislation, or to take any positive action thereunder except on the advice of the Ministry. The Government of India seem therefore to have definitely capitulated on that occasion, in making the stipulation that this Bill might be kept hanging as a Damocles sword over the Indian community as "a guarantee of good behaviour"—I think I have taken down these words accurately. I hope I am expressing the sentiments of the Honourable Members on this side of the House when I say that Indian opinion will condemn this action of the Government of India in no measured language. It amounted to a betrayal of the trust which the Indian people had reposed in the Government of India. Sir, this reminds me of the remark made by a high authority like Sir Raza Ali when he referred to the fact that the policy of the Government of India in these matters definitely underwent a change since 1941. That is the year when the new Overseas portfolio was created as a separate responsibility for an Honourable Member. That is the year which saw the expansion of the Executive Council and the inclusion of a larger number of Indians than were in the Executive Council before. Sir, the experience of Sir Raza Ali only confirms the general impression that the expansion of the Governor General's Executive Council by the inclusion of a larger number of Indians has led to demoralization all round. Sir, I should very much like my Honourable friend to tell us as to whether, apart from making supplicatory representations now and again on occasions when the South African Government passed any measure of this type, and apart from being on the defensive, the Government of India has adopted a positive and constructive programme for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of Indians abroad, and, if so, what has been their policy in regard to South Africa? Have they ever urged the granting of franchise to India with any determination? I am reminded of the fact that in the year 1936, the native population of South Africa secured representation on the Union Legislature after a long continued struggle and, if I am not mistaken, it was about that time that the Indian demand in that behalf was also voiced very strongly in South Africa. I should like to know whether the Government of India at that time, or before, or thereafter sufficiently urged the claim of Indians residing in South Africa for franchise.

Sir, my Honourable friend, Sir Henry Richardson, was looking to the future and he was hoping that the future would solve some of our difficulties. As the present measure is a result of the antagonism displayed by Britishers more than anybody else in Natal, may I ask him what he and his community in India are doing for the purpose of securing the minimum franchise for Indians in the Union of South Africa? Are they in communication with their compatriots? I dare say, Sir, they have many means by which they can hold communion with their compatriots in South Africa.

Now, Sir, I find that while the Indian Congress in South Africa held a special meeting in Johannesburg in June last, the President stated, among other things, that the passage of this measure was possible because the Indians were the only section of the community without representation on the legislature. It is therefore a very serious matter. It won't do for us merely to consider a retaliatory measure now, or hereafter, or to trust to the future to take care of the Indians in South Africa.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

I wonder if either the Government of India or the European community in India think that it is any part of their duty to take any action for assisting the Indians to get the minimum franchise rights in South Africa so that in future they can fight out their own battles instead of having to depend upon us here and the influence of Indian opinion to help them whenever they are in trouble. When I heard my Honourable friend, Sir Henry Richardson, I was reminded of the observations made by Field Marshal Smuts while speaking on this Bill. The observations are to this effect. He made it plain that he did not like the Indians in South Africa to look to outside agencies for help in these matters. He said:

"At present they invariably look to the Government of India, but I suppose that in course of time they would learn to look to public opinion."

I do not know which public opinion he meant—and to the European community in South Africa for justice and fairplay."

I believe, this might find a response in the heart of Sir Henry Richardson, and he might think that the Indians should not aspire after franchise but they should look up to the European community in Natal for justice and fairplay. He continued:

"But at present their weakness was that they immediately appeal to outside opinion and in that way the mode of solution was more difficult."

My honourable friend says that we are in a helpless position and that nothing that we can do in this Legislature or in this country can possibly help our brethren living in South Africa; I am not of that pessimistic mood. There must be something which can be done. The Field Marshal has found it difficult to withstand the impact of public opinion in India, otherwise he would be the last person to complain that the Indians in South Africa should appeal to Indian opinion in India.

The other point to which reference was made by my Honourable friend, Sir Raza Ali and which also intrigued me very much, was that the position of the Agent General in South Africa has been reduced to that of impotence. I very much hope that the Honourable Member is going to reply to this point. I am bound to accept the high authority of my Honourable friend in making this statement. But he is reinforced in this particular opinion by certain observations which Dr. Malan, the Opposition leader, made. Dr. Malan, it may be remembered, was the Minister-in-Charge when the Capetown Agreement was concluded and this is what he says:

"The appointment of the Agent General for India had been made for quite a different reason than for what his presence in South Africa is today. Today, the presence of the High Commissioner for India meant unfair interference by another country in the affairs of South Africa."

The Honourable Member owes an explanation as to what this signifies. We are in the dark as to what may have happened in the closed chambers of the Government of India in this regard, but I am afraid the House will be disposed to agree with Sir Raza Ali that by the action which the Government of India has taken in this matter they have weakened the position of the High Commissioner. Nobody seems to want the High Commissioner.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: For giving him a higher title!

Mr. K. C. Neogy: By that they have made him powerless and impotent. Indian opinion does not want the High Commissioner for India. Indians in South Africa do not. Here we have responsible Members of Parliament in South Africa asking for the recall of the Agent General. Is it dignified for the Government of India in these circumstances to insist upon the continuance of their High Commissioner in South Africa?

We have been warned as to the possible repercussions which retaliation on the part of India might produce to the prejudice of the interests of Indians in South Africa. A note of prudence and caution was sounded yesterday on this point by my Honourable friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, and the same point has been emphasized by Sir Henry Richardson. Sir, it is really a matter of national self-respect, and as has already been pointed out by the speakers, the Indians in South Africa do not want to live in such conditions of degradation and humiliation. Who are we to adopt an attitude of prudence? Who are we to advise them to keep quiet and put up with indignities and insults of this kind? The Indians in South Africa are looking to us for support in this matter.

Now, Sir, when I consider the situation in India at present, I find that people are dying in the streets from starvation. Can the South Africans be in a worse position, supposing we take any retaliatory action? Last autumn as a result of the "Black and Tan" policy pursued in this country in Delhi and other places under the auspices of the Government, innocent Indians were shot like pariah dogs. Can the lot of Indians in South Africa be any worse if we adopt retaliatory measures? As part of their policy of reprisal, responsible officials employed the military and the armed police to insult our women-folk in different parts of the country last autumn. Can the lot of South Africans be any worse if we pass measures of retaliation?

Sir, even if there be any risks involved in this measure, we must be prepared to face the consequences, and therefore I have great pleasure in supporting all the various suggestions that have been made by my Honourable friend Sir Raza Ali and my leader, Dr. Banerjee.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Sir, after all that has fallen from so many Members in this House, I will be very short. From the speech of the Honourable the Member for Indians Overseas two things are clear. First of all that the Government of India counts for nothing with the South African Government. Their representations count for nothing. The Government of India in their opinion is nothing but dirt. Now, another thing which has given me great hopes is the Honourable Member's remarks when a question was put by. I think, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir or a member of the European group, to be quiet, patient and conciliatory. He said that there were occasions when it was necessary to be so but there was a limit to carrying on negotiations and to be conciliatory.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: May I point out that I never said that the Honourable Member should be conciliatory or that this House should be conciliatory.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: But there was this remark and there was this reply: "There is a limit to carrying on negotiations". Then there was an enquiry whether the Capetown Agreement still stands and the Honourable

[Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh.]

Member said, "I think so". Well, that Agreement does still stand. Let us not be under any delusion. If you think that that Agreement is going to help you, that that Agreement has not been relied on as the basis of representations by anybody up till now, then you will be very wrong in supposing so. Let me tell you, Sir, the pathetic history of how the Government of India was feeling helpless and their negotiations not listened to.

When this Act was thought of in 1941 representations were made in 1942 by the Natal Indians' Association in which they were prepared to accept certain voluntary restrictions, so that they may be free to carry on their trade. Then when the Pegging Act was on the anvil on the 9th April 1943, there was a representation by the Natal Indian Congress and in paragraph 4 of their representation they specifically mentioned one of the conditions imposed, viz:

The Union Government further believe in and adhere to the principle that it is the duty of every civilized Government to devise ways and means and to take all possible steps for the uplifting of every section of the permanent population to the full extent of their capacity, and press and accept the view that in the provision of education and other facilities, the considerable number of Indians who will remain part of the permanent population should not be allowed to lag behind other sections of the people."

Then in clause 5 they say, "You have broken your promise, the pledge which is embodied in this Cape Town Agreement which was arrived at voluntarily between the two Governments." Then in para. 6 they say: "While we maintain that the final determining factors should be the Cape Town Agreement",—they refer to the situation. So, it is evident that this Cape Town Agreement—which had been arrived at voluntarily between the two Governments represented there by different parties—is not going to help us. That has been treated by the South African Government as a scrap of paper. The Act was assented to on 28th April 1943. The policy underlying this Bill is anti-Asiatic, which means, a racial policy. How can it lie in the mouth of a South African to say "See Hitler or look at this Nazism", when the South Africans themselves are persecuting, or hounding a particular community or race from their country? Is it open to them? It is open to us, to say that these are bad things. But how does it lie in their mouth to blame Hitler, or to blame Nazism? Are they in any way better than what Hitler is? Hitler is at the utmost persecuting a particular community. But here the whole Asiatic race is being hounded out of South Africa. It is all right to say that the war effort should be made, that we should kill Nazism. We do not say that we should not kill Nazism, but let these people be true to the principle, who want us to shed our blood for their safety, who want us to shed our blood so that their civilisation may be preserved. It is shameful on their part, when they want us to shed our blood for them, not even to pay the slightest respect to our claims. It has been said that these are war times, no measure like this should be passed, nothing should be talked about these people because it would be against our interests. As a matter of fact, if those people had cared anything for us, the first thing that they should have done, as the Americans did, namely, give up their extra territorial rights in China—these people should have voluntarily said, "No. Indians are helping us. Annul this Pegging Act that we have passed". But they stick on to their present policy, they persist in it, in order to increase the persecution of Indians. It was said that all that this Act does is, it insults, it is insulting, it is disgraceful and that sort of thing. No. It is more than that. It does not merely touch your honour. It touches your stomach, because it prevents you from carrying on any trade or any business. As a matter of fact, they have made it impossible for you to live in that country in any place. They have said so: "We want white Durban. We want white South Africa". When they say so, what earthly reason is there for them or for any Government which is their ally to say to Indians, "Be quiet, be peaceful". How does it lie in the mouth of anybody to say, "Be conciliatory". It appears from the history that has been given to us—negotiations only were carried on. Was anything done by the Government of India except negotiation, except making a few representations? How long shall we wait? Would you be prepared to do anything, or would you still sit quiet? If you do not want to do anything, if you do not wish to take any action, what course do you suggest? Negotiations were tried and these have failed.

Now shall we sit with folded hands? If I had my own way, if my Government had been a thoroughly Indianised and representative and responsible Government, the first thing that I would have done would be this. I would have said, "Now, I am not going to co-operate with you in war." I would have said to the British Government, "It is your business to settle this affair. Otherwise you do not know what the effects of this sort of anti-Asiatic policy would be". Once I had made a speech on the floor of this House and I said, that in the last war, at the time of the Treaty of Versailles, Japan insisted on racial equality. Japan wanted that clause to be included in the Treaty of Versailles. Mr. Hughes the Australian Minister, now an ex-Minister, then objected, and that objection was raised on the representations of His Majesty's Government. What sympathy will His Majesty's Government have? If they are going to instruct their own Ministers and others in this fashion, what help can we get? It comes to this that the policy of conciliation has failed, the policy of waiting and seeing will certainly fail. It is not going to help us any further. If with this background we proceed further to see what should be done to redress the grievances of our countrymen in South Africa, I say, apply the amended Reciprocity Act at once. It has been said that it is a gesture. I do not want the idea to go abroad that it is merely a gesture. It is a weapon and I want to see it used as a weapon. If you possess an inferiority complex that this will not work, that it will be nothing but a gesture, that the House wanted to make it a gesture and that people should understand that it is nothing but a gesture then we shall not be able to do anything. You may possess that inferiority complex. I say, cannot you shed that complex and rise to the occasion? If you cannot rise to the occasion, you do not deserve to be in the place where you are; it will be better if you make room for others. Let us give up this inferiority complex and I should ask the Honourable Member to put this Act into force at once as far as it possibly can be done and should be done, and not leave it as a mere gesture. That will certainly mean that he will have to be very prompt in making rules. The making of rules should not be postponed to such a date that Indians in South Africa will have to undergo more difficulties and sustain more disabilities. It was suggested a sort of a League of all the nations of the British Commonwealth to decide questions like this, whether a particular method is justifiable or not and that there should be a unanimity of opinion if any decision was to be arrived at. Knowing as we do that we shall be alone, there will be no one on our side, I think it is plain and apparent that, if we want anything, if we want to remove any disqualification, that disqualification will never be removed because there will never be a unanimous decision in our favour. If justice was a thing on which everything was to be decided in this world, then justice was on our side. The whole history given by the Honourable Member shows beyond doubt that justice is on our side. It is not only he who makes that statement, but Mr. Winston Churchill said that justice was on our side. But for our soldier, but for our labourer, but for our artisan, these colonies would not have been developed at all and they would not have been living in comfortable countries, prosperous countries but might have been living perhaps in marshy lands infected with all sorts of diseases. It was the Indian who was the pioneer in those colonies, who put them in proper order. The white men are now turning out the brown.

It has been said, "Oh, all right. What other sanctions are there?" Some sanctions have been cited by Sir Syed Raza Ali. He has mentioned wattle and wattle products. He has also suggested that food grains should not be exported, also that gunny bags should not be sent. But then it is asked, if you stop these exports and imports, in other words, this trade, what will happen to the Indians? We are more careful about the Indians in South Africa. We are more anxious about their interests than they are. That is what the Britisher used to say. The Britisher said and says to the Indian 'You do not know your interests'. He does not want to do anything. He sits quiet and tells that we do not know our interest. You are saying the same things. You are inactive and you want others to be inactive. Who is going to suffer the results. Sitting quiet has not improved matter. The history of this matter from 1860 to 1943, if it proves anything, has proved that the Indian has been continually losing ground. He was confined to a particular area. Then he lost the franchise and trade thereafter. They are continually losing ground. It is a history which is painful to any Indian who is keen about the interests of his nationals in South Africa. It is therefore very desirable that this Act should be put into effect and other measures also such as trade. I do not care how many people there are in Government service today. You can sack them. It is not a question as to how many there are. There are a few persons. What does it matter? They must represent to their Government and complain. My friend Mr. Lalljee gave you an instance about the Japanese. Let me tell you the whole story as I learnt from a gentleman. He is not a man who sits at the table and does some clerk's business. He is a trader who carries on export and import business. I put to him this question: 'Do you mean to suggest that if this trade was to be stopped the South Africans will not suffer?' He says 'I carry on that trade'. Today the Textile Association is of the opinion that the trade should be stopped. When you have instances of men who are carrying on business, whose interests are likely to be affected, when they tell you 'please do this thing' because that is the only way to save us, is it too much for me or for any Indian to ask the Government to do it? If anything, they are likely to win and not lose. The instance was given of a Japanese. This instance was also given to me by another man who has got trading business. A Japanese was insulted. He went to the Consul for Japan who protested to the Union Government. There was a regular debate in the Parliament. One man got up and said 'Look here, if you are not going to improve matters, do you know what will happen. The Japanese navy will be at our shores'. In other words, they are afraid of force. The will and the authority and the sanction behind this Government is lacking. Otherwise, we have soldiers who are second to none in the whole world. As I said, we are in a very unfortunate position. In the South African Parliament, the Afrikaner said that the Japanese navy will be at their shores. That made them think. Side by side with it, there was a representative of the farmers. He said "I do not care who lives here and who does not live here. We are carrying on a wool trade with Japan. If Japan tomorrow stops this trade, where will we be?"

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member's time is up.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: I am closing my speech. I say that the Reciprocity Bill should be put into force and also the other sanctions should be put into force.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Mr. President, there is hardly any point which has been left out in the debate which has taken place on the motion of the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas. Let me compliment my Honourable friend Dr. Khare on the very lucid survey that he gave of the position of Indians in South Africa from the very beginning. This question of racial discrimination against Indians is not a new one. It has been a very serious problem for the last 30 years or more and this Pegging Act, the smutty act of Field Marshal Smuts, is the last straw on the camel's back. As soon as this legislation was placed before the South African Parliament, a wave of indignation and resentment passed throughout India, from one end of the country to the other. There was not a single Indian, of any school of thought, who did not condemn the action of the South African Government. It was not only the non-official opinion but even the Government of India resented this last action of the South African Government. My Honourable friend Sir F. E. James who is one of those Members who choose their words very carefully and always mean what they say, did not mince matters when he stated that it was a sad day for the British Empire that a thing like this had happened. He is not one of those who do not understand the distinction between various forms of expression. I entirely agree with him that it is this Empire mentality which is responsible for this tragedy. My Honourable friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangir talked of a commonwealth of nations. The British Empire is not a Commonwealth of Nations. It is an Empire or a "Corporation of exploiters". As long as India is not a free country, we cannot by any stretch of language call this British Empire a Commonwealth of Nations. When India is free, when India is independent, when India is on equal terms with other parts of the British Empire, only then I think we will be justified in using this expression. I am sure that if India today had enjoyed all those privileges, all that freedom which is enjoyed by other Dominions and England, the position of our nationals in South Africa would not have been what it is today. And we would not have been in this helpless position. Sir, it has been our misfortune in the past that we have always felt satisfied with noble phrases and sympathetic words and Field-Marshal Smuts, let me tell him from here, has played that game too long. India is no longer a country which will be satisfied with mere words or noble phrases. India will look at the action of every nation as far as its interests are concerned.

It is really most unfortunate that His Majesty's Government have not played their part properly in this dispute. I repeat it that Mr. Churchill, whose voice today is the voice of the British Empire and not only the British Empire but the United Nations, has not attached that importance to this question which it deserves. We were told, and rightly so, by my Honourable friends the Leader of the European Group and Sir Frederick James that it was a tragedy that at a time like this when the British Empire was fighting for the freedom and independence and for the honour of the peoples of the world, a thing like this should have happened in a part of that Empire. But that is not enough. I want to know what concrete action have the British Government taken in bringing it home to the South African Government the seriousness of this problem. The Honourable Dr. Khare this morning only mentioned, as far as I can recollect, that the British Government wrote to their High Commissioner in South Africa. We are not aware what was the language in which that communication was intended to be made to Field Marshal Smuts. The Prime Minister of England is not the one who does not know what to say and when to say or who does not know what his words would mean to the other party. I have no doubt in my mind that if the British Government had put proper pressure on the South African Government they would not have taken the action which they did.

Mr. President, it is all very well to pay compliments to the Indian troops who have gone thousands of miles away from their native shores to fight the battles of this British Empire that they are second to none as far as their fighting qualities are concerned. But is that the only use for which the Indians are made? Is that the only consolation which the Indians are to get that they are second to none where the shedding of blood is concerned? I want Indians to be second to none where equal rights and equal opportunities are concerned. The Indians are considered fit to die on the same battle-fields with the South Africans, but they are not considered fit to breathe the same air in the country where they have made their home. This, I think, is a very black spot in the British Empire, and if it is the earnest, honest and sincere desire of the British Government that those countries, those nations, which are today part and parcel of the British Empire should remain for ever in that Commonwealth of Nations which the people of Great Britain are dreaming of, then it is absolutely necessary that all the peoples of the various countries in this British Empire and the future Commonwealth of Nations should receive equal treatment. As long as there is this racial discrimination, I, for one, shall never call that a Commonwealth of Nations of free peoples. And let me tell you that if ever this combination which is in existence today crumbles to pieces, it would be due to this racial discrimination. There is nothing that hurts more the self-respect of a nation than racial discrimination. The speeches that we have heard on the floor of this House are an eloquent testimony to the strong feeling which every Indian has over this question.

My Honourable friend, the Leader of the European Group, stated that negotiation was really the best way of finding a solution. I am in entire agreement with him. Has the Indian Government ever refused to negotiate with South Africa? It is the South African Government which has refused even to consider the proposals that were made to them by the Government of India. It is not a Government of irresponsible people; it is not a Government of so called agitators or those who are considered as always out to give trouble to the Whites. It is a Government which is considered by the British people and the British Parliament as a responsible Government and a Government which would never make any representation which would be anything but fair and just. But how has the South African Government treated this Government of India? It has treated it—I hope my Honourable friends who are part and parcel of this Government will forgive me—with contempt, and I think it has treated it with contempt because this Government deserves contempt. This Government has not got that back-bone which is necessary for every Government to have. Sir, we do want to negotiate. I do not say that we do not want to negotiate with South African Government. But I want to ask my Honourable friend the Leader of the European Group that if the other party says: "I do not want to negotiate, not only do not want to negotiate, I do not even want as much as to hear what you have to say", then what would you do? What should India do? Are we to sit helpless? Are we only to satisfy ourselves by saying that this is kismet. I think we have suffered too long on account of this mentality. We must get rid of this kismet mentality. We must now adopt a new mentality, we must change our mentality from that of depending on kismet to that of depending on action. Certain proposals have been made by my Honourable friend Sir Syed Raza Ali who, if I may say so, is an expert on this question in this House. I do request the Government to consider those proposals. I want you to get rid of this idea that we are fighting a war. We are fighting a war, for what? We are fighting a war for the honour of every nation. Are we going to sit idle and see our nationals ill-treated and humbled because we are fighting a war? Is that any reason why we should sit quiet? If other nations, who are really to get more benefit out of this war than we would, had considered it as an important factor, then I am sure the South African Government would not have taken this action. War or no war, Mr. President, I do earnestly appeal to this Government to take the strongest possible action which lies in their power in this matter. To my mind the honour of a nation is greater than anything else. It is the duty of those who are sitting over there to safeguard and protect the honour of the peoples of India wherever they may be.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, before replying to the debate and the points raised during the course of it, I associate myself wholeheartedly with the condolence expressed by my friend Sir Syed Raza Ali over the death of Sir Patrick Duncan, the Governor General of South Africa. My Honourable friend Sir Syed Raza Ali who was the Agent in South Africa and who knows all about it has raised a point that in changing the designation and changing his function, he has been degraded and his dignity has been lowered. I do not think so, Sir. Because the High Commissioner in South Africa does not now represent the Indian people in South Africa, but the Government of India, that does not mean that his dignity has been lowered. It means on the contrary that his dignity is enhanced. Besides his advice is always available to Indians there who wish to seek his advice, which is freely sought and as freely given. There is no difficulty about that. Formerly he was only Agent General, he is now more or less an ambassador in South Africa.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: Ambassador? What are his duties? What are his functions?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: He carries on negotiations as ambassador between two Governments. That is all I can say.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Not very illuminating.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: But yet cogent.

Another point was made by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy that he has become impotent. No doubt that is so. So far he has failed in giving redress to Indians there or to receive any respect for the negotiations carried on by the Government of India. That is a fact which must be admitted. We have admitted that freely. But I can tell the House that his presence there is resented as an interference from another Government to that Government and they think that if he goes away it would be a good riddance. That does not show that he is impotent, but it shows that he is a sore in their eyes.

I am sorry, Sir that when I gave a short summary a cryptic summary of telegraphic communication that passed between these two Governments, perhaps I conveyed a wrong impression because it was cryptic. But I could not help it. That led my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy to charge this Government with capitulation. That is not a fact. Representation as suggested by him was not in fact made to the South African Government. The fact is that some Indians in South Africa expressed that they were prepared to go to the extent that the Act should be passed but kept in suspense. That was what we told the High Commissioner, that as a last resort he should convey that desire of South African Indians to the Government of South Africa. In fact it was never done and the Government of India was never in agreement with it, but was always against it.

My Honourable friend Mr. Joshi has raised the point about the Standing Emigration Committee. I think a couple of days ago, I declared in this House that I would call a meeting of the Standing Emigration Committee during this Session.

An Honourable Member: Better late than never.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: That is a matter of opinion.

I have called a meeting of the Standing Emigration Committee to be held on the 7th August. This Session is going on for some time. That shows how much I value the advice of this Committee, I value the advice that this Committee would tender me. No doubt I first called some people but that does not mean that I want to subtract from the value of anybody. I called a meeting of certain private gentlemen whom I considered representative of different schools of thought in India. I thought I should get some directions from them first, and finally I wanted to call a meeting of the Standing Emigration Committee. I wanted to place before them all that I gathered from the meeting of the private gentlemen referred to by me and then seek their final advice. Does it show scant regard for the Standing Emigration Committee or the highest regard?

Another point has been made that Indians have no franchise in South Africa. It is a fact that franchise has been taken away from them. But the Government of India have urged their claims, and the South African Government knows it. It was also said that the native population even though segregated have got representation, but not Indians. The representation which the native population enjoys is not direct representation at all. They are represented by one or two Europeans. Surely I do not think Indians want such representation.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Out of five, three are in the Senate and two in the Assembly.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, I think there are no other points raised in this debate which call for any reply from me. I assure the House that whatever suggestions have been made in this House will be carefully and anxiously considered by me and it will be my duty to do all I can in this matter. I can assure the House that I shall do whatever I can subject to the limitations I have. That is all I have to say on this measure and I thank all Honourable Members for their valuable suggestions.

[30TH JULY, 1943]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I will first put the amendment of Mr. Deshmukh to the House. The question is:

"That the following be added at the end of the motion:
'with a view to enforce the Reciprocity Act, and adopt measures to redress the grievances of Indians in South Africa'."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Now I will put the amended motion to vote. The question is:

"That the position arising out of the recent pegging legislation in South Africa be taken into consideration with a view to enforce the Reciprocity Act and adopt measures to redress the grievances of Indians in South Africa."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Half Past Two of the Clock on Monday, the 2nd August, 1943.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 2nd August, 1943.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL'S ADDRESS TO THE COUNCIL OF STATE AND THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

His Excellency the Governor General, having arrived in procession with the Presidents of the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly, took his seat on the Dais at Eleven of the Clock.

His Excellency the Governor General: Gentlemen, it is a great pleasure to me to meet you again today, though I am sorry that it should be for the last time. You and I have been through difficult times together, and I shall always remember with gratitude the help and consideration that, through seven and a half years of my Viceroyalty, I have had from the Central Legislature; and the guidance that its members have given me on so many critical issues. It is a happiness for me to think that if we have been through bad days together in the earlier years of the war, I should be leaving India at a time when the skies are beginning to brighten; when the success of the Allied arms in so many fields is becoming increasingly manifest; and when we are encouraged by the fall of one of the greatest of the Axis leaders, and by the collapse of a system which was responsible for bringing Italy into the war against us.

The seven and a half years of my Viceroyalty have lain in momentous times. Through the whole period we have been faced by political issues of the first importance. For the last four years there has been the dominating need to concentrate on India's defence against hostile attack; on the expansion and the training of our armed forces, whether Naval, Military or Air; on the organising of our war effort in terms of men, of money and of supplies. India's response to every call made upon her throughout the war has been magnificent. She may well be proud of the superb contribution that she has made to the victories of the Allies, and to the triumph of the United Nations.

Gentlemen, I do not propose today to weary you with any lengthy or detailed review of the great developments that have taken place in India in so many fields since I assumed office. The tale would be a very long one. Rather would I propose to speak of India's war effort, to touch very briefly on certain major problems which are of immediate concern to all of us today, and in particular food, inflation, post-war planning; to say a word about the political situation, and in taking leave of you to thank you, and through you India, for consistent, ungrudging and invaluable support through so many dark days and so many critical situations.

When the war began India's armed forces were designed neither in numbers nor in equipment to bear the direct shock of attack of the large, highly trained and well-equipped forces at the disposal of the Axis powers. But, with the full knowledge that the safety of India lay in the defence of its outer bastions, we sent overseas what troops we could spare. Experience has more than justified our decision. Today we can feel that, save for sporadic and ineffective air raids, India has been spared the horrors of war as, God willing, she will continue so to be.

Our armed forces today total two million men. Naval personnel has increased tenfold. The Indian Air Force is expanding rapidly into a formidable weapon. That great total has been reached by voluntary recruitment, recruitment too from a wider variety of sources than ever before. The equipment and the training of these large masses of men has been an immense task all the more so given the need to keep pace with new arms and new methods; to create new formations—I need only mention the Indian Armoured Corps, the Corps of Indian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, the Indian Army Medical Corps;—to bring into being the formations of airborne troops, and of airborne surgical units, which have been so successfully developed in this country. In the air the Indian Air Force has expanded from the single squadron that was all its strength when I first came to India to ten Indian squadrons, fully equipped with modern aircraft. The essential, but highly complex ground organisation required by a national air force to provide its own maintenance and training units is rapidly being perfected. Its pilots have done admirable work in Europe: the Indian Squadron which took part in the Burma campaign has rightly won the highest praise. And the work of expansion and development goes on apace.

The Indian Navy has steadily grown through the whole of this period. There have been great and rapid increases in personnel, in ship construction, in shore establishments, in the development of specialist schools, and of specialist training. And recruitment has been extended to areas that never in the past sent men to serve at sea. The actions fought against Japanese aircraft by the "Sutlej" and the "Jumna"; the superb fight of the "Bengal" against surface raiders, have shown the fighting quality of the Royal Indian Navy. And our ships have been in action not only in Indian waters, but in the Red Sea, the Mediterranean, and the Atlantic, and, in the last few days, in the invasion of Sicily.

The fighting record of the Indian Army is known to you all. Indian troops played a glorious part in the North and East African campaigns. Their superb fighting qualities, their courage, determination, discipline and training have been demonstrated time and again in the campaigns that have resulted in the overthrow of the Italian Empire in Africa. The great victory of the 8th Army, in which the 4th Indian Division added still further honours to what was already an imperishable fame, is in the minds of all of us. In the Far East, in Burma, and in Singapore our troops faced, like their comrades from the other parts of the British Commonwealth, superior forces; and they fought a series of delaying actions in a type of warfare that makes the highest demand on the quality of troops. Those actions, fought with stubborn courage against grievous odds, gave India time to perfect her own defences against invasion. And the experience gained in the difficult and exhausting jungle warfare in which we have recently been engaged will be put to good use when the time comes for that full dress attack upon the Japanese to which we all look forward. The exploits of Brigadier Wingate's mixed force of Indian, British, Gurkha, and Burmese troops, have struck the imagination of the world, and have shown what good soldiering, discipline, and brotherhood in arms can achieve under conditions peculiarly favourable to the enemy.

The picture I have painted is but a pale reflection of the faith, the courage and the endurance of tens of thousands of humble men; courage that has won for the Indian Army no less than six awards of the Victoria Cross. No words of mine can express our thanks to them for what they have achieved, to the Princes and people of India, who have poured out their treasures of money and labour and of precious lives in the allied cause. But this I know,—whatever may be the tasks which lie ahead; however long and arduous the road we still have to traverse, that faith, that courage, that sacrifice will lead to victory.

Since I last addressed you, Gentlemen, the relations of my Government with the foreign States on India's frontiers have, I am glad to say, remained cordial. Indian troops have served with distinction in Persia. The Government of Afghanistan have well upheld their policy of neutrality as against all belligerents and have not suffered the Axis influences due to the presence of enemy Legations in their capital to disturb the common peace of the Indo-Afghan frontier. The tribes of the North-West Frontier have throughout the war maintained the peace, and I was glad on my recent visit to that famous region to be able to recognise their service to the common end by a permanent enhancement of the allowances of one of the leading tribes, the Orakzais. Of the unstinted help which the cause of the United Nations as a whole and India in particular has received from our well-tried and trusted friends, the Prime Minister and the Government of Nepal; I cannot speak in terms of too high gratitude. The Gurkha soldiers of the Indian Army continue to maintain the highest traditions of their service. Their bravery and hardihood have contributed in no small degree to the security of India throughout the war, and I need not remind you that the Nepalese Government's own regiments remain in India for the war to assist us in building up our common strength. The relations of India with our great Ally, the Republic of China, have been drawn closer than ever before in history. The mutual esteem and knowledge won during the visit of the Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai Shek in February 1942 has broadened to an understanding which bodes well for the future relations of our countries. The presence, which we have so warmly welcomed, of American and Chinese Missions in our midst; the comradeship in the common task and on our own soil with the gallant forces of our American and Chinese allies all contribute most materially to cordial relations and international good fellowship.

Recent legislation in South Africa affecting the status of Indians in that country has been a matter of profound regret to my Government, and the situation which results from it is under active consideration.

Many of the essential nation-building activities are, under the present constitution, the responsibility primarily or wholly of the Provinces. But I have been anxious, during the time I have spent here, to ensure that the Centre should give every help that it properly can in regard to them, and there is much to show in the way of achievement. The revival of the Central Advisory Board of Education; the establishment of the Central Board of Health; the lavish grant made before the war from central revenues for Rural Development; the work of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research, the establishment of which, as I am proud to recall, was recommended by the Royal Commission on Agriculture, over which I had the honour to preside, and which has proved itself so elastic and effective an instrument for promoting technical progress; the institution of the All-India Cattle Show Society, which has done so much to encourage the most important matter of care and breeding of cattle throughout the country; the active prosecution of nutritional research; the great campaign against tuberculosis, organised by my wife, which has had as striking a response from all over India—these are all examples of the numerous activities in the nation-building field which have been of concern to my Government and to myself during the time that I have been here. India has reason, too, to be proud of the work that has been done in Animal Husbandry, in Dairy Research, by the Agricultural Marketing Department, by the Forest Service, and by the Survey of India. The war inevitably has interfered with certain of our plans for the development of many of these most important activities. But the war has also shown their vital significance, and we have good reason to be thankful that so much had been done in the way of preparation before hostilities began.

I may be forgiven for touching on one matter which, though it is of immediate local interest to the Central Legislature, is of concern to the country as a whole. When I assumed office in 1936 I determined that during my tenure of the Viceroyalty I would do everything in my power to make Delhi worthy of its place as the capital city of India. Today, I am glad to think that that ambition has been so largely realised. Delhi is a model so far as the anti-malaria campaign, up-to-date arrangements for the disposal of sewage, the active work of an energetic and soundly-based Improvement Trust, the development of open spaces and of amenities, are concerned. Those amenities and the layout of the capital city have inevitably suffered owing to war conditions. But it is the policy of my Government, on the conclusion of the war, to remove without delay the temporary buildings that war has rendered necessary, and to restore the appearance of the Capital of India to the high level which we had been able to achieve for it.

I would like to say one word about the transport situation, and the position of the Railways in particular. The vital importance of an efficient and adequate transport system, both for the war effort and for the maintenance of civil life, has been brought very sharply home to us in these last few years. The Railways are working under very great strain. Great strain because of shortage of certain materials in wartime; because of the immense burdens placed on the staff by war conditions. We owe a real debt to the Railway staff for the contribution they have made, and the excellent work they have done in circumstances sometimes of much difficulty. My Government are fully alive to the importance of co-ordinating transport by road, rail, and river, and no pains are being spared to turn to the best use possible any additional capacity that can be made available, and to strike a just balance between military and essential civil needs.

Activities in the field of war supplies have expanded enormously since I last addressed you. The value of orders handled by the Supply Department increased steadily from 85 crores in the first 16 months of the war, to 118 crores in 1941, 223 crores in 1942 and to 142 crores for the first five months of the present year. Nor is this the whole tale of India's effort in the field of supply. For the figures which I have given take no account of the orders which the Supply Department placed overseas, the orders placed in India for war purposes through trade channels, or the value of the finished output of the Ordnance Factories. The total value of India's contribution to war supplies is thereby immeasurably increased.

In order to deal with this growing mass of war orders the capacity of Indian industry has been greatly expanded both by the carrying out of carefully considered Government schemes for the establishment of new factories or the expansion of existing ones, and by the operation of private enterprise. In particular the Chatfield and Ministry of Supply Mission Projects for new Ordnance Factories and expansion of the old ones are now either completed or nearly complete. I may also mention the great expansions in the steel industry, in the manufacture of machine tools, in the chemical industry, and in the capacity of the rubber manufacturing industry, especially for making tyres.

Those results have not been easy to achieve in the face of the difficulties, known to all of you, which arose and still arise from the growing claims on the shipping resources of the Allies, from the closure of certain sources of raw material by the tide of Japanese aggression, and from the pressure on India's internal transport system arising from the greatly increased burden of war production and military movements. In solving these difficulties, and in maintaining its war effort despite them, India has received and is receiving the greatest help from the other allied nations, especially from His Majesty's Government and from the United States of America. The Technical Mission which our American Allies sent us last year, and the Lease/Lend Mission now with us, have been of the greatest assistance to us. We have lately had a Joint Anglo-American Steel Mission which gave valuable advice and help in connection with the production and distribution of steel. And I must pay a cordial tribute to the admirable work of the Eastern Group Supply Council, itself the outcome of the Eastern Group Conference for the initiation of which India was so largely responsible, and which did such invaluable work.

This vast expansion in the field of war production has not been achieved without material sacrifice of the goods ordinarily available to the agriculturist and the townsman. I will refer later to certain aspects of that problem. But I am glad to think that many of the industries engaged in the manufacture of vital war supplies are now better equipped to produce goods for ordinary internal consumption than they were before; the experience gained in manufacture under the stress of war adds materially to our knowledge of modern skill and technique; and we are extracting and putting to use in India more and more of our own raw materials. Over and above this, realising the importance of providing for essential civil needs, we are now endeavouring to release for civil consumption a larger share of the industrial output of our own resources. The steps we have already taken in this direction will be steadily pursued, consistently with our responsibility for supplying the Armed Forces in India.

For the present, and for some time to come, our energies must be devoted to exploiting all available resources for the waging of war. But a moment will arrive when this process must be reversed and our efforts directed again towards the normal activities of peace, and the use and development of those resources for the rehabilitation of our economy, and the maintenance and—wherever possible—the improvement of the standards of living of our people.

Post-war reconstruction is a phrase familiar today in every continent. But the nature of this reconstruction must depend upon local conditions and the vicissitudes of battle.

In some countries the rebuilding of the bomb-shattered homes of the people, and of the factories in which they earn their livelihood, must be the first stage of recovery. Then again a nation the greater part of whose adult population of both sexes has been conscripted into the fighting services, or war industry, has to face problems vastly different, at least in degree, from those which confront us here in India where, despite the magnitude of our war effort, large sections of the population still pursue their customary avocations more or less undisturbed by the tides of war, save in so far as changes in the price level may have affected their lot for better or for worse. Our own problems in this field, vital though they are, are of a different order. War has brought to India a marked and significant increase in industrial activity, and an even more important increment in the number of persons skilled in mechanical and industrial work of all kinds. Evidently the problem is to carry forward after the war as much as we may of this enhanced industrial activity, transmuted betimes from its present warlike shape into forms capable of producing the needs of a world at peace. Certain of our industries, some of them highly important, have come through the past four years with few changes of a technical character, and for such the problems to be solved will be mainly of a commercial character.

Closely linked with industrial expansion are the problems of agricultural improvement. The best hope of permanent progress, whether in town or countryside, lies in the maintenance of a sound balance between field and factory. For the farmer, a steady and profitable market for his own produce and the opportunity to buy the products of the factory at reasonable prices: for the factory, a copious supply of raw material and a vast market for the finished product. The careful fostering of this natural, healthy and resilient partnership which is the foundation of our economic strength, and the firm base or platform from which we may develop our overseas trade, must be the first care of governments and of all concerned with industry or with agriculture. Agriculture, including agricultural education and research, and animal husbandry, is as I have already reminded you, a provincial subject. So also is irrigation. But in so far as it lies within the power and within the proper of my Government to contribute towards agricultural improvement, they are most anxious to do their utmost in that direction.

The desire for improvement, agricultural and industrial, has evidently received a marked stimulus from the circumstances of war. This manifestation will certainly derive a fresh and powerful impulse by the demobilisation in due time of the great armies upon whose valour India at present depends for her security. Many of our soldiers have become mechanically-minded as a result of their training and some may well look to industry for a livelihood in the days of peace. But the greater number will wish to return to the land. Many of those men have seen the world beyond these shores. They will wish to enjoy the best that the business of farming can provide, and they will be found receptive of new ideas and improved practices. Their return to their villages offers a unique opportunity to press forward with agricultural improvement and rural betterment. These two purposes are bound indissolubly together. "Of all the factors making for prosperous agriculture, by far the most important is the outlook of the peasant himself." So wrote the Agricultural Commission in 1928, and all that I have seen or learned since that time confirms the correctness of that opinion.

My Government are fully alive to the urgency and the vital importance of these issues. For some considerable time past they have been closely concerned with the essential business of post-war planning. They realise the necessity of being well prepared in advance for the questions that will face India, like the rest of the world, on the termination of hostilities. You may be certain, Gentlemen, that they will spare no effort to clear the ground and to plan wisely for the future, and that their deliberations will be informed by the anxious desire to assist in all those matters to which I have just referred, even where the function is not primarily theirs.

The war has brought great industrial and commercial prosperity to India. But it has laid grievous burdens on the common man and woman in this country in the procurement of their daily needs. And the disabilities which war must bring to the civil population of any belligerent country have in India been greatly accentuated by the anti-social activities of individuals who have misused conditions of scarcity, artificially created in the case of some commodities, for their own profit. During the last few months, second only to the problem of how to feed the inhabitant of this country has come the problem of how to clothe him at a cost within his means. It was therefore to the problem of cloth that the Department of Industries and Civil Supplies, which I constituted in April last, first devoted its attention. Thanks to public support, thanks also to the co-operation of the Indian Cotton Textile industry, a scheme of control was launched on the 17th June which is being worked by Government and the industry in a friendly spirit. The Indian States are also in line with us, and I welcome this opportunity of acknowledging their co-operation. The prices of cloth of all kinds have fallen, not only in the wholesale, but also in the retail markets. In some of the retail markets they have fallen by more than 40 per cent. Cloth which has been hoarded is coming into the market; and under the new scheme for Standard or Utility cloth my Government has arranged the procurement of this at the rate of 150 million yards per month, to be distributed, on a basis of population, among all the Provinces and States of India till a total of 2,000 million yards has been reached. It is hoped that cloth now coming out of hoards, and Standard Cloth, will fill the breach while the Control gradually establishes itself over the whole field of Cotton Textiles with, as a result, increased production and a substantial reduction in prices below present levels. When that stage is reached it will not be necessary to continue the Standard Cloth scheme.

But cloth is not the only commodity in regard to which advantage has been taken—and unmercifully taken—of the consumer in India by unscrupulous men. Over practically the whole range of consumers' goods, which are so necessary in the day-to-day life of the people, the two-fold blight of exorbitant prices and inequitable distribution has fallen. Measures are now well under way which will I hope, before many months have passed, bring about improvement in this respect. These measures are aimed not only at hitting the hoarder and the profiteer, but also at making consumers' goods of the commoner varieties available in greater quantities to the people of this country.

Probably the most grave and insistent problem which faces my Government today is that of ensuring an adequate distribution of foodstuffs throughout India. Early in July a Conference fully representative of the Provinces and the Indian States, discussed in close detail with my Government the difficulties of the past and plans for the immediate future. My Government have accepted the conclusions of the Conference, and they are being implemented. As I speak, an expert planning committee is at work on the evolution of a long term food policy, and its Report is expected in the immediate future. I cannot anticipate its recommendations. Nor do I wish to dwell overmuch on the past. But I would like briefly to recall to you some of the difficulties which have had to be faced during the past four years and to state in broad outline the essentials, as I see them, for the success of any future policy.

Certain limiting factors have to be recognised, even in normal times, when considering the economy of food production and distribution in India. The size of the country, with its demands on transport; a total production of foodgrains only just sufficient in wheat and less than sufficient in rice, made up of the small margins of millions of small farmers; the variety and at the same time the rigidity of local diet habits; the administrative divisions throughout the country. In normal times, these factors do not give rise to any great difficulty, for the normal operations of trade can ordinarily be relied upon to satisfy all requirements and to come effectively to the rescue, without official intervention, if for any reason local scarcity should occur. But war throws normal trade movements out of gear. Imports are restricted or cut off; transport is limited; there is a bullish tendency in the markets; prices rise and profits are high; the producer or distributor hoards for gain or consumes more of his produce; the consumer hoards from fear.

In such circumstances it is the duty of Government to step in and regulate the operations of trade so as to secure economy and fair distribution. In the United Kingdom great success has been achieved by drastic measures involving legal sanctions and the most detailed interference with private lives and private enterprise, but made effective largely by the willing co-operation of the people. In India our problem has been less compact and uniform, and control in consequence more difficult to impose. The series of Price Control Conferences instituted as soon as war broke out proved most valuable for the exchange of ideas and experience, and made recommendations which were acted on by Government. But you will recall that for the first two years of the war there was no great demand for controls. A moderate rise in prices after a lean period was welcomed. It is only since the entry of Japan into the war, and the loss of imports from Malaya and Burma, that the problem of supplies and prices has assumed serious proportions in India. Since then Governments throughout the country have had to adapt their methods to a rapidly developing situation, and to counter the cupidity and lack of confidence that have unhappily shown themselves in so many areas.

The Grow More Food campaign has led to an immense increase in the area under food crops, and a vastly-increased production of foodgrains. It is being urged on with the utmost vigour. Financial aid of well over a crore and a half of rupees has been made available from central revenues, and every possible help has been given to Provincial Governments and to the Indian States by way of technical advice. You may be certain, Gentlemen, that no pains are being, or will be, spared to get the very maximum of output that we possibly can.

To strike at the root of the causes of our difficulties which I have just mentioned my Government decided, early in this year, to remove the control price of wheat, and to import wheat from Australia. They also devised a scheme for the distribution under central control of surplus foodgrains to deficit areas. For various reasons this scheme appeared likely, at first, to fall short of the success that was hoped for. But, drastically modified in the light of experience, it remains in being. And it will hold the field as an "austerity" plan, until, having secured physical control of all available surpluses of foodgrains administrations throughout India are in a position to control their distribution, through rationing or otherwise.

That task is no light one. But it is vital that it should be successfully performed. And full and willing co-operation by every Government and every individual is essential if its achievement is to be ensured.

The policy behind it will be a policy based on the considered views of representatives of every part of India, and I would most earnestly appeal today to all concerned to help in giving effect to it. To the solution of the common problem, to the easing of the hardships of the poor, and the difficulties of the deficit areas in particular, there is an obligation on every one of us to lend our influence, our example, and our ready support. I am confident that in appealing for that general co-operation, and for the spirit of self-sacrifice, in a matter that touches every man and woman in this country, I shall not do so in vain.

One of the main problems which has to be faced by a country at war is the control of inflationary tendencies. In the switch over from a peace economy to a war economy the mounting scale of Government expenditure inevitably increases the volume of incomes, while the goods and services available for civilian consumption inevitably contract. To accentuate the resultant loss of equilibrium between free purchasing power and the opportunities for its use, the possibilities of import become gravely restricted by the scarcity of shipping and reduced transport facilities. In any country a situation of this kind calls for the maximum effort of vigilance and control, if chaos is to be avoided. In India there are various factors, notably the magnitude of the country and the exiguous scale of administrative services in relation to a huge and largely un-instructed population, which render close controls peculiarly difficult. The position first began to deteriorate sharply when the consequences of the war with Japan became palpable, in the latter half of 1942. By the spring of this year there were many signs of wide-spread hoarding and profiteering and of the emergence of a spirit of reckless speculation which gave a vicious stimulus to the factors making for a general rise in prices. The course of prices in consequence took an alarming upward turn, and it became clear that drastic action was called for and in every sphere of Government authority if this disastrous tendency was to be checked and reversed.

The Government of India are determined to do everything in their power to achieve this object and to stabilise economic conditions at tolerable levels. The drive against inflation is being pursued simultaneously in the monetary and the commodity fields. On the one hand an intensive effort is being directed to the mopping up of surplus purchasing power by taxation and borrowing, whether Central or Provincial, including a country-wide savings drive, and the Indian States have also been urged to co-operate in this programme for the benefit of the whole country. I am glad in that connection to be able to tell you, Gentlemen, that during the six weeks ending on 17th July, no less than 50 crores of rupees were invested, including 12½ crores by conversion from the 4 per cent. 1943 bonds—a most encouraging and heartening achievement. On the other hand, various forms of commodity control have been adopted, the most important, because of its effect on the cost of living, being the cloth and yarn control scheme to which I have already referred.

I have already spoken too of our efforts to deal with the various aspects of the food problem, which of course has an enormously important bearing on the tendencies we are determined to bring under control. The Government of India are also resolved to check speculation and profiteering in every sphere which affects the life of the nation, and to repress and penalize all cognate anti-social activity. I am glad to say that the measures already taken are beginning to have a most salutary effect. Not only has the vicious upward trend been checked, but several important indices have moved sharply downwards, with a beneficial effect on the whole price-structure. But there is no room for complacency, and we do not delude ourselves that this battle is over. On the contrary the campaign has only begun and we are determined to maintain the pressure and to fight relentlessly on every part of the anti-inflationary front. The stake is nothing less than the economic safety of the country; it demands the co-operation of all of us, and no effort can be relaxed until this insidious danger has been removed.

It is perhaps unnecessary for me to enlarge on the more obvious aspects of the impact of the war upon India's economy. The imperious needs of the emergency have, as might be expected, called forth a tremendous intensification and diversification of India's industrial activity. This has involved the fullest use of our resources of raw materials, labour, transport and productive capacity. It has led to many new efforts in fields hitherto hardly explored and to expanding schemes for the training of personnel. All this would in itself have produced a notable transformation of India's economic outlook. But there has in addition supervened a factor which in my opinion is bound to have the greatest significance for India's economic future. It is by now a familiar fact that the war has led not only to the extinction of India's external public debt but to a change in her international position from a debtor to a creditor status. This fact is bound to have a profound influence on the course and character of India's international trade in future. I would suggest that this is a subject which might well engage the careful attention and study of Indian economists and research workers. For I am convinced that it is a sphere in which there cannot fail to be scope for constructive thinking. It is not merely the outward aspect of our foreign trade which must inevitably be transformed, but I would anticipate the most far-reaching effects upon the structure of India's whole economy. When it is remembered that India's export trade in the past rested largely upon the necessity of making remittances for the service of her overseas debt, that henceforth not only will this factor be absent but on the contrary India will have to accommodate an excess of imports in order to receive the payments due to her, it will be realised that the change which has occurred is one of the deepest significance.

I turn now to the political field. As Chairman of the Joint Parliamentary Committee I had been most closely associated with the discussions leading up to the Act of 1935. I came out here in 1936 following on the passing of that Act. My object, when I accepted this great responsibility, was in the first place to see Provincial Autonomy introduced, and to give it every help in my power to work smoothly and successfully. In the second place, to secure the introduction of Federation. I was confident that in no way could the interests of India's constitutional development or the achievement of all her aspirations better be forwarded than by these two successive stages that were contemplated in the constitution Act of 1935. Nothing has happened since 1935 to shake me in that view.

The scheme of Provincial Autonomy has been tested by experience now over many years. It is a workable scheme and a sound scheme. Today it is in operation in six Provinces out of eleven. Where it is not in operation, that is because those to whom it gave great power, great authority and great responsibility have not been willing to carry that responsibility. That there may be difficulties from time to time, that the machine may fail under certain stresses can surprise no one with experience of public life. But taking it all in all, the scheme has fully justified itself. I can think of no way in which, consistently with safeguarding the rights and the legitimate claims of all parties, the devolution of power to popularly elected Ministers, supported by a majority in the Legislature and willing to carry the burdens of the time, could better have been made.

At the Centre, as I have often said in recent years, I have felt with increasing force as the war has gone on, that the federal scheme, for all the imperfections that it may have contained, would have solved the bulk of India's problems had it been possible to bring it into being. No scheme is perfect: no scheme will satisfy everyone; every scheme admits of being improved on by experience. And I know well that on various grounds the federal scheme has been the target of attacks. But, as in the case of the provincial scheme, I have no doubt as to its essential soundness. Parties, interests, individuals, all have to be prepared to make some sacrifice when it comes to matters such as this. No one in any modern State can hope to have a hundred per cent. of what he wants or what he thinks he ought to have. Compromise, adjustment, reasonable regard for the legitimate claims of other parties, is the only basis on which progress can be made. Federation, had we achieved it, based as it was on the maximum measure of agreement that could be realised when the scheme was framed, would have welded together for matters of common interest the Indian States and British India. It would have secured balanced and reasonable representation of parties and interests at the Centre. It would have achieved the desire of His Majesty's Government to transfer to Indian hands those great powers at the Centre the transfer of which is provided for in the Act of 1935. And India would have participated in the War under the leadership of her own Federal Government, and her prestige and the prestige of that Government would thereby have been enhanced still further for the future.

Well, Gentlemen, the outbreak of the war and the absence of agreement between those concerned in India, made the postponement of Federation at that time inevitable. His Majesty's Government in those circumstances could not, in that way, give the early effect that they desired to their intentions. It was my duty and my happiness in those circumstances to try to find in what other way Indian public opinion, Indian public men, the great parties, could, pending the achievement of a final solution, best and most closely be associated with the government of the country and the management of the war.

If I have not been able to achieve the measure of success I hoped for, I have at any rate during the time of the war been able to bring into being changes of great significance and far-reaching importance. It is true that I have not been able to persuade the great political parties to take their share in the government of the country. But the Government of India, a body of seven, of whom the majority were officials, has been expanded into a body of fourteen, eleven of whom are non-officials, and four only (including the Commander-in-Chief) Europeans. Of its broad basis, of the representation it gives to communities and interests, of the quality of its Members, there can be no question whatever. The National Defence Council, a body representative of the Indian States and of British India, has met regularly under my chairmanship since October 1941. It has established its reputation throughout India; it has constituted a most valuable liaison between the Centre, the Provinces of British India and the Indian States, and its importance from the point of view of the war effort has been very real indeed.

In other fields India's international status has been enhanced in a variety of ways. She is represented at Washington and at Chungking. China and the President of the U. S. A. are represented here. For over a year now she has had representation at the War Cabinet. She has been most closely associated with all developments of importance in connection with the war. The splendid work of her fighting men, whether by sea, by land or in the air, has added to her renown throughout the world; the magnitude of her contribution to the war effort of the Allies is known to everyone.

I regret the more that at a time when India's contribution has been so great, when in so many ways her stature has been so enhanced, greater progress should not have been possible in the constitutional field during these years of war. That there should have been no greater progress is due to no lack of effort, or enthusiasm, or goodwill on the part of His Majesty's Government or of myself. From the very beginning of the war I have done everything that man could do to bring the parties and their leaders together; to remove doubts as to the intentions of His Majesty's Government; to achieve that sufficiency of common agreement among the parties and communities in this country, and that necessary preliminary acceptance of the legitimate claims of all, that must be the pre-condition of any constitutional advance that is worth having or that can hope for permanence. It will always be a sharp disappointment to me that these four years of war should, for all that effort, have seen us no nearer to our goal, and that, as I speak today, these internal divisions, these communal rivalries, that reluctance to place India first and to subordinate sectional ambitions and jealousies to the common interest of the country, should still stand in the way of progress.

As I have said elsewhere, those divisions, that lack of agreement, are due not to the reluctance of His Majesty's Government to transfer power to Indian hands, but to their very readiness to do so. But the fact, the lamentable fact, remains that to the grief of all of us, those divisions exist. Nor, during all that time, has a single constructive proposition—and I deeply regret to say it—been put forward by any Indian party. The whole burden of framing constructive proposals in relation either to the interim or the final solution has been left to His Majesty's Government and to myself. We, for our part, most anxious to give all the help we could, have tried one proposal after another, and we have done our best to harmonise the sharply conflicting claims that have faced us. The best that we can devise, informed as we are by centuries of experience of Parliamentary Government, has been freely offered. Yet, while one endeavour after another by His Majesty's Government to find a solution, fair to all parties and communities in India and acceptable to India as a whole, has been rejected by one party or the other, not one such practicable alternative proposal has been put forward by any one in this country.

Yet it is India herself, if India wants a change, that must find the solution to this problem. I sometimes think that public interest and discussion in this country has, in the past, centred too much on interim constitutional changes which, in the nature of things, must be transitory. Such changes cannot be a substitute for a constitution determined by ordinary processes and agreement; processes which cannot be completed under the stress of war. Short cuts can only be a danger alike to present unity and post-war solutions. At the stage now reached the real problem to be faced is the future problem; we must look forward and not backward.

And it is the need for India herself to find the solution that, in all friendliness and sincerity, I would most earnestly commend, Gentlemen, to your consideration today. I have said it before, and I say it again quite plainly, that the path to full and honourable co-operation with the Government of the country has always been open to those who desire it for its own sake. His Majesty's Government and the Viceroy can try to help, as they have tried in the past. But the burden is on India, on her leaders, on the principal elements in her national life. It is the discordance between those principal elements, the lack of trust, the lack of readiness to accept the legitimate claims of the minorities, or of parties, or of interests, that stand in the way. Those are obstacles that only Indians can remove.

And it is most important, and I would most earnestly urge this on you, that if there is to be any progress, Indian public men should without delay start to get together and to clear the way for it. The post-war phase is drawing rapidly nearer. His Majesty's Government, as you will remember, have voiced the hope that on the conclusion of the war Indians themselves may sit round a table and hammer out a constitution having the general support of all the principal elements in India's national life. Is India, are India's leaders, to be found unprepared when the day comes for those discussions? Is it not the course of wisdom to set to work at once, without wasting a day, to try, by discussion among themselves, to find in readiness for those discussions an accommodation of the differences that prevent progress at the moment, and to build a bridge over the profound gulfs that divide party from party and community from community? They alone can do it. The burden is on them, and not on His Majesty's Government.

And the whole field is open to them. If the proposals which His Majesty's Government have at one time or other put forward, in default of any proposals from the Indian leaders, are unacceptable to India as a whole, there is nothing to stop India's leaders from considering and devising an alternative, whatever its nature, or from trying by private negotiation with other parties in this country to secure their support for any such alternative. All I would say—and I say it again as a friend of India, and as one concerned to see her progress in whatever manner is best suited to her national genius and to the interests of all within her borders—is this—that whatever alternative and whatever scheme is devised must take account of practical considerations; must have the general support of all the important elements in India's national life. No scheme, however good it may look on paper, that ignores important elements or interests, that overlooks the essential necessity for substantial agreement inside India as its basis, has any hope of surviving for long. A national Government can be a reality only if it is generally representative, if it has the general support of the major parties and of the people as a whole, if its establishment leads to the assuaging of communal and other bitterness and rivalry, and to the harmonising of all the many divergent points of view that a country such as India, with its great range of climate, of races, its different historical traditions, must always present.

I would like to take this occasion to say a word of warm thanks to the Indian Press for all the help that it has given me during my time in India. Occasions there may have been when there were differences of view on matters connected with the Press; misunderstandings there may have been from time to time. But I remain deeply grateful to this great institution for its fairness; its eager anxiety to serve the public; its concern to observe, and if possible to improve, the best traditions of journalism. And I would not like to leave India without paying this public tribute to it, and to that hard working body of intelligent and able men by whom India is so well served in the Press.

In a few weeks now I shall hand over the reins of office to my successor. In Field-Marshal Viscount Wavell India will have as Viceroy one who has proved himself through a long and glorious career one of the great leaders of men in the field; and one of the outstanding soldiers of our time. But you will find in him also, and this I can say from personal experience of two years of close, intimate and most friendly collaboration, an understanding, wise and sagacious statesman; a man of sound political sense and judgment; a leader of courage and tenacity, whose wide human sympathy, whose affection for India and whose profound interest in her problems is well-known. In the difficult days that lie ahead—for the problems of peace are no less exhausting and complex than the problems we have had to face in the war—his ripe experience, his fresh and up-to-date knowledge of India and his sincerity and openness of mind will be of a value to this country that cannot be overstated.

I cannot leave you today, Gentlemen, without in conclusion paying a tribute to the spirit of the people of India, whether British India or the Indian States; to the confidence, enthusiasm and courage which they have shown through four years of a devastating and exhausting war, and to the cheerful readiness with which they have borne the many burdens that total war involves and the privations and hardships inseparable from it. There has been a great achievement on the home front, as well as in the field, and one on which India will look back with pride and the world with admiration.

I would like, too, to say a word of sincere and heartfelt thanks to the personnel of all the Services in this country. To them is due great credit for all that they have done to maintain law and order, to deal with the innumerable problems of administration that war throws up, to grapple with the vital tasks that fall to be discharged by them in the interests of the people of India as a whole. Without their loyal, unflinching, and self-sacrificing public work, the administration of the country could not have been carried on, or India have made the contribution that she has so proudly and so gladly made to the victory of the Allied cause.

Gentlemen, I will keep you no longer. I thank you most warmly for the attention with which you have listened to me today. My best good wishes go to you, both individually, and as a Central Legislature, for the future, and my most cordial gratitude for all the work that I have been privileged to see you perform during my term of office, and for that public spirit that has so consistently marked your conduct of affairs.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Half Past Two of the Clock, Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang (one of the Panel of Chairmen) in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN:

Mr. John Philip Sargent, C.I.E., M.L.A. (Government of India: Nominated Official).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

FAILURE OF THE FOOD DEPARTMENT IN CHECKING HIGH PRICES OF RICE IN BENGAL.

125. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Is the Honourable the Food Member aware of the tense situation created by the abnormally high price of rice in Bengal since last August and the tendency to rise further at present? If so, what steps does he propose to take to ease the situation within a short time?

(b) Is it not a fact that the Food Department has not succeeded in bringing down the price of rice in Bengal within the last three months by taking the steps they had thought would make them successful? If the present staff is not found efficient, does the Honourable Member propose to reorganise the Department?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Vigor, the newly appointed Food Adviser to the Government of India, in a Press Conference said that there was no real deficiency of food in India, and that there was no cause for alarm? In spite of such statement, why is this continuous high price prevailing?

(d) What efficiency has been added to the Department by the appointment of Regional Commissioners on high salaries? What is their function, and if they have failed to remedy the situation, what is the necessity for continuing the officers? Is it not a fact that the Provincial Government in Bengal in many cases did not see eye to eye with the Central Government in the past, vide Modern Review, April, page 244?

(e) Is it not a fact that the Government of the United Provinces succeeded in coping with the situation by setting up Consumers Co-operative? If so, why should not that system be followed in Bengal where the situation is so trying and tense?

(f) Is it a fact that hoarding and profiteering are the two factors which have created this situation in Bengal? If so, does the Honourable Member intend taking drastic steps to find out the culprits? If so, when?

(g) Does the Honourable Member propose to allot at least three days for a complete debate on the subject of food supply during this session and to convene a meeting of the Standing Commerce Committee of the Assembly?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) The price of rice has been abnormally high in Bengal for some time. On the introduction of 'free trade' in the Eastern Region prices came down slightly and have recently steadied. Measures have been in hand and are continuing for the export of considerable quantities of foodgrains to Bengal from other provinces and the Bengal Government have already launched an anti-hoarding drive whose scope is likely to be expanded.

(b) The price of rice in Bengal is in no way connected with the efficiency of the Food Department.

(c) Yes, Sir, that statement was made 5 months ago. The actual deficiency this year was estimated at not more than 4 per cent. of the normal production of foodgrains, which is not a serious deficiency and less than has been experienced in several recent years. High prices have been due as much to difficulties of distribution, excessive holding of stocks by producers and others, as to actual physical shortage.

(d) The functions of the Regional Food Commissioners are co-ordination and liaison generally, between the Government of India and the Provincial Governments, and they have discharged their duties efficiently. As regards the second part of the question, there is always room for honest difference of opinion between the Central Government and a Provincial Government.

(e) The Government of India have no information on the first part of the subject and the second part, therefore, does not arise.

(f) Yes; certain measures have already been taken by the Government of Bengal and more will be taken soon.

(g) I have already agreed to a two-day debate on the subject.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: If a Member of the Legislative Assembly is prepared to sell in Calcutta any quantity of wheat that Calcutta may require for consumption, will the Honourable Member give him this permission?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I think that is a purely problematic question, and if I am asked about it departmentally I will reply departmentally.

SCHEME OF SICKNESS INSURANCE FOR INDUSTRIAL WORKERS.

127. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Labour be pleased to state if the Scheme of Sickness Insurance for Industrial Workers has been completed?

(b) When is the Scheme expected to come into operation?

(c) Does the Honourable Member propose to lay on the table a copy of the Scheme?

(d) Is it also proposed to lay on the table the opinions expressed by Provincial Governments on the Scheme?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) No.

(b) The Government of India have appointed a Special Officer to prepare a draft scheme of Sickness Insurance for workers in selected industries. The scheme is now under preparation but it is not possible at this stage to say when it will come into operation.

(c) and (d). These points will be considered later on. Legislation will be necessary, and the House will of course be fully informed of the details of the scheme.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: How far has the scheme been completed?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: A preliminary report has been received.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: When approximately is this going to be completed?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I cannot say anything about it.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Say two years or one year?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Within two months' time.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Thank you.

SERVING OF Jhatka AND Halal MEAT TO STUDENTS OF RANGERS FOREST COLLEGE, DEHRA DUN.

†128. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if it is or it is not a fact that the students of the Rangers Forest College, Dehra Dun, formerly used to make private arrangements for their messing and for the last two or three years a common mess has been started?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that for a considerable time after the common mess was started Halal meat (i.e., the meat of the animals slaughtered according to Muslim rites) was served to all students without any objection by anybody?

(c) Is it or is it not a fact that about ten months ago Jhatka meat which is prohibited according to the Muslim conception began to be served in the mess without any notice being given to the Muslim students?

*This question was withdrawn by the questioner.

(d) Is it or is it not a fact that on the leaking out of this information the Muslim students protested so much so that one student went on hunger strike for about 72 hours?

(e) Is it or is it not a fact that even now the Jhatka meat is served in the mess and the Muslim students who are not even allowed to make their own arrangements for messing had to take to vegetables?

(f) In view of the fact that meat is the normal and staple diet of Muslims, do Government propose to consider the advisability of having Halal meat served in the common mess or permitting the Muslim students to make their own arrangements for their food?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) A common mess has existed since April 1941.

(b) and (c). During the first year of the mess halal meat almost exclusively was served. Two Sikh students objected and became vegetarians. From the outset Jhatka has also occasionally been cooked, but separately, and it has not been served to Muslim students.

(d) Many months after his admission to the College one student refused for some time to take food in the mess. He subsequently returned to the mess and took his meals there as a vegetarian.

(e) and (f). Halal meat is served in the mess to those who wish to have it. Jhatka meat is also served to those who require it and vegetarian diet to the vegetarians. The three kinds of diet are cooked and served separately and care is taken to see that there is no contact between them. Under the College rules the students must take their meals in the College mess but all are free to eat according to their inclination and in conformity with their religious beliefs.

REPAIRS TO THE TAJ MAHAL, AGRA.

†129. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state at what stage the preparations are for effecting the repairs to the dome of the Taj at Agra?

(b) What is the estimate of the repairs to the dome?

(c) Is it or is it not a fact that the wooden and bamboo structures raised around the dome of the Taj for effecting repairs were made more than a year ago? If not, when were they made?

(d) What was the cost incurred thereon?

(e) Is it or is it not a fact that by the passage of hot weather and the rainy season the wooden and bamboo structures are deteriorating day by day?

(f) Is it or is it not a fact that the presence of this superstructure is likely to prove a dangerous factor in case of fire and bombing?

(g) Have Government been negotiating for the sale and removal of this superstructure? If so, to what effect?

(h) In view of the likely damage to the dome by the presence of this superstructure and the likelihood of its deterioration by the lapse of time, do Government propose to consider the advisability of either effecting the repairs at an early date or, in case it is not possible, to take down the superstructure for the present and to raise it again when there is any likelihood of the repairs?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) and (b). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to my answer to his starred question No. 70 of the 28th July, 1943.

(c) Yes. In 1940.

(e) The materials used for the scaffolding have naturally undergone some deterioration owing to the action of the weather.

(f) Yes, but the use of combustible material in making the scaffolding was unavoidable.

(g) Tenders were called for by the Public Works Department for the sale and removal of the scaffolding and the cost of dismantling is estimated at Rs. 12,180 less Rs. 5,000 to be recovered by sale of the material.

(h) The scaffolding will be removed as early as practicable after certain minor repairs which are now in progress are completed and after the newly appointed Committee has inspected the dome.

LEAVING PROMOTIONS TO A SOUTH INDIAN ASSISTANT.

130. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if a South Indian Assistant was sent to England on study leave and on his return was given leaving promotions? If so, why?

(b) What was the subject of his thesis for Ph.D.? Where was it published, and what was the date on which parchment was given to that, South Indian for Ph.D.?

(c) Is it a fact that this gentleman had training in Bee-Keeping? If so, what benefit has the Department accrued from that training?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) Study leave combined with other leave was granted in 1937 to a South Indian Assistant at the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute, to enable him to study (1) bee-keeping in England and (2) Biological Control methods. He returned from leave in August 1940 and was appointed in March 1941 to officiate in a class II post of 2nd Assistant Entomologist at the Institute. The post was simultaneously advertised for recruitment through the Federal Public Service Commission. In accordance with the advice of the Commission he was appointed substantively to the post in August 1941. He has since then officiated and is now again officiating, in a Class I post of Biological Control Research Officer which has fallen vacant temporarily by the deputation of the permanent incumbent for work in connection with the anti-locust campaign. This is not a permanent promotion.

(b) The title of this officer's thesis was "Factors affecting the rate of reproduction in Nemeritis canescens (Grab.): Hymenoptera: Ichneumonidae". It has not been published nor has the author yet received "parchment".

(c) Yes. The training is useful for answering the numerous enquiries on apiculture received at the Institute from all parts of India.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if this gentleman has been granted the degree of Ph.D.?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Not yet. He has been addressed as "Doctor" in letters to his own Professor in the English University that he attended and I understand he has been congratulated by the Professor.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if any official information has been received by the department if this gentleman has actually passed and is entitled to the Ph.D. degree?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: No official information has been received as the buildings of the University to which he submitted the thesis were very badly bombed and I believe that not even the examination results have been sent to India since then.

Sardar Sant Singh: Is it a fact that Dr. H. S. Prithi of the Agricultural Department has received his degree and a provisional certificate has been sent to him, though it was subsequent to this?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I have no information.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable gentleman inquire?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Why was no Punjabi sent to England?

(No answer.)

FORFEITURE OF THE INCREMENT OF A SIKH BY THE DIRECTOR, IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

131. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state the facts of the case in which the Director, Imperial Agricultural Research Institute, permanently forfeited the increment of one Sikh fieldman and did not agree to stop the increment of a South Indian Artist while the two cases were similar?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: As will presently appear, the two cases were not similar. The increment of a Sikh fieldman (as also of a Muslim fieldman) was stopped by his immediate superior, the Imperial Entomologist, for gross neglect of duty in the field when employed on locust control work. The punishment was not inflicted by the Director.

In the case of the Artist—a South Indian—the officer under whom he was working advised, on a routine reference, that the annual increment should be withheld for six months as a warning against laziness. When it was brought to his notice by the Director that in the Artist's 27 years service there was no record of punishment or warning and that he had twice been promoted within the previous four years on the advice of the reporting officer himself, the latter recommended "a stiff warning" and the Director accepted the recommendation and passed orders accordingly.

Sardar Sant Singh: Is it a fact that in the department there is a feeling of South Indian versus the Punjabi and this feeling has been accentuated by the action of my Honourable friend himself.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I am not aware of that.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member make inquiry into this matter?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: No, Sir.

Sardar Sant Singh: Why are you not making any inquiry about it?

FIXING RENTS LOWER THAN PRE-WAR RENTAL VALUE IN BABAR ROAD AREA.

132. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Is the Honourable the Labour Member aware:

(i) that rents for middle class tenement houses in the Babar Road Area have been fixed by the Rent Controller at Rs. 42-8-0 per mensem from the 1st July, 1942; and

(ii) that this rent is less than the rental value of Rs. 560 per annum assessed by the New Delhi Municipal Committee for levying house-tax on these houses ever since 1938-39?

(b) What are the grounds for fixing the rents lower than the pre-war rental value as assessed by the New Delhi Municipal Committee in 1938-39?

(c) How do Government justify the levy of house-tax at an excessive rate for all these years?

(d) If the assessment was not excessive, how do Government justify the order of the Rent Controller?

(e) Is he aware that the house-owners in this area are mostly middle class people who have been hit hard by this arbitrary decision of the Rent Controller?

(f) What rents are fixed by the Rent Controller for houses having approximately a similar residential accommodation near the Pusa Road in Qarol Bagh Area, and in any other composite area in New Delhi?

(g) Is he aware that while controlling rents of houses in Calcutta, the Bengal Government have allowed an increase of ten per cent. in rents over the rents prevailing in 1941?

(h) Does he propose to allow a similar increase in rents in New Delhi? If not, why?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) (i). There are several different classes of tenements in the Babar Road Area carrying different rents. The rent of Rs. 42-8-0 is for one class tenements only.

(ii) Yes.

(b) The rents are fixed under clause 8 of the Delhi House Rent Control Order, 1939, under which the Rent Controller has to fix the fair rent of a house having regard to the prevailing rates of rents for the same or similar accommodation in similar circumstances during the twelve months prior to the 1st September, 1939.

(c) This is not a matter for Government.

(e) Yes, but Government have no reason to believe that the house-owners have been hit hard.

(f) There are no houses in Qarol Bagh having the same or similar accommodation.

(g) I have no official information on the point.

(h) No, Government do not see any justification for it.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member make inquiries as to the difference in rental value assessed by the New Delhi Municipal Committee and the rent which is allowed to the owner and see that some justice is done to the landlords and the rents are increased?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I cannot do that, because the fair rent is fixed by the officer. There is no reason to suppose that his judgment is in any way miscarried by any circumstances which he ought not to take into account.

FISHING INDUSTRY IN THE SIND SEA COAST.

133. *Seth Yusuf Abdoolo Haroon: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state:

(a) the number of small fishing ports on the Sind Sea Coast line;

(b) the total population of fishermen residing and dependent on the Fish Industry in all such ports, including the Karachi Port;

(c) the total quantity of cured and preserved dry salted fish and fish manure exported from Karachi to Ceylon and other ports in India and abroad in each year from 1939 onwards; and

(d) the total quantity of the duty free industrial coloured salt consumed by the Fish Industry in Sind in each year since 1939 to the 31st March, 1943?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) and (b). Fisheries within territorial waters being an exclusively Provincial subject, the Government of India are not in a position to furnish the desired information.

(c) and (d). The information asked for is not readily available.

POST-WAR RECONSTRUCTION IN EDUCATION.

134. *Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if Government have drafted any scheme on the post-war reconstruction in education? If so, does he propose to lay the scheme on the table?

(b) Does the Honourable Member contemplate appointing a special Committee for devising a scheme of reconstruction in education after the war?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) A scheme is under preparation. The Honourable Member's suggestion that, when ready, it should be laid on the table of the House has been noted for consideration.

(b) No. There is already in existence a fully representative body called the Central Advisory Board of Education before which it is proposed to lay the scheme for consideration in the first instance.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is the Honourable Member aware that the progress of the work done by the Central Advisory Board is so slow that if this work is entrusted to them it will not be ready till ten years after the end of the war?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I think it is proposed to call a special meeting of the Central Advisory Board with the idea that it would refer special aspects of this case to special committees. There is no reason, therefore, why the usual leisurely procedure should be followed.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will the Honourable Member please ask the Central Advisory Board to present the report at least within two years from now?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I will pass on the request.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Will the Honourable Member state whether the universities of India will be consulted on this scheme?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I will make a note of that suggestion.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: What are the special expert committees appointed by the Central Advisory Board?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I shall require notice of that question.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is it a fact that the Educational Commissioner has already prepared a scheme, and if so, will the Honourable Member lay it on the table?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: No, Sir. I said that the scheme is under preparation.

Sardar Sant Singh: What is the personnel of this advisory body?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I should require notice of that; but I can say briefly that it has among its members the Education Minister or the Adviser in charge of Education in all the provinces. Then there are representatives of this House and from another place and a certain number of gentlemen from the States and a certain number of non-officials.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is the Honourable Member aware that this Advisory Committee meets only once a year and whenever there is some business they appoint a sub-committee which takes two years to report, and then they take another year to consider that report and in the fourth year it is circulated among the provinces; and the process is so long that unless the matter is simplified there is no chance of getting anything done there?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I think I have answered that before; it is intended to call a special meeting of the Central Advisory Board of Education and to set up committees which would immediately examine it.

PROHIBITION OF CONSTRUCTIONS INVOLVING USE OF CEMENT, STEEL AND TIMBER.

135. *Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi: (a) In view of the Government order announced in some places by beat of drums prohibiting constructions of all descriptions involving the use of cement, steel and timber, will the Honourable Member for Labour be pleased to state whether this order applies to constructions which are nearing completion and do not require cement, steel and teak wood?

(b) If the answer to (a) is in the negative, will the owners of such premises be granted permission for making and fitting the requisite panels for doors and wood-sashes for windows out of mango wood and other materials already in their possession, provided that the authorities are satisfied after verification that all the materials required are already in their stock?

(c) If the answer to (b) is in the affirmative, do Government propose to issue instructions to that effect to all provinces? If not, will all constructions, irrespective of whether they involve the use of cement, steel and timber, be kept in abeyance now?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) to (c). In order to curtail the demand for labour and materials and to check inflationary tendencies, the Government of India have asked the Provincial Governments to do what they can to discourage the construction of buildings, etc., by local bodies and private persons. These are general instructions and the Provincial Governments are at liberty to give effect to them in whatever manner they consider suitable having regard to the conditions prevailing in the Province. I would therefore suggest that the Member approaches the Provincial Government whose orders he desires to have clarified.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if these things have been prohibited because they are being supplied for war purposes or they have been prohibited for some other reason?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: For war purposes.

Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi: May I inform the Honourable Member that the District Magistrate of Mathra has refused permission to an Honourable Member of this House to complete his house. He wanted to put in only 22 panels of mango wood and 22 panels for doors. That was the only thing to be done, but the District Magistrate refused to give the permission.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): That is a statement of facts and not a question.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I am glad to receive the information.

Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi: Is it a fact that the Commissioner of Agra Division was approached in this connection and he said that if the gentleman concerned could convince the District Magistrate that he already had in his possession the necessary wood to complete the house, he would give him the sanction. He convinced the District Magistrate that he had the necessary wood in his possession and yet he refused to give him the permission.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): Again it is a statement and not a question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if the half-completed houses or three-fourths completed houses have also been prohibited from being built?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I have no information on the point.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Have any exceptions been made in this matter?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: We have given general instructions to the provinces.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: They have not been given any discretion?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I am sure the discretion will be exercised with due care.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Then the Central Government has not given any instructions yet?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I cannot say at this stage.

MANUFACTURE AND DISTRIBUTION OF STANDARD CLOTH.

136. *Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Civil Supplies be pleased to give an account of the progress made in the manufacture and distribution of standard cloth during the last six months?

(b) Does he propose to exhibit specimen of standard cloth with their prices in one of the rooms of the Council House during the Session of the Assembly?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) As I said in reply to a question on the 28th of July, the total quantity of Standard Cloth actually despatched to Provinces and States as at 25th July was 28.6 million yards.

(b) Specimens of Standard Cloth with prices are on exhibition in my room.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: May I know the quantity of special cloth sent to Bihar?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I cannot say anything more as to the actual quantity, but we propose to send exactly according to the population figure of the different provinces.

WHEAT AND RICE PRICES.

137. *Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Honourable the Food Member be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving the price index of rice at import centres in the months of April, May, June and July?

(b) What were the prices of wheat at Hapur, Chandausi, Lyallpur, Bahawalpur and Bombay on the 20th July, 1943?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) and (b). Two statements are placed on the table—one giving the wholesale prices of rice prevailing in important centres during the months April to July 1943 and the other the wholesale prices of wheat on the 20th of July 1943 at the centres named by the Honourable Member.

STATEMENT MADE BY SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS RE FOOD SITUATION IN INDIA.

138. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) With reference to the statement made by the Secretary of State for India in the House of Commons, as reported in the Reuter's message, dated the 14th July, to the effect that the present difficult situation in India was due to the widespread tendency of cultivators to withhold foodgrains from the market, and to larger consumption per head as a result of the increased family income, etc., will the Honourable Member for Food be pleased to state whether this statement is based upon any authoritative information in the possession of the Government of India in respect of each province?

(b) What is the proportion of cultivators in each Province, according to the information of Government, who cultivate what are known as economic holdings, and what proportion of them are in a position to withhold their agricultural produce such as foodgrains, being surplus to their own family requirements, from the market?

(c) What proportion of families in each Province has according to the information of Government benefited from an "increased family income" as stated by the Secretary of State, so as to be able to go in for a larger consumption of food?

(d) If the above statement is based on the facts supplied by the Government of India, or the individual Provincial Governments, is it proposed to lay on the table the reports of any enquiry from which the above mentioned conclusions can be drawn?

(e) Is the Honourable Member aware of a statement made by Mr. Suhrawardy, Minister in charge of Civil Supplies, Bengal, in the Bengal Legislative Assembly, on the 12th July last, with reference to an "anti-hoarding drive" which was confined in its operation to all the rural areas and all the towns of Bengal, excluding the city of Calcutta and the town of

* Joshi rice. † Retail price.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member in possession of all the reports regarding deaths from starvation in Bengal, Orissa and other provinces? Is he expected to be kept regularly informed by the provincial authorities in this particular matter?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I cannot say that the Government of India is in possession of all the reports on the subject; so many of them appear in so many places. Whenever there is a question, we make enquiry from the Provincial Governments and are informed of the situation. Otherwise the general situation is fairly well known.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the matter not of sufficient importance to merit a sort of general instruction being issued from the Government of India that all reports regarding deaths from starvation which may happen in any part of the country should be reported promptly to the Government of India?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I will consider that suggestion. No doubt, if the matter is really of such a character as it should be communicated to the Government of India, then the Provincial Governments will no doubt do so.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member aware of very many other reports of such incidents that have appeared in the Press since I gave notice of this question? Is he aware of a statement that appeared very recently that on a single day 27 dead bodies were taken out from the pavements of Calcutta by one single philanthropic body not to mention of the activities of other philanthropic bodies?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I have seen the reports.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I ask the Honourable Member whether the conditions in Bengal and Bihar have reached the famine situation?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I think I will not be able to answer such general questions. I certainly propose to give a survey of the whole situation during the food debate.

Sardar Sant Singh: Can the Honourable Member give the House an assurance that food grains will be rushed to Bengal and the affected areas before the Food debate takes place in this House?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: We are trying our level best in the matter not merely to Bengal but to every part of India which is in need. But there are a great many limiting factors which it is impossible for me to discuss in reply to a question and which I propose to say during the food debate. With all good wishes, you cannot do as much as you can. For example, just at the time when we arranged to send 120 wagons of wheat a day from the Punjab, the Damodar floods came and the railway lines were breached; just at the time when two ships were loaded, one went wrong and had to be sent to port. Factors like these are there.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Are not the conditions in Bengal and Bihar worse than in other places?

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): Questions like these should stand over till the Food debate.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is the Honourable Member prepared to enquire of every person about the stock in his possession, and is he prepared to promulgate an ordinance forcing these people to send out foodstuffs?

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): That does not lie within the four corners of this question.

THE "EMERGENCY PLAN" RE SUPPLY OF RICE TO BENGAL.

140. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable Member for Food been drawn to the following statement made by Mr. Suhrawardy, Minister in charge of Civil Supplies, Bengal, in the Bengal Legislative Assembly on the 14th July, when replying to a debate on the food position:

"The Government of India found itself unable even to send rice according to the emergency plan, and although it has sent us wheat and wheat products continuously from the Punjab, it always fell short of the programme on the basis of which I had organised the distribution of food within Bengal?"

(b) Does the Honourable Member propose to make a detailed statement giving statistical figures and explaining what is referred to by Mr. Suhrawardy as the "emergency plan", and to what extent was it carried out so far as the Government of India was concerned, and to what extent did the actual action taken by the Government of India fall short of the programme as stated by Mr. Suhrawardy?

(c) When was the "emergency plan" drawn up, what was expected to be its duration, and to what factors was the failure to implement it due?

(d) With reference to the statement made by Major General Wood at a Press Conference in Calcutta, on the 13th May, last, that foodgrains including rice and its substitutes, wheat and grams, to the extent of 793,000 tons were "being provided by the Central Government", was this programme in any way connected with the emergency plan referred to above? How much of this quantity has been actually supplied by the Central Government since the statement was made?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). In order to cover the period after the removal of restrictions on the movement of foodgrains in the Eastern Region until supplies should move freely into Bengal from neighbouring provinces, emergency arrangements were made by the Government of India last May for the despatch to Bengal of foodgrains between 30,000 and 40,000 tons from areas outside the Eastern Region, over a period of about a month. 27,000 tons were despatched including 14,155 tons of rice. The plan was not fully implemented owing to the inability of local Governments to procure the required amounts in time.

(d) No Sir; 39,963 tons has so far been delivered to Bengal out of the basic plan quota.

FREE TRADE POLICY AND AN "ANTI-HOARDING" DRIVE IN BENGAL AS REGARDS FOODGRAINS.

141. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Food be pleased to refer to the Press Communiqué, dated the 17th May, 1943, in which it was announced that all restrictions on the free trade of foodgrains in Bengal, Bihar, Orissa and Eastern States, excluding certain areas in the Eastern States and Assam, were removed?

(b) What were the specific areas in Assam and the Eastern States which were excluded from the operation of this decision, and what were the reasons for such exclusion in each case?

(c) Is it a fact that the Government of India absolved themselves of the responsibility for sending supplies to Bengal as a concomitant of the introduction of "free trade" within the "Eastern Zone"?

(d) Is it a fact that the undertaking of an "anti-hoarding" drive in Bengal by the Government of Bengal was a condition implicit in the new "free trade" policy? If so, was it understood by the Government of India that the city of Calcutta and the town of Howrah would be excluded from the operation of the anti-hoarding drive, and, if so, what were the reasons for excluding Calcutta and Howrah from the scope of this action?

(e) Has the attention of the Honourable Member been drawn to the allegations made by the non-official members in the course of a recent debate in the Bengal Legislative Assembly that, as a result of the exclusion of Calcutta and Howrah from the scope of the "anti-hoarding drive", considerable quantities of rice were purchased in the districts by the licensed whole-sale dealers from Calcutta and Howrah and removed to these two places?

(f) What are the reasons for deciding upon a reversal of the aforesaid "free trade" policy in the "Eastern Zone" as announced at the Food Conference at Delhi on the 8th July last?

(g) Has the desire of the Honourable Member, as expressed in his speech at the Food Conference on the 8th July last, that the Government of Bengal will, without further delay, take a similar "anti-hoarding" drive in unearthing the hoards of foodgrains in the "greater Calcutta area" been carried into effect?

(h) In what sense has the "anti-hoarding" drive been "an unquestioned success" as stated by the Honourable Member at the Food Conference on the 8th July? Are Government fully aware of the results of the drive?

(i) What was the effect of the operation of the aforesaid "free trade" policy on prices and supplies of foodgrains in the provinces of Orissa, Bihar and Assam and the Eastern States, separately, and has any complaint been received from these Provinces and States regarding the practical operation of the said "free trade" policy?

(j) Have Government any information regarding the rise in the prices of foodgrains in these Provinces and States, week by week, since the introduction of the "free trade" policy?

(k) What quantities of foodgrains did actually move into Bengal from these Provinces and States as a result of the "free trade" during the total period of its operation?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) Yes.

(b) The Assam Valley and the States of Kanker, Bastar, Patna, Kalahandi, Nandgaon, Khairagarh, Chhuikhadan and Kawardha. The former was excluded as its surpluses were already earmarked intended to be acquired for the requirements of the Defence Services and tea garden labour and, latter for geographical reasons.

(c) Yes, to the extent that Bengal was to receive supplies from the Eastern Region, but special supplies were arranged from outside the Region for a limited period.

(d) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. We understand a simultaneous drive throughout Bengal including Calcutta and Howrah could not be undertaken owing to shortage of necessary staff.

(e) Yes.

(f) The decision was in accordance with the recommendations of the Conference which have been accepted by the Government of India.

(g) It is understood that the drive in the greater Calcutta area will be started very shortly and preliminary steps to ring off the areas concerned have already been taken.

(h) It is understood that as a result of the drive stocks of foodgrains to the extent of 80 lakhs of maunds have been set free.

(i) Prices rose in those areas and occasioned some protests from the Governments concerned.

(j) Yes.

(k) Full information is not yet available.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With reference to part (d), is the Honourable Member aware that in making a statement at the Press conference, the Honourable Minister in charge, Bengal, stated that the reason why Calcutta and Howrah would be for the present left out of the scheme was that these two places were trading centres and that they do not wish to kill trade because trading ought to go on?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I am not aware. But that is what we understood when we made enquiries.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With regard to the statement made by the Honourable Member that certain areas were excluded from the operation of this particular scheme on the ground that their surplus stocks were earmarked for defence purposes and for supply to tea garden labourers, do I take it that the policy of the Government at the present moment is to treat the requirements of tea gardens on the same footing as the requirements for the purpose of war?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I think, the conclusion which the Honourable Member is taking is quite wrong.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Because the Honourable Member coupled these two, I want a statement on this point?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: Sometimes members from two different parties sit side by side.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: Is it a fact that the restrictions removed have since been restored?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I think so.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: What is the reason?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: It is very difficult for me to give an explanation of the reasons in the course of a reply.

'BASIC QUOTAS' AS REGARDS FOODGRAINS OF DIFFERENT DEFICIT PROVINCES AND STATES.

142. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) With reference to the statement made by the Honourable Member for Food at the Food Conference on the 8th July last to the effect that deficit Provinces and States would be free within the limits of their "basic quota" to make direct approach to the surplus areas for the purchase of foodgrains and wherever possible to make direct transport arrangements, will he be pleased to make a statement showing the "basic quotas" in respect of the different deficit Provinces and States, explaining the considerations on which the said "basic quota" has been fixed in each case?

(b) Is the Honourable Member aware of a statement made in the Bengal Council (Upper House) by the Minister for Agriculture on the 24th February, 1943, that the deficit in foodgrains for the current year in Bengal as then estimated was 2,328,000 tons, and of another statement made by a Parliamentary Secretary of the Bengal Government in the said Council on the 15th July last that the extent of the shortage was estimated at 25 to 30 per cent. of the annual output which amounted to 20 to 24 lakhs of tons? Is the quota for Bengal based on these estimates?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) It is not in the public interest to give the figures of the basic quotas. The quotas have been fixed on a consideration of the availability of supplies and the requirements stated by each deficit area.

(b) I am aware of the statements referred to by the Honourable Member. The basis on which the quota for Bengal has been fixed has been explained in answer to the first part of the Honourable Member's question.

AUTHORITY GRANTED TO PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS FOR FIXING AMOUNTS OF FOOD GRAINS WHICH COULD BE STORED BY LABOUR EMPLOYERS.

†143. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Food please state what the disability had been of the Provincial Governments in the matter of fixing amounts of foodgrains which could be stored by the employers of labour for supply to their workmen which had to be removed by the recent amendment to the Foodgrains Control Order? Had such disability been connected in any way with the condition referred to by Mr. Justice Braund, Regional Commissioner for the Eastern Zone, in his broadcast of the 8th April that Provincial Governments "were to see that essential services necessary to win the war for India were kept going", or with the special "needs of Calcutta" to which reference was made in the Secretary of State's statement in the House of Commons on the 14th July?

(b) Is the authority granted to Provincial Governments for the aforesaid fixation needed as a preliminary to the initiation of the "anti-hoarding" drive in Calcutta and Howrah where, according to the allegations made by the several non-official members in the course of the recent food debate in the Bengal Legislature, large stocks have been accumulated by certain powerful interests, such as British employers of labour, and certain other favoured individuals? Is the order recently passed by the Regional Commissioner, Eastern Region, prohibiting export of rice, paddy, dals, wheat and wheat products from Calcutta and the Industrial area, except under permits, intended as a long-term arrangement or

Howrah, to the effect that practically in all places and districts deficits had been reported as a result of the aforesaid drive? Has this fact been reported to the Secretary of State for India in order to enable him to correct his aforesaid statement, so far at least as Bengal is concerned?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) The statement is based on reports received from time to time from Provincial Governments.

(b) The information is not readily available.

(c) Government have no information as to the exact proportion but, as the Honourable Member is no doubt aware, prices of foodstuffs have risen and war conditions have led to considerable increase in employment in all classes of the community in consequence of which the money income of producers has increased.

(d) No special enquiry was made.

(e) Yes. The general position in Bengal has been reported to the Secretary of State.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: With reference to the Honourable Member's answer to part (b) of the question, may I know whether his attention has been drawn to a statement made in a book called "The man behind the plough" by M. Azizul Huque, ex-Speaker, Bengal Legislative Assembly and Vice-Chancellor, Calcutta University? He goes into very great details and then he states on page 195:

"The conclusion is irresistible that the ordinary Bengal peasant is in possession of a holding which is definitely uneconomic."

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: Sir, I do not understand the relevancy of that question to part (b).

Mr. K. C. Neogy: When the Honourable Member gave the reply to part (b), did he have an opportunity of remembering what was written in that book by his name-sake?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I think I did remember but I thought that my friend required much later information than what that book presented and he wanted information with reference to the present conditions. It is only from that point of view that answer is given. But if the ex-Speaker of the Bengal Legislative Assembly again writes on that subject this year, I will certainly get an edition of that book.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Do I take it that he takes that statement to be correct so far as Bengal is concerned?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: It was correct according to his information available at that time and in those conditions.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Has he any reason to suppose since he has assumed office that the statement made in that book was not quite accurate and needs revision in the next edition?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: Certainly I feel there is much in that book which requires revision.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Meanwhile, will the Government of India draw the attention of the Secretary of State to this particular statement in this book?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I do not understand the relevancy of this question.

Sardar Sant Singh: With reference to part (a) of the question, may I ask the Honourable Member if it is a fact that Sir Chotu Ram, a Minister of the Punjab, in a public meeting at Lyallpur openly exhorted the cultivators not to bring their stocks to the market against the orders of the Government of India?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I have no official information on the subject.

Sardar Sant Singh: Was this matter talked in the Food Conference which the Honourable Member had some days ago?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I should like to have more specific question to be put

Sardar Sant Singh: The more specific question is that Sir Chotu Ram, while speaking

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): The Honourable Member has asked for notice of that question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I have one more question with reference to part (e). My question was whether a particular statement made by the Minister in charge of Civil Supplies had been reported to the Secretary of State. The answer, as far as I can recollect, was that the general position is being reported to the Secretary of State. My question is specific as to whether this particular statement has been reported to the Secretary of State so that he may be more careful in making propagandist statements in the House of Commons hereafter?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I believe the Honourable Member is referring to the statement of Mr. Suhrawardy on the 12th July. I do not think it is the practice to refer to the Secretary of State the different statements that are made in the different provinces, but from time to time information of a general character is being sent.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: In answer to the first part of my question the Honourable Member stated that the statement made by the Secretary of State is based upon reports of the Provincial Governments from time to time. Now, the question arises in this way. Has this very important statement made by the responsible Minister in Bengal been brought to the notice of the Secretary of State because it definitely goes against the statement made by the Secretary of State on this very subject?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: As I said, no individual statement of a Minister is ordinarily reported to the Secretary of State.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): Next question.

REPORTS RE DEATHS FROM STARVATION, ETC., IN BENGAL.

139. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the Food Member been drawn to—

(i) the Parliamentary Secretary's statement in the Orissa Legislative Assembly on the 3rd July last that "there had been cases of death due to starvation in the province";

(ii) the telegrams from Pleaders' and Mukhtars' Bars of Bhola in the district of Backergunge in Bengal to the Press (published in the Calcutta newspapers on the 10th July) that "many deaths from starvation in Bhola Sub-Division. Numbers increasing daily; situation extremely critical";

(iii) Khan Bahadur Abdul Wahed Khan's statement in the Bengal Legislative Assembly on the 13th July that "it was a fact that girls and women were being taken to Patuakhali side for being sold. Not few were eating unedibles and meat of dead cows"; and

(iv) Mr. Kiran Sanker Roy's statement in the Bengal Legislative Assembly on the 14th July that "People sold their utensils, cattle and even were now prepared to sell away their children. They had starved and were now dying"?

(b) Do the Government of India propose to hold enquiries, or to ask the Provincial Governments concerned to make enquiries, to satisfy themselves about the accuracy or otherwise of these reports? Is the Secretary of State's attention being drawn to these reports?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) Yes.

(b) It is understood that the Orissa Government have already made some enquiries and that further enquiries will be made. The Government of Bengal have also instituted enquiries to verify the accuracy of the reports. The Secretary of State is kept regularly informed of the situation and if the veracity of these reports is established he will certainly be informed.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is it a fact that censorship is being exercised on the publication of news of this character in the press?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I do not think that is a question which I can answer.

only as a temporary measure for the period of the anti-hoarding drive in Calcutta?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) Before the recent amendment of the Foodgrains Control Order employers were not required to take out licenses for the storage of foodgrains or to submit returns. In the absence of such a provision, proper control over and information about such stocks would be difficult to secure. This amendment had been under consideration for some time on general grounds and had nothing to do with the condition referred to by Mr. Justice Braund or to the special needs of Calcutta.

(b) The answer to the first part of this sub-paragraph is in the negative, though the powers now available to the Provincial Government would undoubtedly facilitate the anti-hoarding drive. As regards the Regional Commissioner's order referred to, it is not directly concerned with the anti-hoarding drive, and, having been necessitated by the difficult supply position in Calcutta is likely to continue in full as long as the supply position does not improve substantially.

COST OF RAISING BUILDINGS IN NEW DELHI AND SIMLA CONNECTED WITH WAR ACTIVITIES.

144. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable the Labour Member please state the total cost incurred by the Government of India in raising buildings in New Delhi and Simla, separately, connected with the War activities since September 1939? Was any expense incurred on behalf of Americans? If so, how much, and who met it?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: The following expenditure had been incurred up to the end of March 1943:

(i) New Delhi—Rs. 1,55,14,629.

(ii) Simla—Rs. 24,65,137.

(iii) On behalf of Americans—Rs. 38,47,916.

(This has been debited to Defence Services Estimates under Reciprocal Lease/Lend arrangements.)

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: May I know if after the war all these temporary buildings will be demolished?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Yes.

Sardar Sant Singh: Which Government meets the expenditure of Rs. 38,47,916 on Americans?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: The Government of India under the reciprocal Lease/Lend arrangements.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will this expenditure on the taxpayers of India be later on debited to the accounts?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Notice.

SIKHS IN NEW POSTS CREATED IN THE COMMERCE, INDUSTRIES AND CIVIL SUPPLIES AND FOOD DEPARTMENTS.

145. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state the number, separately, of posts carrying salaries of Rs. 300 per mensem and over in the Commerce, Industries and Civil Supplies and Food Departments?

(b) How many new posts were created in these Departments since the beginning of the war? How many Sikhs were employed on these posts? What is the maximum salary paid to a Sikh, and in what Department or Section of the Department such maximum salary is paid?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I lay on the table a statement furnishing the information asked for by the Honourable Member.

SIKHS IN HIGH-SALARIED POSTS OF CERTAIN DEPARTMENTS.

†146. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state the number of posts carrying salaries of Rs. 400 a month or over in the Federal Court, Legislative Assembly Department, Political Department, Secretariat of the Governor General (Personal), and Secretariat of the Governor General (Reforms)?

(b) How many such posts are held by Sikhs, and what is the approximate emoluments of each incumbent?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: The required information is as follows:

(1) Federal Court	(a) 1.	(b) Nil.
(2) Legislative Assembly Department	(a) 33.	(b) 1. Pay Rs. 305 in the scale of Rs. 200—15—500.
(3) Political Department	(a) 24.	(b) 1. Pay Rs. 400.
(4) Secretariat of the Governor General (Personal).	(a) 7.	(b) Nil.
(5) Secretariat of the Governor General (Reforms).	(a) 3.	(b) Nil.

TRAINING ON THE I. M. M. T. S. "DUFFERIN".

†147. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state when training on the I.M.M.T.S. "Dufferin" was first started?

(b) Is it a fact that no particular educational qualifications were required of the candidates for admission and that a written test was prescribed?

(c) Is it a fact that the standard of such tests was generally that of Matriculation Examination of the Indian Universities?

(d) How many candidates admitted to the ship during the first three years had passed the Matriculation or an equivalent examination?

(e) Is it a fact that the Dufferin Passing Out Examination has been held equivalent to the Matriculation Examination of an Indian University? If so, on what grounds?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) Training on the I.M.M.T.S. "Dufferin" was first started on the 1st December, 1927.

(b) and (c). Information is not readily available regarding the procedure adopted in the case of the first admissions on the Training Ship but at present the minimum standard of education required of candidates is three standards below Matriculation and they are required to pass a qualifying examination based on that standard.

(d) The information asked for is not readily available.

(e) The reply to the first portion is in the affirmative. As regards the second portion, in view of the standard of education imparted and the number of years of training, the Dufferin Passing Out Certificate has been recognised as equivalent to the Matriculation or High School Examination.

TRAINING ON THE I. M. M. T. S. "DUFFERIN".

examination who were admitted to the I.M.M.T.S. "Dufferin" during the last years? How do these figures compare with those of the first three years of the ship? Is it a fact that the number of such candidates is on the increase? What is the percentage of such candidates to the total admission?

(b) Is it a fact that training on the ship lasts for three years, and that after passing out the final examination a candidate is deemed to have passed the Matriculation Examination?

(c) Is it a fact that the standard of the books prescribed for training on "Dufferin" is in most cases equivalent to those of the Intermediate Examination of the Indian Universities generally?

(d) Is it a fact that some of the books prescribed for academic subjects have been or are prescribed for the Intermediate or B.A. Classes of certain Universities?

(e) Is it not a fact that the standard books prescribed for the vocational subject is not lower than that of degree courses in similar or allied (e.g., Mechanical Engineering, etc.) subjects in the Indian Colleges?

(f) Have Government examined the question that the D.F.P.O.E. should be deemed equivalent to B.Sc. of the Indian Universities? If not, do Government propose to examine this early, with a view to seeing that the D.F.P.O.E. is declared equivalent to the B.Sc.? If not, why not?

(g) Are Government aware that by doing so they will have a better and bigger field of selection for entry to the ship?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) The number of Matriculates who were admitted to the Training Ship "Dufferin" during the years 1941 to 1943 are as under: 1941.....14, 1942.....10, 1943.....14.

The figures for the first three years are not readily available and it is not possible therefore to state whether the number of Matriculates is on the increase. The percentage of such candidates to the total admission during the years mentioned above was: 1941.....25.45, 1942.....18.51, 1943.....31.81.

(b) Yes.

(c) to (e). The curriculum laid down for the cadets on the Training Ship combines the requirements of the sea with those of the Universities in India up to the Matriculation standard only. The curriculum for the three years' course is given on pages 36-40 of the Prospectus of the I.M.M.T.S. "Dufferin", a copy of which is in the library of the Legislature.

(f) No. Specially because the qualifying examination is three standards below Matric and the training on the ship lasts only for three years.

(g) No.

DESIRABILITY OF GRANTING SCHOLARSHIPS TO ALL ENGINEERING CADETS FROM I. M. M. T. S. "DUFFERIN".

†149. Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member please state whether only the first fifteen Engineering Cadets from the I.M.M.T.S. "Dufferin" are granted Government scholarship of Rs. 50 each for the period of the three years' apprenticeship in workshops on sea-ports?

(b) Is it a fact that in the case of remaining cadets who do not receive any Government scholarship, the workshops pay only eight annas to Re. 1/2/- per day?

(c) Are Government aware that these rates are too low for one's living in sea-port towns, particularly now on account of the rise in prices?

(d) Do Government propose to grant scholarship to all the Engineering Cadets who pass the D.F.P.O. Examination? If not, why not?

(e) Do Government propose to see that all the cadets (Engineering and Executive) get a living wage in accordance with their standard of living on the ship during their apprenticeship period as well?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) Yes.

(b) The workshops pay a small wage varying from 8 annas a day in the first year to about Rs. 1/8/- a day in the last year to all the apprentices, whether they are scholarship holders or not.

(c) and (e). The wages paid by the workshops to the apprentices is a matter for settlement between the apprentices and the Shipping Companies.

(d) The reply to the first portion is in the negative. The object of granting scholarships will be defeated if the scholarships are to be awarded to all.

DEMOLITION OF MUSLIM GRAVES ON BAIRD ROAD, NEW DELHI.

150. Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands, please state whether the attention of the Government of India has been drawn to an article published on page 4 of the Daily Payam, of Delhi, dated the 24th May, 1943, regarding demolition or digging out of a number of Muslim graves by a Hindu Contractor on the Baird Road, New Delhi, near the temple of 'Kali'? If so, what action has been taken by the Provincial or the Central Government, and with what result?

(b) What is the number of graves so dug out?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) and (b). While the foundations for certain new quarters were being dug up, graves were discovered by the workmen employed by the Contractor, who is a Muslim and not a Hindu. The work was immediately stopped under the orders of the senior officers of the Central Public Works Department and no graves have been dug out or demolished.

FACTORIES ADVERSELY AFFECTED BY THE FORMER STANDARD TIME.

†151. Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable the Labour Member please state which factories (and in which part of the country) were adversely affected by the former standard time which used to be observed in India?

(b) What is the number of such factories, and what is the estimated amount of loss to those factories caused by the keeping up of the standard time?

(c) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of restoring the old standard time? If not, why not?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) Government have no information that factories in any part of India were adversely affected by the former standard time.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) The reply to the first part is in the negative. The reasons for the advance of time have been explained by Government in a Press communiqué a copy of which is laid on the table of the House. No grounds have been shown for a restoration of the old standard time.

Press Communiqué.

The existence of two different standards of time in India is for purposes of defence undesirable and since the 15th May this year a uniform standard time has been observed throughout the country. In deciding what that standard should be the Government have had to consider on the one hand the convenience of that portion of India which lies to the West of meridian 82½ and already enjoys sufficient daylight saving and on the other the requirements of the eastern Provinces where it is essential to avoid any electricity overload due to overlap of factory demands with those of domestic, office and street lighting and where extra daylight may be needed to mitigate the effect of obscurity. Since in the summer months there is an adequate margin of daylight in the eastern areas, it was considered that by an adjustment of office and factory hours the requirements of those areas during the summer could be adequately met if Standard Time were fixed at 5½ hours ahead of Greenwich Mean Time throughout India and a uniform time was introduced accordingly as from the 15th May. The Government of India undertook, however, to consider the question of a further change before the winter season commenced. It has now been decided that to ensure the continuance of sufficient daylight in the eastern Provinces it is necessary to make such a change in the near future, and that Indian Standard Time throughout the country should be 6½ hours ahead of Greenwich Mean Time. The change will take effect from midnight of the 31st August—1st September from which date clocks will be advanced by one hour. It is fully realised that the advance of clocks by one hour must inevitably cause some inconvenience to areas lying west of meridian 82½ but it is believed that by an adjustment of hours of work, this inconvenience can be overcome and that when the public becomes accustomed to the new time no great difficulty will be experienced.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

SHORTAGE OF RICE SUPPLY IN BENGAL.

27. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member for Food be pleased to state when Government first realised that there was an actual or threatened shortage of supply of rice for consumption in Bengal, and what quantities of it were allowed to be exported from Bengal out of India after that date?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: Bengal expressed inability to spare any surplus of rice for other provinces at the first Food Conference held in December 1942 as they feared that shortage might develop later in the year but it was only at the beginning of March 1943 that the rice situation in Bengal became difficult. Since that period there have been no exports of rice from Bengal.

FALL IN OUTPUT OF COAL.

28. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Labour please state if it is a fact that since January, 1943, the output of coal in British India has gone down? If so, did Government make any enquiry about the reason for this fall in output, and what practical steps do Government propose to take to improve the situation?

(b) Is it a fact that the stock of coal was much less at collieries in British India on the 31st of May, 1943, than the stock that was reported to exist on the 31st of December, 1942? If so, what are the reasons for such a deterioration?

(c) Is it a fact that sufficient number of wagons was not available between the 1st of January, 1943, and 31st of May, 1943, even to carry away the raisings of that particular period? If so, what is the explanation for the reduction in the stock?

(d) Is it a fact that about 30 collieries in the Kajora field in the Province of Bengal with a raising of approximately over ten lakhs of tons a year, are going to be shut down for want of wagon facilities due to the military authorities using the portion of the line serving these collieries, although it is possible to carry the military goods from the Ondal Junction by the military lorries?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) No. The second part of the question does not arise.

(b) The stock figures reported to exist on the 31st December, 1942, are not reliable. Improved methods of collecting figures of stocks have since been introduced. It is believed that stocks have not deteriorated but increased between 31st December, 1942, and 31st May, 1943.

(c) Answer to the first part is in the affirmative. Answer to the second part is in the negative.

(d) No. Kajora field is worked by several pilots. It is presumed that the question refers particularly to the area worked by Okhra Nos. 1 and 2 Pilots. Approximately 30 collieries are worked by these two Pilots. The capacity for coal of these two Pilots is 100 wagons which represents approximately 2,000 tons of coal per day or 7,20,000 tons per annum. Both these Pilots have been getting preferential supplies of wagons as they have large orders from B and A Railway. With the wagon position as at present prevailing in the Bengal and Bihar fields, it is extremely unlikely that even if the capacities of these Pilots were increased the collieries would get more than 100 wagons a day. For the Military Depot 20 wagons in the capacity of Okhra No. 2 Pilots have been provided, but as explained above this arrangement is not likely to cause these collieries to shut down. The Government of India are not aware whether the military can carry goods from Ondal Junction by military lorries.

RECENT IMPORTS OF WHEAT AND OTHER FOODGRAINS.

29. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) With reference to the statement made by the Secretary of State for India in the House of Commons as reported in Reuter's message, dated the 21st January, 1943, to the effect that the question of shipping wheat to India from overseas to tide over before the crop was available in April, was being urgently considered, will the Honourable Member for Food be pleased to make a statement showing, month by month, the quantities of wheat or other foodgrains that may have been imported into India from abroad since this statement was made, indicating the quantities thereof supplied to the different Provinces?

(b) Was any part of the abovementioned shipments diverted for military purposes or earmarked for being utilised in any particular manner?

(c) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a published Associated Press message, dated Karachi, the 11th June last, to the effect that some of the wheat-ships from Australia that were unloaded at Bombay and Calcutta some time ago carried wheat for destinations beyond the shores of India, that they were diverted to India in order to relieve the acute shortage of food that these two cities were experiencing at the time, and that the borrowed wheat had been returned by the Government of India to those for whom it was originally intended, from the new crop?

(d) Is this report substantially correct? If so, what quantities were thus returned, and to which countries?

(e) What were the detailed terms on which this arrangement was entered into with Australia or any other country concerned?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) and (b). It is not in the public interest to furnish this information.

(c) Yes.

(d) The report is not correct.

CONCESSIONS re OIL RESOURCES IN BRITISH INDIA TO BRITISH OR AMERICAN FIRMS.

30. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member for Labour be pleased to refer to starred question No. 441, dated the 30th March, 1943, and lay on the table a statement giving the names of British or American firms that may have secured concessions (including exploration or prospecting licences) in respect of the potential oil sources in any part of British India, together with a summary of the principal terms and conditions thereof in each case?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the statement placed on the table of the House today giving the information promised in answer to the supplementaries on question No. 441, dated the 30th March, 1943.

IMPORTS FROM AND EXPORTS TO THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA OF CERTAIN ARTICLES.

31. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to furnish—

(a) the available statistics of exports from India to the Union of South Africa in respect of jute and gunny cloth, vegetable oils, paraffin wax, provisions, rice (not in the husk), textiles and piece-goods, and other articles for the years 1939-40, 1940-41, 1941-42 and 1942-43; and

(b) the available statistics of imports into India from the Union of South Africa in respect of barks for tanning and other articles for the above years?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) and (b). A statement showing India's exports to and imports from the Union of South Africa during the four years ending 1942-43 is laid on the table.

SCHEDULE.

Certificate of eligibility for exemption from the provisions of the Registration Act, 1939. This is to certify that Mr. is a technical representative/civil service employee of the Forces in India and is thereby entitled to the benefit of the notification, No. 1/9/43-Political (E), dated the 10th April, 1943 issued by the Government of India in the Home Department.

No. 1/11/43-Political (E).

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
HOME DEPARTMENT.

Simla, the 2nd March, 1943.

DECLARATION OF EXEMPTION.

In exercise of the powers conferred by section 6 of the Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 (XVI of 1939), the Central Government is pleased to declare that the provisions of the Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939, except rule 8 and such of the provisions of rules 4, 14, 15 and 16 as apply to, or in relation to, passengers and visitors who are not foreigners shall not apply to, or in relation to, Mr. L. Brooke-Edwards, representative in India of the United States Office of Lend Lease Administration, so long as he continues to hold that post.

B. R. PANDEY,

for Joint Secretary to the Government of India.

[Sir Syed Raza Ali.]

that was passed by this House during the last Session. I believe, in pursuance of that the Government of India have fixed the same period with reference to the action they propose to take under clause 4 of the present Bill. Generally, one year has been fixed under certain provisions of the law for enabling the Executive Government to take action after the close of the war. I admit at once that, generally speaking, a period of one year is given to the Government for winding up the proceedings after the close of the war, but here the facts are very different. I do not want to repeat those facts; every Honourable Member knows that, namely, here we are so patient, so docile as to give the Government a period of one year for enabling it to arrange for the departure of the armed forces of any offending possession of His Majesty against which the Government and this House may choose to take action. On the other hand, here is Field Marshal Smuts who, in the thick of war, when Indian forces were fighting for South Africa, has taken action of a very drastic nature indeed and placed a discriminatory Act of the most objectionable character on the Statute Book of the Union. My point is simply this: In South Africa there is a feeling that so far as the European Community in India is concerned—and let Sir Henry Richardson pay some heed to this—it has no sympathy with our demands. It simply says ditto to what the other Members of the Assembly say in order to purchase its peace and in order to continue its harmonious relations with the other Members of the Assembly. That is the impression there; I don't say that is a correct impression. Let me tell my Honourable friend, Dr. Khare, that the impression in South Africa again is that the Government of India have no very serious quarrel with the Union Government. But the Government of India are powerless because part of the nominal responsibility has been transferred into the hands of Indians and it won't do for the Executive Government to quarrel with the representatives of the people. Therefore, the Government also half-heartedly and unwillingly say ditto to anything coming from the Assembly. That is the erroneous impression in South Africa. Let the Government and the European Group take a serious note of these two things. Let South Africans know that, though for reasons obtaining in this country we have not decided to say that we do not want any armed forces of the Union to defend us against foreign aggression there is a large volume of public opinion that would not be prepared to endorse that opinion. Yet, I would not be justified in raising this question. But I want to curtail this period of one year to six months so that the people of South Africa—that white population which is made up of Britishers and the Dutch population—should know that we are in right earnest, and whereas in dealing with other portions of the Empire we are prepared to give them a period of one year, in the case of South Africa, because of the action taken by the South African Parliament, we are purposely cutting down the period from one year to six months. It may be the plea of the official spokesmen that if this period is one year in the case of other parts of the Empire, why should it be six months in the case of South Africa and that it might not be practicable to wind up affairs in the course of six months. I think that that would be a very lame excuse. If the Government of India are really with the people and this House, then they should certainly find it possible to wind up all the affairs within six months instead of one year. Here is Field Marshal Smuts introducing a Bill in the first week of April and then having it passed on the 14th or 15th April—within a space of about 10 days. If the Government of India cannot do a much less important thing even in six months, then I believe this Government will be showing the stuff of which it is made.

My assumption is that six months is ample time and it is the touch-stone of Government's sincerity. I do not know what attitude Government is going to adopt. Generally they adopt an attitude which might be called halting or one based on indifference. Government have committed themselves to a very serious matter. Let me tell my Honourable friend, Dr. Khare, that by accepting the date on which this Bill is to come into force, he has tacitly consented to making the rules under this Bill even before that date. So this is going to be another touch-stone of Government's sincerity. I therefore move, Sir.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 4 of the Bill, in the proposed section 5 for the words 'one year' the words 'six months' be substituted."

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I support the amendment of my friend. Another reason which I would place before the House—and I hope the reason which I do place would appeal to the House and also to the Government—is that we know that we may meet again in November. That will be soon. The next time that we meet will be in February, 1944. That means six months after the period which has been proposed by my friend Sir Raza Ali. Then we shall be in a better position to know exactly whether the Government of India was in earnest, was serious and had a mind to do exactly what we on this side of the House at present think that the Government intend to do. So, Sir, six months' time is proposed not for the sake of opposition but only to give this House an opportunity to know the sincerity of the Government and their intentions. With these words, I support the amendment.

Sir F. E. James (Madras: European): Sir, I oppose this amendment. The Select Committee which sat on the Bill and which had a sudden, unhappy and premature demise, discussed this and came to the conclusion that one year was a fairly safe compromise. I do not think really that any question of principle is involved.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: That is true.

Sir F. E. James: The purpose really is to exempt, on account of the war, from the operations of any direction which may be made under the Act, members of the armed forces coming from any of the possessions with regard to which those directions may be made. Actually, in practice members of the armed forces may be coming through India on their way back to their own country more than six months after the cessation of hostilities. We do not know exactly how the war will progress, but quite obviously there may be members of the armed forces coming from China or from Burma or even from Japan, passing through India on their way to their own homes, and it would be very unfortunate if any of those came under the operation of directions entered into by the Central Government. Nobody in this House wants any kind of that inconvenience imposed upon those members of the armed forces, who might quite inadvertently be passing through India more than six months after the cessation of hostilities having come from a possession in regard to which these directions had been issued.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: May I know what my Honourable friend's difficulty is? If they are on their way to South Africa say from China, they should stay in the ships just as our people do in Capetown.

Sir F. E. James: My friend has probably never heard of troops passing through a country by train.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: We shall not let them do this.

Sir F. E. James: My point is that there is no difference of opinion on the principle. We are agreed on the main clause: the only question is whether six months or twelve.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): We want to make it as difficult as possible for them to pass through India: Sir Frederick James wants to make it as easy as possible!

Sir F. E. James: My Honourable friend misrepresents me. I am saying it is purely of practical matter. Once you admit the principle that members of the armed forces should be exempted on account of the war from the application of any direction for any period, that period should not be less than twelve months. That is the only issue, and I shall very much regret it if the House accepts a period shorter than that.

COPY OF THE HOME DEPARTMENT NOTIFICATION No. 1/26/42-POLITICAL (E), DATED THE 6TH MAY 1943.

In exercise of the powers conferred by section 6 of the Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 (XVI of 1939), and in supersession of the Declaration published with the notification of the Government of India in the Home Department No. 1/26/42-Political (E), dated the 10th October 1942, the Central Government is pleased to direct that the following further amendment shall be made in the Declarations published with the notification of the Government of India in the Home Department, No. 21/32/39-Political, dated the 21st June 1939, namely:—

In Declaration 3 of the said Declarations—

(1) in clause (e), the word "or" shall be omitted;

(2) after clause (f) the following clause shall be inserted, namely:—

(g) any British subject who—

(i) has acquired British nationality by marriage or has been granted a certificate of naturalisation as a British subject under any law for the time being in force in British India, and

(ii) has been a British subject for not less than fifteen years, and

(iii) save when he has been a British subject for not less than twenty-five years, has obtained from the Registration Officer a certificate to the effect that he has furnished a statement of all visits made by him since the year 1926 to any foreign territory.

Provided that the Central Government may, by an order in writing served on any person, direct that the exemption conferred by this clause shall cease to extend to that person.

No. 1/30/43-Political (E).

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Simla, the 7th July, 1943.

NOTIFICATION.

In exercise of the powers conferred by section 6 of the Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 (XVI of 1939), and in supersession of the Declarations of the Government of India in the Home Department, No. 1/3/42-Political (E), dated the 12th June 1942, and No. 1/9/43-Political (E), dated the 10th April 1943, the Central Government is pleased to direct that the following further amendment shall be made in the Declarations published with the notification of the Government of India in the Home Department No. 21/32/39-Political, dated the 21st June 1939, namely:—

After clause (g), the following clauses shall be inserted:

"(A) any member of the naval, military or air force of the United States of America, Chinese, Dutch, Free French or any other Allied nation arriving in India in the discharge of his official duties; and

(i) any technical representative or civil service employee of the United States of America, Chinese, Dutch, Free French or other Allied naval, military or air force in India who is subject to naval, military or air force discipline and is in possession of a certificate in the form prescribed in the schedule hereto annexed and issued by an officer of the appropriate force not below the rank of a Captain in the Navy, a Brigadier or an Air Commodore

B. R. PANDEY,

Joint Secretary to the Government of India.

SCHEDULE:

Certificate of eligibility for exemption from the provisions of the Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939.

This is to certify that Mr. is a Technical Representative/Civil Service Employee of the forces in India and is thereby entitled to the benefit of clause (i) of Declaration 3 of the Declarations contained in the Registration of Foreigners (Exemption) Order, 1939.

SUMMARY OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE THIRD MEETING OF THE STANDING LABOUR COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Labour Member): Sir, I lay on the table a copy* of the Summary of Proceedings of the third meeting of the Standing Labour Committee held on the 7th and 8th May, 1943.

*Not included in these Debates, but a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.—Ed. of D.

THE RECIPROCITY (AMENDMENT) BILL—contd.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): The House will now resume consideration of the Reciprocity (Amendment) Bill.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh (Nagpur Division: Non-Muhammadan): Sir, I move:

"That after clause 1 of the Bill the following clause be inserted and clauses 2 to 6 be re-numbered 3 to 7:

2. Amendment of section 1, Act IX of 1943.—For sub-section (3) of section 1 of the Reciprocity Act, 1943 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely:

"(3) It shall come into force on the 1st day of September, 1943."

Sir, as will be gathered from what has been discussed so far about the Reciprocity (Amendment) Bill, the House is very keen in giving effect to the Reciprocity Act which is on the anvil, and it is the desire of the House that the present Bill be given effect to as early as possible. As the Bill which was brought before this House did not contain any clause as to when it shall come into force, I have put that in this amendment. I hope it will be accepted.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): Amendment moved:

"That after clause 1 of the Bill the following clause be inserted and clauses 2 to 6 be re-numbered 3 to 7:

2. Amendment of section 1, Act IX of 1943.—For sub-section (3) of section 1 of the Reciprocity Act, 1943 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely:

"(3) It shall come into force on the 1st day of September, 1943."

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare (Member for Indians Overseas): Sir, as the Act stands, it can be brought into force at any time the Government wishes to do so, and I do not see any point in this amendment at all. Besides, it will be impossible to put it into force before the 1st of September, if the Government wishes to do so. Yet if it is the desire of the House, I accept the amendment.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): The question is:

"That after clause 1 of the Bill the following clause be inserted and clauses 2 to 6 be re-numbered 3 to 7:

2. Amendment of section 1, Act IX of 1943.—For sub-section (3) of section 1 of the Reciprocity Act, 1943 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely:

"(3) It shall come into force on the 1st day of September, 1943."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 2 (renumbered clause 3) of the Bill the brackets and words '(hereinafter referred to as the said Act)' be omitted."

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 2 (renumbered clause 3) of the Bill the brackets and words '(hereinafter referred to as the said Act)' be omitted."

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: As it is a consequential amendment to the first, I accept it.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): The question is:

"That in clause 2 (renumbered clause 3) of the Bill the brackets and words '(hereinafter referred to as the said Act)' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman (Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang): The question is:

"That clause 2, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Sir Syed Raza Ali (Cities of the United Provinces: Muhammadan Urban): Sir, I move:

"That in clause 4 of the Bill, in the proposed section 5 for the words 'one year' the words 'six months' be substituted."

Sir, this is not a very important point, still it has bearing on what is happening in South Africa. The original section, which is sought to be amended by the Amending Bill, refers to the armed forces of a possession against which India proposes to take action being allowed to remain in India for a year after the termination of the present hostilities, i.e., section 3 of the Bill

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: This amendment cuts down the period provided in the Bill from one year to six months. One year is the least which will be required to wind up affairs after the cessation of hostilities. It does not involve any principle at all. It only concerns entry, travel and residence, and so far as other things are concerned, they do not apply to this at all. I appeal to the Honourable Member to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): I rise to support the amendment that has been moved. I am surprised that my Honourable friend, Sir Frederick James, should have referred to the last Bill and the Select Committee. That Select Committee and all the work that we did on that Select Committee have been pronounced by the Government as unworkable, and I am very glad that at least as regards this period it has become unworkable. My Honourable friend, Sir Frederick James, feels that it will cause very great inconvenience to the South African people to pass through this country after the war with these handicaps. May I ask what is the condition of thousands of people every day suffering and undergoing those handicaps and humiliations in South Africa? Can you not think a little bit of the Indian people in that country? I am asking my Honourable friend, is that the logic that he wants to apply, is that the fairness that he wants to see? I am very sorry, that Sir Syed Raza Ali said, well, the armed forces of South Africans may be useful to us. Has it ever been? Are they ever going to do that? In fact, we have got a few officers forced upon us and they are ruling over us, and over our people who have been left to the tender care of these South African officers. Such considerations, after the experience we have had, are, to say the least, unfair. I do feel that we are entitled to ask the Government to move in this matter as fast as they can and as strictly as they can. Now, we have come to this position that in one part of the Empire in the midst of the great war, a great Field Marshal does not think that the sympathy of 40 crores of people is essential for the war. And still we are asked to show consideration and sympathy for a few of those South Africans out of 15 lakhs of people out to humiliate us. That is going too far. I have in my hand a speech delivered by Sir Shafaat Ahmad Khan, High Commissioner for South Africa, only on the 28th June last and it has been received by air mail. There he has practically said this:

"India has never been united on any other issue during the last 25 years and it has also attracted the attention of the Allies who are fighting a ruthless war for the sanctity of human rights and preservation of spiritual principle in man. It has also played into the hands of our enemies, and Germans and Tokyo utilise it in their propaganda against those democracies."

My demand is that let also Germans and Japanese feel that we will not tolerate humiliation of this sort and as a part of the Empire we will not tolerate inhuman action and help in the war effort of that other part of the Empire which ill-treats us.

Mr. Kallash Bihari Lall (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Sonthal Parganas: Non-Muhammadan): I was feeling indifferent to this Act itself, but as I heard the debate and listened to the arguments, I am tempted to support this amendment on two grounds. I realise the soft corner that Sir Frederick James has for those people who may pass through this country after their war service. There is no intention of any inhuman treatment to anybody so far as we are concerned in this country, but in order to make this very purpose of retaliation effective, I suggest that Sir Frederick James should consider that a retaliatory measure itself is of no value when it is a question of only a few persons, say, 100 persons in this country after the war is over, as against so many thousands in that country. This retaliatory measure is of no value except that we console ourselves that we do the same as they are doing to us. For that purpose, if we shorten the period according to this amendment, at least those persons who will pass through our country will carry the news to their country about the treatment to them, because that will be an additional opportunity to the people of this country to show their retaliation even by that means. This is an opportunity to show that if we have any intention of retaliation we can bring it into effect by this means; otherwise it will be ineffective.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division: Muhammadan Rural): May I remind the House that soon after the war broke out a Bill was brought in this House for the purpose of recruiting forcibly all the Europeans and non-Asiatic people who were His Majesty's subjects? When that Bill came here I raised an objection that the subjects of those Dominions who do not give equal treatment to Indians should not be allowed to hold any rank of officer in any Indian regiment and if they want, they should join as soldiers and not as officers. To that the reply was given by Mr. Williams, who was the Secretary of the Defence Department at the time, that it was inopportune. He asked, was it right when the war had just started, when feelings could easily be made friendly, that we should start with this unfriendly gesture from this House, and he asked, was it not right that we should postpone these things till after the war, and let us wait and see that these things were removed during the war. He also said, when our soldiers will come in contact with each other, all these things will disappear. This view was at that time supported by the Group to which Sir Frederick James has the honour to belong. But I was apprehensive that this will never happen and I felt that was the best opportune moment to show that we wanted to treat them in the same manner as they wanted to treat us. Now, after three years of war, when Indians have shed their blood side by side with South Africans, when we showed all generosity to them in every manner possible, even to the extent of allowing the South Africans to become officers in the Indian regiments, we are given this treatment, we are given this kick. I think the South Africans have made themselves a disgraceful partner in the British Empire. I whole-heartedly endorse the words of my Deputy Leader that those people who do not give equal treatment to each other in the Dominions do not deserve to remain in the Dominions. I think that we should show as much resentment as we can and we should not postpone the date. We are still very gentlemanly with those people who do not know what gentlemanliness is. Therefore, Sir, I support this amendment.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Sir, I rise to support the amendment which has been moved by Sir Syed Raza Ali. My Honourable friend, Sir Frederick James said that the Select Committee reported that the period should be one year but it has to be remembered that the Select Committee reported in the month of January. Since then a new situation has arisen and it is in order to meet the new situation that this amendment has been brought forward. The Select Committee report has been completely washed out now. Time is an essential factor in the present situation, and I strongly urge that the amendment of Sir Raza Ali should be adopted by the House.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan (East Central Punjab: Muhammadan): I lend my strong support to the amendment moved by my friend Sir Syed Raza Ali. This question of the treatment of Indians in South Africa has been exercising the minds of people in this country for a long long time. Throughout this period, the European element in this country has shown more sympathy with their compatriots in South Africa than with those with whom they live in this country. I remember during the course of the discussion on this Bill my friend Sir F. E. James said that retaliation in any form or shape against the South Africans will not do. We must have recourse to methods of persuasion and reconciliation. It is all very well to say so. Everybody knows that two millions of Indian soldiers are fighting the battles of the British Empire. Empire—that is a strange word. We must use the word Commonwealth or use both Empire and Commonwealth at the same time. We are shedding every drop of our blood to maintain the supremacy of Britain throughout the world. We are fighting in North Africa, in the Middle East and we have done everything to show that we are for maintaining this system of rule in the world which is known as the British Empire or the British Commonwealth. What do we get for that. We get the Pegging Act. Our people, nearly two lakhs, went there, spent their money, raised it socially to the status of a well governed country but for all that they get this Pegging Act. They cannot buy property in the quarters where the Europeans reside and racial discrimination of the worst form has shown itself there. I thought Field Marshal Smuts was a gentleman. I thought he had some sympathy.

[Maulana Zafar Ali Khan.]

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: How is all this relevant to the amendment?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member is going into matters which do not arise out of this amendment. He must confine himself to the amendment.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: All I have to say is that the least we can expect from this Government is to reduce the number of months.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): We have had all this before.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: The amendment says that the period of one year should be reduced to six months. This is only small mercy. If we cannot get even this, what more can we expect. With these few words, I support the amendment.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: My friend the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill had the chance of stating why one year was necessary and why in six months the forces coming from the several British possessions could not be cleared out of India. He did not give any reasons. A reference was made to what happened in the Select Committee on the last Bill. In those days times were different. The tide of war has now changed in favour of the Allies. It will be apparent therefore that in those days we could not think of transports being so very easily available for clearing out the forces from India. (An Honourable Member: "Not all the forces.") All the forces that came from the possessions of Great Britain. This time is more than sufficient. I was saying that the means of transport could be collected by their respective Governments to call their forces back. It seems to me that the Government of India thinks that every Government is as slow as this Government is. That is not so. If those Governments were to know that the forces from their countries would be prosecuted in this country and serious sentences would be given to them, they would be very prompt to remove their own men. They would not be callous or indifferent to their own men. I should, therefore, say that as soon as the war is over all these forces that come from the different colonies should be made to clear at once; but my friend has taken a lenient view. He is hospitable to them. Although they do not deserve any hospitality from us, we say that we exempt you from the operation of this Act for a period of six months. How on earth can you refuse to accept this amendment. I cannot understand the attitude of the Government. Other Governments are not like the Government here. They will look to the interest of their own people here better than this Government. This Government does not deserve any congratulations from us if they are going to behave in such a slow fashion. They had better be prompt to see that India is free from these forces who remind us of the loss of self-respect, who remind us of the ill-treatment that is given to our people in South Africa. Sir, I support the amendment.

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon (Defence Member): Sir, I only wish to say a few words being in charge of demobilization and for that reason I am interested in this amendment. Let me say at the very beginning that so far as the principles of this Bill are concerned and so far as the wishes of the non-official Members of this House are concerned, I as an Indian am with them whole-heartedly. The only question is with regard to this amendment whether after the war you allow these gentlemen from all the dominions a period of one year for clearing out or six months.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Not from these other Colonies but from the offending Dominion only, namely, South Africa.

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: This Bill does not apply only to South Africa. It will apply to other British Dominions or Colonies also, Colonies in which we suffer disabilities as we suffer in South Africa. What I am suggesting is that so far as this Bill is concerned, it is not enacted only for South Africa. It applies to all the Dominions and you cannot say that we suffer disabilities only in South Africa. We suffer disabilities in other Dominions and Colonies also. Therefore, when we are in a very unhappy mood with regard to South Africa, do not let us forget that this Bill is not meant only for South Africa.

The second point that I should like the House to remember is this that we are fighting a war and when this war is over—and we do not know when it will be over—the taking away of troops cannot be done overnight. It may take two years or three years to disperse the troops from war areas back into their countries. In the last war there were several people who were stranded away from their countries for some years before they could get back. It is all a question of transport and I fear after the war it will be quite a long time before these troops can go back to their home countries. One thing is quite clear. As soon as the war is over, there will not be a single soldier who will not want to rush home as quickly as possible. Therefore, there is no justification for us to be afraid that these men who have been fighting in the war for a good few years away from their home will be anxious to stay here in order to enjoy the privileges of a country which does not need them. We must not forget that this Bill does not say that all these men are going to be kept here for a whole year. It may be that the Government may be able to clear them away within three months, leave alone six months. Nobody will be more happy than we to do it as expeditiously as possible. We as a Government only want time up to one year to be able to clear these people away in a reasonable manner. What is the use of enacting a law which we know may have to be breached in a large number of cases simply because of lack of transport. Therefore, I wish that the House should not press this point of one year and six months. So far as the Government are concerned, they are with you, namely, that these gentlemen should go from this country as soon as possible, but it is a question of transport. With this assurance from the Government that no time will be lost in getting them out of this country, I hope the House will not force this amendment because there is no difference in principle between your views and those of the Government.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I ask, Sir, one question?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member has already made his speech.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani (Tirhut Division: Muhammadan): Sir, I had thought that the period referred to was the time after the passing of this Act, but it appears that it will come into operation only after the war. However, we all agree that the feeling in this country is very high against the South African Government and its people who are treating the Indians very badly. It is in the interests of the Government of India itself that instead of waiting till the end of the war, they should transfer all these soldiers and officers to the other fronts of war. There should be no delay because sometimes there may be occasions where the Indian and South African soldiers may come to blows. So, I think it is in the interests of the Government of India to transfer such persons from Indian fronts to other fronts. They may be sent to the other theatres of the war, say, England or elsewhere. The Honourable the Mover of the amendment has a very soft corner in his heart for these people and has moved a very modest amendment and I hope the House will accept it. The Government is not going to lose anything by its acceptance.

Sir Vithal N. Chandavarkar (Bombay Millowners' Association: Indian Commerce): Sir, those who value the most precious treasure of any human being, self-respect, ought to support this amendment. If I had any doubt as to what attitude I should take, it has been dispelled by the speech made by the Honourable Member in charge of Defence. He was thinking of the inconvenience arising out of the difficulties of transport. Did General Smuts think of the difficulties of the Government of India in regard to this matter? God alone knows the difficulties the Government of India has to face in India as a result of the war situation. Did General Smuts think of the difficulties which will be added to the difficulties that already exist and which have been created by the political situation in India as a result of the Act that has been passed there? I do not know why my European friends who are with us should speak in an apologetic tone on this subject. If anybody ought to be indignant about this matter, I say it ought to be the non-official Europeans in this country. The whole future of British connection with India depends upon the attitude which the Europeans in this country adopt in regard to all matters of Indians overseas, especially in the Dominions. If they want us to feel that they are with us, that there is a future for us in the British Commonwealth, as I said once before when speaking on the Burma question, whenever a question like this arises they ought to say without any mental reservation and without any qualification, and whatever the consequences may be, that they are with us. That is the only way in which they can ensure our connection with Great Britain. From all these points of view, I support this amendment and I do hope Government will reconsider their attitude and accept the amendment without any hesitation.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Mr. President, while speaking on this Bill, I said that it was merely a gesture of resentment. What I meant by saying that was that whatever this Bill may be and however stringent the rules may be, the South Africans can afford to laugh at it because the number of South Africans in this country is so small compared to the number of Indians in South Africa. What I meant to convey was that this Bill could never be strong enough. This Bill could never be effective enough to make the South Africans feel the enormity of their actions during the war.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: On a point of order, Sir. How does this arise on this amendment?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member ought to confine himself to the amendment.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Any amendment moved that would make South Africa feel that India is hitting her back will have my support. If the South Africans feel that they have got to leave this country immediately the war is over and if it causes them any inconvenience to do so, the more pleased I will be. It will make them feel that there is legislation in India which puts them to some inconvenience. That exactly the point that ought to be stressed. The effect of this Bill ought to be that it should make the shoe pinch at least in some direction. I am quite sure that no Honourable Member wants to cause any inconvenience to any other Dominion which has not insulted India during the war, such as South Africa. That not being the intention, I would suggest an amendment to this amendment moved by my Honourable friend.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): It is too late now.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: As a compromise I suggest something.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): You cannot do so now.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: I am only suggesting that six months should be made to apply to South Africa alone.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: That would be done under the rules made by the Government of India. That is quite clear.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: If that can be done by the rules, my point has been gained. My point is only to cause some inconvenience to South Africa. If you can cause more inconvenience by reducing the period to three months, so much the better, by all means do it. But I do not desire, nor does any Honourable Member desire that troops from any other part of the world should be inconvenienced who have fought on the side of the Allies. Therefore I suggest that some sort of amendment is necessary which should make it apply only to South Africa and the period should be six months or less. In these circumstances, I would like the advice of the Government of India as to how this can be done. If an amendment to this clause can be moved somewhat to this effect, it would be a compromise.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Has the Honourable Member given notice of any amendment?

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: I am only suggesting it as a compromise. Otherwise, I would vote for this amendment.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I feel that the Government of India have made out no case at all for not accepting this amendment. After all they have not told us how many South African troops there are in India. The Honourable the Defence Member said that this Bill may apply or will apply to all Colonies. That may be true, but the application of the Bill depends upon the Government of India. They have to issue directions. If the Government of India find that the directions relating to all the Colonies cannot be issued, they can issue directions as regards South Africa within six months. No amendment is necessary as was suggested by my Honourable friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangir. So long as the Government of India do not issue any directions as regards other Colonies, there is nothing to be done. As far as South Africa is concerned, the number of troops affected are perhaps nil, and the number of officers affected may be 100 or less. I therefore feel that the Government of India should accept the amendment.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman (Patna and Chota Nagpur cum Orissa: Muhammadan): Sir, I do not want to take up much of the time of the House on an amendment which is rather so innocent from our point of view. The Honourable the Defence Member also agreed that his feelings are quite the same as ours, except that the position which he is making out is a little different from ours. But in the end we may come to the same decision. What we want is this. As Sir Cowasjee Jehangir pointed out to the House, that it should be specifically pointed out to the South African Government that they will be treated in a stricter manner in comparison to other Dominions, and at the moment the question is not of gesture only. That is why, I think, the present amendment which is specifically proposed in connection with South Africans should be accepted by the Government. I hope the Government would take into consideration not only the general feeling, more or less the unanimous feeling of the elected section of this House, but also that section of Indians who form the Treasury Benches today. Government should appreciate the fact that what we are trying to point out is just to make South Africans feel that we want to give them less time than others to quit India. With these few remarks, I support the amendment.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Sir, if my Honourable friend Sir Cowasjee Jehangir fell into an error on this particular point, I am afraid the responsibility lies on an Honourable Member of the Government. Because, while the Honourable the Defence Member was speaking, he tried to create the impression that the measure applied to all the Colonies wherever Indians may suffer from any disabilities. But we are considering an amending measure at the present moment. Let us not forget the original Act to which this Bill seeks to provide certain amendments. The original Act, I am afraid, has been forgotten by my Honourable friend the Defence Member. The original Act provides that retaliatory action, or action by way of reciprocity, could be taken with reference to a specific British possession, only when a specific notification extending the operation of this particular measure to that possession were issued by the Government of India. We are merely arming the executive Government of India with certain powers to be put into operation against the offending Colony as and when the necessity arises. Therefore, let us not confuse the issues by trying to bring in elements of difficulty which do not exist. We are not considering South Africa; we are not considering any particular British possession at the present moment. We are concerned with an enabling measure. The whole question is, if and when a notification of such a character is issued by the Government of India enforcing the provisions of this Act as well as the rules to be framed thereunder, what will be the time limit that will be allowed for any troops belonging to that particular colony to remain in India without having to suffer from the operation of this particular enactment. Of course by way of illustration, we have taken up the case of South Africa because that is a recent case which we very much have in mind at the moment. I think the issues are definitely plain, and six months should in all conscience be considered to be a very reasonable period in which the troops of the offending colony should be expected to clear out bag and baggage from this country. I should think that even six months is too long a period for the purpose of dealing with a colony of this type. I do hope that Government will reconsider their attitude. I am very much hopeful that Government will in the end support this amendment, particularly in view of what fell from the Honourable the Defence Member.

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, I want to end this agony. In view of the strong feelings expressed in this House, I will be prepared to accept the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 4 of the Bill, in the proposed section 5 for the words 'one year' the words 'six months' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 4, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 4, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Clause 5.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 6, for the word 'may' the word 'shall' be substituted, and after the word 'notification' the words 'before the end of August, 1943' be inserted."

Sir, the object of this amendment is to make the Government of India move in the matter as quickly as we possibly can make them do so. Sir, there is a history behind this amendment. In 1924, an Act was passed called the Immigration into India Act. At that time the discontent among Indians was very great over what South Africa and Kenya were doing and so this Act called the Immigration into India Act was passed which provided for the making of rules to carry out the objects of the Act. In 1938 I put a question to the then Secretary in charge, Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, as to whether rules had been framed under that Act to prohibit immigration from other colonies into this country and the answer was in the negative. When we find that no period is fixed for the making of rules the Government of India sleep over the matter. We want to awaken them and pinch them so that they may see the need for putting this Act into force as soon as possible. (An Honourable Member: "Lash them.") We may lash them into action provided no bodily injury is caused but unfortunately they have neither a body to lash or kick nor a soul to be damned. The purpose of my amendment is to quicken the procedure and put this Act into force and I hope due notice of the past will be taken by this House as to how Government sleep when no period is fixed for making rules and the whole thing is forgotten. I hope in this particular case the Government of India will not forget their duty but will move in the matter as early as possible.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 6, for the word 'may' the word 'shall' be substituted, and after the word 'notification' the words 'before the end of August, 1943' be inserted."

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, it is a good augury that the Honourable Member in charge has accepted two amendments and I hope he will realise that this amendment also is moved in order to strengthen his hands and with no other object. The Honourable Member says "Wait and see", by which he probably means that he is going to manage the business himself without being asked or forced by us to do it. What is asked now is justified on account of what has happened before, because the framing of rules and bringing them into force has been ignored in the past; and this amendment would not have been necessary if the rules were so framed under the earlier Act. But they made no rules whatever and that is why the Mover of this amendment is so sceptical about the intentions of Government about the framing of these rules. We have got bitter experience and therefore he asks for the making of these rules to be provided by statute. I think Government should accept this amendment.

Secondly, time is given within which this should be done. That is also because the previous Government did not do anything within a particular time. The rules may be held up indefinitely and then we may be told that there were imperfections in the Act. We therefore want to see that there are no imperfections. It is to bring this Act early into force that this amendment is proposed and I think the Honourable Member who has accepted two other amendments will accept this one also.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, I should have been very glad to accept this amendment as I have accepted two others but I regret I cannot do so. This amendment is very unreasonable; it compels Government to make rules before the end of August, 1943, which is utterly impossible. The rules will have to go into great details; all kinds of inquiries will have to be made and we have to provide against all possible things which may happen. It is impossible to give any assurance that Government shall make rules before August and if the amendment is passed it will take away the power of Government to make rules after the end of August. I shall of course proceed as soon as I can but it is quite impossible to accept the amendment.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Sir, I wish to say a few words on this amendment. So far as the word "may" is concerned, I am surprised that the Overseas Member is not prepared to accept the amendment that the word "shall" be substituted for "may". I believe the Honourable Member is sufficiently interested in law to know that at times "may" and "shall", on a correct interpretation, mean the same thing. And there can be no harm in accepting the amendment. But the more substantial point is this. The Government will have to make inquiries and this question may take more time than is stipulated in the amendment. But there are two things which should be carefully borne in mind. I would ask my Honourable friend to remember that the first Bill on the subject was passed by the Legislative Assembly in 1924 but no rules were ever made under that Act. Government went to sleep for 19 years and did nothing. That shows that if there is any suspicion on this side of the House about the conduct of Government it is wholly justified. My Honourable friend took shelter behind the plea that they have to make inquiries into the laws of so many possessions and colonies and dominions, etc. If he proposes to do that let me tell him that he would be doing a very wrong thing because he is not required to embark on such a laborious and elaborate inquiry at this stage. His business is to inquire about the laws of South Africa against Indians. And he can find out 90 per cent. of our disabilities without going to South Africa. If he had consultations with some people who are interested in South Africa they would tell him everything. Then he has a High Commissioner there,—a very grandiloquent name,—and if he sends him a cable today he will receive a reply in three or four days. Therefore I think the suspicion of my Honourable friend Mr. Deshmukh is well founded if the speech of the Honourable Dr. Khare is a sufficient index of what the Government of India propose to do. It would be very wrong for Government to inquire into the laws of Fiji and Kenya and British Guiana and other British possessions. If Government want to kill the Bill they can of course defer action by not making any rules at all. But if he wants to take action, I would give him this humble advice: Let him proceed in the first instance against South Africa alone. With reference to all other colonies, possessions and dominions, he can make rules afterwards when he has gathered the necessary information. But it would be a very wrong thing to wait indefinitely and allow this Bill to be killed in order to gather information with reference to all the areas and territories of His Majesty's Government which covers about 1/4th of this planet of ours, namely the Earth.

I think the Government position has not been sufficiently elucidated. We, on this side of the House, do not want this matter to be pressed to a division, because, after all, there is no serious difference between the Government of India and ourselves, but surely we must know what is passing in the mind of the Government. If I could know that the Government propose to take action with reference to South Africa and to make general rules applicable to South Africa only within the next two months instead of one month, I do not think we on this side would be inclined to press this amendment to a division. But if my Honourable friend is going to embark on an ambitious and elaborate scheme which will cover all the colonies, possessions and dominions, which are part of the British Commonwealth of Nations, that would take five years and in that case it would be the solemn duty of Members on this side of the House to press this amendment to a division. Therefore, all depends on the attitude of the Government, which I must say, if my Honourable friend, Dr. Khare, will excuse me, has not been sufficiently elucidated by him. Let him say clearly whether he is prepared to make rules with reference to South Africa alone and publish those rules within the next two months.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, I am prepared to assure the House that we shall make rules as quickly as possible without losing any time whatever, but do so within one month is physically impossible.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Do it in two months or three months, but say so.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: So far as South Africa is concerned, two months will be enough.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Sir, I can only say that we shall make rules as quickly as possible.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill in sub-section (2) of the proposed section 6, for the word 'may' the word 'shall' be substituted, and after the word 'notification' the words 'before the end of August, 1943' be inserted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Sir Raza Ali.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: With your permission I propose to take up the item which is mentioned at No. 6 of the Agenda Paper.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Are you going to move the next amendment?

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Not yet. I propose first to take up No. 6.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): But are you going to move the other amendment?

Sir Syed Raza Ali: It is not necessary to move that until we know the result of No. 6. Clause 5 raises a consequential point, the fate of which depends on No. 6.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): All right.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Sir, I move:

"That after clause 5 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted and the subsequent clause be re-numbered accordingly:

"6. After section 6 of the said Act, as substituted by the foregoing section, the following section shall be added namely:

7. Any person guilty of disobeying a rule made by the Central Government under section 6, sub-section (2) part (c), shall, on the complaint of an officer appointed or designated by the Central Government in this behalf, be punished, on conviction by a Magistrate of the First Class, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both."

The point is this. I must say at once that I do not think there is any point of substantial difference arising between me and the Government of India. The Government of India want under the Bill to take powers to themselves to make rules on a number of points, one of which is mentioned in part (d) and reads thus:

"For the enforcement by the prescription of a penalty by way of imprisonment or fine or both of any rule made under clause (e)."

The point narrows down to this: that whereas after the rules are made the Government want to provide a penalty for the breach of the rules in the rules themselves, I say that this point being a very important one, it is much better to prescribe the punishment in the Act itself instead of giving power to the Central Government to prescribe that punishment by rule.

I have gone as far as I could to make this provision acceptable to the Central Government. First of all, it will not be possible for an accused person to be prosecuted till a complaint is filed by an officer appointed by the Central

[Sir Syed Raza Ali.]

Government or designated by the Central Government. In all likelihood those officers will be appointed or designated, as the case may be, by the Department of Indians Overseas. I do not want to deprive them of their power. Secondly, in order to secure that the accused persons have a fair trial, I have provided in this amendment that the case should not be tried by any but a Magistrate of the First Class. That safeguards the interests of the accused person or persons.

Lastly comes the question of punishment. The punishment here is imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or both. At this late hour I do not want to go into the merits of prescribing maximum punishment. That is what Lord Maucalay did in his original draft of the Indian Penal Code and that is what has been followed ever since in India. But my amendment prescribes the maximum punishment and leaves out the minimum punishment. No one would think that a Magistrate would impose a fine of Rs. 1,000 or a rigorous imprisonment for one year or both straight away. Of course, the Magistrate will deal with the case according to the circumstances.

But there is a little plea open to the Government of India. Unfortunately pleas are always open to the Government of India. They may be good, bad or indifferent, but those pleas are available. In this case, perhaps what is passing in the minds of the Government of India is this: How can you call it a Reciprocity Bill unless we know by facts and figures what are the punishments prescribed by the laws of the offending Dominion, Possession or Colony? We must know the punishment prescribed by every Dominion, Colony and Possession before we can prescribe the punishment here. But that is a very lame excuse. It is the same story of delay, procrastination and a discrimination to come to grips with the question. Let the question be delayed as long as possible. I believe my Honourable friend will say that he proposes to make enquiries into the punishments that are inflicted on Indians in Fiji, or in Mauritius, and so on. All that is not at all necessary. This is the proper place for it. As a matter of fact, I can say as one belonging to the legal profession that there is nothing against giving power to Government to make rules prescribing punishments. But on juristic principles it is always better for the Legislature to provide such punishment instead of giving that power to the executive Government. That is the principle of jurisprudence. It is not solely because that principle is sanctioned by jurisprudence that I want to emphasise that. What I want the House and the people outside to know is that we are in right earnest.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: We must pass the Bill today to show it to them.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Quite right. My Honourable friend seems to be in a light hearted mood. But I take him at his word, I entirely agree with him. In fact, we must make it clear to them that we are quite serious about the matter. It may be that we are a powerless people, that we are a helpless people. We are living under a subordinate Government which cannot do anything. The position of Government is this. A long list of protests was read out by the Honourable Dr. Khare the other day, but he did not say that even acknowledgment was given to those representations made by the Government of India to the Union Government. (Interruption.) I am referring to the list of representations made by the Government of India.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: May I ask how it is in order on this question—the list?

Sir Syed Raza Ali: It is the most material thing. I say, in these circumstances if you give the power to this subordinate Government, this subordinate Government will not do anything at all. Therefore, pass this punishment clause yourself. They are so terribly afraid of any country; even they are afraid of the country of Ravans, of Burma. Of all these countries South Africa is the most powerful. Therefore, I say we are living under a subordinate Government which, at times, does not know its own mind. If it does, it does not know how to put it into practice, and if it decides to put it into practice, then it alleges that even if the thing is done, it will have no effect and therefore it serves as an excuse for not taking any action at all. Therefore, for all these reasons it is best for this House that we should put this clause prescribing punishment, in the Act itself, instead of giving power to the Central Government, which power may not be exercised by the Central Government for another 19 years. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That after clause 5 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted and the subsequent clause be re-numbered accordingly:

'6. After section 6 of the said Act, as substituted by the foregoing section, the following section shall be added, namely:

7. Any person guilty of disobeying a rule made by the Central Government under section 6, sub-section (2) part (c) shall, on the complaint of an officer appointed or designated by the Central Government in this behalf, be punished, on conviction by a Magistrate of the First Class, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both."

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: This amendment takes away from the Government the power of prescribing the punishment under the rule-making powers and also of varying the actual punishment itself if necessary. A perusal of the Bill will show, and it is evident to everybody, that the Bill is enacted on the basis of reciprocity, and this amendment, if passed, would strike at the very root of that reciprocity.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Why?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: It is not a plea, it is a substantive argument. It will tie down the hands of Government, because, supposing this amendment is passed, it will limit the punishment only to one year and a fine of Rs. 1,000. (Interruption.) Supposing there is a colony or territory which punishes such delinquents with a punishment of five years or 10 years, we cannot be reciprocal to them; we shall have to stick to this punishment of one year and Rs. 1,000 fine.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Come to us then and we shall raise the punishment to five years.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Supposing some Dominion takes it into its head to deport our nationals, then we cannot deport their nationals, we shall be tied down by this punishment. This amendment is very vicious. It takes off the effect of the Bill. Although it is brought with a very good motive, the result would be contrary to what the Honourable Member expects. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: The object is that it should be sufficiently retaliatory. If we are not going to provide any punishment in this Act and leave it to the rules to be made hereafter, the Honourable Member says that he may propose 10 years or five years. Or he might propose till the rising of the Court and fine. In the Indian Penal Code we find that punishment has been provided for every offence, and neither under that Code nor in any other Act is punishment left to be provided for by rules to be made. It is very rarely that it happens. No doubt there are the Defence of India rules. But they are very exceptional. We know now how these rules are worked, and how we think that we have made a mistake in giving the power to the Government to make rules prescribing punishments. We should have provided punishments in the Act itself, but now we are not going to follow the example of the Defence of India Act. The Honourable Member in charge should tell us whether the punishment should be one year or less or more, and it should be incorporated in the Act itself accordingly, and he should not ask that all this should be left to the rules to be made and that he will provide the punishment there. We may take it that his inclinations are that he will not make this Bill null and void or make it so ineffective that it will not retaliate at all. But we should not

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

DETENUS AND PRISONERS CONVICTED UNDER DEFENCE OF INDIA RULES.

152. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state the number of detenus and prisoners convicted under the Defence of India Rules?

(b) Is there any arrangement to revise each case individually after some time? If not, do Government propose to do so now?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) The number of persons detained under Defence of India Rule 26 from the beginning of the war up to 1st June, 1943, was 17,766, of whom 11,717 were still under detention on that date. The number of persons convicted during the same period under the Defence of India Rules was 75,941, while the number actually in jail on June 1st was 15,099. The above totals do not, however, include the North West Frontier Province for which Province figures are not available.

(b) There is no automatic arrangement for the review of each case of detention after a particular period. The principle which both the Government of India and Provincial Governments have constantly in mind, however is that no security prisoner shall remain in Jail whose detention is not essential in the interests of security and the efficient prosecution of the war.

Sardar Sant Singh: Has the attention of the Honourable Member been drawn to the recent report coming from the House of Commons wherein it was said that the House of Commons have constituted themselves into a body to examine the Defence of India Rules there in England and to see that no injustice is done by the application of such rules?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The House of Commons was talking about England and not about India. In any case, I have no official report about this.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if the Honourable Member will please make enquiries and if he proposes to constitute a similar Committee of this House to look into those rules?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The question does not relate to the Defence of India rules.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is not the answer this that India is not England?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know whether these detenus have been detained under the orders of the Central Government or of the Provincial Governments?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Nearly all of them under the orders of the Provincial Governments.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: What is the system of examining or re-examining those cases? If not individually, how are they done?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I have dealt with that question in reply to the debate on the subject the other day and I have also replied to it under clause (b).

Mr. N. M. Joshi: In view of the fact that the number of Ordinances issued in India and also the number of rules issued under these Ordinances have become enormous and it is difficult for Honourable Members to find out what the exact Ordinances are and what the exact rules are, will the Government of India consider the advisability of printing and publishing all these Ordinances and rules in one volume?

allow the punishment to be left to the rule-making power, unless the Honourable Member agrees to placing the rules before the House. If he places the rules before this House, then in that case we shall have no objection, but otherwise we will not leave it to the Government to make rules for providing punishments. I therefore support this amendment.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: I am not at all surprised at the reply we have had from the Honourable Member in charge. You know very well, Sir, how we feel with regard to the treatment of India and we know very well also that he is more anxious than some of ourselves to move in the matter as soon as possible and to inflict as hard a punishment as anybody else could do, but, Sir, we have invariably seen the effect of the company. We have invariably seen that something more than a personal desire always plays an important part and who can deny that when we passed the Act in 1924 the Member in charge was not as serious as our friend Dr. Khare but still we find that 19 years have passed. Who can believe that the Honourable Mr. Aney was not serious the other day when he got this Reciprocity Bill passed. My friend the Leader of the House agreed that the Bill that was passed was an unworkable Bill. There are therefore other elements besides the Honourable Member himself which he has to take into consideration. He was once on this side. He knows that this side is not always wrong and if he is going to rely upon the new company that he has got in his new office, then I tell him with all due deference that he will be only able to do precious little. I tell him: Please take our help and our advice. I support the amendment.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: A good deal can be said against the extension of the practice of entrusting the formulation of important rules to the executive Government, because it is in a sense legislation by the executive and a lot has been said on this subject in other countries, but I should not, on the present occasion, like to dwell on that broad aspect of the matter. When the executive Government wants power to implement a legislative measure passed by the Legislature, we must be very careful not to give too much of power to the executive Government in this matter. Normally speaking, the provision of penalties is considered to be of a sufficiently serious character to merit specific provision by the Legislature itself. It is on exceptional occasions only, like the Defence of India Rules, that we find that penalties also have been prescribed by the executive Government. That should definitely be treated as an exception, not the rule.

I should in this connection like to correct a misapprehension which seems to be lurking in the mind of the Honourable Member in charge. The Honourable Member said that prescribing a specific penalty in the Act itself would militate against the reciprocal character of the measure that we are passing. Now, Sir, what is the reciprocity that is emphasized in this measure? If disabilities of a particular kind are imposed on Indian nationals in any particular colony, the Government in India would be entitled to impose similar disabilities on the nationals of that particular colony. That is the gist of the main provision of this enactment. Then the rule-making power is to be exercised for the purpose of laying down detailed provisions for setting up a machinery to ascertain the disabilities, for the establishment of a suitable agency to administer the rules and so on and so forth. Now, when we come to sub-clause (d) of the rule-making clause, as proposed in the amending Bill, we find that the Government want to have the power to prescribe penalties by way of imprisonment or fine or both. The imposition of a disability is one factor. The imposition of a penalty for having disobeyed any rule is a matter of quite a different character. I submit there is no element of reciprocity in the fixation of a penalty which may be imposed on the infringement of any rules which may be prescribed as a measure of reciprocity by way of retaliation. Then again I could not really understand the Honourable Member when he said that "you are not giving us sufficient powers: we may prescribe deportation". But where is that power asked for in the amendment which he himself is proposing? The penalty that he contemplates is imprisonment or fine or both. Deportation would come in as a measure to be justified on grounds of reciprocity, that is to say, if a disability is attached to the residence of an Indian national in a particular colony by way of liability to be deported from that country,—if such a disability were to be found with reference to any particular colony, a similar disability could be imposed by us under this Act. If a person defies an order of deportation, what is the Honourable Member going to do? He must provide for the imposition of a specific penalty, and that penalty he seeks to prescribe by way of rules under clause (d); and deportation is not one of the penalties prescribed there. Therefore, I say that there is absolutely no substance in the objection that has been urged by the Honourable Member on this particular point. The amendment that has been proposed by Sir Raza Ali is merely for the purpose of virtually taking away the power to frame rules under clause (d) of the amending Bill. Let there be no misapprehension about it. We say 'we should prescribe the penalty'. Government say 'leave the power to us'. That is the only point of difference. I suggest that the House would be well advised in passing Sir Raza Ali's amendment.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: I support the amendment moved by Sir Syed Raza Ali. The difference between us on this side and my Honourable friend Dr. Khare and his friends on the other is on this point, namely, whether the penalty should be prescribed by the legislature or by the executive. My Honourable friend Mr. Neogy has pointed out the disadvantage of entrusting the executive with legislative powers and he perhaps intended to quote the dictum of Chief Justice Hewart who wrote a book known as 'The New Despotism'. In that book, he pointed out the various difficulties which had arisen in regard to the investing of the executive with legislative powers. That is an important point. On fundamental principle, we should not entrust the executive with legislative powers and, as has been pointed out, the Defence of India Rules made by the executive under the power given by the Legislature have not been properly made. We regret now that the Legislature did not prescribe the rules.

Then, Sir, there is another advantage in having the penalty provided in the Act itself. That would make the Act self-contained. A further advantage will be this, that when this Act is published, everybody will know that this is the view of the Legislature. We do not know when the rules will be made. The rules will not be read by anybody. They may not be read in South Africa. They won't perhaps be read in any other Colonies. But if we make the rules here, that would emphasise our determination.

Lastly, I should like to say that there is no suspicion on our part with regard to the intentions of the Honourable Dr. Khare. But we do not know how long he will grace those benches by his presence. He may not be here after a few months (An Honourable Member: "Not even after a few days".) or even after a few days; after his departure the rules will be made. They may not be made at all; and if they are made, they may be made by the Secretary of the Department or other administrative officers. That would be a great disadvantage. I, therefore, hope that the Honourable Dr. Khare will accept this amendment which has been moved by Sir Syed Raza Ali.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 3rd August, 1943.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That is a question that hardly concerns me, but I may point out the great difficulty of paper.

PAPER CONSUMPTION IN INFORMATION AND BROADCASTING DEPARTMENT.

153. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state the actual consumption of paper in his department in 1941 and 1942 and the estimated consumption in 1943?

(b) Is it a fact that his department is not economising in the use of paper?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) 1941—389 Tons, 1942—622 Tons, 1943—650 Tons.

(b) No. Every effort is being made, with considerable success.

DIFFERENTIAL PAYMENTS TO EUROPEAN AND INDIAN ARTISTS.

154. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state the maximum payment made to a European artist and an Indian artist for a single performance?

(b) What is the maximum sum paid to an artist for a single day?

(c) Is it a fact that the European artists are paid on a higher scale than the Indian artist? If so, why?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) and (b). Information about the fees paid to artists is confidential and cannot be disclosed.

(c) No. The second part of the question does not arise.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know who is the individual who decides these? Is it any particular individual who decides what payment is to be made?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I have no definite information ready, but I am inclined to think that it is done by the Station Directors of the different stations.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if there is really difference in the payments to Europeans and Indians?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: No, Sir.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: We want information, not what the Honourable Member is inclined to think?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I have given the information.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: As there have been constant complaints that the payments have not been made with equity, but rather on personal whims, will the Honourable Member please make enquiries?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: That is not correct, because I have made enquiries so far as that is concerned.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: Will the Honourable Member please place the change in the rates of payments before the Standing Committee?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: That can be done; that is possible.

CENSORSHIP ON MR. LOUIS FISCHER'S WRITINGS AND SPEECHES.

155. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state the reasons for imposing censorship on Mr. Louis Fischer's writings and speeches?

(b) Has it been brought to the notice of the Honourable Member that this order has created a very bad impression on American public opinion?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) The reason was the prejudicial and inaccurate nature of his writings and speeches about India, which have contained matter calculated to cause disaffection against Government and to prejudice relations between the United Nations.

(b) No.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: In so far as Mr. Louis Fischer's articles contained inaccurate statements, will the Honourable Member be pleased to indicate in what respects and on what points they are inaccurate?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That cannot be done in answer to a question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Has any attempt been made so far to give a reply to Mr. Louis Fischer's articles in so far as they may contain inaccurate statements of facts?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That again does not seem to arise out of this question. I have stated the reasons for imposing the ban.

Sardar Sant Singh: Is this the reason for imposing the ban, that the articles contained such facts that the inferences drawn from them are not very palatable to the Government of India?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That is a matter of opinion.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Has not the Government considered it necessary to issue some sort of communique from the Home Department saying that those facts were inaccurate and they have been prejudicing the minds of Indians?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The Home Department have to judge from time to time what kind of contradictions are necessary. There is a great deal of undesirable propaganda published from time to time, but we cannot reply to all of it, the best thing is to censor it.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if it has been pointed out to Mr. Louis Fischer that his statements are inaccurate and that he should in future do better?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I think he is probably beyond learning.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: Have the Government taken any steps in the National War Front to issue a contradiction to these articles?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That question should be addressed to the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member aware that the orders of Government in regard to this matter have invested Mr. Louis Fischer's articles with special importance and that those articles are being read with great interest?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That is a matter of opinion.

SALE, IMPORT AND EXPORT OF GOLD.

156. Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state what quantity of gold was sold in India during the year 1942 and up to the 15th of June, 1943? How much gold was bought in India, and exported to the United Kingdom and America since the declaration of war.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The Government have no information regarding sales and purchases of gold in India. They consider that it would be contrary to the public interest to publish figures of exports of gold to the United Kingdom and to the United States of America, but I can assure the Honourable Member that there have been no such exports for the past 18 months and more.

NEWSPAPERS SUPPLIED TO MR. GANDHI.

157. Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state the names of the newspapers supplied to Mr. Gandhi?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I place on the table a list of the newspapers supplied to Mr. Gandhi.

List of Newspapers supplied to Mr. Gandhi.

- (1) Bombay Samachar (Gujarati) Bombay.
- (2) Bombay Chronicle (Bombay).
- (3) Dawn (Muslim League Official Organ Delhi).
- (4) Gram Udyog Patrika (English monthly).
- (5) Hindu (Madras).
- (6) Hindustan Standard (Calcutta).
- (7) Hindustan (Urdu Weekly—Lucknow).
- (8) Hindustan Times (Delhi).

- (9) Khadgi Jagat—monthly, Hindustani (Wardha).
 (10) Modern Review—monthly (Calcutta).
 (11) Rashtra Bhasha Samachar—Hindi (Wardha).
 (12) Sarvodaya (Hindi—Wardha).
 (13) Statesman (Calcutta).
 (14) Talimi Sangh Magazine—monthly Hindi (Wardha).
 (15) Times of India (Bombay).

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Are they too many to be mentioned.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: Are there any Urdu papers included in the list?

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Will the Honourable Member read out the names of papers?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: There are 15 papers.

Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj: Is Dawn one of the papers supplied?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Yes, Sir.

INDIANS AS STAFF OFFICERS IN DIFFERENT BRANCHES OF GENERAL HEADQUARTERS.

158. Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: (a) Will the War Secretary please state the total number and the number of Indians as Staff Officers in the following Branches:

(i) General staff: (1) Operations Branch, (2) Intelligence Branch, and (3) Military Training Branch;

(ii) Adjutant General's Branch;

(iii) Quarter Master General's Branch; and

(iv) Master General of Ordnance Branch?

(b) Has the percentage of Indians employed in these several Branches increased since 1940? If so, by how much?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) I regret that it would not be in the public interest to reveal the total numbers of officers employed in the branches and directorates concerned, but the percentage of Indian to British Officers employed on the 1st July, 1943, was 9.81 and the proportion of those holding graded staff appointments was 3 Indian to 100 British.

(b) Yes, Sir; the percentage of Indians employed in these branches and directorates has increased from 2.23 in 1940 to 9.81 in 1943.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Do Government consider that a good progress?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I consider, Sir, that it is satisfactory.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member in a position to give us figures of percentages separately for the Operations Branch, Intelligence Branch and Military Training Branch?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: If the Honourable Member will give me notice I shall be able to answer that question.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: But notice was given.

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have not got the percentages separately worked out.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: Why have the percentages been lumped up together and why could they not be supplied under each of these sub-heads?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: If the Honourable Member will give me notice, I shall be glad to work out the percentages.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST THE EXECUTIVE OFFICER, AGRA CANTONMENT.

159. Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon (or, behalf of Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi): Will the Honourable the Defence Member please state if it is or it is not a fact that there were representations from the Muslim public of the Agra Cantonment against the re-organisation scheme of the Executive Officer and that it was specifically brought to the notice of the higher authorities that the said Executive Officer had openly adopted an attitude hostile to the Muslim employees of the Board? If so, what action did Government take on these representations, and what action, if any, do they propose to take against the Executive Officer for his irregularities and communal discrimination?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: A representation was received in August 1941. Government made enquiries through the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Central Command, and are satisfied that the re-organisation proposals made by the Executive Officer were made purely on grounds of efficiency. The recommendations of the Executive Officer were dealt with in detail by a Special Committee of the Cantonment Board, composed of two British officers of the rank of Major and a Hindu and a Muslim elected member of the Board. I have read through the proceedings of this Committee with great care and I am satisfied that even though Mr. Zoberi dissented from his other colleagues in many directions, the decisions reached were on merits. The Honourable Member is fully aware that it is not unknown in local body administration in all countries that measures of retrenchment justified on grounds of public interest are often very difficult to carry through because of the personal interests of various employees being adversely affected. Consequently, every argument is used to oppose most schemes for the retrenchment of staff and unfortunately in India communal bias provides a very easy argument. Government are satisfied that no action on their part is called for in this case.

GRANT OF KING'S COMMISSION TO V. C. Os.

160. Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the War Secretary please state if V.C.Os. have ever been given King's Commission, either emergency or permanent? If so, when, and how many?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Yes, Viceroy's Commissioned Officers have been given King's Commissions both permanent and emergency.

Seven Viceroy's Commissioned Officers were given direct permanent commissions as King's Commissioned Indian Officers after the last war. Three of these were commissioned in 1919, two in 1920 and two in 1922.

Twelve Viceroy's Commissioned Officers were given permanent King's Commissions as Indian Commissioned Officers. Three of these were commissioned in February 1935, three in July 1935, two in February 1936, one in July 1936 and three in February 1939.

Up to the 15th July, 1943, 935 Viceroy's Commissioned Officers and Viceroy's Commissioned Officers have been granted emergency commissions. These have been appointed at various dates from the 12th December, 1940.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: By "King's Commission" does he mean anything separate from the Indian Commission?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I refer to what is called the I. C. O., i.e., the Indian officers commissioned after the discontinuance of entry to Sandhurst for Indians.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: On what basis is this promotion given?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: It is given on the basis of selection and merit.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: What is the number of Anglo-Indians who have been given the King's Commission from among the Viceroy's Commissioned Officers?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have no information, Sir, on this point.

FATAL ACCIDENTS AT THE FLYING CENTRES IN INDIA.

161. Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the War Secretary please state:

(a) if there have been any accidents resulting in death to persons at any of the flying centres in India while undergoing training for flying during the last twelve months;

(b) if such persons were Indians or Europeans or both; and

(c) if the causes of such accidents were inquired into; if so; what these were?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a), (b) and (c). It would not be in the public interest to announce flying accidents or their details in War time, whether they occur during flying training or in operational units. I may however assure the Honourable Member that all accidents are carefully investigated in order to incorporate any lessons resulting from them, into the training and operational methods.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Were there any accidents which resulted in loss of life and, if so, was any compensation paid to their families?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: There have been a certain number of such accidents.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Are Government aware that secrecy in such matters causes discontent and anxiety to the general public and would it not be more in the public interest to disclose the accidents that are caused?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have already said that it would not be in the public interest to disclose details about these accidents.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Was any compensation paid to their families? What is the reply to that?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: There is provision for family pensions.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: As this question is the result of public anxiety the Government realise that not to disclose the real state of affairs would make the public still more anxious as regards those who have joined and are being trained in these flying centres?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Disclosure of details would give information to the enemy, but I can assure the Honourable Member that the accidents have been very few.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if these accidents come to the notice of the public when they take place or they are not known to anybody and take place in secret?

(No reply was given.)

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member aware of the general public impression that a large number of these accidents have been due to the fact that antediluvian machines were supplied for training purposes?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I can assure the Honourable Member that the accidents have not been due to the supply of what he calls antediluvian machines.

SECURITY PRISONERS IN ASSAM.

162. *Mr. Ananga Mohan Dam: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state the number of security prisoners detained up to the 31st June, 1943, in the different jails of Assam?

(b) How many of these prisoners were arrested under the direction of the Central Government?

(c) Did the Government of India ask the Assam Government to arrest some of the members of the Assam Assembly who were members of the All-India Congress Committee, although they did not attend the session of the All-India Congress Committee held in Bombay in August 1942? If so, how many, and the reasons for their detention?

(d) Do the Government of India propose to enquire from the Assam Government if the security prisoners are allowed personal and family allowances in all cases?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) I would draw the Honourable Member's attention to the fact that the month of June has only 30 days; I cannot therefore supply him with figures for the number of persons detained up to the 31st June. The total number of persons detained in Assam from the beginning of the war to 1st June, 1943—the latest date up to which figures are available—was 351; of this total, 300 were still under detention on the 1st June.

(b) None.

(c) and (d). No.

POLICY RE RELEASE OF SECURITY PRISONERS.

163. *Mr. Ananga Mohan Dam: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state the policy of the Government of India with regard to the release of security prisoners, and have the Provincial Governments been directed to review the case of each security prisoner with a view to releasing him if he had been detained merely on suspicion?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No person is detained under Defence Rule 26 unless the authority responsible for passing the order is satisfied, in terms of the preamble to that Rule, that his detention is necessary. No specific directions have been given to Provincial Governments, but it is understood that they do review cases from time to time with the object of releasing persons whose detention is no longer necessary.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Did they examine these cases suo motu or on the application of any one?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Very largely suo motu. I gave figures to the House in the debate the other day when I said that between four and five thousand persons had recently been released.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: Is it a fact that some people are detained merely on suspicion?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: It depends on what the Honourable Member means by "merely on suspicion". No one is detained without something definite being known about him.

Mr. Abdur Rasheed Choudhury: Does suspicion and not facts play any part in the policy of detention of these people?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No, Sir. Suspicion is based on facts known to the Governments concerned.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lal: May I know from the Honourable Member if the Government of India have laid down any principles or have given any directions to the Provincial Governments with regard to the release of detenus?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No, Sir. I said that no specific directions have been given to the Provincial Governments.

UTILIZATION OF STERLING BALANCES FOR CAPITALISING STERLING PENSIONS, FAMILY PENSIONS, ETC.

164. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state if the Government of India have reached a tentative decision to capitalise the sterling pensions, family pensions and provident funds out of the accumulated sterling balances of the Reserve Bank of India?

(b) If the reply to (a) be in the affirmative, what sum do the Government of India propose to allocate for the purpose, and how is the arrangement proposed to be worked?

(c) Does the Honourable Member propose to enlighten the House on the reasons for an immediate decision in this matter? Was the question of the utilisation of any portion of the sterling balances on other measures, such as repatriation of the foreign capital employed in India, including the British investments in private industries and enterprise, considered before the present decision was reached?

(d) Will the responsibility for payment of these British pensions continue to be borne by India notwithstanding India's parting with the large sum of money securing payment for the same?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) The proposal which was outlined in para. 48 of my last Budget speech has since been referred to His Majesty's Government who have the matter under examination.

(b) The amount involved is approximately £150 million. The working of the scheme was explained in the paragraph of my last Budget speech to which I have already alluded.

(c) This proposal has been under consideration for some time now. All aspects of the utilisation of the Reserve Bank's sterling balances have been considered. Even after earmarking this sum for pensionary remittance provision there will remain very substantial and still growing balances available for other purposes.

(d) As I explained in my Budget speech, the Government of India will remain legally liable for payment of these pensionary charges but as a result of this purely financial arrangement they would automatically be provided from time to time with specified sterling amounts which, so far as can be estimated, would be adequate to meet the legal liabilities concerned.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Do I take it that the question of utilization of the sterling balances by way of repatriation of the foreign capital employed in India was seriously considered as an alternative to the proposal which has found favour with the Government as indicated in this question?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I have stated, Sir, that all aspects of the utilization of sterling balances have been considered. There is no question of an alternative being involved because, as I have also pointed out, even after this scheme is implemented there will remain ample balances for other purposes.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Do I take it that the question of repatriation of the foreign capital employed in India is going to be seriously considered, or was considered in the past?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The only point which arises here is whether the implementation of this scheme constitutes a bar to the implementation of other schemes, and my answer is that it does not. But of course the question of utilizing the sterling balances for any other purposes must be considered on the merits of those schemes.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I know what the Government think of the merits of repatriation of the foreign capital employed in India?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: That, Sir, is hardly a matter which I could deal with in reply to a question.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know whether, with reference to part (c), the European commercial community in India has been consulted on this and because they do not favour this attitude the Government is not taking into serious consideration this matter of repatriation?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: No, Sir. What the Honourable Member has suggested is entirely incorrect.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Will the Honourable Member give an opportunity to the House to discuss this question?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The House had full opportunity to discuss this question during the last Budget Session.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: May I ask the Honourable Member if the Government have got a scheme of priorities and, as a result, the question of capitulation of sterling balances comes before the question of repatriation of other sterling assets in this country?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: There is no formal priority, but methods of utilizing sterling naturally assume priority according to their feasibility and practicability at particular times.

SIKHS IN THE POSTS CREATED IN CIVIL DEFENCE DEPARTMENT.

165. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member for Civil Defence please state the number of posts created since the coming into existence of his Department, the number of Sikhs employed therein, and the number of posts carrying salary of over Rs. 300, a month, and the number of Sikhs getting that salary?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: A statement is laid on the table.

Statement.
	(a) Number of posts created since the coming into existence of the C. D. Department.	Number of posts in existence on 31st July, 1943.
Gazetted posts (including Superintendents)	32	21
Assistants (including Assistants in charge)	33	32
Clerks	41	38
Stenographers	15	10
Draftsmen	8	1
Inferior Servants	71	68
TOTAL	200	170
(b) Number of Sikhs employed	9	9
(c) Number of posts carrying salary of over Rs. 300	32	21
(d) Number of Sikhs getting pay of over Rs. 300	NIL	NIL

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know from the Honourable Member if there is any Sikh in the Civil Defence Department drawing over Rs. 300 per month?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: Nil.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member please state reasons for thus ignoring the quota of Sikhs in this particular Department?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: It is very difficult to answer that question without being guilty of showing discourtesy, but I do suppose that the Department must have considered the merits of all the candidates and they found that there was no Sikh available.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if any applications were invited for the posts carrying this salary and above and whether there was any applicant belonging to the Sikh community?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I have no information.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: May I know the position of Mussalmans?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: This question does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: What about the Sindhis?

(No answer was given.)

HIGH FARE RATES CHARGED BY THE G.N.I.T., DELHI AND DESIRABILITY OF GIVING CONVEYANCE ALLOWANCE TO SECRETARIAT STAFF.

166. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please state the rates of fare charged by the G. N. I. T. Delhi from Secretariat to Kashmere Gate, Connaught Place and Minto Road in 1939 and now?

(b) Is it a fact that the fares have been almost trebled?

(c) Are Government aware that this affects adversely their Secretariat staff living in or near the localities mentioned in part (a) above, in that they have to pay very highly for transport?

(d) Do Government propose to grant conveyance allowance to their staff in view of the high transport charges by the G. N. I. T. and consequently by tongas? If not, are they prepared to control the fares for transport and bring them down to the pre-war rates, or to increase them within reasonable limits so as to be within reach of the poorly paid staff?

(e) Alternatively do they propose to consider the running of free Government buses for their staff as in the case of their military personnel, and to utilise spare military buses for the purpose in order to avoid any extra cost?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) The services referred to by the Honourable Member were started only in 1940. The fares were as follows:—

(i) Secretariat—Kashmere Gate—4 annas.

(ii) Secretariat—Connaught Place—2 annas.

(iii) Secretariat—Minto Road—2½ annas.

The corresponding rates for 1943 are 1½ annas higher in each case.

(b) No.

(c) This is only a particular instance of the effect of the general rise in the level of prices.

(d) No, but some new vehicles have recently been released to the G. N. I. T. in order to enable them to open new, and to strengthen existing services.

(e) No.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: This question has been put to the Honourable the Home Member.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: After some discussion it has been decided that the question appertains more closely to me, and therefore I have answered it.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee: We are very much obliged that the Honourable Member has accommodated us like that.

EXAMINATION OF POST-WAR CURRENCY PROPOSALS.

167. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state:

(a) what steps the Government have taken to examine the full implications for India of the post-war currency proposals put forward by the Government of the United Kingdom and those put forward by the Government of the United States of America;

(b) whether Government propose to invite the representatives of the commerce and industry and other non-official experts to collaborate with Government in the examination of these proposals at any stage;

(c) whether Government are aware that the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry have appointed local Sub-Committees in Bombay, Calcutta and Delhi to study these proposals;

(d) whether Government propose to invite the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry to nominate their representatives to collaborate with any experts employed by Government in the examination of these proposals; and

(e) whether prior to committing the Government of India to any of these plans or any particular proposals or suggestions embodied in the plans, the Honourable Member will, apart from committing the representatives of the commerce, trade and finance, place the tentative views of the Government before the Central Legislature for consideration?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a), (b) and (d). Both plans were published in India on the 5th July and have been given the widest possible circulation and publicity. The two plans are under examination by the Reserve Bank and Government are now awaiting the views of the Bank and also public reaction and comment. On receipt of these opinions Government will consider the most suitable further procedure.

(c) Government have no information regarding this.

(e) I would draw the Honourable Member's attention to the reply which I gave on the 23rd March last to part (d) of his question No. 358, and to the remarks which I made on the 27th July last during the discussion on Mr. Jamnadas Mehta's attempt to move an adjournment motion on this subject.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Is it proposed to invite labour representatives for consultation and expression of opinion?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Government have not yet decided what the most suitable procedure will be, but I will take note of the suggestion of my Honourable friend.

DUTY-FREE INDUSTRIAL COLOURED SALT AND THE FISHING INDUSTRY IN SIND.

168. Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state:—(a) whether it is a fact that when the concession for the issue of duty-free industrial coloured salt sanctioned by the Government of India was extended to the Province of Sind from the year 1939, only one company of Salt Works at Maurypur (Sind) enjoyed the monopoly for the manufacture of industrial coloured salt; if so, why the other Salt Works were not apprised of the said manufacture of coloured salt in question;

(b) if the Honourable Member is aware of the fact that from the year 1941 other salt manufacturers came into the field and produced and supplied the industrial coloured salt to the Fishing Industry at a low rate;

(c) whether it is a fact that the Superintendent of Salt Revenue in Sind at Maurypur, Karachi, recommended the said scheme for the duty-free industrial coloured salt to be withdrawn in the year 1942; if so, why, and on what grounds;

(d) if it is a fact that the scheme for the duty free industrial coloured salt has proved beneficial and advantageous to the poor fishermen and the Fish Industry of the Province of Sind; and

(e) whether it is a fact that the Government of Sind rejected the aforesaid recommendations of the Superintendent of Salt Revenue in Sind, and instead requested the Government of India for the continuity of the said scheme for another year?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: With your permission, Sir, I will reply to questions Nos. 168, 169, 170 and 171 together.

The Government of Sind administer the Salt Department in that province on behalf of the Central Government and I am not, therefore, in a position at present to furnish all the information asked for by the Honourable Member. A reference has been made to that Government and I shall place the replies to these questions on the table of the House in due course.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Could I know from the Honourable Member whether he knows that the concession was stopped without giving any notice and that these people are suffering very much.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I do not even know that!

DUTY-FREE INDUSTRIAL COLOURED SALT AND THE FISHING INDUSTRY IN SIND.

169. Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state why the rules of 1939 governing the issue of the duty-free industrial coloured salt were subsequently amended in 1942 and, consequently, the Superintendent of Salt Revenue in Sind without giving any notice to the fishing community withdrew the said concessions for certain classes of fishermen and fish dealers numbering several hundreds of persons, and who all have been deprived of their daily bread?

(b) Are Government aware that the revised rules have practically caused a good deal of loss, difficulties and inconveniences to the bona fide fishermen and fish dealers who, in the ordinary course, were benefited by the said scheme?

(c) Are Government aware that since October 1942 when the revised rules were brought in force, several bona fide fishermen have been compelled to buy the duty-paid salt from bazar for fish curing and preserving purposes resulting in extra heavy expenses?

(d) Is it a fact that a vast quantity of natural salt is lying in collective heaps on the Southern Sea Coast line of Sind, and that there is a Patrol Launch belonging to His Majesty's Customs for patrol duty in the sea to watch that this natural salt is not smuggled for any consumption?

(e) Is it a fact that if the white duty-paid salt purchased from bazar for preserving catches of fish is found in the boats of fishermen who ply their fishing boats into the sea for catching fish and of those fishermen who are denied the supply of the duty-free industrial coloured salt under the said scheme they are hauled up and given much trouble by the Customs Preventive Staff on patrol duty, on the mere suspicion that the white salt found in their boats is the smuggled salt lying on the sea coast line? If so, why is the said scheme of duty-free industrial coloured salt not made on the permanent basis, and why is it extended from year to year?

(f) Is the Honourable Member aware that the Fishermen's Committee, Karachi, has recently submitted a memorial to the Government of Sind suggesting certain amendments in the said revised rules?

(g) If the answer to (f) above be in the affirmative, on what grounds were the said amendments not taken into consideration?

DUTY-FREE INDUSTRIAL COLOURED SALT AND HIDES AND SKINS MERCHANTS IN SIND.

170. Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Is the Honourable the Finance Member aware of the fact: (a) that hides and skins merchants are not being allowed to obtain the duty-free industrial coloured salt for the purpose of curing hides and skins; if not, why not; and

(b) That the local salt merchants who paid salt duty into the Government Treasury in the months of January and February, 1943, have not so far been allowed and permitted by the salt authorities in Karachi to take their supply of salt; if not, why not?

DUTY-FREE INDUSTRIAL COLOURED SALT AND HIDES AND SKINS MERCHANTS IN SIND.

171. Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Does the Honourable the Finance Member propose to consider the advisability of appointing an I.C.S. officer to the post of Superintendent of Salt Revenue in Sind, and that the rules for concession be applied to the hides and skin merchants in Sind to enable them to obtain the duty free industrial coloured salt for curing skins and hides?

DESIRABILITY OF BRINGING DEFENCE OF INDIA RULE 26, IN LINE WITH REGULATION 18(b) OF ENGLAND.

172. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: (a) Is the Honourable the Home Member aware:

(i) of the criticisms passed on Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules and the comparison made by the Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court in the judgment delivered in the Contempt of Court cases on the 14th July between this rule i.e., 26 and Regulation III of 1818;

(ii) that rule 26 is against a very old principle of law 'Audi Alteram Partem', i.e., hear the other side; and

(iii) that under the Emergency Powers Act of 1939 passed in England, Regulation 18B, providing for the detention of a person not brought to trial, gives him an opportunity of knowing the grounds for detention and showing cause against the detention?

(b) Does the Honourable Member propose to bring rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules on the same lines as Regulation 18(B) 3, 4, and 5 as suggested by the Chief Justice?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) I am aware of the press reports referred to and of the allegation made in part (ii) which I do not necessarily accept. I am also aware of the provisions of the law in England.

(b) A copy of the judgment has been applied for but has not yet been received. On its receipt Government will consider what questions, if any, need examination.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member considering the desirability of issuing injunctions to the Honourable the High Court not to indulge in such silly effusions in future?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The question seems to contain a reflection on the High Court.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: It involves no more reprehensible an attitude on my part than the attitude displayed by the Honourable Member.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That is not a question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is the Honourable Member considering the desirability of issuing instructions to the censorship authorities that there should be strict censorship over such observations of the High Court in future?

(No reply was given.)

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I know the reasons why the Government do not necessarily accept the view laid down?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I do not think I can debate the matter in answer to a question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I know

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have already called upon the Honourable Member for the next question.

DESIRABILITY OF DISTINGUISHING MILITARY MEN WHO HAVE BEEN ACTUALLY WITHIN THE FIGHTING AREA.

173. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the War Secretary please state, if Government intend to have a mark for the military officers as well as rank and file who have been actually within the fighting area to distinguish them easily from officers and others holding the same military rank who have been either in India or overseas but far away from the fighting lines?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: The whole question of distinctive War service badges is under consideration in consultation with His Majesty's Government and Dominion Governments. A decision in the matter has not yet been reached.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is the Government considering making some kind of distinction between the military officers who are actually serving on the front from those who are sitting in the offices, particularly in Supply Department?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have said the whole question is under consideration.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee: Do I understand that the Government of India is also in communication with the Dominion Governments in this matter?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have already given the answer.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee: The reply is that you are in communication with His Majesty's Government and the Dominion Governments. My doubt is that you are not directly doing it with the Dominion Governments.

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I have said that we are in consultation with His Majesty's Government who is also in consultation with the Dominion Governments?

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee: Who is?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: His Majesty's Government.

SILVER POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

174. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state:

(a) whether, in view of the progressive worsening of the food situation in the country, and in view of the suggestions made from certain competent quarters that in order that Indian peasantry should be offered acceptable store value so that they may willingly part with their produce, silver should be made available to them, the Government of India have decided that Indian silver, which is at present to their credit in London, should be brought back and made available to the Indian public;

(b) whether, in view of the recent acquisitions of large quantities of silver by the Government of the United Kingdom from the United States of America under lease-lend, the Government of India have decided not to sell any more quantities of their silver in London; and

(c) whether there is any truth in the reports that the question of making a request to the Government of the United States of America to provide India with silver on lease-lend is under the consideration of the Government of India?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) As I have explained on more than one occasion to the House, the Government of India have never held more than a fraction of their silver stocks in London. The small stock which existed in London at the beginning of the war was finally disposed of long ago so that this part of the question does not arise.

(b) His Majesty's Government have not approached the Government of India for any further sales to them since I replied to Mr. Lalchand Navalrai's question No. 53 on this subject on the 12th February last.

(c) It would not be in the public interest to confirm or deny these reports at present.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Are Government aware that between 1927 and today, about Rs. 100 crores worth of silver has disappeared from the Currency Reserves, and will they say where it has gone?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am afraid that I am in no better position than my Honourable friend to say where a great deal of the silver currency has gone.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: But my Honourable friend has had the control of it. I had not. Otherwise I would have told him.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if the Honourable Member is aware that during the last war when stocks were purchased from cultivators they were paid 50 per cent. in gold and 50 per cent. in paper currency?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I have no precise recollection of that fact though I know that gold was used to some extent during the last war.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will he follow the same policy now, too?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I regret I cannot answer that question at this moment.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: What is the cause of the abnormal rise in silver in terms of the paper rupee?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: That is not a matter which could be answered simply in reply to a question on the floor of this House, but I consider that speculative movements in the bullion market had a great deal to do with part of the rise.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is the Honourable Gentleman contemplating to stabilize the prices of silver in terms of the paper rupee?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am not quite clear what kind of action the Honourable Member contemplates.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: By stabilising I mean no fluctuations. The stabilisation of the price of silver is the first element, without which the stabilisation of other articles will be impossible.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Government are certainly desirous of preventing undue fluctuations in the value of any important commodity, such as silver, and in particular they are determined, as far as possible to prevent any sharp rise in price.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Has Government issued lately an Ordinance in this matter?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, Sir. Government of India have taken power to prohibit bank advances against bullion.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: At what stage will Government take action in this matter?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: When they consider that the prevalence of speculation in the bullion market justifies that action.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: In their opinion?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, in their opinion.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Does the Honourable Member think that the price in silver which is in present coins of the country has gone up because there is very little silver in the present rupee and everybody counts the price of the silver of a rupee in the rupee coin itself?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: If that were the determining factor then the price would be different from what it is today.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Does the Honourable Member realise that any effort on the part of the Commerce Member to stabilise the price will be impossible unless the Finance Member considers it as a part of the monetary policy of the country that the stabilisation of prices should be taken up first and he should begin with silver?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I have already said that the object of our policy is to stabilise the prices of all important commodities and in pursuing that policy it is naturally also the object of Government to act simultaneously on all sections of the economic front.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Why does not the Honourable the Finance Member give us an opportunity to discuss this very important question and fix a date?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I understand that a Resolution by the Honourable Member has already gained first place in the ballot, and therefore there is no necessity for allotting a special day.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: But that Resolution deals with a very small part of the monetary policy.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: But it is open to the Honourable Member to raise all relevant questions on that discussion.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

HOARDING OF COMMODITIES WITH THE HELP OF LOANS SECURED FROM BANKS, ETC.

32. Mr. K. O. Neogy: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to furnish:

(a) what information he possesses indicating excessive hoardings of commodities by the public or traders, with the help of loans secured by them from banks or money-lenders against the security of bullion or stocks of commodities; and

(b) statistics in regard to the volume of hoarding of commodities as well as the volume of loans received by hoarders or lending institutions which are utilised for purposes of hoarding stocks of commodities?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) I am not prepared to divulge either the nature or source of the information in my possession regarding these matters.

(b) The collection of exhaustive figures on the lines suggested would prove a formidable, if not impossible task, involving an altogether disproportionate amount of labour.

VOLUNTARY DEPOSITS OUT OF EXCESS PROFITS.

33. Mr. K. O. Neogy: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state:

(a) what response has so far been received from the assesses to the scheme of Voluntary Deposits out of excess profits, giving figures showing the amounts of such voluntary deposits received by Government from the E. P. T. assesses; and

(b) the number of E. P. T. assessments completed so far in each province, and the number of E. P. T. assessments outstanding and waiting to be completed in each province?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) The response received from E. P. T. assesses has not been satisfactory, the amount deposited upto the 31st May, 1943 being about rupees two crores only, which is a little more than half of the amount that could have been deposited;

(b) Information in respect of each province is not readily available. The following figures show for each Commissioner's charge, the number of cases in which returns have been received, the number of assessments so far completed (including cases filed as 'no liability' cases) and the number outstanding upto the end of June 1943:

MACHINERY FOR SCRUTINISING AND CONSIDERING APPLICATIONS FOR CONSENT TO ISSUING OF CAPITAL.

34. Mr. K. O. Neogy: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to state in regard to the administration of the Defence of India Rule 94-A (Control of Capital Issues):

(a) what machinery Government have evolved for scrutinising and considering the applications received by them for their consent to the issuing of capital; and

(b) whether any non-official representative of commerce and industry is associated with this machinery to scrutinise and consider the applications?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) An Examiner of Capital Issues has been appointed. His duties are to see that all necessary information has been supplied, to obtain the advice of the appropriate authorities and thereafter to obtain the orders of the Government of India and communicate these orders to the parties. The appropriate authorities include, in the case of industrial ventures, the Departmental Committee referred to in the Press Note of 18th May, 1943 a copy of which is appended and, in the case of financial concerns such as banks insurance companies, finance and investment companies, a reference is made to the Reserve Bank of India, as stated in that Press Note. In appropriate cases, the Examiner consults other Government departments; for example, the War Transport Department, when the proposals involve important movements of goods by rail in war time, and the Superintendent of Insurance in the case of insurance companies.

(b) No.

NOT TO BE BROADCAST OR PUBLISHED BEFORE MAY 18, 1943.

Press communiqué.

A new Defence of India Rule No. 94A has today been issued under section 2 of the Defence of India Act, 1939, prohibiting:

- (1) without the prior consent of the Central Government:
 - (a) an issue of capital in British India,
 - (b) any public offer of securities for sale in British India,
 - (c) the renewal or repayment of any security maturing for payment in British India,
 - (2) without the prior consent of the Central Government an issue of capital anywhere, whether within or without British India, by any company incorporated in British India,
 - (3) the issue in British India of any prospectus or other document offering for subscription or publicly offering for sale any security which does not include a statement that the consent of the Central Government has been obtained to the issue or offer of the security,
 - (4) subscription for any securities issued by a company in respect of any issue of capital made in British India or elsewhere unless such issue has been made with the consent of the Central Government.
- Applications which are made to the Central Government in pursuance of the provisions of this rule should be addressed to the Secretary to the Government of India, Finance Department. Such applications in so far as they relate to issues of capital in connection with proposed industrial enterprises will be considered by a departmental committee on which representatives of the Commerce and Industries and Supply Departments will be associated with the Finance Department. The Reserve Bank of India will be consulted in regard to applications involving the issue of capital for proposed financial enterprises, including banks, investment and finance and insurance companies. The object of the rule is to prevent in the circumstances of the present time the growth of mushroom companies which stand little chance of survival in the post-war period and other undesirable practices such as the reconstitution or recapitalisation of concerns on the basis of their present abnormal profits to the detriment of an indiscriminating investing public. There is no intention of handicapping or retarding sound and legitimate industrial development or expansion calculated to promote the war effort of the country or to increase production to meet the civil requirements of the country at the present time or in the near future, in which cases the application for sanction will encounter no difficulty.

Finance Department,
New Delhi, May 17, 1943.

APPLICATIONS RECEIVED AND SANCTIONED REGARDING THE ISSUE OF CAPITAL.

35. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to furnish statistics as regards the number of applications received by Government in connection with the issue of capital in respect of each industry under the Defence of India Rule 94-A?

(b) How many of the applications received have been sanctioned by Government under the heading of each industry?

(c) Out of the applications sanctioned, what is the number of those that relate to new companies, and the number of those that relate to the issue of capital by companies incorporated before the promulgation of the said Rule 94-A?

(d) What is the total amount of capital in respect of each industry that has been permitted to be issued and the amount in respect of which permission may have been refused so far?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) Up to 24th July, 726 applications. Classification has not yet been made.

(b) Out of 271 applications sanctioned up to that date, 18 represented conversions involving no new money. Of the balance, 112 related to industrial concerns. Classification of the results as between different industries has been taken in hand, but has not yet been completed.

(c) Out of the 271 consents already mentioned 132 related to new companies. The expression "new companies" is here used to include not only companies registered on or after 17th May 1943, but also companies registered shortly before the date which had not made their initial issue of capital by that date.

(d) This information is also being compiled but is not yet available.

INDIAN SILVER HANDED OVER TO THE UNITED KINGDOM GOVERNMENT, ETC.

36. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable the Finance Member be pleased to lay on the table:

(a) the figures of the total quantities of the Indian silver that the Government of India have year by year handed over to the Government of the United Kingdom since the time of the establishment of the Reserve Bank of India in 1935;

(b) the total quantity of silver so far sold by them year by year since that time; and

(c) the average rates on which this silver was and is being sold?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) and (c). No sales of silver were made to His Majesty's Government in the years 1936-37 and 1937-38 and only insignificant sales in the year 1938-39. In regard to the subsequent years I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply I gave to part (a) of his starred question No. 62 on the 16th September last.

(b) Figures for the total sales of silver will be found in the Appropriation Accounts for each year.

THE RECIPROCITY (AMENDMENT) BILL—concl'd.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I think the issue under discussion was a new clause to the Reciprocity Bill by Sir Syed Raza Ali.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani (Tirhut Division: Muhammadan): I wish to add a few words and draw the attention of the Legislature that it should remove all kinds of uncertainties. It is for this purpose that the Honourable Member moved this amendment. But the punishment to be inflicted for the violation of rules should be such that the trial Courts may not find any difficulty in exercising their judgment. With these words I support the amendment.

Sir Vithal N. Chandavarkar (Bombay Millowners' Association: Indian Commerce): In regard to this amendment, in my opinion there are only two tests to be applied. According to the strict principles of jurisprudence, it is quite true that all provisions regarding punishment should be in the statute itself, and, as far as possible, the House should be most reluctant to leave such matters in the hands of the Executive. But there are two considerations. The first is, where is the balance of advantage? I take it that the Government wants a little more elasticity in this measure. If they want to retaliate against any offending country, they would like to correlate our punishment with the punishment provided in the corresponding Dominion's statute. If any particular Dominion levies, say, £500 as fine for an offence our Government also wants that their hands should not be bound down by a provision in the statute itself but that it should be left to the rule-making power in order to provide a corresponding punishment for a similar offence committed by the national of that particular Dominion. If the House desires that the principle of retaliation should be effectively enforced, I personally feel, although as a lawyer I agree with Mr. Neogy that we should be most reluctant to leave such a power in the hands of the executive Government, yet in this particular case realising as I do that the object of this measure is to retaliate,—I feel that the House will be well advised to leave this power in the hands of the Government and not to pass this amendment which might hamper the freedom of the Government if they want to take suitable retaliatory action.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division: Muhammadan Rural): I am speaking now because of the speech of the last speaker. I think the Government knows that the matter under discussion is as regards South Africa and this House is not concerned at all with other colonies. If the Government had seriously thought about what punishment should be given to the people of that Dominion, they could easily have found out by this time what punishment should be proposed for such people, and this House would have been fully prepared to accept any proposal from the Government as regards the punishment they want to impose. In the absence of any indication from the Government as to what their proposals would be, this House is justified in proposing the punishment as outlined in this amendment. But we shall be fully prepared to accept any amendment which may be made either now, or if they have not got the time or the Honourable the President does not allow it, then they can make an amendment in the other House when this Bill goes there and bring it back to this House.

This House will then at once accept any reasonable proposal as regards punishment by the Government. But on the principle that this House itself should provide punishment in the Bill itself, these proposals have been made, and in the absence of any contrary or other proposals, I think this House should accept what has been proposed by the amendment.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh (Nagpur Division: Non-Muhammadan): I am afraid my Honourable friend, Sir Vithal Chandavarkar, has missed the point. Reciprocity is as regards qualifications or disqualifications and not as regards punishment; and so far as punishment is concerned, we have given a latitude by this Bill as regards fine and imprisonment. For the present I do not think Government are in a mood to impose a heavier punishment than what is provided in this particular amendment. It seems to me that the House itself is quite satisfied if the punishment to be awarded is one year. But if the House considers afterwards that that punishment is not sufficient, it may come forward with its own proposals. But our present fear is that if we do not fix a period like this now and give an indication of the line on which the Government should proceed—our fears are that you will not provide substantial punishment if any South African commits a breach of the rules that will be made. I therefore hope that the House will support the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That after clause 5 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted and the subsequent clause be re-numbered accordingly:

"6. After section 6 of the said Act, as substituted by the foregoing section, the following section shall be added namely:

"7. Any person guilty of disobeying a rule made by the Central Government under section 6, sub-section (2) part (c), shall, on the complaint of an officer appointed or designated by the Central Government in this behalf be punished, on conviction by a Magistrate of the First Class, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both."

Sultan Ahmed, The Honourable Sir.
Thakur Singh, Major.
Trivedi, Mr. C. M.
Tyson, Mr. J. D.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): There is another amendment to clause 5, standing in the name of Sir Raza Ali. He said that this amendment is consequential on the adoption of the new clause.

Sir Syed Raza Ali (Cities of the United Provinces: Muhammadan Urban): This was to be a consequential amendment. After the voting on the amendment which has just now been announced, I do not propose to move this amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 5 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 5 was added to the Bill.

Clause 6 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare (Member for Indians Overseas): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved:

"That the Bill, as amended be passed."

Sir Syed Raza Ali: At this stage which is the final stage, I would like to say a few words on the action that we have taken by agreeing to pass this Bill. Sir, I do not know what to say about the attitude of the Government of India. Like the famous Curate's egg, I believe it is good in parts. That is the utmost that I can say about the action of the Government of India. I must compliment my Honourable friend Dr. Khare who started in right earnest by convening a conference on the 7th of last month. That raised our hopes. We thought that after all here was a man of action who had succeeded another man of action. Let me make it clear that I had the pleasure of working with Mr. Aney, who unfortunately is no longer a Member of the Government of India or of this House, for more than 18 months. Now, that he is not here, let me say openly that I have not known any Overseas Member acting so courageously, so bravely and so independently as Mr. Aney did. It is too early to say anything about the Honourable Dr. Khare, but 12 Noon. the speeches that he makes in this House mostly consist of monosyllables. They are uttered in under-tones and altogether his attitude seems to be apologetic to the South Africans.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Brevity is the soul of wit.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Sir, my Honourable friend is right, but if he would look at his own colleagues, the most important of whom made a speech yesterday lasting an hour and a quarter, then I do not think the claim of brevity being the soul of wit would hold good.

[Sir Syed Raza Ali.]

Sir, the position is this. I am glad that this House has displayed some degree of unanimity on this occasion, but while I am not dissatisfied with what we have done to this Bill, I think the public cannot derive much good from it. The Indian Legislature cannot be of much help having regard to the constitution under which we are working. It is the Honourable Member Dr. Khare and the Government of India that count. Now, I hope my Honourable friend, after this Bill is passed which will I trust be done in a few minutes, will not take the view that he has done his duty. The time for action will come after the Bill is passed. The passing of a Bill is more or less a nominal thing. Again, the Bill itself is not sufficient if we are to awaken the sense of responsibility in the Union Government which it owes to its Indian South African nationals. Speaking generally, my comment on the policy of the Government of India is that the Government of India's policy always consists of defence; they are always on the defensive, they never think of taking the offensive. That is a very wrong policy. The best form of defence is to take the offensive and that unfortunately the Government of India have never done. My Honourable friend can say that there was no occasion for the Government of India to take the offensive so far as our relations with South Africans are concerned. That occasion was, if I may be excused for making a personal reference, when I was in that country and I put all my heart into the question of popularising the idea of giving franchise to Indians. I worked very hard for two and a half years. I addressed scores of meetings. A number of Indo-European Associations favoured this movement and that was just the proper time because the Native Franchise Bill had been passed. The South African is a manly fellow. Whatever his attitude may be towards our countrymen, the South African loves a fight. He loves giving a blow and does not mind receiving a blow in return. But the Government of India were frightened by his manliness. My attitude towards these people was that if they gave me a violent blow, I gave them an equally violent blow within 24 hours. I do not know what they thought of me but the general impression is that I got on very well with these fellows. That was the time when the Government of India ought to have concentrated on this question. I am not going to disclose what happened. I can say this that the Honourable Member in charge never stopped me from pursuing the policy I was pursuing. But my successor whom the Government of India appointed was a member of the Indian Civil Service and they knew that if another public man was to succeed me, they could not have their own way. Therefore, a man of the Indian Civil Service was appointed who would take his orders submissively from the Government of India without exercising his own judgment.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Did he upset your schemes?

Sir Syed Raza Ali: That gentleman was an Indian and he is a friend of mine. But whether the holder of the post is an Indian or an Englishman, nothing turns on that. Every member of the Indian Civil Service they appoint will wear the colour that is given to his political views by the Government of India. It will not be so with a public man. A public man after all is a public man. After five years, today is the first day that I have come across the word 'franchise' used by the present High Commissioner for India. Never before was the word 'franchise' used either by the High Commissioner or by the Government of India.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): This is the third reading of the Bill and the Honourable Member should not deal with matters outside the Bill.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: This Bill is a large part of the Government of India...

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): This is not the time for this kind of speech.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: The point is this that if the Government of India know what they are going to do and how they are going to protect the interests of Indians from those Dominions, Colonies and Possessions which may take it into their heads to pass anti-Indian legislation, they have got to be quite clear and definite on the subject. My impression is that this Bill, important though it may be, only touches the fringe of the main problem. The main problem is much bigger. So far as the Bill is concerned, the most important thing that has got to be done by the Government of India, and the sooner it is done the better, is to make rules under that clause which empowers the Government of India to do so. If they are dilatory on this question, if they procrastinate and take a jolly long time to make rules, that would defeat the object of the Bill entirely. The whole subject was discussed the other day. I believe the debate that took place on most aspects of the question would be vivid to the mind of the Honourable Dr. Khare and I hope he will take action on the entire problem and will also avail himself of the rule-making power that has been entrusted to the Government by this Bill. This Bill is a very short measure; it is a halting measure, somewhat of a hesitating measure, but if the Government of India supplement the provisions of this Bill by taking courageous action in other directions, it may be that we will still go down but I hope in that case we will go down fighting.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I had no desire to make a speech on this particular occasion, but as I had not the right to make a second speech on the last amendment that was defeated by the House, I desire to make a very few observations for the purpose of knowing from the Government as to the method which they propose to adopt in framing rules regarding the enforcement of punishments. It took my breath away when my Honourable friend Sir Vithal Chandavarkar described himself as a lawyer. The attitude taken up by the Honourable Dr. Khare is excusable because he is not a lawyer. He said that we will have to regulate our punishments according to the scale of punishments prescribed by any offending colony.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I am a surgeon.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Very well. He should not venture to open his mouth on such questions. It is in a spirit of enquiry that I am making a few observations. Do I take it that there will be different types of punishments prescribed for the same kind of offence, if committed in respect of different colonies? For instance, if the infringement of any particular rule which may be prescribed by us takes place in the case of, say, a citizen of a particular colony, he will have to pay a fine of, say, one rupee, but if that same offence is committed by a citizen of another colony, he may be given a few stripes! Is that what is intended? If that is so, I should very much like to hear what the ex-Law Member of the Government of India has to say, and what he thinks about this scheme, and whether he is aware of any precedent in the whole legislative system of the world which might be cited in support of such a fantastic idea.

The next thing is this. We know that different codes prescribe only the maximum punishment in respect of different offences. Now, Sir, the code of a particular Dominion may have prescribed the maximum punishment in respect of the infringement of a rule which may be operating there, against which we want to retaliate here. Now, Sir, is my Honourable friend Sir Vithal Chandavarkar going to put forward the suggestion that in so far as the punishment to be inflicted in this country, must correspond exactly to the punishment which is permissible to be inflicted in the offending Dominion, we had better send the records of the particular case to the Government of that Dominion for advice as to what should be the punishment that is to be passed, having regard to the circumstances of the case, because otherwise the principle of strict reciprocity cannot be observed?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The House has already rejected that amendment.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: I want information as to how the Bill as now amended is going to work in practice so far as this aspect is concerned?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member may make constructive suggestions.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: There is just one more observation and I will resume my seat. Does the Honourable Member suggest that there should be strict reciprocity in these matters of punishment in each individual case, and would he go so far as to give directions to the Magistrate that the punishment to be passed in a particular case must not exceed so much, or must be in the nature of a particular sentence in order to conform to his remarkable ideas of reciprocity? I definitely want information from whomsoever may vouchsafe it from the Government Benches—it may be the Honourable the Law Secretary, or it may be the ex-Professor of Law whom I find on the front Bench in the person of my Honourable friend Dr. Ambedkar,—as to what exact course the Government is going to pursue in this matter.

Sir F. E. James (Madras: European): Sir, I rise not only to congratulate my Honourable friend the Member for Indians Overseas on having piloted the Bill so far but also to clear up a misunderstanding as to our position on this Bill which apparently yesterday's debate upon clause 4 of the Bill revealed. The House will remember that this Group took a certain view of the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Sir Syed Raza Ali to reduce the period of exemption, from directions issued by the Central Government under that clause, from twelve months to six months. We took that view on purely practical grounds, a view which was incidentally shared by the Honourable Member for Defence. Sir Syed Raza Ali himself agreed when I said that in opposing his amendment, we were not doing so on the ground of any principle involved in the Bill. I remember my Honourable friend agreed and accepted that position.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: What all I said was that no question of principle is involved.

Sir F. E. James: My Honourable friend accepted that. But subsequent speakers, and in particular my Honourable friend Sir Vithal Narayan Chandavarkar persisted in suggesting that our attitude on what we regarded as a minor point modified, qualified and toned down the genuineness of our support of the Bill in particular and our attitude to the cause of Indians overseas in general. Now, Sir, I submit that that is hardly fair to the record of the Group in this House. It is true that yesterday we opposed this particular amendment. The Government of India itself did not know its own mind; it wobbled so much that it very nearly fell over itself. But when we realised that the feeling in the House was strong on this matter, we advised the Government Whip that we would withdraw our objections to the amendment, and eventually the Government accepted the amendment. Now, Sir, I should be sorry if any one in this House went away with any misunderstanding of our position as a result of the discussion on this small point. I should be very sorry if my Honourable friend Sir Vithal Narayan Chandavarkar, who is an old and valued friend of mine, were under the slightest misapprehension as to our position on this Bill. He has not been a Member of the House for a very long time, but I would remind him that for the last 15 or 20 years this Party has supported without reserve or qualification the cause of Indians overseas in this Legislature. I myself have on many an occasion asserted, as I did the other day, that if these difficult racial problems are not capable of solution within the British Commonwealth and Empire then those institutions will, as soon as their component parts secure their freedom, cease to be an association of various races and nationalities, and will become a commonwealth of white races alone. That would, in my view, be a great tragedy. A great ideal in which many of us have firmly believed, and still believe, would be lost for ever. This Party, of course, is entitled to express its views, as I hope the House will realise, as to the methods to be employed in dealing with these difficult problems, and the manner and the time of their operation. But I do trust that the House will in future realise that such views on what I may call the minor and practical issues not affecting principle, do not qualify or modify in any way whatever our general attitude to the problems relating to Indians overseas. I most sincerely trust that the House will accept this unequivocal statement of our declared policy. It is not new, it is only a repetition. It is in the spirit of a policy which has now been pursued so long by this Party that it has almost developed into a tradition, it is in the spirit of that policy that we unreservedly support this Bill and hope that the House will shortly pass it into law.

Sir Vithal N. Chandavarkar: Sir, I would not have addressed the House had not Mr. Neogy and Sir Frederick James referred to a few observations that I made in the course of the debate. With regard to Sir Frederick James I should like to assure him that I had not the slightest intention to cast any slur on the honesty of purpose of the European Group. It is true that I have been a Member of this House for only a very short period, but I may assure him that ever since I began to understand the English language, I have been following the proceedings of this august Assembly very closely as also the proceedings of my own Provincial Council. I was also present at a meeting held in Bombay Town Hall in December 1913 when we met to protest against the policy of the South African Government. The meeting was held under the presidency of His Highness the Aga Khan and all the old stalwarts of Bombay in those days were present, and among these stalwarts were influential members of the European community in the city of Bombay. In their speeches and their attitude, their indignation was as strong as that of any Indian. Those of us who come from Bombay know the valued support that we have received from the European community in these matters and also in several other matters affecting the welfare of this country. Whatever may be the experience of other centres, those of us who come from Bombay, whatever differences we might have with the Europeans on other important matters, have had the privilege and pleasure of working whole-heartedly with the Europeans of our city in this matter.

As for Mr. Neogy I am afraid he misunderstood me. As far as the general principle is concerned, I am whole-heartedly with him that we should not leave the question of punishment to Government in the exercise of their rule-making powers. I do not refer to any other cases; I refer to the punishment to be provided for offences. As to what the quantum of punishment should be in particular cases, even a first-year student of the Law College knows that the matter is entirely in the hands of the courts and not in the hands of the Executive Government. The legislature can only provide the maximum punishment. If the amendment in question had been accepted, the punishment provided in that amendment would have been the maximum punishment and the hands of Government would have been tied. Even if Government wanted to enhance the maximum punishment, they would have had to come to the Legislature which meets at intervals twice or thrice a year, for amending the law. But, as I understand the situation, as a result of the defeat of this amendment the hands of Government are free and by the exercise of their rule-making power they can adjust their policy to the conditions of different colonies, and provide suitable maximum punishments. As for the awarding of punishment I do not think it is necessary.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Sir, may I interrupt my Honourable friend? Is it his intention that the maximum punishment to be prescribed by rule in respect of one and the same offence should be different in the case of the different offending colonies?

Sir Vithal N. Chandavarkar: That is a matter of policy which I take it Government will decide. But if the South African Government provides for an imposition of a fine of £500, I would like my Government to provide for a fine of Rs. 7,500. If any other colony is not so harsh and is disposed to be more lenient, it is open to Government to make a different rule.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I have the Honourable Law Member's opinion as regards the juristic principle enunciated by the Honourable Member?

Sir Vithal N. Chandavarkar: It is not a question of any mere abstract principle of legislation or a penal measure. We are not dealing with a penal code dealing with offences of moral turpitude. It is a question of mere retaliation, and as to what the extent of that retaliation should be I will support any provision which leaves Government a free hand, whether you believe in their honesty of purpose or not. In the present case, I, for one, am prepared to trust the Honourable the Overseas Member to safeguard the interests of the country.

Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I rise to congratulate the Honourable the Overseas Member for acting so quickly and clearly in this matter. Treasury Benches have acted in a manner which will satisfy the aspirations of the people. Very often with regard to the question of Indians overseas Government have respected the wishes of the people, and if we had some differences with Government that was because they would not enforce measures which the people desired. Our difference with Government in this case was with regard to the period of six months and 12 months. There also Government clearly said that their intention was not that it should not come as early as possible but that there were administrative difficulties, and I have no reason to believe that they are not as anxious as we are to move in the matter. There has also been a lot of discussion with regard to the penalty but there also it is clear that Government are anxious to inflict such penalties as the case would deserve. Many of us of course feel that if it is in the Act it will strengthen the hands of Government; and my plea as a businessman is that even now if they take our advice it will strengthen their hands and enable them to carry out their wishes. I agree entirely with Sir Vithal Chandavarkar that in Bombay as also in other parts of India our European friends,—though I like better to call them our British friends,—have been very fair and sympathetic with regard to this question of the treatment of Indians overseas. And I believe they can exert a good deal of influence over their people in England as well as in South Africa and help to avoid the prevailing bitterness. Sir, I once again congratulate Government on having carried out at once the desires of this House and acted seriously in this matter of the treatment of Indians in South Africa.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Sir, I am glad that Government did not lose any time in bringing this measure before the House and they realised the feeling of the country in regard to this matter, and I whole-heartedly support this Bill. We had our differences with regard to certain clauses but we abide by the decision of the House as declared by the voting. I do not want to go into the details of the different clauses as have been adopted here.

I am very glad that my Honourable friend, Sir Frederick James, has made the position of his Group very clear, and I am glad that they are at one with the rest of the Indians in this matter and they will give their wholehearted support as far as the treatment of Indians in the Colonies and Dominions is concerned. I am also very thankful and grateful to Sir Frederick James for the revelation which he has made, namely, that the Government was guided by their views in withdrawing the objection which they had proposed. As soon as the Government found that the European Group had no objection, they accepted the amendment of this House. It is a great revelation indeed and I am glad that Sir Frederick James has enlightened this House that the Government is always guided by the views of the European Group even in matters on which the Indian section feels very strongly, and they can only accept the amendments if the European Group has got no objection. The House ought to be very grateful to him for knowing this secret understanding between the Government of India and the European Group.

Another suggestion which I would like to make is this: The House will remember that in the beginning of the war—probably it was in 1940—this House showed great leniency to the South Africans in not raising any objection to their getting into the Army, and I suppose there are many people from South Africa who have got Emergency Commissions in this country. In giving effect to the provisions of this Bill, I suggest that the Government should not forget this fact. The feeling of Indians is that these people should not be placed over their head as officers. The Government should see that either these people, who have got the King's Commission or the Emergency Commission for the duration of war, should be sent back from the Indian Regiments to the British Regiments or to any other Regiments—I have no suggestions to make in this respect—but they should certainly be removed from every position in which they are in any capacity working as officers over Indians. That position we do not want to see. As they hold Commissions and are British subjects I cannot make a proposal that Commission should be taken away from them, because that is a service to the King and the Empire and they have to remain in that capacity. I only want that these people should be transferred to such positions where no Indian may feel that he is placed under any man from South Africa.

Another suggestion I would like to make is that those people who gave their nationality in the beginning as 'domiciled in South Africa' should not be allowed to change it now, and any plea that domicile has been changed since then should not be accepted. Whatever nationality was given at the time of recruitment or getting the Commission should remain as absolute for the present until further decision is made by this House.

These were the suggestions I had to make. The courtesy shown by this House in the matter of treatment of their nationals has not been properly responded to by the South Africans and they should not be allowed to utilize that any more to their own benefit and to our disadvantage. They must realize that we feel that they have not correspondingly shown us the same treatment which was shown to them, and therefore we want to withdraw that. With these few words I support the Bill as it emerges now.

Sardar Sant Singh (West Punjab: Sikh): Sir, I support this Bill. I have watched with interest the first activity of the Honourable Member whom we had the privilege of associating with on the Bench just opposite to that where he is sitting today. The change from that Bench to this Bench probably has been a revolutionary one, and the first Bill that he has been called upon to pilot in this House is a battle between the two feelings which I am sure he possesses today: One is the feeling of independence which he used to show from the Opposition Benches and the other is the re-reading of the Government of India Act by which he has come to realize that the Government of India is not a sovereign body. It is a subordinate body and as such it takes its inspiration not from this House or from the people of this country but from the Secretary of State sitting in England. Conflicting feelings of this sort must have modified him a great deal when framing this particular Bill.

There is no doubt that this country is in a very unhappy position in regard to its nationals living abroad, particularly in South Africa. It is always at critical moments that the South African Government moves to place more restrictions upon the liberty and the freedom of the Indians living there. It is surprising to note why the British people and the American people and those Governments which are in alliance with the British people at this critical juncture have permitted one of themselves to take a measure which can be said, without any fear of contradiction, to help Hitler rather than the cause of Allies. To go against the nationals of this country who are living in an Empire which is said to be 'Commonwealth of Nations' is really to help those who are against us and who are our enemies. However, that step has been taken. An appeal has been made to us that we should not be guilty of the same act as the South Africans are. There is a good deal of force in this argument, but may I ask those who make this appeal whether they realize that the courtesy and oriental culture which is behind such an appeal has been understood in that country as a sign of weakness and not as a sign of greatness. In a country where such considerations are taken to be our weakness, we are afraid we are compelled to take action which will show that we are not weak but we have got some self-respect and we can retaliate also. What form this retaliation is to take is a matter left entirely in the hands of the Executive Government.

The very fact that his Bill was passed in the last Session of the Assembly and it has been amended today, should give an impression to the world at large that India does not mean to remain at standstill but is bent on taking some action. Certain aspects of retaliation have been indicated by several Honourable speakers who have preceded me. I am at one with them. But may I ask Honourable Members that without taking into consideration the question whether proportionately we can hit back as strongly as South Africans can hit Indians, will it not be the right way to hit back even if it is to hit them mildly?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Is the Honourable Member speaking with reference to this Bill?

Sardar Sant Singh: I am referring to the Bill. Hitting back is an indication that we refuse to accept this humiliation lying down. There are certain imports from South Africa to this country and vice versa. Isn't it possible to stop them? The other method which I want to endorse is the view expressed by my Honourable friend who preceded me. As regards commissions in the army, it may not be practicable politics to say that these commissions should not be taken, but it is practical politics that they should be transferred to other units. At the same time I would suggest that the Government should adopt the policy of refusing to issue fresh commissions.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Which Government should refuse issuing Commissions?

Sardar Sant Singh: The Government of India.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: But the commission is given by the King.

Sardar Sant Singh: But it is not without consultation with the Indian Government. I assume that they have a voice in such matters and they will assert themselves.

The point I want to make clear is that it is not a very gratifying thing to know that the Secretary of State of India has told us that he can do nothing in the matter. It should be pressed upon the Secretary of State that the Indian feeling in this matter is very strong and the Colonial Secretary should be asked to interfere and stop any further disqualifications on Indians.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: You mean the Dominion Secretary?

Sardar Sant Singh: Yes. I would therefore ask the Government of India to be up and doing and say to the South Africans that the Government of India is taking this matter very seriously and they mean business this time.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): The other day I congratulated my Honourable friend, Dr. Khare, on the expeditious manner in which he had sought to implement the recommendations of the conference that met here a few weeks ago. The Bill which he placed before us was good in certain parts, and it was our intention to improve this Bill to such an extent that it would be good in all respects. Unfortunately, there has been a considerable difference of opinion between the Legislature and the Executive and I am sorry to find that my Honourable friend succumbs to the wiles of the Executive and ignores the views of the elected Members of this House. Sir, this is a typical bureaucratic attitude. I wish him success in his career, but I hope in future he will look to the elected Members of this House for an inspiration and not to the nominated bloc or the European Group. Sir, this Bill ought to have been further improved. But something is better than nothing and I have to support the motion, though not quite willingly, which has been moved by my Honourable friend Dr. Khare.

Maulvi Syed Murtaza Sahib Bahadur (South Madras: Muhammadan): I associate myself with my previous speakers in congratulating my Honourable friend, Dr. Khare, who was once a non-official Member on this side and who has now the honour of being an official Member.

Sir, this question of Indians in South Africa being ill-treated has been a burning question for the last three decades or so. I may be permitted to make certain observations regarding this. This could not have reached such a pitch as it has, had the Government of India and the British Government taken an active part in mending matters. They regarded Indians as nonentities. As a matter of fact, they still regard Indians as "nobodys" and that is why our cause is being ignored, not only by this Government but also by the British Government. Therefore it is that we have to congratulate the Government at least now, and particularly the Honourable Dr. Khare at having introduced this measure. At the same time, Sir, I cannot help passing a few remarks. The amendments proposed by some of our Honourable friends as the House is aware were modest ones. Only two of them were approved of by the Government. The others have been rejected and that is why we do not feel very happy over the passing of this Bill into an Act. Sir, I do not want to occupy any more time of the House.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Sonthal Parganas: Non-Muhammadan): It is the general practice that during the Third Reading of a Bill the Honourable Member in charge is congratulated and the feeling is expressed that the Act may prove to be a good one. But on this occasion certain amendments have been rejected by Government and it is due to this that there have been some harsh speeches. Some have already suggested how the Act should be put into operation. I have nothing much to add. We have seen the anxiety of Sir Vithal Chandavarkar for arming the Executive Government with unlimited power so that Government may be able to take proper steps in due course. But my own apprehension is this. When there was a hint that Dr. Khare was not a lawyer, he said that he was a surgeon, indicating thereby that his operating knife would be better put into action when this Act was brought into force. My fear is that in the company in which he is or in the atmosphere in which he is, he may be reluctant to use his knife as he has indicated, and a time may come when, if the Government of South Africa gives a slap on the face of an Indian, he may be inclined to reciprocate it by imprinting a kiss on the cheek of the South African.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: Kick is the proper thing, not kiss. I thought you meant a kick.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: My only apprehension is that there may be that sort of reciprocity. I do not want to say anything excepting, as remarked by other speakers, that we only wish that it may be put into operation in the spirit in which it has been adopted. As our Hindi saying goes:

"Nahi Mamoo se Kana Mamoo Bhala".

When there is no maternal uncle it is better to have an one-eyed maternal uncle than to have none. When there is a prospect of none, it is better to have a Reciprocity Act-like this, and I hope it will be put into operation in the spirit in which it has been supported. With these words, I congratulate the Honourable Member.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Let the question be now put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the question be now put".

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I must say that when my Honourable friend, Dr. Banerjee, charges me with succumbing to wiles or things of that sort—I do not know what he means by wiles—he is indulging in mid-Summer day-dreaming. Let me assure him point blank and frankly that there have been no wiles of any kind and no succumbing. Let him disabuse his mind as soon as he may if he likes to do so. Then, another friend over there was very glad that perhaps in my person he has got a kana mamoo and that it is better to have an one-eyed uncle than to have none at all.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: May I explain? Kana mama is the Act and not yourself.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I stand corrected. It does not matter. I think this philosophy which he has come to adopt on his return from jail and rejoining this House will perhaps find a better field elsewhere. I congratulate him for this change in his attitude and I hope he will appeal to other people, I mean, his other friends also. This philosophy, which he has already adopted with success, means, in short, that half a loaf is better than no bread—a very good philosophy in life. Let him appeal to other people, his friends, who are outside somewhere, I do not know where they are.

In this debate no new points have been raised that necessitate any reply from me, but I have been asked specifically by my Honourable friend over there to reply to a certain point, which I will do here. He has asked me as to what is the practice in other countries? Am I going to consult other countries and send some representatives from here to those countries where such an Act may be in operation? My Honourable friend is not in his place, I am sorry. But, I must say that so far as I am aware there is no Reciprocity Act in any other country which he can think of. India is the only country which has the misfortune to be required to have this legislation passed of a reciprocity nature. It is a misfortune, we should be sorry for it. Therefore, if there is no Act in other countries I cannot tell him what is the practice in those other countries.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: I do not want to interrupt my Honourable friend. He is not right. To the best of my recollection there is an Immigration Act in South Africa and there is an Immigration Act in force in the United States of America, both of which are based on principles of reciprocity in matters of immigration.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: This is not immigration. This Reciprocity Act prescribes the treatment to be meted out to the nationals of those countries here.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: That is what I mentioned.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: This Act gives power to Government to impose same or similar disabilities upon the nationals of those countries or colonies or dominions where some disabilities are imposed upon our nationals. It is a fact that treatment meted out to our nationals in those countries or Dominions is different in different countries, and we have to make rules which have necessarily to be different for each of those countries, and the punishment which we will impose will be different. That is all I can say. As I said before, I am a surgeon, I am not a lawyer.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: Use your knife against South Africa.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I know when to use a knife and when to stop using a knife also. You cannot use a knife without knowing its consequences. You should not kill the patient. I will say that if anybody has got a very big abscess I will make a deep and big incision. If it is a small abscess I will make a small incision. But if he has got gangrene, I will necessarily amputate.

Sir Syed Raza Ali: This is a case of gangrene.

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: That should be left to the Government. I assure the House that when we frame rules pertaining to these various things we shall certainly be advised by our legal advisers and Government will frame them in consultation with the Legal Advisers. I hope that is sufficient for the House and I do not think there need be any misgiving on the part of any Member whatsoever and I appeal to the House to pass the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE DELHI UNIVERSITY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. J. D. Tyson (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Delhi University Act, 1922, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

When this matter was last before the House I promised that I would send the Bill to the Delhi University and place the opinions of the Delhi University before the Select Committee when the Committee met. The Committee met at the end of May and had before it the opinions of the Court of the University, of the Executive and Academic Councils sitting together, and of the Vice-Chancellor. The Report is before the House. I propose to let it speak for itself. I would only like to call attention to the great degree of unanimity that has been achieved, up to the Select Committee stage at all events, with regard to this Bill, unanimity not only about the changes that we should make in the Delhi University Act, but, also about the things that we should leave standing in the parent Act.

As regards the changes, which were, of course, the only matters that figure in the Select Committee's report. I would draw attention to the unanimous character of the decisions arrived at in the Select Committee on such important matters as the method by which the whole-time Vice-Chancellor, if there is to be one, should be chosen, as to the composition of the Committee of Selection in the University and as to the authority and machinery for according or withdrawing recognition of colleges. On one major issue in the Bill, the three-year degree course, there was unanimity with one exception, one dissentient. The House will, of course, give due weight to the expression of misgivings of the dissentient member of the Select Committee, taking into account his great experience in University matters elsewhere; but I hope that the time will come when Dr. Banerjee will see that his misgivings are unjustified and his pessimism was not called for and that he will live to admit the mistake.

I should like to make one more observation. The Committee as it met was not quite complete. We were, through no fault of our own, somewhat circumscribed as to our choice of dates for the Select Committee. We fixed a date on which we had good reason to believe we could have the attendance of all the members of the Committee. Unfortunately, my friend Sir F. E. James was unable, with his colleagues, to tear himself away from the scenes of the trials and triumphs of the Eighth Army in the Middle East and at the time that we got word that he could not be back by the date fixed, it was impossible for us to change our dates. I very much regret that we had to sit in his absence. We should very much have valued his great abilities in our committee. I do not propose to say anything more at this stage. I move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Delhi University Act, 1922, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani (Tirhut Division: Muhammadan): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of obtaining opinion thereon by the 31st December, 1943."

Sir, you will remember that when the Bill in its original form was presented to the House I moved a similar motion. The Bill was referred to the Select Committee but I now find that very great changes have been made, which necessitate that the Bill should be circulated for eliciting opinion thereon. This University is called a residential university but if we look into the methods adopted by the University we find that it has none of the characteristics of such universities. It ought to be the concern not only of the professors and teachers but also the concern of the taught and the parents who send their children for education and there are other interests in the country which ought to have their say in the matter of this University. The universities in India, when they were first started, were particularly meant to produce clerks and ministerial officers. Now those days are gone and the country does not any more stand in need of such requirements. The country requires progress of education in every sense and keeping this in view various changes are required to be made in the constitution of the universities particularly of the type of residential universities. Here, this Bill, although it is called an amendment of the Act of 1922, is so far as I can see, a new Bill. A number of new statutes have been substituted and many new matters have been brought in and the courses of study for degree and diploma are going to be changed. This is the first type that we find in India and therefore it requires much greater consideration by the people and particularly by the citizens of this province. This Bill does not affect Delhi only but it affects the country at large in many ways. Therefore we should be very cautious before we pass on to consider the various clauses of the Bill. We know from the last census that the progress of education in India is very slow and, subject to correction, I say that it is practically illiteracy which reigns over the country. In a country where the illiteracy is about 87 per cent., is it not pitiable that during the last hundreds of years we have not been able to spread education in such a way as to make the citizens of India, even half of them, to be literates? Now, the view of the Universities in India should be for the progress of education. They should impart education not only of the type which was required in the old days when the British rule was established in this country but we should give education on various subjects. The country and the Government of India as well have felt all of a sudden the necessity of technical education and they are trying their level best to achieve that end. I should say that during the course of a year thousands of technicians have been produced and with much rapidity and their merits are not of an inferior kind. When the time for this necessity came, the Government became alert. So, when legislating on a matter like this, we should keep all these things in view. In this measure I do not find anything helpful to advance the type of education which the country needs the most, namely, industrial and technical education. Very meagre provision has been made in this Bill on this behalf. The country stands in need of suggestions in regard to this type of education, so the legislature may realise how far their suggestions will be of use to the country. These are the days when we should not be content with mere theories

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member can continue his speech after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) in the Chair.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: I was speaking this morning for sending the Bill for circulation. This is the time when we should have regard for the needs of the country as a whole. In this connection, I want to draw the attention of the House to the Education Report in India 1938-39, which is the latest issued by the Department of Education. It says among other things that considerations among others necessitate a changed attitude towards educational problems. Refer page 27 of the Education Report, Government of India 1938-39. It speaks on: (a) an increasing desire among educationists and others to bring about changes in the educational system in view of the altered conditions of life, (b) the growing volume of unemployment among the educated classes, (c) the emphasis laid on purely literary forms of instruction in schools, (d) the inadvisability of too frequent examinations and so on and so forth. There are about eight or nine suggestions which in the view of the Central Board of Education have to be considered now, and these are the right times to consider all the necessary changes required to be made in the legislation of universities.

Now, Sir, this legislation is before us, and we find here that those views of the Central Advisory Board of Education have been ignored. Therefore there is no hurry for taking the Select Committee report. I suggest that it should be circulated. At the time when the Bill was introduced, it was said that the opinions of all persons and parties interested in the welfare of the Delhi University will be considered. Up till now, so far at least I am concerned, I have no knowledge of the opinions of either experts or of anybody interested in education. In the absence of such opinions, I am justified in tabling my motion for circulation of the Bill again. This University was founded in 1922 as a residential University and from the results achieved up till now, we are very much disappointed and people here, on account of the impending changes proposed to be made in the University, have sent their wards to other Universities, and even an Intermediate College like the Ramjas College has got itself disaffiliated from the Delhi University and got affiliated to Allahabad University. This University has just imposed a qualifying test which has proved very disastrous to the students in securing admission to the degree class which is going to be three years hereafter. If you have any consideration for the results of the admission during the various years, you will find they are disappointing. During 1935-36, the admission of students was 2,344; in 1936-37, it was 2,172; in 1937-38, it was 2,279. I cannot say what is the number in the year under review, that is 1943-44. Having regard to the results, it is not encouraging. We know that a lot of taxpayer's money is being spent on the maintenance of the Delhi University. About a year ago we made a special grant for this University, probably buildings. After all we did make this grant for the maintenance of this University.

Having regard to the report of the Select Committee we are very much disappointed that there has been no improvement of any kind, except one which may be called a retrograde or onward step, and that is the three years' degree course which has been or is going to be introduced here. It has frightened students who have taken refuge in other universities and the fate of those who appeared at the qualifying examination is well known to every one; perhaps only 4 or 5 or something like that came out successful in the qualifying test. I find here that the interests of professors and officers have been safeguarded and adequate provision has been made for them but not much attention seems to have been paid to the needs of the present and future generations of young men. Therefore it requires the views of various interests to be offered on it. We are having an amendment of the Act and it is our duty to see that it is amended to suit the needs of the students. There also we have been disappointed.

Recently the Central Advisory Board of Education have set up five kinds of expert committees one of which will inquire into the system of examinations prevailing in the different Indian universities. That committee is now going on with its work and the result, so far as this University is concerned, will be known by the Examination Committee's Report. The determination of the kind of examination to be introduced into a university should wait till the views of this expert committee are known. It is not desirable that in the name of a residential university we should have an examining body. After all this University is an examining body like other universities; a certain number of students are enrolled every year who receive education and are examined. No particular system of examination has been provided here. In the west there is not one single university which only examines the boys; they give such kind of education as would enable the students to have knowledge of the subject taught. Here such training is given as makes the students grope in the dark and they do not know what has been taught to them. They are accustomed to cramming and somehow or other pass the examinations. It is very discouraging and very hard on the younger generation; their whole spirit is crushed by this system of examinations. For instance, a student prepares and sits for a certain test. He passes in all subjects except one, but in the next year he has to appear in all the subjects in which he has previously passed as well as the one in which he failed; and it may so happen that he passes in the subject in which he had originally failed but fails in some other subject, and he has to sit for the whole examination again. How long should such things be allowed to continue? Is it fair or just that once a student is tested in a certain subject and found efficient he should again be made to sit for a test in that very subject? No reasonable person can accept that theory or support this kind of examination. There is no system of compartmental examination as in the Western universities where boys who fail in one subject have to undergo another test only in that subject, and that also not after a year but only after a few months so that his progress is not impaired. He has to wait only for a certain period and during that time he is not prevented from going and joining the higher classes. Here too in the law classes a student is allowed to go on to the final course even without passing the preliminary examination but before being allowed to be declared as passed he must pass the preliminary examination.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City, Non-Muhammadan Urban): What provision of the Bill is that in?

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: There is no provision here. I want that some kind of provision should be made here.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Is that not a part of the administration of the University?

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: If we provide in this legislation that they shall have to frame their statute in such a way that it shall include these facilities, it will improve the Bill considerably. All these schemes are wanting here and I simply urge that no consideration is being given in any university in India to encourage the younger generation, and all efforts are made—whether intentional or unintentional, I cannot say—to crush the spirits of the younger generation. Sir, you know the way in which the professors and teachers behave towards their pupils and you may compare their behaviour with those in this profession in other countries. There they treat their pupils like their sons on equal status when they are out of the college, whereas here it is just the reverse. Here the teachers and professors try to pass themselves as masters in the real sense of the word and not as well-wishers like a father to a son. In no university you will find that spirit here. These elementary things are wanting in our institutions and unless all these things—though minor in themselves—are taken seriously into consideration, the progress of education in this country will go in the backward direction notwithstanding all the increase in expenditure on education. We know that the Government of India and other bodies prepare reports. These reports may be of use to the Government to show to the outside world that various Provincial Governments and the Central Government spend such considerable amounts of money over imparting education to the people of this country, but that is only for propaganda purpose and not for the actual benefit of the country.

If you will compare the results in the sphere of education, you will find that it still requires about 384 years more to educate each and every one in this country. In the progress report for the year 1938-39 on page 3 it is stated:

"The percentage of people under instruction in all recognized and unrecognized institutions has increased from 5.38 to 5.64."

That is to say, during the year 1938-39 the progress was 26 per cent. only. Calculating on this basis, it will require 384 years to give literacy to the people of this country. Well, the Government may therefore come forward and say that they have not so far spent 384 years in this country and therefore we should wait and see. According to the last census, the progress which we have made in respect of literacy so far is only 13 per cent. of the population, which is very discouraging.

I want to place before the House a few things more. Here the composition of the University includes certain kinds of interests, but in my opinion there are many interests which are left out and some interests are inadequately represented. I will give you an indication. So far about 96 amendments have been tabled in respect of this Bill. That shows that there is a great deal of difference of opinion in regard to different clauses of the Bill and it should be circulated for opinion. I do not think there is any great hurry about the passage of the Bill. On the last occasion I said clearly that unless there is some interest to be protected or there is someone waiting behind the screen whose interests are to be safeguarded we should not hastily pass this Bill. In saying that I am not imputing any motives to the Government, but I am just saying that it may be like that. What we should have foremost in our mind is that we are dealing with something which concerns the youths of the future generation, and therefore even if there are any other interests they can be sacrificed. I, therefore, say that if we have any desire to change the legislation, we should wait and have the opinion of experts whom we have appointed—and by the use of word "we" I mean the Government of India and we should not sit on judgment at this stage. Let the University run in its own way.

3 P. M. The only amendment necessary, in my opinion, is to have a salaried Vice-Chancellor and nothing more. In all the universities a similar thing should run. Then it would give facilities to the guardians and to the youths of the country.

I have said that certain interests have suffered on account of their inadequate representation on the University. There are several kinds of bodies which guide the destinies of the Delhi University, e.g., Readers and Professors, Members of the Court, of the Executive Council and of the Academic Council: there are the Faculties of Arts, of Science, of Law and others.

The University was founded in 1922 and during the 21 years that have elapsed no adequate representation has been given to a section of people whose percentage here is above 40 per cent. I am not introducing any communal colour. But so far as the Muslims are concerned they have received most inadequate representation and in support of my contention I want to cite before the House certain figures:

Out of ten officers in the University there is not a single Muslim. Out of 30 Professors and Readers there are only 5 Muslims. Out of 123 Members of the Court only 24 are Muslims. These have crept in on account of the nomination system introduced by the Chancellor of the University. Out of an Executive Council of 24, only three are Muslims. Out of an Academic Council of 44 only six are Muslims. Out of 25 members of the Faculty of Arts only 4 are Muslims. Out of 24 members of the Faculty of Science only 3 are Muslims.

In short there are 332 seats of which 44 are given to Muslims, the percentage being in the neighbourhood of 10.2, I will only say that this section of the population deserves adequate representation.

I should have thought that some kind of provision should have been made for technical education upon which the various reports of the Central Advisory Board of Education have stressed. In view of the absence of any provision for technical education I do not think that there is any necessity for any amendment of this nature. But if the Government is bent upon having the Act amended, then they should consult the various classes of people and various classes of interest affected, as to what kind of education they want. After hearing those representations, then it will be fair and just for the Government to pass any kind of amendment with additions or subtractions as the case may be, and the expenditure on this university may then be justified. With these few words I move my motion and I hope that the House will at least agree with me that there is necessity for changing the scope of the University to the extent required by the new type of education as suggested by the Central Advisory Board of Education, and this can only be done by sending the Bill for circulation for getting the opinions of people affected.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Amendment moved:

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of obtaining opinion thereon by the 31st December 1943."

The next motion, if it is moved at all, is Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad's motion for recommittal to the same Select Committee. Does he want to move it?

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Yes.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Before he moves it the Chair must be satisfied that that motion is not a dilatory motion. Prima facie it is. That is why I ask Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad to satisfy the Chair that it is not. I might tell him how I should like to proceed, because if he can satisfy the Chair on this ground, first, that this course is rendered necessary by the manner in which the Select Committee has handled the Bill—that is one of the grounds on which this motion can be moved. Another alternative ground is that unforeseen circumstances have since emerged after the Select Committee reported. Under either one or both of those grounds the motion will not be dilatory.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: There are certain points in the Bill which I find I cannot improve by only amending certain clauses. They require thorough consideration and that is the reason why I suggested this particular amendment.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): That is all your ground?

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Yes.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): I do not think that is a proper ground for allowing this dilatory motion.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs—Non-Muhammadan Urban): But he can speak on the main motion and the circulation motion?

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Certainly. Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, before I mention the grounds on account of which I differ from the recommendations in this Bill I would like to submit one point as the background, and that is, the University is intended for the benefit of the people living here. We should realise in our mind what kind of people we have to deal with. Here in Delhi we have got a very large population connected with the Government of India. There are persons who come and go. They are drawn from different provinces. They stay here for a certain number of years and they may be transferred to any part of the country. When we revise the constitution of the University we must keep in mind the requirement of this population. Their children come from any university at any time of the year and they go back to any province. This is the class of people whom we have to consider when we draw up a constitution for this University. Again, we are now enacting a Bill in the Central Legislature. This is an opportunity when we should keep in mind the defects in the working of the various universities created not only by the Central Legislature, but also universities created by Provincial Legislatures, and we ought to give a lead to all the other universities.

There are three or four major points which require very serious consideration. First is the question of appointment of Vice-Chancellor. This is a very thorny question. We have now got the experience of many years where we have got different conditions in different universities, and we ought to review the whole question and find a solution. Till the publication of the Calcutta University Commission's report in 1918, the practice had been that the Chancellor appointed the Vice-Chancellor whose term of office was two years and the post was honorary. That was the practice, but we should not forget that in those days the universities were only examining bodies; they were not teaching universities. The Vice-Chancellor had nothing to do with the discipline of the students. That system worked very well for a certain number of years. It drew men from public life, very often from the High Court, to work as Vice-Chancellor for two years and they guided very ably the affairs of the universities. But after the report of the Calcutta University Commission, it was accepted that the primary object of a university is not to hold examinations but to teach. When the function of teaching became an integral part of the universities, everybody began to think that they could not have part time, unpaid Vice-Chancellors. They required a practically whole time officer to look after the teaching, discipline and the administration of the university. Then we had different methods devised after this report for the election of the Vice-Chancellor. In our university we found that the primary selection was made by the Executive Council and the Court was the final authority for the selection of the Vice-Chancellor. So, the whole thing depended upon the vote of the Court. The working of the several universities shows that this is not a very happy academic procedure. When the election of a high salaried officer depends upon the votes of a large number of people, then it very often degenerates into a kind of political election where the members of the Cabinet try to keep their own party in a majority. Now, that has not proved a very great success. In other cases we found that the selection is made by the Chancellor out of the list recommended by the Executive Council, as in Dacca and Lucknow. That is really much better than the final selection by the Court. In the Aligarh University, the thing is very different. Any member can get up at the meeting of the Court and propose any name whatever and the matter is decided by the vote of the members of the Court. This has also not proved a success. I think in this particular case, the Delhi University, as the Bill emerges from the Select Committee, has given a lead. They have now suggested that we should have a committee of reference, consisting of three persons and they may make certain selections and the final nomination should be made by the Chancellor. This is no doubt a lead given about the election of the Vice-Chancellor but as it is, the provisions of the Bill are contradictory. If you go to clause 23 of the Statutes, the position is reversed. The Vice-Chancellor is appointed for two years, by what method, I do not know. The term of the appointment as suggested by the Act differs from what is mentioned in the Statutes of the same Bill. That is one method and also there is a second method which is the point which I would very much like to be made very clear as to how the Vice-Chancellor is to be selected. It is not a question of personalities at all. It is a question of principle and I think the principle which we should accept is that the recommendation should be made by a committee of reference of three persons who are not connected with the university. They should select the best men they could find. They recommend two or more persons and the Chancellor may make the final selection. That is really a good step forward which, I believe, the other universities should also follow. This method of selection is very similar to the universities in Europe. The selection is always made by an impartial committee having no direct connection with the university. When we come to the other details, such as remuneration the question becomes complicated. It is much better to leave these things alone. Some rich person may not like any remuneration. Others may not be able to support themselves without some remuneration. I would rather leave this alone. The question of whether emoluments should be given and if so what emoluments should be given should be left to the Chancellor. After all, for the sake of emoluments, we should not sacrifice the best interests of the University. We must select the best man and see under what conditions we can get him. It is much better to leave this thing vague, instead of discussing whether it should be 1,500 or 2,000 or 2,500. We must leave it to the Chancellor to decide in each case on what conditions the best man could be secured. That is one point on which I am not quite happy and this point requires serious consideration.

The second point which requires very serious consideration is the migration of students from other universities to Delhi University and back from Delhi University to other Universities and professional colleges. This thing is left absolutely vague. Clause 11 amends section 36 of the Act but this particular point could not be visualized in any manner whatsoever, whether they propose to have it done by ordinances or else how it will be done. I may tell you that I individually am in favour of a three years' course and I want that this experiment of a three years' course must be tried under most favourable conditions. If this scheme fails, no other university will follow the three years' course. I am strongly of opinion that this is an improvement but this experiment must be tried under most favourable conditions and we have to recognise what class of students who have to deal with. We will probably have to organise in Delhi

[Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad.]

A special class whose standard may be the standard of the 11th class for the benefit of the students who desire to join Delhi University after passing Matriculation examination. Here in Delhi we have split Intermediate classes into two, one class goes to the University and the other class goes to the High School. We have here to deal with a class of schools which are superior in type but must remember that the majority of our students are drawn from the officers and servants of the Government of India. In other provinces such as the Punjab, Bengal, Bihar and so on, they have not got this type of schools and the students from there come over here for admission to the university. What will they do. You will have to provide some kind of preliminary class connected with the University for the benefit of these students. I see no hint given anywhere that a preliminary class will be opened in the case of students from these schools and after some tests they will be admitted to the first year class of the university.

Then the second thing is that the students who will come after passing the Intermediate should be put in the second year. The one year that they have put in in other universities should count. There ought to be a provision in the Bill that any student who has attended one year's course in a college elsewhere may be admitted in a class higher than the first year. Of course, in England, the conditions are the same all over the place. There, the standard of the high schools is the same and the standard of the universities is the same. There is no need, therefore, to cater for the students who are educated under different conditions. In a country like India, conditions differ enormously. It is very desirable, therefore, that we ought to cater for this class of people who come from different universities. Therefore we ought to make a provision that the students who come here after passing the Intermediate examination, either of the Secondary Board or of any other university, should receive special concessions and should be eligible to join the second year class of the university and not the first year.

Then about the students who go back from this University to the provinces. Those who have completed the second year class and go back to their universities will not be able to join the third year class unless there is some kind of test. We should institute special test at the end of the second year for those students who want to go back, which may be recognised by other universities. Therefore, though we may not have a kind of general examination for everybody, I think for the benefit of those who want to go back to their universities, we should have some kind of test at the end of the second year class, not for all but only for a few and this test should be recognised by other universities as equivalent to their Intermediate examination.

We should also keep in mind that in most of our professional colleges the conditions of admissions are higher than the Matriculation and lower than the B.A. Nearly all the medical colleges in India take those students who have passed the Intermediate examination with medical group,—chemistry, zoology and biology. Most of the engineering colleges admit students who have passed the Intermediate examination in science with mathematics, physics and chemistry. What would happen to those who want to join the professional colleges? Will they have to take the whole B.Sc. and then join? If so, their course will be increased by two years. Or for the benefit of those who want to join the professional colleges, University will introduce a special course both for medical as well as for engineering students? These are the two things which we will have to cater for the students who want to go back from the University to the professional colleges and to other Universities and also to cater for those who come under different conditions from the provincial Universities to the Delhi University. Unless we make arrangements for these things, the Delhi University is not likely to be popular. There will be huge representations tomorrow from the servants and the officers under the Government of India who are now employed in Delhi. The population of Delhi has now gone up tremendously and it is becoming still bigger and bigger. In fact, the other day the Labour Member said that this year he is spending 1.75 lakhs on building the houses for the staff of the Government of India and it does not include the buildings required for the Americans. So, here we have got a large staff and they have got their children and they must be catered in the Delhi University. The requirements of this huge population cannot be ignored.

I find that I cannot amend matters simply by moving certain amendments to the existing clauses. As I said, we are now giving a lead to all the other Universities in India. In giving this lead, we ought to make transitional provisions for a period of, say, five years and by that time I hope the conditions in other places will also change. We must make a transitional arrangement for the migration of students. If we fail to do so, then the three years' course will be unpopular. At one time, I myself thought of introducing this three years' course at Aligarh. We have students from all parts of India. They come right from Calcutta and Shillong on one side and Karachi and Peshawar on the other side. We found that it is very difficult to work this scheme unless we have very elaborate arrangement for the transitional period for the migration of students from one university to the other. Therefore, I beseech the Honourable the Secretary for the Department of Education, Health and Lands to consider the requirements of this class of people who are going to migrate from other provinces to Delhi and they would bring their children with them for whom a provision has to be made. I should like to visualise in my mind before I accept this particular Bill what arrangements are going to be made. You might say that probably the ordinances will prescribe these conditions. If so, there must be some indication to that effect. Unless we can visualise in our mind about this very important fact, it is exceedingly difficult for us to accept that this university will become a popular university. I am myself in favour of three years' course, but if you do not start this experiment under good conditions so that we may be able to cater for the existing requirements, I apprehend that our experiment will fail and it will have a re-action not only in Delhi but in all other universities, and there will be a re-action in the opinion of those who are very strongly in favour of having three years' course in the university. The Calcutta University Commission after very careful consideration also came to the same conclusion, but on account of the varied conditions prevailing in the country they had to give it up however much they liked it. They had to wait till the conditions had improved.

The third point on which I am exceedingly unhappy is the relation between the university and the colleges. This is a point which I considered very carefully when I was on the Calcutta University Commission in connection with Dacca. In Dacca we had at that time two colleges and the third was in course of establishment and we tried our best to see that these colleges should retain their individuality. We found after careful consideration that if we retained them as recognised colleges it will be exceedingly difficult to maintain harmony. Similarly, if we accept this Bill as it is, the colleges in Delhi cannot possibly exist. They will have to die sooner or later and it is better that we should kill them now instead of telling them that we are doing our best for their prosperity. They cannot prosper under the conditions laid down in the present Bill. Anybody who has been a member of the governing body of any school or college will visualise in his mind that there is a constant fight between the governing body and the teachers, because the teachers demand certain emoluments which the governing body cannot pay. The same is bound to be the case in Delhi. Take, for instance, the question of recognition. Here we will find that the university will always take the side of the teachers. The university and the teachers will be on one side and the managing body of the college will be on the other side. The award of grant is in the hands of the university. Therefore, if you have all the teachers and the university combined against the governing body of the colleges, then the governing bodies will find very difficult to collect seriously considered. The Government of India have forced some of their own universities to organise a standing finance committee which is a statutory body and vested all financial powers in that committee in order to avoid the situation which I have just outlined. No such attempt is made in this Bill. They have said that there will be a standing committee which will be appointed by the Executive Council but that is not a statutory body as in the two other universities created by the Government of India, viz., Benares and Aligarh. I do not think the Select Committee clearly visualised in their own mind the division of powers between the teachers and the non-teachers in academic and financial matters. It is a delicate question which has not been answered by any university yet and we have different conditions in different universities. I think conditions are nowhere happy and I think the Delhi University ought to have given a lead in this matter because they are in a good position to do so, but in this case no such lead is given.

Then there are a few minor points which I think should be considered. In the United Kingdom there is a committee called the Grants Committee appointed by the Exchequer and not by the Board of Education. This committee inspects the universities, considers their requirements and recommends to the Chancellor of the Exchequer as regards the grants to be given to certain universities for the development of particular departments. Here unfortunately the Government of India have provided in two or three enactments a kind of committee of inquiry. But this committee is more a punitive body which is only appointed when things go wrong. It is not really a kind of Grants Committee which inspects the universities in the usual manner. The Grants Committee in the United Kingdom consists of three persons none of whom has any direct connection with the universities. They are experienced educationists who have spent their lives in education, administrative and teaching, and every university is inspected at least once in every five years. Then the committee reports as to whether the grants are well utilised, whether more money is needed, what particular departments need to be developed, and so on, so that there may be no unhappy competition between the various universities because they do not want any unhealthy rivalries. This Committee works under the Finance Department and not under the Education Department and its report is accepted both by the universities and by Government. I think in this Bill also we should enact that this university should be inspected once in every five years by a special committee appointed not by the Education Department but by the Finance Member. Two of the members should be appointed by the Finance Member and one nominated by the Chancellor so that this committee should periodically inspect this university and report on its working, i.e., the relations between the colleges and University, the manner of giving grants to the colleges and all other details. In the first five years the inspection will probably have to be made more than once, perhaps every two years, but later on one inspection in five years will be sufficient.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

There is another point is this. We have several amendments fixing the number of Muslims in various bodies. This question has been very much debated, i.e., whether in a purely academic body which we call the temple of learning we should have communal representation. It was carefully considered by the Calcutta University Commission and I would like to read some passages from their report which was signed by four educationists of great renown in England, viz., Sir Michael Sadler, Sir Philip Hartog, Mr. Ramsay Muir and Prof. Gregory, and also by Sir Ashutosh Mukherji. His son Dr. Shyama Prasad Mukherji was also with us all the time working as a kind of secretary to his father and from him I learnt all the details of the working of the university. This is what the report says about communal representation, speaking about the Dacca University:

"While not excluding Mussulmans from the other halls of residence of the University we have insisted on the immediate establishment of a Muslim Hall. . . . We have suggested that the Court should always contain, among others, (a) 30 graduates of the university, of whom 15 should be Muslim graduates elected by the Muslim graduates, and (b) 40 members appointed by the Chancellor, of whom not less than 20 should be Mussulmans, and that the Executive Council should always include (i) four persons appointed by the Chancellor, of whom two shall be Mussulmans, one being a teacher of the university, and (ii) four persons elected by the Court, two of these being elected by the Muslim members of the Court who have registered themselves as Mussulmans from among their own number. In the constitution which we have proposed for the Academic Council we have advocated the inclusion of a number of persons, not exceeding one-tenth of the persons otherwise included in the Council, to be co-opted by the Council from persons belonging to the teaching profession and being members of the staff either of the University of Dacca, or of an intermediate college in the Dacca district, or of the Dacca Madrassah. We have also suggested that if the other categories proposed do not include a sufficient number of Mussulmans to make up a fourth of the Council, the Council shall be required to fill up the vacancies in the category which we have just indicated so as to bring the number of Muslim members as nearly as possible up to the fraction prescribed."

In addition to this they also say:

"We have also urged the establishment of a Muslim Advisory Board to advise the University on matters affecting the interests and convictions of Muslim students."

So there is a definite recommendation made by eminent authorities that if we reserve some places for the Mussalmans in various administrative bodies of the university the action will not be unacademic.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Did they suggest it for Calcutta?

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Yes, I will read that also. This is in paragraph 3 on page 214, chapter XLIX of Vol. V, of the report:

"In the constitution which we have proposed for the reorganised University of Calcutta we have provided for the inclusion in the Court of representatives of registered Muslim graduates, as also of representatives of the Muslim community." . . . etc.

And they also suggested the formation of a Muslim Advisory Board for the Calcutta University also. I quote these passages only to indicate that if we legislate to include a certain number of Mussalmans in various administrative bodies, it is not an unacademic action and a procedure of this kind has been advocated by a very thorough academic representative body which included men like Sir Michael Sadler, Sir Philip Hartog, Mr. Ramsay Muir, Mr. Gregory, and above all Sir Ashutosh Mukherjee, and any suggestion which comes from Sir Ashutosh Mukherjee must deserve very careful consideration.

These are some of the suggestions which I thought we ought to consider. I do not know whether I can improve all these things by tabling amendments. I have tabled certain amendments in order to introduce these points which I have just outlined, but I feel that in one or two cases I cannot think out any amendment of the Bill by which I can achieve my object. One is the migration of students from the Delhi University to other Universities and professional colleges. That I could not visualize, and by tabling one or two amendments I found that I cannot achieve the object. The second thing is about the relation between the University and colleges. That is really a very important point which requires very careful consideration, and I found that I could not table any amendment which may achieve this particular object and the scheme that has been worked out in detail I am sure will ultimately lead to the abolition and disappearance of the college system. If you don't want to have the college system, you should say so. Take a bold step as you have done in the case of Dacca University. Let the colleges confine their attention to discipline and to tutorial guidance and so on, as in Dacca Hall, Jagannath and Muslim Halls. That would be a bold step. But if you begin to maintain colleges with governing bodies of their own and then provide on the top a kind of recognition of colleges as a whole, and recognition of teachers by a special method, which has been outlined in the Bill, that will have very great reaction on the relation between the University and the colleges.

[Mr. S. C. Chatterjee.]

study for their first degrees, is of too short a period for any technical training which is going to be worthwhile. On that ground again, Sir, I hope that if the House would accord its support to the Delhi University Amendment Bill, it would be giving help in the direction of making it possible to try out new schemes of university education which might truly be regarded as progressive.

I say with due deference to Dr. Sir Zia Uddin and the Honourable Member who has moved this motion for circulation, that I am not convinced that any case has been made out for circulation. I do not, Sir, impute any intention to the Mover of the amendment that his motion is a merely dilatory motion. But I submit that it would have the effect of holding up what I honestly believe to be a measure of reform which is overdue.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: How does he propose to provide for the migration of students from the Delhi University to other universities?

Mr. S. C. Chatterji: I recognise that that is a question which might well be asked particularly with regard to an university which is located in Delhi city which is rapidly becoming a cosmopolitan city. But, Sir, I submit that it is hardly necessary to introduce into the Act itself necessary measures to make it possible that students from other universities might migrate to Delhi or migrate from Delhi to other universities. I think, Sir, that that is a matter which might well be left to university bodies like the Academic Council or the Executive Council and I am sure that they would—as this House have done this morning—if it should become necessary, frame retaliatory ordinances to see that their degrees and their courses receive due recognition elsewhere.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): There are two motions before the House. The first is with regard to the circulation of this Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee, and the second is with regard to the consideration of this Bill. When this Bill was introduced and it was sent up to Select Committee, the question was thoroughly discussed. Several objections and grounds were made, and I contributed to an extent my own objections, and the objections which the country and the educationists had. I had expected that those would be removed by the Select Committee even if there was not going to be any circulation made, but at least myself and some others on this side are disappointed in that respect.

That, this is an important Bill cannot be gainsaid. Is there any one Member, I ask, who would say that this is not an important measure for the Delhi University, and who would deny that this is an innovation in the system under which the Delhi University is being carried on?

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Are you in favour of circulation or not?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I am not against circulation. Please hear what I am going to say on this very first point, because we are considering not only the circulation motion but the motion for consideration also on its merits. I submit that the whole Act of 1922 is being changed, and there should have been no hurry in getting the Bill through this House. I think it will be admitted by the Government that this Bill is not for the Delhi University alone. If it had been so, then we would have accepted the undertakings that the Government give on their behalf or the educational authorities or the university authorities give on their behalf. But it is not so. This Bill will affect almost all the universities in India because it is not an exclusive university. It is not a university of which only students from Delhi take advantage or the surroundings thereabout. If we go to the university we find that the students are drawn from all provinces,—from Sind, from Bombay, from Madras, and other provinces. Moreover, Delhi is the capital town of India. The Government officers do not live alone in Delhi, but their children reside with them and they take advantage of the university. Therefore, I say that it cannot be said that this Bill is such that it can be passed without consultation and consent of the other universities. On the last occasion when this Bill was introduced and the motion for Select Committee was made, the House on this side condemned the hustling of this Bill through with so many innovations. On this side we demanded circulation and there should have been circulation before it was asked to be sent to the Select Committee. It seems to me that Government have been made, at the suggestion of some officers of the university, to ignore any other consideration but to get this Bill through. I personally know as a member of the Court of the University of Delhi that our Honourable Vice-Chancellor, the present Vice-Chancellor is keen on seeing that this Bill is passed now. But it should not be done. It is said that when the Government have committed themselves to give grants, it should be taken advantage of. How much grant will you get, especially in the days of the war, for the progress that is desirable in our universities? Government will start with these promises, but when they are asked, they will say, we will give by and by when the money is needed. At what time are we promised these grants? At a time when every rupee in India is being asked to be given for war purposes! I think that their promise cannot be fulfilled. Therefore, the grant question would not solve the difficulty. The difficulties are so many, and therefore we said at the time when the Bill was going to be sent to Select Committee that there should be circulation. That was not agreed to by the Government. Then what was the promise? We said that even the opinions of the University of Delhi and its authorities had not been secured. Well, that was not done by circulation, so that along with the opinion of the Delhi University, the opinion of the other Universities would also come up. That would have solved the difficulty. I say that it affects all the Universities and not only the Delhi University. In that sense, the circulation motion is not a dilatory motion at all. Ordinarily when a matter comes up from the Select Committee any motion like that may be suspected to be a dilatory motion but it is not so in this case. This Bill is such that it should be considered cautiously and seriously, not only by a few people but by educationists of very high standing and position. In that case, I submit that the amendment that has been put in with regard to circulation is one that the Government will be well advised to accept.

When this Bill was going to the Select Committee, several objections were taken. I had put in my objections to the Bill in detail. I won't go into those details but I will summarise what the points were and then consider whether those objections have been met by the Select Committee. If not, the Select Committee's report is not one that can be approved by this House. We find that the change in regard to the three years degree course is provided in section 36 of the Act of 1922. Now, that section with regard to the degree course has remained in force for a long time. It can be given after four years education in college. That has continued to remain since 1922. No objection was taken by any person during this time and it was only very recently that this innovation was called for. The four years degree course has continued to be in force for such a long time. They cannot say that the course has any defects but it may be the intention of the Government to say that they want to improve it. They want to see that the education given to the graduates is of a high order, so that they may be more competent. It is all very well to say that but what about the lower standards. You are providing for the top. You are disturbing seriously the lower standard of education that is being given in the high schools. This is not my opinion alone but it is the opinion of the educationalists also and also of the students and scholars who have made use of the Delhi University. They say that the standard of education in the high schools and even in the colleges is lesser than in the Bombay, Madras and Calcutta Universities. After ten years, they become matriculates. In other places, such as Bombay, Karachi, it is seven years. If we compare the students who come out from Delhi and those who come out from Bombay and other places, I submit that the standard will be lower and this is a matter of general knowledge which we derive from those who have gone to the college. They expect that by giving one year more to the lower classes in the high schools and making it 11 years, minds and they will be very pleased to hand over all the colleges to the university and wash off their hands from them. This is bound to occur and I wish that this position should be properly realised. Under the Universities Act of 1904, the college as a whole was recognised. There was no such thing as the recognition of individual teachers. Here we are introducing the recognition of individual teachers which is quite different from the recognition of the college as a whole. It is very easy to estimate the value of a college, its efficiency and influence by considering the staff as a whole. But when you begin to recognise the teachers in the same manner as University teachers, you will throw financial burden on the colleges which they will not meet. Therefore, we have really to find out some solution of this very vexed problem, namely, the competition between the universities and the various colleges. Now, I have applied my mind to this problem and I have come to the conclusion that we should follow the example of Dacca and accept the recommendations of the Dacca University Commission. We should make these colleges only as halls of residence and let the entire teaching be conducted by the university. The teachers will be appointed by the university and they will be assigned to various colleges for tutorial purposes. That is one way of solving the problem. The second way of solving the problem is to split up the teaching into two parts. Let the Pass B.A. be a college teaching. They will appoint their staff for this purpose and the university will judge the efficiency of the college as a whole, not the individual teachers. Let the other higher teaching such as B.A. honours and M.Sc. be done by the university. In that case the appointments of university teachers should be made by the university and after appointment they may be assigned to various colleges. In that case the colleges will look after the teaching up to B.A. Pass. They will appoint their own staff. The university will see that the staff is efficient and that it is not below the standard. There will not be the individual recognition of the teachers as is laid down in the Bill. When we come to the higher teaching, the staff will be University teachers, appointed by the University, paid by the University. They might be attached to the various colleges giving tutorial instructions. The other thing that is possible is as is done in Cambridge. There may be a good teacher in a college who is competent to teach M.A. class and Honours class. That particular teacher should be recognised by the University and he should be given remuneration. Therefore recognition should be limited only to those persons who give instructions in the name of the University in subjects higher than B.A. Pass. The University may give extra allowance with the permission of the colleges to the teachers so recognised. The colleges will be automatically forced to employ staff with the highest educational qualifications so that they may be recognised by the University for giving instructions in subjects higher than B.A. Pass. That will be of very great help and that is what we should try to achieve. We may also introduce the system of inter-collegiate lectures.

The argument is put forward about colleges in Cambridge. In Cambridge the colleges are self-sufficient. They appoint their own staff, and some of the staff are also recognised by the University for purposes of University instruction. But they continue to give teaching in their own colleges. Remember, that the position in Cambridge is very different from the position of the colleges in the Delhi University. In Cambridge, the colleges came into existence before the University was founded. They are endowed institutions, they do not depend for funds on the University. The University has got no endowment. The colleges make provision for the maintenance of the University, and the University is controlled by the colleges, and not the colleges maintained by the University. In the Delhi University the colleges will be controlled by the University, while in Cambridge the University is controlled by the colleges, because the University is maintained by funds contributed by various colleges. Here the Government Grant will be distributed by the colleges. What we really have to create is the atmosphere so that the University and the colleges taken together might form one compact body, they may help each other. But this cannot be done under the arrangements provided in the Bill. We are creating a situation in which there will be a constant fight between teachers and the governing body. The teachers will be supported by the University, the governing body will be supported by the public and the Legislature, so that there will be a fight in which the University and the staff on one side, and the governing body and the public on the other side. We do not know what will be the result.

Sardar Sant Singh (West Punjab: Sikh): Divide and rule.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: There is a great apprehension in the minds of people that under this Bill we have got potential grounds for constant fight between the governing body on the one side and the University and the staff on the other side. If unfortunately this should happen, it will have a very serious effect on the discipline of the students. Half the students will side the headmaster, half will side the governing body, with the result that no discipline will be left in the institution.

There is another point which I do not know whether the Select Committee considered it. I saw one of the amendments which says that teachers should work for 54 hours a week. I do not know whether any teacher can work for 54 hours. They are not the labourers of my Honourable friend the Labour Member who work for 54 hours a week. There also, we have a constant demand for reduction to 48 hours. My Honourable friend Mr. Joshi wants it to be reduced still further to 42 hours and so on. It is a point which is really very difficult to solve in the case of Universities. It is very difficult to lay down how many hours a teacher should work. If my Honourable friend the Joint Secretary in the Education Department will look into the figures and work for himself about the actual time spent by the teachers in a University, specially in a teaching University, he will find that it will work out to from 30 minutes to about 45 minutes per day. Whenever employers see this figure, they are startled. Of course, the teachers always argue that they cannot be classified in the same category as the followers of my Honourable friend the Member for Labour, that the kind of work they have to do requires a good deal of time to be spent in preparing lessons. As any rate there is always a kind of misunderstanding between these things.

There is also a question of the control of the purse. Should it be controlled entirely by teachers or by non-teachers? It is a very serious question, it has arisen in most of the Universities. But this particular point has not been decided. In some cases, whenever the purse is controlled by the teachers themselves, every member of the staff, whenever he gets up, he goes in the morning and salutes these demi gods, and he spends less time in preparation of lessons, in the discipline and training of his own pupils. He spends more time in calling on persons in whose hands his promotion and emoluments depend. Therefore whenever you see patronage vested in teachers themselves, we find from experience that we have a kind of demoralisation in the University itself and people go about seeing their own colleagues and humour them so that they may get the best benefit whenever opportunity arises. My Honourable friend the Joint Secretary will note that in Cambridge and Oxford the case is different. There the management is vested in the teachers themselves. They are the partners in a business concern, income is divided among themselves. In the case of modern Universities in England the case is different. If you go to the Midland Universities which are not maintained by permanent endowment as the older Universities are, the teachers have not got a final say in the distribution of the funds. Whenever the question of finance comes in, we find teachers have got very little voice. non-teachers control the finance. The teachers control the academic side of the University, non-teachers control the financial side of the University. Now in the present Bill, I think it is very desirable that this question should be

[Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad.]

There is another point to which I would like to draw the attention of the House: The recognition and refusal to recognize ought not to depend simply upon the Executive Council. In other Universities it is vested in the Court. Therefore I say that the Executive Council should not decide the question of recognition or non-recognition. Supposing the Executive Council consists of 17 members, out of which 11 are present at one time which forms the quorum, and six members say that such and such colleges should not be recognized, these six persons can decide the fate of those colleges and their decision would be final.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: May I intervene for a moment. I am afraid the Honourable Member has not read the recommendation of the Select Committee on this point, namely, that recognition can only be taken away by an absolute majority of the Executive Council, that is to say, if the Executive Council consists of 27 members there must be 14 in favour of taking away recognition.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Yes. But there is a note attached to the Report that you must take the majority of the members present. That is of course by one member.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I do not deny that one member perhaps has said that, but in the Report of the Select Committee it is an absolute majority

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: This shows the direction in which wind blows. Even if absolute majority were to decide, this is not sufficient either. It is a question of disaffiliation. Whatever the number may be—whether it is 7 or 8 or 10—this is a minor point. The important point is that it should not be left only to the Executive Council; it may have special predilections. A matter of this kind ought to be referred to the Court for final decision and appeal to the Chancellor. In the majority of cases under the old University Act—if my Honourable friend will consult the Act of 1904, drawn up in Lord Curzon's time—the power is given to the Senate and not to the Syndicate. Here you have vested the powers in the Executive Council. A matter of this kind ought to be left to the Court.

A provision for appeal to the Chancellor is one thing which is very desirable. If you want to keep these colleges as such, make the position of colleges clear, but if your intention is to finish them as you have done in the case of Dacca, you should say so boldly.

Finally, I may say that I am very strongly in favour of three years course and I say that this experiment should be tried under very good and favourable conditions. If you will try this experiment under unfavourable conditions, it will have a great reaction on the educational system in India.

With these words I resume my seat.

Mr. S. C. Chatterji (Nominated Non-Official): I rise to oppose the motion asking for circulation of the Delhi University (Amendment) Bill at this stage after it has been reported on by the Select Committee appointed by this House. Sir, I was not a Member of this House when the Bill was first introduced and referred to the Select Committee, but I have looked through the report of the debate on both the motion to introduce the Bill and to refer it to a Select Committee. Sir, as far as I have been able to gather, I understand that the main purpose of the Bill is to make it possible for the Delhi University to introduce a three years degree course. That, Sir, I take to be the most important educational feature of the whole Bill. It has long been felt in the best informed university circles in the country that a large part of the work which has hitherto been done in degree colleges ought to, and perhaps would, be better done in better equipped and better staffed high schools or higher secondary schools. We have just heard the opinion of one whom, in this House, I suppose, without casting any reflection on any other Member of the House, I may describe as an expert on university education, Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad. He has given it as his opinion that this is a desirable measure of educational reform.

I remember to have read in the proceedings of the debate on this Bill at the last Session that Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan also described this measure of reform as a desirable experiment which might well be tried. I am, therefore, I hope, Sir, on safe ground when I say that I give my wholehearted support to this Bill, because it does promise to be an experiment which most educationists in the country now regard as overdue.

Sir Zia Uddin had one difficulty with regard to putting this experiment on trial. He said that he would like to be assured that the experiment would be tried in the most favourable conditions. Sir, it is just because it seems to me that in Delhi the experiment would be tried in such favourable conditions that I support the Bill.

The Delhi University does not have jurisdiction over a very wide area. The high schools from which entrants into the University come are not so large in number as in some of the older and larger universities in the country. Since the Saddler Commission report made the recommendation that the part of a degree college comprised of the intermediate classes might be separated from the universities reorganised according to the recommendations of that body, the University of Dacca and the Universities of Lucknow and Allahabad in the United Provinces have been up against a serious difficulty, namely, that once these two classes are removed from the University or from degree colleges which are attached to universities the students do not have long enough time to derive the full benefit of university education at least up to their first degree examination. Also, Sir, it has been felt that unless the schools could be very much improved, standards of university education would go down.

Now, Sir, those responsible for the Delhi University Amendment Bill, it seems to me, have taken care, and have I think, taken practical steps, if I am correctly informed, to ensure that standards will not go down. I understand, Sir, that the Central Government have placed, or are about to place at the disposal of the degree colleges of the Delhi University much larger grants-in-aid. I also understand, Sir, that steps have been taken to improve the stuff of some at any rate of the existing high schools in Delhi. I therefore think, Sir, that in Delhi, because of the munificence of the Government of India even during war time, we shall have, or we may have a reasonable hope of having such favourable conditions as Dr. Sir Zia Uddin would desire for such an experiment.

I welcome this measure for another reason. One of the most serious defects of the Indian Educational system, as is common knowledge, is the domination, the excessive domination of examinations. I think, Sir, one great advantage of this new Delhi scheme will be that three examinations at the higher stages of education would be reduced by one. I think, Sir, that is a great gain. Also, Sir, biennial examinations to my mind are an evil, inasmuch as they place undue strain on examinees, and if the staff of the existing high schools in Delhi is satisfactorily improved, I see no reason why the work that is now done up to the intermediate standard may not be achieved in the eleven years that boys and girls will spend at these higher secondary schools.

It has been remarked by the Mover of the amendment asking for circulation of the Bill at this stage that he would like to see progress made in university education in new directions, and I think, Sir, he particularly mentioned the lack of facilities for technical education of the higher standard in the country. I entirely agree with him that that is the most dire need of the country at the present time, but in this matter again, Sir, I think it may well be hoped that the reformed or reorganized University of Delhi before long will have a Faculty of Technology. Already, I understand, the Government of India have taken the initiative of opening in Delhi a Polytechnic School, and I hope that as that institution develops there will be possibilities of opening courses of study in Technology at the Delhi University. But, Sir, I submit that two years, which is the present length of time for which the students

(b) Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that in mofussil towns and villages in Bengal the price of staple food has gone abnormally high and is higher than that prevailing in the Sudder and Presidency towns?

(c) Is the Honourable Member prepared to follow the steps that have been taken by the Railway Department regarding supply of foodstuff to the Postal and Telegraphs employees from their Departmental Stores at a reasonable price? If not, why not?

(d) Is it not a fact that the Posts and Telegraphs Department, as a communication department, stands almost in the same category with the Railway and deserves every encouragement from the departmental authorities in the matter of food supply?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: (a) Numerous petitions of this nature have been received.

(b) Prices vary from time to time but Government are aware that they have ruled abnormally high in Bengal.

(c) Steps have been taken to supply essential foodgrains at concessional rates in Bengal and Assam on the lines of the scheme sanctioned by the Provincial Government which has been adopted for all Central Government employees other than Railway employees.

(d) Yes.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: With reference to this question about the concessional rate, is it on the same lines as the Railways are selling to its employees between 40 to 50 per cent. cheaper than the market price?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: I understand that in Calcutta and the mofussil of Bengal the articles are sold roughly at a concession of about 40 per cent.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Is it at the same rate as the railways are giving to its employees or not?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: The Railway arrangements are quite distinct. The arrangements which we have made are those applied to all Central Government employees and the arrangement is more or less on the lines of the Provincial Government's schemes.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: I want a definite answer, whether it is on the same lines as the railways? To merely say it is distinct is not enough.

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: I have replied to that already.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: May I know if it is not a fact that, the concessional rates allowed to the postal employees are far higher than the concessional rates allowed to other departments of the Provincial Governments? I say that the Provincial Government allows greater concession to their employees than the postal employees?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: I do not think so. Our scheme is on the same lines as that of the Provincial Government.

[Mr. Lalchand Navahrai.]

stage to consider all these points. Afterwards if we come to the conclusion that the Select Committee report as it has emerged from the Committee will be accepted by the House, then that is a different question. Then we can pass the Bill with a few amendments here and there. If at this stage while considering the Report of the Select Committee, we find that it does not meet adequately with all the points raised, then we will throw it out straightaway. But if the Report does not fall through, and if amendments are to be made, then I request the Honourable Member in charge to consider and give as much facility as possible to Honourable Members who have tabled amendments, so that those amendments will at least tone down the difficulties encountered in the Bill.

I will not go into details. I will first take up the question of appointment of a paid Vice-Chancellor. This is taken up in the Minute of Dissent of Dr. Banerjee. The intention is that the initiative should come only from the authorities of the University and not from the Chancellor himself. Here in this House, we elect the President. Not even the highest authority in the country, not even the Viceroy can nominate the President of this House. In like manner the Vice-Chancellor of the University should be suggested by the University itself. The Vice-Chancellor is more or less the head of the institution because the Chancellor will not attend to all the business. The Vice-Chancellor will be the working Chancellor. When you are giving powers to that gentleman, I submit it should be done with the consent of the University. It is for the University to say "we will appoint such and such a gentleman". That would be a salutary provision. We know certain amendments have been tabled with regard to the manner in which the appointment should be made. What I am submitting is that the initiative should come from the University itself, that a paid Vice-Chancellor is required. In the beginning in the House what we said was that there should be only an executive authority of the University that should take the initiative and ask for a paid Vice-Chancellor to be appointed, also how much should be given him. Not that the Chancellor of his own motion should say that the Vice-Chancellor should be a paid one and that he should be paid such and such an amount, that the Chancellor should take the whole initiative and after preparing the whole ground he should send the papers to the University for consultation. I cannot understand such a position. Therefore what we wanted was that it should not be the consideration alone that should be asked for by the Chancellor, but that the move should in the first instance come only from the University, from the Executive Council of the University. In that connection, I find that a wholesome change has not been made. What we find in this amending Bill is contained in clause 5, proviso. It says:

"Provided that if the Chancellor of his own motion or at the instance of the Executive Council after consultation with the Academic Council is of opinion that a Vice-Chancellor should be appointed on the condition that he gives his whole time to the work of the University, the following provisions shall apply" etc.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 4th August, 1943.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

you can get the work from them of two years more. That means the F. A. and the Intermediate. According to this Bill, you expect that the schools will give education of such a nature which would fit them up to the Intermediate class. Now, that means, in the schools, as the present system is, when they come to ten years, they pass the matriculation. When they have been passing the Matriculation after ten years, how do you expect they will pass in nine years. There will be two years to them to have F.A. and to have the status of the Intermediate also in the high schools. Even if you increase the masters and give them more pay, I do not think for your schools up to the 10th year or the 11th year, you will get professors there on the pay that you would give them. Now, education in the colleges is being given by professors of higher quality, higher aptitude and higher capacity. Those persons will not come to your high schools on a lower pay. Have you calculated how much expense the lower standards will have to bear? You have laid before us nothing about that scheme. We should be satisfied first that the scheme would work and that you are able to give them money and provide masters for higher education, professors exactly like those who are working in the colleges. We have nothing before us. You are improving the quality and the capability of only the higher people, that is, the graduates. But so far as the other students are concerned, you have not placed before us anything from which we can satisfy ourselves that your scheme of giving education for Intermediate class will be more satisfactory. In fact, we do not know how much money has been promised or given to the colleges for making this three years course and how much has been given to the High Schools. When the Bill was being discussed when it was going to the Select Committee, these facts were not placed before us. So, I ask that these facts and figures should be placed before the House before the Government can expect that this Bill will be passed. At present we know that even the present Masters of the High Schools are not satisfied with the salaries they are getting. I think a graduate Master starts his life on Rs. 40 or Rs. 50. If he starts on that salary, what can you expect from him? Will he give you as much work as a professor on Rs. 300 or Rs. 200? Therefore, you are creating new difficulties and the Delhi University will soon find out that they will not be able to meet them. Therefore, I submit that so far as the question of circulation is concerned, it will give us all these ideas. We would then know what expenses are being incurred by the other universities and whether they have really found out for themselves that the course which is being suggested now by this Bill would be a better course than the one which they are following now. We must have that opinion and we must also have detailed facts and figures on that point. We must know what the expenditure will come to because the first thing that is needed for improving anything is expenditure. And in these war days I do not think we can afford to spend much.

As the Bill has emerged from the Select Committee, I find that we have still got to consider several points with regard to this Bill before we give our sanction to it. I know that some people have already made up their minds and they are more or less educationists themselves concerned with the Delhi University. They come prepared to this House and give their whole-hearted blessing to this Bill. But we on this side of the House want to scrutinise the measure. I have also heard my Honourable friend Dr. Sir Zia Uddin speak about the three years degree course. I have respect for him and I have also respect for his expert knowledge. He is himself the Vice-Chancellor, and yet he has not introduced this system in his University. He made a clean breast of the whole thing. He said that they are not dealing with Aligarh only but with places in all parts of India. Therefore, they are not going to introduce this scheme. Government should take a hint from him because he says it cannot be done. What I am submitting is this that even his opinion is not unconditional. His opinion is also qualified. My Honourable friend who spoke last quoted him as an authority on educational matters and he should know that his opinion is a qualified one. In any case, he is not whole-heartedly for it.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: He is more against than for it.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I think so. When we hear him upon the amendments we will know what his final opinion is. What I am submitting is this that we have not got this three years course anywhere in India. Even in Aligarh and Calcutta they have not agreed to this scheme. Then, take the Benares Hindu University which is a model university. Is there three years course there? No. Then, why this Delhi University which is a small university—I would call it a tiny university—jumping so high and says "We will raise the status of the graduates"? Where will these graduates go? Will they be given appointments in Delhi only or will they go elsewhere also? If they go elsewhere, they will say that they are not as good as the graduates of their universities, though they may have three years course in the Delhi University. What will they do then? How is the Government going to help them there? So, what I say is this, that great consideration should be given to this scheme at the consideration stage.

Notice has been given of many amendments and the last amendment is to introduce racial discrimination in the Delhi University. I will not say anything about it at present. But one would not like to see that there should be these communal differences and considerations in an education institution. I would like to know from my Honourable friend whether the Muslim community has got a sufficient number of Muslim representatives on the court or not. On that point as I said I do not want to say anything but I would tell them not to have Pakistan in that direction and in that field also. The Muslim representation will be a matter for consideration along with other matters. That point will be considered when amendments are moved. I have also given notice of many amendments but I do not wish to dilate on those points at this stage.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member had better leave the amendments alone till such time as the clauses come before the House.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I do not want to say anything about my amendments at this stage. I put myself on the contrary on caution. The points that have to be considered are these. The first is with regard to the innovation about paid Vice-Chancellor. That was very much debated in the House. It was also pointed out that the appointment should be made at the instance of the University itself, and not solely and exclusively be in the gift of the Chancellor. We have to see what the Select Committee has done and it has complied with what this House wanted. The next point is with regard to the three years degree course. We have to see whether the present section 36 of the Act of 1922 is not sufficient to meet the evil of creating a three years degree course. Why go and amend a section which would otherwise enable them to have the system which they want and which at present is also in force in other Universities. The next point is with regard to the powers of the Court. That has to be very seriously considered. In the opinion of the Vice-Chancellor and of a few who follow him the Court is subordinate to the Executive Council. I do not agree there at all. With that end in view, I should see that more powers are given to the Executive Council than to the Court. I would lay certain authorities on that point. Next comes the question of the constitution of the Executive Council and the powers that are being given to it. The next question is with respect to the powers and the constitution of the Academic Council. Subsequently there is the question of representation of women on the Delhi University, how it should be done, whether we are satisfied with the provision that has been made by the Select Committee or whether a better method could be devised. Then I would come to the question of representation on the Academic Council and the Executive Council. On all these points materials will be placed before the House to consider, because this is the proper

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Is the Honourable Member in a position to contradict me if I say that as a matter of fact in the mofussil towns of Bengal concessional rates which were allowed to the Postal people are far higher than the rates given by the Bengal Provincial Government.

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: I have already stated the information which is at my disposal. Our scheme is similar to that adopted by the Provincial Governments and so far as I am aware the rates are the same but if the Honourable Member will give me a definite example of the particular station where the rates are different.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Krishnagar, for instance, and the district of Nadia. There the Postal employees are given commodities at rates which are far higher than the rates at which ordinary employees get.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member is giving information.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Has the Honourable Member got any representation from the Postal Unions drawing the attention of the Government to this discrepancy?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: I have not got any information on the point here at present.

PROMOTION TO LOWER GAZETTED SERVICES ON STATE-MANAGED RAILWAYS.

176. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether promotion to the Lower Gazetted Services on the State-managed Railways is made by the General Managers or the Railway Board?

(b) Is any approved list of candidates who are fit for promotion maintained? If so, how is it drawn up, and who maintains it? If the approved list is maintained by the General Managers, is a copy thereof supplied to the Railway Board? If not, why not?

(c) What are the conditions for adding new names to the approved list? Can such newly added persons get promotion earlier than the persons whose names are already on the approved list?

(d) How many officers who were promoted to the Lower Gazetted Service since the 1st January, 1941, had not been placed on the approved list in the first instance, but were placed on the approved list only when a particular vacancy had to be filled? Does the Honourable Member propose to give full particulars of them?

(e) Who has the power to order the confirmation of persons officiating in the Lower Gazetted Service, and is such confirmation made on the basis of the length of officiating service, or on other considerations? If so, what are those other considerations?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Officiating promotions are made by General Managers and permanent promotions are made by the Railway Board.

(b) The Railway Board maintain no approved list and have no information of the practice followed by each General Manager in a matter entirely within his discretion.

(c) Does not arise in view of the reply to part (b).

(d) I have no information as stated in the reply to part (b) but if the Honourable Member has any particular case in mind and will give me details I shall look into it. I would, however, add that these posts are filled purely by selection and no employee has a prescriptive right to be promoted to them.

(e) The Railway Board sanction the confirmation of officers in the Lower Gazetted Service on the recommendation of General Managers. Due weight is given to the length of officiating service but the suitability of the individual is the primary consideration.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: With regard to these officiating lower grade people, when they are not getting any promotion by the General Manager, have they got a right of appeal to the Railway Board?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir, I do not think they have.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the Honourable Member give them some relief then by way of appeal.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I will look into the question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Thank you. There is a question to raise the lower grade officers to the superior service and that question was pending when I was on the Standing Finance Committee. Has that question been settled?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I think the Honourable Member is referring to the lower gazetted service. That question has been under the consideration of the Standing Finance Committee for some time. They had what I believe was their final meeting on the 31st. I have not heard the result.

Dr. Sir Ziauddin Ahmad: Have you accepted the findings of the Standing Finance Committee?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have not seen them yet.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know whether the General Managers make recommendations personally or do they constitute any board to give such promotion from the ranks of subordinates to the ranks of officers?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I understand that this question of recommendations for promotion is very carefully gone into by the General Manager and his officers.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: I hope the decision of the Government will not be based on communal issues. I want a guarantee on this particular point.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

PROCEDURE re REJECTION OF DEFENCE OF A CHARGE SHEET BY AN EMPLOYEE ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

177. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether it is a fact that defence of a charge sheet by a Railway employee is either accepted or rejected on the North Western Railway? If so, why are no reasons assigned for rejection?

(b) Do any rules exist which make it obligatory on the part of an officer of the Railway to write a full order giving the gist of charges and his arguments for rejecting the same in full or in part before imposing a penalty on an employee under Rule 1702 of the State Railway Establishment Code, Volume I? If not, is it proposed to frame some such rule? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) I am unable to understand what the Honourable Member has in mind in the first part of the question. The defence offered by employees charged with offences is given full consideration. As regards the second part, a record is maintained of the reasons for the conclusions reached in disciplinary cases.

(b) Under paragraph 1716 of the State Railway Establishment Code, Volume I, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, the authority imposing a penalty is required to maintain a record showing inter alia the offences with which the Railway servant was charged and the findings and the reasons therefor. The second part does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I will try to explain the first part of my question. What I meant is whether any inquiry is made or any committee is appointed to go into the charges against these persons. If so, is any defence being called for and if it is considered by the officer, does he give his judgment with reasons and inform the applicant of the rejection or acceptance of defence?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I understand it. Each case is gone into carefully on its merits. The defence of the man in question is carefully considered and I understand that the reasons for the decision are recorded.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: The point is whether he is informed of the result. My question is whether after rejecting or accepting the defence, the applicant is informed of it or the decision is made known only to office and nobody outside knows anything about it.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The man can certainly obtain the reasons.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

MUSLIM DEMAND OF REGULATING PROMOTIONS ON COMMUNAL BASIS.

178. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether it is a fact that at times without number it has been declared on the floor of the Legislative Assembly that promotions of Railway employees are made strictly in accordance with the seniority-cum-suitability?

(b) Is it a fact that the Muslim demand for promotions on communal basis has been rejected by Government for the reason that it will result in the supersession of senior men?

(c) Are Government aware of the fact that so far as Hindus are concerned promotions are given to them on communal basis?

(d) If the reply to (c) be in the negative, does the Honourable Member propose to peruse letter No. WE/11/40, dated the 28th May, 1940, from the Superintendent, Watch and Ward Department of the East Indian Railway, which reads as under:—

Appeal, dated the 24th May, 1940, from H. W. 979 Abdul Ali of Dhanbad for promotion as Chief Head Watchman.

Please inform the above named that I have no fault to find with his work. The promotion of G. B. Tewari was to adjust community ratios?

(e) Is it a fact that Head Watchman Abdul Ali was superseded by his junior (a Hindu) simply to adjust the community ratio?

(f) Does the Honourable Member propose to consider the question of meeting the Muslim demand of regulating promotions on communal basis? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) It has been stated in the House that seniority-cum-suitability is the basis of promotion to non-selection posts.

(b) The demand for promotion on communal basis has been rejected as, among other things, it will result in the unjust supersession of men merely because they belong to other communities.

(c) Government have no reason to suppose that the facts are as stated by the Honourable Member.

(d) and (e). I have called for information and a further reply will be laid on the table of the House.

(f) No, for the reason I have given in the reply to part (b).

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, an assurance was given by the predecessor of my Honourable friend that whenever a senior man is passed over on account of his inefficiency, his case will be looked into personally either by the General Manager in the case of subordinate officers or by the Railway Board in the case of higher officers. Is it being carried out in practice?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have no doubt that any undertaking is already being carried out but I do not recall that particular statement made by my predecessor. If the Honourable Member will draw my attention to the particular occasion when that statement was made, I will go into it.

GRANT OF INCREMENTS FOR THE PERIOD BEFORE CONFIRMATION TO A STATE RAILWAY NON-GAZETTED SERVANT.

179. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state if a State Railway non-gazetted servant appointed as a Guard on the 1st October, 1937 in the scale of Rs. 30-3-45-5-60 and confirmed on the 1st June, 1940, is entitled to annual increments for the period before confirmation? If so, on what pay should he be confirmed?

(b) Is it a fact that different rules are applied in the Allahabad and Lucknow Divisions of the East Indian Railway regarding the grant of increments in cases of the above nature?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) A categorical reply is not possible; various circumstances connected with an individual case may affect the fixation of pay on confirmation. As a general rule, officiating service counts for increment and in the case quoted, if there are no other disturbing factors, the employee would have earned two increments before confirmation.

(b) I have called for information and a further reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

SIKHS IN HIGH SALARIED POSTS OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS DEPARTMENT.

180. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable the Leader of the House please state the number of posts in the External Affairs Department carrying salaries of Rs. 300 per mensem and over and the number of Sikhs getting that salary?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: The number of men in the External Affairs Department Ministerial Establishment drawing monthly salaries of Rs. 300 or more is 41, of whom 2 are Sikhs.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know what is the number of the Muslims there?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I want notice of that question.

SIKHS IN HIGH SALARIED POSTS IN SUPPLY DEPARTMENT.

181. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department please state the number of posts carrying salaries of Rs. 400 per mensem and over, exclusive of local allowances, in his department in all its Sections and the number of Sikhs employed on those salaries?

(b) Is there any deficiency in the quota of Sikhs? If so, how is it proposed to make up that deficiency?

(c) Is it a fact that Selection Boards for recruitment to the Department were constituted from time to time? If so, was a Sikh ever appointed on such Selection Boards?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: The information asked for by the Honourable Member is being collected and will be laid on the table in due course.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN SUPPLY DEPARTMENT.

182. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department kindly lay on the table the following information as it stood on the 15th July, 1943:

Office.	Post.	Total number of posts.	Number of
			Hindus.	Mu-lims.	Sikhs.
D. G. Supply.	(i) Directors

Main Secretariat.	(i) Gazetted Superintendents
	(ii) Assistants-in-charge
	(iii) Assistants
	(iv) II Division Clerks
	(v) Stenographers

(b) What steps do Government propose to take to obtain an adequate representation of Sikhs in the above services?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: (a) A statement giving the required information is placed on the table.

(b) Since the majority of gazetted posts in the Directorate General of Supply are posts of a specialised character, it is not possible to adhere strictly to any communal proportions. Every effort is, however, made to secure an adequate representation of the minority communities, including Sikhs, in the service. As regards Ministerial posts, it will be seen from the statement that, having regard to the communal proportions laid down by the Government of India for the representation of "other minority communities" in the services, the Sikh community is generally adequately represented.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask the Honourable Member to state if it is a fact that practising lawyers from all over India have been invited to occupy some of the high gazetted posts in his Department?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: I have no information on the subject, but if it is a fact, I should not be surprised.

Sardar Sant Singh: Is there a dearth of practising lawyers among the Sikhs who could be called in for filling these posts?

(No reply was given.)

VERIFICATION OF THE bona fides OF SIKHS RECRUITED IN SUPPLY DEPARTMENT.

183. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department kindly state if the bona fides of Sikhs recruited in the various Branches of the Supply Department are verified in accordance with the procedure laid down by the Home Department?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: The information asked for by the Honourable Member is being collected and will be laid on the table in due course.

PROCEDURE re DISPOSAL OF APPEALS ON BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

184. *Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: (a) Is the Honourable the Railway Member aware of the fact that great dissatisfaction exists among the non-gazetted staff on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway about the method and procedure adopted by the administration of that Railway regarding the disposal of appeals in the matter of punishment and supersecessions?

(b) Is it a fact that replies to appeals preferred by the non-gazetted staff to the General Manager and other appellate authorities on that Railway are generally—The General Manager sees no reason to interfere with the decision of so and so; the appellant may be informed accordingly," or "The General Manager sees no reason or justification to revise his decision or orders, etc., and the appellant may be informed accordingly"?

(c) Is it a fact that the types of replies mentioned in (b) supra do not rebut the arguments relied upon by the appellants or quote rules, etc., under which the General Manager or any other appellate authority has thought it fit to reject their appeals?

(d) Is it a fact that the appellate authorities in a sister department—viz., the Posts and Telegraphs Department—have been strictly warned through a circular letter issued by the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs of the Government of India, not to give stereotyped replies to appeals, but to deal with them in a judicious manner giving reasons and arguments as well as quoting rules in the replies?

(e) Do Government propose to take similar action in the case of B., B. and C. I. Railway employees in the matter as mentioned in (d)? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) No.

(b) I have no information.

(c) Government recognise this and therefore have already issued orders that appellate authorities should record the grounds of appeal and brief reasons for dismissing it.

(d) I understand that more or less similar orders have been issued by the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, but have been unable to trace the provision that rules should be quoted.

(e) Does not arise in view of the reply to part (c).

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: The Honourable Member on the floor of the House gave us to understand that he is going to appoint some person of a judicial mind to look into the case of these appeals. Has such an officer been appointed on any Railway?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir, I did not make that statement.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: When we discussed the question of appeals on the occasion of the Railway Budget while discussing a cut motion on that subject, did not the Honourable Member give us an assurance on that point?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir, I gave no such undertaking.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

DESIRABILITY OF APPOINTING A 'JUDICIAL' MAN TO DEAL WITH APPEALS ON BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

185. *Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state if it is a fact that on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway no arrangements have been made so far for the appointment of a 'Judicial' man to deal with appeals?

(b) Do Government contemplate taking suitable action in the matter by taking on loan a 'Judicial' man for the purpose from any Provincial Government, in view of the widespread dissatisfaction and discontent among the staff in this matter? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Yes.

(b) No. They are not aware of any serious discontent as alleged and do not consider that any action is called for.

NON-ADVERTISING OF VACANCIES IN SUBORDINATE CADRE ON THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

186. *Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: (a) Is the Honourable the Railway Member aware that vacancies in the subordinate cadre on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway are not advertised as required by the State Railway Establishment Rules and the practice followed on other State Railways?

(b) If the reply to (a) be in the affirmative, what action does he propose to take in the matter? If none, why?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) I understand that in some cases, the vacancies are not advertised.

(b) The Railway is taking steps to introduce State Railway procedure in this matter and they will be asked to expedite them.

DESIRABILITY OF ESTABLISHING A SUBORDINATE SERVICE COMMISSION ON BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

187. *Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: (a) Is the Honourable the Railway Member aware that recruitment of the non-gazetted staff on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway is still going on by the different heads of departments individually and in many cases by the District and junior officers and that there are serious complaints in this connection?

(b) Do Government propose to order the establishment of a "Subordinate Service Commission" on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway on the lines of the one already existing on the North Western Railway? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative, and to the second part, in the negative.

(b) No. When the results of the experiment on the North Western Railway are available, Government will be in a position to consider the feasibility of establishing similar commissions on other Railways.

RE-EMPLOYMENT OF RETIRED GUARDS, DRIVERS, ETC.

188. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state:

(a) if the Guards, Drivers, Foremen and Loco Inspectors who retired some years ago have now been employed on the Railways; if so, why; and

(b) if he is aware of the discontent amongst the staff of the class mentioned above who were working before these retired men were taken up in service?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) I do not know the exact category of staff but am aware that retired technical staff have been re-employed in their original posts.

(b) It is possible that some persons who hoped to achieve promotion to the particular posts feel discontented.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: With regard to the latter part of (a), if guards and drivers have been employed, why so?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Because there is a great need for such people at the present time.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I know if anything is being done to advertise for recruits and educate persons in this particular avocation?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Certainly. Recruitment goes on but retired technical people are of special value in times of stress.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I take it that at this time the Government think that a sufficient number will not be coming forward to fill up the vacancies, and to meet the necessary wants?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The percentage taken back is not very large and varies on different railways. Where the administrations have found it desirable to take back retired technical people of experience that has been done.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Am I right in thinking that the education necessary for these guards and drivers and foremen is such that a recruit cannot acquire within two or three months?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Experience is a most valuable thing.

DESIRABILITY OF FIXING RATES FOR WORKERS UNDER MILITARY SEWING WORK CONTRACTORS.

189. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department please state if it is or it is not a fact that the military sewing work is carried on at some places by Ordnance Factories, while at some places it is given to the contractors, who distribute it to sub-contractors and who in their turn get the work carried out by tailors?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that the rates given to the contractors are more or less the same as are given directly to tailors in the Ordnance Factories? If not, what is the real condition?

(c) Is it or is it not a fact that in the contract system the real worker gets much less than what he would have got from Government directly?

(d) Is it or is it not a fact that Government have prescribed no margin of profit to the middlemen, with the result that they eat up most of the profit and the real worker gets much less?

(e) Is it or is it not a fact that this underpayment to tailors has resulted in great discontent amongst them, for example, at Agra the tailors had to take resort to strike even, and the number of tailors actually working had been reduced from 10,000 to 3,000 within the last few months?

(f) In view of the importance and urgency of the war work as well as the necessity of giving the actual worker his due, do Government consider the advisability of either getting all the work done through the Ordnance Factories or fixing a certain percentage of rates for the contractors which should be given to the actual workers? If not, why not?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: (a) All materials are cut at Ordnance Clothing Factories and the cut components are issued to contractors for fabricating, except at Shahjahanpur where 75 per cent. of the output is made up by operatives working within the factory and at Sialkot where approximately 60 per cent. of the output is made up within the factory, the balance being obtained from contractors. In the majority of cases, contractors are responsible for having the cut components sewn under their own control. In some cases, sub-contractors are employed.

(b) The fabrication rates paid to contractors vary from Circle to Circle. Generally speaking, they are higher than the rates paid to tailors working in Ordnance Clothing Factories.

(c) Investigations carried out by Cost Accounting Officers show that in some cases a worker's earnings for garments are less when he works for a contractor than in cases where the work is done in a Government factory.

(d) No margin of profit has been prescribed for middlemen. This subject is under investigation by Labour Welfare Officers who have instructions to see that the complaints of operatives submitted through the Tailors Unions are fairly dealt with.

(e) Two small strikes have taken place at Agra, neither of which lasted for more than a few hours. The representations of the Tailors Union in Agra have been referred to the Labour Commissioner in the United Provinces.

(f) The question of centralizing this work in Ordnance Clothing Factories has been considered, but since the capacity of these factories is fully booked, and there is need for rapid expansion of clothing production to meet war demands, the utilisation of contractors is unavoidable. I do not consider it practicable to fix a percentage of the contract rates which shall be payable by the contractors to their employees. Every effort is, however, being made through the Labour Welfare Officers to remedy the grievances of operatives employed by the contractors.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: What are the exact means which the Government contemplate taking so as to remedy the grievances of the operatives?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: The Labour Welfare Officers are looking into this matter, and the dispute is now before the Labour Welfare Officer and the Labour Commissioner of the United Provinces.

DESIRABILITY OF RAISING THE SALARY AND PRIVILEGES OF EXTRA DEPARTMENTAL SUB-POST MASTERS.

190. *Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Secretary for Posts and Air please state if it is or it is not a fact that Extra-Departmental Sub-Post Masters in the Postal Department are not allowed any casual leave, pension or gratuity and advantages of the Provident Fund, Life Assurance, etc., like the other staff of the Postal Department?

(b) Is it or is it not a fact that their scale of pay is ordinarily Rs. 20, 25 or Rs. 50, but in practice it never exceeds Rs. 30, and this includes contingency and house-rent, while the other Sub-Post Masters get Rs. 35—3—135 with extra contingency allowance and house-rent allowance?

(c) Is it or is it not a fact that the hours of duty of the Extra Departmental Sub-Post Masters are seven hours per day in addition to the time spent in conveyance to and from the Police Station or the Guard Room, etc., which takes one additional hour, while the hours of duty of the Departmental Sub-Post Masters are eight hours only?

(d) Is it or is it not a fact that the functions of both these officials are similar? If not, what is the difference between the two?

(e) In view of the patience of, and hard work that is carried out by the Extra-Departmental Sub-Post Masters, do Government consider the advisability of bringing their salary and other privileges on a level with that of the Departmental Sub-Post Masters? If not, why not?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: (a) Yes, except that Extra-departmental sub-postmasters are eligible for the benefits of the Postal Life Insurance Fund.

(b) Extra-departmental Sub-Postmasters are not given any scales of pay. They are paid allowances which vary. Ordinarily the maximum is Rs. 30 but in exceptional cases Rs. 40 per month. The allowance covers expenditure on house-rent and contingency. Departmental Sub-Postmasters are on different time-scales of pay which vary according to locality. They get a contingent allowance but the house rent is met direct by the Department.

(c) No. The period of duty of Extra-departmental Sub-Postmasters has not been fixed; it varies in different offices and is generally less than that of Departmental Sub-Postmasters who have to perform duty for eight hours daily.

(d) The functions are similar but the difference lies in the volume of work performed.

(e) No, Sir. Extra-departmental Postmasters are generally persons who have independent sources of income apart from the emoluments they receive from the Posts and Telegraphs Department and in view of the comparatively light work which they have to perform Government see no justification to raise the emoluments to the level of Departmental Sub-Postmasters. If in any office in charge of an Extra-departmental Agent the work increases, that office is converted into a Departmental office.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: Is there any chance of promotion for these Extra-departmental Postmasters?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: No, Sir. They are Extra-departmental Postmasters and nothing more.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: What are the independent sources of income so far as the Government are aware of these gentlemen?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: Some of them are pensioners, some are shopkeepers, some are zamindars.

Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: If they work efficiently and have worked for a sufficiently long time, would not the Government consider the advisability of giving them the regular terms of Government service?

Sir Gurunath Bewoor: The whole essence of Extra-departmental Sub-Postmastership is that it is a cheaper arrangement where the work is light. If the work is heavy we employ departmental sub-postmasters.

DEATH OF TWO PERSONS HANGING ON THE FOOT-BOARD OF A TRAIN NEAR WADRI STATION.

191. Qazi Muhammad Ahmad Kazmi: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state if the news of the death of two persons who were hanging on the foot-board of the 189 Up train, by dashing against the signal post near Wadri Station on the 3rd July, as published on page 4 of the Hindustan Times, Delhi Edition dated the 5th July, 1943, has been brought to his notice?

(b) What steps, if any, do Government contemplate taking to stop the recurrence of such tragedies?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Yes.

(b) I am satisfied that Railway staff do everything in their power to stop this unauthorised form of travel and I hope that the publicity given in this case will discourage the public from risking their lives in future.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if the Honourable Member has got information about the total number of deaths during last year due to travelling on the footboards of railway carriages?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know if the Honourable Member has information that such accidents have happened every day on every line, and have the Railway Board got any information that such accidents are happening on the E. I. Ry., B. N. Ry., N. W. Ry., etc.?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Yes. Travelling outside the carriage is, of course, an unauthorised form of travel and those who adopt that form of travel must accept responsibility for any accidents.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Are Government not prepared to take such action as will make it impossible for anybody to travel in such a manner, because if the passengers cannot understand things, it is the Government's duty to make them understand?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Well, Sir, it is really a most difficult thing to prevent passengers from getting on the outside of carriages if they want to do so. It is the guard's duty to stop them from doing so, but if the guard turns a single passenger off the carriage, and moves on to another carriage, the man merely gets on again behind him. If passengers will adopt this unauthorised form of travel, they must accept responsibility. It is impossible to put a sufficient number of men on the line, in these times, to stop them from doing so. This will hold up the train service still further.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Is not the railway competent to take action? To commit suicide is a crime, and if eventually the passenger is going to be killed, it is attempting to commit suicide and it is the Government's duty to see that such things do not happen.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: Is not such travelling due to extreme congestion in the railway trains?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Yes.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: What steps have Government taken to prevent or relieve to some extent such congestion?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Government have for some considerable time carried out a campaign asking people not to travel. It has had unfortunately very little effect.

An Honourable Member: Eat less, travel less . . .

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: If people persist in travelling in this manner, they must, as I have said before, take the consequence of their action.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: People travel because of the need to travel. Travelling has become so inconvenient now-a-days that unless they find it absolutely necessary they do not travel.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Does the Honourable Member realise that such a reply could not have been given by an Indian Member?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

BLOCK ON THE PROMOTION OF CERTAIN TYPISTS IN DIVISIONAL OFFICES.

192. *Bhai Parma Nand: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state if it is not a fact that the Railway Board have passed orders regarding the representation of minority communities (Communal proportion) to be applied to the appointments of stenographers by promotions from the ranks of clerks as well as by direct recruitment? If so, what is then left as the channel of promotion beyond grade II (Rs. 95/-) for typists in Divisional Offices, as they are not ordinarily taken as clerks in such offices?

(b) When in all Government Departments, such as Postal, Military, Civil, etc. no category of staff is blocked at the above rate of pay (Rs. 95/-), can it be the intention of the Railway Administration to treat the typists in Divisional Offices as an exception?

(c) Is it not a fact that stenographers are termed as technical staff? If so, why is it that no combined seniority list of typists knowing shorthand in Divisions and Headquarters Office is prepared as has been done in the case of other technical staff, such as draftsmen?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, posts of higher grade Stenographers are open to grade II typists if they can achieve such promotion on merit subject to communal reservations.

(b) I am not aware of the position in other Departments but there is generally no justification on the basis of work for allotting a higher grade than grade II for typists.

(c) The answer to the first part is in the negative. The second part does not arise; but I may add that the question of having combined or separate seniority lists for Headquarters and Divisions is a matter of detailed administration within the discretion of the General Manager.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I ask what then is the prospect for these men when they reach Rs. 95?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I am afraid that unless they can qualify as stenographers there is a tendency for them to get blocked.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Are they allowed to qualify themselves further?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Yes, as stenographers.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: When they entered the service was there a definite undertaking that they would not go beyond Rs. 95?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I presume that they were aware of the conditions of service when they entered it.

SUPERSESSION OF SENIOR CLERKS OF THE OFFICE OF DIVISIONAL SUPERINTENDENT, LAHORE.

193. Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member please state the rules governing the promotion of clerks from lower grade to higher grade on the North Western Railway?

(b) Is it a fact that the section seniority is a normal course for promotion to the higher grade from grade I to grade IV? If so, is it a fact that persons occupying 16th, 17th and 20th places in the general seniority list of the office of the Divisional Superintendent, Lahore, have superseded the senior claimants? If so, does the Honourable Member propose to make enquiries and to redress the grievances of the superseded persons by asking the authorities to observe the rules?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The principle is seniority subject to fitness in non-selection posts, and merit with due weight to seniority in selection posts.

(b) Promotion from Grade I to Grade II is generally made on a combined seniority list for the whole office and to Grade III and IV on a branch seniority list. As regards the second part, it is not understood which seniority list is referred to. I understand however that certain promotions not in the strict order of seniority have been made to temporary posts created in connection with Grain Shops. As these have been made on the basis of suitability, I do not propose to take any action.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask the Honourable Member if suitability is a condition of promotion, why in a particular case senior Sikhs and Hindus have been superseded by a junior Muslim?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: In this case that is not a correct statement of facts. The facts are that two clerks and not three were promoted from grade II and one was a Hindu and one was a Muhammadan. They were promoted for work in connection with the starting up of the Grain Shops.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask if it is not a fact that Sikhs have been superseded who are 4 and 5 in the list and whose turn it was to be promoted according to seniority?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: This was a special case where suitability was the main criterion.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask the Honourable Member if he will direct the General Manager not to make this a precedent but to promote the Sikh to that post?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: This is a special case in connection with the starting of the new grain shops.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Is it a fact that Mussalmans have been superseded before this on the question of efficiency?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I expect that both Hindus and Mussalmans were superseded in this case.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

MINIMUM QUALIFICATIONS FOR RECRUITMENT OF CLERKS FOR NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY HEADQUARTERS OFFICE, LAHORE.

194. Mr. H. M. Abdullah: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state: (a) whether he has seen the advertisement which appeared in the Civil and Military Gazette, dated the 26th March, 1943, issued by the North Western Railway Subordinate Service Commission, inviting applications for recruitment of clerks for the North Western Railway Headquarters Office, Lahore;

(b) Whether it is a fact that the minimum qualifications shown in the advertisement were Matriculation, Second Division;

(c) Whether it is a fact that on other State-Managed Railways no condition of Division is imposed and the minimum qualifications are a pass in the Matriculation Examination of a recognised University or the Junior Cambridge or equivalent Examination as laid down in Rule 56 of Appendix II to State Railway Establishment Code, Volume I;

(d) Whether it is a fact that due to the pitching of minimum qualifications as Second Division matriculates, a sufficient number of Muslim candidates possessing the requisite qualifications could not be secured; and

(e) If the reply to parts (a), (b), (c) and (d) be in the affirmative, whether Government propose to take up with the North Western Railway Subordinate Service Commission the question of fixing the minimum qualifications in the case of clerks?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) I have no information about all Railways but am aware that some Railways only prescribe a pass in Matriculation or equivalent examination. It is, however, open to a railway to prescribe a qualification higher than that laid down in Appendix II of the State Railway Establishment Code, Volume I, if it considers such a course desirable.

(d) I understand that the difficulty experienced in obtaining the required number of Muslim recruits has in some cases been attributed to the reason referred to by Honourable Member.

(e) No, because the qualifications are prescribed by the Railway administration, who, as I stated, are entitled to fix them higher than those laid down in the Code. I understand, however, that where serious shortages occurred, the North Western Railway lowered the qualification to Matriculation III division.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know whether the Honourable Member is aware of any other railway where it did say a certain division, and is it not a fact that in the case of Christians and Anglo-Indians the only qualification required was a working knowledge of English?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I should require notice.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: You have notice of that in this question because naturally when a question is asked, you do not want that we should state all the arguments there?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I suggest that if the Honourable Member wants more information he should put another question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: If the qualification is lowered, as the Honourable Member said, in some cases, was it to give place to the Mussalmans to the disadvantage of Hindus?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No. It is entirely at the discretion of the railway administration, and, as far as I am aware, it is equitably administered.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Is it not a fact that it was done just to give them their share as fixed by the Home Department?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

RECRUITMENT OF TICKET COLLECTORS, GRADE I, ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

195. Mr. H. M. Abdullah: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state:

(a) whether he has seen the advertisement for recruitment of Ticket Collectors, Grade I, on the North Western Railway, which was issued by the North Western Railway Subordinate Service Commission and which appeared in the Civil and Military Gazette, dated the 4th March, 1943;

(b) whether it is a fact that, out of the 35 vacancies, 21 vacancies were reserved for Muslims, nine for Anglo-Indians and one was available for Hindus; and

(c) if the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, what is—

(i) the total number, separately, of applications received from each community;

(ii) the number of candidates selected by the Commission for interview;

(iii) the number of candidates finally selected by the Commission; and

(iv) the number of candidates to whom free Railway Passes were issued to attend the selection at Lahore?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall. (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, one unreserved vacancy was open to all communities including Hindus.

(c) (i) Muslims 412, Hindus 167, Other Minority Communities 54, Anglo-Indian 1.

(ii) 864 (Muslims 236, Hindus 89, Other Minority Communities 39).

(iii) 76 (Muslims 39, Hindus 25, Other Minority Communities 12).

(iv) 299, the remaining 65 candidates selected for interview were local men.

PROMOTION OF A NON-MUSLIM GRADE III CLERK AS STENOGRAPHER ATTACHED TO D. G. M. P., NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY HEADQUARTERS OFFICE, LAHORE.

196. Mr. H. M. Abdullah: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state:

(a) whether it is a fact that sometime in 1930 it was decided that the stenographer, Grade IV, attached to the C.P.O. (now D.G.M.P., North Western Railway Headquarters Office, Lahore) should be borne on the cadre of the Personnel Branch of that office;

(b) whether it is a fact that the then incumbent of the post was subsequently selected and appointed as a Head Clerk of the Personnel Branch, that the post of Grade IV vacated by him was filled by a non-Muslim who was substantively in Grade I, and that the claims of the Muslim Grade III Clerks employed in the Personnel Branch, Headquarters Office, were ignored;

(c) whether it is a fact that the claims of the Muslim Grade III Clerks, referred to in part (a) above, were ignored on the plea that the post, though borne on the cadre of the Personnel Branch was reserved for a clerk-cum-steno. and that the representation made by them was rejected;

(d) whether it is a fact that in 1942 Grade IV post of a stenographer again fell vacant, and that the non-Muslim D.G.M.P. promoted a Grade III clerk of the Personnel Branch to Grade V against the said post without imposing the condition of steno-typist;

(e) whether it is a fact that the non-Muslim D.G.M.P. is utilising the previous incumbent of the post as his stenographer who is now in Grade V, and that a non-Muslim Grade III Clerk, who was promoted to Grade IV against that post, is not doing any stenography work; and

(f) if the reply to parts (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) be in the affirmative, what the reasons are for imposing different conditions when considering the claims of Muslims and non-Muslims for promotion to one and the same post, and what action Government propose to take for safeguarding the interests of Muslims in such cases?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) No, the decision referred to was taken in 1932.

(b) The reply to the first two parts is in the affirmative; as regards the third part, there was no question of ignoring the claims of the Grade III Muslim clerks as none of them possessed the prescribed qualification.

(c) Yes.

(d) Yes, when the then incumbent of the post who was a Muslim was transferred to the Railway Board's office. As regards the second part, a clerk of the Establishment Branch was appointed temporarily against the post in Grade IV, not grade V as stated in the question, but subsequently it was decided to allow him the higher grade only during the periods he would have officiated in the higher grade in the Branch.

(e) A previous incumbent of the post is occasionally used by the Deputy General Manager, Personnel, as stenographer when office stenographers are not available. The reply to the second part is in the affirmative.

(f) Different conditions have not been imposed when considering the claims of Muslims and non-Muslims for the post. The qualifications laid down for the post have to be changed when the requirements of the service so demand. Government can see no necessity for taking any special action.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is it a fact that they are first made temporary and then made permanent and in that way they supersede the others—the permanent people?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No Sir, I do not think that is the case. If the Honourable Member will care to give any instances, I will look into them.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Was it not possible to get any Muslim in the same grade?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: No, Sir. There was no individual with the required qualification of clerk cum stenographer.

MUSLIM REPRESENTATION IN APPOINTMENTS OF HEAD CLERKS, GRADE V AND ABOVE, ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

197. Mr. H. M. Abdullah: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state:

(a) whether it is a fact that an undertaking was given to this House on the 24th and 25th February, 1931, that due regard to the adequate number of Muslims will always be given while making appointments to the posts of Staff (Personnel) Officers, Office Superintendents and Head Clerks on the State-managed Railways; and

(b) if the reply to part (a) above be in the affirmative, how far the undertaking has been implemented in filling the appointments of Head Clerks, Grade V and above, on the North Western Railway, since 1931—the communal composition of Head Clerks, Grade V and above (excluding Superintendents) as it stood on the 31st March, 1931, 1939, and 1942, be given separately of each branch and office?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) The statement made in the House in 1931 was that it was Government's desire to see the Muslim community adequately represented in such posts when suitably qualified and senior employees belonging to that community were available.

(b) I have no reason to believe that the administrations have not been implementing this desire of Government. I regret, however, I cannot undertake under present conditions to collect the information required by the Honourable Member.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Is the Honourable Member prepared to send a circular once more to the railways reminding them that they should keep this in mind? We are afraid that they are not keeping it in mind.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I am informed that they are.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PROMOTION OF WORKS CLERKS IN THE RAILWAY BOARD SCHEME FOR RELIEF OF GRADE I STAFF ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

37. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) With reference to the Honourable the Railway Member's reply to my starred question No. 307, asked on the 15th March, 1943, in regard to promotion of Works Clerks in the Railway Board's 1941 Scheme for relief of Grade I staff on the North Western Railway, will he be pleased to state which authority grouped the three categories of staff Nos. 11, 12 and 13, referred to in the Railway Board's letter of September 1941? If the above categories were grouped by the Railway Board, does the Honourable Member propose to lay a copy of the letter on the table of the House?

(b) Has relief been given to all the three categories of staff, viz., Works Clerks, Time Keepers, and Assistant Sub-Divisional Clerks? If so, does the Honourable Member propose to lay a statement giving information for each division and category, separately?

(c) If the Works Clerks and Time Keepers were borne on the common seniority list as stated in reply to part (d) of question No. 307, asked on the 15th March, 1943, how does the Honourable Member reconcile this with the opening sentence of paragraph 3 of the General Manager's Circular letter No. 522-E/442, dated the 30th June, 1942, that it was proposed to have a common seniority list for the future?

(d) In view of the statement by the General Manager referred to in part (c) above, is it proposed to give relief to Works Clerks as a separate category in the Railway Board's scheme for relief, and to amalgamate the seniority, if so desired, only with effect from the date of issue of the General Manager's letter of the 30th June 1942? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Government are not prepared to discuss details contained in correspondence between them and their subordinate offices.

(b) Relief has been given as a whole to the three categories specified. Government have no information of the individual promotions made.

(c) Government are not aware that any discrepancy exists.

ALLOCATION OF EXPENDITURE ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

38. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) With reference to the Honourable the Railway Member's reply to unstarred question No. 40, asked on the 2nd March, 1943, in regard to the money spent on the Medical Department of the North Western Railway, will he be pleased to state whether, in view of the abnormal rise in prices of medicines, medical stores etc., it is a fact that adequate medical relief is not being provided on the North Western Railway, although there is an average expenditure of 7 or 7½ pias per patient per day? What steps are proposed to be taken to meet the situation?

(b) In view of the fact that 81 per cent of the total expenditure is appropriated by the "Personnel" of the Department and 19 per cent is left for medicines, equipment, contingency, diet, etc., is it proposed to revise the allocation of expenditure? If not, is it proposed to make allotment of extra funds? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) No.

(b) No; but if the necessity to increase the provision for medicines should arise, the necessary funds will be provided.

LEAVE RESERVE FOR THE EMPLOYEES IN SUBORDINATE SERVICE IN KARACHI DIVISION.

39. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the employees in the subordinate service in the Karachi Division of the North Western Railway experience difficulty in getting leave? If so, why?

(b) Is it proposed to increase the leave reserve to ensure actual grant of leave to employees? If not, why not?

(c) If the reply to the first portion of part (a) above be in the negative, how is it that some of the employees proceed on leave without its previous sanction?

(d) How is such absence treated?

(e) How many instances of the employees availing themselves of leave in the manner referred to in part (c) have happened during the half year ending the 30th June, 1943, and what is the number of employees belonging to each community so involved?

(f) How is it proposed to remedy the situation created by the unauthorised leave taken by the staff?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Government are informed that on the N. W. Railway in general the position regarding leave to subordinate staff is satisfactory and that the Karachi Division is no exception.

(b) No, because it is considered adequate.

(c) Absence without leave is not necessarily the result of inadequate leave reserves.

(d) Each case is dealt with on its merits.

(e) 31 subordinates, Muslims 19, Hindus 8, Sikhs 3 and Anglo-Indian 1.

(f) The disciplinary aspect will be examined. No other special action is called for.

PASS PRIVILEGES FOR ADOPTED CHILDREN OF A NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY EMPLOYEE.

40. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state whether the adopted children of an employee of the North Western Railway are entitled to pass privileges?

(b) Is it a fact that such passes are not allowed to an adopted son if the employee has his own daughters?

(c) Is the Honourable Member aware that a son can be adopted by a person even if he has his own daughters? If so, why are passes refused to adopted sons in that case?

(d) Is it proposed to bring Railway rules in conformity with the law on "Adoption"? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) and (b). The pass privilege is admissible to one adopted child, irrespective of whether the employee has or has not natural-born children of his own.

(c) and (d). In view of the reply to (a) and (b) I have assumed no reply is required to (c) and (d).

COMMUNAL PERCENTAGE OF OFFICERS ATTACHED TO THE DIVISIONAL OFFICE, MORADABAD.

41. Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state:—(a) the strength of the senior and junior scale officers of all branches (including Medical, Accounts, Engineering) attached to the Divisional Office of the Moradabad Division of the East Indian Railway; and

(b) what the percentage is of Europeans, Anglo-Indians, Muslims and Hindu officers therein?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) and (b). The attached statement gives the required information.

HINDU AND MUSLIM HEAD CLERKS IN DIVISIONAL OFFICE, MORADABAD.

42. Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state: (a) What the strength is of the Head Clerks of the various Branches of the Divisional Office of the East Indian Railway, Moradabad; and

(b) How many amongst them are Hindus, Muslims and others?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) and (b). Information has been called for and a reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN CERTAIN STAFF OF THE MORADABAD DIVISION.

43. Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state: (a) What the strength is of the staff in the grades rising upto Rs. 250 in the Moradabad Division of the East Indian Railway; and

(b) how many amongst them are Europeans, Anglo-Indians, Hindus, Muslims, Parsis, Sikhs and others?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) and (b). Information has been called for and a reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

MUSLIM CONTRACTORS IN ENGINEERING BRANCH OF THE MORADABAD DIVISION.

44. Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state the strength of the Muslim Contractors on the approved list of the Engineering Branch of the Moradabad Division of the East Indian Railway during 1940, 1941 and 1942, and what their strength is now in 1943?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: The information asked for is not available.

GRIEVANCES OF PILGRIMS TO ROORKEE DURING Urs Sharif OF PIRAN KALIAR.

45. Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state what restrictions were imposed by the Railway Department on pilgrims to Roorkee during the Urs Sharif of Piran Kaliar this year?

(b) What was the estimated gathering, and what was the actual gathering that travelled by rail?

(c) Is it a fact that the intending passengers to Roorkee had to buy tickets for longer distances in order to reach Roorkee?

(d) What extra income was made by the Railway on account of this extra expenses incurred by the passengers in buying tickets for longer distances?

(e) Is it a fact that tickets were not issued from Booking Offices for Roorkee and so people were compelled to travel without tickets and thus had to pay fine on their arrival at Roorkee?

(f) How much excess fare and fine charges were recovered during the Urs Sharif?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) A restriction was imposed not by the Railway Department but by the Government of the United Provinces under the Defence of India Rules, prohibiting carriage by rail to certain specified stations of persons intending to take part in Piran Kaliar mela at Roorkee.

(b) The number of passengers during the period of mela with restriction in operation, was estimated at approximately 5,000. The actual number of passengers by rail, however, was about 12,000.

(c) A large number of passengers evaded the restriction by buying tickets to stations beyond the restricted zone and detraining at Roorkee.

(d) Information is not available.

(e) During the restricted period—13th March, 1943, to 23rd March, 1943,—tickets were not issued by stations to Roorkee except to persons who could satisfy the Railway Administration that they were going to Roorkee otherwise than for the purpose of taking part in the fair. As at all times, passengers detected arriving at Roorkee without tickets, were charged the fares and the excess charges recoverable under the Railway Rules.

(f) The total amount on account of excess charges so recovered from 12th March, 1943, to 23rd March, 1943, is about Rs. 2,500.

GRIEVANCES OF PILGRIMS TO ROORKEE DURING Urs Sharif OF PIRAN KALIAR.

46. Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state whether it is a fact that no restrictions were imposed on pilgrims to Hardwar during the various melas held in 1943?

(b) What various melas have taken place at Hardwar during this year (1943), and what was the total gathering on each occasion?

(c) Are Government aware that the ordinary interests of the travelling public belonging to the Muslim community are not properly looked after?

(d) Is it a fact that during the return of pilgrims from Roorkee, tickets were indiscriminately sold and no proper arrangements were made for the clearance of passengers resulting in injuries to ladies and children due to overcrowding?

(e) Is it a fact that the Railway officials were vindictive towards the pilgrims because they had come contrary to the orders of the Railway Administration and so they treated them very harshly and denied them the ordinary facilities like drinking water, etc.?

(f) What was the total number of passengers who returned by rail from Roorkee?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Yes.

(b) The melas held at Hardwar and the total number of passengers (inclusive of the normal regular passenger traffic) are given.

Name of Mela.	Dates of Mela.	Total rail traffic in 1943.
Lohri and Makar Sankranti	11th to 17th January, 1943.	10,509
Sivaratri	1st to 7th March, 1943.	Figures not available.
Dikhauti or Baisakhi	12th to 18th April, 1943.	21,039
Gurukul anniversary	23rd to 26th April, 1943	7,903
Dashehra Jaith	10th to 15th June, 1943	25,861
Sawan mela	17th July to 16th August, 1943.	mela still not over.

(Pooranmashi Mela is held every month at Hardwar but the gathering in this connection is not considerable and figures of traffic for these monthly melas are not maintained.)

(c) No.

(d) Tickets during the outward rush from Roorkee at the end of the mela were sold in accordance with the available room on trains as ascertained from enquiries made over the Control telephone, in respect of each train. Clearance of passengers was thus regulated and tickets were not issued indiscriminately. No case of injuries on account of overcrowding came to notice and none has been reported to the railway authorities.

(e) No. All reasonable amenities were available at the station. Drinking water arrangements in particular were adequate, 13 additional watermen being provided at Roorkee during the mela period.

(f) The total outward traffic from Roorkee from 12th March, 1943 to 23rd March, 1943—the period of the mela—was 25,000 passengers.

PARTIES SUPPLIED WITH MACHINERY FOR CHEMICAL INDUSTRIES AND PRODUCTION OF POWER ALCOHOL.

47. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department be pleased to refer to Starred Question No. 278, dated the 10th March, 1943, and Starred Question No. 413, dated the 29th March, 1943, and furnish a statement giving—

(a) the names of parties to whom the machinery connected with the Chemical Industry is being allocated, together with the approximate cost of such machinery, and the kind of chemical expected to be manufactured in each case; and

(b) the names of the parties to whom the plant and machinery for the production of power alcohol may have been supplied, together with the approximate cost of the said plant and machinery in each case?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: (a) No machinery has yet been allocated to the Chemical Industry. The second and third parts of the question do not arise.

(b) No plant and machinery for production of power alcohol has been supplied to any firm. The second part of the question does not arise.

COMMITTEE ON PETITIONS.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have to announce that under sub-order (1) of Standing Order 80 of the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders the following Honourable Members will form the Committee on Petitions, namely: (1) Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang, (2) Mr. M. Ghiasuddin, (3) Sardar Sant Singh, and (4) Mr. N. M. Joshi.

According to the provision of the same Standing Order the Deputy President will be the Chairman of the Committee.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): May I be permitted, Sir, to make a statement? The progress made with the current agenda in the last two days has been disappointingly slow and even allowing for the fact that my Honourable Colleague the Commerce Member has decided to defer the moving of his Resolution on devastated areas to the next Session, it is clear that if we adhere to present arrangements, little, if any, time will be available on Monday and Tuesday next week for the food debate. We understand that the House as a whole would be most averse to the relegation of the food debate to days later than Monday and Tuesday. We, on the other hand, could not acquiesce in the deferment of outstanding items of legislative business to days later than Monday and Tuesday. In the circumstances, Sir, we propose to defer the discussion of the war situation from tomorrow to Wednesday in next week and His Excellency the Governor General has indicated his willingness to cancel the allotment of Friday in this week for non-official Resolutions and to allot Thursday in next week in lieu of that day. Consequently, we will proceed with the items on the current agenda tomorrow and on Friday, and I would earnestly appeal to all sections of the House to co-operate in securing such progress as will leave the whole or at all events the greater parts of Monday and Tuesday next week available for the debate on the food position. In view of these proposals, I would request you, Sir, to direct the House to sit on Wednesday in next week for the transaction of official business.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I direct that on Wednesday next week Assembly will sit to transact official business.

THE DELHI UNIVERSITY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The House will now resume further discussion on the motion that the Bill further to amend the Delhi University Act, 1922, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, the complaint has been made just now by the Honourable the Leader of the House that the work in the Assembly is going on slow.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I am sure the Honourable Member will not make it slower.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: But it should be acknowledged that all that we are trying to do is very essential: it is a very important piece of work. Therefore, we should not be charged with anything. I can immediately make one promise that I will not waste the time of the House. I will curtail my speech as much as I can and I will touch only on essential points. I have no intention of coming in the way of other Honourable Members who wish to speak on this very important measure. I should like those Honourable Members, especially non-officials, who were on the Select Committee to come forward and say how they have accepted all the propositions contained in this Bill.

I was saying yesterday when the House rose for the day that no opportunity is given to the University to express its opinion on this Bill which introduces all sorts of innovations in the present structure. Since then a promise was made that it will be done. Today a pamphlet was put into my hands which contains the opinions of the University of Delhi. From this I find that the University itself is in favour of many of the amendments that are embodied in the Bill. I shall not deal with them now. They will come in their own turn. But reading the minutes of the meeting of the Delhi University, I find that they also say that the initiative for the appointment of the Vice-Chancellor should proceed exclusively from the University, that it should be at their instance and not on the motion of the Chancellor.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member said all that yesterday.

[4TH AUG., 1943]

Mr. Lalchand Navarai: Now coming to the other question, namely, three years degree course, I must say that I do not agree with what the University says. I do not find here what actually the Court of the University said on this Bill. I do find what the executive council has said. There is no doubt that the executive council have agreed with the Government in giving a trial for three years degree course. But allow me, Sir, to say that this opinion is not frank. This opinion was influenced, rather they were cowed down by higher authorities to give their assent to three years degree course. I have also some experience of how opinions are obtained in the University. I have very bitter experience.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I do not think the Honourable Member is justified in imputing motives to people who are not here to defend themselves.

Mr. Lalchand Navarai: I only say why they have given the opinion. I am entitled to give my reasons why they have given such opinion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): But the Honourable Member is imputing motives.

Mr. Lalchand Navarai: I say the opinion they have expressed is not frank. Am I not entitled to do so?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That is a different matter.

Mr. Lalchand Navarai: With regard to three years degree course, I would ask the House to give consideration to the practical difficulties in the way. What is the present course? First of all there is the Matriculation. Then there are four classes in the College. First year—F.A., then the Intermediate and then two years B.A. The change that is introduced now is the preparatory course for one year and then three years degree course. That again comes to four years, just as it is four years now. They are changing the name of Intermediate into preparatory. But the difficulty is this. At present if a student passes the Intermediate, he can get admission into the medical course or the engineering course or the B.A. or B.Sc. course. What will be the course left for the boys who gets through the preparatory course? First of all he passes the matriculation, and afterwards he passes the higher standard. All this will be in the school. When he goes to the college, he appears for the preparatory course. Then he remains for three years more to get a degree. After this preparatory course, a boy cannot get admitted to the engineering or the medical course, he can only go to the polytechnic course which has been newly created in Delhi. After passing the preparatory examination, if the boy goes to any other University, he will not be considered to have passed the Intermediate. I am told that Government is recognising the polytechnic course. But this applies only to Delhi area and not to other Universities. If Government say that a boy who passes the preparatory course in Delhi will be admitted to engineering, medical and other courses in other Universities, then that is a different matter. Otherwise, the boys will be at a great disadvantage, if they go to other Universities. Does not this disturb the whole system of education in India? Of course, if the boy after passing the preparatory comes back to the Delhi University, of course there is no medical course here nor engineering course. They will be taken only to the B.Sc. course. I submit these difficulties should be looked into. It is no use saying this is a better system than the present one.

The second point is this that all that the University wants to do in Delhi it can do by retaining the intermediate class under the present system and under the present law, and therefore that will be better because I do not find much difference except with reference to the preparatory ways of preparation between the two systems. My submission is that it is not necessary to make this amendment in order to introduce the new three years' degree course, but even under the original clause of the Act this scheme can easily be introduced.

Now when the Government of India originally proposed to the University to consider the matter it never suggested that the Act should be amended because it was believed that it could be introduced without any amendment. I hope I am correct in that. The present Vice-Chancellor came to believe that it was necessary to abolish the intermediary examination and it is this that is responsible for the amendment of this section, but even the proposed amendment does not abolish the intermediate examination. For the purposes of admission to a degree course, another examination for the purpose is being added.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): What is the Honourable Member reading from?

Mr. Lalchand Navarai: I am reading my own notes. I think I am entitled to make notes?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Yes, as part of his speech.

Mr. Lalchand Navarai: The new three years' degree course can be introduced under the existing Act as follows. Admission to the college can be made after the matriculation examination as at present. The college can have an examination at the end of the first year and the courses of study can be made complete in themselves as at the University of Bombay. The students can then be prompted to the next higher class in that university. The following three years of college life can be organized on a single basis as is proposed in the University of Delhi with courses extending over three years. The University can hold an examination at the end of one year and call it Part I or the Intermediate, and then after two years further study a student can take his degree. This would necessitate the least dislocation with the existing organisation of university education all over the country and students can migrate from and to this university without difficulty. Nor will there be any problem of admission provisional or otherwise after the intermediate, which in a number of Indian universities is an admission stage to the courses. My object is this that the similarity between the two systems requires no amendment.

I will now proceed with one or two other matters with reference to the statutes. The first amendment relates to the constitution of the Executive Council and follows the recommendation made by the university itself, namely that the two Professors should be elected by the Academic Council and the women co-opted by the Executive Council. This would reduce the number of the nominations by the Chancellor. We have no objection to two ladies being taken on in the university but what we say is this that they should not be nominated. In these days nomination is not a proper way of doing things. Further, we say let them be co-opted by the Academic Council and be members of that body.

Coming to the other point with regard to the constitution of the Selection Committee, I think, and all colleges agree, that it is a slur on them to lay down in a statute that a person elected by the Academic Council shall not be connected with any college. The existing statute gives each college representation on the Selection Committee. It would be very wrong to say that there should be no one taken from the other colleges. At present the system goes on and I think it will be depriving them of the representation that they have.

There is a suggestion that teachers on the Staff Colleges be recognised in accordance with their qualifications and what is being done at present is different. Neither the Selection Committee nor the Executive Council should be carried away by personal considerations. I believe some safeguard for teachers is necessary. It is not enough that an appeal should lie to the Chancellor.

Then I come to the withdrawal of the recognition of the colleges. Under the existing statute recognition cannot be withdrawn except with the approval of the Court. As this is not proposed, the Executive Council is to exercise this power. There should be some statutory safeguard that this power will not be abused. It is not enough that an appeal should lie to the Central Government. The least that would meet the case is that the decision of the Executive Council to withdraw recognition be made by not less than by two-thirds of the majority. I have one suggestion here. I find that the question of suzerainty of the authority over the university is being confined and given to the Executive Council. Well, Sir, I do not like that. The Court should not be ignored. The Court should be given the powers of suzerainty. The Court should be the final authority on university questions. As a matter of fact we find matters of much less importance are given to the Court, e.g., the withdrawal of the degrees and diplomas. Is it that it is easy to get a decision from the Executive Council, or is it that the Chairman or the Vice-Chancellor seeing that he has a few members to deal with feels that it will be easy for such a provision to be made? Therefore, I am submitting that the Court's powers should not be reduced. May I show a justification for that? Under section 17 of the present Act, we find that the first authority that has been put down by the Legislature is the Court, and then the Executive Council, the Academic Council and the others.

One other matter and I am done. It is the withdrawal of the degrees and diplomas. Under the existing ordinance the services of a teacher in the employ of the university can be dispensed with only by the decision of two-thirds of the members of the Executive Council present at the meeting, and this is a part of their agreement of service. It would be extraordinary if a college can dismiss by a bare majority as it is now proposed.

These are the difficulties we have. Many more will come forward from the other Members. As I said, I have no intention unnecessarily to go on and I mean no slur or any reflection. I have only frankly stated things which have not been so stated by the university authorities.

Khan Bahadur Sheikh Habibur-Rahman (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, this is an amending Bill regarding the University Act of an unfortunate province which has been unrepresented in this House for a long time. I belong to this province and since I am present here today it is my duty to express my views regarding this Bill. The motion before the House is that the Report of the Select Committee be circulated for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon. I feel that it will be delaying things and no useful purpose will be served if we circulate the Bill for eliciting opinion. Honourable Members of this House must be aware that there are three kinds of universities in the country,—affiliated, unitary and federal. So far as the Delhi University is concerned it is federal, and I understand that there is no other federal university in the whole country except Delhi University. Naturally, therefore, the Act, statutes and ordinances of a federal university must be different from those of the other universities in the country.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: How is it federal? What do you mean by that?

Khan Bahadur Sheikh Habibur-Rahman: Of course it is federal. Therefore, as I said, its statutes, etc., must be different from those of other universities; and I therefore do not see any reason why the opinions of the other universities which are working on different lines should be called for. That is one ground of my opposition to this motion.

Sir, I was not a Member of this House when this Bill came up last time but what I have gathered from the speeches of Honourable Members is that there were several controversial points including four major points. One was regarding the appointment of a whole-time salaried Vice-Chancellor, another with regard to the three-years degree course, third with regard to additional four nominations on the Executive Council and the fourth about the power of granting and withdrawing recognition of colleges by the Executive Council. After going through the Report of the Select Committee I feel that the members of that committee have gone into all these questions irrespective of the fact whether they are major or minor, and they have made several amendments in the original Bill. I therefore see no reason to delay this measure and circulate the Bill for eliciting opinion. I understand that this is a step which the Delhi University have taken for the betterment and development of this university and I am sure Honourable Members will agree with me that delaying the passing of this Bill will mean delaying the betterment and the development of the university itself. I therefore request and appeal to all Honourable Members not to oppose this Bill for the sake of opposition or for the sake of delaying it.

Sir, I oppose the motion.

Mr. J. P. Sargent (Government of India: Nominated Official): Sir, I must admit that I rise this morning in a somewhat shaken condition to address this House. This is partly due to the natural nervousness of a very new Member speaking in this Assembly only for the second time but my agitation on that account is less than it would otherwise have been because I have a very lively recollection of the kindness and indulgence with which I was listened to by Members of all parts of the House on the previous occasion. My second cause for agitation arises from the spate of amendments which in spite of the labours of the Select Committee this measure has provoked. When I was listening yesterday to the Honourable the Mover of the amendment for circulation speaking so feelingly about the hardships of examinations and advocating so warmly the compartmental system, I wondered whether he was going on to suggest that the amendments for which he himself is responsible should be taken on the compartmental system. But my main reason for agitation is that it has been suggested both on this occasion and on the previous occasion when this Bill was under discussion, and suggested by gentlemen who are not only friends of mine but for whose opinions on all educational matters I have the highest regard, that the Government of India under the malign influence of persons like myself, who may be suspected to know little and care less about the Indian system of education, is trying to rush through a measure, which some people have described as reactionary and others as revolutionary, in an ill-considered and hasty manner.

Now, Sir, what are the real facts with regard to this? So far as I myself am concerned, I hasten to plead guilty to the fact that ever since I became interested in Delhi University and in the Delhi reorganisation scheme the latter has had my whole-hearted support; it has it now, and it will continue to have it whatever the fate of this measure may be, because I believe that we are endeavouring to do in Delhi something which will not only be of advantage to Delhi University but may also give a most valuable lead in regard to the future development of university education throughout the whole of this country.

Now, Sir, if the main principle, on which I wish to speak mostly, of this reorganisation scheme and the principle which it is the aim of this measure to confirm, consolidate and promote, namely, the three years' degree course, were an idea of my own, I should have great hesitation in pressing it against the view of any Member of this House whom I know to be interested in the cause of education. But without going into details I would only remind the House, as I did on the previous occasion, that the principle of the three years' degree course, which involves the gradual disappearance of the intermediate course, has received endorsement I think from every competent body which has considered the question of university education in this country for the last 25 years, beginning with the Calcutta University Inquiry Commission, better known as the Sadler Commission, and ending with a committee which was set up in 1938 or 1939 by the United Provinces Government to consider the organisation of universities in that area. In between these two it has received consideration on several occasions by the Inter-University Board, and in 1934 and 1939 by the Universities of India Conference. It has also been endorsed by the Central Advisory Board of Education.

I did for one moment find myself in complete agreement with my Honourable friend Mr. Lalchand Navalrai and that was when he said that this was an important measure. It is an important measure and I hope that at any rate those in this House who know me would not suspect me of supporting an

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I have never objected and I will never object, but I will see how you will be able to get this amount.

Mr. J. P. Sargent: Government have provided this amount and I say that we hope to provide more and I shall make no apology for using whatever influence I possess to persuade the Finance Member, the Standing Finance Committee, this Assembly and the Government of India to provide money for useful education even in war time, for I feel, and I am sure most of you feel, that it is the younger generation which will be called upon more than ourselves to repair the ravages of the last 4 or 5 years.

Having said so much already, perhaps I may have your indulgence if I turn for a minute to some of the detailed issues which have been raised in the course of this debate. But before doing so, I should like to try and allay some unnecessary fears which have been expressed both in this House and outside in regard to certain aspects of this Bill. I have been told that we are reverting in this measure to the idea of a unitary university, which found its place in the preamble to the original Act, but which has never, in fact, been the character of the Delhi University. I can only say that, so far as I know,—and I can speak for myself at any rate and the Vice-Chancellor in this matter—this idea is entirely erroneous. We both belong to a certain university for which, in spite of its reputation as the home of lost causes, we both have a great veneration and affection, and if there is anything that is less representative of the idea of a unitary university than the University of Oxford, or as I believe my Honourable friend, Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad will agree, than the University of Cambridge, I should be glad to have it pointed out to me. It has also been suggested that by proposing to repeal section 7, sub-section (2) of the original Act, by which every teacher of the university must be attached to a college, we aim at creating two classes of teachers within the university, a university class of teachers and a college class of teachers, the interests and status of the former being superior to those of the latter. There again I can only say that nothing I am certain is further from the intention of the university scheme than that. In fact, some Members present will know that the object of the reorganisation scheme as well as the object of the conditions which were imposed in connection with the increased Government grants to Colleges have been to ensure superior salaries, superior conditions of service and closer contact with the university to the teachers of the Colleges. In fact, every teacher of a college who is recognised for our grant must in future be a teacher of the university also, and I know it is the hope that with the increased standard which better conditions will produce, the college teachers will increasingly be selected for the major academic offices of the university for the Readerships and we hope sometimes for the Professorships also. Therefore, the idea that there is any object in this Bill to create a class of university teachers who have no interest in the colleges, who regard themselves as superior to the college teachers and who will annex the plums in the university at the expense of the college teachers is a complete illusion. It is the desire, at any rate, of the present Vice-Chancellor, it is certainly the desire of myself and many of my colleagues on the university bodies that the distinguished men we are now appointing as professors and readers in the university should be attached to and should feel that they have a real personal interest in the colleges of the university. That is the practice of my own university, it is the practice, I believe, at Cambridge University, and I am quite certain that the attachment of professors to individual colleges is not only good for the professors but it is extremely good for the standard of scholarship in the colleges themselves. I should like to state that, so far from wishing to alter that practice, we in fact wish to emphasise and enlarge it. The difficulty as it stands of seeing that every teacher must be attached to a college will, I think, be quite obvious. There will be some cases where a teacher may not perhaps desire to be attached to a college. Teaching in science and law is already undertaken by the university. A more important factor is, that if university teachers are to be attached to the colleges, they must be fairly distributed over all the colleges. And I need hardly elaborate the difficulties that might arise. For instance, when the next professorship fell vacant and it might be in Sanskrit, while the turn to have a professor attached might be that of Anglo-Arabic College. Granted the right intention, the obvious advantage of the method proposed in the Bill for dealing with a matter of this kind will not, I think, need any further commendation to this House.

There is perhaps one other possible source of misapprehension, to which reference has already been made. The Select Committee, in recommending particularly the constitution of the selection of the committee for the recognition of college teachers as teachers of the university have suggested that the members of that committee should not be connected with any college. I have been extremely distressed to hear that any of my colleagues on the staffs of our colleges should regard that as in any way a slur on themselves. It is quite clear that in such a matter where the interests not merely of individual teachers but also of colleges are concerned, you must have all the colleges represented on a committee of this kind or none. The Selection Committee, as the Delhi University Enquiry Committee of 15 years ago pointed out, to discharge its function efficiently, must be a reasonably small body, and it was felt, and I am quite sure that the opinion is correct, that if it was a question of having all the colleges or none, it was better to have none, because otherwise the body would be an unwieldy one, that being so, it was desirable in the interests of public confidence to make it perfectly clear that the Selection Committee would be a body unconnected with any college. Whether that decision is right or wrong I do not propose to argue now, but what I do wish to make clear is that there was no reflection of any kind intended on any member of the staff of any college in the university.

Now, Sir, with regard to the university itself I do not attach much importance to educational nomenclature, but we do aim at steering the middle course between the two main types of university in this country at the moment, that is, the unitary type and the affiliating type. If my Honourable friend who spoke last would prefer to call it a Federal university, I am quite prepared to fall in with his views, but the point I am anxious to make is that the university we have in mind is something between the unitary type on the one hand and the affiliating type on the other. My learned friend, the Vice-Chancellor of the Aligarh University, no doubt regards this as an anaemic idea since he presides over a university which is entirely unitary, where the university itself is supreme and where I have no doubt the word of the Vice-Chancellor is law. On the other hand, I think that my other distinguished educational friend in this Assembly, Dr. Banerjee, who is accustomed to those great open intellectual spaces which are known to the world as the Calcutta University, will probably feel that our object is to shackle academic freedom in the bonds of authoritarianism. Where two such distinguished educationists differ so widely, I think we are on safe ground if we steer a middle course between their opinions.

The Honourable the Mover of the amendment for circulation referred yesterday to a very important point, on which he has my entire sympathy. But my Honourable friend, Mr. Chatterji, whose speech by its clearness and conciseness I can safely say delighted all Members in this House, has given an answer to that particular point. All of us who look forward to post-war prosperity in this country realise that the development of technical education must be a most important factor in our educational arrangement. As Mr. Chatterji has pointed out, we have established in Delhi a technical institution of the first rank. I say of the first rank advisedly because it is of the first rank already, although it has been only in operation for a year or two. We hope it will go on from strength to strength and I visualize that in front of that institution may lie the same path which has been followed by distinguished technical institutions not only in my own country but in many other parts of the world and that ultimately if Delhi University, as I have no doubt it will, should think it desirable to establish a Faculty of Technology, it will look to the Delhi Polytechnic in that capacity. As Honourable Members know, probably one of the outstanding technical institutions in England is the Manchester College of Technology and the Manchester College of Technology constitutes the Technological Department of Manchester University. I am only expressing a personal opinion here but I wish to assure Maulvi Abdul Ghani that this question of technical education is not in any way ruled out, but is in many ways encouraged by the proposal which is now before us.

I wish to refer to one other point, because it is an important one and because I quite appreciate the feelings of uneasiness which Members of this House may feel on this point. It is the question as to the arrangements, if this change is introduced, which will have to be made to absorb into the new system of the Delhi University students coming from outside or to facilitate the entry into other universities of students who have had their preliminary education in the University of Delhi. That admittedly is a complicated business and it can only be carried through with good will on both sides. As soon as, by passing this Bill, you have put the university itself in a proper position by adopting clause 11 of the Bill amending section 36 of the Act, which requires as a condition of entry to a Degree course in the Delhi University the possession of an Intermediate certificate, the Intermediate Course will no longer exist and the Delhi University would then be in a position to approach the other universities with regard to reciprocal arrangements which will facilitate the transfer of students. It seems to me that there will be two categories of students in each case. If you take the students coming from other universities to Delhi, some of them will possess a matriculation certificate which, of course, is in principle at any rate one year below the new higher school certificate of the Delhi High Schools Examination Board which will admit to the three year course. Now those students can either enter the 11th class in one of our organised high schools or they can enter the preparatory course in the Delhi University, so long as that may continue. In any case they will lose no time. But so far as the degree course is concerned, students coming from other universities with an Intermediate qualification, will, until we raise the standards of the Delhi schools to the Intermediate level, in principle, be one year in advance of the normal students entering the three years-course of the Delhi University. I believe, and I have very good authority for saying this, that the Delhi University will be prepared to admit such students into the second year of the degree course. That, I think, will cover those two categories without unfairness to any one.

Now, Sir, with regard to students going from Delhi who possess the higher school certificate of the Delhi Board, which will be the matriculation for the purpose of the new three years course, we are hoping that as an act of reciprocity universities elsewhere will be prepared to admit those students into the second year of their Intermediate courses. With regard to the other category of students moving from Delhi, arrangements will have to be made for those who after passing the 11th class take the pre-medical course of one year in the University or the pre-engineering course of one year at the Delhi Polytechnic to be admitted on completion of their courses to the degree classes in the medical or engineering colleges elsewhere. Here again, we hope that reciprocity will take place and that those students will be regarded as having the necessary qualifications.

I have no reason, Sir, to be pessimistic about the question of reciprocity, because I think I am right in believing—and I have a good deal of reason to believe so that universities up and down the country are watching what we are doing in Delhi with sympathetic interest and in many cases, I think, with a tinge of envy and since they have all committed themselves to the principle of this course, it is reasonable to assume that they will not take up an attitude of opposition, particularly when we are carrying out the very thing which they have themselves commended. Once the University is in a position, having amended its own Act and statutes, to regularize its own conditions of admission, which is one of the reasons for the promotion of this Bill, it will then be in a position—as I know it is its intention—to make proposals to other universities. I hope that the fear expressed by my Honourable friend Mr. Chatterjee that retaliatory legislation might be necessary in this instance will not actually materialise.

Now, Sir, I have only one or two more words to say. I was concerned to hear the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor of the Aligarh University express the opinion that the logical outcome of this scheme would be the abolition of the Delhi colleges. I see no reason to share any misapprehension of this kind. Why should it lead to such a result? As a matter of fact, we have improved the condition of the college teachers. We have given them representation on the governing bodies of their colleges without disturbing the majority representation of the bodies which have hitherto carried on those colleges. We have carefully discussed this with the representatives of colleges with a view to avoiding the creation of any ill-will between their teachers and themselves. We have by increased grants improved the conditions of service and removed a lot of the causes of ill-will which have hitherto existed. Then again, under the new system, we are looking forward to an increased era of co-operation between the colleges and the university. In the system which we have outlined, whether it is a federal university or not, we have the conception of a corporate unity, of a place where the university is mistress in its own house but where the colleges are honoured and responsible members of the household to whose views the gravest consideration will be given when any questions of importance or otherwise arise. I can see no reason why the changes proposed should not promote a great and happy future for the University of Delhi, provided that all concerned are prepared to work this experiment in the right spirit. After all in all educational and other matters, this question of attitude, this question of spirit, is the fundamental fact. We have had opposition to this scheme and I am very glad of it, because during the four years during which the reorganisation scheme has been under consideration, our critics have shown us many ways of improving it and I hope we have not been too foolish not to benefit by it. But once a decision has been reached and once the ship is launched on its voyage, we cannot look for success unless we have the help of all those who, having expressed their opinion without getting it accepted, still find themselves members of the University. I hope that their co-operation will be ensured. I have reason to hope that it will. At the same time, I do hope that no people, however much they may disagree, will endeavour to sabotage the experiment once it has been seriously launched. In fact, I want to make an appeal to all concerned to give this a fair trial. Let us go forward in hope, keeping our eyes fixed on the vision of an All-India University of the very first rank. I may not know much about education and I may know still less about India, but I know enough to say this with confidence that about education above all other matters and in India perhaps more than in any other country the old maxim remains true that the letter killeth but the spirit giveth life.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): May I ask one question about the migration of students from Delhi University to other Universities? Whatever the Honourable Member has said today was just the same about which I felt apprehensions yesterday. If he reads clause 11 with section 30 of the Act, he will find that those things do not convey the same idea as the Honourable Member has been pleased to place before us today. Will he be willing to add a proviso after clause 11 to make this point clear. He said clearly that the Intermediate examination of other Universities will be equivalent to secondary higher education, which means that clause 12 of other Universities will be equivalent to clause 11 of the Delhi University.

educational movement which I realize as well as any one else is calculated to affect the lives and prospects of hundreds of young men and women in Delhi University and, if our example is followed as I hope it will be, thousands of young men and women in this country generally. People may ask—and it is a very fair question—why if this three years course is so desirable, has it not been introduced in Universities which are older and more firmly established than the University of Delhi. There is a good reason for that, and that reason is implicit, or explicit in fact, in a proviso which was adopted at the conference of Indian Universities in regard to the introduction of this scheme. They said that the scheme for a three years course should not be introduced unless the high school system of the country could first be reorganized. That is an obvious necessity. As has been pointed out in this House, the object of this change is to raise and not lower the standard of Universities, and unless it is possible to do in the high schools the work which is at present being done in the first year of the Intermediate course and, we hope, ultimately in the whole of the Intermediate course, instead of raising the standard of your Universities you will be lowering it. Now, I am quite aware that the question of the re-organization of the high schools presents a serious problem, not merely of organization but also of finance in certain areas and I have reason to believe that these problems have made people hitherto hesitate to undertake this tremendous task.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: We want to hear on that.

Mr. J. P. Sargent: But in Delhi we are in a position to re-organize the high schools and it is actually being done at the moment. Therefore, if we can fulfil the condition precedent and carry out the idea which has received universal commendation, in educational circles, it seems to me that we are doing a good thing rather than a bad one.

Reference has been made to the views of the Delhi University or its three principal bodies; which were before the Select Committee and, I think, Members who have seen them will say—I am not myself going to take up the point as to why they arrived at these conclusions; I did not myself suspect that any undue pressure was being brought to bear on myself or other members—that, generally speaking, the University bodies are in agreement with this proposal of the three years course and have endorsed it, at least with divergent opinions on two matters which are matters of detail, although extremely important—I refer to the method of selecting a wholtime Vice-Chancellor, should the need arise and also the question of the method of granting recognition or withdrawal of recognition to colleges. Apart from those matters, about which I will say nothing as they will presumably come before the House in connection with the amendments tabled on those particular points, the University have endorsed the proposals contained in this measure as useful to the carrying out of the re-organization scheme on which they have already entered.

Now, Sir, it may be suggested, and I think it has been suggested, that it was quite unnecessary to embark upon an important change of this kind which might turn out to be to the detriment of a flourishing institution which has been doing excellent work in the educational field. My Honourable friend, the Vice-Chancellor of Aligarh University, referred yesterday to the importance of inspections of Universities being carried out from time to time. I need hardly say, I agree with him and it so happened that shortly after my arrival in this country I was put on a committee for inspecting the colleges of Delhi University. That inspection is provided for under the Statutes of the University. I may say that during the course of the investigation we came across certain facts in connection with the administration of certain colleges which I am sure would be most disconcerting to all people interested in education if at this late stage I thought it desirable to refer to them. This I certainly do not propose to do in view of the changes for the better which have already taken place in the general administration of the colleges, but it certainly left me, as I am sure it left my colleagues, under no doubt that certain changes in the general constitution and arrangements of the University and colleges were called for in the interest of everybody concerned. Another matter, about which most of those who have sat on the bodies of Delhi University for the last five years have been left in no doubt, was that the University was, in fact, very largely dominated—I won't say by the colleges—but by certain colleges, and I have heard Honourable Members of this House call attention on more than one occasion to the necessity for so altering the constitution of the University that all the colleges, and not only one or two, should have an equal voice in its general management. Now, Sir, in obedience to the suggestion which was made, I will endeavour not to be longer than I could help, and I will not attempt to say much more on the question of the general merit of the main principle of the re-organization scheme, which has been the primary cause of this Bill—that is the introduction of the three years course.

It may however be asked why, in any case, is speed necessary. Well, I myself think that this has already—I expect that some Members will not agree—received the full consideration which a measure of this importance deserves. But there are other reasons why it seems to me that if it can be shown that reasonable consideration has been given to this Bill, it is desirable and important that it should be brought into operation as soon as possible. I am not anxious at all to make personal references, but, as you know, I have worked in close co-operation with the present Vice-Chancellor in connection with the changes which have been taking place in the University. The present Vice-Chancellor—whether we agree with his views or whether we do not—I think everybody will agree, is devoted heart and soul to the interests of the University. In spite of the fact that his term of office as Chief Justice in this country has expired, he is staying on here in an entirely honorary capacity solely in order that he may see further on its way this re-organization scheme in which he has such a keen personal interest. But, Sir, he is not likely to be at our disposal indefinitely and if this measure is endorsed, then I feel that even the opponents of it will agree that there is no one in this country more likely to carry it to a successful issue than the present Vice-Chancellor.

Then, Sir, there is another factor worth considering. Reconstruction in the post-war period is in the air—and certainly it has been in the air in my office now for a considerable number of months—and it seems to me that in any scheme that we may prepare and submit for the consideration of the appropriate authorities, it is extremely important that we should be able to point in fact to a measure of reform in University organization which has already, as I have said before, received general commendation in principle, from persons interested in the future welfare of our Universities. It would very much help—for as all people know a practical example is worth a great deal more than mere precept,—if in suggesting ideas for reconstruction to Provincial Governments and others concerned we can point to the fact that an experiment in carrying out the idea of the three years Course together with the necessary re-organization of high schools is actually in operation in the city of Delhi.

Then, Sir, there is a third reason, which again is a personal one. I feel a very considerable responsibility that Government on my advice have given a good deal of money already to enable this scheme to be put into effect and will, I hope, circumstances permitting, give the additional funds which we estimate as necessary to carry the thing to fruition. My Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, yesterday spoke sternly and it seemed to me almost indignantly, about the expenditure of money during war time on educational purposes. I am quite sure that his apparently indignant manner was only an endeavour to conceal his kind heart, because unless he happened to vote against it, about which I have no knowledge, the provision of this extra amount which during the last four years have increased the grant to the Delhi University by 150 per cent. and the grants to colleges by a similar sum, has received the approval of this Assembly.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Government will, I suppose, consider the suggestion.

Sir George Spence (Secretary, Legislative Department): I move that the question be now put.

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin (Punjab: Landholders): Sir, I can quite see the impatience on the part of some Honourable Members, especially Honourable Members to my left, to shut us all up, but I do hope that as this is a very important measure, all sections of the House will be given a fair hearing. I am the first speaker who has had a chance to speak from my Party and I do think that it is not right that an attempt should be made to shut the Members up. I promise that I will be very brief and I do not intend to take more than a few minutes of the House.

Now, Sir, coming to the Bill, I wish the Honourable Members of this House to judge this motion only from one point of view, namely, whether any useful purpose will be served by postponing the consideration of the Bill and sending it again for public opinion or is it at all necessary to do so? The only way I want the Honourable Members to judge this measure is whether it is an improvement on the existing state of things or not. If it is an improvement, then my submission would be that it should be passed as soon as possible and no time should be lost. The Honourable the sponsor of this Bill does not claim that it is a perfect thing, and, speaking for myself I do not think it is perfect. But is there anything perfect in this imperfect world? It would be a sad day if a Bill was passed which was thought to be the last word and our energies could not make an improvement upon it.

Now, I will refer to a few improvements that suggest themselves to me in this Bill. One is about the appointment of the Vice-Chancellor. This Bill opens the door for the appointment of a permanent Vice-Chancellor though it does not make it obligatory. It is a thing which is prevalent in many universities where they have a paid Vice-Chancellor. And as far as I can see, the method of selection is very good. As a matter of fact, better men than myself have said so. I am referring to the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor of the Aligarh University whose opinion on matters like these is respected and rightly respected by everybody. Even he appeared to approve of this new method and the proviso whereby we can have a permanent Vice-Chancellor. There are times when one cannot get the services of a public man. If they are not paid, naturally they cannot give the whole of their time, however eminent they may be. In that case, it is necessary to have a permanent Vice-Chancellor, and after a great deal of experimenting in the Punjab, this thing was introduced.

But there is one matter over which I myself respectfully differ from the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor of the Aligarh University. He said that the recognition of teachers will give undue power of interference by the Delhi University in the management of the colleges. Those Honourable Members who had the honour of sitting on the Select Committee know the numerous representations they received from the low-paid professors of the Delhi University. It is no secret that some of the college authorities are treating their staff in a most shameful manner. These people are under-paid and they are supposed to work hard and to give up their position and all that. Besides, their tenure of office is not secure. Now, Sir, as my Honourable friend Dr. Banerjea and other persons who are in the profession of education know, no person can do any justice to teaching unless his mind is easy from the financial worries and he knows that his tenure of office is secure. I welcome this idea that the Delhi University should have a right of interference in the matters of colleges to see that justice is done to those who are rendering a great service. The Government of India have a Department called the Department of Labour, where our Honourable friend Dr. Ambedkar looks after the interests of the labourers and he has a right to interfere where he sees that the employers are not doing justice to their employees. I plead on behalf of these black-coated workers and I think they are badly paid and they might with justice be put under our Honourable Member for Labour. I do hope that the University authorities will interfere in matters like this and will not grant recognition to colleges where they know that the learned men of the colleges are put on what in labour parlance is called the starvation wage. This is one improvement and I hope this improvement will be put in force as soon as possible and I hope this House will not take more time than is absolutely necessary to put this measure through on that account.

There is another little matter which I consider important and it is the representation of women on the Delhi University. I know that the thing is not very satisfactory in this regard according to the Minute of Dissent signed by Mrs. Ray. In her opinion the method of nomination by the Chancellor is not right and it should be co-option by the executive council. This is a matter of opinion. I attach a great deal of weight to the opinion of my Honourable friend Mrs. Ray. I know how keenly she feels the interest of women, we all know that, but this is a small matter, the first and foremost thing is the opening of the doors to women and once they get in, we can see what method is the best, nomination by Chancellor or co-option or election or any other method. But this a very good principle and I do hope that it will be adopted. I hope that by these few points I have shown that the Bill is an improvement on the existing state of affairs and therefore it should be taken up without delay, and if it is not perfect, as I am sure it will not be perfect, nothing is perfect, then surely an amending Bill could be brought forward either by private Members of this House or by the Government and the defects can be remedied.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division: Muhammadan Rural): What do you mean by private Members?

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin: It is a well known parliamentary expression. It means non-official members as opposed to officials belonging to Government. Therefore I say that this Bill should be taken into consideration and passed as soon as possible. If there are defects, they can be remedied later on.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Mr. President, I welcome the second excursion of my Honourable friend the Educational Adviser to the Government of India into politics. He is essentially an expert. I wish he had been an expert with more of politics in him. Politics has been defined, Mr. President, as the science of Government, and a Government to be efficient should always be practicable. Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Sargent while speaking on the motion for reference of this Bill to the Select Committee in the last Session said: "it is fair to admit and I have always had this lightly on my conscience that any builder should begin from the foundations. In Delhi, however, we decided to rebuild the house from the roof, for what I hope are good and satisfactory reasons". Sir, this is an admission of the haste with which the Government have launched this measure of reforms. I wish his advice to the Government would have been to follow the path of wisdom. Mr. President, experts are always full of their own ideas. They are obsessed with their own notions and they do not look at practical side because of their, to quote another expression of my Honourable friend Mr. Sargent, "egotistical" mind. That, Sir, is the trouble with the present measure. My Honourable friend Mr. S. C. Chatterji, whom I should like to compliment on his speech, said yesterday that I had given my support to the three years degree course to be tried as an experiment. I still hold that view. I am willing to be guided by the opinions of experts where a certain policy is concerned, but I refuse to be guided and I refuse to suspend my judgment where the question of giving practical shape to that policy comes in. As has been pointed out, the opposition of this House to the passing of this Bill in the form in which it is today, at least our objection is not to this measure of suggested reform in University education, but it is to the haste with which this reform is intended to be carried out. Let me tell you, Sir, that the best of reforms have failed in the past because of excess of impatience on the part of those who have tried to achieve those reforms. My Honourable friend Mr. Tyson while speaking in the last Session on the motion for circulation of this Bill for eliciting public opinion, stated, "we have embarked in the case of the University of Delhi on an educational experiment which is intended to give a lead to the Universities of India and I do not understand how opinions relating to considerations in other educational centres would be particularly helpful with respect to this Bill." If I may point out Mr. President, this is a very wrong impression which my Honourable friend Mr. Tyson has. This scheme can never succeed unless you have the co-operation and good will of other Universities in the country. It is not right to suggest that this is a matter which is confined entirely and solely to the province of Delhi. I would show in a minute by giving facts and figures that already this haste with which this scheme is being pushed through is retarding the progress of University education in Delhi Province. The Government, I fear, have not really taken the trouble of finding out how best they can achieve the co-operation and good will of the people with regard to this matter. The scheme has been introduced in the University of Delhi this year. Because of this haste, University education in Delhi has suffered. I am not quite sure whether the Honourable Educational Adviser is in possession of these figures or not but I would, for the enlightenment of the House, like to quote certain figures with regard to admissions in all the colleges that are affiliated to this University. I have collected the figures from five colleges, men's colleges where education is given in higher studies.

In the second year class which is equivalent to the preliminary class of the new three-years degree course, in the previous year there were 791 boys and this year there are only 257; in other words, after three years for B.A. the boys who will sit for examinations will be out of this 257, whereas in previous years the number used to be nearly 800. Then, Sir, in the first year class the admission to these five colleges in the previous years used to be in the neighbourhood of 800; in the preparatory class this year the admissions have been only 359. It may be pointed out by my Honourable friend the Educational Adviser that some boys have sought admission in the secondary high schools. I have not ignored that fact and I have got figures here that I have collected from 14 secondary high schools in Delhi; I have not been able to get figures for two high schools. In these 14 high schools the number of boys that have been admitted so far has been only 206. This shows that this haste in the enforcement of this three years' course without making a proper plan has adversely affected university education in the province of Delhi. Sir, a person with an uncharitable mind would accuse Government of having deliberately launched upon a policy which is intended to discourage higher education in this province; but I on my part do not accuse the Government of deliberate action for this purpose though I do suggest that this retrogression in higher education has been the outcome of the hasty action which Government have taken in this matter. It is an admitted fact that a large number of students from Delhi have gone and sought admission either in the Punjab University or in Aligarh.

My Honourable friend Mr. Chatterji, another expert in education, brushed aside unceremoniously the question of migration of students from one university to another. He said this is a matter which the university can tackle. This is as I have shown how the university has tackled this matter and this is the state of affairs in the University of Delhi today. Therefore when we pressed this matter last time and are bringing forward again a motion for circulation it is not because we are unsympathetic to the measure of reform which is intended to be introduced but because we feel that to give practical effect to this reform and to make it a success it is necessary to examine it from all points of view and to get not only the co-operation but the good will of all the other universities. My Honourable friend Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad pointed out that to describe the province of Delhi as a province which is cut off from the rest of India is not quite correct. Delhi today is the capital of India and its population is no longer confined to the people who are actually residents of Delhi. There are a very large number of people who are employed in Delhi in one profession or another who are always moving from province to province; and this situation that has arisen, this fall in the number of students in the university is due to the fact that those parents who are in Delhi and who are not quite sure how long they are going to be here are nervous as to the future of their sons and wards. My Honourable friend Mr. Sargent,—I welcome that statement of his,—has suggested that certain measures will be taken which would make it easy for the students to seek admission from Delhi University to other universities and vice versa. But I submit, Sir, that before embarking on this measure they should have secured that concession from the other universities. It is not satisfactory for the students who come and study in this university to remain in the air with regard to their future. Mr. Sargent as an expert in education may be able to build a house without any foundation even on sand and have it hanging in the air, but a student who has to think of his future cannot afford to try this experiment. Therefore I submit that Government were wrong and were obsessed with their own idea during the last session when they opposed the motion for circulation, and they would be equally wrong if this time with their automaton votes they defeat this motion and leave the position in the state in which it is now.

My Honourable friend Mr. Chatterji suggested,—and here I wish to invite the particular attention of the Educational Adviser,—that Government had placed large funds at the disposal of the university to distribute to the colleges. I am not quite sure what the extent of that fund is but I have a feeling,—and I hope my friend will correct me if I am wrong,—that the Educational Adviser has not received that amount of money from Government which was expected a year ago; and I will give one concrete instance. In the rules for grants-in-aid that were supplied to the various colleges when the opinion of the governing bodies was sought it was stated that the number of students to each teacher would be from 12 to 20. Now I happen to be closely connected with one of the small colleges. We made our calculations on that basis and we found that if Government were going to give us a grant on this basis we could undertake this new burden on our shoulders. The decision,—and I only hope it is not a final decision of Government,—is that now the proportion will be one teacher to every 20 students. Now this is a device, Mr. President, to save some money because the Educational Adviser has not received that amount of money from the Government which was expected, when this scheme was launched. Now I submit for your consideration and for the consideration of this Honourable House, how do the authorities expect a small college to run like our college, the Anglo-Arabic College with about 200 students who will be admitted for this three years' course with ten teachers? If this college is to maintain its position as it is today, then it cannot do so unless it has at least fourteen teachers, and we have today on the staff at least fourteen and one Principal. Now, Sir, what would be the result? The result would be that this college which has been struggling to rise to the standard of other colleges will become a third rate college. My community is a very poor one. It cannot afford to fork out money so that those sitting in authority may try their experiments. We were assured—and I am referring to this because my Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, referred to this in the last debate that we had—at that meeting which was held at the then Education Member, Mr. Sarker's house, that as far as the finances of the colleges were concerned, the Government will see that they are not in a worse position than what they are today. So I submit, Mr. President, that what Mr. Chatterji has suggested is partly correct. I dare say if the Government of India were in a position to place a larger sum of money at the disposal of the Educational Adviser, he would be able to see that the colleges did not become less in quality but would be better than what they are today. Therefore, Sir, all these are matters which need very careful consideration. All these are matters which need thorough enquiry and it is for that purpose that my honourable friend, Mr. Abdul Ghani, has moved this motion for circulation, which is before this honourable House.

Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Ghiasuddin, I am afraid, was not quite fair to the governing bodies of all the colleges when he made a sweeping statement that these bodies were treating their staff in a very bad manner.

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin: I did not say all.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: There may be, there are, black sheep in every fold, but let me tell you, because I can only speak from personal experience, that as far as the governing body of our college is concerned, I make bold to say that during the last three years that I have had the honour of being associated with that body not a single instance can be brought forward, and I challenge anybody to bring forward a single instance where any member of the staff has been treated unjustly. On the other hand I can give instances where the members of the staff have let us down. Sir, any governing body which wants that the institution over which it has control should function satisfactorily must have the full co-operation of the members of the staff and it must see that justice is done to every individual member of the staff. There may have been some cases, one or two, where perhaps a governing body may have treated its members of the staff unfairly, but on the whole I can say that the members of the staff of the colleges of this university have really nothing to complain about.

Now, Sir, this scheme of the Government has put a very great burden on the colleges. It has prescribed certain scales of pay and certain grades for the various members of the staff, and now I submit that unless my Honourable friend, Mr. Sargent, can exercise that influence which he has with the Government as a whole and secure some more funds, I can tell him that it will be impossible for at least smaller colleges and their governing bodies to run the institutions under this new scheme of theirs.

Sir, I will not take more than two minutes. I am sorry to detain the House when it is just quarter past one. But in the larger interests of saving the time of the House, I think I would like to finish before we adjourn.

All that I can say is this, that the facts that I have stated go to show that there has been unnecessary haste in enforcing this measure and I ask the Government not to consider that our criticism is unfriendly. Our criticism is with the feelings of friendliness. We want this scheme to succeed but let me tell you it will not succeed because of your impatience. It can only succeed if you can get the willing co-operation and goodwill of everyone concerned.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta) in the Chair.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Sir, many of us pointed out on the second reading of this Bill that it contained many provisions of a reactionary and undesirable character. The Select Committee removed some of these provisions and modified others so that the Bill as it has been placed before us today is in a comparatively improved shape. But there are still several features which are of an objectionable character. The first of these relates to the appointment of a salaried Vice-Chancellor. Sir, I am one of those who do not see eye to eye with the Government in regard to the need for having a salaried whole-time Vice-Chancellor for the Delhi University. My view is that a salaried Vice-Chancellor does not command the same confidence and does not enjoy the same respect as an honorary Vice-Chancellor, and this has been our experience during the last 80 or 90 years. In most of the Universities at the present moment, there are honorary Vice-Chancellors, and these honorary Vice-Chancellors have rendered conspicuous services to their respective Universities. It has been suggested that in a teaching University there is the need of a whole-time Vice-Chancellor. I am unable to accept that view. The Calcutta University is a teaching University, in fact it is the largest of the teaching Universities in India; but in Calcutta we have so far managed with an honorary Vice-Chancellor. The question of a paid Vice-Chancellor has on several occasions been mooted in Calcutta; but we have always rejected that proposal, and we are not sorry for having rejected that proposal. Now, Sir, if a big University like the Calcutta University can manage with an honorary

Vice-Chancellor, I do not see why a small—almost tiny—University like the Delhi University cannot do without a salaried Vice-Chancellor, that is a point on which there is fundamental difference between myself and the Government.

But if the Government and their experts have come to the conclusion that the Delhi University cannot do without a salaried Vice-Chancellor, then I would urge that there is no necessity for providing that the initiative for the appointment of such a Vice-Chancellor may come from the Chancellor or the Government. The initiative in such a case should come from the authorities of the University itself, namely, the Executive Council and the Academic Council. These are the bodies who have been entrusted with the actual administration of the work of the University, and they know much better than the Chancellor of the University whether a paid Vice-Chancellor is required or not. It would be wrong on the part of this legislature to make any provision which may result in thrusting a paid Vice-Chancellor on the University of Delhi against the wishes of those persons who have been entrusted with the duty of carrying on its actual work. I, therefore, have proposed in my note of dissent that the provision relating to the appointment of a paid Vice-Chancellor should not emanate from the Chancellor, for the Chancellor of the University cannot be expected to know much about the actual administration of the University. He will have to depend on the Member in Charge of the Education Department or perhaps the Secretary to the Department, and I should be very unwilling to accept the advice of these gentlemen, however estimable they may be, in preference to the advice which may be given by the Executive Council and the Academic Council of the University.

As regards the procedure to be adopted with regard to the selection and appointment of a salaried Vice-Chancellor, I agree in the main with the other members of the Select Committee and with the members representing Government. But there is a defect in the language that has been used in the Report framed by the majority of the members and I would request that this defect should be removed.

Coming to the three-years degree course, I confess that this is a question on which there may be honest differences of opinion. I will be the last person to charge the Government with any dishonest motive in bringing forward that proposal. But we will have to consider to what extent it is practicable in the present circumstances in India to give effect to that proposal. We will have also to consider what will be the actual effect if the proposal is given effect to just at the present moment. Now, my Honourable friend, Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad, who agrees in principle with the view that there should be a three-years course, has pointed out the practical difficulties in the way of giving effect to such a proposal. He referred to the question of migration. This was discussed by me in great detail in the course of my speech during the last Session, and I will observe only this at the present moment, that the question of migration will give rise to the greatest difficulties.

The Delhi University, it should be remembered, is located in the capital of India which draws large number of persons from different provinces. The services under the Central Government include members who belong to all the different provinces of India. So long as you have not made full arrangements with the provincial universities we should not introduce a system which will place the sons and wards of the servants of the Central Government in positions of difficulty with regard to their own universities. Now, Sir, it has been pointed out that the population of Delhi has recently increased to a very large extent; but what has been the effect of that on the admission of students into this university? My Honourable friend, the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party, emphasised the fact that, in spite of the increase in the population of Delhi, there has been during the current year a great decrease in the number of students admitted into the Delhi University. And what has been the cause of this decrease? The cause has been the suspicion in the minds of the guardians of the students that there will be great difficulties placed in their way of their wards getting admission into their own universities after they have gone through some of the examinations or have read for a number of years in the Delhi University.

You should take adequate steps to ensure that there would be no difficulty in the way of the admission of the pupils of the Delhi University into the other universities. My Honourable friend, Mr. Chatterji, who made his maiden speech yesterday, suggested retaliatory action. But is that the proper method of solving difficulties? Perhaps my Honourable friend took his inspiration from the speakers who spoke on the Reciprocity Act Amending Bill on the South African question. But he forgot the great difference that existed between the inter-relations of the universities of India and the relations which at present subsist between India and those Dominions and Colonies which discriminate against Indians. In connection with this matter it was not retaliatory action that we decided upon from the very start. We tried to convince them of our rights, we had consultations with them, we went on deputations to those Colonies and Dominions, we sent our best representatives to them as our agents, and ultimately when after years of negotiations we failed in our attempt to get justice from them we decided upon a policy of retaliation. But that would not suit the relations between the Delhi University and the other universities. The migration of students from one university to another is based on the question of equivalence. You have to convince the other universities that your degree course, your method of teaching, your system of supervision, your resources for research work, are equal to those of the other universities, you have to prove that your standard is not inferior to theirs, and then you can ask for an equivalence from those universities. I would suggest, therefore, that, before you think of retaliatory action, you should take other kinds of action, namely, you should try to secure their willing co-operation and their good will before you start on a new venture. There is a great deal of inter-relation between the Delhi University and the other universities, and the greater the amount of this inter-relation, the better it is for the country. We should not think it proper for one university to stand against the other universities. Suppose we accept the advice that has been expressed by my Honourable friend, Mr. Chatterji, what would be the result? There are eighteen universities in India, and if the Delhi University decides to take up a position of isolation and separation from the other universities and flouts them, what would be the result? The result is sure to be that the Delhi University will be cornered, and that will mean, not prosperity and success for this university, but its utter ruin.

Mr. S. C. Chatterji (Nominated Non-Official): May I say that I made that remark in a light-hearted manner? I never suggested seriously that the Delhi University should have recourse to retaliatory measures of any kind.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: Sir, I accept the explanation which has been given by my Honourable friend. He says that he referred to retaliatory action in a light-hearted manner. But the question which we are considering now is one of the greatest importance and on the discussions of such a question there is no room for light-hearted talk. (An Honourable Member: "Forgive him for his frivolity".) I am prepared to do that.

This is one main ground for accepting the motion for circulation which has been moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Ghani. We should have frank and free consultations with the other Universities and we should try to bring about an arrangement under which the students of any of the universities should not suffer in the slightest degree.

Sir, I suggested towards the end of the debate on the last occasion that the Universities of India should at least be consulted. I urged that even if circulation could not be made throughout the country, at least the universities of India should be consulted, and Mr. Tyson gave the reply that the Universities would be consulted, if that would meet our point. I think that was the language used by him, if I remember aright.

Mr. J. D. Tyson (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands): I said that if the motion for circulation was not pressed and it was withdrawn, I would endeavour to secure the opinions of the universities, not merely of the Delhi University. These are not the exact words but they represent the gist of what I said.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: I shall find out the exact words. My friend's position is that the circulation motion was pressed and therefore he decided not to consult the other universities. This is retaliatory action. Is it not? (An Honourable Member: "With a vengeance".) Yes, I am sorry that Mr. Tyson took that attitude on that occasion and I hope he will avail himself of an opportunity of revising his attitude at the present moment. Nothing will be lost if there is some delay in having this Bill passed.

My Honourable friend Mr. Sargent observed that there was a consensus of opinion in favour of the introduction of the three-years course and he referred to the Educational Conference Resolution. He had the fairness to admit that this Educational Conference added a proviso to that Resolution to the effect that the system should not be introduced unless active steps were taken to guard against any deterioration of the standard of efficiency. Now, Sir, my Honourable friends have observed that there will be no deterioration in the standard of efficiency so far as the University of Delhi is concerned. I accept their word. But what about the other universities? Both Mr. Sargent and Mr. Tyson told us that this Bill would give a lead to the other Universities. But how will it give a lead to the other Universities? Here the number of secondary schools which feed the Delhi University is small. But in Bengal the number of secondary schools is over 1,500, and we should consider what a huge amount of money will be required to improve the conditions in these schools. Where will this money come from? Is the Government of India prepared to provide the sum? And, then again, it is not merely the provision of the money. It is also necessary to ensure that you get the proper sort of teachers in the secondary schools,—teachers of the same calibre in the schools as you can find in the colleges or the universities. All these are matters which require careful consideration and my apprehension is that there is a likelihood, almost a certainty, that there will be a substantial deterioration if this particular provision of the Bill is given effect to, without taking adequate measures of a safeguarding character.

Then, Sir, I come to the question of the composition and powers of the different bodies of the Delhi University. It is sought to change the composition of the Executive Council by the addition of four more members. It is also sought to take away some important powers, namely, the powers of affiliation and disaffiliation, from the Court and vest those powers in the Executive Council. I am not satisfied that it is desirable to increase the number of members of the Executive Council which already has a somewhat unwieldy size. As regards the method of increasing its size, I have a great deal of difference with the Government. The Government view is that there should be a representation of the Professors of the University. But how many professors are there in the University? They are: three salaried and two honorary Professors, altogether five. And these members are to elect two out of their number. Now, this reminds me of the pocket boroughs which existed in England before the year 1832. There were very few electors in these constituencies but these electors sent representatives to the British Parliament. If you read the debates which took place on the occasion of the Reform Act of 1832, you will find how strongly this system of pocket boroughs was condemned by all fair-minded men in England. And now after the lapse of more than a hundred years you want to create pocket-boroughs in India. Is that right? And, then, again you say that the Professors have interests, distinct and separate, from those of the other teachers of the University. This is wrong. I was myself a Professor for a long time and I know that my interests were intimately connected with the interests of the other teachers in the University. I would have certainly refused it if I had been given special representation as a Professor. The moment you create separation and distinctness of interest, you create a rivalry between the professors and the other teachers and that vitiates the atmosphere of the University. That would be a very wrong thing to do. The Professors are the natural leaders of the entire staff of the university; and if they behave well, naturally they would be elected as the representatives of the whole body of teachers. Therefore, I suggest that even if you decide to have two more men on the executive council, these two Professors should come as the representatives of the academic council on which the whole body of teachers is represented.

Coming to the representation of women, it seems that the Government view is that women are not adequately represented on the executive council of the Delhi University. If that be so, I would not object to the representation of women. But what about the method of representation? Nomination by the Chancellor is not the right mode of selecting the proper persons to serve on the executive council. Therefore, the Academic Council, which is likely to be more in touch with the educated women of this province than the Chancellor, should be given the right to elect the women members.

Sir, it is on account of the haste and hurry with which the Bill has been sought to be pushed through and it is due to the proposed method of election of certain members of the Executive Council that the impression has gone abroad that the real purpose of this Bill is not the improvement of education in the province of Delhi but to extend the power of the Government of India over that university. Sir, whether this impression is correct or not, it is for the Government to say. I should like to emphasise that it is not their word but their action which will dispel this impression if it is a false one.

Sir, with regard to the curtailment of the powers of the Court, which is an important body of this university, it has been regarded as an unwieldy body. But if that is an unwieldy body, the Senates of the different universities like the Calcutta University and the Bombay University should also be regarded as unwieldy bodies. It is these bodies which have been entrusted with the work of affiliation and disaffiliation of colleges. I know that in Calcutta no difficulty has ever occurred in regard to such affiliation and disaffiliation. Why should any difficulty occur here in Delhi? The province of Bengal is a large one and the Calcutta University embraces within its jurisdiction also the province of Assam. If members of the Senate can come from the different parts of Bengal and Assam to attend meetings of their Senate and participate in its deliberations, I do not see why the members of the Court of the University of Delhi, most of whom are local men, cannot attend its meetings and perform their duties to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Sir, these are some of the objectionable features which still remain in this Bill. But there are certain other matters which have not been provided in this Bill. Several Members from this side of the House pointed out that there was no provision for technical education, no provision for medical education, no provision for engineering education and so forth. And I may go further and say that there is very little provision for research. Now, when you are amending not merely a few sections of this Bill but also all the statutes, you should provide for those branches of study which are not provided for at the present moment. Therefore, it seems that the present Bill is inadequate for the urgent needs of the people of this province. It is inadequate also for another purpose. I have heard again and again, and I have received numerous letters and I have also read in the newspapers, that there is a great deal of mismanagement in some of the colleges affiliated to the Delhi University. Now, what is the provision in this Bill for removing this mismanagement? I find none. I know that a great deal of dissatisfaction existed among the educated public of India with regard to the situation in the Delhi University which prevailed some years ago. In recent times, through the active efforts of the present Vice-Chancellor and by making various amendments in the statutes or regulations matters have been greatly improved. Great credit is due to Sir Maurice Gwyer for what he has done to place the Delhi University on a more satisfactory footing. But he has not been able to do all that is needed. Perhaps his hands were tied; perhaps he had not all the authority required for doing it. It is now the time for us to consider the whole matter. At the present moment I understand that the teaching staffs of most of the colleges have to work in an atmosphere of subserviency, and that very little freedom is allowed to them. If that be the case, I should like to know what would be the effect of their subserviency on the pupils whom they help to bring up. Will the pupils who come out of this University be able to show that amount of courage and independence which are required for a free citizenship of a free India? In one College affiliated to this University, mismanagement has assumed the most serious proportions, but the Government has not thought fit to bring forward a Bill for taking over the management of this college from the hands of its present trustees and vest it in the University for a number of years. I mean the Ramjas College. If the Government had brought forward a Bill for providing for the proper management of this College, I for one would have wholeheartedly supported the Government. But this Government lacks the courage and lacks also the straightforwardness to come out with a Bill for removing mismanagement from this College. In that college what is the present state of things? Teachers are often not in grades, their salaries are not paid for months together; they have no place on the governing bodies. In fact, there is no properly constituted governing body in this college. The Professors and the lecturers are removed without any due cause being assigned for such action and they have to remain in the college just like domestic servants. This is a very unsatisfactory state of things and a single day should not be lost before this state of things is remedied. I am also told that there is one gentleman in Delhi who is the President of the governing bodies of three colleges affiliated to this University. We, as economists, have always condemned monopoly in the economic field. But are you not prepared to condemn such a monopoly in the educational sphere, which is far more dangerous than monopoly in the economic field? But is there any provision in this Bill to remove this monopoly? None. So, Sir, I say that this Bill is quite inadequate to meet the needs of the present situation in Delhi.

Before I conclude, I should like to say a word about communal representation. I wish my Honourable friend Dr. Sir Ziauddin Ahmad had not raised that question. I have very great regard for him and I have worked with him in a spirit of cordiality and goodwill for a long number of years. Now, Sir, this question is a very controversial one. I do not say that there is nothing to be said in favour of this matter and that everything is to be said against it. But it is a very controversial question, and it is not relevant to the issues which face us at the present moment. I have as many friends among the Muslims as I have among the Hindus and in the Calcutta University I have times without number taken up cudgels in favour of the reasonable claims of my Muslim friends. I have supported again and again their election to the various University bodies. But, Sir, I am afraid that a statutory provision of communal representation is not a very desirable thing. There should be other ways by which the legitimate claims of the Muslims should be met. If the citizens of Delhi who are interested in the educational development of the Province have not done their duty in this respect I would advise them to change their policy. But I would request my Honourable friends on this side and the Government on the other not to insist on communal representation as part and parcel of the provisions of this Bill.

Sir, the net effect of the Bill, if it is passed through the Legislature in its present shape, would be to strengthen the hands of the Government over the Delhi University. I do not like this, I am a believer in the autonomy of the Universities. Universities can render service to the people only in an atmosphere of self-government. You should not interfere with their independence either directly or indirectly. But, I find that the net effect of the amendments in the constitution of the different bodies of the University would be to place greater power in the hands of the Government and to reduce the power of the University bodies. That would be a very unsatisfactory state of affairs. It may be urged, and it has been urged that in future we will have self-government in this country, that the Government of this country will consist of our own men, and that therefore we should not object to greater control by Government. But I do not agree with that view. I want the autonomy of educational institutions to be preserved even when the Government of this country becomes an independent government, because in the future Government most probably the party system will prevail, and I will not place any educational institution under the control of a party government.

Sir, I beseech the Government not to proceed with the Bill in its present form. We will support the Government in all its legitimate desires, but I would ask the Government to consider seriously the various aspects of the question and allow the Bill to be circulated in order that public opinion may be fully and freely expressed upon it.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, my task in replying to this debate has been facilitated by the help I have received from various parts of the House, particularly in two admirable maiden speeches and by the intervention of my Honourable friend the Educational Adviser. Sir, after some of the speeches to which we have listened yesterday and today the House will perhaps forgive me if I recall what we are discussing. We are discussing a motion for consideration of the Bill as reported by the Select Committee and a motion for circulation of the Bill for opinions by the 31st December. The Select Committee to which the Bill was referred in the budget Session proposed a few changes, neither so many nor so drastic as to justify republication, and it recommended that the Bill be passed as now amended. The Select Committee have tendered that advice after considering the views of the Delhi University, views which were circulated to Honourable Members last night, views which will be found to favour the changes both in the Act and in the statutes proposed in the Bill except on certain points specified. I think it would be fair to say from these opinions that the University welcome legislation generally on the lines of the Bill, subject to the exceptions that they have taken. And in the light of that and of the recommendation of the Select Committee that the Bill be passed I feel that the onus of justifying any further delay in proceeding to consideration clause by clause lies heavily on those who urge that course. The House already decided in March last against circulation and I am entitled to ask the House to scrutinise carefully the reasons for which circulation is now again advocated.

Mr. R. R. Gupta (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban): Was the Bill ever circulated before? Otherwise how were the opinions received from the universities?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I think perhaps my Honourable friend was not in the House on the last occasion, but what happened was that I undertook to send the Bill to the University of Delhi to obtain their opinion before the Select Committee met. In Select Committee we had the opinion of the University of Delhi only; it was obtained in that way.

Now, Sir, my Honourable friend Maulvi Abdul Ghani who moved for circulation seemed to found his case on what was not in the Bill rather than on what was in the Bill. He does not find in the Bill provisions for the encouragement of technical education, for the regulation of the examination on the compartmental system or for a changed outlook on the part of the university teachers towards their students. He would like to see these in the Delhi University. But to this my answer must be that while these things for which he hankers may very well be desirable, they are not for the most part susceptible of, or suitable for, inclusion in the Act or statutes, and in any case the Bill did not profess to do these things. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai on the other hand objects to the Bill quite frankly for what it does contain. He dislikes many things in the Bill; he does not like the three-years degree course; he has never made any secret about his misgivings about the three-years degree course; he does not like the proposals about recognition and taking away recognition from colleges; he does not like the proposal for a whole-time Vice Chancellor; he does not like the Bill at all, and I do not think he would like it any better if it is circulated and we have to consider it again. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai dealt with most, if not all, of these matters when the Bill was before the House last. He is entitled of course to his views and he is entitled to defeat the Bill; but I am afraid I did not find anything in his speech that constituted an argument for circulation, and I take it he was really arguing against the consideration of the Bill. Well, Sir, the Select Committee was against him and I hope the House will agree to give further consideration to the Bill in spite of Mr. Lalchand Navalrai's misgivings.

I come now to my Honourable and gallant friend, the learned Doctor from Aligarh. The amendment which Sir Zia Uddin rose to move was for the recommitment of the Bill to the Select Committee,—perhaps the same Select Committee,—because as he was at some pains to explain to the House, certain changes which are sought to be effected in the Bill are of a nature so drastic that they cannot be inserted merely by amending various clauses at the consideration stage, and he wishes to have the Bill redrafted. In particular he specified the arrangements necessary to secure the freedom of migration to and from Delhi with its three-years degrees, the distribution of powers between teachers and non-teachers in the control of the university purse, and the reservation of a proportion of places for Muslims in the various bodies that guide the destinies of the university. All these, he considers, are select committee points rather than matters for amendment at the consideration stage. Now, Sir, the House will recollect that in March last I moved for reference of this Bill to a Select Committee and with the approval of the learned Doctor and of his Party I included his name and that of the Deputy Leader of his Party in the Select Committee. I recognise the moderation and the friendly tone with which this debate is conducted and I do not wish in any way to rake up old scores; I shall say no more than is necessary for the immediate purposes of my present argument. But the House will remember that neither the learned Doctor nor his colleague sat on my Select Committee, and their names were withdrawn at the last moment.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): Order, order. That amendment of Sir Zia Uddin has been overruled and therefore not moved. This point therefore ought not to be discussed.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Dr. Sir Zia Uddin, I gather from his speech, is going to support the motion for circulation on the ground that the whole thing should be circulated and brought back to this House and redrafted.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Akhil Chandra Datta): That is quite another motion, not a motion for recommitment to the Select Committee.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Well, Sir, I would ask the House whether, when I proposed the learned Doctor for my Committee and he first accepted and then refused, it now lies in his mouth to say, "We in our Party have brought a string of amendments not suitable for inclusion in the Bill at the consideration stage. They were not considered by the Select Committee,—they are really Select Committee points,—and we must now insist on not going on with the Bill but put it all into the melting pot so that we can have another chance". Sir, he has had his chance of sitting on the Select Committee. I very much regret,—

[Mr. J. D. Tyson.]

I regretted it at the time and I do not cease to regret it,—that we did not have his help and the help of his colleague on our Select Committee when all these matters might have been raised. They have now come up as amendments; but I submit that after withdrawing from the Select Committee he cannot now come to the House and say that these are matters which were not in the original Bill, they should have been discussed in the Select Committee and the House should have further time for the consideration of them in another way. Sir, when I have said that, I do not wish in any way to depreciate the value of Dr. Sir Zia Uddin's contribution to the debate. We always listen to him with attention on this matter of university education in which he has such long experience. I would only add, Sir, that I value the support that I have derived from his blessing of the principle of the three-years course and the principle that the Vice Chancellor should be chosen by the Chancellor in consultation with the Committee of References. I believe, Sir, that really Dr. Sir Zia Uddin is more than half on my side.

Now, Sir, coming to the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League, Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan, he made several points this morning. He said that he was sympathetic—I think his speech showed that he was sympathetic—to the principal object of the Bill before the House, but he was afraid that we were prejudicing the favourable outcome of the experiment by our precipitancy in rushing the Delhi scheme through before the ground was thoroughly prepared. Well, Sir, I apologised, so far as the Bill goes, to the House for bringing it up at short notice at the end of the last Session. But that was the Bill. It cannot, however, be contended that the Delhi reorganisation scheme has been rushed through, and that it has not been under consideration for a very long time. It was approved in principle by Government in 1940. The University then took it up and prepared ordinances and the ordinances were accepted by the Court about this time last year,—in 1942. During the course of examination and of preparation of the requisite ordinances, the University were all the time looking out to see what amendments they would require in the Statutes and perhaps even in the Act, and it was when they had cleared the ground there that they came up for the present Bill. In actual fact, Sir, I am advised that the University need this Bill to enable them to carry on. They have had a preparatory class in existence for one year and that class is now due to begin its three-years degree course. Section 36 (1) of the Act as it stands at present provides that students should not be eligible for admission to a course of study for a degree unless they have passed the intermediate examination of an Indian University, and there is no intermediate examination in Delhi now.

Then, Sir, the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League cited as proof of the alarm that has been created by the very proposals that are now before us and as presaging the decline of the University if we proceeded at what he would doubtless describe as break-neck speed, certain figures to show that admission at present has gone down. Well I have not had time to examine all these figures. I am not for a moment doubting the accuracy of the figures that are quoted but I would like to make some comments on them.

In the preparatory class during the year that has just finished, there were over 700 students. Of these 344 have failed in the qualifying examinations and naturally they cannot, until they have passed them, proceed to the first year of the degree course. 366 have passed, of whom, my friend says, 257 have applied to join the first year class. Now, Sir it is a fact that the 4th August, this very day, is the day officially fixed for the closing of the lists, but I am told that it is also a fact that admissions go on for another month, and as those 366 students are in a preparatory class with this course definitely in view, I think it is fair to assume that some of the balance between 257 and 366, the majority of them I should imagine, will still come forward. More than that,

[said 344 students have failed in the examination. I understand that it has been decided to hold another examination—a kind of “compartmental” examination—to enable these people to have another try, and that will be held in October, in time for those that pass to join the class.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Will the standard of examination be lower?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: They will certainly have more time to prepare. I hope the standard will not be lower.

Even as regards the figure of 791, which was quoted as the comparative figure for last year, I would say that those people had been through the examination hall once only. Many things happen in examinations—there is always wastage—and the ones who have passed this year, i.e., the 366, are persons who have been through the examination twice in the same period. I should also add another small factor. I do not ask the House to attach undue importance to it. Some of the people who would normally have gone to the intermediate class will now go to the Delhi Polytechnic. I think even, so, there are definite indications, as my friend has pointed out, that there is a decrease in the figures, but I think that any change of this kind is bound to have that effect initially. Parents want to be careful. They do not want to take the risk, and in this particular case I am bound to say that those who have had their misgivings about the whole scheme have certainly not been shy of giving publicity to them, and one cannot wonder therefore if parents have at the outset been a little nervous.

As regards the assistance that is being given to colleges, I can only say that I have looked up the grant that is being given to the Anglo-Arabic College and whereas it was Rs. 15,900 last year, it is about Rs. 25,000 this year.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: And the expenditure according to your new scheme?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Yes, the expenditure has gone up. But I imagine the fees have gone up also.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: No.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I come to the Leader of the Congress Nationalist Party. In his closely reasoned speech Dr. Banerjea has reiterated difficulties about the Bill which he has mentioned before in the House and embodied in a minute of dissent to the Select Committee's report. I know he has great misgivings about the three-years course, on the practical side at all events. He fears that migration one way or the other will be impracticable. Well, Sir, it is very difficult for a layman to pronounce upon this matter, but I find that the University itself does want the three-years degree course and wants it now. As a matter of fact it launched it a year ago when it started the preparatory class. I understood my friend, Dr. Banerjea, to say: What is the use of Delhi going on with a pioneer experiment when other Universities in India, as far ahead as he can see, for financial reasons if none else, will never be able to follow this good example? But I hope that he will not deny to Delhi the chance of doing something which is good in itself merely because difficulties in doing it elsewhere prevent other Universities from following suit.

I appreciate, Sir, that the Leader of that Group does not like some points in the Bill, but I do not feel that he has made out any case for circulating as opposed to opposing the Bill or amending it in its various clauses. I submit, therefore, that no case has been made out for circulating the Bill and I am afraid I cannot accept the Maulvi Sahib's motion.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: May I ask a question? Will the Honourable Member enlighten the House if the Select Committee has accepted any of the proposals that were put forward by the Court and the Executive and Academic Councils of the University of Delhi. Let me tell the Honourable Member that the answer is no.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I am not prepared to answer that straight off.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of obtaining opinion thereon by the 31st December 1943."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The House will now proceed to the consideration of the Bill clause by clause. The question is:

"That clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, after sub-clause (a) the following new sub-clause be inserted and the subsequent sub-clause be re-lettered accordingly:

"(b) In section 4 of the said Act, in sub-section (2) (a) after the word "University" the words "or in a College mentioned or recognised by the University" shall be inserted."

We had similar difficulty in Aligarh. We first started the Aligarh University as a uni-collegiate university. The moment we established colleges there, it became necessary to modify this particular clause because the section as it stands says: to hold examinations, to grant and confer degrees and other academic distinctions on persons who have pursued a course of study in the university or are teachers in educational institutions. Suppose a person has not pursued a course of study in the university but he has pursued a course of study in a college recognised by the university. Then, I do not know whether under this particular clause they will be entitled to get the degrees and diplomas. This question is practically a question of law. In order to clarify the position, it is very desirable to add these words. We did add these words in the case of the Aligarh University as soon as we established colleges there. Sir, I move:

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, after sub-clause (a) the following new sub-clause be inserted and the subsequent sub-clause be re-lettered accordingly:

"(b) In section 4 of the said Act, in sub-section (2) (a) after the word "University" the words "or in a College mentioned or recognised by the University" shall be inserted."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I do not think this amendment is at all necessary. I have not been able to learn from the learned Doctor why this is necessary. We think that it is covered already—that "people who have pursued a course of study in the University" covers those who have pursued a course of study in a college which is maintained or recognised by the University. We have no misgiving that there is any difficulty there.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: The misgiving arises from the fact that in the University you have a separate body of teachers known as the University professors, whereas in the colleges, there is a distinct body called the teachers and therefore in order to clarify the position it would be better to accept the amendment which has just been moved by my Honourable friend Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad. It would make the position quite clear and no room for ambiguity will be left.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, after sub-clause (a) the following new sub-clause be inserted and the subsequent sub-clause be re-lettered accordingly:

"(b) In section 4 of the said Act, in sub-section (2) (a) after the word "University" the words "or in a College mentioned or recognised by the University" shall be inserted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 3 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Clause 4 was added to the Bill.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, I move:

"That for clause 5 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"5. Amendment of Section 11, Act VIII of 1922.—In Section 11 of the said Act, for sub-section (1) the following shall be substituted, namely,—

"(1) (a) The Vice-Chancellor shall be appointed by the Chancellor from amongst the three persons selected by the Committee of Reference mentioned in sub-section (b) and recommended by the Executive Council upon such conditions and on such remuneration as the Chancellor may determine.

(b) The Committee of Reference shall consist of three persons two of whom shall be persons, not connected with the University or any College, nominated by the Executive Council, and one person nominated by the Chancellor, who shall appoint one of the three as Chairman of the Committee.

(c) He shall hold office for four years."

I have not changed the substance of this clause of the Bill. What I notice is this. They have got two different methods of selection of the Vice Chancellor, one when he is to be paid and the other when he is to be honorary. The two methods are entirely different. In one case, the tenure is two years, in the other case it is four years. The difficult question which will arise and which will have to be settled beforehand will be whether the Vice Chancellor should be honorary or should be a paid official. If he is honorary, there is one method of selection. In the other case the method is different. The University has to decide first whether he should be honorary or paid. If it is decided that he should be honorary officer the method of selection is provided in the original Act. That is a period of two years. If we decide that he should be a paid officer, then there is an entirely different method which is now provided in the present Bill, which will be added as a proviso. Therefore, this thing will, I think, create a very great confusion in the election of the Vice-Chancellor. I think there should be one method of selection and later on when the Chancellor, that is, the Governor General, decides the terms on which he should be appointed, that will be the time for the Governor General to say whether he should be honorary or paid. He should then fix the salary himself. That is the best way of meeting the problem. But if we follow this Act and add a proviso in the case of those who are to be paid, then it will create very great confusion. As I said, the first question which we have got to decide is whether he should be a paid officer or an honorary officer. Who will decide it, who will initiate it, and whose decision shall be final? I quite agree that there is a great contribution in the amendment of the Select Committee, namely, that the selecting authority should be a Committee of Reference consisting of three persons not connected with the University. This method, no doubt, is a very great improvement on the existing Bill. But if you put two alternatives—one a method when he is to be honorary and another a method when he is to be paid, it will lead to confusion. So, I suggest that we should have one simple method of selection and that selection method is the one recommended in the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee. That is a very good way of doing it. We ought to delete the original clause. We ought to delete altogether the old method of selection and substitute in its place the present method both for honorary and paid Vice-Chancellor. The decision should rest with the Chancellor. He will determine whether in this particular case he should be a paid officer or an honorary officer. I am not changing any terms of the appointment. The issue that I want to raise is that there ought not to be two methods of selection. In my opinion when you have put the responsibility of maintaining the discipline in the University on the Vice-Chancellor, it is impossible to have an honorary Vice-Chancellor. If the Vice-Chancellor is residing in New Delhi and is doing his official duty here, he cannot possibly take the responsibility of the supervision of discipline.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That for clause 5 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"5. Amendment of Section 11, Act VIII of 1922.—In Section 11 of the said Act, for sub-section (1) the following shall be substituted, namely,—

"(1) (a) The Vice-Chancellor shall be appointed by the Chancellor from amongst the three persons selected by the Committee of Reference mentioned in sub-section (b) and recommended by the Executive Council upon such conditions and on such remuneration as the Chancellor may determine.

(b) The Committee of Reference shall consist of three persons two of whom shall be persons, not connected with the University or any College, nominated by the Executive Council, and one person nominated by the Chancellor, who shall appoint one of the three as Chairman of the Committee.

(c) He shall hold office for four years."

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division: Non-Muhammadian): Sir, the Vice-Chancellor will know whether he is going to be honorary or paid. First of all, the Selection Committee will be called. They will appoint three people and their names will be sent to the executive council and then those names will be sent to the Chancellor. Then, the Chancellor will appoint one of them. Is it Sir Zia Uddin's purpose that only at the time of the appointment the Chancellor should say whether he is to be paid or not?

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: That is my amendment.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: The proposal in the Bill is that from the beginning it should be known whether the Vice-Chancellor will be paid or whether he would be honorary. So, there are two methods of selecting the Vice-Chancellor. If it is not known whether the Vice-Chancellor is going to be honorary or paid, the whole method of selection will fall to the ground. On what basis the Committee of Reference will recommend three persons? Sometimes lawyers or Judges of the High Courts or men holding other offices may be selected. Suppose a gentleman like Sir Maurice Gwyer, who was the Chief Justice of the Federal Court, is selected, then he cannot be a paid Vice-Chancellor. But if the Vice-Chancellor is going to be a paid officer then men like Sir Shanti Swarup Bhatnagar or some such other person, who are prepared to give up their jobs altogether, will be selected. If this amendment is accepted, then one will remain in the dark as to what sort of man should be selected. If some lawyer is selected as a Vice-Chancellor, then ipso facto he will be unpaid and be only a part time officer. The Chancellor, only when he is going to appoint such a man, can ask him whether he is willing to be a wholetime or part-time officer. That will not be a very reasonable proposal at this stage. The gentleman must know from the beginning on what condition he is going to be nominated. So, this amendment will create difficulties. If from the beginning it may be arranged somehow, for the gentleman to know whether he will be a whole-time or part time officer, then this single method of selection would, I think, be acceptable. But now as it is, this difficulty of indefiniteness till the last stage of nomination stands in the way of acceptance.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Sir, I am sorry I cannot see eye to eye with my Honourable friend Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad although on many occasions we agree. I am afraid the two methods of selection cannot be combined. We must first know whether the Vice-Chancellor is to be paid or not. If the Vice-Chancellor be a paid officer, then the procedure relating to the selection and appointment must be different from the procedure which will have to be adopted when the Vice-Chancellor is to be an honorary officer. In the case of an honorary Vice-Chancellor, which I believe will be the normal system, it is not necessary to go through the procedure of appointing a selection Committee. But the selection committee will be in great difficulty with regard to this matter and it would not be desirable to give this power to a small body of three persons to select an honorary Vice-Chancellor. An honorary Vice-Chancellor of the rank of the Chief Justice of the Federal Court or of the Judge of the Federal Court or a man of similar status may not like to be considered for the post, if the post is to be decided upon by a Committee of three persons. On the other hand when there is to be a paid Vice-Chancellor, there is a necessity for finding out the proper person who would accept the office and who would do well in that office. If we are to combine the two methods, the one I may call the normal method and the other the extraordinary method, there will be a great deal of complexity and instead of removing the difficulty we will create fresh difficulties. Therefore, I am unable to support his motion. But I will stand by the procedure that is suggested in the report of the Select Committee. There are certain amendments which will be moved later on and on which I will have an opportunity of speaking later on. But before I pass on to that question, I should like to invite the attention of the Government Member with regard to certain ambiguity in sub-clause (c), clause 5. In the fifth line you find "shall select not less than three persons and shall report its selection to the Executive Council". In the sixth line, you find "The executive council shall make its recommendations on the three persons so selected to the Chancellor". I suggest you have to make proper amendments to remove the ambiguity.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Who will decide whether the Vice-Chancellor will be honorary?

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: I say the normal method is for the Chancellor to appoint the Vice-Chancellor. But when the proviso is to be given effect to, that would be an extraordinary method. In the case of the ordinary method, my proposal is that on the recommendation of the executive council, the Chancellor should decide. But in the Select Committee report, we find that either the Chancellor on his own motion or the Chancellor on the motion of the Executive Council would decide. So there would be complication if the amendment is accepted. As regards the procedure it is fully laid down; only there is an ambiguity towards the end of the paragraph which will have to be cleared up.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, in view of what has fallen from my Honourable friend Pandit Nilakantha Das and my Honourable friend Dr. Banerjee, I can afford to be short. In drafting the Bill, we deliberately kept the two systems. We considered that the existing system works perfectly well when it is a matter of selecting a part-time and therefore, obviously, a local gentleman to be Vice-Chancellor. We thought that for a whole-time Vice-Chancellor it would be necessary to go further afield than Delhi to make sure of getting the best man and we thought that for that purpose something in the nature of a Committee of Selection would be necessary. We therefore deliberately, in drafting the Bill, let the existing procedure stand for part-time Vice-Chancellors and only suggested the other procedure for a whole-time Vice-Chancellor. We definitely believe that it will be necessary for a decision to be taken as to whether a part-time Vice-Chancellor will do or a whole-time Vice-Chancellor is required before a search is made for a Vice-Chancellor. No doubt the field will be reviewed a little first. Where the need is clear for a whole-time Vice-Chancellor, the decision should definitely be taken first and we should go for a whole-time Vice-Chancellor. If we were to adopt the procedure suggested in this amendment, I think the Chancellor would be in a very invidious position in deciding whether the person selected is to be given any pay or not. After all it turns to some extent on whether he is whole-time or part-time. The matter was given very careful consideration in the Select Committee and we on this side would like to stand by what was in effect a unanimous recommendation of the Select Committee.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That for clause 5 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"5. Amendment of Section 11, Act VIII of 1922.—In Section 11 of the said Act, for sub-section (1) the following shall be substituted, namely,—

"(1) (a) The Vice-Chancellor shall be appointed by the Chancellor from amongst the three persons selected by the Committee of Reference mentioned in sub-section (b) and recommended by the Executive Council upon such conditions and on such remuneration as the Chancellor may determine.

"(b) The Committee of Reference shall consist of three persons two of whom shall be persons, not connected with the University or any College, nominated by the Executive Council, and one person nominated by the Chancellor, who shall appoint one of the three as Chairman of the Committee.

"(c) He shall hold office for four years'."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya (Burdwan Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I move:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in the proposed proviso, the words 'of his own motion or' be omitted."

This Bill is going to appoint a paid Vice-Chancellor. With regard to the selection of the candidates this proviso makes it a condition that "the Chancellor of his own motion or at the instance of the Executive Council after consultation with the Academic Council is of opinion that a Vice-Chancellor should be appointed on the condition that he gives his whole time to the work of the University. . . .". I do not support that there should be alternative methods. I therefore propose the deletion of the words "of his own motion or". The proviso would then read:

"Provided that if the Chancellor at the instance of the Executive Council. . . ."

It is very natural for Government to give power to the Chancellor with regard to the appointment of the Vice-Chancellor. While there is Executive Council which can very well do this business, why should there be any alternative authority? I think it should be either Chancellor or the Executive Council. My proposal is very simple. The Chancellor is to give the sanction after the selection is made. Consequently the words "at the instance of the Executive Council" are quite sufficient. I hope this amendment will be accepted by Government. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in the proposed proviso, the words 'of his own motion or' be omitted."

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Sir, the question here is as to who is to take the initiative in the matter of deciding whether there should be a paid Vice-Chancellor or not. In the report of the Select Committee we find that the Chancellor may take the initiative or the executive council may take it. The present amendment is that the Chancellor should not take the initiative in his matter. I support this view because in my opinion the executive council consisting of as many as 27 persons who are administering the affairs of the university are the proper persons to know whether a whole-time Vice-Chancellor is needed or not. If they are unable to cope with the work of the university with the assistance of a part-time Vice-Chancellor, they themselves will come forward and say that they are unable to cope with the work and therefore a whole-time Vice-Chancellor should be appointed. But it is laid down in the report of the Select Committee that the Chancellor also may take the initiative. Sir, I am not willing to give the initiative to the Chancellor because his knowledge of the affairs of the university is not likely to be so great and so extensive as the knowledge of the executive council. Besides, the proposal in the report of the Select Committee may be resented by the executive council. If without reference to the Executive Council the Chancellor takes the initiative and decides that a whole-time Vice-Chancellor should be appointed there may be friction between the Chancellor and the executive council. The executive council may say that as they are the people who are administering the affairs of the university they know better than the Chancellor whether a paid Vice-Chancellor is needed or not and therefore they are not going to cooperate in the work of administration of the University. They may not lend their whole-hearted support to the paid Vice-Chancellor if he is appointed and there may be a great deal of trouble between the paid Vice-Chancellor and the executive council. In order to remove the possibility of such trouble it is desirable that the initiative should come from the executive council and not from the Chancellor.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: Sir, one really fails to understand what harm there is if the Chancellor takes the initiative in saying that a paid Vice-Chancellor is necessary for the university. We have provided for everything; we have provided for a reference committee where practically the Executive Council will have its say and we have . . .

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: But that will be with regard to the personnel.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: Yes, from the beginning to end the selection of the personnel may be controlled by the university. The Chancellor may represent Government or the Education Department; they are in charge of the money; they are going to make great educational experiments, and if they provide the funds to employ a whole-time man and a capable man, I do not see why there should be friction and the heavens should fall down if the Chancellor simply says—"Well you now have a whole-time man."

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: There will be difference of opinion.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: The Chancellor will only say—"Have a good and whole-time man." The selection will practically be done by the Executive Council. I would rather say that it is the Chancellor who should take this initiative and not the Executive Council. There is a well-known psychological development which ends in a fixed idea, and people habituated to a particular way of thinking become no-changers, a phrase which we are used to in our political life. This no-change mentality has come over certain Honourable Members of this House and they will have no change.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: Will 27 persons be no-changers and only one person a pro-changer?

Pandit Nilakantha Das: The late Mr. C. R. Das was a pro-changer when all the rest of India was full of no-changers and he was opposed by people like us. The pro-changer is always a pioneer and ordinary common people think in a groove. In this Delhi University there is going to be a great experiment and the Vice-Chancellor will have to do so many things and he will want to have many powers, and perhaps the Bill will be again amended. In a small place like Delhi there are many parties and cliques which may not want a paid Vice-Chancellor and if you give the option to the Executive Council, I apprehend they will never recommend the appointment of a whole-time paid Vice-Chancellor because they do not want educational experiments.

An Honourable Member: Because they are wiser.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: If my Honourable friends think they are wiser and cannot think in a new line, let them have their satisfaction of becoming wiser. But I emphatically state that there is no harm, rather it is a thing to be approved that the Chancellor should be able to say: 'Well, gentlemen, I will give you money. Have the best man'. This we are going to oppose. It is shameful.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Sir, my views are already known to the House. At this point I do not want to get into any excitement as my learned friend. The provision that has been made by the Select Committee is in itself contradictory. You are giving a privilege to two bodies to make a proposal, but thereby you are nullifying the power of one or the other. Supposing the Executive Council say that they do not want it. There is power in the Chancellor. He may say that it should be proposed. In that case he is sitting as an Appeal Court and I do not think that that must have been the intention of the Select Committee. Therefore, I submit that it should be left to one body, either to the Chancellor or to the Executive Council. After all, it is a proposal that is going to be made and I must admit that it is the Executive Council who are dealing with the daily administration and they know much more than the Chancellor, who of course supervises the business but does not know the every day administration. Therefore the words should be deleted and it should be left so that the power may be exercised by the Executive Council. After all, the Executive Council also has to consult the Academic Council and will also know more from the Professors and others who can help them by giving them the real position as to whether an honorary Vice-Chancellor will be suitable or not. I therefore support this amendment.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, the proviso to the original Bill reads:

"Provided that if the Chancellor is of opinion and so informs the Executive Council that a Vice-Chancellor should be appointed on the condition that he gave his whole-time to the work of the University, the appointment shall be made by the Chancellor after such consultation with the Executive Council as he thinks fit."

Quite frankly, the Government have got to such a stage in this educational experiment that it may be necessary from Government's point of view to ensure that the experiment has the most favourable opportunity of being successful to have a whole-time Vice-Chancellor. To say that in fact Government has a stake in the matter, I may mention that 65 per cent. of the expenditure of the University is at present met from Government grants—much the biggest proportion of grant-in-aid to any University in India and over and above what Government gives as grants-in-aid to colleges. We therefore feel that the Chancellor who is in the Government but has a distinct duty to the University, and would of course hear the University in the matter and hear the Government if the Government were anxious, that the decision in this matter should rest with the Chancellor. After receiving the views of the University in the matter, the Select Committee, as the House will observe, have done this. But they have associated the University in the initial stage provided the Chancellor on his own motion or at the instance of the Executive Council, after consultation with the Academic Council is of the opinion that there should be a whole-time Vice-Chancellor. We were full consenting parties to that. We were glad to see the University associated in this matter, and more than that, as we shall see when we come to the other amendments, the Select Committee have associated the Executive Council to such an extent with respect to a paid Vice-Chancellor that a paid Vice-Chancellor will be selected by the Executive Committee. That is the effect of the whole clause.

I must say, Sir, that we have gone from this side as far as we feel we can and I must stand by the recommendation of the Select Committee to which I am not only a party but which I consider is a definite improvement in the Bill as it was originally introduced.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: I wish to make a withdrawal. Unfortunately at the end of my speech I used the word "shameful".

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Order, order. The Honourable Member cannot make two speeches.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: I wish to withdraw the word "shameful". I would say "unthinkable".

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): All right. The question is:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in the proposed proviso, the words 'of his own motion or be omitted.'"

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: Sir, I move.

"That in Clause 5 of the Bill, in part (a) of the proposed proviso for the word 'four' the word 'three' be substituted."

When I see that no simple amendment is acceptable to the Government, I feel disinclined to move this. I would ask the Honourable Member to consider the reasons for my amendment. We are going to make an experiment with the three years course and for the first three years let there be one who can take charge of this experiment. Any official who has power for more than three years in the University becomes very powerful and possibilities for intrigues and cliques ensue. To avoid that I have proposed that he should be appointed for three years only and in the third year let the Executive Council or for the matter of that the Chancellor decide whether he should continue or whether a new man should be brought in. Sir, men in the highest position become almost undesirable from the abuse of power and the lust of wealth. I believe, Sir, that no officials should be in any institution for a term of more than three years at a time. With these words, I move the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (a) of the proposed proviso for the word 'four' the word 'three' be substituted."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, the present term of a part-time unpaid Vice-Chancellor is two years. Considering that a whole-time Vice-Chancellor will have to give up any other pursuits that he has and devote his whole-time to the work, we think that we should be prejudiced in getting a really first-class man unless we can assure him of a term of office which will justify his giving up anything that he is doing already and which will hold out the hope also of being able really to do something for the University in his term. Four years is not a very long time for a man to hold an office of that kind. I cannot believe that if he is going to survive for three years without yielding to the lust of power and the lust of wealth, which, I think, my Honourable friend referred to, the extra year is going to make any difference. We considered the question of the period in the Select Committee and I again would prefer to stick to the Select Committee's figure of four years.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Will he not be eligible for re-appointment?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: There is no bar.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: The Honourable Mr. Tyson in his last speech on the motion which was before this House a little while ago had twitted the Muslim League Party for withdrawing its representatives from the Select Committee. You are aware, Sir, of the reasons that had prompted the Muslim League to take that action. It was this stubborn attitude of the Government which was responsible for our action then. Here a very innocent amendment has been moved that the period of the appointment of a Vice-Chancellor should be reduced from four to three years. In all the Universities the Vice-Chancellors are appointed, as far as I know, or at least in most of the universities, for three years. I know that the Vice-Chancellor of the Lucknow University, the Vice-Chancellor of the Allahabad University, the Vice-Chancellor of the Aligarh University, where there is a provision for a salary, is appointed for three years. I do not know what superhuman beings Mr. Tyson has in view whom he is going to appoint as a Vice-Chancellor of the Delhi University and I do not know what selfish, greedy person he has in his mind who would say at the time of his appointment "I refuse to take up the appointment unless I am assured the job for another one year". If the gentleman who is appointed to this high office is one who is determined to serve the best interests of the University, I do not see any reason why the Executive Council or the Academic Council should be so unreasonable as to desire a change; but if, on the other hand, the person is undesirable, then let me tell him that even one year's respite is not a bad thing for an Executive Council that has got to work under him. Therefore, I suggest that the Government should not insist on opposing amendments of this nature. They should adopt an attitude of reasonableness and not depend too much on the votes which they have in their pockets.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Sir, I rise to support this amendment. The Honourable the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party has pointed out that in several Universities the term of office of the paid Vice-Chancellor is three years. I believe that there is no University in India where the term of office of a paid Vice-Chancellor is more than three years.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I think in the Dacca University it is five years.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: One out of eighteen; I stand corrected. All the other Universities have the term of office of their Vice-Chancellors fixed either for two years or for three years. Sir, the question is of some importance—I do not say it is of the greatest importance. It may happen that there may be a conflict between the views of the salaried Vice-Chancellor and the executive council; it may also happen that the Vice-Chancellor may become something of an autocrat, and if that happens, it would be better to end his period of office at the termination of three years rather than to continue the conflict or that tussle for another year. If, however, there is no disagreement between the executive council and the Vice-Chancellor there is no bar to the Vice-Chancellor being re-appointed. Therefore, Sir, it is desirable from all points of view that the Vice-Chancellor's term of office should be fixed at three years.

Now, Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, suggested that a person would not accept the post of a paid Vice-Chancellor unless he was assured of a term of four years. Sir, we expect that those who will come to serve this University will come from a spirit of sacrifice, from a spirit of sympathy and not from a spirit of greed as has been suggested by my Honourable friend, Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan. Sir, it is absolutely necessary to create a good atmosphere in the country and retain that atmosphere for as long a period as possible. If there is an undesirable atmosphere that atmosphere should be improved at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin: Mr. President if it is a very simple matter to my mind whether a person who is asked to hold the office or holds it for four years or three years, or whether he is going to accept that office on certain terms, or not. Sir, it is a common experience that at the time when the tenures of such posts are renewed intrigues and cliques, as my Honourable friend the Mover of the amendment has said, come into play. In order that those cliques and intrigues should be put off for a longer period, I think the period of four years is a very desirable suggestion.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Why not ten years?

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin: One has to come to some sort of via media and I think a period of four years would be very reasonable.

Sir, when a new man takes office, he generally has to introduce some reforms and carry out his own policy, but for sometime after taking up the office he is certainly led by others. Then comes the time when he is in a position to introduce his policy, the time draws nearer to the end of his term and when he will have to canvass for renewal of his term. A person who is holding office and wishes a longer lease of life must be a superhuman, as my Honourable friend Dr. Banerjee, has said, if he does not care to remain in office, and comes forward with a spirit of sacrifice. But considering the case of ordinary human beings, we see that when they once get into office they want to cling to it—even if they have to beg and canvass.

[4TH AUG., 1943.]

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Have we not got so many Executive Councillors who have made sacrifice?

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin: They have not to beg and canvass after every six months. And, therefore, Sir, I say that in order to put off that begging and canvassing the recommendation which has been made by the Select Committee after a very careful consideration should be accepted by the House.

[At this stage, Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani rose to speak.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member can speak tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 5th August, 1943.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Thursday, 5th August 1943.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

OUTCOME OF THE "GROW MORE FOOD" CAMPAIGN.

198. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands be pleased to state, province by province, the areas of land in excess of the existing agricultural and horticultural lands which had been cultivated in 1942 and upto the 15th June, 1943, for growing more food? Is there any pasture land in India?

(b) What has been produced in different provinces on these extra cultivated lands and how much?

(c) What amount did the Government of India spend by payments to the agriculturists in different provinces for cultivation, and what return has been obtained by them? Have Government made payments to anybody else who are not agriculturists?

(d) What establishment and advertisement expenses have been incurred during 1942 and 1943 and what is the expense ratio in relation to the quantity and price of food grown?

(e) Has excess land been cultivated in all the provinces to grow rice, wheat, maize, millet, sugar-cane in excess of the normal yearly production? Will the Honourable Member be pleased to lay on the table a detailed statement on excess lands and excess produce secured under the "Grow more Food" Campaign?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a), (b) and (e). Specific information in respect of all excess lands brought under cultivation in each province as a result of the "Grow More Food" campaign is not readily available. A statement showing the increase in the area and yield in 1942-43 over 1941-42 in respect of principal food grains is laid on the table.

Certain grasslands, groves, shrub areas, etc., which serve as pasturelands, are included under "culturable but not cultivated" lands in the agricultural statistics of India.

(c) In the financial year 1942-43 Government of India sanctioned a total grant of Rs. 18.84 lakhs from the Cotton Fund to certain provinces and States to assist the cotton growers in diverting lands from short-staple cotton to food grains. These grants were made on condition that the benefit under them goes to the actual cultivator. No less than 53,39,000 acres were diverted from cotton to food crops in 1942. No grant has been sanctioned by the Government of India from this source for anybody other than agriculturists.

In the current financial year, the Government of India have so far sanctioned the following grants and loans in furtherance of the food production drive:—

(i) Rs. 47.70 lakhs in grants and Rs. 98.97 lakhs in loans to enable the provinces to finance measures calculated to contribute materially to increase food production in the near future.

(ii) Rs. 14.92 lakhs in grants from the Cotton Fund to enable the provinces and States to assist cotton grower in diverting lands from short-staple cotton to food grains during the current season.

(d) In the financial year 1942-43, Government of India incurred a total expenditure of Rs. 500 on account of establishment and Rs. 35,000 on account of advertisement through the National War Front. The ratio of expenditure to the value of food grown is negligible.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member if the statement laid on the table contains a statement province by province?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Yes, and in respect of such States as have supplied statistics.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Certain grasslands, groves, shrub areas, etc., which serve as pasture lands are included under "cultural but not cultivated" lands in the agricultural statistics of India.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Does the statement contain also the amount of grain which each province produces?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: It is a statement of areas and yields.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member had better look into the statement. Next question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask a supplementary question on the last question?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next question has been called.

EPIDEMIC OF FEVER, SMALL-POX AND TYPHOID IN DELHI.

199. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands be pleased to state if it is a fact that there has been an epidemic of fever, small-pox and typhoid in Delhi during April, May and June 1943 and that Phthisis is on the increase? If so, what is the reason for such an epidemic in the Capital? What steps did Government take to stop it, and how did they fail to prevent its taking the epidemic form? How may Phthisis be stopped?

(b) How many deaths occurred amongst (i) children; (ii) youths; and (iii) adults and in what quarters of Delhi were these diseases more fatal than in other quarters? What proportion of the population of New Delhi and Old Delhi suffered and died?

(c) Will he lay on the table a report of the Civil Surgeon, and of the Director General, Indian Medical Service, on the matter?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) and (c). It is a fact that there was an outbreak of small-pox in Delhi in the period April to June 1943. The measures taken to prevent its spreading included the isolation of patients, the disinfection of infected houses and intensive vaccination in affected areas. There were some cases of typhoid but the number of cases and deaths from this cause reported was less than in the corresponding period of the previous two years. The number of reported deaths from fevers during the period was not substantially higher than in previous years. On the basis of the reported cases of tuberculosis in the first six months of 1943 it appears that the 1943 total will be lower than the total for the previous year. The facts which are ascertainable do not indicate that the disease is on the increase. A report by the Chief Health Officer, Delhi Province, is laid on the table of the House.

(b) A statement is laid on the table of the house.

Part (b).

Statement.

The smallpox mortality rate was higher in Delhi City than in New Delhi. The disease was not more fatal in any particular quarter of Delhi City, than in others, the mortality rates being more or less the same in the various wards in which the disease occurred. As regards the other three diseases also the mortality rates were more or less the same in the different wards.

Part (c).—Report by the Chief Health Officer, Delhi Province, (with which the Public Health Commissioner with the Government of India concurs).

Statements showing (i) cases and deaths from fever, smallpox and typhoid during the period April to June in 1941, 1942 and 1943 and (ii) cases and deaths from Phthisis in 1941, 1942 and the first half of 1943 are enclosed herewith.

2. A study of the recorded figures shows that during the 3 months April, May and June, 1943, the incidence of typhoid was definitely less than during the corresponding period in 1941 and 1942. The extent to which the disease was present cannot be described as epidemic.

3. As regards 'fever' only figures for deaths are available. This is an undefined group in which various causes of deaths of which fever is a prominent symptom are included. It is therefore not possible to attach the same significance to any fluctuation in these figures as in the case of specific diseases like typhoid or tuberculosis. The registered deaths from fevers during the 3 months in 1943 show an increase over the corresponding figures in 1942 but are less than those in 1941. They are not regarded as constituting an epidemic.

4. There has been an increase in the incidence of smallpox during April, May and June 1943 as compared with the previous 2 years. Vaccination is the most important precautionary measure against smallpox. During 1943, 65,090 vaccinations were done as against 35,592 in 1942 and 34,962 in 1941. Other precautionary measures taken include isolation of patients in the Infectious Diseases Hospital and disinfection of every infected house. These preventive measures undoubtedly helped to control the outbreak especially when it is remembered that under the conditions arising out of the present emergency the movement of population into and out of Delhi Urban Area has been on an extensive scale and the consequent introduction of infection from outside much more frequent than under ordinary conditions.

5. As regards Phthisis the recorded figures show that in 1942 the incidence of the disease was greater than that in 1941. The increase is not considered to be due to any actual increase in the number of infections but rather to a more effective co-ordination between tuberculosis clinics and the tuberculosis Health Visitors and therefore to a larger number of cases being discovered. On the basis of the number of cases reported during the first half of 1943 it would appear that the incidence of the disease in 1943 will be less than that in 1942. It cannot therefore be said that Phthisis is on the increase.

6. The measures that may be taken for control of phthisis are an anti-tuberculosis campaign on a wide front including isolation and treatment of the open case, special measures to protect contacts specially children in the homes of tuberculosis patients and an effort to increase the general standard of living by providing better housing conditions and adequate nutrition. Recently the following measures have been adopted to supplement those already existing:—

- (a) Establishment of a model tuberculosis clinic in New Delhi.
- (b) Experimental scheme of organised home treatment which aims at modern scientific treatment in the houses of those who cannot get admission in hospitals.

Kunwar Hajee Ismail Alikhan: May I know what is the percentage of deaths by typhoid?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I have not got the percentage here. I am afraid I must ask for notice.

Mr. K. O. Neogy: The Honourable Member referred to deaths from fever, but the question relates to an epidemic of fever. Is the Honourable Member in a position to say whether there was an epidemic of malaria last autumn and whether the epidemic still continues, and whether it is not a fact that a fresh epidemic of malaria has broken-out already?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: The question does not relate to last autumn at all. It relates to April to June of this year.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: In connection with this matter, may I ask whether the Government have taken any steps to increase the output of quinine?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I think the Honourable Member has a question on that subject coming up on Tuesday next.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR PROCURING STAPLE FOOD FOR CIVILIAN POPULATION.

200. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Food be pleased to state what fresh arrangements have been made, province by province, for procuring staple food for the civilian population of India?

(b) What is the population, province by province, and what is the necessary staple food for them such as rice and wheat, per capita, and what is the total production in each province taking on average of five years? Do the provinces produce the quantity required for their population? If not, what is the deficiency in each province, and how may excess provinces supply the deficit provinces?

(c) Has India been consulted in the Hot Spring Food Conference? If so, who represented India?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) The Food Department have prepared a plan for the distribution of the surpluses of foodgrains declared by the surplus areas amongst the deficit areas in the light of their requirements and the available resources. The recipient and supplying administrations concerned have been asked to make arrangements for procuring and transporting these quantities in conformity with the plan.

(b) Statements are laid on the table.

(c) Yes. India was represented by:

Sir Girja Shanker Bajpai, Agent General for India, Washington; Chairman of the Delegation.

Mr. P. M. Kharegat, Vice Chairman, Imperial Council of Agricultural Research.

Sir David Meek, Indian Government Trade Commissioner, London.

Mr. H. S. Malik, Indian Government Trade Commissioner, New York.

Dr. W. R. Aykroyd, Director of the Indian Institute of Nutrition Research, Coonoor.

*Three pre war years' production(+) or (-) not imports or exports.
(a) Estimated, actual not available.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the Government will prepare a report and circulate it to the Members of the Legislature on this Hot Spring Food Conference?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: As soon as a report is received in full I will consider the matter.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Arising out of the answer to part (a) of the question, may I know to what extent these fresh arrangements have been successful in Calcutta?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: It is very difficult for us to estimate the success or otherwise of the modified basic scheme at this stage with reference to any particular area, but I can say this much that we are doing our best.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Is the Honourable Member aware that, in spite of the arrangements which the Honourable Member suggests are being taken, people in Calcutta are dying every day, about 25 or 30, and people are living on carcasses?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I have seen a press report to that effect, but that has nothing to do with the scheme itself.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: In view of the fact that there is to be a discussion on this food question, may I ask the Honourable Member whether he will circulate to Members the statement which he has laid before the Assembly to-day? The proceedings of the Assembly are not likely to be available to other Members before the end of this Session. I would therefore suggest that this statement be circulated to Members before the discussion takes place.

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: As far as my reply of to-day is concerned, if that is the desire of the House, I will certainly do it.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Did the Committee which is now sitting on food make any recommendation on this particular point?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: The recommendations are still being considered by the Committee. I am informed that they have finished their preliminary stage of discussion and the report is being drafted, but it has not yet come to us.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will an interim report be available before we have a discussion on food?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I am afraid, not.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: Should not the Food Committee appointed by this Assembly be called for consultation?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I am asked to give my opinion. I can only give information in reply to questions.

TRADE AGREEMENTS RE POST-WAR RECONSTRUCTION.

201. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: Will the Honourable Member for Commerce be pleased to state if any trade agreement between the United Kingdom, the United States of America, the Dominions of Canada, and Australia, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and India is proposed to be reached in connection with the post-war reconstruction?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: No suggestion for a multilateral trade pact between the countries named has hitherto been made to the Government of India. The nature of the post-war trade relations between the countries named must await international discussion, which has not yet been initiated, and the Government of India are not now in a position to say what arrangements are most likely to commend themselves when the time comes.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Is it a fact that no negotiations regarding trade were being undertaken by this government with America? Is it a fact?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: There have been some discussions about it but nothing further has been done.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: What is the result of those discussions?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: It is still in the stage of discussion.

RISE IN FOOD AND TEXTILE PRICES.

202. *Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: (a) Is the Honourable Member for Industries and Civil Supplies aware of the fact that there has been 500 per cent. rise in food prices and 400 per cent rise in textile (cotton) which has created a serious situation in the country as a whole?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: Since the introduction of the Cotton Cloth and Yarn Control Order there has been a very considerable reduction, and prices are now on an average about 250 per cent. above the pre-war level. Food prices in India vary from centre to centre but in general the rise has been about 300 per cent. over the pre-war level.

BLOOD BANKS IN INDIA.

203. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands be pleased to state the number of blood banks which have been established in India?

(b) How much blood is collected by them every month?

(c) Has it been brought to the notice of the Honourable Member that blood banks in India are not collecting blood in sufficient quantity?

(d) Do Government propose to adopt some measures to increase the quantity of blood in these banks?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) 21.

(b) Approximately 2,700 pints.

(c) It is a fact that the amount of blood collected at some places is inadequate.

(d) The Government of India are doing all that they can to assist Provincial Governments to establish and develop blood banks. They have provided technical advice to Provincial Governments and have appointed an officer on special duty who has toured throughout India and addressed meetings on the subject in many places. They have also arranged for publicity in co-operation with the National War Front, the Red Cross Society and the Department of Information and Broadcasting. The question of further measures to be adopted for enlisting the co-operation of the public is a matter for Provincial Governments.

LIVE STOCK IMPROVEMENT WORK BY CATTLE BREEDING STATIONS AT KARNAL AND IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

204. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state the object of the cattle breeding stations at Karnal and the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute?

(b) What work has been done by these stations for the improvement of the livestock of India?

(c) In what manner are the dairy products, like milk, cream or ghee disposed of?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) The object of the cattle breeding stations at Karnal and the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute is to conduct research in mixed farming with a view to improving the milking capacity of Sahiwal and Tharparkar breeds of cows.

(b) As a result of the research work being done at these stations the average yield of milk per cow per lactation has been raised from 5 lbs. a day to over 22 lbs. a day. For detailed information, the Honourable Member is referred to the Scientific Reports of the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute, for the years ending 30th June, 1937, and 30th June 1941, which are available in the library of the House.

(c) At the Institute, except in certain flush periods, the bulk of the supply of milk and milk products is sold to the staff and students of the Institute. The surplus, if any, is sold to outsiders. At Karnal, the surplus remaining after meeting the requirements of the small number of the Farm staff and certain local officials living near the Farm, is sold to a Contractor.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if milk is supplied at the same fixed rate to the low paid staff?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: It is supplied to all grades of the staff at the same fixed rate.

Sardar Sant Singh: Has any representation been made to the Honourable Member that the low paid staff should be supplied milk at cheaper rates?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I have not seen any such representation.

APPOINTMENTS OF SOUTH INDIANS IN THE IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

205. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state what steps he has taken to put a stop to the appointments of South Indians in the Imperial Agricultural Research Institute, and to bring in more North Indians? If none, why?

(b) Is he aware that not less than half a dozen South Indians have again been appointed by the Director since the 1st of March, and how long is he to continue this policy?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the statement laid on the table of the House on the 28th July, 1943, in reply to his starred question No. 86, which shows that Punjabis have obtained more appointments than South Indians in every class of service at the Institute. Government see no reason to take action on the lines suggested by the Honourable Member.

(b) Yes, out of 29 temporary posts in the subordinate service filled by the Director since the 1st March, 1943, only 6 have been filled by South Indians.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if the figures given by the Honourable Member include menial staff like chaukidars and jamadars in which class the Punjabis dominate?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: They refer to the subordinate servants but my reply makes it clear that in every category, class 1, class 2 and subordinate service the Punjabis have dominated.

Sardar Sant Singh: Do the figures include class 1 and class 2 also?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: They do.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I know whether it is the intention of the Government of India to allow a very large number of Punjabis in the public services? Is it the policy of the Government of India?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: So far as the Institute goes, our intention is to take the best man we can get, irrespective of province.

Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj: May I ask whether the term North Indians means only the Punjabis?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: The questioner referred to Punjabis in the previous question. He did not refer to North Indians: he referred to Punjabis and "South Indians".

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: What is the proportion of Biharis?

(No reply.)

HARDSHIPS TO STUDENTS UNDER THREE YEARS' DEGREE COURSE, IN DELHI UNIVERSITY.

206. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state the practical advantages for the three years' course in the Delhi University?

(b) What provisions have been made for those students who during their preparatory course wish to migrate to other institutions where such system is not in existence?

(c) Is he aware that after passing the preparatory class the students who wish to sit for any competitive examination like Rurkee Examination or Railway Examination, etc., must spend one year at the Polytechnic Institute to make them eligible for these lines or others?

(d) Is he aware of the hardships involved thereby on the students inasmuch as they would be required to change colleges unnecessarily in case one is not successful in seeking admission to any of the above colleges or lines?

(e) Does he propose to consider the desirability of permitting the non-medical students to prosecute their studies in the same colleges to which they are admitted in the first instance? If not, what are the difficulties?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) The institution of the three-year degree course is expected to raise the standard of University and High School education.

(b) The Preparatory Course will soon be replaced by a class XI in the reorganised Higher Secondary Schools of the Delhi Province. It is hoped that students who pass the Qualifying Examination held at the end of the Preparatory Course or the Higher Secondary Examination held at the end of class XI and wish to migrate to other Universities, will be able to obtain admission to the Senior Intermediate Class of those Universities. Those who have not yet passed either examination will be able to get admission to other Universities by virtue of their Matriculation or High School Certificate.

(c) Yes.

(d) The pre-Engineering Examination of the Delhi Polytechnic will be of the same standard as the Intermediate (Science) Examination of an Indian University and it is hoped that it will be recognised as such by all Universities in India. If any student fails to secure admission to an Engineering College or other professional course elsewhere, he may join a B.Sc., class if he desires to do so. The Academic Council of the Delhi University is empowered to exempt such students from the first year of the three-year degree course.

(e) The Honourable Member is apparently referring to students preparing for the Pre-engineering Course. As the number of such students will be small and as Colleges of the Delhi University will be preparing for the new three-year degree course, it will not be possible to provide for such students in each College. As I have already stated in reply to part (b) of the question, the Colleges will cease to provide a Preparatory Course before long and students desiring to take the pre-Engineering Course will proceed to the Polytechnic direct from the Higher Secondary Schools. The facilities available for such students at the Polytechnic are superior to any which could be provided at the Colleges of the University.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know what particular reformation has been introduced up to this time in the High Schools?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Over 20 High Schools have already introduced Class XI.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is it intended to introduce pre-Engineering and pre-Medical courses in the University for the benefit of those who want to join the professional colleges?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: A pre-Medical course is being done by arrangement with the Hindu College and pre-Engineering course will be done at the Polytechnic.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know if more competent Masters or Professors have been appointed for the higher secondary class?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Yes, special qualifications and special salaries have been provided for.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: May I ask if any special qualifications have been prescribed for the teachers of the Secondary Schools?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Yes, A Master's degree, as a general rule.

PAPERS PUBLISHED BY THE DIRECTOR, IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE AS CHEMIST.

207. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state why the Director, Imperial Agricultural Research Institute, as Chemist, could publish only 14 papers as compared with 150 by other sections since 1936?

(b) Is it a fact that his staff submits papers to him for publication, but he does not forward them?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) Apart from the fact that some scientific subjects, of which Agricultural Chemistry is not one, lend themselves to piecemeal publication more readily than others, the present Director has had to carry the administrative burden of the move of the Institute from Pusa to New Delhi and the greatly increased work of the Directorship during four years of war.

(b) The work being done in the Chemical Section of the Institute is reported and recorded in the annual Scientific Reports of the Institute for the information of other workers. The papers and reports submitted by the staff are published when they make a definite contribution or when co-ordinated with other lines of work in progress.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if the Director is a scientist and is employed as such in the Research Institute?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: He is a scientist, but of late we have had to give him some relief in his own section at the Institute because his work as Director is so heavy.

Sardar Sant Singh: Is it not a fact that his post is meant primarily for the purpose of carrying on research work?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: He combines the two posts of head of the Chemical Section and Director of the Institute. It is impossible to say which is primary.

Sardar Sant Singh: Can he not be relieved of his work as a Director in order to do more work for which he is paid?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: He is paid both as Director and as Head of the Scientific Section. We have taken steps to relieve him on the scientific side so as to enable him to handle the increased work of the Directorship.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will it not be more appropriate if he is relieved of administrative work and given more scientific work?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: That is a matter of opinion.

DISPOSAL OF THE DAIRY PRODUCTS OF THE IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

208. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands please state if it is a fact that a South Indian Cattle Superintendent sold but the best cows as condemned to one of the biggest industrialists in India?

(b) In what way are the dairy products disposed of?

(c) Are there any discriminatory rules for the supply of milk to the officers, subordinates and the Director, Imperial Agricultural Research Institute?

(d) Is it a fact that the Director is outside the purview of rules in the matter of the milk supply?

(e) Is it a fact that members of his staff were at times refused the supply of ghee for the simple reason that the entire quantity had been taken away by the Director?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) No. The selection of cows for sale rests with the Imperial Agriculturist who obtains the sanction of the Director prior to effecting a sale. The cows referred to by the Honourable Member were not sold as "condemned" but because they were surplus to the requirements of the Institute.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to my reply to part (c) of question No. 204.

(c) and (d). There are no rules, discriminatory or otherwise, for the supply of milk to the staff of the Institute. As a result of complaints made to the Director, the quantities of milk purchased by the various members of the staff were recently scrutinized by him and certain daily maxima were prescribed which are now in force.

(e) No. Ghee manufacture is very intermittent and it may sometimes happen that if a previous order is booked either from the Director or from anyone else, later comers cannot be supplied.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if all the cows that were sold were purchased by one industrialist of Bombay?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I know that an industrialist, whether of Bombay or not, purchased a number of them.

Sardar Sant Singh: Did he purchase all of them?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I cannot say whether he purchased all of them.

Sardar Sant Singh: Was the price charged adequate?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Yes, Sir. The prices were from Rs. 100 to Rs. 500 per

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The answer to the next three questions of Sardar Sant Singh will be laid on the table as he exceeds his quota.

SIKHS IN HIGH SALARIED POSTS IN THE CENTRAL PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

†209. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member for Labour please state the number of posts carrying salaries of Rs. 400 per mensem or over in the Central Public Works Department and in Sections other than the Central Public Works Department? How many of these posts are held by Sikhs?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: There are 60 posts on salaries rising to Rs. 400 or more and 82 posts on salaries of Rs. 400 and upwards. Of the total of 142 posts, 6 are held by Sikhs.

It is not understood to which office the Member refers by the words 'Sections other than the Central Public Works Department.'

ESTABLISHMENT BRANCH OF THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF ENGINEER, CENTRAL PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

†210. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Labour Member kindly state if it is a fact that a separate Branch to deal with establishment matters and to facilitate the work of a selection board in the office of the Chief Engineer, Central Public Works Department, was set up recently?

(b) What is the total number of staff working in this Branch, and how many of them are Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs?

(c) Is it a fact that none of the members of the staff including the Superintendent has any experience of establishment matters?

(d) Why were not experienced people already working in the Establishment Branch considered suitable for employment in this Branch?

(e) Is it a fact that establishment matters of the Muslim personnel are dealt with quickly while those of other communities lie unattended to for an indefinite period?

(f) Do Government propose to investigate an enquiry into the communal work done by this Branch?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) Yes.

(b) Total No. of staff 12.

Hindus	5
Muslims	6
Sikhs	Nil
Indian Christian	1

(c) No; two assistants and three clerks were taken from the Establishment Branches.

(d) More staff could not be removed from the Establishment Branches without detriment to the work there.

REPRESENTATIONS AGAINST THE APPOINTMENT OF ONE BAKSHI MADAN SINGH IN THE CENTRAL PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

†211. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Labour Member please state if it is a fact that one Bakshi Madan Singh was appointed as an Assistant in the Works Section, Central Public Works Department, against a vacancy reserved for "other minorities"?

(b) Was he asked at the time of recruitment to produce a certificate as to the bona fides of his being a Sikh in accordance with the procedure laid down by the Home Department? If not, why not?

(c) Are Government aware that Bakshi Madan Singh has been "Patit" 3 or 4 times before he joined service, and that he kept hair to deceive the Government to get a job reserved for the Sikh Community?

(d) Is it a fact that a number of representations were made to the Additional Chief Engineer and the Administrative Officer by the local Sikh organisations and none of these has even been acknowledged so far?

(e) Do Government propose to replace this person by a bona fide Sikh?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) Yes.

(b) No. The Department had no doubts as to his bona fides at the time of his appointment.

(c) No. Government had no information to this effect.

(d) Yes. They are being acknowledged.

(e) Only, if it is established that he embraced Sikhism within a year of his application for employment, or being a Keshdhari had become patit before his employment.

SAFEGUARDING INDIAN INTERESTS IN BURMA AFTER ITS RECONQUEST.

212. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Indians Overseas be pleased to state whether the question of safeguarding the interests of Indians in Burma after its reconquest has engaged the attention of the Government of India?

(b) With reference to the plans for re-construction which are stated to be under the active consideration of a Special Department of the Government of Burma at Simla and on whose committees officials and non-officials are reported to be working, is the Department of Indians Overseas in touch with these activities and fully informed about the bearing of these plans on the future position of Indians in Burma in every sphere?

(c) Have the Government of India obtained an assurance from the Government of Burma that the plans for "the future happiness of the Burmese people" (referred to by the Governor of Burma, while inaugurating the Reconstruction Department) will also provide for the future happiness of the Indians in Burma?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The question of the reconstruction of Burma is a complicated one and requires intensive study before preliminary views can be formulated. The Government of Burma are at present engaged in this study and have informed the Government of India that the activities of the Reconstruction Department on subjects likely to be of special interest to Burma Indians have so far been exploratory. They have assured the Government of India that it is their intention to take the opinion of Burma Indians and their representative associations freely into consideration on such matters. On subjects of interest not only to Burma Indians but also to the Government of India and the public in India they propose also to take account of Indian public opinion and to enter into full discussion and negotiation with the Government of India before submitting their final proposals to the Secretary of State.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Does the Government of India think this to be the opportune moment to come to some agreement with the Burma Government because they are in more difficult times now than they will be afterwards?

The Honourable Dr. N. B. Khare: I have given a full answer and I have nothing to add to it.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: We can get better terms now than at any other time.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

INDIA'S POST WAR SHIPPING POLICY.

213. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable Member for Commerce been drawn to the report of the debate that took place in the House of Commons on the 14th July last on the British Government's post-war shipping policy?

(b) Have the Government of India kept in touch with the plans which are said to be maturing in this connection?

(c) Does the reference to "collaboration among the United Nations", occurring in Reuter's press report of the debate, with reference to this question, include any collaboration on the part of the Government of India?

(d) Does the Honourable Member propose to make a comprehensive statement on India's post-war shipping policy, indicating particularly its relation to the British Government's post-war shipping policy and to the scheme referred to in the said debate, "which distributed common shipping tasks fairly among all the United Nations"?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: Government have seen Reuters' report which appeared in the press recently and are expecting shortly a full report of the debate from the Secretary of State for India. Pending receipt of this information I regret that it is not possible for me to make any statement.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know how many ships the Indian Government possesses at present?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I do not carry statistics in my head which probably my Honourable friend does.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Would it be correct to assume that India has no definite shipping policy of her own apart from one of subordination to any policy that Great Britain may have in this matter?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I think that is not correct.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Would the Honourable Member be pleased to indicate the general lines of any shipping policy which the Government of India may have?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: It is difficult for me to reply to a question of policy on a supplementary question. But if my Honourable friend will put a separate question on the subject, I will certainly answer it.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: The Honourable Member does not seem to have read part (d) of my question which runs thus:

"Does the Honourable Member propose to make a comprehensive statement of India's post-war shipping policy. . . ."

The question was there.

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I have answered that question by saying that so far as the question of post-war shipping policy is concerned, it is a matter which will have to await decision a little later, but my friend was just now asking for the shipping policy generally.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: The present shipping policy I daresay will have some relation with the post-war shipping policy?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is directed to post-war shipping policy. Next question.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE FOR CONSIDERING TARIFF QUESTIONS AND TRADE POLICIES.

214. Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: (a) Will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to state whether it is true that the Government of India have been invited to send representatives to participate in an International Conference which is to be held shortly to consider questions of tariffs and trade policies?

(b) Is it true that the Government of India intend to appoint a personnel consisting of Government officials only, to represent the country at the said Conference?

(c) In view of the fact that any decision taken at such a Conference would vitally affect the Indian industry, would the Government of India give an assurance that the representatives of trade and industry would be associated with the official representatives at the said Conference?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) No, Sir.

(b) and (c). Do not arise.

PURCHASES BY VESTED INTERESTS OF TEXTILE GOODS IN THE FALLING MARKET FOR EXPORT, ETC.

215. Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Civil Supplies be pleased to state:

(a) to what extent the prices of cotton textiles have fallen consequent upon the Textile Control Order;

(b) whether it is true that some vested interests are purchasing textile goods, including piecegoods, taking advantage of the distress selling of textile stocks resulting from the Textile Control Order;

(c) whether it is true that a large part of these purchases by the vested interests in the falling market are intended for export, in view of the fact that no restrictions on the export of textile goods are imposed by the Government of India;

(d) whether it is true that non-Indian firms like the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation through their agents and others, who are interested in the export of such goods outside India, are also buying textile goods and piecegoods in this falling market; and

(e) if the Government of India propose to give an assurance that any such purchases by the vested interests or by the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation and other European firms would not be allowed, and that in no case, the export of textile goods acquired in the falling market would be allowed by Government?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) Honourable Members will appreciate that the extent of the fall in prices consequent upon the Control Order has varied from place to place and between one type of cloth and another. But I think it would be fair to say that the fall in prices has been of the order of 40 per cent. since the Control Order was promulgated.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) No.

(e) Does not arise.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: In view of the fact that the Honourable Member has given a negative answer to parts (b) and (d), may I know if the Honourable Member has had time to get the information called for?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I have certainly not only had time to look into it but look into details.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: May I know if in the event of complaints coming to him in the future he would assure the House that he would look after Indian interests in the matter?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I do not think that requires any answer. I believe it is the duty of every one of us to do so.

PROPOSED INTER-ALLIED TEXTILE CONFERENCE.

216. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member for Industries and Civil Supplies be pleased to state:

(a) whether the Government of India have received any official intimation in regard to the proposed Inter-Allied Textile Conference which, it is reported, is going to be held in the near future and preliminary negotiations in regard to which are going on in America;

(b) whether the Government of India have been invited to send their representatives to the said Conference;

(c) whether, in view of the repeated demands put forward by the Indian commercial and industrial bodies that their accredited representatives should be fully taken into confidence in regard to all such International Conferences, the Government of India propose to associate the representatives of trade and industry with the personnel which may be sent to represent India on the said Conference; and

(d) whether the Government of India are committed to any scheme which is likely to involve the export of textiles from India at present or in the near future?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) The Government of India are not aware of any such Conference being convened now or in the near future. They are, however, informed that the Combined Production and Resources Board in America have been making, in respect of textiles of all kinds, a survey of the production and requirements of the United Nations.

(b), (c) and (d). Do not arise.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: May I point out to the Honourable Member that part (d) is an independent question? "Whether the Government of India are committed to any scheme which is likely to involve the export of textiles from India at present or in the near future?"

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: We are not for the time being, as the answer has been given.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Am I to understand that the Government are not committed to any such thing yet?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: So far we are not committed.

PLANS FOR PROTECTION OF AGRICULTURISTS FROM SLUMP IN PRICES AFTER THE WAR.

217. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: With reference to the answer to my question No. 150, put on the 19th February, 1943, in connection with plans for protection of agriculturists from slump in prices after the war, will the Honourable Member for Commerce please state:

(a) the decision arrived at the first meeting of the Reconstruction Committee IV held in May, 1942; and

(b) the personnel of the Sub-Committee on Agriculture and the dates of its meetings, if any, held, and the conclusions arrived at by this Sub-Committee?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) and (b). In view of the fact that the then Honourable Member in charge of the Department of Education, Health and Lands had in contemplation the setting up of a Committee to consider the whole problem of agriculture in India, the sub-committee set up by the Reconstruction Committee (Trade, International Trade Policy and Agricultural Policy) at its meeting of the 22nd May, 1942 was restricted in its purview to "drawing up a programme of work in regard to the agricultural aspects of the immediate post-war situation" especially from the international trade point of view. The personnel of the Sub-Committee was: Dr. T. E. (now Sir Theodore) Gregory (Chairman); Mr. P. M. Kharegat, Mir Maqbool Mahmood, Sir Chunilal B. Mehta and the Honourable Mr. Hossain Imam, Members. The Sub-Committee held no meetings.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: And therefore arrived at no conclusions?

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Do the Government propose to put on this Agricultural Committee any representative of agricultural tenants and agricultural wage earners?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I ought to make it clear that since this meeting of 22nd May, the subject of agriculture has been taken away from the Reconstruction Committee (Trade, International Trade Policy), and there is now going to be an entirely separate Reconstruction Committee on agriculture, and that will have a very much wider personnel than the five or six gentlemen whose names I have given.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether, when the Government of India widen the personnel, they will take into consideration the claims of agricultural tenants and agricultural wage earners to be represented on this Committee?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Yes, Sir. The personnel has not been finally settled, but my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi has any suggestion on these lines, they will be welcome.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Before the Reconstruction work was taken charge of by the Department of Education, Health and Lands, it was given out in the Press and on the floor of the House that the Member then from whom it has been taken up now would be expediting the work and that a special I.C.S. officer was to be put in charge to expedite this work?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I have no such recollection. It was not in our Department at that time.

RECONSTRUCTION COMMITTEES.

218. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: With reference to the answer to my question No. 149, put on the 19th February, 1943, in connection with Reconstruction Committees, will the Honourable Member for Commerce please state:

(a) whether the personnel constituting the Reconstruction Committee No. IV has undergone any change;

(b) the preliminary points which formed the subject matter of discussion, and the decisions reached thereon;

(c) if Government are thinking of publishing any of the reports of any of the Reconstruction Committees; if not, why not; and

(d) if any work was done by these Committees during the period after February 1943; if so, what the nature of it is?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) The original Committee has now been split up into the two following Committees, viz. "Trade and Industrial Policy Committee" and "Agricultural Policy Committee" and the question of membership of these Committees is under consideration.

(b) A statement is placed on the table of the House.

(c) Attention is invited to the reply to part (c) of question No. 149 of 19th February, 1943 put by the Honourable Member. The position has not changed since then.

(d) The Policy Committees have not met after February, 1943.

Statement showing the preliminary points which formed the subject matter of discussion at the Reconstruction Committee No. IV, and the decisions reached thereon.

The preliminary points which formed the subject matter of discussion were (i) Consideration of the conditions to be attached to repayment of Government's share of Excess Profits Tax and (ii) Acquisition of capital goods for post-war reconstruction. The following decisions were reached:

Firstly it is desired that there should be a definite date after the termination of hostilities by which all these refunds will have been made, say 3 years.

Secondly, it is not considered that restrictive conditions in regard to the application of the money so refunded to prevent its use for the distribution of dividends or the issue of bonus shares are in the long run practicable. On the other hand, it is possible to give priority to claimants who have schemes to submit for approval and in those cases refunds should be made within a shorter period, say one year after the termination of hostilities, for use on approved schemes. As regards the nature of the schemes which should be approved by Government, this Committee should be consulted, although individual cases will naturally have to be dealt with by Government.

Thirdly, the decision of the Government on the recommendations of this Committee should be announced as soon as possible.

Fourthly, it should be made clear that these refunds will not be liable to Excess Profits Tax.

Fifthly, regarding the definition of "the termination of hostilities", it should be verified that the language used in the Act applies to the date when the fighting ceases and not to the later date when peace is declared.

Six Sub-Committees namely (1) A Committee on Metallurgical Industries; (2) A Committee on Ship-building; (3) A Committee on Engineering; (4) A Committee on Textiles; (5) A Committee on Chemicals, Dyes, etc., and lastly (6) A Committee on Mechanical Engineering Industries, were formed.

REPAIRS TO THE TAJ MAHAL, AGRA.

219. *Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands kindly state whether the Government of India is alive to the fact that it was announced in newspapers with reference to the Director General of Archaeology in India about the year 1937-38 that the Taj was in a dangerous condition, that the Director General of Archaeology had been taking a keen interest in that famous monument, and that he had allotted a large sum of rupees for its repairs?

(b) Was any committee appointed to inspect the Taj, and to make a report on its condition?

(c) Was a scaffolding erected to make the required inspection on the monument? If so, does the Honourable Member propose to supply information on the following points:

(i) when was the scaffolding erected, and what was its cost;

(ii) does the scaffolding still stand, or has it been dismantled;

(iii) if it has been dismantled, has any report by the Committee been made, and the measures adopted for repairs to the Taj;

(iv) if the report has been made, may a copy of it be placed on the table of the House;

(v) in case the scaffolding still stands, are Government aware that it is very unsightly to that majestic and world famous monument, and that it has been depriving the visitors, some of whom make long journeys to see it, of the pleasure of enjoying the sight of the monument; and

(vi) are Government also aware that the delay in repairs to the Taj, if it is really occurring, is dangerous to the existence of the monument, that the public is anxious on that account, and that this procedure is casting a reflection on the Archaeological Department?

(d) Did Government sanction any amount for repairs to the Taj? If so, what was the amount, and was the whole of it utilised? In case it was not utilised, what was the reason for it, and how much of it was surrendered?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) Attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the answer to his starred question No. 1371 given on the 30th March, 1939.

(b) and (c)—(i) to (iv) and (vi). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to my answer to starred question No. 70 on 28th July, 1943, and starred question No. 129 on 2nd August, 1943.

(c)—(v). The Government are aware that scaffolding obstructs a free view of the monument.

(d) The amount sanctioned by Government in the current year for repairs to the Taj Mahal is Rs. 54,750 excluding contingencies and departmental charges. The whole of it will be utilised in the current year.

UNITED KINGDOM COMMERCIAL CORPORATION AND POST-WAR INDIAN TRADE.

220. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: With reference to the unstarred question No. 90, dated the 30th March, 1943, will the Honourable the Commerce Member be pleased to lay on the table a statement in reply to clauses (b) and (c) thereof, explaining in detail the part, if any, that the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation is likely to play in post-war trade with India?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: The Government of India understand that His Majesty's Government are unable to give an undertaking that the activities of the United Kingdom Commercial Corporation will cease immediately after the War, inasmuch as any such undertaking would preclude the use of the Corporation's machinery in the unpredictable and difficult conditions which may exist in the period following the War. This does not mean however that the Corporation will remain in India as a permanent organization after the War and act in competition with Indian interests.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Any probable period can be ascertained when this Corporation will not be in existence in this country after the War?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I do not think it is possible for anybody to visualise the period of time by which these activities would be over after the War.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know whether the Honourable Member will ask the Corporation itself to say what time it will take to go away from this country? The Government ought to be able to calculate the precise time on the basis of their estimate.

(No answer.)

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: May I know whether it is the intention of the Government of India to disorganise this Corporation soon after the war?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I am afraid if I am to answer it, it might disorganise the proceedings of this House.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Were the Government of India consulted by His Majesty's Government before coming to the decision that the activities of this Corporation would be extended beyond the termination of the War?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I want notice of this question because that is a specific point which has to be answered. I think that does not arise out of the present question.

Mr. R. R. Gupta: Since the export of foodstuffs and cloth is not being taken up by this Corporation, what is the other business which this Corporation is carrying on or is intended to carry on?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: I think if my Honourable friend who is connected with the various Chamber organizations of this country will see the reply of Government given in full extending over many pages and explaining in detail the functions and activities of U. K. C. C., he will find the reply that they are functioning under special circumstances.

COLLABORATION IN POST-WAR SHIPPING.

221. *Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Honourable Member for Commerce please state:

(a) whether his attention was drawn to the statement made by Mr. Noel Baker, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of War Transport, in the House of Commons on the 14th July, 1943, that the Governments of the United Nations have already committed themselves to the principle of collaboration in the matter of post-war shipping; and

(b) whether the Government of India have been consulted; if so, whether they have agreed to the policy of collaboration with the United Nations, and on what basis?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given by me to a question already put by Mr. K. C. Neogy on the same subject; i.e., 213.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: When an invitation eventuates from the Ministry of Shipping in the United Kingdom will the Government consult local shipping interests before deciding on a policy of collaboration?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: It is very difficult for me to answer a problematic question like this, but Government will certainly take every factor into consideration and will certainly consult all interests concerned, if that is necessary.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Does the Honourable Member's answer to my question cover the point whether the Government of India were consulted before that declaration was made by Mr. Noel Baker? What is the reply to that?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: So far as I am aware, no.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL FOOD CONFERENCE AT HOTSPRINGS

48. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member for Food be pleased to lay on the table:

(a) the full information as to the decisions that were taken at the International Food Conference recently held at-Hotspings; and

(b) the report submitted to the Government of India by one of their representatives, viz., Dr. D. R. Aykroyd, in regard to the said Conference?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) A copy of the Final Act of the United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture embodying the Resolutions and recommendations adopted at the Conference has been placed in the Library of the Legislature.

(b) No separate report has been submitted to the Government of India by Dr. Aykroyd.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INTERNATIONAL FOOD CONFERENCE AT HOTSPRINGS.

49. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member for Food be pleased to state:

(a) whether the representatives of the Government of India at Hotsprings entered into any commitments as regards India's participation in the measures designed to give relief to the European countries in the post-war period, and whether the Government have decided to be a party to any scheme which may require India to export her foodstuffs for this purpose; and

(b) whether they have communicated detailed instructions in this regard to their delegates on the Food Commission which is at present engaged in the task of implementing the recommendations of the Food Conference?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

COMMERCIAL ASPECTS OF INDIAN SPRING-WATERS.

50. Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member for Labour be pleased to refer to the unstarred question No. 92, dated the 30th March, 1943, and make a statement:

(a) explaining whether the commercial aspects of the Indian spring-waters referred to therein have been examined, and whether the arrangements to bottle the waters for trial have been completed; and

(b) indicating the location of the different springs which have so far been tried and found satisfactory?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: (a) The commercial aspects of Indian spring-waters are still under examination. The arrangements to bottle the waters for trial are complete.

(b) The springs occur on private land, and as negotiations are still in progress with the proprietor of the land, Government do not consider it desirable to disclose the location of the springs at this stage.

OUTCOME OF THE "GROW MORE FOOD" CAMPAIGN.

51. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Secretary for Education, Health and Lands be pleased to refer to the unstarred question No. 12, dated the 11th February, 1943, regarding the "Grow More Food" Campaign, and lay on the table the revised and complete statistics of the increase in the acreage and output per acre of the principal food crops?

(b) Will the Honourable Member particularly refer to the unfavourable conditions, such as floods or drought as well as any mischief done by locusts, that may affect the prospects of the different crops in the different parts of the country?

(c) What are the agricultural or horticultural products of India, if any, that used to have an export market in Burma and other countries now in enemy occupation, and how have the trade prospects of these products suffered as a consequence of the loss of the said market? Was any step taken within the knowledge of the Government of India to inform the producers of these commodities of the loss of their market in proper time and to induce them to undertake the cultivation of substitutes, either as a part of the "Grow More Food" Campaign, or otherwise?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: (a) A revised and up-to-date statement is laid on the table.

(b) Cyclonic conditions in Bengal and Orissa and shortage of rainfall in Madras and Bombay seriously affected the rice and kharif grains harvests in these regions. Fungus disease and insect pests are reported to have done some damage to the rice crop in Bengal. Damage by locusts was negligible.

(c) The following are the main agricultural or horticultural products exported to countries which are now enemy or enemy occupied countries, including Burma:

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Oilseeds; cotton; jute; tobacco; fruits and vegetables; grain, pulse and flour, spices; coffee.

The disposal of exportable surpluses on account of the loss of foreign markets presented a problem of some magnitude only in regard to groundnuts and raw cotton of short and medium staple. The steps taken by the Government of India to deal with groundnut position in 1941 have been briefly explained in their Resolution in the Department of Commerce No. 86-C. W. (3)/41, dated the 6th September, 1941, published in the Gazette of India, dated the 6th September, 1941, but under present conditions the demand for groundnuts is much in excess of the production.

As regards short and medium staple cotton, the cultivators were warned to curtail the area under such cotton, and a "Fund for the benefit of Cotton Growers" has been created with the proceeds of an additional duty of one anna per pound on imports of raw cotton. With the help of this Fund, certain open market purchases of short staple cotton were undertaken by Government in 1942 with a view to steadying the market and all possible further steps have been taken with the co-operation of the Provincial and Indian States Governments concerned to induce the cultivator to undertake the cultivation of substitutes, particularly foodgrains.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

DEATHS DUE TO STARVATION AND FAMINE CONDITION IN BENGAL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have received notice from Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi that he wants to move the adjournment of the business of the House for discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, viz., the critical situation that has arisen in Bengal leading to a large number of deaths from starvation and forcing people in different parts of the province to live on carcasses floating down the rivers, and selling their wives and children to be relieved of their burden, and the failure of Government to declare the prevalence of famine in the province, or take other prompt and adequate measures to cope with the situation.

Has this situation arisen out of the food shortage?

Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi (Dacca cum Mymensingh: Muhammadan Rural): Yes, Sir; I will be able to prove that.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next point is, whose duty is it to declare a state of famine in the province?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque (Food Member): It is the duty of the Provincial Government, Sir.

Sir Abdul Halim Ghuznavi: Sir, may I put the case before you?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member cannot put the case any higher than in the notice. The question is whether it is in order. This motion anticipates the debate which has been fixed to take place on Monday next. Besides, with regard to the declaration of a state of famine in Bengal, it is a responsibility laid on the Government of Bengal and not on the Government of India. I therefore rule that the motion is out of order.

THE DELHI UNIVERSITY (AMENDMENT) BILL—contd.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani (Tirhut Division: Muhammadan): Sir, yesterday I was submitting to the House that my Honourable friend Mr. Ghasuddin did not take into consideration the financial aspect of the increase in the term of the Vice-Chancellor. It is a question not of a few hundreds but of Rs. 30,000 because the monthly salary being Rs. 2,500 one year's salary comes to Rs. 30,000. And besides if the Vice-Chancellor is efficient there would be hardly any one to oppose the extension of his term of service. It has been rightly pointed out that his term may be extended the next time. But if he goes against the interests of the University it will be very difficult for the authorities to remove him as there is no such provision for dispensing with his services. So we should be very cautious in giving more time than what is necessary and I think the period of three years is more than enough. Sir, I support the amendment.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I will only add a word or two with regard to this amendment. Cases of other universities have been pointed out where the Vice-Chancellor's term is three years, and I wish to make it consistent with the term of the Pro-Chancellor. Under section 10 of the Act—"The Pro-Chancellor shall be appointed by the Chancellor and shall hold office for three years."

I want to make the term of the Vice-Chancellor consistent with that. Why should Government insist upon a period of four years? We have not been told how, if one year more is not given to him the heavens will fall down. The term should be three years and I therefore support the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (a) of the proposed proviso for the word 'four' the word 'three' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya (Burdwan Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (b) of the proposed proviso for the words 'two thousand five hundred' the words 'one thousand five hundred' be substituted and after the word 'residence' the words 'and conveyance' be inserted."

Sir, it has always been an ideal in India that the dignity of a teacher is never assessed by the remuneration which he gets. We are going to have an officer for education and if the man is really fit to be the head of this University, salary should not be his only consideration. And may I say that Rs. 1,500 should not be taken as a very small amount for a paid Vice-Chancellor.

Sir, we have been accustomed to suffer under the top-heavy administration everywhere and our efforts have failed all along. Today, placed as we are in this Assembly, I am afraid we shall be defeated if we pressed the motion to a division: I, therefore, place this amendment before this House on the ground that if an Indian is appointed as paid Vice-Chancellor, I think no Indian will refuse a remuneration of Rs. 1,500. But if the Government have in their mind any European gentleman, of course he will not accept it. So far as an Indian is concerned, any Indian gentleman will accept Rs. 1,500 with conveyance and house allowance. And I believe an Indian gentleman will be appointed. I, therefore, move that this amendment should be accepted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (b) of the proposed proviso for the words 'two thousand five hundred' the words 'one thousand five hundred' be substituted and after the word 'residence' the words 'and conveyance' be inserted."

Mr. J. D. Tyson (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands): Sir, I agree that the salary is a good salary. The reason is that if we are to have a whole-time and paid Vice-Chancellor, as I think we may sometimes have to have, he will be for the specific purpose of looking after the developments envisaged in this scheme and we shall want a really good man. That is the only reason for having a paid Vice-Chancellor. I do not know whether Honourable Members have looked up what the salaries are in the other universities that have paid Vice-Chancellors. At Aligarh it is, I think, Rs. 1,500 and a furnished residence; Madras Rs. 2,000; Allahabad Rs. 2,000 plus Rs. 200 in lieu of a residence; Annamalai Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 2,500; and for Dacca it is rather interesting that the Saddler Committee in their recommendation for setting up this University thought that the Vice-Chancellor should be paid Rs. 4,000. That is not the pay that was finally decided. I think the Vice-Chancellor of Dacca gets Rs. 2,000 and a house. Well, I admit that this figure of Rs. 2,500 is above all those except the highest that can be paid at Annamalai, but we considered in the Select Committee whether we should fix a ceiling and leave it to the Chancellor to fix the actual pay subject to that ceiling. It was the unanimous view of the Select Committee that we should fix the pay and that we should fix it at Rs. 2,500. I am anxious to keep to the view of the Select Committee, especially as it was a unanimous view, and I am afraid therefore that I cannot accept the amendment.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Why not have the maximum at Rs. 2,500?

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): My Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, admits that except at the Annamalai University nowhere is such a high salary as Rs. 2,500 plus residence granted, and in Annamalai it is only the maximum that is fixed at Rs. 2,500. Now, Sir, the Delhi University is not a much bigger university than the Universities of Allahabad, Dacca and Lucknow. Therefore, Sir there is no necessity for providing a higher salary. Then again we should consider the fact that India is a poor country and we have always urged retrenchment in salaries of the higher officers. Sir, as regards the question whether good men will be available or not at a salary of Rs. 1,500 plus residence and conveyance allowances, I am certain that good men will be available. We want a man who will accept the post of the Vice-Chancellor of the Delhi University from a spirit of service not from a spirit of self-aggrandisement. We do not want a man who will care only for money and not for service. Therefore, Sir, looked at from all points of view, I think it is desirable to provide a smaller salary than has been provided in the Report of the Select Committee. I support this amendment.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: May I correct a mistake inadvertently made? It has been brought to my notice that the salary in Dacca is Rs. 2,500 plus residence.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (b) of the proposed proviso for the words 'two thousand five hundred' the words 'one thousand five hundred' be substituted and after the word 'residence' the words 'and conveyance' be inserted."

The motion was negatived.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang (East Punjab: Muhammadan): Sir, I move:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (b) of the proposed proviso the words 'five hundred' be omitted."

The effect of that would be to reduce the salary of the Vice-Chancellor from Rs. 2,500 to Rs. 2,000. From the figures which were quoted by my Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, in his speech on the last amendment, it appears that the ordinary scale of salary allowed to a Vice-Chancellor in the majority of the Universities of India is not over Rs. 2,000. Dacca may be an exception; so may be Annamalai.

My Honourable friend referred to the Aligarh Muslim University where the scale is Rs. 1,500 plus a furnished house. But if I may not be looked upon as giving out a secret, I may say that the present Vice-Chancellor, my Honourable friend, Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad, is drawing only Rs. 500, and that too in order to give the various entertainments which he, as Vice-Chancellor, is called upon to give on various occasions. So this responsible work, as my Honourable friend Dr. Banerji has said very aptly, should be undertaken by gentlemen of learning and experience, more out of a sense of duty than a desire to make money.

We, Sir, in our Party meeting considered that point and we designedly, instead of haggling for further reduction put it at Rs. 2,000 and decided to move for the deletion of the words "five hundred".

I may also submit, Sir, one little thing. It appears to me that my honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, considers the decisions of the Select Committee so sacrosanct that his conscience does not permit him to accept any amendment which may go against the decision of that great body. I think it is a matter of very ordinary procedure in this House that very often the recommendations of the Select Committee are upset in the House. So if that is the only thing which is troubling the mind of my Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, that in agreeing to the amendments he would be violating the sacred duty of faithfully following the recommendations of the Select Committee, then I think, Sir, matters will be hopeless. He had better get rid of that idea and consider with an open mind an amendment that is put forward in a reasonable spirit. Sir, yesterday during the course of the debates, it was given out that 65 per cent. of the expenditure on the Delhi University is contributed by Government. If that is so, it is quite obvious that the entire amount spent on the University is not contributed out of the revenues of the Delhi Province. So really the expenditure incurred on this University—which I may say by the way may be even more than 65 per cent if the interests of efficiency so require—is an all-India question, and as such the representatives of the ratepayers have every right to insist that we shall examine where we can economise without any detriment to the cause of education. I submit, Sir, that the amendment which I have moved is really a very reasonable one and I hope that Government will accept it. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (b) of the proposed proviso the words 'five hundred' be omitted."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I am sorry, Sir, I can really add very little to what I said on the last amendment. We deliberately fixed a liberal scale of salary with the idea that if we did want a paid Vice-Chancellor we should be offering terms which would attract the best possible man. Neither the Select Committee nor, may I add, the Government, have any particular person in mind, European or Indian. We simply wanted to fix a pay which would enable the best man to come forward for the post. I would only say that I do not regard the decisions of the Select Committee as sacrosanct, but this was a matter that was thoroughly discussed in the Select Committee. A good many of the provisions of this Bill were discussed at considerable length in Select Committee. We arrived at a very high degree of unanimity, I think we can claim to have considered all the points that have been put forward so far and when, after considering those points, we were unanimously of a certain opinion and the same points are a mere reiteration here, there is no justification for changing our minds. I am afraid I cannot accept the amendment.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: While supporting this amendment, I congratulate the Delhi University on being so near the centre of Government. It gets a larger grant than any other university, Government has shown greater favours to this university than to any other university in India, and now, when it comes to fixing the pay of the Vice-Chancellor it must be in keeping with the dignity of the Central Government. Well, Sir, in the case of the last two amendments, that is, this one and the last one, there cannot be a question of principle. When it came to asking by the opposition that the Vice-Chancellor should be appointed for three years for very good reasons, the amendment was defeated.

[Sir Cowasjee Jehangir.]

Now, when it comes to giving either Rs. 2,500 or Rs. 2,000, the Government are still adamant. Rs. 2,000 in this country with a free house and a free conveyance

Mr. J. D. Tyson: No conveyance.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: a free house is a good salary. What I would have suggested to Honourable Members would have been to have maximum of Rs. 2,500 if you like, but a maximum, and leave it to the discretion of the appointing authorities to give a pay suitable to the best applicant. It may happen that you will get a gentleman applying for this very honourable post who may be drawing Rs. 1,000 and would be too willing to come for Rs. 1,500 or Rs. 2,000, but you will be bound to pay him Rs. 2,500. I think that is wrong. In a question of this sort a certain amount of discretion must be given to the authorities and not fix the pay at Rs. 2,500. You are raising the value of the educational market; that is what you are doing. And an educationist is not expected to draw as high a salary as is done in some other professions. He never expects to make Rs. 10,000 as some of my Honourable friends whose profession is the Bar. His ambition is never that. His ambition is to live like a gentleman, to behave like a gentleman and to teach his pupils to be gentlemen, and for that in England—my Honourable friend, Mr. Sargent, must know what salaries are paid—Rs. 2,500 a month converted into sterling would be a very handsome salary. I would still suggest to my Honourable friends that in a small matter like this there should be a compromise and there should be a maximum salary. Let it be Rs. 2,500 I have no objection. But let it be the maximum and if the man is worth it, give it, but let the discretion lie with the appointing authorities.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: In supporting this amendment I have very little to add to what I said in connection with the previous amendment, but I wish to observe that this amendment is a more modest one than the amendment moved by Mr. Chattopadhyaya, and as such it ought to be acceptable to the Government. It seems to me that the Government have adopted an adamant attitude with regard to all the amendments moved from this side of the House. That is not right. They should have an open mind on some questions and this is one of the questions on which I hope that Government will yield to the wishes of the Opposition.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhamadan Rural): I had no intention to intervene in this debate but on account of some remarks from Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, I changed my mind. There is no doubt that the Delhi University on account of its vicinity to the Government of India is in a better position than the other universities maintained by the Government of India, who are not very close to them. If we take the expenditure per student you will find that the figure is much higher for Delhi University than it is either for Aligarh or for Benares. We got a grant about 20 years ago of three lakhs of rupees, and in spite of the fact that the number of students has trebled, in spite of the fact that we opened a medical college, in spite of the fact that we opened an engineering college, in spite of the fact that we have spent thousands of rupees in our war efforts, we have not received a single pie from the Government of India. They should tell us definitely, that we are relieved altogether from their bondage, and that we look after ourselves, or when they put their screw on every effort of the university it is their duty to look after their interests. Whatever amount they have got they must distribute it among all the children equitably and not give it to the eldest son and leave the others to starve.

An Honourable Member: Nearest son.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Yes, nearest and youngest. Coming to this amendment I would rather have liked to leave the matter of salary alone, as I suggested in my amendment. This should be decided on merits, according to the person that may be available, because it is not fair to give a high salary to the Vice-Chancellor for in that case you raise the standard of living of all the teachers in the university. Teachers or professors will naturally demand higher salaries when they compare their own salaries with that of the Vice-Chancellor. That is a point which cannot be ignored. In some of the universities unfortunately we have adopted a very high standard of salaries, the professors spend a good deal of time over devising methods for spending the high salary that they have got. The person who has got modest salary will spend more time in learning, he will mix with the students in academic atmosphere. A person who draws very high salary, spends his time in upkeep of the car and other luxurious articles, he does not know how to spend his money. It is very desirable that we should relieve professors from the worldly anxiety so that they may concentrate their attention on educational work. But a salary which a politician needs or an advocate needs is not really required by university professors who really ought to be satisfied with a modest standard of living, but at the same time salary should not be so low that they are constantly troubled on account of family anxieties.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): After listening to the debate with great interest, I feel that perhaps we should accommodate the non-official Members of the Assembly, and if I have your permission, I would like to move that the Vice-Chancellor shall receive a salary at a rate not exceeding Rs. 2,500 per mensem in addition to provision for his residence.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I take it that it will not inconvenience the House to allow this amendment to be moved.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: Who will fix the actual salary? The Executive Council should fix.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: The question is about the salary only.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: The Executive Council should fix. Let there be an understanding about this.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhamadan): There was difficulty at a certain stage of the discussion. This particular wording 'not exceeding' was deliberately avoided for good reasons. So, may I request the Honourable Member, the Leader of the House, to accept a fixed salary of Rs. 2,000 a month and not to create further complications by introducing 'not exceeding Rs. 2,500'? The question will arise as to who will fix the salary. Perhaps further amendments will be necessary. We have got experience of this. I may remind my Honourable friend that at some stage all these aspects of the question were discussed. So, I request him still to accept Rs. 2,000. It will not be very unreasonable. I would ask him not to put the maximum.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: If the House does not accept my amendment I am prepared to withdraw it. I thought it might be an offer that might be accepted. If Mr. Nilakantha Das does not agree and if that is the desire of the Assembly, I will not press it. I felt I was doing something which will be acceptable to the majority of the House.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhamadan Rural): Is the Honourable Member's amendment before the House?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I have not moved it.

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: Who will fix the salary? That should be made clear. Unless that is made clear, we cannot accept the amendment.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: I shall be willing to accept it provided it was made clear as to who was to fix the salary. In this clause here, a fixed salary was prescribed and there was no question of who was going to fix the salary. Now, when you do not mention any definite figure, then it must be made clear as to who will be the authority responsible for fixing the salary, and on that will depend whether we will accept the amendment or not.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: That will be the Chancellor.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: In that case, we will not accept.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: I take it that my Honourable friend's amendment is not before the House?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: No.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: The amendment that has been moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Nairang is one which I should have thought would be acceptable to the Government. Every time my Honourable friend Mr. Tyson has got up he has stated that we want to fix the salary at this high rate because we want to attract the best man. I would ask him what sort of man he has got in his mind, that he proposes to attract him by means of offering a bigger bait. As far as we know, Sir, those who are really interested in education, who have really made education as the work of their life would be more than satisfied with the salary that has been suggested by my Honourable friend Mr. Nairang. I willingly accept the assurance of my Honourable friend Mr. Tyson that they have nobody in mind in particular. As a matter of fact, they have not even thought whether they will import a man from outside or whether he will be appointed from within this country but I can say that unless you have an intention, even though it may be very remote in your minds today, to import a man from England, the salary which has been suggested by my Honourable friend Mr. Nairang is a very good salary and I can assure you that it will attract the best Indian that you can get in this country. There are at present 18 other Universities functioning in this land—universities that have been in existence for many years, universities which have more complicated problems to solve than the University of Delhi and if those 18 universities had been able to find men, some honorary and some on low salaries, I do not see any reason why the University of Delhi will not be able to get a suitable man. Unless my Honourable friend the Education Secretary can satisfy this House and can point out the class of men that he has got in his mind for the Vice-Chancellorship of this University, I am afraid we will not be satisfied with the explanation that has been given and therefore I support this amendment which has been moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Nairang.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman (Patna and Chota Nagpur cum Orissa: Muhammadan): I do not want to take much time of the House. I certainly must confess to a feeling of surprise at the attitude which the Government have adopted in such a small matter as this. They have no intention of accepting any amendment whatsoever moved from our Benches and in that case I do not know whether we should at all participate in this discussion. The Government knows only too well that they have a clear majority and can force any decision that they care to on any issue before the House but at the same time I believe there is a feeling of co-operation, at least among the Indian Members of the Treasury Benches, that there should be no antagonistic feeling between two sides of the House in matters which are of as much interest to the elected representatives as to the Government. I think the Government representative is working on wrong premises if he thinks that the dignity of this office of a Vice-Chancellor will be governed by the salary the post carries. As my Honourable friend the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party has pointed out, Rs. 2,000 per month would attract anybody who can be considered to be the best person for holding this office. The Government of India representative says that they have nobody in mind for this post. If that is the position and if we the taxpayers of this country are the people who are going to pay for the expenditure of all these items, then I should think we have a claim and a right to tell the Government that we will not spend more than a definite sum of Rs. 2,000. We cannot afford to spend more than this. I would like to point out that there is no country in the world whose Vice-Chancellor gets an amount equivalent to this amount, namely Rs. 2,000 per month, having regard to the per capita wealth of India as compared to the per capita wealth of other countries. The whole-issue is this. If in England the per capita wealth is about Rs. 240 yearly, certainly the Vice-Chancellor of that country can get a bigger amount as compared to that of India, the per capita wealth of which country is not more than Rs. 37 or Rs. 38 per year. The unfortunate position in this country is that in all the educational institutions that the Government of India has established or has contributed towards their establishment, Government has always somehow or other spent more money on buildings and other paraphernalia than on the real thing, namely, the education of the country. I noticed a very miserable state of things in Patna this time. Many students there could not get admission in the 1st year science or in the arts classes after passing Matriculation because there were not enough seats, but the professors and principals there are getting the fat salaries of Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,500, per month to impart education to a small number of students. We have got fed up with this system which the Government has been following and so far as we are concerned we cannot accept such programmes which the Government places over our heads by ignoring the entire views of the representatives in this House. I, therefore, support the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang to fix the salary of Vice-Chancellor at Rs. 2,000 only and request once again the members of the Treasury Benches to look into this matter more seriously and accept this amendment which is so innocent in its nature.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: With your permission, Sir, I should like to say that on re-consideration, because obviously the view of the House is that on Rs. 2,000 we can get a Vice-Chancellor, I am prepared to accept the amendment though with some misgiving. I must point out that we cannot then expect men who are now Vice-Chancellors in other universities, most of whom are drawing Rs. 2,000 and more, to come to Delhi. The House will realise that it rules out one field of recruitment. However, in deference to their wishes, I accept the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (b) of the proposed proviso the words 'five hundred' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (c) of the proposed proviso after the word 'whom' the words 'one being a Muslim' be inserted."

Sir, this amendment of mine may possibly be considered to tend to import into the affairs of the Delhi University that highly dreaded element which is sometimes conveniently called 'communalism'. But after giving the matter very anxious consideration, my Party came to the conclusion that at present the position of Muslims in the Delhi University is so insignificant as to be for all practical purposes equivalent to zero. They have no voice in most of the matters with which the University deals and therefore we were forced to come to the conclusion that we must make an attempt to secure some representation for the Muslims on the various Committees and bodies which will function in the administration of this University. This amendment I may say, at the risk of being considered a communalist, is the thin end of the wedge, being the first of the series of amendments which try to secure from Government a position for the Muslims in the University.

Sub-clause (c) reads thus:

"A committee of three persons, two of whom shall be persons not connected with the University or any College nominated by the Executive Council, and one a person nominated by the Chancellor, who shall also appoint one of the three as chairman of the Committee, shall select not less than three persons and shall report its selection to the Executive Council. The Executive Council shall make its recommendations on the three persons so selected to the Chancellor, who shall appoint one of such persons as Vice-Chancellor."

So, a committee of three is going, according to this provision to select a panel of not less than three persons. They may be four or more but they should not be less than three and with regard to this panel the Executive Council is to make recommendations as to their fitness for the office of the

[Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang.]

Vice-Chancellor, and then the Chancellor has to decide as to who should be appointed. So, this is the first part of the machinery which the Bill has devised for the appointment of the Vice-Chancellor. If one of these three persons is a Muslim, we get a representation in the selection of the Vice-Chancellor in that shape and I think it will redound to the credit of the Delhi University and will be calculated to remove to a certain extent a feeling which the Muslims have had for a long time, ever since the inception of the Delhi University in 1922 by the present Act, that for all practical purposes, the Delhi University is another edition of the Benares Hindu University. Look at the various offices held and the composition of the Court and other bodies. I may be permitted to say that out of the officers of the University under the present Act there is no Muslim, there being 10 officers. Among Professors and Readers appointed, Readers 8, not a single Muslim; recognised Readers, Muslims 4 and non-Muslims 15. Lecturers one Muslim and two non-Muslims; so out of 25 Professors and Readers and Lecturers, there are five Muslims and 25 non-Muslims. In the Court out of a total membership of 123, Muslims are 24. Out of the Members of the Executive Council, three Muslims as against 21 non-Muslims. Among Members of the Academic Council, six Muslims as against 39 non-Muslims. I can give other figures, but I think it is not necessary. These figures are given by way of illustration. My contention is that the present position of the Muslims in this University is so insignificant as to be useless for all practical purposes Muslims being unable in any way to influence the administration of the University or its work or in any way to voice the needs and requirements of the Muslims, and therefore we have tabled a number of amendments, this being the first one of them, with due apologies to those who always consider that the raising of such questions is importing communalism into a body like a University which they say is a temple of learning, to which the devotees should go and worship without questioning who is a Muslim and who is a non-Muslim. Sir, this temple of learning, again with due apologies to those Honourable Members of this House who may hold strong views on temple entry, is a temple like the innumerable temples in India where only certain privileged classes are allowed to enter and worship and in order to enable others to enter these temples, Temple Entry Bills were tabled in this House which after quite a storm of opposition all over the country had to be withdrawn. So, really, Sir, if these depressed classes or Scheduled castes or untouchables were forbidden entry into these sacred temples, we are also practically refused entry into the sacred temple of learning under the present circumstances of the administration. As we are seeking to amend the law relating to this University, I hope that not only the Government but all fair minded Members of this House will treat this amendment and a few other amendments which we have tabled in the same spirit with indulgence and will give their consent to them.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (c) of the proposed proviso after the word 'whom' the words 'one being a Muslim' be inserted."

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: Sir, the amendment moved does not propose any drastic change. Only a small change that a Muslim should be on the Committee of Selection. It does not say that any type of Muslim can be put. Here on page 10 of the Select Committee Report, it is said that: "The Committee of Selection shall consist of, etc." There it is mentioned the types of persons and their qualifications. We do not suggest that a Muslim shall not have any of these qualifications mentioned therein. This Committee of Selection is a very powerful body so far as the Delhi University is concerned. In Statute 17 relating to Committee of Selection it is said:

"No person shall be appointed or recognised as a teacher of the University except on the recommendation of a Committee of Selection constituted for the purpose."

No person of whatever qualification can be accepted as a University teacher without the recommendation of this Committee. Secondly this Committee has great powers regarding appointment or confirmation as given in sub-clause (3).

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: On a point of order, Sir. My Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani is misreading the two amendments. He is not speaking to the amendment now moved.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: I am strictly confining myself to the present amendment.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: No, he is referring to Committee of Selection.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I cannot hear what the Honourable Member Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani is saying. Unless he speaks loud, I cannot say whether he is in order or not.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: I am quite in order, Sir. My Honourable friend the Learned Professor perhaps has not followed what I am saying. I am speaking on the Committee of Selection about which this amendment has been moved.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: The Honourable Member is mistaken. This amendment relates to a different matter, the Committee for selection of a Vice-Chancellor, not a Committee of Selection for the selection of teachers.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Perhaps the Honourable Member is thinking of his own amendment.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: This amendment relates to clause 5, part (c), "A Committee of three persons".....

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: This is a Committee for the selection of a Vice-Chancellor. The Honourable Member is referring to the Committee for selection of Teachers, etc. The two are quite different.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: Thank you. In that case, I have only to submit that the amendment moved is a modest one and I support it. This Committee of 3 persons to recommend names of persons for Vice-Chancellorship is also very influential.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Central Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I rise to oppose this amendment; not that I am in much hope of Government's strength in opposing such wretched proposals, but still I must make my protest against this attempt to communalise the temple of learning. We have had too much communalism in this country; at least in the educational sphere let us have pure education on merits and let us have in high offices, people, whether honorary or paid, who will be of first-class intellectual calibre and cultural advancement. No question of any caste or community should arise. I would not mind if all the three members of the committee to be selected belong to one community, and let that be the community of my Honourable friends of the Muslim League if they can produce men of calibre, but let them not ask for it because they are Muslims. My request to them is to live according to their religion and not live on their religion. This attempt to push themselves on the ground of race and religion is to exploit religion for personal advantages; it is unworthy of educated men, unworthy of legislators, unworthy of strong religious-minded men. That we should use our religion for getting us a job is a prostitution of religion, it is an insult to the temple of learning by which we call the Delhi University which is going to be reorganised by this Bill. As I said, we have had too much communalism in other directions in public life; let there be one, this educational institution of the highest type in the province of Delhi which should be free from all communalism; let it be a place where learning pure and simple will be fostered and encouraged for its own sake where men will meet because they are learned and because they are cultured, without reference to whether they wear a beard or a pigtail. That is my ambition in this country. In the sea of communalism all round let there be at least one island of cosmopolitanism, i.e., this Delhi University; and that is the spirit in which I ask the House to approach this question, instead of stultifying this Bill and the whole debate thereon by the amendments which are tabled in the name of my Honourable friends of the Muslim League.

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin (Punjab: Landholders): What is the Honourable Member's answer to the figures read out by the Mover?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: They do not matter at all, they have nothing to do with the appointment of this Committee. I would have even asked that the Vice-Chancellor should not be a paid man, but that point I am not discussing; I shall discuss it when the whole clause is put. It is because there is some job going that people are becoming communal; and in justification of this amendment figures were given of jobs. I do not want to make any lengthy contribution to this very unhappy controversy except to stand out without qualification and without equivocation for keeping the temple of learning unaffected and unimpaired by the blasts of communal breezes.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan (East Central Punjab: Muhammadan): Unfortunately this temple of learning is the monopoly of my friend and others of his way of thinking.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, this amendment to which I could have returned a particular reply has by the speech of my Honourable friend who moved it been made typical of a large number of amendments that are on the list to be moved. My Honourable friend was perfectly frank in adopting that attitude. Therefore, as it is expected of me, I will reply on the matter of principle that has been raised. As my Honourable friends opposite have realised, they have raised a very important matter. To adopt this amendment and still more the amendments which follow,—for this to some extent might have stood by itself,—would be to take a very serious step. I do not wish to go into the merits of that step on this occasion, but I must point out that, as is well known, there is no provision for communal representation in the Delhi University Act as it stands. We have had no request for it from the university. I have had the University Acts of India searched, and I am told that a provision of the kind exists only in one university, the University of Dacca. The case of that university was of course rather special. The Sadler Commission, which dealt with the proposal to have a university at Dacca when they were dealing with the Calcutta University, pointed to the "strong disposition which is now moving the Mussalmans of Bengal and specially those who live in the eastern part of the Presidency to avail themselves more fully than heretofore of the opportunities afforded by modern education." And I am sure my Honourable friend Dr. Sir Zia Uddin who was a member of that Commission will bear me out when I say that the Dacca College and the Jagannath College and possibly other institutions then existing in Dacca were raised to the level of the university very specially to meet this new spirit and this desire for higher education by the Mussalmans of Bengal. And the Commission themselves said that they and the Government of those days were very anxious to encourage this new movement of the Muslim community towards higher education; and it was for that reason that in the case of the Dacca University they recommended a wide range of communal representation for Muslims in that university, and I think the present Dacca University Act probably reflects to a very great extent the recommendations of the Sadler Commission. It was done in a special area and for a special purpose. The recommendations that they made for Calcutta for very much smaller representation, to have the Muslim point of view represented and allow it to be aired, have not, I believe, been accepted by the Calcutta University; and, as I said before, I do not think that this principle of communal representation has been accepted in any other university in India. It is clear that opinion even in the House here is very divided and I do not think we should be doing the right thing if we were to accept this and, as it were, thrust it upon the university without further very serious consideration. I am afraid, therefore, that I must oppose the amendment.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, it is a welcome change to listen to Mr. Jamnadas Mehta speaking in restrained tones. He has opposed this amendment on the ground that he was against the introduction of communalism in the temple of learning. But I submit that a temple loses all its sanctity when it becomes a stronghold of one particular community. It is a temple of learning as long as every one irrespective of religion and irrespective of caste is allowed free entry into it. Sir, I would like to point out to this House that this amendment has been brought forward—and there are a number of amendments on similar grounds—after an experience of not a few months, not a few years, but after an experience of over twenty years. The I. P. M. Honourable Member, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, stated that wherever there was a question of jobs the Mussalmans—the Muslim League Party—came forward to demand a share in that.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I did not say that. You are putting a false argument in my mouth.

An Honourable Member in the Muslim League Party: Of course you said that.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I never said that. It requires understanding of the English language.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: I agree English language is indeed difficult and I am not surprised if Mr. Jamnadas Mehta has not been able to convey his meaning to the Honourable Members of this House. Sir, he did mention that here was a question of jobs, and the figures which were given by my Honourable friend were connected with jobs. Let me tell him that it is not a question of jobs here. As a matter of fact, this particular amendment does not refer to any committee, members of which, would get any remuneration. According to the new scheme under this proposed Bill this committee of selection for the Vice Chancellor is indeed the committee that will appoint the Vice Chancellor. The final choice does rest with the Chancellor, but this committee will play a very important part where the question of the recommendation of names is concerned. Therefore, Sir, what is it that this amendment desires? All that it desires is that the claims of a particular community will not be ignored, that a particular community will not be damned because it happens to profess a different religion. This committee, as I have pointed out, is not going to get any remuneration. We do not say that the Mussalmans should appoint members of this committee. According to this proposal, two of these members are to be elected by the Executive Council and the Executive Council is a body where the members of the other community are in a great majority. All that this amendment seeks to provide is that it will draw the attention of those members to this fact that there are such people who are deeply interested in university education in Delhi as Mussalmans. Mr. President, Delhi has a large Muslim population and I regret to have to say that their interests have been completely ignored by those who have been responsible for the management of the University of Delhi.

Sir, it is suggested that the introduction of communalism does not help where the advancement of education is concerned, but surely it is desirable where the advancement of education of a particular community is retarded. I could give instances, I could give concrete cases where the Mussalmans have not received a fair treatment at the hands of the University authorities and I will give you, Mr. President, one case: There is one Muslim college here. Unfortunately, the Mussalmans having no representation in the University, its voice is never given any heed to. Whenever we apply for recognition in certain subjects, our applications are kept pending for two years or three years and I know that there are still some applications pending for the last two years, whereas in the case of the colleges that are run by other communities the recognitions are given within a few months, and not only that, but I make bold to say that our staff and our library, which is a condition for giving recognition in certain subjects, is not inferior to a number of other colleges that have been given recognition in those subjects, and the reason is obvious: It is because the Mussalmans have no voice in the management and administration of this university. Had it not been on account of this bitter experience, had we not given a fair trial and had we not given an opportunity for a number of years to those who happen to be [Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan:] in a majority in the university affairs to safeguard our interests, I assure Mr. Jamnadas Mehta that I would have been the last person to come forward and support a motion of this kind. But he will surely agree with me that one community is completely ignored and when the doors are not only shut but bolted to this temple of learning against one particular community that community is entitled to come and appeal to the Honourable Members of this House to at least have that door opened and let some places be reserved for them so that they might worship in this temple of learning.

Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, stated that he did not want to go into the merits of this question and he rested his case on the argument that in no other university, except Dacca, such a provision was in existence. To my mind, Sir, that is no argument. If you are satisfied or at least satisfy us that our complaints are unjustified,—that the Mussalmans of Delhi have not had a fair chance in the past, I do not see any reason why we should fight shy of facing this problem now. My Honourable friend, Mr. Nairang, quoted certain figures as to the composition of the Executive Council. The Executive Council consists of 24 members. 21 are non-Muslims and 3 are Muslims. And let me tell you how these three have got in, because I want this House to be in possession of all facts and figures before they decide one way or the other. These three Muslims,—who are in the Executive Council which is in fact the body that administers the affairs of the University and which is going to be even a more powerful body in the future than it has been in the past,—these three Muslims have got into it, one because he happens to be the Principal of the Anglo-Arabic College and all the Principals of the various colleges are ex-officio members. The other has got in not by election by those who consider that a university is a temple of learning, and no communalism should come in that; he has got in by nomination by the Chancellor, and there is only one who was elected by the members of the staff. So, Sir, I put it before this Honourable House: How can an Executive Council of 24 at the present moment with practically no Muslim representation do justice to the claims of the Mussalmans? I submit Mr. President.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: Will the Honourable Member say how many candidates were defeated in election?

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: My Honourable friend asks. How many candidates were defeated? I do not keep such a list. Otherwise I would have collected the figures and produced them. I am not fighting shy of production of any figures in this respect, but I can assure him that their number must have been large, and I can tell him that the number of students and the members of the staff, leaving aside the Muslim population in the city, is not negligible. Of course, they are not as many as the members belonging to other communities, and it cannot be stated, as the Honourable Member Mr. Jamnadas Mehta had tried to point out, that all these things are decided on merit. He, having contested elections to various bodies, should know that it is not always merit that counts. Wherever there is a question of election, there are so many considerations that weigh, and I make bold to say that probably at the time of the next elections Mr. Jamnadas Mehta will not count too much on merit.

My Honourable friend Mr. Tyson has stated that we have had no request from the university. This is a strange argument. How could he have any request from the university which is dominated by one particular community? What does he mean by university? Does he mean the Executive Council of the University? Well, I have given you the figures with regard to the composition of the Executive Council. Does he mean the Court of the University? Well, I shall give you figures with regard to the composition of the Court of the Delhi University. There are 123 members altogether.

Mr. Jamnadas Mehta: All educationists!

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: No, not all educationists. There are some Members of the Assembly also in that.

Out of these, 24 are Muslims and 99 are non-Muslims. Out of these 24, again, let me point out to the Honourable House that 8 are nominated by the Chancellor. There are 25 members to be elected to this Court by the registered graduates, and let me tell the Honourable Members of this House that out of this number there is only one Muslim. In the same way I could give you more figures, but I do not want to waste the time of the House as my Honourable friend has already given you figures.

Now, Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, has said that another important part of the University is the Academic Council. With regard to this Council, my Honourable friend Mr. Nairang has already given you figures. But they can stand repetition. Out of 45 members of the Academic Council there are only 6 Muslims. Now, I want to ask my Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, how could you possibly expect a university composed in this manner sending a recommendation to this Honourable House that we the members of the Court and the Executive Council and the Academic Council have treated the Muslims most shabbily in the past. Therefore we request the Government to make this amendment in the Bill which is before the House. This is an argument which I am afraid I do not follow.

I do appeal to the Honourable Members of this House to see that a particular university does not become the stronghold of a particular community: that every one who is entitled to receive benefit from that university has a share in the administration of that university.

Sir, I submit, that the case which I have placed before the Honourable Members of this House is one which cannot be refuted and I strongly support the amendment which has been moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Nairang.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee (one of the Panel of Chairman) in the Chair.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: I am afraid that my Honourable friend, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta has not been appreciated in the plea that he has put forward. What he means is that a man only on account of his religion should not be allowed to have any place in any organisation of higher education like the University of Delhi. But my friends on those Benches of the Muslim League are rather persistent, for this is not the only amendment for having a Muslim as one of these three of the Reference Committees. But amendments are coming one after another and there are so many and it appears that the idea is to divide the whole University so to say into communal compartments. There was an attempt very serious and persistent from those very Benches for killing the Bill by circulation and things like that. If consistency be at all a question to be considered, I ask how could they have obtained any communal proportion if the Bill had been killed. That was not the intention then. It appears that something else is behind the back of their minds. Now that the Bill has come they want after trying to kill it—they want to make it a diseased one.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Is the Honourable Member in order in attributing motives?

Mr. Chairman (Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee): I should like the Honourable Member not to attribute motives to other Honourable Members.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: I simply questioned the consistency. There may or may not be motives.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: On a matter of personal explanation, Sir, When moving my circulation motion I gave full reasons for it. Our position is not inconsistent, but consistent.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: The position of my Honourable friend, according to him, is consistent. But, as I understand it, if there was any intention of having any communal proportion from the Selection Committee for the Vice Chancellor to the composition of the Court and the Academic Council and so on, in my opinion the Bill should have been supported from the very beginning. By killing the Bill no communal proportion or anything of that kind would come. It would remain the same as it is to-day, against which the complaint is that for these 20 years or more there was dissatisfaction so far as the Muslim community is concerned, with the working of the University. So I appeal to my Honourable friends to be consistent. If this Bill had not come, the present position would continue for another 20 years. So I am certain that originally this communal share was not the intention. There was really no grievance about the paucity of Muhammadan representation in the University. Then again I am simply surprised—I put a question to my Honourable friend, the Deputy Leader of the Party, when he was speaking, whether there were numbers of Muhammadan candidates and whether their qualifications being acceptable they were not elected. No reply was given. Again, I am afraid if there should not be some amendments in future or now to the effect that if there are half a dozen doctorates granted this year, say 3 or 2 of them should be Muhammadans, or if 300 pupils pass the B.A. 150 or 100 of them should be Muhammadans. I appeal to my friends not to carry these political ideas of communal proportion under which we have unfortunately got to work—not to carry these ideas of communal proportion too far, even into institutions like the universities, and particularly the University of Delhi which I expect will be a model university for the other universities in India. With these words I appeal to my friends to withdraw this as well as not to move other amendments like this.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Sonthal Parganas: Non-Muhammadan): I oppose this amendment on the ground that it introduces communalism in educational institutions and also on the ground that there is some impossibility of adjusting communal representation on such bodies. I will deal with both these points.

I will first deal with the impossibility. I find that there are two persons to be nominated by the Executive Council. This amendment says that one must be a Muslim. Supposing one is a Muslim, then there remains only one person to be nominated. There are the Sikhs, the Indian Christians, the Parsis and God knows how many other communities. I cannot think of all of them at the moment. They spring up like mushrooms whenever there is a division of spoils. Suppose a Sikh is nominated. There will be grievance on the part of Indian Christians and Parsis and the general mass of Hindus. If a Parsi is nominated, there will be similarly disaffection among the other communities. Then there is one seat to be nominated by the Chancellor. Now, who knows what the Chancellor will do, when he comes to choose from among these various communities? As he has to exercise his judgment in selecting a Vice Chancellor, so it is quite possible that even a European may be nominated. I do not see that there is any bar in nominating a European by the Chancellor. If the third nomination which is to be made by the Chancellor is left out, there remains only two to be nominated by the Executive Council and if one is a Muslim and if that is laid down in the statute, then only one seat will be left for so many other communities. I appeal to the reason and good sense of the Members not to introduce communalism of this kind in educational matters. So, my first point is the very nature of the impossibility that is involved in the acceptance of this amendment. Then suppose the nomination is of a Hindu, then what about the Indian Christians, Parsis, Sikhs and others because they may say that they want one seat. So there is an inherent defect in the amendment which amounts to an impossibility and when a body of three persons is to be constituted, the impossible nature of the proposal put forward should be taken into consideration.

Then I come to the point about the exhibition of communalism which is quite unnecessary. So many of my friends have spoken on this subject that I do not want to say much about it. I do not claim to be an expert in educational matters and I was indifferent to this Act also because there are many friends of mine, who are experts and who are capable of piloting this Bill but so far as this matter is concerned, it concerns the well being of the nation and in this matter a man like even myself may take a hand. It is most deplorable that every affair in this country is saturated with the spirit of communalism and even educational institutions are not free. (An Honourable Member: "Who is responsible?") I am not going to fasten responsibility on any particular community. On account of the follies of those who have guided the destinies of the nation, many things have happened but I am not going to allocate responsibility. But the fact is that the spirit of communalism is rampant at present and our whole life is saturated with the spirit of communalism and if we want to remedy this state of affairs, those who are sober minded and who can claim to be the guides of the nation they have to think over the problem and solve it in such a way that the life of the future generation is not spoiled. The young men who will come out of the university will have the control of the destiny of the nation in course of time and therefore we have to take care that educational institutions at least are free from such contamination. If you introduce the spirit of communalism, people have to ransack their brain in a communal way to find men for important posts like the Vice Chancellor. People will go about canvassing for votes and the whole thing will run on communal lines and it is certain that the life of the educational institutions will also be spoiled. As the matter stands today, it is known to us that even the Professors, Principals, the Vice Chancellors and others connected with the running of educational institutions are not free from such communal bias. I say that the elders in this House who have got to guide the future destiny of India ought to keep their heads cool in these crucial moments in the future interests of the nation. The future looks dark and even hopeless. I did not read this Act at all, to speak quite frankly but I have gone through some of the amendments which seek to introduce a spirit of communalism into this Bill. Even in the Bill as it was presented by the Government I find that there are provisions for award of scholarships on communal denominations. It is our duty in this House to put the nation on the right path and therefore we should see to it that such communal things are left out of legislation of this kind. I remember seeing even a hostel of students where all of them could not live together. I was a member of a committee and I saw a class of students who wanted to remain separate and some members suggested on communal grounds that there should be a separate boarding house for a certain class of people because they cannot live together. I set my face against such move and I carried the day for the time being but I was sure that the whole atmosphere was surcharged with the spirit of communalism and I could not carry things longer. This is the spirit prevailing here in the enactment of the Delhi University which is said to be the guiding Act for the whole of India. If that is the spirit of the Delhi University Act which is going to be the ideal Act for the rest of India, then I do not know how things will shape in the future. Here is a university where two sets of professors would not like to sit together and where two sets of students also would not like to sit together; they would not like to remain in the same hostel. Things may come to such a pass that one set of students may say that they are not going to hear the lectures from one set of professors. The Muslim students may say that they will not hear lectures from Hindu professors and the Hindu students may say that they will not hear lectures from Muslim professors. If things are allowed to go on like that, where shall we be? I am afraid this is the spirit prevailing in this House, which is expected to give a lead to the nation, in regard to a measure which is said to be an ideal measure not only for the present generation but also for the future generations.

I have heard some arguments given by my friend Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan Sahab and he has given some figures also to show how the claims of his community have been neglected. It is surely deplorable if the claims of his community have been neglected. But the remedy does not lie in this way. There should be some measure of liberality also introduced while considering such questions. (An Honourable Member: "What is your remedy?") My remedy is quite broad and I have given vent to it in this House before and it will take too long to speak on it again. But I am going to suggest that instead of making an exhibition of communal feeling by introducing so clearly communal words and communal feelings in the very body of the Act, we may bring about some sort of consolation by such means which may not make such an exhibition. I was going to suggest that there may be some sort of a standing Instrument of Instructions which may not have the form of law but those who are to guide the affairs in such matters may be guided by it. Even the Parliament and the British Government had to issue an Instrument of Instructions with regard to the Government of India Act. It is not strange that those who are to guide the destiny of this measure and the future well-being of this measure and to educate the future citizens of this country may not be saturated with communalism. They should have this device so that things may be properly managed, justice may be done and the whole thing may be manœuvred in such a way that no community may have any grievance that injustice has been done to it. Sometimes things are done in a purely communal spirit and they should not be tolerated by those who are in authority. The other day a question was asked about the things that are happening in the Agricultural Institute, the Director of which belongs to a particular community and to a particular province and he is making appointments of persons from his own province. If this thing is brought to the notice of the Government, they should see whether it is a fact that at once curb the tendency of such a corruption. Similarly, if a malpractice is brought to the notice of those who are in charge of the university that a particular man who is a Hindu or a Muhammadan or a Sikh or a Parsee is carrying on such a thing, then instead of thinking of the prestige of the Government, the Government should pounce upon the man and see that he is not allowed to have things in his own way. But whenever such things are brought to the notice of the Government, the question of prestige comes in and whether it is a monstrous thing or a good thing, the Government must support it because it has been done by it. This spirit should not work here where apparently some sort of monstrosity is practised. That is the only way to set things right and to give a good lead to the nation provided your mind works that way. If the authorities have not got their mind to set things right in that way, then God knows what will be the end of this country if even in the University Act we have got such communal provisions. Of course, there are institutions even today where there are such representations, but there should not be any hue and cry over that.

I do not know whether I will be within my rights to make a reference here to a thing which I have in my mind or whether it would look good, but I will tell you something which I saw in my dream. I dreamt a dream in which I saw that there was a Parliament for the future of India. In this Parliament, the Speaker of the House belonged to a particular community, the Secretary and the Assistant Secretary also belonged to the same community and the Leader of the House also belonged to the same community. That Parliament was going on and there was no hue and cry over it. (An Honourable Member: "What about the Reporters?") They may also belong to the same community. So, one can understand that there may be things like that and we may have consolation on such occasions. It is only by way of accident that we have got such a combination just as I saw in my dream. Supposing in the committee of your university there are three persons and there is not a single Muslim in it.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: What is the point of the dream?

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: The point of the dream was that there is a Parliament of India in which the Speaker, the Secretary, the Assistant Secretary and the Leader of the House belong to one particular community . . .

Mr. Chairman (Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee): The Honourable Member should confine himself to the amendment before the House.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: I was simply referring to the Honourable Member who gave facts and figures about communal representation on a certain body. I was only saying that he should take consolation because of such coincidences as I saw in my dream. We should take consolation in such matters and we should keep our heads cool and think over such matters, so that we may not

3 P. M. in our heated moments, in our anxiety for achieving something good for Muslims do harm to the whole nation. It is for these reasons that I oppose this amendment. I do not oppose this from any communal point of view which is the prevailing view everywhere. I have already made the House aware of my own views about nationalism. It is from a broad point of view that I am opposing this amendment. I do not want that any communal feeling should be brought into this question. I think even the Government should see the impossibility of accepting this amendment, and also my Honourable friends and those who are supporting this amendment should also look to the reasonableness of my argument and drop this amendment.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: Sir, as long as the Muslims remained silent without demanding their due share in the loaves and fishes, they were good boys, but the moment they ask for their proper share, the demon of communalism lifts its head and jumps up like the proverbial Jack in the Box and we are being twitted with being rank communalists and all that. It did one's heart good to see the Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs voting together when certain amendments were pressed to division, all going in one way. But, Sir, that beautiful spectacle was only of short duration. My Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta set the poisonous ball rolling and he shouted communalism! communalism! with the lungs of a Stentor. Then those who are his henchmen took up the cry with greater vigour. My Honourable friend Pandit Nilakantha Das from Cuttack charged us with hatching a conspiracy to kill the Bill. Well, Sir, so far as this Bill is concerned, our friends like Mr. Lalchand Navalrai and Dr. Banerjea have joined us in killing this Bill when they voted with us on the question of salary for the Vice-Chancellor. Did they do not kill it then. Then you remained silent. But now when we are asking for one seat in the Committee of Selection which was our due share, then you begin to shout.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: I supported you in fixing the salary at Rs. 2,000.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: Do you contend that the Muslims have no right to ask for their share on communal basis? This principle was enunciated and accepted when the communal award was given. Since then we have been telling the people in this country that there are two nations in this country, the Hindus and the Muslims. I assure you, Sir, that ten crores of Muslims cannot be silenced by any administration and by any shouts and by any slogans. They will have their rightful share. The Hindus will be stultifying themselves if they deny us our due share. I expected my Honourable friend Babu Kailash Bihari Lall to be just. He speaks of the Delhi University Bill but he forgets the Dacca University Bill. In the case of the Dacca University, it was the Hindus who wanted communal representation on the population basis. Then you were silent. Now when we ask for some share in the management of Delhi University, which is claimed to be a model university, an all-India University, on the plea that we are a nation and therefore have some claim upon it, then everybody gets up and says, no.

Sardar Sant Singh (West Punjab: Sikh): You do not mention the Sikhs.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: If you want a seat there, you can have it. You are welcome. No other community has stated in such plain words that they want their separate communal share in the administration. Their rights have not been championed as Christians or Sikhs or Anglo-Indians. It is only in the case of Muslims, who are admittedly a separate nation in this country that the right of getting their due share in the administration of the country has been conceded. The right of demanding our shares according to our population basis and according to what is just and due to us can no longer be denied.

Sir, I would like my Honourable friends to realise that India wants to be free, but she cannot be free as long as the educational institutions are not free. You speak of the temple of learning, but what does that expression signify? If a temple of learning signifies justice and acceptance of the rights of others to their proper share, then we also have a right to enter that temple. But when you do not allow six crores of Harijans to enter this temple, and have kept them out of it for many thousand years, how can you expect us not to join with them in forcing entry into this temple. That entry would be forced and you will have to realise one of these days that without your coming to an honourable settlement with us, we shall not be able to emancipate our country and shake the chains that lie heavily on our feet. India cannot get freedom, she cannot obtain the right of self determination so long as there is no settlement between us. But you do not want a settlement. You want everything for yourselves.

Sardar Sant Singh: Do not forget the Sikhs.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: We only want our due share in the management of educational affairs, let alone other Departments. But even here, you do not want to give us anything. Figures have been placed before the House, statistics have been laid before you that for 22 years past we have been suffering, and today refusing to be convinced that your case is absolutely hopeless, absolutely unjust, you want to deny us our rights.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee): Will the Honourable Member confine himself to the amendment before the House?

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: I am confining myself to the scope of the amendment and the Bill. I am telling my Honourable Hindu friends that for the past 22 years, we have been suffering under their domination and now seeing that we have no hope of getting justice and fairplay at their hands, as a last resort, we want to incorporate our rights in the Statute book. I therefore strongly support this amendment.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: I heard with great interest the sermon of my Honourable friend Babu Kailash Behari Lall. I wish he may practise the sermon he was preaching. He is asking us to do one thing, he does another himself. The first thing he ought to do is to refuse to stand on behalf of any single community, the Hindus. He ought to resign his seat in the Assembly. He should say that he would come only from a joint constituency and never from a constituency comprising only of a single community. The second thing he ought to do is this. He should say, let the Government take the entire responsibility upon their shoulders; there should be no Hindu, no Muslim and no Sikh institutions. Let the Government run all the educational institutions themselves. If the Government shoulder the entire responsibility, then all this talk will disappear.

The second thing is that when we legislate in matters of education we should not do anything that is unacademic. But in this particular case I find that it is not unacademic. I have here the authority of no less a person than the late Sir Ashutosh Mukherji who is well-known in the academic world and who supported this particular view. On page 215 of Vol. V of the Report of the Sadler Commission we find:

"In every committee constituted for the appointment of university teachers there should be at least one Mussalman."

This particular sentence received the support of Sir Ashutosh Mukherji. When this point was discussed I supported the views of the Hindus and with regard to the selection committee of Calcutta we said, on page 298 of Vol. IV.

"On every such committee there should be at least one Hindu and one Mussulman member, and the Vice-Chancellor should be empowered to appoint an additional member or members for this purpose should it be necessary."

So that we both thought that it was very desirable to have at least one Muhammadan in every selection committee for teachers. Therefore the support of Sir Ashutosh Mukherji and four eminent educationists is in itself a proof that the proposal of the kind now before us is not unacademic.

The other point is this. If in the committee for selecting the Vice-Chancellor all the three members happen to be Englishmen, my friend Babu Kailash Bihari Lall will not sit quiet. Immediately there will be a protest from every corner, a protest in the press and adjournment motions in this House; and objections of every kind. When they are all Englishmen we will oppose it on the ground of nationalism. But when we say that this Indian nation should also include Muslims and they also should be included, immediately we are told that that is communalism. If without any question being raised about Englishmen or Indians it goes to the best men, I can understand it; but whenever you press the claims of Indians on national grounds I do not see why Muslims as part of the Indian nation should not be included. If you refuse us that we will have no alternative but to go back to the extreme position to which we have been thrown by the Hindus themselves and say that as we have not been included in the Indian nation let it be a Hindu nation and a Muslim nation.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: Sir, I shall not take up much time of the House and it is not my desire to introduce any heat into the debate like my friend Babu Kailash Bihari Lall, the last person I would expect to argue in the way he did. However, as for this amendment, we seek nothing more and nothing less than our just share as a separate nation. We want representation of one in a Committee of three and an opportunity to work in co-operation with the representatives of other nations of this country and probably that will bring future peace into this country earlier, as Sir Zia Uddin pointed out rather than if we are placed in water-tight compartments by such attitude as that of my friend Babu Kailash Bihari Lall. He referred to a certain dream, referring particularly to this House and making a reflection on the Chair and on the Leader of the House. That only shows bad taste. If that sort of dream can be mentioned we also can refer to other dreams and give him a fitting reply; but, as I said, I do not desire to introduce any heat. But it was surely in bad taste and the fact

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: Sir, on a point of order, is the Honourable Member in order when he says that I made a reflection on the Chair when there was no such reflection?

Mr. Chairman (Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee): The Honourable Member made no reflection on the Chair.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: I will say that the analogy of a fictitious dream was not befitting to this House and it did not show good taste. What we demand, Sir, is not any superiority or predominance at all but that the case of the Muslims should not go by default. If there had been a proposal that the Chairman or even a majority of that committee should be from a particular community there would be some justification for opposition from certain sections of the House. I do not want to make any personal remarks, particularly against my Honourable friend who comes from my part of the country. Certain instances were quoted by him and he himself has shown far worse taste in the matter of a peon who was a Muslim in the joint hostel of Bhagalpur to which he referred.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: I challenge that statement; it is a downright fabrication.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee): Order, order. I wish Honourable Members will not impute motives or bring in something which is not within the scope of the amendment.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: My Honourable friend has lost his head.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: I do not want to introduce any heat but truth is always bitter. I am trying to invoke a sense of appreciation in you by trying to tell you that what we demand is not something of which you should be at all afraid. You have used an unparliamentary remark, but I will not do that and this is the difference.

Pandit Nilakantha Das: On a point of order. The Honourable Member is not addressing the Chair.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: In supporting the particular amendment, my submission would be that there is nothing in it on which any Member of this House should have any difference with us.

Sir, I do not want to recite the stories or the facts, which are on the records of this House and the other Houses of Legislature where the other nation had showed the mentality which compelled us to have some sort of reservations to voice our feelings and safeguard our interests. In this connection, with your permission, Mr. Chairman, I may remind the House about the Aligarh University Bill of 1937 which only sought that the Muslim University of Aligarh should be given powers to affiliate Muslims colleges in other parts of India, and the public opinion which was expressed by our sister community the Hindus was that they did not approve of that idea, and the Bill was shelved for all times to come. That shows what has been the current running through in this country, and however much we may dislike it, however much we may like to clear up the atmosphere, and however much we may lament the present state of affairs, the unfortunate fact is there and we have to face the facts. In seeking to make this amendment, we are not trespassing on anybody's rights. We will remain a minority; my representative will be in a minority in that committee of three, and for that reason I do not see what harm could there possibly be in this amendment being accepted by my Honourable friends belonging to the Hindu community. I hope and trust that they in their heart of hearts feel that this should be done till such time as we are able to hold our own. Of course time may change. And then things may change automatically. In that case it will not be difficult for my Hindu friends to amend this section at any moment. Things would be different if both the nations work together in a better manner and with better out-look than what is being done at present. With these few remarks I support the amendment of my Party.

Sardar Sant Singh: Sir, I have the most unpleasant duty of opposing this amendment. My reasons for doing it are that if communalism is to find a place on the Statute book of India

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: But it is there.

Sardar Sant Singh: . . . I am at one with my Honourable friends if they include me also with them. If the Honourable the mover of this amendment had chosen to say that as three members are to be appointed, one should be Hindu, another a Muslim and third a Sikh, he would have been perfectly justified and I would have supported the amendment.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: It was not considered necessary.

Sardar Sant Singh: I would not have heard this argument that they claim one seat there because if it is conceded to them Muslims will still be in a minority. Well, if they had included me I can assure my Honourable friends that there would have been no majority and no minority. I have been fighting for my rights, but unfortunately I haven't got big battalions behind me as my Honourable friend, Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan, has got behind him, although seven at least of the gentlemen sitting behind him have associations with me because they have the same appearance as myself

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Appearances are deceptive.

Sardar Sant Singh: . . . while on this side I only find one. Therefore, I will advise them that whenever they want communal representation on any body they should get a good share reserved for me, though I am not one who claims a separate nationality because I know that this phase of separate nationality is a temporary one with my Honourable friend and he will soon see that he and I will have the same form, the same shape, the same culture

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Not the same length of beard!

Sardar Sant Singh: Ask your friends who are sitting behind you.

Therefore, Sir, I submit that this amendment will not prove to be a thing of utility to Muslims. They must withdraw it and put a new amendment which I will support.

Mr. S. C. Chatterji (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, it is not without hesitation that I have ventured to stand up and make a few observations in the debate on this amendment. It is such a delicate ground, Sir, as angels may fear to tread. But I venture to come into the debate to make an appeal, if I may, to the Honourable Member who moved this amendment as well as to several other Honourable Members of the Muslim League Party, who have tabled similar amendments asking for reservation or special representation for Muslims on various bodies of the University. I entirely agree with the remarks made by several speakers already that it would be most regrettable if we in this country are driven so far as to ask for special representation on communal lines even on our educational bodies. Nevertheless, Sir, I think—and herein I differ both from Mr. Tyson as well as from several other Honourable Members who have already spoken—that one has to recognize that the Honourable Member who has moved this amendment and particularly Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan have made out a case, to my mind a most convincing case, for, at any rate, entering a protest against the record of the Delhi University for the manner in which some of their bodies have in the past been composed. I think, Sir, the argument of Mr. Tyson in so far as it had referred to the Delhi University has been successfully rebutted by Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan and cleverly used for his own purpose. The composition of some of the bodies of the University being what it is, Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan is perfectly right in pointing out that it could not be expected of such bodies that they would condemn themselves in a matter like this. Sir, I belong to one of the smallest communities in the country, but I believe that this community has a peculiar feature, and to my mind a happy feature. It is a community which is composed of people who are drawn from all the principal and minor communities of India. It is perhaps possible for me, as it is not possible for a member of one of the major communities in a matter like this to appreciate the point of view of the other side. As I have said, if one would face facts, even facts which may appear to be discreditable to a temple of learning, one ought to face them and to recognise them. I do not, therefore, say, Sir, that there is no case for a demand such as this, unfortunate though I consider that demand to be, not in national interests but in the interests of education. The main purpose of university education is to liberalise the mind, and I appeal to my friends of the Muslim League Party to consider whether—though their grievances to my mind are genuine and their complaint of long standing—it would redound at all to the credit of this House and to our country if we were to make an act which would advertise the fact that even in a temple of learning we could not rise above communal prejudices.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division : Muhammadan Rural): Sir, on this point I think there ought not to have been two views, but the debate has taken a turn which, though we suspected it might take, we never expected that it would actually take this turn. I would have been very glad if my friend, Sardar Sant Singh, had also moved an amendment to safeguard his interests, but because he has failed to do this I do not know why he should think that we have done something wrong. His existence in this House is simply because the Sikh community had been given separate representation, and it is for the Sikhs to take up the matter wherever it concerns their community. It is a wonderful argument that because the Sikhs have failed to advocate their own cause or to safeguard their interests, therefore the Muslims should be penalised for that.

Sardar Sant Singh: No, no. May I offer a few words by way of personal explanation. I never said that. What I said was that if there are to be communal representations, nobody is justified to disregard other communities in India.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: I never said this. Does our amendment say that we disregard the Sikh community? We only say give us one. Now it is for Sardar Sant Singh to say that the other two may be given to his community. Let him justify his case. But I feel that on two grounds it was absolutely unnecessary for him to do so. If he would look at the question which he tabled today he will find that in one question he is asking about the total number of staff working in a branch and how many of them are Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs. Now, he has never been shy in advocating the cause of his own community. He wants to see that, not only in a big institution like the university but in every section of the Government, the Sikhs are adequately represented. I give him credit for this. But let him accept that we are also in the same boat as he is when he feels that if the Sikh is not in any particular branch his cause may be suffering. In the same manner the Muslims feel that if they are not represented properly in any institution then their cause may also be suffering. He has quoted the case of a fellow who was a Hindu but because he wanted a job he grew a beard and got a post as a Sikh. When it is so easy to obtain jobs, it surely requires great checking and Government cannot be in the know as to who is really a Sikh and who is not. If people can become Sikhs by a little barber's negligence and the next day embrace Sikhism, it is rather a very difficult question for the Government.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I inform the Honourable Member that the Government have issued circulars on that point. I am simply surprised at the ignorance, these circulars which were discussed in this House are to the effect that any person who gets a job and then cuts off his hair and becomes a Hindu, he loses his job. You need not be afraid of that.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: I quite agree

Mr. Chairman (Mr. Hooseinbhoj A. Lalljee): Order, order. The Honourable Member must confine himself to this amendment.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: I am doing so. But why did not Sardar Sant Singh table his amendment? I think it was due to the fact that the Pro-Chancellor is a Sikh, that his community is very well represented there and that his interests were in safer hands.

Now, Sir, I do not want to be hard on the claims which had been made by my friend, Mr. Chatterji, and I think his speech on the whole was fair, and though he opposed our amendment that opposition showed, as was revealed by his speech, that the attempt was half-hearted and he thought that it was his duty that he must oppose us, otherwise I think that the trend of his speech was that he was going to support us. In his case, too, I sympathise with him that a man belonging to a Brahmin community, as his name shows, should cease to be such and that by the mere change of his religion he should get into a different community.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: He is a Christian.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: But a Brahmin can be a Christian.

Mr. Amarendra Nath Chattopadhyaya: No, no.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: That is a fact. I sympathise with the Honourable Member that in spite of his belonging to the greatest community and the highest caste, a mere change of religion can change him from one community to another. Therefore, I do not want to go into that. Let us take it as a practical proposition. Let us not bring heat into this. Before 1905 we know what the condition was in the political institutions. We had joint electorates everywhere and it was felt by a man like Mr. Gokhale,—a man of the position of Mr. Gokhale was the first to advocate that the Mussalmans should have proper representation.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: That is not correct.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Yes. If the Honourable Member desires, I can give him his speeches in many places and they have been quoted by Mr. Jinnah in his presidential address. In 1905 the Muslim League was formed in order to safeguard the interests of the Muslims so that they may get their places even in institutions like the municipal boards and the district boards. The League pressed their claims until in 1908 this principle was conceded in the Minto-Morley reforms, because facts and figures at that time were worse than what have been revealed to-day by Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan. Therefore the principle was accepted, namely, that separate election was necessary in order to introduce members of the Muslim community.

Bhai Parma Nand (West Punjab: Non-Muhammadan): What were Mr. Jinnah's views in those days?

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Till 1935 he was for joint electorates with reservation of seats. Now he finds it is hopeless to stick to those views. A man like Mr. Jinnah whose life was a challenge to his own community has now been converted and he finds that it is really hopeless.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Have you not misled him?

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Have we misled him or your community has led him, by the actions and misdeeds of my friends who made him come to this side? Probably this debate will make him more staunch.

Bhai Parma Nand: And would have converted Mr. Gokhale also!

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: I do not want to talk about Mr. Gokhale. He is dead and gone. He was a great soul, respected by every Indian at that time. Now, Sir, the very existence of many of Honourable Members here is simply due to their belonging to a particular community. Even my friend, Sir Cowasjee Jehangir, would not have been in this House if he had not been so very popular with many sections in his own city. As we find our place in this House on account of representation given to different communities, it is not right for us to say that we do not adhere to that principle as long as that exists, but for practical purposes I will say one thing. Is it or is it not a fact that in the country there is a spirit where the members of one community do not want to give their votes for another community? Do you want to ignore this fact, or should we take into consideration facts as they are in this country? I am sure no Member in this House will deny that there is a great deal of communalism outside the House. Even when we are deliberating here, even the smallest suggestion from one side makes a dozen others on the other side to get up and oppose, and that reflects the condition in the country outside. Can you, in these circumstances, exclude the fact that Mussalmans have got no chance whatever of getting into this committee.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

A seat ought to be reserved for the Mussalmans. Is there any other way? The Government have recognised this principle; even their Executive Council is composed of members of different communities. Members of communities who are not represented in the Executive Council have been clamouring that they must have representation in the Executive Council where the decisions are taken sometimes jointly. If that is so, for the working of education of a big city like Delhi, if you want the people of Delhi to be educated, then all classes and all communities of Delhi must have a fair play in their education and anything which adversely affects those communities must be removed. Here when you have to elect a Vice Chancellor, the Vice Chancellor may not care at all for the Mussalman community. The population of the Delhi City is about 50 percent Muslim, but if the populations of Delhi and New Delhi are taken together, Muslims come to 40 per cent. Then is it unreasonable when we ask that out of three at least one should be a Muslim, and that also not by election? The Mussalman who may come may practically be under the thumb of the other community too or of the Government. Therefore, I do not think that there is any danger whatever in accepting this demand. If we had said that there shall be a proper electorate by which the Mussalman will be brought in here, that may have affected the question, but here how is this Mussalman to come in? That is very well safeguarded to see that there is no communalism coming. The Mussalman will know how the Muslim education is suffering, if their education is neglected or if they want something more, he will represent this to the Vice Chancellor who will feel in his heart that he owes also something to the Mussalmans, and he will be fair and just to all the communities. That is the only safeguard. We do not say that the Vice Chancellor may be a Mussalman, or half the Vice Chancellor should be Mussalman and half should be Hindu. No such absurdity is there. We are making only a very meagre demand, that the Committee which will appoint this Vice Chancellor must have at least one Muslim on it. The Mussalman may be an official, I do not know how he will come, but we want that at least one Mussalman must be there. That is the point.

How can the Government ignore or refuse to accept that principle which they have accepted from 1908 up to this time—the principle that the Mussalmans cannot come in without separate electorates and that wherever they cannot come in they must have separate representation. Of course, we would not have demanded it, if there had been fair play towards the Mussalmans. We are very sorry that there should be this condition of affairs but has this condition been brought about by us? The figures quoted by Nawabzada Liqat Ali Khan show how the claims of the Mussalmans have been ignored. Therefore, there is justification for this amendment. Whenever this demand comes up, it comes up because of suppression and oppression, or on account of negligence. The Hindi proverb says that Krishan will rise whenever there is a Kans and the Kans is the evil spirit of crushing another people and therefore the spirit of Krishanism must supersede the spirit of Kansism of trying to keep the Muslims away from power. Therefore this motion is not wrong and the more my friends will oppose it the more the Mussalmans will be forced to see that their demand is met. As their demand is more and more suppressed, it will become more and more just, because in the words of a poet:

"Islam ki fitrat men Qudrut ne lakhuk di hai Ubhrengi hum utnahi jitna ke dabadenge."

Nature has provided elasticity like that in a spring in Islam, we will rise as much as we will be pressed down.

With these words, I support the motion.

An Honourable Member: I move that the question be put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in part (c) of the proposed proviso after the word 'whom' the words 'one being a Muslim' be inserted."

The motion was negatived.

Sir George Spence (Secretary, Legislative Department): Sir, I move:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in clause (c) of the proposed Proviso the word 'three' where it occurs for the last time be omitted."

This amendment is designed to remove a flaw in this clause to which the Honourable Dr. Banerjee referred yesterday. It is, of course, a pure mistake. The first sentence of the clause provides that the Committee shall select not less than three persons. They may therefore select more than three persons and if they do, the Executive Council will make its recommendations on all the persons selected and not only on three of them. So we have got to get rid of the word 'three' where it occurs in the second sentence. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, in clause (c) of the proposed Proviso the word 'three' where it occurs for the last time be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 5, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I move:

"That clause 6 of the Bill be omitted."

This clause, as the House will see from the Bill before it, is to this effect:

"In section 12 of the said Act, in sub-section (5), the words 'in accordance with this Act, the Statutes and the Ordinances' shall be omitted."

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: May I, Sir, make a submission?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Is it a point of order?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Sir, I only heard you putting the amendment of Sir George Spence. Afterwards I did not hear you. It was not possible to hear. I did not hear that the whole amended clause 5 was put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Yes, I put it.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Then, it is my misfortune that I did not hear it.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member must be more alert.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Now, Sir, the proposed amendment in the Bill seeks to amend sub-section (5) of section 12. That sub-section reads thus:

"The Vice-Chancellor shall give effect to any order of the Executive Council regarding the appointment, dismissal or suspension of an officer or teacher of the University, or regarding the recognition or withdrawal of the recognition of any such teacher, and shall exercise general control in the University. He shall be responsible for the discipline of the University in accordance with this Act, the Statutes and the Ordinances."

The amendment seeks to do away with the last words "in accordance with this Act, the Statutes and Ordinances". It does not appear how the omission of these words from sub-section (5) of section 12 will improve matters. Apparently, the responsibility of the Vice-Chancellor for the discipline of the

[Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang.]

University in the absence of the restriction imposed by the words sought to be omitted will leave him an autocratic ruler, the master of all he surveys. Therefore, I submit that these words should not be deleted. They appear to be perfectly salutary and necessary and this clause of the Bill should, therefore, be omitted. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved: "That clause 6 of the Bill be omitted."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, the words which we seek in the amending Bill to remove from this section of the Act are, in our opinion, unnecessary, otiose and possibly mischievous. They require that the Vice-Chancellor shall be responsible for the discipline of the university "in accordance with this Act, the statutes and the ordinances". Now, Sir, it might be argued and, in fact, has been argued that in the matter of enforcing discipline the Vice-Chancellor cannot go outside what is written in the Act, the Statutes or the Ordinances. For example, he could not send students down for drunkenness or some other misdemeanour because, as a matter of fact, neither in the Act nor in the statutes nor in the Ordinances is there any catalogue of the possible misdemeanours of students or of the punishments which he can apply. The danger which, I think, my Honourable friend opposite has in mind is that if we remove these words the Vice-Chancellor will become, as he said just now, an autocrat and be enabled to act perhaps in defiance of the Act, Statutes and Ordinances. But in subsection (2) of the same section of the Act, it is laid down that "it shall be the duty of the Vice-Chancellor to see that the Act, statutes and the ordinances are faithfully observed and he shall have all the powers necessary for this purpose". Even without that it is quite clear that the Vice-Chancellor cannot act contrary to the Act, statutes and ordinances, but the existence of this phrase which we are now seeking to delete may hamper the Vice-Chancellor, in the absence of a complete catalogue of the possible misdemeanours which may call forth his powers of discipline. There is no danger in removing this phrase and on the other hand, it is really necessary. I may add that in the Select Committee, in order to demarcate perfectly clearly what is the field of the Vice-Chancellor's responsibility in the matter of discipline and that of the Principals of the Colleges, we added some words to Statute 33, clause 5 (which will be found at page 16 of the printed Bill now before us) to make it clear that discipline in the Colleges is for the Principal to enforce and that the reference here is to discipline in the University. Sir, I cannot accept the amendment.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I am afraid the speech of my Honourable friend the Education Secretary is anything but convincing. He started by saying that the retention of these words might be mischievous, but he did not tell us as to how the retention of these words was mischievous.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I am sorry if I did not make myself plain. I said that it might prevent the Vice-Chancellor from 'inflicting punishment' because punishment is not provided in the Acts, statutes and ordinances.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: As my Honourable friend knows the ordinances can be framed by the University itself, and therefore in cases where punishment is necessary, the University authorities can frame the ordinances. Now, Sir, this Act has been in existence for over 20 years. The need for removing these words has never been felt till now. You always make an amendment in an Act if it is found by experience that it has hindered the work of the administration of a particular institution. I was expecting that the Honourable the Education Secretary would give us some instances where it has been found that the retention of these words in the Act has acted adversely in the interest of the university. He is only talking in problematical terms. So far there has never been felt any need either by the Government or the University authorities to remove these words. I think that a little check on the powers of the Vice-Chancellor is a very desirable thing. If the Vice-Chancellor feels that with these words in the Act, he is not able to perform his duties to the best of his ability or to the satisfaction of all others, he has got the Executive Council and the Court there and they can certainly frame ordinances. Why are the Government anxious to remove any check on the Vice-Chancellor that may be provided in this Act? The Honourable Member referred to Part II of section 12 and he quoted that it shall be the duty of the Vice-Chancellor to see that these Acts, statutes and ordinances are faithfully observed and that he shall have all the powers necessary for this purpose. Does he mean that he visualises a Vice-Chancellor where this might be on his conscience and he would like to have a more free hand to do as he pleases. Of course it is the duty of the Vice-Chancellor to see that all the laws and the statutes are observed. I therefore suggest that the Government have not made out any case whatsoever for the deletion of these words. On the contrary I consider that the retention of these words is wholesome.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Sir, I am sorry to hear since this morning mostly on all the amendments my Honourable Mr. Tyson is harping upon the fact that because the Select Committee has agreed with him, therefore it should be more or less final and should be accepted by the House without further question. If what the Select Committee says should be the final word, then what is the good of tabling all these amendments? Why should a Bill come back to the House after the Select Committee has reported? If the Government should come back and say that the Select Committee has done such and such a thing, therefore it is one of the final reasons on behalf of the Government, what is the good of the House then? After all the Select Committee is the daughter of this House. It is not the mother of this House. The Committee is selected by this House and when the Select Committee makes certain suggestions, the mother must enquire into them and see whether they are rightly done or not.

An Honourable Member: Those days are gone.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: They have gone outside in the outer atmosphere and not in this House. That should not deter us from giving our own opinion and press for the thing that the House wants.

Coming to this amendment, I am not able to understand why this change is going to be made in section 12. If once for all it were said that unlimited and unfettered powers are to be given to the Vice-Chancellor in respect of discipline, then that would be a different question. Here this is not going to be said. Here on the contrary it is being pleaded one way and the result is being asked the other way. It is said that the Vice-Chancellor has got to do his duties according to the Statutes, Acts and Ordinances. Clause (2) of section 12 has been pointed out by the Honourable Member himself. But then subsequently when similar words appear with respect to the discipline of the University and the power of the Vice-Chancellor, he says take away those powers, they will not be in accordance with the Act, Statutes and Ordinances. Then, it would mean this. If one were to read clause 2, then one would say that the Vice-Chancellor has got to do things according to Acts, Statutes and Ordinances. But then they will say if these words are taken away, similar words are there with regard to ordinances also. If the words are taken away, the consequence will be that it would be taken away with respect to discipline. Clause 2 does not apply at all. Then, it would be a blank cheque to be given to the Vice-Chancellor in respect of disciplinary powers which he will have to exercise. I think the difficulty that the Honourable Member pointed out is with respect to misdemeanour or misbehaviour of certain persons that he has disciplinary powers and he should be given discretionary powers, i.e., he should act in any manner he likes. I will not be a party to that and no such power should in fairness be given which may be abused, however honest and bona-fide his action may be. But there may be an error in that action and therefore a blank cheque should not be given. It has been said that if they want to check misdemeanour let an ordinance be made. Ordinances will be made by the university where the Vice-Chancellor will be the Chairman and the Executive Council will not be so unreasonable as to oppose him when he is in the right. Therefore these words should remain, otherwise the whole thing will be misleading. It will mean that he is to act according to the Ordinances in certain matters and in the case of discipline he is himself the master. Sir, I support this amendment.

Mr. J. P. Sargent (Government of India: Nominated Official): Sir, I am not sufficiently conceited to hope for a moment that I can remove the apprehensions of my Honourable friend the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party in regard to this particular matter. But this, I would ask him to believe, is really a question of practical administrative convenience. I remember an occasion on which this particular difficulty arose in the Executive Council of the university when I was present. Certain difficulties had arisen in the university with which the Vice-Chancellor had thought it was necessary to deal. There was not any difference, as far as I remember, in the Executive Council as to the rightness of the action which the Vice-Chancellor had taken. But the question was raised as a technical issue as to whether in view of these particular words and the absence of any statute or ordinance authorising the Vice-Chancellor to take action in a case of that kind his action was in fact in order or not. And it was then agreed that this point ought to be clarified when the next suitable occasion should arise for promoting legislation. And I remember an instruction being given to the Registrar accordingly, and no doubt that led to the appearance of this among the submissions from the university. I think people familiar with the difficulties which may confront university officers will realise the practical impossibility of framing a code of statutes or ordinances which will cover every possible emergency, still less every possible misdemeanour which the ingenuity of youth can devise. I do not know what the size of such a code would be; but on the other hand if there is any risk that the Vice-Chancellor is liable or that any Vice-Chancellor would be liable to exceed his prerogative and act in an arbitrary manner, it is up to the appropriate bodies in the university to devise a statute or ordinance covering any particular disciplinary question or misdemeanour question. This will give a line to the Vice-Chancellor which he is just as much bound to follow as any other member of the university, once the thing is embodied in a statute or ordinance. It is much more convenient to limit the Vice-Chancellor's powers by definite statute in ways in which the university might think it was necessary rather than to attempt to devise a code which would cover all possible emergencies with which he might be called upon to deal. This matter was discussed at great length at that time and I think it is significant that none of the university bodies who were consulted have raised the slightest objection to the deletion of these words.

An Honourable Member: The question may now be put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 6 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 6 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 6 was added to the Bill.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, I move:

"That after clause 6 of the Bill, the following be inserted and the subsequent clauses be re-numbered accordingly:

Amendment of section 14, Act VIII of 1922.—In section 14 of the said Act, the proviso be omitted."

This is only a question of convenience in accountancy. The proviso to section 14 says that in the case of any vacancy the Chancellor may, on the recommendation of the Executive Council, direct the Registrar to act as Treasurer.

But the Registrar is the sanctioning officer and the Treasurer is the disbursement officer, and we always have two different persons, one for ordering payment and another for making the actual payment. The two things should not be done by the same person. Therefore in the interest of accounting convenience I suggest that in the absence of the Treasurer some person other than the Registrar should be appointed in his place. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That after clause 6 of the Bill, the following be inserted and the subsequent clauses be re-numbered accordingly:

7. Amendment of section 14, Act VIII of 1922.—In section 14 of the said Act, the proviso be omitted."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, we have not regarded this as a serious flaw in the Act, if it is a flaw at all. I imagine that the kind of emergency which this proviso is intended to meet is the unexpected death or resignation of the Treasurer when a short acting vacancy occurs and the person on the spot to fill the vacancy is the Registrar. We have had such cases, the case of the late Sir Raghavendra Rau being the most recent one. The vacancy is short and a new Treasurer is appointed as soon as possible. I think it would be wrong, and of course it would really be impracticable for the Registrar with his own work to do to go on being Treasurer for a long time. I hope my Honourable friend will not press the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That after clause 6 of the Bill, the following be inserted and the subsequent clauses be re-numbered accordingly:

7. Amendment of section 14, Act VIII of 1922.—In section 14 of the said Act, the proviso be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I move:

"That clause 7 of the Bill be omitted."

Clause 7 seeks to amend section 22 of the Act in certain respects; that is to say, a new clause (ff) is sought to be added after clause (f). It is to this effect:

"That the Executive Council shall have power, subject to the Statutes, to recognise or withdraw recognition from a College or Hall not maintained by the University."

There are other powers which are conferred on the Executive Council by Act 8 of 1922—of course they are specified in that section, and I need not read out that section in extenso. The clause which is proposed to be added as (ff) confers on the Executive Council the power to recognize a College or Hall, or to withdraw recognition from a College or Hall, and we submit, Sir, that that is giving too large an order to the Executive Council. The power of recognition or withdrawal of recognition should remain where it is today and there is no need to entrust larger and more drastic powers to the Executive Council. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That clause 7 of the Bill be omitted."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, as has been stated, at present the power to recognize and to withdraw recognition of Colleges and Halls lies with the Court. The Court is a very large body comprising, I think, more than 120 persons many of whom are not resident in Delhi. It meets once annually unless specially called. It cannot for a moment be claimed that it is in touch with the day-to-day position in the university, and in putting forward this amendment to the present Act we have felt that, in this matter of recognition, we were doing the right thing in recognising the Court as a legislative body and recognising and using the Executive Council as the principal executive body of the university. We feel that it is right that the Court should lay down the terms and conditions on which recognition should be accorded or for failure to comply with which recognition should be taken away, but that when it comes to the application of those rules the Executive Council is the appropriate body for the purpose. Merely from the practical point of view, I do not think it is likely that one would ever get a matter of this kind properly handled in a body like the Court. It is not really a businesslike body and we have been twitted on this side of the House by my Honourable friend, the Leader of the Congress-Nationalist Party, whose attention I am afraid I have not been able to attract, for not taking a firm line with some of the Colleges which in his opinion have been misbehaving. So now I shall expect his support—though I shall not expect it very confidently—in this matter, when we are legislating to ensure that the university itself should be given the power to take a firm line. For I cannot believe that a body constituted as the Court is constituted is suited or was ever really intended to deal with such matters as the taking away of recognition. We attach great importance, I may say, on this side to the carrying of this amendment of the Act which we consider will be definitely for the good of the university in the matter of recognition and taking away recognition.

Sir Syed Raza Ali (Cities of the United Provinces: Muhammadan Urban): May I ask which body has the power to recognize or withdraw recognition in the case of the Dacca University which, I believe, is the latest university established by the Government? I do not know that; I simply want to know.

(No answer was given.)

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Sir, this function of withdrawing recognition from a College or Hall cannot be denied to be a very serious matter, and I cannot understand why that power should be taken away from the Court, which is the highest authority. In regard to this function, it is safer that the power should be in the hands of the Court. After all, if any matter of withdrawal of recognition has to be adjudicated by the Court, it shall have to come up through the Executive Council who will no doubt express their views. I would always like to see that the powers and privileges of the Court are not lightly treated, and therefore I am submitting that the present system, which has been in use for a very long time and in the working of which there has been no difficulty, should not be discontinued.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, has said that there are many members on the Court and they may not be able to meet frequently and there may be difficulties on that score. I have seen about a hundred members of the Court assembling when any meeting has been called and I do not think there is any difficulty in respect of that. Therefore, I would submit that the present system should be allowed to continue.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, I should like to know what is contemplated in practice. Will the recognition be given by the Executive Council or the Executive Council will only recommend to the bigger body? As regards the recognition, it is not a serious matter. If the Council recognizes, the matter ends there; I have no objection. But the question of withdrawal of recognition is a serious matter and this cannot be left to a smaller body alone. If my Honourable friend would consult the older Acts drafted and enacted during the regime of Lord Curzon, he will find that the power of recognition is not given to the Syndicate—a smaller body. It is always invested in the Senate, that is the bigger body, and the Senate has been replaced in these modern Universities by the Court. In no university the withdrawal of recognition can be left to the smaller body alone. They are the persons who should initiate and examine the whole thing, but the actual withdrawal question should go to the Senate and I think it would be quite right even if the opinion of the Court is not final. There should be a provision for appeal to the Chancellor. Its importance can be judged from the speeches that we had this afternoon. I think it is extremely important that the Executive Council should recommend to the Court about the withdrawal of recognitions, and the power for withdrawal should be in the hands of the Court which is a bigger body, but the Managing Committee of the Colleges whose recognition has been withdrawn should have a right to appeal to the Chancellor. So I think it will be a very weak point in the Act if you give this power of withdrawal of recognition to a smaller body like the Executive Council. In the case of recognition I do not seriously object because there is no harm done, but in the case of the withdrawal of recognition we have to be very careful.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: I support the amendment which has been moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Nairang. The Honourable the Education Secretary said that it was not advisable to place this power of withdrawal of recognition in the hands of the Court and it was more advisable to allow the Executive Council to have this power. I am afraid I have not been able to understand the logic of it. Is my Honourable friend afraid that in a meeting of the Court which is open to the public there is likely to be greater searchlight into the actions of its members than there will be in the action of the members of the Executive Council? Sir, if we take into consideration the constitution of the Executive Council as provided in this Bill, we would find that in actual practice we will be placing this power of withdrawal of recognition in the hands of one individual, and that individual, I submit, is the Vice-Chancellor. Sir, according to the provisions of the Act the members of the Executive Council are to be:

- The Superintendent of Education, Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara;
- The Deans of the Faculties;
- The Principals of recognised Colleges;
- The Educational Adviser to the Government of India;
- Five members of the Court elected by the Court at its annual meeting, of whom at least two shall be graduates of the University elected by the registered graduates from among their own number:
- Two members of the Academic Council;
- Two members to be appointed by the Professors of the University;
- Four persons nominated by the Chancellor, of whom at least two shall be women.

The composition of this Executive Council would show that it would be a body where the representatives will be either of the Government in the form of ex-officio members or employees of the University over whom the Vice-Chancellor will have great control. So, I submit, that it will be inadvisable to leave the power of withdrawal of recognition in the hands of a body like this. Sir, if you have this power given to the Court, there is always a check as to how the members of the Court behave because of public opinion. The proceedings of the Executive Council, I understand, are confidential, and therefore there is greater chance of misuse of power by a body like this than there would be in the case of a body like the Court, and as has been pointed out, I do not think—I stand to correction—that there is any university where the Executive Council enjoys absolute power of withdrawal of recognition. Therefore, I submit that the amendment which has been moved is necessary and it is in the interest of all those institutions in Delhi that are not lucky enough to have adequate representation on the Executive Council.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 7 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 7 of the Bill, to the proposed clause (ff) the words 'and subject to confirmation by the Court' be added at the end."

I thought, Sir, that the amendment which has just been negatived, would be agreed to by Government, but that was not to be. In the interests of the considerations which have been sufficiently detailed in the debate on the last motion, it may serve my purpose, Sir, if the present amendment is agreed to, because, as has been pointed out, the action of the Executive Council in according recognition to a college may perhaps not be a matter of such great moment, but the withdrawal of such recognition may be a matter of life and death to that college and may harm very vital interests, and to leave the power of withdrawing of such recognition in the hands of a small body of persons composed mainly of officials with a one-sided mentality, of which we have had some exhibitions in the course of the debates so far about this Bill, I submit, Sir, would be very unsafe, and in order to inspire confidence in the machinery by which the University is sought to be administered under the amended law, I think, Sir, it would be only wise on the part of Government to accept this amendment and to add to the powers which they seek to confer on the Executive Council the rider, "subject to confirmation by the Court". After all the Court is not only a statutory body created by the University Act but a body theoretically of the highest authority in the University. Why that body should be distrusted and power snatched from it and conferred on a body which, I may be pardoned for saying, will not inspire so much confidence as the larger body of the Court can, I cannot understand. The heavens will not fall. Nobody will be harmed. This condition which is a very simple one, but of very great importance, should be accepted by the Government and this amendment should be carried. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 7 of the Bill, to the proposed clause (ff) the words 'and subject to confirmation by the Court' be added at the end."

Mr. J. P. Sargent: Sir, I happen to be a member both of the Executive Council of the University and of the Court of the University, and therefore you will naturally expect me to speak with the utmost respect of both those bodies. It is merely a question in my mind of which is the best way of doing effective justice should any case of recognition or de-recognition arise. Now, my Honourable friend, the Secretary of Education, Health and Lands, said in connection with the last amendment that the question of the general principles which governs the grant or withdrawal of the grant is a matter which can be laid down by the legislative body, i.e., the Court. The question whether in any individual instance the behaviour, if I may use that word, of a college, or a prospective college, is such as to deserve recognition or has been such as to deserve withdrawal of recognition is a matter of practical administration, which, in my opinion, ought to be settled by people who are familiar with the day-to-day administration of the University. It is not a reflection of any kind on any individual, but as the members of the Court, as is well known I believe in this House, meet only once a year, are a large body and in many cases do not even live in Delhi, and I venture to say, in many cases are not and would not claim to be familiar with the day-to-day administration of the University, if I had to appear before a tribunal on a matter of considerable importance, I think, as a practical person, I would regard the Executive Council as a body much more likely to do essential justice in matters of this kind than the Court. I would remind Honourable Members that in another section which we shall subsequently be discussing a safeguard has been provided against what one might call capricious or hasty withdrawal of recognition from any college of the University.

An Honourable Member: What is the safeguard?

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: I dealt with this question yesterday in the course of my speech, and it was not my intention to intervene today in the debate on this subject, but the few words which fell from my Honourable friend, Mr. Sargent, have compelled me to say something on this matter. My Honourable friend says that affiliation and disaffiliation are matters of day-to-day administration. Is that correct? How many colleges are there under the Delhi University? There are only 7 or 8 colleges and recognition of these colleges and withdrawal of recognition from these colleges cannot be regarded as matters of day-to-day administration.

Mr. J. P. Sargent: Sir, on a matter of personal explanation, if my Honourable friend would permit me. I did not say that the granting and withdrawal of recognition in the case of colleges of the University was a matter of day-to-day administration. But I said that to do it properly and justly required a knowledge of the day-to-day administration of the University which I think is quite a different thing.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: I stand corrected. But these matters are matters of an exceptional character,—affiliation and disaffiliation. How many instances can be cited where colleges have been disaffiliated? Very few. I am told not one. In that case would it be very inconvenient for members of the Court to come and attend a meeting if such an important matter as disaffiliation of a college was being considered? I do not think that the members of the Court would find any difficulty. If they find any difficulty then they should cease to be members of the Court. Then it is to be considered whether the Senates of the different Universities have ever found it difficult to deal with questions of affiliation and disaffiliation. Has any difficulty arisen in Bombay? Has any difficulty arisen in Calcutta? Has any difficulty arisen in the Patna University? I have kept myself in touch with the decisions of the various universities in India and I know of no instance in which it can be said that the larger body has found it difficult to deal with questions of affiliation and disaffiliation. It is a matter of common knowledge that confidence is the crux of the whole problem in regard to affiliation and disaffiliation. And which body is likely to command greater confidence,—the Executive Council or the Court? On the Executive Council teachers of the University are represented in large numbers, the outside public is very meagrely represented there; whereas on the Court the public opinion of the country is well represented. Therefore, even if the initiative in the matter of affiliation and disaffiliation is taken by the executive body, the action of the executive body should be confirmed by the Court. That will give full satisfaction; otherwise there may be a sense of dissatisfaction.

Now, Sir, what does disaffiliation mean? Disaffiliation means the closing of a college. In India most of the colleges have been built up by the self-sacrificing efforts of individuals and by the generous donations which have been made by the public. It is true that in recent times Government has come forward with grants, but Government has been responsible for the establishment of only a few colleges. Therefore, to take away recognition from a college should be regarded as a very serious matter, and such a serious matter should not be entrusted to a small body of persons some of whom may be more or less under the control of the Government. Sir, I support the amendment.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, . . .

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): As it is now one minute to five, the Honourable Member had better begin his speech to-morrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 6th August, 1943.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Friday, 6th August, 1943.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

(a) ORAL ANSWERS

CHIEF ENGINEERS AND COMMANDERS, ROYAL ENGINEERS, IN MILITARY ENGINEERING SERVICE.

222. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the War Secretary be pleased to state the total number of Chief Engineers and Commanders, Royal Engineers, in the Military Engineering Service in India? How many of them are Indians?

(b) With reference to the answer to starred question No 276 asked by Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali on the 31st March, 1942, will the Honourable Member please state how many Indians have been appointed to these posts since April 1st, 1942?

(c) How many of them are Musalmans?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) Chief Engineers 4.
Commanders, Royal Engineers 34.

One of the latter is an Indian.

(b) One Indian has been appointed Commander, Royal Engineers.

(c) None.

MISSING INDIAN SOLDIERS AND OFFICERS IN FAR EAST.

223. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: Will the War Secretary be pleased to state the number of those Indian soldiers and officers who were serving in the far East and whose fate is still unknown?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: Officers	...	...	360
Viceroy's Commissioned Officers	...	...	1,487
Indian Other Ranks	...	...	71,693

It is known that many are prisoners of war, but the Japanese refusal to submit nominal rolls of prisoners of war in their hands to the Protecting Power for onward transmission to the countries concerned makes it very difficult to list our casualties under killed, missing and prisoners.

ONE-SCHOOL PROGRAMME ASSISTANTS OF THE ALL-INDIA RADIO.

224. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state if it is a fact that nearly all the Programme Assistants in the All-India Radio belong to the same school of literature and represent the same school in the programmes?

(b) What is the number of Urdu (or Hindustani) poems in blank verse broadcast from Delhi, Lucknow and Lahore within a year?

(c) Is the Honourable Member aware of the fact that in Urdu blank verse does not exist and certain Programme Assistants and a Programme Director are giving it much more prominence than it deserves?

(d) Does the Honourable Member propose to suggest to the Controller of Broadcasting to see that Programme Assistants are posted to each station so as to represent all schools of Indian literature?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) Government are not aware that there are any recognised and well-defined "schools" of literature, nor is it a fact that the programmes reflect any such onesidedness as the Honourable Member suggests.

(b) Two.

(c) and (d). I am going into all these questions and hope to come to definite conclusion within the near future.

SETTLEMENT OF KAZAKS IN INDIA.

225. *Mr. Nabi Baksh Illahi Baksh Bhutto: (a) Will the Honourable the Defence Member be pleased to state what arrangements have been made for the settlement of Kazaks in India?

(b) How many of them have settled in Hyderabad and Bhopal?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: (a) Pending arrangements for the permanent settlement of the Kazaks, they were maintained by the Government of India in a camp at Tarnawa in the Hazara District in the N.-W. F. P.

(b) 128 families have gone to Bhopal, but none have gone to Hyderabad.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know what particular facilities they were offered in British India, if they wanted to settle here?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: None.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Have they come to stay here permanently?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: I am afraid I have not asked them that question.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: Why were they removed from the Kohat District?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: They were not in Kohat District.

Sardar Sant Singh: What is the meaning of the word 'Kazak'? Is it a Persian word?

The Honourable Malik Sir Feroz Khan Noon: You will have to consult some school master about that.

INDIANS CONNECTED WITH THE INDIAN ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

226. *Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: Will the War Secretary please state:

(a) if there are any Indians connected with the Indian Army, Navy and Air Force in South Africa;

(b) the treatment they are having as regards their residence and travel in South Africa;

(c) what amenities they are having; and

(d) who pays for the expenses incurred on - maintaining them in South Africa?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) None, Sir.

SIKHS IN HIGH SALARIED POSTS IN INFORMATION AND BROADCASTING DEPARTMENT.

227. *Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting please state the number of posts in his Department carrying salaries of Rs. 400 per mensem and over, and the number of Sikhs enjoying such salaries? What is the highest salary paid to a Sikh in his Department?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: There are 123 posts carrying salaries of Rs. 400 and over per month in the Department of Information and Broadcasting. Of these only one is a member of the Sikh community and he draws a salary of Rs. 700 p. m.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member kindly take steps to complete the quota of the Sikhs in the higher posts in the Department under him?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I do not know the quota.

Sardar Sant Singh: Will the Honourable Member try to find out what is the quota of the Sikhs in his department?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: As far as I know there is no quota.

SIKHS IN TEMPORARY MINISTERIAL POSTS IN CERTAIN OFFICES.

228. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member kindly state the total number of ministerial posts (temporary and for the duration of War) created from the 1st September, 1939, to the 1st July, 1943, in the following offices, separately:

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

- (i) Director General, Posts and Telegraphs,
 - (ii) War Transport Department,
 - (iii) Labour Department,
 - (iv) Communications Department,
 - (v) Food Department,
 - (vi) Information and Broadcasting Department,
 - (vii) Intelligence Bureau,
 - (viii) Finance Department, and
 - (ix) Auditor General of India?
- (b) How many of these were filled by Sikhs?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The information is not readily available and its collection would involve an amount of time and labour that would not be justifiable in war time.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask the Honourable Member if he does not feel that his Department should keep statistics of the various communities recruited as a result of the Circular of July 1934?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: Yes, but not in the form asked for.

Sardar Sant Singh: Am I to understand that the Honourable Member is not going to collect this information because of the fact that the Sikhs are very few in number?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That is not the reason. It will involve very extensive examination of the records of these departments for a period of five years and would involve a great deal of work.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I put one more question, because from my community's point of view, this is a very important question and Government is avoiding an answer?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The next question has been called.

POWER OF THE HEAD OF A DEPARTMENT TO REFUSE TO ACCEPT RESIGNATION OF A TEMPORARY GOVERNMENT SERVANT.

229. *Sardar Sant Singh: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member kindly state whether the head of an office or Department has any power to refuse to accept the resignation tendered by a temporary Government servant in accordance with the terms of his appointment?

(b) Is the Honourable Member aware that such a power is being exercised by some heads of offices without assuring or guaranteeing a permanent appointment to such persons?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) Yes, by virtue of the provisions of the Essential Services (Maintenance) Ordinance, 1941.

(b) I am prepared to take it from the Honourable Member that cases of the kind referred to in his question have occurred. Not all temporary employees are eligible for permanent employment, and even in the case of those who are not it is not always in the public interest to allow them to resign their appointments when they want to do so.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask if that Ordinance applies to permanent servants or applies to temporary hands as well?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: To all.

Sardar Sant Singh: Is Government at liberty to discharge a man at any time they like?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That depends upon the terms of the employment in each case.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I know if there is any justice in the position that the Government can discharge a man at any time but that the man cannot leave the service for getting a permanent post elsewhere?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): That is an argument.

POLICY OF GOVERNMENT ~~IN~~ ALLOWING PRIVATELY CONGRESS ACTIVITIES, FROM INSIDE THE JAIL.

230. *Mr. H. A. Sathar H. Essak Sait: Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state:

(a) whether he has seen the statement issued by Mrs. Rukmini Lakshmpipathi published on page 4 in the Hindu, dated the 11th May, 1943, under the heading "Central Assembly Bye-election", in which the following passage occurs—

"On April 6, Sri K. Kamaraj Nadar, President, Tamil Nadu Provincial Congress Committee, now a detenu in the Amraoti District Jail, wrote to me, authorising me to set up a Congress candidate for the bye-election. The office-bearers of the Tamil Nadu and Andhra Provincial Congress Committees and most of the members of their respective Working Committees are in the same jail. Recently when there were proposals to hold elections to the Legislative Council they were unanimously in favour of running Congress Party candidates and letters to that effect were received in January last. Having this as a precedent, action was taken on the authority specifically communicated to me from the Amraoti jail in a letter censored by the jail authorities"; and

(b) whether it is the policy of Government to allow privately the Congress to carry on their normal activities, to hold meetings, and to give directions from inside the jail?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) Yes.

(b) No.

Mr. H. A. Sathar H. Essak Sait: How is it that these letters are exchanged through the jail authorities?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I have no information that they are.

Mr. H. A. Sathar H. Essak Sait: The statement that has appeared in the Hindu has not been contradicted either by the Congress or the Government?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The mere fact that the statement has not been contradicted does not mean that it is true. So far as I know, the statement might refer to one letter which was written to Mrs. Satyamurti or some one else by a security prisoner on behalf of Kamaraj Nadar. This letter contained a remark that as Mr. Satyamurti was dead she should see that his place was properly filled and this remark was not censored as no political significance was attached to it at the time.

Mr. H. A. Sathar H. Essak Sait: Then the statement made by Mrs. Lakshmpipathi is not according to facts?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: It was according to her own interpretation of them.

STOPPAGE OF MESSAGES FROM RELATIVES IN INDIA TO INDIANS IN JAPANESE OCCUPIED ISLANDS.

231. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Director, External Service, All-India Radio, Delhi, has intimated to the public that messages or information from relatives in India will not be sent henceforth to Indians in islands in the occupation of Japan? If so, why?

(b) What steps do Government propose to take to ensure that the news of welfare of the families and relatives of Indians in countries now under the Japanese domination are conveyed to them till they are freed? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) and (b). Messages for broadcast are accepted by All-India Radio for all territories in Japanese possession including Japan itself. The second part of part (a) and part (b) of the question do not, therefore, arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is it that the information is being received through the All-India Radio from Japan and also intimations are being sent from here over there mutually?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: The question is whether it is a fact that the Director, External Service, All-India Radio has intimated to the public that messages or information from relatives in India will not be sent henceforth and the answer to that is 'No'.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Then, may I take it that information is being sent?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: 32 messages a day.

DESIRABILITY OF STOPPING THE PUBLICATION OF The Indian Information.

232. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Information and Broadcasting be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Government publishes a periodical entitled The Indian Information? If so, at what intervals, and what are the expenses incurred, separately, on its editing, printing and despatching?

(b) Have Government considered the relative cost of this publication as compared with the advantages gained? If so, which is greater?

(c) What is the annual consumption of newsprint on the production of The Indian Information? Have Government considered the question of the publication being stopped, in view of the acute shortage of paper in the country?

(d) Is it a fact that the news published in The Indian Information are very old and obsolete which had come in the public press months before the issue of The Indian Information? What purposes does The Indian Information serve?

(e) Is it a fact that the principal Information Officer of the Government of India issues unofficial notes daily for information and publication by press either as worded by him or used as back ground material?

(f) Is it a fact that Government communiqués and press notes are issued when necessary? Why then is The Indian Information continued to be published as duplicating the press information of Government? Is it proposed to close this periodical? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: (a) Yes. Indian Information is published twice a month. The average expenses incurred on its editing are Rs. 1,220 a month. Information regarding the printing and despatching charges has been called for and will be laid on the table of the House when received.

(b) Yes. Government consider that the advantages of the publication outweigh the expenditure involved.

(c) Indian Information is not printed on newsprint but on supercalendered paper produced in India of which about 126 tons are consumed in a year. It is not proposed to stop the publication but I would like to assure the Honourable Member that the needs of paper economy are constantly kept in view.

(d) Indian Information does not pretend to be a newspaper. It is produced mainly to serve as a reference record for the use of newspaper offices, libraries, persons, institutions, etc., whose role is to inform the public, and it is supplied only to those who ask for it.

(e) Yes.

(f) Yes. For reasons already stated it is not proposed to close the periodical.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Will the Honourable Member consider the desirability of amalgamating this publication with any cinema film magazine? In that case the Honourable Member can be assured of having the portraits of Members of the Executive Council printed as now.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I will seriously consider that!

Sir F. E. James: May I ask the Honourable Member to recollect for a moment the debate in this House on the question of the shortage of paper and the brave words which were then used by one of his colleagues as to the reproduction of this journal in a smaller form, and ask why in spite of that, nothing has been done up-to-date?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: The number of pages has been reduced and we have also tried to reduce the circulation. The question of reducing the size of the magazine has been under very serious consideration and it is only because the present contractors could not arrange to print it in a reduced size that we have not been able to do it. The moment the present contract expires, we propose to give it to another publisher who has agreed to reduce the size and have it in a smaller form.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Do the figures relate to the cost of the editing of the journal?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: Yes.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Do I understand that this editor was appointed by his Department some time ago for this specific purpose?

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: I must have notice of that question.

THE ENQUIRY ENTRUSTED TO DR. NEMENYI.

233. *Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state:

- (a) the terms and the scope of the enquiry entrusted to Dr. Nemenyi;
- (b) the cost of the enquiry to Government;
- (c) the credentials of Dr. Nemenyi for being entrusted with this work;
- (d) whether no Indian Economist of standing was available for the purpose; and
- (e) if Dr. Nemenyi has submitted his report to Government, if so, if it will be made available to the public?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) The object was to make a rapid survey, by means of direct contacts both official and non-official, of the opinions held regarding present economic trends and the scope for ameliorative action both in Central and provincial fields, and in Indian States;

(b) The total cost to Government will be about Rs. 6,000.

(c) Knowledge and practical experience of economic, financial and currency problems combined with widespread business contacts throughout India and the Indian States extending over a number of years.

(d) No other economist possessing the same personal qualifications was available for the immediate purpose;

(e) Dr. Nemenyi has already submitted a number of interim reports, but it is not proposed to publish them.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: What was Dr. Nemenyi doing before he undertook this inquiry?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I understand that he had a business appointment.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Was he not also engaged in writing a book in support of the Honourable Member's theories in connection with currency and finance?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: As far as I am aware, he was not actually engaged at that time on that particular book, but it is true that he had published his views quite independently on the question of inflation.

Sardar Sant Singh: What are the academic qualifications of this gentleman?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I cannot precisely quote them at this moment, but he has been recognised for some time as being a competent economist.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Recognised by whom?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: By my predecessors. He was associated, as far as I remember, with the Banking Inquiry Commission.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Was this gentleman employed in India before?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Yes, Sir.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: With whom was he employed?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: He has been employed with an Indian firm for some time.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: What is the name of that firm with whom he was employed?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I do not know the precise name of the firm and I do not think this question is relevant.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Was he not employed with Birla Brothers?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: So far as I am aware, that is not correct.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: When the Honourable Member does not know the qualifications of this gentleman, how can he say that there was none to be found in India of those qualifications?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I have seen his qualifications and I know that they are perfectly adequate.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: But the Honourable Member is not prepared to disclose them?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I did not say that. I do not happen to have such details as the name of the University where he graduated from before me at the moment.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: The Honourable Member said that this gentleman is an economist and has written a book on inflation. What views did he express in that book? Were they in favour of the policy of the Government of India?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Those views are expressed independently.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Did he write that book before he joined the office?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: He had written an article or a series of articles before he undertook this particular inquiry.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Is it a fact that because his views are favourable to the Honourable Member's Department, he was taken in his Department? Is there any foundation for that allegation?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I do not think that will be a fair inference.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the results of the inquiry made by the Doctor will be published and supplied to the Members of the Legislature?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I have already answered that question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask the Honourable Member to repeat the reply?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The answer was that it is not proposed to publish them.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask whether the Honourable Member is aware that this learned Doctor has completed a report which was circulated to the Members of the Assembly?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: It was not circulated by the Government.

Mr. Govind V. Deshmukh: May I ask what attempts were made to secure an Indian of the required qualifications before the Honourable Member came to the conclusion that no Indian of the required qualifications was to be found?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: There are a number of economists already in the employ of Government but such of them as might have been suitable were all too occupied at that time to be sent round the country.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Do the Universities of India not employ any economists and are they not suitable?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I must point out that this was not merely an academic inquiry. It was an inquiry of a different nature. It was as I said, in the nature of a practical survey of opinions held by individuals and it was necessarily to be conducted by an individual who had already made certain contacts.

Sardar Sant Singh: As there has been a good deal of discussion in this House on the question of inflation and other matters connected with it, will the Honourable Member be pleased to circulate this report as confidential to the Members of this House?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: No, Sir. The value of reports of that kind would be greatly diminished if they were not compiled entirely confidentially.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Is this economist an Austrian? If so, was he appointed on the recommendation of Herr Hitler?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I believe he is of Hungarian origin. I think at the present time he is a naturalised British citizen.

CONTROL OF CAPITAL ISSUES AND NEW JOINT STOCK COMPANIES STARTED WITH GOVERNMENT PERMISSION.

234. *Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state:

(a) whether Government have specifically laid down the type and nature of Joint Stock Companies for the promotion of which permission will be granted besides the general indications afforded by the Government communiqué on the control of capital issues, to guide the Government Examiner of Capital Issues; if so, what they are;

(b) how many Joint Stock Companies professing to have a capital of over a lakh of rupees have been started with Government's permission since the date of the ordinance on the subject; and

(c) if Government are satisfied that every one of these concerns that have been started with Government's permission, fill a basic need of the country?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) No. The final decision is that of the Government.

(b) Separate information is not available distinguishing between companies with a capital of one lakh and less and companies with a capital of over one lakh; but the total number of new companies which have been allowed to issue capital, up to 24th July, was 132.

(c) No, since in 88 out of the 132 cases, consent was given without special scrutiny on the lines suggested by the Honourable Member either because arrangements had already been carried very far when the control was introduced or because the concerns were private companies with petty capital.

HARDSHIPS CAUSED BY THE NEW DEFENCE OF INDIA RULE TAKING POWER TO PROHIBIT ADVANCES AGAINST SPECIFIED COMMODITIES.

235. *Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state:

(a) whether Government had to amend the Defence of India Rules and add a new clause No. 94B, taking power to prohibit advances against specified commodities by reason of any appreciable increase in bank advances in this country;

(b) whether Government are aware that the possibility of a blanket ban of the nature contemplated in the new Rule being imposed is having a greatly unsettling effect on the market;

(c) whether Government considered that it could not have achieved its aim, if any, by private negotiation with banking interests; if not, why not;

(d) whether Government have taken into account before acting in this matter, the considerable quantity of distress selling and hardship that will result to interests who are not fortunately placed so as to command a large capital of their own;

(e) what steps are being taken by Government to allay panic, and to safeguard the interests of the bona fide merchants and traders; and

(f) whether Government contemplate putting a check on advances unsecured by the mortgage of commodities?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) No.

(b) No.

(c) No. The making of advances is not confined to banking institutions so that negotiations with banks even if practicable would not cover the whole field.

(d) and (e). No order has so far been issued under the new rule and the reaction produced by Government taking power to prohibit such advances of which the Honourable Member is perhaps aware, is itself evidence that the former high level of prices was in large part due to speculation. Government have no reason to believe that should notification of any commodities prove necessary for this purpose, bona fide merchants and traders who do not indulge in speculation will suffer.

(f) Not at present, though should such a course of action at any future time appear desirable in the public interest, Government would not hesitate to take such action as lay within their power.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Arising out of the answer to part (a), may I ask what is the reason which prompted the Government to issue this new Rule?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: Because they thought it would have a salutary effect.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Was it merely to have the effect of a threat and nothing more?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: No, Sir. It is not merely a threat but it is a threat which can and which will be put into action if necessary.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: May I know if the Honourable Member is aware that the Reserve Bank has issued instructions to Scheduled Banks not to take notice of this new Rule?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am not aware of that. But I am aware that the Reserve Bank has told Banks that unless they exercise considerable caution, they may provoke action in this way.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: What is the estimate of the Government with regard to the question of lowering of prices owing to the deflationary reactions to this new Rule?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I must ask the Honourable Member to read the various market reports. There have been quite notable effects on various indices.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: May I ask if the Honourable Member bases his presumption on the fact that index prices have dropped because that was due to cloth control order?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: There are at least another half a dozen indices which have also responded.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: What is the effect on the price of silver?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: There was a notable drop in the bullion market. But I should like to take this opportunity of warning my friends in the bullion market.

Sardar Sant Singh: But they are not here to hear you.

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: But I have no doubt it will reach them. I should like to take this opportunity of warning them that any disaster which may again come upon them will be entirely provoked by themselves.

OBSERVATIONS OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF BENGAL re DEFENCE OF INDIA RULE 26.

236. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that in the course of the judgment delivered on the 14th July last in two Contempt of Court cases, arising out of the arrest of Mr. Shibnath Banerjee and Mr. Datta Mazumdar, Members of the Bengal Legislative Assembly, under Bengal Regulation III of 1818, after their release from detention under Rule 26 of the Defence of India Rules by a Special Bench of the High Court, the Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court made observations to the following effect:—

"That it was a surprise to His Lordship when he found that there was no provision under Defence of India Rule 26 to inform the detenu of the grounds on which he was detained and no provision for his being allowed to show cause against his detention; that in Bengal Regulation III of 1818, there was a provision for enabling the detenu to be told what were the grounds for his detention, and for enabling him to show cause against it; that a regulation made in England under the Emergency Power Act of 1939, which provided for the detention of certain persons who were not brought to trial, contemplated an opportunity being given to the detenu of having the grounds for his detention stated and showing cause against the detention; and that His Lordship drew attention to the absence of a similar provision in Defence of India Rule 26, in the hope that those who were responsible for this, might consider it?"

(b) Does the Honourable Member propose to lay on the table the full text of the observations made by His Lordship the Chief Justice on this point.

(c) Is any action proposed to be taken in the matter, as a result of the said observations of the Honourable the Chief Justice of Bengal?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) and (c). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to my reply to Mr. Deshmukh's question No. 172 on the 3rd August, 1943.

(b) The judgment will doubtless be reported in due course in an issue of law reports maintained in the Library and in the circumstances I do not propose to lay a copy on the table.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Do I take it that the Honourable Member has obtained an authenticated copy of these observations and still he declines to place them on the table?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: No, Sir. As I have said in reply to the question referred to, a copy of the judgment has been applied for, but has not yet been received.

Sardar Sant Singh: How is the Honourable Member aware that this particular judgment is to be published in the Indian Law Reports?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: That is the usual procedure.

Sardar Sant Singh: Not necessarily. May I ask the Honourable Member that in view of the observations that have come from such a high quarter as the Chief Justice of Bengal, have the Government of India taken any steps to examine the proposal and reach any conclusions about it?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: As I explained before, we cannot examine these things on Press Reports. We must have an authentic copy of the judgment itself and when it is received, we shall examine it.

PERSONS SHOT TO DEATH IN DELHI PROVINCE BY THE MILITARY OR THE ARMED POLICE.

237. Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to make a brief statement regarding the case in which the District and Sessions Judge of Delhi convicted four members of the armed police under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code, for the murder of three boys by shooting on the night of October 30-31, 1942, and sentenced them to death?

(b) What was found by the learned Judge to be the motive of the murder?

(c) Is it a fact that rewards had actually been ordered to be paid on behalf of Government to the four convicted members of the police force for having shot the three boys?

(d) In how many other cases were people shot to death in the Delhi Province in August, September and October 1942, by the military or the armed police by way of dispersing crowds, dealing with unlawful assemblies and stopping or preventing of sabotage or otherwise? Will the Honourable Member lay on the table a brief statement giving the circumstances of each such case?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) and (b). In the case to which the Honourable Member refers the High Court has still to pass orders on the reference made from the Sessions Court for the confirmation of the sentences and on the appeals preferred by the convicted persons. While the case is thus sub-judice it would not be proper for me to make any statement.

(c) No rewards were paid or ordered to be paid to the men in question by any authority in the Delhi Province.

(d) The number of persons killed in Delhi Province during August, September and October last year by police firing was 20 and by military firing 14. I do not consider that any useful purpose would be served by going into the circumstances of each case.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: With reference to the answer to part (a), may I ask whether one of the prosecution witnesses who gave evidence in this case has figured in the police court as a prosecution witness on 60 occasions?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: I am not aware of that.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Honourable Member kindly make enquiries?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: If it is relevant to the case, it is for the High Court to take notice of it in passing orders.

INDIAN REPRESENTATION AT THE PROPOSED INTERNATIONAL CURRENCY CONFERENCE.

238. Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state:

(a) whether it is a fact that the Indian Government have been invited to send representatives to the proposed International Currency Conference, as reported in the Hindu of Madras in its issue of the 22nd July, 1943; and

(b) whether Government have decided to send Sir Theodore Gregory to represent them at this conference?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) No arrangements have yet been made for the holding of an International Currency Conference. India has been invited to send technical experts to discuss informally and without commitments with the technical experts of the Government of the United States of America the feasibility of post-war international monetary co-operation.

Government are at present awaiting public reaction and comment on the two plans which were published in India on the 5th July last and given the widest circulation. When this is forthcoming and the Reserve Bank's views have been received, Government will consider what further steps should be taken.

(b) The question of the representatives to be sent to the International Conference, if and when it is summoned, has not yet been considered.

Sardar Sant Singh: May I ask if the Honourable Member will secure representation of Indians only on this Conference?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: The Government of India are fully aware of the importance of Indian representation.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know if the nomination will be made by the Executive Council or by the Finance Department?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: It will be made by the Government of India.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Have the Government of India formally issued any letter of invitation to the commercial bodies to express opinions on their two proposals or simply given publicity to the proposals and awaiting their criticisms to be published in the Press?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I think they have invited opinions.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Government of India give an assurance that in case representatives are sent, it would not be confined purely to technical experts of the Government of India?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: There are two possibilities. One is a preliminary technical conference which must be confined to technical experts, and the other is a full-blown International Conference which would, I imagine, not be of a purely technical character.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Does the Honourable Member mean that technical experts will be purely officials or will include non-officials also?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: It would consist of technical experts. I do not think they would necessarily be either officials or non-officials.

Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari: Will the Honourable Member again cast his eye round for suitable experts outside those in the employment of the Government of India in case he has to send somebody, as he has done in the case of Dr. Nemenyi?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I am always prepared to receive competent assistance from any quarter from which it may be forthcoming.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: May I take it that the possibility of non-official experts being taken is not excluded? If so, what procedure are Government going to lay down for getting the necessary non-official experts?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: I have said that the possibility is not excluded, but I do not think that any special procedure is necessary in the process of selection.

SCALE OF PAY OF A GAZETTED PUBLIC OFFICER ALLOWED LEAVE OUT OF INDIA PRIOR TO RETIREMENT.

239. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Will the Honourable the Finance Member please state:

(a) the scale of pay (old or 1934 revised) to which a Gazetted Public Officer is entitled, if that officer was allowed leave out of India prior to retirement from the 17th May, 1939, to the 23rd November, 1940, when he finally retired from the cadre and was re-employed in May 1941; and

(b) the rule under which the Government of India is entitled to compute the period from the 23rd November, 1940, to the 30th April, 1941, into leave without allowances, when his name was removed from the Rolls of the Establishment on the 23rd November, 1940?

The Honourable Sir Jeremy Raisman: (a) Such an officer would be entitled to the revised scale of pay.

(b) There is no such rule.

CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF RAILWAY SERVANTS EMPLOYED IN TRANSPORTATION UNITS OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

240. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: (a) Will the War Secretary please state the terms and conditions of service under which Railway servants are employed in the Transportation Units of the Indian Army?

(b) Are Railway servants employed in those units and governed by the Payment of Wages Act, IV of 1936, liable to be punished with fine under the Indian Army Act? If so, to what extent?

(c) How many Railway servants of those units were punished with fine (extent, amount together with the nature of the offence to be stated in each case) by the Officer Commanding, Training Depot, Jullundur, during the preceding two years?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: (a) The terms and conditions are contained in Army Instruction (India) No. 56 of 1943, a copy of which is in the library of the House.

(b) Yes, Sir. Railway personnel employed in Transportation (Railway) Units are liable to a fine of half a month's pay or Rs. 100, whichever is less, provided that in the case of Havildars and Naiks (or equivalent rank) their total monthly emoluments exceed Rs. 50 and in the case of Lance Naiks and Sepoys (or equivalent rank) their total monthly emoluments exceed Rs. 35.

(c) The information required is not readily available. It has been called for and will be laid on the table in due course.

Sardar Sant Singh: Does the Payment of Wages Act apply on their recruitment in the army?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: The position I have stated is not affected by the applicability or otherwise of the Payment of Wages Act.

Sardar Sant Singh: Were they governed by that Act when they were in railway employment?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: I think so.

Sardar Sant Singh: Why has this privilege been taken away now?

Mr. C. M. Trivedi: The liability to a fine is one of the conditions of their employment in the Units.

CIVIC GUARDS IN THE DELHI PROVINCE.

241. *Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Will the Honourable Member for Civil Defence please state:

(a) the date on which the Civic Guards were recruited in the Delhi Province;

(b) the strength of such Guards on the 30th June, 1942, and on the 30th June, 1943;

(c) the number of rank and file permitted to resign with reasons therefor; and

(d) the present strength?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) The Civic Guards in the Delhi Province were formed in July 1940.

(b) The strength of the Civic Guards on the 30th June, 1942, was 9 Unit Commanders, 18 Unit Officers and 107 other members.

The strength on 30th June, 1943, was one Commander, 8 Unit Commanders, 7 Unit Officers and 157 other members.

(c) 10 officers and 133 other members tendered their resignations for the following reasons:

(1) 3 officers and 33 other members joined the Army.

(2) One officer joined the Police.

(3) One officer and 2 other members joined the Air Raid Precautions Organisation.

(4) One officer and 50 other members resigned owing to the pressure of other public or private work.

(5) 4 officers and 33 other members resigned on their leaving Delhi.

(6) 15 members resigned on account of ill health.

(d) The present strength is one Commander, 8 Unit Commanders, 7 Unit Officers and 157 Civic Guards.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: May I know why the Honourable the Home Member is answering a question on behalf of the Civil Defence Department?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: The question was wrongly addressed to the Civil Defence Department as the Home Department is in administrative charge of Civic Guards in Delhi Province.

UNSTARRED QUESTION AND ANSWER.

THEFT CASES REGISTERED BY SHAHDARA POLICE STATION.

52. Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Will the Honourable the Home Member please state:

(a) the number of cases of theft registered by the Shahdara Police Station during the preceding five years, year by year; and

(b) the number of cases of theft registered but remained untraced during that period?

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell: (a) and (b). The number of thefts registered and of those that remained untraced at the Shahdara Police Station during the last five years is:

Year.	Registered.	Untraced.	Year.	Registered.	Untraced.
1938 . . .	18	13	1941 . . .	21	6
1939 . . .	22	13	1942 . . .	18	10
1940 . . .	15	6

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

DEATHS DUE TO STARVATION IN BENGAL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have received notice from Mr. K. C. Neogy of a motion of adjournment for discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the failure of the Government of India to make urgent inquiries into reports that deaths are taking place in Calcutta and in the interior of the province of Bengal due to starvation.

Why does the Honourable Member say that they have failed to make any inquiry?

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I shall explain the point. The reports to which I allude have been appearing in the press from about the beginning of the second week of July. Early in the third week of July, there was a debate in the Bengal Legislative Assembly in which specific allegations of this character were made by responsible members, and those reports were published in the press and must have been seen by the Government of India. In this House, I asked a question on the 2nd August last, drawing the attention of the Honourable Member in charge to some of these reports; and in reply he stated that he had seen those reports. In reply to my query as to whether the Government of India proposed to hold inquiries, the Honourable Member stated that the Government of Bengal had instituted inquiries, and then in reply to supplementary questions the Honourable Member, to my mind, showed his disinclination to take any initiative for the purpose of making inquiries on behalf of the Government of India into these very serious allegations.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): What is there in the answers to lead to that conclusion?

Mr. K. C. Neogy: In one question I asked:

"Is the Honourable Member in possession of all the reports regarding deaths from starvation in Bengal, Orissa and other provinces? Is he expected to be kept regularly informed by the provincial authorities in this particular matter?"

In reply to that the Honourable Member said:

"I cannot say that the Government of India is in possession of all the reports on the subject because so many appear in so many places that it is very difficult for us. Whenever there is a question we make inquiries from the Provincial Governments and are informed of the situation. Otherwise the general situation is fairly well known."

Then I put a suggestion in the next question:

"Is the matter not of sufficient importance to merit a sort of general instruction being issued from the Government of India that all reports regarding deaths from starvation which may happen in any part of the country should be reported promptly to the Government of India?"

In reply to that the Honourable Member stated as follows:

"I will consider the suggestion. No doubt I feel that if the matter is really of such a character as it should be communicated to the Government of India, then the Provincial Governments will no doubt do so."

Which means that the Government of India were not very anxious to send down any definite instructions to that effect, and would rather depend upon the judgment of the Provincial Governments in this matter.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The Honourable Member said that he would consider the suggestion made.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: There were several other questions and answers to that effect, but the immediate reason why I gave notice of this motion was that yesterday, when my Honourable friend Mr. Deshmukh asked a similar question drawing his attention to the fact that a very large number of people were reported to be dying every day in the streets of Calcutta, the Honourable Member in charge stated: "I have seen a press report to that effect."

Which shows that although the seriousness of the situation is definitely known to Government, they have failed to rise to the height of the occasion and make inquiries into these very serious allegations. The point is whether the Government of India have any responsibility in such matters. That is the issue which I should like to raise. There is a Food Department in the Government of India of which the Honourable Member Sir Azizul Huque is in charge. If there is any justification for the creation of the Food Department and the creation of a Member in charge of that department, I should like to know whether the Government of India have any responsibility in any circumstances and at any stage, and whether those circumstances have not yet arisen and whether that stage has not yet been reached, so far as Bengal is concerned.

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque (Food Member): Sir, I entirely contradict the inferences which have been drawn by the Honourable Member. I merely stated that my attention has been drawn to it. But there was neither a question nor an answer,—and I could not give an answer in view of the debate coming up on Monday,—as to what steps have been taken. We have taken immediate steps wherever we considered matters so serious as to get information.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Then the Government of India have made inquiries?

The Honourable Sir M. Azizul Huque: Yes, Sir, and it is still in the process of inquiry. We are not satisfied with the inquiry and we have telegraphed and we are still in the process of getting information.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): In view of the statement made by the Honourable Member I do not think any case has been made out for the motion of adjournment and I disallow it.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Sir, is the statement made by the Honourable Member that Government have made inquiries, a sufficient answer? Is not that a justification for discussion of the whole question?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The whole question can be discussed on Monday. I understand the position in Bengal is serious and a number of Members take a great deal of interest in the matter, and I am sure the question will be fully discussed.

DECLARATION OF EXEMPTION UNDER THE REGISTRATION OF FOREIGNERS ACT.

The Honourable Sir Reginald Maxwell (Home Member): Sir, I lay on the table a copy of the Declaration of Exemption No. 1/16/43-Political (E), dated the 28th July 1943 issued under the Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939.

No. 1/16/43-Political (E).

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Simla, the 28th July, 1943.

DECLARATION OF EXEMPTION.

In exercise of the powers conferred by section 6 of the Registration of Foreigners Act, 1939 (XVI of 1939), the Central Government is pleased to declare that the provisions of the Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939, except rule 8 and such of the provisions of rules 4, 14, 15 and 16 as apply to, or in relation to, passengers and visitors who are not foreigners, shall not apply to or in relation to, Mr. Charles Pope, an employee of the United States Office of War Information at Bombay, so long as he continues to be so employed.

B. R. PANDEY,

Under Secretary to the Government of India.

THE DELHI UNIVERSITY (AMENDMENT) BILL—contd.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The House will now resume discussion of the Delhi University Bill. Item No. 11 on the printed list was under discussion.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, when the House adjourned yesterday we were discussing the amendment that was moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Nairang. The amendment lays down that the powers of granting recognition or withdrawal of recognition to any of the colleges that are being given under this Bill to the Executive Council will be subject to confirmation by the Court. There were two objections that were raised by the Government against this amendment: One was that the Court meets only once a year; the other was that the question of granting recognition or withdrawal of recognition required knowledge of day to day administration of the University. I am afraid neither of these arguments can convince us that the amendment which is sought to be made is not necessary.

The question of granting recognition or withdrawal of recognition to any college is not such that it arises every day. I would like to know if there have been many cases where recognition has been withdrawn or recognition has been granted during the last twenty years. Sir, so far this power rested with the Court of the University. Now, it has been decided that the power will rest with the Executive Council. This power to the Executive Council does not exist, as far as I am aware, in any of the Universities of India. In other Universities where the power has been given to the Executive Council it is subject to confirmation by the Court. I do not see that any harm will be done to the administration of the University if this power was made subject to confirmation by the Court. It is bound to create, whenever any such action is taken, a feeling of suspicion amongst the people concerned, and what we should avoid is that people should doubt the bona fides of the Executive Council. In the Court there are so many other interests that are represented, there are so many other responsible people who are there and I think that if the Executive Council have a strong case for the withdrawal of recognition of any college then the Court will not stand in their way. On the contrary, if such action is taken by the Executive Council and it is supported by the Court, it is likely to carry greater weight with the people concerned. Sir, I really do not see why the Government should oppose this amendment. It does not interfere with the knowledge that the Executive Council might acquire on account of the day-to-day administration of the University. The power is given to the Executive Council to withdraw recognition or grant recognition. All that is intended under this amendment is that that action of the Executive Council will be subject to confirmation by the Court. I have not yet heard any valid argument that has been advanced by the Government on this question. To my mind it is a very essential amendment, and I do hope that the Government will re-consider their position as I submit that it will not interfere in the slightest degree with the efficient administration of the University. Sir, I support the amendment that has been moved.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): Sir, the question of disaffiliation or withdrawal of recognition is exceedingly important and may I just read the provisions made in the Act of 1904 about the question of disaffiliation and see what they provided at that time. Section 24 of the Universities Act, 1904 runs thus:

"(1) A member of the Syndicate who intends to move that the rights conferred on any College by affiliation be withdrawn, in whole or in part, shall give notice of his motion, and shall state in writing the grounds on which the motion is made.

"(2) Before taking the said motion into consideration, the Syndicate shall send a copy of the notice and written statement mentioned in sub-section (1) to the Head of the College concerned, together with an intimation that any representation in writing submitted within a period specified in such intimation on behalf of the College will be considered by the Syndicate:

Provided that the period so specified may, if necessary, be extended by the Syndicate.

"(3) On receipt of the representation or on expiration of the period referred to in sub-section (2), the Syndicate, after considering the notice of motion, statement and representation and after such inspection by any competent person authorized by the Syndicate in this behalf, and such further inquiry as may appear to them to be necessary, shall make a report to the Senate (which really corresponds to the Court).

"(4) On receipt of the report under sub-section (3), the Senate shall, after such further inquiry (if any) as may appear to them to be necessary, record their opinion on the matter.

"(5) The Registrar shall submit the proposal and all proceedings of the Syndicate and Senate relating thereto to the Government, who, after such further inquiry (if any) as may appear to them to be necessary, shall make such order as the circumstances may, in their opinion, require.

"(6) Where by an order made under sub-section (5) the rights conferred by affiliation are withdrawn, in whole or in part, the grounds for such withdrawal shall be stated in the order."

So really we have got such elaborate provisions for disaffiliation or withdrawal of recognition—a report by the Syndicate, an enquiry by the Syndicate, report then to the Senate, an enquiry by the Senate, report then to the Government, an enquiry by the Government, and afterwards mention of these facts to the college concerned. But now the Government are playing with this question of withdrawal of recognition. It is a very serious matter. What you are providing is that the members of the Executive Council should sit together and come to a decision which should be final. It is not heard of in any University in India, or outside India. I am not concerned so much with recognition as I am with the withdrawal of recognition. The question of birth does not matter but the question of killing is very serious. You have just heard the procedure which was provided for in the Act of 1904. It is a very elaborate machinery for deciding the question of disaffiliation or withdrawal of recognition. It is not done very easily and I think it is unfair to the colleges that the majority of the members in the Executive Council may take their decision and that that decision should be final. It is unheard of and I think that it is desirable that the Government should consider this question in the interest of giving security to the colleges. We are quite prepared to give security of tenure to the teachers. You should also give security of tenure to the colleges.

With these words, I support the motion.

Mr. J. D. Tyson (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands): The procedure which it is sought to lay down for the withdrawal of recognition, which will be found in Clause 33 of Statute 3, is that the Executive Council may after due enquiry and after consultation with the Academic Council by a majority of the then members of the Executive Council withdraw recognition; and as was indicated by my friend, the Educational Adviser, there is a chance for appeal, if recognition is withdrawn, to the Central Government from the decision of the Executive Council. I must confess, I am at a loss to understand why there is this suspicion of the Executive Council as though it were a kind of instrument either of the Vice-Chancellor or of Government. Now assuming—I do not for a moment admit it—that the Vice-Chancellor and the Government acting together can command the votes of the University officials and the Government officials who are on the Executive Council, the Vice-Chancellor would command in that capacity, including his own vote, nine votes in the Executive Council as is envisaged under this Bill. As against that there would be 18 persons who are definitely elected in one way or another. I include in that 18 the six Principals of colleges, because it cannot for a moment be stated that they are the Vice-Chancellor's nominees or the Government's nominees. Then there are the Deans of the Faculties. It may be said that they are under the influence of the Vice-Chancellor, but the Deans of the Faculties are elected by the Faculties and not nominated by the Vice-Chancellor. Then we propose two Professors elected by the Professors and five members elected by the Court, two of whom are elected by the registered graduates. Then there are two others elected by the Academic Council. In other words, counting the Principals, there are 18 people who are not Government servants, unless the Professors happen to be Government servants as well—honorary professors—as against 9 who are tarred, shall I say, with the brush of being Government servants or servants of the University. I therefore fail to understand why there should be this suspicion of the Executive Council.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Why do you suspect the Court?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: We suspect the Court because for a good long time past now it has been common knowledge that some of the colleges are not being properly run. One has been mentioned on the floor of this House by the Leader of a Party and yet that college is still going on: it is fairly safe to assume that that is so because if the matter were brought to the University under the Act as at present it could not be regarded as certain that the Court would do the right thing.

As the matter has been raised, Sir, and as it has been specifically stated that there is no precedent in any other university, I wish to quote two. I would say at once that comparisons with other universities are apt to be a bit tricky because the composition of the Executive Council or corresponding body is not the same in every university and I give this subject to that caution. But we have a precedent in Nagpur where Government takes recognition away on the recommendation of the Executive Council and in Agra where the Executive Council takes away recognition.

For these reasons, some of which had already been given on the amendment that was defeated yesterday, Government cannot accept the amendment.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): My friend, Mr Tyson, has been telling the House that why should there be or not be any suspicion. It is not a case of suspicion at all, but one of following the right or the wrong procedure. When a procedure was once fixed, unless one can show that the procedure in the Act of 1904 was utterly useless, wrong, and could not be worked properly, it cannot be argued that that procedure should be set aside. Therefore, I submit, that unless my friend is prepared to argue that the procedure in the Act of 1904 is faulty, this reply of his is not enough to convince any reasonable man in the House. It is only fair that whenever there is to be an amendment about a procedure, be it civil or criminal or any other, Government and everyone else concerned with it, should explain, and explain very elaborately, why that procedure should not be followed. It is not sufficient to say that because a verdict has been given by the Executive Council therefore the House must endorse that decision. This is no argument but it is only meant to put off the House from the right track. I submit, Sir, that my friend on the other side should explain more fully to the House why the present procedure should not be followed.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani (Tirhut Division: Muhammadan): Sir, it is provided in clause 33 of Statute 3 that the Executive Council may, after due enquiry and after consultation with the Academic Council, by a majority of all the then members of the Executive Council withdraw the recognition. Everything is in the hands of the Executive Council. The mere consultation of the Academic Council is no safeguard at all. It does not say that if the Academic Council is of the contrary opinion then recognition will not be withdrawn. Otherwise, it is quite useless to say "after due enquiry and after consultation with the Academic Council" because the ultimate action is going to be taken by the Executive Council independently. The interests of those who have spent a lot of money for the education of their youths are not safeguarded. They have not got their say in the Executive Council; simply one kind of authority or persons have been allowed seats on the Executive Council. So, it is rightly desired by the learned Mover of the amendment that the safeguard should be in the hands of the wider body, say, the Court, and the lovers of democracy should not at all be afraid. It is Nazism and Fascism that always take a narrow scope.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): But who are the lovers of democracy?

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: People who are here on the Treasury Benches.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Are they lovers of democracy?

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: They are out to proclaim by beat of drum that they are democracy lovers.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Proclamation is one thing and practice another.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: However, we should go by what they say. So, it is a very dangerous thing to leave such matters as the withdrawal of recognition in the hands of the Executive Council. Perhaps certain professors, certain principals may be dissatisfied with the authority which runs a college. They may be in league with the Vice-Chancellor and the withdrawal can be easily had. Therefore, we should be very careful to provide adequate safeguard against the withdrawal of recognition, and it is a very modest demand made in the amendment. I hope Government will reconsider their position and accept the amendment.

An Honourable Member: Let the question be now put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 7 of the Bill, to the proposed clause (ff) the words 'and subject to confirmation by the Court' be added at the end."

The motions was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 7 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 7 was added to the Bill.

Clause 8 was added to the Bill.

Clause 9 was added to the Bill.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang (East Punjab: Muhammadan): Sir, I move:

"That clause 10 of the Bill be omitted and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly."

Clause 10 of the Bill seeks to amend section 34 of the Act of 1922. It says:

"In section 34 of the said Act, for sub-section (1) the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely:

"(1) The Colleges shall be such as may, after the commencement of the Delhi University (Amendment) Act, 1943, be recognised by the Executive Council in accordance with this Act and the Statutes, but shall include all Colleges recognised at the commencement of the said Act as Colleges of the University so long as such recognition continues."

Sub-section (1) of section 34 which is sought to be replaced, says: "The colleges shall be such as may be named in the statutes" and we find that in the schedule containing the statutes appended to this Bill the colleges are actually named. I invite attention to Statute 19 of the Schedule:

"Recognition of Colleges [Section 34 (1)]: The following colleges, namely, St. Stephen's College, Hindu College, Ramjas College, Anglo-Arabic College, Commercial College and Indraprastha Girls' College shall be recognised as Colleges of the University, teaching in such subjects as the Executive Council, on the recommendation of the Academic Council, may, from time to time, authorise them to teach.

So long as a direction made by the Central Government under the proviso to sub-section (2) of section 36 is in force, the Ramjas Intermediate College shall be recognised as a College of the University in respect of its Intermediate Classes and shall provide instruction up to the Intermediate Standard, and so on."

[Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang.]

Now, Sir, as required by section 34, sub-section (1) of the present Act, the colleges have been actually mentioned in the statutes appended to the present Bill. What else remains to be done for which that sub-section should be replaced by the proposed sub-clause (1)? Unless the matter is clearly and lucidly explained by Government in a manner satisfactory to us, I think the replacement of the present sub-section by the proposed sub-section is not called for and therefore I move this amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That clause 10 of the Bill be omitted and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: We regard clause 10 of the Bill as consequential. It safeguards the existing colleges. It provides for the new procedure whereby recognition and also withdrawal shall be by the Executive Council. The colleges are safeguarded specifically by clause 10 and, as I say, we regard it as necessary and consequential.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 10 of the Bill be omitted and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 10 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 10 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I move:

"That clause 11 of the Bill be omitted and the subsequent clauses be re-numbered accordingly."

Sir, this relates to the method by which the three years degree course is being introduced into the Delhi University. I think on the subject I have said not only once but several times in this House that I do not agree with this three years course without making proper provision for the migration of students to be taken by the other Universities. This clause relates to section 36 of the Delhi University Act. What is provided in section 36 is already sufficient for even having this three years degree course. They can have the three years degree-course even if they retain the Intermediate examination. They are giving the so-called Intermediate class of theirs to the High Schools and with that object they are introducing a secondary class after one passes the Matriculation. To me it appears that they can give as much education as the students are now receiving up to the Intermediate class by adding one class there. But I think the great difficulty would be this that if they call the secondary class as equivalent to the Intermediate examination, I do not think the other Universities will accept it. Therefore, students who have passed the Intermediate examination from other Universities will have no difficulty in gaining admission in the colleges of the Delhi University, but the students who have passed the secondary class of the Delhi University will not be admitted in the third year class by the other Universities. These difficulties should be considered seriously. What we have understood from the other side, especially from Mr. Sargent, is that the other Universities will adopt the policy of give and take. But where is the guarantee for that? If we take their students in our University, where is the guarantee that they will take our students also when they have not passed the Intermediate Examination. Some correspondence may have taken place between the Government or Mr. Sargent and the other Universities as to the terms under which these mutual relations would be established. But we do not know up to this time what those terms are. What we have been told up to this time are only pious promises or hopes of pious promises from the other Universities as was said the other day. These questions should be settled first and only then an attempt should be made to introduce a matter like this.

I have already said that if they retain section 36, they can carry on with the three years course by manipulating it here and there and adjusting it according to their needs. In that case the Intermediate examination will remain and there will not be much difficulty for the migration of students from other Universities to this University.

I need not take any more time of the House on this matter. It has already been threshed out fully in this House not only now but even when the matter was going to the Select Committee. What we have heard so far are only the hopes that the Delhi University will be able to adjust matters in such a way that there will be no difficulty. I think the difficulty has even now begun and many students are leaving this University. These complications will reduce the number of the students in the Delhi University. Those who will remain in the Delhi University will be those who are aspiring to some jobs after finishing their educational course either in the Delhi University itself or in some other offices in Delhi. I should think that the Government should not be adamant on this point and they should delete the new clause and keep the old one.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That clause 11 of the Bill be omitted and the subsequent clauses be re-numbered accordingly."

Mr. J. P. Sargent (Government of India: Nominated Official): Sir, the House has been kind enough to listen to me patiently on two occasions explaining why, in our opinion, the introduction of the three years degree course in the University is a desirable thing and I do not propose to trespass further on their indulgence. I endeavoured when I spoke the other day to explain why I hoped that the University of Delhi would have no difficulty in obtaining the co-operation of other universities in reciprocal arrangements for facilitating the transfer of students both from Delhi to other Universities and from other Universities to Delhi. The reason, if I may remind the House, why I am perhaps optimistic—my friend Mr. Lalchand Navalrai would no doubt regard me as unduly optimistic—is that the idea of the three years course having been endorsed by all the Universities of the country, I think we have a right to appeal to them for their assistance in helping us to carry out an experiment which, at any rate, has met with their considerable approval.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Had any negotiations taken place?

Mr. J. P. Sargent: I was about to explain that point. Granted that the three years course is to be introduced, the amendments contained in this clause are necessary in order to regularise the position of the Delhi University. I think, as a matter of business, this is really the fundamental clause in the Bill concerning the three years course. I think the University felt, and felt rightly, that before they approached other Universities with regard to the question of reciprocal arrangements, they must first make the necessary alterations in their own Act and statutes which would regularise the introduction of three years course.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will that not be putting the cart before the horse?

Mr. J. P. Sargent: No, Sir. My own view is that it would be exactly the other way about. That is my opinion. Honourable Members will realise that all these things are necessary to regularise the new Higher Secondary Examination of Delhi. This examination is now a means of entry to the University degree course. At the present moment, the Intermediate Examination, which no longer exists in the Delhi University, is prescribed as a necessary condition of admission. The introduction of the words both in sub-section (2) of section 36 of the Act and in the proviso, first of all provides for the new Higher Secondary School Examination as a condition of admission and also covers the examination at the end of the preparatory course. The preparatory course which is at present in existence to facilitate the transition stage. Accordingly, if the three years course is accepted. I think the other things are necessary and logical consequences of its introduction.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Will the Honourable Member please tell the House what has been done by the Board of Secondary Education and the University in this respect so far, and if any correspondence has passed between either the Government of India or the University on the one hand and the other Universities on the other hand, because that will, I think, facilitate discussion on this matter. The object of our giving notice of this motion was to find out all the facts and get full information regarding this question and if a full and frank statement is given it might remove that fear which is prevailing in the minds of the students who are seeking admission in this University.

Mr. J. P. Sargent: I hope I had made it clear that the University having altered this section in order to regularise the three years course so far as they themselves are concerned, will then be in a position to approach other Universities, to refer to this amended clause and to ask for their co-operation. The University felt, and I think quite correctly, that until they had put their own regulations in order, they would not be in a position to approach other Universities. But whether informal consultations have taken place or not, I cannot say. There has been no official correspondence.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: We live in hopes.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: I had put another question also regarding this Secondary Education Board. Have they done anything in this respect? Is that a statutory body?

Mr. J. P. Sargent: It is a body set up with the consent of the Government, but whether that makes it a statutory body or not, I do not know.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: If I start a society with the consent of the Government, will it be a statutory body?

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: May I ask whether the University authorities have considered the possibility of even one or two Universities refusing their request? What will then be the result to the students who want to join the Delhi University and who are merely here because their parents happen to be stationed in Delhi for one or two years and may have to go to another station afterwards. That is a question, I might say, that is being asked all over Delhi today by all people interested in education, and I do think that it is up to the Government to give a satisfactory answer to the public in this connection. Up to now, beyond merely stating that Government have indications from other Universities that they are likely to enter into reciprocal arrangements, they have said nothing. But when asked whether they have actually entered into negotiations already and whether these hopes are based on any discussions that have taken place, their reply was that no discussions have taken place. Will it not be that there is some risk to the Delhi University and to the large number of students who hope to join the University.

Mr. J. P. Sargent: In reply to that, I can only say what I have said before and that is that the Universities all over India have on two occasions approved this change without any reservation, excepting, as I said the other day, that the High School system would have to be reorganised. We are reorganising the High School system in Delhi. I therefore see no reason to look forward with pessimism to the reactions of other Universities to the proposal that they should fall in with the arrangements. If they do not, then the Delhi University will have to consider the situation which will then be created. According to all the facts that are available, I think it would be wrong to assume difficulties that are going to arise.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Will that require new legislation?

Mr. J. P. Sargent: No, Sir. I do not think so.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Is there anything in the Act whereby if you fail in your negotiations, you need not have fresh legislation?

Mr. J. P. Sargent: I could not answer that off-hand. The University will have to consider the situation and advise us.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, the reply that my Honourable friend the Educational Adviser has given to the questions which were put to him has proved conclusively that the demand that we, on this side of the House, have been making for circulation of this Bill for eliciting public opinion was fully justified. It appears today that the University of Delhi or the Government of India who are rushing through this measure have not even as much as corresponded with any of the Universities in the country. My Honourable friend is relying on the decisions of some conference of some Universities that was held sometime ago whereby they are reported to have supported the idea of a three year course. May I tell him that it is not safe to depend on that kind of decision of any deliberative body. Before Government embarked on this venture they should have made sure that they would get the co-operation and support of all the other Universities in India. The object of this motion, I entirely agree with him, that if we accept the proposition of having a three years degree course, then this amendment in the Act is necessary, was to find out from the Government what concrete steps have either the University or the Government themselves taken in this direction. I cannot blame those students or those parents who are feeling nervous about this matter. Sir, as my Honourable friend Mr. Sargent pointed out on another occasion, it is indeed a question of building the house from the roof. It is not only a question of building the house from the roof to the foundation, but they have not even collected any material to fill up the foundation later on. Therefore I do submit that trying experiments like these without making preparations, without securing the goodwill of other Universities is a very risky venture. I suggest to the Government that if they have not so far taken any action in this matter, they might at least move now and do something and get the co-operation and goodwill of these other Universities. Sometimes they are too fast in their movements, at other times, they sit tight in their seats. Sir, this is really a matter which concerns the student community of Delhi very vitally and I am surprised that the University of Delhi or the Government should have embarked on a venture without making preparations for it. I submit, Sir, that it is we, who belong to this country and who have to live here, who will have to face the music. My Honourable friend who starts building the House from the roof may not be here to see it tumble down, but we will have to clear the debris and I refuse to be a party to clear the rubbish that may be left behind after trying these experiments.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, I had some doubts as to the working of the three years' course, specially about the migration of students but the speech of the Educational Adviser at the consideration stage removed my doubts. But he has not yet told us as to the method he would propose in order to give effect to the proposal he laid before us on the last occasion. I thought he would like to have it enacted in the ordinances, but there is no indication. The second point is that the Higher Secondary Education Board not being a statutory body, it is very doubtful if the universities would recognise it because they only recognise an institution which is created by enactment or by statute; and therefore later on they might feel doubtful about recognising the examinations of this Board. Therefore this Board must have some statutory assent, otherwise it will not be recognised by all universities. Therefore I should like to have some assurance with regard to migration on the lines already mentioned by the Educational Adviser and also with regard to making the Secondary Education Board a statutory body.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, I will reply very briefly. We will certainly from the Government side do all that we can to help the university to make reciprocal arrangements. They will have to be made by the university but Government will certainly help them in any way they can. As to the second point about giving statutory basis to the Higher Secondary Education Board, we will examine the necessity of that.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 11 of the Bill be omitted and the subsequent clauses be re-numbered accordingly."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 11 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 11 was added to the Bill.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 12 of the Bill, after the word 'Act' the brackets and letter '(a)' be inserted and the following be added at the end of the clause, namely:

'(b) in sub-section (4) after the words "Executive Council" the words "through the Academic Council" shall be inserted'."

This is important because the Vice-Chancellor awards degrees with the formula, "By the authority vested in me" etc. Now it is only the Academic Council which can vest the Vice-Chancellor with this authority by passing a Resolution to that effect. And if the Academic Council do not know the results of the examinations they are not in a position to make the proposal. Therefore the authority who tabulated and prepared the results should communicate them to the Executive Council through the Academic Council. It will not delay the publication of the results because that will be done as soon as the authority has prepared the results; it will be done as a matter of course after one or two months. But it is necessary for the results to be sent to the Academic Council so that they may by a Resolution authorise the Vice-Chancellor to award degrees. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 12 of the Bill, after the word 'Act' the brackets and letter '(a)' be inserted and the following be added at the end of the clause, namely:

'(b) in sub-section (4) after the words "Executive Council" the words "through the Academic Council" shall be inserted'."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, I am prepared to accept this amendment. The Mover has made it quite clear that he does not wish in any way to delay the publication of the results for which naturally the students and their teachers are very anxious. And this is a technical point on which I fully agree with him that the Academic Council should be associated with the communication of the results. As I said, we accept the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 12 of the Bill, after the word 'Act' the brackets and letter '(a)' be inserted and the following be added at the end of the clause, namely:

'(b) in sub-section (4) after the words "Executive Council" the words "through the Academic Council" shall be inserted'."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That clause 12, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 12, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 13, 14 and 15 were added to the Bill.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, after sub-clause (vi) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following sub-clause be inserted and subsequent sub-clauses be re-lettered accordingly:

'(vii) the Chairman of the Muslim Chamber of Commerce, Delhi'."

I think nothing in the nature of a long speech is needed to show the necessity of making a provision like this. We have got in the enumeration of persons who shall be members of the Court: the Chief Commissioner of Delhi; the Director General, Indian Medical Services; the Educational Adviser to the Government of India; the Director of Public Instruction, Punjab; the Superintendent of Education, Delhi; the Chairman of the Punjab Chamber of Commerce.

And we say that the Chairman of a body of the same nature existing in Delhi—the Muslim Chamber of Commerce—should also be a member of the Court. That is all that is demanded by this amendment, and I hope Government will not be reluctant to concede to the Muslim Chamber of Commerce the right to be represented on the Court.

Yesterday when I moved an amendment relating to the committee of selection to be constituted in connection with the selection of the Vice-Chancellor, I said something about what I expected was coming. We Muslims, fortunately or unfortunately, are not in the habit of mincing matters. We do not say like what an Honourable speaker in this House said yesterday in a most hesitating and halting manner that he saw what he considered a dream which he saw in day time while he was not asleep, and all that. He described as a dream what was an actual reality. We are not in the habit of mincing matters like that; we are realists. We do not like that speaker take realities for dreams and dreams for realities. We are given to calling a spade a spade, and therefore I stood on no ceremony and made no apology in discussing that motion in saying that I expected to be charged with what is conveniently called by certain people 'communalism', and after anticipating certain objections I tried to answer them. Today again I have to revert to a certain extent to the same topic in connection with this amendment. Sir, I do think that the addition of one member to the Court to represent the commercial interests of a vast community of India, a community which is entitled to call itself a nation and has for a long time declared itself to be a nation is necessary. The commercial interests of such a nation on the Court of the Delhi University will be only reasonable and there should be no objection to such a member being placed on the Court of the Delhi University of which, under the altered circumstances under the new law, it will be more or less an honorary distinction to be a member, because all the powers one by one are being snatched away from that body and vested in a smaller body, namely, the Executive Council. Therefore, if you can satisfy a nation by giving it one representative in the shape of the Chairman of the Muslim Chamber of Commerce on an ornamental body I think it should not displease any of my Honourable friends in this House much less the Government which is the guardian of the interests of all the nations inhabiting this sub-continent. I do not propose to dilate any further on this topic. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, after sub-clause (vi) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following sub-clause be inserted and subsequent sub-clauses be re-lettered accordingly:

'(vii) the Chairman of the Muslim Chamber of Commerce, Delhi'."

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Sir, before speaking on this amendment, I should like to know whether this body—the Muslim Chamber of Commerce—is a purely commercial body, or not.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: It is purely commercial.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Will the Government give me an assurance that it is a purely commercial body?

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I do not know what is meant.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: If it is a purely commercial body, I shall be very glad to support this amendment.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: This clause has come in company which makes it impossible for me to accept it, I am afraid. It is not a "Delhi" Chamber of Commerce in which case my attitude would probably have been very different, but as my friend the Mover has made quite clear that it is, to quote his own words, the National Muslim Chamber of Commerce, i.e., the Chamber of Commerce of the Muslim Nation, and I am bound to say that coming, as it does, along with all the other amendments of the same kind I must regard it as coming within the communal arena and, therefore, I am afraid, I cannot accept it.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: If it is a commercial body I would support it.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: The words are clear—"the Chairman of the Muslim Chamber of Commerce, Delhi."

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay Central Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): I would like to understand what is the meaning of the Chamber being a purely commercial body. The Chamber of Commerce is a Chamber of Commerce and there can be no objection to it. The objection is to the fact that it is closed to non-Muslims, not that it is a Chamber of Commerce or Chamber of Politics.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Still it is a commercial body.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Only confined to one community. It is very likely that even if Mr. Nairang had not moved this amendment the learned Doctor might have moved it. But there is no doubt about its meaning that it is confined only to one community, and that is the vital objection to its acceptance.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: I greatly regret the speech that has been made by the Honourable Secretary for Education opposing the motion which has been placed before this Honourable House. Before I deal with this question, let me say that I cannot congratulate him on the aspersion which he has cast on the members of the Court of the Delhi University. In his enthusiasm to get dictatorial powers for the Executive Council he forgot himself to the extent that he said that he looked upon the members of the Court of the Delhi University with suspicion. Sir, as is mentioned here, who are the members of the Court of the Delhi University? The Chief Commissioner of Delhi—does he suspect him? The Director General, I.M.S.—does he suspect him? The Educational Adviser to the Government of India—does he suspect him? The Superintendent of Education, Delhi, and Ajmer-Merwara, the Chairman of the Punjab Chamber of Commerce, the Chairman of Delhi Municipality, the Chairman of the Delhi District Board, the Senior officer serving in the P.W.D. under the Chief Commissioner of Delhi, the Senior Medical Officer, Delhi, the Principals of the Intermediate Colleges in Delhi which prepare candidates for admission to the University, the Warden, the number of graduates to be elected as members of the Court by the registered Graduates from among their own body shall be 25. Probably his suspicion is on these people because they happen to be non-official Indians and they do not belong to that class to which my Honourable friend does.

Then, Sir, there is the number of teachers to be elected as members of the Court by the teachers other than Professors and Readers.

Then there is the number of persons to be elected as members of the Court by associations or other bodies approved in this behalf by the Chancellor. Probably he suspects that the Chancellor might recognise such associations which would be undesirable to send representatives to this august body.

Then there is the number of persons to be elected by the elected Members of the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly from among their own number. I do not know what to say. I would expect that my Honourable friend, as he is a Member of this Assembly, would have no suspicion against the Members of this House.

Then there is the number of persons to be appointed by the Chancellor.

Now, Sir, surely a Court which is constituted of such persons does not deserve that contempt which my honourable friend has shown for this body.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I do not know whether I used the word suspicion.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Yes, you did. I am surprised at the distinction which my Honourable friend is trying to make between these two words. Suspect is a verb and suspicion is the noun.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I do not recall using either word.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: And then my Honourable friend said that because there is one particular college which has been behaving in a manner which is repugnant to the Honourable Member and as the Court has not taken any action against it, therefore he suspects that Court. May I know if the matter of taking any action against this college was ever placed before the Court? I stand to correction here. Then, I think that the Honourable Member was not justified in casting a serious aspersion on the members of the Court and the University of Delhi and treating the Court as if it were a body that consisted of irresponsible people who did not have the interest of the University at heart.

Now I come to the proposition which is before this Honourable House. I am most grateful to my Honourable friend, Mr. Chatterji, for his fairmindedness when he said yesterday that the case which we had put from this side of the House for adequate representation of Muslims in the various bodies of the University was a fair and just one. He only opposed it because he said that it would not look nice in the interest of the country that we should have such a thing in our legislation. Sir, what is the use of trying to conceal facts. Facts are what they are. Everybody knows that India is not a nation. It is a land of nationalities. What is the use of your not including it in the Act? It does not make the slightest difference as far as that goes. I cannot agree with him that we should bury our heads in the sand like an ostrich and declare that there is no storm. The storm is there. The facts are there.

Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall, who is not here, gave a long speech to the effect that he was waiting for that day (when it will dawn I do not know!) when questions such as this would not be considered necessary. My Honourable friend can afford to wait for that day because he happens to have all that he wants today. But I cannot afford to wait for that day. My Honourable friend suggested that he did not like a provision like this to be included in the Act but he was not opposed to it if it was devised in some other manner like the Instrument of Instructions. I do not know to whom he would send the Instrument of Instruction. Unfortunately, we get so much carried away by various phrases that we hear now and again that without understanding the significance and the meaning of that particular phrase, we begin to repeat it.

Sir, as was shown yesterday, the University of Delhi has been in existence for the last 20 years. The Mussalmans of Delhi have waited for 20 years to see that justice was done to them. I had given certain figures regarding the composition of the Executive Council, of the Court and of the Academic Council. Now, Sir, with your permission, as this is a matter which really affects the whole administration of the University, I would like to quote certain other figures and satisfy the Honourable Members of this House, who have got a fair and open mind, that what we are putting before this House is nothing but what is our due and is nothing but what justice demands:

	Muslims.	Non-Muslims.
Members of the Faculty of Arts	4	21
Members of the Faculty of Science	3	21
Members of the Faculty of Law	2	12
Members of the Committees of Courses and Studies in the Faculty of Arts	9	53

I am giving these figures to this House because all these Committees are formed either by the Court or the Executive Council, or the Academic Council and unless we can have adequate representation on these bodies, it is not possible for the Muslims to find representation on any of these Committees:

	Muslims.	Non-Muslims.
Members of the Committees of Courses and Studies in the Faculty of Science	1	14
Members of the Committees of Courses and Studies for the Faculty of Law	1	7
Board of Co-ordination	Nil	5
Residence, Health and Discipline Board	1	4
Finance Committee	1	6
Committee of Selection	2	14
Library Committee	1	14
Admission Committee	1	10

This, Sir, is the state of affairs in the University of Delhi, and I am really surprised that the Government should come forward and oppose a motion of this nature. It should have been the duty of this Government to have come forward when they were bringing this Bill to improve the position of Mussalmans in the University of Delhi. They do not only not do that but now they are coming forward and trying to defeat what is our due with their official votes which they have at their disposal. Sir, it is not only the University of Delhi where the representation of Mussalmans is so inadequate. It is practically in every University. And I tell the Government that if they oppose this motion they will for ever be preventing the Mussalmans from getting any representation in any of the other universities. The Government of India are considered to be a Government which is not communal, and, Sir, whenever we would go before any of the Provincial Legislatures wanting better representation of the Mussalmans in the universities of those provinces this will be flung in our faces that the Government of India which is non-communal did not see that there was any justice in our claim. So, in other words, by adopting this attitude they are depriving the Mussalmans of India of an opportunity of getting their due share in the higher education of this country. This to my mind is a very serious question and the Government should consider very carefully before they adopt this attitude of coming in the way of securing justice for a particular community. I have got the figures of other universities also, and if I am challenged by any one I shall be compelled to take the time of the House by quoting them, but I do not want to do that. Every one knows that the position of the Mussalmans in practically every university is deplorable and I am surprised that the Honourable Member who is representing the Government as far as this Bill is concerned should come forward and oppose a motion of this nature. They should have come forward if they had any sense of justice, if they had any sense of decency—they should have come forward and supported us in this demand. But to come forward and say that they cannot accept it even when my Honourable friend, Dr. Banerjea, has accepted it,—I do not know what expression I should use to condemn this action of the Government. Mr. President, let me tell this Government that if you are cowardly, if you have not got the courage to see that justice is done to a particular community, then for God's sake do not stand in the way and do not take the responsibility of perpetration of that injustice to the Mussalmans of India. If you want to show that you are impartial in this matter, if you want to show that this is a matter for the Hindus and the Mussalmans to decide, then I would say, do not let your official votes be used on this occasion. Let this matter be decided by the non-official Members of this House. Let them take the responsibility of this action, but why do you want to soil your hands in this matter? I do not know whether my appeal would have any effect because it seems to me that the Government have lost all sense of justice and decency, but I would warn them again that by this stubborn, this unreasonable, this unjust attitude of theirs, they will be creating a bitterness among the Mussalmans. You should be there to help the Mussalmans and others who are weak to get their due share; you should not be there to stand in their way of achieving what is legitimately theirs.

Mr. Lalchand Navarai: I may assure the House that I had no intention to intervene in this debate. (Interruption.) I will say why I have risen to speak. I was reminded of the attitude of the Honourable Member who is piloting this Bill, towards the Court of the University and I thought I should not sit silent over it. It is an indignity to a body which is the first body of the University. To use any words like suspicion or suspected or say anything which is not graceful towards the University is a matter for great condemnation, and I am sure that Mr. Tyson who is known to be very courteous and who is doing things so very well, will come forward and offer an apology or express his sorrow at having used those words towards the Court of the University. On some motion before, I had said that I was a member of that Court, and I have seen there that officers of the University, I mean, those at the top, do not treat the members of the Court with that courtesy and that consideration which they should show. They treated the Court very lightly, and if Government here also joins them, it will give them an impetus to treat the Court even more lightly. I need not say anything more on that. When the question of three years degree course had come before the university for consideration and was before the Executive Council, it was I who said that the Court, being the first authority, should be consulted first and not that the matter should be cooked up, as I would call it, in the Executive Council and then brought up before the Court for only nominal consideration. I put in a resolution and it was accepted by ballot, and yet it was not given any consideration. The proposal never came before the Court and the Court was slighted. Matters like this should be taken seriously by the Government and they should not say anything to belittle the powers or the authority or the privileges of the Court of the University.

Bhai Parma Nand (West Punjab Non-Muhammadan): How are the privileges of the Court relevant to the amendment under consideration?

Mr. Lalchand Navarai: I am coming to the amendment. I will give my own independent view on it. So far as the amendment is concerned, I have seen that the Leader of our Party has given his own opinion. Rightly or wrongly whatever it be, he has given his own opinion. So I want to restrain myself from speaking on that amendment at all. I do not want to say anything which would injure either this Party or that Party. When the question of voting comes, my position would be known.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: It is always difficult to speak on a question which takes a communal turn in this Honourable House. But it is no use trying to close our eyes to the fact that to-day in India we have to face this problem. This amendment seeks to get a representative of the Muslim Chamber of Commerce on the Court of the Delhi University. This Court is constituted by the representatives of several bodies, as has been explained by the Deputy Leader of the Muslim League Party.

Bhai Parma Nand: But they are not communal.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: The objection that has been taken to the Chairman of the Muslim Chamber of Commerce being a member of the Court by statutory provision is that the Muslim Chamber of Commerce is a communal body. That is the objection taken by Government. I am sure Government are aware that the principle has long been established that communal institutions are recognised by Government and recognised in India. That is an established fact. Take this principle a little further, that no communal institution should be recognised or should be allowed to send a representative to a body which is non-communal. Take this main principle to its logical conclusion. That would mean that the Parsi Gymkhana, the Muslim Gymkhana, the Hindu Gymkhana and the European Gymkhana which are all communal institutions should have no representatives on an association which is non-communal but which deals with sport. Do you want to carry it as far as that? Then, surely, the Marwari Chamber of Commerce is recognised by Government. Their opinions are sought for as a chamber of commerce. It is a communal body. Do you mean to say that Government do not take or ask for the opinion of the Marwari Chamber of Commerce, because it is communal? Do you mean to say that the Marwari Chamber of Commerce has no representation on non-communal bodies? This is carrying a principle much too far. As long as communal bodies are recognised such as chambers of commerce, so long will you have to allow them to send representatives to industrial associations, sporting associations and academic associations of a non-communal character to represent their interests. That is done every day. Because this debate has taken a communal turn, you want to turn down a proposal which is eminently reasonable. You must separate this proposal from other amendments that may follow. If you turn down this amendment, you will negative a policy which Government has adopted for years past in this country. You may oppose the amendment on the ground that the Muslim Chamber of Commerce in Delhi is not representative. I can understand that opposition. Such an argument can be applied to any association but you cannot apply it on the ground of its being a communal association.

[Sir Cowasjee Jehangir.]

My point of view is this that the population of Delhi which this university serves is not purely Hindu nor is it purely Muslim but it has a larger proportion of Muslims than most parts of India. I understand that the population of Delhi is half Muslim and half Hindu and therefore any institution which has to serve the area of Delhi requires special consideration so far as the Muslims are concerned and on that ground alone, not on communal grounds, the Muslims should, I think, have their effective voice in an institution which has been built up, is being built up at the cost of the country. It is an institution which is to play a most important part in the lives of the future generations of this country. Therefore I would urge that in this particular case the House has reason to look with favour on any proposals which are brought forward for an adequate representation of a community which is playing an important part in the life of this part of India. It might have been that the Hindus were only 30 or 25 per cent. of the population of Delhi. They would still have a right to be represented on an educational institution as much as anybody else and if they had to put forward their claim for adequate representation, they should have had the support of the House. On these grounds alone I would ask this Honourable House to consider favourably proposals of this character, especially this amendment which is quite an ordinary proposition of having a communal institution send its representative to an institution which is non-communal in order to safeguard its own interests.

Commerce is very much interested in the education of this province. Commerce surely ought to have a voice in education. It is the commercial people who built up education. Who built up the University of Bombay if not the commercial people. Who helped the University of Calcutta if not the commercial people of that City. Surely a commercial body has a right to be represented on this Court, especially a body which represents about 50 per cent. of the whole population, and under those circumstances I would definitely separate this amendment from those that are to follow and support my friend Dr. Banerjea in the very wise and sane view he has taken that this amendment should be supported.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is.

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, after sub-clause (vi) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following sub-clause be inserted and subsequent sub-clauses be re-lettered accordingly:

"(vii) the Chairman of the Muslim Chamber of Commerce, Delhi."

I think the Ayes have it.

(One or two Honourable Members cried 'Noes have it'.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Will those who are for 'Noes' rise in their places?

(No Honourable Member rose, but after a pause Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta rose.)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: I am saying "No", Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Those who are for Ayes will now rise in their places.

(Many Honourable Members rose in their places.)

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Three of the Clock, Mr. K. C. Neogy (one of the Panel of Chairmen) in the Chair.

Mr. H. A. Sathar H. Essak Sait (West Coast and Nilgiris: Muhammadan): Sir, I move:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, after sub-clause (x) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following sub-clause be inserted and subsequent sub-clauses be re-lettered accordingly:

"(xi) the Sadars of the Majalise Aukaf constituted under Act XIII of 1943."

Sir, as the House is aware, this Statute is dealing with the constitution of the Court. To the sub-clauses dealing with those who will be the members of this Court, I want to add two Sadars, the Presidents of the two Majalise Aukaf which have been constituted under the Bill that was introduced by my Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani which was passed into law by this House. I need not dilate on this. These two Presidents will have great interest in the matter of education because some of the Aukaf which are dealt with in that Act do control certain classes of educational institutions. I therefore propose that the responsible heads of the Aukaf, that is the two Presidents, should be members of this Court. Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, after sub-clause (x) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following sub-clause be inserted and subsequent sub-clauses be re-lettered accordingly:

"(xi) the Sadars of the Majalise Aukaf constituted under Act XIII of 1943."

Dr. P. N. Banerjea: Sir, I rise to support this amendment, not on the ground of communal representation but on the ground of educational advancement. I am told that the funds of these two bodies, Majalise Aukaf, are applied mostly to educational purposes, and as such I think the two Presidents should have ex-officio seats on the Court of the Delhi University.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, on the basis on which this amendment has been moved and supported, I am willing to accept it.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, I greatly appreciate the support which my Honourable friend Dr. Banerjea has given to this amendment. I welcome the change in the attitude of the Government regarding amendments of this nature. I wish to assure my Honourable friend Dr. Banerjea that there is not a single amendment which has been suggested which is not directly connected with educational uplift. As has been pointed out, a good sum of money from the income of these Aukaf is spent for educational purposes and their presence on the Court will be for the advancement of University education in the Province of Delhi. I would, Sir, make one request to the Government that before they oppose any amendment, they should see whether the amendment suggested is reasonable or not. Here, I would like to point out that we have kept in view the academic character of the University and we have not suggested any amendment which would give representation to an interest on either the Court or the Executive Council which is not directly connected with the education of the Province of Delhi. I support the amendment which has been moved.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): The question is:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, after sub-clause (x) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following sub-clause be inserted and subsequent sub-clauses be re-lettered accordingly:

"(xi) the Sadars of the Majalise Aukaf constituted under Act XIII of 1943."

The motion was adopted.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, sub-clause (xi) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule be omitted."

Sir, if you refer to sub-clause (xi) which I seek to amend, this is the first time we find that in the constitution of the Court "the Principals of the Intermediate Colleges in Delhi which prepare candidates for admission to the University" are contemplated to be Members of the Court. As a matter of fact, we find that there is no Intermediate College in the Province of Delhi. There was only one, the Ramjas College, which has so far been functioning as an Intermediate College. My information is that on the inauguration of this new scheme, it has got itself affiliated to the Allahabad University so that at present there is no Intermediate College and apparently none is in contemplation because the intermediate stage of education is to be done away with. We are going to have only the High School Examination and the three years degree course in the University. There is no Intermediate College provided for in the amending law. Therefore, I think it is clear that the insertion of this sub-clause (zi) in the Statute was based on some misconception and it should be removed. Sir, I move.

[Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang.]

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, sub-clause (zi) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule be omitted."

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, I understand that the facts are as stated by my Honourable friend and that this Intermediate College is the only one to which this statute could have had any application and that it no longer exists in the University: I therefore accept the amendment.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Sir, the retention of this sub-clause is opposed to the principle of the Bill and if it is there people will begin to doubt whether we have introduced a three-year course or not. Therefore I think the amendment is desirable.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): The question is:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, sub-clause (zi) of clause (1) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule be omitted."

The motion was adopted

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (2) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end:

"at least eight of whom shall be Muslims."

According to the sub-clause as it stands the number of graduates to be elected to the Court by registered graduates from among their own number shall be 25 and I want by this amendment that eight of them should be Muslims. The reason is that we desire larger representation on the Court and if in the elections to that body by the registered graduates eight seats are reserved for Muslims it will be only fair and reasonable. The details as to the composition of the Court have been given in connection with the debates on this Bill so often that I need not repeat them. At present Muslim representation on the Court is very meagre indeed, and out of a total membership of 123, as was pointed out, there are only 24 Muslims at present; and it may be very fairly contended that in a province like Delhi where the Muslim population is 50 per cent. of the total a larger representation is surely called for, not only on the population basis but also in view of advancing the cause of higher education among the Muslims. A larger number of Muslims should be given an opportunity to enter the Court of the University and thereby advance the cause of higher education among Muslims. I do not think I need dilate on the point any further. Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (2) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end:

"at least eight of whom shall be Muslims."

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: Sir, I rise to make the position of my Party clear on the question of communal representation. As I said in my speech the other day, our Party is not prepared to accept the question of communal representation on an educational institution like the Delhi University, and that will be our attitude towards all the amendments. Sir, I oppose this amendment.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, this amendment is quite specifically within the ambit of what I said yesterday when the very first amendment which seemed to have an aspect of communal representation was moved. I made the attitude of Government then plain. I do not for a moment suggest that the Muslims have not got some legitimate grievance against the university or against some of the electing bodies in the university on account of the paucity of Muslims who have been returned by the elective bodies. I do not think they can have any complaint as regards the nominated element. But certainly the university has from that point of view made a poor show on the elected side. But I am not prepared to introduce this element into the present legislation. The House is very divided on the subject and I made clear yesterday that I could not accept amendments of that kind. Sir, I cannot accept this amendment.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, the Honourable Member has accepted the position that the representation of the Mussalmans is very meagre. As far as this particular constituency is concerned, there are 25 members who are elected by the registered graduates. I have got a calendar of the university with me here; there is only one Muslim who has been elected out of 25. It is all very well to say that they do not want the introduction of communalism in this Act; but may I ask Government what do they propose to do to secure effective and just representation of the Mussalmans in the various bodies of the university? If my Honourable friend had come forward with some other suggestion which would have secured to them their due share and an effective voice I could have understood his opposition to this proposal. It is recognised that the university or the elective bodies of the university have not treated the Mussalmans fairly in the past. What is it that Government are going to do to see that in future the Muslims are treated better? Nothing. That is not really a happy position for Government to adopt. We are not introducing any element in these bodies which is not directly connected with education. All that we demand is that out of the 25 that are to be elected by the registered graduates,—not by any body from outside,—seats should be reserved for the Mussalmans. And let me tell you that instead of creating any ill-feeling between the students of these two communities it would create greater harmony. At present there is a feeling among Muslim students and Muslim graduates that they are not given their due share; and if you accept this proposition it will bring about a better understanding between the students of the two communities. It may be communal in a certain sense; although I do not see any objection to there being communal representation. As has been suggested before, there is communal representation in every institution connected with every sphere of life in this country. Why are the Government so shy in recognising the claims of the Mussalmans? What is it that they propose to do to redress the injustices done to them? This is not enough for my Honourable friend to say that we recognize that the Mussalmans had not had their due share, but what is it that you are doing to secure them their due share? Nothing. Therefore, Sir, I submit that no valid argument has been advanced by the Government in opposition to this amendment.

As I stated earlier, Sir, this is a matter that really does not affect in principle the administration of the University. It cannot be contended that the Mussalmans who will go there will be unfit to take their proper part in the deliberations of these bodies. The only thing is that by reserving certain seats for them you provide against any combination which would purposely keep the Mussalmans out. Therefore, Sir, I submit that if the Government are not prepared to take the responsibility of securing adequate representation, they should at least leave it to the non-official Members of the House to decide and let them take the responsibility either one way or the other. If the Government had said, "No, your claims are not just" I could have understood their attitude in this respect. They recognize, they admit that our demand is just, that our grievance is justified, and yet they are proposing to oppose an amendment which would improve the position of Mussalmans in the various bodies of the University. Sir, I support this amendment which has been moved by my Honourable friend.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan (East Central Punjab: Muhammadan): "To the very lucid remarks made by my Honourable friend, Nawabzada Liaquat Ali

[Maulana Zafar Ali Khan.]

Khan, I would only add that in order to safeguard our effective representation in the governing bodies of the Delhi University, we do not want to introduce the element of separate electorates. Let there be joint electorates, but a number of seats should be reserved for the Mussalmans and this will not affect injuriously the interests of others.

We have seen that for the past 22 years that the Delhi University has existed, our position was precarious. The statistics placed before the House ought to have convinced you that nowhere in the University we have had any representation worth the name, much less effective. So, after these 22 years, when the question has come up of reforming this so-called 'model University' or 'All-India University', the Mussalmans, who in this province of Delhi claim a percentage of at least 45, have some claims, and you cannot ignore those claims. How are you to meet with their wishes and claim to be just, of which you are so proud? We have heard of British sense of justice and British sense of fair play, but the way in which our Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, has shown his sense of justice has opened our eyes. And it was against his wish that Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan was so frank and outspoken, and I think he struck a right note at the right moment. Let the Government know that we Mussalmans are a very proud people and we have made up our mind to secure our rights. Whoever comes in the way will have to reckon with the Mussalmans. The very word 'Mussalman' is like the proverbial fly in the ointment so far as my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta is concerned. He should know that his name is Jamnadas and as such he is known to India and as such he is known to Delhi. Jamnadas means the slave of Jamna. Whereas we are the servants of Zam Zam, he is the slave of Jamna. That brings about a fundamental separation. He must admit that. Yesterday, while speaking on this very subject, I was telling him, his henchmen and those who are of his way of thinking that you Hindus, who talk so glibly of justice and fair play, have treated the Harijans for the past many thousand years like goods and chattels and you have not allowed them the right of entering a temple—the temple of learning as you call it. So we have made up our mind not only to protect our own interests but to protect the interests of other minorities like Harijans, Scheduled Classes and so on and when the time comes

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): Order, order. That has nothing to do with this amendment. Perhaps the Honourable Member will confine his observations to the amendment before this House.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: All right, Sir. I lend my strong support to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): The question is:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (2) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end:

'at least eight of whom shall be Muslims'."

The motion was negatived.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Mr. Chairman, I move:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (2) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end:

'at least four of whom shall be Muslims'."

You see, Sir, clause (8) to which the amendment relates, reads as follows:

"Section 18 (2). The number of teachers to be elected as members of the Court by the teachers other than Professors and Readers shall be ten."

It is out of these ten, Sir, that we want four at least to be Muslims. Now, Sir, I do not know if there will be any practical benefit flowing from making a long speech over an amendment of this kind because on most points that we have been urging during the course of the debate on this University Bill, we have found that we could have more usefully addressed ourselves to stones and walls. Arguments can have no effect. Facts and figures which speak for themselves are of no use. An appeal to the sense of fairness of the responsible Government Benches is futile, so much so that even the very worthy gentleman, our Honourable friend, Mr. Tyson, who is piloting the Bill in this House, does not, unless I am very much mistaken, appear to be a free agent. I have heard his speeches in connection with other Bills in this House. I have known his attitude in connection with other matters and on more than one occasion I have considered it my duty to say publicly on the floor of this House how fair and how alive to his duties he has proved himself. But I do not know what has happened to him. He is cutting the figure in connection with these debates of one, who convinced against his will, is of the same opinion still. I am glad he has not quoted his bible during the course of the debate today. Yesterday he gave me the impression that the Report of the Select Committee was his bible. When any question arose he quoted chapter and verse from his bible and silenced all arguments, or rather he silenced his own reason, because he had to submit to the inevitable—the recommendations of the Select Committee. All matters which had been adjudicated upon by the Select Committee were now res judicata as far as this House was concerned and as far as any other legislative authority was concerned. Under the circumstances I say that it is nothing but the voice of one crying in the wilderness to move any amendment like the one which I feel bound to move and have moved . . .

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: . . . and shall go on moving.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: . . . and shall go on moving as long as the list is not exhausted. Is it again necessary to point out that it is a disgrace to an institution like the Delhi University to be the virtual monopoly of a particular community? Has not that been sufficiently brought out in the speeches which have preceded in the course of this debate, and if it has not been, then I can only say that it is wilful neglect of the duty which the Government at any rate owes to the various elements in the population of the country over which this Government is somehow ruling—it is wilfully ignoring patent facts, and that alone can account for such obstinacy and such wrong-headedness as we find Government showing in the matter of this Bill. In the last amendment which has been negatived we wanted eight out of 25, that is to say, less than one third. In this we want four out of ten. Of course we could not propose a fraction in connection with 25, we could not say, give us $8\frac{1}{3}$, we said 8. We did not like to say 9 because that would have been more than one-third. We thought one-third would be quite enough, and we could in connection with some other amendment want a little more than one-third. I have said before and I repeat again that the population basis or the educational interests concerned or any other criterion can be easily applied, and those whose eyes are not blinded by prejudice can easily see that the Mussalmans have a perfectly just and fair case when they say that they must have more representation on that great body, the Court of the Delhi University. Out of the representatives to be elected by teachers to whom you are assigning 10 seats, four seats must be reserved for Muslims. Of course, we are not in this connection saying that those four shall be elected by the Muslim electors. That point we have not raised at all. The entire constituency will return ten persons of whom four shall be Muslims. That is the whole prayer. Sir, I move.

[Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang.]

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (3) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end:
"at least four of whom shall be Muslims."

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: I fail to understand the point that communalism should not be introduced in an educational institution. What is this? Is this not communalism—to give seats for graduates and teachers separately when the professors are there, why teachers are given separate seats? Are the latter not graduates? Is it proper to give seats to various kinds of bodies, Chambers of Commerce; Municipal Board and District Boards? Are not these things communal things? Are not these things separate one from the other? The point is this. When it suits a particular group of persons, then it is all right. But when it pinches, it is given a communal colour. We do not say that non-graduates should be had, non-teachers should be had. We only say, Muslims having the same qualification, having been registered there and recognised teachers should have representation. We do not say people outside say in the streets of Delhi should be given seats. I am simply surprised to hear all these pleas, all these efforts to deprive the Muslims from being represented in the Delhi University. I may point out that about 50 per cent. Muslims reside in that area in which the University is located say within a radius of ten miles from the university seat. You are thus going to sacrifice the interests of about 50 per cent. of the population, so that they may not have any voice, under some plea or pretext. I do not think that is proper. In another amendment which is coming later on, we have this. There is no question of any educational qualification there.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): The Honourable Member should not anticipate an amendment which is not before the House.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: It is not before the House, but it is in the amending Bill and such provision has been made in the amendment which is going to be passed by this House. Therefore, with your permission, I may refer to such sort of thing. When representation has been provided in this amending Bill to persons irrespective of educational qualifications, I fail to understand why objection should be put in the way of educationists, simply because they happen to be Muslims and nothing else. It has been said that it is a temple of learning. I do not think so. It is a temple of certain vested interests. So, all these things should not be allowed to go on for a long time. The House should consider twice before coming to any contrary decision and I hope that they will accept the very modest amendment proposed. My Honourable friend is afraid of asking representation on the population basis, that is 50 per cent., we have asked for 30 per cent. and even less than that. The representation which has been so far given does not come to even 2 per cent. for Mussalmans on the whole on different bodies of the University. With these few words I support the amendment.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall (Bhagulpur, Purnea and the Sonthal Parganas: Non-Muhammadan): I would not have stood up but for the fact that I want to help my Honourable friend, Maulvi Abdul Ghani. The very argument that he has placed before the House that it is only to keep out the educationists that such sort of amendments are being opposed by those who are opposing such amendments.

Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghani: I never said that.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: In the same breath he says in the part of the country where this University is located the population is 50 per cent. So, if he has got the interest of 50 per cent. of the population, he should not have supported an amendment which seeks only a proportion of 4 to 10 which comes to about 30 per cent. but he should have sought 50 per cent. representation. (An Honourable Member: "He is generous.") I am afraid it is not the generosity of my friend but only a sort of attachment to something communal which gives him the pleasure. Had it been for the purpose of doing justice to the population, he should have asked for 50 per cent. (Interruption.) I am not here to distribute favours and patronage. It is by election that people will come there and if the population is 50 per cent., most of the educationists will also come from that population and as I told you about my dream yesterday it may come about that you will get more than 50 per cent., it may be 60 per cent. or even 70 per cent. Why should you stick only to 30 per cent. I stand to correct you. You should not stick to 30 per cent. only by means of a statutory provision. Let the door be open and my dream in that way may come true and you come in 70 per cent. or even cent. per cent. I don't mind that. In the interest of justice of the very community whose cause you are fighting, I hope you will correct yourself, withdraw your support to this amendment and I would appeal to my friend the Mover to withdraw this amendment.

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division: Muhammadan Rural): It is really very amusing and very interesting to see that on every amendment which is proposed here we find new arguments and new theories advanced. Lectures are given that we were wrong in asking for less than we deserve. My friend Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall ought to have known that when we tabled this little demand we had taken him into consideration also. We knew that there will be lot of haggling. There will be people who will not be willing even to give one-third, when we can expect half. My friend's whole argument is that he is not supporting us because we have not asked for 5 out of 10 and we have confined our demand to only 4. If my friend reads the amendment he will see that we say that at least 4 should be Muslims and if people are so magnanimous as to give our community two more we shall not refuse it. But we had known that people will not be willing even to give us at least 4. That is why we left a margin of 2. Although on the population basis we are entitled to 5, we took into consideration the Christian population, the Sikh population and the Depressed Classes. We took into consideration other persons who come to this great city of ours. They have got a right of representation. We did not take into consideration only the big Hindu community. We took into consideration the other different interests that should not be left without representation. My friend Sardar Sant Singh will get up and ask for one seat. We were prepared to give him at least one out of the remainder. Therefore this little modest demand is not strictly according to our percentage. We have shown that we can be trusted to accommodate others. Although our legitimate demand ought to be 5; we are content with 4. My friend Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall says it might be 60 per cent. of the population. Of course there may come a time which we have not visualised yet when we will be allowed to get more than our share. That may come about after three or four centuries. There may come a time when we may find ourselves in that position but for the present we do not want more than 4.

As regards the sanctity of the temple of learning, I knew that there were many temples of learning which were closed to some person for a long time. At least one temple which for a long time fought against the entry of those who were not allowed was my own Lincoln's Inn. Even the House of Commons had no representation of women until the Suffragettes came to break the windows of the shops in England. It was considered that no woman had any right to get into the Parliament. I saw myself one day in London Suffragettes coming to the National Picture Gallery with hatchet in hand and breaking into pieces the beautiful picture of Venus.

Mr. Chairman (Mr. K. C. Neogy): The Honourable Member's personal reminiscences are very interesting but having regard to the slow progress that the House has made in regard to the consideration of the Bill, I appeal to Honourable Members not to repeat arguments of a general character either for the purpose of supporting, or opposing, any amendment.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: May I point out that the slow progress is due to the attitude of Government entirely?

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: We have so often listened to this temple of learning argument during the last two days that I was giving an example of places which have been opened after long exertions. When I saw the beautiful picture of Venus broken, I felt very sorry, because I was very fond of good pictures.

Mr. M. Ghiasuddin (Punjab: Landholders): Did you not do anything to protect your Venus?

Sir Muhammad Yamin Khan: The Honourable Member knows that against the fair sex we cannot do anything, and the British nation had to yield before that force when it came as a public opinion.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) resumed the Chair.]

Sir, 30 or 40 years ago it was considered that the members of the fair sex should not find their place in the Houses of Parliament but now it is considered to be an honour to have lady members. Even in this House when a lady member was brought here, we thought that it was a great honour to the House. The times have changed and will go on changing. We know that we may not win by mere votes because they are not free votes. All the votes are being commanded by one man and as the Government is constituted today, they command 40 votes. On our side, the decision is taken by the majority of votes, whereas on the other side it is the Hukam of one man, which everybody has to follow. I am sure that if free votes had been allowed by the Government, half of their Members would have voted with us today and the Government would not have found themselves in the majority. We have known, Sir, that temple after temple of learning has been opened to the people who were not admitted before. For instance, the Inns of Court allowed the lady members to come in and the Harijans were allowed to go into the temples in Madras. This bar which is being put against us will not remain for long and the sooner it is removed the better. We will persistently fight for our rights because we are perfectly convinced that we are not demanding anything which is wrong. We are not asking for a thing which we believe to be wrong. We think that we are fighting for the education of a big proportion of the population which is at present being neglected and which deserves a great impetus. We think that proper impetus can be given only by the representation of the people of that community on various bodies. That is why we have come here. The Government says that it represents all the interests therefore it is wrong for them to come in the way of our achieving our rights which we think should be given to us. The Muslim education is very backward and the backwardness is visible by the fact that out of so many colleges in Delhi there is only one Muhammadan college. Its backwardness is also evident by the fact that out of so many registered graduates there are only a few graduates who belong to the Muslim nation. Therefore, we think that a greater impetus is required for the Muslim education and that can be done only when you show by your behaviour that you are not averse to their progress but that you want to help them in the prosecution of their education. Without this co-operation on the part of the Government we cannot achieve our object. We are convinced that our demand is right and we think that these people will become a great asset to the University. Their presence in the University will restore confidence in the minds of many people who, instead of sending their boys elsewhere, will send them to this University. They will remain here. It is for these reasons that I say that Government should either accept this amendment or at least show that they are not for stopping the aspirations of the Muslim community and remain neutral.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I move:

"That the question be now put."

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Have not the Government got to say something on this?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I will put the closure motion subject to Mr. Tyson stating the Government's attitude.

The question is:

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I rise to a point of order. The Honourable Member Mr. Tyson has not spoken in the course of the debate. Now, that the closure has been accepted, he cannot speak now.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I have said that accepted closure subject to Mr. Tyson stating the Government case.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Yes.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: That the League-wala is the factotum of British Government. But look how the Government treats us. They do not recognize their friends. They do recognize their enemies and can make up with them. But the friends they would spurn.

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: They can neither recognize friends nor enemies.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: So they have lost all sense of recognition. This was left for you to remind me.

Therefore, Sir, I ask you in the name of justice, in the name of fair play . . .

Sardar Sant Singh: These qualities are in heaven, not in this world.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: . . . to give us representation as Mussalmans in the governance of the Delhi University to the extent of a few seats. Those few seats do not carry loaves and fishes. Those of course will go to Sir Maurice Gwyer who will get Rs. 2,000, or some other gentleman who will be appointed as the Vice Chancellor.

An Honourable Member: Do not mention names.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: Well, there will be somebody, not any of these four or five members of this body whom we want as against 10. Sir, my heart is overflung with indignation and the rankling sense of injustice, and therefore all I have to say is that I lend my strongest support to the amendment.

Rao Bahadur N. Siva Raj (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I am in general agreement, as indeed I must be as representing the Scheduled Classes, with the feeling and the desire of our Muslim friends to increase the strength of their representation in the Court. But my difficulty, particularly with regard to this amendment, is as to how my friend the mover of the amendment, Mr. Nairang, seeks to secure that representation in this particular clause. So far as I can see, the bodies and the associations that are recognized under this clause are the Municipal Committee Delhi; the Bar Association, Delhi; Delhi Medical Association, Delhi; Delhi Hindustani Association, Board of Secondary Education, Delhi; and the Jamia Milia, Delhi. In the first place, the motion moved by my Honourable friend would seek to bind the hands of the Chancellor. He will not know as to which body or association he should allot these two members. In the second place, it also seeks to bind the Associations themselves much against their will so as to send Mussalmans from Associations where there may be only a few Muslims. In the third place, there may be Associations where there are no Muslims at all. Therefore, unless the amendment clears the position I personally feel it would be unworkable. I would like to know, therefore, what he suggests to remove this difficulty. Otherwise I am in general agreement.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: Sir, a very pertinent question has been asked by my Honourable friend, Rao Bahadur Siva Raj. As has been laid down here, there are to be 8 representatives of the Association that are to be recognized by the Chancellor. It is not laid down here in the Bill as to what those Associations will be, and when we put down this number three we had in mind the associations that should have been recognized if the interests of the Mussalmans had not been ignored completely in the past. They are the associations—I will give their names in a minute—that are engaged purely in the advancement of education in Delhi. One of them is recognized and that is Jamia Milia. There are two others that have no representation on this University, and I submit that some of the associations that have been recognized really do not deserve to be represented on the Court of the University. The two other associations that we have in mind are Anjuman Tarraqi-i-Urdu and the Anglo-Arabic College and Schools Society.

Now, let me tell you, as far as Anjuman-i-Tarraqi-i-Urdu is concerned, it is an All-India Association. It has got its headquarters at Delhi and it is a body that consists of Hindus and Mussalmans. The third association is an association which has been running, and is running, one degree college, four high schools,—one girls school and three boys schools. Now this association has no representation on the Court of the University. So when we made the suggestion that three should be Mussalmans, we had in mind the recognition of these Associations which will represent the Mussalmans in the Court of the University.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: And which of the two institutions would you remove from the list?

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: There is the Mercantile association and there is the Municipal Board. It is already represented by the Chairman of the Municipal Board. Really, Sir, all kinds of interests are represented in this University who have no right to be represented on it, and the Mussalmans have been completely ignored in spite of the fact that there are associations in existence which have been doing nothing but advancing the cause of education in Delhi. I hope I have cleared the point raised by my Honourable friend, Mr. Siva Raj.

Let me assure him that wherever we have suggested an amendment it has been done purely with the idea of giving representation to those interests which are directly connected with education in the province of Delhi.

Sir Cowasjee Jehangir: Who appoints these Associations?

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan: It is the Chancellor who recognizes them.

Babu Kailash Behari Lall: I do not rise to speak for or against the arguments advanced by my Honourable friends Rao Bahadur Siva Raj or Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan. They can be taken care of by the experts on the Government Benches. To me it seems that these arguments are devices to support the main pillar of the amendment. I think it is only for the love of communalism which is innate in these amendments that they have been put forward. My main purpose of standing up is to condone my friend Maulana Zafar Ali Khan, or rather to console him. He has been weeping over the whole situation. He has said having made a nation of us and given us communal recognition and the communal award, how does it lie on you, my sweetheart, that you now kick us in this way and leave us in the lurch. But I would ask my friend, Maulana Zafar Ali, to take a lesson from the Government side. He has said that they are all communal representatives there—Sir R. Mudaliar for the Hindus, Dr. Ambedkar for the Scheduled Castes and Sir Sultan Ahmad for the Muslims. But has it occurred to him that when they vote they are neither Hindus nor Muslims. They vote as the Government of India. Cannot you therefore take a lesson and see that you become the real people of India, the real nation of India and that what you represent is the real thing. I do not say that they will not err. If they do, I will be with you and tell them that you are not really representing the interests of the Indian nation and you do not deserve to be our sweetheart. That is the lesson you should learn from the sweetheart.

Sir Syed Raza Ali (Cities of the United Provinces: Muhammadan Urban): Sir, in supporting this amendment I would invite the attention of the elected Members of this House, and I have particularly in my mind my Hindu friends, to a very important aspect of the question. It was on the 1st October 1906 that a very representative deputation of the Muslim community waited on Lord Minto at Simla and presented an address in which the grievances of the Muslim community with reference to representation were set forth. Shortly after that, the question was: What is the actual demand of the Mussalmans? The Mussalmans no doubt wanted the representation of their own community. The important question was whether that representation which was to be conceded to the Muslims should be by reservation of seats or by setting up separate Muslim electorates. I do not want to go through the history of the whole question, but the two important aspects are: You could give representation to the Muslims by reserving seats for them, or you could set up Muslim electorates which would elect Muslim representatives.

I have been a careful student of what has been going on in our country. I believe today the position is this. So far as our Hindu friends are concerned, they have no objection to reservation of seats, but they have a strong objection

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Why did he not speak before the closure. If he speaks now, it would be disadvantageous to us. If we had known his position, we could have replied suitably.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I understand there has been a sufficient debate.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: Sir, I have really got nothing to say. On the same lines as the previous amendment, I content myself by opposing this.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is: "That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (3) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end: 'at least four of whom shall be Muslims'." The Assembly divided:

Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (4) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end: 'at least three of whom shall be Muslims'."

Clause (4) says that the number of persons to be elected as members of the Court by Associations or other bodies approved in this behalf by the Chancellor shall not exceed eight, and it is out of this eight that we want at least three. Now, I do not know what arguments or facts and figures or appeals will move the stony hearts of the gentlemen who occupy the Official Benches. I am reminded of a well-known couplet of the great poet Amir Khusru:

"Bā kudūmī sīhrū afsān nīrbūn sāzam turā
Unchī mīkhūahad dī-e-man unchūnān sāzam turā"

The poet expresses himself to be at a loss to find some charm or magic by which to induce his beloved to be kind to him and to make him what his heart wants him to be. We have really tried all devices of fair argument and methods of appeal. Perhaps one method remains for us now and that is to go down on our knees and beseech these tin-gods to be good to us and to accede to our demands. Possibly driven to such extremes one might be impelled to resort even to that method, but of course obvious reasons stand in our way. First, we are Muslims and do not worship any but the one true God, and secondly, leaving alone the religious point of view, we have also to conform to certain principles of self-respect. Therefore we are at our wit's end. The position is perfectly clear and no lengthy argument on my part will either improve or impair it. The meaning of my amendment is clear. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Amendment moved:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (4) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end: 'at least three of whom shall be Muslims'."

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: Sir, we have seen that however strong our arguments, however cogent our reasoning, it has no effect upon Mr. Tyson. And this reminds me of a couplet, to follow the example of my Honourable friend Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang. The poet says:

"Yā Bab'nah woh samjhe hain nah samjhenge meri bāt, Dey aur dīl unko jo nah dey mujh ko zabān aur."

"Oh Lord! My sweetheart has made up her mind not to be convinced; Vouchsafe her then another heart to comprehend me if Thou dost not grant me another tongue to give expression to my sentiments."

So my sweetheart has made up her mind not to be convinced, although I want to convince her in this great temple of learning and under this dome where we stand as the representatives of Mussalmans of India under the constitutional experiment of Communal Award made by the British Government. Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar is the representative of Hindus . . .

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: He is an Indian.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: Dr. Ambedkar is the representative of Harijans; Dr. Khare is the representative of Maharashtra Hindus. Similarly, each one is the representative of a particular section. And all these sections are gathered here and they are living together in a spirit of goodwill and amity. So this is the great temple of learning; this is the great temple of justice; this is the great temple of fair play; this is the great temple of British sense of justice. But where has the sense gone? Has it gone to the poles, gone to Europe, gone to North Africa? Why doesn't it come to Delhi? Why doesn't it enter the soul of the Delhi University?

What do we want? I have told you that here in this Hall in this great temple of learning we stand as the representatives of the Mussalmans of India and the Mussalmans of India are ten crores in number just as Dr. Ambedkar and our friend, Rao Bahadur Siva Raj, are representatives of 8 crores of Harijans. That means 18 crores. And if we add thirty lakhs of Sikhs that will bring the number of 18 crores and thirty lakhs. And between us we can rule this country with justice and fair play, which has been denied by the Britishers . . .

Sardar Sant Singh (West Punjab: Sikh): Let us combine.

Maulana Zafar Ali Khan: Don't get worried. You will get a seat; we will get it for you. We are out to fight the battle of the righteous; we are out to fight the battle of the weak. We give protection to the weak; we give shelter to those who have no roof over their head.

So, Sir, when the Government has on the one hand given us communal award and wants us to go to the Councils in the name of the people—the Mussalmans vote for the Mussalmans and Hindus vote for the Hindus—how is it that this principle is denied here? How can you deny it? Do you want to take away with one hand that which you have given with the other? People twit us outside—those who have gone to the Jails as also other sections of so-called nationalists—with being the handmaids of British Imperialism, toadies of the Britishers. My Honourable friend, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, would also tell me the same thing.

[Sir Syed Raza Ali.]

to the Muslims securing representation through Muslim electorates, which is known as separate representation through separate electorates. But in most of these amendments, of which notice has been given by my party be it noted by the Government Benches and my Hindu friends that generally, we have contented ourselves with securing Muslim representation through reservation of seats. That has been the outlying principle of the amendments tabled.

I for one should have thought that the line that we have taken up was one which would commend itself wholeheartedly to those patriotic Hindu friends who take objection to Muslim electorates because it leads to friction between community and community or nation and nation. This is one of those amendments which seeks to do no more than secure Muslim representation. May I ask what possible objection my elected Hindu Members can possibly have to that course? In this connection I listened carefully to the speech of my Honourable friend, Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall who spoke also on the last amendment. Well, the line generally taken up by a very small fraction of the Hindu community is this: Why content yourself with a number of seats? My answer is simply this. We are guided by history. What has been the history of elections in the various provinces? With the exception of the late Honourable Nawab Saiyid Muhammad who was returned to the late Imperial Legislative Council by a joint electorate in Madras—and it must be remembered he was an ex-President of the Indian National Congress—there is not a single Muslim who was returned from any of the provinces to the late Imperial Legislative Council during a period of 25 years. May I ask Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall how many Muslims have actually been elected by the registered graduates and returned to the Patna University Court?

An Honourable Member: Never more than one.

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: In the Patna University there is no spirit of communalism.

Some Members on the Muslim League Benches: Ah!

Sir Syed Raza Ali: If there is a reply I wait for a reply. But if there is no reply

Mr. Kailash Bihari Lall: I have given a reply.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: What is the question?

Sir Syed Raza Ali: May I put the question to those Honourable Members who come from various other provinces, without repeating the same? This is the position. This is an amendment that should commend itself to every patriotic Indian, whether he is a Hindu or whether he is a Muslim. You have no objection to reservation. That is your offer to the Muslim League. You strongly object to the two-nation theory. You strongly object to Pakistan and you say that we should be content with reservation of seats. Here we are asking for reservation of seats and yet you deny that to us. Is that justice? I do not think I need address any word of appeal to the Government Benches because I am afraid their minds have been made up.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: I should be sorry if in the eyes of my Honourable friend, Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang, whose good opinion I greatly value, I have fallen from grace. (Interruption.) I understand that I have only just fallen from grace.

An Honourable Member: Only temporarily.

Mr. J. D. Tyson: A large part of his last speech and the greater part of his previous one were devoted to me personally. If it were not that I do not wish to run the risk of putting Honourable Members opposite on their mettle, I should be tempted to refer to an old saying which points to the inference to be drawn when the lawyer on one side attacks, albeit very courteously, the spokesman of the opposite party. This amendment is exactly in line with the previous ones and I very much regret that neither to the courteous attack of Syed Ghulam Bhik Nairang nor to the blandishments of Maulana Zafar Ali Khan can I yield.

THE DELHI UNIVERSITY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

MR. PRESIDENT (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): The question is:

"That in clause 16 of the Bill, to clause (4) of Statute 2 in the proposed Schedule, the following be added at the end:

'at least three of whom shall be Muslims'."

The motion was negatived.

Sir Henry Richardson (Nominated Non-Official): Before you rise, I have a request to make. As I understand the position, any business left over from today is to be taken on Monday. We understood that Monday and Tuesday were the days which would be devoted to the food debate. Therefore, the food debate will have to suffer if the time is occupied by the rest of the business left over from today. We in this Group say that the food debate has become not only urgent but immediate and nothing less than two days should be devoted to it. Unless, therefore, the Leader of the House can give us some statement of assurance now that the food debate will take place on Monday and Tuesday and that two full days will be devoted to it, we request you to ask the House to sit tomorrow, which we are prepared to do and we are prepared also for a night sitting if necessary.

Mr. Hooseinbhoy A. Lalljee (Bombay Central Division: Muhammadan Rural): I entirely agree with the suggestion made by Sir Henry Richardson as also about the food debate. I wish to say that this special Session was allotted to us after I had moved my motion in that respect, for the purpose of considering the war situation and the food situation and such circumstances as arise out of the war. We asked for it and we got it. Last year we had no Session in July. The legislative business that has been brought in may be considered but I think the war situation and the food situation and such things as arise out of the war should certainly get primary and full consideration and these must therefore be taken into consideration in this special Session which I repeat has been specially summoned for that object.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee (Calcutta Suburbs: Non-Muhammadan Urban): We are of opinion that precedence should be given to the food situation which, as my Honourable friend has said, is not only urgent but immediate and not less than two days should be given to that. As regards the other matters, I am in the hands of the other Parties and the Leader of the House.

Nawabzada Muhammad Liaquat Ali Khan (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions: Muhammadan Rural): As regards the question of the food debate, I support the proposal that has been made by my Honourable friend the Leader of the European Group. We are definitely of opinion that the food debate should take place at the earliest moment and that two full days at least should be allotted for this purpose. As regards the suggestion of my friend for sitting tomorrow, I am afraid some of our members have already made commitments and as the Delhi University Bill is a Bill which concerns the Mussalmans vitally, I hope that it will not be insisted that the House should sit tomorrow. As regards having a night session, I am prepared to have a whole night session.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed (Leader of the House): Sir Henry Richardson wants a day sitting tomorrow and he is also prepared for nocturnal transaction of business but so far as we are concerned, we are entirely in the hands of the House. We are prepared to come tomorrow and day after tomorrow but one thing is certain. We do not want to go beyond Thursday next week. We made it perfectly clear to the House when the Session was extended that two days will be given to the food discussion, provided we can go through the legislative business. I think the position was made perfectly clear to the House and on that assurance I stand. If the legislative business is finished early on Monday, we will have a day and a half. (An Honourable Member: "That cannot be.") If that is so, I am afraid we can do nothing at present.

Dr. P. N. Banerjee: The food question is most important.

The Honourable Sir Sultan Ahmed: It is certainly very important. We fully realise it. There is absolutely no doubt about it and it is because of that we extended the Session. It is because of that we wanted to have a full discussion. The Food Member is very anxious to listen to the views of the Members of this House and he is also anxious to give a full story about the food position. The difficulty is this. If the legislative business is not finished, I do not see how we can manage to have two days for the discussion of food. Under these circumstances I would respectfully suggest to the House not to sit tomorrow and see if we cannot come to some arrangement on Monday by which the legislative business may be finished as early as possible. We are as equally anxious as the other Members of the House to have a full discussion on the food question. The whole country is looking forward to the discussion in this House. We cannot, however extend the Session further. We have been here for a long time and we have given four days extra, so that all these questions may be discussed. The legislative business has to be gone through and we cannot agree that the rest of the business should be shelved.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): I take it that it is not the desire of the House to sit tomorrow.

(Voices: "No".)

There is no general desire to sit tomorrow. The present arrangement will stand.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 9th August, 1949.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

Monday, 9th August, 1949.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim) in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN:

Mr. Walter Henry John Christie, O.B.E., M.L.A. (Government of India: Nominated Official).

STARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

GOVERNMENT'S CENTRAL WOOL PURCHASING SCHEME.

242. *Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department please state:

(a) whether it is a fact that the Government's Central Wool Purchasing Scheme came into force on the 15th October, 1942;

(b) whether it is a fact that Government fixed on or before the 15th October, 1942, rates for the different qualities of wool in India to be purchased by their buying agents under the Government's Central Wool Purchasing Scheme;

(c) whether it is a fact that the Government's buying agents offered lower rates to the dealers than those fixed for the several qualities even after the introduction of the Central Wool Purchasing Scheme; and

(d) if the answer to (c) is in the affirmative, what steps Government have taken to check such unauthorised dealings of their buying agents, and whether any compensation has been granted subsequently by the buying agents to the dealers from whom they purchased goods at prices lower than the rates fixed by Government?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) So far as the Government are aware it is not a fact that lower rates have been offered.

(d) Does not arise.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Does the Honourable Member know that a certain firm in Amritsar has been offering an over-rate to these merchants?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: So far as the Government is aware, it is not so.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Will Government make an inquiry about it because there is a definite allegation?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: If sufficient particulars are furnished to me, I shall be prepared to go into the question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is it not a fact that the Government has already made an inquiry after the notice of the present question was given and then came to the present conclusion?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: No, there is certainly no time to make inquiries after the question is put, but with the information at the disposal of the Government from time to time that is the information of the Government.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: I will place before the Honourable Member a statement. Will the Honourable Member kindly look into the question then and make inquiries?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: I shall always be prepared to look into any representation of Honourable Members.

BUYING WOOL IN INDIA ON THEIR OWN ACCOUNT BY GOVERNMENT BUYING AGENTS.

243. *Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: (a) Is the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department aware of the fact that the Government's buying agents have also bought wool in India on their own account?

(b) Is it a fact that the buying agents have, on several occasions, refused to buy wool offered to them on Government account but, on the other hand, bought the same wool offered to be bought on their own account?

(c) Do Government recognise that buying by the Government's buying agents on their own account places the buying agents in a position most detrimental to other dealers?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: (a) Yes.

(b) Not so far as the Government are aware.

(c) No.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: In clause (a) it is said that they are purchasing on their own account. Were they allowed to do that?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: They must be allowed to do that and they have been allowed to do that. They are carrying on their business and in addition they are the agents to the Government.

GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE FOR DISPOSAL OF BLACK AND GREY WOOL.

244. *Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: (a) Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department please state if it is a fact that Government have prohibited the export of black and grey wool?

(b) Is it a fact that it is the considered policy of Government to buy all black and grey wool offered to them?

(c) Is it a fact that the Government's buying agents have refused to buy certain types of black and grey wool offered to them, the export of which is prohibited by Government?

(d) If the answer is in the affirmative, what assistance have Government provided for the merchants for the disposal of such wool?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: (a) Yes, but arrangements exist for allowing export of wool which is certified to be unseizable in India and for which a definite overseas demand exists.

(b) Government's policy is to buy all the black and grey wool of requisite quality that can be obtained in India. Actually supplies of such quality wool are much below Government's requirements.

(c) Yes, where the wool offered was below the quality required by Government.

GOVERNMENT BUYING AGENTS' CONTRACT WITH DEALERS IN WOOL.

245. *Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: (a) Is the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department aware of the buying agents' contract with dealers in wool?

(b) Are Government aware that by this contract the buying agents have almost entirely passed on their responsibility in respect of their own contract with the Government to dealers, and that it is for shouldering such responsibility that they are entitled to the Government's commission for the buying agency?

(c) Are Government aware that most of the terms of the buying agents' contract with dealers in respect of the selection of the quality yield tests, payment of freight, arbitration, etc., are hard on the dealers?

(d) Do Government propose to ask the buying agents to revise their contract with dealers so as to make it fair to both the parties concerned?

(e) Are Government aware that there is deep discontent among the Indian wool trade interests in respect of the dealings of the present buying agents with the dealers?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: (a) There is a Central Wool Buying Agency contract between Government and Messrs. Shamji Mal & Co., of Amritsar. Government are not aware of the Buying Agents' contract with dealers in wool.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) The terms of business between the Buying Agent and the dealers are a matter for mutual negotiation and settlement between the parties concerned primarily.

(e) A deputation of wool merchants from Karachi and Lahore waited on officers of the Supply Department in March this year and complained about unfair methods adopted by the Buying Agent in his transactions with dealers. After investigation, Government were satisfied that the complaints were unfounded.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Is it not a fact that those merchants placed before an officer certain evidence which was in the handwriting of Shamji Mal?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: It is after taking that evidence into consideration that the officers of the Government came to the conclusion that I have referred to.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Have the Government made any rule or rules regulating the negotiations between the dealer and the Government? We have received a good deal of complaint about this matter.

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: It is not the practice of the Government to go into the question of the contracts between their own agent and the sub-contractors. Of course, I am prepared to look into any such question where there is grave impropriety alleged on account of any monopolistic contract given by the Government.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: Is it left to the agents themselves to negotiate in any manner they like without any supervision of higher officers as is the case with wheat?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: Normally, that is so.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Does the Honourable Member know that one term of the contract between Shamji Mal and the sellers is that Shamji Mal himself will be the arbitrator in case of dispute?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: I am not aware of any terms of the contract between the buying agent and his own dealers.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Are his agents selling at the same price fixed by the Government or are they selling at different rates?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: The question is very confusing to me.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim): Next question.

NECESSITY OF REVISING THE BUYING AGENCY POLICY RE WOOL.

246. *Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: (a) Will the Honourable Member representing the Supply Department please state if Government recognise that, in view of the Government having fixed prices of the Indian wool, there is no need for buying agents?

(b) Do Government recognise the principle that buying agents should not purchase raw wool on their own account directly or indirectly?

(c) Should Government consider the existence of the buying agency necessary, do they propose to revise their present buying agency policy so as to appoint buying agents for each province or centre in consultation with the wool trade interests of such province or centre?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: (a) Although prices have been fixed for Indian wool, it is essential to have a buying agent to ensure that wool of requisite and consistent quality at controlled prices is obtained. Prior to the appointment of a buying agent, there was considerable competition among different contractors for wool, and considerable variation in the quality of wool offered and utilized, leading to unsatisfactory manufacturing results.

(b) No. Government do not expect an experienced wool buyer to surrender his own established business entirely on account of the need of central purchase for war-time purposes.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Is it a fact that one or two persons in Karachi Division who have been taken are juniors to those who are already there and they are academically also not so well qualified?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Obviously I must have notice of that question.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: What is the number of such recruits on that Railway?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Four or it may be six.

TEMPORARY TRACERS IN THE OFFICE OF DIVISIONAL SUPERINTENDENT, KARACHI.

250. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable the Railway Member be pleased to state how many temporary tracers are working in the office of the Divisional Superintendent, North Western Railway, Karachi, and since when?

(b) Why have they not been confirmed upto now?

(c) Is it a fact that they are suffering a loss of Provident Fund and other privileges owing to not being made permanent?

(d) What steps do Government propose to take to ameliorate their condition? If none, why?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I have called for information and a reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

†251.

PERSONS RECRUITED IN THE INTERMEDIATE GRADES ON BENGAL AND ASSAM RAILWAY.

252. *Mr. Muhammad Nauman: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state the number of persons recruited in the Intermediate grades on salaries between Rs. 100 and Rs. 500 on the Bengal and Assam Railway since 1st January 1942 to 30th June 1943?

(b) How many of this number are (i) Hindus, (ii) Muslims, (iii) Anglo-Indians and (iv) Indian Christians?

(c) Were the posts advertised, and if so, in what newspapers?

(d) Were selections made by any duly constituted Board or were they made by individual officers?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) to (d). I have called for information and a reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

OFFICERS REQUISITIONED BY BENGAL AND ASSAM RAILWAY FROM OTHER RAILWAYS.

253. *Mr. Muhammad Nauman: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state the number of officers requisitioned by the Bengal and Assam Railway from other Railways, between June 1942 and June 1943?

(b) Were there no officers on the Bengal and Assam Railway, competent to be entrusted with those works, which have been entrusted to the new officers imported from Foreign Railways?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Between June 1942 and June 1943 three officers were transferred to the B. and A. Railway from other State Railways.

(b) The transfers were made as the number of officers on the B. and A. was insufficient for the requirements.

Mr. Muhammad Nauman: May I know whether these officers are considered more fit to cope with the particular situation in that locality than those officers who are already there and who could have been promoted?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: There was no question of comparison. The transfers were made as the number of officers on the B. and A. Railway was insufficient for the requirements.

PERSONS RECRUITED IN INTERMEDIATE GRADE ON EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

254. *Mr. Muhammad Nauman: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state the number of persons recruited in the Intermediate grade on the East Indian Railway between January 1942 and June 1943?

(b) How many of this number are (i) Muslims, (ii) Hindus and (iii) Anglo-Indians?

(c) What was the method adopted for recruitment of these people?

(d) Is it a fact that they were appointed without any duly constituted Board of Selection?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) to (d). I have called for information and a reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

DESIRABILITY OF APPOINTING A JUDICIAL OFFICER UNDER ACT XXV OF 1941.

†255. Babu Baijnath Bajoria: Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state:

(a) whether any notification in the official Gazette has been issued as provided in sub-section (1) of Section (3) of Act XXV of 1941 (Act for regulating Taxation of Railway Property); if not, why not;

(b) whether any judicial officer has been appointed as provided for in sub-section (2) of section (3) of the said Act; if not, why not; and

(c) if the answer to parts (a) and (b) be in the negative, whether Government will take necessary steps to issue the notification and to appoint the judicial officer at an early date; if not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) No Notification as provided in Sub-section (1) of Section (3) of Act XXV of 1941 has so far been issued as proposals for such Notifications received from the Provincial Governments are still under examination.

(b) The question of the appointment of judicial officers is still under the consideration of the Central Government in consultation with the Provincial Governments.

(c) Does not arise.

RATES OF FARES FOR PASSENGER TRANSPORT BETWEEN DELHI CITY AND SHAHDARA.

256. *Hajee Chowdhury Muhammad Ismail Khan: Will the Honourable Member for War Transport please state:

(a) the rates of fares prescribed by the authorities for each description of passenger transport plying for hire between Delhi City and Shahdara in Delhi Province; and

(b) the nature of protection provided to the travelling public against the refusal of the Drivers or Conductors of those transports to carry passengers at the prescribed rates?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: Two kinds of road passenger transport viz. tonga and Gwalior and Northern India Transport Buses ply for hire between Delhi City and Shahdara in the Delhi province. The prescribed rates of II-Class tonga fares are:

From Delhi to Shahdara—including return if return is on the same day—Rs. 3.

IV-Class tonga fare is $\frac{1}{2}$ of the above rates.

The Gwalior and Northern India Transport Company, Limited, has been granted the monopoly for motor passenger transport on this route, which is, however, used by other public service vehicles, but these cannot take up or set down passengers between Delhi and Shahdara inclusive. The Gwalior and Northern India Transport bus service on this route has been temporarily suspended by the Company owing to demands made by the Military Authorities, but it is expected that traffic will be resumed from the 9th August, 1943. The revised fares to commence from the 9th August, 1943, is annas 4. between Delhi and Shahdara.

†Answer to this question laid on the table, the questioner being absent.

(c) No. Government think it desirable to have one central purchaser, as in the past the policy of having a number of buying agents led to undesirable competition between different agents.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Does not the Honourable Member think it advisable to form a Syndicate of these agents?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: The present system, I understand, is a variation due to experience from the systems suggested by my Honourable friend.

Seth Yusuf Abdoola Haroon: Why should we not have a Syndicate on the lines of the Sugar Syndicate?

The Honourable Dewan Bahadur Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: That is a suggestion to which I am unable to commit myself in answer to a question.

DEVELOPMENT OF INTERNAL AIR SERVICES IN INDIA BY INDIANS.

247. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Will the Secretary of the Posts and Air Department be pleased to state if it is the policy of Government that the operation of internal air services in India should only be developed by companies owned, controlled and managed by Indians?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the negative, what are the reasons therefor?

(c) Is it a fact that the Government of India have always demanded and obtained reciprocal concessions in return for the right to operate air services across India? If so, what reciprocal concessions have Government obtained, and to whom has the right to operate air services across India been conceded?

(d) Is it a fact that the Government of India have also maintained the right of India to participate on the basis of a financial contribution in the operation of any air services designed to deal with Indian traffic? Will non-Indian concerns be permitted to operate air services designed to deal with Indian traffic in the internal services of India? If so, on what terms? What is the basis of financial contribution they have adopted in the maintenance of the right of India to participate in these services?

Sir Gurnath Bewoor: (a) and (b). Subject to the provisions of Part V, Chapter III of the Government of India Act, 1935, it is the general policy of the Government of India that the operation of internal air services in India should be by Indian companies.

(c) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The reciprocal right obtained was for the operation of an air service across the territory of the other State by an Indian company either in association with other British air services or independently. The right to operate air services across India has been given to companies nominated by His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and by the Governments of Holland, France, China and Germany (the latter has lapsed now).

(d) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second and third parts, I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply I have given to parts (a) and (b) above. As regards the last part, I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to—

(1) the proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee of the 13th September, 1933.

(2) the statements made by Government in the debate on a Demand for Supplementary Grant in this House on the 20th September, 1933; and

(3) the proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee of the 27th February, 1937.

POST-WAR POSSIBILITY OF AMERICAN AIR LINES OPERATING IN INDIA.

248. *Mr. K. C. Neogy: (a) Has the attention of the Secretary of the Posts and Air Department been drawn to a Press report of a declaration of the post-war policy of the United States of America in the matter of civil aviation made by sixteen major American air lines in the course of which they demand commercial rights in some instances where air-port and other navigational facilities are being built abroad at the expense of the United States, once these have served the military purpose for which they are constructed?

(b) Has the implication of the above declaration with reference to the future possibility of American air lines operating in India, particularly for running internal services, been examined by the Government?

Sir Gurnath Bewoor: (a) Yes.

(b) The whole question of post-war air transport is under the examination of Government. The particular declaration referred to does not appear however to have any bearing on India's internal air services.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Is it not a fact that at the present moment many Air Ports exist in India in regard to which the United States Government might put forward a claim on this basis in so far as these Air Ports might have been constructed at the cost of the United States Government?

Sir Gurnath Bewoor: That question should be addressed to the War Department.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: It is a question of their claiming rights. The question is that the United States Government might claim rights in regard to civil aviation in future for the purpose of utilising the Air Ports which may have been built in India at the cost of the United States Government.

Sir Gurnath Bewoor: The point which the Honourable Member really wants to know is whether there are any Air Ports in India constructed at the cost of the United States Government, because his question follows from that. All I can say is that I am not in a position to answer the question whether there are any Air Ports constructed in India at the cost of the United States Government. That question should be addressed to the War Department.

RECRUITMENT OF ASSISTANT ENGINEERS ON NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

249. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways be pleased to state if it is a fact that ordinarily Assistant Engineers on the North-Western Railway are recruited through the Public Service Commission? What was the urgency which caused a deviation from this method of recruiting through the Public Service Commission this year?

(b) Is it a fact that the last recruitment was not done through the Public Service Commission owing to war exigencies? If so, why were not qualified subordinates promoted to avoid delay and discontent?

(c) Is it a fact that qualified subordinates with better experience than the new direct recruits were available? If so, why were they ignored?

(d) Is it a fact that the new recruits were originally appointed for one year, and that they have now been given another year's extension?

(e) Do Government propose to remove these temporary recruits in order to pacify the discontentment among the qualified subordinates? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) Direct recruitment to the Indian Railway Service of Engineers is made through the Federal Public Service Commission. As regards the second part, temporary addition to the strength of officers was necessary in order to deal with the work in hand.

(b) The reply to the first part is in the negative. The second part does not arise.

(c) There were subordinates who had the specified academic qualifications, but they were not considered suitable.

(d) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative; as regards the second part, out of four who have completed one year's service, three have been retained for another year and the fourth for six months.

(e) No, because they do not consider that the public interest would be served thereby, nor do they consider that the subordinates have any legitimate grievance.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will those persons who have been retained for one or two years be made permanent in supersession of those who are senior?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: All appointments made during the war are temporary.

(b) The travelling public are protected by the provisions of Rule 4.38 of the Delhi Motor Vehicles Rules and Rule 21 (B) (7) of the Hackney Carriage Rules framed by the Delhi Municipality. Under the former rule, the police are empowered to institute prosecutions on complaints by the travelling public. Prosecutions for breaches of the Hackney Carriage Rules are instituted by the Municipal prosecutor or counsel on the authority of the Secretary of the Municipal Committee, and disciplinary action against the drivers who refuse to take passengers on the scheduled rate is taken on complaints either personally or in writing.

REDUCING OF TICKET COLLECTORS TO LETTER DELIVERY CLERKS BY THE DIVISIONAL SUPERINTENDENT, MORADABAD.

257. *Hajee Chowdhury Muhammad Ismail Khan: (a) Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state:

(i) the rule or regulation under which a non-gazetted Railway servant in Superior Service can be reduced to Inferior Service for inefficiency or otherwise after an approved confirmed service of over three years;

(ii) if it is a fact that the Divisional Superintendent, East Indian Railway, Moradabad, in a letter No. E/3/35-T.C., dated the 25th March 1935, reduced the Ticket Collectors on failure to pass the 'Ticket Collectors' Examination to the post of the Letter Delivery Clerks on Rs. 40 per mensem in grade 26—2—40 (Superior Service);

(iii) if it is a fact that the said Divisional Superintendent in a letter No. E/3/35-T.C., dated the 19th July 1935, reduced the same Ticket Collectors for the same failure to the post of the Letter Delivery Clerks on Rs. 27 in grade 18—1—27 (Inferior Service); and

(iv) if it is a fact that the posts of Ticket Collectors are included in the Superior Services?

(b) Do Government propose to mend the wrongs of the staff concerned? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: (a) (i). Presumably, the Honourable Member refers to subordinate service when he speaks of superior service. The rule which prescribes reduction to a lower post or time scale or to a lower stage in a time scale is para. 1702-(5) of the State Railway Establishment Code, Volume I; it does not prohibit action of the kind referred to by the Honourable Member.

(a) (ii) and (iii). I have called for information and a further reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

(a) (iv). Ticket Collectors are classified as subordinates.

(b) Government cannot decide till they have secured and examined the information they have called for. The second part does not arise.

Dr. Sir Zia Uddin Ahmad: While making enquiries, may I ask the Honourable Member also to enquire if it is a fact that those persons were incompetent or simply they failed in the Examination? A person may be quite competent and yet fail.

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: I will keep this in mind. But I have no reason to suppose that justice was not done.

ALLOTMENT OF WAGONS TO THE STATION MASTER, MUZAFFARNAGAR.

258. *Hajee Chowdhury Muhammad Ismail Khan: Will the Honourable Member for Railways please state:

(a) the conditions and terms on which the allotment of wagons to the Station Master, Muzaffarnagar, United Provinces, on the North Western Railway, is made by the Control Office, New Delhi;

(b) the conditions and terms on which the Station Master distributes them to the customers;

(c) the daily average number of wagons allotted to that station during the preceding one year, as compared with the daily average number of wagons allotted to Meerut, Hapur, Saharanpur, Ghaziabad, Deoband, Begumabad,

Rohana Kalan, etc., on the said Section of the Control Office during the said period;

(d) the number of complaints received against the Station Master, Muzaffarnagar, for corruption; and

(e) if the Traffic Inspector of the section was also implicated in those complaints and what the duration (total) of his stay in that section out of the total period of his service as an Inspector is?

The Honourable Sir Edward Benthall: With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to both questions 258 and 259 together.

(a) and (b) of question 258. I lay on the table a copy of letter in which is reproduced a summary of the method adopted on the North Western Railway for the distribution of wagons.

I regret that the information asked for in the remainder of this question and in question 259 is not readily available.

I have called for a report from the Railways concerned and on its receipt will consider the action to be taken.

Copy of a letter No. 3062-T. T., dated the 25th February, 1943, from Government of India, Railway Department (Railway Board), to Class I, II and III Railways.

Supply of wagons at stations to traders.

The Board are of the opinion that there is a wide-spread belief that the control of empty wagons supply is entirely in the hands of Station Masters. It is considered, therefore, that it would be very valuable if propaganda was disseminated outlining the procedure adopted in the control and distribution of empty wagons to merchants and traders requiring transport. With this object in view a draft notification which the North Western Railway have drawn up, outlining the procedure adopted on their line, is enclosed with this letter and it is requested that you will please draw up a similar notification, suitably amended in accordance with the procedure existing on your Railway, for publication in the principal English and vernacular newspapers.

2. Prominent exhibition of advertisements, substantially on the same lines but perhaps with greater detail, could be undertaken with advantage at railway stations so that the actual traders doing business with the railway may know the exact procedure followed.

3. These steps it is believed would materially help to lessen, and possibly remove, much of the criticism now being levelled against the station staff especially in regard to demands for illegal gratification before wagons are made available.

Copy of North Western Railway's Notification.

Supply of wagons at stations to traders, how it is controlled and by whom?
