Mr. Speaker: The matter has been sufficiently argued and I do not think any further debate on the point is necessary. We have to put through a very large number of sections and a very large number of amendments and the time at our disposal is so short, unless the members want to sit in this session beyond the 4th of September.

The question is:—

“That clause 8 stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was adopted.

Clause 8 was added to the Bill.

Clause 9 was added to the Bill.

Shri V. S. Sarwate (Indore State): I beg to move:

“That in the Explanation to clause 10 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

‘or any such Authority as the Provincial or Indian State Government may by notification declare in the Official Gazette, provided the qualification granted by the Authority is registrable under the law of the Province or State concerned.’”

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member may have his say in support of the amendment. Then I will place it before the House.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: This is a very formal amendment. The scheme of the Bill seems to be that in administrative matters the Provincial Governments have been given power in most of the cases. Here the Provincial Government have been given the power to appoint qualified medical practitioners and the Explanation defines who are qualified medical practitioners and two Acts have been mentioned. My object in moving this amendment is that in the acceding states and in some of the provinces there are medical authorities who are competent to give degrees, which are not recognised by the above two Acts. For instance at page 73 of the evidence, there is one such authority mentioned by the Bombay Government. Take Medical Faculty, Bombay, which has not been included in the Acts mentioned. So to make this consistent with the first part which says: “The Provincial Government may appoint qualified medical practitioners”, I have added that the qualifying medical practitioner may be such as have been recognised by the Provincial Governments themselves. There is nothing inconsistent in this. It is consistent with the spirit of the whole section. Therefore, I hope that the Honourable Minister will accept my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

“That in the Explanation to clause 10 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

‘or any such Authority as the Provincial or Indian State Government may by notification declare in the Official Gazette, provided the qualification granted by the Authority is registrable under the law of the Province or State concerned.’”

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, this is a matter for the Ministry of Health and as soon as I received notice of that amendment, the Health Ministry was consulted in this matter, and their opinion is that this amendment at this stage is rather premature. The Ministry of Health itself is examining the whole question and it will be for them to bring necessary amendments to these two Acts referred to in the Explanation and when they amend these two Acts, the purpose which is in the mind of my honourable friend will be served. So, for the present, I think it will be premature and I do not think I am competent to accept this amendment unless advised by the Ministry of Health.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: My difficulty is what happens in the intervening time.

Mr. Speaker: The Honourable Minister has explained the position. Does he wish me to put the amendment to the vote of the House?

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

“That in the Explanation to clause 10 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

‘or any such Authority as the Provincial or Indian State Government may by notification declare in the Official Gazette, provided the qualification granted by the Authority is registrable under the law of the Province or State concerned.’”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 10 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 10 was added to the Bill.

Clause 11 was added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 12 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

Sir, I come from Gorakhpur where there are twenty-one Sugar Factories situated near every station and anybody who goes in a train will find that the whole atmosphere is full of stench. This is a great nuisance. I have many times tried that the factories should be so planned and equipped that the waste products which they throw out are properly treated before they go out of the factory so that the rivers which are used for drinking water by cattle as well as men may not be spoiled. I have seen villages where these effluents are collected and where life becomes a hell; the health of the people there is so bad; probably nowhere else you will find life so miserable.

In fact, we cannot stand in these villages on account of the effluents glutted there. Now that, we are a free country, the health of the people must be the first concern of this Assembly, and I think on the factories must be laid the duty of seeing that the waste products thrown out are properly treated before they go out, so that the people in the locality may not suffer. I think if this amendment is accepted, the effluents will not be discharged before they are treated properly by the factories. Of course, there are some good factories which treat the effluents before they are discharged and the nuisance is not there. But most of the factories do not take the trouble to ensure this; they do not care for the health of the people in the locality. If this provision is made, every factory will take care to see that the health of the people is not injured. I hope the Honourable Minister will accept this amendment because it would help thousands of people.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 12 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'so that they may not injuriously affect the health of, or become a source of nuisance to the people of the locality and the factory shall be liable to pay damages to compensate in full the injury suffered by any persons or institutions, singly or collectively, who are adversely affected by the manner in which the factory disposes of its wastes and effluents'."

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): Sir, the point raised by Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena is a really important one. I think the water coming out from so many factories is very injurious and some of the industries which probably may flourish in the future, such as the Ryon industry, and other factories throw out very injurious water. I think very drastic provision must be made in this respect. I hope the Honourable Minister will explain whether this provision is sufficient or not and if that is not sufficient, some other must be found in the direction of what Mr. Shibban Lal Saksena has suggested.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: There are so many things which are very desirable and very important. I think the honourable members should realise that we are legislating here for factory labour. We are legislating here to regulate the employment, health and safety of the workers in the factories. One may very well argue that some things are manufactured in the factories, the factory owners charge exorbitant prices and therefore, the Factory Bill should provide for the control of prices. I do not know how far it will be competent for us to legislate in this Factory legislation for everything that is connected with the factory, whether in the factory or outside the factory. We have made ample provision here. If one were to examine the provisions, he will notice that the provincial Government has been empowered to make rules prescribing the arrangements to be made under sub-section (1) or requiring that the arrangements made in accordance with sub-section (1) shall be approved by such authority as may be prescribed. If the Provincial Government thinks that the arrangements suggested by the employer for the disposal of the wastes and effluents is not satisfactory in the interests of the persons residing in the locality, the provincial Government may not approve of that scheme, but may ask for or suggest another alternative scheme. That is covered here. Even if it is not covered, I do not think it is competent for us to legislate for all these things in the Factory Bill itself.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In view of what the Honourable Minister has stated, I withdraw the amendment moved by me.

Mr. Speaker: I may point out for the information of the honourable member that even under the general law, nobody has a right to commit nuisance to the other and whoever is a subject of that nuisance has a right under the law to go to the court to have his remedy.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The law of Torts.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 12 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 12 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, there is a similar amendment in the name of the Honourable Minister. If he wants to move it, I am not moving this; if he does not move that, I shall move this amendment.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I move:

"That in part (a) of sub-clause (1) of clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'free', the word 'fresh' be substituted."

This is a formal amendment, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in part (a) of sub-clause (1) of clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'free', the word 'fresh' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 13, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 13, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, with a view to facilitate the acceptance of my amendment, I would invite reference to the corresponding clause in the original Bill before it was sent to the Select Committee: that is clause 15 in the original Bill. A comparative study will help us to comprehend the nature of the amendment. In sub-clause (1) of clause 15 of the original Bill, we have got the words, injurious or offensive. Here also, in sub-clause (1), we have got the words injurious or offensive to the workers employed therein, in line 4. Just to bring sub-clause (2) in line with sub-clause (1), I have suggested this amendment. Because, here we have got only the word 'injurious'; the word offensive has been deleted. My impression is, unless my memory betrays me, that in the Select Committee—the proceedings of the Select Committee should not be disclosed—the word 'offensive' was agreed to be incorporated in addition to the word 'injurious' in sub-clause (2), so that it would read, "fumes therefrom as are likely to be injurious or offensive to workers employed in the room." I should like to hear from the Honourable Minister why this has not been incorporated. I hope he will throw some light on this point. Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, after the word 'injurious', occurring in the last line, the words 'or offensive' be inserted."

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, after the word 'injurious', occurring in the last line, the words 'or offensive' be inserted."

Shri K. Santhanam: Sir, before the Honourable Minister replies, I wish to point out, that according to my recollection, this particular amendment was accepted in the Select Committee, but by oversight, it was not incorporated. I remember to have moved this amendment and it was accepted; but we were not able to scrutinise the entire re-draft in view of the short time. We merely want the same expression in the two clauses. It is "injurious or offensive" in one clause and "injurious" only in the other clause. Somebody may take a hair-splitting argument and find a difference between sub-clauses (1) and (2).

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I do not remember exactly what Mr. Santhanam says. In this matter, we have to depend on our experts. My expert advice is that, in the first sub-clause it is all right. With regard to the second sub-clause, some gases may not be offensive, but may be injurious; there may be some gases which may be offensive, but may not be injurious. Therefore, this provision is not necessary.

Shri H. V. Kamath: That is why I have said, "injurious or offensive".

An Honourable Member: That would mean both.

Shri H. V. Kamath: It can be both.

Mr. Speaker: That would be a double restriction.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I do not accept the amendment.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I do not accept the explanation of the Honourable Minister.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, after the word 'injurious', occurring in the last line, the words 'or offensive' be inserted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 14 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 14 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 15 of the Bill, the word 'If' occurring at the beginning be omitted."

The word is redundant.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 15 of the Bill, the word 'If' occurring at the beginning be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 15 of the Bill, the words 'which is required to be effectively purified' be omitted."

Clause 2 says that water is required to be used in a purified state and there is no need to repeat these words in sub-clause (3). These words should be deleted as being unnecessary.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 15 of the Bill, the words 'which is required to be effectively purified' be omitted."

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Sir, I oppose this amendment because what Mr. Jain says is not correct. Under sub-clause (2) the factory will have to use water from a public supply or other source of drinking water or water which must be effectively purified before it is used. In the case of water from a public supply it is already purified, and the question of further purification does not arise. If it is taken from any other source and the water is not as it should be, it will be for the Inspector to require it to be purified. Therefore if you omit the words "which is required to be effectively purified" the Inspector may call upon a factory which is using water from a public supply to purify it again. So these words should remain; otherwise there will be complications.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I think it is unnecessary to retain these words.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: In some places there are two kinds of water,—for flushing and for drinking. If the clause is clear I do not mind.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: There are three sources of water for increasing humidity,—public supply, other source of drinking water, or water which should be effectively purified before use. In the third case it must be purified in the factory; in the other two cases it is already purified. So the words should be retained.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 15 of the Bill, the words 'which is required to be effectively purified' be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 15, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 15, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 16 and 17 were added to the Bill.

श्री गोकुलभाई दीलतराम भट्ट: माननीय सभापति जी, मेरा संशोधन इस प्रकार है—

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 18 of the Bill, after the words 'drinking water', the words 'in Hindustani and' be inserted."

[श्री गोकुल भाई दौलतराम भट्ट]

यह संशोधन रखने को जरूरत इसलिये हुई कि हमें राष्ट्र भाषा का सब जगह इस्तेमाल करना चाहिये, चाहे वह गुजरात में हो, चाहे वह दक्षिण में हो, या चाहे वह देश के किसी और हिस्से में हो। भाषा की दृष्टि से यह जरूरी है कि हम अपनी राष्ट्र भाषा का सम्मान करें और उसके जुरिए हम आम लोगों में पहुंचें। और आम लोगों में पहुंचने का एक तरीका यह है कि जहां कहीं कोई इतिला दी जाय, जहां कहीं कोई सूचना दी जाय वह राष्ट्र भाषा में तो देनी ही चाहिये। और उसके सिवाय प्रान्त की भाषा में या दूसरी और भाषा में जिसे लोग समझ सकें उसमें देनी चाहिये। इसलिये मैंने यह संशोधन रखा है। वैसे तो मैं मानता हूं कि यह संशोधन सदा है लेकिन जरूरी भी है क्योंकि हमें अपनी राष्ट्र भाषा बढ़ानी है।

(English translation of the above speech).

Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 18 of the Bill, after the words 'drinking water', the words 'in Hindustani and' be inserted."

The necessity for moving this amendment is that we should use the national language in every sphere, may be in Gujrat, or in the South or in any other part of the country. From the linguistic point of view, it is necessary that we should respect our national language and by means of that we should establish our contact with the masses. The only way to associate ourselves with the masses is that we should use the national language for communicating any sort of information which may be desired to be circulated. And besides this, this should be given in the language in vogue in the Province concerned or in any other language which is understood by the people. Therefore, I have proposed this amendment. I do admit that this is a simple amendment, but I feel it necessary because we have to popularise our national language.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 18 of the Bill, after the words 'drinking water', the words 'in Hindustani and' be inserted."

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: The clause refers to a language understood by a majority of the workers. If my honourable friend wants to propagate Hindustani, that is a different matter but this is not the place to do so. In the present clause I think it is enough if the language is one which is commonly understood in the place.

Shri O. V. Alagesan (Madras: General): Will both the scripts be used?

Mr. Speaker: The amendment is silent on that.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The provision as it stands is quite useful and will serve the purpose. The language should be one which is understood by the majority of the workers. I think we should find other means for the propagation of Hindustani. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

श्री गोकुलभाई दौलतराम भट्ट : मैं संशोधन को वापिस लेने की इजाजत चाहता हूं।

Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt: Sir, I beg leave to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: With reference to sub-clause (2) if the Honourable the Minister considers that no exemption should be given, well and good. Otherwise I shall not put it. I feel that in such a matter, the drinking water should not be contaminated with latrine or drainage water. Why should there be any objection to the approval of a shorter distance by the Chief Inspector?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I do not accept this view. When we are thinking of modern amenities, we have to think of modern science also!

Mr. Speaker: Science might perhaps invent better methods and the space in a factory may not allow for a longer distance.

Shri H. V. Kamath: In Clause 19 there are mandatory provisions to keep them clean.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 18 of the Bill,—

- (i) for the words 'methods of', the words 'provision shall be made for' be substituted;
- (ii) the words 'shall be provided' be omitted; and
- (iii) the words 'provision shall be made' be omitted."

The amendment would then read:

"In every factory wherein more than two hundred and fifty workers are ordinarily employed, provision shall be made for cooling drinking water during the hot weather by  effective means, and for distribution thereof."

It is a verbal amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 18 of the Bill,—

- (i) for the words 'methods of', the words 'provision shall be made for' be substituted;
- (ii) the words 'shall be provided' be omitted; and
- (iii) the words 'provision shall be made' be omitted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I accept it.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 18 of the Bill,—

- (i) for the words 'methods of', the words 'provision shall be made for' be substituted;
- (ii) the words 'shall be provided' be omitted; and
- (iii) the words 'provision shall be made' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 18, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 18, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: With reference to this amendment, before I move it, I would like to know what is the meaning of "sufficient latrine and urinal accommodation....." in (1) (a) of Clause 19. It seems vague whereas there are municipal laws defining the number of persons to a seat. It is 20 persons to a seat. If it is sufficient then there is no meaning in moving it provided of course the Minister feels that the word "sufficient" would cover this. Otherwise, what does "sufficient" mean?

Mr. Speaker: That which is not insufficient will be sufficient.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: I am not moving my amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In sub-clause 3 of Clause 19 it is already said that Government may prescribe the number of latrines.

Mr. Speaker: In any case, he is not moving his amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 19 of the Bill for the words 'may prescribe', the words 'shall make rules prescribing' be substituted."

I am not moving part (ii) of my amendment. I do not think the Government can prescribe latrines for every factory. So I want the words "shall make rules prescribing....." for the words "may prescribe".

Mr. Speaker: It is understood that "prescribe" means prescribing by rules.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Then, I move:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 19 of the Bill, for the word 'may' after the words 'Provincial Government' the word 'shall' be substituted."

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 19 of the Bill, for the word 'may' after the words 'Provincial Government' the word 'shall' be substituted."

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I beg leave of the House to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member the permission of the House to withdraw?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That Clause 19 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 19 was added to the Bill.

Shri Basanta Kumar Das (West Bengal: General): Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 20 of the Bill, for the words 'to this effect', the following be substituted:

'containing this provision and the penalty for its violation.'"

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 20 of the Bill, for the words 'to this effect', the following be substituted:

'containing this provision and the penalty for its violation.'"

Shri Basanta Kumar Das: For "provision" we should not have the word "section" as suggested by an honourable member. That would not be better.

Mr. Speaker: "Provision" means the ban on spitting.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I accept it.

Mr. Speaker: In this very form?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 20 of the Bill, for the words 'to this effect', the following be substituted:

'containing this provision and the penalty for its violation.'"

The motion was adopted.

श्री गोकुलभाई दौलतराम भट्ट : माननीय सभापति जी, मेरी तरफ़ीम यह है—

"That in sub-clause (4) of clause 20 of the Bill, for the words 'with fine not exceeding five rupees', the words 'under rules to be prescribed by the Provincial Government' be substituted."

मुझे याद है कि सिलेक्ट कमेटी में इसके मुताल्लिक कुछ बात थी और उस समय यह आश्वासन दिया गया था कि यह इसमें स उड़ाया जायगा क्योंकि कई जगह हमने जुरमाने वगैरह की बात नहीं रखी है। क्योंकि प्रान्तीय सरकार जो कुछ नियम बनावेगी उनके अधीन सब कुछ रखा जायगा। लेकिन मालूम नहीं कि यह किस रीति से इसमें आ गया है। उस समय शायद यह कुछ ध्यान के बाहर हो गया। मैं चाहता हूँ कि जुरमाना करने की जो बात है वह नियमों के अधीन होनी चाहिये। कौन जुरमाना करेगा, या नहीं करेगा, थकने वाले को कौन पकड़ेगा वगैरह बातें अगर प्रान्तीय सरकारों के ऊपर और उनके नियमों के ऊपर छोड़ दी जायें तो ज्यादा अच्छा रहेगा।

वैसे तो उपधारा २ में यह चीज़ आ भी जाती है कि प्रान्तीय सरकार इसके मुताल्लिक नियम बनायेगी, (* * * *) relating to their maintenance in a clean and hygienic condition वगैरह। तो ऐसी हालत में अगर वह जुरमाने की चीज़ भी दाखिल करना चाहेंगी तो कर सकेंगी। इसलिये मेरी प्रार्थना है कि इस चीज़ को प्रान्तीय नियमों पर ही छोड़ दिया जाय और यहां इस कानून में, इस बिल में इसको न रखा जाय।

(English translation of the above speech).

Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (4) of clause 20 of the Bill, for the words 'with fine not exceeding five rupees', the words 'under rules to be prescribed by the Provincial Government' be substituted."

I remember that this matter was discussed in the Select Committee and an assuafance was given that this will be deleted from this Clause, because we have not provided for the imposition of fines at so many places. All these matters would be dealt with under the rules which will be framed by the Provincial Governments. But it is not known how has this crept here. It was perhaps overlooked at that time. What I want is that the levy of fines should be governed by the rules. It would be better if we leave it to the Provincial Governments to frame the rules as to who will impose the fine, who will catch hold of the person while spitting, and for such other matters.

Ordinarily this comes within the scope of sub-clause (2) that the Provincial Government may make rules prescribing the type and the number of spittoons to be provided and provide for such further matters relating to their maintenance in a clean and hygienic condition, etc. So under such circumstances if they consider it expedient to provide for the levy of fines also, they will be able to do this. Therefore, I submit that this matter should be left to be governed by the rules of the Provincial Government and no provision to this effect be made here in this Bill.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (4) of clause 20 of the Bill, for the words 'with fine not exceeding five rupees', the words 'under rules to be prescribed by the Provincial Government', be substituted."

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: If the amendment of Mr. Bhatt is accepted I will not move mine. I feel that it should be left to the Provincial Governments to frame the rules or devise methods to get this done. If the amendment is not accepted I would suggest a fine of one rupee instead of Rs. 5. Even one rupee is too much but I hope it will not be five rupees in any case. Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (4) of clause 20 of the Bill, for the words 'five rupees', the words 'one rupee' be substituted."

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (4) of clause 20 of the Bill, for the words 'five rupees', the words 'one rupee' be substituted."

Shri B. Das: Sir, I am in entire agreement with my friend Mr. Bhatt and I do not understand how the champions of labour who were in the Select Committee introduced this sub-clause (4). It is a very irksome provision. If the trial is before a magistrate it would go very hard with the poor labourers. The standard of sanitation in congested places like factories has not reached that level when we can impose such restrictions on the workers. I hope it would be left to the Provincial Governments to frame bye-laws, because provinces in India have got different standards. Today there are 8 provinces but soon there may be 14. The racial characteristics of the people are bound to prevail. The working classes come from people who are less educated or illiterate and they are confined to one place of work and they might commit the offences contemplated in sub-clause (4). I hope the House will accept Mr. Bhatt's amendment.

Shrimati Renuka Ray (West Bengal: General): Sir, I should just like to point out that my honourable friend Mr. Bhatt is wrong. He has misunderstood the discussion that took place in the Select Committee

Mr. Speaker: Let us not go into that discussion.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: I will not go into details. I only want to point out that we decided there and I supported this decision that we should have this clause as it is. It has not been wrongly inserted. I do not agree with my honourable friend who spoke before me that these are racial characteristics. This habit was prevalent in Italy and after Mussolini introduced heavy fines the habit changed very soon. If we too provide a heavy penalty the habit will go out. It is not a racial habit of Indians in particular. It is a habit which has been prevalent in other countries as well. I am very strongly in favour of retaining the clause as it is.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Sir, I am unmindful of the opposition raised by Mr. Das, but I am very much surprised that my friends Messrs Saksena and Bhatt should oppose the clause as it is. It is a very desirable clause which has been inserted. Spitting brings dangerous diseases. It is recognised by all that spitting anywhere contaminates the atmosphere and brings diseases to other persons who may be absolutely healthy. In England if a policeman sees a man spitting on the road side he would immediately fine him on the spot. If we are backward in social consciousness we must train the people in it. In a factory if workers are allowed to spit in all sorts of places, in the staircases, etc., it will breed all sorts of diseases. I am surprised that labour leaders should object to this salutary provision. The fine should be Rs. 10 and not Rs. 5. Nobody can say that I am not in favour of the workers. I however oppose the amendment because I want to improve the health of the workers. It is for that purpose that this provision has been put in.

Dr. V. Subramaniam: Sir, I am glad that the provision has been made in sub-clauses (3) and (4) but how far we will succeed is a matter of doubt. There is no provision for a watch and ward peon or person who will see who is spitting and has committed an offence. For propaganda purposes each worker must be educated that he should lead a clean and sanitary life and that he must not spit. How this provision will be enforced is a different matter and I have got my own doubts. Some provision must be made to let in evidence as to who has done it. By examining the sputum one cannot say whether X or Y has done it. I just want to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister that the fine must be a nominal fine and even one rupee is quite sufficient.

The Honourable Shri Jāgīvan Ram: Sir, I am not in a position to accept both the amendments. Mr. Gokulbhai Bhatt has stated that the provisions of sub-clause (2) can serve the purpose. I would like to state for his information that sub-clause (2) requires the employers to maintain the spittoons in a proper manner. Sub-clause (4) puts the responsibility on the workers that if they do not use the spittoon and spit elsewhere, they will be committing an offence and liable to be fined. I do not want to make this provision simply for keeping the factory clean, but also to stop the present-day practice of the workers to spit anywhere they like. If they go on spitting in the place where they take the meals and change their clothes, then this will not only prove harmful to the employers, but to the workers also. Anyone who champions the cause of labour should welcome this rather than oppose this. By providing it in this law, we want to impress upon the labourers that if they behave like this they are liable to be punished. It is, therefore, necessary, and I hope that both of my honourable friends will withdraw the amendments.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Will not one rupee be enough?

Mr. Speaker: There is now no further scope for discussion.

श्री गोकुलभाई दौलतराम भट्ट: माननीय मंत्री का खुलासा सुनने के बाद मुझे सन्देह तो है कि इस पर अमल करना दुस्तर होगा लेकिन चूंकि वह एडमिनिस्ट्रेटिव व्यू (Administrative view) से इसे रखना चाहते हैं तो इसे रखें। मैं अपना सुझाव वापिस लेने की इजाजत चाहता हूँ।

(English translation of the above speech).

Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt: After having listened to the explanations given by the Honourable Minister, I still have the doubt that it will be difficult to act upon this, but as he wants to retain this clause from an administrative point of view, he may do so. I, therefore, beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, in view of the submission by the Honourable Minister I desire to withdraw my amendment.

564. CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [24TH AUGUST 1948]

Mr. Speaker: Have the two honourable members Shri Gokulbhai Bhatt and Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena the leave of the House to withdraw their amendments?

The amendments were, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 20, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 20, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 21 of the Bill, between the words 'and' and 'unless' occurring in line nine the brackets and figures '(iv)' be inserted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: In that case the word "and" occurring after (ii) will have to be deleted.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: The word "and" will go to the previous line. That can be done by the draftsman.

Mr. Speaker: The word "and" might go after item (iii).

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: The "and" at the end of item (ii) might be deleted and this "and" should go after item (iii). As it is only a drafting amendment I would request the Chair to put the amendment for deleting the word "and" at the end of part (ii) of sub-clause (1).

Mr. Speaker: I think the deletion of "and" after (ii) would suffice.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: My submission is that that "and" might be deleted and that this "and" occurring before the word "unless" should go to the last preceding line, because these parts are all connected together and the last "and" will govern all parts. The word "and" at the end of part (ii) is unnecessary.

Mr. Speaker: What does "they" after the word "unless" stand for?

Shri K. Santhanam: They refer to (a), (b) and (c) which follow, that is every part of an electric generator, a motor or rotary convertor, every part of transmission machinery and every dangerous part of any other machinery.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, will not the word "unless" be necessary?

Shri K. Santhanam: The word "unless" is absolutely essential. Mr. Jain wants only "(iv)" to be put before "unless". He wants to make it a separate part so that the final part can govern the entire thing—(a), (b) and (c). That is his object.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: This clause relates to fencing. Fencing in the case of (i), (ii) and (iii) is compulsory. If my amendment is accepted, in the case of (iv) unless they are in such position or of such construction as to be safe to every person employed in the factory as they would be if they were securely fenced, the following, namely: (a) every part of an electric generator, a motor or rotary convertor; (b) every part of transmission machinery; and (c) every dangerous part of any other machinery—shall be fenced etc.

Mr. Speaker: I feel a sort of confusion here.

Shri K. Santhanam: There is none, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: There is none as a matter of fact. I am stating my own state of mind. The first "and" after part (ii) may go.

Some Honourable Members: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: That does not seem to create any difficulty.

Shri K. Santhanam: "and" should then come after the word "lathe;" in part (iii).

Mr. Speaker: The difficulty which I have been feeling so far as the drafting of it is concerned, is that in (i), (ii) and (ii') we are referring to a specific article, a thing, in respect of which we want what is given below.

Shri K. Santhanam: "securely fenced by safeguards....." governs (i), (ii), (iii) and (iv). That is the intention of the amendment. Each one of these should be securely fenced by safeguards.

Mr. Speaker: That I follow. What I was finding difficulty about is that this clause, which governs (i), (ii) and (iii), differs in nature from parts (i), (ii) and (iii). While they describe some parts of machinery, if we take this as (iv) it will be describing a sort of condition in which the machinery is kept.

Shri K. Santhanam: It will be defining the machinery to be fenced under certain conditions.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Parts (i), (ii) and (iii) are to be compulsorily fenced. But here a rider has been added beginning from the word "unless" and ending as "securely fenced". In fact it would have been better if this had been made into a sort of Proviso to parts (a), (b) and (c). But as it is, it is a Proviso which, however, does not come after (a), (b) and (c) but precedes them.

Mr. Speaker: Shall we separate (iv)?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I think the clause is all right as it is. The first part consisting of (i), (ii) and (iii) is separated from the second portion by the word "unless". The second part begins after the word "unless". I think the clause requires no change.

Mr. Speaker: I think it requires more material redrafting. I am myself not clear yet on the construction.

Mr. Hossain Imam (Bihar: Muslim): The difficulty will be removed if the last portion of this clause "shall be securely fenced...etc." goes before (iv). That is, the first three items—shall be fenced. They will come first. And this will be a Proviso. That is, these three—(a), (b) and (c)—will be fenced if these conditions are not fulfilled. The difficulty might be removed by juxtaposition.

Shri K. Santhanam: (a), (b) and (c) might come first and the clause beginning with the word "unless" might come behind them.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya: I think we might hold up this clause.

Mr. Speaker: I think so. In any case we are going to have discussion on this Bill tomorrow because I do not think we will be able to finish it before 5 of the Clock.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala (Bihar: General): (i), (ii) and (iii) must be fenced under all circumstances. So far as these other three are concerned, namely, (a), (b) and (c), unless they are in such position or of such construction as to be safe to every person employed in the factory as they would be if they were securely fenced, they should also be fenced. That is, if they are securely fenced, in that case it is not necessary. But (i), (ii) and (iii) must be securely fenced under all circumstances. That is the intention.

Mr. Speaker: In any case, I am keeping it over with a request to the Honourable Minister that he may consult his draftsmen and then see what is to be done; if at all anything is required to be done we will do it tomorrow.

Shri K. Santhanam: I may also point this out for consideration of the draftsman. The clause says:

" construction which shall be kept in position "

It is the safeguard which is to be kept in position. There is a confusion as to whether the safeguard or the construction shall be in position.

Mr. Speaker: He will try to revise the whole clause. Now I will take up the next clause.

The question is:

"That Clause 22 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 22 was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I move:

"That for clause 23 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"23. Employment of young persons on dangerous machines.—(1) No young person shall work at any machine to which this section applies, unless he has been fully instructed as to the dangers arising in connection with the machine and the precautions to be observed and—

(a) has received sufficient training in work at the machine, or

(b) is under adequate supervision by a person who has a thorough knowledge and experience of the machine.

(2) Sub-section (1) shall apply to such machines as may be prescribed by the Provincial Government, being machines which in its opinion are of such a dangerous character that young persons ought not to work at them unless the foregoing requirements are complied with."

Sir, this is the same as the existing clause 23. There it covers only adolescents and that has been replaced here by young persons in order to cover children as well. That is the only change that has been made in this new clause.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That for clause 23 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"23. Employment of young persons on dangerous machines.—(1) No young person shall work at any machine to which this section applies, unless he has been fully instructed as to the dangers arising in connection with the machine and the precautions to be observed and—

(a) has received sufficient training in work at the machine, or

(b) is under adequate supervision by a person who has a thorough knowledge and experience of the machine.

(2) Sub-section (1) shall apply to such machines as may be prescribed by the Provincial Government, being machines which in its opinion are of such a dangerous character that young persons ought not to work at them unless the foregoing requirements are complied with."

Does Professor Shibban Lal Saksena want to move his amendment?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Yes, Sir. I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 23 of the Bill, after the word 'unless' occurring in line 2 the words 'the Chief Inspector of Factories certifies that' be inserted."

This clause is meant generally to protect young persons. I want that there should be some tests to prove that those persons who are put on the dangerous machines have actually satisfied the provisions of this clause. As the clause stands a manufacturer can send young persons for work on dangerous machines and there will be nothing to show that the workers have been properly instructed. So, I have added the words "the Chief Inspector of Factories certifies that" after the word "unless". This would read—

"...shall work at any machine to which this section applies, unless the Chief Inspector of Factories certifies that he has been fully instructed as to the dangers....."

Some authority must satisfy itself that the person has been fully instructed in the use of that dangerous machine. Then alone will this section have been adhered to; otherwise it will remain a dead letter.

Secondly, I may point out to the Honourable Minister that he has used the word "young persons". He should have included women also. In the English Act women are also included. So I would suggest to him that he may incorporate this amendment also.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 23 of the Bill, after the word 'unless' occurring in line 2 the words 'the Chief Inspector of factories certifies that' be inserted."

I was just wondering as to how this amendment which was tabled to the old section will fit in with the new clause.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: The words sought to be added by my amendment will be inserted after the word "unless" in sub-clause (1).

Shri K. Santhanam: It will not fit in with the new draft.

Mr. Speaker: I think perhaps his object would be served by adding the words like this to sub-clause (2) of the new clause:—

"...unless the foregoing requirements are certified by the Chief Inspector of Factories to have been complied with."

Would that serve his purpose?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I do not mind.

Shri K. Santhanam: Sir, I think this new clause is inconsistent with sub-clause (2) of clause 22 which absolutely bars a woman or child. A "young person" may be a child or may be an adolescent. A child within certain ages may be a "young person". Under the new clause 23 a child who is defined as a "young person" can work at a machine, while Clause 22 (2) says that a child cannot go near the machinery nor even clean it. I think there is some inconsistency between the two.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Therefore the word "adolescents" may continue.

Shri K. Santhanam: Yes, the old clause has been considered already. I think there has been some mistake.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: The clause may be allowed to stand as it is.

Mr. Speaker: What is the position then?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Sir, as it is, the new amendment that is proposed by the Honourable Minister is I am afraid likely to worsen the position of children. A "child" means a person who has not completed his 15th year of age. Hereafter children also will come to be employed, if this amendment were to be passed, in those machines which are considered to be dangerous; they will be expected to have attained so much of proficiency in managing these machines as to be able to work by them in safety. That is a very dangerous thing indeed.

As my friend Mr. Santhanam has already suggested, indeed this amendment is inconsistent with sub-clause (2) of clause 22. The House has already passed clause 22. Then, it is well-known that in other countries a "young person" is defined as one who is below the age of sixteen, and young persons are not allowed to work at all in any industrial employment. Only recently the International Labour Office had to consider this problem and they had to make a special exemption in the case of India, and then say, "So far as India is concerned, your Child Employment Act will be recognised according to which those who are children and who are fifteen years of age will also be allowed to work after they have finished their school-going age". Now, when an exception has been made in our case—not in our favour but in our case—in a sort of grudging fashion, I do not see any reason why on top of having got this exemption we should allow our children also to come to be employed by these dangerous machines. Therefore, Sir, I am all in favour of the existing provisions as it is, that is, clause 23. We should not at all bring within the mischief of this particular clause the children also. I suggest to the Honourable Minister that he should not press this amendment at all and he should really withdraw this amendment.

Mr. Speaker: I find that Clause 23 as it is printed in the Bill is a result of the deliberations in the Select Committee. Therefore, if the Honourable Minister would kindly explain why he thinks it is necessary to have this particular amendment, the whole position will be clear.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sub-section (2) of clause 22 is about the cleaning or lubrication or adjustment of machinery while that part is in motion and there children and women are prohibited from working. This clause covers other machineries.

Shri K. Santhanam: Can it work without being in motion?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: It is even more dangerous.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: This refers to certain.....

Shri K. Santhanam: The Minister may consult his advisers.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Yes, I would like again to consult my advisers. This is a technical matter.

Mr. Speaker: I was just going to make that suggestion. So this clause may stand over. There are no amendments to clauses 24, 25 and 26.

The question is:

"That clauses 24, 25 and 26 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 24, 25 and 26 were added to the Bill.

At this stage, [Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, (one of the Panel of Chairman)].

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Sir, my amendment is in relation to clause 27 regarding the prohibition of the employment of women and children in cotton-openers. These cotton-openers are very dangerous to health. They are combined with press factories. My amendment really arises out of this fact. Whereas the original clause says that unless a partition extending to the roof has been raised, women and children will not be allowed to work in cotton-openers, there is also a provision that the Chief Inspector may in any particular case if he desires that the height may be lower than the roof, he can exempt. I would submit for the consideration of the Honourable Minister that this is a very important matter. It affects the health. Cotton-openers emanate dust, which is liable to lead to diseases. This has been proved. So, if the proviso, "or to such height as the Inspector may in any particular case specify in writing," is deleted, it will serve the purpose, and the object of the clause will be immensely fulfilled. That is my submission and I would like to know the reactions of the Honourable Minister.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I have not personally myself seen the operations carried on in a cotton-opener, but I am told that this is a measure which is adopted as a precaution against fire, not merely dust, and hence if the partition is to such a height that danger from fire is avoided, it is not necessary that it should be a complete wall touching the roof. So if the protection against fire is covered, I do not think any other provision is necessary.

Mr. Hossain Imam: May I know what the position is in the present Act? Is it wall up to the ceiling or not?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: It is not.

Mr. Hossain Imam: Then, this is an advance.

Mr. Chairman: I take it that Mr. Sidhva does not move his amendments.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 27 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 27 was added to the Bill.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I move:

"That in part (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 28 of the Bill, for the word 'efficient', the word 'sufficient' be substituted."

Sir, my amendment turns upon the meaning of the words "efficient" and "sufficient". In part (c) we have got the word "efficient" automatic device. When a device is automatic and when the purpose is to prevent the cage from over running, efficiency comes into play. But, Sir, in part (b) the word "sufficient" is appropriate, because firstly it has got a different connotation from the word "efficient" and secondly the purpose of this device or these devices is to support the cage in the event of breakage of ropes, chains or attachments. As far as I can recollect, this particular change from "sufficient" to "efficient" was effected in the Select Committee. In the original Bill it was "sufficient". But then, at the fag-end, on the last day of the Select Committee meeting—this amendment was suggested by one of the officials. I wanted to speak on it, but we were all in a hurry to go and I did not press my point. But in the context of the circumstances described in this part (b) I think what is intended is sufficient devices. It may be a number of devices. Efficiency does not here come into play so much as in the second one. What is intended is that the devices should be adequate and sufficient in number to support the cage in the event of a breakdown. So I think it is better to retain the original word "sufficient". That is how the clause appears in the original Bill. I am therefore of the view that the word "sufficient" is far more suitable and apt than "efficient" in the context of the circumstances described in part (b). Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in part (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 28 of the Bill, for the word 'efficient', the word 'sufficient' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, this is a contest between "sufficient" and "efficient" and it is common knowledge which of the two succeeds—efficiency always succeeds. So here we do not require "sufficient" devices. The devices may be sufficient; they may not be efficient. What we require is that the devices should be "efficient" in cases of emergency. I may say, Sir, that it was after great deliberation that the word was changed from "sufficient" to "efficient" and personally, I think "efficient" is better than "sufficient".

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in part (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 28 of the Bill, for the word 'efficient', the word 'sufficient' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 28 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 28 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I beg to move:

"That part (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 29 of the Bill, be omitted."

Sir, I would like the House to go carefully into clause 29. It deals with cranes and other lifting arrangements. It lays down some essential conditions specifically in paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of sub-clause (1) which every factory must observe. In clause 2, it gives the power to the Provincial Government to make rules in addition. The essential conditions laid down in sub-clause (1) are:

"(a) every part thereof, including the working gear, whether fixed or movable, ropes and chains and anchoring and fixing appliances shall be—

(i) of good construction, sound material and adequate strength;

(ii) properly maintained, and shall be thoroughly examined by a competent person at least once in every period of twelve months, and a register shall be kept containing the prescribed particulars of every such examination.

(b) No such machinery shall be loaded beyond the safe working load which shall be plainly inscribed thereon.

(c) While any person is employed or working on or near the wheel track of a travelling crane in any place where he would be liable to be struck by the crane, effective measures shall be taken to ensure that the crane does not approach within twenty feet of that place."

Now, these conditions do not lay down any concrete details. They simply say that the machine must be of good construction, sound material and sufficient strength, it must be properly maintained and so on. I fail to understand why the Provincial Government should be given any power to exempt any factory from these specifications.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Does the honourable member refer to 29(a)?

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sub-clause (b) of sub-section (2) gives the Provincial Government power to make rules in respect of lifting machinery in factories, prescribing the requirements to be complied with in addition to those set out in sub-section (1). Now I come to the clause which I want to be deleted. It reads: "exempting from compliance with all or any of the requirements of this section.....". This means that the Provincial Government is being given the power to exempt a factory from the specifications laid down in sub-clause (1) as also any additional specifications which the Provincial Government may choose to lay down. I can well understand the Provincial Government being given power to exempt factories from complying with additional specifications laid down by the Provincial Government, but I cannot see why the Provincial Government should be given the power to prescribe any exemption in case of provisions laid down specifically under sub-clause (1). Then as regards the exemption from the additional qualifications, it is clearly laid down that additional rules may be made in respect of lifting machinery or class or description of lifting machinery in factories. The Provincial Government shall thus have the power to exempt a particular type of machine in the additional rules framed by the Government. Anyway I cannot understand why this exemption should extend to the sub-section laid down by sub-section (1). I hope the Honourable Minister will give a convincing reply to this House, and if that is so, I will be quite willing to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That part (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 29 of the Bill, be omitted."

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I could not follow Mr. Jain and I do not know if he is referring to the last clauses (a) and (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 29.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member was referring to 29 (2) (b).

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Then I support him, Sir, and if you permit me, I may also move my amendment in this connection.

Mr. Chairman: Your amendment is quite different.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Then I support Mr. Jain and I see no reason whatsoever for exempting the Provincial Government from compliance with any of the requirements of the section. I may say—and it is a very frequent occurrence—that men working on cranes often fall down and die and it is likely that this exemption power may be used. I do not think this should apply to such cases.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The clause reads thus "exempting from compliance with all or any of the requirements of this section, where in its opinion such compliance is unnecessary or impracticable". The rules might have been prescribed, but the compliance of those rules may be unnecessary. There is no use or necessity of a thing which is unnecessary and is impracticable. It may not be possible in that case to comply with those requirements, and the exemptions are only to be given in these two cases, that is, where it is unnecessary and where it is impracticable, I think, if the Provincial Governments will see that these things are necessary or practicable, they will insist that they should be observed. If they find that this compliance is not necessary and impracticable, they will not use this exemption.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: With regard to sub-section (1), clauses (a), (b) and (c), is there anything which can be said to be unnecessary? I am not talking of sub-section (2), I am talking of sub-section (1) and is there anything which can be said to be unnecessary?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: That will not be exempted.

Mr. Chairman: Is it the desire of the honourable member that I should put the amendment to the House?

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That part (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 29 of the Bill, be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in part (a) (ii) of sub-clause (1) of clause 29 of the Bill, for the words 'twelve months', the words 'two months' be substituted."

Sir, it is said in the clause that the ropes, chains and other appliances shall be thoroughly examined by a competent person at least once in every period of twelve months. My experience about dock work where cranes and other lifting machinery are used is, that very frequently accidents occur and people fall down because ropes snap. I think a much more frequent examination of the ropes should be undertaken than at present. I think twelve months is too long a period for a rope to last. I think that the examination should be more frequent. This is a simple thing and the ropes etc., can be examined very easily. If there is a provision in the Bill, the factories will take care to see that the ropes etc. are in a good condition. I hope this simple amendment would be accepted.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in part (a) (ii) of sub-clause (1) of clause 29 of the Bill, for the words 'twelve months', the words 'two months' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I am not going to accept this.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In that case, I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That Clause 29 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 29 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 30 to 33 were added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 34 of the Bill, for the word 'Provincial', the word 'Central' be substituted."

Sir, here is a question of fixing maximum weights. It is provided that the provincial Government may make rules prescribing the maximum weights which may be lifted. I think there should be uniformity in this matter throughout the country. It should not be left to one provincial Government to fix one maximum and for another provincial Government to fix another. I think it would be much better if the rules are made by the Central Government. I think the Honourable Minister would accept this simple amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 34 of the Bill, for the word 'Provincial', the word 'Central' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, it is a matter of common knowledge that a Madrasi cannot be expected to lift as much weight as a man from your province can. I think it will not be wise to fix uniform weights for all and I do not know how my honourable friend thinks it possible to fix the weights from here.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I do not agree with the argument and do think a certain degree of uniformity is desirable, still as he is not accepting the amendment I will withdraw it, Sir.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw the amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I am not moving my amendment; but I should like to say a few words on the clause, with your permission. I have tabled an amendment to this clause; but I have not moved that amendment because I think that even under the present section, as it stands, the provincial Government will have the power to exempt certain classes of persons. The section runs as follows: "No person shall be employed in any factory to lift, carry or move any load so heavy as to be likely to cause him injury". The words are sufficiently wide to give power to the provincial Government that a child or a female who is not an adult, that is she is a young person, or a woman in a delicate state of health may not be considered to be fit to lift any weight. I do hope that this provision in its working will be interpreted in a liberal spirit so that any possibility of any injury to any class of persons may be avoided.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 34 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 34 was added to the Bill.

Clause 35 was added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in part (a) of sub-clause (3) of Clause 36 of the Bill, for the words 'a competent person', the words 'the Chief Factory Inspector', be substituted."

Sir, the clause provides for a certificate in writing by a competent person. But it is not defined who is a competent person. I only wanted this to be defined and I have suggested that the competent person should be the Chief Factory Inspector.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I do not accept this.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Then I do not press this

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 36 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 36 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 37 to 43 were added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 44 of the Bill, for the words 'arrangements for sitting the words 'sitting accommodation' be substituted."

Sir, the words in the context do not really fit in with the text. Clause 44 says: in every factory suitable "arrangements for sitting shall be provided". I should think that arrangements for sitting can be made, but cannot be provided. You can provide sitting accommodation; you do not provide arrangements. Arrangement is not anything concrete and cannot be provided. Sir, the words should be, "suitable arrangements for sitting shall be made", or better, "sitting accommodation shall be provided". In these circumstances, I would suggest that either my amendment be accepted, or the other thing that I have now suggested, "arrangements for sitting shall be made", be accepted.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 44 of the Bill, for the words 'arrangements for sitting', the words 'sitting accommodation' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I cannot accept this amendment, for, what is required is not simple accommodation, but arrangements for the workers to sit. We do not want simple accommodation. If my honourable friend will visit some of the factories, he will see that the workers will have to work standing near the machine and there may not be sufficient accommodation for sitting, but some sitting arrangements may be made there, a collapsible seat may be provided so that the worker may sit for some time. What we require is not simple accommodation, but really it is seating arrangement that is required.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Then, the wording should be, "arrangements for sitting shall be made".

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: That is for the draftsmen, Sir. I do not claim any mastery over the English language.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: This cannot be left over to the draftsmen. It is not a formal thing. It has got to be accepted or rejected. For the word "provided", the word "made" should be substituted.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya: There is also the word "maintained".

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I think the clause is quite right as it is.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 44 of the Bill, for the words 'arrangements for sitting', the words 'sitting accommodation' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 44 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 44 was added to the Bill.

Clause 45 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 46 of the Bill, between the words 'that' and 'any' occurring in line two, the word 'in', be inserted."

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 46 of the Bill, between the words 'that' and 'any' occurring in line two, the word 'in', be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 46 of the Bill, for the word 'may' the word 'shall' be substituted."

This is a provision which is very important and should apply to all provinces and it should not be left to the Provincial Governments to make rules or not to make them. I think it should be made compulsory on them to make rules for the provision of canteens.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I do not accept it.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Then I will not press the amendment.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 46 of the Bill, for the words 'two hundred and', be omitted."

The point is about canteens which have come into existence recently for the purpose of improving the standards of food and providing food at a cheap rate. The Bill provides for a canteen for a factory having more than 250 workers. But now there are very many small factories coming up which employ anything between fifty and two hundred workers. If my amendment is accepted this relief will go to a large number of workers, otherwise a large portion of workers will be excluded from the benefits of this provision. There are many small factories like match factories, leather factories, motor workshops, sawmills, candle manufacturing factories, etc., to exempt whom from the benefits of this clause will be an injustice. Workers in a big factory can organise and put forth their demands and get their grievances redressed; but if the provisions of the Bill are not extended to workers in small factories, it means that Government by legislation are prohibiting the workers from putting forward their demands. In small factories the oppression of the employer is greater whereas in big factories the employer may be a little frightened by trade unions or other organisations of that type. My contention is that any welfare measure brought by Government should be comprehensive and include as many workers as possible and the benefit should not be given to one section of workers only. The benefit should reach each and every worker and the Honourable Minister should not discriminate between one worker and another. If my amendment is not accepted it would mean that the Honourable Minister is discriminating between one worker and another by legislation, which he says he has no intention of doing.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Why have the limit at fifty? Why not have ten?

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan: Let me take an illustration. We will suppose that in a particular locality there are two factories, one having more and the other less than two hundred and fifty workers. According to this Bill provision is made for a canteen for the first factory but the same benefit is denied to the second factory. The workers in the first factory can get better meals from the canteen and at a cheaper rate, and the food will be fresh, whereas their fellow workers in the other factory will be deprived of the same benefit, the result of which will be that the workers in the second factory will be discontented and will not be as enthusiastic in their work as the workers in the first factory. I will draw attention to the fact that many workers come from very distant places. If there are no facilities for canteens in their factory they will have to bring food from their homes if they find it difficult to buy food from a hotel or a teashop. And if their work begins at about 7 A.M. many of them will have to leave their homes in the early morning between 4 and 5 A.M. If the midday meal has to be carried by them to the factory they will have to keep it for hours together in a place which may not be very healthy. For these reasons I want that the scope of the Bill should be made wider, and it is on a certain principle that I want to insert the amendment. When we want the workers to work and be patriotic and see that they have responsibilities too, we must not forget that it is the duty of the Government and of the employer to provide facilities for the workers. This provision of a canteen is a right of the worker and on the other side it is the duty of the Government and the employer to establish such canteens for the workers. So I hope the Honourable the Minister will accept my amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 46 of the Bill, for the words 'two hundred and fifty', the words 'one hundred' be substituted."

The honourable member before me has argued for a limit of 50 workers. The Honourable Minister was heard to say, 'Why not 10? Probably he wanted to show that some limit had to be fixed somewhere. So the question is: Which is the proper limit? We ourselves have not mentioned the number but we want it to be a substantial figure so that a canteen can be run. I think 100 should be accepted. After all, if we want to give this benefit, it should be given to as many as possible. I think factories with a hundred employees should be able to run a canteen. I therefore implore him to accept 100 instead of 250.'

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I was just waiting whether after 50 or 100 were suggested there were going to be any further suggestions. One charge has been made against me that I have been discriminating against the workers. I do not know how discriminating will disappear if the numbers are reduced to 50 or 100. I admit that this number has not been fixed on any strict principle. It is an arbitrary figure no doubt but some consideration has been given to the fact that we should arrive at a number which would make practical the running of a canteen. It is common knowledge that in India we have so many social prejudices and in a factory where workers of different castes are working, it has been the experience of those who are in charge of running these canteens that questions of separate kitchens and dining rooms always come up.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan: I know of the example of a canteen run by Tata's which is conducted without discrimination and no one refuses to take food.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: If the honourable lady member has the patience, I may tell her that while she has the experience of one canteen, I have reports of a large number of canteens where common kitchens and dining rooms are maintained. But even those friends who are working among the workers will tell you that not more than 30 to 35 per cent. of the workers avail themselves of these canteens. So far as my knowledge goes, not more than 30 per cent. of the workers, even in the most successful canteens go and take meals in the canteens. If 30 per cent. of the workers go to the canteens and if we fix the number at 50 or 100, it means we will have to maintain the canteen for 16 persons or 32 persons. Any practical man can say that it is not economical and it is not desirable even to run a canteen only for 16 or 32 persons.

So, I say let us try. Let my friend, Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena exert his influence with the workers in factories with more than 250 workers. Let him see that in such factories canteens are started. Let him come to me next year after establishing canteens in all such factories to amend this Bill and make it applicable even to those factories where less than 250 workers are employed.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The success will depend on the quality of the meals supplied and other things!

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I wish to withdraw my amendment now that the Honourable Minister has assured me that he is prepared to amend the Bill if need be.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan: I also wish to withdraw my amendment on the assurance given by the Minister. If there are people who will not take meals from the canteens, they should make their own arrangements. Though I am withdrawing, it does not mean that the workers ought to suffer because such a social evil prevails. Since the Minister is not prepared to accept my amendment, I am prepared to withdraw it.

Mr. Chairman: There is no question of withdrawal as yet as the amendments have not yet been put to the House.

Shri Upendranath Barman (West Bengal: General): Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 46 of the Bill,—

(i) the words 'by the occupier' be omitted; and

(ii) the following be added at the end:

"and the occupier shall contribute towards costs of maintenance a monthly sum to be calculated at a reasonable rate per head of workers, employed in the factory. The contribution shall be payable every month in advance to the managing committee of the canteen or canteens, and in case of default shall be recoverable under Public Demands Recovery Act."

This clause was non-existent in the original Bill and it has been inserted by the Select Committee. I do not know whether my amendment will be carried or not. But in spite of that I think it my duty to place a few facts before Government, so that even if the amendment be not carried, the Government in its executive capacity may take these difficulties into consideration and deal with them with justice and equity.

Sir, my submission is that it will be much more difficult for the factory owner to be fully responsible for maintaining the canteen rather than if there were a managing committee composed of the manager or an officer of his and representatives of labour and any Government official that might be present to run and maintain the canteen. In that case all of them being responsible for running it, they would be able to find out any difficulties that existed. I am conversant with certain factories that exist in my district. There are more than 400 factories in the Jalpaiguri district and I say from my own experience of recent days that if we suddenly put the responsibility of running the canteen upon the occupier, it will be a very handy weapon in the hands of those who want to create dissatisfaction in plantations. Not only that but at present the owners of these gardens are charged with the duty of supplying rice to the labourers at a certain price and in certain quantity. Government itself could not supply this rice at the proper price and in sufficient quantity and this has led to disturbances last year and ultimately resulted in police firing and a number of deaths. That difficulty has got to be overcome. Both labour and the factory-owner are carrying on somehow. Once this whole responsibility of running the canteen is saddled upon the occupier he will find it almost impossible to strictly carry out his duties in the face of agitators inside the factory. Particularly I find that the Government will prescribe the food-stuffs and the charges to be made therefor. Government as a rule will certainly prescribe a uniform kind of meals in a particular area and they cannot consider the difficulties that obtain in the locality of each and every factory. For instance, there are factories which are situated near about towns. If money is spent foodstuffs can be had in these places. But in outlying areas situated inside dense jungles, where even a certain quantity of rice cannot be supplied at proper times, once the Government makes a uniform standard of food to be supplied in the canteens, it will be much more difficult in those gardens in the outlying areas than perhaps in factories situated near Calcutta or other cities.

If the law is to be as it is, if any rule is infringed by any person, particularly by the occupier, he will be prosecuted and not only fined but imprisoned also. But there is a greater menace than prosecution. Before the Government official or the court lays hands upon the occupier so far as negligence is concerned, any time the occupier fails to supply the prescribed food the labour force themselves will fall upon him. If such instances occur in scattered places it would be very difficult in those areas to find the proper type of man to run those factories even. Not only owners will be put into difficulty but even Government itself will be in many cases in difficulty. There are for instance, chinchona plantations and it so happened that in the recent past because the Superintendent or the officials could not supply a certain quantity of rice to the labourers (it is said that they were instigated by persons but whatever it might be) they went near the bungalow of the Superintendent. He was the highest executive officer so far as chinchona plantation is concerned. After one or two words, the labourers who had gone prepared assaulted him, the chief chemist and also the lady members of his family. They were severely beaten and the chief chemist had to lie in a hospital at Calcutta for three months. These are the circumstances that obtain in outlying areas. In these areas foodstuffs which are required for running a canteen are very difficult to obtain. I think it my duty to place before Government that there are cases where it would be impossible for the occupier to discharge his responsibility. They may have to be in default without any blame on their part. They are ready to give any amount of money in order to maintain a canteen but because of difficulty of supply they may be prosecuted and imprisoned. But before all these penalties fall on them their lives will be in jeopardy. I have therefore added a paragraph whereby the occupier is not allowed to go scot free. There are many cases where the labour force run their own canteens and the owner makes a contribution per head, per meal. That would be a more salutary provision from both sides. The occupier will not be scot free and it will minimise the cost of running the canteens. The labour force are now-a-days able to manage their own affairs. If they run their canteens they will know how much they can afford per meal and with the contribution made by the occupier they can manage their affairs. If the occupier runs the canteen a part of the labour force may somehow become dissatisfied and try to put the occupier in difficulty. They may not give the number of persons who are going to take their food in the canteen. In that case it would be impossible for the occupier to make the necessary arrangements and then there will be difficulty. These difficulties will occur and in these days when Government itself cannot supply even rice of sufficient quantity it would be unfair to make it a compulsory duty of the occupier to run the canteens on his own responsibility. Let all of them be responsible. Let the Government official go there and form the managing committee. Government can make the rules as to how much shall be paid by the occupier and the labour force can run the canteens. I hope that the Honourable Minister, if he is not prepared to accept the amendment, will at least bear these difficulties in mind. Otherwise the occupier will be placed in a disadvantageous position. The whole industry will suffer then and the Government itself would suffer, which is neither to the interest of the Government nor to the interest of labour.

With these words I commend my amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I have very carefully heard the speech of my friend Mr. Barman.....

Mr. Chairman: Does the honourable member want to speak on this amendment?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Then I want to know the position from the Labour Minister if he is going to accept the amendment or not.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I do not propose to accept the amendment and I do not think that any reply to the points made is necessary.

Mr. Chairman: Does the mover of the amendment wish that I should put his amendment to the House?

Shri Upendranath Barman: No, Sir.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: On this aspect of the question referred to by my honourable friend Mr. Barman I wish to say.....

Mr. Chairman: The amendment has not been put to the House as the honourable member does not want to press his amendment. Therefore, if the honourable member (Prof. Saksena) wishes to say something relating to the amendment he may do so when the clause is put to the House.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I want to speak on the clause itself.

Mr. Chairman: Does the honourable member propose to move his amendment to this clause?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I am not moving it.

Mr. Chairman: What about Mr. Barman's next amendment?

Shri Upendranath Barman: I am not moving it.

Mr. Chairman: The next amendment is that of Mr. Sidhva.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: My amendment relates to part (d) of clause 46. It runs:

"That in part (d) of sub-clause (2) of clause 46 of the Bill, after the word 'and', occurring in line one, the word 'major' be inserted."

It is a simple amendment. You will see that the constitution of a managing committee is provided in this clause. The canteen will be mostly meant for the workers and the foodstuffs and other articles which are ordinarily consumed by them will be saleable there. In my opinion the view of the majority of the workers should prevail there. After all, they are the purchasers who will be really benefitted by these canteens. If they have not got a predominant voice in its management the result will be that the occupier will fix high prices as he likes and the object of the canteen itself will be frustrated. 'Occupier' means the owner of the factory and if the owner wants to avoid this kind of facility being given he may create many hitches and nullify the very object of this clause. It may be argued that a provision has been made for making rules and that the Chief Inspector has been authorised to frame the rules. Well, Sir, if that argument is going to be accepted, then this number of two hundred and fifty also should not have been provided here and the Provincial Government might have been left to fix any number in each factory. I do feel that the Honourable Minister will bear with me when I say that if the canteen is provided for the good of the workers then their voice should dominate in its management. Otherwise it is a question of money that is to be paid by the workers for the purchase of foodstuffs. And if the prices are prohibitive, there will be always conflict between the workers and the occupier, and the result will be that eventually the object would not be served. I therefore move the amendment and I hope the Honourable Minister will accept it.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I do not accept it.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Then I do not press it.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I shall speak on the clause itself. I am sorry that the Honourable Minister has not accepted this amendment moved by my friend Mr. Sidhva. I also wanted to say something about the point to which attention was drawn by my friend Mr. Upendranath Barman. I do not agree that the occupier should not be held responsible for running the canteen. But I do feel that the omission in the clause is really contained in the second part of Mr. Barman's amendment which he has not moved. I think the canteen should be run by the factory owner and he should be required to contribute towards the cost of the canteen to some extent. That was the point which my friend Mr. Barman suggested. I think that is a point which should be considered. Otherwise the workers will suffer. The factory owner should run it and should also be required to contribute something towards the cost. When he is allowed to run it, it will be necessary to do so.

What my friend Mr. Sidhva has said only means that the management of the canteen should be entrusted to a committee where the workers shall be in a majority. I think that if our friend the Honourable Minister is serious that this should be run properly, and if he wants that it should benefit the workers, he should make the foodstuffs come within the easy reach of the workers who, he knows, are very poor. I therefore hope that, although there is no amendment before the House, he will try to modify the provision in such a manner that the foodstuffs in the canteen are purchasable by all the workers and also that the canteen is managed in such a manner that it really benefits the workers and they do not find any difficulty in getting the foodstuffs. I hope the Honourable Minister will revise his views about the amendment and say something on it.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: As we will be rising in a few minutes I would like to say a few words on this matter. I may say that Prof. Saksena's pleadings are not going to induce me to revise my views. As the provision stands, the cost of the canteens is to be borne first by the employers and it will be recouped by selling foodstuffs to the workers. Mr. Sidhva says that the employers may profiteer in that also. I think he has not read sub-clause (c) which mentions "the foodstuffs to be served therein and the charges which may be made therefor" about which rules may be made. The charges

[Shri K. C. Ngogy.]

Sir, I obtained an extension of time from the House the other day up till today, but unfortunately it has not been possible for me to find the time to continue the meetings of the Select Committee beyond half a day. In view of my physical incapacity, so to say, to handle this measure in the present circumstances, I seek the indulgence of this House, and I trust that they will grant me the extension of time that I am asking for.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the time appointed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to banking companies be further extended up to the last day of the first week of the next Budget Session."

The motion was adopted.

1. CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT (AMENDMENT) BILL

(Amendment of Sections 3, 4, 5, 6 and 10)

2. CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT (AMENDMENT) BILL

(Amendment of sections 2 and 4)

3 CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT (AMENDMENT) BILL

(Amendment of sections 10 and 11)

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, with your permission I beg to move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of Sections 3, 4, 5, 6 and 10) be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Dr. Bakshi Tek Chand, Shri Prabhudayal Himatsingka, Shrimati G. Durgabai, Begum Aizaz Rasul, Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan, Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma, Sardar Hukam Singh, Shri Ajit Prasad Jain, Shri P. Kunhiraman, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, Shri Upendranath Barman, Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya, and the Mover, with instructions to report not later than the last day of the first week of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the committee shall be five."

While moving this, I would very respectfully submit, Sir, that I beg leave of the House to combine both the motions Nos. 14 and 16—which also relate to Child Marriage Restraint and are before the House today—because all these relate to one and the same subject. The discussion that will follow will almost be the same as on Motion No. 1. If I am granted leave to move them together it will save a lot of time of the House and many honourable members who may speak on this, will not have to take the trouble of speaking again. So, if I am permitted, I may move both these motions at this stage.

Mr. Speaker: I think it is desirable that the motions on these three Bills should be consolidated. In that case, I take it that the reference of all the three Bills should be to the same Select Committee. The honourable member might include motions Nos. 14 and 16 in this motion and I will put them in the amended form to the House. In the meantime he can have his say on the motion.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, with your permission I will move motions Nos. 14 and 16 also. I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 2 and 4) and the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 10, 11 and 13) be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Dr. Bakshi Tek Chand, Shri Prabhudayal Himatsingka, Shrimati G. Durgabai, Begum Aizaz Rasul, Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan, Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma, Sardar Hukam Singh, Shri Ajit Prasad Jain, Shri P. Kunhiraman, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, Shri Upendranath Barman, Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya, and the Mover, with instructions to report not later than the last day of the first week of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Sir, I am grateful to you and the House for granting me the permission to consolidate these three motions. So far as these motions are concerned, I do not want to make any lengthy or detailed speech before the House today, because I have already explained the vital issues at the time of moving the circulation motion. But in this House which is aware of the conditions prevailing in the whole of India, I feel it necessary to recapitulate some points ab initio.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): I would request the Honourable Mover of the motion to make his speech in English so that we can know the contents of the speech of at least the Mover.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, in obedience to the wishes of our Secretary I shall deny myself the pleasure of talking in my own language and put myself to a certain strain in making my speech in English.

After the Bill was circulated we have received opinions from various parts of India. Before I proceed with the Bill, I would with your permission, Sir, say a word about the opinions received. As advised by you, Sir, on a previous occasion I shall not read portions of the opinions which have been received, because I take it that Honourable Members who have been supplied with the opinions must have gone through them. I will take this opportunity of reviewing the trend of the opinions which have been received.

In the first place the Panth Piploa people have supported this measure. In regard to Coorg there is general support but there is a discordant note by the Judicial Commissioner. Anyhow he has also accorded support to the measure in regard to Section 6. As regards Orissa there is full support to the Bill. Delhi gives full support. The Chief Commissioner, the District and Sessions Judge and others have supported the Bill fully. The same is the case with Ajmer-Merwara. The Judicial Commissioner, the District Judge, the Bar Association and everybody else have supported the measure except Mr. Harbilas Sarda, whose opinion I value very much, as he was the original author of the Sarda Act. He supports the provision about compulsory imprisonment in the Bill but opposes the other measures. As regards Madras Government and people Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar when he spoke last on the Bill made certain observations which have been taken up by those who have given their opinions and they have said ditto, so that if I quote Mr. Ayyangar's opinions expressed on that day I will be giving the opinions of the Madras gentlemen. Mr. Ayyangar was not opposed to the Bill even then and he said that in Madras there were no child marriages. My reply was that in that case nobody would be adversely affected. In regard to Madras there are about 6 or 7 opinions in support and 10 against. The Assam Government opinion is not very helpful either way, because they regard all legislation in this regard as useless. Bihar gives general support. C.P. supports the Bill. In Bombay 23 opinions are in support and about 6 or 7 against. The U.P. support has been extensive. East Punjab has thoroughly supported it. With this support I am bound to submit that the House should refer this Bill and the other Bills to the Select Committee.

What I maintain is that this is not a case in which any support is required. If there are child marriages in the country it is the duty of this Government and this House to see that they are abolished. If such marriages are less in number on account of the operation of the Sarda Act I would be very happy and the House should also be happy. But unfortunately that is not my view. In my opinion in regard to cities there is an improvement but in regard to backward communities and the rural areas there has been no rise in the marriageable age and even now marriages of children are performed and betrothals take place even before a child is born. Those who look at things superficially may feel that there is no need for such a Bill but I claim to have roamed all over the country for 10 months as a member of the Age of Consent Committee in 1929 and since then also I have been going through the country with my eyes open and I know as a matter of fact that there is a great deal of child marriage in the country. And it is idle to suggest that child marriage is not to be found any more in this country. Even if that were so, I would still think that there is room for a Bill like this. But in my humble opinion the evil is too great to be ignored. Since you have allowed me, Sir, to move the two other Bills also, if all the three Bills are taken together I claim that all that the law can do is being attempted to be done by these three Bills in regard to the stoppage of child marriage.

At the last time when this Bill was being considered for circulation Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar told us in his criticism of the Bill that the Bill should be made cognizable. And he was perfectly right. There were other opinions also. In 1929 there was a mass of opinion that this Bill should be made cognizable. At that time, in 1928, that was the first measure and the country was not ripe for that kind of change. After eighteen years when the social consciousness of the country has been roused to a great extent it is high time we took courage in both our hands and made the offence cognizable. I know that even now the police has not improved, but at the same time I know that the police is improving. And I know that at the helm of affairs there is a national government. It should look to the evils, if any, arising out of the offence being made cognizable. Unless the offence is made cognizable it is very doubtful if this attempt of ours shall succeed in stopping early marriage.

The real gravamen of the evil in regard to child marriages is that they bring about conditions in which pre-puberty consummation as well as post-puberty consummation before the girl reaches the age of sixteen do take place. It is impossible to stop the two evils if the marriages are allowed to go on as they are now going on. Even if the Sarda Act is successful in its operation and the age is fourteen, my humble submission is that it is most difficult to stop these two evils—the evil of pre-puberty consummation and the evil of post-puberty consummation before the age of sixteen. These are the main evils and the proper remedy for these evils is to raise the age of marriage from fourteen to fifteen and the age of consent from thirteen to fifteen. There is another Bill before the House today which is the subject of my second motion on this subject and which deals with the age of consent. I am not however going to deal with that Bill today because it has already been circulated and the opinions have not been received. But what I am submitting is that even that Bill will not be successful unless we raise the marriageable age. If the age of marriage is raised to fifteen, then the provisions of the other Bill also will be quite successful. In the second Bill I am providing for another contingency, namely that persons above the age of forty-five should not be allowed to marry young girls below the age of eighteen. This is a new provision and I do not know what the reactions in the country about this provision will be and how different persons think about it, but I have given good thought to the question and I think it is a very necessary reform. In regard to procedure also the third Bill, which is the subject matter of motion No. 16, deals with the question. Clause 3 of the proposed Bill provides for bonds and clause 4 deals with the registration of marriages. I do not want to deal with these two aspects of the question in very great detail because these two provisions have been before the country for the last eighteen years. The Age of Consent Committee recommended these provisions. The Report of the Age of Consent Committee was quite unanimous in regard to these two points. They submitted to the Government that these provisions should be enacted, but for the last seventeen years no heed has been paid to these provisions and I have therefore brought them before this House in that Bill. When they go to the Select Committee the Select Committee will have enough time to consider these provisions and pronounce upon their merits. At present the need for these Bills is quite apparent and the whole country, as I have shown to the House from the opinions received, is behind these two measures.

I know that the Hindu Code is also coming and that there are certain provisions which are to a certain extent common. But these Bills are All-India measures. They apply equally to all communities, to Hindus, Muslims, Christians and all others. And I may inform the House that the evil of early marriage or child marriage is not prevalent only among the Hindu community. Among Muslims, particularly in Bengal and other places, the evil was equally great. But the unfortunate part of the whole affair is that those entrusted with the destinies of this country did not realize, and do not realize, the enormity of the evil. I remember when the Committee went to Assam and when we examined Sir Mahomed Sa'adullah in the matter he did not know much about the evil. He said that the Muslims do not want it because there is no child marriage among Muslims. When we brought to his attention the fact that among the Muslims the evil was as great as among Hindus in Bengal according to the evidence before us, he changed his opinion. Similarly, as I had occasion to observe before, our best leaders even did not know about the enormity of the evil before the Committee roamed over the country and found that the vitals of the nation were being eaten into by this bad custom. Now, since the Sarda Act has been before the country since the last seventeen years we have seen that the country is reconciled to the fact that child marriage should not be there. There has been no great opposition. Now that the rubicon has been crossed there is no point in keeping fourteen as the age. When fourteen was fixed, by the Age of Consent Committee and the House accepted it, it was as a compromise measure. Those who wanted progress wanted sixteen whereas those who wanted less were of the opinion that twelve should be the proper age so that the shastras would also not be violated. So fourteen was a compromise age. Fourteen having been accepted there is good reason to think that now we should proceed to the right age according to medical evidence. And medical evidence is almost unanimous on this point. Maternity is not safe before the age of sixteen. And if maternity is not safe before sixteen no marriage should be allowed before the girl attains the full age of fifteen. That is the logical conclusion. Now, Sir, I would not care for public agitation or for anything in the world when from the physical and physiological point of view, the proposition is absolute and unanimous that in the case of girls below the full age of fifteen years no consummation should be allowed.

I need not refer to the effects which I foresee if these three measures are adopted by the House. I know that in regard to education our girls shall get better opportunities; in regard to physique I have not the least doubt that we shall improve. It is said that our labourer does not stand in comparison with the labourer of other countries. And our labourer is not paid well. Our professors, our legislators and all persons living in India are regarded as, in a measure, inferior to the nationals of other countries. Why? Because many of us are the children of child mothers. When a girl gives birth to a child at the age of fifteen, certainly the child will not be so healthy as when the mother is, say, eighteen years of age. I should say that the proper age for motherhood is eighteen and the safe age for motherhood is sixteen. In regard to this, the demands of social justice—ordinary justice—are that we should not be cruel to our own girls.

I for one am very much enamoured of this kind of social justice and I wish that so far as girls are concerned, we concede this justice to them. When a girl is below 18 and she is not even major enough to part away with any part of her property, she should not be dealt with in such a manner that another person who is in charge of the girl should behave in regard to her person as if she were a chattel. Do we not know that many people, for filthy lucre, for social gain and for many other reasons, marry their girls before they attain the age of 18? If the girls attain the age of 18 then they shall be able to choose for themselves, though full discretion will not still be there. But when the girl is below 18 years she should not be dealt with by a guardian in this manner that her wishes are not consulted; if the marriageable age of a girl rises, I have no doubt that the girl will be consulted before her marriage, and therefore some sort of social justice will be done to the girls.

Now, in regard to the provision about imprisonment, there has been a general complaint that in regard to Section 3 the provision should not be changed because many of the opinions say that the boy of 18 should not be sent to jail. I quite agree. As a matter of fact, the proposed amendment was not that the courts are bound to send the boy to jail—only a discretion was given because I wanted that the boy should be armed with powers to resist overtures on behalf of the parents to marry him. All the same, in a matter like this I would not insist and I would readily agree if the Select Committee agrees that Section 3 need not be changed. What I want is that in regard to Sections 4, 5 and 6 the punishment should be compulsory. We know that according to the provisions of section 87 of the Indian Penal Code, no person can be allowed to inflict injury on another even in any small measure. The amount of injury which child marriage involves is of such an enormous nature, though it is not so visible to an ordinary eye, that under ordinary canons of justice no person should be allowed to behave towards his own daughter in such a manner that he inflicts injury while the recipient of the injury does not know how much injury has been received.

I do not want to dilate very much upon this Bill as I have already taken too much of the time of the House before. I would only submit that as a matter of fact, according to my view, this reform is very necessary and should at once be effected, and our National Government should lose no time in seeing that effect is given to it after the law is passed in regard to the stoppage of child marriages.

It has been urged in many quarters—and I for one do not doubt the efficacy of the argument—that education, social reform and all these measures should be resorted to so that in the public mind the enormity of the evil may be realised. I am not opposed to them, but I know that so far as social reforms are concerned we shall have to wait till doomsday if we want to see results achieved. The first meeting in regard to this child marriage question was held in 1830 and for the last 17 years the Sarda Act has been before the country, and we know the results. My submission is that it is absolutely necessary today that there should be an Act and the Government should also do propaganda and adopt measures to bring home to every person the evils of the custom of child marriage. We have been doing our duty, but we know at the same time that there are other forces which are very strong and which will not allow us to succeed if the arm of the law is not with us. Therefore, with regard to all these three Bills I would beg of you and the House to agree to the motion that I have made.

Mr. Speaker: Instead of putting the three motions separately I am thinking of combining the motions into one.

Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, (Amendment of Sections 3, 4, 5, 6 and 10), the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, (Amendment of Sections 2 and 4), and the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, (Amendment of Sections 10, 11 and 13), be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Dr. Bakshi Tek Chand, Shri Prabhudayal Himatsingka, Shrimati G. Durgabai, Begum Aizaz Rasul, Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan, Shri M. Ananthasayam, Ayyangar, Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma, Sardar Hukam Singh, Shri Ajit Prasad Jain, Shri P. Kunhiraman, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, Shri Upendranath Barman, Dr. B. Patitabli Sitaramayya, and the Mover, with instructions to report not later than the last day of the first week of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, I rise to support the general principles of the Bill. I should however point out that the opinions which have been received in support of the Bill, are generally from the educated classes; the backward classes who, as pointed out by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava in his speech, require the greatest amount of protection in this respect, are not behind this opinion. By that I do not wish to suggest that no law should be passed to affect them. I know that amongst the backward classes there is a vicious practice of marrying their girls rather too early. I merely suggest that with respect to these classes, the age should not be so raised as to be much above the usual age at which they are married. I merely suggest this for the consideration of the Select Committee, that if we insist upon too high a standard in the case of backward people who form the bulk of the people, there would be the danger of wholesale violations of the law by a kind of general agreement among the backward classes in the villages. I merely submit this as a precaution, so that the law may not be very much against the general sentiments and the general practices in the villages. I should submit that we should proceed in such cases rather in a statesmanlike manner and with due caution.

[Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad]

I submit that the punishment in those cases should not be very drastic. Sir, child-marriage is due to age-long prejudice which is deplorable, which we are fighting against. It is not the ordinary crime, as we understand it, involving moral turpitude as is commonly understood. It is rather a social evil which is almost a part of the social life amongst the backward classes that we are fighting against. The offences should not, therefore, be punished very severely; in fact, lenient punishment is all that is called for. Again, the offences, to my mind, should not be made cognisable because that would introduce the police into the scene and this will lead to abuses.

Then, again, poor working girls who are almost friendless have got to go about seeking livelihood. It would perhaps be a little risky on our part to leave them alone without the protection of a husband. Under these circumstances, the age with regard particularly to the backward classes should be carefully considered and adjusted so as not to go much against the widespread sentiments among the very classes whom we want to protect. While making these observations, I do not in the least go against the Bill but rather would ask the Select Committee to go fully ahead, but remembering that the social evil which we desire to eradicate, exists on a very large scale in this country. The success of the law would depend upon the co-operation it evokes among the people whom it intends to benefit and should not therefore appear unduly harsh or coercive. With these few words, I hope the Select Committee which is composed of some of the ablest members of the House would take into consideration these matters and adopt such measures as, to them, would seem fit and proper.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): Sir, I have no doubt that the House is grateful—and by the House I mean particularly the female section of this House—to the industry and labour which my Honourable friend the Mover of this Bill has always devoted to the improvement of the social condition, particularly the protection of female interests. But, I am afraid that certain provisions of this Bill are not quite clear to me and when I read them with certain other provisions of legislative measures which my Honourable friend is seeking to introduce or has introduced, I confess his attitude becomes inexplicable to me. For instance, Sir, take this demand of making the offence a cognisable one. The legislators of the days of the Sarda Act fully realised the fact that if this offence is made cognisable, then society would become a prey to police oppression and intimidation. My Honourable friend does not deny that the Police is still in the same state as before, notwithstanding the fact that our Honourable and revered leader, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel is in charge of it. My Honourable friend, in his Statement of Objects and Reasons in the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure has said:

"Many accused persons abscond for fear of Police apprehension or torture and would gladly stand a trial and vindicate themselves before a Court of law if they were assured they will not be unnecessarily remanded to Police custody..."

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: May I submit for the consideration of the Speaker that the honourable member is referring to the objects and reasons for another Bill?

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Yes, I am referring to another Bill. That is the opinion which the Honourable Member entertains so far as Police is concerned and he cannot have one opinion about Police in respect of one Bill and another opinion about Police in respect of another Bill. He goes on:

"The present Police methods of investigation and interrogation from accused are in many places anything but desirable and it is notorious that confessions made by accused while in Police custody are but seldom stuck to in courts. It is not unheard of that the Police abuse the provisions of Law with regard to bail even in bailable cases. Many honest and respectable persons would prefer ignobly flying away from justice rather than subject themselves to the ignominy and indignity of police arrest and custody. When it is remembered that a very large percentage of persons prosecuted is discharged or acquitted by courts and malicious prosecutions and false implications by enemies in bailable and non-bailable offences are not rare and under the law as at present interpreted by some courts the ordeal of Police custody is necessary to be undergone by every accused howmuchsoever innocent. The need of a change in the Law or to get the doubt at rest in this regard becomes imperatively necessary."

So that is his opinion about the Police, and for all kinds of offences—bailable or non-bailable, heinous or non-heinous,—my Honourable friend suggests that instead of placing any man in the rigidity of custody, he should be allowed to go to the court and make an application for bail. If that is so with regard to bailable offences, why does he want that these social offences should be made cognisable? Why should he expose these people who sometimes believe erroneously or otherwise that it is a part of their religion to give their daughters in marriage before they attain puberty? Why should he expose these persons of high position to the tender mercy of the Police, in spite of the fact that he has not done so in the case of more heinous offences? This is a demand which I do not understand. I would rather have wished him to make it a non-cognisable one, but make it a non-bailable one, because even in non-bailable cases, except where the offence is punishable by capital sentence, bail is generally allowed and in all cases where the punishment involved is not a capital sentence, it may be necessary to make it a non-bailable one. The Magistrate should have the discretion not to grant bail in cases where he has definite information that a marriage of an objectionable kind is going to take place. If the accused is arrested and if the Magistrate has the discretion to refuse him bail, that would be a greater service for prevention of objectionable marriages. If, for instance, a Magistrate has reliable information that a marriage which is infringing the Sarda Act is going to be celebrated on such and such a day he may issue a warrant and arrest him; he must have discretion not to grant bail. In that case it will be much better to make the case a cognisable one than to expose the man to police custody. I hope, Sir, the Honourable Mover will take this aspect of the matter into consideration.

Then, I do not understand why he has introduced this provision of 562 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. That section enjoins the court to release a man without any punishment provided he gives a security to see that such offence will not be committed again.

An Honourable Member: It is something like the first offence being condoned.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: That is to say, the honourable member does not go to the length of punishing an offender under this clause.

Then, Sir, he has also under clause 3 prescribed the execution of bonds under certain circumstances even after the celebration of marriage. I submit, Sir, that this is an inhuman and impossible condition which he wants to retain. He has himself admitted it in the Statement of Objects and Reasons where he has been more explicit than necessary and taken into consideration the human weakness.

In paragraph 3 of the Statement of Objects and Reasons, he says:

"The provision of bonds will at once serve as a preventive check upon commission of crime of marital misbehaviour and as a serious deterrent for offences under the Child Marriage Restraint Act. These provisions were recommended by the Age of Consent Committee and proceeded on the lines of the preventive sections of the Code of Criminal procedure."

It is common experience that it is impossible to prevent the commission of the crime of marital misbehaviour and to punish the offenders if the husband and the child-wife are allowed to cohabit with each other. It is as idle to expect that fire will not burn or air would not dry as to expect that crime will not be committed if the husband and the child-wife are allowed to be closetted in the bed chamber. Ascetism cannot be enforced by legislation and the creation of conditions in which crime cannot be committed is the only solution of the difficult problem.

Moreover an attempt to punish the offenders and abettors of the crime of marital misbehaviour will be much more irksome and annoying to the public than the attempt to prevent the crime from being committed through the instrumentality of the provision of bonds."

This is his opinion, but what is the legislative provision he has laid down? He says:

"Whenever any person accused of an offence under sections 3, 4 and 6 of the Act is convicted and the Court is of opinion that consummation of marriage or cohabitation with the wife before the completion of the statutory age of consent in married life is not unlikely, the Court may order him to execute a bond with or without sureties for a sum proportionate to his means."

What is the sentence prescribed? Imprisonment for three months. The man has already married and he is asked to give a bond with or without sureties and he is merely to give in writing that he will not visit his wife; otherwise, he is sent to jail. Such a promise can be very promptly given and such a promise which is not backed by any forfeiture of security can be easily infringed, will never be kept. I do not think a man of much older age can give a promise of this kind. Otherwise, there would not have been any necessity of introducing birth control in India. I think that this is an absolutely nugatory provision. Then he says:

"The bond to be executed shall bind the person convicted under section 3 or 4 of the Act to abstain from consummating the marriage or cohabiting with the wife till she completes the statutory age of consent in married life, and the person convicted under section 6 to be responsible for such abstinence by his son or ward as the case may be, and to that end impose such conditions as the Court considers suitable for making provision for separate living, proper custody and maintenance of the wife."

The parent will be proceeded against if he does not provide for a separate bed room for his son, separate bed room for his daughter-in-law and if after having done that, he has to see that they do not mix; otherwise he would be liable for forfeiture of the security bond. May I ask the honourable mover of this Bill, will that be a sufficient check, the mere giving of a bond by a parent that their wards, will not mix with each other, will that be a sufficient prevention against the breach of this law which he wants to impose? I submit, Sir, these are merely theoretical precautions which the honourable member wants to make and that it will surely defeat the very object for which it is intended. On the other hand the remedy is to introduce social measures. In our part of the country, there is a strict injunction that after the marriage, whatever may be the age of the girl or the boy, they cannot mix with each other until a second ceremony is performed after the attainment of puberty and that acts as a sufficient check and no amount of legislation which you can introduce can help you in keeping the man or the boy away from the girl whom he has married and in these days the boys and girls are married as a result of previous negotiations between themselves. When it is so, it is very difficult to estrange them from coming around together and it is very cruel to punish the old parents for this breach of law by their children.

I would submit, Sir, in the part of the bill which seeks to amend sections 10 and 11, the offence should not be made cognizable but it may be made non-bailable. The whole matter of giving bail may be left to the discretion of the Magistrate and these nugatory clauses should be done away with. It is meaningless and will only lead to subterfuge and dishonesty and nothing else.

Sir, as regards the age of consent, I submit that the proposition which my honourable friend has laid down is more mathematical than realistic. He has himself given the reasons why he has put down that when a man attains the age of 45 years, he should not marry a girl who is less than 18 years old. I do not know, Sir, on what authority of medical men or of public health he has introduced this particular barrier? I will just invite the honourable members of this House to refer to the reasons which he has given and find out whether there is any substance in it. I want to ask the honourable members of this house whether they endorse the views which he had expressed in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. He says:

"The Bill further seeks to afford protection to young girls under eighteen against ill-matched marriages, say with males over the age of 45 years usually widowers (Why he is particularly hard against widowers, I don't know) with children perhaps older than or equally old as these young girls.

Not unoften greedy and indiscreet parents and guardians barter away the future happiness of their daughters and wards for filthy lucre or other alluring prospects by marrying them with elderly people who have one foot in the grave while the girls are, owing to their minority, unable to resist and safeguard their interests. Many cases have come to courts in which the lust of impatient husbands had ruined the physique of the young girls or caused irreparable damage to their health. It is common experience that such marriages are generally attended with very unhappy consequences and spread morbidity, immorality and misery all round.

The relative ages and consequent outlook on life of the couple being so desperate and dissonant the period of married life is short and seldom happy. The young girl in her early teens does not respond alertly to the violent bursting forth passion of the impatient and elderly husband whereas in later life the dotard husband is far too sluggish and incapable to fully reciprocate and satisfy the yearnings and promptings of the youthful and fully grown woman....."

Wherefrom does he get all this opinion, Sir? Whether he has any authority, medical or otherwise on which he relies or whether he speaks from any personal experience, I am not aware. By personal experience, I do not mean the experience of himself, but by seeing the examples of other people.

"... In a fairly large number of cases the young wife becomes a widow after enjoying a short span of married life even before she has grown to full womanhood. The condition of widows in communities which prohibit remarriage is extremely deplorable and there is nothing but unredeemed misery and trouble in store for such long lived widows. In other communities also the fate of the widow is full of great hardships and misfortunes."

He is not relying on these arguments, now he comes to the real argument.

"Anyhow, the normal happy matrimonial felicity and companionship, characteristic of suitable matches, which invest married life with enchantment and mutual devotion and make it worth living are wanting in such marriages which should be discouraged and interdicted. It is really cruel and unjust to mar for good the future well-being of a young girl at a time when she is dependent and unable to defend her own interests, and other considerations apart, the barest justice demands that young girls be protected against social tyranny of such reprehensible type."

I hope there is really such thing as an enchanted married life. Those who have recently married will be able to tell us from their experience if any such enchanted life exists and whether marriage really brings enchantment or not. According to my honourable friend, a really enchanted married life can only take place if the girl is above 18 years or above 16 years of age and the man is under 45 years. I leave it to the Honourable members to judge for themselves if they have had an enchanted married life under those conditions or even still they are having an enchanted married life under different ages. My point is this. I do not want to deter my honourable friend for one moment in his zeal for social reforms; but I would ask him not to be led away by sentiments like this: the dotard old husband, grown up young woman unable to get satisfaction, and all that kind of argument. That sort of argument should not be used to support a legislative measure of this kind, because, it will bring distrust and unhappiness in many families which are otherwise happy. What will happen if a woman were to think that her husband is more than 45 years of age and therefore her enchanted married life is at an end, when we know and I think several Members in the Government Benches also know that an enchanted married life is possible even under different age conditions. At this moment, to bring legislation of this kind and to tell them that there cannot be an enchanted married life because the age is such and such is only to bring unhappiness and misery to families otherwise happy.

श्री राम साहाय : स्पीकर महोदय, यह तीनों बिल जो अभी हाउस के सामने हैं और जो सिलेक्ट कमेटी में जाने के लिए हैं, मैं इन तीनों बिलों की तारीफ करता हूँ और मैं यह अर्ज करूँगा कि जो पहला ऐक्ट बना हुआ है उस पर कोई अमल नहीं हो पा रहा है और तमाम ऐसे जुर्म होते जा रहे हैं और छोटी उम्र में बराबर शादियाँ की जा रही हैं। खासकर ग्रामीण जनता को उससे कोई भी फायदा नहीं पहुँचा। वह अपने पुराने उसूलों के मुताबिक उसी तरह से छोटी छोटी उम्र में शादियाँ करते हैं। मैं समझता हूँ कि जब तक यह जुर्म काबिल दस्तअन्दाजी पुलिस न होंगे तब तक इस छोटी उम्र की शादियों की रोक किसी तरह पर नहीं हो सकती। आजकल पुलिस के बढ़ते हुए करप्शन (Corruption) को देखते हुए इस बात में डर मालूम होता है कि इस तरह के जरायम का पुलिस के हवाले कर दिया जाय, लेकिन जहाँ हमारी जान और माल हर तरह से पुलिस के हाथों में सौंपी हुई है वहाँ कोई बजह नहीं है कि इस किस्म के जरायम को भी पुलिस के सुपुर्द क्यों न कर दिया जाय और उनको काबिल दस्तअन्दाजी पुलिस करार दिया जाय। मैं समझता हूँ कि इन जरायम की रोक उसी वक्त होगा जब यह काबिल दस्तअन्दाजी पुलिस करार दिये जाये, एक बिल में ऐसा चाहा गया है कि उम्र १४ से १५ साल और १८ से २१ साल कर दी जाय, मैं समझता हूँ कि यह भी मौजूद हालत में मुनासिब है क्योंकि वैसे भी हर एक कम्युनिटी (Community) में शादी की उम्र कुछ न कुछ बढ़ ही गयी है। इस तरह से अगर कायदे से रोक कर दी जाय तो उसमें कोई बुराई नहीं है। बाकी जो ऐतराजात अभी मिस्टर चौधरी ने हाउस के सामने रखे हैं, मैं समझता हूँ उनपर सिलेक्ट कमेटी अच्छी तरह गौर कर सकेगी। यह उन माइनर डिटेल्स (minor details) में जाने की जरूरत नहीं है। बहालत मौजूदा यह तीनों बिल इस काबिल है कि यह सिलेक्ट कमेटी के सुपुर्द कर दिये जाये।

Shri Ram Sahai (Gwalior State): Mr. Speaker, Sir, while supporting these three Bills which are just now before the House for reference to the Select Committee, I would like to point out that the existing Act has become a dead letter—all such crimes are being perpetrated and early marriages are continually performed. Particularly the people in the rural areas have not been benefited by this. They are still performing early marriages according to their old customs and traditions. I feel that unless these offences are made cognizable, early marriages cannot be stopped in any other way. Considering the present-day increasing corruption in the police, it is feared that such offences should be brought within the cognizance of the police. But when our life and property have been solely left in the hands of the police, there is no reason why such offences should not be made cognizable. I think these offences can be prevented only when they are made cognizable. The object of one of the Bills is to raise the age from 14 to 15 years and from 18 to 20 years. I feel that this is quite appropriate in the present circumstances because in every community the age of marriage has already been raised to some extent. There will be no harm if this is raised according to law. Further, I think that the Select Committee will carefully consider the objections raised by Mr. Chaudhuri. It is no use going into minor details here. Under the present conditions, these Bills may be referred to the Select Committee.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister for Law): Sir, I accept the motion referring these Bills to the Select Committee. In doing so, I must safeguard my position. I felt bound to accept the motion because last time when the Bills were on the agenda, I made a promise to my honourable friend Pandit Bhargava that I would bring in a Government Bill myself to cover the various points raised by him in the Bills which he had sponsored. Unfortunately, owing to other preoccupations, it was not possible for me to give effect to the promise which I had made. In the circumstances, I felt that I should not stand in the way of his making the motion which he has made.

At the same time, I must say that while I appreciate the objects and motives which have led him to bring these Bills before the House, I do not at all accept either the means or the methods which he has suggested in the various Bills to bring about the result. In fact, I cannot help saying that the second Bill sponsored by him is utterly misconceived and fails altogether to realise the reasons why the Legislature when it first enacted this measure, declined to make the offence cognisable. He does not realise that the foundation for the administration of this Act is a valid, proper and accurate register of births and deaths. It is because the parties may get their children married without fully realising that they are below the age that the Legislature did not make this offence cognisable. That fact unfortunately still remains. However, as I told my honourable friend Pandit Bhargava, I had thought of some other methods of bringing about similar, if not the same, results. For that purpose, as I said, I must safeguard my position by saying that while I accept the motion for referring these Bills to Select Committee I reserve to myself the entire liberty of changing the Bills altogether, not having three Bills but having probably one single Bill covering all the points. It is only on that understanding and that expression of view before this House openly that I accept this motion.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, lest it should be said that we may not be entitled to make some radical changes in the Select Committee I am trying to place my views before the House at this moment. I agree with my Honourable friend the Law Minister that so far as procedure and making the offence cognisable are concerned, I am not much in favour of this procedure or making it cognisable. I am afraid making it cognisable would place in the hands of the police or other authorities a very valuable weapon of harassment even in proper cases. No doubt the complaint has to be laid before the District Magistrate and a preliminary inquiry is also to be held; but all the same whether it ought to be cognisable is a matter which may be considered. It should not be taken as a principle which this House has accepted at this stage.

As regards the principle the first Bill extends the period of childhood from 14 to 15 in the case of a girl and 18 to 20 in the case of a boy. I agree so far as that is concerned. The objection to the Sarda Act originally was that 12 or 13 was the age of puberty and under the Shastras no girl should be married after that age. On the other side it was argued that it might lead to a better progeny. I do not see any serious objection to raising the marriageable age from 14 to 15. In my part of the country people who were originally under the impression that girls must be married before the age of puberty are now reconciled to the higher age. Therefore in high class families girls are not married just after 14 but long after they are 16 or 18. My fear is the other way; we may develop a body or regiment of spinsters in this country. Till now there was not that risk. Everybody felt it was his duty to perform pre-puberty marriage and therefore he would beg or borrow or steal or sell himself to get his girl married. Today that religious sanction has gone. Therefore if a girl is married after 14 she can remain till a good husband comes. A girl who has passed the B.A. wishes to pass the M.A. also and unfortunately

[Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar]

English education has a market value today. And even an educated, a cultured man says, "I do not know, ask my mother" about the terms. And she says, "I want a small pot of gold and just ten acres of land out of your hundred acres, and a bracelet, and nothing else" and so on. Each member of the family goes on adding to it. For various reasons, because the girl expects an I.C.S. husband and therefore cannot ultimately marry, and the boy goes on demanding more and more money, poor people are not getting married. Formerly there were not many spinsters in the country but now they are coming into existence, and raising the marriageable age from 14 to 15 is not going to make any change. But among the lower classes marriage before 15 is prevalent. To make the provisions stringent a kind of imprisonment may be a better punishment, and that is the object of the Bill. Instead of making imprisonment optional the Bill seeks to make it compulsory and raise it from one month to three months. The richer man can easily pay the thousand rupees fine; he adds it to the marriage expenses and pays it to the State while giving Rs. 2 to the priest. A high class man is afraid of going to jail while a thousand rupees fine may be nothing for him. A boy who marries between 18 and 21 should undergo compulsory imprisonment and imprisonment is included in the terms of punishment. Hitherto it was not obligatory to impose punishment nor was imprisonment contemplated as a punishment. It is a proper addition to the section under the Bill.

I do not agree with the amendment sought to be made in section 10 of the original Act which makes a preliminary inquiry obligatory before further steps are taken. The Mover wants to do away with this wholesome provision by substituting "may" for "shall". I do not agree with it and we may consider whether we should alter it.

Then I come to the second Bill. There is a disparity of age between 45 and 18. A person of 45 is not prevented from marrying a young woman. We are in favour of getting marriages celebrated, otherwise creation itself will go to the wall. So people must get married. But the difficulty is this.

There is no advantage in quoting the analogy of some of our friends. Forty-five years and over is different. Eighteen years is the age limit prescribed under the original recommendation of the Committee which went round before the Sarda Act was passed in 1929. My friend, Mr. Bhargava, has the idea of raising the age from 15 to 18 in the case of girls. If a man wants to marry for the second time or for the first time in his 45th year of his life, that marriage with a girl of 18 will be unhappy. He must have some woman nearer his age.

Some time ago I heard that such a Bill was introduced in the Legislative Assembly of Bombay or the Central Provinces. But the disparity in the ages between husband and wife should not be more than 15 years.

Therefore this is a very wholesome provision and I welcome it.

Then about making it cognizable. I am objecting to that. I hope my honourable friend, Mr. Bhargava, will be a little flexible in the Select Committee and try to agree to make this workable and not make it a harassment while being anxious to introduce this reform. I do not want this to be a cause of trouble and power to harass left in the hands of the police.

I agree with the objects in the Bill and as the Honourable the Law Minister has said we must have freedom to modify them so as to make all the Bills useful and thereby bring about a useful addition or improvement to the existing law.

I support the motion for reference to the Select Committee.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Sir, when I look at these measures I am persuaded to welcome them and to thank and also congratulate my honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava. The measures are so very good but when I look at the circumstances obtaining in the country I am greatly discouraged. The Sarda Act has been on the statute book for so many years but no good result has come out of it. Before the Act was passed almost all the children in the country were married. I do not know what to do in this House or in the country. We are passing measures after measures but so far as the real good of the people is concerned there is nothing. Two things are most essential—Education of the masses and purification of the governmental machinery. Unless these two things are fully assured no measure will do any good to society.

It has been said that when a measure is sent to the Select Committee the House is committed to the principles of the Bill. There was a discussion on this point in one of the select Committees meeting in which I was also a member. The House is committed no doubt but not to every particular item of the Bill but only to the general principle that there is a condition in society which ought to be reformed. Prevention is better than cure. I would therefore request the members of the Select Committee to so amend the Bills as to make such marriages impossible, so that child marriages cannot take place. Supposing such undesirable marriages take place then provision should be made so that each and every such case may be brought before the court and the court should declare them invalid for all time to come. Unless we do something like that I do not think this measure will be of any use. If such a marriage takes place the bridegroom or anyone belonging to his party will be sent to jail for three months and as Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar said, they will say "Let the marriage take place but after three months we shall be all right." This will not do. The first thing is that we should see that we can prevent such marriages.

As regards marriage between a man above 45 and a girl under 18 I welcome the measure in this regard. This kind of marriage should not take place. But the question is how to prevent it. The marriage has taken place and the matter has been brought before a court. The girl will be asked to say that she is above 18 and the man will be asked to say that he is below 45. The margin is so very small that it will be difficult to deal with such cases. There are so many loopholes. All of us in this House and outside should be anxious to educate the masses and to purify the administration. I think Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava said that there has been some improvement in the police department. I do not know how he had the courage to say it. I wish there had been some purification in the police department. Besides passing such Bills we should be anxious to see that good education is given to the people in the country, so that society may be sufficiently educated and the first and most important thing is to see that there is purity in the administration of the government. With these words, Sir, I again support the measure.

Shrimati Renuka Ray (West Bengal: General): Mr. Speaker, in as much as the three Bills that my honourable friend has brought forward try to make more effective the provisions of the Child Marriage Restraint Act I fully support them. I think all those who have worked for social reform in this country are well aware of the very great difficulties they have encountered in getting the Child Marriage Act as it stands now to be effective in the country. I have seen the opinions that have come from the south, about which my honourable friend Mr. Bhargava mentioned. I can only say that the South must be particularly fortunate if even in the villages child marriages have disappeared.

[Shrimati Renuka Ray]

I am afraid I cannot claim that that is so in my Province or in any of the neighbouring Provinces to the villages of which I have been. I should like to say that when we went to Noakhali and Tipperah after the disturbances there, we were in fact shocked to find the tremendous number of child marriages that took place. We went there for rehabilitation work, but found that we had to do social reform work also in those places, to prevent children from getting married.

One of the difficulties which we have encountered right through the years is that the infringement of the act is not a cognizable offence. There are other difficulties. For instance there are many people, who are genuinely ignorant of the age of their sons and daughters. It is not always that they go against the law deliberately. In villages you ask the age of a girl who can't be more than nine or ten and you will be told 'Oh, she is sixteen'. In the same manner if you ask a woman's age, she would look fortyfive but she would say that she is twentyfive. These things do occur. I think that one of the most essential provisions is that we must have compulsory registration of births and of marriages to make this Act effective.

My honourable friend Pandit Bhargava said that this is a measure which will bring in social justice for women. I think that he is being rather over-ambitious. It is quite true that if we can make the operation of the Child Marriage Restraint Act effective it will protect girls, and prevent many grievous abuses but at the same time, the greatest measure of reform that it will bring about is that it will help towards bringing in a healthy, virile and a strong nation. Now that we are a free country we cannot afford any longer to ignore these basic factors which have gone against the health of the nation. It is from that angle that we have to primarily support this measure and I hope that when it emerges from Select Committee it will become very much more effective, so, that the Child Marriage Restraint Act will really become operative in this country. But, as I said, my honourable friend has been over-ambitious in using the words 'social justice'. I do hope that he does mean that all measures of social reform which will bring in equality, which will bring in social justice, such as the Hindu Code which is shortly to come up before this House, will meet with his full concurrence. Because, social justice has a wider context than what this Bill can provide. This Bill is not a Bill by which you can bring social justice to women though it prevents the maluse of children and girls. It is a Bill whereby you help to bring in a better and a healthier nation by not allowing women to become mothers at an age when they are not fit to be mothers, and prevent the maluse of young girls.

I do not want to go into the details of the provisions. I agree with the Honourable the Law Minister that the powers of the Select Committee should be made wider so that they can cover the whole ground and find out what would be the best means of making the Child Marriage Restraint Act effective. I think one of the provisions in the Hindu Code whereby marriage under certain age is going to be prevented will also be very effective towards achieving this. I hope that it will not be long before this Bill, having emerged from Select Committee, will be passed in the House; this, together with the provision in the Hindu Code preventing marriages under a certain age, whether civil or sacramental will enable us to stop child marriages in this country once and for all.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U. P.: General): Sir, I must thank—and I think the whole country will thank—Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava for having brought forward these Bills. In fact these Bills have been long overdue. And credit shall no doubt go to my friend Pandit Bhargava for having forced the Law Minister to promise him that he would try to bring forward a comprehensive measure incorporating all that these Bills provide for. I fully agree with the Honourable the Law Minister that the Bills, as they are drafted, cannot be accepted. They have to be modified and brought up to suit the needs of our country. The Law Minister has pointed out rightly that one of the great obstacles in enforcement of the provisions would be the actual age. We know the difficulties we find in respect of the actual age. Even in schools when certificates are given we sometimes say that the age is wrong and we have to fight for its correction by saying that the father was ignorant and he gave the wrong age. So, until correct birth registers are maintained it will not be possible to say what the exact age of a girl is. Some time will elapse before machinery for keeping these registers can be perfected. I would say that at least henceforth the Law Minister and the Government ought to see that arrangements are made by which registration of births and deaths is made accurately so that this excuse, or this difficulty, may not have to be faced in the future. I know that in this Bill provision has been made for registration of marriages. But I wish that more effort is made to get the law acted upon. Before this Bill can be really effective we must have a correct register of ages. Our experience in the villages is that many people do not know their age, and about girls it is almost impossible to know the age. Under such conditions, to make the offence cognizable is not proper, especially in the present temper of our police. I wish that very soon we change the temper of the police. While saying that the offence should not be made cognizable under present conditions I would say that punishment of imprisonment, should be provided for this offence. I hope the Law Minister and the draftsman will see to it that the offence becomes difficult to commit and that the punishment is severe. I hope also that he would try to see that the Bill does not give rise to other evils like harassment by the police of the poor people of the village by saying "Well, your girl is only thirteen years of age and you have got her married."

As my honourable friend Mr. Chaudhuri said—and many of us agree with him—we must proceed carefully with regard to this measure, especially when statistics are not available. I personally think that the minimum ages for marriage which have been prescribed at present fifteen for the girl and twenty for the boy—are not high enough. Of course in our illiterate and superstitious country they are proper and suitable ages now as a first step. But very soon our country will come up in line with other countries, and then the ages of sixteen for girls and twenty five for boys shall be prescribed as the minimum which is the intention of our shastras also. But I fully agree that we cannot suddenly jump to legislate for these minimum ages for marriage.

This is an important measure and the Bill is a very useful one. I hope that my honourable friend Pandit Bhargava will achieve success which he deserves for his efforts and I hope the Honourable the Law Minister will take pains to see that the Bill is made into a fine piece of legislation which will give birth to a really virile and strong nation.

Lastly I would like to say that I was surprised to hear from Shrimati Renuka Ray that this Bill does not bring in social justice. I do not know whether she considers only Bills and measures relating to property as bringing in social justice, like the Hindu Code.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: The Hindu code does not deal only with property though of course I realise that it is the question of £. s. d. which the vested interests dislike most.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In regard to social justice it is the biggest crime to force a girl to marry when she is below the proper medical age. When this Bill is making such marriages a penal offence it is surely bringing in social justice. I think she also would agree that this is a measure of real social justice.

I do not grudge her the share in the property also which she wants and which should be given to her in justice, but I only say that Mrs. Ray's criticism of this Bill is not proper.

Sir, I hope this Bill will soon be passed and properly enforced. I have seen how the Sarda Act has worked in our villages. I can say it had been worthless; if it has been used, it has been used only as a menace—somebody wants to take vengeance upon somebody else and tries to harass him by the Sarda Act; but it has not resulted in any justice. But this Bill, if properly enforced, will be able to stop child marriages and bring to birth a really virile nation.

Sir, I support the motion.

Syed Muhammad Sa'adulla (Assam: Muslim): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I do not know whether I should congratulate the honourable member Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava who has laboriously introduced these Bills for the betterment of the future generation of an independent India, but I must congratulate his tenacity of purpose and his effort at improving the social status amongst the rural masses by inculcating in them this idea of a model, healthy future generation.

He has been kind enough to refer to my name twice during this debate and he first branded me as one of the world's ignoramuses for not knowing the conditions in the neighbouring Provinces, although giving me the credit that I am open to conviction. Sir, I plead guilty to this charge for I am at a disadvantage. I have all along passed my time in the Province of Assam and I am conversant only with the social conditions that prevail therein. I had not had the advantage like him of going in a roving commission for ten months throughout India examining witnesses and learning the state of affairs in those places.

When the Age of Consent Committee went to Shillong I was one of the Ministers, and I appeared before them. So far as Assam was concerned, I knew everything at my fingers' end and I could tell them that this piece of legislation was unwanted by the Assam society, either Hindu, Muslim or Tribal. I think most Honourable Members here are not acquainted with an analysis of the population figures of Assam. At present as she is constituted, roughly we are 72 lakhs of people of which my own community, the Muslims, form one-fourth, or 18 lakhs. I can state without any fear of contradiction that child marriages are unknown in the Muslim society of Assam. According to the figures which the present Ministry has submitted to the Drafting Committee, the Tribal people of Assam number 26 lakhs. We have got a representative from that Tribal community in the person of our friend Mr. Dharanidhar Basu Matari. I know from my personal experience of Assam and fortified by the assurance of my friend that in his community there is no child marriage. So, out of 72 lakhs in 26 lakhs of his community and 18 of my community, that is 44 lakhs, there is no sign of this problem at all. All amongst the Hindu community, barring Brahmins child marriage is not in vogue in Assam.

Assam is an entirely agricultural country—at least 95 per cent. of our population are agriculturists. To an agriculturist, a wife literally means one hand more in the pursuit of his cultivation. Therefore, the question of a child marriage, introduction of a girl-wife in the family, instead of being a help in agricultural operations will be a liability and as such no agriculturist in Assam will think of resorting to child marriage. From that angle also it is unknown in our country that even the Hindus, except the Brahmans, feel the necessity for any such legislation. And the Brahmans at the highest computation form only one per cent of the total population of Assam. Even as regards the Brahmans, I can say from my personal and intimate knowledge that this curse of child marriage is getting scarcer every day and in the towns and amongst the educated in the Brahman community this system does not prevail now; it is limited to very orthodox and rural Brahman society up till now. But the greatest offenders about child-marriage was the Marwari community. I was looking to my friend Sriji Himatsingkha. He was for some time a member of the Assam Legislative Assembly and he knows about the conditions of his own community; but here too I am very glad to say that there has been a marked improvement during the last thirty years. Even amongst that community there is hardly a marriage of a girl below 14 years of age. So, from every point of view this problem is almost negligible in Assam.

While my friend went to Assam somewhere about 1929, two of his colleagues, the late Mr. Shah Nawaz, a Member of the Central Assembly, and my friend Sir Mian Mahboob Baksh Qadri of Ahmedabad, who was a Sessions Judge in Bombay and later on the Dewan of Junagadh State, accompanied him to Shillong. These two gentlemen were my guests and whatever I learnt from Pandit Bhargava in the open session of their inquiry, these two friends of mine, and my guests, told me about conditions that they had found in other parts of the country in the home atmosphere. Therefore, in the open session as well, I admitted to Pandit Bhargava that, "although this measure is unwanted in Assam, if the other parts of India require it, I wish you God speed and go ahead."

We in Asam even now have the same opinion. The Honourable Mover Pandit Bhargava has complained that the opinion from Assam is colourless, that they did not either commend his efforts nor condemn them. Well, the thing is that the Assam politician, not finding the necessity for such a legislation, has not given much thought to his Bill. Unfortunately for him, although the public in general according to him is rather callous, the most devastating criticism has come from a friend and a countryman of mine, Mr. Rohini Chaudhuri; but in a sense I agree with him because Mr. Rohini Chaudhuri commended the principle of the proposed legislation. Nobody need quarrel with it; everybody has nothing but praise for the lofty ideals of Pandit Bhargava. It is only the method of approach, of how to remove this curse, wherein there is difference of opinion. I think that our society being what it is, our villages being riddled by party factions, and our police being what it is now—I need not give my own description of it, but even the author of these Bills had something to say about it—I think the Select Committee will do well in considering whether this offence should be made cognizable.

I find in the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act of 1929 the learned author was constrained to admit: "The provisions making the offences and cases cognizable are of drastic nature in so far as the police is even at present neither efficient nor free from corruption." So, when we have got this admission from Pandit Bhargava himself, it will be up to the Select Committee to see that this drastic nature of the provision is done away with.

Apart from the expediency point of view, I would like to place before the House the utility side also about the province of Assam. As I said, I do not know the condition in other parts of India, but there is in Assam only one Police Station for two lakhs of population on an average or an area of 600 square miles. Now, even if this offence is made cognisable, is it possible that all the offences under this, marital law will be brought before the Police or the Police would learn of them? I have been rather liberal in the estimate of the location of Police stations, but you have to remember that that is with regard to the plains only and half of Assam is hills. In the Naga Hills with an area of 4000 sq. miles we have got two police stations only and in the Khasi Hills wherein is situated Shillong, the capital of the province, with an area of over 3000 sq. miles and about 2 lakhs population, there are only 4 police stations. This is the condition in the hills. So I say that even on the plains there is very little hope of the police utilising this power, unless it were prompted by evil spirits of party faction in the village to take cognisance of such offences.

[Syed Muhammad Sa'adulla]

One word and I will finish. The provision that no person over the age of 45 should be allowed to marry a girl below 18 is a product of the over-jealousness of social reform in the Pandit. In the first place, as has been pointed out just now, these two age limits will flood the country with manufacture of lies. I know that in spite of the fact that the great Hindu community has the institution of drawing up a horoscope for each child, it has been found by me personally as an administrator of twenty years experience that the horoscope can be changed according to the sweet will of the persons concerned. Whenever there is a question of over-age for Government service.....

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What about the birth register?

Syed Muhammad Sa'adulla: The candidates who are normally over-age for purposes of Government service were every time able to produce a new horoscope pointing out some mistake in the previous horoscope. Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar has referred to the birth and death register. I agree with him that if possible we must have such a register and we must adhere to it rigidly, but we must remember what has been said by the Honourable Member Mrs. Renuka Ray that from her personal knowledge she has found that women of 45 give their age as 25 and a girl of 9 is produced as a child of 16. So long as we cannot educate our people, so long as we do not change the mentality of our society, even this birth register, however rigidly it is followed, will not help us. In this matter, I would request the social reformers to follow the model of Festina lente or "hasten slowly". You cannot bring about a change in a society which is steeped in the darkness of superstition and illiteracy; you cannot bring about a change in the mental outlook by a piece of legislation like this. Give them time to educate themselves. Give them time to accommodate themselves to the changed circumstances and don't make this legislation so very drastic as is proposed by our over-zealous friend, Pandit Bhargava. I request him as well as Honourable Members of the Select Committee to tone down the drastic measures in such a way that the law will be applicable to all and acceptable to all. One little complaint. As usual, even in the Select Committee Assam has not found a place. I hope the House will see that the drastic critic, my friend Sjt. Rohini Choudhury is brought on to the Select Committee.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): Sir, the previous speaker has cautioned us against hastening. I rather think that we should hasten even more. In the Hindu society in particular and in some of the other societies also child marriage is very much prevalent and I am glad that this measure has been brought now that we are coming out of the age of the old saying "Ashta varsha bhaveth kanya" and other things. These things must be uprooted now and I would rather like that the age should be increased by one or two years more so that the nation which will be born now will be more healthy and better citizens. The three Bills which are being sent to the Select Committee will, I hope, come as one Bill. I also hope that they will be very well drafted then. About provision for making the offence cognisable, there are other things also. The offence will be compoundable and also bailable. Therefore, there is no harm in making it cognisable. There need be no controversy about this. The reform is long overdue and we must really hasten to legislate on it.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U.P.: General): Mr Speaker, Sir, there is no gainsaying the fact that this piece of legislation has been long overdue. There has been criticism with regard to certain provisions, namely, making the offences under the act cognizable, raising the punishment and asking the husband to execute the bonds. It is an accepted principle in evaluating the evolutionary growth of a community the main factor is the development of individuality of its citizen and with the development of the individuality of a citizen the independence of selecting things important to his individual life is a matter of far more importance. Taking that view of life, it is rather a pity that we should be sitting here discussing the matter that the age of a girl should be raised to 15 years or the age of a boy should be raised to 20 years. No man and no woman who is not mature enough to form a judgement to select the partner can be said exercise the free choice of selections, so very necessary for constituting a civilized society. Anyhow we have been placed under circumstances in which it was not open to us to grow freely along with the other communities in the world. An Act was passed long ago in which this social measure was taken up, the social conscience was awakened and much improvement made. Now having attained to the state we have come, it is quite proper to raise the age of the girl and the boy and to make the punishment harsher and to make the offence cognizable and provide for improvement.

Regarding the criticism against making the offences cognizable, it need be said that at this stage the marriage of children is a social crime. It is much more serious a crime than stealing away things worth a few rupees and if theft is a cognizable offence and a man can be harassed and arrested and caught by the police for theft of articles worth Rs. 5 or Rs. 10, there is no reason why a man should not be harassed, arrested and caught by the Police when he does commit after such a long interval of period in which this Act has been in existence to commit a social crime and a very serious crime for the matter of that.

It is rather fashionable to say that the Police are acting as if they were blood hounds. The Police officers come from amongst us and in serious cases of dacoity, murder and other such crimes, honourable members know co-operation from all sheds of society is essential for getting the offenders convicted. Under the present circumstances, no man could do better than the present Police Officer is doing. We must know that our officers have to do duties which are very necessary for the existence and improvement of society under circumstances which are not prevalent in other countries. They lack co-operation; we seldom give co-operation, even our political struggle has been on the basis of non-co-operation. So under the circumstances, the Police officers have to do the unpleasant job and they have not very much improved along with the other police in the world, but to stigmatize them as blood hounds is not doing justice to our own men and I have no doubt that in a measure like this, they would behave as we would expect them to behave and not unnecessarily harass the people.

I however, find one difficulty and that is that no doctor in the world can say whether a girl's age is 14 years or 15 years. It is difficult to ascertain and distinguish the age of a girl, whether she is 13, 14 or 15. But in cases like this, it is not the particular cases that are very important, but I think the aim and object of this piece of legislation is to awaken the social conscience still more and to bring home to the common citizen that it is a social crime to allow or to encourage child marriage and it is in this way that the Act will have its own effect and go a great deal in helping the society to progress and bring in conditions in which the common citizen will find himself in a state in which he can enjoy enough choice and have growth of individuality as a person. With these remarks, Sir, I support the Bill.

[श्री गोकुल भाई दौलत राम भट्ट]

उम्र का सवाल लाते हैं तो हमें सोचना चाहिये कि हमारी तन्दुरस्ती किस तरीके से कम होती जाती है- बिगड़ती जाती है क्योंकि हमारे आसपास जो वातावरण है वह बिगड़ा हुआ होता है। जहाँ निर्दोष वातावरण होता है वहाँ उम्र के साथ तन्दुरस्ती और पुष्टाई भी आने लगती है और यह कहना मुश्किल हो जाता है कि जो कन्या है वह गौरी कब बनती है। इसके माने वह पुष्टा कब बनती है। इसी तरह से पुरुषों का भी है। शहर में रहने वाले पुरुष और स्त्री का विकार जल्दी बढ़ जाता है। क्योंकि वहाँ नाटक, सिनेमा और कई प्रकार की ऐसी दूसरी चीजें उनके आसपास होती हैं। इन चीजों से और दूसरी कई आसपास की बातों के असर से एक प्रकार से मन के विकार में वृद्धि पैदा होती है।

तो मेरे कहने का मतलब यह है कि सिलैक्ट कमेटी के सामने यह सब चीजें जब जायेगी तो हम सोचेंगे कि उम्र की पाबन्दी रखने से ही क्या हम सुरक्षा कर सकते हैं। कन्या और लड़कों से हमें कुछ ऐसे दोष निकालने होंगे जिससे हम सचमुच इस बिल की जो मन्शा है उसको कामयाब कर सकें।

श्रीमती रेनुकारे ने कह दिया कि समाज का उद्धार तभी होगा जब हिन्दू कोड लाया जायेगा और जब वह कानून बन जायेगा। मैं समझता था कि हमारे भार्गव साहब ठहर जाते तो सब सुधार आराम से हो जाते। लेकिन उनको अधीरता है क्योंकि उन्होंने इस चीज के लिए कई साल से मेहनत की है और राय लेने की कोशिश की है और उनको माफिक राय मिल भी गई है। वह खैर दूसरी बात है। मैं हिन्दू कोड बिल पर बोलना नहीं चाहता लेकिन मैं समझता था कि पंडित भार्गव यह बात मान लेते तो हिन्दू कोड में यह चीज आ सकती थी क्या? सही बात मैं यह समझता हूँ कि हिन्दू समाज को कहां ले जाना है। इस विषय में हम सिर्फ कानून के सिवाय और दूसरी बात नहीं कर रहे हैं। हमें समाज को इस रीति से समझाना है, उसको लोक शिक्षा देनी है, वह चीज हम नहीं कर रहे हैं। इसके बजाय हम सिर्फ एक कानून बना कर संतोष मानते हैं। कानून बना दिया और हमारे समाज का सुधार हो गया, यह हमारा आजकल का दृष्टिकोण है। अगर इसी तरह का हमारा दृष्टिकोण है तो उसको निकाल देना चाहिये। मैं यह नहीं कहता कि यह समाज के लिए और समाज सुधार के लिए अच्छा नहीं होगा। यह मेरा कहना कभी नहीं है। लेकिन इसको हम यह समझ लें कि समाज सुधार के लिए सिर्फ यही एक चीज है और दूसरी चीज कोई नहीं है। इस दृष्टि से मैं यह कह रहा हूँ कि समाज सुधार करने के लिए सिर्फ कानून पास करने की ही जरूरत नहीं होती है वल्कि अगर अच्छी तरह से सुधार करना है तो लोक शिक्षा देकर और लोगों में माफिक हवा फैलाने से जो चीज जरूर है उस चीज को फैलाने से होगी। इतना कह कर मैं आशा करता हूँ कि इस बिल से हम इस तरह की हवा फैलायेंगे कि जिससे लड़के और लड़कियाँ शक्तिशाली बनें और आरोग्यवान बनें और वह खुद अपने आप समझ लें कि वे शादी करने के लायक की उम्र में है या नहीं।

Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt (Eastern Rajputana States Group): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this Bill which has been brought before the House and would like to say a few words in connection therewith. There are many such things which can be decided at a later stage such as the question of age etc. The question of age is such that we cannot properly judge as to whether 14, 15 or 16 years should be treated as proper age. It is generally admitted that the age of 17, 18 and 20 is not the age of maturity for girls living in the cities; whereas 14 and 15 years is considered as the age of maturity for the girls living in villages. When we consider the question of age, we should take into consideration the factors responsible for the deterioration in our health—because our environments are unhealthy. In places where there are congenial environments, health and maturity synchronize with age, and it thus becomes difficult to say when a girl attains the age of puberty; in other words one does not know when she becomes mature. Similar is the case with men. Minds of men and women living in the cities get perverted at a very early stage, due to the existence of theatres, cinemas and other such things. Such things, coupled with the effect of other elements in the environment tend to cause further deterioration of the mind. What I mean to say is that when this matter is referred to the Select Committee, we will take into consideration whether by fixing the age-limit, we can improve the matters. With a view to make this Bill a successful measure, we will have to eradicate the evil effects from the minds of our boys and girls.

It has been stated at one place that a person who marries at the age of 45 will be liable to be punished. He will be awarded long-imprisonment—not exactly long—when he will be sentenced only to three months imprisonment and a fine amounting to Rs. 1,000/-. I feel that those who are bent upon marrying will be prepared to undergo three months imprisonment—but marry they must—for the sake of marriage they will be prepared to pay fine and undergo the term of imprisonment also—and for this they will not feel sorry.

Shrimati Reunka Ray has stated that the condition of the society can be improved only when Hindu Code is enacted. I felt that if my honourable friend Mr. Bhargava had waited, all the reforms would have been carried out in the normal course. But he is impatient, because he has worked hard over this measure for years together, endeavoured to elicit opinion and has succeeded in securing favourable opinions. That of course is another point. I do not want to speak on the Hindu Code, but I thought that if Pandit Bhargava had accepted this view, could provision in this respect be made in the Hindu Code? What I want to know exactly is where we are to lead the Hindu society? In this respect we are not taking any other steps except enacting the legislation. We have to impress upon the society in this respect—we have to educate the minds of the people in the worldly affairs—and this thing we are not doing. On the contrary we feel ourselves contented with the framing of a law. To-day our angle of vision is that once legislation is framed, it will renovate our society. If this is our viewpoint, then we should drop this. I do not say that this will not prove beneficial to the society and its reformation. I never say so. But I observed this thing with the view that we should not treat this as the solitary measure for the reformation of the society, and legislation is not the only thing for bringing about a reformation in the society, but if it is desired to bring about a radical change, then it can be achieved only by educating the minds of the people and the creation of healthy environments.

I, therefore, hope that with the help of this Bill we will be able to create such an atmosphere which will make the boys and girls virile and healthy, and they will themselves be able to develop the sense of understanding whether or not their age is ripe for marriage.

With these words, I support this Bill though to a certain extent.

پنڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو: جناب سپیکر صاحب! ان باتوں پر جو بحث ہوئی ہے وہ ایک طرح سے نہایت دلچسپ ہوئی ہے۔ اور جس جھڑپ کے لئے میں ہاؤس کا شکر گزار ہوں وہ یہ ہے کہ جتنے بھی ممبر صاحبان اس پر ہونے لگے ہیں ان میں سے ایک نے بھی اس کی مخالفت نہیں کی ہے۔ یہ ضروری ہے کہ جو طریقے عملی تجویز کئے گئے ہیں ان میں تھوڑی سی مخالفت ہے اور وہ ہوئی بھی چاہئے لیکن جہاں تک اس اصول کا سوال ہے کہ child marriage کو بند کر دیا جائے سارے ممبران ہاؤس اس سے متفق ہوں۔ اور میں اس کے لئے ہاؤس کو بدھائی دیتا ہوں۔ رہا یہ امر کہ کیا طریقہ روک تھام بنایا جائے تو اس میں لوگوں کی رائے کا اختلاف ہونا واجب تھا۔ کئی ایک اصحاب نے جو اعتراض کیا ہے وہ اس امر کے متعلق ہے کہ وہ مقدمات جن کے متعلق یہ بل پیش کیا گیا ہے اور جن کا کہ اس بل میں ذکر ہے وہ cognizable قرار دیئے جائیں یا نہیں۔ اس بارے میں مختلف رائے رہی ہے۔ میں اس بارے میں ہاؤس سے مودبانہ یہ عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ میں نے خود پہلے بل میں جو سنہ ۱۹۳۶ میں introduce کیا تھا جرم کو cognizable نہ بنایا تھا اور اس بارے میں جو age of consent committee نے رپورٹ کی تھی اُس میں میری بھی اور اس کمیٹی کی بھی یہ رائے تھی کہ اسکو cognizable offence نہ بنایا جائے۔ اُس زمانے میں وہ تھیک تھا۔ لیکن اب اس رپورٹ کو شائع ہونے تقریباً اٹھارہ سال ہوئے ہیں اور اس عرصہ میں اس بل کی کافی اشاعت ہو چکی ہے۔ اور اس کے علاوہ یہ بھی معلوم ہو چکا ہے کہ ساردا ایکٹ نے اس بدعت کا انسداد نہیں کیا ہے۔ کیونکہ اس ایکٹ میں جرم non-cognizable تھا۔ شاید میں یہ دہرایں کر سکتا ہوں کہ مجھے پولیس کی کارکردگیوں کا زیادہ علم ہے۔ جن صاحبان نے پولیس کی کارکردگی کے متعلق اعتراض کیا ہے ان کی آگاہی کے لئے عرض کروں کہ میں کارکردگیوں کو چالیس سال سے بطور وکیل کے دیکھتا رہا ہوں لیکن کافی عرصہ سے یہ خرابی رواج ہمارے ملک کے اندر ہے۔ یہ ایک قسم کی بیماری ہے جس کا کہ ہمیں علاج کرنا ہے۔ اگر یہ بیماری اتنی سخت ہے کہ بغیر آپریشن کیئے یہ جڑ سے اُکڑ نہیں سکتی تو میری رائے میں ایسی صورت میں اسی بیماری کا ٹھیک ٹھیک علاج ہونا لازمی ہے۔ اور آپریشن کرنا ضروری ہے۔ اس میں شک نہیں کہ آپریشن سے ذرا ذرا سی تکلیف ضرور ہوگی۔ لیکن بغیر آپریشن کے بھی اس بیماری کا علاج اگر نہیں ہو سکتا تو آپریشن کرنا لازمی ہے۔ میں نے پہلے بل کے statement of objects and reasons کے بارے میں یہ لکھا تھا۔

"The atrocious act in its essence constitutes a very heinous offence which but for unwanted interference in domestic matters and want of confidence in the police administration in the country should have been made a cognizable offence."

جیسا کہ ابھی ابھی میرے دوست مسٹر کرشن چندر نے فرمایا ہے کہ اگر کوئی پانچ روپیے کی بھی چوری کرے تو وہ ایک cognizable offence ہے۔ لیکن اگر کسی سے اس قسم کا کوئی جرم ہو جائے جو لوکی کی تمام زندگی آئندہ پر اثر رکھیگا۔ تو کیوں ایسے جرم کو non-cognizable قرار دیا جاوے۔

دوسرے بل میں جسمیں میں نے ایسے جرائم کو cognizable قرار دینے کی تجویز کی ہے اسکے statement of objects and reasons میں حسب ذیل لکھا ہے۔

"The provisions making the offences and cases cognizable are of drastic nature in so far as the police is even at present neither efficient nor free from corruption. But this aspect of the matter is applicable to all cognizable offences and cases."

"It must be realised that after 18 years during which the Sarda Act has been in operation its provisions are more widely known than before."

"Moreover the malady is too persistent and virulent to be remedied by mild measures. The evil is too great to be tolerated even if its prevention causes uneasiness and annoyance to the public. The Sarda Act has almost been a dead letter in the rural areas and backward communities and marriages of children in arms and in early teens are very frequent resulting in the physical, economic and moral ruin of the nation. Any further dalliance with the evil of pre-puberty consummation and early consummation which are eating into the very vitals of the society is simply criminal specially when we have got National Government and no measures however stringent can be deemed to be too drastic to prevent this evil which is so enormous in magnitude."

[ہندو تھاکر داس بھارگو] آپکل یہ ہو سکتا ہے کہ اگر آپ کسی بچے کی شادی کریں اور بعد شادی بڑا خاوند یا بچہ خاوند و بچہ بیوی اکٹھے رہے ہوں اور جرم زیر دفعہ ۳۷۵ موجودہ قانون سرزد ہوتا ہو جو عام طور پر ہوتا ہے تو اس میں پولیس Interfere کر سکتی ہے - Indian Penal Code کے دفعہ ۳۷۵ کے مطابق ایسے جرائم کی سزا ایک یا دو سال ہی نہیں بلکہ دس سال تک ہو سکتی ہے - میری عرض یہ ہے کہ ایسے حالات پیدا نہ ہونے دینے کے لئے کہ جسمیں ایسے سخت جرائم ہو سکیں یہ ضروری ہے اور بہتر ہے کہ جو جرائم جلدی شادی کرنے کے متعلق ہیں ان میں سزا کرائی جاوے - اس بل کی رو سے اگر کوئی ایسا جرم کرے بھی تو اسکی سزا زیادہ سے زیادہ تین مہینے کی رکھی گئی ہے - میرا خیال ہے کہ ہر ایک شخص میرے اس خیال سے متفق ہوگا کہ اگر اس بل کے متعلق شادی پر پورا عمل کر دیا جائے تو وہ جرائم زیر تعزیرات ہند کے انسداد کا صحیح راستہ ہے ہمیں ایسے قانون بنانے چاہئیں کہ جن سے ایسی marriages کا Prevention ہو جائے - میرے دوست پروفیسر شبین لال صاحب نے کہا ہے Prevention is better than cure میری رائے میں یہ چیز بالکل درست ہے اور یہ اصول دراصل اس گتھی کا علاج ہے کہ ہم کو کوشش یہ کرنی چاہیئے کہ marriage laws کو stringent بنایا جائے - تاکہ ایک شادی بھی ایسی نہ ہونے پاوے جو قانون کے خلاف ہو - یہ بدرجہا بہتر ہے بمقابلہ اس کے کہ Penal Code کے اندر کارروائی کی جائے اور سارا خاندان کا خاندان تباہ ہو جائے - وہ خاندان بھی تباہ ہو جائے گا جسکے اندر لوکاں ملزم ہوگا اور پھر وہ اپنی بیوی سے کسی قسم کا تعلق نہیں رکھیں گے - اس لئے اگر اس بدعت سے بچنا ہے تو موجودہ قانون کو اس طرح سے بنانا چاہیئے - اور ہر شخص منظور کر لے گا کہ اس کا صحیح طریقہ یہی ہے کہ یہ قانون ایسا بنایا جائے جس کے اندر اس طرح کی شادیاں بند ہو جاویں -

بنانا چاہیئے - اس واسطے میں اس تجویز کو پسند نہیں کرتا کہ select committee کو اختیار ہوگا کہ وہ اس معاملے کو دیکھے -

ڈاکٹر امبیڈکار صاحب نے فرمایا ہے کہ وہ کسی چیز سے committed نہیں ہونا چاہتے - لیکن میں عرض کرنا چاہتا تھا - کہ house ایک چیز سے committed ہے وہ یہ ہے کہ چھوٹی عمر کی شادی نہ ہونی چاہیئے - اور دوسرے جہاننگ عمر کا تعلق ہے لڑکی کی شادی کے واسطے ۱۵ برس کی عمر اور بیس برس لڑکے کی شادی کے لئے ہاؤس committed ہے اور یہ اصول ان بلوں کے ہیں باقی طریقہ کے متعلق میری رائے ناقص میں ہاؤس committed نہیں ہے وہ طریقہ age of consent committee نے اپنی رپورٹ میں لکھے ہیں وہ عزت سے دیکھے جانے کے قابل نہیں - کیونکہ وہ رپورٹ unanimous تھی اور اُس کے بارے میں مجھے یہ بھی کہنا ہے کہ اُس کمیٹی میں ۱۰ آدمی مقرر کئے گئے تھے اور تقریباً تین لاکھ روپیہ خرچ کیا گیا تھا اور ۱۰ مہینہ تک ایسے سوال پر کمیٹی نے غور کیا تھا - بعد اسکے انہوں نے طریقوں کی عملی سفارش کی - لیکن اُس کمیٹی کو اب ۱۸ برس ہو گئے ہیں اور اگر ہم اُس سے بہتر تجویز نکال سکتے ہیں تو ہمیں ضرور نکالنے چاہیں اگر گورنمنٹ کوئی نیا بل لانا چاہے تو اس میں بھی مجھے کوئی انکار نہیں ہوگا میرا تو صرف یہ ہے کہ گورنمنٹ نے ایک سال ضائع کر دیا - پچھلے سال مجھے سے کہا گیا تھا کہ اگلے session میں وہ بل آجائیں گے - میری ناقص رائے میں کوئی دیگر معاملہ اس ضروری معاملہ سے زیادہ اہمیت نہیں رکھتا جلد اس بل کو پاس کر کے marriageable age کو بڑھانا چاہیئے - ساتھ ہی age of consent Bill بھی نہایت ضروری ہے - لیکن جو اس کی اہمیت ہے وہ realise نہیں کی جاتی ہے - اس کے لئے ہمیں ایک مدت بھی دیر نہیں کرنی چاہیئے - National Govt. کا فرض ہے کہ جلد از جلد اس بل کو پاس کرادے اور عمل میں لاوے اسکے علاوہ ایک تجویز یہ پیش کی گئی کہ زادی کو رد (annul) کر دیا جائے - age of consent committee نے بھی اپنی رپورٹ میں اسکا ذکر کیا ہے میں نہیں کہہ سکتا کہ اس پر کہاں تک عمل کیا جا سکتا ہے - میں اس پر بالکل open mind رکھتا ہوں - لیکن میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ اس جرم کو cognizable کرنا زیادہ اچھا ہوگا بہ نسبت marriage کو annul کرنے کے کیونکہ annul کرنے کو لوگ زیادہ پسند نہ کریں گے - لیکن تاہم یہ تجویز ایسی ہے جسکو اس کے merits پر دیکھا جاسکتا ہے - میں نے نہایت توجہ کے ساتھ سرسعد اللہ صاحب کی تقریر سنی اور میں ادب کے ساتھ انکی توجہ age of consent committee کی رپورٹ کے صفحہ ۶۱ کی طرف دلانا

چاہتا ہوں جہاں ان کی گواہی کا بھی ذکر ہے اور جہاں یہ ذکر ہے کہ آسام کے اندر کیا حالت ہے۔ مجھے افسوس کے ساتھ کہنا پڑتا ہے کہ ہمارے لیڈر جو ہر ایک چیز میں well informed ہیں وہ اس چیز کے اندر بے خبر اور گمراہ رہتے ہیں سر سعد اللہ صاحب فرماتے ہیں کہ آسام میں مسلمانوں میں child marriage نہیں ہے۔ میں چلند لائنز ہاؤس کی توجہ کے لئے یہیں کرنا چاہتا ہوں۔ جس سے ثابت ہوگا کہ ہمارے fully informed لیڈر بھی جتنی خرابی اور جتنے وسعت اورائل عمر کے شادی ہیں اُس کو realize نہیں کرتے ہیں صفحہ ۶۱ پر درج ہے

کہ ہم پانچ سال کی عمر سے کم کی شادی آسام میں نہیں ہوتی ہیں لیکن جہاں پانچ سے دس اور دس سے پندرہ کا تعاقب ہے وہاں سیٹس فیکٹری satisfactory حالت نہیں ہے۔

"The percentage of married girls between 10 and 15 in 1921 was 25.9. The number of married girls between 10 and 15 among Hindus in 1921 was 54,449, being 27 per cent. of the total number and among Muslims 38,828 being 34 per cent. of the total. But conditions vary so much in different parts of the Province that an inaccurate idea will be conveyed by these averages."

اسی طرح سے آگے چاکر درج ہے

"It is interesting to note that Muslims in this valley are very much addicted to the practice of early marriage, their numbers approximating those of Hindus in Goalpara; 42 girls between 5 and 10 and 473 between 10 and 15 are married. The total number of Muslims in this valley is about 6 lakhs."

میں ادب سے عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ دراصل اس بل کو پیش کر کے بھی میں اس چیز کو نہیں بھول سکتا ہوں کہ اس بل کے بارے میں جو رورل ایریاؤں (Rural Areas) کی حالت ہے اُس کا پورا احساس بہت کم اشخاص کو ہے اس لئے یہ ضروری ہو گیا ہے کہ ہم اس بل کو جلدی پاس کریں

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Mr. Speaker, Sir, there has been an interesting discussion on these Bills and I am grateful to the House that none of the honourable members who spoke have opposed these. It is true that there has been some opposition in regard to the methods suggested and this as it should have been. But so far as the principle of stoppage of child marriage is concerned, all the honourable members in this House are in agreement. And for this I congratulate the House. There was bound to be a difference of opinion amongst the people as to the preventive measures to be adopted. Many of the speakers, have raised the objection whether the cases which fall within the purview of this Bill should be made cognizable or not. There is a conflict of opinion on this. I would respectfully submit for the information of the House that in the first Bill which I introduced in 1946, I myself had treated the offence non-cognizable. That was appropriate in those days, but now about 18 years have passed since this Report was published and during this interval this Bill has been given wide publicity. country since long. This is a disease which we have to eradicate. If this disease has become so virulent that it cannot be cured without an operation, then in my opinion in such a condition it is very necessary that a proper treatment should be found even by resort to an operation. There is no doubt in it that an operation is bound to be somewhat painful but in case this disease cannot be cured without an operation, then an operation will have to be performed. I had stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the first Bill as below:

"The atrocious act in its essence constitutes a very heinous offence which but for unwanted interference in domestic matters and want of confidence in the police administration in the country should have been made a cognizable offence."

Just as my honourable friend Mr. Krishna Chandra Sharma has pointed out that if anybody steals articles worth even Rs. 5/- it constitutes a cognizable offence. But there is no reason why an offence, if committed by any person, which will affect the whole future life of the girl, should be treated as non-cognizable. In the statement of the Objects and Reasons appended to the second Bill wherein I have suggested to make such offences cognizable, it has been laid down as below:

"The provisions making the offences and cases cognizable are of drastic nature in so far as the police is even at present neither efficient nor free from corruption. But this aspect of the matter is applicable to all cognizable offences and cases."

"It must be realised that after 18 years during which the Sarda Act has been in operation its provisions are more widely known than before."

"Moreover the malady is too persistent and virulent to be remedied by mild measures. The evil is too great to be tolerated even if its prevention causes uneasiness and annoyance to the public. The Sarda Act has almost been a dead letter in the rural areas and backward communities and marriages of children in arms and in early teens are very frequent resulting in the physical, economic and moral ruin of the nation. Any further dalliance with the evil of pre-puberty consummation and early consummation which are eating into the very vitals of the society is simply criminal specially when we have got National Government and no measures however stringent can be deemed to be too drastic to prevent this evil which is so enormous in magnitude."

With due respects, I would like to submit to the House that in my humble opinion there are only two ways by means of which we can remove this evil. Firstly this should be made a cognizable offence, even though such a course may be trouble-some to the people. Secondly in each case that is brought before the Court, imprisonment should be made compulsory on conviction. If the first suggestion is followed, then I am sure, we can fully combat this evil. Compulsory imprisonment on conviction will surely be irksome and I do not wish this should be so. Nobody wants that people should be subjected to hardships at the time of marriage and jubilation. The Marriage is the time for merriment, and I do not want that on the occasion of a marriage in any home, the bridegroom or his father or mother should be arrested. What I want is that in no way such things should happen. In addition to this, I would like to say a word, that so far as the marriage, laws and social crimes are concerned, these are covered by the existing provisions in Section 375 of the Indian Penal Code. And in case the Police prosecutes the persons accused of having committed offences which fall within the scope of this Bill, then it would create a good deal of unrest in the country. On the contrary, even if the police launches prosecution for the infraction of marital laws and the people are convicted, this would not give rise to so much commotion and unrest. It is possible now-a-days that if you marry a child and after the marriage the husband or the child husband and the child wife are allowed to be closetted, a crime may be committed as it is usual under Section 375 of the existing Act (I.P.C.). The Police can interfere in such cases. According to the provisions of Section 375 I.P.C., the punishment for such offences is not confined to one or two years only but it can extend up to ten years. I therefore say that in order to obviate such a contingency when these heinous crimes may be committed, it would be desirable and advisable to award punishment for the offences of early consummation. This Bill provides a maximum punishment of 3 months' imprisonment for the commission of such an offence. I hope that every body will agree that if the provisions of this Bill relating to marriage are strictly observed then it would be the correct way for the prevention of offences under the Indian Penal Code. We should frame laws to prevent such marriages.

My honourable friend Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena has remarked "Prevention is better than cure". In my opinion this is quite true, and this principle is the real panacea to cut the Gordian knot, and we should try to make stringent the marriage laws so that no such marriage may take place in contravention of the law. This is far better a course than invoking the provision of I.P.C. and ruining the whole family. That family to which the husband belongs will also be ruined and consequently he will sever his connections with his wife. So if it is desired to get rid of the evil the present legislation should be framed in this manner, and everybody will admit that this is the right measure for preventing early marriage. So far as to its being made cognizable I too in view of the attitude of the Police, do not like their interference in the domestic affairs.

Another point to which I would like to draw your attention is that the suggestion put forth by Mr. Chaudhuri that this offence should be made 'non-bailable' instead of 'cognizable'.

I do not understand how it will prevent the commission of such an offence merely by making it a 'non-bailable'. In my humble opinion, there will hardly be any difference by making it 'non-bailable'. I do not want that bail should not be accepted from any person. The object of bail is that the person may present himself before the court. I do not want to make bail a punitive measure. By making this offence non-bailable, this should not be made punitive. Therefore, I do not appreciate this suggestion though the Select Committee would be authorized to look into this matter.

The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar has stated that he does not want to commit himself to anything. But I want to say that the House is committed to one principle i.e., prevention of early consummation, and further so far as age is concerned the boy and girl must have attained the age of 20 and 15 years respectively at the time of marriage. And such are the principles enunciated in these Bills. In my humble opinion the House is not committed to the methods suggested. The Age of Consent Committee have suggested some remedies which should be looked upon with respect because that was a unanimous report. In that connection, I must say that ten members were appointed on that Committee and about 3 lacs of rupees were spent thereon and the Committee considered this matter for about 10 months and after this they made their recommendations in regard to the remedial measures. But 18 years have passed since that Committee was set up, and if we can evolve better proposals, then we must do so. I will not have any objection if the Government wants to introduce any new Bill. I am simply afraid that the Government have already wasted one year. Last year I was told that a Bill would be introduced in the ensuing Session. In my humble opinion, there is no other matter which is more important than this. This Bill should be passed without any delay and the marriageable age advanced. Along with this the Age of Consent Bill is another necessity. But its real importance cannot be realized. We should not wait for a minute. It is the duty of the National Government to get this Bill passed and brought into force forthwith.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

Apart from this, another suggestion was made that marriage should be annulled. The Age of Consent Committee has also referred to this matter in their Report. I cannot say how far it will be possible to act upon this. I have an open-mind on this, but I feel that it would be much better to treat this offence as cognizable instead of annulling the marriage because many people would not like this recourse. Nevertheless this suggestion can be judged on its own merits. I have very carefully listened to the speech of my honourable friend Sir Muhammad Sa'adulla, and with due derence, I would like to draw his attention to Page 61 of the Report of the Age of Consent Committee which inter alia mentions about his evidence and gives an account of the conditions prevailing in Assam. It is a matter of deep regret that our leaders who keep themselves well-informed in every respect remain ignorant and are misled in such matters. Sir Sa'adulla has stated that child marriage is not prevalent amongst the Muslims in Assam. I will just quote a few lines for the information of the House from which it would be evident that how far our well-informed leaders also are unable to realize the evils of early consummation. It has been stated at Page 61 that in Assam there are no child marriages below the age of 5 but an equally satisfactory state of affairs is not however revealed when the later age periods of 5 to 10 and 10 to 15 are taken into consideration.

"The percentage of married girls between 10 and 15 in 1921 was 25.9. The number of married girls between 10 and 15 among Hindus in 1921 was 54,449, being 27 per cent. of the total number and among Muslims 38,828, being 34 per cent. of the total. But conditions vary so much in different parts of the Province that an inaccurate idea will be conveyed by these averages."

Similarly it has been further stated:

"It is interesting to note that Muslims in this valley are very much addicted to the practice of early marriage, their numbers approximating those of Hindus in Goalpara; 42 girls between 5 and 10 and 473 between 10 and 15 are married. The total number of Muslims in this valley is about 6 lakhs."

I may respectfully submit that even though after presenting this Bill I cannot overlook this fact that very people are aware of the conditions prevailing in the rural areas in this sphere. Therefore, it has become all the more necessary that we should pass this Bill without delay.

In addition to this, some more of criticism have been levelled. Mrs. Ray has stated that one of the difficulties to be encountered in the operation of this Bill is to find out the 'age'. I realize that the question of age does not arise in this Bill only. This exists in the Sections relating to abduction, kidnapping in the Indian Penal Code and many other such Sections. Again in the Civil Law, the question of majority arises. So these difficulties are found in many places. These will affect the Marriage-Laws also. If the recommendations contained in the Report of the Age of Consent Committee had been accepted and action taken to maintain the registers, then this difficulty would not have arisen now. It has also been proposed in this Bill that the Government should take steps to keep such registers wherein age should be recorded. I may say that the Hindu Code also refers to age. Indeed Marriage Register is an imperative necessity in this country, and we should introduce this immediately.

So far as the question of social justice is concerned, I leave it to Mrs. Ray to find out how much social justice exists in this Bill. At the moment I do not want to speak much about the Hindu Code. But I venture to say that it would not be proper to regard those who do not consider it necessary to pass the Hindu Code at present as enemies of progress.

I have also listened to the suggestion made by Mr. Bhatt which is quite a novel one viz., that distinction should be made between the girls living in rural and urban areas. In fact the position is that when the question of cities vis-a-vis villages arises, then it is not possible to make any discrimination on the basis of individual development. Logically the development of every person differs from each other according to age. But in the determination of age such matters cannot be legally considered. If this is done, it would become well nigh impossible to frame the law.

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid a detailed reply to every point is not necessary. It is for the Select Committee to consider the various points made by honourable members.

پندت تھاکر داس بھارگو : میں اس واسطے ادب سے عرض کروں گا کہ جہاں تک ان تینوں بلوں کا سوال ہے یہ سلیکٹ کمیٹی کو سپرد کر دینیے چاہیے۔

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Therefore, I will respectfully submit, Sir, that so far as these three Bills are concerned, these may be referred to the Select Committee.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 3, 4, 5, 6 and 10) the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of Sections 2 and 4), and the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 10, 11 and 13), be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Dr. Bakhshi Tek Chand, Shri Prabhudayal Himatsingka, Shrimati G. Durgabai, Begum Aizaz Rasul, Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan, Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma, Sardar Hukam Singh, Shri Ajit Prasad Jain, Shri P. Kunhiraman, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, Shri Upendranath Barman, Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya, and the Mover, with instructions to report not later than the last day of the first week of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): Is the Law Minister a Member?

Mr. Speaker: He is the ex-officio Chairman of every official or non-official Committee.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): With the leave of the House I would ask that the name of Mrs. Renuka Ray may be included in the Select Committee.

Mr. Speaker: It is too late now. I was proceeding to put the motion to the House.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: I request the Mover to accept it.

Mr. Speaker: Is it accepted by the Mover?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I have no objection.

Mr. Speaker: Then, in the names put forward, I am adding the name of Mrs. Renuka Ray.

The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 3, 4, 5, 6 and 10) the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of Sections 2 and 4), and the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 10, 11 and 13), be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Dr. Bakhshi Tek Chand, Shri Prabhudayal Himatsingka, Shrimati G. Durgabai, Begum Aizaz Rasul, Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan, Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma, Sardar Hukam Singh, Shri Ajit Prasad Jain, Shri P. Kunhiraman, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, Shri Upendranath Barman, Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya, Shrimati Renuka Ray and the Mover, with instructions to report not later than the last day of the first week of the next session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

INDIAN PENAL CODE AND THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(English translation of the above speech.)

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): In regard to motion No. 2, I have only to state that the House had sent this Bill for circulation. But I have just been informed that opinions from all the Provinces have not yet been received. Therefore, I am unable to move the motion. When the opinions have been received, I will move it.

Mr. Speaker: He does not make any motion. Very well.

CRIMINAL TRIBES (REPEAL) BILL.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): I learn that the Government are quite prepared to take early steps to appoint a Committee to enquire into the possibilities for giving effect to the objective with which I have sought to move this Bill; that is, to liberate all these millions of people who have been castigated as criminal tribes and treated so shabbily in different provinces, and I do trust that Government will not take very long before they appoint this Committee and try to save these people from this horror of the Criminal Tribes Act and all that follows in its train. It is on that assurance, and on that understanding that I beg leave of the House not to make this motion at this stage.

Mr. Speaker: He does not make a motion.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I do not want to make this motion now.

INDIAN PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(Amendment of Section 124A)

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): I am not moving my Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code but I wish it to be kept alive.

PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): I beg leave of the House to withdraw the Bill further to amend the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920.

I am happy to announce to the House that my point which has been raised in my Bill has been accepted in the official Bill passed in the last Session.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member the leave of the House to withdraw?

The Bill was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

INDIAN COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(Amendment of Section 86F)

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C.P. and Berar: General): I have been promised by the Honourable the Minister for Commerce that this Bill further to amend the Indian Companies Act, 1913, will be taken into consideration when a more comprehensive Bill will be brought forward by Government. Under these circumstances, I do not propose to make any motion just now, but I would like the Bill to be kept alive.

Mr. Speaker: He wants to keep it alive.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: Very well.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shrimati Annu Swaminadhan (one of the Panel of Chairmen.)]

INDIAN BAR COUNCILS AND THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiyar (Madras: General): I am assured by the Government that all the cases to be dealt with by the Bill have had the benefit which they should have had under the Bill. In view of that I beg leave to withdraw the Bill further to amend the Indian Bar Councils Act, 1926 and the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw?

The Bill was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(Amendment of Sections 496 and 497)

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): I do not want to proceed with my motion regarding the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, but I wish it to be kept alive as at present.

1. INDIAN COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(Amendment of Sections 25, 31, 32 etc.)

2. SPECIAL MARRIAGE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C.P. and Berar: General): I do not wish to move the motion regarding the Bill further to amend the Indian Companies Act, 1913. But I would like the Bill to be kept alive.

The same remarks apply to my motion regarding the Bill further to amend the Special Marriage Act, 1872.

1. CALCUTTA PORT (AMENDMENT) BILL.
2. BOMBAY PORT TRUST (AMENDMENT) BILL.
3. MADRAS PORT TRUST (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): These motions, Nos. 13, 15 and 34, relate to the Bombay, Calcutta and Madras Port Trusts Acts. These Bills mostly related to the constitution of the Boards and to various other amendments to the administrative clauses. As we know the constitution has been changed by the official Bill that was presented by the Honourable the Minister for Transport and passed.

As regards the other parts of the Bill, the Honourable Minister has stated in regard to them, that he is bringing forward a comprehensive Bill later on. Therefore I do not want to move these three motions.

WORKERS' PROVIDENT FUND BILL.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): This Bill relates to the establishment and grant of Provident Fund. My Bill is a comprehensive one, but I was told by the Honourable the Minister that he was presenting a Bill which would be far better than my Bill. Well, I shall be glad when this Bill is brought forward because it is a very good thing that Provident Fund should be provided for every worker, who after 35 years of service can look forward to something in his old age. Since the Honourable the Labour Minister has told me that he is bringing in soon a better Bill, I do not want to move it.

PREVENTION OF FREE OR FORCED OR COMPULSORY LABOUR BILL.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): This is a very important Bill. It relates to punishment for free or forced or compulsory labour. This has been a disgrace to society and to the country which has tolerated this state of affairs for over 100 years. In the Geneva Conference it has been agreed that forced labour should be abolished immediately. There are certain Acts now also existing in Bombay, Bengal and the Punjab. The Honourable the Minister has told me that he has appointed a special officer. He absolutely realizes the importance of abolishing this forced labour. The special officer he has appointed has I am told collected literature and he will complete his report within six months. Therefore, he has advised me to hold over this Bill. So, I do not move it.

HINDU MARRIAGES VALIDITY BILL

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Madam, I do not want to move my motion regarding the Bill to provide that marriages between Hindus, Sikhs, Jains and other different castes and sub-castes are valid, but I want to keep the Bill alive.

(Amendment of Sections 4, 29A, etc.)

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): As regards the next motion relating to the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 I am given to understand that the Government is going to bring a Bill on the same lines and therefore I do not want to move this.

MOTOR VEHICLES (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): Madam, this Bill relates to the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939. The object of the Bill is to mitigate the number of fatal accidents that occur through motor lorries. It has been suggested that Governors should be affixed to carburettors and that the limits should be automatically fixed, so that accidents may be avoided. There have been many fatal accidents occurring all over India and also in Delhi. It has been proved by the answers that we have received in this Assembly and the previous Assembly. I would like to hear the Honourable Minister before moving the motion.

Mr. Chairman: Is the honourable member moving his motion?

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: I do not want to move, Madam. The Honourable Minister told me this morning that he had already discussed the subject matter of this Bill with provincial governments and his own government and himself are in agreement with this measure. But he feels that a rule should be made instead of an Act of this nature. I therefore wanted to know from him whether he is prepared to make the rule, then I would at once withdraw the motion. Otherwise I will hold on until the Honourable Minister makes a move.

INDIAN JUDICIAL PROCEDURE BILL.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Madam, I have been told that there is some constitutional difficulty about this Bill but so far as that is concerned I am convinced that it is perfectly competent for this legislature to pass a Bill of this nature. This Bill was sponsored by Sir Hari Singh Gour and it was he who requested me to introduce this Bill on his behalf. Since he himself happens to be here I would rather like that he and those who are of the opinion that there is some constitutional difficulty confer together and come to an understanding. For the present I would not like to move the Bill but would like to keep it pending.

INDIAN BAR COUNCILS AND THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Madam, I do not want to move my motion regarding the Bill further to amend the Indian Bar Councils Act, 1926.

CRIMINAL TRIBES (REPEAL) BILL.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Also I do not want to move my motion regarding the Bill to repeal the Criminal Tribes Act, 1924.

CIVIL MARRIAGES BILL.

Dr. Sir Hari Singh Gour (C.P. and Berar: General): Madam, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for a form of marriage and for registration of other marriages in certain cases.

[Dr. Sir Hari Singh Gour]

I have given in my Statement of Objects and Reasons a few words summarising the genesis of this very important measure. I wish to point out that this measure is about a century old. It was first introduced in the old Council by that distinguished lawyer and jurist Sir Henry Maine but after his term of office expired it continued in the hands of another distinguished English lawyer, Sir James Stephen. After that the Bill became law as the Act of 1872 truncated to all intents and purposes by the reactionary elements in the country. When I happened to join this Assembly I tried to revise the Civil Marriage Bill on the ground that the state must provide a civil marriage law for its people irrespective of caste, creed and nationality. It went to a Select Committee and there I had to face single-handed a battery of opposition from all sides with the result that the Bill emerged from that Committee in a still more truncated form than the Bill which became law in 1872. However, as a small compromise, that Bill was passed and became Act XXX of 1923. Since then I have been hoping that I shall have the opportunity of reviving my Bill in a more representative House and I am glad that my ambition and prayer have been fulfilled and I find before me a more representative gathering than I had 25 years ago.

Mr. Chairman: May I point out that the honourable member has not had the leave of the House yet to introduce his Bill.

Dr. Sir Hari Singh Gour: Madam. I understand that my time is limited to 10 minutes, and I am going to finish in a few minutes. I hope, Madam, that I shall have the chance of taking this House at a later stage through more details of this Bill. In the meantime I crave the leave of the House to introduce the Bill.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide for a form of marriage and for registration of other marriages in certain cases."

The motion was adopted.

Dr. Sir Hari Singh Gour: Madam, I introduce the Bill.

DENTISTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): Madam, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Dentists Act, 1948.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to amend the Dentists Act, 1948."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Madam, I introduce the Bill.

CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(Amendment of Section 488)

Dr. Sir Hari Singh Gour (C.P. and Berar: General): Madam, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure 1898, (Amendment of Section 488).

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure 1898 (Amendments of Section 488.)"

The motion was adopted.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Madam, I introduce the Bill.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 26th August, 1948.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Thursday, 26th August, 1948.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-45 A.M.

CHANGE IN DATE FOR NON-OFFICIAL BUSINESS IN ASSEMBLY

Mr. Speaker: I have an important announcement to make as regards the change of certain dates. Honourable members know that 30th August is fixed for non-official business. I propose to cancel that date and fix the 3rd September as the date for the non-official business. So the non-official business on the 30th August will be taken up on the 3rd September. The list of business issued last night will hold good but it will be taken up on the 3rd September and not on the 30th August.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Will the questions for the 30th also be taken up on the 3rd?

Mr. Speaker: The questions will not change. They will remain the same.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): Are we to understand, Sir, that the present Session of the Assembly will be over on the 3rd September?

Mr. Speaker: It is in the hands of the honourable members.

SUPPLY OF ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS IN ADVANCE TO MEMBERS

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya (Madras: General): Before you pass on to the agenda, may I recall your attention to the statement that you kindly made on Mr. Tyagi's suggestion that statements laid on the table of the House may be circulated beforehand: otherwise we are deprived of the chance of studying them and bringing up the points: and the number of questions will multiply upon the same question if they have to be dealt with on a later occasion. I think it is easy to have extra copies made of these statements and circulate them beforehand.

Seth Govind Das (C.P. and Berar: General): In addition to that request, I would again like to draw your attention to the statement which you made, and as it happens in various provinces, that the replies to these questions may also be printed and given to us beforehand. It will save the time of the House as well as give us facilities for asking supplementary questions.

Mr. Speaker: The question raised by the honourable member, Dr. Sitaramayya, raises the same question which Seth Govind Das has now raised.

Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya: On a minor scale!

Mr. Speaker: Yes. At the same time, that will involve the supply of answers to particular questions before the questions are answered in the House.

As regards the wider question, of which the first question is a part, I think I must admit that I do not feel so enthusiastic about the position which I had taken before, in view of the change of the whole set-up. The matter might be considered if the members so like. I am prepared to have consultations with some honourable members and talk the matter over. I think this is a better solution rather than having a discussion here.

But I may say, that, I have now begun to take a different view of the matter, from the one which I had taken two years back. The 15th August, 1947 has changed so many things and this is one of them.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): Cannot the member who asks the question be supplied with a typed copy for the time being so that he may at least know what the replies are?

Mr. Speaker: It makes no difference whether it is placed on the table or the particular member is supplied with the answer. However, I will talk with the members and have a discussion with them.

ELECTION TO STANDING COMMITTEE FOR MINISTRY OF DEFENCE

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh (Minister for Defence): Sir, I move:

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in such manner as the Honourable the Speaker may direct, one member to serve until the end of the current financial year on the Standing Committee to advise on subjects concerning the Ministry of Defence, vice Shri Manikyalal Varma, resigned."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in such manner as the Honourable the Speaker may direct, one member to serve until the end of the current financial year on the Standing Committee to advise on subjects concerning the Ministry of Defence, vice Shri Manikyalal Varma, resigned."

The motion was adopted.

ELECTION TO STANDING COMMITTEE FOR MINISTRY OF COMMUNICATIONS

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena (Minister of State for Relief and Rehabilitation): Sir, I move:

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in such manner as the Honourable the Speaker may direct, two members to serve on the Standing Advisory Committee of the Constituent Assembly of India (Legislative) attached to the Ministry of Communications, in the vacancies caused by Pandit Chaturbhuj Pathak and Kunwar Shamsher Jang ceasing to be members of the Constituent Assembly of India (Legislative)."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in such manner as the Honourable the Speaker may direct, two members to serve on the Standing Advisory Committee of the Constituent Assembly of India (Legislative) attached to the Ministry of Communications, in the vacancies caused by Pandit Chaturbhuj Pathak and Kunwar Shamsher Jang ceasing to be members of the Constituent Assembly of India (Legislative)."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: I have to inform honourable members that the following dates have been fixed for receiving nominations and holding elections, if necessary, in connection with the following Committees, namely:

	Date for nomination	Date for election
Standing Committee for the Ministry of Defence.
Standing Committee for the Ministry of Communications.	28-8-48	31-8-48

The nominations for these Committees will be received in the Notice Office upto 12 Noon on the date mentioned for the purpose. EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS BILL

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister Without Portfolio): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide, in pursuance of an agreement with Pakistan for the exchange of prisoners, for the transfer of certain prisoners from India to Pakistan and the reception in India of certain prisoners from Pakistan.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide, in pursuance of an agreement with Pakistan for the exchange of prisoners, for the transfer of certain prisoners from India to Pakistan and the reception in India of certain prisoners from Pakistan."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam (U.P.: General): May I know whether these prisoners include the prisoners awarded capital punishment or not?

Mr. Speaker: I think when the motion comes for consideration, the honourable member will have all the information that he wants. The present is merely a leave motion, which is more or less a formal one.

CENTRAL SILK BOARD BILL

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee (Minister for Industry and Supply): Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the development under Central control of the raw silk industry and for that purpose to establish the Central Silk Board.

Mr. Speaker: The House will now proceed with further consideration of the Bill to consolidate and amend the law regulating labour in factories, as reported by the Select Committee.

I think we have to start with Clause 47.

But Clauses 21 and 23 were held over. Shall we dispose of them or proceed with Clause 47 and the further clauses? With Clause 47 first?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram (Minister for Labour): Yes.

Mr. Speaker: What is the idea?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Let us then finish clauses 21 and 23.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: About clause 21, the draughtsman has been consulted, and he suggests that the word "and" occurring after (ii) may be dropped and the word "and" before "unless" will come after "lathe" in (iii), and the comma here will be dropped.

Mr. Speaker: But the construction of the whole sentence will stand as it is?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: Is the position clear to honourable members?

Some Honourable Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: This clause was held over last time with a view to consider the amendments that were suggested and also to consider whether any change in the present structure of the section was necessary. The point has been considered and the proposal now is that the first "and" occurring at the end of part (ii) of sub-clause (1) be deleted and the second "and" occurring before the word "unless" be shifted from that place to the preceding line after the semi-colon. I think it would be better if somebody formally moves a revised amendment.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain (U.P.: General): Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 21 of the Bill the word 'and' occurring at the end of part (ii) be deleted and the word 'and' occurring before the word 'unless' in line 9 be shifted to the last preceding line after the semi-colon."

May I know whether the Honourable Minister accepts my previous amendment No. 13 on list No. 3, viz., that between the words "and" and "unless" occurring in line nine the brackets and figures "(iv)" be inserted.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 21 of the Bill,—

(a) the word 'and' occurring at the end of part (ii) be omitted;

(b) at the end of part (iii) the word 'and' be inserted; and

(c) for the word 'and' occurring in line 9, the brackets and letters '(iv)' be substituted."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, the passage occurring after the word 'unless' appears to be an exception to parts (i), (ii) and (iii). If that is so, the figure (iv) should not be there.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: It applies to the following (a), (b) and (c).

Mr. Speaker: There is now no further scope for discussion. The amendment which I have put to the House, I suppose, correctly represents what the Honourable Minister wants.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 21 of the Bill,—

(a) the word 'and' occurring at the end of part (ii) be omitted;

(b) at the end of part (iii) the word 'and' be inserted; and

(c) for the word 'and' occurring in line 9, the brackets and letters '(iv)' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 21, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 21, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Mr. Speaker: Clause 23.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, the material amendment is that instead of the word "adolescent" we will substitute "young persons". A question was raised that children were debarred from working under sub-clause (2) of clause 22. If we look at sub-clause (2) of clause 23, we will find that the provincial governments have been given power to prescribe the machines which in their opinion are of such a dangerous character that young persons ought not to work at them unless the requirements laid down therein are complied with. This amendment which may apply to a child is necessary.

Mr. Speaker: Then the amendment which I have already put to the House stands?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Yes, Sir.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): My objection is this that under clause 22 (2) "No woman or child shall be allowed in any factory,....." and this would be inconsistent with the permission for a child to work in certain machinery given under this amendment. The provincial government is vested with some discretion, no doubt but that does not obviate the total prohibition in clause 22 (2). I will not press my objection if the Honourable Minister thinks that there is no inconsistency.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sub-clause (2) of clause 22 does not prohibit women and children operating machinery in a factory except those which are in motion at the time of lubricating, and adjusting any parts and it also prohibits the employment of women and children in certain dangerous positions such as between moving parts or between fixed and moving parts of any machinery which is in motion. The purpose of the present amendment is that there may be other machinery which may be dangerous and declared as such by the provincial government and if a child is employed at those machinery, he must fulfil all these conditions that have been laid down under Section 23. In no case a child or woman is to work at such machines as provided under sub-clause (2) of clause 22 but there may be other machines which may be dangerous and to guard against that this provision is made.

Mr. Speaker: If the Honourable Minister is satisfied then I suppose Mr. Santhanam has no further objections.

What about the other amendment moved by Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena on the 24th?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena (U.P.: General): I shall withdraw it.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member the leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: And I understand that Mr. Sidhva was not going to move his amendment. I shall therefore put the amendment moved by the Honourable Minister to the House.

The question is:

"That for clause 23 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

'23. Employment of young persons on dangerous machines.—(1) No young person shall work at any machine to which this section applies, unless he has been fully instructed as to the dangers arising in connection with the machine and the precautions to be observed and—

- (a) has received sufficient training in work at the machine, or
- (b) is under adequate supervision by a person who has a thorough knowledge and experience of the machine.

(2) Sub-section (1) shall apply to such machines as may be prescribed by the Provincial Government, being machines which in its opinion are of such a dangerous character that young persons ought not to work at them unless the foregoing requirements are complied with."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 23, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 23, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I find that the word 'adolescent' occurs again in the clause in the last but one line.

Mr. Speaker: A new clause has been put in in place of the old clause. We will now proceed to clause 47.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan (Madras: General): I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 47 of the Bill, the words 'wherein more than one hundred and fifty workers are ordinarily employed' be omitted."

Sir, the other day I spoke about the necessity of providing canteens for workers in factories. The same arguments which I placed before the House then will hold good in respect of this clause as well. In my opinion any welfare work done by the Government should reach each and every worker of a factory which the Government have recognized. To every worker, a resting place after the work is required during the interval. And for a worker to take rest is not a luxury but it is a necessity. If we do not make provision in this Bill to give such amenities to workers the workers will find it very difficult to get such things from the management through their own efforts. So it would be better if the Government make definite provision in the Bill to give all the necessary welfare measures which they propose to give to the workers. The workers should not be left at the mercy of the employers. And we know how merciful an employer can be towards the labourer! I do not want to go into any details and I hope the Honourable Minister will accept this amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 47 of the Bill, the words 'wherein more than one hundred and fifty workers are ordinarily employed' be omitted."

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena may move his amendment at this stage.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 47 of the Bill, for the words 'one hundred and fifty', the words 'one hundred' be substituted."

I only want to say that the factories containing more than 150 workers should not be the only factories to enjoy these benefits and that factories containing over hundred workers should also be provided with rest rooms, shelters and lunch rooms. I think that one hundred workers are a sufficient number for a factory to provide rest rooms, shelters and lunch rooms.

Shall I move the other amendments also, Sir?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 47 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'In these shelters and rest rooms in factories where workers change shifts between 10 P.M. and 4 A.M. there shall be arrangements for the sleeping of workers who change shifts and who desire to sleep therein, and the sleeping place shall be airy and shall be protected from rain and cold.'" and

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 47 of the Bill, for the word 'may' the word 'shall' be substituted."

Mr. Speaker: I think I shall place these last two amendments later on before the House, because the subject-matter is different. The first one (No. 31) relates to the same subject, namely, about the number of workers.

Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 47 of the Bill, for the words 'one hundred and fifty', the words 'one hundred' be substituted."

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): Mine is the same amendment, Sir, but I am not pressing it because the Honourable Minister stated that his figure was arbitrary—and mine is also arbitrary. He wants to make an experiment and I do not want to stand in the way.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: For obvious reasons I am not accepting these two amendments. The obvious reasons are the grounds of practicability. If we delete the figure one hundred and fifty, it means that in every factory all these things have to be provided. I cannot conceive that in a very small beedi factory we can demand all these amenities for the workers. (An Honourable Member: "You can make a compromise and fix the number at 125"). There is no question of compromise here. I do not accept the amendments.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 47 of the Bill, the words 'wherein more than one hundred and fifty workers are ordinarily employed' be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 47 of the Bill, for the words 'one hundred and fifty', the words 'one hundred' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: Now we go to the other amendment of Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena on this clause.

Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 47 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'In these shelters and rest rooms in factories where workers change shifts between 10 P.M. and 4 A.M. there shall be arrangements for the sleeping of workers who change shifts and who desire to sleep therein, and the sleeping place shall be airy and shall be protected from rain and cold.'"

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, in my District of Gorakhpur there are 23 sugar factories. The shifts in the factories are in certain seasons continuous. They begin at 8 A.M. or 10 A.M. and with eight-hour shifts the midnight shifts change at 12 midnight or 2 A.M. What I find is that the workers have to come for the night shift at 12 night or 2 A.M. sufficiently early they come at 9 P.M. and sleep there till their shift begins. In the case of those whose shift concludes at midnight they sleep immediately after being relieved from duty. But actually there is no room for them to sleep anywhere. Sometimes they sleep on pavements and sometimes on the floor wherever they can find space to lie down. The sugar cane crushing season is between November and March during bitter cold, and in that bitter cold night they have to sleep on pavements and floors. I want that these shelters, rest rooms and lunch rooms should be so commodious that workers who change shift at midnight or at 2 A.M. should have place to sleep. It is a very important thing.

I think probably there are many more factories all over the country where workers change shift at midnight either in rain or in bitter cold, and they have no place to sleep. If lunch rooms are necessary or if rest rooms are necessary, it is much more necessary to have sleeping places for the night. I hope that by making this provision the Honourable Minister will earn the gratitude of millions of workers and make their lives human lives instead of animal lives, which is the case at present.

Moreover, the number of quarters for workers provided by the factories is very small; it is not even five per cent. of the required number. The only way in which the workers can be provided with temporary facilities for sleep until quarters for all are built is by having this sleeping accommodation. The worker working at midnight or at 2 A.M. cannot go at that time two or three miles to his residence. He has to spend the whole night in the factory or keep awake in which case he may not be ready for the next day's shift. Under these circumstances I think it is necessary to have shelters and rooms so that there is enough accommodation for sleeping in them. I hope the Honourable Minister will see that the shelters and rest rooms with such sleeping accommodation are provided very soon. If this amendment is accepted, the shelters and rooms will be such that people will get room to sleep in them at midnight.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, so many amenities may be necessary for the workers, but we cannot argue on imaginary things. I do not know how the shift changes at midnight or at 2 A.M. One has got to work from 6 or 8 in the morning when the shift starts and if so how does the shift change at midnight or at 2 A.M.? I have not been able to follow.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: The first shift lasts from 8 A.M. to 4 P.M.—8 hours—and the next from 4 P.M. till 12 midnight, and the third from 12 midnight to 8 A.M. If the first shift starts at 10 A.M., then the shifts are from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M., 6 P.M. to 2 A.M., and 2 A.M. to 10 A.M.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: It is very easy to calculate it as 8 hours, but there is a break—it cannot be eight hours continuous.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: There is no break; there are continuous eight-hour shifts. The first shift that begins at 8 in the morning goes on till 4 P.M. and then from 4 P.M. till midnight comes the next shift; the third shift lasts from midnight to morning eight o'clock. Similarly the other shifts starting at 10 A.M. go from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M., 6 P.M. to 2 A.M., and 2 A.M. to 10 A.M. These shifts are continuous. They cannot get any off during the four months of the cane season. So they have to change at midnight.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: It is always better to so arrange the shifts that the workers may not have to change at midnight or 2 A.M. You have to start your shift at 6 in the morning, work till 2 P.M., then work up to 10 in the night, from 10 P.M. you work up to 6 in the morning. So there will be no occasion to change the shift at 12 or 2 A.M. in the morning. That is easier than to provide sleeping accommodation.

For the sake of a few sugar factories where the shifts change at midnight, or at 2 A.M., if you make a compulsory provision in this Act it will make it compulsory even for those textile mills which are in big cities like Bombay, Madras or Calcutta where there is no sufficient accommodation even to provide these lunch rooms, rest rooms, etc., and we cannot expect the industrialists by simply making an absurd provision in the Act, to provide sleeping accommodation for their workers in their factories. On these grounds I do not see I am going to accept it.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: May I ask the Honourable Minister to make this provision at least in the case of sugar factories? These are generally in villages where ample space is available. If power is given to the Provincial Governments they can do it. There is nothing to make the factories work according to the schedule from 6 A.M. to 2 P.M., 2 to 10 P.M. and 10 P.M. to 6 A.M. And even if it is done, one cannot work continuously for the whole night.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): May I point out that in sugar factories the quarters of the labourers are on the premises and quite near the factories.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: It may be that the argument advanced by my friend has some force, but I feel that for the good of the greater number of the workers it is not advisable to do so. We are advocating for housing accommodation for workers near the industry, and if we make such a provision it will give some kind of a loophole for the industrialists to say "Now, you are asking for sleeping room for these workers; that will solve to some extent the problem of accommodation and therefore the housing question may be held over". Therefore, for a section of the industry for which probably the shift-system could be adjusted, as the Honourable Minister stated, it is not desirable that the sleeping room should be provided. If we do it we will give a loophole to the industrialists.

Again, some of the workers may be induced during the working hours to go and sleep if the sleeping rooms were there. And the industrialists might say, "They have so many facilities and they go and connivingly sleep there". We do not want to give any kind of a loophole to the industrialists. We want substantial things to be done for the workers. I for one would ask for the houses to be built and would insist upon them. Therefore I would suggest that this is a local matter which could be adjusted and should not be pressed.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, I am of the view that this amendment, if accepted, will not introduce any element of compulsion as the Honourable Minister fears. This amendment of my friend Mr. Saksena makes provision for sleeping room in factories where the shift changes between 10 P.M. and 2 A.M. Of course, if the Honourable Minister says that the shifts should be so arranged as not to change in this fashion, then of course those factories will not be bound by this provision.

As regards Mr. Sidhva's argument that the housing problem may be sabotaged or by-passed or kept in cold storage. I do not think it can hold much water. How long should the workers wait? Till Doomsday? How long have they to wait for houses built near the factory? When they are built, there will be no need for these dormitories inside the factories, but so long as there is no room near the factories and so long as their own homes are far away, there must be some arrangement made for them for rest during night when the shifts change between these hours. To my mind this provision will conduce to the efficiency of nightshift workers. Therefore, I think it is a very salutary provision and I would request the Honourable Minister to accept it in the interest of the working class.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan: Sir, I wish to support the amendment. I cannot quite agree with the arguments brought forward by the Honourable Minister. It seems that he is in favour of supporting the industrialists. If a law is made, it is for the industrialists to see that it is put into practice. It is not for the Honourable Minister to see whether they will be able to give accommodation, to the workers if such a clause is provided there.

Sir, in this Bill, in the first part of the clause the Honourable Minister is leaving out a large number of factories from the benefit of having lunch rooms, rest rooms, etc. There are clauses here which allow women to work in factories at night. There may be factories where women will be coming to work if they are allowed to work in the factory at night. Certainly, they must have some place to sit and rest if they come before the fixed time, and if they could not return after work, even then they must have some place to sit and rest. I think it is quite necessary that this amendment should be accepted in the interests of the workers. We must not deprive the workers of the benefit of having rest rooms and we should not make any provision in the Bill which will put the workers, especially the women workers, into difficulties in finding a resting place. For the men workers, it does not matter where they rest before or after their work, but for women it is quite essential to have some rest rooms. By this I do not mean to advocate the provision allowing women to be employed in factories at night.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): I do not think, Sir, that this amendment is at all necessary. Firstly, you will be pleased to see that the Provincial Government has been given power by rules to prescribe the standards of accommodation and rest rooms and other matters have been provided for in sub-clause (3). If in a case the Provincial Government thinks that it is possible and ought to be done, it can prescribe that under the present sub-clause (3). Moreover, as you know, so far as women workers are concerned we have already passed a clause prohibiting their employment after 7 P.M. except in fish curing.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: He is thinking of fish curing.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: So I do not think that argument holds good and as the Honourable Minister has said, it may not be possible to have in a large number of factories sleeping accommodation. Therefore, by accepting this amendment you would be putting something which will be impracticable and which will not or cannot be complied with.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): I am sorry, Sir, to see a situation in the House when amendments are to be accepted or rejected only according to the will of the Ministers or those who pilot the Bill. If that is the situation, what does the House stand for?

Now, so far as this amendment is concerned, I think that if the industrialists require their labourers to work at night, it is only just, proper and human that they should provide them with sleeping accommodation for the night. Of course, anything can be said about any amendment or any provision. That is another matter, but I think this particular matter is one which ought to receive the attention of the House and this amendment ought to be accepted by the House, no matter what the Minister says or does not say.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, my friend has raised a constitutional point. I have not asked him to support or oppose that amendment. It is for him to decide which way to cast his lot.

On merits, as has been interpreted by Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka discretion rests with the Provincial Governments. But I do not want to create a false impression that it was our intention to give this power to the Provincial Government so that it may require the factories to provide sleeping accommodation as well. That will be stretching it too much and if some Provincial Governments extend it to that extent they may do so, but that was not our intention and it is not my intention even at present to provide sleeping accommodation for the workers in the rest rooms.

Then Mr. Kamath raised a point that it will not become compulsory. I know what it means to make a provision in an Act. Besides, we have to look to the efficiency of the workers. If the shift changes at 2 A.M.—personally I hold that the shift should not change at 2 A.M.—it should be so arranged....

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Will you make provision for that—that the shift should not change at 2 A.M. in the night?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: If my friend takes some interest in labour matters and if he claims that he has got some hold on the workers, he can easily see that the shift does not change at 2 A.M. and if he can't even do that, I do not think he has any right to say that he represents the interests of the workers.

So I feel that the shift should not change at 12 midnight or at 2 A.M. There should be no occasion for the workers to sleep in the factories. The shift should end at 10 P.M. and they should return to their houses and they should be in the midst of their families at night. Those who have to change or those who have to work at night will come on at 10 P.M. and work till 6 in the morning and there would thus be no occasion for sleeping accommodation in the factories. Supposing the shift changes at 2 A.M. and there is sleeping accommodation for the workers in the factories, can anybody conceive that a person who retires at 2 in the morning will rise at 6 in the early morning? He would like to sleep till 8 A.M. or 10 A.M. as he does in his house and it will be a very difficult thing to ask the workers to leave the sleeping accommodation early in the morning. That will create complications. So, before we give amendments or before we accept or support the amendments, I would request my friends, especially friends like Babu Ramnarayan Singh to spend some thought as regards the practicability of the proposition and also all the aspects of it before rising and raising some constitutional point.

Mr. Speaker: I need not read again the amendment of Prof. Saksena.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: No, Sir. Although I do not agree with the arguments given by the Minister, still in view of the fact that he is not prepared to accept it, I do not press it. I want permission of the House to withdraw it.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member wishes to have leave of the House to withdraw his amendment. Has he the leave?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: No.

Mr. Speaker: As there is one dissentient, leave is considered to be refused. So I shall put the amendment to the House.

The question is:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 47 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

"In these shelters and rest rooms in factories where workers change shifts between 10 P.M. and 4 A.M. there shall be arrangements for the sleeping of workers who change shifts and who desire to sleep therein, and the sleeping place shall be airy and shall be protected from rain and cold."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: Does he wish to press the amendment about change of "shall" for "may"?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: No, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 47 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 47 was added to the Bill.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I shall move my amendment.

Shri O. V. Alagesan (Madras: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I have got an amendment for sub-clause (1).

Mr. Speaker: I will take that later on, as it relates to part (d) of sub-clause (3).

Shri O. V. Alagesan: No, Sir. It really relates to sub-clause (1).

Mr. Speaker: Any how, we will take it up after Mr. Kamath's amendment.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in part (b) of sub-clause (3) of clause 48 of the Bill,—

(i) for the word 'and', occurring in line three, a comma be substituted; and

(ii) after the word 'clothing', the words 'and for playing' be added at the end."

If the amendment is accepted by the Honourable Minister, the clause will read as follows:

(b) requiring the provision in factories to which this section applies of additional facilities for the care of children belonging to women workers, including suitable provision of facilities for washing; changing their clothing and for playing."

Sir, I do not wish to expatiate upon the simple theme of children and their play. All of us here are agreed on this point, considering especially that children under the age of 6 are involved here and not merely children of 1 or 2 years. Children under the age of 6 really need something to amuse themselves with during their leisure, but throughout this clause, we do not find any provision for play or recreation of these little children. Those of us who remember our childhood days, I suppose will not seriously object to this amendment which provides for some toys or other little picture books, to which I referred in my speech on the bill the other day. Some provision should be made for children to play with for example toys etc., when their mothers are away and when the washing has been done and their clothes have been changed and they are sitting idle and doing nothing, because if nothing is thus provided for, their minds and bodies might wander into other avenues of mischief, which we certainly want to prevent. In my opinion it will be very wholesome, very salutary, that our Government which has introduced this very progressive labour legislation and has provided for creches also in factories, which is a very progressive measure, should make provision and afford facilities in those creches for children to spend their time pleasantly when their mothers are away from them:

Shri K. Santhanam: May I point out to the honourable member that his amendment adding the words "for playing" will really qualify the women workers and not the children.

Shri H. V. Kamath: No, Sir. I will explain to my honourable friend, it is not so. If he reads the clause very carefully, it will read like this: "... for the care of children belonging to women workers" (and not for the care of women workers) "including suitable provision of facilities for washing," (facilities for children being washed and not women being washed and) "changing their clothing" (changing the children's clothing and not women's clothing). I do not know if the honourable member wants to substitute by the words "for their playing", but certainly if my honourable friend had read the clause and amendment with an eye to proper connotation, construction and syntax, he would not have made the mistake. I therefore think that the words "and for playing" should be added at the end of the clause so as to provide facilities for the children's play and recreation inside the factories when the women or mothers are away from them and they are left to their own resources. Sir, I move this amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in part (b) of sub-clause (3) of clause 48 of the Bill,—

(i) for the word 'and', occurring in line three, a comma be substituted; and

(ii) after the word 'clothing', the words 'and for playing' be added at the end."

Shri M. Thirumala Rao (Madras: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, what Mr. Kamath wants to incorporate by way of amendment, I think, is contained in sub-clause (2) where it is mentioned: "shall be under the charge of women trained in the care of children and infants". Women who are trained to take care of children and infants during the absence of their mothers, naturally see that the children spend their time in playing and there is no purpose in again adding another amendment.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I have every sympathy with my honourable friend, Mr. Kamath, but I do not accept his amendment; it is not that I am opposed to it, but because that amendment is superfluous. One cannot conceive of a creche where there is no arrangement for playing of the children. It has been provided that the Provincial Government may make rules prescribing the location and the standard in respect of construction and accommodation, furniture and other equipment of rooms to be provided under this section. Equipment means the equipment of playing things and things like that for the children and this provision is already there. We cannot conceive of a creche without playing things for the children and I hope my honourable friend will withdraw his amendment.

Shri H. V. Kamath: In view of the Honourable Minister's explanation to the effect that he cannot imagine creches without toys and facilities for the playing of the children, I do not think I need press my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Shri O. V. Alagesan: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 48 of the Bill, the words 'or of such children under their charge' be added at the end."

The object of my amendment is this, Sir. The clause seeks to restrict the benefit to children belonging to the women workers. The object is that the scope should be expanded to include other children that may be actually under their charge and under their care. There may be cases, very hard cases when orphans and other children of near relations like a sister may be brought up by the women workers and it will cause hardship if such cases are not included. Another instance may also be cited. There may be children of the first wife who is no more and the husband may have taken the second wife merely for the purpose of bringing up the children of the first wife. In that case, if this clause is strictly and narrowly interpreted, it will bar such children having the benefit of this clause. There seems to be an apprehension in the mind of the Honourable the Minister that if this clause is liberalised, then, a number of children may be brought in and the employer put to the expense of giving milk to them. I am willing to have the wording of my amendment changed so as to include only children who are actually brought up by these women workers, or children who are actually dependent upon them. I think this amendment is necessary to avoid any of the hardships that I have pointed out. If the Honourable Minister is not willing to accept any of these things, I would request that instructions may be issued to officers vesting them with power to examine such hard cases and decide in their discretion to allow such cases. Sir, I move the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 48 of the Bill, the words 'or of such children under their charge' be added at the end."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The honourable mover of the amendment has himself given the reasons and the fate of his amendment. In the last portion of his speech, some suggestion has been made. I will take care to see that in genuine cases the employers extend these facilities to the children who may be really dependant upon the women workers. To make a statutory provision here, Sir, will lead to mis-use of this provision and will throw an unnecessary burden on the employers. I therefore do not accept the amendment.

Shri O. V. Alagesan: In view of the Honourable Minister's assurance, I beg leave of the House to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 48 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 48 was added to the Bill.

Shri Upendranath Barman: (West Bengal: General): Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 49 of the Bill, for the words 'the occupier', the words 'the Provincial Government' be substituted."

Sir, generally speaking, I quite welcome the idea of a statutory provision for the employment of welfare officers; but my submission is that these welfare officers should be Government servants and not employees of the occupiers. I base my submission on two grounds. First of all, I think it would be rather a cumbrous procedure and that it would create difficulties if the position were that the duties and qualifications of welfare officers, the conditions of their service, etc., are to be fixed by the Government, but their actual employment was to be under the occupier. The occupier also may find it difficult to employ men who will be to the liking of the Government. It may be difficult for the Government also to find fault with the welfare officers and require the occupier to change them. I suppose there will be difficulties in the working of the system. But, my greater reason lies somewhere else. I consider, Sir, that the employment of welfare officers is a necessity for more than one reason. If we divide the activities of the labourers or the working force into two categories, or into two fields, we may do it by confining his activities inside the factory, that is when he is employed in the factory, and his activities outside. So far as the worker is concerned in his actual employment in the factory, if it be the Government's view that in this Factory Bill the Government is concerned with the welfare of the worker while he is employed in the factory, and would very little bother itself with the activities of the workers outside the factory, then of course, the Government may prescribe rules as to the duties of the welfare officers, namely, that he will see whether the rules in the Factory Act itself, and the regulations and instructions that may be issued by the Government are strictly observed by the employer. Even in that case, I should think, Sir, that if the welfare officer be a direct employee of the Government the Government would have a greater control over him, and every defect on the part of the employer in the execution of his duties under the rules and regulations will be at once reported to the Government, and the Government could take adequate steps. But if the welfare officer be an employee of the occupier, then, he will have a double responsibility. His incentive will be to satisfy somehow the Government by submitting reports; but his main objective will be how to keep his employer satisfied. The objective of the Government will, I think be less fulfilled by a welfare officer employed by the occupier than had the welfare officer been appointed by the Government. I think the Government has got a duty not only to see to the working conditions of labour in the factory, but also to see that the condition of labour, the submerged class, who are ignorant, and uneducated, and who do not know how to live and how to educate their children, is improved. Of course, all the activities of a man cannot be regulated by law. But certainly, if the Government are going to appoint whole-time officers for that purpose, the Government can do much. Side by side with keeping a watch over the activities of the labourers inside the factories, the Government should also try to better their lot outside the factories. If Government have got this comprehensive view of things, that objective cannot be achieved if these welfare officers are not employed by Government. Government must employ these officers and have full control over the activities of these officers without let or hindrance from the occupier or without any divided responsibility of these officers to Government and to the occupier. The labour force I think suffers more in this country on account of their own inefficiency than to the wanton injustice meted out to them by their employers. I know many cases where a labourer gets more wages now than before but that surplus money is not spent on food or consumer goods or in the education of his children. The workers live in the same old miserable state because this surplus money goes in drink. (An Honourable Member: 'Question')? I can answer that question by saying that the liquor shops near about the plantations and factories now sell more liquor than before, which shows where the surplus money of the workers is going. These welfare officers should therefore speak to these workers and point out to them where their good lies, explain to them the harm in buying unnecessary things and the benefit of good food and proper education for their children. That will do a lot of good to these people.

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid the honourable member is going into the widest question of the duties of welfare officers. The point here is as to who should appoint them; he must address himself to that point and to nothing else. I think he has done that sufficiently.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: He has another amendment; he is speaking on that Shri Upendranath Barman: I am explaining the reasons why Government should employ these welfare officers and how they can do better service if they are employed by Government. However, I have nothing more to say.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member has another amendment the fate of which, I think, will depend on this amendment. That relates to the addition of sub-clause (3). So I will put the amendment to the House.

Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 49 of the Bill, for the words 'the occupier', the words 'the Provincial Government' be substituted."

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

*The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.
Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, (one of the Panel of Chairmen) in the Chair.*

Mr. Chairman: We are considering the amendment by Shri Upendranath Barman.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I wish to support the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Barman. I am very glad that he has pointed out that the difficulties which will arise if Labour Welfare Officers are appointed by the management. I have experience of Welfare Officers appointed by some factories. What happens is that they are a sort of Assistant Managers of the Factory who try to see that labour is not able to organise properly and that labour does not become such a force as to be able to bargain for suitable terms of service. Such Labour Welfare Officers do no good. If we are to have real Welfare Officers, in whom labour should have confidence, then Government should appoint them and their expense should be recovered from the factories. That will inspire confidence, because when the Government, which is entrusted with the task of keeping industrial peace, appoints a man, his efficiency will be judged by the fact whether he is able to prevent any breach of the industrial peace there, and as such, he will devote himself wholeheartedly to see that labour is kept contented. He will be a sort of Liaison Officer between the Manager and labour and he will be able to perform the real functions of a Labour Welfare Officer independently.

But if the Manager appoints him, labour will not have faith in him, and he will become a sort of distrusted officer. It will not serve the purpose that the Honourable the Minister has in view. I should think that Mr. Barman has moved this amendment after some good experience that he has had and he therefore thinks that a Labour Officer appointed by Government will inspire confidence and he will see to it that peace is not disturbed and that there is harmony in industry. Also the Manager will feel that the Labour Welfare Officer gives impartial advice which he ought to accept, otherwise the matter will be reported to Government. The advice of such a Welfare Officer, will be something which he cannot easily reject. But if a Labour Welfare Officer, appointed by a Manager, gives some impartial advice which happens to be in favour of labour, the Manager may become angry with him and in future that officer may not dare to give such impartial advice, whereas, an officer appointed by Government will not care for the whims of the employer. He will give that advice which conduces to the peace of the industry.

I therefore think that it is very necessary that the amendment should be accepted. In that case the Labour Welfare Officers will become a real institution. At present the Works Committees are not functioning properly. What happens today is that some one of the management is appointed Chairman of the Works Committee. The Works Committee becomes equally divided on all important questions, with the representatives of labour and those of the employers ranged in opposite camps. The result is that instead of harmony there is friction. Probably a Welfare Officer appointed by the Government may act as a liaison officer and he should be made chairman of the Works Committee. I think the Welfare Officer appointed by Government will be to function as a sort of a cementing medium; he will cement both factions and be able to make the Works Committee work properly. Otherwise they will fail. In fact I stand for abolition of Works Committees altogether as they retard the growth of genuine, strong and independent Trade Unions. If they cannot be abolished then Government must appoint labour officers to act as their chairmen. It is obvious that the Labour Officer appointed by the Manager will have to depend on the good wishes of the employer and cannot be of any help.

So I think that Mr. Barman's amendment is very important and I hope the Minister will see his way to accept it, I am sure the Bill will be much improved if he accepts it. Sir, I support the amendment.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I wholeheartedly associate myself with the amendment of Mr. Barman. I had given notice of an amendment of a similar nature, which is printed. It was to this effect:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 49 of the Bill, the following be added at the end, namely:

'and the person or authority subject to whose approval such officer shall be appointed or dismissed'."

The object of appointing a Labour Officer is to provide some sort of liaison between labour and the management. Experience has shown that if the appointment of the Welfare Officer rests with the management, the Welfare Officer is more prone to become one of the management rather than a person who cares equally for the labour.

In my own district, under the advice of the Employers Association, Northern India, the Tobacco Manufacturers Ltd., appointed a Welfare Officer. Those of us who had any sympathy with labour, or were working for labour, were happy at it. Shortly after we were disillusioned because we found that the officer was more concerned with creating division among the labour and in trying to impose the management's point of view on labour. He proved to be of no use whatsoever. If the present section is retained as it is, namely, that the appointment, dismissal and control of the Welfare Officer rests with the factory, I am afraid that it will not achieve the object for which the appointment of a Welfare Officer is provided. In fact an independent type of Welfare Officer is a useful institution for the factory, both for labour and the management. No person who is entirely in the hands of the management can inspire confidence in labour. My friend Mr. Barman's amendment goes a little further than mine. My amendment simply provides that the appointment and dismissal of the welfare officer shall be with the approval of such person or authority as the provincial government may nominate in that behalf. That authority may consist of one nominee of the Government, a representative of the management and a representative of labour, a sort of Board which will meet from time to time or it may consist of a particular officer who may act in that behalf. Mine is only a halfway house and I think that it would be in the interest of the State, the public as also the factory management and labour that the person appointed for the job should be one who enjoys the confidence of labour and may bridge the gulf between labour and management. Only such man who is not in the hands of the management can do this work and I do hope that the Honourable Minister will see his way to accepting the amendment of my honourable friend Mr. Barman or in the alternative he might accept mine and if there is any indication that he is willing, I shall move mine.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): Sir, I support the amendment which has been moved by Mr. Barman. I think the labour welfare officer should be appointed by the provincial governments. The experience in my place in Central India has been that the labour welfare officer appointed by the management of different companies work more as spies and divide the working classes rather than do any good to the workers and therefore I think both the amendments put forward by Mr. Barman should be accepted. Then the institution will work very well. I would request the Honourable Minister kindly to accept them.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, this is a provision which was specifically included in this Bill at my instance. I was very anxious that in the larger factories it should be made incumbent on employers to maintain welfare officers. At first my idea was the same as that of some of the honourable members of this House. I was also thinking on the lines that these welfare officers should be appointed by the provincial governments. But there is some difficulty in that. There is another aspect of the proposition as well. If the welfare officer is to be a successful officer, when he has to carry out various duties which are not necessarily statutory, unless he has the goodwill of the employer he will not be able to make much headway. A person who is a persona non grata with the employers will not be a successful labour welfare officer and more so when he has to execute so many things which are not provided in the Act itself. As regards the statutory part of the Bill we have already provided for the appointment of Inspectors by the provincial governments and these welfare officers are not necessarily meant for carrying out the statutory provisions of this Act. After weighing the advantages and disadvantages of both the arrangements I have come to the conclusion that it would be better if these welfare officers are appointed by the management. They should be persons who should have the confidence of the management, of course subject to such conditions as are to be laid down by the provincial governments under sub-clause 2 of the section. If the proposal of my friend Mr. Jain is accepted the labour welfare officers will be under the dual control of the provincial government and the employer. If the amendment of Mr. Barman is accepted these labour officers will be under the control of the provincial governments and will be persona non grata with the employer, with the result that every day they will find obstructions from the employer in carrying out the duties which may be conducive to the welfare of the labourers. Our idea here is that if the labour welfare officer is a man of the employer and he has the necessary training, which may be prescribed by the provincial government and if his duties and conditions of service are also prescribed by the provincial government, these safeguards to some extent will obviate the apprehension which is there that if the man does not please the employer he will be dismissed. Of course it does not go so far as the amendment of Mr. Jain goes but all the same it provides some safeguard against the arbitrary dismissal of the welfare officers. There have been other suggestions viz., that the number might be reduced and so on. I would request the honourable members who have made these various suggestions to allow this scheme to work for sometime. Let us have some experience of working out this scheme and in the light of that experience it may not be difficult for us to amend the Act when the time comes. But for the present I would submit to my honourable friends that it would be in the interest of the workers if these welfare workers are persons enjoying the confidence of the employers, as a sort of personnel of the management itself but with such training and qualifications as may be prescribed. Then there is the other difficulty as well. If these labour welfare officers are Government officers, and if they have to carry out some functions which are not statutory and if the Government presses upon the employers that they have not carried out those instructions, they might turn round and make the plea that the welfare officers happen to be government servants and have not taken as much interest in their work as they ought to. Thus they will try to discredit the labour welfare officer. All these considerations weighed with me and then I finally reached the conclusion that these officers for the present should be employers' men with some safeguards to protect them against arbitrary dismissal and things like that. I hope, Sir, that in view of this explanation my honourable friend will withdraw his amendment.

Shri Upendranath Barman: In view of the Honourable Minister's assurance and in view of the fact that our Government is fully responsible for the execution of the provisions I beg permission of the House to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member got the permission of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Chairman: In view of this I do not think that the amendments of Mr. Jain and Mr. Barman require to be moved. Then I shall put the clause to the House.

The question is:

"That clause 49 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 49 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 50 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 50 was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I move:

"That in clause 51 of the Bill, for the word 'employed', the words 'required or allowed to work' be substituted."

It is a formal amendment. In other clauses we have used this phrase and perhaps due to the oversight of the draftsman and in spite of the vigilance of my friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad this has been left out.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: There would have been many more if the Minister would have accepted the amendments. It is sheer helplessness that has made us inactive.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 51 of the Bill, for the word 'employed', the words 'required or allowed to work' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 51 of the Bill, for the words 'any week', the words 'any one week' be substituted."

Of course my knowledge of the English language is rather meagre, but I think that "any one week" is more in consonance with idiom and usage than "any week." But if our linguistic experts here think otherwise I do not propose to insist on this amendment. If the experts think otherwise I would beg leave of the House to withdraw it later.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I think my knowledge of the English language is more meagre than that of Mr. Kamath, but I have consulted the experts and they have consulted the Oxford dictionary. Their opinion is that "any week" is correct phrase in such a context. "Any" here has the meaning of "one". And my friend may refer to the Oxford dictionary. "Any week" means any one week. But "any one" is ordinarily used in the sense of being single. When you say "take any one of the cards" you mean take a single card or one card. That is not the intention here. The phrase is therefore all right as it stands.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I do not venture to question the authority of the Oxford dictionary. I therefore beg leave of the House to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: There is no question of any permission for withdrawal as the amendment has not been placed before the House.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena: Sir, I beg to move.

"That in clause 51 of the Bill, for the word 'forty-eight', the word 'forty-four' be substituted."

Sir, this is an amendment of a fundamental character. I wish to point out that the present international standard in this respect is even below forty-eight hours per week. It was in the year 1919 that the First International Convention laid down that "there shall be a forty-eight hour week and an eight-hour day". It is now the year 1948, and after thirty years our country has the good fortune to come even upto that 1919 Convention! But since then the world has moved much faster, and everywhere the demand is for a forty-hour week. I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister to certain Resolutions of the International Labour Conference. The first Resolution for a forty hour week was adopted in the year 1932 and for the last sixteen years the International Labour Organisation has been in favour of a forty hour week. I will read out from a Report of the International Labour Office which says:

"A further stage was reached at the 1932 Session of the International Labour Conference, which adopted a Resolution submitted by Mr. Jouhaux, French workers' delegate, drawing attention to the need of international regulations for limiting hours of work to 40 in the week."

This is about a forty-hour week.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: What was the fate of that Resolution?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: It was passed and adopted. I will read out to you from the Report. But before I do that I wish to point out one other thing. There are two aspects of this question of hours of work. One is the health of the worker and recreation for him. The second aspect is relief from unemployment. Today in our country we see that there is so much unemployment that our Exchanges are quite unable to find jobs even for all the people who have registered themselves with it. And it is very well known that our country is probably the worst sufferer in unemployment. Therefore, from both these two points of view, firstly from the point of view of the better health of the workers and secondly from the point of view of reducing unemployment amongst workers, I think that we should reduce the hours of work.

I shall now read from the I.L.O. Report. It was in 1932 that the following Resolution was passed:

"In view of the continuance of the present depression with the sufferings it involves, it must be affirmed that palliatives are insufficient and that, if the suffering caused by the economic depression and by unemployment is to be mitigated, the causes of the depression must be directly attacked;

"In view of its prolongation, unemployment must no longer be regarded merely as an effect of the depression; it has become one of the causes which aggravate it;

"The disequilibrium between disproportionately increased production and a capacity for consumption which was insufficient even at the beginning of the depression and which to-day is still further diminished, condemns any policy of wage reduction which experience shows is in contradiction with economic requirements, in addition to being unjust;

"The principal means of restoring the equilibrium which has been upset must be sought in the reduction of hours of work. The increase in individual output renders this measure indispensable and urgent.

"By this means production can be adjusted to the level of a temporarily limited capacity of consumption, available work can be permanently distributed over a larger number of persons, and the unemployed can be reinstated in their positions in the economic system. Further, by this means the wage earners will secure a legitimate share in the benefits of technical progress;

"The Conference accordingly invites the Governing Body of the International Labour Office to investigate the question of the legal institution of the 40-hour week in all industrial countries, with a view to the early adoption of international regulations on the subject."

It was in the year 1935 that a Convention on this question was adopted. The Conference which met in 1935 adopted the following Convention.
3 P. M. The Preamble to the Convention contains the following paragraph:

"The General Conference—

Considering that unemployment has become so widespread and long-continued that there are at the present time many millions of workers throughout the world suffering hardship and privation for which they are not themselves responsible and from which they are justly entitled to be relieved;

Considering that it is desirable that workers should as far as practicable be enabled to share in the benefits of the rapid technical progress which is a characteristic of modern industry; and

Considering that in pursuance of the Resolutions adopted by the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Sessions of the International Labour Conference it is necessary that a continuous effort should be made to reduce hours of work in all forms of employment to such extent as is possible;"

"Article 1 of the Convention introduces the principle of the 40-hour week and indicates the methods by which its application should be ensured."

"It declares approval by the ratifying Members of—

(a) the principle of a 40-hour week applied in such a manner that the standard of living is not reduced in consequence; and

(b) the taking or facilitating of such measures as may be judged appropriate to secure this end;

and undertakes to apply this principle to classes of employment in accordance with the detailed provisions to be prescribed by such separate Conventions as are ratified by that Member."

That Draft Convention was adopted at the Conference in 1935, that is to say the Conference passed a Resolution to that effect.

After having adopted the Draft Convention, the Conference passed the following resolution concerning the maintenance of the standard of living of the workers:

"The Conference—

Having adopted a Draft Convention declaring its approval of the principle of the 40-hour week,

Considering that the application of this principle should not as a consequence reduce the weekly, monthly or yearly income of the workers, whichever may be the customary method of reckoning, nor lower their standard of living,

Invites Governments:

(1) to take appropriate measures in order to ensure that any adjustment of wages and salaries should be effected as far as possible by means of direct negotiations between employers' and workers' organisations concerned; and

(2) after consultation with the organisations of employers and workers concerned, to take or facilitate appropriate measures to enable either of the parties concerned, if agreement between them cannot be reached, to submit the dispute to bodies competent to deal with wage questions, such bodies being set up, where there do not exist, for the purpose; and

(3) to furnish to the International Labour Office periodic reports upon the measures they have taken for the introduction of the 40-hour week and for the maintenance of the standard of living of the workers."

Sir, this was adopted in the year 1935 and during the last thirteen years much progress has been made towards this end. But I may point out for the information of the House that many countries have adopted a 40-hour week. I will take first the U.S.S.R.:

"U. S. S. R.—General principles governing hours of work are incorporated in the Constitution of the U. S. S. R., and the main lines of hours of work policy are laid down by Orders of the Central Executive Committee and the Council of People's Commissaries, one of the most important of these being the Order of 2 January 1929 providing for the gradual introduction of a 7-hour day."

It was in 1929 that it was adopted in Russia. Coming now to the home of capitalism, America, this is what they say:

"The Government Contracts Act of 1936 requires contracts of a value of more than $10,000 made by the Federal Government to contain provisions that no employee of the contractor engaged in the manufacture or supply of materials, articles and equipment shall work more than an 8-hour day or a 40-hour week....."

So, even in America, a 40-hour week is provided. Even in small countries like New Zealand, Italy, Equador etc. there are laws laying down that there shall be a 40-hour week. So, what I have suggested in my amendment provides for a transition. I have said that at present we should have a 44-hours week. We may next time—soon enough, I hope—come to a 40-hours week and come in line with the progressive nations of the world.

Sir, in this country where there is so much unemployment it is very important that the weekly hours should be reduced so that a larger number may be employed. Today there are about 35 lakhs of workers in industry. If their hours of work are reduced by one per day, then we can have at least 1/7th of the number of workers more in employment. That means that we will have 5 lakhs more workers in employment; that will not be a small addition to the employed. I am grateful to the Honourable Minister that he has already reduced the weekly hours from 54 to 48 by which means he has employed 5 lac more workers. Now we have emerged out of slavery and become an independent nation. We must walk with the progressive nations of the world. Our country, is suffering from unemployment and we must be all the more anxious to adopt that 40-hour week Convention which by the way will also help us to come in line with the progressive world. Besides our labour will also become contended; they will have more leisure and more recreation. Sir, in our climate which is hotter than the cold countries, work should not be made as arduous as in those countries. I think the Honourable Minister should make a beginning and should accept this amendment which I know is of a fundamental character but which I think will earn the gratitude of the workers for the Honourable Minister.

Sir, with these words, I move the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved.

"That in clause 51 of the Bill, for the word 'forty-eight', the word 'forty-four' be substituted."

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): Sir, I do not want to take the time of the House, but I think I am in support of this amendment and I feel that it should be accepted.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I wish I could have accepted this amendment. (An Honourable Member: 'Do it please') Sir, I am explaining something after hearing which you will perhaps join me in saying that this amendment should not be accepted. It is a simple rule of three. That if a hundred thousand of workers are working 48 hours a week and if the hours are reduced to 44 or 40, a larger number of additional workers will find employment. But I wish my friend would have also considered that in order to employ a larger number of workers it is not simply the reduction of hours of work that is required but certain other factors are also necessary and also whether our country is in a position to afford those factors which are necessary for the employment of a larger number of workers in the same factory or in the same industry all other conditions remaining the same.

If I were to expand this point, it means that if we are to increase the number of workers, we may have in certain cases to increase the number of machineries. That is not possible and if my friend would have studied the condition in the textile industry, there recently the hours of work were reduced from 9 to 8 to which reduction employer friends attribute the fall in production in textiles and sometimes blame me for the acute shortage of textiles in this country. On this logic, it would have been presumed that by reduction of one hour in the working hour of the textile workers, at least there should be an increase in their number of one-eighth. If there were 100,000 workers in the textile industry, by reducing the hours of work from 9 to 8, there will be 112,000 workers employed in that industry, but it has not been possible to increase the number of workers there, because today we are suffering from shortage of capital goods. Many of our industries have not been able to replace and repair their worn out machinery. We are suffering from transport bottleneck. We are not in a position to transport the coal requirements of the industry. Sometimes we are not in a position to transport even raw materials from one part of the country to the other, with the inevitable result that in spite of the best wishes of the employers to maintain employment of the workers, sometimes they are compelled to force idleness on their workers and I have instances where both representatives of employers and workers have jointly approached me when they were faced with shortage of repairing materials, shortage of millstores, shortage of coal and shortage of raw materials. All these facts have to be taken into consideration before we can suggest that by simple reduction in hours of work we are going to increase the volume of employment in our country! I am equally anxious that I were in a position to solve the unemployment problem in this country and if this was so handy enough as conceived by my friends Prof. Saksena and Mr. Vijavargiya, I would not have hesitated even for a moment to reduce the hours of work not only to 44 but even to 40, but faced as we are today with all these difficulties, it is not advisable to reduce the working hours.

As regards the Conventions and Recommendations, so far the Convention of the I.L.O. is for 48 hours a week. It is only in the case of glass workers that there has been, not a Convention but simply a Recommendation, that they should have a 40 hour week. If I were to explain the procedure of the I.L.O. Convention to my friend Prof. Saksena, I may tell him that it is a tripartite organisation. There are representatives of workers, employers and Governments. Any item which is brought on the agenda of the I.L.O. is discussed twice. There is the first discussion in which the organisation does not reach any decision. It is exploratory. The views of all Governments are invited. Amendments are suggested by the Governments. Then this item is again discussed next year and if it is accepted, either there is a Recommendation or a Convention. The Conventions of the I.L.O. are to be ratified by the Member States. India happens to be a member of the I.L.O. and we have been trying to ratify all the Conventions of the I.L.O. and as regards the hours of work Convention, we have already ratified it and this 48 hours week is in conformity with the I.L.O. Convention. We are not behind any of the other countries in our hours of work. As regards the argument that America has introduced 44 hours, well, America is in a position to do so many things which by the nature of things in our country today we are not in a position to do and we will have to judge whether copying America in this respect will be in the interests of the working classes, whether it will be in the interests of the country. Simply because America has done a thing I do not think we should adopt the same thing blindly. Today, Sir, I feel that this reduction of hours of work will not be even in the interests of the working classes. It will certainly not be in the interests of the country. In addition, it is my feeling that it will not be in the interests of the working classes themselves. You cannot go on exerting pressure over the employers alone. It is a common knowledge that any reduction in hours of work results in reduction in production as well. There might not be very much reduction in production, but all the same if you reduce the hours of work there will be reduction in production. Of course, there is one view that if the workers do not work for a longer period, their energy will be conserved and next day when they come to the factory that conserved energy will be instrumental in increasing the production. Theoretically, it sounds very well, but in actual practice the result has not been in conformity with this theory and therefore I do not think we have reached a stage where we can think of reducing the hours of work from 48 to 44, more so when we are conforming to the international usage and international Convention in having a 48 hour week. I hope therefore that my friend Prof. Saksena will withdraw his amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, in view of the fact that the Honourable Minister has assured us that he himself is anxious to bring about the 44 hour week as early as possible and that he will do all he can in this direction, I withdraw my amendment.

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramyya (Madras: General): On a point of information, may I ask the Minister for Labour whether it is not true that in America they have reduced the hours of work in order to reduce unemployment?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I hope, Sir, I have given sufficient reply to that query in my speech.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member, Prof. Saksena, wishes to have leave of the House to withdraw his amendment.

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 51, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 51, as amended, was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I move:

"That in the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 52 of the Bill, the words 'or for more than three consecutive months without at least twelve such holidays' occurring at the end be omitted."

Sir, this sentence was added in the Select Committee in the misapprehension that if this was not added the workers may be deprived of their legitimate holidays. On further examination we found that as we have provided that no substitution shall be made which will result in any worker working for more than ten days consecutively without a holiday for a whole day, this safeguards the rights of the workers amply. They will get their full quota of holidays under this provision. So this sentence is unnecessary.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 52 of the Bill, the words 'or for more than three consecutive months without at least twelve such holidays' occurring at the end be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 52 of the Bill, for the word 'employed', the words 'required or allowed to work' be substituted."

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 52 of the Bill, for the word 'employed', the words 'required or allowed to work' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 52, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 52, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 53 was added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 54 of the Bill, for the words 'nine hours', the words 'eight hours' be substituted."

Sir, I only wanted to draw the Honourable Minister's attention that the convention of 1919 was for 48 hours a week and 8 hours a day, and I hope the labourer should not work for more than 8 hours in one day, so that we can have 6 days of eight hours' work. I also think in consonance with the Geneva Convention the shifts should be so arranged that the worker does not do work for more than 8 hours a day. If 9 hours is kept to be the daily limit, the employers will make the people work for 9 hours and the worker will lose one hour's overtime. If the employer wants to take more than 8 hours work on any day he should pay overtime for it. I therefore think that from the point of view of the International Conventions as well as the worker's right, we should legislate for a 48 hour week and a 8 hour day.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved.

"That in clause 54 of the Bill, for the words 'nine hours', the words 'eight hours' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: We have 48 hours a week, and if the worker has to work for 6 days, it is simple Rule of Three that in a day he cannot work more than 8 hours. We have provided for 9 hours a day so that if on any day he works for 9 hours, he works for a shorter period the other day. If he works today for 9 hours, tomorrow he may work for 7 hours and therefore the weekly limit will be there. I do not think it is going to cause any hardship to the worker; in some cases it may prove beneficial to the worker himself. A worker works for 9 hours today and tomorrow he has got some engagement at home in the evening; then he will work only for 7 hours and get leave earlier and go and see his work. Therefore, I think it is in the interests of the workers, it is desirable, that we should maintain this clause.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): There is another point also. If my honourable friend Mr. Saksena has succeeded in restricting 48 hours to 44 hours, than distributing 44 hours, you will get 6 days of 7 hours. Then a man may work for more than 8 hours in one day and then reduce it to 7 or 7½ hours of necessity. It follows therefore if a man works less hours in certain days, he must perforce make it up by working 9 hours someother day. Therefore this is only an ancilliary work. When he has lost the elephant, what is the good of catching the tail? My feeling is this is only an ancilliary one or an auxiliary one that when one is first lost, it is lost suo moto and ipso facto.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: As the Honourable Minister is not going to accept this important amendment, there is no use in getting it defeated and so I beg leave of the House to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Shri V. S. Sarwate (Indore State): Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 54 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'and in the case of a shift which extends beyond midnight, for more than eight hours.'"

[Shri V. S. Sarwate]

I wish to bring out the fact that it is probably not denied that work at night is more onerous than work during day-time. So if one has to work 9 hours during day-time, it reasonably follows that he should be allowed to work less during night-time. Therefore, it is suggested that if the shift extends beyond midnight, the working hours should not be more than 8 hours. This is the object in moving this amendment and I hope that the Honourable Minister would have no objection in accepting it.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 54 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'and in the case of a shift which extends beyond midnight, for more than eight hours'."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I do not see any necessity for that amendment, because in the shifts after midnight neither the worker nor the employer are willing to take overtime work. The worker feels sleepy and the employers know that the production at that time is much less than in the first shift. No employer takes overtime or extra work in the third shift and therefore that amendment is not necessary.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: In view of the assurance given by the Honourable Minister, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 54 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 54 was added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

(i) "That in clause 55 of the Bill, for the words 'half an hour', the words 'one hour' be substituted."

(ii) "That in clause 55 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'unless the process is a continuous one, and there are three eight hours shifts in the factory each day'."

Sir, I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister to one anomaly in this section. He has provided for half an hour's rest and he has said that nobody shall work for more than 5 hours continuously. 8 hours is the normal working day. If one man works for 5 hours, he can only be required to work for 3 hours more. If after 5 hours you release one shift and only employ the men after half an hour, who will work during the half an hour? This half hour can be no use to him. To be of any use the interval must be of at least one hour. Again suppose in a sugar factory they work from 8 to 4 O'clock, 4 to 12 and 12 to 8 O'clock. You cannot apply the five hours limit here. Hence my amendments.

At least in those factories where there is a continuous process of work and three shifts of eight hours, this should not apply. There cannot be half an hour's rest if there are three shifts. Wherever there is continuous work, there should be no interval.

About half an hour also, Sir, I think it must be made one hour. In factories where there are two shifts there should be at least as much interval as would allow the workers to take their food and if their house is near by, they may go home to take their food. When we are providing for a breaking of shift after five hours, there should be an interval of at least one hour. The worker goes to the factory at 7 A.M. and works till 12 O'clock. He should have at least a recess of one hour. Then he can continue to work till 4 O'clock. Otherwise, if he is given an interval of half an hour only, he will work from 7 A.M. to 12 O'clock and then from 12-30 P.M. to 3-30 P.M. That would not be a proper shift. A minimum interval of one hour should be provided; half an hour is not sufficient even to have meals. Of course, we may exclude those factories where there is contiguous work of three shifts. I hope this amendment will be accepted. Sir, I move my amendment.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I wish my honourable friend Professor Saksena had seen section 64.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I have seen that.

Mr. Chairman: Amendments moved:

(i) "That in clause 55 of the Bill, for the words 'half an hour', the words 'one hour' be substituted."

(ii) "That in clause 55 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'unless the process is a continuous one, and there are three eight hours shifts in the factory each day'."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, as regards increasing the period of interval, it is stated here "at least half an hour". There is nothing to prevent a longer interval; it may be one hour; it may be one and a half hours. It all depends on the convenience of the workers and the employers. In some cases, the workers may not like to have a longer interval. They may like to have a shorter interval and get relieved earlier in the evening so that they may return home. In other cases, the workers may require a longer interval. We have provided for both. Where the workers require a shorter period of interval for rest, they must have at least half an hour; where the workers require more, they may have one hour or one and a half hours in consultation with the employers. There is nothing to prevent this.

As regards continuous work, I would refer my honourable friend to section 64 where he will find that the provincial Governments have been given power to exempt certain categories of factories from the provisions of this section, factories where the work is continuous.

I think the honourable member will withdraw his amendments.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg leave to withdraw the amendments.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendments?

The amendments were, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 55 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 55 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 56 of the Bill, the following be omitted, namely:"

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, May I intervene for a moment. There has been a minor omission in clause 55. Of course, it is a drafting matter, but it has been omitted. The words "of work" have been omitted in line 1. It should read as "The period of work of adult workers in a factory each day..." It seems to be a printing mistake.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Then, it should be, "Period of work for adult workers"

Mr. Chairman: The period is fixed in clause 51. As it is, the sense is all right.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: If you think it is quite right, I have no objection; but it would be more explicit if it is worded as "The period of work of adult workers".

Mr. Chairman: Then you may formally move it.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The clause has already been passed, Sir.

Mr. Chairman: This is a technical thing; there is no objection.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It may be done in third reading.

Mr. Chairman: It may be done in the third reading.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 56 of the Bill, the following be omitted:

"Save with the permission of the Provincial Government and subject to such conditions as it may impose, either generally or in the case of any particular factory."

Sir, while speaking in the course of the general discussion, I had pointed out that the power of exemption given to the provincial Government had been repeated in many cases more than once. This is a case of that kind. Section 56 gives the power to exempt to the provincial Government; so does section 64. Section 65 also does that. I need not go into the details; but even a cursory reading of these three sections would be enough to show that the power of exemption given in this section to the Provincial Government is a redundant power, a repetition of the power given under section 64. In section 64 certain limitations have been laid down. It says:

"In making rules under this section, the Provincial Government shall not exceed, except in respect of exemption under clause (a) of sub-section (2), the following limits of work inclusive of overtime:

(i) the total number of hours of work in any day shall not exceed ten;

(ii) the total number of hours of overtime work shall not exceed fifty for any one quarter;

(iii) the spreadover inclusive of intervals for rest shall not exceed twelve hours in any one day;"

Those limitations do not apply to section 56 as the present arrangement of things stand. Therefore, I suggest, Sir, that it is proper that we should delete the words which form the subject matter of my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved.

"That in clause 56 of the Bill, the following be omitted:

"Save with the permission of the Provincial Government and subject to such conditions as it may impose, either generally or in the case of any particular factory."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I accept the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 56 of the Bill, the following be omitted:

"Save with the permission of the Provincial Government and subject to such conditions as it may impose, either generally or in the case of any particular factory."

The motion was adopted.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena: Sir, I move.

"That in clause 56 of the Bill, for the words 'ten and a half hours' the words 'ten hours' be substituted."

This is a provision for spread-over. Nine hours have been prescribed as the maximum every day but it can be spread over to 10½ hours. I think ten hours would be better and I hope the Honourable Minister will accept this amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 56 of the Bill, for the words 'ten and a half hours' the words 'ten hours' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I do not see any necessity to reduce it by half an hour. It is not going to cause any hardship to the workers and it will not be advantageous to them either to reduce it by half an hour.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 56 of the Bill, for the words 'ten and a half hours', the words 'ten hours' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena: Sir, I move:

"That in the Proviso to clause 56 of the Bill, after the words 'the Chief Inspector' the following be inserted:

"after ascertaining the wishes of the workers in the factory through their registered trade unions'."

Here the Chief Inspector of Factories has been given power to increase the spread-over to 12 hours. I think this is a very wide power which has been given to him. This means that although the worker will work for nine hours in the factory he can be made to hang on for twelve hours. For the worker at least these hours are wasted. This is not proper unless it is found to be convenient for the workers themselves; and it is possible only if the workers' unions are consulted. Objection may be taken from some quarters on the ground that there are so many registered trade unions in some factories. I wish to point out in that connection that in November last year the Trade Unions Amendment Act was passed in which it was laid down that among several registered trade unions only those unions will be recognised which satisfy the conditions laid down in the Act. The most representative union will be recognised under that Act and it should be consulted. Therefore if the word "recognised" be substituted for the word "registered" I will be prepared to accept it. In a matter of this kind where the spread-over is to be increased to 12 hours, the chief Inspector should consult the recognised trade union in the factory as to whether there would be any real hardship by the increase in spread-over. I hope this amendment will be accepted. Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in the Proviso to clause 56 of the Bill, after the words 'the Chief Inspector' the following be inserted:

"after ascertaining the wishes of the workers in the factory through their registered trade unions'."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I cannot accept this amendment. The Inspector will have to state his reasons for increasing the spread-over to 12 hours, and I do not think there is any necessity to consult the trade unions.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in the Proviso to clause 56 of the Bill, after the words 'the Chief Inspector' the following be inserted:

"after ascertaining the wishes of the workers in the factory through their registered trade unions'."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 56, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 56, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I move:

"That in part (b) of clause 57 of the Bill, for the word 'in' occurring in the last line the word 'towards' be substituted."

This is a minor amendment but upon this I am more positive and more definite that it is the more correct word to be used in this context than I was in respect of the other amendments. If you retain the word "in" in clause 57, counting the hours in a day is something very different from counting the hours towards a day. A schoolboy will say that in a day there are 24 hours. But here the meaning intended is that the hours of work should be reckoned towards the previous day. Therefore I think "towards" is the more apt word; but if our redoubtable champions and valiant knights of the Oxford Dictionary think otherwise, I am prepared to re-consider my position.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in part (b) of clause 57 of the Bill, for the word 'in' occurring in the last line the word 'towards' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Again I will not claim mastery over the English language, but taking a common-sense view I think "counting in" means counting as part and parcel and "counting towards" means counting against or in lieu of. I have been advised that it is quite all right.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I cannot accept that meaning.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in part (b) of clause 57 of the Bill, for the word 'in' occurring in the last line the word 'towards' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 57 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 57 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 58, 59 and 60 were added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 61 of the Bill, after the word 'factory', where it occurs for the second time, the words 'after consulting the registered trade unions of the workers' be inserted."

There are many places in this clause where the Factory Manager has been given the right to fix the shifts—the periods of time during which labourers work in a factory. I want these shifts to be fixed in consultation with the workers. So I have demanded that every Factory Manager should consult the registered trade unions of the workers before fixing the shifts. That will conduce to far greater harmony and industrial peace, and the workers will have the feeling that the shifts have been fixed according to their wishes. That will also help the employer to get more production out of the workers and there is no reason why trade unions recognised by the employers themselves and by Government should not be consulted. I do hope the Honourable the Minister will see his way to accept the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 61 of the Bill, after the word 'factory', where it occurs for the second time, the words 'after consulting the registered trade unions of the workers' be inserted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I do not accept this amendment because in all these matters we will have to give powers to the Managers or the employers to arrange how the workers will work. I am afraid that if we give this power to the trade unions, it will bring ruination upon the trade unions themselves. One set of workers may like to work one way and another set another way. It will also bring ruin on the workers themselves. In the interests of the workers' organisation, I can never agree to such a suggestion.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 61 of the Bill, after the word 'factory', where it occurs for the second time, the words 'after consulting the registered trade unions of the workers' be inserted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 61 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 61 was added to the Bill.

Clause 62 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 63 of the Bill, for the word 'employed' the words 'required or allowed to work' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I accept it.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 63 of the Bill, for the word 'employed' the words 'required or allowed to work' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 63, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 63, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 64 was added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 65 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'and no exemption shall be given until the registered trade unions of workers have been consulted.'"

If you see clause 65 you will find that the Provincial Government has been given wide powers for making exemptions about hours of work, about shifts, etc. I think it is most important that the workers' unions should be consulted before these powers are exercised. I was surprised to hear the Honourable Minister reply to the last amendment that the workers themselves did not like it. I really am surprised to hear this thing from the Hon'ble Minister. I feel he is wholly ignorant of the situation. Why should he anticipate that the workers will fight among themselves? We have already laid down in the Trade Union Amendment Act, 1947, that unions with the majority of the workers should be recognised by the employers. I know that recently there have come into being unions formed by millowners in their concerns to make them fight with the genuine workers' unions. But those unions should not be taken into account. I am sorry that ten months have passed and still the rules for the recognition of Trade Unions according to the Trade Union Amendment Act 1947, have not been framed by the Honourable Minister. As soon as they are framed, there will be recognised trade unions in every factory and they can always be consulted. It is no use saying that because there are more unions than one, therefore, none will be consulted.

I have only demanded that they should be consulted. Their advice need not be always binding. But the worker's point of view must be found out through their unions. I think this sort of consultation will be very useful as the workers will feel that whatever is being done is being done with their consent, so that they may do more work and may have a greater interest in it. I therefore request the Honourable the Minister to see that the workers are given the right to be consulted before exemptions from the fundamental clauses of the Bill are allowed. Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That, in sub-clause (3) of clause 65 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

"and no exemption shall be given until the registered trade unions of workers have been consulted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: First we must see the reasons for the exemptions. The exemptions that may be given are mentioned in Sections 51, 54 and 56. These are the provisions relating to weekly hours, weekly holidays, daily hours and a spreadover. Exemptions from these sections are to be given when the factories are to deal with an exceptional pressure of work. We considered these things but there are certain seasonal periods of one or two months when there is so much pressure of work that unless these provisions are relaxed—unless those factories are exempted from the provisions of Sections 51, 54 and 56—there is a danger that there will be a great national loss by those things deteriorating or being damaged, for instance, the tea industry. I have not personally seen how it works but I am told that during one or two months in the year there is so much stress of work that if the work is not carried on during those two or three months, then the whole tea will be damaged and we will lose this valuable commodity which is responsible for giving us considerable foreign exchange resources. This provision has been made for that contingency. I do not think there is any occasion for consulting the workers' organisation there, because if the workers do not agree then the other alternative will be to engage a very large number of workers for the extra pressure of work, which is not possible. It is also, in the interest of the workers that they do the work. This is provided for an emergency and for exceptional pressure of work, which in the very nature of the work is such that the workers will have to do more than what is prescribed for daily, or weekly hours or spread over. I hope Mr. Saksena will not press his amendment.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 65 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

"and no exemption shall be given until the registered trade unions of workers have been consulted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 65 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 65 was added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move.....

Mr. Chairman: I might point out to the honourable member that two of his amendments (Nos. 53 and 54 on List V) are for omission. In regard to these it would be better for him to have his say when the clause is put and he can move if he likes his amendment No. 55.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, this clause has been dissented to by three members of the Select Committee, Messrs. K. Santhanam, Khandubhai Desai and Gokulbhai Bhatt. I have only suggested that this proviso be dropped. It gives power to provincial governments to employ women between 10 P.M. and 5 A.M. There is probably a mistake. It should be 5 A.M. and 10 P.M. Secondly I also want that sub-clause (2) of section 66 should be deleted altogether and in sub-clause (3) for the words "three years" the words "one year" should be substituted. Here we are giving power to the provincial governments to exploit women labour between 5 A.M. and 10 P.M., although they would normally be allowed to work between 6 A.M. and 7 P.M. when I tried to make out a case for.....

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: On a point of order, Sir. The clause says "between the hours of 10 P.M. and 5 A.M." and not between 5 P.M. and 10 P.M.

Shri H. V. Kamath: The proviso does not give power to the provincial government to authorise the employment of women between 10 P.M. and 5 A.M. That means to say that they can be employed between 5 A.M. and 10 P.M.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: The other day it was pointed out that there was a misprint.

Shri K. Santhanam: There is a misprint here. We have pointed this out in our minute of dissent. It should be 5 A.M. and 10 P.M.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

(i) "That the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted;"

(ii) "That sub-clause (2) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted;" and

(iii) "That in sub-clause (3) of clause 66 of the Bill, for the words 'three years', the words 'one year' be substituted."

The argument which the Honourable the Labour Minister gave in reply to the debate on the first reading of the Bill was that the provision is in the interest of female labour. He said that our female labour should be given an opportunity to earn their livelihood by the permission to work between 5 A.M. and 10 P.M. The argument is not convincing. This provision in the Bill I am sure is very harmful and injurious, both to our women and also to society in general. When you permit women to work beyond the hours of 6 A.M. and 7 P.M. which are the accepted hours in the last Factory Act, you are making an innovation. I do not think anything has happened since the last Act to justify this innovation. You cannot say that our women have become so advanced that they should be permitted to do this work. The Honourable Minister said the other day that women in factories are not the women who are abducted and so they need no protection. I do not agree with him. Secondly if the section remains as it is it will for ever close the door for middle class women to work in factories. In other countries middle class women work in factories. If you put this restriction they will be discouraged. The Honourable Minister's purpose was that they should be able to avail themselves of a second shift which usually ends at 10 P.M. and that if women are restricted to work from 6 A.M. to 7 P.M. the factory owners who want to take advantage of cheaper women labour would not employ women. That argument is not convincing. Millowners desiring advantage of cheap female labour will employ them in day shift. Middle class women would not like to work in factories in the night and from the point of view of general morality also it is not proper. As regards sub-clause (2), I think it should be omitted.

The other day an Honourable Minister said that the habits of fish, which are most conveniently caught in the evening, cannot be cured. But men can be employed to cure the fish instead of women. We should not depart from the accepted principle that women shall not be allowed to work in factories after 7 P.M. in any industry. I think these are grave considerations and the Honourable Minister himself will be convinced on further thought that the existing provisions in the Bill are not proper provisions. As usual he might say 'I will not accept the amendment'. But I think that the opinion of the House and of the country is that this amendment should be accepted. Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman: Amendments moved:

- (i) "That the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted;"
- (ii) "That sub-clause (2) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted;" and
- (iii) "That in sub-clause (3) of clause 66 of the Bill, for the words 'three years', the words 'one year' be substituted."

Shri H. V. Kamath: I have got two amendments. They go together. No. 27 of list 4 hangs upon the fate of No. 28.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Let us finish one at a time.

Mr. Chairman: There is another amendment—No. 26 in list No. 3 by Messrs. Santhanam and Khandubhai Desai. Mr. Kamath's amendment No. 28 in list 4 is the same as that of Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena's amendment No. 52, that the Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted.

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai (Bombay: General): I have tabled an amendment along with my friend Mr. Santhanam to drop this Proviso, though I do not want to press this amendment now. But I would like to say a word or two on the merits of the amendment which I wished to move. Clause 66 is intended to safeguard and protect the interests of women and children while the Proviso to the clause gives power to the Provincial Government to exempt the protection that has already been given in clauses (a) and (b). Clause (b) lays down that no woman shall work after 7 P.M. At the same time the Proviso gives authority to the Provincial Government to exempt it to the extent of three hours between 7 P.M. and 10 P.M.

Shri H. V. Kamath: And between 5 A.M. and 6 A.M.

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai: That is different. This means that under this Proviso, if the Provincial Government so permits, a woman shall be allowed to work between 7 P.M. and 10 P.M. According to the present Factory Act no women are working after the dusk hours and I think it is a very healthy provision where it exists. It is a very healthy restriction. The factories, as we know, in big towns are situated at very great distances from the areas in which most of the people are living, sometimes one mile, sometimes two miles. Generally in quite a large number of factories the women go with their husbands to work. When under this Proviso the women are not allowed to work after 10 P.M. they will have to go home earlier. But the husband will come home at about 12 or 12-30. What an absurd situation it will create? Again, under clause 48 which has been passed creches are being made compulsory. Therefore the children of these women will have to be looked after. Possibly the employers also will have to make arrangements for maintaining those creches. In these circumstances, I feel that the Proviso be better omitted, provided of course the Government agrees with the views which I have placed before it. The Government might forward and say that the Provincial Governments have been given powers and they will use their discretion. I would like to say that Provincial Governments should not be given these powers and we must lay down statutorily that in this country no woman shall work after 7 o'clock.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I was inclined to agree with the amendment which has been moved by my friend Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena, and it accords with my own—No. 28. I was also inclined to agree with the minute of dissent given by my three friends that the Proviso in its effect is likely to lead to abuses and to prove destructive of the home life of the women workers. But the one consideration which has persuaded me to revise my view is this, that our women friends here, and the solitary woman member on the Select Committee, did not think it fit to support the deletion of this Proviso. So I thought to myself, where women do not want to fight for women, why should men come and fight for them? This has persuaded me to alter my position. In the circumstances—where women are not willing to fight for their own sisters—I think we men need not bother to fight for them. I therefore do not wish to support this amendment.

Shrijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): I think the amendment will be accepted by the Honourable Minister inasmuch as it comes from certain privileged members of this House. I am not briefed to defend the clause, but all the same I can see very good reason for the clause as it stands. If only the word 'unmarried' could be inserted in sub-clause (b) then the whole thing would be perfectly in order. Then sub-clause (b) would run like this "no unmarried woman shall be employed in any factory except between the hours of 6 A.M. and 7 P.M." It is rather unsafe to allow an unmarried woman who goes unattended by any guardian to a factory to come back at a very late hour from the factory. So far as married women are concerned there should be no objection in allowing the husband and the wife to earn their bread and to increase their income by working together at night even in the factory. That is not only beneficial for the greater gain to the family but there will also be greater safety inasmuch as when the husband goes to work the wife is not left alone and unprotected in the house. This is no humour; this is a serious question. It is more dangerous at times to leave the lonely wife at home and allow the husband to go to the factory. In these circumstances the Provincial Government or the Government in power—my honourable friend the Labour Minister—ought to be able to use his discretion in allowing such couples to go to the factory at night and work together.

Shri K. Santhanam: Will you compel the factory owner also to take the wife to the factory?

Shrijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: If both of them are working in the same factory it will be safer, wiser and more beneficial to the labourers themselves if they are allowed to go and work together in the factory. The discretion can also be exercised by the Government in not allowing the couple to go to the factory when they have a large number of children. If they also want to carry the children to the factory it will only hamper the work and in such cases the Minister may have discretion in not allowing the women to work at night in the factory. But in other cases, where it is only a question of a couple, it will be more advisable for the husband to take the wife along with him to work. My honourable friend Mr. Kamath was thinking of the disturbance to the family life of the workers. I would rather say that the family life of the workers would not be disturbed if they were allowed to go together to the factory, or to remain absent from the factory, together. Instead of separating the husband and wife for a long time from 10 P.M. to 5 A.M. and in tempting the man to leave his wife at home alone and go and work in the factory between 10 P.M. and 5 A.M. it is much better to allow both the husband and wife to go at night and work. That would be more beneficial. Therefore, if the Honourable Minister agrees with what I have said, the whole clause should be allowed to stand as it is now. Only a formal amendment should be made inserting the word 'unmarried' in sub-clause (b) between the words "no" and "woman".

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan: Mr. Chairman, I move:

"That sub-clause (3) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted."

Sir, the other day the Honourable Minister, while explaining his reasons for allowing women to work in factories, said that he was doing so because he can give work to a large number of women by giving them work in the factories by a night shift. This he said was to give work to women who are on the margin of starvation. But I understand that by "shift-system" is meant a change of time of the workers concerned. I don't think more women will come to work if such a shift-system is introduced; if the shift-system comes it gives only a change in time.

Now, I think more women will come to work if only there is a shortage of labour in factories. But we find that there is a shortage of labour only in coal mines and in factories where jobs of a hazardous nature are to be executed by the labourers.

I think these night-shifts can be avoided. The management can very well give work for the women by taking them in the general shift and in the first shift. Even if we suppose that a large number of women are coming to work in the factories at night, it will be advisable on the part of the management to give them work during day time and I don't think that any sensible management will give women work in the factories at night. When we consider the proportion of women labourers to that of men we can say that it is very small.

Sir, the other day I asked whether there is international law allowing women to work in factories at night. The reply of the Honourable Minister was that the international law allows that. But I understand that in countries like America in fact women are allowed to work in the factories at night. The fact that we have to bear in mind is that 90 per cent of the women working either in the U.S.A. or in other Western countries are unmarried girls, widows or deserted wives. But the condition in India is quite different. Here we find that a woman who has got three or four children goes to the factory for work. Mostly the working class woman comes from the Harijan community—I must say that almost 90 per cent. of the working class women come from the Harijan community and I know that the Labour Minister might have understood by this time that what I say is correct.

Therefore, I cannot approve of the provisions of the Bill which provide not a charter of rights but a charter of slavery to many women. We can do one thing if the Honourable Minister is determined to encourage women to come to factories at night for work. (An Honourable Member: 'He is determined') What is done in America is this: the girls who go to the factories for work are given more wages than the men. If the Honourable Minister can do this thing I think that will be the best thing he could do. If he could induce the employers and the Government to bring in legislation of this kind and add more wages for the women who work in factories, he would succeed in giving them work.

Sir, I must be failing in my duty if I don't mention a word of congratulation here. I congratulate the honourable members who have written a Minute of Dissent. In fact, I concur with the opinion expressed by the three members but we must not forget that there was a lady member of this House who gave her assent to the provisions of this clause. Mr. Kamath said that he is not prepared to fight for women when women are not prepared to fight. I can say that I am prepared to fight.

Sir, I move my amendment and I heartily support the amendments moved by Mr. Saksena.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That sub-clause (3) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I have nothing to add to what I said during the discussion of the motion for consideration of this Bill. I may add only one point that this is quite in conformity with the International Labour Organisation's Convention, and that being a Member of the International Labour Organisation, we cannot bring in any legislation which goes beyond the recommendations or convention of the International Labour Organisation. This is quite in keeping with the Convention of the International Labour Organisation. I think, Sir, that this provision is very necessary and I don't accept any of the amendments.

Mr. Chairman: Does Mr. Jain wish to move his amendment?

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I move:

"That in the Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 66 of the Bill, after the word, brackets and letter 'clause (b)', the word 'but' be inserted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I accept it.

Mr. Chairman: I will put the last amendment first.

The question is:

"That in the Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 66 of the Bill, after the word, brackets and letter 'clause (b)', the word 'but' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: I shall now put the amendments one by one.

The question is:

"That the Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That sub-clause (2) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That sub-clause (3) of clause 66 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 66 of the Bill, for the words 'three years' the words 'one year' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I have also got an amendment to clause 66. It is No. 27 in list No. 4. Amendment Nos. 28 and 27 go together and I gave notice of amendment No. 27 just to provide against the contingency of the acceptance of amendment No. 28. Now that 28 has been defeated there is no need for amendment No. 27. So I do not move it. It has no relevance now. It reads as follows: "That in part (b) of sub-clause (1) of clause 66 of the Bill, for the figures, letters and word '6 A.M. and 7 A.M.' the figures, letters and word, '5 A.M. and 8 P.M.' be substituted."

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 66, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 66, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 67 to 70 were added to the Bill.

Prof Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in part (a) of sub-clause (1) of clause 71 of the Bill, the words 'and twenty-four hours in any week', be added at the end."

Sir, here children between the ages of 14 and 15 years are forbidden to work for more than 4½ hours a day, but no limit has been placed on their weekly hours of work. I wish that limit was provided and children between 14 and 15 years of age were not permitted to work for more than twenty-four hours a week. That would mean that they can work for four hours every day for six days and get a holiday on the 7th day and if there is any emergency they may work up to 4½ hours a day, but normally they should not be required to work for more than 24 hours in the week. I hope the amendment will be accepted.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in part (a) of sub-clause (1) of clause 71 of the Bill, the words 'and twenty-four hours in any week', be added at the end."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, we have raised the age of children from 13 to 14. No person below the age of 14 can be required to work in a factory and as provided here the maximum number of hours in a week is 27. I do not think that is too much for a child.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in part (a) of sub-clause (1) of clause 71 of the Bill, the words 'and twenty-four hours in any week', be added at the end."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 71 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 71 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 72 of the Bill, after the word 'required' occurring in line five, the words 'or allowed' be inserted."

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 72 of the Bill, after the word 'required' occurring in line five, the words 'or allowed' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 72, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 72, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 73 and 74 were added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 75 of the Bill,—

(i) before the word 'Where' occurring in line one, the figure and brackets '(1)' be inserted; and

(ii) the following new sub-clause be added:

"(2) The occupier shall be called upon to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for having allowed a young person to work without a certificate of fitness, and if no satisfactory explanation is forthcoming, the Inspector shall report the case for prosecution."

Sir, clause 75 says that the Inspector shall visit the factory and see that no young person is working without a certificate of fitness, and if any one is so working he shall call upon the Manager to produce the person before a doctor for examination and until that young person is given a certificate of fitness he shall not be employed. That is all right. But no penalty is provided for the employer who permitted such a thing.

Shri K. Santhanam: Clause 92 provides all penalties.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: That is a general clause for all punishment. But what I wish to point out is that here the Inspector if he finds that a child labourer employed in a mill is below the age of 14 he will merely serve a notice on the employer requiring that such child be examined by a certifying surgeon. But no penalty is provided for having allowed such a child to work.

Shri K. Santhanam: Then what about clause 92?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I do not think that penalty would be enforced, because this clause definitely says:

"He may serve on the manager of the factory a notice requiring that such person or young person as the case may be, shall be examined by a certifying surgeon, and such person or young person shall not, if the Inspector so directs, be employed.....until he has been examined and granted a certificate of fitness."

There is no penalty provided here.

I think that in such cases wherever such men are found they will be sent to the certifying surgeon and then after they refuse to certify him as fit, the child will not be allowed to work. I do not think the manager will be prosecuted for having employed child labour below 14 years of age. What I want is that wherever a young person is allowed to work without a certificate of fitness the occupier should be prosecuted. Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 75 of the Bill,—

(i) before the word 'Where' occurring in line one, the figure and brackets '(1)' be inserted; and

(ii) the following new sub-clause be added:

"(2) The occupier shall be called upon to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for having allowed a young person to work without a certificate of fitness, and if no satisfactory explanation is forthcoming, the Inspector shall report the case for prosecution."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, this amendment is unnecessary in view of the general penalty clause provided in section 92. I do not accept this amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In view of the fact that the Honourable Minister is not going to accept the amendment, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 75 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 75 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 76 to 78 were added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

(i) "That in part (i) of sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the word 'twenty', the word 'fifteen' be substituted."

(ii) "That in part (i) of sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the word 'ten', the word 'fifteen' be substituted."

(iii) "That in part (ii) of sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the word 'fifteen', the word 'ten' be substituted."

(iv) "That in part (ii) of sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the word 'fourteen', the word 'twenty' be substituted."

Sir, this is a clause about annual leave with wages and in this clause it is provided that an adult for every twenty days of work shall get one day's holiday and in the case of a child for every fifteen days' work it will have one day's holiday. This present clause means that if a factory work for about 300 days in the year an adult worker will have 15 days' leave in a year and a child will have 20 days' leave. I think these periods are not sufficient and therefore, I want to provide that for every 15 days' work the adult should have one day's leave and for every 10 days' work the child should have one day's leave. On this basis every adult will have 20 days' leave and every child 30 days' leave in the year. I think that in other countries, they have more holidays than we have provided here and in the Railway Workshops also as the Honourable Minister knows there are more holidays and I do not see why every other industry should not be brought on the same level. I therefore, hope that the Honourable Minister will see his way to make leave rules more liberal. I therefore hope that this amendment to the clause about annual leave which is very important will be accepted by him. Sir, I move.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

(i) "That in part (i) of sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the word 'twenty', the word 'fifteen' be substituted."

(ii) "That in part (i) of sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the word 'ten', the word 'fifteen' be substituted."

(iii) "That in part (ii) of sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the word 'fifteen', the word 'ten' be substituted."

(iv) "That in part (ii) of sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the word 'fourteen', the word 'twenty' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I personally feel that the leave provided here is enough for the present. As regards the point that has been raised by him that in some of the concerns in factories workers are getting more liberal leave, they are protected under the proviso to section 78. Wherever the workers are getting more leave they will continue to get it; they are not going to be affected I hope my honourable friend will not press his amendments.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In view of what the Honourable Minister has said, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my amendments.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendments?

The amendments were, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That the first Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill be omitted."

Sir, the period of leave will also include any holiday that may fall during the period. Assuming 15 days to be the annual leave for an adult and 20 days to be the annual leave for a child if the leave is taken at a stretch, it is quite possible that some normal holidays may fall during this leave period and if these holidays and Sundays are not excluded in counting 15 days or 20 days annual leave, the worker who takes all his annual leave at a stretch from one who absents himself every twentieth day. But I do not see any reason why a worker should not be encouraged to take the leave at a stretch. It will be better for the industry if the worker does not leave his duties every now and then, but goes on leave at a stretch. The provision as it stands at present must, therefore, be amended, Sir, I move.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I do not accept it.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the first Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I move:

"That for the second Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"Provided further that any worker whose services are terminated and who has completed a period of more than four months continuous service in a factory since his employment or the termination of a period for which he has earned leave under sub-section (1) shall be entitled to leave in the same proportion as the period of such service bears to the period of twelve months and the occupier of the factory shall pay to such worker the amount payable under section 80 in respect of the leave to which he has become entitled."

Sir, I want the honourable Minister to give earnest attention to the amendment which I have moved. The present proviso is not clear. It reads thus: "Provided further that where the employment of a worker who has completed a period of four months continuous service in a factory is terminated before he has completed a period of twelve months' continuous service, he shall be deemed entitled to leave....." This proviso lays down two conditions namely, that the worker must have completed four months continuous service and the service must have been terminated before the expiry of a period of twelve months continuous service. It does not lay down when that period of four months should begin. The two conditions together would mean that if a worker has completed four months period of continuous service, he will be entitled to proportionate leave. But, take the case of a worker who has completed 18 months of service. He should ordinarily earn full leave for the first twelve months of continuous service and for the remaining six months he is entitled to proportionate leave. Under this proviso, as it stands, if it is carefully read, a worker who has completed 18 months of continuous service will not come in because then he would have completed more than twelve months of continuous service. He will not satisfy the second condition. It is with this view that I have moved this amendment. I have clearly specified when the period of service will begin. I have said: that the period of four months must have expired since his employment or the termination of a period for which he has earned leave under sub-section (i). If a worker has worked for 18 months, he would earn full leave under sub-section (1) for the first twelve months and then for the remaining six months he gets proportional leave. That position is not clear from the present proviso. A correct interpretation of the present proviso, as I take it to be, would be that it would apply to a worker who has completed four months service and not to one who has completed one year or two years or three years plus four months. I hope the Honourable Minister would see his way to accept this amendment, or, at least to hold over the clause to have it re-examined from the point of view which I have put before the House.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That for the second Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

'Provided further that any worker whose services are terminated and who has completed a period of more than four months continuous service in a factory since his employment or the termination of a period for which he has earned leave under sub-section (1) shall be entitled to leave in the same proportion as the period of such service bears to the period of twelve months and the occupier of the factory shall pay to such worker the amount payable under section 80 in respect of the leave to which he has become entitled'."

Shri K. Santhanam: I am afraid, the honourable member has misunderstood the scope of this proviso. This is intended to apply to seasonal factories. In the case of perennial factories, there is a continuous period of a year, and that has been defined later on and the ordinary leave rules would apply. But, in sugar factories and other factories if they work for a minimum period of four months and then they are discharged, and then re-employed every year...

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: May I ask a question? Is it the implication that in the perennial factories where a worker has worked for six months and then his service is terminated he shall not be entitled to leave under this proviso?

Shri K. Santhanam: It seems he will come under this. There, it is not a question of dismissal; it is termination. Termination may be either by the employer dismissing him or the worker leaving service or the factory closing. According to his amendment, it may be terminated by the worker himself in which case he does not want that leave should be given. Ordinarily, leave is earned only after one year of continuous service. This is meant for special circumstances. I do not think it is wise to tamper with the section as we do not know what its implications will be. Therefore, it has been provided after a great deal of consideration and this is intended mainly for the people in the seasonal factories. Because we have removed the distinction between seasonal and perennial factories, this has become necessary.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That for the second Proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 79 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

'Provided further that any worker whose services are terminated and who has completed a period of more than four months continuous service in a factory since his employment or the termination of a period for which he has earned leave under sub-section (1) shall be entitled to leave in the same proportion as the period of such service bears to the period of twelve months and the occupier of the factory shall pay to such worker the amount payable under section 80 in respect of the leave to which he has become entitled'."

The motion was negatived.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (4) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the words beginning with the words 'Works Committee of the factory' and ending with the words 'similar committee in the factory', the following be substituted:

'most representative registered trade union in the factory or if there is no such union in existence';" and

"That in sub-clause (5) of clause 79 of the Bill, for the words 'Works Committee or a similar Committee or', the words 'most representative registered trade union in the factory', be substituted."

Sir, sub-clauses (4) and (5) really give the management power to prepare plans according to which they will give leave to workers. The Honourable Minister has recognised that in this matter the workers should be consulted. What he has provided for is that although the manager will prepare the plan yet, he will consult the Works Committees and not the unions. I think the consultation should be with the most representative trade union in the factory. According to the Act which we have passed on November 21, 1947, a Union which is most representative will be recognised, and that Union should be consulted. Otherwise what happens is this. The factory owner prepares a scheme which the workers do not like. It goes to the Works Committee where the factory owner has an equal number of nominees of his own, and he wins over our workers representative to his side, his scheme is accepted by the majority of the Works Committee. There would be real consultation with the workers' only if the trade union of workers is consulted. Therefore in these two clauses, instead of the Works Committees, the Trade Union which is most representative should be substituted. The Works Committees are not working satisfactorily now. At present, what happens is, that whatever quarrel there is in the factory, it is put before the Works Committee and the management and the workers get equally divided so that the employer gets an opportunity of postponing the dispute. Then the dispute goes to Conciliation Board and so the process goes on. The Works Committees are really trying to supersede the Trade Unions; I do not want this to happen. I want the Trade Unions to be living things. I am surprised that the Honourable Minister is laughing at this.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: No; I am enjoying.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena: What I say is that the Trade Unions which are most representative of the workers should have the power to say whether the plan is satisfactory or not. As there are an equal number of representatives of the factory owners in the Works Committee, that cannot represent the voice of the workers. I therefore want in these two clauses that recognised Trade Unions should be substituted for Works Committees. Only in November last this House passed the Trade Unions Amendment Act laying down that representative Trade Unions should be recognised. But in this whole Bill I do not find any mention of Trade Unions anywhere. It seems the Honourable Minister is frightened by the word Trade Union. But I want that the Trade Unions should have the real authority and not the Works Committees, so that the workers may feel that it has been done with their consent. Otherwise there will be quarrel and friction. There will be deadlocks in Works Committees and then references to industrial courts, etc. So in the interest of industrial peace I suggest that Works Committees should be replaced by Trade Unions in this clause.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 79 of the Bill—

(i) in sub-clause (4), for the words beginning with the words 'Works Committee of the factory' and ending with the words 'similar committee in the factory' the following be substituted:

'most representative registered trade union in the factory or if there is no such union in existence';" and

(ii) in sub-clause (5) for the words 'Works Committee or a similar Committee or' the words 'most representative registered trade union in the factory' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I am surprised to hear the arguments of my honourable friend. The primary object of trade unions is to make the workers conscious, and once that is done I do not see why they should grumble. It is not intended that they should lead the workers for all time and that the workers should always be spoon-fed by their leaders. The object of trade unions is to make the workers stand on their own legs, and that is what this clause seeks to do. It is not only that the works committees will be consulted but the scheme is to be prepared in agreement with the works committees. I will invite my honourable friend's attention to these words "in agreement". It is not simply consultation but in agreement. And if the works committees cannot represent the workers in a factory I doubt whether the trade unions can represent them better. I want to encourage trade unionism so that the workers may be taught to stand on their own legs, but I do not want that leaders should have free scope to exploit them for all time.

[Shri Jagjivan Ram]

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 79 of the Bill—

(i) in sub-clause (4), for the words beginning with the words 'Works Committee of the factory' and ending with the words 'similar committee in the factory' the following be substituted:

'most representative registered trade union in the factory or if there is no such union in existence';" and

(ii) in sub-clause (5) for the words 'Works Committee or a similar Committee or' the words 'most representative registered trade union in the factory' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 79 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 79 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 80 to 83 were added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 84 of the Bill the following be added at the end:

'but only after the consent of the most representative registered trade union in the factory has been obtained'."

Here again very important powers are being given to Provincial Governments to exempt factories and I wish trade unions to be consulted by the Provincial Governments before giving such exemptions because Government should at least know what the workers feel before they decide to give exemptions.

Shri K. Santhanam: These rules will be duly published and the workers like others will have full opportunities of expressing their views.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 84 of the Bill the following be added at the end:

'but only after the consent of the most representative registered trade union in the factory has been obtained'."

The motion was negatived.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 84 of the Bill for the words 'substantially similar to those' the words 'not less favourable than those' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I accept the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 84 of the Bill for the words 'substantially similar to those' the words 'not less favourable than those' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 84 as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 84, as amended, was added to the Bill.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Saturday, the 28th August, 1948.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART II PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Saturday, 28th August, 1948.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I).

11-45 A.M.

INDIAN INCOME-TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Finance and Commerce): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

INDIAN NAVY (DISCIPLINE) AMENDMENT BILL

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh (Minister for Defence): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

FACTORIES BILL—conold.

Mr. Speaker: The House will now proceed with the further consideration of the Factories Bill.

The question is:

"That clause 85 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 85 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 86 stand part of the Bill."

Shrimati Renuka Ray (Bengal: General): Sir, I have an amendment to this clause.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member should have stood up earlier. However, I find that it was my mistake not to have seen the amendment and therefore I will adopt the very unusual course—perhaps this is the first occasion—of opening up discussion of and allowing the moving of an amendment to a clause which I had put to the vote of the House. The honourable member may move her amendment.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Sir, I move:

"That to clause 86 of the Bill, the following Proviso be added:

'Provided that no exemption shall be granted from the provisions relating to hours of work and holidays, unless the persons having the control of the institution submit, for the approval of the Provincial Government, a scheme for the regulation of the hours of employment, intervals for meals, and holidays of the persons employed in or attending the institution or who are inmates of the institution, and the Provincial Government is satisfied that the provisions of the scheme are not less favourable than the corresponding provisions of this Act.'

I think the wording of this amendment speaks for itself and there is no need for me to go in for much elaboration. It is very important that this proviso should be added so that no factory or workshop may masquerade as a training institution and take advantage of this exempting clause in any way. There is such a proviso in the British Factories Act which has proved very useful and salutary. I feel that unless this proviso is inserted there is likely to be misuse of the exemption granted in this clause. I hope the Honourable Minister will accept this amendment. I do not think it takes away the elasticity that he wants to give to the Provincial Governments in these matters, because after all the addition of this proviso will only strengthen the hands of the Provincial Governments.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram (Minister for Labour): Sir, I accept the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That to clause 86 of the Bill, the following Proviso be added:

'Provided that no exemption shall be granted from the provisions relating to hours of work and holidays, unless the persons having the control of the institution submit, for the approval of the Provincial Government, a scheme for the regulation of the hours of employment, intervals for meals, and holidays of the persons employed in or attending the institution or who are inmates of the institution, and the Provincial Government is satisfied that the provisions of the scheme are not less favourable than the corresponding provisions of this Act.'

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 86, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 86, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri S. V. Krishnamurthy Rao (Mysore State): Sir, I move:

"That in clause 87 of the Bill, for the word 'upon', wherever it occurs, the word 'in' be substituted."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 87 of the Bill, for the word 'upon', wherever it occurs, the word 'in' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, I move:

"That in part (c) of clause 87 of the Bill, after the word 'operation', the words 'and for the insurance of their lives, of which half the cost shall be borne by the factory', be inserted."

Sir, here in this Factories Act we have provided safeguards for a certain section of workers. But there are other dangerous occupations where life is in great hazard. In some occupations, danger of slow death is a certainty. So if workers have to be employed in such occupations; their lives should be insured and half the cost of the insurance should be borne by the factory. Then if a worker knows that he is engaged in an occupation which will lead to his sure death, he will at least have the satisfaction to be able to make provision for his family, and as he himself cannot bear the entire burden, I think the factory owner should pay half the cost of the insurance. I think this is a very important provision and should be accepted. Sir, I move.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in part (c) of clause 87 of the Bill, after the word 'operation', the words 'and for the insurance of their lives, of which half the cost shall be borne by the factory', be inserted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I wish my friend, Prof. Saksena had gone through the Employees State Insurance Act, recently passed by the House. What he wants is not only covered by that Act, but there we have provided something more. He wants only half from the employers. But we have provided for two-thirds from the employers and one-third from the worker. I do not know how.....

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: But will that be available for persons whose lives are subject to a slow death?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: That is covered.

Mr. Speaker: Then what is the position? Does the honourable member wish to press his amendment?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In the circumstances, I wish to have the leave of the House to withdraw.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member the leave of the House to withdraw?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 87, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 87, as amended, was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I move:

"That for clause 88 of the Bill, the following be substituted:—

"88. Notice of certain accidents.—Where in any factory an accident occurs which causes death, or which causes any bodily injury by reason of which the person injured is prevented from working for a period of forty-eight hours or more immediately following the accident, or which is of such nature as may be prescribed in this behalf, the manager of the factory shall send notice thereof to such authorities, and in such form and within such time, as may be prescribed."

This amendment has become necessary due to oversight of my experts. In the present clause it has been said that if the worker is unable "to work at any time during the 72 hours"—which will mean that if a worker has even got a simple bruise in the finger and is unable to work for ten minutes—a report will have to be made. That will cause unnecessary difficulties to the industry and it will become difficult even for the office of the Chief Inspector of Factories to maintain such records.

Another difficulty will be that all the statistics which the Government is collecting in this respect, is based on the premise that a worker is unable to work for two days or more due to accident. So for purposes of comparison as to how far we have proceeded with the provisions for efficient improvement in the safety measures of the factories, it will not be possible if the period is increased or reduced. So my amendment seeks to have the provision as in the existing Act.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That for clause 88 of the Bill, the following be substituted:—

"88. Notice of certain accidents.—Where in any factory an accident occurs which causes death, or which causes any bodily injury by reason of which the person injured is prevented from working for a period of forty-eight hours or more immediately following the accident, or which is of such nature as may be prescribed in this behalf, the manager of the factory shall send notice thereof to such authorities, and in such form and within such time, as may be prescribed."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): The marginal note which has now migrated into the clause, is being read as part of the motion. I submit, Sir, that on account of their proximity to the clauses, they produce an optical illusion that these are something like headings to the sections. We find in amendment No. 4 of list No. 7 by Shri S. V. Krishnamurthy Rao that he regards these marginal notes as 'headings' to the section. I submit that they are really marginal notes, although printed for purpose of convenience to look like headings of sections and should not be read when making the motion. If they are so read then they become a part of the section. As a matter of fact it is not intended that they should be part of the section. So as a matter of practice, both in making amendments and motions, and also in putting the same to the House, the marginal notes should be omitted. There is a tendency among many authorities to regard this as part of the section on account of the printing. I submit that this point should be settled.

Mr. Speaker: I accept the suggestion of the honourable member and next time, even when they are parts of the amendments proposed, I do not propose to put them to the House. That will clarify the position.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, the matter of reporting accidents in factories is at present in a very deplorable state. I know of many factories where accidents occur but are never reported. By substituting the old section we are not doing justice to the whole problem. In this respect I think we should take guidance from the British Act. There they have a whole chapter on accidents and when an accident occurs somebody immediately goes and visits the factory and makes a report. Mere reporting is not enough. There are enough penalties prescribed for failure. Even though it may not be possible to introduce any further amendments in this Bill I hope in the Workmen's Compensation Act the Honourable Minister will introduce such provisions, so that every worker who meets with an accident may be able to get what he deserves as compensation. Sir, I support the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That for clause 88 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"88. Where in any factory an accident occurs which causes death, or which causes any bodily injury by reason of which the person injured is prevented from working for a period of forty-eight hours or more immediately following the accident, or which is of such nature as may be prescribed in this behalf, the manager of the factory shall send notice thereof to such authorities, and in such form and within such time, as may be prescribed."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 88, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 88, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri S. V. Krishnamurthy Rao: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 89 of the Bill, after the word 'attends', occurring in line one, the word 'on' be inserted."

The proper phraseology is 'attends on a person' and not 'attends a person'.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I accept it.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 89 of the Bill, after the word 'attends', occurring in line one, the word 'on' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 89, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 89, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri S. V. Krishnamurthy Rao: Sir, I have given notice of this amendment No. 4 on list No. 7 in order to bring the heading in conformity with the construction of the clause. In clause 90 the word 'inquiry' occurs in six places. Nowhere has the word 'investigate' been used. I want 'inquire into' substituted in place of 'investigation of'.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is referring to the marginal note. (Shri S. V. Krishnamurthy Rao: "Yes, Sir"). In that case it may be left to the draftsman to do the needful.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, in support of the suggestion of Mr. Krishnamurthy Rao, I beg to state that the word 'investigation' under the Criminal Procedure Code means investigation by the police, whereas 'enquiries' are not by the police, but by magistrates and others. The amendment should be accepted.

Mr. Speaker: Opinions may differ on that point. However, it is a matter for the draftsman.

The question is:

"That clauses 90 and 91 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 90 and 91 were added to the Bill.

Mr. Speaker: There are some amendments in the name of Mr. Sidhva but the honourable member is absent. Perhaps he is not keen on moving them.

The question is:

"That clauses 92 and 93 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 92 and 93 were added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

"That in the proviso to clause 94 of the Bill, for the word 'two', the word 'five' be substituted."

Under the proviso, no cognizance is taken of any conviction made more than two years before the commission of the offence which is being punished. I want it to be extended to five years. Members of the Legislature who are convicted are barred for five years. Two years is too short a period and should be extended to five years.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in the proviso to clause 94 of the Bill, for the word 'two', the word 'five' be substituted."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I oppose the amendment. The standard of morality which is expected or required of a member of the Legislature is far higher than the standard expected of a businessman and I think two years would be more than enough for a businessman. That would be a sufficient period of probation.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: In addition to what Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad has said, I may say that even in the case of members of the Legislature it is taken into account only if the conviction is in respect of moral turpitude. Sir, I oppose it.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in the proviso to clause 94 of the Bill, for the word 'two', the word 'five' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 94 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 94 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 95 and 96 were added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain (U.P.: General): Sir, I do not propose to move the amendment standing in my name, but I would like to know from the Honourable Minister as to why he has not included the owners of factories within the scope of sub-clause (2).

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Throughout the Bill the persons who have been made responsible are either the managers or the occupiers, and not the owners of factories—the owners of the premises of the factories. The owner comes in only in clause 93, that is, where more than one factory is working in the hired premises, and there the owner of the premises is held responsible for certain things to be looked after about the premises. Therefore the word 'owner' is not necessary here and that is the reason why the owner has not been included throughout the Bill and the words used are 'manager' or 'occupier'.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: If there is a violation of law in a factory situated in a building where there is more than one factory, will not the owner be liable?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The manager or occupier is liable. But where the premises belong to the owner, as I have already pointed, he will be liable under Section 93.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 97 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 97 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 98 to 100 were added to the Bill.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U.P.: General): Sir, I move:

"That for clause 101 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"101. In a case against the occupier or manager of factory under this Act, it will be a defence for the accused that he has used due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act and that some other person has committed the offence in question against his instructions, or without his knowledge, consent or connivance."

I put it to the House that when a murder takes place and when two persons, A and B, take positions behind two bushes, A fires and B also fires. B hits the man—a passerby—and he is killed. Now A is prosecuted for the murder. A comes before the Court and says "I did not fire at the time when the person was passing, but it was another person behind another bush who fired and killed the man". Now, A is not required even in a murder case to file a complaint and plead that B is guilty and to stand as a prosecution witness to the fact that B is the murderer and not himself. I put it to the House to consider whether the murder of a man is a more serious offence or an offence committed under the Factories Act is a more anti-social Act. If in a murder case it is not necessary for the accused in defence to file a complaint and prosecute another man because not he (the accused) but another man has committed the offence, I do not see any reason why in an offence rather of a minor nature as violation of the provisions of the Factories Act the accused is required to file a complaint and plead that not he but another person has committed the offence and prosecute the man, come as a witness and see that the person is convicted. This is a rather demoralising state of affairs on principle for a man who is prosecuted to take up the plea that another man working under him has committed the offence, to make a complaint against the person working under him for an act which must necessarily be either with his connivance or with his instruction or for his benefit, to bring that person before a court of law and get him convicted. It is a demoralising state of affairs. It is a commonly accepted principle of law that a prosecution would not build its case on the defence of the accused. When a man is prosecuted, and in his defence he says that not he but another person has committed the offence, for the prosecution to prosecute another man and build a case out of defence is an impossible proposition in criminal law. Taking both the points, namely, that this will have a demoralising effect and that it is against the fundamentals of criminal jurisprudence I respectfully submit that the purpose of the clause would be served better without affecting any of the accepted principles of criminal jurisprudence, by the amendment I have moved. That is, if an occupier or manager is prosecuted, it will be a defence for him to prove that he took all the precautions to enforce the execution of the Act and that despite all these, some other person committed the offence against his instructions, or without his knowledge, consent or connivance. Sir, I move.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved.

"That for clause 101 of the Bill, the following be substituted :

'101. In a case against the occupier or manager of factory under this Act, it will be a defence for the accused that he has used due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act and that some other person has committed the offence in question against his instructions, or without his knowledge, consent or connivance.' "

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): I am afraid that my friend has made a mistake regarding the principles of criminal jurisprudence. The law relating to institutions is fundamentally different from that relating to mere individuals. When an institution is concerned, where the law provides that the institution shall conform to certain regulations the responsibility of the persons who are in charge of the institution is more or less absolute. For instance, a newspaper publisher cannot say that somebody else has committed a mistake. Similarly the factory manager must be liable. But where he can come to the court and definitely prove that he did take all the steps prescribed and that another person wilfully committed the offence, and also brings the person to the court, then the exemption is given. The intention is that no offence should go unpunished. It is only in extreme cases where he shows that it was absolutely due to another person's criminality that an exemption is given. Otherwise it will be very easy for a manager to manufacture documents to say 'I instructed so and so to put all the coverings for dangerous machinery; but this man neglected or refused'—and that man will be unavailable. The result would be that the workers might meet with accidents and die, but no one will be held responsible. Not only in this Bill but wherever institutions are forced to comply with certain regulations the principle is that ordinarily the manager shall be absolutely responsible and no plea shall be accepted from him except in the extreme case of some other person having been proved to have deliberately committed the offence in order to spite or do damage to the person concerned. That is the principle. This section was there in the old Bill also.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: Will my friend find any other precedent in any other law where the law compels the accused.....

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Let him proceed.

Shri K. Santhanam: It is not a question of the accused at all; the accused is the factory itself and because technically the accused cannot be brought before the Court, the manager or the occupier is brought before the Court—otherwise no provision need be fulfilled, it can all be disobeyed and no one will be liable.

Even in the Minimum Wages Bill this provision was inserted and the same argument about criminal jurisprudence was under discussion.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I rise to support the amendment. It would be a preposterous proposition to state that a man, whose criminal mind is not behind an act, who acts bona fide, should be punished at law for things done against his wishes or contrary to his instructions and for which he is not morally responsible. It is a dangerous principle and we should not adopt it even in our anxiety to punish a guilty man. That would lead to the punishment of persons morally innocent. Recently the Privy Council has held that criminal intention or mens rea is absolutely necessary to prove an offence, unless in exceptional cases the Legislature absolutely removes that element from the constitution of the offence, but those are hard and rare cases. I do not say that cases may not arise where a man should be held guilty though his mind was not behind the act.

But these are not such cases. There should be no fear that a man would go scot-free by showing forged papers or prepared papers or by the help of manufactured evidence. That possibility is always there whatever law you may pass. After all there are the Courts and they have got to decide on the evidence, and they are fully competent to take care of themselves. In a case where there is room for doubt an accused should be discharged or acquitted; political consequences have nothing to do with the administration of criminal law. In fact, politics is one thing and law is quite a different thing. If we are to punish a man, he must be punished for his own act. If his guilty mind is not behind it, it would be wrong to punish him. Though it may be that in some cases guilty persons will escape, but that is no reason why you should relax a fundamental principle of law designed for the safety of the innocent.

This is a salutary principle which we cannot afford to lose. It raises a question of constitutional importance and I think the Honourable Minister should carefully consider the matter. In our zeal for punishing persons who might be possibly guilty, we should not relax the high principles of criminal jurisprudence for that will lead to the punishment of the innocent; that would be going against the principles of the very constitution under which we live. In these circumstances, I submit that the accused should be acquitted in whose favour there is this element that his criminal mind is not behind the act. He is not morally guilty; should he be legally guilty if he is not morally guilty? This high principle is behind this amendment. I support this amendment.

Shri S. V. Krishnamurthy Rao: Sir, I oppose this amendment. If this amendment is accepted, I think it will defeat the very purpose of the section. We are not legislating penal law. In fact, this labour legislation enjoins the owners and managers of factories to conform to certain duties and when that duty is infringed it imposes a penalty. In certain cases, especially in cognizable cases, the accused is not at all called upon to enter on his defence and it is only after the prosecution closes its case that the accused enters upon the defence.

The purpose of this section as I understand it is that the manager or the owner, if he feels that he is not responsible for the offence and that some other person is responsible, should at the very first opportunity make it known to the Court that he is not responsible and that somebody else is responsible. It is with that object I think this section is inserted. It says:

"Where the occupier or manager of a factory is charged with an offence punishable under this Act, he shall be entitled, upon complaint duly made by him and on giving to the prosecutor not less than three clear days' notice in writing of his intention so to do, to have any other person whom he charges as the actual offender brought before the Court at the time appointed for hearing the charge;"

At the very first instance when the charge is made in the Court, he has to inform the Court of the person who is responsible for the infringement of the rules so that the proper person may be brought to book. So, if I understand it aright, that object will be defeated if it has to be postponed to a date on which the accused is called upon to enter upon his defence. If this amendment is accepted it will defeat the very purpose of the Bill. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I strongly oppose the amendment. In fact, I had proposed to move an amendment to delete the whole clause but I will not move it now because I think what I wanted to say I can say just now.

I think that if the transgression of any factory law is committed in a factory the responsibility for such violation of law must be placed on the occupier or the manager who is in charge of it. Experience shows that a factory owner or a manager is never convicted; some labourer or some other man is made the scapegoat and is punished. Sir, I wish it had been said in this Bill that if any infringement of factory law took place in the factory then the occupier would be himself responsible; then alone, will he see to it that no employee of his infringes the law. What happens when the law is infringed today is that the benefit of violation of law goes to the occupier or the manager. So, if he knows that for the mere commission of the offence he will be punished, he shall exercise due diligence and see that no offence is committed. But when he has the choice to put up somebody else and say, "Look here, he is the man who has done it", he will always do things which bring him profit and will put up somebody who will go to jail for him for a month or two. It often happens so. So I had wished for the deletion of the whole clause.

Some of my lawyer friends in this House think the present clause is too stringent and hard, and violates the principles of legal jurisprudence. I think it is the duty of the occupier of the factory to see that no infringement of factory law is committed in it. It would be impossible for the Government to prove that such and such a person in the factory has been responsible for it. What the Government can do is to say that such an infringement has occurred in the factory, so the factory is guilty. In fact, this section shows much leniency to these factory owners, for now they can escape punishment by bringing somebody and saying, "Look here, he is the man who is responsible for it".

Sir, I think the best thing would have been not to have put the section at all. (Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: "I quite agree"). But when it has been put, I think it has been put in the best possible way because there at least the factory owner will have the onus to prove that that is the man who is responsible and he should be punished. Normally it will be difficult to find people who will be prepared to undergo three or four months imprisonment though for money they can be produced by any factory owner.

Sir, I therefore think that this is the second best alternative and I therefore support this clause and oppose the amendment moved by my lawyer friends.

پنڈت تھاکر داس بہارگو: جناب سپیکر صاحب! میرا ارادہ نہیں تھا کہ میں اس کلاز پر کچھ کہوں۔ لیکن میں چناب کی خدمت میں یہ عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ پہلے بھی یہاں پر کچھ ایکٹ پاس ہوئے ہیں جن کے اندر اس قسم کے دفعات تھے جن کے متعلق ہاؤس کے سامنے اُنکے نقائص بیان کئے گئے تھے۔ لیکن باوجود ان حجتوں کے بھی وہ پاس کئے گئے۔ میں کسی ایسے اصول کے خلاف نہیں ہوں جس میں occupier یا منیجر کی ذمہ داری خلاف ورزی خاص دفعات کے لئے رکھی جاوے لیکن میں ادب سے عرض کرونگا کہ جہاں تک اس کلاز کا تعلق ہے نہ اس میں سوال ذمہ داری occupier یا منیجر کا ہے۔ نہ ہی moral conviction کا سوال ہے۔ بلکہ یہ clause صرف jurisprudence کے خلاف ہی نہیں ہے۔ بلکہ تمام اصولوں کے morals کے و انسانیت کے و انسانی conduct کے جواز کے خلاف ہے جیسا کہ میرے دوست مسٹر شین لعل کا خیال تھا کہ یہ سارا کلاز omit کر دیا جاتا تو بہتر ہوتا۔ جب کبھی ایسا سوال کورٹ کے سامنے آتا ہے تو کورٹ فیصہ کرتی ہے کہ اگر جرم ہوا ہے تو مجرم کون ہے۔ سوال یہ ہے کہ جرم کے ہونے پر کسی کو مجرم ثابت کرنے کی ضرورت ہے یا نہیں۔ لیکن اس clause میں یہ درج ہے کہ ایک آدمی جس پر الزام ہے اُسکو اپنی جگہ ایک substitute لاکر رکھنا

"Unless he proves to the satisfaction of the Court—

- (a) that he has used due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act, and
- (b) that the said person committed the offence in question without his knowledge, consent and connivance."

یعنی کسی مقدمہ میں یہ نہیں دیکھنا ہے کہ منیجر یا occupier نے جرم کیا ہے یا مجرم اور کوئی شخص ہے۔ لیکن دیکھنا یہ تھا کہ occupier یا منیجر کا جنرل behaviour کیسا ہے۔ یعنی اگر ایک جرم کے اندر یہ ثابت ہوتا ہے کہ وہ بے گناہ ہے۔ اور اُس نے جرم نہیں کیا ہے۔ لیکن اُس کو یہ ثابت کرنا ہے کہ اُس نے اس ایکٹ کے execution میں due diligence enforce کی ہے۔ اس کے تحت تو اُس کا سابقہ چال چلن وغیرہ بھی آتا ہے۔ اس لئے میں نہایت ادب سے عرض کرونگا کہ اس کے provisions نہایت harsh ہیں اور قانون کے خلاف ہیں انصاف کے خلاف ہیں اور انسانیت کے خلاف ہیں۔ اس کے علاوہ اس کے proviso کو دیکھکر اور بھی ہنسی آتی ہے۔ اس میں لکھا ہے کہ تین ماہ تک اگر کوئی شخص substitute کے طور پر نہ ملے تو باوجود کوشش occupier و منیجر کے کہ ایسا شخص حاضر ہو جاوے۔ اور وہ حاضر نہیں رہتا تو اُس منیجر یا occupier کو مجرم قرار دیا جائیگا اور اُس کو سزا دیجائیگی۔ میں یہ دریافت کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ اس کلاز میں یہ الفاظ کیوں رکھے گئے ہیں۔ کہ

"Brought before the Court, the Court shall proceed to hear the charge against the occupier or manager and shall, if the offence be proved, convict the occupier or manager."

[پلڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو]

شخص کو کورٹ کے سامنے لانے میں کامیاب نہ ہو تو اس سے مقدمہ میں کیا فرق پڑتا ہے۔ اس لئے یہ ایک meaningless بات ہے۔ کہ اگر وہ ایک substitute کو لاکر پیش نہ کرے تو اسکو سزا دی جائیگی ایسی حالت میں الفاظ "if the offence be proved" در اصل بے معنی ہیں اگر سزا ضرور ملنی ہے۔

میرے دوست مسٹر شبن لال کا خیال بالکل درست ہے۔ اور یہ بات یہاں کے وکیل ممبران کو ہرگز ہضم نہیں ہو سکتی ہے۔

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I had no intention of speaking on this clause, but I would like to state for your information that many such Acts have been passed before which contain similar provisions and their defects were brought before the House. But in spite of objections they were passed. I am not opposed to any such principles which place the responsibility for the breach of certain clauses on the occupier or manager. I would respectfully submit, Sir, that so far as this clause is concerned neither does it involve the question of responsibility of the occupier or manager, nor of moral conviction. But this clause is not only against the canons of jurisprudence, but it contravenes all principles, morals, humanity and validity of human conduct. Just as my honourable friend Prof. Shibban Lal has pointed out it would have been much better if this entire clause been omitted. Whenever any such question is raised before the court, the court decides that in case the offence has been committed who is the culprit? The question is whether it is at all necessary to prove anybody guilty when the offence is committed. This clause provides that when a man is charged with an offence, he shall have to bring before the court a substitute in his place and if he does not do so, he is liable to be punished. Apart from this, another point which I would like to mention is that if a person proves that the offence has been committed by some other person and further proves that the offence was not committed through his negligence or connivance, etc., even then he cannot be acquitted. This reminds me of a well-known proverb:

"ANDHER NAGRI CHOPAT RAJA,...

TAKE SER BHAJI TAKE SER KHAJA".

which means 'Confusion worse confounded'. Because the offence has been committed, it becomes necessary to punish someone despite the fact that he may prove himself to be innocent. According to the existing clause, the manager or occupier has been held to be conclusively and virtually guilty, and if he is arrested, he is given an option to produce any person whom he should charge with the commission of the offence. If it is proved that the other person has committed the offence, even then the manager or occupier is not absolved because in this clause in addition to sub-clause (a), there is (b) also which lays down:

"Unless he proves to the satisfaction of the Court—

- (a) that he has used due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act, and
- (b) that the said person committed the offence in question without his knowledge, consent and connivance."

Thus it has not to be judged in any case whether the manager or occupier has committed the offence or some other person is guilty. But it has got to be seen as to what has been the behaviour of the manager or occupier? If in the trial of an offence it is proved that he is innocent and has not committed the offence, even then he has to prove that he used due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act. This also covers his previous conduct, etc. Therefore I will respectfully submit, Sir, that the provisions of this clause are very harsh and against the fundamentals of law, justice and humanity. In addition to this, a look at its proviso causes further laughter. It lays down that if no substitute is found up to three months and despite the efforts of the manager or occupier that such a person, should be brought before the Court and he does not present himself, then that manager or occupier shall be convicted. I would like to know why the following words have been added in this clause:

"Brought before the Court, the Court shall proceed to hear the charge against the occupier or manager and shall, if the offence be proved, convict the occupier or manager."

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

I want to know that if up to three months he is not able to produce the other person, then would this mean that he has committed the offence though he might be innocent? May I know what difference does it make in case he fails to bring that person before the Court within the period of three months. Therefore this is quite meaningless, that he should be punished simply on account of his failure to produce a substitute. In such a condition the words "if the offence be proved" are quite meaningless, if conviction is necessary.

What my honourable friend Professor Shibban Lal thinks is absolutely correct and those members of this House who are lawyers cannot at all agree to this. A penal clause is being inserted against the principles of jurisprudence and it is quite improper that an innocent person should be convicted. In fact the proper course is to take such steps as would obviate the breach of law, and no innocent person punished. The law should be elastic so that it may not harm anybody. It should not contain any such provision by means of which a manager or occupier may implicate an innocent man by offering a bribe. I agree that it is not the intention of the law that any innocent person should be embarrassed and convicted. Such a provision should not be made in any law which enjoins that punishment should be awarded to a person irrespective of the fact that he did not commit the offence. Criminality may be attributed to neglect, but if another person commits an offence and he is not available, then the innocent person should not be punished. I would, therefore, request the Honourable Minister for Labour that the manager and occupier should not be exonerated from the legal responsibility. But this responsibility should not be so placed that an innocent person is treated as a culprit. An innocent person should not be victimized by the provisions in this clause, and the actual offender enabled to implicate an innocent person by misusing the provisions of this law. This is against the principles of jurisprudence that an innocent person be implicated without any reason, it would be sheer injustice to punish him. The legislation is not framed for the purpose of involving innocent persons but to ensure conviction of the actual culprits. The lawyer members of this House cannot easily digest such a legislation which is against these principles. Such laws which contravene the universal principles defeat their purpose and prove ineffective.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I have carefully listened to the arguments advanced by my friend Mr. Bhargava. This is not the first time that a law is being passed where a certain responsibility is being constructively placed upon a person. In quite a number of other laws such responsibility has been fixed. The Directors of the Company have been made responsible not actually but constructively for any black-marketing carried on in the factories. Here we have to judge the whole thing from the point of view of social good. The factory manager or occupier has been made constructively responsible for the violation of the provisions of the Factory law but he has been given the right to produce the actual culprit in which case he can escape the liability. My friend referred to the proviso and said that if the actual culprit is not available in three months then the occupier or manager shall be prosecuted in all cases. I would draw his attention to the last sentence wherein it is stated "if the offence is proved". Mere commission of an offence without showing who has committed it is not proof of the offence. The prosecution will have to show that a violation of the law has taken place and that the manager or occupier has not taken sufficient care or exercised sufficient diligence to prevent the commission of that offence.

Shri K. Santhanam: Prosecution has not to prove that. It has only to prove that an offence has been committed.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Please see clause 11⁷ wherein anything done in good faith is fully protected. So I think that the responsibility has been correctly fixed on the manager or occupier, because the whole responsibility for administering has been placed upon him and if he is absolved of the responsibility that is if the law simply says that the person who has actually committed the breach shall be punishable, in that case, the whole scheme of the Act will become a nullity.

It will not be possible to enforce the provisions of this Act. In a case of this kind it is the consideration of public policy that should prevail and not the meticulousness of the juristic principles.

A short while ago, I made a complaint that this exemption has been provided only in the case of the occupier or manager. The occupier or manager has been made constructively responsible for offences. But the owner, in the case where the premises are occupied by more than one factory or where one building is occupied by more than one factory, is constructively responsible for the action of the occupier or manager, who is constructively responsible for the action of the person actually committing the violation. If this exemption is provided in the manager or occupier, this person who is doubly constructively responsible is entitled to this exemption all the more. I think the law as it stands is perfectly correct, except that care should be taken that undue use may not be made of the provision. After all it is the Factory Inspector who will launch the prosecution or with whose approval prosecution shall be filed. Government should see that the occupiers and managers are not unnecessarily harassed nor the workers made scape-goats and punished merely because the occupier or manager wants to escape his own responsibility. So far as the present scheme of the section is concerned, I think it is perfectly good and absolutely necessary for enforcing the provisions of this law. It may not conform to the strict principles of criminal jurisprudence, but it is absolutely necessary in the public interests.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): Sir, I support the amendment. I want the Honourable the Minister to consider the effect of the provision as it now stands, in section 101. If you are pleased to see section 20, you will notice that we have stated that the factory has to provide a sufficient number of spittoons in convenient places and maintain them in a clean and hygienic condition. Take for instance a factory where the owner, or manager or occupier, whoever may be responsible for it, provides the number of spittoons required of him, but somebody takes it into his head to remove half of them or they just manage to make them unclean. There are certain other provisions like that. There is a violation and a complaint is made and the manager and occupier are prosecuted. What is the absurd position to which we are being led to? They will have not only to see that they had it in these spittoons and that they all are in a clean and hygienic condition, but they will also have to find out who it was that has removed a number of these spittoons required to be maintained in the factory. If he is not in a position to do that,—supposing the man who has removed the spittoons gets away from the factory, he cannot be found out—this occupier or manager, in spite of the fact that he had done everything that was required of him, he will be convicted. Surely, this is a novel thing.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: He must take care and see that no one removes them.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: My honourable friend says that he should see that no one removes them. He expects the manager or occupier to be at every point of the factory where thousands of workers will be working. (Mr. R. K. Sidha: "He will have his agents.") He will have his agents. I know the spirit that is prevalent. I know that we are not prepared to consider it from the purely legal and correct point of view. Certainly, we should make all provisions whereby we can compel the occupier or manager to arrange for all the conveniences and other amenities, cleanliness and other things. But, simply because somebody, as I said, deliberately, in order to put the manager or occupier in difficulty, does something which is against the provisions of the Factory Act, will you agree to punish him? (Interruption).

Mr. Speaker: Let him proceed.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: My friend has forgotten that the occupier or manager has used all due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act. But, he has not only to see that he has taken all the steps required of him, but he has also to produce the offender, and he must also show that the act has been done by him without his knowledge, consent or connivance. Take for instance, section 20. No person shall spit in the premises of the factory except in the spittoons. Supposing somebody does, that is an offence committed in the factory. And in terms of section 92, which says, "if in, or in respect of, any factory there is any contravention of any of the provisions of this Act", the occupier and manager can be prosecuted. There is a contravention of one of the provisions of the Factories Act and there is an offence committed. Therefore, if somebody has spat in the factory, no doubt, the person who has spat there is also responsible, but still, because it is an offence committed in the factory, the occupier or manager can be made responsible unless he shows that he has not failed to take all reasonable measures for its prevention. (The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: "No no.") The Honourable Minister says no, no. I shall wait for his reply. So far as I have been able to follow the provisions of sections 92, 97 and 101, unless he can lay his hands on the person who has committed the violation, the occupier or manager can be convicted. (Interruption.) I do not want to be diverted; let me go on in my own way. Therefore, I would request the Honourable Minister to consider this. I do not say that anything should be done to allow the occupier or manager to escape from any responsibility that we have cast on him. But we should not legislate in such a manner that even when he has done all that was required of him, he shall be convicted,—not only may be convicted,—unless he can produce the person alleged to be the accused within a certain time. I support the amendment and I beg the Honourable Minister to consider the effect of this provision.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I did not know that on this clause there will be so much of controversy. You may yourself very well remember, Sir, that when we were considering the Minimum Wages Bill in this House, on a similar clause, legal objections were raised by my honourable friend Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava, who claimed that it was a novel provision, and you yourself pointed out certain Acts in which this provision was provided. I will simply say that this is not a novel provision. This clause has been bodily taken out from the old Factories Act of 1934. It finds a place in a number of other Acts. But to draw the analogy of a murder with an offence committed in a factory, I think, is far fetched. I do not think in the case of a murder, anybody is specifically charged with the duty to see that such and such person should not be murdered. Here, the whole scheme of the Factories Bill is that we make the occupier or manager of any factory specifically responsible for the various obligations that have been placed upon them. And when an offence is committed one has not to find out who is responsible for it; the responsibility has been thrown on the occupier and the manager. I think it is in the interest of the occupier and the manager. I can understand Mr. Sharma and Mr. Bhargava arguing against the clause on legal grounds but I cannot understand my friend Mr. Himatsingka arguing against the clause itself. The acceptance of the amendment would mean that the manager or occupier could say that with due diligence he had provided a number of spittoons but some one else has taken them away, and therefore nothing is to be done against him. The responsibility is his, but I could not understand the argument that if a worker spits somewhere in the factory the occupier will be prosecuted. I am not a lawyer but I am sure that where specific offences are laid down and specific punishments provided, if a worker commits an offence and spits somewhere except in a spittoon he is to be punished and not the manager. Of course if a sufficient number of spittoons is not provided the occupier or manager is responsible; but if he says that he provided the required number and some one else removed them he will have to prove that.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: And he will have to produce that somebody.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Yes, because everybody in the factory is under him, and responsible to him. The scheme of the entire Bill is that nothing happens without his permission or connivance or orders. And if anything happens against his orders he will have to prove it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: That is not sufficient. If a person proves that he has no knowledge or connivance etc., even then he is guilty unless he can prove that in all other matters he has exercised due diligence.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Of course, the whole obligation is on him and he is expected to discharge his obligations. If you leave him aside on whom are you going to throw the obligation of fulfilment of the provisions of this Bill? Certainly it is on the occupier and manager; and he has to prove that in spite of his due diligence to fulfil his obligations under this measure and in spite of his instructions his subordinates are recalcitrant and violated his orders. In that case the person or persons who violated his orders will be punished and not the manager or occupier. The whole scheme of the Bill is to throw the obligation on the manager and occupier unless the guilty person can be produced.

Sir, this provision is very necessary and I am not prepared to accept the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That for clause 101 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"101. In a case against the occupier or manager of factory under this Act, it will be a defence for the accused that he has used due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act and that some other person has committed the offence in question against his instructions, or without his knowledge, consent or connivance."

The motion was negatived.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 101 of the Bill, after the word 'manager', wherever it occurs, the words 'or owner' be inserted."

Only a short while ago, it was stated by the Honourable Minister that the manager and occupier of a factory have been made responsible for the violation of law, because they were responsible for the observance of the rules in the Factory. It was for that reason that an exception has been provided, namely, that if they can produce the actual offender, then the manager or occupier shall not be responsible for the breach of law. This law applies to cases where there is one factory in one premises. In cases where there are more than one factory in the same premises, the owner has been made responsible for the observance of law. I do not quite agree with that principle, but as we have already adopted clause 93, that question is over. However, I see no reason why the same privilege should not be extended to the owner. The occupier, or the manager or the owner should stand on the same footing. In fact, the owner is deserving of a little more concession because the owner has no control or domination over the affairs of the factory, and if the principle has been conceded to the manager or occupier, there is all the greater reason that it should be extended to the owner.

[Shri Ajit Prasad Jain]

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 101 of the Bill, after the word 'manager', wherever it occurs, the words 'or owner' be inserted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The difficulty is this. If the amendment is accepted it will read like this:

"Where the occupier or manager or owner of a factory."

Now in the whole of this Bill, there is nothing like an owner of a factory. We have either a manager or an occupier of a factory. There is no owner of a factory. Even in the definition, we have not defined an 'owner' of a factory, though we have defined the 'occupier' or 'manager'.

Now Mr. Jain's difficulty is that under section 93 we have placed some liability on the owners of premises in certain circumstances. But in the proviso to the same section 93, we have amply safeguarded the owners of such premises and I may read the proviso to section 93:

"Provided that—

(i) the provisions of this section shall not apply to, or in respect of, any building or room in the sole occupation of the occupier of a factory;

(In that respect the risk of the owner is shifted to the occupier or manager of the factory).

(ii) the aforesaid owner shall be liable for any contravention of any of the provisions of this Act or of the rules made thereunder relating to the cleanliness of sanitary conveniences only when those conveniences are used by workers of more than one occupier;

(iii) the aforesaid owner shall be liable for any contravention of any of the provisions of this Act or of the rules made thereunder relating to hoists and lifts, and means of escape and safety precautions in case of fire, only in so far as the said provisions relate to things under his control."

For other contraventions the occupier or the manager is made responsible and so far as the owner is made responsible under this section 93, he has been made responsible for the provisions under Chapter 3 and Chapter 4, which are cleanliness and sanitary provisions made in the factories.

Furthermore, the difficulty is that if we insert "owner" here it will read "owner of a factory" which is nowhere provided for in this Bill. We have either 'manager' or 'occupier' of a factory. There is no term like the 'owner' of a factory. I do not think the amendment fits in here.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: I quite realize the difficulty. If my principle is a sound one, then my amendment may be amended by the Honourable the Minister and accepted. But if he does not want to accept it, I do not insist upon it.

Mr. Speaker: The idea seems to be to tighten the measure against people who are actually in charge of the running of the factory and not against people who own the factory. Supposing the factory is owned by some person and it is leased for working to another man. That seems to be the distinction.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Exactly: the whole responsibility is on the manager or the occupier.

Mr. Speaker: Does the honourable member wish me to put his amendment to the House?

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: It need not be put because I know its fate. I therefore ask permission to withdraw.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw? The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I want to speak on the clause.

Mr. Speaker: I think the honourable member has already fully spoken on it.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I will not repeat any of my arguments.

Mr. Speaker: All right.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I have found here an attempt to copy a similar section in the English Factories Act of 1937, namely, section 137. As a matter of fact, the inspiration of this clause has apparently been derived from this English section. But the English Act deals with the matter in a more scientific and legalistic way. It says that if a manager or occupier is prosecuted then he can name the person who he alleges is really guilty. Then the man so named may be brought on the record and evidence may be given against him and he may be convicted summarily. That is an additional right given to the occupier or manager to have brought on the record a man whom he says is really guilty. But he cannot, under the British Act, be punished as a matter of course, if the man named is not found, or is found but is not convicted. Not so, however, in the Bill. The Bill says that if the man named is not produced in three months and if the offence is proved, although the manager or occupier may not have had any thing to do with it, he will still be convicted. This part of the Bill has no counterpart in the English section. The English section merely gives the occupier or the manager the right to name the real offender and to show that he was not really personally or morally responsible but the failure to bring the man on the record or to prove the guilt against him does not involve the consequence that he will himself be convicted, if merely the offence is proved, as the last part of the second proviso to the clause shows. In fact by trying to prove that somebody else has committed the crime the manager or occupier under this clause would be incurring a grave responsibility. In fact ordinarily no lawyer, unless he is fit to be kept in a mad house, will suggest to his client to undertake this risky task, because if the man is not produced or if his guilt is not proved, then he will himself be ipso facto found guilty. In fact the ordinary law, apart from Section 101, is in his favour. While the English section gives him an additional right, the Indian section proposes to give him the same right but with the stipulation that it will be extremely risky on his part to name the man and prove his guilt. The section in the existing Act from which clause 101 has been taken in my experience has remained a dead letter. No accused will take the responsibility of doing so, because the ordinary law is available to him and in case he thinks that his case is strong or rather the prosecution case can be shown to be weak, he will be acquitted. It is only when he tries to take the so-called advantage of Section 101 that he will put himself in difficulties.

by the Privy Council that the word 'contravention' means that there is a criminal mind behind it. Without sufficient mens rea a man cannot be found guilty. So the ordinary law can hold a man guilty only if there is a criminal mind behind the act. Otherwise he could never be punished. So if he is prosecuted, if he finds that somebody else is really guilty, it is enough for him to indicate in cross-examination that another man is guilty or that he is himself not guilty or that the case is shrouded in doubt. In that case he will be acquitted. I submit that the clause 101 is absolutely misconceived. No manager or occupier will take advantage of it unless he is defended by a mad lawyer or unless the man named is a willing scape goat and is ready to plead guilty. During my long experience of one third of a century in criminal courts and dealing with prosecutions under the Factories Act I have never seen or heard anyone taking advantage of this provision. The desire of the House to find the occupier or manager guilty for anything consciously or willingly done by him or at his instance, will be frustrated unless he is generous enough to put his head into the noose and get himself automatically convicted through the provision of Section 101. The desire of the House to find him guilty for whatever offence committed in the factory, whether he is conscious of it, or encourages it or connives at it or not will be signally frustrated. Section 101 will serve no useful purpose but will be used by the guilty by procuring the voluntary or collusive conviction of the innocent.

It is said that it has been copied from an earlier Act but I think the mistake should not be continued any further. There is the story that a small girl was told by her mother that she must obey her parents. The girl asked her mother who had told her so. The mother replied "I learnt it from my mother". "How did your mother learn it", was the next question of the little girl. The mother replied "My mother learnt it from her mother". The little girl remained silent for sometime. The mother asked her what she was thinking about. The girl replied "I am curious to know who started the mischief originally." I submit there is someone here who started the mischief. In fact some draftsman in his over-enthusiasm originally introduced this provision and we are carrying it from Act to Act. I submit that this clause would be innocuous and would fail to get hold of the guilty, because he would not fall into the trap. Section 101 should be entirely omitted. I ask the Honourable Minister to consider it or consult some experienced lawyer like Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava. He will never advise his client to take advantage of this section and he will never do it and the accused by taking advantage of it will never be generous enough to allow himself to be convicted without any guilt on his part. I submit that this clause should be deleted.

Mr. Speaker: It seems to be the fear of the honourable member that an occupier or manager will find some scape goat to take the responsibility.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It is just inviting him to find a scape-goat. It is something like the jail editor. An editor engages a man to go to jail on his behalf for writing dangerous articles. The occupier or manager will have a paid servant to deputise for him in the criminal court and accept punishment.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: Sir, I have put in an amendment to this clause. This clause is not only absurd but it is also unnecessary and offends against good conscience. Good conscience is the sine quo non of all laws. The Honourable Minister while opposing my amendment advocated a strange principle that in the case of factories the occupier or manager has taken the responsibility upon himself that no offence under the Act would be committed in his factory but that in the case of a citizen, as such he takes no responsibility whatsoever that a murder would not be committed. He said that the analogy of murder does not therefore hold good in the case of offences under the Factories Act. May I ask respectfully on what basis does a state exist? Does not the sovereignty whether King or Parliament, or whatever the sovereign body is, stand up and say, "I stand here to protect you" and does not the citizen stand up, bow down and declare his loyalty and civil obedience to the law of the land? Here is the guarantee of a citizen not to commit a crime. 'A' gives as much a guarantee or takes as much a responsibility not to commit a murder of any other fellow citizen as a factory owner or a factory occupier or a factory manager does in the case of petty offences under the Factories Act. Whether this has found place in the previous Act or not, there is no gainsaying the fact that this clause offends against good conscience and it offends against the fundamentals of law. I may remind the House that it is very good to gather here and pass laws then to say "We are the representatives of the people; on their behalf we pass this law and therefore it is good law because it is sanctioned by the will or the consent of the people". Sir, ages have passed and people have suffered from the tyranny of the King. The obstinate will of a man whose word was law and that law was forced on the people or was carried under force. It does not matter which way one governs. If he forces his will obstinately, without any concern whatsoever to what is called good conscience, to what is called decency, without any regard to the fundamentals on which society is based—whether one man rules or the people are multiplied in hundreds or for the matter of that in thousands—what matters is that in framing a law you should look to the conscience of the people from time to time; you should look to the evolutionary growth of the human conscience and you should look to decency and principles and under which circumstances society is run, under which society obeys law and under which circumstances workers do work and produce wealth and the state prospers. This is the question and my respectful submission is that by giving assent to this sort of law you exercise not the consent of the people, not the willingness of the people behind you, not the power of the vote behind you, but the obstinate will of a tyrannical authority. It will go against you. It will not be an Act of the Legislature but it will be an act of tyranny.

You say that "A" is to be punished even if he proves that he tried to avoid the offence being committed but despite his attempt somebody else has committed the offence. And you say that if within three months that somebody else—"B"—is not to be found, then A has to be convicted. I may point out a salutary provision in the Criminal Procedure Code—Section 403. When a trial takes place in the case of an offence and the offence is tried once, it cannot be tried again. The judge calls upon a man, he pleads his innocence, the plea of innocence is accepted—that not A but another man B has committed the offence. A cannot be tried again after once his plea is accepted. And as I said before, it is the most demoralising thing in the world to ask a man to produce his fellow worker and say "This man has committed the offence; therefore hang him". The victor forces the man to betray his colleague and to produce another as his scape goat for the purpose of saving himself. Nothing is so demeaning in human life than to get saved at the cost of another man. Surely this is not the way of a law but a brute way of dealing with things. There is nothing of civility, decency or soundness in a law that permits such state of affairs. In its own provision it is bad enough in the sense that it enables one to save oneself at the cost of another. That other man works under him, produces wealth for him and his activities are supervised and controlled by him. It is a thing which is demeaning and immoral.

Let me point out another thing. After once having given judgment that B has committed the crime and not A, you sit for three long months and after that you learn that B is not available. Then you say "Bring him or I will hang you". May I respectfully ask "Is this the way to legislate?" Does it do any good whatsoever; what would be the good of such a law and how would it work? Therefore, without appealing to passion, without appealing to sentiment,

[Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma]

I appeal to commonsense; I appeal to sound judgment; I appeal to equity and fairness; and I appeal to precedent. That is, the law has not found any precedent in any civilised society where industry is not to be born today or is of yesterday's birth but where industry has its predominance, where industry rules the people. I say that such a precedent does not exist anywhere else. If it existed here, it was because we were not old enough and we did not have enough of good conscience—whenever passed that law was devoid of good conscience. Therefore do not take your stand upon the fact that it found a place in the old Act. If it found a place in the old Act, many other things were done in the old time. We are not the people of that time. We have grown, and grown well. We are careful and we have sound judgment and reason and I appeal to you that this clause should be omitted. It does no good to anybody.

I shall refer you to the cases under the Defence of India Act. Take the case of possession of prejudicial document. What was the provision? It was laid down that the possession by itself would not be enough to convict a man, if a man could prove that he had no knowledge of the contents thereof that would be a sufficient defence. This was in the Defence of India Act. And what was that law made for? For the safety of the Empire, for the protection of millions of people and for the future of a generation here and the future of the posterity of the English people. If such a law can have a provision that in the case of possession of prejudicial document, if the accused could prove that though he was in possession of it yet he was not conscious of it—that he did not know the contents of the document—then that would constitute a sufficient defence, is not that provision enough in respect of a petty offence under the Factories Act? It does not matter practically because your Act will not go a long way. For, the owner knows well how to tackle the Magistrate. Magistrate will sentence him to a fine of Rs. 5 or something of that sort. Has a factory owner ever been sent to jail? Has any sentence of imprisonment ever been passed under the Factories Act? It is always a fine of Rs. 5, Rs. 10 or at the most Rs. 50. This is generally the case. So, rest assured that this particular clause which you want to enact, or the whole Factory Law itself, will not hit very hard the factory man because the factory man exercises political influence; he exercises social influence; he controls the district and the mofussal. There are so many ways for him to escape. Money and capital have grown into a powerful force now. Rest assured your law will not go a great deal to tell upon the factory man. Why I am fighting against this clause is because it offends against the fundamental principle of law. It offends against equity, it offends against justice and it offends against fairness. Therefore, I appeal to you, Sir, in the name of all that is sacred in law and in justice not to press it but to drop it.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): Sir, I have to suggest only one thing, and it is this: after all, this whole clause is not so absurd.

Previously there were no clauses about sanitation and other things, but now those things have been included, but it appears very anomalous that punishment should go to the occupier or some other man. I think some exemptions may be made in this, for example, about spitting, etc. So these offences may be differentiated, and put into another category, and others such as security and other things put under a separate category. In this way the whole thing can be solved. But if it is so complicated then the Honourable Minister may hold it over for re-drafting.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I have nothing much to add. There is no question of inequity and things like that and nothing to indicate madness after independence.

Mr. Speaker: It appears there has been some serious misconception here. Of course it is not for me to explain, but the position appears to me to be clear. It is only legislating for presumption—nothing more than that, and no principles of law seem to have been seriously involved as the lawyer Members seem to suppose.

The question is:

"That Clause 101 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 101 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 102 and 103 were added to the Bill.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 104 of the Bill, for the words 'opinion of the Court apparently', the words 'opinion of a certifying surgeon' be substituted."

My contention is that in the first place it is difficult for a lay man to judge the age of a boy. Generally the age in question would be 14 or 15 or 16 and it is very difficult to judge it for anybody much more so for a lay man. My objection is that a Magistrate, in the beginning of a case, should have no opinion whatsoever with regard to the age of a person.

Shri K. Santhanam: Even though there is a five-year old child?

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: No, no; my friend, I am sorry, has no experience of a court of law. An eight-year old child or a four-year old child will not come before the Court; it will come only if it is 14 or 15 or 16 and it is difficult to judge the age of a boy—whether it is 14, 15 or 16.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. I do not know what the objection is, but "in the opinion of the Court" does not mean a Court "as a medical person", but opinion formed on the evidence recorded before the Court. I think the word "apparently" should very probably have been prima facie.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: That seems to have been the idea. Therefore they may think of changing the word "apparently" into "prima facie".

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: That is the intention, Sir. "Apparently" means "prima facie".

Mr. Speaker: Well, it carries different meaning to some extent. But the Honourable Minister may consult the draftsman if he likes.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: My objection is to the "opinion of the Court."

Mr. Speaker: If the expression "prima facie" is used, we as lawyers understand what it means; it means that the Court proceeds on certain evidence.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: After some evidence.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: "Apparently" will mean "from the looks".

Mr. Speaker: So, I will put it to the Minister. I do not know what is the idea of the Government in this. Do they wish to leave it to the Court to decide merely by looking at the face of the person?

Shri K. Santhanam: This is intended where the Judge sees the person and obviously he appears a child; then the onus is shifted; it is not as if any conviction is made.

Mr. Speaker: The point is, how does the Judge decide? There may be some prima facie evidence in the case; suppose there is a birth certificate which may or may not be reliable or an affidavit of a person which may or may not be reliable. Then the Court prima facie is of opinion that the child is of a certain age.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Prima facie would be better.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): Some such thing has got to be there, otherwise how can a Judge ever possibly come and say, "This man is fifteen years old, this boy is fifteen years and that fourteen years"?

Mr. Speaker: "In the opinion of the Court prima facie" would have carried some judicial meaning about it, but I leave it to the Honourable Minister. It is entirely a concern of his and if he sees there is no objection, then it may be adopted; unless he wants to consult his draftsman.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: This section is absolutely superfluous. In every case the prosecution must give some evidence before the Court before it can come to the conclusion that prima facie or otherwise the man is of such and such an age; then the burden shifts. If the boy says he is three years old, no Court will say fifteen. This is a useless section and you don't require it.

Mr. Speaker: But we might not go into it now.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: "Prima facie" might be substituted.

Mr. Speaker: Does the honourable member press his amendment?

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: I have heard that for "apparently" "prima facie" has been substituted. My contention, Sir, is this. In a case, first the accused is called and the magistrate says, "This is the allegation". Then evidence comes in; when the evidence comes in, then the defence comes in. Where does the provision for opinion come in? There cannot be any opinion at all from the person of the Court. How can a Judge have any opinion? After all, the trial will be under the law.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): It is a prima facie opinion and not judgment of the Court.

Mr. Speaker: That is what is meant. If those words are dropped, then a difficulty will arise as to who is to decide "prima facie".

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: It is the Court; the procedure in such cases is that a doctor is produced.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member will see that putting the words "prima facie" will be meaningless if the words "opinion of the Court" are not there. Who is to say that prima facie such and such a thing exists? It is the opinion of the Court.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: My contention is that it would be opinion of the Court, but prima facie would imply that there is some evidence.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, I am asking the honourable member whether after the substitution by the words "prima facie", he persists in putting this amendment to the House?

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: No, Sir.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 104 of the Bill, for the word 'apparently' the word 'prima facie', be substituted."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 104 of the Bill for the word 'apparently' occurring in sub-clause (1) the words 'prima facie' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 104, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 104, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: What about the language of this clause, Sir? Is it quite all right? The clause says:

"No court shall take cognizance of any offence under this Act except by, or with the previous sanction in writing of, an Inspector."

Now, if you remove the alternative clause "or with the previous sanction in writing of", the clause reads:

"No court shall take cognizance of any offence under this Act except by an Inspector."

And now what exactly do we mean by saying "except by an Inspector"? It should be either "except on the complaint of an Inspector" or something similar to that.

Shri K. Santhanam: The honourable member is right. "except on complaint by an Inspector" it should be.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 105 of the Bill, after the word 'except the words 'on complaint', be inserted."

Mr. Speaker: So, some words are missing. I shall then put the amendment. The question is:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 105 of the Bill, the words 'on complaint' be inserted between the words 'except' and 'by'."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 105, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 105, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 106 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 107 of the Bill, for the words 'the other by such body representing the industry', the following words be substituted: 'one each by such bodies representing the industry and labour.'"

The intention of this clause is to provide assessors for the aid of the appellate authority. So far one assessor could be appointed by the industry and the other by the Government. The amendment which I have proposed provides for the appointment of two assessors in addition to the one appointed by the Government. One of those two assessors will be appointed by the industry and another by labour. I think the suggestion is fair and it does justice both to labour and industry. I commend it for the acceptance of the House.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I support it.

Mr. Speaker: I am not yet quite clear about the meaning of the amendment. Unless I am mistaken, it will mean that there will be as many representatives of industry and labour as there are sections of industry and labour, instead of there being only two assessors. The wording suggested is: "one each by such bodies representing the industry and labour". That means that there will be as many assessors as there are bodies.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Even now the clause as it stands does not specify any limitation as to the number of assessors to be appointed.

Mr. Speaker: The limitation seems to be inherent in the words: "hear the appeal with the aid of assessors, one of whom shall be appointed by the appellate authority and the other by such body"—that clearly means two assessors.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: But this amendment will make it three or more than three.

Mr. Speaker: That is what I am pointing out. It will not make it only three or more. It may make it even a dozen or more. May I know from the honourable member what is the meaning of the word "one each by such bodies"?

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: That refers to labour and industry.

Mr. Speaker: That means two.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Including the Government three.

Mr. Speaker: Yes. The honourable member's idea seems to be to give representation to labour. Is the amendment clear to the Honourable Minister?

Shri K. Santhanam: Yes, Sir. It is an inappropriate amendment, because let us see how the assessors come in. There is a case against the manager. He is accused. There is an appeal—he on one side and Government on one side. Now where does labour come in? If labour is brought in, there will be unnecessary confusion, complication and ill-will between management and labour. I do not think he is serving the cause of labour by this amendment.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I do not agree with my learned friend Mr. Santhanam's argument. Here is an industrialist prosecuted for violating the Factory Act and assessors are appointed.

Shri K. Santhanam: If labour should be represented, then Government should be left out.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Assessors are appointed. If the industrialist is to appoint an assessor, then I do not know why the labour should be deprived of the benefit of this privilege. They must surely have somebody to say whether it is proper or not. Government and industry having appointed an assessor each, one assessor should also be appointed by the labour. I therefore think this amendment is very proper and should be accepted.

Shri K. Santhanam: Then the appellate authority must go.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: No. If you want only the appellate authority and no assessor, then you should drop all the assessors. If you want assessors, let there be three—one to represent Government, one to represent labour interests and one to represent industrial interests.

Shri K. Santhanam: Why should Government have any assessor at all? It is itself the appellate authority.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Anyhow, I think labour must at least be allowed to have one assessor.

Mr. Speaker: Is Mr. Jain particular about his amendment?

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: I am rather particular, because I have seen the working of the Industrial Disputes Court in U.P. who are working with the aid of assessor. I have found that the assessor representing labour is generally helpful to the labour. I think that just as in the case of the industry it is compulsory that it should be represented by an assessor, so in the case of labour also there should be someone to speak for them.

Mr. Speaker: The case contemplated here seems to be different. It is not the settlement of an industrial dispute. It is a distinct allegation of violation of a particular provision and there is a sort of criminal trial. The point will not be about the interests of labour or otherwise; the point will be whether the accused is guilty or not. That is not a case of an industrial dispute. The principle seems to be that the person who is accused should better be declared guilty by people of his own class rather than by only an independent court—something like trial by jury, just to give him a sop that, after all there is an assessor belonging to his own class. What has the Honourable Minister got to say?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I have thought over this amendment and I find there are complications in it. There may be difficulty in nominating the representatives of the workers in the industry concerned. I hope therefore that my friend will not press it.

Mr. Speaker: Does he press his amendment?

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: I do not press, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: Then I need not put it to the House.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: As regards clause 107 will you not suggest the word 'another' before "by such body representing....."

Mr. Speaker: That is not necessary; the wording "one by the appellate authority and the other by such body", is all right.

The question is:

"That Clause 107 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 107 was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 108 of the Bill all the words occurring after the words 'certifying surgeon', be omitted."

Sir, this is necessary for the purpose of the next amendment which I propose to move.

Mr. Speaker: He may move the next amendment also.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 108 of the Bill, after the words 'factory shall be', the words 'in English and in a language understood by the majority of the workers in the factory, and shall be' be inserted."

Sir, the intention of this amendment is that all the notices that are required to be displayed under this Act and other notices that may be displayed should be in English and also in a language which is understood by the majority of the workers.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Sir, the amendment should be in the second line. The words "be" and "displayed" occur in two places. This amendment should be in the second line.

Shri K. Santhanam: Yes; in the second line.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

(i) "That in sub-clause (1) of clause 108 of the Bill all the words occurring after the words 'certifying surgeon', be omitted." and

(ii) "That in sub-clause (2) of clause 108 of the Bill after the words 'factory shall be', the words 'in English and in a language understood by the majority of the workers in the factory, and shall be', be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 108, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 108, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 109 to 114 were added to the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 115 of the Bill, after the words 'official Gazette', the words 'within three months of the passing of this Act', be inserted."

Sir, my experience is that even though this House passes Acts, the rules are not made under the Acts for a long time. I have pointed out during this debate that although on the 21st of November 1947 we passed the Trade Union Amendment Act, yet, the rules have not been made, although ten months have passed. The same is the case with the Act relating to the Dock Workers and the scheme has not been put into force so far. Therefore, I want that this Act should become applicable as soon as possible. In section 1 it is stated that it shall come into force on the 1st day of April 1949; I think that date is too late. When we have passed this Act, it should not be delayed for such a long time; the date should be 1st of January 1949. The rules should be made within three months of the passing of this Act. In order to see that the officials of the department do not sleep over the Act, there should be a provision in this Bill that the rules should be made within three months. I would also request that in clause 1 the date should be put in as the 1st of January 1949. I hope the Honourable Minister will see that this provision would help his department to see that the rules are made as soon as possible. Otherwise, this Act will not bring any benefit to the workers. Sir, I move.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 115 of the Bill, after the words 'official Gazette', the words 'within three months of the passing of this Act', be inserted."

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I wish it were possible to accept the amendment. As my honourable friend is aware, most of the rules under this Act are to be framed by the provincial Governments. We considered this question in the Select Committee as well and the least time that would be necessary for this purpose will be six months. After considering all these points, we fixed the date 1st April 1949 for the Act to come into force, and that is the least period that is necessary for all the formalities that are required under this Act. I do not think I can accept the amendment.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Moreover, Sir, the rules can be framed from time to time. It is not obligatory that all the rules should be framed in the first instance. This amendment would make it absurd to require that all the rules should be framed all at once.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In view of the assurance given by the Honourable Minister, I wish to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: In view of the explanation, not assurance. Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 115 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 115 was added to the Bill.

Clause 116 was added to the Bill.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, I do not propose to move the amendment, but I want to make some observations with regard to this clause. This clause gives complete protection for anything done in good faith or intended to be done in good faith. We have adopted a clause only a short while ago whereby we have fixed a responsibility upon the manager or occupier, constructively and rigidly.

But, here a very broad proposition has been laid down, that no person shall be prosecuted and no suit or other legal proceedings shall be launched against him for anything done in good faith. My feeling is that this Bill does not show the amount of clarity that is necessary for a legislation of this kind. What exactly the clause will mean is not clear. (An Honourable Member: "It applies to Government servants.") It does not say, Government servants. I gave notice of an amendment to that effect, but I found that it was not acceptable. I think this clause lays down a very broad proposition. I am doubtful if almost any man will not escape prosecution and conviction if he can show good faith, no matter whatever offence he may have committed under this Act. I shall wait for the explanation of the Honourable Minister as to what exactly this clause means and how it will apply.

Mr. Speaker: It is the usual indemnity clause.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: That applies to public servants. Here, the wording is, "any person".

Mr. Speaker: The point seems to be, you are going to have assessors here: do you not give protection to the assessors?

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: It should apply to a limited class of persons and not to every person. This means that an occupier or a manager of a factory or the owner of some premises, only if he shows that he did a thing in good faith, will not be prosecuted and no suit or other proceedings will be instituted against him.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: If the words 'public servant' are inserted it will be all right. If the assessor is a public servant.....

Mr. Speaker: But he might not be. It appears to give indemnity to people who have to carry out the provisions of this Act in an official or other capacity.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: The phrase 'any person' is not confined to an official or assessor or to a person performing duty in a public capacity. It will include anybody and everybody and I think the proposition as laid down in this clause is far too wide.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The intention, as the Chair has explained, is to include assessors and others who may be charged with the carrying out of the Act.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Your intention does not matter; it is the language that counts. The phrase 'any person' would include any owner or occupier or any one else, who has committed an offence, provided he has done it in good faith.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: This is one of the general exceptions that is found in the Indian Penal Code and many other Acts and applies to a public servant or any other person who is made immune from prosecution if he acts in a certain manner. I claim that any person who acts in good faith without mens rea should be free from penal consequences. There is not much difference in the Indian law as well as the law on which Indian law is based between a public servant and an ordinary man. It is not as if a public servant should be protected and another person should not be protected. As it is I do not see any objection in it.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Please see clause 101. Does it or does it not take out the element of mens rea?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Mens rea will not apply. This clause does not apply to a crime because no crime can be committed in good faith that would be a contradiction of terms. This applies to acts done under this law. It may be that the occupier or manager would have to do certain things under this Act or some officers employed by Government would have to do certain acts,—to go into some houses and take evidence or seize some articles, etc. If he acts in good faith, he should surely be protected. It does not at all support the crime. But there is a lurking suspicion indicated about clause 101 that if a man does something in good faith it will not amount to a crime at all. That may be argued—I do not know what view a Court of law will take. I should like that this clause should be retained in order to protect a man having done anything in good faith, whether official or not. This is an usual provision which is found in many Acts. It is necessary protection for people acting in good faith so that they may not be sued or prosecuted.

Mr. Speaker: Obviously this is the usual protection given and I think it is found in a large number of Acts.

The question is:

"That clause 117 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 117 was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I move:

"That after clause 117 of the Bill, the following new clause 118 be inserted and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly:

- 118. Restriction on disclosure of information.—(1) No Inspector shall, while in service or after leaving the service, disclose otherwise than in connection with the execution, or for the purposes of this Act any information relating to any manufacturing or commercial business or any working process which may come to his knowledge in the course of his official duties.
- (2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall apply to any disclosure of information made with the previous consent in writing of the owner of such business or process or for the purposes of any legal proceeding (including arbitration) pursuant to this Act or of any criminal proceeding which may be taken, whether pursuant to this Act or otherwise, or for the purposes of any report of such proceedings as aforesaid.
- (3) If any Inspector contravenes the provisions of sub-section (1) he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both."

This amendment has become necessary as we have provided for licenses to be taken for the construction or extension of factories and the factory owners will have to submit plans and specifications of their factories. Therefore many things will come to the knowledge of the Inspectors; and under the Official Secrets Acts so long as the Inspector holds the post he is required not to disclose this information. But he may resign and disclose these secrets. Therefore this provision is necessary so that he may not disclose the secrets gained while he is in Government service.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That after clause 117 of the Bill, the following new clause 118 be inserted and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly:

- 118. Restriction on disclosure of information.—(1) No Inspector shall, while in service or after leaving the service, disclose otherwise than in connection with the execution, or for the purposes of this Act any information relating to any manufacturing or commercial business or any working process which may come to his knowledge in the course of his official duties.
- (2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall apply to any disclosure of information made with the previous consent in writing of the owner of such business or process or for the purposes of any legal proceeding (including arbitration) pursuant to this Act or of any criminal proceeding which may be taken, whether pursuant to this Act or otherwise, or for the purposes of any report of such proceedings as aforesaid.
- (3) If any Inspector contravenes the provisions of sub-section (1) he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both."

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I am afraid this will present some difficulties in application. Sub-clause (1) says that an Inspector in service or out of it will not disclose information, etc. I wonder how after retirement from service he will be bound by any law or rule in force on this subject. Sub-clause (3) says that any Inspector contravening the provisions of sub-section (1) will be punishable. But after retirement he is no longer an Inspector; and if he discloses a secret then I do not see how he can be penalised. It is the 'Inspector' who is liable to be punished according to sub-clause (3); but after retirement he is no longer an 'Inspector'. So the clause will be difficult to enforce.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I have nothing to say.

Shri H. V. Kamath: My point was that an Inspector after resigning or retiring from service is no longer an Inspector. Under sub-clause (3) the Inspector is only to be prosecuted and not the ex-Inspector.

Mr. Speaker: The section read as a whole will make the position clear. In sub-clause (3) the word "Inspector" also means an Inspector even if he is no longer in service.

The question is:

"That after clause 117 of the Bill, the following new clause 118 be inserted and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly:

- 118. Restriction on disclosure of information.—(1) No Inspector shall, while in service or after leaving the service, disclose otherwise than in connection with the execution, or for the purposes of this Act any information relating to any manufacturing or commercial business or any working process which may come to his knowledge in the course of his official duties.
- (2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall apply to any disclosure of information made with the previous consent in writing of the owner of such business or process or for the purposes of any legal proceeding (including arbitration) pursuant to this Act or of any criminal proceeding which may be taken, whether pursuant to this Act or otherwise, or for the purposes of any report of such proceedings as aforesaid.
- (3) If any Inspector contravenes the provisions of sub-section (1) he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both."

The motion was adopted.

New Clause 118 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 118 (renumbered as Clause 119) stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 118 (renumbered as Clause 119) was added to the Bill.

Clause 119 (renumbered as Clause 120) was added to the Bill.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I move:

"That in item 6 of the Schedule to the Bill, for the word 'Arsenical', the word 'Arsenic' be substituted."

My amendment is the smallest and probably the simplest that the world has ever seen or known, and I hope.....

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Very poisonous, I think!

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, the Oxford Dictionary, whose authority my honourable friend quoted the other day, will not let me down this time.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in item 6 of the Schedule to the Bill, for the word 'Arsenical', the word 'Arsenic' be substituted."

[Mr. Speaker]

Is it very necessary? The amendment restricts the scope of poison. Why not extend it to other materials outside arsenic?

Shri H. V. Kamath: I think the scientific term is 'arsenic' and not 'arsenical'.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: There are three adjectives given in the dictionary: 'arsenic', 'arsenical', and 'arsenics'. If my friend has a particular liking for 'arsenic', I have no objection.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in item 6 of the Schedule to the Bill, for the word 'Arsenical', the word 'Arsenic' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Schedule, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The Schedule, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 1 of the Bill, for the words 'the Factories Act', the words 'the Factory Labour Act' be substituted."

Because in the Preamble it is said "Whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law regulating labour in factories" I thought it would be more appropriate to describe this Act as the Factory Labour Act, because we are going to regulate labour in factories. Sir, I move.

Mr. Speaker: Before I put it, I may inform the honourable member that it is open to him to move his amendment, but the clauses adopted by the House do provide for all sorts of amenities to labour and the special Factories Act will cover all that: for example, provision regarding factories in respect of conditions of labour, amenities and all these are covered.

Shri H. V. Kamath: My object is to bring this in line with the Preamble.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: This Bill also repeals the Factories Act, as will appear from the table attached to the Bill. The Factories Act of 1934 is also repealed. So the contents of the Factories Act as well as matters affecting labour are all incorporated here. Therefore the name "Factories Act" will be a more comprehensive and more appropriate name. I also thought of an amendment but having seen this I changed my opinion.

Mr. Speaker: So here is an authority. Does the honourable member wish to press his amendment?

Shri H. V. Kamath: I do not want to press it.

Mr. Speaker: So I do not put it to the House.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: The Honourable Minister has said that it will take six months before the provisions of this Bill come into force. I think it is possible for the various provincial Governments to put this Act into effect by 1st January 1949. Once this Act is passed the workers will expect the benefits of it and delay in giving its benefits to them will make them angry. This will be specially so in sugar factories as their season closes in March. So I desire that the fruits of our labour should be available to labour from the 1st January 1949. The Honourable Minister himself may amend clause 1 to change 1st April into 1st January 1949. I think that is very essential because this is a very fundamental Act and it is giving important concessions which will help in maintaining industrial peace.

Mr. Speaker: His request is that if the Honourable the Minister is agreeable the date 1st day of April 1949 should be changed into the 1st day of January 1949—just to expedite it by three months.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Is it not that 1st April is better than 1st January?

Mr. Speaker: Is the honourable member agreeable? As Mr. Himatsingka has pointed out, it is better to start it from 1st April!

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: If this Act is meant as a huge joke, then this date 1st April is suitable!

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That Clause 1 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Title and the Preamble stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

I just want to take this opportunity to express my thanks to the honourable members of this House who have whole heartedly co-operated with me in expediting the passage of the various clauses of the Bill.

At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (one of the Panel of Chairmen).

I would make special mention of my friend Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena who has served both purpose of expressing his views in extenso thereby making it known to the working classes of the country that he is the one solitary champion of the working classes left in this country. On the other hand, he has been reasonable enough to see the trend of the House and to utilise his common sense in withdrawing most of his amendments.

One of the members of this House remarked that this Bill is a Charter of Rights to the working classes. Personally I do not claim that it is so. But certainly I do claim that it contains some important items of such a Charter of Rights. The Factories Bill and State Insurance Bill both taken together constitute a major portion of the charter of rights of the working classes and if I get the co-operation of this House in the way I have been getting I hope that it will not be long when we will be laying down a complete charter of rights of the working classes.

Sir, I do not want to take the time of the House at this stage. I wish to express once more my thankfulness to the honourable members of the House for extending their full co-operation in the passage of this Bill.

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I desire to congratulate the Honourable Minister in having succeeded in eluding the members of the House in their attempt to effect some improvements. Prof. Saksena was really indefatigable: when others had absolutely abandoned the attempt he persisted but the Honourable Minister has not accepted a single amendment of his.

[Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad]

When dealing with a Bill like this and other Bills which have come before the House one cannot forget the fact that the drafting of Bills for a long time has been of the most unsatisfactory character, and is such that it is difficult to improve the Bills on the floor of the House. Again one cannot fail to notice that some amendments proposed in the House were extremely good but they could not for certain reasons be accepted on the floor of the House. I have a feeling that Honourable Ministers feel that a kind of prestige is somehow involved in this. I have found that when amendments are suggested to the Honourable Minister privately they are extremely willing to accept them but when they are moved on the floor of the House they are unwilling to accept them. That tendency has become very clear. In this case I had suggested a long list of amendments in the Select Committee stage and the Honourable Minister was kind enough to accept them but I should point out that the errors which I attempted to point out were of a routine character, such as spelling mistakes, use of capital and small letters, punctuation mistakes and so on. When I pointed out some of these errors outside the House they were accepted but similar errors which then escaped my eyes also escaped the eyes of the draftsman. They have again been incorporated in some of the amendments and they have been left to the draftsmen. This shows a lamentable state of affairs. Are these mistakes which were pointed out on the floor of the House and which are of a drafting nature so much above the capacity of the draftsmen that they could not correct them? It shows that the draftsmen are not sufficiently industrious.

Then again the question of proof reading is very important. One cannot fail to see that Bills are badly printed. It is no use blaming the printers for this. There is after all such a thing as proof-reading. Printers always make peculiar mistakes and therefore careful proof-reading is essential. Letters are inverted, words drop out, lines are not in proper alignment. These things are very common. I submit that the resources of Government should be ample enough to engage some one to do the job properly. Some one should be held responsible for their job.

Then again one important aspect of this Bill is that with regard to the rule-making power the draftsman became tired of the whole business. There are here a large number of places where rule making power is given, and it is the universal practice to collect them together in one section and give a list. Yet in the case of this Bill possibly the draftsman was overworked and he simply adds a few lines that the Provincial Government should have the power to make rules, as in clause 112. It consists of only four lines and the usual sub-clause giving a detailed list of the various rule making powers to make it convenient for reference has been entirely absent in this Bill. It shows some amount of slovenliness or habitual carelessness and the members are tired of pointing them out. Instead of improving, the thing goes on in the usual merry fashion and members are often blamed for pointing out these small errors. If the errors are pointed out it should not be resented. They are meant to be warnings for improvement but the improvement is never maintained or attained. In these circumstances the members have a genuine grievance and they are entitled to a better drafting service from

Mr. R. K. Sidhya (C. P. and Berar: General): Are you discussing the drafting of the Bill, which is now complete?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am discussing the Bill and I believe the honourable member will recognise that the drafting of a Bill is part of the Bill. If one writes a letter to his friend or his wife one can indulge in bad draftsmanship.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Question: Love and affection will excuse such faults. But in drawing up a statute the House is entitled to the best kind of draftsmanship: There should be nothing like second rate draftsmanship. The draftsmanship should be absolutely faultless and even elegant and the House is entitled to this service. After all the members of the Select Committee cannot go through the matter of drafting and punctuations. (Shri H. V. Kamath: What are you for?). Their attention is naturally and legitimately directed towards more important matters. It is in these circumstances that members of the Select Committee are often blamed for not looking into these things. It is not their business to do so. They have a right to expect faultless draftsmanship and comments have been frequently made in this respect, but with what effect the House known. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: No improvement.) No improvement as a distinguished honourable member points out. How long can we go on doing the business of the draftsman in this House?

Mr. Chairman: May I inform the honourable member that he has been very eloquent on this point and already taken too much time? I would suggest to him to deal with the other points.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I shall finish at once. One honourable member of this House, Babu Ram Narayan Singh, on this subject once pointed out that the draftsmen will take the pay and the members will have to do the drafting. That is more or less the position. It is very unjust. I think that this state of affairs should be remedied. Honourable members of this House deserve a better service from our draftsmen.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I congratulate the Honourable the Labour Minister and this House for consolidating all the factory laws into one Act. I would not sing the swan-song of those on whose behalf I very often speak in this House that we are squealing. We are not squealing! We welcome this consolidated Act as it will help the employers and the lawyers' profession. They will not have to look in future into several factory laws; they will look into one consolidated Act.

Those who spoke in the House on behalf of labour spoke all the time with a sense of mistrust and malice against the employers class. I am pained that the House is not getting settled down and trying to examine Bills in their proper perspective. At times I felt that if I were in the place of the Honourable Minister I would have said et tu Brute to the various remarks that fell from the various socialist speakers of the House. None of them appreciated the extent to which the Honourable Minister has gone in consolidating the Bill and in trying to give labour all facilities. I do not separate the Honourable Minister from me, from the employer, from the official class of the factories and from the labour class. We are all one because he and I are committed to that splendid Resolution at the Industrial Conference. It is no use thinking of giving labour more facilities like spittoons which the Select Committee have provided without thinking of "production". And India cannot survive unless the production in India is raised and unless there is co-operation between labour and industrialists. I tried to listen to my honourable friend the Labour Minister and found he just touched the word 'production'. But he did not tell us that since that Conference he has been in closer touch with the various labour leaders that are present in the House or outside and that he has got their assurance that they would co-operate with the Government and the industrialists for larger production so that the battle of inflation may be fought properly in this country. I hope that when my labour friends rise they will say how they are going to stop inflation in this country—not by demanding more rest houses and spittoons or less working hours but by co-operating with Government and industries so that we will be able to tide over the great tragedy that is coming over us and which will soon engulf us. I ask the plain question of my labour friends, why this mistrust? At every stage the employer is thought as not being prepared to give the little comforts in life to the worker. Why not examine it from the practical point of view? He is a human being. We are all human beings and we are trying to work out the problems according to our way of life. All of us do not live in Bombay and Calcutta as does my honourable lady friend from Calcutta. When I said 'why punish the labourer because he could not spit in the spittoon provided in some corner of the factory?"—I raised the issue that we come from different groups of society and every Province has got its own standard of living—my lady friend got annoyed. She thinks that Bombay and Calcutta constitute the whole of India and everybody would carry out the command. I would ask my lady friend from Calcutta whether she would like that every worker should be fined five rupees and would also lose two days salary for being absent from work to attend the court of enquiry. I do not think my lady friend has realised that no provision is made in the Bill for summary trial in the factory itself—whether the punishment to be awarded is one which Professor Shibban Lal Saksena wanted or it will be just a warning.

I have my difference with my honourable friend the Minister for Labour. In every piece of legislation that he has introduced in this House, whether through his own examination or through the inspiration of the I.L.O. to which place we send a large number of representatives who return with high fangled ideas—and the Government goes on legislating more ameliorative measures in respect of labour conditions which even the European countries do not observe—he is placing a heavier financial burden on the Provinces. And my honourable friend Professor Shibban Lal Saksena always says 'Do it quickly'. If everything is to be done quickly, my honourable friend the Minister for Labour will employ more Secretaries and more Deputy Secretaries and Officers to expedite action on various legislations. Then we will have to face inflation and face a drastic economic cut everywhere in respect of which matter one understands that the Cabinet is getting alive to the fact that the country is facing a grave crisis and there should be no new recruitment or employment. If that be so, let us be realists. I want that labour should be satisfied. But I do not want that labour should live same standard of life as they live in Switzerland; they should fit into our national economy, into our national social condition of life, and not—as my honourable lady friend from Bengal desires—that they should all live in Calcutta.

Then I want to know from the Honourable the Labour Minister how he is going to train the Factory Inspectors. He has got the Chief Inspector and half a dozen more advisers under him. And every Province has a Factory Inspector. How is he going to co-ordinate the activities of the various Factory Inspectors so that they understand the implications of these labour legislations and try to work it for the betterment of the conditions of labour and for better production in India. My impression of the Factory Inspectors is that they are abettors of strikes, they do not understand the Acts and they behave as bureaucrats. Whether they side with capital or labour I am not concerned. But I think that we must create conditions whereby the Factory Inspectors understand Factory laws and the various pieces of labour legislation and implement them in the spirit the ultimate goal of which was defined in the Tripartite Industrial Conference, namely, that there should be more production. For the last four months no labour leader has said anywhere in India that it is his desire and it is his bounden duty to see that there should be greater production in India.

Sir, I would like to close my observations with one word about the draftsman and his mistakes about which my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad referred so much. (An honourable member: He is a specialist). Of course, he is a specialist in draftsmanship. But one thing struck me. If there is something wrong with the draftsmen of the Government of India, that shows that the class of lawyers, to which my friend belongs, has deteriorated. Because, the draftsman comes from the lawyer class. If the lawyer draftsmen of the Government of India have failed to satisfy my friend with regard to commas, semi-colons or articles, I can only say that the lawyers have deteriorated. (Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It is the unsuccessful lawyers that seek Government jobs.). I think we should not mind the words, commas and fullstops. We should look into the substance. Speaking on substance, I welcome the new consolidated factories measure and I do hope my friend will give me the assurance that the Factory Inspectors will be human enough to work this Act and the labour leaders will also give me their assurance that they stand for greater production in India and not for strikes and slow downs.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Sir, I welcome the measure and congratulate my honourable friend Babu Jagjivan Ram, the Labour Minister, on the successful and polite way in which he has piloted the Bill. Sir, he is my old friend and colleague. I am proud of the achievements with which his honest endeavour is daily crowned. (Hear, hear). But, Sir, in questions of labour matters, I am afraid it appears to me that there is too much law and too little good. I have long been in this Central Assembly. I have seen that so far as legislation is concerned, we are not behind any country in the world, (Hear, hear),—rather, we are much ahead of them. But so far as the actual good to the labour is concerned, Sir, we will find that we are far, far behind any country in the world.

Whenever—and I am talking of the old days also—whenever I have seen any question being discussed (The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Old days only, I think?) No, no. I think that is continuing.

Whenever the labour question was being discussed, tears were shed. Had they been actual tears, I think the Assembly hall would have been flooded by now! (An Honourable Member: They were all crocodile tears?) There is no doubt about it.

But, Sir, I sound a note of warning with the remarks I have made, and I request my honourable friend Babu Jagjivan Ram that having passed this measure he should transfer his capital from Delhi to the labour centres—although moving centres—sometimes at Jharia, sometimes at Jamshedpur and so on and so forth. He should stay there for some time and should see the condition of labour there. I know he knows it, I know he has seen it, but now having passed this factories law, he should see that things are actually done for the good of the labour.

With this remark, I should remind the House and the Honourable the Labour Minister that we have been talking of industrial labour whose number I think is something like 35 lakhs or so, but what about the millions and millions of agricultural labour for whom neither any crocodile tears are shed in this House nor any legislation taken up by the Government or by the Government representatives, the Labour Ministry? I think we are doing a wrong to the agricultural labour as well as to the country as a whole.

I am not going to take much of the time of the House on this matter, but so far as drafting is concerned I entirely agree with my friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad. I said once before also and repeat: Well, I do not understand it; so many mistakes are pointed out in this House and the draftsmen are not being dismissed? Well, I wonder why so much carelessness is done in the offices of the Government of India and no steps are being taken. I think it is disgraceful. I think the drafting should be so beautifully and correctly done that even a comma should not be given anywhere by mistake. They are so highly paid officers and so highly paid staff. If they will commit mistakes, then what are they paid for?

With these words, I again welcome the measure and congratulate my friend Babu Jagjivan Ram.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, although I have been trying to move amendments after amendments knowing full well that the Honourable Minister is unwilling to accept them, still I thought it my duty to do so, so that when he comes with a new Bill in future it should cover the suggestions I have made.

I want to tell him that when we are independent we do expect that we shall have a labour legislation which will be in line with the most progressive countries in the world. Labour movement in this country is divided. There is the A.I.T.U.C., there is I.N.T.U.C. there is the Socialist Hind Mazdoor Panchayat and there are others. I talked to Mr. G. L. Nanda of the I.N.T.U.C.; he said he did not want a capitalist India but wanted in India something like the Labour Government in Britain. I talked with Mr. N. M. Joshi also and he said that he stood for demonstratic socialism as exists today in Britain. And Shri Jai Prakash Narayan goes on saying the same thing throughout the country. So the leaders of all the three Trade Union Congresses cherish the British Trade Union ideal. But Sir, when yesterday or day before yesterday I was moving amendments to a clause seeking to substitute registered and recognised trade unions for Works Committees, the Honourable Minister vehemently opposed it; in fact, he brought forward strange arguments which hardly did him credit. In fact, I personally think the whole system of Works Committees is a very obnoxious system. It should not have been introduced at all. I may read out the report of the British T.U.C. and show what they say about these Works Committees and Joint Boards. It is contained in a paragraph in yesterday's Statesman. This is what they say:

"Trade Union chiefs have rejected the suggestion that Britain's nationalised industries should be controlled by joint boards representing equally trade unions and management.

The main reason—fear that their independence would be in danger—is explained in the annual report of the Trade Unions Congress General Council issued today. The report will come before the 800 delegates, representing nearly 8 million who will attend this year's Congress opening at the seaside resort of Margate on September 6.

The joint boards proposal came up in debate at last year's Congress and since then has been investigated by the Economic Committee of the General Council.

The Committee report expresses the view that joint administrative boards would destroy the independence the unions at present have from the executive authority of the nationalised industries. The unions would be compromised in their relations with the public boards and also their own members.

"Trade unionists elected or appointed to serve on a public board, but still owing ultimate responsibility to the Union, would be in an embarrassing position, unsatisfactory to themselves, to the board, and to the work people concerned," the Committee states."

Prof. N. G. Ranga: What is their conclusion? Therefore

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Therefore they do not want joint boards which is their name for our Works Committees.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: The Board should be managed by the Government itself?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: They say that in the nationalised industries there should be regularly formed trade unions and these unions should have full power of bargaining with the nationalised management. The nationalised industry will have their management and the unions will have their own executives which will bargain with the management for proper conditions of work and service.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: And not the workers?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Neither the unions, nor the workers. It will only be the managers.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Unions represent the workers, and workers alone.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: And Works Committees—are they also of Managers?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Works Committees are formed of management and workers in equal proportion. The British Trade Union Congress has rejected proposal to form such Committees or Joint Boards. So after one year's study and consideration, 80 lakhs of workers of England have rejected this proposal even in nationalised industries. And now that all the great labour parties here want that we should have something of the kind of the Socialist Government in England, I think we should take a warning from the considered opinion of the Trade Union Congress in England. My own experience of the Works Committees is very sad. At present, as they have been working for the last few months, they have led to more disputes than settlements. There have been more stoppages of work on their account in the last six months. I have found that formerly disputes were settled much more quickly. What happens now is that first a dispute is referred to these Works Committees, and from there it goes to the Regional Conciliation Board and thence to the Industrial Court and so in going from one Committee to another it takes more time to settle a dispute than it did before. No settlement is possible in the Works Committees as there is always a tug-of-war between labour and management and the dispute is not resolved for a long time. I therefore suggested yesterday an amendment to substitute for the Works Committees "Recognised Trade Unions". I thought that would definitely improve the situation, but it was not accepted. I hope however that the Honourable Minister will consider this point and bring in necessary legislation later.

After all my criticism I must say that this Bill is a historic Bill and India today can boast that she has placed on the Statute Book one of the most important measures that have been adopted for labour welfare—most important measures like the limitation of the hours of work, for instance to 48. We have now come in line with the International Convention of 1919 and as I said the other day we must try to come in line with the Convention of 1935. The Honourable Minister said that he will try to do it as early as possible and it would indeed be a great achievement if he could go forward and fall in line with the Convention of 1935.

Then the other things that he has provided in this Bill are also things which were not so far on our Statute Book and we shall indeed be indebted to him for having done so.

One important thing about which there was controversy was about the employment of women at night. I am sure the House is indebted to the honourable member Mr. Santhanam for the support he gave to the cause of women in this respect. Even the British Act only provides for work by women between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. I referred to the British Act to see if we are not going beyond what even an advanced country like England has done. The Honourable Minister cannot say that our women are more advanced than the women in Britain. Therefore I think he has made a mistake here and I hope he will soon realise it by experience and see his way to retrieve the error.

Sir, I wish that this Act extended to more fields than has been provided for. I mentioned particularly the dock workers and wanted them to be included under this Act. But the Honourable Minister said there were regulations for them. I have seen the regulations. They do not confer on the dock workers the same benefits as this Bill contains. Again, had this Bill included the building industry also, it would have meant a great deal for our workers, for after all, we have to put up numerous houses—probably several millions—and it would have been a blessing to our workers in that industry if something of the sort of this Bill were extended to them also. I hope that even though the Honourable Minister has not included those industries under this Bill, this Act will soon be extended to them also.

Then, there are certain clauses and certain portions of this Act which can be improved. For instance, about accidents. As I have pointed out, this Bill is not very comprehensive in that respect. Under the English Act, if there is an accident, there is an elaborate enquiry. The Secretary of State orders special enquiry into certain accidents and special measures are taken. Here accidents take place and nobody cares for them on many occasions. I hope next time the Minister comes to the House the law in regard to accidents will be improved.

Then, again, in regard to the prohibiting of dangerous substances used in factories there are certain omissions here. It is law in England that in the manufacture of matches white phosphorus should not be used. No such provision is made here. I think therefore that we should take advantage of the experience and wisdom of other countries and utilise it in our legislations. I do not think that we should ignore other peoples' experiences and I hope that the next Bill when it comes will incorporate all the advances made by other industrial countries and see that our Factory Act is in advance even of the most advanced countries in the world.

In the end, Sir, I thank the Honourable Minister for having patiently borne up with my amendments. I think I have put a severe strain upon him. I thank him for the courtesy with which he has replied to my amendments.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: Sir, we have reached a stage, when after the welter of amendments and clauses, we can pause and ponder over our achievements and shortcomings. The Bill, as it is now going to be passed, is practically the same as it was when it emerged from the Select Committee. There has hardly been any changes worth the name. There is no doubt that the present Bill is a great improvement upon the existing factory law. Many things which were left vague and to the rule making power find a concrete shape in this Bill. I believe, therefore, that this Bill is quite a bit of achievement. But then the real benefit to the labour will not flow from what we have written on paper, but how it is actually translated into action. An honourable speaker before me has already referred to that aspect of the matter.

During the discussion of this Bill complaints were made that the Provincial Governments have been invested with too many powers for providing exemptions from the various provisions of the Bill. Those exemptions practically remain intact, as they were when the Bill was introduced. I would humbly suggest it to the Honourable Minister that in working this Bill he should give directions, of which he possesses power to do under this Bill, to the Provincial Governments that these exemptions should be made only in exceptional cases. They should not be the rule. In fact, the different provinces in India are at different stages of industrial development and on the part of the backward provinces there is apt to be a tendency not to enforce the Bill with all its rigour, but since we have legislated for the whole of the country and made a uniform law, it becomes necessary that in its actual application it must apply equally well to all the different provinces of the country. The Bill provides for a machinery for supervision and compliance with the provisions of the Bill.

It provides for the appointment of Chief Inspectors and Inspectors. The Honourable Minister said that there were 82 Inspectors for 13,000 factories in this country. Numerically, the number of Inspectors may not be too small; but judging from the extent of the country, the wide area over which the factories are spread over, and the distances between the different factories, I think, Sir, there are good reasons for strengthening the Inspectorate. My own experience is that in many places the work of the Inspector is left to the Collector. The Collector is hardly the person fitted to do that kind of job. He has so many other problems. He has neither the aptitude nor the knowledge nor the will to do this kind of work. I hope that the Honourable Minister will provide a net work, rather a steel frame, of Inspectors who should see to the efficient working of this Act.

I know, Sir, that the Honourable Minister is always very anxious for the welfare of labour and that he will leave no stone unturned to make this Act work as efficiently as possible. It is in this hope that I congratulate the Honourable the Minister for steering this Bill in the House through its various stages in such good humour and amiable spirit. I hope the same spirit will prevail in its execution and the Honourable Minister will see that the Act benefits even more by its implementation than from the provisions that it contains.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan (Madras: General): Mr. Chairman, Sir, the Bill that is before the House now for discussion is nothing but a co-ordination of all the legislation that were passed in the previous years. Formerly, the Central Government was acting in an advisory capacity; but through this Bill, the Central Government is giving directions to the provinces as well as to the States as regards labour legislation. I can say and if necessary I can quote examples to show that the provinces and some of the States have gone even ahead of the Centre as regards labour legislation. If I may be permitted to quote one example, I can say that in one Legislative Council in South India, a Bill was brought in the Council giving the right to the worker to get a maximum of 50 per cent. of the profits. I think that is a piece of legislation which went ahead of the Centre. I do not find any reason to say that there is anything new in this Bill, or that it is an invention. I do not want to say that it is a charter of rights; I do not even want to call it now—revolutionary as the Honourable Minister put it in the beginning, because, we find that this Bill is only a copy of the summary of the previous Labour legislations.

Sir, when we examine the Bill we find a certain amount of confusion and lack of perspective about labour problems on the part of those who are responsible for this Bill. I can cite examples of this. Labour welfare, factory inspection, fixing of hours of work, etc. are all brought about in one Bill. Take for example the case of spitting. In the Bill, provision is made to punish a labourer by fine up to a maximum of Rs. 5 if he spits in an unauthorised place. Now, Sir, labour legislation is intended to regulate the conduct of both the employer and the employee. If a labourer spits in an unauthorised place, who is to report the matter? It is the employer who has to report and all the formalities of an investigation will have to be done. The Factory Inspector will have to come and try both the employer and the employee. Suppose a machine tool or a piece of chemical touches the mouth of the labourer, he will all of a sudden spit on the spot; he will not go in search of the spittoon. Are we to impose a fine on that labourer and make an enquiry? This clause makes provision for an enquiry as in the case of a sitting strike or a strike without notice. We must also note that spitting comes under public health and sanitation. It is the duty of the Government and the management to teach the labourers to have clean habits. I think the provision of such a clause in the Bill is futile and we are thereby showing to the public ignorance about labour problems.

Then, Sir, I do not think this Bill is going to bring about a millenium to the working classes of India. The labourers will not feel that there is anything better as soon as this Bill is introduced. There is one principal demand from the labourers: what the labourers want today is better wages and decrease in the number of working hours. Then, there is the fundamental demand which will affect the present social structure. I think the Indian National Trade Union Congress is evolving a formula to solve that problem. That fundamental demand, I can say boldly is profit-sharing by the labourer. If the Government could introduce that system, I think that is the only solution by which we can develop the industries of this country. If the industrialists of this country accept that principle, I think we can avoid even nationalisation of industry. I can assure the House that labour will not sit idle as long as this demand is not conceded. All the other legislation brought about by this House, whether it is bonus or an insurance scheme, or any other scheme, is not going to give satisfaction to the working classes of this country. It is only by giving a proper share in the profits that we can satisfy the labourers and I hope the Government will see that this is the only solution.

[Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan]

Then, Sir, the other day I referred to the insertion of a clause which gives power to a District Magistrate to act as Factory Inspector. I gave my reasons for objecting to that clause and I should like to know from the Labour Minister the reasons for his retaining such a clause in this Bill.

The honourable member Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena said it is a historic Bill. But I wish to refute the argument. I say it is historic in the sense that it has allowed the management to employ women in factories at night which, if we analyse it in the proper perspective, we can see that it will lead to complete disruption of happy family life of many women.

Sir, I have nothing more to say.

Several Honourable Members: The question may now be put.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the question may now be put."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I am conscious that this is the third reading of the Bill and I am not expected to give replies to all the points which have been raised in regard to specific clauses which we have already considered and passed. These points were made then and I replied to them duly.

One or two points have been raised here to which I have to give a reply. I have never claimed that this Bill is going to bring about a millenium for the working classes; I have not claimed that it is a charter of rights for them. I think that it is irrelevant, inopportune and without any relation to the context of the Bill to raise the question of wages and profits. That is a separate question altogether; as to what is to be done in that respect, I may say that Government are fully alive to their responsibilities, and do not stand in need at this late stage of being reminded of their duties in the matter of reasonable wages for the workers or a fair share in the profits. I hope many of the honourable members of this House are aware that we have already proceeded to some extent in the matter of wages and profit-sharing, and any suggestion is too belated at this stage. My honourable friend Prof. Saksena was very sore about the formation of Works Committees. I hold very strong views on this question; I have made it clear on more than one occasion that I stand for the healthy growth of trade unionism in this country, but not the type of trade unions that we come across in this country every day here and there. He has drawn the analogy of trade unions in the United Kingdom. I would like to put a direct question to him. How many of the office-bearers of the trade unions in the United Kingdom are non-working-class people? Is there any non-worker who happens to be President or Secretary or office-bearer or member of the executive committee of a trade union in the United Kingdom? How many such trade unions can you claim in this country where the affairs and the management of the trade unions are in the hands of people who happen to be workers or who have been workers at any stage of their life? (Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: A very large number.) I challenge that statement. All my efforts are directed towards that end; I want that the management of the affairs of the trade unions in this country should pass into the hands of those who are actual workers or who have been actual workers at any stage of their life. And that is the reason why I want to encourage the Works Committees, so that the workers may learn to stand on their own legs. And I repeat what I said the other day that I do not want these workers to be spoon-fed by outside leaders for all time to come, I do not want the workers to be exploited by trade union leaders for all time to come. It is surprising that opposition to this comes from those who claim to be interested in the welfare of the workers; they say that Works Committees should not be encouraged because they will make the unions useless. It means that they have created a vested interest which they want to retain at all costs and which I am determined to break.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: The English workers are not spoon-fed but they have also opposed them.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I have drawn a distinction between trade unions here and those in the United Kingdom. There the working class movement is for the working class and by the working class; in India the movement is no doubt for the working class but it is not run by the working class. (Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Question.) I want to make the working class movement in India for the working class and by the working class. I know it will be unpalatable to those who have created a vested interest for themselves and based that vested interest on the meekness of the unsophisticated labourers of this country. But I will not mind that opposition. I stand for the workers and for their solidarity and unity; and in any step or action of mine which is going to make them stand on their own legs and promote their unity and solidarity I will not care for any opposition. This is the one way which is going to make the workers bold,—these Works Committees where not people like Jagjivan Ram or Shibban Lal Saksena go to negotiate with the employer and sit with him in the chair. It produces a great psychological effect when a subordinate worker goes to his Manager, sits with him and negotiates with him on equal terms. I cannot forget that psychological effect, and we have provided for that in the Works Committees. I wish trade union leaders of this country to realise the importance of the formation of these Works Committees and the psychological effect that this very simple factor is going to create in the working classes; and the sooner they realise the better for the working classes of India though it may work to the detriment of the vested interest of the leaders who are opposed to the formation and growth of Works Committees.

Then, Sir, Babu Ramnarayan Singh has pointed out about the implementation of the provisions of this Act. I am quite alive to this aspect of the question as well. I frankly admitted that up till now the strength of the inspection service in this country has not been adequate and I quoted some figures. I admitted at the same time that in view of the extension of the scope of the Factories Act, the present strength of the inspection service in the country is not adequate, and we have been insisting upon the Provincial Governments to increase their staff. There have been difficulties. The one difficulty is to get the requisite number of the required personnel. In order to make up that deficiency, as I informed the House the other day, we have started a sort of training centre here, and so far we have held two courses. In the first course twenty-two inspectors from the Provincial Governments attended. In the second course eighteen inspectors attended. Every year we are going to have these courses in order to train these inspectors who are engaged in this work in the provinces. With the passage of this Act, when a larger number of workers will come under its purview, we will certainly require a larger number of inspectors. We have been holding regular conferences of provincial Labour Ministers as well as of Provincial Chief Inspectors of Factories so that we may have as much of uniformity in different provinces as is possible. So we are quite alive to this aspect of the thing, namely that the service should be strengthened and there should be maximum possible uniformity in the framing of the rules and in the execution of the provisions of this Act in the different parts of the country.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh has asked me to go and visit the Labour centres and see the condition of the workers. (Babu Ramnarayan Singh: And to stay there!) I think this suggestion has come rather too late. I am afraid, Sir, I passed that stage much earlier and there is no necessity for my going and seeing the condition of the working classes. Not only have I seen that condition but I have lived in that condition. That may be an experience for other members of this House. But it has not been an experience for me and therefore I say that I stand in no need of studying the conditions of the labourers in this country.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan: Then why was a Special Officer appointed to study labour conditions especially agricultural labour.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: But the lady member presumes that if a Minister knows a subject, he stands in no need of having officers or secretaries or experts or special officers. That is a queer presumption and queer things may emanate from a lady, which one cannot help. (Mr. P. K. Sridha: That is not an answer!) Much has been made of one provision in this Bill which gives authority to the Provincial Governments that they may make rules whereby women can work up till 10 p.m. in the night, and one member has been good enough to remark that the Bill is historic in that respect. I may remark, Sir, that this exemption may not be necessary in the case of those ladies and women who do not stand in need of earning something, who may not stand in need of looking to the help of even their husbands. But certainly it is necessary in the case of those women who have nothing to fall back upon, who are widows, who have orphans to support, who have no lands, no income and no asset except their labour. Are we not to provide that they can earn something to support themselves and their orphans?

Then it has been said that in a country advanced much more than ours—even in the U.K.—this provision has not been made.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: They wanted women to work till midnight! As a matter of fact women are trying in the U.K. to get this provision done away with because they think women are not getting a chance and that these restrictions are standing in the way of their work and so this provision is a very important one.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I was just going to quote one sentence from the English Act which I have in my hand in order to remove an impression that women are not allowed to work beyond 8 p.m. It reads:

"Women may be employed on a system of two-day shifts subject to the following conditions:

One of the conditions is:

"The morning term shall not begin earlier than 6 A.M. and the afternoon shift shall end not later than 11 P.M."

We have provided up to only 10 p.m. Here in the English Act it is up to 11 p.m.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Section 70 of the English Factories Act, 1937 says:

"Subject to the provisions of this Part of this Act, the hours worked, the period of employment, and the intervals for meals and rest, for every woman or young person employed in a factory shall conform to the following conditions, namely:

(a) the total hours worked, exclusive of intervals allowed for meals and rest, shall neither exceed nine in any day nor exceed forty-eight in any week.

(b) the period of employment shall not exceed eleven hours in any day and shall neither begin earlier than seven o'clock in the morning nor end later than six o'clock in the evening in the case of young persons who have not attained the age of sixteen, or in other cases eight o'clock in the evening, or, on Saturday, one o'clock in the afternoon."

So, for women 8 o'clock in the night is the limit.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: That is not the latest position.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: It is the prevailing Law today.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I do not proceed solely on the analogy of western countries. We have to look to the interests of our country, and even if the English Act does not provide Prof. N. G. Ranga: It does!

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I say it does and I have just quoted from the English Act. But even if it does not so provide, I do not proceed simply on the example of the western countries and I shall never agree that whatever is done by the Western countries, nay, whatever is done by the United States of America and the United Kingdom, is such as should be blindly imitated by us.

Therefore, in the interests of those women who have to maintain their orphans, who have to stand on their own legs, it is necessary that an opportunity is given to them so that they may earn their bread and be able to support their orphans. I therefore feel that that provision is a healthy one. After all we are giving power to the Provincial Governments. We are not giving power to children.

Shri K. Santhanam: You should have made it mandatory!

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: The Provincial Governments will utilise that power. I do not want to take more of the time of the House. As I said I am not going to reply to the minor points raised about spittoons and 5 P. M. spitting. I cannot be blamed if some members cannot think of anything else but spitting and spittoons.

Shri Prabhudayal Himmatsingka: Sir, I make a request to the Honourable Minister to consider the other suggestion of Prof. Saksena to extend the scope of the Bill to include a place as a factory where speeches are made and Bills and resolutions as produced so that on the basis of the legislation passed you can have more breathing space and fresh air for every member in this Assembly?

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 30th August, 1948.

INCOME-TAX AND (BUSINESS PROFITS TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Finance and Commerce): Sir, I beg to move:

Shrijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): Sir, on a point of order, the Honourable Minister is not speaking from his seat.

Mr. Speaker: I may inform the honourable member that before the honourable Minister changed his seat he had taken my permission.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: May I explain the circumstances. The House is aware that I came to be in charge of this measure only very recently and I wanted to have the advantage of the assistance of my honourable colleague the Law Minister, who was the chairman of the Select Committee and therefore I sought the Honourable the Speaker's permission to sit near him, so that between us two we can pilot the Bill in the House.

Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, and the Business Profits Tax Act, 1947, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Sir, I should like on this occasion to make a few remarks about the principal provisions of this measure, around which some amount of controversy has raged. I refer to the provisions of clauses 7 and 8, in particular. If I may recall the circumstances in which these provisions came to be placed before the Legislature, I would remind the House that among the provisions of the Act which led to the appointment of an Investigation Commission in regard to taxation is a duty which is laid upon that body "to investigate and report to the Central Government on all matters relating to taxation on income with particular reference to the extent to which the existing law relating to and procedure for the assessment and collection of such taxation is adequate to prevent the evasion thereof."

Soon after the appointment of the Commission, which took place about the end of 1947 the Commission addressed themselves to the task of examining the state of the law in so far as it acted as a kind of encouragement to the tax-evader. The Commission, about whose high authority I need not remind the House, drew up a long memorandum and circulated it to 60 different institutions interested in the subject, besides calling for information from others concerned. In the course of their investigation they also discussed the matters at issue with representatives of various interests and as a result of this careful examination they made a report to the Government suggesting that very early action should be taken for the purpose of carrying out their recommendations in this behalf. These recommendations were duly considered by the Government and were accepted in toto. As a matter of fact the draft of the Bill in regard to these matters is in the main a reproduction of the draft suggested by the Commission themselves. It was anticipated, as a matter of fact it has been suggested by the Commission, that the measure should be passed into law during the last session. When the measure came up, my predecessor was expected to make a motion for taking the Bill into consideration straightaway but as a result of an amendment moved, I think by my honourable friend Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, the Bill was referred to a Select Committee. We have now the report of the Select Committee before us and I am glad to find that so far as the main provisions of this measure are concerned the Select Committee have approved of it and if they have made any amendments anywhere, they have not touched the underlying principles of the provisions to which I have referred. Sir, my intention in referring to these circumstances is to emphasize the urgency as also the importance of enacting the provisions to which I have referred without any amendment in this House.

I should not like to take any more time of the House by way of referring to the other provisions of the Bill, but I find that there are certain amendments, particularly with regard to clause 4, on which I might have something to say when it comes up.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, and the Business Profits Tax Act, 1947, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): I rise to support the motion. I have, however, a small grievance in this respect, namely, the copy of the Bill which the Secretary is required to make available to every member and which was supplied to me really consists of two copies of the report alone pasted together and the Bill which is the essential thing was entirely absent. I discovered it on the night of Thursday last and I could not procure a copy because Friday was a holiday. I got the Bill on Saturday but I was engaged in the House throughout that day and I have sent notice of some amendments today, that is the earliest day for me. They will, I believe be circulated in that form. I hope that taking these circumstances into consideration on the ground of hardship these amendments may be considered, unless they are obviously unnecessary.

With regard to this Bill, I support the principle outright. There has been a large number of evasions by the tax-payer and also evasions in which the Income-tax officers do not go scot free. Things have come to light due to the labours of the Investigation Commission which is now sitting, and in view of their recommendations, and in view of their experience these provisions of the Bill have come up before the House. I submit, Sir, that the Bill should be passed without any serious amendment.

With regard to clause 9, however, I find that the provision requires a little amount of strengthening. Clause 9 is nothing but an addition to sub-section (5A) to section 46. This consists of a number of paragraphs which I have suggested should be numbered as separate sub-sections, but that is another matter.

With regard to paragraph 3 of the proposed sub-section, it is provided that if the assessee is left without any property, but if anybody owes any money to him, namely a banker or a debtor or a tenant, the Income-tax Officer will serve a notice upon him not to pay the amount to the assessee and the Income-tax Officer will direct that man to pay such amount as the Income-tax Officer thinks necessary to the Income-tax Officer himself and that would be regarded as payment to the assessee. It is provided in this paragraph that if that man does not pay it to the Income-tax Officer but rather pays to the assessee disregarding the provisions of the notice, no penalty is provided for. It may be that the assessee owes really a large amount of tax to the Government and he has some money or other property with a third person and this third person may otherwise, apart from being the custodian of the money, be a man of straw and the section simply says that if he does not pay the money to the Income-tax Officer, the money will be realised from him. I submit that if he is an insolvent or a man of straw, this would not be sufficient; the Income-tax Officer will have to run after him and proceed against him in the Civil Court. I think some punishment should be attached to this and if a notice is served upon a man not to pay the amount to the assessee but hold it for the Income-tax Officer, then that notice should not be disregarded. I feel that some penalty of a deterrent character should be attached to this disregard of the notice; otherwise on the matter of tax evasions we are dealing with men who are nothing better than bad characters and rascals. This is what I want the Honourable Minister to consider. The provision should be made rather deterrent so as to make evasions absolutely impossible. These are some of the few remarks which I have to make; otherwise, I am in full agreement with the principles of the Bill and I hope that the Government should proceed full steam ahead with the scheme before them.

پنڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو: اس بل کے بارے میں میں چند ایک

جذاب کی خدمت میں پیش کرنا چاہتا ہوں ان میں سے پہلی بات جو میں عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں وہ یہ ہے کہ دراصل جو آج ہمارے Income-tax administration کی حالت ہے وہ نہایت ہی تکلیف دہ ہے۔ ایک طرف تو اس میں صداقت ہے کہ بہت سارے لوگ tax خوشی سے دینا نہیں چاہتے۔ کچھ تو انسانی فطرت اس طرح کی ہے کہ کوئی شخص اپنی آمدنی کا کوئی حصہ کسی اچھے کام کے واسطے بھی دینا نہیں چاہتا اور دوسرے ابھی لوگوں میں یہ احساس نہیں ہوا ہے کہ اب جب کہ گورنمنٹ کی نوعیت تبدیل ہو گئی ہے اور گورنمنٹ ہماری National Govt. ہو گئی ہے تو اس وقت جو گورنمنٹ کا due ہے اس کو نہ دینا ایک بڑا بھاری پاپ ہے۔ اب اس کی ضرورت ہے کہ لوگ اس بات کو محسوس کریں کہ کوئی جرم اتنا معیوب نہیں ہے جتنا کہ اس رقم کو سرکار کو نہ دینا جس کے دینے کی قانون ہدایت کرتا ہے۔ لیکن اس mentality میں لوگوں کا کچھ زیادہ تصور نہیں ہے۔ ہم کو یاد ہے کہ خود Income-tax Deptt. کے tribunals اور ہمارے ملک کی High Courts نے یہ فیصلہ دیا تھا کہ اگر legitimate means سے کوئی evasion ہو سکتا ہے تو یہ نہ کوئی پاپ ہے اور نہ یہ کوئی گناہ ہے۔ یہ mentality صرف اسی چیز میں نہیں بلکہ پورے طور پر قانون پر چلنے میں بادھا پہنچاتی ہے۔ اور یہ صرف income-tax ہی کے Tribunal کا فیصلہ نہیں ہے بلکہ یہ کتنے ہی criminal courts کے فیصلے ہیں کہ اگر کوئی شخص legitimate طریقے سے قانون کو evade کر سکتا ہے تو اس کو قانوناً اختیار ہے کہ وہ ایسا کرے۔ اور بھی بہت سی وجوہات ہیں۔ جن میں میں جانا نہیں چاہتا۔ ہر ایک tax دینے والا یہ جانتا تھا کہ جو tax اس کی جیب سے نکلتا ہے وہ اسی کی آزادی کو دبانے کے واسطے کام میں لایا جاتا ہے۔ اس طرح اس tax evasion کی تہہ میں یہ وجہ بھی تھی اور اپنا لالچ بھی تھا لیکن اپنے moral conscience کو satisfy کرنے کے واسطے وہ ان تجویزوں پر بھی عمل کرتا تھا۔ آج حالت تبدیل ہو گئی ہے اور میں چاہتا ہوں کہ ہر ایک آدمی اب اپنی ذمہ داری کو محسوس کرے اور tax دینے کے معاملہ میں اتنی ہی ایمانداری سے کام کرے جس طرح کہ وہ کسی دھرم کے کام میں کرتا ہے۔

Income-tax افسران اور Inspectors کو نہ دینی چاہئے۔ اگر اس نکتہ خیال سے اس قانون کو دیکھیں تو میں ادب سے عرض کروں گا کہ یہ قانون اس کسوتی پر پورا نہیں اترتا۔

جو بڑے بڑے اکسپرت (Expert) صاحبان انویسٹی گیشن کمیٹی Investigation Committee میں ہیں۔ وہ بھی سب غریب اور اوسط درجہ کے طبقہ کی تکلیف کو نہیں جانتے ہیں۔ اور انکو نہیں معلوم ہے کہ کس طرح یہ اختیارات برتے جاتے ہیں۔ محض تھیورٹیکل (theoretical) طریقے پر فیصلہ کرتے ہیں۔ اس لئے میں جناب والا کی خدمت میں عرض کروں گا کہ دفعہ سات اور آٹھ پر ان تین باتوں کے خیال سے جانچ کی جائے کہ آیا یہ طاقت جو دی گئی ہے وہ تھیک دی گئی ہے یا غلط دی گئی ہے۔ اول تو جو چیز میں نے عرض کی ہے وہ یہ ہے کہ قانون سرٹین (certain) ہونا چاہئے۔ دفعہ سات اور آٹھ کو پڑھنے سے معلوم ہوتا ہے کہ انویسٹی گیشن کمیٹی (Investigation Committee) نے جو کسوتی رکھی تھی اس پر وہ پوری نہیں اترتی ہیں۔ میں نے کہا تھا کہ جہاں تک ایرر آف لا (error of law) کا سوال ہے اس میں کمشنر (Commissioner) کو طاقت دی جائے اور جہاں تک سوال ہے فیکٹ (fact) کا وہاں انکم ٹیکس آفیسر (Income-tax Officer) کو طاقت دی جائے اگر کوئی ممبر (Member) اس بات میں کوشچن (question) کرتا ہے تو میں اس کی توجہ انویسٹی گیشن کمیٹی (Investigation Committee) کی جو رپورٹ (Report) ہے اس کے صفحہ تین پیرا (para.) سات کی طرف دلانا چاہتا ہوں جس میں یہ درج ہے

"We, however, agree that it is possible to maintain that an assessment should not be allowed to be reopened under section 34 merely on the ground that the Income-tax Officer who made the assessment has misunderstood or misapplied the law or that a different view of the law or of the facts is possible. The proper remedy in such cases, if the Department considers the matter to be one of sufficient importance, is to allow the matter to be right on appeal or in revision."

میں ان الفاظ یعنی شیفتنٹ امپارٹینس (sufficient importance) کی طرف جناب والا کی توجہ دلاتا ہوں جو اس رپورٹ (Report) میں صفحہ تین پر پیرا (para.) سات میں درج ہے اور پھر صفحہ ۴ کے نوٹ میں بھی یہ درج ہے

"Cases of error of law or erroneous inference of fact will no longer fall under section 34, the Commissioner must, therefore, have power to pass appropriate orders in such cases under section 33-B itself. That is also the reason why we have now provided for an appeal by the assessee to the Tribunal against the Commissioner's order."

جناب والا! میری ادب سے گزارش یہ ہے کہ دفعہ 33 (b) اور 34 اگر موجودہ صورت میں دیکھی جائے تو یہ ایک دوسرے کو اوورلیپ (Overlap) کرتی ہیں کیا وجہ ہے کہ انکم ٹیکس افسر (Income-tax Officer) صاحب کو بھی اور کمشنر (Commissioner) صاحب کو بھی ایک اسیسی (assessee) کے خلاف اس کے سارے انکم ٹیکس اکاؤنٹ (Income-tax account) کو ری اوپن (reopen) کرنے کی اجازت دی جائے۔ اگر مقصد یہ ہے کہ کمشنر (Commissioner) صاحب صرف قانون کے معاملہ کو ری اوپن (reopen) کر سکیں اور انکم ٹیکس افسر (Income-tax Officer) صاحب صرف فیکٹس (facts) کے معاملہ کو ری اوپن (reopen) کر سکیں تو یہ ایک بات سمجھ میں آسکتی ہے۔ لیکن دونوں کو اختیار دیئے جائیں کہ دونوں کے دونوں ان معاملوں کو ری اوپن (reopen) کر سکتے ہیں تو میں ادب سے عرض کرتا ہوں کہ اس کے لئے کوئی وجہ نہیں ہے کہ ان دونوں کو یہ طاقت دی جائے۔ یہ ایک دوسرے کو اوورلیپ (overlap) کرتی ہے انویسٹی گیشن کمیٹی (Investigation Committee) کی رپورٹ (report) میں جس کے لئے کہ ہر ایک ممبر (member) گورنمنٹ کی تعریف کے پل باندھتا ہے یہ اختیار نہیں دیا گیا ہے تو پھر میں نہیں سمجھتا کہ دفعہ (B) 33 کے قرائت (draft) میں کیوں نہیں یہ الفاظ رکھے گئے کہ صرف کمشنر (Commissioner) صاحب کو یہ اختیار دے گا کہ وہ قانونی معاملہ کو ری اوپن (reopen) کر سکتے ہیں۔ اب تو یہ جو قانون آپ بنا رہے ہیں وہ بالکل نا مناسب ہوگا۔ ہر ایک انکم ٹیکس افسر (Income-tax Officer) چاہے گا تو محض قانون کی بنا پر ری اوپن (reopen) کر دینا اور اس طرح سارا قانون کنفیوزن (confusion) میں پڑ جائیگا جو کہ رپورٹ کمیٹی کی منشا کے خلاف ہوگا اور شاید منسٹر (Minister) صاحب کی منشا کے بھی خلاف ہو۔ اسلئے میں عرض کرتا ہوں کہ یہ جو انویسٹی گیشن کمیٹی (Investigation Committee) کی رپورٹ (report) میں جو درج ہے اس پر عمل کیا جائے اور اس بات کو بالکل صاف کر دیا جائے کہ کمشنر (Commissioner) صاحب محض لا (law) کی بنا پر کارروائی کر سکیں گے۔

دوسری چیز جس کے بارے میں میں توجہ دلانا چاہتا ہوں وہ یہ ہے کہ جناب والا لوئر مڈل کلاس (Lower middle class) کے غریب اسیسی (assessee) کے خلاف اس کا عمل نہیں کیا جانا چاہئے ابھی میں نے پڑھ کر سنایا کہ انویسٹی گیشن کمیٹی (Investigation Committee) کی رپورٹ (report) میں یہ درج ہے کہ جب تک معاملہ سنی شنیت اہمیت (sufficient importance) میں ہو تب تک کیس کو reopen نہ کیا جائے یہ صفحہ تین پر درج ہے۔

“The proper remedy in such cases, if the Department considers the matter to be one of sufficient importance, is to allow the matter to be set right on appeal or in revision.”

اور جب میں نے اس معاملہ کا ذکر کر دیا ہے تو میں یہ چیز صاف کر دوں کہ جب یہ چیز تسلیم کر لی گئی تھی تو یہ خیال تھا کہ بڑے کیسز (cases) کے لئے یہ چیز استعمال ہوگی اور چھوٹے معاملوں کے لئے نہیں۔ لیکن جنہوں نے اس اصول کو مانا تھا وہ آج فائننس منسٹر صاحب اکثر سیٹ (seat) میں نہیں ہیں اور میں نہیں جانتا کہ کل فائننس منسٹر (Finance Minister) کا کام کون کریگا۔ سلیکٹ کمیٹی (Select Committee) میں یہ مانا گیا تھا کہ یہ بڑے کیسز (cases) پر لاگو ہوگا اور چھوٹوں پر نہیں ہوگا اسلئے میں نے جو امینڈمنٹ (amendment) بھیجے ہیں ان میں سے ایک کا منشا یہ ہے کہ اگر قانون کی بات ہو تو اس کو انکم ٹیکس افسر (Income-tax Officer) صاحب ری اوپن (reopen) نہ کر سکیں میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ اس پر مناسب غور کیا جائیگا اور اس امینڈمنٹ (amendment) کو منظور کر لیا جائیگا۔

اب ایک دوسری چیز جو میں عرض کرنا چاہتا تھا وہ یہ ہے کہ یہ جو معیاد منسٹر (assessment) کو ری اوپن (reopen) کرنے کی وہ دوسرے ملکوں میں یہاں سے کم ہے گو ان کا سپین آف لائف (span of life) یہاں سے بہت زیادہ ہے یہاں پر آٹھ سال اور چار سال کی تجویز کی گئی ہے ایسے اشخاص کے بارے میں کہ جنہوں نے اپنی رٹرن (return) کو چھپا لیا ہے یا رٹرن (return) نہیں دیا ہے تو ایسی صورت میں آٹھ سال کی معیاد مقرر کی گئی ہے۔ باقی کے واسطے چار سال مقرر ہے۔

لیکن دوسرے ملکوں میں یہ معیاد چھ سال کی ہے۔ آٹھ سال کی معیاد میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ زیادہ ہے۔ آدمی اتنے عرصہ تک زندہ نہیں رہتے ہیں۔ یہ معیاد کم کر دینی چاہئے اور خاص کر کے ایسے اشخاص کے بارے میں کہ جو اور جڈل اسیسی (original assessee) نہ ہوں۔ یہ شاید ہر ایک شخص کے تجربہ میں ہے کہ جو بزنس مین (businessman) آج لکھتی ہے وہ کل بھوکا ہو جاتا ہے اور جو آج بھوکا ہے وہ اگر سپیکو لیٹو بزنس (speculative business) کرتا ہے تو ایک سال کے اندر اس کی حالت دگر گوں ہو جاتی ہے کہاں آٹھ سال اور چار سال کا ذکر ہے میں عرض کرتا ہوں کہ اگر وہ مرجاتا ہے تو اس کے کرائم (crime) کا نتیجہ اس کی اولاد کو دینا تھیک نہیں ہے۔ اسلئے میں عرض کروں گا کہ اس معیاد کو کم کر دینا چاہئے۔ اور اس معیاد کو ایسے آدمیوں کے لئے نہیں رکھنا چاہئے کہ جنہوں نے ایمان داری سے اپنی اپنی رٹرن (return) داخل کی ہو۔ جنہوں نے اپنی انکم کو چھپایا نہ ہو اور جنکے اوپر کسی طرح کا الزام نہیں رکھا جاسکتا ہے۔ ایسے آدمیوں کے سر پر چار سال تک ڈیموکلس (Damocles) کی سورت (Sword) رکھنا میری سمجھ میں نہیں ہرگز مناسب نہیں ہے۔ یہ انصاف

کے خلاف ہے۔ پبلک پالیسی (public policy) کے خلاف ہے۔ جناب والا! ایسے شخص جو ٹیکس سے بچنا چاہتے ہیں ان کے لئے آپ جو چاہیں کریں میں ٹیکس اویڈر (tax evader) کا دوست نہیں ہوں لیکن میں نہایت ادب سے عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ نان اویڈرس (non evaders) جن کے لئے آپ آنسو بہاتے ہیں ان کے ساتھ آپ کیا ہمدردی کا سلوک کرتے ہیں آپ کے انکم ٹیکس آفیسر (Income-tax Officer) جس طرح کام کرتے ہیں۔ اسکا حال آپ کو پورا معلوم نہیں ہے پھر اسکے بعد آپ آٹھ سال یا چار سال کا عرصہ جانتے ہیں کہ وہ جسقدر ٹالچ چاہیں کرسکیں میں ادب سے عرض کرتا ہوں کہ یہ انصاف کے خلاف ہے عدالتوں میں ریس جوتی کیٹا (resjudicata) کے اصول ہوتے ہیں اور دفعہ ۳۰۳ ضابطہ فوجداری کے اصول سے ان کے اوپر مجھے زیادہ کہنے کی ضرورت نہیں ہے۔

میں عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ ری اوپن (reopen) کرنے کا اختیار ایسی حالت میں چاہئے جب کہ پورا پتہ چل جائے کہ کوئی غلطی کی گئی ہے یا بعد میں ایسے واقعات علم میں آگئے ہوں کہ جن کو وہ پہلے نہ جانتا ہو اور جنکو ایسی (assessee) بھی نہ جانتا ہو۔ میں نہیں چاہتا کہ جس شخص کو کوئی زیادہ ٹیکس دینا ہو تو وہ اس سے بچ جائے۔ لیکن تاہم اتنا بڑا عرصہ reassessment دوبارہ کے لئے نہیں دینا چاہئے آپ اتنے بڑے اختیارات اس طرح لائٹ ہارٹیڈلی (light heartedly) دے رہے ہیں۔ یہ اختیارات انکم ٹیکس (income-tax) کے ہر ایک غریب آدمی (honest) آدمی کے خلاف کام میں لائے جاسکتے ہیں۔ آپ چاہیں تو ایک نیا قانون بنا دیں کہ جن کی آمدنی بہت زیادہ ہے ان پر وہ لاگو ہو لیکن غریب آدمی کے خلاف آرڈی نری لا آف دی لینڈ (ordinary law of the land) میں اس طرح کا آرڈی ٹیری (arbitrary) قانون بنانا ہرگز جائز نہیں ہے۔ قانون اس طرح کا ہونا چاہئے کہ جس سے غریب اور آنیسٹ (honest) ایسی (assessee) بچ جائے۔ چنانچہ میں نے ان چند ترمیمات کی طرف آپ کی توجہ مبذول کرائی ہے جو کہ اس میں کی جانی ضروری ہیں۔ اور جب وہ ترمیمات پیس ہونگی تب میں ان پر بحث کروں گا۔

تو سنٹرل گورنمنٹ کو بھی تو یہ اختیار ہے کہ اس کو ہٹائے۔ اس وقت پراونسیز میں چند ایسے ٹیکس لگائے گئے ہیں جو کہ انکم ٹیکس کے نوعیت کے ہیں۔ مثلاً پلنچاب میں اس وقت ایک ٹیکس لگایا گیا ہے۔ وہ یوں ہے کہ ایک لینڈ لڈ کو جو کچھ بھی بارہ مہینے کا کرایہ کسی مکان پر آتا ہے اس میں سے ایک مہینے کا کرایہ بطور ٹیکس وصول کیا جاتا ہے۔ اس قسم کا ٹیکس بھی تو انکم پر ٹیکس ہے۔ اور اس طرح سے یہ قبل ٹیکس ہو جاتا ہے۔ یہ جو اس قسم کے ٹیکس لئے جاتے ہیں ان سب کو exempt کرنا چاہئے تاکہ غریب لوگوں پر خامخواہ کا بوجھ نہ پڑے۔ اب جہاں تک مونیسیپل ٹیکس کا تعلق ہے اس کو سلیکٹ کمیٹی نے نہایت غور و خوض سے consider کیا ہے اور میں اُمید کرتا ہوں کہ اس پر اب نئے سرے سے دوبارہ چھان بین کرنے کی ضرورت نہیں ہے۔ اس کو اسی form میں رہنے دینا چاہئے جس فارم میں کہ وہ سلیکٹ کمیٹی نے پاس کیا ہے۔

جہاں تک دفعہ ۴۹ کا تعلق ہے۔ میں نہایت ادب سے گزارش کروں گا کہ اس دفعہ میں ترمیم کی ضرورت ہے۔ اگر ایک شخص نے کسی سے قرضہ لیا ہے۔ تو اس سے وہ گورنمنٹ کے ذریعہ سے وصول نہیں کر سکتا ہے اس کو یہ کہا جائے کہ وہ یہ سب اپنے risk پر دے دے یہ ٹھیک نہیں ہوگا۔ مثلاً اگر میں نے کسی سے قرضہ لیا ہے اور دوسرے شخص نے میرا قرضہ یا کوئی اور claim دینا ہے تو مجھے یہ اختیار ہونا چاہئے کہ میں یہ کہوں کہ میں نے اس سے روپیہ لینا ہے مجھے یہ claim کرنے کا حق ہے جو کہ مجھکو اپنا claim یا روپیہ ملنا ہے۔ تاکہ ایک آدمی جسکو حق وصولی روپیہ خود ہو وہ Defendant کے اس claim کو resist کر سکے اور یہ وصولی debtor سے نہ کی جائے۔ اس کے علاوہ میں یہ بھی عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ دفعہ نمبر ۹ کی بھی ترمیم کی جائے۔

ان باتوں کے علاوہ میں ایک اور عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں اور وہ Hindu Joint Family کے بارے میں ہے۔ اس بارے میں جناب کے روبرو بہت دفعہ میں عرض کرچکا ہوں۔ اور اب اس کو دہرانے میں مجھکو شرم بھی آتی ہے۔ اس دفعہ یہاں پر گورنمنٹ کی طرف سے ایک Hindu Code Bill آ رہا ہے۔ جس کی رو سے Hindu Joint Family کو بالکل ہی out of existence کر دیا گیا ہے۔ اور جب یہ ہندو کوڈ بل نافذ ہوگا تب Joint family system ختم ہو جائیگا۔ ایک طرف تو آپ اس قسم کے قانون بنانا چاہتے ہیں اور دوسری طرف سے آپ کچھ اور کہتے ہیں۔ حالانکہ ابھی تک Hindu Joint family system یہاں موجود ہے۔ لیکن میں یہ عرض کروں گا کہ میں ان آدمیوں میں سے نہیں ہوں جو کہ اس Joint family system کے بہت زیادہ دلدادہ ہیں میں سمجھتا ہوں فی زمانہ یہ system ختم ہو چکا ہے اور اب آئندہ نہیں رہ سکتا۔ تو کیوں نہ سرکار اور انکم ٹیکس کا محکمہ اس اصلیت

[پنڈت تھاکرداس بھارگو]

(English translation of the above speech)

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I beg to make a few observations in regard to this Bill. First of all, I would like to point out that the present condition of our Income-tax Administration is indeed very distressing. In the first instance, it is true that people generally do not want to pay the tax willingly. It is in human nature that people do not want to part with any portion of their income for any work connected with public good, and secondly they have not yet been able to realise fully well that now when the Government has changed and we have our own National Government, it would be a great sin not to pay what is due to the Government. Now it is the high time that the people realize that no crime is more reprehensible than to evade the payment to the Government of the amount enjoined by the law. But people are not to be blamed very much for this mentality. We are very well aware that a decision was given by the Tribunals of the Income-tax Department and the High Courts in our country that if any evasion can be made by legitimate means, it is neither a sin nor an offence. This mentality is not only confined to this particular sphere, but acts like a snag in the full enforcement of the law generally. This is not only the decision of the Income-tax Tribunal but of many other courts having criminal jurisdiction that if any person can evade the law by legitimate means there is nothing to prevent him from doing that. There are many other reasons into the details of which I do not want to go. Every tax-payer knew that the tax which went out of his pocket was utilized to suppress his freedom. So this fact coupled with the sordid motives was the reason underlying the evasion. But tax payer also followed these devices to satisfy his moral conscience. The conditions have changed now and I want that everybody realises his responsibility and acts scrupulously in the payment of tax just as he would do in matters of religion.

Having explained this, the other point to which I would like to draw your attention, Sir, is very vital. Even today it is not considered a reprehensible act to try to escape from the payment of Income-tax; they consider it just as the people considered prior to the advent of our National Government. Similarly the officers of the Income-tax Department considered it their prestige to increase the revenues of the Government to the maximum extent possible without regard of the condition of the poor assesseees. Their promotion solely depended on this. There is another officer the Inspecting Assistant Income-tax Commissioner above them who can make them do what he likes. Whenever there was a decrease in the amount of Income-tax collection in any district, the Income-tax Officer concerned was called upon to explain. Both practices are wrong. Well placed persons are perhaps not aware of the treatment meted out to the common people by the Income-tax Officers. Under such circumstances, it would not therefore be surprising to say that while in this Assembly we are told of very high principles, but actually we come across practices which are impossible to put up with. The Income-tax Officers and Inspector have been armed with such wide powers that they can oppress anybody in any manner they like. With a view to suppress these two evils, we should eradicate such mal-practices. The most essential thing is that we should enforce such a law which should be certain, and should not place arbitrary powers in the hands of Inspectors and Income-tax Officers. And so far as the poor and middle class assesseees are concerned, who cannot generally evade payment of the tax they should not be illegally coerced. The setting-up of the Investigation Commission is quite appropriate for the big people, who commit fraud. You may take whatever powers you like to deal with them, but for that too I would not like to be exercised in an arbitrary manner. Nevertheless there can be some justification in the case of those persons who commit offences which are prejudicial to the State. Power is taken to be exercised against such persons but on the contrary it is used against the honest assesseees. The Income-tax Officer who exercises these powers does not discriminate between the honest and dishonest assesseees. The dishonest persons manage to escape with the help of money and the honest assesseees are harassed. Therefore, I would respectfully submit that the most essential thing which we should bear in mind in enforcing the law is that such powers on which it may not be possible to exercise complete control should not be given to the Income-tax Officers and Inspectors. If we see this law from this perspective, I will respectfully submit, it is far below the criterion. In regard to each and every decision given by the Investigation Commission, it has been asserted by the Honourable Ministers that this represent the decision of an expert Committee and any alteration thereof is bound to change the status of the Committee. I realize that there is no question of expertness in such a matter. All of us can very well appreciate these problems that confront us daily and which cause us considerable hardship. Those big experts who are on the Investigation Commission are not aware of the hardships to which the poor and middle class people are subjected and they do not know the manner in which these powers are exercised. They decide merely on theoretical grounds. Therefore, I will submit, Sir, that Clauses 7 and 8 should be scrutinized in the light of these three points whether it would be right or wrong to confer these powers. First of all what I have stated is that the law should be certain. It would be observed that Clause 7 and 8 do not fulfil the object which the Investigation Commission had in view. I had pointed out that the Commissioner should be given the powers to rectify errors of law, the Income-tax Officer should be empowered to deal with errors of facts. If any honourable member questions this, I would like to draw his attention to para. 7 at page 3 of the Report of the Investigation Commission:

"We, however, agree that it is possible to maintain that an assessment should not be allowed to be reopened under section 34 merely on the ground that the Income-tax Officer who made the assessment has misunderstood or misapplied the law or that a different view of the law or of the facts is possible. The proper remedy in such cases, if the Department considers the matter to be one of sufficient importance, is to allow the matter to be set right on appeal or in revision."

Sir, I would like to invite your attention to the words "sufficient importance" in para. 7 at page 3 of this Report. It has been further laid down in the note at page 6:

"Cases of error of law or erroneous inference of fact will no longer fall under section 34; the Commissioner must, therefore, have power to pass appropriate orders in such cases under section 33-B itself. That is also the reason why we have now provided for an appeal by the assessee to the Tribunal against the Commissioner's order."

I will respectfully submit, Sir, that the existing Sections 33(B) and 34 as they stand seem to overlap. What is the reason for empowering the Income-tax Officer and Commissioner to re-open the entire Income-tax account of a particular assessee. If it is the intention that the Commissioner and the Income-tax Officer should be authorized to re-open the cases connected with the law and facts respectively, then this is of course comprehensible. But I will submit that there is no reason why both these officers should be empowered to re-open such cases. There is therefore overlapping. The Report of the Investigation Commission for which every member eulogizes the Government does not give such a power. I cannot, therefore, understand why no provision has been made in the draft of revised Section 33(B) enjoining that only the Commissioner will be empowered to re-open the case involving points of law. Now the legislation which you are framing will be quite improper. Every Income-tax Officer will re-open the cases as and when he desires simply on the grounds of legal technicalities, and in this way there will be confusion in the entire law which would be contrary to the intention of the Report of the Investigation Commission and perhaps also against the wishes of the Honourable Minister. Therefore, I submit that the decisions contained in the report of the Investigation Commission should be carried out and the point clarified that the Commissioner will be able to institute proceedings only on points of law.

Another thing that I would like the attention of the House drawn is that this should not be enforced against the poor assessee of the lower middle class. Just now I quoted from the Report of the Investigation Commission which lays down that unless the matter is of sufficient importance the case should not be re-opened. It has been stated at page 3:

"The proper remedy in such cases, if the Department considers the matter to be one of sufficient importance, is to allow the matter to be set right on appeal or in revision."

As I have referred to this matter I might elucidate this point that when this was accepted it was considered that this power would only be used in big cases.

But the Finance Minister who had agreed to this principle is not in his seat today and I do not know who will perform the duties of the Finance Minister tomorrow. It was agreed in the Select Committee that it will apply to big cases only. Therefore the object of one of the amendments tabled by me is that if a question of law is involved the Income-tax Officer may not be able to re-open the case. I hope that this amendment will be accepted after due consideration.

Now another thing which I want to submit is that the time-limit fixed for the re-opening of the assessment is comparatively shorter than that prevailing in other countries although their span of life is much longer than ours. The limit of eight years and four years has been proposed in this Bill. The period of eight years has been laid down in the case of an assessee who has evaded submission of the Return or has not submitted the Return. In other cases it has been fixed as four years. (But in other countries such limit is fixed as six years. I feel that eight years' time-limit is very long. People do not live for such a long period. This limit should be reduced especially in respect of those persons who are not the original assessee. This is perhaps within the knowledge of everybody that the businessmen who are millionaires today become paupers tomorrow; and conversely one who is starving today and if he does speculative business, his condition becomes changed within a year. Eight or four years is a long time. I will submit that if a person dies, it will not be proper to punish his children for his crime. Therefore, I would request that this limitation may be brought down and this should not be fixed in respect of those assessee who had submitted their return honestly. I think that it is not always expedient to keep hanging the sword of Democles for all these four years over such assessee who have not concealed their income, and against whom no charge can be levelled.

This is against the canons of justice and public policy. Sir, you may take whatever action you like in regard to the tax-dodgers. I am not a friend of tax-evaders. But I would respectfully enquire what sympathy have you shown for non-evaders for whom you shed tears. You are not fully aware of the manner in which your Income-tax Officers are working, and moreover you can realize that during this period of eight or four years they will be free to tyrannize as much as they like. With due respect, I will submit, Sir, that this is against the principles of justice. The principle of Res Judicata is followed in the Courts and I need not dilate much upon the provisions of Section 403 of Criminal Procedure Code.

I will like to say that the power to re-open should be exercised only when it is finally established that some mistake has been made or some new facts have come to the knowledge which were not known before and of which even the assessee was ignorant. I do not want that any person who has got to pay more tax may evade payment, but in any case such a long period for the re-assessment should not be fixed. You are giving such wide powers light-heartedly. These powers can be exercised against any assessee who may be poor and honest. If you like you may frame a new law which would apply to persons with larger incomes, but it is not proper to put in such an arbitrary measure in the ordinary law of the land which may penalize the poor. The law should be framed in such a manner that it safeguards and protects the poor and honest assesses. In fact, I have drawn your attention to such amendments which should necessarily be made in this Bill and I will discuss them when those amendments are moved. Apart from this, there are two other points to which I would like to draw your attention and that of the Honourable Minister. Firstly the law regarding Clause 4 is quite clear. The Central Government has the power to impose Income-tax, and besides them there is no other authority competent to levy taxes on the income. If the Government are in know of the fact that at a certain place double tax is levied on Income, they should remove this. In case any Provincial Government has levied such taxes, the Central Government has also got the authority to abolish and remove them. At present some taxes have been imposed in Provinces which are of the nature of Income-tax. For example, a tax has been imposed in the Punjab at present, the basis of which is that out of the total annual rental of a house, one month's rent is recovered from the landlord in the form of tax. So this is also a kind of tax on income and in this way this amounts to the payment of double tax. All such types of taxes which are levied should be removed so that the poor people be not unduly burdened.

So far as the levy of Municipal taxes is concerned, the Select Committee has very carefully considered this and I think there is no need to scrutinize this again. This should be allowed to remain in the same form in which it was approved by the Select Committee.

With due respect I will submit that Section 46 needs to be amended. If any person has borrowed money, he cannot realize it through the agency of the Government. It will not be proper to ask him to lend on his own risk. For instance, if I have borrowed money from somebody and another person has to repay my debt or discharge the claim, then I ought to have this right to assert that I have to get money from him. I have the right to claim that I should be repaid my money or whatever is my claim so that a man who himself is entitled to recover the amount due may be able to resist such a claim of the Department and this should not be recovered from the debtor. Besides this I would like to get Section 9 also amended.

In addition to these matters, I would like to say a little more and that is in regard to the Hindu Joint Family. Sir, I have already said much on this point on the previous occasions and feel somewhat ashamed in repeating this. During this session, the Government are bringing forth a Hindu Code Bill which seeks to put the Hindu Joint Family absolutely out of existence and when this Bill is enacted the Joint Family system will be liquidated. On the one hand you want to frame such kind of legislation and on the other you say something else. Although this Joint Hindu Family system is still existing, yet I will say that I am not one of those persons who are very much enamoured of it. I think that in the present times this system has practically ceased to exist and cannot live long. Why then does not the Government and the Income-tax Department admit this fact and grant exemption to the Joint Hindu Family from the category of taxable units? If this is the state of affairs, I really fail to understand why unnecessary burden is placed on the members of the Joint Hindu Family in every such legislation.

The Honourable the Finance Minister had stated on the previous occasion that if any body claims under Section 26(A) that his family has been partitioned, he should be treated as a separated member, and his statement should be taken as sufficient. But so far no such instructions have been issued, in spite of a promise to this effect. I do not understand why while passing Bills in this House we are told that they do not contain any harmful provisions and therefore, it was no use going deep into the matter? But later on we have to face those very difficulties which we have apprehended while enacting the measure. While alluding to the Investigation Commission on a previous occasion, the Honourable Finance Minister had stated that thirty cases in all will have to be referred to it. But subsequently, 130 cases have been detected in Ahmedabad alone and in addition to this 800 more cases have been referred. But we were told that only thirty cases were to be referred.

Sir, with due respect, I will submit that the people are utterly dissatisfied with the conditions which are at present prevailing in the country and you cannot estimate their dissatisfaction. Therefore, I will submit that the Honourable Minister should accord very careful consideration to the matters connected with the Joint Hindu Family and should take such steps as may be appropriate and useful; and these should not in any case be harmful. At the moment many such proposals are being mooted out which tend to put a heavy burden on the members of the Joint Hindu Family. It should not so happen, and such steps should be taken which may not prove harmful to the people. Keeping all these things in view, I hope that the Honourable Minister who is in charge of the Finance portfolio, will consider the matter and accept such of the amendments proposed by me as he deems fit.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, the Honourable the Finance Minister has been pleased to say that the provisions which he has introduced are in consonance with the recommendations of the Income-Tax Investigation Commission. I would like to point out some of the important deviations that we find in the Bill the recommendations made by the Commission. My honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava has dealt with some of them and he has drawn your attention to the fact that Section 33B which was really intended to give power to the Commissioner for re-opening cases if there was an error of law has been made so wide that it will overlap Section 34 and a case can now be re-opened by the Income-Tax Commissioner under Section 33B whether it is a question of fact or of law and similarly, under Section 34 a case can be re-opened by the Income-Tax Officer. I cannot understand why there should be two overlapping provisions for re-opening such cases.

There is another respect wherein the scope of Section 33B has been very much widened. The draft made by the Commission is as follows: "The Commissioner may call for and examine the record of any proceedings under Sections 23, 27 or 34 of this Act if he considers" and so on. Now, Sir, the clause as introduced in the Bill says: "The Commissioner may call for and examine the record of any proceedings under this Act" thus, it is not confined to Section 23 or 27 but any proceedings or any order 'under this Act.' Now, Sir, you know in an appeal against an order of assessment under Section 23 or 27 the assessee can go to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner and an order is passed. That is section 30. Then there may be an appeal to the Tribunal. That would be perhaps Section 33. Therefore, if the words "under this Act" are used and we do not specify the power of the Commissioner to re-open cases only under Section 23 and 27, the result will be that even in cases where there has been an appeal and where the matter has been considered by the Appellate Assistant Commissioner or by the Appellate Tribunal, even then matters which have been dealt with in appeal can be touched and re-opened by the Commissioner. Where, then, are we going to make a case final? If, a matter which has gone on appeal to the Appellate authorities, if cases which have been decided in appeal, can be re-opened by the Commissioner, well rather do not give the power to the assessee to appeal. No one will have any sympathy with the dishonest assessee who evades taxes and is responsible for the higher rates of taxes. If those who evade taxes indirectly are made to pay what they should, I am definite that the rate of tax may possibly go lower. In any event, there will be lesser burden on other honest persons. Therefore, do what you like. Take such powers as you think proper for roping in persons who deliberately and dishonestly evade taxes, but to give such wide powers which were not recommended even by the Investigation Commission does not appear to fit in with the necessities. Another aspect is Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: With your permission, Sir, may I just put a question to the Honourable Minister in charge whether what my friend says is correct, because according to me it is the Income-Tax Officer alone whose orders can be reviewed by the Commission and not those orders that have been the subject of appeal. I want elucidation on this point.

Mr. Speaker: I was just thinking of inviting the honourable member's attention to the words 'orders of the Income-Tax Officer'.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: That is true, but then that will be a matter for interpretation in the courts. It will be a question of interpretation as to whether orders passed in appeal by the Assistant Appellate Commissioner or by the Appellate Tribunal is not really an order by the Income-Tax Officer. If that is made clear, then of course the position becomes a bit better, but there are other Sections under which the Income-Tax Officer can assess—Section 52 or 52(a) when cases are compromised. Even those cases can be re-opened under this Section. A case where the Income-Tax Officer comes to an arrangement with the assessee when there is a prosecution or something like that, such a case can also be re-opened. Therefore, if the Income-Tax Commission recommended this power to be given only in respect of certain specified Sections, I cannot follow why the scope has been enlarged.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: In order to shorten the discussion on this particular point, I may inform my honourable friend that the form in which the Bill stands at present has received the fullest approval of the Investigation Commission and if they, at one stage, specified certain Sections in this context, they have realised that it is not right to confine the remedy given in clause 7 to any proceedings arising out of those Sections only and that any order passed under any provision of the Income-Tax Act which may involve the interests of the revenue should be open to revision under this particular clause.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: And whether they are on fact or on law?

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): That is another point.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: And whether they are on fact or on law, they can be re-opened. If this House is going to accept the result of the discussions that is said to have taken place among the members of the Commission and the Department, it is for the House to see, but what I was pointing the attention of the honourable members to was that the scope has definitely been enlarged from what the Commission suggested in their report.

Then, Sir, as regards Section 34, you know that in 1939 when the Income-Tax Act was amended in a special session, the Congress Party under the leadership of the late Shri Bhulabhai Desai of revered memory were responsible for the word "definite" being introduced in Section 34. That word was not there when the Bill was introduced. My honourable friend Shri T. T. Krishnamachari was also a member then.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: No.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: I am sorry. I thought you were. On that occasion the Honourable Sir James Grigg who was in charge of the Bill gave the assurance on the floor of the House that if the Opposition were satisfied that the addition of the word "definite" would make it sure that the Income-Tax Officers will not be able to re-open cases simply as and when they like, he would be prepared to put in the word "definite". On that basis, the word "definite" was inserted. The Honourable Minister has not given us any indication as to why it has become necessary to drop the word "definite" and to make it general. If he had given an indication as to how many cases of escapement of assessment could not be roped in because of the presence of the word "definite" we would certainly be prepared to support the Government on the draft as it has been introduced, but no such indication has been given.

Another thing that I would like the attention of the House drawn to is that there seems to be no definite difference between an honest assessee and a dishonest assessee. The dishonest assessee has been dealt with or intended to be dealt with by clause (a) of Section 34 and the honest one in clause (b). But if an assessee files a return and files the particulars of his profits etc. and even if he produces before the Income-Tax Officer his account books and other evidence from which material facts could, with due diligence, have been discovered by the Income-Tax Officer, even then he will be branded as a dishonest person. If you look at the explanation to section 34, it says: "Production before the Income Tax Officer of account books or other evidence from which material facts could with due diligence have been discovered by the Income-tax officer, will not necessarily amount to disclosure within the meaning of this section." Therefore, what is required of the assessee is not only to file the return, not only to produce his account books and other materials, but supply also the brain to the Income-tax Officer. What is now happening is that certain persons are able to evade the tax not because they try to do so, but because the Income-tax Officer has not got the time to apply his mind to the case or does not care to look into the account books. If the assessee has filed the return, and produced all the books of account that he has, and other material facts from which with due diligence the Income-tax Officer can come to conclusions, I cannot see how a person can be called dishonest. In view of these circumstances, I wish that the Honourable the Finance Minister will consider that there must be some stage where a case decided may be final and there must be some limit beyond which a case should not be re-opened.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Mr. Speaker, Sir, I rise to support the motion made by my honourable friend the Finance Minister. In doing so I feel that the arguments adduced by my honourable friend Mr. Himatsingka are not relevant at this stage. They are really arguments that should have been advanced at the time the Bill was referred to the Select Committee. I have no idea of what my honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava said about this Bill, though I can glean from his speech that he also went into the fundamentals of the question and I do not know if he had a right to do so in view of the fact that he was a member of the Select Committee even though he had appended a minute of dissent to the report of the Select Committee.

I would like to take up some of the points raised by my honourable friend Mr. Himatsingka. In the first place, he followed more or less the scheme of the amendments that he has given notice of, and the first thing that he tackled was about section 33-B. He holds section 33-B must be more or less confined to cases where there have been errors of law. I do not think that such an eminent solicitor and businessman like my honourable friend should not have read paragraph 7 of the Investigation Commission's Report,.....

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: I have looked into that carefully.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari:which really formed the basis of this particular [Shri T. T. Krishnamachari] legislation before the House. In fact, the Investigation Commission after discussing the need for expanding the scope of section 34 as it stands today, have also sought to provide for certain cases which ought not to form the point of propriety be re-opened under section 34. In fact, if section 33-B is taken out, I do not think the interests of those people whom my honourable friend seeks to represent will be well served. Paragraph 7 of the Investigation Commission's Report says: "We, however, agree that it is possible to maintain that an assessment should not be allowed to be reopened under section 34 merely on the ground that the Income-tax Officer who made the assessment has misunderstood or misapplied the law or that a different view of the law or of the facts is possible." This, I think, more or less, answers the questions raised by my honourable friend Mr. Himatsingka.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Instead of being an answer, that supports what I have said.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: I suppose there may be different interpretations of what is written in this language which is a foreign language to all of us. As I understand the language the Commission felt that section 34 should not be used for purposes which are contemplated to be used under section 33-B and they specifically added "or that a different view of the law or of the facts is possible" and this shows that they did not mean to exclude cases which have a factual basis from being dealt with under section 33-B. In fact, if I had the misfortune of being the Finance Minister, I would have said, if the House does not want section 33-B, delete it, and nobody would be worse off except perhaps the interests whom my honourable friend seeks to serve.

In regard to section 34, it has a history. My honourable friend said that I was here in 1939; I was not. I was here in 1945 when an identical question was taken up. I am quite familiar with the arguments. In fact, I would like to mention as I have mentioned before when the Bill was referred to the Select Committee that it was the opinion of the late lamented Mr. Bhulabhai Desai that section 34 should not be left as it is in the Act. The Taxation Investigation Commission merely echoes the opinion of that well known lawyer when they say in paragraph 6 of their report: "We are unable to agree with the argument that there is no need or justification for the amendment of section 34. The 1939 legislation (as interpreted by the Courts) is unduly restrictive....." And, that is exactly the reason why they have recommended that section 34 should be amended. The very words which my honourable friend have quoted are the words which have done mischief to the revenue to be obtained through the Income Tax Department. Every legal decision has gone against the Department by reason of the fact that a Judge can interpret section 34 and hold that no definite information has now been brought to light. Section 34 as it now is reads: "If in consequence of definite information which has come into his possession the Income-tax Officer discovers that income, profits or gains chargeable to Income-tax have escaped assessment in any year....." The inability of the Officer to precisely tie himself up to the definiteness is the reason why this Commission has sought to draft a very long clause—section 34 is a very long clause—so that all points of view can be met. One point that my honourable friend has suggested is not true for the reason that the Commission has felt that a distinction must be made, as between a dishonest assessee by reason of the fact that it was not within his knowledge that there was any defect or mis-statement in his return should be treated in a different way, and a person who has deliberately submitted a false return. I think that is a matter going into the fundamentals. When the House accepted the motion for Select Committee, more or less it gave its approval to the fact that section 34 had to be amended and the Select Committee has more or less accepted the recommendations of the Investigation Commission.

In regard to the other clauses about which my honourable friend spoke, I am glad he has raised this question of an action under section 33B being barred under certain circumstances and probably he is going to move his amendment to section 33B. The other question is regarding the explanation to section 34 (1). He said that this explanation should not be there. The explanation reads like this: "Production before the Income Tax Officer of account books or other evidence from which material facts could, with due diligence have been discovered by the Income-tax Officer will not necessarily amount to disclosure within the meaning of this section." I am afraid this is an argument which will not stand scrutiny. What happens in actual practice is that very often, the Income Tax Officer wants all the account books to be produced and in the order that is issued to the assessee all possible books are mentioned. If the Income Tax Officer feels any necessity for going into the books, he goes into certain items in one or two books. If the assessee is a partner of a firm, he takes up his personal account, his drawings account and checks them up with his Bank account; one or two such items are checked. There is no obligation cast on the Income-tax Officer to conduct an entire audit. What my honourable friend wants is that the Income-tax Officer must conduct an audit with regard to all the books of account placed before him. That is the only way in which this Explanation can be avoided. I do not think my Honourable friend's friends whom he represents would like that position. If all the books of an assessee are taken by the Income-Tax Officer and notwithstanding the fact that his account has been audited and certified by an auditor they want to run right through the whole scheme, take about a month or two over it and keep all his staff there, naturally every assessee will complain; and that is the position that my honourable friend wants to be brought into existence. I would certainly recommend to the Finance Minister to take away this Explanation provided the House will sanction perhaps a lot more of staff for the Income-tax department and people will not grumble that their account books are kept with the officers for two and three months. I happen to know that these complaints are already made and people do complain that their account books are called for and kept for a long time and people do resent any meticulous examination of accounts except in so far as certain particulars are concerned, particularly when they are audited accounts. But when we resent any action by the department in this regard we cannot object to an Explanation of this sort which merely says that the fact of all the books being in possession of the Income-tax Officer, the assessee having been summoned to produce and kept on the table of the officer does not mean that there has been a full disclosure. It is open to people to say at any time that he has produced all the books and the Income-tax officer could have looked into them. That is the position. The whole question is does the mere fact of production of all books mean that all the facts have been placed before the officer concerned—the House will have to recognise that all assessments are made on imperfect data. If all assessments are to be made on after scrutiny of all data available we will have to have an enormous Income-tax Department and the harassment of the assessee will also to that extent be proportionately greater. The officers have to accept certain facts make certain cursory checks. Later on either by reason of diligence on the part of the Income-tax Officer or by reason of cross-checks of some other account revealing new information or by reason of the fact that an employee of the assessee having been dismissed is prepared to vouchsafe information, there is an opportunity for reopening the matter. And if that contingency occurs certain cases can be dealt with under section 34 as that is now contemplated to be amended. In certain other type of cases where there is justification for reopening a summary procedure is envisaged. So the position is that if you grant that section 34 has to be amended, as I think the House will grant, I think the scheme in its entirety has to be preserved. The mere question of an amendment here seeking to weaken the powers of the Income-tax Officer, in effect bringing back the position to what it was in the Act as it was passed in 1939 means that you are defeating the very purpose of this particular amendment, and all the work done by this House in the Select Committee will be more or less rendered nugatory. So I feel that all the arguments advanced by my honourable friend Mr. Himatsingka go to the root of the problem as to whether we require the amendment of section 34 or not. His objection is to clothing the Income-tax Officer with any powers by which he can rectify his mistakes and remedy the position so far as Government revenue is concerned. His objection is to the providing of summary revision by giving powers under section 33-B to the Commissioner in which case the House has merely to brush aside those objections because the House has already ratified the principles of the amending Bill.

Sir, I feel there is no substance in the objections raised and the Finance Minister's motion has to be supported.

श्री रामसहाय : स्पीकर महोदय : मुझे यह निवेदन करना है कि यह जो तरमीमी बिल इस इनकमटैक्स ऐक्ट में आया है उस में मुखालफत तो नहीं करना चाहता हूं। लेकिन मैं एक बात हाऊस के सामने जरूर रख देना चाहता हूं और वह यह है कि जितनी भी तरमीमें इस वक्त आ रही हैं और जितने भी बिल अभी आ रहे हैं उन सब का मतलब हम यह देख रहे हैं कि हमारे मिनिस्टर साहबान अपने आफिसरस को ज्यादा से ज्यादा पावर्स (powers) देने की फ्रिक में रहते हैं। लेकिन मैं देखता हूं कि जो करप्शन (corruption) प्रतिदिन बढ़ रहा है, उस पर वह कन्ट्रोल नहीं पा रहे हैं। लेकिन फिर भी अपने आफिसरस साहबान को एक लाइसेंस के तरीके पर ऐसे अख्तियारात देते जा रहे हैं जो उनको करप्शन बढ़ाने में सहायक होते हैं। अभी कल जो फैक्ट्री बिल पास किया है और मौजूदा ऐक्ट में जो सुधार किये गये हैं मैंने देखा कि उनमें लेबर मिनिस्टर साहिब ने जितने भी सुधार किये हैं वह सब के सब चीफ इन्स्पेक्टर की मरसी (mercy) पर छोड़ दिये गये हैं ऐसी हालत में उन सुधारों का क्या उपयोग हो सकेगा यह नहीं कहा जा सकता। जहां मिल मालिक और कैपिटलिस्ट्स (capitalists) बड़े बड़े आदमियों को खरीद सकते हैं वहां यह छोटे छोटे अफसरों को क्यों नहीं खरीद सकेंगे, यह बात समझ में नहीं आसकती है। फिर भी इस किस्म के अख्तियारात उनको दिया जाना कहां तक मुनासिब होगा। मैं समझता हूं कि हाऊस इस परिस्थिति में नहीं है कि जो अमेंडमेंट (amendment) हमारे सामने आये हैं उनको किसी तरह से नामंजूर करें और पास न करें। लेकिन फिर भी मैं मिनिस्टर साहब की तव्वजह दिलाना चाहता हूँ, श्रीमान के जरिये कि वह इस बात पर गौर करें और इस बात पर अच्छी तरह से ध्यान दें कि वह किस तरह से इस बढ़ते हुए करप्शन को रोक सकते हैं। ऐसे अख्तियारात जहां तक हो इन आफिसरस को कम से कम दिये जायें। इनकमटैक्स डिपार्टमेंट में करप्शन के बारे में जितनी भी बातें जनता में फैल रही हैं उन सब को ध्यान में रखते हुए इस बिल में कोई ऐसी बात नहीं है जिससे यह बताया जा सके कि इतने बड़े बड़े अख्तियारात अफसरों को क्यों दिये जायें। कमीशन की रिपोर्ट जरूर इस

किस्म की है कि उनको अख्तियारात दिये जायें। मैं मानता हूं कि कमीशन ने बहुत गौर करके उन सब अख्तियारात को देना तजवीज़ किया। लेकिन फिर भी हमें यह जरूर देख लेना चाहिये कि इस किस्म के अख्तियारात का नतीजा क्या होगा। यह बात जरूर है कि बहुत से बेईमान व्यापारी इस तरह से टैक्स इवैड (evade) करते हैं, लेकिन जब तक कि कानून में कोई बेईमान करार न दिया जाये, हमें उसे इमानदार ही मानना पड़ता है और जब हम उसे इमानदार मानते हैं, तब हमें ऐसे कानून बनाने में इस बात का जरूर ध्यान रखना चाहिये कि जो इनोसेंट (innocent) आदमी है, वह उसकी गिरफ्त में न आसके। इन चन्द तरमीमों का यह नतीजा होने वाला है कि जो इमानदार है, या बेईमान है उन सब के सिर पर एक नंगी तलवार आठ साल या चार साल तक लटकती रहेगी उनको यह शंका बनी रहेगी कि नहीं मालूम कब उनके ऊपर क्या खतरा आ सकता है। सातवें सेक्शन में जो तरमीम की गई है, उसमें भी जो अख्तियारात दिये गये हैं उनके बारे में यह अर्ज करना है कि ख्वाह वह आफिसरस की ही गलती क्यों न हो लेकिन इस में व्यापारी या टैक्स देने वाले ही उस गलती को भुगतेंगे और उनके ही खिलाफ एक्शन (action) लिया जायगा। तो मैं पृष्ठना चाहता हूं कि क्या यह एक तरीके से लाइसेंस देना नहीं है कि आफिसरस (officers) मनमानी कार्यवाई करें। मैं हाऊस का ज्यादा टाईम न लेकर मिनिस्टर साहब की तव्वजह इस तरफ जरूर दिलाऊंगा कि वह इस बात पर गौर करें कि ऐसे अख्तियारात ज्यादा से ज्यादा उपयोगी हो सकें और ऐसे अफसर रखें जो इन अख्तियारात को सही इस्तमाल कर सकें गद्दी मेरा कहना है।

(English translation of the above speech).

Shri Pam Sahai (Gwalior State): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I do not want to oppose this Bill which seeks to amend the Income-Tax Act. But one thing which I would like to mention for the information of the House is that we find in almost all the Bills and amendments which have been placed before us during these days that the Honourable Ministers are always anxious to arm their officers with powers to the maximum extent possible. But I notice that they are unable to control the corruption which is increasing every day, and even then they are giving powers to their officers in the form of a licence which helps them to indulge in corruption. I find from the Factory Bill passed yesterday and the amendments made in the existing act, that all the amendments which have been moved by the Honourable the Labour Minister leave the things at the mercy of the Chief Inspector of Factories. Under such circumstances, it cannot be said, as to what useful purpose will these amendments serve? It is not all comprehensible as to why the mill-owners and capitalists who can buy the big people will not be able to purchase these petty officers. How far then it would be advisable to vest them with such powers? I realize that the House is not in a position to reject the amendments which have been placed before it for one reason or the other. But even then I would like to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister through you, Sir, that he should earnestly consider over the matter and devise ways and means for checking the corruption which is on the increase. Such powers should be given to these officers to the minimum possible extent. Keeping in view the feelings which exist in the minds of the people in regard to the corruption in the Income-tax Department, this Bill does not mention any justifications for giving such wide powers to the officers. The Report of the Commission is surely in favour of giving them the powers. I admit that the Commission decided to give all these powers after careful consideration, but even then we must see as to what will be the result of giving such powers? There is no doubt that there are many dishonest businessmen who evade payment of the tax in some manner. But unless he is held to be dishonest under the law, we will have to treat him as an honest person. When we treat him as an honest, we should invariably bear this in mind while framing such legislation, that the innocent persons are not roped in. The result of these few amendments is likely to be that the sword of Damocles will be kept hanging over the assessee for all these years, and they will all a'long be exposed to fear and danger. In regard to the amendment made in Clause (7) and the power given in pursuance thereof, I may submit that even though there may be an error on the part of the Income Tax Officer, yet the businessman or the assessee will be penalised and action will be taken against them. Is it not, therefore, may I ask, in a way, granting a licence to the officers to act arbitrarily? Without taking much time of the House, I would like to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister to this aspect and request him to ensure the best possible use of these powers and to appoint such officers who would exercise these powers in a proper way. This is all I have to say.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Sir, I support the motion for consideration of this Bill. Sir, various taxes are collected at the Centre and the people who pay these taxes in various forms do not complain at all about them. Under Customs ad valorem duties are imposed and no one complains about the decision of the officers who assess the value of the goods. From Customs we thus get 50 or 60 crores of rupees. And no one has ever made any complaint about that either in this House or elsewhere. Then there are the excise duties on matches and sugar and various other industries like tobacco, etc. There is absolutely no complaint as regards these excise duties; or if there have been complaints the assessee is not as vociferous as the income-tax assessee. But all the complaint is about this income-tax because the assessee wants the right to evade but not the liability to pay. I would have stoutly opposed these powers being given if it were an alien Government. This matter was brought up when Sir James Grigg was Finance Member. The then Leader of the Opposition Mr. Bholabhai Desai was in favour of giving this power even to that Government. He was one of the foremost lawyers in India with a large income-tax practice and he knew the devices by which the tax-dodgers have been successfully evading payment of the tax. In income-tax there is an exemption up to Rs. 3,000, and people with larger incomes have to contribute. Should they not contribute? Should the poor people only contribute? The Provincial Governments levy taxes on every inch of land; land revenue is collected and there is no exemption there. But here exemption is granted to people who have an income up to Rs. 3,000 a year. There are some other persons who receive only salaries. They have no houses or lands and to the extent of Rs. 3,000 they do not pay any tax at all and at the same time the salary earners get all the benefits provided by the Government.

Having regard to the fact that more than 80 crores remained uncollected in the shape of dues last year and the year before last, the Government is pledged to appoint a special Commission to go into these matters in respect of those persons who have made enormous profits during the war period and who have failed to pay their just dues. Under these circumstances, this Bill has been brought in under a new setting where our own Government is anxious to get more revenue by legitimate methods. Of course, there must be some safeguards. In the Penal Code there are certain sections in which punishment is provided for 7 years. Ordinarily the Magistrate's powers are limited but where even larger powers are granted, even then they do not apply the seven year rule to every case. Likewise, the officers will take care to see that the assessments have been made for a long number of years. They would also, I am sure set a limit for reopening, except in case of a glaring fraud. The present Finance Minister's predecessor when in office gave an assurance in sub-committee. There was an attempt to refuse cases for revision and only those cases could be reopened where the matter involved was Rs. 20,000. If the Honourable Minister who was then in charge was not prepared to accept such a rigid demarcation of Rs. 20,000 there might have been cases where great fraud might have been perpetrated and though the tax he was bound to pay was less than Rs. 20,000, there was no justification to leave aside such tax dodgers. That would be placing a premium on fraud. Up to an extent we are prepared to tolerate it. We are not prepared to tolerate it beyond that. Therefore, I understand the difficulties of the Department and Minister in imposing a rigid demarcation of that kind. I am sure the Honourable Minister would not allow trivial cases to be placed before the Commission or by way of revision allow it to be reopened under Section 34. I am sure he will give such an assurance to the House if such an assurance is necessary.

I would also say that the provisions in various ways have improved the present Bill and made it as harmless as possible. My friend who spoke against some of the provisions of the Bill as oppressive ought not to forget that the gentleman who presided, or who was in charge of the Bill at an earlier stage was not an ordinary commoner or poor man but one of the richest men in this country. And yet, he, Mr. Chetty, allowed those provisions to stand. He did not raise his voice against them. On the other hand we thought that we must in the interests of taxpayers, to avoid oppression, have to make certain provisions reducing their powers. He agreed wholeheartedly. Under those circumstances, we are thoroughly satisfied that the person who has to pay has to be put under those restrictions lest he should avoid payment of tax.

There were one or two other matters which arose in the Select Committee. One was as regards the question of law. I am afraid both my honourable friend Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava and Shri Himatsingka have misunderstood the position.

Mr. Speaker: If the honourable member is going on to further points, we had better adjourn and re-assemble at Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half-Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, I was referring in the morning to the powers of the Commissioner under Section 33(b). I stand corrected. I find that the Investigation Commission has suggested that interference by the Commissioners should be only on matters of law so far as revision is concerned and that reopening of an assessment already made within a period of four or eight years must be only on a question of fact. But under the Select Committee report power is given to the Commissioner to revise an assessment both on matters of law and on matters of fact. Also the income-tax officer who was responsible for the original assessment is given power to reopen an assessment both on questions of law as also on fact. It is for the House to consider whether it is desirable or not. In this respect we are no doubt going a little beyond the recommendations of the Income-tax Investigation Commission. The demarcation of the line between fact and law is very narrow. Inference from a set of facts has also been held to be a question of law. Under these circumstances even if power is given to the Commissioner to revise an assessment made by an income-tax officer both on a question of law and on a question of fact, because a lot of revenue is involved if the assessment is allowed to stand, personally I do not see any objection to the course. If any lower authority than the Commissioner is given the power to revise an assessment, it may not be acceptable but the Commissioner would not ordinarily revise trumped up cases. He will revise only in extraordinary cases where by an oversight or by any irregular procedure the income-tax officer has caused a considerable loss to revenue. So I do not see any reason why the Commissioner ought not to have that power. Likewise the income-tax officer may be allowed to re-open an assessment both on a question of fact and on a question of law. In this respect I do not think the Commission's recommendation should be the last word. They have no doubt said that hitherto there is no such provision and that only on a question of law there may be revision but it is open to us to go further and give power to the Commissioner to revise assessments both on a question of law and on fact. Personally I am in favour of the provision but it must be acknowledged that it goes beyond the recommendation of the Commission.

As regards the pecuniary limit below which the Commissioner ought not to interfere, it is not specifically stated in the Act. I am sure instructions would be given to the Commissioner and the income-tax authorities regarding that.

The two years period that is given for the purpose of revision by the Commissioner is not too long, for this reason that there may be a number of cases disposed of by an income-tax officer in each district and normally they will be looked into once a year by the Investigating Income-tax Assistant Commissioner. Wherever he finds that there are faults he has to report to the Commissioner and this will take a certain amount of time. To curtail the period of two years to one month or six months, which is the time allowed for assesses to prefer appeals would put too much strain upon the income-tax authorities. This power of revision should be exercised and not merely remain on paper and if it is to be used this period of two years is not too long. (An Honourable Member: "What about the suspense on the part of the assessee?") The suspense is always there for a period of four years. It is no doubt true that in the existing law it is open to the income-tax authorities to keep an assessment for a year pending for a period of four years. Even the original assessment they can keep on pending for four years. That is also a hardship. I know a case where a merchant submitted his return and he also said that he and his sons had divided from one another and on that basis he had submitted his return. The partition was not accepted for four years by the income-tax authority and at the end an assessment for all the four years was levied against him. The accounts were also not accepted by the income-tax officer. I might illustrate this with some details so that you may be able to see the hardship caused to the assessee. In the first year the man with a joint family had an income of about four or five lakhs. When he had a partition from his sons the income would be divided between himself and his four sons. The income-tax would therefore be Rs. 20,000 or 30,000. On this basis he submitted his return. It is open to the income-tax officer to decide whether he should accept the partition or not but he kept the case pending for a period of four years and at the end of the fourth year he refused to accept the partition. So the man had to pay not only income-tax on his own earnings but upon the earnings of all the members of his family. At the end of four years the income-tax officer refused to accept the partition or the accounts and imposed an assessment of 20 lakhs, where normally the return that the man submitted would entail a payment of Rs. 1 lakh. What the poor man had done was that he had deposited the admitted amount and then he was assessed and asked to pay 20 lakhs. In a district place if a man has Rs. 200 or has two meals a day he is considered richer than the man who has only one meal. So richness is rather a relative term. During the war if the man had one oil crusher he had two or three more installed and he would have earned not more than 3 lakhs. In the whole district the talk went round that this man had suddenly become enormously rich. He had not become as rich as Rockefeller. He may have earned ten lakhs or let it be even 15 lakhs. But suddenly he is asked to pay Rs. 20 lakhs. The income-tax officer was not prepared to accept either the partition or the man's return of income. He asked the district collector to realise the sum, who in his turn passed an order for the attachment of all the man's moveable and immoveable properties and all his assets in the banks were frozen and even his clothes and utensils were attached.

Now 8,000 gunny bags were sold in public auction as an attachment for 4 pies per bag. Do you dream of such a contingency anywhere? Ten motor lorries which he purchased at a cost of Rs. 10,000 were sold away for a song. His silver plates and other household things were removed to the Tehsildar's office and were sold in public auction for Rs. 1,000. Is the value of 20 lakhs worth of goods Rs. 1,000 and on top of that on the old man 65 years old and the mother 85 years old, a warrant was issued against them for paying the balance. This naturally will irritate anyone and if my friends like Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava get up and say that is an oppressive case of legislation, I have to agree with them. As a lawyer you know that even with respect to small cases they are divided over a range of judicial officers, the Munsiff or second class subordinate judge has got pecuniary jurisdiction over Rs. 300 and not more. The other subordinate judge has jurisdiction over Rs. 5,000; then there is unlimited jurisdiction. Now with respect to judicial officers when such limits are imposed with respect to the Income-tax Officer, there is absolutely no question and he need not accept any accounts and an Income-tax Officer who draws a salary of Rs. 250 can deal with cases ranging from Rs. 100 to 10 crores, call any man to order, enter any house at any time and refuse to accept the account and on his volition impose one crore of rupees. Reopening of an assessment within a period of 4 or 8 years and not giving the assessee notice—these are no doubt the other picture before him. These are the inconveniences and that is why there has been so much opposition by members who would otherwise have gladly supported the Government. The choice is between the two, the honest man ought not to be oppressed and the dishonest man ought not to be let off. Therefore, more than ordinary prudence and care is necessary. The moment, it is said, you take a small stick and call it a son-in-law, immediately it begins to jump, that is the proverb in our parts; he arrogates all the powers to himself, oppresses the daughter and tries to squeeze the father-in-law. Likewise an Income-tax Officer, call him an Income-tax Officer—that will be enough. We poor mortals can never escape. There is no meaning in saying that every industrialist is bad or every Income-tax Officer is bad. The powers will certainly corrupt any particular man. In these circumstances, I would appeal that as early as possible and within the term of my honourable friend, Mr. Neogy he must so devise means whereby if an Income-tax Officer does not accept accounts and the assessment is beyond a particular amount, it ought not to be allowed. He ought not to be given the power. Then a higher officer should impose the assessment, should levy the assessment or decide it, and the limits of pecuniary jurisdiction must be placed over the authority of an Income-tax Officer and Assistant Income-tax Commissioner and so on. That is not purely within the scope of this Bill. Under the circumstances, I need not pursue that matter further. In view of these dangers I am only appealing to my friend in order that he may take care to see that such powers are circumscribed.

[Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar]

It is true that in section 34 accounts are to be re-opened within a period of 8 years only in case of fraud and in other cases within 4 years. My honourable friend's predecessor, Mr. Chetty said he would see to it that all assessments are made hereafter within the year for which the amounts are due or at any rate not more than two years, but why on earth should the Income-tax authorities alone keep in assessments pending with them for long periods? It is said they have not got sufficient staff or establishment with them and sometimes the assessee do not return proper accounts in time. If they have not got sufficient establishment, they must increase their staff. I do not see any reason why on account of want of staff the people should suffer. So far as the assessee taking time, the authority can on the facts available come to any conclusion. In every case progressive efforts must be made to see that within the year of assessment, within the year of charge the assessment should be settled. In short no assessment paper ought to be kept pending beyond two years. That provision also can be made, but I only refer to it in this connection, so that my honourable friends need not be terror-stricken, but this is a very dangerous provision in the hands of small Income-tax Officers and I am sure the Honourable Minister will take all these matters into consideration and will bring in an amending Bill to rectify them. As it is, I feel that sufficient safeguards have been placed by the Select Committee and I support the motion for consideration.

Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Bihar: General): The question be now put.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Mr. Speaker, there has not been a full discussion.

Mr. Speaker: About half a dozen speakers have already spoken.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: The House consists of 300 members.

Mr. Speaker: May be; I find they are practically repeating the same argument.

The question is:

"That the question be put."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: The debate has traversed a wider ground than I could ever anticipate. In many of the speeches, the detailed provisions of the different clauses were criticised, a practice which I cannot recall to my mind as being the uniform practice of this House. I am very thankful to some of my honourable friends who are members of the Select Committee who have defended the report and they have made my task lighter on that account. There are, however, a few general points on which I should like to make a few submissions. I detected, at least I seemed I detected a sort of a note of want of confidence in the Investigation Commission, as expressed by one honourable member of the House. May I once again remind the House that this Investigation Commission has made this report in the fulfilment of the statutory obligation which this House has placed upon that Commission. It is not right therefore on the part of any honourable member in this House to challenge the authority even indirectly of such a body of persons. Sir, a good deal has been said as regards the harassment that is caused to the smaller assessee and a peculiar suggestion has come from a member of the Select Committee itself, my honourable and esteemed friend, Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, that there should be a limit, a limit of Rs. 20,000 which should represent a kind of immunity from any penal action under this Act.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I am afraid the Honourable Minister has misunderstood me. I only suggested that general instructions should be issued to the Income-tax Officers in this regard.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: It very much comes to the same thing, whether we give a charter to the tax evader in the body of the law or I give an undertaking in this House that if a person cheats the Government revenue up to Rs. 20,000, he is perfectly safe and that I am going to carry out my honourable friend's request by way of a departmental circular. I am afraid I am not in a position to give any such undertaking. Reference has been made to an assurance which my predecessor is supposed to have given on this particular point. I am afraid I am at a disadvantage in this matter because I had to take this up at very short notice only the other day and when I referred to my honourable colleague on my left, the Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar, I found that according to his recollection—and my honourable colleague had presided over the Select Committee.....

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi (East Punjab: General): He was not presiding over it at that time.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I stand corrected. Whatever it is, from the point of view of public policy and from the point of view of the reputation of this Government and of this House, I am not in a position to give any assurance of that kind. But I am prepared to give this assurance, namely, that this measure, and particularly the clause that my honourable friend has in mind, would be utilised only for the purpose of safeguarding public revenues and that petty cases would not be raked up. This is all the assurance I can give. As a matter of fact, it would be physically impossible to delve into thousands and thousands of cases for the purpose of utilising the provisions of this particular clause. There must be some line drawn somewhere, but we must limit it to the judgment of the Commissioner himself.

Sir, reference was made to certain principles of law. Res judicata was mentioned, as also limitation, finality and all that. Let me tell my honourable friend who is himself a distinguished lawyer, that it would be absurd to claim that the principle of res judicata should be applied to a fiscal measure of this kind. This principle has never been accepted with reference to a fiscal measure of this kind in any part of the world.

As regards finality, the Investigation Commission themselves recognize that there must be some limitation to this doctrine of finality in a measure of this kind. You cannot have an absolute finality. As a matter of fact my honourable friend well knows that in many other countries of the world there is absolutely no finality of any kind in these matters. As a matter of fact the time-limit you are fixing is unknown in some systems of law.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: On a point of information, Sir, the Honourable Minister said that petty cases would not be raked up. May I know what he means by 'petty cases'? They will certainly be assessable cases.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: If some persons altogether escape assessment they would certainly come within the purview of this particular clause.

Then, Sir, my honourable friend Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar indulged in jibes at the Income-tax Officers.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: What does the honourable member mean? I am really sorry that my honourable friend who is a good parliamentarian and who has been here for so long should misunderstand what I said; he ought not to have done so. While supporting this measure and the powers that are necessary, I only said that there are extreme cases where these things are done. I do not know, Sir, if it is proper on the part of my honourable friend to say that I 'indulged' and then 'in jibes'.

[Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar]

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I did not know that the word 'indulge' is an unparliamentary word.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I can also use words which are parliamentary but which are offending.

Mr. Speaker: There will be no end to that. What I understood the honourable member, Mr. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, to suggest was—I am putting it of course in my own words—that, just as we have certain limits in civil jurisdiction namely that smaller suits may be tried by certain judicial officers and that bigger suits may be tried by men higher up in the service, similarly, I think, his suggestion was that so far as assessments are concerned, estimated liabilities to the extent of Rs. 5,000 approximately should be tried by certain Income-tax Officers, cases involving liabilities higher than Rs. 5,000 but less than say Rs. 50,000 should be tried by another class and so on; and I think he was suggesting Income-tax Officers of I, II and III class. He was making suggestions on these lines. And he said that while in civil jurisdiction, we are not conferring jurisdiction in respect of the whole subject to the lowest subordinate judge, here, instead of following that kind of principle, we are giving the fullest jurisdiction even to the lowest of Income-tax Officers.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: That is so, Sir. That is a constructive suggestion. But I had in mind the rather colourful imagery of the stick behaving as the son-in-law which he utilised for the purpose of supporting this particular suggestion. Not merely that. He took quite a few minutes in describing the acts of particular Income-tax Officers of putting up to sale property worth thousands and thousands for a few annas, and so on and so forth. But may I tell my honourable friend that this body of officials has got to do a very very unpopular duty and that they deserve well of this country?

Some Honourable Members: No, no.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I thought that our attitude towards our own officers, who are our own flesh and blood, would have changed with the achievement of freedom.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: No, they have not changed.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: But in reply to that argument I do not want to—I shall use again that expression with reference to myself—indulge in an exhaustive account of the very many distasteful practices which the assesses resort to for the purpose of defeating public revenue.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: The assesses are more honest than the Income-tax Officers.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: As regards the question whether the Investigation Commission intended facts, as also law, to be brought within the purview of the proposed section 33B, my honourable friend Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari has dealt with that point, but I am afraid the argument has been lost on my honourable friend from Calcutta. My honourable friend from Madras read out a portion of paragraph 7 of the Report of the Investigation Commission where they say as follows:

"We, however, agree that it is possible to maintain that an assessment should not be allowed to be reopened under section 34 merely on the ground that the Income-tax Officer who made the assessment has misunderstood or misapplied the law or that a different view of the law or of the facts is possible."

My honourable friend did not read the rest of the paragraph. This portion really contains the genesis of the proposed section 33B. After mentioning the difficulty in providing for this class of cases under section 34, the Commission go on to suggest:

"We, therefore, prefer to give the Commissioner a power of revision."

In what cases? In the class of cases that the Commission referred to in the beginning. That is to say, they say "well, it may be rather difficult under section 34 to deal with such class of cases; we therefore suggest that a power of revision should be granted to the Commissioner for dealing with such category of cases". That is really the argument which my honourable friend Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari wanted to adduce in reply to my honourable friend Mr. Prabhudayal Himatsingka.

Sir, I was rather interested to hear from my honourable friend Shri Ram Sahai about the woes of the assesseees and the oppression practised on them by the Income-tax Department. I understand, my honourable friend comes from an Indian State where there has been no income-tax all these years. It is common knowledge, and I claim some amount of personal knowledge also in this matter, that the Indian States have been a paradise for the black-marketeer and the tax-dodger. It is because of the ready asylum which the Indian States have so far provided for these enemies of society that they have been able to advance some of their financial and personal interests to a certain extent. I hope that hereafter we will be getting a greater degree of co-operation from the Indian States in this matter and that this shameful chapter will be closed.

Sir, I have nothing further to say.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, and the Business Profits Tax Act, 1947, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: Now we shall take the Bill clause by clause.

The question is:

"That clauses 2 and 3 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): Sir, I am moving amendment No. 2. I move:

"That part (a) of clause 4 of the Bill be omitted."

Sir, I do not want to make a long speech in favour of this very obvious amendment. You may remember that in the Finance Bill a clause similar to this was incorporated. It was discussed in the Select Committee 3 p.m. on the Finance Bill and then it was found that the implications of giving exemptions for the municipal taxes should be properly investigated before any such step could be taken.

Sir, this clause means that up to 20 per cent. of the rents received from urban house property may be exempted from income-tax. If you take the big cities of Bombay and Calcutta it may mean almost an exemption of 20 per cent. of the total income-tax now paid by these assesseees. In these days when everyone is speaking about inflation, about the need to balance the Central Budget, of levying more taxes on the poor peasants, I think it is a wholly unwarranted procedure to lose taxes which are now coming into the Central revenues. No absolute necessity has been proved for this particular exemption. I understand there is a case pending before the Privy Council where the contention that even under the existing law this exemption should be given is under inquiry. I think it is not quite proper that the Legislature should legislate when a case is under examination in the highest judicial tribunal

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [30TH AUGUST 194

[Shri K. Santhanam.]

Nobody has told us what will be the actual loss to the revenues by this particular clause. My own estimate is it may be anything from five to six crores of rupees, but it is only if you know the total income-tax derived from urban house property all over the country that you can properly estimate the implications of this clause. In any case, we should not hastily embark upon it. It may also mean that in order to deprive the Central Government of its revenues the municipal taxes will be stepped up. It is said in this clause—“payments which are made for services rendered or amenities supplied”. Sir, the theory of municipal taxation is that almost the entire tax is for these purposes. In many systems of municipal taxation the charges for services are incorporated in the property tax itself and it will be practically impossible to separate these taxes.

Therefore, for all these reasons I move that this part should be deleted and that we should not lose any Central revenue on this account.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I have given notice of some amendments with regard to the deletion of (b). There are two amendments in the Supplementary list—items No. 1 and 2—which deal with the last part of the proposed sub-section (8) and the Proviso. So, it would be proper at this stage to move them.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member has handed over his amendments just today?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: I should prefer the honourable member just to consult the Honourable Minister, and if the amendments are substantially of an agreed nature I would waive the notice. Otherwise I am not inclined to waive notice in the case of amendments tabled at the last moment.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I may suggest that I may move them, and if the Honourable Minister does not accept them I will not press them.

Mr. Speaker: The point is that if he is allowed to move them, that means the waiving of the notice.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: It is not the honourable member alone who is concerned—others also must know the various amendments.

Mr. Speaker: The test which I have always placed before this House in waiving notice is that an amendment proposed should be a substantially agreed amendment, if it does not come in time. Therefore, when I say the Honourable Minister, I take it that he represents generally the view of the House. That is why I said that before I waive notice, I should like to know whether the amendment is acceptable or not.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I had hardly any time to consider it.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I was in difficulty because I did not get a copy of the complete Bill. That was my difficulty. I fully understand and realise the difficulties of the Honourable Minister; that is why I do not claim anything as a matter of right but only as a matter of grace.

Mr. Speaker: I should not be led to show him a grace that is likely to act as a prejudicial precedent.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Yes, Sir. But may I argue those points which I have in mind? They arise out of the amendments suggested by the honourable member because he refers to the deletion of certain parts.

Mr. Speaker: But the amendment refers to the deletion of the entire clause. If the entire clause is deleted he has no grievance?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: No, Sir; that will not serve my purpose.

Mr. Speaker: Then I will put the amendment before the House.

Amendment moved:

“That part (a) of clause 4 of the Bill be omitted.”

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to submit that this part (a) is a very necessary provision.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shri K. Santhanam (one of the Panel of Chairmen).]

This is a very important and necessary part of the Bill. It provides for exemptions in certain cases of compulsory payment. In cases of house property in towns where taxes or other rates are payable, this proposed new sub-clause (viii) provides that amounts payable by the landholder to the municipal or other authorities in taxes etc. should be deducted from the amount of rent. If a man is entitled to get an annual rent of Rs. 5,000 and if he has to pay municipal taxes during the year to the extent of Rs. 1,000, the amount that he will actually get is Rs. 4,000. In all fairness this is the amount which is his income. It is never the gross income that is taken into account in income-tax; the gross income minus proper expenditure and allowances is the income. In the illustration the owner is entitled to an allowance of Rs. 1,000. This is what this sub-clause attempts to provide.

With regard to the Privy Council case it should be remembered that there was no specific provision in the Act and therefore there was the doubt. We are not sitting in judgment over the Privy Council case at all. The courts found a lacuna in the Act itself and so a difference of opinion arose. The proposed sub-clause (viii) removes that lacuna. I submit therefore that this is a very important and necessary exemption and a very just exemption and the amendment would be unjust and would cause hardship.

Sir, with regard to the new sub-clause (viii), the latter part of it is really mischievous. The main part of this sub-clause says that exemption should be given with regard to “any sums paid by the owner on account of local rates or municipal taxes in respect of property”. Remission of this amount should be given. Then there is the important condition: “other than such portion thereof which represents payments made for services rendered or amenities supplied”. I submit, Sir, that municipal taxes are paid for the purpose of rendering service. Water taxes are paid for supplying water. Latrine taxes are paid for cleaning latrines. House taxes are paid partly for repairing roads. All these are services rendered and a necessary and compulsory expenditure which the landlord has to incur and therefore this exception should not be accepted. This exception takes away what is attempted to be given by sub-clause (viii). These taxes must be fully exempted and this mischievous part should be absolutely removed.

Then there is the proviso. The proviso sets a limit to exemption to the extent of 20 per cent., but in some municipalities taxes are to the extent of 22, 23 or 25 per cent. The principle should be whatever is compulsorily payable by the landlord out of the rent must be deducted from the total income and that would give the real income and on that alone tax should be levied. Under these circumstances, if the deletion of the last part of clause (viii) and the proviso is acceptable, then I may formally move it. I should like the Honourable Minister to consider the matter.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: If the amendment is accepted, there is no chance of any further amendment.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: If the whole amendment is accepted, then the whole thing goes phut, but I submit that the principal amendment should not be accepted; on the other hand, the sub-clause should remain and only the mischievous part should be deleted. That is what I ask the Honourable Minister to consider.

There is, again, a small spelling mistake in the proviso. There is the word "authorize". It is spelt with the letter "z". It is usual to spell it with the letter "s".

Mr. Chairman: I suggest the honourable member may leave that alone.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Yes, I do not move it but I only draw attention to it.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Mr. Chairman, Sir, I rise to support the amendment moved, and in doing so, I would like to call the attention of the House to one particular fact which I think must be conceded by every member of this House. Since the Select Committee has reported, the House knows that the economic situation in the country has grown from bad to worse and the Government is now at pains to devise ways and means of curbing inflation. The Department estimates that if this particular sub-clause which is sought to be deleted by this amendment is allowed to remain, at least Rs. 75 lakhs would be pumped into the hands of income-tax payers which will give them additional purchasing power to that extent. If for no other reason, at least for the reason that the Government saves a sum of Rs. 75 lakhs from going into circulation and absorbs it, I think the House has to agree to this amendment.

The other fact which I urged before the Bill went to the Select Committee still holds good. My honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad said that the Privy Council has decided something. It has not.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It is deciding it.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Yes, it is probably deciding. Actually in the Allahabad case of Gopumal Kanyalal—where the High Court has decided that municipal taxes should be treated as expenditure and therefore should not be added to income, the matter is before the Privy Council. After the Privy Council decides, if it decides in favour of the assessee it is open to the Government to review the matter. If the economic situation of the country is by that time such that they can give this concession to the income-tax payer, then they can perhaps either accept the Privy Council's verdict. If the Privy Council decides against the assessee they can re-enact the law in such a manner that it will meet the situation should the Government still want to give this concession. It is also a fact that two other High Courts have held that the present practice is quite in order. I do not think therefore that that is a matter the House need concern itself with at the moment. The very fact of the economic situation itself is in my view enough justification for accepting this amendment.

Sir, it is not true, as my honourable friend put it that there are no deductions so far as rents that are received are concerned. Actually, if my honourable friend recollects, at the time when he makes the income-tax return, he will find on the last page he has to give details of the annual valuation of the house, and the repairs thereon and the income-tax authorities do allow one-sixth of the rent as against repairs and where the house is rented out they allow 5 per cent. on collection of rents. There are thus certain allowances given even as it is and it is not so bad as my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad pictures it to be. I think, Sir, in the present circumstances and in view of the fact that there was a general body of opinion even at the time the Bill went to the Select Committee against this concession which is doubly reinforced by the present economic situation, the House must support this amendment.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: May I ask the honourable member a question? If the country needs more money, that is a case for enhancement of the rates of income-tax. Should we try to cut down a just exemption? That. . . .

Mr. Chairman: I do not think the honourable member is entitled to argue again. He has opposed the amendment and that is all.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Sir, in so far as this clause is concerned, I have not been able to follow the argument put forward by the Honourable Mover. If the present economic conditions require that this allowance should not be made, then I think it ought to be provided that this will not be allowed. So far as the present law is concerned, the Allahabad High Court has allowed this deduction. The case is before the Privy Council and if the Privy Council upholds the decision of the Allahabad High Court, then the position will be that the amount that is paid as municipal taxes will have to be allowed as a deduction in the future assessments. Therefore, if the House wants that this municipal tax should not be allowed as a deduction to the house-owners from the income, then we ought to make a concrete provision that this will not be allowed. Otherwise, the position will be in a flux and if the Privy Council comes to the same decision as the Allahabad High Court the allowance will have to be made. The pendency of the case is no reason why if the Government be of the opinion that it should not be allowed as a deduction they should not clear it up now.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Ever since this tax remission was announced by my predecessor, I have noticed that there has been a wide divergence of opinion in the House as regards the equities of the proposal. As a matter of fact, this particular proposal was included in the Finance Bill and the Select Committee on the Finance Bill actually turned it down on the ground that the Select Committee was not satisfied about the equities of the proposal. Later, it came to be incorporated in this Bill. As my honourable friend Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari has said, the economic situation in the country has meanwhile deteriorated. During the last Budget discussions, my predecessor was in a position to think in terms of tax relief. Now the situation is quite otherwise. From that point of view alone if from no other, we would be justified in accepting this amendment, but there is this added ground, namely, that the whole matter is under consideration by the Privy Council. Now, if the Privy Council decision is given either in favour of a relief of this kind or otherwise, it will be time enough for us to consider whether to accept the Privy Council decision or to undertake legislation to nullify its effect. That is all I can say now and for the time being I would ask my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad to hope for better times when we may once again reconsider the position.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That part (a) of clause 4 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: In view of the fact that the clause has been omitted, my amendment goes automatically.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 4, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 4, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 5 and 6 were added to the Bill.

744 * CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [30TH AUGUST 1948]

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: In view of the statement of the Honourable Minister, I do not want to move the amendment. But, now that clause 33B is being taken up, I would just like to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister.

Mr. Chairman: If you are not moving the amendment, you can speak later on.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister for Law): Sir I beg to move:

"That in clause 7 of the Bill, in clause (a) of sub-section (2) of the proposed section 33B for the words 'in respect of an order of re-assessment', the following be substituted:

'to revise an order of re-assessment made'."

Sir, the reason for moving this amendment can be explained very briefly. The words in the original clause as it stands are "in respect of" and the rest of the amendment really carries over the other words in the original clause. My contention is that the words "in respect of" are much wider than the words "to revise an order of re-assessment". There is no difference of opinion between myself and the Select Committee. The only point is that the words "in respect of" are much wider and consequently they will restrict the action of the Commissioner much more than is intended either by the Government or by the Select Committee. For instance, there may be an order which may be incidental to an order of re-assessment made under section 34, although it may not be an order to revise the order of re-assessment. Let me give an illustration. For instance, under the re-assessment made under section 34, the Commissioner will none-the-less have power to pass an order under section 45 of the Income-tax Act, which deals with the question of the right of an assessee to withhold payment. That is a section under which the Commissioner has the power to make an order that the section will apply both to an ordinary assessment under the original section 22 or under section 34 as enacted by the present Bill. Surely, it is not intended that the right of the commissioner to act under section 45 is not to be in operation merely because we intend that he should not revise an order of re-assessment when he is acting under section 33. It is to save his powers of acting in relation to orders of re-assessment made under section 34, which he is perfectly competent to do, that I propose to take away this wider expression "in respect of" and to confine the provision "to revise an order of re-assessment". There is nothing also in this amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Sir, I had given notice of an amendment for the addition of the words "and is caused by an error of law" after the word 'revenue'. The Honourable the Finance Minister has been pleased to point out paragraph 7 of the Investigation Commission's report and he has expressed his surprise when I said that that refers only to a question of law. I still stand by what I said and I would invite the Honourable Minister's attention to the language. We all agree that section 34 enables cases to be reopened. There is no doubt that a case can be reopened on a question of fact. That has not been disputed at all. The dispute so far as section 34 is concerned is as to whether a case can be reopened on ground of law. Now, Sir, with this background, you please see the report which is as follows: "We, however, agree that it is possible to maintain that an assessment should not be allowed to be reopened under section 34 merely on the ground that the Income-tax Officer who made the assessment has misunderstood or misapplied the law or that a different view of the law or of the facts is possible." Here, a different view of the law or a different interpretation of the facts before the officer is possible.

Certain facts are placed before the Officer and the Income-tax Officer takes a particular view of the law on those facts and that again becomes a question of law. If in such cases a mistake has been made in the application of the law to a particular set of facts, that is what is referred to in that sentence.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: You are reading something into it which is not there.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: That was stated in paragraph 7 of the Investigation Commission's Report: "different view of the law or of the facts", that is, law as applied to the facts.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: You read the whole thing, later on.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: "The proper remedy in such cases, if the Department considers the matter to be one of sufficient importance, is to allow the matter to be set right on appeal or in revision. As we have already observed, many of the replies received by us recognise the appropriateness of such a course. The present Act has in principle recognised the need for such a method of correction in so far as it has provided for an appeal at the instance of the Commissioner against a decision of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner."

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: That is the genesis of section 33B.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Hence, section 33B.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Therefore, it is a question of law that is referred to. Of course, if the Honourable Minister still thinks that this is a question of fact, I leave it there.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I have got only one point to make. As a matter of fact, I would like to draw the attention of the House to this particular paragraph which they would all read. It concedes that there is already a power of revision in the hands of the Commissioner, but that is restricted only in the case where there is an order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. It is not clear, whether in the case of an order made by an Income-tax Officer that power exists. They are giving the power under section 33B to the Commissioner. It is only regularising a position where the legal position is not quite clear. I do not think the position is materially altered by my honourable friend's explanation.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, I only wanted to make one thing clear. This clause says that in certain cases, the assessment would be modified. I wanted to be satisfied that this word modification includes also that an assessment may be reduced or in deserving cases the present assessee may be declared to be illegally assessed and exempted from paying income-tax or entitled to a refund of the tax: whether the modifying includes not only reduction of the assessment, but also entire cancellation of the assessment if it is to be found in the course of the enquiry that the assessee was unjustly assessed. I think that is the object of the Bill. It is only common sense that we find that wherever there is an application for enhancement of sentence before a High Court and when the parties are asked to show cause why it should not be enhanced, and even then the man can show that he was illegally convicted, the High Court not only decreases the sentence but acquits him.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member will see that the word "cancelling" is also there.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: That is cancelling with a view to fresh assessment.

Mr. Chairman: But the right of cancellation and direction is there.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: When the Commissioner finds that a particular assessee was unlawfully assessed—if he is satisfied from the records that he has been unjustly assessed—will he have jurisdiction to completely exempt him from payment of income-tax during that period?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The House will be pleased to consider the new section 33B. It says therein that "the Income-tax Officer is erroneous in so far as it is prejudicial to the interests of the revenue", that is if the authorities find that there is no assessment, not over-assessment—that is the key: then later on it gives them the power to enhance. That is quite intelligible because we are curing under-assessment.

Then we come to the word "modifying". Our object is never to reduce but always to increase the assessment. Then there are the words 'enhancing or modifying': what is the modification in contradistinction to enhancement? We start with the theory that we should not reduce. So the word 'modifying' is ambiguous.

Then as pointed out by you, Mr. Chairman, there is "cancelling the assessment and directing a fresh assessment". But the cancellation is when the assessment is wrong and the whole thing should begin on a fresh basis. This cancellation must be read along with that.

In these circumstances, the stand taken by Mr. Chaudhuri is that the words "or modifying" is wrong in the context. It goes against the very trend of the whole section and must be removed.

I had an amendment to that effect. It was a last minute amendment to the same effect. I hope that the whole matter should be considered.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: As a matter of fact it should be for the Commissioner to interpret those words according to his judgment in the circumstances of a particular case and it may be that the "modification" may not relate to the amount of assessment in any particular instance. It may relate to certain matters of procedure or method. For instance, certain things, like losses are shifted from one year to another. So it would not necessarily lead to a reduction.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: But that reduction is covered.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: That may not be covered. As pointed out the controlling clause is that the power of revision will be exercised only when the interests of revenue have to be protected. That is exactly as my honourable friend, Mr. Ahmad has stated.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: That gives right to reopen. But once reopening is made, then there is the power to protect.

Mr. Chairman: So long as the Court is there, it is for the Court to interpret.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: What is the idea?

Mr. Chairman: The Honourable the Minister has already made that clear.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Does the word "modification" entirely preclude the idea of 'reduction'?

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I say the whole thing is controlled by the words "In so far as it is prejudicial to the interests of the revenue."

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: So far as the purpose of section 33B goes, the Commissioner can only reopen the assessment. He can look at the case only if he finds prima facie that the order is erroneous in so far as it is proju-dicial to the interests of the revenue. If he finds this, he has to give an opportunity to the assessee of being heard and after making or causing to be made such enquiry as he deems necessary he has to pass the final order. After hearing the assessee he can come to a conclusion that as a matter of fact his previous idea was wrong. He can come to the conclusion that as a matter of fact the order of the Income-tax Officer was wrong or was quite right. He can come to the other conclusion that it was neither wrong nor right. But he has not to come to the conclusion at the final stage that the order of Income-Tax Officer is prejudicial to the revenue. All that he has to see after he has heard and made the enquiry is that he makes a just order. There can be no law which would say that he could pass the order of enhancement only. . . .

Mr. Chairman: As the honourable member must know, there can be no speech after the Finance Minister has spoken.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: There is no intention on the part of Government to circumscribe the powers of the Commissioner for interpreting this clause. After all it may be a matter for interpretation by a properly constituted judicial Court.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: What are we here for?

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 7 of the Bill, in clause (a) of sub-section (2) of the proposed section 33B for the words 'in respect of an order of re-assessment', the following be substituted:

'to revise an order of re-assessment made'."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 7, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 7, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I had a drafting amendment into which the draftsman may look.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: With your permission I would like to speak on this clause also if you will give me another opportunity to speak when the clause is put to the House.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member may speak afterwards.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 8 of the Bill, in part (b) of sub-section (1) of the proposed section 34, after the words and figures 'of section 22', occurring in line twelve, the following be inserted:

'and such further particulars as constitute the basis of giving such notice'."

A perusal of clause 8 would indicate that the clause has been materially altered and the real objections which are taken to the present law under section 34 have been removed. But one thing which does not seem to be clearly realized is that it has been divided into two parts (a) and (b). So far as these are concerned, they contemplate two kinds of cases: In the first place cases in which we can say that they pertain to those assesseees who have not been fair towards the Income-tax Department; in regard to (b) cases of honest assesseees who can come within the mischief of the section because of honest mistakes. But in regard to both the law requires that a notice might be served on them and according to the present section the law is that the notice, like the one to be served under the old section 22, might be sent to the assessee. This amendment seeks to say that the notice should contain such further particulars as would constitute the basis for giving notice.

In regard to the case of honest assesseees, my claim is that according to the position propounded in the report as we have understood it, they have not been dishonest. As a matter of fact they have not given inaccurate particulars in their returns. If any new information has come to the Income-tax Officer and he has sought to give notice to that assessee, it appears that that new information is available to the Income-tax Officer alone. The assessee does not know what is at the back of the mind of the Income-tax Officer. When a notice is being sent it is but fair that the man should be apprised of the new information in the possession of the Income-tax Officer. In all cases under (b) the presumption is that he does not know why he is proceeded against because the information is not with the assessee, it is with the Income-tax Officer, so that if the notice goes with the particulars of information he may come prepared to meet the new information which is in the possession of the Income-tax Officer. When a person is charged he has to know what he is charged with. There must be a charge sheet. Even so in regard to income-tax cases the assessee must be given to understand what he has to meet when he comes before an Income-tax Officer. Therefore I have suggested that such further particulars as are known to the Income-tax Officer should be entered in the notice. It may be said that the man would take advantage when he is warned beforehand and he may come prepared with his defence. But as soon as the man comes before the Income-tax Officer the case is not decided. Nothing will be lost if in the notice itself such new information is mentioned beforehand so that the assessee may come prepared. Ordinary canons of justice require that this information should be entered in the notice when it is sent to an assessee so that he may come prepared.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 8 of the Bill, in part (b) of sub-section (1) of the proposed section 34, after the words and figures 'of section 22', occurring in line twelve, the following be inserted:

'and such further particulars as constitute the basis of giving such notice'."

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I have got every sympathy with my honourable friend who seeks to enlarge the rights of the assessee by introducing appropriate words in the appropriate place in this clause but I think the Honourable the Finance Minister will not be misled by the anxiety of my honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava. I would invite my honourable friend to read section 34 as it is today. It reads:

"If in consequence of definite information which has come into his possession the Income-tax Officer discovers that income, profits or gains chargeable to income have escaped assessment in any year.....the Income-tax Officer may.....serve a notice containing all or any of the requirements which may be included in a notice under sub-section (2) of section 22 and may proceed to assess or re-assess....."

Section 34 as it is at present, as the House has conceded, is very restrictive in its scope and does not put any obligation on the officer to disclose his hand when he asks an assessee to file a new return. What my honourable friend wants is that in spite of the restrictions in clause 34 we should extend a concession not contemplated by section 34 at present. It is no doubt true that at some time or other in the course of the investigation in regard to an assessment the Income-tax Officer will have to disclose all the facts. He might say to the assessee "You have done this: these are the facts that have come to light since I or my predecessor, as the case may be, made the assessment and these are the facts on which I want your explanation." That is the position which would obtain even under section 34 as it is now. Now my honourable friend wants to prepare the assessee's case by handing over the charge sheet to him even before he files a return. If he is an honest assessee and he feels that he has probably left out some facts or not scrutinised his accounts carefully.....

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: In case the assessee does not know?

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: His bona fides are always secured; he will get the benefit contemplated. At any rate the assessee will ultimately know what is wrong with his return and he might explain that it was a bona fide mistake, that it has escaped his notice or that he had not seen the particular item in the book and so on. Naturally the provisions of the law as we now propose to enact it will apply as it has to apply in the case of honest assessees. This is a concession that goes beyond the section as it is today. If you ask the Income-tax Officer to disclose all his cards, this is not what was contemplated even in 1939 with all the array of forces gathered against the Government in those days. We would be neutralising the effect of section 34 if we accept my honourable friend's suggestion and we cannot blame the department if it does not rope in many of the assessees. This is going beyond section 34 of the Act as it is today and the present provision does not make any departure in the manner of serving the notice or in the context of that notice. Sir, the amendment proposed by my honourable friend must be rejected.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I need only add a word in continuation of the argument made by my honourable friend Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari. It is well known that the reason for this amending measure has arisen because of the defective terminology of the present Act, particularly section 34. Section 34 required definite information to come into the possession of the Income-tax Officer in order to enable him to act under that section. Now that terminology is being deliberately omitted. When in the absence of definite information in his possession the Income-tax Officer could not proceed, the section did not require the definite information to be put into the notice to be served on the assessee. Although definite information was the sine qua non of action under section 34, the notice was not expected to contain any enumeration of that definite information. When we are doing away with the necessity of there being definite information at the disposal of the Income-tax Officer as a condition precedent to his taking action under the new Act, my honourable friend wants not merely that there should be definite information but that that definite information must be put into the notice to be served on the assessee. I think I need not say anything more on the subject. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, on a point of information.

Mr. Chairman: The Honourable Minister has replied to the debate and there is no occasion for further discussion.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, it is not as if all people have been exhausted when the Honourable Minister gets up and speaks. The Minister did not make the motion, it is a motion by my honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava and the mover has always the right of reply. The Honourable Minister must wait until all the speakers are exhausted.

Mr. Chairman: Nobody rose up and that is why the Honourable Minister got up to reply. If the honourable member's suggestion is adopted it will mean that the Honourable Minister will have to speak after every member has spoken and the debate will go on indefinitely.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, on a point of order, it is open to the House to ask that the question be put but it ought not to be open to the Minister himself to cut short the debate at any time he likes. Otherwise the freedom of debate will disappear, if the Minister were to regulate the debate by getting up and cutting short the discussion. . . .

Mr. Chairman: It is not for anyone except the Chair to regulate the debate. It is expected that the Chair will first see that the other members are given full chance before calling upon the Honourable Minister to reply. That was what I did. But no member rose up and the Honourable Minister has replied and if the debate were to be reopened again there will be no end.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I want to know, Sir, if the notice does not contain any detail, how is the assessee going to answer the queries after four years if the matter is raked up then and what he will do if the substance of the information is not given to him and what grounds will he put forward before the Income-tax Officer?

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: The fact is presumed to be within the knowledge of the assessee; it is a question of suppression of facts.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: There are two kinds of assessee. Certainly the thief knows what he is doing. Regarding the other where on account of the inadvertence of the officer himself, the matter is different.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: He will, I take it, re-examine all his papers and as an honest man come to the Income-tax Officer to be further enlightened on the subject.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: A very good standard of morality.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: With the permission of the House, I would like to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Prof. K. T. Shah (Bihar: General): Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 8 of the Bill, to the proposed section 34, the following new sub-section be added:

(4) No action taken under sub-section (1) of the section shall be called into question merely on the ground that certain conditions were not fulfilled before the issue of the notice under that sub-section."

Sir, I will not take very long to commend this motion to the House. This is intended to carry out the spirit of the report of the Investigation Commission and I believe it will help to smoothen as well as make more efficient the administration of the Act. It has been the common experience that the courts have interpreted the language of the section in a very restricted manner and therefore, purely on technical grounds and actually assessee have escaped taxation or have been charged at lower rates or otherwise benefited, if it was not the intention of the Act to benefit. The honest assessee has no ground to be afraid of this provision because not only at the time when the recorded reasons are to be reviewed has a chance of appeal or enquiry, but also because he has got all the information in his power and if any information that the Income-tax Officer has on which he bases a notice for re-assessment or pending the case, then it would be for him to show that the information in the possession of the Income-tax Officer is either wrong or misleading. In any case he is not precluded from having recourse ultimately to an appeal, if necessary, but in so far as it is intended to represent any people who evade taxation. I think that the amendment here proposed would help to smoothen the administration of the Act. I do not desire indeed that honest assessee should be needlessly harassed but there is, as I see, nothing in this provision which would cause unnecessary harassment to the assessee who have properly kept their books and produced other information that is relative to the subject. I therefore commend this motion to the House.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 8 of the Bill, to the proposed section 34, the following new sub-section be added:

(4) No action taken under sub-section (1) of the section shall be called into question merely on the ground that certain conditions were not fulfilled before the issue of the notice under that sub-section."

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Mr. Chairman, Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment which has been put before the House. Of all the legislative provisions in this world, I do not think there can be any more indulgence shown to the officers of any Government than this clause 8 and to stretch it further and make it all the more arbitrary, is, I think, not desirable. Sir, I can quite understand an Income-tax Officer not assessing or making a low assessment with regard to a person who has not submitted his return, although I do not see why it should be so, but I cannot understand why we should pay so much premium to incompetency of our officers because they, not only the Income-tax Officer, but also the Income-tax Commissioner have failed to make a proper assessment. Why should you allow people to wait for four years to enable them to rectify their mistakes. What is the explanation for this indulgence to our officers? Is it because they should have a continuous and perpetual control over their assessee? We have always found that in a particular year if a man is liable to be assessed to income-tax, he takes all sorts of trouble to get himself out of the assessment altogether or to have his assessment reduced. He incurs expenditure and a lot of it both inside the office and outside the office and in courts of appeal—he has got to do it. After all this, certain conclusions are arrived at and a certain amount is fixed as assessment and this amount can be revised on a future date, that is to say the sword of Democles will have to be kept hanging over the assessee for all these 4 or 8 years. Is it right or reasonable? What is the explanation for it? There is only one explanation, which my honourable friend the Minister has given expression to in this House. It is because these Income-tax Officers, Commissioners and all the rest of them have suddenly become one of our flesh and blood now. They are all there. The water they had in their veins before this new regime came in had suddenly been converted into blood. All the bones and skinny Physiques which they had have suddenly become converted into flesh. That is the possible reason why all this indulgence has been given to the Income-tax Officers. To have the Democles's sword hanging for 8 years is something which cannot be contemplated in any legislature. It can be done by dictators sometimes, but not by a legislature, not by an author of a legislation. That is quite out of place at least for the Honourable Minister to bring such a piece of legislation to this House and to go still further at the suggestion of my honourable friend, the mover of the amendment is something if I give my opinion, it will be going too far and for that reason I oppose it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I oppose this amendment with all the vehemence and emphasis at my command. This motion, if carried, would mean that those safeguards which the law provided or the Select Committee provided or even the report of the Investigation Commission provided will be taken away. I am afraid, Sir, that the present section 34 is not properly appreciated and with your permission, Sir, I will just explain how I view this amendment. The effect of this amendment in regard to clause (a) is, it is absolutely clear to my mind, that the question of old law about 'definite information etc. etc.' which was complained of by the report of the Investigation Commission has all been taken away. Now there is no question of 'definite information etc. etc.' If the Income-tax Officer has 'reason to believe' according to the present revised section—the mere fact that a person did not give a return is enough to attract the provisions of clause 34. There is no question of 'definite information.' In regard to this aspect of the debate, Sir, I have heard from the Honourable Minister also words to the effect and he is also under the same misapprehension. In my humble opinion, the clause is divided into two parts. (a) relates to dishonest assesses or tax evaders and clause (b) does not relate to them, so far as the first 3 or 4 lines are concerned. In regard to (a) the question of definite information does not arise, but in regard to (b) the question of definite information arises. This is only for safeguarding clause (b) in regard to honest assessee. If, according to the amendment of my friend, this safeguard is also taken away, it will mean that a carte-blanc is given to the Income-tax Officer. He can proceed in any manner he likes because after all he is of the same flesh and blood, as we have heard, of which the Honourable Minister is made.

In regard to the Report of the Investigation Commission much has been said that it is a statutory body and therefore nothing can be said about it; and it was said that it is a sacred thing. My humble submission is that nothing is sacred. Only justice is sacred. It is absolutely wrong to suggest to us that since an expert Commission have given a report therefore all that they have said is final.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Is my honourable friend speaking on the amendment?

Mr. Chairman: It would be better perhaps if the honourable member finds out whether the Honourable Minister is going to accept the amendment.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I am opposing this amendment also and I wanted to leave that task to my honourable friend. But I did not know that he would be making a third reading speech.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: If my honourable friend had heard me fully he might perhaps have altered his opinion. After all it is premature to come to conclusions before hearing everything. I was just submitting that as a matter of fact even the Report of this Investigation Commission did not go so far as this amendment goes, and that even that safeguard would be taken away. Then I was submitting about the sanctity of the Report. Have we not just heard that the commission said that in matters regarding law the Income-tax Officer is not to be armed with any powers? Other members were pleased to refer para. 7 on page 3 of the Report. I beg to refer you to page 6, to the Note, where they clearly say that so far as the Income-tax Officer is concerned he is not to be armed with any powers where the question of error of law is concerned, and in regard to facts alone he has got jurisdiction. In regard to law also they clearly state in the Note that cases of erroneous inference of fact will no longer fall under section 34 and therefore the Commissioner is given powers under section 33-B. If the statement of my honourable friend is correct, that the Commissioners have changed their opinion, I will only say that such are your experts who change their opinions so easily. You know how the High Court speaks about experts and I have to submit that so far as experts are concerned, their opinions usually lean in favour of the opinions they have already expressed. Therefore it is not a question of experts etc. We know how the Income-tax Act is administered and how the Income-tax Officers work. I therefore think that all the safeguards which can be put into this section you will be perfectly justified in putting. My regret is that we are not putting all the safeguards because the Government does not want them to be put in. If you take away even this one safeguard I think it will be nothing short of a tragedy.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I am afraid that the amendment moved by Prof. K. T. Shah cannot be accepted. I think it has to be appreciated that the Select Committee had to deal with two difficult situations. One situation was that which arose due to the provision in the existing section 34 which said that no action under section 34 would be taken unless there was a positive discovery of facts which would give ground of action for the Income-tax Officer to levy tax on income which had as a matter of fact, and undoubtedly, ly, escaped. That section 34, as it stands now, completely crippled the action of the Government and income which had been deliberately concealed or which had escaped assessment due to the negligence either of the Income-tax Officer or of the assessee was not permitted to be tapped again. The Select Committee did not want that contingency to continue. At the same time the Select Committee did not want that the Income-tax Officers should have a carte-blanche for taking wanton action which may either be directed against a political opponent or may be purely personal, arising out of prejudice or conflict, between an assessee and an Income-tax Officer. The Committee therefore found out a via media and that via media has been embodied in the section 34 recommended by the Select Committee. That via media consists of two limitations upon the action of the Income-tax Officer. One is that he must have reasons to believe that income has escaped assessment. The second is that his opinion that income has escaped assessment must be endorsed and sanctioned by the Commissioner who is the highest officer in charge of the administration of Income-tax. It is only when both these conditions are satisfied that action under section 34, as now drafted, can be taken. Prof. K. T. Shah's amendment would nullify the two provisions which have been introduced by the new section 34. If those provisions were nullified I think the fears that have been expressed on the other side by representatives who have pleaded the cause of the assessee—that there has already been enough harassment of assessee—would be considerably strengthened. Government does not propose to give any ground for any such suspicion. I therefore submit that the provisions as they stand are a sound and reasonable compromise between the two parties to re-assessment, and I therefore suggest that Prof. K. T. Shah's amendment be not accepted.

Prof. K. T. Shah: I would like, with the permission of the House, to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member the leave of the House for withdrawing his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I want to speak on the clause 8 itself. I am afraid that if this clause is passed as it is, it will mean a very great harassment to the honest assessee.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Why should honest assessee be harassed, I do not understand.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I shall just state the position. Suppose there is an honest assessee and he has filed the return and given all the particulars. He belongs to Delhi, and lives under the very nose of the Central department and the seat of the Central Government. For the first four or five years his case is not decided. May I humbly submit for the consideration of this House that there are many cases in Delhi which are pending for the last four or five years. Then there are eight years again—in the case of honest assessee there are at least four years. Then you have the provision that if a notice is issued, another year he has to wait, so that a man has to lie in suspense for nine or ten years. Is it not harassment? What else is it? In regard to the original assessee at least, that man can say 'I filed the return, I may have made a mistake, let me not be penalised'. But what will you say to his children if he dies after two or three years? Then his children will be in suspense for seven years. Is it not harassment, I ask? This is not all.

I am not speaking of such hypothetical cases. I can challenge the Honourable the Finance Minister if he disputes my statement that even now in Delhi there are many cases pending for the last four or five years without being disposed of. I don't know about the rest of India.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

Everybody is afraid of speaking about the tax-evaders and the tax-dodgers; but do we not defend the murder cases every day? They should be fairly dealt with; even a top tax-dodger and evader should be dealt with suitably according to law. As a matter of fact, the real height and criterion of justice is that you meet out justice even in very bad cases. Now, what are the words used for such cases? According to sub-clause (a), the words are—

“ . . . if there is omission or failure . . . to disclose fully or truly all material facts.”

May I humbly inquire whether it cannot be said even about an honest man that he has failed to disclose fully and truly all material facts? Who will decide what is a material fact and who will decide whether the fact is totally disclosed or not? The honest man may not consider a fact material and the totality of disclosure is a question of opinion. Therefore, the substitution of these words “disclose fully and truly all material facts necessary for assessment” by the words “dishonestly or fraudulently” is essential. As a matter of fact, cases of recusancy can be brought to book under the ordinary law and they are liable to penalty under Section 28. It is not fair to use these words “truly and fully” when their implications are susceptible of various interpretations.

I therefore sent a very innocent amendment that the words “dishonestly and fraudulently” must be substituted, but the Finance Minister has not seen his way to even consider an amendment of that sort.

Similarly in regard to part (b). It is the Government's case—not my case—that this refers to cases in which the question of an honest assessee comes. I can say that the Government have accepted the provision unless there is information in the possession of the Income-tax Officer, he is not to be proceeded against. What is the information? It may be the same information which he possessed before and it may be a case of review only. When I made my speech on the first amendment of mine, I made a reference to the principle of res judicate and the Honourable Minister only ridiculed me when he said that the systems of all countries have provisions for reopening of assessments. I quite agree. I never said that reopening should not be allowed. But I only submitted that the principle of res judicate shows that there is a certain finality. Now all finality has been taken away. Even the Investigation Commission reported that in questions regarding law, the Income-tax Officer should not be allowed to have his way; but here we do not find any reference to that aspect of the case; he is perfectly entitled even to proceed on the basis of information which he already had when he made the first assessment! My humble submission is that justice demands that unless and until it can be proved in regard to the information that it is new, that it is information which was not in his possession before the re-assessment, the Income-tax Officer should not be armed with such powers.

As regards tax-evaders, you may do whatever you like, but in regard to these honest people you must have the power given to Income-tax Officers in such a manner that they may not be able to harass the income-tax assessee. The Honourable the Law Minister is rather surprised to hear from me that there is harassment. If only he had known half of what we know of what is really happening . . .

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I did not say I was surprised—I rather accepted the fact.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am sorry I said he was surprised; it appears he is of the same view as myself, that there is a great amount of harassment of assessee. I hope he will tell his friend to his right that it is so. I humbly submit to the Honourable the Finance Minister and the Honourable Law Minister that they should include in this clause such safeguards as would at least protect the honest assessee. Such safeguards have been indicated in so many amendments.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: There is Proviso (i).

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: And the opening words.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I did not touch upon this Proviso (i). Since it has been just mentioned I will make a reply to it when I come to it later on.

I was submitting that after all, in regard to this kind of assessee, the income-tax authorities have got absolutely no reason to withhold justice from him. Supposing you find on re-assessment that he was assessed rightly and that something more was taken away from him. Logically if it is found in respect of the honest assessee that the original assessment was much larger than what it ought to have been, he should be allowed a refund. This provision has not been introduced in this clause. I submitted an amendment to this effect. May I beg of the Honourable the Law Minister and the Finance Minister to tell me on what principle they want to keep that money out of his pocket and as to how they are entitled to it? They ought to refund this money—not only that money but interest also and express regret that their officer mulcted him in a certain amount which was not due. This is bare justice but the Honourable Ministers are disregarding this fair demand.

They say that the safeguard is there in so far as the Commissioner has been given power to satisfy himself that the reasons recorded are a right. This is the only safeguard. It means, out of the frying pan into the fire! Who are these gentlemen? There is the Income-tax Officer and above him is the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner and then there is the Commissioner. What is this Inspecting Assistant Commissioner? You fully know it—I need not describe, but I once described him in this House as an invisible ghost—he never appears before the assessee, the assessee never appears before him. He directs the Income-Tax Officer to assess the man in the absence of the assessee and he pulls the wire from behind and manages the whole thing. The papers will go above with his recommendation. He is already more than satisfied for in fact he may have initiated the move or been its efficient cause. Suppose the reasons are not given, will anybody care to go into the question? Will the Honourable the Finance Minister be able to go into the question whether the reasons are good or bad. And suppose he gives the certificate as a matter of routine as such certificates are always given? First of all, the matters are discussed at high level with the Commissioner and then the report goes saying, “For reasons recorded I am satisfied . . .”. He does not give any reasons. Where is the safeguard? Will anybody care to look into it? Will any judicial officer look into it? After all, we know that children, nations and departments have very little conscience. Therefore, as routine work this certificate of satisfaction will be given as a matter of course and it will not be a proper safeguard.

The whole scheme of the Act seems to be that the honest assessee should be protected but in practice he will not be protected. In fact I am not satisfied with the report of the Investigation Commission when they state that though they have sympathy with the honest assessee, yet the fact that escape of income is there whether honest or dishonest and therefore they must proceed against the honest assessee also in the same way. It is there that we differ. I differ from the Commission that in case it is ultimately found that the assessee has been charged more than what he should have in fairness been charged the refund should not be allowed. I have not been able to understand why the refund cannot be made. When there is no tax-evasion, and a person has been over assessed they look at the question from the fiscal point of view, and not the human point of view, of the assessee. I therefore beg to submit that in my humble opinion the safeguards provided are not enough. I would have liked if the real position is taken into consideration and safeguards introduced.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, I would like to say a few words. I am not agreeing with my friend Mr. Bhargava. When the Honourable the Law Minister has not pressed his amendment for substituting the Commissioner who has to approve of the recommendation of the Income-tax Officer sent to him in writing for reopening of cases, I think the Section as it is is sufficient safeguard against improper or unreasonable reopenings. The power is now given to a Commissioner to find out the proper cases after he is addressed on that subject with proper and cogent reasons by the Income-tax Officer in writing. That is a sufficient safeguard which must satisfy my honourable friend Mr. Bhargava.

As regards set-off, my feeling is this. Whenever an assessee feels aggrieved by improper assessment, it is open to him to prefer an appeal, a second appeal, and he can take it to the Tribunal. Now, he wants to take advantage of the position when on account of certain fraud he committed the case is reopened. He wants to take advantage of that position and try to recover. There is an impersonal person. There is a regular person who can take care of his interests. That is the individual. He can prefer an appeal, a second appeal and so he can go on. But in a round about way he wants to take advantage of it. What will really happen is this that if the provision is made, no Income-tax Officer will ever attempt to re-open a case, because if he is not able to detect any fraud and recover some more money for the Government he will have to shell out something to the other side. Thus the object of this very section will be frustrated. So I think the balance of convenience is in favour of retaining this clause as it is.

The third point, as I understand my Honourable friend to have raised by an amendment which he has not moved, is with respect to sub-clause (iii) of clause (b) where the assessment made or to be made is an assessment made or to be made on a person deemed to be the agent of a non-resident person, the period of 8 years and 4 years is reduced to 1 year. My friend wants that the provision for re-opening, the period of limitation for re-opening in cases where the assessee is dead, his legal representatives have to pay that, in that case also it should be reduced to 1 or 2 years. I personally feel that this is a concession which can be made as a concession is made in favour of an agent, but there is no amendment moved and so let us see if this works and there will be time enough for us to see whether that other provision will be necessary later on. After all, we are by way of amendments amending Acts not once a year but twice or thrice also in a year. So you will also see another amending Bill likewise whenever there is a case of hardship. We will certainly be able to persuade the Finance Minister to bring forward another Bill. As it is, let us be satisfied with what has been done and there is ample provision by way of safeguard in allowing the Commissioner alone to give permission in proper cases. I would like that this clause should be accepted as it is.

Mr. Chairman: The question is :

"That clause 8 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 8 was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 9 of the Bill, in the last paragraph of the proposed sub-section (5A) of section 46, between the words 'for' and 'on' in line three, the word 'or' be inserted."

Mr. Chairman: The question is :

"That in clause 9 of the Bill, in the last paragraph of the proposed sub-section (5A) of section 46, between the words 'for' and 'on' in line three, the word 'or' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I have some comments with regard to this clause. Sir, this clause inserts a sub-section (5A) after sub-section (5) of clause 46. I find there are no less than six paragraphs and the first one is numbered (5A). I should submit that the rest of the paragraphs should also be numbered as sub-sections (5B), (5C) and so on. There is of course sub-section (6). It is unusual in an ordinary sub-section to have several paragraphs without bearing any number. I have carefully examined them. They relate to different subjects. It would therefore be convenient to number them for the purpose of reference. I have tabled an amendment to that effect, but if this is regarded as technical amendment the draftsman may look into it and carry out the consequential amendments which also I have indicated.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: In regard to this clause, I only beg to draw the attention of the House to clause 5A, last para.—clause 9. It says:

"Where a person to whom a notice under this sub-section is sent objects to it—there are two grounds, the first is:

on the ground that the sum demanded or any part thereof is not due to the assessee then the second ground is:

or that he does not hold any money for or on account of the assessee, then in both these cases:

nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to require such person to pay any such sum or part thereof, as the case may be, to the Income-tax Officer."

My submission is that these two grounds are not the only possible defences for him to say that the money due cannot be paid. So I suggested the following amendment:

"or that he claims a legal or equitable set off from the assessee in respect of the sum demanded."

It may happen that a debtor has to pay money to the assessee and he has also to recover from the assessee any sum out of the same transaction or another transaction or he may have some other claim against him. In that case, he has an equitable right to get his money back or get something from the assessee. In that case also, he should be allowed to resist the claim of the Department to pay and he should be allowed that he does not pay any amount.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: All that I want to point out is that this particular paragraph was not in the original Bill, the paragraph to which my honourable friend wants to tag on the amendment that he has mentioned. This particular paragraph was inserted by the Select Committee after due consideration of the equities of the matter. I am not in a position to extend the scope of that paragraph any further.

Mr. Chairman: The question is :

"That clause 9, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 9, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 10 to 15 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved :

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I had no idea to speak on this Bill. But I saw certain views being expressed about the Income-tax Department and I would not have expressed. My view is that we have enjoyed one year of freedom in India and we have not settled down in our policies of taxation and in our treatment of the officials. Expressions were let out in this House that we have been accustomed to saying for the last ten years that we have treated the Income-tax Department as the Collector of Taxes for maintenance of foreign rule and any extortion we had to pay out. But on a previous occasion I have said—and I again repeat it—the tax dodging of assesseees during the war through propensities of donations bribes that were introduced during those days of high finances when money passed from pocket to pocket—that tax-dodging the Government have not been able to check.

[At this stage, Mr. Chairman (Shri K. Santhanam) vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (one of the Panel of Chairmen)].

Even this Bill will not help my honourable friend, the Acting Finance Minister to control the tax dodgers. Some of them are in Pakistan and others are making arrangements to shift to Pakistan. If some honest assesseees, as my honourable friend who spoke a few minutes ago, are harassed a little, we have to bear with it so that the real tax dodgers can be caught in the net. I do hope that we will not have cause for complaint against the Finance Ministry. We have got our strong condemnation of the Supply Department Officers, and the Disposal Officers. It is high time that in this new State that we are building, we maintain our Taxation Department, the Tax Collection Department in a high degree of integrity and propriety.

Any harassment that may happen has been much magnified by the lawyer profession that always appears before the Income-tax Officers, the Income-tax Commissioners and even before the Income-tax Tribunal which we have set up, where we have introduced an element of lawyers and High Court Judges and naturally the legal arguments outweigh the real essence of things that we are discussing. I appeal to my honourable friends the gentlemen of the legal profession whether they will not co-operate with the Government at this stage to maintain the Taxation Department to function as a pure body. Under the British regime, everybody became corrupt; everybody barring a very few, I would say excluding Mahatma Gandhi, became corrupt. Let us forget the past. I do hope that the Ministry of Finance will develop a high sense of duty and purity which all of us wish. I also hope that the harassment which you, Sir, referred to, against poor assesseees, will never be exhibited and will never be talked of on the floor of this House. I also hope that the tax dodgers who have deprived the Government of crores of Rupees will be somehow caught unless they are in Pakistan and dead.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Sir, a little amount of heat was imported into the discussion just before we adjourned for lunch. When you, Sir, were speaking, I was rather provoked to say something. You were good enough and right enough to say that in the old days, people thought that it was with their money that they were controlled and suppressed and they did not like to pay anything to the Government and they evaded payment of taxes. At the same time, you said that the time has changed, this is our own Government and that people should think it to be a sin if they evade any payment. With all due respect to you, Sir, and all other people of your ways of thinking, the time has not changed, especially for those who are in the Government. It is said that corruption in every department of Government is rampant. This is a cry throughout the country that corruption is on the increase by leaps and bounds. My honourable friend Mr. Neogy, the Finance Minister was rather a bit indignant that people indulge in gibes about the officers who are our own kith and kin. Well, Sir, we shall be proud of their achievements when they will be doing the right thing; but this is not the case now. Although they are our own kith and kin, they are the persons who behaved shabbily in the past and I do not think there is any certificate granted to them that they are doing the right thing now. I say that the time has not come when the people should think that it is a sin to evade payment of any tax to the Government. Everywhere we find the same old day, the same old game. Money is taken in the same arbitrary manner as before; money is not spent properly as before. In the morning there was a discussion about an interpolation over a question by my honourable friend Mr. Kamath about the salaries of the Governor General. The high salaries and everything were supported by our Prime Minister. (An Honourable Member: 'These are days of high prices'.) Even in these days of high prices, if you consider the condition of the people, even a salary of Rs. 500 fixed by the Congress, I think, is perfectly proper even now. The time is the same and I think such measures ought not to have been brought before the House. The Government and the Honourable the Finance Minister and everybody there should first try their utmost to see that the whole department of the Government, especially, the Income-tax Department, is purified. Then, they should come forward with such measures giving them more power. Sir, power is a very bad thing. Power should be given only to those people who are certainly in all conscience honest. When I hear the Treasury Benches supporting the corruptions in their departments and speaking highly of the people of their departments, I feel only sorry and surprised. Rather I pity that my friends, my colleagues have become drowned in the bureaucratic ocean. I understand they should sometimes pat their own people, the Government servants in their own department; but at the same time, they should not publicly announce that the people under them have become honest. We know what the people are and how they are behaving; no improvement has taken place. This is a matter of shame for all of us; this is not a matter to gloat over. With these words, Sir, I say that the attempt of the Honourable the Finance Minister ought to be to wholly purify his department so that not a finger can be raised against them, not a word can be said against them, no suspicion can be entertained against the conduct and character of the Income-tax Officers.

Shri Pabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Sir, the Bill has given wide powers to Income-tax Officers and I would now suggest to the Honourable the Finance Minister to instruct departments that circumstances have changed and that it should be applied not on old police methods but by explaining the duties and rights of the assesseees.

Sir, as you know there are a large number of assesseees who do not know the law. It should be the duty of the Income-tax Officer to point out to such assesseees what they are entitled to by way of allowances, by way of deductions and depreciations and so on. If the method of explaining their rights and duties be followed, I have no doubt that with the changed circumstances there will be a change in the mentality of those who were trying to evade taxes. Up till now the Congress used to say, Don't pay taxes; and people who used to try to avoid taxes on income, would say that they were doing the same thing in their own way. But my feeling is that if the Income-tax authorities try to apply the provisions of the law with consideration and by explaining the position to the assesseees, there is no doubt that a change is bound to come and a larger and larger number of assesseees will be prepared to co-operate with the department, so that cases also can be disposed of quickly. At the present moment—not that there are many cases of over-assessment—the harassment and trouble to the assesseees is due to the undue delay in disposing of the cases. You, Sir, having had practice in income-tax cases, and those who have had something to do with income-tax cases, know how the cases of assesseees have been held up for years. When the law allows an Income-tax Officer to keep cases pending for four years and to reopen them on certain grounds for four years more and then keep them pending for another year or two years, you can imagine the difficulties to which the assesseees are put to. That is the hardship that I have been referring to: that is the kind of harassment that I have been referring to and not to the question of the evasion of taxes.

Therefore, it is up to the Department to give instructions to the officers that they should try to explain the obligations and rights of assesseees so that they can be prepared to co-operate more and more with the department. Sometimes the trouble begins, when an over-zealous officer, either an Assistant Income-tax Commissioner or some other officer, gives some instruction which the Income-tax Officers interpret in their own way as binding on them. I know of a recent case which I brought to the attention of the Honourable the Finance Minister, rather to his predecessor. In Bengal, in the cases of assesseees decided since January 48, the whole amount of the high denominational notes, which had been demonetized by Ordinance and which were exchanged by assesseees, is being debited against them as profit irrespective of the commencing explanations offered by these assesseees. It is a terrible state of affairs and I speak from my own personal knowledge of certain cases. (Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: "Not a personal case!") Not a personal case though I had the money! There were some big amounts in the shape of Rs. 1,000 notes as a public fund and they were exchanged and that has been added as profits in spite of the fact that there have been good explanations. But it has all come about because one Income-tax Commissioner who happened to be there gave instructions that all those sums of money exchanged for high denominational notes should be charged as profits. This is being done in cases where there is no room for excess profits having been made. Even in the books of those assesseees which have been accepted throughout as correct for a number of years, the full amount of such notes have been taken as profit. Therefore I suggest to the department that the law which gives them such wide and ample powers be applied sympathetically. By inducing the assessee to feel that the law is being applied properly and justly there may be a response on the side of the assessee.

With these words I congratulate the Minister who has been able to get such wide powers for his Department.

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya (Madras: General): 'As the debate concludes, I am tempted to supplement what the speaker who has just now concluded has left unsaid. I want to supply a small an omission.

I am no apologist for the officers. At the same time it is necessary for us to send out an appeal to our countrymen that conditions have changed and that they... (Babu Ramnarayan Singh: "No!") have to attune themselves to the changed condition of freedom in this country: that they have become free citizens and rule themselves and that the mechanism of Government can only run like a clock if every citizen feels that he is a cog wheel, a cotter pin, or a pendulum, or a main spring, or a hair spring in this mechanism. The moment anyone tries to avoid taxes that very moment there is sabotage in the machinery of Government.

We have heard a good deal said about the method of combating inflation, and about almost every remedy—some of them textbook remedies, others—by interested parties and still others—by neutrals: but all confirm the theory that taxes must be paid and more taxes must be collected. If we accumulate money we must feel that we are doing something unsocial and uncivic. Just as we develop a group sense in corporate society, just as we develop a road sense in traffic, so also we must develop a tax sense in this country as citizens. (Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: "The country is really developing non-sense!") If the officers must realize that they are the servants of the people, let us also realize as citizens that we have to render our taxes to the Government as we are bound to. If we only do this and cease to look upon taxes as an instrument of harassment, then possibly our Government will fare much better. It is true that since 1877 or thereabouts when income-tax was introduced for the first time as an emergent and temporary measure, this tax has come to be looked upon as a means of persecution and a source of harassment. It was piously hoped that it would have a short life, but it has lengthened itself from period to period and has raised the measure of its collection. We do not blame any one for this because after all income-tax is the only tax that people in towns and cities pay to Governments. Whereas the rural cultivator pays Rs. 10 to Government for every acre he cultivates, a lawyer or doctor, who manages to earn Rs. 2,000 but shows one rupee less in his returns, escapes scot-free. This distinction has been sedulously cultivated during the previous regime in favour of the people of the city as against the people of the villages. The rural population has been further afflicted by a system according to which the earnings of a lawyer, who sits in a town are not divisible among his brothers in the village but the earnings of the agricultural worker and trader who are working hard day and night, and who are exposing themselves to the vicissitudes of weather, and temperature, to pests and even to officials, and who also are subject to the risks of commerce, have to be divided with this lawyer brother or the doctor brother. Thus it looks as though the Government has deliberately cultivated the art of favouring the people of towns as against the people of the villages. The people of the villages are proportionately and individually paying a much heavier tax to Government than the people in towns, and it is only when we realise that we too must contribute to the revenues of the State that our state can become more efficient and more capable of doing good to the country. I want to supplement Mr. Himatsingka's argument to the effect that while the officers must cultivate a new outlook, the citizens too should cultivate a new vision.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I would not like to say very many words, particularly because I want to end the debate on the note which has been struck by my honourable friend Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya. Income-tax is the most unpopular form of taxation all the world over. I remember to have read in a book by that well known income-tax expert Prof. Seligman that in his experience people who would never be considered capable of felling a lie would unhesitatingly put down their signature to a false income-tax return. Therefore tax-evasion is not peculiar to this country: it is an evil that prevails all over the world in larger or lesser degree. As my honourable friend has said we had better look forward to a regime of greater co-operation between the department and the assesseees and in that connection I should like to endorse the suggestions made by my honourable friend Mr. Himatsingka that the departmental officers should be instructed to render as much assistance as possible to the assesseees in the matter of understanding the intricacies of the income-tax law and in filling their returns properly. I dare say that such instructions have already gone out but if they have not I will make my special concern to see that such instructions are forthwith sent out to the departmental officers.

I should not like to take much time of the House, because I have a hope of getting my next Bill passed today but I would like very humbly to suggest that it is not good policy to indulge in constant nagging of your own officers. After all you have to depend upon the permanent officials for the administration of the country. There may be blacksheep among them, I do admit that there are blacksheep not only among the officers of the Income-tax Department but in other Departments as well. The real problem is how to improve matters. Everybody should not be tarred with the same brush: it simply will not do.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

TAXATION ON INCOME (INVESTIGATION COMMISSION) (SECOND AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Finance and Commerce).
Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act, 1947, (second amendment) be taken into consideration."

Sir, I am sufficiently optimistic to hope that the next six minutes available to me would be sufficient for the purpose of getting this Bill through the House. The House will remember that in the original Act the time limit for making reference of cases to this Commission was 31st December, 1947. By an amending Act the date was extended to the 30th June, 1948. Later, that time was extended by a further period of two months under circumstances which are well known to this House and I do not desire to recall them. Now, this Bill is intended to replace that particular amendment. That is the short object of the Bill but there is a slight change and that is that instead of fixing the last date of August as the final date for this purpose, the first of September next has been fixed in the Bill.

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission)

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, this Bill has had a very chequered history. Owing to a rather tragic concatenation of circumstances this Bill has resulted in a casualty in the cabinet ranks. We all know, the whole country knows today the exit of Mr. Shanmukham Chetty from the cabinet in the course of the progress of this Bill through Parliament. I do not wish to enter into those circumstances or those facts that led to his exit from the ranks of the Cabinet Ministers. The Statement of Objects and Reasons says that certain possible cases for reference were under consideration. I should like some more light to be thrown on this point which has acquired considerable importance owing to the events of the last fortnight. I want to know—and I think it is an issue which is perfectly relevant to the Bill under consideration—from the Honourable the Finance Minister whether the groups of cases that were withdrawn from the Investigation Commission have gone back to the Commission for consideration (Several Honourable Members: "They have already gone"). I would ask the Honourable the Finance Minister to make a statement on the floor of this House that those cases have been restored to the place whence they were withdrawn and that in future also cases will not be withdrawn from investigation by the Commission without their consent. This is very necessary in view of the events that took place a fortnight ago and I would request the Finance Minister to make a statement to this effect on the floor of the House.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: The answer to my honourable friend's query is in the affirmative.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act, 1947; (second amendment) be taken into consideration."
Act, 1947, (second amendment) be taken consideration."

The motion was adopted.

BILL

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, I beg to move:

"That for clause 2 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"2. Amendment of section 5, Act XXX of 1947.—In section 5 of the Taxation on Income (Investigation Commission) Act, 1947,—

(1) in sub-section (1)

(a) the words and figures 'before the 30th day of June, 1948', where they occur for the first time shall be omitted; and

(b) the words and figures 'at any time before the 30th day of June, 1948', where they occur for the second time, shall be omitted;

(2) in sub-section (3), the words and figures 'at any time before the 30th day of June, 1948' shall be omitted."

Sir, we have already seen that in the Tax Investigation Commission Act we set the time limit within which the Government was to act and it was anticipated that within that time it would be possible to send certain big cases to the Commission. Time was again extended by the previous amendment. It is now rather public knowledge that a large number of cases were sent to the Commission in a hurry on account of want of time without sufficient investigation. Now you want another time limit. The amendment seeks to take away that time limit. Take your own time, have eternal time if you like, to consider the matter and send the cases to the Commission and the House will have no objection I hope. If the cases are finished time will automatically lapse but there should be no time limit and there should be no hurry, because things were done in a hurry and they had to be reversed.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I am afraid I did not have the time for considering my honourable friend's amendment but so far as the effect of this amendment is concerned it will make the work of the Commission almost impossible. Say, for instance, if we keep on adding to the number of cases which the Commission have to consider. The whole idea was to make a selection of the most important cases. As a matter of fact the number of cases already referred to the Commission is so large that it will take them years to dispose of them. Apart from the reference back of some of the cases that had been withdrawn, several fresh cases have also been referred to the Commission taking advantage of this extension of time. I am assured by the Department that there is no likelihood of any further cases being ready for such reference. (But as regards the point that my honourable friend made that the department had no time adequately to examine these cases, I can assure him categorically that all the cases that are now before the Commission 5 P.M. had scrutinised carefully by the Department, viz., the Central Board of Revenue.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: And in the course of the examination—this fact may not be known—a number of cases were not considered fit for reference. So it is not merely a kind of informal scrutiny but a regular scrutiny has taken place and it is as a result of the scrutiny that all these cases that are now before the Commission have been referred to them. Sir, I very much hope my honourable friend would not press his amendment.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that my pressing amendments is needless as the Honourable Minister is not willing to accept them. I do not press them, but express the hope that the cases should be really considered once and for all and time should not be extended now and then. By long extensions nothing would be lost, but by short extensions, the Minister may have to come again.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I move:

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday the 31st August 1948.

(CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART II — PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.)

Tuesday, 31st August, 1948.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11—45 A.M.

REQUEST FOR ALLOTMENT OF TIME FOR DEBATE ON HYDERABAD AND KASHMIR

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, will you kindly permit me to remind the Honourable the Leader of the House about the promise which he had made on the opening day of this session that he would be pleased to allot a day for a debate on Hyderabad and Kashmir. Considering the supreme importance of this problem I would urge upon him the imperative need for such a discussion, even if it involved a short extension of the session: otherwise it is likely that people outside will get the impression that we here are like unto Nero of old who fiddled while Rome burnt.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): Sir, I am not aware of having given any such assurance or promise and I am not myself clear as to how far it will be in the interest of the country if this House were to debate military matters. It is seldom done in regard to military or allied matters. But certainly I hope that before this House adjourns whatever Government may have to say in regard to these questions will be laid before the House.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U. P.: General): I do not know how by discussing a statement made on the floor of the House public interest is jeopardised.....

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: It is for the House to decide. I myself could not see how such statements can be discussed at any length on the floor of the House.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: What is the difficulty in the way of the discussion of such a statement? Are there only military matters involved and are there no political matters involved? Why should it be undesirable to discuss even military matters, may I ask?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: This is a matter of constitutional propriety. If my honourable friend wishes to discuss it on the floor of the House and the Honourable the Speaker allows such a discussion, it may be that in regard to some matters Government would be unable to disclose many things. May I add, Sir, that some honourable members, in particular the honourable member, who put me the last question, have criticised Government, as they have every right to do. But in a recent statement he has made regarding Kashmir his criticism is based on the most complete ignorance of the situation.

Shri H. V. Kamath: May I suggest a meeting in camera?

Mr. Speaker: My own feeling in the matter is that I entirely agree with the Honourable the Leader of the House that it would be inopportune and not very wise to have a discussion over these matters on the floor of the House, when the situations are so delicate and therefore the best course would be to help Government by silence.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: Cannot the matter be discussed, if necessary by a secret session? Why should all discussion be ruled out by the Prime Minister?

Mr. Speaker: I do not think he rules out discussion. He wants suspension of the discussion which may take place later on. I think there is no need for any further argument.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): Every time it is being said that military operations are involved and that we are not entitled to discuss these matters. I am afraid the House has a right to discuss these matters and the Government must inform itself of the opinion of the members of this House. But every time, whether it is Hyderabad or Kashmir, it is said that military operations are involved and that we should not discuss them, with the result that what exactly most of us think the Honourable Ministers do not know. Of course they know their business and we may trust them. But it is up to them as our leaders and as leaders of this House that they should give us an opportunity to say what we have got to say in the matter.

Mr. Speaker: I have already expressed myself.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: I have made it perfectly clear that I do not wish to rule out any discussion in this House—it is the last thing I would desire. I have pointed out the undesirability of discussing certain aspects of the question which are bound to arise in a debate. But it is open to you, Sir, or to the House if it wishes to discuss the question. It can discuss it. But Government inevitably would have to say in regard to certain aspects that they are not in a position to disclose certain facts. I am not ruling out discussion. If the House wants to sit for an extra day Government will certainly arrange it.

Secondly, I am a little surprised at the complaint of the honourable member who spoke last, accusing us that we are continually preventing any discussion. I am not aware, I cannot remember a single occasion, when this question was put in this manner and Government came in the way; I would like to be reminded when this happened previously.

MOTION RE PROCEDURE IN MAKING RULES TO REGULATE THE PROCEDURE AND CONDUCT OF BUSINESS IN THE ASSEMBLY

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): Sir, I beg to move:

"This Assembly resolves:

- (i) that the procedure to be followed by this Assembly in making rules under sub-section (1) of section 38 of the Government of India Act, 1935, to regulate its procedure and conduct of its business shall be by a motion made and carried in the Assembly; and
- (ii) that in supersession of the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Rules and the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Standing Orders at present in force, and with effect from the 15th September, 1948, the annexed *Rules be adopted for regulating the procedure of the Assembly and the conduct of its business."

May I say first of all that although I have moved this resolution I would like to have a change made about the date? It is a wrong date given, namely 15th September. It should be today, so that, if the House so desires, we can act in accordance with the amended Rules from tomorrow onwards.

Section 38 (1) of the Government of India Act empowers the Dominion Legislature to make rules for regulating the procedure of the Assembly and the conduct of its business. Sub-section (3) provides that until Rules are made under this sub-section the Rules of Procedure and the Standing Orders in force immediately before the establishment of the Dominion with respect to the Legislative Assembly shall have effect in relation to the Dominion Legislature, subject to such modifications and adaptations as may be made therein by the President of that Legislature. In pursuance of the provisions of sub-section (3) of Section 38, the Rules and Standing Orders applicable to the Legislative Assembly of India were modified and adapted and are at present in force with respect to the Constituent Assembly on its legislative side. In these adaptations and modifications the old nomenclature of Rules and Standing Orders was maintained. Under Schedule IX of the Government of India Act, 1935, which has now been repealed, the Rules were framed by the Government of India with the approval of the Secretary of State, while the Standing Orders were made by the Government of India but were altered by the Assembly from time to time with the consent of the Governor-General. This distinction between Rules and Standing Orders has now vanished and therefore it is desirable to put forward a new arrangement of these Rules and Standing Orders, just as Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business.

What I am moving now involves no essential change although it may be that certain changes are necessary in these Rules. For the present what I am moving is a re-arrangement of the old Rules and Standing Orders, all put together. I think one or two changes are necessary immediately, one of them being the power to appoint a Deputy Speaker; and there are one or two other matters about the resignation of a Minister. Apart from these, there is hardly any change to the existing practice.

I find that a very large number of notices of amendments have been sent. Most of them are verbal amendments; some involve important changes. I would beg of the House at the present stage not to go too closely into an amendment of these Rules and Conduct of Business. That would take us a considerable time; and perhaps if we did it in this sporadic manner it may not be done as well as it should be done. My own suggestion to the House would be that if we adopt at present the existing Rules in the freshly arranged form and if you, Sir, appoint a Committee to consider all these amendments and changes that may be necessary, then we would get something which has been carefully thought out—as the Rules should be thought out—and during the next session we can adopt those changes after going into them. If we consider each separately now, perhaps the whole picture would not be seen, and it may be that some changes are not made which should be made while some are made which do not fit in with some other part of the Rules. Therefore I would beg the House to accept my motion subject to one or two changes which I shall gladly accept. As it is, I do not think in terms of improving the whole set-up of Rules at this moment. We want to carry on with a better arrangement so as to make our work more easy.' Sir, I move:

Mr. Speaker: I shall put the motion to the House with the change so far as the date goes. Instead of saying '15th September' shall I say from today, that is from the '31st August'?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: From the 1st of September.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"This Assembly resolves:

- (i) that the procedure to be followed by this Assembly in making rules under sub-section (1) of section 38 of the Government of India Act, 1935, to regulate its procedure and conduct of its business shall be by a motion made and carried in the Assembly; and
- (ii) that in supersession of the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Rules and the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Standing Orders at present in force, and with effect from the 1st September, 1948, the annexed *Rules be adopted for regulating the procedure of the Assembly and the conduct of its business."

Mr. Speaker: I might state in support of what the Honourable the Leader of the House has stated, that it will be desirable to have a small Committee, and as he has suggested, I will take steps to appoint such a Committee for the purposes of going into and examining the rules.

*Not printed in the day's Debate.—Ed. of D.

[Mr. Speaker]

Therefore, after appointing the Committee to go into those rules, it will be better, if any amendments which the Committee may suggest and any such amendments which the honourable members may have to suggest, are taken into consideration by this House. The amendments that are tabled are likely to take a long time. We are at the fag end of a Session and perhaps we are all anxious to see that the Session does not extend beyond the 4th of September. So, in the circumstances, in view of what the Honourable the Leader of the House has said, and with my undertaking to appoint a Committee, I think the members will be satisfied. We may accept the rules as they are and proceed with further business, instead of taking any time over the rules.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar : General): Sir, I am not moving any amendment to the rules, but as regards the motion itself I have got a very minor verbal amendment which is wholly non-controversial, far less controversial than the change of date which has been incorporated. And that is:

"That in part (ii) of the motion, after the word 'Rules', occurring in line two, the words 'of Procedure' be inserted."

I wanted to move this amendment because I want to bring the wording into line with this Circular which we have all got; it is called the "Rules of Procedure and Standing Orders"—not merely "Rules". That is the only amendment I am moving.

Mr. Speaker: That may be accepted?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Yes, Sir.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): I am thankful to the honourable mover for the promise that these Rules shall be considered by a Committee which shall go into the whole question. Though I do not feel the urgency of the matter, yet because we have a lot of business on hand, I would not oppose the Prime Minister's suggestion. After all the House rises after four days and so I had thought it would not make much difference if the Rules are not adopted today.

But, Sir, I do want with your permission to point out some facts which that Committee should take into consideration. I do feel, after about a year's experience of this House, that this House passes legislation in rather a hurried manner and we are not able to consider all the Bills as thoroughly as we should be able to do. I thought that this Assembly should now act on the model of the British House of Commons. Formerly our British masters did not wish to take members into much confidence and did not like that members should scrutinise the various Bills and the Budgets so thoroughly. But now when we are a sovereign body, it is very important that our legislation as well as our Budget should be fully scrutinized by the House.

Sir, I have compared these Rules with the Rules of Procedure in the House of Commons and I have found there are some very important differences between our procedure and their procedure. For example, in Bills which are passed by the House.....

Mr. Speaker: I think we need not go into this now; as we are appointing a Committee which will examine it. No discussion of the type will really be helpful because that discussion will take place again when the amendments to the Rules come before the House.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I only wanted to give my suggestions.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Committee will look into all that. And the honourable member is there to help it.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: If you desire that I should not proceed then I will close, Sir.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, whenever any suggestion is made by the Honourable the Leader of the House, we all are anxious to accept it, and we never take any time unless it is very strictly necessary. All the same, Sir, I would beg of you and the House to take into account as to why this curious procedure should be adopted. After all, the original motion contained 15th of September as the date. This showed that we were in no particular hurry. That has now been altered to the 1st, and the whole lot of amendments are going to be considered by a Committee and if any of them are found reasonable and proper they will all be incorporated, after such consideration.

Sir, the normal procedure, as is proposed to be laid down and as has been laid down by other Parliaments, is that before anything final is done the whole matter is threshed out and if there are amendments they are incorporated after being moved and adopted. In this particular instance we are following a somewhat new procedure. Probably the circumstances justify it, but I do not think I am incorrect in saying that all that we are anxious to get by this particular motion being expedited at such speed is to let the Deputy Speaker be born at an early date. I do not know if any other advantages are going to be secured by this process of passing the Rules and the leaving of the amendments aside to be considered by a Committee, and then a new set of Rules or changed Rules being brought before the House. I do not raise any objection to this, but I think I am correct in inferring that the only anxiety is to see that the Deputy Speaker is born at an early date.

Mr. Speaker: There seems to be some misunderstanding about it. The hurry is not for the purpose of having a Deputy Speaker. Even under the present Rules as adapted, the appointment of a Deputy Speaker is provided for; it is not a new thing that is coming under the present Rules.

But the position under Section 38 has been that the present Rules under which we are working—the Rules and Standing Orders—will continue to exist and govern the proceedings and conduct of business of this House, till the Assembly makes its own new Rules; it is not competent for this Assembly, unless Rules are made, to make any changes in the Rules of procedure which at present govern it. Therefore, it was thought that, as we are already working under these Rules, the easier course will be to assume jurisdiction over the Rules by having them passed as the Rules of the Assembly, and then sit at leisure with some quiet and consider the amendments that will be necessary. If that is not done, then these very Rules should be the governing Rules from the beginning of the next Session also till all the amendments are considered in the next Session and the Rules are adopted by this Assembly. Therefore, if a new set of Rules, after considering these amendments, is to be adopted, the better course would be to adopt these Rules as they are, assume jurisdiction over the amendment of these Rules, then sit in the meanwhile as a Committee or otherwise, howsoever we may think it proper, then consider those amendments and suggest them so that they can be put through in the House much earlier. That is why the present procedure was suggested, and not that there is anything unusual or that there is anything behind the scene.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: With your permission, Sir, I would like to withdraw my observations.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, may I inquire whether any inconvenience is felt in conducting the business under the present Rules? If there is any inconvenience I do not wish to say anything, but if not then there are a large number of substantial amendments suggested. Would it not be better to wait till the Rules are finally considered and framed as such and carry on in the meanwhile? As soon as the rules are ready we may pass them at the earliest stage of the next Session.

774

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [31ST AUGUST 1948]

I am merely asking—I am not making any suggestion. But if there is inconvenience, of course then the draft new rules may be accepted.

Mr. Speaker: It seems I have not been able to clarify the point properly. Still, the point is not that there are any very serious difficulties just today in our work. We are carrying on our work under these very rules at present, but the difficulty is that if we desire to have some change in any part of the Rules, for example, relating to the discussion of the Budget, the rule requires a small amendment—not the whole body of the Rules—it will not be possible for this Assembly to have a rule altered, but it must get it altered by a different procedure. So it is preferable that the power to alter should be immediately assumed by the Assembly itself rather than leave it to some other authority, who is to be approached for a little this or that change that we may need, just to give us the convenience that we want. That is the idea. Anyway, this has to be done some time or other. I do not think any further explanation is now needed over this.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I am desirous of making only one little submission and that is, we all know that the election of the Deputy Speaker is imminent and therefore any amendments to the rule as regards the election of Deputy Speaker must be considered today, because no election can be held without that rule being passed as amended, if necessary. I have got an amendment to that rule as regards the withdrawal of any candidate. It is a very formal and technical amendment but, I think it is very necessary and should be incorporated in the provision relating to election of Deputy Speaker. You cannot hold the election of Deputy Speaker without that particular rule being passed.

Mr. Speaker: We are passing all rules finally and the difficulty pointed out by the honourable member will arise only if there are more than one candidates and if any one of them wishes to withdraw, we shall have to proceed with the election. That is what will happen. It is not such a great calamity.

Shri H. V. Kamath: It is not a calamity. That is why I said it is a technical and formal amendment. There is no provision for the withdrawal of candidates, and I have tabled an amendment to that particular rule.

Mr. Speaker: Let us consider all these aspects quietly and then put them through, rather than take an amendment to a particular clause or a particular Rule. That is better I think.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Election is going to take place on Friday.

Mr. Speaker: One does not know. We may have to have election of all offices. The incumbents are never permanent. The particular procedure for election under the present rules has already been circulated and I may say that one of the objects why 15th September was put in the motion was that during the present session, there should not be any changes from one set of rules to another and if the date is to be put from today, then it is better that we take the old set of rules from today instead of any changed set of rules during the middle of the session. Let us not disturb the arrangement as it stands. That is the idea.

Seth Govind Das (C.P. and Berar: General): Is it not a fact that even if there is no amendment as Mr. Kamath proposes, a candidate can withdraw under the present rules of the Assembly themselves?

Mr. Speaker: I may not decide that point at present, but the position is very clear. If a candidate expresses his desire to withdraw, members will not put in their vote for him. So the matter is clear and we need not be obsessed by that idea.

Mr. Tajamul Husain (Bihar: Muslim): May I know why we are having the election of the Deputy Speaker at the end of the session and not at the beginning of the session?

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): This question must have been raised at the beginning of the session.

Mr. Speaker: I do not think any formal explanation on that point is necessary. The rules were amended, I believe, by the end of the last session so as to enable us to have a Deputy Speaker and now the sooner we have a Deputy Speaker, the better. All that I can say is that, rather than wait till the next session and keep an office vacant till the next session, it is better that there is some authority who will be able to supplement the Speaker in his absence.

Now, as regards the other amendment of Mr. Kamath, I said that there was no objection to those words "Rules of Procedure", but I would prefer, on a further consideration of the matter, to keep the first wording, because Rule I provides that "These Rules may be called the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Rules" and the wording of the Government of India Act, Section 38, sub-clause (1) is: "The Dominion Legislature may make rules for regulating, subject to the provisions of this Act, their procedure and conduct of their business". So, if we add the word "procedure" we must add the long title also—thus saying "regulating their procedure and the conduct of their business". It is better to keep the small expression "rules".

Shri H. V. Kamath: All right. I don't press. It is merely verbal.

Mr. Speaker: Then I put the motion to the House. The only change will be that they are being adopted from the 1st September.

The question is:

"This Assembly resolves:

- (i) that the procedure to be followed by this Assembly in making rules under sub-section (1) of section 38 of the Government of India Act, 1935, to regulate its procedure and conduct of its business shall be by a motion made and carried in the Assembly: and
- (ii) that in supersession of the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Rules and the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Standing Orders at present in force, and with effect from the 1st September, 1948, the annexed Rules be adopted for regulating the procedure of the Assembly and the conduct of its business."

The motion was adopted.

HINDU CODE

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister for Law): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to amend and codify certain branches of the Hindu Law, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I shall hear the Honourable Minister first and then take the point of order.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, in view of the urgency of other Government business which is on the agenda and to which Government feels it must give precedence, I do not propose to make a speech in support of my motion, because it is quite obvious that if I were to make a speech in support of my motion, that is bound to give rise to a debate which will result in the consumption of a great deal of the time of the Government. We have already few days left before the House is due to rise and I therefore request you to allow this motion to stand over for further consideration in the next session of the Assembly.

776

Mr. Speaker: So it comes practically to this that I put the motion to the House; the matter becomes.....

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, my point of order.....

Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru: rose—

Mr. Speaker: Yes, Pandit Kunzru.

Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru (U.P.: General): May I put a question to my honourable friend before you put the motion to the vote of the House?

We have known for some time the policy of the Government in regard to this matter. It is disappointing for some of us to know that the decision of the Government has been to postpone the consideration of this Bill during this session.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (West Bengal: General): Sir, he is making a speech.

Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru: Let my honourable friend not be impatient. After all, the Speaker is in the Chair and it is for him to say whether I am in order or not. There is only one Speaker in this House.

To continue my point now, Government have in consideration of the business which they want to go through decided that the consideration of this matter should be postponed to the next session.

May I know, in this connection, when this Bill will be considered? Can my honourable friend give the House any assurance that it will be considered and passed before the regular Budget Session commences? I think these are the minimum points on which he should please give information to the House. We are quite prepared to wait just as we have waited for so many years and I do hope that this Bill will be taken up as early as possible, certainly not later than before the commencement of the Budget Session.

Mr. Speaker: What is the point of order.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, the point of order I am going to submit is that the motion is incompetent. The House will be pleased to remember that on the 9th April last, a motion was accepted in the House that the Hindu Code Bill, which purported to have been signed by the previous Minister for Law, be sent to the Select Committee for consideration and report. The point of order which I am going to submit is that the Select Committee, as would appear from their notes, has never considered that Bill, but a substitute. I do not say that the substitute is a bad substitute, but it is a substitute. But, the question which was referred to the Select Committee was to report on the Bill that was presented to the House at the time. It appears from the note of the majority that the Bill which was taken into consideration in this House had not been considered by the Law Department. After reference to the Select Committee, the Law Department fully considered the Bill and prepared a new draft. There have been a number of changes. Let us assume they were improvements. The Sections were thoroughly recast and rearranged and it was an entirely new product. It does not matter whether they were good or bad. It was that draft, and not the Bill which was sent by the House for consideration, which was considered by the Select Committee and their report is based on a consideration of the new draft and not the Bill that was presented before the House. I should like, in support of this statement to refer to some notes of the Select Committee. In the report of the Select Committee, at page 1, it is said that "the Ministry of Law.....have now produced a revised draft." and "this revised draft does not make any substantial changes"—but there were changes—and "we decided to confine our deliberations to the revised draft." The point has been further clarified in a note of dissent by two distinguished members of the Select Committee Dr. Bakshi Tek Chand and Pandit Balkrishna Sharma. They say in paragraph (5) of their note at page 8: "Thirdly, after the introduction of the Bill, the Honourable the Law Minister set up a Departmental Committee, which has entirely re-drafted the Bill and it is this Draft (and not the original Bill) which has been considered by the Select Committee. The changes made by the Drafting Committee in the original Bill and in some cases by the Select Committee in the re-drafted Bill are not merely changes of form, but in several particulars they relate to matters of substance."

My point would be, whether the changes made were of substance or whether they were merely of a formal character, that it was this draft alone that was considered and that was not what was referred to the Select Committee. Supposing, Sir, that a Bill is reported by a Select Committee, can the Honourable Minister make even the slightest changes, trivial changes—they may not be changes of substance? Suppose some changes made by a Minister and presented to the House, the question would be whether you will be prepared to accept the new document with the changes, or insist upon having the document that was passed by the Select Committee. I submit this is a matter which raises constitutional questions. The Select Committee, with due respect to them, consisted of the most brilliant men in this House. With regard to the product of their labours, I have nothing to say. I fully admit that that document is a masterpiece of composition and from the drafting point of view it is a great improvement. But it has made substantial changes here and there, the clauses have been thoroughly recast, brought from the end towards the beginning, from the beginning to the middle, and from the middle to the end of the Bill, and so on. I beg to submit that the Select Committee acted without jurisdiction. The mandate of this House was to take the Bill into consideration and report thereon. What the Select Committee did was not to take into consideration the Bill that was referred to them, but a totally different document altogether. The report being on a new document altogether, I submit the motion is thoroughly incompetent. The whole thing depends upon the legality of the report itself. The report was on the Draft prepared by the Law Ministry and not on the one which was sent to them for consideration. This is the simple point of order.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, may I submit one thing? This is the longest point of order that I have heard on the floor of this House. The motion of the Honourable Minister of Law was a simple one that the detailed consideration may be had at a later date. Why should the House now discuss the question, what was placed before the Select Committee? That means we are going into the merits of the Bill. I think this matter can safely be adjourned to the next session.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: My point is that the motion is not competent.

Pandit Balkrishna Sharma (U.P.: General): I beg to submit, Sir, that the long yarn spun by my honourable friend seems to have very little substance in it. Of course, this House was asked to consider a certain Bill, and let me tell you as a member of the Select Committee, that the Bill which this House asked us to consider was always before us. In the light of that Bill, the Honourable the Minister for Law drafted or re-drafted the very clauses of the

[Pandit Balkrishna Sharma]

Bill, and there were absolutely no changes of substance. The original Bill which was sent to the Select Committee was also before us. Therefore, the point of order does not arise.

There is no doubt that the Select Committee has reported on the draft which was submitted to us by the Ministry of Law. But the Select Committee has every right to change the Bill which is submitted to it by this House. If that right is inherent in the Select Committee, I do not see any reason how any point of order can be raised by my honourable friend Shri Naziruddin.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Sir, I am rather surprised at the speech of my honourable friend Pandit Balkrishna Sharma. He is a signatory to this note of dissent from which portions have been read out by the gentleman who raised this objection. It is stated in the note that only the revised draft was considered and not the original Bill. Furthermore, he was of the opinion in this dissenting note that there have been very substantial changes. Not only there were changes mentioned but instances of the changes are given in this note covering about one page. If you kindly go through the changes mentioned, you will come to the conclusion that very substantial changes were made.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): That is Mr. Tek Chand's note and not his.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Unfortunately, under the signature of Mr. Tek Chand, the signature of Pandit Balkrishna Sharma appears. I do not know what warrant is there for Shri Mahavir Tyagi to say that Pandit Balkrishna Sharma's signature is not there.

Leaving aside this matter, I submit that this is a very vital point. Supposing, for instance, a Finance Bill was introduced and referred to Select Committee and then the Finance Member made important changes in the Bill in regard to the taxation proposals, and then that was considered by the Select Committee, what would happen? It is not a matter of this clause or that clause alone; it is a matter of the privileges of the House; and if it is a document which was not referred to the Select Committee, it cannot be considered at all.

Pandit Balkrishna Sharma: Taxation proposals are different.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Is taxation more important than the rights of the people? On page 9 you will find that substantial differences are referred to in the dissenting note and you will come to the conclusion that the alterations made are much more substantial than even the taxation proposals. Existing rights have been taken away and even the very structure of Hindu society has been changed. I could give illustrations and show how vital these changes are.

Shrimati Renuka Ray (West Bengal: General): Sir, are we going into the merits of the Bill?

Mr. Speaker: I think I may shorten this matter. I am not going to decide the point of order just now. The point of order is undoubtedly important and of such a nature that I cannot express any opinion this way or that way immediately after hearing honourable members. It will involve for me a minute study of the Bill and a comparison of the various provisions and so on. So, in any case, what I proposed to do was just to put the motion and postpone the matter including my decision on the point of order; and if the House so desires, further discussion on the point of order may take place when the motion is taken up again. But I was looking at it from another point of view and I will state what is passing in my mind so that the House may be helpful to me in coming to a conclusion. To my mind, the pertinent question would be whether the Select Committee has done something which is taking us beyond the scope of the measure, which was intended by the House to be referred to them. It may make important changes or no changes; it may redraft or rearrange particular clauses; but it has no authority to go beyond the scope of the legislation, which it was intended to refer to it for consideration and report. So the question will be, not whether this provision or that provision was changed or altered or changed substantially or whether it goes to the root of the structure of the Hindu society. The question is, as to what it is, that was intended by the House to refer to Select Committee and whether the Select Committee has gone beyond the scope of the reference. That is how I was looking at the question.

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): There is something more.

Mr. Speaker: There may be something more; I am giving my reaction and I am keeping the question open. Even when the motion is taken up next time, this point of order will be open.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: If my views are required by the honourable members who have spoken I am quite prepared to give my views on what we have suggested. But Sir, the procedure suggested by the Speaker is the best.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): There is another important matter, Sir. Considering the supremely vital social significance of this measure and the fact that Government will perhaps require three or four weeks to pilot it in this House, may I request you to be so good as to summon an extraordinary session of this Assembly before the budget session and also to see that some members who are at present debarred from attending this House are allowed, may required to attend that special session?

Mr. Speaker: That is not in my hands at all. The honourable member does not know probably that the power to summon the Assembly is not that of the Speaker. The power is exercised by the President under the Government of India Act as it stands today. So it is not for me to decide whether or not a session of the House should be called just for the purposes of this Bill or for any other purpose.

As regards the other point, it is for members themselves and does not concern me as to who should or should not be present. So I need not go into that matter at all. But in view of the procedure which we are adopting in order to save time I am merely putting the motion and will proceed to the next business.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that putting the motion to the House would be to recognise the legality of the motion.

Mr. Speaker: Not at all.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that the whole thing should be kept open because the point of order, which I have submitted with a considerable amount of care and not without previous thought, is a question of importance, and I find that it is obviously a difficult matter. So, as the matter is going to be postponed the whole consideration including any action upon it on the basis that it is a proper point should also be postponed. It is a mere suggestion; it is a matter of procedure which is entirely in your hands, and any decision you give will be acceptable to us.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The point is that there is no Select Committee report before the House as the Bill was not considered. As there was a circulation motion before no motion can be made except that the Select Committee report be considered. It would therefore be better not to put the motion at all at this stage.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

Shri Biswanath Das: My submission is this. Arising out of the observations that you have just now been pleased to make, I have to state that it limits the scope of the objections that have been raised by my honourable friend. The most important objection in this case is that the Select Committee has not considered the Bill that was referred to it, and also the Bill that was published and introduced in this House. That is a very important objection which has to be borne in mind.

Mr. Speaker: As I said, I am not deciding this matter at all. I am keeping open the whole thing including the point of order because it will be seen that it involves large questions of fact, and I must study all these things myself, which I have not yet done. Shall I leave the matter as it is?

Some Honourable Members: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: If that is the desire of the House I will leave the matter as it is.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: Sir, may I ask the Honourable the Law Minister to reply to my questions?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, in view of the fact that I had actually moved the motion I thought it was unnecessary for my honourable friend to raise the queries which he has raised. But in order to allay his doubts and the doubts of those who are passionately in favour of this Bill I think it will not be difficult for me to state what the intentions of Government are with respect to this Bill. I think I can say that Government do not accept the view that this Assembly is not competent to deal with this measure. Secondly, Government propose to carry the measure through before this Assembly is dissolved.

Thirdly, this Bill will be taken into consideration at the next session of the Assembly and Government will allot to it such time as the Government can, having regard to the urgency of other Government measures. If the time allotted to this measure during the next session is not found to be sufficient to carry the measure through, the Government will consider whether it should not call a special session of the Legislature to dispose of this Bill.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Is it the intention of Government that at any cost this measure will be brought before the next budget session of the Assembly? If in the time allotted by Government, having regard to the course of business, the Bill cannot be finished, then a special session will be convoked for going through the rest of the Bill. Is that the position?

Will the Honourable Minister try and find a single precedent in the constitutional history of this country where a legislation is taken up and for the completion of which another special session is convoked?

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is arguing unnecessarily. I do not think any further argument is necessary. I am leaving the matter as it is.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain (U.P.: General): Will all the honourable members be supplied with a copy of the draft prepared by the Department?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It is attached to the Select Committee Report.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: It is necessary for us to find out whether the draft Bill represents something more than what is contained in the Select Committee report or not.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It is attached to the Select Committee Report.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): It is the revised draft as circulated as part of the Select Committee's report. Over and above what has been revised, there have been additions made by the Select Committee.

Mr. Speaker: I find that opinions being sharply divided on substance, a good deal is being made of the technicalities. Let us deal with the substance of the matter rather than divide ourselves on technicalities.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): There might be a motion for adjournment of this business till the next session.

Mr. Speaker: Yes. I will put that to the House.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain: My point was that there might be certain additions and omissions. And omissions are as important as additions. Now we know what the additions are but we do not know what the omissions are. It will be necessary that a copy of the new draft made by the Law Department be supplied to honourable members so that they may know what the omissions are.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): We cannot take any cognizance of any document taken to the Select Committee. We can take cognizance of the Report of the Select Committee. That is the matter before us for consideration. They might have any number of documents. Are all those documents to be circulated? It is a matter for the members of the Select Committee who should be approached before they (interruptions).

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Let the honourable member proceed.

Shri K. Santhanam: We are concerned with the report of the Select Committee. If we are dissatisfied with it we can appoint another Select Committee or censure it. But we are not to go into the detailed proceedings as to how they dealt with the evidence and how they proceeded with the business. We know that they have submitted a report and that report is to be taken into consideration. All the other things are irrelevant.

Mr. Speaker: I do not propose to allow any further discussion on this. That matter may be decided and discussed later on. I am putting the motion to the House.

The question is:

"That the consideration of this question be postponed."

The motion was adopted.

CANTONMENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh (Minister for Defence): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, be taken into consideration."

This is a simple amendment. It has been initiated as a decision has been taken to amalgamate the Land Branch of the Cantonment Department with the cadre of the service of executive officers. It is nothing new. About 12 years ago this was a common service and it was in 1937 that a separate service of Executive Officers was created. Although a separate service was created, still the duties overlapped considerably. The matter was fully examined by the

[Sardar Baldev Singh]

Armed Forces Nationalization Committee and in their report the Committee made a recommendation to the following effect:

"That the Cantonment Executive Officers Service and Military Estates Officer Branch should be amalgamated and the unified service should be the Civil Central Service, Class I, as it was prior to 1937."

Now there is one point to be remembered in this connection. The object of this present amendment is that one service will result in economy. The Association of the Cantonment Officers has also been representing to the Government that there should be one service. They say that different scales of pay that exist now for the two services should be one, as the duties are also more or less the same. So the Government has now decided to amalgamate both the services and the new service will be known as "The Military Lands & Cantonments Service". This is the object of the Bill and as there is nothing controversial, I hope the House will accept this motion.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, be taken into consideration."

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): On a point of information. When did this Association of the Executive Officers Cantonment Board make its representation for the amalgamation of the two?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Representations have been made several times. I cannot give their exact dates. But it is a fact that representations have been made to the Government of India.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Is that an All-India Association?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I think so.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U. P.: General): The Honourable Minister has come up with a small amendment to the Bill, but the law about Cantonments needs to be changed and revised thoroughly and we hope that the Honourable Minister will be able to tell us when he will be in a position to bring up a comprehensive Bill in this connection.

I see that Mr. Sidhva is absent. He has submitted an amendment that powers of the management of land be exercised by the Cantonment Board and not by the Military Estate Officer. I do not want to go into details because this small amendment may be necessary. But I do want to know when the Honourable Minister will bring forward a new comprehensive amending Bill.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I have, I think, in reply to a question in this House or in connection with some statement that was made, said that the question is being examined and as soon as the Government is ready they will bring forward a new comprehensive amending Bill.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: I find there are no amendments tabled except one from Mr. Sidhva. He is not present in the House. So I shall put all the clauses together.

The question is:

"That clauses 2 and 3 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

IMPERIAL LIBRARY (CHANGE OF NAME) BILL.

آنریبل مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد: جناب! میں تحریک کرتا ہوں کہ امپریل لائبریری (change of name) بل پر غور کیا جائے۔ اس موقع پر بہتر ہوگا کہ میں معاملہ کے ایک خاص پہلو پر گورنمنٹ کا خیال ظاہر کر دوں کیونکہ مجھے معلوم ہوا ہے کہ بعض دوستوں نے اُس میں دلچسپی لی ہے۔

اس وقت ہمارے جتنے institutions ہیں، جتنے دفاتر ہیں، جتنے کارخانے ہیں، سب کے نام انگریزی میں ہیں، اور وہی زبانوں پر چلے آتے ہیں۔ گورنمنٹ پوری طرح اس کی ضرورت محسوس کرتی ہے کہ اب ہمیں یہ نام بدل دیئے چاہیئے اور اُن کے ایسے نام رکھئے جو ہماری زبان کے ہوں۔ لیکن ساتھ ہی گورنمنٹ یہ بھی محسوس کرتی ہے کہ یہ معاملہ ایسا نہیں ہے جسے ہم جلدی میں نہٹا دیں پوری طرح سوچ بچار کر کے اسے انجام دینا چاہیئے۔ سینکڑوں institutions اس وقت ہندوستان میں موجود ہیں جنکے انگریزی نام چلے آتے ہیں۔ ہمیں سوچنا ہوگا کہ انگریزی کی جگہ ہندی کا جو لفظ اب ہم اختیار کریں وہ ہر طرح ٹھیک اور جتنا ہوا ہو۔ آپ تسلیم کریں گے کہ یہ کام اس طرح نہیں کیا جا سکتا ہے کہ جلدی میں کچھ تجویزیں پیش کر دیں اور فیصلہ ہو گیا۔ جس طرح چاندی اور سونے کے سکے نکال میں ڈھالے جاتے ہیں۔ اُسی طرح ناموں کے لئے بھی ایک نکال چاہیئے۔ اگر آپ چاندی کو ہتھوڑے سے پیٹنا شروع کر دیں گے تو ایک پتھر تو بن جائیگا، لیکن سکے نہیں بنیں گے۔ سکے بنانے کے لئے سانچا ہونا چاہیئے۔ جب سکے سانچے میں ڈھالے جاتے ہیں، تب ہی اُن کی نوک پلک ٹھیک نکلتی ہے۔ آپ کو ناموں کے لئے بھی ایک نکال بنانی چاہیئے۔ اگر آپ پوچھیں کہ اس بارے میں گورنمنٹ کا کیا خیال ہے؟ تو میں یہ کہہ سکتا ہوں کہ ہم چاہتے ہیں، جونہی نئے کانستٹی ٹیوشن (Constitution) کے بنانے کے کام سے ہم فارغ ہوں، ہمیں ایک بورڈ بنانا چاہیئے جس میں ایسے expert رکھے جائیں جو اس کام کو ٹھیک طور پر سمجھتے ہوں اور نئے ناموں کو ٹھیک سانچے میں ڈھال سکیں۔ ابھی جو بل آپ کے سامنے آیا ہے، اُس میں Imperial library کی جگہ National library کا نام تجویز کیا گیا ہے۔ اب اگر نیشنل کی جگہ ہم کوئی ہندی لفظ رکھنا چاہتے ہیں، تو ہمیں فوراً کونا پوینا کہ کونسا لفظ رکھیں؟ بعض دوستوں کا خیال ہے کہ بھارتیا رکھنا چاہیئے بعضوں کا خیال ہے کہ راشتریا زیادہ اچھا ہوگا۔ لیکن میں سمجھتا ہوں، "د نیشنل" کا

[انریبل مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد]

تھیک تھیک مطالب ادا کرنے کے لئے شاید یہ دونوں لفظ موزوں نہیں ہیں۔ اگر آپ لائبریری کا نام انڈیا (India) یا انڈین (Indian) لائبریری رکھتے تو اس کی جگہ یہ لفظ آسکتا تھا۔ لیکن لفظ National کا ایک خاص مفہوم ہے اور ہمیں غور کرنا ہوگا کہ اس کے لئے تھیک تھیک لفظ کیا ہو سکتا ہے۔ ہو سکتا ہے۔ کہ سوچ بچار کرنے کے بعد یہی الفاظ تھیک ثابت ہوں لیکن بہر حال غور و فکر کی ضرورت ہے اور وہ ایک کمیٹی ہی کر سکتی ہے جو اس کام کے لئے ہتھائی جائیگی۔ جو بل آپ کے سامنے ابھی آیا ہے، وہ صرف اس لئے ہے کہ دسمپریل کا لفظ نکال دیا جائے۔ اس لئے نہیں ہے کہ آئندہ اسکا نام ہم کیا تجویز کریں گے نام ہمیں کسی ایک ہی انسٹی ٹیوشن کا نہیں بدلنا ہے۔ بے شمار انسٹی ٹیوشنوں کا بدلنا ہے۔ کوئی وجہ نہیں کہ صرف ایک نام کے لئے اس وقت جلدی کی جائے۔ ایجوکیشن منسٹری اس بارے میں غور کر چکی ہے، اور وہ مناسب موقع پر ایک بورڈ بنانے کی تجویز کو پیش کرنے والی ہے۔ تجویز آپ ہی کے سامنے آئیگی، اور آپ ہی سوچ سنبھکر قابل آدمیوں کا ایک بورڈ بنائیں گے اس وقت یہ کام تھیک طریقہ پر کیا جا سکتا۔

جناب! میں امید کرتا ہوں کہ میرے دوست اس سے اتفاق کریں گے۔

(English translation of the above speech).

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad (Minister for Education): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill to change the name of the Imperial Library, be taken into consideration."

It would be quite opportune if I explain the views of the Government on this particular aspect of the matter, as some of my honourable friends have taken interest in it.

At present the names of all our institutions, offices and factories are in English and we have become familiar with them. The Government fully realize that we should now change these names and substitute for them names in our language. But the Government also realize that this is not a matter on which we should be hurried through. We should accomplish this after careful consideration. There are hundreds of institutions in India which have English names. We have to consider that the Hindustani equivalent of English name which we adopt is quite apt and appropriate. You will agree that this object cannot be achieved by way of making proposals in a hurry and then taking a decision thereon. We should have a mint for coining names similar to the one used for moulding the gold and silver coins. If you hammer a piece of silver, it will no doubt turn into a thin sheet, but not into a coin. A mould is required for the manufacture of coins. When the coins are cast into the mould, it is only then that their points and edges are smoothened. You should set up a mint for coining names also. If you enquire about the views of the Government in this connection, I can say that as soon as the new Constitution of the country is adopted, a Board may be formed consisting of experts who understand this business thoroughly and can coin new and appropriate names. In this Bill which has just been moved for consideration, it has been proposed to substitute the word "National" for the word "Imperial" in the name of the Library. Now if we want to substitute any Hindi word for "National" then we shall have to find out as to what word we may substitute. Some friends have suggested "Bhartiya" and others think that "Rashtriya" would be much better. I feel that both these words are not quite appropriate to express the correct meaning of the word "National". If you change the name of the Library to "India" or "Indian" Library, then of course such a word could be used, but the word "National" connotes a certain idea, and we shall have to carefully think over and find out a suitable and appropriate word. It is possible that after consideration these words may be found quite suitable, but in any case, earnest consideration of the matter is necessary and this can only be entrusted to a Committee which will be constituted for this purpose. The Bill which has now been placed before you is only intended to drop the word "Imperial". It is not intended to suggest a substitute word? We have not only to change the name of one institution, but the names of innumerable institutions have to be changed. There is no reason to take hasty steps for changing one name only. The Ministry of Education have already thought over this matter and it is likely to put forward a proposal on some suitable occasion for the setting up of a Board. This proposal will come up before you and it would rest with you to constitute a Board of experts after careful consideration, and only then, this work could be properly done.

Sir, I hope my honourable friends will agree to this.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to change the name of the Imperial Library, be taken into consideration."
The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch Till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Mr. Speaker: Before we proceed with the discussion of the consideration motion, I may point out one thing to honourable members. In view of what the Honourable Minister stated by way of explanation and also the nature of the amendments before me, it appears the discussion will centre round one point, namely, the Indian name to be given to the Library—"whether any Indian name should be given at all, and if so what?" So, if the honourable members wish to discuss that point at this stage, they will have no further discussion on that point during the clause by clause stage. If they so like, they might not discuss it now, and when I put clause 2, the whole question will be open for discussion in a similar manner. I will just leave it to their option. I do not like to have a double discussion on the same subject. I believe my point is quite clear. There are amendments by Pandit Balkrishna Sharma, Shri Gokulbhai Bhatt, and Shri Kamath.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): I think the discussion may be left to the amendment stage.

Mr. Speaker: It depends on those who wish to speak. Practically there is no other point in this.

सेठ गोविन्द दास : सभापति जी, मैं मौलाना साहब के इस बिल का एक तरह से स्वागत करता हूँ।

अनुरिबल मौलाना अबुलकलाम आज़ाद एक तरह से

सेठ गोविन्द दास : जी हाँ, और मेरे स्वागत करने का सबब यह है कि कम से कम इम्पीरियल शब्द साम्राज्यवाद की हर चीज़ से हम अपने आपको छुड़ा रहे हैं। जहाँ तक साम्राज्यवाद सम्बन्धी शब्दों का ताल्लुक है मैं यह उम्मीद करता हूँ कि इस बिल के बाद मौलाना साहब और हमारी गवर्नमेंट के दूसरे माननीय मंत्रीगण भी इस तरह के बिलों को पेश करेंगे कि जहाँ जहाँ इन शब्दों का उपयोग हुआ है वहाँ वहाँ से यह शब्द निकाल दिये जायें। 'साम्राज्यवाद का नाश हो' यह नारा हमारे स्वराज्य

[सेठ गोविन्द दास]

के नारे के साथ ही लगा हुआ था और यह हमने बड़ी बड़ी सभाओं में, बड़े बड़े जलूसों में और सभी स्थानों पर लोगों को कहा है। स्वराज्य मिलने के बाद इस शब्द का उपयोग हमारी किसी भी संस्था के साथ होना मुनासिब नहीं है। मैं यह उम्मीद करता हूँ कि इस शब्द को केवल कलकत्ते की लाइब्रेरी के नाम से ही नहीं बल्कि जहाँ जहाँ इस शब्द का उपयोग हुआ होगा वहाँ वहाँ से निकालने का यह बिल आरम्भ है।

अब जो नाम इस पुस्तकालय को दिये जाने का प्रस्ताव मौलाना साहब कर रहे हैं उससे मेरा मतभेद है। यह कहा जाता है कि 'नैशनल' का अर्थ ही राष्ट्रीय होता है। मैं मानता हूँ कि होता है। पर जहाँ तक कि नामों का सम्बन्ध है वहाँ तक यह बात नहीं कही जा सकती। मसलन् मेरा नाम गोविन्द दास है, मौलाना साहब का अबुल कलाम आज़ाद साहब है, आपका मावलंकर साहब है। तो चाहे हम नामों को अंग्रेजी भाषा में लें, हिन्दी में लें, उर्दू में लें, हिन्दुस्तानी में लें, या संसार की किसी भी भाषा में लें वह नाम तो वैसे का वैसा ही रहेगा। यह तो नहीं हो सकता कि मेरा नाम हिन्दी में लिखा जायगा तो गोविन्द दास लिखा जायगा और दूसरी भाषा में लिखा जायगा तो दूसरी तरह। यह बात न मौलाना साहब के नाम के सम्बन्ध में हो सकती न आपके नाम के सम्बन्ध में हो सकती और न किसी और के नाम के सम्बन्ध में ही हो सकती है। संस्थाओं का नामकरण करने के सम्बन्ध में हमें ठीक शब्द का प्रयोग करना चाहिये यह नहीं कि उस शब्द के तर्जुमे को काम में लाया जाय। वह शब्द चाहे किसी भी भाषा में लिखा जाय, हिन्दी में लिखा जाय, उर्दू में लिखा जाय, हिन्दुस्तानी में लिखा जाय, या अंग्रेजी में लिखा जाय, हमेशा वैसे का वैसा ही रहना चाहिये। मैं ने सुना कि यह कहा गया है कि हमको तो कई चीज़ के नाम बदलने हैं। ठीक है, हमको अभी सड़कों के नाम बदलने हैं, हमको बड़े बड़े मकानों के नाम बदलने हैं। हमको इस काउन्सिल हाउस का नाम बदलना है, न मालूम कितने नाम बदलने हैं। लेकिन अगर उन नामों को हम अंग्रेजी में रखेंगे और उसके आगे ब्रेकिट में हिन्दी या उर्दू तर्जुमा रख देंगे तो इससे काम नहीं चल सकता। इसलिये मैं बड़े अदब के साथ मौलाना साहब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि वह इस पुस्तकालय का कोई भारतीय नाम रखें चाहे वह कोई भी हो मैं यह नहीं कहता कि फ़लों नाम ही हो पर वह हमारी भाषा का हो और उसके अनुवाद की ज़रूरत न पड़े।

तो, जैसा शुरू में कहा कि मैं एक तरह से इस बिल का स्वागत करता हूँ। मैं ने जिस कारण से उसका स्वागत किया वह मैं ने बतला दिया और जो अधुरापन मैं इस बिल में देख रहा हूँ वह भी मैं ने अर्ज कर दिया। मेरा ख्याल है कि नामों के मामले में हमको कोई न कोई सिद्धान्त बना लेना चाहिये और उस सिद्धान्त के अनुसार हमको सब संस्थाओं का नामकरण करना चाहिये। अब यह समय आ गया है और इस दृष्टि से मुझे इस बिल में जो अधुरापन दिखाई दे रहा है वह मैं ने बता दिया। मैं उम्मीद करता हूँ कि इस विषय पर फिर से विचार किया जायगा और केवल इसी पुस्तकालय के नाम में परिवर्तन करते समय इस बात का ख्याल नहीं किया जायगा बल्कि, जैसा मैं ने अभी निवेदन किया जब किसी भी संस्था का नाम बदला जायगा तब इस विषय पर विचार किया जायगा। यह

विषय हमारी संस्कृति से, हमारी तहजीब से सम्बन्ध रखता है। मैं यह कहना चाहता हूँ कि हमारी संस्कृति के अनुसार, हमारी तहजीब के अनुसार, हमारे कलचर (culture) के अनुसार हमारी संस्थाओं का नामकरण भी होना चाहिये। जिस दृष्टि से हम इस देश को आगे बढ़ाना चाहते हैं उसमें नामकरण का बहुत बड़ा महत्व है। नामकरण का महत्व हमारी संस्कृति में शुरू से रहा है और सदा रहेगा। और हमारी ही तहजीब में ही नहीं सारे संसार में जितनी सभ्यतायें हैं उन सबमें नामकरण का बहुत बड़ा महत्व है। इसलिये मैं उम्मीद करता हूँ कि मौलाना साहब इस पर उचित विचार करेंगे और हमारी संस्कृति से सम्बन्धित कोई नाम रखेंगे, अंग्रेजी नाम नहीं रखेंगे। मैं एक तरह से जैसा मैं ने अर्ज किया, इस बिल का स्वागत करता हूँ और दूसरे अपना यह सुझाव उनके सामने रखता हूँ।

(English translation of the above speech).

Seth Govind Das (C.P. and Berar: General): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the Bill moved by the Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad in one respect.

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: In one respect!

Seth Govind Das: Yes, Sir, and the reason for welcoming this is that at least we are dissociating ourselves from the word "Imperial" and all other things which are associated with "Imperialism". So far as the words connected with "Imperialism" are concerned, I hope that in the near future the Honourable Maulana and other Honourable Ministers will bring forth similar measures seeking to omit such words wherever they occur. The slogans "Down with Imperialism" and "Independence is our right" were correlated, and we raised these in mass meetings and processions and all other places. After the dawn of independence, it would not be appropriate to associate this word with any of our institutions. I hope that this Bill is a beginning of the removal of this word not only from the name of the Imperial Library Calcutta but from all other names where it has been used. I differ from the object of this Bill moved by the Honourable Maulana which seeks to change the name of this Library. It has been stated that the word "National" means "Rashtriya". I agree that this is so. But so far as these names are concerned, this is not so. For example my name is 'Govind Das'; that of the Honourable Maulana 'Abul Kalam Azad' and your, Sir, 'Mr. G. V. Mavalankar.' So in whatever language we call these names—may be English, Hindi, Urdu, Hindustani or any other language of the world, that name will remain unaltered. It cannot be that if my name is written in Hindi, it will be Govind Das, and when written in any other language, it would be something else. The position will be the same either with the name of the Honourable Maulana or of any other person. We should use the appropriate word for performing the 'Namkaran' ceremony (giving of name) of our institutions; and not merely literally translate the word. In whatever language that word be written, may be Hindi, Urdu, Hindustani or English, it should remain as it is. I heard this being pointed out that we have to change the names of so many things. It is true, we have still to change the names of roads, big buildings, and even of this Council House and many others. But if we retain these English names and put thereafter in the brackets the translation thereof in Hindi or Urdu—it will not serve the purpose. Therefore, with all due respects, I would request the Honourable Maulana that he may give an Indian name to this Library—whatever it may be—I do not specify any particular name—but that should invariably be in our own language and there should hardly be any necessity for its translation.

Therefore just as I stated at the outset, that I welcome this Bill in one respect. I have explained the reason for extending this welcome and I have also pointed out the shortcomings which I have noticed in this Bill. I am of the opinion that we should lay down some principle which should govern this matter, and on that basis change the names of our institutions. Now the time has come and I have pointed out the shortcomings in this Bill which I have observed. I hope that this matter will be reconsidered and what I have stated above will be borne in mind not only while changing the name of the Library, but would also be considered as and when the name of any institution is changed. This subject is associated with our culture and civilization. I would like to say that our institutions should be named in accordance with our culture and civilization. In whatever way we wish our country to progress, giving of names has an important place in it. This has occupied the foremost place in our culture and not only in our civilization but in the civilization of the entire world, the 'Namkaran' ceremony (giving of names) occupies an important place.

Therefore, I hope that the Honourable Minister will give the matter due consideration and find a name which may be associated with our culture, and not give an English name. Just as I have stated, I welcome this Bill in one respect, and place these suggestions before the Honourable Minister.

Mr. Speaker: I think it will be better if I put the motion for consideration to the House and then put the clauses. Honourable members may then have their say.

Some Honourable Members: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill to change the name of the Imperial Library, be taken into consideration." The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: Now I will take the Bill clause by clause. We shall take up clause 2. Mr. Gokulbhai Bhatt has given notice of two amendments on this clause. Mr. Gokulbhai Bhatt.

श्री गोकुलभाई दौलतराम भट्ट : श्रीमान् सभापति जी, मैं अपनी तरफ़ीम इस ढंग से नहीं रखना चाहता हूँ कि जिससे हमारे माननीय मंत्री महोदय को कोई दिक्कत पैदा हो। आजकल हम इतने उलझन में पड़े हुए हैं कि हमारी संस्थाओं के नाम रखने में हमें बहुत सोच विचार करना पड़ता है। इतने हमारे यहां पंडित, मौलवी और मौलाना होते हुए भी यह हमारी कमनसीबी है कि हमारे पुस्तकालय का नाम रखने के लिये हमें कई महीनों तक रुक जाना पड़ेगा और जब कोई एक नाम सुझाया जाता है तो वह नाम पसन्द नहीं आता है। उसे राष्ट्रीय कहें, या भारतीय कहें अगर ऐसा कोई नाम रखते हैं तो वह नाम जचता नहीं है। यह बात मैं जरूर मानता हूँ कि नाम रखने के पहले बहुत कुछ सोच विचार किया जाना चाहिये। लेकिन हम यह दलील करीबन १२ महीनों से सुनते आये हैं कि अब हमें नाम रखने के बारे में गहराई से सोचना पड़ेगा और अभी तक हम कोई भी विचार नहीं कर पाये हैं।

एक तरह से तो यह ठीक है कि "इम्पीरियल" शब्द निकल जाय, लेकिन उसकी जगह और कौन सा शब्द रखना चाहिए? मैं मानता था कि मौलाना साहब बड़े फ़ाज़िल हैं कि वह हमारे सामने जरूर ऐसा नाम रखेंगे जो अंग्रेज़ी नाम न हो और भारतीय भाषा का नाम हो। मैं समझता था कि वह वैसा ही नाम सुझावेंगे और वह हमको पसन्द आवेगा क्योंकि वे नाम सुझाने में काबिल हैं। लेकिन अफ़सोस की बात है कि आपने बतलाया कि नामों की बात हम विधान बनने के बाद सोचेंगे। विधान सभा के भी जो हिन्दी और उर्दू तर्जुमें हमारे सामने आते हैं उन तर्जुमों में जो चीज़ है मालूम नहीं कि वह तर्जुमा भी आप पसन्द करोगे और उसमें जो नाम सुझाये गये हैं उनको भी आप रखोगे या नहीं। तो मैं थोड़ी देर के लिए यह भी

सोचता था और सुझाना चाहता था कि यह इम्पीरियल शब्द कई सालों से चला आता है और अगर दो ही महीने और नाम रखने में लगेंगे तो क्यों इसमें अदल बदल करते हो क्योंकि यह नाम रखने से हमें उनके पीछे दूसरा खर्चा भी करना पड़ेगा, छपाई का खर्चा पड़ेगा और रिकार्ड्स (Records) में दुरुस्ती करनी पड़ेगी, और फिर दो महीनों के बाद हम जो नया नाम निकालेंगे वह नाम हमें बदलना पड़ेगा। तो हमने जो दुःख इतने सालों सहा है उसे दो महीने और सह लेंगे। हम धाव सहते सहते इतने मजबूत हो गये हैं और हमारी खाल इतनी मोटी हो गयी है कि हमें कोई दिक्कत नहीं होगी। जैसा कि सुबह मित्रों ने कहा था कि पासपोर्ट में अब भी एम्पायर (Empire) शब्द लिखा जाता है। तो ऐसी कई जगहें हैं जहाँ वे शब्द आ गये हैं और यह हमारी कमजोरी है और हमारी विद्वत्ता की कमी है कि हम जल्द ऐसे नाम नहीं सुझा सकते हैं कि जो हम उन नामों की जगह रख सकें और हमें पसन्द हों। लेकिन जैसा कि मैंने पहले कहा मैं मौलाना साहब के कथन के खिलाफ तो नहीं जाना चाहता हूँ, लेकिन मैं बड़े अदब के साथ कहना चाहता हूँ कि अगर उनको जंचा जाय तो वह अभी नाम बदलने के बजाय चार दिन के लिए इस बिल को स्थगित कर दें और एक नया नाम हमारे सामने रखें तो अच्छा होगा। और अगर चार दिन में वह ऐसा न कर सकें तो इसको दो महीने या चार महीने के बाद रखें। इसमें भी कोई बड़ी दिक्कत नहीं होगी। मैं यह चीज़ उन्हीं पर छोड़ता हूँ और यदि उनको यह सुझाव पसन्द हो तो वह उसको स्वीकार करें और इस बिल को स्थगित कर दें। यह कहते हुए मैं अपनी तरफ़ीमों को पेश नहीं करना चाहता हूँ।

(English translation of the above speech).

Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt (Eastern Rajputana States Group): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I do not want to put my amendment in a form which would create difficulty for the Honourable Minister. We are in such a fix these days that we have to consider a good deal in giving names to our institutions. It is our misfortune that in the presence of so many Pandits, Maulvis and Maulanas here, we will have to wait for several months before we can change the name of our Library, when a name is suggested it is not approved of. If we suggest "Rashtriya" or "Bhartiya" or anything like it, it does not seem appropriate. I do admit that before giving a name the matter should be very carefully considered—but we have been hearing these reasons for the last 12 months and even now we want to consider over the matter carefully before we can arrive at any decision. In one way, it is right that the word "Imperial" will be dropped, but what other word has to be substituted? I admit that the Honourable Minister is an erudite scholar and would surely suggest a name which is an Indian name. I understood that he would propose a name which would be liked by us because he is well qualified to suggest such a name. It is a matter of deep regret that he has now informed us that the question of giving names would be considered after the Constitution is adopted. It is uncertain whether you will at all like the Hindi and Urdu translations done by the Constituent Assembly and will retain the names suggested by them. I hesitated for a moment and wanted to suggest that since the word "Imperial" has been in use for long why then should we attempt to change it now and not wait for a couple of months more and avoid incurring extra expenditure in carrying out necessary corrections in the records. We can put up with this trouble for another two months as we have become hardened to sufferings. As some of my honourable friends remarked in the morning that the word "Empire" is still used in the Passports, and there are many other such places where such words have been used. This is our weakness and lack of knowledge inasmuch as we are not able to adopt suitable words according to our liking to replace the existing ones. As I have stated before, I do not want to oppose the statement made by the Honourable Maulana but [Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt] would respectfully submit that if he thinks fit he may postpone this Bill for a few days instead of changing the name now and then subsequently suggesting a new name. In case he cannot do this within a few days time, he may do so after a few months. This would not give rise to any appreciable difficulty. I leave this thing to him, and if he likes the suggestion, he may accept it, and postpone this Bill.

With these words, I do not want to move my amendments.

Mr. Speaker: He has got two amendments.

श्री गोकुलभाई दौलतराम भट्ट : मैं उन में से किसी को पेश नहीं करना चाहता ।

Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt: I do not want to move either of the two.

Mr. Speaker: That is what I wanted to know. Then the other amendments are by Mr. Kamath.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): I will say a few words on the clause itself, Sir, I am not moving the amendments.

The Honourable the Minister for Education while moving the Bill this morning made a few remarks which, though very sound in themselves, I feel could have been amended with a view to the changes that have taken place in our country since the 15th August 1947. He said that we must have a new s.n.ha for the new names to be incorporated, he wanted a new mould for these new names. I feel that after the 15th of August 1947 a new mould has been prepared. It is only for us Indians to cast our minds into that mould and if we are not able to fit our minds into that mould then we have ourselves to thank for it; and we cannot say that just because the mould is not ready or just because the conditions are not favourable, we cannot introduce or make certain changes.

Personally, let me make myself clear by saying that I am not opposed to English as such. Opposition to any language is, I believe, irrational. It is a prejudice as unwholesome as it is irrational. (Prof. N. G. Ranga. "Hear, hear".) We are not opposed to the English language, to the German language, or the French language or the Russian language.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Provided they remain in their own house.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Yes.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil (Minister for Works, Mines and Power): Any language.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Language is something which we must cherish. After all, man has spoken many languages since his birth, since his appearance on this globe and men in different communities, different groups, have evolved various languages all over the world. What we are concerned with is the thought behind the language and the ideas—good or bad—behind the language. We hated the British system. We hated British Imperialism. We fought British rule. But we never fought, we never disliked, we never hated the English language and that must be stressed today, because in certain quarters there is a campaign of late for banishment or for abolition of the English language. This is a wholly undesirable development. The language of the British, the language of England, has as many treasures as any of our languages. I won't make bold to say that it is richer than our Sanskrit or some of our other Indian languages, but certainly today, considering the world situation as we see it, English must have a place in our education, in our training, if we are to make ourselves felt in the councils of the world. Certainly when that happy day comes when Hindi or Hindustani will occupy as prominent a place, as eminent a place, as English or French or Russian, then we can say good-bye to English, but till then it will be very undesirable, very pernicious, very unwholesome, very unwelcome, on our part to dismiss English. It is a language to be cultivated, to be studied, by us. So on that ground I am not opposing this remark made by the Honourable Minister this morning.

But, Sir, there is one aspect of it and that is, English must, as I said, be studied because of its importance, of its value, of its contribution to Mathematics, to Science, to other subjects like even I would say Economics—the technical aspect of it. We have not got many terms in Hindi or Hindustani for Science or for Mathematics or such cognate subjects, but these little things—the changing of the name of a Library—and such trifling matters, I do not see why even at the very inception of it, from the very outset when we do the thing, we cannot have our own language. If you go to Europe or Germany or France, certainly in the Universities you might see English is being taught or another foreign language is being taught, but you will never come across a Library being called just a Library. It is called Bibliothek in France or Büchhaus in Germany. They won't call it a Library. So, here this little thing "National Library"—we certainly have got very apt terms in our language—Hindi or Hindustani—to explain or to put it clearly. In my own Province after the 15th August 1947 the names of certain institutions—Government institutions—have been changed. The Honourable Minister said, if I remember him aright, that there are many names of Government institutions which cannot be changed all of a sudden. But in my own Province of C. P. and Berar, the names of certain Government institutions have been changed on the very day, on the 15th of August, when Ministers were invited to inaugurate certain functions, when they were invited to perform the ceremony at a particular institution. For instance, in Jubbulpore the old Robertson College has been re-named as Mahakosala Mahavidyalaya and in Nagpur the Morris College has been re-named as Nagpur Mahavidyalaya and in Berar—my honourable friend is not here—it has been changed into Vidharba Mahavidyalaya; and the latest is the Veterinary College in Jubbulpore which has been called Pashu Mahavidyalaya, I am sorry, Sir, Pashuchikitsa Mahavidyalaya. My point, Sir, is that when these little matters come up, like changing the name into "National Library", I want to know on what basis the Honourable Minister said that the word "Rashtriya" does not bring out the meaning or the implication of the word "National". So far as this word is concerned, I may point out that since the inception of the Indian National Congress it has been called the "National Congress" in English and in Hindi or Hindustani it has always been called "Rashtriya Congress or Mahasabha" and the Honourable Minister when he graced the Presidential Chair of the Congress, he was called "Rashtrapathi". So, if "Rashtriya" does not imply the "nation", then I do not know what word the Honourable Minister has for it. I really do not know what word he may have in his armoury or how he will translate this word "national". Anybody in India will understand that "Rashtriya" means "national". Of course, he suggested that we might name it "Indian" Library or something like that, and that is why my amendment was there to call it "Hind Pushtakalaya". Library is a collection of books—a Pushtakalaya. For those who do not know the etymology of the word "Library", for Indians who are not educated or illiterate, Library may not mean that there are books there, but the word "Pushtakalaya"—Home of Books—anybody will understand. Now, Sir, it has been said by a big man of letters that a "University" is a collection of books. He said it about University and not about Library, but at least in our country when we are not promoting the cause of Universities to the same extent as we desire to, we should certainly start libraries all over the country. I would like Travelling Libraries or Circulating Libraries, and the very apt name would be "Pustakalaya". We have got "Himalaya"—the abode of snow, so also "Pustakalaya"—the abode of books. Therefore I would suggest that at a very early date the Honourable Minister should, in consultation with his colleagues in the Cabinet, change this name "Indian" or "National" Library to "Rashtriya" or "Hind" Pustakalaya. It is a very minor thing. I do not know why he is so much agitated about it and why he should not have incorporated it in this Bill itself today.

[Shri H. V. Kamath]

Finally, I make an appeal to him. Our Library should be national not only in name but in spirit. The name is going to be changed to "National Library", but formerly our Imperial Library, whose name we are going to change now, banned or refused to entertain certain books, which we, in our newly won national independence like to cherish. I cannot give you an exhaustive list of such books which were proscribed by the late Government and were not admitted into the Imperial Library, but certain books I have in my mind. I do not know whether the ban on them has been lifted by our own national Government, after it came into power. One book which was at times banned, again the ban on which was lifted and again re-imposed was the book called "The Indian Struggle" by Netaji Subash Chandra Bose. I do not know what the present position is about that book. Again, there is the book by Pandit Sunderlal called "Bharat me Angrezi Raj" in three volumes that was banned from time to time and when the Congress Ministries came into power the ban was lifted. All such books which were banned by the old Government must be made available to the Indian people and they must be housed in this new Library, so that it would be a truly National Library, not merely in name, and form, but national in spirit and content as well.

3. P.M. able to the Indian people and they must be housed in this new Library, so that it would be a truly National Library, not merely in name, and form, but national in spirit and content as well.

बाबू राम नारायण सिंह : सभापति जी, इस बिल का मैं भी कुछ स्वागत करता हूँ, क्योंकि मुझे भी कुछ खुशी है। एक वर्ष गुजरा जब राष्ट्रीय सरकार स्थापित हुई, लेकिन देखने सुनने में, बोल चाल में, रहन सहन में, कार्यवाही में सब कुछ अंग्रेजी देखने में आती है। लेकिन यह सब देख कर जरा अच्छा नहीं मालूम होता। अंग्रेज यहां से चल गये, राष्ट्रीय सरकार की स्थापना हुई लेकिन हर बात में स्थिति ज्यों की त्यों है। लेकिन मौलाना साहब ने कहा कि नाम तो सब बदलने होंगे, इसके बारे में सरकार ने विचार किया है और एक बोर्ड बनेगा और उसमें ऐसी ऐसी कार्यवाही होगी, जिसमें सब नाम बदल दिये जायें यह तो मुझे सुन कर खुशी मालूम हुई। लेकिन जब यह सब होना ही है कि एक बोर्ड बनेगा बहुत से नाम बदलेंगे, तो इस नाम को बदलने के लिये इतना कष्ट क्यों उठाये इसकी जरूरत मुझे नहीं मालूम होती है। लेकिन जो कुछ हो एक बात का सवत मेरे सामने है, प्रमाण है और मुझे कुछ खुशी है कि हमारी सरकार एक वर्ष के अन्दर खूब गहराई से सोचने और विचारने के बाद नाम बदलने का विचार कर सकी। नाम बदलने की प्रवृत्ति तो हमारी सरकार में आने लगी, इसकी मुझे खुशी है और इसके लिये मैं मौलाना साहब को और अपनी राष्ट्रीय सरकार को बधाई देता हूँ। अगरचे खूब तहेदिल से तो नहीं लेकिन थोड़ा थोड़ा। साहब कैसी बात है मान लीजिये कि आपको नाम बदलना है तो इसके लिये इस परिषद् में बिल की क्या जरूरत थी? उस पर भी किसी हिन्दुस्तानी भाषा में एक नाम नहीं मिलता। इस भारतवर्ष में कितनी भाषाएँ हैं, हमारी कितनी प्राचीन सभ्यता है, संस्कृत जो हमारी भाषा है और उसकी जैसी रचनात्मक शक्ति है दुनिया की किसी भाषा में नहीं है। इतनी बड़ी सरकार को कोई शब्द नहीं मिल सका कि इस पुस्तकालय का नाम किसी भारतीय भाषा में रखा जाय। खैर 'इम्पीरियल' से हटकर 'नेशनल' हुआ। तो इससे तो मुझे बहुत सन्तोष इस बात का है। पहले तो मुझे मालूम होता था कि सरकार के सभी कार्य अभी भी वाइट हाल (White Hall) ही में होते हैं। लेकिन अब मालूम होता है कि उसकी प्रवृत्ति फिर रही है। कम से कम 'इम्पीरियल' से 'नेशनल' तो हुआ यानी

इंग्लैंड से चल कर डोवर तो पार हुआ। यह खुशी की बात है। मैं समझता हूँ कि कुछ लोग तरमीम भी लाये और संशोधन भी पेश किये, वह भी नहीं पेश करते हैं। मैं भी विरोध तो नहीं करना चाहता लेकिन मौलाना साहब से मैं बड़े सम्मान के साथ अर्ज करता हूँ कि इस बिल को क्यों पेश करते हैं? बदलकर ऐसा नाम क्यों रखते हैं? नाम तो बदलना ही होगा। आप न बदलेंगे, तो दूसरे ही बदलेंगे। इसलिये इधर दो, चार पहीने के लिये नाम बदलने के लिये आपने यह हुल्ला क्यों किया है। इस वास्ते मैं कहता हूँ अच्छा हो यदि यह बिल वापिस ले लिया जाय। मैं विरोध नहीं करता और कोई संशोधन भी नहीं लाता जिसका मैं समर्थन करूँ लेकिन मैं अदब के साथ सलाह देता हूँ कि यह तो साबित हुआ कि खूब सोचने के बाद कुछ अदल बदल हो तो क्या ही अच्छा होता। इसको अभी मुलतवी किया जाय। यह कह कर मैं समाप्त करता हूँ।

(English translation of the above speech).

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: (Bihar: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I also welcome this Bill to a certain extent as I do feel some pleasure. One year has passed since the National Government was set up, but in every walk of life, thought, speech and action, English is still pervading. When we see all this, it does not look nice. The Britishers have left and the National Government has been installed, but the things remain as they were. I am glad to hear from the Honourable Maulana that as all the names have got to be changed, the Government have considered this over and a Board will be set up which will take necessary action in the matter. But when all this is to be done viz., setting up of a Board for changing of many names; then I cannot quite understand what is the necessity for taking all this trouble to change this particular name? Whatever it may be, I have one thing before me to prove, and it gives me some pleasure to say that our Government could decide to change one name after a year's careful consideration. I am pleased to find that our Government has after all made a start in changing the names and for this I congratulate the Honourable Maulana and the National Government though not whole-heartedly. Sir, even taking it for granted that you are to change the name, what is the necessity for a Bill in this House for the purpose? Even then no Hindustani name could be found. How many languages are there in this country? How old is our civilization? No other language in the world has so much creative capacity as our Sanskrit language. I really wonder that this mighty Government could not find any Indian word as substitute for this Library. Very well; from "Imperial" it has been changed to "National". This even is a matter of great gratification to me. Previously I felt that all the business of the Government was still being transacted in the Whitehall, but now it appears that this tendency has been changed. At least this name has been changed from "Imperial" to "National". In other words we have crossed the Dover Canal on our way back from England. This is a matter of great satisfaction. I appreciate this; and just as some other honourable members who have tabled amendments but are not moving them, I also do not want to oppose this measure, but with due respect, I would like to enquire from the Honourable Maulana as to why he has brought up this Bill? Why does he want to change the name in this way? The name has got to be changed. If you do not change, somebody else will change. Therefore, why have you raised so much hue and cry for changing this name for a few months only? Therefore, I would submit that it would be better if this Bill is withdrawn. Neither I oppose it nor do I move any amendment but I would respectfully submit that it is quite obvious that it would have been much better had this change been made after most careful consideration.

With these words, I resume my seat.

श्री महावीर त्यागी : श्रीमानजी, मैं वजीर साहब को बहुत मुबारकबाद देता हूँ कि इन्होंने लफज इम्पीरियल को हटा दिया। मैं नेशनल और इम्पीरियल वगैरह में अपने हिसाब से कोई बहुत ज्यादा फर्क नहीं समझता मेरे लिये तो इम्पीरियल लाईब्रेरी भी काबिल हज्म करने की चीज थी। इस वास्ते किसी संस्था का नाम 'इम्पीरियल' हो या 'रायल' मुझे कोई दिक्कत नहीं मालूम होती, न मुझे कोई परेशानी होती है। यह तो महज् सेंटिमेंट (sentiments) पर मबनी है और इसका कोई खास असर हमारे देश की पालिटिक्स (politics) में पड़ता नहीं है। मुझे तो अफसोस इस बात का है कि हम कानून की कीचड़ में इतना ज्यादा फंस गये हैं कि हमको गोया एक बिल लाना पड़ा केवल नाम बदलने के लिये। कानूनी दिक्कत पड़ती है। मेरे हिसाब से जितने मुल्कों में क्रांती होती है, उनमें सारी चीज एक दम बदल जाती है, कोई कानून की ज़रूरत नहीं पड़ती है और सब अदलबदल हो जाता है। यह केवल हमारी बदकिस्मती है कि हमारी आजादी भी आई तो वह एक अजीब तरह का कपड़ा पहने आई। पन्द्रह तारीख को हमने देखा कि वह एक फ्रॉक (frok) पहने आई। उसने अंगरेजों में कुछ कहा। न हम उसको समझसके और न वह हमारी बात समझ सकी। आजादी आई तो हिन्दुस्तान में, पर मौलाना साहब आप भी इसको महसूस करेंगे कि आजादी कुछ मखलूत सी आई अपनी विरादरी की नहीं आई।

श्री महावीर त्यागी : आपके जायके से मैं वाकिफ हूँ।

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member should address the chair.

श्री महावीर त्यागी : I am sorry. हज़ूर वालों मैं वजीर साहब के जायके से भी वाकिफ़ हूँ।

मैं समझता हूँ कि इस किस्म की कानूनी कीचड़ में फसे रहने से हम कोई काम नहीं कर सकेंगे गो, हिन्दुस्तान में दस किस्म के कानूनों की दिक्कत अदालत वगैरह की होगी यह किस चक्कर में है मेरी समझ में नहीं आसका। एक बात मैं ज़रूर समझता हूँ कि नाम बदलने में कोई न कोई कानूनी दिक्कत बहरहाल हुई होगी लेकिन क्या बात है क्या वजीर साहब की कलम को कोई रोक लेता है कोई सेक्रेटरियट की दिक्कत है, अगर फर्ज कीजिये आप खुद कोई नाम भी लिखलेते मेरे खयाल से हकूमत को चलाने में परेशानी नहीं होती। हमारी जहिनयत यह होनी चाहिये कि छोटे छोटे कानूनी नुक्तों को पूरा करने की तरफ हमारा बड़ा वकत न लगे एक बात ज़रूर तस्सली वरख है कि आपने इम्पीरियल लफज को हटाया है। मैं इसके साथ साथ इसकी भी तारीफ़ करता हूँ कि आप सेक्रेटरियट वगैरह का नाम बदलें इम्पीरियल का नाम बदला वह सब अच्छा है, लेकिन मैं साथ ही चाहता हूँ कि गर्वनमेंट की जहिनयत भी जो इम्पीरियल है बदल जाय तो बेहतर है। मुझे ऐसा लग रहा है कि चारों तरफ की हवा जो हमें कहती है, वह यही कहती है कि शब्द 'इम्पीरियल' तो चला गया और एम्पायर (Empire) से तुम अलग भी होगये लेकिन तुम्हारे मैनर्स (manners) संस्कृति और तुम्हारी डिगनिटी (dignity) का तखैय्युल और तसब्बुर उसी तरीके से चला आता है। एंग्लोइण्डियन (Anglo-Indian) स्नोबिशनेस (Snobbishness) हमारे देश में अभी तक रह रही है। मेरे अर्ज करने की मन्शा यह है कि जो यह लफज की कदम उठाया गया है, उसको अमली जामा पहनाने की कोशिश की जाय और हम

अपने तरीकों में अपने बरताव में और गर्वनमेंट के चलाने का जो ढंग है उसमें वाकई एक नेशनल तरीके पर आजायें यानी उनके रवायात को उनका ढंग डिनर (Dinner) का उनका ढंग हकूमत का रोब दाब बिठाने का छोड़ दे हम यह समझें कि हमें उनकी तरह हकूमत नहीं करना है। हमें रईसों पर हकूमत करना नहीं है। हम तो गरीबों के नुमाइन्दे हैं। इसलिये हमारे मैनर्स (manners) हमारे तरीके हमारे रीती रिवाज ऐसे आजाय जो कि हमारे गांव में रहने वाले और शहरों में रहने वाले गरीब आदमियों के मुनासिब हों और उनके समझने के काबिल हों और जो उनको राहत पहुंचाने का काम करसकते हैं वाकई मानों में नेशनल हो सकते हैं। मैं उम्मीद करता हूँ कि हमारे दो बहुत बुर्जग लीडर हिन्दुस्तान भर के और आज जो इस महकमे के मालिक हैं वजीर हैं उन्होंने यह जो कदम उठाया है, ज़रूर इसके पीछे यह उम्मीद और स्वाहिश भी वाबस्ता होगी जिसके बारे में मैंने अभी अर्ज किया और वह एक अमली कदम होगा। असल में हिन्दुस्तान की ज्यादातर निगाहें अपने उन दो, चार बुर्जगों की तरफ हैं जो कि आज इन ज़िम्मेदार पोर्ट-फोलियों को लिये बैठे हैं और अपने जमाने में कोई अमली कदम उठा सकते हैं। मैं यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि अगर यह नेता, दो तो सामने बैठे हैं मैं इनको आपकी मारफ़त अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि अगर यह नेता अपने जमाने में कोई अमली काम ऐसा कर दें जिससे कि हिन्दुस्तान की तहजीब और हिन्दुस्तानी तरीकों पर हम आजायें, तो मैं उम्मीद करता हूँ कि हमारा कुछ कल्याण हो। यह एक पेश खेमा है कि लफज का जो बदलाव हुआ है और मैं उम्मीद करता हूँ कि इसके साथ साथ अमली बदल लाने की भी कोशिश की जायगी

(English translation of the above speech)

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): Sir, I heartily congratulate the Honourable Minister that he has dropped the word "Imperial". According to my reading, I do not find any appreciable difference between the words "Imperial" and "National". To me, even the name 'Imperial Library' was tolerable. Nor do I feel in any way troubled or perplexed by the name of any institution—may it be "Imperial" or "Royal". This is merely sentimental and does not effect the politics of our country. What pains me is that we are too much involved in the technicalities of law simply to change the name. There are legal difficulties. According to my views, when the revolution takes place in any country, it atonce produces an overall change in all directions. It obviates the necessity for any law. Everything undergoes a radical change. It is our utter misfortune that when we attained independence it was clothed in strange garments. On the 15th of August we saw that she was putting on a frock. She uttered something in English; and neither could we understand her nor could she understand us. Freedom came to India, but the Honourable Maulana will surely realize that it came in a mixed form—it did not originate as a native of the country.

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: It is not necessary that the beloved should belong to any particular country.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I know your taste.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member should address the Chair.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I am sorry. Sir, I know the taste of the Honourable Minister

[Shri Mahavir Tyagi]

I feel that by involving ourselves in this sort of legal intricacies we will not be able to achieve anything, but many such legal difficulties would be felt by the courts in India. I can not understand what this is about? One thing which I follow is that some legal difficulty must have been experienced in changing the name. But what does that matter? Does anybody stand in the way? Are there any secretarial difficulties? Supposing you had yourself substituted the name, would that have created any difficulty for the Government to give effect to it? Our tendency should not be towards wasting much of our time in dealing with minor legal points. It is a matter of gratification that you have dropped the word "Imperial". I would also suggest that the name of the Secretariat and other names should be changed. I welcome the change of the word "Imperial". I would further emphasize that it would be better that the outlook of the Government which is Imperial should also be changed. We feel on all sides that now when the word "Imperial" has been dropped and we have separated ourselves from the "Empire", our manners, culture and dignity are still imbued in the old spirit. Anglo-Indian snobbishness is still present in our country. What I mean to say is that now when this wordy campaign has been started, we should endeavour to give practical shape to it and to bring ourselves on to the national path so far as our manner, behaviour, and the methods of running the Government are concerned. In other words, we should bid good-bye to their customs and traditions and discard their practice of giving of dinners and of enhancing the prestige of their Government if we realize that we are not to follow in their footsteps. We do not want to rule over the rich; we are the representatives of the poor and should therefore, adopt such manners, customs and usages, which should be to the liking of our masses living both in the cities and villages and susceptible of being understood by them. It is then only that we can be 'national' in the real sense. I hope, just as I have stated above, this would be the idea underlying the steps which have been taken by this veteran leader of India who is in charge of the Education portfolio, and that practical effect would be given to it. In fact the majority of the Indians are looking to these few veterans who are in charge of the important portfolios and who can take any practical steps during their time. I would, therefore, like to request these two leaders who are sitting in the House through you, Sir, that in case they take any such practical steps to bring home the Indian culture and re-orientate our mode of living, this would surely benefit us. The change in the word is only a beginning and I hope that along with this, efforts will also be made to bring about a practical change.

An Honourable Member: The question may now be put.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the question may now be put."

The motion was adopted.

آنریبل مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد: جناب! میں پھر اپنے دوستوں کو ان باتوں کی طرف توجہ دلاؤں گا جو میں نے تحریک کرتے ہوئے کہی تھیں۔ جو بل اس وقت پیش کیا گیا ہے، اسکا مطالب صرف یہ ہے کہ دہ امپیریل کے لفظ نکال دیا جائے۔ میرے ایک دوست نے یہ کہا ہے کہ اگر اس کے ہندی نام کا معاملہ اسوقت طے نہیں کیا جاتا ہے تو کیوں نے پورا معاملہ ملتوی کر دیا جائے۔ وہ کہتے ہیں اس تبدیلی کی اسوقت ضرورت کیا ہے؟ میں کہوں گا کہ بڑی ضرورت ہے میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ ہندو اگست کے بعد ہندوستان کے آسمان کے نیچے دہ امپیریل کے لفظ کی جگہ نہیں ہونی چاہئے۔ اور جن جن انسٹی ٹیوشنوں کے نام کے ساتھ یہ لفظ موجود

ہے، ان سب کا نام بدل دینا چاہئے ایجوکیشن منسٹری ایک اور تبدیلی بھی کر چکی ہے جس کے لئے بل کے لانے کی ضرورت نہ تھی یعنی دہ امپیریل ریکارڈ، و آفس کے نام سے بھی دہ امپیریل کے لفظ نکالا جا سکتا ہے۔

باقی رہی یہ بات کہ دہ امپیریل کی جگہ انگریزی لفظ دینیشنل ہے کیوں رکھا گیا۔ کہوں نہ اپنی زبان کا لفظ رکھا گیا؟ تو اسکی وجہ آپ کو معلوم ہے۔ ہمارے تمام انسٹی ٹیوشنوں کے نام انگریزی میں رکھے گئے تھے۔ ابھی تک وہی نام چلے آتے ہیں اور ہم انگریزی کو ان کی جگہ سے ابھی تک نہیں ہٹا سکے ہیں۔ اس لئے دہ امپیریل کی جگہ صاف بات یہ معلوم ہوئی کہ دینیشنل کے لفظ رکھ دیا جائے۔ لیکن اس کا یہ مطلب نہیں ہے کہ گورنمنٹ انگریزی ناموں کو بدلنے کا ارادہ نہیں رکھتی اور اسے اس ضروری بات کے ماننے میں کوئی ججھک ہے۔ میں بل پر غور کرنے کی تحریک کرتے ہوئے آپکو بتلا چکا ہوں کہ ایجوکیشن منسٹری کا اس بارے میں کیا خیال ہے۔ منسٹری خیال کرتی ہے کہ جونہی نئے کانسٹی ٹیوشن کے بنانے کا کام ختم ہوگا، طرح طرح کے نئے سوال اس ہاؤس کے سامنے آکھڑے ہوں گے۔ ان میں ایک بڑا سوال یہ بھی ہو گا کہ آئیندہ تمام سرکاری انسٹی ٹیوشنوں اور دفاتروں کا نام کیا ہونا چاہئے؟ ظاہر ہے کہ آئیندہ انگریزی نام باقی نہیں رکھے جا سکتے۔ پس ضروری ہوگا کہ نئے ناموں کے تجویز کرنے کے لئے ایک کمیٹی بنائی جائے۔ کمیٹی میں ایسے آدمی رکھے جائیں جو اس کام کے لئے اکسپرت سمجھے جا سکتے ہیں۔ یہ کمیٹی معاملہ کے تمام پہلوؤں پر غور کریگی اور پھر وہ انگریزی نام کی جگہ نیا نام ڈھالنے کی کوشش کرے گی۔ ناموں کا معاملہ اتنا سہل نہیں ہے جتنا سہل میرے بعض دوست خیال کر رہے ہیں۔ میں نے آپ سے کہا تھا کہ اس کے لئے ہمیں ایک تھکسال چاہئے۔ جس طرح چاندی سونے کے سکے ڈھالنے کے لئے تھکسال بنائی جاتی ہے۔ تھیک اسی طرح ناموں کے ڈھالنے کے لئے بھی ایک تھکسال کی ضرورت ہے۔ چاندی سونے کے پترے ہر شخص ہتھوری لیکر بنا سکتا ہے۔ لیکن سکے نہیں بنا سکتا۔ سکے بنانے کے لئے ایک سانچا ہونا چاہئے جس سے سکے کے تمام نقش و نگار پوری طرح ڈھل کر نکل سکیں۔

میرے ایک دوست نے ابھی کہا ہے کہ آپ اتنے بڑے پڑھے لکھے آدمی ہو۔ کیا آپ کوئی ایک نام اسکے لئے تجویز نہیں کر سکتے۔ اس میں پڑھے لکھے ہونے کا کوئی سوال نہیں ہے کام سوچ سمجھ کر کرنے کا ہے اسے بلاوجہ جلدی میں کیوں کیا جائے؟ ہم نے اسٹینڈنگ کمیٹی میں بھی اس پر غور کیا تھا۔ لیکن ہم فیصلہ نہیں کر سکے کہ زیادہ موزوں نام کیا ہوگا۔ اس موقع پر بھی دہ بھارتی اور دہ راشٹریا کے لفظ ہمارے سامنے آئے تھے اور اس میں شک ظاہر کیا گیا تھا کہ دینیشنل کا یہ تھیک مطلب ادا کرتے ہیں یا نہیں؟ آنریبل مسٹر کامتھ نے ہمیں یاد دلایا ہے کہ دہ اندین نیشنل کانگریس کے ترجمہ میں دہ نیشنل کے لئے دہ راشٹریا کے لفظ رکھا گیا تھا۔ مجھے

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U. P.: General): I have very attentively listened to the Honourable Minister. I want to ask him one question. He has said that a large number of names have to be changed. I see the difficulty. But I want that the House from henceforth should not add any new English names. A Committee may be appointed afterwards to change the old names but I cannot see any sense in continuing to use English names and of adding new English names. I see we have a legacy of slavery and we have to change all those names. Henceforth we should not go on adding new names in English which will have to be changed again.

Mr. Speaker: I do not think the Honourable Minister desires to say anything more.

The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

BOMBAY PUBLIC SECURITY MEASURES (DELHI AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Minister for Home, Information and Broadcasting and the States): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to amend the Bombay Public Security Measures Act, 1947, as extended to the Province of Delhi, be taken into consideration."

This short measure has originated in the trial for murder of Nathuram Godse and his companions. When we extended to the Delhi Province the provisions of the Bombay Public Security Measures Act and appointed a special tribunal for this trial, doubts were raised whether this tribunal had any authority to grant pardon to any person who offered himself as a Crown witness.

The House is aware of the procedure adopted by the Government in appointing a special tribunal. It was due to the fact that we found from experience that the ordinary procedure of double trial—committal proceedings and the consequential sessions proceedings—involves such a long delay as would cause considerable harm in a case like this. In spite of having adopted this rather swift procedure, we now find from experience that even the adoption of this procedure of a special tribunal has not yielded the results we expected: the trial is carrying on from day to day and has lost much in the objective of a speedy trial. Still something is better than nothing.

When this procedure was adopted we came against this difficulty. Doubts were expressed whether this Tribunal had any authority to grant pardon to any person who offers himself to be a Crown witness. To meet this difficulty we passed an ordinance. Then when the Ordinance was passed giving this authority we thought that within a period of six months the trial would end. Now doubts have been raised whether the trial would end before the Ordinance expires, because the final ending of the trial may include an appeal, and therefore it is better to err on the safe side and to have this procedure legalised. Therefore we have brought in this short measure to provide against these doubts. Even if the appeal takes time—the possibility of conviction and the appeal being there—it would be better to have this as a permanent measure, because not only in this case but on any future occasion when such a tribunal may be necessary, there will then be no need to go in for an ordinance giving such power or having a special legislation of this nature.

Therefore I have come to the House to have this legislation passed, and since it is non-controversial, I hope that the House will adopt it.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill to amend the Bombay Public Security Measures Act, 1947, as extended to the Province of Delhi, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: I find that there are two amendments by Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I am advised by the Law Department that Government should not accept those amendments.

Mr. Speaker: The amendments are not accepted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): In that case I do not move them.

Mr. Speaker: In that case there are no amendments.

The question is:

"That clauses 2 and 3 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

MINES AND MINERALS (REGULATION AND DEVELOPMENT) BILL

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil (Minister for Works, Mines and Power): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to provide for the regulation of mines and oilfields and for the development of minerals, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The House is aware that when this Bill was referred to the Select Committee, whatever information was necessary for a proper appreciation of the provisions of this Bill was given by me to the House. In Select Committee, certain changes in the light of criticisms offered by honourable members in the House have been effected. I want to bring to the notice of the House the main and important changes effected by the Select Committee in the main Bill.

The House is aware that in the original Bill the extent of this Bill was limited to India minus States. The Select Committee thought it, and quite rightly, that if uniformity of legislation in this matter is a desirable thing, this Bill should be extended to such of the States as have acceded to the Indian Union, and this amendment has been accepted by the Select Committee.

The second important change that has been effected by the Select Committee in the main Bill referred to the prohibition of certain minerals and certain areas from being worked. It was thought that this aspect of it was already covered by the phraseology used in clause 5 of the Bill but to leave no doubt it was thought prudent that an express provision should be made enabling the rule-making authority to make rules to prohibit certain minerals or certain areas being worked. That amendment has been accepted. As a consequential amendment to this it was found necessary to make provision that where any mineral or any area has been prohibited from being exploited by an individual under rules made under clause 5 of this Bill it becomes a sort of obligation on the part of the Government to make a positive provision for its exploitation. Towards that aim a suitable amendment has been effected in clause 6 of the Bill.

Another important amendment that has been effected by the Select Committee is with respect to clause 9 which provides penalty. Originally there was no provision for substantive imprisonment. It was pointed out by one of the members of the Select Committee who comes from a province in which there are plenty of minerals and who has quite a large experience to his credit, that a mere pecuniary penalty would not secure the object which this Bill has obviously in view. He therefore suggested that in addition or in the alternative substantive punishment should be provided for any breach of any of the rules that may be promulgated under this Act. That suggestion has been accepted and provision has been made that the penalty may extend to 6 months imprisonment or with fine which may extend up to Rs. 1,000 or with both.

And the last important change that has been effected by the Select Committee was with respect to the exception or exemption clause. The House is well aware that in any piece of legislation where attempt is made at the regulation and control of any commodity and its movement, the relevant authority is always clothed with the power to grant exception or exemption in certain well defined cases. With that object in view clause 12 was originally framed. But in the course of the discussion of the Select Committee it was pointed out that as the clause stood it gave a wide power, which was far wider than the circumstances would justify. Although it did not appeal to some of us yet compromise being the essence of politics and all democratic governments the Government accepted it and to the extent to which it was feared that this power would be likely to be abused to that extent the clause has been modified.

These are the four main changes introduced by the Select Committee in the provisions of the Bill as it was referred to the Select Committee. Sir, I have nothing more to say and as I find that there is not a single amendment on the order paper I think it legitimate to presume that this Bill has got the wholehearted support of the House. Sir, I move.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to provide for the regulation of mines and oilfields and for the development of minerals, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain (U.P.: General): Sir, I have no intention to take much time but I want to draw the attention of the House to one amendment which the Select Committee has made and that relates to clause 5. This clause relates to the power to make rules regarding mining leases. The Honourable Minister during the course of his short speech said that this power was already inherent in the Bill and that these words have been added in order to further clarify the position. I accept that explanation. But I would suggest that the proper place for making the change is not clause 5 but clause 6, because clause 5 deals with the power to regulate the grant of mining leases, whereas clause 6 deals with the power to conserve and develop the minerals. The prohibition of the grant of mining leases in any area is with the object of conserving minerals. I have given notice of two amendments. It appears that the Honourable Minister has not seen them. I am not very particular about them, but if the Honourable Minister thinks that the right thing should be in the right place, he would accept my amendments. If the amendments of which I have given notice are acceptable to him and if he gives an indication, I shall move them. If on the contrary he thinks that he wants to retain the prohibition in clause 5, I will not move the amendments, though I think that the prohibition was meant for the conservation of minerals and the proper place for it is clause 6.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Sir, I have nothing to say by way of reply as regards the arrangement of the clauses, to which reference has been made by my honourable friend. The Bill has been drafted by the Ministry of Law, which is presumably expert in that line. If it is only putting a handkerchief in the left pocket instead of in the right pocket it makes no difference and in the absence of any notice to me as regards the particular wording of the amendment I am sorry I am unable to accept it.

Mr. Speaker: The Honourable Minister, in the course of his speech referred to the fact that there are no amendments. On the other hand, I find that there are some amendments, though of course I must say that in the agenda issued the amendments were not shown. The agenda was issued a few days ago and the amendments came subsequently.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Sir, I have not got even a copy of them.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U. P.: General): Sir, the Bill should have been more comprehensive instead of leaving the task to the Government to make rules. It would have been much better had there been more provision to achieve the objective of the Bill, and left the rule-making powers to the Central Government for minor details.

I particularly invite attention to clause 9 relating to penalties. It says:

"Any rule made under any of the provisions of this Act may provide that any contravention thereof shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to six months or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both."

It would have been much better to say that any breach or contravention of this Act would be punishable with imprisonment for six months and further that all rules made under any of the provisions of this Act shall be laid before the Central Legislature as soon as may be possible after they are made. It would have been better if the Bill had been more comprehensive and Government had been empowered to make Rules. Instead of their making the Rules, then coming before the Legislature and getting then passed, it would have been simpler if the Act had been more comprehensive and left the rule-making power to the Central Government.

With these few words I support the motion.

Syed Muhammad Sa'adulla (Assam: Muslim): Sir, I was one of those who had the privilege of sitting in the Select Committee on this Bill. I am glad to see that the Report of the Select Committee is unanimous. Yet I find that a note of dissent has been printed in my name. When the Report was brought to me for signature I went through the draft and in my opinion there were two points which needed to be improved and at one place the provision clarified. But this has been printed as a note of dissent in my name. I leave it to the Honourable Minister as well as to the honourable members of this House to see for themselves whether the language of the amendment made by the Select Committee in sub-clause (2) of clause 1 may not be improved. I will read the place where the improvements is necessary:

"It extends to all the Provinces of India and also to any Acceding State for which the Central Legislature has for the time being the power to make laws as respects mines and oilfields and the development of minerals."

My quarrel is with the words "as respects". In my attempt to improve, I thought the words "in respect to" should be substituted for the word "as respects". I have not submitted any amendment, but I leave it to the House to consider whether they do not think that these words "as respects" should be substituted by the words I have suggested.

The next point to which I wanted to draw the attention of my colleagues in the Select Committee was as regards penalty, that is clause 9. There, as referred to by the Honourable Minister, it was at my instance that this provision for imprisonment was introduced. But I had suggested that there should be this period of imprisonment of either description. The words "of either description", according to me, do not appear here due to an omission. If it is intentional on the part of the expert draftsmen of the Ministry, then I would like to know whether this unqualified word "imprisonment" will not lead to some difficulty later on when the matter goes to court.

[Syed Muhammad Sa'adulla]

I never intended that these two matters, to which I only wanted to draw attention, would be printed as a Note of Dissent.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I support this Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee, except clause 13 against which I registered my protest in the Standing Committee of Works, Mines and Power and also in this forum.

This Bill is very opportune. The Western Powers are now trying to build up a German National Government, and the United States Government is also trying to build up the Japanese Government in Japan. The old game will again be played. Mine-owners will co-operate with the Japanese and the German capitalists and export the best of raw materials abroad, thereby weakening India's national mineral wealth. The time is coming—and we are glad to place this power in the hands of the Minister for Works, Mines and Power that no mineral should be exported outside India if it be needed for the development of India's national mineral wealth—when we should be more alert; we were not so previously.

As regards my opposition to clause 13, Sir, a few minutes ago the House held a very good debate on the question 'Imperial' versus 'National'. It was done in beautiful Hindi and Hindustani. Some of us tried to understand and appreciate it as far as we could. Sir, the word "Crown" stinks. The moment I enter the House I feel irritated that the British Crown should be there on the chair of my Speaker. Since we obtained freedom the House has legislated so much and passed so many Bills, but nowhere the words Crown or Dominions were used. Sir, when I saw such words as "The provisions of this Act shall be binding on the Crown, whether in the right of the Dominion or of a Province"—as contained here—I felt like saying "Down with the Crown". We have nothing to do with the Crown. We are a sovereign Legislature. What have we to do with the Crown? Why my colleagues in the Select Committee did not spot the graye encroachment of the silent foe, the British raj, I cannot understand. I am not a lawyer. I do not want to hear any legal argument from any legal luminary in this House that we are still under the British Crown. That may be the provision in some of the Acts which are still continuing and which the Adaptation of the Government of India Act has not changed. Today I am ashamed to read it. I was ashamed that the Select Committee did not do away with it. I have given notice of four amendments. I would like to have the entire clause 13 omitted. Otherwise I would like that wherever the word 'Crown' occurs the word 'Governments' be substituted. I would ask my honourable friend Mr. Neogy whom I respect and whom I used to consult in the past in regard to constitutional matters, to say with his better knowledge of constitution, whether the word 'Crown' cannot be replaced by the word 'Governments' or some such appropriate word and also whether the word 'Dominion' cannot be changed into 'Union'.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): The Crown can be placed on any head.

Shri B. Das: We were always harping over this and we were thinking of a Sovereign Republic. Now my friend Mr. Tyagi wants to wear the Crown. I wish him joy if he will get anywhere a crown to wear!

As for the word 'Dominion' I do not like that word either. I do not want that a year after we took the pledge of freedom in the other House and having passed on the floor of that House the Resolution on Sovereign Republic and sovereignty, to use the word 'Dominion' in any legislation. I would say that the draftsman works in the mentality of the pre-fifteenth August 1947, and he probably dreamt that the Crown was on his head and that India is a Dominion carrying out the fixed instructions of its masters on the other side. I have the gravest objection to the use of the words "Crown" and "Dominion" and I hope the House will appreciate the humble spirit with which I have tabled my amendments to substitute these two words. I would like the House either to delete the entire clause 13 or to see that the words "Crown" and "Dominion" are banished from the clause.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (one of the Panel of Chairmen).]

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): Mr. Chairman, Sir, I am glad that a Bill of this nature has come before the Legislature. I would rather say that this is the most important legislation of this session because it is for the first time in India that the Centre has chosen to exercise the fullest control over the mines and the mineral resources of this country. In a country where the important mines and minerals are held by non-nationals the control that is proposed to be exercised by the Central Government is certainly welcome and necessary. From this aspect of the question the Bill is a welcome measure. Important changes have been effected and my honourable friend has given an idea of the changes that have been proposed and accepted in the Select Committee. But my complaint, none-the-less, remains against the Bill in the sense that it has left too much to the rule-making powers of the Government. Of course, we have tried to minimise the evil so far as possible, by providing some safeguard, viz., to have the rules placed before the Legislature. But it makes me feel that important powers which have been left to the rule-making of the Government should have been brought out in the framework of the legislation.

Sir, the second objection I would like to place before the House is that important powers which were hitherto enjoyed by the Provinces have been practically taken away by the Bill. Of course it goes from the States or Provinces to the Centre, none-the-less it is a loss to the Provinces. Though the Provinces lose their power, let me hope that the Honourable Minister in charge of the Department will not do anything to lessen the resources or affect the resources of the Provinces in this regard. Provinces have not taxed these mines and mineral resources to the extent necessary for their own purposes, but none-the-less special cases are provided for in certain Provinces for local purposes; added to it there are also cesses for Provincial purposes. Let me hope that all these will be kept for the use of the Provinces in the rule-making powers of the Government.

Again, Sir, we have in the Select Committee brought in the Acceding States under the jurisdiction of this Bill. That means to say that the Provinces of Orissa, Bihar, C. P., Bombay and to a certain extent Madras are going to be affected so far as the Acceding States are concerned. These Acceding States were getting very good incomes from these mines and mineral resources which they had within their jurisdiction. Nothing has been decided so far about the financial relationship between the Centre and the Provinces in this regard. All these, let me take, will have either to be laid down in the rules or to be left to the Provinces and the Acceding States. Let me hope that a generous attitude will be taken up by the Centre and the existing incomes as also these sources of income will be left to the Provinces and Provinces alone because important responsibilities have devolved on the Provinces and if these Provinces have to discharge their responsibilities you cannot take away their resources and ask them to discharge their responsibilities.

Sir, it pains me to state in this House that somehow, while we talk of Provinces as autonomous bodies, we make legislation time and anon restricting the powers and activities of the Provinces to an extent which I for myself would not accept. That has been my misfortune and I must frankly confess that I stand to record my protest in this regard.

I would appeal to the Government that they should take advantage of the provisions of this Bill and call upon the non-nationals that are today in possession of important mines and minerals of this country and proceed to revise their leases in a way that we secure to ourselves, as we have done practically in fact and in law, the power to do so, in a way that we practically become full owners of these mines, if necessary by giving them compensation. Let me illustrate my position. Now we have the Kolar gold mines of Mysore or the oilfields of Assam, and the like. I think the time has come when State ownership of these important mines and mineral resources should be undertaken with a definite programme. Let me hope that the Government will not lose time to undertake this responsibility quite in accord with the desire of this House and the wishes of the people of this country.

With these words, Sir, I congratulate by honourable friend for the step that he has taken and let me hope that he will fulfil our aspirations by undertaking the course of action that I have suggested in my speech.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, it is one of the very important measures that we are passing in this session. Although we are rushing through the business which we have been compelled to do on account of the short space of time left, still I think the importance of this Bill will not be missed. The very title of the Bill says that it is "for the regulation of mines and oilfields and for development of minerals". We have all been anxious to see our country's development in all respects and here is a Bill for development in one very important respect, that in respect of mines.

I was really surprised to hear my friend Mr. Biswanath Das registering his protest against the powers which the Central Government have taken. Sir, I also love my Province, I belong probably to the biggest province in this country. Yet, I think that we should give to the Centre all powers for developing such key industries. I do not think that a small province like Orissa can develop the full mineral wealth of the province. The Central Government alone can find out where the minerals are located and it must see that they are fully developed so that our country can come in line with all the countries of the world. In fact, the greatest handicap from which we suffer is oil and some other important minerals and I think a lot of prospecting will have to be done to find out where oil is concealed underneath the mother earth, where other important minerals are concealed, and then we shall have to work and develop those mines. It is only possible to do all this if the control is fully centralized, and the activities are financed with unlimited resources which only the Central Government can command. I therefore welcome this aspect of the Bill very much and I really congratulate the Honourable Minister for having taken courage in both hands in making the whole thing entirely Central.

I really wonder, when there was at one time a proposal to give residuary powers to the Provinces, there was the hue and cry, "You want to weaken the Central Government". But when we have got a more or less centralised Government, then we grudge giving the Centre even such a small thing as to empower it to regulate and develop our mines. Sir, I fought for the Central control of electricity also. I think that the entire planning development of the country, must be a Central subject and the Centre must have full authority to do what it pleases to carry out its schemes and plans. In this Bill the entire power is given to the Centre. I am very glad that this Bill is on the right lines. I know the Honourable Minister also brought in other Bills of fundamental importance; the Damodar Valley Corporation Bill is one which will surely see a large part of our country very soon change its entire face. I think that he deserves congratulation for this and I am really sorry that my friend Mr. Das protested against the centralised nature of the Bill. I only say that Section 7 of this Bill.....

Shri Biswanath Das: May I inform you, Sir, that I have not protested against the centralised nature of the Bill, because there is nothing centralised.

I have protested against the tendency of the Government of 4 P.M. India to take away powers from the Provinces—powers vested in them under the Act.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I do not know what else is meant by Centralisation. When this Bill gives certain powers to the Government of India, it will certainly take away to that extent the powers of the Provinces and give the Centre powers against which Mr. Das protested.

Anyway, I was saying about clause 7, that it has given the Centre powers to change the existing leases. I know many factories and many mines are controlled by foreigners—coal mines, gold mines and other mines—and I do wish that these key industries had been taken over completely by the State, because when we are out for all round planning and development of our minerals, these foreigners cannot be expected to act according to our wishes and carry out our plans in the manner we want. These foreigners not only exploit the mines in their own countries but they also try to take leases of mines in other countries and exploit them. It is, I think, high time that we said in our Bills that we do not want any foreigners to exploit our mines.

I fully agree with my friend Mr. Das that the mines should not be under private control. Instead of giving leases to individuals, I wish that the Government had themselves taken them. The Central Government has taken power to revise existing leases and I hope that at least in future all leases shall be given to the Government itself and not to other private individuals. Unfortunately, on this point I hold very strong views. My experience has been that the capitalists do not play the game and I think we cannot go on with rapid development of the country unless the State itself takes the thing into its own hands. We may copy their business principles and methods, but it must be the Government which must be the sole authority to determine how things should be managed. All the profits of the industry should belong to the State so that the mines could be worked in the interests of the nation. At present, the profits go to the mine-owners who work in their own personal interests, in the interests of private profit. What we want is that the mines should be worked in the interests of the nation. May be, some mines may be very costly to work, but for national development we must work them. I hope that although power has been taken in this Bill to give leases to anybody, actually the basis will be given only to the National Government and the Government will see that no fresh leases are given to individuals. In fact, when enunciating our Industrial Policy the Prime Minister said that after ten years we shall go for nationalising such industries as are at present in capitalist hands but he promised that new industries shall hence forth be all nationalised. So I hope that future leases would only be given to the Government and the Government would develop the mines from the point of view of the development of the nation and not from the point of profits to individuals.

Sir, I warmly congratulate the Minister for having brought this Bill and the boldness with which he has taken power to develop the mines. I hope very soon we shall be able to see that our country is not behind other big countries which have got large mineral resources like iron, coal oil etc., so that we may not at times of crisis be short of minerals. I also feel that we should not be exporting many of these key minerals. Probably, we are at present doing it with recklessness. I hope that the mineral export policy of the country will be determined from the point of view of national development and our future requirements. I again thank the Honourable Minister for this Bill which I heartily support.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): Mr. Chairman, I do not understand why the Honourable Minister should have chosen to wound our feelings by introducing the word "Crown" and "Dominion" in this piece of legislation.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Have half Crown!

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Quite a sheaf of Bills have been passed and brought before this House during this year, and nowhere do I remember having seen the use of the word Crown or Dominion. I am perfectly aware that we are still a Dominion. I am painfully conscious of that fact. I am also perfectly aware that we still owe some sort of allegiance to the Crown because we are a Dominion, and if the King of England chooses to visit India at any time, we should probably go into festivities. I know that we have got to do it, but it is better that we are not reminded of this fact by provisions of law passed by this House. I think the object of the honourable author of the Bill would have been as well met if he had used the word "Government" instead of "Crown" and "Union" instead of "Dominion". That would have at least lulled our feelings. We know that it is still a far cry to make ourselves really independent. The way in which our constitution-making body is progressing leaves very little hope for us in the immediate future. After all, we have yet to decide whether we are going to remain within the British Commonwealth or we are going out of it. That is the reason why we must still, for some time, owe some sort of allegiance, some sort of respect and regard to the Crown and also remain a Dominion, but it is cruel that one of our own Ministers should be constantly reminding us about these things.

Sir, my honourable friend to the left has pointed out the anomaly regarding the use of the word "imprisonment". That there is some ambiguity about it admits of no doubt. I am advised that the word "imprisonment" when it stands alone is interpreted as meaning simple imprisonment. That is the decision of the court and I believe that is why the word "imprisonment" has been used without either the prefix of "rigorous" or "simple". The whole attitude of this Bill is leniency. The honourable author of this Bill does not want to be very hard on those who infringe the provisions. Otherwise, there would not have been this sub-clause (2) of clause 9. In sub-clause (1) of clause (9) punishment is provided, both imprisonment as well as fine, or either imprisonment or fine, for the first offence, but sub-clause (2) provides that in case of subsequent offences the offender need not fear going to jail again. It will be quite sufficient if he is rich enough to pay the fine. That is what sub-clause (2) says. The section says:

"Whoever, after having been convicted of any offence referred to in sub-section (1), continues to commit such offence shall be punishable for each day after the date of the first conviction during which he continues so to offend, with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees."

There is no question of imprisonment afterwards. If a man has the hardihood to commit the offence daily, he will have only to pay a fine of Rs. 100, and if it would be more profitable to pay the fine, he would certainly pay the fine, because there is no punishment with imprisonment. This is what I cannot understand. I have always thought that the first offender is treated more lightly. Here, there is a revolution of the whole legal provisions. The first offender will be sent to the jail and a second time he commits or 100 times he may commit, he merely goes off with a fine. There is something in it which I hope the Honourable Minister will be able to explain, and as it stands, the provision is ununderstandable.

Another point which I would like to raise in this connection is that I cannot understand what is going to be the exact position after this law comes into force. Nowadays, I find that the provincial Governments, at least the Government of Assam, has decided to nationalise coal mining operations. I think they have done so under the belief that they have the fullest authority in the matter. But, clause 5, as it stands seems to have taken away the power of the provincial Governments to do as they like even in the matter of coal mines. It says:

"The Central Government, may, by notification in the Official Gazette, make rules for regulating the grant of mining leases or for prohibiting the grant of such leases in respect of any mineral or in any area."

This means that, if, at any time, the provincial Government should think that they want to nationalise the mines and not to give the lease of coal fields to anybody, the Central Government could over-ride that decision by saying that the mines should be leased out to somebody under such and such rule. I want to be very clear on this point. I want that this point should be made clear. Does this clause take away the right of the provincial Governments to deal with the coal mines as they like? Whether they want to nationalise, or whether they feel that the lease should be given to people of their own provinces, can the Central Government say, you cannot do it? If the provincial Government wants to nationalise it, can the Central Government say under the provisions of this Bill, you are not competent to do so, we are going to issue the mining lease to such and such a person who will be really competent to work the mine, the provincial Government is not competent to work the mine or that the Government of India cannot finance you to do so? Is that the meaning of this clause? I should like to be made clear.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): Sir, I had no mind to take part in this discussion; but I find that there is an amount of confusion in the minds even of experienced parliamentarians like my honourable friend Mr. Chaudhuri and some others. Mr. Chaudhuri feels that clause 5 can stand in the way of the provincial Governments being able to work the mines. That is not so at all. This Bill, so far as I have been able to understand it, only intends to lay down the general provisions which will be applicable to mines and minerals and the working thereof, and it will be applicable to all the provinces. That is to say, a sort of uniform rules and regulations are intended to be laid down; whether the mines will be worked by the Centre or the provinces or by the lessees is left to be decided from time to time. That would be decided by the capacity of the party who may be available or by the Government who wants to work it. Clause 5 will not stand in the way of any provincial Government or otherwise working any mine if they so want to do. Nor is there any question of the powers of the provinces being taken away by this Bill in the shape of the Centre taking up the management or working of a mine.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: On a point of information, Sir, is the honourable member referring to the confusion in his mind or in my mind?

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: Sir, the scheme of the Act seems to be that general rules will be framed which will be applicable to the different kinds of minerals, and if there be a particular mineral which the Government thinks fit to preserve, they might prohibit the issue licences or leases in respect of such minerals. This is the intention of the power that is ought to be given for prohibiting the lease of any mineral which the Government may think fit to preserve for being used in an emergency. Power has been reserved to prohibit the exhaustion of such minerals. That seems to be the idea behind clause 5. I think the scheme of the Act is quite all right as it leaves a lot of things to the rule-making powers of the Government. Nor need the rules be placed before this House for being passed. In fact, the rules will be framed and they will be applicable; they will simply be laid before the Central Legislature as soon as they are made and they need not be passed by this House. That is clear from clause 10. I think we should pass this Bill as it is.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Sir, there is not much that I want to say by way of reply. The main object of this Bill is to have uniformity of policy and to utilise the output of the mines to the best possible advantage of the country. The conditions of the new leases will be laid down, and if it is found that the old leases are contrary to and may affect the realisation of this objective, they will be modified or even cancelled. If it is necessary to prohibit leases being given in any mineral or in any area, that also is provided for. As I said, that casts a corresponding positive obligation on the Central Government to see that that particular mineral or area is explored. It is perfectly made clear in clause 6 that rules may be made. It says: "the manner in which and the persons by whom any mineral or any area as respects which the grant of mining leases is prohibited may be developed or worked." It is possible that the Central Government may ask the provincial Government to work up a particular mineral or a particular area. There is nothing to prevent that being done.

The other point was with respect to the use of the word "Crown" in clause 13. Crown is not really worth much. Under the Government of India Act even as adapted, as it stands today, we cannot take out this word in one particular piece of legislation. If it has to go,—it has to go—it will go when the new Constitution is adopted.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi (East Punjab: General): It is still there.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: This matter was discussed in the Select Committee. All other substitutes were considered and were found inappropriate. Taking the word "State", it has not been defined anywhere. The word Government is not defined in the General Clauses Act. And further, the word "Government" exactly connotes the idea of the executive government of the day. What exactly is contemplated here is that abiding political entity which corresponds and coincides with the territorial boundaries of the country. That particular idea for the present is embodied in the word "Crown"; and till we find a suitable substitute and adopt it in the constitution of our country this should remain, and I do not think it is a matter over which we should make any fuss. "The Crown" is really not worth much.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill to provide for the regulation of mines and oilfields and for the development of minerals, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clauses 2 to 4 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 4 were added to the Bill.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, I must admit that I cannot follow things as quickly as some members can do here. I could not quite understand the reply given by the Honourable Minister with regard to my observations on Clause 5. I will in this connection draw his attention to clause 12 which says clearly:

"The Central Government may, if satisfied that it is in the public interest so to do, authorise in any case the granting of any mining lease or the working of any mine on terms and conditions different from those laid down in the rules made under sections 5 and 6."

This means that the Central Government keeps the supreme authority of granting mining leases in any case whenever they think it expedient to do so, even though the Provincial Government may have decided to make it a nationalised concern.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Sir, I have nothing to say.

Shri Basanta Kumar Das (West Bengal: General): Sir, I move.

"That after part (d) of sub-clause (2) of clause 5 of the Bill, the following new part be added:

(e) circumstances in which leases may be withdrawn or cancelled."

I think there must be definite rules containing the circumstances in which leases may be withdrawn or cancelled. Sir, I move.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Sir, if my honourable friend carefully reads part (b) of sub-clause (2) of clause 5, he will find that its phraseology includes what he contemplates by his own amendment.

Shri Basanta Kumar Das: Sir, I do not press my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 5 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 5 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 6 to 12 were added to the Bill.

Shri B. Das: Sir, I move:

"That clause 13 of the Bill be omitted."

In deep humility I heard the speech of the Honourable Minister. I have been a co-worker of his in this House from 1935 and I felt that he had somehow changed since he took his seat on the Treasury Benches. He justified the use of the word "Crown" because it is in the Government of India Act of 1935. The amended Government of India Act as adapted by the India (Provisional Constitution) Order, 1947 and the Indian Independence Act are there and it nowhere contains the word "Crown". How is it that my Honourable friend Mr. Gadgil has grown so fond of that word? His colleagues and comrades in the Cabinet have piloted hundreds of Bills in this House since 15th August, 1947, but nowhere has the word "Crown" been used. I do not see any reason for this inferiority complex today on the part of my honourable friend. My honourable friend Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar is here; in the other place we consider him as one of the fathers of the Indian constitution which is being framed there and will become the Constitution Act in a couple of months. I should like to know from him why the word "Crown" has become necessary. If I may be permitted to state here, I have heard from friends that the Law Minister opined that the word "Crown" was necessary, I am not a lawyer and should like to know from my lawyer friends why this word which was not required in any Act of the legislature in the last 12½ months has been introduced now. The amended Government of India Act and the Independence Act contain the word "Dominion". Why is it that our distinguished Ministers never introduced that word in any of their Bills? The Crown may be going abegging or have no value, and as long as there is no

[Shri B. Das]

Emperor of India it is immaterial who wears the Crown. But for certain legal subtleties and quibbles my honourable friend has been advised that the word "Crown" must desecrate an Act of this House. I feel ashamed of that word; my honourable friend the Minister told me in the Standing Committee that he would consider it. I wish he would give me the views of his legal advisers; I am sure he would still feel that we are humiliated.

Sir, I will not vote for this clause 13. Not being a lawyer I should like to know the necessity of clause 13. The Government of India have got the necessary correlating power and controlling power over mines and development of minerals in the Provinces. My honourable friend was a lawyer; I should like to know why he has inserted this shameful provision in the Bill to the utter humiliation of the Congress Party.

Sir, I hope the House will agree to the deletion of clause 13. I move.

Mr. Chairman: Is the honourable member going to move the other amendments standing in his name?

Shri B. Das: If this fails I will move them.

Mr. Chairman: He may move all of them now because no amendment can be moved and put to the House which negatives an entire clause of the Bill. When the vote is taken on the clause he can vote against it and can oppose the entire clause which he has already done.

Shri B. Das: With your permission, I move the three other amendments in my name:

(i) "That in the heading of clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'Crown', the word 'Governments' be substituted."

(ii) "That in clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'Crown', the word 'Governments' be substituted."

(iii) "That in clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'Dominion', the word 'Union' be substituted."

I may say here that in the draft Constitution Bill nowhere is the word 'Dominion' used, and where the purpose of the 'Dominion' has been required, the word 'Union' has been used. I hope if no one supports me, at least my old friend, Mr. Gopalaswami Ayyangar, will support me.

Mr. Chairman: Amendments moved:

(i) "That in clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'Crown', the word 'Governments' be substituted."

(ii) "That in clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'Dominion', the word 'Union' be substituted."

The first amendment which seeks to amend the head note need not be put to the House.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): I am also one of the guilty persons who allowed this shameful clause.....

Shri B. Das: I do not say that of a colleague and comrade like you!

Shri K. Santhanam:.....to stay here in this Bill. We also dislike this word and we are not happy about the word 'Dominion' either. But what happens is that this clause is an immaterial clause. If this is omitted then what may happen is that all the old leases given by the British Government will not be affected by the Bill and we will be bound by them. This Bill provides not only for the future but for the regulation of leases and rights granted in the past and many of these rights are called Crown rights and leases. The word 'Crown' is attached to the rights actually accrued, and unless we used that word we were afraid that many of them would get out of our clutches. Therefore we thought that our present generation and posterity would allow us the use of these words if we secured them the real rights. It is pursuance of that desire that the present Government, both Central and Provincial, should have a secure grip over the rights granted in the past that we used it. I am sure when the Constitution is made and when the General Clauses Act is being revised that all these words will be erased from all the Statutes in the Statute Book.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): I submit that in the present context the word 'Crown' would be improper and absolutely unnecessary. Clause 13 which contains this expression is to this effect:

"The provisions of this Act shall be binding on the Crown whether in the right of the Dominion or of a Province."

In fact, a provision like this is absolutely unnecessary. To say that a provision of a sovereign Legislature will be binding against all is unnecessary. Is there any doubt that a piece of legislation passed by a sovereign House like this would be binding? I think it is binding against all, be it the King of England, the British Government, or any Indian State or Province. As a matter of fact, the amendment which my friend, Mr. Das has suggested, namely that the word "Crown" should be substituted by the word "Government" is unnecessary. That it is binding on the Government is also clear because the Legislature is superior to the Government. After the Independence of India Act has been passed, I think it is unnecessary to think even that the Crown has any claim in India. In fact in section 7 of the Indian Independence Act it is said:

"As from the appointed day (that is the 15th August 1947) His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom have no responsibility in respect of the Government of any territory " and so forth.

Shri K. Santhanam: May I point out that the word 'Crown' here means the Crown in India.

An Honourable Member: Wooden crown!

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: 'Crown' is an abstract legal conception. It does not mean the headgear on the King's head. It is the sovereign authority. By the Indian Independence Act, the British Government have declared that they are absolved of all responsibility. They have also given up all claims to India and with regard to many others. They say "India is absolutely free; they are competent to pass any law they like and they are competent even to abrogate any British enactment if they like". The question is whether without Clause 13 the Act will be binding on the Crown, even supposing there is a Crown somewhere in India. The fact is that when we pass an Act, it is tantamount to saying that the Act is binding, and in view of the Indian Independence Act, an Act of the Legislature of India as at present constituted is ipso facto binding against all. So the necessity to defeat any right of the Crown is absolutely uncalled for. Where is the Crown? There are some pictures of the Crown in some portraits of His Majesty the King and there is the Crown in some coins in currency notes and stamps etc. But apart from this, where is the Crown? I do not think that the Crown as an over-riding authority exists any where in India. Even the Crown as a conception does not exist as a superior body. If the Crown has any right which is superior to this Legislature, I think this Clause 13 will not defeat it, and if this Legislature is superior to any possible Crown rights existing in India, then the mere passing of the law will be binding upon him. So I submit that Clause 13 is unnecessary and objectionable from that point of view.

With regard to the actual use of the word 'Crown' it is not necessary. The whole clause is unnecessary.

With regard to the word 'Dominion', the word 'Union' is unnecessary. It is true that the draft Constitution uses the word Union and not Dominion, although Dominion is inadvertently used in many places. But that is a constitution which will come into effect when the constitution is passed. After the passage of that constitution the word 'Union' will be the only expression to be used and the word 'Dominion' will cease to exist. Therefore, so long as the constitution is not passed, the word 'Dominion' is a necessity.

[Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad]

So the entire Clause 13 is absolutely unnecessary and there is the needless use of the word 'Crown' in this piece of legislation.

There was a practice in criminal cases to say that the King-Emperor or the Crown was prosecuting somebody—Crown versus someone. Now the word 'King' is used, and not 'Emperor' and not 'Crown'. In these circumstances the use of the word Crown is unnecessary and the whole clause is unnecessary and therefore it can be safely deleted without the slightest risk of endangering our rights or saving the rights of the Crown assuming that it exists in India. The very fact that that the Act is passed shows that it is binding. This is a sovereign Legislature and under the provisions of the Indian Independence Act that we have a right to over-ride everything. So in these circumstances Section 13 should be deleted.

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya (Madras: General): Sir, I am surprised that at this late hour in the progress of our country we should be still seeking to perpetuate an anachronism or that we should be building castles in the air and finding tenants for them. I am surprised not so much at any interpretation of Section 13 and the wording by which it is characterised as by Mr. Santhanam's defence of the word 'Crown' and bringing in the word 'crown contracts'. There may be crown contracts but even worse is his defence when he speaks of the crown in India. There is only one crown in India and that is on the Nizam's head which is lying in the melting pot and all the other crowns have melted away and even the crown representative has disappeared from the Viceroy's House and in fact the King of England has shed the title of Emperor of India. Whereas the King of England has shed the title my honourable friend Mr. Santhanam wants the Emperor in India. There is now only the wooden crown on the top of the Chairman's head and a crown in masonry with the line 'Die et mon droit' 'God and my right hand'. It has been suggested more than once that these too should be removed from this hall. Instead of that, after having passed so many bills in this House that you should incorporate, deliberately and want only this clause into this Bill is sufficiently bad but that you should justify it in the manner in which it has been justified is making matters worse. If you feel that crown contracts may be impugned by those who have entered into them in respect of mines, let us say that this shall be binding upon all the leases given in the name of the Crown. That is a sensible procedure. We are not fighting the word 'Crown' but the idea 'Crown' is not merely etymological, as has been pointed out by my friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad but it is a concept and that concept should not be created. You must create a new psychology in India and make people believe that the British have left but the pity of it is that we do not believe that they have left and therefore it is that these anachronisms hang on to us. With these words, I support Mr. Das's amendment and if you think that some clause like that is necessary please say that this shall be binding on all the leases given in the name of the Crown.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Sir, I am very sorry to disagree from my honourable friend Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya. Under the Indian Independence Act the Crown in England washed its hands of all the property in India and the governance of India. (An Honourable Member: 'All rights'.) I agree. The Government of India Act 1935 was adapted in pursuance of that Act and we do not want to lose properties belonging to us and give greater property or rights to ordinary individuals from whom we want to take in favour of the Government. Let us see those chapters which have been adopted relating to vesting of property and the right of suing or being sued. Unfortunately those words are there such as 'Crown', 'His Majesty', 'Dominion of India,' etc. If you omit them as suitors we will be out of court. If you want to drive to that conclusion by all means do so and make this Act absolutely unfructuous and allow those private individuals to carry the day in any court of law. Sir, I request your attention to Section 174. According to that whatever property is there belongs to His Majesty, held in trust for a particular province or held for purposes of the Dominion. Therefore any property held in India is supposed to be held by His Majesty for the purpose of the Dominion or for purposes of the province. You must use the word Majesty or Crown, otherwise you will be losing a very valuable right. Section 176 relates to suits and proceedings. My friend objected to the word 'Dominion' but we cannot get out of it, so long as the word 'Dominion' is used in the Government of India Act. (Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: 'It is all right'). So the honourable member is 50 per cent. in favour of Mr. Das and 50 per cent. against. The Dominion may sue or be sued and a provincial government may sue or be sued. Therefore the word 'Dominion' is inescapable and the words 'Majesty' or 'Crown' are inescapable. I agree that the sooner we get rid of them the better, but till then we have to use them.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: Sir, this clause 13 is useless. Clause 5 gives power to the Central Government to make rules as respects mining leases, clause 6 gives power to make rules as respects mineral development and clause 7 gives power to make rules for modification of existing leases. All these clauses give the right to the Central Government to make rules. There is no clause which fixes a liability on the Central Government. Therefore to say in clause 13 that the provisions of this Act shall be binding on the Crown means that the Crown would be liable for having done wrong according to these rules. There is no liability fixed on the Central Government. One objective may be that the Government should be bound down to observe these rules. All laws are binding on everybody. If a government does not act in accordance with the rules it is liable for damages just like any other person who does not act according to law is liable. There is the famous maxim of law that the King can do no wrong. If a King does wrong or acts in contravention of the law that should be ignored. If a Government passes an order which is not in accordance with the provisions of the law, that order is to be ignored and not to be obeyed by anybody. In the same way if the Government does not follow the provisions of the law, the Government is liable for damages. That this act would be binding on the 'Crown' is superfluous and has no meaning. The law is to be obeyed by everybody by the Government as much as by any other citizen of the country. This clause serves no purpose and being useless it should be dropped.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Sir, if this clause were to be omitted the Government of the day will have dictatorial power. What is sought to be provided by this clause is that whatever limitations are there binding on the individual lease-holder will be binding if the leases are taken by the Government in their own name. As regards the word 'Crown' my honourable colleague suggested that it means Koh-i-noor, a very precious stone and that we should not lose it. Apart from the joke, so long as we continue to function under the Government of India Act, 1935, we cannot depart from its phraseology. Nowhere has the word 'Government' been defined—not even in the General Clauses Act. The real thing behind the word 'Crown', as I said, is the State. A political conception or a constitutional conception which means something that is permanent and which represents the political existence of the country and the community—that conception—is not yet expressed in the

[Shri N. V. Gadgil]

Government of India Act. By merely substituting for the word 'Crown' the word 'Government' the purpose cannot be served. We are only here substituting a subordinate conception for a bigger and a higher conception. When the New Constitution comes into existence surely 'State' will be defined. The word 'Union' will be defined. Today there is no definition of the word 'Union' and there is no use trying to substitute some new idea in a certain piece of legislation, because these things are common not only to this but common to all legislation. Therefore the opportunity to get this thing done is not with reference to this Bill but when the Constitution comes and in the light of the New Constitution all the changes and adaptations are made.

Sir, I oppose these amendments.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in Clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'Crown', the word 'Governments' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in clause 13 of the Bill, for the word 'Dominion', the word 'Union' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 13 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 13 was added to the Bill.

Clause 14 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved.

"That the Bill be passed."

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, since all the clauses have been passed, this reading is practically meaningless. The House stands committed now to all the clauses which have received the assent of the House. Even then an opportunity is given for the honourable members of the House, if they want, to put into the ears of the Honourable Minister anything which they feel has not been said or anything which they think can probably be accommodated in the rules. I therefore take this opportunity of bringing to the notice of the Honourable Minister that in my district—and may be in many other hilly districts—there are small quarries of lime stones, gypsum and small pieces of marble chips. This industry is carried on by the poor labouring class people. They just dig holes into river beds; when the rivers bring water in the rainy season they bring small pebbles of stone and deposit them in those pits; when the river goes off, that is when there is no water and it is dry, these labourers go there, pick up those stones, bring them home, bake them and turn them into limestone. They either sell them or use them for constructing their own houses. This industry is carried on by practically every village in my district. Sometimes these stones are dug out from pits ten or twenty feet deep. They take out these stones and transport them to other districts as limestones which are baked locally. This is a cottage industry.

I did not move an amendment regarding this because I felt that after full consideration had been given an amendment would be thought as out of place or ultimately I might be whipped out of the field and asked not to put any amendment. Therefore I want to crave the benign Crown to be kind enough and to please see that this cottage industry remains in the hands of those people in spite of this law. I am saying this because it comes under quarry—and quarries are also to be controlled. If a control over these quarries of small pebbles and small limestones is imposed the poor people would be hit hard. There are such other industries as for instance kunker. It is also mined out. Lawyers might come forward and say 'It is dug out from the earth and therefore that may also come under quarry and may be controlled'. I request that in respect of the smaller industries which are always practically carried on by smaller people some consideration may be made in the Rules. That is my request.

With this request I must now deposit my congratulations, hearty as they are, on the Honourable Minister for the good Bill he has brought forward. This measure I am sure will lead to more and more mining, to the improvement of this industry and to the progress and prosperity of the country.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): I beg to congratulate the Honourable Minister for bringing this legislation. The Central Government should really have power over mines and oilfields and other things. I therefore think that this measure will be very beneficial. It will extend to the Indian States also. In my place, in Central India, there are slate quarries also. I hope that only very important quarries or mines will be taken up by the Central Government and I think much scope should be allowed for Provincial Governments to mine these quarries; at least, the stones and such other things cannot be taken up by the Central Government. Sufficient scope should be left for the Provinces and the States. But in the case of important minerals I think the Central Government should have full power so that it may develop the resources of the country. Sir, I congratulate the Minister for having brought this measure.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: An honourable member has said that after the clauses have been accepted it is useless to speak. But there is such a thing as post-mortem examination and I am going to do that.

With regard to the question of Crown I think the Crown has no rights. Whatever rights they had they have declared that all the rights have ceased. And we adhere to the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan and in certain respects the States. I beg to submit, Sir, that there is a lurking fear that like a beneficial ghost the Crown is hovering somewhere with some hidden rights. But the King has himself declared that they have no rights. Though ghost do not exist, still there is fear in some minds. It is this unfounded fear which is behind this clause. The clause should not have been inserted. Otherwise the Bill is a very good one and I support the third reading.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 1st September, 1948.

INDIAN INCOME-TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Finance and Commerce): Sir, I do not propose to make the motion under item No. 1 on the List of Business and I therefore beg leave to move item No. 3. Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, be taken into consideration."

[Shri K. C. Neogy]

It is, I claim, a very simple measure. If the House would direct its attention to the two principal clauses of the Bill, viz., clauses 2 and 3, they would find that so far as clause 2 is concerned it is intended to supplant an Ordinance that is sought to be repealed in clause 4. This Ordinance was needed to be passed for the purpose of correcting an error which had crept into the Indian Finance Act. The House will remember that one of the provisions of the Indian Finance Act was to extend the benefit of exemption from income-tax to payments of donations to certain approved charitable objects. It was the intention of the Select Committee to extend the benefit to payments made subsequent to the 1st of April 1948. Although this intention is clearly expressed in the report of the Select Committee, unfortunately it was not incorporated in the body of the Act itself. That led to the passing of this amending Ordinance to which I referred.

Clause 2 seeks merely to substitute a sub-section in the Act, by this measure in place of the Ordinance that is to be repealed.

As regards clause 3, the House will remember that under Section 54 of the Indian Income-tax Act, disclosure of information by a public servant is prohibited in respect of the records of assessment. There are, however, exceptions indicated in sub-section (3) of Section 54. What I seek to do through this clause in the present Bill is to add two more exceptions to the list. The first exception relates to a requirement which we have laid on the Reserve Bank of India for the collection of information regarding foreign exchange transactions. We are expected to furnish certain particulars to the International Monetary Fund on this matter and unless the Reserve Bank of India has access to the assessment papers it cannot effectively discharge that obligation. We therefore propose to authorise the furnishing of these particulars to the Reserve Bank of India, under the proposed sub-clause (n) of sub-section (3) of Section 54.

Occasion has also been taken to add another exception, namely (o) for the purpose of facilitating enquiries into charges of corruption against government officials. The effect of this new sub-clause (o) would be to remove the obligation of secrecy laid down under Section 54 in respect of records of assessment relating to government officers, so that whenever any investigation is undertaken on the basis of any suspicion of corruption against a government officer the assessment papers may be available to the investigating officers.

These are the objects of this Bill and I do hope that the House will readily pass the Bill. Sir, I move.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: We will now take the Bill clause by clause.

The question is:

"That clauses 2 to 4 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 4 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

TERRITORIAL ARMY BILL.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh (Minister for Defence): Sir, I move: —

"That the Bill to provide for the constitution of a Territorial Army for India be taken into consideration."

During the last session of this House I announced the Government's decision to constitute a Territorial Army for this country. In that statement I had indicated that the Territorial Force Act of 1920 might not be entirely suitable for the Territorial Army that we now proposed to raise. After careful examination it has been found necessary to have a new Bill altogether. For instance, the old Territorial Force Act of 1920 has got a provision that all the members of that Territorial Force shall be subject to the British Army Act. Now that does not suit us under the changed circumstances. That is the main reason why it has been found necessary to have a new Bill.

As regards the actual provisions of the Bill I may point out that we have based the Bill on general principles. We have not gone into details. The details are to be worked out in the Rules. The Rules will make provision for all the details that are necessary for the working of this Bill. In view of the experience gained in the past, we have found it unnecessary to make statutory provisions for things for which statutory provision is absolutely unnecessary.

As the House will recollect, there was a general desire from every member of this House and also the country in general, that we ought to have a Territorial Army as early as possible. The main purposes for which this Territorial Army will be used have been indicated in the Bill itself. In addition to that, this Territorial Army will go a long way to meet the general desire amongst our population that military training should be given to everyone of those who wish to have some kind of military training. As I indicated previously, although we have limited the size of this Territorial Army to 1,30,000, as soon as this target is reached, and if there is a general desire that this number should be increased, well, that will certainly be considered by Government. There is absolutely no limit. But, to begin with we have to put a certain limit. That was fully explained in the last Budget Session of this House.

I do not think, Sir, there is much to explain about the general principles of the Bill. Everybody is agreed about them. There are certain amendments which have been given notice of. These have been discussed with the members who have given notice of them, but I will deal with them as and when they are moved. But one thing I would like to point out, namely, that some members have got a little bit of doubt and they think that we have omitted any reference in the Bill to the urban unit. There was a special provision in the old Act to raise urban units. By the omission of these urban units we do not mean that the urban units will not be raised. But what I am anxious to avoid is any reference to urban or rural units. It is our intention to raise the maximum number of units in the urban areas as well as in the rural area.

Then I have also promised that the rules which will be made under this Act will be placed before the Standing Committee of this Legislature for Defence, and they will have the opportunity of making any suggestions which are considered necessary.

With these observations I commend my motion for the acceptance of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to provide for the constitution of a Territorial Army for India be taken into consideration."

I find that two honourable members—Shri Biswanath Das and Shri Mahavir Tyagi—have tabled amendments to this. Do they intend to move their amendments?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): I want to make a few general comments at this reading.

Mr. Speaker: I want to know whether he proposes to move his amendment.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: No. But I thought you would permit a general discussion.

Mr. Speaker: My question was whether the honourable member desires to move his amendment and I understand his answer is in the negative.

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): I do not propose to move my amendment.

Sir, while welcoming the measure as a very necessary one, I must say that I feel we are not at all satisfied with the way in which it has been proposed to be rushed through the Legislature. Sir, this could have been brought before the Legislature a little earlier in this session so that we could have taken it through the process of the Select Committee. There are important provisions in the Bill which need revision. The old Act does not suit the present conditions; in view of the changed conditions, I am glad that the Bill has been brought and it proposes to give the necessary military training to the people of the country.

Sir, in that view of the question we welcome it; but there are certain provisions like clause 7 of the Bill which leaves the power in the hands of the Central Government to take these trainees to places outside India. Here I believe certain modifications are necessary. Trainees have to be called as provided in the Bill to have military training and to be utilised for the internal security of the State as also to serve as a second line of defence for the Army. That being the position, I do not think that it would be fair to expect that the people who are coming under the discipline and training of the territorial force should be called upon to go to places outside India.

Then again, in clause 9 of the Bill power has been given to the Government of India to make adaptations of the Army Act. Sir, adaptations are odious—adaptations may be necessary but nonetheless they are odious. We do not want adaptations. The Bill has been designed more or less on the lines of the Territorial Army Act of England. Why not incorporate the necessary provisions in the framework of the Bill? Why leave everything to the executive and nothing in the Bill itself? I should think that if this Bill had been introduced in time and gone through the process of the Select Committee, many such improvements could have been effected in this regard and necessary and useful provisions could have been included in the framework of the Bill so as to make it unnecessary for my friend to go in for adaptations.

Thirdly, the details of the Bill are practically left to the rule-making power of my honourable friend. We have no objection; the Government should have power to make rules—we welcome them in a sense, but, Sir, I cannot agree to the rules being framed by the executive Government of the day without coming to the Legislature. That means and implies giving the executive a power which you and I would not agree to do. I trust them, but there is a limit to trust, there is a limit to confidence; I think they should also reciprocate the trust that we give them, namely that they should not hesitate to come to the Legislative Assembly to get the rules approved. In this view of the question

I would not agree with my friend that the rule-making power so vested in the executive should be utilised without at all coming to this House.

Having stated so far, I should say that most of the details that are so very necessary and essential for giving effect to this Act have been left to the rules. I would appeal to my honourable friend to agree to go through the process of approaching the Legislature to get approval for the rules that are framed by him. That is necessary as that gives the Government a sense of responsibility and a sense of relief because they will be sure that the rules that are framed by him have the legislative sanction behind them and as such have also the popular support behind them. In view of that I appeal to my honourable friend to agree to this.

Sir it is no use passing Bills. In the course of this short Session, we have passed a number of Bills. Passing of Bills without the intention of giving immediate effect to such Bills takes us nowhere. You have taken away the responsibility of Rashtriya Swayam Sevak Sangh to give some sort of physical training to the people. You have practically in a way asked the people of this country not to have volunteers so as to get a sort of modified military training or physical training in a certain specified manner. Having done all this, I think it casts a serious responsibility on the Government to take up all these on their hands; whether the Government that has to discharge this responsibility is of the Province or the Centre, it matters very little, but the responsibility has to be discharged. Unless and until you discharge this responsibility you will be answerable to, the honourable members of this House and the honourable members of this House will certainly be responsible to the people of this State. Sir, protests have been made from various quarters to such an extent that certain friends in the Punjab had to feel the necessity of taking to satyagraha. In this view of the question I would appeal to my friend to take an earnest view of the question and try to give effect to the provisions of the Bill and have a Territorial Force which he and we so much desire to have as early as possible.

With these words, Sir, I thank him very much and I wish him good luck.

Shri S. K. Patil (Bombay: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I rise to heartily welcome this very important measure. Although superficially it appears to be a very simple measure, because it has not many sections and no complications, in my view it opens a new and important era in the defence resources of our country. My honourable friend the Minister for Defence will not take it as an adverse criticism if I say, Sir, that a measure of this description should have been introduced in this House within the very first month of our achieving freedom. We have passed about a year and if this measure was taken so early as that, I have reason to believe, and I think the honourable members of this House will agree with me, that by this time we should have got this one lakh and thirty thousand soldiers that we want to create under this new scheme.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): More than that.

Shri S. K. Patil: As I said, Sir, and as has been pointed out by the Honourable Minister in charge, although the Bill appears to be simple it has got very important and far-reaching repercussions. As the statement of objects and reasons has very clearly pointed out, this Territorial Army is intended to be a second line and another source of reinforcement of our regular Army. We have realised rather painfully during these days how important the existence of such an Army is to India in the present context.

Another thing which is also very important is that this Army is intended to assist the internal defence duties. We have been going through very hectic times during the last twelve months and at every step we found that it was necessary that our internal defence duties were carried on, not by the regular Army, but by some such Army which we are contemplating to create under this measure. So also this Territorial Army is also going to be responsible mainly for the anti-aircraft and the coastal defence. Now, if we take anti-aircraft and coastal defence, we can quite realise in a vast country like India with thousands of miles of coastline which luckily we possess how many thousands if not lakhs of people we require if our coastal line defences are to be perfect and our anti-aircraft defences are to be efficiently maintained.

Along with that, there is a view which has been very clearly expressed in the Statement of Objects and Reasons that an Army of this description is intended to give the youth of India an opportunity of training themselves to defend their country. Ever since we became free, there has been a wave throughout the length and breadth of this country, and millions of young men are ready today to join even the regular Forces if only they get an opportunity. There have been talks everywhere about national conscription. There are people who may think that why in the days and the times through which we are passing there should not be a national conscription. Many people do not understand and realise the difficulties of national conscription, but if this Bill had been introduced in time, all those who believe that a national conscription was necessary would have got something instead on which as a nucleus they could have built up their dream of a national conscription. Therefore, taking into consideration all these points, it is not a day too soon that this legislation has been introduced.

My honourable friend the Minister for Defence has stated that although under the present scheme he contemplates a Territorial Army of a 1 lakh and 30 thousand he believes that possibly this would be a nucleus and more such schemes will be forthcoming, or under this very Act it would be possible after a year or after the period stipulated to have Armies either of another 1 lakh and 30 thousand or even more. May I appeal to him in all humility that he should take stock of the situation in which this country is placed, exposed as we are to external danger, also exposed as we are to internal insecurity, and therefore there is a necessity that we must have at least a million of such army. There was a time when I used to talk of ten millions but that is neither necessary nor possible—we do not want to conduct any invasion and for that purpose we do not want an offensive Army—but even for the defence of a country which is so vast as ours and especially of our coast-line which is really subject to attacks in every direction—possibly, it may not be within the next few years, but surely a country like ours could not remain for a long time defenceless from a naval standpoint—so for all these purposes we should not be content with having a Territorial Army of only 130 thousand soldiers. We must have an Army which is at least ten times as large as that, but surely if we have to look upon the provisions of this Bill as a nucleus on which that type of Army can be built up, then from that stand-point I have no hesitation in welcoming this Bill.

Several objections have been raised and it has been pointed out by my honourable friend Mr. Biswanath Das who spoke before me that too much power has been taken by the Centre. In fact, there is nothing in this Bill except provisions to say that that power has been given to the Centre. May I tell him that although as a democrat I would always fight so far as the rights of this House and of the people of this country are concerned—and they should get as much democratic power as possible—so far as the Army is concerned, I shall really make an exception and say that the more the concentration of power in the hands of the Central Government the better it is for the safety of the country and from every stand point. Therefore, I am not at all sorry that the power has been vested in the Government of India. Surely, it is not suggested that this is such a democratic subject that we should get the Provinces and the States and everybody into our scheme and we shall so decentralise the power that every unit thereof should be autonomous and should get some voice in this Army. It is certainly a proposition which is not acceptable to me at all. We have been faced with certain suggestions not merely made by Mr. Das but by others as well. There have been criticisms and there have been amendments and I am taking stock of the situation as a whole and I am coming to this view that at least so far as the constitution of the Indian Army is concerned, for many years to come at any rate, I would like the Government of India to take as much power in its own hand as is possible to be done under the circumstances. We are an infant Government yet as a free country. It is only twelve months since we are free and the roots of nationalism have not yet gone deep into the soil. Our nationalism, excuse me when I say that, is only skin deep. It has got to go deep down into our blood, into our soul, and until then it is dangerous to expect that the Army should be so constituted that every unit, every Province and every State must have some say in the matter. That would be an impediment in the building up of that Army. If that proposition is seriously advanced by anybody, I should say that it is detrimental to the interests of this country and it ought not to be entertained even for a minute.

It has been pointed out, possibly on the analogy of the Indian Territorial Force under which we had built up an Army, that this should be something on that model. May I point out to this House that there is a word of difference between the conditions which existed in 1920 when that Act was passed and the conditions of the times in which we are living today. In those days it was not very fashionable or popular to join the ranks of the Army and for that all manner of temptations had got to be put in the ways of the people. The people had to be actually cajoled and for that purpose many Advisory Committees had to be appointed, Zonal Committees had to be appointed, Amenities Committees had to be appointed. Somehow or other, the thing which was distasteful had to be made popular or fashionable and for that purpose you had to do all these things. But now, is there any member who seriously suggests that in order that we shall constitute a proper Army all those temptations are necessary? Open the gates, and you will find thousands and millions of our young men would walk into them, because they know only too well that it is their duty—primary and sacred duty—to defend the borders of this country and to see that the internal security is well established in this land. Therefore, all those things which existed in those days need not be repeated today. Any time it seems to you that the co-operation of the people is not forthcoming in required measure, surely it is open to the Defence Minister to come before the House and amend the Act accordingly if by rules that same purpose could not be secured. Therefore, I am not with those people who really believe that this Act should have been framed on the same model as the Territorial Forces Act 1920.

The Honourable Minister has pointed out that he has done away with the difference between the urban units and the rural units; he has also done away with the difference between the martial races and the non-martial races; he has also done away with the preferential treatment to this province or that province; that possibly Punjab is a martial province and Madras and Bombay perhaps are less martial.

An Honourable Member: But Madrasis are very martial now.

Shri S. K. Patil: Yes, they are very martial. I am only saying that I am glad the Honourable Minister in charge of our Defence has done away with all those differences, inferior, superior and all that kind of thing. India, today, is one. Its national integrity is beyond question. It is the right of every son and daughter of India that he or she should stand four square for the defence of his or her country and that all this imaginary distinction of martial race, etc., should go and everyone should work for the defence of the country. Therefore, if these differences are done away with

[Shri S. K. Patil]

I am not at all sorry about it. I know that conditions will differ in rural and in urban areas so far as actual recruitment is concerned or the training and other conditions. But for that purpose we need not make a statutory provision that there shall be urban units and rural units. It must be possible for anyone who wants to join the army, whether he resides in a village or in a city, to join it without any impediment being put in his way. I am rather afraid that the Honourable Minister, when the scheme is announced, will find himself in difficulty because he will find ten times the number of applications that he wants, in the very first month. There is such a spirit today in the country that everybody who wants the country to be defended will come and join this. Therefore his arrangement must be so flexible that at any time when he wants to extend it there may be enough room for such extension. I know there is dearth of trainers and elaborate arrangements have to be made. It is not of course done overnight but will take some time. But we have to bear in mind that this is just a beginning. If we create an army of 130,000 people this is the first step and the beginning; and I think in ten years we shall find that this territorial army has multiplied tenfold. Therefore I appeal to those who have given notice of amendments and believe in the high principles of democracy that the time has come when the passing of this Bill ought not to be delayed even by a day. I am very glad that the Honourable Minister brought this Bill today; he should really resist the temptation of accepting any amendment which would result in delaying the passage of this Bill. It must be passed in this session and he must immediately put it into action.

We are told here—and very rightly too—that Government will frame rules; to meet contingencies the rule making power has been taken by Government as usual. But no time should be wasted in making those rules. Sometimes it does happen both in the provincial legislatures as well as in the Central Legislature that the rule-making power is taken by Government but the rules are not made for months and years and therefore the implementation of an important Bill becomes impossible. I am sure the rules must have been already made; but if they have not been made there must be no avoidable delay in making them, so that the implementation of this Bill may start on the day that this measure receives the assent of the Governor General. I welcome this Bill and I assure the Honourable Minister that the youth of India is waiting for this. In fact our young men have become impatient. They wanted this measure much earlier. But as it has come now the Honourable Minister should take every step in his power to see that India builds up one of the strongest defences in the world not only for defending its borders from foreign aggression but also for keeping the internal security which is so very necessary for its peace, progress and prosperity.

Shri Biswanath Das: Sir, on a matter of personal explanation, I do not see where both have offered. I have stated that we have confidence in the Ministers and are prepared to give them any amount of power, but on the principle of reciprocity they should also have confidence in us and agree to have all these rules confirmed by us. Then I stated that in the rule-making clause of the Bill there is no provision even for placing the rules on the table of this House. Therefore the only difference between my honourable friend and myself is...

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. The honourable member cannot argue the matter further; he can only give a personal explanation. Mr. Patil did not refer to him personally; in fact he clarified the point that he was not referring to Mr. Das. He was referring to all the amendments and not to any specific amendment.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U. P.: General): Sir, the Bill before us undoubtedly deals with a very important subject. The Statement of Objects and Reasons fully indicates the purposes of the Bill. It will provide, when passed, a very important means of diffusing military education in the country. But in considering this Bill I think we shall be justified in taking into account not merely its professed aims but also the language in which the intentions of Government have been expressed. I am not prepared to dismiss the subject as airy as my honourable friend Mr. Patil did. The question of the contents of the Bill is of great importance even at this time, and perhaps it is of greater importance now than it was ten or twenty years ago because of the increased consciousness among the people.

Sir, apart from clause 7 of the Bill which deals with the liability for military service there is nothing in this Act which can be regarded as of fundamental importance. This clause undoubtedly contains a very important provision that no member of the Indian territorial army would be required to perform military service beyond the limits of India except under a general or special order of the Central Government. In this respect it follows the language of the Indian Territorial Force Act. But with this single exception what does this Bill contain? All it tells us is that there will be a force known as the Indian Territorial Army, that members joining it may be punished and that they will be subject to such rules and regulations as Government in their wisdom may choose to make. Now there are undoubtedly matters which have to be left to be provided for by the rule-making power of Government. The complexity of administration, both in this country and elsewhere, has made it impossible for Parliament in any country to embody even all important details in a Bill. In consequence of this the power of the executive has increased greatly. But we have to see as guardians of public rights and interests that this rule-making power is not allowed to be increased to such an extent as to make legislation virtually a farce.

There must be certain matters which the Parliament should legitimately claim to control. It is only when the execution of the main purpose of a Bill is to be considered, that discretion can be given to the executive to carry out the purposes of a Bill. Looking at this Bill from this point of view, can it be said that all the matters that have been left to be dealt with under the Rules and Regulations are such as ought to be of no concern to this House? In order to have an objective standard to arrive at some reasoned conclusions in regard to this matter, we might well refer to the Indian Territorial Force Act. We were dissatisfied with the manner in which that Act was worked. The size of the force was limited and the training given was not the same as that given to regular soldiers. I have no doubt whatsoever that the Government will take a much keener interest in the development of the Territorial Army than the British Government did. But there are certain provisions which the British Government considered necessary to include in the Indian Territorial Force Act in order to enable a citizen who wanted to join the force to know what his minimum rights would be. One of the things to which I should like to draw the attention of the House in this connection is that the Indian Territorial Force Act recognised the importance of establishing an Urban unit. The reason for it was that public opinion desired that opportunities for military training should be provided not merely for the rural areas, but also for the urban areas, to educated people, who would not be able to give up their advocations in order to join the force. This is an important provision. I will not dispute the good intention of the Government. I have no doubt that my honourable friend the Defence Minister is as keen as anybody else that more urban units should be established. But, we are looking at the matter from the point of view of principle. We are told that the force will consist of officers and enrolled persons. We should be assured that there will be in addition to rural units, urban units. I suppose it is absolutely necessary to lay that down in the Bill. The common opinion is that the army would consist of officers and the rank and file. Yet, this matter has been excluded in the Bill. A far more important matter has been excluded on the ground that it can be dealt with under the Rules. Sir, the Government ought to realise that there are people in the country who want to receive military training under the Act which is going to be enacted. They will naturally compare the Bill before us with the Act passed by a foreign bureaucratic Government. Will it be a source of great satisfaction to them that provisions which were regarded as important features of the Act have been excluded from the Bill which we are now considering?

Again, Sir, the Indian Territorial Force Act provides that no enrolled person should be transferred from one branch, from one corps or unit of the force to any other branch or corps or unit without his consent. Such a provision finds a place not merely in the Indian Act, but also in the British Territorial and Reserve Forces Act. I have to draw the attention of Mr. S. K. Patil that England has a National Government. The Act to which I have referred, has a body, it is not a skeleton, which gives complete power to the Government to do as they like. If the British Government considered it necessary that such a provision should be included in the British Territorial and Reserve Forces Act, I should like to know what justifies this exclusion from the present Bill. I am sure, the House will grant, whatever confidence it may have in the good intentions of the Honourable Defence Minister, that such a provision which confers a definite right on the members of the force ought not to be omitted from the Bill.

To illustrate my point, further, Sir, I would refer to another provisions of the existing Act. It relates to the replacement of the Territorial troops, as soon as circumstances permit, by regular or other troops. This, undoubtedly, has left a great deal of discretion in the hands of the military officers. In an emergency, the Government cannot deprive the executive officers of this discretion. But, the Act clearly pointed out that the purpose of the force was to help the regular army in case of need only to the extent that its help was necessary. This provision too finds no place in this Bill. I was unfortunately not in the House when my honourable friend the Defence Minister spoke. I was therefore unable to profit by his observations, but I have no doubt that when he replies his defence will be that none of these matters would be over looked and that all of them would be adequately provided for in the rules. My honourable friend would in effect say to a citizen: "Trust the Government to do the right thing. You have no rights except such as the Government chooses to give". Is this the language in which the Defence Minister proposes to say to the people of India in the Year 1948? Is this a course which my honourable friend, Mr. S. K. Patil would seriously advocate to this House? I am afraid he spoke a little undauntedly and with too much enthusiasm. If he reflects over the matter, I am sure he will realize that the position in the country is not such as to enable anybody to claim that the people would be perfectly satisfied with the motives and intentions of the Government and would need nothing in order to assure them that those good motives and intentions would be fully carried out. A stand like that taken by the Government might easily have been taken 20 years ago. The ordinary citizen was of no account, then. Then the military authorities enjoyed great prestige and power, which they no longer do. It was considered necessary even by the British Government while framing the Territorial Forces Bill to include certain provisions which are essential and clothe the Bill with flesh and blood. For the reasons that I have given, Sir, I do not at all approve of the course which Government have chosen to adopt. I think it is an entirely wrong course and I trust that the House will not permit such a Bill ever to be brought before it in future. It is a travesty of legislation, Sir, that we should be asked to consider a Bill which practically confines itself to say that there shall be an Indian Territorial Army, which shall be governed in such a manner as Government may from time to time desire.

There is one more point, which I should like to refer to before I sit down. During the War, the services of women were needed in every country. We had to set up a special organization in India in common with other countries that were engaged in the War to enable women to play their part in the struggle that was going on. Now, I should like to know what are the intentions of the Government in regard to this important respect. Nothing, as I have already indicated, has been said in the Bill on this subject. The experience of the War has shown, Sir, but I think it is necessary for Government to tell the House in what manner they propose to utilize and train the women to be helpful to the country in an emergency. Sir, we know the various ways in which women served during the War. The National Cadet Corps Committee has recommended a scheme for the training of girls to discharge such duties as they might suitably be called upon to perform in a war. Having been the Chairman of the Committee, it is not for me to say whether its recommendations are sound or not. But I think that they provide a good starting point. Government need not wait till the girls who have received training under the scheme recommended by the National Cadet Corps Committee are ready to join any organization for women that might then be set up by Government. There are already in this country women who would be prepared to undergo training to fit themselves to help men in a crisis. There are some who are trained during the war and some of them can be used as Instructors and the others can be used in order to provide the nucleus of an organization which we hope will expand in the future. These are the main points which I should like to put before the House. I know that the House in its present temper, will not be prepared to introduce any new provisions in the Bill. I have, therefore, not troubled myself with giving notice of amendments, but I must say again with all the force at my command that this Bill should not provide a model for the future; its form is as unsatisfactory as it could be; it seems to me to have been hastily drafted, so that something might be passed by this House before this session. Now the Government are making a virtue of their fault and insisting that the points which were included in the Indian Territorial Force Act had better be left to be dealt with by the military authorities and the claim, the advantage or flexibility in the present context means telling the citizen that he has no rights whatsoever vis-a-vis the Government.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I also want to take this opportunity of thanking the Honourable the Minister for Defence not for the completeness of the Bill, since it is being criticised, but for the spirit behind this Bill. In fact, since the partition of the country, there has been a lot of frustration in the public mind, and unless there is some such lead which gives an individual an interest in society, something on which he could hinge his hope, this frustration can never be overcome. One does not know what to do in spite of our republican Government. In spite of our slogans, everything seems to have now gone practically wrong and hollow.

I call this a republican Government because we have been sent by the public and we are managing all the affairs of our State.

This Bill at least gives a slogan to the people: it gives a hope to the people. Strategically, partition has not placed us in a very happy position. On the west there is a neighbour who says he is our enemy. We have not yet called him our enemy. But every day on the radio the biggest of their leaders, their Fuhrer, calls us their enemies. He is also on our east, and even inside India there are people who are not very friendly to us. Under these conditions, we must give the public a lead how to withstand this terror—the terror of this enormously intricate situation that is brewing in the air. Every one in the streets wants a cure. Every one wants some way out of it and some lead.

[Shri Mahavir Tyagi]

I beg to submit that if the provisions of this Bill, as have been thought of by the Honourable the Minister for Defence are given shape to, then I am sure that the structure and the set up of that organisation will infuse some hope in the individual. Now things are so hopeless. I read in the papers the other day that on account of some troop movements in East Punjab there was an influx of people from Amritsar and other places. They felt as if war was coming. India has not seen an internal war for a long time and one cannot say what will happen if really this unfortunate catastrophe occurs in India. If there is a war, whether here inside, or on the east or on the western front, one cannot be sure as to what will happen to our population. They are not trained in mass movements. We have already had an experience of the movement of the masses and we have not been able to overcome its effects yet. We have not been able to rehabilitate those masses lying here on our streets. If there is a war, whenever it is and wherever it is, it will lead to chaos. It will give rise to a situation which will be very difficult to control unless we give regular training to our people in the matter of marches, in the matter of movements, and military training. If this Bill is to infuse that military spirit and a spirit of defence in the people themselves, then I must submit that this is for the good of the country.

I am an ex-army man. I had been in the army in the first Great War of 1914. I had non-co-operated. I was court-martialled and expelled from Baluchistan and Persia where I used to be. I had been exiled from there and sent to my home. I have a little bit of experience of war. I submit that whenever there was a question of a territorial army in the British Parliament and in other countries, the main idea behind it was to infuse a spirit into the public—the voluntary spirit of coming out for defence. That was the main idea and that was in fact forced on the minds of the politicians because these politicians have always held that those who joined the army to fight had little initiative: they joined Army, because either they had a charm for the beautiful dress or the uniform or badges or because they had no other means of livelihood. They contended that educated persons who had the fire of true patriotism did not go to the standing armies. In the standing armies there were people, including officers, of all ranks, who went there according to their status. But these people came mainly for the purpose of having some employment and to occupy their spare time and use their energies in eking out a living.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member may resume his speech after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock.

Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I was talking before lunch about the origin of the territorial army. As far as I know these armies came into being because of the fast changing tactics of war. The war lords felt that there was something which was lacking in their armies and that was, tactical initiative which of course the armies of old did not possess. Old wars were fought on the strength of the muscle. Now the war of muscles is gone and our wars are wars of nerves and therefore they wanted to infuse into their armies well developed nerves and a complicated process of thinking which only such men could do as were well educated, and whose feelings of patriotism were well developed. Also there was a demand for civilians to participate more and more and take more and more interest in war affairs. Therefore this idea of the territorial army originated. Since we are also going to raise a territorial army I beg of the Minister to see that this army is not absolutely deprived of its original roots in the people. It must have regular contacts with the public. The regular army had nothing to do with the public: it was kept absolutely isolated from the people. Every army must have a slogan, because wars of today are the wars of slogans. It so happens that our country has no slogan; being a secular state. The idea of secularity means that we can talk of truthfulness, amity, friendship and so on. But these slogans have no zest or spirit behind them. The strongest emotion of man is either one of friendship, which is maddening or there is another stronger sentiment, which is enmity. I know that enmity is a stronger sentiment. Our neighbours have taken to that fanatic slogan of war against us or calling us enemies. Therefore the bestial spirit in that part of the land will always rise and raise that slogan of war against us. They point out to us as their enemy and they will therefore raise the spirit of their people to fight against us. But our slogans are secular and have no force: they are only a pious sort of slogans. We had no slogan till now. But there is another strong feeling in man: it is the feeling of security, survival or protection of oneself and that instinct of self-preservation is the basic instinct of man. By raising this territorial force in the country we are giving to our people a slogan of survival. This is a slogan which will appeal to the country and therefore I welcome this measure.

Sir, I have nothing more to say except that the Bill as drafted is slightly lopsided, as far as its balance is concerned, as it is more in favour of the rule making authority. I agree with my learned friend Pandit Kunzru when he says that most of the laws which this House has enacted are in favour of the power which will frame the rules in regard to these Acts. It is not the elected representatives who frame the rules, it is not the Honourable the Defence Minister who frames them although for all practical purposes he is responsible for every word and letter of the rules and their spirit too. Actually what happens is that the Secretary or one or two officials draft the rules and the Minister may make a change here and there. When those rules take shape into law it will come to this that instead of the legislature legislating for the country and the army, it would be one or two officials who will legislate. Therefore I submit that this Bill is lopsided in its balance because it is more in favour of the power, viz., the secretariat officials, who will frame the rules. Those rules will for all practical purposes in the long run be the law which will govern our boys when they join the territorial army, take their training or go to their barracks. Those rules are the rules which will concern the man in the street because it is those rules which will tell the man who wants to offer himself as a recruit, whether the Territorial Army is worth joining or not. I therefore hope that when the rules are framed they are brought to the notice of the House and if any changes are required this House may be given an opportunity of having their say as to whether they would like to change any rule or not.

Since, Sir, it is a matter which relates to the army I wish to take this opportunity of saying a few words regarding those of our lads in the army who have been slain in Kashmir. Those young boys have given their lives for the cause of the safety of our country and our sympathies go to them. It is not the referendum of hands that counts but the referendum of the heads that lie beheaded on that stony soil of Kashmir. It is they who have decided our fate. If those dead ones could listen to our voice we wish to assure them through this Act that we hope to accomplish what they could not in their attempt and shed their blood. Let those beautiful flowers which will blossom in the valley of Kashmir bespeak their appreciation of the great deeds of valour which our young boys have done and the spirit they had displayed. Let our young lads by enrolling themselves in the territorial army express their appreciation of the heroism of those young men who have given their lives and assure them that they are following the path which they had shown.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U. P. General): Sir, this is a Bill which has probably been very eagerly awaited. My honourable friend, Mr. Patil was right when he said that this Bill should have been the first Bill that this Legislature should have passed. However, we had to wait for a whole year for the Bill to come before the Legislature. In Russia, when they had won the Revolution, Lenin entrusted Trotsky with the job of creating the Red army; and within one year, from out of nothing, they created an army which drove out the invaders within the first two years. We too knew from the very beginning that all around us there were enemies. My honourable friend pointed out that we are surrounded by enemies in the east, in the west, in the north and in the south. Still the Government thought that good-will would prevail and that we could postpone the day when we shall have a National Militia containing millions of people. This House realised the importance and the need of the situation and I remember that our veteran leader Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya brought forward a resolution for the formation of a National Militia, about eight months ago. The reply of the Government then was that they would consider the matter and soon raise a Militia. But in the last session we were told in the course of a statement that the Government would form a Territorial Army and that it would consist of a lakh and thirty thousand people. And then we are now told it was found that a change of the Territorial Force Act was necessary to raise this force. I really wonder why the Defence Department did not see that they could not enforce their decision unless they made a change in the Act. I therefore think that there has been a very great carelessness on the part of the Department in having postponed this Bill till this date. It should have come at least at the time when the Minister made the statement during the last session. Then it could have been implemented and it would have come into force by now and would have helped the country. Unfortunately that has not been done.

What is the position today? Does this Bill fulfil the needs of the country? I think it does not. The main idea behind the demand for a militia is that every man in the country must be able to defend himself. This Bill caters only for one lakh and thirty thousand people. Of course it will make them better trained and probably make them fit to be absorbed into the army when necessary. But I think that the immediate need of the country at present is that the people on the borders and on the frontiers and people who are in danger zones, and also other people in general, should be able to defend themselves. They should be trained in the use of rifles and given rifles and other arms. If there is a war, whose clouds are gathering and which probably is a certainty, what shall we do? I think this Act will not be able to serve the purpose. I therefore want something much more than this. I want to give to the Honourable Minister the experience of my own Province. In our Province our Premier, the Honourable Pandit Pant, has evolved a scheme of training 12 lakh persons. The scheme is to take eleven men from each village and constitute a village militia. It is known as the Prantiya Raksha Dal. I am surprised that within the short space of less than one year we have been able to create at least half that number. They have been able to train instructors. The trained instructors are being sent to the villages and now they are raising people in each village so that by the end of the year there will be 12 lakhs of people who will know the use of arms. Of course they will not have rifles because there are not enough rifles to go round. But they will know how to use them. My submission is that the Central Government should benefit by the experience of this Province, take the initiative and see to it that in every Province a body like that is formed.

They should see to it that in every village there are at least eleven persons who know the use of arms and who can bear arms. This should be done in every Province and it should be co-ordinated from the Centre. The Centre should help by way of providing finance and by way of providing military experts for training the people. At the rate of eleven persons from each village, from the 7 lakhs of villages there will be 77 lakh people who will know at least the use of rifles.

Yesterday we were sitting in the Standing Committee on Rehabilitation and we were thinking about problems of how to rehabilitate lakhs of people who have come here. But I see that people are running away from the frontiers—in the west, in the east and also near about the south. How can our big schemes go on under these conditions? People get nervous. They will get reassured only when we are able to have some such scheme which will show that within a year we will have in every village at least eleven persons who will be trained in the use of arms and who will be able to defend the village in an emergency. If our factories are properly run, as they were run during the war, we can have all the rifles we need. My submission is that this Bill is not the Bill which can serve our needs at present. What is wanted is a Bill incorporating a plan for initiating activities like those of the Prantiya Raksha Dal in the U.P., in all other Provinces and co-ordinating them. The Central Government should supervise and finance all such activities. It should ask the Provincial Governments to raise such forces and should also finance them. I do not find any difficulty about finance. They can depend on half the contribution from the Provinces themselves. People are coming forward with so much enthusiasm that they are prepared to bear part of the cost of their own messing in training camps and even to pay half the cost of the uniform. When there is so much enthusiasm I do not know why we cannot utilise it.

I want, Sir, that the Honourable the Defence Minister should send the Bill to a Select Committee. We should evolve a scheme by which he can make every Province start a scheme like the scheme of the Prantiya Raksha Dal of U.P. The Central organisation should be able to co-ordinate their activities. It should also have these one lakh and thirty thousand men or more, who should be trained as instructors. The Territorial Force should consist of instructors who should be able to give the benefit of their training to other people. That will be something which will reassure the country; there will be then no panic; people will know that the country will not take any aggression lying down.

The issue is grave. Although our brave sons and our brave brothers have defended the soil of Kashmir and the country in the snows, still we do not feel gratified when we hear that there is a reversal or a defeat. We do not want that a small power like Pakistan should be able to give us defeats. I know that they are in advantageous positions; they can have their bases in Pakistan near the fighting lines. Still we are a bigger and a mightier country and we should therefore be able to see that our brave men whom we have sent to defend our honour are not let down. If the enemy has got 80 pounder guns our men should have even bigger guns and we should not be throwing the lives of our men so cheaply. I think the country is agitated over the whole question and people do not want a Bill in this form.

My honourable friend Pandit Kunzru said that there is no flesh and blood in this Bill. I agree with his criticism. The rule-making power should not become the power of making laws. At present really all the laws are made by the rules and the rules will be really what the laws should be. I think this is a power which is very dangerous to our democracy and should not have been given. Still I am in hurry and I do not want that the thing should be held up because the Bill has not been clothed with flesh and blood. I am eager that proper rules should be made as soon as the House passes this Bill into an Act. But I do want that this Bill should become a much more comprehensive measure. The Bill should therefore be sent to a Select Committee where all the provisions of the Bill should be recast in such a manner that the whole Bill becomes a new Bill, having more flesh and blood and providing for all important things in the Act and leaving less important things for the rules, so that it may become fully suited to the needs of the country today.

I also want to point out that today we are only faced with Pakistan. But we are now a free country and we have to take our place among the nations of the world according to what our population warrants. America sent one core and sixty lakhs of people outside its frontiers in the war to fight for Imperialism. That is about 12½ per cent. of its total population. We cannot afford to maintain a regular army even one-fourth of that size. But if we want to live in the world with honour and with our head high we can do one thing. We can train every man in our country who can bear arms in the full use of arms. And that is the purpose of the National Militia or the Territorial Army. I therefore think that if we begin in the manner that I have suggested, and all Provinces start similar things as the Prantiya Raksha Dal of U.P., if the men in the villages are given training gradually to make them into complete soldiers, then we shall have very soon 77 lakhs of people trained in the whole country. We can raise the number gradually so that very soon our country will be able to boast itself of possessing an adequate number of trained people who can fight any danger to our country. At present we are in a grave situation. Everywhere peace is threatened. We are all reading in the papers what happens round about Hyderabad, what happens on the Pakistan frontiers, and we have no reply to people who question about these things. I do wish we could give a reply and this Bill, suitably recast in the manner suggested, will give the reply: Our Parliament has passed a Bill; we are prepared to give the whole country training in arms, we shall have a National Militia, a force which will be worthy of our country, which will defend the honour of our country at any time, so that no country dare cast its eyes upon us.

Sir, with these words, I support my request to send the Bill to a Select Committee.

Begum Aizaz Rasul (U.P.: Muslim): Sir, I am grateful to you for so kindly giving an opportunity of extending my wholehearted support to this Bill. I welcome the Bill and congratulate the Honourable the Defence Minister for bringing forward such a legislation.

There is no doubt that this new and important measure will open a new era in the military position of our country. I am glad that an opportunity is being given for infusing military education in the country. Sir, at a time when the safety of India is threatened from all sides, we must do everything in our power to strengthen our defence, and I am glad that an opportunity is being given to the youths of this country to take training in the defence of their motherland. It has been rightly pointed out here—and I am glad that the Honourable the Defence Minister has also mentioned it—that for a vast country like India the number of one lakh and thirty thousand is an extremely inadequate number. But I hope that as time goes by larger and larger number of people will be able to receive this military training and that this number of one lakh and thirty thousand will before long be very much expanded.

Sir, a very pertinent question that was put by the honourable Pandit Kunzru was regarding the position of women in the defence of their country.

Experience of the last war has amply proved that women can play a very great and important part in this line. I hope that the Honourable Minister, when making out the plan for this training, will keep in mind the fact that women should also be given an opportunity of training themselves for the defence of their country. We hope that ways and means will be devised and opportunities will be given to women to take the right training in order to make themselves most useful in the spheres in which they can do so in this Territorial Army.

Sir, I know that the House is very much pressed for time and, therefore, with these few words I wholeheartedly support this Bill.

सेठ गोविन्द दास : सभापति जी, मैं इस बिल का स्वागत करता हूँ, यद्यपि मैं यह मानता हूँ कि संसार का आण सेनायें भरती करने में नहीं है और तबतक हमारा मानव समाज सुखी नहीं हो सकता जबतक कि हम महात्मा गांधी के बताये हुए रास्ते पर न चलें। मैं तो उस समय की कल्पना करता हूँ कि जिस समय दुनिया में यह फौजें नहीं रह जायंगी और जिस तरह से आज चारों तरफ हमें खून खराबी, रक्तपात दिखाई देता है वह नहीं रहेगा। मैं मानता हूँ कि निसर्ग ने मनुष्य के हृदय में जो पाशविकता दी है वह रहने वाली है। व्यक्तिगत झगड़े दुनिया में कभी खत्म नहीं हो सकते, वे रहेंगे। एक मनुष्य दूसरे मनुष्य से ईर्ष्या भी करेगा। उस ईर्ष्या के फलस्वरूप झगड़े भी होंगे। कभी कभी रक्तपात भी हो जाया करेगा। परन्तु उसी के साथ मैं यह भी मानता हूँ कि जिस तरह आज दुनिया में बिना व्यक्तिगत दुश्मनी के भी फौजें लड़ती हैं, दो फौजों के जो सैनिक होते हैं ये एक दूसरे को जानते तक नहीं, उनमें कोई शत्रुता नहीं रहती, उनमें कोई ईर्ष्या नहीं रहती, उनमें कोई वैमनस्य नहीं रहता, इतने पर भी मैदानों में जा कर लोग लड़ते हैं, रक्तपात होता है, हजारों और लाखों की संख्या में लोग मरते हैं, यह पवित्रस्थिति जरूर बदली जा सकती है। व्यक्तिगत पाशविकता, के रहते हुए, व्यक्तिगत झगड़ों के रहते हुए भी सामूहिक पाशविकता, सामूहिक मारकाट का अन्त अवश्य हो सकता है। कहा जा सकता है कि दुनिया में हमेशा लड़ाई होती आई है और हमेशा होती रहेगी। मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि दुनिया में जो चीजें पहले होती थीं आज नहीं होती। एक समय ऐसा था, जो कि इतिहास से सिद्ध है, कि जब मनुष्य मनुष्य को खाजाता था। और मैं आपसे कहना चाहता हूँ कि वह वक्त ऐसा वक्त रहा होगा कि जो मनुष्य सबसे अधिक मनुष्यों को खाने की क्षमता रखता होगा उसकी समाज पूजा करता होगा, और समाज में वह सबसे बड़ा वीर माना जाता होगा। आज मनुष्य मनुष्य को नहीं खाता। एक समय ऐसा था कि मनुष्य शरीर का सौदा होता था और यह बात इतिहास से सिद्ध है कि जिसके पास अधिक से अधिक गुलाम होते थे वह समाज में बड़ा आदमी समझा जाता था। लेकिन आज मानव शरीरों से सौदे नहीं होते। गुलामों के बाजार नहीं लगते और गुलामों का क्रय विक्रय नहीं होता। मेरे कहने का मतलब यह है कि यदि हम मानव इतिहास का अवलोकन करें तो हमको यह स्पष्ट दिखता है कि समय समय पर मानव ने जो मूल्य निर्धारित किये उनमें परिवर्तन हुआ है मेरा विश्वास है कि एक समय भी आ सकता है कि जब इस तरह का सामूहिक रक्तपात समाप्त हो जायगा और हम को व्यक्तिगत पाशविकता के रहते हुये भी सामूहिक पाशविकता दिखाई न देगी। लेकिन जबतक यह समय नहीं आ जाता जबतक महात्मा गांधी के बताये हुए मार्ग पर सारा संसार नहीं चलता तबतक हम सेनाओं का अन्त नहीं कर सकते, तब तक फौजों के निर्माण की आवश्यकता है और इसीलिए मैं इस बिल का स्वागत करता हूँ।

[सेठ गोविन्द दास]

मैं माननीय रक्षा मंत्री जी को इस पर बधाई देता हूँ कि वे इस प्रकार का बिल हमारे सामने लाये यद्यपि यह बिल अभी बहुत थोड़े दायरे में हमारे सामने आया है जैसा कि अभी मेरे पहले के वक्ता ने कहा इसका प्रान्तों में विस्तार होना चाहिए। संयुक्त प्रान्त में यह कार्य हो रहा है। हमारे मध्यप्रान्त में भी होमगार्ड का काम बहुत अच्छी तरह से चल रहा है और वहाँ पर हजारों की संख्या में होम गार्ड्स में भरती हो रहे हैं तो मैं यह चाहता हूँ कि यह और अधिक विस्तृत किया जाय।

इसके आरम्भ में लिखा हुआ है कि :

"It extends to the whole of India and applies to all classes of persons in the Territorial Army"

हमारे विदेशी प्रभुओं ने अब तक हमारे यहाँ पर कुछ खास खास जातियों को ही फौजों में भरती होने का अधिकार दिया था, लेकिन हम इस बात को कभी नहीं मानते हैं। हम इस बात को मानते हैं कि जिसने भी इस देश में जन्म लिया है, चाहे वह किसी भी जाति में पैदा हुआ हो, उसको अधिकार होना चाहिए कि वह अपने देश की रक्षा में भाग ले सके। यह हर्ष की बात है कि इस बिल में ऐसी कोई कैंद नहीं है कि अमुक अमुक जाति के लोग ही टैरिटोरियल फौज में भरती हो सकते हैं। यह बिल सारे देश पर लागू होता है और सब जातियों के लोग इस सेना में आ सकेंगे। लेकिन जैसा कि मैं आपसे कहा यह बहुत संकीर्ण रूप से हमारे सामने आया है। मैं आशा करता हूँ कि यह केवल आरम्भ मात्र है और आगे चलकर यह काम बहुत बढ़ाया जायगा। मैं इसका स्वागत और समर्थन करता हूँ।

(English translation of the above speech).

Seth Govind Das. (C.P. and Berar: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I welcome this Bill, although I admit that the raising of armies is not the only effective way for the protection of the world and until Mahatma Gandhi's ideals are not followed, there would be no real peace for the society. I look forward to the day when there would no longer be no armies anywhere in the world, and there will be no bloodshed which we find on all sides at present. I also admit that the bestiality which man has inherited from Nature will persist and personal quarrels will never end in this world but will continue. A man will envy another man and this would give rise to disputes. At times there will also be bloodshed. But along with this I also admit that just as armies fight each other in the world without any personal reasons—the soldiers of both the armies are not even known to each other—they do not harbour any enmity, jealousy or hostility to one another, and in spite of all this they go and fight in the field. There is bloodshed—thousands and lacs of people are killed. Such a state of affairs can surely be changed. In spite of barbarities committed by individuals, mass barbarity and slaughter can surely be put an end to. It can be said that wars have always been waged in the world and they will continue to be waged. I would like to point out that the things which existed in the world previously do not exist now. There was a time when a man used to devour a man and this is corroborated by history, and I would like to tell you that during those days a man who had the greatest capacity to devour men must have been worshipped by the society—and he was regarded as the greatest hero. Now-a-days man does not devour man. There was a time when a man was treated as a saleable commodity—and this fact is supported by the history that he who possessed the largest number of slaves was considered as the biggest man in the community. But now-a-days men are not sold. The slaves are no longer bought and sold in market places.

What I mean to say is that if we read the history of mankind, it would be clearly observed that there has been a change in the valuation of man from time to time. I am confident that a time will come when such sort of mass bloodshed will end and we will not see mass savagery despite the existence of individual savagery. But until this time does not come and the whole world does not follow the footsteps of Mahatma Gandhi, we cannot wind up the armies. Till then it would be necessary to raise the armies and for this reason I welcome this Bill. I congratulate the Honourable the Defence Minister for his having brought before us such a bill, although this has got a very limited scope—just as the speaker who preceded me observed that it should be extended to Provinces. This work is also being done in the United Provinces. In the Central Provinces and Berar also the Home-guards are carrying on nicely and thousands of persons are enlisting themselves in the Home-guard establishment. Therefore, I want that this should be further extended.

It has been laid down in sub-clause (2) of Clause (1) of the Bill:

"It extends to the whole of India and applies to all classes of persons in the Territorial Army"

Our erstwhile foreign rulers gave the privilege of enlistment to some selected communities only, which we do not admit. We are of the opinion that everybody born in this country to whatever community he may belong should have the right to participate in the defence operations of this country. It is a matter of gratification that this Bill is not restricted to any particular community in the matter of recruitment to the Territorial Army but extends to the whole of India and the recruitment to this Branch of the Army will be open to every community. But just as I have stated this has been presented to us in a very narrow form. I hope that this is only a beginning and its scope would be considerably enlarged in the near future.

I welcome and support it.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Mr. Speaker, Sir, so long as British rule had not been liquidated from India and so long as the British had not left our shores, the people of India as a whole were naturally not defence-minded, because the people thought—and rightly so too—that any attempt on their part to enrol for defence or to train themselves for defence meant their defending the British Empire in India and fighting wars of Empire outside India. Our leaders—Mahatma Gandhi and all the Congress leaders—opposed this, and it has been only since the 15th of August 1947 that we, the people of India, have woken up to the reality of the defence of India. From this point of view, this Bill, as one of my friends has remarked, has not come a day too soon.

We, Sir, before attaining our freedom, were told that as soon as India became free there would be introduced or enforced or brought about, three things and they were: nationalisation, industrialisation and militarisation. These three fundamentals of national development were always kept in view before us by the leaders. Neither of these three have been implemented in full today, but we have taken steps forward in all the three aspects. Militarisation has been dubbed as something evil, something pernicious, by various writers and theorists, but it depends, Sir, on what outlook, on what basis, on what orientation, this militarisation of a nation is effected. Leaders like Shri and Netaji have shown that with the proper outlook and proper orientation, an Army could be created which could not be corrupted by the usual military practices, and that is the Army which we want to build up for a free India today, so that it can be a model Army for all the countries in the world.

Here, Sir, we come to the proposition: How big can our Army be? There are various computations. Some theorists say that it should be one per cent effective Army; some have gone up to 5 per cent of the population and some say that it could go up to 10 per cent in an emergency. I think, Sir that 5 per cent of the population will not be a very difficult proposition. On that computation, India with a population of 300 million—I would not say 400 million, because we are divided, and 100 million have gone out of India—on a computation of 5 per cent including the Regulars and the Reservists. It should not be difficult for us to have an Army of about 15 million. It is too big a number to think of—an almost astronomical figure—and the expenditure connected with this Army is something enormous, but, Sir, we have to bear in mind that during the last War, Germany with a population of 60 million, i.e. Germany by itself minus the territories which she conquered later, had a trained Army including the Reservists of about 3 to 3½ million—that comes easily to 5 per cent, or a little more, and Russia had a force including their Reservists, of about 6 to 7 million. On that basis, therefore, I do not see at all why it is difficult for us to raise a force of 15 million in course of time. We are not embarking on a campaign of aggression or of expansion, but as some of the previous speakers have pointed out, we are menaced from without and there is no doubt that India today is menaced from without by more forces than one and it is as well for us to be on our guard. "To be fore-warned is to be fore-armed."

My friend Pandit Kunzru raised a few objections to the Bill as it has been brought before the House today. I agree with him that the Bill could perhaps have been better drafted and perhaps could have been a bit more clear in certain respects, but I am sorry that throughout his speech he did not put forward any concrete proposals which could have made this measure for creating a Territorial Army more flexible, more elastic, more popular and more in consonance with the will of the people. Had he advanced some concrete suggestions instead of merely criticising this measure, we would have been very happy indeed, because, Sir, he has been an expert in this field for over two decades and I would gladly take lessons from him.

Then there was an objection from my friend Mr. Tyagi about certain rules that will be framed under it or in accordance with it. His objection was that they will not be submitted to this Legislature. In all probability, it is so. But may I remind him that the rules that will be framed by the Secretariat of the Defence Ministry will be brought before the Standing Committee elected by this House. So I would entreat him to have full confidence in the members of the Standing Committee which he and the other friends in this House have elected to assist and co-ordinate the activities of the Defence Ministry.

Then, Sir, one or two more points and I have done. What is the underlying purpose of a Territorial Army? There are two aspects of it. One is to train instructors who will train the men later on in the event of an emergency, and the other is to get ready or to prepare actual combatants. If the basis of the Territorial Army is expansion in case of emergency, then training of leaders acquires far more importance than training of mere combatants in drill and use of weapons, which acquires only secondary importance. In short, we should focus our attention and our energies on this very important aspect of training such leaders as will train the men later on in the event of an emergency. The fundamental purpose of the Territorial Army is to train or to change a crowd of individual combatants into a disciplined tactical instrument, because tactical efficiency is the coping stone of an Army and as long as it is merely a crowd it cannot function in war as a disciplined unit. That is why this Territorial Army should expand its scope so that all citizens will be embraced within its fold. Then, Sir, in the end, I would stress these main points. We wish to create this Territorial Army, and we must train many men who are qualified for that purpose. We must train them in the theory of war, the theory of resistance and the theory of aggression, the technique of offence and defence and then, Sir, the leaders will train the men later on. This will be the nucleus of the future trainers. Therefore, importance must be given to lecture classes and lecturing tours (Interruption). My honourable friend Prof. Ranga wonders why there should be lecture classes and lecturing tours. He himself opened a Summer School of Politics or Economic or something like that, some years ago, and he is a great believer in lecturing and in speaking and in exhorting. Of all persons in this House, he should be the last to raise any objection to lecturing.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps on this occasion he does.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Then, Sir, as I have said, the crowd has got to be trained into a disciplined unit and here, as Mr. Tyagi said, discipline today is more a matter of brain than of brawn and not so much a thing of the body or the muscles as a thing of mind and spirit; and I hope, Sir, therefore that this Territorial Army will in time grow into a very big force which will assist, as is stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, the regular force in the event of a national emergency. Sir, I am not a Jeremiah; I do not want to be a Cassandra nor do I want to be a pessimistic or gloomy prophet; I feel, from how events are moving in India—events at home and abroad, that perhaps the day is not far off when, God forbid, we may have to take up arms. Man after all fears and hopes; that day will, I am afraid, come and we may have to take up arms. I hope some of us in this House will join the Territorial Army and set an example to other people in this country to do the same and show what we can do to others, to our friends and neighbours.

I have done. I do hope and pray that this Army, this Territorial Army will grow into a real citizen army of India, into which any citizen will be welcome, man or woman will be welcome. I would refer in passing that in the event of a war or a similar emergency, women would do better to defend our homes and take up jobs which men have left behind in order to join the front and not join the Army directly. They would be of far greater service to the nation by doing this duty than by joining the Army and going to the front. There are enough men in India; man-power is so tremendous here that we can recruit millions of people for the Army who will be glad to go to the front. Sir, I have done.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Mr. Speaker, Sir, I am glad to note the general approval with which this measure has been received by this House. There has been criticism, which, I think, is based on a misapprehension. I would first like to point out one or two objections which were raised by my honourable friend, Pandit Kunzru. He said that there was no mention of women as far as this Territorial Army Bill is concerned. I may point out that if you carefully go through this Bill, you will find it is clearly stated that in case of emergency, the Indian Army Act will be applicable to the members of the Territorial Army. Now, Sir, members of the Territorial Army are subject to the Indian Army Act and in the Indian Army Act there is no provision for women to be taken on active service; I do not ignore the important role which our women have played in the past and I am sure in case of national emergency, our women will play a still greater part.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: May I put a question? Is it necessary for you to put the entire force at any time under the Army Act?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: It may not be necessary and as I have already pointed out in my speech when introducing the Bill, I have tried to avoid all kinds of complications. It is a Bill which is based on very, very broad basis and as there is no provision for the employment of women in the Indian Army Act itself, they have been left out, but as I have said, it is not our intention to leave them out altogether; in fact, I very much welcome the desire of the House that the women of this country should take an active part in the defence of this country whenever a national emergency arises.

The other point which has been made out by Pandit Kunzru is in connection with clause 7. He made a point that it would be inconvenient for the members of the Territorial force if they were to be transferred from one unit to another. Ordinarily, there is no intention at all to transfer one member from one unit to another, but this provision has been kept in the Bill for an emergency. In case of emergency, it might be found essential for us to transfer members of the Territorial Army from one unit to another. It is impossible for the Government or for anybody to take the consent of the member concerned in an emergency. In case of an emergency, we have to transfer him from one unit to another. It is for this reason that the power has been kept by the Government. But I want to assure the House and my honourable friend, Pandit Kunzru, that in peace-time and in normal conditions, there is absolutely no intention to transfer anybody from one unit to another.

Then, Sir, objection was raised that Government has taken a long time to introduce this Bill I do not think we could help it as I pointed out in my speech in the last session. Immediately after the 15th of August, Government took up this question and at the first possible opportunity the decision of the Government was announced and I promised that the Bill would be taken up in this House as early as possible. There is no doubt that some months' delay has taken place, but as I pointed out in the last session of the House, steps have already been taken and the preliminary arrangements that were required to be taken for the formation of the Territorial Army have already been taken. A Directorate at the headquarters has been established and we have gone quite a long way to take necessary steps as far as the preliminaries of this Bill are concerned. My friend, Mr. S. K. Patil said that he does not want Government to sit on this Bill and take a few months framing the rules. May I inform the House that we have already taken this matter in hand and the rules are practically ready.

Then, Sir, a suggestion was made that the rules should be put before this House. It is very difficult to put the rules before the House and have the Bill passed during this session. The other day, while discussing the different provisions of the Bill informally with the members of the Standing Committee of this House, I gave an assurance that as far as these rules are concerned, I will consult them. And wherever it is necessary to make certain provisions or safeguards, I will be quite prepared to consult them and accommodate the members as far as possible. It is not my intention to do anything which will be detrimental, or to keep away anything from the members of this House. It is only to avoid delay that I have suggested this course.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): They must be placed on the table of the House.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Of course, when the rules are framed, they will be placed on the table of the House. I have nothing more to say except a few comments that I may have to make when the Bill is taken clause by clause.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill to provide for the constitution of a Territorial Army for India be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The Bill will be taken clause by clause.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I beg to move:

"That after part (f) of clause 2 of the Bill, the following new part be added:
(g) 'Advisory Committee' means an Advisory Committee constituted under section 5 for each unit of the Territorial Army."

Sir, I do not want to take up the time of the House by making a speech. The Honourable Minister knows what the significance of an Advisory Committee is. I have moved this amendment just to know what his reactions are to this idea. This idea of an Advisory Committee was incorporated in the previous Bill. I feel some such organisation may put some public spirit in the matter of recruitment and infuse a public spirit in the Territorial Force. It is only for that reason that an Advisory Committee was provided in the previous Bill. I want to know why he thought it fit to drop the idea now. If there are some good reasons for dropping it, I may withdraw my amendment. Otherwise, I move, Sir.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I am sorry, I cannot accept this amendment. The reason why it has been left out from the present Bill is that the whole conception of the Bill is quite different. In the old days, there was a provision for an Advisory Committee when the old Government wanted to show favours by appointing members to these Advisory Committees. That was one of the ways with which they attracted people to this Territorial Force. Our conception is quite different. We want citizens of India to voluntarily take an active part. All the same, if after a few months working we think that an Advisory Committee is necessary, I have given an assurance to the Standing Committee that we will provide for it in the rules. There is nothing to prevent us from making this provision. It is not necessary to make a statutory provision.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I beg to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: I am not placing it before the House. I take it he does not press it.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, I have got a verbal amendment. But, if the Honourable Minister is not willing to accept it, I do not propose to press it.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I am not accepting it.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Speaker: The new clause which Mr. Tyagi suggests falls through; it is supplementary to his first amendment. So, that amendment need not be called.

The question is:

"That clause 4 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 4 was added to the Bill.

Clause 5 was added to the Bill.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I beg to move:

"That after clause 5 of the Bill, the following new clause 6 be inserted and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly:

'6. Civil rights and exemptions—(1) The acceptance of a commission as an officer of the legislative Assembly, Legislative Council, Constituent Assembly, or Parliament of the Indian Union or any province or State thereof.

[Shri Mahavir Tyagi]

(2) An officer or man of the Territorial Force shall not be liable to any penalty or punishment for or on account of his absence during the time he is voting at any election of a member to serve in any Parliament or Legislature, or during the time he is going to or returning from such voting.

(3) If a Sheriff or Assessor or Juror is an officer of the Territorial Force, then during embodiment he shall be discharged from personally performing the office of Sheriff, Assessor, or Jury."

In submitting this amendment, Sir, I beg to point out that even in the British Territorial Force law, a provision of a similar nature has been made. Territorial Armies are generally meant to infuse a spirit of self-sacrifice in the people for a cause which they hold dear. Here in India, we are debarred according to the provisions here, from accepting any office or holding membership of any Legislature of the country. I submit that if this amendment of mine is accepted, by the Honourable the Defence Minister, he will have a chance of infusing into his Territorial Force persons who can raise the morale of the forces. I hear objections are raised that the Government of India Act prohibits this. I think there also a provision is made that if the Constituent Assembly so desires they can remove this disqualification. Section 26 of the Government of India Act 1935 reads as follows:

"(1) A person shall be disqualified for being chosen as, and for being, a member of either Chamber—

(a) if he holds any office of profit under the Crown in India, other than an office declared by act of the Constituent Assembly not to disqualify its holder."

Sir, "Constituent Assembly" is the word which has been introduced here by Section 8 of the Indian Independence Act of 1947. The Constituent Assembly is authorised to remove this disqualification. It is not necessary that they should do this by means of a separate Act. They can even make a provision in this Act. If they provided that this restriction will not apply to members of the Assembly, this will do. I submit, Sir, there is no constitutional difficulty in the Honourable Minister's accepting this.

Mr. Speaker: I think the honourable member need not argue that point. I find that this provision which relates to the disqualification under the Government of India Act by reason of a person holding an office of profit has been deleted in the present Government of India Act as adapted by the India (Provisional Constitution) Order 1947. I do not think that difficulty arises.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: If that difficulty does not arise then, I submit that my suggestion may be taken notice of by the Honourable Minister for Defence and if he feels that members of the Constituent Assembly can add some glamour to his Force, and can also bring dignity which is sought for everywhere,—I submit that this would be an asset,—he may please remove the disqualification.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: May I know, Sir, whether you have given your ruling on this matter?

Mr. Speaker: I was considering the point from another point of view, not from the point of view which the honourable member had just argued. I was just wanting to know as to whether there are any provisions in the Army Act, which, when they become applicable, prohibit an officer of the Army from being a member of the Assembly.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Sir, I wanted to raise this point of order. Even the present Act—I am glad my honourable friend mentioned it—disqualifies a member from holding any office so long as that Act exists; and in the last war...

Mr. Speaker: Will the honourable member point out to me the particular section?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Section 26 of the Government of India Act as amended by section 8 of the Indian Independence Act, 1947.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, I told the honourable member that sections 24 to 27 are omitted in the Adaptation made subsequently. So the section which he reads now is not part of the Government of India Act.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: According to what you say there is no hitch.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore I said that it appears to me that there is no hitch. I have, in my hands, a copy of the Government of India Act as adapted by the India (Provisional Constitution) Order, 1947.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): That is correct but no paid official of Government can be a member. When a member becomes a paid official of Government his membership is automatically vacated. Whether any person serving in the territorial army and receiving any kind of remuneration will be treated as a paid official is a matter which will require consideration.

Mr. Speaker: Let me proceed clearly. When I saw this amendment, I myself, had a doubt as to whether this should be taken up or not. That is why I looked into the Government of India Act and as I did not find the provision here, I inquired as to what these provisions 24 to 27 were about; and one was section 26 which related to the disqualification of members. That section having been deleted there is no such disqualification now so far as the Government of India Act is concerned. That is what I told the honourable member. Now, of course, there is that other point raised by Mr. Santhanam. I am not quite clear yet, unless I am shown some provision of the law. I quite agree with the propriety of what he is saying that no person who is holding an office of profit in the Government should be a member of the Assembly. But I wanted to be satisfied as to whether there is any statutory bar now, in view particularly of the deletion of this provision from the Government of India Act and retention of this disqualification so far as the Provincial Governments are concerned, as will be found from section 69 of the Act. If there is any doubt about it I may be shown the specific provision.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): In the Assembly electoral rules there is a provision that any person who holds an office of profit cannot become a member of this House.

Mr. Speaker: That will mean that he will be disqualified from standing as a candidate, and those rules were also made before these sections were deleted. We shall have to see what the effect of the deletion is. Therefore I said that I was looking at it from a different standpoint, namely, whether there is any provision in the Army Act which provides any such bar as that. Very probably there is no such section there.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I do not think there is any such provision in the Army Act, though it is difficult for me to say off-hand. But all I can say is that the officers of the territorial army will be paid although the amount will be nominal. And if the section still holds good they will come under the definition of the section. But, as you have pointed out, I think this amendment is not necessary as this provision has been deleted.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, in the circumstances I will not press the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: So I will not put it to the House. Anyway, assuming that the view which we hold today is an erroneous one, it is always possible to come to this House for subsequent legislation so as to enable them to hold office if they are members of this Assembly.

یہذا تھاکر داس بھارگو : جناب سپیکر صاحب! میں جناب کی اجازت سے ملندرجہ ذیل amendment move کرتا ہوں -

"That in clause 6 of the Bill, for the words 'domiciled in India' the words 'who is a citizen of India' be substituted."

اس کے بارے میں میں صرف اتنا عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ جہاں تک domicile کا سوال ہے کوئی بھی آدمی Territorial army کا ممبر بن سکتا ہے - کیونکہ قانون میں اسکی کوئی definition درج نہیں ہے - یہ domicile کا لفظ جو ہے وہ با معنی بھی ہے اور دو معنی بھی ہے - اسکی جو کچھ بھی definition ہم کو ملتی ہے وہ صرف اذین شکسیشن ایکٹ (Indian Succession Act) کے دفعہ 11 میں ملتی ہے اور وہ اس طرح پر ہے -

"11. Any person may acquire a domicile in British India by making and depositing in some office in British India appointed in this behalf by the (Provincial Government) a declaration in writing under his hand of his desire to acquire such domicile; provided that he has been resident in British India for one year immediately preceding the time of his making such declaration."

اسکی مراد یہ ہے کہ اگر کوئی شخص جسکی وطنیت انگلینڈ جرمنی یا ریشیا ہو اگر وہ ہندوستان میں ایک سال سے رہتا ہو - تو وہ اگر ایک declaration جاری کرے کہ میں domicile حاصل کرنا چاہتا ہوں تو Succession Act کے اس دفعہ کے تحت وہ domicile حاصل کرے گا - اور یہ حاصل کر کے وہ Territorial Army میں داخل ہو سکتا ہے - اسلئے میں یہ عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ اگر اس کی بجائے Citizen of India رکھا جائے تو اسکا مطلب بلا شک یہ ہوگا کہ کوئی دوسرا شخص Territorial Army میں داخل نہیں ہو سکیگا - اگر لفظ domicile رکھے تو ہر ایک غیر آدمی اس Territorial Army میں داخل ہو سکتا ہے - میرے خیال میں ایسا ہونا بہت بڑی غلطی ہوگی - اور اگر کوئی غیر شخص اس میں داخل ہو جائے تو اس کا نام Territorial Army رکھنا بھی تھپک نہیں ہے - آپ کو معلوم ہے کہ یہاں پر بہت سارے آدمی پاکستان سے ہندوستان میں آگئے ہیں - کچھ تو ان میں سے گورنمنٹ کی مرضی کے خلاف آئے ہیں اور کچھ گورنمنٹ کی مرضی سے آئے ہیں - اگر ان میں سے کوئی domicile حاصل کرے تو اسکا اس Territorial Army میں داخل ہونے کا اتنا ہی حق ہوگا جتنا کہ دوسرے کا ہے اور جب تک موجودہ الفاظ دفعہ میں ہیں اسکی بھرتی کوئی بھی طاقت نہیں روک سکتی ہے -

در اصل domiciled کی مراد یہ ہے کہ وہ شخص Indian Citizen ہو - شاید یہ کہا جائے کہ Indian Citizen کی تعریف Constitution بلے تک نہیں بن سکتی - لیکن یہ درست نہیں ہے - کوئی باہر کا آدمی جب تک ہندوستان میں بذریعہ Naturalization Act ہندوستان کا National نہ بلے وہ ہندوستان کا Citizen نہیں ہے - اور آپ جانتے ہیں کہ Naturalization Act ہندوستان میں موجود ہے -

(English translation of the above speech)

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Mr. Speaker, Sir, with your permission I beg to move the following amendment:

"That in clause 6 of the Bill, for the words 'domiciled in India', the words 'who is a citizen of India' be substituted."

I would like to say this much only, that so far as the question of "domicile" is concerned, any body can get himself enrolled in the Territorial Army, as there is no definition of the word in any legal enactment. This word "domicile" has many meanings as well as double meaning. Whatever definition is available, we find in Section 11 of the Indian Succession Act, and that runs as follows:

"11. Any person may acquire a domicile in British India by making and depositing in some office in British India appointed in this behalf by the Provincial Government, a declaration in writing under his hand of his desire to acquire such domicile; provided that he has been resident in British India for one year immediately preceding the time of his making such declaration."

This means that if any person who is domiciled in England, Germany or Russia and has been residing in India for the last one year will be able to acquire a domicile by making a declaration of his desire to acquire such domicile under the above Section of the Indian Succession Act, and after acquiring this he can join the Territorial Army. Therefore, I submit that if the words "citizen of India" are substituted for "domiciled in India", this would undoubtedly preclude any alien person from being enrolled in the Territorial Army. If the word "domiciled" is allowed to stand then every foreigner can enrol himself in this Territorial Army. In my opinion, it would be a great mistake to let such a thing happen. And if any foreigner is enabled to get himself enrolled in this Territorial Army, then it would not be improper to call the army a Territorial Army. You are aware that many persons have come over here from Pakistan. Some of them have come against the wishes of the Government and some with their consent. And if any of these persons acquires a domicile then he will have as much right to join this Territorial Army as any other person. So long as these words exist in this Clause, no power can stop their recruitment.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

In fact "domiciled" implies that the person must be an Indian citizen. It may be argued that the words "Indian citizen" cannot be defined till the constitution is adopted. But this is not correct. No alien can be a citizen of India until he becomes a national of India by naturalization, and you know that the Naturalization Act is applicable to India. A person becomes the National of a country after naturalization, and so long as he is not naturalized, it would be wrong to call him "domiciled". How can a person acquire domicile when he has neither been naturalized nor declared a National? In fact the word "domicile" means that if a person migrates from one country to another with a desire to reside there, then after having resided there for sometime, he acquires a domicile of the latter country. But at present we have not got any such definition of the word "domicile" which may be clear. Every person can acquire domicile by virtue of the definition existing in Section 11 of the Indian Succession Act, but he cannot become an Indian citizen. Therefore, I will submit that in Clause 6 of this Bill, for the words "domiciled in India" the words "who is a citizen of India" be substituted.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 6 of the Bill, for the words 'domiciled in India', the words 'who is a citizen of India' be substituted."

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I find a little difficulty in accepting the amendment of my honourable friend. As he has himself pointed out the definition of "citizen of India" has not yet been made. The provisions that can be made against the enrolment of some of the people from outside in the Territorial Army rests with us. We can without including the words "citizen of India" in this Bill at present, on account of the difficulties I have pointed out, keep out any one from the Indian Territorial Army. There is no difficulty. I hope that in the next few months we will adopt our constitution and after that whatever is the definition of "citizen of India" that can be included in this Bill. In the meantime I can assure the honourable member that the fears that he entertains can be guarded against.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Such a rule will be inconsistent with the words and will not be in consonance with section 6.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Not the rule, but the actual recruitment.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: In view of the assurance given by the Honourable the Defence Minister I am withdrawing my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The real difficulty is that the word "citizen" is not defined and "domicile" means something much more than mere residence. Anyway, he is withdrawing his amendment.

Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw?

The Amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 6 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 6 was added to the Bill.

بلڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو: جناب والا! اس دفعہ کے بارے میں میں صرف یہ عرض کروں گا کہ اس دفعہ نمبر ۷ کی رو سے ہر ایک آدمی پر یہ لازمی کر دیا گیا ہے کہ اس کو ملٹری سروس کے لئے ہندوستان سے باہر بھیجا جاسکتا ہے۔ میں اس کے خلاف

نہیں ہوں لیکن میں یہ عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ of Objects and Reasons Statement سے یہ معلوم ہوتا ہے کہ یہ Territorial Force چار اغراض کے لئے بنایا گیا ہے اور ان میں سے ایک غرض یہ ہے کہ اس Force کو ہندوستان کے Internal کے لئے رکھا جائے۔ اور یہ اس بل کے نام سے بھی صاف ظاہر ہوتا ہے۔

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shri K. Santhanam (one of the Panel of Chairmen).]

نہایت ہی Exceptional موقعے ایسے آئیں گے جب کہ کسی کو ملٹری سروس کے لئے ہندوستان سے باہر بھیجا جائیگا۔ کیونکہ اس فوج کی نوعیت Regular Force سے بالکل مختلف ہوگی۔ اس فوج اور Regular Forces کے کام اور نوعیت اور Nature میں بہت فرق ہے۔ اس لئے اس فوج کے بارے میں یہ امید رکھنی کہ اسکو باہر بھیجا جائے تھیک نہیں ہوگا۔ کوئی بھی آدمی اپنی مرضی سے اپنے ملک سے باہر نہیں جانا چاہتا ہے۔ تو یہ امید رکھنا کہ یہ اپنی مرضی سے باہر جائیں یہ درست نہیں ہوگا۔ خصوصاً جبکہ اس کام کے لئے آپ کے پاس Regular Forces موجود ہیں۔ اس لئے اس بارے میں میں گورنمنٹ سے یہ گزارش کروں گا کہ وہ یہ جو حکم باہر کی سروس کے لئے دے اس کے متعلق وہ ایک جنرل حکم جاری نہ کرے بلکہ جب ضرورت ہو تو اس وقت ایک خاص حکم اس بارے میں جاری کرے۔ ایسا بھی ہو سکتا ہے کہ اس Force Territorial کی ہندوستان کے اپنے بچاؤ کے لئے ضرورت ہو چہاں کہ اس کا اصل ملشا ہے تو اس صورت میں اسکو باہر بھیجا درست نہیں ہے۔ میں یہ بھی عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ میں اس Territorial Force کے باہر بھیجنے کا اصولاً خلاف نہیں ہوں لیکن جب بھی اس Force کو باہر بھیجا جائے تو اس بات کا خیال رہا جائے کہ وہ کسی خاص ضرورت کے وقت بھیجے جائیں۔ اس Territorial کے افراد ایسے ہونگے جو obligatory social service کو پورا کرنے کے لئے اس میں شامل ہونگے وہ Regular Army کے تلخواہ اور اسکے لوازمات کے لئے شامل نہیں ہونگے اسلئے ایسے اشخاص کا اول فرض اپنے ملک کے بچاؤ کے لئے ہے گو ذمہ داری بشرط ضرورت باہر جانیکی بھی ہے۔

Mr. Chairman: The deletion of these words may mean that each individual man and officer will have to be given a special order.

بلڈت تھاکر داس بھرو: جو کچھ ارشاد جناب والا نے فرمایا ہے میں اس کی نہایت ادب سے قدر کرتا ہوں اور جناب کا نہایت ہی مشکور ہوں کہ جناب نے اس امر کی طرف میری توجہ دلائی ہے۔

اگر اس قسم کا جنرل آرڈر نہ ہو اور ایک سپیشل آرڈر ہو۔ تو وہ ہر ایک آدمی پر ایسے ہی لاگو ہوگا۔ جیسے کہ ایک یونٹ پر ہوگا۔ ہر ایک آدمی کے لئے الگ الگ آرڈر کرنے کی ضرورت نہیں ہے۔ اگر کوئی ایسی ضرورت پیش آتی بھی ہو تو

[پنڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو]

ایک یونٹ کے لئے آرڈر کر دیا جائے۔ تو اس میں کوئی اعتراض نہیں ہوگا۔ میرے فرض کرنے کا مطالبہ یہ ہے اور میں یہ چاہتا ہوں کہ ایسا کرنے میں جو ایجنٹن ادا جائے اس سے ملک کے legislature کی بھی concurrence وارو سنٹرل گورنمنٹ کی بھی concurrence ہو۔ ایسے موقعہ پر جو سپاہی Force Territoria کے باہر جاویں وہ گورنمنٹ کے خاص حکم سے اور لیجسلیچر کی مشاء دعا و برکات کے ساتھ باہر جاویں اور یہ محسوس کریں کہ ان کے دیہی کے منتخب شدہ نمائندے بھی گورنمنٹ کے باہر بھیجنے کے فعل کی تصدیق کرتے ہیں اب یہ کہا جایگا کہ لیجسلیچر کی اجازت حاصل کرنیکا Emergency کے وقت موقع نہیں ہوتا تو اس کے لئے میں یہ عرض کرونگا کہ اس Territorial Force کے لئے ایسا موقع بہت دیر کے بعد آئیگا جب کہ اس کو باہر بھیجنا لازمی ہو جائیگا۔ اسلئے اس صورت میں جب بھی ان کو باہر بھیجنے کی ضرورت پڑے تو ہاؤس کی اجازت لی جا سکتی ہے۔ لیکن اگر کسی وقت ایسی ضرورت پڑے اور یہ ہاؤس نہ بیٹھا ہو تو اس صورت کے لئے اس میں ایسی ترمیم کی جائے جس سے کہ سنٹرل گورنمنٹ کو ایسا کرنے کا اختیار ہو۔ کہ وہ ہاؤس کی اجازت کے بغیر خاص صورتوں میں آدمیوں کو باہر بھیج سکے۔ اور بعد ازاں لیجسلیچر کی اجازت حاصل کر سکے۔

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, in regard to Clause 7 I would like to say this much only that it enjoins that every person shall be liable to perform military service beyond the limits of India. I am not against it. But it would be observed from the Statement of Objects and Reasons that this Territorial Force has been raised to serve a fourfold purpose and one of this is that this Force will be maintained for the internal defence of India; and this fact is also quite obvious from the title of this Bill. [At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shri K. Santhanam (one of the Panel of Chairmen).]

There would be few exceptional cases when a person will be sent out for military service out of India, because the constitution of this Force would be on quite a different footing from the Regular Forces. There is a tremendous difference between the duties and nature of this Force vis-a-vis the Regular Forces. Therefore it would not be in the fitness of things to expect this Force to go out of India. No body likes to go beyond the limits of his country

Shri K. Santhanam (one of the Panel of Chairmen). against his wishes and it would not be proper to expect him to do so, especially in view of the fact that you have got Regular Forces for this purpose. Therefore, I would request the Government that they should not issue any general orders for service abroad, but issue a special order in this connection as and when an emergency arises. It may be possible that this Territorial Force may be required for the defence of the country which is its real object. Then in that case, it would not be correct to send this Force abroad. I would also like to say that I do not oppose in principle the despatch of this Force abroad, but whenever this Force is sent abroad, it should be borne in mind that this course is taken only in an emergency. This Territorial Army will consist of those persons who will get enrolled for the purpose of fulfilling the obligations of social service. They will not join this for the sake of the pay and other amenities which are provided for the Regular Army. Therefore, the primary duty of such persons is to defend their country, although they shall be liable to perform service abroad in the event of an emergency.

Mr. Chairman: The deletion of these words may mean that each individual man and officer will have to be given a special order.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, with all due respect, I bow to what you have said and am very much obliged to you that you have drawn my attention to this fact. If there is no such general order and there is a special order, then it will be applicable to each individual in the same way as it will apply to a unit. There is no need for the issue of a separate order for each individual. If any such contingency arises, then the orders should be issued for a unit and there will be no objection. My submission is that I would like that the action in this respect should have the concurrence both of the legislature of the country and the Central Government. The soldiers who are detailed for service abroad on such occasions will go out under special orders of the Government and with the blessings and permission of the Central Legislature. They would realize that the elected representatives of their country also support the action of the Government in sending them abroad. It may be said that there is no time to obtain permission of the Legislature in the event of an emergency. I would submit that so far as this Territorial Force is concerned, such an event will occur after a long time when it would be considered necessary to send them abroad. Therefore, whenever any such contingency arises, then the permission of this House can be obtained. But if at any time such an emergency arises and the House is not sitting, then some amendment should be incorporated in this clause which may seek to authorize the Central Government to take necessary action in such an event, so that it may be enabled to send persons out of India without the permission of the House in certain conditions, and later on take formal permission of the Legislature.

As a matter of fact, I want that the Territorial Army should consist of those persons only who enlist themselves with the spirit of discharging the social obligations and they are true patriots and have strong feelings for its defence. If this convention is established, then in the event of such an emergency when it may be found necessary to send persons abroad, their willingness would be implied in the consent of the Government which would be made clear by a Resolution of the Legislature.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: The clause says that no officer or enrolled person shall be required to perform military service beyond the limits of India except under an order. Now a territorial army is meant principally for local service, for defending our own country. But supposing while defending our country there is trouble on our borders with Pakistan. I want to know from the Honourable the Minister whether this Territorial Army will not be allowed to go into Pakistan area to defend our country. If that is so then I do not think that the object of this Bill will be achieved.

[Mr. R. K. Sidhva]

Any country beyond India is foreign territory. In this sense Pakistan is also a foreign country. That is why I want to have the position made clear. My personal views are that our relations with Pakistan and all countries in the world should remain cordial. That is also the aim of the Government of India. But when we are passing a law, perchance something may happen between India and Pakistan, in that event will our Territorial Army be permitted to go into Pakistan?

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): It can go not only to Pakistan but also to Arabia.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: In that case it is all right. But the view expressed by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava is different.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: The Territorial Army can go anywhere but it has to have special permission. That is why it is included.

With regard to the objection raised by my friend, Mr. Bhargava, the fact is that we must have the sanction of this House. When this House is in session, then of course the House has the right to discuss it. But this House may not meet for months. It is to avoid that difficulty that we have taken this power. But still it is open to the House to discuss it when it meets. So I do not think there is any real difficulty if this is allowed to stand. I think it is a perfectly simple affair. There is no desire to exclude the House from this matter.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Does the Honourable Minister mean to say that when the House is in session he will report to the House before taking action and when the House is not in session he will report the action already taken by Government?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I might make that point also clear. Sometimes it would be difficult for us to refer such matters to the House but what I say is that it is always open to the House to discuss any matter that they like. When the House is in session every member of the House is taken into confidence but the difficulty will arise when the House is not in session. When a decision of this nature is taken, when the House meets next it will be open to the House to raise the question.....

Mr. Chairman: Military matters will have to be kept secret and I do not think it is right to ask for any kind of an undertaking.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U.P.: General): Under Section 10(a) of the old Indian Territorial Force Act 1920 it is provided that: "No officer or enrolled person shall be required to perform military service beyond the limits of India save under a general or special order of the Central Government". If it could be done under the old Act, there is no reason why under the new Bill it could not be done.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 7 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 7 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in the Proviso to clause 8 of the Bill, for the word 'service', wherever it occurs, the words 'operations or special duty' be substituted."

This is an amendment of substance. It seems to me that the proviso does away with the effect of the main clause. The main clause says:

"Every person enrolled under this Act shall be entitled to receive his discharge from the Territorial Army on the expiration of the period for which he was enrolled."

That means in effect that he will be discharged as soon as his service terminates or the period for which he had agreed to serve ends. The proviso says:

"No enrolled person who is for the time being engaged in military service under the provisions of this Act, shall be entitled to receive his discharge before the termination of such service."

While the main part of the clause says that as soon as a man's period of engagement is over he will be entitled to be discharged, the proviso says that until his 'service' terminates he is not entitled to be discharged. I thought that the period of service in the proviso means military operations or special duty.....

Mr. Chairman: The expression in the first part is not 'period of service'.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The period for which he is enrolled means the period of service which has expired. There seems to be something like inconsistency. I am trying to interpret the 'period for which a man is engaged' as period for which he has agreed to serve. When the period of service ends he is entitled to be discharged. It is on account of this apparent clash between the two that I have been induced to submit this amendment. If there is any military operation, whether his period ends or not or he is on special duty, whether his period of enrolment expires or not, he cannot be entitled to be discharged. I have suggested this amendment for a discussion and for an explanation by the Honourable the Defence Minister.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: As the present section stands it is absolutely clear. A man who is enrolled for a particular period is discharged on the expiry of the period but when he is engaged in military service even if the period expires, he will be only discharged after the particular engagement is over. If the words which my honourable friend wants to substitute are accepted then it will give rise to difficulties. There may be many operations in one engagement. A person may be engaged on duty and at the same time the words 'special duty' will not cover exigencies of the situation, because there may be one special duty and the engagement may not be finished by the time the special duty is over. The words as they are, are more comprehensive and serve the purpose better and if my honourable friend's amendment is accepted it may involve us in difficulties.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I have nothing more to add to what my friend Pandit Bhargava has said. Military service is a well understood expression. There is no doubt about it. If the amendment of my honourable friend is accepted it would create more confusion and nullify the effect of this clause.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: In that case I do not press the amendment.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: I want to know from the Honourable Minister as to what will be the period of service for the Territorial Army?

Mr. Chairman: That will be provided by the rules.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Still I want to have some idea, in the interest of security of service because it will induce people to enrol themselves in larger numbers if some period is known.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: If the honourable member wants to have detailed information it is given in the existing rules. The new rules will be more or less on the same lines.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: The present Act says six years as the outer limit and it is open to the Government to enter into arrangements for any shorter period, say 3 or 4 years.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: In the first year they will be enrolled for six years.....

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: The intention is to proceed more or less on the same basis as the existing rules. If a change is necessary we can incorporate it. We have not fixed any period yet.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in the Proviso to clause 8 of the Bill, the following be added at the end :
'or within six months after the date of expiry of the period for which he had offered to be enrolled or whichever is less.'"

I submit that even in the British Territorial and Reserve Forces Act it is provided:

"Where the time at which a man of the Territorial Force would otherwise be entitled to be discharged occurs while a proclamation ordering the Army Reserve to be called out on permanent service is in force, he may be required to prolong his service for such further period, not exceeding twelve months, as the competent military authority may order."

This is meant for the Reservists. If their term of service expires while they are on military or active service they will not be discharged and they may be required to prolong their service for such further period, not exceeding 12 months, as the competent military authority may order. Now, if the war lasts for ten years? Persons who offer themselves to be enrolled in your territorial force are not going to be on front like the regular army people. If you are to rope in people for the regular army in that manner, the territorial army will never be popular. If you want it to be a real Territorial Army in the sense in which it is understood you have to keep a proviso that these people will be required to serve only for such period as they have offered themselves for voluntarily. If that period expires while they are on military service, of course all of them cannot be discharged, that would weaken the front. For that purpose you must keep a certain definite proviso, so that you can extend by the force of this law their service for a few months, say 6 or 10 months. If you pass this Bill as it is, and if a war lasts for 10 or 12 years, these persons will be stranded on the fronts for years together. That would be very bad as far as the spirit of the territorial force is concerned. It may be that this too could be formulated by the rule-making authority but if you pass this clause as it is the House is committed to it and the hands of the rule-making authority will be tied. No officer can then discharge the man.

4 P.M. Sir, this is a very important clause and I hope the Honourable the Defence Minister will give due consideration to this point.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I have got this amendment carefully examined. But my difficulty is that in case of active service it will create lot of difficulties. My mind is not quite clear on this, but all the information that I have been able to get on this particular amendment goes to show that in case of active service it will create lot of difficulties and embarrassment for us. That is why I find it difficult to accept the amendment.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Why does the difficulty not arise in the British Army where they have got this Proviso?

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: May I say something?

Mr. Chairman: I am afraid the Honourable Minister has already given his reply. I want to know whether the mover wants the amendment put.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Without this change it will become a regular army.

Mr. Chairman: That is a matter between the Minister and the honourable member. Does he want his amendment put?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: It is a very important matter. Let the amendment be put to the House.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in the Proviso to clause 8 of the Bill, the following be added at the end :
'or within six months after the date of expiry of the period for which he had offered to be enrolled or whichever is less.'"

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 8 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 8 was added to the Bill.

Clause 9 was added to the Bill.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I beg to move:

"That for clause 10 of the Bill, the following be substituted :

"10. Whoever contravenes any of the provisions of this Act or the rules made thereunder shall be punished with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees to be recovered in such manner and by such authority as may be prescribed."

اگر آپ دفعہ ۱۰ کو ملاحظہ فرمائیں تو روشن ہوگا کہ یہ ایسی باتوں سے بھرا ہوا ہے جو کسی معمولی شخص کی سمجھ میں نہیں آسکتیں۔ یہ دفعہ پرانے Territorial Force Act کی ایک دفعہ کی ہوبہو نقل ہے۔ یہ نہیں سوچا گیا کہ اُس زمانے میں اس کی ضرورت تھی۔ لیکن اب صورت تبدیل ہو گئی ہے اور اس دفعہ کی بالکل ضرورت نہیں ہے۔

اول تر میں یہ عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ اس دفعہ میں آفیسرس (Officers) کا ذکر نہیں ہے۔ اس دفعہ میں ایک enrolled person کو سزا ہو سکتی ہے۔ لیکن اگر کوئی افسر اس Act کی یا اس کے ماتحت بنے ہوئے rules کی خلاف ورزی کرکے جرم کرتا ہے تو اس افسر کی کوئی ذمہ داری نہیں ہے۔ لیکن میں جو Amendment پیش کر رہا ہوں اُس میں یہ پراویزن (provision) رکھا گیا ہے کہ enrolled person اور افسر میں کوئی تمیز نہ ہو۔ موجودہ بل کی دفعہ ۱۰ میں افسر بصورت جرم بھی باز پرس نہیں ہو سکتے۔

دوسری بات جو کہ قانوناً بالکل ناقابل برداشت ہے وہ یہ کہ اگر کوئی دفعہ (۱) ۹ (۲) کی رو سے جرم کرتا ہے تو اُس کو Army Act میں سزا دی جا سکتی ہے۔ لیکن اس میں آگے یہ رکھا گیا ہے۔

"In addition to, or in substitution for, any punishment or punishments to which he may be liable under the Indian Army Act"

"In addition" کے معنی یہ ہونے کہ ایک جرم کے لئے ایک مرتبہ

جو Army Act میں سزا ملنی چاہیئے اور دفعہ ۱۰ کی رو سے سو روپیہ جرمانہ بھی ہو سکتا ہے۔

Mr. Chairman: Is it the intention of the honourable member that when a member of the Territorial Army is in active service he should not be liable to the penalties of the Indian Army Act? That will be the net result of this amendment I want to know whether that is the intention of the honourable member.

پلڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو - میں ادب سے عرض کروں گا کہ میرا منشا یہ ہے جہاں تک دفعہ (۲) ۹ کا سوال ہے جو Army Act کے Offence ہونگے اُن کے واسطے اس دفعہ میں سزا ہو سکتی ہے Army Act کو applicable کرنے کا منشا یہ ہے کہ وہ اشخاص جو آرمی ایکٹ (Army Act) میں آتے ہیں ان کے لئے دفعہ (۲) ۹ applicable ہو گا۔ دفعہ ۱۰ کی رو سے enrolled person کو آرمی ایکٹ (Army Act) میں بھی سزا ہو سکتی ہے اور اس دفعہ میں بھی سزا ہو سکتی ہے جو کہ قانون کے منشا کے برخلاف ہے - ایک شخص کو ایک جرم کے لئے ایک ہی جگہ سزا ہو سکتی ہے۔ اور اگر Substitution ہو تو جو Army Act میں جرم ہیں وہ بہت سنگین جرم بھی ہیں جیسے mutiny وغیرہ -

Mr. Chairman: My suggestion was only whether something like "except when he is liable under section 9(2)" or something like that must be put in to make it clear.

پلڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو : جناب والا نے جو اعتراض فرمایا ہے میرا Amendment بالکل اُسی غرض کو پورا کرتا ہے - جہاں تک Army Act کے جرائم کا سوال ہے اُن کا ذکر اس میں کرنے کی ضرورت نہیں ہے - جہاں تک اس Act کا یا اس کے rules کا سوال ہے اُن کے ماتحت افسر ہو یا enrolled person اُن کو سزا دی جا سکتی ہے - اس Act کے جرم بہت سنگین نہیں ہونگے - لیکن Army Act میں mutiny بھی شامل ہے - اگر کوئی mutiny کرے اور دفعہ ۱۰ میں اُس کی سزا کا substitution کیا جائے تو اُس پر صرف ۱۰ روپیہ جرمانہ کر کے چھوڑا جا سکتا ہے - جہاں تک اس ایکٹ کے جرائم کا سوال ہے

"any enrolled person may be punished either by a criminal court or summarily or by order of the prescribed authority."

لیکن اس میں ایک proviso کر دیا گیا ہے کہ ملازم کو حق ہوگا کہ وہ authority prescribed سے summary trial کے واسطے انکار کر سکتا ہے اور کہ سزا ہوگا - تو یہ چیز ملازم کی مٹھی میں ہے کہ وہ court کے ذریعہ فیصلہ چاہتا ہے یا authority prescribed کے ذریعہ - میں عرض کروں گا کہ اس طرح کے قانون کی ضرورت نہیں ہے - Criminal court بھی summary trial کر سکتی ہے جب کہ جرم سنگین نہیں ہے - تو Criminal court ہر ایک صورت میں لازمی ہوتی ہے - میں نے جو ترمیم رکھی وہ اُن لوگوں کے واسطے ہے جو Army Act گورن سے (govern) نہیں ہوتے ہیں - اور میں سمجھتا ہوں یہ ترمیم منظور ہو جائیگی - میں عرض کروں گا کہ اگر آئریبل ممبر

صاحب پسند کریں تو اس پر غور فرمایا کہ یہ اُن کے purpose کو serve کرتی ہے یا نہیں -

(English translation of the above speech.)

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I beg to move:

"That for clause 10 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"10. Whoever contravenes any of the provisions of this Act or the rules made thereunder shall be punished with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees to be recovered in such manner and by such authority as may be prescribed."

If you read Clause 10, you will find that it contains some provisions which are beyond the comprehension of the common man. This Clause is an exact copy of a Section of the old Territorial Force Act. It was required in those days but now conditions have changed and there is no need for this Clause at all. This fact has been ignored. First of all, I would like to say that this Clause does not make any mention about officers. It provides for punishment for an enrolled person. But if any officer commits an offence in contravention of any of the provisions of this Act or the rules made thereunder, he is immune. But the amendment which I am moving has provision to the effect that there should not be any discrimination between an officer and enrolled person. According to Clause 10 of the present Bill nobody can question or bring to book an officer even though he may be found guilty. Another point the legal aspect of which is not understood is that if anybody commits an offence which falls within the purview of sub-clause 9 (1) or 9 (2), he is punishable under the Indian Army Act. It has been further laid down:

"In addition to, or in substitution for, any punishment or punishments to which he may be liable under the Indian Army Act....."

Thus the words "in addition" imply that a person can be punished twice viz., firstly under the Indian Army Act and secondly under clause (10) a fine extending to one hundred rupees may also be imposed.

Mr. Chairman: Is it the intention of the honourable member that when a member of the Territorial Army is in active service he should not be liable to the penalties of the Indian Army Act? That will be the net result of this amendment. I want to know whether that is the intention of the honourable member.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: With due respects, I would submit that my intention is that so far as Clause 9 (2) is concerned, the offences which come within the ambit of Indian Army Act can be dealt with under the provisions of this Clause. The object of making applicable the Army Act is that Clause 9 (2) will be applicable to those persons who are governed by this Act. In accordance with the provisions of Clause (10), an enrolled person can also be punished under the Army Act, as well as under the former Clause which is contrary to the intention of the law. A person can be punished for one offence only at a time. And if substitution is to be made, then most of the offences which are contained in the Army Act are very heinous offences such as mutiny etc.

Mr. Chairman: My suggestion was only whether something like "except when he is liable under section 9 (2)" or something like that must be put in to make it clear.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, my amendment exactly meets the objection raised by you inasmuch as the offences referred to in the Army Act are concerned, there is no need for incorporating these in this Clause. And so far as the provisions of this Act or any rules made thereunder are concerned, an officer or enrolled person can be punished under it. The offences under this Act will not be very serious. But the Army Act covers 'Mutiny' also. If any person takes part in a mutiny and his punishment is substituted under the provisions of Clause 10, then he can be let off after the recovery of fine amounting to Rs. 100.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

So far as the offences covered by this Act are concerned "any enrolled person may be punished either by a criminal court or summarily by order of the prescribed authority". But a proviso has been made here that an accused will have the right to object to a summary trial being held by the prescribed authority, and he can claim that he should be tried by a Criminal Court. In such a contingency, arrangement for a Court shall have to be made. Thus it would rest with the accused to decide whether he wants to be tried by a Court or the prescribed authority. I would submit that there is no need for such a law. When the offence involved is not heinous; then the Criminal Court can also hold a summary trial. Thus the necessity of a Criminal Court is quite obvious in every case. The amendment which I have moved relates to those persons only who are not governed by the Army Act and I hope this would be accepted. I would request that if the Honourable Minister approves of this, he may kindly consider whether or not it serves his purpose.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That for clause 10 of the Bill, the following be substituted:

"10. Whoever contravenes any of the provisions of this Act or the rules made thereunder shall be punished with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees to be recovered in such manner and by such authority as may be prescribed."

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: The clause is rather unhappily worded. In Section 11A of the old Act there was summary trial and punishment. Those very words have been taken and put in here. From the heading it appears that if the offence is a serious one it would be punished under clause 9 but if the offence is not so very serious it may be punished under clause 10—equivalent to Section 11A of the old Act. "In addition to" means in addition to the procedure laid down in clause 9, and not in addition to the punishment.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: In addition to the punishment.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: Reading the clause as a whole it comes to. in addition to the procedure laid down in clause 9 the second procedure may be adopted in the manner laid down in this clause.

Mr. Chairman: I think there is no difference even then because that procedure may also result in punishment. Therefore the addition to procedure is equal to an addition to the punishment.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: In criminal trial a person cannot be punished twice for one offence. It is impossible to punish a man twice. The question of punishment for a second time does not arise. What it means is that if the offence is a comparatively serious one it should be tried in accordance with clause 9 and if it is a comparatively minor one it may be tried under clause 10 and only punishment of fine may be given.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The Defence Minister might say "God save me from my friends". You are only supporting my amendment.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I rise to support the amendment. The honourable member who has just spoken has not carefully attended to the wording. Clause 10 says:

"In addition to, or in substitution for, any punishment or punishments to which he may be liable under the Indian Army Act, 1911....."

So if he is punished under clause 9, he may again be punished under clause 10, although it is right that a man should not ordinarily be punished twice for the same act, because of a section in the Criminal Procedure Code that you cannot be punished twice. But here if you specifically provide for double punishments for the same act there is no reason why he could not be punished twice. So, as the honourable member has pointed out, this clause has been unhappily phrased. One part of the unhappy phrasing is this:

".....any enrolled person may be punished either by a criminal Court or summarily by order of the prescribed authority for any offence....."

There is here no mention of any trial. It says that if an enrolled person commits any offence under this Act he can be summarily punished. A criminal Court may say: "Section 10 does not speak of any 'trial' but of summary punishment. I will therefore punish you without trial." Although the marginal note says, "Summary trial and punishment", there is no mention of the word "trial" within the section. But that is the subject matter of another amendment which I have tabled, but if Pandit Bhargava's amendment is accepted my amendment would not be required. I submit, therefore, that the amendment which is now under consideration is a simple amendment and it avoids duplication of punishment and is easier to understand. I therefore support it.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I have already explained my difficulty in accepting this amendment. As has been pointed out, there is no intention to punish him twice.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: But there is specific provision for double punishment.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The way to hell is paved with good intentions!

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: It is not mere good intentions. This is exactly a copy of the existing provisions of Section 11A of the Army Act. What this section says is: "in addition to any punishment to which he may be liable under the Indian Army Act". It is not as if he is liable to punishment twice. It is not as if you can award him imprisonment for one month and in addition impose a fine. The Court is given power in addition to the punishment to impose a fine Rs. 100 more. If the man is prescribed to undergo a summary trial in addition to the punishment liable under the Act, he is punishable but not "punished". The Court can give that punishment or a fine may be imposed. But he is not actually punished twice. I do not think there is any difference and there is no need for this amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Does the honourable member persist in his amendment?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: With your permission I beg leave to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 10 of the Bill, for the words 'may be punished', the words 'may be tried and punished' be substituted."

This is the very point which I was submitting. Under section 10 a Court will say, "You are now charged with this offence. I do not wish to try you but I want to punish you".

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member has not caught the explanation of the previous member. The word 'punishable' does not mean "tried and punished".

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: You are doing the very thing which you wanted to avoid!

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: If it is made "punishable" I have no objection but the question of "trial" is my main point.

Mr. Chairman: But you cannot make it "triable and punishable".

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: No, "tried and punished". It would be all right if we say merely "tried", because trial includes punishment in case he is found guilty. If you merely say that he may be "tried", then the punishment follows as a matter of course. So the word "punished" is not necessary and I am not particularly anxious about that word.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member has made his point clear. I would request honourable members to enable me to finish this Bill and probably take up the other Bills.

The question is:

"That in clause 10 of the Bill, for the words 'may be punished', the words 'may be tried and punished' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 10 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 10 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 11, 12 and 13 were added to the Bill.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I beg to move:

"That in part (c) of sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, after the word 'prescribe', the words 'the period and the course of' be inserted."

Sir, there is not much to be said on this, it is a very simple amendment. This clause authorises the Government to prescribe the rules. Some items are given with regard to which particular attention is invited of the Government to frame rules for these items. The addition of these words does not at all change the body of the Bill.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member observed the words in sub-clause (a) also. It says:

"(a) prescribe the manner in which, the period for which and the conditions subject to which any person may be enrolled under this Act;"

If his amendment is something different he may move it.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: That is all right. Sub-clause (a) gives the period for which they are enrolled. But sub-clause (c) relates to the period and course of military training. My submission is that instead of prescribing only "military training", they may as well prescribe the period for which every year a man will be called for training, and also prescribe the course of training. They have only said:

"(c) prescribe preliminary and periodical military training, compulsory and voluntary, for any enrolled person and provide for the embodiment of any unit for that purpose;"

That is all right, but I wanted to add that after the word "prescribed" they might add the "prescribed period and course" of training. You have to prescribe the course for a man who enrolls; he must know the course and the period for which he is under training.

Mr. Chairman: What does the Honourable Minister say?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: As has been pointed out this is already covered.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I want to know on a point of information whether "periodical" does not include the word "period". It is the adjective of the word "period". Training means, there is a course of training and periodical training means or implies a "period". So there is both the time factor and the syllabus. I do not know what else is wanted. The amendment seems to be unnecessary.

Mr. Chairman: Does the honourable member want to proceed with his amendment?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: No, Sir.

Mr. Chairman: So the honourable member does not insist. Yes, Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad may move his amendments.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in part (e) of sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, for the words 'by whom', the words 'by which' be substituted."

The text says: "prescribe the authority by whom the conditions" etc. Speaking of any "authority" we do not say "whom". If we speak of a "Court", we say "which".

Mr. Chairman: The authorities are not generally neutral gender. I think "by whom" is all right.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: If it is "Court", we say "which". If it is "Judge", we may say "whom." On this analogy, it should be "by which".

Mr. Chairman: Does the Honourable Minister accept?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I have no objection.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in part (e) of sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, for the words 'by whom', the words 'by which' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in part (f) of sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, for the words 'by whom' the words 'by which' be substituted."

This is the same as the previous one. I hope it will be accepted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in part (f) of sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, for the words 'by whom' the words 'by which' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I have also an amendment, No. 37. I do not want to move the whole of it, but only (h). I move:

"That after part (g) of sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, the following new part (h) be inserted and the existing part (h) be relettered accordingly:

"(h) prescribe the manner and rate of the payment of separation and other allowances to the families of men of the Territorial Force when embodied or called out on actual military service;"

Sir, I have borrowed this clause from the Territorial Force Act of the British Parliament. They were also equally wise there. They have also raised a Territorial Force. They have also had a sense of patriotism. Their people also volunteered themselves. They felt the need for having such a thing. If you go on basing your hopes on the air, it is a different thing. Otherwise, you should have some such thing to ensure their security to the people who come forward to enrol in your Army. If not, you will not have the Army. Do not be guided by the spirit of gentlemen members here. They merely offer best wishes, but the people who will enrol will look into the provisions, clauses and sections of this Bill. I submit this is a useful clause. It would give security to those persons who leave their families and enrol. Suppose a man alone is the earning member of the family. He should at least get some separation allowance or something like that to be sent to his people when he is fighting in your Army. Even in jail when these gentlemen on this side and the other were arrested, their families were given some sumptuary allowance or something of the kind. Therefore, I suggest this may be considered.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That after part (g) of sub-clause (2) of clause 14 of the Bill, the following new part (h) be inserted and the existing part (h) be relettered accordingly:

"(h) prescribe the manner and rate of the payment of separation and other allowances to the families of men of the Territorial Force when embodied or called out on actual military service;"

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I find it difficult to accept the honourable member's amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Shall I put the amendment?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: If he does not accept, I am helpless.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: But I would like to know why the Honourable Minister is not able to accept (h). Something must be given to them. What is the objection to have rules prescribing this?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: That is what I was going to say. It can be dealt with under the rules.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Then, he is accepting it, Sir.

Mr. Chairman: Does the Honourable Minister accept the amendment?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: No, Sir. I am not accepting.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable member leave of the house to withdraw?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 14, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 14, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 15 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 1 of the Bill, for the words 'wherever they may be,' the words 'wherever for the time being they may be stationed or operating' be substituted."

The expression in the text seems to be a little incomplete. By adding the words "for the time being" and "stationed or operating" I would like to make it complete.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I do not accept.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I do not press.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 1 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I shall move amendments Nos. 3 and 4 together. I move:

(i) "That in the Long Title of the Bill, the words 'for India' be omitted."

(ii) "That in the Preamble to the Bill, the words 'for India' be omitted."

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I have no objection to that.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

(i) "That in the Long Title of the Bill, the words 'for India' be omitted."

(ii) "That in the Preamble to the Bill, the words 'for India' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Long Title and the Preamble, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The Long Title and the Preamble, as amended, were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Mr. Chairman, the very fact that this Bill has taken a very short time in passing so many clauses of such a Bill of an important nature goes to prove that the House is almost in agreement with the principle of this Bill and they welcome such a measure at this stage. Now that the Bill has been passed into law, I am quite sanguine that our nationals will pour in large numbers to enrol themselves into this Territorial Army. I have no doubt about them, because the morale and the spirit of our countrymen is very high to defend their country. It has been suggested, Sir, that the number of this Army should have been larger than 1,30,000. As the Honourable Minister has stated there is no prevention for expansion later on. At the same time, I do feel that we do not want number, we want "quality" and I, therefore expect from the Defence Ministry that when the applications are received, they will thoroughly scrutinize them, before accepting them. My reasons are that we have all sorts of people in this country who in their outward look would identify themselves as patriots, but they may be doubtful. We have internal trouble and we do not want, therefore, to lay great stress on the number. I am, therefore, Sir, emphasising this point to the Ministry that they should be very careful in scrutinizing each and every application. There will be no dearth of men to enrol in this Army. I will give you an example, Sir, as to how the morale and spirit of our Army is very high. Only last April, some of us—Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, Mr. Kamath and some of our Assembly friends went to a Hospital in Delhi, where the Kashmir wounded people, nearly 1,500, were lying as in-door patients. Some had their legs amputated; some had their arms broken; some had their eyes extracted. With all that, Sir.....

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: May I, Sir, point out to the honourable member not to give these details on the floor of the House?

Mr. Chairman: May I also appeal to honourable members that they would be doing a service if they enable me to get through the other Bill also?

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: What I was saying, Sir, is this. While we were going through the hospital, talking with the patients there, we saw their spirit was high. They themselves volunteered and said: "After we are released from this hospital, we shall go back to the Front in Kashmir to fight". They on the contrary complained that the Government would not allow them to rush into the territory of Pakistan. They said: "If they allowed us, we would smash the raiders within a very short period". Sir, it was a high compliment to the Army that have been enrolled even today. Notwithstanding the serious difficulties under which they have been fighting, they are even ready again to go to the Front for the defence of our country. I only wanted, therefore, to prove that as far as our Army's morale and spirit is concerned, there is no question. The only question is that of discipline and I only like to see that discipline is maintained. I have no doubt of any lack of discipline, but I have heard from some high-ranking Army officers that there is some lack of discipline and I hope that in the new Territorial Army to be formed discipline will be strictly maintained and it will not be argued that we are under democratic rule and therefore there should be lesser efficiency in military matters. No army can run efficiently without discipline. I attach great importance to that and I am quite sanguine that the new Territorial Army will be full of discipline.

As far as the rules are concerned, we have passed them. It was said that the rules should be brought before this House. I yield to none in my desire always to see that as far as possible all the measures and all the provisions of bills should be brought before this House. But in this particular Bill, I do not see what objection there could be for the provision of some of the rules. In regard to clause 14 (2) (a), I expected the Honourable Minister should have brought it before the House and I made a mention of the period for which any person may be enrolled under this Act, but when I put a question, it seems he himself is not quite clear in his mind and therefore he has left it. Sub-clauses (b), (c) and (d) relate to periodical military training and certainly rules will be required for the purpose of training. Then sub-clauses (d), (f) and (g) also relate to the kind of punishment and the certificates to be given. Therefore, Sir, I have carefully seen that even the clauses that are mentioned for the working of the rules are absolutely harmless and therefore, I do not think that any encroachment has been made upon the rights of this House by asking us to give absolute power to Government to frame the rules. I do not share the views expressed by some of my honourable friends who hold that the Government is ours and therefore we may also entrust them with the work of preparing the rules themselves. I do feel, Sir, that there is nothing wrong in making provisions in clause 16 such as we have passed just now.

I heartily congratulate the Honourable Minister and I welcome this measure. I am quite sanguine that in view of what the Honourable Minister has stated that the rules are complete, that within a month or two this Territorial Army of 1,30,000 will be formed and all the patriots of this country will join it.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I wish to take this opportunity to bring it on record that when the Honourable Minister for Defence came into the House and asked for our help, we gave him the fullest support. Although many of our friends advice he did not accept, we are now sending him rich with all the powers that he wanted from this House. We the peoples' representatives have given him all power and we all wish him good luck and success. The Honourable Minister has not accommodated any one of us except of course my honourable friend on this side, for a word or two, but then we do not mind his stiffness; he is the Minister of the Army; My honourable friend is accustomed to be stiff and hard, we do not mind. In spite of our purse being very stiff, we have given him the power to enrol lakhs of people into this Territorial Army and spend. The boys are there and whatever powers the Honourable Minister wanted are there. We are prepared to give further powers, but one thing is very important and that is he and his Government should guard us and see that not even an inch of our territory goes out of our hands. He will have to face us again if there is the slightest loss of territory, whether it is in Hyderabad or Kashmir or in the sea or in the mountain. In short he is responsible and he is the custodian of the boundaries of Hindusthan. We wish him good luck.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted

INDIAN NAVY (DISCIPLINE) AMENDMENT BILL

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: (Minister for Defence): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to amend the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

Sir, this is a non-controversial measure. The necessity for this amendment has arisen on account of the fact that British Officers having higher ranks have already left and the rules require that only an officer of a certain rank can preside at the court-martial trial. Indian officers who have at present been promoted to higher ranks do not yet have these ranks. In order to enable the Indian officers to preside at court-martial trials, this amendment is necessary. I hope the House will accept the Bill.

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to amend the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

Shri C. M. Poonacha (Coorg: General): On a point of information, Sir, in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, it is said that we have got only two Captains in the R.I.N. I would like to know whether it is a fact that we have at present only two captains in the R.I.N.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I have already stated that the number of captains in the R.I.N. is very small. In fact, we have only two officers in captains rank in the Executive branch and, they are acting. That is why necessity has arisen for this amending Bill.

Shri C. M. Poonacha: Sir, in the Statement of Objects and Reasons it is said that we have only two captains in the R.I.N. I would like to know how many captains we have in the R.I.N. at the moment.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: It is stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. That is true.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill to amend the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Shri C. M. Poonacha: Mr. Chairman, Sir, this is no doubt a simple measure; but at the same time, I fail to understand the implications of the Bill. The Bill suggests that because of the paucity of officers of the rank of captain in the R.I.N., the Minister is constrained to bring in a measure which enables officers holding lower ranks to preside over courts-martial. I understand that captains of a particular branch only are now authorised to sit as President of the court-martial, and captains of other branches are not allowed. Whereas in the Army as well as in the Air Force, the officers who are entitled to take seat as President of a court-martial have no bar whatsoever, whether they belong to any particular branch, or not. In the R.I.N. only officers of the Executive Branch are entitled and officers of other branches are not entitled to sit as President of the court-martial. If this is a fact, Sir, I am afraid we are excluding a good number of competent officers, whom we have at the moment, from taking part in the proceedings of court-martial, and also taking their seat as President in the court-martial. To illustrate further, I would like to put it to the House that in the R.I.N. in the Supplies Branch, you have more qualified officers. For recruitment to the Supplies Branch, a graduate's qualification is insisted upon, whereas for the Executive Branch, no such qualification is insisted. Therefore, judging the position as it is, you have more qualified officers in the Supplies Branch than in any other Branch. You debar them from taking their seat as Presidents, of a court-martial and come before this House to bring in a measure seeking to lower down the qualification of the officers that are going to take their seat as President of a court-martial. This will certainly bring down the standard of the proceedings of the court-martial.

[Shri C. M. Poonacha]

Therefore, I would humbly suggest to the Honourable Minister of Defence to consider this matter very carefully. I am for the present prepared to support this Bill; but I would do so only as a temporary measure. At the same time, I would request him to examine this position more carefully and utilise all such officers, who are qualified, in the R.I.N. to take their due share in these courts-martial.

For example, there will be offences relating to accounts, supply, and all such manner of things. Officers of the Executive Branch may not be quite competent to deal with cases relating to accounts and other things. While you have officers who are competent to take their seat relating to offences of this nature are concerned, you want to exclude them and without any justification restrict them to the Executive Branch, and plead before this House that there is a paucity of officers. Assuming this Bill is passed, you have for the moment only about six or seven Commanders and that will not improve matters very much. If you remove the bar that is being placed, you would be having more officers and this Bill would not have been called for at all. I would, therefore, suggest to the Minister to examine this position and see that the officers who are now readily available in the other branches are also enabled to take their seats as Presidents and members of the court-martial. Then the need for more competent officers for the court-martial would to a great extent be mitigated.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, when I read this Bill, I was sorry that our Navy should have only two men who are fit to.....

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member will please confine himself to clause 2 of the Bill. This is not a general discussion.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I was saying, Sir, that I was sorry to see that there are only two officers in the Navy who are fit to try these cases. I was referring to the great lee way that we have to make up. The present suggestion that men less qualified should be enabled to try offences is not fair. I think that as a matter of justice we should not reduce our standards, and it is really a sorry state of affairs that we have not taken care to see that in our navy we have more men who are capable of doing this work. Our navy should be properly expanded and we should see that we have enough officers of the required cadre to sit on courts-martial and punish offenders.

Mr. Chairman: I am afraid these are general remarks which have no particular application with reference to clause 2.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I have nothing to add to what I have already stated. I think the honourable members have misunderstood the position. As I stated in my original remarks, this Bill is meant to enable Indian officers to be Chairman of Courts-Martial. That is, as I said, due to the nationalisation scheme. I may point out further that during the last war also this need was felt because a lot of officers were absent and only officers of the lower ranks were available. That is why there was need to amend the Bill temporarily during the war period. Now that the British officers are gone and we have no officers of the status that has been laid down in the Act, it is considered that officers of the lower rank should be enabled to be Chairman of Courts-Martial. That is the only amendment which is sought to be made in the Bill. It has nothing to do with promotions or with the reasons as to why there are only two Captains in the Navy, etc. The amendment is only intended to enable Indian officers holding the rank of acting Captains to sit as Presidents of Courts-Martial.

Shri C. M. Poonacha: Sir, may I have some information? My point was that there was a sort of bar placed on officers of senior rank of the other branches. The R.I.N. consists of the executive branch, the supply branch, the engineering branch and the medical branch. I should like to know if there is any bar on officers of some branches of the R.I.N.? Otherwise I have no quarrel. If the Honourable Minister can give the assurance that all Captains of the R.I.N. will be entitled to take their seat in these Courts-Martial I have no quarrel.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I am not aware of any bar.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS BILL

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister Without Portfolio): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to provide, in pursuance of an agreement with Pakistan for the exchange of prisoners, for the transfer of certain prisoners from India to Pakistan and the reception in India of certain prisoners from Pakistan, be taken into consideration."

I think it is unnecessary for me to go into detail over the history of these negotiations for the exchange of prisoners between the two dominions. In answer to a number of questions on the floor of this House I have given that history more than once. First of all an agreement was entered into for the exchange of prisoners between East and West Punjab alone. We asked for the extension of this arrangement to the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan and Sind, while Pakistan wanted this arrangement to be extended to the East Punjab States and the States of Alwar and Bharatpur as well as the Delhi Province. With regard to East and West Punjab the arrangement that was entered into was delayed being given effect to because Pakistan was insistent that we should extend the scope of the scheme to the East Punjab States and the two other States as well. That meant a certain amount of delay. We were considering it but we thought at the same time that, if possible, the arrangement in East and West Punjab should be given effect to as the first instalment of this arrangement while we considered the proposals for extension of the arrangement to other areas. After a good deal of correspondence and negotiation between the two Governments the East-West Punjab arrangement was started being given effect to, and a certain number of prisoners from each province were sent over to the other side. Suddenly Pakistan suspended this arrangement because they said that they wanted an arrangement as regards Delhi to be concluded. Meanwhile we had agreed to the extension of the scheme to the East Punjab States and to Alwar and Bharatpur. With regard to Delhi there was a particular case which excited a good deal of public attention and comment and that was sub-judice; and until that case was disposed of we thought it would not be right for us to enter into any final arrangement as regards Delhi. We wanted certain conditions to be satisfied before we could agree to the transfer of Delhi prisoners. Those conditions Pakistan was unwilling to agree to. Pakistan was insistent that as far as possible the arrangement that was in force as between East and West Punjab should be applied to the Delhi province as well. This case got subsequently disposed of and the negotiations were resumed, and as a result of the negotiations which were carried on in the last month or six weeks we have come to a final agreement under which all Muslim prisoners from the areas in India to which the scheme applies will be sent over to Pakistan and all Hindu and Sikh prisoners from West Pakistan will be transferred over to India. That arrangement has been finally concluded and steps are in train for making a list of the prisoners on either side, getting them checked up and then moving these prisoners to a point on the border where the Pakistan prisoners will also be brought, and the whole exchange will be effected practically in one transaction and practically at one place. That is the agreement. But perhaps honourable members would like to have some particulars of this arrangement.

The area that is to be covered includes in Pakistan the provinces of West Punjab, the North-West Frontier Province, Sind and Baluchistan and the States which have acceded to Pakistan into the Western Pakistan area. In India the area will cover the provinces of East Punjab and Delhi, the Phulkian States, the Patiala Union, Himachal Pradesh and the Matsya Union. In East and West Punjab all prisoners who are willing to go will be transferred. In the States all Muslim prisoners whose families have migrated to Pakistan and who are willing to go to Pakistan will be transferred. Pakistan is to take similar action in regard to Hindu and Sikh prisoners. All Muslim prisoners from Delhi whose families have migrated to Pakistan and who are willing to go there will be transferred. From Sind all Hindu and Sikh prisoners who are willing to come to India will be transferred. Persons who are guilty of offences committed after the 1st August will not be covered by the agreement.

The agreement also includes inmates of Borstal Institutes and Reformatory schools provided the parents or other lawful guardians are dead or have migrated to the other Dominion. There is also an arrangement as regards persons in the employ of the two Governments. The civil personnel who had the right to opt for Pakistan and who opted for Pakistan but were detained for offences committed in India or in the States are also to be transferred provided their families have migrated to Pakistan.

So far as these persons are concerned, the agreement covers the whole of India, wherever these Government employees may be. Reciprocal action has to be taken by the Pakistan Government in regard to India Government personnel.

These lists are now being made up and it is hoped that the checking of these lists on either side will be completed in the course of the coming week. It is hoped also that the movement of these prisoners and the actual exchange will be effected by about the middle of this month.

All this agreement has to be implemented by legal provisions in either Dominion. So far we have been working under an Ordinance issued by the Governor General. This particular Bill will repeal that Ordinance which in the ordinary course will expire somewhere about the 20th October. We will repeal that Ordinance and this will become an Act upon the Statute Book. It has to be an Act because there are portions of this Bill which will have to be enforced even after the exchange has been completed.

So far as the provisions of the Bill themselves are concerned, I do not think I need say much. The Bill provides only for the transfer of Muslim prisoners:

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS BILL

from here to Pakistan and for the reception of Hindu and Sikh prisoners from Pakistan in India: and I want to make it perfectly clear that this exchange covers every class of prisoner, convicted prisoners—whether convicted for political or other offences, under-trial prisoners, security prisoners, detenus. All these are covered by the agreement that has been entered into.

With regard to what happens after they come over here I wish to explain the legal position.

In India, they will be received by an officer designated by the Central Government who will receive them in East Punjab. East Punjab has now an Act on its Statute Book which provides for the execution of sentences of convicted prisoners received from Pakistan, for the trial of under-trial prisoners and for taking such further action according to law as may be necessary in the case of other prisoners. That Act will take effect so far as the treatment of these prisoners after they are received here is concerned. That Act is being extended to the two Centrally administered areas of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara. No other province has a similar Act. No State, I believe, has a similar Act. But the idea is that it is desirable, as we are receiving all these prisoners from West Pakistan, that their cases should be disposed of in these three areas, namely, East Punjab, Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara. Of course, if it is intended that the prisoners who are received as convicted prisoners should be distributed to other provinces or States there are other provisions of the law in force in East Punjab which will enable this being done. There is also this further circumstance: even though these under-trial prisoners may be tried after they are received in East Punjab and in the other two areas, whatever sentences may be inflicted on conviction on such under-trial prisoners, they could be executed by the two Governments concerned, and if it is found desirable to transfer any of them to other areas that could be done under the Prisoners' Act which is in force.

Therefore, in order to implement this agreement which we have entered into with Pakistan, we have produced a Bill which is within the competence of this Legislature to enact into law, which is as much as it is absolutely necessary for the purpose intended. Sir, I move:

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to provide, in pursuance of an agreement with Pakistan for the exchange of prisoners, for the transfer of certain prisoners from India to Pakistan and the reception in India of certain prisoners from Pakistan, be taken into consideration."

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 2nd September, 1948.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE)

DEBATE

PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Thursday, 2nd September, 1948

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-45 A.M.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): May I, Sir, draw the attention of the House to the state of business? This House would normally adjourn the day after tomorrow; but there is plenty of important work to be done. It is quite possible that we may not be able to finish that important work in the time available unless we make some special provision. We would like to get through some legislation. Tomorrow, I understand, is going to be devoted to discussion of non-official resolutions. Therefore we really have only today and the day after tomorrow unless this House wishes to extend the date of the session by a few days. I would suggest for your consideration that instead of extending the period of the session we might extend the daily sitting hours for the next two or three days. Probably that would better meet the convenience of members who may have made arrangements to leave the city. Therefore my suggestion is, subject to your approval, that the House should meet for two extra hours in the evening or afternoon; that is to say, the House may rise at 5 o'clock as usual but meet again at 5-30 and sit till 7-30 p.m. these extra hours being devoted to official business.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U.P.: General): With reference to what has been just said I may suggest that any arrangements that might be made for the convenient dispatch of official business should be of such a character as to enable honourable members to have sufficient time to study the business that will come up before the House. That more time will be needed is undoubted. The only question is whether the session should be extended by a day or two or whether the sittings should be late. The Prime Minister has suggested that the sittings should be lengthened. I venture to think that if that suggestion were followed it would leave us very little time to study the business that we will be called upon to consider. I am sure honourable members themselves are desirous of looking into all matters carefully before they discuss them in this House. I hope, therefore, that they will bear the inconvenience of sitting here for a day or two more rather than agree to an extension of the sittings of the House, which will make it virtually impossible for us to know what the business will be that we shall be asked to transact.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: In this matter Government are entirely in the hands of the House; they are prepared to agree to any procedure or any change in the time-table which is convenient to honourable members. My suggestion was made because we consulted a number of members and they preferred that particular procedure. There is no proposal, so far as I know, of bringing any new matter before the House but only of dealing with the business already on the order paper. So presumably members are acquainted with that business. For the rest I am in your hands.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: Of course the matters to be considered are already on the Order paper, but the Prime Minister should bear with us that there have been so many Bills before this House that it has been virtually impossible even for the most industrious of us to look into more than a very few Bills. The fact, therefore, that we shall consider only such questions as have already been placed on the agenda will not help us in a proper consideration, for the simple reason that we have not yet had enough time to look into them.

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya (Madras: General): Sir, may I add one word to what the Prime Minister said? It is only a question of balancing inconvenience,—that is inevitable,—either by prolonging the session or by increasing the hours of sitting. The majority of our friends seem to think—so far as it has been possible for us to ascertain their views—that the latter course is better. As the Prime Minister has explained, no new business is sought to be brought forward and tomorrow is merely a continuation of the non-official business of the previous day. We have plenty of time to prepare the case. So far as the business already finished is concerned, we have gone through a lot of it. There remains very little and it should not be said that we have left over the business of the session to a later date. I therefore, approve of the Prime Minister's suggestion and hope the House will agree.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, there are still eleven Bills to be discussed and passed and as Dr. Kunzru said, it will be very difficult for us to study these Bills carefully. I personally think that it is much better to have a day more to be able to study the Bills and discuss them properly. The question is not of convenience or inconvenience but whether the Bills are properly considered and passed. We do not want these to be rushed through and therefore I think it would be much better to have one extra day.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, as one of the members who have to devote their attention to the humbler sides of a Bill, I suggest that it is impossible for any member to look into Bills with the amount of care that they deserve. We find every day that ordinary mistakes are being repeated from Bill to Bill in spite of their being mentioned in the House; and we cannot look into them on the floor of the House either. There are a few major Bills on the agenda and if we have to look into them and be of some help to the House, I think the course suggested by the Honourable Prime Minister will be inconvenient though of course if that is the sense of the majority, others will have to obey. The point is not the extra time devoted to the subject in the deliberation in the House, but that those who wish to come prepared after a full study and thereby economise time would find it inconvenient to do so. On the other hand a procedure has developed of accommodating Ministers and accepting Bills with mistakes which are to be corrected outside. This tendency should be checked; and if it is desired that small mistakes and errors should not deserve the serious attention of the House, of course the suggestion made may be accepted. But I think matters of form are as important as matters of substance, and therefore some time should be allowed to members. Those members who have made arrangements to go can cancel their arrangements, and the inconvenience of sitting for a day or two more would not be much in view of the importance of the Bills before the House.

Mr. Speaker: In the matter of the request made by the Prime Minister which was supported by Dr. Sitaramayya and commented upon by other members, I am afraid my position is a bit awkward and embarrassing. I am entirely in the hands of the House; though the discretion may be mine, I will use it as the House desires me to use it. When I say my position is awkward and embarrassing, what I mean is that I have felt that sittings extending beyond 5 P.M. cannot be measured by the length of time; at least, I feel exhausted by the end of the day; and it is not possible to apply the mind to the business before the House, with the vigour and freshness which it is necessary, for the conduct of business in this House. I am therefore personally always unwilling to have an extension beyond 5 P.M. but that is—as I said—entirely in the hands of the House. There are I think certain ways which we can find out for the purpose of economising time. One of them would be perhaps that Government could scrutinise their business and see what is of a type that must be put through before this session ends. The other might be that those honourable members—fortunately there are only a few of them—who feel that they must speak on every subject may as well curtail their speeches and keep to the points of discussion before the House rather than go into generalities and take a longer time. That will also economise time. I do not mean to pass any criticism. I am just suggesting ways and means. Considering these two, it may be just possible for us not to sit for very long hours—two hours have been proposed—and yet finish the business by the 4th.

There is also another aspect. I personally do not favour any legislation being hurried through at the fag end of a session, without a proper consideration of not only the principles of the measures but even of the phraseology of the measures. Therefore, I was suggesting that if the position with regard to the business is reviewed, it may be possible to finish by the 4th. However, in the alternative we may sit for some time longer, but not for two hours longer. I believe it would be most exhausting to sit from 10-45 A.M. to.....

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U.P.: General): The session might begin at 10 in the morning!

Mr. Speaker: For that matter it might begin at 8 o'clock in the morning. I remember on one occasion in the Bombay Assembly I conducted the Assembly from 8 o'clock in the morning till 12 noon and again from 2 P.M. to 6 P.M.

If it is certain that the business cannot be completed, then we must sit late. I think we should leave it to the Leader of the House and whatever he decides we shall accept.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: The question only arose because after a consideration of the matters left over, we came to the conclusion that it was not possible, or hardly possible, to get through the urgent matters in the time at our disposal. Of course no one can judge. The matter is in the hands of the House. It is just possible that what appears to be a relatively simple matter may be argued for hours, or something that should take more time may take less. But taking a reasonable view of the situation and after deleting what was not urgent, the rest may require more time than available. We are however going into the matter at the end of the day to find out what can be postponed.

As I said previously, Government is entirely willing to allot an extra day. It is a matter for the convenience of the House, not so much of the Government, because Members of Government have to work for much more than up to 5 P.M. in any day. We have to work till the small hours of the morning whether here or elsewhere. It would mean transferring the venue of work from some other place to the Chamber here. So I do not know how to decide it myself because I was prepared to accept the other alternative.

First, what I have suggested is that this should apply for two days only. Not today; but only to-morrow and the day after. If it is found possible for us to finish the work earlier than the day after tomorrow we will not sit till late. On the other hand if there is a general consensus of opinion that in order to give full consideration we should not hurry through this, I am prepared for the House to sit on Monday.

Mr. Speaker: Now the position is clarified to a much greater extent. Anyway we are not sitting today for two hours more. Let us see what progress we make and the matter can be decided tomorrow.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): There is no use prolonging the issue like this and keeping things in the air.

Mr. Speaker: We shall know the position by this evening.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Because of the number of Committee meetings, members should stay on for a day or two more.

Mr. Speaker: However, we will review the position.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): We must know definitely when the session closes. As the Honourable the Leader of the House suggested all members here have not the good fortune of being elected on Committees and most of us will have no work to do. Therefore I request that the date be definitely known so that we may go and do some work in our respective home towns.

Mr. Speaker: Any further time taken in this discussion makes the prolongation a certainty.

ELECTION TO STANDING COMMITTEE FOR MINISTRY OF RELIEF AND REHABILITATION

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena (Minister of State for Relief and Rehabilitation): Sir, I move:

"That this Assembly do proceed to elect, in such manner as the Honourable the Speaker may direct, one member to serve until the end of the financial year 1948-49 on the Standing Committee to advise on subjects concerning the Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation vice Mr. A. P. Pattani resigned."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

Mr. A. P. Portani resigned."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: I have to inform honourable members that for the purpose of election by means of the single transferable vote of a member to the Standing Committee for the Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation the programme of dates will be as follows:

Nomination to be filed in the Notice Office upto 4 P.M. today.

Election, if necessary, will be held on Friday, the 3rd September, in the Assistant Secretary's room (No. 21) in the Council House between the hours of 10-30 A.M. and 1 P.M.

ELECTION TO STANDING COMMITTEES FOR MINISTRY OF WORKS, MINES AND POWER AND FOR ROADS

Mr. Speaker: I have also to inform the Assembly that upto the time fixed for receiving nominations for the Standing Committee for the Ministry of Works, Mines and Power and Standing Committee for Roads, one nomination in the case of the first and two nominations in the case of the second were received. As the number of candidates is equal to the number of vacancies in each of the two Committees. I declare the following members to be duly elected:

Standing Committee for Roads.—(1) Shri Moturi Stayanarayana and (2) Mr. R. V. Thomas.

PATENTS (EXTENSION OF TERM) BILL

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee (Minister for Industry and Supply): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to make provision for the extension of the term of patent in certain cases.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to make provision for the extension of the term of patent in certain cases."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

RESSETTLEMENT OF DISPLACED PERSONS (LAND ACQUISITION) BILL

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena (Minister of State for Relief and Rehabilitation): Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the speedy acquisition of land for the resettlement of displaced persons.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide for the speedy acquisition of land for the resettlement of displaced persons."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS BILL—concl'd.

Mr. Speaker: The House will now proceed with the further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar yesterday:

"That the Bill to provide, in pursuance of an agreement with Pakistan for the exchange of prisoners, for the transfer of certain prisoners from India to Pakistan and the reception in India of certain prisoners from Pakistan, be taken into consideration."

I believe the Honourable the Minister's speech was unfinished.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister without Portfolio): It was finished.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): In going through the Bill I find that when passed it will be immediately applicable to East Punjab and later on when the Government sees fit it will be applicable to the other parts of both the Dominions. I do not understand why a distinction has been made when both the Dominions have come to a settlement for exchanging populations between one Dominion and another. Actually the exchange has taken place barring very few that are held over. Although I can understand that Government may by notification do immediately, when a distinction has been made I have my doubts about the application of this Act in the other parts of Pakistan. I would suggest therefore that this Bill when it becomes law should be applied to the entire Western Pakistan and no portion should be held over for the purpose of declaration by notification. (Pandit Balkrishna Sharma: "You have no jurisdiction over there").

The Honourable Minister while introducing the Bill yesterday made a long statement about the agreement that has been arrived at between the Dominions of India and Pakistan as to the exchange of prisoners from the West Punjab. As far as the other parts of Pakistan are concerned he stated that in the event of prisoners being willing to be sent over to India they will be sent to the Indian territory. Who will verify whether or not such prisoners want to come to India? The Government of India should arrange a procedure whereby our officers should also be present to verify the fact whether the prisoners in Western Pakistan are willing to come over or not. The Honourable Minister used the words "expressed his willingness". The Pakistan Government may say that the prisoners are not willing to come. Are the Government prepared to accept that statement, even though it may not be correct? To avoid all this it is desirable that an agency should be established whereby some officer on our behalf would verify the statement of the Pakistan Government on behalf of the prisoners concerned.

The Honourable Minister also stated that the exchange when it took place some months ago the Pakistan Dominion did not adhere to the agreement arrived at and that after sending away one batch they stopped sending the further batches. Therefore he suggested that now a system would be adopted whereby prisoners from Pakistan will be brought over to our border and prisoners from India will be taken to their border and then exchanged. I do not know whether that is reciprocal, whether it will be simultaneous and where is the guarantee that the prisoners for India will be brought while we send the prisoners here to their territory. Government have frequently told us in reply to questions that such and such an agreement had been entered into at certain conferences but it is not adhered to by the Pakistan Government and when questioned the Honourable Ministers have stated that the Pakistan Dominion being an independent government; they could only use their good offices and beyond that they could not go. That means that as far as Pakistan is concerned this agreement will go into the wastepaper basket, unless proper arrangements are made. I would suggest therefore that the Honourable Minister should make a very firm arrangement for the exchange of prisoners, so that our prisoners are safe from the other side and that the number sent over from here is the same as we get from there. If the number from Western Pakistan is 500, the same number should be sent from here. Otherwise the exchange should not take place. When there is an equal number, the balance should be adjusted when the others are sent. We do not know what is the total number of prisoners in Western Pakistan. It may be more or it may be less than the number here. . . .

Mr. Speaker: May I suggest to the honourable member, that as I understand the position, the legislation is merely to give effect to what the Pakistan Government and we have agreed to do. It is not for us, at present, to determine the various ways, methods or means as to how the whole thing is to be carried out. It is of no use, unless the Pakistan Government agrees. (Mr. R. K. Sidhva: "They have agreed"). Yes, they have agreed. The object of the present legislation is merely to give effect to whatever has been agreed to. It is no use at present going into the details of how things should be, what precautions should be taken and what not. The whole question has been so many times brought before this House by honourable members in the form of questions and supplementary questions and various suggestions have also been made. So it is better that we restrict ourselves only to the scope of the Bill, rather than go into the wider question as to how we should regulate our relations, if there is a breach of the agreement by Pakistan Government; for then, there will be no end. It will be outside the scope of the Bill. I am not saying this merely because there is an urgency to put through quickly as much business as possible. The honourable member's suggestions can be given to the Honourable Minister outside the House.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Sir, this Bill has originated out of the Inter-Dominion Conference. You were not in the Chair yesterday when the Honourable Minister gave us a detailed statement as to how the prisoners will be exchanged and so on. In reply to that I was suggesting that while he is exchanging the prisoners he might bear in mind that the same number should be exchanged with the other side. I was giving a reply to what he stated yesterday. . . .

Mr. Speaker: He will bear this in mind. This Bill seems to be more a formal business. The Honourable Minister has explained to the House the whole position. If any suggestions are to be made now, then we shall be going out of the scope of the Bill. What the agreement should be is an entirely different matter. This piece of legislation is intended to give effect to the agreement. The agreement is not before the House.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Because of our experience in the past of agreements not being adhered to by Pakistan I was making a request to the Honourable Minister: nothing else.

As regards under-trial prisoners the Honourable Minister stated that the Bill covers their cases also. I am very glad of that but I do not know what will be the procedure about these under-trial prisoners, whether they will be tried here and if so, whether witnesses will be brought over from Pakistan and as regards our under-trial prisoners who go there, witnesses from India will be sent there. That requires a little clarification. As regards the sentences given to the prisoners while they were here or in the other Dominion will they be released by each Dominion after exchange or they will have to complete their sentences. That should also be made clear. If a prisoner has been sentenced to 10 years imprisonment, will the sentence be remitted or the prisoner will have to complete the remaining portion? Similarly as regards the prisoners sent to the other side. That is an important point. There may be prisoners who have been sentenced to be hanged or transported for life: some may be political prisoners. What will happen to them. Has any agreement been arrived at. I would like to know what the Government of India intend to do in this respect. That is a question which I would like to put to the Honourable Minister. I would like the Honourable Minister to state whether he is sure that the Pakistan Government will enact immediately similar law to Sind or not—I mean whether there is some doubt about this Act coming into force in Sind immediately. If so I would like to know the reason. Today the answer was given that barring 2 lakhs Harijans there are hardly 90,000 Hindus in the whole of Sind. It is not possible for them to be sent out to India unless the steamer transport again exists or some other arrangement is made. In these circumstances I would like to know whether Sind has been included or not—in the agreement for the purpose of transfer of prisoners. If it is not I want to know the reason.

[Mr. R. K. Sidhva]

There are many political cases being tried in Sind today. Some are under-trial cases; I would like to know from that point of view as to what will be the position. While agreement has been reached between the two Dominions the political cases of the under-trials are still being proceeded with. They have been going on since one and a half years. Notwithstanding the decision of the two Dominions and the agreements, they have been going on for one and a half years without any decision being arrived at by the Pakistan Government. The Government of India have frequently told us that the Pakistan Government do not adhere to the clauses of the Agreements that are arrived at. As such I am very anxious to know what arrangements they will make if even after this Act they do not carry out the terms. My anxiety is only that. I do want that we should play our part honestly—as we will play. But I do not want the other side to give excuses, under any circumstances, and take us by surprise, as in many respects they have done, achieving their own object and not allowing justice to play its fair part. I certainly welcome the Bill in the sense that it is very desirable. While all the nationals have been transferred from one Dominion to the other there is no reason why the prisoners should be kept there, particularly when the officers of the jails are of different communities. I receive letters that our prisoners are not being treated fairly. I therefore submit that this Bill should be applied to the whole of India.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I find that the only parallel to this measure is the exchange of prisoners of war during war time or after that. It is true that we have had no war here—In India or in Pakistan—but during the last twelve months conditions were such that they could almost be said to have been tantamount to undeclared war. If not a war, there has at least been a great storm here and I would describe these prisoners as orphans of the storm. It is very happy that the Government is going to make arrangement for the exchange of these orphans of the storm from one Dominion to the other.

Certain issues arise in connection with the implementation of the Agreement which has been effected between the Governments of Pakistan and India. It is said in the Preamble “Whereas it is necessary to provide in pursuance of the said agreement for the transfer of certain prisoners from India to Pakistan and for the reception in India of certain prisoners from Pakistan”. I suppose that the discussion will be confined to this aspect of the Bill—how far and how long we will take for receiving prisoners from Pakistan to India and for sending prisoners from India to Pakistan. My friend Mr. Sidhva remarked that there is no provision about Sind and other Provinces of Pakistan. So far as I can remember, the Honourable Minister in the course of his speech yesterday did mention that Sind, Baluchistan and the North-West Frontier Province were also included,.....

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: It will be applied later on.

Shri H. V. Kamath:.....and that the Government of Pakistan had agreed to include these Provinces within the ambit of this measure.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: I said the Act should be applied immediately.

Shri H. V. Kamath: This Bill applies to India. How can it have jurisdiction over Pakistan? We cannot apply this Bill to Pakistan.

Mr. Speaker: The point is obvious. The honourable member may proceed.

Shri H. V. Kamath: The other day, in connection with a question raised on the floor of this House, I made a reference to certain persons in Pakistan jails, particularly in Sind jails. There are not many perhaps, but I personally know that there is at present one left who has been there since the ‘Quit India’ movement was started in 1942. I do not know in which particular jail he is—whether Karachi jail or Hyderabad jail. I am told his name is Nanak Ishar Das Ahuja. He was sentenced to nine years imprisonment in 1942. He has not yet been released. He is in some jail in Pakistan—in Sind. I would request the Honourable Minister to look into the case and see that this person who was convicted in 1942 and has since been held in Pakistan jail, is also included in the list of persons to be transferred from Pakistan to India. Then there are, I understand, two persons—one is Wanchoo Kewaram; another is Mero Jaisa Ram,.....

Mr. Speaker: I think he may give the list of names outside the House.

Shri H. V. Kamath:..... who absconded from Pakistan in 1942 but against whom warrants are still pending. They have not been withdrawn by the Pakistan Government. Therefore it is necessary that the Government should give an assurance, make a statement or announcement that if these persons discover themselves on Indian soil they will not be extradited or sent to Pakistan or taken up for trial in India.

There is another aspect to which Mr. Sidhva casually referred. That is how far we can be sure that even after having agreed to repatriate or send some prisoners from Pakistan to India, the Pakistan Government would implement it in letter as well as in spirit. That is a very moot point. The other day the Prime Minister speaking, I believe, if my memory does not betray me, somewhere in South India said that the edifice of the Pakistan Government has been built on lies and deceit. And he quoted instances to show how Pakistan has not honoured her agreements with India and how this edifice which was founded on communal hatred has been built and reared on lies and deceit. If that spirit persists with the Government of Pakistan I for one would request the Government to see that such things do not happen—that such agreements made in good faith and in good spirit, made as men of honour, are not violated in practice. Because, it is very likely that the Government of Pakistan may not supply to us—not deliberately perhaps, but inadvertently—the lists of all the persons held by them in their jails. Who is going to go from here to Pakistan, go to the jails there and see what persons are held there and whose names are concealed from the lists supplied to us? I find that the Pakistan Radio and some of their leaders still refer to India as an enemy. It is a very unfortunate state of affairs that though we are doing everything, our very best, to be friendly with Pakistan, their leaders continue to refer to India—even on the day of Independence, the 15th August, one of their leaders referred to India as the enemy of Pakistan. If that is the outlook that guides and orientates their policy then it is very likely that even in this matter of exchange of prisoners everything they do may not be aboveboard. We have to be cautious and we have to be on our guard to see that this agreement which has been arrived at between us and them is honoured in letter and in spirit. It is all very well for us to say that whatever Pakistan may do or may not do, we shall do the right. That is being said in certain quarters. They say that whatever Pakistan may do or may not do, we shall do the right. But, Sir, I do not feel personally.

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid the honourable member is going into a repetition of the arguments already advanced. I have pointed out to Mr. Sidhva that all that question need not be discussed at this stage. The discussion is purely as regards the legislation and he can make any suggestions with regard to its provisions. In fact, he is repeating the arguments of Mr. Sidhva and arguments on the way the arrangements have to be come to. I do not think it is at all relevant to this subject. There will be no end to it, if he goes into the details of the relations of the Indian Dominion with the Pakistan Government—the background, the experience, the future pitfalls and all that—if he does so there will be no end to this discussion. All that is not relevant on this discussion.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I bow to your ruling, but I thought, as the Preamble says, that we are going to provide in pursuance of the said agreement for the transfer of certain prisoners, and my point was how far this transfer will be completely effected.

Mr. Speaker: That is what he has already referred to.

An Honourable Member: It is for the Government to see.

Mr. Speaker: I see no new point; if he has any new points to suggest . . .

Shri H. V. Kamath: I will come to that new point, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: Time is running against us.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Or we are racing against time.

Today there was a Question on the list which unfortunately did not come up for oral answer. It was Question No. 771 by Sardar Hukam Singh asking for information. If that Question had been answered today, I need not have referred to it now. That Question is relevant in the present context. It is about non-muslims detained in mental hospitals in Western Pakistan. It may be that they were not detained in jails. But a storm had broken out wherein homes were shattered, estates and properties lost and these men must have lost their balance of mind. They must be treated as well as anybody who is at present in Pakistan jails. The storm has affected them as well as those who are today held in Pakistan jails. Therefore, I would request the Government to see that these detainees or inmates of mental hospitals in Western Pakistan, in so far as they were admitted after the 15th August 1947, should also be considered and their cases will have to be examined. I do not say that all the inmates of the lunatic asylums must be brought over here, but those who have been affected by the events that supervened after the 15th August 1947, and who have been proved to be suffering from the effects of that storm, should be brought here along with the other prisoners.

One last point, Sir, I refer to it with great trepidation and if I go astray you will please pull me up. That point is this: the Minister yesterday, in moving the Bill for consideration of the House, referred to—he did not mention the name but he referred to—a certain case in Delhi which has exercised the minds of many people in our country. I too will not refer by name today—I will follow the very sound rule he adopted. But I would have suggested, or I would have liked that our Government, while negotiating with the Pakistan Government, should have tried at least, if not insisted upon, to get into India two of our comrades—I can recall only these two prominent ones, but there may be others. These two very prominent colleagues of ours have been in the Indian National Congress for two decades or over; they have suffered in the freedom movement and have been comrades in distress for the last so many years. Sir, I refer to Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan and Dr. Khan Sahib. I should have been very happy if these two leaders of the Congress—till lately—were brought to India. And we would have been very glad to send from India to Pakistan one who disturbed communal harmony, practised communal hatred. It would have been a grand exchange—a sight for the Gods—a heavenly exchange—if we would have welcomed in our midst these two who preached communal harmony and communal concord all their lives, who worked and sacrificed for the unity and independence of India.

پنڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو : اس بل کے اندر جیسا کہ جناب والا نے فرمایا ہے اگر اسی پر اکتفا کیا جاتا کہ اس کو صرف exchange of prisoners تک ہی محدود رکھا جاتا تو بہت اچھا ہوتا -

میں نہایت ادب سے اس بل کے بارے میں صرف دو منٹ لینا چاہتا ہوں - میں یہ گزارش کروں گا کہ اگر اب بھی ممکن ہو تو اس بل کے scope کو نہ بڑھایا جائے -

(English translation of the above speech).

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Sir, It would have been much better as you have said, if the scope of this Bill had been restricted to the exchange of prisoners only. With due respect, I would take only two minutes on this Bill and would submit that even if it was now possible, the scope of this Bill should not be enlarged.

(The honourable member then continued in English).

Sir, with your permission I would suggest that this Bill is not restricted in scope to the matter of exchange of prisoners only. If you kindly see clause 5 and amendment No. 20 which appears in the name of the Honourable Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar, it would appear that the scope of the Bill is much greater than it should have been. Whatever the agreement be, so far as the agreement is concerned and the exchange or transfer consequent upon it is concerned, it is quite sufficient for us that the Bill provides for the exchange of prisoners. What would happen to the prisoners after their exchange is a matter in which the Government will have their final say. The Pakistan Government has no concern with it, as our Government will have no concern when the prisoners go to Pakistan and Pakistan Government will deal with these prisoners.

Clause 5 and the proposed amendment No. 20 deal with this matter. I would respectfully beg of the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill to be pleased to delete these two things from here and either, if enactment is necessary, bring another enactment, or by virtue of executive orders regulate the future destiny of prisoners who are brought here. This amendment No. 19 deals with the fate of those who will be brought here. What the amendment seeks to do is to invest the Judgment of the Pakistan Courts with a certain sanctity so that those judgments become binding on our Courts.

I was referring to amendment No. 20 by Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar. I beg to submit that I have met many of the prisoners who have come here from Pakistan by virtue of the exchange which took place some time ago.

Those prisoners have given to me very gruesome details of the tyranny exercised by the Courts in Pakistan. I know from June to August 1947 how the courts in Pakistan were behaving. Even the High Court was affected and the judgments were not rightly given but given with very great bias against particular classes of people because at that time conditions were not normal. Any sentence passed in those days should not bind our hands and we should decide after the prisoners have come what is to be done with those prisoners.

We know that in many cases innocent persons were sentenced to imprisonment and they were given sentences in other ways even when they did not deserve them, so that the judgments passed on them are open to review. I can tell you of two or three cases which passed through my hands. There was a case in the Punjab in Ferozepur District where two persons accused of murder were exchanged and they were let off scot-free in Pakistan. I know of many people who have come back from Pakistan who were under-trial prisoners before they were exchanged. They are being tried in Gurgaon. So this question of trial of prisoners has nothing to do with this Bill and similarly the jurisdiction of the courts to try a person when he returns from Pakistan after having been exchanged will depend upon the law at present in vogue in this country. Suppose a person is exchanged and thereafter he turns up again with or without the permission of the Government of India, suppose he is an under-trial prisoner, what we shall do with him will be determined by the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code and not this Bill. I know about 80 men who were prisoners here and who were accused under Sections 302 and 395, who went to Pakistan by way of exchange as prisoners and then they were let off there, and finding that conditions there were not good, they returned back to India. I do not know whether they returned with or without the permission of Government of India and they have been arrested and they are now in jail in Gurgaon and are again being prosecuted under the Sections for which they were previously undergoing trials. I do not want the present law of the land to be changed. In fact, both these matters are not germane to this subject and as pointed out by you, it would be more proper that we do not discuss the matter here and regard the scope of the Bill as restricted to mere exchange. If this is accepted, then there would be no occasion for me to move my amendment or oppose the amendment of my honourable friend.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U. P.: General): Sir, I have carefully listened to the speech of the Honourable Minister yesterday and I also carefully studied this Bill. In sub-clause (3) of clause 1, we say that this applies to East Punjab, although in the next sub-clause it is said that it can be extended to any other province or State by notification and in both places it is stated, as you will see from the definition of "transferable prisoner" in clause 2, this Act applies to any person who, being a Muslim, is willing to be transferred to Pakistan under the provisions of this Act. Now, I do not like this kind of provision. It is a serious slur upon Muslims here, that because they have been sentenced to imprisonment or penalties, they should be willing to go to Pakistan to find acquittal or release there. This assumes that Muslims do not look upon India as their motherland. I do feel that this will encourage Muslim prisoners in India to expect in Pakistan a sort of immunity from imprisonment or penalties for whatever crime they commit in India, and crime by Muslims will increase. (Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: "They have been released.") Those who went from here have already been released. I know that. Therefore, I studied very carefully whether this Bill is proper or not. Last evening when the Honourable Minister was telling us the reasons for this Bill, he said that an Ordinance had already been passed and what we are doing here is to give our seal of approval upon that Ordinance. I think this is no proper reason. In fact, the Ordinance was passed without consulting us. We object to many things in that Ordinance. As the statement of Objects and Reasons of this Bill itself says: "The agreement worked for some time and a large number of non-Muslim prisoners were received from West Punjab and all Muslim prisoners except about 300 were returned to Pakistan from East Punjab." Thus the original agreement which was concluded was for exchange of prisoners between East Punjab and West Pakistan and it worked well for some time and then Pakistan insisted on certain other prisoners in Delhi not falling within the original agreement also being returned to them, and because Government did not think it proper at that time to agree, therefore they did not comply for sometime and now they have brought this Bill in order to give effect to the demands of the Pakistan Government. I think this kind of yielding is quite wrong. If an agreement had been concluded, it ought to have been fulfilled; if it was not fulfilled it ought to have been ended then and there. Merely because after making an agreement, Pakistan wants certain other bargains and wants to amend the original agreement for this purpose, we should not have agreed. This kind of thing I intensely dislike. I do not want that because a party to the original agreement wanted to bargain and get something more and therefore to change it, so we should agree. I dislike this kind of thing. I therefore take this occasion to say that this kind of thing is not proper and I hope this would not happen in future. If we throw out this Bill it would mean censure on the Government which has already yielded to the demands of Pakistan against public feeling; so we have to agree to this Bill, but I do want to tell the Government that the country does not like our always yielding to the other side and presenting the legislature with a fait accompli. This encourages Pakistan to think that by breaking agreements they can get a better bargain.

Then, Sir, I have carefully considered what will be the benefit of this Agreement. Some prisoners will come here. On coming here they will have to undergo the sentence which they have been given probably by the Pakistan courts. Some will be hanged probably and others will have to undergo sentences of imprisonment. I do not see what is the fun of their coming here merely to execute the balance of their sentence. If you want this Bill to show them some mercy, some kindness, then pardon should be granted to them. Bring them here and release them, so that they may feel that they have come to their country and have been released. If they come here merely to rot again in jail, I do not see the fun in their being brought here. They may as well rot in Pakistan jails rather than in our jails here. I therefore think that this provision that they will come here and they will have again to undergo the sentence is not proper. As my friend has pointed out, the prisoners sent from here to Pakistan have been released. I therefore think that prisoners who come from Pakistan should also be released and should not be required to undergo their sentences. If you cannot do that, then don't get them at all here. Let them remain there. I know the tyranny which they are suffering there. We heard only the other day that in Rawalpindi a prisoner was killed in jail. All these things are really horrible, but if you really want they should, after undergoing a year or so of imprisonment in Pakistan, come here only to continue to undergo imprisonment, then what is the use of it to them? You must see that when they come here they will be released and they will be allowed a fresh lease of life and given an opportunity to become good citizens of this country. There is no sense in this Bill if we do otherwise.

Another omission in this Bill is about Bengal. You are quite prepared to extend it to the entire country, but Pakistan is only prepared to do it in respect of Western Pakistan. So what about East Bengal? I think there are many patriots of this country who may be languishing in Eastern Pakistan jails. They cannot come under this agreement. If they wanted to bargain and ask for the exchange of some particular prisoners to Western Pakistan, you should also have asked them for exchange of prisoners from East Bengal, so that our patriots who may be imprisoned there may come here. I think that it is not proper that we should treat only Western Pakistan as Pakistan and treat Eastern Pakistan as not Pakistan. So if we want to do something in this respect, we must see that our prisoners in Eastern Pakistan are also brought here.

Mr. Speaker: But does the Bill make any such distinction, either between Eastern Pakistan or Western Pakistan?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Yes, Sir. Yesterday in his speech the Honourable Minister said that the agreement applies only to East Punjab and Western Pakistan.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Bill speaks of Pakistan. Am I right there?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: This agreement relates only to Western Pakistan.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): But it can be extended to other parts of India.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): There is no agreement for Eastern Pakistan.

Mr. Speaker: There may not be any agreement, but the Bill is one. It does not speak in terms of Eastern or Western Pakistan. And it can be extended to Eastern Pakistan.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: No, Sir, but in view of an amendment which I shall move there would be no objection to its being extended to Eastern Bengal when that becomes necessary and has become a matter of agreement.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I am glad, Sir, for the Honourable Minister's explanation. The prisoners lying in Eastern Pakistan should also be brought here and released.

Then, Sir, I would only refer to one other matter. My honourable friend Mr. Kamath said that because we are sending one prisoner from here, we should also try to get distinguished prisoners like Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan and Khan Sahib from there. I do not think it is very wise for us to say that Mr. Kamath has done injustice to them. I do not think the Khan brothers would like to come here. That would be unpatriotic on their part. I think Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan and Khan Sahib are doing a great work there. They are leading a movement which probably is bound ultimately to change the whole face of Pakistan. They are patriots, and Pakistan is now their country. They are raising their powerful voice against the present mad policies of the Pakistan Government because they are convinced that these policies will ruin Pakistan. They have fearlessly and deliberately chosen to tell the truth to their countrymen without counting the cost. They would not like to save their skin like cowards by seeking transfer under any such Indo-Pakistan Government. They can only bear comparison with Socrates, and I can imagine them cheerfully drinking the cup of hemlock after scornfully rejecting the offer of escape from prison. May their patriotic efforts in the service of their nation be crowned with success.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Mr. Speaker, Sir, I wish to say only a few words. In the debate that has taken place on my motion, there was some point made by Mr. Sidhva about the willingness of prisoners to be transferred to the other Dominion. That they should be willing is a matter of agreement between the two Dominions. Both Dominions have agreed that those who are willing to be transferred should be transferred, and as a matter of fact, I remember only a day or two ago having an enquiry from Pakistan in regard to certain prisoners in Sind, that they are saying that they do not want to go to India. I would like to say that that statement as to willingness is tested—and we have instructed our High Commissioner personally to verify whether the fact of unwillingness is correct. If that is correct, if they want to stay in Pakistan, we cannot compel them to come over to India.

Sir, with regard to the Bill being immediately applicable to Eastern Punjab, I wish only to say this. An amendment which I shall be moving will make the Act extend to the whole of India. It would be brought into force in East Punjab and it can be extended to any province or state in India, whenever that is necessary. As a matter of fact, we are extending it to those areas which under the agreement we have already entered into with Pakistan come under the scheme of exchange. We can extend it to other provinces and States when that becomes necessary. After all this extension relates only to the transfer of prisoners by us from India to Pakistan. The extension to Sind is a matter for the Pakistan Government and not for us, and we expect, I take it, that Pakistan has already taken that action, that the Pakistan Government has already extended it to Sind, because it is part of their agreement with us that prisoners in Sind should come within this agreement of exchange.

Then, Sir, about under-trials, it has been said that there is no point in getting prisoners over from the other side if we are going to execute the sentences already inflicted on them by Pakistan courts or we are going to continue the trial of such prisoners, which was unfinished in Pakistan before they are transferred over to India. I personally would have welcomed it because it would have lightened our labours very greatly. But as a matter of arrangement between the two dominions and from the larger standpoint of offenders against society being dealt with for crimes committed by them, it has been agreed between the two dominions that we should take over the prisoners at the stage at which the Pakistan Government and the Pakistan courts have dealt with them on the day of the transfer, and Pakistan takes over our prisoners under the same conditions. When they come over here let us assume it is a case of a convict prisoner. Now, normally the remainder of his sentence will have to be executed here, but it is open under the law which exists in this country for us to review the cases of such prisoners and either reduce their sentences or remit their sentences according as we think the merits of the case justify. Similarly in the case of under-trial prisoners when they come over here, it is open to us to examine the records of the case and take such action under the law and according to the conditions in this country. We might either continue the prosecutions or if we do not think that the case is of sufficient importance, then we can withdraw the cases. We can deal with security prisoners by dealing with the balance of the security period for which they may be undergoing sentences in whatever way we think it is proper for us to do. Similarly in the case of detenues, we may choose to release them. If a man has been detained in Pakistan for political reasons and not for crimes to be proved in a court, that may be a strong ground for our releasing him straightaway and all that is within our competence.

I explained yesterday that the law in force in East Punjab where these persons will be received and the law in force in Delhi, and Ajmer-Merwara to which the East Punjab Act will be extended, provides adequately for dealing with every class of prisoner that we take over from Pakistan. On the point raised by my honourable friend, Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava, there is something to be said for his point of view. But we thought that, once we received prisoners from the other side, we should indicate exactly what should be done with them. There are cases where we transfer prisoners over to the other side and they come back here either having been tried and sentenced there or escaping from prisons there and perhaps trying to take advantage of better conditions in India, but there is a provision in this Bill itself that no such person can return to India without the express permission in writing from the Central Government. Before that permission is given, I take it, that each individual's case will be adequately examined by this Government. In the second place, where they do come without such permission and are found in India, they commit a breach of the provisions of this Act and they can be arrested and tried and sentenced to a term not exceeding three years rigorous imprisonment. If any part of their sentence on the other side has not been served, then the Court that tries this person can sentence him to an additional term of imprisonment equivalent to the balance of the term that has not been served on the other side. But there is one case where perhaps there is a lacuna in this particular Bill and if Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava will move his amendment to clause 8, I think, I shall be prepared to suggest an alternative form in which the difficulty he is feeling will be met and we shall be able to remove this lacuna to which I have referred.

The other points that were made were about Pakistan's past conduct. I do not think, as you, Sir, have already pointed out, that this is relevant to the consideration of this Bill. We are trying to eliminate all chance of either party not implementing its obligation under the agreement by collecting the prisoners together on either side at a point on the border to effect the transfer practically in one transaction. We shall see before that transfer is effected that everybody who has to come over here has been included in the list we receive from Pakistan.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: About the under-trials, Sir?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I think I explained it fully yesterday. When the undertrials are brought over and are received in East Punjab, there is an Act in force in East Punjab providing adequately for the treatment of these repatriated prisoners. That Act will come into force and their cases will be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of that Act.

I do not think I need detain the house further. I have covered most of the important points that were raised in the course of the debate.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I desire clarification on a small matter. There are under-trial prisoners in both the Dominions. If they are exchanged, their trial might lead to difficulties, because the offences would have been committed outside the Dominion in which the trial will take place. The Pakistan offenders who are under-trial have committed offences in Pakistan and vice versa Indian under-trial prisoners are alleged to have committed crimes in India. The place of trial, the production of witnesses and several other factors will come in. I desire to know whether there is any law or any contemplated law to deal with these complications. There will be questions of courts jurisdiction. I only desire clarification.

Sardar Hukam Singh (East Punjab: Sikh): There is other question also. So far as I remember you said that the present agreement relates to East Punjab alone. We will send out prisoners from East Punjab, the Acceding States and Delhi while they will send prisoners from the West Punjab, and Acceding States. I want to know whether after we have sent out the Muslim prisoners from East Punjab, States and Delhi, would there be any Muslim prisoners left and they would like to have them after this agreement is completed. What I mean is, if we shall require certain other prisoners and we would like to have them, we will have no chance of reciprocity, and we will be losing this game as well.

Shri H. V. Kamath: On a point of information, Sir, has there been any dead line fixed for the completion of exchange of these prisoners? There is the further point raised by me about the detenus in mental hospitals of Pakistan.

Mr. Speaker: To that there is the reply already in answer to a question that the matter is under consideration.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): One question, Sir. Cannot the Government effect the exchange of prisoners without this legislation?

Mr. Speaker: That also may be answered now.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, the Government cannot effect the exchange. By Government, we mean the Executive. The Executive has got to act under the law and unless the Executive is clothed with the necessary powers by legislation, it cannot transfer prisoners from here over to Pakistan. But it is quite possible that we shall be quite prepared to receive Hindus from Pakistan without any legislation on our side if we were to adopt the policy that Professor Shibban Lal Saksena recommended and if Pakistan will make a present of all Hindu and Sikh prisoners in Pakistan, no legislation would be necessary. But, Pakistan will not hand over any prisoners from the other side unless we transfer prisoners over to the other side and for effecting that transfer legislation is necessary.

With regard to the question of reciprocity, I believe there is some misapprehension in the minds of honourable members. Reciprocity is only with regard to the fact of exchange. It does not extend to the numbers exchanged. Pakistan has agreed that every Hindu and Sikh prisoner in the Jails in the areas to which this scheme extends will be sent over to India. We have agreed that every Muslim prisoner in the areas to which the scheme extends in India will be transferred over. If our numbers are less than the numbers in Pakistan, we are still entitled to and shall insist upon the whole lot of them being transferred over to India. I think I have made this point clear already. If there is any doubt about it, let me clear it once and for all.

And now the points which my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad raised. He referred to the offenders after they are received here being Indian nationals or people who will become Indian nationals, who had committed offences in Pakistan. His very delicately poised constitutional and legal mind naturally finds some difficulty to understand how such persons could be tried in India. The answer to that is that the law under which they will be tried is an East Punjab Act and that act has provided that prisoners who come over to India,—under-trial prisoners—will be tried under the law in force in East Punjab for offences committed in Pakistan as if such offences had been committed in India. I am sure the honourable member is aware of a similar provision in the Criminal Procedure Code. The law permits that sort of thing. That is how our courts will obtain jurisdiction.

Regarding the dead line, we have been trying to fix a specific date for effecting this transfer. We thought we could do it on the 9th of this month. The lists are coming in. Verification takes a little time. It is proposed that this date will be fixed within a few days thereafter. I am not in a position to announce the actual date. It will depend on how far both sides are ready with their lists, not only with the lists, but with the collection of prisoners at the point at which the transfer is to take place. As soon as we are sure of that, we will effect the exchange.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill to provide, in pursuance of an agreement with Pakistan for the exchange of prisoners, for the transfer of certain prisoners from India to Pakistan and the reception in India of certain prisoners from Pakistan, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: We will take the Bill clause by clause at 2-30 P.M.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half past Two of the Clock
Mr. Speaker (the Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I move:

"That in part (b) of clause 2 of the Bill, the word 'duly' be omitted."

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, I accept it.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in part (b) of clause 2 of the Bill, the word 'duly' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, I move:

"That in part (b) of clause 2 of the Bill, after the words 'in a prison' the words and figures 'on or before the 1st day of August 1948' be inserted."

The reason for it is obvious.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in part (b) of clause 2 of the Bill, after the words 'in a prison' the words and figures 'on or before the 1st day of August 1948' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I move:

"That in part (c) of clause 2 of the Bill, the word 'the' occurring in line one be omitted."

This is an offensive word in the context and is no part of the definition or name. This occurs in the definition of "the Provincial Government". The word "the" is no part of the name and is only an article, and so the word is not really wanted. Like evacuees from one Dominion to another this article should be evacuated from within the definition to outside it.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in part (c) of clause 2 of the Bill, the word 'the' occurring in line one be omitted."

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, I cannot accept it. I think it is necessary and it is also necessary to indicate that the Government referred to is the Government of a particular State. That is why I believe the Draftsman has included the definite article in the definition.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in part (c) of clause 2 of the Bill, the word 'the' occurring in line one be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, I move:

"That in part (c) of clause 2 of the Bill, the words 'in which this Act is brought into force' be omitted."

This is consequential on an amendment which I shall move later to clause 1. I can move it now because I do not think there is likely to be any controversy over that other amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The difficulty is that if it is not done now we shall have to keep clause 2 pending.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I shall explain this amendment to the House. I am proposing the deletion of sub-clause (3) to clause 1. If that is made there is no question of bringing the Act into force later on in any particular area. Clause 1 would then read as if the Act applies to the whole of India. There is no special provision to bring it into force in any particular area and so in clause 2 (c) it is not necessary to keep the words which I want to delete by the amendment I have moved. Sir, I move.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in part (c) of clause 2 of the Bill, the words 'in which this Act is brought into force' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, I move:

"That in part (d) (ii) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words 'in any other Province or Acceding State in which this Act is brought into force' the words 'in any other part of India' be substituted."

This is the same as the one I mentioned in the case of the other amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in part (d) (ii) of clause 2 of the Bill, for the words 'in any other Province or Acceding State in which this Act is brought into force' the words 'in any other part of India' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I wish to say something about the words "official Gazette." The phrase is defined in the General Clauses Act in section 3 (37 a). For a long series of years "Official" was written with a capital letter. And for some time past there has been some difference of opinion among different Draftsmen, and in some measures it is written with a capital and in others with a small letter. This matter was then raised here and it was agreed—though not on a motion—that the word in the context should begin with a capital letter. In this session in some Bills it has been written with a capital letter and in others with a small letter. I am told that in some recent Acts the word begins with a small letter. But I submit, the real authority is the General Clauses Act and there is no option with the Draftsman. It is the prerogative of the Secretary or of the Secretary acting under the authority of the Speaker, though the Draftsman's opinion may be taken. I think the Draftsman's report should be called and definite instructions should be given. My point is that the practice should be uniform. If it is spelt uniformly with a small letter I would not mind but it should not be written differently in different Bills. In view of the authority of the General Clauses Act and the practice that has obtained for a good part of a century, we cannot depart from that practice simply because we have introduced some mistakes in some recent Bills. In the circumstances I submit that you may be pleased to give a final ruling on the point which will settle the practice once for all.

Mr. Speaker: I am not prepared to say anything at this time. But it is to be seen whether a small 'o' really makes a difference in the substance. Anyway, I am not placing it before the House.

The question is:

"That Clause 2, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 3 to 7 were added to the Bill.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 8 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:

'and if at the time of his transfer to Pakistan he was an undertrial prisoner, the jurisdiction of the courts in India shall be revived and such person shall be liable to be dealt with according to law as if he had not been a transferable prisoner.'"

I have already submitted my reasons informally for moving this amendment. I understand the Honourable the Minister in charge of this Bill has an amendment which he has shown to me, and I have only moved this amendment with the idea to have an occasion to place that amendment and I seek the permission of the House for that amendment.

Mr. Speaker: I will then put it in the amended form.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I accept the substance of my honourable friend's case. I think there is a lacuna in the Bill which his amendment tries to fill. But I think the drafting of it has to be more satisfactory.

[Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar]

tory and this is the draft I propose, namely, instead of adding a proviso to sub-clause (2) of clause 8, I move:

"That after sub-clause (2) of Clause 8 of the Bill, the following be added as sub-clause (3):

(3) If at the time of his transfer to Pakistan, the person contravening the provisions of sub-section (1) was undergoing trial in any court in India for any offence, he shall, without prejudice to the provisions of sub-section (2), be liable to be tried for such offence by the same or any other court having jurisdiction:

Provided that if such person has, before his return to India, been tried for the offence by a court of competent jurisdiction in Pakistan and convicted or acquitted of the offence, he shall not be liable to be tried again for the same offence by any court in India."

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That after sub-clause (2) of clause 8 of the Bill the following be added as sub-clause (3):

(3) If at the time of his transfer to Pakistan, the person contravening the provisions of sub-section (1) was undergoing a trial in any court in India for any offence, he shall, without prejudice to the provisions of sub-section (2), be liable to be tried for such offence by the same or any other court having jurisdiction:

Provided that if such person has, before his return to India, been tried for the offence by a court of competent jurisdiction in Pakistan and convicted or acquitted of the offence, he shall not be liable to be tried again for the same offence by any court in India."

Perhaps, the proviso creates a difficulty.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): The only point I want to know is this: supposing an under-trial is transferred to Pakistan and he is released formally by the authorities according to law. Then suppose he comes here. Will the offence against him be revived? The proviso says that if he is tried and convicted then the offence will not be revived. What happens if he is released according to the usual procedure?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: The answer to that is that each case will have to be dealt with on its merits. We do not propose to prosecute every person who might be released without trial in Pakistan. But we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that people who had committed, say murder in India, were transferred over to Pakistan and are released there without even being tried, if they get back to India we will reserve the right to revive the proceedings against such people and we will not exercise this right only in cases where a trial has taken place and the man has been properly acquitted. That is the whole idea behind this amendment.

Mr. Speaker: I am doubtful whether the proviso will not bar the trial of a person who is undergoing trial here for murder, he is transferred and, as Mr. Santhanam pointed out, is tried there by the Pakistan court and acquitted for want of evidence. That man, even when he returns here, under the terms of the proviso, will not be triable in India. That seems to be the effect.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: If the trial is continued in Pakistan and if according to law he is acquitted of the charge that had been framed against him we are prevented from ordering a fresh trial of the man if he happens to return to India. But there may be cases where Pakistan might simply say, we do not care about the trial. You get away: and if then people come back we should be in a position to revive the proceedings.

Shri K. Santhanam: May I know how the trial can be conducted without evidence, without witnesses who are all here?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: That difficulty is there. Either the witnesses have got to be got over here for the purposes of the trial or provision exists, I think, in the East Punjab Act for examining the witnesses on commission in one Dominion by Courts which issue commissions in the other. We are providing for those cases. There is no doubt that the inconvenience is there. We have got to face it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: In regard to the proviso, I have got every doubt whether this proviso is necessary or even effective. I know of a case in which two murderers committed a murder here and then they were under trial. They were sent by way of exchange from East Punjab to Pakistan. They were released there. Four of the co-accused were tried in Ferozepur and three of them have been acquitted on the 22nd August. The fourth man who was alleged to have been the abettor has been sentenced to transportation for life. Now those two persons sent from here by way of exchange have been sending letters to their co-accused. They are at large and they can come back to India. I think the provisions now made will be able to give justice to them and they will be tried in the courts here.

But as regards the proviso, it says that if they are tried in Pakistan and convicted or acquitted, then the courts here will recognise the judgment as good. In the first place I do not think that the courts in Pakistan will have jurisdiction to try a prisoner of that sort. But even if the courts of this or that, country do get jurisdiction conferred by virtue of certain measures, even then there will be no evidence there. The crime was not committed there, the evidence could not be had there and there can be no proper trial there. But what I object to very seriously is this. We cannot say all at once that if there is a trial in Pakistan we shall recognise it as good. It is a foreign government and in regard to foreign judgments the law is that if the judgment satisfies certain conditions then the courts in the country may recognise it: otherwise that judgment is of no substance in law. If it is held that the trial was good, that the conviction is regarded as good because the judgment is good, then there will be some justification in saying that because there has been a trial there, the trial is recognised as good. But we cannot beforehand say in respect of any judgment that the judgment would be regarded as good. Why should it be regarded as good at all. According to section 403 of the Cr. P. C. if there is a judgment ending in a conviction or acquittal, it is a bar to a second trial but a conviction or acquittal order of the Pakistan court has got no validity in India and therefore I would suggest that so far as this proviso is concerned it is neither necessary nor effective.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: This clause leads to a large number of complications. The transfer of under-trial prisoners is arranged on a reciprocal basis. If we once agree that some under-trial prisoners of India should be sent to Pakistan and the corresponding under-trial prisoners from Pakistan be brought to India, we must also agree that the trials already held in India or in Pakistan of the exchanged prisoners must be held to be valid.

As to Pandit Bhargava's point that a foreign judgment is not effective, I quite agree. A judgment of Pakistan will not be admissible in India and similarly a judgment in India will not be admissible in Pakistan unless certain specific conditions are satisfied. It is on account of this state of the law that the present proviso tries to fill the gap. Unless there are reciprocal guarantees to accept as valid the judgments of the other Dominion the exchange of under-trial prisoners would be meaningless. That part of the proposed amendment seems to be good. If there is a trial in India or in Pakistan that should be respected by the other Dominion. The introduction of the terms as suggested by Pandit Bhargava namely, that the trial must be legal, would lead to complications. If there has been a trial it must be accepted as legal. These are transitional provisions to be exercised only once and for a short period only and these provisions will soon be spent. But the trouble to my mind is that a man who has committed an offence in India is partly tried and then he is transferred to Pakistan. What about the evidence that has already been taken. Will that be taken cognisance of by the Pakistan Court? Similarly if a man is partly [Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad] tried in Pakistan, can the evidence already taken, the charge-sheet and the framing of charges etc., can these be taken judicial notice of in Indian Courts? I think both the Dominions should make provision to accept that part of the proceedings which have already taken place as legal.

There are the questions of inconvenience which must be of necessity ignored in an international transaction like this. The real difficulty is the provision that a man who has been transferred from Pakistan can be tried in India by a Court having jurisdiction. That is the trial will be legal if the Court has jurisdiction. That begs the very question. The question is whether a man having been retransferred to India can be tried in a Court in India and whether the Court will have jurisdiction.

Mr. Speaker: We are not referring to prisoners from Pakistan. This clause refers to prisoners from India who are sent to Pakistan and who then return to India. I think the Honourable Minister might consider that the proviso does create difficulties, as pointed out by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava. One of the main causes of the difficulty seems to be the want of confidence in the attitude of Pakistan towards a trial. That seems to be the chief point. In view of past events it is doubted as to whether any persons will really be tried with a desire to see that justice is done or there might to a sham trial and an acquittal. That seems to be the crux of the whole question.

There are also other incidental difficulties about evidence. In big trials for offences like murder, there cannot be evidence on commission for a satisfactory solution of the question as to whether the offence was committed or not. I was suggesting something different. Instead of having this proviso, the matter may be left to executive action. The Government is not bound to prosecute every man that returns to this country. If the Government is satisfied that, a particular person has escaped and come back here or has returned otherwise, it may prosecute him, if they are satisfied that he has not had any trial at all. Or they may not try him, if they find that there has been a good trial. The effect of the proviso will be that the Government is legally barred from having any trial even in cases where people have been let off after sham trials.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): That would be an encouragement to them to return.

Mr. Speaker: That is quite another matter.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, my difficulty is that we are passing this legislation in pursuance of an agreement entered into with a sister dominion and I should not like the House to take up the attitude that it suspects that trials in the other Dominion might be sham trials and therefore we should have the right to try a man twice over for the same offence. That is what it amounts to. If we reserve a discretion to the executive government, then we shall have to go back upon the understandings we have arrived at with the other Dominion. The other Dominion has passed a law practically in the same terms, as we are proposing to do here, and if we are going to suggest that we can treat their trials and judgments as mere scraps of paper and that we will revive trials against persons who have been tried in the other Dominion, I think it would be difficult for us to carry out the understanding that we have arrived at after a good deal of negotiation and after the establishment of a certain amount of good feeling in solving a rather difficult problem. And therefore it seems to me that both on grounds of principle as between two independent states and as the result of negotiations which have come to fruition, we ought to recognise and accept trials in the other Dominion as having been bona fide and we shall have to respect such trials. After all, you have got to remember that the man who contravenes the provisions of sub-section (1) of section 8 commits an offence by the very fact of that contravention and we have got the right to arrest him, prosecute him and sentence him to imprisonment not exceeding three years. We are only considering the further fact whether, if he had been an under-trial prisoner and had come back before the first trial in the other Dominion was over, he should not be allowed to escape the punishment which on a possible conviction he might have received for the offence which he originally committed in this Dominion. If the trial had been continued on the other side and had been brought to a legal conclusion we ought to accept that legal conclusion, however unsatisfactory it may be as regards the merits of the trial which was held or the verdict that was come to by the court in the other Dominion. I feel, Sir that this is a point of principle. This is a point of carrying out understandings with the other Dominion and I would earnestly entreat the House to let the proviso remain as it is.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): In view of the fact that the Honourable Minister feels strongly on this matter, may I ask whether there is any use in adding a sub-clause which will whittle down the rigor of sub-clause (1) of clause 8. If there is any lacuna in the clause, apparently this lacuna exists in the corresponding Act of Pakistan also. As such this need not be moved at all. I do not suppose that they have tried to remedy this lacuna.

Mr. Speaker: The substance of his speech is that this is now a question more or less of carrying out the agreement honourably and in a truthful spirit. Then I think there is no question of discussing this matter any further.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The point may perhaps be met if the word "properly" is added before the word "tried".

Mr. Speaker: "Tried" means properly tried.

Shri K. Santhanam: The sub-clause may be dropped. If the terms are identical in both the Acts as is the contention, we need not add this. They have passed an Ordinance which is identical with this Bill.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Where is that Act. Let us see that.

Shri K. Santhanam: The Honourable Minister has a copy.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: In between the suggestions—to do away with the amendment itself and to drop the proviso—I think the amendment may be accepted in the circumstances. To give up what in substance is the amendment of Pandit Bhargava will mean that even though there was no trial, at least there must be a farce of a trial resulting in a discharge, acquittal or conviction—in which case again the jurisdiction of our courts will be barred. If however the amendment itself is taken out it will mean that as soon as they cross the border they will say "Chalo, chodo"; the men will come back here and the only punishment can be imprisonment for three years. It may be a case of murder. Under these circumstances let us do justice to both. Let us stand by the agreement to which our friends have been parties, though I know—and we have seen—that it is very often a case of one-way traffic only. There is no chance of the non-Muslims who have come from Pakistan going back to Pakistan. They would prefer to be in jail. Whether the provisions are stringent or loose does not make anything to them. But we stand by the honour of our people and of our Government. As it has entered into an agreement let us stand by it. I am in support of the amendment with the Proviso as has been moved by the mover of the amendment. I want it including the Proviso. The clause will then be much better than it would be without the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The question is placed on a different footing altogether in view of what the Honourable Minister has stated. I shall put the amendment to the House.

[Mr. Speaker]

The question is:

"That after sub-clause (2) of Clause 8 of the Bill, the following be added as sub-clause (3):

'(3) If at the time of his transfer to Pakistan, the person contravening the provisions of sub-section (1) was undergoing trial in any court in India for any offence, he shall, without prejudice to the provisions of sub-section (2), be liable to be tried for such offence by the same or any other court having jurisdiction:

Provided that if such person has before his return to India, been tried for the offence by a court of competent jurisdiction in Pakistan and convicted or acquitted of the offence, he shall not be liable to be tried again for the same offence by any court in India.'

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 8, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 8, as amended, was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 9 of the Bill, for the word 'place', the word 'prison' be substituted."

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 9 of the Bill, for the word 'place', the word 'prison' be substituted."

Shri K. Santhanam: I have two questions to ask of the Honourable Minister. What will be the nationality or domicile of these prisoners—because this will be necessary in matters connected with exchange of property. Will they be Indian nationals or persons of Indian domicile as soon as they are received in India by an Indian officer? Otherwise—if they continue to be Pakistan nationals—their properties will not come under the Exchange of Property agreements, and there will be the other consequences of Pakistan nationals being in our presence.

The next point on which I want information is whether they will have the right of criminal appeal and revision to Indian courts.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: As regards the first point, these prisoners who come over to India from Pakistan will, as regards their properties in Pakistan, be in exactly the same position as non-prisoner refugees who have come over from the other Dominion. The property in the other Dominion is evacuee property—the properties left behind by prisoners will be evacuee properties.

With regard to the other point I have already explained that the East Punjab Act which will govern the disposal of the cases of these repatriated prisoners, will give them all the rights of appeal, revision and even the right to apply to the Provincial Government concerned for commutation, revision and reduction of punishments—which any ordinary prisoner in our own Dominion will have. That Act will govern their cases and therefore there is no curtailment of the rights of prisoners after they come here.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 9 of the Bill, for the word 'place', the word 'prison' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri V. S. Sarwate (Indore State): When prisoners having unexpired periods of sentences are transferred and received here, what will be the position. Would they be staying in prison here or would they be let loose?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Ordinarily the unexpired portion of their sentences will be executed by the prison authorities in this country unless the Provincial Government intervenes and remits the balance of the sentences and releases them.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 9, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 9, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 10 was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I move:

"That sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, be omitted."

This has been occasioned by the fact that as part of an arrangement which was entered into later on with Pakistan we have agreed to transfer all Muslim government employees who had opted for Pakistan but who have been detained in prisons here because of their having committed offences. These gentlemen are to be found all over the country and therefore it has become necessary for us to extend the Ordinance which is now in force, to the whole of India. The Act has therefore to apply to the whole of India. That is why sub-clause (3) which refers to bringing the Act into force has been proposed to be omitted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 1 of the Bill, for the words 'Exchange of Prisoners Act', the words 'Indo-Pakistan Exchange of Prisoners Act' be substituted."

Sir, this is only the substitution of a name.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: For what purpose?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I shall explain the purpose at once. The name to be given to the Act is "The Exchange of Prisoners Act". But there is an exchange of prisoners between the two Dominions which are for all practical purposes two independent countries. In order to indicate the international character of this exchange of prisoners, it is necessary to indicate it in the name. "Indo-Pakistan" Exchange of Prisoners Act will indicate it very precisely. The name of an Act should give some indication of the purpose and scope of an Act. That is why I think it is a better name and one which would give a clear indication of the scope and the international character of the exchange.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I think the addition of the words is altogether unnecessary. I would prefer to retain the title as proposed in the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, then my amendment need not be put.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 1, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 1, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move:

"That for the long title of the Bill, the following be substituted:
'A Bill to give effect to an agreement between India and Pakistan for the exchange of certain classes of prisoners.'"

Sir, the long title in the Bill is really too long. I want to make the title short, but long enough to express the entire idea. You would be pleased to see, Sir, that the title is "A Bill to provide in pursuance of agreement with Pakistan for the exchange of prisoners for the transfer of certain prisoners from India to Pakistan and the reception in India of certain prisoners from Pakistan". All this can be shortly expressed by the expression: "A Bill to give effect to an agreement between India and Pakistan for the exchange of certain classes of prisoners". If we mention the word agreement, all the other necessary and incidental matters will be implied.

An Honourable Member: What about reception?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Reception follows if there is an exchange of prisoners by an agreement. It is not necessary that in the long title all the provisions of the Bill should be fully stated. If we say "give effect to an agreement" that agreement is embodied, and its effect is embodied, in the Bill. So, I say this is short but long enough to express the whole idea.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, of course I do not myself claim the authorship of this particular Preamble, but I see that the draftsmen who were responsible for it are fairly justified in giving this long title for the following reasons.

In the first place, there are other Acts. There is, for instance, in East Punjab the East Punjab Exchange of Prisoners Act, which originally provided both for transfer and reception on the one hand and for dealing with repatriated prisoners on the other—the two together went into that Act.

In the second place, to say that we are giving effect to an agreement in the Preamble may not be perfectly accurate for this reason that what we do say in this enactment is not the mere giving effect to the actual arrangements entered into—it is really to make provision for carrying into effect the arrangements that have been entered into. In doing so, it is quite possible that we have put into this Bill certain ancillary or consequential things which have not got actually embodied in the agreement itself. Not that I say that the arguments I have been advancing are altogether conclusive, but I should say that there is not enough argument on the other side to tinker with something which the draftsman has done in the usual course of his routine.

Mr. Speaker: Shall I put the amendment to the House?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: No, Sir,

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Title and the Preamble stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

RESERVE BANK (TRANSFER TO PUBLIC OWNERSHIP) BILL

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Finance and Commerce):
Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill to bring the share capital of the Reserve Bank of India into public ownership and to make consequential amendments in the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

Circumstances have ordained that I should have the privilege of placing this motion before this honourable House. It is in the fitness of things that the first piece of legislation to bring about our ideas of nationalisation should relate to an institution which is really the pivot of the financial system of the country and on which to a very large extent depends the economic well-being of society.

Sir, the demand for nationalisation of the Reserve Bank is older than the Bank itself. I am one of those who, as Members of the Central Assembly of those days, have been advocating state-ownership of the Central Bank of India ever since 1927 when the idea of a Central Bank was first mooted. It took several years for the Government of the day to arrive at a compromise with regard to this matter, and it was in 1933 that the constitution of a shareholders' Bank was placed on the Statute Book. It was a compromise measure, a compromise to which some of our leaders of the day were parties, and yet in the year 1933 we, a small band of what I described on that occasion to be a united minority, persisted in our attitude of opposition to the shareholders' Bank. I remember to have spoken in 1933 from a seat not very distant from the one that I am occupying today, leading a forlorn hope and fighting the idea of a shareholders' Bank. I apologise to this House for striking a personal note (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: "No harm") but I would not be human if I were not to be affected by the memory of those days and the fact that it has fallen to my lot to pilot this Bill in the sovereign Parliament of India today. (Hear, hear).

Sir, when the Reserve Bank of India was set up there were eleven other State-owned Central Banks in the different parts of the world. Later, that is to say, after 1935, Canada, Denmark, New Zealand and Paraguay converted their Central banks from shareholders' bank into State-owned banks. Since the Second World War the process has been further accelerated and we have State Banks in Brazil, Rumania, Netherlands, Hungary, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Norway and France, and to this list has been added the United Kingdom as the Bank of England was nationalised in the year 1945. The process is still continuing. We are therefore proceeding on perfectly sound lines today in adopting the measure which I have the honour to present to this House.

Sir, the demand for nationalisation naturally died down with the setting up of the Reserve Bank in 1935, and it was only about two years back when the Bill for the control of banking institutions, popularly known as the "Banking Bill" which is yet to be placed on the Statute Book, was under consideration, the demand for the nationalisation of the Reserve Bank was revived in a minute appended to the report of the Select Committee. Later, in the Central Legislative Assembly, a Resolution was moved in February 1947 asking for the nationalisation of the Reserve Bank and shortly after that, in the Budget speech of the then Finance Member the Government announced their decision to nationalise the Bank. On the 4th of February 1948, in reply to a question in this House, my predecessor made the announcement that the Government proposed to take steps to nationalise the Reserve Bank after the 30th of September 1948 when it would cease to be the common banker for India and Pakistan. Pakistan having meanwhile set up its own Central bank with effect from the 1st July 1948 we are in a position to carry out that promise earlier than was anticipated. It is now intended that the new regime should come into being with effect from the 1st of January 1949, and as this will be the last opportunity which we will have in putting this measure through the legislature, I have to seek the indulgence of this House at the fag end of this session to take this Bill into consideration.

Sir, I do not think I need dwell upon any detailed provisions of the Bill. The Bill is a very simple one. It merely seeks to substitute State-ownership for the shareholders' interests in the Bill and certain consequential amendments which are of a minimum character that would be required to be embodied in this Bill, subject to one or two other minor items, which have been incidentally brought up for consideration.

The House will observe that in clause 3 this transfer of the Bank's shares is provided for and there, incidentally, provision is made for the payment of compensation. Here I should like to pause and remind the House that the compensation provided for in this clause follows the assurance which was given by my predecessor on behalf of Government in the last session of the Assembly.

The only other provision which requires the attention of the House, to my mind, is that to be found in the Schedule, which contains the consequential amendments. I would, first of all, draw the attention of the House to the proposed substitution of a new clause for clause 7 of the present Act, which relates to management. This is really the most important provision of the Act as it indicates the character of the change that will take place in the management of the Bank and its relations with the Government of India. The clause reads as follows:

"The Central Government may from time to time give such directions to the Bank as it may, after consultation with the Governor of the Bank, consider necessary in the public interest. Subject to any such directions, the general superintendence and direction of the affairs and business of the Bank shall be entrusted to a Central Board of Directors which may exercise all powers and do all acts and things which may be exercised or done by the Bank "etc.

Now, Sir, this provision closely follows the corresponding provision in the Bank of England Act of 1946.

May I, Sir, in this connection quote from the statement which the British Chancellor of the Exchequer made in support of a clause to this effect in the Bank of England Bill? This is what he said:

"In one aspect, this Bill only legalises the actual situation. The relations between the Bank of England and the Treasury have long been close, confidential—even intimate—and so they must continue. But this relationship has, until now, been factual rather than legal, and His Majesty's Government feel and the British people feel that the time has now come when these two parties—the old man of the Treasury and the old lady of Threadneedle Street—should be legally married. We should not like to think that there was any danger of their living in sin."

So, here again there has been the closest relationship between the Reserve Bank, particularly the Governor of the Reserve Bank and the Government of India, in the Finance Ministry. What we are seeking to do is merely to give a legal basis to that close and confidential relationship that has always subsisted between the Governor of the Reserve Bank and the Government of India.

Sir, I do not think that I need trouble the House with the other amendments, except to point out that in Section 17 I propose the substitution of the words "foreign exchange" for the word "sterling". A similar amendment also arises in subsequent sections, particularly Section 33. This is, in a way, incidental to our membership of the International Monetary Fund and also to the amendment which has already been carried out to Sections 40 and 41 of the Reserve Bank of India Act. As a matter of fact, there is no reason why we should be confined to sterling securities for the purposes of maintaining assets of the Reserve Bank. The intention is that the Reserve Bank would be in a position to hold securities of any country which is a member of the International Monetary Fund and not be confined merely to sterling securities.

Sir, these are the principal provisions of the Bill, and I do hope that the House will find the Bill acceptable on the whole and that we will be able to dispose of this motion in a short time.

Sir, I am sorry that I shall have to move a few amendments myself. As a matter of fact, the idea was at one time to refer the Bill to a Select Committee. But for very many reasons, we have to trouble the House to take the Bill into consideration straightaway, and when the clauses come up I will have to propose a few amendments, which again I can assure the House are not of any substantial character.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to bring the share capital of the Reserve Bank of India into public ownership and to make consequential amendments in the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

Before we proceed with this, I have just to intervene in respect of a matter which we discussed to some extent in the morning regarding extending the time of the sitting of the House.

I now have with me a list of Government business which must be put through and I have also taken into consideration the progress we are making on the Bills. I think we can meet all points of view, including mine, if we suspend the Question Hour for tomorrow and the day after.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): No, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: That will give us one hour more and tomorrow being private day, non-official Resolutions will be put down immediately after the election of the Deputy Speaker and other formal business. We shall stop the private business at four instead of at five. That gives full time to the private business and any important Resolutions may be discussed. Then we sit up to 5, breaking for half an hour up to 5-30 and continue for one hour more, till 6-30. If that is adjusted, I think, we shall get the longer time that is necessary.

Some Honourable Members: Yes, yes.

Mr. Speaker: I find some members are nodding against the suspension of the Question Hour. I may point out to them that, I look upon that hour as a most important hour, and perhaps a lively one. But honourable members will see that, out of the large number of questions that are put in, very few questions are effectively gone through and a larger number of questions go in as un-starred questions. I have always carried the feeling that for the supplementaries, we are not having the fullest benefit of the hour, because the supplementaries are so long and sometimes even ten minutes are taken and sometimes I have had to remind that ten minutes have passed. It is, therefore, that I am suggesting suspension to meet all points of view; it is not possible to meet every point of view fully and this is what I propose to do. Let us not have any discussion over that. I do not propose to have any. This is what I have decided and I find the House is substantially agreed.

सेठ गोविन्द दास : सभापति जी, मैं श्री नियोगी जी के इस बिल का स्वागत करता हूँ।

जिस तरह से नियोगी जी को बहुत सी पुरानी बातें इस बिल को पेश करते हुए याद आ गईं उसी तरह से मुझे भी बहुत सी पुरानी बातें याद आ रही हैं। सबसे पहिले यह विचार सन् १९२६ ई० में आया था कि इम्पीरियल बैंक के सिवा हमको एक रिजर्व बैंक की जरूरत है। उस समय मैं कौंसिल आफ स्टेट का मेम्बर था। रुपये की क्या कीमत हो—१६ पैसे या १८ पैसे, हमारे देश में भी सोने की करन्सी हो जाय और इसके साथ रिजर्व बैंक यह तीनों बातें सर बेसिल ब्लैकट (Sir Basil Blackett) ने उस समय केंद्रीय असेम्बली के सामने उपस्थित की थीं। उस समय यह प्रश्न भी उठा कि यह बैंक शेयर होल्डरों (Shareholder's Bank) का हो या राष्ट्रीय। जहां तक मुझे याद पड़ता है, सर बेसिल ब्लैकट की राय इस बैंक को शेयर होल्डर बैंक बनाने की नहीं थी। यद्यपि उनका स्तीफा इस प्रश्न पर नहीं हुआ परन्तु उस समय यह चर्चा थी कि उनका स्तीफा का प्रधान कारण यही है कि वह इस बैंक को राष्ट्रीय बैंक बनाना चाहते थे जो ब्रिटिश गवर्नमेंट को स्वीकार नहीं था। इसके बाद यह सवाल बहुत दिनों के लिए मुलतवी हो गया और सर जार्ज सुंटर के समय यह बैंक बनाया गया। उस समय भी जहां तक सरकारी सदस्यों का सम्बन्ध था, वहां यही राय थी कि यह बैंक राष्ट्रीय हो। उस समय भी हमारे आज के माननीय मंत्री श्री० नियोगी जी भी इसी राय के थे कि यह बैंक सरकारी बैंक ही बनाया जाय। लेकिन वह बात नहीं मानी गई। जिस तरह से हमारी हर बात ठुकरा दी जाती थी उसी तरह से यह बात भी हमारी ठुकरा दी गयी और यह बैंक शेयर होल्डर बैंक बना दिया गया।

आज स्वतंत्रता प्राप्ति के एक वर्ष बाद हम इस बैंक को राष्ट्रीय बैंक बना रहे हैं। जैसा कि अर्थ-मंत्री जी ने कहा कि जहां तक हमारा आर्थिक प्रश्न का सम्बन्ध है वहां तक हमारे आर्थिक प्रश्न संतोषजनक रूप से हल नहीं हो सकते जब तक कि यह बैंक सरकारी बैंक नहीं बना दिया जाता है। लेकिन इसके साथ मैं यह भी कहना चाहता हूँ कि राष्ट्रीयकरण की जो भावना इस देश में है उसका यह आरम्भ मात्र ही है। आगे चलकर इस दिशा में और भी बहुत कुछ करना है।

जहां तक रिजर्व बैंक का सम्बन्ध है अभी जो बिल हमारे सामने पेश है उसमें सिर्फ उसे राष्ट्रीय ही बनाने की बात की गई है लेकिन उसके राष्ट्रीय बनने के बाद बहुत से दूसरे सवाल उपस्थित होंगे। इन सब सवालों को हल करने के लिए हमें और भी कई बिल इस असेम्बली के सामने पेश करने होंगे। एक प्रश्न स्टर्लिंग बैलन्सेज (Sterling Balances) का है। अभी हमारे स्टर्लिंग बैलन्सेज हमारे यहां नहीं हैं। वह विलायत में हैं। स्टर्लिंग बैलन्सेज का सवाल बहुत दिनों से उठा है और रिजर्व बैंक के राष्ट्रीयकरण के बाद यह सवाल सामान्य रूप से उपस्थित होता है कि हमारे स्टर्लिंग बैलन्सेज कहां रहें। यदि हम अपने देश को स्वराज्य और पूर्ण स्वराज्य में देखना चाहते हैं तो हमारे रिजर्व बैंक को ब्रिटिश गवर्नमेंट के

मातहत चीज नहीं रखा जा सकता। वह भी पूर्ण स्वाधीन बैंक होना चाहिये जिस तरह स्वाधीन देशों में एस बैंक होते हैं।

इस बिल में इस प्रश्न का हल किया गया है कि शेयर होल्डरों को उनके शेयरों का कितना रूपया दिया जाय। १०० रुपये के शेयर का रूपया १०० रूपया ही दिया जा सकता तो मुझे विशेष हर्ष होता क्योंकि यदि हम रिजर्व बैंक के पुराने इतिहास को देखें तो हमको मालूम होगा कि ज्यादातर रिजर्व बैंक के शेयरों (Shares) का भाव १०३, १०४, और १०५ रहा है। एक समय वह, १५० के ऊपर चला गया था लेकिन बहुत थोड़े दिनों के लिए, लेकिन आज वह फिर घटकर ११३ हो गया है। इस सम्बन्ध में जो निर्णय किया गया है उसका मैं समर्थन करता हूँ क्योंकि उस दिन के हमारे अर्थ मंत्री श्री० चैट्टी साहब ने कहा था कि एक वर्ष तक हर महीने की पहिली तारीख को शेयरों का जो भाव रहा है उसके अनुपात से उसकी औसत मिलाकर शेयर होल्डरों को रूपया देना चाहिये और उसके अनुसार ११७ या ११८ के लगभग आता है। मैं समझता हूँ कि सरकार की ओर से जो बात कह दी गई है उसी पर कायम रहना चाहिये। जनता को इस बात पर विश्वास रहा है कि सरकार ने जो कह दिया और जो नीति घोषित कर दी उस पर वह स्थिर रहती है। मैं इस बात को पसन्द करता कि १०० रूपया के शेयर का १०० रूपया ही दिया जाय खासकर इसलिए कि उसका भाव बहुत ऊंचा हमेशा नहीं रहा और हमारे शेयर होल्डरों को बराबर व्याज भी मिलता गया परन्तु सरकार की तरफ से चैट्टी साहब की घोषणा के कारण सरकार ने शेयरों की कीमत जो देनी निश्चय की है मैं समझता हूँ वह उचित है।

अब रिजर्व बैंक के राष्ट्रीयकरण के बाद दूसरे अनेक आर्थिक मामलों का सवाल उठता है और मैं यह कहना चाहता हूँ कि इन सवालों में इम्पीरियल बैंक का सवाल बहुत बड़ा सवाल है। इस सम्बन्ध में भी नीति स्पष्ट हो चुकी है कि हमको इम्पीरियल बैंक का राष्ट्रीयकरण करना होगा। जब तक इम्पीरियल बैंक का राष्ट्रीयकरण नहीं हो जाता तब तक हम रिजर्व बैंक के राष्ट्रीयकरण करने का पूरा लाभ नहीं उठा सकते हैं।

जहां तक इम्पीरियल बैंक का सम्बन्ध है मुझे जो कुछ कहना है वह यह है कि इम्पीरियल बैंक सदा सरकार का लाडला पुत्र रहा है। मालूम नहीं क्यों ऐसा हुआ लेकिन शुरू से हमने यह देखा कि रिजर्व बैंक की स्थापना के पहिले और आज भी वही हाल है। हमको जितने भी शिड्यूल बैंक्स (Scheduled Banks) हैं सबको एक नज़र से देखना होगा और सरकार का जो रूपया इम्पीरियल बैंक में जमा रहता है वह सब शिड्यूल बैंकों में समान रूप से रखना होगा। आज जो बैंक शिड्यूल हैं वह नाम मात्र के शिड्यूल हैं। उनको शिड्यूल मान लेने से उन्हें कोई बड़ा लाभ नहीं है। उनको शिड्यूल बैंक मानकर सरकार उन्हें जो सबसे बड़ा लाभ पहुंचा सकती है वह यह है कि इम्पीरियल बैंक को लाडला पुत्र मानना छोड़ कर दूसरे शिड्यूल बैंकों को उमी नज़र से देख और रिजर्व बैंक का ऐजेंट इम्पीरियल बैंक ही न रहे जाय। यह बात मैंने इम्पीरियल बैंक के

[सेठ गोविन्द दास]

विषय में इस समय इस लिये अर्ज कर दी कि रिज़र्व बैंक और इम्पीरियल बैंक का आपस में बड़ा घनिष्ठ सम्बन्ध है, और रिज़र्व बैंक के राष्ट्रीयकरण के बाद इम्पीरियल बैंक का राष्ट्रीयकरण बहुत जल्द होना है। मुझे आशा है कि अर्थ मंत्री इस बात पर विचार करेंगे।

जैसा मैंने आरम्भ में कहा कि मुझे बड़ा हर्ष हो रहा है कि रिज़र्व बैंक का राष्ट्रीयकरण हो रहा है और इस नीति को स्वराज्य के बाद आज हम अपना रहे हैं।

[At this stage, Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (one of the Panel of Chairmen)]

मैं आशा करता हूँ कि जो बिल पेश हुआ है उसका सारे देश में स्वागत किया जायेगा और हमारे राष्ट्रीयकरण की जो नीति आरम्भ हो रही है वह दिन पर दिन बढ़ती जायेगी।

मैं माननीय अर्थ-मंत्री जी के इस बिल का जो उन्होंने इस भवन के सामने रखा है, हर्ष से समर्थन करता हूँ।

(English translation of the above speech.)

Seth Govind Das (C.P. and Berar: General): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this Bill brought by Mr. Neogy. Just as Mr. Neogy has recollected many past events while presenting this Bill, similarly I am also-recalling many such old things. The proposal to set up a Reserve Bank in addition to the Imperial Bank was first of all mooted in the year 1926. At that time I was a Member of the Council of State. What should be the value of our Rupee in terms of Sterling 16d. or 18d.; whether our country should also have gold currency and lastly whether a Reserve Bank should be set up—all these three things were brought before the Assembly by Sir Basil Blackett, the then Finance Member. At that time a question arose whether this should be a shareholders' Bank or State Bank. So far as I can recollect, Sir Basil Blackett did not favour the idea of making this a Shareholders' Bank. Although he did not tender his resignation for this very reason, yet it was rumoured at that time that the main cause of his resignation was that he wanted to make this Bank a national concern which was not approved by the British Government. After this, this question was deferred for a pretty long time, and this Bank was set up during the time of Sir George Schuster. It was then the unanimous opinion of non-official members that this Bank should be a national concern. At that time my honourable friend Mr. Neogy who is acting as the Finance Minister today was also of the opinion that this Bank should be a State Bank. This view also was not accepted, just as all our suggestions were turned down, this too met the same fate and this Bank was constituted as a Shareholders' Bank.

Today after one year of our having achieved independence, we are going to nationalize this Bank. As the Honourable the Finance Minister has stated so far as our economic problems are concerned, these cannot be satisfactorily tackled until and unless this Bank is nationalized. Along with this I would also like to say that this is only a step towards the feeling of nationalization that prevails in the country, and in future we have still got to do a lot in this direction.

So far as the Reserve Bank is concerned, the Bill which has just been brought before us only seeks to make it a State-owned institution. After its nationalization, many questions will arise. We will have to bring forward many other Bills on the floor of this House to solve these problems. One of the questions relates to Sterling Balances. At present our Sterling Balances are not held by us in this country. These are lying in the United Kingdom. The question of Sterling Balances has been engaging attention since long and after the nationalization of the Reserve Bank, this question would naturally arise as to what happened to our Sterling Balances? If we desire our country to attain full freedom, we should not keep our Reserve Bank subordinate to the British Government. This Bank should be a sovereign body just as is the case with the banks in other free countries.

This Bill seeks to provide a solution of the problem as to the amount of compensation that should be paid to the shareholders for the acquisition of the shares held by them. It would have given me a genuine pleasure if a share worth Rs. 100 could be acquired at par, because if we trace the past history of the Reserve Bank, then it would be observed that the selling price of its shares had remained more or less at Rs. 103, Rs. 104 and Rs. 105 per share. Sometime it shot upto Rs. 150 and more and this price ruled for a few days only—but today it has again come down to Rs. 113. I support the decision arrived at in regard to this matter because the then Finance Minister, Mr. Chetty had stated that compensation should be paid to the share-holders at an average rate calculated on the basis of the price of a share prevailing on the first day of each month during the preceding one year and according to these calculations it came to approximately Rs. 117 or Rs. 118. I feel we should stick to the commitment already made by the Government. The people have all along held the belief that the Government adheres to the statement made or the policy declared by it. So far as I am concerned, I would have appreciated if a share of Rs. 100 is acquired at par especially in view of the fact that its price never remained very high and moreover our share-holders had been regularly in receipt of dividend accrued thereon. The rate which the Government have decided to pay for a share in view of the declaration made by Mr. Chetty on its behalf is quite reasonable.

Now after the nationalization of the Reserve Bank, we are confronted with many other economic problems, and I would like to say that of these problems the Imperial Bank is a major problem. The policy of nationalizing the Imperial Bank has already been elucidated and unless the Imperial Bank is not nationalized, we can not derive full benefit from the nationalization of the Reserve Bank.

The Imperial Bank has all along continued to be the pet child of the Government but I do not know the reasons for this. We find from its very inception that even before and after the formation of the Reserve Bank, the conditions are the same. We will have to treat all the scheduled banks similarly and the Government's money that is deposited in the Imperial Bank will have to be equally shared between all the Scheduled Banks. The present-day scheduled banks exist in name only. They do not derive any appreciable benefit for being 'scheduled banks'. The greatest benefit that the Government can bestow upon these banks consequent on their inclusion in the Schedule is that it should no longer treat the Imperial Bank as its pet child, and on the contrary assist all the scheduled banks in the country equally, and the Imperial Bank should not be allowed to function as the sole agent of the Reserve Bank. I have made this suggestion in regard to the Imperial Bank at this stage, as the Imperial Bank and the Reserve Bank are very closely associated with each other, and after the nationalization of the Reserve Bank the Imperial Bank should also be nationalized without any delay. I hope the Honourable the Finance Minister will consider this suggestion.

As stated at the outset, I am feeling great pleasure that the Reserve Bank is being nationalized and we are adopting this policy today after the attainment of independence.

[Seth Govind Das]

[At this stage, Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (one of the Panel of Chairmen).]

I hope that the Bill which has been presented will be welcomed throughout the length and breadth of the country and our policy of nationalization, a beginning in respect of which has just been made, will soon be adopted in other directions as well.

I heartily support this Bill which has been brought before this House by the Honourable Minister.

Mr. Hossain Imam (Bihar: Muslim): Mr. Chairman, Sir, I welcome this measure. It gives me great pleasure that after 15 years when, as a member of the Select Committee to which this Bill was referred, I along with eight others had signed a minute of dissent demanding a State Bank, it has been fulfilled. It is a sad thing that out of 14 members of the Upper House and the same number of members of the Lower House the Legislative Assembly, today, in this House there are only two members present: I from the Upper House and Mr. B. Das from the Legislative Assembly. Out of the 28 members who sat in the Select Committee, only two are left in this House. In the case of members also I do not think there are more than half a dozen of the old Legislative Assembly and Council of State who were present when that Bill was passed.

While I welcome this measure, I feel that while the marriage has been celebrated between the Reserve Bank and the Government of India, this illegal connection with the Sterling has been allowed to exist in the shape of sections 40 and 41, linking the Rupee to Sterling at a specific ratio. While everywhere the provision of Sterling has been avoided and foreign exchange has been substituted, that material section which affected the value of the Rupee has been left as it was. I do not, Sir, mean to say that there has been any disregard by the Government. What I wish to point out is that for the objective for which this Bill has been brought, that is, nationalisation, it is quite sufficient as it has been brought. But that does not end the affairs of the Reserve Bank and the country. What the country wants is a ratio which would be in the best interests of the country. I should like to remind the House of the reasons for which we adopted the 1s. 6d. ratio. It was then stated that we are not asking for any specific ratio, but we are accepting whatever was the then prevailing rate as a temporary measure. That temporary measure, Sir, has lasted for 15 years; that temporary measure has lasted for two years since the National Government has been in power. I think it is time that a final decision was taken on the subject, what is the ratio which we wish to have with the sterling and with the other countries. We have on the one side the example of Australia which has appreciated its currency.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Newzealand.

Mr. Hossain Imam: Newzealand also has appreciated its currency. I have got no specific idea to place before the Government. What I wish is that a temporary measure cannot last for 15 years. We must have some permanent measure, whatever may be in the best interests of the country. I am, Sir, one of those who believe in consultation and in examination. The matter should be examined from the point of view of the industrialists, from the point of view of the consumers and from the point of view of trade and commerce. Taking everything into consideration, we must come to a final decision on what should be the rate of exchange.

Similarly, Sir, I regret that the artificial valuation of gold which was provided for in the Reserve Bank Bill, in section 33, I think it was, should have been continued. The valuation of gold is purely artificial. That too does not come under the purview of this Bill. This Act is for the specific purpose of nationalisation. I would therefore suggest that while it is quite all right, that the Bill is not being referred to a Select Committee now, I think it is necessary that a comprehensive Bill should be brought forward by the Government on the subject of the Nationalised Reserve Bank, that should be circulated, and referred to a Select Committee and finally decided in the course of a year or so. It is very necessary that, to maintain the dignity which India has acquired in the councils of the world, we must try to increase the production and trade of India. That can only happen if we have all the circumstances necessary for this. Banking plays a very important part and the need for a sound banking system of practice and law is so great that it is most essential that within a measurable time Government should find time to bring forward a comprehensive Bill to regulate all these things.

Shri B. Das: (Orissa: General): The House gave a mandate to the Finance Minister to nationalize the Reserve Bank. The interpretation of the Finance Ministry had been, as my honourable friend, Mr. Neogy read out, to bring the share capital of the Reserve Bank into public ownership. My honourable friend, Mr. Hossain Imam has pointed out that the House is not satisfied with the Bill. What the Government should do, what the Minister of Finance should do, is to appoint a Committee of this House and outside experts to see that the Reserve Bank becomes a real National Bank and not the hand-maiden of the Ministry. My honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, reminded us that you Mr. Chairman and I were the two of the Lieutenants in that small Democratic Party whose leader was Mr. Neogy that fought in this House against all the reactionaries that co-operated with the Simon Commission and the Round Table Conference and all those who wanted to obey the mandates of Whitehall. If we then had to accept this Reserve Bank Act, we had no alternative. We found that even the 1935 Act which was then framed, would not be framed without our considering and establishing the Reserve Bank: and that is how it came into existence.

My honourable friend, Mr. Neogy said that the Finance Ministry and the Reserve Bank of India should be married as the British Treasury and the Bank of England have been. I pity the Finance Ministry and I pity the Reserve Bank. The Reserve Bank had been the slave,—the maid of the old lady of Broad Needle Street—the Bank of England throughout the British Rule. It still remains misused maid-servant. Can Act No. 2 of Sterling Balances 600 millions in the Bank of England be operated and transferred elsewhere. I wish to hear it from Mr. Neogy that if he has the power today to take out that account from Bank of England and put it into the international monetary fund bank. Can he do it? Certainly not. The Reserve Bank is still subordinate to the Bank of England. If it is not, I do hope my honourable friend will direct the Bank of England to transfer those 600 million sterling to the international monetary fund bank in the United States of America. Sir, you may remember as I am now quoting a passage from our old friend, Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya, when the Joint Select Committee Report was being discussed in the Legislature. He gave out a doggerel about Schuster and India. It runs:

"So, of Schuster and Ind
Men may say without vapor,
That he found it of gold,
And left it of paper."

Sir George Schuster spirited away £150 millions of India's gold during his guardianship of the finances of India. What has happened thereafter? Everything has been spirited away except the £40 millions of gold that is lying fortunately in India. Sir George Schuster was a Jew and Sir Jeremy Raisman was another Jew. He looted the silver coins of India, the poor man's gold. Silver rupees, eight anna bits and four anna bits were all collected to meet the cost of the battle fronts of the victims of the United Kingdom. Hundreds of crores of rupees went away in this way. That is not the first occasion when a foreign Finance Member looted India's silver coin. Previous Finance Members on several occasions looted the silver currency reserve and used it as the Finance Member's pocket money. That money has yet to be accounted for. The poor man has no money of any value but the paper of Schuster and the nickle rupees occasionally circulated in the market do exist.

[Shri B. Das.]

The Reserve Bank rightly functions like the slave of the Bank of England and the British Raj. The silver rupee was demonetised. The Indian coins Act was tampered with. The Reserve Bank having been in the past the absolute slave of the British Raj and the Bank of England, nothing of worth was left to us. Consequently I am not rejoicing that I am going to have a State Bank. I support it to the extent that I am for it as my friend Seth Govind Das, my honourable friend Mr. Neogy and my friend Mr. Hossain Inam has said in turn. At least we have the first genesis of a State Bank. But what was the complaint of the British Raj then? That "politicians" should not interfere with the Reserve Bank and yet it grew to be the slave of the Bank of England. It could only function as the slave or "one political party"—the British Raj, and it did function well in that capacity and I bear testimony to that. It was faithful and loyal to the Bank of England and the British Raj!

Now the question before the House is, how are we going to make this Reserve Bank into a National Bank. My honourable friend, Seth Govind Das has pointed out that the Imperial Bank of India is Enemy No. 2 of India. There were two enemies before August 15, 1947—the British Civil Service Enemy No. 1 and the Imperial Bank of India Enemy No. 2. If the Imperial Bank would have helped India, India's industries and trade would not have been in the sorry plight that it is in today. It helped every other. Tom, Dick and Harry and every Britisher that came to India with £50 in his pocket and had £50,000 credited to him in the Imperial Bank. I may remind the House that the Imperial Bank was the combination of the three banks—the Banks of Madras, Bengal and Bombay, which were completely controlled by European traders and business men and it existed for them. Unfortunately in 1934 we joined the political dictators in the Indian Government and did not want to recognise the other Scheduled Banks. So the Imperial Bank was asked to have one hundred new Branches and to be the Treasurer of the British Raj and also of the Reserve Bank and continues to be the Bankers of the Central and Provincial Governments. Some of the members of the House must have read the speech of the old pattern Chairman of the Imperial Bank of India last month. What did he say? "We have done our best for Indianisation of officials of the Imperial Bank of whom Ninety-six are Indians and sixty-six are Europeans". Since I became a member of the Central Legislature in 1924, I have agitated that the Imperial Bank should be Indianised and now we find after it has become the custodian of tax payers' money, the representative of the Reserve Bank from 1934, that it still has got 66 European personnel. The Chairman says that the Imperial Bank is going to have another Deputy Governor and that he will be an Indian. Who wants a Deputy Governor of the Imperial Bank? The Imperial Bank should be nationalised. Every European on its staff should be sent away and the Governor must be appointed from the selected Indian personnel of the Reserve Bank.

As my honourable friends have already pointed out this is not a nationalisation measure. If it was so that particular clause—Section 45 on agency of

RESERVE BANK (TRANSFER TO PUBLIC OWNERSHIP) BILL 905

Imperial Bank should have been examined. There may be one or two European employees, in one or two Scheduled banks in India today. Perhaps in the Bank of India there is a European manager; other banks are all managed by Indians. With all these Indian trained personnel in banking why should the Imperial Bank employ so many Britishers who have been carrying on the same tradition as the Bank of Madras, the Bank of Bengal and the Bank of Bombay since 1903.

I wish my honourable friend Mr. Neogy, though he is only the acting Finance Minister, who understands the feelings of this House and the nation, had said something about implication of section 54, regarding the agricultural credit department. You, Mr. Chairman, will remember how we spent days and days in arguing with the British rulers that they should do something through the Reserve Bank for agricultural credit. Nothing has been done. Only one young officer was appointed who is now occupying a very high place in the Reserve Bank. He was appointed to understand the subject of agricultural credit.

If this is a national or a state bank, no such bank should function only to subsidise the present Government in its policy of inflation by employing large number of staff in its secretariat and giving them high salaries month to month. That is not the function of a national Reserve Bank. Nor is it the only function of the Reserve Bank to supply the ways and means for expenditure of a Finance Minister. These are incidental matters. The Reserve Bank must raise the national prosperity and the national income. It has not been able to do it. It has been in the past a slave of the Bank of England. Mr. Neogy may give jewellery and ornaments and dress up this down trodden slave girl to be the national bank of India but it must acquire the free habits and vitality required of it. I do hope that the bank will function in the interest of India and at least 50 per cent. of its attention and opportunities will be devoted to the agricultural industry of India, so that the masses will prosper and not the few capitalists or industrialists or even the Government or the Ministry here and there. Those are mere normal administrative matters.

What is to be done? The House of course must pass this measure. That is the first step but the first step is not the only step. The Honourable Finance Minister must declare that he will immediately appoint a committee to go into the question as to how the Reserve Bank should be nationalised and I want from him also a statement as to when the Imperial Bank is going to be nationalised. The Chairman of the Bank said that the Imperial Bank has been doing great work in the past for the English masters, that it has been doing work for Hyderabad and Pakistan and therefore it should not be nationalised. We do not agree. If it is not nationalised, will Government pass an ordinance today to take out all our resources and transfer them to other national banks, so that these enemies of India or rather the remnants of the enemies of India, the fifth columnist Englishmen that still control the Imperial Bank do not remain in India and work against the prosperity and national economy of India.

Sir, I will conclude by saying that Sir Basil Blackett who was a real friend of India wanted a state bank but vested interests were aligned against him and he had to resign and go away. It was the late Finance Minister, my very old friend Sjt. Shammukham Chetty who drafted this Bill and gave the assurance on the floor of this House that he would nationalise the Reserve Bank. On account of certain circumstances which the House is well aware of, he had to go and nobody regrets it more than I that he is not here as the Finance Minister. However, I congratulate my old, old friend Mr. Neogy, the second national Finance Minister, to whose lot it has fallen to bring in this piece of legislation as a first step towards the nationalisation of the Reserve Bank as the State Bank. I do hope that he will put the ceiling on this nationalisation policy in Banking and nationalise the Imperial Bank or do away with all associations with the Imperial Bank and also see that the Reserve Bank is freed from its slavery of the Bank of England and function as a national bank, of which we will be proud throughout our life as also the future generations of this country.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): Sir, I support the motion moved by my honourable friend the Finance Minister and in doing so I wish to draw his attention to certain facts. The Reserve Bank is the currency authority of this country. It also holds certain minimum deposits on behalf of the scheduled banks. It has certain statutory duties to perform. It also exercises certain rights of superintendence and giving instructions to various banks and as you must have noticed in the Bill that was going to be introduced for regulating banks, further powers are intended to be given to the Reserve Bank, so that it can influence and guide the other banks for the benefit of the country and also exercise a certain amount of control in regulating the investments for the good of the country and for the safety of the depositors and other persons interested in the bank. The Reserve Bank in spite of the fact that it was a share-holders' bank (it has ceased to be a share-holders' bank now) its policy was also guided by the Government as regards the profit; barring the 4 per cent. that was being given to the shareholders the excess over the 4 per cent. was going to the coffers of the State. Therefore not much difference will be made so far as the actual income is concerned but the present-day spirit needs that there should be a change and the word 'nationalisation' has a charm and that is why this is being done. I welcome this measure and I would invite the attention of the Honourable the Finance Minister to certain facts. Certain concerns like the railways and telephones in the big cities like Calcutta, Bombay and Madras have been nationalised and we all well know that after that the management has deteriorated. One thing that should be borne in mind is that the administration and the management should be such that the profits that were being earned by those concerns before they were nationalised should not be lost. After all the idea behind nationalisation is that instead of the profits going to the few—instead of their going to the shareholders—they should be made available for the good of the nation, for the State. If instead of the profits being continued to be earned by these concerns, which are going to be nationalised, the management becomes such that instead of making profits it begins to lose, I do not see how simply the transfer of ownership from private individuals to the State will benefit either the State or the country or anyone in the country. Therefore the one thing that Government should bear in mind is that the administration and the policy should be kept stable. Steps should be taken that with every change of government the policy of the Bank may not change. Suppose the present Government changes and another Government comes; with every change of government if the policy of the Bank also changes, the country is bound to go down hill, and God alone knows what the financial condition of the country might be. Therefore, steps should be taken so that the administration and the policy might be stable. And it must be such that it is used for the benefit of the country.

The only change sought by the present Bill is that the shareholders will go out and the Government become the shareholders. That necessarily will mean that there will be no election of Directors but the Government will be entitled to nominate Directors. In that connection also Government should see that the banks whose deposits will be in the Reserve Bank and who will have to deal with the Reserve Bank—the Reserve Bank will have to deal with these Banks—have some representation in the Directorate. There must be some representation from either the Bankers Institutions of India or some institution which represents bankers and banks, and Federation of Commerce Chambers on the Directorate for giving expert advice. With these words I support the Bill and I welcome the measure.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): Mr. Chairman, Sir, I am glad the Government is taking charge of all the shares of the Reserve Bank. But by that alone it will not become national, in the sense that it will be useful or beneficial to the nation. If the Bank is going to be managed as it has been managed hitherto, the mere fact that the shares have been acquired by Government will make no change whatever, so far as the economy of the country is concerned. Unfortunately, the Reserve Bank has come in for a lot of criticism with reference to the way in which its affairs have been managed. For one thing it has been of no help whatever to the agricultural interests even though it was intended that those interests ought to be served, and there was a separate provision made that there should be an Agricultural Department attached to the Reserve Bank. The only way in which agriculture was helped was through the co-operative societies, and ever since the Reserve Bank was started there has been a tussle and a sort of continuing quarrel between the co-operative societies and the Reserve Bank with reference to almost every sort of help that can be expected in the interests of agriculture. Well, Sir, even after a lot of criticism was levelled against it and Government itself gave help to the agricultural interests, the little help that they can render may be exemplified by the sort of help that they have actually given even in this year of great demand, and also in spite of all the burden that co-operative societies have undertaken for procurement and sale of agricultural produce. The rules that have been framed with reference to this matter have enabled the Reserve Bank to give only Rs. 15 lakhs to one bank during the last year. And in my own Province, when we are advancing something like Rs. 20 crores for these purposes, all that the Reserve Bank could do was to give only Rs. 30 or 40 lakhs. That is the sort of help they are giving. And the conditions they impose for the help they are rendering are something impossible to fulfil—it is not that there is no security or anything like that, but the other conditions which are imposed are so impossible to fulfil that the agricultural interests can get no sort of help from the Reserve Bank as it is conducted at the present moment.

With reference to the land mortgage banks also which were started in some of the Provinces, we had a continuing quarrel—not because the Reserve Bank was going to help us but because the Reserve Bank happened to be the advisers of the Provincial Government. They were so much out of touch with the requirements of the land mortgage banks and the requirements of the agriculturists that at every stage they were giving trouble and imposing conditions which made the working of the land mortgage banks very difficult indeed. I do hope that after the Government takes over the Reserve Bank the same sort of policy will not be continued. And I hope that the Government will see to it that this sort of policy that practically ignores the interests of the agricultural occupation—which is the biggest occupation in the country—will not be continued hereafter. It is with that view that I have tabled an amendment, namely that at least some representation may be given in the Central Board for co-operative societies and other interests. I do not know whether the Honourable Minister is going to accept that, but I can only say that in the interests of agriculture it is absolutely necessary that some representation ought to be given on the Central Board for the agricultural interests whether it be through the co-operative societies or otherwise.

[Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar]

Again, the provisions of the Reserve Bank Act require modification in several respects. Especially sections 17 and 18 which govern the business for which help can be given by the Reserve Bank, require to be amended in the interests of the country and the interests of the small traders and agriculturists. At every turn, whenever any help is asked from the Reserve Bank, they always say under section 17 or 18 they are not in a position to help. That is the answer which always comes in. It is not as if I want any business principles should be avoided or that they should lend money without security or that they should take any risks. But the procedure that is followed and the way in which things are done ought to be liberalised. Unless they are liberalised, nothing can be done.

For instance recently, after a lot of agitation had been carried on all over India and several resolutions had been passed at the Registrar's Conference and in other places, the Reserve Bank agreed to lend some help to the agricultural interests through co-operative societies. The result within the last two years has been this: They promised to give to my Province of Madras—which is supposed to be advanced in co-operation—about Rs. 40 lakhs subject to conditions most of which it is not possible to fulfil. It is not a question of our not being able to get the money. As a matter of fact I was advising the co-operative societies in Madras not to go to the Reserve Bank at all because the way in which they were dealing with us was most unsympathetic. Without their help we can get on. But it is only for the purpose of creating some sort of connection between the Reserve Bank and ourselves that we took about Rs. 50 lakhs this year.

That is the sort of thing that has been going on. I do want the Honourable Minister in charge of Finance to look into the actual working of this Bank and also to the provisions of the Act and the Rules which are framed under it and see that the present state of affairs do not continue and the Bank will be what it is intended to be—a National Bank, working in the interests of agriculturists and other people in the country and to the benefit of the country as a whole.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): Mr. Chairman, Sir, I rise to support the motion before the House. In doing so, I would like to tell the House that this move was pressed upon the Government by the members of my Party not as a measure which in itself would produce the expected millenium, but as a step which is primarily necessary before the Imperial Bank could be nationalised. Therefore, Sir, this innocuous measure before us represents only a very little portion of what we have in mind in order to advance the monetary interests that have to be served in this country.

Sir, I heard with considerable interest the speech of my friend from Coimbatore, Mr. Chettiyar. His experience in co-operative banking entitles him to a great deal of respect. I am sorry to see that he was condemning the Reserve Bank management outright. I am no advocate of those in charge of the Reserve Bank today, but I would not be fair to the present Governor of the Reserve Bank if I did not enter a caveat against the statements of my honourable friend Mr. Chettiyar. Sir, that the Reserve Bank Act was imperfect was realised by everybody. As the House seems to be in a mood to become reminiscient, I would also follow suit and say that in 1938 during a time of a banking crisis, in Madras when I had the pleasure or privilege of meeting Sir James Taylor the then Governor, I was able to extract from him an admission that the Reserve Bank as it then stood was not better than the amalgamation of the Currency Office of the Government of India and the public debt office of the Imperial Bank of India.

Sir, a number of things have to be done before a Central Bank, apart from its other duties in regard to controlling note issue and determining the monetary policy of the Government, could effectively function. One of the things that was necessary was that there should be agricultural warehouses all over the country, supported by a proper Public Warehouses Act which would enable warehouse receipts to be negotiated as Bills and enable Banks lend thereon. I am sure my honourable friend Mr. Chettiyar realises that the present Governor, the moment he took charge, had prepared a draft Bill and circulated it to various institutions interested in public warehousing, but nothing has been done about it for the reason that we had a foreign Government all along and even that foreign Government was so pre-occupied with war effort that they had no time for anything else.

But, to go back to where I began. We were not very particular that the Reserve Bank should be immediately nationalised because we were fully aware that the control exercised by the Government of India over the Reserve Bank was adequate and complete. But the primary object was that we should have a State Bank which could cover the entire country which obviously a Reserve Bank cannot, which would do the functions of the Reserve Bank which my honourable friend Mr. Chettiyar wants, for the agriculturists. We felt there was no institution better fitted for that purpose than the Imperial Bank of India provided we made it a State Bank, which would enter the commercial field as also help the agriculturists and also act as an agent of the Reserve Bank all over the country besides providing increased banking amenities to the people, which only a State Bank can do irrespective of the one sine qua non whether a particular Branch will be paying or not. Sir, it is with that idea in view that we in the Party wanted that the Reserve Bank should be nationalised and the Imperial Bank should be nationalised simultaneously.

Sir, I cannot blame my honourable friend Mr. K. C. Neogy who is doing the thankless work of a stop-gap for the time being in piloting this Bill. When the Bill is passed, it is one good work done. But it is not half, not even a quarter, not even a tenth of the work that has to be done. Why the Government had not followed up their assurance given on the floor of this House on the 4th February last and taken on hand the work of converting the Imperial Bank of India into a nationalised Bank I do not know, but I would like to utter this word of warning to my honourable friend the present Finance Minister and his successor to be, that this country would not accept any excuses from the Government if the Government do not bring forward a measure to nationalise the Imperial Bank before the next Session of this Assembly. Sir, I would anticipate some of the excuses that might be put forward though I am sure my honourable friend would not put them forward. They are: that the Imperial Bank happens to be an institution with its Branches in Pakistan, with its Branches in Burma and in Ceylon. It has got one Branch in Ceylon, one Branch is functioning in Burma and 12 in Pakistan—few of them are functioning and they are not wanted in that country now. It is therefore surprising that eminent industrialists should come forward with a protest against any attempt to nationalise this eminently foreign institution, the Imperial Bank of India. I do hope, Sir, that the Government will realise that while we are thankful that this Bill has been brought forward we do not feel that it adequately meets the situation. It is only a preliminary, a necessary preliminary, to the nationalisation of the Imperial Bank. If the Imperial Bank is nationalised, I think the bulk of the charges that people like my honourable friend Mr. Chettiyar level against the inaction on the part of the Reserve Bank will then disappear; the Imperial Bank could take up that role and even manage all the agricultural warehouses which are necessary to increase banking facilities and so on. So, while I welcome this measure I want to repeat that we want Government to produce before this House a Bill to nationalise the Imperial Bank of India before long.

One or two matters in regard to this particular Bill which would require amendment, I would deal with at the appropriate time, but I would have the House to understand this particular fact that we are merely altering one aspect of the Reserve Bank now, viz., that we shall have the share capital transferred to Government, the Directors should be Government nominees. But in doing so, I would like to draw the attention of the Government to the practice that is being followed in regard to the Bank of England. I had an opportunity of meeting some of the Directors of the Bank of England during my recent visit to that country. The Government, though an absolute socialist Government, has tried to keep the contour of the Bank very much intact. They have introduced a number of new Directors, new blood so to say, but the older element amongst the Directors that is anxious to help the Government and help the economy of the country is kept intact, and that would be a policy which would be worthwhile following so long as the Government get complete co-operation from this class of Directors. Of course, if the co-operation is not forthcoming, there will be no object in insisting on experienced people of the older type being kept only being as nominated Directors.

One amendment to which I would like to refer now is this. In the English Act there is no condition attached—excepting in regard to other occupations, the Directors might have, like being Members of Parliament and all that—in regard to the tenure of office as Directors. The House will realise that in a country like England where there is a plethora of talent, they have not sought to put any limitation in regard to the tenure of office of these Directors. Limiting the term of office of any particular person in authority is a democratic method of ensuring that no man gets a grip over a particular institution, but need we carry it into the Reserve Bank of India, and do we have in this country enough of talent in order to throw away one or two useful people who would probably help the Government in carrying on the work as Adviser to the Reserve Bank of India? I do not know why that clause has been put which limits the tenure of office of the Directors to one of two terms. After all, the choice in regard to a particular person and the continuance of that person as a Director is entirely vested in the hands of the Finance Minister of India, whoever he may be, and if a person is not found suitable and if other persons are available, a change could undoubtedly be made, but for that contingency, I do not see why we should put in the Statute a sort of provision which will tie the hands of the Government and thereby prevent them from making the very best use of the best talent available in this country. It is one of the important amendments which I thought I would bring to the notice of the House at the appropriate time. Barring that, I see that the provisions need not be interfered with at the moment, though there are very many provisions which would probably need amendment, revision and complete recasting later on when we have leisure and we have also brought the Imperial Bank of India in line with the Reserve Bank and we have a proper banking Statute which will enable us to take a comprehensive picture of the entire banking situation in the country and its needs. At the moment, I feel that the Bill as it is should suffice.

चौधरी रणवीर सिंह : माननीय अध्यक्ष महोदय, मैं इस बिल का स्वागत करते हुए माननीय मंत्री से यह प्रश्न निवेदन करना चाहता हूँ कि भारत देश एक कृषि प्रधान देश है और जब बैंक का राष्ट्रीयकरण करने के पश्चात् भी यदि कृषि को बढ़ावा नहीं दिया गया, खेती की उन्नति के लिये

नीति इस्तेमाल नहीं की गई तो मैं तो यही कहूँगा कि वह बैंक राष्ट्रीय बैंक कहलाने का मुस्तहक नहीं रहेगा। खेती का बढ़ावा या कृषि को बढ़ावा किस तरह से दिया जा सकता है, इस सिलसिले में मैं अपने दो तीन नम्र निवेदन करना चाहता हूँ। कल परसों का ही जिक्र है कि हमारे ईस्ट पंजाब के प्रधान मंत्री, डाक्टर गोपीचन्द साहब, यहाँ आये हुए थे। उनकी बातचीत के दौरान मैं उन्होंने हमें बताया कि सेंटर (Centre) के प्रधान मंत्री की तरफ से या किसी और मंत्री की तरफ से कोई पत्र उनके पास भेजा गया है जिसके अन्दर यह जाहिर किया गया है कि अगर पंजाब के अन्दर जमींदारी की अबालिश (abolish) करना है, तो इसके लिये वह रुपया खुद तलाश करें। आप जानते हैं कि ईस्ट पंजाब का सूबा एक गरीब सूबा है। वह इस जमींदारी सिस्टम को अबालिश करने का इरादा तो दूर रहा, आने खर्च चलाने के लिये भी रुपया हासिल नहीं कर सकता। खेती को बढ़ावा किस तरह दिया जा सकता है इस सम्बन्ध में मेरा सब से पहला नम्र निवेदन यही है कि नेशनलाइजेशन आफ लैंड (nationalization of land) के लिये यह राष्ट्रीय बैंक ज्यादा से ज्यादा रुपया दे।

मेरा दूसरा नम्र निवेदन यह है कि जहाँ कहीं खेती मैकेनाइज्ड (mechanized) हो सकती हो वहाँ खेती को मैकेनाइज्ड (mechanized) करने के लिये ज्यादा से ज्यादा रुपया दिये जाने की नीति बनाई जाय और इस काम के लिये ज्यादा से ज्यादा रुपया दिया जाय।

इस सिलसिले में मेरा तीसरा निवेदन यह है कि अभी कुछ चन्द दिन पहले ही इस हाउस में एक बड़ी गर्म और बड़ी जोरदार बहस अनाज की महंगाई और दूसरी चीजों की महंगाई के बारे में हुई थी। मैं इस सिलसिले में यह नम्र निवेदन करना चाहता हूँ कि आग चने का ही मामला लीजिये। चना हिसार जिले में, जो यहाँ से १०० मील है, पांच रुपया मन पर बिका। किसान को वहाँ उसके लिये ज्यादा से ज्यादा पांच रुपया मन मिला होगा और मद्रास के अन्दर उसी वक्त वह ५० रुपये मन बिक रहा था। इसी तरह से दिल्ली से रोहतक मुश्किल से ४४ मील है। रोहतक में गेहूँ के लिये किसान को मुश्किल से १३ या १४ रुपया मन मिले। आज वही गेहूँ दिल्ली में २०, २२ और २३ रुपया मन पर भी मुश्किल से मिलता है। इस सिलसिले में मैं यह समझता हूँ कि यह बैंक इस तरह से मददगार हो सकता है कि जो कोऑपरेटिव दुकानें हों उनको वह ज्यादा से ज्यादा रुपया दे ताकि जो मिडिल मैन हैं जिनकी वजह से देश के अन्दर एक किस्म का हाहाकार मचा हुआ है, वह हट जाय। लोगों का ख्याल है कि किसान लूट रहे हैं। लेकिन जैसा मैंने आपको अभी बताया किसानों को तो उतना रुपया भी नहीं मिलता जितना कि वह आज अनाज पैदा करने पर खर्च करते हैं। इसलिये कोऑपरेटिव शाप्स (Co-operative Shops) को ज्यादा से ज्यादा बढ़ाने के लिये नीति बनाई जाय और इनको बढ़ावा दिया जाय ताकि किसानों को उनसे पूरा पूरा लाभ मिल सके और देश को भी लाभ मिल सके।

एक मेरा नम्र निवेदन यह है कि यह बैंक इस किस्म की नीति जल्दी से जल्दी बनावे कि कोऑपरेटिव मैकेनाइज्ड फार्मिंग (Co-operative mechanised farming) को बढ़ावा दिया जा सके।

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [2ND SEPT. 1948]

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya: On a point of order, Sir. In order to save time, will it not be proper strictly to limit the discussion to the nationalisation aspect? These are extraneous points, which of course are very useful, but they may come in their own time.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Particularly because this is an amending Bill and its scope is very limited.

अब मैं हाउस का ज्यादा समय नहीं लेना चाहता और इस बिल का स्वागत करते हुए भाषण को समाप्त करता हूँ।

(English translation of the above speech.)

Ch. Ranbir Singh (East Punjab: General): Mr. Chairman, while welcoming this Bill, I would like to make a respectful submission to the Honourable Minister that India is predominantly an agricultural country, and even if after the nationalisation of this Bank, no policy is implemented for the development of Agriculture, I venture to say that this Bank does not deserve to be called a State Bank. Respectfully, I would like to make one or two suggestions in regard to the manner in which agriculture can be developed. It is only a few days ago when the East Punjab Premier, Dr. Gopichand Bhargava was here. During the course of a talk, he told us that a letter had been received by him either from the Honourable the Prime Minister or any other Minister at the Centre stating that if it was desired to abolish the Zamindari system in the Punjab, then it was upto the Provincial Government to provide money for this purpose. You are aware of the fact that the East Punjab is a poor province. What to say of finding money for the abolition of this Zamindari system, it cannot even get adequate funds to meet its expenses? As regards the manner in which agriculture can be developed, my first submission is that this Bank should assist in advancing the largest possible amount of money for the nationalisation of land. Secondly, plans should be formulated for giving money to the maximum extent possible for undertaking mechanized cultivation at places where this is feasible.

Thirdly, I may submit that only a few days ago, a heated and lively discussion took place in this House in regard to the soaring prices of foodgrains and other commodities. In this connection I would request you to take the case of gram which may sold in our district which is situated at a distance of 100 miles from this place at Rs. 5 per maund. There the cultivator might have received for this commodity Rs. 5 per maund at the most, but at the same time it was being sold in Madras at Rs. 50 per maund. Similar is the case with Rohtak which is situated at a distance of about 44 miles from Delhi. In Rohtak, the cultivator was hardly paid Rs. 13 or 14 per maund for his wheat. Today this commodity is not readily available in Delhi even at a price of Rs. 20, 22 or 23 per maund. I feel that this Bank can only prove useful if it helps the Co-operative shops by giving them the largest possible amount of money to enable them to provide relief to the middle-classes in whose behalf there is so much hue and cry in the country. People think that the cultivators are robbing, but just as I have informed you the peasants are not even able to realize the same amount they have to spend on the production of the foodgrains. Plans should therefore be drawn up for the expansion of the Co-operative shops to the largest extent possible so that the peasants as well as the country may be able to derive the maximum benefit out of these.

Another submission which I have to make is that this Bank should forthwith adopt a policy for the development of Co-operative mechanized farming.

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya (Madras: General): On a point of order, Sir. In order to save time, will it not be proper strictly to limit the discussion to the nationalisation aspect? These are extraneous points, which of course are very useful, but they may come in their own time.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: General): Particularly because this is an amending Bill and its scope is very limited.

Ch. Ranbir Singh: Certainly. I wanted to say something more but having regard to the rules and regulations and without further discussing this matter, I would like to stress that after the nationalization, you should encourage the co-operative industries as far as possible. I do not now want to take any more time of the House, and while welcoming this Bill, resume my seat.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, I join the chorus of congratulations which have been showered on my honourable friend, the Minister for Finance. Today we are laying the foundation of the nationalisation of industries for which we have fought on so many occasions in this House. I hope our new Finance Minister will not follow the policy of mixed economy, but he will try to go forward and nationalise all the industries and particularly the key industries one by one now that he has begun with the nationalisation of the Reserve Bank. My friends have given the history of the nationalisation of this Bank from 1927 onwards and the Honourable Minister himself was pleased to give us an idea of the labour which he devoted for the dawning of this day which has at last dawned today. Today shall go down as a red letter day in the history of this country when this most important institution in the country is being nationalised. I have read the speeches and the proceedings of the House of Commons when the Bank of England was nationalised and I have seen what a controversy it raised and yet with what courage the Labour Government got it through and now I am sure our industries, such as coal and steel and other key industries will also be nationalised very soon. I therefore think that this Bill is a precursor of all nationalisation that is going to follow, particularly of the main key industries. I also think that the other banks and particularly the Imperial Bank should also be nationalised. Recently in a gathering of distinguished industrialist, grave apprehension was expressed at the prospect of the nationalisation of the Imperial Bank. I am sure our Government which had the courage to nationalise the Reserve Bank will also take measures to nationalise the Imperial Bank immediately after and will not be deterred by the cries of industrialists who want everything to go in the old, old way. Today probably we are faced with the greatest crisis in our country on account of the economic situation and inflation. I hope this nationalisation and all that it connotes will help us in tiding over that crisis. I am sure that once this Bank is nationalised, the hands of the Executive will be very much strengthened in carrying through other measures. I do not want to take much time of the House and I do not want to discuss the clauses of the Bill, but I do feel that the compensation could have been less and I agree with the amendment that my honourable friend, Prof. Shah has given that the shares should be compensated at a lesser price than has been offered. I also think in the interest of curbing inflation, when we want that money should be frozen, we should not give such a heavy compensation as we have offered to give. It is now for many years that the shareholders have enjoyed large dividends and we do not want that at the time of nationalising the concern we should give them such huge compensation. Sir, I think that after nationalisation of the Reserve Bank, we shall soon go for nationalising the Imperial Bank also, because the Honourable Mr. Chetty did give us a promise that the Imperial Bank will also be nationalised. At the fag end of the session, we cannot have the nationalisation of the Imperial Bank Bill discussed here, still I hope in the Budget Session that shall be the first measure that we shall pass. I hope the Honourable the Finance Minister will have the credit of piloting that Bill also in the House and he will earn the gratitude of this country for having placed such a measure on the Statute Book. I heartily commend this Bill and I support it.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): I do not want to go into the details of the Bill. But there is one point to which I attach great importance. The present Bill is a Bill for nationalisation, but even more than nationalisation the question of relieving the currency from the domination of Sterling and consequently with the Bank of England and this is a matter of far greater importance. To some extent this has been achieved by our membership of the International Monetary Bank and the consequent release from the obligation to give sterling for rupees and Vice versa. Still there are many traces in the Reserve Bank Act of India which preserve the old domination of sterling and continues it even though we have achieved political freedom. I think one of the most offensive clauses is Section 33(2) which provides "all the total amount of the assets in the Issue Department of the Reserve Bank, not less than 2/5th shall consist of gold coin, gold bullion or sterling securities" and there is a proviso which says "provided that the amount of gold coin, and gold bullion have stood where they were before". We have gone through the second World War and we all know how owing to the operation of this provision and the other provision regarding compulsory exchange of sterling into rupees, our entire reserve in the Issue Department has become sterling. We cannot get rid of it quickly nor do I want to get rid of it anyhow, but I think it is altogether wrong for a national bank of India to say that we shall in all cases keep 2/5th of our reserves in foreign exchange. The Bank of England does not keep a single rupee as its reserve, nor does it keep a single dollar as its reserve. It is content to live on its own integrity and keep only securities of its own Government and of its own nationals as the reserve. That is also the case with every other self-respecting national bank, but why is our Reserve Bank compelled to do it? I do not mind it keeping it voluntarily because of national necessities, but being statutorily compelled to keep 2/5th of its reserve in gold bullion or foreign exchange and in practice it will mean foreign exchange and which further will become.....

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: It will perhaps help the House if I point out that this particular point is sought to be made in an amendment which I propose in this very Bill.

The amendment is that sterling securities should be substituted by foreign securities.

Shri K. Santhanam: My objection is to foreign exchange also because in the same way as we are today the slave of sterling, we will become the slave of foreign exchange. Supposing you give 2/5th in foreign exchange, there may be de-valuation; they may freeze every foreign exchange. I would like the Honourable the Finance Minister to point out any other bank which says that part of the reserves of their national bank shall be in foreign exchange. I do not mind if you increase the gold, if you add silver and whatever will be in your country will be under your control, but I do not want to put a national institution the control of which will be a foreign agency. I say this is wrong.

I suggest that the Finance Minister should take the earliest step to get rid of these obligations. This is a most non-national, an anti-national obligation to which I want to draw the attention of the House. I do not want to take more time and I hope this particular objection of the section will be removed as early as possible.

Mr. Chairman: I want to put the motion before the House before we adjourn.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: At this hour, I do not propose to detain the House for very many minutes. Most of the criticisms, if I may say so without offence, are somewhat irrelevant to the Bill before the House. The Bill is strictly limited to the object of bringing the share capital of the Reserve Bank of India into public ownership and to make consequential amendments in that connection. I quite admit that the Reserve Bank Act deserves to be subjected to a comprehensive scrutiny with a view to a comprehensive amendment thereof, from many points of view.

A good deal of criticism has been made of the failure of the Government so far to bring forward any proposal for the nationalisation of the Imperial Bank of India. I know what importance the House attaches to that particular question. All I can say is that the matter is engaging the active attention of the Government. My predecessor in a statement which he made some time ago, I think it was on 4th March 1948, said "The Government accept the policy of nationalisation of the Imperial Bank of India. But as the Bank has branches outside India, the Government propose to examine carefully the various questions that would arise in connection with nationalisation of the Bank before the policy is implemented". I have nothing to add to that statement. As a matter of fact, the proposition is so complicated that I am afraid it will take some little time for the Government to be able to come forward with any concrete proposals.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: May I ask whether the Honourable Minister will give an assurance that he will straightaway appoint an officer on special duty for the purpose of devising measures to nationalise the Imperial Bank?

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I do not know, there may be some officer whose main attention is engaged on this question. Whatever it is, I am prepared to give an assurance that every possible step would be taken for the purpose of accelerating the process of the consideration of this question.

Seth Govind Das: If the Honourable Minister gives way, I shall ask only one question. Is it expected that by the next session of the Assembly, something concrete would be done in this respect and some Bill would be brought forward in this House? This assurance was given by the then Finance Minister in March 1948.

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya: May I raise a point of order, Sir? This question is irrelevant to the question of the nationalisation of the Reserve Bank. I am sorry the Honourable Minister himself has fallen into the trap set for him and to prolong the discussion on this aspect would be mere waste of time.

Mr. Chairman: That is not a point of order. The Honourable Minister may proceed.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I am not in a position to give a categorical assurance as desired by my honourable friend. As far as I can see, no assurance of any kind was given by my predecessor as to the time that would be taken for the purpose of bringing forward such a measure. I entirely agree that this is irrelevant to the present issue; but I felt that the House, at least some of the members who have spoken, would be extremely unhappy unless some assurance was given on this particular point. I was rather surprised to find my honourable friend Mr. Hossain Imam making a statement as regards the subservience of the Rupee to the Sterling. As a matter of fact, sections 40 and 41 of the Reserve Bank Act were suitably amended some time ago in 1947 and the particular subservience that he has in mind has been abolished. It is not obligatory on the part of the Reserve Bank either to sell or buy sterling as required under the old Sections.

[Shri K. C. Neogy].

My honourable friend Mr. Himatsingka very rightly stressed one aspect of the matter. He wanted to be assured that the administration would not deteriorate as a result of nationalisation. I can give him that assurance without any qualification. I may tell you that although the frame-work of the administrative authority is being changed, we would see to it that the Reserve Bank of India continues to function as a fully autonomous body and that the counsels of the different interests which find representation at the present moment through election on the management, would still be available to it, although the institution is being nationalised.

My honourable friend Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari also perhaps had that in mind when he said that the contour of the Bank should be kept in tact. I have no hesitation in giving that assurance to him as well, and further, that business principles would, as far as possible, govern the administration of this Bank subject to the instructions which the Government may have to give to it in pursuance of any general policy.

Now, I do not think that my honourable friend Mr. Santhanam should have been so exercised over that particular clause that requires the holding of foreign securities as part of the assets of the Bank. Apart from other reasons, as a result of our membership of the International Monetary Fund, we are expected to maintain foreign securities to an extent. That creates confidence. Now, the question whether a minimum should be prescribed in this behalf is another proposition.

Shri K. Santhanam: May I know whether there is any specific provision in the International Monetary Fund to that effect?

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Not at all; but it is expected of us, so as to strengthen our reserves. As regards the minimum proportion, that is a different matter altogether. I should like to have some time to consider this point. I may say at the moment it is, not merely that this minimum is maintained, but that it is sometimes very nearly 90 per cent. of the assets of the Bank that are maintained in the securities mentioned in this particular clause.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: It was 90 per cent.; it is not so now; it is cut down by 280 crores.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: The minimum fixed is two-fifths. As a matter of fact, it represents much more of the assets today. If anything turns upon this particular minimum being maintained, it will have to be examined.

Last of all, I want to repeat that this is a measure which is limited, very strictly limited, to the issue of nationalisation. I can assure the House that the Government would at the earliest possible moment take up this particular Act for the purpose of a complete revision so that any suitable measure that may be necessary for the purpose of carrying out the further amendments and the further improvements either in the working of the Bank or otherwise may be undertaken by way of legislation. That is all I have to say.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill to bring the share capital of the Reserve Bank of India into public ownership and to make consequential amendments in the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Friday the 3rd September 1948.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

[PART II PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.]

Friday, 3rd September, 1948.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I).

11.30 A.M.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. Speaker: I have received notice of an adjournment motion from Shri Deshbandhu Gupta. Is the honourable member moving it?

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): No., Sir. As the Honourable the Home Minister is willing to make a statement tomorrow in reply to a short notice question I do not propose to move it.

ELECTION OF DEPUTY SPEAKER

Mr. Speaker: The next item on the agenda is the election of the Deputy Speaker.

In accordance with the provisions of sub-rule (3) of Rule 8 of the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) Rules of Procedure and Conduct of Business, I have to announce to the honourable members that nomination paper duly filled in has been received on behalf of Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar for the office of Deputy Speaker. The names of the proposer and the seconder are as follows:

Proposer—Shri Satyanarayan Sinha.

Secunder—Shri T. T. Krishnamachari.

As no nomination paper has been received on behalf of any other member I declare Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar duly elected.

I take this opportunity of congratulating the House as also Mr. Ayyangar on his election as Deputy Speaker. While I convey to Mr. Ayyangar my felicitations, I think he will permit me to share them for my good luck in having a colleague like him. Mr. Ayyangar is perhaps known more closely to many honourable members of this House than I myself can claim. I first came in contact with him in January 1946, when I was elected President of the late Central Legislative Assembly. Ever since that time, I have felt closer and closer to him, and I have had more and more regard for his abilities, studious habits, judicial temperament and, above all, his moderation combined with firmness. He has been imbued with a spirit of Congress principles and has suffered for the achievement of Congress ideals. His services to the country cover a wide field. Besides being an office-bearer in various Congress organisations, he has served as a lawyer, as a legislator, as a satyagrahi, and—many may perhaps not know,—as a journalist also. I am happy that the Assembly has elected him as Deputy Speaker and given me a colleague who will always be available to me for consultation and advice, in my task as Speaker of the Assembly.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): Sir, I may be permitted to add a few words to what you have said in regard to the election of our friend and colleague Mr. Ayyangar to the Deputy Speakership. All those who are members of this House—and I hope most people outside—realise the extreme importance of the Speaker of this House. He is the repository of the wisdom and the dignity of this House. It is exceedingly important that the Speaker should fulfil those qualifications and should guard not only the freedom of this House but all the other qualities that this House as a corporate entity possesses as representing the people of India. A great deal of the success of this House has been due to the way in which you, Sir, occupied the Chair and conducted the proceedings. It is now right and fitting that the House should elect a Deputy Speaker who will fill in a worthy manner that place when you happen to be absent and should carry on that great tradition which we have been fortunate in inheriting from you. It is rather difficult perhaps to talk in terms of comparisons, but I think I am right in saying that none of us can bring that knowledge of parliamentary procedure, that—as you said—combination of firmness and moderation, as our colleague Mr. Ayyangar can. I may say that from the point of view of electing him to this high office none of us had any doubts. But a certain doubt did creep into our minds as to whether this election might put some kind of a barrier between him and us. That doubt arose because he has become such a pillar of strength to us in our debates and in the work of this House that many of us hesitated slightly before we took the final decision. But two facts weighed with us. One was the obviousness of the choice. It immediately came to mind that this is an obvious choice for this high office; and the second was that it is after all no barrier to the close association which members of this House are going to have with him, quite apart from his functioning as Deputy Speaker, even in the debates and other activities of this House. Therefore that slight hesitation that weighed in our mind was removed, and we welcome him with great satisfaction and pleasure.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Sir, I am extremely thankful to you and the Prime Minister for having spoken such kind words about me. In 1925 when I was chosen as a member of the Legislative Assembly representing the Congress in five districts, I was considered to be a dark horse. Everybody said in my constituency that they had not known me and it was the strength of the Congress that pushed me through. Even now I may be a dark horse to many. Whatever words you have spoken and whatever words have come from the mouth of the Honourable the Prime Minister I have to justify in the future. I may still be a dark horse for both of you and others. I assure you, Sir, that I shall do my best to keep up the traditions of this House.

I have always been outside this House. I was trained to talk and talk and do nothing else. Inside this House I continued that tradition. Then I was in the last bench on your left and progressively by talking more and more I came to the first bench. Today, Sir, and hereafter, I have to learn another virtue—the virtue of silence. Hitherto I thought that speech alone was effective, but after I saw you—I have seen you for the past two years—I have learnt that looks and the facial expression are more effective. Sir, I may be quite all right and equal to the occasion, but I shall make every sincere effort to put a seal on my lips except when I may have something to say on points of order and calling out to members, Order, order! I shall try to deserve the confidence you have reposed in me. I am glad to learn that all my friends are willing to put me there but I assure you, Sir, that I value this very much more than any other office which is the gift of others. I thank you once again.

REQUEST FOR ALLOTMENT OF TIME FOR DEBATE ON HYDERABAD AND KASHMIR

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Before we proceed to the other business, may I remind the Honourable the Leader of the House about the hope that he expressed on Tuesday last. I am reading from the statement that he made.

Mr. Speaker: He may raise those points afterwards.

Shri H. V. Kamath: To-morrow being the last day. . . .

Mr. Speaker: He may put his points after the formal business is put through and the resolution is taken up.

But I may mention one thing for the information of honourable members, namely, that in case they want to raise any point, it is desirable that they should contact the Speaker in his Chamber before the House commences its business, apprise him of the point they want to raise and then, of course, they should ask for permission.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Very well, Sir.

COMMITTEE TO EXAMINE RULES OF PROCEDURE AND CONDUCT OF BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Speaker: As stated in the House by me on the 31st. August, 1948, when the Rules for regulating the procedure and the conduct of business were adopted by this House, I appoint a Committee under my Chairmanship consisting of the following:

- (1) The Honourable Minister of Law.
- (2) The Deputy Speaker.
- (3) Shri K. Santhanam.
- (4) Shri Khandubhai K. Desai.
- (5) Shri Satyanarayan Sinha.
- (6) Dr. P. S. Deshmukh.
- (7) Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad.
- (8) Shrimati G. Durgabai.
- (9) Shri Ajit Prasad Jain.

The Committee will examine the rules as adopted and will suggest, for consideration of the House, such amendments as it thinks proper after taking into consideration suggestions from members, if any.

Members wishing to suggest amendments to the rules may kindly communicate the same to the Secretary of the Constituent Assembly (Legislative) upto 1st November, 1948.

The Committee will hold its meeting in my Chamber sometime about 3rd week of January, 1949, shortly before the Budget Session on a date to be notified later, and its recommendations will come for the consideration of the House, during the course of the next Budget Session.

PRESENTATION OF REPLICA OF ASHOKA PILLAR

Mr. Speaker: I have a pleasant announcement to make to the honourable members of this House. Sardar Sant Singh's name, though known to some of the members, is perhaps a new one to many members. He was a member of the old Legislature from 1930 onwards till the new elections in 1945. He was a staunch supporter of the Congress. In memory of his long association with this House, it was his desire that he should present to the House a replica of the Ashoka Pillar. The gift is singularly appropriate, as we have adopted the Ashoka Wheel on our National Flag and the Four Lions with the base and Wheel as our symbol.

The honourable members will see the presentation replica on the Secretary's table in the House. It is a nice little piece.

I have considered it proper to respect the sentiments of Sardar Sant Singh and accept, on behalf of the House, the present he has made out of respect and love that he has for this Legislature. I am sure, the House will join me in conveying our thanks to Sardar Sant Singh for the present.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): On a point of information, Sir, was this manufactured in the Gun Carriage Factory, Jubbulpore?

Mr. Speaker: I do not know anything about it.

REQUEST FOR ALLOTMENT OF TIME FOR DEBATE ON HYDERABAD AND KASHMIR

Shri H. V. Kamath (C P. and Berar: General): Sir, may I by your leave remind the Honourable the Leader of the House of the hope he expressed on Tuesday last, the 31st August? I am reading from the statement he made last my memory should betray me.

"That before the House adjourns. . . ."

Mr. Speaker: What is it that he is reading from?

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I have compared it with the official typescript, and it is correct.

"That before the House adjourns, whatever Government may have to say with regard to Hyderabad and Kashmir will be laid before the House."

As tomorrow is the last day of the Session, I crave your indulgence to remind him of it today.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): The honourable member is perfectly right in reminding me of a statement that I made the other day. It was Government's intention and my desire that we should make a statement in regard to Kashmir and Hyderabad. I hope, still, to say something about it but I want to be very frank to the House that we have been put in a slight difficulty because certain delicate negotiations are proceeding in regard to Kashmir. The United Nations Commission is here, and in fact we had put it to them whether we should make public certain facts and they have requested us for the present not to do so. So we are put in a slightly difficult position. It would be improper for us to ignore their requests. Nevertheless, I hope to make some statement, not perhaps as full as I would have liked it to be, but some statement before the House adjourns.

Shri H. V. Kamath: On Hyderabad also?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: As I said, some statement I hope to make in regard to both the matters.

STATEMENT RE INFLATIONARY SITUATION

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): Sir, before the debate on the resolution is resumed, I should like, with your permission, to make a statement. Certain untoward developments have taken place as a result of speculation regarding the action which Government might take in the monetary sphere to deal with the inflationary situation. There has been, in certain places, a rush for the conversion of hundred rupee notes at the banks into notes of smaller denominations. Hectic purchases of gold have been taking place with the result that gold prices have reached new high levels. All this seems to be due to entirely unfounded rumours regarding the possibility of Government taking drastic deflationary action. Though certain rather vague suggestions in this respect have been made in the many and divergent views which Government have received, I wish to make it clear that Government have no intention whatsoever of demonetizing hundred rupee notes or refusing to pay the full value of any notes. It will take a little time before Government reach a decision regarding the anti-inflationary measures to be adopted for dealing with the present economic situation. I have no hesitation however in making an immediate declaration that Government will not entertain any proposals for devaluing currency. In particular, I should like to make a definite announcement—

(i) that Government will not demonetize 100 rupee notes, nor pay only a part of the value of any currency note; and

(ii) that they have no intention to freeze any part of any Bank deposits.

It is most unfortunate that wild rumours have found credence with the public, and it is of the utmost importance that public apprehensions in this respect should be allayed immediately. I hope this assurance given by me on behalf of the Government will have a reassuring effect. I would like the widest publicity to be given to this statement and I appeal for the co-operation of the House and the public in restoring confidence.

AGREEMENT

1. The Federation of Khasi States, hereinafter referred to as "the Federation", agrees that all existing administrative arrangements between the Dominion of India and the Province of Assam on the one hand and the Khasi States on the other hand shall, with the exceptions noted below, continue in force until new or modified arrangements have been arrived at between the respective authorities concerned.

2. The exceptions referred to above will be as follows :—

Judicial Powers—

- The Federation will set up a competent Court of the Federation to exercise the judicial functions formerly vested in the Political Officer.
- In matters of customary law there will be no appeal from the Court of the Federation. In other cases, as at present, an appeal will lie to the Governor until a High Court of Assam is established when such appeal will lie to the Assam High Court.
- The judicial authority now exercised by State Courts in respect of Khasis will be maintained.
- In regard to all non-Khasis the judicial arrangements now existing will continue for the present except that the judicial powers of the Political Officer will be vested in the Court of the Federation when its competence is recognised. Where non-Khasis have voluntarily agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of a State Court that Court will continue to be the original trying court.
- Where State Courts comply with certain conditions to be laid down they may be vested with First, Second or Third Class Powers as defined in the Criminal Procedure Code and their jurisdiction would then include both Khasis and non-Khasis. The appointment of magistrates to the States' Courts and to the Court of Federation will be subject to the approval of the Governor in regard to their judicial competence. The Chief Justice of the Assam High Court, when established, will assume this power now vested in the Governor.

Administrative Powers—

With the exception of the following three subjects all the remaining administrative functions would be common with the Central or Provincial Government under the terms of the standstill arrangement outlined in paragraph 1 above.

Exceptions.—(1) Excise—Subject to agreement with the Provincial Government regarding the fixing of duty, etc.

(2) Forests—The Chief Conservator would act in an advisory capacity to the Federation in regard to the management and control of the Forests.

(3) Land and water rights and the revenue derived therefrom.

3. Revenue.—The member States of the Federation have agreed that the balance of the Khasi States Deposit Account should be handed over to the Federation and that future payments to this Deposit Account should also be made over to the Federation until fresh arrangements have been reached in regard to the contributions to be paid to the Federation by individual States.

4. Khasi Territory in the Province.—The Federation request that all possible help should be given to facilitate the unification of all Khasi territory.

All Khasi villages which desired to rejoin States of which they had formerly formed a part should be allowed to do so.

Other Khasi territory in the Province should, if they desired, be allowed to join the Federation as units.

5. Legislation.—In matters of legislation concerning subjects of common interest passed by the Assam Legislature there should be some machinery either by representation in that Legislature or otherwise set up whereby the legislation, where necessary, can be adopted or modified to suit the conditions and circumstances existing in the Khasi Hills.

Mr. Speaker: I have also to inform the Assembly that upto the time fixed for receiving nominations for the Standing Committees for the Ministries of in the past, notably a Professor Schumpeter who has described the modern capitalist as a decadent specimen who is neither here nor there. I personally as a member of the Congress Party welcome any offer of co-operation and the fact that these people have resiled from a stand that they took in November 1947, I think, augurs well for the future of the country.

Sir, it would not be possible for me in the limited time at my disposal to deal with the various points raised in these memoranda. But I would say this, that one particular matter on which the Economists and the industrialists disagreed, namely, taxation, would probably merit some examination. The industrialists want that capital gains tax should be removed and why, I don't know. I cannot understand how the incidence of capital gains tax which comes into operation only when there is a transfer of capital from one person to another can possibly have any additional inflationary effect. I see the economists pleading for going back to the position as it obtained in 1947 in regard to rate of Super-tax, Sir, I have examined the position. In the case of a person who has got an income of one lakh of rupees the gain that he gets by the revised scale of taxation is Rs. 3,000 and in the case of a person whose income is Rs. 30 lakhs, the gain that he gets by the revised scale of taxation as recently laid down is Rs. 20,000. How an addition of Rs. 3,000 in the case of an income of a lakh of rupees and Rs. 20,000 in the case of an income of Rs. 30 lakhs could possibly add to the inflationary trends in this country passes my understanding.

I therefore feel that there is no case made for steepening up the position of taxation in this country which, in all conscience, stands fairly high in comparison with the tax structure in any other country in the world. Actually, Sir, if we feel that something has to be done in order to mop up the extra purchasing power in the hands of those who are well to do, I would rather that we adopt the somewhat inequitable, somewhat unscientific but nevertheless salutary measure of a capital levy, which is made once for all, which will have no repercussions on the market for any length of time as once it is collected would leave the economic in peace. I thought the economists would make that suggestion; but they have not done so. The position of the tax structure in this country undoubtedly needs revision as it is true that the present taxation does not allow any surplus for investment in the case of the higher income group. Notwithstanding a theory to the contrary by Professor Pigou. I think it is generally recognised that a tax structure which leaves very little surplus at the top will mean very little incentive for investment. It is rather a case for the Government having to take courage in their hands and if they feel, if they want, that private enterprise in industry should remain, they should alter the tax structure rather than go back to the position in 1947.

I would like to refer to one or two other factors in this connection. There has been a general recommendation in regard to the stopping of all expenditure on capital schemes. I understand that the Honourable the Prime Minister has issued instructions to all departments that they should not go ahead with any programme that they have on hand which will involve capital expenditure.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee (Minister for Industry and Supply): Unless considered essential.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: There is a proviso, "unless considered essential." Any way, that is perfectly right, if there is no suspension of that type of capital expenditure that we have in view for the next five or seven years which would not be wholly inflationary, except in so far as the amount spent on labour or perhaps on construction of accommodation is concerned if actually we can get capital goods from abroad to start industries, that would help production. On the one hand we have the sterling reserves, limited as they are, available to us. I shall close in a few minutes, Sir. On the other hand, we have an opportunity of getting some assistance in the United States even if it were indirectly. For instance, I am aware the Government of India have been exploring the possibilities of getting assistance from the International Monetary Organisation and probably also from private Banking interests in the United States. I think some plans have been formulated. What we have to do is to go ahead with these schemes and see how far we can get foreign loans for the purpose of carrying on these capital ventures that we have in view. Again, Sir, it is rather difficult to see how the expansion of telephones can be inflationary. The equipment will, by and large, be obtained from foreign countries and very little extra labour will be imported into the scheme. It would not be inflationary. At the same time, I agree that there has to be a slight reversal of the Government policy in regard to building construction. While on the one hand, I think the policy at present is that private building should not be encouraged in order to allow the Government to meet its own needs, I think that that policy will have to be reversed. If we have to mop up the surplus purchasing power in the hands of the people, what we should do is to encourage private building for the time being and to put a check on the Government expenditure on building which is definitely inflationary. Any public works of that nature is definitely inflationary.

One more word about this particular matter which I would like to say, before closing, is this: The economists and perhaps the industrialists have referred to certain social aspects of Government undertakings, for instance, prohibition. That is a controversial issue. Actually, from a purely detached point of view, prohibition is inflationary in the sense that it puts more purchasing power in the hands of those people who are not in the habit of saving and who do not actually have the means of saving. It also prevents some flow of money into the coffers of Government in the shape of excise duties and in the shape of Income-tax that will be obtained from the Abkari contractors. But that is a matter in which the feelings of the people are deeply involved.

Another question which more or less related to it is the problem of the liquidation of Zamindaris. A recommendation has been made that the question of Zamindari liquidation should be postponed. If you would give me a couple of minutes, Sir, I would elaborate on this point.

Mr. Speaker: The rule is very clear on the point. The rule says, no speech on a resolution, except with the permission of the Speaker, shall exceed fifteen minutes in duration. The honourable member is really asking my permission. I have given him twenty minutes by now. I find a large list of members who are so anxious to speak. So, I would request the honourable member to curtail; in fact I wanted to suggest in the beginning that in view of the large number of members who are anxious to speak, the time limit should be ten minutes. I do not know what the members are going to speak in ten minutes. I wish we must have a smaller number of speakers making better speeches rather a larger number making no speeches. But that is a matter left to the wishes of the members.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: This question of Zamindari liquidation is intricately connected with the land economy in our country. That is also connected with the question of prices of food crops. The money that the Government of India have spent since 1943 on the Grow More Food Campaign has been actually thrown into the drain. We have not produced a single blade of corn for all these crores of Rupees that we have spent. It has only added to the inflationary trends that existed. The whole question of food production is intimately connected with land ownership. The man who actually tills the land has no incentive whatever to produce more. I was myself a representative of a predominantly land owners constituency and I have in the past tried my best to get an increased prices for their produce. But, I have always felt that the man actually working on the land got nothing out of it. The Provinces are dealing with one aspect of land ownership, which must in its train bring other reforms; that is the question of the abolition of Zamindaris.

[Shri T. T. Krishnamachari]

The fact that the mere idea of pumping money into the hands of the Zamindars is inflationary, should not encourage the Government to postpone this. The Government can certainly devise ways and means by which the money that is paid to the Zamindars would be immobilised in the shape of non-negotiable bonds, at any rate for the time being, for the next five or six years. I do feel that the crux of the entire problem of producing more food without which we can never stabilise the prices is that our land economy has got to be completely re-organised. In that view, I would like to say that the Government should not, however inconvenient it may be, however much technical advice may be against it, do anything to impede this small measure of reform which would be the precursor of many other repress in the land economy to come.

Before I sit down, I would like to utter a word of warning. All these recommendations are made more or less within the four walls of a room without the people realising that any suggestion made by responsible people has got grave consequences. One such effect of this kind of talk, the Honourable the Prime Minister has indicated this morning. I know, Sir, the position is not so grave as some people think. I would like to say to this House and to the public outside that as a member of the party which is in power, I feel that this Government is competent, completely competent to face any issue that might arise which might threaten to jeopardise the economy of this country. Things are not very bad. Things are much worse in France; the situation in China is terribly bad; the position is the same in most of the European countries; the Latin American countries are in the grip of grave inflation; still they survive. So far as we are concerned, in this country, we have a Government which commands the complete support and loyalty of the people. We have a Prime Minister who is perhaps one of the biggest statesmen in the world who is willing to take big risks. I would therefore, as a member of the Congress Party, like to assure the House and the public that the position is not so serious; the position can be rectified; there is no room for panic; and the Government, wise as it is, will not take any steps to unduly affect any particular interest, at any rate, for the next three or four years to come. The question of long-range policy of altering the economic system is a matter which will have full publicity and perhaps will have to secure the imprimatur of the electorate. In the meantime, placed as we are, I think there is absolutely no room for any panic of any sort. Government should give the assurance that while taking these measures they will do nothing which will press unduly on any particular section of the public. Such an assurance will prepare the country for the few measures of regimentation that Government will undoubtedly have to undertake to help to save the distress that now exists in our economy.

Shrimati Renuka Ray (West Bengal: General): Sir, since the House last discussed this Resolution we are well aware that Government have consulted various groups and are considering all possible remedies in regard to the inflation coupled with falling Standards of Production that is taking place in this country and is getting more serious every day. It is undoubtedly true that every day's delay means a day lost and we must do all that is possible to check inflation so that we may not be faced with the same situation as China. At the same time, I agree with my honourable friend Mr. Krishnamachari that there is no reason for the tremendous panic in the public mind that seems to be prevailing; and I would also humbly submit that there is no reason for panic also so far as Government are concerned. It is very distressing to learn that the economists have suggested—and this suggestion has been put forward by others also—that measures should be taken to curtail expenditure on development plans, particularly in such matters as nation-building projects such as education and health, or rather "social services" is the word that has been used. I submit that this would be a suicidal policy. The very foundation of our progress and prosperity will depend on these services being brought in; and today even if we are faced with an economic crisis I would say that the last thing we should do is to curtail any expenditure in regard to these essential services. I do not say that economies in different departments should not be effected wherever it is non-essential expenditure, even in regard to those departments which deal with nation-building services. But at the same time priorities should be fixed; and whatever happens let there be no curtailment of expenditure on development schemes and nation-building projects.

I will now turn to this question of inflation and the consideration of certain ways and means by which it can be checked. I will not go into any details as to the causes of inflation which started during the last war, for those are well known. The compelling force of circumstances made the previous Government to bring in a measure of control and regulation of prices and distribution of certain essential commodities. This scheme was brought in, however, in a very half-hearted way, and compared to the same measures taken in the United Kingdom we were far behind them. We are all aware of the fact that a good deal of black-marketing and corruption has resulted and that the administrative machinery was not in many ways adequate to meet that and deal with controls satisfactorily. As a result when the National Government came in it was decided to introduce decontrol gradually or partially. I was one of those who held even then that this was a mistaken policy, and today I think the effects of decontrol are only too apparent. The greatly enhanced prices prevailing today as compared with even the black market prices which were prevalent in this country just before decontrol came in are an eloquent testimony to the fact that decontrol has had very grave repercussions on our economy. I would not say that decontrol is the cause of inflation but certainly it has aggravated the inflationary tendency beyond all question; and I suggest that the first measure that Government must undertake would be to reimpose the system of controls and try to improve the machinery of administration and bring in measures for stringent punishment of offenders. I feel that Government can only go ahead with this if they can get public co-operation fully. It is no use for us today—we who have rights as free citizens—not also to bear our responsibilities; and if we ask Government to provide adequate machinery to see that the system of controls is satisfactorily worked and that there is no black-marketing and corruption, let me also say that it is the duty of each one of us as citizens to help Government in this matter. It is not even enough to say that I do not buy in the black market or that I am not a black-marketeer. If we come to know of any one who is going in for blackmarket operations it is the duty of each one of us to come forward whatever may be the cost and the harassment, and to give such information to Government. It is only in this way that we can expect the National Government to be able to achieve success.

Sir, I have not much time at my disposal but in regard to the withdrawal of idle hoards of surplus currency a large number of suggestions have been made by economists and by industrialists in this matter. I want to say that the system of compulsory savings and the scheme that my honourable friend Mr. Khandubhai Desai has put forward is one which I think would be a very salutary one. It is true that a certain measure of inequality will result even if we fix the minimum level—say of Rs. 500 as it has been suggested—over which incomes will be liable to a proportion of deferred payments. But at a time like this I think the country and the people, if they are properly apprised of the situation, will be willing to abide by such a decision, and make the requisite sacrifice.

[Shrimati Renuka Ray.]

I will not go into other details except to say that the raising of the rate of interest is of course an obvious method of deflation but it has its repercussions, and may have very bad repercussions if it is managed in a manner that leads to very sudden deflation. Therefore I suggest that Government might attract small savings and get them for productive use by raising the rate of interest on Government bonds and National Savings Certificates and making them non-negotiable for a period of three to five years. I think this is a very important measure and I hope Government will consider this adequately and put it into operation immediately.

I will not go into details about the measures that ought to be adopted in order to bring forth money that has hitherto evaded taxation. The House has discussed it at length and I am sure Government will do whatever is possible. But here again the co-operation of the public is necessary for Government to achieve any measure of success. There are other methods such as the levying of a steeply graded death duty and increasing the rate of business profits tax, which I hope Government will bring in.

There is just one other point that I should like to stress. I hope Government will undertake the control of the important export of all commodities and set up a corporation on the lines of the U. K. C. C. This will be a means by which they will be able to adjust to the needs of the production drive, and by fixing the rate of the margin of profits, extra money will go into the hands of Government and will be withdrawn from ordinary circulation.

Sir, I have not much time left. I want to end on the same note that I made a little while ago that it is very essential that there should be public co-operation with Government. Sir, I must point out that there is in this country a definite trend amongst certain groups of capitalists—I do not include all private industry or private enterprise—to corner the Government and force it with different posers. For instance, their poser is that if you do not stop the working of this Tax Investigation Commission, which is trying to get the money that has evaded taxation, then there will be no money for production. Another poser is that unless you do away with excess profits tax and the like, money will not be forthcoming for production. I would ask Government and the country to take due note of the fact that in such a national crisis this element in the population—these people who have vested interests—are unwilling to come forward—even now they are unwilling to combine with the rest of the country in helping Government to overcome this crisis. I would say to the public that if you want that the Government shall not be cornered by this group of industrialists or capitalists, then it is your duty—and the duty of each one of us—to help the Government to counteract, and to help in all such measures to stop corruption and blackmarketing in this country, and to prevent real power from being concentrated in the hands of a small group of big business.

Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru (U.P.: General): Disagreeing with my honourable friend, Mr. Krishnamachari, I think that the position in which we find ourselves is serious, and unless we recognise that it is an extraordinary situation that we have to deal with, we shall not have the courage to take all those measures which are required to restore health to our economy.

Sir, Government sowed the wind in December last and we are now reaping the whirlwind. The policy of decontrol was adopted in disregard of all the known facts of every kind of economic life. A system which protected about 143 millions of people from a rise in the prices of foodstuffs was hastily and almost completely abandoned. We are today the victims of the unwisdom of the Government and their refusal to look facts in the face. And what has, Sir, since December last surprised me even more than the original policy of decontrol, are the efforts repeatedly made by the Honourable the Food Minister to infect people with his optimism regarding the food situation, an optimism which has no relation whatsoever to facts. Prices, Sir, have taken their course regardless of his wishes and assurances. They have mounted up to such high levels that unless immediate steps are taken to control the distribution of foodstuffs, we shall be faced with unprecedented labour unrest.

We have been provided by the Food Department with a memorandum which shows the gravity of the situation. In the United Provinces, Sir, wheat has arisen by more than 100 per cent. since it was decontrolled, and rice has risen by about 70 per cent. But the rise in the prices of rice in Bombay and the deficit districts of Madras has been much higher. In Madras it amounts to about 145 per cent. and in Bombay to about 200 per cent. The Honourable the Food Minister thought in March last when we discussed the food situation during the budget debate that there was no cause for alarm and that he had taken measures which enabled him to claim that no untoward results would follow the policy of decontrol. Sir, if rice and wheat alone had risen, we might have had the satisfaction of feeling that the prices of the coarser foodgrains—bajra and jowar—which are mainly used by the poorer sections of our people, had gone down. But as a matter of fact, the prices of these two foodgrains, too, have risen considerably in sympathy with the movement in the prices of wheat and rice. We thus find, Sir, that all classes of the population are suffering heavily on account of a tremendous rise in the price of foodstuffs. Government, Sir, were very fond of telling us that the prices, though they had gone up since the adoption of decontrol were still lower than the black-market prices. It was, if I may say so with all respect to them, a disingenuous argument. But the facts now in our possession show that in the United Provinces wheat prices are equal to if not higher than those which prevailed in the black-market in December last, and I think, Sir, that if an enquiry were made, it would be found that in most important wheat centres the position was the same.

One of the things that was claimed for the policy of decontrol, which was adopted in pursuance of the recommendations of the Purshottomdas Committee, was that the need for importing a large quantity of foodstuffs would be obviated. But today we find, Sir, that the position has deteriorated to such an extent that the industrialists themselves ask that there should be a liberal importation of the essential commodities including food.

What are we to do in this situation? I had intended to state to the House the rise that had taken place in the price of cloth also. But the reimposition of control over cloth and cotton makes it unnecessary for me to do so. I may, however, point out, that according to the report of the Central Board of the Reserve Bank of India, the prices of the coarser varieties went up by as much as 100 per cent. and of the finer varieties by between 200 and 250 per cent. What are we to do in this situation which is not merely serious but alarming and which calls for urgent and coordinated action? The economists and the industrialists whom the Government of India consulted have made a large number of recommendations. It is not possible for me to pronounce on the soundness of all these recommendations, but I find that there is a general similarity between the proposals put forward by the economists, the industrialists and the labour leaders. Since, Sir, I have only two minutes more I will not deal with this question at length but I will point out that all parties are generally agreed that foodstuffs and indeed the essential commodities should be rationed, that wages and salaries and profits should be frozen, that the inconvertible note issue should not be increased any further and that a campaign for national savings should be carried on. It is further recommended that every effort should be made to increase production. I was rather sorry to hear the Prime Minister in this connection when he said that the partial immobilation of bank deposits suggested by the Committee of economists has been rejected by the Government of India. I personally think that it was a very sound suggestion. However, in my opinion, the most important decision which the Government have to take is what steps they will take to implement the recommendations of the economists and the other parties and help to increase production. And in connection with the latter subject they will have to consider whether in the present circumstances private enterprise is to be given a free initiative or whether it has to be brought under control in the same way as is suggested in the case of the land-owners. I think that while free play should be given to private enterprise it should be controlled and effectively controlled.

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru]

If you will permit me, Sir, I should like to make two suggestions which so far as I can see find no place among the recommendations made by the representatives of the various interests consulted by Government. The first relates to the co-ordination of the economic policy throughout the country. My honourable friend the Prime Minister the other day suggested the creation of a Ministry of Economic Affairs. We have not got the material before us to decide whether the creation of such a Ministry at present is necessary or not. But even if such a ministry were created the need for supervision and guidance by the Prime Minister himself would continue. No overall and effective policy can possibly be followed unless it has the approval and the wholehearted backing of the Prime Minister. Now he has at the present time a very heavy burden to carry, because in addition to his responsibilities as the head of the Government he has to discharge the duties which he has taken upon himself in connection with the External Affairs Department. I venture to think that the duties of the Prime Minister at this juncture are so onerous and exacting and are of so vital a character that it is necessary in the public interest that the Prime Minister should divest himself of his responsibilities in connection with the conduct of the foreign policy. I respectfully suggest to him that he should take the matter into his serious consideration and devote all his time to the performance of his duties as the head of the Government and as its most important representative not merely before the Indian public but also before other countries.

My second suggestion is that as there is at present a plethora of economic advisers and statisticians in the various departments, it is necessary in order to coordinate the policy that a central economic organisation and a central statistical organisation should be created. I put a question on the subject in April last and I received a favourable reply from the Minister of Commerce but so far as I know nothing has been done in this direction. The uncoordinated information and advice which are at present being given by these officers to the Ministries I am sure stands in the way of a unified and well coordinated policy. I hope therefore that this suggestion which, I believe, is supported by the Economic Advisers themselves, will be implemented very soon by Government.

May I say once more before I sit down that the Government must now announce a definite policy regardless of whether it would be popular or not, though so far as I can see the policy of control will be as popular now as it was eight months ago. They should create an atmosphere in which there will be no further expectation of a rise in prices. The suggestions that have been made to them are many and complicated. But one thing they can do and that is to build up the arrangements that are required to control the prices of essential commodities and to control the distribution of some of the most important of them. This is the least step that they should take in connection with the present situation. They can take measures later on—for instance the freezing of wages and salaries and profits, which too is absolutely essential to the reorganisation of our national economy. But the very first step which they must take is in my opinion to bring about control of price and distribution of foodstuffs and certain other essential commodities.

Sir, I am very grateful to you for having allowed me to exceed my time-limit.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): Sir, on the last occasion when this Resolution was before this House I spoke for a while. So far as I remember, I was rather apologetic in the sense that I pointed out that at that moment Government would rather not make any clear and definite enunciation of policy. I am sorry that even today, after about two weeks or so, Government do not propose in the course of this debate, as the House will know and realize, to put forward any precise scheme which they wish to have adopted. But during these last few days—ten or twelve days—we have paid a great deal of attention to this matter, consulted various interests, and as a result of that the House is in possession of the various Memoranda on this subject which are before Government. Because, we do wish to take not only the House but the public of this country into our confidence as to what we are doing and what we are not doing. I hope that before long we shall present—not before this House, I am sorry to say, because the House will not be sitting then, but before the country—our conclusions and our decisions. It might have been possible to put forward one or two decisions even now, in the course of a day or two; but, as some of the Memoranda have pointed out, the subject should be seen as an integrated whole and not dealt with separately. That does not mean again that we must decide about every matter quickly and before we decide about one or two matters. Nevertheless there must be an integrated approach even though the decisions might be about a few matters now and a few later. Therefore we are put in this difficulty that when this very important matter is considered by the House neither I nor my colleagues can state definitely what Government is going to do about this very important problem.

Members will have seen from the abstracts presented to them that there is a fair unanimity in regard to certain matters and there is a wide variety and divergence of opinion in regard to others. In fact the approaches are completely different. So I seek the indulgence of the House not to say anything which may hinder Government's policy on these matters at this particular stage. May I, however, add that some inferences that have been drawn by my friend Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari and my friend Pandit Kunzru are not wholly justified. I have not stopped anything except that I have asked the various Government Departments not to indulge in any superfluous expenditure or to agree during this brief period in regard to any big schemes which might involve large expenditure. That is all that I have done. And I would like to point out to Pandit Kunzru not to attach any wider meaning to what I have said than what I have actually said. At the present moment I can say no more because we are considering these matters. I have used precise language and we stand by the language we have used. As for what other connected matters there may be, they will have to be considered by us, and we shall then give Government's decision in regard to them.

Pandit Kunzru referred to the position of the Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister being concentrated in one person. In answer to a supplementary question the other day I expressed my agreement with this principle that the Prime Minister in such a Government should not have any other portfolio, or any portfolio; he should be in essence a co-ordinating and supervising authority. That is perfectly true; and I have felt that. But the fact remains that we have had a certain difficulty in regard to this matter, and if I may say so with all respect to this House, this question of Foreign Affairs has become extremely complicated. Honourable members criticized me—and rightly—in regard to Delegations that were sent. And often enough those

[Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru]

Delegations are not ideal delegations. But the whole subject of Foreign Affairs is so extraordinarily difficult today that unless one almost specialises in it, not in a broad way—because all of us in a broad way do something about it—but in a particular way, it is very difficult to follow it—the things that happen from day to day, the things that appear in the newspapers, and the many things that happen behind the scenes. And whether it is in a Delegation or whether it is in any other place, for a considerable time the person who has to deal with the subject will be put in a difficulty for the simple reason that he is rather out of touch with those things and he has not considered them as they have been happening. Members may have certain definite opinions by which to approach these problems. Certainly. Yet even a casual word or sometimes a question that is put here is unfortunate in the results it produces. Yesterday I think an honourable member said something about what an Ambassador of ours had said elsewhere. Well if I may say so, the questions that are put here are far more embarrassing from the point of view of our foreign policy, and sometimes they might even lead to rather harmful results. Nevertheless we face those results. If it is very bad we ask the members not to press the question. All these difficulties arise, and it is not a question of having a pleasure trip abroad for anyone—though no doubt many people in some of our Delegations may look upon it as such sometimes—but of the hardest possible work. I am glad to say—and I wish to pay this public tribute to our Ambassadors, and I say so with full responsibility—that the Ambassadors who are functioning on our behalf have done their work extraordinarily well. The average has been very high and I say higher than most countries, higher than the best of countries. Naturally, to begin with, they had difficulties and they have to build up a tradition; but they have succeeded largely. However, my point was the moment I can leave the Foreign Ministership or, in the alternative, the Prime Ministership I shall gladly do so.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): On a point of clarification, Sir, are not casual statements made by our Ambassadors abroad more embarrassing to the Government than questions put in this House?

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: May I point out to the honourable member that even the casual statements are sometimes not casual but they are deliberate and at our instance?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: rose.—

Mr. Speaker: Let there be no further questions on this.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): There are some amendments.

Mr. Speaker: They have already been moved.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I have an amendment in my name on this Resolution.

Mr. Speaker: Two amendments were moved last time. Are there any further amendments?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: I was informed that it was agreed by the party of the honourable member that no further amendment was going to be moved. Is that correct?

Shri Satyanarayan Sinha: indicated assent.

Mr. Hussain Imam (Bihar: Muslim): Mr. Speaker, Sir, the inflation that today exists is neither as serious as has been painted by some honourable members, nor so easy as was pointed out by Mr. Krishnamachari. It has been a product of prolonged action and reaction and as such it is not a thing which can be ended within a short time. It has taken deep root and will take a long time to eradicate.

But, Sir, I am glad to find that the economists have not only agreed among themselves to give us a unanimous opinion, but they have done something which is really remarkable. I feel that about 80 per cent. of their recommendations are unexceptionable both from the labour as well as from the capitalist point of view. They have steered a middle course—they have not stressed too much towards capital. While they have recommended that taxation should be increased in order to alienate capital, they have at the same time had the courage to say that labour's wages should be freezed and that bonuses should not be paid on the ordinary basis but on a production basis. I regard this as a very healthy sign and I hope that the Government, when it frames its final opinion and policy on this, will be guided by the opinions expressed by all sides.

I find that capital also has been very responsive. Their recommendations have been couched in moderate terms—they have not asked for the Moon, they have not wanted that taxation should be greatly reduced, that labour should be penalised; all those things which are usually done by partisans are absent.

The labour viewpoint has been put forward by some of their accredited leaders. I am particularly referring to the memorandum by Mr. Khandubhai Desai; it is a very helpful one and some of his suggestions are exceptionally good. For instance, his suggestion that Government should embark on import and export trade and establish some monopoly, is one well-worth considering. It is not an innovation. Other countries have done it in the past and are doing it at the present. It is only in the fitness of things that our Government should have full confidence in itself and feel that it can tackle the job which others are tackling, if not better, no worse than them. I do not like a spirit of defeatism by means of which the Government feels that industry and commerce is a field which is impossible for it to tackle. We have had, Sir, the experience of the one hundred crores business that we have been carrying on in the Food Department. The purchases that have been made abroad and their disposal in India is nothing to be ashamed of. I know that there has been a great deal of criticism on the handling of the food situation, but considering the magnitude of the affair which we were handling, I do not think that Government has not successfully come out of it. Leaving aside the question of graft and other things which are bound to crop up here and there in a Government organisation if there is not sufficient superintendence and control, baring that, the handling of the food imports has not been badly done by the Government. I therefore suggest that when the Government comes to a final decision, it will consider all the points and give certain things a priority.

What are the things which require to be tackled first and what are the things which could be dealt with as an intermediate step and a final step? I quite agree with the dictum of the honourable Pandit Kunzru that food control should be re-imposed as much as possible. That was a mistaken step when control was removed. Sir, I have a personal interest in this matter because as a member of the Food Grains Policy Committee, for the first time in my eighteen years of public service I differed with my non-official colleagues and sided with the officials. And I feel, Sir, that I did the right thing. I opposed de-control. I feel that it was more sentimental reasons which actuated the Government in removing the controls rather than logic and facts. The circumstances were such that it was thought best to remove the controls but even when the controls were removed it was stated on behalf of Government that if de-control does not bring about the desired results, Government would be prepared to re-impose it with all its vigour. Sir, I want the Government to honour its pledge.

[Mr. Hossain Imam]

In this connection, I should like that Government should give no less consideration to the three or four items which are in competition with food grains. I refer particularly to sugarcane prices. It was one of the most mistaken steps that was taken to increase the price from Rs. 1/2/- to Rs. 2/- per maund. It has resulted in diversion of a large part of land which was producing rice and paddy to sugarcane. I am afraid that there will be a glut of sugarcane this year; it has been brought about by Government's action in U.P. and Bihar. The Advisory Committee was responsible for fixing this price. I hope that the prices will be reduced to the 1947 level.

Secondly, Sir, there is jute. The jute prices are going high and unless an effort is made to control them it would be difficult. In the world market we have got serious competition from cotton and paper, and if the prices go on soaring, we will lose a large part of our foreign markets.

It is therefore essential that a parity with the food prices of December 1947, should be the order of the day and all the things which are in competition—sugarcane, jute, cotton and tobacco—should be brought down to the levels which were prevailing then. If necessary monopoly procurement should be started for these, or centralised purchase organisations from the jute mills and cotton mills should be compulsorily imposed. A centralised purchasing organisation, by means of removing the competition, will immediately bring down the prices and it is essential that for a more balanced economy we should have these things back at the prices which were prevailing in December 1947.

Freezing of wages is one of the most important items in the scheme of things which has the support not only of the economists and industrialists but many of the moderate labour leaders also. As a second line of defence, there must be a concerted effort by the Centre, the Provinces and the States to reduce Government commitments, and in that connection Dr. John Matthai's Department comes first. He has got the largest number of schemes for betterment and improvements. Of course, there are certain things which are essential which are needed for removing the bottlenecks. As far as those are concerned, you cannot even defer them for a day, but all the other parts of his which are purely of a kind of social improvement, he should I think defer for the present.

A suggestion has been made by all sides, namely, the introduction of bearer bonds for Government loans, so that some of the black market money may trickle into the coffers of the Government. I think it is a very necessary innovation and although it may be stigmatized by some as conniving at black marketing, nevertheless we must do that.

I am told, Sir, that income-tax assessments are greatly in arrears. If tightening is applied there and collections are made, if need be we may have again the same old Act which we had during the war of "Pay as you go", in that case, it would help us a good deal.

A new suggestion which I wish to make, which may scandalise some of my friends is this. During the days of rationing, I know that a system was introduced whereby rents were not realised in money but in kind. If the Government—Provincial Governments—would introduce this system of realising the rental in kind from the tenants and from the landlords at the stated Government price, it will help a great deal both to curb inflation and to bring about the necessary quantity of food grains which is required by the Government for this purpose. (An Honourable Member: "But there is no staff for collection.") The staff need not frighten anybody. If you will examine Soviet Russia, you will be simply thunder-struck by the number of staff which they employ there. What are the traders doing? Are they not employing staff? We are entering in the trade, so needless to say we must have staff and it is nothing if the Government which is a responsible Government cannot do that.

It can very easily tackle the job and do it better with the response of the people.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain (U.P. General): They cannot create staff in a day.

Mr. Hossain Imam: Another thing which I should like to say in conclusion is this: This is more a psychological factor. The capitalists are frightened. They fear that the Government, in the nationalisation they visualise, will behave as they are behaving with the zamindars paying nominal compensation. A passing reference was made to this phase, not in so many words of course, but in a very guarded manner, by no less than a responsible person than J. R. D. Tata at the Annual General Meeting of the Tatas when he referred to the abolition of the zamindari in Bihar. They may invest today but within ten years it will be really confiscated, because the way in which compensation has been paid to zamindars is nothing but confiscation. That is their first fear, and secondly, they are frightened that a time may come when even the question of compensation may not arise, because ten years is too short a period and as is well known, in the initial stages industries are unable to pay their way, let alone earn profits. Therefore, Government should increase the duration of the interim period from ten years to at least fifteen years. An assurance must be given that no confiscating legislation will be passed by this House and that Government has every intention to deal fairly and squarely with the capitalists, provided they are fair to labour. Labour must have a fair deal. No one can deny the right and propriety of giving labour every amenity which it deserves, but as I said in the Factories Bill, labour must also behave. It must put in its best and production must increase. It is production bonuses which are required, not profit bonuses. Profit bonuses must be ended and production bonuses must be started. If these three or four steps are taken, I am confident that India will not only weather the storm but will come out with flying colours and that its reputation will become higher than it is today.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Shri Prabhudayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, a number of speakers have given us their views on the great importance of the subject and we are all anxious to find out some solution. There are various causes which have led to the present difficulty and if we want to combat the same, we have to take steps to reduce the purchasing power of certain classes whose purchasing power has increased and also we have to make available in larger and larger quantities the things that they want. If there is an increase of money, that by itself will not be harmful, if we can supply the things to the community to the extent that they need. When the commodities that are required are in short supply and there is excess of money, then the trouble comes in. So we have to examine as to whose purchasing power has increased which needs, if possible, to be curtailed and reduced. Sir, you will find that the purchasing power of the manufacturers, industrialists, labour and agriculturists, has increased considerably. So far as the big people, the industrialists and manufacturers are concerned, they are very few and they cannot affect the purchase of the daily necessities of life. Then we have to see if and whether we should take steps to reduce the purchasing power of labour and agriculturists. It is an undeniable fact that during the war on account of the high prices of their produce commodities, the indebtedness of agriculture has been completely wiped out and on account of the high prices the agriculturists have got enough money in their hands; so also labour. The position was and we all know that most of them were being starved, that they have had not 2 square meals

[Mr. Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka] a day nor did they have sufficient quantity of cloth to put on before. Now that they have got some money, they are anxious to spend that money and as a result you will find, Sir, that they have taken to finer grains like Rice and Wheat rather than Jowar, Bajra and other things that they used to take before the War. Similarly, Sir, on account of the higher purchasing power, you will notice that in the villages if they can get finer cloth, they want finer cloth. These two factors, Sir, have raised the price of these commodities which were previously confined more or less to the towns. Now, Sir, if you want to reduce their purchasing power, we have to take steps to supply things at higher prices by Government imposing some sort of an excise duty or some other tax which will enable the Government to bring in some money. There are certain other ways, as for instance, raising the land revenue and also having some sort of voluntary method of saving and freezing wages at the present level and otherwise taking steps to reduce the purchasing power. If you examine these steps one by one, you will find that raising of land revenue at the present moment will be well nigh impossible. If Government try to take steps in that direction, I think, there will be a good deal of opposition and perhaps Government will find it impossible to take that step. But it should not be very difficult to freeze the wages at the present level, so that there may be no further increase of purchasing power in their hands. Certainly no one will suggest that the wages should be such as not to be sufficiently attractive or should not be commensurate with the amount of trouble that they undergo, but so far as I can judge the present level of wages are just, sufficient and reasonable and there is no room for their increase and if there be any further increase on account of any increased production or otherwise that should be in the shape of deferred payments, so that the same may be available to them at a later stage.

If we take steps to have some sort of saving programme by way of other compulsory methods or voluntary methods, that may help them to save something for their future use. That will require the active co-operation of the population to enable the people in the villages and other places to realize the benefit of such savings. In that connection, Sir, if the Government authorize some of the important banks of the country like the Central Bank of India or the Bank of India, only to mention some of them,—there are so many of them which can be authorized—to issue bearer bonds which will be payable after a maturity of 5 or 3 or 7 years, that might attract a lot of money which is exercising pressure towards inflation. At present the villagers and others find it a bit difficult to invest their money in the Post Office Savings Banks and other places on account of a number of difficult processes that they have to undergo. Sometimes the clerks create difficulty about signature and thumb impression and they have to spend some money. Therefore, they are not much attracted. The banks might be authorised to issue bearer bonds and the money that goes to the bank may be compulsorily invested in Government securities of short periods which will be non-negotiable. Therefore the money will come to the Government and they will also be able to get so much money available to them for their projects; at the same time the pressure on the market will also be reduced.

I will not be long and so far as making supplies available to consumers, there are two things—cloth and food-grains. As regards cloth if Government take steps to make it possible for the mills to work three shifts that will solve the problem to a certain extent and Government may also take steps to increase the production of khadi in the villages by organizing the same.

As regards food production, there are both long term and short term plans and if the Government makes it possible to supply seeds, manure and also make arrangements to bring more land under cultivation, that would also give us more food and that will take away some portion of the pressure. I do not want to take up the time of the House any more though there is much that can be said, as I think, other speakers, will be anxious to speak.

Mr. Speaker: If Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena is anxious to move his amendment, he may do so. As regards the agreement, it is a matter between him and the party. He may simply move the amendment; he need not read the amendment. There is the amendment and it can be taken as read. He will speak on the amendment as set out in the order paper. I will not read it; he need not read it.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in the Resolution for all words occurring after the word 'forthwith', the following be substituted:

take steps to increase production and regulate distribution and expenditure by—

- (a) concentrating attention on increasing agricultural production by formation of democratic village panchayats which should launch patriotic production drives to exceed targets of production which should be fixed for each village by an immediate survey by Central Government with the help of Provincial Governments. There should be introduced a system of special prizes for provinces, districts, tehsils and villages, which exceed fixed targets of production. The district officials must be given authority and full facilities to supply the needs of agriculture like bullocks, ploughs, manures, seeds, implements, wells and other irrigation facilities to village panchayats, and Government must declare that Government officials in districts and tehsils whose areas show the best production results will get promotion and rewards. Any tenancy or other laws which hamper production must be amended wherever necessary;
- (b) a planned development of cottage and small and middle-scale industries on the widest possible scale within the shortest possible time. The Central Government should co-ordinate the activities of all the Provincial Governments in one comprehensive all-India cottage and small scale industries development plan whose execution it should supervise;
- (c) in large scale industry, there should be a check-up of production levels in comparison to war time levels. Inventory of unused capital equipment, industry-wise and unit-wise should be made and a minimum production quota for each unit should be fixed. Substantial 'Production Bonus' to Capital such as rebate on taxation for extra production should be given;
- (d) a central drive to enlist the patriotic enthusiasm of labour in this crisis should be launched. To make this fruitful and effective, provision should be made,—
 - (i) to supply grains and cloth at 150 per cent. of the pre-war prices in the factories on the same lines as is done in grainshops in railways;
 - (ii) to maintain wages at present levels;
 - (iii) to give substantial 'Production Bonus', but to freeze half the amount of Production Bonus earned and invest it in Government securities; and
 - (iv) to launch a drive for trade union unity, and introducing a suitable machinery for immediate resolution of industrial disputes; and
- (e) giving effect to the other suggestions put forward by the nine economists in their report."

Sir, this amendment is conceived in the light of the reports which have been submitted by the various economists, Government economists and others. At the very outset, I wish to say that today we have a crisis of inflation. In 1931 we had a crisis of depression. Therefore, a cycle of crises is overtaking us periodically. Our country must realise that so long as we do not have a full fledged socialist republic in our country, we cannot get rid of these crises. Therefore, I want to say that we must establish a socialist republic in our country. Then and then alone can we get rid of these crises. Otherwise, sometimes there will be depression and sometimes there will be inflation and there will be no end to our trouble.

The industrialists have mentioned that the present crisis is a crisis of confidence. To some extent they are correct. I do say that the policy of the Government should be settled and firm so that nobody may have occasion to say that there is no confidence. I am sure that the party in power enjoys confidence all over the country; probably nobody else has so much confidence. Their declarations should be firm and unequivocal that nobody will be able to say that there is room for hesitation, and they may go forward to act as they want.

Coming to the various plans which have been suggested by the economists, it has been said that the main cause of the inflation is that there is too much money in the country and there are too few goods. That is true. They say that if money is curtailed, then the position will be eased. But, I personally think that while there is a lot of money in the country, the dearth of goods is very great and even if a large portion of the money is withdrawn, still the goods will not be enough to go round. Therefore, it is essentially a crisis of production and hoarding and afterwards a crisis of money being in abundance. I agree with many of the proposals of the economists for withdrawing the money in circulation; but I want that the chief emphasis should be laid more on production. I find in their report the economists have not laid due emphasis on production. Sir, I think about production, there should be both short term and long term plans. If you want to have this inflation controlled, then we must concentrate mainly on agricultural production and cottage industries. If we set about carrying out the plans which I have laid out in the first paragraph of my amendment, if we see that in every village a target of production is fixed and if the Government officials look to it that that target is exceeded and the Government gives promotions and rewards to them for exceeding the targets, I am sure much more food can be produced. I know in the Gorakhpur District, during the last year, one lakh acres of ploughed land were not sown because proper seeds were not available. Such things happen everywhere. If the course that I have suggested is adopted, and the District Magistrate is aware that he will get a reward, he will see that the quota of production is exceeded. The first portion of my amendment in which I have said that the Government must concentrate upon agricultural production is most important and this could be done to a great extent. I know the Grow More Food Campaign has failed; they have gone the wrong way. The Agricultural Department is not functioning as it should and it requires complete overhauling particularly in the provinces.

If we accept the recommendations of the economists, there is a possibility that all development plans may be held up. They have recommended that the plans should be carried out only to the extent that the expenditure on them can be met by borrowing so that there should be no inflation. I think the development plans should go on whatever the cost. Zamindari abolition must take place. Because unless that is abolished, no real agricultural plan can be successful. So far, the country has had three or four plans. One was the Birla Plan; the other was the Peoples Plan of Mr. M. N. Roy; then there is the Gandhiji's plan, and others. In my view, the Peoples Plan seems to be much more comprehensive and much better suited for us. In that plan, they have said that the development of agriculture should be the pivot round which the whole plan which is self-financing will revolve. If that plan is adopted, we will be able to develop agriculture both from a long term and a short term point of view. We must have big farms, State farms and Collective farms which can be run on a co-operative basis. I am convinced that other development schemes like the Damodar Valley Scheme etc., should not be stopped; they should go on and we should not grudge any expenditure on them. Of course, the minimum that is necessary should be spent. Similarly, plans for the development of water power should be taken on hand.

Then there are recommendations about freezing the Gandhi Memorial Fund etc. They have also said that retrenchment should go on. I should like to say one thing in this connection. The problem of unemployment is the most serious problem before the country and we should not add to its complexity.

We should see that the men who will be released on retrenchment should be given some skilled training so that they can be employed on productive purposes and may not add to inflation. Sir, a word about labour. Unless we are able to infuse a spirit of patriotism and enthusiasm in labour, as I have said in part (d) of my amendment we cannot do anything. It is not true that they are flowing with money. I have found that with their present income, they cannot have two square meals. I would therefore suggest that they should get food and cloth at rates which should be 150 per cent above the pre-war level. If that is done, and their present wages are maintained I think the desired result will be achieved and labour will co-operate fully in our efforts.

Sir, in the short time at my disposal, I have tried to mention a few points. In my amendment I think I have said all that I think is necessary to be done.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in the Resolution for all words occurring after the word 'forthwith', the following be substituted:

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): Sir, there is an amendment in my name.

Mr. Speaker: The point is, I was told authoritatively by the Chief Whip that it was agreed that no amendment will be moved. I stated this to the House at the beginning. If Professor Shibban Lal Saksena has insisted on moving his amendment, that is a matter between the party and him. If the honourable member still insists on moving his amendment, he may do so.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I have not so far received any information, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: That is a matter between the honourable member and the Whip.

Mr. E. John Philipose (Travancore State): Sir, in rising to make my comments on the Resolution before the House I do not wish to dwell on the plenitude of alternatives that have been suggested to Government concerning the economic problem that faces us. I have had a copy of the summary of the reports of the various groups, organisations and individuals, and even now various other alternatives are being suggested. So much so that from the point of view of Government this problem seems to have assumed the nature of a jigsaw puzzle or a cross word puzzle to which various alternatives have been suggested and all that remains is to put these in their proper places. I believe this attitude of Government is not correct. I was greatly disappointed with the statement that the Prime Minister made this morning. By asking for suggestions after suggestions and Government keeping quiet and collecting these alternatives you are even creating vested interests in the solution of this problem. I am inclined to think that a demonstration of vacillation and hesitation on the part of Government at this juncture is definitely not conducive to the solution of the problem that is before us. What I want to emphasise today is that this problem should not be viewed in isolation but should be viewed as part of the totality of baffling factors and problems that confront us. Whatever be the solutions that Government may decide on, whatever be the decisions that they arrive at, the real point is how are you going to implement them? That operational side of the decisions of Government is perhaps the most important at this juncture; and what is the attitude that Government have towards that? Sir, I said this economic problem will not be solved in isolation; I said this economic problem that is confronting us should be viewed along with the moral and military aspects of the complex situation that confronts India and her people today. Sir, we all know the tremendous amount of moral degeneration that set in with the war; we all know how with the introduction of control, blackmarketing and lust for easy money became a normal feature. Unless this moral degeneration is removed no decision that is going to be made by Government is going to produce any results. I therefore, even before I came here, in my own State spoke of the moral rearmament of this country. That is the one thing that is essential today. If we decide on certain things to be done there must be the sanction and the good will of the people behind it. You must create that sense of honesty and integrity in public life, an honest endeavour to see that this sort of black marketing and dishonest attitude is eliminated. How shall we do it? The only way is to view it in the context of mass psychology, to create a national fervour. It should not be viewed in intellectual isolation; you may have intellectual solutions based on sound economic principles, but that by themselves could not produce results, unless this Government and the members of this House go out to the country and tell the people that we must regenerate and morally rearm.

Sir, I know my honourable friend Pandit Kunzru has been speaking against the policy of decontrol initiated by Government. I am inclined to think that even Government were not intellectually convinced of its wisdom when they introduced decontrol. They introduced it more because Gandhiji who was the father of the nation had stood by decontrol. He saw all the blackness and the darkness of things, the lack of character, the lust for easy money; he felt that unless that atmosphere was changed, unless the controls that brought these things in their wake were changed nothing could be achieved. It was that unerring faith in the unerring instinct of our Mahatmaji that was responsible for the policy of decontrol. But he is no longer with us and therefore we cannot have that moral leadership, which we had from him; and in the light of that we have got to come down to earth. But when we come down to earth let us not forget the moral values that he held aloft. And how can we solve this problem? I say this Government must tell the people of this country about the magnitude of the problems that face the country; they must tell the people of the tremendous burden of military operations that we had to shoulder, the burden of the military operations that we have yet got to shoulder. This Government have to tell the people frankly that we have got to rearm if we are going to be a powerful nation. It is in the context of these things that even the economic problem has to be solved. And therefore I suggest that it has to be viewed in its entirety along with the factors that make up the situation that confronts India and her people today. I am not making any concrete suggestions, but I want with Pandit Kunzru that the Prime Minister of India should definitely take this up and rid himself of all other responsibilities, and make an appeal to the people so as to create a response for the carrying out of the decisions that this Government make. I know that this Government have got the brains behind them and do not need any intellectual guidance. But I definitely think that the Prime Minister must give a moral lead to this country and create a moral force behind it. It is only then that the decisions of Government are going to be effective in practice.

Mr. T. J. M. Wilson (Madras: General): Sir, everybody is agreed that our present economic problem is low production. But when day in and day out it is dinned into our ears that it is due to the irresponsiveness and lack of a sense of duty and the strikes on the part of the labourers that there is this low production, and when in response to these protestations various remedies are suggested like the nine-hour day and banning of strikes, etc., I feel that we have forgotten the very fundamental factor of our economy which is a colonial economy. If strikes are the cause of low production what strikes are there in agricultural production? The production of our agriculture is ridiculously low, resulting on the one hand in huge expenditure on imports and in the starvation of people on the other. The reason is plain, though some seem to have forgotten it so soon, that a most heinous imperialism has created and preserved a feudal structure of agriculture and a lop-sided industry as its social and economic buttress and to keep this country dependent upon imperialism all the time. Production, agricultural or industrial, can only be increased by a radical solution, by a thorough change of this structure which our imperialist masters had left with us. And it is indeed strange that even for the most rudimentary and preliminary steps in that regard as zamindari abolition so much of strength and energy is wasted in pleading for what is called 'compensation' for perhaps the most valuable and humanitarian services that the zamindars, ever since they came into existence by the ingenious statesmanship of our British masters have done to the people of this country. It is stranger still when I see in these reports certain suggestions to drop this zamindari abolition for the time being, evidently because that compensation which is bound to be paid to zamindars aggravates inflation.

It is the same with industry too—it is the system of production—the system of private enterprise with its profit motive and with its master and slave relationship that is responsible for the low production. If we take the production index during the war years, when there was no control and when huge war contracts were placed by the Government of India with the capitalists, and when therefore they could make huge profits you will see that production was at its highest. As soon as controls were imposed and the war contracts stopped and when they could not secure the huge profits from the impoverished people of this country because they have not sufficient purchasing power for these goods, production fell. Of course a part of what was produced was sent to the black market but the truth is that actually production fell. The eight hour day and the strike wave came long after the clear exhibition of the low production. What is the reason for this fall? It is inherent in the structure of the system of private enterprise—goods are produced for profit and there should be a market which gives these huge profits. But unfortunately for our capitalists, our Imperialist Government had, by issuing and adding to the paper currency of the country, impoverished the masses of this country by immensely reducing the purchasing power of the people and transferring the burden of the war to the people, has thus narrowed down the market to a very small section of the wealthy and higher middle class people.

The problem today is therefore not simply too much money chasing after too few goods, as stated, but the absence of an effective demand for goods to the satisfaction of the capitalists, as a result of the absolute impoverishment of the vast mass of the people of this country. When labourers and peasants and lower middle class people have nothing to buy to eat or to clothe themselves with, it is suggested in the reports that are given to us that there is a lot of purchasing power with these starving people and that money should be withdrawn from circulation from these people by methods like freezing and saving certificates. But if you will look at the index of the prices and wages it will be clear that the real wages are far behind the prices.

The greed for profits in private enterprises is so strong that in the absence of an effective home market it seeks an outside market and hence the solicitude for foreign capital, without whose collaboration it is impossible to secure any access to a foreign market and the consequent control of our economy by foreign capital which would well result in our paying only lip sympathy to the many recommendations of our national Planning Committee and to the high principles which our leaders so loudly professed in days of struggle.

Foreign capital not only wants removal of Tariff barriers, and equal treatment, but also it seeks to dictate to the Government of India an economic policy not only for 10 years but also for 20 or more years, besides the assurance of cheap labour and fair returns, naturally by suppression of labour, and the same sad story of high prices and starving people.

There is no wonder that suggestions are therefore made not only to curtail expenditure on nation-building schemes but also to hold up schemes like prohibition to which the Congress has been so much devoted. It is the natural corollary of the system in which we are living and our utter inability to reverse that system.

It is not as if the economic problem is an isolated one. In fact the economic problem shapes the political problem. Inflation is aggravated by the Kashmir operations and may still be aggravated by certain other more important things which are pending. This would not have been the case if the Government had not relaxed the principles of the Congress and had done more to strengthen the people who would themselves have done away with those out of date feudal mediaeval princes.

Regarding the remedies suggested, there is no doubt that control is absolutely necessary. Surplus and black-market money may be withdrawn by any of the suggestions made and profits should be definitely taxed and income-tax on agriculture may be imposed provided you remove all other taxes on agriculture. Reduction of expenditure at the top administration level and in our embassies abroad is certainly good.

But what I would emphasize is this—that whatever you may seek to do in the existing system of private enterprise with its profit motive would not solve the problem but instead would aggravate the situation and land this country into a most terrible catastrophe—in spite of the so called democratic philosophy and high-sounding principles that are invoked in its favour. The only solution therefore is complete drifting away from this system in which we are now entangled because it is not only immoral with its greed for profit as it was tacitly confessed by some of its strongest supporters like Lord Keynes, but also because it has proved most inefficient and disastrous to the people of this country.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala (Bihar: General): Economists, industrialists labour and all other interests have given their reports on the policy to be followed by the Government. All these reports have been out in the papers and I have neither the time to dilate on those matters which have already been discussed and published and are before the public and the Government, nor do I consider that any useful purpose will be served by my indulging in these discussions, as to by which of the means enumerated whether by means of freezing capital, increasing taxes, issuing loans at high rate of interest etc. The Government should check inflation.

There is one point, Sir, which strikes me most and that is this. Inflation is not an evil by itself if there is sufficient production and sufficient demand for the products and there is sufficient money with all classes of people to purchase the articles. But why are these things wanted? Because we have not got sufficient production. And why is there not sufficient production? If we examine this matter, we shall find that the policy which we have been following is not the right one. We have got no confidence and faith in our own potentialities. We are looking abroad for very minor things. We have lost sight of the fact that with the available means of production in our country at least for food and cloth, one could meet demand.

Secondly, there is such a thing as secrecy—when you are fighting with the enemy you have to keep things secret. You have to make out a plan and not give out that plan to the public before you have properly planned how to meet the reactions if any. Sir, since the time our Government assumed office, instead of allowing things to go on and waiting and seeing how they progressed, they began to discuss and fight on theories as to whether there should be nationalization, whether there should be private enterprise, whether there should be abolition of zamindari and this and that.

When I say this I want to make it clear that I am not against nationalisation nor am I against the abolition of the zamindari system; provided the nationalisation and the abolition of zamindari and other vested interests will ultimately lead to the happiness of the people. What I mean to say is that before you abolish the zamindari have you made out a plan so as to have more production. How are you going to benefit the cultivators who will directly come under you instead of remaining under the zamindars. All these things we have to think out before but we begin discussing nationalisation and many other things instead of doing the proper thing. We simply indulge in theories. If at least private industries were allowed to go on, in the way the same was going on for sometime, I am inclined to think, we could have got some production. Thereafter, after strengthening our hand we could have by and by nationalised the industries. Similarly in the case of other things.

As for looking abroad, it was in 1946 that the last British Finance Minister made it clear that all the means of production in this country have been worked to their last edge and there are no spare parts or anything of the kind available to be put into the existing machineries to maintain them in proper working order. So far as the question of capital goods is concerned you cannot expect anything from abroad for years to come. That is what he said. We have been trying since to get capital goods from abroad but we have not been successful. When our Finance Minister went to England for negotiating the sterling balances we had expected that something would be done in this regard, that some condition precedent will be imposed; viz., that in exchange for these sterling balances we must have so much of capital goods. But we failed. We could not get the capital goods, nor are we utilising our own resources.

Sir, I require few minutes more to complete my point I have raised.

Mr. Speaker: I must be very strict in rationing time now. It has become an anti-inflationary measure! In view of the number of honourable members who wish to speak, I find that it is not possible to reach the whole list or even to call the members who are trying to catch my eye. I therefore propose to extend the session by half an hour. Even then, I do not know whether I shall be able to meet the wishes of all but I shall try my best. This will mean that I shall be calling upon the Honourable Minister to reply at 3-45 P.M. and the Mover of the Resolution to reply at 4 P.M., so that we go up to 4-15 P.M. Then from 5-30 P.M. instead of till 6-30 P.M. we shall sit till 7 P.M.

Shri. Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): Is there any chance to speak for those who are not on the list?

Mr. Speaker: Oh, yes.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, though my name is on the list I do not propose to speak.

चौधरी रनबीर सिंह: माननीय अध्यक्ष महोदय, मैं आरम्भ में अपने मंत्रिमंडल के प्रति किसानों की तरफ से कृतज्ञता प्रकट करना चाहता हूँ। मैं समझता हूँ कि यह देश एक कृषि प्रधान देश है। जिस ढंग से आज हाउस के अन्दर बातें कही गई हैं और जितनी खतरनाक हालत बतलाई जाती है मैं नहीं समझता कि हालत इतनी खराब है। इस देश के अन्दर ६० या ७० फीसदी आदमी अनाज पैदा करते हैं। इस तरह जहाँ तक अनाज का सवाल है वह ६० या ७० फीसदी लोगों के लिए तो हल हो ही जाता है। बाकी कपड़े का सवाल रहा। उसके बारे में हाउस के अन्दर यह ऐलान कर ही दिया गया है कि तमाम कपड़े को फ्रीज (freeze) कर दिया जायगा और कंट्रोलड प्राइस (controlled price) पर तकसीम किया जायगा।

अब जो सवाल बाकी रह गया है वह २५ या ३० फीसदी का कहा जा सकता है। मैं तो इसको दूसरे ढंग से समझता हूँ। यह आवाज जो देश के नाम पर उठाई जा रही है यह उन लोगों की है जो कि वोकल (vocal) है जिनके पास अखबार है। इसमें कोई शक नहीं कि उनके लिए मुश्किलता हुई है और यही वजह है देश में जो शोर है उसका कारण यही है कि जो भाई बोलता है वह देश का नाम लेकर बोलता है। लेकिन देश सिर्फ पढ़े लिखे आदमियों तक या मिडिल क्लासेज (middle classes) तक महदूद नहीं है। इस देश को चार हिस्सों में शकसीम किया जा सकता है। एक इंडस्ट्रियल लोग—उनके ऊपर कोई आफत नहीं है। दूसरे मिडिल क्लासेज या पढ़े लिखे लोग हैं जिनकी फिक्सड (fixed) तनख्वाहें हैं इसमें शक नहीं कि उनके ऊपर आफत है। तीसरे मजदूर

है। जहाँतक देहात के मजदूर और हाथ से काम करने वाले मजदूरों का सवाल है वह बहुत आराम से है। एक वढ़ई आज आसानी से पांच रुपये रोज़ कमा सकता है, एक लुहार भी रोज़ाना आसानी से पांच रुपये कमा सकता है जो सन् ३८ या ३९ में मुश्किल से चार आना या पाँच आना कमा सकता था। और खेती का मजदूर आसानी से दो तीन रुपये रोज़ाना कमा सकता है। तो जहाँतक मजदूरों का ताल्लुक है उनका भी मसला हल हो जाता है। अब बाकी रहे किसान। किसानों के बारे में मैंने आपसे अभी निवेदन किया था कि किसान तो अनाज को पैदा करता है इसलिए अनाज का तो उसके लिए कोई सवाल पैदा नहीं होता। दूसरी चीज़ कपड़ा है। कपड़े का गवर्नमेंट ने इन्तज़ाम कर दिया है और मैं उम्मीद करता हूँ कि वह एक बहुत अच्छे ढंग से और जायज कीमत पर उन तक पहुँच जायेगा। तो देखना यह है कि देश के अन्दर क्या आफत आ गयी है और क्या इन्कलाब आ गया है। जिसका इतना शोर है। मैं समझता हूँ कि अगर इन्कलाब है तो वह सिर्फ मिडिल क्लासेज (middle classes) या फिक्सड (fixed) तनख्वाह वालों तक ही महदूद है। मैं मानता हूँ कि मिडिल क्लासेज (middle classes) ने हमेशा हर एक मल्क में काफी बड़ा पार्ट अदा किया है। लेकिन देश के नेताओं को यह नहीं भूलना चाहिए कि देश की रीढ़ की हड्डी कौन है। वह किसान हैं। आज किसान देहातों में हैं। आप शहरों में इन्फ्लेशन (inflation) की बीमारी देखते हैं पर अगर आप देहात में जायें तो आपको तकलीफ नहीं मालूम देगी न वहाँ कोई तकलीफ है और न वहाँ यह मालूम होता है कि देश में इन्कलाब आने वाला है। बल्कि वह लोग खुशहाल दिखाई देते हैं। जैसा मैंने आपसे अज़ किया कि अगर थोड़ी तकलीफ है तो वह मिडिल क्लासेज (middle classes) तक ही महदूद है। उनके लिये सारे देश से चीप रेट ग्रेन (Cheap Rate Grain) की ढूँढ़ें खुली हुई हैं। मैं समझता हूँ कि यह मसला और भी आसानी से हल किया जा सकता है अगर हमारे माननीय रेल मंत्री लोगों की सहायता करें। श्री भट्ट ने कुछ दिन हुए कि हाउस को याद दिलाया था कि बीकानेर के अन्दर चने सड़ रहे हैं। मैं भी मंत्री महोदय को यह बताना चाहता हूँ कि जीन्द स्टेट के अन्दर, दादरी के अन्दर जितना आप चना चाहें हासिल कर सकते हैं। मैं आपको मिसाल देना चाहता हूँ रोहतक की जो कि यहाँ से ४४ मिल दूर पर है। वहाँ आप साढ़े नौ रुपये मन चना हासिल कर सकते हैं। मगर यहाँ पर चना १४ रुपये मन भी नहीं मिलता है। इसमें कोई शक नहीं है कि पंजाब गवर्नमेंट की लाने पर कुछ रेस्ट्रिक्शन्स (restrictions) हैं पर इसके बावजूद भी इस चीज़ को नज़र से ओझल नहीं किया जा सकता कि इस मामले में जो सबसे बड़ी जिम्मेदारी है वह ट्रांसपोर्ट (transport) की है। जहाँतक जीन्द स्टेट और पटियाला यूनिन का ताल्लुक

[चौधरी रत्नबीर सिंह]

हे म बतलाना चाहता हूं कि वहाँ हजारों मन गल्ले को बाहर भेजने के लिये पर-मिट्टा दिये हुए हैं लेकिन चूंकि ट्रांसपोर्ट के लिए उनको गड्डे (वेगन) नहीं मिलते इस वजह से यह आपत्ति है।

अब मैं आपको फलों के बारे में भी बतला देना चाहता हूं। नागपुर के अन्दर सन्तरो की एक वेगन आठ रुपये में नीलाम होती है और दिल्ली में आपको एक दो और चार आने में एक सन्तरा नहीं मिलता है। तो यह जो आपत्ति दिखाई देती है इसका बहुत कुछ हाल ट्रांसपोर्ट के मिनिस्टर साहब से मिल सकता है। मैं एक और नम्र निवेदन करना चाहता हूं कि पिछले साल गवर्नमेंट ने शहर के लोगों को सस्ता अनाज बेचने के लिए साढ़े २२ करोड़ रुपया खर्च किया और मैंने अभी पिछले सेशन में आपसे निवेदन किया था कि देहात में २४ रुपये से ४ रुपये गूड़ आ गया। जब गूड़ का भाव इतना गिर गया तो आसमान नहीं टूट पड़ा। तो आज मेरी समझ में नहीं आता कि अगर गेहूं का भाव १६ रुपये मन से २४ या २५ रुपये मन हो गया तो किस तरह से आसमान टूट पड़ेगा। तो मैं ज्यादा न कहते हुए चूंकि हाउस के पास समय बहुत कम है केवल यह नम्र निवेदन करना चाहता हूं और अपने मंत्रीमंडल को यह विश्वास दिलाना चाहता हूं कि देश के अन्दर कोई खतरनाक हालत नहीं है। यह देश किसानों का देश है। किसान सन् ३९ और ४० के निस्वत आज बहुत आराम में हैं। अगर किसान खुश है तो देश भी खुश है। और दूसरी बात में यह कहना चाहता हूं कि अगर आप भाव गिराने के लिये कोई एक्शन (action) लेते भी हैं तो आप इस बात के लिए भी तैयार हों कि जिस वक्त अनाज के भाव गिरें तो उस वक्त आप किसान को अनाज उसी भाव से खरीदने का विश्वास दिलाये जिस भाव से उसके घर पड़ता है।

(English translation of the above speech)

Ch. Ranbir Singh (East Punjab: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, first of all I would like to express gratitude on behalf of the agricultural community to the Cabinet Ministers. I know that India is predominantly an agricultural country. It appears that the situation is not so grave as has been made out in this House to-day. Sixty or seventy per cent of the people in this country grow foodgrains and to that extent at least this problem is solved. Now remains the question of cloth. In regard to that an announcement has already been made in the House that the entire stock of cloth will be frozen and then distributed at control price. What remains to be done now is to tackle the problem affecting the twenty-five or thirty per cent of the people. I take it in the other way. The cry raised in the country comes from those who are vocal and who have access to the Press. There is no doubt that they had to face difficulties on account of which all this hue and cry is being raised in the name of the masses. But the country does not consist only of the educated and middle classes. It can be divided in four classes. Firstly, industrialists—they are not gripped by any calamity. Secondly, the salaried middle and educated classes who have got fixed income and there is no doubt that they are in great difficulty. Thirdly, the labouring class—so far as the labourers employed in villages and the manual workers are concerned, they are living comfortably. A carpenter and a black-smith who could hardly earn -/4/- or -/5/- during the years 1938-39 can to-day easily earn Rs. 5 per day. A labourer employed on the field-work can easily earn Rs. 2 to Rs. 3 per day. So the problem is solved inasmuch as it relates to the labourers. Now remain the agriculturists. In regard to the agriculturist community, I had just stated that a cultivator grows foodgrains, and therefore, the question of its supply in his case does not arise at all. The other commodity is cloth in regard to which Government have already adopted necessary measures and I hope that this would be distributed in an equitable manner and at reasonable prices. The cause of all this upheaval in the country which is responsible for all this dissatisfaction has to be investigated. If there is dissatisfaction it is only confined to the middle classes or those who are in receipt of fixed salaries. I admit that the middle classes have always played an important role in every country, but the leaders of the country should not ignore the fact as to who form the backbone? They are the agriculturists. They live in the villages. You find the evil of inflation prevalent in the cities, but if you happen to go to villages, you will not feel any difficulty there. Neither there is any trouble nor any signs of the impending revolution in the country. On the contrary those people look to be prosperous. I have stated that if there is any difficulty that is confined to the middle classes only. For their benefit shops for the supply of foodgrains at cheap rates have already been opened throughout the country. I think that the problem can be solved more easily if the Honourable Minister for Railways is ready to help the people.

My honourable friend Mr. Bhatt reminded the House a few days ago that grams were rotting in Bikaner. I would also like to inform the Honourable Minister that in Dadri in the Jind State you can procure as much quantity of gram as you like. I would like to cite an instance of Rohtak which is situated at a distance of only 44 miles from this place. There you can get gram at a rate of Rs. 9/8/- per maund, but here it is not available even at a rate of Rs. 14 per maund. There is no doubt that the Punjab Government have imposed some restrictions on its export but in spite of this, this fact cannot be overlooked that transport is mainly responsible for this state of affairs. So far as Jind State and Patiala Union are concerned, permits for the export of thousands of maunds of foodgrains have been issued, but owing to the lack of wagons for transport, this difficult situation has arisen.

I would like to say something in respect of fruits. In Nagpur, a wagon containing oranges is auctioned for Rs. 8 and whereas in Delhi, you cannot get one orange for -/1/-, -/2/- and -/4/-. This difficult situation can be considerably eased through the help of the Honourable Minister for Transport.

With all the humility, I would like to make another submission. During the last year the Government spent twenty two crores of rupees for the supply of foodgrains at cheap rates to the people living in the cities and during the last session the price of gur came down from Rs. 24 to Rs. 4 in the rural areas as I have already stated. Heavens did not fall when the price of gur came down so low. I, therefore, really fail to understand what calamity will befall if the price of wheat rose from Rs. 16 per maund to Rs. 24 per maund? Therefore, without taking any much time of the House, I would only submit this and assure our Cabinet Ministers that there does not exist any alarming situation in the country. This is an agricultural country. The agriculturists are to-day living more comfortably than in the years 1939 and 1940. If the cultivators are happy, the country will also prosper. Another thing which I would like to say is that if you at all resort to any action for bringing down the prices, then in that eventuality you should also be ready to give an assurance to procure foodgrains from the cultivator at a price at which it costs him.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, we hear a large number of people referring to this matter as a very critical one. To me it appears to be putting the matter a little too high. What is the position at the present moment? The prices have gone high. They have gone high openly because controls have been removed. But what was the position before the controls were removed? Except to the extent where the transactions were open, under the direction of the Government and their agents, the black market—so called—always registered much higher prices. The ordinary price in the Coimbatore market for a bag of rice when the control was in force was Rs. 55 in the black market. At the present moment it is Rs. 35 to 40. Of course it is open. That is the only difference. The control price, in the old days was Rs. 20. Compared to that control price the present prices are of course very high, and we are now aghast simply because these are prices openly announced and openly recognised. When the black market was ruling in the country nobody could say exactly how the thing was, and this idea of inflation and all that was never talked about.

The second point which has struck me in the whole situation was this. All our lives we have been thinking of giving more purchasing power into the hands of the poorer classes and the lower middle classes. Now for once they have got this purchasing power. The moment they have got that purchasing power we are now proposing to freeze that power. To say 'they should not have that power, take away from them what they have' seems to me to be a very unfortunate state of affairs.

Again, what is taking place? We have been asking for social services, and some of the Provincial Governments have got their own plans of social services. Now we are advised that all these social service schemes should be given up and that all this expenditure which is not productive—I suppose in the sense that it does not give rupees, annas and pies in return—should be stopped. This is one of the things which I for one cannot understand. There is no doubt that the prices have risen, and probably, looking at the thing in the ordinary way, people with fixed incomes—not the other people—find it difficult to get their needs. But what is the remedy? The remedy ought to be to supply what they want, to arrange for the supply of these things.

Sir, a lot has been said about controls and decontrol. What was in existence before? Not regulation of production, not any attempts at production—except giving assistance for what is called the 'Grow More Food Campaign' and all that—but it was all a control of distribution. You can only distribute what you have got. That is not giving more goods for the use of the people who want them. We have to attack the question from the other point. We will have to deal with it from the production point of view. We will have to increase the production. And we have to regulate the production. We have to give some priority to those things which are first. For instance, in regard to production, the main thing is food. What are we doing in that respect? My honourable friend the Minister for Agriculture has spent crores of rupees for the 'Grow More Food Campaign'. So many wells are supposed to have been dug. I do not think people who know the country can say that even half the number—40 to 50 per cent of the wells that have been planned have been actually dug and that they are in a position to serve at the present moment. Well, even with these wells what has taken place? Have food-grains been produced with the help of the wells that have been dug? The figures will show that it is the industrial crops that have increased in acreage throughout India. Taking my own Province—Madras—we have got a very large number of wells dug. Under every one of those wells it is either cotton or groundnut that is grown. The actual increase in the acreage under food-grains is negligible.

Again, what has been done with reference to this food question about which we have been talking such a lot? We have never tried to regulate the food supply with the production—with the possibilities of production in the country itself. We have been getting foodstuffs in large quantities, paying sometimes three and sometimes four times the price that ought to be given or that was in force before. But we never cared to regulate the production in the country itself. Take my own Province of Madras. The actual deficit of grains is 10 per cent. The acreage under cultivation in the whole Province is 14 million acres out of which 10 million acres produce food grains; the other 4 million acres produce what are called industrial crops. Sir, I put the question to the Agriculture Minister: if only he makes it a point to have crop control and enforces production of food grains, of at least one crop in three, that is to say if once every 18 months every acre of land gives food grains, then, Sir, the gap of my Province, the 10 per cent, is covered. Was any thought spent on matters like that? I do not think it has been thought of—at any rate nothing has been done.

Then, agricultural improvement has been talked of. What is happening in my Province is this. We have not got enough manure and the little manure that we have is being distributed by the agricultural men. These agricultural men who are supposed to work for the advancement of agriculture, are keeping shops, they are running shops, they are doing nothing else. As the Chairman of the Reorganisation Committee of the Madras Government, I went into the question of the present set-up of the Agricultural Department. I was told there are eight Deputy Directors of Agriculture looking after these shops. They cannot be abolished simply because of these shops—otherwise they had no work to do. That is the sort of way which these technical men who were trained for agricultural work are being utilised. If only steps were taken to utilise these men for the purpose of producing seeds, distributing seeds and also advising with reference to manures, it will be very helpful.

Sir, I may say there are a lot of manures in the country itself which can be utilised. I was hearing a lot in the olden days about fish manure which was being utilised for several crops. I do not hear anything about fish manure in these days. There was a lot of propaganda done and a lot of fish manure from the West Coast was used in those days. Nothing is done now. Then there is the green manure about which also we talk. There is no systematic effort made in this direction. It was only within the last one year, I think, that the Director of Agriculture was making plans for having these green manures grown. The trouble was that in waste lands which can be utilised for the purpose of growing these green manures, there is no water available; no water is given—not even a single watering—for these green manures. These are matters which ought to be tackled so that production may increase and that increased production may be turned into the channels in which we would require them.

Sir, one or two words more about industry. The same thing happens in industry. Take for instance the cloth production. What is happening? I am glad Mr. Khandubhai Desai drew attention to that. Finer counts are spun in many of these mills. If only you turn it into coarser counts the production can be increased considerably, probably by about 100 per cent. Has that been done? We are so soft to these industrialists who earn large profits. Of course I do not deny I am myself a little bit of an industrialist and I know the difference between manufacturing coarser counts and finer counts. Production can be increased by about 100 per cent by producing coarser counts instead of the finer counts, but still we are allowed to go on as now.

Again, why should they be so chary of increasing the shifts and having a third shift? We have in many places three shifts working. Why should the Government not regulate these?

[Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar]

So, I think, Sir, the solution for our troubles is not restricting the use of money, is not introducing control with reference only to distribution, nor is it freezing of funds and things like that. It is supplying more goods and arranging for distribution of these goods in the proper channels by studying the channels and doing it. As has been said by one of my friends there, we have got so many plans and we are speaking so much, but the actual implementation and doing of things is very little. It is more of what we are actually doing that is wanted, rather than making plans and talking here and elsewhere.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin (C. P. and Berar: Muslim): Mr. Speaker, Sir, it is not necessary for me to speak at length on the causes of the rise in prices; there has been a great deal of discussion in this respect. My opinion is that there is no reason to be panicky because after all it is a National Government, and if the House decides about any measures to be adopted for the decrease in prices, they are bound to be accepted.

The Resolution lays down that a Commission should be constituted to investigate into the causes. In my opinion there is no such reason to constitute a Commission because the facts and figures are known to the Government. Mr. Lari has moved an amendment which lays down that the findings of such a Commission should be accepted; if they are perverse they cannot be accepted; therefore there is no question of that amendment being accepted. One lady Member of this House was so much disgusted with the democratic institutions in this country that she said she wanted a dictator instead of a democracy.

The point which I want to make is this. The present rise in prices is more due to the defective policy of the Finance and the Industries Departments than anything else. I admit there are causes which are beyond control, but there are special causes which have led to the rise in prices and one of them is the defective policy of the Finance Department. We have been criticising from the very beginning—that the principle of indirect taxation must be given up, or that the principle of indirect taxation should not be resorted to in every respect. The result of indirect taxation is that the prices of commodities which are essential for the poor people, for the common man in the street, like tobacco and so many other things have gone so high that it is not possible for the ordinary man in the street to purchase these articles.

Secondly, the black market money that has been acquired by the industrialists has not been tapped. In the last Budget we very forcefully brought it to the notice of the Finance Department that the rate of business profits tax should not be reduced. It was stated that it was an incentive to industry and that production would increase. The Finance Department policy was not to tap the capitalists but to allow the war-earned increments or the war-accumulated wealth to remain with them. We have found that the piles of notes with the capitalists are there, the purchasing power has not decreased; production has not considerably increased. Therefore, my submission is that Government should withdraw the money in possession of the capitalists or the industrialists with a view to use that money, for the nationalisation of the industries.

The Government has only tried to lay down the economic policy for ten years, assuring these private enterprise people that they would not be touched. In spite of the fact that we have given them a concession in the business profits tax, production is not increasing. Why,—because they say that labour is not co-operating. We are giving them reduction in excess profits tax but it is not possible to have capital equipment. Therefore, the first duty of the Finance Department is to tax the war accumulated wealth, and to withdraw from circulation that money which has been accumulated by the industrialists.

Then, the Finance Department has committed a very great blunder in appropriating Rs. 5 crores from the Railway Budget surplus. Transport which is defective today is due to the fact that the Finance Department has taken away these Rs. 5 crores, which would have been spent on repairs and on purchase of locomotives. If this had not been done, the condition of the Railways would not have been as it is at present.

Then, although we wanted to take away some of the accumulated wealth by the imposition of an Estate Duty, even that has been shelved. Therefore, on the one hand the capitalists' wealth is not reduced by any measure by the Finance Department and on the other they are allowed to escape the axe of taxation. So my suggestion is that with a view to fight out inflation, the Government should levy a capital levy or they should have excess profits tax in order to reduce and withdraw money from circulation.

Then, Sir, the argument of the then Finance Minister was very fallacious. He said that reduction of the rate of business profits tax will increase production. It has not increased production. I had warned and others also had warned that capital goods cannot be obtained, so the Government should see that triple shifts should be allowed to work in industries. There is no other go except that.

Another defect of the Finance Department is the deficit financing. Instead of taking money away from the capitalists by taxation, they allow deficit financing with a view to support and finance nation building programmes. Nation building programmes are a necessity, but deficit financing is a positive disservice to the country. My submission is that either take away the money from the capitalists as you require money for nation building purposes or immobilise the capital and pay interest on those deposits at a future date.

The greatest stigma on the Government is about cloth distribution. It was stated on the floor of this House that in case there is a breach of faith on the part of the capitalists, or the industrialists, Government would take action. What action has been taken? Have the licences been cancelled? It is an open secret that the industrialists who deal in cloth and who distribute cloth have committed a breach of faith and a very severe action ought to have been taken against them.

Lastly, I give a note of warning about the fixation of the prices of foodgrains. I am a cultivator myself. In rural areas the cost of production is very high because of the agricultural labour. Instead of decreasing the prices of foodgrains, my submission is that the Central Government should give a subsidy of Rs. 15 crores to the provinces instead of Rs. 4 crores for purchasing the produce and setting up Government shops.

With these words, Sir, I close.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram (Minister for Food and Agriculture): Sir, I feel that the present is one of those occasions when for the time being the usual distinction between the Government and the rest of the House or between the Government and the Opposition should be extinguished.

An Honourable Member: A very good idea.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): But it is too late.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: We are facing a situation which, I would not say, is critical, but yet it is one which needs plenty of hard thinking and there is no doubt also, plenty of quick action. What those steps would be which have to be taken, it is impossible to state today, as has been indicated by the Prime Minister.

[Shri Jairamdas Doulatram]

[At this stage, Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar).]

It is not during the last two or three weeks only, but for some little time past that the situation has been under some kind of examination. As you will find from the graphs and the statistics which, so far as food is concerned, have been placed before you, the prices had, round about the middle or third week of April, reached a certain level which was lower than the level in February. But from about the middle of April the prices again began to rise and it was felt necessary in June that if this rise in price is going to be maintained, some kind of close investigation of the matter and some remedy that may be necessary would have to be considered. A special investigation of the food prices was conducted in U. P. and Bihar and the results of that close investigation, during the course of which officials, Merchants' Associations, producers and other were interviewed and an attempt was made to find out which were the abiding causes of the rise in prices and which were local or temporary causes, was embodied in an interesting report submitted to us. We felt that before any further step could be taken, it was necessary that even this report, though of a specialists, ought to be fully examined by other economists whom we have in the Government. Therefore, early in August, before the session commenced, an examination by the economists of the causes of rising food prices and the remedies had been concluded and the ground prepared for a general review of the rise in prices of all commodities. I am suggesting this to indicate that there is no question of any blind optimism and I would venture to say that there is also no question of any self complacency. There is, on the contrary, an ever-anxious attitude to watch the events from day today and take every step that is necessary in the interests of the people. Though it might appear as if more time has been taken than necessary, I have no doubt that when this matter is further considered it will be appreciated that hasty decisions may possibly be worse than no decisions. I will not labour this particular point any further.

But there is one other aspect and a very important aspect which has come out in the course of this discussion and I thought it would not be proper to sit silent, because I think it affects the fundamentals of the whole position. The reference is to our food production. Agricultural industry is not only our basic industry, it is also the largest national industry and if we for the time being deal with this in a spirit of self-introspection and as I said forget for the moment that distinction between the Government and the House, I think we would all agree that it should have absolutely the first priority and we must do the best we can to increase the agricultural production of the country. On that alone can be built up any further development, whether industrial or other. I am therefore generally in sympathy with what Honourable Mr. Chetty was saying as to the backward condition of agricultural production. I would also venture to say something in reply to a remark let fall by one of the members, that all the money which spent for the Grow More Food Campaign went into the drain. I want to clear one misunderstanding which I find continually recurs. The Grow More Food Campaign is the name associated with the campaign for production of more food from 1942 or 1943 to 1947. Most of that time our predecessor Government ruled the country; most of that time Section 93 Governments ruled in the provinces. It is not possible for the present Government to take up the responsibility for what was done or what was not done in the course of those 4 or 5 years, but as you know, my predecessor, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, in his time, set afoot a proper development scheme based on definite quotas fixed for provinces in contrast with what used to happen before when ad hoc proposals came from provinces for detached un-co-ordinated schemes and they used to be supported and financed by the centre. Dr. Rajendra Prasad tried during 1947-48 to plan out on some methodical basis. We have only now in the month of June and July begun to receive the reports from the provinces as to the result of that one year's effort. But still I can frankly state that I am not satisfied with the progress which the country is making in regard to agricultural production, least of all in regard to production of food. But as I said, let us examine the thing in a mood of self-introspection. First of all, though in a way, it is I, think, a good sign, the central executive is being repeatedly asked to take up more responsibility for agricultural production, but yet the fact is that Agriculture is a subject which is almost entirely within the purview of the provinces and many of the things which members of the Assembly bring up here with regard to acts of omission or commission relate to the provinces. It is difficult from here to answer for them or to regulate them. The gentlest effort at co-ordination is the utmost that is possible under the existing constitutional position of the Central Government in regard to Agriculture, but apart from this constitutional point, let us see what we are doing for Agriculture, and compare it with what other countries are doing for developing their Agriculture.

I had occasion during the Budget session to refer to the fact that while America was spending from the Federal Budget Rs. 80 per person for agricultural development, we were spending only 1 anna under our own Central Budget out of every Rs. 100 we spend on all subjects, only 12 annas are allocated for Agriculture. When we study in detail the mechanism which is set up for agricultural development in those countries, what do we find? A huge number of trained staff linking up the Centre with the remotest village, men of knowledge moving about among the agriculturists, conveying to them the results of research experience conducted at various Institutes, coming in day to day contact with them, telling them of the mistakes they are making in their agricultural processes, supplying to them their every day's need of technical aid, in short acting as their guides, philosophers and friends. I have no doubt that unless we are able to set up in this country a very wide spread machinery involving certainly more expenditure and to some extent involving waste—that cannot be helped and here and there probably we may have some men not up to the mark—but on the whole, and by and large, unless we put forth far greater effort in regard to agricultural development there is no future for the country. It is only after the development of agricultural production that with increased wealth our further national progress would be possible. Therefore, whether it is a question of more money or more staff, unless our energies are more directed towards that objective, I am afraid our path before us will not be smooth. As the Honourable Mr. Chetty said, well, it is alright planning, but things must be done, this is only too true. But after all any Government, any Cabinet, any Ministers can only issue orders, can only sanction plans, who is to execute them? who is to carry them out? It is the people represented in the non-official world or their cousins, the people represented in the official world. It is only when the people are determined to carry out and execute what is planned that anything is possible. May I give one single illustration from which no other inference need be drawn. An Indian friend, a few years ago, went to one of the European countries. On arrival, his host telephoned to the nearest rationing office; giving him the name of the visitor who had come and the number of days he would stay and asking for the ration card. Within half an hour a man came from the rationing office to the house of the host and handed over the ration card and after that took the application from the host. Right action by thousands had enabled the rationing office to rely upon verbal instruction even on a telephone and the spirit of service also permeated the official work. This single instance, which I do not want to elaborate indicates the method in which the public and the method in which the official world function in some countries. It is only when it is found that the people are obeying the law and the official world is obeying the law that the Government is able to act. I am not referring to the entire official world. As my honourable friend the Finance Minister said there would be some black sheep, but we have to take note of the fact that no plan, no scheme can work unless the fullest co-operation is possible from the people. I think our own sister honourable Mrs. Ray struck the right note when she said that unless that co-operation is available, we may chalk out in the course of the next two or three weeks the finest plans, but I am afraid they will not result in a complete success. If today's debate has to serve any purpose, the best purpose it can serve is to create an atmosphere in the country for this co-operation which is the key to the whole situation.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: The Honourable Minister referred to the co-operation of the public. The Standing Committee of the Food Committee was very anxious to help the Honourable Minister. Letters were written to call the meeting in the month of May when the prices were soaring high; several questions were put at the meeting; ultimately when the meeting was called, the situation was reviewed and the Honourable Minister gave a very rosy picture and the members were prepared to co-operate but I can tell you from my experience, Sir, that the co-operation was not forthcoming.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: All that I can say that the meeting was not called at once as I had to consult not one member, but several members. The prices having continued to rise in June we sent out our officers for the detailed investigation of the prices in the month of July.

Pandit Govind Malaviya (U. P.: General): Sir, before I come to my task of this afternoon, may I say a word to express my sense of privilege and joy, on this chance of opportunity of being the first member to stand up and say anything before this House under the Chairmanship of our own old colleague, our great friend, our ablest adviser and one of our oldest and most experienced member namely, yourself, Sir. It is a privilege I very greatly value. You have been with us as a fellow member so long, we have known your qualities, both of head and heart, your courteous manners and sweet temperament so well that one feels a little awkward to speak of them. And yet, Sir, our joy and satisfaction are so universal and so genuine that I think I would be failing in an obvious and very pleasant duty and missing an opportunity which I am sure every one of us would highly value, if I were not to offer to you the felicitations and the tribute of every member of this House.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: Has the resolution been withdrawn, Sir?

Pandit Govind Malaviya: Sir, coming to the debate which we have had in this House for two days now, I am happy that my task of replying to it even though it may be slightly less exhilarating, is less unpleasant than the usual task of replying to debates, because of the very simple fact that as the Honourable Food Minister has pointed out, on this issue, there is no real difference of opinion between any two sections of the House. We have had different arguments to advance; we have had different approaches to make to the subject. But, in the ultimate analysis, Sir, every one of us has agreed that something has to be done and has got to be done fairly quick to ease the situation that prevails in this country. It was on the 11th of August, Sir, that I had the privilege of moving before this House the resolution which I did. Twenty three days have gone by. I regret, every one will regret, the Government regrets, that no conclusions have yet been arrived at, no decisions have yet been taken. But, we know, Sir, that the Government is giving its closest attention to the matter. The speeches of the Honourable the Prime Minister and the Honourable the Minister for Food are proof of it. We know we can trust to them to do the needful in this matter.

In the meantime, while it was my intention to raise the subject in this House with a view to have some speedy relief for the people, unfortunately, some new complications have arisen. I hope we have not unwittingly been the cause of injury rather than relief. I am glad that the Honourable the Prime Minister made the categorical statement, this morning, to clarify things and to state emphatically that the Government had no idea, not only that they had no idea, but that the Government was definite that there was not going to be any demonetisation of the 100 Rupee note, and that the Government had no intention of freezing any Bank deposits. These may appear to be small matters; but upon that statement probably will hang the well being of the entire financial structure of this country. We were playing with fire, Sir. On account of the various suggestions that were appearing in the newspapers from day to day, our people were becoming panicky, and were making runs upon the Banks to ask for hundred rupee notes to be exchanged into smaller denominations, and for withdrawing their deposits. It might easily have led to a terrible crisis. I am glad that statement has been made and I hope, Sir, that that danger is now averted.

Sir, a great many proposals have been made to deal with the problem of inflation and of high prices. We have had the memorandum of the industrialists; we have had the memorandum of the economists, both official and non-official. We have had the memorandum on behalf of labour and we have had so many other proposals. They are all proposals which have to be considered most carefully and then decisions arrived at. But, Sir, about all these different proposals, there seems to be no unanimous opinion either among the lay men or among the legislators or among the scholars, experts or financiers.

Sir, during the course of the debate in this House, we have listened to the view from some quarters that it was a grievous blunder on the part of the Government to have gone in for de-control in December last. The cry has been raised that we must now go back full gear to the old control days. I wish to submit, Sir, very respectfully that if by the panic of our present difficulties we are hastily led back into something which we gave up after mature consideration—I do not at all agree that it was done for any sentimental reasons,—something which was done after the most careful and mature consideration, if we go back into the same mirage, I am afraid, we will have sounded the death knell of all possibility of our improving the situation in this country. What did we do in the control days, Sir? No doubt, we covered 143 millions of our people. But what were we doing to these 143 millions of people?—giving them eight ounces or ten ounces of food grains. Will anybody in this House be able to say that for the average man eight or ten ounces can suffice? We are not in England; we are not in America; we are not in Australia where people have been well fed and have had good sustenance in the past with the result that they have some reserve strength in their body. Our people have been semi-starved. For them to have been asked to live on eight ounces or ten ounces a day was a terrible irony. The result was, Sir, that while rationing and control were there, every one of these men—and I ask the members of this House to put their hand on their heart and to say to themselves honestly as to how many of them and their families were able to manage with eight to ten ounces which were allowed—(An Honourable Member: "You are so precise".) Yes; I am so precise because I have talked to dozens of members here and elsewhere, I have talked to Government officials and heads of institutions and I know that it is physically impossible for anybody—I am not talking of individuals, I am not talking of one or two exceptions, I am talking of families,—impossible for the people anywhere to manage with that much of rationed food grains. What was the result, Sir? Everybody had to go out to buy in the black market. It may be very good for us to pose that we did not do that. When one saw his wife and children, his father and mother starving, he did not wait; he went and purchased the necessary foodgrains wherever he could find them. Therefore, by that control we were teaching one and all to be dishonest. We were compelling them by sheer force of circumstances to fall in the moral scale and to set up in this country a state of affairs of which every reasonable and sound-headed man should feel ashamed. (A voice: "Question".) It is all right for some of our friends here to say 'question' because possibly they did not feel that need. I know of cases, where, in various other ways, the necessary victuals and the necessary provisions could be obtained by some people or could be received for them. It is easy to sit here in these comfortable seats and question that statement. But, let us go to the people; let us go to the poor middle class man, let us go to the poor man in the street and find out whether he questions that statement or endorses it. It will be only then that the reality will be found. That was what control was doing.

If by this control we could bring about a healthy state of things I would surely have no objection; but what will happen? Today, prices, generally, are what they were in the black market before. Generally speaking, they are not higher. People can openly and honestly buy what they must and what they can. With control all this will disappear. We will be in control and we will give an opportunity to a large number of corrupt officials to practise further corruption and to create again a situation of which we shall all feel ashamed. And eventually, again, we shall have to go back upon it. Therefore even though the distress is great let us not be led back into that terrible state of affairs.

Sir, a number of other proposals have been made. All those proposals are of a highly important nature. But each one of them is intertwined with and dovetailed into something else; if we do one thing here it affects other things elsewhere. I therefore submit that all those suggestions are good and should be carefully considered. But, we should not grudge to the Government the necessary time required for considering them most carefully and thoroughly before coming to any conclusions. I do not think we can have any two opinions about many of the proposals which have been made. But let us not be in a hurry; let Government take ample time to consider them most carefully and then let them come to such conclusions in the long-range plans as they think necessary. Some persons have said that the problem is not very serious. I am amazed at that statement. If I had time I would have gone into it. I do not think the House will share that view. It was said that we should not be panicky. There is no question of panic about anything; there is no panic in the country; people are not in panic, they are in distress, they are in misery. There is a difference between the two things. There is no panic; but they are dying; they want some food, they want some clothing, they want some sustenance. It is not a matter of panic, it is a matter of mounting dissatisfaction, mute dissatisfaction which the people are today feeling and they are becoming desperate. Unless we do something for them quickly the situation may become really very bad. In such circumstances something must be done immediately. As I said the other day, we know that efforts are being made but we want results. Efforts will not satisfy the people, we want results.

we want something tangible to come about. Therefore while Government should take the necessary time to consider all the technical proposals which are before them—I shall not go into them. I suggest as an immediate measure that Government should do a few things which probably will ease the situation immediately.

What I suggest is—I am sorry the Transport Minister is not here—first of all the question of transport should be tackled. Today's passenger trains may be reduced further. Whatever may be done, transport should be provided for foodgrains and other necessities of life. The honourable Member from Bikaner said here the other day that there was any quantity of gram lying in Bikaner which was rotting. It is a scandalous state of affairs and something should be done about it.

Then there is another proposal which I wish to make for the consideration of the Government and that is that we should have subsidised sales at cheaper prices of certain necessary commodities of life at the ration and cheap grain shops which Government are running today. It is a very simple scheme which I suggest. I am not thinking of the long-range plans; I am thinking of something which will have an immediate effect and which will enable us to create an atmosphere in the country where even the long-range plans will become practicable.

Sir, cloth has already been controlled. I suggest that if we can arrange that at our own cheap grain and ration shops we should sell wheat at 4½ seers instead of about 3½ sheers for a rupee as it is now selling, if we can so arrange that potatoes should sell at 4 seers, sugar at 2 seers, ghee at 8 chataks for a rupee, eggs for one anna each and dry fodder (Bhoosa) for cattle at 30 seers and oilcakes at 15 seers, the expenditure would not be great. Some sceptics will scoff and say, how many people will you cover with that? I know that; but, I propose that alongside this, Government may issue an ordinance laying down that nobody in the country should sell any of these articles anywhere at a price higher than those fixed by Government. Again the question will be asked as to who will enforce it. I submit that the Ordinance should authorise every officer—civil, military and police—and all officers and members of local boards, heads of educational institutions, heads of cooperative societies, to take note of any delinquency and to record on the spot statements of the parties concerned and of two or three witnesses and to forward them to the district authorities, who should be authorised to take summary action and inflict deterrent punishments in these cases. A few such cases will ensure that even though there may be a few black sheep in the country, the vast majority of the people will respect the provisions of that ordinance; and in the result while we ourselves will be selling grain at a cheaper rate at only a few shops, it will have a salutary effect, all over the country. If wheat can be made cheaper, if ghee can be made cheaper, if potatoes can be made cheaper, if cloth can be made cheaper, all other foodgrains, all other vegetables, all other articles, will fall down in the price scale. It will achieve a wonderful result over the entire field of prices in the country in all directions with only a comparatively small expenditure and effort, we will have achieved stupendous country wide results all along the line. I have not been able to obtain the figures of the cost of this scheme but I understand that it will be well within a crore of rupees per month if we restrict it to these few items. What is that? If we can do this for six months we will have changed the entire atmosphere in the country.

Sir, the other suggestion I have to make is that rents and revenue may be realised in kind and that zamindars should be asked to sell their rental grain collections, at the prices fixed, to the Government. If we did that even as a temporary measure, then at the end of the season we will have sufficient grain stocks in our hands to sell at these shops and the entire atmosphere in the country will be affected by it. I have not the time here to go into the details of these proposals; but I hope Government will be good enough to consider them seriously as practical, feasible and immediate steps to be taken; not as something which will entirely meet the requirements of the situation, not as a long-term plan, but as something which, without any practical difficulty, can be done tomorrow while the other proposals are being carefully considered and final decisions taken.

Sir, I have done. A friend here said that the people in the villages who are 50 per cent. and more are happy. I do not know what to say to that. I do not agree with him. Whatever it be, no one can deny that the average urban population,—the middle class men—with their feet inextricably entangled in the rock of fixed income are being drowned in the sea of these high prices. The level has well nigh reached their nose. If Government will not take immediate action, the people may be drowned in that sea. I hope they will rise to the occasion; I am confident they will take in due course such steps as may be needed to bring about an improvement in the entire situation in the country. We will need a calm and peaceful atmosphere so as to enable the government to decide upon such long-term decisions and plans as may be suitable to extricate the country from the terrible mess in which it is today. But to bring about that atmosphere, to ease immediately the present situation, I hope Government will adopt without delay the proposals I have made.

Sir, in view of what the Prime Minister was pleased to say this morning, and what the Honourable the Food Minister has said, and of the general belief on the part of the members of this House that the Government will be doing everything possible to meet the situation, I have no desire to press this resolution to a vote. The Government themselves have expressed their anxiety in the matter and have assured us that they are considering it and that the necessary steps will be taken without delay. Under these circumstances, Sir, I will with your permission, seek the leave of the House to withdraw my Resolution.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw?

The Resolution was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

RESERVE BANK (TRANSFER TO PUBLIC OWNERSHIP) BILL

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Prof. K. T. Shah (Bihar: General): Sir, I move:

"That in part (b) of sub-clause (1) of clause 3 of the Bill, for the word 'eighteen', the word 'fourteen' be substituted."

Shall I move the second one also in my name?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes. Both relate to the same matter.

Prof. K. T. Shah: Sir, I move:—

"That in part (b) of sub-clause (1) of clause 3 of the Bill, the words 'and ten annas', be omitted."

You will bear witness that I have scrupulously followed the advice of the Speaker in not inflicting myself upon the House too frequently, and trying the patience of honourable members. Though I did not speak on the general discussion on this Bill, here is an important part of a provision to which I cannot but take exception, and hence the amendments which stand in my name.

The Bill has been mentioned as being preliminary to the nationalization—or as I prefer to call it, socialization—of the Imperial Bank of India. I go a step further and say that I for one regard it as preliminary to the socialization of the entire banking system of this country, because I hold the view that all social services and public utilities must belong to the community as a whole and must be operated on behalf of the community by the State. In this view of the matter, there are many provisions of this Act which would require very radical alteration, and I trust in good time they would be forthcoming. I have therefore not put forward any other amendments to other parts of the Bill as I believe that co-ordinated and integrated amendments in a wholesome Bill would be much more appropriate than any ad hoc suggestion which, at this time on this Bill might be put forward. The Finance Minister has rightly pointed out that this Bill is confined strictly to the nationalization or socialization of the share capital of the proprietors of the Reserve Bank, and as such all other suggestions might be deemed a little out of place. I could claim with perhaps not the same emphasis as the Honourable Minister claimed yesterday to belong to that little fellowship of people who, from the very beginning, have desired that this institution should be from the start a socialised public service concern which ought not to be handed over to private proprietors of any description. I welcome, however the measure on the principle of better late than never, and now that it is at last being proposed to be socialised, I am very glad indeed that the opportunity has fallen to one of the sponsors of the idea from the very commencement of any formal scheme for instituting a Central Bank of this kind.

The provision to which I have offered an amendment relates to the reduction of the price proposed to be paid for taking over the shares from the private shareholders and making the entire capital belong to the State. This is an institution which has been made by, and whose whole prestige, profit and authority are the creation of, the special Act and the policy followed thereon, by which the entire monetary system so to say of the country and Government banking have been placed in the charge of that institution.

A provision was made in the original Act whereby the institution could not under the ordinary company law be taken into liquidation. If however a situation arose where it became necessary to take this institution into liquidation, it could be done under the provisions of that section only by order of the Government and in such a manner as Government may direct. Liquidation of a going concern ordinarily takes place, as I understand the term, only when the institution is in loss or threatened with it. For the life of me I cannot understand how such an institution, armed with the powers and given the privileges that it has been given, could possibly make any loss, unless its directors or conductors were crooks. For my part, of course, I find it very difficult to see the difference between capitalists and crooks. I suffer from weak eyes. Therefore it may be that what I am not able to see others may be able to see. I venture to say, however, that even the celebrated trio of Sherlock Holmes, Mr. Lecoq and Ellery Queen each aided by a 1000 h.p. microscope would not be able to deduct the difference between capitalists and crooks. It may be that there are differences, and as such it is a possible contingency that an institution like this might have been brought under loss. But as I said before, even then the Act provides that the liquidation of this institution cannot be done except by order of Government and then in such a manner as Government may direct. Now this is of course not liquidation. Even I can understand that difference. But it is a contingency which I submit has been contemplated when the initial measure was passed, even by those who preferred to make it a private proprietors' institution and not a public corporation of the type that some of us had hoped it would be. The provision of the second sub-section of section 2 to which I have already made reference, lays it down that in the event of any such liquidation or change-over taking place, the proprietors would be given a certain compensation for their holding provided that the share of the Government in the total capital and reserve assets would be three-fourths and that of the shareholders one-fourth—and provided further that in no case should the compensation offered to the proprietor shall be more than 1 per cent for every year that the institution has been in existence. The institution, I believe, came into existence in 1934 and from that date till now there are 14 years, unless my mathematics is wrong. 14 years at one per cent without recurring compound interest would be Rs. 14 and not Rs. 18/10 as is proposed in this measure in clause 3. Even at Rs. 14 we would be giving something like a bonus of 70 lakhs to the shareholders for doing what? They have done nothing, in my opinion, to earn this bonus or surplus or special gratuity or perquisite to which they can lay claim under this Bill. The shareholder of a joint stock company and particularly of a corporation like this is, in my opinion, the worst type of parasite going and unless you propose to accept them as the inheritors of the managing agency system in firms who enjoy an unearned income as well as an undeserved reputation, the shareholders I submit have done nothing whatsoever to deserve this special bonus, this additional gratification, this extra compensation, which is provided for in this Bill.

Somebody says that they have invested their money. Had our counsel been followed they would not have had to invest this money. In fact the public need not provide any capital because the credit of the whole community is behind the back of this institution. That you have initially been given an advantage of being called upon to invest your money is made an argument that you must be specially compensated. In an ordinary bank, if a banker receives deposits for a fixed period, does he at the end of the period, after having paid regularly the interest, pay any special compensation in the event of the depositor withdrawing his money on maturity. Even so why should the Reserve Bank, like any private Bank, pay to its depositor any special compensation in the event of the depositor withdrawing his deposit on its maturity, especially at no time has a default been made by the bank in the payment of interest. This money that the shareholder claims to have invested is only a sort of deposit. He knew perfectly well that there was no danger whatsoever of his money ever being lost, because the country, the community and the Government were behind it and as such there was not an iota of danger of the money being lost in any eventuality whatsoever. The argument therefore that he has invested or parted with his instrument of earning his livelihood is in my opinion utterly out of place and irrelevant and those who urge it only exhibit their own selfishness in making such a preposterous suggestion as that.

Another consideration put forward is that the then Finance Minister in answer to a question on the subject declared that the compensation would be paid at the rate of the average during a period of 12 months beginning with March and ending with February of the following year. As I view the matter it was an obiter dictum of the Finance Minister. As I conceive it, it was a casual answer to a casual question which again I submit, in all humility, is not necessarily a formal declaration of policy and the incurring of an obligation which all of us are obliged to discharge. I regard it as an ex-parte declaration which of course should be taken for what it is worth. But even granting for the sake of argument that the Finance Minister spoke on behalf of Government, as he probably did and that he was making a declaration of policy on behalf of the Government, in that case too I do not see why the Reserve Bank Act itself should be infringed upon and a higher rate be paid as compensation than is provided for under the original Act. That is the bone of contention that I want to present to the House.

The average is a very fallacious term. In my opinion it was a direct invitation to the speculative element in the market to put up the price and in fact the price went up to 158, if I am not wrong. For reasons outside the control of the speculator, for reasons for which people like me are blamed, who are talking about socialisation in season and out of season, it is possible that they lost confidence, the price fell, the average came down lower than the average. Even so, even that average was I believe lower than as it has been worked out by the department. The shareholders themselves have claimed as much as 137. I am amazed at their moderation. Why did they not claim much more? They could have argued that this Rs. 100 in 1933, when the price of money in terms of commodity was much higher than five or six times, was today worth much more and they would be entitled to something like six times the capital invested. I am amazed that they have been so moderate as to claim from this Government only 137 or 138 as against 118 that Government seem to have compromised on. For my part I neither accept their claim nor the proposal that Government have put forward. In fact I would say that there is no case whatsoever for offering any compensation on the institution being taken over. This institution has earned all the profits, it has built up its reserve, it has earned surplus assets, not because the shareholders or for the matter of that even the Directors have done anything to deserve it, not because of any special effort or enterprise shown by them, but simply and only because Government have made over to them the paper money of this country to be issued and maintained. It was simply because, they have been acting as the Government banker, it is because they are a banker's bank on account of which other scheduled banks are obliged to keep their balances with them of considerable amount free of interest, it is because of that that they have made the profits that they have and as I said earlier none but fools could have failed to make profits in an institution like that. There is no special credit, there is no special claim in honour, in ethics for this demand of anything more than Rs. 100 which they are alleged to have invested and anything more payable to them would in my opinion be a needless waste of people's money on this occasion. At the rate of Rs. 18-10 you are giving away 93 lakhs odd free and gratis for doing nothing, for having been just the proprietors, for having been just registered shareholders, for just worshipping the golden calf that they have been worshipping. I further point out that not only have they no claim to anything more than Rs. 100, they ought in fact to have been made to contribute something to the country for not having done what they should have done in the interest of this country, specially at a time in the past when the emergency occurred and they merely acted as a tool and henchman of a foreign government. Between 1933 and 1939 hundreds of crores worth of gold went out of this country and the Reserve Bank did not do anything to stop that drain or even to make a protest against a policy which denuded this country of the little substantial wealth that was left in this country, in order to bolster up the sterling, which was the only reason why the drain of gold between 1933 and 1939 was allowed from this country. What have the shareholders of the Reserve Bank done to justify or authorise this special gratification? It only amounts to saying this "Do the utmost harm to the country; strike it as hard as you can; but simply because you happen to be capitalists we shall try to please, placate and propitiate you." I say this is a desire which is implacable and inexorable; they are people whom you can never satisfy; you can never propitiate them. The more you offer the more they will ask; the more you give in the more they will demand. Therefore, if you ever want to call a halt, if you ever want to say that there is a limit—please remember that there is a limit to our patience, to our capacity to bear the burdens—if ever you want to do so, you should lay down some limit beyond which they shall not try your patience.

On a previous occasion when the Industrial Finance Corporation Bill was before this House I had the honour to point out that Government were deliberately ruining their own credit and standing and needlessly encouraging the capitalist world to demand more and more, for them to hold them up like highway-men on the public road, by offering an absolute guarantee of 2½ per cent. on the principle as well as the interest, and even on their bonds. I am sorry to say the House was not in a mood to accept my suggestion on that occasion. I hope that I would prove a false prophet and that it will not come true when you had eventually taken over that institution and are required to work out twice or thrice after giving them guarantee over and above what they have got so far. In this institution you should realize that for 14 years you have been paying them 4 per cent interest whereas the market rate and the bank's own rate was somewhere near 3 per cent. That is to say they were paying something more to the shareholders than the shareholders could have got if they had invested in equally strong securities outside the bank. In that way Rs. 66 they have already got in 14 years. Over and above that you are now proposing to give Rs. 18-10 which will work out to a return of 3½ per cent or a bit lower—my working out suggests 3:57 per cent, but perhaps I am wrong. The average money market rate is about 3 per cent. Why should this extra money be paid—why should this extra valuable security be made over to the proprietors, to the shareholders of the Reserve Bank, I fail to see.

At this point I come to a seeming inconsistency in my own proposal. I also offer or suggest that they should be given at the rate of Rs. 14 over the Rs. 100 they have invested for every share. As I have said before, for my part I would not certainly offer them a pie more than is strictly the investment they have made. But few recognize the essential moderateness and the reasonableness of my proposal. You do not realize that I have not proposed giving them no compensation. I will therefore get enough credit for having been eminently reasonable in my proposal—because that is behind the scenes as the stage managers say. Here I come forward with a proposal for Rs. 114 because unfortunately the original authors of the Act have tied down our hands, and ours is a successor government, peacefully acquiring power by voluntary transfer and as such morally bound to honour the obligations they have incurred. Whatever my reasons may be for questioning these obligations—the ethical justice of it, the economic value of it—I feel that in sheer justice to this House, in respect to the honour of our government, I should not depart from the pledges made by a predecessor government, though not with our consent or on our behalf. It is because of that that I have come forward with a proposal to offer a compensation of Rs. 14 over and above Rs. 100 which they had invested—and that too will yield them something like 3:4 per cent, as against the 3 per cent. that I have been telling you is the ruling rate in the market. Because I honour the obligation incurred under this Act it does not follow that I accept the ethical or economic validity of the suggestion: I accept it because there is on the other hand the only alternative of having broken, so to say, the moral pledges of the government—and I am at this stage not inclined to break those pledges. But again I repeat to you, Sir, that this is a kind of moderation, sweet reasonableness on my part, that goes utterly unrecognized in this House or by the majority party. And that is because they will not read the writing on the wall. The writing is grim and glaring. As it was said in the Gita itself by no less a person than Lord Krishna—

कालोऽस्मि लोकक्षयं कुतः प्रवृत्तौ

Remember that revolution is only a normal form of evolution in social matters. And by doing things like this you are inviting revolution to march grimly and foist itself on your cherished institution. Remember that east of us, in China, in Japan, in Malaya, in Burma, in Ceylon the forces of revolution are gathering. In your country too these forces are growing strong. They will not listen to moderate counsel; they will not listen to wise suggestions and reasonable arguments of those who are made blind by greed—insatiate greed—and by their egoism. There is a Latin proverb "Those whom the gods wish to destroy they first make them blind". I suggest that those who represent the capitalist classes, those who demand their dues in season and out of season, are forgetting the lessons of history in France in 1793 or in Russia in 1917. The representatives of monarchy will fare no better in this country if they forget the dues of the people of this country and claim their pound of flesh in season and out of season. And this is not even a pound of flesh. This is something more. It is shedding in addition to the pound of flesh, the people's blood. If you sanction Rs. 118 as against the proposal that I have made you will be co-sharers in the guilt of shedding the blood of the unvoiced, unvoiced people of this country. I trust that this sweet reasonableness of mine will commend itself to the House and that the forces of greed will not blind them—because I trust this nation has a long life before it—and that no section of it will be destroyed by its own tribe, by its own ignorance, greed or blindness. Sir, I commend this motion of mine to the House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendments moved:

(i) "That in part (b) of sub-clause (1) of clause 3 of the Bill, for the word 'eighteen', the word 'fourteen' be substituted."

(ii) "That in part (b) of sub-clause (1) of clause 3 of the Bill, the words 'and ten annas' be omitted."

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I stand here to plead for the shareholders of the Reserve Bank. When I listened to my esteemed friend Prof. Shah—I always regard him as one of the greatest economists that India has produced—I began to shudder in the place I was sitting when he hurled down those blood cuddling epithets that we are forgetting the lessons of French history where the people hurled down Louis XIV.

Sir, as far as I can recollect the scheme of shareholders, to save the Reserve Bank from the capitalists, we provided that every shareholder can only have five shares. Although we knew the Bombay and Calcutta capitalists tried to corner some of the shares in their dependents' names, still many villagers like me hold only five shares. We also took care to see that one of the members of the then Assembly was associated with the allocation of those shares so that the capitalists did not capture all. If the capitalists of Bombay managed to take away a lakh or two of shares from the Calcutta side and from the countryside of C.P., Orissa and other places, it is the propensity, the evil propensity, of the Bombay capitalists that is responsible for that, and not the shareholders.

But, Sir, it is not the matter of Rs. 20 that I shall lose in my five shares that I stand to plead here. I did not like that my esteemed friend Prof. K. T. Shah should have referred to the five lakhs of shareholders as capitalist shareholders of the Reserve Bank. Of the five lakh shareholders the capitalists may be a small moiety, I think about 25,000. The rest do not pay any income-tax. Does my friend Prof. Shah know that out of the 3½ per cent Dividend that the Reserve Bank used to pay us, income-tax is deducted to the extent of something like Rs. 3-14 in Rs. 15? So, how is it that the nation had been mulcted by the shareholders? We were not allowed to have a State Bank and therefore those of us who assisted in framing the Reserve Bank Act insisted that the shares should be distributed throughout the nation so that when the right time will come every shareholder will contribute to the nation his share certificates. Today if the Government asks us to hand over the share certificates, we will hand them over—we do not want the money. But that condition of things has not yet come. Professor Shah wishes the shareholders to be deprived of the premium money—something like Rs. 20—the money side matters little. But that day will come according to the greatest authority in economics, though I do concede my friend is now more leaning towards Russian economics than Indian economics. Of course, he has always held advanced views but today I find he is advocating such views that perhaps in India we are not find to understand him unless he will make us understand it by the blood bath of those whom he calls the capitalist classes.

My only excuse in rising to speak is that I and others who have subscribed to the Reserve Bank, all subscribed as patriots and never thought that thirteen years later somebody will dub us as "capitalists and exploiters." On the merit of the issue, the twenty rupees is a very small thing, it does not interest any of the shareholders. But my friend Prof. Shah forgot one thing, that the Government of India, whoever controlled it, the former Government or this Government, are very much benefited by the shareholders' five crores of rupees. Any excess profits have gone to the Government of India. That means it has returned to the tax-payer, by which I mean both Prof. Shah and myself are benefited; although in the past the benefit was going to the foreign Government now it is going to our Government. Therefore, Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Shri Prabhudayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I have heard very carefully the 'sweet reasonableness' of Prof. K. T. Shah. He has bemoaned the fact that his advice was not followed when the Finance Corporation was formed nor was it followed as regards the price to be paid. No wonder that with the line of argument advanced by my Honourable friend Prof. Shah, his advice could not have been followed.

Sir, he has accused the shareholders as not having done anything and at the same time having got the profit year after year. He has also blamed the shareholders for not having been able to stop the drain of gold from India that was made through the Reserve Bank of India. I found that he was all along contradictory. Sometimes he feels that whatever good has been done was done because the Bank was in the charge of the Government, and whatever there was bad was due to the Reserve Bank shareholders not having interfered. As everybody knows, the policy of the Reserve Bank was in the hands of the Government of India and the Government had the final say in the matter. All profits that had been made so far have gone to the general revenues of the Government, and I think a sum to the extent of about Rs. 80 crores has been paid by the Reserve Bank of India to the coffers of the State.

Sir, my friend says that the Government's word of honour must be respected. In March 1947, when the declaration was made in this House as to the intention of the Government to nationalise the Reserve Bank, a statement was made on behalf of Government as a declared policy, on the basis of a Short Notice Question which was arranged to be put to Government. In answer to that Question, the Government of India through the Finance Minister made a statement that a certain average price that would be found to be ruling between March 1947 and February 1948 will be taken and the average price will be paid. This Rs. 118-10 has been worked out on that average basis. If the shareholders had any say so far as the fixation of the price is concerned then the shareholders' voice had not been taken. But they had no say in the matter and if their voice had been taken at all, they would certainly have asked for more. The price after the declaration has gone down and the speculators also had no power to influence the price. If the average price had been given that was ruling before the declaration was made, the Government would have had to pay much more because the price in 1946-47 was round about Rs. 156 per share. The price went down after the Liaquat Ali Khan Budget and the disturbances that started in the country. So, the shareholders have no say in the matter and my friend Prof. Shah went out of his way to accuse as if all of them are 'capitalists.'

Sir, my honourable friend forgets that on the 30th June 1948 there are so many as 44,400 shareholders of the Reserve Bank and the average therefore comes to ten shares per holder, that is they are holders of Rs. 1,000 worth of shares. As you know, when this Bank was floated the limit was put that no one will be allotted more than five shares unless the applications for five shares were exhausted. On that basis, on the 1st of April 1935, we had 92,407 shareholders of five shares. But if all these 44,400 shareholders are all capitalists, then this country would have been rolling in wealth. But most of the people as you know hold only five shares. They have stuck to them and at least more than 40,000 of the shareholders are perhaps the original shareholders of five shares.

Therefore, my friend has tried to bring in factors which do not come into play at all. As the honour of the Government is involved and as it has a very great repercussion on the financial stability of the country, we must be careful to see that the Government's word of honour, or any statement made on behalf of the Government is not lightly treated and the Government does not go back upon what they say or what is said on their behalf in the House. There is no reason why there should be any going back on the statement made. Moreover, if the Bank had gone into liquidation and if there was no limitation or instruction regarding the distribution of profits in the Act, the shareholders would have got a much larger sum and they would have got the money in cash. What the Government propose to do is to give them bonds. Therefore, they are going to surrender their shares and will get bonds which will give them 3 per cent. and the fixation of price is an eminently a reasonable proposition.

The Assembly then adjourned till Half Past Five in the Afternoon.

The Assembly re-assembled at Half Past Five of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, it would not have required any speech in the House to vote against the amendment, but in moving the amendment, certain broad statements have been made, certain hints have been given about questions of great importance and it is for this reason that I think a reply is called for. The honourable member Prof. K. T. Shah, is an economist, but with all his learning, it seems to me that he has mixed up two independent questions, namely, nationalization and expropriation. He thinks that nationalization means expropriation. While he wants to nationalise, he wants to take away by paying less. I think the tone sounds somewhat Russian. The proposal of the Government is that every shareholder should get a non-terminable loan bond for Rs. 118-10-0. The learned Professor by his calculation thinks that only Rs. 114 should be given. The quarrel is one of Rs. 4-10-0, but the principle involved is of first importance. The House will be pleased to remember that when the talk of nationalization of this Bank began during the time of Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan's Budget, the shares stood at the time at something like Rs. 139. On account of the talk of nationalization the shares went down further and now the average works at Rs. 118-10-0. The learned professor would deny the shareholder this depreciated average which is now proposed to be given by the Government. But may I ask the honourable member one question? Supposing the shares went down, would the honourable member be prepared to pay in full? Suppose the shares stood at an average market price of Rs. 90 and supposing there were no guarantees in the Act, would the honourable member be prepared to pay more than Rs. 90 or pay in full when the capital appreciated and the shares went up to a maximum price of Rs. 178 in 1946? Now what we are paying is a depreciated price and not a proper or an average price. Then the most important thing is that the honourable member would like to punish some capitalists by this amendment. I beg to submit, Sir, a large number of middle-classes are share-holders. While some capitalists own more than 5 shares and that was at a appreciated price, say at Rs. 120, Rs. 130 or Rs. 140, those capitalists will certainly be punished and I have nothing to quarrel with that but in trying to punish some capitalists, we are going to punish some persons belonging to the poor middle-classes whose share represent their savings. I think that would be extremely unfair to the middle classes. I submit, Sir, that if we refused to pay Rs. 118-10-0 and we merely paid Rs. 114 the very difficult situation which has grown will be accentuated. The upheavals in the money market are due to constant threats to the so called capitalists. There is always a threat that the capitalists must be expropriated without realizing the fact that the expropriation of the capitalists means the expropriation of a large number of shareholders. Big concerns are known as capitalist concerns, and it is perhaps known but not quite realized that millions of shareholders belong to the middle-classes in those concerns. While you try to expropriate the capitalists, you kill a large number of middle-class investors and deprive them of their lives' earnings and savings. In these circumstances, these constant threats serve to produce nervousness amongst the investing public which largely consists of middle-classes. It is absolutely wrong to say that a few capitalists have entered into a conspiracy and are controlling the market. Those who have studied market tendencies know that it can be done only for a few days, but then economic factors, the factors of supply and demand and the intrinsic worth of shares and stocks really have play and they ultimately decide the market rates.

I submit that the lower prices which are now prevailing in the markets and the disinclination on the part of the investors to come forward to finance big undertakings and subscribe for Government loans is due to this nervousness, distrust on the Government policy. This constant talk of punishing the capitalist class is the cause of the present situation and it has also accentuated the situation. The House will be pleased to consider one more point. Professor Shah was one of the Economic Advisers of the Government whose advice has been consolidated and supplied to us yesterday. He was one of the Economists who advised that the Government should raise the interest rate on their loans. The present rate of interest is three per cent on the bonds which are going to be given to the shareholders. Let us suppose that Professor Shah would advocate a policy of the Government taking loans at four per cent. The effect of that would be an immediate depreciation of the bonds which are going to be given to the shareholders to the extent of 25 per cent. You pay them on an average of depreciated price, which depreciation was due to the threat of nationalisation. The Government is coming into the loan market at a higher rate, that is, four per cent. That would further depreciate these bonds. The bearer of these bonds will have to sell them at lower prices in the market. You cannot control this downward tendency. This tendency will have the certain effect of lowering the market prices. In these circumstances, I beg to submit that we should not lightheartedly talk about nationalisation, which has these disastrous consequences. Nationalisation is a good principle. But it has got to be applied by the Government with caution and with some ideas of priority and with the sole purpose of making the management cheap, efficient and productive. These are principles which should be kept in the forefront before the nationalisation programme can be taken up. But, loose talk inside the House and outside the House has created a very awkward situation. Even now, what is the position of the Government? The Government cannot go into the market for a loan; I do not think that at the existing rates any loan would be subscribed to the extent that the Government needs. We want money for large undertakings and must go to the market. We have created a situation that the market is shy, where money could not be easily obtained. I submit that this proposition should be rejected with this understanding that we do not support these sentiments behind the amendment. We do not want to expropriate and do away with those very classes upon whose savings the whole Government and the industrial policy of Government will depend.

With these few words, I oppose the amendment.

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya (Madras: General): Sir, I am sorry I was not here at 4-30 when my honourable friend Professor Shah explained the basis of his figures; but I have tried to acquaint myself of the course the discussion has taken and we are thankful to Professor Shah for having given this House an opportunity of explaining the rationale of fixing the price of each share at Rs. 118-6-0. It is obviously inconsistent with the requirement of section 57 of the Reserve Bank Act which lays down that the price when the Bank is liquidated should be fixed at one per cent. per annum more than the original amount, to the extent of the number of years that have passed since the inception of this Bank: fourteen years have passed and therefore Rs. 14/- have to be added to the value of each share.

Strictly speaking, in law, it is a point of doubt whether the conversion of the Bank from a private Bank or a quasi public bank into a National Bank by the process of nationalisation involves and is based upon liquidation or not. Is it a case of liquidation in which case alone this requirement of one per cent. per annum applies? In the first place, we hold it is not liquidation. In one sense, it is passing from one kind of management to another kind of management by agreement. In the Insurance world, we are accustomed to the idea of amalgamation of Insurance companies which is regulated by a particular set of laws, which does not involve the liquidation of either company, though, strictly speaking, perhaps in the eye of law, it may be considered by some stretch of imagination as liquidation. Any way, this is not a case of liquidation, but nationalisation. Nationalisation is not penalisation. We are going to nationalise many institutions hereafter. We should not create a panic or alarm that every time an institution is nationalised, whether it be an industrial concern, or a banking concern or an insurance company, the shareholders stand to lose much of what they are likely to gain by selling their shares in the open market. It is our duty to offer that confidence to the people in this country. At the present moment, we are labouring under a kind of, I shall not say want of confidence, but a certain doubt in regard to the confidence to be placed in the spoken word of the Government. The spoken word of the Government, or for that matter, of any man in this country had lost its value under the British Government. The moment courts of law came into existence in this country, working according to the English law of evidence, according to the English law of Contracts, of Mortgages or Transfer of Property, the spoken word has ceased to have its value and everything has got to be committed to writing. The written word has two meanings according to the parties that take the paper to the lawyer they seek the help of. If we want to restore the character of this country, if we want to restore the reputation and integrity of the spoken word in this country, we have to respect the integrity of the spoken word whether it is committed to writing or not. What is the spoken word? In this House, in relation to the valuation of these shares, the Honourable the Finance Minister at the time, spoke publicly on the floor of this House that it was the policy of the Government to give a certain average calculated upon the market rates of the previous twelve months. Right or wrong, good or bad, the Finance Minister has made this statement and he has committed himself to the statement as emanating from his Government. We must naturally take it that his Government is responsible for that Statement. We have therefore to respect this offer as the sacred word of the Finance Minister backed by his Government. That is the long and short of the whole story so far as I can judge. This matter has been given anxious thought by the people who are concerned with it outside the premises of this legislature and after going into the matter thoroughly, it has been agreed that the spoken word of the ex-Finance Minister must be respected. We do not lose anything except twenty five lakhs of Rupees. (An Honourable Member: 'Eighteen lakhs'). I stand corrected. That is the difference between the valuation on the two bases. That amount is nothing if thereby we can restore the confidence in the public mind regarding the veracity of the offers and promises and statements of Honourable Ministers on the floor of this House. This is at the back of the arrangement and I wanted merely to mention this fact, so that you may accept the recommendation of the Government. But for Professor Shah's amendment, it would not have been possible to explain the genesis of this arrangement and therefore I say we are very much obliged to Professor Shah. Perhaps he has got an inkling into the rationale of this higher figure, but nevertheless he has done a public duty perhaps to give us an opportunity of explaining the things clearly to this House.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Finance and Commerce): Sir, I am grateful to my honourable friends who have supported the Government proposal in this matter and have therefore very much lightened my own task. I am particularly grateful to my honourable friend Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya for having put the issues so very clearly before the House. I should like first of all to tell the House that this is not a question of liquidation and that it is no use referring to the provisions of the Act relating to liquidation. It is a case of compulsory acquisition by Government of a 'shareholders' institution, and the shareholders in this instance have absolutely no voice in the matter of determining the price. In fact I am not aware of any negotiation even having taken place between Government and the shareholders; as a matter of fact when it is a question of nationalisation perhaps that formality is expected to be done away with. But the fact remains that the price that has been fixed rests upon the average prices fetched by the shares of the Bank during the period when the value of the shares was depressed as a result of the announcement by Government of its decision to nationalise the Reserve Bank. From this point of view it is open to any one to argue that Government are taking advantage of their own action, in calculating the amount of compensation on the basis of prices which have been depressed as a result of the announcement of Government policy in the matter.

Now, Sir, I have got the figures before me month by month for the last few years of the share value of the Reserve Bank. The average price stood at Rs. 135 and odd annas in 1944; it was Rs. 139 and odd annas in 1945; in 1946 it went up to 162; in the month of January of 1947 the price was quoted at 150, in February it was quoted at 138/8/-, and it was in February that the announcement was made that Government had decided to nationalise the Reserve Bank. Then followed a regular depression in the market; the price went down immediately next month to 128 and so on. In 1948 the price in January was 119, in February 114/8/-; I understand it has gone down further. I therefore think we should not be too critical of the value as fixed by Government, and stated by my predecessor in office, when he made it definitely clear as to what the Government's intention was in this matter. There is a good deal of discontent not merely among the shareholders at the fixation of the price at the present figure. The Central Board of the Reserve Bank passed a Resolution.....

Shri Ramnath Goenka (Madras: General): Interested party.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: In what sense are they interested? You know very well that the number of shares to be held by individuals is strictly limited.

Shri Ramnath Goenka: You know how they are held.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I know it; I personally hold a few.

This is what they state:

"They hold strongly that as this is the first case of nationalisation Government should interpret generously the undertaking explicit in their declaration of economic policy that compensation paid to shareholders on the nationalisation of a concern would be on a fair and equitable basis."

Then they go on to point out the various factors that should be taken into account in fixing the compensation, and incidentally they refer to the fact that for the last five years Government had reduced the rate of interest payable to the Reserve Bank shareholders. Under the Act 5 per cent. is the maximum payable and that would easily have been paid to the shareholders but for a restriction put upon the authority of the Bank in the matter of the amount of dividend which was not to be more than 4 per cent. For these five years the shareholders suffered from this disability, and I take it the House would not be prepared to subject them to a further disability by cutting down further the compensation which is proposed in this Bill. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in part (b) of sub-clause (1) of clause 3 of the Bill,—

(i) for the word 'eighteen', the word 'fourteen' be substituted; and

(ii) the words 'and ten annas' be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 3 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 4 to 7 were added to the Bill.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): Sir, I beg to move:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill, in part (c) of the proposed sub-section (1) of section 8 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, after the words 'Central Government', the following be inserted:

"to represent as far as possible territorial and economic interests and the interests of co-operative and indigenous banks."

The Reserve Bank is the financial apex bank for the whole of India which serves several purposes. It is the adviser of Government; it is a bank which has got under the new Banking Bill several powers with reference to the Scheduled and other banks. What has been happening is this. It has got a Board of Directors in which the directors do not know the working of cooperative and other Societies. The directors are generally people who are taken from the Scheduled banks and from business elsewhere. I explained only yesterday that with reference to the cooperative societies the advice given to the Provincial

[Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar]

Governments has been such that we had to fight against it and get it reserved. With reference to the cooperative societies advising the Reserve Bank issued a bulletin advising re-organisation of the movement we had to fight for a pretty long while, for something like 5 or 6 years, to have every proposal of the Reserve Bank reversed. The Banks have now gone back on every one of the proposals that were formulated in their bulletin. I also referred to the help given to the cooperative Societies and the way in which it was hedged round with conditions which were impossible of fulfilment. I will only mention one case in the district of Masulipatam to which both our honourable friends Dr. Sitaramayya and Prof. Ranga belong. The Central Bank lends something like 40 to 50 lakhs of rupees for the marketing of agricultural produce. The Reserve Bank came forward to help that bank. The Central Bank is getting money from the Provincial Bank at the rate of 3 per cent and lending to the loans societies which are undertaking to market all agricultural produce. The Reserve Bank made the proposal that they will lend money for the marketing of this produce at $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent and they imposed the condition that the benefit of this concession should go to the actual borrower at the other end. Well, it is impossible to work on that condition for the reason that the Reserve Bank fixed the maximum limit of credit for this particular bank at Rs. 5 lakhs. So what it means is this. They will lend money through the bank at $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent to the extent of Rs. 5 lakhs, whereas the actual transaction of the bank amounted to Rs. 40/50 lakhs. How can a poor bank find accommodation or facilities for the purpose of passing this difference between 3 per cent and $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent to the actual borrower if it has to borrow Rs. 35 lakhs from the Provincial Bank at 3 per cent. It is an impossible condition on the very face of it. So it is in that way that the Reserve Bank proposed to help co-operative societies. It is for that reason that I propose that this Board which they are constituting for the management of the Reserve Bank should consist of representatives of banks and co-operative societies and also indigenous bankers. The wording I have taken from the Government's own formula for the local bank. So far as the formula is concerned, it does not differ. I want the same formula to be adopted for the Central Board also. I hope the member in charge will accept the amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill, in part (c) of the proposed sub-section (1) of section 8 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, after the words 'Central Government', the following be inserted:

"to represent as far as possible territorial and economic interests and the interests of co-operative and indigenous banks'."

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I am very sorry that I am not in a position to accept this amendment. As I stated in my opening observations yesterday, we have incorporated in this Bill the minimum number of amendments that are required to transfer the ownership of the bank from shareholders to the State. Now so far as the Central Board is concerned, no principle of the kind enunciated by my honourable friend has been accepted, so far. The only difference that will arise in future would be that in place of a board composed partly of nominated and partly of elected members we will have only a nominated board. That does not justify my fundamental departure of the kind suggested by my honourable friend.

So far as the central organisation is concerned, I am not in a position to limit the discretion of Government in the matter of making nominations to the various categories mentioned in the amendment. But at the same time I want to point out that as regards the composition of the local boards there is adequate provision for the representation of the various interests which my honourable friend has in mind, and I think that it should suffice for the purpose of my honourable friend to have adequate representation of the various interests on the local boards. It is for these reasons that I am not in a position to accept the amendment.

Shri B. Das: I was a little disappointed to hear the remarks of my honourable friend, Mr. Neogy. Had he asked us to be satisfied for the present as his amendment stands, I would not have risen to speak. But I think he ought to recognise the points that my friend, Mr. Chettiar has made and ought to give some sort of assurance.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I ask the Honourable Minister to see if under clause (b) the four directors that are nominated by the Central Government, one from each of the Local Boards, and the composition of the Local Boards as representatives of these interests, the four directors of these interests are not in the Central Board?

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: There will be one from each Local Board and it may not necessarily follow that the director to be nominated by a local board would represent the co-operative societies.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: I am not satisfied with the explanation given but still I do not want to press it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In view of his not pressing it.....

Shri B. Das: rose—

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: When the mover does not press it, where is the room for discussion.

Shri B. Das: I want the Honourable the Finance Minister to give us an assurance that he will examine the point of view which Mr. Chettiar has raised. We find that for fourteen years the co-operative and agricultural interests have been neglected by those directors whom Government have themselves nominated or who have been elected through Government connivance. That assurance my friend can give us, namely, that when the Bill will be examined in the near future, those intentions will be incorporated in it.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: All I can say is that the Government will take into consideration all the factors that may bear upon this particular matter.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it that the honourable member wishes to withdraw his amendment?

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Yes.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw?

The Amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill in the proposed sub-section (7) of section 8 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, the words 'for not more than two full consecutive terms', be omitted."

This is not the original Reserve Bank Act. I spoke at length on this particular aspect of the matter yesterday. A similar provision does not find a place in the Nationalization Act so far as the Bank of England is concerned, in a country where there is ample talent available. So far as we are concerned, considering the number of restrictions that we have statutorily put on the qualification of a director or the type of people who will serve as Directors, I see there is no room for further tightening up the discretion of Government to say that no one will be a director for more than two consecutive terms. In fact if the director is not pulling his weight and is not useful, I think the Government will not renominate him. But if a particular person is useful, the mere fact that he has served two terms should not be a bar. I do not see the advantage of this particular addition to the clause.

I therefore move that this be eliminated with this rider that Government would only exercise their discretion in favour of a person being renominated for more than two terms, or being renominated once again in cases where he is useful and contributes to the proper working of the Bank. Sir, I move.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill in the proposed sub-section (7) of section 8 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, the words 'for not more than two full consecutive terms', be omitted."

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I have much pleasure in accepting the amendment: it only enlarges the scope of Government's discretion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill in the proposed sub-section (7) of section 8 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, the words 'for not more than two full consecutive terms', be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill, in the proposed sub-section (1) of section 9 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, for the word 'three', the word 'seven' be substituted."

Sir I am proposing that in the local board the number may be 7 instead of 3 for this reason. The clause says that the representation ought to be distributed throughout the territory, there should be territorial representation and there should be also representation for co-operative societies and indigenous banks. For instance, in the Madras Circle I want one representative to represent the Andhra Desh, one to represent the Tamil Nad, one for Mysore and Karnatak areas and the fourth to represent Travancore, Cochin and Malabar, one at least ought to be a co-operator and one an indigenous banker. So there will be six people accounted for. I am only suggesting that the number may be seven, so that there may be proper representation given to all interests. It is quite possible to say that in territorial representation the whole of it may be treated as one territory and you can appoint only one person. There is no meaning in saying that there will be territorial representation unless you are going to give adequate representation. The proposal that has been brought forward in another amendment is that the number should be 5 instead of three. As I have already explained taking Madras as having one of the local boards there shall be at least 6. So five will not satisfy the requirements of the place. That is why I propose seven since five will not be suitable.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill, in the proposed sub-section (1) of section 9 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, for the word 'three', the word 'seven' be substituted."

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I propose with your permission to move later on an amendment that the number should be five instead of three.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member can move the amendment now.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 9 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, for the words 'three', the word 'five' be substituted."

The reason why I have limited the number to five is that as it is at present there are seven directors in the local board, four of whom are elected by the shareholders and three are nominated by the authorities. All these three are supposed to represent specific interests. Actually the work of the local board, even as it is, is more or less of a nominal nature. One of the important pieces of work that it does is to look into the share transfer register, scrutinise it and authorise the share transfer. It will not do that work hereafter and its advisory capacity will be much less than what it is today by reason of the fact that it is a government bank and the Central Board will practically do all the work that is necessary. So a large representation will be futile. My honourable friend Mr. Chettiar said that four must represent territorial interests in a province like Madras and two must represent special interests. There is nothing to prevent the person representing Malabar to represent also the interests of the indigenous bankers or the person who represents Tamil Nad may also represent co-operative societies. There is absolutely no bar to all these interests being represented and still the number being only 5. Any larger number would be futile when the work of the board will be practically nominal and that is why I propose the number five instead of seven.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 9 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, for the words 'three', the word 'five' be substituted."

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I am prepared to accept the amendment of my honourable friend Mr. T. T. Krishnamachari. I do not altogether agree with him that there will be very little work left for the local boards. It is true that there will be no share registers in future and therefore the local boards will not function in respect of the share transfers, but if and when the Reserve Bank comes to be endowed with greater authority for purposes of supervision and control over the private banks as is proposed to be done under the Banking Bill, I take it that the local boards will have a considerable part to play in regard to various matters connected with enquiries and other things that the Reserve Bank may undertake.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Sir, I am surprised at this. When I moved the other proposal the Honourable Minister said that there will be proper representation in the local board and I ought to be satisfied with it. Now he explains that the local board is nothing. I do not know how the two statements are to be reconciled.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I never said that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On the other hand, he supported it.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Sir, in the circumstances, I beg to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 9 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, for the word 'three', the word 'five' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill in the proposed amendments to section 11 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, for items (i), (ii) and (iii) the following be substituted:

'(i) in sub-section (1) for "nominated or elected", substitute "other" and omit the proviso.

(ii) for sub-section (2) substitute the following, namely:

[Shri K. C. Neogy.]

"(2) A Director nominated under clause (b) or clause (c) of sub-section (1) of section 8 shall cease to hold office if without leave from the Central Board he absents himself from three consecutive meetings of the Board convened under sub-section (1) of section 13."

(iii) in sub-section (5) the words "appointment" and "or election" in two places shall be omitted."

Sir, I apologise to the House for having to move these amendments which at first sight might appear to be rather confusing. Yesterday I circulated a paper indicating how the entire section 11 would read as a result of the amendments proposed in the amending Bill, subject to the amendments that I have now moved. This was placed in the hands of every honourable member. It is rather a long note but if you want it, I can read out the whole of it and most of it is not of any substance actually. The only point of substance is as regards the disqualification of a director if he absents himself from three consecutive meetings. This unfortunately was omitted due to an oversight. The others are more or less drafting amendments, particularly to correct certain errors, except that in case of item (1) the result of the amendment would be to place the Governor, the Deputy Governors and the other Directors on the same footing for purposes of removal from office.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill in the proposed amendments to section 11 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, for items (i), (ii) and (iii) the following be substituted:

(i) in sub-section (1) for "nominated or elected", substitute "other" and omit the proviso.

(ii) for sub-section (2) substitute the following, namely:—

"(2) A Director nominated under clause (b) or clause (c) of sub-section (1) of section 8 shall cease to hold office if without leave from the Central Board he absents himself from three consecutive meetings of the Board convened under sub-section (1) of section 13."

(iii) in sub-section (5) the words "appointment" and "or election" in two places shall be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill in the proposed amendment to section 12 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, in item (iii) the words 'and omit the proviso' be omitted."

This is intended to correct what is purely a drafting error.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill in the proposed amendment to section 12 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, in item (iii) the words 'and omit the proviso' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill for the proposed amendment to section 13 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, the following be substituted:

Section 18—

(i) in the first paragraph, omit the words "or, where the powers and functions of the Central Board under this section have been delegated to a committee of the Central Board or to the Governor, in the opinion of such Committee or of the Governor, as the case may be,";

(ii) in clause (2) for the word "sterling" substitute the words "foreign exchange"; and

(iii) omit the proviso."

As regards the first one it is also by way of correction of an error of drafting. As a matter of fact the words in the amending Bill are not appropriate to the changed character of the Bank.

As regards (ii) the amendment seeks to substitute 'sterling' by 'foreign exchange'. The reasons for this I have explained in my opening observations yesterday.

As regards the omission of the Proviso, here again certain words were left in the amending Bill which are inappropriate, having regard to the changed constitution of the Bank.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in the Schedule to the Bill for the proposed amendment to section 18 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, the following be substituted:

Section 18—

(i) in the first paragraph, omit the words "or, where the powers and functions of the Central Board under this section have been delegated to a committee of the Central Board or to the Governor, in the opinion of such Committee or of the Governor, as the case may be,";

(ii) in clause (2) for the word "sterling" substitute the words "foreign exchange"; and

(iii) omit the proviso."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Schedule, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The Schedule, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

INDIAN COTTON CESS (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram (Minister for Food and Agriculture): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Cotton Cess Act, 1923, be taken into consideration."

This is a simple Bill and three points are involved for the purpose of amendment. Almost entirely, the Bill is the consequence of the partition of the country—especially the amendments which relate to the composition of the Central Cotton Committee and also the functions of the Committee.

The first amendment is this. The Central Cotton Committee contains representatives of the Provinces. As some of the Provinces have gone out of India their representatives are no longer to be retained in the Committee.

The second amendment relates to the functions of the Committee. Originally, according to the Preamble, the purpose of the Committee was not only to do research but also to help in marketing and development. As a result of partition we have found that the 9½ lakh bales which we used to receive from areas which are now included in Pakistan can only be produced if we develop the cotton areas within India. Therefore the amount of research work to be done has increased. There are areas which are intended to be developed for the purpose of better and superior quality of cotton. It is therefore felt that the functions of the Committee also should be in tune with the Preamble of the Bill, so that for the purpose of marketing and development the Committee might be able to function better.

The third amendment relates to the increase of the amount of the cess from two annas to four annas in the case of baled cotton and from six pies to one anna in the case of unbaled cotton. Originally this was the cess under the Act as passed in 1923 and a certain amount of reserve was built up. Later on the cess was reduced. Ever since then the Committee has been drawing amount every year upon its reserve, to make two ends meet. During the last ten years it was found that the Committee was not able to balance its budget and about Rs. 2 to 5½ lakhs was the deficit. The Committee continued to draw upon the reserves built out of the original cess at the rate of 4 annas. By 1945 the reserves also were almost exhausted and in spite of the prescribed minimum limit of Rs. 9 lakhs it was found that only about Rs. 7 lakhs remained in the reserve. At the same time after partition, because of extra number of research stations and because of additional work to be done, the Committee has proposed that the cess might be increased.

With regard to the result of the research work, in the case of certain important varieties, say, for instance, the Broach variety, the improvements have resulted, in a benefit of about Rs. 2 to 3 crores to the growers, because the improved variety gets a higher price. In the case of Jarilla, the improvement has resulted in a benefit of Rs. 2 to 2½ crores.

The consequence of partition has been that the irrigated cotton area has gone over to Pakistan. The yield in the irrigated cotton area is higher than in the rain-fed area. Therefore a greater effort has to be put forth and more research has to be done so as to see that the better varieties can be grown also in the rain-fed area. All this necessitates extra expenditure.

The plan at present is to put about 40 lakhs additional acres under cotton. Therefore, it is requested that the cess might be increased from 2 annas to 4 annas. This amounts really to about 1/12th per cent of the present value of cotton. That means somewhere about one pie per hundred-rupees. Therefore, it will have no substantial effect on the price of cotton. The Standing Advisory Committee of the Department has also approved of the Bill. Therefore I hope that the members of the House will see the necessity of this extra increase of cess, and also the two other amendments, and pass the Bill.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Cotton Cess Act, 1923, be taken into consideration."

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): Sir, this Bill seeks, as the Honourable Minister stated, to increase the cess from two annas to four annas, and from six pies to one anna, and also to amend the constitution of the Cotton Cess Committee. From the statement of objects and reasons it is clear that all along cotton was exported to Japan and a cess was levied on the export of cotton, but that due to Japan having entered the War, to that extent our finances have suffered and the Committee has suggested this increase. There is no objection to the increase in the cess, but I would like to point out one thing and draw the attention of the Honourable Minister to it, namely that the object of the Indian Cotton Cess Committee is to promote technological research in the interests of the cotton industry.

Sir, after Pakistan came into existence, as you are well aware, the long staple cotton that was grown in Sind and Punjab has been lost. Broach grows a certain superior quality of cotton, but it cannot be compared with the American quality which is known as a very special staple quality, which Sind and the Punjab also were growing. It has therefore to be specially borne in mind that the Cotton Cess Committee has to explore all avenues and extend their energies to see that this fine long staple cotton is grown in our country. Sir, you are aware that we had to send a delegation to Egypt to purchase on a barter system fine staple cotton for our mills. That delegation has failed, and we could not get, for reasons best-known to the Government, this long staple cotton from Egypt. Egypt grows a very fine staple of cotton and from that a finer kind of cloth is made. Sir, I therefore draw the attention of Government to this and say that earliest steps should be taken to ask this Committee to undertake immediately research in this direction and see that while increasing the cultivable area, a finer variety of cotton is also grown immediately, from next year. Let me tell the Honourable Minister that it will not take much time to do so; Sind which was growing only ordinary Sind cotton was able, after the Cotton Committee reported that Sind could produce American variety, to produce fine cotton within two years after research there. The Honourable Minister may not be under the impression that it may take some time.

Sir, we have to recoup the cotton lost to us in Pakistan. And we should also produce finer long staple varieties for producing finer cloth. We should not depend upon foreign countries; it is high time that we produce fine staple cotton in our country. I am sure that the ground that we have lost will be recouped if efforts are made by the Cotton Cess Committee, which is its fundamental duty. Under these circumstances, I support the motion and draw the attention of the Honourable Minister to the remarks that I have made. As far as the change of constitution is concerned, I have nothing to state because that is obvious in view of the division of the country.

Shri Satish Chandra (U. P.: General): Sir, having learnt from you this morning that talking pays, I venture just to say a few words today, and enter a talking career. I would like to make only a few brief observations with regard to this Bill.

Sir, this country has been the birth-place and the ancient home of cotton, and it was from this country that cotton migrated to other parts of the world. But today we find that cotton produced in this country is probably of the poorest quality that can be found anywhere else. It was under these circumstances that the Indian Central Cotton Committee was constituted by an Act of this House in 1923. Since then it has been doing useful work no doubt, but I would submit that much more vigilance and effort is required to produce better standards of cotton in our country.

If we just look over 25 years of work that this Committee has been doing, we shall find that up till now it has only been able to increase our long and medium staple varieties of cotton from 30 to 45 per cent. It has changed the character of the cotton crop to a certain extent. Though no long staple cotton, of staples bigger than an inch, was produced in those years when this Committee came into existence, we have now about 50 per cent. of the total of the long and medium staples as cotton with more than one inch staple.

Sir, we see that the area under cultivation of cotton has been continuously going down. If we compare the figures of 1941-42 with those of 1945-46, we find that the acreage of cotton has almost gone down by 50 per cent in the four or five years of war and the production of cotton has also similarly gone down. While India produced in 1941-42 about 44,24,000 bales of cotton, the production in 1945-46 was only 21,19,000 bales. These figures include the Indian Provinces and States, as also the Hyderabad State if we can include its territory as a part of our economic unit. I just want to supplement Mr. Sidhva's point by saying that in the divided India we have lost greater portion of the area where cotton acreage and production had not gone down to the same extent. That means that after partition we have been doubly hard hit. The cotton area in Pakistan has gone down only from 36,83,000 acres to 23,19,000 acres in the four years about which I am talking, while in India the area has gone down from 2,04,68,000 acres to 1,13,49,000 acres. There has been a decrease of about 50 per cent. in cotton area and more than 50 per cent in cotton production. The Central Cotton Committee should devote itself to this important aspect of our cotton problem if we are to become self-sufficient in respect of our cotton requirements.

Another thing that occurs to me, Sir, is that while we talk of food, it is generally said that during these years, the 'Grow More Food Campaign' has been responsible for the cultivator changing from food to cash crops, namely cotton, sugar-cane and so on. But when we look at the statistics we find that the area under such cash crops has also gone down. I do not know whether something is wrong with the statistics or the statisticians, or whether the purpose of these experts is only to confuse and complicate simple issues and explain them away by putting arguments as they suit them at particular moments. The statistics of the same statistician are placed before us, and we are told different things at different times. I would therefore request the Honourable Minister to kindly look into this important aspect of the problem.

One thing more which I would like to say is this. The Library of the House has not got any literature, not a single report, nothing about the working of this Committee, which is a statutory body deriving its authority from an Act passed by this Legislature. I wanted, with the help of the Librarian, to search anything, to find out some literature in respect of this Committee, and I am sorry to say that not a single volume could be available. The Committee, during its 25 years of existence, has not been able to place even one report about its work, in the past, or the work it proposes to do in the future, in the Library of the House. It is only from casual information gleaned here and there from the statistical data published by the Economic Adviser (Ministry of Agriculture), that one can draw his conclusions. There is no literature as such from the Committee in the Library of the House.

Another point that I would submit, Sir, is that we have lost all the area under jute in East Bengal, and also a lot of area under cotton in the Punjab which grew mostly medium and long staple varieties. At the same time, everywhere, it is being suggested that the area under food should increase. It is, I think, not possible to increase the area under cotton in this country as the Indian Central Cotton Committee has suggested recently. I understand that the Indian Central Cotton Committee has recommended that 4 million acres of land should be brought under cotton cultivation so as to grow one million additional bales of long staple varieties of cotton. I do not know where these 4 million acres are to be found at present, till we can reduce the area under food crops. Therefore, I think, the real emphasis should be on increasing the yield per acre rather than adding to the area under cotton. If we compare the figures of crop yield in other countries like Egypt, U.S.A. or Peru to our own, we find that India grows only 110 lbs. of cotton per acre, whereas Egypt grows 530 or 535 lbs. In these 25 years that this cess is being levied and this Committee has been functioning, we have only been able to improve the yield from 96 lbs. to 110 lbs., that is to say about 15 lbs. per acre according to the figures of these statisticians, which I think are not wholly reliable. Therefore, I submit that the greatest consideration should be given to this aspect of the problem also.

Then, Sir, this Committee has been engaged mostly on technological research. It maintains a technological laboratory, an experimental spinning station and a testing house for fibre in Bombay. But it has altogether neglected the agricultural side of it. The Provincial Governments have of course been doing something, and this Committee has tried to co-ordinate their activities. But it has not done anything directly for the agricultural improvement and agricultural research of cotton cultivation. I think this can be explained away by the fact that the section which is now being amended, Section 12(2) says that the money realised from the cess could only be spent on technological research for the development of cotton industry. But as you will see from the Preamble of the Act, the Committee has been constituted for "the improvement, development and the growing, marketing and manufacturing of cotton in India". So even if Section 12(2) restricted the scope of the expenditure that the Committee could incur out of this cess which had to be applied only to technological research, still it could have done more in this field if the Government had taken care to provide money from general revenues or the Cotton Fund. Anyway, this defect is being sought to be remedied by this amending Bill and I hope the Committee would take greater interest in this respect.

Lastly, Sir, I have a few words to say regarding the constitution of the Committee. There is a publication by the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research regarding its "organisation and function", and at the end of it, a list is appended of the members of the Indian Central Cotton Committee also. I am amazed to see that while in this Committee, the manufacturers the big businessmen, traders, they are all over represented, the few seats that are reserved for growers have gone to Nawabs and Rai Bahadurs. I do not know why, Sir, the United Provinces growers are represented by one of the biggest zamindars of that province, a Nawab who has probably, I think, never seen a cotton plant, and the other is a Rai Bahadur. Are there no other persons who grow cotton in the whole of the United Provinces and who can be found to represent the interest of the growers on this Committee? I find, this is the general position. I cannot definitely speak about other provinces, but at any rate, I very much doubt if the two persons who represent the cotton growers from the United Provinces on this Committee have ever seen a cotton plant or can identify and pick it up when it is mixed up with other plants.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think the honourable member ought to confine himself to the increase of the cess.

Shri Satish Chandra: The cess is levied by the Committee which is constituted by an Act, and if the cess is increased its burden goes ultimately to the tax-payer and to the consumer, and we should see that it is properly spent and it is properly administered. It is in that respect that I am making my observations. If I am off the point, I can resume my seat.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member may reserve the constitution etc. to some other Bill that may come, but it is not quite relevant to the scope of this Bill.

Mr. Hossain Imam (Bihar: Muslim): The Constitution of the committee is also one of the items that is being amended. Therefore, I think, the honourable member is relevant.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member may go on.

Shri Satish Chandra: Sir, I would say that the Indian Central Cotton Committee has neglected one more important aspect, and that is the proper utilization of our short staple cotton. In other countries, we find that a lot of improvements have taken place in the cultivation as well as on the technological side of cotton cultivation as well as cotton trade and cotton manufacture. In Russia we find that cotton is now being grown in natural colours such as red cotton or blue cotton. There is an interesting pamphlet "king cotton" published by the Department of Information and Broadcasting. From it I have got the information that Russia is growing cotton in natural colours. I do not know, Sir, whether any effort has been made in this country to grow cotton in different colours. If such cotton is grown in some countries and it ultimately finds a market in other countries, I doubt, if our white cotton will not become obsolete and out-of-date. I am sure, its demand and its prices will very much go down. I wish, Sir, that the Indian Central Cotton Committee may conduct research in that direction and try to keep in touch with the experiments that are being made in other countries.

There are also non-textile uses of short staple cotton in other countries, for example, cotton-beltting, cotton bags and other things. In this country we are only producing coarse cloth out of it, or we are exporting it to other countries, while we can very well manufacture many important things out of that, if there is some technological research on the uses to which it can be put. Without exporting it, we may easily manufacture those things which we now usually import. Similarly, Sir, rayon I understand has now become very popular, and in U.S.A. its production has gone to such a high level that out of the total fibre produced in the world, about one third is rayon fibre. If our people have got a taste for fine cloth, we can convert our short staple cotton, by artificial means, by using its cellulose, into artificial silk and finer cloth, and I hope that experiments will be made in this direction also by the Committee.

Sir, though this Committee has been doing useful work, and it has carried out many agricultural experiments for evolving better varieties of cotton by hybridization and inter-breeding of various strains, or by suggesting methods for the control of pests and virus or fungus diseases, I think there are many other ways in which the activities of this Committee can be developed. Sir, as I said before, I think that the Committee has been doing very useful work, and very little flutter that has been caused in this House when the cess is being doubled is in itself a tribute to the work of that Committee. I only wish, Sir, that its activities must be more diversified and developed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: As the House had sufficient discussion over this, I shall request the Honourable Minister to reply.

Some Honourable Members: No, no.

Mr. Hossain Imam: The House seems to have the desire to have further discussion on this Bill and therefore, it would be better if you postpone it till tomorrow.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We can sit for 15 minutes more.

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I wanted to give my honourable friends, the Ministers a safe passage of their Bills by remaining myself silent. I have followed this all along for the past few days, but I am sorry I have to request my honourable friend for some explanation connected with this Bill. Sir, we are unfortunately having too many funds, too many committees working towards the same end and for the same purpose with diversified activities. Sir, we have a Cotton Cess Fund and the Cotton Fund. The House has a right to know why we have two different kinds of funds intended for the same purpose and realized from the cotton and cotton textiles. Sir, I further learn that the Cotton Fund has a lot of money at its disposal. If my information is correct, we have today about a crore of rupees. I am not, sure but that is my information. If that is so, I should appeal to my honourable friend in charge of the Bill to explain why is there so immediate a necessity to rush through this Bill in this Session.

Having said so much about these two different funds, I should like to know why these two funds should not be co-ordinated and unified, brought under the unified control of one committee with one purpose namely development of the cotton industry as also cotton cultivation in the country. Sir, the Bill proposes to raise the taxation by 100 per cent. My honourable friend has not given an estimate of the amount that he expects to realise in terms of this taxation, what was the previous income under this head, what is the present income that is expected out of this.

The Honourable Shri Jairajdas Doulatram: Seven to ten lakhs; it depends on production and consumption in the mills.

Shri Biswanath Das: I am thankful, Sir. I am alive to his difficulties. I know important areas of Pakistan have gone out of us. I know that under the name of the Grow More Food Campaign, areas have been diverted from this cotton cultivation, with the result that the area has been considerably reduced. None-the-less, we want that this cotton industry as also the cultivation of cotton should be undertaken in an intensive manner. I expect that the Honourable Minister would think of having a reshuffling of the whole thing. I am thankful to my honourable friend the previous speaker from the connected areas for having given an idea—a very good idea of the working of this Committee. Sir, if this committee is to be useful I think a new set up is necessary, a new set up whose utmost attempt will be directed towards development of agriculture as also of industry. As I have already stated, I repeat, we want two first class institutions namely, one for the development of cotton cultivation and also for improving the quality and improving production.

Sir, my honourable friends have referred to short staple cotton. I come from a district in Orissa which has the reputation of producing Patsal cloth. This cloth has got a wide reputation. They were going on with this industry producing the finest varieties of cloth, the Patsal cloth which could match with 200 counts of yarn. This very yarn was produced in this country out of this very cotton. Either there must have been deterioration or the art and industry have failed to live up to expectation, or have deteriorated in quality. In any event, it should be the duty and purpose of this Committee to see why it is so and what is the power that has dragged it down and down to this mire so as to be away practically from the pale of existence.

Having stated so much about the work of the Committee, I come to request the Honourable Minister about the representation in the Committee. He has given representation only to the cotton areas. Why? If I remember aright, Sir, his colleague and friend, the Honourable Minister in charge of Industry and Supply has allotted textile mills to the different provinces in India. Orissa has had allotment; I believe Assam has allotment. The other areas which had not found representation find their quota of allotment of this machinery. Therefore you feel, it is necessary and justifiable that the different provinces in India should have also their textile mills developed in their own areas. This takes us to this question namely that the provinces also will take care to see that they develop the growth of cotton in their areas. We have very good areas. An industrial survey was conducted in Orissa and also in the Orissa States and it is the view of experts that there is ample scope for development and growth of cotton in the province of Orissa. Need I say that there is and there will be the possibility of development of growth of cotton in other areas which are left without representation. I do not claim that equal amount of representation is necessary for those areas that are actually cultivating and producing cotton. But should I be wrong in claiming that certain representation is necessary also for the areas who are anxious to develop the growth of cotton and who are taking necessary steps in this regard. In this view of the question, I would appeal to my honourable friend to examine this question.

Sir, having stated so much, I would again revert to the question of having two first class institutions in our country for the growth and cultivation of cotton in quality and quantity as also to develop the cotton technology in this country. Sir, it is unfortunate, and I shall stand corrected if I am wrong—my information is this—that this unfortunate committee had also communalism brought into its operation with the result that it was neither useful nor helpful to the industry nor to agriculture to the extent to which we had expected. All this should be given the go by and a first class Agricultural Institute and a Technological Institute should very soon be inaugurated, if necessary with experts from outside countries. It is a sad anomaly that in our country with 32 crores, previously it was 40 crores, of people to clothe, it has not got a proper Technological Institute for cotton. It is a disgrace; we hang our face in shame. Still the fact remains. I would appeal to honourable friend to take care to see that he indents technologists and scholars who are well versed in this art from outside countries to help us in this regard, in the direction indicated. Sir, we are depending on Egypt. How long are we going to depend on Egypt? When I plead for oil-cakes and other necessary manure either for agriculture or for cattle, you plead in the name of hard currency, the necessity for dollars and hence the necessity for export. Need I say that this will be more useful to you, more helpful to you to your dollar reserves and also for the development of industry and agriculture in this country if you go ahead. Therefore, in conclusion, I would appeal to my honourable friend to make the committee more useful and effective and if necessary come forward with more taxation. We are not opposed to the idea of taxation. What we ask him to do is to make the Committee effective and go ahead with the scheme. I wish him good luck.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Sir, in the remaining five minutes it will not be possible for me to cover all the points which have been referred to. I therefore propose to deal with the major points, and with regard to the rest I can assure the House that they will be very carefully gone into and decided as favourably as possible. I am grateful to the members of the House for giving many constructive suggestions. With regard to some of them I may be able to state even now definitely what Government will do. I do propose to go into the constitution of this Committee in the sense as to who the persons are who represent the cotton growers; and if it is found that any people are not functioning effectively or do not represent the cotton growers properly.....(An Honourable Member: 'Cotton merchants?') Yes, all those who represent the industry represent the growers, and if possible, also introduce new blood on the earliest possible occasion. I am surprised to know that there is nothing in this library which can give the members of this House any information as to the activities of the Committee which is 25 years old; and I do propose to supply that need immediately.

With regard to my honourable friend Mr. Sidhwa's suggestion, as a matter of fact the Committee sat within a month or two of partition and reviewed the whole position, and they themselves came to the conclusion that both with regard to the quantity and also the quality we will have to put forth special efforts. Therefore it is in the Committee's programme not only to increase the quantity but also to improve the quality. As a matter of fact they have a plan for about seven Central research stations in different regions and 25 sub-stations attached to them. It is because of shortness of time that I did not go into fuller detail, but this is their programme.

With regard to the cotton funds we made efforts to secure ad hoc grants and the Committee did give us and would give us ad hoc grants for special development schemes.

With regard to the criticism about the acreage under cotton it was decreased deliberately because in Bombay and some other provinces special efforts were made during war time to increase the area under food even at the cost of cotton. But this matter has been gone into and the provinces have been circularised so that under the new programme food may not suffer on account of cotton. The two things have to be reconciled; we want food and we want also cotton. How these two are to be reconciled has to be investigated.

Sir, I do propose to go into all the other suggestions and give them favourable consideration and try to implement them as soon as possible.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Cotton Cess Act, 1923, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That Clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, I beg to move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill—

(i) part (b) be omitted, and

(ii) in part (a), the brackets and letters '(a)' be omitted."

There were four items of which items VIII, IX and X are condensed into two items leaving a gap of No. X. Now the Draftsman attempts to renumber XI as X and remove the gap. But it is the universal practice that when certain numbers are omitted the others are not renumbered, because that dislocates the original scheme. If some houses are broken in a street the municipality does not renumber the remaining houses, if some telephones are abandoned the other telephones are not renumbered. One should not attempt to change the scheme of numbers needlessly because it leads to administrative difficulties. If amendments are not thought necessary there need not be any amendments. The Honourable Minister may accept bad drafting or even bad English.

But I submit that for the sake of uniformity of practice as also of simplicity this should be accepted. Sir, I move.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Sir, I am not convinced by the argument and cannot accept the amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill—

(i) part (b) be omitted, and

(ii) in part (a), the brackets and letters '(a)' be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 3 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 4 and 5 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill be passed."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Saturday, the 4th September 1948.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. Speaker: I have received notice of an adjournment motion from Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man. I do not know whether copies of the motion have been handed to the Honourable Minister concerned. The honourable member Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man handed over to my Private Secretary, at about 10-30 A.M. notice of an adjournment motion. Has the honourable member given notice of this to the other parties concerned?

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man (East Punjab: Sikh): One copy was given to the Secretary and the other copy to the Relief and Rehabilitation Minister simultaneously as it was given to you, Sir.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena (Minister of State for Relief and Rehabilitation): I have not received any copy so far.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member refers to lathi charges and several other things and I do not know how they relate to the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry. They are matters within the purview of the Honourable the Home Minister. In the circumstances, I do not think that this motion can be moved. Even otherwise the motion is inadmissible but I need not go into the merits of it nor read it to the House.

Indian Central Coconut Committee.—Shri A. K. Menon.

Standing Committee for Ministry of States.—Shri V. S. Sarwate.

Central Advisory Board of Archaeology.—Shri Satish Chandra.

Central Advisory Board of Education.—Dr. Raghu Vira.

Court of University of Delhi.—Pai Ji Govind Malaviya.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): Sir, two days ago I drew your attention and the attention of the House to the state of business and to the difficulty of getting through some important legislation in case the House met at the usual time and the session is adjourned today. You were pleased then to say that after the first day's experience of the progress of business the matter might be considered and further that the House might sit yesterday and today till a later hour in the afternoon. The House did sit till a later hour yesterday. We had some experience of what has been got through, and I am afraid the progress has not been as rapid as it might have been and quite a good deal of legislation has still to be considered. Now, I do not think it right to make the House rush through important legislation, nor do I think it would be desirable to postpone something that we consider fairly urgent. So some of us—members of Government and members of the House—have been in consultation over this matter, and we felt that it will perhaps be desirable to prolong the session up to Tuesday next—that is, two extra days after Sunday—to allow this legislation to be got through and not to be rushed through or perhaps delayed till the next session. So I would suggest to you, Sir, if you and the House agree, that the session might be prolonged for another two days, that is Monday and Tuesday. In that event of course—if that is agreed—it would not be necessary for the House to meet beyond 5 p.m. today.

Mr. Speaker: I am gladly agreeable to the proposal. As I personally said the other day, I did not like legislation to be rushed through, and honourable members should have enough time. But that does not mean that we should take more than reasonable time to discuss legislation. So the House will continue to sit on Monday and Tuesday, and we will not be sitting today beyond 5 o'clock.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): We have lost the Question Hour in the bargain.

Mr. Speaker: Yes. But we have perhaps gained at least one day because otherwise a sitting on Wednesday might have been necessary.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): There was some Committee called on the 6th, and most of us have made our arrangements to go away after that. I hope the Government will not ask the House to sit after Tuesday, so that we can finish our Committee work on Wednesday and go away to our places.

Mr. Speaker: What the Honourable the Leader of the House has requested does imply that. But his request and his expectations have to be implemented by the House when they discuss the business before them in the House.

Shri B. Das: Yesterday we had to rush like anything.

Mr. Speaker: Now there is no ground for rushing.

CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS BILL

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Finance and Commerce): Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to make provision for the regulation of the profession of accountants.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to make provision for the regulation of the profession of Accountants."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES (TEMPORARY POWERS) (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee (Minister for Industry and Supply): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill to amend the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946, be taken into consideration."

This is a short Bill, but it deals with a question of principle of considerable importance. The House may recall that a few days ago I announced while discussing the textile policy of Government that it was the intention of Government to bring forward an amending Bill to amend the provisions of the Essential Supplies Act, 1946 to provide for a different form of compulsory punishment with regard to all offences relating to violation of textile control orders. The present Act provides that if any person contravenes any order under the Act he will be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both, and if that order so provides, the court trying such contravention may direct that any property, in respect of which the court is satisfied that the order has been contravened, shall be forfeited to Government. There is a proviso that with regard to any contravention of an offence relating to foodstuffs the court shall, unless it records its reasons in writing to the contrary, direct that the whole or part of such foodstuffs be confiscated. With regard to textiles there was no specific provision except the general provision that it was left to the discretion of the court either to award sentence of a term of imprisonment or to order fine. The amendment which has now been proposed lays down that in case of any contravention of an order relating to cotton textiles, where the offence is proved, it will be obligatory on the part of the court to award sentence for imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, and it may in addition impose a sentence of fine; and further that the confiscation will be compulsory. There have been many cases in the past where, although cases were proved, either some fine was imposed or forfeiture also was imposed to a limited extent. It is not my purpose to suggest that by merely tightening the provision for punishment we are going to secure a complete change in the present state of affairs. But it does indicate a change in the policy which Government would like to see pursued. It secures considerable psychological change. Government desires that all cases of contravention of textile control orders will be taken serious notice of, and it will not be open to any offender to go away merely by paying some fine, but imprisonment and confiscation of the property in question will be a compulsory part of the punishment.

It is not the intention of Government to modify the present provisions with regard to other commodities—for instance, foodstuffs, paper, petroleum and other commodities. That portion has not yet been considered by Government.

The only amendment which I am now bringing before the House for its approval relates to cotton textiles only. There have been some amendments proposed with regard to foodstuffs. I would suggest to the honourable members that it will be desirable not to consider those amendments at this stage, because the whole object of the Bill is to secure amendments of the order regarding textile control to fit in with the new textile policy. With regard to foodstuffs, or other commodities, when the policy of the Government is determined I am sure that the Minister concerned will bring forward necessary amendments to the control order. But that is not the object of Government just now.

With these words, I move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to amend the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946, be taken into consideration."

1004 CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [4TH SEPT. 1948]

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): Sir, I have heard the Honourable Minister and noted the reasons suggested by him for introducing this amending Bill. In this connection, I would like to invite his attention to the present position. The present law gives sufficient powers to the Courts if they are so minded to inflict the punishment that is provided in the amending Bill. The penalty now provided in the Essential Supplies Control Order is that if any person contravenes any order he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend up to three years, or with fine, or with both. Now, the amendment proposed is that where the contravention is of an order relating to cotton textiles, the Court shall sentence any person convicted of such contravention to imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years. The only difference that is intended to be made is that here the law compels the Court to sentence the person to imprisonment and also to direct that the property shall be forfeited. That power was also there if the Court thought fit to give that sentence.

Sir, the Honourable Minister has suggested that this would mean a psychological change of considerable importance. I would invite his attention to the fact that these control orders are not available even in Government Departments; even the Magistrates who try the cases have not got complete information on the orders that are issued from time to time and the rules framed from time to time. This amendment is not confined to cases of blackmarketing or any other malpractice in connection with cotton textiles, but it will cover even such small items as exhibiting certain rates on black-boards or the exhibiting of stocks etc. etc. It also relates to movement of goods and various other minor things connected with the textile business as a whole. If it were confined to certain specific offences which would be anti-social and which would add to the troubles of the general public, one can understand that the Courts' hands may be strengthened or tied and they may be forced to inflict certain punishment. But, Sir, this order will be applicable to a number of minor, petty acts which in law would amount to a breach of the provisions. Therefore, I would invite the Honourable Minister's attention to consider whether it will not be proper for him to define some of the breaches, some of the definite acts which will come within the category of the present amendment and leave out the minor things which are still governed by the Essential Supplies Order, to be dealt with according to the discretion of the Court. After all, we must presume that the Courts are there to try cases and give the punishment that is deserved in each case—unless we feel that the Magistrates trying the cases are all persons who cannot be trusted; in that case I will be sorry if the Minister takes that view.

Then again, another thing that has got to be seen is that if we are going to tighten the law in this fashion, Government should take steps to familiarize the public with the orders that are issued from time to time. As I said, even lawyers, even the Magistrates trying these cases, even the Department which got to administer these things, have not got complete information on this subject. I am speaking from personal knowledge when I say that a copy of this Essential Supplies Act is not to be found in the Bengal Government Department, it cannot be found with the Magistrate who has to try all cases under this Act in Calcutta. If that is the position in Calcutta you can very well imagine what happens in other places. Therefore, either the Government should make it possible that these orders that are issued from time to time are available at every place, or make them known to people all over the country. Otherwise they should not force the hands of the Magistrates to inflict this kind of punishment in every case, whether the offence is petty or big or of any nature whatsoever.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, we have to see the background of this Bill before we comment upon it and upon the necessity for Government to have brought it forward. The background is that notwithstanding all the efforts of the Government in the past to check blackmarketing and profiteering, the commercial interests both in industry and elsewhere flouted, and successfully flouted, all the provisions of the Act that is now in force. That is the background which we have to remember when my honourable friend the previous speaker stated that on a petty matter also the Court may inflict a heavy penalty. The object of this Bill is really to inflict such heavy penalty; I think that is in the mind of the Government, and if that is not so I will certainly not support this Bill. For the last four years these interests have in season and out of season flouted the provisions of the Act notwithstanding some cases of deterrent sentences having been passed even under this faulty Act. Sir, I remember that in one instance even after a fine of Rs. 50,000 was inflicted, a repetition of the offence occurred. This is a thing with which we were all upset including the Government and the Government had to state on the floor of the House in the last Session that they cannot check blackmarketing, that they cannot stop this profiteering.

Sir, that is the attitude that has been displayed by our friends, these industrialists who say they are out to co-operate with the Government. On their assurance this House took the responsibility in supporting the Government in de-controlling cloth, which let me tell you I was personally opposed to. When we were told that there was no other alternative to remove the black-marketing and profiteering, we had to support the Bill half-heartedly—not half-heartedly but with great unwillingness on my part and on the part of several of my friends. Sir, what did we find? Between then and the period when Government had to decide to control again, the prices went up abnormally. No doubt some of the cloth came into the market which was not available before. But what good is it to the people and to the average consumer? People say that the prices are now lesser than the prices prevailing in the black market during control days. Is that sound argument? The industrialists should have taken steps to see that the proper prices—not black market prices—but the real control prices prevailed during the interim period. Then we would be able to say that they have been honest in what they told the Government.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. I find the honourable gentleman is going into the general question about control and people who are responsible for high prices and all that. These have been exhaustively discussed in the course of the debate on yesterday's Resolution.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C. P. and Berar: General): He was not allowed to speak yesterday.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, this is not an occasion for making that speech now. As I find, it is an agreed proposition that the controls have to be tightened and the only question, so far as the Bill goes, is the quantum of punishment that should be provided for, so that the control can be effectively tightened. Therefore, if we have again to go into general arguments which the honourable member is advancing, I shall be practically throwing open that Resolution now. So I propose to limit the scope of the discussion only to the quantum of sentences and not to the general discussion of control.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Sir, of course, I obey your ruling but it was never my intention to speak what I did not speak or wanted to speak yesterday. That was never in my mind.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): He did not say so.

Mr. Speaker: I did not attribute any motive. It was suggested by some other honourable member. I did not say that that was his motive.

I would therefore suggest one thing in this respect. I find a large number of amendments. Instead of having any discussion on the general consideration motion, just as I have suggested in respect of some other Bill, if the scope is to be restricted to the quantum of punishment only the better course would be to adopt the consideration motion, move all the amendments which refer to the various punishments and then have discussion in respect of them. That would limit the discussion and would also avoid repetition of the same discussion again when the amendments are taken up.

[Mr. Speaker]

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: I have no objection. Whatever procedure you want us to follow, I shall adopt that, but my point is I was only referring to what the previous speaker said about punishment and I was just coming to it and it was a little preliminary remark that I made as to what was the reason why although the punishment was deterrent this Bill was necessary. However, whatever you decide I have to carry out your order.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, I would suggest, if the honourable members agree, —of course, they are entitled to speak on the general consideration motion and I do not want to stop them—but let that motion be put through and then we shall have the amendments and the honourable member may speak when the appropriate amendment regarding sentences is taken up.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: I want to speak particularly on the motion for consideration.

Mr. Speaker: Very well, then. Let Mr. Sidhva finish.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Thank you, Sir. I was stating that the Bill now which provides deterrent punishment is perfectly justified. If it is left to me, I would have gone further and stated that not only the property which is under dispute should be confiscated but the entire stock of that dishonest dealer should be confiscated. I have seen from my experience that even this deterrent sentence does not frighten them. They are prepared even to go to jails. I have also seen that they are even prepared to pay some more fine, but they are really afraid to have their goods confiscated. Therefore, merely confiscation of a piece of cloth or a bale of cloth will not help. Whatever the goods, if he has repeated an offence, all those goods must be confiscated in toto. Then these people will come to their senses, not otherwise. In England, such a clause is very very strictly enforced. Even ten years imprisonment has been given and in one instance £10,000 has been inflicted as fine by the court and therefore the control has been effective and satisfactory there. But unfortunately, so far as punishment is concerned in this country, I may tell you with due deference to the present Government or the past Government, they were very luke-warm and the result is all this suffering. I am still doubtful about this provision. If you really wish to bring about a satisfactory result and a peaceful atmosphere in the country as far as this control is concerned to the consumers and the public, then why not make up your mind straightaway that we shall not consider the position of A or B or C, but whosoever contravenes this order, whether it be a minor offence as my honourable friend pointed out or anything else, he shall certainly be dealt with very seriously. Then, my honourable friend stated that the Court has no copy of this order, the Court has got no papers. I do not know which Magistrate will conduct a case without any Act before him or any charge sheet before him. He would consider all these matters. He would call for the orders and papers if he has not got them. To say that there are no papers before the Court and therefore it will not be possible to inflict punishment is no argument. Although I have yet some amendments to move making the punishment more deterrent, still as this is an improvement upon the previous Act, I support it.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, before I take the Bill itself, I would like to have one point clarified. Did the Honourable Minister state that sub-clause (b) of clause 2 will not be moved in the House today relating to foodstuffs? Is that the position?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I did not say that. What I said was that the Government's intention was not to alter the existing provision relating to foodstuffs and we have repeated the existing provision in the revised Section.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Both are included, you see.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Mr. Speaker, I welcome this Bill so far as it goes, but at the same time, I am constrained to say that it does not go far enough. The Bill, as my honourable friend, the Minister for Industry and Supply made out in his speech, is designed to meet the social menace that arose during the war and has still not been curbed. Perhaps, it will not be far from the truth to say that it is going apace in spite of the fact that the war has come to an end and the conditions that gave rise to it have also ceased to exist. Wars, Sir, invariably lower the ethical and social and moral standards of mankind and it takes a long time for humanity subsequently to achieve a re-valuation of values, to uplift itself or to regenerate itself. The last World War—World War II because of its colossal magnitude and its enormity of destruction and devastation accentuated this process and we are still suffering from the after-effects of this malaise. Unfortunately, Sir, never has any society been free from those unscrupulous people who exploit the hunger of their fellow-men—those, if you will permit me to say, sharks of society who do not shrink from making even death pay a dividend. Death has paid to many of these a very rich dividend. Even the tragedy of the Bengal famine during the last war did not serve to change the hearts of these racketeers, black-marketers, and profiteers, the vile and contemptible traders in misery and death. Laws were passed during the war, but the British Government was in no mood to enforce them, because the ill-gotten gains and tainted money of these sharks of society went to fill their war-chest, and so that bribe went on increasing. It is disgraceful to what depth this menace reached during the war. So filthy and foul, so disgraceful were the state of affairs that Pandit Nehru, before he assumed the helm of affairs in our country, soon after his release in July 1945, I believe, in a speech in Bombay, referred to these black-marketers and profiteers in food and cloth and went to the length of saying that they must be hanged from the nearest tree. That was before he became the Prime Minister. But, latterly, Sir, I think, only 3 or 4 months ago—I do not remember exactly whether it was in Gwalior or some other place—he said: "I see this evil all around me, but at the same time I am feeling helpless in the face of this",—hardly a statement or a remark or a pronouncement to be made by the Prime Minister and the Head of a State. To say that he is helpless in the face of these 'gold bugs' is certainly something which I cannot imagine. Why, just a little while ago the Honourable the Home Minister said the Government is powerful enough to suppress or repress or take action against refugees or against those who might try to incite them there. Is not Government powerful enough to put an end to these black-marketers, the hoarders, the anti-social parasites who invest Indian society today? So far, Sir, I believe, there were measures enough, measures galore, but for some reason or other, the laws did not have the desired effect and why? Personally, I think that the causes were four or five-fold. I think, firstly, perhaps the Acts passed by the legislature were not strictly and vigorously enforced and there was some indifference on the part of the authorities who were there to administer the laws promulgated by Government. Secondly, the machinery for the enforcement of the laws was perhaps inadequate. Thirdly, Sir, I say it with considerable hesitation, perhaps there was corruption or collusion between some of the authorities and the trade and industry. Fourthly, there was no co-operation between the traders and Government; they did not want to co-operate and snapped their fingers at the Government; and lastly, Sir, perhaps the fear of punishment was not strong enough in those who dared to break the law. It is said, Sir, that fear of God is the beginning of wisdom, but perhaps many have not got that fear of God and that faith in God enough to make them travel on the right path. So for those, there must be the fear of punishment. The punishment must be deterrent enough to make them stick to or to travel on the right path. Therefore, Sir, I would have liked the Government to go further than they have gone in proposing this measure. The Statement of Objects and Reasons says: "In order to tighten the machinery for the enforcement of the control on cotton textiles . . ." In my view, it is not sufficient, not adequate to merely tighten the machinery. There are other things also to be done and that is, Sir, that corruption must be rooted out. Corruption whether among the people, whether among the traders, whether among the Government Departments or anywhere else, must be rooted out first before you can enforce this measure with any degree of hope as to its success; otherwise, Sir, it would be a dead letter and like some of the Acts adopted by Government, this will also be a dead letter and we shall become a laughing stock of those who take an impish delight in violating the orders of control on food and cloth. My honourable friend, the Honourable Minister may say "Well, how much farther can we go?" We have made the sentence of imprisonment mandatory. I was surprised to hear Shri Prabhudayal Himatsingka say that even at present the courts are sufficiently armed. But, Sir, they are not so armed. Had they been armed, had the measures at present in vogue been sufficient, these black-marketers, these profiteers, these anti-social parasites will not be flourishing at present. As my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva said it was only 'may' and not 'shall'; it was only recommendatory; it was not mandatory; I am glad, Sir, that this imprisonment has been made compulsory. The court will have no option but to sentence an offender to imprisonment. But, Sir, even this, I think is not sufficient; it is not enough, because, Sir, somehow or other during the last 20 years, I think due to Mahatma Gandhi's movement and partly to other reasons, the fear of jail does not deter people from committing crimes against society. Of course, the crime in itself will involve moral turpitude or lower them in the estimation of their fellows, but some have gone so far down the scale that mere contempt of their fellow men will not deter them from committing crimes against society, so long as they can feather their nests by hook or crook. Therefore, Sir, I want that the punishment should be more deterrent, so that they will not think of committing such an offence again.

The other day, Sir, in the papers, there was a report to the effect that the C.P. Government was thinking of riding anti-social offenders, especially offenders in regard to cloth and food on the backs of donkeys in the streets of towns in which they were arrested. That perhaps is a very salutary punishment. That might deter some person at least from committing such a crime, but, Sir, there are others more hardened to any sense of shame and therefore, Sir, I would have liked the Government to bring in this punishment of whipping. I suggested, Sir, in the course of a debate in the last session that whipping shall be introduced and it will have the desired effect as against anti-social offenders of this type. I would recall this fact that Kemal Ata Turk, soon after he became the Head of the Turkish State in 1924 or 1925, had a man whipped for spitting in a public square. Only for spitting. We had penalized "spitting" in the Factories Bill, but we had only "fine" there. Kemal Ata Turk in Turkey, he had a man publicly whipped for spitting in a public square. But, Sir, here it might be said by my honourable friend the Minister that it is a barbarous practice; whipping has gone out of fashion.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: May I ask if anybody was whipped for speaking at random?

Mr. Speaker: Not physically, but figuratively.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I would ask my honourable friend, Dr. Deshmukh to apply that law to himself. Therefore, Sir, if my honourable friend, the Minister thinks it is a barbarous practice to whip people, I would say, is it not more barbarous to exploit the hunger and misery of their fellow-men? Is it not more barbarous to kill people in cold blood? Is it not more barbarous, Sir, to exploit the misery of millions just in order to feather their own nests and to fill their own coffers? Barbarity is a crime against mankind. If the hoarders and the profiteers are not barbarous then who else can be?

Therefore, Sir, I would earnestly plead with my honourable friend the Honourable Minister that the punishment should be more rigorous, must be more deterrent, so as to make them desist from this kind of anti-social practices. Our own Ex-President of the Congress, Acharya Kripalani in a momentous speech when he resigned the Presidentship of the Congress last December, asked the Government; "where is all your army of C. I. D. and Police gone; here, under the very nose of the Government, in Delhi, there are people who carry on the nefarious trade in black-marketing, and profiteering; what is your army doing; if you are not able to prevent these things in the heart of Delhi, what hope have you got of enforcing this measure in the rest of the country?" We must make up our mind whether we want to put an end to these things or not. If the will is there, certainly action will follow; if the will is not there, any amount of laws that you make, any number of measures that you may pass in this House will have no effect, and will be in vain and all the tears shed here will be a mere waste, and the time spent here will be a sheer waste.

Then, I would like to draw your attention to this advice, the exhortation that Mahatma Gandhi used to make in the early part of his campaign against British rule. He used to say that we are fighting a Satanic Government, the Government of Satan. But, Sir, I find today that Satanic Government has gone, but the rule of the Mammon has come. I am not eager to disparage the Government; I am not anxious to merely criticise the Government. When I see these practices flourishing all over the country, I hang my head in shame. What is the Government doing? I would like to appeal to the Government and tell them not to take my comments amiss, not to take my criticism amiss. I want that all anti-social practices should be put an end to; I want that some action should be taken by the Government. I say all this, not that I love my Government less, not that I love my leaders less, not that I love my Ministers less, but that I love my country more. That is why I want these practices should be put an end to as soon as possible.

The suggestions I want to make are: first of all, the Government must make up their minds that they want to put an end to these crimes and anti-social practices, and the laws made in this House must be strictly and rigorously enforced without fear or favour, against whomsoever it may be. Secondly, the machinery should be tightened and if the machinery is inadequate, it must be made adequate to meet the menace. Thirdly, corruption—however highly placed the man may be—must be put an end to. This is very fundamental. Fourthly, if trade refuses to co-operate, if industry refuses to co-operate, if the retailers or the wholesalers refuse to co-operate, then, Sir, the punishment should be more deterrent. I was also going to suggest that there should be social boycott of these criminals.

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid the honourable gentleman is covering much more than is justified on general grounds. This is not a general speech against what should be done and what should not be done. He has to confine himself to the scope of the Bill. He is merely repeating his own arguments in different words.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I was coming to the end of it.

Mr. Speaker: He must end it.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I was coming to punishments.

Mr. Speaker: He has already sufficiently spoken on that. I am marking his speech from the beginning. I cannot allow a general dissertation on morality and general things about controls, etc. I believe he has sufficiently spoken on them. Has he anything special about the Bill?

Shri H. V. Kamath: I was going to suggest further that there must be social boycott of these criminals and offenders against society. Sir, I am reading from one of the articles that appeared in our weeklies in India: "Instead of discouraging these black-marketers and profiteers, some of us, even highly placed men go to the length of inviting them to our functions and actively collaborating....."

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid the honourable member is going beyond the scope of the Bill. I cannot permit that quotation or that line of argument.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, I am coming to the end. I said that if these anti-social offences and practices are put an end to with vigour, then only, we will have the rule of the people by the people and really our institutions will be democratic and the Government will work for the people. Otherwise there is the danger that we may stray into plutocracy, that is rule by the men of wealth. I hope this is just a transition to the rule of God on earth that Mahatma Gandhi aspired for. He wanted that the Kingdom of God must prevail. Today the position is different. We see Mammon all round. I would like to say something from one of the books that inspired Mahatma Gandhi in the early part of his life, the book "Unto this Last".

Mr. Speaker: I must ask the honourable member to finish his speech now. I am not allowing him any further. Dr. Deshmukh.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: Mr. Speaker, Sir, I am very much grateful to you, Sir, that I have been able to catch your eye. I got up and sat down ten times yesterday; but I was not fortunate enough to get half the time that my honourable friends have had today.

Sir, it appears to me that the Honourable Minister is committing a grave waste of time of the House. We are every time being told that the time of this House is very precious and you, Sir, are the most watchful guardian of the time and have always seen to it that it is properly utilised. It appears to me that you have not examined the provisions that are proposed in the Bill. If you had examined them carefully and considered the speech of the honourable the Minister, you would have come to the conclusion that the whole ado is for the mere change of the word 'or' into 'and'. There is nothing else in the whole amending Bill except this. Added to it, Sir, before the speech was made, we might have some consolation that clause 2 sub-clause (b) was going to make some difference add to the provisions in the existing Act; that has also been retracted and we have it from the Honourable the Minister that he does not propose any change so far sub-clause (b) of clause 2 is concerned. Therefore, all that is left is the change of the word 'or' into 'and', unless, of course, the Honourable Minister is pleased to accept my honourable friend's suggestions in regard to whipping, donkey processions and social boycott which would change the character of the amending Bill. Then probably we would have spent this time usefully. I think this is much ado about nothing especially when we have the Honourable Minister for Home Affairs who is the guardian of law and order in the country, and we are also conscious of our strength which was effectively manifested in this House this morning. If the executive Government of India is worth anything the present courts and the present powers should serve them more than adequately. It is no use saying in an enactment that the magistrate shall do such and such a thing; there is nothing like 'shall'. After all a Magistrate cannot catch hold of a person and sentence him. The whole of the Indian Penal Code is content to have the word "may" and that has served us all these years. Similarly the original Act which is in force today would be quite sufficient if the executive instructions of Government are followed. I do not therefore see any necessity for this amending Bill and taking all this trouble, because actually there is not going to be any difference whatever. The word 'may' always has, specially with reference to punishments, the force of 'shall'. It is not necessary to say that the court shall, do a particular thing. After all it is open to the court to say that it does not find the offender guilty. The only difference that is going to be made is that there will be fine in addition to imprisonment. I suggest therefore that the Bill should be withdrawn so that the time of the House may not be taken by other honourable members delivering harangues on the textile policy of Government, etc. That of course is natural because we do not usually have a chance of saying all that we feel and so you should consider it excusable if we give vent occasionally to our pent-up feelings. I suggest that the time of the House would be saved if the present bill were boiled down to what is absolutely necessary. I should also like to make a request that you Sir should not permit the Honourable Ministers on the Treasury Benches the latitude of taking up too much of your time. Yesterday the Prime Minister talked for about seven minutes to tell us that he had nothing to say; and that time was unfortunately taken out of non-official business. It might well be that those seven minutes would have given me a chance to deliver a speech which I had prepared and spent a good deal of time on. I have all the greater grievance because on a previous occasion when Babu Rajendra Prasad decontrolled food I had no opportunity either. I do not of course want to make a personal grievance of it but these are things which may I think be borne in mind. The Honourable Minister may therefore postpone this Bill and confine it to the essential purpose if any which it is intended to serve.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, I want to speak on a drafting point.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member can speak when we take up the amendments.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I want to speak now so that the Honourable Minister may take note of it.

Mr. Speaker: Then I take it the honourable member will not speak then.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I may not. Section 7(1) which is going to be amended provides that in case of contravention certain properties shall be forfeited to His Majesty. This law was passed on 9th December 12 Noon 1946 when His Majesty had undoubted jurisdiction over India. But in the revised proviso of the present Bill the Draftman has used that phrase in two places, although "His Majesty" is today an anachronism. So the expression in the proviso will have to be changed and that will require a consequential change in sub-section (1) itself. This drafting point may be considered.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): Sir, confronted with a legislation of this kind I think the House would do well to remember the distinction between the duties of a member of the legislature and those of the executive authority. If you give too much power to the executive, if you only want to rid the country of all its evils by a mere resort to greater punishments I think you will have undesirable results and you find the executive completely demoralised and lazy in the performance of duties. I confess that I do not see eye to eye with my honourable friend Mr. Kamath in all that he has said. I would rather ask this House to ponder carefully and thoughtfully on what has been said by my honourable friend Mr. Himatsingka and proceed slowly and cautiously in respect of legislation of this kind. I should like to be informed whether black-marketing and profiteering have increased only owing to the leniency or so-called leniency of the State. Have they not failed because in all cases the necessary amount of proof has not been produced? They have increased not because fine has not been provided, but the real fact is that cases of this kind are brought before the courts hastily. It was thought that as soon as cases were brought to court they would end in conviction. The lower magistracy are dependent for their promotion on Government and think that more convictions would lead to their promotion. So they convicted and gave the most monstrous sentences, and in the court of appeal the accused either got off or were treated leniently. This is the only reason why black-marketing and profiteering have increased, not because of any defect in the law. They have increased because of the carelessness and inefficiency of the officers who deal with these cases. I am very much surprised to find that in order to make the law drastic the elementary principles of criminal law have been ignored; section 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code has been thrown to the winds. This Bill provides that when contravention of the order has been proved the magistrate will have no alternative but to send the accused to jail. There is departure from the ordinary law; the word "shall" is there and there must be imprisonment. Section 562(1) Cr. P.C. lays down that an accused instead of being sentenced to imprisonment may be let off with a security. That is completely abrogated in this measure.

Then, Sir, there should be some distinction between ordinary and technical contravention of orders. We know that for the mere fact that certain accounts are not shown properly there is a contravention and technical breach of the order; will that man have to be sentenced to imprisonment also? Will the Government really get the sympathy of the public in general if they have a legislation of this kind, where all small technical contraventions and serious contraventions have to be punished by imprisonment and nothing else? It is time that the Honourable Minister should ponder over these things. I am afraid the country will say that you are trying to cover up your inefficiency and your own mistakes in the matter of the textile policy by trying to lull the public into a sense of security by introducing a legislation of this kind. Only the other day you decontrolled cloth without having an alternative provision for the supply. Cloth having been decontrolled, people purchased it at very high prices from other places. In places like Assam, people booked cloth from Bombay and Calcutta by air and the prices soared up very high. They did it because decontrol had taken place. Now you are going to impose control again and you will thereby be compelling those people to sell their cloth at a very low price: but if they keep it back they will be charged with hoarding. What will the people think of this?

As I have said it is not by whipping or by awarding capital sentences that you are going to solve this problem. The speech of my friend, Mr. Kamath, reminded me of the medieval days. You may remember the punishment inflicted in the Tower of London. You may remember the time when Nanda Kumar was sentenced to death for the offence of perjury. You may remember the days in old Assam when people were sentenced with their knee-caps, as it is alleged, cut off for thefts. The kind of talk which Mr. Kamath has treated this House with may please some people outside it, but it is no solution of the problem before us. The solution is that you must get the public confidence, and you must convince the public that you have introduced a policy which is really going to work and only in cases of any infringement of that policy can you have this kind of punishment. Merely enhancing the sentence will not solve anything. I would ask the Honourable the Minister to consider the provisions of Section 562 where for minor offences you punish merely with a fine and in cases where more severe punishment is called for, you punish with imprisonment. That is commonsense.

Even two years after the war you have not been able to tackle the cloth problem. Merely that you cannot send people to the gallows because you have not provided for a lesser sentence.

As regards the point raised by my friend, Mr. Naziruddin Ahmed about "His Majesty" I do not know whether it is a real mistake or whether it is intentional. But the fact remains that still we are wedded to the old order of things. We want our Majesty kept and our Crown kept. The Indian sentiment has never been so democratic as to forget the King and the Crown.

Mr. Speaker: I may point out that in the original section the words are "His Majesty" and this is a proviso to that section.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, I have finished.

Mr. Hossain Imam (Bihar: Muslim): I do not wish to indulge in any high-flown rhetorics. I simply wish to say something on the matters of the day. I welcome this measure in the spirit in which it has been brought, but I regret that it does not go far enough. My regret is twofold. Firstly, there is the old complaint that I have been making, that we pass skeleton laws leaving the rule-making power too wide to the Executive Government, and thereby creating the troubles to which reference has already been made by honourable members on this side of the House that rules and regulations under which they are being prosecuted are not available to the public. The public does not know what are the rules which have been framed. Although the ignorance of the law is no excuse, nevertheless there are occasions when it is the duty of a just Government to make endeavours to supply them. This is caused because the regulations are made and unmade so frequently that it is difficult to keep trace of them. Even in the Government offices, except for one or two copies of the Act and the Regulations which are continuously pasted up, you do not find the latest and the last rule made in many copies available. I therefore think that this habit of legislating by rules should be avoided as far as possible. But that is not within the scope of this measure. I wish to stress the fact that the provision of a punishment is not an end in itself. It is a means to an end. The end desired is that the practice which is penalized will end. May I know what steps are being taken by the Ministry to bring forward this desired result? The law, as it is being amended, simply makes the forfeiture mandatory. Otherwise there is no change in the law and stress has been laid on the period of three years. Imprisonment is compulsory but imprisonment can be till the rising of the court as has often happened in courts which regard the offence to be merely technical.

I would like to draw the attention of the Ministry to the fact that the black-marketing does not start with the retailer as is commonly supposed. There are four steps in this racket, and the first and foremost is the one which goes with impunity. I refer to the production by the mills. The first black-market starts from there because unless you have the supplies you cannot have the black-market. The supply is usually given by the mills through the ingenious method of showing lesser production than is the actual production in the mill. My complaint is that the Government has not framed any rules, from 1943 up to date, in order to tighten the grip on the millowner who is the first and the keystone in this black-marketing racket. I have known instances where mills have shown their production by about 20 per cent less than the actuals. The method of finding this out is a formula which has probably the approval of the tariff board also that 100 lbs. of cotton gives 108 lbs. of ordinary coarse and medium cloth. On this formula if it were worked out by the Textile Commissioner I am certain that lakhs of bales would be found to have been hidden away by the mills, and there is no regulation at least to my knowledge by means of which mills are compelled to bring about their production to the average level or to be penalised for producing less.

The second step among the black-marketeers is the quota-holder, as they existed before the decontrol was started. I do not know whether they exist

1014 CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [4TH SEPT. 1948]

[Mr. Hossain Imam]

today. The quota-holder is a person who acts as an intermediary between the mill and the wholesaler.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: He is not in existence today.

Mr. Hossain Imam: I am so glad. So I will pass on to the wholesaler. They take some premium on the supply of better kinds of cloth. It is there that you must have a role to regulate that they should not make these charges.

Last but not least is the retailer. In places where there had been rationing no check was ever applied to find out whether the cloth sold was sold according to ration cards or not and whether the ration cards were genuine or bogus. All these things go to make up the black-market. The purport of my speech is to remind Government to tighten its machinery of inspection, regulation and control. Unless you do that it is no good providing for any measure of punishment, because there will be no cases and there will be no punishment. If there is only one case out of a 100 or 1000, that will prove no deterrent. What is wanted is that the Government should go full steam ahead and evolve a system by which they will have complete check, greater inspection and better rules and regulation, so that every thing can be controlled. If we have that it is not necessary that the punishment should be strict. On the other hand even exemplary punishment to one in 1000 will induce the black-marketeer to take the risk rather than give up his practice.

In this connection I should like to point out to a bit of inconsistency between the Act itself and the proviso. In the original Act Section 7 sub-section (1) says:

"If the order so provides, any court trying such contravention may direct that any property in respect of which the Court is satisfied that the order has been contravened shall be forfeited to His Majesty."

And the present proviso says:

"The Court shall direct that any property in respect of which the Order has been contravened shall be forfeited to His Majesty."

Here there is an element of incongruity. In the main Act you give the discretion to the Court, whereas in the proviso you make it compulsory. I do not know the law and so I shall place this point for your consideration. Secondly I want to draw your attention to the words "any property in respect of which the order has been contravened." Supposing the charge is that a man has sold rubber cloth No. so and so at such and such a price. Will it mean that one bundle of that cloth will be forfeited. This should be clarified. Do these words cover the generality or particularity? If it is to be restricted to that particular piece of cloth to which it refers I think it is better not to provide for it. It would be so minor a matter that it would be difficult to prove that it has been systematically going on. You can only say that so and so bought the cloth and at a higher price than what was fixed. If it is the intention of the Government to continue this control it is necessary that a more comprehensive Bill including many of the rules which are fundamental, should be brought forward in the next session so that we may know that the Government is up and doing and what it is doing. It is not enough that they should be satisfied that they are giving us a good government. It is necessary that the public should be satisfied that they are having a good government. This is the advantage of having a national government. I want that the public should be satisfied and it is no good saying that the measure is of a temporary nature. The textile trouble will continue in my opinion for three or four years and we must proceed on the assumption that the control is to continue for a longer period and in a more comprehensive manner. Sir, with this I resume my seat.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I support the measure under discussion but my support is half-hearted, because it will not meet the needs of the country. Much has been said about punishment, more drastic punishment and less drastic punishment and punishment in the legalistic way as suggested by my honourable friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Choudhury. I think we are in a drastic situation and a drastic situation needs a drastic remedy. During the last four years the black-market has been at its worst. With the help of the British and American Air forces cloth was flown to Siam and China and now it is smuggled to Pakistan on both sides of India. Some drastic remedy is necessary. Those who are black-marketeers and suppliers need drastic punishment. I am not an admirer of Russian methods of action but I do feel that the Government of India should be empowered sometimes to act up to Russian methods. If there is summary justice and hanging of a few black-marketeers, suppliers, and intermediary dealers, if one hundred hangings take place in the market square of every town throughout India, there will be no more black markets. I do not profess that I love my government. I am trying to love them. I do not, like my honourable friend Mr. Kamath, profess that I love my country more than I love the Ministry. I am trying to love my ministry. They must understand the situation and act up in a measure that will suit the desire of the people of the country. Many women committed suicide in the Honourable Minister's own province because a saree or dhoti could not be available. Why are we fighting shy of hanging the black-marketeer or the cotton millowner, the wholesale supplier and even the retail dealer? (An Honourable Member: 'Hang them all.') Of course there will be hundreds of lawyers all over the country to defend the black-marketeer. Therefore I do request my honourable friend Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerji after the session is over to have an ordinance promulgated. We will not question him. I will send him a telegram of congratulations. Let them hang all black-marketeers, let them have summary justice. If there is to be any justice, let them take five people from the town and try those people, say five members of the provincial congress Committee as Panchayats. Unfortunately, although the Minister is not a Congressman, he is following the Congress principles of non-violence. Otherwise I believe the Honourable Minister has the strength and courage to act up to what I am suggesting to him. If you do not do that there is no use of this half-hearted measure. It won't meet the exigencies of the situation. It would not help the poor man who occasionally commits even suicide because he is going naked. It is pitiable that we are in this position for the last five years. Being faithful followers of non-violence we cannot say what is the proper punishment for those thousands and thousands—I may say even lakhs—of people who have been black-marketing and depriving the poor people of their minimum requirements of cloth. Sir, I do hope that during the recess the Cabinet will follow the suggestion I have dropped, and occasionally let us have Russian methods of justice though not Russian practice in other matters.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, I wish to confess at the very outset that the Bill is a disappointing one. I would wish the Honourable Minister to have brought forward a Bill more comprehensive, according to the wishes of the House. As has been pointed out by my honourable friends, the only change contemplated by this Bill in the original Act is the substitution of 'and' for 'or'. And by this Bill the Honourable Minister hopes to control the black-market. I am not for the punishment of whipping or of taking people round the streets on donkeys, as suggested by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Kamath. I really wonder how he made that suggestion. When these punishments were inflicted during the bureaucratic days on civil resisters we called them barbarous and uncivilized. I do not think that after we are free we should impose such punishments on anybody, whatever the offence may be.

While I do not like the punishment that my hon'ble friend Mr. Kamath has suggested I am not a whit less keen than him to root out corruption and I do wish the Prime Minister did really give effect to the announcement he made in his free days that he will hang the black-marketeers by the nearest tree. In fact I won't even mind the law not being made more stringent. What I am more concerned with is giving effect to the law. May I ask my honourable friend the Minister whether he can tell the House the number of prosecutions or convictions of millowners who have been guilty of all this cloth black-marketing during the last four or five months? The existing Act did give them power to award sentences of imprisonment for a period of three years or to confiscate the property. I want to know what has been done. The Bill says that if there is any contravention of the control orders, the offender will be punished. But we do not know from the Bill what the orders are. So this Bill is just a blank cheque to the Government—that whatever orders they make shall be followed, and if there is any contravention thereof, then such and such punishment shall be given. My honourable friend Pandit Kunzru pointed out the other day that such Bills should not be brought before the House. The entire power of law-making is really taken by the Government, and whatever they want they can provide for in the Rules. I wish the Bills brought are more comprehensive so that rule-making power does not degenerate into law-making power. I hope that the orders which will be made under this Act shall be comprehensive enough to root out the evil.

Yesterday I was listening carefully to the debate on the report which the Economists have submitted for solving the problem of inflation. I was feeling as to what was the use of these proposals so long as from top to bottom there is corruption in the Government and in the Congress and everywhere. So long as that is not rooted out no improvement can come. We will solve neither the food problem nor the cloth problem so long as that evil persists. If the law is properly and rigorously enforced, it will really be able to do much. But the position is unfortunately different. In my own Province there have been cases of big industrialists being convicted by the sessions courts of crimes of hoarding and black-marketing—there was a lot of coal buried under ground inside a factory—but the millionaire proprietor was acquitted by the High Court though the sentence against the underlings was upheld. Everybody knew what had happened, for such scandals cannot be kept hidden. I have no doubt that if some of these big millionaires who are really guilty of such crimes are punished this thing will come to an end. Black-marketing goes on, because the men at the top do it and we have not got the strength to punish them and to set them right. They have got the means, the lucre, and can influence even the highest-placed authorities in our country. And our Ministers know it. My hon'ble friend Mr. Kamath quoted just now from our ex-President, Acharya Kripalani, who asked "Where was the C.I.D. now?" Everybody one of them knows what is going on. Why not take action then? Everybody knows who are the men doing all this. In fact we have now appointed an Income tax Investigation Commission. Years have passed and we have to deal with the culprits now. I do not know what will happen. But the real point is that you must be ruthless against corruption. So long as you don't suppress corruption there is no use of these Bills. Let the punishment be three years or seven years or even twenty years. But if not a single man is punished or sentenced, what is the use of the provision for punishment? I would therefore like the Honourable Minister to give us in his reply the number of convictions which have been secured during the last one year since the Government took office of black-marketeers—of industrialists who own mills or of wholesalers dealing in crores of rupees of business who were guilty of black-marketing. I wish that he should also tell us how many people's properties were confiscated, and how many mills were sealed and the cloth seized by Government. Under the law they could have done both.

In regard to the second part about food, I have tabled one amendment, which provides for giving the courts authority either to confiscate the whole or a part of the food that the people were caught taking away. I want to be lenient to them, particularly to the poor people. The ordinary peasants are put in jail or punished, and the grain they carry is forfeited to the Government. But they do not know the law. If a man carries 20 seers of rice from Gorakhpur to Bihar, crossing the border, all the foodstuffs he carries is forfeited and sometimes he will have to go to jail. The court will not have the discretion even to release the grain which he carried, though it may be convinced that the man brought it due to his ignorance of the law. The rules are sometimes so foolish that it is not possible to follow them. I want that there should be some machinery in this country which should see that the orders which are made are sensible and then they are ruthlessly enforced. I would have wished that the courts were given more responsibility, that at least the High Court were given the discretion of punishing according to the guilt particularly in the case of foodgrains and particularly in regard to small offenders like a man crossing the border with twenty seers of rice when there is no rice on the other side. What I really want in this Bill is, more details of the machinery to control black-marketing, both cloth and food. We want to promise from Government that they would see that the orders are ruthlessly enforced and that those who infringe them will be brought to book and not left scot-free. Particularly I want regular monthly statistics to be given to the House giving details of the number of black-marketeers convicted—big merchants and mill-owners who are guilty of this. So long as we do not do it there is no use of planning, of discussing economists' reports and trying to formulate our policy. The country is tired of all this. Everybody knows that corruption is going on before our own eyes, but nobody will do anything to root it out. I wish that things are enforced rather than that we should pass this Bill. Sir, subject to these few words I support the Bill.

[پلڑت تھا کرداس بہارگو]

جناب والا! میں بلیک مارکٹ کرنے والوں سے اتنی نفرت کرتا ہوں جتنی کہ دوسرے اصحاب کرتے ہیں اور میں یہ بھی نہیں چاہتا کہ ان کو کم سزا دی جائے۔ لیکن میں یہ بھی نہیں چاہتا ہوں کہ تصور کرے کوئی اور سزا دی جائے کسی اور کو۔ اگر چند حصے دار ہیں تو ضبطی میں سب کی جائیداد آویگی کو مجرمیت میں ایک شخص ہی ذمہ وار ہو سکتا ہے۔

جناب! مجھے ایک بات یاد آئی ہے۔ میں چھٹی جماعت میں پڑھتا تھا اور وہاں پر جو کتاب پڑھائی جاتی تھی اس میں ایک کہانی درج تھی جسکی Heading تھی Five blind men of India۔ پانچ آدمی ایک ہاتھی کو دیکھنے جاتے ہیں ایک اُسکا منہ دیکھ کر اپنا تجربہ ہانپی کے متعلق بتاتا ہے۔ دوسرا اُس کے جسم کو دیکھتا ہے اور تیسرا پونچھ کو دیکھتا ہے۔ وہ کہتا ہے کہ ہاتھی مانند رسہ کے ہے اور چوتھا اس کے کان دیکھ کر بتاتا ہے کہ ہاتھی چھانچ جیسا ہوتا ہے غرضیکہ ہر ایک اپنے طریقہ پر دیکھ کر ہاتھی کا تجربہ بتاتا ہے۔ ایک طرف بلیک مارکٹ کو دیکھ کر میرے دوست، مسٹر کامٹھ کا قصہ ۱۰۸ درجہ کا ہو جاتا ہے۔ اور دوسری طرف میرے دوست مسٹر ہمت سنگھ کا کہتے ہیں کہ اگر ایک انسپکٹر کسی دوکان کے اندر جاتا ہے اور وہاں پر دیکھتا ہے کہ اس آرڈر کے مطابق rates کا list نہیں رکھا گیا ہے یا رجسٹر میں کوئی اور اندراج نہیں کئے جاتے ہیں تو اُس کے عدم اندراج پر اس دوکاندار کو سزا دی جا سکتی ہے۔ اور یہ جو سزا رکھی گئی ہے وہ بہت زیادہ رکھی گئی ہے۔

میں جناب والا کی توجہ نہایت ادب سے سکشن نمبر ۳ کی طرف دلاؤں گا۔ جس کے تحت کہ کنٹرول عاید کیا جاتا ہے۔ اس دفعہ نمبر ۳ کے ضمنی دفعات (h) اور (i) کو جناب ملاحظہ فرماویں۔ اس میں درج ہے۔

“(1) The Central Government, so far as it appears to be necessary or expedient for maintaining or increasing supplies of any essential commodity, or for securing their equitable distribution and availability at fair prices, may be notified order provide for regulating or prohibiting the production, supply and distribution thereof and trade and commerce therein.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the powers conferred by sub-section (1), an order made thereunder may provide—

(h) for collecting any information or statistics with a view to regulating or prohibiting any of the aforesaid matters;”

And (i) is very important—

“(i) for requiring persons engaged in the production, supply or distribution of, or trade or commerce in, any essential commodity to maintain and produce for inspection such books, accounts and records relating to their business and to furnish such information relating thereto, as may be specified in the order;”

میری گزارش یہ ہے کہ اس بل میں سب جرائم کے واسطے ایک ہی قانون بنا ہے اور ایک ہی سزا مقرر کی گئی ہے۔ یہ ایسی ہی بات ہے۔ اندھیر نگر چوپٹ راجہ۔ تھک سیر بھاجی تھک سیر کھاجا۔ یعنی ہر ایک چیز کی قیمت ایک ہی ہے دودھ بھی

دھی بھاؤ Vegetables بھی وہی بھاؤ اور دوسری دوسری انکی چیزیں بھی اسی بھاؤ سے بکتی ہیں۔ ان میں بھانپ پو کوئی تمیز نہیں رکھی گئی ہے۔ یعنی اس بل میں اس بات کا کوئی امتیاز نہیں ہے کہ دراصل جرم کرنے والے کو سخت سزا دی جائے اور Technical جرم کرنے والے کو کم سزا دی جائے۔

جب یہ بل پہلے پیش ہوا تھا تو اس وقت بھی میں نے Benthams کی پرار زیشن Quot کی تھی۔ اور کہا تھا کہ جس جرم کے واسطے کیا جی سے کام چلتا ہے اس کے واسطے hammer استعمال نہیں کرنا چاہیئے۔ اس میں یہ درج تھا کہ اگر آپ ہر ایک چھوٹے اور بڑے جرم کے لئے ایک ہی سزا دیں گے تو ہر ایک کو یہی Temptation ہوگی کہ وہ بڑا جرم کرے۔ اگر ایک شخص کو محض اس لئے تین سال کی سزا دی جا سکتی ہے کہ اس نے رجسٹر نہیں رکھا ہے تو وہ صرف اتنے ہی جرم پر آمیزدہ اکتفا نہیں کریگا بلکہ اور بھی کچھ کر دینا۔ اس لئے میری گزارش یہ ہے کہ یہ سارا بل Misconceived ہے۔ اور جیسے کہ میں نے پہلے بھی گزارش کی ہے اس سارے بل کو اچھی طرح سے Overhaul کرنے کی نہایت ضرورت ہے۔ اگر آپ آج اس Amendment کو قبول کرتے ہیں تو اس کا مطلب یہ ہوگا اگر کوئی دوکاندار رجسٹر ٹھیک نہیں رکھتا تو اس کے لئے عدالت حکم دے سکتی ہے کہ اس کی جائیداد چاہے وہ دس لاکھ روپیہ کی ہی کیوں نہ ہو ساری کی ساری ضبط کی جائے۔ اب تک تو جرمانہ کی سزا تھی مگر اب مال کی ضبطی کی بھی سزا رکھ دی گئی ہے۔ یہ قاعدے اور قانون اس واسطے نہیں بنائے جاتے ہیں کہ بے گناہ آدمیوں کو سزائیں دی جائیں۔ جیسا کہ میرے دوست مسٹر حسن امام نے اور مسٹر سکسینہ نے کہا ہے۔ اور دیس میں جو پبلک Opinion ہے اسکو ظاہر کیا ہے۔ جو لوگ دس ہزار قسم کی بد معاشیاں کر کے ملک میں Unrest پھیلاتے ہیں ان کے لئے تو یہ سارا ایکٹ بھی نا کافی ہے۔ اور جو غریب ہیں اور اصطلاحی جرم کرتے ہیں ان کے لئے ضرورت سے ذی دہ سخت ہے۔

جناب والا! میں چاہتا ہوں کہ یہ جو بلیک مارکٹنگ یا پرائیویٹنگ اور ہر رنگ کا جرم ہے یہ نہایت بڑا جرم ہے۔ اور مجھے ایسے آدمیوں سے ہرگز کوئی

[پندت تھاکو داس بھارگو]

ہمدردی نہیں ہے۔ اس بل میں یہ ترمیم کی جائے کہ کورٹ کو اتنے اختیارات نہ دیئے جائیں جتنے کہ آپ دے رہے ہیں صرف ان ہی لوگوں کو سزا دی جائے جو کہ دراصل مجرم ہوں اگر اس میں صاف طور سے درج کیا گیا ہو کہ سزا قید صرف اسی کو دی جائیگی جو دراصل black marketing کا مجرم ہو تو میں اس کے حق میں ہوتا۔ لیکن موجودہ صورت میں اس سے اتفاق کرنے کو تیار نہیں ہوں۔ اگر اس کو قبول کیا جائے تو نتیجہ یہ ہوگا کہ بہت سے ان لوگوں کو جیلوں میں سزائیں نہیں ملنی چاہئیں تھیں۔ انکو سزائیں مل جائیں گی۔ اسلئے اگر میں اس بل کو support کروں تو یہ میری ایک غلطی ہوگی۔ اس بل کی رو سے کورٹ کو یہ اختیار دیا جا رہا ہے کہ وہ Textile order کے خلاف ورزی کرنے والے کے جرم کو بڑی سے بڑی سزا دے۔ اور اسی وجہ سے آنریبل منسٹر نے یہ بل پیش کرنے کی ضرورت محسوس کی ہے۔

original measure ہو۔ غلط ہے۔ اور یہ دوسرا measure بھی غلط ہے۔

۱۹۴۶ میں میں نے ہر ایک بل کے متعلق یہی کہا تھا کہ جب تک آپ

ہر ایک قانون بناتے وقت اسباب کا خیال رکھیں کہ اگر کوئی جرم کرتا ہے

تو اُسکو اس جرم کرنے کی سزا اتنی ہی ملنی چاہئے جتنی کہ اُس کے لئے

مناسب ہو۔ میں اس واسطے نہایت ادب سے عرض کرتا ہوں کہ یہ بل اس قسم

کا ہے کہ آنریبل منسٹر صاحب کو یہ واپس لینا چاہئے۔ اور اس کے بجائے ایک

اس قسم کا بل لایں جو مناسب اور قرار واقعی سزا دینے والا ہو۔ اُسکو ہاؤس support کرینا اس بل کے enact ہونے سے بہت بے انصافی ہونے کا قدر ہے۔

(English translation of the above speech).

Pandit Thakur Dass Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, when this Bill was brought up in 1946, I raised an objection in regard to this Section. I am sorry I have again to repeat the same objection today. Sir, you have heard the speeches delivered in connection with this amending Bill which has been moved today. On the one hand Mr. Kamath wants that such persons should be taken round on donkeys in the streets and given a deterrent punishment. He even suggests that they should be flogged and on the other hand it is suggested that such persons should be hanged so as to serve as an example to others to desist from committing such anti-social offences.

I would like to explain this thing from a different angle of vision, viz., that Section 7 which is being amended lays down that a person who contravenes this Order is liable to be sentenced to three years imprisonment and in addition to a fine. My submission is that these persons should in all circumstances be sentenced to imprisonment, but under this amending Bill "the Court shall direct" that any property, whole or a part thereof belonging to that person should be forfeited. Sir, I hate the black-marketeers as much as other persons and I also do not want that they should be given a light punishment. But I do not also like that an innocent person should be punished and the real culprit let off. If two partners are involved, then the forfeiture will cover the whole of their property, although only one person may be held to be guilty of the offence. Sir, I remember when I was studying in the sixth class a book which we read contained a story with the heading "Five Blindmen of India". Five persons go to see an elephant—one of them explains his experiences after touching the elephant's trunk—the second looks at his body, the third to his tail—each one of them describes the elephant according to his own experience; and the fourth one after having seen his ears describes him to be like a chhaj—a winnowing basket. Everyone gives his own version about the elephant. The indignation of my honourable friend Mr. Kamath rises to 108 degrees when he sees a black-marketeer and my friend Mr. Himatsingka says that if any Inspector visits a shop and finds that the list of rates has not been exhibited in accordance with this Order or no entries are made in the Register, then a person is liable to be punished in default thereof, and the punishment which has been provided for such a breach is very severe. Sir, I would respectfully invite your attention to Section 3 in pursuance of which the control is imposed. Sir, you may go through Sub-sections 2(h) and (i) of Section 3, which lays down:

"3. (1) The Central Government, so far as it appears to be necessary or expedient for maintaining or increasing supplies of any essential commodity, or for securing their equitable distribution and availability at fair prices, may by notified order provide for regulating or prohibiting the production, supply and distribution thereof and trade and commerce therein.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the powers conferred by sub-section (1), an order made thereunder may provide—

(h) for collecting any information or statistics with a view to regulating or prohibiting any of the aforesaid matters;

And (i) is very important—

"(i) for requiring persons engaged in the production, supply or distribution of, or trade or commerce in, any essential commodity to maintain and produce for inspection such books, accounts and records relating to their business and to furnish such information relating thereto, as may be specified in the order;"

My submission is that this Bill prescribes similar punishment for all sorts of offences—the offence may be trivial or serious, but there is one punishment for all offences. This is "confusion worse confounded". In other words, a uniform rate has been fixed for all articles be they milk, vegetables or other sundry articles all sold at the same price. All these articles have been treated alike and this Bill does not make any distinction between a real culprit who should be awarded a severe punishment and a person committing a technical offence who should be given a light punishment. At the time when this Bill was first brought up, I quoted Bentham and pointed out that if you can manage with lighter punishment you should not resort to drastic measures. He says that if you provide the same punishment both for the serious and the trivial offence, everybody will be tempted to commit the bigger offence. If a person is sentenced to three years imprisonment simply for the simple reason that he has not maintained the register properly he will not only confine himself to the commission of this particular offence, but will do something more. Therefore, my submission is that this whole Bill is misconceived, and as I have stated it requires to be overhauled thoroughly. If you accept this amendment it would mean that if any shopkeeper does not properly maintain the Register, the Court can direct that his whole property which may be worth ten lacs shall be forfeited. Uptil now fine was imposed, but now the forfeiture of property has been provided. These rules and regulations are not framed with a view to punish innocent persons. As my honourable friends Mr. Hossain Imam and Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena have stated and have given expression to the public opinion in the country that this Bill is quite inadequate to deal with people who commit all sorts of offences and spread unrest in the country, whereas it will prove very harsh for those who are poor and commit only technical offences. Big persons are not punished whereas ordinary persons are prosecuted for petty offences as for carrying 5 seers of wheat or hiding 5 seers of wheat. When such offenders are produced before the Court, the Court thinks that when big persons are not proceeded with, what is the use of punishing the ordinary people? Therefore the Court deals with them leniently and acquits them.

Sir, I realize that the offences of black-marketing, profiteering and hoarding are very serious and I have absolutely no sympathy for such people. The Bill should be so amended as to give less powers to the Court. Only those persons who are the real culprits should be punished. If it had been specifically provided for that imprisonment would be awarded to that person only who is actually found guilty of black-marketing, then I would have supported it. But I am not inclined to agree to it in its present form. If it is passed, then the result would be that many such persons who should not have been punished will be convicted. Therefore I would be wrong if I support this Bill. Under the provisions of this Bill, the courts are being empowered to give severest possible punishment to the person who contravenes the Textile Order and for this reason the Honourable Minister has felt the need to bring forward this Bill. I would again like to submit that during the past two years this Act was not properly administered and the offenders were treated very leniently. This Bill does not contain any such provision which will deter people from indulging in black-marketing which has done very serious injury to the interests of our country. Therefore such black-marketeers should be awarded suitable punishment. But it should not be obligatory on the Courts to forfeit the whole property of a person in default of his having committed a technical offence in not submitting the returns or in not exhibiting the rate-lists. I do not support this measure. I would even go to the extent of saying that both the original Act as well as this Bill are unsuitable.

In 1946, I had expressed these views in regard to each and every Bill that while framing a legislation, it should be borne in mind that punishment commensurate with the gravity of the offence should be awarded. I would, therefore, very respectfully request the Honourable Minister to withdraw this Bill and introduce a fresh one, prescribing suitable and proper punishment. The House will support that. It is feared that the enactment of this Bill will result in injustice.

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साहू : वाचस्पति जी, इस बिल का मैं स्वागत करता हूँ, लेकिन स्वागत करते हुए भी मैं दो चार बातें असेम्बली के ध्यान में लाना चाहता हूँ। पहली बात यह है कि जितना गड़बड़ देश में होता है इसके लिए जवाबदेह कौन है? तो सुनता हूँ कि पहले तो गवर्नमेंट जवाबदेह है क्योंकि जब गवर्नमेंट ठीक तौर से कारोबार करेगी तो साधारण आदमी को इतनी तकलीफ नहीं होगी। लेकिन बहुत आदमी कहते हैं कि जिस देश का जैसा आदमी होता है उस देश की वैसी ही गवर्नमेंट भी होती है।

इस लिए कभी कभी यह शक होता है कि जब हम लोगों की गवर्नमेंट खराब है और यहां का आदमी भी खराब है इसी लिए गवर्नमेंट कुछ कर नहीं सकती। गवर्नमेंट कहाँ से आये। यह जो आदमी हैं उन्हीं के भीतर से गवर्नमेंट आती है। इसी लिए यह बात ठीक है कि गवर्नमेंट वैसी होती है जैसे कि किसी देश के आदमी होते हैं। और इसी लिए यह मालूम होता है कि हम लोगों के देश के आदमी ठीक नहीं हैं इसी लिए हम लोगों की गवर्नमेंट भी ठीक नहीं चल पाती है यह तो मैं मन्ता हूँ, लेकिन यह होते हुए भी देश में जो भले आदमी रहते हैं उनको चुन कर ही गवर्नमेंट बनाई जाती है और लोग समझते हैं कि उस गवर्नमेंट से हम लोगों को कुछ फायदा होगा। लेकिन अभी तक गवर्नमेंट ने जो काम किया है उससे साधारण आदमी यही समझता है कि गवर्नमेंट ने कोई फायदा नहीं किया। मैं तो एक बात कहना चाहता हूँ जो मैंने खुद भोगी है। मैं पहले कहना चाहता हूँ कि ब्लैकमार्केटियर कौन है? जो बेचता है वह ब्लैकमार्केटियर है पर जो खरीदता है क्या वह नहीं है? मैं समझता हूँ कि वह दोनों ही ब्लैकमार्केटियर हैं। लेकिन अवस्था ऐसी है कि जिसको ज़रूरत होती है वह खरीदता ही है—अगर नहीं खरीदेगा तो कैसे काम चला सकेगा। इसी लिए गवर्नमेंट को देखना चाहिए कि जो खरीदने वाले हैं, वह जो ब्लैकमार्केटिंग करते हैं उनको तकलीफ नहीं देनी चाहिए। मेरे मित्र पंडित भागव जी ने कहा कि जो छोटा काम करता है उसको भी उतना ही दंड होता है जितना कि उसको जो बड़ा काम करता है। मेरे मित्र शिबन लाल जी ने ठीक कहा कि असल में जो दोषी है वह भाग जाता है और दूसरे आदमी जो उनके अंडरलिंग (Underlings) होते हैं वह पकड़े जाते हैं और जेल भेजे जाते हैं। मैंने देखा है कि बिजनेसमैन के बहुत अंडरलिंग रहते हैं और वह उन्हीं से कारोबार करते हैं। एक दफा ऐसा हुआ कि जब चावल बालासोर (Balasore) से कलकत्ता जाने की मनाही थी तो बिजनेसमैन काफी चावल भेजते थे। एक आदमी एक बिजनेसमैन का अंडरलिंग था। वह डरता था, लेकिन बिजनेसमैन कहता था कि तुम क्यों डरता है, महात्माजी जेल गये हैं और तुम को डर लगता है। अगर एक दो बरस के लिए जेल हो जायगा तो उसमें क्या है? मैं वहां बैठा था। उस आदमी ने अभी तक दंड नहीं पाया है। मैं उड़ीसा से आता हूँ। एक बार मैंने एक दूकान से कागज खरीदा। मैं ने गवर्नमेंट को लिखा था कि मुझ को ऑफिस वगैरह चलाने के लिए कागज की

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साहू

जूरत है। लेकिन इतना करप्शन (corruption) है कि ऊपर से नीचे तक, कि जो मैंने कभी नहीं पाया। आखिर मैं एक दफा नहीं पर तीन चार दफा सिविल सप्लाय अफसर के पास जाने से ६ दस्ता कागज पाया। इसमें मैं क्या कर सकता था? इसलिए मैंने एक ब्लैकमार्केटियर के पास जाकर ४५ रुपया रीम में एक रीम कागज खरीदा। वह कागज बहुत पतला था। मैंने सिविल सप्लाय अफसर को लिख दिया कि मैं कागज नहीं पाता हूँ और इसलिए मैंने ४५ रुपया में एक रीम कागज खरीदा है। जो सिविल सप्लाय अफसर थे उन्होंने मुझको लिखा कि आपने कोई वाउचर पाया है। सौभाग्य से मैंने उसी ब्लैकमार्केटियर से एक वाउचर ले लिया था क्योंकि मैंने उसको कहा कि आपने ४५ रुपये लिये हैं—मैं तो सर्व साधारण का काम करता हूँ। अगर वाउचर नहीं होगा तो दफ्तर वाले शक करेंगे कि मैंने कुछ पैसा अपनी जेब में डाल लिया। इसी लिए आपको वाउचर देना चाहिए। तो उन्होंने दूसरे अंडरलिग को बोल दिया कि वाउचर दे दो। उसने वाउचर दे दिया। उसी वाउचर को मैंने सिविल सप्लाय ऑफिसर (Civil Supply Officer) के पास भेज दिया और कहा कि देखिये यह वाउचर है। उन्होंने कहा कि मैं जूरर उसको दंड दूंगा और उन्होंने केस भी स्टार्ट (start) कर दिया। लेकिन क्या हुआ? कुछ रोज़ में यह हुआ कि उनका ट्रांसफर (transfer) बिहार को होगया। फिर हम लोगों ने बहुत कोशिश करके गवर्नर को तार दिया और कहा कि यह आदमी तो अच्छा है इसको और कुछ दिन रखना चाहिए। तो दो महीने उस अफसर को रखा गया। केस स्टार्ट हुआ लेकिन फिर ट्रांसफर कर दिया। उस केस में कुछ भी नहीं हुआ और जो वाउचर है वह अभी तक आफिस में पड़ा हुआ है। अभी तक वापस नहीं आया। इसी से तो मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि हम लोगों की गवर्नमेंट बहुत ब्लैक मारकेटियर है।

एक बात मैं और कहना चाहता हूँ कि उड़ीसा में एक सत्यनारायण लाइब्रेरी है। उसके नीचे कपड़े के बेल (bales) मिले। सी० आई० डी० (C.I.D.) ने बहुत कोशिश करके उसको पकड़ा और यह सब जानते हैं कि कौन ब्लैकमार्केटियर है और यह माल किसका है, लेकिन दो बरस हो गये अभी तक कुछ भी नहीं हो सका और वह माल रखा हुआ है और गवर्नमेंट केस नहीं चलाती क्योंकि वह कहती है कि कोई क्लेमैंट (claimant) नहीं है। आपके हाथ में पुलिस है जासूस हैं पर फिर ऐसा क्यों होता है। मैं तो कहता हूँ कि यह परपज़ली (purposely) हो रहा है और इसका सबब भी मैं कह देना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि जब तक कांग्रेस गवर्नमेंट जो कि अभी गवर्नमेंट चला रही है जब तक वह बिज़नेसमैन के पास से सब काम के लिये रुपया लेती रहेगी तबतक बिज़नेसमैन ठीक तौर पर नहीं चलेंगे। होता यह है कि जब हम इन्कमटेक्स लगते हैं तो जो चैरिटीज़ (charities) के लिए कुछ देता है और उस पर रियायत करते हैं। ऐसा होता है कि जैसे गांधी फंड में कुछ अड़चन (Difficulty) होती है तो बिज़नेसमैन से पैसा लिया जाता है। हम लोग यहां इस तरह बिज़नेसमैन के पीछे पड़े हैं और जो कुछ बातें हम लोग यहां करते हैं उनपर बिज़नेसमैन हँसते हैं। वह कहते हैं कि अगर उनके पास एक डिवाइस (devise) है या सौ डिवाइसिज़ (devises) हैं तो हमारे पास १००० डिवाइसिज़ (devises) हैं।

मैंने बिज़नेसमैन से पूछा और वे साफ़ साफ़ कहते हैं कि यह गवर्नमेंट हमारे साथ क्या कर सकती है, लेकिन मैं पूछता हूँ कि जब हमारे देश की ऐसी अवस्था है तो हम लोगों को ज़रा सा यह ब्याल

नहीं करना चाहिये कि सभी मिलों को नेशनलाइज़ (nationalize) कर दिया जाय—अभी और फ़ौरन। कोई कहता है कि ऐसा करने से बहुत अड़चन पैदा हो जायगी और दुःख सहन करना पड़ेगा, लेकिन मैं तो कम से कम राजी हूँ।

जब से उड़ीसा में गवर्नमेंट ने यह पोलिसी कर दी कि चावल गवर्नमेंट लेगी और बाहर की मांग को पूरा करेगी तब से इतना भद्दा चावल उड़ीसा के लोगों को खाने को मिल रहा है कि कहा नहीं जा सकता है। उड़ीसा से चावल बंगाल को जाता है, बिहार को जाता है, मालाबार को जाता है—तो जहां भी उड़ीसा का चावल बाहर जाता वहां अच्छा चावल भेजा जाता है और उड़ीसा के लोगों को भद्दा चावल खाने को दिया जाता है। मैंने इसके बारे में मैजिस्ट्रेट (magistrate) से कहा कि उड़ीसा के लोगों को इस तरह का चावल क्यों दिया जाता है। उन्होंने कहा कि वह इस बारे में कुछ नहीं कर सकते हैं और यह काम सप्लाय डिपार्टमेंट का है और वही बाटने से ताल्लुक रखता है। शायद अच्छा चावल कभी न रहा हो।

जहां तक कंट्रोल का ताल्लुक है उसके बारे में मुझे बहुत दुःख है और मैं कहता हूँ कि वह कंट्रोल एक दम खत्म होना चाहिये। मेरी सोसाइटी के सभापति श्रीमान् पण्डित हृदयनाथ कुंशरू जी की राय है कि कंट्रोल रहना चाहिये। लेकिन वह मेरे सभापति होते हुए भी मैं इतना कहना चाहता हूँ कि कंट्रोल एकदम हटा दिया जाय, क्योंकि इसकी वजह से आदमियों को इतना खराब कर दिया है कि आदमी कुछ आदमी नहीं रह जाता है और नरक में यह चीज़ आदमी को पहुंचा देती है। इसलिए मैं कहता हूँ कि कोई और उपाय नहीं है कि कम से कम हम सब मिलों को नेशनलाइज़ कर दें लेकिन गवर्नमेंट इससे डरती है। गवर्नमेंट को दूसरे प्लैनों (plans) की तरफ़ ध्यान देना चाहिये। महात्मा गांधी जी ने चर्खा चलाने की प्रथा सब जगह चलाई थी और महात्मा गांधी जी के जीवित समय तक तो खदर सब बनाते थे। आज हमारे प्रान्त में जो वीवर्स (weavers) हैं वे कहते हैं कि महात्मा गांधी जी के मर जाने से यह सब चीज़ मर गई है। कम से कम ३ लाख से ज्यादा वीवर्स (weavers) जो कपड़े बनाते थे आज उन्होंने दूसरा प्रोफ़ेशन (profession) शुरू कर दिया है। वे लोग इतना अच्छा काम करते थे कि जैसा कि मेरे मित्र श्री० विश्वनाथदास जी ने अभी कहा—गवर्नमेंट ने उनको किसी प्रकार का इनकुरेजमेंट (encouragement) नहीं दिया और वे वीवर्स इसी हालत में रहे और कोई भी मदद सरकार की ओर से नहीं दी गई तो वे मर जायेंगे।

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is drifting into something very wider. His point is that mere controls won't do; and that Government must move in some other directions, that seems to be his point; he has sufficiently made that out. Will he come to the Bill now? There are only three or four minutes left.

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साहू : वाचस्पति जी, मैं इस बिल का स्वागत करता हूँ लेकिन स्वागत करते हुए मैं इतना कह देना चाहता हूँ कि गवर्नमेंट को जोर देना चाहिये जैसा कि अभी मेरे मित्र श्री० शिवन लाल जी ने कहा कि पं० जवाहरलाल नेहरू जी ने कहा था कि जितने भी बड़े लोग, और कोई भी ब्लैकमार्केटिंग करते हैं उनको फांसी दी जायगी। मगर मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि आजतक किसी को भी फांसी नहीं दी गई है। इसलिए इस बिल की सिफ़ारिश करते हुए मैं गवर्नमेंट का ध्यान इस ओर दिलाना चाहता हूँ कि जो आदमी दोषी हैं और जिसके बारे में गवर्नमेंट को मालूम है उसको पकड़ना चाहिये और उसको पूरी सज़ा मिलनी चाहिये।

(English translation of the above speech).

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I welcome this Bill. But while doing so, I would like to bring to the notice of the House certain matters. Firstly, who is responsible for all this trouble in the country? It looks as the Government is answerable, because if it properly runs its administration, people will not be put to any trouble. The proverb is "As the people, so the Government." Sometimes therefore it is felt that our Government is defective; if our people are blame worthy what can the Government do? Government is formed out of the people and therefore the proverb "as the people, so the Government" is quite true. It is therefore evident that the people of our country are not good and for this reason our Government too cannot function properly. I do admit this, but after all the Government is formed of the good and chosen people of the country and people expect some benefit from that Government. The impression of the common man about the work which the Government has so far done is that it has not done anything useful. I will narrate my own personal experience. First of all I would like to ask who are the black-marketeers? Is the seller alone a black-marketeer and not the buyer also? To me both of them are black-marketeers. The position is that one who needs does buy. If he does not, how can he otherwise do? Therefore, the Government should see that those who buy—who indulge in black-marketing are not harassed. My honourable friend Pandit Bhargava has stated that a person who commits a minor offence is also awarded the same punishment as is awarded to those who commit a major one. My honourable friend Professor Shibban Lal Saxena has rightly observed that the real culprit usually escapes, and the other persons who act as his underlings are arrested and sentenced to imprisonment. I have noticed that the businessmen have got a good number of underlings and they carry their business through them. Once it so happened that when a ban was imposed for the transport of rice from Ballasore to Calcutta, the businessmen used to smuggle rice in large quantities. Every businessman had employed an underling who was afraid of imprisonment, but the businessman exhorted him not to be afraid as Mahatma Gandhi himself had undergone imprisonment and therefore why should he be afraid?—What was there if he was awarded imprisonment for an year or so? I was hearing this talk. The person concerned has not yet been convicted. I come from Orissa. Once I bought paper from a shop. I had written to the Government that I required paper for running my office, but corruption is rampant from top to bottom, and I could never conceive of such a state of affairs. Ultimately I was able to secure six quires of paper after seeing the Civil Supplies Officer not only once but three or four times. What could I do then? I had to contact a black-marketeer and managed to purchase one ream of paper for Rs. 45. The quality of that paper was very thin. I wrote to the Civil Supplies Officer that since I could not get the paper, I had purchased a ream for Rs. 45 and on this he enquired from me if I had obtained any voucher in this connection. Fortunately I had obtained a voucher from that black-marketeer because I told him that he had charged me Rs. 45 and I being a public worker in the absence of any voucher, the office would doubt that I had kept something in my pocket. On these considerations I prevailed upon him to issue a voucher and he directed his other underling to issue a voucher. I was given a voucher. I sent the voucher to the Civil Supplies Officer for his information. He told me that he would surely prosecute the person and started a case against him. But what happened? After a few days the officer was transferred to Bihar. Thereafter we did our best and sent a telegram to the Governor asking for the postponement of his transfer order for sometime. As a result of this, he was detained for two months. The case was started but again he was transferred. No action was taken in that case and the voucher in question is still lying in the office. It has not as yet been returned. It is for this reason that I say that our Government is a black-marketeer.

Another matter which I would like to mention is that there is a 'Satyanarayan Library in Orissa from where several bales of cloth were recovered. The C.I.D. detected this after frantic efforts and everybody knows the black-marketeer and who is the owner of these goods. But a period of two years has elapsed and no action has since been taken. Goods are still lying and the Government does not institute a case for want of a claimant. Why does this happen at all when you have got the Police and the Investigation staff? I do say that this is being done purposely and would also tell the reason for it. So long as the present Congress Government continues to receive money from the businessmen for conducting all its affairs, the businessmen will not mend their ways. When we levy Income-tax, we have to give some relief to the person who contributes towards charitable institutions. Just as whenever any difficulty is experienced in the collection of money for Gandhi Fund, then the assistance of businessmen is invoked. The businessmen laugh at us for what we talk about them here. They claim to have many ways of escape. They frankly admit that they are very well aware of the methods in which this Government can deal with them. But may I know when our country is passing through such a crisis why should we not consider for a moment that all the mills should be nationalized forthwith? Some say that such a course will entail a good deal of difficulties and hardships but I for myself am quite agreeable. Since the time the Government of Orissa declared its policy that the rice crop shall be procured by it for meeting the demands from outside, the people there are getting such an inferior quality of rice as beggars description. Orissa supplies rice to Bengal, Bihar and Malabar. Wherever the Orissa rice is exported, fine quality is sent while on the other hand the people in Orissa are given inferior rice to eat. I brought this to the notice of the Magistrate as to why such a quality of rice was given to the people of Orissa? In reply he told me that he could not take any action in the matter as this work related to the Supply Department who were responsible for its distribution. Possibly fine quality of rice was not available.

So far as control is concerned, it pains me very much and I would urge that this should be removed immediately. In the opinion of Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Chairman of my Society, controls should continue. But with due deference to him I would like to say that controls should go at once. This should be done because its existence has demoralized the people to such an extent that they have lost all sense of humanity and morality has gone down to its lowest ebb. I would therefore, assert that in the absence of an alternative, why should not the mills be nationalized? But the Government hesitates. The Government should consider other plans. Mahatma Gandhi introduced the Charkha-spinning everywhere and everyone produce Khaddar during his life-time. To-day the weavers in our Province say that all these things have vanished with Gandhiji's death. More than 3 lacs of weavers have taken to other professions. As has been stated by my honourable friend Mr. Biswanath Das, these people used to produce fine work. The Government have not given these weavers any sort of encouragement and they continue to live in the same conditions. If no help is given by the Government, they are likely to perish.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is drifting into something very wider. His point is that mere controls won't do; and that Government was moved in some other directions, that seems to be his point; he has sufficiently made that out. Will he come to the Bill now? There are only three or four minutes left.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: Sir, I welcome this Bill. In addition, I would like to emphasize this too as my honourable friend Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena has stated that the Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru once went to the length of saying that those big people indulging in black-marketing would be hanged. But the fact is that none has so far been hanged. Therefore, while supporting this Bill, I would like to invite the attention of the Government to the fact that the person who is guilty and it is in the knowledge of the Government, should be given the maximum punishment.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala (Bihar: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, this Bill is being introduced in order to increase the punishment that is already being meted out to the black-marketeers whenever they are arrested or sentenced. Sir, I have full sympathy for the sentiments which have been expressed by my honourable friends Professor Shibban Lal Saxena, Mr. Sidhva and Mr. Kamath. I shall not be sorry if the black-marketeer is punished in the way as has been provided in this Bill. But the whole question is as to whether there is any necessity for this increase in punishment. What are the materials before the Government on which they have come to the conclusion that the present Act which is in existence was not sufficient to prevent black-marketing? Have they been able to find any person who has been punished lightly and who repeated the black-marketing and therefore there was a case for a higher punishment. I would like to have such instances from the Honourable Minister for Industry and Supply, who is going to move this amendment.

Sir, I had no mind to speak on this Bill; but after hearing and being reminded of the instances to which I was an eye witness, I thought of enquiring from the Honourable Minister whether he thinks that in these cases there is sufficient reason for inflicting a higher punishment in order to prevent black-marketing. In the year 1943, when the anti-corruption drive was taken up by the Government, I was in one Sugar Factory. There was a Rice Mill there. There was very great difficulty in getting rice at a proper price. We made a complaint to the District Magistrate and the higher authorities concerned, stating that black-marketing is going on in rice with the result that the poor labourers are not getting rice at the proper price. As a result of our representations and requests, an officer was sent. He was an officer of the rank, I do not remember whether he was a Deputy Magistrate or a Sub-deputy Magistrate. He came and went round the place. We thought that he will detect something. In the evening, he went to a place in the villages hats are held every week or twice a week and all sorts of things, oil, matches, salt such other requirements and also rice, are sold to the people who live in these places. He caught hold of a woman aged 50 years, who was selling matches at half a pice higher than the control rate. She purchased them at three pice from the shop-keeper and she was selling at three and a half pice to the people and her profit was half a pice only. That was her profession. She used to come to every hat, sell these things and she was making her living thereby. In the evening, I enquired as to what the officer had done, so that we could get rice at the proper rate. That officer also came to see me. He said that he had caught hold of a few black-marketeers and one of them was the old woman mentioned already. I felt annoyed and enquired from him whether he had done anything as regards the rice mill man who is selling rice at a higher price. His reply was that he could not get any evidence against him. I said to him, did he not go to the market and enquire at what rate rice was being sold in the hat? He said, it was being sold at a higher rate and therefore he had caught hold of two or three peoples, of whom one was the old woman. I asked him, why did he not enquire at what rate they purchased the rice, where did they bring the rice from and why did he not try to locate the man from whom they had purchased the rice. Then, he kept quiet. I reported this case to the Sub-Divisional Officer saying that these are the things which are going on and the poor old woman has been caught hold of and fined though he was sent for a much better work. He said that law is not a respecter of persons. The District Magistrate happened to meet me one day and I told him these things. He was a European and at about eight o'clock in the night we were sitting and chatting amongst ourselves. He said that while we are not afraid of our superior officers, we are afraid of our subordinates and he was very sorry and would see if he could do any thing of which there was little hope. That is how things go on. I should like to know from the Honourable Minister whether the sentence of that old woman is going to be increased. I can give other cases within my own knowledge. In Bhagalpur a widow's home was searched at midnight, six or seven saris were found. Another evening a priest's house was searched and some dhoties given to him in pitripaksha were found and he was charged. But I intervened and no action was taken against them. Recently a friend of mine with three or four other people were going from Bhagalpur to Calcutta with 20 seers of ghee for their personal consumption. At Pakur station some police officers came and asked about it and they said that it was meant for their personal consumption. They said they were under the impression that one person could carry ten seers of ghee. The police officer, however, would not listen to them. The gentlemen said the police officer could take the ghee with him but he should give them a receipt. This the police officer would not give and there was an altercation. My friend pulled the chain and the Guard and other people came. The police officer wanted to arrest him but the Guard intervened and so these people were allowed to go, but no receipt was given for this ghee. They tried to find out what the present law is; I myself tried to find out from my friend Mr. Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka who is a Solicitor but he could not tell me. In Bhagalpur I tried to find out from the Magistrate and other officials but they also could not tell me. Sir, I will not cite other cases. I support the sentiments expressed by my friend Mr. Sahu who said that if a few real black-marketeers are hanged we will be happy. The real question is whether the actual black-marketeers are caught or whether these Acts and amendments are a mere show. Government go about telling people that they are passing laws and doing all that they can to stop black-marketing but the public must co-operate with them. Yes, it is the duty of the public to co-operate with Government and without that co-operation of the public they cannot do anything. But in the public are included the Government officials also.

Sir, I neither oppose the Bill nor support it.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: Sir, I am thankful to the honourable members, who have spoken, for having placed before the House and Government their viewpoints so frankly and fully. I realise how anxious every honourable member is to see that Government take adequate steps to put an end to the present state of affairs which is not creditable either to Government or to the interests concerned or to the public at large. As I said while moving my motion, it is far from my intention to suggest that this simple amendment will secure all that we want to see done in the near future or in the distant future. This is only one of the steps which Government have thought fit to propose to the House for acceptance. I have not dealt with the question of control of other commodities; I have not dealt with foodgrains, and that for obvious reasons. At present foodgrains are not controlled; where they are controlled they are only partially controlled. What the policy of Government will be with regard to foodgrains is yet to be determined; and therefore it will be a mistake suddenly to come before the House with any amendment of the present provisions regarding the punishment of offences relating to foodgrains. I have therefore confined myself only to textile control.

[Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee]

Now it is not possible, nor is it necessary, to refer to every speaker separately, but I may just analyse the three or four main lines of criticisms which have been put before the House. The first is that this is a half-hearted measure, that this is not an adequate measure. Simultaneously it has been suggested that this may prove to be too drastic a measure. I believe what Government have done is something like a golden mean. Whether the measure is too drastic or not or whether it will be too inadequate or not will depend on how it is actually enforced in practice. Now it has been pointed out that there may be many cases where perhaps a sentence of imprisonment will not be necessary. There may be small offenders; there may be persons who may be guilty of only technical offences, and they should not be punished. We should rather concentrate our attention on those who commit big offences. I would ask the House to remember that there are a variety of things which Government or their officers may call upon the interests concerned to do under the Act. One honourable member in fact referred to section 3 which lays down the various matters in respect of which an order may be passed. You will see from the details of section 3 that this is more or less control of an integrated type; you cannot treat each matter separately. One particular obligation may look rather unimportant, but if you take the entire chain you will find that each link of it is of sufficient importance. For instance, my honourable friend Mr. Himatsingka said that there may be people who may be called upon only to put up in their shops a price-list. Suppose one fails to do it, is that a serious offence? There may be persons who may be called upon to disclose their entire stocks. He may be a small shopkeeper. Suppose he fails to do that; is it a big offence? Taken by itself neither of this is a big offence. But suppose hundreds and thousands of shopkeepers refuse to comply with the orders and refuse to let the public know what the prices are that Government have fixed. Obviously it then becomes a serious matter and if this is done in a deliberate fashion, then practically it may render the enforcement of the control order, nugatory. Supposing you find a large number of people refusing to disclose their stocks. Perhaps if it is one case, it does not matter. But if hundreds and thousands do that.....

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: All of them will be treated alike and sent to jail.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: We do not want anyone to be sent to jail for nothing. We want all those who come into the scheme to remember that Government means business; that Government would like that every one, whether a merchant or a millowner, a retailer or wholesaler, should try to follow the directions issued by the Government and co-operate with the Government. We have no intention of harassing any one or of preventing the ordinary channels being completely immobilized. If everything is done honestly and in a straightforward fashion, there is no reason to suppose that Government will come forward and create difficulties for those who are trying to help the State and the Community.

What we want to say is this. There will be no scope for anyone to get away by paying some fine. If you commit an offence, an offence which is proved before a Court of law, then imprisonment will be a compulsory punishment. Then confiscation will also come, fine may come if the Court considers that a fine in addition is necessary.

Some members asked, and rightly asked: supposing it is a minor technical offence. Would you send a person to jail? The reply was given by one member that it is not intended that that person should be sent to jail for punishment but may be detained till the rising of the Court. In cases of a trivial nature proceedings will not be started. The person concerned will receive a warning and will be told: "Now look here, you have not complied with this order. We are not taking any action against you this time. We hope you will behave better next time." If the man fails again, proceedings may start. If in a case proceedings are not started because of the minor nature of the offence committed, then of course the matter does not come to a Court of law. But when proceedings start and the matter comes to a Court of law; the accused will be given facilities for putting forward his defence, and when the Court is convinced that it is a case which is genuine, then the punishment to be awarded will follow the provisions of the Act. With regard to textile control, the Government and the Legislature want that the punishment shall be imprisonment. There will be no question of discretion being exercised.

Some members asked: What is the total number of cases that have taken place during the last few months? As the House is aware, from the 20th January up to 31st July, there was no control. So during the last eight months there has not been any case. Cases took place at an earlier period in the provinces. I have not the record here. But it is common knowledge that many cases have taken place where the Court has just given a small sentence of a fine and has let the culprits go away. Take cases of smuggling. They were all offences against the Textile Control Order. Now, there, the punishment that the Court awarded in each case was some fine, or in some cases some stocks were frozen. But if the Court knew that the policy of the State is that the severest notice should be taken of such offences, I am sure the whole atmosphere might have changed to the advantage of the people and the country. It is not the intention of Government to harass honest dealers. But it is the intention and policy of Government, which I hope has the unanimous backing of all sections of the House, that punishment should be such that those who want to commit these offences will think twice before they go and commit such an offence.

Members ask if this will affect the big millowners? It will affect everyone. If you will look at section 3 you will see that all the orders which can be issued under this Act will be covered by this. If there is a particular millowner who deliberately flouts the order then he cannot merely pay Rs. 10 lakhs and run away. The sentence of imprisonment will come automatically and there are classes of people who are still afraid of going to jail because of a certain stigma which will attach to them for having committed an offence against public order and public morality.

Mr. Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka raised one important point, namely, that these orders are not easily available. Well, I believe that it is so. The orders may not be available. I shall however see to it that whatever orders are issued and the statutory rules which are framed thereunder intended for public notification, they are printed and made available. We shall write to the provinces about this also.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Will they be laid on the table of the House?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: It will be available to every member of the House interested in them. It may be placed on the table of the Library.

There was one suggestion about confiscation. It is proposed that the entire stocks will be confiscated. It has been suggested to me that it may be that even for some offence which may not be of so serious a nature, the Court will find it obligatory to confiscate the entire stocks, and perhaps with regard to this matter, the Court might be given an option. The Court may confiscate either the stock in its entirety or a part of it. When the amendment comes up and it is proposed, I am prepared to consider it. With the exception of that,

[Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee]

I would ask the House for full co-operation not only in placing this Bill on the Statute Book but in giving effect to it.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: What about section 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code which gives the court a discretion to take action instead of sending a person to jail?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I do not know whether section 562 will apply in this case.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sub-section (1) will apply.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: That will have to be argued in a court of law. I am not in a position to give a ruling. However, if it is legal, it will be; if it is not, it will not be applicable.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: My point is this: if you are really interested in sending every offender to jail, you must make it clear that section 562 will not be applicable. If you want to leave a loophole you can keep the law as it is. If your intention is that every one is liable to a sentence of imprisonment you must make it clear.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I do not think we can amend.

Shri H. V. Kamath: The minimum sentence will be till the rising of the court.

Mr. Speaker: I think we are not amending the Criminal Procedure Code. The law as it is will apply.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: There is no intention to amend the Criminal Procedure Code.

One question was raised which was of some importance. I need not go into the details here. It is the question of policy in regard to textile control. It is suggested that Government should take steps to secure that there is full control imposed at the production stage. This is a matter which Government have taken into consideration and I am sure when the steps which the Government have taken are announced for the information of the public and members of the House, they will be satisfied that Government have not lagged behind in implementing the textile policy which has been already announced.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill to amend the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: In view of the very elaborate discussion that we have had on the general policy and the desirability or otherwise of enhancing 3 P. M. the sentences proposed, I do not propose to allow any speeches on the amendments. The amendments may simply be moved and I shall immediately put them to vote. That is the procedure which I propose to follow.....

Shri H. V. Kamath: What about the other amendments.....

Mr. Speaker: All that has been referred to in the speeches. We have practically had a discussion on them also. I was proposing discussion either at the amendments stage or at the consideration stage. Honourable members preferred to have the discussion at the consideration stage; and so if we have speeches again, we shall be having discussions twice over. There are two amendments one by Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad and another by Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena and there are also two amendments by Mr. Kamath on two different parts of the clause regarding the use of the words "His Majesty". I would just invite the attention of honourable members to the fact that the words

"His Majesty" are used in the main section itself in sub-section (1) and this is a proviso to that sub-section. I do not see any escape from the use of that expression and so the need is quite clear. Honourable members will see that sub-clause (1) reads:

"If the order so provides, any court trying such contravention may direct that any property in respect of which the court is satisfied that the order has been contravened shall be forfeited to His Majesty."

So the phraseology used in the main clause is "forfeited to his Majesty".....

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, the existing part of sub-section (1) was enacted in 1946. At that time the expression "forfeited to His Majesty" would have been perfectly proper. Today we are enacting a proviso. The question is whether in the present-day context the expression should be "forfeited to His Majesty". The effect of passing the sub-section in 1946 would be that it should be forfeited to the successor of His Majesty.

Mr. Speaker: The point is very clear. Even though the situation has changed, constitutionally we are still a Dominion and the expression "forfeited to His Majesty" does not conflict even with the constitutional position today. Later on if and when we cease to be a Dominion, we shall adapt legislation suitably. The point is not worth arguing at all. As I said, you cannot use different expressions and if honourable members should persist, I think I shall have to rule the amendments out of order as being inconsistent with the first part of the section.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: May I point out one thing, Sir. In the Government of India Act as adapted Section 174 deals with forfeiture of properties which vest in the Government and there the expression used is "His Majesty" and that is why we had to use it.

Mr. Speaker: The point is more sentimental than substantial and if honourable members' sentiment is not satisfied even after the explanation, I am prepared to rule the amendments out of order as being inconsistent with the main clause.

Shri H. V. Kamath: On a point of information, Sir, suppose we bring an amending Bill after we go out of the British Commonwealth, what will be the position then?

Mr. Speaker: I shall dispose of the question by saying that the question is hypothetical and we will decide it, when it arises. So I take it that honourable members will not move their amendments about the use of the words "His Majesty."

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, as regards part (b) of clause 2, the Honourable Minister stated that regarding foodstuffs the position will not be changed now and that Government is examining the position. Therefore at this stage I would not press my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The other amendment of Mr. Kamath seems to be unnecessary. He will see that even under clause 6, the court has power of making an order in respect of only a part of the property.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I want to know from the Honourable Minister whether the construction in my amendment is not better than the original wording.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Kamath is not a draftsman and therefore it is not likely that his amendment will be accepted. In any case, it will not be moved. Then Prof. Saksena's amendment remains relating to part (b) which refers to food

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, the Honourable Minister said that they have not made their decision about the food policy. I do not know whether part (b) will remain on the Statute Book as it is and will be enforced or it will be changed.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: So far as foodstuff is concerned the present law is to continue.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: May I know when it is likely to be changed?

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram (Minister for Food and Agriculture): Since the whole food question is under review, all these changes might be suggested when the matter comes up for consideration.

Mr. Speaker: Any infringement in connection with the control of foodstuffs might be considered after the Government has considered and announced its food policy.

Shri H. V. Kamath: When can we expect that legislation?

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: It is difficult for me to say but I suppose it will not take long before a decision on policy is made.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: In view of that, Sir, I do not propose to move my amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Then there is the other amendment of Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena, amendment No. 5. It seems that there is some misunderstanding on his part.....

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I will not move it.

Mr. Speaker: That disposes of all the amendments except one which is in the names of Messrs Santhanam, Krishnamachari and Ramalingam Chettiar. I understand that the Honourable Minister has promised to consider the amendment. If it is a substantially agreed amendment, I shall put it to the House.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): Sir, I move:

"That in clause 2 of the Bill, in part (a) (ii) of the proposed Proviso to sub-section (1) of section 7 of the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946, after the word 'contravened', the words 'or such part of it as the Court may deem fit' be inserted."

Actually the sub-clause would read like this:

"direct that any property in respect of which the order has been contravened or such part of it as the Court may deem fit shall be forfeited to His Majesty."

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in clause 2 of the Bill, in part (a) (ii) of the proposed Proviso to sub-section (1) of section 7 of the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946, after the word 'contravened', the words 'or such part of it as the Court may deem fit' be inserted."

If the amendment is accepted the sub-clause will read like this:

"direct that any property in respect of which the order has been contravened or such part of it as the Court may deem fit shall be forfeited to His Majesty."

The idea is that the Court shall give a sentence of imprisonment which may extend to three years; and the other compulsory part, as the section stands now, is a forfeiture of the entire property in respect of which there has been a contravention. The amendment seeks to give the Court the power that, the forfeiture may be of the entire property or a part of the property.

The difficulty seems to have been, as pointed out during the course of the discussion by one of the members that, supposing a board of rates is not hung up in a shop which consists of goods of the value of a lakh of rupees, if the section stands as it is today, the Court must order the forfeiture of the entire stock in the shop extending to the extent of Rs. 1 lakh, for the little fault of failure to hang up the rates. The amendment seeks to give the Court a discretion to see whether the particular offence deserves the forfeiture of the entire stock of Rs. 1 lakh or a part of it. That seems to be the object of the amendment.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Yes, Sir.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: There is no doubt that the amendment is an improvement upon the present position as you have pointed out, Sir. But at the same time there are many offences in respect of which no property should be confiscated.

Mr. Speaker: I may state to the honourable member that the expression "or such part of it as the Court may deem fit" will cover it and the forfeiture may extend from one rupee to a lakh of rupees.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: What you say is absolutely correct and there is no doubt that it is an improvement upon the present position. But there may be a loophole. The Court may feel that the intention of the Government is that they may not confiscate the whole property even in a serious offence and they may confiscate a part of it. It might cut both ways.

An Honourable Member: You must trust your own officers.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: It is not a question of trusting the officers.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: There might be a departmental store where several kinds of goods are kept and they might keep, several kinds of textiles as well. If they commit an offence under the Textile Control Order there will be no discretion left to the Magistrate to seize only those class of textiles that are concerned in the offence and not to seize all the other goods in the shop.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Mr. Sidhva feels that the Magistrate may impose only a nominal fine. We will assume that he has made up his mind. But Mr. Sidhva stands in his way, and he will acquit him. It will be worse.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Imprisonment is compulsory under the previous part. In a typical case, suppose a person is asked to produce his accounts before a particular officer. Suppose the order is that the accounts or some statistical information should be produced and the shopkeeper has failed to produce it. Even then it will be necessary to confiscate some part of his property. My humble submission is that this provision, so far as it goes, gives the Court power to do justice; but at the same time it obliges the court to do more than justice i.e. tyranny. The sentence of imprisonment is more than enough. In my opinion, in a technical case of this nature, when it is mere omission to produce certain accounts, even the award of imprisonment is harsh. And when there is already a provision like this, there is no reason why we should provide that the property should be confiscated—which property was never used in connection with this matter and which has no relation to the offence in question. The proper course in my humble opinion is not to make an amendment of this nature but to keep the Bill over till Monday so that the right thing may be done in this matter. We cannot arm the court with such a power. The textile order may be of a varied character. It may contain many other orders which may be absolutely technical in their nature. When you are making the award of imprisonment compulsory, you should not make it compulsory that the property also, in part or substantially, should be confiscated.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I strongly oppose the amendment. I do not see the argument and the reasons given by my honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava that this kind of provision is needed. What will happen is this. If the Court is given the discretion in the matter, there will be cloth traders who will employ agents to bring cloth; while they will be convicted and they will go to jail, the cloth smuggled will not be forfeited by obliging Magistrate and the traders will get much more profit by importing smuggled cloth.

Mr. Speaker: I do not know whether the honourable member, Professor Shibban Lal Saksena, has ever practiced law. I think he is not conversant with the Courts.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I am conversant with the Courts.

An Honourable Member: He has had many convictions.

[Dr. John Matthai.]

Another important change that the Select Committee has made is in regard to the power that the draft Bill vested in the Tribunal in respect of increases in freight rates on commodities. This is a point which was raised in the discussion on the original motion, by my honourable friend Pandit Kunzru who took the line that it was not altogether in the public interest that Government should divest themselves of the power to increase freight rates on commodities because occasions may arise when it might be necessary, for financial reasons, that the Railways should be in a position to raise more revenue, and that it should not be left to an external authority like this Tribunal to determine the question. It is for Government and the Legislature to decide whether increases under those circumstances should be sanctioned or not. The grounds on which Government decided to introduce the relevant provision in the draft Bill were explained by me in the House, and I made it perfectly clear that I kept an open mind on that issue. The Select Committee on the whole accepted the considerations put forward by Pandit Kunzru and therefore a change has been made in the Bill as revised by the Select Committee.

Briefly, the position, as the Bill has emerged from Select Committee, is that in regard to questions relating to variations in the general level of freight rates, power is vested in the Central Government alone. But where the question is one of increasing the rate on a particular commodity, power is vested in the Tribunal, of course on application by the Central Government. Therefore, at present the provision in the draft Bill is briefly that both the Central Government and the Tribunal can consider lowering rates, but it is only the Central Government who can increase the general level of class rates or schedule rates or other rates. But when it comes to the question of re-classifying a commodity in a higher class, that is to say, transferring a commodity from a class that bears a lower rate to a class that bears a higher rate, it can be determined only by the Tribunal. That is roughly the position.

Then Pandit Kunzru in the course of the debate raised also the question of terminal charges. The point that he made was that terminal charges as they stand at present are standardised, that is to say, have been placed on a uniform basis independently of local considerations. Terminal charges bear a certain proportion to the general level of rates. The question therefore arises whether it is possible to raise the issue of unreasonableness in regard to terminal charges which have been fixed on a uniform basis independently of local conditions, and if the point were raised whether it would be possible for a Tribunal to decide the point on a logical basis. That point was put before the Select Committee and the Select Committee accepted Pandit Kunzru's proposal. Therefore, in the Bill as it stands the provision in regard to terminal charges, namely, Section 41(c) excludes terminal charges which are or may hereafter be standardised. That is an important change which the Select Committee have made in the draft Bill.

I should like to refer to a few other matters in which the Select Committee have made changes. The members of the Tribunal are to be assisted in these investigations by assessors. The way in which the assessors are appointed is that a Panel is drawn up, consisting of people representing trade and industry, as the provision stood in the draft Bill, and another Panel consisting of people with railway experience. The point was raised in the Select Committee whether agriculture should not receive representation on this Panel and the Select Committee, on careful consideration, decided that agriculture also should be represented on the Panel. The revised provision therefore is that the Panel is to consist of members representing trade, industry and agriculture in equal numbers.

Another provision in regard to which a change has been made is that in the draft Bill it was suggested that where a question did not involve an issue of principle, it might be disposed of by a single member. The question arose as to what exactly would be the position if after a single Bench had started investigation and in the course of the investigation found that there was a question of principle which was missed when the first reference was made. It was decided, in order to meet a situation of that kind, that where a single Bench finds in the course of its investigation that there is a question of principle involved, it would be open to that single Bench to refer the matter to the president of the Tribunal for him to determine whether there is a question of principle, and if he so determines it, to refer it to a full Bench.

The last point in regard to which a substantial change has been made is with regard to the provision for appeal. In the draft Bill the decision of the Tribunal was final. In the Bill as it has been revised by the Select Committee there is provision for appeal to this extent that from the decision of a single Bench it is open to a party to ask for an appeal to the full Bench. It is for the single Bench to determine whether there is a case for appeal and if it certifies there is, an appeal would lie to the full Bench.

Now, Sir, that substantially is the position as it has resulted from the discussions in the Select Committee. Since the report was drawn up and submitted to the House, on a further review, it was found by the Ministries concerned—the Ministry of Law and the Ministry of Railways—that there were certain verbal changes and certain changes of a purely technical character which require consideration by the House. These verbal and technical changes have been put together in the form of amendments which have been tabled by my honourable friend, Mr. Santhanam. They are all verbal changes and changes of a technical character which do not affect the substance of the Bill. I may say in advance that it is my intention to accept them in toto.

With these few words, Sir, I would commend the Bill for the consideration of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Railways Act, 1890, (Second Amendment), as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): Sir, my honourable friend the Minister in charge of Transport and Railways has just now explained to the House the various changes and specially the important ones brought in by the Select Committee. I have appended a Minute of Dissent stating clearly therein the reasons why I have dissented from the views of the Select Committee. I feel very strongly that a Rates Tribunal in the nature of a Tribunal is unnecessary and undesirable. Railways are one of our most important industries in India. It has given us very little return for the last twenty years or more despite the recommendations of Committees and Commissions. What to speak of return, just a few months back we have accepted and approved a proposal from the Railway Ministry for enhancement of taxation in the sense that we have agreed to an enhancement of fares and rates. That being the position, I strongly appeal to honourable members of this House that nothing in this regard should be done by us to open any fresh channel for the Administration to detract from its responsibility which they owe to this House. Railways in India, unlike Railways in England or U. S. A. or other countries, are State-managed and State-owned. They are full-fledged national industries. Therefore, the conditions that exist in England or America may not be applicable to Indian conditions or Indian Railway Administration. The Railway Administration has to be seen from a distinct and different point of view, because you have got a Railway Board which is responsible for the Administration of the Railways and the Railway Ministry supervises the Railway Administration and through the Railway Ministry we exercise our influence to make it popular and responsible to the needs of the people of this country. The Railway Rates Tribunal is an institution for which agitation was going on since 1930 and I find there was certainly need in those days for one, because the Government of the day was not responsible. I find from the report of the Acworth Committee that they have recommended a Tribunal more or less on the lines of Great Britain, namely, that while the Rates Tribunal in England is practically a court having original jurisdiction and people have a right to make an appeal to appellate courts, in the case of the Tribunal recommended by the Acworth Committee they desired to have it as the court of records and then appeal may lie not to any superior Tribunal or court but to the Governor General-in-Council. That was the recommendation of the Acworth Committee. Sir, after that another Committee has sat over the administration of the Railways and they have also recommended certain things, and their recommendations do not of course justify the constitution of a Tribunal, as it is proposed today. My objection against the constitution of the Tribunal are two-fold. The first is, as has been stated by my honourable friend Pandit Kunzru with his ability and eloquence, the undesirability of the step undertaken, because it is practically yielding to an outside authority the power and responsibility which the Government themselves ought to exercise. Sir, my second objection is that this opens a wide escape channel, if I may call it, for the Ministry. I do not go so far as to say that my honourable friend, Dr. Matthai would take recourse to such a channel, but it cannot always be that Dr. Matthai will be always with us as a Minister for Transport and Railways. Therefore, whosoever be the Minister or the party in power, the fact remains that railways are the national property and as such a concern of the nation and of the National Government. Under these circumstances, I do not see any reason why a Tribunal should be appointed for this purpose. Sir, whatever the decision may be for the constitution of a Tribunal before, now the Railway Administration has shown its anxiety and sincerity to help trade and business in this country by bringing forward standardized rates. After the drawing up of standardized rates, to me it seems that a Rates Tribunal, as is contemplated in this Bill, is not only unnecessary, but highly expensive and will delay matters to an enormous extent. Sir, it is not only a question of a Tribunal. The Select Committee has evolved a procedure for appeals, appeals not to any superior court but to the very body and in attempting to draw a distinction between single member decisions and a full Tribunal decision, they have made the process cumbersome complex, and dilatory.

[Shri Biswanath Das]

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar.)]

Under these circumstances, I feel, Sir, that the Tribunal as it is constituted under this Bill is neither necessary nor helpful nor could it be conducive to the well-being of trade or industry in this country. Sir, if trade and industry in this country has to be helped, it is and bound to be the concern of the National Government. The British Government has gone, has gone for good and no more outside influences are at work, or at all to be hoped to be at work. Therefore in this country the national trade and industry is to be developed, it is and bound to be the concern of the National Government, and more so of the Ministry of Railways and Transport. Therefore, if reduction of rates anywhere is necessary, it should receive representations from the concerned trade and industry and must take necessary decision. Their anxiety has been apparent from the very fact that soon after the inception of responsibility, they have come forward with standard rates. Therefore, while taking note of their sincerity of purpose to help trade and industry and also business, I would join issue with them and with the Honourable Minister in charge of the Department when he proposes to come forward with a bill for handing over the authority and responsibility of the Government to an outside body, the setting of a Tribunal whose decisions shall be binding both on the Government and on the trade and industries. Sir, I do not know how such a Tribunal will be useful and helpful to the industries and trade. It may be that trade and industries may not get any relief whatsoever from this Tribunal.

And then if the costs of operations have to be taken into account, then, I am afraid this Tribunal will have to go through the budget of the entire Railways. Otherwise it will not be possible for them to have a full idea as to the costs of operations in the Railways. Sir, I have already stated and I repeat that Railways in this country have not at all been useful to the people of the country. Sir, they have neither been useful to agriculture nor have they been useful to trade and industry, so far. Of course, I expect my honourable friend to evolve altogether a different policy and line of action. Today if you examine the conveniences—of course I am yet to see the standard rates—from the past rates I have known that countries outside India were getting all the preferences and advantages that they could possibly have. Even the agriculture in Australia, the food cultivators in Australia are far better off. The wheat growers of Australia, Canada and all other Dominions were far better off than the cultivators in India. That was past history and the sooner we forget, the better. Therefore, under the new dispensation, I wait to see a better state of things under the changed conditions and in the new set up. That being the position, I find there is absolutely no justification for a Rates Tribunal.

Having stated my objections, I now proceed to say that the Tribunal that is proposed may be acceptable and useful if its constitution is modified in a manner which would be acceptable to the House. Now, let me indicate the manner in which I would like the constitution to be amended. Let them give free thought to any representation they may get from trade and industry at the first court; let the appellate decision lie with the Governor General, so that the Minister in-charge of Transport will be in fact, though not in law, the appellate authority, the Ministry which is responsible to this House and through this House to the people of India in general. Sir, I could give all my confidence to the Ministry rather than to a Tribunal, because the Ministry is responsible to me. I can bring the matter before the Ministry or before the Standing Railway Advisory Committee, failing which in the last resort before this House. Under these circumstances, I do not see why the cumbrous process of appeals should be accepted as has been designed by the Select Committee. You cannot have two forums unless you want unnecessary waste of time and money: two forums in the sense, you have got already a forum the Assembly and a miniature body of this Assembly in the Standing Railway Advisory Committee. These are competent authorities and responsible bodies. We can place the grievances before the Ministry, the grievances of trade and industry as also of the travelling public. Day in and day out, we are thrashing on the floor of the House questions, important and unimportant and even unnecessary questions. Why should we think that that important issues will not be taken up by the honourable members in this House? In view of these facts, I appeal to the honourable members of this House to see that unnecessary Tribunals and expensive ways of disposing of matters should be avoided as far as possible, because we have to meet the expenses and pay the bill. Having got this important forums, why then go in for this Tribunal? I would appeal to my honourable friends to vote against this forum or in the alternative to do away with the cumbrous procedure of appeals and entrust the Governor-General with the final say in the matter.

One word more, Sir, and I shall have done. Let me state to the honourable members of this House that the British Acts are of no avail whatsoever, much less the American Acts. Because, in America all the railways are private owned, and therefore there is a just case for a Tribunal to adjudicate on matters between the ordinary citizen or trade and commerce as different from the Transport authority which is absolutely a private body, not under the direct or indirect control of the Government. Similar is the case in England where most of the transport services are still in the hands of private owners. Therefore, the British Acts and British precedents much less American Acts and American precedents do not help us in this regard. With these few words, let me hope that the Assembly will take a reasonable view of the matter.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U. P.: General): Sir, I was surprised at what my honourable friend Mr. Biswanath Das has said. He was a member of the Select Committee and has signed a minute of dissent. I, too, was on the Select Committee and have signed this report. I commend to the House the Report of the Select Committee and it is my duty to oppose the minute of dissent appended by my honourable friend Mr. Biswanath Das which he has placed before the House.

I could not understand the argument of my honourable friend when he says that there was a need for a Railway Rates Tribunal when India was not free, but now because we are free, there is no need for a Tribunal. I would read out some of the functions of the Tribunal. Section 41 runs as follows:

"Any complaint against a railway administration, or jointly against two or more railway administrations that such administration or administrations is or are—

- (a) contravening the provisions of section 28; or
- (b) charging—
 - (i) unreasonable rates, or
 - (ii) rates which are unreasonable by reason of any condition attached to them regarding minimum weight, packing, assumption of risk or any other matter; or
- (c) levying unreasonable charges excluding terminal charges which are or may hereafter be, standardised; or
- (d) unreasonably refusing—
 - (i) to quote a new station to station rate, or
 - (ii) to grant an alternative owner's risk rate; or
- (e) unreasonably placed a commodity in a higher class shall be heard and decided by the Tribunal in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter."

Sir, these are the main functions of the Tribunal. My honourable friend agrees that there is need for such a Tribunal in England and America because there the railways are privately owned. He thinks that because the Government here is national, there is no need for a Tribunal. Does he mean that the Honourable Dr. Matthai will always sit as the Tribunal to receive every complaint about the unreasonable rates or unreasonably refusing to quote a different rate and all these things. He has said that there is a miniature body of this legislature called the Central Advisory Council.

Shri Biswanath Das: May I say one word of explanation? After the standardisation of rates, all these objections would have disappeared.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Does he mean to say that the Central Advisory Council will always sit in session to receive complaints? I personally think that this tribunal will itself be a part of the Government. This National Government, People's Government will only be delegating some of its powers to the Tribunal which it has nominated, to give the public the fullest opportunity to place their complaints and their grievances before it. The Tribunal will therefore be only a wing of the Government and it will be helping the Government in the decision of the disputes so that people may have full confidence in the Government. I could not follow the argument that because in America the companies are privately owned, it is necessary there and not here. There too, I think there is perfect liaison between the management and the Government. Here also, the Railway Board is to the public as much a privately owned company as in England. The same arguments which apply to the British Government to have a Bates Tribunal, apply here also. He has himself stated that the Acworth Committee in 1920 recommended a Rates Tribunal. It is only after 28 years that this House, after coming into its own, has given the public this much-needed forum to thrash out their grievances and to give them justice and to see that the administration of railways is efficient. At present, if this Bill is shelved, what would happen? The Honourable Dr. Matthai will have to appoint some officer to receive the complaints and he will have to decide them. The Minister cannot look into them. The Governor-General has got much more useful work to do than deciding appeals about Rates of Commodities. That officer whom he will appoint will act according to his whims, and the public will not have an opportunity of placing their facts, viewpoints and arguments before this officer. Here we shall have a judicial Tribunal with a High Court Judge on it; a body of great integrity and responsible to the Government which appoints it. It will receive evidence and sift it and look into things and then give a decision. That means that the railway law will be administered here in a proper way which will satisfy the public and win their confidence. I think the argument of my friend Mr. Biswanath Das is wholly misconceived. I do not know why he is so afraid of this Tribunal. He has talked of expense. I think any officer who will dispose of these cases will have to be paid; only in that case there will be dissatisfaction of the public who will have no opportunity of stating their complaints.

Then there will be assessors appointed, assessors of the railways knowing the administration as well as of trade, commerce and industry. All these people will be helpful to the Tribunal in doing justice and administering the law as this House wants it to be administered. I therefore think that this is a very important Bill. It has come 28 years after being recommended by the Acworth Committee. My Honourable friend Mr. Biswanath Das's objection is misconceived. Perhaps he thinks that this Tribunal will be a part of Government. But Government will only be appointing it; the Tribunal will be given full authority to decide cases according to their judgment. They will surely appoint the best men who will not make mistakes. Therefore there is nothing to fear about it. Government, like the democratic Government that they are, do not want to exercise power themselves but through this Tribunal. Sir, I support this Bill and I hope my friend Mr. Biswanath Das will withdraw his objections.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): Sir, I find an innovation in this Bill and that is perhaps the reason why it has not been very clear to many of us. In all other Acts we find that the definitions come first but here they come last. So that after you have finished reading the Bill you have to read it again in order to understand it. I do not know what is the advantage of this innovation except that the Honourable Minister wants us to read the Bill fully.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is so in the Government of India Act.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: (West Bengal: Muslim): It is done in all English Acts.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: In other Indian Acts it is otherwise. Anyway, the complaint today is not so much about the rates as the proper adjudication of rates. The complaint throughout the country today is that you are taking high sums as railway fares; in the last two years the fares have twice been increased. And what have you given in return except a kind of invitation to see the new compartments and bogies and occasionally some tea to some fortunate members? You have not given better facilities for railway travel. Now that we cannot go against our own Ministers we should have expected that matter to be put under adjudication by some Tribunal independent of this Government. But what do we find? Under the proposed section 42 certain matters cannot be gone into by the Tribunal and the Central Government alone remains responsible for the inconvenience of high rates that passengers have to pay. Then what remains to be done by this Tribunal is to fix the rates or classifications of commodities. Is that the complaint now? The complaint now is that we do not get wagons to carry even the Government sponsored goods, not to speak of goods which the traders or private parties want to send. We do not quarrel about the rates now but we want more wagons for transport of goods; and that we are not getting. This is another instance of Government trying to lull us into the false belief that they are doing all that is possible by bringing in a piece of legislation which will perhaps remain a dead letter. How often will this Tribunal sit? How will you find the material to give this Tribunal to sit and consider? Are you going to change the rates and classifications every three months or two months or every day? They will have to sit very rarely and still you are appointing this Tribunal. What is the idea of giving the entire responsibility to them? The decision of the Tribunal is final and Government have no hand in it; even this House will perhaps not be competent to discuss it. When the rates are being considered by the Tribunal the matter will be sub-judice and the House, if it sits at that time, will not be allowed to make any comment on the rates that exist at that time or the rates which are being considered on the ground that they are sub-judice. And when the rates are finally determined by the Tribunal what will be the remedy left to this House and what will be the remedy of the public? None; they will have to abide by the decision of the Tribunal. I want the Honourable Minister to state this in his reply; in case the decision of the Tribunal is unsatisfactory, would it be competent on the part of this House to go into those rates and criticise them adversely and disapprove of them? Even if the House expresses that view it will be out of place because the Tribunal's decision will be final. What other course is left? The only thing that Government can do is to close this Tribunal and have another one. But even for that I think there is no provision. The Tribunal will sit for some years and before that period expires it cannot be replaced whatever may be the extent of injustice that the Tribunal may inflict.

Then I do not understand the logic of this position. I fully support the views of my esteemed friend Shri Biswanath Das. All the railway systems are under the charge of Government who are responsible for them. Why are they giving over this power to fix passenger and luggage rates to a Tribunal which will be appointed by them? The whole selection is left to the Central Government. They are the creatures of Government, and even then power is given to them. They may fix any rate they like. The opinion of this House may be different but they cannot say anything or criticise the rates fixed. I submit that this is not a satisfactory state of things and I ask the House to consider carefully the views which have been expressed by Shri Biswanath Das in his note of dissent.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I have not much to say in reply to the criticisms which have been made by my honourable friends Mr. Biswanath Das and Mr. Rohini Kumar Choudhuri. The setting up of the rates tribunal is a measure which Government is taking in response to a demand which has been continuously made over a period of years by public opinion in the country. I am also convinced from such experience as I have had in the Ministry of Railways, that there is a strong case for appointing an independent judicial body to investigate questions of rates affecting one group of interests as against another group of interests.

I think my friend, Mr. Biswanath Das rather misunderstood the implications of standardization of rates. However much you may standardise rates, you will not get rid of the possibility of serious conflicts arising as between different interests. It might be foreign interests against Indian interests. It might be one Indian interest against another Indian interest. Therefore, I do not think it is right that the Executive, however responsible to the Legislature, should retain in its hands the final decision on these matters which are essentially of a judicial character. I am quite willing to exercise all the authority that the House is prepared to vest in me, but I must say that the extent of the authority that Mr. Biswanath Das wants to give me is a little more than I can cope with. I feel that a judicial Tribunal for determining the fairness and reasonableness of the rates applicable to individual commodities is amply justified.

All the points Mr. Biswanath Das raised were effectively met by my honourable friend, Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Railways Act, 1890, (Second Amendment), as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I have an amendment to move.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendments 2 and 3 are only matters of arrangement. Amendment 2 which the honourable member wishes to move first is not one of substance. But let us first know the attitude of the Honourable the Minister. In clause 2 it suggested that section 46 shall be omitted and sections 41, 42, 42-A, 42-B, 43, 44, 45 and 46A shall be renumberedThe Honourable Minister will also see that the honourable member wants to transpose them to a later clause.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I want to restore the old position.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: What my honourable friend wants to do is to retain the existing set up and not to have any renumbering of the section. That is really what he is aiming at. I am sorry I must oppose it. I have consulted the law advisers of Government and they think it would be more convenient for purposes of reference if it is renumbered.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The difficulty is that I have not yet given the reasons on which my amendment is based. I shall shortly state the reasons which are behind this amendment. Let me first move the amendment. Sir, I move:

"That sub-clause (1) of clause 2 of the Bill be omitted."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That sub-clause (1) of clause 2 of the Bill be omitted."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sub-clause (1) attempts a renumbering of certain existing sections, namely that 41 to 46A shall be renumbered as sections 26 to 33. I submit that it is never the practice to renumber the existing sections and give them other numbers. It is never done. The inconvenience of such a course is this. If a section is repealed and if the next following section is renumbered to bear the number of the repealed section, it leads to a considerable amount of inconvenience and confusion. I shall show that it is not done.

[Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad]

If a Bill enacts a new law and if in the House some sub-clauses are taken away it is a practice to renumber them. But in amending an existing Act, it is never the practice to renumber the existing sections because that would dislocate the arrangement.

The inconvenience is this. Courts, Tribunals, parties and members of Government and of the public are accustomed to associate a particular section or idea to a particular section-number, and if these are renumbered it will lead to a considerable amount of confusion. In fact when a section is to be interpreted by a Court of law, then its renumbering would lead to trouble and would require a research student to find out the number which number the renumber section bore. If there are rulings of a High Court on a section and if the old section number is changed, it would be difficult to follow the ruling and find out the new number; and if there is a ruling on a repealed section and another section is brought to bear that number it might be thought that the ruling relates to the other section which bears the new number.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it not a fact that the honourable member is aware that in the new Criminal Procedure Code there are sections that correspond to the old Code and whose numbers are noted by way of reference in the new Code. I would request the honourable member that we are pressed for time. Unless he feels that there is some inconsistency or absolute inconvenience, such an amendment need not be pursued.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I feel that it would lead to inconvenience and I assure you that it is with a desire to remove that difficulty that I am moving it. You will be pleased to consider the Government of India Act as it is adapted. Sub-section 2 of section 46 has been omitted. There is sub-section 3 which has not been renumbered as sub-section (2). Then we come to another part. Sub-section (2) of section 68 has been omitted. Sub-sections (3) and (4) have not been renumbered as a result. Then we come to section 94. Sub-section (2) is omitted but sub-section (3) has not been renumbered. Then there are a number of other sections of the Government of India Act which have been omitted but the succeeding sections have not been renumbered.

Then coming to section 123. Sub-section (4) has been omitted but the other sub-sections have not been renumbered. There are a number of other things. I do not wish to take the time of the House with citing examples.

We now come to the Transfer of Property Act. You will be pleased to remember, Sir, that in 1929.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I agree. I believe the House knows that that procedure has been adopted. This procedure is also adopted. If the honourable member wishes I shall put his amendment to the House. I do not think any other member is willing to speak on it. I also believe that the Honourable Minister agrees that there is a case for both sides.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: It is entirely a point of legal technique. When I received notice of the honourable member's amendment, I naturally consulted the Ministry of Law and their opinion is that it is an advantage to renumber the sections. In this case the public will read a copy of the Act with all these amendments and it will be irritating to the layman if gaps are left. It is for these reasons that the draftsman has renumbered the sections.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I have not yet put the reasons of the authorities and the difficulties. I respectfully submit that the Honourable Minister is not a lawyer himself and is handicapped by the note of the Law Department. So he is at a disadvantage.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I am a lawyer myself.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Then I think it is easier for him to follow.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will not say that the Honourable Minister has not followed, but he decidedly does not agree.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It does not matter. I have not yet spoken on this Bill. I find it is a difficult thing for me to rise and give some technical reasons which are distasteful to the House. It is equally distasteful to me so to speak but the course indicated is contrary to the established practice.

Take the Transfer of Property Act. Clause (a) of Section 22 was omitted in 1929 but (b) (c) (d) and other clauses were not renumbered.

Take the Criminal Procedure Code. There are a number of sections which were amended in 1923. There is section 4, sub-section (1) Clause (d) was omitted. Yet the later clauses were not renumbered. Section 117, sub-section (4) was omitted, yet sub-sections (5) and (6) were not renumbered. Part (a) proviso 5 to Section 408 was omitted, but part (b) and (c) were not renumbered.

This position is in conformity with well known and well established practice. If you dislocate the numbers it will lead to confusion and those who have to interpret them will be put to difficulties. There is no advantage gained by renumbering sections. We are going to transpose a number of sections to fill up vacancies which were created by the omission of other sections and we put in new sections in place of vacancies created. This would cause dislocation and on account of the inconvenience likely to be caused this well established practice has been continuing for a long time. This practice is always one sided. Is there any reason why we should disturb this uniform practice? Are we to establish new precedents to cause confusion and difficulty to those who are concerned? The Honourable Minister has already given his verdict and has found me guilty before he has heard my arguments. After all I have a duty to perform, viz., to point out the inconvenience caused. This well established practice is universally prevailing all over India and other countries. When you take away a section you do not renumber the others. Sir, you will consider the inconvenience caused or the illogicality of the position taken by the Honourable Minister. In fact he has put in a large number of sections and to be logical may I ask him to renumber them? If to be logical is a virtue he should renumber all the sections? I do not see why the opinion of draftsmen who, it has been seen are not experts nowadays in law and drafting, should be followed by him. It is not on my authority that I ask him to accept my suggestion but on the authority of well established practice. This raises an important technical question. You are unsettling a settled practice. I hope the Honourable Minister will yet find his way to accept the authority of a large number of ministers and members in that position here, his illustrious predecessors, Law Members and illustrious draftsmen of this country as well as others and to stick to the old practice and thus prevent confusion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That sub-clause (1) of clause 2 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The other amendments are consequential and do not arise.

The question is:

"That clause 2, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 41 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890,—

- (i) the words 'is or are' be omitted;
- (ii) in part (a) before the word 'contravening', the words 'is or are' be inserted;
- (iii) in part (b) before the word 'charging', the words 'is or are' be inserted;
- (iv) in part (c) before the word 'levying', the words 'is or are' be inserted; and
- (v) in part (d) before the word 'unreasonably', the words 'is or are' be inserted."

Sir, this is merely a drafting amendment and I hope the House will accept it.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I accept it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 41 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890,—

- (i) the words 'is or are' be omitted;
- (ii) in part (a) before the word 'contravening', the words 'is or are' be inserted;
- (iii) in part (b) before the word 'charging', the words 'is or are' be inserted;
- (iv) in part (c) before the word 'levying', the words 'is or are' be inserted; and
- (v) in part (d) before the word 'unreasonably', the words 'is or are' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 41 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890—

- (i) part (d) (ii) be omitted; and
- (ii) in part (d) (i) the brackets and figure '(i)' be omitted."

Actually the position seems to be that any consignor is entitled to ask for his goods to be booked at owner's risk unless he chooses the goods to be booked at railway risk. It provides an alternative which already exists. The other part is a consequential amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 41 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890—

- (i) part (d) (ii) be omitted; and
- (ii) in part (d) (i) the brackets and figure '(i)' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in part (e) of sub-section (1) of the proposed section 41 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, before the word 'unreasonably', the word 'has or have' be inserted."

It is a drafting amendment.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I accept it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in part (e) of sub-section (1) of the proposed section 41 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, before the word 'unreasonably', the word 'has or have' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in sub-section (2) of the proposed section 41 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, the words, brackets and figure 'sub-clause (i) of' be omitted."

This is also a consequential amendment to this particular sub-clause.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in sub-section (2) of the proposed section 41 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, the words, brackets and figure 'sub-clause (i) of' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 44 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, for the words 'carrying into effect its duties and powers', the words 'the effective discharge of its functions' be substituted."

This is also a drafting amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in sub-section (1) of the proposed section 44 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, for the words 'carrying into effect its duties and powers', the words 'the effective discharge of its functions' be substituted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in the proposed section 45 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, the words 'under the authority of the Central Government' be omitted."

This is the position which remains whether we put it there or not. It is always so. These words are therefore unnecessary. That is why I have moved this amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in the proposed section 45 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, the words 'under the authority of the Central Government' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in part (a) of the proposed section 46C of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, before the word 'grouping', occurring in line one, the word 'the' be inserted."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in part (a) of the proposed section 46C of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, before the word 'grouping', occurring in line one, the word 'the' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: Sir, I move:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in part (a) of the proposed section 46C of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, the words 'with the approval of the Railway Board' be omitted."

Actually this refers to the Indian Railway Conference Association. The whole body is working under the Railway Board. So the question of approval of the Railway Board does not arise and the words are unnecessary.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in clause 3 of the Bill, in part (a) of the proposed section 46C of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, the words 'with the approval of the Railway Board' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 3, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 3, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion moved.

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I have great pleasure in congratulating the Honourable Minister for having placed this important measure on the statute book. I only want to draw his attention to one or two important facts. My honourable friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri said that the people are not [Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena] interested in the rates but they are interested in the wagon allotment. I do not agree with him there; they are interested in the rates also. But he was right in saying that they are much more interested in the wagon allotment. As has been pointed out on the floor of this House, the scandal about wagon allotment is so great and the question of wagon bottleneck is of such an importance to the country that I would wish that the Government—the Railway Board—appointed a similar Tribunal for hearing complaints against the allotment of wagons also. This Tribunal will of course hear complaints against railway rates, about goods which are sent in transit. But it is very well known that, much more than the amount of freight has to be paid for getting wagons. As pointed out the other day, Rs. 2,000 is the open quotation in Bombay to get a wagon. Similarly I know that in the O.T. Railway Rs. 1,000 is the ordinary quotation for getting a wagon. You cannot get it, but anybody who pays it can get the wagon. (An Honourable Member: "In U.P. it is Rs. 500"). Thank you. So while the Honourable Minister has done one great thing to the country by appointing this Tribunal I want that he should think of appointing another Tribunal almost immediately, which should be entrusted with the duty of hearing complaints against allotment of wagons. If that is done, this great slur on the Government will be removed. It is eating into the vitals of the nation. Black-marketing goes on like anything. I was told that one of the causes for the cloth black-marketing during the last four months was the wagon allotment. Even though cloth was released, the wagons were not allotted. That was one of the reasons why cloth went so dear.

This Tribunal is to hear complaints against rates. I hope he would very soon give us a Tribunal which will look into complaints about allotment of wagons and see that those responsible for this corruption in the Department about allotment of wagons are properly punished. The question of wagons is so important that I would request him to appoint a Committee of this House to go round the whole country to see how many wagons are there lying in the country which can be made serviceable. I have myself seen in the Sealdah yard three hundred wagons are lying which can be used and made serviceable for the use of traffic. I am told that 5,000 wagons are lying in various yards which can be so used. I have been told by people, by train examiners—I am President of the All-India Railway Train Examiner's Committee—and by people in the railway workshops that if an enquiry is made we shall be able to get 5,000 wagons which are serviceable and which can be made use of. Because my honourable friend is in urgent need of wagons and wants to break the bottleneck, I would request him to appoint a Committee of this House to investigate whether all the wagons which are lying as scrap are really scrap or they can be used for traffic.

Secondly I request that he may appoint a Tribunal to look into the complaints of the public about allotment of wagons and see that even if the highest placed officials are involved they are punished. This is responsible for the black-marketing. If they are responsible they must be brought to book.

I congratulate the Honourable Minister for having brought this measure which I wholeheartedly support.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I am grateful to my honourable friend Professor Saksena for drawing pointed attention to what I myself feel is becoming a grave problem on the railways. The question of corruption on the railways has been brought home to me in a number of ways recently, and I am at present seriously considering whether it has not become necessary to adopt a procedure with regard to it different from the procedure that we have been following hitherto. As I explained in answer to a question which was addressed to me the other day, what we have been doing so far has been to depend on the special police establishment which has been set up specifically for the purpose of enquiring in the case of corruption on the railways. And, as I told the House the other day the number of convictions that we have been able to obtain has been very small in proportion to the number of cases that we send up to court. The difficulty has been, all along, to secure evidence on which a legal conviction could be established. The real trouble that we are up against is that employees of our Railways—the Railways being State Railways—are subject to the same rules of discipline as other servants of Government. And the rules of discipline imply that there is a fairly elaborate formality to be gone through before the fact of corruption or misbehaviour could be brought home to an employee. What I am considering at present is whether the time has not come for Railways to be put on a different footing from other Departments. That is to say, if I as Minister of Railways am reasonably satisfied that a particular officer or employee on the Railways is involved in this business of corruption, I must have the authority to sack him. (Hear, hear). I am considering drawing up a procedure on these lines and I hope, if I do so and begin to act upon it, that honourable members will not.....

Shri H. V. Kamath: Take all the power.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai:I hope honourable members will not take me to task in respect of individual cases.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Not for sacking bad characters.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

RESETTLEMENT OF DISPLACED PERSONS (LAND ACQUISITION) BILL.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena (Minister of State for Relief and Rehabilitation): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to provide for the speedy acquisition of land for the resettlement of displaced persons, be taken into consideration."

Sir, in making this motion, at the outset I would like to apologise to the House for having introduced this Bill at the far end of the Session. The reason is that as honourable members are aware, there is already an Ordinance promulgated which is likely to last till the end of January, 1949, and we were hoping that the Assembly might meet about the 20th of January when we will be able to introduce this legislation and get it through. But now it was brought to my notice that it is likely that the Assembly may not meet in January and we may not be able to pass the Bill through the House by the end of January. Therefore, to be on the safe side, I introduced it now in the hope that as it is a non-controversial measure it will be passed in no time.

Sir, the very fact that no amendments have been moved shows that this measure is welcome to all the sections of the House. I know that every section of this House is concerned with the resettlement of those countrymen and women of ours who have come from Pakistan. The sympathy of every one of us goes to them and they have suffered so much for no fault of theirs. It is indeed regrettable that they had not been settled so far, but if we take into consideration the circumstances which have prevented their rehabilitation, I think however much we may regret it, it will be understandable why they could not be rehabilitated so far. You know, Sir, it was indeed gigantic task which had to be undertaken for evacuating such a large number of men and women. It has been indeed unprecedented in history that evacuation has taken place on such a large scale. In September or sometime in August, 1947, it was decided that there will be exchange of population between East and West Punjab, but before the work of evacuation from West Punjab had finished evacuation from N.W.F.P. had to be taken up. Before that task could be finished we had to take up the evacuation of refugees from Kashmir and before that could be finished we had to undertake the task and responsibility of evacuating the refugees from Sind. Hardly before that had been finished there has been a large influx of refugees from East Bengal and from Hyderabad. So, that in itself was a great task which required considerable effort, and all the time and energy of Government had to be given to this great task.

After that came the work of relief. The very fact that today in our camps there are no less than eight lakhs of refugees shows what a tremendous task it is to provide relief to these persons.

Then comes the work of rehabilitation; it is, indeed by its nature a slow process. Not that many of them have not been rehabilitated—a large number of them have been rehabilitated—but the task of rehabilitation becomes very difficult for two or three reasons. Firstly, those who have come here belong mostly to the trading community, they are mostly petty shopkeepers and are urban people. Those who have left for Pakistan were mostly artisans and persons who used to work with their hands. That is the one great difficulty. The other difficulty is this. Those people who have come to India refuse to be dispersed all over the country; this is especially so in the case of urban people. I know the number of urban people who have come is not more than 20 or 25 lakhs, but still if they could be dispersed all over the country the task will not be so difficult. But when they want to be resettled in one district or in one town or even refuse to go to the villages or other smaller towns, the task of rehabilitation becomes still more difficult. But, Sir, whatever can be done is being done. I can assure this House that this measure is only to replace the Ordinance which has been enacted for the speedy acquisition of land, which you know is a great factor in the rehabilitation and resettlement of the refugees. I hope this House will take this Bill into consideration and pass it without much controversy. Sir, I move.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to provide for the speedy acquisition of land for the resettlement of displaced persons, be taken into consideration."

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain (U.P.: General): Sir, I am one with the Honourable Minister in the object of his Bill. The problem of refugees is one of the most important problems before us. It is equally acute. After making arrangements for feeding them, the next great necessity is to provide them with housing. About 40 to 50 lakhs of people have migrated from Pakistan into India and quite a number of them have come to the Provinces of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara. Therefore, the Honourable Minister did well in bringing out an Ordinance to provide them with means for building houses. If I rise to criticise a few provisions of this Bill, it is not because I want that rehabilitation of refugees should be postponed; in fact there is already an Ordinance under which Government have got the power to acquire lands for rehabilitating refugees. In this Bill I find that some very important things have been omitted. I would draw the attention of the House to the definition of the word "land" which is as follows:

"'land' includes benefits to arise out of land, and things attached to the earth or permanently fastened to anything attached to the earth."

From a later portion of the Bill it appears that Government also intend to re-acquisition buildings and dwelling houses built on land. I wish that the definition of land were more clear and it were laid down that it includes buildings. I quite agree that by implication it means that buildings would go with land, because after all a building is a thing permanently attached to the earth, but I wish that the definition were made more clear.

Again, Sir, Section 5 deals with the vesting of land in the Government. Immediately after the publication of a notice the land shall absolutely vest in the Provincial Government, free from all encumbrances on the date of the notice. It is but proper that provision should have been made for the extinguishment of encumbrances, because it would create difficulties if the land were acquired subject to any of the encumbrances. Sub-clause (2) of clause 6 which deals with the release of land in case an objection is raised says: "If any land is released from acquisition under sub-section (1), it shall be deemed to revert in the person originally entitled thereto." Now the position is this, that once the land vests in the Government any encumbrance vesting on that land will be extinguished, but there is no provision for the revival of that encumbrance in case the owner of the land raises an objection and his land is released from acquisition. I think a provision of that kind is absolutely necessary. Otherwise, it will mean that an encumbrance holder would lose his right over the land. The owner of the land will get back the land but the poor encumbrance holder will not get the advantage of the release of land. He will lose the rights which he possessed as an encumbrance holder.

Further, Section 7 deals with the method of determining compensation. Sub-clause (2) of this Section lays down that in awarding any compensation "the arbitrator shall apportion the amount thereof between such persons, if any, as may appear to him to be entitled thereto." It is not clear whether a person who held an encumbrance but whose encumbrance has been extinguished under clause 5 will be entitled to a part of the compensation. His rights have been extinguished under clause 5 and he has no more right over the land which he possessed before acquisition. Therefore, I think some sort of an explanation should be added to the sub-clause to the effect that,— "Notwithstanding the extinction of any encumbrance under section 5, the person who held such encumbrance shall be deemed to be a person entitled to compensation."

I might in this connection also invite the attention of the House to a similar measure passed by the U.P. Government. There they have provided that in calculating compensation, the prevailing rate of prices of lands shall not be taken into account but land shall be acquired on the basis of prices prevailing immediately preceding the war, that is, in 1939. It is a well known fact that the prices of land have gone very high during the war time, several times of what they were in 1939. It is also a well known fact that the owners of land have done nothing to develop or to improve those lands and whatever increase has taken place has been due to social causes. This Bill provides for the relief of persons who have suffered and suffered not on account of their own doing but because of the partition of the motherland into India and Pakistan. They are deserving of all sympathy and of all consideration. After all, when these lands are resettled with the refugees, they will have to pay price for those lands. The price may be paid immediately or may be paid by instalments or at a future date. They have lost all that they possessed and I think it is proper that in the conditions now prevailing in the country they should be given lands at as cheap a rate as possible. I suggest that the Honourable Minister should base the compensation not on the prices prevailing today but on what they were in 1939 as has been done in U.P.

[Shri Ajit Prasad Jain]

For the reasons that I have stated, I suggest that the Honourable Minister should not proceed with the present Bill. He has already stated that an Ordinance has already been passed which came into force on 2nd August and will continue in force up to 2nd of February and he can exercise the powers of acquisition for the time being under that Ordinance. It would be easier for him to amend the Ordinance. Moreover, it would not be proper for us to put our legislative seal upon this measure as more than one thing has been left out and more particularly because the basis of compensation laid down in this Bill is a rather anti-social measure considering the class of persons who are going to be affected by it. Let the Honourable Minister come out with a well thought-out measure at the Budget Session. Meanwhile he will learn much by experience.

These are the few observations that I wanted to make in connection with this Bill and I do hope that the Honourable Minister will give his serious thought to them.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, the condition of the displaced persons who have come from Pakistan is undoubtedly pitiable. Nobody questions it. Nobody disputes it. The Honourable Minister also stated unequivocally that they have been uprooted from their homes and it is the duty of the State to see that they are rehabilitated. It is now over a year since they have been wandering from one place to another for no fault of theirs. I do admit that, while there are many hardships and privations and difficulties which these pitiable persons are undergoing, they have borne all this with patience and tolerance. I certainly admit that both the Central Government and some of the Provincial Governments are doing their best to accommodate these displaced persons. From the little I know of these displaced persons I can say that the Government have been doing all they could possibly do for relieving them of their enormous difficulties and still it is unfortunate that trouble is being created by some persons. I can tell you, Sir, from my experience, not in Delhi only but in some Provinces also like Bombay, these troubles are being created by interested persons for their personal and political interests.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: I am sure the honourable member would like to continue.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In that case, he may resume on Monday and we may now adjourn.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Monday the 6th September 1948.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART II PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Monday, 6th September, 1948.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

(10.45 A.M.)

DEATH OF MR. ANANDA MOHAN PODDAR

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Will you permit me, Sir, to offer you my cordial felicitations on this most auspicious occasion, Ganesh Chaturthi, the opening day of one of our most important festivals, and let me pray to Lord Ganesh that he may lead you from strength to strength towards the consummation of your heart's desire?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Let us wish a happy return for our Speaker as early as possible.

I am sorry to announce that Mr. Ananda Mohan Poddar, who was a member of our old Assembly and a colleague of us all, passed away recently. He came from Bengal. When he was ill, he did not want to deny this Assembly of the benefit of his advice and therefore, he was used to be brought by his servants here and on one or two occasions, he took part in the deliberations. I knew him intimately and am exceedingly sorry that he should have passed away. It is in the fitness of things that this House should respect his memory. I request members will stand in their seats for a second.

RESETTLEMENT OF DISPLACED PERSONS (LAND ACQUISITION)

BILL—concl'd.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House will now take up further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena on the 4th September, 1948, namely:

"That the Bill to provide for the speedy acquisition of land for the resettlement of displaced persons, be taken into consideration."

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, the other day while supporting this measure, I was stating that the tale of the refugees is really very horrifying and deplorable and we all sympathise with the hardships that they have undergone and are still undergoing. They have been detached from their original homes and today after they have come out into our country from the other Dominion they have been wandering from province to province and they are not yet settled in any one place; even those who have settled do not know what their permanent home is; they are in suspense all the time, not knowing what their future would be. With all this,

[Mr. R. K. Sidhva]

Sir, I certainly feel that the Government have been doing their utmost under the extraordinary circumstances in which they were compelled to take this huge task. No Government I dare say from the little I know of the refugee world, could have done anything better than what the Government is doing at present and has been doing. They had to rehabilitate a lot of them. Huge refugee camps had to be established and from the visits I paid more than once to the Kurukshetra camp, I can say it was a gigantic task for anybody to undertake the work of restoring or re-habilitating these four lakhs of people at that time. I do not state that all the arrangements that were done by the Government were perfect. It could not be. It could never be and it could never have been done by anybody. Under the circumstances what has been done is admirable and certainly the Government deserve credit, but what happens, Sir? Unfortunately this work is a most thankless work and any Minister or any Government taking any work for the rehabilitation of refugees with the best of intentions, refugees would never be satisfied for the simple reason they are also distressed and that although you may do as much for them, they have been uprooted from their homes and they feel that they are not served well. After all their original home is the sweet home and they have been brought out to a place where they feel everything foreign to them; they have to settle; they have to adjust themselves; they have to reconcile and it is not possible I know for the average man to reconcile, adjust himself so abruptly and therefore, Sir, whatever the Government does or may do, I do feel that they will not be satisfied and Government will be rebuked from time to time as they have been rebuked. Notwithstanding our present Minister who is taking such a personal interest in these matters, we know very well how his house has been picketed from day to day and what hardships he has to undergo. What little I know of refugees in Bombay and here, I can say quite safely that in spite of the good work that the Government is doing some interested persons for their personal and political benefit, are creating all this trouble. Notwithstanding all this, I hope the Government will go ahead with the policy that they have enumerated particularly of housing them. What they want at present is a job and a shelter for themselves and their families. If these two things are found I am sure, they will be content. I do not mind much about getting jobs for them. Providing a job for everybody is a difficult problem, but housing is a great necessity. Without a shelter people have to roam about from one place to another. I have seen in some camps for months together no decency could be maintained for their families and no morals for their women, children and their daughters. This class of people are feeling very much about it and therefore housing is a very acute problem, which, if, had been taken at the earliest stage, rather more rapidly and despite all the enormous task that the Government have faced, I think if the Honourable Minister for Works, Mines and Power was rather alert this work could have been started earlier and many families could have been allotted their homes long ago. However, now that the scheme for housing them has been enunciated and the Ordinance has been promulgated, I really congratulate the Government for taking immediate steps for the acquisition of lands and making suitable arrangements for their lodging. Now this Ordinance is brought as a piece of legislation to be sanctioned by this House and I am very glad that this is being done and I congratulate the Government and the Honourable Minister. After this I would request them not to slacken their efforts; they must proceed rapidly with the building of houses. We were told times out of number that they want to build houses, but there was no cement, no building material and no steel. May I ask, Sir, how houses could be ready for occupation now within next October? There will be nearly hundreds of houses ready without the building material. They have agreed to do this because there is a will to do it now and if there is a will to do, no matter, you may have no material, you still can do it.

As for the fabricated houses, I put a question last November to the Honourable Minister for Health whether fabricated houses would be possible in India. She enquired from England and we were told in the last session by the Honourable Minister for Industry and Supply that a factory is being established here and fabricated houses would be put up. Sir, all along, this non-availability of building material was an excuse. If a little incentive or a little will to do was there from the commencement, we could have done a lot. I am glad that in both the directions, in the direction of the manufacture of fabricated houses as also in the direction of providing brick houses, rapid progress is being made and I only wish that this work should be continued, and under no circumstances should it be stopped. A large number of persons require houses today, refugees and others. The Honourable Minister for Works, Mines and Power said that there are schemes for the construction of houses for the clerical staff and low paid peons and chowkidars and some of the houses were under construction. When I put him a question in the budget session, he said that they were not ready. Even in March, they were not ready. If even these houses are completed, it would go a great way in relieving the tension; because our people are occupying certain houses, and if they are provided with Government houses, those houses would be available for the refugees. I therefore hope that the housing question will be given priority, not on paper, but in actual practice. I know many of the schemes are now under priority; I do not know what is the meaning of the word priority; I mean the work should be given the first preference. Therefore, I feel, as the Government also feels, that something should be done immediately.

Sir, I was pleased to hear the other day what Mr. Jain was saying regarding the arbitration clause. From my little experience of arbitration, I tell you that what he stated was perfectly correct. If you do not mention here the period, there will always be disputes between the arbitrator and the land holder and the decision of the arbitrator will be challenged in the High Court by the dissatisfied party. I know High Courts have taken various views and the High Courts have stated, that in the absence of any definite provision of law, it may be prices prevailing in the market at the time or the prices when fluctuations were great. Mr. Jain was right in saying that there should be a clause that the 1939 prices should be the factor for the arbitration. Otherwise, the unscrupulous landlord will take advantage of this and the matter would be prolonged by taking to the High Court. Therefore, to minimise the difficulties and in justice and fairness, I say that there should be an amendment that the price should be that prevailing in 1939.

In conclusion, I would request the Honourable Minister to bear another factor in mind. There are many displaced persons who have come from Pakistan. They want to build houses under the Housing Co-operative scheme. They do not mind going a few miles away from Delhi. The Government should set aside a large area and fix a nominal price for the building of houses by these people. The Government's burden will be lessened to that extent. This class of people can contribute one-fourth of the cost of the house, take a loan of the balance of three-fourths from the Government and build their houses. From my experience in Karachi where I was responsible for the building of a large number of houses for various communities on the co-operative basis, I can state, that a great tension that existed on account of overcrowding in the city proper, was relieved. Those who have seen Karachi can say that a new town had actually sprung up. Why should the Government take upon themselves the responsibility of building houses for those people of the lower middle class, who are prepared to build houses of their own under the Co-operative scheme? I do not want the Co-operative societies for the rich people; they should be formed for these lower middle classes who can build houses at a cost ranging from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 10,000. Today, a house of Rs. 10,000 means a house of Rs. 5,000 only. You may also impose a condition that one who has a house in Delhi should not have a plot there. Therefore I say that the Government should set aside a large area for these Housing Co-operative societies for this class of people. I know a number of societies have been registered, and only yesterday we formed one. I hope the Government will give sympathetic con-

11 A. M. sideration to this proposal. I do not know who is at present in charge of this work; sometimes, the Minister in charge of Health, sometimes the Minister in charge of Refugees and sometimes, the Minister in charge of Works, Mines and Power looks after this work. Whoever it may be, I would suggest that there should be one Minister in charge of this work and I would request that this work should be entrusted to the Minister in charge Relief and Rehabilitation, because it is his work. What I am concerned most is that there should be a definite plan in regard to these Housing Co-operative Societies. The Government should help those who are willing to help themselves. I can assure you that if the Government takes steps in the right direction in this matter, a new model town will be created on the effort of the displaced persons, of course with the support of the Government and local bodies, which will be a pride to the city of Delhi. The authorities should not feel that they are giving away a huge area. In Karachi the Municipal Corporation gave land at the rate of Rs. 1-8-0 per square yard while the prevailing prices were between Rs. 20 and 25 per square yard. Our object was to help those who were willing to help themselves. If you really want to help these refugees, you must allow them to stand on their own legs. They want a piece of land, and manage themselves, they shall find out the building materials and find out the money also. Why not help them? I therefore hope that the Government will come to their assistance in this respect and set aside a large area. I say emphatically a large area, because I know a very large number of people are anxious to build houses under the Housing Co-operative system. The Government would thereby be saving themselves from considerable financial difficulties and they need not sink any very large amount for this class of people. Of course, the Government cannot find money for every man. Here are some people who are able to find the money. I feel that the sympathy with the Government have for them can be shown by this action and if this action is taken, we would have gone a great way in relieving the tension and we would satisfy the displaced persons.

With these few words, I welcome the measure and I am quite confident that the Honourable Minister who has the interests of the refugees at his heart, would not relax his efforts and would proceed with this Housing scheme.

I have said that two things are wanted for these people—jobs and houses. I will not deal with jobs. But housing is an absolute necessity without which they cannot go on roaming from place to place, going from footpath to transit camps, etc., where their morality and security are not safe. Sir, I welcome this measure.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): Sir, I should like to know what work we are to finish by tomorrow evening. Is it the idea that if this present Bill goes on till tomorrow the other Bills will not be taken up, or will the House go on sitting indefinitely till all the business on the agenda is finished? The programme must be known so that there may be a guillotine if needed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I expect that in the ordinary course all the Bills will be moved and passed as in the agenda. We have therefore to see that no Bill is needlessly prolonged. I think it is the intention of Government that all the programme on the agenda will be finished by tomorrow.

Shri K. Santhanam: What happens if the agenda is not finished?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am not thinking of that hypothetical position; we can think of that later.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): Sir, this Bill is a very necessary measure. It is long since these people were uprooted from their homes and have been roaming from place to place without finding a shelter. It is therefore necessary that those who paid the price of our freedom and lost their kith and kin should now find shelter and employment. I am glad that the Honourable Minister has been vigilant enough to bring this measure before this House for providing shelter for them, and I only want to urge two points in regard to this Bill.

It was at one time proposed to establish some townships in certain places, one of which happened to be a village in my district. That village has no drinking water; still it was proposed to establish a few thousand refugees there. My point is that wherever such townships were sought to be established it should first be seen whether there are any industries there to provide employment for these people. It is no use putting up houses in places where people cannot live. I had a talk with an official whose point of view was that the people will set up their own businesses, viz., the lawyer will conduct cases, the cloth-seller will open his cloth shop, etc., and the place will be self-sufficient. I tried to convince him that this might go on for a month or two, but once their goods were consumed they would have to replenish their stocks from outside. The barber, for instance, will need a new razor when his old razor gets blunt; and the same is true of people following other trades. Either they must produce from the land or by means of industries they must add to the value of the commodities. So unless there is production by means of cottage or other industries such a township cannot exist for long. Therefore my submission is that wherever these townships are created and houses built there must be something which can give employment to the people and which can keep them going. Otherwise if you build these houses they may live there in the rainy season but they will abandon them when they cannot live there any more due to want of employment. The idea of their opening shops seems to me to be ridiculous. Every city has the number of shops that it requires. Delhi had just as many shops as its population required; now with the increase of population new shops have sprung up. You cannot go on opening and adding to shops which are not required, because no shopkeeper will then make enough to meet his costs. My proposal therefore is that before opening these townships and building houses you should see that every able-bodied adult gets an opportunity to get employment.

Another point is that in acquiring land it must be seen that no agricultural lands are acquired because those are wanted for production of food. Only waste lands should therefore be acquired for these people. Acquiring agricultural lands would be of no use because most of these refugees are not agriculturists. You will only be robbing Peter to pay Paul because the real agriculturists will be ousted and that will create another problem. So you have to see that men already employed are not disturbed in any way; otherwise by uprooting the agriculturists from their land you will create another refugee problem. So agricultural land should not be acquired.

These are the two points I wanted to urge. I hope they will be taken note of by the Honourable Minister. They may already be in his mind, so I will not take any more time.

चौधरी रनवीर सिंह : सभापति जी, मैं पंजाबी के नाते इस बिल का समर्थन करता हूँ और सरकार को कृतज्ञता प्रगट किये बगैर नहीं रह सकता। लेकिन मेरे रास्ते में एक दो हिचक हैं। मैं ज्यादा पीछे की बातों में नहीं जाऊंगा लेकिन एक छोटी सी बात कहना चाहता हूँ। जहाँ पर आज हम बैठे हैं, यहाँ कुछ लोग आबाद थे - २५ और ३० साल पहिले उनकी ज़मीनें ले ली गई थीं और जो बेघर कर दिये गये थे उन में से बहुत सारे आज तक भी बेघर हैं। जहाँ हमारी सरकार का यह कर्तव्य है कि जो वेस्ट (West) से भाई आये हैं उनको बसाया जाय तो उनके साथ साथ हमारा यह भी कर्तव्य हो जाता है कि उन भाइयों को बसाने के लिए जिन्हें हम अभी उजाड़ेंगे, उन्हें बसाने के लिए मकान, ज़मीन या कोई दूसरा प्रोफेशन (Profession) का इन्तज़ाम करें। मैं अभी आपको एक दो बातों की मिसालें दूंगा। मेरे पास चन्द दिन हुए राजपुर गांव के लोग आये। हमारी सरकार का बड़े जोरों से प्रपेगन्डा है कि पैदावार बढ़ाई जाय। विशेषतया फल और तरकारी की पैदावार बढ़ाई जाय। राजपुर दिल्ली के करीब ही एक गांव है। उस गांव में बहुत सारे बागात हैं। जिनको कटवा दिया जायेगा क्योंकि सरकार की स्कीम वहाँ पर मेडिकल इंस्टीट्यूशन और दूसरे इंस्टीट्यूशन बनाने की है। इस सिलसिले में वहाँ के लोगों की ज़मीन को एक्वायर (Acquire) करने के लिए नोटिस दे दिया गया है। हालांकि इसके मुकाबले में वहाँ पर पास ही उन मुसलमान भाइयों की ज़मीन पड़ी है जो पाकिस्तान चले गये हैं और उनकी ज़मीनें तकरीबन खाली पड़ी हैं। इसके अलावा कुछ ज़मीन जो राजपुर वालों से २५ साल पहिले ली गई थी वह भी खाली पड़ी है और इसके अलावा और भी ज़मीन उसके आसपास खाली पड़ी है जो बंजर है, जो कि बसाने के काम में आ सकती है। लेकिन पता नहीं कि इस तरह से क्यों ग़लती की जा रही है।

इसलिये मैं यह निवेदन करना चाहता हूँ कि जहाँ तक मुमकिन हो वह ज़मीन ली जाय जिसको मुसलमान भाई छोड़कर पाकिस्तान चले गये हैं। और अगर किसी भाई की जो यहाँ का रहने वाला है और खेती करता है ज़मीन ली भी जाय, जैसा कि बिल के अन्दर दर्ज है कि उसको मुआवज़ा रुपये के रूप में दिया जायेगा। मैं एक किसान और एक खेती करने वाले के नाते इस बात को अच्छी तरह समझता हूँ कि ज़मीन का मुआवज़ा क्या होता है। आप उसको रूपया दीजियेगा मगर उसका पेशा जो है वह इन रूपयों से पूरा नहीं होगा। अगर आप उसको दूसरा पेशा नहीं देते हैं तो आप हजार रूपया बीघा भी उसको मुआवज़ा देंगे तो भी उसको कोई मुआवज़ा नहीं मिलता है। वह बेघर हो जाता है, न उसके पास मकान रहता है और न उसके पास पैसा रहता है। अतः उसे ज़मीन के बदले में ज़मीन दें।

इसका एक दूसरा रुख है। कल ही परसों यहाँ हाउस के अन्दर बड़े जोरों के साथ इनफ्लेशन (inflation) के ऊपर गौर किया जा रहा था कि देश के अन्दर इनफ्लेशन है। इस इनफ्लेशन की नुबतानिशाह से अगर आप उनको मुआवज़ा रुपये के रूप में दीजियेगा तो इनफ्लेशन और बढ़ेगा। तो इस लिये मैं यह चाहता हूँ कि आप उन लोगों की जो पाकिस्तान चले गये उनकी ज़मीन दें, जितनी कीमत की उनकी ज़मीन है और जो सरकार उनको मुआवज़ा देगी उसी कीमत की ज़मीन उनको उस में से मिल जानी चाहिये। मैं आपके सामने राजपुर गांव वालों की मिसाल दूंगा। राजपुर वालों ने मुझे बताया कि २५ साल पहिले उनका गांव जहाँ पहिले आबाद था उजाड़ दिया गया था। और आज जहाँ वह बसे हुए हैं उसके लिए भी उनको खाली करने का नोटिस मिला है। कितनी दुःख और करुणाजनक बात है कि वे लोग जो शहर वालों के लिए तरकारियां व फल पैदा करते हैं आज सरकार उन सब चीजों से उनको महक

कर रही है। तो मैं आप से इस चीज़ के लिए निवेदन करना चाहता हूँ कि आप इस चीज़ को ध्यान में रखें कि जहाँ आप पर वेस्ट से आये हुए लोगों को बसाने का कर्तव्य है वहाँ पर आपको जो इधर रहते हैं और जिनको आप उजाड़ रहे हैं उनको भी बसाने का पहिला कर्तव्य हो जाता है। मैं एक पंजाबी के नाते कहता हूँ कि हमको उन भाइयों को खुशी से बसाना चाहिये जो वेस्ट से आये हुए हैं। लेकिन मैं इसके साथ ही साथ यह भी समझता हूँ कि जो लोग यहाँ खेती करते हैं और जिनकी ज़मीन है वे कोई बड़े बड़े ज़मींदार लोग नहीं हैं, जैसा कि अभी हमारे एक भाई ने कहा। उनके पास हजारों बीघा ज़मीन नहीं हैं। किसी के पास दो एकड़ ज़मीन है, किसी के पास पांच एकड़ ज़मीन है और किसी के पास दस एकड़ ज़मीन है। अगर आपने बड़ी बड़ी इमारत बनाने के लिए उनकी यह ज़मीन ले ली तो मैं पूछता हूँ कि उनका क्या हाल होगा और उनके लिए आपने क्या हल निकाला है। मैं ज्यादा इस बात पर नहीं जाता हूँ, मैं आप से यह ज़रूर कहना चाहता हूँ कि जैसा कि इस बिल में देखा गया है कि उनको उनके बदले में रूपया दिया जायेगा। इससे उन लोगों को संतोष नहीं होगा। रूपया उनके लिए कुछ चीज़ नहीं है। उनको तो पेशा और मकान चाहिये। तो आप उनको ज़मीन के बदले में उतनी ही कीमत की ज़मीन उनके गांव के आसपास में उनको दीजिये जो इतना मुश्किल नहीं है। क्योंकि जो लोग पाकिस्तान गये हैं वे लोग ज्यादा हैं। मैं मानता हूँ कि जो लोग पाकिस्तान से आये हैं उनको भी ज़मीन मिलनी चाहिये मगर हम उनको नये सिरे से बसा रहे हैं उनको मत्स्य-यूनियन, सी० पी०, यू० पी०, और दूसरी रियासतों में बसा सकते हैं। मगर जिन लोगों को जो कि यहाँ बसे हुए हैं जिनको आप उजाड़ रहे हैं तो उनको उसके ही आसपास कोई उसी कीमत की ज़मीन मिलनी चाहिये। इनमें उन लोगों को दिक्कत का सामना नहीं करना पड़ेगा और सरकार का काम भी पूरी तरह से हो जायेगा। जो लोग पाकिस्तान से आये हैं उनको तो मजबूरन अपनी ज़मीन और घरबार छोड़ना पड़ा है मगर यहाँ तो हम उनको अपने हाथों से वे घरबार कर रहे हैं। और हम अपनी स्कीमों को पूरा करने के लिए उनको वे घरबार कर रहे हैं तो यह हमारा फर्ज हो जाता है कि उनको मकान के बदले में मकान, और ज़मीन के बदले में ज़मीन और पैसा के बदले में उनको पैसा देना चाहिये।

मुझे इस बात का दुःख है कि अगर आप यह समझते हैं कि रूपया लेकर वह अपना पेशा कर सकते हैं तो मैं समझता हूँ कि यह आपका अन्दाज़ा ग़लत है, वह कोई पेशा नहीं कर सकते हैं। वह पुश्तों से खेती करते चले आये हैं, उनके बापदादाओं ने खेती की है और वह भी खुद खेती करते हैं और कोई दूसरा पेशा नहीं करते हैं। इसलिए मैं आप से यह कहूंगा कि इस बिल की अन्दर जो पैसों की शर्त है उसको तोड़ दिया जाय और उसकी जगह यह रख दिया जाय कि उसको ज़मीन के बदले में उसी कीमत के बराबर की ज़मीन दी जायगी। कई साहब कहते हैं कि उनको सन् १९३९ ई० की कीमत पर मुआवज़ा देना चाहिये तो मैं पूछता हूँ कि उसने जो घर बनाना है, ज़मीन खरीदनी है वह उसे आजकल खरीदनी है न कि सन् १९३९ ई० में खरीदनी है। आजकल ज़मीन और मकानों की कीमत बहुत बढ़ गई है। मैं अपने गांव की मिसाल देता हूँ आप वहाँ कोई भी ज़मीन का टुकड़ा (२०००) बीघा के हिसाब से भी नहीं ले सकते हैं। इसलिए मैं आप से यह चाहता हूँ और पुरजोर अपील करता हूँ और अपनी भारतीय सरकार से यह आशा रखता हूँ कि जहाँ वह दूसरे भाइयों को बसाने के लिए अपनी ताकत

[चौधरी रनबीर सिंह]

लगायगी वहाँ अपनी स्कीमों से उजाड़े हुए लोगों को बसाने के लिए भी परा यत्न करेगी और उनको ज़मीन और मकान की शक्ल में मुआवज़ा देगी ।

(English translation of the above speech)

Ch. Ranbir Singh (East Punjab: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, as a Punjabi, I welcome this Bill, and cannot help expressing my gratitude to the Government. But there are one or two obstacles in my way. I do not want to dwell upon the past events but would like to say something. The place at which we are sitting to-day was inhabited by certain people about 25 or 30 years ago. Their lands were acquired and they were thus rendered homeless. Many of them are still living without a house even to-day. On the one hand, it is the responsibility of our Government to rehabilitate our displaced brethren from the West, it also is their duty to make arrangements for the provision of houses, and employment for those persons whom we are going to uproot for their sake. I will just quote one or two instances. A few days ago, people from the village of Rajpur came to me. Our Government is carrying on intensive propaganda in respect of 'Grow More Food' campaign, especially the production of fruits and vegetables. The village of Rajpur is situated near Delhi and the village has many gardens which will have to be cut down as the Government have approved a scheme to set up medical and other institutions there. With this end in view, the people have been served with notice for the acquisition of their land, although the land owned by our Muslim brethren who have since left for Pakistan is almost lying vacant in its close proximity. Besides this, the land which was acquired from the inhabitants of Rajpur village is also lying vacant and there is also some more fallow land which can be utilized for rehabilitation purpose. It is therefore not understood why such a wrong course has been adopted.

I would like to say that as far as possible only that land should be acquired which has been left over by our Muslim brethren who have gone to Pakistan. If the land owned by any of our brethren here who is a cultivator is acquired as proposed in this Bill, he should be paid compensation in cash. I fully realize what compensation is paid for land. You can pay him the money but this cannot compensate him for the loss of his avocation. If you do not provide him with some alternate employment, you may pay him compensation at Rs. 1,000 per bigha—even then he is not fully compensated in the real sense. He is rendered homeless—he is deprived of both his avocation and house. Therefore, you should give him land in exchange for land.

There is also another aspect to this. Only day before yesterday, the House was very seriously considering the problem of inflation facing the country. If you give them compensation in cash, then in view of the existing inflation, this is bound to increase inflation. For this reason I would urge that you should give them land belonging to persons who have left for Pakistan. Out of this abandoned land, they should be given land corresponding to the value of the land held by them for which Government will pay them compensation. I will give the instance of the people of Rajpur, who told me that about 25 years ago the place at which their village was formerly situated was devastated, and to-day again they have been served with a notice to quit the place where they have been living. It is really very painful and pitiable that those people who produce vegetables and fruits for the use of people living in the cities, the Government is to-day depriving them of all they possess. Therefore, I would request you with all the emphasis at my command that you should keep this in view that if in one place you are responsible to rehabilitate the people from West, in the second place it also becomes your primary duty to settle those residing here whom you are uprooting. As a Punjabi, I would say that we should very gladly rehabilitate our brethren who have come from West Punjab.

Along with this, I also know that these people who cultivate their land are not all big Zamindars—as one of my honourable friends has stated. They do not possess thousands of bighas of land. Some own 2 acres of land, some 5 acres and very few have got 10 acres. If you acquire their land for the construction of big buildings, I would like to know what would be their condition and how do you propose to tackle the problem confronting them? I do not want to dilate upon this point too much, but would like to tell you that they will not be satisfied with the payment of compensation as proposed in the Bill. Money is no consideration to them. Their primary necessity is employment and accommodation. It would not be very difficult if you give them land corresponding to the value of the land held by them in the neighbourhood of their village, because the people who have gone over to Pakistan are many in number. I do admit that the people who have come from Pakistan should also be allotted land, but we are rehabilitating them ab initio and can settle them in the Matysa Union, C.P., U.P., and other States. But the people whom you are uprooting should be given some land equivalent to the value of the land held by them in the proximity of their village. In this manner those people will not be subjected to any hardship and the work of the Government will also be smoothly carried on. Those people who have come from Pakistan were forced to leave their hearths and homes and property, but here we are ourselves rendering other people homeless. We are resorting to this for the purpose of execution of our plans. It thus becomes our duty that we should provide them with alternate employment, land and accommodation.

I am really pained to say that if you think that they can pursue their avocation after getting payment of compensation, then I am afraid you are mistaken in your judgment. They cannot undertake any other kind of avocation. They are hereditary agriculturists, their ancestors were cultivators and they themselves cultivate land and do not follow any other avocation. Therefore, I would urge that the condition of payment of compensation provided in this Bill should be waived, and in lieu thereof provision be made to the effect that they should be given land of the corresponding value. Some of the honourable members have suggested that they should be paid compensation on the basis of the prices ruling during the year 1939. Then may I know whether they have to build houses and purchase land now or in the year 1939? The prices of land and houses have now considerably gone up. I will give you an instance of my own village where you cannot purchase any piece of land even for Rs. 2,000 per bigha.

I would, therefore, most emphatically urge and expect from the Government of India that whenever they are doing their utmost to rehabilitate other persons, they should also do their best to resettle those uprooted due to execution of their schemes and compensate them in the form of land and houses.

श्री राम सहाय : श्रीमान् डिप्टी स्पीकर महोदय, इसमें तो कोई शक नहीं कि जो सरगार्हीं भाई हैं उनके लिए हमको सुविधायें पहुंचाने के लिए जो भी कानून ज़रूरी हो बना देना चाहिए । लेकिन यह मैं नहीं समझता कि इस किस्म के ज़रूरी कानून में गैर ज़रूरी अख्तियारात क्यों दिये जाते हैं । मैं कुछ बातों पर कुछ सुझाव पेश करना चाहता हूँ । मैं सबसे पहले यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि इस बिल में लैंड (land) की तारीफ़ में जो मकान शामिल किये गये हैं इसकी क्या ज़रूरत महसूस हुई । मकानों को कंट्रोल करने के लिए और दूसरों को किराये पर दिलाने के लिए तो दूसरे कायदे मौजूद हैं जिनके ज़रिये से मकान देने को मजबूर किया जा सकता है । मेरा कहना यह है कि मकानों को इस कानून में मुस्तना होना चाहिए । अगर मालिक मकान उसमें रहता है तो उससे मकान नहीं खाली कराना चाहिए । जब तक कि वह मकान उस स्कीम के लिए लिया जाना ज़रूरी न हो जो कि इस कानून के मकसद को पूरा करने की तैयार की

[श्री राम सहाय]

गयी है। अगर हम इसी हद तक मकानात को हासिल करेंगे तब ही जरूरी मकसद हासिल होगा नहीं तो जैसा कि हमारे मित्र रनबीर सिंह जी ने कहा वही होगा इस तरह हम बजाय कुछ आदमियों को बसाने के कुछ को डिस्प्लेस (displaces) और करेंगे।

मेरा अर्ज करना यह भी है कि मकान लेने के लिए जो दो दिन की मियाद दी गयी है वह नाकाफी है। एक मकान जिसमें कोई व्यक्ति मुद्दों से रह रहा है और जिसका बहुत कुछ सामान वहां होगा और दीगर चीजें जरूरियात की होंगी, मैं नहीं समझता कि आजकल जब ट्रांसपोर्ट की और दूसरी तकलीफें हैं वह विस तरह से ४८ घंटे में अपना सामान हटा सकेगा। जहां तक मकानात का ताल्लुक है मैं यही सजेसन्स (suggestions) हाउस के सामने रखना चाहता हूं।

दूसरी बात यह है कि इसमें मुआवजा देने के बारे में जो दफा ७ ईजाद की गई है वह भी मेरे ख्याल से डिफेक्टिव (defective) है। हमको मुआवजा देने का कोई उमूल धनाना चाहिए। चाहे जैसा कि मेरे दोस्त मि० जैन की तरफ से है कि सन् १९३९ के रेट्स (rates) के हिसाब से ही मुआवजा दिया जाय। मेरा अर्ज करना यह है कि इसमें जो दफा रखी गई है उसमें लैंड एक्वीजीशन ऐक्ट की २३ सेक्शन (Section 23 of the Land Acquisition Act) की सबसेक्शन १ को जो एप्लाइ (apply) करने को कहा गया है उसमें यह अल्फाज हैं "shall have due regard to" मेरी समझ में नहीं आता कि "shall have due regard to" क्यों रखा गया है। यह दफा इस बिल में इस तरह क्यों रखी गई यह मेरी समझ में बिल्कल नहीं आता। सब सेक्शन २ सेक्शन २३ लैंड एक्वीजीशन ऐक्ट (Land Acquisition Act) में १५ फीसदी ज्यादा दिलाने की बात लाजिमी रखी गयी है उस प्रावीजन को डिलीट (delete) करने की तो वजह हो सकती है क्योंकि हमें डिस्प्लेस्ड परसन्स (displaced persons) को जगह देनी है। लेकिन उनको हम मार्केट वैल्यू भी (market-value) न दें यह उमूल किस बिना पर रखा गया है यह बात मेरी समझ में नहीं आती। सब सेक्शन १ सेक्शन २३ लैंड एक्वीजीशन ऐक्ट को पूरा पूरा क्यों एप्लाइ (apply) नहीं किया जाता यह बात मैं मालूम करना चाहता हूं कि इस तरह के लेजिस्लेशन के बनाने की क्या वजह हो सकती है।

साथ ही मेरा यह अर्ज करना है कि इसमें प्रासीक्यूशन (prosecution) के बारे में आफिसर्स को लैंड एक्वीजीशन ऐक्ट (Land Acquisition Act) से ज्यादा क्यों महफूज किया गया है। लैंड एक्वीजीशन ऐक्ट (Land Acquisition Act) में तो उनको नोटिस देकर उन पर मुकदमा चलाया जा सकता है लेकिन इस ऐक्ट के तहत में उन पर कोई मुकदमा नहीं चलाया जा सकता। इस तरह महफूज करने की क्या वजह है। मैं नहीं समझता कि जब हमारे यहां आफिसर्स इतने करप्ट (corrupt) हैं कि उनको रोकने के लिए हमारे मिनिस्टर साहिबान अपने को असमर्थ पाते हैं तो इस तरह से ज्यादा अख्तियारात देना अच्छी चीज नहीं होगी और फिर उनको यह प्रोटेक्शन (protection) देना बहुत गन्दी चीज हो जायगी। इससे तो वह बिल्कुल निडर होकर चाहे कुछ करेंगे। ईधर तो हम उनको यह अख्तियार देते कि वह चाहे जिस मकान को खाली करा लें और दूसरे यह प्रोटेक्शन देते हैं कि

उनके ऊपर कोई एक्शन (action) नहीं लिया जायगा। मैं नहीं समझता कि इसकी क्या वजह है। मेरा अर्ज करना यह भी है कि जहाँ हम देखें कि कि हमारा काम ठीक होने के लिये अख्तियारात देना जरूरी है, यह भी जरूरी है कि हम अफसरों के ऊपर कोई कंट्रोल भी रख सकें। पहले जब यह गवर्नमेंट शुरू हुई थी तो यह ख्याल था कि लोगों को यह ख्याल न हो कि हम रिवेंजफुल एटिट्यूड (revengeful attitude) से इनके खिलाफ कारवाई करते हैं और इसीलिए हमने इस ख्याल से और सिक्यूरिटी आफ सर्विस (security of service) के ख्याल में भी इन्हें बहुत कुछ लैटीट्यूड (latitude) दिया। लेकिन अब काफी जमाना होने के बाद और अब जब कि पहले से ज्यादा कर्प्शन (corruption) बढ़ने की शिकायत जनता को है, इस वक्त भी हम बिना कंट्रोल के उनके अख्तियारात को बढ़ाते जायें तो यह मुनासिब मालूम नहीं होता।

एक बात मुझे यह अर्ज करनी है कि कल रेलवे मिनिस्टर डा० जान मथाई ने यह बात बतायी थी कि वह ऐसे कायदे बना रहे हैं कि जिनसे यह अख्तियारात हासिल कर सकें कि जरूरत होने पर और कर्प्शन का माकूल इत्मिनान होने पर रेलवे के आफिसरों के खिलाफ एक्शन ले सकें। क्या ऐसे रूल (rules) नहीं बनाये जा सकते कि वह सभी मिनिस्टरों के काम में आवें और सभी मिनिस्टर उन पर अमल कर सकें। यह ज्यादा मुनासिब होगा कि सब के लिए एक से कायदे बना दिये जायें वजाय इसके कि हर एक अपने लिये अपने अपने तरीके पर कायदे बनाये।

(English translation of the above speech.)

Shri Ram Sahai (Gwalior State): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, there is no doubt that we should frame whatever legislation is considered necessary for affording facilities to our refugee brethren. But I fail to understand why unnecessary powers are being given through such an important legislation. I want to submit a few suggestions. First of all I would like to know what necessity was felt for the inclusion of houses in the definition of 'land' as defined in this Bill? There already exist other measures by means of which houses can be acquired, controlled and leased to other persons. What I mean to say is that the houses should be exempted from the operation of this law. If the owner himself is occupying the house, then he should not be evicted unless it is considered necessary to acquire that house in connection with the implementation of the scheme as envisaged in this measure. If we confine ourselves to the acquisition of houses to this extent, then only we can achieve our object; otherwise it would amount to what my honourable friend Ch. Ranbir Singh has stated that instead of resettling some people, we would be displacing a few more. I would also like to say that the limit of forty eight hours' notice for taking possession of the House as laid down in this Bill is quite insufficient. I do not really understand how would it be possible.

[Shri Ram Sahai]

for a person who is occupying a house, for the last so many years—most of his household effects and other necessities of life having been stored there—to remove his moveable property within forty eight hours especially in view of the present-day transport and other difficulties. So far as the houses are concerned, I place these suggestions before the House.

Secondly, in my opinion Clause 7 of this Bill and which deals with the payment of compensation is also defective. We should lay down a specific principle for the payment of compensation—this might be given on the basis of the prices prevailing in the year 1939 as suggested in the amendment put forwarded by my honourable friend Mr. Jain. What I mean to say is this, that Clause contains provisions for the application of sub-section (1) of section 23 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. This contain the words “shall have due regard to”. I fail to understand why these words “shall have due regard to” have been incorporated for. I cannot exactly follow why this clause has been put in this Bill. Sub-section (2) of section 23 of the Land Acquisition Act lays down for the compulsory payment of 15 per cent. extra. There may be some reason for the deletion of this provision, because we have to provide accommodation for the displaced persons, but I do not understand what is basis for this rule that we should not pay them even the market value. I would like to know why the provisions of sub-section (1) of section 23 of Land Acquisition Act are not applied in toto and what are the reasons for framing such type of legislation.

In addition to this, I would like to submit why the position of officers has been made more secure as compared with the Land Acquisition Act inasmuch as it relates to prosecution. Under the Land Acquisition Act, they are liable to be prosecuted after giving them due notice, but under the provisions of this Act, they cannot be prosecuted. What is the reason for providing such safeguards? I cannot really understand if it would be a wise course to vest more powers in the officers in this manner when they are so corrupt and our Honourable Ministers even find themselves unable to check them. Despite this, to afford them protection would worsen the matter. Such a course would make them quite fearless and allow them to act in their own way. On the one hand we are giving them powers to acquire any house they like, and on the other afford them protection that no action would be taken against them. I do not follow what are the reasons for this. I would also like to submit that when we consider it necessary to delegate powers for the proper performance of duties, it is equally necessary that we should exercise some sort of control over these officers. When this Government first came into power, it was thought that the people should not think that we would take a revengeful attitude. And for this very reason and keeping in view the security of service, we gave them a considerable latitude, but now after the lapse of sufficient time and when the masses complain about the existence of more corruption than before, it does not seem proper if we go on increasing their powers without exercising any control over them.

Another point which I have to mention is that the Honourable Dr. John Matthai, Minister for Railways, yesterday told the House that he had under consideration rules which will give him power to deal effectively with Railway Officers if necessity arises and is fully satisfied about corruption. Cannot similar rules be framed which may be followed and acted upon by all the Ministers? It would be much better if uniform rules are prescribed for the observance of all rather than permitting everyone to frame separate set of rules for individual use.

Formerly under the British regime even our high officers were suffering from inferiority complex, but now they have developed a sense of superiority complex, and have begun to feel that they are the sole masters. I find that in many particular cases they do not even care for their immediate superiors, not to talk of the representatives of the people. I would, therefore, submit that this Bill should be passed after considering all these things.

سردار بھوپندر سنگھ مان ! صاحب صدر ! میں بل کا سواگت کرتا ہوں۔ لیکن ساتھ ہی ساتھ میں یہ محسوس کرتا ہوں کہ اس تمام مسئلہ کو حل کرنے کے لئے رحم اور ترس کا استعمال کیا جاتا ہے۔ شروع ہی سے یہ سوچا گیا تھا کہ یہ شرنارتھی بھچارے بڑے اُجڑے ہوئے ہیں۔ ان کے ساتھ رحم کرنا چاہئے۔ چنانچہ اس رحم کا نتیجہ تھا کہ لوگ اسٹیشن پر پوریاں لے کر انہیں کھلاتے تھے اور کہتے تھے کہ بھچارے اُجڑے ہوئے ہیں۔ لیکن جیسا رحم اور ترس کا قاعدہ ہوا کرتا ہے وہ وقت کے ساتھ کم ہو جاتا ہے۔ یہی حالت ہماری حکومت کی ہے اس نے اس مسئلہ کو قطعی طور پر ایک قومی مسئلہ نہیں سمجھا یہ نہیں سمجھا کہ ہماری قومی پالیسی کا یہ ایک بہت اہم حصہ ہے۔ یہ تو نئی پالیسی ہی کے ہیر پھیر کا نتیجہ ہے کہ یہ لوگ اُجڑے ہوئے ہیں۔ لیکن اب یہ ہو رہا ہے کہ رحم کے بجائے لائتھیوں کی بوچھاڑ ہو رہی ہے۔ اب آہستہ آہستہ ان لوگوں کے لئے ہتھکڑیوں کا استعمال ہو رہا ہے۔ ناز اس بات کا ہے کہ حکومت بڑی طاقتور ہے۔ اچھا تو یہ ہوتا کہ یہ طاقت اور جگہ استعمال ہوتی جہاں پر کہ ملک کی آنکھیں لگی ہوئی ہیں۔ شرنارتھیوں پر لائتھیوں کی بوچھاڑ کی جاتی ہے اور کوئی اہم چیز ان کے سامنے نہیں رکھی جاتی جس سے ان کا ذکہ دور ہو۔ کیونکہ حکومت کی پالیسی ہی کی وجہ سے شرنارتھیوں کی یہ حالت ہوئی ہے۔ اس سے پہلے بڑے وزیر صاحب نے یہ فرمایا تھا کہ جو وکلا صاحبان آئے ہیں ان کا خیال نوکریوں میں رکھا جائیگا لیکن جب وکلا صاحبان نے سٹیٹ گروہ کر کے کسی طرح interview حاصل کی تو یہ فرمایا جاتا ہے کہ یہ parasite ہیں۔ مجھے خطرہ اس بات کا ہے کہ تھوڑا وقت اور گزر جانے پر تمام شرنارتھیوں کو parasite نہ قرار دے دیا جائے۔ اب دیکھتے ہیں کہ اندمان Andaman جسے کسی وقت کالا پانی کہتے تھے اور جہاں قیدیوں کو سزا کے طور پر بھیجا جاتا تھا۔ وہاں شرنارتھیوں کو اب بسانے کی تجویز ہو رہی ہے۔ میں تو سمجھتا ہوں کہ اب رحم اور ترس نہیں ہے۔ اب تو لائتھیوں کی بوچھاڑ ہے اور ہتھکڑیوں کی جھلکار ہے۔ اور شرنارتھیوں کو گالے پانی بھیجنے کی تیاریاں ہو رہی ہیں۔

میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ ہمارا ملک بہت بڑا وسیع ہے۔ بہت بڑا شاندار ملک ہے اگر ملک کے دروازے ان پر بند نہ کئے جاتے تو یقینی طور پر اس وسیع سمندر کی گود میں یہ بچھڑی ہوئی دھاریں بڑی آسانی سے سما سکتی تھیں۔ لیکن ہوتا کیا ہے کہ دروازے ان کے اوپر بند کر دیئے جاتے ہیں۔ اب ان کے لئے کوٹے (quota) مقرر کئے جا رہے ہیں۔ کہ 10 دس ہزار لیگے یا 20 بیس ہزار—دہلی میں پہلے چار پانچ

[سردار بھوپندر سنگھ مان]

لاکھ شامل تھے۔ اب سوال یہ ہے کہ ان کو کیسے نکالا جائے۔ اب سوال بسانے کا نہیں چل رہا بلکہ نکالنے کا ہے۔ میں آپ کو یقین دلانا چاہتا ہوں کہ جب تک آپ ان شرنارتھیوں کو ایک دیکھی بچے کی طرح اپنی گود میں لینے کو تیار نہیں ہو جاتے تب تک آپ اس مسئلہ کو حل کرنے میں ناکامیاب رہیں گے۔ میری درخواست یہ ہے کہ اس سوال کو ایک ملکی سوال سمجھا جائے اور تمام ملکی کے دروازے ان کے لئے کھولے جائیں۔ ان شرنارتھیوں کو آپ نے دیکھا ہے۔ مجھے ان پر ناز و فخر ہے کہ اگر ملک کے کسی اور حصہ سے ایسے لوگ آتے تو وہ صرف بھکاری ہی کی طرح آتے۔ وہ آپ سے بھیک مانگتے۔ پیسے مانگتے۔ لیکن آپ نے دیکھا کہ یہ تمام لوگ اپنے پاؤں پر کھڑے ہونے کو تیار ہیں۔ آپ نئے مکان بنانے کے لئے کہتے ہیں۔ ہم کہتے ہیں کہ آپ ہمیں زمین دیجئے۔ میتیریل (material) دیجئے۔ ہم خود مٹی گرا لیا کر مکان بنا لین گے۔ آپ ہماری کوششوں کو عمل میں آنے دیجئے۔ بڑے بڑے جو دوکاندار ہیں ان کے آگے چھوٹی چھوٹی پتھریوں پر بیٹھ کر وہ دوکان لگاتے ہیں اور روز دو۔ تین۔ چار روپیہ کما کر بہت تھوڑا نفع کما کر اپنے بال بچوں کا پیٹ پالتے ہیں۔ لیکن آپ انہیں اس کی بھی اجازت نہیں دیتے۔ آپ ان کے لئے ایسی جگہ دوکانوں بغواتے ہیں کہ جہاں کوئی بھی نہ جا سکے۔ بہت بڑے بڑے سرمایہ دار ہیں اور بہت بڑے بڑے مذافع اٹھاتے ہیں آپ ان کی بات مانتے ہیں تو میں یہ سمجھتا ہوں کہ اس میں ان سب کی ایک کانسرپیسی (conspiracy) ہے میں تو چاہتا ہوں کہ آپ تھوڑی مدد ان شرنارتھیوں کی بھی کیجئے۔

آپ ذرا یو پی (U.P.) کو دیکھئے۔ وہاں کیا ہوتا ہے؟ وہاں زمینداری بل (bill) پاس ہوتا ہے۔ جس سے کہ زمیندار سے زمین لے لی جائے۔ لیکن ہوتا کیا ہے۔ وہاں پر بہت کھلی زمین فالتو پڑی ہے۔ میرا ذاتی تجربہ ہے کہ وہاں ایسی زمینیں خالی پڑی ہیں جو کہ سونا اگلنے والی ہیں۔ لیکن وہاں وہ زمینیں ہم کو دی نہیں جاتی۔ زمیندار ہم سے نذرانہ مانگتے ہیں۔ ہم کہتے ہیں کہ آپ ہم کو زمینیں دیجئے۔ مشینوں کی ہم کو ضرورت نہیں ہے اگر آپ دے سکتے ہیں تو دیجئے۔ ورنہ ہم ہل سے ہی جوتیل گئے۔ اس طرح ہم آپ کے خوراک کے سوال کو بھی حل کر سکتے ہیں۔

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): May I ask whether all this is relevant?

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man: This is relevant in that we people want a living accommodation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Member may go on with his speech.

سردار بھوپندر سنگھ مان:— تو ہم نذرانہ کہاں سے لویں؟ ہمارا جو کچھ تھا وہ تو سب لٹ گیا۔ اب ہمارے پاس نذرانہ دینے کو روپیہ کہاں سے آوے؟

اب دوسرا سوال قرضوں کا ہے۔ اب نئی صورت یہ ہے کہ قرضہ تبھی دیا جاویگا جب کہ کوآپریٹو سوسائٹیز (Co-operative Societies) بن جاویں گی۔ اب مکان تو بناتا ہے ایک آدمی اور دوکان لگاتا ہے تو ایک آدمی لیکن اگر کوآپریٹو سوسائٹی (Cooperative Society) نہیں بنتی تو اُس کو قرض نہیں مل سکتا۔ یہ بات میری سمجھ میں نہیں آتی کہ ایک آدمی چھوٹی سی دوکان کھولتا ہے یا چھوٹا سا

مکان بنانا ہے تو وہ کوآپریٹو سوسائٹی (Co-operative society) بناوے۔ اگر سو دو سو پانچ سو مکان بنانا ہو تب تو یہ صورت ہو سکتی ہے۔ میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ آپ کو اس صورت پر غور کرنا چاہیئے۔

ایک چیز اور ہے۔ گورنمنٹ یہ طاقت تو حاصل کر لیتی ہے کہ مکانوں کو اکوایر (acquire) کر لیا جائے۔ لیکن میں نے یہ دیکھا ہے کہ اکوایر (acquire) کر لیا کے بعد بڑے بڑے مکانوں کو بڑے بڑے افسر (officer) جنکی پلہچ ہوا کرتی ہے وہ لے لیتے ہیں۔ یہ میری ایک دیکھی ہوئی حقیقت ہے۔ دہلی کو ہی لیجئے۔ یہاں بڑے بڑے آدمیوں کو ہی مکان ملے ہیں۔ میری یہ درخواست ہے کہ جہاں یہ مکان اکوایر (acquire) کئے جائیں وہاں (living space) راشن کی جائے۔ اور مقرر کی جائے کہ ایک آدمی کے پیچھے اتنی زمین رہنے کے لئے دی جاوے گی۔ اس طرح سے جو بڑے بڑے مکان ہیں اور جن میں بہت کم آدمی رہتے ہیں۔ بڑے بڑے افسر رہتے ہیں۔ ان میں زیادہ آدمی رہ سکیں۔

تیسری بات جو میں آپ کے سامنے رکھنا چاہتا ہوں وہ یہ ہے کہ گورنمنٹ کو یہ صاف طور پر اعلان کر دینا چاہئے کہ ایک ریفیوجی (refugee) کو چاہے وہ کس جگہ کا ہی کیوں نہ ہو وہ اس وقت تک نہیں نکالا جائیگا جب تک کہ اُس کے لئے دوسری آلترنیٹو سپیس (alterantive space) نہیں دی جائیگی۔ آجکل روز یہ چیز نظر آتی ہے کہ وہ وہاں سے نکل دئے جاتے ہیں۔ اگر وہ کہیں کوشش کر کے کہیں دوکان لگائے ہونے ہیں تو کوشش یہ ہوتی ہے کہ ان کو وہاں سے نکال دیا جائے۔ میں یہ کہنا چاہتا ہوں کہ اگر ریفیوجی (refugee) کہیں سے نکالنا ہو تو جب تک اُس کو کوئی آلترنیٹو سپیس (alternative space) یا آلترنیٹو اکوموڈیشن (alternative accommodation) نہ دی جائے تب تک وہ وہاں سے نہ نکالا جائے۔ ان باتوں کے ساتھ میں جناب صدر آپ کی توجہ اس طرف دلانا چاہتا ہوں کہ یہ مسئلہ طاقت سے حل نہیں ہو سکتا اور میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ اگر یہ طاقت سے دبایا جائیگا تو ملک کے ایک بڑے حصہ کے ساتھ زیادتی ہی نہ ہوگی بلکہ ایک غلط فہمی بھی ثابت ہوگی۔

(English translation of the above speech.)

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man (East Punjab: Sikh): Mr. Deputy Speaker, I welcome this Bill, but I feel that compassion and mercy should be exercised to deal with this problem. From the very outset, it was considered that these refugees who were in a destitute condition should be treated with compassion. It was as a result of such feelings that the people served the refugees Puris at the Railway stations as they thought that the later had been rendered destitute. But as is natural the feelings of mercy and compassion faded by the efflux of time. Similar is the case with our Government. It did not at all treat this as a 'National problem'. It did not consider that this was an integral part of its national policy. It is the result of this misconceived policy that these people are now destitute. What is happening now is that [Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man] instead of being treated mercifully they are being subjected to lathi-charge. Gradually hand-cuffs are being brought into use for these people. The Government take pride in their strength. It would have been better if this strength had been exercised in other directions towards which the eyes of the country are fixed. The refugees are subjected to lathi-charge and no constructive proposals are placed before them to relieve their distress. The policy of the Government alone is responsible for the present condition of the refugees. Earlier, the Honourable the Prime Minister had stated that the cases of the displaced lawyers would be considered for employment in Government service. But when the lawyers were able to secure an interview after resorting to Satyagraha, then it was stated that they are 'parasites'. I am afraid lest after the lapse of some more time all the refugees may be declared 'parasites'. We find now that proposals are under consideration to settle the refugees in the Andaman Island—which was sometimes called as kala-pani and where the convicts were transported for undergoing imprisonment. I, at least feel that there is hardly any feeling of compassion left now for the refugees who are greeted with lathi-charges and hand-cuffs and preparations are being made to transport them to the Andamans. I know ours is a very vast and magnificent country and if the doors of the country had not been closed to these refugees, then these scattered few would have very easily been absorbed in this vast expanse of land. What actually happens is that the doors are closed on them and quotas are being fixed in their case whether ten thousand or twenty thousand could be absorbed in a particular place. Previously it was proposed to settle four or five lacs in Delhi, but now the question has arisen as to how they should be removed from this place. Now the question is not of rehabilitation but of their dispersal. I would like to assure you that until and unless you are prepared to embrace these refugees like an afflicted child, you can never successfully solve this problem. My submission is that this problem should be treated as a national problem and the door of the whole country should be opened to them. You have seen these refugees. I am proud of them. If the people from any other part of the country had been similarly uprooted, I am sure they would have come as beggars and would have asked for charity and money, but you have noticed that all these people are prepared to stand on their own legs. You talk of building new houses. We say "Give us land and material—we will ourselves construct mud houses. You should let us work." They run their petty business on the footpaths situated in front of the shops owned by big people and by selling things at very small profits they earn a few rupees daily for their living. But you are not allowing them to do even this. Shops have been built for them at places which are quite out of the way. You do what the big capitalists and profiteers ask you to do and thus join in what I would call a conspiracy against them. I would like you to give some assistance to these refugees also. Take the case of United Provinces, what is happening there? The Zamindari Bill which seeks to acquire land from the Zamindar has been passed in that Province. Vast areas of surplus land are lying vacant and my own experience is that these lands are of very good and rich quality capable of producing rich harvests. But these pieces of land are not given to us. The Zamindars demand presents from us. We ask for land, we do not want mechanized implements. If you can give these, you may. Otherwise we will cultivate by ordinary ploughs. In this manner we can also solve your food problem.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): May I ask whether all this is relevant?

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man: This is relevant in that we people want a living accommodation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member may go on with his speech.

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man: From where should we get the present? We have been robbed of all we had. Where from can we now get the money for offering presents? Now the other question relates to the grant of loans. Under the new rules, a loan will be given only when Co-operative societies have been formed. For example, one man builds a house and another sets up a shop, but none of them can get the loan until the Co-operative society is formed. I do not really understand that one man who runs a petty shop or constructs a small house can form a Co-operative society. This can be done only when a few hundred houses are to be constructed. I think you should consider over this aspect. There is another question. The Government secures powers to acquire houses, but I have seen that after the acquisition of big buildings, these are usually allotted to very high officers who have got an approach or wield influence. This is a fact which I have seen with my own eyes. Take the case of Delhi. The houses are allotted here only to the big people. My submission is that whenever houses are acquired, the living space should be rationed and allotted per capita. In this manner, we can secure accommodation for quite a large number of people in the big houses—where very few people live—and which are occupied by officers.

Last of all, what I want to say is that the Government should unequivocally declare that a refugee to whatever place he may belong should not be evicted till such time as he is provided with alternate accommodation. Such things are of daily occurrences. If after trying hard they set up a shop somewhere, then efforts are made to displace them. I would, therefore, urge that in case a refugee is required to be evicted from any place, this should be done only when alternate space or accommodation is provided for him.

Sir, in addition I would also like to draw your attention that this problem cannot be solved by the application of force, and I feel were it to be suppressed by force, that would not only be unfair to a major portion of the country, but would result in misunderstanding.

[شری دیپن بندھو گپتا]

آٹھائی - اسلئے اگر میرے کچھ بھائی اس خیال سے کہ وہ اپنے ریفیوجی (refugee) بھائیوں کو جو یہاں آئے ہوئے ہیں دوسرے آدمیوں کو برا بھلا کہ کر سڈتوش دے سکتے ہیں تو میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ اس طرح کی کوئی بات کہنا غیر انصافی ہے۔ اور یہ ان کے ساتھ ہمدردی دکھانے کا بھی کوئی طریقہ نہیں ہے۔

دوسری بات اس سلسلے میں جناب صدر میں یہ کہنا چاہتا ہوں کہ جہاں تک سرکار کا تعلق ہے اور اس سلسلے میں ابھی جو کچھ کہا گیا ہے اس بارے میں ہم کو اپنی نیتی (নীति) بدلنا چاہئے۔ جب یہاں کھڑے ہو کر کرٹیسائز (criticize) کرتے ہیں تو یہ نہیں سمجھتے کہ اس سے باہر کیا غلط فہمی پھیلتی ہے۔ آج گورنمنٹ کے سامنے کیا situation ہے اور ملک کس مصیبت میں سے گزر رہا ہے اس کو نہیں دیکھتے۔ ہم جو اعتراض کرتے ہیں تو یہ نہیں دیکھتے کہ اس کا کیا اثر ہوتا ہے۔ ملک کی حالت کو سامنے رکھتے ہوئے میں تو سمجھتا ہوں کہ اتنے بڑے problem کے ہوتے ہوئے ہر ایک نے اپنا حصہ اس problem کو حل کرنے میں دیا اور اگر کوئی اس کو نہ مانے تو یہ ناشکرگزاری ہوگی۔ آپ پراہلم (problem) کو دیکھئے کہ کتنی بڑی تعداد میں لوگ یہاں آئے اس طرح کی problem کو کسی ملک نے اس طرح حل نہیں کیا ہے لیکن ہمارے پرائم منسٹر صاحب نے اور دوسرے منسٹر صاحبان نے کتنا زیادہ وقت اس problem پر دیا ہے اور گورنمنٹ نے بھی کتنا رویہ اس کے لئے خرچ کیا ہے۔ میں سمجھتا ہوں کہ ان باتوں کو ignore کرنا اور دوسری چیزوں کو emphasise کرنا زیادہ صحیح نہیں ہے۔ اس کا نتیجہ یہ ہوتا ہے کہ دوسرے لوگوں کے دلوں میں ایک خلاف جذبہ پیدا ہو جاتا ہے اور اس سے ان کا کوئی فائدہ ہوتا ہے اور نہ کوئی اچھا نتیجہ نکلتا ہے۔ اس لئے جو بھی criticism کریں وہ Constructive طریقے پر کرنا چاہئے۔ اور ہمارے لائق دوست موهن لال سکسپلہ جو کہ پورے طریقے سے اس معاملے میں پوری دلچسپی لیتے ہیں اس بات کی ضمانت ہے کہ جتنی زیادہ سے زیادہ توجہ وہ اس کام میں دے سکتے ہیں دیں گے۔

اس کے بعد جناب صدر جہاں تک اس بل کا تعلق ہے میں یہ بتانا چاہتا ہوں کہ دہلی تو ایک چھوٹی تحصیل کے برابر ہے۔ اگر اس کا رقبہ کیا جائے تو یہ ایک تحصیل سے کم ہے۔ اور پھر اس کے علاوہ حکومت نے اس میں پہلے ہی تین چار townships بنانے کا فیصلہ کیا ہے۔ جتنی بھی زمین دہلی کے Expansion کے لئے رکھی گئی تھی وہ سب displaced آدمیوں کو آباد کرنے کے لئے acquire کی گئی ہے۔ اس کے علاوہ اور بھی جہاں زمین مل سکتی تھی وہ بھی ان کو آباد کرنے کے لئے acquire کی گئی ہے۔

جیسا کہ میرے ایک لائق دوست نے فرمایا ہے کہ جہاں آپ ان لوگوں کو آباد کر رہے ہیں وہاں آپ کو ان کے لئے روزگار بھی مہیا کرنا پڑیگا۔ یہ نہایت ہی بدقسمتی کی بات ہے کہ جب یہ لوگ یہاں آئے تو راستے میں کوئی ایسا مقام نہیں تھا جہاں پر کہ urban population اپنے لئے جگہ ڈھونڈتی - دہلی چونکہ ایک بڑا شہر ہے اس لئے وہ یہاں پر آئے۔ اور ہمارے سر آنکھوں پر آئے۔ اور ہم نے ان کا سوائٹ کیا۔ ان کو اپنے بھائی سمجھا۔ اور ان کی خدمت کرتے رہے اور کر رہے ہیں۔ لیکن ان سب باتوں کے باوجود حکومت کو یہ سوچنا پڑیگا کہ ان کو یہاں آباد کر کے ہم کوئی ایسی صورت پیدا نہ کریں جس سے دہلی میں بے روزگاری ہو اور پھر دوبارہ یہ نہ سوچنا پڑے کہ ان کو روزگار کے لئے دوسری جگہ بھیج دیا جائے۔ اس لئے اس بات کو سامنے رکھتے ہوئے دہلی میں آنے والے آدمیوں کو آباد کیا جائے جتنوں کے لئے یہاں روزگار کی سہیل ہو سکے۔ اگر آپ یہاں ہر ایک کو آباد کرینگے اور ان کے روزگار کی کوئی صورت پیدا نہیں کی جائیگی تو یہ میرے خیال میں ان کے ساتھ جھوٹی ہمدردی ہوگی۔ اور جب تک ان کے لئے روزگار کی کوئی صورت مہیا نہیں ہوگی تب تک اس کا کوئی فائدہ نہیں ہوگا۔

آپ یہاں انڈسٹریز کو بڑھائیں - اور population کو آپ تیس چالیس لاکھ تک بڑھائیں۔ اس میں کوئی اعتراض نہیں ہے۔ لیکن میں یہ گزارش کرونگا کہ اس سکیم کو عمل میں لاتے وقت ہمیں چاہئے کہ ہم اس بات کا لحاظ رکھیں کہ جہاں ہم ان لوگوں کو آباد کریں وہاں ان کے لئے روزگار بھی مہیا کر سکیں۔ لیکن اگر ہم ان کے لئے روزگار بہم نہیں کر سکتے تو ہمیں ان کو بسانے کے لئے ایسی جگہ ڈھونڈنی چاہئے جہاں انکو روزگار بھی مہیا ہو اور انکو بسانے کے لئے وہاں بھیج دینا چاہئے۔

جناب والا! جہاں تک زمین کا تعلق ہے۔ میں یہ عرض کرونگا کہ ایک معمولی قانون سے زیادہ اس قانون کے ذریعہ حکومت نے اختیارات حاصل کئے ہیں۔ land acquisition کے لئے land acquisition act کے مطابق پندرہ فیصدی extra دیا جاتا ہے۔ لیکن حکومت نے ان لوگوں کو اس میں رعایت دی ہے۔ اور ان سے یہ extra پندرہ فیصدی نہیں لیا جائیگا مجھے اس بارے میں کوئی grudge نہیں ہے کہ حکومت نے انکو کیوں یہ رعایت دی ہے۔ یہ ایک noble cause کے لئے کیا جاتا ہے۔ اور اگر یہ پندرہ فیصدی انکے بارے میں بھی رکھا جاتا تو وہ مناسب نہ ہوتا۔ اسلئے میں یہ عرض کرونگا کہ یہ پندرہ فیصدی extra کے بارے میں جو انکو رعایت دی گئی ہے یہ نہایت ہی مناسب بات کی گئی ہے۔ لیکن اس کے ہوتے ہوئے اگر یہ کہا جائے۔ جیسے کہ میرے کسی دوست نے amendment بھیج دیا ہے کہ ان سے 1939 prices کے نرخوں کے مطابق لئے جائیں تو یہ نہایت نامناسب بات ہوگی۔ حکومت

[شری دیش بلدھو گپتا]

کا یہ کہنا کہ 1939 prices کے مطابق لی جائیگی تو یہ ان لوگوں کے ساتھ نہایت ہی نا انصافی ہوگی جنہوں نے 1939 میں زمینیں اپنے expansion کے لئے رکھی ہوں۔ اگر آج آپ انکو 1939 کے prices دیں تو کیا آپ خود اس بات کو محسوس نہیں کرتے ہیں کہ یہ سراسر نا انصافی ہوگی۔ یہ میں مانتا ہوں کہ اتنے بھاری crisis میں نیشن کے ہر ایک فرد بشر کو زیادہ سے زیادہ sacrifice کرنی چاہئے۔ لیکن یہ ایک نہایت ہی بڑی غلطی ہوگی اگر بوجھ اس طرح سے ایک ہی طرف ڈال دیا جائے۔ اسمیں شک نہیں کہ ملک میں اسوقت یہ ایک بڑا crisis ہے۔ اسکے لئے کچھ نہ کچھ سدباب کرنا لازمی ہے۔ تو اس کے لئے میں یہ گزارش کروں گا کہ آپ اس کے لئے ملک میں ایک special cess لگائیں اور taxes لگائیں اور اس طرح سے rehabilitation کے لئے کروڑوں روپیہ حاصل کریں۔ اس کام کے لئے آپ جس پر بھی ٹیکس لگائیے وہ نہایت خوشی سے دینا۔ کم از کم جہاں تک دہلی کا تعلق ہے وہ ایسے tax دینے سے ہرگز منحرف نہیں ہوگی۔ لیکن اگر آپ صرف دہلی پر یہ بوجھ ڈالیں اور مدراس بمبئی اور دوسرے صوبوں پر آپ یہ بوجھ نہ ڈالیں تو یہ بہت ہی نامناسب ہوگا۔ یو۔پی کے صوبے نے تو پہلے ہی اس بارے میں اپنے دروازے بند کر دیے ہیں جیسے کہ میرے ایک دوست نے ابھی ابھی کہہ دیا کہ ان کے پاس ایک گاؤں کے لوگ آئے اور شکایت کی تو آپ کو یہ دیکھنا چاہئے کہ اگر کسی جگہ پر پہلے ہی سے کوئی سکیم جاری کرنا مقصود ہو تو اس جگہ پر یہ بوجھ ڈالنا بھی مناسب نہ ہوگا اور کسی ایک شیکشن پر بہت زیادہ بوجھ ڈالنا ٹھیک بھی نہیں ہے۔

rehabilitation کے بارے میں اس بات کا خیال رکھنا بھی نہایت ضروری ہے کہ لوگوں کو بسانے سے ان لوگوں کے جو کہ rehabilitate کئے جائیں اور local آدمیوں کے تعلقات بھی خراب نہ ہو جائیں۔ یہ ایک نہایت ہی اہم اور ضروری بات ہے۔ اگر اس بات کا خیال نہیں رکھا جائیگا تو یہ short sightedness ہوگی۔ اس لئے اگر کوئی آدمی کسی جگہ پر آباد ہو گیا ہو تو اسکو وہاں ہی آباد رکھ دیا جائے۔ یہ اس طرح سے ممکن ہو سکتا ہے کہ جب حکومت اس چیز میں unfair نہ ہو اور اس بات کا خیال رکھا جائے کہ اگر وہ کوئی قدم اٹھانا چاہیں تو اس کے مقابلے میں ان لوگوں کی کیا reaction ہو گی جنہوں نے کہ کافی sacrifices اس بارے میں دی ہوں۔

اس کے لئے لٹری بھی float کی جا سکتی ہے۔ ان طریقوں سے آپ اس ملک میں اس کام کے لئے زیادہ سے زیادہ روپیہ مہیا کر سکتے ہیں۔ اور اس معاملے کو اچھی طرح سے سلجھا سکتے ہیں۔ آپ اس معاملے کو اس طرح سے حل نہیں کر سکیں گے آپ کو اس کی جوت تک جانا ہو گا۔ اب اس بارے میں آپ کو زمین acquire کرنے کی ضرورت پڑ رہی ہے۔ آپ ضرور زمین acquire کریں۔ لیکن اتنی ہی جوتلی کہ آپ کو ضرورت ہو اس کے لئے آپ کو حکومت کے ہاتھ مضبوط کرنے چاہئیں۔

ان حالات کے پیش نظر میں یہ گزارش کروں گا کہ یہ بل جیسا کہ draft ہے کر آیا ہے اس کو منظور کر لینا چاہئے ان الفاظ کے ساتھ میں اس بل کا سواگت کرتا ہوں۔

(English translation of the above speech).

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I do not want to take much time of the House, but as this Bill relates to Delhi, I feel it my duty to say a few words. Firstly, I think that so far as Delhi is concerned, nobody can deny that the people did not discharge their duty in this respect. I can say this with great pride that if any Province has rendered the maximum possible help in this connection and realized its responsibility—it is Delhi. The population of Delhi has now increased to five or six lacs. Many of my honourable friends live in Delhi, and they are no doubt aware that so far as the people of Delhi are concerned, they have not objected to the refugees but on the contrary they sympathised with them in their distress and extended to their brethren a cordial welcome. In other provinces they were not welcomed with open arms and sometimes they found themselves unwelcomed and many obstacles were put in their way. The people of Delhi made no protests against the refugees in spite of the fact that the population of Delhi had increased by one and a half times and no provision had been made for this increased population though many schemes for expansion were formulated. I think therefore, that if some of my honourable friends feel that they can afford consolation to the refugees by rebuking others; it would not be so unjustified on their part although it would not be a proper way of showing sympathy towards them. Secondly I would like to say in this connection as has been stated just now that so far as the Government is concerned, we should change our policy. When we stand up in this House to criticise, we do not realize how it is misunderstood outside. We do not appreciate the situation that confronts the Government and the difficult times through which the country is passing. While raising objections, we do not visualize what would be its effect. I think that in view of the situation facing the country, everybody has contributed his share towards the solution of this colossal problem, and if anyone does not admit this, it would mean ungratefulness on his part. Looking at the problem and to the number of people who migrated to this place en masse we can say that no other country has tackled such a problem with so much success. Our Prime Minister and other Ministers have devoted a considerable time over this problem and the Government have spent a large amount of money to meet its expenses and I think it is not correct to ignore all these factors and to lay emphasis on other points. This would lead to dissatisfaction among the people and would neither benefit them nor produce any good results. Therefore, whatever criticism we have to offer should be in a constructive manner. Our honourable friend Mr. Mohanlal Saxena who is taking keen interest in the matter is a guarantee that fullest attention will be given to this problem.

Now coming to this Bill, I would say that Delhi is just about the size of a small Tehsil and its area is less than that of a Tehsil. Apart from this the

[Shri Deshbandhu Gupta]

Government has already decided to set up three or four townships. The entire land which was earmarked for the expansion of the city has been acquired for the rehabilitation of displaced persons, and in addition to this, land has also been acquired for their resettlement at other place wherever it was available.

As one of my honourable friends has stated, you will also have to provide employment for these persons at places where you are settling them. It is a matter of great misfortune that when these people came here, there was no place en route where the urban population could find out accommodation for themselves. Since Delhi is a big city, they came over here. We greeted them, welcomed them, treated them as our brethren, and helped them and we are still doing it. Inspite of all this Government will have to consider whether by settling these people here, they will not be creating a situation that would give rise to unemployment in Delhi, and it may not then become necessary to transfer them elsewhere to earn their livelihood. Keeping all this in view, only that number of people should be settled in Delhi for whom employment can be found. In my opinion this would tantamount to mere lip-sympathy. If you settle every body in this place without looking to the opportunities they will have for earning a living it would in my opinion be a false sympathy. So long as they are not provided with any employment, it will not serve any useful purpose.

If industries are developed it would not matter if the population increases to 30 or 40 lacs. But I will submit that while executing this scheme we should also keep in view that we are able to provide employment for these people at whatever places we rehabilitate them. In case we are not able to provide them with employment, we should find out such places for settling them where they can get employment.

Sir, so far as the question of land is concerned, I will submit that the Government has acquired more powers by virtue of this legislation than by any ordinary law. Under the Land Acquisition Act, 15 per cent. is paid extra for the purpose of acquiring land but Government have granted a concession to these people and this 15 per cent. extra will not be charged from them. I do not grudge them this concession. It is for a noble cause, and it would have been quite unjust if the condition of 15 per cent. had been retained in their case also. Therefore, I will submit that to exempt them from the extra payment of 15 per cent. is really a very wise course. If it is still urged as one of my honourable friends has suggested in an amendment, that they should be charged the 1939 prices it would be quite unreasonable. The declaration by the Government that the prices ruling in 1939 will be charged would be quite unjust to those people who had reserved their lands during that year for the purposes of expansion. If you pay compensation on the basis of prices prevailing in the year 1939, do you not yourself feel the injustice of it? I admit that every individual should make the greatest possible sacrifice to meet this grave crisis but it would be a serious mistake if the burden is placed on one side only. There is no doubt that the country is passing through a grave crisis and something must be done to meet it. To do this, I would suggest that a special cess or tax should be levied throughout the country to secure some crores of rupees for purposes of rehabilitation. Every person on whom such a tax is imposed will very gladly pay it. At least so far as Delhi is concerned, the people will not refuse to pay such taxes. But if you put the burden on Delhi alone and exempt other provinces viz., Madras and Bombay, etc. it would not be quite proper. The United Provinces have already closed their doors to them as stated just now by one of my honourable friends that some villagers approached him and complained to him. If it has been decided to start some new scheme at a place, it would not be proper to put more burden on that place. It would not indeed be proper to put too much burden on any one section.

In connection with rehabilitation, it should also be kept in view that the relations between the people to be rehabilitated and the local inhabitants are not estranged. This is a very vital and important matter. It would amount to short-sightedness if this fact is ignored. Therefore, if any person has settled himself at any place, he should be allowed to remain there. This will be possible if the Government does not act unfairly and takes into account the possible reactions of those people who have already made enough sacrifice.

I have already said and would like to stress again that whatever is to be done, we should not forget that we should do only that which is possible. The Government as I have said should impose a special tax and levy special cess and constitute a Relief and Rehabilitation Fund. Besides this, a lottery can be floated for this purpose. By these methods, more money for this purpose can be secured and this problem can be successfully solved. You will have to go to the very root of it. For this you have to acquire land. You do acquire land but only so much as is required, and for this purpose the hands of the Government are to be strengthened.

I would therefore urge that this Bill should be passed as drafted. With these words, I welcome this Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, I have been on the Standing Committee of the Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation for a year now, but I find that after all the efforts made by our Government and the huge amount of money spent by it, we have not yet gone very far in the problem of rehabilitation. I do not want to censure my Government. I know it was one of the biggest problems that any Government had had to face. Probably the only comparison can be Eastern Prussia from where the Germans were turned out and Poles were put in their place by the Russians after the Great War. But besides that I do not know of any other instance in history where seventy lakhs of people had come to another land to be rehabilitated. Leaving alone those who have gone from here to Pakistan, statistics available show that seventy lakhs of people have come to India from areas which are now parts of Pakistan. Of course, approximately fifty lakhs have gone from here also, but this uprooting of people from their native lands has created a problem which is colossal in its nature.

Sir, we have been trying to deal with this problem in every meeting of the Committee. We have been making recommendations, and today we have a Bill which really enacts an Ordinance into law. I have carefully gone through this Bill. It only says that the Governments—not the Central Government, but the Provincial Governments—will be given power to acquire any land which they think necessary for schemes for rehabilitation of refugees; they have been given summary powers to acquire any piece of land—they have only to give forty-eight hours notice after notification in the Gazette.

Even if this Bill could promise a solution of the problem, I would not say anything in praise of it. We are not really trying to solve the problem; we are tinkering with it and we shall have to pay the penalty. Sir, this is one of the most explosive problems in the country. There is inflation no doubt, there are clouds of war hanging over us, but I think until we solve the problem of relief and rehabilitation of these refugees we shall not be able to make headway in any field. To have seventy lakhs of people without any homes, people who have lost their all and who have the bitterest memories, to have them without being firmly settled, is, I think, the most dangerous thing for a State. Here we go forward and say that Collectors in every Province will have power to acquire land—that is all the Bill says. My own experience is this. In every meeting of the Standing Committee we have been trying to allot quotas to every Province, that so many will go to this place, so many to that place, but the experience of our Ministers and of our Committee is that although people have gone there because they had to go somewhere, very few, probably none, have been rehabilitated there. Here again, if the Central Government does not take power to acquire land and rehabilitate these people throughout the country, the Provincial Governments will not be able to rehabilitate them and probably some District Officers will try to wreak their vengeance on some people, take their lands saying it is for refugees and do something with it. This is not the way in which we should go about this business. I am strongly opposed to this Bill. I want a much more thoroughgoing measure. This is a problem which can only be solved by the Central Government and unless this Government takes full power to have rehabilitation schemes executed by itself in all the provinces, the problem cannot be solved. What I want is this. Instead of giving District Magistrates power to acquire lands in the provinces, this Government must come forward with a Bill under which it will itself have a Committee or some such organisation on which the Provincial Governments will be fully represented.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: May I interrupt my honourable friend for a minute and draw his attention to the fact that this Bill extends to the Chief Commissioners' Provinces of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara only and therefore it does not apply to provinces at all? The jurisdiction of this Bill is Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara and these are directly under the Central Government.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Perhaps I did not read that portion, but all the same, what I say is this: just as we are now giving power to the provinces under this Bill, so we should not do it in respect of other provinces, but it should be directly under the Central Government and this Bill should be extended to them.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena (Minister for Relief and Rehabilitation): Provinces have already got their Acts. U.P. has got its own Act and so also the other provinces.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: They have got their Acts, but what I want is this. If you want to execute rehabilitation schemes, you should take full power; the Central Government should take full power to execute the schemes in the Provinces also, because if you trust to the Provinces they will not execute the schemes.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U.P. General): May I remind you that "land" is a provincial subject?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I know it is a provincial subject, but when there is an emergency in the life of the nation, when you want to solve a big problem, when you have to rehabilitate seventy lakhs of refugees, you will have to transcend that. You can enlist the fullest co-operation of the Provinces, but you must always formulate schemes by which you can rehabilitate them on a Central basis in the provinces. Unless you do that, you cannot get the schemes executed. This Bill will only extend to Ajmer-Merwara and Delhi as my friend pointed out and the Central Government hopes that by acquiring land and giving compensation they will be able to carry out their schemes. I welcome that and I hope that the Honourable Minister who is probably more interested in this problem than anybody else even before he became the Minister and who has put in so much energetic work in this connection, will succeed in respect of these two areas, but I do wish that the Bill was extended to other provinces and covered the entire country. Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara are full of refugees. They know that you will be able to rehabilitate them somehow. When you send them out, they go out and ultimately they roam about and come back. They think: "Oh, Panditji is there and others are there." They believe they will be rehabilitated. This is not the way in which you should attempt to help them. What I want the Honourable Minister to do is to extend the scope of the Bill to the entire country and he should not depend upon Provincial Governments' Acts and Provincial Governments' schemes. He himself knows to what extent refugees who have gone to provinces have been resettled. They are still not resettled.

They roam about here and there. They get some resting place somewhere, some house or shop. That is all, then they move about again to another place. They have not been rehabilitated. I therefore think that it is not in the power of the Provincial Governments or in the resources of the Provincial Governments to rehabilitate them. The scheme which we make will thus remain on paper until the Central Government takes full powers as we are doing in the case of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara. I do not think that Provincial Governments should have any objection to that scheme. They must be fully consulted. They must be given the fullest opportunity to represent their views. Their views should be considered, but ultimately, it must be the business of the Centre to see that this rehabilitation is carried out; otherwise, it will not put so many people in permanent rehabilitation.

Here in Delhi for the last fortnight we have been seeing a drama being staged in the main streets of Chandni Chowk. It has been a thing of great pain to all of us. Yet we cannot say that our Government did all they could and the refugees were at fault. After all who are these refugees? They are people who have lost their all, who have come here, who have to eke out a living by their daily labour. Should they not have some place where they can carry on their business? Merely saying that we have not been able to do all that is necessary for them is not an excuse. It is our responsibility to have seen that within one year they have been here they have been given some place where they could be permanently settled. They were sitting for about six months on the streets and we were saying that they would be given proper stalls. Were they given proper stalls? How could you force them to move to some place within a week's time? Why could you not make enough stalls before asking them to move, so that they could have been moved smoothly there? This is not the way in which you should do things. What has happened in spite of your spending Rs. 35 crores, in spite of our Prime Minister and everybody? The Government must go about its business in a scientific way. It must not go about it in fits and starts. They must have their plan and execute it. Otherwise, this problem of rehabilitation will not be solved. It will remain a sore in the body politic of India for ever. I think when seventy lakhs of people came here, there was a very good opportunity for us to make a plan and to have the experiment in having a particular kind of township created and where people can be asked to live in a particular way. They may have been given equal pieces of land and opportunities for trade and business. But we did not think of anything of this sort. We have been drifting from day to day. When I read the resolutions of the Standing Committee from the middle of last year, I find they have always repeated, at least they have repeated several times, that nobody cared for them and they try to do something but they come back. Now, we have got another machinery, the Development Board. I was really surprised to know that the Development Board was something independent of the Ministry for some time and even now I do not know what the function of this Board is. I hope very soon it will be abolished and the Ministry itself will take full powers to carry on this thing. I think if the centralised control is not taken by the Ministry and the Minister is not given full power to carry out the scheme, this problem will not be solved. Therefore, I wish that this Bill is extended to the whole country and the Central Government takes full powers and does not leave it to the Provincial Governments to carry it out.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: May I point out that this House has passed a Rehabilitation Administration Corporation Act for the refugees with Rs. 10 crores capital?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Perhaps Mr. Sidhva has not understood what I said. Rs. 10 crores is to rehabilitate people who want loans. That is not what I am saying. I have been suggesting that the whole problem can be solved only if the Centre is given full powers to make lands available and rehabilitate through its own agency all over the country. The Provincial Governments should be taken into full confidence; otherwise, we find that today U.P. refuses to take more than 3 lakhs, and C.P. and Madras etc., also refuse to take more than a certain number. The problem can only be solved if you make a definite plan and allot so many to U.P.; so many to Madras, and so on.

I was dealing with the acquisition scheme. Perhaps the powers given are too Draconian, and forty-eight hours' notice is not enough to make a man leave his premises. Of course, there is power given to the District Magistrate to allow any other reasonable period, but I think the Act should provide one week, because it is not proper to give power which may be misused to the detriment of these people. I know the power is very wide and should have been limited by other safeguards; but in view of the colossal nature of the problem I think we will have to give these powers. Sir, I support the Bill.

Sardar Hukam Singh (East Punjab: Sikh): Sir, so far as this Bill is concerned it is a very simple affair and there cannot be two views about it. It is intended to replace an Ordinance which has existed for some time; Government had these powers and had exercised them. It is a simple Bill; there are just a few provisions to enable Government to issue a notification of its intention to acquire land; and after some formalities the land would vest in Government to be used for the purposes intended in the Bill. But though simple, it raises certain very important questions. The problem of refugees, as has been said, is surely a colossal problem and a gigantic affair. If a balance-sheet were prepared of the work that our National Government have done so far, and the work done by them are put on the credit side and the work not done on the debit side, we can say that on the credit side much has been done. Government have taken great pains and felt for the refugees. Crores of rupees have been spent on this problem. But if we take the debit side we must say that there were more things that should have been done but were not done. As for Delhi, my honourable friend Shri Deshbandhu Gupta said that Delhi has exhausted all its resources. Delhi extended its arms to the refugees. But, as was said, this problem is not the creation of the refugees; it is a question of the whole country. The country thought that it must win freedom and that was done by sacrificing these refugees. If they are the victims, certainly the whole country has to bear that burden; it is not Delhi alone that should bear it but the whole of India should share the burden. It should be felt by every Indian that it is his duty to bear it. One thing I may point out about Delhi itself. It has provided certain stalls recently near the Red Fort. I went to that site yesterday and on enquiry from the stall-holders I was told—I cannot vouch for its truth but I have no reason to doubt it—that a stall 8ft. x 8ft. carried a rent of Rs. 35 per month. That made me suspect whether it was a profit-making business concern that was being run there in the name of helping the refugees. I inquired further and was told that the Committee had acquired that piece of land on lease for five years and the further expenditure that had been incurred would perhaps be included; the whole thing had been spread over a term of two years and then an average had been arrived at and this Rs. 35 per month had been worked out. That is very good. But if all the outlay is to be recovered in two years what about the income for the next three years? I should like to know from the Honourable Minister if in the name of helping the refugees this is going to be made a profit-making business; whether this is the spirit of sympathy for the refugees who are all destitute, poor and homeless. As has been said, the problem is colossal and the task is gigantic, but in spite of that this Government has to bear it and solve it. These millions have been displaced; they have gone through unheard-of sufferings and undergone many privations. But it is the faltering, plausless and wavering policy of Government that has added to their difficulties. It has been alleged and admitted that none of these refugees resorted to begging. They only want facilities to earn an honest living and a shelter, however small it may be. Certainly it is the business of Government to provide facilities for these refugees to settle down. After housing the second thing is to help them to take up useful and productive avocations. They are allowed to sit at one place but are pushed out further as the older business men in the vicinity do not like their presence there as their own business is affected. From same place they are to be turned out because the beauty of that place is spoilt; they must go out from still another place as their tongue is coarse and their way of living is rough.

There are hundred and one things that are being used to make out a case that these refugees should go out of the metropolitan city. The refugees do feel like that. They have not taken pleasure in coming to this city and they were not looking for an opportunity for rushing to Delhi. It is only under compulsion that they are sticking on. You can very well imagine the fate of a family with seven or eight members. With the present cost of living, a refugee wage-earner has to make up three or four Rupees a day to provide bread for his dependent. Every town in the East Punjab is over-crowded. Finding that conditions are not congenial even here, some of them have gone back. Certainly, there are others who are coming still, as rightly or wrongly some nervousness or even panic is being felt in the border towns. If our Government could infuse confidence in the people that they were ready for any contingency that may arise, then, the rush to Delhi may not be so great. Even now, the pressure can be relieved and it could be lessened at least, if the East Punjab Government would decide to shift its headquarters to Amritsar. If the West Punjab Government can have Lahore as its headquarters, surely East Punjab can choose Amritsar for this purpose. I am confident that this would have a great reassuring effect to relieve the present pressure. It is true that Delhi cannot absorb all the people that have come and are still pouring in. The failure of the East Punjab Government finally to decide the site for its capital, some apathy on the part of some towns outside the Punjab to receive refugees and the delay in putting forward a definite policy so far have added to the difficulties of the Government as well as of the refugees. A more sympathetic policy with a definite plan is needed to solve this tangle. I must admit that the Government has done, as I have already said, much and it is absolutely necessary that it should do more. Much more can be done if the real mind is there.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): How can we make the East Punjab Ministers work? They do not select their capital site nor make effort to build it.

Sardar Hukam Singh: I am telling the House that this is not the only problem. There are other factors contributing to this pressure. I do not say that this Government could decide the capital of East Punjab. These are the several factors that have contributed to this problem.

I again emphasise that the refugees are prepared to go back and they do like to go back. It is for this Government to afford facilities and create circumstances in which the refugees could go back. It might be that for the present there is no scope and there is no likelihood of their going back soon. Therefore, it is the duty of every citizen of India to help them in their resettlement. I would request the Honourable Minister to look into the matter, not with this Bill alone, but with further measures so that they may be re-settled very quickly.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I know that a long debate has taken place on this subject; many speakers have spoken. I had no intention to speak originally, but I felt that I would be failing in my duty if I did not get up and contradict some of the statements that were made during the course of the speeches by some members.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi (East Punjab: General): Regarding your own province?

Shrimati G. Durgabai: May be; there are other matters also. I have heard one member say that there must be sincerity and a genuine heart in whatever we do and so long as these are absent, there is no good of saying that we are anxious to tackle this refugee rehabilitation problem. The speech was in Hindi; from what I could claim to have understood, I can make out that this was the statement made. I really ask the member whether in what all the Government of India have done and the efforts they have made in the direction of rehabilitating the refugees; he has found this genuine heart and sincerity lacking anywhere and whether their efforts, actions and achievements were not concrete expressions of their heart?

Another member I have heard saying that Delhi has taken all the burden on its head, and the other provinces like Bombay, Madras and U.P.—I do not know whether he has actually mentioned the name of U.P.—I heard him also say U.P.—have refused to take these refugees. Sometime ago, I put a question to the Minister in charge of Relief and Rehabilitation whether it was not a fact that Madras along with other provinces had agreed to absorb a great number of refugees, nearly one lakh. Everybody is aware that there was a conference of provincial Premiers here and they held discussions. They were definitely asked to share the burden and I know definitely that Madras has agreed to absorb a great number. In reply to my question, the Minister was kind enough to state that it was a fact that Madras had agreed. Then I asked him why only a few hundreds, 700 or 800, or never at any time more than 1,000 were found in Madras and others were not able to go, whether it was the fault of the Government in not being able to send them or where the fault lay. The Honourable Minister was kind enough to say that it was on account of the unwillingness and unpreparedness on the part of the refugees to go. I ask my brother and sister refugees whether they would not do well to adjust themselves to circumstances and whether difficulties with regard to language and other things would stand in their way. It is true we have all found that Delhi is over-crowded. Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta said that Delhi's burden is more than it could bear; it is true and we have endorsed that. I would really ask the Government of India to see that these refugees adjust themselves to the circumstances prevailing and unmindful of the difficulties with regard to language and other things, they should be prepared to go and see that the distribution is made even. I also say that the Government of India had done their very best. We are all aware of the legislation that we have made. I am told that we have spent very nearly 100 and odd crores for rehabilitating these refugees or we are going to spend more. Every person in this House is very anxious to help them and stand by them. I can say this with great confidence that when Mr. Neogy was in charge of this portfolio, I happened to discuss these problems with him and he showed great anxiety to do his very best and now I do not think that we can find a greater friend and a servant than Mr. Mohanlal Saksena. He is always anxious to do his very best to help and stand by these refugees. We all know how he struggles hard from morning till evening and even late in the night. These refugees also must know that they have got to co-operate and join their hands with the Minister who is very anxious to do his very best. Whatever legislation had been undertaken and whatever plans have been made to help and stand by the refugees, the House is, always with them and they never said 'no' to them. Other problems could be allowed to lie idle; other schemes were allowed to lie idle, but we have always given first priority to this problem of rehabilitating the refugees. I cannot resist the temptation in mentioning one fact that is, with regard to the work done.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is not the honourable member straying away from the question of land acquisition? I would suggest that she confines herself to the subject under discussion.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: The honourable member is defending the Madras Government.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: These are the points which I wanted to present before

Mr. Deputy Speaker: They are irrelevant and they need not be answered.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: These are the points which I wanted to present before the House now. Because I heard an honourable member speaking in that way, I thought that it would be my duty to say this.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, let me tell you frankly that I was not prepared for this debate or the turn it has taken. I know that no question is more nearer to the hearts of members here than this and I would have welcomed a discussion on this question and I was hoping that on the non-official resolution we will have a general discussion and I had all the material here to lay before the House and to acquaint it as to what the Government has done and what it proposes to do; but I had hoped Sir, that you will at least rule out all those points that have been raised regarding the work of rehabilitation, but still as certain points have been made, I feel it my duty to briefly reply to them.

Let me tell you, Sir, that so far as the Government is concerned, the Government considers its responsibility to rehabilitate every single refugee who has come from Pakistan. Not only that, we have also undertaken the responsibility of rehabilitating the refugees who have come from urban areas as far as possible in urban areas. We have also given the assurance that as far as possible, refugees coming from one area will be settled in the same areas, but we can not promise to settle those refugees who want to be settled in Delhi or Lucknow or in one particular place to settle them there. It has been said that "the doors" of certain provinces have been closed and a grievance has been made out of that here. But I would like to tell the honourable member who has made that grievance to consider it for himself, is it or is it not a fact that the gates of Punjab itself have been closed on the refugees coming from other provinces, notwithstanding that they are neighbouring states, for instance, Bahawalpur, refugees cannot get land in the East Punjab, because they do not happen to be Punjabees or of Punjabee extraction? I know that in this manner the question has been made more complicated, but still the Government of India is prepared to accept the position as it is and we have not tried to interfere with the policy followed by the East Punjab Provincial Government.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: Is it not a joint policy?

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: I know it is a joint policy, but I say it has been accepted because we felt that the other policy could not be pushed through.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: He should have no grievance against the Punjab Government.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: The other honourable member is having a grievance that the doors of other Provinces have been closed on others and so I am just pointing this by way of justification. If you yourself close the doors on the refugees from a province, you cannot complain that the United Provinces which has already got 6 or 7 lakhs of refugees do not want to take any more. That is the point that I wanted to make and still I say, as I have said many times, that no refugee is going to be sent out from one particular province where he has gone. All that we can do is that we want to plan for the rehabilitation and this planning means accepting to certain conditions and if those conditions are not accepted by the refugees, then it becomes very difficult for any Government to help the refugees to settle down.

Then the other impression that has gone abroad is that all those who were engaged in the profession of shop-keeping, they have to be rehabilitated in the profession of shop-keeping and lawyers have to be rehabilitated as lawyers and this is not possible. We must know that before we can sell anything, you must produce it and therefore the assumption that is generally made that if we can give some money to these people and some place to sit, they will be able to make a living out of it or to settle down, I think, is not true. Those persons who have been working as petty shop-keepers in Delhi have come to me and have told me that they were engaged in doing some petty job and they have used up all their savings; they have sold their gold. So the very fact that they are there does not mean that they have been rehabilitated. Therefore we must understand that it is not possible for this country or for any province or any state to have all shop-keepers and no producers especially when those people who have gone from here were mostly artisans and cultivators and therefore we have to begin with this assumption that if we want to provide for all everyone shall have to produce something.

Another grievance has been made by another honourable member that I had called the lawyers "Parasites". I may inform the House that I have never used any such term, but a great number of lawyers came in deputation, not in Satyagraha style,—I can meet everybody and I do meet everybody,—but I do not know where the honourable member got this information from. They came to me and wanted a loan of Rs. 5,000 each. They wanted to settle in Delhi and they wanted a loan of Rs. 5,000 each. I at once enquired what were the changes of their rehabilitation and they said that 225 muslim lawyers have gone away to Pakistan and a large number of refugees have come, they will have work. Sir, that means that the Government has to provide loans to the refugees and settle them and in spite of their settling down, they must fight and engage lawyers to argue about, so that they may be rehabilitated. That means the Government has to finance the lawyers for settling down and I told them we could not give them loans for the simple reason that it was not possible for the Government to give you a loan. For Delhi alone the total amount which was recommended by the Advisory Committee came to a crore and 65 lakhs and the provision in the budget was only 15 lakhs out of which 2 lakhs had already been advanced. When this matter came to me for consideration, I enquired from the Finance Ministry how much we can get and I was told "not more than 3 or 4 lakhs." Then I enquired how much of that money was to be recovered and everybody who had anything to do with it said that not more than 20 per cent. of this loan was going to be recovered. Then I asked how many of them were going to be rehabilitated and I was told, not many. Part of this money would be used up in paying loans, part of it would be taken by the middlemen and the balance will be used by the refugees as they have used up all their savings. I had to take a decision and it was that it was not possible to give individual loans and therefore, I decided upon this scheme of co-operative society. It has been said: "How can a shop-keeper who wants to start a shopping trade get a loan from a co-operative society"? It is very simple. In the Lajpat Rai Market a co-operative credit society has been opened and as I have said I have already appointed a Cooperative Board and it has got on its Board many members who know something of co-operation. They will decide that out of 1500 or 1700 shop-keepers how many are to be cloth dealers, and how many are to have in oilman's stores? It is not possible that every one could be engaged in selling cloth. You know that when the cloth license system starts again, many of them will have no work. After that is decided, it will be found out as to how many persons shall be advanced the money. We have already applications which have been scrutinised. From amongst them shop-keepers will be selected and they will receive loans only if they become members of the Co-operative Credit Society.

Similarly in the matter of doctors. You may say how can the doctors start co-operatives. I have such a scheme. I do not want to announce Government schemes. I want to put them through. I have a scheme for co-operative health centres and I hope if that experiment succeeds to be able to rehabilitate many doctors. There are 400 doctors and every doctor applied for Rs. 5,000 loan and the lawyers applied for a similar amount each. From 1920 the late Mahatma Gandhi had been warning us against baniagiri and the babu-giri. These were the biggest curses of the British Government and if people still wanted jobs which have... ..

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: Have you done that in any other province?

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: I do not know of any other province. But when Government money has to be spent for these people, we must know how we are using that money.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: I mean the bania business!

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Mahama Gandhi told us that we had to take to small cottage industries. The middleman has to go. We must have co-operative societies. Of course Government wants to make an effort and as the trend of legislation shows that we must.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: But Mahatma Gandhi wanted you to get only, Rs. 500 each!

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: I want my friend to answer this. How is he going to make Rs. 15 lakhs into Rs. 1,65,00,000? If my honourable friend, who is a financier, can do this, he will have helped me a great deal and he would then not criticise. So I told these lawyers. I have a list where I can show how many lawyers have been taken in the different ministries of the Government of India. The other day I replied to a question in this House in this connection. Some of them have been absorbed in the provinces and others still may be absorbed. But it is not possible to absorb all these lawyers. This is the report from every province. The biggest problem is Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Are lawyers, Sir, lawyers or liars!

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: I do not claim to know much of the English language. I consider them lawyers and not liars as he perhaps considers them!

Shri H. V. Kamath: I see.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: About the housing scheme, I admit that the first thing that a refugee requires is a plot of land or a place he can call his own. Unless he has a plot of land or a place where he can set up his house, I do not think him to be settled. When we were making allocations to different provinces my scheme was as follows. If there are 70 lakhs of refugees, assuming an average family consists of five persons, I wanted that about 14 lakh plots and houses should be found and I have asked each provincial Government to do that and they are doing it. But again, the problem is that, as I have said, all the cities of East Punjab are crowded. My information is that in Patiala State there are 8,000 houses evacuated by the Muslims. I know that people are not going there.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: What about Delhi?

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Similarly in Orissa. They had made arrangements to receive 10,000 refugees and they were waiting and waiting and no one went. Dr. Katju said that every time he received a message that some special train was coming, no train came and they spent lakhs on arrangements.

At least a lakh of people can be settled in Coorg. Government is prepared to help but people are not prepared to go beyond Delhi and the western districts of U. P. If people were prepared to go throughout the United Provinces, it would have been easier to accommodate many more people even in the United Provinces.

There is one thing more which I want to tell the members of the House as well as the refugees in general: that no Government, however strong, no Minister however capable or able, can help them unless they are prepared to help themselves. No Government can meet a big calamity like the present one unless the whole nation is prepared to shoulder the responsibility: and I must say that every Minister in the Government of India, from the Prime Minister downwards has got the welfare of the refugees and their speedy rehabilitation nearest to their heart and the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister have been taking a keen interest in this matter. Therefore, so far as the Government of India is concerned, we are trying to take the earliest possible measures to provide houses to them, but to begin with with plots. As for putting up houses, the total cost of housing schemes as worked out in the Ministry comes to 800 to 900 crores: that is if we were to build all the houses. Then there is the difficulty of building material. So we may begin with having a number of houses being pucca built, some kutcha and others in the form of tents. But within a limited time, every refugee should have a plot of land which he can call his or her own where he can settle down for good. As long as he does not get that he considers himself unsettled. I know that however rich or comfortable a person may be, the very fact that he does not know what is to be his future the next day is bound to upset him. Therefore I fully sympathise with and appreciate the attitude of refugees.

As regards co-operative housing societies, I may inform the House and the honourable member himself, that so far as the Government is concerned, it is prepared to give them whatever assistance they want. But to begin with everyone wants land inside Delhi. That cannot be done. We have come to a decision so far as the present scheme is concerned. We are going to give these plots of land to individuals and not to societies, and even so we have priorities, and those who are employed in Delhi and in camps will have the first priority: others will be next. For those who are gainfully employed we hope to find a plot or a house in Delhi.

A complaint has been made about the charges. I do not know about the Delhi market. My friend Deshbandhu Gupta has informed me that the rent of shops nearby is Rs. 50. But whatever it may be, if the honourable member can prove that the rent is higher than it should be, I think the municipality and the Minister-in-charge of this portfolio, Rajkumari Amrit Kaur, will consider the point. It should also be borne that while these shops were being built other shops were put up by night. Some of the members must have seen that with Kitson lamps these structures were put up. But they have been unoccupied for three months.

I think the Municipal Committee as well as the Health Ministry will be prepared to consider the question. So far as the plots of land are concerned we are not going to charge even the cost on maintenance or improvement. For the first five years we are going to realise only the cost of acquisition and the interest thereon for five years. For the next 15 years we will realise the cost of improvement. The terms are very easy and the refugees and their representatives agree that they could not be more favourable.

As regards employment, as I have said it is not possible to provide employment in the same vocation which they followed in Pakistan. By having more shops and putting them on road sides we do provide them with some employment, but it is not going to rehabilitate them. We should give up that delusion. They have to produce something. A vocational training centre has been started at Nizamuddin where 300 young men are just now learning different trades and they are expected to earn Rs. 1-8 to Rs. 4 per day within three or six months. Something like that we are going to do everywhere. We had one vocational training centre in Kurukshetra and that has been taken to the interior in East Punjab. We have got another at Tehar, one at Delhi another we propose to have in Ajmer and similarly in other provinces as well. We are giving scholarships of Rs. 45 per month to 10,000 trainees who are being trained in labour centres. It is not as if we do not want to help them. We want to help them in such a way that they may help in production rather than simply add to the number of distributors and other professions which do not produce. I will not call them parasites but I would certainly say that society can bear only a limited number of such persons—whether government servants, lawyers or others. The economic life of any society can not bear too many whose vocation is not to produce but simply to live on production by others and that is what I say today and I am prepared to say the same anywhere.

Something has been said about the treatment meted out to the refugees and the hardness that has been shown to them. Some reference was also made to picketting at my house. When I took up this work I did so with considerable hesitation, not that I considered it a thankless task but because it was so gigantic and the people have suffered so much. During the last twenty-eight years I have become used to such jobs in which we never expected any thanks. I took up the job because it provided an opportunity of serving my countrymen and women who have been uprooted from their hearths and homes. I know that they have undergone a great deal of suffering. Even to listen to their harrowing tales sickens one. I can understand how Mr. Neogy must have felt about it, when he heard such harrowing tales. Anybody would break down after hearing such stories. But when you have to do a job you have to harden your hearts sometimes. So far as the attitude of Government is concerned, we are prepared to consider all reasonable suggestions for formulating schemes of rehabilitation. After all everybody is liable to commit mistakes and if they are pointed out I would be the first to acknowledge the mistake and retrace my steps. But if anybody expects that by pressure tactics he can change me or change the government and deviate it from the right course I think he would be labouring under a mistaken delusion. That is all that I want to say. It is not that we do not realise the sufferings of the refugees. We are all aware of them. But when the roads are crowded, what does it mean? You do not realise how much strain it means to the health authorities and others to keep up the health of the city in a proper condition. It is a great tribute to Mr. Neogy and other Ministries that while evacuating millions of people in such a short time, even in camps the rate of mortality was even less than the average rate of mortality in the country. We know what has happened in Pakistan, how hundreds of thousands of persons like Meos have died for want of proper care. I know we have not been able to do what the refugees expect and what they should have but you have to bear in mind, as I said in my opening speech, the magnitude of the task the Government had to do and especially when the Government machinery was not geared to that kind of work. It has been pointed out by my honourable friend Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena and others that the officers of the Government are corrupt. I admit some are corrupt but I have to make the best use of the present machinery. The moment I took over I had to check up the tools with which I had to work. I did my best to change the conditions. I may inform the House that during the last 2½ months I have been in office three or four sections in my ministry have already gone because they had no work. I had to be hard-hearted I know. Many of them were refugees, lawyers and old government servants. It was brought to my notice that I might keep them on; but I would be failing in my duty if I retained a single superfluous person who had no work, because that would be clogging the wheel of Government machine and impairing its efficiency. Not only that I had to sanction the prosecution of a number of them, I had also to remove some of them. I know certain departments have not been able to do much. It is very easy to say that this is not a solution but I would like Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena to point out what the solution is. I also felt that it would be much better to make it the concern of the Central Government and to enforce a uniform scheme throughout the country but as was pointed out land is a provincial subject and without the co-operation of the Provincial Governments you cannot do much. After all this has been there for some time and it is not easy to change it now at this stage. If we change our plans now it would mean more delay and greater suffering and hardship to the refugees. Therefore it is not so easy to make the changes as have been suggested by my honourable friend Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena. In the circumstances I want to reiterate what as I said when I took charge while answering the large number of messages of congratulation I received. I thanked every one of them but at the same time I told them that the time for congratulation was yet to come. The time for congratulation will be when the problem of rehabilitation has been liquidated as also the Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation. That shall be the day when I shall deserve the congratulation of my friends and well-wishers. I have accepted this great task in the confidence and in the hope that I would get the active co-operation of my friends as well as the co-operation of the leaders of the refugees. As I said no minister, no government can do much without such co-operation. If they co-operate I think much can be done. Rehabilitation takes a long time: it is a tardy process just as the building of a house takes time. My friend Mr. Sidhva has congratulated me for expediting the building programme but the schemes were there. The Ministry had been working on them. Mr. Neogy had given attention to them in the midst of his other multifarious engagements. Therefore because he sees that the buildings are going up now when I am in the Ministry he must not presume that it was simply because of me. The schemes were there and it is just possible that I might have hustled them here and there. It is not that I have begun it afresh. I am one of those who admire Mr. Neogy and I know that it was a very difficult job to have begun in those days when the Ministry had to begin from scratch. I think every member of the House should be grateful, and especially the refugees, for what Mr. Neogy has done. After all, when there is a fire, the first concern of everyone is to pull out every one who is in the midst of fire instead of making arrangements for the medical treatment of those who have been taken out. What Mr. Neogy was doing was to take out those persons who were in Pakistan and who were crying for help and succour. I know what the position was. Even now there are in West Punjab thousands of persons and they want that they should be taken out from there. There are persons in Sind who want to be taken out. Then there is the problem of East Bengal. Those who have come here can even think of going back to Pakistan, but those who are there want that they should be taken out from there at all costs—whether they are placed on roads or anywhere else.

Sir, I have taken so much time of the House; I know it was not necessary for the purposes of my Bill. As for the Bill certain amendments have been suggested and I will consider them when they are moved in the House. In other Provinces there are already similar Acts, and we have already an Ordinance. I believe there have been no complaints that this Ordinance has not worked properly. Of course there has been a complaint about the administration of a certain land which is used for an agricultural college or medical college, but Chaudhuri Sahib did not complain that the Ordinance has not worked properly. So far as the working of this Ordinance by the Ministry or of the Acts by the Provincial Governments for the purpose of rehabilitating refugees is concerned, if any complaint is brought to my notice it will receive immediate attention. Surely it cannot be the purpose of the Rehabilitation Department to uproot one person simply to rehabilitate another. That will not be meeting the problem or solving it. Therefore, special care will be taken by the officers who exercise powers under this Act to see that no unnecessary hardship is caused and that no person is uprooted because of requisition of lands under this Act.

Shri H. V. Kamath: On a point of information, the Honourable Minister in the concluding portion of his speech stated that on assuming office he found that a bit or a part of the machinery was corrupt and that he had prosecuted some officers and was instituting proceedings against some others. Could he tell us how many officers were prosecuted, how many were sacked and what charges were proved against them?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That may be reserved for some other occasion. It is not quite relevant though it is incidental.

The question is:

"That the Bill to provide for the speedy acquisition of land for the resettlement of displaced persons, be taken into consideration".

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clauses 2 to 4 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 4 were added to the Bill.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 5 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 5 was added to the Bill.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I want your permission to move the amendment standing in the name of Shri Ajit Prasad Jain. It has been wrongly typed and I wish to move it in the correct form.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member cannot move another member's amendment, but if he wants to move it as his own I have no objection; I am prepared to waive notice.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 6 of the Bill, the following be added at the end: 'and any encumbrance which may have been extinguished under section 5 shall revive'."

According to clause 5 when notice of acquisition is published under clause 4 the land shall vest in the Provincial Government free from all encumbrances.

[Shri Mahavir Tyagi]

Now according to clause 6 the land is revertible to the original owner after objections are filed and the case decided. The amendment seeks to revive those encumbrances when it reverts. The amendment is clear and I need not take the time of the House over it.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Sir, I accept it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 6 of the Bill, the following be added at the end:
'and any encumbrance which may have been extinguished under section 5 shall revive'

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 6, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 6, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: Sir, I beg to move:

"That to part (e) of sub-clause (1) of clause 7 of the Bill the following Provisos be added:

'Provided that the market value referred to in clause first of sub-section (1) of section 26 of the said Act shall be deemed to be the market value of such land on the date of publication of the notice under section 3, or on the 1st day of September, 1939, with an addition of 40 per cent., whichever is less:

Provided further that where such land has been held by the owner thereof under a purchase made before the first day of April 1948, but after the first day of September, 1939, by a registered document, or a decree for pre-emption between the aforesaid dates, the compensation shall be the price actually paid by the purchaser or the amount on payment of which he may have acquired the land in the decree for pre-emption, as the case may be."

The House is already committed to the principle of paying compensation above 40 per cent. of the price prevailing in 1939 in another Bill which has been passed by the House some time back in connection with the temporary acquisition of property. I think the House will realise that it would be unfair if we were to pay compensation at the rate of the price prevailing in 1939, because since then not only has the value of the rupee gone down, but it will be a very great hardship to acquire land for governmental purposes at such short notice and without giving proper compensation. We have already denied the compensation of 15 per cent. extra which is provided in the Land Acquisition Act, and we have further denied the market value which would have been very high if we had taken the prices that might have prevailed in 1939. So, as a matter of compromise, this amendment will I think meet with the approval of the House. We have already laid down the principle in this respect in another Bill. So, I do not think there will be any objection taken to this amendment.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Sir, I accept this amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That to part (e) of sub-clause (1) of clause 7 of the Bill the following Provisos be added:

'Provided that the market value referred to in clause first of sub-section (1) of section 26 of the said Act shall be deemed to be the market value of such land on the date of publication of the notice under section 3, or on the 1st day of September, 1939, with an addition of 40 per cent., whichever is less:

Provided further that where such land has been held by the owner thereof under a purchase made before the first day of April 1948, but after the first day of September, 1939, by a registered document, or a decree for pre-emption between the aforesaid dates, the compensation shall be the price actually paid by the purchaser or the amount or payment of which he may have acquired the land in the decree for pre-emption, as the case may be."

The motion was adopted.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I beg to move:

"That to sub-clause (2) of clause 7 of the Bill, the following Explanation be added:

'Explanation.—Notwithstanding the extinction of any encumbrance under section 5, the person who held such encumbrance shall be deemed to be a person entitled to compensation."

This amendment also speaks for itself, and I need not take the time of the House. The meaning is quite clear. I only want that when the arbitrator distributes the compensation amongst persons who deserve to get the compensation, the one whose encumbrance on the property has extinguished might also be counted as one of the claimants. Although this meaning can be drawn at present, and perhaps in the list of those who have been mentioned here that person might also be included, still I want to make it absolutely clear so that even though encumbrance does not exist on the land the man who has lent money or under whose mortgage this land was might also benefit while getting the compensation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That to sub-clause (2) of clause 7 of the Bill, the following Explanation be added:

'Explanation.—Notwithstanding the extinction of any encumbrance under section 5, the person who held such encumbrance shall be deemed to be a person entitled to compensation."

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Sir, I am afraid I am not prepared to accept this amendment for the simple reason that this is likely to delay the proceedings. But if you look to clause 8 later on, you will find that it says:

"8. Payment of compensation.—The compensation awarded shall be paid by the competent authority to the person entitled thereto according to the award.

Provided that nothing herein contained shall affect the liability of any person who may receive the whole or any part of any compensation awarded under this Act to pay the same to the person lawfully entitled thereto."

So, when the money is paid any person who has got a claim against that can just claim it, and that money can be kept in the Court. But if the provision is made here then it will mean that if there are three or four mortgages then everybody has to be made a party which will delay proceedings; if one of them is not a party he may come later on and say that the proceedings be set aside. Therefore, I think it will not be in the interests of speedy acquisition of land. So, I do not accept this amendment.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I do not press it. I beg leave to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his amendment?

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That Clause 7, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 7, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 8 to 15 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I had almost taken a vow of silence and I thought I will break it when I will find myself in the Chair. It is so very difficult, however large you may loom, it is so very difficult to catch the eye of the Chair sometimes, that one gets even despaired of having a chance of speaking even till the end. Sir, I would just like to say only one thing. On this side of the House and in front of me, sit persons of top ranks, leaders and speakers representing all sexes, and if at times you direct your eye towards us more often than usual, I am sure, Sir, you will not be very much disappointed because on this side of the House also there are speakers who can possibly from time to time . . .

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I tell the honourable member that eleven persons had already spoken when he came at the fag end of the discussion as we were about to conclude? I never thought I would miss the beautiful words and the speech of my honourable friend and I welcome it.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Thank you, Sir, you will not be disappointed.

Sir, I welcome this Bill wholeheartedly. I think, Sir, this is another of the noble efforts of the Government to do their best for relief and rehabilitation of the unfortunate refugees. I should have spoken—and I would like to speak even now—in more eulogistic terms of my friend, the Honourable Mr. Mohanlal Saksena, who since he assumed his office did not allow much time to rest and who has worked with untiring zeal for the redress of the difficulties of the refugees, but I would not do so because I think after the load of praises which he has got from my honourable friend Shrimati Durgabai he would not very much like me to add to the glory with which he has already been rewarded.

It has been said by so many that the refugees only form 2 per cent. of the population of the plain areas to which they have migrated, and it is rather surprising, the critics say, that 98 per cent. of the population could not, even during the course of a whole year, rehabilitate them properly. They say the policy which has hitherto been followed was a policy of relief only, which tended to make the refugees parasites, but I could say this with utmost confidence that the refugees do not want to become parasites. They want to work, so that they may get their living and it is only facilities of work and shelter which they require. I think this Bill is an indication that the Government is going to give most serious attention to rehabilitate them quickly. It depends upon the efforts which the Provincial Governments will make under this Bill. As a matter of fact, the entire responsibility has been left on their shoulders and it will not be out of place for me, I think, to mention that it is the duty of every province under the Union to do their best in this matter.

I am afraid there has been a certain misunderstanding with regard to the Province of Assam. It has been said that it is the only province which has not so far taken charge of any refugees. The door of Assam is never closed to refugees, but fortunately or unfortunately friends from Punjab do not appreciate the hilly climate of the province and being used to better condition of living they could neither get proper food nor proper shelter in the province of Assam, but the problem of refugees from Eastern Bengal has become an urgent one and I can say this with confidence, that if it were necessary for the Province of Assam to accommodate the people from Eastern Bengal, it will not be found lacking. The only thing that the Government of India will have to care of is to give them proper vocation. There is very little agricultural land in the province of Assam. Most of it has been already taken up by immigrants from Mymensingh during the last four or five years. If the refugees are sent to Assam, it may not be necessary so much to acquire land for purposes of giving them accommodation but in order to get them a living, so the Government of India must invest a large sum of money and find employment for them.

I consider there is very little to comment on this Bill. This Bill contains very salutary provisions and the fact that my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad has not risen during the course of the discussion of this Bill is an ample proof to support my contention that there is very little to comment on this Bill. The only thing that I desire to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister to is sub-clause (2) of clause 3 which says:

"Nothing in sub-section (1) shall empower the provincial government to acquire any land which is being used for the purpose of a school, orphanage or hospital or is being used exclusively for the purpose of religious worship."

This is quite all right as far as it goes, but I should have added something else. I should have added to this:

"Nothing in sub-section (1) shall empower the provincial government to acquire any land which belongs to a person who has no other land except the land which is sought to be acquired."

I am sure, Sir, it is not the intention of this Legislature to oust anybody from the land and make him completely landless in order to give land to refugees. This may be made perfectly clear at the time of framing rules by the Provincial Governments. I am sure it is not the intention of the Government to acquire land of any person who has no other land. Otherwise, the Land Acquisition Act of 1894 would have been quite sufficient. That Act empowers the Government to acquire any land and oust a man even though he may not have any other land, because that is acquired for public purposes. This law which my friend has promulgated now is much milder than the Land Acquisition Act itself. There are many provisions here which are much milder than those of the Land Acquisition Act. This Bill does not want to take recourse to compulsory acquisition, to turn out people from land and make them landless. Therefore, I welcome this Bill and I suppose we begin a new chapter in the work of rehabilitation and in the course of a year, I believe, much of the complaints which are now made on the score of rehabilitation of refugees will disappear. I wish the Honourable Minister god-speed.

The Honourable Shri Mohan Lal Saksena: I have to say one word only in reply to what has been said by my friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri. He says that he would like a provision to be made in this Bill that the land of a person who has no other land should not be acquired. I would like him to visualise a case, for instance, where we had to acquire certain land here for manufacturers' co-operatives in Delhi and it was about 900 or 1,000 bighas and then in the course of that there were certain patches of waste land here and there which may belong to a person who may not have any other land. That land also had to be acquired. Of course, it will be borne in mind that as far as possible he will be given other land, but if we make a provision like that, it will not be possible for us to acquire land for these co-operatives. If we take a piece of land which belongs to one man, who does not own any other land, then I think it will not be unjustified because by that we are going to provide employment to as many as 25,000 refugees and that too within six months. So, I am sorry I cannot accept the suggestion he made, but as I have already said in an earlier speech, it will be remembered that nobody should be unnecessarily disturbed who can otherwise be allowed to remain on his land.

I have nothing more to say. Whatever my friends have said of me only adds to my responsibility. I shall try to deserve what they have said and I can assure them that I shall not spare myself in discharging the great responsibility that has entrusted to me.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

DELHI AND AJMER-MERWARA LAND DEVELOPMENT BILL

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram (Minister for Food and Agriculture): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to provide for the preparation and execution of land development schemes, the reclamation of waste-land and the control of private forests and grass-land, in the Provinces of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

I do not propose to take much time in explaining the main provisions of this Bill. The House has got three other legislative measures before it and as this is a Bill on which there is not much of controversy I shall be as brief as is possible. The intention of this Bill is to set up some special machinery which may be capable of speedy formulation and speedy execution of such schemes for agricultural development of these two Centrally-administered provinces as are beyond the capacity of the individual agriculturists. As honourable members know, there are certain types of improvement schemes which it is possible for each agriculturist to carry out with his own limited means. But there are other measures of improvement in which unless the co-operation of many agriculturists of a particular area is available and unless those schemes are in some way co-ordinated, the agriculturists do not get all the benefit that they can otherwise receive. If reference is made to clause 4 of the Bill, it will be found that most of the items included in it are of that character. Clause 4 says the Board, with regard to which I will make a reference presently, shall prepare land development schemes, providing for one or more of the following matters.

What are these matters? Preservation and improvement of soil; prevention of soil erosion; improvement of water supply by the utilization of water in rivers or rivulets, tube wells, boring or construction of wells conservation of rain water by constructing dams, or by use of power; improvement in the methods of cultivation; introduction of dry farming methods; supply of seed, improvement in the use of implements of agriculture, manure and fertilizers; development of horticulture and planting of fruit trees; reclamation of land lying waste through water-logging, accumulation of sand, growth of jungle, soil erosion etc. And so there are a number of measures which require co-ordinated effort. The idea is that a Board should be set up which is free from the usual routine and red tapism and it should be provided with adequate funds. This Board will prepare schemes for agricultural improvement. These schemes for improvement will go for careful scrutiny to a specially appointed enquiry officer who would enquire from all the persons affected by these co-ordinated schemes as to what they have to say about them, how far they have any difficulties to apprehend, how those difficulties can be overcome, and to what extent they themselves will be able to carry out those improvements with aid from Government. After all these enquiries are made, the schemes will be put through. The agency which is to carry out these schemes is on the whole a specialist agency. As members will see from section 3 the Board is to have a Chairman who will be a whole-time officer; then there are to be two official members who will be experts in matters relating to agriculture or irrigation. We are associating with this Board of specialists non-official agency also, because we want to carry the people with us in any schemes that may come to be formulated and executed. There is an amendment of which notice has been given about an hour ago, suggesting that the non-official members should represent agriculturists. I can assure the mover that every care will be taken that those non-officials who are appointed on the Board are those who can contribute the best from the point of view of agricultural development of the Provinces of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara. Then there are one or two other provisions to which I think I might draw pointed attention.

It is possible that some of the owners of land may not fully co-operate in the schemes that may come to be formulated. We have, therefore, provided that if there are any who are not prepared to carry out those improvements, which are of a co-ordinated nature, which affect the entire area, then Government will carry out those improvements at the cost of the individual agriculturist and recover that cost as land revenue.

There are certain waste areas in both these provinces and the proposal is to take charge of those waste lands for a number of years, to develop them and again hand them back to the original owners of those waste lands and for the period that they will remain with the Government, the proposal is to give them some amount of compensation.

These, Sir, are the main provisions of the Bill. The Bill when it came up before the Select Committee was fully gone into and very considerable alterations were made to suit the agriculturists and popular point of view, and as you will notice, the Select Committee's report is unanimous and until an hour ago, there was no amendment to the Bill. I assume from this that there is not much of a controversy about this Bill. I might inform the House that the Bill is more or less modelled on what is being done in some of the other countries, especially America, where in developing certain areas co-ordinated and conjoint action is necessary. Special Boards are set up consisting largely of experts and through official and non-official co-operation schemes are formulated and executed. The idea is to try to carry out a similar experiment here with the co-operation of the non-officials and try and utilize as far as possible the agency of co-operative societies for various schemes specially with regard to seed and a few other items in regard to which the co-operative agency may possibly be the best agency. I do not know how far within a limited time the Board may be able to show substantial results; very much depends upon the finances which it is able to secure and the co-operation which it receives from the agriculturists. But I hope that with the co-operation of the public something may result from this Bill. This is all that I have to say at this stage. I therefore move that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to provide for the preparation and execution of land development schemes, the reclamation of waste-land and the control of private forests and grass-land, in the Provinces of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

پنڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو : جناب دپٹی سپیکر صاحب ! میں اس بل کا خیر مقدم کرتا ہوں اور میں سب سے اول بات جو عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں وہ یہ ہے کہ اس بل کے بنانے میں اور اس سے پہلے بل کے مقابلہ میں اس کو درست کرنے میں Select Committee نے بڑی محنت سے کام کیا ہے۔ لیکن Select Committee کو داد دینا میرے واسطے اتنا ضروری نہیں ہے جس قدر کہ Honourable Member in charge کے اس رویے کی داد دینا کہ جو انہوں نے اس لئے میں اختیار کیا ہے۔

جب اول روز Select Committee ہوئی تو یہ واضح ہو گیا کہ پرانا بل اس قسم کا نہیں ہے کہ جو ہمارے پورے مطالب کا ہو۔ جب جناب مسٹر صاحب کی خدمت

[پلڈت تھاکر داس بہارگو]

میں یہ عرض کیا گیا تو انہوں نے prestige کا خیال نہ کر کے جیسے کہ پرانے department کیا کرتے تھے اس رویے کو خیر باد کیا اور ایک Sub-Committee بنا دی اور اُس کو یہ اختیار دیا کہ اس بل کو نئے سرے سے دھالا جائے اور جہاں ترمیم کی ضرورت ہو وہاں ترمیم کی جائے۔ چنانچہ اس سب کمیٹی (Sub-Committee) کا ایک Member میں تھا۔ ایک لالہ دیش بندھو صاحب اور ایک پلڈت مکت بہاری لال صاحب تھے۔ ہم نے ملکر اس بل کا نیا ڈھانچہ بنایا اور اس کے بنانے کے بعد جو چیز Non-official opinion نے یعنی ہم نے چاہی اُسی طرح اپنی مرضی کے مطابق اس کو بنایا اور شائد یہ اپنی طرح کا پہلا بل ہے جس کے اندر Select Committee کے ممبروں کو اس قدر پورا اختیار اس بل کو اچھی طرح بنانے کا ملا ہو اتنی latitude کسی اور بل میں نہیں ملے گی۔

میں اس بات کی داد دیتا ہوں کہ Non-official opinion کو بل کے ترمیم کرنے کا سوال ہے منسٹر صاحب نے اس کو پورا کیا ہے۔

مجھے اُمید ہے کہ جہاں تک Agriculture Department کا سوال ہے وہ لوگوں کی مرضی کے مطابق کام کریگا اور ہماری ضرورت ترقی ہوگی۔

اس بل کے اندر administration کے طریقہ کے متعلق ساری تبدیلی کی گئی ہے۔ پہلے بل میں Deputy Commissioner یا Collector صاحب Land Development Officer مقرر کئے گئے تھے۔ لیکن اب Land Development Commissioner ایک ایسے صاحب رکھے گئے ہیں جو تجربہ بھی رکھتے ہوں اور جو نہ اُس پرانی Bureaucratic attitude of mind کے نہ ہوں۔ یہ جو بل بنایا گیا ہے یہ بالکل دہلی اور اجمیر میروارہ کے لئے ہی مفید نہیں ہوگا۔ میری ناقص رائے میں تو ہم نے اس بل کو ایسی شکل دینے کی کوشش کی ہے کہ سارے ملک کے ایک ایک ضلع میں اس قسم کے model bill بنائے جائیں تاکہ ہر ضلع کے لوگوں کی needs کے مطابق وہاں District Councils بنیں اور وہ Councils ان معاملات کو جو دفعہ ۴ میں دئے ہیں طے کر سکیں جیسا کہ ہم نے کیا ہے۔ اس دفعہ ۴ میں جسے خوب واضح کر دیا گیا ہے ہم نے اپنی طرف سے Agriculturists کی کسی بھی ضرورت کو باقی نہیں چھوڑا ہے جس کے بارے میں District authorities کو اُس میں ترقی کرنے کا موقع نہ مل سکے۔ چنانچہ جو سب سے اول چیز ہے وہ پانی کی کمی ہے کہ وہاں Irrigation Facilities مہیا کی جائیں۔ اسی طرح manure وغیرہ کا ذکر کیا گیا ہے۔ میں نہیں چاہتا کہ جناب نے وقت کا جو پروگرام دو دن کے لئے ہاؤس کے سامنے رکھا ہے اُس میں کسی طرح کی کوتاہی رہ جاوے۔ اس لئے میں زیادہ وقت نہ لیتے ہوئے سب دفعات کی طرف توجہ نہیں دلانا چاہتا۔ لیکن مختصراً میں یہ عرض کرنا

چاہتا ہوں کہ اس بل کا conceptional background وہ ہے جو کہ house Damodar valley کے واسطے رکھا ہے۔ Damodar valley کی جو Council بنیگی اگر اُس کا President اچھا کام کرے گا تو کامیابی ہوگی۔ میں یہ واضح کر دینا چاہتا ہوں کہ اس بل کی کامیابی بھی اس قدر رویہ پر یا non-official co-operation پر نہیں ہے جتنا اس کی ترقی کا انحصار Land Development Commissioner پر ہے۔ اگر سرکار کسی کام کے آدمی کو Land Development Commissioner مقرر کریگی جس کو تجربہ ہو جس میں push اور drive ہو جو Agriculture کے problems کو سمجھتا ہو اور جو اُس علاقہ سے واقف ہو جس میں کام ہوگا تو مجھے اُمید ہے کہ وہ اس بل کو تھوڑے ہی رویہ سے کامیاب کر دے گا۔ اور تھوڑے ہی non-official co-operation سے کامیاب کر دینا۔ اس میں تو non-official members کا بھی ذکر کیا گیا ہے لیکن non-official members کے ہوتے ہوئے بھی جو official members ہیں اُن کا اس بل میں زیادہ اقتدار رکھا ہے۔ چنانچہ Land Development Commissioner اور دو ممبر official ہونگے۔ non-official members اُن کی امداد کر سکتے ہیں۔ میری رائے میں اب official اور non-official ممبران کی علیحدگی کا وقت ختم ہو چکا ہے اور سب نے مل کر کام کرنا ہے جیسا ابھی منسٹر صاحب نے فرمایا ہے اس کی ترقی کا راز finances بھی ہیں۔ اس کی ذمہ داری کس کی ہوگی یہ بل میں درج نہیں کیا گیا ہے یہ بل میں ضرور provision ہے کہ provincial گورنمنٹ direction دیگی اور اُس کے مطابق عمل کیا جائے گا۔ چنانچہ جب سکیم مکمل ہو جائے گی تو مشترکہ کی جائیگی۔ پھر ایک افسر مقرر کیا جائیگا وہ سب کے objections سن لے گا۔ اس کے بعد جب سکیم پکی ہو جائیگی تو اُس کی منظوری Central Government کو دیلی ہوگی۔ جب Central Government ساری scheme کی منظوری دے دیگی تو اُمید کی جاتی ہے کہ وہ اُس کے واسطے funds بھی مہیا کرے گی۔ اگر funds کی کمی رہی اور آج کل کی economic حالت کو دیکھتے ہوئے جو economic اور industrial experts کی رائے ہے اُس پر عمل کیا گیا کہ آئندہ ایسی schemes پر خرچ نہ کیا جائے تو یہ scheme کولڈ سٹوریج (cold storage) میں پڑ جائے گی اور دیش کو بڑا نقصان ہوگا۔ اور میں نہایت ادب سے عرض کرونگا کہ اس بل کا وہ حشر نہ ہونا چاہئیے۔ یہ ساری scheme دراصل آئندہ کے واسطے grow more food کی سکیم کی ایک جز ہے۔ آئندہ production بڑھانے اور عام آدمی کا standard of living اونچا کرنے کے لئے اس سکیم کو کامیاب کرنے کی ضرورت ہے۔

میں تو اس سے آگے چلونا۔ ابھی ہم نے ایک بل پاس کیا ہے۔ Land Acquisition

[پنڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو]

کا ایک بل پاس کیا ہے۔ تو اصلی چیز یہ ہے کہ Rehabilitation کے واسطے۔ یہاں کے لوگوں کے رہنے کے واسطے۔ اُن کی بھلائی کے واسطے۔ اور Displaced person کی بھلائی کے واسطے بھی یہی ایک سلسلہ ہے جس کے اندر Rehabilitation ہوگا۔ جس کے ذریعہ لوگوں کو Employment ملے گا اور جس کے ذریعہ production بھی زیادہ ہوگا۔ اگر صرف اس بل کو ہی right spirit سے work کیا جائے تو officials اور non-officials کے آپس میں ملکر کام کرنے سے اتنی ترقی ہوگی کہ جو چیز ہم چاہتے ہیں اُس کو حاصل کر سکیں گے۔ اس کے علاوہ جو روپیہ اُس کے واسطے خرچ ہوگا تو یہ روپیہ ایسا ہوگا کہ جسے سورج کی کرنیں پانی کو اُٹھا کر میلہ کے روپ میں برساتی ہیں۔ ویسے ہی گورنمنٹ جو روپیہ اُس بل کے واسطے خرچ کریگی تو جتنا روپیہ خرچ کیا جائے گا اُس سے کئی گنا دیہی کو فائدہ ہوگا۔ اس لئے یہ خیال کرنا کہ اس میں کسی کی جائے تھیک نہیں ہوگا۔ اس scheme کو کسی طرح نہیں روکنا چاہیئے اور اس میں کوئی روپیہ کی کمی نہیں کرنی چاہیئے۔ اب اس میں جو scheme رکھی گئی ہے اس کے سلسلے میں یہ عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ اگر اس کو کوئی شخص راضی ہو کر قبول کرے تو اُس کو سرکار کی طرف سے قرض مل سکتا ہے اور وہ اپنی زمین کو بہتر بنا سکتا ہے۔ لیکن اگر کوئی شخص دقتانوسی خیالات کا ہے اور وہ اس scheme کو قبول نہیں کرے تو سرکار اُس کی زمین پر قبضہ کر سکتی ہے۔ سرکار اُس کو معاوضہ دیگی۔ ایک scale کے مطابق جو اس میں درج ہے۔ پھر سرکار کچھ عرصہ کے واسطے اُس کی زمین کو لیٹر بہتر بنائیگی اور اُس میں جو خرچ ہوگا اُس کو سرکار Owner سے وصول کر سکیگی۔ یہ کہا جا سکتا ہے کہ دراصل یہ ایک سختی کا قانون ہے کہ ایک شخص کو اپنی زمین کا اپنی مرضی کے مطابق استعمال نہ کرنے دینے کا قانون ہے۔ یہ اعتراض ہے۔ لیکن کوئی بھی reform کوئی بھی ترقی کا سوال اُٹھایا جاتا ہے تو اُس میں عام فائدہ کے خیال سے کسی قدر تھوڑا بہت compulsion کے بغیر کام نہیں چل سکتا۔ بمصداق مار مار کر کہیں کھلانے کا اس بل میں انتظام ہے جو اس کے فائدہ کو نہیں سمجھتے ہیں اور یہ نہیں سمجھتے کہ اُس سے دیہی کو فائدہ ہوگا اُن کے واسطے مجبوری کا provision رکھا گیا ہے اور یہ اختیار دیا گیا ہے کہ سرکار اس کے زمین پر زور سے قبضہ کرے لیکن قبضہ ایسا نہیں کیا گیا ہے کہ اُن کو معاوضہ نہ ملے۔ اُن کو قاعدہ مجبوری کے مطابق معاوضہ ملے گا اور دس برس کے بعد اُن کو زمین بھی واپس کی جا سکیگی۔ اس طرح اگر دس Years میں کوئی Improvement ہوگا تو Rent کو بڑھایا جا سکتا اور اس Rent میں جو بڑھوتری ہوگی اسے Tenant کو دینا ہوگا۔ اگر Tenants نے Improvement آراضی کرنے میں حصہ نہیں لیا ہے باقی جو Reclamation of waste Land وغیرہ کے حصے ہیں وہ آپ کو پڑھنے سے ہی واضح ہو جائیں گے کہ scheme میں کیا رکھا گیا ہے۔ اس scheme میں جو تھوڑا سا

compulsion کا element رکھا گیا ہے وہ کسی بھی reform سے جدا نہیں کیا جا سکتا ہے۔ اس کے علاوہ جہاں تک Forest کا اور دیگر معاملات کا سوال ہے اس میں مجھے زیادہ عرض کرنے کی ضرورت نہیں ہے۔ وہ بل کے پڑھنے سے واضح ہو جائیگی۔ میں تو صرف اس قدر عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ اس بل کے واسطے ہم یہ اُمید رکھتے ہیں کہ اس پر اچھی طرح سے عمل کیا جائے گا تو اس میں بہت زیادہ ترقی کے potentialities موجود ہیں اور اس میں کوئی شک نہیں جیسا کہ قر ہے اس بل کو Cold storage میں رکھ دینا چاہیے تو بہت مایوس ہونگے۔ جو لوگ یہ اُمید کرتے تھے کہ National Government ہونے سے ہم کو فائدہ ہوگا اس اُمید کو دھکا پڑیگا۔

یہاں پر میں یہ عرض کر دوں کہ اجمیر میروازا میں چالیس میل پر ایک دریا ہے۔ بہت سے لوگ اس اُمید میں بیٹھے ہیں کہ ہماری گورنمنٹ ہونے پر اس دریا کے پانی کو استعمال کر کے زمین کو سیلاب کرینگے۔ اور اس طرح سے زیادہ پیداوار کر سکیں گے۔

اسی طرح دہلی کے علاقہ میں جو پرانے Tanks بنے تھے اور جو پرانے Dams اور بڈ بنے ہوئے تھے وہ سب پرانی باتیں اب ختم ہو چکی ہیں۔ میں دہلی میں بہت سے زمینداروں سے واقف ہوں جنہوں نے بتایا ہے کہ اس علاقہ کے کچھ حصہ میں سے ندی گزرا کرتی تھی جس سے ہمیشہ سیلاب ہوا کرتا تھا۔ اور لوگ پہلے زیادہ خوشحال تھے لیکن آج زمینداروں کی حالت اتنی اچھی نہیں ہے میں اُمید کرتا ہوں دہلی اور اجمیر میروازا میں۔ جو کہ Centrally Administered area ہے وہاں سرکار کا جو فرض ہے اسے سرکار پورا کریگی اور مجھے اُمید ہے کہ سرکار اس علاقہ پر زیادہ توجہ دیگی اور اس علاقہ کو نئے سرے سے اس بل پر عمل کر کے سرکار زراعت کو ترقی دیگی اور یہ علاقہ خوب سرسبز ہوگا اور خوشی سے بڑھیکا۔ اور آزادی کے نئے دور میں لوگ مالا مال ہو جائیں گے اور حقیقی خوشی حاصل کریں گے۔

(English translation of the above speech)

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I welcome this Bill. The first thing which I would like to say is that the Select Committee has worked very hard in drafting this Bill and amending the original Bill. But it is not so very necessary for me to congratulate the Select Committee as the Honourable Minister for Agriculture for the steps he has taken in presenting the Bill in this form.

In the first meeting of the Select Committee it became quite clear that the original Bill did not fulfill our expectations. When this was explained to the Honourable Minister, he without any regard to the question of prestige which was so much in evidence in the old Government Departments, formed a sub-committee and authorised it to redraft the Bill and suggest amendments which it may consider necessary. I was also a member of that sub-committee which consisted of Lala Deshbandhu Gupta and Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava. We re-drafted this Bill according to our own non-official views and gave whatever shape we liked. Perhaps this was the first occasion when the Members of the Select Committee were given full powers to re-draft the Bill completely. Latitude to such an extent could hardly have been given in any other case. I congratulate the Honourable Minister for the regard he had shown for the non-official opinion in the matter of the amendment of this Bill. I hope that so far as the Agriculture Department is concerned, it will work in accordance with the wishes of the people and progress will be certain.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

A fundamental change has been made in this Bill in regard to the administrative set-up. In the original Bill the Deputy Commissioner or the Collector was appointed as the Land Development Officer. But now provision has been made for the appointment of a Land Development Commissioner who shall be a person of experience and who may not be of the old bureaucratic attitude of mind. This Bill will not only be beneficial to Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara, but in my humble opinion we have tried to give this Bill, such a shape as to make it a model Bill for every district in the country so that District Councils may be set up according to the needs of the people, to decide the matters referred to in clause 4 in the same way as we have done. Clause 4 has been so amended as to provide for every need of the agriculturist for which the District authorities may not be able to do anything. The first necessity is water-supply and the provision of irrigation facilities. Similarly there is reference to the supply of manure etc. I do not wish, Sir, that any difficulty may arise in keeping up to the two-day programme for this Bill in this House and, therefore, with a view not to take much time I do not want to refer to all the clauses. Briefly I would like to point out that the conceptional background of this Bill is almost the same as the House had visualized in the case of Damodar Valley. If the President of the Council to be formed under the Damodar Valley Corporation Act does useful work, then it will be a success. I would like to make it clear that the success of this Bill does not so much depend upon the investment of money or the non-official co-operation as on the Land Development Commissioner. If the Government appoints any competent and experienced person to the post of Land Development Commissioner—who has the quality of 'push and drive', who can understand the agricultural problems and is acquainted with the locality where the work is to be undertaken, then I am sure he will be able to make this Bill a success with a small amount of money and some non-official co-operation. Mention has also been made of two non-official members—but in spite of the presence of such non-official members, this Bill vests more powers in the official members. Accordingly, there will be a Land Development Commissioner and 2 official members and non-official members can assist them. In my opinion, the time for discriminating between 'official' and 'non-official' members is over now and all have to work together. The Honourable Minister has stated that finance is the secret of success, but this Bill does not provide as to whose responsibility it will be? It has undoubtedly been provided that the Provincial Government shall give directions and action will be taken accordingly. As soon as a scheme is prepared, it will be published and an officer will be appointed who will consider the objections made by persons concerned. After this when the scheme will be finalized, the Central Government will have to sanction it. It is expected that when the Central Government sanctions the scheme, it will also provide funds. If there is a shortage of funds, and if after considering the economic position of the country the opinion of the Industrial and Economic experts that in future no expenditure should be incurred on such schemes is accepted, then this scheme will be put into the cold storage resulting in serious loss to the country. I would respectfully submit that this Bill should not meet that fate. This entire scheme in fact forms an integral part of the 'Grow More Food' campaign of the future.

It is necessary to make this scheme a success with a view to increase production and raise the standard of living of the masses. I will go farther than this. We have just passed a Land Acquisition Bill which seeks to ensure rehabilitation, to provide accommodation to the people living here and this is sort of a measure which is intended to prove beneficial to these people as well as the displaced persons and aims at rehabilitating them, providing them with employment and increasing the production. If this Bill alone is worked in a right spirit, then this will promote co-operation between the officials and non-officials to a considerable extent and we will thus be able to achieve our objective. Apart from this, the money spent on this will prove many times more beneficial to the country like the evaporated water which returns to us in the form of rain. Similarly, the amount that the Government will spend on the implementation of this Bill will far more benefit the country. Therefore, it will not be proper to think of any reduction. This scheme should not be impeded in any way and no reduction in the amount required for the purpose should be made. Now in regard to the scheme which has been envisaged in this Bill, I will like to say that if any person accepts this willingly, then he is entitled to the grant of a loan by the Government and he can develop his land. But if any person holds conservative views and does not accept this scheme, then the Government can take possession of his land, and compensation will be paid according to the scale prescribed in the Bill. Then for a certain period Government will take possession of his land and shall arrange its reclamation and will improve it and recover from the owner the expenses incurred in this connection. It can be argued that this is an oppressive measure as it prevents a person from utilizing his land according to his own wishes. This is the objection raised. But whenever the question of a reform or improvement is taken up it is done with a view to the well-being of the general public and a certain amount of compulsion is necessary. It is true that this Bill has provisions for giving benefits compulsorily to those who do not understand that it will be for the good of the country that the Government has been empowered to take possession of their land. But this does not debar them from getting compensation. They are entitled to the payment of a compensation in accordance with the prescribed rules and land will also be returned to them after the expiry of ten years. In this way, if any improvement is made during these ten years then the rent can be enhanced and the tenant shall have to pay this increase, if he has not made any contribution in the improvement of land. By going through the relevant portion of the Bill which relates to the reclamation of waste-land, you will no doubt be able to understand the implications of this Bill. The small element of compulsion which has been provided in this scheme is inherent in any measure of reform. It is hardly necessary for me to go into details about forests and other matters which would be clear from a study of the Bill. The only thing which I would like to say is that we cherish a hope that the facilities provided in the Bill will be fully availed of. It undoubtedly contains many potentialities for progress. It will be an utter disappointment, if as apprehended, this Bill is put in a cold storage. Those people who built upon the hope that they will derive some benefit by the advent of a National Government will receive a shock. I may point out here that there is a river at a distance of 40 miles from Ajmer-Merwara and people are living in the hope that when the National Government comes into power, they will be enabled to irrigate their lands by utilizing the water of this river and in this way they will be able to increase production.

Similarly, the old tanks and dams which were constructed in Delhi during the olden days are no longer existing now. I know many of the Zamindars in Delhi who have told me that a river used to pass through some tract of this Province which had all along been utilized for irrigational purposes and formerly the people were very prosperous. But now-a-days the condition of Zamindars is not so good. I hope that the Government will do its duty in the Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara which are centrally administered areas and that the Government will devote more attention to these areas and by increasing irrigation make these areas green and flourishing. The people living there will prosper and derive real pleasure at the dawn of new era of independence.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): The Bill which is for discussion before the House is of immense utility and benefit to the centrally administered areas of Ajmer and Delhi. Now, Sir, the scheme in regard to the Bill has been explained by the Honourable the Minister in charge of the Bill as also by my learned friend, Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava. But so far as the province of Ajmer-Merwara is concerned, there are very special features which I think must be noticed by the honourable House. Two-thirds of the small province of Ajmer-Merwara consists of what are known as the Istimrardari Estates. In these Estates, it is the Feudal Chiefs that hold sway and medieval conditions prevail there. I shall have an opportunity to draw the attention of the House to the various acts of oppression and terrorism when I speak on the Tenancy Bill which is shortly coming before the House for consideration.

But so far as the Bill in question is concerned, it is remarkable that even in these Istimrardari Estates the Feudal Chiefs have absolute right of proprietorship and even in mining rights they claim to have full proprietary rights, with the exception of payment of nominal loyalty that is provided for in the Sanad that was granted to them by the Governor-General in Council in the year 1874. They claim in respect of the Estates that they are its owners: not only owners, but that they have an absolute right to extern anyone residing there, or ban the entry of any person from outside: so much so that their claim over these Estates is like that of a prince or nawab reigning in the neighbouring States of Rajputana. That is the one reason that these estates, notwithstanding there being enough sources of development, have not been developed. The condition of the tenants in these estates is very miserable. They have got no security of tenure. The tax and cesses they have to pay are enormous and they are liable to be ejected at the sweet will of their Feudal Chiefs. The result is that the tenants naturally have no say in the matter and the Feudal Chiefs will not allow them the least security of tenure. And these estates, which as I have already said form two-thirds of the entire province of Ajmer-Merwara are in a very pitiable condition.

One feature of the present Bill is that in the definition of proprietor 'Istimrardar' Jagirdar and 'bhumiya' have been included. The result would be that the provisions of this Bill would apply to these estates. It is a novel and welcome departure and it would be open to the Government under the provisions of this Bill to take possession of any uncultivable land which deserves reclamation and which the private proprietors of the land will not be willing to do. Therefore, I think it is a matter of immense importance and it is bound to be of immense utility for the development of the backward tracts of Ajmer-Merwara.

It has been said that the Centre which is responsible for administration in these areas should have taken much more interest in the development of the area. So far as Delhi is concerned, it cannot be said that the Central Government has not been bestowing on it its best attention. It has been fed—rather over-fed sometimes. It is only Ajmer-Merwara that has been suffering at the hands of the Central Government, towards which the attitude of the Central Government has been more or less step-motherly.

Now the Bill has not yet been brought on the Statute Book and it is rumoured that a Development Commissioner under Section 3 of this Bill is going to be appointed and that the office of the Development Commissioner will be in Delhi, though he will be in charge of both Ajmer-Merwara and Delhi. I do not think there is any truth in this rumour but in case it is correct I would respectfully bring it to the notice of the Honourable the Minister that if that is done—if the office of the Development Commissioner is located in Delhi—it would be absolutely of no use so far as Ajmer-Merwara is concerned. In fact the provisions of Clause 3 contemplate the establishment of a Land Development Board separately in both of these areas, and it cannot possibly mean that the Land Development Commissioner should be one for both these areas. Even if that be the scheme of the Government of India, I would respectfully urge that the proper place for keeping the Central office of the Land Development Commissioner must be in Ajmer and not in Delhi. So far as Delhi is concerned, its area is about 650 or 700 square miles and the rural area cannot be more than one-fourth of the entire area. So far as the villages are concerned, there is a rural development work already going on in the province of Delhi. So far as Ajmer-Merwara is concerned, it is three-quarters a rural area and there are more than 700 villages and there is absolutely no reason why if a Land Development Commissioner and a Land Development Board is to be established, the common Board for these areas should not be located in Ajmer-Merwara but in Delhi. The work it will have to do is much more in Ajmer as compared with Delhi. Therefore, even if there is any truth in the rumour, I respectfully submit that the Development Board must be situated in Ajmer and the Development Commissioner must permanently reside there.

More than 50 per cent of the total area of the Province of Ajmer-Merwara is still lying waste and uncultivable and there are rivulets, nullahs and what we call in our language "Bahalas" through which water in the rainy season is taken away by rivers to the sea. Under the provisions of this Bill it will be open to the Development Board to take full cognizance of all these sources of water and to evolve a scheme for the conservation of every drop of water that comes from rain, so that it may not be wasted or carried to sea but utilised for agricultural and irrigational purposes.

As this area is given to recurrent periods of water scarcity and since there is also drought every four or five years, it is water conservation alone which can help. Also dry farming will be very much appreciated in Ajmer-Merwara. I therefore urge upon the Honourable Minister to see that a separate development board is established for Ajmer-Merwara and there is a whole time development commissioner appointed under clause 3.

A very important provision in the Bill will entitle the Government to take charge of the private grass lands and they are also responsible for the protection of forests. So far as the owners of estates in Ajmer-Merwara are concerned they have come to know that it is not possible for them to exist for a considerable period and consequently of late they have begun a method by which they prevent the villagers from grazing their cattle and they give their entire grass-land on contract to strangers. They have also begun to cut indiscriminately green trees. Their whole purpose is that within the small span of their life that remains, they want to utilise what they can so as to deprive their tenants and the people of the benefit of this legislation. I would respectfully invite the attention of the Honourable Minister to this great menace which is particularly ruinous to the poverty-stricken tenants of the area. I would request him to issue instructions to the Chief Commissioner to see that nothing is done to injure the forests and grass-lands which are ultimately to the benefit of the whole area. It would be open under the provisions of the Bill to take such a measure, whereas it was not so open under the law as it was existing before. I hope the Honourable Minister will take note of the few remarks that I have made and take immediate action in the matter. I do not want to waste the time of the House in narrating the various provisions of the Bill which have been very well explained by my honourable friend Pandit Bhargava. Sir, with these remarks I welcome the measure and cordially support it as also congratulate the Honourable Minister.

شری دیپس بلدھو گپتا : جناب دپتی سپیکر صاحب ! میں بھی آنریبل منسٹر کو مبارک باد دیتا ہوں - انہوں نے اس بل کو جس شکل میں ہاؤس کے سامنے پیش کرنا چاہا تھا اس شکل میں پیش کیا ہے - اور سلیکٹ کمیٹی کے تمام ممبران کی انکو پوری co-operation حاصل رہی -

اس بل کے دفعات کے بارے میں میرے دوست پلڈت تھاکر داس بھارگو اور میرے لایق دوست مکٹ بھاری لال نے کافی روشنی ڈال دی ہے - اس لئے میں اُس کو دھروانا نہیں چاہتا ہوں - میں اپنے لایق دوست سے متفق ہوں کہ جیسا کہ اس بل کا ملشا ہے اگر حقیقت میں یہ چاہتے ہیں کہ ایسی ترقی ہو اور ہمارے ملک میں یہ ایک ٹھیک نمونہ پیش کرنا چاہتے ہوں تو اس کا صحیح طریقہ یہ ہوگا کہ ان دو جگہوں کے لئے الگ الگ Development Board اور Development Commissioner چنیں جائیں - دہلی کے لئے الگ اور اجمیر میروازہ کے لئے الگ کیونکہ دہلی کے حالات الگ ہیں اور اجمیر میروازہ کے الگ - اس لئے ایک دپتی کمشنر دو جگہوں کو lookafter نہیں کر سکیگا اور ایسا کرنے سے یہ تجربہ کامیاب نہیں ہو گا -

دہلی کا رقبہ قریباً ۶۰۰ مربع میل ہے اور اس میں $3\frac{1}{2}$ سو کے قریب گاؤں ہیں یعنی یہ ایک تحصیل سے بھی چھوٹی ہے - لیکن میں اس بل کو زیادہ اہمیت اُس وجہ سے دیتا ہوں کہ اگر ہم اس سکیم کو کامیاب بنا سکیں تو اس سے ملک کے دوسرے حصے بھی فائدہ اُٹھا سکتے ہیں اس لئے جیسا کہ میرے لایق دوست تھاکر داس جی نے کہا ہے میں بھی حکومت پر یہ زور دیتا کہ آجکل کے جو حالات ہیں ان کا خیال کرتے ہوئے جہاں کہیں بھی economy کرنی ہے وہاں وہ کریں لیکن اس بل کو پورا کرنے کا جہاں تک تعلق ہے اسیں economy نہ کریں اور اس سکیم کو کامیاب بنانے کے لئے جتنا روپیہ درکار ہو اتنا خرچ کریں اور ایک ایسا نمونہ بنائیں جو کہ سارے ملک کے سامنے پیش کیا جا سکے - اور یہ ایک قسم کا ماڈل بن جائے -

میں حکومت سے یہ گزارش کروں گا کہ وہ ایسا کوئی لایق طریقہ عمل میں لائیں جسے کہ ہمارے سارے culturable lands کاشت کئے جا سکیں اور جس سے کہ ہماری Forest Wealth اور گراس لینڈز بڑھائے جا سکیں اور جتنی بھی کھیتی کے ساتھ تعلق رکھنے والے کام ہیں ان میں Improvement کر سکیں -

صاحب صدر ! آج کل کے حالات کے لحاظ سے اس بل کی کافی اہمیت ہے - آپ کو معلوم ہے کہ آج کل تمام ممالک کی توجہ Economic Development پر لگ رہی

ہے - یہاں پر بھی Economic Crisis کی وجہ سے لوگ بہت پریشان ہو رہے ہیں - اور وہ یہ سمجھتے ہیں کہ یہ Crisis بہت بڑا ہے - اگر اس سے پہلے نہیں تو اب ہمارے ملک کے بڑے بڑے Economists اور Industrialists نے اپنی اپنی رپورٹیں پیش کی ہیں - اور اس بارے میں ایک special سب کمیٹی بھی بنی ہوئی ہے - تاکہ وہ ایک ایسا measure adopt کریں جس سے کہ اس Economic Crisis کا پوری طرح سے سرباب ہو سکے -

اگر آپ اس معاملہ کو فور سے دیکھیں گے تو معلوم ہوگا کہ اس سارے معاملے کے تہہ میں کیا ہے - اگر ہم اپنے دیپس کے لوگوں کو سستے داموں پر اناج دے سکیں اور سستے داموں پر پہلے کے لئے کپڑا دے سکیں تو نہ ہی ہمارے دیپس میں Inflation رہے گا اور نہ ہی یہ Economic Crisis دھمکتا -

کتنے تعجب کی بات ہے کہ جو ملک کسی زمانے میں دنیا کو اناج بہم پہنچاتا تھا - اور جہاں سے اناج باہر جاتا تھا وہ ملک آج خود دانے دانے کے لئے محتاج ہے اور بھکاری کی صورت میں دنیا کے سامنے اپنے ہاتھ پसार رہا ہے - اور اُس کے اپنے Dollars Reserve اسی اناج میں ختم ہو رہے ہیں - یہاں کے ٹرانسپورٹ سسٹم میں بھی اس وجہ سے خرابی پیدا ہو گئی ہے - کہ ریلوے پر بھی اس کا بہت بھاری اثر پڑا ہے - وہ اس طرح سے کہ بمبئی - کلکتہ اور دیگر راستوں سے جہاں کہیں سے بھی اناج لایا جا سکتا ہے وہاں پر ریلوے کو بھیجا جاتا ہے - اور پھر بھی حالات اتنے خراب ہیں کہ بہت سی ایسی چیزیں جو کہ خوراک کے لئے نہایت ضروری ہیں مہیا نہیں ہوتی ہیں - آج ہم ایک آؤنس سے زیادہ اناج کسی کو بھی نہیں دے سکتے ہیں - یہاں تک کہ مزدوروں کو بھی آٹھ یا دس آؤنس سے زیادہ نہیں دے سکتے ہیں اور اُن کو بھی اسی مقدار پر گزارہ کرنا پڑتا ہے - اس کی وجہ یہ ہے کہ خوراک کے بارے میں جتنی توجہ دینی لازمی تھی اور اپنا گزارہ پورا کرنے کے متعلق جتنا خیال کرنا ضروری تھا اتنا اس بارے میں نہیں دیا جا سکا ہے - اس ملک میں ستر فیصدی Agriculturists ہیں - لیکن کتنے تعجب کی بات ہے کہ ایسا ہوتے ہوئے بھی ہمیں اپنا پیٹ بھرنے کے لئے پورا اناج نہیں مل رہا ہے اور ہم اتنی روٹی پیدا نہیں کر سکتے ہیں کہ ہم اپنا جسم دھانپنے کے لئے کپڑا پیدا کر سکیں - اس لئے میں یہ گزارش کروں گا کہ جہاں تک دہلی اور اجمیر میروازہ کا تعلق ہے اس بل کی اہمیت کو ہمیں اچھی طرح سے سمجھنا چاہیئے اور اس سکیم کے تجربہ کرنے کے لئے جب بجٹ میں Provision کرنا ہو تو اس بات کا خیال رکھیں کہ اسکے لئے پورے پورے فلڈز مہیا کئے جائیں تاکہ آنریبل منسٹر کے ہاتھ اسبارے میں مضبوط ہو جائیں اور وہ اس تجربہ سے یہ دکھائیں کہ ہمارے ملک میں جو Culturable اور Waste لینڈز ہیں وہ سب کاشت ہو سکتے ہیں -

[شری دیپن بندھو گپتا]

میں یہ گزارش کروں گا کہ چاہے آپ دوسرے ہزاروں ہی تجربے کریں لیکن جب تک دیپن میں اتنا اناج پیدا نہیں کیا جاتا اور اتنی روٹی کپڑا بنانے کے لئے پیدا نہیں کی جاتی تب تک economic plans میں کامیابی نہیں ہو سکتی ہے۔ اس لئے میری خواہش یہ ہے کہ اس بارے میں آئرینل ایگریکلچر مسٹر کے ہاتھ کافی مضبوط کئے جائیں تاکہ دوسری جگہوں میں بھی جہاں پر کہ پیداوار بڑھانے کا تعلق ہے اس سکیم کو عملی جامہ پہنایا جا سکے۔

یہاں پر اکثر یہ دیکھا گیا ہے کہ اگر ملک کی بہتری کے لئے کوئی سکیم جاری کرنی مقصود ہو اور اس کے لئے فنڈ درکار ہو تو جب یہ معاملہ Finance Ministry میں جاتا ہے تو وہ وہاں پر اسکی اہمیت کو نہ دیکھتے ہوئے ہی reject کر دیتے ہیں۔ اس لئے اس سکیم کو جاری کرنے کے لئے روپیہ نہیں ملتا ہے۔ حالانکہ دوسری طرفوں میں وہ کروڑوں روپیہ صرف کرتے ہیں لیکن اپنے ملک کو self-supporting بنانے کے لئے کسی سکیم کو جاری کرنے کے لئے روپیہ کی ضرورت جب پڑتی ہے تو وہ روپیہ نہیں دیا جاتا ہے۔ اور اس بارے میں روپیہ دینے جانے میں بے شمار روکاوٹیں ڈالی جاتی ہیں۔ جناب والا! میں یہ بتانا چاہتا ہوں کہ چند ہی دن ہوئے میں امریکہ اور یورپ کو سیاحت سے واپس آیا۔ ان علاقوں میں حالانکہ بارش بہت کم ہوتی ہے۔ لیکن اس کے باوجود بھی اگر آپ وہاں کھیتی کے اور اناج پیدا کرنے کے حالات دیکھیں تو حیران رہ جائیگے وہاں پر ہوائی جہازوں سے بیج بویا جاتا ہے۔ یعنی کہ کھیتی کا تمام کام ایک mechanized system سے چلتا ہے۔ اور اتنی کھیتی اور پیداوار ہوتی ہے کہ اس کا مقابلہ ہمارا دیپن نہیں کر سکتا۔ اگر ہم اپنے لئے خود کوئی research نہیں کر سکتے ہیں تو کیا ہمارا یہ ابھارا دیپن اس قابل بھی نہیں ہے کہ اس معاملہ میں دوسرے دیپنوں نے جو researches کئے ہیں ان پر عمل کر کے ان سے فائدہ اٹھا سکیں۔ ان ممالک کے researches سے اسوجہ سے فائدہ اب تک نہیں اٹھایا جا سکا ہے کیونکہ اس طرف پوری توجہ نہیں دی گئی۔ ہم نے یہی خیال کیا کہ تھوڑا کھایا جائے اور اس بارے میں لاپرواہی کی اگر آج ڈیفنس کا سوال پیدا ہوتا ہے تو ہم یہ خیال کرتے ہیں کہ جب تک ہمارے پاس latest equipment نہ ہو۔ ہوائی جہاز نہ ہوں ایٹم بم نہ ہوں اسوقت تک ہمارا ملک self defence کے لئے تیاری نہیں کر سکتا۔ اس طرح سے اگر آپ food کے بارے میں self-supporting بنانا چاہتے ہیں تو اس کے لئے آپ کو scientific development کرنی پڑیگی اور اس بارے میں کافی دور دھوپ کرنی پڑیگی۔ جب تک آپ ایسا نہیں کرتے

آپ اپنا standard of living اونچا نہیں کر سکتے ہیں اور جب تک آپ Agricultural developments کو اس طریقہ پر اختیار نہیں کرتے ہیں جس پر کہ دوسرے ممالک کر رہے ہیں تب تک ہمارے معاملہ میں کامیابی ہونی مشکل ہی معلوم ہوتی ہے اس لئے میں یہ چاہتا ہوں کہ اس بل کے provisions کی طرف آپ جتنی بھی توجہ دے سکتے ہیں وہ ضرور دیں جیسا کہ میں نے گزارش کی ہے اس بل کے سب کلازس کی سہولت کھیتی نے خوب فور سے چھان بین کی ہے اس لئے اسکو پاس کرنا چاہئے۔

میں یہ گزارش کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ دیپتی کسٹمر کا جب چناؤ کرنا ہو۔ تو ان باتوں کا خیال رکھا جائے کہ جس شخص کو اس اسامی پر لایا جائے وہ دل میں دیپن کا درد رکھنے والا ہو۔ اور اس کام کو اپنے دیپن کا کام سمجھ کر نہایت دلچسپی اور ایمانداری سے انجام دے۔ وہ آدمی نہایت ہی لائق اور تجربہ کار ہونا چاہئے۔ جب تک ایک ایسے آدمی کو نہیں چلیں گے تب تک اس بل کے پاس ہونے کے باوجود بھی ہم کچھ اتنی اس بارے میں نہیں کر سکیں گے۔ اس لئے میں اپنے دوست کی توجہ اس طرف خاص طور پر کھینچنا چاہتا ہوں کہ وہ دیپتی کسٹمر کی تقرری کرتے وقت میری باتوں کا پورا پورا خیال رکھیں اور اس سکیم کو ایک Pet child سمجھکر اسکی طرف پوری پوری توجہ دیں۔ آپ کے سامنے یہ صرف دہلی اور اجمیر میروازہ کا ہی سوال نہیں ہے بلکہ اسکو آپ آل انڈیا Matter خیال کریں۔ ایسا خیال کرتے ہوئے آپ تمام ملک کی مشکلات کا حل کر سکیں گے۔

ان الفاظ کے ساتھ میں اس بل کو Support کرتے ہوئے یہ امید کرتا ہوں کہ یہاں سے یہ پاس ہو کر Cold Storage میں نہیں پڑے گا۔ بلکہ اس پر پوری طرح سے عمل درآمد کیا جائیگا۔ اور دہلی اور اجمیر میروازہ میں اس سکیم کا عملی کام شروع کیا جائیگا۔

میں اپنے لائق دوست مسٹر مکت بہاری لال کے ریمارک کے متعلق یہ عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ ان کا جو یہ خیال ہے کہ دہلی کے ساتھ حکومت بہت رعایت کرتی ہے وہ ان کا غلط خیال ہے۔ حقیقت یہ ہے کہ دہلی میں حکومت ہونے کی وجہ سے دہلی والوں کی مصیبتیں دن بدن بڑھتی ہی جا رہی ہیں۔ جتنا کہ دہلی والوں کو Suffer کرنا پڑتا ہے وہ اس وجہ سے ہے کہ حکومت کے سامنے ان کی کوئی بات نہیں رکھی جاتی ہے۔ اور یہاں کے ایڈمنسٹریشن میں ان کی کوئی voice نہیں ہے۔ ان کی Problems دن بدن بڑھتی ہی چلی جا رہی ہیں۔ میں اپنے دوست سے یہ اپیل کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ وہ دہلی کا اجمیر میروازہ کے ساتھ مقابلہ نہ کریں بلکہ دہلی اور اجمیر کو مل کر دونوں پائے جیکسا مطالبہ کریں۔

(English translation of the above speech.)

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): Mr. Deputy Speaker, I also congratulate the Honourable Minister on his bringing this Bill before the House in the form in which he desired to bring it. He had the full co-operation of all members of the Select Committee.

My learned friends Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava and Mr. Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava have thrown sufficient light on the clauses of this Bill, therefore, I do not want to repeat what they have said. I fully agree with my honourable friends in regard to the objects of this Bill. If we really desire to go ahead and make this Bill a model for other parts of the country, then the proper course would be to set up separate Development Boards and appoint separate Development Commissioners for each of the Provinces of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara. Conditions in both these Provinces differ and one Deputy Commissioner will not be able to look after both the Provinces and, the experiment may not be a success.

The area of Delhi is about 600 sq. miles and comprises of about 350 villages i.e., it is even smaller than a Tehsil. I attach more importance to this Bill for the reason that if we can make this scheme a success, other parts of the country will also be benefited. Therefore, as my honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava has stated, I will also urge upon the Government to economise anywhere where it may be possible to do so but so far as this Bill is concerned, they should not economise and should spend as much money as may be required to make this scheme a success, and to frame a model for the whole of the country.

I would request the Government to introduce some useful method to bring culturable lands under cultivation and for the expansion of our forest wealth and grass-lands and generally for all kinds of improvement in matters connected with agriculture.

Sir, in the present-day conditions, this Bill is sufficiently important. You are no doubt aware that at present the attention of all the countries is concentrated on economic development. The people here too are very much worried on account of the economic crisis which they take to be a serious one. All the eminent economists and industrialists of our country have submitted their reports now if not earlier on this question and a special sub-committee has also been constituted in this connection so that a measure may be taken to combat this economic crisis. If you carefully go through this matter, you will find the idea underlying it. If we can supply foodgrains and cloth to our countrymen at cheap rates, neither there will remain any inflation nor the economic crisis in our country.

It is very surprising that a country which in the past used to export and supply foodgrains to the whole world now finds itself a beggar and is soliciting the help of the whole world like a mendicant and is consuming its dollar-reserve in the procurement of these foodgrains. On this account the efficiency of transport system of the country has also deteriorated and the Railways have been seriously affected because all the foodgrains that are received from abroad in Bombay and Calcutta and other ports are carried by the Railways. In spite of all this, the situation has worsened to such an extent that it is not always possible to procure many such commodities which form an important part of food. Today we cannot supply more than an ounce of cereals to any one person; so much so that we cannot even allot more than eight or ten ounces to the labourers and they also have to live on that quantity. This is due to the fact that proper attention and necessary thought has not been given to the matter of supply of foodstuffs and minimum quantity required per capita.

This country has of 70 per cent agriculturists and it is rather surprising that even then, we are not getting enough to eat and cannot produce enough cotton needed for the manufacture of cloth necessary to clothe the people.

I will therefore submit that so far as Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara are concerned, we should fully realize the importance of this Bill, and while making provision in the Budget for the trial of this scheme, we should see that the requisite funds are provided for the purpose so that the hands of the Honourable Minister may be strengthened and he may be able to prove that all the waste and culturable land in our country can be cultivated. I will submit that you may make thousands of such experiments but until the foodgrains and cotton are produced in our country, in sufficient quantity, we cannot succeed on the economic plans. I wish that the hands of the Honourable Minister for Agriculture may be adequately strengthened so that this scheme may be given practical shape in other places also to the grow more food.

It has been generally noticed that whenever it is considered expedient to introduce a scheme for the good of the country and funds are asked for this purpose, the Ministry of Finance to whom the matter is referred reject this demand without appreciating its utility or importance. Funds are not thus made available for the scheme, although crores are spent in other directions. When money is required to push a scheme which aims at making our country self-supporting, funds are not sanctioned and innumerable obstacles are placed in the way of allotment of money.

Sir, I would like to say that I have recently returned from a tour of America and Europe. Although there is not enough rainfall in those countries, yet you will be wonderstruck at the methods employed there for the cultivation of land and for the growing of foodgrains. Seeds are sown through aeroplanes and the entire business of farming is done through a mechanized system. In the extent of cultivation and production our country is no match to it. If we ourselves are unable to undertake any research work cannot our unfortunate country derive benefit by making use of the researches made by other countries? No benefit could be derived from these researches because full attention was not given to this question. We thought we could do by eating less and were careless in this respect. Today if the question of defence arises we think that until and unless we have the latest equipment, aeroplanes and atom bombs, our country cannot prepare itself for self-defence. Similarly if you want to become self-supporting in the matter of food, you will have to take up scientific development and exert all your energies to achieve this object. Until you do this, you cannot raise your standard of living and as long as you do not take up agricultural development in the manner adopted by other countries, there is hardly any possibility of success. I would therefore urge that you should give as much attention as possible to the provisions of this Bill. I have already said, that the Select Committee has thoroughly scrutinized all the clauses of this Bill, and you should, therefore, pass them.

I would also like to submit that while making the selection of a Deputy Commissioner, it may be borne in mind that only that person should be appointed to the post who is a patriot in his outlook and who would perform this duty in the interest of his country honestly and with interest. He should be a highly competent and experienced person. Unless you select a person of this type, we will not be able to make any progress even after the passage of this Bill. I would, therefore, like the attention of the Honourable Minister particularly drawn to this aspect so that he may act upon my suggestions when filling the post of the Deputy Commissioner and treat this scheme as a pet child, and devote himself to it whole-heartedly. You have not only to look to Delhi and

[Shri Deshbandhu Gupta]

Ajmer-Merwara, but you should consider it as an All India matter. With this end in view, you will be able to solve all the difficulties facing the country.

While supporting this Bill with these words, I hope that after the Bill has been passed by this House, it will not be put into cold storage, but full action will be taken and the scheme will be given practical effect in Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara.

As regards the remarks made by my honourable friend Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava that the Government favours Delhi I would say that it is a wrong idea and in fact due to Delhi being the seat of the Central Government the difficulties of its people are increasing day-by-day. They have to suffer considerably and have no access to the Government nor any voice in the administration. The problems affecting them are continually on the increase. I would, therefore, request my honourable friend not to compare Delhi with Ajmer-Merwara, but to put up a joint demand for both Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Sir, I do not propose to detain the House for more than a few minutes, knowing that there are important matters yet before it. I will only briefly refer to the remarks of some of the speakers. I know that there are various proposals before the Government submitted by economists and other sections of the public, suggesting that expenditure may be cut down. But I do not think that it would be the policy of the Government to cut down such expenditure as relates directly to agricultural development.

With regard to the remarks about there being two Boards—one for Ajmer and one for Delhi—the conception of the Bill is not to have one single Board for the two Provinces: the conception of the Bill is to have separate Boards for the two Provinces.

I know that there are many untapped water sources in Ajmer and Merwara, and the question of better irrigation facilities for agriculture would be a matter for early consideration for these Boards.

Suggestions have been put to me with regard to the selection of the officers. It is not always easy to get the best man whom you may need, but I can assure Members of the House that the very best effort would be made to select the most suitable officers for these posts.

I know that at the start when I introduced the Bill it was an official Bill; but after the Bill was submitted to the Select Committee I have ceased to regard it as an official Bill and I regard it as really a non-official Bill which Government are sponsoring and I hope that it will be the effort of these Boards, on which non-officials will be represented, to give it as popular a colour, and so manage its day-to-day working, that the general public is in agreement with all the schemes which may be put through. Because, I am convinced that unless there is the fullest possible co-operation of the agriculturists, nothing will result from this Bill.

I know that Members of the House have expressed great hopes in regard to this measure. There are various factors which have got to be co-ordinated before full results can be achieved. I do not know whether all these factors can be co-ordinated. But it will be my endeavour to see that the maximum co-operation is obtained, and to some extent the hopes of this House are fulfilled.

Sir, I commend my motion that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill to provide for the preparation and execution of land development schemes, the reclamation of waste-land and the control of private forests and grass-land, in the Provinces of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There are no amendments except the amendment which has been given notice of just now. If it is an agreed amendment I will waive notice; otherwise it cannot be accepted.

The question is:

"That clauses 2 to 33 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 33 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion moved.

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Prof. Shibban Lal Saxena (U.P.: General): Sir, I must heartily congratulate the Honourable Minister for having brought forward this Bill. I have read carefully the provisions of the Bill, and I find that I should offer some suggestions about the functions of the Development Boards which they are creating. As my honourable friend Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta said, this Bill should become a sort of model for agricultural development for the whole country, and I fully agree with him that the solution of the infinite problem lies not so much in cut and currency as in producing more food and in the improvement of agriculture and agricultural industries. So, what I wanted to suggest was that in regard to this Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara area, although the area may not be very large—probably it does not consist of more than 1,000 villages—still I wish that in these 1,000 villages the Honourable Minister should put forward a scheme of planned development which should become the basis of the whole country. I wish to offer some suggestions which I think should be considered.

The first and foremost need is the abolition of zamindari as my honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava mentioned, but I think it would come under the last Bill in the Agenda and so I would not speak on that. But after the abolition of zamindari, the most essential measure which we need today is collectivization of farming. Although I have gone through the functions of the Development Board I have not found anywhere that State farms shall be opened or that there will be collective farming. We should have these if we want to keep Indian agriculture in line with that of the world. My honourable friend Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta pointed out that in America they sow with aeroplanes. If we are to do this in India we must have large State farms; small holdings cannot be sown by aeroplanes.

Sir, we must make a bold plan for the development of agriculture. I am very sorry that the record of the Agricultural Departments in the Provinces is not at all worthy of credit. In fact, I often think that they have so far been a sort of parasites on the Governments of the Provinces; they have not done any work, their officers even do not know the plants or various agricultural foods produced in the country, but when they go to Committees theirs is thought to be the most expert opinion. I therefore think that the Honourable Minister should revolutionise ideas about agriculture in the whole country and he should give the initiative from the Centre. I know he is taking extraordinary pains in his Department and I know that he has the energy and will to do it. But I should like that he should have a ten year plan for Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara and he should see that these two Provinces develop on a model line. In this connection I would draw his attention to the People's Plan. There are so many plans, but so far as agriculture is concerned, I think the People's Plan has discussed the question in the most thorough and exhaustive manner. If that Plan is adopted, after probably two years the plan will become self-financing. That Plan envisages first the abolition of zamindari. After that it envisages State farms as a sort of specimen and model for cultivators; that too should be done—not by legislation but more by persuasion.

Development of agriculture and collectivization are the most important things today. These should have been included as the main function of the Development Board. I do wish the Development Board takes a lead from the People's Plan to develop agriculture in a manner that will make it self-supporting and we may be able to have State farms where modern methods may be used in order that they may be a model for other Provinces. The Centre has more resources than the Provinces. These areas are small areas.

In regard to irrigation, although tube wells have been mentioned, I think a more thorough system should be evolved so that every piece of land may be irrigated. There should be no difficulty about irrigation. After irrigation and proper division of the areas into collective farms and State farms, I think we should be able to give the country a demonstration in how we can grow more food. As the Honourable Minister pointed out, a large amount goes on purchase of food. We cannot build any system of industry in the country unless we have very proper agricultural production. This is only possible if we have a plan which should be self-supporting and by which we would be able to keep our agriculture in line with the modern countries of the world. The other day my honourable friend pointed out that in cotton our production is 115 lbs whereas it is 500 lbs in other cases. Similarly in sugarcane our production is only 1500 lbs whereas it is 3000 lbs in Java. These are huge differences; they can only be made up if there is a proper plan. The Centre should take the lead in this; the Provinces cannot do it as they are badly in need.

Sir, in conclusion I only say that the functions of this Board should be extended. It should at least take up the question of developing State farms and collective farms and try to follow the methods given in the People's Plan for our agriculture.

Sir, I support this Bill.

Shri B. N. Munavalli (Deccan and Madras States Group): Sir, I congratulate the Honourable Minister for having introduced this Bill, which is a measure which should have been brought forward, long, long ago. Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara, being under the Central Government administration, land development in these two Provinces, ought to have been undertaken, earlier. However, soon after our independence, our Government has taken this bold step and I hope that the schemes, that will be evolved under this Bill will be a model, for other Provinces also to follow.

Sir, there are a great many Boards and Committees established by the Government in the Centre, as well as in the Provinces, but practically speaking, they have not turned out the work, which was expected of them. But I hope that when this Board, appointed under this Bill, starts working, it will really turn out work, which will be beneficial to the agriculturists.

As has already been pointed out, by my honourable friend, the area to be brought under cultivation, in Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara is a big one. There are rivers and rivulets, which have to be exploited; if they are exploited, the lot of the agriculturists will improve to a great extent. This country is mainly agricultural; but up till now Government has not directed its attention towards improving the lot of the agriculturists, which is so essential. The other day when we passed the Cotton Cess Bill, we found that the Council of Agricultural Research, which was meant to conduct researches, for the improvement of cotton seeds etc., instead of conducting research of that kind, was being utilised for the advancement of the industrialists. So, I hope that the whole set-up and the finances, that are going to be available, for land development, should be utilised for that purpose and for the betterment of the agriculturists. As a matter of fact, we are deficient in food. Our country being so big and our landed property being so vast, if we improve our agriculture, we should, really speaking, be able to produce sufficient food, not only for our own requirements, but we may even be in a position, to export food to other countries. In other countries, scientific researches have been made and agriculture has been so advanced that they grow food three or four times more than what we have been doing in the same area. That is why I press the Honourable Minister to direct his energies, towards the improvement of agriculture, so that the economic condition of the agriculturists will improve and side by side the economic problems which are confronting us will also be solved.

Sir, I welcome this Bill and once more I congratulate the Honourable Minister, for having introduced it. I only hope, that it will be worked out, in the spirit, in which it has been introduced.

The Honourable Shri Jai Ramdas Doulatram: Sir, I would only refer briefly to one or two suggestions which have been made. With regard to State farms, it is too large a question on which to have a discussion at this stage. The holdings in this area are individual holdings. Unless they are all confiscated and taken possession of and converted into a State farm, we can proceed only on the basis the continuance of individual holdings. The Bill provides for voluntary and, in some cases, even compulsory co-operation of the owners of individual holdings, so that most purposes of co-ordination of individual action by the State will be achieved by the provisions of the Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Will you reclaim waste lands also?

The Honourable Shri Jai Ramdas Doulatram: I think part of the waste land is also owned by individuals, but that is a matter to be gone into.

Then, it has been suggested that this or that type of official is a parasite and should be avoided, or that the officials are not doing all that they should do. I do not think that the agricultural development of this country depends upon one or two good officials or one or two bad officials. If we study what is happening in other countries which have achieved adequate agricultural progress, we will discover that between the Government at the head or the Government officials at the top, and the cultivator at the bottom, there is a long series of links. There are grades of official and non-official workers who link up the Central Government or the Provincial Government with the agriculturists and it is through the action of this long series of official and non-official workers that the agriculturists are able to utilise the results of research. Not all the expenses are borne by the State. A good deal of non-official effort is available. For instance, in U.P., where they have the Panchayats or elsewhere where co-operative societies are functioning, it should be expected that in a drive for agricultural production, all these Panchayats and all these co-operatives would be mobilised. They also can be mobilised only if there are departmental officials of Government functioning for this purpose in each area. Therefore, a very extensive official and non-official apparatus is needed before we can produce double or treble yields for our land to which there have been frequent references in the House. I do not think any effort by a few members of the Ministry in any Central or Provincial Government or a few officers at the top, however good they may be, will have the effect of achieving the desired object. Without a great co-operative effort from the non-official organisations, it cannot be achieved.

[Shri Jairamdas Doulatram]

So also with regard to this Bill. This Bill will be judged by the efforts which the non-official agencies are able to put through, whether they are Panchayats or they are co-operative societies. Official aid is necessary and it will be our duty to see that that official aid is available.

With these words, Sir, I hope the Bill will be passed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

CENTRAL SILK BOARD BILL

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee (Minister for Industry and Supply): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill to provide for the development under Central control of the raw silk industry and for that purpose to establish the Central Silk Board, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The House will recall that when I moved my motion for reference of this Bill to the Select Committee, I placed before the House the various considerations which weighed with Government in bringing forward this measure. This Bill seeks to take into consideration the possibility of development of silk industry in India. Normally speaking, it is a matter which falls within the provincial field. We appointed a Panel to go into this question some time ago and the matter was also considered at the Industries Conference held in December last. There was a general agreement that in view of the importance of this industry and also the difficulties through which it is passing, it is desirable that its development should be Centrally planned and regulated. That was the reason why this Bill was introduced.

[At this stage Mr. Deputy Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (one of the Panel of Chairmen)].

The Select Committee has made one or two changes. The first major alteration relates to the cess. It will be recalled that in the Bill as originally drafted, there was a proposal to levy the cess on all varieties and certain criticisms were made that it would be desirable to exclude the possibility of imposing any cess on silk which is produced through charka, that is to say, the cottage industry production should be exempted from the operation of the cess. I gave an assurance that I would be prepared to accept an amendment when the matter was considered by the Select Committee. The Bill as approved by the Select Committee confines the levy of the cess to filature raw silk and spun silk only and here also, as the House will see, it has been left to the option of the Government to impose the cess. In other words, the time when this cess will be imposed and the amount of the cess will be decided by Government after consultation with the Board, which is of a fully representative character.

Further, it has been laid down that the Government will place such funds at the disposal of the Board as may be considered desirable or necessary.

The second major change relates to the membership of the Board. Here we have added a few more members; from 22 we have gone to 28. 2 Members will be elected from the Legislature. 4 in place of 3 will come from Mysore which is the largest silk-producing area in India today and not more than 3 persons may be nominated by the Central Government to represent producers of raw silk and areas which may be otherwise un-represented. There was a suggestion made that we should include certain areas which were not included, for instance, one such area was East Punjab. We excluded certain areas on account of the small acreage of mulberry. We proceeded on a certain principle, but we have made a provision that later on it will be open to Government to nominate one or two representatives of the unrepresented areas if it is found that those areas have taken steps for the purpose of growing mulberry.

There is another minor change which relates to the appointment of a Standing Committee. The size of the Board has gone up to 28; it will not be possible for the Board to meet more than once or twice a year. Meanwhile it was thought desirable a small standing Committee should be enabled to function, so that Government may receive proper advice on any matters relating to policy or administration. That provision also has been made.

I feel, Sir, that the Bill as amended by the Select Committee makes necessary changes which will enable us to go ahead with the planned development of silk industry in India.

I move, Sir, that the Bill be taken into consideration.

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to provide for the development under Central control of the raw silk industry and for that purpose to establish the Central Silk Board, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Shri Satish Chandra (U.P.: General): Sir, Government deserve congratulations of the House for having brought this Bill which relates to the development of Silk industry. But, Sir, there has been a confusion in my mind and the first thing which occurred to me when I read this Bill was whether the Central Silk Board should be under the administrative control of the Ministry of Industry and Supply or the Ministry of Agriculture. If we look at clause 8 of this Bill relating to the functions of the Board, it says, it shall be the duty of the Board to promote the development of the raw silk industry by such measures as it thinks fit. Then it goes further and gives in greater detail the directions in which the activities of the Board shall be concentrated. It says that it may provide for undertaking, assisting or encouraging scientific, technological and economic research. I would submit, Sir, that silk worm is a subject matter of agricultural entomology. As a student of an Agricultural College myself, I have had to do a bit about the rearing of these silk worms. Anybody who knows about the life-history of flies and all other insects, knows that it is a matter which is connected directly with the entomological department of the Ministry of Agriculture.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram (Minister for Food and Agriculture): May I say on behalf of the Agricultural Ministry that I do not regard this Bill as one with which the Agricultural Ministry has very much to do. But because it has concern with one aspect of it, it has been arranged that a representative of the Agricultural Ministry will be on the Board which will be carrying out the provisions of the Act. I would therefore request that there should be no motion or proposal that the Agricultural Minister should be the Chairman of the Board.

Shri Satish Chandra: I have no intention of moving an amendment. I have given notice, but the stage has not yet come. I am simply giving out what I feel about it. It is just possible that I am wrong. I have given up the idea of moving the amendment. The amendments are not being taken into consideration at this stage. We are not considering the Bill clause by clause. But still, Sir, in spite of what the Honourable Minister has said, I do say that the Industries Department has got nothing to do with the cultivation of plants. Here you will see, Sir, that this Silk Board will have to look after the Mulberry cultivation. If the argument that may be advanced today is carried a bit further, I doubt very much if cotton and wool will also not slip from the Ministry of Agriculture and go to the Ministry of Industry and Supply. I really wonder why silk alone has been singled out leaving raw wool and raw cotton under one ministry and raw silk under the administrative control of another Ministry. You will see, Sir, in the report of the Royal Commission on Agriculture when they deal with sericulture, they have said on page 570:

"In various parts of India where the industry has been long established, much attention has been paid by Government to the improvement of strains of silk worms and the treatment of cocoons. Where silk worms can be reared, a valuable subsidiary industry is available—the more so as it provided what is essentially a spare-time occupation. To the cultivator it affords a useful addition to income with a comparatively small expenditure of time and labour on the crop which feeds the worm. While, in certain areas and amongst certain classes, there are religious prejudices against the processes the industry involves, there are large areas of the country where these religious prejudices do not exist and the mulberry, or some alternative source of food for the worm, is to be found."

I mean to say, Sir, that the cultivation of the mulberry plant the question of finding out alternative food for silk worm, the rearing of the silk worm itself—these are all subjects which are dealt with by experts who are employed in the Ministry of Agriculture and I take it, Sir, that the Ministry of Industry and Supply, if it takes the administrative control of this Board will appoint fresh entomologists all over the land to carry on experiments over the rearing and multiplication of silk worms. A machinery already exists in the Ministry of Agriculture. Its personnel is being trained in agricultural colleges. There is an Entomological Museum attached to the Indian Institute of Agricultural Research, and in it there is a huge collection of useful insects like bees which give you honey and wax. Lac is also an insect and shellac is also used in industry. But there must be a line drawn somewhere to distinguish between the field of operations of the Ministry of Agriculture and those of the Ministry of Industry and Supply. The Ministry of Industry and Supply only comes at a definite stage. As far as the raw materials are concerned which are produced from land or from animals or from insects—I am very clear about it in my mind, though my argument may not appeal—that if it is organic raw-material, if it is grown on land, or if it pertains to life such as fish or meat or wool or lac,—you have got so many examples already,—they are all operated by the Ministry of Agriculture.

The machinery already exists and there are scientific personnel and technicians already employed in the Ministry of Agriculture. It will be a waste of public money to set up a separate machinery for research on silk worms. The production of raw silk involves several stages. The first is the cultivation of mulberry, the second is the rearing of the silk-worm and then comes the reeling of raw silk from the cocoons. I think, so far, it is under the province of the Ministry of Agriculture that these operations should be performed. It is only after these, when raw silk is 'thrown' twisted into silk yarn and finally woven into fabrics, that the Ministry of Industry and Supply comes into the picture. Wool is also a thing which is exactly on the same footing. It is grown not on a plant or tree, but on the body of sheep. Raw wool is under the Ministry of Agriculture; cotton is under the Ministry of Agriculture. Why silk alone has been singled out, it is a thing which has surprised me. I only wish that the Honourable Ministers will kindly confer among themselves about the scope and functions of their respective Ministries.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): Sir, the Bill as amended by the Select Committee is welcome on all hands. All the objections and suggestions that have been made on the floor of the House have been accepted in toto. The Bill, as it has emerged from the Select Committee, is as satisfactory as it could be. I only want to make one or two suggestions to the Honourable Minister in charge of this Bill.

Firstly, where the headquarters of the Board is going to be situated is a matter for consideration. If, as is usually presumed, the headquarters of the Board is situated in Delhi, it will not be conducive to the silk industry as such. Delhi is a place where neither the silk industry has taken root nor is it connected in any way with sericulture, except perhaps that some of the people in Delhi wear silk fabrics. Therefore, I would suggest that in the interests of the industry, it should be located in a place where sericulture is one of the main occupations of the people. From that point of view, I would suggest Mysore is the best suited place. Mysore grows more than 50 per cent of the silk that is produced in India. There are already facilities in the Mysore State. For the last 25 or 30 years the Mysore Government have established various experimental farms, and if there is a place in India where research has been done and various contributive factors have taken place for the growth of the industry, it is Mysore. From this point of view, it would be beneficial to sericulture as such if the headquarters of the Board is located in Mysore.

Secondly, though the Chairman of the Board happens to be the Minister in charge, we have made provision in the Bill that there should be a vice-Chairman to carry on the administration or such of the administrative powers as are delegated either by the Board or the Chairman. Again, I would like to make a suggestion here. The Minister of the Central Government is a very busy person and he will certainly not be in a position to devote all his attention or time for any particular department which is under his control. It would be to the interests of the industry concerned, sericulture, if a Vice-Chairman who can devote all his attention and time is entrusted with the administration and management of the Board. No doubt, the Chairman may preside over the General Body meetings and if he chooses, over the meetings of the Standing Committee. The main burden of the duty must be cast upon the Vice-Chairman whom we must select with a view to his efficiency and experience in this line.

So far as the point made out by my honourable friend Mr. Satish Chandra is concerned, he said that cotton was under the Ministry of Agriculture and he mentioned various other agricultural products. I might say straightaway that agriculture is quite different from sericulture and it stands to reason that there are two departments because there are two different names. Sericulture does not stand on the same footing as cotton and other things. The two Honourable Ministers are unanimous on that opinion and I do not think there will be any point in carrying the arguments further. Besides, it is not as if the Honourable Ministers in charge of Industry and Supply and Agriculture will non-co-operate. We have also made provision for the representative of the Agriculture Department to be on the Board. The several Departments of the Government will work in co-ordination with one another in this matter. The Bill as it is drafted, is quite satisfactory I should say from all points of view, and I would urge that this Bill might command the unanimous acceptance of this House.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): Sir, on a point of information, I would like to know where the headquarters of this Board will be located.

Before the Honourable Minister makes his reply, I wish to offer one or two suggestions with regard to this. The Central Government have got a natural partiality to locate everything in New Delhi. There are several other considerations in locating the headquarters of certain other committees, which do not legitimately weigh in the best interests of the committee. For instance, I have the case of Central Tobacco Committee. It is located in Bombay, a most costly place where you cannot get accommodation where there is no sufficient ground for the tobacco growers to profit by the location of such an institution there. It is located there simply because certain high officials considered that they can conveniently fly to that place and attend the meetings. I would suggest that the headquarters of these committees, like the Central Tobacco Committee, the Central Coconut committee, the Central Cotton committee and the Central Silk committee, or Coffee Committee should be located in an area where the largest quantity of the article is manufactured.

Again, with regard to the Vice Presidentship, I feel that there is a dearth of trained personnel or proper personnel to fill up these posts and a single gentleman is asked to run about with the Presidentship of several organisations in the country, and the very same gentleman has to run to Australia to buy wheat, keeping aside all the work here. I would suggest that so much of concentration in the hands of one single gentleman should not be allowed in the best interests of the industry. I would suggest that the headquarters should be somewhere in Bangalore and people who have got experience of this particular business may be chosen to organise the Central Committee and to put it on a sound footing.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: Sir, I am thankful for the general support extended to the Bill as amended by the Select Committee.

One question has been raised as regards the part which the Agricultural Ministry should play in the functioning of this Board. I admit that so far as cultivation goes, naturally it falls within Agriculture. But if we have to follow the arguments of the honourable member to their logical extent, then the Agricultural Ministry should have nothing to do with the latter portions of Section 8 dealing with the industrial aspect of the proposals, and that is the main purpose for which the Bill has been introduced.

There are various provinces where sericulture has been put under the Industry Ministry and there are some provinces where sericulture comes under Agriculture. In any case this is one of those matters which overlap and I can assure the honourable member and the House that the policy which the Government of India will pursue in this matter will be completely integrated in character. The Industry Ministry will not do anything which may in any way adversely affect the cultivation of mulberry, which obviously is the basic thing. Unless there is improvement in that respect, it will not be possible for us to make further improvement with regard to production of raw silk. There is co-operation now and there will be co-operation in future. If honourable members will look at the wording of the section they will find that what is said is that the duty of the Board will be to promote the development of the raw silk industry by such measures as it thinks fit and without prejudice to the generality of such provision, the measures may provide for undertaking, assisting or encouraging scientific, technological and economic research. The measures may provide for devising means for improved methods of mulberry cultivation, production and distribution, etc. It may be that the institutions will remain under the control of the Agricultural Ministry. It may be possible for the Board to give financial assistance. New institutions may come into existence which may come for help before the Board. There is nothing here which need give rise to any apprehension in any one's mind that there will be a constitutional crisis between the Agricultural Ministry and the Industrial Ministry with regard to the cultivation of mulberry.

The other suggestion made is with regard to the location of the Board. My friend, Mr. Hanumanthaiya is certainly doing his duty when he pleads the case of Mysore.

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi (East Punjab: General): What about Assam? Mr. Chaudhuri is not here in the House at this time.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: We shall bear in mind his suggestion. We have not decided where the Board will be located. There is no special charm in New Delhi, and as the Prime Minister himself announced sometime ago he would not like that too many institutions or new organisations should be set up in this city. That is a matter of which due consideration will be taken. But there again there may be conflicting claims between an area which may be the biggest producing area and an area which is the biggest consuming area and it may be claimed that unless Bombay and the United Provinces were prepared to consume all the silk Mysore was producing, the silk would have no market at all.

As regards the selection of the Vice-Chairman, there also we shall consider what sort of person we shall have. As you have seen, I have left the matter to the Board. I would be prepared to accept the recommendation of the Board where all the interests would be represented, and Government would not be prepared to force any officer of its own on the Board. I am sure with the goodwill and co-operation of all the provinces and States which have agreed to join this Board, as also the representatives of the other producing and manufacturing interests, we shall be able to take effective steps which will lead to the development of silk industry in this country.

Let not the House forget that we are facing a crisis now. The price of imported silk is much lower than the price of silk which is made in India, and unless some definite steps are taken in the near future for the purpose of improving the quality and also reducing the overhead expenses, it will be very difficult for Indian Silk to hold its head high in competition with the world market. This is a matter which is not merely of sectional interest, or of importance to a particular area but to the whole of India.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill to provide for the development under Central control of the raw silk industry and for that purpose to establish the Central Silk Board, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Satish Chandra has already said he is not moving his amendment. I have another amendment which was received at 1.45 P.M. today. The rule has been that due notice cannot be waived unless the Honourable Minister and the House regard the same as unexceptionable.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I cannot accept it.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): I would like to ask a few questions in regard to clause 10 of the Bill. Will the Honourable the Minister give the House an idea what the cess is going to be? Secondly, could the Honourable the Minister say whether he has started negotiations with the Indian States who are interested in this, whether they are going to levy a cess and will it come into the Central pool?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: With regard to the amount of the cess, it is obvious I cannot answer the question and I should not, because I have to consult the Board before Government can decide what the amount should be. My friend, democratic-minded as he is, will be the first to protest if I announced from now that the cess should be so much. I shall consult the Board as soon as it is constituted and I shall also consult the Provinces and then Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: The Honourable Minister must have some idea of the limits within which the cess could be levied.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: If I find that the levying of the cess is harmful to the industry in the first two or three years, I may not levy the cess. There I have kept an open mind and I shall consider the matter after the Board has been formed.

In regard to the second question, whether the States interested have been approached already, the answer is yes, and I have had a good response. Many of the States are willing to come and join the Board. That is the reason why in clause 1 it has been laid down that it extends to all the provinces of India and also to any acceding State for which the Dominion Legislature has for the time being the power to make laws in respect of the development of the raw silk industry. Other States will simultaneously pass similar legislation. We have an assurance, from the States, specially from Mysore which practically produces nearly 70 per cent for the whole of India, that they will give us their wholehearted co-operation in making a success of this scheme.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: What will happen to the cess they might levy? Will it go to the Central Fund?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: It will go to the Central Fund.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Has a reference been made to the Tariff Board whether silk should be given protection?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I have referred the matter to the Tariff Board and its recommendations will have to be considered in due course.

Shri K. Santhanam (Madras: General): What about Kashmir?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I have added Jammu and Kashmir in the hope that they will come in.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): There is no limit put to the cess. I really wonder whether we should pass a piece of legislation giving a kind of blank cheque!

Shri Bikramlal Sondhi: They are our own Government!

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I think we should put down some limit otherwise this is not good organisation. I would request the Honourable the Minister to have some upper limit so that it may not be said afterwards that this Legislature gave the Executive a blank cheque in this matter.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clauses 2 to 17 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 17 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

AJMER-MERWARA TENANCY AND LAND RECORDS BILL

The Honourable Shri Jai Ramdas Doulatram (Minister for Food and Agriculture): Sir, this is one more Bill relating to Ajmer-Merwara but the issue involved is one in which I believe the whole House is interested.

Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill to declare and amend the law relating to agricultural tenancies, record-of-rights and other matters connected therewith in Ajmer-Merwara, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Shri Ajit Prasad Jain, Shri Ram Sahai, Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt, Shri H. V. Kamath, Dr. P. S. Deshmukh, Ch. Ranbir Singh, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Shri Mahavir Tyagi, Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava, Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena, Shri V. C. Kesava Rao, Shrimati G. Durgabai, Shrimati Renuka Ray, Shri Satis Chandra Samanta, Shri Kishorimohan Tripathi, Shri V. S. Surwate, Shri Brajeshwar Prasad, Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu, Begum Aizaz Rasul, Shri Mohanlal Gautam, and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the last day of the first week of the next Budget Session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Sir in explaining the main objective of this Bill also which on the whole I regard as non-controversial, I shall be very brief. It may be known to members of the House, as was explained by the honourable member Mr. Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava that there is a peculiar type of tenure in Ajmer-Merwara. It is called the Istimrari tenure. This tenure was created during the time of the Moghals. Under it certain feudal chieftains were given land in lieu of military service and this peculiar type of tenure went on till the Marathas replaced the Moghals. Under Maratha rule the tenure was converted into a tenure based on assessment in lieu of military service and this has gone on since then. The tenants of the Istimrari landholders have remained all this time in the same deplorable condition in which tenants in India had existed until the tenancy laws appeared on the scene in the various provinces. During British Rule, as early as about 70 years ago, an extraordinary decision was made by the British officers as to the status of the tenants of Ajmer-Merwara. They laid down in the Ajmer-Merwara Regulation of 1877 that until the contrary was proved all the tenants of the Istimrari landholders were tenants-at-will. By one stroke of the pen whatever was the previous status of a tenant he was reduced to the position of a tenant at will. The result has been that throughout this long period the tenants have been at the mercy of the landholders, for where a tenant is a tenant at will until he proves the contrary (and proving the contrary is neither an easy nor a cheap process) the result has always been that all the abuses which flow out of this status for the tenants have increased grown during these years in Ajmer-Merwara and the tenantry has been suffering from innumerable ills.

Round about 1932 this position was reviewed, because as a result of the political movement of 1931 there was considerable awakening among the tenantry of Ajmer-Merwara and by 1932 the local administration began to feel the effect of this awakening. As a consequence various enquiries were made as to the relationship between the landholder and the tenant. But the thing went on at a slow pace till 1944, when an officer was appointed to try to find out what were the rights which the tenants really enjoyed and what could be done to regulate the relationship between the tenants and the landholders. It was decided to have a kind of survey of the area and also attempt a sort of record of rights but it was soon discovered that unless there was regular tenancy legislation providing for a proper record of rights and providing for all the other rights of the tenants it may not be easy to complete this preliminary survey. Therefore the preliminary survey was suspended and this tenancy Bill was prepared. It was introduced at the last Budget Session and now it is to be referred to a Select Committee. I have made the Select Committee deliberately very large, so that all points of view and a number of provinces might be represented in the Select Committee and also in order that the discussion in the Select Committee might be thorough and the shape and form in which the Bill may come before the House during the next Budget Session (which will naturally be a very heavy session) will be such that the House might be able to pass this legislation without much difficulty, and the tenants of Ajmer-Merwara get speedily the benefit of the legislation.

I do not want to take the members of the House through many provisions of the Bill. I think those who are familiar with tenancy legislation in the provinces will probably find many common features in this Bill. As a matter of fact it is largely based on the U.P. Tenancy Act, Bihar Tenancy Act and some of the other provincial Acts, except that to suit the special conditions of Ajmer-Merwara some modifications have been provided. In the main the Bill is intended to safeguard first of all security of tenure, so that the tenants might continue to occupy the area which they have been cultivating and could be ejected only for non-payment of rent. Secondly they have been given the right to have a statutory rent, that is a proportion of the crops has been fixed and beyond that the landholder cannot recover as rent. At present a large number of illegal exactions are made. This has been prevented by fixing the rent and only authorised and prescribed cesses could be recovered by the landholders. The third right which they have been given is the right of transfer. All these three rights are now justiciable rights and it is possible for the tenant to ask for and secure them through the intervention of speedy judicial proceedings. These are the main provisions of the Bill. Then subsidiary provisions are there for the record of rights and the other necessary provisions in a tenancy law. I therefore would recommend the House to give their due consideration to this Bill, and since it is going to a very representative Select Committee I hope the House will not take much time in passing the motion, I have made.

Mr. Chairman: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to declare and amend the law relating to agricultural tenancies record-of-rights and other matters connected therewith in Ajmer-Merwara, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Shri Ajit Prasad Jain, Shri Ram Sahai, Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt, Shri H. V. Kamath, Dr. P. S. Deshmukh, Ch. Ranbir Singh, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Shri Mahavir Tyagi, Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava, Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena, Shri V. C. Kesava Rao, Shrimati G. Durgabai, Shrimati Renuka Ray, Shri Satish Chandra Samanta, Shri Kishorimohan Tripathi, Shri V. S. Sarwate, Shri Brajeshwar Prasad, Shri Lakshminarayan Salu, Begum Aizaz Rasul, Shri Mohanlal Gautam, and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the last day of the first week of the next Budget Session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): Mr. Chairman, the Bill that has been introduced by the Honourable Minister in charge of Agriculture is a long overdue measure. In fact, it must be admitted that the underlying principle of this piece of legislation is the existence of the present zamindari system. It presupposes that landlords and tenants will continue to exist in the Province of Ajmer-Merwara. Therefore, though I welcome this measure, I regret that it has not been found possible by my honourable friend to attempt at the abolition of zamindari system. In the present days of India, where a number of advanced Provinces have already adopted measures for the abolition and elimination of the middlemen between the State and the actual cultivator of the soil, it is indeed regrettable that it has not been found possible in this particular case to bring in legislation on that line. (An honourable member: 'Not yet, not yet'.) I would make it clear that so far as the Province of Ajmer-Merwara is concerned, there is hardly any comparison between this Province and other Provinces like Bihar and U. P. where there was or is a system of zamindari or taluqdari. In fact, the condition in Ajmer-Merwara is still worse and the status of the so-called feudal chiefs, locally known by the name of jagirdars or istimrardars, is somewhat higher than ordinary zamindars or taluqdars in the Provinces of U. P. and Bihar. In fact, if there is a case anywhere in India for the abolition of this system of middlemen, it is in the Province of Ajmer-Merwara; there the feudal chiefs claim for themselves a status akin to that of a ruling Prince in the neighbouring States of Rajputana. They enjoy a number of supra legal powers which give them a position much more advantageous than their brothers are occupying in other Provinces. For example, in Ajmer-Merwara these istimrardars claim that no person can enter their domain without their permission. It is ridiculous to conceive that within the four corners of their estate, which in some cases do not exceed beyond a single village, they should claim the supreme right to allow the entry of a person from outside or even to extern a person who has been residing there for centuries. There have been cases where Congress workers who in 1931-32 went inside the estates to help and assist the tenants, were prosecuted under Section 447 of the Indian Penal Code and the Courts of law have convicted such persons for criminal trespass. This is a ridiculous state of affairs.

These persons were in fact never the proprietors of the land. Soon after the British Government seized the Ajmer District from the Scindia in 1818, an enquiry was instituted and Mr. Cavendish, after an elaborate enquiry conducted on the spot from village to village, came to the conclusion that these feudal lords came into existence for the first time in the time of the Moghuls and in fact the tenants of that time—I am talking of the year 1829—claimed hereditary rights of ownership in the various villages. Mr. Cavendish in his report has stated that looking to the claims of the tenants and the history of the estates, it cannot be disputed that the tenants have been inhabiting these villages for generations before the feudal lords came into existence. It is further reported by Mr. Cavendish that the tenants' claim to ownership and proprietorship in the soil cannot seriously be disputed. But a curious argument was availed of and it was stated that because the Mahrattas have rightly or wrongly recognised the feudal chiefs as the proprietors of the soil, consequently it was reported that the present order should subsist and the British Government should also recognise these persons as the proprietors of the land. From a reference to the report it will be absolutely clear that the claim of the tenants to the proprietorship of the soil was certainly of a superior character than that of the feudal chiefs. Thereafter, again about the year 1847 Mr. MacKenzie held another inquiry and his report was also to the same effect; it was reported that the tenants had bona fide claim to the proprietorship of the soil. Unfortunately, Sir, the British Government and the representative of the British Government took a somersault about the year 1873 when the Superintendent made a report that their proprietary title may be recognized. Curiously enough, in the sanad that was granted by the Government of the day in the year 1873, their proprietary rights were recognised by the British Government for all times to come. But here also, if you refer to condition 9 of this sanad that was granted by the British Government, it is admitted beyond the least shadow of a doubt that the tenants living in these estates had rights which needed to be protected at the hands of the landlords. Condition 9 says that the istimrardar had bound himself to respect and protect the rights of his tenants. Notwithstanding this condition No. 9, when Regulation II of 1877 was enacted, in Section 21 it was for the first time stated that the tenants will have only the rights of tenancy at will in the estates. This was a travesty of justice.

[Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava]

Mr. Chairman: May I just remind the honourable member that the convention of the House is that members who are on the Select Committee do not make long speeches at this stage. I do not interfere with his right of speech—but if he wants to take a long time he may indicate it so that the House may adjourn, or if he wants to finish just now he may say so.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: I will require a longer time—about 20 minutes.

Mr. Chairman: The House stands adjourned till 10-45 tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday the 7th September 1948.

STATEMENT ON KASHMIR

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Minister for External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations): Sir, I crave your leave to place certain papers on the table of the House and to make a statement thereon. These papers relate to the United Nations Commission on Kashmir which has been in India and partly in Pakistan for about two months or more now. Honourable members of the House must have read in this morning's papers some correspondence which has passed between this Commission and the Government of India; a Resolution passed by the Commission some three weeks ago; the Government of India's reply thereto and some indication of Pakistan's reply. The full set of papers has not been published in the Press yet and we have only received them, in fact, this morning by special courier from Karachi. No doubt, these papers will be published in the newspapers. Meanwhile, I shall place on the Table of the House some part of these papers and the rest I hope to place there in the course of the day, as soon as they are typed. Now the House knows that this Commission has been here for the last nearly 2 months or more and the House will have seen from this published correspondence what their resolution was and our response to it. In effect they will have seen that we accepted certain conditions for a truce and cease fire. In effect, Pakistan has rejected them. Now I do not wish at this stage to say very much more about this matter, partly because I should like to go through those papers much more carefully than I have had time to do this morning since they came, partly because the Commission is considering what further steps they may or may not take and it will not be perhaps quite proper for me to say anything which might embarrass the Commission.

As the House perhaps knows, it was the desire of the Commission that we postpone publication of papers and any statements in this House till today. We have been anxious right from the beginning of these consultations with the Commission to take this House and the Country into our confidence because we wished to take no steps in such a vital and important matter without the full knowledge and consent of this House, but inevitably in the circumstances, it became difficult for us, much as we wanted to do so, to make statements in this House when the Commission was engaged in these delicate negotiations, and so at their request we had to postpone this from time to time. Ultimately they issued their statement yesterday at 4 P.M. in Karachi. Now, although I do not wish to say much on this subject, there are certain facts to which I should like to draw the attention of the House. The facts themselves are very well known not only in this House, but all over the country. Nevertheless sometimes known and established facts are denied and it does make a difference when those facts are admitted.

[Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru]

The present story and tragedy of Kashmir began over ten months ago. Late in October of last year there was an invasion of Kashmir by people coming across or from Pakistan territory, and the Government of India were faced with a very difficult problem calling for a decision as difficult as any Government has to make, and we had to make that decision within a few hours. We made that decision and since then we have followed that decision. It became clear to us then and that fact has become abundantly clear to all the World that wants to know it, that this invasion was not only encouraged and patronized by the Pakistan Government, but actively supported. Later it became clear that apart from supporting others, there was active participation of the Pakistan army in it. Now throughout these ten months the Pakistan Government have denied that fact, they denied it, aggressively, loudly and persistently. We stated it before the Security Council of the United Nations. In fact, we went to the Security Council with a very simple plea that the peace of Kashmir has been disturbed by these raiders coming across the Pakistan territory and we placed our case as low as possible, although we could have placed it much higher. We said that it is inevitable, even apart from facts, that people coming from Pakistan could only come with the assistance and goodwill of Pakistan and therefore, we requested the Security Council to ask Pakistan not to assist them and not to permit them to come in this way. It was, if I may say so, a very moderate request, couched in moderate language. Pakistan denied that fact and during the long discussions before the Security Council they not only went on denying it, but expressing a great deal of irritation and anger that anyone should make such a charge against them. Well, I do not want to go into this long history of denial by them, but the point is that today on their own admission, their denial was false. Now, that is an important matter.

It is important from the point of view not only of practical politics and the situation we have to face today, it is important also from the point of view of the standards of morality, good behaviour and decency that should subsist between nations. Now, I know very well that the standard of public morality and international morality is unfortunately not very high in this World. Nevertheless certain appearances have to be kept up, certain decencies have to be maintained and some standards have to be kept. I do submit to this House and to the country that the story of these ten months and more and the way the Pakistan Government has re-acted to all that has been said about them in the course of these ten months is so extraordinary as to be hardly creditable for a nation. Even till yesterday, so far as the world is concerned, even till 4 p.m. yesterday, there was no admission by Pakistan that they were participating in any way in those Kashmir operations. Of course, we knew. We have the most definite and positive evidence to that effect and you cannot hide large armies ultimately. Nevertheless till 4 p.m. yesterday when those papers were issued to the public there was no public admission. In fact, there was a continual denial in the course of the last few weeks, while this large Pakistan Army was functioning in Kashmir, battling with the Indian forces in the Indian Union territory. Please remember that all the fighting that has taken place in the last ten months has been in Kashmir, has been in Indian territory; there has been no fighting there has been no incursion, there has been no Indian Army anywhere on Pakistan territory. That is a fundamental and basic fact, which apart from any other enquiry and any other facts would lead one to the conclusion that if any outsiders are fighting in the Indian Union territory, those outsiders are the aggressors. Why are they there? During the last six weeks or so, again we pointed out in the most explicit language to the Pakistan Government and to the Prime Minister of Pakistan this presence of Pakistan troops in the Kashmir State.

Again, there was either a denial or an evasion of the issue. It was an extraordinary thing to me. I do not claim to be in any way different from others of my kind. My standards, I hope, are not lower than others. But, it has been a shock to me that any country, any responsible Minister of Government should make statements which are patently and obviously false and try to mislead the world by that means. You will remember that before the Security Council at Lake Success, there were prolonged arguments on this issue. The Foreign Minister of the Pakistan Government who was the Chief Delegate of their Government there, placed the case for Pakistan before the Security Council. How does that case stand now, I would beg you and the country and the world to consider. Because, that whole case was based on one fundamental fact, that is the denial of Pakistan's complicity in Kashmir. They denied throughout that they actively participated in it. If this fact is proved, as it is proved, out of their very mouths today, to have been false, then what happens to that whole case so laboriously built up by the Pakistan Government before the Security Council? What happens to the charge that we brought against them, which was never considered by the Security Council at all, much to our regret and amazement? So, the fundamental thing for us to remember is this, that a fact which was denied for ten months and more has at last been publicly admitted by the Pakistan Government. They have admitted, of course, in their own way. I shall read out to you some passages from their letter to the Commission wherein they have admitted. They say:

"India was steadily building its Armed Forces in Jammu and Kashmir. This building up process did not cease on 21st April 1948, but was continued and intensified. The Indian Army mounted a big offensive in the beginning of April, thereby causing a material change in the situation. This offensive action has continued ever since. The publicly declared intention of the Government of India was to secure a military decision in Jammu and Kashmir, thus presenting the United Nations Organisation with a fait accompli. This situation not only put in jeopardy the entire population of the areas under the Azad Kashmir Government, and led to a big influx of refugees into Pakistan, but also constituted a direct threat to Pakistan's security. It was this which compelled the Government of Pakistan to move their troops into certain defensive positions."

Observe here too, they do not say clearly that the defensive positions happened to be in another country.

Quite apart from their decision in regard to 'cease fire' and other proposals, the country which participates in aggression over a neighbouring country, may be in the name of defence, may be in the name of its own security, denies that for many months and then, in fact, when it has found out that its guilt is proved, when it cannot hide it any more, then grudgingly admits it and gives some reason for it. How shall we consider the politics of that country from any international or national or moral point of view? Observe, according to this statement they took this action in April last, four months or four and a half months ago. If they felt that their security was imperilled, or something was happening that endangered them and they had to send their troops, what then should they have done? Obviously they should inform the Government of India, and inform the United Nations Organisation that this is happening and there has been, as they say, a material change in the situation, and therefore we are compelled to take this or that action. I cannot conceive of any country anywhere in the wide world which would not have done so. Quite apart from motives, whatever they may be, this is the obvious and inevitable thing to do. They sent this army, according to them, in April last or thereabouts and there is no intimation to us into whose territory they were coming, and there is no intimation to the United Nations Organisation which was seized of this question, and was, as a matter of fact, then thinking of sending out a Commission to India. You will remember that right in the early stages of the Security Council's activities, an appeal was made to India and Pakistan in regard to these military operations and in regard to avoiding any situation between India and Pakistan. That appeal was repeated. In the few lines have read out to you from Pakistan's reply, they accused India of mounting an offensive. We are trying from the Indian Union territory to push out the invader. It has been our declared policy, which we have declared before the United Nations Security Council repeatedly, which in fact was inevitable for us or for any country with any grain of self-respect.

1123

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [7TH SEP. 1948]

[Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru]

So, we did that. But on the other hand, what did the Pakistan Government do? We have right from the beginning, whatever step we may have taken, we have taken in the line light; there has been no hiding about it. The House has been greatly interested in this matter of Kashmir. The Indian public has taken the greatest interest and rightly; the burden of it has fallen on our Government. It has been a heavy burden. I shall be frank and tell you why it has been heavy on me and more especially on my Government: not because military operations were involved, although that is always a burden but rather it has been a burden that we wanted to be sure that at no time we acted fundamentally against the principles we had so long proclaimed. May I take the House into my confidence that in the early stages towards the end of October and in November, and indeed subsequently, I was so much exercised over this fact that I felt intensely about Kashmir and if anything happened or was likely to happen to Kashmir which might have been, according to me, bad and disastrous for Kashmir, I would have suffered heart-break because of that. I was intensely interested, apart from larger reasons which the Government have, for emotional and personal reasons; I do not want to hide that, I am interested in Kashmir. Nevertheless, I tried to keep down the personal aspect and the emotional aspect and to consider it from the larger view-point of India's good and Kashmir's good I tried to consider the question from the point of view of not straying or drifting from the high principles which we had proclaimed in the past.

So, when this question first came up, I sought guidance, as I often did in other matters, from Mahatmaji and I went to him repeatedly and put to him my difficulties. The House knows that that apostle of non-violence was not a suitable guide in military matters,—and he said so,—but he undoubtedly always was a guide on the moral issue whatever the question might be. And so I put my difficulties and my Government's difficulties before him; and though it is not proper for me to drag in his name at this juncture in order to lessen my own responsibility or my Government's responsibility which is complete on this issue, I nevertheless mentioned this matter merely to show how the moral aspect of this question has always troubled me. And more specially when I saw in India all manner of things happening and which had happened in previous months which had brought India's name into disrepute, I was greatly troubled and worried and was anxious that we should keep straight as straight as we possibly could. Now this has been my attitude and on several occasions I had put it to others in public. And apart from rhetorical and vague insinuations I should like to know from anybody—friend, opponent or enemy—that from that day in the last week of October when we took that fateful decision to send out troops by air to Kashmir till today what is it we have done in Kashmir which from any point of view and from any standard is wrong.

I want an answer to that question. Individuals may have erred here and there; but I say that the Government of India and the Indian army as a whole have done something which was inevitable, and each step that we have taken has been an inevitable step which, if we had not taken it, would have brought a measure of disgrace to us. That is how I have ventured to look at this question of Kashmir. And when I find that on the other side the whole case that has been built up on what I venture to say is—using strong language—falsehood and deceit, am I wrong? That is what I ask this House and the country and the world to consider.

Now, therefore, this is the first fact to remember that all this case built up by Pakistan before the Security Council crumbles by this admission of theirs and by the proven fact that large armies of theirs are functioning in Kashmir and no doubt similar armies—if you like—and others connected with them functioned in Kashmir on Indian Union territory during these ten months or so. Every subsequent proceeding should be viewed from that aspect.

Now we come to the present, and I may again add one other thing in this connection. This has been an aggression; and if it is called—as according to their own admission it must be called—an aggression, then certain consequences ought to follow. Now my difficulty has been that in considering any question if you lose yourself in a forest of intricate detail sometimes you lose sight of the forest or the wood for the trees. There have been long discussions over the Kashmir issue and every aspect and phase and past and present history has been considered. But what has been the major point? I repeat that, because that I think is the fundamental factor. That is, the aggression of Pakistan on Indian Union territory; secondly, the denial of that fact of aggression; thirdly, the present admission of that fact. These are the governing factors of that situation. And this argument has gone on for long because these governing factors were slurred over and were not emphasised. We emphasise them of course, and the problem was discussed in intricate detail. Now if you start from a wrong premise in an argument obviously your whole argument goes wrong and you land yourself in difficulties. If you try to solve a problem without analysing or stating the nature of the problem how are you to solve it? And that has been the fundamental difficulty in this Kashmir business, that the fundamental issue has been slurred over and by-passed and passed over. Therefore we have been dealing with other matters which cannot yield a solution if we ignore the basic factor. Now the basic factor is out by the very admission of the Pakistan Government.

Now coming to this proposal of the United Nations Commission in India in regard to cease-fire and truce, etc., I shall not discuss that much because I do not wish at this moment to say anything in that regard which might embarrass that Commission. But certain papers are before you. I need hardly say that the proposal they had made was not welcomed by us with joy and enthusiasm; there were many matters in it which went against the grain. But we tried to look at this matter as coolly and dispassionately as possible with a view to establish peace on this harried State of Kashmir, to avoid needless suffering and shedding of blood; and we agreed to that cease-fire proposal after the Commission had been good enough to elucidate certain points which we had placed before them. We did not place too many points but only certain simple obvious points relating to the security of Kashmir. We placed these before them and they were good enough to tell us that that was their meaning. Thereupon we accepted that cease-fire proposal, accepted many things in it which we did not like, because we felt that both in the interest of peace and of international order it was a good thing for us to go a few steps forward even though some of the steps might be unwilling steps. In order to bring about this peace and to show that we were prepared to go as far as possible in order to meet the wishes of an international organisation like the United Nations; we did that. The original proposal of the United Nations [Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru] was given to us on the 14th August. The 15th was our Independence Day. Immediately after, on the 16th we met the members of the Commission and discussed the matter with them to find out exactly what they meant and told them exactly what we meant; and within four days of that i.e. on the 20th August we sent them our reply. We did not want to delay matters as they were anxious that they should not be delayed.

The Pakistan Government had also got these proposals on that identical time, on the 14th August at 3 or 4 p.m. They also had the same amount of time. But even after the return of the Commission to Pakistan—and some members of the Commission went in between to Karachi—they were not ready with their reply. And in fact it was by the pressure of events or the pressure of the Commission that ultimately they have given some kind of a reply yesterday. In between they gave long letters seeking elucidation etc. I am sorry I have not read the reply wholly yet because I got it just a little before coming here. But I have read the significant parts of it, and in effect it is a rejection of those proposals. Now the Commission had told us that these proposals stand as a whole and while they were prepared to discuss any matter and would gladly do so, it was difficult—in fact it was not possible for them to accept conditional acceptances, because if we make some conditions and Pakistan naturally makes other conditions, what is exactly accepted and by whom? So they said that this thing was to be accepted as it is after being understood or if there were conditions attached it is not an acceptance but a rejection. Now, therefore, what the Pakistan Government have done is tantamount to a rejection. It is for the Commission to decide and to say what they are going to do. It is not for me to advise them. So we arrive at a curious state of affairs, that the country which was an aggressor nation according to its own showing, now even rejects and refuses a proposal for a cease-fire, or puts forward conditions which are tantamount to that refusal.

Now certain international consequences should follow from all this. What consequences follow? In a somewhat narrow sphere all those officers and individuals who are participating in this aggressive war against India in Kashmir territory—there are of course Pakistani nationals and others there too—are participating not only in an aggressive war but in a war after a refusal of a United Nations Commission's proposal for a cease-fire. Their position is worthy of consideration.

That is all that I wish to say on the Kashmir issue. Naturally the story of Kashmir goes on. It has been a saga during these ten months or so, and there has been a great deal of suffering and blood and tears involved in it. There have been high moments also. But for us in India, and for the Government of India, it has been a period of trial and difficulty from many points of view: still, at no time have we considered that we were wrong or that we took a step which we could not fully justify in regard to Kashmir. It is in that faith that we are going to continue and may I say one word, that in all these consultations with the United Nations Commission and in other matters affecting Kashmir we have kept in close touch with the Kashmir Government under Sheikh Abdullah and consulted him in all these steps that we have taken. That was natural and that is inevitable in the circumstances that we should march together in full consultation with each other. Proceeding on that basis, we shall go ahead, whether in the military spheres or in other spheres, and I am quite convinced that, if we adhere to a right course, and that, if we do not stray from it, even from an opportunist point of view of some present advantage, we shall win through, and any country that bases its case on an essential falsehood cannot gain its ends.

United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan

Resolution adopted by the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan at its thirty ninth meeting on Friday, 13th August, 1948, in Karachi.

The United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan

Having given careful consideration to the points of view expressed by the Representatives of India and Pakistan regarding the situation in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, and

Being of the opinion that the prompt cessation of hostilities and the correction of conditions the continuance of which is likely to endanger international peace and security are essential to implementation of its endeavours to assist the Governments of India and Pakistan in effecting a final settlement of the situation,

Resolves to submit simultaneously to the Governments of India and Pakistan the following proposal:—

PART I

Cease-fire order

A. The Governments of India and Pakistan agree that their respective High Commands will issue separately and simultaneously a cease-fire order to apply to all forces under their control in the State of Jammu and Kashmir as of the earliest practicable date or dates to be mutually agreed upon within four days after these proposals have been accepted by both Governments.

B. The High Commands of the Indian and Pakistan forces agree to refrain from taking any measures that might augment the military potential of the forces under their control in the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

(For the purpose of these proposals "forces under their control" shall be considered to include all forces, organised and unorganised, fighting or participating in hostilities on their respective sides).

C. The Commanders-in-Chief of the Forces of India and Pakistan shall promptly confer regarding any necessary local changes in present dispositions which may facilitate the cease-fire.

D. In its discretion and as the Commission may find practicable, the Commission, will appoint military observers who under the authority of the Commission and with the cooperation of both Commands will supervise the observance of the cease-fire order.

E. The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree to appeal to their respective peoples to assist in creating and maintaining an atmosphere favourable to the promotion of further negotiations.

PART II

Truce Agreement

Simultaneously with the acceptance of the proposal for the immediate cessation of hostilities as outlined in Part I, both Governments accept the following principles as a basis for the formulation of a truce agreement, the details of which shall be worked out in discussion between their Representatives and the Commission.

A. 1. As the presence of troops of Pakistan in the territory of the State of Jammu and Kashmir constitutes a material change in the situation since it was represented by the Government of Pakistan before the Security Council, the Government of Pakistan agrees to withdraw its troops from that State.

2. The Government of Pakistan will use its best endeavour to secure the withdrawal from the State of Jammu and Kashmir of tribesmen and Pakistan nationals not normally resident therein who have entered the State for the purpose of fighting.

3. Pending a final solution, the territory evacuated by the Pakistan troops will be administered by the local authorities under the surveillance of the Commission.

B. 1. When the Commission shall have notified the Government of India that the tribesmen and Pakistan nationals referred to in Part II-A 2, hereof have withdrawn, thereby terminating the situation which was represented by the Government of India to the Security Council as having occasioned the presence of Indian forces in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, and further, that the Pakistan forces are being withdrawn from the State of Jammu and Kashmir, the Government of India agree to begin to withdraw the bulk of their forces from the States in stages to be agreed upon with the Commission.

2. Pending the acceptance of the conditions for a final settlement of the situation in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, the Indian Government will maintain within the lines existing at the moment of the cease-fire the minimum strength of its forces which in agreement with the Commission are considered necessary to assist local authorities in the observance of law and order. The Commission will have observers stationed where it deems necessary.

3. The Government of India will undertake to ensure that the Government of the States of Jammu and Kashmir will take all measures within their power to make it publicly known that peace, law and order will be safeguarded and that all human and political rights will be guaranteed.

C. 1. Upon signature, the full text of the Truce Agreement or a communique containing the principles thereof as agreed upon between the two Governments and the Commission, will be made public.

PART III

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan reaffirm their wish that the future status of the State of Jammu and Kashmir shall be determined in accordance with the will of the people and to that end, upon acceptance of the Truce Agreement both Governments agree to enter into consultations with the Commission to determine fair and equitable conditions whereby such free expression will be assured.

New Delhi, 20th August, 1948

Excellency,

On the 17th of August, my colleague, the Minister without Portfolio, and I discussed with you and your colleagues of the Commission now in Delhi the resolution which you had presented to us on the 14th instant. On the 18th, I had another discussion with you, in the course of which I tried to explain to you the doubts and difficulties which members of my Government, and representatives of the Government of Kashmir whom we consulted, had felt as the result of a preliminary but careful examination of the Commission's proposals.

2. During the several conferences that we had with the Commission when it first came to Delhi, we placed before it what we considered the basic fact of the situation which had led to the conflict in Kashmir. This fact was the unwarranted aggression, at first indirect and subsequently direct, of the Pakistan Government on Indian Dominion territory in Kashmir. The Pakistan Government denied this although it was common knowledge. In recent months very large forces of the Pakistan regular army have further entered Indian Union territory in Kashmir and opposed the Indian Army which was sent there for the defence of the State. This, we understand now, is admitted by the Pakistan Government, and yet there has been at no time any intimation to the Government of India by the Pakistan Government of this invasion. Indeed, there has been a continual denial and the Pakistan Government have evaded answering repeated inquiries from the Government of India.

In accordance with the resolution of the Security Council of the United Nations adopted on the 17th January, 1948, the Pakistan Government should have informed the Council immediately of any material change in the situation while the matter continued to be under the consideration of the Council. The invasion of the State by large forces of the regular Pakistan Army was a very material change in the situation, and yet no information of this was given, so far as we know, to the Security Council.

The Commission will appreciate that this conduct of the Pakistan Government is not only opposed to all moral codes as well as international law and usage, but has also created a very grave situation. It is only the earnest desire of my Government to avoid any extension of the field of conflict and to restore peace, that has led us to refrain from taking any action to meet the new situation that was created by this further intrusion of Pakistan armies into Jammu and Kashmir State. The presence of the Commission in India has naturally led us to hope that any arrangement sponsored by it would deal effectively with the present situation and prevent any recurrence of aggression.

3. Since our meeting of the 18th August, we have given the Commission's resolution our most earnest thought. There are many parts of it, which we should have preferred to be otherwise and more in keeping with the fundamental facts of the situation, especially the flagrant aggression of the Pakistan Government on Indian Union territory. We recognise, however, that, if a successful effort is to be made to create satisfactory conditions for a solution of the Kashmir problem without further bloodshed, we should concentrate on certain essentials only at present and seek safeguards in regard to them. It was in this spirit that I placed the following considerations before Your Excellency:—

(1) That paragraph A. 3 of Part II of the resolution should not be interpreted, or applied in practice, so as

(a) to bring into question the sovereignty of the Jammu and Kashmir Government, over the portion of their territory evacuated by Pakistan troops,

(b) to afford any recognition of the so-called "Azad Kashmir Government", or

(c) to enable this territory to be consolidated in any way during the period of truce to the disadvantage of the State.

(2) That from our point of view the effective insurance of the security of the State against external aggression, from which Kashmir has suffered so much during the last ten months, was of the most vital significance and no less important than the observance of internal law and order, and that, therefore, the withdrawal of Indian troops and the strength of Indian forces maintained in Kashmir should be conditioned by this overriding factor. Thus at any time the strength of the Indian forces maintained in Kashmir should be sufficient to ensure security against any form of external aggression as well as internal disorder.

(3) That as regards Part III, should it be decided to seek a solution of the future of the State by means of a plebiscite, Pakistan should have no part in the organisation and conduct of the plebiscite or in any other matter of internal administration in the State.

4. If I understood you correctly, A 3 of Part II of the resolution does not envisage the creation of any of the conditions to which we have objected in paragraph 3 (1) of this letter. In fact, you made it clear that the Commission was not competent to recognise the sovereignty of any authority over the evacuated areas other than that of the Jammu and Kashmir Government.

As regards paragraph 3(2), the paramount need for security is recognised by the Commission, and the time when the withdrawal of Indian forces from the State is to begin, the stages in which it is to be carried out and the strength of Indian forces to be retained in the State, are matters for settlement between the Commission and the Government of India.

Finally, you agreed that Part III as formulated, does not in any way recognise the right of Pakistan to have any part in a plebiscite.

5. In view of this clarification, my Government animated by a sincere desire to promote the cause of peace and thus to uphold the principles and prestige of the United Nations, have decided to accept the resolution.

Accept Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.

Prime Minister of India

His Excellency M. Josef Korbel,

Chairman

United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan,

New Delhi, 20th August, 1948

Excellency,

You will recall that in our interview with the Commission on the 17th August, I dealt at some length with the position of the sparsely populated and mountainous region of the Jammu and Kashmir State in the north. The authority of the Government of Jammu and Kashmir over this region as a whole has not been challenged or disturbed, except by roving bands of hostiles, or in some places like Skardu which have been occupied by irregulars or Pakistan troops. The Commission's resolution, as you agreed in the course of our interview on the 18th, does not deal with the problem of administration or defence in this large area. We desire that, after Pakistan troops and irregulars have withdrawn from the territory, the responsibility for the administration of the evacuated areas should revert to the Government of Jammu and Kashmir and that for defence to us. (The only exception that we should be prepared to accept would be Gilgit). We must be free to maintain garrisons at selected points in this area for the dual purpose of preventing the incursion of tribesmen, who obey no authority, and to guard the main trade routes from the State into Central Asia.

Accept, Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.

UNITED NATIONS COMMISSION FOR INDIA AND PAKISTAN

Faridkot House, New Delhi, 25th August, 1948

Excellency,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your communication dated August 20, 1948, regarding the terms of the Resolution of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan which the Commission presented to you on the 14th of August 1948.

The Commission requests me to convey to Your Excellency its view that the interpretation of the Resolution as expressed in paragraph 4 of your letter coincides with its own interpretation, it being understood that as regards point (1) (c) the local people of the evacuated territory will have the freedom of legitimate political activity. In this connection, the term "evacuated territory" refers to those territories in the State of Jammu and Kashmir which are at present under the effective control of the Pakistan High Command,

The Commission wishes me to express to Your Excellency its sincere satisfaction that the Government of India has accepted the Resolution and appreciates the spirit in which this decision has been taken.

I wish to avail myself of this opportunity to renew to Your Excellency the assurances of my highest consideration.

Chairman.

UNITED NATIONS COMMISSION FOR INDIA AND PAKISTAN
Faridkot House, New Delhi, 25th August 1948

Excellency,

I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 20 August 1948 relating to the sparsely populated and mountainous region of the State of Jammu and Kashmir in the North.

The Commission wishes me to confirm that, due to the peculiar conditions of this area, it did not specifically deal with the military aspect of the problem in its Resolution of 13 August 1948. It believes, however, that the question raised in your letter could be considered in the implementation of the Resolution.

Accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

JOSEF KORBEL,
Chairman.

H. E. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister and Minister for External Affairs, Government of India,
New Delhi.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): May I suggest that the statement which the Honourable the Premier has made and the statement laid on the table may be circulated to us by this evening.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All that can be assured is that as soon as possible the statement and the speech will be circulated. I cannot say whether they will be circulated before the evening.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Is there going to be no statement on Hyderabad?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes, there will be one.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): With regard to those Foreign Officers who are fighting on behalf of Pakistan, may I know if they are British nationals?

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Some of them, yes.

Shri B. Das: Shame on England!

STATEMENT ON HYDERABAD

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Minister for External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations): I shall now address the House, Sir, on an entirely different topic, unrelated completely, but it is difficult really to separate things in the organic life of the country. So one thing affects another. But in effect what I am going to say now in regard to Hyderabad is something which stands apart from what I have said about Kashmir and does not bear any relation to it.

For over a year now, we have been making earnest attempts to come to a peaceful and satisfactory settlement with the Government of Hyderabad. In November last, our efforts led to a Stand-Still Agreement for a year. We hoped that this would be followed up soon by a final and satisfactory settlement. In our view, this settlement could only be based on the establishment of responsible Government in the State and accession to India. That accession meant of course, that the State would be an autonomous unit in the Indian Union enjoying the same powers and privileges as other autonomous units. What we offered Hyderabad was, in fact, an honourable partnership in the great brotherhood of the Indian Union.

2. Popular responsible Government in Hyderabad or in any other State or Province of India has long been our objective and we are glad to say that it is very near fulfilment all over India, except for the State of Hyderabad. It was inconceivable to us that, in the modern age, and in the heart of India which is pulsating with a new freedom, there should be a territory deprived of this freedom and indefinitely under autocratic rule.

3. As for accession, it was equally clear to us that a territory like Hyderabad, surrounded on all sides by the Indian Union and with no outlet to the rest of the world must necessarily be part of that Indian Union. Historically and culturally, it had to be a part, but geographic and economic reasons were even more peremptory in this matter and they could not be ignored, whatever the wishes of particular individuals or groups of individuals. Any other relationship between Hyderabad and the rest of India would involve continuing suspicion and, therefore, an ever-present fear of conflict. A State does not become independent by merely declaring itself to be so. Independence connotes certain relationships with independent States and recognition by them. India could never agree to Hyderabad having independent relations with any other power for that would endanger her own security. Historically, Hyderabad has at no time been independent. Practically, in the circumstances of today, it cannot be independent.

4. Further, in conformity with the principles that we have repeatedly claimed, we were agreeable that the future of Hyderabad should be determined after a reference to its people, provided that such a reference was made under free conditions. It cannot possibly be made under the conditions of terror which prevail in Hyderabad today.

5. Our repeated attempts at a settlement, which came near to success on one or two occasions, ended unfortunately in failure. The reasons for this were obvious to us; there were sinister forces at work in Hyderabad State which were determined not to allow any agreement with the Indian Union. These forces, led by completely irresponsible persons, have progressively gained in strength and now completely control the Government. The resources of the State were and are being mobilised for war in every way. The State army has been increased and irregular armies have been allowed to grow up rapidly. Arms and ammunition were smuggled in from abroad; this process, in which a number of foreign adventurers have been taking a prominent part, is continuing. No country, situated as India is, would have tolerated these warlike preparations by a State in the very heart of India. Nevertheless, the present Government of India patiently continued negotiations in the hope that they would lead to some settlement. The only other step they took was to prevent, in so far as they could, the flow of warlike material into Hyderabad.

6. The private armies that grew up in Hyderabad, notably the Razakars, have become more and more aggressive and brutal within the State and sometimes across its borders, in India. I do not propose to give a full account of this here as full particulars are available partly in the White Paper on Hyderabad which the Deputy Prime Minister presented to the House earlier during the session, and partly in other published documents. This growing terrorism and frightfulness inside Hyderabad State against all those, Muslims and non-Muslims, who are opposed to the Razakars and their allies, both official and non-official, has produced a very grave situation and has had its repercussions on the bordering areas of the Union and in India generally. At the present moment, our immediate and most anxious preoccupation is this mounting wave of violence and anarchy inside Hyderabad State.

7. A full account of Razakar activities will take long. I shall mention only some recent incidents and a few figures. The inhabitants of a village inside the State, which, under the spirited leadership of its headman, had offered stout resistance to these gangsters, were, when resistance became impossible owing to the exhaustion of ammunition, put to the sword and the village itself burnt. The brave headman was decapitated and his head carried about a pole. In another village, men, women and children were collected in one spot and shot dead by the Razakars and the Nizam's police.

A large party of villagers fleeing in bullock carts to some haven of safety in India, was brutally attacked; the men were beaten up and the women abducted.

A train was held up, the passengers looted and a number of coaches burnt. The House is aware of the attacks on our troops seeking to enter our enclaves within State territory and of Razakar incursions into our own villages along the border.

According to reports received yesterday, Razakars and a unit of the regular Hyderabad army with armoured cars went into action against Indian troops on Indian territory. They were repulsed; one armoured car was destroyed and one officer and 85 other ranks taken prisoner. The incident further illustrates the mounting aggression against India.

Since this provocative campaign of violence started, according to information which has so far reached us, over 70 villages have been attacked inside the State, about 150 incursions have occurred into our territory, hundreds of persons have been killed, a large number injured and many women raped or abducted, 12 trains attacked, property worth over a crore of rupees looted. Hundreds of thousands have fled the State in order to seek refuge in the neighbouring Provinces of India.

8. The House will agree that no civilised Government can permit such atrocities to continue to be perpetrated with impunity within the geographical heart of India; for this affects not only the security, honour, life and property of the law abiding inhabitants of Hyderabad, but also the internal peace and order of India. We cannot have a campaign of murder, arson, rape and loot going on in Hyderabad without rousing communal passion in India and jeopardising the peace of the Dominion. Let the House consider what our predecessors in the Government of India would have done in these circumstances. For far less, they would have intervened drastically; the lapse of the Paramountcy of the British Crown cannot alter the organic inter-relation of Hyderabad and the power whose responsibility for the security of India as a whole is, and should continue to be unquestioned, or the mutual obligations of the one to the other. We have been patient and forbearing in the hope that good sense would prevail and a peaceful solution be found. This hope has proved to be vain and not only is peace inside the State or on its borders nowhere in sight but peace elsewhere in India is seriously threatened.

9. We have been criticised for having been too patient and too forbearing. That criticism may have some justification. But we have tried to act on the principle that no effort should be spared at any time to avoid conflict and to secure a settlement by peaceful methods. Except in the last resort, any other course would be a sad contradiction of the ideals and principles to which we have repeatedly pledged ourselves from the beginning to the termination of our struggle for freedom from foreign rule. But we cannot blind ourselves to cruel facts or shirk the hard responsibilities that such facts might impose. At the present moment, let me repeat the issue that compels immediate priority is that of security of life and honour in Hyderabad and the stoppage of the brutal terrorism that persists in that State. Other issues may well be taken up later, for indeed peace and order are essential for the consideration of other questions.

10. The Hyderabad Government have demonstrated both their unwillingness and their incapacity to put down the terrorism that has made the life of the law abiding citizens of the State so extremely insecure that large numbers of them are fleeing to the neighbouring provinces and States. We feel that internal security in Hyderabad will not be assured at this stage unless our troops are stationed at Secunderabad as they used to be until India withdrew them early this year. In reply to a recent letter from the Nizam, His Excellency the Governor General made this suggestion to His Exalted Highness who has replied that no such action is necessary as conditions in Hyderabad are entirely normal. This, of course, is contrary to all known facts and we have now asked the Nizam for the last time to disband the Razakars immediately and, as suggested by His Excellency the Governor-General, to facilitate the return of our troops to Secunderabad, in such strength as may be necessary to restore law and order in Hyderabad State. If they are so stationed, there will be a sense of security in the people and the terrorist activities of private armies will cease.

May I add a few words more. First of all I should like to state to this House and place before this country that we have tried to look upon this question of Hyderabad as far as possible entirely away from the communal point of view and I should like the country to look upon it in this non-communal way. I know, as I have just stated, that communal passions have been roused. But it should be the business of all of us, to whatever religion or community we might belong, to lift this question away from the communal plane and to consider it from other, and, I think more valid and more basic points of view.

We wish to send our troops to Secunderabad to ensure security in Hyderabad, the security of all the people there, whether they are Hindus or Muslims, or they belong to any other religion or group. If subsequently freedom comes to Hyderabad, it must come to all equally and not to a particular group. Therefore I would like to lay stress on this and I would like those organs of public opinion who can influence the public so much at any time, and more specially during times of stress and strain, always to lay stress on this non-communal aspect. Also, whatever steps we may have to take in the nature of police action or other, our instructions are going to be definite and clear that any kind of communal trouble from any side will be most sternly dealt with.

There has been, as I mentioned to this House, a large migration from Hyderabad of terror-stricken people. I do not know how many have come out, but in the Central Provinces even now there are large camps of tens of thousands—probably several hundred thousand people may have come out in the course of the last two months. Now, if I may give advice—although the giving of this advice means the assumption of a certain responsibility—I would give this advice and take the risk, that people should not migrate from Hyderabad or from any part, wherever they may be.

[Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru]

An Honourable Member: And get butchered.

The Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru: Somebody said get butchered. I can only speak in my own terms. If I am there I would not migrate, what ever happens—butchery or no butchery. I think that when we have to face a serious situation, nothing can be worse than running away from it: and especially in the present instance I see no benefit in regard to that matter. Because, the person who runs away exposes himself to that very danger more than a person who sits or stands normally speaking. Of course I am not considering exceptional cases and some things may happen here and there. But my general point is this, that we may be on the eve of grave happenings in this country, and because of that our Government has paid the greatest and the deepest attention to these matters. We have discussed them, not only amongst ourselves but with our advisers: we have considered various possible consequences, for every action has to be judged from the possible consequences thereof. We cannot just take an action in the air. So we have done that. And having done that, we have come to certain conclusions which I am placing before you. At any time I would have advised the country to be calm and poised and I refuse to be panicky and refuse to run away from any difficult situation. At this time particularly I do call upon with all the earnestness in me that we should maintain our peace and calm and face any situation that might arise not only in that calm and collected and disciplined way but also always remembering the fundamental principles and lessons that our Master placed before us.

AJMER-MERWARA TENANCY AND LAND RECORDS BILL—contd.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House will now proceed with the further consideration of the motion moved by the Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram on the 6th September re the Ajmer-Merwara Tenancy and Land Records Bill.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): Sir, yesterday evening when the House rose for the day I was discussing the soundness of the relative claims of the Istimrardars and their tenants to the proprietary title in the soil. These estates though originally eleven in number, gradually increased to seventyfour and are covering 1,376 out of a total of 2,400 square miles of the area of the province. I had drawn the attention of the honourable House to a very very patent fact that the British officer, Mr. Cavendish as early as in 1829, after elaborate enquiry, had come to the conclusion that these feudal chiefs had originally been life grantees of the estates from the Moghul rulers of the day in lieu of certain military services to be rendered to the Moghul emperors, that subsequently the Maharattas commuted the military service in lieu of tons of money, and fixed an assessment over these estates. When the Ajmer district was ceded to the British in the year 1818 the problem arose as to what recognition was to be given to the feudal chiefs. It was remarked by Mr. Cavendish and Mr. MacKenzie that their enquiries showed that the feudal chiefs appeared in these estates merely as strangers on behalf of the rulers of the day, and that the tenants had been in possession of the holdings for generations and they had valid rights of occupancy therein. Notwithstanding the result of the enquiries of Mr. Cavendish and Mr. MacKenzie, which was totally in favour of the tenants, we find that Mr. Sutherland came about the year 1874, and the full proprietary title of these feudal chiefs in these estates was recognized, and the sanads that were granted to the feudal chiefs in the year 1874 laid down that they were to remain as the full proprietors of these estates and further that the government of the day waived its right to enhance the assessment and fixed the assessment in perpetuity. The same assessment was recognized as was made by the Maharattas, the then rulers of the day. The Maharattas were calling this assessment by the name of mamala. They were making a number of additional recoveries, but the British Government of the day chose to relinquish all its claims to these additional recoveries and recognise the assessment. This recognition of assessment and fixation of it, and the waiver of the right to enhance it in perpetuity has caused an enormous loss to the public revenues. This assessment was made, as I submitted a minute back, a century before the British came and it was this very amount that was recognised.

The other right that was recognised in the sanad was that on succession to these estates, each successor was to give a certain nazarana to the British Government. But even that right of recovery of the nazarana remained a mere dead letter and was formally relinquished in the year 1923. It shows that while the British Government was very particular and anxious to give every possible concession to these feudal chiefs, it altogether ignored the rights, the valuable rights, of the cultivator in the holdings. As I had pointed out yesterday, in condition No. 9 of the sanad the istimrardar and his successors in title had bound themselves to respect and protect the rights of the cultivator, which clearly shows that there were certain valuable rights of the cultivators existing at the time which required protection at the hands of the rulers of the day.

But, Sir, notwithstanding this condition No. 9 in the sanad what do we find? When Mr. Sutherland came in, Regulation II of 1877 was enacted and a law, so far as the tenants were concerned, was incorporated in the form of Section 21 of Regulation II of 1877, which laid down that all occupiers of cultivable and non-cultivable land comprised within the istimrardari estates of Ajmer-Merwara were to be presumed to be tenants at will until the contrary was proved. This contrary has not been proved in any case, and there is no record where the court of law has found that the burden has been satisfactorily discharged by any one of the tenants. The result was that from 1877 up to the present day, these tenants have been victims to a process of ruthless exploitation and have been more or less mere slaves in these estates. From 1877 up to the year 1931 we find that these tenants were being exploited in a number of ways, and the demands from the feudal chiefs were increasing day by day. There was consequently a big agitation and we find that in 1932 in one of the premier istimrardari estates of Masuda there was a serious agitation and also the declaration of a non-rent campaign. The ruthless might of the British rulers of the day in the shape of their representative, the Chief Commissioner whose position in the old set up of things was no less than that of a Nawab or a ruler of the neighbouring Rajputana State.....

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, is there a quorum in the House?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: The result has been that for over a century these down trodden and poverty-stricken tenants have been subjected to a ruthless process of exploitation at the hands of their feudal chiefs 12 Noon who have been enjoying full liberty and license under the patronage extended to them by the representative of the bureaucratic Government, that is the Chief Commissioner. When this agitation grew and came to a head in the year 1932, it was suppressed with a ruthless wave of repression and subsequently an Istimrardari Inquiry Committee was appointed in the year 1932. This Committee was presided over by the Assistant Commissioner, Mr. De la Fargue. No representation was given to the representatives of the tenants in this Committee, for whose benefit it had been brought into existence. We find that excluding the Assistant Commissioner as the Chairman of this Committee, there were three officials—the S. D. Os. of the different Divisions of Ajmer-Merwara—and there was one non-official representative, Rai Bahadur Munshi Mitthan Lal who was the standing counsel of the istimrardars. The result was that the recommendations made by the De la Fargue Committee were of a very, very reactionary type. They proposed to enhance the powers of these istimrardars still further. They proposed that they may be able to recover their dues—the rent, the cesses, etc.—as land revenue; there were many other recommendations which were more or less of a very, very reactionary character, wholly in favour of the istimrardars and against the tenants. Naturally, no Government, in the face of the serious agitation going on, could venture to accept these reactionary recommendations of the De la Fargue Committee. Notwithstanding this, no ameliorative reform was undertaken by the administration of the day with the result that the misery and sufferings of the tenants were piling more and more. In the year 1937 Mr. C. J. Irwin, a retired experienced revenue officer, was called from C. P. and he was entrusted with the job of inquiring into all these estates. He submitted a report and within the four corners of this report he also made a draft of a tenancy legislation which he recommended to the Government of the day to replace the existing "black Act" of 1877. Now, Sir what happened? The Government found that the report submitted by Mr. Irwin was wholly in favour of the tenants and therefore it was put in cold storage. That clearly shows that there was not only connivance but definite collusion between the representatives of the Administration and the feudal chiefs. This report did not see the light of the day till 1946. It was only after repeated interpellations by me on the floor of this House and only after the advent of the Interim Government, on which Congress was represented, that this Report was placed on the Table of the House. As the agitation was growing, a special officer was appointed by the Government of India to make enquiries for the third time and that special officer is the draftsman of the present Bill which has been sponsored by the Honourable Minister for Food and Agriculture.

Sir, I had submitted yesterday and I repeat it today, that this Tenancy Bill, so far as its drafting is concerned, is all right. It is a good draft, made on modern lines and if it is compared with tenancy legislation in other Provinces it is a distinct improvement, but still the question is that in 1948, a year after India has attained independence, when this Bill is being sponsored by the Congress Government, the drafting of this Bill should have been based on the assumption that zamindari exists in Ajmer-Merwara. I heard it argued very vehemently a few days ago, in the course of the debate on inflation, that the abolition of zamindari and prohibition and other schemes of public utility should, for the time being, be deferred. Similarly, it may be argued here also that the abolition of istimrardari in Ajmer-Merwara may be treated on the same lines. I do not think it is justifiable for the Congress to shelve these schemes of public utility for any time whatsoever. So far as Ajmer-Merwara is concerned, this problem is very very simple and need not be deferred at all. This question was agitated on two occasions by me on the floor of this House and the Special Officer, Mr. Belgrami was asked to submit his own views after full enquiry into the whole question. He submitted to the Government of India a very detailed and comprehensive and elaborate report. The conclusion to which he has reached, I do not agree with, but that report contains all the same all material, facts based upon history, facts upon the recognised Settlement reports of the Government etc. This report was referred to a Committee representative of Istimrardars and Kisans and I was also a member of this Committee. The representatives of Istimrardars on the Committee refused to participate. They refused to give any opinion. Therefore, all the opinion was from and on behalf of the representatives of Kisans. The other day, in reply to a question by me, the Honourable Minister stated that it was not the opinion of the Committee but of individual members. But I would like to ask him to bear this fact in mind that Istimrardars and their representatives refused to participate in the proceedings of this Committee or give any opinion. All other representatives gave their opinion and that was that the Government of India should accept the principle of abolition of Istimrardari in unequivocal terms and should forthwith appoint a Committee which would enquire into the facts and circumstances of the case and which may be called upon to submit a report as to the terms and time at which this abolition can take place. Though that report was submitted, as far as I remember, more than six months ago, no action was taken by the Government of India. The Advisory Council of the Chief Commissioner, of which I am also a member, has appointed a Sub-Committee during its last session about three months ago, and in the Resolution that was passed it was stated in unequivocal terms that the Advisory Council accepts the principle of abolition and it has appointed a committee to go into this matter and report as to the terms and the time at which it can take place. Now, Sir, the Honourable Minister stated in reply to my interpellation that the Government of India is awaiting the Committee's report, as also that the Committee has been asked to submit its Report and the Chief Commissioner has been asked to give his opinion by the 30th September.

Now, Sir, my submission is this: this report is likely to be received before the Select Committee examines the provisions of this Bill. So far as the provisions of this Bill are concerned, I have already stated that I hesitate to welcome them, because the Bill does not go far enough because it starts on the presumption of the non-existence of zamindari in Ajmer-Merwara. But still it is a distinct advance upon the unsatisfactory state of affairs prevailing today. One of the great achievements we wanted incorporated in this Bill is the abolition of cesses and lags beyond the share of rent. If you will refer to the Irwin Bill in 1937, no less than 150 lags and cesses were recovered by the feudal chiefs with the result that though the share of rent receivable by the landlord or the feudal chief was only one-third, the other one-third was being snatched away from the tenants in the shape of these cesses and lags, whose number was innumerable. I would not like to waste the time of the honourable House by giving an exhaustive list of these cesses and lags, but I would confine myself to saying that they are more or less of a barbarous age and reminiscent of medieval times. Some of these cesses are payable at the time of payment of rent along with a share of rent while the others are payable occasionally. For example, there are four cesses: Neetha, Chaunri, Khansa and Ramnam Chaunri is a marriage tax. Every resident of the village, if there is a marriage of a son or daughter, must make presents to the feudal chief. Then if there is any feast either on the occasion of death or marriage the tenant and every resident of the village must present his feudal chief with dishes; and it will amuse the House to know that these dishes should be the same in number as the kind of food that is served. For instance, if it is laddoos that are prepared a number of dishes should go to the feudal chief, and not only to the feudal chief but to his retinue which consists of a number of persons. If it is halwa a number of dishes must be furnished. Recently in the last few years these dishes in kind have been commuted in cash; and while the feudal chief receives them in cash his retinue must receive in kind. Similarly if there is any marriage in the family of the feudal chief the average tenant and resident of the village must make his presents to the chief. Then on ceremonial occasions and festivals like Diwali and Holi, etc. the tenant and resident is expected to make some presents in the name of Ramnam. These are the conditions there. Mr. Irwin prepared an exhaustive list of these cesses in 1937 and he said that these cesses differ from village to village and in some cases from tenant to tenant. So the great benefit that is sought to be conferred by the provisions of this Bill upon the tenants is that numerous lags and cesses which were being paid in addition to the share of the rent that is prescribed by the Bill have been prohibited and their recovery is made illegal.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [7TH SEP. 1948]

[Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava]

Then in this Bill there is a chapter on fundamental rights of the tenant. That chapter consists of clauses 6 to 8; and all those who have experience of tenancy law will wonder why a chapter like this should be included here. That itself shows to what extent the tenants have been exploited in the past.

Then I will mention certain things which the Select Committee should keep in mind. Clause 72 of the Bill provides the scale of rent. The scheme of the Bill is to divide the tenants into four kinds, and that is in clauses 9 to 18,—hereditary and non-occupancy tenants, occupancy tenants and ex-proprietary tenants. Under clause 72 hereditary and non-occupancy tenants will have to pay one-third of the share of the produce, the occupancy tenants one-fourth and the ex-proprietary tenants two-ninth. This is an exorbitant rate and must be brought down to one-fifth, one-sixth and two-fifteenth in the case of the three kinds of tenants specified here. Similarly the Minister should amplify the scope and ambit of this Bill and there should be a provision to allow the tenant to acquire full rights of ownership after the lapse of a certain period and on complying with certain conditions as to compensation as might be deemed just and proper in the particular circumstances and local conditions. Such a provision would make unnecessary any separate legislation for abolition of zamindari which must come sooner or later.

Again security of tenure which had not existed is provided in clauses 100 to 115. These also need careful scrutiny in select Committee and it should be made impossible for the feudal chief to eject a tenant.

My last suggestion is this. From the time the settlement operations commenced in the istimardari area and which were suspended after some time, that is, from 1940 onwards there have been a number of cases of arbitrary ejectment by the feudal chiefs. Whenever a tenant did not submit to their orders they took the law in their own hands and ejected him from his holding. These cases of arbitrary ejectment should be scrutinised after this Bill becomes law and the persons concerned must either be restored to their holdings or amply compensated.

Sir, I apologise for taking so much time but there were certain points which could not be known to my honourable friends and which I wanted to explain. I request the Honourable Minister to amplify and widen the scope of the Bill so that there may be automatic abolition of zamindari after a certain period and after certain conditions have been complied with by tenants who have been proved to be in possession of their holdings for generations. Sir, I support the motion.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Gwalior State): Sir, I am very glad that this Bill has been prepared and it goes to the Select Committee, and I support the motion.

Sir, I have travelled widely in this small territory of Ajmer-Merwara and I know the heart of the peasants. I was very much amazed to see the condition of the peasants. Really they were like the slaves of the feudal chiefs who treated them with great harshness. There were large numbers of ejectments and they could even be exterminated from their villages. Very curious kinds of cesses were levied on them as was narrated by the honourable member from Ajmer-Merwara. In fact, there is great lawlessness and even if there were any laws, they were lawless laws. We used to wonder how this small piece of territory is administered, which is directly under the administration of the Central Government. It was called a non-regulated province, that means, a lawless province. It is a matter of great importance that this Bill has at last been brought forward and we shall be able to remove all these hardships of the peasants there. I have nothing more to add except that this is a very important measure in relieving the hardships of the peasants in this unfortunate territory, which has suffered for over a century under the British rule.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I must thank my honourable friend Mr. Mukut Binari Lal for his great efforts in the cause of the improvement of the position of the tenantry of Ajmer-Merwara and the relief he has brought to them through this Bill, and I support this reference to the Select Committee. My friend has given a peep into the feudal India and medieval India which runs today. British rule brought in barbarian rule also. It was the policy of the British to confer the dignity of Rajas and Maharajas on these Jagirdars and Zamindars and make them buy motor cars and British goods. They had to extort the tenants. Now that the Congress has brought home the ideal of equality of opportunity for all, we hope the situation will change and these Jagirdars will not extort. Therefore, while I congratulate my honourable friend that he has brought lots of advantages to his people, he has to satisfy himself with this agrarian measure now. He can't abolish the Jagirdars and uplift the tenants in a day. He had himself admitted that his people are feudal villagers. The Congress Government in spite of its good will cannot in one stroke abolish all Zamindars and nationalise all the agricultural lands in India. We have found that it has been difficult in the case of Bihar, Orissa or United Provinces to nationalise the Zamindaris, because the necessary money is not forthcoming from the Honourable the Finance Minister. The Bihar Government wanted only sixty crores of Rupees from the Government in the shape of bonds or otherwise from the Government of India. The Government could not agree. Therefore, we should go slow. Once Ajmer-Merwara has advanced forward, as my honourable friend the Minister has said, when the Congress comes to the decision that they will abolish Zamindari and nationalise land as they want to nationalise other industries,—if the national finances will permit that.—I am sure the people of Ajmer-Merwara will benefit equally with the people of India. For the most backward tract in India to claim the most advanced liberation, I think it is perhaps asking too much.

I find in clause 10 a Jagirdar who own 6,500 acres will get 437½ acres for himself, his family and dependants. This comes to about seven and a half per cent of land owned by him. We can easily understand how many dependents and relations there are and out of 437½ acres, about 150 or 200 acres would be only left to the Jagirdar. We are all familiar with the practice in Rajputana and it is no surprise if a Jagirdar has half-a-dozen wives. Another notable improvement is clause 85 under which a tenant could save himself from extortion and cheating. On the deposit of some money, the Tahsildar will go to the spot and settle the division of produce between the tenant and the landlord. I welcome those provisions.

Before the 15th of August 1947, the British Residents were using Ajmer-Merwara as their hunting ground. It was more barbarous than many of the Rajputana States. As soon as the Congress movement permeates into those parts, I hope there will be a definite improvement of the conditions of the village folks. With these words, I support the motion.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram (Minister for Food and Agriculture): Sir, in view of the general agreement expressed by the speakers with the main purpose behind the Bill, I do not propose to take up much of the time of the House. With regard to the details referred to by my honourable friends Mr. Mukut Bihari Lal and Mr. B. Das, these are matters which the Select Committee will thoroughly go into. I think there is only one major point I may mention and that is with regard to what the honourable member from Ajmer-Merwara said with regard to the abolition of the Zamindari system in Ajmer-Merwara. The Government and the Congress are pledged to the principle of the abolition of the Zamindari system. With regard to Ajmer-Merwara, as the honourable member from Ajmer Merwara himself has realised, unless the tenants who today are tenants at will and whose rights have not been properly recorded, are given a definite status, it is not possible simply to abolish the large areas, somewhere between 1,000 and 1,300 square miles, the rights of these Zamindari system, with nobody on whom to confer the right over land. Over tenants have not been properly recorded. Unless we go fully into this matter, and have a proper survey of the whole area and determine who has the right in which part of the land, it is not possible to build a superstructure of complete ownership of land by these ryots, with no intermediaries between them and the Government. As a matter of fact, a large part of the work to be done under this Tenancy Bill may come to be in the way of preparation for the abolition of the Zamindari system. Even in this Bill, there are about a dozen chapters which would remain even when the Zamindari system is abolished. Of course, there will be some modification of the present provisions. At present a Committee has been appointed by the Advisory Council of Ajmer-Merwara to go into the details.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): May I ask how the lack of proper records stands in the abolition permanently of zamindari?

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Because when the zamindar is abolished, who takes the land? We must have a complete survey of the area and a complete record has to be maintained as to who is the tenant. All these are not tenants as in the United Provinces. These are tenants at will; they could be ejected and they have been ejected. Now who is the legitimate owner of a particular holding has properly to be gone into and given a certain status and recognized as occupants. You cannot abolish the zamindari system in that way. Therefore, it has been regarded as necessary to have a detailed survey of the land, to have a detailed examination as to the rights of various tenants.

As I was saying a Committee has been appointed and this Committee will go into the details and its report will be of great help to Government also. Then it has to be realized that Government must plan, as I suppose it is being planned in some provinces as to on what lines the future agricultural operations will be carried out. Will they be on an individual basis or co-operative basis or on some other basis? Under what conditions production can be improved and increased after the abolition of zamindari? Therefore, exactly what system of agriculture, will operate is a matter to be decided before we can easily abolish the zamindari system. Therefore I would move that this Bill be referred to the representative Select Committee I have proposed to report within a week after the commencement of the next session.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): I suggest that Mr. Sidhva's name might be added to the list of members of the Select Committee. I hope the Honourable Minister will have no objection.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: I have no objection. His name may be added.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U.P.: Muslim): The Honourable Minister has just said that it is the Government policy to abolish zamindari. If he proposes to make the kisans peasant proprietors, then I think it will be worse than the zamindari system, because in the place of two or three or ten zamindars, he will create thousands of zamindars. So on a point of information I would ask the Honourable Minister to explain what he means by the abolition of zamindari and if he wants to replace big zamindars and create smaller zamindars?

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: The question of abolition of zamindari is not under discussion now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill to declare and amend the law relating to agricultural tenancies, record-of-rights and other matters connected therewith in Ajmer-Merwara, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Shri Ajit Prasad Jain, Shri Ram Sahai, Shri Gokalbhai Daulatram Bhatt, Shri H. V. Kamath, Dr. P. S. Deshmukh, Ch. Ranbir Singh, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Shri Mahavir Tyagi, Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava, Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena, Shri V. C. Kesava Rao, Shrimati G. Durgabai, Shrimati Renuka Ray, Shri Satish Chandra Samanta, Shri Kishorimohan Tripathi, Shri V. S. Sarwate, Shri Brajeshwar Prasad, Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu, Begum Aizaz Rasul, Shri Mohanlal Gantam, Mr. R. K. Sidhva and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the last day of the first week of the next Budget Session and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

INDIAN TARIFF (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Finance and Commerce):

Sir, I move:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

I do not think that the House will thank me if I were to inflict a long speech in the atmosphere that prevails in the House this morning. I have circulated a fairly lengthy statement, explaining the various proposals, and I think that honourable members would have no objection, if I were to explain very briefly the purport of this Bill.

Sir, if honourable members would turn to the Statement of Objects and Reasons, appended to this Bill, they would find that the object of the Bill is two-fold. The first is to give protection to 12 industries enumerated in that list and secondly to extend the period of protection by three months, in the case of an industry to which protection was given last December by this House. So far as the 12 industries listed in the Statement of Objects and Reasons are concerned, I might explain that with the exception of two, these are cases in which the proposal amounts merely to the conversion of the existing revenue duty into a protective duty without any change at all in the rate of the duty. Now in the case of steel baling hoops and non-ferrous metals alone the question of any tariff adjustment comes in. In the case of non-ferrous metals again the proposal is to convert the revenue duty into a protective duty in respect of certain items, and provide for certain tariff adjustments in regard to other items. Now these are industries who applied for protection as usual to the Tariff Board and the Tariff Board after careful enquiry recommended that protection be given in terms of the present Bill. And this Bill merely seeks to carry out that recommendation. I do not think that I should be justified now to give any details about those cases where the proposal involves merely a conversion from revenue duty to protective duty except for the purpose of pointing out the difference between having a particular rate as a revenue duty and having the very rate repeated as a protective duty. Now, Sir, under section 4 of the Indian Tariff Act, the Government are authorised, if necessary, to adjust the rate of a protective duty, that is to say once the House allows a particular rate to be fixed as a protective duty with reference to any particular industry, then under section 4 of the Tariff Act, the Government have got the authority whenever necessary either to increase that duty or reduce it according to the circumstances prevailing at any time. That is the main advantage, apart from the psychological factor, namely that an industry is assured of protection. So in regard to these items, I do not think I need say anything more.

As regards the two other items where tariff adjustments are proposed to be made, in the case of steel baling hoops the protection is conditional upon the particular firm satisfying some of the requirements laid down by the Tariff Board and accepted by the Government. In the first place that industry is at the present moment run by a particular firm as a private enterprise and it has been laid down by the Tariff Board that this firm would qualify for protection only if it were to convert itself into a public limited company. So here again the protection is contingent upon this firm carrying out this particular recommendation. There are other recommendations also on the compliance with which this protection would become effective.

As regards the other item, namely the non-ferrous metals, the proposals are twofold. First we aim at the importation of certain virgin metals and scraps free of duty in order to serve as raw materials for the industries concerned. Secondly, certain protective duties are proposed for the purpose of giving protection to the resulting industry.

Now there is one point to which I should make reference, because I know the House attaches some importance to that, in regard to these two items where a tariff adjustment is proposed. There are differential duties proposed in the Bill; a lower rate of duty being contemplated in the case of articles imported from the United Kingdom and higher rates being intended to be applied against similar articles imported from countries other than the United Kingdom. No one likes this feature of the Bill and no one dislikes it more than I do. But the fact remains that under the present Indo-U.K. Trade Agreement, we have no option in the matter. But I can assure the Honourable House that the question of revising the Indo-U.K. Trade Agreement is under active consideration. But as the House is aware wider issues will have to be decided in defining our political relations with the United Kingdom and this question may have to be considered in that context. So I would beg of the House not to take exception to this feature of the Bill because we are absolutely helpless in the matter, but to wait for a few months during which period we will have made sufficient progress either in the revision of the Trade Agreement itself, or, in the wider context of constitutional issues we may have to consider some more comprehensive treaty of alliance and friendship, including trade relations. Sir, I move.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

If honourable members can be brief it might be possible to close before Lunch. We can even sit up till 1-30 p.m. if necessary.

Mr. R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): I do not want to speak at length on this matter. I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable the Minister that this Tariff Board was started for protecting our industries and whenever any question is referred to the Board a common reference is made by the Government to them. I will read an extract to inform the House about the aim and object of the Government in sending these cases to the Tariff Board, particularly bearing in mind whether the industry is worth being supported, whether it is on national lines and whether the consumers' interests are safeguarded. The extract reads:

"That, having regard to the natural or economic advantages enjoyed by the industry and its actual or probable costs, it is likely within a reasonable time to develop sufficiently to be able to carry on successfully without protection or State Assistance: or

That it is an industry to which it is desirable in the national interest to grant protection or assistance and that the probable cost of such protection or assistance to the community is not excessive. Where a claim to protection or assistance is found to be established, i.e., if condition (1) and condition (2) (a) or (b) are satisfied, the Board will recommend—

(i) whether, at what rate and in respect of what articles or class or description of articles, a protective duty should be imposed. . . ."

Then it says that the protective duty should not be for more than three years.

Here there are certain items brought before us and a very exhaustive survey has been made by the Tariff Board in recommending or rejecting some of the proposals sent by the Government. I wish the Government would supply all these copies to honourable members so that they may study them in advance, because I find no literature is being supplied to the members in this respect. It is a very important matter so far as the import duty is concerned, as well as protective duty and revenue, which after all affects the ordinary consumer and which in turn affects the economic condition of the country, and it is not proper that the House should be given just a two-sheet Bill that such and such items require protective duties.

I was glad yesterday that at least we received in the early morning a note from the office showing for what these protective duties are required. But that is not sufficient. I would have really desired all members to be in full possession of the report because we must know what type of industry it is, whether it is flourishing and whether it is in the national interests. I want the House to take an interest in it. As far as glucose is concerned, I will tell the House that the glucose industry can produce today much more than what is required by the whole of India. I will give you some figures in support of this. Let me say that glucose is manufactured for alcohol, vinegar and particularly for confectionery preparations. Glucose is also meant for medicinal purposes. The import of glucose is 2,500 tons per year, whereas the three glucose factories in India have an outturn capacity of 3,600 tons per year. In other words they can turn out 1,000 tons more than what we require during the year. But instead of being able to produce 2,500 tons they produce only 346 tons. The reason is that glucose is manufactured from maize and that maize, due to shortage of food, is not available. What should be done? If the Government's intention is to protect the industry, then this food difficulty will go on for five years. If you are out to protect the industry, then you must certainly protect it by giving it a certain allotment for carrying on. After all you must do some good to your industry. But nothing is mentioned by Government whether they are going to give them more raw material required for the purpose.

I therefore feel, though I do not dispute that protective duties are necessary for the expansion of industry, that we should let them flourish so that we may have such industries for a short time to come and we may not have to depend on foreign articles. Today glucose is imported from foreign markets in large quantities. To what extent are you going to help this industry? I am glad to find that they can produce much more than you require and yet you cannot give them the raw materials. Your excuse is good, namely, that since it is required for food, the maize cannot be spared. But how long can you put that excuse in the forefront, although it is reasonable, tangible and necessary. You will have to set aside a certain portion of this commodity for the industry. The Anand Factory produces glucose at Rs. 44 per ton while the Rampur factory produces at Rs. 54 per ton and the Tariff Board recommended that this difference required looking into. I wonder whether Government, after giving protection will ask that factory why their cost is Rs. 10 more? While giving protection they must look in all directions to see that our industry prospers and is brought to such a level as to be able to compete with the foreign article. Today in this matter, even with c.i.f. price we can compete with the foreign goods provided Government gives the industry proper facilities.

Coming to starch: This is required for the textile industry in very large quantities and apart from that it is required for the paper industry also. Here also maize is required. During the war many such factories sprang up. There are in all 45 such factories. Out of that 28 are licensed factories; and those factories can produce today 40,000 tons of starch but their actual turn out is very little, because the raw material is not available. I was reading some literature recently and I found that in America they have discovered an alternative to maize. I would like to ask what our Forest Research Institute at Dehra Dun is doing. They have found that tamarind was a suitable alternative to maize. But no attention has been paid and no experiment has been done by our Institute at Dehra Dun, which is run at a high cost. They have not taken the trouble to find out whether there are any alternatives which can be useful for the promotion and expansion of our industry. . . .

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Was it tamarind seeds?

Mr. R. K. Sidhva: Yes, Sir. Our existing factories should manufacture as much starch as is required by all these industries without any foreign import. And yet we are not able to do anything. If you are going to give half-hearted support to our industries, it is wasting our money, in addition to the consumers' money. The Tariff Board merely give all this material. The reports were made in 1947 and I do not know why they have not come to us earlier. These facts should have been given to us earlier. The Tariff Board report was signed in January 1947. I do not know why such a long time should have been taken and the House has not been given an opportunity to go over the matter. Protection is not a revenue duty. It means the industry should prosper and for that purpose the Tariff Board have made certain suggestions. I would like to know whether Government have taken into consideration those suggestions or not. Otherwise protection has no meaning.

As regards steel baling hoops they were never known in this country. Before the war we always imported these hoops for jute and cotton from foreign countries. During the war one or two industries came into existence and they can produce a large quantity. Steel hoops are a very important industry. The J. K. Industries have a very fine plant and they can produce something like 16,000 tons but certain billets and raw materials are not available. 20,000 tons are required. I shall not go into the question of chloroform, potassium permanganate and sulphurous industries that require help. The Tariff Board has dismissed the demand of the manufacturers of chloroform. They say that they can stand on their own legs and they have not made out a case. As far as sulphuric acid etc. are concerned they desire that protection should be given. My point therefore in conclusion is that I want to tell the Government that merely bringing a Bill for giving a protective duty will not help the industry. We are anxious that we should be self-supporting in regard to all the articles imported from foreign countries. We have in our country certain industries and it is regrettable that the Government have not come forward with a definite plan whereby we can stop the foreign imports, help our economic condition and see that our consumers' interests are safeguarded and also to a very large extent give a fillip to our indigenous industries. I, therefore, would like to know from the Honourable Minister whether he has

I P.M. taken any interest as regards the other recommendations of the Tariff Board, besides the suggestion and recommendation made for a protective duty. Sir, with these words I support the Bill.

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana (Madras: General): Sir, I rise to support the Bill that has been placed before the House for consideration . . .

Prof. Shibhan Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, I do not think it would be proper to finish the Bill in half an hour. There are many speakers and amendments. It would be better if we adjourn now and meet for a short while after Lunch.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): Sir, if need be we shall sit till 2 o'clock and finish the business.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think the general sense of the House is to continue and finish the business as soon as possible.

Several Honourable Members: Yes, Sir.

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana: Sir, my support in respect of this Bill is very conditional, as I consider that some of these items have been placed before us—as the Honourable Minister himself stated—so as to be in consistency with an agreement that has been signed and therefore there does not seem to be any option, as the agreement has already been signed and this has to be ratified. But although this has been done in consistency with the agreement that has been signed, this gives us an opportunity to go into the whole question of the Tariff Board and the policy laid down by the Government in respect of giving protection to various industries. I feel that in deciding the tariffs in respect of industries, the policy of encouraging rural industries has been completely neglected and I think that it is absolutely necessary and essential that the Government must have a policy that there shall be a very heavy tariff in respect of those industries that would be built up in our rural areas. Unless and until the Government decides on a rural economic policy or a cottage industry policy in respect of which there ought not to be any kind of concession or consideration of either a political or academic nature for the purpose of importing or exporting articles, it is not possible for us to develop our rural industries. We have got certain rural industries which can be developed, for instance porcelain, glass and similar industries. During the war there was a great deal of activity everywhere throughout India to support on a cottage basis a few glass industries. The moment the war was over various kinds of glasses began to be imported from outside countries and most of these rural glass factories had to be closed, as they had been organised on cottage lines. If we want the glass industry to compete with foreign industry, it is necessary for us to secure the machinery from outside and it is not possible for us to get this machinery in the near future. It should have been absolutely necessary and it should have been inevitable for the Government to see that heavy tariffs had been imposed, so that these small glass industries here and there were not killed on account of the cheap material that was imported or is being still imported from outside. If Government had decided that this industry should be treated as a rural industry, probably most of these small factories that had been started could have been saved and continued. In most of the countries even small porcelain factories have been organised by the Government on a rural basis. If we had started a small porcelain industry on a rural basis the import of porcelain from outside and its being sold to the rural population would have been easily stopped. If the Tariff Board decides hereafter that there should be a tariff duty, either protective or preventive, it should be done in terms of our industry being divided into two sections, namely rural and urban, and on the basis of things being considered completely necessary for rural or urban consumption as well as for state consumption. Then it would be better. I would request the Commerce Minister to review the tariff policy in the light of what I have said just now.

In the present Bill it has been said that in respect of starch and glucose it is only that what has been decided already is now being put into action. There is no special tariff imposed. But I was listening to the views expressed by my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva. I find that he is in favour of the starch industry being encouraged. I feel that I cannot subscribe to that view. My honourable friend Mr. Sidhva himself stated that in this industry maize is profusely used. Maize is an article of food. There is a food shortage. The starch is used only for textile and paper purposes. The textile and paper industries can afford to pay more and they can buy the starch from outside. Why should we not use the maize that is being utilised for this starch in our country itself? Therefore it is absolutely necessary that we should see that whatever food articles are now used for industrial purposes are obtained from outside, and the industry alone should be asked to bear more charges by importing these from outside. Our maize should not be used for industrial purposes. One may or may not agree with this view, but this is essential now as otherwise it will have grave repercussions on our food policy. Therefore this aspect should also be taken into consideration.

In the matter of giving this tariff protection I find that the Government have got a machinery, namely the Tariff Board. The Tariff Board goes into the details of the type of articles to be protected and the type of protection to be given, and evidence is collected by them. They go from place to place, collect evidence, examine the industrialists and various technical personnel, and finally they come to certain conclusions. In spite of all that and in spite of the heavy protection given I see in the market that even now the foreign articles are better in quality than the Indian articles. What is the reason? Although heavy protection is given to many of the industries, although a good subsidy is given, a good bounty is given, and a high tariff imposed, even then the quality of the article is not improving. The reason may be that the industrialists first ask for tariff and then sleep over the matter and do not try to improve the quality of their article. That can be the only reason. Or it may be that although it is a very inferior article in quality people are willing to buy them and they are assured of their profits; and that is why they do not go into the question of improving the quality of their article. If you go to the market and ask for a motor to run a small press or a factory, the electrician advises you that the Indian motor is no good—I take it that the electrician is not interested in getting the motors from outside and getting them consumed. But the fact is there that after two or three years the Indian motors are not giving as efficient service as foreign motors are giving. Here therefore is an item: motors were given very good protection and motors are now produced in large numbers. There was an assurance that the motor industry will go on and improve. There is also a possibility of our becoming self-supporting in regard to the motor industry. But in the matter of quality it is not so reassuring as in the matter of number. It is quite possible the Government are now thinking of numbers and not of quality. It is probably because the number takes away the money it is thought that it does not matter if the quality is not paid attention to. The quality is as important as numbers. The present protection is only to attempt at perfection. Unless and until Government pays sufficient attention to the matter of making every article as perfect as possible it is not right to give the protection. It is good that we have also got such an amount of articles from outside in order to make our people feel what an inferior article is and what a superior article is. For the purpose of encouraging and infusing confidence in our people and also for giving a kind of warning to our industrialists, we must also see that this tariff is imposed in such a fashion that there is always competition for producing an article and that that competition acts as a kind of check if anybody tries to produce an inferior article and tries to give it to the people in the name of patriotism and in the name of swadeshi. Although I am in favour of swadeshi and feel that everything ought to be swadeshi, that incentive should not be killed and it ought to be encouraged. In this matter there is a heavy responsibility on the Government.

It is generally argued that the quality is impaired on account of the non-availability of technical skill or to the non-availability of experience. These should be supplied and can be supplied only by the agency of the Government. For instance it is said that we have got to give sufficient protection to our plywood industry. It is true that we should give sufficient protection to the plywood industry. But the industry is now giving a certain proportion of the plywood that is necessary for the purpose of making cases and things like that. This article is already tacked on to the various articles that we have to import from outside. Unless and until this plywood comes in profuse quantity it is not possible for making a good money out of this and out of the other manufactured articles. It is absolutely necessary that before we give protection to the industry we should see that we get as much plywood as possible from outside so that all our tea growers may have sufficient cases to export it outside. I hope the Commerce Minister will take into consideration the views that I have expressed and try to bring about a review of the tariff policy in the next session that we are going to have. With these words I give my support to the motion.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I am a whole-hogger protectionist and I was glad to find my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva and myself together and of one mind today. I remember the days when he and I were together in the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce where he and I fought for protection of Industries in India and for the industrial development of the country.

I am glad the Honourable the Commerce Minister referred to the hated preferential tariff to UIC and some dominions and I wish with him that in six or nine months preferential duty would be abolished.

I have only one information to seek from the Honourable the Commerce Minister. Most of the protection given is now being extended up to March 1949 or upto March 1950. I wish to know how Government is going to renew it. If it is to be under Section 4(1), are they going to refer it to the Tariff Board or will the Honourable Commerce Minister do it by executive action in his Department? Then somebody will have to see that the protective duties continue so that the industries are not affected.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I have tabled some amendments which I will move at a later stage.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I am sorry that my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva is not in his seat just now. He first of all made a complaint that all the papers, particularly the Reports of the Tariff Board, are not supplied to honourable members of this House. I plead guilty to that charge. But I am afraid we are not free agents in the matter because as a result of paper shortage the number of copies of the Tariff Board Report that used to be printed has been considerably cut down, and all that we do at the moment is to keep the library supplied with a sufficient number of sets of these Reports. And from what enquiries I was in a position to make it does not seem that they constitute very popular literature.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I suggest to the Honourable Minister that in keeping with the earlier practice, as soon as Government comes to a conclusion and passes a resolution, to print and circulate the report as far as possible. If it is possible the practice may be pursued hereafter.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I was coming to that point. I want to remind the House that in all such cases the Government publish their Resolutions as soon as they come to conclusions on the basis of the Tariff Board's recommendations. For instance, all the proposals that are now contained in this Bill are covered by Government Resolutions which were published in the Gazette of India on the 12th April, on the 10th May and on the 4th June. As a matter of fact, those Resolutions give a full summary of the recommendations of the Tariff Board and also indicate the conclusions which Government had arrived at with reference to all those various recommendations. If my honourable friends were to properly utilise the Gazette, a copy of which is sent to all of us regularly, then perhaps a wide awake member like my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva would be in a position to call for further information from the Ministry concerned. I can promise him that the moment any inquiry of this kind is received, it will be promptly attended to and whatever assistance is possible to be given by the Ministry will be gladly supplied.

Sir, my honourable friend referred to a few specific points to indicate that there are several steps other than mere tariff amendments or adjustments, that have to be taken for the purpose of giving protection to some of these industries. As a matter of fact, if my honourable friends refer to the Resolutions that I have mentioned, they will find that some of the recommendations which do not require any tariff adjustment are tabulated there, and it is also indicated there as to what action Government have taken or propose to take in those matters. For instance, take the case of tamarind seed being utilised for purposes of starch; actually research has been undertaken in this matter.

Another point was made by my honourable friend that these proposals might have been brought forward much earlier. All that I have to remind him about is that when a Tariff Board Report is received, it is subjected to a very careful scrutiny. In the first instance it is examined by a Committee of officers representing primarily the Finance, Commerce and Industries Ministries, and sometimes the Food Ministry and other Ministries also come into the picture. It is after they have completed their examination that the three individual Ministers—the Minister of Finance, the Minister for Industries and Supplies, and the Commerce Minister—individually as Ministers, have to go into the whole matter. It is only when these three Ministers come to an agreement that the matter is taken to the Cabinet. I wanted to indicate this procedure for the purpose of satisfying the House that the utmost care is taken, not merely by the Tariff Board for the purpose of inquiring into these claims for protection, but also by the Government, before they come to any conclusion. This, of course, is a rather dilatory procedure but it cannot be helped.

But apart from that, my honourable friend would remember that the partition of the country and the stand-still agreement between India and Pakistan that continued for some time and which in a way laid down some kind of a uniform economic policy so to say for the time being, all these factors made things rather uncertain. We could not therefore come forward with any specific proposals of this kind for the assent of this House earlier.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Honourable Minister consider the desirability of placing these matters before the Standing Committee also?

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I shall certainly consider that suggestion.

There is just one point which my honourable friend Mr. B. Das referred to, to which I should like to reply. My friend wanted to know that having regard to the short period of time during which the protection would be in operation, what did the Government propose to do if, for instance, protection was to be continued thereafter. Well, invariably in such cases the matter has to go up to the Tariff Board once again. The Government is not expected to go on continuing protection by taking advantage of any provision of the law that there may exist—I do not suppose there is any such law which empowers Government to do so, but even assuming there was—Government would never think of availing themselves of that power and avoid coming up before this House. But apart from that one other important point that I should like to mention is that according to a recent decision, the Tariff Board's sphere of activity has been considerably widened. Hitherto the Tariff Board was concerned only with examining a particular application when it was sent to them for inquiry and after they had made their recommendation they had nothing further to do with that particular industry. But now according to a recent decision the Tariff Board would be expected to keep a continuous watch on the protected industries with a view to securing fulfilment of the commitments that may have been made to effect improvements in production, improvement and maintenance of standards etc. so as to avoid any protected industry becoming an undue burden on the community. As they go on looking into the affairs of each industry, they would be in a position to give whatever advice they think necessary for the purpose of improving matters. This, I take it, will be approved by the House as a step that will remove much of the misapprehension that seems to prevail in regard to some of the points mentioned by some of my friends. Heretofore the Tariff Board was a kind of a detached body which was concerned only in making an inquiry and making its recommendations; hereafter it will be more closely associated with industries for which protection has been recommended by them and adopted by the Government with the approval of this House. In future they will be acting as a kind of 'friend, philosopher and guide' for these industries, and I think that is a feature of the future functions of the Tariff Board which will be approved by the House and will lead to a lot of improvement in the industries themselves.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1934, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Shri B. Das: Sir, on a point of information, how can the Honourable Minister who has introduced the Bill, move an amendment? Some other Minister has to move it.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: It has been done before.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is permissible, though it is advisable for the Honourable Minister to ask some other member to do it. I do not see any illegality in it; this point came before the House on a prior occasion and it was ruled that it is open to the Minister to bring forward an amendment to his own motion, but it is always desirable to have it moved in the name of some other member.

Any way that amendment is in Clause 1. We shall now take up Clause 2 first. There is an amendment by Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena. As it seeks to enhance the protective duty it requires the sanction of the Governor-General. May I know if he has obtained it?

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I have applied to the Secretary to ask for permission.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No reply has been received. No sanction has been given. I rule the amendment out of order.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I may say a few words, Sir, I think. I am sorry that sanction has not been received, but I have given notice of an amendment to Clause 2 which would have removed the discrimination between British and non-British goods and there would have been the same tariff duty provided for all.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have given my ruling. I may explain to the honourable member, if necessary. Whatever may be his object, I am not questioning the bona fides or the advantages. The duty that was imposed was 30 per cent for British goods. The honourable member wants to raise it from 30 per cent to 40 per cent. It is imposition of additional duty. That is not permissible. Therefore, whatever the justification, sanction of the Governor-General is necessary.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Sir, I do not want to move my amendment, but I wish to say a few words on this subject. I am very sorry that in this Bill, probably the first tariff Bill that we as a sovereign legislature are passing, we should have retained this Imperial Preference. Today the House is in no mood to discuss this at length. We are probably aware of the momentous statement made by the Honourable Prime Minister this morning. Probably our troops have marched towards Hyderabad. So we are in an indifferent mood, but this is an important Bill. When I read the debate in the Assembly on the Ottawa Agreement, I have seen volumes and volumes of [Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena.] speeches by honourable members and probably the Honourable Commerce Minister himself was one of those who spoke against it. It is an irony of fate that today he should sponsor a Bill siding with Imperial Preference. It is an irony of fate that he should state that because our relations with Britain have not been settled, therefore, it is not possible to have this Treaty annulled. I do not know what particular kind of association with Britain we are trying to have. I should tell the Honourable Minister that after passing the Resolution declaring India as a sovereign Independent Republic, it cannot have any other relationship with the British Commonwealth and as such, when we have decided that we shall be free, I see no reason whatsoever to come and say that because our relationship with Britain has not been settled, we want to continue the Treaty. Whatever else may happen, I think the Resolution that we have passed that India shall be an Independent Sovereign Republic should not be changed. After our constitution is passed, and after we are thoroughly independent, perhaps we shall be in a better position to have bargaining power and determine our relations with Britain, America or anybody else. But I do not want that because of this Treaty we should keep this Imperial Preference and this special relationship with Britain. Britain is a free country and with America her relations are more intimate. So when India is free we can certainly determine our relationship. But simply because our relations with Britain are not yet settled, I do not agree that Imperial Preference should be continued. I want to protest against this Bill. It is really something against our cherished ideals and we have been opposed to Imperial Preference not today, but since 1932 when the Ottawa Act was passed. I want this clause to be removed from the Bill and I wish that the Honourable Minister could see his way to annul this treaty which forces us to keep these things. It is not proper for India as a sovereign nation to discriminate between Britain and other countries. She should treat all countries on a par. We have already declared that we are a neutral country and we should not align ourselves with any particular bloc. In view of that declaration, we must remove all semblances of a suspicion about special treatment to Britain. I therefore wish that the Honourable Minister would see his way to amend this clause to see that there is no Imperial Preference in this Bill.

Then, Sir, this Bill imposes protective duties. I am not opposed to protective duties as such, but I do want that deserving industries should be given protection. There was a time when we should have given protection to any industry, but with our freedom the position is changed. My experience, as I have repeatedly stated in the case of the sugar industry, is the time has come when the protection should be removed. It should be able to compete in the world market. We should not give protection to everything even though it may be inefficient. India could have a sugar market which will be able to compete with the world market; we can produce enough for our requirements and even for export outside. So I am not wholly in favour of protection being granted indiscriminately after we have become a free country. I wish to see a different kind of protection. We must give protection where we could not compete with the world market. Items included here deserve protection and I support this. In fact, I want this duty to be increased, as they show preference to Britain. Although the principle of protection is not one which we can go the whole hog, still I think protection must be given to industries which are in an infant state and need to be developed. Secondly, I do wish that the Honourable Minister will see his way to remove this blot of imperial preference from the Statute Book. With these few words, I appeal to the Honourable Minister to give us an assurance that he would not push this principle through.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I do not know whether my honourable friend was in the House when I made my opening remarks.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I was.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: I thought I had anticipated him there. I pointed out that we have inherited this Indo-U.K. Agreement from the previous Government.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: We can end that inheritance.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Yes, we can. As a matter of fact I said the question of the revision of this Agreement is under consideration, and I also pointed out that the matter may assume a very much wider scope. That would depend upon what political relations would subsist between India and U.K. The whole question deserves to be considered comprehensively; and as a matter of fact we are not doing anything new. In a sense we are adopting a principle which has been known in the past. If my honourable friend would look up the Indian Tariff Act, and the Schedule attached thereto, he would find in each page a column which says: Preferential rate of duty if the article is produced or manufactured in one column: "U.K." and in another column: "British colonies." So my honourable friend's objection goes to the very root of the Indian Tariff Act and it does not relate to this small Bill.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: What I say is this: our relations with Britain need not affect this thing.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: It is rather a complicated matter. I may as well point out—though I do not attach any great importance to that Pact—that India also gets certain tariff advantages as an equal partner from the colonies and the British Empire as a quid pro quo, although opinions differ as to the value of those concessions. It would not do for us unilaterally to put an end to one part of the Agreement while the other part of the Agreement remains in operation.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: I am asking for the abolition of the whole thing.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: As a matter of fact, that requires very comprehensive examination and as I promised him, the examination is being done at the moment. I do not think I need reply to any other point.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I know if all these items which are embodied in this Bill are mentioned specifically in the Agreement with Britain for special preference?

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: These are items that are covered by the Agreement. I have the Agreement before me and they specify there the nature of the articles in regard to which preferential rates of duty will be allowed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is no new article?

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 2 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 1 of the Bill, the words, brackets and figure 'of sub-section (1)' be omitted."

These words are actually redundant.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (2) of clause 1 of the Bill, the words, brackets and figure 'of sub section (1)' be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 1, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 1, as amended, was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House now stands adjourned Sine die.

The Assembly then adjourned Sine die.
