Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): My difficulty also is that of Mr. Mody though I am not myself a capitalist as he is. There is an uncovered deficit of Rs. 185 crores in the capital expenditure of the current year. There is another Rs. 134 crores uncovered in the Budget for next year. What I have not been able to understand, Sir, is how the Finance Minister is going to cover this. He wants us to believe that the Government is very anxious to fight inflation, but to leave uncovered expenditure like this is in my humble opinion just the contrary. Our cash balances, Sir, are dwindling every day. The Government is not in a position to borrow in the open market. Rs. 163 crores according to the figures supplied to us, will be our cash balance on the 31st March 1949, and according to the Budget it will be Rs. 58 crores only at the end of next year. Excepting that we have some Rs. 800 crores in the sterling balances, I would like very much to know from the Honourable Minister as to what are the prospects for 1950-51. Sir, I know that the borrowing capacity of the Government and the public at large has been very materially affected during the last two or three years. There were half a dozen sources from which we could always draw on this account. Firstly, the Ruling Princes contributed a lot to the loans of the Government as well as the public. They are now just disappearing from the horizon. Secondly, the non-Ruling Princes and the big zamindars were our second line of procurement for capital. They are also disappearing. Thirdly, the British capitalist in India, because he was entrenched here in his business on account of the political advantages that he had, was also interested in investing money here. Some of the money that he made in his business—not all—was invested in India in expanding his business here. He also, Sir, to the best of my knowledge is not very much interested now. (Kazi Syed Karimuddin: 'Sorry!') The next biggest asset in India was the Punjab. I have some figures showing that as much as 40 to 45 per cent. was contributed by the middle-class from that province towards new investments before the years 1945 and 1946. That Punjab is today lying low. We have not even sympathy from our Ministers. Some Ministers say that they have no legal or moral responsibility for the losses that we have incurred. Some even say that they do not welcome them here in Delhi. Why are they coming here? I do not want to say more because it is my own Government and my own feelings are too well known to the Ministers concerned.

Now, Sir, I have got another grouse against the Provincial Governments' loans and advances that are being given by my honourable Minister. The Provincial Finance Ministers at the Conference held in October in Delhi, were asked to go slow regarding their plans for prohibition and the abolishment of zamindari. They have done nothing of that sort. The other day, our Deputy Prime Minister declared in Madras that we are not in a position to have nationalization for some years and people who are talking of nationalization, when we have not the means to do it, are only crying for leadership. But it was only four days after that, in that very town of Madras that one of the Provincial Ministers gets up and tells them in the Assembly: "we do not agree to that", and that they are going to amend the Electricity Bill, which they cannot do without the sanction of the Government of India, to reduce the compensation for undertakings which they want to buy from the local people there—the electricity undertakings. This is the response which the Provincial Ministers are giving to the Centre.

Under these circumstances, is not it our duty on a basis of reciprocity to tell these gentlemen sitting there that we also have to look to our interests in the Centre: that we are not going to borrow for you from the market because we cannot: we cannot impose new taxes: please look after yourself for this capital expenditure that you want.

My proposal is very simple. Let these Provincial Ministers try their level best to raise as much money as they can through the Savings Certificates and the National Certificates in their own provinces and let the Centre agree to allow them to utilise that for their capital expenditure. We will have no grouse against them. But let it not be said that they are treating the Central Exchequer, in the form of a currency printing press as if we have a bottomless pit here for them to draw upon any time they like.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member may continue his speech after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly reassembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Shri S. V. Krishnamurthi Rao (one of the panel of the Chairmen) in the Chair.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: Sir, before adjourning for Lunch I was developing the point that our capital resources are drying up one after another. I mentioned the Princes, the ruling and the non-ruling. I mentioned the Britishers who were or are engaged in business here and the class of people who are generally called the higher middle classes in the Punjab. Having dried up all these resources I wanted to enquire from the Honourable Minister as to where he is looking to for the tapping of the resources which he wants to use for capital expenditure. As you know, the money that is still open for collection for this type of work is either with the war babies called the black-marketeers or some class of agriculturists. The agriculturist as a class are not used to save money and put it in the bank or invest them. These war babies now have the shadow of the Investigation Commission hovering over them. Though our Government have recently decided to make some amendments of the Law to allow the Investigation Commission to have some reasonable compromises with them I do not know how long it will take for that procedure to be adopted. Regarding the agriculturist classes unless the Congress Party men as a whole, who are really well known to these people, take upon themselves this task which is entirely theirs and which they are shirking—I am as responsible as other members of the House—we cannot tap those resources in any way.....

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Where are those resources?

Shri B. L. Sondhi: I know it better...

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): He knows his own people better.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: There is another difficulty from which I would like my honourable friend to help me out. Before the war sometime between 1931 and 1933 the present paper, steel and cement factories began their expansion. By 1936 or 1937 they had practically got all their expansion schemes completed. They took full advantage of it when the war came but those companies which were floated during the war—there were huge floatations then—they could not do anything except put their money in government securities during the war, because capital goods were not available. After the war the capital goods market became the seller's market with the result that the estimate of all these new concerns became out of date. The result was that these new companies have not been able to launch the schemes for which they had gone into the market. I respectfully submit that something needs to be done in this direction, because unless these companies are allowed to function there will hardly be any additional production. The old companies having worked at a very high speed, sometimes double and treble shifts, their machinery is rotting. They are not producing as much as they would normally have done and no additional production is forthcoming. I for one am very much doubtful if we will be able to keep pace with our requirements.

I now pass on to say something about food. As a layman I have found that this subsidy of 32 crores yearly, for the current and the next year, is to my mind a political hush money. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: 'To whom?') To you and me. This is for the urban areas. Most of the money is being spent to buy cheaper grain for the urban people. I would therefore request that this matter be looked at from this point of view. After all we are not here to cater for only 5 per cent. which is really the urban population in India. My friend Prof. Ranga who is so solicitous about the agriculturist and the rural areas, I hope, will go into this matter. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: 'It is for the Food Minister. Who am I?') As I have been able to calculate this does not save more than two to three annas a week per man. It comes to about Rs. 7 to 10 in a year. I would therefore request that something must be done in this direction. Moreover there is another angle from which I would like to view this question: The provincial assemblies and governments are crying for more and more food. Why not utilise this huge amount and ask those provincial governments to utilise this amount for producing more grain in their own provinces. After all our Food Minister here cannot produce more grain. He has to work through the provincial governments and if the provinces take up this question in right earnest this deficit of ten per cent is not difficult to make up.

[Shri B. L. Sondhi]

I have a word now to say about the civil expenditure. I find that as compared with undivided India the budget under civil expenditure for this year is more by 13 crores. Most of it has been consumed or is to be consumed by additional posts. I would therefore request the Honourable Minister to use his pruning knife, if he could put it through.

Delhi is well known for its roundabouts but our Secretariat is a big manufactory of red-tapism. It takes six men to dispose of a file which in another country like America or England would have been disposed of by two persons.

I now come to the criticism made in this House by two honourable friends, Mr. Goenka and Mr. Khandubhai Desai, regarding the capital gains tax. They are very much afraid that the companies and their managing agents will swindle the ordinary shareholder in a manner against which there is no remedy here. They forget that there is an office here called Examiner of Capital Issues and no new company can reconstruct its capital without a previous sanction of this Department. That is the negative side. On the positive side when an ordinary middle class investor looks at this picture what does he find? Now that the maximum dividend on ordinary shares has been limited to 6 per cent. and in view of the fact that all new companies cannot declare any dividends for the first few years, what is the attraction for an ordinary investor like you and me to put his money, if he has any, in a new concern if he cannot even participate in the capital appreciation of his shares? From that point of view—not for the sake of the big businessmen, not for managing agents who can be looked after by this Department but for the sake of the common investor—I offer my grateful thanks to the Honourable Minister for boldly taking up this question.

There is another criticism here in regard to which I would like to say a word or two. Rs. 82 crores has been the additional expenditure during the current year. The Honourable Minister has been able to meet it on account of the windfall revenue which he has been able to get. But if we go into the details of these Rs. 82 crores I for one would not blame the Honourable the Finance Minister. Rs. 34 crores out of that is the amount spent for defence. I do not think there would be any person in this House who would not say that the amount was more than justified on account of our Kashmir operations. Then with the drought in certain parts of India we had to import more food. This covers an extra expenditure of Rs. 12 crores. Then, the pre-partition expenditure comes to near about Rs. 21 crores. Relief and Rehabilitation takes another Rs. 10 crores. And we are left only with Rs. 3 or 4 crores.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member's time is up.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: To close, I would beg this House to take into consideration one more thing and see things from a different angle. We have now termed our Army people, whom we had once called the hired soldiers of the British, as our national heroes; the policemen who used to treat us with their batons are our honoured officers today; the I.C.S. and the Provincial Service people who put us behind the bars are our most trusted colleagues today. Sir, the only class of people who helped us when we were going for fighting the elections and put money into our pockets to cover our expenses. I mean the business classes, I am not mentioning the class of black-market-eers but the common businessmen,—why are we not changing our angle of vision regarding these people? We may again need them tomorrow. The elections are coming very soon. I would therefore beg this House not to create a new class of Harijans but to try to assimilate them and make them as good or as bad as we are.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): It was my proud privilege to assert for the first time the right of speaking in Hindustani in this House. But the House will excuse me if I speak in English today to make myself intelligible to my honourable friend the Finance Minister to whom Hindustani continues to be as foreign as English is to me. There is no doubt about the fact that the general discussion on the Budget provides an excellent opportunity to members of this House to unburden themselves of the grievances that they keep on nursing against the administration. I see that some members have fully availed of their opportunity. There are others who have showered unqualified praises or congratulations on the Finance Minister for the proposals that he has put forward. I do not propose to emulate the example of the members who belong to either of these categories. I only wish to claim the right of calling a spade a spade. To my mind the Budget that has been presented this time is neither a rich man's budget nor a poor man's budget. It is a compromise budget if I may say so, or an attempt on the part of the honourable Minister to repair the great damage which was done by the Liaquat Ali budget two years back. I do not know whether that budget had the blessings of my honourable friend—some said it had—but I am glad that he has sought to repair the damage which was done to the financial fabric of this country by that budget.

So far, strong objection has been taken to the increase in the postal rates. I think this is common ground that in that respect the status quo should be maintained, and I have a shrewd suspicion that the honourable the Finance Minister when he proposed an increase in the rate of post-cards he never meant it; it was merely a bargaining point. He probably thought that he would oblige the House by withdrawing the proposed increase in the rate of post-card, and I hope he will do so.

I would like to apply four tests to the budget and I would like to confine my remarks to these four questions namely, (1) whether this budget seeks to remove unemployment in the country, (2) whether this budget seeks to help the removal of illiteracy prevailing in the country, (3) whether this budget helps to solve the housing problem of the country and (4) whether this budget seeks to offer better facilities from the health point of view. Looking at it from this angle I find that I am not only disappointed but more than disappointed. There is no proposal contained in the budget which would help in the removal of unemployment. As a matter of fact the other day when a question was asked whether we have got the figures of unemployment in our country we were told that no attempt has been made so far even to collect such figures. What to say of solving the question of unemployment, which is giving strength to the Communists, and socialists and other elements, when no attempt has so far been made even to register the number of the unemployed. From this point of view I hope even the honourable Finance Minister will agree that the budget is a disappointing one.

Then comes the question of the removal of illiteracy. We are on the threshold of fresh elections and for the first time in the history of India we are going to have adult suffrage. God only knows what result this experiment will bring to the country. To go to the polls and have adult suffrage with a population even 10 per cent. of which is not educated, to my mind, Sir, is a very dangerous thing. I had hoped, and I think the House also expected that the honourable the Finance Minister would provide in his Budget proposals provision for a drive against illiteracy so that by the time the next elections were held adult education would become a watchword throughout the country, and as result of the general drive the number of educated will go up by 10 to 20 per cent. But I see this thing has not even been thought of.

[Shri Deshbandhu Gupta]

Looking at the Budget from the health point of view, I am equally disappointed. Last time when I spoke on the Budget I had raised the question of the housing difficulties. At that time it was felt that this was a very big necessity at the time and some constructive effort would be made by the Ministry of Health to help to solve this problem. Nothing however has been done so far. Today in Delhi you can get anything but a house. You cannot oblige a person by giving him a small room howsoever influential you may be; you can help him in any way but if he wants a corner in some house to put his family you have to ask to be apologized. This is the position. I am therefore obliged to say that in all these respects it is a stereotyped Budget and no imagination seems to have been brought to bear on it by the honourable the Finance Minister. These were the big problems which are facing us and I see no attempt has been made to solve them.

Much has been said by some of the members against the relief measures that have been put forward by the honourable the Finance Minister. In my opinion it would be wrong to attach undue importance to this part of the Budget. As a matter of fact what needs our attention first is the lack of measures which should have been adopted to economise in the expenditure. Today our expenditure on Defence is Rs. 42 lakhs a day. If we could exercise even 10 per cent. economy there we could have easily saved Rs. 15 crores. Similarly, I find and many other members of this House also have already given expression to that view, that in the expenditure on Services there is no attempt to affect any economy. Partition has brought ruin to lakhs and lakhs of people, many sons of the motherland who had already suffered in the cause of the country have now been totally ruined; values in life have thus changed considerably for them. But there is a class which has benefitted by the partition. I wonder if the honourable the Finance Minister has thought of that class. I see today that the S.D.Os. of yesterday are the Deputy Commissioners of today in many Districts; the Deputy Superintendents of Police of yesterday are at once made the Superintendents of Police today, similarly the Under-Secretaries and Assistant Secretaries of yesterday are today the Deputy Secretaries and Joint Secretaries. They have got a big lift merely due to this accident, the tragedy of partition, and have benefitted from it. I do not grudge them the lift which they have got—someone had to fill up the vacancies—somebody's loss is somebody's gain—I would grudge them this if only they were to put their heart in their work and work in the right spirit and help to build up a strong nation and a strong Government. My reports are that in Pakistan the spirit which animates the services is different from what it is here. I admit, Sir, that there are honourable exceptions, I know there are persons among the services who are working very hard, but I must say their number is few and far between, their percentage is very very small. I would request the honourable the Finance Minister to devote his attention to this aspect of the question and though not reduce their present emoluments which they are getting based on the large promotions in their salaries directly due to the partition, we should at least expect them to effect economies otherwise and put in greater work. It is a general complaint that in the Secretariat people have not got enough work to do. The Economic Enquiry Committee which sat for affecting economies has not been able to produce any report and it is not known whether we will have it even next year. What this delay is costing the exchequer is better known to the honourable the Finance Minister than to me.

Coming to Delhi, I feel that Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara and Coorg are the three Provinces.—I would call them unfortunate—which are Centrally administered areas. Cutch and Himachal Pradesh have already been added to this list and perhaps very soon Bhopal will also be included. Sir, I have more than once emphasised that Delhi provides an excellent opportunity for the different Ministries to give a proof of their efficiency. But I am sorry to say that if I were to review the work of the Ministries in the light of their achievements during the last two years in Delhi, I am afraid I would be exposing myself to the threat of disciplinary action to which the President of the Congress has hinted today.

I might mention that I have already had occasion to refer to the working of the Railway Ministry in Delhi. I told the House how corruption was rampant in Delhi and how the achievement of freedom has made no difference whatsoever in so far as corruption in that department goes. If I were to tell at length what was happening in other Ministries I am sure the House will be shocked. My honourable friend the Food Minister has already come in for good bit of criticism by the House. I would not like therefore to offer as remarks so far as the working of that Ministry goes. It would suffice to say that so far as Delhi is concerned, the honourable Minister has himself admitted that in the Centrally-administered areas nothing tangible has been done to add to the produce or in other words no progress has been made so far in the annual output of cereals etc. As a matter of fact, in Delhi even today gram and fodder are selling at almost the same rate and I cannot think of a greater condemnation of a Government than that fodder, the food for cattle is sold side by side, the food for man at the same rate. This is the position so far as the Food Ministry is concerned.....Sir, I would crave your indulgence for giving me another five minutes as Centrally-administered areas are directly under the Central Government and I would like to refer to other ministries.

Mr. Chairman: If every member goes on taking five minutes extra, there will not be time left for others.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: I have not asked for extension so far. You may give me at least one minute for each Ministry.

Coming to Health, I am sorry the honourable the Health Minister is not here, but to give one illustration, may I point out that there was a Municipal Enquiry Committee which went into the question of having a Corporation for Delhi. I believe it submitted its report in the month of May 1948 and it is more than nine months now but the report has not been able to get even the comments of the different Ministries on it. This was a statement made to me by the honourable the Health Minister herself. She told me that the reports have been circulated but no Ministry has found time to offer any criticism of comment on the same so far. It also took about six months to make a reference to the Chief Commissioner's Advisory Council for opinion. I am afraid at this rate Delhi cannot think of having a Corporation even for another year.

Then, Sir, if you were to look at the work done by the Delhi Improvement Trust or by the Health Ministry in the field of medicine etc., I am sorry that there is nothing to complement the Ministry. I can cite examples after examples to show that there has been absolutely no progress. It appears the Ministry has got absolutely no hand in the working of the Delhi Improvement Trust. It goes on the same old way it was going.

In fact things are getting from bad to worse and there is absolutely no improvement in the living conditions of Delhi as result of its efforts. I am offering this criticism not in a spirit of condemnation or criticism, but with a view to bringing it home to the Ministers that they owe a responsibility to this place where they spend most of the twelve months in the year; it is a pity that this place is receiving such scant attention from them.

[Shri Desbandhu Gupta]

If I am allowed to refer to the Education Ministry, I am afraid, the record of its work is even poorer. To quote one example: the Delhi University has made itself notorious by the manner in which manœuvring was done before the Vice-Chancellor's election this time. Things took place behind the purdah which would shock anybody if they can see the light of the day. I will take up this question when my cut motion is moved.

Two minutes more, Sir. As regards the Home Ministry, I cannot but compliment the excellent manner in which they have dealt with the R.S.S. question, the Akali menace and the socialist threat of strikes etc. during the last three or four months. There could be no two opinions that the administration has worked admirably so far as these three things were concerned, but I am afraid the same cannot be said about its achievement in the past. I would not like to go into what happened in the past. I would only say that crime has not decreased in Delhi, although the expenditure on the Police has gone up by at least four to five times. Whereas we used to have only two Superintendents of Police formerly we have more than half a dozen today.

I will just conclude, Sir. A word about the Ministry of Industries and Supplies.—

If my honourable friend the Minister for Industries and Supply were to go to Chandni Chowk he will find how the controls imposed by him on the sales of cloth etc. are working. More than 500 shops today are selling unauthorised cloth in the open market and similarly cereals etc. This is how controls and rationing are enforced in Delhi. Outsiders naturally judge the efficiency of the Government and rightly so from Delhi. And they can have but one opinion about it and that is that the Ministers have absolutely no time to devote to this question so far as Delhi is concerned.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee (Minister of Industry and Supply): May I point out that the control of distribution is in the hands of the Delhi Administration and not in the hands of the I. and S. Ministry at all?

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: That argument will not hold good so far as Delhi is concerned.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: It does.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: Delhi is the direct responsibility of the Central Government.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookherjee: It is not so. It is entirely in the hands of the Local Administration.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: Well, let my honourable friend advocate full autonomy for Delhi and I will be the first person to take responsibility for the happenings in Delhi. I hope he would not hesitate to do so?

Mr. Chairman: I am sorry. The honourable member has already exceeded his time.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: You will excuse me, Sir. I wish to make just one suggestion—In fact I wish to repeat the suggestion which I had made last time—that there should be some coordinating authority so far as the Centrally Administered Areas are concerned. Today, sometimes it takes more than six months to get a reply from the Government of India. The file goes from Ministry to Ministry and it takes unduly long to take decision. Therefore, I suggest once again that there should either be a separate Ministry for the Centrally Administered areas or there should be some coordinating authority to which all these Administered Areas may look to. The Centrally Administered areas are increasing in number and there is no attempt whatsoever made to associate public opinion of these areas with the administration. It is high time that Government opens its eyes so far as these things are concerned and look to the real needs and grievances of the people of the Centrally governed areas. With these words Sir, I resume my seat.

प्रोफेसर यश्वन्त राय : माननीय चेअरमैन महोदय इस समय में जबकि संसार की गति तीसरे महा युद्ध की ओर जा रही है, ऐसे समय में जबकि दुनियां में इकोनामिक क्राइसिस (economic crisis) हो रहा है, हमारे माननीय फाईनेन्स (Finance) मिनिस्टर साहब ने एक वेल-बैलेंस्ड (well balanced) बजट पेश किया है इसके लिये मैं उन्हें हार्दिक बधाई देता हूँ। जहां तक लक्जरी गुड्स (luxury goods) के ऊपर उन्होंने ड्यूटी लगाई है, उसका मैं स्वागत करता हूँ। लेकिन जब मैं यह देखता हूँ कि तांगा ड्राइवर्स भी यह कहते सुनाई देते हैं कि क्या हमारी कांग्रेस सरकार का दिवाला निकल गया है, कि उन्होंने कार्ड की कीमत और लिफाफे की कीमत बढ़ा दी है, तो मुझे दुःख होता है। इसके साथ ही जहां पर उन्होंने कपड़े पर और खांड पर भी जो ड्यूटी बढ़ाई है, उसको देख कर मुझे फिर बहुत दुःख होता है। गरीब लोग जो देहात के अन्दर रहते हैं, उन्हें बिल्कुल ही कपड़ा नहीं मिलता है, उन्हें बिल्कुल ही खांड नहीं मिलती है। लेकिन इस ड्यूटी के बढ़ने से तो जो उनकी हालत आज बुरी है वह और भी बुरी हो जायगी। कितने अफसोस की बात है कि जो मजदूर खांड पैदा करता है और जिसकी मेहरबानी से हमें खांड मिलती है उसी को हम खांड खाने का अधिकार नहीं दे रहे हैं। यह कितने दुःख की बात है कि जो काटन ग्री करता है और जिसका कृपा से हम कपड़ा पहनते हैं उसी गरीब मजदूर को हम कपड़े से (वंचित) डिवार (debar) करते हैं। क्या ही अच्छा होता अगर जो नुवसान हुआ है वह बजाय इन ड्यूटियों के और तरीकों से पूरा हो सकता। रिफ्यूजीज पर जो खर्च हो रहा है और जितना पिछले साल में हुआ है वह सारे का सारा बूथा है क्योंकि उनका जितना अच्छा इन्तजाम होना चाहिये था वह नहीं हो रहा है। आज आप कैम्पों की हालत देखें। दूर जाने को जरूरत नहीं है जो दिल्ली का शहर है उसकी फ़्रील के साथ साथ देखें और सड़कों की पटड़ियों पर देखें तो हमें पता चलेगा कि रिफ्यूजीज की कितनी तरबकी हो रही है। जो हमारे रिलीफ और रिहैबिलिटेशन (Rehabilitation) के मिनिस्टर हैं, अगर वह किसी कैम्प का दौरा करने जायें तो उन्हें पता चले कि कैसी दुर्गति हो रही है। मुझे याद है जब पिछले दिनों वह जालन्धर गये थे तो वहां ट्रैफ़िक बंद हो गया था। इससे साफ पता चलता है कि गरीब लोग जो कैम्पों में रहते हैं वह अपनी शिकायतें उनके पास

नहीं पहुंचा सकते हैं। बल्कि वहां जो रिफ्रूजी कमिशनर होते हैं या अफसर होते हैं वह ही मिनिस्ट्रों के पास पहुंचते हैं और उनको यह पता नहीं होता कि किसको कौसी तकलीफ हो रही है। अगर हमारे मिनिस्टर साहब किसी काम में ध्यान दें और सिर्फ वहां जाने की तकलीफ करें तो उन्हें सारा पता चलेगा। थोड़े ही दिन हुए कैथल कैम्प के रहने वाले शर्णाथी मेरे पास आये, और उन्होंने बताया कि हम कई दिनों से साग खा कर गुजारा कर रहे हैं, हमें अनाज नहीं मिलता है, आटा नहीं मिलता है। जब हम रिफ्रूजीज को बसाने के लिये इतना खर्च करते हैं तो मेरी समझ में नहीं आता है कि आज डेढ़ साल हो गया है, हम अब तक उन्हें बसाने के काबिल क्यों नहीं हुये हैं। अगर हमारा इन्तजाम अच्छा होता और हम उनको बसा सकते, उनके लिये प्राविजन कर सकते, तो एक तो यह जो खर्च है उसकी वचत होती और साथ में जो रिफ्रूजीज काम करते तो उनकी आमदनी से हमें जो टैक्स मिलता उससे हमारी आमदनी बढ़ती।

तीसरा एक और जरिया है जिससे हम खर्च बचा सकते थे। हम जो ड्यूटी कार्ड और लिफाफे पर लगा रहे हैं, और खांड और कपड़े पर लगा रहे हैं उसको इस जरिये से पूरा कर सकते थे। जितना डिफेंस फ़ोरसेज के लिये रुपया खर्च हो रहा है और काश्मीर के अन्दर खर्च हमें बताया जा रहा है वह कम किया जा सकता है। चन्द ही दिन हुये सब आनरेबल मेम्बर्स के पास पैम्फलेट्स पहुंचे होंगे जिससे पता चलता है कि हमने रुपया व्यर्थ खर्च किया है। जो कुछ काश्मीर में एल्विसाइट से पहले हो रहा है वह बताता है, कि वहां क्या होने जा रहा है, तो इतना रुपया हम किस लिये खर्च कर रहे हैं।

Service) हर एक डिपार्टमेंट के अन्दर हरिजनों, गरीब मजदूरों को देना चाहती है। लेकिन अभी हाल ही में मैंने (questions) क्वेश्चन किये थे हर एक मिनिस्टर से यह सवाल पूछा गया कि उसके (Department) में कितने हरिजन मुलाजम हैं और 12½ फ़ीसदी को वह कब और कैसे पूरा करना चाहते हैं लेकिन मुझे अफ़सोस के साथ कहना पड़ता है कि किसी मिनिस्टर ने इस बात की तरफ़ तबज़्जह नहीं दी है कि वह जो साढ़े बारह फ़ीसदी है वह कब पूरा किया जाय। यहां तो यह मिसाल (example) कायम की जा रही है कि "चैरिटी विगिन्स ऐट होम"। हर एक डिपार्टमेंट के अन्दर मुझे मालूम है कि कोई हरिजन (Scheduled Caste) नहीं है। माननीय मिनिस्ट्रों की तबज़्जह इतनी भी नहीं है कि वह देखें कि उन्होंने इतने हरिजन आदमियों को काम पर लगाना है। हमारे ग्रैजुएट, हमारे एम० ए० बहुत पड़े लिखे लोग भागे भागे फिर रहे हैं। वह समझते हैं कि हमने इतनी तालीम हासिल की लेकिन सब व्यर्थ है। क्योंकि हमारे लिये नौकरी मिलनी चाहिये। गवर्नमेंट का उसूल यह है कि वह सब को बराबर करना चाहती है, वह कहती है कि वह काश्तकार के साथ है, मजदूर के साथ है, गरीब के साथ है, उनके साथ बड़े बड़े वायदे किये जाते हैं। और कहा जाता है कि उन पर बड़ा खर्च हो रहा है सब जगह मजदूरों का रोना रोया जाता है। लेकिन इन हरिजन लोगों की हालत सबसे खराब है। जिन्होंने गांव का दौरा किया है उनको पता है कि यह लोग कितने दबे हुये हैं। अगर गांव में कोई झगड़ा हो जाता है तो इनके ऊपर झूठे मुकदमे बनाये जाते हैं। जब वह फरियाद लेकर थानों में जाते हैं तो वह क्या देखते हैं कि उनकी कम्युनिटी का कोई भी आदमी वहां नहीं है वहां और आदमी बैठे होते हैं जिनका यह उसूल है कि जो अपनी अपील करना चाहता है उसकी उलटी मार खानी पड़ती है और कैद भुगतनी पड़ती है। यह है हरिजनों और गरीबों के साथ इन्साफ़।

इसलिये मैं आपसे प्रार्थना करूंगा कि अगर आप यह चाहते हैं कि सब को सुख और आराम हो और जहां आपने रिलीफ़ मेज़र्स (Relief measures) पेश किये हैं वहां मैं आपसे यह दख्वास्त करूंगा कि आप कोई ऐसा मेज़र भी अख्तियार करें कि जो इस तरह के लोग हैं वह ऊपर उठ सकें और सोसाइटी एक होस के। वरना कम्युनिस्ट लोग उनमें जाकर प्रचार करते हैं कि तुम्हें रोटी नहीं मिलती है, तुमको कपड़ा नहीं मिलता है, तुमको इतना सख्त काम करना पड़ता है। इन बातों से वह गुमराह हो जाते हैं और उनको पीछे लगते हैं और उनकी लीडरशिप में काम करना चाहते हैं आपका फर्ज है कि आप उनको इस तरह गुमराह होने से बचायें।

इसलिये आखिर में मैं ज्यादा बक़्त न लेते हुये इतना अपने फ़ाइनैन्स मिनिस्टर साहब से रिक्वेस्ट करूंगा कि वह इन बातों पर विचार करने की कोशिश करेंगे।

Prof. Yaswant Rai (East Punjab: General): At this time when the world is heading towards a third great war, at a time when the world is faced with an economic crisis, our honourable Finance Minister has presented a well-balanced budget, for which I offer him hearty congratulations. As regards the duty he has imposed on luxury goods I welcome it. But, I am pained when I see that even tonga drivers are heard saying, "Has our Congress Government gone bankrupt that they have raised the prices of cards and envelopes?" At the same time it again pains me very much to see the duty on cloth and sugar being raised. The poor people living in villages do not get any cloth at all; they do not get any sugar at all. With this increase in duty their plight, already bad enough, would grow worse. What a pity that from the very labourer, who produces sugar and through whose kindness we get it, we withhold the right to consume it. How regrettable that we deprive of cloth the very same poor labourer who grows cotton and through whose kindness we come to wear cloth. How nice would it have been if the loss that has been caused had been made up by means other than these duties. The expenditure that is being incurred over the refugees and that which has been incurred during the past one year is all futile since as good measures are not being taken in regard to them as should have been taken. Look at the condition of the camps today. There is no need to go far. If we look along the ramparts of the city of Delhi and along the pavements on roads we shall find what is being done for the improvement of the lot of the refugees. If our Relief and Rehabilitation Minister were to go to make a tour of some camps he would find what wretched conditions prevail there. I remember how traffic was stopped in Jullundur when he recently visited that place. This clearly shows that the poor people who live in camps cannot convey their grievances to him. On the other hand, only the Refugee Commissioners or other officers who are on the spot have access to the ministers and they—the ministers—do not know what hardship any particular person is suffering. If our Minister could attend to this side and just take the trouble of going there he would know everything. Only a few days back refugees from the Kaithal Camp came to me and told me that they had been living on Sag only, that they could get neither grain nor flour. When we are spending so much with a view to the rehabilitation of the refugees I fail to understand why we have not yet come to be in a position to rehabilitate them during the period of a year and a half that has already passed. Had our arrangements been good and we could rehabilitate them and make provision for them we would, on the one hand, have saved the expenditure that is being incurred while, on the other hand, the tax that would have been levied on the income of the refugees from the work done by them, would have gone to increase our revenues.

There is a third source whereby we could have effected a saving in the expenditure. The money that we propose raising by the levy of a duty on cards and envelopes and sugar and cloth could be raised by this means. The amount that is being spent over the defence forces and the expenditure which, we are told, is being incurred in Kashmir could be reduced. The pamphlets which must have been received by all the honourable members only a few days back reveal that we have spent the money in vain. The things that are taking place in Kashmir before the plebiscite show what is going to happen there. Then what for are we spending so much money?

I welcome the several relief measures which the honourable Minister has proposed. At the same time I want to tell him that he has forgotten one thing. Last year Shri Munishwamy Pillay tabled a resolution that "Rupees one crore be reserved by the Central Government for those people who are the most poor, viz., the Harijan." Upon this another resolution was tabled by Seth Govind Dasji. He suggested that an adequate amount be substituted for Rupees one crore. That resolution was passed. But I am grieved to find that even in this budget there is no provision for the Harijans. The Central Government have given a promise that they want to give 12-1/2 per cent. reservation in services in each department to Harijans and poor labourers. But only the other day I put questions and enquired from each minister as to how many Harijans were employed in his department and when and by what means did he propose to complete the 12½ per cent., but I am sorry to say that no minister has paid attention to the fact as to when is that twelve per cent. to be completed. This is going to be an example of 'Charity begins at home'. I know there is no scheduled caste in any department. The honourable ministers cannot even give so much attention to this matter as to see that they have to employ so many Harijans. Our graduates, our M.A.s, highly educated people are running from pillar to post. They think that they have acquired all this education in vain unless they get jobs. It is a policy of the Government to equalize all. They say they are with the cultivator, with the labourer, with the poor man. Big and high promises are made with them and it is said that considerable expenditure is made over them. Everywhere their sad tale is told. But the plight of these Harijans is the worst. Those who have toured the country-side know how much suppressed these people are. If there is a quarrel in the village false cases are trumped up against them. When they take their complaint to a police station they find that there is no man belonging to their community there. There are other people sitting there whose principle is that anyone who wants to present his appeal has, on the reverse, to undergo beating and suffer imprisonment. This is the kind of justice meted out to the Harijans and the poor.

Hence I would appeal to you that if you want that everybody should be happy and comfortable you should, among other relief measures that you have brought forward, adopt some such measure whereby the status of the people of that category could also be raised and society could be equalized. When this is not done the Communists go and preach amongst them, saying, 'You get no bread, you get no cloth, you have to work so hard.' They are misled by this talk, follow them, and are inclined to work under their leadership. It is your duty to save them from being misled like this.

Not taking any more time I would, in the end make a request to the honourable the Minister of Finance that he might try to give these matters his consideration.

Shri S. M. Ghose (West Bengal: General): I should like to confine my general discussion on this budget only to a few observations, not in connection with the working of any particular Ministry, but relating to the underlying principles of the budget as a whole.

Every one of us knows, and it has been expressed by almost every honourable member that the problem of the common man today is the problem of food and cloth. There is another aspect of national problem about which we should not remain unmindful, and that is, how to make our nation great, how to make our people conscious about the role that India shall have to play in world affairs, and also to remember the great teachings of Swami Vivekananda, Aurobinda and other great leaders of India, who taught us that India has a message to the world and that India has a mission to fulfil.

Now, after achieving our independence, when we are balancing our budget and at the same time trying to remain conscious about our future role, when we are trying to meet the needs of the common man, we are confronted with one thing and it is this: how best we can create facilities for the common man to earn his living and contribute his mite to building up the future India, which was the dream of our great leaders of the past. We know and most of us have expressed that opinion also that without making a great effort to develop our industries, we cannot even touch the problem. How to stimulate the industries? Many of us at first thought that without nationalising industries, without having a complete programme of socialism, our problem cannot be solved. Many of us believed also that when we had achieved our independence, when the Congress was in power, a serious attempt would be made to have a complete programme of nationalisation and socialism. But, I am sorry, Sir, and I regret to say, that our effort has only produced confusion.

Now, having failed in that direction, having our eye on the present day need of the common man, as well as the failure to induce our industrialists or capitalists to co-operate with us, I do not see why we should not sympathise with our honourable Finance Minister for the way in which he has tried to approach the problem; not that he had not in his mind the problem of the common man, not that he does not know how to nationalise or bring in socialism; but as he has already said in his speech also, the international and national set up in which we function today compels us to take up this course of compromise.

Having said that, now, I come to the question of refugees, especially the problem of the refugees from East Bengal. There are two aspects of that problem: one is of those who have come to the Indian Union, how to rehabilitate them; and the other is of those who are still in East Bengal in a sense of insecurity, trying every day to come out. And by coming out from East Bengal, they will no doubt add to the difficulties of our Government for rehabilitating those who have already come.

In this connection I would like to point out that those now living in East Bengal, their number is more than a crore. Although they are citizens of another State, we cannot remain quite unconcerned about them because I feel strongly that it is the concern of our Indian State and it is a first class problem for us. Sir, if those little over a crore of people are forced to come out from East Pakistan to India, I don't know how far and how long this newly born State of ours will be able to bear such strain and burden. Therefore although they are living in a different State, I consider that it is a great problem of ours too. We shall have to think not only in terms of how to rehabilitate these 15 to 16 lakhs of people who have come but also to find out some means by which we can create a sense of security in the minds of those who are still living in Eastern Bengal. Sir, in this connection my submission is that a Security Insurance Corporation may be set up with the participation of both Governments which might look after the security of the minorities in East Bengal as well as in West Bengal if they so desire. The value of life and property of those living in East Bengal may be registered and some sort of insurance certificate may be issued against any damage done by communal aggression.

Then the condition of the Hindus in East Bengal has so much deteriorated that something should be done by a joint move of both Governments to improve their economic condition. I submit another suggestion for the middle-class Hindus, i.e., those who are living in East Bengal to give some hope in their minds. Being full fledged citizens of East Bengal, they may be entitled for service in both the Bengals. The right to contest election of local bodies also may be given to the minorities of both the Bengals. It can be done if a new restricted citizenship is created so far as Bengal is concerned. So far as rehabilitation of those who have come is concerned, the problem is such and the grievances of everybody interested are so enormous that unless Government is determined to rehabilitate these people immediately, something very grave at any time may happen. The problem of rehabilitation as I have seen so far as West Bengal is concerned, they proceed on a certain line on the understanding that the Central Government will help then after a few months when they have accumulated all the facts and collected materials but suddenly they are told from the Centre that they are to proceed entirely on a new basis. I am giving only one instance. At first it was given to understand that loans will be given to individual refugees and on that basis several thousand applications were received, examined and a few hundreds selected. Suddenly after 3 or 4 months when those applications were selected, a circular went there from the Centre that loans should not be given to individuals but only through Co-operative Societies and the refugees should be asked to form Co-operative Societies. Sir, in this way I don't know why the Central Government should allow such huge wastage of public money as well as the services of our Government officials. If Central Government had a plan not to give loans to individuals that ought to have been made known to Provincial Government from the very beginning instead of asking them to prepare lists for individual loans. Then the camps should immediately be abolished and the people should be rehabilitated. Another complaint of Bengal against the Central Government is regarding the allocation of income tax and jute duty. I am reading from the speech of the Finance Minister of West Bengal:

"In spite of our representation, the Government of India has decided that till 31st March 1950 :-

(1) the Government of West Bengal will receive only 12 per cent of the total provincial share of income-tax as against 20 % allowed to Bengal under the Niemeyer Award, and

(2) the share of jute duty allocable to the provinces will be reduced from 62½ per cent. awarded by Niemeyer to 20 % only of the net proceeds and that the total provincial share will be distributed among the jute growing provinces in proportion to the amount of jute grown in each province".

Then the Finance Minister says:

"I regret to have to say that on questions like these the Government of West Bengal has a feeling that its case does not receive adequate attention in Delhi".

I would like to draw the attention of the Finance Minister to this question.

Then before I resume my seat I would have been glad if there was some provision made in this Budget as token grants to the services rendered by the Rama Krishna Mission and Sri Arambindo Mission in spreading our culture outside India throughout the World and enhancing our prestige also. I would have been very much glad if there was some provision made in this Budget as token grants to these institutions. With these remarks, I resume my seat.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U.P.: General): Sir, may I point out that the time is up for this discussion, and we should start the other business.....

Mr. Chairman: I know when the time is up.

Shri Radhavallabh Vijaivergiya (Madhya Bharat): One aspect of the budget which has given satisfaction to many of us who come from the States is that in matters of finance and economy of the country, the States are also coming on the same level as other provinces, and our central budget is really becoming the budget for the whole India. And to-day the representatives from nearly all the States are here in the House and taking their due and active part in the deliberations of the House and the people of the States are sharing the responsibilities and the advantages like their brothers and sisters of the Provinces.

The States, with a few exceptions, have been neglected so far. There are vast possibilities in the States, awaiting development, say in the matter of land reclamation, irrigation, etc. so that our food production which is so very short of our requirements, may be increased. Besides these, there are possibilities in the States for commercial and industrial development, and also in connection with our forests and mineral products. I would invite the attention of the various ministries here to give special attention to these areas in the States where there are such vast possibilities for different kinds of development.

[Shri Radhavallabh Vijaivergiya]

In this connection I would like to refer to the wonderful, almost miraculous work which our Deputy Prime Minister has done in such a short time, in bringing about the integration and consolidation of about 600 Indian States. I might also here make mention of the fact that things are not all well in the different Unions. Of course the reason for that is that the process of integration is going on and interim arrangements are being carried on there, and so in the changes that are being brought about, the people of the States, especially those of small States are facing great inconveniences and hardships. Therefore I would request the State Ministry to arrange for a proper machinery to give more attention to the grievances of the people in the small States.

Sir, coming to the budget proper, it is true—and we cannot deny it—that it is very difficult within two years of our independence to form or bring out our budget of finances and economy on a sound basis. Especially so when our country has been under foreign rule for the past two hundred years, and that foreign rule has left the evils behind, of a foreign economy. There were also the difficulties caused by the effects of the war. There were also the disturbances which followed Independence. But still, I would like to ask whether this is the best budget that we could have had. Could we not have had a better one? I feel we could have had a better one, even under the present difficult circumstances. Sir, the common man, the masses of our people measure your budget in terms of food, cloth and fuel, and if they find that their difficulties in these matters are decreased, or increased, they form their opinion of your budget accordingly. If we look at the budget in that light, we find that the prices of commodities have been on the increase. For instance, in February 1947, the price index of food was 290.6, in February 1948, it was 343.5 and the present index for February 1949 is 384. Similarly about the price index for textile products. For February 1947 the figure is 312, for February 1948, it was 374 and for February 1949 it is 381. The general price index in February 1947 was 292.2, for February 1948 it was 342.8 and for February 1949 the figure is 370.5. Therefore, for the common man, things have been becoming worse and worse, and this budget has not evoked any enthusiasm or support from the common people.

The big business in our country is well-organised, they have all the necessary resources to make their influence felt on the intellectual people of India and also on the Government. And therefore they have succeeded in obtaining several reliefs. The honourable the Finance Minister has given relief to the extent of over Rs. 6 crores to big business in his budget proposals, just to gain their confidence, the confidence of the business community and to provide incentive for investment and production. But what about gaining the confidence of the common people? After all, it is the common people who are going to count and we cannot ignore the grave dissatisfaction that is present in the common people on account of the difficulties they have to experience at the present day. After all the real asset, the real strength of the country are the millions of our nationals, and if they are happy, if they are good and if they are strong, and united, then our country too and its finances are strong and our freedom will become stronger and stronger, and we will move on the right path. But if these people lose confidence in the Government, or if difficulties are increased day by day, and if there is discontent among them, then we cannot progress far. We cannot move far. After all their support is the main thing. This morning my friend Mr. Modi emphasised that the Government had great strength because the whole country was with them, and that the millions of our countrymen were with them. It is true the country is with the Government. But it is not with the Government to benefit the big business and the capitalists. The country is with the Government to strengthen the whole country and raise the standard of life of the people. Sir, our civil expenditure has been increasing, and we must call a halt somewhere. In the revised estimates for 1948-49, there has been an increase of 48 crores in the civil expenditure. How long are we going to increase this expenditure? And as the cost has gone up, has the efficiency increased? No. It is clear and I think that is the general consensus of opinion that the efficiency of the administration and of the civil service has not increased. Many high officials here and responsible people inform me that there is favouritism in most of the Departments. What happens is, when one officer becomes in charge, he to entrench himself brings in his friends and tries to create new posts and further brings in more and more of his own people. Also in the appointments, what happens in the Public Service Commission is this. Appointments are made beforehand and after a few months when the matter goes to the Public Service Commission, the same appointments are approved, because one of the Secretaries of the Department is there sitting on the Public Service Commission, while making the decision. Therefore efficiency has not increased. We must aim at increasing efficiency. We must also give relief to the common people. Last year we gave some relief to big business, and this year, again we have given them further relief, at the cost of the poor people. The price index of all the necessities of life has been increasing, and we have now raised the duty on even coarse cloth and sugar and on articles of transport. Similarly, we have increased the postal rates on postcards and envelopes. Who are going to get the advantages of these postcards and envelopes which are now to be sent by air to different parts of India. It is clear that the big business is going to benefit from this arrangement at the cost of the poor people. For instance I come from the States. I know that in the States the ordinary means of communication are not even well developed, leave alone air communications. When there are not even proper systems of roads and railways, what benefit are those people going to derive—those 9 crores of people—from this movement of letters and postcards by air? It is clear that the whole thing is that big business is going to benefit at the cost of the ordinary people.

Then, Sir, the matter of abolition of the Capital Gains Tax is a very serious matter and it is fraught with serious consequences—perhaps dangerous consequences. For if this taxation is removed, then many industries will re-capitalise their plant and later on if nationalization takes place the nation will have to pay very high costs, or they will derive benefits in other ways in the depreciation value that they will be allowed and by way of dividends. Therefore, I strongly oppose the abolition of the Capital Gains Tax.

Similarly, in the Capital Budget, we have to be very careful. In 1948 we had 274 crores as balance and at the end of the next financial year, that is March 1950 our cash balances will be Rs. 58 crores. This is quite a serious matter.

Similarly, we have to organise our export trade also on a better and sounder basis. As our honourable the Finance Minister pointed out we are finding great difficulties and having deficits in hard currency.

Similarly this matter of food: we are very short of food and yearly we are increasing our import of food and spending more money on them. We have imported 150 crores worth of food from foreign countries and we have spent nearly Rs. 32 crores on subsidies in these food matters, this year. The Ministry of Agriculture is carrying on a Grow More Food Campaign. There is a lot of pamphleteering but real work is not so much as perhaps could have been done. So, what should be done is that these Grow More Food campaigns should be organized on sounder basis and there must be a plan drawn up—a short-term plan and a long-term plan—and effectively implemented and the required machinery reformed in the Centre and in all the provinces: there should be very strict supervision over each province and State to see that the programme is being carried out according to Schedule.

[Shri Radhavallabh Vijaivergiya]

In the end I would merely say that to go forward we must mobilize the nation for freedom: we must gain the full support of the nation. There is great dissatisfaction all round and if we are to succeed, if we are to reap the fruits of freedom, the nation must be mobilized. The nation must feel the glow and blessings of freedom and the common man should feel enthusiastic in the budgets and in the freedom of the country. Therefore, we must organise our budget and our finances in such a way that the common man gets the greatest benefit and the greatest relief possible in matters of taxation, and the price index and the cost of living come down and inflation is checked as early as possible.

Mr. Tajamul Husain (Bihar: Muslim): I was going to make a complaint to you before I had begun my complaint against the honourable the Finance Minister. But since you have very kindly allowed me to speak I think I had better not make that complaint.

Mr. Chairman: I may point out that the honourable member has only ten minutes.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Everything will finish in time. I will not be long. I think I will make my complaint. My complaint is to you. I do not care how long it takes but it is for future guidance and not for the present only.

This Budget belongs to the Congress Government: it belongs to the Congress Party: it belongs to every honourable member of the Congress Party. Every member of the Congress Party is equally responsible for the Budget. I am not in the Congress Party. I find that more time has been given to the members of the Congress Party than to those who are not in their party. Since this morning I have been trying to catch your eye and I have not been able to. But I am grateful that at last Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Many other honourable members have spoken who are not in the Congress Party.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I say that more chances have been given to them than to those who are not in the Congress Party.

Honourable Members: In proportion to their representation in the House!

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Now I will begin my budget speech.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member has already taken three minutes in his introductory remarks. He is left with only seven minutes more.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: There is an universal cry. What is that cry? The universal cry is to reduce the poor man's burden. Everybody says: reduce the poor man's burden. Whether this universal cry is wrong or right is not the point now. The only point before us is whether the honourable the Finance Minister is going to listen to the universal cry of the poor people or not. I have not the least doubt that the budget has many good points. I say this in spite of the fact that every member of your party has been condemning it. I say that there are many good points in the budget. In fact I am prepared to say that the budget is a good one. But I am not going to speak on the good points of the budget. Those points are obvious. I will mention only a few points which in my opinion are bad. I have just now said that there is a universal cry that the poor man's burden must be reduced..... ("An honourable Member: "That is a good point!") If the Chairman allows me time I will mention all the good points. A tax on luxuries undoubtedly is a good thing but there are certain things which have been treated as luxuries although in fact they are not luxuries. Take the case of sugar. Sugar is a thing which everybody takes and which people cannot help taking. You are really taking a thing which is not a luxury but a necessity. It will affect both the poor and the rich but the rich will not feel the few extra pies which they have to pay for sugar whereas the poor will be affected by it.

As regards petrol it is now more a necessity in certain matters than a luxury. The poor man uses the motor transport and if the duty on petrol is going to be increased the poor man will be affected. The honourable the Finance Minister has proposed that as regards petrol used for aviation the tax will not be increased but decreased. Who goes by air? Not the poor people but the rich. So you have given benefit to a certain extent to the rich people. I would suggest that the duty on petrol for aviation should be increased and the duty on petrol for buses and transport meant for the poor should be decreased.

As regards cloth, as a result of the taxation the price will go up and the poor will feel it, though not the rich.

Other honourable members have dealt with postcards and letters. Because this is a poor man's necessity I would also like to say a few words on it. One consolation is that letters will in future go by air as it is possible and then take the ordinary route. In the villages and in the interior of the country there are no air services and so how does this benefit the poor man in the villages. If a poor villager writes a letter from Delhi to Tundla it cannot go by air. It won't go to Cawnpore by air and then back to Tundla. So this is of no benefit to the poor at all. The Finance Minister expects 2.85 crores from this increase. He has given a relief of two crores to the supertax-payers. It means that he takes money from the poor and gives it to the rich. Therefore I will just make a few suggestions. Let there be no increase in postage. Let the postcards and letters go as previously by train but increase the postage on air mail letters. In this way the poor man will not be affected at all.

As regards the exports which we send outside we have received complaints that they are of inferior quality and the imports are so expensive that the poor man cannot afford to buy them. So in this way the poor are affected.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Sir, I have no doubt that the House is relieved that this long debate has at last come to an end. It is a relief which, I confess, I share. It has been in many ways an interesting, informative and revealing debate, and I have greatly benefited by this debate. We are in many ways a new and an untried democracy and I think a debate like this, covering the whole range of our national administration, has revealed, if I may say so, all the known characteristics of a young democracy. We have a great sense of idealism and a keen ambition to realise those ideals but we are still somewhat at a loss to understand the problems and the precise difficulties with which we are faced.

[At this stage Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) resumed the Chair.]

We are getting increasingly impatient with the earth and all that is in the earth. We would like to find our way to Heaven but we have not as yet been able to find it. For the moment I am speaking both of myself and of every member of the House—we are for the moment floundering in space not knowing where to locate ourselves.

I had the rather difficult and unpleasant task of formulating the budget this year. I wonder if in recent years there has been a year when the economic and financial circumstances of the country have been more difficult to assess or to estimate and to provide for. We have prepared a great many unorthodox budgets in recent years. May I begin with the Budget of 1946, the Budget which was introduced by the last Finance Minister of the unreformed Government. That was a curious budget. That budget was framed with the main idea of providing influences which would counter the inevitable deflation which was expected to arise after the war. When war expenditure had ceased it was feared widely that there might be a lessening of demand for things and therefore it was necessary to pump more and more money into circulation to stimulate demand. So the last Finance Minister of the old Government tried to remove all the taxes which he could possibly eliminate from the tax structure of the country. But the result was that at that time capital goods were not available and difficulties of one kind or another stood in the way of increasing production and the money which was released by the elimination of taxes was used for purposes which had very little to do with production. What happened then was an unhealthy boom in the share market. That continued almost until August or September 1946. Now that date August or September 1946 is a very important date constituting a landmark in the recent financial history of our country. Honourable members will remember that it was in August 1946 that the great communal massacre occurred in Calcutta and it was about that time that a sharp reaction was experienced against the boom that inevitably started with the release of more and more money into circulation as the result of the budget of 1946. That was accentuated by the further communal massacres that took place later in the year. Then in February 1947 came the budget of the Coalition Government, for which Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan was responsible. That budget was framed against an inflationary prospect as Sir Archibald Rowland's budget was framed against a deflationary prospect. The Budget of 1947 was based on the assumption that there was far too much money in the country, that commodities were going up, the inflationary position was worse than ever, the share markets were experiencing an unwholesome boom and it was thought necessary that the process should be reversed. Therefore new taxes and heavy taxes were imposed, the very reverse of the process which found expression in the Budget of 1946. The budgets of 1946 and 1947 were both unorthodox budgets, sensational budgets, and the country has not yet recovered from the cumulative effect of two unorthodox budgets. When the Prime Minister did me the honour of asking me to take charge of the Ministry of Finance under the very difficult circumstances which were developing in the country last October I say to myself, knowing the difficulties and the complications that had resulted from sensational budgets, that as far as in me lay I would produce an orthodox, routine, straightforward budget. This unfortunate country has been knocked about for two years in many ways. What it needs today is a little rest, a little room for recuperation, for convalescence. The period will not be long, but that period is essential if the country is to get back its health. Sir, there is nothing sensational in my budget. It is a straightforward statement of the country's financial position.

We are faced with extraordinary expenses. I have been told more than once that the Government of India have shown very little inclination to implement the oft-expressed desire of the House to effect economy in public expenditure. In fact I think one of the most constant notes which have been struck in the course of this debate is that this Government of which on the financial side I happen to be the responsible spokesman have shown a callous disregard of the anxiety felt by the House and the country in the matter of economy in public expenditure. If the House will be patient with me I should like to tell honourable members that as far as the Economy Committee is concerned there is nothing which I said in the budget or which I left unsaid in the budget which provides any kind of foundation for the suspicion that we are not going to take the most serious notice of the recommendations which have been made to us by the Economy Committee. The reason why I have not made any definite provision in the Budget for 1949-50 is that we did make a hypothetical provision in the budget of 1948-49 but due to circumstances over which we had little control that hypothetical provision could not be implemented. As far as I was concerned the position in which I found myself was that the Committee had not completed its investigation—a few interim Reports had come—but the final Report which is to set out the general principles and the main considerations on which the recommendations are based is yet to come. And these interim Reports which have come in—valuable Reports—are Reports which give the recommendations more or less in the form of summary proposals, more or less in the form of small cause court decisions. Unless I know precisely the general considerations which govern the outlook of this Committee it is not possible for me to formulate definite serviceable conclusions on these recommendations. Further, as Minister of Finance I am primarily responsible for seeing that every possible measure of economy is adopted. But I have got to consult other Ministries with reference to whom these recommendations have been made, and if I am not in possession of the general considerations on which these recommendations are based, however anxious I might be to introduce economy it would not be possible for me to maintain my stand in the necessary discussions that arise between my Ministry and the other Ministries. I found myself therefore in this position that however anxious I was for economy, however anxious my Government was for economy, I was not in a position to put in the budget a figure which I would be able exactly to implement. Rather than put a hypothetical figure I said to myself I would take the House into my confidence and say I am not in a position to do it but I give my solemn assurance to the House that whatever recommendations are made by the Economy Committee would be recommendations which would receive my most earnest attention.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): The whole of the gap that exists need not be covered. Something may be left over for the economies that are likely to be effected by implementing those recommendations.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: That does not improve the position as I have set out. The real point to which I would like to invite the attention of the House is this. Honourable members in the course of their speeches have more than once referred to this fact. The items of expenditure under which substantial economies can be effected are not the items of expenditure covered by the reference to the Economy Committee. There is for example our defence expenditure. There is our expenditure on food subsidies. There is our expenditure on the relief and the rehabilitation of displaced persons. I for one would venture to prophesy that at any rate a very substantial part of these special temporary expenses could probably be eliminated before the year 1949-50 is out if for example the Rs. 35 or 40 crores which represents in the budget of 1949-50 the excess of the defence expenditure due to special developments such as Kashmir—if a substantial part of that—could be eliminated. If developments take place in Kashmir as we anticipate, if as the result of exercising a little more pressure on the procurement policy of the Provincial Governments, if as a result of improving our production schemes aimed at immediate production of food, if as a result of a fall in the level of international prices of foodgrains, if the monsoon is going to be a little less unkind to us in the coming year than it has been in the past few years. It is quite possible that under the expenditure on food subsidies we might be able to make a substantial reduction. As regards the work on displaced persons

we are trying as soon as possible to transform the work done in that Ministry from relief to rehabilitation. If that transformation takes place—part of it is completed—then the expenditure, once it gets transformed from relief to rehabilitation, will cease to be revenue expenditure and will become capital expenditure and in the revenue budget therefore there might be some substantial relief. As far as I am concerned if I happen to be in charge of this Ministry this time next year my anxiety would be during the twelve months between now and then to strengthen the forces which are likely to give me economies in these three substantial spheres of expenditure. If that happens—it is a dangerous thing for a Finance Minister to forecast—but subject to this qualification that no untoward developments occur, if for example we are not faced with another war situation, if we are not going to be faced with another general international economic depression I would venture to make this forecast that when the time comes for this House to consider the budget for 1950-51 our finances would be definitely more comfortable than they are today. Well, if we are so favoured, if it happens that the budget shows a substantial surplus next year as I hope it may, then it is possible for us to use that in two directions both of which are directions which the House favours, we might be able to provide for substantial tax relief on the one hand and we might be able to contribute much more than we have done since we assumed office for the development of those essential nation-building activities on which honourable members have set their heart and on which Government is as keen as any Honourable Member in this House. I hope, Sir, things will develop as we anticipate. If they do, then I venture to think that the year through which we are going to pass in the next twelve months will probably prove the most critical period in our financial history since the country became independent.

A great deal has been said in the course of the debate on the problem of inflation. Inflation, as the House recognises, is a question of the supply of money on the one side and goods and services on the other. I think several honourable members expressed the fear that not enough has been done in the way of drawing away super-abundant supply of money from circulation. I would like to tell the House quite briefly what, in my opinion, is the present money position in the country from the point of view of inflation. If you think that the quantity of money which is operating in our economic system today is to be measured exactly by the amount of currency notes in circulation and the amount of bank deposits you will be very much mistaken. That gives you no indication of the effective money supply of the country today because, remember, a good deal of this money that is represented by the figures of money circulation and bank deposits has gone underground, is dormant, is not in circulation. There is a good deal of that money which has been hoarded because it has passed into the hands of people who are not used to investment and, therefore, for effective purposes that money does not function. There is a very considerable part of that money which is locked up as working capital in larger quantities of stocks than before because the whole process of distribution and transport is now slower than it used to be before the war. In other words, what I am trying to point out is that the pace at which money turns over is very much less than it used to be before. Therefore, my first proposition is that the amount of superfluous money in the country is much less than we are apt to imagine.

Now I come to my second proposition which is this. What money there is in circulation, relatively little of it is going into the investment market because when it comes to industrial investment the whole trend of opinion among investors for some time has been that industrial investment is a matter which is attended with special and serious risks. So money avoids the industrial investment market. On the other hand that money is being drained off in increasing quantities into investments in purchase and sale of readily marketable commodities which involves no risks. When that happens, the inevitable result is that all these consumer goods, the prices of which determine our cost of living, are going to be in demand much more. That is the position that we are seeing today. On the one hand you have got a sharp rise in prices of consumer goods, and a large amount of surplus money is floating about. On the other hand, there is extreme stringency of money in the money market. That is the kind of conundrum with which we are faced, and I tell the House with every sense of responsibility that the real problem before us—if we are convinced that production is the final answer to the problem of inflation—the real problem before us is to reverse this process and gradually divert the money from the market for consumer goods back into the investment market. If there is any general principle behind by budget, it is that. I feel there is no other solution for the problem of inflation except increased production and unless you can divert this money in increasing quantities back into the investment market, you are not going to find a solution for it.

As the result of the partition, this country's economy has suffered much more grievously than many of us have yet begun to appreciate. There is hardly an aspect of the economy of our country on which partition has not reacted directly and adversely. Take for example the question of transport. My honourable colleague the Minister for Transport will tell you more than 50 per cent. of the troubles of our railway transport is due to partition. My honourable friend the Minister for Commerce will tell you the whole trade structure of the country has been disorganised as the result of partition. My honourable colleague the Minister for Food will tell you that if our food position has been so acute as it is today it is due in a very large measure to the partition. And as Minister for Finance I know that if our foreign exchange position today is so difficult it is to a very large extent due to partition. If our Defence expenditure is so high today it is due to a large extent to partition. If I have met large bills on account of pre-partition liabilities, what is it again but partition? What the House has got to realise is this, that as a result of the various circumstances that started occurring from August 1946, the country has got into a position today where its economic structure has been most seriously damaged. The result of the damage that has occurred to our economic structure is that the wheels of production now have come almost to a standstill. I feel today, both as Minister of Finance and as a student of economics, that the most urgent problem before me is to set the wheels of production moving again. I am not interested today in what the future organisation of our economic society is going to be—that problem will arise in the future, there will be enough time to consider it. Today I am concerned with this problem: here is this whole economic machinery of ours going to pieces; I want to piece them together and make the wheels of our economic machinery move again.

That is the great problem before us and that brings us to this question that we are all agitated about and to which we are giving, in my opinion, more thought and time, than the problem at present deserves. Are we going to nationalise our industries, or are we going to leave our industries to private enterprise? My answer to the question is this. So stagnant today is the whole of our economic system that we need all the resources which are available in the country, whether public or private; all the resources which we can muster in the country we need every bit of them for making the productive system of the country function again in the way it ought to.

In framing this Budget, I have felt that one thing that is necessary is that those who are prepared to consider investment in industrial concerns; those who are prepared to devote their energy and ability to organising industries in the capacity of entrepreneurs, both these groups of people have got to be given a sense of assurance and certainty about the immediate future. Without that sense of certainty, neither of these classes can be brought back into work in the way in which they ought to be. Whether we are going to keep it there after ten years or not, that is a question with which we are not concerned for the moment. What we are concerned with today is that these two classes of people, the enterprisers and the investors, must be made to come back into the field where their services are so urgently required. If the State's resources—resources of finance and personnel—are adequate, the State will certainly take up industries and do its part in this business of developing production, but the State's resources are limited and therefore every available resource in this country must be mustered if this country is to be saved from economic stagnation. That, Sir, is the basis of my Budget.

I have given very little by way of encouragement to investors and enterprisers. What I have done is to give tangible evidence of Government's desire to assure them as regards the immediate future that if they put their ability into this business of production, if they put their money into this business of production, Government will see to it that their interests are legitimately safeguarded and I think every community, every section, of the country which plays its part in the development of the country's economic activity has a right to that assurance, and I do not apologise to anybody for giving this little tangible proof of the assurance that they need and need so badly. On that point, therefore, I am fairly confident that there is no criticism that can be urged against me which I cannot meet with reason. (An Honourable Member: What about the capital gains tax?) I am coming to that. I am coming to a number of other things. Now having said that, Sir, I want to echo and endorse what Mr. Homi Modi said this morning. I have framed this Budget, put it forward before the country, deliberately as a challenge to the business community of the country. It is a Budget which calls upon them to rise to a great and important occasion. If they do not do so, I think they will be held guilty of a serious lapse at the bar of public opinion in the country. We have gone as far as we could in the very difficult financial circumstances in which we are placed. We have gone as far as we could to give them that assurance for which they have been asking. They have been complaining that what stands in the way of production is loss of confidence. We have given them this assurance and if this assurance does not give them the confidence that they have asked for, there must be something fundamentally wrong with the business community as a whole.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: You justify it in giving this assurance.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Now, I come to the various tax proposals which have been the subject of criticism in the House. With regard to the capital gains tax, the point was made—and it is quite an effective point that with all this liberalisation that we have made in the depreciation allowances, there is just a possibility of these allowances being abused for the purpose of sales of depreciated machinery at higher values and the excess value escaping liability to taxation. That is a point which I have seriously under consideration and I am hoping at an early date to place legislative proposals before the House which will provide sufficient safeguards against that abuse.

Now, I come to the question of post cards. In fact, I find that of all the proposals embodied in my Budget, that is the proposal which seems to have attracted the most interested attention. I would like to place a few plain, straightforward facts before the House and ask the House to judge these facts for what they are worth. First of all, my honourable colleague the Minister for Communications has given me a statistical statement which leaves me at any rate in no doubt as regards the fact that the existing cost of production of post cards—the manufacture of the cards and the handling of the cards—is exactly 8.2 pies, so that even if there was no question of transporting these by air the very fact that the cost is 8.2 pies provides, a prima facie justification for the proposal to which the House has raised such very strong objections. Sir, in many ways our sister Dominion has set us an example in economic matters. They still have a charge of 9 pies for their post cards. The House will remember that for about fifteen years on end, until February 1946, our post cards were priced 9 pies. If you take the rates for post cards in other countries such as the U.K. making the fullest possible allowance in the difference in levels of national income, 9 pies is as low a figure as you can strike. (Shri H. V. Kamath:) "Not in India, Sir" I am not for a moment suggesting that the House must necessarily come to a conclusion on these figures, but I do submit to the House that these figures constitute at least a prima facie justification for the proposal that has been put forward.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): No.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U.P.: General): You did not give that justification in your Budget speech.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Well, I was looking forward to a general discussion of the Budget, a general discussion which has given me precisely the opportunity that I wanted for explaining matters in which the House is interested.

There is another point which I would like to place before the House. I did a certain amount of statistical calculations myself, and I took the total of post cards which were delivered in the course of the last latest year for which I have figures. Then, I took the proportion of the literate population of the country. I divided one by the other and then multiplied it by 3 pies and then the figure that I got was an average extra expenditure of exactly 3½ annas a year. Now that is divided by the literate population, but supposing I divide it by the whole population or a substantial proportion of the population including the illiterates, it would be considerable less than 3½ annas. I put these facts before the House and honourable members will no doubt turn these facts over in their mind.

I come to this question of the excise duty on coarse cloth. The House will accept my assurance that it was with the greatest diffidence that I finally decided to recommend the duty on coarse and medium cloth to the Government. I had various reasons in my mind for making this proposal, however reluctant I was to face the proposal. The loss of the salt duty has undoubtedly been a strain on our revenue position. To my mind, it is quite out of the question to bring back the salt duty. Apart from everything else, it has a symbolic significance which we of this generation cannot afford to ignore. But I do think from an economic point of view, there is more to be said, if the principle of an excise duty on an article of universal consumption is accepted, an excise duty on cloth than an excise duty on salt. I will tell you what the reason is. It is not an original reason, because the abolition of salt duty was decided up on two years ago when I had the honour of filling the post of Finance Member in the Interim Government. I came to that decision after a great deal of wavering in my mind. Mahatma Gandhi did me the honour of asking me to meet him and I had several long discussions with him. Although on purely economic grounds I was very reluctant to accept the proposal for the abolition of the duty, I can still remember looking back over these two years, ultimately I decided that he was right and I was wrong and I accepted the proposal. When I placed my proposal before the Cabinet for acceptance by the Government, I had no kind of mental reservation.

The difference between the excise duty on cloth and the excise duty on salt is this. However wealthy you might be, however large your financial resources may be, or your purchasing power may be, you do not consume more than a limited quantity of salt fixed by your physical requirements. But if you had an increasing amount of purchasing power available, you can buy more cloth. In other words, salt stands practically on the same footing as air and water. It is one of the essential things of life, on which to levy a tax, I think goes counter to the principles of humanity on which any modern State is based. May I give the House this somewhat interesting fact—at any rate, it interested me when I was considering this matter. If you take the excise duty at the rate we have proposed, on coarse and medium cloth, a quarter anna per yard, the average incidence of it per year is less than half the average incidence per head of the salt duty. I ask the House to consider with me, if you are prepared to allow that there is justification for an excise duty on an article of universal consumption, whether there is not a prima facie case for considering this.

I had also another idea in my mind when I was examining this proposal; I referred to it in my budget speech. The hand-loom industry in this country if the premier cottage industry and I for one believe that whatever kind of economic organisation may ultimately arise in this country, cottage industry must fill an important place, and typical of the cottage industries of the country is the hand-loom industry. The hand-loom industry had a privileged position during the war. Now, mill production is increasing, imports are coming in, in increasing quantities into the country. A time will soon come when the hand-loom industry in the country will be faced with a crisis. If you are at all interested in safeguarding the position of the industry in the country's economy, I suggest that it would not be possible for you to give any assistance apart from the device of an excise duty. I was the Chairman of the Indian Tariff Board of 1932 which went into the question of the Cotton Textile Industry and this question was raised before me over and over again in every part of the country that I visited. The hand-loom industry was suffering from actual competition from the mill industry and I was asked over and over again, "what are you going to do about it." I thought at that time of an excise duty. But a foreign Government was then ruling the country and an excise duty levied by that Government had odious associations which made it quite impossible for me to consider it then. Today, the position is entirely different. That kind of sentimental consideration that prevented me from examining an excise duty as a means of safeguarding the interests of the hand-loom industry is not present today. Before honourable members make up their minds for themselves, I would ask them to look at this question from both these points of views.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Do you think that the proposal for an excise duty on cloth is really going to help the hand-loom industry, to put that industry on its legs?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: These question of detail, I suggest, may be held over till the debate on the Finance Bill.

There has been a critical reference to the increase in the excise duty on sugar. We are following the same principle there. The excise duty does not apply to gur; it does not apply to khandasari sugar; it applies only to mill made sugar. In fact, throughout the whole structure of our excise duty, this principle will be borne in mind, that is to say, if it is possible by means of this to give some of the much needed assistance that the hand-loom industry requires, it will be given in this way.

With regard to excise duties generally, a suggestion that I would place respectfully before the House is this. We are in for a time when, whatever rates of duty you adopt with regard to income-tax whatever rates of duty you adopt with regard to customs duty, these two sources of revenue would begin to decline. We are a democratic society trying to function as an independent Government. Honourable members know as well as I do that while democracy is a priceless blessing, it is a very expensive blessing. The more democratic our society becomes, the more it becomes a positive organ of social and economic development, the more you will find the financing of it is going to strain your resources. I have not the slightest doubt in my mind that, if not today, at some time in the near future, you would be seriously faced with the question of accepting excise duties as an inevitable source of revenue for financing the fundamental functions of a democratic Government.

A great deal of reference has been made to the question of provincial taxation. I am aware of the problem that has been created by the conflict and overlapping which have arisen in the matter of taxation as between the Centre and the Provinces. I entirely agree with the view expressed by honourable members that it was time, in the country's interests, in the interests of India as a whole, that this problem was handled and a solution found for it. I will tell the House quite briefly how I am going to face this problem. There are two ways in which you can find a solution for it. You can bring about a convention by agreement between the Centre and the Provinces, and among the Provinces themselves. By agreement, a convention can be created by which this overlapping and conflict may be reduced to a minimum. I held a conference of provincial Finance Ministers a few months ago and one of the questions that we discussed at that conference was how to eliminate this element of conflict and overlapping from one, at any rate, of the taxes levied by the provincial Governments, namely, the sales tax. There was very considerable agreement on major points by the various provincial Governments, but ultimately, it was not possible for us to reach a clear-cut final decision on that point. By exploring the possibilities of agreement between us and the Provinces, it may be possible to reach a solution. Failing a solution on these lines, then, it seems to me we have got to consider in connection with the financial proposals to be put into the Constitution whether we cannot devise a formula which would enable us to eliminate this conflict and overlapping in the matter of taxation by the Centre and the Provinces. There was a certain amount of reference to what is called the Capital Deficit in the budget. It is perfectly true there is a capital deficit shown in the budget statement of roughly about 134 crores. Now I could have avoided that deficit altogether if I had said in my budget speech that instead of estimating 85 crores as my market borrowing, I could have put my estimate at 150 or 200. But I decided to be realistic. I decided that in the circumstances in which I found myself it was necessary that my estimate should bear a fairly close relation to facts. There is another way in which I could have avoided this and that is by telling both the Departments in the Central Government and Provincial Governments 'Nothing doing in the way of capital loans for next year.' Now a criticism has been made that while you are trying to balance your revenue budget, here is this enormous gap in your capital budget which is going to create inflation and all sorts of difficulties. In fact it has been suggested that this capital deficit is so serious a feature of this budget that it deprives it of all right to consideration. Mr. Deputy Speaker, I don't know if you consider 'nonsense' an un-parliamentary expression.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Not if it is uttered by a Finance Minister.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: May I say, I have seldom listened to such nonsense as has been spoken on this subject. This deficit of 134 crores is being met out of our balances. Now we have got sufficient balances out of which to finance this deficit. Even after allowing for this deficit, at the end of 1949-50 we will have roughly about 58 to 60 crores. In pre-war years, if you take the last pre-war year, our cash balance was somewhat about 18 crores. If you make due allowance for the increase in our budget since then, about 58 or 60 crores is the equivalent of our pre-war normal cash-balance. Of course if it happened that during 1949-50 I am unable to raise the amount of loans in the market that I expect and if demands of the provinces and the Central Government of capital expenditure go on rising, it is of course possible that I may find myself in a difficult position but we have got to take risks. Life and particularly the life of a Finance Minister is a gamble.

Now I will conclude on the note on which I started that I feel barring untoward, unexpected developments, that if we are able to see our way through 1949-50—a very critical year in many ways, a period so to speak marked by a precarious financial balance, if we are able to see our way through that, then I think we shall have broken for some years to come the back of our financial problem. I personally take the view as I said in the budget that our financial future is hopeful. I believe that there are bright days before us. I believe also that these bright days will come sooner than many of us think. If I may say so, Mr. Deputy Speaker, Providence has been good to this country through all the ups and downs of the centuries and if there is one thing of which I am more confident than any other, it is that God's Mercy will not forsake us in this hour of transition and trial.

ESSENTIAL SERVICES (PREVENTION OF STRIKES) BILL

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): Sir, my colleague the Home Minister was to have moved for the House to take into consideration a Bill to provide for the prevention of strikes in certain essential services. He has asked me to express his regret for his absence on this occasion because he had to go out of Delhi on an important engagement. He has asked me further to read out to the House a certain statement which he would have read himself if he had been present. This is the statement:

"I beg leave of the House to withdraw the Essential Services (Prevention of Strikes) Bill. In asking for this leave, I should like to explain that when the question of introducing a measure declaring certain strikes illegal was first considered the Railway and Communications Ministries who were threatened with strikes in their respective departments, felt that a Bill prohibiting strikes in those two essential undertakings was necessary to deal with the situation. Subsequently matters improved in that the All India Railwaymen's Federation decided against a strike and the problem was of dealing with strikes sponsored by Unions which did not obey the Federation's mandate and the threatened postal strike. It was then considered that it would suffice to have a more enabling measure with somewhat wider scope so as to cover certain other essential undertakings in which strikes or threats to strike had become a matter of frequent occurrence to the detriment of the morale and interests of the general community. Now the position has further improved in that the strike threat is at present confined only to certain Railways the Unions of whose employees are dominated by the Communists.

But as against that improvement must be set the grave deterioration which has occurred as a result of recent events in Calcutta and elsewhere. I am sure the House realises, in the light of the statement made by the honourable the Prime Minister the other day, the full import of these incidents and appreciates that the problem is not confined only to possible strikes by certain dissident Railway Unions, but is one of law and order generally, involving, as it does, a violent and brutal challenge to the State. This situation has to be carefully considered and suitable measures devised to meet it. We propose to do this and, if necessary, to approach the House again for such directions and powers as may be deemed necessary".

May I, Sir, add a few words of my own. This statement which I have read out on behalf of the Home Minister, I need hardly add, is a statement with the full concurrence of Government. There have been a number of criticisms in regard to the proposed Bill that it proceeds on certain wrong assumptions and it has been stated by some people that the Government was trying to aim a blow at the Trade Union Organizations or their general right to strike. Government have no such intention. That we have repeatedly declared. Fortunately in the present instance, there is no organized or what might be called regular strike envisaged. And the situation has changed for the better, and to some extent in another direction, for the worse. We have to deal with a situation now which is not a strike situation at all, but something entirely different. I do not know exactly how it might develop. But from statements made, sometimes publicly and sometimes otherwise—and we have a considerable record of these statements—it seems clear, as I indicated the other day, that certain groups are bent, not so much on a strike, but on creating disorder and chaos and indulging in acts of sabotage. The other day I reminded the House of the incidents that happened in Calcutta. These incidents were bad in themselves. They were brutal in the extreme. But what was even worse I think, was not unfortunate fact of some persons being killed—that is bad enough—but the fact that some people of our country should be brutal and mad enough to think of such acts and indulge in them. Unfortunately, that kind of atmosphere has been deliberately encouraged by some groups of people in the country. I am quite sure that the vast majority of people and workers are not affected by it and strongly disapprove of it. I should like, therefore, to make it perfectly clear that we do distinguish definitely between these groups who are bent on these anti-social activities and the large majority of workers or employees—employees of government or other employees—in the country. We have to meet therefore, this position created by certain anti-social elements in the country. That is not a labour situation. That is not a strike situation. That is an entirely different situation. Unfortunately, even a small number of misguided or malevolently inclined individuals can cause trouble. Therefore one has to take care, and we propose to take every precaution and proper care. But in doing so, I should like not only this House, but the country at large to realise the nature of the problem that we have to face. That is problem again, not of labour as a whole, or of strikes—those are separate things which can be dealt with in their proper context—but the problem of certain groups who are out, not for the economic benefits of labour, not for the normal labour or trade union activities, but to create certain chaotic conditions out of which perhaps they would.....

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U. P.: Muslim): What is the use of this ex-parte judgment?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, order. No interruption please.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: I suggest this an ex-parte judgment. Where is the use of it?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member will kindly not interrupt here after.

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru: It is not quite clear what the honourable member meant by ex-parte judgment. Ex-parte to whom or what? I should like to make it clear that, whether it is ex-parte or not, it is the judgment of the Prime Minister and the Government of this country, and so long as this government lasts it is going to act according to that judgment. I do not know if the honourable member belongs to that other party which apparently he thinks is not represented here, except by himself. I think that matter must be made clear. If any member tells you that this is an ex-parte judgment, what exactly does he mean? When I am talking of certain anti-social elements in this country, elements which have committed murder, dacoity, arson, loot, and the most horrible crimes, elements which the other day in Calcutta threw two persons into a blazing furnace—I think it is horrible.....

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: The Communist Party has denied the thing. They are not responsible for it.

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru: I do not know if the honourable member here represents the Communist party or not. That I would like to know from him.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: I appreciate the communist principles, but I do not belong to that party.

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru: May I make it perfectly clear that I am not discussing any economic or political or other principles here at the present moment. So far as this government is concerned, we have tried to give the largest latitude to expression of views, even though those views may, according to some of us, be wrong views. But we are dealing with a situation, not of expression of any views, but with a situation when violent acts, dangerous acts, subversive acts, are committed. These have nothing to do with views as such. I want the House and the country to realise that, because if this government or any government accepts under the guise of expression of views, violent activities, then that government or the structure behind that government cannot last. That is obvious. Are we committed to peaceful activities in this country or to violently subversive activities? That is the point at issue. I submit that no government can admit violent activities, violently subversive activities—and I use the words together I do not mean even theoretically subversive activities, but violently subversive activities, no government can possibly tolerate them. Apart from that, I suggest to the House to consider that the type of activities that we have had to face, that is even worse than what might be called violently subversive activities, an open rebellion of people with arms or otherwise, becoming violent facing an army or things of that kind. Such a thing the Government can meet. But infinitely worse is the person who comes and stabs you in the back. Think of persons being hurled into a blazing furnace. I can imagine nothing more despicable than that.

And the House will remember that I did not use the word "Communist" or "Communism". It is the honourable member who used the word (Shri H. V. Kamath: "It just fitted him") I state that whoever indulges in such activities will have to be suppressed and stopped by government, whoever he may be. There are in the country people, a number of small groups, small in numbers, come associated with the Communist Party and some not associated with the Communist Party—it is immaterial what political creed they profess. But if as part of their creed, as part of their activities they indulge in this type of violently subversive activities, then we have to deal with that situation, and I should like to appeal to labour in this country. There may possibly be differences of opinion in regard to labour matters between members in this House or between the Government and the representatives of labour occasionally. But one thing

I shall beg this House and labour generally, to realise, and that is this: This government as a whole is bent on not only improving the general condition of labour—that is rather a weak way of putting it—but of giving its rightful place to labour in the governance of the country. Even if there are differences of opinion with regard to that, I do submit that there should be no difference of opinion even between persons who have different approaches to these other matters, there should be no difference of opinion when we have to deal with a kind of situation that, to some extent, is facing us to-day.

I do not wish the House or the country to imagine that we are frightened of the situation. We shall deal with it adequately, we are quite confident. But it is not the extent or the danger of the situation that rather distresses me, but the nature of the situation, that there should be some persons in our country who are so entirely misdirected or wrongly inclined as to think in such terms. The types of slogans that are used, they are murderous slogans, and the types of activities that are seen in various parts. Who are behind them, what group or party, or what individual, that is another matter which we shall consider at length and have enquiries made. The fact is that there are groups of individuals who do these things and that they deliberately indulge in acts of sabotage which are not only dangerous for the community but may result in grave disorder in a large number of the Provinces, quite apart from the economic aspect. That is a point on which there should be no two opinions—whether labour or those occupied in other activities in the country. It is because we did not wish the issue to be confused that the Government decided not to proceed with 5 P.M. this Bill, which really had been thought of in different circumstances. Therefore, on behalf of the Home Minister, I beg leave of the House not to proceed further with this Bill.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to withdraw the Bill to provide for the Prevention of Strikes in certain essential services".

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Monday the 7th March, 1949.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh (Minister of Defence): Sir, last year, during the debate on Defence Expenditure, I expressed the hope that it might be possible to present the Defence Budget to the House separately in the same manner as the Railway Budget. The proposal has since been examined from all aspects and it has been found that it is not possible to do so as ours is only a spending department and has no revenue. I am sorry to have given an impression to the House which it has not been possible to carry out. The proposal was in fact contrary to the practice in other countries.

In the statement of the activities of the Defence Ministry which has been circulated, the honourable Members have a brief account of what we are doing. I would, with your permission, like to place some more details in order to help the members to have a clearer picture.

Our Armed Forces have made history since the 15th of August, 1947. We know all that fell to our lot immediately before and following the attainment of freedom. During those months of grim trials, till very recently, it was the Armed Forces on whom fell the heaviest responsibilities of all manner and types and it was their loyal and patriotic work, labour and devotion to duty which has meant so much to so many of us over such a short period of time.

The full tale of how the Armed forces were placed at the time of partition cannot be told just yet. You remember we had begun tackling the problem of peace time strength and nationalisation of Armed Forces, almost immediately after we assumed office in September 1946. A Committee was appointed to study the nationalisation problem under the Chairmanship of Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar now my colleague. The Report was completed by the end of 1947. Before that, however, the British Cabinet Mission had arrived and it soon became clear that the country would have to be divided. After the 15th of August, 1947, it was no more the question just of nationalisation; we were now also to divide the Armed Forces as a necessary consequence of the division of India. The problem was indeed grave. There were, on the one hand, widespread disturbances and on the other a process of rapid break-up of the Central and Regimental organisations almost all along the line. On Independence Day, as the Statement in your hands shows, we had at Headquarters but a mere skeleton staff of some 150 officers and 567 other ranks, both civil and military. Elsewhere, some units ceased to be, others were broken up and disabled for effective functioning. Such, very roughly, was the condition of the Army. Nevertheless the situation was faced boldly and without demur.

And, what we have since been able to do, is for the country to see. Lakhs of uprooted men, women and children, driven out of their homes were tended, led and brought away. Battles have been fought and won. Side by side, the problem of reorganisation was not ignored and that process too went steadily on. How it has all been done is indeed a marvel. Of more than 8,000 British officers in the Army before the 15th of August 1947, we have less than 200 today—and almost all of them in technical or advisory jobs. Executive command and control is now entirely in the hands of Indians. Many Indian officers had to be promoted far beyond their service and experience but on the whole they have worked extremely well. In this work of reorganisation and integration, we were given valuable help and guidance by General Sir Roy Bueber, the late Commander-in-Chief and other British officers and the process of nationalisation was completed when on the 15th January last, for the first time in the history of modern times, an Indian, General Cariappa was appointed Commander-in-Chief of our Army.

The House will be glad to know that he has made a good start. The process of nationalization of the Indian Air Force needs a little elucidation. This service as such was already almost completely Indian, our young men having taken to the air from its start as if naturally. The problem now in hand is one of expansion and development. Today, except the Commander-in-Chief and less than a dozen R.A.F. officers on loan, the entire Force is manned by Indians. On the technical side we have only 14 British civilian technicians in various installations.

In the Navy which is in its infancy, the process of nationalization, as the statement shows, must necessarily be slow. As in the case of the Air Force, but to a larger extent, we will need foreign assistance in our Navy for yet some time to come. I am glad to be able to say that our Air Marshal of the Air Force and the Vice-Admiral of the Navy have been doing a magnificent job in assisting us with their rich experience and knowledge. Their interest and enthusiasm are of the greatest value to the Indian officers and men of these services.

[Sardar Baldev Singh]

During the year, in spite of our other commitments and preoccupations we have taken steps towards the organization and development of both the Territorial Army and the National Cadet Corps. The statement before you gives details of what has been done so far. I hope the honourable Members will agree that within the limitations to which we are bound, the progress is by no means meagre. Recruitment in the Territorial Force will begin early in the new financial year. As for the Cadet Corps, it has also gone into stride in most of the Provinces and States. The response of our young men in universities and colleges has been very encouraging and we are already planning to add to the number of units for which we originally planned.

A word about the facilities for higher and intensive training which we are providing for our armed forces will interest the House. Such training is the basis of an efficient Force. Until we attained freedom, we were dependent in this sphere almost wholly on the facilities available in the United Kingdom. This could not continue. In Free India we must have our own institutions for every type of training for our officers both in the technical spheres and in the ancillary services as well as in the higher field of scientific research and military strategy. The field of work is formidable but as such training is the basis of an efficient Force, we have given first preference to the building up of these institutions in all the three Services. It is my hope that within a few years we shall have in our own country facilities for every kind of higher training of a high standard. Reference to some of these new institutions has been given in the statement. Among these the most important are the proposed new National Academy, the School of Military Engineering, the Armed Forces Medical College, the Defence Science Organization and the proposed Air Force and Naval Technical Schools. We cannot go ahead as fast as we would wish, as our effort is to lay secure foundations and our speed is limited by our resources.

My narrative of such institutions will be incomplete without a mention of our Ordnance Factories. It is in these factories that we produce our munitions of war and other equipment, such as small arms. Fortunately, some development had already taken place in this direction. What we possess of these factories therefore is a national asset of considerable importance. But here again we do not have all we need: nor is our technical staff sufficiently advanced, particularly in the higher grades. Therefore, during these last few months we have attempted to provide training to selected Indian technicians to enable them to assume more responsible positions. Ordnance Factories by themselves however are small comfort, however well-equipped or efficiently run.

To make them function at their best we must find the necessary material, raw or processed within the country itself. In the past we depended for these on the United Kingdom. We are grateful for all the help we received and continue to receive from them, but we do need to develop our industrial potential on as wide a basis as possible. Basic industries have to be established; steel and other metals of requisite standards must be produced within India. The steel plant to which my colleague, the honourable the Finance Minister referred to in his Budget Speech will take some years to operate. But we have to go steadily ahead and until our own requirements have been completed, we must of necessity depend on imports to meet our requirements. And remember also, along with the development of industries, our own nationals must require technical knowledge and specialization of a high order, so that we may not have to depend on outside-assistance for long. All this will take time. Meanwhile we have to meet our present needs. These are being met in the existing Ordnance Factories or from foreign countries. Here I will again emphasize that with the first-class manpower we have and an Armed Force which the world recognises as one of the finest in war, we must also find equipment and armour of the highest standard for in the sum total of any appraisal of a fighting force, it is the armour, the equipment, the supplies that count as much as the fighting qualities of its men. The Government is conscious of the imperative need to make our Armed Forces self-sufficient and will take action to that end.

An important factor that we have to bear in mind while planning our new Ordnance Factories is that in time of peace they can be utilised for manufacturing civil requirements without in any way effecting adversely the production of Ordnance Stores and other Armed Forces' equipment. All this is an ambitious programme and it involves huge sums of money. Much of it, as honourable Members will appreciate is inescapable. Some perhaps could be avoided. This has been done as we are not unmindful of the strain of this heavy expenditure on the economy of our country. The avoidable expenditure has been cut down wherever possible without however risking our supreme objective, namely, the security of our country.

In an earlier part of my speech I said that on assuming office we had actually began planning a return to the peace-time strength. This was as far back as 1946. Indeed, the process of demobilization had by August 1947 already gone forward to a very large extent but soon after for reasons already referred to, we were compelled to call a halt, and indeed had somewhat to strengthen our forces. Increased expenditure was inevitable and here I would like to give in brief some of the reasons which caused this toll of money.

Firstly, there was the campaign in Kashmir and the police action in Hyderabad. The police action lasted only a few days, it is true. But we could not take chances and much work had to be done and an organization had to be built up on land and in the air so as to ensure a speedy decision. Indeed, the reason why this police action ended so quickly and with so little loss of life and property was that in spite of our other commitments, we were able to concentrate on it a scheme of combined operations which worked with clock-like precision. But in terms of money the cost of this police action was heavy.

Secondly, we had to borrow forces from the States and this has added to the expenditure.

Thirdly, we had to borrow a contingent of Gurkha troops from Nepal to meet the needs of our internal security. The House knows well the important role that the subjects of Nepal have played in the Indian Army in the past. Gurkha units still form a part of our land forces and will continue to do so in the future. Our relations with the Government of Nepal have been most cordial and I am grateful to His Highness the Maharaja for having helped us with these contingent of troops at the time of our need.

Its cost of course had to be borne by us.

Fourth: there had to be increased provisioning of armour, equipment and stores. This item alone is responsible for a large increase in the expenditure.

Fifth: as a result of the division, a very substantial part of the permanent accommodation of the Army has been lost to us in the Frontier and the West Punjab. We have had to make improvisations, and new accommodation will cost a good deal of money.

[Sardar Baldev Singh]

Sixth: the rise in prices all along the line has contributed in no small measure to the increase in our expenditure. We have tried to do our best to economise; but have often found ourselves against a dead wall!

Finally, I am sure the House will appreciate that the increase in expenditure is inevitable with an increase in the strength of the Forces. The strength of the Forces had to be increased considerably. Unfortunately, for obvious reasons, I am not in a position to disclose this strength.

All this has made the bill of expenditure formidable. The main difficulty, as I have explained, has been that ever since our Independence, the call on our Forces has increased for reasons beyond our control. I would however like to assure the House that we are ready to take up the schemes of further improvement whenever practicable and reduction in expenditure as soon as normal conditions are in sight, because it is obvious that in normal times our expenditure on the Armed Forces must bear a much lower ratio than at present to the resources of our country. Comparisons may be odious. But a look at the following facts may be worthwhile without of course in any way suggesting that thereby we justify our own expenditure. The revenue estimate of the Government of India for 1949-50 including the net contributions to the general revenues from the Post and Telegraphs and Railway is Rs. 322.98 crores and the corresponding estimate of our neighbour's i.e., the Government of Pakistan is Rs. 66.66 crores. The estimates of net Defence Expenditure (met from revenue) of the two Governments for the year 1949-50 are Rs. 157.38 crores and Rs. 43.62 crores respectively. The percentages of Defence Expenditure compared with the total revenues of the two Governments thus come to:

Government of India	48.7 per cent.

I need say no more.

Some of the honourable Members referred to the new Scales of pay and how this has hit our officers particularly the younger ones. The new scale of pay was fixed after careful consideration by a committee which had representatives from the three services. In view, however, of the high prevailing prices some concessions have already been given. They are:

- (a) Abatement of "War Excess" i.e., the difference between the emoluments drawn under the old pay code and those admissible under the new pay code, in nine instead of six half yearly instalments;
- (b) grant of free accommodation and allied services for the officer himself when he is posted to a station in which he cannot be provided with family accommodation;
- (c) special priority for accommodation at the ports to the families of Naval officers who are serving in afloat establishments;
- (d) reimbursement within certain limits of excess charges for furniture hired privately with the approval of the M.E.S.;
- (e) a fresh outfit allowance after every seven years of commissioned service;
- (f) Qualification pay for officers of the rank of Commander, Lieut.-Colonel, Wing Commander and below who possess or acquire special qualifications which may be useful to the services;
- (g) an entertainment allowance to senior officers holding certain selected command appointments such as independent command of sub areas or Areas, Groups, etc.;

(h) A flying bounty to certain categories of officers of the RIAF after completion of a minimum number of flying hours in service aircrafts;

(i) Service officers, ratings and other Ranks of the three Services are to be eligible to join the Postal Life Insurance Fund, from which they were previously excluded, on payment of the normal rates of premia payable by civilian government servants. The extra premia over the normal rates chargeable from such personnel on account of special risks of services will be met from the Defence Services Estimates;

(j) Forty per cent of the seats of the Schools in Lovedale and Sanawar have been reserved for children of officers and men in the Armed Forces. The question of giving scholarship to deserving students is under consideration.

I would like to assure the House that the Government has the interests of all their officers and men at heart and would try their best to minimise the difficulties and hardships within the basic principles laid down by the Pay Committee and the limited resources of the country.

One feature of some of our new activities, I would like to mention is the organisation we have set up to look after the rehabilitation of the displaced members of the family of our soldiers. A very large number of such families were among the lakhs of people who lost their homes in Pakistan. Their plight was a source of great anxiety to our men in service and affected their morale. The problem was serious. We therefore established a rehabilitation wing of our own under the command of a senior officer well qualified for the job. The relief since this wing was started is considerable.

Now, Sir, I have done with my explanation of the expenditure said of the Defence Ministry's activities. Unfortunately, the Ministry is one that has no income to its credit so far at least as money credit is concerned. But money is not all in the sum total of life of a nation as it certainly is not in the case of an individual. We have other things of which we can justly take credit. Last year it was my privilege to relate to you how after literally an overnight decision, our army aided by our Air Force had been rushed to the assistance of the people of Kashmir and how in spite of almost impossible conditions of communications, terrain and weather, we cleared the beautiful valley of marauding bands of looters who had entered Kashmir from across the borders. Since then, as the House knows, and particularly after the arrival in India of the United Nations Kashmir Commission, it could no longer be denied that in addition to tribesmen and others, the regular forces of Pakistan were also operating on a very large scale on every front wherever our troops were detailed. But now there is a lull on that front. A cease fire has been agreed to and ordered. I will not therefore say more for we long with all our hearts not only that the present cease fire may give way to a truce but that circumstances may lead to a final solution of the problem we are confronted with in that part of our territory. We sincerely hope for and desire peace in Kashmir and with our sister Dominion of Pakistan. This however does not prevent me from bearing witness to the magnificent manner in which our Army and our airmen fulfilled the mission assigned to them. They had a tradition to keep, a tradition of valour, grit and resolute will in action. In my judgment they have surpassed this tradition. They have literally broken all records. Fighting in Kashmir was a novel experience particularly for our youthful officers holding Command Ranks. I feel proud when I say that almost everyone of them, Officers and Men alike, has proved true to the trust placed in them by their Commanders. Rarely, even in the last Great World War, was warfare conducted in such terrain and weather conditions as our Forces had to face here. They carried heavy armour on altitudes as high as 16,000 feet and more and on roads so called, sometimes improvised within the space of a few hours. Our engineers and sappers cleared jungles and hills and built roads and bridges in all manner of conditions often under heavy enemy fire, in places where no armies had ever ventured before. They faced unheard of difficulties, beat time, and then they beat the enemy wherever they could find him. The campaign will make an epic in the annals of the deeds of our Forces.

The part played by the Air Force was equally praiseworthy. The young pilots and Ground Officers and Men carried out duties that bear comparison with the most arduous and complicated tasks known in the history of aerial warfare. Their exploits, particularly the daring landings they made at high altitudes, in narrow river-beds unknown to them, except for a spot on maps, and on short shell ridden strips under gun-fire—both during day and night—were some of the deeds of which they and we all will ever be proud. All this was accomplished by our young pilots without much experience or any help by outsiders or foreigners.

We have lost valuable lives—Brigadier Usman, Col. Rai and many other Officers and Men—valiant, noble and true sons of India. Their memory is for ever enshrined in the hearts of their brothers-in-arms as in ours. I am sure the House will join me in paying homage to them.

Before I close my remarks I would like to say a word about the part played by the State Forces. They have fought side by side with our troops and everywhere have shown courage and comradeship of a high order. It is our plan to see that State Forces are trained and equipped on the same standards as our own Army. We are aiming at uniformity—particularly as the States are being reorientated and realigned and cast into new and bigger units.

And finally, I would, by your leave, Sir, like to express here in the House our sentiments of joy and pride that our Armed Forces have proved true and loyal to their Government, their people and their country. They have kept out of politics: caste or creed barriers have not influenced them. I have not the least doubt that these Forces will continue to serve our Motherland loyally, magnificently and faithfully at all times.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, I pay my high tributes and compliments to the men of the army, navy and air force and their officers for the able, courageous and marvellous performances that they have made after the attainment of freedom. They have, as the honourable Minister has just now stated in his speech, proved their ability by their actions in the miniature war that took place in Kashmir. From all quarters encomiums have been paid to our men and officers. So magnificent was the planning by our Generals and Commanders of the police action in Hyderabad that it concluded within four days and it has been appreciated from every quarter. I remember in 1940 from the adjoining House of this House—I mean in the Council of State—the British Commander-in-Chief, while on the subject of Indianisation of the army officers, stating that India has not got the ability and the caliber to produce that type of officers who could command the army and their men. How false this opinion was has been proved beyond any doubt within such a short period of our attaining independence by our officers.

When independence was achieved we had nearly 300 British officers and the honourable Minister has stated that during 1948 the number gradually came down to 257 and in the pamphlet that he has circulated to the House he says on the 31st March, that is 23 days hence, there will be only 190 British technicians for the purposes of the army. It is a gratifying result. Though the people of India had never any doubts in the matter the Britishers who wanted to keep their hold here and keep an army of occupation were always sceptical and doubtful about the efficiency of our officers. This they have amply proved, as I stated just now and as every word of the statement of the honourable Minister points out, in the miniature war which was played in Kashmir under extraordinary circumstances.

Having said that I do feel that our men in the army, navy and air force should be sufficiently paid and should be given all conveniences and comforts. I shall not today touch the strength of the army, navy or air force, nor do I want to discuss their emoluments. But I would certainly like to point out to the salaries and allowances that have been fixed for them, to which he made a reference, and I would like to state that the revised salary is certainly liberal. (Mr. Frank Anthony: 'Question'). Well, I will show to you. If you turn to page 89 of the Defence Budget, the second lieutenant gets Rs. 350, the lieutenant Rs. 400 to 450, the Captain Rs. 450 to 700, the Major Rs. 700 to 1,050, the Lt. Col. Rs. 1,100 to 1,400, the Colonel Rs. 1,450 to 1,550, the Brigadier Rs. 1,600 to 1,800, the Major-General Rs. 2,250, the Lieut. General Rs. 2,750 and the General Rs. 3,000. That is not all. If you see page 88 they are entitled to several allowances varying from the small officers to the big officers from Rs. 400 to 700 per month. These are the allowances—Parachute pay Rs. 45, Dearness allowance Rs. 40 to 150, Compensatory and Local Allowance admissible in Bombay and Calcutta Rs. 50 to 100, Specialist pay Rs. 75, then free accommodation, furniture free, lights and fans free, and conservancy free. Then fresh outfit allowance and uniform upkeep allowance Rs. 120. Officers of the rank of Lieut.-Colonel and below get Rs. 75 or Rs. 50 according to the special technical and staff qualifications they possess. Then there is entertainment allowance. Of course that goes to the Brigadier only. But having worked it out, it comes to on an average Rs. 500. Therefore, I do feel that while I appreciate what has been stated by the honourable the Defence Minister, I do not think there will be any justification for a grouse on the part of the officers for whom we have great regard and whom we want to see that they are sufficiently well-paid.

Having said that, I would certainly like to mention the items under 'Stores' to which the honourable Minister has referred. He stated that there should be no consideration of money but we should bear in mind the efficient Army, Navy and Air Force which we possess. In principle I accept that but it does not mean that we should overlook the extraordinary expenditure that is being incurred on stores. I shall give you some figures which are startling as compared to the salaries and allowances. The total expenditure is Rs. 157.37 crores. Pay and allowances of all sorts to the Army come to Rs. 54.48 crores, to the Navy Rs. 3.21 crores and to the Air Force Rs. 4.5 crores, making a total of Rs. 61.74 crores. Coming to Stores, Transportation, Purchase of Stores, Miscellaneous Items, Maintenance of Buildings, all these come to Rs. 93.13 crores—it is 1/3rd higher than the salary of the staff. Under this heading of 'Stores', the Army consumes Rs. 78.12 crores, the Navy Rs. 5.40 crores and the Air Force Rs. 9.61 crores, giving a total of Rs. 93.13 crores. Rs. 93.13 crores as against Rs. 61.74 crores for salary! Non-effective which includes rewards and pensions comes to Rs. 13.44 crores—I have no quarrel with that because that is pensions and rewards.

Now, what are these stores and what are these miscellaneous items? Has the honourable Minister given any attention on this matter to see that there is no leakage? Was this not raised in the House last year and was not an assurance given by him that he will closely go into the matter and see that economies are effected? Sir, on the contrary I find the expenses have increased and I fail to understand it. I want an explanation on this point. Of course I do not agree with some of the criticisms that took place during the General

Discussion that the Army is heavily paid and that we have incurred much more expenditure than what we were spending during the pre-freedom period. But my friends forget that we have to maintain two borders; during the British regime we had only one border but now all the four corners, North, South, East and West, have to be maintained. Sir, I was one of those who used to criticise the Military Budget from the time when it was Rs. 20 crores till it rose to Rs. 42 crores. Pre-war it was something like Rs. 49 crores and we were criticising it. Today we have to pay Rs. 157 crores—I do not mind that because the circumstances are such. I associate myself with what has been stated, but at the same time I do not want any departmental leakage. In the name of an efficient Army we should see that we look to these discrepancies from time to time.

As I said above, what are these stores? If you refer to page 32 there are no details against it. Right up to page 31 there are some details provided but from page 32 there are no details. Against page 32 for an item Rs. 13.16 crores, there are no details, the page is blank. Then page 34, total Rs. 30 crores, the explanatory note is left blank. Page 36, Rs. 1.72, explanatory note blank. Page 38, Rs. 8.29 crores, explanation. Page 40, Rs. 12.81 crores, explanation—blank. These are stores; I am mentioning stores, not salaries—remember I am not touching that question at all. Page 42, up to page 48, Rs. 9 crores, explanation blank. (An honourable Member: 'These are receipts') Some of these are receipts, I am sorry. Barring that all is blank. If you see page 34, purchase of stores for R.I.A.S.C and I.A.O.C. etc., the total amount is Rs. 30.65 crores. There are some details given, although the explanatory note is blank. 'Provision' itself comes to Rs. 16.92 crores. And what is this provision? Fruits, vegetables, fish, meat, eggs, fowl, ice etc.—fuel, charcoal, coal and firewood are separate, petrol is separate. Rs. 17 crores is the amount on fruits and other items. Now, how are the tenders invited? They are invited in various Commands for three month and six monthly periods. The items mentioned there are so many thousands of bananas, so many thousands of guavas, so many lbs. of grapes and so on and so forth. The interesting feature about this tender is that about ten or twelve items of these fruits—oranges, melons, etc.—are mentioned and the quantities and prices are shown against each item. The officer, whosoever he may be, who receives the tender draws the whole total, that is to say, if the banana is quoted at Rs. 4 a hundred and the oranges at Rs. 2, the total of the whole is divided by that item and considers the lowest tender and the order places. That is all right, but what happens? When the order is placed, the highest item of banana is placed without any consideration as to whether the remaining quantity is supplied or not. I would like the honourable Minister to go into this question. If he calls for the Controller of Military Accounts and sees the bills he will come to realise that the quantities which are mentioned in the tender and agreed to by the contractor have not been supplied.

The articles which were supposed to have been supplied according to the order have not been supplied and this leads to considerable leakage. He must therefore pay attention also to the actual delivery. I know of ice. Ice is tendered by other than factory owners. The merchants' tender. There are in each city a limited number of factories. I know of instances where an anna per lb. was the rate of ice. The tender was accepted at 9 pies. You can very well understand that although the production of ice is very cheap, but the quantity given was so much less that between the price the other loss was reaped.

Then there is another item of Rs. 2 crores, miscellaneous, about which no details have been given. A separate Budget has been given to us; we are very glad that this new innovation has been introduced, but the House is entitled to have all this information about this rupees two crores and other such so-called secret items.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member has already exhausted his fifteen minutes.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I would not take much time. Sir, I will finish in two or three minutes, with your permission.

Then there is employment of labour. The Railway Ministry has done away with the employment of labour through middle-men. They are employing directly through their headmen. There is a good deal of leakage in this and this forms a very large part. So it should be done away with.

I will now refer to the Cantonments. There are fifty three of them in the whole of India and they are governed by the municipalisation of Cantonment Boards. Despite that, we know that before 1926 there was nothing like a Cantonment Office or Director General in the Government of India. Now we have one Director of Military Cantonments and Lands, three Deputy Directors, three Assistant Deputy Directors and nine Military Estate Officers and the other paraphernalia in the Department. Now, when the Cantonment Boards are already in existence for purpose of maintenance of lands under the municipal local-self government acts, I do not see the necessity for continuing such a large force in the Secretariat. I would suggest to him to consider this point. I raised this matter and suggested the appointment of a committee. I am thankful to honourable Minister that he has appointed a committee and at the request of this House all the Ministers of the provincial governments who were here at the instance of the Minister for Health attended. They unequivocally said that the Cantonment areas should be revised and I am glad the Minister has taken some action. But one point I would like to know from him. He has appointed two official committees and a general committee. I want to know whether the general committee will have the power to investigate details or merely to examine the reports of the two official committees. This is not clear. If this is not done, the object of this committee will be frustrated.

With these words, I once again pay my compliments. I hope that the honourable Minister will look into the miscellaneous and store charges which form a major portion of his Budget, not minor but major, compared with the salaries and allowances of officers.

लेकिन जब मैं दूसरी साइड की तरफ आता हूँ तो मुझे सिवा अफसोस के और कुछ नहीं होता। डिफेन्स डिपार्टमेंट की स्टेनडिंग कमेटी के मेम्बर की हैसियत से नेवी बेसेज देखने के लिए मैं बम्बई गया था। मैं वहां जाकर "दिल्ली" जहाज को देखा। दिल्ली जहाज को मैंने अच्छी तरह से देखा और उसके आदमियों से जो उसमें काम करते थे मैंने बहुत से सवाल पूछे तो जवाब मिला उसमें जितने औजार मशीन, टॉरपीडो राडर और जो भी जहाज का सामान है वह सब हमको बाहर से मगाना पड़ता है और दूसरे देशों का मुंह ताकना पड़ता है। मैंने उनसे पूछा कि अगर इसमें जितना सामान काम में आता है अगर वह बाहर से न आया तो क्या हम अपनी हिफाजत कर सकते हैं। तो मुझको जवाब मिला, और ठीक जवाब मिला, कि डिफेन्स का जितना सामान है वह किस्मती से हमको बाहर से मांगना ही पड़ेगा। अगर हमको बाहर से सामान नहीं मिला तो हम अपने मुल्क की हिफाजत नहीं कर सकते हैं। अगर हमें किसी बड़े मुल्क से लड़ना पड़े तो खुदा न खास्ता हम अपने को बचा नहीं सकते।

लेकिन जहां तक साइन्स का सवाल है हम अभी बहुत पीछे हैं। मुझे खुशी है कि यह रिपोर्ट डिफेंस मिनिस्टर साहब ने हमारे हाथों में दी है। इसके अन्दर दर्ज है कि अभी इस नये डिपार्टमेंट का रीआरगेनाइजेशन हो रहा है। लेकिन मैं अदब से अर्ज करूंगा और जोर के साथ अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि इस काम को आप पर लगा दीजिये, इसको आप तेजी के साथ जल्दी चलाइये। अभी यह बड़ा आहिस्ता आहिस्ता चल रहा है। अभी तक तीन साइंटिफिक एडवाइजर और एक अंग्रेज एडवाइजर, जिनने सब स्कीम हमें इसके वास्ते बना कर दी हैं, सिर्फ यही मौजूद हैं। और जो ४० सीनियर और १०० जूनियर साइंटिस्ट्स हैं उनको मुक़र्रर नहीं किया गया है। आप उनको मुक़र्रर कीजिये, जिससे आपके रास्ते में जो भी रेस्ट्रिक्शन्स हों वह आपसे दूर हो जायें। मुझे खुशी है कि एक ऐसा डिपार्टमेंट खुला है और वैम्पायर एरोप्लेन्स भी आये हैं। लेकिन अगर हम इन्हीं तीन वैम्पायर्स के पीछे पड़े रहेंगे तो दुनिया तो बहुत आगे निकल जायगी और हम पीछे ही रह जायेंगे। जो लोग हथियारों के मालिक हैं और जो हमको हथियार देते हैं वह हथियार बहुत पुराने होते हैं। इसलिये इस देश की गवर्नमेंट को इस तरह का काम करना चाहिये जिससे यह खुद रिसर्च करके आगे बढ़ सके। इस एज (age) के अन्दर नये हथियारों का काम है। इस एज के अन्दर हमारा फ़र्ज़ है कि हम अपने दिमाग से काम लें। अब एटॉमिक एज (atomic age) का ज़माना है। यह लाठी और राइफल का ज़माना नहीं है। जब मैं आर्डनेंस फैक्टरी की तरफ़ निगाह डालता हूँ तो मैं अपने देश में सिर्फ़ छोटे हथियारों की फैक्टरी देखता हूँ—बड़े हथियार हम नहीं बनाते हैं। यहां एक राइफल फ़ैक्टरी भी है। लेकिन मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि यह लाठी और राइफल का ज़माना नहीं है आपके पास बड़ी बड़ी मशीनों के बनाने की न आरमी की फैक्टरी है न नेवी की है और न एयर की है। आप सारी तबज़्जह, सोल (Sole) तबज़्जह, पूरी तबज़्जह, सिर्फ़ इसकी तरफ़ दें अगर आप चाहते हैं कि यह देश ठीक तरह से तरक्की करे। इसलिये मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि जो अब स्कीम साइंस बोर्ड की हमारे सामने रखी गयी है यह महज़ एक स्कीम है। अभी तक इस पर अमल दरामद नहीं हुआ है। लेकिन मैं इसकी शिकायत आपसे कैसे करूँ क्योंकि मैं जानता हूँ कि आप जो कुछ कर सकते हैं वह कर रहे हैं। अभी आपको दूसरे देशों पर निर्भर होना पड़ता है। यह सब मैं जानता हूँ और इसलिये कैसे आपसे शिकायत करूँ। लेकिन मैं यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि आप इसके अन्दर ज़्यादा से ज़्यादा तेजी अक़्तियार करें। मैं इस पर इससे ज़्यादा जोर नहीं दे सकता।

दूसरी बात जो मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि मैंने इस रिपोर्ट में पढ़ा है कि टैरीटोरियल आरमी जिसके वास्ते हमने पिछले सितम्बर सन् १९४८ में ऐक्ट पास किया था उसकी तरफ़ तबज़्जह तो दी जा रही है लेकिन:

“recruitment will start in the course of the year 1949”.

मैं अदब से अर्ज करूंगा कि मैं इस टैरीटोरियल आरमी की तरफ़ खास तौर पर तबज़्जह डिफेंस मिनिस्टर साहब की दिलाना चाहता हूँ। आज एक अरब ५७ करोड़ रुपये का खर्च इस एस्टीमेट में पास करने को हम तैयार हैं। जब तक कि ट्रांज़ीशन का ज़माना है आप जितना चाहते हैं खर्च कीजिये क्योंकि हम जानते हैं कि काश्मीर का मामला अभी तय नहीं हुआ है। कितने ही भूत हमारी तरफ़ देखते हैं जो हमें हड़प करना चाहते हैं। उस सब के लिये हमें तैयार रहना है। लेकिन अलटीमेटली इतनी बड़ी भारी आरमी हिन्दुस्तान नहीं रख सकेगा और इसका इलाज सिर्फ़ एक ही है और वह यह है कि टैरीटोरियल आरमी इसकी जगह ले। मैं अभी स्विटज़रलैंड गया था। वहां कोई बड़ी भारी आरमी मौजूद नहीं है। लेकिन वहां का हर आदमी और औरत २४ घंटे के अन्दर फौज में शामिल होकर फौज को तैयार कर सकता है और कई लाख की फौज स्विटज़रलैंड में इस तरह २४ घंटे में जमा हो सकती है। मैं जानता हूँ कि स्विटज़रलैंड

एजुकेशन के लिये, उसमें सिर्फ ४० लड़के पढ़ते हों तो यह एक बड़ी भारी किमिनल नेग्लिजेंस है। जो हमारे देश में सबसे ज़रूरी पढ़ाई का काम है वह टेक्नीकल ट्रेनिंग की पढ़ाई का काम है। हमारे देश में टेक्निकल एजुकेशन की ज़रूरत है, टेक्नीकल परसानल (technical personnel) की ज़रूरत है। मैं यह नहीं मानता कि यहां फूडग्रेन्स की कमी है। अगर हमारे मुल्क में टेक्नीकल एजुकेशन हो तो काफी फूडग्रेन्स पैदा हो सकते हैं। तो ऐसी हालत में ऐसे स्कूल में जो आरमी रन (run) करती हो, जिसका सारा खर्च आरमी देती है जिसके अन्दर वज़ीफे आरमी देती हो, उसमें १०० लड़के न मिलें। यह बात मैं नहीं समझ सकता। यह बात नहीं हो सकती कि इसमें भरती होने के लिये काफी लड़के न मिलें। इसलिये मैं चाहता हूँ कि आप इसकी तरफ तवज़्जह दें।

मैंने जो बात अर्ज करनी थी, वह अर्ज कर दी। घंटी बज चुकी है और मैं हाउस का ज्यादा वक्त नहीं लेना चाहता। मैं आपकी खिदमत में फिर मुबारिकबाद पेश करता हूं, आपके काश्मीर के रेकार्ड के बारे में और आपने जो इस फौज के अन्दर तीन चार बातें जो कायम रखी हैं, उनके लिये। जब राउन्डटेबिल कन्फ्रेन्स हुई थी और महात्मा गांधी वहां पर तशरीफ ले गये थे, लार्ड शेन्की ने उनको ताना दिया था कि जब तुमको स्वराज्य मिल जायेगा, तब यह बतलाओ कि तुम यह सारी फौज कैसे कायम रखोगे। आज आपने उसका अच्छी तरह से जवाब दे दिया है, वह बेहतरीन है और अंग्रेजों की जो यह एक मेन्टल ट्रबल थी उसको बेवुनयाद जाहिर कर दिया है। पिछले साल मैं खुद काश्मीर गया था, और मैंने देखा कि आसकी फौज बिल्कुल नान-कम्युनल थी और हर एक आदमी जो फौज के अन्दर मौजूद था, वह जिस तरह से काम करता था जो उसका फर्ज था, मैं उसकी जितनी तारीफ करूं उतनी थोड़ी है। मेरे दिल से यह आवाज बेसावता निकलती है कि अगर हिन्दुस्तान में किसी मिनिस्टरी ने शानदार काम किया है तो दो मिनिस्टरीयों ने काम किया है वह है डिफेंस और स्टेट्स मिनिस्टरी। स्टेट्स मिनिस्टरी ने करीब करीब सारी रियासतों का सवाल हल कर दिया और जो डिफेंस मिनिस्टरी हैं उसने हमारा नाम हर तरफ बढ़ा दिया और दिखला दिया कि आजाद हिन्दुस्तान की फौज किसी भी बाहरी ताकत का या अन्दूनी झगड़े का मुकाबला हर समय करने को पूरी तरह तैयार है। और उसकी रक्षा में हमारा देश महफूज है।

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): When I think that, when on 15th August the British left and our country attained freedom, what was the condition of her army, air force and navy. So for the manner in which our army facing great odds upheld the honour of our country and exalted her prestige, I, on my own behalf as well as on the behalf of the House without any hesitation highly congratulate the honourable the Defence Minister for this.

Our sea-coast extends to five thousand miles and forms the frontier of our country on two sides. Such a vast country is to be defended against invasions. To our greatest misfortune when the British quitted India then for such a vast country they did not leave behind any battleship, and there was no air force even. The things that they have left here, for them also we have to look towards Europe. I think that perhaps the Romans even would not have left Britain in such a condition. In 1928 Dr. Moonje, speaking in this very House where I am standing today, visualised all this and told the British not to treat us in this manner. He asked them to expand our air force and navy for us as he feared that the British could quit and go back like the Romans.

The conditions of those ordnance factories that were present in 1947, had also become deteriorated. There the work had been stopped in those factories. When the British decided to quit India they do not take any care of these factories and when partition took place the condition deteriorated still more. Two thirds of the military accommodations meant for army, air force and navy went over to Pakistan and two thirds of India's forces fell to our share, and we had to labour under great hardships. But our troops discharged their duties, as we expected of them, with great devotion and acquired a name for themselves throughout the world.

Before they could set to work they had to discharge their duties in Kashmir, in Hyderabad and in Junagarh. Everybody is well aware of the fact as to how our troops discharged their duties in Kashmir and Hyderabad, and for this I, on behalf of the House, congratulate the Honourable Minister and the all personnel of the Indian army. By the deeds of bravery done by our commanders and troops after attaining independence the prestige and honour of this House, of the whole country has been raised. Not only this our soldiers made a name for themselves by fighting on mountains at a height of 16,000 feet. Not only this, our soldiers, who had gone to render help to the people of Kashmir, behaved towards them with utmost gentleness and thus they won the hearts of the people of Kashmir. Upholding the very same ideals that had been laid by our much respected Mahatma Gandhi, our troops conducted operations in Kashmir and raised the honour of the followers of Mahatma Gandhi to an exalted height. They took the people of Kashmir as their brothers and like brothers shared with them their rations also. By such deeds they won the hearts of the people of Kashmir and made a name for this country throughout the world. For all these things we congratulate Sardar Baldev Singh.

But when I turn towards the other side then I feel nothing except regret. As a member of the Standing Committee for Defence I had gone to Bombay to see the naval bases. There I saw the cruiser "Delhi". I made a thorough inspection of "Delhi" and when I asked the officers working thereon they told me that they had to import from foreign countries all the instruments, machines, torpedoes, radar and spare parts of the ship, and so have to look towards other countries. I asked them that if as much materials that are utilized here could not be got from foreign countries then can we defend ourselves? Then I got an answer and a right answer of course, that we will unfortunately have to import from foreign countries all the materials required for the defence of the country. If we fail to obtain these materials from foreign countries then we cannot defend our country. If we had to fight against some powerful country then God forbidding we can not defend ourselves.

Thus it is essential that we must manufacture these things in our country. For this the Defence Department must work at top speed. But what ever efforts are being made in this direction these efforts are going on very slowly and indolently. The other countries of the world are ready to pay lip sympathy towards us but we do not get war materials. Then the only course that is left to us is that we should at the earliest possible set up such factories in our country wherein we could manufacture all our war materials for the forces. This work should be done with such a speed and promptness that we may become self sufficient in all these things. A provision of 15 crores has been made in this Budget and which includes the amount of 11 crores and 80 lacs as the value of the things imported from foreign countries leaving a balance of 3 crores and 20 lacs; I cannot understand this, this amount is highly insufficient for the needs of such a vast country. For this work whatever amount the Defence Ministry demands should be given to the Ministry. Our country does not lack good soldiers. Our country does not lack intelligence. The thing that we lack are materials and goods. These are the days of scientific warfare and for this sake new types of weapons and arms are manufactured. Our Government should make every possible efforts to manufacture these modern types of arms in this country. The soldiers of our country are in no way inferior to those of the other countries. As far as the question of science is concerned we are far backward. I am glad that the Honourable the Defence Minister has given this report to us. It is mentioned in the report that just now the re-organisation of this Department is being done. Very respectfully I would submit and with full emphasis at my command I like to submit that you should do this work with top speed, proceed with this work as quickly as possible. For the present the progress is very slow. Till now there are only three Indian scientific advisers and one English adviser, and they have prepared for us all the schemes for the re-organisation. The other 40 senior and 100 junior scientists have not yet been appointed. You must appoint them at the earliest so that whatever restrictions might be in your way may be removed. I am pleased to learn that such a department has been set up and some Vampire aeroplanes also have come. But if we were to dance attendance on these three Vampires only then the world would advance far beyond us and we would be left behind lagging. The countries that manufacture arms and the arms that they give to us are generally old. Therefore the Government of our country should act in such a manner whereby this country by doing research work herself, may make rapid progress. In this present age modern arms are wanted. In the present age it is our duty that we use our intelligence. This age is the Atomic Age. This age is not of lathis and rifles. When I turn my attention towards Ordnance factories, then in my country I see factories for making smaller arms, we do not manufacture heavier types of armaments. We have here a rifle factory also. But I like to submit that this is not an age of lathis and rifles. You have no big factory either of the army or of the air force or of the navy for the manufacture of heavy machines and armaments. If you wish your country to make sound progress then you must pay your sole and undivided attention towards this only. Therefore I wish to submit that the scheme of the Board of Science, that has been placed before us, is merely a scheme only. The scheme has not yet come into operation. But how does it lie in my mouth to make a complaint about this when I see that whatever you could do you are doing. As yet you have to fall back upon other countries. I know all this and so how can I make a complaint. But I wish to submit that you should give more acceleration to this work. I cannot lay any more emphasis than this on the point.

Now I wish to give five or six minor suggestions. Whatever I could gather on going through your report and whatever things I could see when as a member of the Standing Committee I went to Bombay and Calcutta to inspect the factories and naval bases there; I wish to submit something based on these experiences. One thing that I wish to submit is that I have read in this report that for the co-ordination of the air, naval and army services there is the Honourable the Defence Minister and he himself co-ordinates these services. I have not the least doubt that the Honourable the Defence Minister must be doing this work most efficiently. But very respectfully I beg to submit that if for this co-ordination work an officer well conversant with the techniques of all the three kinds of forces is appointed and placed at the head of the three forces, and if he were to do this co-ordination work then it would be far better and expedient. Under these circumstances if the Honourable the Defence Minister were to pay attention towards the general policy and remain in the general charge then he would be able to pay more attention to this work. If only such work is placed in his charge then he would be able to do more work. But this work must be entrusted to such a person who must be an expert in all the three branches of the defence forces and all the persons in charge of all the three branches must be subordinate to the Honourable the Defence Minister.

The second thing that I wish to submit is that I have read in this report that though attention is being paid towards the Territorial Army, for which we had passed an Act in September 1948, yet "recruitment will start in the course of the year 1949". Very humbly I would like to submit that I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable the Defence Minister particularly towards the Territorial Army. Today we are ready to sanction an expenditure of 157 crores of rupees in this estimate. Till the transition period lasts you may spend as much as you like because we know that the problem of Kashmir has not yet been settled. Many evil spirits look towards us and who wish to swallow us up. We have always to be ready for them. But ultimately India would not be able to maintain such a big army and the only solution for this is that the Territorial Army may take its place. Quite recently I had gone to Switzerland. There is no big regular army. But there within 24 hours every man and woman can report for duty and enlist in the army and so in Switzerland within 24 hours an army of several lakhs in this way can report for duty. I know that Switzerland is a small country and there the conditions are quite different. But I know the greater expansion you would give to the Territorial Army the lesser the expenses you would have to incur. This Territorial Army is in a way the biggest guarantee of internal peace. It may not be so that the strength of the Territorial Army may be only 2-4 lakhs you should raise an army of at least 20 lakhs. On the last occasion our Honourable the Defence Minister had stated that in his opinion a Territorial Force of 10 lakhs strength could be raised if the age limit was to be restricted to 20-25 years. It was stated that this would entail an expenditure of 25 crores of rupees. I would submit that taking the long term view in consideration. You should expand the Territorial Army so that we may be able to take full advantage of this reduction in expenditure.

After this I like to submit that about the Budget, that has been presented before us, Mr. Sidhva has submitted some facts for your kind consideration and has stated that there are certain items in the Budget which we are not competent enough to understand. I wish to draw your attention towards military farms. On this item Rs. 1,80,00,000 has spent, but under Miscellaneous Items the total of expenditure is given as Rs. 4,82,79,000 and no details of this expenditure are given.

We are quite unable to understand whether this expenditure has justly been made or not. If you want to get the vote of the House then it is essential for the House that it may be able to judge this thing. So it is necessary to give more details. I do not want to ascertain technical and secret details. But what hesitation can you have in informing us as to how many dairy farms are and in what manner they function. By knowing the details of these things no secret information would be disclosed. The House must at least know this that the Budget we are passing we are understanding it or not and are critically examining the same or not.

Besides this I wish to draw your attention towards this side. At Calcutta I saw a school which was perhaps attached to the rifle factory. But I was highly pained to see that school. The school has accommodation sufficient enough for admission of 100 students. Therein 100 students can get technical training. But unfortunately, there are only 40 students. What is the reason for this? In a school where accommodation be sufficient for 100 students for technical education only 40 be getting training then this is a very serious type of criminal negligence. In our country the most important branch of education these days is the imparting of technical training. In our country there is a need of technical education, and a need of technical personnel. I do not admit that there is a shortage of food grains in our country. If there be technical education in our country then sufficient food grains can be grown here. Then in such circumstances I am not able to understand that such a school, which is run by the army, whose entire expenditure is footed by the army, wherein scholarships also are given by the army, cannot attract even 100 students for admission. It cannot be the case that sufficient number of students may not be found for admission to this school. Therefore I want you to pay more attention towards this.

I wish to submit one thing by the way of complaint. Your recruiting officers, as far as it is in my knowledge, do not recruit Harijans till the time they do not disclose that they are members of those castes that are termed as martial races. I know that now there is no differentiation of martial and non-martial races, and you yourself have ended it. Instead of the old martial races the deeds of glory done today by the Madrasis, who have been recruited in army, while fighting at great heights and in snow fall in Kashmir have ended all this differentiation for good. Yet still if this treatment is meted out to Harijans then how can we appear before them with confidence. We have passed that untouchability will not be allowed to exist. But if such treatment is meted out to the Harijans then what would we be able to say. Therefore I respectfully like to submit that better treatment should be meted out to Harijans.

Sir, with your permission, I wish to submit one more point. I am not satisfied with the present system of management in the factories. I am not prepared to accept that till you would not establish those standards in your factories, according to which all the factories throughout the world run, till you would not utilize them properly; you cannot set the economic management of the factories in order. These factories neither show daily costs nor commercial costs. Then how can you manage these factories? The officers of the factory say that they do not give such accounts to anybody. I asked them if they could tell me whether the job work that they get from the railways, and the factories that do the job, do it cheaply or dearly. But none of them could give a satisfactory answer hereof. Therefore I would respectfully submit that you spend crores of rupees of this country and provide many things like cloth, machines etc. But all these things, as far as their working is concerned, should be done systematically. You must certainly organise them.

What I had to submit I have submitted. The bell has gone and I do not want to take more time of the House. I once again congratulate you for your Kashmir record and for maintaining the two or three salient features of the army. When the Round Table Conference was called and Mahatma went there to participate in it, then Lord Shanky taunted him by saying that when you would attain Swarajya then how would you maintain the entire army. Today you have given an appropriate answer to that gibe. Your answer is the best and has proved the Britisher's mental trouble, to be perfectly groundless. Last year I myself had gone to Kashmir and there I saw that your army was absolutely non communal and everybody in the army did his work in a manner as befitted his obligation and duty. However much I praise the army it would always fall short. Spontaneously my heart gives out that if any Ministries have done splendid work then only two Ministries have done so and these are the Defence Ministry and the States Ministry. The States Ministry has solved the problem of nearly all the States and the Defence Ministry has glorified our name and prestige in the eyes of the world and has shown that the armies of Independent India are always fully prepared and competent to combat any external forces or internal squabbles and under its protection our country is perfectly safe and secure.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch, till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Mr. Speaker: I presume the honourable Minister will require about half an hour. That means we carry on the discussion up to 4-30. I will request honourable Members to keep strictly within the time limit.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin (C.P. and Berar: Muslim): I congratulate the Minister in charge of Defence for the reorganisation of the army in spite of the tremendous difficulties after the partition of this country. We really pay a tribute to the Army for bringing refugees, for fighting the police action in Hyderabad and our operations in Kashmir.

It has been referred to in the speech by the Minister that the process of nationalization is being completed. I lay very great emphasis on the point of nationalisation of the Technicians in the Army and Navy. If all soldiers are recruited from India and if the key posts of the technicians and experts go to foreigners, I would say that there is no nationalisation at all. In the set up of international politics today, Military being the most important department, I would urge that there should be complete nationalisation as far as technicians and scientists organisation is concerned. I would urge upon the Minister in charge that speedy steps should be taken for this and within at least two years, if not more, the entire band of technicians should be recruited from India.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): But, it takes a long time to train them.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: My next point is the expenditure on Defence. I entirely agree with these speakers who have said that looking to the politics, international and domestic, it is necessary to maintain the Army as we are maintaining. Happily for me, I have got a ground of argument and discussion, because the Minister in charge of Defence compared the figures for Pakistan and India. We find that the Defence expenditure is 157 crores in India and 47 crores in Pakistan. If the Minister in charge quoted these figures to show that there is a race for armaments and a justification for these armaments to be increased, then, my submission is, that a stage has been reached when Pakistan and the Government of India should examine and find out whether there is any conflict for which such huge armies ought to be maintained. We have succeeded in our police action in Hyderabad and now, about Kashmir, the matter is left to the plebiscite. The Prime Minister of India and the Government of India have declared not once, but on several occasions that they have no intention to attack any other country, that they have no schemes of aggrandisement. It would be madness to suppose that Pakistan can invade India with our resources, with our military, and with our strength, as the Minister in charge has said. If there is no occasion for any conflict now, it is up to the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India to reduce their armaments with a view to have the internal economy of the country improved and with a view to see that both countries enhance their reputation in the economic and other fields. The only method by which this race for armaments can come down is, as I have suggested at the time of the general discussion, the signing of a non-aggression pact. If it is a question of prestige as to who should approach, we are having several inter-dominion conferences and if there is no cause for any conflict now, it passes my imagination why there should not be a non-aggression pact between the two countries, and why there should not be joint defences, to the lasting good of both the countries. When there is no conflict except the elections in Kashmir, my submission is that this should be resorted to if the defence expenditure is to be brought down from 157 crores. About the good intentions of the Government of India, if any proof is needed, the proof is there that at a time when there was undeclared war between India and Pakistan, the Government of India made a reference to the UNO about the Kashmir affair. That is proof of the good intention of the Government of India that they did not want to declare war against Pakistan. When such proofs are forthcoming, when good intentions are there and both realise that there should be amity and friendliness between the two countries, there is no reason why such a pact should not be signed, and there is no reason why joint defences should not be created. Both the countries have got to meet the menace of chaos and anarchy on both sides. East and West. In view of this, and in view of the fact that we should have an Asian bloc to fight out foreigners on our soil, it is very necessary that such a pact should be translated into action.

Shri B. Das: Who will bell the cat?

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: That is the point.

One thing more, and I have done. I was very glad to hear when the Minister in charge of Defence stated that with our Army in India, there was no question of caste, creed and community. I was very glad to know that communal considerations never weighed with our fighting forces either in Kashmir or Hyderabad. We have also found that the Muslims, particularly in the Hyderabad action, were entirely with the Government of India. I would respectfully submit that the recruitment of Muslims in recent years after August 1947 has been very negligible. If there are political reasons which are cogent, they should be stated on the floor of the House. If you have Sheikh Abdulla in Kashmir and a band of loyal Muslims, in the country, there is no reason why Muslims should be excluded as a class from general recruitment to the Army and Navy. Therefore my submission is that there would be a time in the country when Muslims should fight shoulder to shoulder for the honour and prestige of this country and there is no reason why they should be excluded from the defence of this country when they regard themselves as nationals of this country. In the great war of 1914-18, the Muslims of India fought against Turkey. They have fought against Arabia. Even your troops have fought in Kashmir. Therefore my submission is that exclusion of those people as a class, if at all it is resorted to, is not correct. I say that there has been a negligible recruitment of Muslims into the Indian army. If such is the case, this policy should be reversed, and I would make an appeal to the Minister in charge not to allow the Muslims of India to feel that they are humiliated or insulted on the ground that they are not fit to be in the army.

Shri C. M. Poonacha (Coorg): At the outset I wholeheartedly associate myself with the tributes paid by the honourable the Defence Minister as well as by all sections of this House to our Armed Forces. The previous speakers associated themselves in a similar manner with the sentiments expressed by the honourable Minister for the magnificent services rendered by our Armed Forces, both in the Kashmir campaign and also to what is now historically known as the "Police Action" in Hyderabad. From point of brevity I would like to confine myself to a few things which have not been covered by the previous speakers. I do not intend to traverse the same points which have been made out by the previous speakers.

After having heard my honourable friend, Mr. Karimuddin, I felt that in so far as our discussions relate to this Defence Budget, there is a sort of feeling which has given expression to some sort of misleading conclusions. I mean to say that certain references made here give a false impression that India is, on a sort of "War Path" (Kazi Syed Karimuddin: 'I have never said that!') or on a sort of "Amendment Race." No. I shall say, far far from it, India is not at all on the path of what might be called by a few as an Armament Race, because if you look into the Budget and scrutinise the figures, you will very clearly find there that because of certain unavoidable circumstances which have placed India in a very pitiable condition compelling factors have forced our hands to develop certain things in so far as defence measure are concerned. Mostly, they are of the nature of building accommodation, providing equipment, buying stores, and more than all these things, providing the minimum amount of training facilities for our Armed Forces. It has been said that on account of the partition the set up of our Armed Forces suffered very much. We lost practically two-thirds of our accommodation establishments and we were just left with one-third of the housing accommodation in India, whereas two-thirds of it went over to Pakistan. On the other hand, according to the division of the Indian Army of the undivided India, we got two-thirds of it—two-thirds of the personnel to be accommodated with this less than one-third of the housing accommodation. It is a problem by itself, and most of our expenditure, if you would like to go into it in detail, would be for housing the armed personnel, the equipment, the stores and all manner of things, and then above all these to afford the minimum amount of scientific training facilities for our three Services, particularly the Navy and the Air Force. Therefore, it has been a sort of unhappy reference in this particular matter and I should like to clear all doubts in the minds of every one here that so far as India is concerned there is absolutely nothing like a race for Armament. Much more than that, I should say that this budget is not the one which arises out of a Fear Complex. We do not see any signs of aggression from any side. On the contrary we are in very happy company as our neighbouring States and Governments are so friendly with us that there is no possibility of any sort of threat across our frontiers and we are quite sure about it. Therefore, there is no point in India trying to resort to what might be called in the modern term a Race for Armament. On the other hand, the standard of our defence forces is so low as compared to the modern standards of armies, that it is necessary that we have got to develop, and do research with a view to improve the capacity as well as the constitution of our armed forces. That is an inevitable thing. No nation can escape that and in that line we are attempting to make a very slow humble and modest progress. I welcome this Budget from that point of view.

If we could just look into the figures of expenditure of the other nations, we could just find that a country like Australia spends about twelve times more on defence than what it used to spend before 1938-39. America today spends ten times more than what she used to spend before 1938-39. The United Kingdom and the U.S.S.R. in similar manner spend more than three times its pre-war budget figures of 1938-39. Supposing if we compare our own, we will find that we have in no way exceeded these limits except for the compelling reasons that we have been subjected to on account of the partition of India.

Next I come to the point of demobilisation. In the speech of the honourable Minister for Finance, there was a mention that demobilisation would be resorted to in a very progressive manner. I for one feel that this would be a rather very unwise step to resort to at the moment. I do not at all endorse the idea of demobilisation and in any case I do not think that the present strength of the Indian Army or the Armed Forces of India is in any way out of proportion to the requirements and considerations of our country. I would like to suggest that before resorting to any plan for demobilisation our Government must first think of absorbing all the forces of the Indian States and then bring them under one unified Command, and after that review the whole position and if we find that there is surplus of armed personnel, by a method of categorisation we can plan for a sort of demobilisation. Not until we have integrated all the Armed Forces of the different States in India should our Government think of demobilisation.

Incidentally I would like to refer to another point also. While we have got to integrate all the State forces in India it is also necessary that we should look into the other side of the picture. I see in quite a number of provinces semi military units called the Gram Rakshak Dals or Home guards etc., which have been raised by the provinces. I do not agree with this idea. So far as internal security is concerned I think the Police Force should be adequate to meet the requirements of the provinces. Apart from that there should not be anything like quasi or semi military units being raised in the provinces. On the other hand, the Government of India, particularly the Ministry of Defence must go ahead with the scheme of the Territorial Army and also the National Cadet Corps so that they can build up a second line of defence and not allow the provinces to develop their own organisations in a haphazard manner. I hope the Defence Minister will take up this matter at a very high level and deal with the provinces and see that there is uniformity brought about in this respect, because any kind of military organisation should be organised and constituted on an all India footing. It cannot be on a purely provincial footing. So far as provincial requirements are concerned the training and constitution of the police force is sufficient and is more than enough.

I would now like to deal with the question of amenities to troops. In this respect I would request the honourable Defence Minister to pay sufficient attention to create more recreation centres for our Armed Personnel and thus see that more amenities are provided for our fighting forces.

So far as the new Pay Code is concerned, Mr. Sidhva made out a point that there is no hardship to the officers. I beg to differ from him. I should like to tell him that so far as the lower rungs of the officer class are concerned they have been hard hit by the new Pay Code. It is so full of anomalies, which require revision and they should be set right.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What are the anomalies?

Shri C. M. Poonacha: I have very little time to give the details and I have some other points to speak upon. So far as the pay scales are concerned I think they require careful examination and revision. As regards pension terms I was happy to note that the honourable the Defence Minister in his statement referred to this point and I hope that he will look into this question and see that the terms are revised and brought up to date.

Then I come to the Reservists who have a liability to be called for active service whenever required. They are given a paltry sum of five rupees per month. On the face of it this is very unjust and requires revision, because this was fixed some twenty or thirty years ago. This allowance must be suitably enhanced.

I come to the question of accommodation, particularly married accommodation for the rank and file. So far as the army is concerned they have hardly about ten to fifteen per cent. married accommodation, whereas in the Navy and Air Force it is completely nil. I wish sufficient attention is also paid to this question. The Armed Forces Accommodation Committee which was constituted by the Ministry of Defence sometimes ago submitted its report sometime in 1947. I wonder whether the suggestions made by that Committee have been taken into consideration.

There is the question of the compulsory age of retirement. In normal times only Cadets were taken into the officer class but during War time on account of the demand they had to recruit personnel from higher age groups, so much so the compulsory age restriction for retirement works very adversely on this class of Officers who have been recruited from the higher age groups. This should be examined and suitable rules must be framed to remove the hardships.

With these remarks, Sir, I resume my seat with the hope that the honourable the Defence Minister will take these few suggestions of mine into consideration.

श्री मोहन लाल गौतम : जनाब स्पीकर साहब, अभी कुछ एतराजात जो पेश किये गये हैं उनमें मैं समझता हूँ काफी जान है। जब यह कहा जाता है कि डिफेंस पर हमारा १५७ करोड़ रुपया खर्च होता है, और हमारे कुल बजट का ४८ फी सदी रुपया खर्च हो जाता है, तो वाकई बात यह है कि इस गरीब मुल्क के लिये जो भूखा है, नंगा है, यह काफी बड़ी रकम है। लेकिन सवाल यह पैदा होता है कि क्या यह रकम खर्च करना जरूरी है या नहीं। अब तक अंग्रेजों के जमाने में आर्मी के दो काम थे। एक तो External aggression से अपने आप को बचाने के लिये और दूसरे Internal security कायम रखने के लिये। मैं समझता हूँ कि स्वराज्य हासिल होने के बाद, हालांकि अब तक यहां हालत ऐसी पैदा नहीं हुई है कि Internal security के लिये हमें फौज की जरूरत न हो। लेकिन मुझे यह उम्मीद है, और मैं यह समझता हूँ कि हमारी गवर्नमेंट को इस तरह चलना होगा कि Internal security के लिये फौज का इस्तेमाल न किया जा सके। और सबों और मुकामी जगह वह इस तरह का अपनी पुलिस का इन्तजाम कर सके कि वहां फौज की जरूरत इन्टर्नल सिक्योरिटी के लिये न हो। लेकिन जब तक यह नहीं होता, जब तक हम यह देखते हैं कि बंगाल में आज फौज की जरूरत है इन्टर्नल सिक्योरिटी के लिये, और दूसरी जगह भी, तब तक हमको यह देखना पड़ता है कि जितनी फौज हमारे पास है, वह हमारे लिये काफी है या नहीं। काश्मीर का मसला आज हम देखते हैं तय हो गया है, लेकिन कहा नहीं जा सकता कि दोबारा फौज को आप हुकम देंगे लड़ाई लड़ने के लिये या नहीं। यह अभी हम या गवर्नमेंट नहीं कह सकते। लेकिन यह रुपया कम खर्च हो सके तो ठीक है, लेकिन जितना खर्च हो रहा है उसमें बहुत ज्यादा criticism की गुंजाइश नहीं दिखाई देती।

पास फ़ौज तो दो तिहाई आई लेकिन एकोमोडेशन (accommodation) एक तिहाई ही हमारे हिस्से में पड़ी। फ़ौज के मकानों की हालत बहुत काफ़ी खराब है। हम कह सकते हैं कि हमारे लैंड फ़ोर्सेज तो काफ़ी अच्छे हैं, लेकिन जहां तक समुद्री बेड़े और हवाई बेड़े का ताल्लुक है वह नाकाफ़ी है। समुद्री बेड़ा तो हमारे पास न होने के बराबर था, अब शायद धीरे धीरे कुछ हो रहा है और शायद आपको यह सुनकर ताज्जुब होगा कि अगर दस साल तक हम लगातार कोशिश करते रहें तब भी हमारे समुद्री बेड़े की ताकत उतनी न हो सकेगी जितनी कि आज एक छोटे से मुल्क न्यूज़ीलैंड की है जिसकी आबादी सिर्फ २० लाख है। बीस लाख की आबादी के मुल्क के पास हमसे इस वक्त समुद्री बेड़ा ज्यादा है और हमारे पास उतना बेड़ा दस साल के बाद तक नहीं होगा जिसको कि हम करोड़ों रुपये खर्च करके यहां बनायेंगे। हवाई फ़ौज का भी यही हाल है। उनके पास इक्विपमेंट (Equipment) नहीं है। समुद्री बेड़े के पास इक्विपमेंट (Equipment) नहीं है। एक क्रूज़र (Cruiser), बड़ी मुश्किल से मिला है। तीन डेस्ट्रॉयर्स (Destroyers) आ रहे हैं। यह हमें नहीं मालूम कि वह किस किस के होंगे। मैं यह नहीं मानता कि कोई मुल्क अपने यहां से फ़र्स्ट क्लास इक्विपमेंट आपको दे देगा। इसलिए मैं समझता हूँ कि अभी रुपया तो बहुत ज्यादा खर्च करने की ज़रूरत पड़ेगी। इसलिए यह मानते हुए भी कि यह रकम बहुत काफ़ी बड़ी है, हमें यह भी आगे के लिए ध्यान रखना होगा कि हमें इससे और ज्यादा खर्च करना है। लेकिन जब मैं यह कहता हूँ तो उसके मानी यह नहीं हैं कि जो कुछ खर्च हो रहा है उसमें हर तरह से जितनी इकोनोमी (Economy) हो सकती थी वह हो रही है और इससे ज्यादा नहीं हो सकती। मैं समझता हूँ कि डिपार्टमेंट और मिनिस्टर साहब कुछ कर रहे होंगे हर तरह की इकोनोमी के लिए, लेकिन फिर भी गुंजाइश इस बात की है कि हमेशा इस तरफ नज़र रखी जाय, एक सख्त और कड़ी नज़र रखी जाय इस बात पर कि फ़िज़ूलखर्ची न हो। उसके लिए मेरी तजवीज़ यह है कि कोई कमेटी इस बात के लिए बिठाई जाय जो हमेशा यह Watch करती रहे कि फ़िज़ूलखर्ची न हो।

हमारे मिनिस्टर साहब ने जब अपनी सुबह की स्पीच दी तो उन्होंने रियासतों की फ़ौज की बहुत तारीफ़ की थी। उन्होंने कहा था कि वह फ़ौज बहुत माकूल है। और उन्होंने बहुत अच्छा काम किया, यह आज सुबह हम मिनिस्टर साहब से सुन चुके हैं। मैं समझता हूँ कि अब वह ज़माना आ गया है कि जिस तरह से स्टेट का इंटीग्रेशन (Integration) हो गया और जिस तरह से कि मुल्क को एक बना दिया गया है, उसके बाद यह जरूरी नहीं है कि रियासतों के मातहत अलग अलग फ़ौजें रहें। उन सबको भी एक हो जाना चाहिए। वह सब फ़ौजें एक कमांड में और एक आर्गेनाइजेशन में होनी चाहिए और रियासतों के हाथ में सिर्फ़ पुलिस रह जाय। इससे फ़ौजों के खर्च में बहुत सा ख़या भी बच जायगा और जो बहुत सी इनएफ़ीशेंसी छोटी छोटी रियासतों की फ़ौजों में है वह दूर हो जायगी और आपकी फ़ौज की बहुत ताक़त बढ़ जायगी। मैं समझता हूँ कि हमको इस तरफ़ बहुत जल्द ध्यान देना होगा और इस फ़ौज को भी Integrate करना होगा।

अभी यह कहा गया है कि हमारे यहां यूरोपियन टैकनीशियन हैं। मैंने भी इस मसले को देखा है और इसकी काफ़ी जांच की है। मैं समझता हूँ कि जो कोई भी हमें हिन्दुस्तान में मिलता है वह रख लिया जाता है, लेकिन हमारी वदकिस्मती यह है कि अभी हिन्दुस्तान में ट्रेड टैकनीशियन्स काफ़ी संख्या में हैं नहीं और उनको ट्रेन करने में देर लगती है, और यूरोपियन इस वजह से रखने पड़ते हैं कि हमारे पास हिन्दुस्तानी टैकनीशियन नहीं हैं। जिस वक्त मिल जायेंगे उस वक्त उनको हम रख लेंगे। उनकी ट्रेनिंग के लिए इन्तज़ाम हो रहा है और अब वह ट्रेन किये जा सकते हैं।

इन शब्दों के साथ मैं उम्मीद करता हूँ कि मिनिस्टर साहब जो कुछ मैंने उनकी खिदमत में अर्ज किया है उस पर ध्यान देंगे।

Shri Mohan Lai Gautam (U.P.: General): I think there is sufficient force in some of the objections which have just now been raised. When it is said that our Defence Expenditure amounts to Rs. 157 crores and it constitutes 48 per cent. of our total Budget, then it is in reality a fact that this is a very huge amount for this country to bear—a country poor, famished and naked. But the question arises as to whether such an expenditure is absolutely necessary or not. Uptil the time of the British regime the Army had to perform two functions viz. firstly to safeguard the country against any external aggression and secondly to maintain internal security. I feel that even after the attainment of independence, conditions have not yet been restored here which may obviate the necessity of maintaining an Army for internal security. But I hope and also feel that our Government shall have to change its line of action and abandon the use of Army for preserving the internal security, and it should make arrangements to employ its own Police Force both locally and in the Provinces and thus the necessity of maintaining the Army for internal security may not be felt any longer. But as long as this is not done and so long as we find that there is a necessity of keeping an Army in Bengal and other places for the maintenance of internal security, then we shall have to see whether the Army which we have is sufficient to meet our requirement or not. Today we see that the Kashmir problem has been solved, but it can not be anticipated whether you will give fresh orders to the Army to fight or not. Neither we nor the Government can visualize this at the moment. But it would better if we can reduce this expenditure and there is apparently not very much scope for criticism of the whole expenditure that is being incurred at present. I realize that if our country can afford, we can spend far in excess of what we are doing at present but this all depends on our country's finances. Perhaps 3 P.M. people have no idea, just as my honourable friend Maulana Sahib has stated, that while we got two-third of the army we got only one-third of the accommodation. The condition of the buildings intended for the Armed Forces is bad enough. We can say that our Land Forces are quite sufficient but so far as our Naval and Air Forces are concerned, these are inadequate. Our Naval Force existed in name only. Now perhaps its strength is being raised gradually. You will perhaps be wonderstruck to know that even if we strenuously try for the next ten years, we cannot raise the strength of our Naval Force to the extent it is possessed by a small country like New Zealand which has got a population of 20 lakhs only. A country with a population of twenty lakhs has got at present a much stronger Naval Force than that owned by us, and we will not be able to raise the strength of our Navy to that extent even after the expiry of ten years, and spending crores of rupees. The same is the case of our Air Forces. They have not any equipment. The Navy also lacks in equipment. We could get one Cruiser and that only after much difficulty. We are shortly receiving three Destroyers. We do not know even as to what their type would be. I do not think if any country will like to part away with its first-class equipment for our sake. I therefore, feel that we have still got to spend a lot. Even though after taking this as granted that this is a huge expenditure, we shall have to keep in view that a far greater amount has got to be spent further. But when I say this, it does not mean that all possible economy is being effected in the present expenditure and nothing more can be done in the matter. I think the Honourable Minister and his Department might be doing something to launch economy drive in every direction, but still there exists an ample scope for doing this and exercising a strict vigilance that no extravagant expenditure is incurred. To achieve this end, I would propose the setting up of a Committee which should always watch that no money is spent extravagantly.

Just as I have now stated, we have to raise a sufficient strength of our Naval and Air Forces. Apart from this, I would like to say that our existing Ordnance Factories do manufacture small arms only but we have not got any such factory which is capable of manufacturing big arms. We shall have to set up such a factory. I would like to tell the Honourable Minister one or two things in connection with Ordnance Factories, namely that a plan covering a number of years should be formulated so that after the expiry of a specified period you may be able to set up a particular type of Ordnance Factory in this country. I do not know whether all the Ordnance Factories are located at safe places or not. If this is not the case, you shall have to shift these ultimately from those places. You shall have to replace the worn-out machinery in the existing Ordnance Factories. And above all, there should be some sort of co-ordination in respect of Ordnance Factories. Such sort of co-ordination is lacking here and I would like to invite special attention of the Government towards this aspect. Both the Industry and Defence Departments cannot be separated from each other. Only a few weeks ago a Conference was convened by the Industry Department, but no representative from the Defence Department was invited to attend that. I think it is a great blunder that no co-ordination exists between the Defence and Industry Departments. We shall also have to reorganise Ordnance Factories in such a manner that these should manufacture ammunition in the time of war and after the cessation of hostilities these should be employed to produce such articles as might be made available for the use of the general public. So long as this is not done, the result would be that the technicians which are employed during the war-time will only manufacture a few articles, but as soon as the war is over, you will be compelled to discharge them because they will not be able to manufacture goods of public utility. The technicians will go and seek employment elsewhere. Next time if you want to re-employ them and run the factory to its maximum capacity you will not be able to get them back. Therefore, I think it will not be advisable from the point of view of the Defence Department to lose the technicians after having trained them. Such a state of affairs should be obviated as far as possible. But when you look towards this respect and devise various ways to absorb the technicians and labourers, then this would give rise to many other questions. These are: it so appears that in the case of labour the last Pay Commission have left over many anomalies. I have been told that the Department have appointed one Mr. Sahni for this purpose. But a period of fourteen months has elapsed and he has not as yet submitted any report and it is also not known as to how he proposes to remove all those anomalies.

Just like the Armed Forces, the housing problem has assumed a gigantic form in the case of factory labour as well. It has been mentioned in the report that it is well nigh impossible for the labour to get accommodation in Calcutta. In case we do not provide them with accommodation, then I would like to know as to how can the labour manage to live in Calcutta? For this reason you shall have to organise the factories in such a manner so that the labour may remain contented. This should not be the case that so long as they do not threaten to go on strike, you should not listen to them. I feel that this is a wrong course and if you continue to act in this manner, then I cannot say as to what would be the consequences?

Just like the Armed Forces, there is another serious problem which confronts the labour and that is of the temporary personnel. There is quite a large number of such temporary personnel who have put in ten to fifteen and twenty years of service. You may just see that even after having rendered such a long service, they are still temporary. They do not know as to when they might be discharged. They also do not know where to go in case of their services being terminated the next day, and moreover, while continuing to be employed here they cannot put heart and soul in their work. Thus they are surely bound to become inefficient. Therefore, I feel that this problem viz., as to how many men you can assimilate should be tackled once for all, and some arrangements should be made in respect of temporary personnel.

While speaking today morning, our Honourable Minister paid glowing tribute to the States' Army. He stated that they are perfect armies and have rendered meritorious services. This we have heard today morning from the Honourable Minister. I think the time has now come that after the integration of the States and unification of the country, it is no longer necessary that the States should be allowed to maintain separate armies under their control. All these should also be integrated. All those armies should be brought under our Command, and one Organisation and the police only should be left under the control of the States. This would not only result in a considerable saving being made under the Defence Expenditure, but would also remove the inefficiency that exists in the Armies maintained by smaller States and increase the strength of your Army. I feel we shall have to devote our immediate attention to this aspect and integrate these armies also. Another aspect to which I would like to invite the attention of the Government and in respect of which we have perhaps upto now been feeling many difficulties is that we have to import from abroad the equipment for our Army. I doubt it that whatever goods we purchase, we get first-rate. Apart from this, from whatever part of the country we may obtain the goods, we have got to see as to how will we be able to manufacture these in our country. If we purchase the stores from abroad, it will also affect our foreign policy. This is a very gigantic problem over which I cannot say much within one or one and a half minutes which is left at my disposal. But now we shall have to consider over this matter carefully as to how can we make our country strong and how can we purchase these stores from the other parts of the world? Therefore, I would submit that although adequate action is being taken, yet there remains lot to be done.

It has just been stated that we have got European Technicians. I have also studied this problem at a great length. I think that whoever is available in India is employed by us. But unfortunately, we have not as yet got a sufficient number of trained technicians in India and it takes time to train them. The Europeans have got to be employed on account of the reason that we do not have adequate number of Indian Technicians. As soon they become available, we shall employ them. Arrangements have been made to train them and they can now be trained.

With these words, I hope that the Honourable Minister would consider over the various suggestions which I have ventured to make.

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I rise to congratulate my friend for having been able to raise an efficient Army, which is in formation, out of the ashes of the combined Indian Forces that we lost as a result of August 15th, 1947. Sir, the Cabinet Mission in its plan of 15th May 1946 have given weighty economic, administrative and above all military reasons against the partition of India. They had laid special stress on the military aspect of the question and I do not think I could do better than quote one sentence out of it:

"The Armed Forces have been built up as a whole for the defence of India as a whole, and break them into two would inflict a deadly blow".

Sir, we were necessarily very nervous when this partition came, and it is to the glory of the Cabinet and especially of my honourable friend to have brought out something brilliant and glorious out of the ashes. Without meaning any exaggeration, I think our defence position is fairly secure and we today have a fairly good Army enough to give us security in the whole of South-East Asia.

All these have been effected certainly at a heavy cost. We have to spend 48 per cent. of our revenues this year, as has been plainly stated by my honourable friend. The question, therefore, comes in whether we have to accept bread and butter or guns and munitions. I must, in this connection, draw the attention of the honourable Members of this House to the severe comments offered by the Eastern Economist. It claims that the defence expenditure could have been cut short by at least Rs. 35 crores, fixing it at about 120 crores. But, Sir, we have to realise that we are in a stage of formation. When Britain left us, the British Navy was guarding the Indian shores, the British personnel was commanding the Indian Army and we were dependent upon not only British officials but also on British equipment and research. Therefore, our Army, big or little as it is, is in a stage of formation, it is still forming, and it would be ideal to criticise today about the finances involved or the expenses that we have to incur. The world conditions, and above all the internal security conditions and also the feelings of neighbours, all combined—which have been brilliantly summarised by my honourable friend the Minister for Finance—make it incumbent on India to spend more for her security. It is unfortunate that our expectations have not been fulfilled, namely, of the League of Nations, of which India is a permanent Member. She was expected to have an international army to look to the peace and security of all the nations of the world. Our anticipations have so far been falsified; we have neither peace nor any sense of security. Pakistan, our neighbour till yesterday was with us and part of us, but it is difficult to find out what her intentions are. Sometimes she gives us kicks, sometimes kisses. What to accept, kisses or kicks?—it is difficult to know. I realise the anxiety of my honourable friend Mr. Kaumuddin and I reciprocate his feelings. The time has come when there should be a sort of a defence agreement or arrangement with Pakistan but how long it will take remains to be seen—God alone knows it.

Some of my friends have consoled themselves with the idea that we are having a good Army and we are having some amount of security. But to what purpose? So long as your Army is merely Indian without Indian equipment, I think to that extent our dependence is lasting and our so-called independent Army is nothing. Therefore, I would appeal to my honourable friend the Minister in charge, and especially my honourable friend the Minister for Finance to take every step in order to keep for India a ready and efficient Indian Army for her security purposes. For this, India should also be able either to start different industries and have Indian armaments herself by starting State organisations or take all necessary and possible action to encourage private enterprise so that India will have very soon not only Indian troops but also Indian equipment. In this connection, let me say this about the purchase of battleships and cruisers, old, antiquated, probably some of them rotten—I do not know—but I have to believe our military officials. We have to purchase these—to what purpose? Why not take up a building programme? America, England and all other free countries have taken to such programmes, why not India do it? Do it yourself or encourage private enterprise. We have got enough possibilities for encouraging ship-building yards in different parts of the country. Stating as a witness, Capt. Choudry gave very good evidence before the Indian Industrial Commission which sat between 1914 and 1916, advocating the starting of a ship-building yard in Orissa at that time. He said that in the East Coast there are very good places where ship-building yards and the ship-building industry could be started. Why not do it? Why depend on British and American antiquated, and rejected ships?

Having stated so much about equipment, I come to the question of the Indian Army. Sir, I have nothing but praise for them. They have none of the protection provided for them under Sections 232 to 239 of the Government of India Act. The adaptations have taken away all the protection that was given to British officials and today our men are as nationalist as nationalists could be. I thank them through you and request the Minister in charge of the Department to convey our feelings to them.

Not only this, but the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Forces is no more His Excellency today. Nor is he drawing the fat salaries that his predecessors were drawing, and yet he is called upon to take heavier responsibility and more onerous duties. He has to defend India, he has to defend our frontiers, he has to defend the coast. It falls to me therefore to give him a warning. When the Japanese war came, the first naval action took place in the Orissa coast and I still recollect the hurry with which the officials in Orissa had to receive the injured and pay attention to the distressed that had to land as a result of the naval action. Now, you have neither Akyab nor Chittagong to help you in giving protection and as for Pakistan, I have told you it is a question of alternative kicks and kisses. Unless they come to some sort of understanding with the Government of India, I think it is fair that the Government of India should see that the eastern coast, particularly the provinces of Bengal and Orissa, are properly safeguarded.

Need I, in this connection, state that you have got the Chilka lake, which is the biggest one in India. My honourable friend Sri Umacharan Patnaik, a member of the Orissa Assembly, who was in the Territorial Forces, has written a valuable book on this problem of utilisation of Chilka for purposes of defence and trade. Looking to history you will see that there was a time when Chalka was a very flourishing port in the eastern coast. I would therefore appeal to the Ministry of Defence and the other concerned Departments to explore the possibilities of utilisation of this great natural benefit that God has given to India.

Now, I come to another question and that is equally important. Having shaken off our dependence on the British Navy, we have to build up our Navy. We have to prepare ourselves to build our Navy. You are building up institutions in Cochin. Why concentrate your activities only at concentrated places? Why not have it diffused in three or four places in the wide coastal line of 4000 miles, so that you will have them at various places. You do not know from what direction troubles come. Sometimes they come from the west; sometimes they come from the east. Is it not fair, necessary and desirable to have institutions at different places instead of concentrating them at one place? I, therefore, appeal to you to give due consideration to this aspect of the question.

I had a number of things to say, but I am sorry there is little time at my disposal. I have stated and I will state again that the time has come when I would appeal to my honourable friend to instruct the Commander-in-Chief and the Generals to visit various provincial headquarters and also university centres and give our young men an idea about the Military, the Navy and the Air Forces, so that they will get some instructions about defence and discipline which is so much wanting in educational institutions and thus you will find very good recruiting ground in these universities.

As my time is up, I wish to repeat as I have begun. I thank my honourable friend and also our Army for the very good and splendid way in which they have discharged their responsibilities equally both in war and in peace—war, because in Kashmir and Hyderabad as also in other places they have shown their mettle. Even Muslim friends have joined the Indian forces giving a direct lie to the anticipations and expectations of communalists, in peace because at times of internal trouble our Army has shown its grit. Although it is now mainly Hindu and Sikh, it has given enough protection to Muslims. I, through you, Sir, convey our sense of appreciation of the Army.

One word more and I shall have done. It is this. Mr. Karimuddin sounded a note of warning in the sense that there are very few Muslims in the Army. I think my friend will agree with me that the Ministry and the Army have shown the greatest confidence by allowing General El Edroos to command even today the army in Hyderabad. No further proof is necessary to the world and to my honourable friend of the genuineness of non-communal feeling of the military, the Ministry and the Cabinet.

Mr. Frank Anthony (C. P. and Berar; General): Sir, in the short time at my disposal, I do not propose to elaborate on the tribute that I feel it is necessary to pay to the officers and men of the Armed Forces. Personally, I do not think any tribute which is too high can be paid to the officers and the men for the manner in which they have weathered the shock of division, our Army was denuded of senior officers and we had to carry on with junior men, many of us felt justifiable misgivings at that time as to whether we would be able to recapture the first-class standards which had been obtaining in our Armed Forces. Today I do not believe that any one who has any knowledge of our Armed Forces has any misgiving whatsoever. I believe that the first-class standards of efficiency, soldiering, discipline and leadership which obtained and for which our Armed Forces have been rightly famous have been more than recaptured.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (one of the Panel of Chairmen.)]

Sir, it is because I am anxious that these acceptedly high standards of leadership, efficiency and discipline should be maintained and if possible strengthened, that I wish to draw the particular attention of the Defence Minister to a matter which, I believe, is creating widespread discontent among all sections of the officers of the Armed Forces. I refer, Sir, to the new Pay Code. It is only right that members of the Armed Forces should not be allowed to agitate for the redress of their grievances. That is an accepted axiom in all the democracies, but while we have this axiom that they should not be permitted to agitate for the redress of their grievances, to that extent it places a greater responsibility on the Defence Minister and those dealing with this problem to see that no removeable grievances exist among officers and men. We would be blinking at facts if we were told that there is no widespread discontent among the officers today as a result of the new Pay Code. If my honourable friend will listen to me, I feel that he will be inclined to agree with what I am attempting to tell this House. It is a known fact that the officers today receive very much less than they were receiving formerly. That by itself is no justification for giving them the former scales of pay. But this is a fact. I was a member of the Pay Commission. Comparing what the Pay Commission gave to his civilian counterpart, I feel that the New Pay Code has not been completely fair with the Army Officer. The Pay Commission accepted a fundamental principle that no officer would have his salary reduced. For instance, if an Officer was getting Rs. 1,100 by no process could he be made to get less than Rs. 1,100. When the question of promotion came, he might have been promoted to the next higher grade and put at a point where he would get a little more than Rs. 1,100, but at no point of time would he be made to receive less than the pay he was receiving, namely, Rs. 1,100. But what has happened in the Armed Forces? My friend there will say: 'Though we have reduced their salaries, we have staggered the reduction over a period of four to five years.' I can give him hundreds of instances. Majors with wives and children who were getting Rs. 1,400 to 1,500 today find their salaries reduced. They have received promotions only in name. They are Colonels and so far commanding battalions. Their positions are much more responsible now and yet they are now getting about Rs. 350 less than what they were getting formerly. Sir, I join issue with my friend Mr. Sidhva. I do not think he has studied this question as much as I have done. He was satisfied with the answer that the Defence Minister gave that the scales given to the new men are liberal. I join issue on this statement. I say that they are not liberal. They are definitely unfair. I hope my honourable friend the Minister is aware of this and would not like me to say that the facts given by him are incorrect. I know of Captains today who are getting Rs. 450 a month. They have wives and on an average three children. They are paid this flat rate. You have done away with their marriage allowances, children's allowances and the like. What is the result? Captains are living today in the different messes in little better condition than that of coolies and servants. I have seen this for myself. They have to pay rent and live in conditions suited to an officer. You expect them to live like officers and gentlemen. They have to pay rent and messing charges for their wives and children: these account for as much as Rs. 420 out of the Rs. 450. You leave a Captain with Rs. 30 to pay for his servants and all his other needs. This is what is happening today. My friends will never understand this. They want to apply the civilian standards to the Army. You expect these men to subscribe to certain minimum standard. You want them to maintain the standards of gentlemen, a certain smartness and the like. My friends there do not understand these things and they will never understand these things. My friend will be quite prepared to make Captains and Majors live like coolies going about the streets shabbily dressed. This will undermine their morale and their smartness. If you apply civilian standards to the army you will be reducing it to a second class army, make it a rabble army such as in the Middle East.....

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): Does not the Government provide them with uniform?

Mr. Frank Anthony: That is the trouble. There is so much gross ignorance. I am talking with some authority. I know something about the subject. When a man is commanding a battalion.....

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What is your authority, may I know?

Mr. Frank Anthony: I have done some soldiering and was for many years a member of the National Defence Council.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: All rank snobbery.

Mr. Frank Anthony: There are certain imponderables that may be maintained if you want to maintain first class leadership. Our soliders are the best in the world. But this is an axiom that an Army is only as good as its leadership. Take away the first-class leadership of the army and you will reduce it to a rabble army such as we see in the Middle East. I feel very strongly about this matter. I meet officers of all ranks and they tell me that this is what is happening. There is a perceptible undermining of the efficiency of the officer class. Two results have emerged immediately. There is bitterness. How can you expect these officers to live on lower incomes with added responsibility? If you allow your senior officers and your junior officers and the Air Force men the right to premature retirement, tomorrow 80 per cent. of them are likely to leave, because they get much more as salaries in civilian life. I do not want to cause any sense of agitation among the officers. I am asking you to give them a reasonable standard of life. Why are we maintaining discrimination between the Sandhurst men and Indian trained men? Your pay scales are iniquitously inadequate that a Sandhurst man is getting much more than an Indian trained man. You treat the Sandhurst man as a key man and he refuses to accept the iniquitously low salaries you are paying his counter part trained in this country. (Interruption). There is this differential treatment between a Sandhurst man and an Indian Commissioned officer, because the Sandhurst man will not accept the new Pay Code and you have willy-nilly to pay the Sandhurst man more. What need is there for this discrimination? Is it your intention that the Indian trained officer should not have a reasonable standard of life? I cannot help feeling that this is false economy, fatal economy. I am not pleading any particular man's case, because I have no axe to grind. But it is false economy. If you think that you cannot meet the bill of an army of the present size, cut down the army; have a small force led by first-class men. But don't have a large rambling army or undermine the qualities of leadership which we have built up over several decades.

There are only two more points I wish to make. I am very glad that a person of the stature of General Cariappa has been appointed Commander-in-Chief. I feel that his appointment has met with general approval. I am certain that with him as the head of the army, the old standards of efficiency, discipline and leadership will be maintained.

There is one other matter I wish to refer to. The army and the armed forces have set up an exemplary standard in the matter of unity, brotherhood and the complete absence of communalism and sectarianism. I am one of those who feel that all those traditions of unity and sense of nationhood should be maintained. I feel that every possible step should be taken immediately to remove the last vestiges of sectarianism in the armed forces. I remember that the Wilcox Army Re-organisation Committee recommended that all communal names of units, communal units, etc. should be abolished immediately. I would ask the honourable Minister to see that this is done immediately.

I want to refer to one other matter. I feel that while our armed forces ensure the protection and the integrity of the country, they will do so only as long as the intrigue and nepotism of civilian life are not allowed to seep into the armed forces. Army men are expressing the fear that the nepotism and intrigue of civilian life are seeping into the armed forces. This is one of the greatest of responsibilities that the Minister for Defence and his Department face. I feel that the Commander-in-Chief with his high reputation will set his face sternly against any attempt at nepotism. But it should be the business of the Ministry, to strengthen his hands and see to it that politicians, the members of your Ministry, civilian members, do not interfere with the running of the Armed Forces. In a new found freedom, there is an understandable tendency for politicians and civilians—I am both—to over-reach themselves, to interfere in matters which they do not understand. I would like the honourable Minister to see to it that his Secretaries, joint Secretaries or Under Secretaries, merely because they happened to have passed the Indian Civil Service Examination, do not think that they have a greater mental calibre than the Generals commanding the army, and dictate that this or that should be done with regard to the Armed Forces. This is a grave danger. You have professional men, first class men. Let them do the job of soldiering. It is almost gratuitous for me to emphasise that this whole approach to the Armed Forces today is perhaps the most vital problem that faces us. It is our greatest trust and our greatest responsibility, and on how we discharge that trust will not only depend the integrity and strength of our Armed Forces but also the safety and existence of India.

Shri B. Shiva Rao (Madras: General): Sir, as I sat listening to the debate, it struck me that if my honourable friend, the Finance Minister could feel envious of a colleague—he has very good reason to be so of the honourable the Defence Minister; because while in the course of the general discussion of the Budget, speaker after speaker raised the point of economy in the Civil administration, today the debate has been more in favour of extra expenditure rather than that of economy. I am not against extra expenditure on Defence, if I can be assured of full value for my money. It is of the utmost importance in a world where the situation is uncertain and may indeed break down, it is of the utmost importance that Independent India should build up as soon as possible an efficient, balanced and all-round fighting machine. But I would like to be assured that the money spent is well spent, and that the utmost economy is exercised in putting forward schemes for expenditure. I was not impressed this morning when the Defence Minister made a comparison between the Defence Budgets of the Government of India and of Pakistan. It may be true that Pakistan spends a larger proportion of her annual budget this year on defence than we do in this country. At the same time, we must remember that a nation with a smaller budget is bound to spend a larger proportion on defence than a country with a much larger budget like ours. I hope, Sir, that the Finance Minister will remember to have a separate scrutiny of Defence expenditure at the end of the Budget Session and satisfy himself and the House that every scheme that is put forward is necessary to improve the efficiency of the fighting forces. The main reason why I have intervened in this debate is to put forward what I may call the 'lay man's point of view' in regard to certain aspects of schemes of development and the re-organization of the Armed Forces to which the Defence Minister referred in his speech this morning.

At the end of the First World War, there was Lord Esher's Committee which went comprehensively into the structure and methods of the Army of that time. I remember that in the very first session of the Reformed Legislature in 1921, the main business of the Budget Session of that year was to review Lord Esher's report and to base certain conclusions thereon. I can well understand that during the last eighteen months, the Defence Ministry has been preoccupied with numerous problems of Kashmir and Hyderabad and the maintenance of law and order. But now that those preoccupations are beginning to recede into the background, the time seems to me ripe for the formulation of long-term plans for the building up of our fighting forces; but before the Defence Ministry proceeds very far, I hope the House will have an opportunity of knowing first hand from him, to the extent that he can take us into confidence, the objectives he has in view in building up our own fighting machine.

Speaking for myself, I welcome the provision in the Budget for the appointment of 40 senior scientists and 100 junior scientists to work on scientific problems in relation to the Army, Navy and Air Force. Sir, science has gone so much into the technique of war, that we cannot hope to build a modern fighting machine without a very large demand on scientific research. There is another aspect to which I would devote a moment. Just before the beginning of the war there was Lord Chatfield's Committee which went into the question of mechanization of the Army, and I believe the process of mechanization has gone very far today; but I would like the Defence Minister to consider whether having regard to the conditions in this country, it is either practicable or desirable to complete the process of mechanization. I am saying this because I remember that in the early phases of the war, when Burma was overrun very rapidly by the Japanese, the British Commander in charge of the Allied Forces in Burma at a Press Conference, which he held here, confessed that one of the blunders which led to the disaster in Burma was that while the Japanese did not hesitate to use country-craft and even bullock-carts in Burma, the British threw into a country with very few communications a highly mechanized force. I think that too is an aspect to be borne in mind in going ahead with our plans for the building up of the Army.

Turning to the Budget estimates for this year, I welcome the provision for an expansion of the Territorial Forces and of the National Cadet Corps; but like my honourable friend, Mr. Poonacha from Coorg, who spoke earlier this afternoon, I too have my apprehensions about allowing provinces to develop their own battalions for the maintenance of internal security. On the one side, I think it is undesirable that our Regulars should be called upon to help the civil authorities in the maintenance of law and order. On the other hand, in a Federal Constitution, I think one must proceed with a certain amount of caution in allowing the provinces to develop provincial battalions. I say this particularly because last August I raised a short Notice question in this House on a communication issued by the East Punjab Government in the course of which that provincial Government said that it had offered certain terms and conditions to General Mohan Singh to build up a volunteer corps in certain districts in the East Punjab. I think, Sir, on the question of law and order, the Government of India will have to think afresh and see whether it cannot have a National Militia rather on the lines of the Canadian Military Police, entirely at the disposal of the Central Government and distinct from the regular Army. Sir, there is very little in the explanatory memorandum which has been supplied to us and in the statement which was made this morning to explain why almost a crore of Rupees is being spent on the Frontier Corps. I would like to know when the Defence Minister speaks on this subject later some more details as to the nature of this expenditure. I am referring to it because until very recently, the Frontier meant the North West Frontier. I know how many crores of Rupees were spent from year to year on it by the British on a policy which seemed to be a combination of coercion of the tribes and bribery. Having spent a few days in Waziristan on the eve of the war, I was convinced that the right policy would have been to increase the expenditure on hospitals, on schools, on irrigation schemes, rather than in keeping the tribes under submission by methods of repression. I hope the present Government of India will lay more emphasis on social development and on the formation of local militia very much on the lines of the Waziristan Scouts so far as the maintenance of law and order is concerned.

There is one final point I would like to make before sitting down. War today is global. When war is declared, the top-ranking military officers have to take into account a great many things more at the present moment than in the earlier wars. It seems to me the time has come when the Defence Ministry should apply its mind seriously to adding to the courses at the Staff College at Wellington, subjects such as economics, politics, sociology and science. It is very necessary that the Ministry should attempt to build up both in the Staff College at Wellington and in the regimental units libraries dealing especially with international problems.

I was interested in the suggestion which was made by my friend opposite regarding the possibilities of a non-aggression pact with Pakistan. Recently, immediately after the Asian Conference on Indonesia, which was held here, the leader of the Ceylonese Delegation in a speech which he delivered under the auspices of the Indian Council of World Affairs, threw out a similar suggestion, not a non-aggression pact, with one country only, Pakistan, but a Defence Pact which could cover Ceylon, Pakistan, Burma, Malaya and Indonesia. I do not say that the time is ripe for going ahead with any scheme of that kind. On the other hand, I think that the Defence Ministry should have one section which would devote very careful and serious attention to possibilities of this kind. There is at the present moment, a joint defence scheme between Australia and New Zealand, which covers a great many subjects. It is possible for these two Dominions to have coordination not only in regard to the organisation, equipment, training and exercise of the Armed Forces, but also joint planning, interchange of staff, production of munitions, aircraft and numerous other items necessarily be considered in connection with defence problems. I do not say that it would be possible for us immediately to think in these terms; but, there are looser types of joint action, like the Atlantic Pact for instance, or the Union of the Latin American Republics. I suggest this because, all the countries which I have just mentioned have achieved independence recently and the burden of defence for independent countries is becoming so intolerably heavy that one is compelled to think in terms of joint action. Anything that we can do to facilitate such action, I suggest, must be welcome to the Defence Ministry.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): Sir, I congratulate the honourable Minister of Defence for the esteem and affection which he enjoys of his countrymen. We are certainly grateful to him for his achievement of the past two years. Though insufficiently equipped, by dint of constant vigilance and restless activity, he was able to avoid a situation which might have been more serious. By and by, he has been able to instil in our minds a sense of security which is very beneficial for the welfare of the country. If I covet any office, I am frank in this matter, my other friends are not so frank, I covet the office of the Minister for Defence. With the able guidance of two of our foremost leaders, namely Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, he, I am sure, will be able to bring back to India the past glory of Bharat Varsha.

He is now trying to build up the Army, Navy and the Air Force. We all wish him God speed in this. My only grievance, and a personal grievance, against him is that he does not look as formidable as the Defence Minister should be. His adonis like appearance,—I am only quoting one of the ladies who has just spoken,—his soft look, his gentle manners, tempt many of the politically minded ladies to waste some of his time. But I hope when his age grows, as time passes on, he will be able to put up a sterner appearance and a more luxurious beard on his face which will carry an impression of awe which a Defence Minister ought to carry. Particularly, because, we have not today a Commander-in-Chief who also occupies the position of a Minister and I stoutly disapprove the idea of having a Commander-in-Chief now who will be able to stand out stoutly to three other Commanders. I hope if I am here next year, I would be able to see in my honourable friend a sterner appearance which he ought to possess.

I have heard the criticism, not so much in this House, as outside it, that we are following the British budget so far as military expenditure is concerned. I ask the honourable Minister,—I have no particular axe to grind at the present moment,—if he is satisfied with the amount which has been given to him. If he is satisfied well and good; if he is not satisfied, I would be prepared to vote further grants. The reason is quite obvious. We have seen what our position is with regard to the Navy. On 15th August 1947 when the partition took place, we had only a few sloops, and frigates; nothing that could be called a really equipped force. Most of the Navy men who belonged to Pakistan, left us and joined the Pakistan force. We had practically nothing in our hands and we had to get a lot of things. If we want to have a fully equipped Navy, we have a long list to acquire; at the present moment we have none. Similar is the case with the Air Force. What we have is quite insufficient. I want my country to be so fully equipped that my Army, my Navy and my Air Force will be the pride of the world. I want such a force as would be able to maintain not only peace in Asia and India, protect Asia and India, but by dint of its own strength, by show of its force, would be able to make war a rare thing in this world. It is for this reason that I unhesitatingly say that I am prepared to vote for him further grants if he is only in the position to spend it properly. I fully endorse the viewpoint which has been put forward by my honourable friend, Mr. Anthony. I know that this armed force had acquitted itself wonderfully well in spite of the great personal disadvantages which they had to undergo. That was due to a sense of patriotism; that was due to a sense of relief from a transfer of control from the British to Indian hands. But are you going to bank on this feeling for a long time? Can you really depend on this feeling and continue to reduce their pittance to the present position in which they are now? My honourable friend, Mr. Anthony, has explained by giving figures whereby it is clearly shown that it is impossible for any officer to make both ends meet now after all their allowances have been reduced in the manner that it has been done. Has the necessity of the defence of our country been less now than it was during the British regime? What then is the justification for the sudden reduction of expenditure on allowances? If you really want to have a good army, make it well contented. It is no use, as Mr. Anthony has said to have a big and huge army, most of which is discontented. I believe in a well-dressed, and well-equipped officer and soldier. I do not want an officer to be reduced to a position where instead of smoking cigarettes he will have to go about smoking a biri, and instead of having his tobacco he should go about chewing pan. I cannot picture that kind of an Army officer. I do not wish to see an officer going about with a uniform which is crumpled: an uniform that has not been ironed for days together. But all this I tell you is going to happen in a short time because you have not left any other alternative on account of the poor pay, on account of the poor position to which you are driving them. They must go and see a jatra performance: they must smoke biris and they must go on chewing pan and bespatter their dress. This is a state of affairs that is haunting me now.

I do not really understand what is the object of doing away with the marriage allowance altogether. If the honourable the Defence Minister discourages—either on account of his personal experience or otherwise—the idea of marriage, or of having children I could quite understand. But there are in his Forces already married men and already men who are fathers of children. What is he going to do with them? It is impossible for them to bring their wives and live in hostels because the allowance is too little for them. Does he want a perpetual separation as a sort of compliment to the advocates of the Hindu Code—separation between husband and wife? If that is his intention, I cannot have much to say. If that is not so, then I submit that all these allowances should be restored.

I would like to draw the attention of the honourable Minister to another aspect of the matter. On account of the poor allowances and pay which they get they are not able to insure their lives in a proper manner, with the result that when a sudden casualty of an officer takes place—as I know of an officer who has met with death recently, who has left behind a wife and three children—the wife gets an allowance of Rs. 200 p.m., and this is a Major's wife. How can that family exist? Is this the treatment which you should meet out to the family of a man who has lost his life in the service prematurely? All those criticisms on military expenditure were of a type when the British were ruling: but those criticisms will not apply to military expenditure today.

We have budgeted almost the same amount as the Pakistan Government has budgeted in their own Dominion and yet it is known to every one that Pakistan is much better off than ourselves so far as the military position is concerned. They have not hesitated to budget as much as we have. This allotment of money for defence expenditure has been misinterpreted by some public men and an important daily paper in India to mean that we are in an armament race in which Pakistan and India want to vie with each other. So far as we are concerned, I think the honourable Minister will bear me out that we have no such intention. We have provided so much money because we need not only this but more than this amount. There is no question of an armament race and there is therefore no question of a compromise or an agreement so far as defence expenditure is concerned between Pakistan and India.

As I close, I would only like to draw the attention of the honourable the Defence Minister to my own province, the Eastern Frontier. There is danger brewing in that frontier. There is a State which is on the border of India, and that State as far as my information goes—I may be wrong or I may be right—is already full of Communists: and from that point—from that State to the neighbouring districts, that is the neighbouring tribal areas—the march is only of a few hours. God forbid if anything should happen to Burma! The conquest of Assam, Bengal and even Bihar will be only a question of time. The forces which come from the tribal areas do not care much for the whip of the Bihar Minister. If they can only cross the Assam and Bengal frontier, it will not take the twinkling of an eye for them to get hold of Bihar. So, I say, that you must take time by the forelock and you must see to it that proper defence arrangements are made for Assam. I regret to have to say that the Government is not giving the attention which was due to the making of roads in the province. The road to Tripura is lying absolutely unprotected.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: There is a provision for Assam.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Unless you have a road from Shillong to Tripura through Silchar, you will not be in a position to protect Tripura in an emergency and yet the Government of India is quarrelling at the present moment with the Government of Assam as regards the allocation of expenditure for those roads. The road to Ledo.....

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Rs. 50 lakhs have been provided for Assam.

Mr. Chairman: May I remind the honourable Member that there are two more members to speak. May I request him to close his speech.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: If you request me, I shall stop.

Mr. Chairman: Certainly. I do request you.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: So, I have two words more to say. The road which is there from Ledo to China, which was built at considerable cost, has been neglected and that is the road which is necessary for our purpose. The road from Golaghat to Dinapore through which only transports can go from Assam to Manipur State is also in a dilapidated condition and it will give way.

श्री गोपीकृष्ण विजयवर्गीय : श्रीमान अध्यक्ष महोदय, आज वैसे तो कटमोशन्स के लिय समय था, लेकिन जनरल डिसकशन के तौर पर ही हम लोगों को कुछ कहना है। हिन्दुस्तान अंग्रेजों के कब्जे से निकल कर अब आजाद हो गया है और हम सब लोगों पर यह जिम्मेदारियां बढ़ गई हैं, जैसे देश के रक्षा की। यहां जितने मेम्बरस हैं वह उन सबको यह महसूस करना चाहिये कि देश की रक्षा की जिम्मेदारी हमारी है, यह सिर्फ कैबिनेट या गवर्नमेंट की ही जिम्मेदारी नहीं है, बल्कि हम सब को इस विषय में सोचना चाहिये और देश की रक्षा के वास्ते पूरी गम्भीरता से विचार करना चाहिये। यहां जो कुछ भाषण हुये हैं, उनके विषय में मैं यह कहना चाहता हूं कि कुछ साहबान ने कहा फ़ौजी अफसरों की तन्ख्वाहें कम हैं और उनको ज्यादा मिलनी चाहिये। इसमें कोई शक नहीं है कि हम एक नुमाइन्दे के तौर पर या कुछ लोगों की इस विषय में कठिनाइयां व्यक्त करें, लेकिन उससे कुछ अच्छा असर पैदा होने वाला नहीं है। हम लोग अगर देखेंगे तो उधर रेलवे में हम काफी मजदूरी नहीं दे रहे हैं, उधर हम गवर्नमेंट सरवेन्ट्स को काफी तन्ख्वाहें नहीं दे रहे

हैं, उधर हम फ़ौज के लोगों को काफी तन्ख्वाहें नहीं दे रहे हैं, तो आखिर आप इतना रुपया कहाँ से लाने वाले हैं। सवाल यह है कि आज जब देश में हमें अपने बजट को बैलेन्स करना है और जो देश के थोड़े से resources हैं, या जो साधन हैं, उनके अन्दर काम चलाना है। तो हम यह यहां नहीं कह सकते कि उनकी amenities या हर तरह के एलाउन्सेज (allowances) बढ़ाये जायें। थोड़ा बहुत करने के लिये तो मैं जरूर मुनासिब समझूंगा। लेकिन जो अफसरान हैं अगर तन्ख्वाहें और दूसरे एलाउन्सेज उनके नहीं बढ़ाये जाते, तो और दूसरी सहूलियतें बढ़ाने के विषय में डिफ़ेंस मिनिस्टरी को गौर करना चाहिये और मैं समझता हूं कि वह इस पर गौर करेंगे। लेकिन जहां तक कोई ज्यादा खर्चा बढ़ाने का सवाल है, मैं समझता हूं कि कुल बजट को देखते हुये जो कि इस वक्त भी काफी बड़ा हुआ है, मुनासिब नहीं होगा। फ़ौज पर हम १३२ करोड़ रुपया देने वाले हैं। समुद्री सेना पर ८ करोड़ ६४ लाख और हवाई सेना पर १३ करोड़ ७५ लाख और दूसरे खर्चे (Defence Services Non-effective) १३ करोड़ के हैं। इस तरह से कुल खर्चा १६८ करोड़ के करीब आ जाता है। जब यह कुल इतना बड़ा मालूम हो रहा है तो मैं नहीं समझ सकता कि हम अफसरों की तन्ख्वाहों और एलाउन्सेज किस तरह से बढ़ा सकते हैं। यहां के भाषणों में एक भाषण इस विषय का रहा कि हम पाकिस्तान से कोई डिफ़ेंस पैकट कर लें। हिन्दुस्तान जैसे लम्बे चौड़े मुल्क के लिये यह कहना कि वह इस समय race of armaments में पड़ा हुआ है, गलत है। मैं समझता हूं कि यह महज पाकिस्तान की पार्लियामेंट में जब वहां बजट पेश किया गया और वहां फ़ौज का खर्चा पेश किया गया, तो उसको जस्टीफ़ाई करने के लिये जो दलील दी गई है, उससे जो सिलसिला चालू हुआ वह सिलसिला हमारी पार्लियामेंट में भी शुरू हो गया। मैं समझता हूं कि हमको इस तरीके से कोई मुकाबिला करने की जरूरत नहीं है। हिन्दुस्तान तो पहले भी self-sufficient नहीं है। हम यहां फ़ौज पर इतना भारी खर्चा कर रहे हैं, हम अपनी नेवी पर और ऐयर फ़ोर्स पर बहुत ज्यादा रुपया खर्च कर रहे हैं। हमारी नेवी का खर्चा ८ करोड़ और हवाई सेना का १३ करोड़ है। लेकिन असलियत यह है कि यह बहुत ही नाकाफी है और आजकल क जमाने में आप आरमी चाहे जितनी बढ़ाते चले जायें, लेकिन जब तक आपकी हवाई फ़ौज ऐसी न हो, और उसको बनाने के लिये बड़े-बड़े कारखाने न हों, जब तक आप यहां डिफ़ेंस इन्डस्ट्रीज यहां पर अच्छी तरह कायम नहीं करते, तब तक आप मुल्क की कोई तरक्की नहीं कर सकते। इसलिये जरूरत तो यह है कि जैसा अभी श्री चौधरी साहब ने कहा कि आरमी की हमें बहुत जरूरत है। हिन्दुस्तान इतना लंबा चौड़ा मुल्क है, और हमारे पास नेवी इतनी कम है कि हमको नेवी की तरफ ज्यादा ध्यान देना चाहिये, हमको हवाई सेना की तरफ ज्यादा ध्यान देना चाहिये, और इन बातों की तरफ इस बजट में बहुत कम गुंजायश है। मैं समझता हूं कि

इन दो सेक्शनस में हमको बहुत ज्यादा गौर करने की जरूरत है और जो डिफेंस इंडस्ट्रीज हिन्दुस्तान में बनने वाली हैं, उनकी तरफ ज्यादा खर्चा करने की जरूरत है। तो इसलिये यहां armaments की रेस तो है ही नहीं, जैसा कि काजी करीमुद्दीन साहब ने कहा था। यहां हिन्दुस्तान इस दृष्टि से आगे नहीं बढ़ रहा है। हिन्दुस्तान किसी का मुकाबिला नहीं करना चाहता, हिन्दुस्तान किसी मुल्क से लड़ना नहीं चाहता। इसलिये race of armament की दलील देना गलत है। हम अभी तक अपने पैरों पर खड़े होने लायक अपनी फ़ौज और हवाई सेना और नेवी नहीं बना पाये हैं। नेवी के एक्सपैन्शन (expansion) का जो प्रोग्राम है, वह अभी अधूरा है। श्रीमान् अध्यक्ष महोदय मैं अभी बम्बई गया था और वहां नेवी के विषय में थोड़ा देखा। हमारी नेवी हमारे मुल्क की लम्बाई चौड़ाई के लिहाज से काफी नहीं है। दूसरे मुल्कों के पास जैसी नेवी है, उसके लायक हमारे पास बिल्कुल नहीं है और इसलिये हमको बहुत जल्द अपनी नेवी को बढ़ाना चाहिये और हवाई फ़ौज को बढ़ाना चाहिये। और उसके लिये बजट में जो गुंजायश रखी गयी है, प्राविजन रखा गया है, वह बहुत कम है और उस तरफ गवर्नमेन्ट को ज्यादा ध्यान देना चाहिये, ताकि हम दुनिया के दूसरे मुल्कों के मुकाबिले में कमजोर न रहें। इसमें कोई शक नहीं है कि पिछले दिनों पिछले साल काश्मीर, हैदराबाद और दूसरे कारणों से ज्यादा खर्चा हुआ है। और उसमें हमारी फ़ौज ने बहुत अच्छा काम किया है।

लेकिन फ़ौज के जो यह दो हिस्से हैं अंग हैं उनको हमें बनाना है नेवी और ऐयर फ़ोर्स की तरफ बहुत जल्द ध्यान देना चाहिये और डिफेंस इंडस्ट्रीज हमारे यहां बहुत जल्द बनाई जानी चाहिये।

श्री अध्यक्ष महोदय मैं एक रियासत से आता हूँ जिसका नाम है मध्य भारत। मैं रियासती फ़ौज के विषय में कुछ कहना चाहता हूँ। देश की कई छोटी छोटी रियासतों में नाम मात्र की फ़ौजें थीं और कहीं तो बहुत छोटी रियासतों में दस सिपाही तक थे और कहीं पन्द्रह थे और इन सब का नाम फ़ौज था। न उनके पास ठीक वदियां थीं, न हथियार न एम्पुनीशन, कुछ भी नहीं था। वह तो महज एक तमाशा थीं। अब कई छोटी छोटी रियासतें इकट्ठा होकर एक यूनियन बन गई हैं और उसमें जो फ़ौजें हैं उनमें जैसी हिन्दुस्तानी फ़ौज में efficiency होती है, वैसी नहीं पाई जाती। इसलिये मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि रियासतों में जो फ़ौजी खर्च हो रहा है, वह बहुत बेगरज है और गवर्नमेन्ट को इसकी तरफ ध्यान देना चाहिये और रियासती फ़ौजों को हम आल इन्डिया (All India) फ़ौजों में शामिल कर लें। वहां उनके अलग राजाओं के राजप्रमुख कान्स्टीट्यूशनल हेड्स (Constitutional heads) की तरफ से रक्षा कर रहे हैं, ना उनका अलग फ़ौजों को रखने

की जरूरत नहीं है। वह तमाम रियासती फ़ौजें हिन्दुस्तान की फ़ौज में इनकोरपोरेट (incorporate) हो जानी चाहिये और रियासतों में अलग अलग फ़ौज रखने की जरूरत नहीं है। मैं हिन्दुस्तान की बड़ी फ़ैक्टरीज के विषय में एक शब्द कहकर खत्म करता हूँ। बड़ी फ़ैक्टरीज में हमको चाहिये कि हम अपने ही एक्सपर्ट्स और अपनी ही इंडस्ट्रीज तैयार करें, ताकि वह हिन्दुस्तान में हर तरह का शस्त्रास्त्र तैयार कर सकें। अभी तक जो बड़ी बड़ी फ़ैक्टरीज है, उनमें जैसा कि मालूम हुआ है कुछ चुने हुए यूरोपियनस हैं। इसमें कोई शक नहीं है कि वह बहुत वफ़ादारी से और ईमानदारी से हिन्दुस्तान के लिये काम कर रहे हैं, लेकिन हमारी आज जरूरत यह है कि हम हर जगह पर हिन्दुस्तानी आदमी रख सकें और ऐसे हिन्दुस्तानी एक्सपर्ट्स हों जो हथियार तैयार कर सकें इसलिये बड़ी बड़ी फ़ैक्टरीज में यूरोपियनों के साथ साथ हमारे देश के लोगों को काम सिखाया जाय और बाहर भी भेजा जाय और इस तरह से जितनी जल्द हो सके हिन्दुस्तानी एक्सपर्ट्स और विशेषज्ञ तैयार किये जायें ताकि हमारा देश दुनिया के दूसरे मुल्कों से पीछे न रहे।

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Madhya Bharat): Sir, though the day was allotted for the discussion on Cut Motions, yet we have to say something by way of general discussion only. India has now been emancipated from the yoke of the Britishers and the responsibilities of all of us have been considerably increased; especially the defence of the country. All the members present in this House should realize that the responsibility for the defence of the country devolves on us—it is not merely to be confined either to the Cabinet or the Government, but all of us should consider this matter and seriously think over the problem of the Country's defence. With regard to the speeches delivered in this House, I would like to observe that some of my honourable friends have stated that the military officers are not being paid adequately and an increase should, therefore, be made in their salaries. There is no doubt in it that our action in representing the difficulties experienced by certain individuals is not likely to yield any wholesome effect. If we see, we will find that we are not giving a fair wage in the case of Railways. Here we are not paying handsomely to the Government servants, and we are also not paying adequately to the Defence personnel. After all where from do you expect to get all this money? The question is that today we have to balance our Budget and depend upon whatever meagre resources are available in the country. Therefore, we cannot urge here that they should be provided with all sorts of amenities and their allowances increased. I would, however, deem it proper to give some relief at least. But if the salaries and the allowances of the officers are not increased, the Ministry of Defence should consider over to allow them other facilities and I hope they will do the needful. But so far as the question of increasing any extra expenditure is involved, I feel that it would not be advisable to do so at present, specially when the whole Budget anticipates very heavy expenditure. We have provided for Rs. 132 crores in respect of Defence Services (Army); Rs. 8.64 crores for Royal Indian Navy; Rs. 13 crores for Royal Indian Air Force and Rs. 13 crores for other expenditure viz., Defence Services, Non-effective. Thus the total expenditure comes to about Rs. 168 crores. When this itself appears to be a very heavy amount, I fail to understand how can we increase the pay and allowances of the officers? In one of the speeches made here; it has been suggested that some sort of Defence Pact should be entered into with Pakistan. It would be quite absurd to say that a vast country like India is in armament race at present. I realize that this very argument was put forth in the Pakistan Parliament at the time of the presentation of the Budget proposals merely with a view to justify the huge defence expenditure shown therein; and as an offshoot of that this has been put forth in our Parliament too. I think it is not necessary for us to vie with each other in armaments. India is not even self-sufficient. We are already spending such a huge amount on our defence expenditure; we are incurring a heavy expenditure in respect of our Navy and Air Force. The expenditure under Navy and Air Force amounts to Rs. 8 and 13 crores respectively. But in reality, this is quite inadequate. To whatever extent you may expand your Army, but so long as we have not got an Air Force and big factories for the manufacture of necessary material and you do not establish the Defence industries in a proper manner, you cannot make your country a progressive one. Therefore, just as my honourable friend Mr. Chaudhuri has stated there is a great necessity for having an Army. India is a very vast country but we have got a relatively small Naval Force and we should, therefore, devote more attention towards the building of Navy. We should also pay more attention towards the Air Force. But very small provision has been made in this Budget in these respects. I feel that there exists a vital necessity for us to devote particular attention to these two branches of the Army, and still greater is the necessity of investing more money in the Defence industries contemplated to set up in India. Thus, there does not exist here any race in armaments, just as had been pointed out by my honourable friend Kazi Syed Karimuddin. India neither wants to have any rivalry nor does it desire to fight with any country. Therefore, it would be quite improper to put forth the argument of 'race of armaments.' We have not as yet been able to build up our Defence, Naval and Air Forces by means of which we may stand on our own legs. The Naval expansion programme is still incomplete. Sir, I had recently gone to Bombay and happened to see there a few things concerning the Navy. Our Navy is not quite adequate as compared to the length and breadth of our country. Our Navy does not stand any comparison with that possessed by other countries, and, for this reason we should forthwith expand our Navy as well as Air Force. The provision made in the Budget in these respects is quite inadequate and Government should devote more attention towards this aspect so that we may not remain weak as compared with other countries in the world. There is no doubt in it that during the last year we had to incur a heavy expenditure on account of Kashmir and Hyderabad operations and other reasons and our Defence Forces have throughout played a very meritorious role. But we have to build these two Branches of the Army viz., Navy and Air Force and should devote immediate attention to this matter. Defence industries should also be established in our country without any delay.

Sir, I come from a State which is called Madhya Bharat. I would like to say something in respect of the State's Army. In some of the smaller states in this country, the armies existed in name only and most of the smallest states had hardly ten to fifteen soldiers and still they were termed as 'Army'. They had neither the uniforms, nor arms nor ammunitions. They had nothing. That was all a fun. Now some of the small states have integrated into Unions, and the armies they have do not display the efficiency that is found in the Indian Army. Therefore, I would like to say that the expenditure which is being incurred towards the maintenance of armies in the states is altogether a waste and Government should pay attention to this and merge the States' Armies with the All India Army. There the Rajpramukhs on behalf of the Princes acting as Constitutional Heads are safeguarding their interests and there seems absolutely no necessity for maintaining separate armies. All those States' Armies should be incorporated in the Indian Army and there is no longer any necessity to keep separate armies in the states. After saying a few words with regard to the working of big factories in India, I would conclude. We should train our own experts and develop our industries in the big factories so that these may be able to produce locally all sorts of arms and ammunition. Just as we have been told, there are still some European experts employed in these big factories. There is no doubt in it that they are working for India most honestly and faithfully but today we are faced with a primary necessity to employ Indians in every place and we should have such Indian experts who are capable to manufacture arms. Therefore, I would urge that the Indians should be trained along with the Europeans in all the big factories and they should also be sent abroad for training and thus Indian experts and specialists may be trained as early as possible so that our country may not lag behind the other countries of the world.

Shri Upendranath Barman (West Bengal: General): I join in the chorus of appreciation of the performance of our Defence Forces and for what they have done since the partition of our country. Within the limited time at my disposal I think it prudent to refer to two most important matters. One is that from all quarters of this House the Honourable the Defence Minister has got benediction and good-will for his budget. I also have no hesitation in according my approval to it because of the condition of time and the circumstances that we are passing through. But I would like to tell the honourable Minister for Defence that he should not be complacent about the future. The national economy of our country has so many demands on it that such a huge expenditure cannot be approved by the country for any more years to come. But at the same time we realise the importance of defence which is a defence of our civilization and of our independence. I therefore ask the honourable Minister and the Cabinet to think over the matter and take a comprehensive view of all things so that the defence budget may be reduced consistent with efficiency and that a larger and larger portion of it may be released every coming year for national reconstruction and development. It is poor consolation to a man who has not enough to eat to be defended by an expensive force. I think for that purpose my honourable friend Mr. Anthony has made one suggestion that instead of maintaining a huge army the Ministry should think over here and now to make the army efficient and reduce it as far as practicable and at the same time equip it with the best of machinery that are prevalent during this scientific age—keeping that force which is absolutely necessary contented and well equipped.

Having said that I would refer to another matter for due consideration of the honourable the Defence Minister. I know that even without my mentioning the honourable Minister has got it in his mind, but still as the matter directly concerns us it is my duty to refer to it—and that is the Eastern Command. By the partition of the country unfortunately more than about 800 miles of frontier have been added to our eastern frontier. The frontier that existed before partition was quite unsafe and unscientific; there was practically no boundary demarcation or scientific boundary between Burma, Tibet and India. In addition to that we have now got another 800 miles to defend. It may not be a defence against Pakistan army—or if may be, I do not know—but the eastern frontier is now threatened in many ways from many ideologies. There is no doubt about it and the recent occurrences must have given some indication to the Cabinet here. In regard to the safeguard of the eastern frontier I would like to say to the honourable the Defence Minister that just as in the western frontier it is the Punjabis that have been brought up as a martial race by the British it is necessary to look with the same consideration to the east also. After all it is Assam and Bengal first and foremost which will have to bear the onslaught if there be any attack in the future. And the first and foremost consideration for a man is to protect his hearth and home. Therefore it can be expected that if the Bengalis and Assamese can be now trained militarily they will do the best in order to protect that frontier than perhaps anybody else. They will not hesitate to pour their life-blood like red wine in order to defend their hearth and home, the prestige and honour of their women, and also to protect India. I would submit that Bengal had been denuded of that glory after the British conquest because Bengalis were always suspected. But even in the first world war the Bengali regiment proved its mettle in the fields of France. Even today—I may not boast very much—we take pride that it is the Bengalis, Bengali youths, Bengali Captains, Generals that have fought our enemies in Kashmir, in Hyderabad and at other places. (Shri H. V. Kamath: "And Netaji.") My honourable friend Mr. Kamath mentions here revered name of Netaji. I can tell you that even in the British days it was in Bengal that the throne of England was first attacked. It was on the soil of Bengal that a young boy of 17 years of age did not hesitate to attack the Chittagong Armoury and did it successfully. I do not want to say much now. All these things are passing into ancient history. I can only say this to the honourable the Defence Minister that provided opportunities are given the Bengalis and the Assamese will prove as much heroic and chivalrous as other regiments under his command and it is their just right and claim that they should be given the opportunity which will help my honourable friend in defending the eastern frontier. With these few words I congratulate the honourable the Defence Minister for the task that he has accomplished.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: I rise to thank the House for the valuable support that they have given me during the discussion on the defence budget. The eloquent tributes that have been paid to the armed forces of this country will go a long way to encourage them and infuse them with greater enthusiasm to work for the safety of this country. Several suggestions have been made during the discussion and I would like to take up the more important ones first and if time permits I will deal with the others later on.

To begin with Mr. Sidhva complained about the lack of information that has been given in this book. I admit that the explanations are not exhaustive but he was referring to some pages which do not contain any explanation at all. I would refer him to page 13, main heads 5 and 6, which give the information which he wanted in connection with the Military Lands Department and the provision of stores, etc.

Another point that he raised was in connection with the appointment of the Committee for the Cantonments. The Defence Ministry has appointed a Committee to go into this matter and with this view we have appointed several Primary Committees in almost all the Cantonments that we have in this country. These Primary Committees will collect factual data and they will put all the relevant information before the three Command Committees. All this matter, after careful scrutiny will come before the Central Committee. I would like to assure him that these Primary Committees and the three Committees which have been formed in the three Commands will not in any way interfere with the working of the Central Committee. In fact, if the Central Committee does not feel satisfied with the working of these Primary Committees or is not satisfied with the information that has been collected by them the Central Committee is at liberty to ignore the recommendations of the Primary Committee and start their work afresh and visit any Cantonments they like. While appointing this Committee, we did not have any reservations; we want to go thoroughly into this question and make such amendments as are considered necessary.

Then I will come to the question of the ordnance factories. Several honourable Members have given valuable suggestions; they will be borne in mind. But may I point out that the question of ordnance factories is not an easy one? Some honourable Members have pointed out that we should immediately proceed with complete nationalisation and turn out every foreigner that is now working in the ordnance factories. Sir, I am conscious that we should have as far as possible Indians in almost all posts. As the House must have noticed from my speech this morning, we have proceeded with nationalisation as far as we possibly could, but the case of Ordnance Factories stands on quite a different footing and I would like to assure the House that whereas I am anxious that we should have Indians in almost all the important places, at the same time I would like to say that I will not hesitate to get the best possible expert advice from foreign countries and if necessary to bring experts from outside, not for permanent employment but to train our officers. Sir, the country has become independent; we should not be afraid of a foreign technician working here and there. In fact, we should welcome them and the best way that we could train our officers is to bring experts here and give training on a bigger scale than send a handful of our officers abroad for training. The Department is following this policy and I am sure in the next few years you will see what the result has been of the policy that we have adopted.

Then reference was made by my friend Mr. Anthony to the new Pay Code of the officers. This morning when I stated some of the amenities that we have given to our Indian Commissioned Officers, most probably he was not present in the House. I would like to state, for the information of the House that before the War the difference in the pay of the K.C.I.Os. or Sandhurst officers, as my honourable friend put it, and the pay of Indian Commissioned Officers, was great. During the War, the Indian Commissioned Officers agitated and I think it was in the year 1941 or 1942 that the pay of Indian Commissioned Officers was raised to the same level as that of King's Commissioned Officers, with the clear understanding that after the termination of the War the scale of pay would be reduced to the same level as before the War. These officers, young officers, have done really good work and I have got every praise for them and realising the difficulties, the hardships that have been caused to them due to rise in prices, my Ministry has taken every possible step to give them the maximum possible relief. If I were to reopen the question of their pay now it would create innumerable difficulties. The King's Commissioned Officers of whom we have got about 90 in our Service will disappear in the course of the next twelve or fifteen years and after that we will have only Indian Commissioned Officers and the disparity which is causing so much discontent now will not exist any longer. During this period we are taking steps and we have already taken steps, as I mentioned this morning to give the maximum possible relief within the basic principles laid down by the Pay Committee. May I mention one more point, namely that this Committee which went thoroughly into the question also examined the scales of pay of officers in other countries. I have not got the figures before me, but I went into them and examined them and on a careful examination I found that the scales of pay under the new Pay Code that have been proposed here compare very favourably and I should say in some cases they were higher than the pay given in other countries. But some increase has been given in other countries and I would say it will be wrong on our part if we compare the scales of pay in this country with the scales of pay in other advanced countries.

Mr. Frank Anthony: May I ask my friend whether he will consider restoring the marriage allowance? That is all I ask—not the basic pay.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Sir, if my honourable friend will wait, I was coming next to this question. This morning as I stated, quite a large number of concessions have been given and I will be prepared to consider any further relief that can be given within the basic principles of the recommendation of the Pay Committee, but it is impossible for me to go beyond the recommendations of the Pay Committee.

Coming to marriage allowance, to which my friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Choudhuri also referred, this question was thoroughly examined by this Pay Committee. The present scales of pay have been fixed after taking into consideration the marriage allowances. Therefore, this marriage allowance was abolished in the new Pay Code.

I was rather pained to hear some remarks from my honourable friend Mr. Anthony about the interference on the part of the Joint Secretaries or Secretaries in the Defence Ministry. I have kept a careful watch and I can assure the House and I can say it with all the confidence at my command, that as far as I know there is not a single case which has been brought to my notice where there has been interference by the Secretary or by the Commander-in-Chief in each others work. There are bound to be complaints; I hear lot of rumours—people come to me and complain and when I enquire into these allegations they are not substantiated. If Mr. Anthony has got any substantial data in his possession, I would request him to come and discuss with me and I can assure you, Sir, that as long as I am here it will be my endeavour to see that in the Armed Forces nepotism or favouritism does not get in as is alleged in the case of the civil side.

I come next to the criticism of my honourable friend Mr. Karimuddin. From the remarks that I made about Pakistan's Budget, he construed that there is a race for armaments between the two countries. Sir, I have nothing of the kind in my mind. I can assure you—I cannot stand guarantee for what others do—but as far as this country is concerned, we have only one consideration, namely that we want to go ahead without expansion programme, we want to establish training institutions, and we do not care for what other countries do. I simply made a reference to Pakistan budget to show that the impression which the speech of the Pakistan Finance Minister gave as if we are to blame for everything, as if we are guilty, as if we are spending more on the Defence forces as compared with Pakistan, is not correct. I just wanted to show to the House that as far as India is concerned, we are not at all competing with any country and our expenditure on defence is less as compared with Pakistan expenditure. I would repeat that we have got every desire, it is our earnest desire—the Prime Minister has stated it on several occasions, that we want to have friendliest relations with Pakistan. I would therefore suggest that we have already given a lead in this matter and Pakistan should take the lead that we have given and reduce their expenditure on defence to the same level as we have done.

Then, Sir, Mr. Karimuddin referred to the recruitment of Muslims in the Armed Forces. The House is aware that we had a large number of Muslims in the Armed Forces. On 15th of August 1947 the percentage of Muslims in the Indian Armed Forces was about 33. Almost all of them, except a few, I should say about half a dozen officers and perhaps a few hundred other ranks, opted for Pakistan. That is the main reason why the percentage of Muslims in the Indian Armed Forces is low.

Then, again, he also is perhaps under the impression that there is a certain bar for the employment or recruitment of Muslims. May I assure the House that as far as this country is concerned, the recruitment to the Armed Forces is open to all the communities, irrespective of caste or creed? I would invite all Muslim friends who are living in this country and who are prepared to make equal sacrifices for this country, to join the Armed Forces; and as far as my information goes, we have recruited all those who offered themselves for recruitment and were found fit from medical point of view.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): What about Harijans?

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Now to come to the employment of Harijans in the Armed Forces, I regret that recently a circular did go out which created misunderstanding, particularly in Bihar, and as soon as it was brought to the notice of the Government it was withdrawn and revised instructions were issued expressing regret for the mistake and making it perfectly clear that Harijans are welcome to the Armed Forces. I can assure the House that there is no bar. For some arms there were in the past some conditions attached before Harijans could be recruited to certain units, but that distinction has now disappeared and the Services are open to everybody.

A reference was also made by my friend Mr. Shiva Rao whether the time has not come to have joint defence with Pakistan. As I have said before—perhaps the House does not know—this question was discussed several times in 1947 in the Joint Defence Council and examined thoroughly and after careful consideration of the matter we came to the conclusion that the time was not ripe then to have an organisation of this kind. Both Pakistan and we were reluctant due to the intense feelings then prevailing. But ultimately when the bitter feelings that have existed disappear, when cordial relations are restored I am sure that some proposal of this kind would be examined and before it is finalised, I am sure the House would have an opportunity to discuss it. It is difficult for me to say anything more definitely for the present—several suggestions have been made—and all I would like to say is this, that we have every desire to be on the best terms with Pakistan.

Reference was again made regarding the Territorial Army by my honourable friend Mr. Bhargava. He wanted to expedite the recruitment to the Territorial Force. As the House will realize the main difficulty in this has been the shortage of officers. We are trying to overcome this, now that the cease fire in Kashmir has taken place. As soon as arrangements can be made, I am sure the Territorial Force will make a start.

Then, Sir, suggestions were made and to some extent dissatisfaction was expressed with the slow pace at which we have proceeded with the scientific organisation. This organisation is absolutely essential in the defence science and also for development in the Ordnance Factories. With that point of view and to meet this difficulty, we have established the science organisation with Dr. Kothari as the head scientist. This organisation has not made rapid progress on account of its peculiar difficulties, but I would like to assure the House that as far as the employment of junior and senior scientists is concerned, the recruitment has to be made by the F.P.S.C.—it does not rest with my Ministry—it must go through the F.P.S.C. and the F.P.S.C. will naturally take some time in advertising, then interviewing and finally selecting candidates. As far as we are concerned, we are most anxious that this organisation should be brought to its full strength as early as possible.

Criticism was again made about the huge expenditure on stores. Mr. Sidhva perhaps this morning forgot when he was mentioning the amount of Rs. 16 crores under the head "provisioning" that it did not include only bananas, onions and stuff of that kind; it included rice and atta also.

May I inform the House that, as far as the purchase of stores is concerned, my Ministry assesses its requirements and forwards them to the Ministry for Industry and Supply. It is that Ministry that settles the prices and finalises the contracts.

Sir, as far as equipment is concerned, we are faced with peculiar difficulties. Under the old regime, these difficulties were not there. Then there used to be a British Commander-in-Chief and he used to be also Minister in charge of Defence. Under that arrangement, whatever developments were made in the United Kingdom, they were automatically adopted here. But that is not the position now. The House will have to bear in mind that we are now an independent country and to some extent we have to depend on the help of foreign countries. Most of our equipment in the Army, Air Force and the Navy comes from the United Kingdom. It will be idle to think that we will be in a position to manufacture all our requirements in the next few years. As I said this morning, we are now proceeding with the establishment of an iron and steel industry. It will take five to seven years before it starts functioning and only after that we can proceed with the manufacture of a large number of items that are required by us. The House will fully realise that today there is an extreme shortage of iron and steel in this country. Iron and steel are the main items that are required for the manufacture of arms and equipment as far as the requirements of the Armed Forces are concerned. It will interest Members to know that iron and steel prices have gone up tremendously and therefore it will be difficult for us to make any headway unless these supplies are made available locally.

There is another point regarding the large number of vehicles that we are using. We are fortunate in having large stocks from the last war and we are carrying on with these stocks left over here by the United Kingdom and the United States of America. Now new developments have taken place. The United Kingdom and the United States of America have discarded all the vehicles that they used during the last war. They have now designed new vehicles and in their own country they have scrapped the vehicles they were using during the war. In the next two or three years when our present stock of vehicles runs out, and these spare parts are not available, we will again have to incur heavy expenditure in replacing all the vehicles that we have at present. I am just mentioning this for the information of the House to illustrate the difficulty, the big difficulty that we have to face. It will take some time before all our requirements can be manufactured in this country.

I have nothing more to say. It is difficult for me to reply to all the points that were raised by honourable Members. (Shri Harihar Nath Shastri: "What about labour in Ordnance Factories?") About labour in ordnance factories, I may say that there are two kinds of labour. One section consists of temporary employees who have been working for a number of years and the other type is extra temporary establishment where the number is very large. The temporary establishments are on a different footing. As regards the temporary labour working in the factories, that question is being examined and those who are found fit for promotion will be promoted to permanent jobs.

Now I would like to thank the House for the valuable support given to me. I am encouraged by that support and I will endeavour my best to do what we can for the Defence Forces in the matter of equipment. I shall also economise expenditure as far as possible. I do hope that the House understands the difficulties that we are faced with. In the end I thank the House again for the support they have given me.

Shri Biswanath Das: The honourable Minister in the course of his speech referred to some expansion. May I know whether he means expansion of training institutions? He might be misunderstood by people who read in between the lines.

The Honourable Sardar Baldev Singh: Yes, What I said was that we have now decided on an expansion programme of all the institutions necessary for the Army, Navy and the Air Force.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

"That a sum not exceeding Rs. 2,59,40,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'External Affairs.'"

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Minister of External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations): Mr. Speaker, Sir, this House is no doubt interested in the many aspects of our foreign policy and foreign affairs and how they affect India, and questions are often put on these various aspects. Probably, in the course of the debate today, attention will be drawn to many of these factors, but with your permission, Sir, and the indulgence of the House, I should like to deal with the general aspects of foreign affairs and foreign policy as they affect India and as we look at them rather than to say much about the smaller aspects of this main problem.

[Shri Jawaharlal Nehru]

Even before that, I should like to say something in the nature of a general survey not only of foreign affairs but of India itself. We have had in the course of the last few days a great deal of criticism of the Budget proposals and many of the failings of Government have been pointed out, with, more or less, force. So far as I am concerned, I welcome every type of criticism and I do believe that it would be unfortunate if this House became just, shall I say, a static House, a subservient House, a House which just says "Yes" to anything that the Government might put forward. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, and every member of this House has to be vigilant and the Government, of course, must be vigilant. But there is always a possible tendency for those in authority to become a little complacent. Therefore, I repeat that for my part I welcome the vigilance of honourable members of this House in drawing our attention to our failings or any other error or delinquency on the part of the Administration. I hope that that criticism is offered in good spirit, in a friendly way, and that it does not challenge the bona fides of the Government. Of course, if the bona fides of the Government are sought to be challenged, I do not mind that, provided it is clear that that is the issue.

I have felt in listening to these criticisms during these days or reading about them that perhaps we are concentrating too much on the trees and not looking at the whole wood. We are not looking at the whole picture of India today and what has happened in the course of the last eighteen months or so. It is rather important for us to keep this whole picture before us, or else any amount of attention to detail would not, help us, because it is that big picture that counts—not the small parts of it here and there. Look at this picture eighteen or nineteen months ago and look at it today. Look at it as far as you can, objectively—as if you were at a distance and saw this changing scene. I think if you could transport yourself to the period a year and a half ago and to all that was happening then and to all that has happened since then, I think you will find that there has been not only a great change in India, but that India has gone ahead in many ways in spite of all our difficulties and all the travails that we have passed through.

Speaking for myself—and the House realises that our Government, to some extent particularly myself—we have had to carry very heavy burdens and we have to carry them still and there are great difficulties ahead of us; nevertheless, in all honesty, I have a feeling of achievement, not failure and I look upon the future—and may I say I do not mean the distant future but the near future—with full confidence and feel a certain secret emotion at being privileged to participate in the service of India at this tremendous stage of her history.

May I say, as you have referred to the Budget proposals, that this Budget itself contains provisions, many of which may not perhaps be pleasing to some members, may be we might have done better here and there, but the Budget itself, I think, is a sign of our strength and the strength of the nation. (Hear, hear.) I think that the House and the country will see that the care and foresight given to this Budget by our Finance Minister will be paid in full measure in the months and years to come. We have proceeded cautiously, because, frankly speaking, we dare not take risks with this great trust we have got. Many a thing that we would like to do we have refrained from doing, because we cannot gamble with India's future or India's present. It is too serious a matter for us to go ahead even with our own theories or ideas on the subject, if there is any risk or danger involved in them. So we have proceeded cautiously. It may be that somewhat quicker results might come to us if we were a little more dashing in this matter, but I personally entirely agree with this cautious approach at this present critical time, and apart from any small matters here and there. I should like to pay my tribute to my colleague, the Finance Minister, for the courage and vision and high ability with which he has tackled our problems.

The Indian Union is an infant State, an infant free State, a year and a half old, but remember that India is not an infant country. India is a very ancient country with millenia of history behind her,—history in which she has played a vital part not only within her own vast boundaries but in the world and in Asia in particular. India now, in this last year or more, emerges again in the main trend of human affairs.

Now, that is something of great historical significance. India I said. I could have said that Asia emerges in this main trend of history. Asia, in the long millenia of history, has played a very important part. So has India, of course, but during the last two hundred years or so, certain developments of science and technology in Europe, and America a little later, led to Asia coming under the domination of Europe and to a restriction of her activities in the world at large. She became confined and restricted. Various changes took place internally in India and in Asia during this period. But, generally speaking, India and other countries of Asia were under this political and economic domination of Europe. Now, that period and that epoch has ended and India now comes I think into the forefront in national affairs and world events.

One of the major questions of the day is the readjustment of the relations of Asia and Europe. When we talk of Asia, remember that India, not because of any ambition of ours, but because of the force of circumstances, because of geography, because of history and because of so many other things—inevitably has to play a very important part in Asia. And not only that; India becomes a kind of meeting ground of various trends and forces and a meeting ground between what might roughly be called the East and West.

Look at the map. If you have to consider any question affecting the Middle East, India comes into the picture inevitably; if you have to consider any question concerning South-East Asia, you cannot do so without India. So also about the Far East. So, while the Middle East may not be directly connected with South-East Asia, both are connected with India. So, even if you think in terms of regional organisations in Asia, you may have to keep in touch with the other regions. And whatever regions you may have in mind, India cannot be ignored her important part. So India plays a very important part in Asia.

Now, I said, one of the major questions of the day is the re-adjustment of the relations between Asia and Europe. In the past, especially by virtue of her economic and political domination, the West ignored Asia, or at any rate did not give her the weight that was due to her. Asia was really given a back seat and one unfortunate result of it was that even the statesmen did not recognise the changes that were taking place. There is I believe a considerable recognition at this stage, but it is not enough yet. Even in the Councils of the United Nations, the problems of Asia, the outlook of Asia, the approach of Asia have failed to evoke the enthusiasm that they should. There are many ways of distinguishing between what may be called the approach of Asia and the approach of Europe. Asia today is primarily concerned with what may be called the immediate human problems. In each country of Asia—underdeveloped countries more or less—the main problem is the problem of food of cloth, of education, of health. We are concerned with these problems. We are not directly concerned with problems of power-politics. Some of us, in our minds, may perhaps think of that. Europe, on the other hand, also is concerned with these problems no doubt in the devastated regions. Europe has got a legacy of conflicts of power and of problems which come from the possession of power. They have the fear of losing that power and the fear of somebody else getting greater power and attacking one country or the other. So that the European approach is a legacy of the past conflicts of Europe. It is no good blaming this country or that country for that. It is a legacy and the consequences of the past conflicts of Europe—Europe having been the dominating continent in the world, quarrelling sometimes within its own area for the domination of the world. Well, that domination is largely gone. That legacy of conflict remains in Europe.

12 NOON Sir, I do not mean to say that we in Asia are in any way superior ethically or morally to the people of Europe. In some ways I imagine we are worse off. There is a legacy in Europe of conflict. In Asia at the present moment at least there is no such legacy. The countries of Asia may have their quarrels with their neighbours here and there, but there is no basic legacy of conflict such as the countries of Europe possess. Now, that is a very great advantage for Asia and it would be folly in the extreme for the countries of Asia and India to be dragged in the wake of the conflicts in Europe. We might note that the world progressively tends to become one—one in peace and it is likely to be one, in a sense, in war. No man can say that any country can remain apart when there is any major conflagration. But still one can direct one's policy towards avoiding this conflict and being entangled in it.

So the point I wish the House to remember is this. First of all, this emergence of India in world affairs is something of major consequence in world history, not because we are giant figures. We who happen to be in the Government of India or in this House are men of relatively small stature. But it has been given to us to work at a time when India is becoming a great giant again. So, because of that, in spite of our own smallness, we have to work for great causes and perhaps elevating ourselves in the process.

When India became independent a year and a half ago, we chose the time, or if you like, fate and circumstance chose the time for us, which was one of exceeding difficulty. There were the damages and the consequences of the last great war. And immediately we were independent, there were volcanic upheavals in India. It would have been difficult enough for us if there had been complete peace in India to face all the problems that had accumulated during the period of our arrested growth in the past. But added to that came new problems of colossal magnitude. How we faced them the House remembers, and it will be for history to record whether we failed completely or we succeeded or succeeded partially. Anyhow we survived and that, at any rate, was some success. Anyhow we survived and made good in many ways, apart from mere survival. And gradually we have overcome those problems and gradually we have made of India a single political unit. And may I point out to this House that the political unit that is India today is the largest political unit, in terms of population, in the world? But population and numbers do not count, it is quality that counts. I would say further that from the point of view of our potential resources and our capacity to use those potential resources, we are also potentially the biggest unit in the World. I say that not in any spirit of vain glory but let us recognise the huge trust we have in our keeping and let us then think of it in terms of the great burden and the great responsibility upon us and not in smaller terms. Now this is the background.

Shall I put to you another background? That was this. We, the great majority of the members of this House and vast numbers of people in this country have spent our lives in what might be called a revolutionary activity, in conflicts with authority. We are bred up in that tradition of revolution etc. and now we sit in the seats of authority and have to deal with problems, difficult problems. That adjustment is not an easy adjustment at any time for anyone, more especially now. Then again, not only were we revolutionaries and agitators and breakers of many things but we were bred up in a high tradition under a great man. That tradition was an ethical tradition, a moral tradition and at the same time an application of these ethical and moral doctrines to practical politics. That great man placed before us a technique of action which was unique in the world, which combined political activity and political conflict and a struggle for freedom with certain moral and ethical principles. Now I dare not say that any of us, not all of us, lived up to those ethical and moral principles but I do dare say that in the course of the past 30 years or so, all of us in smaller or greater degree, and the country itself in smaller or greater measure, was affected by those ethical and moral doctrines of the Great Master and Leader. And now with that idealism and ethical background we faced practical problems and it becomes an exceedingly difficult thing to apply that particular doctrine to the solution of those problems. That is a conflict which individuals and groups and nations have often had to face. It came to us in very peculiar circumstances and it was intensified by those circumstances and so there has been this travail of the spirit in most of us.

We have often thought of Gandhiji and his great doctrine, of his great message and while we praised it often enough, we felt 'Are we hypocrites, talking about that and being unable to live up to it. Are we deluding ourselves and the world?' Because if we were hypocrites, then surely our future was dark. We may be hypocritical about the small things of life but it is a dangerous thing to be hypocritical about the great things of life. And it would have been the greatest tragedy if we exploited the name and prestige of our great leader, took shelter under it and denied in our hearts, in our activities, the message that he had brought to this country and the world. So we have had these conflicts in our minds and those conflicts continue and perhaps there is no final solution of those conflicts except to try continually to bridge the gulf between that idealism and that practice which is forced down upon us by circumstances. For after all if we are in charge of any work, if we are in seats of authority and responsibility to face a particular situation, we can only do so, on the one hand according to the way that we think will meet that situation. We cannot and I am quite positive that our great leader would not have had us function as blind automatons just carrying the same thing which he had said without reference to change in events. On the other hand, we have to keep in mind those very ideals to which we have pledged ourselves so often. There is always a great difficulty between the approach to a problem of a Prophet and of a Politician. We had the combination of a Prophet and a great Statesman but then we are not Prophets nor are we very great, possibly, in our statesmanship and so we cannot be judged by that high standard. All we can say is that we should do our utmost to live up as far as we can to that standard but always judging a problem by the lights of our own intelligence, otherwise we will fail. There is this grave danger, on the one hand of denying the message of the Prophet, on the other of blindly following it and missing all its vitality. Both happen. By just repeating some phrase or dogma without realising what the truth lay behind it and thus perhaps killing the spirit of the Prophet even more than by denying that message. We have therefore to steer through these.

Then a Politician or statesman, call him what you will, has to deal not only with the truth but with men's receptivity of that truth because if there is not sufficient receptivity of it from the politician's or statesman's point of view, that truth is thrown into the wilderness till minds are ripe for it. And certainly a statesman cannot function and in a democratic age much less can he function unless he can make people believe in that truth. So unfortunately but inevitably compromises have to take place from time to time. You cannot do without compromises but a compromise is a bad compromise if it is opportunist in the sense that it is not always aiming at the truth. It may be a good compromise if it is always looking at that truth and trying to take you there. So in the past year and a half we have faced these difficult problems and the difficulty has been obvious enough to many but perhaps not many have thought of this travail of the spirit under which we suffered all the time; and this fear that we are becoming too much slaves of events, carried away by them, too much opportunists, and it may indeed be very difficult to draw the line. So all we can do is to pull ourselves back occasionally, look at our activities and examine them from that high standard which was laid down and try to remain as near to it as possible.

It was a curious thing that we who carried on the struggle for freedom in a non-violent and peaceful way should immediately have to be confronted with violence in its intensest form, civil violence as well as, what may be called, military violence, that we should have to undertake a kind of war in a part of the country. The whole thing seemed to be a complete upset of all that we stood for; and yet circumstances were such that I am quite convinced that we had no other way, and that the way we took was the right one.

May I mention to the House that towards the end of October 1947, when this question of Kashmir suddenly came upon us, when we heard that raiders had come into Kashmir and were destroying and looting, it was a very difficult question for us to decide. It was difficult enough from the military point of view, because we were isolated and far away, and the sending of arms or troops by air was no light undertaking from the purely military point of view. But the real difficulty before us arose from inside, it was a difficulty of the spirit. What will this land us in? That was the difficulty. On the one hand there was the powerful call of the people of Kashmir, those people who were being attacked and destroyed. We could not say "No" to them. On the other hand we did not quite know where it would lead us. And in that difficulty of the spirit I went—as I often did—to Mahatma Gandhi, for his advice. It was not natural for him to give advice about military matters. What did he know about them? His struggles were struggles of the spirit. But listening to me, if I may with all respect say so, he did not say "No" to the course of action that I proposed. He saw that a government as we were, had to follow its duty even in the military line, when certain circumstances arose. And throughout those few months, before he was taken away from us, I conferred with him on many an occasion about Kashmir, and it was a great happiness to me that I had his blessings in the steps we took.

So, looking back on this year and a half, we have built up India as a single organized political unit, and in this, as the House knows, my respected colleague, the Deputy Prime Minister, has played a supremely vital part. We have some little further to go in that matter. But I hope those further problems also will be settled very soon. There is the problem of Kashmir. There are the problems of what are called foreign possessions in India, Pondicherry, Chandarnagore, Goa, and the rest. And all along we have stated that we want a peaceful and co-operative solution in regard to these foreign possessions. But it is quite clear that there is only one future for these possessions, and that is complete integration with India. We are prepared to wait a little for it, to avoid conflict etc. We do not want that, we want peaceful solutions of these and other problems. But it is an inconceivable thing that in this new, resurgent India, bits of territory should belong to powers far away. So we are trying to the best of our ability to find a peaceful solution of these problems.

May I point out another thing? The House, very rightly is vigilant about avoidance of waste, about growth in our administrative services etc. There is an Economy Committee sitting, and there are other committees considering this problem. That is right. But please remember that the Government of India which has been functioning since the 15th August, 1947 has had to face many other problems than any other Government of India had to face previously. First of all, the previous governments, although they were endowed with certain social objectives, they did not think of them as primary functions, or of the same importance as we necessarily must. Secondly, take this field of foreign affairs about which I am speaking. There were no foreign affairs then. It has been an entirely new adventure for us, building up our foreign and international position. This has meant necessarily additions to our staff here and in foreign countries, large additions and large expenditure of money. It may be that some economy is possible; but that should be considered and looked into. But you cannot be an independent nation, and not have those foreign relations—the two are incompatible. Indians are spread out all over the world. We have to look after their interests. Apart from Indians living in other countries, we have various interests, trade interests and other interests. We have to buy things. We have to sell things. It is quite impossible for any independent country, more especially a great and big country like India, to carry on its normal existence without these foreign relations, with foreign establishments, foreign embassies, legations, trade missions and the like.

I mention this because often enough there is criticism of our spreading out all over the world with our foreign embassies etc. It is perhaps thought that this is just a gesture to satisfy our own vanity. And I am told, sometimes, that I have got some kind of a bee in my bonnet; that I forget the troubles in India, and I do not consider them, our domestic problems, that I think only of sending ambassadors from Timbuktu to Peru. Well, I should like the House to consider this matter and be quite clear about it, because to refer to Timbuktu and Peru in this connection does not appear to me to be the height of wisdom. It shows quite an extraordinary lack of appreciation of what India is and what internally and domestically India requires. If we do not go out and have our foreign establishments, somebody will have to look after our interests. Who is that somebody? Are we going to ask England to look after our foreign interests in other countries as Pakistan has done in many countries? Is that the type of independence that we imagine? What does independence consist of? It consists fundamentally and basically of foreign relations. That is the test of independence. All else is local autonomy. Once foreign relations go out of your hand, into the charge of somebody else, to that extent and in that measure, you are not independent. So, if we are an independent nation, we must have foreign relations. In fact, we cannot carry on without them. If we had foreign relations we have to have the establishment necessary to carry on those foreign relations. And foreign relations though they involve be, because, as I said a little while ago, India is interested in several regions of Asia: whether all should be grouped together or separately, I do not know. That is for us to consider together as to what is more feasible but in any event two facts have to be borne in mind. One is that whatever structure of co-operation we might build up will be entirely within the scope of the Charter of the United Nations. Secondly, there will be no binding covenants in it but largely one of consultation and co-operation that naturally flow from common interests. So our policy will continue to be not only to keep apart from power alignments but trying to make friendly co-operation possible. Fortunately we enter upon our independence as a country with no hostile background in regard to any country. We are friendly to all countries. Our hostility during the last 200 years was mainly directed towards the dominating power here and because of India's independence that hostility has largely vanished, though it may survive in some people's minds, but that is not important. So that we approach the whole world on a friendly basis and there is no reason why we should put ourselves at a disadvantage, if I may say so, of becoming unfriendly to any group. I think that India has a vital role to play in world affairs.

The various ideologies that confront the world today, the various 'isms' which threaten conflict repeatedly may have a great deal I think to commend themselves but all of them have been derived, if I may say so, from the background of Europe. Well, the background of Europe is not something apart from the background of the world and there is much in the background of Europe which is present in India or in other countries. Nevertheless, it is true that the background of Europe is not completely the background of India or the world and there is absolutely no reason why we should be asked to choose between this ideology or the other in toto. India is a country with a tremendous vitality which it has shown through its history: it has often enough imposed its own cultural pattern on other countries not by force of arms but by the strength of her vitality, culture and civilization. There is no reason why we should give up our way of doing things, our way of considering things, simply because of some particular ideology which emanates from Europe. I have no doubt at all that we have to learn a great deal from Europe and America and I think that we should keep our eyes and ears completely open. We should be flexible in mind and we should be receptive: but I have also no doubt at all that we should not allow ourselves, if I may use the words of Gandhiji, we must not allow any wind from anywhere to sweep us of our feet.

So we should approach these problems, whether domestic or international problems, in our own way. If by any chance we align ourselves definitely with one power group we may perhaps from one point of view do some good but I have not the shadow of a doubt that from a larger point of view, not only of India but of world peace, it will do harm. Because then we lose that tremendous vantage ground that we have of using such influence as we possess—and that influence is going to grow from year to year—in the cause of world peace.

What are we interested in world affairs for? We seek no dominion over any country. We do not wish to interfere in the affairs of any country, domestic or other. Our main stake in world affairs is peace: our main stake in world affairs is to see that there is racial equality: our main stake in world affairs is that people who are still subjugated should be free. For the rest we do not desire to interfere in world affairs and we do not desire that other people too should interfere in our affairs. If, however, there is interference with us, whether military, political or economic, we shall resist it.

So it is with this friendly approach that we look at the world. It is true that in doing so we are often likely to be misunderstood, because passions have been roused all over the world and sometimes each country thinks that if you are not completely lined up with it you are its enemy or opponent. It is unfortunate if people think so: we cannot help it. We may sometimes even lose some petty advantage, because of this fear and suspicion in other people's minds. But even now other countries are beginning to realise that we are playing an independent role: that we are not tied up to anybody, that we consider problems dispassionately and objectively, in so far as we can judge them on the merits and not from that other point of view, which is becoming very common, that is to say from the point of view of a certain manoeuvring for a possible future war. That is the point of view from which problems are dealt with today.

If there is a future war what should be done now to better our position or to get this territory or this country on our side and prevent it from going to the other side? It is not for me to criticize other nations and their policies. But I just do not see why India should function in that way or should become a part of this world manoeuvring that is going on. So we have to keep apart from that and at the same time develop the closest relations with all those countries. It so happens that because of history and chance our relations—economic and trade—are far greater with some countries than with others. Well, we will continue them always seeing that they do not come in the way of our growth, do not hamper us in our progress.

The supreme question that one has to face today in the world is how can we avoid a world war? Some people seem to think that it is unavoidable and therefore they prepare for it and prepare for it not only in a military sense but in a psychological sense and thereby actually bring the war nearer. Personally I think that is a very wrong and a very dangerous thing to do. Of course no country dare take things for granted and not prepare for possible contingencies. We in India must be prepared for any possible danger to our freedom and our existence. That is so. But to think in terms of the inevitability of world war is dangerous thinking. I should like this House and the country to appreciate what a world war means, what it is likely to mean. It just does not matter who wins in the world war because it will mean such utter catastrophe that for a generation or more everything that we stand for in the way of progress and advancement of humanity will be put an end to. That is a terrible thing to contemplate and everything should be done to avoid this catastrophe. If it is unavoidable—of course we do not run away from anything because we are afraid of it—we have to face it. I feel that India can play a big part, and may be an effective part, in helping in the avoidance of war. Therefore it becomes all the more necessary that India should not be lined up with any group of powers which for various reasons are in a sense full of fear of war and prepare for war. That is the main approach of our foreign policy and I am glad to say that I believe that it is more and more appreciated.

We are at the present moment on friendly terms with all countries. With our neighbours—with Pakistan I think the situation is improving from day to day. It is much better than it was a few months ago; I hope it will improve more. With Afghanistan and Nepal—although Afghanistan is not our immediate neighbour now: anyhow it has been our neighbour—we are on the friendliest terms with them. With other countries in Asia and in Europe our relations are getting closer and closer, our trade is expanding and so on and so forth. We should utilise this position I think in the United Nations and elsewhere to fulfil the cause of peace, and it is possible that a number of other countries which are not happy at the prospect of war may also support the attitude that India might take up when occasion arises in regard to it. We have dealt with questions in the United Nations as individual separate questions,—for instance, in regard to Korea, in regard to Palestine, in regard to some other matters too, and we have displeased people because we have dealt with individual questions and gave our opinion on the merits. Of course the merits cannot be divorced from various other possible consequences. I think people have realized often enough that the advice that India gave and which was not accepted then was the right advice and the trouble would have been far less if the advice had been accepted then.

There are many aspects of this question which I can speak about, but I have already taken a great deal of the time of the House. I would beg the House to look upon the matter from this wider point of view that I have placed before it, that is the emergence of India and Asia into this trend of human affairs, the inevitability of India playing an important part by virtue of her tremendous potential, by virtue of the fact that she is the biggest political unit in terms of population today and is likely to be in terms of her resources also. She is going to play that part. If we have to play that part we have to look upon this question from this bigger point of view and not from the small difficulties and problems that may face us and that part must essentially be one of promoting peace and freedom in the world, of removing racial inequalities.

And may I in this connection say that it has been a matter of deep grief to us to learn of the racial riots that took place at Durban in South Africa? I do not wish to say much in regard to that except that if racialism is encouraged anywhere it is bound to yield such trouble. But it is a matter of deep grief to us that Indians and Africans should be involved in such rioting. It has been, not today but over years past, our definite instructions to our envoys in Africa and elsewhere that we do not want Indians to have any special interests at the cost of the Africans anywhere. We have impressed upon them to co-operate with the Africans in gaining the freedom of those Africans and we have repeated these instructions again. I hope that after this unfortunate experience of Durban, Indians and Africans will come together again. Indeed there is evidence from East Africa and elsewhere of a great measure of co-operation between Indians and Africans.

So I hope that this House and this country will approve of the general lines of policy that I have suggested and indicate that it is India's desire to play this important part in favour of world peace and thereby perhaps help in avoiding that supreme catastrophe, that is, a world war.

Mr. Speaker: If the House is agreeable, instead of having an unfinished speech for five minutes, I think we may now adjourn and re-assemble at 2.30 P.M.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Seth Govind Das (C.P. and Berar: General): The Honourable the Prime Minister today reminded us that our country is an ancient country. No doubt, Sir, it is an ancient country with an ancient history, with an ancient civilisation and with an ancient culture. On account of the Honourable the Prime Minister reminding us, I suddenly remembered the days of our great emperor Asoka. In his days, Sir, we had relations with various countries and today I am glad to find that after our freedom we are again developing such relations. (An Honourable Member: 'Not the empire!') Not the empire. Even at that time of Asoka we had cultural relations; we had no idea of winning any country even at that time. We want to develop the same sort of cultural relations today after India has become free.

Fast communications have made this world very small. Every country has come closer to one another and therefore the importance of international relations, and importance of international policy has become very great. After we achieved freedom our prestige has increased in the world. On account of the methods which we used for achieving our freedom, it has increased still more and after achieving our freedom the way in which we dealt with various problems—the latest of them being the problem of Indonesia—our prestige increased still further. Much depends upon the policy which we shall follow in future. It should be based no doubt on ethical and moral standards and if it is based on ethical and moral standards we shall consider nothing but human problems. Every country considers these human problems, but most of them consider them only with respect to their nationals. Our motto had been—“Atmavat sarva bhuteshu”,—and on account of this motto we were pledged to vishva-prema, universal love. Our master taught us the same even in these days of bloodshed.

The honourable the Prime Minister has rightly said that today the greatest problem is the readjustment of the relations of Asia and Europe. I am sure that if we follow the policy which we have followed so far, we shall be able to readjust the relations of Asia and Europe—not only the relations of Asia and Europe but of the whole world. Compromises are necessary. Even in the philosophy of satyagraha there is compromise—how many times Mahatma Gandhi made compromises with the British Government? But no compromise should be made sacrificing our objectives, and therefore the two declarations which the honourable the Prime Minister made today, one with respect to our foreign possessions and the other with respect to our relations with Commonwealth countries, will be hailed throughout the country. He rightly said that we do not want to force those possessions to join our territory but at the same time it is but natural for them, if not today then tomorrow, if not tomorrow then the day after, to join us. And as far as the friendship between the Commonwealth countries is concerned, we have to keep intact the decision which we have made in our Constituent Assembly that India is going to remain a Sovereign Republic. We have done right in not joining any of the blocs in the U.N.O. and I think we should pursue the same policy.

The honourable the Prime Minister said something with respect to Indians abroad. It has been a subject in which I am interested for the last 25 years. He said the status of our brethren abroad has increased. On account of our independence it has, I admit; but if we see the real conditions there we find that there has been no improvement in the material conditions there. I shall give examples only of two countries because I have very few minutes at my disposal. I shall first deal with East Africa. As far as East Africa is concerned, we find that the inter-territorial organisation of the four colonies there—that is Kenya, Tanganyika, Uganda and Zanzibar—has come into existence. The whites were important in Kenya, but on account of this Inter-Territorial Organisation, they have become important even in Tanganyika, Uganda and Zanzibar, where they are in a microscopic minority. East Africa is a country with which we had oldest relations and new immigration Acts have been passed there barring our immigration altogether. Another trouble has sprung up there. That is communal trouble and on account of some communal feelings in our community there, the whites took advantage of it. They exploited those feelings and wanted to have separate electorates in Kenya. The Government of India pressed for not having separate electorates and though separate electorates have not come into existence, yet in Kenya Legislature, reservation of seats has been made and there are three seats for non-Muslims and two for Muslims. In South Africa things are much worse than they ever were. The Durban riots were a very sad event and it is feared that the Commission which has been appointed by the Union Government might whitewash the whole affair.

Thus we see that though our status might have gone up in the Commonwealth countries, the condition of Indians in these countries is practically the same. In Mauritius, Fiji and Trinidad there are no problems today, but in Burma, in Ceylon and in Malaya also we have to face these problems. In Malaya the trade unions are under communist influence and that is the reason for the trouble there. In Burma, the question of nationalisation of land has been taken up. Of course, we cannot oppose it on principle, because we ourselves are abolishing the Zamindari system; but we have to see that adequate or at least reasonable compensation is given to the persons who own that land. Unfortunately, in Ceylon, we have not the same cordial relations with the indigenous population as we used to have. To me it appears that the only solution of the problems of Indians abroad is that we should never fight there for any exclusive rights for ourselves or any privilege for ourselves. We should merge our interests with those of the indigenous population there and we should make a united front with them against these whites who have usurped the rights of all.

In conclusion, I wish to say that India has been an idealistic country. The honourable the Prime Minister said that we have much to learn from Europe and America and I say that Europe and America have also much to learn from us. If we stick to our ideals, if our Government, if our Embassies abroad, stick to those ideals, ideals which have come down to us from times immemorial, ideals which our masters have taught us, I am sure that it will not be this country which would be learning much from Europe and America but it would be Europe and America which will be learning something from us. I congratulate the honourable the Prime Minister for all that he has been doing since he has become our Foreign Minister and I hope that if we go on doing what we have done in the last eighteen months, our country will have a unique place in the international world.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): I am glad to say that most of the members in this House are very much in agreement with the general line of foreign policy that our Prime Minister has been pursuing and the line that he has taken also in the statement he has made to us this morning.

To take up the point that my honourable friend Seth Govind Das has just now raised, I am glad that he has also declared himself in favour of the principle that Indian nationals in these various countries abroad should not fight for any exclusive rights for themselves, and on the other hand, they should make common cause with the peoples of those countries. It is a very important statement that he has made, in that he has interested himself in their cause and he has developed wide contacts among Indians abroad. But unfortunately, our nationals abroad do not seem to be pursuing such a policy in their own relations with the local nationals. Except for Kenya and may be in one or two other places in West Indies etc. our nationals seem to have got into certain privileged positions and are unwilling to take into partnership the local nationals. Only recently, we were told that in South Africa, even in running the buses when the Negroes wanted a share in it, our friends were not willing to make any concessions and I have been receiving from time to time a number of complaints from the Negro nationals and their leaders, especially in Kenya, Uganda and Nyasaland about our own attitude. Therefore, they have expressed the hope that we in India anyhow will not be taking up the same attitude that those Indian traders are taking up in those countries. It is as well that our Commonwealth Department makes it clear in unmistakable terms to these nationals abroad that they cannot expect any support from our Government if they were to pursue this policy of trying to get concessions from the whites and not yielding anything at all to local peoples and not trying to take them into comradely relationship and partnership.

Then, coming to what our Leader of the House has said this morning, I have felt that he was not quite as seriously conscious of the actual existence of a cold war, of an ideological war, of an economic war, that is today going on in different parts of the world, that is being waged by two great nations and two great Powers backed as they are by their own satellite countries,—United States on the one side, and the U.S.S.R. on the other. If you go to Yugoslavia you find that Marshal Tito is complaining of economic non-cooperation from Stalin. If you go to Czechoslovakia, you find a similar complaint being made against U.S.A. If you go to the Scandinavian countries, similar complaint is being made against Russia. Coming to the Asian continent, we find that in a number of countries including Indo-China and Burma, Russia has been playing a role which is not very honourable to herself or useful to the world cause of peace. It is true that the hand of either the United States or the U.S.S.R. is not so easily discernable in what is happening in all these countries; but nevertheless their agencies are at work in order to queer the pitch and to create confusion and create economic unsettlement. In between these two great Powers comes Great Britain together with her friends in Western Europe. They are still interested in imperialism. They are still anxious to retain not only their Asiatic possessions, but also to develop their interests in African possessions. They are bent upon carrying on a policy of exploitation.

What is happening in Malaya is something which should upset many minds. It is true that in Malaya the Communist party has been playing a role which is really destructive. It has taken to violent means and violent ways and necessarily its guerilla warfare has to be put down by legitimate means including the use of armed forces. But if such steps had been taken by a National Government of Malaya it would have been possible for the rest of the world to appreciate. But when British Empire has had to take this step, necessarily the position of people like us who have been so closely associated with the Commonwealth becomes very difficult to justify. Even in Africa, not to speak of South Africa, the role that the British Government has been playing is not very honourable and, in regard to Indonesia, the attitude taken up by Great Britain is certainly objectionable. It is under these circumstances that we have to make up our minds whether we can agree not only to be friends with Great Britain but also to be one of the partners in the Commonwealth. Our position in the Commonwealth will certainly become stronger and more useful in advancing the cause of the world, if Great Britain were to make up her mind to shed imperialism and give freedom to all these people and help them to establish strong, powerful and stable national governments. Until that happy day dawns, I am afraid the position that India will be taking up in the Commonwealth is likely to be the butt of criticism, as well as talk on the part of the various other countries. That is where the softest or the weakest point lies so far as our foreign policy is concerned.

Then, the United States of America has been asking the rest of the world to believe in her democratic professions. But is she fully democratic? That is where doubts arise. Has she been pursuing a policy of democracy, looking at the whole world as one unit, treating every country as equal to every other country and treating every people as equal to every other people, deserving of equal consideration, help, assistance and camaraderie? The answer is in the negative. She has been trying to help western European nations. Why? Is it only to help them to rehabilitate themselves after the war? Not only that; it is also to save them from the advancing tentacles of totalitarian monsters that are raising their heads all over the world. Very well. If she is right in doing that, then why is it she has played such a disastrous role in China? She had been blowing hot and cold with regard to that country. She had been giving false hopes to Marshal Chiang Kai Shaik and he had been pursuing a line in the hope that he would get help. But where is he today? When he became very badly in need of American help, they refused him that help and left him in the lurch with the result that the poor Marshal has been obliged to flee his own country. Does she want India and other countries also to pursue the same disastrous policy and come to a disastrous end? These are the questions that America has to answer. These are the questions also that our own Foreign Department has got to place before itself in its dealings with America and our own friends.

If the peoples of the world are to be saved from totalitarianism, they have got to be quite clear what they mean by totalitarianism. Communism is one brand, Sovietism is another, capitalism and imperialism are a third. We do not want to have anything to do with these three. But nevertheless, if these people are to be saved and helped to stand on their own feet, some help is needed.

We are told that the world is one in prosperity as well as in poverty. But what do we see? There is this prosperous country of America and there are the poorest people on the continents of Africa and Asia. Is it possible for these two parts of the world to feel in one and the same way towards all problems when they are placed in opposite extremes so far as their economic condition is concerned? Naturally it is not possible. It is the duty of the statesmen of the world to see that the world is made one. But if it is to be made one—this is what Truman has told us—did his Foreign Secretary Marshall offer to place their wealth at the disposal of other countries, not as loans or gifts but as their offering towards the promotion of this conception of the unity of the world? Did they use their resources in men and money and expert aid and materials to raise the economic level of other countries?

What is it that America has done so far as Asia is concerned? Nothing. And what is more? We have asked America to help these countries in the same way as she has been helping Western European countries. Until today she has not made up her mind to come to the rescue of Burma, Indonesia, India, China or China. If the economic condition of the masses in these countries had been raised to at least the minimum necessary level of decency, would it have been possible for those people to become a prey to the destructive agencies and elements that are now gaining more and more sway there? We have been told by the American Government and by Western countries that Western Europe was saved from the clutches of the Communist party because that territory was flooded with American capital goods and that with these they salvaged those people. Why is it that they did not think of doing the same so far as Asia is concerned?

I want our Foreign Department to concern itself with this aspect of the matter and then tell America and the rest of the world: 'Look here, if you are keen on championing the democratic cause and developing democracy all the world over as against the expanding and advancing world totalitarian front, then come to the rescue of people of this part of the world in regard to food, clothing, capital goods and other essential basic industrial equipment that this country needs. We want assistance. There is only one country which can provide that assistance and that country is America. But America is not playing the game.'

Then on the other side there is Soviet Russia. She has also been trying to help her own friends of the south-east European countries. They have been helped economically by Soviet Russia and in the East also, Russia is trying to help those countries friendly to her. Because of our policy we have been pursuing of not aligning ourselves with Russia or America, we have not been able to get any assistance from either of these political blocks. Therefore what shall we do? Even at the risk of having to hug our own poverty, as our own Prime Minister declared, we should not definitely align ourselves with this or that group. Then what are we to do? As I said last year, we have been pursuing that line in this country of not joining either group. Then are we to be neutrals? I have said before that it is not becoming of this country that we should be tainted as neutrals. We should take a positive line. I am glad that our Prime Minister has been pursuing such a positive line. I am very glad he has taken the initiative in calling an Asian Conference here in regard to the Indonesian problem. He is going to call another Conference and I am happy to see in the World Press the lead he has given has come to be appreciated very much except in the Soviet press. I can understand why it is so. I cannot understand why the Russians are so very keen in criticising the initiative taken by the Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. Do they want the Britisher to take the initiative? Or do they want the Americans to take the initiative? If India had not taken the initiative it would have helped the Imperialist cause and not the cause of peace. India has no interest in imperialism or power politics. As she has taken the initiative, it is only fair to expect Soviet Russia to appreciate the lead given by India. We cannot be content with the present state of things.

We cannot rest on our oars and that is where our Foreign Ministry has got to take sufficient steps in order to build up a peace front. It is necessary that they should come out into the world definitely and positively say that we are not in favour of either capitalist totalitarianism or idealistic totalitarianism or even economic totalitarianism but on the other hand we are out for the establishment of a true and full-fledged democracy and in order to building up that democratic front, we wish to pursue our foreign policy not only here in this country, but only in our relations with individual countries but also in our activities in the UNO.

Mr. Speaker: In order to enable me to accommodate a larger number of people who are anxious to speak, I would earnestly request the members to restrict their remarks to ten minutes instead of fifteen minutes. Otherwise it will not be possible to give chance to more members.

Mr. Tajamul Husain (Bihar: Muslim): We got independence about a year and a half ago and now we are considered to be one of the greatest nations in the World. How this wonderful thing happened in such a short space of time? It is due entirely to the effort of one man and that is our Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. He raised us in the eyes of the world and I am sure if he remains our leader for at least ten years more, we will become the greatest nation in the world.

[Mr. Tajamul Husain]

As regards the Commonwealth Relations we have not as yet decided whether we will remain a member of the Commonwealth or not. There are no doubt both advantages and disadvantages in remaining a member of the Commonwealth but I submit this is not the place to discuss this point. This point will be decided later on by the Constituent Assembly. If at that time we find that it is beneficial to us to remain a member of the Commonwealth, we will decide accordingly but if we find that there is absolutely no advantage to us by remaining a member of the Commonwealth, we will decide that we will not remain a member of the Commonwealth. But one thing I have not been able to understand, viz., recently the Australian Prime Minister said that Australia was meant only for the White people. He also said that our Prime Minister Pandit Nehru agreed with him with regard to this policy of Australia. I would like to know whether it is true or not.

As regards Burma, as far as I am aware, there is an Act called the Burmese Nationalisation of Land Act of 1948 by which the Burmese Government can purchase all lands and houses belonging to Indians in Burma and also that Indians in Burma are not allowed to bring back sale-proceeds of the land and houses to India if they want to come to India. We are not allowed under the same Act to bring the profits from trade and commerce. So it has become impossible for Indians to come back to their own country if they so desired. There were many Indians there who were in the service of the Burmese Government and they had been dismissed but they were not allowed to bring their hard-earned money which they had saved out to their own country. If they want to remain there they cannot do so and they cannot come back to India because they are not allowed to bring back the money. They could not stay there because the right of citizenship had been denied to them. I understand that our Government have taken up the question of valuation of land belonging to Indians in Burma. This is very good, but not enough. I suggest that the Government of India should take up the question of valuation of house property and business also. I would like to say a few words about Embassies. We have just attained independence and naturally we want to become also the greatest nation and I have no doubt we will but it will no doubt take time and we must go slow. My suggestion is that on no account should we side with any foreign powers in case of war. We must remain neutral atleast for about ten years. By that time we will become stronger than what we are now. There is no doubt that the embassies in the foreign countries are doing good work. We are spending a lot of money over them. My only prayer is we do not get ourselves involved in their power politics of the United States of America or Russia and lastly I will say one word about the French and Portuguese possessions in India about which the Prime Minister has already enlightened us. No Indian would like any Foreigners to remain in any part of India as part owner of India. It will be dangerous for us especially in case of war if we allow them to remain and so something should be done about it and I am glad that the Prime Minister has told us something about it.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri (U.P.: General): I would not deal with the question of high foreign policy over which three of my distinguished friends have already spoken. I would simply submit in a nutshell that the policy that our great leader has been pursuing since the achievement of Independence is the only correct policy and that policy has raised India high in the estimation of the world. But at the present moment I desire to confine myself to one particular aspect of the External Affairs, namely, the working of our embassies in other countries. I feel that this is a very delicate subject and moreover I feel somewhat overwhelmed by the presence of one for whom during the last 25 years of my public life I have had profound regard mingled with considerable awe. Still, I rise to say something in this regard because of a sense of duty which inspires me to open my mind on the present occasion. In doing so, I should like to assure the House and my Leader that I have no personal prejudice, no dislike against any particular individual. On the contrary, I have every respect for every one of our ambassadors. They are honest people, men of integrity, and they are doing onerous duty to this country, for which they deserve the wholehearted support and protection not only of the Government but also of this House. My comments are entirely impersonal and based on expediency and a certain amount of experience.

I would, in the first place, make a few remarks in regard to the principle that should govern the appointment of our ambassadors in future. In regard to this question, I have two suggestions to make. Firstly, that the appointment of our ambassadors should be confined to public men of standing and distinction in this country, who have been conversant with and who have been through thick and thin in the politics of this country. My second suggestion is—and I would invite my Honourable leader to consider whether it has any weight—that local men are, as a general rule, not appointed as our ambassadors. (Mr. Tajamul Husain: 'What is meant by local men?') The honourable member will please try to understand what I say. The reason why I make this suggestion is that due to long association with any particular country, an Indian who has been in a foreign country for, say, twenty or twenty-five years, develops conflicting loyalties, gets involved in intrigues and manipulations and the result is that these things stand in the way of the proper discharge of his duties, and also undermine his efficiency. So I humbly suggest that this aspect may be taken into consideration.

Then, there are two or three other suggestions that I should much like to make. The first is in regard to the question of foreign publicity. I felt, while I was in England, and in some of the continental countries last year, that the publicity of our country in foreign countries was very much ignored and I was pained to find that even in a country like England which had long association with this country colossal ignorance was prevailing in regard to the affairs in India. I met, eminent people, particularly leaders of the trade union movement, and I was astonished to find that there were baseless impressions in their mind in regard to this country. One of the impressions was that civic liberty in this country was completely suppressed and that there was a fascist regime in this country. The second and still more regrettable impression that prevailed at that time in that country was that the Cabinet of this Country was divided and that there was one section that stood for civic liberties whereas there was another section which stood for complete suppression of civic liberties. It should be, and it should have been the duty of our ambassador that such impressions should not arise and if they exist, they are counteracted effectively.

The third suggestion that I want to make is with regard to having adequate personnel having a fair knowledge of foreign languages. I found in course of my tour, that in our embassies people having a fair knowledge of the languages of the countries were very much lacking, and there were interpreters in certain continental countries who did not belong to India, but to those countries. I think that arrangements should immediately be made to start an institution under the External Affairs Ministry to train young men to take up this work.

Within the next two or three minutes that I have at my disposal I would like to touch on one important question, namely, the handling of confidential work. In course of my tour I noted that in some of the embassies, there were stenographers who were handling confidential work. And again, up to this time, ciphering work is also done in certain places by people who are foreigners. And still more amazed was I to find one thing in a particular country—I do not want to name that country. It was that our ambassador in that country went out on some official business for two or three weeks and during his absence, instead of his confidential files being handled by the Deputy High Commissioner, that work was handled by and looked after by his Private Secretary who was a foreigner, belonging to that country. I feel, that our Foreign Affairs Ministry should see to it that the confidential work in our embassies should be looked after by responsible people who belong to this country.

I have touched upon some of the points, and before I conclude, let me join in the high compliments that have been paid to my leader by my distinguished friends. I do say that he has very successfully handled the foreign affairs of our country. There is only one observation I have to make with regard to our foreign policy. There is an impression in this country which has found echo in one of the speeches at least, that the time has come when we should directly or indirectly align ourselves with a particular bloc. In this connection I want to give a warning. Let no false sense of security and, no temporary resentment against any particular country or against any particular party, cloud our judgment and goad us to follow a policy that may in the long run prove disastrous for our country.

Shri B. Shiva Rao (Madras: General): I want to utilise the brief time at my disposal for placing before the House some points arising out of India's participation in the last Session of the United Nations General Assembly. Before I do that I would like to make a suggestion to the Prime Minister that attempts should be made to place on the table of the House, with as little delay as possible, the reports of all Indian delegations to International Conferences, not only to the United Nations General Assembly but to such conferences as are held by the F.A.O., or U.N.E.S.C.O., or any other organization connected with the United Nations. Secondly, I would like him to consider whether it would not be possible to give this House an opportunity more frequently than once a year, to have debates on different aspects of foreign affairs. He spoke to us this morning comprehensively for almost an hour and a quarter, covering many points of the greatest interest and importance, and the House is expected to deal with them in the space of two and a half hours. I am aware, Sir, that because of the late arrangements that were made in regard to the budget discussions this year, it was perhaps not practicable to give more than one day for the discussion of the estimates of the External Affairs Ministry. But I hope this aspect will be borne in mind next year. Thirdly, I would like to repeat a suggestion which I made in the course of the budget discussion last year, and that is that inside the External Affairs Ministry there should be built up a section which would deal with all international conferences, whether they relate to commerce, or to public health or to cultural activities or to any Ministry in the Government of India. That I think would ensure a co-ordination of policies to be pursued by our Delegations which go abroad.

Now, coming to the Session of the General Assembly held in Paris last year, I think I must confess that it was even more barren of achievement than its immediate predecessor in 1947. In the main the lack of achievement was due to two factors: one was the uncertainty created by the presidential elections in the United States, which lasted until the beginning of November: the second was the deepening crisis over Berlin. Sitting in Paris and watching the almost interminable debates, particularly in the Political Committee, I was often reminded of a saying which I heard in this House many years ago, when in the place of the Prime Minister there sat the British Home Member of the then Government of India and the Leader of the Opposition was the late Pandit Motilal Nehru. The Home Member in concluding the debate quoted a Bengali proverb, and translated into English is something like this: "those who live on the banks of a river must learn to make friends with the crocodiles." In Paris I felt that we lived on the banks of more than one river well stocked with crocodiles of various sizes and shapes; some almost friendly looking, some more true to form.

Last week in one of the questions which Mr. Sidhva put he raised a series of supplementaries in regard to South Africa's designs on South-West Africa, and he almost seemed to suggest that the Government of India had somehow failed in not securing the support of the Dominions and the other powers for the resolution that India had sponsored in regard to South-West Africa. I think it is necessary to understand the limitations under which a delegation works at an international conference like this. At the Committee stage it is necessary to secure a simple majority for any resolution before it can be passed on to the Plenary Session of the General Assembly. In the Plenary Session itself it must have at least a two-thirds majority. Now it is not in India's power, not belonging to any bloc as the Prime Minister pointed out this morning, and not having any power of influence over the voting of other members of the United Nations, it is not possible except by persuasion to secure the support of other members of the United Nations. And so far as South-West Africa is concerned, although India sponsored a resolution in the early stages, which we felt was necessary in order to register an emphatic protest against South Africa's design on South-West Africa, we found that in the later stages of the debate, even in the Committee, it was not possible to secure a simple majority for our resolution, and therefore we were compelled by the force of circumstances to support a resolution which was sponsored by one of the Latin American countries. Our regret was not only that it was not possible to prevent South Africa from annexing virtually South-West Africa, but that in our efforts to secure justice for South-West Africa we could not in the later stages of the debate get the support of a great many members of the United Nations from Asia. Ten or eleven of them, after promising support in the early stages fell away rather mysteriously.

Now, I refer to this item of South-West Africa, not only because it was an item on the agenda in which we took special interest, but Africa today is one of the danger spots in the world. It is in Africa, largely due to the intolerant, racial spirit of the Malan Government, that the seeds of future conflicts are being sown, and sooner or later, unless the other powers look out, there may be a conflagration which might spread to other parts of the world. The issue does not concern only a few lakhs of Indians in South Africa, or a few lakhs of the coloured people in South-West Africa. The issue is, broadly speaking, the right of the coloured races, all over the world to the same rights and privileges which members of the United Nations enjoy. It is here it seems to me that India can, and in fact is playing her most important and her most significant role. We have gained our independence by the principles taught to us by Gandhiji and we have succeeded in our efforts without loss of goodwill or friendship of the imperial power which held sway over us for many decades. Therefore, we are in the best position today in the world to secure the same rights for the other subject races who number something like two hundred million. I do not think it is easy for a colonial power at any time to relinquish its hold over a territory, with all the economic and political privileges which go with Imperialism. But just now I think there is a further complication in that the colonial powers of Western Europe have a grave fear that if they were to grant increasing freedom to territories under their control, the peoples of those territories may not enjoy their freedom for long but may be influenced by another power with a different ideology. It is for India to persuade these colonial powers to give up those rights and it is also for the British who are still today the greatest colonial power in the world to influence the other colonial powers to take the same line as they have done in India, Burma and Ceylon.

There is one other point to which I would like to refer before I sit down. I think we can legitimately derive great satisfaction from the fact that in all the elections for which India stood at the last session of the General Assembly—the Economic and Social Council, the International Law Commission and the Committee on non-self-governing Territories—not only did we succeed but we polled practically the highest number of votes that any country could get. We lost the election to the International Court of Justice not for any lack of appreciation on the part of the other powers of the merits of our candidate but entirely for high political reasons unconnected with India. I think it was our misfortune that India was not free at the time of the inauguration of the United Nations in 1945. I think by our size, by our population and more than anything else by the contribution that we can make to the strengthening of the foundations of world peace I think India is entitled to regard herself as amongst the big five or six. Unfortunately our claims were not recognised at that time. Nevertheless in view of the rapidly increasing influence that India wields today in world politics I think we should be undeterred by any considerations of false modesty but we should seek membership of the Trusteeship Council and of the Security Council, because I know that many countries in the world, particularly the colonial areas throughout the world, look to India for leadership and for protection.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): It is a matter for gratification that India since her recent emergence into world affairs has, under the wise guidance of our Foreign Minister, so far steered clear of the shoals and rocks of international power politics. While over Europe the Dollar and the Rouble are contending for mastery and while over large parts of Asia the same conflict is being waged in other ways and other forms; and in spite of the debacle in China, the retreat of democracy in Indonesia, the stagnation in Indo-China, the division of Korea, the upheaval in Malaya, the civil strife in Burma and the ferment in Palestine, we are happy to know that India has successfully pursued a natural and independent foreign policy. My anxiety is to see that this policy is pursued not merely today in peace but even in a future war—God forbid that it should come! With this idea in view I think that the first thing we have to do—which is the sine qua non for pursuing such a policy, completely neutral and independent foreign policy in foreign affairs—is to cut ourselves off from the Commonwealth. With the greatest defence to the Foreign Minister's view in this matter I am constrained to say that so long as we continue to remain in the Commonwealth we will not be able to pull our full weight in world affairs or even in Asian affairs.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao (one of the Panel of Chairmen)]

The Prime Minister in his speech referred to the Commonwealth as the "so-called British Commonwealth" or the "former British Commonwealth". But it is disquieting to note that Dr. Evatt, the Minister for External Affairs in Australia recently said, I think it was last month, to the following effect in the Australian House of Representatives: "There has been no change in the title of the British Commonwealth and we were delighted to see that the phrase was used by the King in his speech in Christmas time. In matters of life and death the British Commonwealth sticks together."

I hope this is a misrepresentation by the Australian press of Dr. Evatt's speech. But if that represents the correct state of affairs, I think it is high time that we seriously reconsider the desirability of breaking off from the Commonwealth. Moreover, if we continue in this Commonwealth we are liable to the charge of being a party if not a party at least as conniving at the racialism and colonialism that are still the dominant features of the Commonwealth today. The battle between colonial servitude and political liberty or democracy is being waged today in Asia and I am sure it will be waged tomorrow in Africa and so long as the Commonwealth continues to be what it is today, I think we as the youngest democratic nation in Asia have no place and we should not desire to have any place in the Commonwealth.

There is another factor against our continuance in the Commonwealth and that is this. Britain being the oldest member of the Commonwealth is likely to be the primus inter pares or the first among equals, among members of the Commonwealth and Britain, as world affairs show us today, has linked herself indissolubly and inevitably with the United States of America and there is hardly any genuine democracy in America today. What with the negroes being oppressed, and denied civil liberties, and what with the attitude of America towards the undeveloped and under-developed countries of Asia as was revealed in the proceedings of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations as well as in the ECAFE conference at Lapstone, Australia, in November or December last, there is hardly to my mind any genuine democracy in America today; and if we link ourselves with the Commonwealth it follows automatically, as night follows day, that we will be within the Anglo-American orbit. My anxiety is to see that we continue a completely and entirely independent foreign policy and the first essential is to break ourselves from the Commonwealth and sever all links with it.

Our next task would be to build up in Asia a United Nations of Asia by means of multilateral or bilateral pacts, regional alliances, not contrary to the United Nations Charter and its framework but within the United Nations framework; build up regional alliances within Asia and also bilateral and multilateral pacts in Asia and Europe relating to trade, commerce and even defence. If small countries like Norway, Sweden, Denmark can afford to be free without the shelter of the Commonwealth, why not we a great and ancient nation, that has shaken off the foreign yoke; why cannot we stand on our own legs and enter into friendly alliances with all the countries in the world and build up this neutrality? In war it is not enough to say that we are neutral. Such neutrality should be borne of strength. Mahatma Gandhi used to say that he would prefer violence to the non-violence of a coward. The neutrality of the weak is no neutrality at all. It should be the neutrality of the strong and if we cannot build up our armaments, we certainly can build up the spirit of the people, the psychology of the people and that is what is wanted today, a militant neutrality of the people, just as Mahatma Gandhi in the days of 1942 built up this sort of psychology, the psychology of militant neutrality. This we can and should build up today. I am sorry to state that the psychology of the people is not being built on the right lines. I hope it will be done so that our neutrality policy will be successful in peace as well as in war.

Adverting to the embassies I would only like to say that firstly we have got to have a close watch and scrutiny over the expenditure not merely in connection with embassies but also with delegations and missions that go abroad. We must have full audit, both pre-audit and post-audit if that be necessary. We must take the earliest steps to see that all the embassies are completely staffed by Indians from top to bottom. Today there is the danger of espionage. Espionage is not merely done in war but also before war. We know how before the second world war some countries had their espionage systems in several other countries. This is a risk which we cannot afford to take. Therefore it becomes important that our embassies should be completely staffed by Indians from top to bottom. Our embassies must radiate culture and goodwill: they must be centres of Indian culture. Because, mutual understanding is today an important essential in world affairs. I would further remind the House that Mahatma Gandhi in his post-prayer speech just before his martyrdom stressed this fact as regards the expenditure on embassies—that a poor country cannot afford to spend too much on embassies. But today one is inclined to think that we care more for prestige abroad than for prosperity at home. To my mind prestige abroad and poverty at home go ill together. Prestige abroad without prosperity at home is an empty shell.

Before I close I would only say this that I believe that the second half of this century will show that Europe and America are not the whole world and that the future course of human civilization will be determined not on the Rhine, the Danube or the Volga but on the Yangtze, on the Nile and on the Ganga. To us in this century this opportunity has come now. There is a tide in the affairs of men which taken at the flood leads on to fortune. I hope we shall be able to take advantage of this tide and march on to victory of peace, freedom and democracy not merely in Asia but in the world and we shall be able to build a world not half-slave and half-free as it is today, not a world divided against itself but one free world of peace, democracy and socialism—may I say, where the atman has triumphed over the atom bomb, where men are citizens of one free world and mankind one family rooted in the living God. I will only join the Prime Minister in his prayer for world peace and the welfare of mankind and I hope that ere long the spirit of Europe will give place to the Empire of the Spirit. Om shanti, shanti, shanti.

Mr. Nazruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): The subject is very vast but the time is very short. I shall therefore deal with only one aspect of this subject, namely, the problem of maintaining peace. War is not inevitable, but much preparation is necessary and in fact one condition of peace is that every country should have sufficient military strength. If a country is weak from a military point of view other countries will find it easy to take possession of her. But even individual strength of a country from a military point of view is not enough; there must be collective security. Without collective security a country will not find herself safe. I submit therefore that India should be looking out for defensive alliance wherever and however possible. The weakness of international law in the past has been that international law is the vanishing point of jurisprudence. Whatever decision was taken by an international body, that body had not sufficient sanction behind it and it could not enforce its decisions, and therefore its decisions were not respected. As a consequence, might became a test of right. But we have in the U.N.O. the seeds of an effective world organisation. I suggest that India should try to strengthen the U.N.O. There should, I submit, be a federation of independent states. The army of the entire federation of federated countries should be one and unified. There should, I suggest, be a legislature of the entire federation and there should be a federal court of the federated nations. That should be the ideal towards which we should move. The idea of isolationism is absolutely meaningless and it will not lead to the maintenance of peace. Nobody knows how a world war starts. The seeds of war are to be found everywhere. All that is wanted is a little spark here or there. There is endless trouble in China, there is enough trouble in Burma, there is trouble in Malaya and other places and what is more, there is trouble inside India. The sooner therefore we begin to organise the different countries together on a common basis the better. The danger to peace may possibly come from the Russian side, and to avert any possible danger from that side it would be highly desirable for the democratic countries—those who want to come in—to combine together. It is from that kind of a combination of all democratic countries that a defensive organisation will be possible. It will not do to say that we should sit on the fence and look to our interests; when a war starts we will be involved in it. The better thing would be a preventive method, namely, to seek a defensive alliance. If all the countries or as many countries as possible combine together, unite their army together, have a common legislature, common court and common army to give effect to their decisions, then I think the combination would be too strong for any possible disturber of peace to attack. In this way we can build up the defensive strength of the world and ensure peace.

The other subjects are very vast and I do not wish to take the time of the House. I should like that the suggestions which I have made be considered by the Government.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): Sir, while my predecessors have taken you to overseas and to embassies I shall take you to places nearer home—to the land of Gaidalu Rani of the Naga Hills, the land of Chitragada the land of Rukmini? (An Honourable Member: "Kamrup.") no, not the land of Kamrup which is rather already a developed country. Sir, in the eastern frontier between the administered territory and the McMahon Line which came into existence as a result of the agreement with Tibet in 1914 there live a lot of people known as Monalsas inhabiting the land, then we find the Lamai, Nisu (Dafias), Abors and others. These people have been practically loyal to us though we have not done anything yet for their education, health or in the matter of communications. It is really difficult to run roads in that area, but should we not attempt? We find that in this area we have our own Brahmakunda and Parashramkunda. Up to that extent we have run a road, but beyond that we have not done it. I trust you will look after these people, that you will start schools and build roads. They have been given too much to the Christian American missionaries who have taught them to think that we are foreigners and that Europeans are better friends. Indians are not allowed there. This system is still prevailing that without a permit even now no man—Congressman or whoever he is—is allowed into that territory. This system should go; it is causing a great difficulty in that area. I last went there in 1941 and I had to take a pass. I was followed by a C.I.D.—that was of course during the war—and we could not go beyond Margherita. So, I should like to request the honourable the Prime Minister that this permit system should be abolished.

Then I shall take you to the other area which is called Lekapani through which runs the Stilwell Road which is under great disrepair. I think it was through this country that we were successful—or the British were successful—in stemming the tide of the foreign invasion. We should get this road in proper order if we want to be successful in future and avert dangers in good time. The Stilwell Road should be tackled properly; I think the length along the Indian and Burmese border should be repaired. Without this road we will have to face difficulties. Of course, beyond this we have the Kachins and Burmans—they are slightly friendly with us yet trouble may flare up in a day because we find that beyond 100 miles, south of Mandalay, there have been Communist troubles and it is only about 300 miles from Mandalay to Lekapani. We should be careful to move our army in time—even now, I think.

Then I shall take you to the Naga hills where the people are restive. There we find Gaidalu Rani who was inspiring the people to fight against the British so that they may join with Mahatma Gandhi in his attempt to do away with the British regime. She joined hands with us. Today she is rotting somewhere. I do not know where, but she is still there. I think our Prime Minister knows it very well—it was he who made her famous throughout the world. (An Honourable Member: "She is still in jail?") No, she is out, but we have not made any provision for her. We should make a provision for her so that she may be an example to us and an inspiration to the rest of the world. (An honourable Member: 'A national pension') I suggested that long ago when the British regime was there, but we failed then; we suggested that she should be brought even up to Mathura or Brindaban and kept here but we failed there.

I shall now take you to Manipur. It is an acceding State but we have troubles there. We have the Communists and the people are restive; I do not know if even a Minister is a Communist there. We should watch this area very carefully and we should repair the road via Jorhat to Danshri; that road is cut away by the Danshri River. If you do not keep that road to Jorhat via Dimapur, Palel and Tamu, I think in times of danger we shall have to rue for it. That road is a national highway but it has not been kept in proper repair; the patch between Dimapur and Golaghat is very bad. It should be repaired in the interests of the tribes and for the protection of our frontiers. It is also necessary that the Commander-in-Chief should visit these places—I think he has an idea to visit them. There—there is the Communist menace, south of Aijal and Langleh. The Communists have come up to Akyab, they can come up to Langleh, then to Manipur and then to Silchar. The roads through these areas should be developed. If the roads from Langleh via Aijal and then to Silchar and then from Manipur to Silchar via Bishenpur are not improved we shall have some trouble in future. The Communists have got there. Possibly during the War you must have heard of Bathedung and Rathedung and through these areas the Communists are infiltrating. Therefore, it is necessary that that road should be properly looked after.

I shall now come to the Budget. I find that a crore and four lakhs have been allotted for 'Tribal areas', but out of that I find Rs. 88 lakhs have been provided for the Assam Rifles. I think no attention has been paid to the improvement of the tribal areas. Out of a crore and four lakhs if 88 lakhs are taken out very little is left for the improvement of these areas. This sum should be taken under Defence. I do not know if I am wrong but I do not find any item under the head 'Education'; it is a blank item. It may be that you have a five year plan and possibly you have included education there. But if it is not included, I shall request the honourable the Prime Minister to see that the proper amount is included for the education of the Nagas, for the education of Lushais and for the education of the other tribal people. Hospitals should also be run in these places and we should not let them remain alone in the hands of the Christian missionaries who have been, practically speaking, disloyal to us and who have been teaching that we are bad people, that we are not friendly to them that we are a people who look upon them as harijans. This feeling should be eliminated, and I think the British and American missionaries should, as far as possible, be brought out of these areas.

I also find that these areas are very rich in forests. There is a forest area of about 1800 square miles, much better than the Nicobar Islands. We have such an excellent place where timber can be extracted and tea chests made out of it. At present we have got two mills. We require about 50 to 100 lakhs of tea chests and possibly the entire quantity can be had from this area provided we invest money. I have been in consultation with people here in Delhi and they say that about Rs. 15 lakhs in one mill and about Rs. 20 lakhs in another will be quite sufficient to produce all the tea chests that we require for the country. Also, these chests will give the Government of India a duty of possibly about Rs. 50 lakhs or more, even if they charge eight annas a chest, and the entire cost can be met out of the tea chests if the mills are undertaken either by the Government or through private agencies.

As regards health, we do not run hospitals in those areas as the Christian missionaries have done. They have got a hospital in the Naga hills, in Sadiya. We should proceed in the same way, in the missionary spirit; we should run hospitals with nurses so that the full weight of our civilising influence and the influence of the Indian Union is felt. Then and then only will we earn the gratitude of the people of Assam, the people of Naga hills and the people of other hills.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): I do not want to take much of the time of the House, coming as I do at the 4 P. M. fag end of the debate, but I want to offer a few remarks. Foreign policy is not an isolated activity of a Government. It has got an organic and indissoluble connection with finance, business and the economic situation in the country. Therefore, if we are to judge whether our foreign policy is sound, whether it is intended to consolidate the position of the country in the world politics, we have also to look to the country from within. Unless we are internally strong with regard to our defence, our counsel or our word in international gatherings will not carry much weight, and in order to build a sound defence in a new democracy that has been just born, you require all the assistance of a willing Finance Minister who should be able to allot as much money as is demanded by the Defence Department.

Our country has already a name and a fame that has established itself even before we won our independence. When we were slaves under the British, our country had no foreign policy. It was controlled by our masters and a few Yes-men were always taken to these international gatherings of limited status and were asked to go into the meetings and get out of the meetings at the sweet will of the ring-master who invariably used to be a British politician. But even though we had no status in international circles, the country's moral stature has gone so high that our great savants like the late Rabindranath Tagore, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu and Mahatma Gandhi, have placed this country on a pedestal which is far above the rest.

Within the short time we have had freedom, the indefatigable energy of our Prime Minister has spread the position of our country into the counsels of the world. As one who has witnessed our Prime Minister addressing the United Nations Organisation recently on November 1st, last, I could see how he was far above the tallest of those that were gathered there from the international Councils. I had the good fortune of going in the Parliamentary Delegation from here where we had contact with delegations of all the Commonwealth countries. They were all politicians, members of Parliament, who were vying with one another, both ladies and gentlemen, to see our Prime Minister and shake hands with him, because from their respective High Commissioners and their big officers and Prime Ministers they had heard that our Prime Minister was easily the outstanding personality at the Prime Ministers' Conference. Therefore, though I am not here to praise him to his face, this is the only opportunity when I can tell you, my comrades in this House, of the impression which he created in the world abroad. But to carry out his ideals, he requires a strong country behind him, a prosperous country behind him and an invulnerable defence behind him. It is not enough if we go on developing in a lopsided way.

I do not agree with the very unjustified and cynical remark that fell from an ex-President of the Congress that we are more prosperous abroad than inside the country. If you go about and see what prestige this country has built up and that in a short time, you will understand what it is. All the countries that are now under the heel of the Western Imperialism are looking to India for their emancipation. The recent conference in India on Indonesia which was attended by 19 nations proves that a white nation, with a white policy, like Australia was compelled to come down here and take counsels round the table.

in New Delhi. That means the Eastern Hemisphere and South East Asia has got its own problems and in their solution India is going to play a great role in the near future. The position in Burma, the position in Ceylon and the position in Eastern and Western Pakistan are not very happy. It taxes all the intelligence, all the diplomatic skill and also the physical strength of this country if we are to eliminate the trouble spots on the frontiers of India. With all the goodwill that is at our command, we are not able to bring round Ceylon to treat our nationals there properly. The South African problem has become an eye sore to all of us and we need not wonder if it becomes a world problem which will easily lead to a fresh war.

To develop all these things, we require not only the foresight and capacity of our Foreign Minister. He has to be assisted by a well-trained army of workers. We had no diplomatic corps worth the name before the British left us. They had naturally kept all the strings in their own hands under the Foreign Department which was entirely manned and controlled by Europeans. However high placed an Indian official may be, even if he belongs to the omniscient I.C.S., it is a new department for them and when I see the Embassies I find that nearly half of them are manned by officials. Out of the 19 Legations and Embassies, I find nine officials and eight non-officials. I want that the non-officials should be encouraged and there should be further recruitment from the non-officials of this country to fill these places. With all respect, I want to bring to the notice of the Prime Minister that officials have been brought up in a certain groove, in a certain atmosphere, which has not been changed by the democratic influences in the country. You send a high official to America or elsewhere. He goes about his business in the wonted way and comes out without any human contact with those people that are working there. Therefore, I suggest that officials are good Secretaries to carry out the policies of politicians and statesmen. I want that the Foreign Department and our Prime Minister should take note and try to select a class of public workers, men from public life, who would go and fill these places with credit and honour to the country.

I want the Foreign Department to observe some continuity with regard to these Conferences. In this Conference, the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, which was held in Ootacamund, you sent Mr. Sitarama Reddy, one of the Ministers in Madras, as the alternate leader and you sent our Deputy Speaker, Shri Ayyangar. But when this Conference was held in Australia, the Department—I think it was the Commerce Department that was concerned, but I hope the Commerce and External Affairs Departments will work in coordination—they had not even the courtesy to ascertain whether these gentlemen who had given their time and attention to this Conference would be willing to go as delegates to this Conference. They deputed one senior official. I have no quarrel with senior officials. I have got very great respect for them and for their ability and integrity. But that is not the point here. You cannot always depend on a particular class of public servants to represent this country in all international conferences. Where is the harm if these two gentlemen who are capable and gave their time to this Conference were at least consulted and it was ascertained if they would be able to give their services. They were actually ignored and were left behind. So also with regard to delegations. The Commonwealth delegation which was sent from here consisted of all legislators. We have gathered good experience. We have established very good contacts with friends from the rest of the world and it is time that we think of public men in this connection.

Shri Braieswar Prasad (Bihar: General): Sir, I suggest that the Government of India should approach the Governments of Russia and America to guarantee our neutrality in the event of a world war. I feel that such a course of action will be in perfect consonance with the main trend of our foreign policy. We do not want to be the palatquin bearers of the leaders of Russia or America. Our own economy is not at present fully developed. We want time for that. We do not want that our growing economy should be shattered as a result of participation in war. Our experience has been that countries who have participated in war have found themselves, after a period of time, to have been losers in a political sense. After the first world war, it appeared that England won it, but where is England now? As a result of participation in two world wars England has lost the position of power she enjoyed once in the Councils of the World. It is too early to say whether America has won this war in the political sense of the term. Military victory does not necessarily connote political victory. I feel that the time may not be far off when it will be fully realised that neither America nor Russia have won this war. As my friend Mr. Kamath pointed out, the future lies with the people of Asia, Egypt, China and India. The lesson of history has been that countries who did not participate in wars did not suffer in any sense of the term. Switzerland kept out of the two wars and remained neutral. She has not suffered in consequence. I want to know whether Turkey and Ireland have in any way suffered as a result of non-participation in the second world war? I want to know whether Japan which did not take any part in the first world war suffered (Inter-ruption). My main contention is that participation in wars does not promote national greatness and non-participation does not mean that the country concerned loses its status and place.

A point was made yesterday that we should enter into a joint defence pact with this country or that. I am opposed to that, because the question of defence is intimately connected with the question of foreign policy. Unless the countries with whom we are advised to enter into defence pacts have the same aspirations and the same foreign policy as ourselves, there is no meaning in seeking an alliance with them. Unless the Governments of Pakistan and Nepal and South-east Asia pursue the same foreign policy that we are pursuing, there cannot be anything beneficial in a joint defence pact. We are pledged to peace and unless those countries are also pledged to peace, there can be no pact with them. I personally feel that the whole picture of South East Asia will undergo a radical change if we ask the Governments of England and America and Russia to guarantee our neutrality. We will then know who is our friend and who is our enemy. Let Russia deny that position which we want. Let America deny that status which we want to achieve. What will be our next step if that recognition is not given to us, it will be for us to decide. I know what we should do next. I feel that a strong South East Asian Federation can only be built on the foundations of peace. A strong and stern refusal to participate in a coming war will be the only basis on which the South East Asian Federation can be established.

Shri Raj Bahadur (United State of Matsya): The foreign policy of a country is as vitally important for its security and freedom as its military capacity and preparedness for the defence of its frontiers. That our foreign policy has been a success none can doubt. The very fact that the establishment of our State has been achieved and that the ship of our state has weathered the severest storms and tempests speaks volumes for the soundness and wisdom of that policy.

It may be realised that for the success of any foreign policy a well-organised, and efficient publicity department is essential. It was but meet and proper that in June last the Information Branch of our Foreign propaganda was entrusted to the Foreign Ministry itself. From a practical point of view, it may be said without any fear of contradiction, that during the course of the centuries during which we have been slaves under the domination of foreign countries, a mountain of prejudice and superstition has grown up against our nation. I am saying this from my personal experience. During last summer I had the opportunity of a short visit to England and happened to be in a hotel where a schoolmaster of a secondary school resided. He invited me to go and speak about India to his boys in the school. The boys were between the ages of 16 and 18. I went there and had a talk for about 1-1/2 hours. At the end the students put me certain questions which stunned and shocked me. The first question was: Do you worship snakes and cows? Is it a fact that many Hindus have got as many as 1,000 wives each? Is it a fact that every Indian is found chewing twigs in the morning? Is it a fact that some Indians are not allowed to travel in trains or go to the wells for drawing water? These strange questions culminated in the query whether there were cannibals in India. One can imagine my feelings when I was thus faced by such a question. As far as untouchability was concerned, I could not easily controvert that, but even so I told them that the evil of untouchability was similar to the evil of Race prejudice "colour bar"; and while we have already got over the evil of untouchability to a great extent we are confident that we would completely overcome it long before the day the so-called white races banish the evil of "colour-bar". As regards the question of using twigs was concerned I answered their question by saying that the twigs freshly cut from trees of known medicinal value every day were definitely better for the teeth than using the same brush for weeks and months. I was also asked whether cattle were left astray in the streets and I told that while it may probably be true in remote villages it was certainly not true for bigger towns and cities. I was confronted with a book on geography containing the picture of a cobbler sitting on the foot-path with cattle standing around him. This is the type of information that is being given to students in England. Such pictures damage the reputation of India. In one of the News-Picture Houses I happened to visit, I saw a picture about the supposed uprising of the people of Jaipur in June last, alleged to be clamouring for independence. There was another picture depicting Mahatma Gandhi murder trial. Wherein the principal accused was prominently featured and the running commentary described him as "smiling when he faced the camera". The third picture portrayed Sydney Cotton as a hero. His so-called mercy mission of flying medicines from Karachi to Hyderabad was depicted prominently. Yet another picture shown there related to the so-called benevolent rule of the Nizam. The screen was thus full of hostile propaganda. The press also was fully anti-Indian and hostile. It is therefore very essential that the mountain of prejudice that has accumulated in foreign countries against us should be removed. We have got to undo the wrong. Mahatma Gandhi in one of his moments of intense feeling once called the British rule "satanic". That rule, apart from the social, cultural, moral and political ruination of our country created a mountain of prejudice against us in Western countries. So, one of the most important things that the External Affairs Department has got to do is to annihilate that mountain of prejudice. We are proud of our civilisation and culture. But we have got to impress upon the Western people the excellence of our civilisation and culture and prove to them that it is not the whole truth to say that "we have a lot to learn from Europe and America". The whole truth would be if we add that they have also got to learn a lot from us. In conclusion may I submit that the masses all the world over are definitely averse to any sort of war. They are not at all interested in any scramble for raw materials or markets. They are not interested in power politics or in the loaves and fishes of jobs in the United Nation's offices. They are interested only in their bread and in the peace and security of their hearths and homes. As such, if India has got to lead, as our honourable Prime Minister has justly remarked, we have got to carry the Master's message to the world for which the masses are pinning. We have got to play a vital role in the avoidance of a Third World war. If India's message has to be taken to the outside world, we have got to see that our Publicity Organization is brought upto the required standard. We see that there is danger lurking on all sides of our frontiers. We see what is happening in China, we see Burma is seething with a bloody struggle. We also see that things are not quite alright on our northern and western sides also and in such a critical time it is very essential that we are interpreted correctly and rightly to the entire world.

Shri O. V. Alagesan (Madras: General): While listening to the speech of the honourable the Prime Minister this morning my mind went back 17 years to a meeting in the Madras Beach which was addressed by Panditji when he was the President of the Indian National Congress. That meeting was presided over by our late lamented leader Satyamurti who after the speech of Panditji characterised it as "the feast of reason and flow of soul." I was reminded of more words when I was hearing the speech on foreign policy by our Prime Minister this morning. It is said that this Government is fortunate in that it is able to command not only the political support of the people of the country but also the sentimental affection and loyalty of the people. That is true; but let us consider the other side also. Can anyone assess the benefits that have flowed to this country from the possession of such a rare personality as our Prime Minister at the helm of affairs. Is not the country fortunate in having his leadership? He has put India very prominently in the international map. It cannot be denied that in spite of the fact that we may be the biggest political unit in point of potential strength and population, our international stature is small compared with that of several other countries today but the international stature of our leader is nothing less than that of any other personality in the world. It is no exaggeration to say that he even overshadows the other leading personalities of much bigger countries than ours. I welcome the statement that he made this morning on the French possessions in India. He said that ultimately they cannot but end in integration with India. But we should remember that the people of these foreign possessions in India have waited long. These possessions in the present context are an anomaly and an anachronism. They cannot continue—these little bits—when the rest of India has become free, to be under the control and administration of foreign powers. It is unnatural. It is high time that we say 'Quit India' to all these powers that hold these bits of India in their possession today. Taking the French possessions, we know what has happened there. There was a farce of an election conducted as a result of a compromise arrived at between our Government and the French Government. It was not possible for our Government to send its official observers to that election. Non-official observers were present on behalf of the Indian National Congress and they have since told the country what election it was that took place. People, who know the state of affairs in French India, will say that there can be no such thing as a free democratic election there as is understood in the rest of India. It is always the party that is backed by the Government that wins there. This is clear from the fact that not one seat was captured by the pro-merger group there, that is, by the French India National Congress. All the seats went to the party which was supported by the money and goondaism of the French Administration in Pondicherry. Now we are told as a result of the very same agreement that a referendum will be taken when these newly elected representatives so decide. The principle of referendum cannot be acceded to by our Government. We cannot agree to the principle that portions which are part and parcel of India should go to the polls and decide to join India and vote for re-union with India. The people themselves in these possessions consider that to be a challenge to their self-respect and nationalism and patriotism. It should be taken for granted that these people want re-union with India and negotiations should be set a foot and results achieved quickly. Because, I may remind the House here that the peoples' agitation in these possessions was stopped at the bidding of Mahatma Gandhi who advised them that since there is a National Government in power today, since Panditji is taking care even of Indonesians, he will certainly take care of the French Possessions in India and what he will see to it that they are merged with the rest of India. On that advice the people stayed their hands and are from that day following the advice of the Indian National Congress. It is but fair to them that we should see that they are re-united with India at the earliest possible moment. More than one speaker referred to the situation arising out of the Land Nationalisation Act in Burma. There are about 30 lakhs of acres—worth 90 crores that belong to Indians and it is not known whether any compensation will be paid to these nationals of our country who hold these properties there. It was observed earlier that nobody can object to the principle of nationalisation. That is true. But, it should be treated as the national property of India and negotiations should be started with Burma Government and a satisfactory solution found for this. Also there is another question as to how Burma Government treats the properties of nationals belonging to other countries. If there is any discrimination in their favour, then we have a right to demand that the property of our nationals also should be dealt with in the same manner. At least our nationals in Burma may be called somewhat well-to-do people and they may take care of themselves but when I turn to Ceylon, the position of our people there—more than seven lakhs mostly labourers—is pitiable. The question of Indians Overseas is mostly a question of Tamils Overseas and as one hailing from that part of the country, I am naturally very much interested in their well-being. I do not mean to say that the Government as such is not taking sufficient interest. In fact, it has. The long correspondence that took place between our Prime Minister and the Prime Minister of Ceylon makes a sad reading. Our Prime Minister has approached the problem with a vision and insight which was not reciprocated by the other side. He has written: "I have approached this problem, not as one between two disputing parties in which each has to make concessions to the other but as one requiring a joint effort by two Governments to do justice and to bring contentment to an important section of the population of Ceylon, which though Indian in origin, has made substantial contribution to the economic development of Ceylon." This was the approach of our Prime Minister but it was not reciprocated. Since this correspondence took place, the Indian Residents (Citizenship) Act has been passed by the Ceylon Government. Though 32 members of the Ceylon Assembly opposed it, it was passed by the support of 52 members of that Assembly. Under this Act, the disabilities imposed on Indians in the way of their registering themselves as citizens of that country are so great that it is well-nigh impossible for them to do so. It will not be possible for them to register themselves as citizens of Ceylon because they will have to prove that they had lived there from the beginning of 1939, in the case of married persons and 1936 in the case of others. Even after this registration, there are further discriminations made against citizens by registration and citizens by descent. With all these disabilities, many of our people will not be able to take part in any of the economic activities of that country. It is a serious situation and this also can be settled only by high-level negotiations and friendly approach. I hope the Government will take sufficient notice of this and do the right thing.

I have only one thing to add, and I have done. The honourable Prime Minister in another place, while referring a recent appointment of our representative in a foreign country explained the back-ground of that appointment. I wish that the same background is kept in mind when making appointments to those countries whose Indian population is largely the Tamil.

Dr. B. V. Keskar (Deputy Minister for External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations): I have listened with great attention to the speeches of my honourable friends and to the various expositions of what they think our foreign policy should be, of what is their conception of the lines on which we should shape our foreign policy, and I have also listened with very great attention to the various suggestions and points that they have placed before the House.

In regard to certain points raised by them, for example the one raised by Shri Shiva Rao, let me at the very outset say that we would be very glad to place such of the reports of our international delegations on the table of the House as are not confidential, and care will also be taken in future to have reports placed on the table of the House and specially prepared for the House. We would also welcome more frequent debates on our foreign policy. It will be of great help to the Government to know the mind of the House. And on the occasion of an important international event, we would very much like to have debates. I might also add that the meetings of the Standing Committee for the Ministry of External Affairs which are also in the nature of a restricted debate on such topics would be more and more frequent. They are, even now held frequently.

With regard to the principle on which our foreign policy has been based, my friend Prof. Ranga said that the honourable Prime Minister in his speech did not appear to be very conscious that there is a cold war going on at present between the United States of America and Russia. I think I listened to the Prime Minister's speech very carefully and it was nowhere said that we are not conscious of this cold war. I would rather call it a mental and moral tug-of-war that is going on at present. In fact the present power blocks to which Prof. Ranga referred are really based on this tug-of-war. So, this cold war is felt by all of us everywhere. It is not only in the countries to which my honourable friend referred that you feel it. For example, he referred to Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia where you feel it every instant. I would say that we feel it everywhere in the world, in some countries more intensely and in others less intensely. That is the reason why in his statement on foreign policy the Prime Minister referred to our position with regard to these two big blocks. I know he referred also to the question whether we should be neutral and some other honourable member also referred to the question of our neutrality. I would like to say that there should not be any misunderstanding. We do not join this block or that; but it does not mean that we will be passive onlookers of the great drama going on in the world. We will also participate in it. I know honourable members wanted that we should participate. But the question is how we should participate in this great drama that is going on. The Prime Minister very clearly indicated the lines on which we are going to proceed. Ours is a positive policy of encouraging peace and all forces of peace in the world. I think that is the best and the only policy, not only for this country, but also for the rest of the world. How that policy should be developed and on what lines, these are questions of detail into which we can go later on. I do not think at this moment, this is the right time to go into them. I may assure the Members of this House that at no time we would follow the policy of pure neutrality. Ours would be what I would call a positive and constructive approach to world peace.

Another honourable member, Shri Brajeshwar Prasad referred to the question of maintaining world peace and suggested that we must ask the United States of America and Russia and also England to guarantee the neutrality of India. He also referred to the example of Switzerland. May I say, in reply to this suggestion that the country which requires such a guarantee of peace from other powers is a frail one, and it is a manifest admission of weakness and helplessness on our part. If we claim that we are going to play a positive and strong role in maintaining and achieving international peace, I think it is a very weak and wrong attitude on our part to take. Do you think that paper guarantees given by U.S.A. or Russia or any other country counts in the ultimate shape of things? At the proper time, such a guarantee may possibly be regarded as a scrap of paper, if it suits any particular power to choose to violate our neutrality. Neutrality, or what I would call our particular position always depends on the situation of things, on our own strength, on our attitude and our own relations with other powers in the world. I do not think that a guarantee of neutrality would guarantee peace for India or peace for the world.

Shri Brajeshwar Prasad: If a pact of neutrality can have no meaning, has any pact any meaning?

Dr. B. V. Keskar: Questions have been raised by my honourable friends, Seth Govind Das and Prof. Ranga with regard to the position of Indians overseas. Naturally every year there have been discussions in this House and outside. We have been very anxious and very occupied about them and we have always followed the conditions of Indians overseas. But as the Prime Minister said in his speech, their position to-day is different. After August 1947 our attitude with regard to the question of Indians overseas had to undergo a considerable change. We had to look at it from a new angle. All those of our countrymen who are settled in large numbers in our neighbouring countries, and certain countries far away, like British West Indies, in the new shape of things have to choose whether they would like to be Indian nationals or they would like to be citizens of the country where they are living. Our policy has been very clear. We have encouraged Indians who have settled down in various countries to take up the nationality of, and to merge themselves with, the people of those countries and their interests, and not to remain as an alien bloc in those countries, because that always creates conflicts, creates suspicion in the minds of the people and leads to trouble and bitterness. Ultimately, as they claim to be our nationals we have to go to their help and sometimes it is very difficult to do so.

Prof. Ranga rightly referred to the question of Indians in certain neighbouring countries who have got interests which are in conflict with the interests of the people there: those who have banking interests and capital interests, and which the people of those areas resent. Naturally, in any question of the Government of that country trying to curb or limit their powers the question would always crop up whether we should support our nationals there or not.

So, on the whole, our policy has been that Indians in different countries should try to merge their interests with the people of the country there. Certainly that does not mean that we are indifferent to their fate. We are always very carefully following the situation of Indians in different areas and we do our best to help them.

I would like to modify the statement made by my honourable friend, Prof. Ranga in one instance. It would not be right or absolutely correct to say that Indians have in quite a large number of countries interest which can be called banking or capital interests. If you will look at the figures, you will see that the vast number of Indians abroad are labourers and of very poor class of people and unfortunately they have been exploited up till now. It is therefore only right that as they are ignorant people, who are unable to look after their own interests, who are not educated, and who are our country-men, that we should look to their interests and guide them.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): But he had Burma in mind.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: They did not come into conflict with the locals there!

Dr. B. V. Keskar: I agree. With regard to Indians overseas, the question of Burma came up. Mr. Tajamul Husain and Shri Alagesan referred to the situation in Burma. I think Shri Alagesan had misunderstood the situation there. The question of paying compensation to Indians, as has been stated many times on the floor of the House, is one which has been occupying the attention of the Government all along. He quite rightly said that the Burma Government has every right if it decides to nationalise land in Burma: the question is what is the form and amount of compensation to be paid to Indians in Burma who held land. That question had been taken up with the Government of Burma. All along we carried on negotiations through our Ambassador there and through direct correspondence on several occasions. Honourable Members will also remember that a Delegation was to go to Burma composed of the Congress President and two of the Ministers from Madras and other interested persons, who were to negotiate with the Government of Burma with regard to this important matter. Unfortunately, the situation in Burma has worsened and it is not possible for the moment to carry out these negotiations. As a result of this, the implementation of the Land Nationalization Act is not taking place because the Burma Government is fighting for its own life, but I might assure him that the question of compensation, and other matters connected with the well-being of Indians in Burma will be always considered by the Government, and when the proper time comes negotiations will be resumed.

My honourable friend, Mr. Chaliha, touched on the question of the tribal areas. He has made the statement that we have done nothing, or practically nothing, to help the people of the tribal areas in developing themselves, in educating them and in creating better communications and means of modern amenities in those areas. As honourable members know, this vast area, which is on the borders of India, and which is our frontier with two or three countries, is a very vital one, and it is for that reason that it is in the External Affairs Department and not under the Home Ministry as such, or under the Provincial Government. I would like Mr. Chaliha to know that we have a five-year plan for the development of this area, and I think he has been wrongly informed that no scheme has been put in motion or is being implemented with regard to education and the cultural contacts with the people of these areas. If my honourable friend will look into the details of this year's budget, he will find that a sum of Rs. 600,000 is set apart for the educational and economic development of this area. There is a scheme for developing all roads, for the development of medical facilities, for agricultural improvement and for the construction of hospitals in this area. In fact, the construction of two or three hospitals is being taken up immediately. They have already constructed a base hospital and about twelve dispensaries in this tribal area. The question of education is also engaging the attention of the Government and our immediate scheme is to have a training school for training teachers from the local area who will take up the education of their own people.

Some complaints were made by my honourable friend that Congressmen are not allowed to go into these areas and this is something which the present Government cannot tolerate. But the question is not so simple as it looks. The fact is that the people of these areas themselves privately approach the Government and sometimes publicly that outsiders should not be allowed to go there because they feel that they may be exploited.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): That is the old story. That was in the British days. They do not say so now.

Dr. B. V. Keskar: We have had some consultation with the tribal people, very recently and they take the same stand. It does not mean that no one is allowed to go there. Anybody interested in working in the tribal areas or seeing things for himself, members of the Central Assembly or members of the Assam Assembly, are given permission immediately. There is no question of their not getting permission. But my honourable friend would take into consideration the question that this is a delicate matter, and we do not want to raise up suspicion and hostility in the minds of the tribal people that we are trying to put up schemes or do things which are going to bring about their fall or upset the state of things which existed with them till now. Our five year plan is really a scheme for bringing them into contact with modern amenities and modern methods of administration and we propose to do it gradually. Being ignorant and being isolated and not being in contact with other more civilised life they should be brought gradually and slowly on a par with the administration that exists in Assam and other neighbouring areas. We are all agreed on that. I think in the opinion of the Government it should be done gradually and slowly.....

Shri H. V. Kamath: What about the issue of India's relations with the so-called Commonwealth and also the issue of building up a psychology of militant neutrality in India to which I referred?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Neutrality has already been answered.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I mean active neutrality and not passive neutrality.

Dr. B. V. Keskar: I think the honourable the Prime Minister referred to it this morning. Our approach is positive and how it is going to be achieved something for all of us to ponder over.

I come now to some of the points raised which I would like to deal with...

Shri H. V. Kamath: About the Commonwealth is that the last word? Can the Deputy Minister throw any light on this?

Dr. B. V. Keskar: There is nothing like the last word. I will deal with it.

My friend Mr. Harihar Nath Shastri referred to the question of public being ineffective, and inefficient or rather there being incompetency in the matter of knowledge of languages in our representatives abroad and hence some of our confidential work being entrusted to foreigners. There is also the question which has run through not only most of the speeches here but it has always been hinted on the floor of the House many times and outside, viz., too much expenditure and the necessity for economy in our establishments abroad. I have only one or two observations with regard to this.

Looking at this problem from the point of view of principle, as the Prime Minister said this morning, first of all we have to decide whether India as an independent country has to establish relations with foreign countries or not. I think this is something which we need not discuss, though one or two friends did say that there is no need for us to have so many foreign relations. I think if we have to live as an independent country we have to have foreign relations, otherwise we cannot lead an independent life. If you look at the comparative figures of expenditure incurred by different countries on their foreign missions abroad you will see that ours is proportionately the lowest and most economical foreign office in the world. I am not referring to England whose expenditure is many times more than ours or the U.S.A. whose expenditure is bigger still, but the expenditure on foreign establishments of even smaller countries is much bigger.....

Shri H. V. Kamath: How it is in relation to the per capita income?

Dr. B. V. Keskar: If you want our country of 300 million people to be represented abroad and if the honourable member wants as he himself said in his speech that India should play a certain role in the international world, I do not think it can be done without an adequate and first class foreign establishment. Especially I would like honourable members to bear in mind that ours is a newly independent country. I would go further than the Prime Minister and say that for a country which has newly won its independence, which has not got a foreign establishment, which wants to develop an adequate and first class foreign establishment, it ought to spend much more, because initial expenditure in such things is always bigger. For example you all know that most of the foreign countries have got their missions for decades and centuries. They have their own big buildings, offices: they have a tradition behind them. We have to create all that and that involves more expenditure than ordinarily would be required. If you look at the details of our expenditure you will see that in order to economise as much as possible taking into consideration the financial situation of our country, the Government have thought fit to proceed cautiously with regard to the establishment of our foreign missions abroad, even though we know that we should develop our contacts with the world as soon as possible.

A reference was made to external publicity. How are you going to have external publicity and have effective publicity too if you do not want to spend money on it? There are two different and contradictory points of view expressed by my honourable friends. Some friends want that we should spend less and at the same time we should be effectively represented abroad and should also have effective propaganda in the outside world. I think that is not possible. We have to spend and spend adequately. Naturally we take into consideration the financial situation of our country and try to economise our expenditure as much as possible.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Have it also audited properly.

Dr. B. V. Keskar: There are special auditors appointed to audit the accounts of our missions abroad and adequate care will be taken to see that every pie is spent properly.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What is the cost of the British Embassy in India?

Dr. B. V. Keskar: I am sorry I cannot give the figures but I can tell my honourable friend that the expenditure of the British Foreign Office as a whole is several times bigger than ours.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Ours is a poor country.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, I would like to remove the wrong impression created in the mind of the Honourable Deputy Minister. The statement that the tribal people do not like Indians from the plains to go to them and that they welcome Europeans and American should not be allowed to go uncontradicted. In reply to a question put by me it was said that in a conference held in 1946 such a sentiment was expressed by the tribal people but during those days in all the political areas the political officers were Europeans and no Indian was allowed to work in those areas. Therefore they expressed an opinion which was tutored.

Dr. B. V. Keskar: I never said that. I think my honourable friend has not heard what I said. I did not say that they did not want Indians to go there. They do not want any outsiders to go there, whether Europeans, Americans or Indians.

Sir, I have dealt with most of the points raised by my honourable friends in the debate. I would only like to express my appreciation of the very kind and appreciative tone of my honourable friends who have been kind enough to praise the work done by this Department during the year.

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru: I am reluctant to take up the time of the House again but there are one or two matters on which perhaps I might be able to enlighten honourable members, more especially my colleague, Shri Kamath who has been ranging from militant neutrality to the audit of every pie. May I inform him that if he wants militant neutrality I am going to be neither militant nor neutral. Therefore I disregard his suggestion and I am not going to follow the policy that he is advocating as it is a completely wrong policy. That is point No. 1. I shall explain why. I do not understand this business of neutrality. Neutrality comes in in times of war. It has to be considered then. But it does not come in in times of peace. It has no meaning whatever. It makes no meaning whatever by saying that 'I shall be a permanent neutral whatever happens'. Nobody can say that as nobody knows what will happen. To say that shows utter lack of appreciation of reality.

Shri H. V. Kamath: May I ask what is the meaning of the neutral foreign policy that we are supposed to be pursuing?

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru: My friend Shri Kamath might have used that word; I have never used that word. I consider that expression completely wrong as a description of our policy. Our policy is a positive constructive policy as my colleague Dr. Keskar said. What I venture to point out is this. Normally speaking the foreign policy of every country is based on its own interests naturally and on certain interests, shall we say, of world peace or better relations with other countries. But the first thing that normally prevails is inevitably every country thinks of its own interests. When its own interests coincide with wider interests it becomes very anxious about those wider interests also. In any intelligent view of world affairs today one can say that every country's interests lie in the maintenance and promotion of peace and the avoidance of war. That is the main thing. What happens in peace time is another matter. Normally in a country's foreign policy every item is considered on its merits—every matter that arises. When a country aligns itself with another country in times of war then they support each other apart from the merits of the case. So today in the United Nations questions are often considered not on the merits but with a view to attaining a position, by manoeuvring or otherwise, so as to be strong enough to meet a possible war in future. That is the approach often enough on questions today. India's approach has been different: that is to say, while it naturally has to take all facts into consideration, in the main it considers the question on the merits. I gave one or two instances. I shall give another instance—the instance of atomic energy. When this matter came up before the United Nations at the Paris session a few months back there was a great deal of difference of opinion between the two rival approaches. As it happened the Committee that was appointed had for its Chairman a distinguished Indian, and he brought quite a different approach to it, that is, a legalistic and judicious approach of trying to find out on the merits what should be done and not merely trying to counter this or that position. The approach was such a different approach that it immediately made its mark and everybody in the U. N. felt that here is somebody considering the question judiciously on merits and not merely as a game of chess to counter the other. We therefore propose to consider every question on the merits and more especially in its relation to the problem of world peace: that is we want to minimise the conflicting elements and as far as possible to encourage those forces that tend to maintain peace. I do not wish to exaggerate our capacity to do so. May be we cannot do so; things have gone too far. May be that our attempts appear rather ridiculous to some people. But the point is first the negative point that we do not wish to encourage hostility in the world, and secondly the positive point that we wish in so far as we can to encourage the positive policy of peace—maintaining peace within the countries and peaceful relations and not rushing into a fray against this country or that country in the excitement of the moment or otherwise which does not do any good and which merely adds to the bitterness of the situation. Therefore our policy is not a policy of sitting on the hedge; it is not also a middle on the road policy as some people imagine. It is a positive policy of always seeking to do something which may somewhat lessen the tensions of the moment and thereby possibly prevent any great catastrophe from happening: because that catastrophe will injure us tremendously as it will injure every other country in the world. As I said it will be presumptuous on my part to say that we can affect the pace of world events. I do not say so, that we can do it or that we are likely to affect it very much. Nevertheless I think that we might affect it to some extent; to a small extent we do affect it. That extent might grow. It is worth trying and we are going to try.

This morning I ventured to say that India by virtue of her past genius if you like, culture if you like, has got perhaps a special role to play. I generally do not encourage the idea, which is a peculiar product of intensive nationalism, of each person thinking his country as a chosen country of God—normally the people of each country think that they are the chosen people; whether it is in America or Europe or Asia we all tend to think that we are the chosen race—I do not wish to encourage that idea. I am proud enough of my people, my country, my heritage, but it is a narrow-minded view to think that we are the chosen people and all the others are outside pale. Nevertheless I do think that India has played a tremendous role in history—a vital role—and in spite of her subject condition and degradation there is tremendous vitality in her, and now that the fetters and the bars that prevented her from going ahead have been removed that vitality will come into play again. That vitality has something distinctive about it. It may be that that distinctiveness may make a difference to world affairs. I think it might. It is a curious parallel if I place it before you, but still it helps a little. Today possibly the symbol of the West is the atom bomb. People think in terms of it. People are frightened of it. People prepare for it and devote all their energies to it. It is a curious combination: it is almost a symbol of the West today. You devote all your energies to promoting something which you fear most! Everybody is frightened of it. It is a terrific thing, and yet all energies are spent in making that. So the atom bomb has become the symbol of the age today so far as the West is concerned. I do not want to make the atom bomb the symbol of India. Our Great Leader gave us the spinning wheel as the symbol of India. That spinning wheel with a certain variation we adopted in our National Flag and thereby we brought in not only that idea of peace but also that ancient idea of Indian culture which is represented by this wheel for thousands of years in India. Now we may be unworthy people to come up to our Great Leader's expectations or to the symbol of the wheel in our Flag. Nevertheless it does symbolise India. And that is the difference—the Atom Bomb on the one side and this Wheel on the other. And, weak or strong, we shall stand by this Wheel and carry on our foreign policy accordingly.

Mr. Chairman: I shall now put the demands to the vote of the House.

The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

DEMAND NO. 56—SALT

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee (Minister of Industry and Supply): Sir, I have circulated to the House a report of the activities of my Ministry and along with that a copy of a memorandum which was placed before the last meeting of the Central Advisory Council of Industries. These two documents will give some idea to the members of the House as also to the public outside of the manifold activities and the problems which came within the purview of this Ministry during the last year. It is not my intention to repeat what has already been included in these two documents.

I do not propose in my opening speech to discuss matters of detail. There will be a number of speakers who, I believe, will bring to the notice of the House several matters affecting both policy and administration and it will be my endeavour at the close of the debate to reply to them.

1947 was a bad year for India. So far as production was concerned we recorded a fall which was almost unprecedented in the history of India during the last quarter of a century. 1948 fortunately has shown some improvement in the industrial production of the country. The increased production on percentage basis will be somewhere between 12 and 16. I am not suggesting that this increased production indicates that all is well or there should be any slackening of effort on the part of the Government or of industry or of labour. There need be no undue self-complacency. At the same time we can confidently claim that we have turned the corner. If we are able to pursue a policy of progressive development depending on the co-operation of industry, labour as also of all sections of the public I have no doubt that we will be able to tide over the very difficult situation that confronts India today.

Sir, in course of 1948 we declared our Industrial Policy. It is not my intention now to repeat in minute detail what that policy is. But I would briefly say that that policy kept before it the essential interests of the country as a whole. We did not make any fetish about any particular abstract theories or 'isms' but we were anxious to place before the country a programme which we thought was a balanced one, was fair and equitable to all concerned, and which while it should give incentive to the industrialists would also hold out hope and a message of good cheer to labour and to others who were connected with industries in India. We decided that we would ourselves undertake some projects which we considered to be of a basic character, of a fundamental character, and at the same time we would encourage private enterprise to develop some of the industries which we thought should receive our first attention. We were anxious that there should be an all-India policy for industrial development. Industry has mainly remained a provincial subject, but as time marches on, as we realize the significance of the unity of India, we feel it essential that there must be an all-India, centrally regulated, policy at any rate in relation to the major industries of this country.

Now, in course of 1948 you may ask what is it that Government has done with a view to implement the promises which Government made in course of the budget discussion of last year. Among the new projects—I am not going into the details—we have already sanctioned two schemes, one for the establishment of a dry core telephone cables factory and another for the establishment of a penicillin, sulpha drugs and paludrine manufacturing factory. We have under active consideration the project reports which we have received for the establishment of one or two factories for the manufacture of one million tons of steel. We have selected heavy electrical machinery, manufacture of radio equipment and radar, synthetic oil from coal, tractor, and machine tools as five of the main projects which are now under examination and it is my hope that in course of this year we will be able to take preliminary steps for the purpose of implementing at least some of them. Members of the House will see that there is a provision in the budget for a sum of about Rs. 3 crores for development purposes. Obviously, if these schemes are to mature fully in course of the next four or five years we will have to spend anywhere between Rs. 200 and 300 crores. Where that money will come from, how these schemes will be financed and conducted are matters which will have to be examined by Government in course of this year. In course of time I expect that we will have to come up before the House for final approval of our policy.

I may pause here for a moment and briefly refer to the procedure which Government have followed for the purpose of considering these big projects. We called to this country some of the big and well-known consultants and experts from different parts of the world and we have asked for their assistance in preparing the project reports. These experts have come not from one selected or favoured country: they have come from U.S.A., from England and from many countries on the continent. They have gone round our country. We have placed our preliminary reports before them. They have examined the position regarding raw materials, transport facilities and also the requirements of the country, and the project reports which they have prepared bear direct relation to the facts which we placed before them.

In addition to this, Sir, we have two or three other big undertakings which we have already taken in hand. The first and foremost is the Sindri factory for the manufacture of fertilisers. As the House will remember, our programme is to manufacture 350,000 tons of fertilisers, and this, I believe, will be the biggest fertiliser factory in the whole of Asia. I am in a position today, as unfortunately I was not in course of my last budget speech, to say that we have completed in course of this year three-fourths of this factory and that everything goes on well, we will be able to start production somewhere between early and middle of 1950. We have selected a large portion of our staff. The policy we have pursued is to select Indians; we have sent them abroad; nearly twentyfive of them have gone to England and America and are working in different factories for the purpose of equipping themselves well and coming back to Sindri and taking charge of their work. We have made it a rule that every foreigner whom we may have to select for a temporary period has an Indian under-study attached to him.

Apart from fertilisers, we have also decided to establish a cement factory which will be producing about 250,000 tons of cement per year. In the course of the next two or three weeks we expect to complete the acceptance of tenders for the purchase of plants and machinery for the establishment of this factory. Here, Sir, I may say that there was a certain delay in receiving plants and machinery for the main factory from England but with the assistance of our High Commissioner in London, who acted with the full support of the U. K. Government, it has been possible for us to obtain high priority for many of our plants and machinery which have already arrived on the spot.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Where will this factory be started?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: At Sindri in Bihar.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I was asking about the cement factory.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: At the same place, Sir, we had one difficulty and that was with regard to gypsum. As you know, gypsum we expected, when the scheme was originally passed, would come from Pakistan. But I am now happy to announce that we have satisfied ourselves that sufficient stocks of gypsum will be available from within India, from Bikaner and Jodhpur in particular. We have sent certain sample quantities abroad and we have got a completely satisfactory report regarding their quality and durability. It will not be an easy job; we will have to move 2,000 tons of gypsum every day for the purpose of keeping the factory going, which means—if metre gauge has to be used—we will require nearly 200 wagons per day. But we are in close touch with the Transport Ministry and with their co-operation we are now arranging to move a sufficiently large quantity of gypsum to Sindri for the purpose of piling it for use as soon as the factory is in a position to start.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): What is the distance between Sindri and the area of the gypsum ore?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: Same distance as between Sindri and Jodhpur.

So far as the other factory which we have under our control is concerned, that is the Hindustan Aircraft Factory at Bangalore.....

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): Sir, he could not give the distance between Jodhpur and Sindri. That is the efficiency of the honourable Minister's Department.

1268 CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [9TH MARCH 1949]

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I only wanted to point out that it is too far away.

Mr. Speaker: Let him proceed.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: The distance is about 1,000 miles. So far as the Sindri factory is concerned, what I propose to do is this. There is some misgiving in the minds of honourable members as to what has been done there. We have taken cinema pictures of the progress of work in the factory and in the course of the next fortnight or so I hope to be able to invite members to an exhibition of the film.

With regard to the Hindustan Aircraft Factory, during the last one year it has done work which deserves praise from all concerned. Apart from repairing and re-conditioning aircrafts which have been in use not only for internal purposes but also abroad, we have now started our new Designing Section and that section is completely under the control of an Indian. Several foreign experts came and visited the factory during the last year and every one of them complimented not only on the way in which work was being done but on the general programme that we have been able to formulate. It is our intention to secure the services of a foreign design consultant; during the last fortnight we have received an offer from a German expert who holds an international position in the world and we have already invited him to come out to Bangalore for the purpose of remaining with us for a limited period and for giving training to the Indian staff which is working there. We are now producing a type of aircraft which will be required mainly for the Defence Ministry and we will be able to go in for production in the course of the next month or two. Of course, this we are doing under special "licensing" arrangements with a firm in England but we are also hoping that the work which is now being done in our own design shop will produce results in the course of a year and half and we will be able to produce in India an aircraft which was designed by an Indian and manufactured mainly by a staff of Indians under Indian control.

We have also during this year made arrangements with a British firm which has been doing special work in our coal mines for open-cast mining operations. That was completely under the control of a British firm and at the end of the lease it has been decided that future work will be done by a company of which ultimately the major shareholders should be the Government of India. It appeared that this specialised work was done only by foreigners; during the last few years there was no provision for training Indians and one of the first conditions that we have laid down is that in the course of the next five or six years a sufficient number of Indian technical personnel will be trained so that the entire work may be taken over by Indians.

We have also developed a scheme for the Mathematical Instruments Office which is now manufacturing instruments of high precision. We hope to secure the services of two experts from Germany—we have sent a cable to Germany for the purpose of engaging them and they are expected to come here in the course of the next few months to help us to reorganise the work of this department.

"Sir, so far as private enterprise is concerned, the bulk of industrial activity in India is naturally in the hands of private people. I do not wish to go into details with regard to the work which has been done in this field, but it has been our endeavour during the last year to establish much closer contacts than hithertofore between industrialists and the Government of India. We have got today twenty-five development Committees each representing a major industry and the object of these Committees which will meet every quarter is to discuss problems, such availability of raw materials or of capital goods or of transport difficulties. We will try to fix up a target figure for our production and we try to see how by a process of mutual help it is possible for us to keep up to the target of production that we may fix upon. We have been able during the last one year to help to the best of our ability and here we have acted—Ministries of Commerce, Transport and Industry and Supply—with the closest possible co-operation. We have not been able to establish a Planning Commission yet; but there is a Cabinet Sub-Committee functioning which is called the Economic Committee of the cabinet under the chairmanship of the Finance Minister. We meet at least twice or thrice a month for the purpose of discussing problems of mutual interest and evolving a common policy of economic development affecting various Ministries.

The Industrial Finance Corporation which functions under the control of the Finance Ministry, although it is more or less an autonomous organisation, came into existence only about six months ago and during this short period this Corporation has found it possible to help about twelve different industries in different parts of India and the total financial assistance which the corporation has already sanctioned comes to Rs. 2.25 crores. (An honourable Member: 'How many industrialists?') Twelve limited companies in different parts of India. Now, that also indicates the anxiety of the Government not merely to offer advice but also to offer financial assistance so that the total industrial development may proceed on lines which are approved by Government.

I have just referred to the progress which we have made with regard to the heavy industries. Government lay considerable stress on the need for development of cottage and small-scale industries. This is a sphere on doubt which is mainly for the provinces to deal with, but for the first time we have appointed an All-India Board which met about two and a half months ago and we have formulated a programme of action which, if implemented by the provinces as also by the Central Government, will I have no doubt solve a very difficult economic problem which now faces us today. We, no doubt, will lay every possible stress on the development of large-scale industries. We will see that those industries are distributed in a rational manner in all parts of India, but we do not wish to commit the mistake of concentrating only on large-scale industries. I feel, Sir, that the future of this country lies in a proper adjustment of the claims of large-scale industries and small-scale industries. In fact, if we really want to revitalise the rural life of this country, if we really want to tackle the grave problem of unemployment that faces the country today, we can do so not only by having industries in different parts of the country but by a regional planning of small scale and middle-size industries. We have, therefore, put ourselves in close touch with the Provinces. This is a sphere of work which we do not wish to take away from provincial control. Complaints are sometimes made that the Government of India are taking away all powers with regard to industrial development. What we have done is this. Apart from certain industries which the State may itself bring into existence, we are adopting a general policy of development of centrally regulated industries. Naturally, to that extent, the power of the provinces will have to be curbed, but apart from that, the provinces will have a very large sphere of activity left to themselves, and one sphere of activity on which the provinces can and should concentrate is to explore how to develop not only cottage industries but also medium size industries.

We have received a report of the working of conditions in Japan. I do not wish to trouble the House with regard to the details, but it is clear that if we can proceed more or less on the same lines as Japan for the purpose of developing cottage industries, we will be able to solve one of the most important and difficult problems that faces India today.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Anything towards khadi and charkha?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: So far as khadi is concerned, propose to include it as part of our activity.

So far as control is concerned, I do not propose to go into the details. I believe in the course of our debate, reference will be made to the several commodities which are now under control, but the most important of them relates obviously to textiles. I know, Sir, what the difficulties are in regard to the administration of control, but I can definitely assert that so far as control on our textiles is concerned, generally it has succeeded. There is no doubt that prices have been controlled; there is no doubt that production has increased; there is no doubt that today there has been a larger distribution of cloth in all the provinces in India than was the case previously. The only difficulty which has arisen is with regard to the accumulation of cloth in certain producing areas mainly arising out of the inability of the provinces to lift them in time. With regard to that also, we have now provided a new system. If a province fails to purchase the cloth quotas allotted to it by the end of the month following the month for which the quota is given, then it will be open to the mills under certain conditions to sell these stocks and distribute them through ordinary trade channels. I have got the latest figure—I got it last night—regarding accumulation. I find, so far as Bombay and Ahmedabad are concerned, the accumulation comes to about four weeks only. That is the figure which I received last night.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): What is the quantity?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: Four weeks production. So far as the other areas are concerned, the accumulation varies from six to ten weeks.

Shri C. Subramaniam (Madras: General): What about Coimbatore?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I am not going into the details. Later on in the afternoon I shall come to that.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): There is the growing shortage of supply of cotton.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I am coming to that. I am going to refer to that point just now.

So far as accumulation is concerned, the House should not forget that normally about six to eight weeks accumulations did exist in the past, but of course this time in certain areas accumulations are more. Difficulty arose out of the fact that in December the total quantity of stamped cloth which the mills price-marked was nearly 30 to 50 per cent. higher than the average for the previous three months. The reason why this was done was that from January the prices were reduced and mills were anxious that whatever they had, should be stamped by the end of December, 1948. I am not blaming the mills. That was a natural tendency, but that also led to accumulation of cloth. The other reason was that Pakistan has been unable to lift nearly about 100,000 bales of cloth allotted to it. Arrangements have now been made for Pakistan to purchase its stocks within a short time and if that is done, I believe in the course of the next month or so the position will be considerably relieved.

But Sir, I would sound a note of warning with regard to the future of textile industry in relation to cotton. This is a serious matter. The House probably knows that we use nearly about 42 lakhs of bales of cotton. So far as our own production is concerned, we expected about 28 lakhs of bales this year, but we have been told by the Agriculture Ministry that we cannot expect more than about 23. There will be a deficit of 5 lakhs of bales here. With regard to the ten lakhs of bales of cotton that we used to get from Pakistan, the quantity has been reduced to 6½ lakhs of bales. We have got a certain quantity of imported cotton from Egypt and from certain other places like East Africa, but taking all these together I find that this year will come to a close with a deficit of about seven lakhs of bales of cotton which will have to be taken out of the surplus which we already have with us. This means we will absorb a good portion of this surplus, and will be left only with about eight or ten lakhs out of a total reserve of nineteen lakhs of bales. This matter is already engaging the attention of the Agriculture Ministry. If we want to utilise more areas for cultivation of cotton to the detriment of food, obviously the country will not like it. (An honourable Member: What about the question of price for cotton?) The price is a different question. Even if we increase the price, the quantity will not increase. So far as the price is concerned, we are going to take up this matter before the next sowing season starts and I hope that in the course of April we will be able to arrive at a decision on this matter. So far as the price of cotton coming from outside is concerned, we are paying obviously much more. As the members know, for every piece of cloth nearly 50 to 60 per cent. goes to cotton. If we have to purchase cotton at very high prices, it will naturally affect the price of cloth as well.

So far as the other controlled commodities are concerned, I can only make this general observation that it has been our policy to delegate as much power as possible to provincial governments. It is not feasible for the Central Government sitting here in Delhi to administer control of all commodities which are spread throughout the length and breadth of India and to issue detailed orders from here. We have delegated as much of the powers to the provinces as is possible. With regard to industries which are of all-India importance, obviously the allotments have to be made by the Central Government. Further, we have appointed Advisory Committees with regard to almost all the commodities so that consumers, manufacturers and other people who are interested may come to know the basis on which allotments are made, may offer their suggestions, which are always considered by us. We also consult representatives of the provincial governments from time to time. We put our heads together and bearing in mind the availability of the materials which are with us, we try to make allotments that are fair and just to all.

Of course, one difficulty has been with regard to transport, but that also has improved during the last few months. Apart from the Central Transport Advisory Board meeting regularly every month, we have other special priority Committees and whenever we get complaints from certain industries, we bring the matter to the notice of the transport authorities and there is a genuine attempt on the part of all to solve the difficulties which confront us.

With regard to disposals, I find that is one of the matters which will come up for discussion. I do not propose to go into detail now in regard to it. I can only just say that up till now we have sold Rs. 112 crores worth of goods and still Rs. 140 crores worth of goods—book value—remain to be disposed of. Now, members will please remember the difficulties that confronted Government since 15th August 1947. Soon before partition, the purchases slowed down. Immediately after partition, on account of the Punjab disaster, there was a ban put on the sale of the disposals stocks. The Defence Ministry also, quite rightly, placed a ban on the sale of the stocks for reasons which are obvious to honourable members. In fact, I can just give one figure. Defence Ministry used about Rs. 22 crores worth of goods from the Disposals during the period when hostilities were in progress.

If those goods had had to be purchased from the open market, the Government would have had to pay at least forty crores, nearly double the amount which had to be spent through the Disposals organisation. In any case, today, all the bans have been withdrawn and I am hoping that in the course of 1949 we will be able to sell at least 75 per cent of the stocks that we have in hand.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Is it not Government property that you hold in the Disposals?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: It is Government property. If the Government had to purchase those things from the open market for the requirements of Defence, then, the Government would have had to pay much more.

Here, there is some conflict of opinion. Some people want quick disposal, no matter where the things are sold. Others feel that there should be proper checking and we should not allow the bulk of these stores to pass into the hands of speculators and middlemen, who will make huge profits. The policy that we have pursued is that we give preference to the Government indentors, Central Government, Provincial Governments, States, Educational and Scientific institutions. Then, we give the next preference to industries. If the industries want any goods for their own use, we certainly give them preference. Last comes the category of ordinary traders and merchants who desire to purchase them for the purpose of re-selling them. We are in consultation with the Finance Ministry and we are trying to evolve a system whereby it will be possible for us to make these surplus goods available to Governments and also to organised bona fide industries for the purpose of their own use in a much better way than what it was before.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Where are these stores kept?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: All over India.

So far as the purchase organisation is concerned,—that is the last subject which I propose to touch—in the course of 1947 including the portion of 1947 when we had an undivided India, the Government of India purchased stocks worth about 92 crores of Rupees including purchases in England and the United States of America. In 1948, up till October, when we have divided India, we have purchased for Rs. 92 crores. In other words, by the end of March 1949, we shall be purchasing to the extent of nearly about Rs. 125 crores. It appears that the purchases made in India have also increased enormously, which means so much more goods produced in the country, which have been purchased by the Government for their own use. If any questions are asked with regard to the purchase organisation particularly in England or America, I have got full details and I shall only be glad to answer them.

I know there are some defects and weaknesses in our organisation. But, I can say that during the last one year, it has been our constant endeavour to improve the efficiency of our machinery. Today, the Government must look upon their activities from a new angle of vision. When private industries or others which are struggling, come to us for assistance, we do not want merely to say, no, to them or create difficulties for them. No matter whether it is a big industry or a small industry or from whichever part of the country one comes, it is the moral duty of the Government, if the Government believes in industrial development, to give every assistance to them. That has been the policy of the Government. We may have failed in some cases; but if the difficulties are pointed out, we shall only be too glad to improve them. I am hoping that in the course of the next year, with the co-operation of all concerned, we will be able to march towards further progress and development which will redound to the credit of our country.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): What about retrenchment, Sir?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: It is dealt with in the report.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Evidently, the House has given unanimous approval to the speech of the honourable Minister and his policy. Personally, I am slightly unhappy because, whatever my points were, he has outwitted me. I had many things to say; the several points about which I had suspicion, he has clarified in advance. It was really cruel of him to have dealt with every point in advance. We feel now that he knows what we feel and I am glad that from that point of view, he has been quite a great success as a Minister, and I must congratulate him for the grasp he has over his department.

But my grouse still stands. In my enthusiasm to lay stress on certain points, which I feel are of great importance, I may be permitted to repeat a little. Sir, industrial development can be viewed only in the background of the conditions that prevail, conditions that are obtaining in the country. At present, there is inflation. Everybody knows that and I do not want to lay stress on it. But, one thing which is lost sight of is that along with this inflation, there is equally strong, equally widespread deflation also in the country. This is my feeling. If deflation means no purchasers in the market, if deflation means that commodities are lying in the market unsold, if deflation means that there is no money with the people to purchase the commodities, then, I say there is deflation in the country. With inflation, I repeat, there is equally widespread and an equally dangerous type of deflation prevailing in the country. If you go into the bazar, you will find that shop keepers do not sell their things because probably the requirements of food do not leave any money in the hands of the people. A man has now to spend more on food, every family budget is hard pressed for money for purchasing food. When people have no spare money, where is inflation, I cannot see. There is inflation with regard to food; but with regard to other commodities, there is deflation. Things are not being sold and purchased. In the present setting of our economy these conditions are apt to occur and re-occur.

My objection is to the very economic structure of India. When Mahatma Gandhi was alive, the world was looking to him to give a correct lead to the world. In fact, he stood not for political freedom. In his view, political freedom was only a means to an end. This political freedom of which we have been so proud, from the point of view of Mahatma Gandhi, was meaningless without the achievement and realisation of higher things which he laid stress on. He stood for a universal revolution of the outlook of human society. What he wanted was a change of values. Today we find that society is fast taking to monetary values alone. It seems as if money were everything in life, and all the rest of values human, moral and otherwise, are going down. Mahatma Gandhi wanted to introduce these human values, moral values into world society. That was really meant by Ram Rajya. Since he died, that work could not be pushed further. To achieve that Ram Rajya, his basic plan was to re-arrange our economic structure in such a manner as to enable us to have those values in the fore front. His slogan was cottage industries and the charka. He was opposed to big industries. If he had lived for say, 20 years more, as he expected to live, he would have made great achievements in India and would have earned for India a place in the history for ever. He opposed mechanisation of Industries on such a big scale as the world in the west is doing. As I appreciate Mahatma Gandhi's ideals, I am also opposed to big industries, and big concentration of industries. They do not only take away from us moral values and impose fictitious value of money on us; but, they, in fact, totally demoralise society. They create unemployment. In fact, Swaraj has no meaning to the real India which lives in the villages unless the villagers are approached by means of the cottage industries. There is unemployment in the villages; they suffer from deflation because they have no work to do. Industries are being concentrated in big towns. If things go on like this, swaraj will become the swaraj of the urban people and our rural people will be deprived of even their daily bread. What is happening is this. The villagers who have good muscles are going to the machine. Today, the sole motive is the profit motive. Industries are not being run on the motive of service. What Mahatma Gandhi wanted was to substitute service motive in the place of this profit motive. The profit motive is the supreme motive with which society acts today, with the result that these industries are not progressing. The industrialists feel that they are not getting enough profits. Now, the middleman is getting more profit than those who run the industries. They are afraid of one thing or the other and they are withdrawing from the industries. The middleman's profit in exchange of goods is great. The result is that the most of the trend and stress in the society in India is now on those professions which do not produce and which only deal in exchange and get middle-men's profit. Black market pays more than toil. In middlemen's trade there is a much higher percentage of profit than in the business of the man who works with muscles or who works with machines. The result is that there is too big a rush on exchange and distribution, which results in hoarding and black-market. Production is slow. Another difficulty is labour. We are quite enthusiastic about labour and we go on raising their pay too. Although it is an unpopular slogan for a politician who goes to labour for votes, I must submit that the wages in Industry are going much higher in relation to the wages of the village worker. I come from a village. Why not think of the village wage earner also who is nowhere in the picture? The result is that the villager gives away his field work and goes to a mill where he can get a higher wage. I want higher wages to urban wage-earners because living is dear; but at the same time there must be a proportion between the labourer who works on the field and the one who works on the wheel. Agriculture is a thing of more importance than cloth or other necessities of life. A man who works in industry gets more than the one who toils in the field with the result that peasants are not getting enough labour to work in the field and so agriculturer is not producing enough. I would invite the attention of members who represent labour to the fact that the productivity of labour is also fast diminishing. It is a clear case of diminishing results. I find that in 1939 the average index of the productive capacity if it was 100 units per wage-earner in textile mills, it has now been reduced to 80.4. In coal mines in 1939 monthly production was reported to be 10.18 tons per head and now it has come to 6.87 per head. There is therefore a demand for rationalisation in the industry because although the worker is getting more money and his dearness allowance is guaranteed, production is persistently going down. When the productive capacity of workers goes down, the consequence is that the Industry engages more labour to enable it to produce more. Engagement of more labour means less profit. Then there is a justification of rationalising industry with the result that wage earners from the mills are turned out and there is unemployment. This vicious circle goes on like a spiral giving rise to all sorts of troubles. The revolutionary trend will go on increasing so long as you concentrate industries in urban areas. It is inevitable. Therefore Mahatma Gandhi wanted that industries should be decentralised and villagers must have their own little industries. He wanted every wage-earner to be an industrialist in his own home. It raises their moral capacity and stature. Because now villagers are being torn off their homes and they go to strange environments and they lose all their natural tendencies of 'love' and 'truth'. It is only when a man is with his wife and children that his love for them grows and he begins to care for them and becomes human. Bereft of his home life when he goes out, he begins to behave like a stranger and gets demoralised. So I submit that industry in their own homely environment is the only solution of the human society. India is an agricultural country, and high industries like the one the honourable Minister mentioned little suit our conditions. The factory at Sindri will be very costly. The raw materials will have to go from Jodhpur to Sindri and then the finished product will be distributed all over the country; just think of the cost of transport to and fro. I submit that the fact that it is the biggest industry in the world is not a matter of pride. I am really sorry for it. It should have been broken into small units and spread over the whole country so that the distribution of its product could be easy. In the same manner there are other industries which are being started. Regarding the manufacture of synthetic oil an American firm Koppers and Co. a steel industry in America has been given the charge of this Synthetic oil factory. The project is required to produce one million tons which is a huge amount. Nowhere in the world such a big project has ever been put. Germany produced 4 million tons of synthetic oil during the war annually, but its production was distributed between dozens of projects. None of the projects was producing more than 10 million tons. But we have such a huge project that it will require a specially big size of machinery. In America also they had small units. I doubt whether these bigger units will be profitable at all.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: The unit you have suggested is 1 lakh tons.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Then it requires 40.0 million gallons of water daily and perhaps 7 lakh tons of coal daily. I am not criticising your project. You are doing it for the good of the country but it should be a smaller unit. I stand for cottage industry. Many of my points, as I have already said, have been covered by the honourable Minister in his speech.

Now open general permits are being given for imports. There are many such Industries which were only recently started, they will suffer. Take for example bicycles. India has begun to produce cycles. If import licence is general and every one is free to import any number of cycles, our industry will fail. Even cycle Industry, I wish to submit, could be broken into small units and they too could be manufactured as cottage Industry. Japan is doing it. Mahatma Gandhi himself was not against machinery altogether and so I am also not against it. What I want is that machinery should be uniformly given to the villagers. Let the villagers be their own industrialists and labourers together, let every home be a small factory in their villages; and I want them to work with electricity and produce more. Even the big weaving mills I do not like. They too should be broken into small pieces—units. In Japan they have one or two looms in a cottage and the woman of that cottage produces 200 to 400 yards of cloth by the close of every evening. In this way these textile mills could be broken into units and distributed in say 200 homes in each village and the produce could be easily collected and sent to the market. In that manner alone we can bring into play the productive capacity of the society. This will bring socialisation of the means of production and this will be distribution of both labour and leisure among people equally and then only we shall achieve our object of economic freedom to all and equal opportunity to all; otherwise equal opportunity is a dream which will never be achieved through the present system of economy. I therefore emphasize that the cottage industry should be encouraged and villagers must be kept in the picture because India belongs to villagers and not to urban. We are at present doing all for urban areas.

Mr. HOMI MODI (Bombay General): My honourable friend, the Minister for Industry has placed before the House an illuminating survey of the work accomplished by his Ministry during the last year, and I desire just to say a few words in elaboration with the picture he has presented.

After the confusions and uncertainties of the earlier period, a more or less clear pattern of industrial policy is emerging, and I think that is a matter for congratulation not only for the Government but for the whole country. My honourable friend spoke of Government not wanting to make a fetish of any 'isms', and I am increasingly glad to find in the last few months that the cry of nationalisation has been put in its proper perspective. Now, at any rate, every section has come to realise that the prime national objective is increased production, and that can be achieved, not by threats against capitalism such as have been uttered unfortunately in the past, but by securing the cooperation of industrial interests, and also of the representatives of labour. As I have said, on a number of occasions, and I take this opportunity of repeating it to-day, that Industrialists must take courage in both hands and discard all their apprehensions in regard to the trends of governmental policy and in regard to the economic progress of the country. By and large, this country has a great future, and the industrial community has a great part to play in building up that future.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Only if you have courage and confidence.

Mr. Homi Modi: I for one, have enough courage.

The progress achieved in 1948 has been referred to in the honourable Minister's Speech and also set out in the brochure which was placed before the members of the Central Advisory Council of Industries. I think it necessary to correct somewhat the picture given there and to say that the progress so far as most of the heavy industries are concerned was disappointing; at the same time, there was encouraging progress in the matter of small-scale and medium-scale industries. And I entirely agree with my honourable friend Dr. Mookerjee when he said that a proper balance has to be struck between heavy and light industries, if the progress of the country as a whole is to be achieved and the standard of life of the people raised within the near future. I hope, therefore, that a great deal more will be done to promote light and medium-scale industries, in the course of the next few years.

Now, how has this progress been achieved? It was because the ministry took the right steps to secure the cooperation of the interests concerned. The first step they took in that direction was the Industrial Conference held in Delhi in December 1947, and at that Conference the honourable Minister had the satisfaction of securing the cooperation of both interests—industry as well as labour—and both interests were committed to the adoption of far reaching changes in the economic structure. Development committees were set up at this conference, and these committees produced valuable reports which were placed recently before the Central Advisory Council of Industries. At this meeting of the Central Council, the difficulties of various industries were threshed out. Every section was fully represented there, and I think a great deal of work was done in the matter of ironing out differences. I would like to say here that my honourable friend, the Minister for Industry and Supply, makes an ideal chairman. He has got a bland manner and benign countenance—altogether misleading, of course—but he does manage to wring out of both interests—labour as well as industrialists—a large measure of agreement. As I said at the conclusion of the Central Advisory Council meeting, in thanking him on behalf of the industrialists, he has a technique of his own. We keep on fighting, and at the end, my honourable friend gets up, and winding up the proceedings says, "It is gratifying that there has been such a large measure of agreement on all the issues, and we will proceed to frame the report", and before we know where we are, he has committed us to something which we had never bargained for.

Then there was also another step taken, and that was the measure which is under contemplation, of centrally regulating the most important industries in the country, and a small committee was appointed for the purpose of advising Government on the lines on which such central regulation and control should be laid down and exercised. This Committee recently met the Economic Committee of the Cabinet and placed before it its views. Here again, I am afraid the honourable Minister is going to produce a rabbit out of a hat, because several objections have been lodged which he has lightheartedly brushed aside, but I hope that when the Bill is placed before the House, it will be found to have taken into consideration the various points that have been urged.

All these things have resulted in close collaboration between the Ministry and industrial interests, and I would like in this place to pay a tribute to the very devoted work of the Secretariat which my honourable friend commands. They work hard; they probably know no holidays, like most people in the Secretariat; and they have served the Ministry and the country exceedingly well.

In the field of labour also a great deal has been done, and my honourable friends who represent labour here will bear me out when I say that every attempt has been made in recent months to try and establish closer understanding between industry and labour. Very recently a committee, at which I assisted, has formulated principles which should govern the regulation of fair wages and that report will go out to all the provinces, and I hope that uniform principles of fair wages will be laid down for the whole country.

As regards profit-sharing, that is a more difficult job. But there again we have a committee, and though we have not yet been able to come to any definite conclusions, I hope that with moderation on both sides, we shall be able to evolve a formula which will be acceptable to all.

My honourable friend who spoke just before me seems to be against all heavy industries. He has advanced some novel arguments in support of his thesis. He suggested that the industrial worker who went out for the whole day ceased to have any interest in his wife and family. That has not been my experience; and I should have thought that absence made the heart grow fonder. I wonder what takes place in the families of my honourable friends who come from thousands of miles, if it is suggested that being absent for the day impairs the relationship between husband and wife!

Now, Sir, let us not be too optimistic about all that has happened. Let us put the results which have been achieved in their proper perspective. I see considerable difficulties ahead; difficulties in the way of labour producing all that can be expected of it, difficulties in the matter of raw materials, and transport, and also difficulties in the way of the functioning of controls. My honourable friend has lightheartedly dismissed the suggestion that the control on cloth has not been working satisfactorily. It may be working adequately in some places. I would still like to warn him, as I did only a week ago when I appeared before him with half a dozen other industrialists, that control will require to function far more satisfactorily before we can say that position is right. There is a great deal, Sir, that remains to be done—a great deal of hard thinking and hard work. I would like this country to emulate the example of Great Britain where a remarkable recovery has been effected in spite of the fact that there is a great deal of apprehension with regard to the future of industry in that country. Results there have been achieved which are positively remarkable and which are a tribute to every section of the people.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: May we know whether the honourable member has been asking the Government for any concessions so far as this textile industry is concerned, and if so, what are they?

Mr. Homi Mody: No concessions. I do not make speeches for a consideration. I say exactly what I think and I think exactly what I say. I have not the slightest intention of asking for anything. All that I want is efficiency of control and that is the only point that I was making.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Hear, hear. That is something.

Mr. Homi Mody: It is all very well to embark on grandiose schemes of development of the country's resources, but the outstanding factor of the situation is that even the existing capacity of industry is not being fully utilised for one reason or other. Let us see first and foremost that all the industries are producing to their capacity before we embark upon big adventures. I hope, Sir, in that connection my honourable friend will see to it that proper financial checks are imposed upon the formulation and establishment of such industries as Government have undertaken and are about to undertake. These checks which industrialists impose upon themselves are entirely absent when it is a Government that establishes industries, and I hope that from time to time the honourable Minister will place before the House a picture of what exactly has been happening, the progress which has been achieved, whether the estimates have been worked up to, and whether everything is working out according to plan.

One more word. My honourable friend spoke of his establishing in conjunction with the Sindri Fertilizer factory a cement plant of 250,000 tons. I am very glad about that. I hope from time to time my honourable friend and I will be comparing notes as to who can produce cement cheaper and more efficiently.

Shri B. Das: And I will bet on you!

Mr. Homi Mody: I think you are very wise. I am prepared to take a bet on myself and I promise my honourable friend that he will learn a great deal from us if he will only have the humiliation to sit at the feet of those who can teach him!

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Mr. Speaker: I would like to know what time the honourable Minister will require for his reply?

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State): Half an hour.

Mr. Speaker: I shall then try to accommodate the speakers suitably. I think the time limit should be 10 minutes.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin (C. P. and Berar: Muslim): Sir, I want to speak.

Mr. Speaker: It is not going by mere application. The honourable member must catch the eye of the Speaker.

Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao (Mysore State): Sir, I also congratulate the honourable Minister on the performance of his Ministry during the last year. Except steel all the other commodities have gone up in production during the last year. In fact even in the present Budget as much as 12.63 crores have been provided for industrial development and grants for development to provinces amount to nearly 25.45 crores. Only eight lakhs have been provided for cottage industries. All these certainly go a long way in stepping up the industrial production of the country. So far as the policy is concerned fundamentally I agree that it is sound but there are many loose ends which have to be tightened up. In the brochure that is given to us in the last page it reads:

"The import and export policy of the government is also designed to encourage industry and trade, while safeguarding the interests of the consumer. The Ministry of Commerce which is mainly responsible for import and export policy acts in close consultation with the Ministry of Industry and Supply and the Ministry of Finance."

Certainly it is a very desirable thing. But as I said there are certain loose ends and I am only referring to these. I want particularly to refer to the Hindustan Aircraft Limited and the machine tool industry and the match industry.

The Hindustan Aircraft Limited is a great asset which has come to us as a war effort. Of course the honourable Minister said that it has been working satisfactorily and that a new designing section has been started in the Aircraft factory. But I doubt very much if we will get the full benefit from the Hindustan Aircraft Limited. In fact during the war time I learn that there were 17,000 workers working in three shifts. In addition to this many job works were given to smaller industrial units not only in Bangalore but also in distant places like Coimbatore. But now the labour has been reduced to 3,500 and only one shift is working. That is my information. Of course I am open to correction and I will be very glad to hear that the maximum benefit is being derived from the Hindustan Aircraft Limited. As a matter of fact it is one of the best equipped factories, I think, in Asia. I learn that machine tools were brought to the Hindustan Aircraft Ltd. not only for the factory itself but also from the Eastern Zone and also the African Zone. If we can only make the best use of the Hindustan Aircraft Ltd., I think we can step up our industrial production to a very great extent. In fact in industrially advanced countries like America, Japan and Switzerland nearly 60 to 70 per cent. of the half finished materials are drawn from smaller industrial units. That was being done during the war period even in the Hindustan Aircraft Ltd. The job work was given to the smaller industrial units and thereby a number of subsidiary industries were developed round about Bangalore. But I learn that now even job works are taken by the Hindustan Aircraft Ltd., so much so that some of the smaller industrial units have suffered round about Bangalore. My submission is that the honourable Minister should see that the best use is made of the Hindustan Aircraft Ltd.

The honourable Minister referred to the construction of railway coaches. Last year the Railway Minister was pleased to tell us that as many as 300 coaches would be put on the rails by the end of 1948 but we learn that only 20 carriages have been put on the rails. I understand that if proper use is made of the machinery available nearly a carriage every two or three days can be constructed in that factory. I do not see why efforts should not be made to step up the production of the railway coaches in the Hindustan Aircraft Ltd.

I was fortunate enough to visit recently England in connection with the Commonwealth Parliamentary Delegation. The Singer Sewing Co., which was manufacturing shells during the war is today manufacturing 8,000 sewing machines per week and nearly 2½ million needles per week and still they are not able to meet the demand. They have similar factories in other parts of the world: they have eight or nine factories and I think they have one in India also. Every one of these factories has been able to adjust itself from war economy to peace economy and they have been producing materials and England has been able to step up its production by nearly 24 per cent. more during the current year as compared with 1946.

[Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao]

I do not see any reason why we should not make use of this factory to step up our production also. Efforts should be made to produce other articles to see how these machines could be utilised. In fact I learn that the machine shop is working only with 40 per cent. load. There were about 480 men working in three shifts in it, but today there are only about 150 men working in one shift. There are automatic screw machines and spindle automatics which are not made full use of. The Tool room is not sufficiently loaded with work. In the Foundry the strength has been reduced from 150 to 85. It is competing with jobbing factories in Bangalore. They can specialise in non-ferrous castings for which there are no facilities in South India. The Welding Department is not provided with good load. There is a good saw mill and the strength here has been reduced from 500 men to 75 men. This could be made use of for mass production of standard door and window frames. The acute nature of the housing problem in our country is well known. I ask the honourable Minister why such a fine saw mill—one of the best equipped saw mills—should not be made use of for the mass production of window frames and door frames to meet the housing problem. Then there is the Sheet Metal department. It had a strength of 500 which has been reduced to 150, and it is also working only one shift now. There are Hydraulic Presses, Punch Presses of different sizes, Plate and Sheet Shears, Power Brakes, Spot Welding machines and Routing and Shaping machines. I may mention that the Percival factory in England which manufactures aeroplanes has only two punch presses whereas in the Hindustan Aircraft Limited we have seven punch presses. Why are we not making use of these presses for developing our industrial output? Attempts should be made to utilise them for the manufacture of electric light fittings, telephone exchange equipment—there is no factory in India to manufacture telephone equipment—telephone parts, refrigerators, washing machines and thermos flasks. There is also a Painting and Varnishing department in the Hindustan Aircraft Company. It has very good equipment for nickel-plating, chromium-plating and anodizing. But nothing is being utilised.

In this connection I would submit that the Defence Department, the Railway and other transport services, the Posts and Telegraphs Department, the Electrical departments both of Government and private agencies, Water Supply and Sanitary Engineering—all these Departments should co-ordinate and they must tell Government what their needs are; and all these needs could, if possible, be manufactured in the Hindustan Aircraft Company.

Then I come to the machine tool industry. Here also the Government has an idea of starting a machine tool industry. But there are six first-class machine tool industries in India and I had occasion to visit the Harihar factory which was started during the war period. Their output during the war was 30 to 40. Today it is only 19 or 20. They can step up the output to 70 to 80 machines. But today I find Rs. 2 lakhs worth of machine tools lying idle because they have no market. The import controls are not working properly. The vested interests, especially the importers and their foreign agents are trying to evade the tariff protection given to the industry by slightly altering the specifications. This loophole should be blocked. We are importing a number of industrial plants. Among the industrial plants there are a number of machine tools which could be manufactured and which are being manufactured in India. Why should these machine tools be imported from abroad?

I shall read here one advertisement which appeared in one of the foreign papers. This is an extract from Machinery Lloyd, No. 17, August 1948, page 131:

"Machinery required for Punjab Rehabilitation Scheme. The Department of Industries to the East Punjab Provincial Government in Simla is setting up workshops in which refugees from the West Punjab are to find employment in general engineering trades. In this connection the Department urgently requires machinery and equipment, both new and second-hand, including the following: 30 four-ft. lathes; 103 six-ft. lathes; 100 eight-ft. lathes; 58 ten-ft. lathes; 40 twelve-ft. lathes; 23 fourteen-ft. lathes."

I don't want to read the whole of the extract. All these machine tools are manufactured in India and can be supplied from the Indian machine tool industry. It is not only the Harihar industry that is suffering. There is one in Calcutta, one in Bombay, one in Mysore and there are three others, and all these machine tool industries are suffering because the importers and their foreign manufacturers are trying to get over the tariff protection given to the industry. I request the honourable Minister for Industries and also the honourable Minister for Commerce to look into this matter and give proper protection to the machine tool industry.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: I congratulate the honourable Minister in charge for his very eloquent speech today and if results are to be judged by the quality of the speech I think he has succeeded. But his speech disclosed that whatever he said was based upon hopes and expectations and the expectations that he has raised do not depend on the achievements we have in the past or the present but achievements that we are going to have in the future. I have heard the speech of Mr. Homi Mody in this House and he has congratulated the Government and the Minister in charge for the measures he has taken for increasing the production as far as the industrialists are concerned. He has also praised the secretariat for the co-operation they have shown. It seems the industrialists, particularly Sir Homi Mody is satisfied with the measures that have been adopted by the Government of India. This is a still greater reason and occasion for examining the proposals, whether it is at the cost of labour or whether it is in the interests of the industries alone that the present policy has been moulded; and there is still greater reason to examine the work of the secretariat and collaboration of the secretariat with the industrialists in view of the praises showered by my friend.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: Why are you always getting so suspicious?

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: I am not suspicious. I want you to examine it. Then I would like to refer to one matter to which the honourable Minister in charge has referred and that is the textile industry. I come from that part of the country, that is Berar, where cotton is produced in abundance. I am very sorry to say that the present policy of the Government of India in regard to control of the prices is not only detrimental but it is suicidal to the growing of cotton in our part of the country. The result is that much of the cotton area is being curtailed in favour of groundnut. In Berar, which was known for cotton and which was annexed by the British Government from the Nizam only on the ground that cotton from there was being sent to Manchester, you will find the groundnut area increasing every day because of the price control. And I can assure the Government of India and the Minister in charge that the cost of production of cotton is not realized by the cultivator today; and I am prepared to face any enquiry being a cultivator myself. Therefore either the Government has to revise the policy and stipulate the growth of cotton in Berar or people will be allowed to grow any other commodity like groundnut to the detriment of the nation. It has been said that the control over textiles has succeeded to a great extent. My own feeling is, and I think it must be the feeling of many members, that the control over cloth has miserably failed, particularly in our part of the country and as I see in Delhi. In spite of the controls that have been imposed we see hundreds of shopkeepers dealing in blackmarketing in regard to cloth. The poor cultivator for whom these controls were really meant is the greatest sufferer and I would really like that the Government of India should examine this question.

By adopting measures in favour of the industrialists our chief aim is that the production which has fallen in the past should increase. Now it is an established fact that the capital goods to the extent we want are not available from America or England; an assurance has been given by the Minister in charge that they are being received, but as far as I know they are not available to the extent we want for increasing our production. Then what is the other remedy that you should adopt? The only thing is that as far as the textile industry is concerned, we have to introduce double-shift and treble-shift, and for that the co-operation of labour is very essential. We have been talking of assistance to the industrialists, we have also to see how labour can be reconciled. Sir, I do not support the exaggerated claims of labour, as probably my friend Mr. Sondhi is expecting from me. I say this is a National Government and in every measure that is adopted by the National Government labour's legitimate grievances should be considered and labour should not be made to resort to strikes. The point is whether, in view of the growing conflict between labour and capital, it is possible now to reconcile their claims. Around us, in many countries we find chaos and anarchy prevailing and spreading. Is this not the time when we have given assurances to the industrialists to come forward and do their job well, but we have seen in these twelve months that in spite of the assurances given last year nothing has been done by the industrialists and whether the industrialists would do it in the future cannot be said.

In India, as you find in the Railways and in other industries, we find that there are notices of strikes. Labour is going on strike. What is the remedy? The remedy that is suggested by the Government of India is that we want to give a share in the profit. But that theory is indefinite, that theory has not been worked out in detail, and it has not been settled as to what would be the share in profit given to labour. We are talking about vague generalizations about profit-sharing. What Sir Mody said about that was that they were going to evolve a formula regarding profit-sharing; when that formula is to be evolved we do not know. In the meantime we find labour is uneasy in the country. Sir, I do not justify the present attitude of labour. We find there are three parties working in that field: one is the Communists, the other is the Socialists and the third is the Congress labour leaders. My submission is that unless we satisfy labour it is not possible to increase production. My only suggestion—though it is a cry in the wilderness—is that in order to reconcile the conflict of labour and capital, there is no other remedy except to nationalize the key industries. The nation will be with the Government of India if there is a nationalisation of industries. In the surrounding countries we find that after once the economy is broken it is difficult; even the Government of India or the Congress or any other organisation will not be able to improve it. Before it is too late, change the economy of the country. There is no shame or humiliation regarding that. This is a National Government and a Government of the people for the people. Therefore the key industries have to be nationalised. People laugh at the idea because they think it is impracticable but they should see round them; they should see China, they should see Burma and see what is happening there. The only remedy for us is that we should nationalise our key industries; you should have co-operative training in farming. This is not an idea to be laughed at. You will be sorry if you don't change the economy of the country very soon.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): I was glad to hear the honourable Minister giving facts and figures about the steps Government has taken to step up production and to help the different industries. I was also glad to observe the note of co-operation that he has struck in the activities of the Government and the suggestion that he has made that Government is going to seek the co-operation of all the interests that count in production.

The present state of the nation's economy is so low that the great mass of people in India are below the subsistence level. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary that to increase the standard of living we should be able to produce more, and produce more as quickly as possible. You will notice that in about 1930 when the then Government promised protection to sugar, sugar factories grew up in the course of two or three years all over the country and our country is now more or less self-sufficient in the matter of sugar. Similarly, in spite of difficulties that were present at the time, cotton mills grew up and the country can get 15 to 16 yards of cloth per head of the population. Similarly other industries also grew up. What is necessary for the Government is to define a planned policy and to encourage various industries and industrialists to come forward and set up factories and take all possible steps necessary to give all possible encouragement and help whenever needed.

If you take the figures of production in our country, you will be surprised to note how far behind we are compared to other countries. I will give two or three cases only. In the United States of America, the per capita consumption of textile cloth, including woollen cloth, comes to 90 yards whereas in India it is less than 16 yards. The per capita consumption of sugar in America is 120 lbs whereas in India we get only 6 lbs. In paper the per capita consumption is 250 lbs whereas in India it is 1½ lbs and out of this 1½ lbs only half a pound per capita is produced in India and the rest is imported. Similarly, if you take steel which is one of the requirements which will go to build houses and all other industries, the production in America is 100 million tons per year whereas in India which is more than double in population the production is less than one million—1/100th of the production that you have in America. Therefore, what is necessary for the honourable Minister to do is to give all kind of help to private industrialists and other to set up factories so that we can have more production and quicker production.

At present I find from the report that has been circulated by the Ministry of Industry and Supply that various steps are being taken to place large orders for 136,000 tons of Belgian steel, 2 lakh tons of American steel and so on. My point is that we cannot go on buying these things from foreign countries. We must take steps, and immediate steps, so that we can produce these things in our country. We must not waste our foreign exchange which is available with difficulty, in purchasing these stores. On the contrary all possible steps should be taken to start factories as soon as possible.

There are certain industries which need immediate attention, for instance, the chemical industry and the engineering industry. We are very deficient in these two departments. We have not got much of either fine chemicals or light chemicals or heavy chemicals. Similarly, we have not got many factories producing durable consumer goods from the engineering department. It is necessary, therefore, to give all protection, and the first step that I suggest is that instead of allowing open general licences for import of these things, let high revenue duties be imposed so that if the things come from outside the Government will be able to realise revenue. But in the meantime various people will be able to set up factories and they will get indirect protection so that in course of time we will be able to save our money from going out of the country. I hear at present there is a new kind of economy that is being followed in the Government Departments. Previously, we used to be told that even if a thing costs a little more in our country, we should go in for that in preference to a foreign article. I am told that now that policy is being changed and in the name of inflation, if something is cheaper outside India, that should be purchased in preference to things made in India.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Where do you get that from?

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: That is what I have been told. I find from page 14 of the report that even if the Indian prices were a little higher...

Shri B. L. Sondhi: That goes against you!

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka: I am glad that the information I had was wrong.

As regards the engineering and chemical industries that I mentioned, they are very difficult to build. They need very costly technicians and people with specialised knowledge. If necessary, Government should come in and help them in getting technicians from outside and give them all kind of help.

We must not forget that it is the industry and commerce that give more than 50 per cent. of the revenue of the Government of India. Income-tax and super-tax and corporation tax come to about 50 per cent. of the total revenue and also customs and other things also come from trade and commerce. If there is prosperity in business, railways also earn more. Therefore, the more we produce in the country, the more we will be able to raise the standard of living of the people and raise more money which can be spent in nation-building departments.

As regards controls, the honourable Minister was pleased to say that they are working satisfactorily. So far as stocks of cloth are concerned, I am told that in Ahmedabad and Bombay they are about six weeks, not four—there may be some difference as to the date for which the facts have been collected, but in any event steps should be taken to reduce the stocks. I am told in Madhya-bharat the accumulation is ten weeks production. The reason is that some of the nominated buyers are not lifting the goods. The instruction which the Honourable Minister said had been issued has not reached most of the mills and steps should be taken to see that it reaches the proper quarters so that it may be effective and the co-operation of persons who could help Government in carrying out their programme of industrialisation should also be invited.

दानता था कि सारे उड़ीसा प्रान्त को और फिर मध्य प्रान्त को, सी० पी० को भेजता था। ब्रिटिश गवर्नमेंट के टाइम में ऐसा हुआ कि उड़ीसा से सी० पी०, नागपुर, की जो लाइन थी वह रास्ता साल्ट को बन्द करने के लिये बन्द कर दिया गया और इस तरह उड़ीसा का साल्ट का कारबार सब खराब हो गया। आज तो हम भारत सरकार की यूनिट हैं। तो भारत सरकार को ऐसा देखना चाहिये कि हर एक यूनिट, ऊपर को उठे। हर एक यूनिट अगर उन्नति नहीं करेगा तो वह भारत सरकार भी गिर जायगी। तो उड़ीसा में आदमी को खाने को नहीं मिल रहा है। हम लोग यहाँ चिल्ला रहे हैं कि जीवन का नाप बढ़ाना चाहिये और सब लोग कहते हैं कि प्रोडक्शन कम हो गया। तो प्रोडक्शन कम क्यों हो गया यह जरा सोचने की बात है। हमने अपने हर एक देश से काटेज इंडस्ट्री को निकाल दिया है। उसको निकाल देने के बाद हमने जो बड़ी बड़ी मशीनरी लगाई है उससे हमारी उपज और कम हो गयी है। मेरी बात तो आप जाने दीजिये। इस किताब “Danger Spots in World Policy” में यह लिखा है:

इसी से, इस तरह बड़ी बड़ी फैक्टरी बनाने से हम लोगों के जितने ७ लाख गांव थे वह सब बरबाद हो गये। और अब हम सोचते हैं कि जो बड़े बड़े शिल्प हम बनाना चाहते हैं उनमें जैसा कि माननीय शिल्प मंत्री जी ने भी कहा, हम लोगों की पालिसी थोड़ी डीसेंट्रलाइजेशन (विकेन्द्रीकरण) की होगी। क्योंकि केन्द्रीकरण करने से ऐसा हो जाता है कि हिमालय पहाड़ के मुआफिक तो आप के हाथ में पावर आ जाती है लेकिन जब गिर जाता है तो गिरता भी वह हिमालय पहाड़ की तरह है। इसीलिये हम सब को थोड़ा सोच समझ कर चलना चाहिये। इंडस्ट्रियलाइजेशन तो हम सब करते हैं लेकिन मशीनरी वगैरह के लिये हम अमेरिका के पास जाते हैं और उनकी कृपा पर निर्भर रहते हैं।

उड़ीसा के बारे में मैं इतना ही कहता हूँ कि वहां इतनी मछली पड़ी है, इतनी मछली वहां होती है कि उस तरफ़ ध्यान देना चाहिये। हमारे शिल्प मंत्री जी तो मछली खाते हैं, बंगाल वाले तो मछली खाते हैं और हम लोग भी मछली खाते हैं। तो वहां इतनी मछली पैदा होती है उसका कुछ बंदोबस्त करना चाहिये। वहां साल्ट का भी प्रबन्ध होना चाहिये। अभी तो वहां साल्ट ऐसा हो गया कि एक तरह की मनोपरी हो गयी है। हम लोगों ने साल्ट टैक्स उठा दिया लेकिन हमको उससे कोई फ़ायदा नहीं होता है। गवर्नमेंट जब से नैशनलाइजेशन करना चाहती है तो मैं तो चाहता हूँ कि साल्ट का नैशनलाइजेशन कर लिया जाय। और इस तरह बहुत अच्छा काम होगा और सब को फ़ायदा होगा। अभी तो वहां उड़ीसा के रहने वाले उड़िया को कुली मानते हैं। बंगाल में एक लाख उड़िया कुली हैं, बर्मा में आधे लाख हैं, और शायद जमशेदपुर में २४-२५ हजार हैं और उड़िया का नाम ही है कुली। क्योंकि वह ऐसा नीचे गिर गया है कि जब कोई उनमें से उन्नति करता है तो वह अपने को छिपाता है, उड़िया बोलने से कोई कह देगा कि वह कुली है। इसलिये मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि आप सब यूनिट को एक लेवल पर लाने की कोशिश करें और जो आप स्टैंडर्ड आफ़ लिविंग को बढ़ाने की बात कहते हैं तो उसको बढ़ाने के लिये यह कोशिश होनी चाहिये कि हर एक जगह में छोटी छोटी काटेज इंडस्ट्रीज़, और स्माल स्केल इंडस्ट्रीज़ का प्रबन्ध होना चाहिये। और बाहर से जो मशीनें लाकर हम बड़े बड़े कारखाने बनाते हैं मैं नहीं कहता कि उसको एकदम छोड़ देना चाहिये लेकिन हमारी जितनी ताकत है उसी के अन्दर रह कर उनको हमें यहां बनाना चाहिये। अगर हम ऐसा करेंगे तो इसमें बँलेंस रहेगा। आप अभी जो इंडस्ट्रीज़ बनाते हैं तो एग्रीकल्चर से जो आदमी उसमें आते हैं सो सब वहां से एकदम घर छोड़ कर आते हैं और सब बालबच्चे वगैरह बाहर रहते हैं और जैसा कि इंडस्ट्रियल लेबर कमेटी ने कहा है उसका दिल अच्छी तरह काम करने में नहीं लगता है। इसलिये मैं चाहता हूँ कि मंत्री जी अच्छी तरह से सोच विचार करके इस पाज़िसी को ठीक करेंगे।

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): The speech of the honourable the Minister of Industry and Supply was really fine. But I wish to submit only this that the Report of the Industrial Commission was published in 1918. Thirty years have passed since the publication of the report. When we see whether during this period the people living in the villages of India have made progress or have declined, whether their standard of living has gone up during these 30 years or not, we do not make it out clearly.

I come from Orissa. The ancient name of Orissa was Kalinga, and the word Kalinga itself means "cloth". Kalinga used to produce so much cloth that it was exported to Sumatra, Java, Borneo and other places. Now the condition in Orissa is that we have to import cloth from outside. After this by starting the "Vande Matram" Campaign we had told the Government of India that we will not wear foreign cloth and will make bonfires of the foreign cloth instead but today the foreign cloth is flooding the markets. What the policy of the Government is we fail to understand. As regards salt the country of Utkal used to make so much salt that it was sent to whole of Orissa and then to Central Provinces. During the reign of the British Government it so happened that in order to destroy the salt industry of Orissa the Railway line that connected Orissa with Nagpur in Central Provinces was dismantled and thus the entire salt industry of Orissa was ruined. Today we are a unit of the Indian Government. So it is essential for the Government of India to see that every unit makes progress. If every unit will not make progress then this Indian Government also will fall down. The people in Orissa are not getting even sufficient food-stuffs. We are agitating here that the standard of living must be raised and all the people say that the production has gone down. Why the production has gone down is a matter that requires careful thinking. We have driven out cottage industries from every part of our country. After driving them out we have installed huge machineries and hence our production has gone down still more. Leave aside what I say, but in this book "Danger spots in World Policy" it is written:

For this reason only, by erecting huge factories our seven lakh villages have all been ruined. And now we think that for the big industries that we want to set up, as was said by the honourable the Minister also, our policy to some extent will be for decentralization. If we successfully centralize we can have enormous controlling power but if we are unsuccessful in centralization it means a huge failure. Therefore we must proceed after due consideration. We all want to do industrialization but for machineries we have to run to America and have to depend upon their mercy.

How much was said about the starting of cloth mills but no factory has yet been installed anywhere. One factory has been installed in Orissa and perhaps one at a place in Delhi. No machinery could be had for other places. Since 1918, when the Industrial Commission was set up, we have been saying that machines should be made here and attention be paid towards this; and whatever machines we would be able to make here, we would produce goods with them only. But till now we import machines from America and thus we become their slaves; and in spite of our promise of "Vande Matram" that we gave in 1905, promising that we would not wear foreign cloth, the foreign cloth has flooded the market. Therefore I wish to draw the attention of the honourable the Minister towards this point and request him to consider that cottage and small industries should be established everywhere and in every region. The cloth industry should be revived in the regions where cloth was made, and where salt was made salt should again be made. This point must be kept in mind. I say that particular attention be paid towards two things only cloth and salt, because food-stuffs are produced in each and every village. Whatever controls we devise, we devise for towns and cities, because if we would not enforce such controls there, the people living therein would die of starvation because no food-stuffs would be available there. All the persons there would die in a single day if food-stuffs are not procured for them. But nobody would die in the villages because food-stuffs are produced in villages after villages. Therefore, I wish that after a thoughtful consideration we must not increase the number of towns and cities any more. We set up factories and at one place instal several of them. The result is that we become surrounded from all the sides and the problem becomes so acute that it becomes difficult to continue the work.

Mr. Homi Mody said and he was supported by Shree Mahavir Tyagi that one does not even get an opportunity of living there with family and children. But Mr. Mody has also mentioned as to what happens by not living in this condition for a year. But I say that the people who belong to the higher strata of society and live with their families do get a good deal of comfort. But one who is a labourer and who works and toils there, if he would not get a good house to live in, if he would not work and labour along with his family and children then he would not get good chances of making progress and strikes will surely take place. What is the motive behind these strikes? We shout that communists instigate strikes. I do say that the communists or socialists do nothing and they will not be able to do anything provided the labour class was to get enough food and good living accommodation. If he were to get a good house to live in then your communists cannot at all make him do anything. Everybody wants that he may live in comfort. Therefore I wish that the idea that the honourable the Minister of Industry and Supply has for the development of the regions I think that he will set up those industries in a region where local conditions would be suitable.

I would say this much about Orissa that large quantities of fish are available there, and this fact should not be forgotten. Our honourable the Minister for Industry and Supply takes fish; people of Bengal take fish and we also take fish. So much fish is available that some arrangement should be made about it. Proper arrangements for the supply of salt also should be made. The position about salt these days is such that a monopoly has been set up. We have abolished the salt tax but we do not get any benefit out of it. When the Government wants nationalization I do wish that salt should be nationalized, and in this way a lot of good work will be done and everybody will be benefitted. Now the people of Orissa, the Oriyas, are regarded as coolies. In Bengal there are one lac of Oriya coolies, in Burma half a lac, and about twenty or twenty five thousand in Jamshedpur, and the word 'Oriya' has become synonymous with a 'coolie'. They have gone so much down in public estimation that when any one becomes of some importance he conceals his identity lest by speaking Oriya he is called a coolie. Therefore I wish to submit that you should try to bring all the units to one level and whatever you say about raising the standard of living, then for raising the standard your efforts should be that small cottage and small scale industries should be established at each and every place. I do not say that we should by one stroke discontinue the practice of setting up big factories by importing machines from foreign countries, but we should try to manufacture here as many machines as lie in our power. If we would do so then a balance would be maintained. The industries, that you set up these days, attract people from agriculture, they come leaving their homes for good and all of them keep their families away; and as the Labour Industrial Committee has found out they do not set their hearts properly on their work. Therefore I wish that the honourable the Minister would set the policy after a careful and thoughtful consideration.

Shri Basanta Kumar Das (West Bengal: General): The previous speaker laid emphasis on the necessity of having decentralised industries and cottage industries. This morning the honourable Minister gave us a picture of how big industries have been working; but we have not been able to have a picture of how the small-scale and cottage industries have been working in the rural areas. The Government of India when they enunciated the industrial policy in April last, wanted to coordinate the cottage and small scale industries with the big industries, and the Government of India accepted a certain responsibility in respect of cottage and small scale industries. Accordingly, a Cottage Industries Board has been set up and last January the Board resolved that a Central Training Institute be started, an Emporium be started in Delhi, and a cottage industries journal be published. These are steps in the right direction no doubt. But, I am sorry, Sir, that the progress has been so slow. The recommendation of the Industries Conference was made in December, 1947. The meeting of the Cottage Industries Board was held in January 1949. It took one year to formulate a policy regarding cottage industries; I do not know what practical steps have been taken to coordinate the cottage industries with the big industries. I do not know what has actually been done by the provinces. The honourable Minister told us this morning that he does not like to disturb the autonomy that the provinces are enjoying in respect to cottage industries. In spite of industry being a provincial subject, he has thought it fit, and the Government of India has enunciated a policy that they would do something in the matter of industries. It is necessary therefore that the Government of India must take this matter urgently in hand and do something tangible in the field of cottage industries also.

Last year, when we heard our Finance Minister speaking about the Finance Bill, he emphasised the point that we must take to cottage industries to fight inflation. The honourable the Prime Minister also, when he addressed the meeting of the Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industries, emphasised that point. He said that apart from his conviction as a congress-man, from experience he felt the necessity of cottage industries. I do admit that the Government is aware and that the Government is conscious of the fact that cottage industries should form a very important sector of their industrial endeavours. But, I am sorry that proper attention and proper steps have not yet been taken. I shall take one instance. We have been given to understand that we are importing foreign salt to the tune of one crore maunds and an Experts Committee was appointed to explore the avenues to find where salt could be produced. I know they visited some parts of Bengal where salt can easily be produced and in fact the salt industry in Bengal was a great industry. Bengal used to supply salt not only to the big province when it was undivided but it also exported to many other parts of India. I do not know whether the Experts Committee have presented the final report but what we have come to know is that there are atleast 8,000 acres of land capable of being utilized by the salt industry in one district of Bengal alone and there is a big sea coast still left in Bengal which can also be explored for the purpose. Here is a great necessity of coordination. There are cottagers who used to prepare salt from the very old days. After the cyclone in 1942 the fuel problem has been great and they find themselves in great difficulty to produce salt. The solar evaporation method is not known to them. Government have taken no steps as yet to introduce and to popularise that solar evaporation method among the cottagers. On the one side a big factory may be started in the areas that have already been reported by the Experts Committee and on the other hand these cottagers must be saved and their industry must be saved. Government ought to take immediate steps for these cottagers. Therefore there is great necessity of co-ordinating this big industry and the small-scale industry. Of course, in that part of Bengal, Government have taken no steps for production of salt as yet but if they try to start any big industry there it is of utmost importance that at first steps should be taken to save those cottagers so that they may have their living from that salt that they used to produce. There are other industries which have no competition in the field like the Mat industry. The Mat industry in one part of Bengal is a very big industry and it has very much dwindled. Government may do many things that can revive that industry and a lot of people can be saved from ruin because this industry is dying. I can name many other industries but my only point is that urgent steps should be taken so that there is a proper co-ordination of the industries. I don't know when the institution that is going to be started will take up the research work and when the training work will begin. A sum of 8 lakhs has been provided in the budget. I consider this sum to be too small. An honourable Member has already pointed out that we have provided so great an amount in the budget for improvement of big industries but only 8 lakhs for cottage industries. This is only for the work of the Cottage Industries Board. I plead that the Government should take the matter urgently in hand and see that the Board begins work immediately and greater sums are granted for the improvement of cottage industries.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala (Bihar: General): From the speech which the honourable Minister for Industries has delivered this morning I find that he has given a very optimistic idea of what will happen in the future but his speech is conspicuous by absence of anything which we can achieve immediately with the available resources, available industries and available other materials in the country. The Minister has said that he has got many big schemes in view, e.g., Steel, Penicillin, Telephone and oil making from coal and other things. He said that for these we shall be expecting plants from abroad and then we shall be manufacturing all these things here. One big example and performance of our Government he has given is that of the Sindhy Factory. While discussing the Industrial Policy of the country, one criterion was taken in view and that was that whether it is a nationalised industry or private industry, that the industry runs economically and with the best efficiency possible. If that criterion is absent from any of the industry, be it nationalised or be it private, I think that industry should not receive any encouragement from Government. Sindhy Factory was conceived by the previous Government. It was in 1946 that this scheme was taken up and at that time it was said that there will be production in 1948 of fertilizers. The scheme which was taken up in hand was according to the report of the Technical Mission, to cost us 10,53,00,000 for erecting the factory, building, machinery and everything and this will produce 3,50,000 tons of fertilizer every year. It is now 1949. Uptil now we don't see a pound of that fertiliser. We are importing every year worth 5 crores or fertilisers from foreign countries and if we take that into account, we have imported uptil now 20 to 25 crores worth of fertilizers.

That is twice the cost of the Capital, Block money required for the Factory, but then Sir, it is the time factor that is the most important one in our country at the present time when we require increased production of foodstuffs, and so fertiliser was of great immediate importance, but this project here has exceeded the time limit very much.

Now let us come to the expenditure that has been incurred. A question was put regarding this and the honourable Minister for Industry in his reply in June 1948 said that till now 4.01 crores of rupees were spent, out of which Rs. 0.54 crores on buildings, and Rs. 1.02 crores on machinery. That means, Sir that a total of Rs. 1.54 crores has been spent on capital goods and construction. What happened to the remaining sum? 2.5 crores was not accounted for.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE)

[Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala]

We do not know how or where it has gone, or how it has been spent. No further report has been given or placed before us. The point I am trying to bring forward is that this report of the technical mission said that fertiliser could be supplied at half the cost at which we are importing it from abroad. But even now how much it will cost, we do not know. We do not know what will be the production cost. At the time when the site for this factory was selected at Sindhri, near Dhanbad, there was no question of bringing gypsum from as far away as Jodhpur. Just look at the enormous cost we have to incur in bringing it all the way from Jodhpur to Sindhri and then distributing the fertiliser all over the country.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: At that time the idea was to get gypsum from even a greater distance, from West Punjab.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala: Then Sindhri was a very wrong selection. I should say.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: For that we are not responsible.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala: Even if you are not responsible still a sum of two or three crores of rupees was not much in view of the running cost and consequent increase in cost of production, a different site could have been selected.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: That is a different question.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala: No, that according to me was a very important question. Well, Sir, I was saying that there were other proposals also before the Government at that time, proposals which could have led to production of fertilisers within two or three years. But all these proposals were rejected and this one scheme was taken up. A wrong selection was made in the matter of site for the factory. The cost of production is certain to go up. If our industries are going to be run in this way, our nationalised industries, I do not know where we shall stand.

In the beginning I was saying that there was nothing tangible by which we can say that we shall have production soon in this country. As has been said by so many speakers, the small industries, the cottage industries can produce a lot of things. Indeed there is nothing in our day to day necessary consuming of goods which they cannot produce and which are produced by the big industries. Go to the many resettlement and re-employment sections and areas and you will find people there employed in making so many different things. All sorts of tools and tackles and all materials necessary for small scale industry are being produced there. Our Industry Minister said that there was a conference of the Provinces, and they discussed this matter at that conference. I had expected that apart from the fact, that we had appointed this board and that committee, that in view of the fact that there is so much demand for greater production of consumers goods and in view of the fact that if we had turned our minds towards cottage industries and production on a small-scale decentralised system, we could have placed before the country and before the provinces concrete suggestions, with some such plans and shown to the provinces how to organise small-scale industries. The immediate problem before the Industry Minister should be how to organise these small-scale industries, and produce more and that has not been done.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala: But if the provinces do not organise these industries, then the Centre should show them the way to do it, and also, if necessary, take up the small-scale industries. That will not be interfering with the provinces at all. The Centre should tell the provinces and give them the target that this much should be produced in your province and ask them why it is not produced there. To say that it is a provincial matter and sit idle is, I am afraid, shirking the responsibility of the Centre. Sir, I was just saying that the immediate problem before our Industry Minister should be to see how small-scale industries can be organised in the different provinces. Let him give the provinces the names of these industries, and how they should be started, and how the products should be stocked and marketed and all that. There are many people—middle class people—who are employed in these small-scale industries. They must be given financial and other encouragement. If this is done, the production is certain to go up. During the war time, it is not through big industries alone that the Government was able to meet the requirements. So we must not be satisfied only with these future big schemes. We have to take recourse to the small industries which can give us immediate result and have to see that the existing industries be they private-owned or nationalised give the maximum result.

श्री आर० एल० मालवीय: मैं एक ऐसे क्षेत्र से आता हूँ, जहाँ कोयले की खानें ज्यादा हैं, और इन कोयले की खानों में मैं इंडियन नेशनल ट्रेड यूनियन कांग्रेस (Indian National Trade Union Congress) के कार्यकर्ता की हैसियत से पिछले दो सालों से काम कर रहा हूँ। कोयले की खानों में जैसी हालत है, उसको देखते हुए यह जरूरी मालूम होता है कि मैं वहाँ की दिक्कतें हाउस के सामने रखूँ, और माननीय मिनिस्टर साहब के सामने वह दिक्कतें पेश करूँ, ताकि वह दूर हों। यह कहने की जरूरत नहीं है कि कोयले की उत्पत्ति हमारे देश के लिये कितनी जरूरी है। जहाजों, रेलों और कल-कारखाने सब उसके बल पर चलते हैं। मगर यदि हम देखें, कि उत्पत्ति कितनी हुई है और इन कल-कारखानों को पूरा कोयला मिला है या नहीं, तब हमें पता लगेगा कि हमें इस बात की बड़ी जरूरत है कि कोयले की उत्पत्ति बढ़े, और कल-कारखानों को पूरा माल मिले, जिससे हमारा उद्देश्य कि देश में हर एक चीज की उत्पत्ति बढ़े, पूरा हो। मैं इस रिपोर्ट के ३२ आइटम्स (Items) में से केवल तीन-चार आइटम्स बतलाता हूँ, जिनसे पता लगेगा कि कारखानों की मांग कितनी थी और इनको कोयला दिया कितना गया है। रेलों की मांग एक करोड़ सात लाख चौत्तीस हजार चौरानवे टन थी, और उनको मिला है अठासी लाख नौ हजार तीन सौ सैंतीस टन। स्टील इंडस्ट्री को (allot) किया गया था तीस लाख चवालीस हजार छै सौ टन और उसको मिला है पच्चीस लाख पच्चासी हजार सात सौ इक्तीस टन। कपड़े की मिलों के लिये मांग थी उन्नीस लाख अड़तालीस हजार आठ सौ चौबीस टन की और उनको दिया गया है सोलह लाख अठानवे हजार अठारह टन। इसी

तरह से सीमेंट फैक्टरीज की मांग थी नौ लाख दस हजार दो सौ टन की और उन्हें मिला है छे लाख सात सौ चौतीस टन। इससे साफ़ जाहिर हो जाता है कि कल-कारखानों को जितनी जरूरत थी उतना कोयला उन्हें नहीं मिला है, जिसकी वजह से उत्पत्ति कम हुई है। इसके साथ ही साथ मैं एक बात और मिनिस्टर साहब के ध्यान में लाना चाहता हूँ। और वह यह है कि कोयले की खानों में जो concessions और जो सहूलियतें गवर्नमेंट ने मजदूरों को दी हैं वह सहूलियतें शायद किसी दूसरी इंडस्ट्री को नहीं हैं। जितना ज्यादा रेट बढ़ाया गया है, मालानों की अच्छी सुविधा दी गई है, और welfare fund खोलकर जीवन की और दूसरी सुविधायें दी गई हैं, उतनी सुविधायें किसी दूसरी इंडस्ट्री को नहीं मिलीं, इस पर भी हम यह देखते हैं कि कोयले की खानों में आये दिन strikes हुआ करते हैं। सन् १९४७ में strikes से एक करोड़ सतालीस लाख और ४८ में स्ट्राइक से ६९,३६,१५३ दिनों का नुकसान हुआ था। मैं यह नहीं कह सकता कि इसमें कोयले की खानों की हड़तालों से कितने दिनों का नुकसान हुआ, मगर जनाव मेरा कटु अनुभव है और मैं जानता हूँ कि कोयले की खानों में हड़तालें हुई हैं और उनसे देश का बड़ा भारी नुकसान हुआ है। अब इसके सबब की तरफ मैं हाउस का ध्यान आकर्षित कराना चाहता हूँ। गवर्नमेंट ने सन् ४७ में बिहार और बंगाल के लिए Conciliation Board बिठाया था और (C. P.) सी. पी. के लिए (Fact Finding Committee) बिठाई थी। इन दोनों ने मजदूरों को जो सहूलियतें दी थीं, इनकी वजह से कोयले का रेट भी निश्चित किया गया था और बिहार में साढ़े तीन रुपया फ्री टन व मध्यप्रान्त में तीन रुपया फ्री टन कोयले का रेट बढ़ा दिया गया था। कोरिया के क्षेत्र में जहां से मैं आता हूँ व जहां कोयले की खानें हैं, वहां यद्यपि गवर्नमेंट की खानें हैं, वहां भी एक रुपया दो आना फ्री टन की तरक्की दी गई थी। मगर इतनी तरक्की मिलने के बावजूद हम यह देखते हैं कि वहां strikes हुआ करते हैं। इसका सबब क्या है? इसकी वजह यह है कि खानों के मालिकान जो एवार्ड्स (awards) कन्सिलियेशन बोर्ड (Conciliation Board) ने या फैक्ट फाइंडिंग कमेटी (Fact Finding Committee) ने दी है और जिनको कि गवर्नमेंट आफ इंडिया ने ऐप्लाई (apply) कर दिया है, उनको वह ठीक तरह से नहीं मानते। मैं अपने क्षेत्र की बात जानता हूँ कि कन्सिलियेशन आफ़ीसर व इन्स्पेक्टर आफ़ माइन्स (Conciliation Officer and Inspector of mines) ने मालिकों को बड़ा

एक बात आखिर में मैं कहना चाहता हूँ और वह मजदूरों के लिये है। मजदूरों को जो सुविधायें दी गई हैं उनका नतीजा यह होता है कि जो रुपया उन्हें ज्यादा मिलता है, उसका उपयोग वह शराब में करते हैं, या जुआ में और या दूसरी-दूसरी वदेमाशियों में। मैं यह अर्ज कर देना चाहता हूँ कि लेबर वेलफेयर फंड (Labour Welfare Fund) की आमदनी जो कोयले के (Loss) के रूप में काटा जाता है, उससे सोशल एजुकेशन (Social Education) के लिये भी खर्च किया जाना चाहिये। अभी तो वह मलेरिया आदि में खर्च होता है। इंडस्ट्री और लेबर दोनों को मिल कर इसके लिये कोशिश करनी चाहिये।

Shri R. L. Malviya (C. P. and Berar States): I come from a place which is predominantly a coal-mining area; and I am working in the coal-fields as a functionary of the Indian National Trade Union Congress for the last two years. Keeping in view the conditions prevailing in the coal mines, I feel duty-bound to place before the House the difficulties existing there and explain them to the honourable Minister so that, these may be removed. It is needless for me to emphasize as to how far the production of coal is necessary for our country. Ships, Railways, and all industrial undertakings are run with coal. But if we see as to how much quantity has been produced, and whether or not, the coal requirements of these industrial undertakings have been met with, then we will find that we are faced with a dire necessity to step up coal production, and make available to the industrial concerns adequate supply of this commodity, and thus achieve our object to increase the production of every article in our country. Out of 32 items of this Report, I would refer to only three or four from which it would be found as to what was the demand of the factories vis-a-vis the quantity of coal actually supplied to them. The demand put forth by the Railways amounted to 1,07,34,094 tons, against which 88,09,337 tons were supplied to them. The Steel Industry was allotted 30,44,609 tons but actually 25,85,731 tons were supplied to them. The demand made by the Textile Mills was 19,48,824 tons, whereas these were supplied 16,98,018 tons. Similarly the Cement Industry demanded 9,10,200 tons but actually 6,00,734 tons were supplied to them. From this it is quite apparent that the industrial undertakings were not supplied the same quantity of coal that was required by them and on account of which there has been a fall in production. Along with this, I would like to mention one thing more for the information of the honourable Minister and that is that the concessions and facilities which the Government have provided to the labour employed in the coal mines has not perhaps been granted to any other industry. Despite the fact that the wages have been considerably increased, more housing facilities afforded and other social amenities provided by starting the 'Labour Welfare Fund', and that no such facilities have been given in any other industry, there are still frequent strikes in the coal mines. During the years 1947 and 1948, 14,717,303 and 6,936,153 man-days were lost respectively on account of strikes. I cannot say as to how many man-days were lost on account of strikes in the coal mines, but, Sir, it is my bitter experience and I know that there have been strikes in the coal mines which have adversely affected the country. Now I would like to draw the attention of the House to the causes leading to such strikes. During the year 1947, the Government had constituted a Conciliation Board for Bihar and Bengal and in the case of C.P. set up a Fact Finding Committee. After taking into account the facilities which were given to the labour as a result of the recommendations made by these two Committees, the price of coal was fixed, and it was increased at the rate of Rupees three and a half and Rupees three per ton in Bihar and C.P. respectively. Even in the case of the Korea mining area from where I come, the rate was increased by Rs. 1/2/- per ton, although the Government have got their own collieries there. But in spite of all this increase in the wages, we find that still there are strikes. What are the reasons for this? This is due to the reason that the colliery-owners have scant regard for the awards given both by the Conciliation Board and the Fact Finding Committee which the Government of India have accepted and made applicable. I know the case of my own area where the Conciliation Officer or Inspector of Mines tried his best to impress upon the Colliery-proprietors the necessity of compliance to the award. But in spite of their best endeavours, they refused to accept it and there are so many other things to which they have not agreed. I am constrained to say that big persons who do not honour the Award are men like M/S. Karam Chand Thapar and Birla. I would like to submit that none of the efforts so far made by the labourers to get the award implemented have fructified. This is due to the reason that these awards do not envisage any compulsion nor do enjoin upon these proprietors to accept the provisions thereof. Both the Conciliation Officer and the Inspector of Mines approached them. They can only stress upon them and beyond this they cannot do anything, and ultimately what happens is, the proprietors are not amenable to accept this. Sir, I had to say a lot but the bell has rung. Therefore, I would like to say two or three things hurriedly. The most genuine and serious complaint which I have got is against the Office of the Chief Mining Engineer—which is a Government office located at Calcutta. But I am deeply pained to say that the chaotic state of affairs which prevails in this office will not perhaps be round even in any private office. The accounts of private persons are pending for the last so many years—these are not settled at all. The accounts of petty contractors are not settled. The sanction to the contracts is not communicated for months together. The sanction to the supply of authorised commodities at the grainshops is also not properly accorded. This consequently results in discontentment among the labourers and they always keep themselves in readiness for going on strikes. I would quote an instance. During October, 1948, a situation had arisen in the Korea mining area—where the Government have got their own collieries—when the system of the appointment of Cooly Sardars was abolished; and as a result of this the labourers threatened to proceed on strike. I sent a telegram to the Chief Mining Engineer on the 2nd October, and subsequently wrote to him a letter on 4th October, but no reply to this has been received as yet. This letter I had written in the capacity of the President of the Chattisgarh Colliery Workers Federation and a Member of this House. No reply to this even has been given. I am not aware as to what actually happens with the letters addressed by other persons—whether they get any reply or not—at least I was never given any reply. I would like to submit that this is all due to the Officers working in the Office of Chief Mining Engineer, Calcutta. They have reduced the condition of that office to that of a bankrupt's shop. There is none there who can render the accounts or look into the matter at the proper time and exercise proper supervision. All these factors culminate in strikes.

Lastly, I would like to say one thing more, and, that is, in respect of the labourers. The concessions which have been given to the labour often result in their spending the additional amounts thus received by them in drinking, gambling and indulging in other vices. I would suggest that a part of the contributions made towards the Labour Welfare Fund which are recovered in the form of a levy of Coal-cess should also be spent for the social education of the labourers. At present this is being spent on Malaria operations only. Both the Industry and the labour should make joint efforts in this respect.

Shri C. Subramaniam: High compliments and in my view well-deserved compliments, were paid to the honourable Minister for Industries to-day. May I tell you, Sir, the secret of his success and popularity? He took care to consult the Standing Committee attached to his Ministry in all important matters, whether it be a matter of policy or the implementation of a policy. Even before a matter went to the Cabinet for decision, he called us and had our views on the matter, so much so it could not be said later on that the Cabinet had come to this view and therefore we are unable to change it. He has had as many as fifteen meetings of the Standing Committee during the current year, which I think is a record for any Ministry.

The enunciation of a policy, however important and necessary it might be is a comparatively easy matter. But the achievement of a Ministry lies in the implementation of that policy. Viewed from that aspect, the Ministry of Industry and Supply is a grand success. That is my view, having come to know intimately the affairs in that Ministry, being a member of the Standing Committee attached to that Ministry. To-day the control of the Government extends to the entire field of industry. There is control on the import of machinery, there is control on the procurement of raw materials, there is control in the distribution of various essential articles and there is control of prices. But if these controls are to be worked effectively and expeditiously in the industrial field I would commend the suggestion made from various quarters to the honourable Minister, namely the formation of a high power development board consisting of men trained in business and in management. The Civil Service, however efficient it might be, with its training and tradition in red-tapism, in my view is not equal to the task of tackling industrial problems. It is only persons with experience in the industrial line who would be able to deal with the day to day problems which arise in the field of industry.

The next point I wish to touch on is about the working of the cloth control. Even the honourable Minister agreed that there was a certain amount of stagnation of goods in the mills. Sir, I come from a town which is a centre of the textile industry in South India. When I was returning from Madras last week representations were made to me that in one particular mill alone whose paid up capital was about 6 lakhs or so, Rs. 35 lakhs worth of yarn was lying unmoved. That was the case in various other mills also. On an average in Coimbatore about ten weeks of production is lying unmoved. There is the difficulty of finding the finance and not only that they have to meet the insurance charges. Further there is the question of storing them properly. They have to meet all these expenses and they are finding it a great strain. The honourable Minister said that it has now been ordered that if the goods are not moved within a month the millowners could sell them or distribute through other trade channels. But there is a certain lacuna in this. When a certain allotment is made there are various varieties and some varieties could be sold at a profit and some only at a loss. As far as the agent is concerned, the agent who has been nominated by the provincial government, takes the most profitable variety and leaves the variety which would prove a loss to him. Therefore when a millowner is asked to nominate an agent later on, to take those unmoved goods that agent would have to take delivery of the variety which would sell at a loss. I do not know how this difficulty could be met. Perhaps the only way to meet this would be to ask the Government agent to take over the entire allotment or leave it. Of course in the working of this policy there are likely to be some difficulties. For that matter we would find difficulties in any scheme or system.

The cloth control has to be looked from another aspect, viz., control of cotton. You would have seen from the papers that the millowners of the Textile mills at Coimbatore have already given notice that they would have stop production, at any rate they will have to stop one shift at least and give the labourers a partial holiday for want of cotton. This is a very serious matter. In fixing the price of cotton also there has been many inequities. The millowners of Coimbatore say that even at the existing yarn price they could pay Rs. 100 to 115 more than the ceiling price per candy for the local cotton available there.

There is one other aspect which is to be considered: when cotton is controlled, the kapas is not controlled, so much so the mills which are unscrupulous can go into the market and purchase kapas at any rate they like. That means that the control of cotton price is effectively circumvented and that puts the law-abiding mills at a disadvantage.

The next point which I would like to mention is about the handloom industry. Thanks to the control system, at every remote village cheap mill cloth is made available. Therefore the handloom industry is finding itself at a disadvantage. If we want to protect that industry—and that is an industry in which about 2½ million workers are involved and about 10 million are dependent upon that for their living—the only course is to allow that industry to export its products without any restriction. They have a good foreign market but on account of the restrictions imposed they are unable to export the cloth to foreign countries. I know a time limit has been fixed during which unrestricted export could be made but even after this period unless the handloom industry is given unrestricted scope for export, I can tell you, it will not be able to survive.

There are only two more points and then I am done. With regard to the disposals many complaints have been made that there is a lot of stagnation. But if we take a realistic view of it we will find that it is mainly due to the fact that the entire goods have been frozen by the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry. I was surprised to find that not only goods which would be useful for them but even aircraft, wireless transmitters and parachutes were frozen—I do not know for what purpose; and they were not allowed to be sold. It took sometime to release even those things. Unless the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry acts expeditiously and releases goods we cannot blame the officials. We cannot blame the department saying that there is stagnation and that nothing is being done.

In this connection I would like to make one suggestion. The goods have got to be classified into categories—useful articles, likely to be useful articles and articles which would not be of any use to us. Articles which would not be of any use to us should be disposed of expeditiously whatever be the price, because the longer you store it the greater the expense incurred on it. Besides deterioration takes place in those articles. As far as articles likely to be useful are concerned an investigation should be made as to what are useful and those that will not be useful should be disposed of. In fact I know that there is some such scheme in the offing but a decision should be made on the scheme very soon.

The last point is about match factories in the South. About 121 factories in Tenkasi in Tinnevely District have closed down and I also hear that the Mysore Match Factory is following suit because of the competition in the industry and export of this article to Pakistan is banned. Unless as in the case of cement zonal distribution is arranged it would not be possible for the industry to survive.

I hope the Honourable Minister will take these points into consideration and give the necessary reliefs.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C.P. and Berar: General): It is certainly true that the Honourable Minister's speech has removed the edge of criticism or the pointedness of it and it is no wonder that my honourable friend Mr. Tyagi found the wind taken out of his sails. None theless when we hear profuse compliments being paid by a man like Mr. Homi Mody the House and the country gets a bit suspicious.

My first complaint Sir, is with regard to the inadequacy of time to deal with a Ministry of these dimensions. There are so many committees, there is the work they have done and then in addition there are so many boards. If you look at the report copies of which have been provided to us you will find that there are as many as 26 development committees. And these do not coincide with or include the Silk Board, Coffee Board, the Tea Committee, the Tobacco Committee the Cottage Industries Board, and other bodies that have been set up. It is difficult within the time allotted to us even to make an adequate preface to a discussion of an important Ministry like the Industry and Supply. But even so I must to the task. I can imagine how difficult it must be for the honourable Member faced with the work of these committees and all that they stand for to evolve a really co-ordinated plan which will be put forth and executed in the shortest possible time. Having gone through the whole material presented to us I feel I can but barely state my conclusions and my final views about it. I feel that there are far too many committees, for too many boards and there is lack of forceful action about which some of us feel like complaining. I, for one feel that the complaint is justified. An instance has already been given by my honourable friend Mr. Jhunjhunwala as to how a factory like the one at Sindhri has taken inordinately long to come into existence. I also feel that there is no proper co-ordination between the various Ministeries. The Honourable Minister told us that some of the Ministers meet occasionally and that although there is no Planning Board or the Planning Commission in existence they always try to co-ordinate their plans. I think there is much room for improvement in this direction because I find there are schemes worth crores of rupees—hundreds of crores of rupees in fact—which some of the Departments and Ministries are busy formulating and trying to give effect to in an independent and isolated manner. I have not been able to find much trace of the fact that all these schemes are co-ordinated. For instance I may just mention that there is a scheme for land reclamation being formulated by the Ministry of Agriculture. That scheme is likely to cost near over Rs. 150 crores. There are schemes with which our Honourable Minister for Works, Mines and Power is busy. They are also estimated to cost crores. There are electrical factories, tractors, fertiliser machinery, fishing boats and what not that is required. And it appears to me that all these things are going on not as part of a concerted plan of development but in their own fashion unrelated to anything else. Nor is there the intensity of effort or the driving force behind them which it is absolutely necessary there should be. Although after hearing the Honourable Minister's speech one feels that he is earnest about his work and that he has been able to put in considerable energy into the process of industrialisation of India yet I feel it is possible to intensify the work and achieve better results. I would like him to bear in mind that "reconstruction and development are a war in the reverse gear; they should be worked on the very same principles". I am sure nobody in the world is going to wait for our industrialisation. If we delay and take more time than is necessary we will be faced with the same problem as we are faced with in other industries, namely, we will have to maintain our industries at the cost of our people. We will have to ask our people and force them to buy only Indian things even if the foreign things are available for one-fourth or one-eighth of the price. This sort of calamity, Sir, should not be permitted to overtake us. If we want to encourage our own effort and production—we may and should give the Indian effort as much protection as possible. But the necessity for such protection should be minimised by intensified effort and by taking quick action. (Shri B. Das: 'Like sugar.') My honourable friend is perfectly right. That was exactly the instance I had in view but I wanted to save time and it was for this reason that I had omitted the mention of it. There are so many things I would have liked to point out. But for want of time all that I can do is to merely summarise what I feel and what I wish to suggest.

I would like now to take up the question with which I am most familiar and which intimately concerns us the residents of Berar; and that is the price of cotton and the cultivation of cotton. I can assure the Honourable Minister that if he can decide forthwith that the price of cotton will be economical to a cultivator and will be such as to make it worth while for the cultivator to grow cotton that many of his difficulties will disappear. (I can promise him that the deficit with which he is confronted will never be there at any rate not so baffling. The Central Provinces and Berar where I come from is principally a cotton growing area. Provided the agriculturist is assured that he would get a proper price there will not be so much need of importing so much cotton. At the present time the Honourable Minister knows that statistics have been given by no less a body than the Indian Central Cotton Committee itself that the present prices of cotton are unreasonably low. The Indian Central Cotton Committee have passed the same resolution twice, but the Government has yet to awaken itself to the needs of revising and raising the prices. Secondly Sir, is no earthly proportion between the prices of textiles and the prices of cotton. This has been demonstrated with facts and figures which are borrowed from none else but the government departments themselves; and yet I regret my honourable friend has not been able to take steps to increase the prices of cotton. Actually the merchants are paying more than the prices fixed by him. If that is correct and no merchant is a fool that itself shows the true position, viz., that the textile prices are proportionately much higher as compared with the prices of cotton. The textile industry as every body knows, is not running at any loss although my honourable friend Sir Homi Mody might have certain suggestions to make on behalf of that industry. I am sure textile industry is on its proper legs now. We do not want to harm it. At the same time we do not want them to be faced with a lack of supply of cotton. This should be remedied by taking necessary remedial action immediately. If this action is not taken then my honourable friend will I fear not even get the cotton that he is getting this year. He will get much less. In fact, the Berar agriculturist, as I had mentioned before, is absolutely on his last legs and if you do not assist him in the right way by giving him good seed and manure free of cost he will be ruined. If you do this you will get more cotton and there will be no necessity of importing any cotton on such a large scale. We are importing cotton at a rate which we are not prepared to pay to our own people. That is the tragedy of the whole situation. We are importing at an enormously high rate from outside. Our own cultivators are complaining that this is not a rate at which they can grow the stuff and yet, Sir, we have not awakened ourselves to the need of increasing the prices.

My friends tell me that so far as coal is concerned the price has been fixed instead of there being a ceiling price. There is a suspicion, I may tell my honourable friend quite frankly that this fixed price policy in the case of coal has been brought about to protect the Bengal coal which is said to be of inferior quality. I would request my honourable friend to look into this matter.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: The prices were fixed long before I came.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: Then it is time to revise them. Coal in these days of scarcity of fuel has become a necessity of the common man but we find that it is sold in Delhi at Rupees seven per maund. That was at any rate the price I found in the Bengali Market. I thought that at least the Bengali Market would get a lot of coal from Bengal at a cheaper rate.

I wanted to refer to a lot of other questions, for instance the question of private enterprise versus nationalisation. So far as our present state of industrialisation is concerned I feel there is ample scope both for nationalisation as well as private enterprise. In respect of large scale industries for which private enterprise is not prepared to come forward Government should make haste and establish them. While the smaller and medium sized industries may be left entirely to private enterprise. There is also said to be a conflict between cottage industries and industrialisation. Here also I feel there is a lot of room for co-ordination and adjustment. At the present time when we are in need of so many articles of daily use there need not be any fear that our cottage industries will go down or that industrialisation will annihilate them. There is ample room for production through cottage industries and it should be possible for my honourable friend, as indeed he has in mind, to encourage the growth of cottage industries along side the establishment of large scale industries.

I wanted to say a couple of words about the Disposals Policy of Government. Whatever explanation my honourable friend has given I must say frankly it does not satisfy me. Either he or the Defence Minister must stand guilty so far as the disposals policy is concerned. Otherwise they must be subscribing to a tenet that by keeping goods longer they improve its quality. There are tons and tons of food stuffs that have gone waste. My honourable friend said when we were asking supplementary questions that there was no inefficiency in his Department, no waste and no loss. I would like to ask him how many tons of food stuffs have gone waste simply because of the disposals policy and in not disposing it in the proper manner and at the proper time.

The whole market is full of them when it is utterly spoilt. They should have been the first articles which should have been disposed of. Similarly about textiles. What to speak of vehicles? There was a time a couple of years back when there were no vehicle available. The whole country was clamouring for cars and buses. And yet we found thousands and thousands of vehicles standing in the rain year after year with nobody to look after them. Even if the two Honourable Ministers who sit near each other had given these vehicles to some people or the other they would have served a highly useful purpose without detriment to any one. And if this Government did want them they always have the power of taking anything from anybody. They have recently taken over for the Hyderabad crisis motor cars and jeeps that belonged to private individuals because they wanted them for the necessities of the State; they could have done absolutely the same thing so far as all these vehicles standing in Deolali and elsewhere were concerned. They could have been put on the road and could have been utilised by the people and they could have been utilised by the Defence Ministry or the Industry and Supply Ministry if and when they needed them.

Sir, I am afraid I do not like the way in which democracy or parliamentary Government is being worked by us. I feel very strongly that there should be more time and better opportunity to ventilate the peoples grievances so that the feeling may not grow that those in authority are themselves the public opinion and therefore there is no use of listening to anybody. It is necessary in order to educate public opinion that there should be more time for Members to speak; otherwise before we come to the point, the time is over. You are in a haste. Of course, Sir, it is not your fault. Probably it is nobody's fault. But the fact remains. There is also a somewhat humorous suggestion made by some of our friends. The suggestion is that—we are now speaking only according to the list and we have to wait for our names to be called—but in days to come the Chief Whip will give us only transcribed manuscript to read out and then ask us to go home.

Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo (Madhya Bharat): I offer my heartiest congratulations to the honourable the Minister of Industry and Supply. His morning speech was so lucid, clear and impressive that it has disarmed most of the criticism against his Department. A young man like me feels much gratified and elated when he hears a national Minister of his country give him a picture, in which not only for the day but for the future also, he shows a very bright and rosy picture and says that we have turned the corner, and that our industrial that we can be proud of that achievement. As a representative from an Indian progress is put on right lines so that we will be industrialised very soon and State, I feel all the more that we must make haste in that direction.

We people in the Indian States are much grateful to our honourable the Deputy Prime Minister for his great achievement of consolidating and unifying the Indian States. By achieving that great task he has brought the down-trodden people of the Indian States on par with the provincial people or on par with other people living in this vast country. But when we see that there is a little lack of co-ordination, lack of such treatment which we expected so far as the industrial policy or other economic policies are concerned, we feel a little constrained that we must in all humility complain to you that this way it does not help us in the Indian States.

I would like to say a few words on quotas. As regards the allocation of quotas from the Industry and Supply Department, we feel that a fair deal is not being meted out to the Indian States. I come from Madhya Bharat and in Madhya Bharat since the formation of the Union, that is the 18th June, 1948, we have not received the cement quota nor have we received the iron and steel quota. Whatever used to be the iron and steel quota for all the 22 States individually, in the Madhya Bharat it has been not allotted to us now. Whereas formerly the quota used to be 650 tons now only 495 tons have been allotted. On the one hand our great Deputy Prime Minister has consolidated our States and allowed us to take the advantage and share the benefits of our joining the Indian Union, on the other hand we see that even our due quota is reduced! The reason given is lack of co-ordination in certain Departments of the Government of India, particularly the Transport Department. The reason is lack of wagons. But here too I have got a confession from a Government officer who says that whereas private individuals can get the wagons the Government officials cannot. Any way, most humbly I would like to draw your attention to this fact with the confidence that this will be remedied very soon.

I am further glad that much has been done or is being done for the improvement of the handloom industry. But I would like to point out that the handloom industry can be divided into two parts; one which utilises the hand-spun yarn and the other which uses not the hand-spun yarn but the mill made yarn. In this respect I would request you to be very careful about one thing that the yarn is distributed in the rural areas according to their needs and that it does not go in the black-market.

As regards controls, according to the dialect in my part of the country, control is called kanth rog which means disease of the neck. I agree corruption is there in controls but one thing can be done and that is that the human touch which the honourable Minister possesses in abundance could be imparted to some extent in the control authorities there; if this is done I think 70 per cent. of the troubles will be removed and only 30 per cent. will remain. For that too, if a little industry is put in the officers there and a check is put on the evil practices there, I think that 30 per cent. also can be removed.

As regards salt which is an essential commodity of human consumption and we struggled hard against a foreign Government for the removal of the excise duty on salt under the leadership of the Father of the Nation Mahatma Gandhi, and other leaders like our present Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister. But today we find ourselves in a very difficult position that salt has become scarce in the rural areas. I would request the honourable Minister to allocate a certain quota for rural areas just as he has done in the case of iron and steel where he has allotted a certain quota for agricultural purposes. In the rural areas salt is consumed by the cattle as well, but what to talk of the cattle when it is not given even for human consumption? Also, there is a huge disparity in prices on the border areas of one Union of States and another Union or a Province. You say that you have been doing all that is possible. I do not deny that. I have full confidence in you, but this is the only place and you are the only person to whom I can go and complain about; otherwise there is no use.

So far as the allocation of these quotas is concerned, you are following a policy of carrying coal to New Castle. If cloth is produced in one place, that cloth is not given to that region but is sent to some other region and another cloth is brought from other regions to that region. I will give you the case of cement. We are producing cement at Bamor in Madhya Bharat, but the Bamor cement is not given to Madhya Bharat but to some other region. Similarly in salt, salt produced in Dharangadhara in Saurashtra is not given to the neighbouring areas but to U.P. and Bihar and similar is the case with salt from Sambhar and other places. I can understand that this may be the policy chalked out not by the present national Government but by the previous foreign Government, but it is high time that it is revised in such a way that the disparity and inconvenience are removed as soon as possible. We see that our basic industries are being carried on towards nationalisation lines, but we see that chemical industry which is another necessity is not being developed in any way. Certainly sulphur drugs, penicillin and some other things are being developed here, but other things are not being developed in the same way. Medical aid is a primary necessity of human life and majority of people in India are from rural areas, so if a little attention is paid to the development of our Ayurvedic medicines, I think much will be achieved.

As regards controls, I wish to point out that in regard to iron and steel and cement the stockists are not nominated by provincial or State governments, but are nominated by the Controller at Calcutta. He does not know the antecedents of the local dealers and these people do not care for the provincial or state governments because they are appointed by him. I think in that respect a little more co-ordination and consultation with provincial and state governments is necessary.

As regards coal, we see that because we cannot supply coal to the general people, vast jungles are being cut down and the wood is converted into charcoal. We hear that forests are our wealth and they must be preserved at all costs, but due to lack of attention in this matter these forests are being wasted and destroyed.

As regards disposal, I would say that the criticism going on in the public is too much. But I am sure that the honourable Minister for Industries and Supplies is himself conscious of the defects and shortcomings of this branch of his Department and he has stated in his speech that he will look into these things and mend them. I have every confidence that this will be done.

As regards cotton, there are restrictions on its movement from one part of the province to another and also from one province to another province or one Union of Indian State to other Unions. On account of these things, there are very great difficulties in developing industries.

One thing more, and this is an important thing on which I would like to lay stress. There are so many potentialities and chances for industrial development in the Indian States. The British Government for their own political purposes did not give due attention to this subject. I expect, not only I expect but feel confident that our National Government will try to explore ways and means and send their technicians and experts to the States to look into their industrial development and what possibilities there are. I know of places where cement industries can be started easily and also places where cotton grows in abundance but there are no mills. There mills can be installed and many things can be done.

Shri R. K. Sidhya: I have very little time at my disposal. So I will hurriedly give some figures relating to disposals which are very interesting in this connection. When the British left they left with us Rs. 233,73,70,572 worth of goods—book value. We know how scandalously managed was the disposals under the British Government. They took away the best machinery, best aeroplanes, best motor trucks, best motor cars, for a song. I have been putting interpellations on this subject and this session it was disclosed that one plane was sold for Rs. 25,000 whereas its value was Rs. 2 lakhs, and an European who was responsible for it has absconded. In another transaction the British Government sold away 3,000 motor trucks worth about Rs. 7,500 each for Rs. 2,500. Now what is the position? Up to January 1949 we have made sales of Rs. 154,43,23,375. That leaves a book value balance of Rs. 49,30,47,002. But what is the actual position? While book value sale is Rs. 154 crores, the actual cash sale is Rs. 85,06,82,043; in other words, a definite loss of Rs. 69,36,41,527. I do not know what remedy the Minister has got for this loss of Rs. 69 crores brought about fraudulently by the British Government in the book value. This is as far as the British goods are concerned.

As regards the American surplus, I really cannot understand what the total amount is. The honourable Minister in his booklet supplied to honourable Members says that up to end of December 1948 we have disposed of goods worth Rs. 64 crores, but he could not enlighten us about the amount actually left by the Americans. It however appears that it was something like Rs. 224 crores—book value. There is one consolation in the American goods. I find that under an agreement with the U.S.A. up to 50 million dollars, value of goods sold, come to us; there will be no charge to U.S.A. Over and above 50 million dollars, half will remain with us, and the other half would not be claimed by U.S.A. but will be disposed of according to the decision of Government of India. I will quote the speech made by the honourable Minister in the last session. This is what he says:

"In fact, the agreement reached between India and United States is, whatever is sold up to 50 million dollars will remain with India. The U.S.A. will have no claim whatsoever up to 50 million dollars. Whatever is sold beyond 50 million dollars, half of it will go to U.S.A. and half will remain with India. Now the value of the half which will go to the share of the U.S. Government will not be taken to U.S.A. but will be spent on some purpose which will be beneficial to India in consultation with the Government of India.

"We have already sold American stocks worth more than 50 million dollars and my information is that the share due to U.S.A. is somewhere between 5 and 6 crores of rupees in other words, this amount which is bound to increase in the months to come is available for use in India for a certain beneficial purpose."

Now I want to know from the honourable Minister as to what beneficial measure—betterment of industry or labour—he has devoted this money for. Where is that money shown? I have seen the Budget receipts and I do not find any entry, except perhaps if it is included in "Miscellaneous". I should like to know where this money is credited and what happened to it. What are the beneficial items on which it has been spent and how much has been spent or has it been kept in reserve. What is the position? I want to know the exact position. At least as far as this matter is concerned, I may tell him that we are spending 1,10,44,000 Rupees on the salary of the staff of the Disposals Department. I would urge on him, if we are to go on in this manner, where will this lead to. I can tell him there are thousands of articles in Bombay which are unsaleable. There are thousands of scarfs which were meant for military purposes whose book value is Rs. 3-2-0. They cannot be sold for even two annas. There are neck ties, thousands in numbers whose book value is Rs. 3 and I am told they cannot be sold for even few annas each.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: No one uses neck ties nowadays.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Yes, in that case it is better they should be disposed of soon. Why do you keep them? Why are you keeping them and incurring overhead charges? If you keep them, you have to have a godown and keep a number of men to look after the goods and pay them salary. My complaint is that there are so many articles which are unserviceable. I can give the instance of the naval articles which the naval people do not want. I mention the instance of electrical goods which are of 110 volts, and commercially they are not wanted. There are millions of buttons which the naval people do not want. Dispose them so that heavy overhead charges which are growing every day would be saved. I would therefore suggest to the honourable Minister to fix a date for closing this department; say, before the end of 1949, all these goods must be disposed of.

As far as the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry is concerned, I do not know from where my friend Mr. Shiva Rao brought the figures the other day that it was only a few thousands Rupees of goods that the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry purchased. My information is that from October 1947 to January 1949, the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry has purchased goods from the Disposals of the value of 1,13,84,000 Rupees, of which textiles alone account for 76 lakhs of rupees. I think that information was not correct. The Defence has purchased goods worth Rs. 20 crores. There is a ban that before disposing of any goods, the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry should be consulted, that the Defence Ministry should be consulted and that the provincial Governments should be consulted. My point is this. They take a lot of time in answering the enquiries. I would request the honourable Minister to screw them up that they must give their decision without delay. Unless he fixes the time limit, these people will never come to any decision. We know their wheels move slowly. I would like the honourable Minister to see that a dead time line should be fixed for the disposal and this sum of Rs. 1,14,00,000 spent on staff, should at least be saved. Whatever be the book value and whatever be the sale value of the goods, and whatever the loss: at least dispose of all materials, so that this sad chapter be closed once and for all. As I said already, I would like to know the latest position with regard to the receipts from disposals, that I have raised, where the money has gone, is it credited somewhere, or is it reserved or earmarked.

About the manufacture of salt, several of my friends have spoken. I have also received a copy of the representation which has been presented to the honourable Minister that the Darangadhra Salt industry is now producing large quantities of salt, that some zonal region has been fixed and that about 50,000 tons of salt is lying in stock since long, but no arrangement is made for removal. These people used to supply to Bihar and U.P., that they have now been asked to supply to different places with the result that neither Bihar nor the other people are getting the salt and the salt is lying there.

Another factor, Sir, a representation has been made by the Gandhi Irwin Salt Manufacturing Association in Tuticorin a copy of which has been sent to me which is really worth considering. It says that under the Agreement and under the recent communique issued by the Government of India in April 1948, anybody who had only ten acres could manufacture salt in pans or by boiling brines. I understand that another communique has been issued recently whereby this concession has been withdrawn. I would like to be enlightened whether that is correct. The communique says, "with reference to the press note dated 23 April 1948, it is further clarified that if more than one small factory of less than ten acres are grouped in a particular area and the total acreage exceeds ten acres, the manufacturers shall have to get a licence before they can go on manufacturing salt in the said area and they will be subject to the regulations governing the licensing of factories." Formerly, no licence was issued for 10 acres and under; nor did they come under the Factory laws. I would like to know if this is true. It would be breach of the arrangement that had been arrived at.

I should like to refer to one point before I sit down. I fail to understand why there should be dearth of salt. I have some knowledge of production of salt in Karachi. It is a very simple process of manufacturing. A canal from the sea has to be constructed and in a natural process in pans, it could be manufactured by ordinary persons. Karachi was producing best white salt. Every fortnight a chartered steamer used to carry that salt to Calcutta. We have got miles of sea shore in Bombay, Kathiawar and Madras. No heavy expenditure is required for the manufacture of salt. Why not introduce this simple process and produce salt at once? This simply surpasses my comprehension. I do not know where the difficulty is. If we had no sea shore, I can understand. Madras has got a very long sea shore; similarly Bombay and Kathiawar. I would request the honourable Minister to bear this in mind and see that sufficient salt is produced and not depend upon imported salt.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: I am thankful to the members of the House for the general support extended to my ministry. I welcome the criticisms which have been made. Many of them are based on insufficient information. I am sure if I had the time, I shall be able to satisfy the members with regard to most of them.

With regard to some of the matters which have been raised, I would like to take them together instead of dealing with each point individually. I shall take first Mr. Jhunjunwala's remarks about Sindhri. This is one of his hardy annual. I thought from what I had said this time, at any rate, there will be some appreciation from him if not from anybody else. Now, what is the position with regard to the Sindhri factory? When we came into office on 15th August 1947, the progress of construction made at Sindhri—I have calculated—came to about one-fortieth of the total project. Today, we may claim that we have completed about three-fourths of the construction. If Mr. Jhunjunwala, in spite of this, says that this being an industrial undertaking directly under Government, Government have failed to produce any results, I can only feel sorry for him.

With regard to the actual cost of construction, obviously, it has gone up by nearly about six or seven crores on account of the increased cost of plant and machinery and also the general rise in the cost of living. Today, we are importing fertilisers and we are paying about Rs. 300 per ton. Even taking into account the higher cost of production, which has become more or less inevitable, I expect that we will be able to sell fertilisers from our factory at the rate of Rs. 200 per ton, which will be Rs. 100 less per ton than the imported price, which comes to five and a half crores a year.

With regard to gypsum, undoubtedly, the area was fixed by the previous Government; we are not responsible for the site. But I do not want to be unfair to the previous Government either. I have gone through the records. It appears that various considerations were taken into account. There was the question of availability of coal, of power, of gypsum. Taking all things into consideration, apparently, the previous Government decided to situate it in some part of Bihar. Of course, whether it could have been sited elsewhere or not, is a matter which is very difficult for me to answer. I have invited Mr. Jhunjhunwala that he should personally visit that area and see how the work is being done and if there is anything which is open to objection, where improvements could be effected, I shall be the first person to accept suggestions coming from any quarter. I hope it will be possible for Mr. Jhunjhunwala to accept my invitation, at least before the next budget discussion takes place.

Next, I shall take up the Disposals. I thought I had explained the position sufficiently clearly. We did pass through very difficult times since 15th August, 1947. I am not blaming the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry; far less can I blame the Defence Ministry. Circumstances took such a turn that a ban had to be imposed on the sale of goods. That ban has now been withdrawn and I have said that according to our present calculations, we will be able to dispose of at least 75 per cent. of our stores in the course of 1949. Mr. Sidhva asked about the huge amount of money which is being spent every year—1-1/2 crores. Perfectly true, but he being a master of facts and figures, why did he not take the care to inform the House that since we came to office, the expenditure has been reduced by nearly a crore of rupees. It used to be 2-1/2 crores and now it is 1-1/2 crores. I feel it stands, at any rate, to the credit of this Government that we have reduced the annual expenditure by a crore of rupees. That would have been a complete statement of facts to which we are accustomed from Mr. Sidhva. Mr. Sidhva rightly drew the attention of the House to the arrangement by which India retains the first 50 million dollars of the proceeds of American Disposals and half of whatever is realised in addition. That is perfectly true and the statement which he read out is entirely correct. The five crores I mentioned would represent the total divisible sum after we have taken the 50 million dollars. About two crores of this has already accrued and that is kept in Suspense Account. Neither the Finance Minister nor myself have transferred it to any other Banking Account. It is there in the coffers of Government.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What about the 50 million which was given free to us?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: That, I believe, has been swallowed by the Finance Minister and it has been added to our revenues. A separate item has been shown with regard to this sum in the Suspense Account. The amount due to the U.S. Government will be spent by them in India for beneficial purposes in consultation with us. The utilisation of our share is a matter on which we have not come to any decision and it will have to be considered not by my Ministry alone but by the entire Government. And speaking for myself and without committing the Government in any way which I have no right to do at this stage, my proposal would be to transfer the entire sum which is at our disposal for the development of cottage industries in India. Instead of frittering this away for various purposes in different parts of the country, we can straight off start a fund which will be exclusively devoted to the development of rural areas, particularly through cottage industries.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: In fact we have absorbed three crores.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: So far as the position of handloom is concerned, we are fully aware that some help has to be given to this industry. Now we decided that we would allow free export upto end of June 1949 to all countries except Pakistan. With regard to Pakistan we fixed it at 50 million yards provided it came out of the total quota allotted to Pakistan. I received representations from various parts of the country that on account of this restriction it has not been possible for any handloom cloth to go to Pakistan because Pakistan is not prepared to take anything within its allotted quota of mill-made cloth. For this reason we have now decided that this 50 million yards of handloom cloth will be allowed to go to Pakistan outside the quota fixed for that country. But here I would sound one note of warning. I have told the representative organisations of Handloom industry and particularly I have impressed upon Professor Ranga who has very often discussed this matter with me that while no doubt Government will do everything possible to allow export of handloom cloth in sufficient quantity, we must now evolve a scheme whereby more of handloom cloth may be produced which will be usable in India. It is no use the handloom weavers saying that they can produce only lungis which will be usable in Pakistan. After all this country also wants cloth. We are having cloth shortage in many parts of the country and it will be desirable for the handloom industry not to come to us every year and say that there is a large accumulation of cloth which is unusable in India and therefore we should allow it to be exported. We should devise the scheme in such a way that while some quantities will be exported in any case, a larger quantity should be available for use by the people of this country.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Will anything be done towards production of Khadi?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: So far as Khadi is concerned, in the new Textile Advisory Board which I have appointed I have included representatives of producers of Khadi, and I have suggested to them that they might give us a scheme which will enable Government to make an experiment in some selected areas so that production and distribution of Khadi may be popularised. But of course as the honourable Member knows the difficulty is, that this production is not economical, and without some sort of subsidy you cannot compel people—unless they voluntarily wish to use Khadi—to purchase it. But I have asked them to give me a scheme which I shall be prepared to consider at any rate for the purpose of making an experiment with regard to particular areas.

Now with regard to cotton Dr. Deshmukh has rightly spoken about the serious position. But here I would ask the honourable Members of the House to bear one thing in mind. No doubt those who have spoken have spoken genuinely in the interest of the cultivators but we often find much crocodile tears being shed for cultivators by middlemen and exploiters who made crores and crores during decontrol period. Now what is the position today? We have not fixed any price for kapas. Kapas is completely decontrolled. Even in C.P. and Berar Kapas is selling at a fairly high price. I am told it is selling at 300/- whereas the price of cotton which we have fixed should not justify its sale beyond 250/-. The control price relates to cotton which after being ginned is sold by the merchants. Here there is no central control of cotton. Under the present law the Central Government cannot issue any legal orders. We may request the provincial Governments to pass uniform laws in relation to all provinces. That is a very unsatisfactory state of affairs but unfortunately that is the constitutional position. With the approval of the provinces, we propose to come up before the next session of the Constituent Assembly for amending the Constitution and making cotton a centrally regulated commodity. But meanwhile we have suggested to provinces that they should pass cotton licensing orders and believe me it has taken the Central Government nearly three months before all the provinces could be persuaded to pass one kind of law which will be applicable throughout India. My young friend spoke for the Indian States. I quite appreciate his anxiety and enthusiasm but there were States which declined to pass these orders and only after I could get pressure to be put upon them by the States Ministry, they came and passed the orders.

Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo: I want that there should be no pressure from the States Ministry but your own pressure should be there.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: Sometimes my pressure is not sufficient and Sardar Patel's is necessary. With regard to the provinces, to-day I got a telegram from Pandit Shukla that C.P. has promulgated the licensing order which will come into force from 15th March. Now the various provinces in India and the States have the jurisdiction to requisition cotton from merchants wherever they consider such requisition necessary. But we cannot say that whatever was done, has very much touched the cultivators. Mr. Karimuddin has gone away, but he also shed crocodile tears about the sad plight of cotton cultivators. He also said that production of cotton has gone down because of control order. That is a most amazing statement. It could not have gone down. There was no control previously and then cotton was selling at exorbitant prices. The cotton available now was sown long before the control order was promulgated. I agree with Dr. Deshmukh that before the next session starts, the Government of India must finalise their policy. I intend to invite representatives of provincial governments, also merchants and cultivators so that after a full discussion we may fix a price, a reasonable price, which will be fair to the cultivator, and also will be just to the consumers in the country.

Dr. Deshmukh referred to coal prices. I am sometimes accused of many things. But I never knew till now that the coal prices fixed were benefiting specially Bengal. He may believe me that this is the first time that I learn, that that is the position. I have not fixed the coal prices. They were fixed long ago and on expert report. Now the position is that we have coal prices fixed at certain levels. They are not ceiling prices. There have been representations made to the Government of India with regard to coal for brick-burning—low-grade coal—suggesting that we should sell them at lower prices. There were certain collieries who are prepared to sell the stocks at lower prices. But that represents only about five per cent. of the total coal production of the country. So Dr. Deshmukh should understand—he is not easily misled—that this agitation is going to benefit no large portion of the industry but only five per cent. of it. We have also received representations from the smaller collieries that if we allowed coal to be sold at lower prices, the small collieries would go out of existence. I was at one time in favour of removing the fixed prices and turning them into ceiling prices. We discussed it in the Cabinet, and we decided that it is an unsafe step to take at present, when the whole future of the coal industry is under examination. The present level of prices is under examination. We are rather late in giving effect to the recommendations of the Indian Coal Fields Committee. We must have a National Coal Commission appointed which should be able to take complete charge of the coal industry. This is a matter which cannot be dealt with departmentally. For that purpose legislation is necessary. I am hoping that by the time the next Session of the legislature sits, we shall be able to place before the House a comprehensive Bill to regulate and control the production and distribution of coal in the whole country.

With regard to salt, I know that Mr. Sidhva is an authority on this subject. And without disclosing any secret I may say that I am going to appoint an Advisory Committee on salt and I am going to put Mr. Sidhva on it so that his knowledge and experience may be available not only to this House but to the whole of India. Now, with regard to salt, we have got a zonal scheme of distribution. This has come into effect from 1st January, 1949. This zonal scheme has been undertaken mainly at the request of the Transport Ministry which told us that unless we helped them to rationalise distribution of salt throughout the country, it was impossible for them to help. We consulted all the provinces. I did not want this scheme to come into operation without taking the view-points of the various provinces, and also the States. Practically all of them said that we should go ahead with the scheme. So we have given effect to it for the last two and a half months. One net result of it is that to-day every day about 80 wagons or more of salt are moving throughout the country than what was the case before the zonal scheme came into operation. It may be that some merchants have been affected, or that there is some accumulation in some areas. But we are watching the situation very carefully, and next time when we revise the scheme, we shall certainly see to it that all the defects in it are removed. If there are large accumulations, say for instance at Dharangdhara or Bombay, some special orders should be issued for their proper distribution. I have not seen the Tuticorin memorial, but if the Tuticorin people are the friends of Mr. Sidhva, I may tell him that much of Tuticorin salt is bad, and people refuse to accept it. That salt ought to be improved. I have said that instead of importing salt, I shall give preference to salt manufactured in India, and we are prepared to do so, provided the salt is acceptable to the consumers. It was remarked that we have not made any progress since last year. In salt alone, I may tell the House that production has increased by more than twenty per cent. from 1947 to 1948, and I thought some appreciation would be forthcoming. But probably the gentlemen do not eat Indian salt and so do not appreciate the result achieved. It is the policy of Government to see that India should be self-sufficient in salt by the year 1951. We are going ahead with our schemes. We have already got two interim reports and I hope to have the final report also ready very soon. Members of the House know that India on an average consumes less salt, than other progressive parts, in the whole world. We used to consume per capita 12 lbs. But now we have increased it to about 14 lbs. We hope to supply much more, if the transport position improves.

Some suggestion was made by Mr. Das, "Why not do something for manufacture of salt in Bengal?" Here, I should like to impress one matter on Members of the House. They cannot expect the Government of India to take up every industry throughout the country, either finance it or organise it. On the one hand, there is the cry, do not nationalise. On the other hand, Government are asked to do everything. We cannot have it both ways. Government are prepared to give every possible help. I have told the West Bengal Government that they should set up a concern with the help of experts for the purpose of producing large quantities of salt in Midnapore area. Last time when I was there, I found certain schemes had already been evolved, and I hope something will be done in that respect soon. So far as the States are concerned, I agree that we should be able to give equal treatment to their requirements just as we are doing with regard to the Provinces. In future we will consider the point of view of the States in arranging the allotments. Of course, there are difficulties like transport, and distribution arrangements into the details of which I do not propose to enter here.

One question was raised, and that was about our import and export policy. That is a matter which will be dealt with by my honourable friend the Commerce Minister when the debate on Commerce Budget takes place. But speaking as the Minister in charge of Industry, I would just say one thing. It is the duty of the Government to see that the import policy does not operate in such a way as to hit hard or kill Indian industries. But at the same time, Indian industries will never be able to develop if they continuously desire to rest on artificially restricted imports. Some one mentioned the difficulties of bicycles. So far as bicycles are concerned, I gave the figures some days ago. We produce in India to-day only about ten to twelve per cent. of the total requirement. The prices of imported bicycles are much higher than those manufactured in India. If even then it is said that we should not allow the import of bicycles, that obviously is a matter which it will be very difficult to accept. One other point has been accepted, and the honourable the Commerce Minister will no doubt explain it in greater detail. Whenever any protection is asked for for any industry, it should be referred to the Tariff Board,

[Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee]

After there is a full enquiry made by the Tariff Board it will be the policy of the Government, wherever possible to act in accordance with such recommendations. If during the interim period it is felt that without waiting for the Tariff Board's recommendation some positive steps should be taken even then the Commerce Ministry and Industry and Supply Ministry will sit together and consider each case on its merits. We are constantly re-examining and revising the lists and I am sure with the co-operation of the Commerce Ministry we will be able to evolve a system which will be to the good of the industry as a whole.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Firstly, may I ask, whether the Hindustan Aircraft Factory, Bangalore is going to work under the joint control and co-ordination of the Industry and Supply and Defence Ministries in view of the importance of aircraft for defence; and secondly, whether there is a proposal to effect economies in this Department by shifting offices like the Directorate of Statistics and similar offices from Simla to Delhi?

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: My friend has taken me in one breath from Simla to Bangalore. But I shall try to answer him.

So far as the Hindustan Aircraft factory is concerned, certain useful suggestions were made by Mr. Krishnamoorthy Rao. There was one mistake in his statement. At present the number of workers who are engaged to-day is not 3,000 but 6,000. We have been able to increase our total output of work and we have been able to engage more hands. We expect to receive larger orders from the railways for the building of railway coaches. We have acted according to programme. I just asked Dr. Matthai, who was then the Railway Minister, whether any announcement was made that 300 coaches would have to be delivered last year. That is not correct. We had orders of 100 only. We manufactured them according to programme. Even now there is some idle capacity left and the question is how to utilise it. One possibility may be that we will allow small industries to grow up in the place, but experts who have visited the factory have spoken against it. They say that our object should not be to start small things and thus compete with others. Our object should be to concentrate on producing aircraft and also some big subsidiary things, like railway coaches. I may tell the House of one scheme which I have in contemplation, namely, the building up of motor-bus bodies. We are in touch with some big manufacturing firms in England, and I believe we shall be able to utilise much of this idle capacity for producing motor-bus bodies and if we get an additional order from the Railway Department, that will absorb much of the idle capacity.

So far as Shri Kamath's question is concerned, there is no question of placing the factory under the joint control of the Defence Ministry and the Industry and Supply Ministry. That factory is now being controlled by a private company, of which the two shareholders are this Government and the Government of Mysore. The representatives of the Government of India are Mr. J. R. D. Tata and myself; and the representative of the Government of Mysore is Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar. There is no question of the Defence Ministry coming in. But we have two technical committees there. We have a committee consisting of representatives of the Railway Ministry, of the Communications Ministry and of the Defence Ministry, who examine the programme which we make and give us a report as to the progress made. Separate to that, we have a special technical committee, represented mainly by the Defence Ministry. In fact, the Defence Ministry has sent a special officer who is sitting there at the factory, and he is watching the progress of the work. They are constantly in touch with its activities and whenever necessary I myself meet the representatives of the Ministries concerned in Delhi. In this way we are trying to co-ordinate our activities.

With regard to the offices in Simla, the office of the Director of Statistics, we have suggested, should be brought down to Delhi because it interferes with our progress of work. The Economy Committee has made a similar recommendation, but there I shall be in the hands of my friend, Shri Gadgil. I shall have to make him agree before it can be accepted.

I shall only say a few words about the point raised by Mr. Sahu. The fact that I called the first meeting of the Cottage Industry Board at Cuttack showed that I was anxious that a smaller province like Orissa should be given prominence. Mr. Sahu complained about want of cloth in Orissa. He may be surprised to know that Orissa is one of the Provinces that has been asking me month after month not to send mill-made cloth.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: I was complaining about imported cloth.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: That is really a factor which does not count. India is producing 4,000 million yards of mill-made cloth and 1,500 million yards of handloom cloth and we are importing only 50 million yards of cloth. So there is no question of imported goods coming in and being dumped to such an extent that our indigenous industry may disappear.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: I was talking of the rehabilitation of the weavers in Orissa.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: So far as that is concerned, I have offered, and I offer here again as much yarn as Orissa may want, which I shall arrange to be sent to Orissa from Coimbatore and other places. But Orissa is not able to absorb more than it can digest.

I shall conclude by saying this. I have heard some compliments from Mr. Mody and also I have heard some compliments from others. But I would like to say that the policy which the Government of India have accepted is not a policy of sacrificing India's economic or industrial interest to any section of the people. We have not sacrificed the interests of the country to the industrialists. Those who spread such statements outside, either do so deliberately or through ignorance. The policy that we have adopted envisages complete and full control by the Government of India with regard to all the important industries in the country. My friend, Mr. Mody, spoke of the draft Bill which has been prepared. It stands to the credit of industrialists like Mr. Mody, Mr. Birla and Lala Shri Ram, and also to Labour leaders like Mr. Khandubhai Desai and Mr. Ashok Mehta whom we invited to get the benefit of their advice, that they felt that in this national crisis it is the Government and the Government alone who should be vested with those wide powers for the good of the people as a whole. When the Bill comes to you, you will see that the powers the Government propose to take are of a drastic nature. No industrialist need be afraid so far as the present Government are concerned. We do not wish to exercise those powers to the detriment of any section of the people provided they play the game. Why is it that the industrialists have a bad name? It is because of the fear which is in the minds of the people that they may profiteer more than they are entitled to do. But today that question of making larger and larger profits is receding into the background. Many industrialists find it difficult to carry on. If Government are satisfied there will be no undue profiteering, and if labour gets what is its due, if a standard of fair wages is adopted, and if production goes up with the mutual co-operation of all, I am sure there will be none in this country who should object to the policy of the Government of India. We are passing through a period of transition which is truly critical. We do feel that the only solution that lies before us is to increase our production. We may talk about inflation, but unless we can produce more and distribute equitably at reasonable prices so that the mass of the people may be benefited, this Government will have no right to exist as a Government. We are proceeding towards that end. And with that end in view we venture to ask for the co-operation of all industrialists, labour people belonging to all political organisations and also the public generally. Undoubtedly it is not the Government of India alone that can work miracles. We have to work with the machinery which we have in our hands. That machinery needs remodelling. That machinery is not suited always for exercising those large powers which Government desire to take upon themselves. We have also to work through the machinery of the Provincial Governments. When people talk about control, and about blackmarketing, obviously it does not depend only on the officers of the Government or on Government agencies only. It depends also on the standard of morality and the outlook of the people themselves. If there is a determination on the part of people; whatever their politics may be, to act fairly and justly, if we want to save this country in this crisis and do not want to see repeated here China, Burma or Malaya, the only way in which we can act is to maintain industrial truce and to carry on vigorously the policy which we have enunciated, which I feel is fair, just and equitable to all concerned and is intended to serve the best interests of our motherland.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil (Minister of Works, Mines and Power): Mr. Speaker, I am giving as briefly as possible a review of the activities of the Ministry over which I have the honour to preside. I am also giving very briefly what the Ministry proposes to do in the course of the next financial year.

This Ministry is essentially concerned with development, and as such it has to deal with large numbers of men and a large amount of material. This Ministry has a number of sections, such as, the Central P.W.D., the Geological Survey of India, the Indian Bureau of Mines, the Petroleum Division, the Central Electricity Commission, the Central Waterways, Irrigation and Navigation Commission, the Central Board of Irrigation, the Damodar Valley Corporation, and Stationery and Printing. These are some of the main divisions which are under the control of this Ministry. It will be only appropriate if I begin with the Central Public Works Department's activities.

I know, that this Department has somehow or other been associated in the opinions of the public with corruption and occasionally with inefficiency. Having worked in this Department for eighteen months, I can honestly say that to the extent possible for any human being, inefficiency has been largely and substantially curtailed. As regards corruption; I should claim a fair measure of success in putting it down.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Is it so?

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: When we hear all round in the House and outside responsible public men criticising not only the officials but citizens it is a matter for deep consideration, not because it particularly affects a section of the community, but as a matter of fact it is the whole community that is being condemned. Therefore, as I said, as much as was possible in this connection had been done, and if some honourable members in the course of the discussion in the afternoon raise any particular issue or emphasize this, I am prepared to detail the steps that have been taken, and I shall also state what success has followed these measures. But at the same time, I would just appeal to honourable members to consider whether it would be in the best interest of progress to continuously hammer at these people who have been working, most of them honestly and loyally; or whether it would not be better to appeal to their better judgment and their patriotism, and at least occasionally to utter a word of cheer and appreciation, so that they may also enlist their energy and effort in the progress of this country.

I do not want to give full details of what this Department has done, but I will take out two instances in which the Central Public Works Department has distinguished itself very well. I will refer to the construction of sixty-five miles of road from Pathankot to Jammu. It was an achievement and as such it has been appreciated all round not only here in India, but those from abroad who know something about road-building and engineering have also appreciated what the much abused and much maligned Central P.W.D. has done. Out of these sixty-five miles of road, nearly fourteen miles were causeways, bridges and culverts. There were innumerable cuttings; and if I had only to give you some idea, you would be surprised to learn that dozens of special trains were ordered, about 96 bulldozers were working, and at one time 40,000 workmen were employed day and night.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C. P and Berar: General): Was not this done only by the Defence Department?

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Just wait and see! In this particular task, there was another feature, and very welcome too, namely the co-operation of two Departments. Two companies of the Defence co-operated in the matter of assembling three bridges, but the rest of the work was done by the Central P.W.D. If it is the intention of my honourable friend, Dr. Deshmukh, to take a little from the credit of this Department, I am prepared to make the whole of it as a present to him, because ultimately we work on the principle of collective responsibility.

[Shri N. V. Gadgil]

Now a high military engineering authority, when I visited this work—and I visited it several times in order to put cheer into our officers and men—told me, 'well' your boys are rather too optimistic and will not be able to complete this work by the 30th June, 1948. I told him that I had ordered them to see that everything was ready and I must get the telegram on the 30th June evening that the car has passed from Pathankot to Jammu and I did get that telegram.

Another example of how things were done fairly, quickly and efficiently was the construction of the Kurukshetra Camp and also the construction of the refugee camp at Jammu. I do not want to give further instances but I am only pleading that if you give the officers a little appreciation they will do much more and in the course of this speech I propose to show that they have done wonderfully well also in other matters.

In the next year's programme the most important matters which this Ministry proposes to undertake are the development of 200 acres of land in the south-west part of New Delhi for allotment to foreign missions in Delhi, laying out of a park and erecting a memorial at Rajghat, a new Telephone Exchange building at Calcutta, Reconstruction work in the Andamans, preliminary work for an alternative road to Kashmir, construction of office and residential accommodation for the new press, the Central Waterways, Irrigation and Navigation Commission and the Central Electricity Commission, which are proposed to be transferred from Delhi and Simla to Nasik, the construction of the building for the Federal Court and additional residential accommodation for members of the Parliament at Delhi.

I know how keen are the members of this House to have fairly good accommodation for themselves. I know that the increase in the number of membership has made it somewhat difficult to find accommodation and good accommodation for all the members. I am quite aware of some inconvenience caused in the matter of maintenance and in the matter of adequate supply of furniture. But all I can tell honourable members at this stage is that as soon as the financial position improves all these complaints will be removed. Apart from this to the best of my ability and to the utmost extent of availability in the matter of accommodation I have given as much satisfaction to honourable members of this House as possible and also to those for whom they occasionally asked for accommodation.

The new construction for the members of this honourable House or rather the successor of this honourable House is based on the assumption that the new constitution will be working early in the year 1951 and the total membership of both the Houses of the Central Legislature would be about 750. For this purpose a new design has been approved, probably it may be called a design based on austerity standards on which all Members are very keen in these days of equality and democracy. I have therefore decided to live up to that ideal, anyway, so far as the houses for members of the legislature are concerned.

In connection with housing innumerable complaints have been made to me about the Estate Office but let me make one point clear, viz., that this Government has not accepted the obligation of giving accommodation to every government servant but short of that all efforts are being made by this Ministry to give accommodation to as many people as possible. At present there are just about 1,600 residential quarters and the number of applicants is 70,000. Before the war the position was with respect to office accommodation that the Central Government offices required just 8 lakhs sq. ft. but in 1948-the figure rose to 60 lakhs sq. ft. The total accommodation now available is just 57 lakhs sq. ft. As regards residential accommodation as I have said already there are at present 1,600 residential quarters and the number of applicants is 70,000. The corresponding figures in 1939 were 700 houses and 1,100 applicants.

The problem now that faces this Ministry on account of this acute situation about accommodation is either it must go ahead with building more or in the alternative remove certain unimportant or subsidiary offices outside New Delhi and the decision of the Government is that those offices which can be conveniently removed from New Delhi may be removed to such places as may be found suitable. In this connection certain places have been visited by our engineers. We have not yet finally come to any conclusion except in regard to three offices which it has been decided to shift to Nasik, which has got a very good climate. Another advantage from the point of view of cost in construction is that in Delhi you have to provide for air-conditioning and central heating, whereas in places like Nasik this expenditure can be avoided.

I have been asked several times the question regarding removing the capital from New Delhi to some other place. All I can say is that the race of Mohammed Bin Tughlak is not yet dead and there are some people who still ask for a change in the capital. But so far as the Government of India is concerned Delhi will continue to be the capital of this country.

An Honourable Member: We want an alternative capital.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Another sentimental appeal was that Delhi has been the grave of several empires.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Cradle.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: For my own part I believe that those empires which were based on force and not on the consent of the people have vanished. This State is not only morally but legally based on the consent of the people and as far as I can see it will continue to prosper and prosper.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): What about the extremities of climate?

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: The extreme cold of Delhi in the winter is balanced by its extreme heat in the summer: so that gives a fair balance. Occasionally as a result of these two extremes some people lose their temper but on the whole I think if it has done good during the last thirty-six years it is bound to do good in the future also.

I shall now come to the next activity of this Ministry, the Geological Survey of India. In 1939 there were just 26 officers and now there are 160 officers. How important is this activity is fairly indicated by the fact that several questions are asked every session about this particular department. However, after the 15th August 1947 innumerable enquiries are made of this Ministry and requests have been received from the various provinces and states for surveys of particular areas, quantitative or otherwise. So great is this enthusiasm that very recently I received a letter from a Sadhu telling me that there is a hill called Hemagiri which contained quite a lot of gold and asking me to send an officer to investigate it. Probably the Sadhu was carried away by the name of the hill. On enquiry I found that the hill contained no gold but chalk. However, the point remains that here is an activity which must be expanded. In the United States of America there are 6,000 Geologists doing all sorts of work in the matter of exploration and mining. In Soviet Russia I am told the number is more than 10,000. Compared with that we are far far behind. However, new expansion is contemplated, and if the honourable members who are on the Standing Finance Committee take to this kindly and if what has been visualized by my honourable colleague the Finance Minister happens, I have no doubt the expansion will soon be undertaken.

Just to give an idea of what this Department did in the last year, besides attending to the work of geological mapping, the field programme of the Geological Survey of India for the current field season includes 211 special investigations. These relate mainly to prospecting for oil, coal in connection with the synthetic petroleum plant, Gypsum in connection with the Sindri Fertiliser Factory, investigations of dam sites, water supply and underground water, and prospecting for minerals like bauxite, iron ore, copper, graphite, mica etc. In the coming year on account of the increased strength of the Department, the Geological Survey of India will be able to undertake a still larger number of investigations. Although the staff had increased from 26 to 160 in certain branches of this particular Department we have not been able to recruit the right type of men. It is therefore necessary that we must find out foreign experts and some have been recruited on the principle that they will be here for a definite period and on terms which we think are reasonable.

Allied with this, in order to develop further the mineral resources of this country we have constituted very recently the Indian Bureau of Mines. Honourable members of this House know very well that in the matter of minerals the Provinces have got concurrent jurisdiction. In order to have some central policy it was decided a few months ago that central legislation should be undertaken and an Act was passed only last September. The Rules under the Act are being drafted. In fact they are ready, and after consulting the Provincial and State Governments they will be finalised and copies of the same will be laid on the table of the House as required by the provisions of the said Act. This Bureau has several functions from collection of statistics and giving information to laying down policy and giving direction, so that our position with respect to this will improve. I may mention to the House that roughly we can divide minerals into four categories: firstly in which we have a sort of world monopoly, secondly in which our minerals can stand a fair competition in the world market, thirdly in which we are self-sufficient, and fourthly in which we have to depend upon foreign imports. About 53 per cent. I am told, of the imports that we receive in this country are from materials which we send abroad. Here is a proposition worth considering. When we lay down a policy it must be such that instead of sending raw materials abroad and importing finished and processed commodities it would be far better that we should develop corresponding industries in this country so that export trade of manufactured articles will increase. In short this Bureau will supply the necessary information, guidance and direction for other Departments as well as for Provinces and States. In connection with this activity this Ministry has also to look after the Indian School of Mines and Applied Geology at Dhanbad. Originally the intake of boys here was just twenty four. We went into this question, appointed a Committee, and the Committee recommended sixtyfour. Immediately we have arranged to take forty-eight and the classes have already started. Here again there has been some difficulty in recruiting the right type of men, and with great difficulty we have succeeded. Our greatest headache is that we cannot offer more than what has been recommended by the Central Pay Commission, and the Finance Department very rightly would not allow us to do that, with the result that private concerns and even private colleges and educational institutions compete in this field. As it happens in many of the cinema companies where the stars are abducted from one company to another it has happened in the case of some of the institutions conducted by the Government also. Here is a proposition worth considering whether there should not be uniformity of pay scales not only in the Governments of Provinces and the Centre but also in private enterprises if we have already accepted the principle of controlling the activities of many of the industries.

In this connection I might state that there is what is known as the Petroleum Division. This division was started during war time and it has continued up till now, and it is necessary that it should continue hereafter also. This division deals with the supply of petrol and petroleum products. We have done our best to secure adequate supply, but there are difficulties such as the non-availability of dollars. But more than that the present position is that we will have enough supply although our demand in this has increased nearly by ninety per cent. in relation to our demand before the war. The only difficulty is about transport. Here again with the co-operation of the Transport Ministry a plan has been drawn by which in the course of the coming eight or ten months about 200 tank wagons from Canada and other countries and about 300 locally manufactured ones will be in commission. When that is done there will be no complaint about inadequacy of supply.

Another small activity of the Ministry is the Explosives Department. I do not think I should take the time of the House with that.

The next of the most important activities is the Central Electricity Commission. Formerly there was the Electricity Commissioner and the Central Technical Power Board. They were combined into one and the present organisation is the Central Electricity Commission. This Commission has to advise the various Governments on the administration of electricity legislation, to assist Provincial and State Governments in the investigation, survey and preparation of schemes, to prepare when required by the Central Government project reports outlining electric power development schemes and to execute them if so directed, to review and lay down for the whole of India standard voltages and practices for generation, transmission and distribution of electrical energy, to conduct experiments researches and propaganda, to collect, maintain and publish statistical data.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: Would it not save the time of the House if those matters which are detailed in this Report are not repeated by the honourable Minister? I think that will give some more time for the other honourable members to speak.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: That is a good suggestion if the assumption that it has been read by all the members of the House is correct. If the honourable Dr. Punjabrao has been as attentive as he apparently seems to be he would have found that a considerable portion of the matters referred to by me in my speech is not covered by this Report.

This Central Electricity Commission does planning and looks after utilization and also the commercial aspect. Everybody is aware that if India is to industrialise more and more, what is needed most is power, and if power is needed there must be some organisation commissioned with the work of direction and research, and planning and execution, wherever necessary. This is exactly the function the Central Electricity Commission is expected to perform. In the course of the last year, Central Electricity Commission did work for the Damodar Valley Corporation and many other projects but what is more important is that two schemes prepared by the Central Electricity Commission in the matter of rural electrification have received approval all round. One is for the C.P. and Berar, for the progress of which I think Dr. Punjabrao is greatly interested.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: Yes, Sir.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: I may point out to him that an area of 1,608 sq. miles containing 800 villages with a population of 9 lakhs will be covered by this scheme which has been accepted by the Central Provinces and Berar Government. Another scheme which was prepared for Assam has been now finally revised and accepted. This will cover 57 towns and important villages in an area of 1,209 sq. miles. It will cost Rs. 45 lakhs initially and Rs. 110 lakhs by the end of the construction. This is what has been done so far as rural electrification is concerned.

Load surveys have also been undertaken and the honourable members of this House know very well that unless there is some plan and some co-ordination there is bound to be lopsidedness one way or the other. So, in order to take a review of the whole position, very recently a conference of power engineers was called and this wider question was thoroughly gone into. We visualized what will be available and what will be the kind of material available, and in terms of resources and technical skill a concrete plan has been drawn so that whatever is uneconomic will be avoided and whatever will be most paying and most urgent will be undertaken.

Another activity of this Department is what is carried on by the Central Waterways Irrigation and Navigation Commission. The honourable members of the House know very well that this organisation is of very recent growth but in the course of the last two or three years I should say unhesitatingly that it has done very good work. Not only does it carry out preliminary investigations, but in one case—in the case of Mahanadi and the Hirakud Dam—it has undertaken the construction of the whole project on behalf of the Orissa Government. I also understand that the Government of Bombay proposes to engage this organisation for the construction of a barrage near Surat and some other projects. These matters are under consideration.

The main line of activity of this organisation is that we go on investigating several projects. When the investigations are complete and the stage for construction has come, those projects are taken which can be adequately financed and the whole idea is that at no time should the country find that it has money but no plans are ready. Investigations are going on continuously. I may inform the honourable House that at present there are nearly twelve projects which are under investigation and the idea is that no Province should be left without a fairly big project. Fortunately for us, the river system in this country is so well dispersed that there is no area which cannot be reached by some appropriate project near about. How huge our potentialities are may be guessed from the fact that today out of the water resources available, we only use 6 per cent. If some of these schemes which are under construction and which are under investigation are completed in the course of the next 20 or 25 years India will be producing 40 million K. W. of power. Today India produces a little less than 2 million K. W. and out of this nearly 50 per cent. is absorbed by four towns.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): In the report you say the total production is half a million K. W.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: I am talking about both hydro and thermal power. The figure half a million refers to Hydral power.

Nearly half of the present power production is absorbed by industries and people living in the four towns of Ahmedabad, Kanpur, Calcutta and Bombay. Our idea is that in the future development, the needs of the rural areas must be given their due share. If as I said all the schemes which are now under construction and investigation are completed, they will be generating 40 million K. W. of power and all these schemes are multi-purpose schemes—water will be available for irrigation, and I think we will be in a position not only to supply enough food even for the growing population of this country, but also we will be in a position to export.

As regards some other schemes such as the Rampadsagar, there has been some criticism in this House. I can only say at this stage that it is not the intention to delay any one of them indefinitely but as soon as the financial position improves those schemes which do not give quicker results but which are ultimately beneficial—on that there is no dispute—will be undertaken.

As regards the Damodar Valley Project which is entirely managed by the Damodar Valley Corporation, I will briefly state that considerable progress has been made. An order for 2,00,000 K.W. Thermal plant has been placed. Designs for the construction of 3 dams, Tilaiya, Konar and Maithan are fairly complete. Preliminary engineering work is also going ahead. Some road survey and other matters have also been completed. Geological survey of a considerable portion has also been made and reports submitted. On the whole, I think things are moving as expected and as has been said very often, this scheme will be completed within the scheduled time.

Another activity is about printing and stationery. Government of India has five Presses. The work has increased so much and especially when the Constituent Assembly or this honourable House is sitting, the work is so much that we have to take help of private presses. In fact, last year work to the extent of Rs. 24 lakhs was placed with the private presses. However, in order to cope with the increase in work, new press machinery has been ordered and we are getting delivery of the same part by part. It has been decided to locate this Press at Nasik.

That sums up the activities of this Ministry. This is just a prosaic account. I know that what has been achieved may not be much in relation to what has been aspired. However, I should say the achievement is a fair dividend on effort undertaken. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: 'Question'). There is more in promise than in performance. I do not want to overstate the activities, but at the same time, it would leave me sad if what my Ministry has done is not appreciated. This is the Department connected with the development of power for industry, water for irrigation and employment all round. When the Mahanadi project is completed, it will be the incoming of Mahalakshmi in that province. When the Damodar Valley Project is completed, it will not be Bihar alone that will be prosperous, but I always believe and I have always believed that prosperity is indivisible. When at last these two schemes and the Nangal and Bhakra schemes in Punjab are completed, I have no doubt the whole economy of this country will change. With the experience that we have gathered in the past, with the efforts that we are making in the present, and the high aspirations for the future—when they are all combined, I have no doubt we will give you the results that you expect of this Ministry. Sir, I have done:

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, out of evil cometh good. The Atlantic Charter, though it was drawn up by Roosevelt and Churchill, though it is not a recognised Charter and is dead politically, it gave birth to the policy of Western countries including America and England particularly, how they would exploit Asian countries, how Asia would produce the raw materials and England and America would supply capital goods and luxury goods. That was the conception of 1945, but in 1946 the then bureaucratic government here created two Ministries, one the Ministry of Works, Mines and Power and the other the Ministry that we discussed yesterday,—Ministry of Industry and Supply. They will add to the prosperity of this country if both the Ministries properly work in the spirit which my friend the honourable Mr. Gadgil envisaged.

Sir, it has been talked often in the lobbies that the honourable Member's Ministry should be known as Ministry of Fuel and Power and the other one should be known as the Industries Ministry, not Industry and Supply Ministry, because supply has a bad odour during the years from 1943 to 1946. Whether my honourable friend's Ministry is known as the Ministry of Fuel and Power or as Works, Mines and Power, it has the supreme control to co-ordinate all our resources in power—water power, coal power or fuel oil power—it has also the control of the Geological Department and Mining Bureau whereby those resources may be worked not for the benefit of foreign exploiters but for our own benefit. In the past, the name of the Geological Survey stank in our noses, because everything that was discovered was known first in England and decades afterwards Indians had to know it. Today, it will serve one great purpose, namely, how India's resources can be utilised for the prosperity of India.

My honourable friend is in charge of Corporations and multi-purpose schemes. I thank him for mentioning that Mahalakshmi will spread in my province of Orissa when the Mahanadi Valley Project is completed. But I have to offer some criticism; some diffidence on the part of the public exist about the rate at which the grand ideas are coming out from his Ministry every now and then and the slow way these are being given effect to.

All ideas are good. Multi-purpose projects are good. But at the same time I hope that they will be executed properly, economically and efficiently to scheduled time so that some benefit will accrue to the general public to which my honourable friend and I belong. Twenty five years is no attraction to me, or that twenty five years hence India will export food outside has no charm.

I will refer mainly to certain financial aspects of the budget of this Ministry. In the explanatory memorandum of my honourable friend Dr. John Matthai, one line gave me cause for alarm. In reviewing the position of expenditure on Printing and Stationery Department he says that while the Budget estimates on purchase of paper alone was rupees one hundred and eighty five lakhs the revised estimate is Rs. 314 lakhs. I am a little confused. My honourable friend the Finance Minister has provided that rupees one hundred and ninety lakhs will be spent on purchase of paper in the next year (1949-50). This inflated expenditure of paper is no doubt due to the inflated staff in the Secretariat. If you reduce the strength of the staff you will consume less paper and other articles of stationery.

While I am on this subject I would like to refer to page 218 on the Final Estimates where provincial recoveries are not shown under Stationery. Recovery was estimated at 143 lakhs and it grew into 181 lakhs. In the coming year it has been estimated to be 139 lakhs. This figure does not include somehow the provincial withdrawals on the Central Government. This leads one to think that the extra expenditure on paper—the huge sum of one crore and fifteen lakhs—is due to the lack of proper control in all the Departments of Government. While I congratulate my friend the honourable Mr. Gadgil that he is going to have a Central Printing Press at Nasik, I must say that I see no reason why every Ministry should have a pocket printing press. All printing and publication should be centralised. While the Information and Broadcasting Department has its own printing establishment the Agricultural Ministry is utilising the whole machinery of the Survey of India at Delhi and Dehra Dun for printing in lithographic numerous publications and statistics. If all printing is done under one agency there would be great saving under this head.

The Statistical Department of the Government of India is not centralised and therefore each Ministry brings out its own statistics to suit its own purpose. I will discuss this issue in detail and various other aspects of over-budgetting and multiplication of expenditure when the House will discuss the Ministry of Finance on the 16th instant.

Regarding the Damodar Valley Corporation, I would say it is a bold conception. But I must point out that the way the details of expenditure have been furnished is unhelpful. You have not shown the progress of expenditure in the current year. We have got a Financial Adviser there. But as he came from Burma he does not know the manner in which financial control is being exercised in India. This Damodar Valley Corporation finances should not be compared with that of the Railway Board. Accounts of the Railway Board are properly maintained and audited and we have full financial control over the Railway expenditure. I hope in the next year's Budget details of the progress of expenditure on Damodar Valley will be shown.

I come next to the Delhi Central Electric Power Authority Corporation. This history of these corporations is interesting. When the old bureaucrats realised that we were going to get political power, they somehow managed to have corporations of this kind started in order to be outside our financial control. As the report shows, they paid 82 lakhs for taking over dilapidated assets and forming that corporation with a capital of two crores of rupees. The Government issued bonds and stocks over two crores, but the management did not come into the hands of the Government completely and the Parliament exercises no control. I was surprised to find in the Balance Sheet of 1948 that there is a cash balance of seventy lakhs of the Corporation lying with the Imperial Bank. That cash balance does not merge into the General cash balance of the Government.

In this respect I must congratulate the honourable Minister for Works, Mines and Power who has provided under Section 29 of the Damodar Valley Corporation Act that funds advanced to the Corporation should be deposited in the Reserve Bank. The result is that any cash balance merges into the general balances of the Government. Let me quote, "Incidentally, as provided for in Section 29 of the Act, this whole amount was deposited with the Reserve Bank of India in a personal ledger account operated in accordance with the needs of the Corporation so that, under this arrangement, the benefit of the undrawn balance accrues to the Government". This is not the case with cash balance of Delhi Central Electricity Corporation. Government derive no benefit from this huge cash balance nor our ways and means budget is benefited. The Finance Ministry must examine this anomaly and end it. All cash balances of such Corporations, State Industries must merge into Government cash balance. Referring again to the Delhi Electric Supply Corporation I would suggest to the honourable Minister to appoint a high power committee to examine the assets thereof. I am certain that the assets have been overvalued purposely to pay huge sums to the European management concerned.

Delhi and New Delhi are the constituency of Shri Deshbandhu Gupta. New connections for the supply of electricity are difficult to get here. The Chief Commissioner does not allow new connections on the ground that no power is available. But if you take a stroll into Connaught Place one evening you will find the numerous shops almost flood-lit with hundreds of powerful lights all round. The New Delhi streets are over illuminated. I would suggest that if this wastage of electricity is stopped in an emergency like this, a lot of supply can be made available for household purposes. I hope my honourable friend will consider this suggestion.

Sir, I had hoped that my honourable friends the Minister for Works, Mines and Power, and the Minister for Finance will sit together and devise ways of controlling corporations of the type I have named and also the Hindustan Air Craft Factory at Bangalore and the other State Industries controlled by the Ministry of Industry and Supply, it may be possible to reduce our borrowings.

Sir, I am not satisfied with the progress of expenditure in the Capital Budget of the Central P. W. D. on their multi-purpose projects. I congratulate the Minister for saying that the officers are honest. I cannot understand why the progress of expenditure has not been shown in the Budget. The budget for huge expenditure every year and get financial sanction which they do not utilise. I know that the Central P. W. D. does work for the other Ministries such as External Affairs, Tribal Areas, Industry and Supply and so on. But I wonder why they provide for works in the Budget when they have neither the material nor the requisite staff to execute such works during the budget year. We have no method of carrying forward balances of capital programme in building till next year. Such over-budgeting, whether capital or revenue, must cease and should be in future carefully examined in the Ministry of Finance. The only State Industry, the Ministry of Works, Mines and Power is concerned is the hiring out of certain electrical plants held in stock. I hope that such war time activities and war time ideas should be closed up so that if there is any war in the near future, we may have at least scope of free start.

Shri Kala Venkata Rao (Madras: General): Sir, I rise to support the demands moved by the honourable Minister. In a country like India in which we mainly depend upon agriculture, water is the primary need. It is said that in the world there is a race between food and growth of population and that population is winning and that food is losing. It is particularly more so in India. We have heard in this House many complaints about the need to have more food and grow more food in this country. We cannot achieve that object, unless we husband all our water resources in this country. According to the estimates, there are as many as 51 billion cubic feet of surface water flowing in this country and we are hardly using 6½ billion cubic feet of water out of that source. Therefore, I feel, Sir, that we should concentrate upon this subject if we wish that this country should prosper. Our aim should be two fold: one is that we should conserve all our water resources and put them to the beneficial use of society; the second is that we should repair and maintain the existing irrigation works in a manner that full benefit flows out of them. I am very glad to learn from the honourable the Minister that attempts are being made today to see that both these things are being done.

I must say that we should have a target and a working plan. In order to achieve both these objects, I would suggest that the old idea about irrigation projects must be given the go-by. What I mean by that is this. Till recently, the idea was that no irrigation work should be undertaken unless the return therefrom would be equal to the interest normally earned on Government paper. That is, unless any work yields out of its proceeds the market rate of the Government bonds, such a work should not be undertaken. But, now, Sir, I am very glad that this policy is being gradually changed in all the provinces, particularly in Madras. I do hope that this is the policy of the Central Government also. Not only should we calculate the return on the investment, but we should also base our future plans on the possible benefit that will accrue out of that irrigation work to the society at large in the locality and to the country. On this basis, I think three criteria should guide our plans. Firstly the work should be able to give a normal supply to the area which it is envisaged to irrigate. Secondly, the soil in the vicinity must be amenable to the cultivation of wet crops; thirdly, the quantity of food raised on account of the construction of this work must be commensurate with the outlay. If these three points are satisfied, we may undertake that particular irrigation work and I hope that the honourable Minister will take this suggestion into consideration.

The honourable Minister has painted a rosy picture about the Damodar Valley Corporation, the Hirakud Dam, and a number of other projects which are being investigated just now. In this connection, I would like to lay stress on one aspect, namely that the "quicker results test" which is being applied by the honourable Minister should not be the only test that ought to be applied in such cases. I would like to illustrate my point by quoting the situation in Madras with which I am very familiar. In Madras, we have got three sets of irrigation schemes. One set is, the small schemes which number 300 of which 100 have already been sanctioned, for which we have to spend six or seven crores of Rupees. The Second set consists of the mid-term schemes which number 23, some of which are in progress, for which we have to spend 40 crores in the next five or ten years. The third set consists of the river valley schemes, the Tungabhadra, the lower Bavani, The Rampadasagar and the Krishna Pennar projects. In spite of the Grow More Food campaign and the crores of Rupees we have invested in the small schemes in order to get quicker results, I may state that we could bring under the plough under these schemes, only four lakhs of acres of land which are yielding only two lakhs of tons of paddy. Therefore, I say, if famine is to disappear from this country, if our population is to have nutritive food, we should also tackle simultaneously not only those quick result schemes, but also the long term river valley schemes. The other day, the honourable Minister said that for the Rampadasagar scheme, it will take 19 years to complete. That is really so; I do not disagree with him. But, when is the first year to begin? Why not begin today? If we begin today, the results will be coming in at the end of 19 years. If we begin in 1955, the results will come only in 1974. Therefore I plead that these small schemes, the mid-term schemes and the long term schemes should be simultaneously undertaken. In this connection I would like to state that we are not going to meet these investments from out of the current revenues. The honourable Dr. John Matthai cannot provide the requisite amount from out of the revenue budget. It is impossible even in 1955 to provide the requisite amount from the revenue budget. Therefore, the amount must come from out of the capital budget. Capital budget means borrowing. I say why should we not borrow more and invest on these schemes. Then comes the other question as to whether we are not adding to the inflation in the country by doing so. This is a vicious circle.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Whether we can borrow at all.

Shri Kala Venkata Rao: That depends on the capacity of the Government. If India is so poor as she is not able to borrow at all, then, that is a different matter. We feel there is scope for borrowing. If the honourable Minister feels that there is no scope for borrowing, the whole developmental scheme which the honourable Mr. Gadgil has pictured to us will also fail. If there is scope for borrowing, my submission, is, do borrow and do invest because this would be a good sop for inflation itself. More production means less inflation. I think that the 1,200 crores of Rupee notes now in circulation in this country is not real inflation. In a country of this vastness and resources, we must have a circulation of not 1,200 crores, but 12,000 crores. More production means more wealth and not more notes. I know Dr. Matthai can order the printing of 400 crores of notes more and create more projects. But, if along with the printing of the notes, production also increases, it is not at all inflation. It is one of those important things in which we have to take a certain amount of risk, if we have to survive. Therefore, I would like to impress on the honourable Minister for Works, Mines and Power to look into this aspect in a broader perspective, have for a target more schemes and try to put them into operation and begin them in the near future so that the results may flow not only quickly, but more quickly and most quickly.

Then Sir, I would like to plead something more for these river valley schemes. The T. V. A. scheme which was the mother of all these conceptions was thought of at a time of repression when coffee seeds were being burnt and when wheat was being burnt in America but now we are in a different position. We have to produce more and more. Therefore all those schemes which integrate flood control, navigation and hydro-electricity must be given priority. I am glad that the Damodar Valley Project is now under way. In this connection I must plead for the Ramapadasagar Scheme about which the honourable Minister just now mentioned. It is a huge project. After all we know our deficit and unless some such big project comes into vogue, there is no scope of preventing famine and want in this country. For the Ramapadasagar Scheme the dam will have 234 ft. depth at bed level and it will rise 192 ft. above the river bed and the lake will be spreading over 587 sq. miles. It will be very useful. Not only will it produce food in about 1½ million new acres of land, but it will also give sufficient water to the existing areas in the Godavari Delta and Krishna Delta. If you give more water to the Godavari Delta then our produce will increase by more than twenty-five per cent. From any point of view there is no point in postponing this scheme. It will solve the food problem of Madras and therefore I would very much impress upon the honourable Minister to undertake this at an early date.

Now I would like to mention only one more point about irrigation and that is about the Tungabadra Project. It has been mentioned more than once that it will be finished in 1952. It is not going to be finished because that great engineer of Hyderabad who was in charge of it did not worry about laying bricks but he was busy with manufacture of arms for Hyderabad State till recently. Unless the Minister uses his whip hand from here, it will not be possible to continue the work on this dam. Therefore I would very much request the minister to look to it and realise that unified control alone will result in the early realisation of this scheme.

Regarding development of electricity, I feel that electricity alone will be able to change the whole organisation of technique of industry in this country. It will be useful in a number of ways. I would like to say that out of the 3356 million k.w. of energy that is available about sixty-three per cent. goes to industry and 3.73 per cent. only for irrigation. We have to make power more available for irrigation purposes.

The Electricity Act, of 1948, seeks to create a Provincial Electricity Board. In Madras we have invested ten crores in electrical undertakings and under the existing working schemes we have to invest twenty crores more. We are far advanced towards nationalisation. That Board should not be made compulsory but Madras should have the option to proceed in its own way because it has already invested crores into the electricity producer concerns. Another thing is, Madras has sent here a bill about purchase of private licenses which number about 42 and whose capital is 2 crores. I know that many of these are rotten concerns and are not able to cater to the requirements of their localities even. Therefore I would request you to give favourable consideration to that bill and give your concurrence. As it is a concurrent subject and they want concurrence, I would again request you to examine this question in detail and see that it is concurred to, so that Madras may proceed further with its developmental schemes.

You want to establish a Heavy-power production Plant. I have to press the case of Avadi in Madras. The essential raw materials, needed for the electric products like mica, rubber, silk etc. are nearby at hand. There is and will be a very good local market for all your products.

One thing more. In former days politicians were getting votes by simply promising a post-office here or there. To-day we have to promise a new world and really we are out to create a new world in India because our Great leader promised Ram Rajya to this country. We have to achieve that ideal and have to create happiness for the crores of people in our country. We will have to work very hard for this purpose and must have a target and plan. I do hope, that the Honourable Mr. Gadgil, who is now practically the dynamo working here, will use a well planned high pressure drive and see that electricity, irrigation and navigation will prosper in this country and thus make this nation a self-sufficient one.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

Shri Arun Chandra Guha (West Bengal: General): The demand for this Ministry covers a wide range of activities. It has so many ramifications and branches, that it is something like a labyrinth for a new man like myself. Sir, there is an adage that "Charity begins at home" and in keeping with that I should like my criticism to begin with things at home. That brings me to the housing accommodation with which in addition to the members of the general public, as Members of the House we are also interested. After the war it has become a problem all over the world but in India we see the problem has become so acute that it has become something like a national scandal. In the report of the Ministry it is stated that in the Centrally administered areas, and perhaps in Delhi alone, there are 70,000 applicants on the waiting list, and their accommodation is only for 16,000. If, Sir, this is the position, I think I need not say anything more on this point. This figure itself reveals the whole picture.

As for our own accommodation, apart from the paucity of accommodation, the little amenities that are provided in our accommodation are very niggardly supplied. Even an electric bulb when fused cannot be replaced even in weeks or in a month's time and that after repeated reminders.

The honourable Minister himself has admitted that the Central P.W.D. or the P.W.D. in general has not much of a reputation as regards efficiency, and integrity also. But I am ready to accept the assurance of an honoured colleague like Mr. Gadgil that this department is coming out of that stigma, and I hope he will be able to clean the Augean Stable and put it in good order. But, Sir, I must endorse the statement of the Minister that in spite of its drawbacks and its reputation for slow movement, this department deserves our heartly congratulations for the way in which they have completed the Jammu-Pathankot road, and the way in which they have completed the refugee camps. I should say that really this department has shown some quickness and some efficiency which is not generally associated with this department in these two matters. I hope, therefore, that they will maintain this reputation in other matters also.

In this connection, Sir,—perhaps that may not belong to this department—I should also mention another road, the road on the Zo-Jila Pass, over 12,000 ft. high. It was really an engineering and military feat, for which this Government deserves hearty congratulations from the country and from the House. In the Defence Budget debate that item ought to have been mentioned and whether it be the Defence or the Public Works Department that is concerned I give my congratulations to this Government for that piece of work also.

Then, Sir, as regards the general development of the country, much depends on this department. Its sphere of activities starts from supplying some harmless articles like stationery, paper, pens, ink and adhesives to the control of high explosives. It has within its jurisdiction irrigation works, controlling and marshalling of water power as well as furnishing furniture and printing. To start with the most harmless thing, printing, I endorse what my honourable friend Mr. B. Das has mentioned, that all printing of the Government of India should be put under one department. It would save a lot of overhead charges on behalf of the Government of India. It may not be within the jurisdiction of the Minister for Works, Mines and Power, but I hope the honourable Minister for Finance will take note of this so that each Department may not have printing arrangements of its own but there should be one printing department for the whole of the Government of India. The chief activity of this ministry centres round what is called the CWINC of course not the famous ink by that name. It is shorter form of the Central Waterways Irrigation and Navigation Commission. This department is in charge of a very important section of our national life. In the post war or post-independence reconstruction of this country, this Department is invested with a responsibility which is unparalleled and which no other department of the Government has in its jurisdiction. The natural resources of the country should be utilised and exploited and that depends practically entirely on this Department.

As regards our food supply there has been a debate recently and almost every day the food questions come up in a large number in the House during the question hour. Day before yesterday during question hour there were 22 questions regarding food and agriculture and I was rather sympathetically looking at the honourable the Food Minister when he was answering series of questions and innumerable supplementaries. The food problem cannot be solved unless we can improve our irrigation, unless we can control and marshal our water powers and unless we can electrify the country. For electricity there is another body under this department. It is called the Central Electricity Commission. I do not know what is the utility of having so many separate bodies. I think the Minister might look into it. I do not know if the Economy Committee set up by the Government have considered the question of having so many separate departments, which means extra overhead charges for every one of these boards and commissions.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: Do you want amalgamation of this? With what department?

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member should address the Chair.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: I am addressing the Chair, Sir.

Shri Arun Chandra Guha: After the Russian Revolution there was a famous saying of Lenin, that Soviet plus electrification is Communism. That was a slogan given by him simply to stimulate the work of electrification. I should say that similarly for our Government, electrification should be the first charge or responsibility.

I now come to the Damodar Valley Corporation. The budget that has been supplied to us is too vague. That body has been set up as an autonomous body and it should be allowed to work as such but at the same time the Act has provided ample scope for control and supervision by the Central Government. The budget that has been supplied to us should have contained more details. This autonomous body should be allowed to work as quickly as possible, so that the country may derive the benefit of the money that the nation is going to invest in it as quickly as possible.

I must say something about my own province of West Bengal, which is the most industrialised province in India and it is so much over-populated that it has to be industrialised still more, if it is to maintain its population. Its density of population now is 800 per square mile and there are possibilities of its industrial development, which this Department can undertake. The Ganga Barrage should receive better attention of the department. The partition of India has not only partitioned the country but has partitioned our rivers also. Almost all the rivers of India that is in northern India have become international rivers. The fear that Pakistan may intervene and come in should not deter us from exploiting the resources of these rivers. Ninetyfour per cent. of the water flowing down these rivers go to waste and only six per cent. is used for irrigation and other purposes. Then in the Duars side there are immense possibilities for exploitation of mineral resources. I think the Minister should have a geological survey conducted there soon.

In this connection I might mention some of the tribal areas of Assam also.

As regards electrification, rural and urban, from my experience in Calcutta I would draw the attention of the Government to the fact that the suburban railways in Calcutta should be electrified so that the congestion in Calcutta would be relieved. With more electrification there would be proper industrial development of Calcutta and West Bengal also.

With these few remarks I commend the sanction of these Demands.

हमारे देश की तरक्की हमारे आनरेबिल मंत्री श्री गाडगिल जी के महकमे के हाथ में है। उनका महकमा बेसिक महकमा है, वह हिन्दुस्तान की तरक्की के लिये बुनियादी महकमा है। अगर हमें वापूजी के सबक को कार्य रूप में लाना है, तो हमें इस बात की तरफ ध्यान देना होगा, जिस की तरफ कि आज प्रातः हमारे मंत्री महोदय ने थोड़ा सा इशारा भी किया था, अर्थात् रूरल इलेक्ट्रिफिकेशन। जिस वक्त उन्होंने रूरल इलेक्ट्रिफिकेशन के बारे में कहा कि हमें उसको इम्पार्टेंस देना चाहिये तो मैंने उस वक्त अपनी जगह से एक आवाज लगाई कि यह टाप-प्रायरिटी की चीज होनी चाहिये।

आपने देखा होगा कि हमारे मंत्री जी के कार्य के बारे में जो कागज दिये गये हैं उनके अन्दर एस्टेट आफिस का एक महकमा दिया गया है और उसमें बतलाया गया है कि कितनी हजार एप्लीकेशन्स गवर्नमेंट सरवेंट्स की उनके पास अभी तक बाकी हैं जिनके लिये वह कोई मकान का इन्तजाम नहीं कर पाये हैं। यह मसला रोज दिन ब दिन बढ़ता जाता है। मगर इसका कोई हल है तो यही है कि देहात का इलेक्ट्रिफिकेशन किया जाय और देहात के अन्दर वृत्त रेजीडेंशियल हाउसेज हों। आज लोग देहात में क्यों नहीं जाना चाहते, क्योंकि न तो वहां बिजली है और न पानी का नलका है। अगर दिल्ली के देहात में श्री आनरेबिल गाडगिल साहब बिजली का इन्तजाम कर दें तो यहां के गवर्नमेंट सरवेंट्स की जो प्राब्लेम है, मकान की, वह उनके सामने बाकी नहीं रहेगी। वरना गवर्नमेंट को उनके लिये मकान बनाने पड़ेंगे और बड़ा भारी खर्चा उनको इसके लिये उठाना पड़ेगा। अगर रूरल इलेक्ट्रिफिकेशन हो जाय तो हर एक गवर्नमेंट सरवेंट दिल्ली के देहात में जाकर बसना पसन्द करेगा क्योंकि वहां जीवन इतना कीमती नहीं है जितना की शहर के अन्दर कीमती है। तो इसलिये मैं रूरल इलेक्ट्रिफिकेशन के लिये अपनी पुरजोर मांग करते हुए इसके साथ ही साथ आगे जो दूसरी चीजें मंत्री महोदय के हाथ में हैं उनकी ओर ध्यान दिलाता हूं।

एक और चीज मैं इस सिलसिले में कहना चाहता हूं और वह यह कि हमारे यहां काम्युनिकेशन्स का महकमा है। उसके लिये एक डिप्टी मिनिस्टर दे दिया गया। लेकिन इस महकमे में जहां कि एक नहीं बल्कि कई मिनिस्ट्रियों की आवश्यकता थी उसके लिये कोई डिप्टी मिनिस्टर नहीं दिया गया। मैं समझता हूं कि अगर हमारे देश के भविष्य को बनाना है तो जो बेसिक चीज है, जिससे कि देश की तरक्की होने वाली है, और जिस महकमे पर सारे देश का भविष्य निर्भर है, उसके लिये एक नहीं बल्कि कई मिनिस्ट्री पृथक पृथक होनी चाहियें। मैं तो यह चाहता हूं कि इरीगेशन प्रोजेक्ट्स के लिये एक अलहदा मिनिस्ट्री होनी चाहिये और जो दूसरी चीजें हैं उनके लिये अलहदा मिनिस्ट्रीज बनें। लेकिन अगर ज्यादा मिनिस्ट्री आपको नहीं बढ़ानी है तो कम से कम काम्युनिकेशन्स जैसे महकमों के बजाय यहां आप डिप्टी मिनिस्टर बढ़ाइये ताकि गाडगिल साहब को जो भी समय मिले और वह देश को ज्यादा से ज्यादा और जल्दी से जल्दी खुशहाल बनाने वाली स्कीमें तो तय्यार करा सकें।

प्रकट करने के लिये काफी देर बोलता। लेकिन चूँकि समय निश्चित है तो ज्यादा समय उधर न लगा कर मैं कुछ बातें और भी कहना चाहता हूँ जिनको मैं महसूस करता हूँ।

आपका महकमा इस देश के लिये बड़ी बड़ी चीजें बनाता है। जिन लोगों के पास मकान नहीं हैं उनके लिये मकान देता है। लेकिन क्या आपने कभी यह भी सोचा है कि कुछ ऐसे भी आदमी हैं कि जिनके घर और खेत उजाड़ दिये जाते हैं दूसरे लोगों को बसाने के लिये। एक वक्त था कि आज से कोई बीस पचीस वर्ष पहले जहाँ हम आज बैठे हुए हैं वहाँ कई देहात बसते थे। पचीस बरस हो गये होंगे लेकिन आज तक वे गरीब अपने नये घर नहीं बसा पाये। यह कहना कि साहब आपको मुआवजा दे दिया गया सब शान्ति कर लेते हैं। लेकिन मैं आपको इस सिलसिले में इतनी बात कहना चाहता हूँ कि खेती करने वाले के लिये कोई मिला नहीं कहा जा सकता जब तक कि आप उसको ज़मीन के बदले में ज़मीन न दें। अभी हाल में यहाँ दिल्ली के करीब विदेशी राजदूतों के लिये कोठियाँ बनाने के लिये कहा गया है। मुझे डर है कि उसमें बहुत सारे बदकिस्मत देहाती घर गायब उजाड़ दिये जायेंगे और उन लोगों को बेघर होना पड़ेगा। (एक आवाज़: नहीं होना पड़ेगा)। अगर ऐसा है तो मुझे खुशी है।

आज ही दोपहर के वक्त मेरे पास एक भाई आये थे। उनका गांव है पसोड़ा, यहाँ से कोई आठ नौ मील पर है। वहाँ एक हवाई अड्डा बनाया जा रहा है और उसकी वजह से उनका गांव जहाँ कोई चार हजार की आबादी है उजाड़ा जायगा। हालांकि अगर वहाँ से एक फरलांग हटा कर अड्डा बनाया जाय तो इधर से उधर करने में किसी को बेघर नहीं होना पड़ता। वह लोग दूसरी ज़मीन देना चाहते हैं। लेकिन वह चीफ़ इंजीनियर से मिल कर आये। उन्होंने कहा कि किसी न किसी को तो उठना ही पड़ेगा। उस बेचारे ने बहुत ज्यादा समझाने की कोशिश की कि अगर आप मेरी बात मानेंगे तो किसी को भी नहीं उठना पड़ेगा। लेकिन उनका कुछ ऐसा माइंड बन जाता है कि वह अपने आफिशियल डम के ढंग से ही सोचते हैं। तो मैं आपसे यह नम्र निवेदन करता हूँ कि देश की आप तरक्की कीजिये, देश के लिये आप नये नये डैम बनाइये और विजली पैदा कीजिये और जो बेघर गवर्नमेंट सर्वेंट्स हैं उनके लिये मकान बनवाइये। लेकिन मैं इसके साथ साथ आपसे यह भी प्रार्थना करता हूँ कि जहाँ आप किसानों को बड़े बड़े हवाई अड्डे बनाने के लिये बेघर करते हैं या और दूसरी स्कीमें बनाने के लिये बेघर करते हैं तो उनकी तरफ़ आप ज्यादा ध्यान दीजिये। और उनको बसाने के लिये भी अवश्य प्रयत्न करें।

Ch. Ranbir Singh (East Punjab: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, we liberated our country fighting under the leadership of our venerable leader Mahatma Gandhi. So we must always place his ideals before us. He was always in favour of decentralization. He was always opposed to the consolidation of economic power. The charkha in the Congress Flag also symbolises decentralization. Mr. Speaker Sir, our much respected leaders Shri Jawaharlal Nehru and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel have removed the great obstacles and rubbles that were in the path of our country. There goes a proverb in our villages that when a field is to be sown then before sowing seeds that field has got to be cleared of all the rubbish and waste matter. Much rubbish lay in the path of our country. Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel has removed the whole of it. But the future of our country and the prosperity of our country lies in the hands of the honourable Shri Gadgil's Department. His is a basic Department and forms the foundation of the future progress of India. If we have to give practical shape to the teachings of Bapuji then we will have to turn our attention to that matter, about which the honourable Minister dropped a small hint today morning, that is rural electrification. When he mentioned about rural electrification and said that we should give it due importance then at that time from my seat I called out in a loud voice that this ought to be a thing of top priority.

You must have seen that in the report describing the work of the honourable Minister, a Department named Estate Office is also mentioned, and it is given out in the report as to how many thousand applications of those Government servants are still lying with them for whom the Estate Office has not been able to make any arrangements for residential accommodation. This problem is getting bigger and bigger every day. If there is any solution to this problem, it is only this that rural areas be electrified and a number of residential houses be constructed in rural areas. Today why people do not want to go back to villages, simply because there is neither electricity nor water pipes. If the honourable Shri Gadgil were to make arrangement for the electrification of the rural areas of Delhi then the housing problem of the Government servants will not remain before him. Otherwise the Government will have to get houses constructed for them and will have to bear a great deal of expenditure on this count. If rural electrification is done then every Government servant would like to go and live in the rural areas of Delhi because there the living is not so costly as it is in the city itself. So besides making a strong demand for rural electrification I wish to draw the attention of the honourable the Minister towards those other things as well that lie in his hands.

This is mainly an agricultural country. For an agricultural country canals are of great importance and specially for those areas where the average rainfall is less. The necessity is specially felt in Rajputana and Northern India. I belong to East Punjab. There was once a time when our province used to supply food-grains to the whole country. But when independence dawned upon India then unfortunately our Province was partitioned, and our wheat producing areas went over to Pakistan. Now if you wish that annually 130 crores of rupees belonging to this country may not be given to foreign countries for the purchase of food grains then the only solution of this problem is that you give maximum advancement to irrigation projects. During the last few years a great stress was laid on this and a number of grand schemes were presented before the country. But I fear that when time came for the implementing of these schemes then our other friends, who really would have been benefited in the long run, raised their voices against these schemes, saying that riots will break out as a result of inflation; and thus frightening the Government caused a great deal of slackness in the irrigation schemes. If our country does in reality require anything it is the irrigation schemes, and in fact the scarcity of food products is directly responsible for the scarcity of other materials. You may select any thing, say industries. If you electrify the rural areas and get canals etc. made there, then there would not arise any problem for finding a market for the industrial products. Therefore, I beg to submit that you, taking into consideration this dire necessity of the country, go on paying more and more attention in future also as you are doing today.

I wish to submit one more thing in this connection. To the Department of Communications a Deputy Minister has been appointed but for this Department, where not one but more than one ministries were needed, no Deputy Minister has been given. I think if we have to keep in view the future of our country then for this basic Department upon which depends the progress and the future prosperity of our country, instead of only one, several separate ministries should be set up. I do wish that a separate ministry be set up for irrigation projects and for other things also separate ministries be set up. But if you do not wish to increase the number of ministries then at least instead of departments like Communications etc. you should appoint a Deputy Minister in this department, so that whatever time Shri Gadgil may get he may utilize the same for devising at the earliest quick prosperity schemes for the good of the country.

I have to submit many things and I also want to make certain complaints to the Ministry, but time at my disposal is very little. I had a strong desire to harp upon the works he has done, because you know that I am an agriculturist and when I think that Bhakra Dam Scheme is to be completed in very near future whereby everybody would become prosperous, then it would be a sacrilege I think not to express gratefulness. I wished to have spoken for a length of time in order to express my gratefulness for him. But as the time is fixed so instead of spending more time in showing gratefulness I wish to submit some more things that I think necessary.

Your Department constructs huge structures for this country. It provides houses to those who have none. But have you ever thought that there are some such persons whose houses and fields are demolished in order to re-habilitate other persons. Some twenty or twenty five years ago there was a time when a number of villages existed at the place where we are sitting today. Twenty five years have lapsed but these unfortunate people have not yet been able to set up their new houses. We feel contented that adequate compensation has been paid to them. But in this connection I wish to submit before you that no compensation can be called adequate to an agriculturist unless you give him land in exchange of the land taken from him. Quite recently it has been given out that here in Delhi a scheme has been drawn up to lay out a diplomatic colony. I fear that for this perhaps a number of houses belonging to unfortunate villagers will be demolished and they will have to become homeless. (An honourable Member: "No, they will not have to become homeless"). If it is so then I am really pleased.

A friend came to see me only at noon today. His village is Pansoda. It is at a distance of about eight miles from here. There an aerodrome is being made and for this reason his village which has a population of some four thousand will be demolished. The fact is that if the aerodrome is shifted a furlong away no one has to become homeless. The villagers wish to offer an alternate site for the aerodrome. They went to see the Chief Engineer who told them that after all some one will have to become homeless. The poor fellows tried their level best to make him understand that if their scheme is approved nobody will be homeless. But the official mind becomes so set that it always think in manner of officialdom only. So I very humbly beg to submit that you work for the advancement of the country, construct new dams for the country and generate electric energy and get houses constructed for the homeless Government servants, but besides this I also beg to submit that you should pay more attention and do not render peasants landless and homeless by making aerodromes and by launching new schemes. You should make special efforts for their rehabilitation also.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): Sir, the Honourable Mr. Gadgil has presented us this budget in such an unobtrusive and quiet manner that you can hardly find any fault with him. But he must hasten slowly. Sometimes some suggestions have been thrown that we should go ahead with the schemes and the money should be provided for the purpose. But I see there is a danger and the Finance Minister should be careful about advancing schemes by printing notes. If you cannot control prices, as we have not been able to control in our country, I think we will be in a dangerous trap. So the suggestion should not be carried out unless you can control—and control is impossible in India with our present psychological background. I therefore suggest that when we launch on any scheme we should hasten slowly. I do not say that we should not advance any schemes but in our present context, in our present economic condition and in our present situation we should be careful about investing money where the return will not come back.

Our economic transport and industrial structures are so built up and are based entirely on oil and coal. Have we been able to produce all the oil that is wanted? The only oilfield is in Digboi and there was one in Kohat in West Punjab which we have lost. I do not know whether in Central Rajputana we will find any oils. The production in Digboi oilfield used to be 17 million gallons, but the production has gone less and less there and we are getting only 14 million gallons as was revealed the other day in an answer to a question.

We ought to find out the causes that have led to this decrease in production. Certain other areas also which produced oil have dried up and are not being worked. In Iran when they reached a depth of 5,000 feet the stopped-production, but the American engineers went to 10,000 feet and found perpetual springs from which they could get a large supply. So, here you have gone up to 5,000 feet; should you not go up to 10,000 feet so that you may have more oil? But to do this we must have a proper geological survey and I request the honourable Minister to see that we should have a full geological survey throughout the country and we should have more drilling. Near about the Naga hills oil was found and we must explore its further possibilities. If we do not do all these things, the whole industrial structure will fail. Your aeroplanes, your navy and your engines, everything depends on oil and if we cannot produce it I think we will suffer immensely. There will be a time when we may be cut off from Iran. Therefore, we ought to take time by the forelock before it is too late.

We have also got oil fields at Massimpur but we have not done much to explore them. Patharia is another place where there are possibilities, but Patharia is a place for which a Commission has been appointed—on which my honourable friend on the right is represented—to get it back from Pakistan. We made a mistake in giving it to them. We are trying to get it back as if in a court of law, but we may not get it. Areas near about Jorhat and Bandarsalia also need exploration and proper geological survey.

Assam possesses coal in various parts. We have got coal at Mawphbing and Cherro near Shillong, and at Pynasulla, it is also found in the Mikir hills where you have not done any geological survey, though I think very long ago there was a party which surveyed it. Mikir Hills produce coal which is supplied to the Assam Railway; the total output is five per cent. of Assam's requirements. But if you tackle the Mikir Hills near about Dimapur, I think this coalmine can be worked very well. Of course the question is linked up with roads which can be tackled with Defence and with Transport Ministries. In the Garo Hills, as I stated during discussion on the Railway Budget, you have got coal but then you are cut off by Pakistan. Unless a road is run from Garo Hills to Pandu—about 150 miles—I do not think this valuable deposit of coal and other minerals could be tapped. Sir, we want these facilities and I trust the honourable Minister will take note of this.

Further, you will be surprised to hear—possibly it will be news to you—that Assam has gold as well. It is found in the Subansiri River. We find a reference to it as early as the Kautilya's Arthashastra where it is mentioned in Book Two, Chapter XI that gold dust was sold near Kamrup at Suvarman Kudya (Sonkorihia). We have to wash the gold sands and with the present high price we can wash it after getting it from the Subansiri River. It is up the hills and we must go to the source of the hills where from the sands are washed down. I suggest a geological party should explore this.

An Honourable Member: Why do you not form a company?

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha: Yes, if I had money like you. Then you will be surprised to hear that platinum is found in the sands of this river; this was confirmed by a survey made by a geological party. I don't know what percentage is found and whether it will be possible to extract this valuable metal in a commercially paying way, but I think it should be tried.

Silver also is available in these hills. It is available near about Pataki Hills on the Burma-Assam border. Amber also is available. Of course amber will not be useful to the Works, Mines and Power Ministry, but it will be useful for ornaments for people like my honourable friend Mr. Jhunjhunwala and others of our party. It is very valuable and I think it should be worked.

Will it be still more surprising if I say that iron is also available in some quantity. It is called dojara in our part of the country and is used in metalling roads. With the present high price of iron, we should try and see whether this can be extracted and smelted. I do not say it should be done at once but experiments should be made. It is near about Mekir hills.

Sir, I thank the honourable Minister for Works, Mines and Power for giving us a little gift in the shape of the Assam electrification project. He has given one scheme near Kamrup District costing about Rs. 101 lakhs, but there was another scheme. The Pussighat scheme which is as big as the Tenessy Valley Scheme and it should be worked properly and taken in hand in the near future. It will be as big as Hirakud or Damodar and the whole of the Province can be electrified. We have so many tea estates there that electric power can be supplied to them even and oil and other fuel can be saved. I hope the honourable Minister will look into that as well.

As regards geological scholarships, I think you ought to give more of these. Your requirements are so much that you have not been able to put in the proper number of officers. We want the entire country to be surveyed. We are spending our energy on political matters, but I should request the House through the honourable the Speaker that they should divert their energy to finding out these valuable minerals and bringing them to the notice of the House. The honourable Minister will do well to send out more young men to foreign countries for geological knowledge and bring it back to our country.

Sir, with these words I conclude and in doing so, thank the honourable Minister for presenting an optimistic report.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I thank you, Mr. Speaker. I succeeded in catching your controlled eye. I request you not to agree to any proposal to curtail the speeches of honourable Members. I do not mind it, if I am not allowed to speak. I think that ten speeches of 20 minutes duration may be preferable to 20 speeches of 10 minutes duration each.

Mr. Speaker: I entirely agree with the honourable Member. But I find that everybody is so anxious to speak and feels a sort of disappointment if not resentment actually if he is not given a chance. The honourable Member himself remarked that he was able to catch my eye, though controlled. There has been nothing of any kind of control. But he can make room for other people by giving up his right to speak on this occasion.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I congratulate my honourable friend Mr. Gadgil for his frank speech. Sir, he was rightly called by Mr. Venkata Rao that he is a dynamo. I agree with him.

Sir, in the beginning of his speech, my honourable friend referred to the old notoreity of the Central P.W.D. for corruption. He assured us that there is some improvement. Sir, if there is improvement I congratulate him and the Department. But I tell him that, so far as my information goes, things have not improved. I assure him and the other Members of the Cabinet that it is no pleasure to talk of corruption among our own countrymen. We hang our heads in shame when we have to talk of these things. So, if at all we refer to such things we do so only with a view to bring about purity in the administration. Everybody knows that unless there is purity in the administration of the country no public good is possible. But there appears to be some misunderstanding. Our friends in the Cabinet want us to thank them for what they have done. We can do that; but at the same time we should be allowed to criticise them for what is wrong with their department. They want us to support anything and everything that is done in every Department. We congressmen have captured the machinery of Government and sent some of our men to control that machinery for the good of the country. They can so control the machinery of Government only when they take our co-operation. But what we find is that our friends appear to have identified themselves with the Departments and with the help of the Departments want to control us. This is misunderstanding the position. This process would not do and this will not help the cabinet or any of us here.

I thank Mr. Gadgil for what he has done with regard to the Damodar Valley scheme. The Corporation has begun the work in the Damodar Valley and we have begun to receive reports to the effect that the people who have been occupying the lands in those regions have been asked to vacate entire villages without notice, without proper acquisition and without compensation and all that. I may remind my friend Mr. Gadgil that when the project was hatched, there was agreement arrived at among all the Governments concerned that the people who will be ejected from lands will get lands for lands and that those people who will be displaced from their homes will get homes elsewhere.

Sir, in the Budget presented to us, there is a reference to model villages. I am very glad to hear that. But here the position is that those people who are to be displaced altogether from the villages that are to be submerged by the dam are to get lands and value of lands in advance in order to enable them to erect new houses. It is only after the erection of model villages and after the occupation thereof by the people that they should be asked to give up their lands and houses for the purpose of the dam. This should be strictly adhered to if you want to do justice to the people.

[Babu Ramnarayan Singh]

Then in connection with this dam construction there is a report that as this is a national concern all people through out the country should get representation—in its services. All the same we have to see that one community does not predominate over others in the construction in the concern. The construction of the dam is a national programme. We welcome it. The people of the locality and all of us are ready to co-operate. But justice has got to be done. My honourable Friend in answer to a question on the subject said that he will enquire into the matter and later said that the enquiry has already begun. I thank him for all these, but I ask him to see that nothing illegal or unlawful is done there.

I have just received a copy of the Indian Nation of Patna dated 8th March.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member has two minutes more.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I request you to give me a few more minutes. I have to refer to two or three matters.

Mr. Speaker: I have no objection; but the other members will have to be denied the opportunity to speak.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: This paper contains a resolution of the Bihar Provincial Congress Working Committee. They are coming on deputation to the honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru. They have to thank the Central Government for what has been done, but they have to regret the hopeless slowness with which the Government is moving in the matter.

Sir, there is flood almost every year in Kosi and it has been ruinous and devastating to crops, to cattle and even to trees. And human suffering is indescribable. Of all the projects which the Government can take up this is the most important from a humanitarian point of view. I wish that the honourable Minister sees to it that this project is also expedited.

Sir, I have one or two points more and I have done. In Delhi, we have got the Rent Control Act. This was meant to give relief to the poor tenants against unscrupulous landlords. I do not think it was meant to discourage people from building houses. I do not think it was meant to extend to areas which are altogether undeveloped till now. There is an area called Sarai Rohilla, which is not yet developed. When want of accommodation was felt keenly in the town, there was an appeal from the leaders to the people to erect houses. In this business, even people of ordinary means also come forward to invest their money to afford people accommodation. I hear that there is an instruction from the Department that rent will be allowed only at six per cent per annum. This is simply ludicrous. It is difficult to build a house in these days which will fetch an income of six per cent only. It is said that there was a conference between landlords and tenants and by way of agreement this has been arrived at. Sir, this may be right and proper for the old investments; but this cannot do well now. I think my honourable friend will see to it.

There is shortage of accommodation in this City. High Government officials, and even members of this House are given accommodation in the Constitution House, Western Court, Pataudi House and some other Government hotels. This is well and good. At the same time, the boarders are forced to take the meals provided there. There is a suspicion that this is by way of help to big contractors. In the hotels, meals are provided in a stereotyped manner. Sometimes, the meals are not good. Why should the boarders be forced to take meals provided by the hotels? Government give the accommodation all right. At the same time, it is only proper that they must not be forced to take the meals provided by the hotels.

I thank you, Sir, you have given me time. I have got much more to say I think the points referred to by me will be considered by my honourable friend Mr. Gadgil and that he will see that the Kosi project is begun at once. I may say this. If the Government is kind, good, just and humanitarian, this project must be taken up at once.

Prof. K. T. Shah (Bihar: General): On occasions like this, when honourable Ministers come before the House presenting their Grant Estimates for expenditure, congratulations are so common that any word of lack of it will not, I trust, be misplaced.

I have, indeed, come here as Mark Antony said long ago, "to bury Caesar and not to praise him". Therefore, it is not for me to raise any old difficulties which may sound a note of lack of harmony in this admirably constituted mutual admiration society, in which congratulations and compliments are the order of the day, and any word of censure is only dismissed as destructive criticism. I am afraid in this case, however, I am not going to make my remarks entirely unavourable. If an occasional grain of sugar creeps into my observations, I trust the honourable Minister will not suffer from indigestion from taking up the sugary stuff.

For, I confess, when I remember the performances of other days, and see how rapidly, how eloquently, how recklessly, how courteously we pass in a couple of hours estimates running into 12 or 150 crores, with hardly a word of criticism for one minor point here or there. I cannot help commending the modesty of the honourable Minister for Works, Mines and Power, in asking us only to pass a budget of 12 crores in two hours,—or it is going to be three hours,—I do not know. After all, this House passing four crores or forty crores an hour does not lend itself to any close scrutiny, of detail, to any suggestion of economy or retrenchment, or even for the matter of that, a close examination of policy which is involved in matters of this kind.

Sir, the honourable Minister has told us that he has been satisfied with the measure of efficiency his department has achieved, and that he is also satisfied that there is a "fair measure" of honesty in his department. I wonder if "fair measure" is an official euphemism for something quite contrary. At any rate, in common parlance, P.W.D. which is now transformed into W.M.P. used to be regarded as a Public Waste Department, and it may now be regarded as Waste, Mistakes and Profusion Department. While I do not agree with this, I do confess that these initials, which have become a perennial plague in the language of public affairs are confusing. One is liable, without ever intending to do so, to be betrayed into a misconception from the very initials in which these things are presented. I wish to point to, however, only two or three important matters, so that I might not only economise in my own time, but also in the patience of the House as well.

In the first place, as I have just stated, the various grand schemes comprised in this Budget are large projects spread over in time and in space to such an extent that men's minds forget, their brain loses sight completely of the details involved in it. The honourable Minister has presented such a fancy picture, in such wonderful rainbow colours, that one looks and marvels at the colours only, though it may be all empty behind. I am not suggesting at all for one moment that the projects that the honourable Minister has presented before us are lacking in any substance. But I would most humbly draw his attention to the fact that these are bound to be spread over ten or fifteen years until they are completed and that in the meanwhile there must be some guarantee of sticking to the original aim and purpose, for which any such project is taken in hands; and that any deviation from that is likely to cause difficulties which we may not be able to correct.

Ministers have told us again and again that they are creatures of circumstances. If these circumstances affect in the course of a year or two or three the whole outlook radically, then, I suggest that a period of ten or fifteen years is sufficient for us to take heed; and that from the start we bear in mind and take steps to see or give guarantee that eventually avoidable mistakes may not occur; and if they do occur, their effects are minimised.

To illustrate my point, there is an extremely great need of co-ordination, not only as between the several projects, and the several purposes for which the various projects included in this ministry's Budget are concerned, but also as between the over-all, comprehensive National Plan in which these are integral parts so to say. Yesterday, we had the very wonderful spectacle of being called upon to pass another substantial estimate, in which the illustration of the Sindhri project was mentioned. Ministers are very ready to take credit for projects which have been taken in hand or thought of long before they came to office; and the Sindhri project was one of that. Even granting that this is a human frailty—after all, and that the present Ministers are only the successors of the same form of Government, for the spirit of Government has hardly changed even though the personnel may have changed since August 15, 1947, I would like to say that when one comes to hear that the Fertilisers manufacturing industry is situated, let us say, in Sindhri, that the raw material has to be got from Jodhpur, that it would require about 200 railway wagons to go 800 or 1,000 miles, I wonder what co-ordination is there between the transport system, the raw material system, the wastage of time involved in sending hundreds of empty wagons back from Sindhri to Jodhpur if they have no traffic to carry backwards.

I am told—I do not speak on my own authority—that it would be a marvel of speed and economy if a goods train metre gauge of 200 wagons could accomplish even a 100 mile a day. If even that much, it means you will have 1600 wagons on the road at any given time for carrying this traffic in raw material to the seat of manufacture, and if you consider that these will have to be all coming back in another eight days or ten, you will have something like 3,000 wagons devoted to this matter alone. Would anybody give any attention to the co-ordination of this matter? Has any body considered that this is to be reconciled mutually?

Shri B. L. Sondhi: Is the honourable Member in order in discussing things that were discussed yesterday? The honourable Minister is not there to reply.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member may continue his speech.

Prof. K. T. Shah: In this particular case, for instance, there are claims of several purposes, there are claims of several provinces, there are claims of various articles which are expected to be produced by these various projects. There is power, there is industrial growth as consequence of easily accessible and cheap power, there is food growth as consequence of better water supply and irrigation, there is navigation or transport facilities. All these would come out of this Ministry's very great projects.

There is also the mines and the untold wealth of minerals in which this Union is very rich. But at the same time if the honourable Minister told us correctly, we are still not absolutely self-sufficient in the matter of mineral requirements either of peace or of war. If all these are to be mutually correlated, if there is to be a co-ordination between these—and I am not suggesting that the honourable Minister has not tried to give it some kind of co-ordination at least within his own Ministry, then only will you be able to reap the fullest fruits of these very grand projects, which, in their entirety, when they are completed, will cost you several hundreds of crores perhaps.

At each stage you go on creating new problems like, for instance displacement of people whose lands you take up for purposes of building barrages or reservoirs or otherwise, and they are unable to use that land for the time being. How are these people to be resettled or rehabilitated? how are these people to be re-employed? how are these to be compensated? how are these to be given some alternative places of residence and work? These are problems which are insuperably inter connected. I hope the honourable Minister will agree with me that these are integral matters that need to be co-ordinated as carefully as the other illustration I gave about which my friend is so very sensitive. The point, however, is that in the budget as we see it, in the various items—very imposing as they are—we lose sight of the ultimate aim that ought to be a careful integration of all these considerations.

Take again the establishment of industry in all these regions where such ambitious projects are constructed. There has been a cry from almost every corner of this House that if you generate such large quantities of power, how are you going to utilize it, if the rural areas or villages don't benefit. How are the villages going to benefit from abundant energy? If it is the intention that the benefit will be in the form of, let us say, electric traction, or electric agricultural machines for cultivation, then I am afraid, the present agrarian economy of this country is such that it would be very difficult for us economically to employ these means.

Then again take the need for small industries, the so-called cottage Industries. There, again some honourable Member might become sensitive that the Minister is not there and that, therefore, I cannot even mention 'Industry'. I am afraid I cannot help. These industries are possible to be developed by means of decentralized power—somebody used this expression; and decentralisation is a factor which has to be properly appreciated not merely in word, not merely by verbal sympathy, but by actual translation in the economy of the country. There is a great possibility of our scattered small economic cottage producers who only need to be organized, who only need to be equipped, who only need to be financed and advised properly and given every facility in marketing, all the shortages of supply that we see to-day will be wiped out within a very much shorter time than these projects will take time to fruition.

In this connection if you will pardon my saying so,—it is not a bee in my bonnet if I point out that all these arguments tend to one central fact viz., the necessity of having a planned economy, that is to say, not one item but every item, every Department, every activity of the country should be co-related and integrated into a single pattern with definite objective and definite stage and definite norm fixed by which we can judge from year to year the progress we are achieving.

Secondly I repeat that when several Ministries as they come before us we do feel so important and I find that we do lose sight of the ultimate aim. I hope that all the planning commission that is being talked about and the promises that are being made of, some day a national plan will be presented. While planning that I cannot help warning the Ministers that there is a great danger of their being too much absorbed in the very beautiful plans that they create for their own Departments or for single items for which they may be responsible and run the risk of overlapping the over-all picture of the nation's progress which I hope, we are all striving for.

Shri C. Subramaniam (Madras: General): Sir, in the Government of India there are two Ministries which have got to play a vital role in the progress of the country, in the development of the national wealth. The first is the Ministry of Industries and the second is the Works, Mines and Power. I am not stating this in the order of importance. Looked at from a certain aspect, the Ministry of W.M.P. is more important and has got to play a more important role. For the industrialisation of the country, the development of power is the basic requirement and it is only by the extent of development of power the pace of industrialisation has to be set. Therefore the progress of the country very much depends upon the working of this Ministry. According to the data available now, we find our supply of coal is very much limited and supply of oil is also very much limited in our country. So the only form of power which we should develop is electricity. Perhaps in the distant future or perhaps even in the near future, this energy may be replaced by atomic energy. When that would come we don't know. Therefore our attention should be focussed on the development of electricity and I am glad to find very many schemes have been taken up, hydro-electric schemes, river valley schemes which would produce electricity, necessary for the development of our country. But if we want to utilise the energy so produced in these projects, it is necessary there should be a certain amount of co-ordination—not the general co-ordination which the previous speaker was referring to but co-ordination between the Ministries of W.M.P. and the Industry and Supply.

[At this stage, Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao (one of the Panel of Chairmen)].

When electricity is produced, it has to be distributed throughout the country to the villages. Now a situation has arisen in Madras. There is electricity available and there are very many villagers who are prepared to take electricity for pumping water from their wells. But we find that there are no materials available, neither transformers, nor the poles, nor the wires, nor the switches, nor any other material. Because of the shortage of these materials, they are finding it impossible to supply electricity to the rural areas. Therefore, alongside with the development of these schemes for the production of electricity, there should be co-ordination with the Ministry of Industry for the manufacture and production of electrical machinery, the machinery which would be required to distribute this energy to the various nooks and corners of the country. That should be the first point that should be taken note of by the Government.

Speaking of electricity, I wish to mention about the position in Madras, to which my honourable friend, Mr. Kala Venkatarao referred to in the morning. He pointed out that in Madras the main producing concerns are State-owned and State-controlled and there are a few small concerns situated in urban areas supplying electricity to certain municipalities. They are private-owned and their machinery has also become almost obsolete. They are unable to replace it. Therefore, there is a proposal by the Provincial Government of Madras that these concerns should be taken over by the Government and the entire system of production and distribution of electricity should be a State concern.

My honourable friend, Mr. Sondhi, when speaking on the Budget at the time of the general discussion, said that in spite of the promises and assurances made by the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister while in Madras, that there would be no nationalization, the Government of Madras is defiant in this matter. He was referring to an answer given by the honourable Minister of Public Works in Madras in connection with the taking over of these few electricity concerns that whatever might have been said by the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister it did not apply to these concerns. That answer has been misrepresented and a charge was laid on the floor of this House that the Government of Madras was flouting the instructions from the Centre in spite of the fact that the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister himself gave this assurance in Madras. I wish, Sir, Mr. Sondhi, before making this charge against the Madras Government that they were flouting the instructions from the Centre, had taken care to find out what the honourable Minister of Public Works was referring to when he said that the remarks of the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister did not apply to these concerns.

One other matter I wish to refer to and that is with reference to the development of Greater Delhi. We find that one crore of rupees has been asked for, for the development of Delhi and for the construction of quarters there. Before launching upon this project and taking up building activities here, I wish to say that we should come to a decision whether we are going to have the capital of India permanently in Delhi. I know that whenever this matter is mentioned it is brushed aside. It is not that I want that a decision should be taken here and now, but it is a matter which has got to be thoroughly gone into and a decision taken at the proper time. But before that, let us not commit ourselves. Let us not spend too much here in Delhi, so that at a later date it may not be said we have sunk so many crores in this place and how can we leave it. It has been said by the honourable the Prime Minister that this Government is a caretaker Government. So let us not tie the hands of the future Government that they should continue in Delhi as the capital.

Apart from this there is another aspect of the matter. We find that certain departments attached to the Ministry of Works, Mines and Power are to be shifted to Nasik and the honourable Minister has stated in the report submitted to us that he has consulted other Ministries of the possibility of sending some of their departments to other places. It is not only a matter for the decision of the various Ministries, but it should be a decision of the Government itself as far as possible to disperse the various departments in the various parts of the country so that there may not be overcrowding in Delhi. For example, we have been asked to sanction Rs. 5 lakhs for the building of the Federal Court. Where is it to be located? Is it to be located in Delhi or in any other place? As far as I can see for a Supreme Court of Appeal Delhi is not the proper place. There is not even a proper bar here. So we have to come to a decision before we make this grant regarding the place where this building has to be constructed.

I hope the Government will take a decision soon on this point, and if any decision has been taken by Government, they will let us know it.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): They say that "Charity begins at home". I shall therefore first of all touch on the Estate Office. I do not know how the honourable Members of this House have offended the Estate Officer. But it seems to me that we are, on account of faults which we have not committed, or on account of things which we have omitted, persona non-grata with him. Take the amount of money which is taken by that department for the Assembly quarters. If the honourable Members of the House, placed in my position, sometimes scan this Bill, they will find that a certain amount is taken as the rent every month. Then about Rs. 25/- per month is taken for the use of the furniture. Then Rs. 2/8/- is deducted for flowers. As a matter of fact the amount of flowers you get from the flower-bed in the whole year will cost only Rs. 2/8/-, but we have to pay Rs. 2/8/- every month. Then there are garden charges of Rs. 7/- per month. I have hunted several times to find that garden in the Assembly quarters but I have not been able to find it and yet Rs. 7/8/- per month is taken from me as garden charges.

[Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri]

Then, Sir, we are given some furniture for which we have to pay Rs. 25/- per month. It requires four persons to carry outside one of the chairs from the drawing room. You cannot carry it out alone so that your friends may be able to sit down. That is the position of the furniture.

As regards the bed, after using it for a few months, even after putting a mattress there, and though you may use it as a single bed, the whole thing crumbles down to the ground. The bed simply touches the ground after use for four or five months.

An Honourable Member: After four or five days.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I used it as a single bed and still it did it.

There is another very interesting item which beats every thing else:—viz., Rs. 25/- for other services. We have to pay separately to the municipality for electricity, then we have to pay separately to the municipality for water, we are not given any durwan or any servant. What are the other services for which we have to pay Rs. 25/-? There is no bed tea served, nor breakfast and still they take Rs. 25/- for other services. I do not know what are the other services rendered for which they take Rs. 25. (Shri H. V. Kamath: "Charity").

Your rent is deducted every month by the Legislative Assembly Department during the session. Then after four or five months after one has forgotten every thing there is a call for the payment of arrears for four or five months. In 1948 you have to pay the arrears for 1946 and in this month you may have to pay the arrears for last October or November. Why should not the sum be recovered during the same months and why should the arrears be charged after we have forgotten all about it. I am speaking on behalf of all the members in this House and I hope they support me.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: From Rs. 123 it has gone up to 200.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I come now to the C.P.W.D. (Central Public Works Department). It used to be said that C. stands for corruption, P. for partiality, W. for waste and D. for delay. As the honourable Minister has assured us that there is no corruption automatically with the going of corruption partiality also disappears. Then will the honourable Minister be pleased to admit and agree with me that waste and delay still continue.

I would first of all refer to the refugee houses in Delhi. I have seen them. I do not know whether the idea was that a refugee family after all the casualties they had suffered in the Punjab and elsewhere should comprise more than two or three persons, including a baby. If the houses had been built on that idea I could understand it. But as we all know there are families with 7 or 8 members and even then a small house where only two persons can live is allotted to them. If my honourable friend the Minister and I go together we will find it difficult to enter the house. These small houses fit for the accommodation of two or three people only have been built at a considerable cost and they will be of no use later on. So all this waste has taken place in the construction of those refugee houses. These houses have a small open latrine adjacent to the kitchen. They are so near each other. Then there is a drain which drains nothing and the water stagnates round about. Is it fair to compel the refugees to live in that kind of houses. If you build houses for the refugees you should build them in a way so that families can live in common decency and free from danger to their health.

Now I shall speak about electricity. I could not follow my friend Mr. B. Das when he complained that there is too much light in the Connaught Place, that there was too much electrification at the cost of some other areas in the town. Does my honourable friend and his companions who accompany him to the Connaught Place in the evenings mean that they illuminate the whole place so much that no more lighting is necessary? My friend Mr. Das has been here for the last twenty five years and knows the kind of fashionable people who wander about the place and probably from his own experience he would prefer the Connaught Place to be a little more under dark shade and should not have too much of light. So far as the poorer sections of the people are concerned who buy their goods from the pavement shops they would like to have a little more light there. I do not advocate the policy which my friend Mr. Das has advocated that you should cut down the lights in one place to provide more light elsewhere. On the other hand you must improve the supply of electricity so that everyone can get equally. Some months ago we noticed that on the Ferozshah Road the lights on one side, including the place where the Chief Whip resides, went out but the lights on the other side were working. I brought this matter to the notice of the Government by way of a question.

Sir, I wanted to speak about the aerodromes in Assam. Air service has been going on regularly since the last year and still the aerodromes are in an uncared for condition. It was said that the regular aerodrome would be built shortly but so far nothing has been done about it. There is a lot of delay in constructing the aerodromes in Gauhati and other places also.

I have only one more point to make. There is a road in Bengal which connects Darjeeling with Tibet through a place called Gantok. Why not a similar road be constructed to connect Assam with Tibet, so that the traffic will be diverted on to that road.

As regards petrol Nemesis has overtaken the Government. Petrol is drying up in Assam, because Assam has never been given the quota to which she is entitled. The province never got her quota for the year and therefore the oil wells are drying up. Even though the budget has not been passed, the Government has allowed the petrol depots to charge Rs. 2/9/- per gallon even from now on. In anticipation of the budget being passed they are already charging Rs. 2/9/- per gallon.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala (Bihar: General): Sir, as far back as 1869 the project of the Kosi valley was investigated. The ravages wrought by the river on the people living in its catchment area can better be seen rather than described here in a few minutes. The story of the people there is a pathetic tale. When the floods of the Kosi come they take away whole villages together and converts the whole area into a sea and later on into a desert. This project which was first conceived by the old Government was not at all mentioned by my honourable friend Mr. Gadgil this morning. I was looking forward to hear that something might have been done and was being done to remove the calamities of those people. It is an area of about twenty-three thousand square miles where the ravages of this Kosi river spread, and it affects about one-third of the population of the whole of Bihar. As I have said, I do not know what is being done regarding this Kosi project. As has been pointed out by my honourable friend Prof. K. T. Shah, before taking up these big projects there must be some plan thought out as to how the people who will be affected by these projects will be rehabilitated, how the power which will be created by these projects will be utilised, whether it will be utilised in a centralised way in the form of big industries or by distribution in the form of small industries—all these things should not be allowed to be done in a drifting way, but a clear plan should be thought out from the very beginning before any such project is taken in hand. Lakhs and crores of rupees are spent in making these projects. Preliminary investigation is made, then other investigations are made and then reports are published. Still the reports, when they come out, are defective in the sense that they have no well organised plan as to how all these things will be co-ordinated when the scheme succeeds. So far as Damodar Valley is concerned of course a part of Bihar is affected by that. But if you will consider the question of the ravages caused by the river Kosi with any other dam, the ravages done by the river Kosi are far greater than those done by any other river. If that fact is taken into consideration, namely the ravages caused and the consequent agonies and miseries to which the people are put, it should have been the first concern of this Government to take up this Kosi project and see, apart from getting something which we hope to gain by other projects in the future, that at least the miseries and the agonies to which these people are put every year are removed; this area of 23,000 square miles is first flooded in the form of sea and then it is converted into a desert as stated above. I do not want to take the time of the House. The only point which I wanted to stress upon the honourable Minister was regarding the Kosi project. It was in 1947 that the honourable Minister Mr. Bhaba who was in charge, had gone to the site of dam. He had also gone to the other places where the ravages are done by this river and there was a great public meeting in Nirmati. It was a sight to see how those people were first anxious and then felt relieved when the Minister drew up a picture as to what will happen in the future—when this project will be fulfilled all these areas will be electrified, all these areas will look green with green crops and all the people will have their houses electrified! But when I was hearing the speech of the honourable Minister naturally I felt anxious not finding the mention of Kosi. As I have said, I have to request and impress upon the honourable Minister that if the whole project is not going to be materialised due to any reason, looking to the miseries and agonies and the pathetic tales of these people, funds at least should not be the consideration for this Government. Bihar is a poor Province in its revenue income: though it is rich in everything but it is undeveloped. All the big revenues from income-tax on profits made in Bihar go to other provinces under the present arrangements.

Shri B. Das: How are you poor?

Shri B. P. Jhunjunwala: Because we are not given back what is taken in the form of income-tax and other things; we are given very little share. So it is not possible for us to take up the scheme ourselves.

I shall again invite the attention of the honourable Minister to this aspect that if that big scheme due to any reason is not taken up, I shall beg of and impress upon the honourable Minister at some other means of opening up big canals or putting up small dams here and there should be taken in hand immediately to give relief to the people.

Shri Satish Chandra (U.P.: General): Sir, the honourable Minister has given an overall picture of the work that the Government have done and propose to do in the near future, explaining the nation-building activities of his Ministry. Many people may imagine that the work has not gone with the speed with which it should have gone. But considering the nineteen anxious months that have passed after the attainment of freedom—including tragic days of bloodshed and violence—I think that the schemes are making satisfactory progress.

Prof. K. T. Shah has, a few minutes before, referred to the existence of a 'mutual admiration society' in this House. I am proud of being a member of that society. But I think that the name that he has given to that society is rather incorrect, because we who shower praises and admiration on the Ministers do not receive them in turn. After all what admiration do we get, and how is it 'mutual'—I fail to understand. But if we praise our Leaders and Ministers I am equally prepared to praise my learned honourable friend Prof. Shah for his ability, integrity and great knowledge—theoretical knowledge—of economic affairs.

Sir, reverting to the subject, I only wish to make one or two brief remarks about the work of this Ministry. An influential honourable Member from Madras, Shri Kala Venkata Rao, and my two honourable friends from Bihar Shri Ramnarayan Singh and Shri Jhunjunwala, have advanced the claims of Rampadsagar project and the Kosi dam. I, on the other hand, think that the main difficulty—why work is not proceeding satisfactorily—is that too many projects have been taken in hand at one and the same time, and cannot be executed speedily with the material and resources that are available to us. Only a few days back I was told by an officer of the U.P. Government with a technical knowledge of these matters, that various schemes in the United Provinces are held up not on account of the lack of finances of the U.P. Government which are available in plenty, but due to lack of material and due to lack of technical skill in the country. He told me that the U. P. Government's plans which are scheduled to be completed in ten years will take 200 years to complete if material is made available to them at the speed with which the U.P. Government obtained them during the last year. I, however, imagine that the pace of the projects will gain momentum as they make progress and that with the disappearance of our present difficulties we shall be able in future to speed up those programmes. After all, most of our leaders and workers in the field have been telling the peasants that India shall be a country of plenty and prosperity in ten or fifteen years time. Let us see that whatever schemes we take up, whatever schemes we announce and publicize are completed within the scheduled time so that there might not be a feeling of frustration if they could not be completed. Let us see that false hopes are not raised which may not materialise within a reasonable time.

Therefore, Sir, I think there should be greater co-ordination between the Centre and the Provincial Governments because after all the Central Government have taken up only a few big schemes like the Hirakud Dam or the Damodar Valley Corporation's multipurpose river-training project. But equally important schemes—though they might be slightly smaller in size—which will generate lakhs of kilowatts of electrical energy and which will be useful for flood control and in other ways, should not suffer simply because the Central Government's attention is diverted to a few projects under their own direct control. There should be an overall planning which not only incorporates the central schemes but all such schemes under the central and the various Provincial Governments.

Sir, there is a huge shortage of petrol in this country. While we are going ahead with schemes for civil aviation and have to depend more and more on motor transport, I really wonder what we have done so far, or how far the Geological Survey has paid its attention to finding out sources of petroleum in this country. After all, petroleum is a product for which we cannot at all times depend on foreign imports only. In this connection, I would say that in U. P. we have got power alcohol plants with an installed capacity of 55 lakh gallons per year, but the actual production is hardly half of this figure. Some research work should be carried on to improve the quality of the power alcohol which may to some extent gradually replace petrol. Moreover, there is a type of coal found in Sangroli in Mirzapur District from which—it has been claimed—petrol can be very easily manufactured. I do not know if any steps have been taken so far to manufacture petrol out of that coal, or whether experiments have been carried out in other parts of the country and if so with what results, but it is surely a field for investigation.

In the end, I would only say that the nation-building activity is a long process the foundations of which are being laid now. I am sure, a magnificent superstructure shall be raised and raised quicker than many of us imagine, and that the standard of living of the common man shall be considerably raised.

Shri O. V. Alagesan (Madras: General): Mr. Chairman, I do not think this Government suffers from want of opposition as Prof. Shah would have us believed. First of all, there is the opposition by the Party itself as was witnessed during the General Discussion on the Budget. Again, when Professor Shah is there, who can say that there is no opposition to this Government? He constitutes the intellectual opposition to this Government, and coming down, Mr. Naziruddin constitutes, if I may say so, the grammatical opposition to this Government. The role that our Ministers have to play is a difficult one. They have first of all to carry the bureaucratic machinery with them, to make them do the work they want out of it, and they have also to carry the non-official supporters with them. Sir, this, everyone will admit, is a difficult task. It is not dissimilar to that of a man with two wives. But I can say from my experience of the honourable the Minister for Works, Mines and Power that he has done his task with consummate skill and the success of his Department is not a little due to that.

The honourable Minister mentioned the construction of the Jammu-Pathankot Road. We all rejoiced that there has been a happy consummation of the Kashmir fight. There has been a cease fire on the 1st of this year. It is not a little due to the construction of this road, which helped our military in its valorous deeds to a very great extent. This House should appreciate the good work done by the department.

More than one speaker spoke at length on the river valley schemes. These schemes are romantic schemes: they raise before our mind's eye a very prosperous picture of our country in a few years, say in ten or fifteen years. So everybody is dazzled by these schemes. It is but natural that provincial and regional claims are put forward. As one coming from Madras, I would certainly ask that the Ramapadasagar scheme should be taken up as early as possible. The projects that are on paper have to be translated in terms of materials, plant and machinery, personnel and other equipment. The difficulty of the job will be known only when this is attempted. Many Members advocate the taking up of new schemes. In Madras the Tungabhadra project has been already taken in hand and excavation work has been completed. But masonry work has been held up, I read in the papers yesterday, for want of cement. There will be such maladjustments if you do not prepare an overall plan for the execution of these attractive schemes spread over a number of years.

Whenever a project is taken in hand most of the fruits of it go to the industrialists. As my honourable friend Sri Kala Venkata Rao pointed out this morning, only 3.7 per cent. of the electricity produced goes for irrigation purposes now. This process should not be continued. More electricity should be made available for agriculture and for other irrigation purposes. Thousands of wells were sunk in Madras under the 'Grow-more-food' scheme. If electricity could be made available for pumping water from at least half the number of such wells, the food situation would have very much eased in Madras. So the honourable Minister should see to it that he does not give all the electricity to Mr. Mody, but that a considerable portion of it is given to Professor Ranga also. This should be borne in mind when power projects are taken in hand.

This Department is one of the major spending Departments and so I do not think it will be out of place if I now touch on the economy aspect of it. In the Budget papers circulated to us there is an item called 'Other charges'. I am told that this single item covers many a sin. What are these 'other charges'? Nowhere do we find an explanation of them. This morning there was mention of staff cars. I do not deny that some Ministries may require staff cars. But a scrutiny may be made into the use of these cars and the number restricted to bare necessity. If this is done I am confident that the honourable the Finance Minister will be able to save about 15 lakhs. It appears that these 'Other charges' also include touring charges. There are tours and tours. When you can go by train, you may travel by plane and when you can go by a service plane, you may charter a plane and go. All these lead to unnecessary expenditure and extravagance which should be cut down and the amount saved made available for more useful purposes. I believe that the Finance Minister will have a scrutiny made into these items and thus reduce the deficit now found in the Budget.

تا تریاق از عراق آوردہ بود

مار گزیدہ مردہ۔ بود

یعنی جب تک عراق سے دوا آئے گی تب تک سانپ کا کاٹا مر جائے گا۔

[گیانی گورمکھ سنگھ مسافر]

درب موئے نوکا ملے

اکوموڈیشن (accommodation) ہے۔ اور نہ ڈیوریشن (duration) ہے۔ یعنی ان مکانوں میں کوئی بھی خوبی نہیں ہے۔ عاں اگر کوئی خستہ حال سڑک پر پڑا ہے تو اسکو سر لکانے کے لئے جگہ ہے۔ اور وہ مجبوراً وہاں آگئے ہیں۔ مگر دراصل وہاں روپیہ برباد ہی کیا گیا ہے۔ میں منسٹر صاحب کی خدمت میں عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ وہ پانی پت میں جو کوارٹر رفیوجیز کے لئے بنے ہیں ان کو دیکھیں کہ وہ کتنے اچھے بنے ہیں۔ اگر وہاں اچھے مکان بن سکتے ہیں تو یہاں بھی بن سکتے ہیں۔ میں یہ مانتا ہوں کہ یہ کام تھیکہ پر کروایا گیا ہے۔ ہمارے پنجاب میں ایک مثل مشہور ہے کہ جو لوگ یا لڑکی خوبصورت ہوتا ہے اس کو کہا جاتا ہے کہ ایشور نے اسکو اپنے ہاتھ سے بنایا ہے اور بد صورت کے متعلق کہا جاتا ہے کہ یہ تھیکے پر بنایا گیا ہے۔ تو ان تھیکے پر بنائے گئے مکانوں کی حالت اتنی خراب ہے کہ اگر ایک چارپائی بچھا لی جائے تو کوئی باہر نکلنے کی جگہ نہیں رہتی۔ کوئی سینیتیشن کا انتظام نہیں ہے۔ پچھلے دنوں جب بارش ہوئی تو میں نے دیکھا کہ بارش کا پانی اندر پھر گیا تھا۔ اور سب لوگ گھروں سے باہر تھے۔ ان کے پاس جو سامان تھا وہ بھی بہت خراب ہو گیا تھا۔ لوگوں میں یہ خیال ہے کہ رفیوجیز کو دہلی میں برداشت نہیں کیا جا رہا ہے۔ میرا کہنا یہ ہے کہ اس طرح کے مکان دیکر اس خیال کو پکا نہ کیا جائے۔

چوتھی بات میں لیبر ریکشن کے بارے میں کہنا چاہتا ہوں۔ ہارڈنگ ایوری نیو کیسپ میں جہاں کہ پہلے ملٹری کے افسر رہتے تھے اب وہاں رفیوجیز رہتے ہیں۔ وہ کرایہ بھی اتنا ہی دیتے ہیں۔ وہاں پر پہلے چالیس سویپرز (sweepers) صفائی کا کام کرتے تھے۔ اب آٹھ دس ہیں۔ پہلے وہاں ۲۵ چوکیدار تھے۔ اب ۷-۵ چوکیدار رہ گئے ہیں۔ اس سے سینیتیشن خراب ہو گیا ہے اور چوری کا اندیشہ ہے۔ اس تھوڑی سی لیبر کے گھٹانے سے محکمے کو کوئی زیادہ فائدہ نہیں ہو سکتا۔ اگر کسی بڑے افسر کو کم کر دیا جائے تو اس سے ساری کمی پوری ہو سکتی ہے۔ میرا مطلب یہ ہے کہ لو پید آدمی کے گھٹانے سے بجٹ کم ہوتی ہے اور نقصان زیادہ۔

Giani Gurmukh Singh Musafir (East Punjab: Sikh): Sir, as the time at my disposal is short, so without any introduction or customary thanksgiving, I begin to submit whatever I have to say in my speech. I know that our honourable the Minister for Works, Mines and Power does not stand in need of any thanksgiving. From what he has mentioned in his report and what he has told in his speech this morning it is clear that he has done a lot for the advancement of his Department. As many of my honourable friends have said it is true that on the working of the Works, Mines and Power Department depends, to a great extent, the advancement of many things. I would not have felt the necessity of making a speech at the present, had some other honourable member submitted the things that I want to submit.

The present condition of Punjab deserves a great deal of attention. Some time back while addressing the people of Punjab at Ambala our Deputy Prime Minister the honourable Sardar Patel, had said that the Punjabis have lost much and now they have to re-build the same in East Punjab. So a prior and careful attention of the Works, Mines and Power Ministry can now make the East Punjab prosperous. It is true that a good deal of work is being done by giving practical shape to the Bhakra Dam Scheme, and help is also being received from Government of India. The honourable Minister said this morning that at present more than one dozen projects are being carried on. Keeping the Punjab in view the speed with which the work is progressing reminds me of an old Persian proverb:

مار گزیده مرده بود

(By the time the medicine could be had from Iraq the snake-bitten man would die.)

(If one gets a boat after he is drowned it is of no use to him).

By the manner in which work is being carried on then Punjab cannot get any benefit in respect of irrigation and electricity for seven or eight years hence. For this I wish to make a small suggestion. In Punjab there is small doab tract, the soil of which is very fertile. Much food grains can be grown there, but the tract is deficient in water supply. There flows a small river called Reni. If a small project is made of that river, then with its help a large area can be made fertile, and if work there is expedited then it can prove beneficial to one part of Punjab at a very early date. Punjab is in tottering condition and there have come those people from West Punjab who have left behind very fertile lands. This would give them a great deal of relief. I think that the welfare of India depends upon the prosperity of Punjab and so speedy measures may be taken for intensifying irrigation projects.

The second thing, which I wish to draw your attention particularly, is about the problem of roads. I wish to repeat all what I said at the time of the Railway Budget, that at present the position of East Punjab is identical with the position that West Punjab had in the time of United Punjab. Good roads were specially made in West Punjab. All these good roads diverged from Lahore only. If you travel from Lahore to Peshawar and from Delhi to Amritsar then you would come to know how much they differ from each other. There the roads are very good and here they are very bad. There is no roadlink connecting the three border districts of Amritsar, Ferozepur and Gurdaspur, in the same way as there is no rail link between them. So from the strategic point of view, from the commercial point of view and from the irrigation point of view, it is very essential to pay more attention towards the roads.

The third thing I wish to submit about the efficiency and the quality of work of the department. My friend Shri Chaudhuri Rohini Kumar has referred to it in a humorous way. I think lest it may be considered a piece of humour only, I wish the honourable Members may see for themselves the quarters that have been built for refugees at Pusa Road, I would submit that if they would see them they would come to this very conclusion that there is neither sanitation, nor ventilation, nor accommodation, meaning thereby that there is no convenience in these houses except that they provide only a roof to those unfortunates who were lying on roads in the open, and have occupied these houses out of sheer helplessness. In fact money has been wasted there. I wish to submit to the Honourable the Minister that he may go and see how nice are the quarters that have been constructed for the refugees at Panipat (East Punjab). If good houses can be constructed there then they can surely be constructed here also. I agree that this work was got done on contract basis. In the Punjab there is a proverb which means that the children who are beautiful that God has made them with his own hands, and about ugly ones that they have been made on contract basis. So the condition of these houses, made on contract basis, is so bad that if a cot is placed therein, then no passage for exit is left. There is no arrangement for sanitation. When it rained a few days back I saw that the rain water had collected inside the houses and all the people came outside their houses, and whatever goods they had were all soaked and spoiled. The people think that the refugees are not being tolerated in Delhi. I wish to submit that these surmises may not be strengthened by giving such houses to them.

The fourth thing I wish to submit about labour reduction. In Hardinge Avenue Camp, where previously the military officers lived, now live the refugees. They pay the same amount of rent. There previously 40 sweepers used to do the conservancy work but now the number is only 5 or 10. Previously there were 25 chowkidars, now only 5 or 7 chowkidars are left. For this the sanitation has become bad and there is apprehension of thefts. The department cannot gain much benefit by reducing this small amount of labour. If the services of one high placed official is terminated then by this all the deficit can be made up. I mean to say that by reducing low paid labour the saving is always less but the inconveniences increase.

With your permission Sir, the last thing that I wish to submit to our honourable the Minister is that the expert economists hold this opinion about India that, "India is a rich country with poor people". So it is within the power of our honourable the Minister that he can change this opinion. The Nature has given to India two things—water and minerals. The operation of these two things lies in the hands of the honourable the Minister for Works, Mines and Power. The work of generating hydro-electric power may be speeded up. As regards the utilization of these minerals, leaving aside tall talks, I wish to submit only one example. India has a number of minerals. One of them has been expressly disregarded, and that mineral is Mica. We use Mica in quite a different manner, but about its fundamental utility we have paid no attention. There is no substitute for Mica and for this reason its price is very high. Till the time our electricity generating projects would be completed and electrical goods manufactured here, then, at the present rate of export, our supply of Mica will be exhausted. Therefore, I wish to submit this for the kind consideration of the honourable the Minister that some check must be placed on this. India produces more than half of the world output of Mica and every year Mica worth 2 crores of rupees is exported. In sheer joy of getting 2 crores of rupees we must not forget the needs of our own country and so care should be taken to retain it. It may not so happen that when electricity begins to be produced in bulk in our country and electric goods are manufactured the supplies of Mica may be exhausted. This can be said about such other minerals, but there is no time at my disposal. With these words Sir, I finish my speech.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Mr. Chairman, thirteen honourable members have participated in the discussion this day. I shall deal with the various points raised by the honourable members; but before I do that, I would like to refer to the general observations made by the honourable Member Prof. K. T. Shah.

He described this House as a mutual admiration society. At least I was present in this House on the 3rd, 4th and 5th of March and I did not carry that impression and the impression that was carried by the public tallied with mine. I am surprised that the House should be described as a mutual admiration society. When I hear from my socialist friends that there is no party of opposition in this House, it may be true in a formal sense, but substantially, every proposition, every Bill is considered here on merits irrespective of party affiliation. This only shows how eminently we are fit to run a democratic Government.

The honourable Prof. K. T. Shah rightly referred to the absolute necessity of having an over-all plan so far as the industrial development of this country is concerned. I agree with him that in any planned economy, there must be complete integration between the various resources, that there should be target fixed in terms of time and that they should be realised by adequate agencies that may be evolved by the Government of the day. I do not think that the Government is unmindful of this fact. As a matter of fact, when there was some financial difficulty, the Government appointed a Priority Committee and the respective merits of every project were considered, not only the projects of this Ministry, but projects which were sponsored by the Ministry of Industry also, and a proper integrated plan has been evolved. At the same time, I appreciate his anxiety and I have no doubt the Government will give this particular aspect due consideration in course of time.

Another general observation that was made by my friend Babu Ramnarain was about efficiency and corruption. Efficiency has been described as a process which secures optimum result with minimum resources in terms of time, space and material. Judged by this test, I am hopeful that what this Ministry has done will be considered to have been done with a fair measure of efficiency. The other point which was referred to by my friend Babu Ramnarain was about corruption. I may point out to him that all possible efforts are being made to put down corruption. Every complaint whether it is signed or unsigned, is enquired into. When I feel that there is a prima facie case, the matter is referred to Special Police, prosecutions have been launched, disciplinary actions have been taken. With all that I feel after nearly 18 months that after all fear is not a state of mind which would give me the required constructive approach to the solution of my problems. I have therefore made some slight changes in the approach to this problem. I have since sometime been appealing to the finer instincts of the officers and in one of the meetings I said "If you only believe that we are partners in a great co-operative enterprise and none of us is insignificant and at the same time none of us is indispensable, we will have a fair and a balanced view of our own duties" I still feel that by an appeal to the finer instincts of our officials we will get better results. At the same time I do not propose to give up the other approach in proved cases or in cases where there is prima facie evidence. That I propose to take all the steps I have mentioned already. I have already placed before them the ideal of industry, integrity and anonymity and my experience is I should say that I have received full co-operation from the Secretary down to the sweeper engaged in the Ministry. Not that they don't generally partake of those movements which are abroad occasionally, they are lethargic sometimes, they don't work sometimes, they threaten to strike but so far as dealing in a manner which is somewhat unorthodox is concerned, it has given me good results. I have introduced what is called the Whitley Council system in our Ministry. Every month the Head of the Section meets the subordinates, then the Heads of Sections meet the Departmental Head and the Departmental Heads meet me every month. It is a sort of informal gathering where no individual complaints but problems which relate to conditions of work and efficiency are discussed and anything said in these meetings is never taken into consideration against him and never prejudices the chances of any particular officer. After all we may describe Government as a machine but it is not the machine—not the mechanics of it, but it is the personality of the worker that is important and unless you give that personality a fair chance to expand and show initiative and show constructiveness, you cannot expect any progress in the country.

Now taking the point made by several honourable Members, my old friend Mr. B. Das made certain remarks about certain items in the budget. I may tell him that so far as the Delhi Electricity Authority is concerned, the amount is deposited with the Reserve Bank and as against that orders are placed. The other precautions which he urged in connection with the framing of the budget of Damodar Valley Corporation are welcome and they will be passed on to the appropriate authorities. So far as the budget estimates that have been presented by me a few days ago, I can only say this is the first time and the year started not exactly on the first of April but somewhat in the middle of the normal financial year. I now go to points raised by my honourable friend Kala Venkata Rao. He made two points, one was with respect to the right approach to such problems as irrigation and power. I entirely agree and he must have noticed not merely from what I have said often but what we are doing and in the way we are doing that we look upon expansion of irrigation facilities not in terms of dividend or profit but we feel that it has an insurance value and it is a matter which must be done. Just as in the matter of defence of a country, financial considerations are irrelevant and invalid, and the country has to be defended I think in the matter of food, equally all considerations of finances or economic considerations must be similarly irrelevant. It is with that definite view we have decided to go with these multi-purpose projects. When I said that I am concentrating attention on those which give me quicker results, it did not mean that I am going to neglect or postpone indefinitely any other project which are under investigation or which are complete so far as the investigation stage is concerned. He is rightly worried over the Rampadasagar Project and questions that have been asked in this House also show what great interest at least the members from the South take in this particular project. I said in 1942 on Dussehra Day when I was in the Yeravada Jail and when we gathered together to celebrate it in spite of Jail Manual, "I am so confident of ultimate success that although I was born in a slave country, I am going to die in a free country. On the 15th August 1947 not only I found myself in a free country but by a singular stroke of good fortune I found myself included in the first cabinet of this country, I said somehow or other my words are like those of the old Rishi—

ऋषिणाम पुनराधाम् वाचमर्थोन्धावति (Meaning follows the words uttered by great sages.)

Let me make another prophecy and that is 'I shall die in a prosperous country' and I pledge every moment of my life, every ounce of my energy that I shall spare neither in pushing those schemes which are going to make my country prosperous and full of everything we need. With that determination not only I am proceeding but somehow or other I have been able to inject that enthusiasm in my officers and if anyone of the honourable Members care to visit while they are working in the Secretariat or much more on the projects, we will find how conscientiously, how courageously they are fighting the forces of nature and carrying out plans which it is their duty to do. When I said that I am preferring schemes which will give quicker results, it was with this object. For we have been spending over 100 crores round about on the import of food annually and the sooner I am in a position to produce more food in the country the better. Rampadsagar is going to be one of the wonderful engineering feats. If the Taj Mahal represents the highest watermark in art, Rampadsagar, if and when completed will represent the highest watermark in engineering skill. But what my country needs today is not an engineering record, but solid actual facts which will give me quicker results. With that object in view, if I have delayed it, it is not only in the interest of Andhra but also in the interest of the whole country. I repeat my assurance that when financial circumstances improve, I shall certainly do my best to push this scheme also. A friend of mine suggested that this should be taken section-wise. But these schemes are such that they cannot be divided. You cannot take one section after another. Either you take up the whole or you do not take it at all.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): The engineers have said so!

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: You are going to commit the country to an expenditure of Rs. 130 crores for a scheme which will take seven years for the filling up of the foundation, 12 years for the irrigation aspect, 19 years for complete development, absorbing in its wake all the engineering staff of Madras and all the steel and cement that is made available for Madras. I have now to judge between these two alternatives—whether I shall go in for the Rampadsagar scheme or delay it for some time because the interest of the country requires that I should concentrate more on something else. The House will agree that while on the one hand I am not prejudiced against the Rampadsagar scheme, on the other hand I am doing something which is entirely in the interest of this country. If there is anything that can be attributed to me, it will be an error of judgment but there is no mala fides on my part.

Then, Sir, my honourable friend Kala Venkata Rao suggested certain financial proposals in order to finance big schemes. I am not an indifferent economist but on this particular point I do not want to venture any suggestion, because a greater authority is present in the House, and I am sure at some due moment the honourable Dr. John Matthai will deal with it. But let me state briefly that if we follow these suggestions we will only meet with disaster and nothing else.

Shri B. Das: Specialists will follow it!

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Then, Sir, a reference was made by my honourable friend, Babu Ram Narayan Singh and Mr. Jhunjhunwalla about Kosi. As a matter of fact, I am not only not neglecting it, but my officers had to fight several times in order to get some amount sanctioned for the continuance of investigations which are going on and for the ensuing financial year Rs. 20,26,000 have been sanctioned.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: But this is all that you wanted!

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Honourable Members who are from Bihar naturally feel very keenly about it. I share their keenness. I know nearly 20,000 square miles are affected as well as 3,00,000 acres of good land. But at the same time how difficult is the problem will be realized if honourable Members know that this whole area is in the earthquake region. Where shall I put the dam? Suppose I make the slightest mistake and spend about Rs. 75 crores over this project, and if by some freak of nature the whole thing topples, not only I lose Rs. 75 crores but the consequential damage will be still greater. Therefore, I am taking the most expert advice available and also seeing things for myself. It may interest my honourable friend from Bihar that I am leaving for Kosi tomorrow afternoon. All that I want them to know (Shri H. V. Kamath: 'Take them with you!') is that the Government is not neglecting this scheme. Government propose to go ahead with investigation and when the investigations are complete the results will be submitted to a high expert committee. As I said I do not want to take a chance nor any risk with such huge financial commitments.

My honourable friend, Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri, in his inimitable way said something about furniture and other matters. As a matter of fact, furniture is designed according to the normal size of a person that would occupy them. If some calamity happens in odd circumstances surely the P.W.D. is not responsible for it! He enumerated several charges. I am just thinking whether to justify the past criticism of my department I should offer, if not free boarding at least free lodging to the Members of the House and in case I do that I am sure to carry my demands unanimously (Honourable Members: 'No, no').

Shri B. L. Sondhi: We are not selfish!

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: I want to recover fair rent. Those charges which he has mentioned are with respect to the chaukidar, maintenance and the garden. At any rate, when I was staying in one of the Ferozshah Road bungalows there was something like a garden: of course, not like the one in the Governor-General's House!

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): The Ministers!

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: However, if there is any particular grievance, I promise I shall look into it and I am sure the experience of the honourable Member has been that wherever any complaint has been made, at least on my part I have tried to remove it promptly.

A point was made by my honourable friend, Mr. Chaliha about the possibilities of finding further oil in Assam. I have already stated on several occasions that it is the intention of this Government to tap further sources but all that is conditioned by the supply of officers that we have in our Survey of India Department. At present one party is already working in Assam. We hope to succeed in expanding our staff, so far we know that Assam is the place where oil is likely to be found in abundance, and there is one consideration that the province is not combustible like Bengal. So more attention will be paid in future, and all those places which only an Assamese can pronounce have been somehow or other taken down by me—I do not know with what correctness—and they will be just looked into and forwarded to the Geological Survey Department.

A reference was made to rent control and the housing problem. Let me repeat that this Government has not accepted fully the obligation of housing all the officials. So far as housing for the general non-official public is concerned, no definite obligation has yet been accepted by the Government. The only obligation is to accommodate refugees and some houses have been built.

A complaint has been made in this House that those houses are not all that they should be. But they have been designed by the Relief and Rehabilitation Ministry and my Ministry is only the construction agency. At the same time, I have visited those houses and I feel that they may not be palaces but that they are fairly good and they are meant for the time being to meet the immediate demand and not to be the solution of the long-term housing problem.

About rent control and building of new houses, the complaint seems to come not very much from the bottom of the heart of my friend, Babu Ram Narayan Singh. It seems that somebody has communicated to him something and he has placed that complaint before the House. I want to assure him that this Government is very anxious to encourage building programmes on the part of non-officials because to that extent the trouble will be less for me individually. But I may say that if new houses are built. I am determined that the landlord shall not exploit the tenant.

On that make no mistake and the agency for determining the standard rent is there and it is drawn up according to the provisions of the law. 5 P. M. If any particular landlord satisfied the authority that he has spent so much then in terms of that amount the standard rent will be fixed. If there is any particular grievance of any individual I am quite prepared to go into it and recommend such just action as may be appropriate in that case.

Sir, I have come to the end of my speech. Brick by brick and dam by dam these projects are being completed and I should say that brick by brick we are building up the Temple of Prosperity. It has been given to this generation to put its best efforts, so that when the results come they will be available to the generations that will follow us. I am sure that in this task we shall all co-operate whole heartedly. We shall do something and not remain mere spectators, for I feel that if you want to bring in a classless society, which undoubtedly is the object of the party to which you and I belong, it is only possible to have that classless society if we create conditions in which there will be abundance and not scarcity. It is only when there is plenty there is prosperity: it is only when there is abundance there is less of those vices which come up before criminal courts. If we are successful in creating those conditions we will be creating a classless society and we would be, I should say, translating the dream of Mahatma Gandhi into actual reality.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it is with a feeling of hesitation almost amounting to reluctance, that now-a-days I rise before the House to talk about financial matters. I have been in constant attendance at the House ever since the general discussion on the Budget began, and I have been present here also at the debate on the estimates of every Ministry. It has occurred to me that there is a marked difference between the attitude of the House to the great spending departments of Government and its attitude to the Finance Ministry which has to find the money. As I listened to the debate on the estimates of these spending Ministries, I found that the House throughout was in a very generous mood. I found honourable members making very generous promises regarding additional funds if they wanted them. And, Sir, when I come round with my collection bag in order to raise the money required for implementing these generous assurances, the attitude of the House suddenly changes. The House curses me, swears at me, throws stones at me, and nearly chucks me out of the compound right over the fence. I have come to the conclusion that in any modern governmental set-up, the life of a Finance Minister, like the proverbial policeman's lot, is a very hard one and so he sits here in his little corner of the House, listening to these criticisms, subjected to these attacks, and looks for all the world like a maimed dog, licking his wounds all the time!

Sir, with this cheerful introduction, may I get down to the business of the day.

I do not intend this morning to refer to matters of detail relating to the Budget, or to matters of detail relating to our financial administration, because these are things which were very much under discussion during the general debate. I take it that many of these matters will come up for discussion again when the Finance Bill comes before the House.

I thought therefore probably the most useful way in which I could spend the time which the House has placed at my disposal, would be to draw the attention of honourable members to some of the bigger, broader problems which underlie the budgetary position of Government, so that the House may have an opportunity of expressing its views on these matters which otherwise might escape attention and discussion altogether.

The first of the problems to which I would like to refer is the problem of inflation and high prices, a problem in which, both the House and the country are so deeply and so vitally interested. Let me first give the facts as disclosed by the index numbers that we have.

If you take the wholesale index number prepared by the Economic Adviser to Government the position is that since November when our anti-inflationary programme had been put in operation, the general index number, taking the composite figure, shows a decline of somewhere about 10 to 11 points: that is to say, taking the latest index figure as compared with the index figure last November. Manufactured and semi-manufactured articles also show a fairly marked decline. Similarly if you take all the food articles together, not merely cereals but pulses and all food articles together, that also shows a decline. But when you come to food grains, and industrial raw materials, mainly agricultural products, then you find that there is a difference in the situation. As regards cereals and industrial raw materials and position seems to be still one of flux. Prices are still fluctuating and it is almost difficult to tell from these fluctuating figures whether any definite trend is discernible.

I would like to draw the attention of the House to one or two matters regarding cereals and industrial raw materials, because these are the things that concern us most today.

As regards cereals the position seems to be—and I say it from a fairly careful analysis of our index number—that but for the price of wheat probably cereals also would have shown a downward trend. As the House knows, the price of wheat at Amritsar has been showing a downward trend for some weeks now but the position has been different in the Hapur market and it is really the position of wheat in the Hapur market that is responsible largely for the fact that cereals so far have not shown a downward trend.

Regarding industrial raw materials I find on a similar analysis of the index number that the fact that there has been no decline is largely accounted for by the position regarding oilseeds. Oilseeds recently have been the subject of a great deal of speculation and the fact that, as the result of speculation, the prices of oilseeds have not merely been remaining on the whole at a high level but fluctuating at that level, is the reason, I think that the index of industrial raw materials has been disclosing on the whole a somewhat unsatisfactory trend. Now that is as far as the wholesale index number is concerned.

I would like to tell the House at the same time, that since more than 50 per cent of the cost of living index is represented by food grains, the position with regard to cereals in the wholesale index number is reflected in the cost of living index. Until we are able to find a solution for our food problem we are not likely to see any perceptible decline in the cost of living index. As far as the food position is concerned I have no doubt that my honourable colleague, the Food Minister, will deal with the matter in greater detail later. But I would like to say this and it is a point which I think I mentioned during the question hour a few weeks ago, I personally do not think that we shall find a downward trend in the prices of food grains until the Rabi harvest has come in, because although Government have resumed the policy of food control, that policy is not likely to be effective until the supplies are better ensured. In other words, when the Rabi harvest has come in and we are able to get more and more of the imported food grains which we are expecting, and as the procurement policy of the Provincial Governments shows better results, until that position is reached, it is not possible for Government to give full effect to the rationing policy to which they are committed. And, if I may venture a forecast, I think, it would be somewhere about the end of April that we shall begin to find a downward trend in the matter of food grains and personally I am rather hopeful that between May and the six months following May we shall find that the position has assumed a more satisfactory aspect.

There has been a great deal of criticism regarding Government's anti-inflation policy, mainly on the ground that the results have not been perceptible in a shorter time as the country would have expected. (Babul Ramnarayan Singh: 'Because of no active steps.') Now the policy of Government is what now throughout the world is generally referred to as a policy of "disinflation" rather than deflation—I do not like to use this kind of economic jargon—but the point of it, is this: that at a time when prices are rising and inflation is almost what

12 Noon I may call of the galloping variety—and that is the sort of inflation that we had between January 1948 and August or September 1948—the right way of tackling it is not to try and bring about a drastic reduction but to try, in the first place, to put a stop to the rise, because if you are able to prevent a rise in prices and keep the prices at a fairly stable level for a short period, then you are in a better position to bring about a downward trend in prices. Inflation is somewhat like water: if you can check the flow of it, then it takes a direction quite the reverse: it cannot stand still. The reason why it is necessary to go rather slow with this process of bringing about a downward trend in prices is this. You must see to it at each stage that there is a proper relationship maintained between the level of prices and the level of costs. Suppose for example, in regard to agricultural produce—and that is the thing in which we are most interested—we are able by reducing the money supply in the country and thus curtailing the purchasing power, to bring about a sudden reduction. If that happens then it is going to react upon the agricultural producer in a serious way, because you can reduce the price of your food grains overnight but it would not be possible for the agricultural producer straightaway in the same period of time to reduce his cost. Labour is a very important item of cost in agriculture. The prices of food grains may be brought down but you cannot go straightaway and tell your labourer that he should accept wages at a lower rate. Failing this you are likely to bring about a situation where the producer would find it difficult to regulate his economy. That is what, in my opinion, is one of the most serious problems that we have got to take into account. When people throughout the country, particularly in industrial areas, complain about the high level of agricultural prices and express great anxiety about bringing them down, to my mind, what they do not realise is that when they do that they are going to create a situation in which the position of the agricultural producer would be seriously disorganised. The same thing applies to manufactured goods. You can by very drastic measures, as some countries have attempted, bring about a drastic fall in prices. But if you are not in a position at the same time to bring down labour costs you are going to create disorganisation in the economy which ultimately would affect the position of supply and make inflation still worse.

We have been criticised for not taking active steps, for example, in regard to the money supply of the country. We consulted various sections of public opinion last year regarding the measures to be taken to stop inflation. They suggested some summary measures regarding the money supply of the country. They said "you freeze bank deposits; you demonetise currency notes; have a scheme of compulsory saving." Supposing we had done all that the result would have been in the first place a drastic reduction in the prices of manufactured goods and food grains without a corresponding reduction in the costs on which these are based. Apart from that, one of the considerations which weighed with us was this that if you freeze bank deposits and demonetise currency notes—and do things of this kind in a country which yet has got to get used to investment—there would be a feeling of insecurity which is going to affect ultimately the whole problem of production. And, I said in the course of my reply to the general debate we are already suffering from a state of acute stringency in the investment market. We cannot therefore afford to bring about any drastic reduction in the money supply available.

There is one point with regard to this question of food grains to which I would like to ask the attention of the House. One reason why we are not able to bring down the price as quickly as the House would like and the country would like is that we have fixed the procurement prices at a somewhat higher level than the prices which prevailed just before we abolished control. If you take the prices of December 1947 the procurement prices that we have now fixed are about 25 to 50 per cent higher than the prices which prevailed in December 1947. Therefore the control prices themselves are higher by that margin than the prices which prevailed before we went back on control. The reason for doing that is this. If you carefully examine the food position with reference to the control policy towards the end of 1947, you will find that where our control policy failed was in regard to procurement. At the prices which prevailed in December 1947 it was impossible for Government to implement its procurement policy on which the whole question of flow of supplies depended. We realized therefore that if you want to ensure a continuous flow of supplies you must be prepared to fix your prices at a level which would make it easy for the agricultural producer to bring his supplies into the market. So long as our procurement prices today are higher than the procurement price of 1947 there is bound to be a certain delay in the reduction of prices to the levels that we expect.

When we examine this question of the level of prices and of inflation I would like the House to realize that our economy is not an isolated economy. We are closely bound up with movements in these matters in other countries. Honourable members who have been following discussions in the press about the movement of world prices will have realized that there is a rather interesting phenomenon gradually developing in the United States of America. The United States have had a bumper crop in the leading agricultural products. In fact, I believe from such reports as I have seen, they have not had so large a crop for a period of ten or twelve years. There has been better production of food grains in other parts of the world also like Canada and Australia and even on the Continent of Europe. With all this large supply on the horizon there has been a definite downward trend in the prices of food grains in America. The problem whether this fall in prices is the beginning of a large downward trend which may amount to something like an economic depression of the kind that we had round about 1930 is one that is exciting the interest of American economists today; there is a great deal of discussion going on. On the whole the prevailing opinion appears to be that this is not the beginning of a depression; it is what might be called a process of readjustment. In fact they like to describe their policy also in terms of disinflation. In other words they would like to control and regulate the fall of prices, not to allow the fall of prices to get out of hand so that you are unable to control its consequences. Whatever may be the opinion which experts in these matters hold regarding the present price position in America I think it is wise for us to be prepared for something like a general decline in prices throughout the world. If that happens it is quite conceivable that that would react rather seriously on the level of prices in this country. If that happens, if we are having a very intensive anti-inflationary campaign in the country and if that coincides within a period of a year or eighteen months with a marked downward fall in world prices, we might find ourselves in a position where the situation might entirely get out of hand. I therefore think on the whole that while we should proceed with our policy of bringing about a gradual reduction in prices it would be wise on our part not to attempt anything like a drastic fall because we might get caught in world forces which will take the problem entirely out of our hands.

With regard to this question of inflation I want to make a reference to the budget because budgets and inflation are linked together. As the House will have noticed, throughout the country this year, both at the Centre and in most of the Provinces, Governments have tried to avoid a deficit. They have tried as far as possible to achieve a surplus and in any case to balance their budgets. That was done more or less in accordance with the policy which we at the Centre laid down in connection with our anti-inflationary campaign. Of course I am well aware of the uses of a deficit budget,—its uses under certain conditions. For example, if we are passing through a period of acute depression it is worth while providing for a deficit budget because that would mean putting more and more purchasing power into the country and raising the level of demand which is precisely what President Roosevelt did at the time of the New Deal. But in our country today when we are passing through a period of acute inflation it seems to me it is a dangerous matter to leave a deficit uncovered. We have proceeded on these lines. I therefore hope that the budgetary policy which both the Central Government and the Provincial Governments have adopted this year is a policy which will help in solving the problem of inflation.

While that is so the point may be raised: if you are going to achieve a balanced Budget by means of indirect taxes, then, while on the one hand you are following an anti-inflationary policy, on the other hand you are following a policy which probably will take you in a different direction. That is a matter which I have carefully considered. Whatever view the House might hold regarding the way in which income has been recently distributed in the country, among various sections of the community, it is certain that large numbers of people who have not been used to higher incomes have now higher incomes at their disposal, and one way in which you can mop up this purchasing power is by putting up the prices of commodities in which they are likely to invest their income. Taking the particular point that has been raised in connection with our Budget here, for example the excise duty which we have proposed on coarse and medium cloth, the point might well be raised: Are you not thereby introducing into the country a force which is definitely inflationary? My answer to that is this. In the first place, as I pointed out in my reply to the Budget discussion, the incidence of this additional tax is about half or less than half the average incidence per head of the salt duty when that duty was in force. As the House probably knows, Government have under examination a reorganisation of the price structure of cotton textiles with reference to current prices of raw cotton. If we revise the prices of cotton textiles with reference to major factors like the price of raw cotton, ultimately it will be found that the extent to which this excise duty on coarse and medium cloth tells on the final price will be almost negligible; it will be hardly perceptible in the final prices that would result from a reorganisation of the present price structure. With regard to the sugar duty, my reply is that the excise duty does not touch gur which is the poor man's sugar, it does not touch khandsari, the cottage industry sugar. Therefore, so far as these main indirect taxes are concerned, I submit that the extent to which they are likely to nullify our anti-inflationary policy is greatly exaggerated.

There was a point which was raised over and over again with reference to the effect of our Budget on the present inflationary conditions. The point is while you have tried to achieve a balance in your revenue Budget, should you not achieve a balance in your capital Budget because there are about 134 crores which you have taken as a deficit on the capital side? As I explained to the House, this deficit would be met out of our balances. But these balances are unspent money remaining with the Government. If you take this money out of these unspent balances and spend it then you are introducing a certain amount of increased purchasing power in the country. If you will closely analyse the figures in the Budget statement, you will find that for the year 1949-50, if you take all our expenditure from revenue, from capital, and from cash balances, you will find that about Rs. 180 crores out of that is being spent not in this country but abroad. About 134 crores is the figure shown in our Budget statement as the amount which is being drawn from the cash balances. In other words, the position is: far more than what you draw from the cash balances is being spent abroad, the net result being that the amount of money, Rs. 180 crores, is being withdrawn from the country and being spent abroad, and therefore this so-called deficit in the capital Budget instead of being inflationary is really an anti-inflationary force; against 134 crores in the cash balances, you have got a little more than 180 crores expenditure abroad; all the money that you get from your cash balances and a little more is being spent abroad. Therefore, in the last analysis you will find it is not an inflationary force as it is supposed.

I would like, Sir, at this stage to make a brief reference to our borrowing programme because that also has a direct bearing on the inflationary position. I have fixed our borrowing programme for 1949-50 at what I called in my Budget speech a very modest figure. I did that because looking at the conditions prevailing in the money market at the time I framed the Budget, I found that if I fixed the figure at anything above 85 crores I would be giving the House a somewhat unrealistic picture of the situation. We provided for a much higher amount of borrowing last year, we were unable to reach the target. I said to myself, "The only way in which I can give the House a correct, honest picture of the situation is to fix my borrowing at a figure which will have some close relation to the realities of the situation". I have also another idea in mind. There is great stringency in the investment market. We want industries to develop, we want industries to find more and more money for financing their projects, and I thought to myself that on the whole if I were to leave enough scope for industries to raise capital, it would be better for me to reduce the demand that I make on the limited supply of capital available. Therefore the fact that Government has only a modest borrowing programme is a fact which is likely to help industries in their borrowing. But I want to make it perfectly clear that while I have fixed my programme for the moment at Rs. 85 crores, if conditions improve—and I cannot help thinking, scanning all the reports which have come to me during the past two weeks, that within a few months probably there would be an improvement in the conditions of the money market and if that happens, certainly it is my intention to go into the market and borrow more than I have provided in the Budget.

In regard to this particular matter, I would like to take this opportunity to make an appeal, particularly to the great institutional investors of the country, to do everything that they can to make the borrowing programme of Government a complete success. A great deal depends on the institutional investors of this country, like the insurance companies, banks, and so on, and I would like, therefore, to make this appeal to the institutional investors that in view of the improvement that is already visible in the conditions of the money market, both in their own interests and in the interests of the country, they should provide more in their investment portfolio in the form of Government securities.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): Then why repay the loans?

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): It may be reinvested. Why do you worry?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: My honourable friend Mr. Ramalingam Chettiar has raised a pertinent question. It is necessary, if Government is to achieve success as a borrower, that Government must be in a position to return moneys in due time. As a matter of psychology, I think it is better for Government to stick to their time schedule as exactly as they can because it helps in the end to enhance their credit. I should like to make another point in this connection. If what I indicated to the House in the course of my reply to the general debate had any force in it, that is to say, if in 1950-51 onwards, we are going to find an improvement, and a marked improvement in our expenditure position, it ought to be possible for us, not merely to provide more for ration-building activities in the country, but it ought to be possible for us also to give more relief in the way of taxation. If we are able to do that, then it seems to me that the net income that investors are likely to derive from investments in government securities is likely to prove better as the years go by. The question has been raised more than once. I think my honourable members in the course of the Budget debate and also in the various press discussions of the Budget, as to what exactly is the Government's monetary policy. I would like to state our policy as far as I am in a position to do so at present. The fact that there is stringency in the money market, that is to say, that money from the investment point of view is scarce, is an argument for raising the rate of interest, in the same way in which, in regard to any commodity, if you want to increase its supply, you provide greater inducement by way of better prices. On the other hand, if you raise the rate of interest, then it means straightaway a decline in the market values of all existing securities. That is to say, while on the one hand you try to induce investors to put more and more money into Government securities in response to higher rates of interest, on the other hand you create a general sense of insecurity in the market, a feeling of depression, because of the reaction of the higher rate of interest, on the values of existing securities. If I were to place myself in the position of the average investor, owing to the fluctuating conditions which prevail in the country today I would say, "now that the Government has raised the rate of interest to this level, who can tell whether they will stop there, or where they will stop. They may raise it a little further after a while. If that is so, why put the money in now?" You are placing the investors in a state of mental uncertainty. In my opinion, this rise in the rate of interest is not exactly a satisfactory course to adopt. I have discussed this matter carefully with the Governor of the Reserve Bank, and we have come to the conclusion that balancing one consideration against the other, the right course for Government to follow is to maintain its present policy.

I would like to say a word about capital formation, which to my mind, is one of the biggest problems that face us today. There is not the slightest doubt that capital formation in recent years has been badly affected in our country, and if we want to promote production, particularly industrial production, it is necessary that the process of capital formation should receive definite encouragement. When I say that it is necessary to encourage capital formation, I would like to make it absolutely clear that it applies not merely to private enterprise, but equally to nationalised industries, because whether it is Government-run industry or privately-run industry, for both you want capital. Whether the borrower is Government or a private agency, unless there is a firm foundation of capital formation, it is not possible for you to go forward. What really stands in the way of capital formation? Capital formation is the result of two things. First of all, people must be in a position to save. Secondly, when they have saved, they must be induced to invest that saving. It is a question, partly of saving and partly of investment. What is preventing saving today apart from the high prices, it is certainly the level of direct taxation today. There is no use burking the issue. We have to face the uncomfortable fact that the level of taxation today is definitely standing in the way of capital formation. What is standing in the way of investment of that saving? I should say, the general feeling of political and economic insecurity throughout the country. As far as political security is concerned, there has been a marked improvement. But unless, we can at the same time, also give a greater sense of economic security, even if you are in a position to promote savings, we will find it difficult to promote investment. I have from the beginning looked upon the Budget which I have had the honour to present to the House as a small first step in this direction, and I believe that although you are not likely to see any marked results in the immediate future, there are sufficiently promising signs to encourage one in the belief that we shall find better times in the near future.

In this connection, I would like to make a reference to the small savings movement. The small savings movement in recent months has shown better results than it has for the past two or three years. And I am hoping that by intensifying our propaganda, and by enlisting more and more non-official assistance, we shall be able to show even better results than we have achieved in recent months. And I would like, in this connection to make an appeal to the House. There is a great deal that honourable Members can do in the way of helping the progress of the small savings movement. Those with local influence can do a great deal to induce people to put money into Government bonds.

So, the position I have reached now, in the matters I have placed before the House is that as far as Indian capital resources today are concerned, we have not nearly enough for all the purposes that we have in mind. In view of the big developmental projects that we are trying to promote, the amount of capital now available in the country is hardly sufficient. Therefore the question arises whether the time has not come for us to supplement our resources with resources from abroad. The whole question of foreign borrowing is now becoming very important, from the point of view of the country. I want to put one or two ideas in this connection before the House. It is not merely the fact that there is not enough capital available in the country that makes it necessary for us to consider foreign borrowing. We want not merely finance, we want plant, we want equipment, we want technical skill and experience; and all these can be got only from abroad. And if you want to get things from abroad, you have to find not merely money, but also exchange, and if you go in for foreign borrowing, you will be able to get not merely the finance that you require, but also the foreign exchange you require. That is a very important matter from our point of view today. Since the United States of America, in the matter of capital goods have a larger surplus capacity than any other country today, it is natural that we should look more and more in the direction of the United States of America. As I have told the House more than once, we have been in touch with the International Monetary Fund and with the International Bank. The International Monetary Fund lends for very short periods, entirely for the purpose of rectifying the maladjustment in the balance of payments, so that for the purpose of long term development, the International Monetary Fund is not likely to be of assistance. Therefore, we approached the International Bank for assistance, and as the House knows a Mission was here and examined the projects that we put before them against the general background of Indian economic conditions. I have not seen their report and it may not be ready for some time yet, but I believe that the Mission has done very valuable work. It has been a good discipline as far as our own officers are concerned, because the Mission has been able to draw their attention to the real problems that call for attention. But there is one thing that I would like to mention in regard to the International Bank, which applies equally to other institutions in the United States of America, which we might approach for assistance such as the Export Import Bank. I do not yet know what the final rate of interest is likely to be in regard to our loans, but the rate of interest generally suggested is of the order of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Now when you want to finance long term developmental projects on a basis of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. interest, you are going to accept financial assistance at rather a heavy cost. It is not merely that. If you get a loan from the International Bank, for a period of 20 or 25 years; it may be that while our developmental projects are still under construction, they may be induced to give us a short breathing space, a short moratorium, but the time will come when we would have to make annual equated payments against amortization of the whole debt, that is, not merely your interest but the principal in instalments and these payments would have to be made in Dollar currency. Therefore a time will come, if you go in for assistance from institutions of this kind on a large scale, when you find yourself burdened with a debt which might seriously embarrass you. If that summary of the position is correct, then it seems to me the only other source left, as far as foreign lending is concerned, is private investors in other countries. That is to say, if we have on hand a big industrial project, an industrial project in which there are people of experience, of acknowledged skill and reputation in other countries interested, if we are able to enlist their assistance in the sense of participation in the capital structure of the Indian concern, it might be possible for us to get foreign assistance in a less burdensome form. That raises a very important problem, and in my opinion, the House would be called upon, if not today, but in the very near future to face this problem squarely. The advantage of foreign participation in that sense is this. If you go to great lending institutions like the World Bank and the Export Import Bank, you get assistance first of all in the shape of fixed interest bearing loans and secondly the interest is of a fairly high rate. If we could get people to participate in Indian concerns on the basis of sharing the loss as well as the profit, the burden that would be imposed on industrial projects would, I think, be considerably less. I am raising this problem, because I think now that we are up against this question of foreign borrowing and all our developmental work is so closely bound up with that question it is about time that the House applied its mind to it. I do not want to say anything more about this because the matter is under Government's consideration and I expect before the session is out, the Prime Minister would be in a position to make a statement to the House on the conditions on which we consider it desirable to go in for foreign borrowing.

In this connection, there is one point that I would like to mention regarding our Sterling Balances. Honourable Members who have followed the discussions regarding the recent trend of economic events in the United Kingdom will have seen that they have various projects in hand for strengthening the position of Sterling. Recently there was a plan put before the Economic Recovery Administration in Paris by the Government of the United Kingdom. The plan was that in the course of about four years it ought to be possible for the United Kingdom to achieve a balance in regard to their international payments. There has been a great deal of criticism as to the accuracy and the validity of many of the figures and propositions in that plan. But if it happens that the United Kingdom is able in a relatively short period to achieve a balance in their international payments, then Sterling will become a much less soft currency than it is today, that is Sterling will become in that process a more freely convertible currency. That is entirely to our advantage, because if we have all these balances in Sterling, it is to our interest that Sterling should become available to us more and more in the form of an internationally convertible currency. The point that I am trying to suggest is this. On a careful consideration of the whole problem, it is necessary that we should as far as can co-operate with the efforts which are being made by the United Kingdom Government to strengthen the position of Sterling, because it is going to be definitely to our advantage. Having said that, may I also say this? I am not satisfied that the Dollar releases we obtained last year have been good enough. I think we were entitled to a larger release and as events have turned out the Dollar releases we have been permitted for the last year are a good deal less than our requirements warrant. Therefore I want to say with every sense of responsibility that while we are prepared to co-operate with the U.K. Government in every effort that they are making to improve the position of Sterling and their general economic position, we are not satisfied that the assistance that they have given us so far in the way of Dollar releases has been reasonable and fair. (Hear, hear). I propose to do all that I can in order to obtain a better and more satisfactory release of hard currency from the United Kingdom Government in regard to our next year's programme.

Sir, some reference has been made to the question of a general enquiry into our taxation structure. That is a matter which I have considered with some care. I want to tell the House briefly what the conclusion is that I have provisionally reached. I feel that it would not be possible for us to make satisfactory proposals regarding our taxation structure unless we have a clearer picture than we have today of what our national income is and how that national income is distributed among the various sections of the community. I propose, therefore, and my colleagues agree with me, that we should institute at once an expert committee of high-ranking economists—both Indian and foreign economists—to take up the question of the national income. I hope within a short period we shall be able to get at least provisional estimates of the national income of the country and its distribution on which a taxation enquiry could be based.

Just one last point, Sir. The House has taken very great interest in the question of economy in public expenditure.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Nothing of control?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: What control?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Control of prices.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I will refer to it later. A great many questions were put to me, during the general discussion, as regards what we are going to do with the recommendations of the Economy Committee and I gave the assurance to the House in the course of my reply to the general debate that the Government would give its most earnest consideration to the proposals of the Economy Committee. What I want today to say is to how we propose to proceed with this matter. We are instructing all the Ministries to take up the proposals made by the Economy Committee at once with the Standing Committees of the Legislature attached to their Ministries and when matters have been clarified with the Standing Committees, the proposals would be put before a special meeting of the Standing Finance Committee so that they may have an opportunity of examining the proposals of the Economy Committee in the light of the Government's views thereon.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C. P. and Berar: General): Will it be completed in five years?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I knew that my honourable friend or somebody else would ask that question. I have in fact already circularised the Ministries in regard to the reference of these matters to the Standing Committees. I expect this to be done in the course of two or three weeks. Then I propose to have a special meeting of the Standing Finance Committee if possible before the end of this Session, but if that is not possible to have it shortly afterwards. I do not want more than two or three months to elapse before we come to a final conclusion.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): I am sure the House will join me in offering congratulations to the honourable the Finance Minister for the very lucid exposition of our financial position and the soundness of it in spite of the difficulties we are experiencing.

Sir, the one thing that emerges from the speech I heard a minute ago is that the Central Government's finances are sound, but that we must have the co-operation of the industrialists and the workers. I am glad to see that my honourable friend Mr. Mody offered the other day full co-operation of the industrialists to our Government in financial matters. The Honourable the Finance Minister also wants the full co-operation and the sweet reasonableness of the labour element in India to be there so that production be raised and prices be brought down.

At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shrimati G. Durgabai (one of the Panel of Chairmen).

We want co-operation of labour on the man-hour basis and not on the salary level basis. If that sort of co-operation can be had, we can expect India to take rapid strides forward towards our national prosperity. My honourable friend Dr. Matthai felt gratified that U.K. will have its national recovery soon. Sir, that is no solace to me, if India's national recovery is not in the offing. U. K. has been my bete noire during days of our subordination. U. K. is my bete noire even to-day. U. K. is responsible for all our troubles and miseries, inflation, high prices and financial stringency all are due to the policy of exploitation during the War. Nearly Rs. 4,000 crores worth of stores were purchased at pre-war controlled prices for U. K. and U.S.A. and hence the inflation in our currency and hence the high prices.

Today inflation is our main difficulty. I assess that 50 per cent of it is due to the exploitation by the United Kingdom administration and the absence of a National Government in our country during the war. They not only exploited our country but during the war have frozen 600 million sterling that we had in the Bank of England. I feel ashamed that we have agreed to a further period of two years for facilitating their national recovery. We have to co-operate. I listened most respectfully to the speech of our Minister. I am not in a mood today to co-operate with the United Kingdom for its recovery, seeing that it forced us to tie down the rupee to the sterling. Of course I know that today we can delink the rupee. That is a question which requires very careful examination. I hear the honourable the Prime Minister will talk a few days hence on the matter of the investment of foreign capital in this country. I hope he will bear in mind the sufferings and the sorrows that India went through during the last 150 years. The House must also remember the Government of India Act of 1935, where safeguards were provided for British capital and British exporters. Bearing all these in mind the House should consider the proposals which the Honourable Minister will bring forward in the course of this month.

We hear a good deal about inflation. Professors, economists and industrialists all talk of inflation. All our shortcomings lay at the door of inflation. I do not come under any of these categories, I do not say that inflation is the root cause of all evils and that inflation must be done away with immediately. We are aiming at lowering the price level, but the thing cannot be done if the industrialists and the producers take it into their heads to raise the price of cotton piece-goods and sugar when de-control takes place. In this vicious circle I do not quite see how the price levels can be immediately reduced. I do not think that inflation can be done away with unless my honourable friend Shrijiut Homi Mody gives some hints as to how it can be done. My reading of the situation is that Government could have done away part of this inflation by exercising stricter financial control over the Budget expenditure. There is inflation everywhere. There are inflated numbers of Ministries and Ministers on the floor of this House. There are inflated staff in the Government of India Secretariat. The staff has increased in the course of five years five to six times and the salary level has also been raised to that extent. There are inflated demands on the part of labour—demands for more wages,—and people in the Railways want more dearness allowance, grain shop allowance, etc.—my friend Mr. Santhanam is not here—railway labour want all sorts of advantages. None of the labour leaders, I am surprised to find have thought that the production of the labour, be it on the railways or the industry, should be on a man-hour basis, they must produce so much minimum work, whereby production will increase and whereby alone the high prices can be checked.

Pandit Harihar Nath Shastri (U. P.: General): What about 15 per cent increase in production?

Shri B. Das: Thank you, but the rise in salary has been 150 per cent. That is the greatest misfortune of a country struggling after it has been bled white by the foreign rulers and we cannot find our feet again as yet. I feel that we have no control over the detailed Budget expenditure. I pointed out the other day when I was talking on the Works, Mines and Power Ministry's Grants how there is no tendency in each Ministry to control Budget expenditure. The honourable the Finance Minister has not got Financial Advisers for each Ministry. He has divided it into five groups. One Financial Adviser cannot control half a dozen Ministries. Let each Ministry have one Financial Adviser. Then we would not have this inflated tendency of the Ministries and their way of always getting inflated by our creating so many new Ministries.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): They are working on war level.

Shri B. Das: I have watched the Budgets of the Government of India for the last twenty-five years. I have come to the conclusion that it is high time that the Finance Minister should have a Financial Adviser. He has divided his set-up into four compartments. But where is the co-ordination? Who is to co-ordinate the policy of the different Ministries? It is not done today and it must be done; otherwise, we are going to have a back slide and it would not be national recovery but it will be some disaster which I predicted some two years ago when I spoke in the 1947 September session.

Why is there over-Budgeting? Why is every Ministry anxious to have more money than the situation justifies? I find Ministries like the External Affairs, Health, Education, even Defence and Works, Mines and Power have no financial sense. The Finance Minister said nobody sympathises with him. I do sympathise with him that he does not get sufficient taxation to meet the hungry children, the various Ministries of the Government of India. In respect of the External Affairs Ministry, the expenditure last year was Rs. 3:55 crores, this year it has been estimated at Rs. 4:15 crores. Education was Rs. 2:87 crores, now it is Rs. 4:77 crores. (Kazi Syed Karimuddin: 'Very good.') Yes, it is very good, but why are you resenting this taxation, why are you raising your voice against it? In the Budget discussion everybody resented one or the other item of taxation. If you want improvement, then pay for it but not pay for it by taxing such an item as opium of which my honourable friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhury is rather fond or the betelnut I am so fond of. Defence expenditure has not been criticised. We have supported our Defence Ministry. But simply for the reason that they have achieved some successes, that does not mean that the Defence expenditure should be Rs. 172 crores or something like that and that the expenditure should be put on the way the Britishers introduced. Capitalisation of Defence expenditure has little value for me. It would not be assessed like that in any international forum. I do hope that Defence expenditure must be brought down to Rs. 100 crores limit.

Mr. Chairman: I hope the honourable Member will be able to finish within five minutes.

Shri B. Das: I will try as far as I can.

I will speak again on the Finance Bill, but I do hope that our foreign exchanges could be improved through tourist traffic and by cottage industries. Dr. Mukherjee has earmarked rupees five crores got out of sale of American Disposals, but we are doing nothing to improve our Dollar position except by borrowing in the international market and going abegging to London to get a few thousand more Dollar and foreign exchange from the starving, shifty British people, who if they do not apply a moratorium to the £600 million sterling they owe us, would be bled to death.

There should be a production drive if we at all want to do away with inflation and reduce the price level. But for that, there should again be a tripartite conference consisting of Government, the industrialists and labour. I do suggest that Srijut Jai Parkash Narain has shown a spirit of co-operation by calling off the strike of railways. He as a labour leader has shown that he is anxious to co-operate. Why not call a conference with Srijut Jai Parkash Narain, so that labour may realise, labour may recognise, the primary duty of working and producing, and producing on man-hour basis. That is my last suggestion.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): Sir, I listened with great respect to the speech made by the honourable the Finance Minister. To begin with, he referred to the criticisms made against his Budget on the floor of the House. I really congratulate him that he has taken the criticisms levelled against his Budget very coolly and with great equipoise. He was speaking about the prices and the vagaries of the market. I very much wish that prices and the markets followed his example in being steady, equipoised, and balanced. Before I come to the contents of the Budget, I would like to suggest a few unimportant things. It may be that they are unimportant from the point of view of the importance of the subject we are discussing, but these few suggestions would go a long way in making this House understand the Budget better.

I have had occasions to go through the Budget papers of some of the Provincial Governments and the Government of my own State, and I have also gone very carefully through the Budget papers presented to us by the Finance Minister, this year as well as last year. My impression is that the papers given to us in this Assembly give us too summarized a view of the matter. We need greater details and explanations. For example, there are items in the Budget papers like "Other Charges". There are several headings like that and each heading has several lakhs of rupees against it. There is also a heading "Miscellaneous". Headings like these when totalled would amount to crores and crores of rupees. Still we are not in a position to know how this money is being spent, or the policy that is being adopted in spending this amount. In regard to expenses as against administration, we would rather like to know how many Secretaries are employed in each Department, and how much money and allowances are being paid to them. That information is supplied to us in the Budgets of the Units. I have given only a few examples. It would be better if, from next year onwards at least, the Finance Minister gives us a fuller picture of the Budget in his annual statement of the financial condition of our country.

The second aspect is this. My impression is that the printing and get-up of the Budgets of the Units is also far better. I would like the Finance Minister to enhance, the prestige of the Central Government in being the first in the matter of get-up of the Budget.

The Finance Minister was explaining the question of "prices" and how prices rise and fall. He incidentally referred to agricultural prices. I would ask him, Professor as he is, Economist as he is, to fix agricultural prices on some basis and on some data: and not fix them arbitrarily as he has done, or as every Government upto today has done. It is not particularly the fault of the present Finance Minister. It is not the fault of this Government alone. It is the fault, in my view, of every Government in this country present and previous. So far as agriculture is concerned, they have fixed prices not upon data but upon what is so-called the "previous price". They take some price that used to prevail at a certain period prior to the fixing of the prices and fix it up by a certain percentage. If Industrial production is determined on the basis of the production cost, and if the industrial labour is paid minimum wages, I would request this Government to show the same kind of consideration to agricultural production and agricultural labour.

If I criticized the Ministry in my Budget speech, it was because the peasants have been left alone by this Government, in spite of its being the first Government of a free country and in spite of its being the Government of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel. I have to make this observation because I love and admire these two leaders very much. But I love the ryot, the agriculturist in a greater measure. If it is a question of who should have my allegiance, as well as the allegiance of many of us, it is the agriculturist and not the Prime Minister nor the Deputy Prime Minister. It is a pity that their attention has been diverted to other issues. The consolidation of the country has become the affair of the Deputy Prime Minister and foreign affairs has become the playground of the Prime Minister. But the ryot is cared for by none in this Ministry. The concessions that I want for the agriculturists is not pity, kindness or favour: it is a price based on data: it is a price that is fixed by the same considerations by which prices are determined in other economic fields.

I have had the privilege of listening to, and participating in the discussions on the Budgets of both last year and this year. Last year the Finance Minister made a fervent appeal to the industrialists and gave several concessions to them. The present Finance Minister has also repeated the same example. In view of world conditions I would respectfully request them to see whether this special appeal is not after all overdone. The cry of the common man has taken the form of Communism and is sweeping the world. It has already swallowed half of Asia and is almost at our doors. In spite of this phenomenon it is very strange that our Government is still wooing a few industrialists. Take, for example, super-tax. Honourable the Finance Minister has shown what is called a concession to the super-tax payers to the tune of 2.1 crores. I am told that this concession affects only about 400 people. If 400 people are to be given a concession of 2.1 crores, it is a gift that this Government makes of Rs. 55,000 and odd for each industrialist. Whether this concession, which is almost like ransom money, is justified or not I leave it to the House to judge.

I will now make only one point and close. The honourable the Finance Minister was speaking to us about foreign exchange. Gold may not be the sole currency in all countries but still gold happens to be the axis round which every currency system in the world rotates. Therefore in order to avoid this exchange difficulty I would request the Government of India to pay attention to this aspect of the matter. In the South, at least we have one gold mining company working and two other mines have been discovered. If the Government of India is earnest it can find in India many more gold mines. It would be profitable for us to take these gold mines as national concerns. If you are not able to take these gold mines as national concerns, at least I want the Government of India to purchase all the gold produced in India and keep it as government property, so that they may make use of it to facilitate foreign exchange.

हैं, सुभीता नहीं मिलता है, इसलिये वह ज्यादा पैदावार नहीं कर सकते, और जब पैदायश ज्यादा नहीं होती है, तो रुपया अर्थ सचिव को नहीं मिलता है। हम लोग अभी कम से कम मालूम होता है कि २५०० करोड़ रुपया ऋण लिया और इतने रुपये में से १५०० करोड़ रुपया तो हम लगा देते हैं, जिससे कि पीछे फ़ायदा हो सकता है। २५०० करोड़ रुपये में से हमको मिलना है ३०० करोड़ रुपया पकिस्तान से। मैं जानना चाहता हूँ कि पाकिस्तान से जो ३०० करोड़ रुपया मिलना है, वह शायद मिलेगा भी या नहीं। और बाकी जो सात सौ करोड़ तक रह जाता है, वह तो एक दम हम लोगों का loss में चला जाता है। किस तरीके से हम लोग प्रवन्ध करें कि यह सात सौ करोड़ रुपये का जो हमारे सिर पर dead weight है, उसको कैसे हटायें। अर्थ सचिव ने इन्क्वायरी कमेटी (Inquiry Committee) बनाने की तरफ़ इशारा किया है, उसके सिलसिले में मैं एक बात कहना चाहता हूँ। हम लोगों का जो Rupee Ratio एक शिलिंग छः पेन्स है। उसको ज़रा ध्यान में रखना चाहिये क्योंकि उससे हम लोगों का बहुत सा रुपया इधर से उधर हो जाता है। एक बात और मैं अर्थ सचिव के ध्यान में लाना चाहता हूँ कि आज तक हम लोग Statistics पाते थे, अभी नहीं पाते हैं, वह अगर मिल जाये तो बड़ी अच्छी बात होगी। फिर एक बात मैं कहना चाहता हूँ, वह थोड़ी शायद इस बात पर ठीक नहीं मालूम होती है, लेकिन मैं सोचता हूँ कि वह बात ठीक है। जब यह डोमीनियन पार्लियामेंट है और हर एक यूनिट इसमें शामिल है तो हर एक यूनिट से एक एक प्रतिनिधि Cabinet में रहना चाहिये ताकि यहां का काम अच्छी तरह से चले। मैं बराबर देखता हूँ कि हर एक province का ख्याल यहां नहीं होता है, और एक बात हमारे अर्थ सचिव को यह सोचना चाहिये कि opium के cultivation के वास्ते जो हम लोग subsidy अदा करते हैं, उसको एकदम हटा देना चाहिये। जब ओपियम (Opium) के बारे में बहुत बहस हुई थी और हम लोगों ने कहा था कि यह जो Immoral रेवेन्यू है, उसको हमें हटा देना चाहिये। आसाम में देखिये क्या होता रहा है। कितनी कोशिश उसको बन्द करने की की गई, लेकिन वह बन्द नहीं होती है। अब स्टेट्स में जहां केवल ओपियम (Opium) ग्रो (Grow) की जाती है वहां भी इसकी तरफ़ हटाने की दिशा में कदम बढ़ाये जाने की सख्त जरूरत है। दुनिया में हर प्राविन्स, स्टेट और मुल्क में आदमी को अच्छा बनाने के लिये यह ओपियम (Opium) को हटा देना चाहिये, और दारू भी हटा देना चाहिये। गवर्नमेन्ट अक्सर यह देखा जाता है कि प्रोहिबिशन (Prohibition) पालिसी को slow कर देती है, यह बड़ी खराब बात है और इसकी तरफ़ हमें तेज़ी से ध्यान देना चाहिये। दुनिया आज जब इतनी तेज़ी से आगे भाग रही है, तो हम भी

उसके साथ मिलने के लिये, इतना रुपया लोन (Loan) ले लेते हैं, यह ठीक नहीं है। यह तो मामूली बात है कि 'One should cut his coat according to his cloth' हमको अपनी इन्डस्ट्रीयल एकोनॉमी (industrial economy) ठीक करने के लिये हमें कितना बाहर से लाना है, और कितना हम यहां कर सकते हैं, इस पर खूब गौर कर लेना है। मैं तो सोचता हूं कि आपने बिज़नेस वालों का पहले से इतना गला घोट दिया है, कि उसको बहुत-डर हो गया है, इसलिये अर्थ सचिव को रुपया ज्यादा नहीं मिलता है। ऐसा उपाय करने से बिज़नेस पीपुल (business people) के हाथ में जो रुपया है, उसकी ओर हम लोगों को ज्यादा ध्यान देना चाहिये। हां एक बात है कि हमारे अर्थ सचिव जब अच्छा लेजिस्लेशन (legislation) कर सकते हैं तब उससे हमारा मुल्क अच्छी तरह से चल सकेगा। यह ख्याल हम लोगों का अच्छा होगा कि हम सब decentralise करें। मैंने उस दिन भी कहा था और आज भी कहे देता हूं, कि अगर हम सब इस तरह में सेन्ट्रलाइज (centralize) करते जाते हैं, तो हम हिनालय पहाड़ के मुआफ़िक ऊंचाई की जगह से नीचे गिर जायेंगे। इसलिये मैं चाहता हूं कि अर्थ सचिव इस पर ज़रा ध्यान देंगे कि हम इन्टरनल ट्रेड एन्ड कामर्स (internal trade and commerce) को जितना कंट्रोल करते हैं, उसको थोड़ा अब छोड़ देना चाहिये और छोड़ देने से जब नारमल चैनल (Normal channel) में बिज़नेस में चलेगा, तो हम लोगों का फ़ायदा होगा, ऐसा मैं सोचता हूं।

और उड़ीसा प्रदेश की तरफ़ ज़रा अर्थ सचिव को ख्याल रखना चाहिये। हम लोगों ने सरकार से रुपये की मदद मांगी है और जो चालीस लाख रुपया हमने सरकार से subvention के तौर से पाते हैं, वह बहुत कम है, क्योंकि इन्फ़्लेशन (inflation) ज्यादा है, इसलिये उड़ीसा को ज्यादा रुपया देना चाहिये और फिर २५ लाख एबोरिजिनलस (aboriginals) जो स्टेटस के (merge) होने की वजह से आ गये हैं, इसलिये उनको बहुत ज्यादा रुपया देना चाहिये। इस लिये मैं चाहता हूं कि अर्थ सचिव इस पर ज़रा मेहरबानी करके ध्यान-पूर्वक सोचेंगे, और इस प्राविन्स को ज्यादा मदद देंगे। मैं और ज्यादा समय नहीं लेना चाहता हूं। अन्त में मैं अर्थ सचिव को बधाई देता हूं और अपना भाषण समाप्त करता हूं।

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, it is quite apparent from the statement made by the honourable Minister for Finance that he needs more money; whereas we people criticize him while sanctioning such a huge amount. When the honourable the Finance Minister raised the rates of letters and post-cards throughout the whole of India, all the people began feeling that he has assumed the role of Shylock the Jew. In fact the honourable the Finance Minister is not to be blamed in this matter, for we need money and he has to provide it. But I would like to say how we are to get it. After that we are to consider that if the man is good, we may have plenty of money; and in case he is otherwise we may not get much. A little bit of thinking will elucidate it. Today our country is short of money, and for this reason its inhabitants are not living in a decent manner. They do not keep good health and those of them who are employed in the industrial labour are not afforded any facilities, and for this reason they cannot produce more, and when the production is less, the honourable the Finance Minister is unable to raise more money. It so appears that we have now borrowed at least 2500 crores of rupees; and out of this amount, we spend about 1500 crores which can yield some benefit later on. Out of Rs. 2500 crores, we are to get 300 crores from Pakistan. I would like to know whether we are likely to get back this sum of Rs. 300 crores from Pakistan or not? And the balance which thus remains amounts to about Rs. 700 crores and it is straightaway reckoned as a loss. How should we manage to throw this dead weight of Rs. 700 crores which we are carrying on our heads? The honourable the Finance Minister has given an indication towards the setting up of an Enquiry Committee and I would like to say one thing in connection therewith. We should devote some attention towards the exchange ratio of rupee which is at present 1s. 6d. because we have to sustain a good deal of loss by such transactions. Another thing which I want to bring to the notice of the Honourable Minister is that till lately we used to be supplied with statistics, but we do not get these now. It would be of immense use, if these are made available now. And one thing more I would like to say, although it is not perhaps quite relevant to the point at issue, yet I feel it has got some bearing on the subject. When this Dominion Parliament consists of representatives from each unit, it looks all the more logical that one representative from each of the Provinces should be included in the Cabinet so as to ensure smooth working at the Centre. I usually find that every Province is not represented here. And one thing which I would like our Finance Minister to consider is that he should immediately stop the grant of subsidy for the cultivation of opium. During the course of a lengthy discussion on opium we urged that we should cease to realize this 'immoral revenue' which is derived from the sale of this commodity. Take the case of Assam. What is happening there? In spite of all possible endeavours having been made there, its growth could not be stopped. Now it is the high time that some preventive measures in this direction are taken in the case of States also which grow opium only. In order to produce better men in this country, the use of opium should be banned in all the Provinces and States. Liquor too should be prohibited. It has generally been noticed that the Government slows down its prohibition policy and we should devote our urgent attention towards this aspect. It is not advisable that one should borrow such a huge amount simply to keep pace with the other countries of the world which are forging ahead with such rapidity. It is a common saying that 'one should cut his coat according to his cloth.' We should carefully consider as to how much we are required to import from abroad to balance our industrial economy and how much we can produce here. I think you have already throttled the business community and they have become considerably nervous. And for this reason only, the honourable the Finance Minister is not able to raise more money. We should devote more attention towards this aspect and devise some measures to obtain the money which lies in the hands of the business people. Yes, there is one thing and that is when our Finance Minister can evolve a wholesome legislation, our country will surely have a smooth sailing. This is a good idea that we should decentralize everything. I said that day and repeat today also that if we go on centralizing everything in this manner, we are apt to fall down from heights such as of the Himalayas. Therefore,

I would urge that the Honourable Minister should devote a little attention to this aspect and permit some relaxation being made in the existing controls regulating the internal trade and commerce. This would result in the business being conducted through the normal channels which would prove beneficial to our interests. This is what I think.

The Honourable Minister should devote some attention to the Province of Orissa. We people have approached the Government for the grant of some assistance and the sum of Rs. 40 lakhs which is paid to us in the form of subvention is quite inadequate, because there is much inflation and on account of this Orissa should be given more money. And, moreover, he should give adequate sum of money to cope with the expenditure to be incurred in respect of 25 lakhs of aboriginals belonging to the States that have since merged with Orissa. Therefore, I would submit that the Honourable Minister should carefully consider over this and give more help to this Province. I do not want to take much time.

With these words, I would congratulate the honourable the Finance Minister and resume my seat.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin (C.P. and Berar: Muslim): There is no doubt that the honourable the Finance Minister has delivered an admirable speech. Before I make any criticism I fully realise the tremendous difficulties that he has to face in running the administration and overcoming the economic difficulties of the country. It may be said and it is commonly supposed that the taxation policy that he has introduced is incentive taxation, that is, with a view to stimulate production in the country. In my opinion it is not incentive taxation but it is riding a horse in all directions. On the one hand there is relief to the industrialist with a view to stimulate production and on the other there is an indirect taxation on the necessities of life which will raise the standard of life of the poor. If there is no co-operation between these two factors, that is, the increasing purchasing power of the capitalist and the higher standard of life of the poor, if these two factors cannot be reconciled by more production, then my submission is that the honourable the Finance Minister will be faced with a very critical situation next year.

All the estimates that he has made, all the policy that he has enunciated today is based on the speculative system that production is bound to rise in case incentive taxation is introduced. I congratulate him for that, but if production does not increase considerably I have my own apprehensions that there will be a financial collapse. In my opinion one of the items that ought to have been accepted by the Finance Minister, as has been done in many European countries, was that alternatively there should have been an idle-money tax. Suppose the proposals are not accepted by the capitalists. We see the reactions of the market as reported in several papers—that the money market or the share market is not affected and that they have not accepted it very favourably. In that case the only alternative ideal is to have idle-money tax or hoarding tax. Without that it would be impossible to induce these people to go into the field of production.

Another point which I want to emphasize and give a warning about is regarding external public debt. It is an accepted principle in economics that external public debt is not generally good for the progress of a country unless a country is compelled to incur a loan. I realise and I fully appreciate the point of view held by the honourable the Finance Minister that there is a shortage of dollar. We have already incurred a loan of 92 million dollars but the purpose for which this has been incurred has not been fully detailed and the House is not aware as to how our needs have been met by incurring this loan. The two defects of foreign borrowing as generally laid down in books of economics are firstly that the terms on which the foreign loan is incurred must not be to the detriment of the country and secondly the period for which it is incurred has to be a very long one, as has been stated by the honourable the Finance Minister. Otherwise, if the debts are tried to be realised by a foreign Government, if our political policy is not in keeping with Americanism, then our country will be faced with the very great difficulty of making a repayment or of giving raw materials or goods which are required for our own production in the country. The honourable the Finance Minister neither in the Report that has been supplied to us nor in the speech that has been delivered today has given any idea as to what conditions have been laid down by the foreign capital although he has remarked that in a subsequent statement by the Prime Minister we will have those conditions. But my submission is that every pie of loan that we incur in this connection should be in connection with our production, with the expansion of our industry and agriculture. But if the loan is incurred and there is no expansion of industry and agriculture, if there is a shortage of capital goods coming from the foreign country; and if these dollars that we are getting are spent towards our political needs, then I give a warning today that this will be to accept Americanism. There will be expansion of the American movement not only economically but there will be political domination and economic domination of America which is bound to be resisted by the people of India.

The second thing which I want to bring to the notice of the honourable the Finance Minister is I entirely agree with the reasoning he has given that the release of dollar from the Sterling Area, that is from England, is not satisfactory. One suggestion that I want to make is this. Why should we spend away our sterling in the capital repatriation of the Britishers in India? We can insist that before there is a capital repatriation there should be a release of dollars in favour of India and we should have greater amount of sterling released in our favour in order that capital goods may be imported from there. One complaint generally is—of course I have not any exact idea of it—that from England and America last year we had consumed goods which are luxury goods, goods which were not very necessary for the expansion of industry. If it is not true I will be happier, but I make a request to the honourable the Finance Minister that in the future, that is next year, goods which are not very useful or which are luxuries should be discouraged in satisfaction of the sterling balances or in connection with our borrowings from America.

The third thing which I want to impress upon you is the Bill that has been proposed in the Report submitted by the Finance Department about the Payment of Taxes. For the few Muslims who are now intending to go away from India we are going to have a legislation which will affect thousands of people in this country. The Government has already declared that Muslims are coming back in numbers and very few are going to Pakistan. For the few who intend to go you will be surprised to find that today Hindus and Muslims—everybody—is harassed by the Registration Department in regard to the clearance certificate. In his noble words the Speaker the other day expressed that it will give full scope for corruption. They are words which are weighty and as a lawyer I can say that it will give a very wide scope for corruption. The then Finance Minister, the Honourable Mr. Neogy, did not write on the file but had agreed that it would be dropped. When one Finance Minister had agreed to drop it, I think special reasons should be stated by the present Finance Minister why he takes it up. As Sir Homi Mody said, it was an emergency measure and it was all right then, but in ordinary times I do not think people should be subjected to harassment. You will be surprised to find even today that people who want to get their properties registered or sold are harassed by the Registration Department which is open to great corruption.

[Kazi Syed Karimuddin]

Therefore, my submission is that when a promise had been given—on the floor of this House, Mr. Neogy had expressed that it was agreed to be dropped—there is no reason why the present Finance Minister should revive it. My submission is that, in view of the great harassment, in view of the great scope for corruption, and when a man of the experience of the honourable Speaker is of that opinion, the honourable the Finance Minister should drop that Bill.

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana (Madras: General): During the recent months whenever I had a chance to meet friends and discuss the problems connected with our finances, I always found that the people had very great apprehension that the Central Government's Budget was going to be a very deficit Budget, that we are nearing a situation when we will witness a very great crack in the monetary set up of the country. It looked as if it was practically true, before the Budget was introduced. I am very glad to say that the skilful handling of our finances and the great imagination and experience of our present Finance Minister has averted this crisis.

I have been listening to the speeches delivered on the General Budget and I found there was a lot of opposition mostly to the new taxes introduced; it has been already dealt with by a number of Members. I want to take a particular point of view about this Budget as it has been explained to us. The Finance Minister, during the last one or two years, has been fighting inflation and this Budget has got two important features, one to fight the inflation, and the other to get a better incentive for the purpose of capital formation and get capital for more production.

Sir, I find this inflation being discussed day in and day out, but where does it exist? It exists especially in the urban areas. If you just look at the figures supplied to us, during the last three or four years the figures have been going up and these figures have been creating a kind of nervousness among the urban population. I find from the figures that in a place like Kanpur the cost of living index has gone up by 508, Bombay 302, Calcutta 251, Madras 321, Delhi 130; probably it is much more but this is a little old figure. What does this show? This shows, as the Finance Minister explained to us in his introductory speech, that mostly these inflationary figures comprise the food stuffs. Who produces these food stuffs? The villager produces them. He is not willing to part with his food at a lower price and therefore he is demanding a very high price; that is why there is a great deal of inflation. The city man refuses to buy food at a high price and the village man refuses to part with his production at a low price. Therefore there is a tug-of-war between the city-dweller and the villager. Why? All these years, during the last 100 or 150 years, when the money economy had grown to play a very important role, the village man had been completely neglected and the urban man had prospered. The money was there in the city, the village man had absolutely no taste of the money. Thanks to the war and the cheap money policy of the Government, the Government has introduced five times more currency in the market, circulation has been going on like anything, and it has percolated in the villages. The villager now feels that he has got money, he will keep it and unless and until he is paid more price he is not prepared to give his production. The Government should, therefore, either coerce him to give it at a lower price or tempt him to produce more and more in order to relieve the inflation and give food to the cities. Instead of doing that if the Government gives a little more price and just reverses the economy from the city point of view to the villager's point of view, it is probable that in the course of one or two years we will be able to improve our money economy. Probably the only harassment or embarrassment that will be experienced will be by the city man, not the village man.

If we look at the national income, we find that out of the total income of this nation, 54 per cent is contributed by the villager, only 21 per cent contributed by the industrialists and industries, and the balance of the income is contributed by miscellaneous things. Our town population is only 20 per cent, our village population is 80 per cent. 80 per cent of the population contributes only 54 per cent and the city population of 20 per cent contributes 21 per cent. This proportion looks very anomalous. If you just look at the wealth, you will see that it is not the capital that matters, it is not the money that matters, it is not the industry that matters,—it is the huge population that matters. So many crores of people living in the villages, waiting for getting some work, and with able-bodies, with skill, with talent, capacity and energy, are not being given sufficient work and are not being treated properly; no resources are available to them for doing more work. If you are able to get 21 per cent of the national income from the cities by utilising the hands and bodies of only 20 per cent of the population, how much more can you get if you utilise the services of all the villagers by giving them the necessary facilities that are absolutely not available to them?

Therefore, I want to urge on this particular aspect, that hereafter our money economy as it is today should have a definite approach, the approach being the real approach as to how this money, as it has been introduced today, could be utilised for the purpose of employing the people and getting our wealth increased.

There is one particular point I want to say in this connection. Studies which I have made and discussions that I had with friends reveal to me certain factors that this circulation of money today is distributed throughout India. It is generally the impression that large amounts of money are in the hands of city people. My own feeling is that on account of high prices, on account of temptation for getting more money, there is also sufficient money in the villages—the money has percolated to a very large extent into the villages also. This money the villager is not willing to part with until and unless he is given some incentive. Supposing he invests in savings certificates or in any industry or in a Government Bond, what will he get? It will be for something with which he is not connected. Therefore, he must be told definitely and a definite promise given to him that whatever money he is in possession of today, if he is to part with it either for investment or for anything similar, it will go for a productivity in which he is directly interested. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary that if you want to have a savings campaign today it must be utilised for the villages and the rural areas so that you will be able to get sufficient money and use it for productive purposes.

I want to make a definite proposal in this connection. If it is possible for the Government, then it must immediately try to see that a kind of a campaign is conducted throughout India, especially in the rural parts, that a part of the villager's income—whatever his savings are either on the basis of the acres that he cultivates or on the income that he derives on the produce—say ten per cent of his total income should be saved for the purpose of productivity, which will be kept by the Government of India or by the Provincial Government so that this money at good time may be made available for a kind of capital formation which will be used for rural purposes. Elaborating this point a little further, I would say that we have today nearly a rural income of 2,800 crores. Government must evolve some suitable scheme for effecting a saving of say some 280 crores out of this income. They can base the scheme either on the total acreage under cultivation or some other basis. Today we have nearly 185 lakhs of acres under cultivation and either on the acreage basis or some other basis, some suitable scheme may be evolved by which within three years this saving could be effected. If we collect, say Rs. 10 certificates, it is quite possible that by propaganda and by making an appeal to the patriotic sentiment of our rural population, it is quite likely that we will be able to get Rs. 280 crores. And this sum should be treated exclusively as capital for the purpose of promotion of the interests of the rural areas, for instance a small scale project, an irrigation project, rural industries, electrification projects for the villages, credit facilities for housing rural populations, rural markets and warehouses. There are many other things for which the villagers are craving and this money should be made available to the rural population to enable them to get some of these things.

There is only one thing more I have to mention, within the short time at my disposal. Every villager must be made to feel that whatever money he saves now will be devoted for his benefit. And he should also be made to understand how the Rs. 10 he saves now, when the inflation influences go away, and prices come down, this sum of Rs. 10 will become Rs. 15. If he is made to understand the real position, and if we get his confidence, and when he feels convinced that it is for his benefit, he will certainly participate in the scheme evolved by Government. Therefore, I want for the stabilisation of prices, for the stabilisation of our whole economy the rural population must co-operate with us. We must win their confidence. We have been, by various methods wooing the capitalists and asking them to invest more and more. But when they actually invest, then there will be a kind of non-co-operation from the other side. Therefore we have to see that both the sections of the population properly contribute so that we may have a balanced economy and a balanced distribution of wealth and a balanced distribution of labour in this country so that all those who have able bodies may get a chance to work and that work will bring in enormous wealth.

In conclusion, I wish to support the honourable the Finance Minister, and again congratulate him on having brought forward a balanced budget. I request him to have this rural approach and try to work out some of the suggestions I have made.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Sir, I whole heartedly support the proposals which have just been elaborated by the previous speaker. I too had similar proposals to make and since he has elaborated them, I do not want to take up the time of the House by elaborating them again. I have only to add that if we have bonds issued, and named after the projects which are to be initiated or developed in particular parts of the country, that will have a very good psychological value. For instance, in the East Punjab, they have got the Bhakra Dam project. They can have the Bhakra Dam bonds. Similarly they can have the Damodar Valley Bonds, and many persons who have benefited by the rise in the price of food grains will certainly contribute for these bonds. In this way large sums of money can be attracted into the Government's coffers.

As regards the capitalists, I want to submit one specific suggestion for the consideration of the Government. It has been said that in the money market, there is great stringency, and that capital is very shy; that Government floated a loan which was not fully subscribed. Also we know there are complaints that investments are not made on capital works now. What is the reason for all these things? One reason may be that there is no money in the country. The other reason may be that there are certain circumstances which made it very difficult for capitalists to bring out their money. I for one do not believe that there is dearth of money in the country. I do believe there is ample money; but people are afraid and they do not bring out this money. A long time back, I read one novel named Zanooni by Lord Lytton—it is a mystic novel—and in that novel a figure was depicted as a monster at the gate which would not allow any one but a particular class of people to enter the gate. Its eyes were so consuming and its look so compelling that no person who had not the requisite qualification could enter in. My example may not be very apposite, but I am afraid, at the same time, that the effect of this Investigation Commission is exactly the same as that of the monster in the novel. When we come to this aspect of the case, which I propose to elaborate further, I have to submit that we must consider all the circumstances which have given rise to this state of things. During the war, people made huge profits and they did not pay taxes. The income-tax department of the previous Government was absolutely inefficient. It was corrupt also. The whole Government was corrupt, and during the war when these huge profits were made, nobody cared to tax those profits, those contractors, etc. Thousands of people in the Supply Department made profits and they have gone away and they are not in India. Now these people who are here, feel that if they come out with their money, they may be taxed, and they might have to part with some of their illegal profits. If during the war, they had been asked to part with 66 per cent of their profits they might gladly have parted with it. But after the war, our country was in an awkwardly peculiar position. The interim Government came and Sir Liaquat Ali brought out his budget of 1947 and gave birth to this Investigation Commission. Now, this Investigation Commission was something like a still-born hybrid, because it had nothing but a skeleton. There was no power in it. For one year it went on and nobody looked at it. Afterwards, this egg of a crow was hatched by the cuckoo and our previous honourable Finance Minister gave it life and flesh and invested it with power. But even then, what do we find now? In his Budget speech, the present Finance Minister says no results have come out, and I do not think any results can come out of it, because when we invested it with powers, we invested it with wrong powers and made it simultaneously the complainant, the investigator and the final judge. Now the position is this. If any person brings forth money to invest it on a property or in a factory or in some such venture, the hounds of this Commission go to him and pester him and ask him, "Wherefrom have you got this money?" and that man is as a matter of fact, at the end of his wits. At the same time, Sir, the tax dodgers love their money very much and they are afraid that as soon as they bring out their money, they will be caught. This is going to be a vicious circle. When I look at the figures of the tax dodgers, I am certainly staggered. I feel that the arrears of this income-tax are so large and have been so large in the last few years that there is no wonder that people have not tried to pay their dues. With your permission, Sir, I will just give some of the figures.

On 31st July, 1948, 2,86,274 cases were there in arrears and there were 359 cases of 1943 and 1944 and earlier

In 1944-45	17,627 cases.
In 1945-46	37,923 ..
In 1946-47	77,121 ..
In 1947-48	1,54,344 ..

These are the arrears.

Now, Sir, if out of these people of 1944-45, when the War had not ended, if people made a good amount of money and their cases have not yet been decided and there are still arrears, may I know the fault of the man who hides his money and does not want to pay the tax? Circumstances may have changed during these four years and a fair amount of money may have also been lost by him. The temptation for non-payment becomes too great and a person may even prefer to go to jail, rather pay lakhs of rupees now. So the difficulty is that this mentality which we all condemn has been as a matter of fact abetted or at least brought up to a considerable extent by the inefficiency of the Department. What we should have done at the time when our National Government got into power was that they should not have pursued the course initiated by Liaquat Ali Khan i.e. Investigation Commission. They should have taken a bold course. Abnormal situations call for bold courses. After one year of the new Government coming into power the result is that the arrears are there and the Income-tax Commission has not brought forth any result whatsoever.

We find from the speech of the honourable the Finance Minister that they have taken to some other work. They have taken to the work of finding out how can evasion be tackled. I think it is a more fruitful work and perhaps they will do better there. The only promise that has been held out to us is that there will be a third Bill to amend the original Bill and after the third Bill of amendment is passed it may happen that if some powers are given to the commission for the purpose of making agreed settlements, it is possible some result may be shown. As a matter of fact we should have the courage of performing a surgical operation when the attempted cure by physicians have failed. We must dismiss this Commission or, take advantage of this Commission in some other way; they have amassed a wealth of material and from that we can take some advantage.

All the same, I beg to seriously propose for the consideration of the honourable the Finance Minister a proposal like this. You fix a date. I believe, Sir, that the honourable the Finance Minister has certainly heard of the Bran pie system by which the Police get hold of arms from those who possess them illegally. They fix a date and by that date every person who is in possession of illegal arms comes forward and delivers his gun and dagger in some place and then the Police take possession of them and the person, who delivers these arms is not penalized and in this way illegally possessed arms, are disgorged. In Delhi those persons who took possession of the Houses could not be evicted and their possessions were confirmed. Let a date be fixed and let a notification be issued that all persons who have not paid their taxes should come forward and file their returns on a condition that if they do so, they will get a 25 per cent. rebate and the rest will be recovered. If after that date, it is found that those persons have not behaved well, you can proceed under section 34. But I would proceed further.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Will the same process be repeated next year?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: No, Sir. I am going to propose something more. If my honourable friend had just heard the whole scheme, then he would not have put that question. I want another Bill of a penal nature to be also passed saying that if any person is proved to have concealed his income or not given his true income to the Commissioner of Income-tax, then in that case he shall be punished with an imprisonment for seven years. This is what I want to suggest. After all, Sir, this is a position in which by our own conduct by not taking the tax as it ought to have been taken, we ourselves have brought it about by our own inefficiency. This is a proposal which I have discussed with certain friends and this proposal has been going round for a long time, and I submit this proposal for the consideration of the honourable the Finance Minister for whatever it is worth. I for one think that in a matter like this when crimes are committed on a mass scale for the last four or five years, we should adopt other measures and not allow this humdrum Investigation Commission to proceed in this manner.

I wanted to say many more things, but I am sorry the time is very short and I will take advantage of the Finance Bill later on. With your permission, I will just submit two points more for the consideration of the honourable the Finance Minister.

In regard to the Investigation Commission's present report, the report is said to be confidential and I will therefore not touch the recommendations at this stage, but all the same, with all the emphasis that I can command, I very humbly suggest to the honourable the Finance Minister that the approach by the Commission in regard to the question of the Joint Hindu Family has not been fair. I received a questionnaire from that body in which they told me that they have to look at the question from the point of view of evasion and now I understand they have been pleased to report in respect of the liabilities of the Joint Hindu Family for taxation also. My feeling is that when they framed the particular question about Joint Hindu Family from the point of view of evasion only and said so in the note accompanying the questions they had no right to make any sort of proposal in regard to the Joint Hindu Family. Last time when this question was raised on this very date, the previous Finance Minister told us that he will consider the question. Now on every Budget occasion when I have been in this House, this question has been raised and every Finance Minister has always admitted that injustice has been done to the Joint Hindu Family and last time the previous Finance Minister said that he would look into the question but I do not think the question is going to be looked at. I have got some faith in the honourable the Finance Minister as I have seen him at work in regard to the Bill about which my honourable friend Syed Karimuddin spoke and I found then that he was not obsessed by the idea of getting more money from the public and approached the question at issue from the right point of view. If he wishes to inspire confidence in the public he should know यथा राजा तथा प्रजा (As the King is so the subjects are likely to be).

If he keeps up this sentiment and acts up to this principle, I hope, he will be able to inspire confidence among the people and I also hope that he will look at this question from a dispassionate point of view.

And one thing more, I must submit for his consideration and that is this. I know from the report that he has circulated that the number of arrears was 3,85,000 and that he has been able to reduce it to 1,97,000 and his officers have worked well in 1947-48. Out of 38 crores which was the arrears in regard to completed cases it appears that he has been able to realize some thing like 15 crores. Though this amount contains some of the advances also, all the same I congratulate him for this work. There is one more thing about which I would plead respectfully. In all sessions and criminal cases three months is the period in which the case is to be finished and I want him to make it a rule that in every assessment of income-tax case not more than one year shall lapse. Unless he does make a rule like this, I do not think that the Income-tax authorities will take it seriously. I believe some such rule is necessary. I have to submit many more things, but I do not want to take advantage of your indulgence and, therefore, I sit down.

Shri Arun Chandra Guha (West Bengal: General): The honourable Minister for Finance has in his speech this morning placed his difficulties before the House. I think the honourable Members need not be reminded about the difficulties of the Finance Minister, particularly in a country like India at this time. We have problems along with the general economic condition all over the world due to the post-war conditions; but over and above all these power having been transferred from alien rule to our own hands, we must have some development plans, some economic readjustments which also have given birth to new problems. Moreover, we have problems arising out of the Partition of India, I am glad that the Government of India have at last come to realise that the effects of partition of India are tremendous and that they are affecting every sphere of our national life. Coming as I do from Bengal, I feel the effects of partition more keenly than the Members coming from other parts of India. We have been asking our leaders for some sort of customs union or economic understanding with the Pakistan Government. At last I am glad to see that the honourable Ministers for Finance and Commerce have said something to that effect and that the Government have realised that some understanding should be reached.

Then there is another anomaly in our economic condition. During the last two years we have been talking of inflation and of fighting inflation. I would like to say that the honourable Minister for Finance has done some injustice to this House by not taking it into his full confidence.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shrimati G. Durgabai (one of the Panel of Chairmen)]

I would ask him to tell the House if the Budget for 1949-50 is an anti-inflationary budget or something else than that. In his Budget speech he has given us some vague warning. "In the economic life of the country today there is a deep underlying fear for the future". Sometime ago the Economic Adviser to the Government of India—I wish he was more discreet—told the country that the country had almost reached a stage of depression. We can see that there are certain symptoms in our economic life which may give some warning to that effect. Cost of living has increased; money is abundant in the commodity market; but money is stagnant when the question of capital investment comes. That is a sign which may be taken as symptomatic of depression. I hope the honourable the Finance Minister will take the House into confidence if he is really apprehensive that depression is coming.

On another point the Finance Minister has not been quite frank with us. We expected from him a clear declaration as to the economic policy of the Government for the coming year. Of course it will be premature now to raise the question of complete nationalisation. I have no quarrel with him to admit that private enterprise has yet enough scope in the country and that we need it. I would not grudge the honourable Minister giving some inducement so that private capital may come forward for increasing production in the country. But I would like to have a clear declaration from the Government as to whether we are going in for centralised economy or whether we are in favour of decentralised economy. This is a very vital problem for us. Every Congressman in the House feels committed to the doctrine of decentralised economy. This is not merely an economic principle. From the experience of the last war we have realised that decentralised economy is more suitable to meet the emergencies of war. Centralised economy can be very easily made the target of air attacks and things like that. We are living in a time when, I am afraid, nobody will be able to be free from anxiety and fear of war. So, apart from our personal economic convictions, from the standpoint of world conditions today, we should have a clear declaration that the Government of India are committed to the principle of decentralised economy.

As regards the question of effecting economies in the administration I wish first to point out that our national income has increased since 1938-39 by about 100 per cent. But our Government expenditure has increased by about 400 per cent. There should have been some parity between these two figures. Members of the House have been rather outspoken in their criticism of the services. We do not grudge them the pay if we get the required efficiency. In this connection I would like to remind the Government that the nation has treated the Services most generously. If any single sector of the national life has benefited by the transference of power, it is the services. And I must say that they have not contributed anything towards it. On the other hand they have fought definitely against the transference of power and yet the country and the nation have treated them most generously. The House therefore expects that they make some gesture in response of this generosity.

During the British rule, the services on certain occasions were made to impose a voluntary cut in their salaries. After the transference of power I think it is not too much to expect that these same services would make a similar gesture by voluntarily surrendering a part of their salary. We have been told in this House by our Ministers that it is a contractual obligation to pay the services the stipulated salaries. I would like to know if that is the attitude of services today. Do they want the full pound of flesh? If that is their attitude then I must say that they are not playing their role.

As regards inducing the capitalists to make more investments, if need be, I admit that there may be some inducement given to them. But last year also some inducements were given. But in this House sometime ago more than one Minister plainly told us that capital has not played its role. I only hope that the capital this time will accept the challenge of the honourable Minister for Finance and will play the game by responding in a generous way to the trust that has been reposed in them.

As for economy the Ministry of Finance has a very unpleasant duty to perform. It has got something like a censorial duty to supervise the expenditure of all Departments. There is a Standing Committee attached to all the Departments. Most of the expenditure has to be passed by those Standing Committees. I would like that there should be some liaison between these Standing Committees and the Finance Department, so that the Finance Department may know on what considerations the Standing Committees of those Departments have to pass those items of expenditure. Some of the members might have put forward some arguments against the sanction; some members might have said one way or another and the Department again might have their own arguments. If there is a liaison between the Finance Department and these Standing Committees, I think the Finance Department may know the mind of the members of the Standing Committee, why some of them might have objected to a particular grant or why some of them might have supported it.

Some of the articles of basic necessity are subjected to taxation at three or four points. It is something like a competition between the Centre and the provinces in taxing these articles. The cotton that is produced in C. P. as cloth goes to Bihar or Bengal or Assam via the Bombay and Ahmedabad factories; and in between these, from the producers of cotton to the retail purchasers of cloth, I think there are at least four stages of taxation and this is in fact a factor tending to inflate prices. I hope there may be some arrangement between the Centre and the provinces by which such articles should be taxed only once. Pakistan Government has centralised the sales tax. I do not know if the provinces here would like that, but there should be some arrangement by which this multiple taxation—something like a competitive spirit in taxation between the Centre and the Provinces, might be stopped.

[Shri Arun Chandra Guha]

Then, one question which affects my province most vitally is the allocation of the jute tax and the income-tax. The Finance Minister this time has put the revenue due to income-tax remission at rupees six crores less and he has consoled us that out of these, rupees three crores would come out of the share of the provinces. But that would simply increase their burden. Of course, the Finance Minister has given us a useful dictum, "A balanced national budget may and often does cover a multitude of unbalanced family budgets". That is no solution for those poor men whose family or provincial budgets have been unbalanced. I would say that the whole Niemeyer Award and the allocation of jute and income-tax duties should be revised. There is no reason why West Bengal, after having all those calamities, should be discriminated against.

Another point is that in the report of the Ministry of Finance, my honourable friend has mentioned, "A minor banking crisis developed in West Bengal towards the end of September". It is not at all a minor banking crisis, it is a major and a very major financial crisis in the province. If I am allowed to say so, it is something like the South Sea Bubble of the 17th century in England. It is something like that for West Bengal and I would implore the Finance Minister that he may take some drastic steps as regards those banks which have closed—not only those scheduled banks but other small banks also—so that their easily realisable assets may be pooled together and some Reconstruction Bank may be started and as far those men who are responsible for this disaster, even their personal belongings may be investigated and if their honesty be found wanting in managing those banks, then they should be prosecuted. In any case some drastic steps should be taken.

One thing I would like to place before him. Those men who have brought about this financial disaster in my province, they are now engaged in other forms of business and the Government and other banks are giving them banking facilities and accommodation. I would at least ask the honourable the Finance Minister to write to other banks of Bengal that these men should be stigmatized and should not be given any banking accommodation unless their conduct in regard to those banks have been clearly proved to be beyond any stigma.

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai (Bombay: General): I intervene in this debate at this stage in order to supplement certain suggestions which I made at the time of the general discussion. Of course, I must admit that the reply which the honourable the Finance Minister has made at the end of the discussion has carried certain satisfaction to me and to most of the Members of the House. Particularly, he has stated that he has got unfortunately to deal with a situation which has been made worse by the last three Budgets, and he has tried to bring in, according to him, a sort of normal Budget, and particularly his reference to the relief granted to the capitalist class I welcome, because he said that this is the last dose of relief that is being given and if they do not still play the game, something more drastic would have to be done and certain other methods and technique would have to be found but in order to plough in capital which is lying hidden.

This morning the honourable the Finance Minister has given certain explanations regarding the prices and inflation but I am not satisfied as there is no assurance of the concrete steps which he has in view for the coming year. (Babu Ramnarayan Singh: 'Nothing.') The impression that has been left on my mind is only the assurance that the present process will continue, it has steadied, and you need not worry about it. He has not given us any assurance of doing something which will bring down the prices, but I feel that he is somehow or other believing in the theory of "drift", I would say, fatality—something may happen in America and probably we will be out of our economic crisis soon. That is what he is thinking about. (The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: 'Certainly not.') I think during the next year he ought to take some positive steps with a view to see that prices go down and the middle class, particularly those living in urban areas, will have a happy and easy time. (Shri B. Das: 'He wants your advice.') I am really very glad to know when we were told this morning that the honourable the Finance Minister has got in view the examination of the taxation structure, and for that he is appointing a sort of high-power commission to go into the national income and its distribution among different sections and cross-sections of society, so as to evolve an equitable system of taxation. But I hope it will not be one of those Commissions which might take years to come to decisions. He must give a time limit and that Commission should report in the course of the next six or eight months, so that at the time of the next Budget he will be able to evolve his system of taxation on the basis of the data thus obtained, and with an eye on the capacity to pay.

Regarding the formation of capital, there is one thing which I would like to place before him. During the last ten years, there have been phenomenally abnormal profits throughout the country. One does not know where those profits have gone. They say that a certain amount has been taken out of those profits by way of taxation to the extent of 80 to 90 per cent. That money would have come to the coffers of Government. Again it would have gone out and from that very money again profits would have been made. So it was a continuous process of making profits and today in the year 1949, there should have been enough capital in the country for capitalising most of our industrial concerns, and developing new industries but the capital is not forthcoming. What must have happened is this. There seems to be something wrong somewhere because the capitalist would like to invest his money even at one per cent. instead of keeping the capital idle. So, while thinking over this, I came to the conclusion that a certain exemption was granted in 1942. A person who at that time lived in India and earned money in the State was exempted from paying tax. And since 1942 I find that in a large number of States were started quite a considerable number of mushroom banks. I feel that these banks must have been interested in these questions and most of the profits earned in India might have been shown as earned in the States. They may have been shown as earned in the States and even from the States this money might have been transferred from London or New York. This phenomenon has diverted the money from India.

There is one question on which I was giving some attention and it is this. This time the export duty on oil-seeds has been removed in order to earn dollars in the foreign market. I do not know whether the whole question has been examined thoroughly. For aught we know, there are duplicate firms working for the same interests, both in the States and in India. It is the same firm with different names and oil-seeds and such other articles being surplus in the States, they are being sold by one firm to the other firm belonging to the same interest for profit, and this profit, in my opinion may, according to the law, legally have been earned in the States and for which they will pay no taxes. So particular oilseeds may have been bought in a particular State for Rs. 10 or Rs. 12 and it may have been sold for the export trade for Rs. 22 making the profits of Rs. 10. But it is earned in the States and so they are not taxable and the prices at the port may be Rs. 22 but in the export market possibly they might be fetching Rs. 22/8. So all the tax you get is on eight annas only. This is a question which requires close examination and I should think that the Government of India now, after the integration of the States and the formation of Unions among States, should take adequate powers to see that such evasions, which may be legal technically, though morally they are evasions, do not take place. This is the technique by which capitalists managed to evade taxes throughout this period.

With these few words, I would place the last suggestion before the honourable the Finance Minister to take immediate action and take steps to remove the exemption granted in 1942.

Mr. Chairman: May I know what time the honourable the Finance Minister would require for his closing reply?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: This debate is in the nature of the whole House thinking aloud together on certain problems. I do not think I would weary the House with a long reply. If you give me fifteen minutes, that would suit me.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Madam, I very carefully heard the speech of the honourable the Finance Minister. There was some pathos in his declaration that while every Ministry which came up for supplies was generously voted their demand, he himself was censored for his proposals, when he went to collect the money for that expenditure. But that is natural. The country needs expenditure on all items. What really we criticised was that he being the custodian of the Finances of the nation should so arrange things that all the needs are supplied and that the country develops in a manner and with a speed which we all desire. It was only a difference of opinion on the method of raising the funds and not that we did not want to raise funds. He should therefore not feel that we are partial to some Ministers and not to him. We have a very high respect for him and we only wish that he only tried to recast his proposals in the best interests of the nation in consultation with this House.

He has dealt with inflation and he has delivered a learned speech and met many of the criticisms levelled against him in the press, in the House and elsewhere. But I feel that inflation cannot be met without more production. The ultimate solution of inflation is more production, both in the fields and in the factories. No amount of jugglery in financing or other methods can really solve the problem. Just now a friend pointed out that production this year has increased by 15 per cent. That is not satisfactory for a State like India, which is starving for want of sufficient food. This budget which the Finance Minister has prepared, in fact depends entirely on the goodwill of institutional investors and the capitalists and it is a sort of an abject appeal to them to come forward with their money bags to help him. I feel that his appeal is misdirected because these people will always see whether it is profitable to them to come forward or not, and national interests are hardly a consideration with them.

I feel that for production we must boldly plan and nationalise the key industries and have proper distribution. It is now too late in the day to deny that the capitalist system has failed, and that appeals to industrialists will not help our country. We have to plan, to nationalise the key industries as we have already decided, and ultimately to distribute the incomes in a manner which will promote the wealth, happiness and well-being of the country.

I am sorry that whenever it is suggested that the state should itself plan and start nationalised key industries, it is argued that capital will become shy. I think in our country there is so much field for new production that even if we do not nationalise a single one of the existing industries, the State can plan and start any number of new industries and spend any amount of money upon them and leave private enterprise also to prosper and add to the wealth of the country. Even in Russia they did not nationalise everything at once.

In fact when we compare our production with that of other great countries ours is less than 1/100th of theirs. The other day I compared our production in iron and steel with that of Russia. Ours was nine lakhs tons whereas Russia is producing 45 million tons of steel and iron per year under the present five year plan. Russia is producing 45 million tons of both iron and steel whereas through private capitalists we are producing only nine lakh tons. There is not enough of iron and steel in the country and if the State also installs its plants it can produce more steel without injuring the existing interests in steel. The same is the state of affairs in regard to the production of coal and oil. In fact the argument dangled before our eyes that capital is shy and industrialists will not invest is quite superficial and utterly false. We have already declared that there is enough scope for private industry and yet nothing is done by the State in the matter of production.

In fact today those who have read the papers would have seen that in Russia they have reshuffled their supreme cabinet and the following are the industries in charge of separate ministries. There are nine ministries which are devoted to production. There is a ministry for forestry and the paper industry, another for light industries, a third for chemical industries, a fourth for the oil industry, a fifth for fisheries, a sixth for coal production, a seventh for food stuff production, an eighth for industry and machine production and a ninth for metal production. You will see from this what amount of attention they pay to production. Let us compare their Budget figures of income with ours. Their income is 4,46,043 million roubles which comes to about 22,000 crores of rupees. In fact it is about 75 times our income according to the present Budget. How have they been able to get so much income? It is because they produce much more and therefore they can impose and collect more taxes. Only twenty years ago they were lagging behind our country.

The honourable Finance Minister will therefore have to give up his supplication to the industrialists and institutional investors. He will have to plan boldly and execute his plans boldly. He will have to nationalise key industries, not necessarily those already existing in private hands but he will have to develop new industries, so that our country may come into line with the other advanced countries. Unless he does that there will not be any solution for inflation or poverty.

As regards agriculture it is a pity that we have to spend 100 crores for importing food grains and also pay rupees 32 crores in subsidy. If that amount was spent in developing our agriculture I think we could have wiped out this import of food grains. I feel that we are not giving the same attention to the food production as we ought to. If we had done that I am sure this amount of four million tons of imported food grains can be produced in the country in a very short time. I therefore think that there can be a good deal of economy in this matter of import of and subsidy for food.

Apart from production which can give us more income, we must also economise our useless expenditure. I have seen the Budget estimates. I feel that the civil administration has become a white elephant. Comparing the figures for the last ten years, published by the Modern Economist, we find that in 1938-39 our civil expenditure was 10.90 crores. In this budget our civil expenditure for a partitioned India is 48 crores. Three-fourths of the 1938-39 expenditure which should be the proper sum for partitioned India's share is 7.5 crores but our present expenditure is 48 crores i.e. it is seven times as much. This is a very big increase in civil expenditure and much of it is due to the creation of more and more departments and high salaried posts. I think here there is great scope for economy. From 7-1/2 crores to 48 crores is something which requires serious attention and we can economise here by at least 18 crores. We must not spend more than 30 crores on civil departments. In fact I am surprised that while we are going on with retrenchment of petty employees we are creating more departments and spending huge sums on high salaried posts for absolutely new men. I want that all the existing surplus trained personnel should be employed in new departments and there should be no waste of the trained young men and new men should not be recruited so long as existing surplus trained personnel is available. Thus we shall solve both the problems of retrenchment and economy.

For Defence we have passed a budget for 157 crores. I am very happy that we are trying to be very efficient in defence. But modern armies cannot be put into the field unless there is a very strong industrial structure in the country behind them. I therefore feel that instead of spending money on defence we should spend it on industries, so that industry may be able to supply the needs of the army. I want a cut of 37 lakhs under this head of Defence and this should be spent in developing more industries.

As regards food subsidies we should abolish them and instead spend about 15 crores of the money saved on the development of agriculture and we should see that not a single grain is imported. If we make that rule and make it stringent it is quite possible to meet all the needs of the country without importing any food from abroad and thus wasting huge sums of money. In this way we can save 75 crores in all.

Then there is tax evasion, which has been another white elephant on the exchequer. We should be able to collect at least 25 crores more in the existing taxes by stopping evasion and in this way we can save 100 crores of rupees with which we can develop our industry and agriculture according to a bold plan so that we may be able to meet all the needs of the country. Then in the course of a few years the budgetary position and the economic condition of the country will be much more sound.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): We heard an excellent speech from the honourable the Finance Minister this morning. There are certain features which I think will be welcomed from every section of the House. Firstly it has been announced that the Government of India intends seriously to tackle the problem of top heavy expenditure and that it is determined in the next few weeks to examine the report of the Economy Committee appointed by the Government of India in respect of the departments about which reports have already been submitted. I hope that the Finance Minister will stick to the policy that he has announced and the Economy Committee's recommendations which have been submitted after a great deal of labour will be given due effect and implemented at an early date. This matter has given a great deal of satisfaction to us, viz., that this drive for reduction of top heavy expenditure is intended to be given a momentum by the Government. In fact as has been pointed out by previous speakers there has been an enormous expenditure rising to four or five fold. If you refer to the number of secretariat staff you will be staggered to see the number of Secretaries, Joint Secretaries, Deputy Secretaries, etc., rising from 46 to 334. The number of clerks have risen from 1,305 to 6,902. And the number of fourth grade staff—that is: chaprassis etc.—has arisen from 800 and odd to 3,000. (Shri Mahavir Tyagi: 'Scandalous!') This expenditure must be curtailed. It is rather surprising to find that even the very small token cut that was proposed in the last Budget by Shri Shanmukham Chetty could not be given effect to. I hope matters will improve this time.

Then the second declaration that has been made by the honourable the Finance Minister and which I think must have been welcomed by the House is that he realises that the Sterling Balances Agreement which his predecessor entered into with the Government of the United Kingdom was not to the satisfaction of India. If I have rightly understood him I think he has felt that there was absolutely no reason why the Sterling Balances Agreement should have been arrived at on such terms which in no way were beneficial to this country. This Agreement will hold good for three years, but on the lapse of three years I think the Finance Minister intends to revise the Agreement on more beneficial terms to this country than has been done in the past. In fact the foreign capital—the British investments—in this country are being rapidly liquidated at very very inflated prices and are being transferred from British hands into Indian hands; and it is rather strange that our Government has not taken any benefit of similar Agreements that were made by the United Kingdom with countries like Argentina, etc. If our Government had been more vigilant and if it would have insisted upon the purchasing of the British assets in India in liquidation of sterling balances, I think we would have fared much better.

The third declaration that has been made is that the Government of India thinks it essential to make an enquiry into the national income of the country and to collect the requisite data and to take steps for the revision of the taxation structure of the country. It is absolutely essential because the taxation structure must be based on sound lines and the distribution of national income must be made equitably among all classes of people. But there is one thing.

As I have mentioned at the stage of the general discussion and which I reiterate today the approach of our Finance Minister to the conditions existing in India is of a very conservative and orthodox type. While the conditions existing in the country are not of a normal but of an extremely abnormal type the approach of our Finance Minister is not of a type commensurate with the exceptional conditions existing in the country. Our Finance Department has been taking a rather fluctuating course. Sometimes it recommends economy of a socialist type, at other times of a capitalist type. The Liaquat Ali Budget was framed on a socialist model. That policy has been reversed and it has been substituted by a policy of appeasement of our capitalist and industrialist—nay, the present budget is not only a budget of appeasement of the industrialist but in a way a budget of surrender to the industrialists and capitalists. Let us see how far this policy of appeasement succeeds and is likely to bring the result that is intended, that is, more money in the investment market. So far the reaction has been of a more or less disappointing character because not only there is satisfaction at the abolition of the Capital Gains Tax but the demand now is for the removal of the Business Profits Tax as also for the reduction of the Corporation Tax. How our economic structure will be able to bear this additional burden I for one am unable to understand.

Therefore it is not likely that the policy of calling for voluntary loans will have a greater degree of success than it had in the past. Last year only Rs. 55 crores out of a target of Rs. 150 fixed was subscribed. This year the target fixed is Rs. 87 crores but another debt that has to be paid comes to Rs. 67 crores and therefore the target is only about Rs. 20 crores. Will this small amount of loan satisfy the development programme which is essential for this country? We have certainly attained political freedom but economically we must feel we are still under thralldom. Our country is dependent for everything, from a needle to the biggest machinery, upon foreign countries: nay, in a way our economic condition today is worse than it had ever been. In the past India had never been dependent for its food on foreigners. But now we are dependent on them even for food. Let us see what is the programme that our National Government and our Finance Minister has fixed for the next five or ten years to follow. Does their budget contain anything which assures that on the expiry of, say, a period of five or ten years this country will be economically independent and will be able to stand in the world erect unaided, unassisted and not dependent upon any other country? Suppose today a war comes—and the clouds of war are already hovering and nobody can deny the possibility of such a contingency—what will be the fate of India? For our food we will be dependent upon foreign countries. So far as our defence is concerned we are absolutely dependent: we cannot manufacture our aeroplanes. We cannot have our own fleet, air fleet or sea fleet. For everything we are dependent upon supply from foreign countries. Is it a state of things with which we should remain satisfied?

The only way in which you can tackle these problems which are by no means of an ordinary character is that you must undertake a bold and courageous financial programme, and a fiscal policy must be moulded not on a conservative and orthodox type but on a liberal type and in a way in which you may be able to successfully meet the abnormal requirements of your country. This is nowhere to be seen. As I have already pointed out, the response of the industrialist and the capitalist, upon whose mercy we depend as has been depicted in our budget, is poor. There is absolutely no sign that that response is going to improve in the future. Therefore, if you are not getting any money by voluntary loans, what is the alternative suggestion before the Government of India to have the money requisite for our development and programmes? The Minister for Industry and Supply and the Minister for Works, Mines and Power envisaged a programme which requires, say, at least Rs. 500 crores in the next three years. Wherefrom is the money to come? If the capitalist and the industrialist cannot be appeased and wooed to part with his money then I say that Government should either sit idle or admit its failure, or it must take a bold and courageous stand. That can be done only by way of raising money by compulsory saving process or by compulsory borrowing. In this approach alone we can counteract the evil and the monster of inflation on the one hand and at the same time bring into the coffers of our country sufficient money to meet the industrial requirements of this country. Unless such a bold and courageous policy is coming forth from our Finance Department, I think the future for this country is not very good.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U. P.: General): I congratulate honourable the Finance Minister for his lucid explanation of the different aspects of the situation. I feel one difficulty. Honourable the Finance Minister wants to meet inflation. Inflation is an evil and it has bad effects, but it is not an unmitigated evil—it has its good aspects as well. It has given employment to the people. It has given money to people who were always in debt, who were starving, who had no will of their own, who were leading the lives of the dumb-driven cattle; it gave some hope to such people.

When you meet inflation and contract the currency, the natural result would be that there would be less of employment. But the only way left of meeting inflation is by cancelling the currency or contracting it. High taxation is another way whereby you take away the money from the hands of the people. Their purchasing power should be lessened. The moment you lessen the purchasing power, the moment you take the money from the capitalist or the industrialist there would always be less of employment because when the prices go down overnight the wages will not go down and the natural result would be that many of the industries shall have to be closed down. What will you do then? This country has always been having a lot of unemployment and it cannot bear any further unemployment resultant on having the measures to meet the inflation.

My own solution is that you have given a long rope to the industrialists, you should expect them to rise to the occasion. The difficulty to my mind has been not that they do not have the good intention, not that they are the blackest people in the world, but the trouble has been that they have not been trained in the way the European capitalists are trained—they know the way to produce money, to earn income, to amass wealth in a way no capitalist in the world outside and no industrialist in the world has ever done. The black-market as it is here in India has been unknown in the world. Under-paying the labourer, not marking him present, not paying overtime wages, are some things unknown in the world outside but they are going on here in mills and factories and many other things which beyond India have long ceased to exist. So, to expect from them that they would carry on with increased industrial output under the modern conditions is an impossible proposition. It is not the fault of the intention of the man, but it is the fault of the lack of training.

In inflation the fundamental trouble is that owing to the uncertainty and owing to the expectation of a rise in prices people do not send their commodities to the market. Take the case of a peasant. The general tendency in the past was that in the last week of April he would sell half his saleable produce in the market, another one-fourth would be sold before the beginning of the rainy season and whatever was left to be sold would always be sold in the month of October. After October it was difficult for the peasant to keep any extra commodity in the house as it was not likely to rise in price after October. But the present tendency is that they will not sell it for the whole year; they will keep it for the next year in the hope that the prices will go on rising and rising.

On the other hand, a man who wants the commodity for one month's expenditure, will go in the market and try to buy it for six months because he is uncertain whether the commodity will ever appear in the market again and whether he shall not have to pay higher prices. This situation creates trouble as it badly affects the people as a whole, especially the labourer or the man whose income is low.

As I said above, one compensatory factor of inflation is the rise in employment. By combating inflation you certainly lower down the average of employment and this country is not able to bear such large unemployment. My suggestion is that in order to have capital in your hand you should impose death duties, capital levy and have borrowing and cancel some of our currency. In England and in other countries there are duties on higher incomes to the extent of 65 per cent. Nature has given man dominion over his property for his life; beyond life nobody has any natural right to will as to where the property should go and where it should not go. It is a natural justice if we have this duty. You should take the earliest opportunity to have that duty levied so as to have money in your hand and then contract your currency a bit and also have a capital levy. By all these means you shall have a lot of capital in your hands. It is no use waiting and seeing how the capitalists move—how the industrialists move; they have never moved, they have been dragged on by the circumstances and now the circumstances refuse to drag them on. They cannot go their own way. So, it is much better and more in the fitness of things that you take the people's lot in your own hands, start your own State industries, have new avenues of finding production, starting new ameliorative measures, so that the people instead of looking to the accumulation of capital in the hands of the capitalists or the industrialists, would invest the money in the labour—you create better man, better labourer, better clerk, better manager, better Secretary in your offices, and better educated men in every part of life; a better citizen would make the lot of the country better.

[Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma]

Before I sit down I earnestly appeal that the time of orthodox balanced way of doing things has gone. You cannot flee from the incoming onrush of the circumstances or their result and run into the lap of a mother like a child; you cannot at the same time jump to action like the blind man; but the need of the situation is that of a creative genius, of judging the things present, by negotiating with them and boldly confronting them and going on to the future to create a happier and better country.

Shri Upendranath Barman (West Bengal: General): I do not propose to deal with the financial and budget proposals as such, but only with one subject which the honourable the Finance Minister dealt with, both in his Budget speech, and this morning. And that is as regards the monetary policy of the Government, so far as capital formation is concerned. It is the accepted view of this House that we need more production industrial and agricultural. Then the question arises that in our industrial development we want capital both in the hands of the Government by way of loans and also investments by private capitalists. This is again a proposition which is accepted by us. But in the speech of the honourable Minister, he raises some apprehension that the capital in the hands of private capitalists is stagnant, and that that is due to deep-lying fear about the future. That, of course, is in addition to the inflationary causes that he has given us in his budget speech, and in order to remove that fear, the honourable Prime Minister, the honourable Deputy Prime Minister and other Ministers also gave assurances times without number. In the last Budget, by the honourable Finance Minister's predecessor, similar assurances were given and some relief was also given in the taxation proposals of last year, all in the hope that capital will be forthcoming during the course of this year. But these hopes have been belied, and the honourable Finance Minister has again this year come with further proposals of relief. At the same time he says this is a challenge to the capitalists, and their spirit of enterprise. I am not in a position to controvert him in this proposition, and in his assessment of the facts. But at the same time we find in the same budget speech, in para 5 he has the following words:

"While there is obviously a large amount of money in the country competing for the limited supply of goods, the investment market has been stagnant and there has been little flow of money into Government loans or into industrial concerns."

Here the question arises whether it is due to the high taxation measures that capital is tied up or from the fear about future. The honourable Minister says that though there is enough capital in the hands of the capitalist it does not come either to the help of the Government or to the needs of the industry of the country. Therefore, the question may be asked, which of these two propositions is correct. If the statement of the honourable Finance Minister in para 5 of his Budget speech is correct, then the question of further concessions to capitalists, so that they may have more capital and more surplus money, to spend either on Government loans or in their own undertakings does not arise at all. Then the only question that can be asked is, if there is money enough in the hands of the capitalists, and yet does not come out, what are they doing with that capital?

The honourable Minister gives us the reply to this question also, when he says that they are competing for goods which are in short supply. In other words, they are more interested in doing unfair business, in black-marketing, than in honestly giving help either to the Government or to the industrial needs of the country. If that be correct, there is only one answer to this. Either Government must be up and doing, in checking black-marketing, or Government will accept defeat at the hands of the capitalists. No matter how much gesture it may show to the capitalist. This black-marketing is the root cause. If a man has some capital, and if he finds that by investing it in black-markets or in doing unfair business, he gains more, then why should he come and invest his capital in Government loans or in private industrial undertakings, where your taxation officer will come and check his doings, and inspectors will disturb him? So this is the only question that looms very large in our minds, whether Government is tackling the matter strongly, so that this scourge on our lives, on Indian life may be scared away. This requires very strong measures, and no amount of gestures will do any good to the country at this stage.

It has been suggested by many concerns and by many private individuals also that it is not shyness of capital alone that is responsible for this shortcoming in industrial investment or on government loans. Really in all big undertakings, the real investment, the bulk of the investment, came largely from middle or small-class shareholders. Now, this middle-class and small shareholders are so much upset with the inflated market that they have no surplus money at all to invest. It is only a very few capitalists—perhaps 20 per cent. or less than that—who really hold up this money from playing its part in our industrial life. How much of this statement is correct, it is for the honourable Finance Minister who has more facts in his possession to say. But my first proposition remains that unless and until we can deal with black-marketing firmly, there is no hope of the situation becoming better. Now we cannot wait till the capitalists are placated fully, and they come out with their capital to give us help. In the meantime, the country is suffering so much, that we cannot wait looking at the capitalists alone. My own view is that—and it is the general view—my view as a layman is that Government should no longer look to the capitalists, but should draw this dead line, that there should be no more capitalist formations in this country. We do not disturb the old capital investments. But henceforward, our Government should undertake to develop industry and agriculture from its own resources, and for that purpose, do whatever is possible. We have got sterling balances outside. We acquire some trade balances also in foreign countries. So, instead of inviting the private investors to form companies and purchase capital goods from outside and undertake industrial concerns, it is high time that Government should utilise all the resources that they have got to launch State concerns for these purposes.

Then another point is this. As regards agriculture, we may be dependent on others to some extent for indenting capital goods such as improved agricultural implements, tube-wells, etc., but it is only to a small extent. But on the whole we must depend absolutely on our own resources within the country and develop our agriculture. For that purpose I propose to the honourable Minister to finance all sorts of agricultural development undertakings in due course from our own resources and if our revenue resources do not permit them being taken up, then we should have recourse to our currency making powers that is the Nasik Press. What I say is this that when we find that any agricultural undertaking or industrial undertaking will give immediate results in the shape of goods produced out of that undertaking, there should be absolutely no hesitation in using our Nasik Press for financing it.

I have seen in my own province a renowned gentleman, Sir Daniel Hamilton, purchasing an absolutely barren land in the Sundar Bans area. He introduced a certain currency called Gosaba note. He utilised that note. Of course he had to purchase some food and other things to supply labour and when the grains were produced those notes were paid back to him. They were utilised as payments from the tenants to the zamindars and he gave rights in the lands to the tenants. Those dead notes which were absolutely valueless so far as they themselves are concerned were utilised in producing tons and tons of goods in the shape of food crops. This is some thing which we should consider in respect of our national economy in this crisis.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I do not wish nor would the House wish me to reply to all the various suggestions which have been made in the course of the discussion. All that I would say is that it has been an extremely useful discussion. There has been a useful interchange of views on important questions and I have not the slightest doubt that all that has been said in the course of the debate will be of great help to me and to my colleagues in coming to correct decisions on these matters of great importance.

I would like only to make a few comments on some of the more specific matters which have been referred to by honourable members. I quite agree, as I said in my speech this morning and as I said also in my reply to the general debate, that there is probably no more important problem before the Government these days than to look for possible economies in every direction in public expenditure, but I think there is a general feeling in the House that there are more possibilities of economy in the direction of Civil rather than of Defence expenditure. I think it was my honourable friend, Mr. Das, who referred to the question of Defence Expenditure. I would like to tell the House briefly because I think the matter is important, what my own personal reaction is to the problem of Defence Expenditure. I agree when the country's security is in jeopardy, there can be no limit at all to the expenditure that we should be prepared to incur in order to make the country absolutely safe. But in normal times, I would like to say that an expenditure of 157 crores a year is a good deal more than the economy of this country can stand (Hear, hear). We can maintain an expenditure at this level only by maintaining taxation at an un-economic level and by denying the country essential nation-building activities on which the future welfare of the people depends.

Reference has been made to the Taxation Investigation Commission. I think that Commission...

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: What about the Civil expenditure about which you were also speaking in the morning?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: What I said about the Economy Committee has reference to Civil expenditure. I have already put the House in possession of my views as regards Civil expenditure.

Pandit Thakur Das referred to the question of the Taxation Investigation Commission. I do not agree with him regarding his views about the Taxation Investigation Commission. In my opinion, that Commission has already done useful work. The report that has been produced, I think is an extremely valuable report and I propose to examine that report at as early a date as possible and place legislative proposals before the House.

As regards the question of enquiry into the specific cases of evasion which have been referred to them, I think a few weeks ago in reply to a question in the House, I said that they had reached decisions and sent us reports in regard to four cases. Recently they have completed or very nearly completed six more cases, and as far as I can tell the total amount of revenue involved must be somewhere about a crore or more. The important point to remember is that you cannot deal with all these cases until the necessary spade-work has been done in regard to the general lines on which evasion has been practised. I believe the Commission has reached a stage now where it would be possible to expedite the work of enquiring into specific cases and speaking for myself, I am satisfied that the Commission so far has done a good job of work.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Will it deal with all the evasion cases 1,200 or 1,500 or more? Your predecessor said there may be only 12 or 13 cases and your reply to a question was there were 1,200 cases referred to this Commission.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: That was really the point I was coming to. There are certain common features to all these cases and until these common features are sufficiently elucidated, you cannot make any progress, but once you are able to get a clear picture of the way in which evasion has been practised, the progress that you can make thereafter would be much quicker and I expect, therefore, the rate at which the work will be done hereafter would be expedited.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): How many cases have been referred to the Commission?

An Honourable Member: 1,200.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: A little more than that. There has been a good deal of talk about the incentive which the Budget has gone out of its way to provide for the capitalists. I am not by any means capitalist in my outlook. I have had a good deal of examination done into this problem of capital formation. I have examined the distribution of capital in many representative joint stock concerns and I want to tell the House that I have been really surprised at the extent to which shares are being held in these concerns by people who belong to the middle income and the lower middle-income groups. In fact in many representative concerns that I looked into, if I could strike an average, if you take the total number of share-holders, somewhere about 90 per cent. would belong to the classes to which you and I belong. Therefore, when you say the investor is shy, it is the small man who is shy and necessarily so, because the small man with his limited resources would I think feel much more shy than the big man to risk his resources. He has got to take very much greater care and I think in these discussions that we are having about the investor, it is necessary to have a clear picture of this fact, namely the distribution of share capital in our joint stock concerns is such that the man who is mainly interested and mainly affected by it is the middle-class investor.

I think it was my honourable friend Mr. Moturi Satyanarayana who made a suggestion as regards what we ought to do with our loans and our revenues in the interests of the agriculturist. If, I am fortunate enough to be in charge of a Budget which discloses a considerable surplus, what I would like to do is not to reduce the level of indirect taxation, but to take the surplus that you can get out of it and spend it in a form which would make a direct appeal to the people in the country-side. What you have got to do is to provide him with services which will not merely be of interest to him but which would make an appeal to him. There is nothing that I would like better to do than to have a surplus at my disposal with which to constitute the nucleus of a national development fund from which, as occasion arises, it would be possible to finance schemes that would make directly for the welfare of the agriculturists.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava referred to the question of the Joint Hindu Family, a matter to which he refers almost every year. I cannot pretend that I have a clear understanding of the problems of income-tax in relation to the joint family. But this is a matter which has been discussed in the report of the Taxation Investigation Commission and I propose to go carefully into that report to see whether something can be done to relieve the position.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: That promise is also given every year.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: That may be so. But now that we have detailed information in this report we can apply our minds better to this problem.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The Commission has not investigated the matters thoroughly. They did not invite opinions on this question and yet they have proceeded to give their recommendations conjecturally. This is wholly unsatisfactory.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: It is quite unnecessary for me to say, to such an experienced lawyer as Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, that when you proceed to frame your proposals on the basis of the investigations made by a Commission, it does not mean that you are committed to the whole of the report. Since Government are committed to making legislative proposals in that matter, it would be possible for us to sit together in Select Committee and see whether a satisfactory solution cannot be arrived at.

The question of opium was raised by Mr. Sahu. He knows as well as I do since he was one of the deputationists that waited on me on this question that we are going to have a conference of the Central Government and representatives of provincial Governments on this question. As far as the Government of India are concerned, we have little revenue interest in this matter. So I approach this question with a disinterested outlook. I hope it will be possible for us, as a result of this Conference, to arrive at a satisfactory settlement of this longstanding issue.

I think my honourable friend Mr. Guha referred to the banking crisis in Bengal. I have been watching developments in Bengal carefully. The position at present is that the financial affairs of those banks are being enquired into by the Joint Registrar of Joint Stock Companies there. I believe he has completed his report. But since many of these banks have branches in Pakistan the registrar in Pakistan has also to make an enquiry and report. Meanwhile these investigations are going on. I cannot possibly take disciplinary action against those banks before getting the facts disclosed in the report. It will not be long delayed.

Shri Arun Chandra Guha: I have made another suggestion that those men who are responsible for the bank failures should not get accommodation from other banks.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: That depends on the financial and police investigations. I cannot proceed against people without evidence against them.

Shri Khandubhai Desai raised the question of States in regard to income-tax. He suggested that the existence of Indian States has been a means of evasion of tax by certain influential people. As the House knows, there is a committee which is now going into the question of the financial integration of States. I hope as a result of the investigation made by this Committee it will be possible for us to reach a satisfactory solution as regards this problem.

Then, I think my friend Professor Shibban Lal Saksena referred to the example of Russia in the matter of planning and increased production. I have been for some years a student of Russian economic problems. With regard to Russian planning, the figures quoted by him indicate the success of the planning. The success of that planning turns on a method of remuneration which is referred to generally as the Stakhanovite method. It is based on individual and private gains as an incentive to production. To say that Russia has eliminated the motive of individual gain is the very denial of facts. This fact is frequently overlooked.

I think my honourable friend Mr. Barman referred to Sir Daniel Hamilton. There was a stage in my life when I was associated to some extent with Sir Daniel when he was engaged in the task of reclaiming the Sundarbans. He devised a system of currency notes that was accepted by people because he had the reputation of being the wealthiest European in India. It was really his personal credit that was at the back of his notes. If I start issuing notes on a large scale for our national concerns Government will not long retain their credit. I think I have covered the specific points raised. I will take into serious consideration all the suggestions that have been made.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: As regards the military expenditure, although the House was of the view that there should not be any curtailment in the Army, Navy or Air Force, the House desired that the Minister's vigilance should not be relaxed in the purchase of stores, supplies and items under the head miscellaneous.

Mr. Speaker: The House will take up Demands for Grants in respect of Home Affairs and the States Ministry. I shall therefore place these Demands before the House. I presume that there will be no special allotment of time in respect of each of these, but they will be taken as a common one.

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State): We propose to take up the Home Ministry till 3-30 and we want to start with the States Ministry at 3-30.

Mr. Speaker: Then the arrangement is that up to 3-30 the Demands under the head 'Home Affairs' should be discussed and from 3-30 to 5 P.M. the Demands under the 'States Ministry' should be discussed. I believe the House is agreeable to that?

Honourable Members: Yes, yes.

Mr. Speaker: May I know if the honourable Minister is going to have separate speeches on both occasions or a joint speech at the beginning?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Minister of Home Affairs and the States): I should like to deal with them separately as was done previously.

Mr. Speaker: Then the time may be adjusted accordingly, so that the members may be left some time for discussion. So, I shall, therefore place these Demands before the House one by one.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, the House I believe has got the review of the Ministry of Home Affairs, as I believe the reviews have been circulated to the honourable Members. Now from the review, honourable Members will see that the activities of the Home Ministry consist of two parts, one being the establishment and maintenance of the Services, the I.C.S., the Indian Administrative Service, the Police Service, the Secretariat Service and the other part being the internal security of the country. So far as the internal security of the country is concerned, the direct responsibility of the Home Ministry is with regard to the Centrally Administered areas, namely, the Provinces of Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg and one or two small areas such as the Andamans, but a large part of the activities of internal security, so far as law and order is concerned, vests in the Provinces. In the Provinces, the Centre can exercise its influence by way of giving them advice and co-operation and seeking also their co-operation. I am glad to inform the House that so far as the co-operation of the Provinces is concerned, the Central Government has met with a ready and full response from all the Provinces and we have no reason to complain. In several cases they have also gone out of their way and sought our advice. Our relations with the Provinces in this critical period have thus been very happy and cordial, and I have no doubt that we will continue to do so.

As regards the Services, I need hardly dilate at length on the necessity of maintaining their discipline and morale and keeping them contented; in no other circumstances can we get out of the Services loyal and efficient service except by trying to appreciate their difficulties and their work. We have often criticised the Services, which we have a right to, but Services, after all, are composed of human beings and unless we put ourselves in their place, we are not likely to appreciate their full worth. Therefore, in my speech on the last occasion when the Budget was presented, I had appealed to honourable Members of this House that it is our duty to see that the machine with which we have to work is kept in good humour and good temper. We are entitled to criticise them, but we are also bound to see what type of service we have got. This is a 'Service' which we had inherited from the past Government, which had created it for a particular purpose. It has served that purpose very efficiently and admirably. That Service has a reputation of efficiency and strength. Honourable Members of the House are aware that Service is considerably depleted and a large part of its main strength was taken away immediately on the transfer of power. Those who used to rule this country by their strength, by their power, by their capacity and by the resources of the Empire behind it, have all left. The increasing activities of the Government of India in several Departments and the creation of new Departments have also made larger calls on that Service. So we have the strength of the Service considerably depleted. That Service was known or styled as the Steel-frame. Whatever may be the meaning attributed to that name by which it was known, I have no reason to believe—and you will also agree with me—that if we know how to take work from that Service, there is no reason why they should not give better work than they gave to the foreign masters.

Now, there is complaint about corruption. I realise that there are cases of corruption and dishonesty and misbehaviour. We should all search our own conscience and ask ourselves, who amongst us has not erred, and then judge the extent and nature of these failings. We must allow for the ravages of war on men's morals and material resources. We must concede that what they get today is, in reality,—on account of the rise in the cost of living and the increased burden of taxation—only half to one-third of what they were getting before. I am sure if we allow for all these, we will find that, on the whole, despite their individual lapses and short-comings, they have stood us and the country well.

in crises. In judging therefore the Civil Servants of any grade of Service, the House should bear in mind the difficult circumstances and the exceptional stress and strain through which the Services have passed and are, like the rest of us, passing, and must also appreciate the immensity and the heaviness of the burden that has devolved on them with their ranks terribly depleted, with their standards definitely lower on account of much quicker promotions and on account of all round discontent with the conditions of living and employment.

Now, almost the first question which I took up when I assumed charge of this Department was the securing of the liquidation of the Secretary of State's Services and their replacement by Indian or Indian-controlled services. I convened a conference of Prime Ministers of all the Provinces and held long discussions on this question in the last week of October 1946. I am glad to see that the timely and advance action that we took not only helped us in hastening the change over from European to Indian control but also to lay down the foundations of a new Service which the honourable Members will find described at length in the Review. It was after considerable discussions and much correspondence that it was possible to finalise the plans.

The House will re-call for instance, the long discussions I had with Mr. Arthur Henderson, the then Under Secretary of State for India. I am now confident that if we treat the new Services with the consideration and sympathy which the permanent services deserve, we shall go sufficiently far in promoting not only a unity of administration, but also a uniformity of administrative efficiency in all provincial units. The House will notice that we have also a plan to extend the Services of this type to all the States who wish to join in this plan. And I have no reason to doubt that there will be no State in India which will keep out of this plan. If, as I hope, all of them accept this plan, for the first time we shall have achieved the integration of key services in India on a country-wide basis and I am sure we shall have laid the sure foundations of an administrative structure which will be a great asset in fighting disruptive or fissiparous tendencies all over India.

We had also to deal with a shortage of man-power which was forced on us partly as a result of war and partly by the growing demands of expanding departments. To make up this shortage, we had to tap all available resources—the retired and superannuated personnel, promotions from amongst the existing personnel, and other services, and direct recruitment. Nevertheless, a substantial gap was still left in the various services for which we are now making an emergency recruitment by means of a special recruitment board which has toured the majority of the provinces and has sent in their recommendations. Some of these new recruits, in accordance with the recommendations made by this Board, have already come. We have been training them in our Training Schools and the reports that we get are very satisfactory. They have favourably impressed those in charge of the training and I am confident that when this deficiency is made up, we shall be able to settle down to our task of administration with greater confidence in its efficiency and high standard.

I know the House is considerably exercised over the question of efficiency of the Secretariat, the despatch of work and the improvement in the methods of work. The House will have seen from the Review that has been circulated that we have already undertaken some enquiries and that it has been possible to devise a scheme for the re-organisation of the Secretariat Services—a scheme which has already made headway in its implementation. We realise the need of despatch and of proper and efficient methods of work is great. The improvement of the Secretariat organisation in that respect is the subject of investigation by the honourable the Railway Minister on behalf of the Cabinet, and I can assure the House that, as soon as his report is received, Government will finalise their views on it with all possible despatch and see that it is implemented as soon as possible. In the meantime, we have made some improvements on the basis of previous reports and I can assure the House that the result of these improvements has been a somewhat better organisation and standard of work than we started with.

Now I shall deal with the complaints of corruption among Government servants. The House is aware that to deal with such cases we have employed a special agency called the Delhi Police Establishment, whose record of work the House will judge from the statistics furnished in the Review circulated. I think that, within the limitations in which it has worked and having regard to the staff employed, it is a fair record. But we wish to improve upon it and to enlarge its field of usefulness also. With that view we have indented for more staff and I have also appointed a Committee from among the Members of this House to go into the existing anti-corruption laws and suggest such changes to strengthen those laws as it might deem necessary.

The Ministry has also to deal with a large number of refugee employees and those who formerly served in Pakistan but opted for service in India. The House will observe that within a comparatively short period of 18 months, almost the whole of this huge establishment has been catered for. I realise that many are not so well-off as they were before and that many questions of seniority, fixation of salaries, promotions, etc. are still agitating the minds of these employees. But our first task was re-settlement so that these employees may not wander about for want of suitable jobs. We are gradually taking up other questions as well and finding equitable solutions. I am sure it is clear to the House that in resettling these employees and in dealing with other incidental questions we have to bear in mind that the administration cannot be at a standstill and its wheels have to be continually kept moving and that we must secure a balance between experience and ability of our existing employees and the need for giving a fair deal to the "refugee" employees without any appreciable loss of efficiency. If we bear this essential point in mind, I am sure we shall be able to appreciate correctly the worth of the work done by this Department.

I have also had for a long time under review the question of a large number of temporary employees under Defence and other Ministries—mostly those which have been newly created. I fully sympathise with them in the conditions of hardship which a temporary tenure imposes and the many disabilities under which they suffer. So to mitigate these and to bring their conditions of service on to a better standard I have reached certain conclusions which I have placed with the concurrence of the honourable the Finance Minister before the Cabinet. We hope shortly to finalise and announce those decisions and thereby hope to create a better feeling of contentment and stability among this important and useful class of Government servants.

The House will, I am sure, concede that there is no aspect of maintaining the efficiency and stability of the service structure that has escaped our attention and that we have taken many useful steps in building up the services of a free India. If the House will judge the task accomplished in the light of the difficulties and impediments in which it was done, it will be appreciated that a long stride has been taken to place the administrative machinery of the country on sure and steady foundations. I regard it as a privilege to have been associated with the modelling and planning of that structure and with devising its training on new democratic lines. I know the House is keen to see that the Services change their mentality and outlook. Already there are visible signs that the change is on. That change will come much quicker with sympathy and patience, with generosity and goodwill than with constant criticism and no praise or with lack of appreciation of the worth of their work. I plead for the indulgence and cooperation of honourable Members in quickening the pace of that change and in consolidating the gains we have undoubtedly registered in this sphere.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): They are not visible yet.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I shall now deal with the position relating to the maintenance of internal security and law and order. On this question, I have throughout been guided by two principles, namely, that the country must be rendered safe against any threats of internal peace from whatever quarter it may come and that it should be the exclusive responsibility of the police to deal with internal disorder leaving the Military free to deal with any threat of external aggression. I claim that in the implementation of these two principles we have had a very large measure of success and that except for the disorder that engulfed the East Punjab, Delhi and some other small areas immediately after independence, the country has steered clear through such threats of disorder as it was faced with. These threats have been both communal and communist. The communal threat has come principally from the R.S.S. and the Akali Dal. In regard to the R.S.S. our position has been made clear more than once. In so far as the R.S.S. might seek to bring about a regeneration of the Hindu community by peaceful and legitimate means, there can be—and need be—no quarrel with its activities. It is only when it seeks to achieve this object by spreading poison and hatred against other communities who are entitled under the law to equal protection from the Established Government and when it seeks to achieve its object by resort to unlawful or violent means then it pits itself against the forces of law and order. We cannot forget that it was partly if not largely the activities of this organisation that created psychological conditions which made possible the assassination of Gandhiji last year. If Government had not taken strong steps against this organisation when it threw a challenge against the established authority, it would have succeeded not only in spreading the communal virus, but in creating a situation in which it would have been impossible to maintain that balance between communities on which the existence of a secular State largely depends. None is more conscious than myself of the zeal and energy which lie contained in the youth of this organisation. I have made more than one appeal to the members of this organisation to give up their wrong methods and to follow constitutional means. The final reply to these appeals came in the form of the so-called Satyagraha movement of December last year. The House is fully aware of the subsequent history. I am glad that the Leader of the organisation accepted the suggestions made to him for the calling off of the movement. It now rests in his hand to retrace the steps which he has taken and to place the movement on cultural and lawful lines which would bring its activities within permissible limits. It is only then that we can satisfy ourselves that there has been that change and revolution in the mentality of the sponsors and followers of the R.S.S. movement which would make it no longer a threat to communal peace and security of the country. I should like also to acknowledge the assistance and co-operation which the general public have extended to us in dealing with this movement and to say that never did I expect our action to meet otherwise than with understanding and support from the general public.

So far as the Akali Dal is concerned, I have made my position quite clear in the speech which I delivered at Ambala and to which I would again invite the attention of the honourable Members. None can be more sympathetic to the claims of the Sikh community. None has done more to serve the cause of that community than myself. I have been their constant friend and I am glad to say that they have been very considerate to me. I still recall with pleasure and gratitude the response that they made to my appeal at Amritsar at a very crucial time in the evacuation of mass populations between East and West Punjab. I fully appreciate their apprehensions and the disquiet with which they have to approach their position which has been so badly dislocated by the partition and its aftermath. I have nothing but admiration for the manner in which they have accommodated themselves to the new facts of geography and political history and to have settled down in the various spheres of life seeking new openings everywhere. It was, therefore, most painful to me that a section of the community was misled into putting their faith in a futile and harmful extremist policy of which Master Tara Singh was the exponent. We dealt with him and that section of the community with patience and forbearance and it was only when they took to overt acts of defiance of the law and became a serious threat to peace and security of the capital city that we had to take action. None would be happier than myself to see Master Tara Singh released but as I said at Ambala, the key to that lies in the hands of his followers. If they will convince him by their action of the utter futility and wrongness of the methods they are pursuing, it will not take long for Master Tara Singh to be released.

Perhaps I may say a word about the Muslims of India. Except for sporadic activities of their old organisations, such as the Muslim League and the Muslim National Guards, which I think they would do well to forget and give up in the light of present conditions, they have on the whole kept the peace of the country and have settled down, somewhat disillusioned but more or less willingly to their new loyalties. I can assure them that, so long as they behave as loyal citizens of this country, they shall have every protection to their life, property and religion, which this Government can extend to them. No better proof of this could have been given than by the steps we took to guarantee their safety in the City of Delhi itself. We willingly agreed to keep their houses vacant against the return of those who had fled to Pakistan, although a large number of homeless refugees were at our hands. The work of restoration of mosques, which has been virtually completed and the one-way traffic of the return of refugees from Pakistan, are sufficient testimony to the peace and amicable relations which prevail in this country. High posts, both in the Army and Civil Service as well as in public life, continue to be shared by them. Thus, the cause for which Gandhiji fasted and for which he had to lay down his life, has been fulfilled. In return for all this, the State does not expect from the Muslims anything more than what it demands from other communities, namely, a complete and unquestioned loyalty to their State. I feel certain that the more the Muslim community settles down peacefully and loyally the greater would be the impression that they would create on the majority community and their position would be much more secure and safe and free from any apprehension.

As regards the Communists, the House has already heard the statement which the Prime Minister made on the floor of the House the other day. I should like to assure the House that we do not seek to exterminate the ideology underlying Communism. Our quarrel with them is in regard to the methods which they employ, those anti-social and anti-national activities which they pursue with such ruthlessness and remorselessness. Their philosophy is to exploit every situation to create chaos and anarchy, in the belief that, in such conditions, it would be possible for them to seize power. We have seen, alas, only too well how their methods have been put into force with such violence in the neighbouring countries in the Far East. I have no doubt that the House will not in any way tolerate those methods in this country. We are wedded to constitutional progress and peaceful means.

It is open to the Communists to use those means to change the social order, or to change the Government, but if they resort to other methods or means, violent, treacherous and mischievous, then Government must take up that challenge and suppress them with all the forces at their command. I am glad that the country has solidly stood behind Government in dealing with this threat. Their attempts to stage strikes have generally been unsuccessful. Where we have dealt with such threats with firmness and determination, we have generally succeeded in achieving our object with popular support. I have no doubt that, if we continue to follow the same, as I hope to, so long as I am here, we shall be able to deal with this threat to internal security successfully and efficiently.

I know that another question has been agitating the Members of this House, namely, the question of Civil Liberties. Faced with the threats to which I have referred and the aftermath of partition, both Central and Provincial Governments had no alternative but to resort to the extraordinary powers which they have taken under the various Public Safety Acts. These Acts are temporary in duration and come up for review before their respective Legislatures from time to time. Even so, they have been designed for an emergency and are being treated as such. They have been used very sparingly. The number of persons detained, considering the size of the country and the magnitude of dangers that it is passing through, must be considered extraordinarily small. On the 15th February, for which statistics are readily available, the total number of persons detained for communal activities such as the R.S.S.S. was 1,400, and for Communist activities 1,611. The latter figure may have gone up as a result of the preventive measures taken by Government to deal with the threat of Railway strike. But I am sure the House will agree that, considering the dangers with which we were faced, these are comparatively insignificant figures. We have advised Provincial Governments that they should set up administrative tribunals to ensure that the actions of the Executive authority are properly scrutinised and confirmed. If these actions are scrutinised by a tribunal appointed as suggested by us, the danger of Civil Liberties being jeopardized unreasonably will be minimized. In the Centrally Administered Areas also, we have recently taken that step, and I hope the House will be satisfied that, whatever action we have had to take was dictated by a painful necessity, and that the moment the threats become a thing of the past, these extraordinary powers would also disappear.

As early as May 1947 I impressed on Provincial Governments the necessity for so organising their Police force as to render it unnecessary for them to call in the Army in aid of the Civil power. I am glad to inform the House that the Provincial Governments have generally accepted this advice and that they have made substantial additions to their Police force at not inconsiderable cost to the Provincial revenues. The result has been that the occasions for calling in the Army have been very few, and generally the new forces combined with the old ones have succeeded in maintaining intact the peace of the country.

I should now like the House to compare the conditions which existed on the 15th August 1947 and those that exist today. But before doing that I should also like to draw the attention of the House to the fact that I have not touched on the question of the possibility of the large-scale disturbances anticipated when we were compelled to take police action in Hyderabad. All those forebodings of friends and foes had been set at nought and we are glad to say that there was no untoward incident throughout the country during that period.

I was asking the House to compare the conditions that existed on the 15th August 1947 and the conditions today. Immediately after independence, we were engulfed in a period of turmoil and uncertainty of which there was no parallel. We were wondering whether we would be able to weather the storm. We lived through those troublous times. Hardly had we turned the corner, when we were faced with the greatest tragedy which has ever engulfed this country, or for that matter, any other, namely the loss of the Father of the Nation. We kept our body and mind together and succeeded in meeting that crisis as well. Then came the challenge of the R.S.S.S. and the Communists, which is also under control. We have thus reached a degree of internal stability, which no one would have dared to predict on the 15th August 1947. There are immense tasks ahead, especially in the economic field, and if Government is to succeed in improving the economic conditions in the country, it is essential that there must be complete peace and order. It is my desire, and it is my ambition, to produce those conditions, so that this country of ours can settle down to the tasks of peace with as much enthusiasm, single-mindedness of purpose and devotion to duty as the conditions demand. It would be idle to pretend that every thing is well with the country but I can make bold to say that so far as internal peace and tranquillity are concerned the country is not faced with any serious threat now. We can take the measure of our enemy and deal with him from whichever quarter he may come but I can assure the House that we shall not relax either our vigilance or our preparedness.

I have now given the House an account of the manner in which we have been able to maintain intact the administrative machinery and the peace and security of the country. I shall not be able within the short time at our disposal to deal with many other problems of a comparatively minor character in which the House may be interested. I can assure the House that it is our earnest desire to improve upon our performance and not in any way relax our efforts to place the country on a solid and sound foundation, so that it can by its own exertions carve out for itself a future of peace, prosperity and contentment. In achieving this goal the country will no doubt be faced with difficult and sometimes almost impossible tasks. But as long as we maintain our solidarity, sense of public service and self-sacrifice I have no doubt that we shall continue to march on the road to progress. The country needs today sustained efforts to exploit successfully the peaceful situation in which it finds itself. If we fail to avail ourselves of this opportunity we shall have none to sympathise with us and no one else to blame but ourselves.

I would now commend the grants for the Home Ministry for the vote of the House.

Mr. Speaker: In view of the shortness of the time at our disposal, I propose to place a time limit of ten minutes for speeches.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): Sir, may I request you to give at least 15 minutes so far as the Centrally administered areas are concerned.

Mr. Speaker: As I have very often said, I would prefer a smaller number but longer speeches but the desire of the House seems to be to have a larger number of speakers to express their views. In the circumstances, I have no alternative but to curtail the time limit of the speeches and I would therefore request honourable Members to restrict their remarks strictly to the time limit. I shall not be able to extend the time limit particularly today as the debate on this Ministry is to end at 3-30 P.M. and the honourable Minister would require 30 minutes for his reply.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, as the honourable Member comes from a place which is directly administered by the Home Ministry he may be given a concession in time.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U.P.: General): Sir, I have given notice of certain cut motions. Are the cut motions to be taken up first or is this discussion of the cut motions to be followed by a general discussion?

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is at perfect liberty to move his cut motions. As I have already called upon Deshbandhu Gupta to address the House I will allow the honourable Member next to move his cut motion.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: I do not care when I am asked to speak but I should like to know as a matter of procedure whether specific items should be considered first and the general discussion should follow or is this order to be reversed?

Mr. Speaker: Unfortunately the honourable Member did not happen to catch my eye in the beginning, otherwise I would have permitted a discussion on the cuts in the beginning. But after Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta has spoken I will take his cut motion and then the discussion will go on.

بہت معافی چاہتے ہوئے جناب ہوم منسٹر صاحب کی سیوا میں عرض کرونگا کہ میرا تورو دو سال کا ایڈوائزری کونسل کا اتنا تلخ تجربہ ہے کہ اسکی بناء پر یہ کہنے پر مجبور ہوں کہ یہ ایک مذاق (farce) ہے۔

اب دو سال کے قریب ایڈوائزری کونسل کو بنے ہوئے ہو گئے ہیں لیکن اس کی حمایت یہ ہے کہ اسکے سامنے وقت پر بجٹ بھی نہیں آتا گورنمنٹ جو اہم فیصلہ کرتی ہے وہ ایڈوائزری کونسل کے سامنے نہیں لائے جاتے اور نہ اُنکے بارے میں ایڈوائزری کونسل سے صلاح لی جاتی ہے، نیز ایڈوائزری کونسل نے اب تک جتنے پرستاؤ پیش کئے ہیں میرے پاس اُنکی لسٹ ہے جناب صدر! چہ چہ آٹھ آٹھ مہینے تک ان پرستاؤں پر عمل درآمد نہیں ہوتا۔ ایک نہیں جناب صدر! اس پروگرام کی اب تک مثالیں دیجاسکتی ہیں کہ جن سے یہ ثابت ہوتا ہے کہ ایڈوائزری کونسلیں متکس تھونگ ہیں۔ یہی وجہ ہے کہ ہم لوگ پہلے دن سے یہ مطالبہ کر رہے ہیں کہ سنٹرل ایڈمنسٹریٹو ایریاز کی حالت کو بھی درست کیا جائے اور نئے دھماں کا انتظار نہ کرتے ہوئے جس کے بلنے میں دو سال یا تیرہ سال کا وقت صرف ہوگا موجودہ ایڈمنسٹریشن میں ہی ایسی تبدیلی کی جائے کہ دھالی اور اجیر میرواز کے لوگوں کو بھی یہ محسوس کرنیکا موقع ملے کہ ایڈمنسٹریشن میں اُنکی بھی آواز ہے۔

میں مودبانہ عرض کرونگا کہ مجھے راجدھانی کی مشکلات کا بخوبی اندازہ ہے۔ میں ایک منٹ کے لئے بھی یہ نہیں چاہتا کہ دھالی کے ایڈمنسٹریشن میں کوئی ایسی کمزوری آئے جس سے کہ مرکز کو مشکلات کا سامنا کرنا پڑے۔ میں یہ بھی نہیں چاہتا کہ آئیندہ جو کانستٹی ٹیوشن (Constitution) بلے اسمیں بھی کوئی ایسی باتیں رکھی جائیں کہ جن سے ہمارے سارے دیس کے ہتوں پر کوئی اُلٹا اثر پڑے۔ لیکن میں عرض کرونگا کہ ایسا کوئی راستہ نکالنا ہمارا فرض ہے جس سے دھالی والوں کی شکایت دور ہو آخر دھالی والوں نے بھی شروع سے ہر ایک مومو میٹ (movement) میں حصہ لیا ہے۔ وہ بھی اس ملک کے باشندے ہیں۔ دوسرے صوبوں کے لوگوں کی طرح وہ بھی یہ حق رکھتے ہیں کہ اُنکے ایڈمنسٹریشن میں ان کی آواز ہو۔ آج حالت یہ ہے کہ دھالی والے ہر لحاظ سے گھاتے میں ہیں مثال کے طور پر پنجاب کی جانب سے پابندی لگانیکا یہ تمغہ ہے کہ دھالی سے آٹھ دس میل کے فاصلے پر جو چٹا آٹھ روپیہ من بک رہا ہے۔ وہی دھالی میں تیرہ چودہ روپیہ من بک رہا ہے۔ روز گئی سو چپکڑے کھلے طور پر جاتے ہیں اور پنجاب سے چٹا چھپا کر smuggle کر کے لاتے ہیں۔ ہم نے کئی بار درخواست کی کہ راشننگ کی اغراض کے لئے دھالی کو پنجاب میں شامل کر لیا جائے۔ لیکن اس پر کوئی غور نہیں کیا گیا۔ جتنی گھاتے کی باتیں ہیں (disadvantages) ہیں وہ سب دھالی کے لئے ہیں۔ دھالی کے لوگوں کے لئے سروسز میں جگہ نہیں ہے۔ یہاں تمام افسران یو۔ پی اور پنجاب سے لائے جاتے ہیں۔ یہاں کے اسٹوڈینٹس (students) کے لئے سروسز میں کوئی گنجائش نہیں۔ یونیورسٹی کی جو حالت ہے وہ کسی سے چھپی نہیں ہے۔ امپروومنٹ ٹرسٹ (Improvement trust) نے دس دس سال سے دھالی والوں کی زمیٹوں کو نوٹی فائی (notify) کر کے چھوڑا ہوا ہے۔ نہ وہاں انہیں لیتے ہیں نہ چھوڑتے ہیں بلکہ حالت یہ ہے کہ وہاں صفائی تک نہیں ہوتی اور نہ دھالی والوں کے لئے وہاں مکان بنانے کی سہولیت ہے۔ کہا جاتا ہے یہ سب کچھ لارجر انٹریسٹ (larger interest) میں ہو رہا ہے بجارے دھالی والوں کی کوئی آواز نہیں سنی جاتی۔ بجٹ (budget) میں جو پروویژن (provision) پوسٹ وار (postwar) ڈیولپ میٹ (development) کے لئے کیا گیا تھا وہ بھی کولڈ اسٹوریج (Cold storage) میں قال دیا گیا ہے۔ لہذا میں پھر درخواست کرتا ہوں کہ اب کوئی ایسا طریقہ نکالنا چاہیئے جس سے دھالی والوں کی آواز ایڈمنسٹریشن میں ہو۔ ہماری یہ مانگ ایک واجب (legitimate) مانگ ہے۔ اور اسکا انحصار جناب منسٹر صاحب پر ہے کہ وہ اسے کس حد تک منظور کرتے ہیں میں جانتا ہوں کہ ان کے دل میں بھی دھالی والوں کے لئے درد ہے۔ وہ دھالی والوں کے مخالف نہیں ہیں۔ ہمیشہ دھالی والے انہیں شردھا (श्रद्धा) کی نظر سے دیکھتے آئے ہیں۔ اب جب کہ دھالی والوں کو یہ محسوس رہا ہے کہ راج (स्वराज्य) کو آج دو سال ہو جانے کے بعد بھی دھالی کے ایڈمنسٹریشن

میں دہلی والوں کی کوئی آواز نہیں ہے۔ تو وہ اس پر ہمدردانہ غور کرینگے اور اس کو اس وقت تک کے لئے ملتوی نہیں کر دینگے جب تک کہ نیا کانسٹیٹیویشن نہیں بن جاتا۔

ہوم منسٹر صاحب کی خدمت میں میں ایک تجویز (suggestion) کر کے بیٹھ جاؤں گا۔ اور وہ یہ ہے کہ اگر آپ ایڈوائزری کونسل (Advisory council) کی جگہ اور کوئی بہتر سسٹم (system) جاری نہیں کر سکتے تو اس کے اختیارات کو تو آپ بڑھا سکتے ہیں۔ اور کم سے کم ایک بات تو کی جاسکتی ہے کہ ایڈوائزری کونسل کے ایک یا دو نمائندوں (Representatives) کو بھی ان مشوروں میں شریک کر لیا جائے۔ جب کہ دہلی کے ایڈمنسٹریشن کے متعلق فیصلے کئے جاتے ہیں۔ پچھلے دور میں جبکہ کئی صوبوں پر سیکشن 93 (Section 93) کا اطلاق کیا گیا تھا تو بھی ایڈوائزرز (advisers) مقرر ہوئے تھے۔ ان کے اختیارات دہلی کی ایڈوائزری کونسل کے ممبروں کی نسبت بہت زیادہ تھے۔ کیا وہ اختیارات بھی انہیں نہیں دئے جاسکتے؟ دہلی کی ایڈوائزری کونسل کی حالت تو یہ ہے کہ دو سال ہو چکے ہیں۔ لیکن حکومت ابھی تک یہ فیصلہ بھی نہیں کر پائی کہ اس کے ممبروں کو کیا الاؤنس (allowance) دیا جائے کرے۔ حالانکہ ایڈوائزری کونسل کی دو تین مہینہ میں ایک دن کے لئے ایک بار میٹنگ (meeting) ہوتی ہے۔ اور ممبروں کے لئے الاؤنس کوئی اہمیت نہیں رکھتا لیکن حکومت کی سردمہری اس بات سے ظاہر ہے۔

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: I heartily congratulate the honourable Home Minister on his fascinating speech and the statement that has been circulated to Members. The truth is that so far as the Home Minister is concerned he is not only the Home Minister but also the accredited leader of the whole country and there is not the slightest doubt that if our country is today enjoying the blessings of peace and happiness, if today, in spite of the fact that the other neighbouring countries such as Burma and China, are in flames and disorder reigns supreme there. Our country is free from such turmoil and peace prevails here, and the greatest credit for it goes to our honourable Home Minister.

In view of the things he has said and the efforts he has made to solve the most difficult problems of the country during the period of the last one year I feel that this redounds exclusively to his credit. And, this is the reason that without the least doubt or question he has today the backing not only of this House but of the entire country. The steps he has taken for the maintenance of law and order in the country have the sanction behind them of the 35 crore people of the country. Hence, I offer him my hearty congratulations.

As regards the things he has stated about the services, there is no doubt that efforts have been made to bring about a change in the services as far as possible, and that, with the changed circumstances, they too have changed. I sincerely esteem such people. I know a good number of such officers who work day and night with the same spirit as that which actuates our honourable Home Minister. But it must be confessed that, in spite of all this, so far as the services are concerned, the change that has come about in them is not such as should have been expected, as has just been stated by my friend, Mr. Tyagi. It is known to me, and I think the honourable Home Minister himself knows it even better, the spirit of the services in the neighbouring Dominion is different from that of the services here. Those people from amongst us who went there have returned with the impression that the people in the services there are fired with the passion that they have to form a new dominion, that they have to make Pakistan strong and they work indefatigably to that end. But I regret to say that this is not the case with the services here. Their ways have not changed yet although a change is called for now in their case too. If you go to the Secretariat today you will find that there are a number of people who haven't got enough work. They keep sitting idle and it does not worry them that the burden of idle hours falls on the national exchequer.

Now I want to draw the attention of the honourable Minister to the conditions prevailing in the Centrally Administered Areas. In so far as the Centrally Administered Areas are concerned, last year too I related the grievances of Delhi and, along with Delhi, of Ajmer, Coorg and other areas. I regret to say that so far as these areas are concerned, although not only is the honourable Home Minister directly responsible for them but the other Ministers are also concerned, the people there have not yet been afforded an occasion to feel that they too have got the Swarajya.

Several political conferences have been held here during this period of about two years, wherein resolutions were passed demanding that these areas should also be granted the right of self-government. The Delhi Municipal Board, the Delhi Advisory Council, the Delhi Provincial Congress Committee and similarly the Ajmer Provincial Congress Committee have put forth that demand by means of resolutions. Sir, Delhi's population too has very much increased now. It is estimated to have gone up to 20 lakhs approximately. The Government should also consider this population factor and make a proper change in the administration of this area. There is no doubt that at this time there are several such officers in Delhi, particularly our Chief Commissioner, who work most diligently—I congratulate the honourable Home Minister on his selection of this officer—but the question is not what are the officers like but whether the people have any voice in the administration of Delhi or of Ajmer.

I have carefully read the pamphlet that has been circulated by the Home Ministry. It also mentions the work done by the Chief Commissioner's Advisory Council. Having noticed it I would very apologetically submit to the honourable the Home Minister that I have such a bitter experience of my two years' membership of the Advisory Council that I am constrained to say on the basis of that experience that it is a farce.

It is about two years now that the Advisory Council was formed but the position is such that even the budget does not come up before it in time. Whatever important decisions are made by the Government are not brought before the Advisory Council, nor is the Advisory Council consulted about them. Besides, I have a list of all such resolutions as have been brought forward by the

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE)

[Shri Deshbandhu Gupta]

Advisory Council. No action is taken on these resolutions for six or even eight months. Not one but innumerable instances of that kind could be cited which would prove that Advisory Councils are just a farce. This is the reason why we people are demanding from the very start that the condition of the Centrally Administered Areas should also be set right, and, without waiting for the new constitution, which would take two years or a year and a half to be ready, such modification be made in the existing administration that the people of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara may have the occasion to feel that they too have a voice in the administration.

Keeping in view the important steps taken by the Government in Delhi during the past two years I can say that during this period they were never brought before the Advisory Council, nor was any attention paid to its resolutions. For instance, the Advisory Council passed a resolution last year that a Circuit Court should be established in Delhi but this resolution has not been given a practical shape to this day. The pamphlet issued by the Home Ministry simply puts it off by saying that the Circuit Court could not be founded by reason of non-availability of a building. I would submit that it has not been considered what inconvenience has to be suffered by a considerable number of people belonging to Delhi in going to the Simla Hills every month to conduct their cases.

The position of Delhi is that it has been made an appendage of the Punjab. The personnel for Delhi services was previously requisitioned from the Punjab. Recently it has been decided that 50 per cent. of the personnel for these services would be requisitioned from the Punjab and 50 per cent from the U.P. The honourable Home Minister might know that even this decision was not taken in consultation with the Advisory Council. Today all the officers here belong to the Punjab and U.P. and the people of Delhi have no share in the services.

I would respectfully submit that I fully appreciate the difficulties of the capital. Not for a minute would I have it that some such weakness might creep into Delhi administration whereby the Centre might have to face difficulties. Nor would I desire that any such provisions be made in the new constitution as might have some adverse effect upon the interests of our country as a whole. But I would submit that it is our duty to devise some such method whereby the grievance of Delhi people might be redressed. After all Delhi people have also taken part in every movement from the very beginning. They too are inhabitants of this country. Like the people in other provinces they too are entitled to have a voice in their own administration. The position today is that the Delhi people are losers in every respect. For example, the result of restriction on import of food-grains from the Punjab is that the grain that is selling at eight rupees per maund at a distance of eight or ten miles from Delhi is selling in Delhi at thirteen to fourteen rupees per maund. Daily hundreds of carts openly go out and smuggle in grain from the Punjab. We have represented time and again that Delhi should be included in the Punjab for purposes of rationing but no heed has been paid to this request. People of Delhi are thus put to all sorts of disadvantages and there is no place in the services for the people of Delhi. All officers are imported from U.P. and the Punjab. There is no scope in the matter of services for students belonging to Delhi. The condition of the University is not hidden from anybody. The Improvement Trust notified lands belonging to the people of Delhi, in some cases as far back as ten years, but the matter stands there. They would neither acquire them nor release them. On the other hand the conditions are such that, not even sanitation is attended to nor are any facilities available for the people of Delhi to build houses. It is said all this is being done in the larger interests. No heed is paid to the cries of the poor people of Delhi.

The provision that was made in the Budget for post-war development has also been put in cold storage. Hence, I request again that some means should now be devised whereby the people of Delhi might have a voice in the administration. This demand of ours is a legitimate one and it is for the honourable Minister to see how far he can meet it. I know that he too has a soft corner in his heart for the people of Delhi. He is not hostile to them. The people of Delhi have always regarded him with reverence. Now that the people of Delhi are feeling that even after the lapse of two years since the advent of Swarajya they have no voice in the administration of Delhi it is hoped he would consider the matter sympathetically and not postpone it until after the framing of the new constitution.

I shall resume my seat after offering one suggestion to the honourable the Home Minister. It is this that if he cannot devise some better system in place of the Advisory Council he could at least enlarge its powers. At least one suggestion could be adopted, viz., that one or two representatives of the Advisory Council are consulted when decisions affecting the Delhi administration are taken. During the previous regime too, when section 93 was enforced, Advisers were appointed. They enjoyed much larger powers than the members of Delhi Advisory Council. Could they not even be vested with those powers? The position of the Delhi Advisory Council is such that although two years have elapsed the Government have not yet been able to decide what allowance should be paid to its members. Although the Advisory Council meets only once in two or three months, and that too just for a day, and the allowance has no value in the eyes of the members, yet this should afford an indication of the indifference shown on the part of the Government.

In the end, I hope that the honourable Minister would give consideration to the case of Delhi and other Centrally Administered Areas and soon devise some means to redress their genuine grievances.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: Sir, may I move both my motions together?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Policy re Subversive Organisations

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: Sir, I move:

"That the demand under the head 'Cabinet' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Policy re Military or Semi-Military Organisations established by Provincial Governments.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: I further move:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Home Affairs' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Sir, in February 1948 Government took action against certain organisations of a communal character and their policy generally speaking had the support of the country and of this House. The Deputy Prime Minister has told us that action was taken against them because of their subversive activities. The review of the work of the Ministry of Home Affairs that has been circulated to honourable Members says that the communal organisations to which I have referred, namely the R.S.S.S., the Muslim League National Guards and the Khaksars, were becoming a menace to the public peace and tranquility and that therefore Provincial Governments were advised in February 1948 to declare these organisations unlawful under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908.

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru]

That policy, as the Deputy Prime Minister has told us, is still the policy of the Government of India. The other day, however, when my honourable friend Lala Deshbandhu Gupta put a Question about the arrest of the Communists, the Prime Minister who made a long reply said:

"Government have refrained from taking any action against the Communist Party of India as such in spite of a virulent propaganda and incitement to violence which the Communist Party members have indulged in. Where violence has been actually attempted or encouraged Government have taken action; such action has been limited to individuals who are connected with this violence or encouragement of violence."

He then went on to say,—I am quoting from his reply:

"The Communist Party of India has during the past year adopted an attitude not only of open hostility to Government but one which can be described as bordering on open revolt. The policy has been given effect to intensively in certain limited areas of India and has resulted in violence including murders, arson and looting as well as acts of sabotage. The House is well aware of the Communist revolts that have taken place in countries bordering on India. It was presumably in furtherance of the same policy that attempts were made in India to incite people to active revolt."

He added later on that:

"Government had a mass of evidence in their possession to indicate that organised attempts were being made to conduct campaigns of sabotage more especially on the railway system, and that the Communist Party had pursued a technique of terrorising those who did not agree with its policy."

Referring to the Dum Dum raids, he said that:

"After the Dum Dum raids, a meeting was held in the Calcutta maidan when under the auspices of the Bengal Provincial Trade Union Congress which is a body dominated by the Communist Party, speakers urged the seizure of power by violent means. A student of the Bengal Provincial Students Federation which is also dominated by the Communist Party of India stated that a saboteur gang of students was ready for action."

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao (one of the Panel of Chairmen).]

Now, Sir, this reply shows that the action taken by the Communists was in pursuance of the policy of the Communist Party. It was not action taken by certain misguided individuals who called themselves communists or who belonged actually to the Communist Party, but action taken in furtherance of the policy of the Communist Party of India. Speaking at Puri on the 12th March, the Prime Minister said:

"The Communist objective was not inspired by a national standpoint but was at the behest of the interest outside India".

He said as politely as he could that the Communists were not interested in the welfare of the masses but were fifth-columnists acting contrary to the interests of their country. Yet, he told us that the policy of the Government was to take action only against individual Communists who were guilty of violence or incitement to violence.

I should like to understand the policy of the Government in this matter. Their policy should be consistent. I am sure that they cannot say that one policy is necessary in the interests of the country in the case of communal organisations and another policy is called for in the case of the Communist organisations. If the activities of both kinds of organisations are a menace to law and order, if they are detrimental to the vital interests of the country, is there any reason for dealing with them differently? I should like the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister to enlighten us on the policy of the Government in regard to this matter and to show how the policies followed by them in regard to the two sets of organisations are consistent.

Sir, in this connection I should like to make a suggestion before I proceed to the discussion of the question raised by my second motion. Government, I have no doubt, will be faced with increasing difficulties at least for some time to come. It is necessary therefore that the Central Intelligence Bureau should be in a position to collect information promptly about the activities of subversive organisations and forewarn Government. The powers of the Bureau, however, are limited. I suggest that this Bureau should be given the powers of investigation that the Federal Bureau of Investigation possesses in the United States of America. If in America the existence of autonomous States has not militated against the existence of a Federal organisation with much greater powers than in India, I see no reason why Provincial autonomy should militate against the establishment of a similar organisation in this country. Again, as the staff of the Bureau has been considerably depleted, I suggest that some of the members who are on deputation in the Bureau and some other members should be sent to other countries like Britain and the U.S.A. to study modern methods of investigation. I hope, Sir, that this suggestion will receive the serious attention of the Government.

And now, Sir, I shall briefly discuss the question raised by me in my second motion which relates to the policy of Government in respect of military or semi-military organisations established by the Provincial Governments. We have read from time to time in the newspapers of various kinds of organisations started by the Provincial Governments. Their names may be different, but their purpose is the same, and that is to help in the maintenance of law and order, and to deal with emergencies as they may arise. The Deputy Prime Minister has told us in the course of his speech that in view of the special circumstances existing in the country, and the fundamental importance of maintaining peace in the country, he advised the provincial Governments to strengthen their police forces. It is a matter of pleasure to us to know that the Provincial Governments have followed the advice of my honourable friend in this connection, and we have no doubt that so long as he is in charge of the Home Ministry, adequate steps will be taken both by the Centre and by the Provincial Governments to see that peace and order in this land are not threatened by evil-doers of any kind. But it is rather surprising, Sir, that when the police forces, including the armed police force have been strengthened, the Provincial Governments which have not got an abundance of money should be spending large sums on establishing, organizing and training military or semi-military organisations. I do not possess, Sir, accurate information in regard to any province except my own—the United Provinces. The budget of the United Provinces Government tells us that it proposes to spend a sum of about Rs. 40 lakhs next year on an organisation called the prantiya Raksha Dal. Now, taxes upon taxes are being levied there. I should like to know why, at a time like this, the Provincial Government is spending so large a sum of money on the establishing and training of this organisation. I should also like to know whether this organisation was established with the knowledge and approval of the Government of India, or whether the U.P. Government and the other Provincial Governments have taken the bit between their teeth and acted as they pleased. Sir, this Prantiya Raksha Dal is being trained on military lines. Officers who formerly belonged to the I.N.A. are training the members of this organisation. If it is necessary for the security of this country to have organisations trained on military lines, I suggest that the strength of the army should not be unduly reduced. It seems to me to be a danger, Sir, that the Provincial Governments should be allowed to maintain organisations of this kind. Two or three years ago it would have seemed impossible that any Provincial Government should dream of having such an organisation. But now, when conditions are normal—the firm action taken by the Deputy Prime Minister having placed law and order in the country on a firm footing—there is no reason why provincial governments should be permitted to start such organisations. I would add, Sir, before sitting down, that several Ministers of the U.P. Government have stated in the past that the Prantiya Raksha Dal is to consist of about twelve lakhs of volunteers. I understand that at present about 26,000 are under training, though I do not claim my information on this point to be quite accurate. Even granting that some force other than the army is needed, or rather other than the army and the police forces is needed, to maintain the security of the country, do we really need a force which is to consist of 12 lakhs of people in the U.P.? Again, I would like to know whether this target figure of 12 lakhs has been fixed with the knowledge and approval of the Government of India. If the answer to this question is in the negative.....

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): It is a kind of national militia.

Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru: It is not the business of the Provincial Government to have a national militia. It is the Central Government that must maintain a national militia. And in any case, if the Provincial Governments are to be given any administrative or other authority, they can have it only with the approval of the Government of India.

Sir, I have done; and I hope that the Deputy Prime Minister will be able to tell us what action he proposes to take in this respect. He knows as well as any of us, the uneasiness that exists both in the country and in this House on this score, and I trust, therefore, that he will take action to bring all organisations of this character, if it is necessary to maintain them, under the control of the Central Government, and not allow any other authority to maintain any force of this kind.

Mr. Chairman: Cut motions moved:

- (i) "That the demand under the head 'Cabinet' be reduced by Rs. 100."
- (ii) "That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Home Affairs' be reduced by Rs. 100."

The discussion on these will continue after 2-30 P.M.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Dr. P. K. Sen (Bihar: General): Sir, the subject on which I expected to raise a discussion is the out-of-the way subject of Prison reform. It is generally considered a very unimportant subject. We have attained independence, but people who have lost their independence by some anti-social act and have been confined in a prison appear to have lost all rights to consideration. There was in the olden days a great deal of indifference and apathy, but I feel that before a House like this one pleading for prison reform will have the utmost possible sympathy, because most of the members are quite aware of all the trials and tribulations which the prisoners have got to pass through. Therefore, I do expect that a sympathetic consideration will be extended to this subject. The very first question that may arise is: Why should this subject be raised here, because at the Centre there is nothing to be done. It is a Provincial subject and, therefore, it rests with the Provinces themselves to make proper arrangements with regard to prison reform. I am quite conscious of that, but the proposal that I wish to make here is really something that will convince the members, I dare say, that this reform can only come from the Centre. There is absolutely no trained jailor, warder, wardress, probation officer or parole officer at the present moment. If there is to be any prison reform at all, that prison reform must be on lines of individual treatment of prisoners; and that individual treatment must be a psychological treatment, not from the old antiquated point of view, that if a man has committed an offence, an anti-social act, the only way to deal with him is to put him within the walls of the prison and thus practically segregate him and save society from his depredations. This confusion of the mind can easily be dispelled. Thousands and thousands of prisoners are coming out every day from the prison and other thousands are taking their places by reason of their having been convicted for crime. Therefore, there is a constant commerce going on between those who are in prison and those who are out of prison. We have not successfully segregated them at all. They are still members of our society and directly their terms of imprisonment have been worked out, they will come out and they will have all the privileges of free citizens. They will mix with others and contaminate society. Therefore, the apparent segregation is of no efficacy. Imprisonment is really no preventive at all to contamination of society. If we really want, therefore, that these people should come and become an acquisition to society, when they are released from prison, then they must be individually treated there. The point of view of the officers in charge should be not vengeance or punishment or expiation of their offence, but really correction and rehabilitation. It is the uplifted rod in which the prison staff believes. From the jailor downwards to the humblest man who is on the staff of the jail, they all believe only in the uplifted rod. They know that if they can come down on these prisoners and keep them in their proper places and get the quantity of work allotted to them, by extraction, as it were, by those means, then alone their duty will have been done. I say this with a full sense of responsibility, because I have visited prisons all over India, and I have visited prisons in foreign countries also. It has been the subject of my study for years—and I say this with confidence that in India at the present day, the amount of indifference that is shown towards prison reform is something astounding. Nowhere in any part of India, is the up-to-date method followed or prescribed. I do not mean by 'up-to-date method' that you must necessarily imitate everything from the West. But by adaptation and by acceptance of the principles which have been laid down in the old Hindu Penology, which really rose to a very high level, by acceptance of those principles and also by acceptance of the principles which obtain today in the Western world, we can make prisons a different place altogether from what they are at the present day. Now, in order to do this, I submit that the one thing needful is to have an Institute for the proper training of jailers, warders, wardresses, probation officers, parole officers and the like. In order to have that, I submit that the only place from which reform can start is the Centre. Each province cannot afford to have a Training Institute of that kind. It will be terribly expensive and, therefore, I submit that this function belongs to the Centre and to the Centre alone. If there is a Central Institute of training, then we can have all the officers necessary for the different provinces recruited from this institute. (Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: 'Even for warders? A central Institute for warders?') Yes, Warders are most important—A central institute for the training of jailors, warders, wardresses and every one that is responsible for the individual treatment of a prisoner, because the treatment will now have to be, not by inflicting fear, not by inspiring terror into the hearts of the prisoners, but by inspiring confidence, power of initiative, self-reliance and also an ambition to deserve well of the society against which he has committed the anti-social act. I will not take more time. I have briefly placed my proposition before the House and I do hope that the Government at the Centre will take some notice of this great demand from every part of India.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Mr. Speaker, I had no intention of taking part in the debate, but I was stunned to hear the speech of my honourable friend Pandit Kunzru on the cut motion which he has moved. I think those who heard him speak must have felt that the Premier of my province, the Honourable Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant was raising an army of 12 lakhs of persons to march on Delhi and capture the capital for himself. But I would invite the attention of Pandit Kunzru to page 35 of the Review of Home Affairs of the Government of India. He will find there the information which he tried to give the Minister for Home Affairs already printed. The Review says:

"At the instance of the Government of India, the Provincial Governments undertook the task of modernising the arms and equipment of their Police Forces and Home Guards, etc. This Ministry have assisted them in the procurement of arms and ammunition and wireless equipment."

Then in paragraph 8, the Review states:

"In response to a widespread demand from the public for auxiliary police, in which they could serve and be of help to the Government in times of emergency for the maintenance of law and order, schemes for Home Guards were drawn up both for Delhi and Ajmer Merwara and a beginning was also made in the recruitment of Home Guards. It was, however, found that in order to be effective, the Home Guards had to be trained and equipped for full-time duties. This made the cost of the Home Guards as much as that of similar units of armed police and moreover, suitable volunteers were not forthcoming in adequate numbers. The Home Guards organisations in the two provinces have therefore been wound up and it has been decided to replace them by Prantiya Raksha Dal, which would be less costly and at the same time of a larger size. The scheme for a Prantiya Raksha Dal for Ajmer has already been drawn up by the Chief Commissioner in consultation with his Advisory Council and has been approved by the Standing Advisory Committee attached to this Ministry. Further steps to implement the scheme are being taken. The Delhi Administration has been asked to frame a similar scheme."

From this it is obvious that what the United Provinces has done is not only known to the Home Minister but that he has appreciated it and has asked the Centre to introduce it in Ajmer and Delhi. So the information which he brought to the notice of the Home Minister is stale. I would ask him to acquaint himself with this scheme which I consider to be the most important of the schemes evolved during the last 18 months by the Congress Government in my province. Its purpose is to train 12 lakhs of volunteers in the one lakh of villages of my province in the use of modern arms. Each village will have a unit of 12 volunteers under a captain or naik. In this way there will be 12 lakhs of people trained in the use of arms. The U. P. Government provided 55 lakhs of rupees in the last year's Budget and in this year's Budget there is provision for Rs. 44 lakhs. With this sum of rupees 99 lakhs spread over two years they have been able to create a force of 12 lakhs of people trained in the use of fire-arms and spread over in one lakh villages. These people have been also given training in physical drill which helps them to serve the villagers with greater efficiency and in a disciplined manner.

Sir, my Premier, Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant has got many great schemes to his credit. One of these is the holding of elections to the Village Panchayats. About 3 crores of voters elected about 35 lakhs of representatives for the panchayats in almost all the one lakh villages of my province. Every village will now have self-rule and it is obvious that these panchayats should have some volunteers at their service. The P. R. D. Volunteers will fulfil this need. I think that this system is the most economical too. In fact I remember last year Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya, our Congress President, brought before this House a resolution for raising a National Militia and the House appreciated it and wanted the Government to take steps to put that scheme into operation. But imagine the cost of a National Militia on full military scale. Probably it will cost crores of rupees. In Russia where there is a huge army and compulsory military training, they will spend Rs. 4,500 crores on the military budget this year which is 30 times our military budget. And our Central Government has not been able to do much so far in the direction of raising this National Militia. But my province has demonstrated how a National Militia can be raised with the utmost quickness and with very little cost. The Premier of my province, the Honourable Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant has been able to train 12 lakhs of people in one lakh of villages at a cost of only 99 lakhs during a period of 18 months. And yet he is criticised here where he is not present to reply and we are told that he is having this army which is objectionable. I see that the honourable the Home Minister has already copied this scheme of Pandit Pant in Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara. I hope he would recommend it to all Provinces. Pandit Kunzru is alarmed at the figure of 12 lacs. But the Premier of my Province aims at providing such voluntary military and civil training to every adult in my province and I long for the day when that dream of his is realised, and we have not only 12 lacs but nearly four crore adults in my province trained in civic duties and self defence with the use of modern arms. The enthusiasm for the P.R.D. Movement is so great that the volunteers pay half the cost of their uniform and part of their training expenses are realised from public subscriptions. Of course I would agree with Pandit Kunzru if he wants that the schemes of this nature in all the provinces should be co-ordinated and should be brought under the control and guidance of the Military Department of the Centre. Military officers should be lent to the provinces for the purpose of training and there should be liaison officers also. The Centre should also give financial help and should provide sufficient arms. Such a force will be very useful in times of emergency. In these circumstances, to say that the force is intended to march on Delhi or to be a rival to the military forces of the Central Government is not correct. It would be a valuable auxiliary to the military forces as millions of British Home Guards were in Britain during the War. I have been personally connected with this movement in my own district of Gorakhpore with 20 lac population. We have 50,000 P. R. D. volunteers. Only three days back on the 14th of this month I visited a camp where 600 men of my district were being trained. These were the group leaders each of whom has been entrusted with training 50 volunteers in four villages. I was surprised to see the change brought about by the P. R. D. force in Gorakhpore where the people were usually afraid of Police and the zamindars. Now the position has completely changed. They are now able to stand erect in the face of goondas of the villages. Grazing offences and the like have very much diminished in number. They are also able to assist the Police in many places. I therefore think that this scheme is a very useful one and fit to be copied by all provinces. In any case this should not be criticised. I request Pandit Kunzru to withdraw his motion, because he has been misinformed about this scheme. Pandit Kunzru knows that I am not a blind supporter of my Government, but where praise is due, it must be given.

Regarding the rest of the Demands I think our Home Minister has given a very able speech. I do not think I need say anything about it. I welcome the promise he has made of extending the civil liberties. We should see to it that nobody is kept in prison without adequate cause, and without trial.

I support the Demand.

Sardar Hukam Singh (East Punjab: Sikh): Sir, I have listened with rapt attention to the references made by the honourable Minister for Home Affairs to the Sikh community. I am glad to find that he recollects all right the response given by the Sikhs at a very critical time. It is also gratifying to note that the honourable Minister was pained to order the arrest of Master Tara Singh. No body denies that he had a soft corner for the Sikh community. This is not alleged by anybody that he has changed. If that be so then I can assure him that the Sikhs have also not changed including Master Tara Singh. They are true to the Government and the country and faithful to him as they were in 1947. The Sikh community has the same regard and respect for him as it had before. I hope he would concede this much as well that the Sikhs have not lagged behind in any fight for freedom that the country has launched; rather they can be proud that their contribution towards the winning of freedom was greater, considering their numbers, than that of any other community.

The complaint is that, as some Press journals put it, after the partition of the country the Sikhs were only an over-blamed people, but now they are over-misrepresented and over-misunderstood. That is my submission, I might make it clear from the very start that they have no suppressive inclinations. They do not ask for a separate State. They are not disruptionist. This may be understood very clearly. Violence is far from their ideas. Their only fault is that they are straightforward, they are frank to the core, and therefore they have been misunderstood in certain quarters.

What has brought about this misunderstanding? I will come to the reasons that I think have contributed to this undesirable result. One reason can be found at page 31 of this Review. It says that on the 3rd April the Constituent Assembly of India (Legislative) passed a Resolution to regulate communal organisations. Action according to that Resolution was deferred till the Constitution was passed, but certain orders were issued and they are:

"(a) No notice should be taken by Government and its officers, local bodies, State-aided institutions etc. of petitions or representations from communal organisations on political matters.

(b) Interviews should be denied to leaders of communal organisations who wish to make representations on political matters. Deputations of such communal organisations should not be received by any Minister or officers of Govt."

In my estimation that is one of the causes that has led to his misunderstanding. If as they say expression of one's mind is a safety valve for any resentment or anger, if open discussion had been allowed, if Master Tara Singh had been allowed to interview the Ministers and particularly the honourable Minister for Home Affairs who, even Master Tara Singh believes, has got a soft corner for the Sikh community, certainly he would have placed all that he desires and after discussion of those matters, something useful must have come out. Either he might have given up his stand, or perhaps if his position was considered reasonable, that might have been considered by the honourable Minister. I may say at this moment that I can claim that the Sikhs are not communal. If the honourable Minister were to give me time, I am prepared to explain it to him, or if he does not get time himself, if he were to ask me to interview some other honourable Member of this House, I am prepared to place all the demands that the Sikhs desire, and I am sure that nobody would say that any of those demands are communal. I am certain their demands are just to be adjusted in the framework of the Constitution,—the principles that you have already conceded—and I am sure if any impartial gentleman were to hear them he would not say that these are things that ought to be decried. There is no time, so I will not go into those demands at present, but I do desire and request that these things should be carefully gone into and proper appreciation should be made of the facts that really exist, and the desires and anxieties that are present in the minds of the Sikhs. Simply by telling them that you should not feel any anxieties and you should do this or simply by slogans that there are no minorities, this thing cannot go. So my humble submission is that these things can be very easily understood and for once they are understood I am sure most of the trouble would go.

Then, what is the second thing that has brought about this misunderstanding? The Sikhs are a poor community.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): What are the demands, Sir?

Sardar Hukam Singh: If I am permitted I will go into them, but it cannot be done within the time at my disposal.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member has only four minutes left.

Sardar Hukam Singh: The second thing that has brought about this misunderstanding is that the majority community in the Punjab do not allow the real facts to come out in the Press but they are misrepresented and therefore that has the effect on all other Indians here. I can assure the House that I have had an opportunity of talking to certain honourable Members of this House and to as many as I have spoken to, they have agreed without any exceptions that these demands are reasonable and should be considered.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I want to know those demands.

Sardar Hukam Singh: Yes, Sir. I can tell you.

Mr. Speaker: He may know those demands from him later on.

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Madhya Bharat): It is not high time that these minority questions should be given up?

Mr. Speaker: Let him proceed.

Sardar Hukam Singh: Thirdly, Sir, the reason that brought about this untoward arrest of Master Tara Singh is, I believe, the undecisive and wavering attitude of the District Magistrate during those fifteen days when he was corresponding or negotiating with the organisers of this Conference. I can tell you, Sir, that the letter that he wrote on 17th of January and 9th of February stated therein clearly that there would be no objection to a meeting of their committee if it was held in Delhi. Later on it was demanded on the 19th in a letter written on 18th February but delivered on the 19th at 6 A.M. that permission would be necessary to hold a meeting and for granting permission time, date and place would be required. Before the letter asking for this information was received, a complaint had already appeared in the Hindustan Times of that day that the organisers had not intimated, that they had not replied to that letter. The letter asking for information was delivered later but the complaint was published earlier. Then even, for that committee meeting permission was applied for and then it was another letter came saying that permission for Gurdwara Rikabganj could not be given but if another venue was chosen, permission would be given. The Sikhs were prepared to go to that extent as well and they decided to hold it in another place. They were running after the Deputy Commissioner, but before that, he had precipitated matters by the arrest of Master Tara Singh. My submission is that if in the very beginning it had been made clear that permission could not be granted in Delhi even for the holding of this meeting, then certainly matters would not have come to this pass, as they have done.

Then again, my second point is that the letter of the Deputy Commissioner dated 9th February raised certain apprehensions (and there is still even) in the minds of the Sikhs, as to their rights to hold meetings in a Gurdwara, because the letter said:

"Government are surprised that it should be the intention now to hold the Conference in a Gurdwara."

Secondly, it said:

"We would be prepared to permit a purely religious Divan to be held in a Gurdwara."

Now I am trying to submit that the Sikhs consider that so far as purely religious diwans are concerned, the Government should not have that discretion and it has never exercised it so far. It is purely for the community. If they want to hold a purely religious diwan then certainly it should not be within the discretion of the District Magistrate to say that he would be prepared to permit it. That means that he assumes that he has the discretion to permit or not to permit even a purely religious gathering of the

[Sardar Hukam Singh]

Sikhs in a Gurdwara. I might submit at this moment, that the order that has banned all these meetings—the assembly of five or more persons—does not exempt even the morning prayers. It says all assemblies of five or more persons. We have certain processions which are more or less religious ceremonies: but there are no exceptions made, not even with regard to the morning daily prayer.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: This is also a ceremony!

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Let there be no interference.

Sardar Hukam Singh: I do not care if the honourable Member says that it is also a ceremony. To my mind a ceremony is a different thing. What is political and what is purely religious are mingled together and this has brought about the trouble on the 2nd March in Amritsar. There was a certain congregation there. They said they were going to offer prayers for the good health of Master Tara Singh and his early release. The ministers of the Gurdwara said they would not allow it, so there was a clash and trouble. So it is difficult to say whether offering prayers for a certain thing is religious or political. I can assure the honourable Members who are interfering that our Netas, who occupy the highest position in the country nowadays, have always been using these Gurdwaras for public meetings, for Congress programmes, for political discussions. Even the revered Mahatma Gandhi did use those Gurdwaras. When during the days of 1942 there was no other platform Dr. Kitchlew used to go there.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. I think there will be no end to this discussion. The honourable Member has already exceeded his time by three minutes.

Sardar Hukam Singh: My submission is that the Sikhs feel an apprehension that even their legitimate rights of religious liberty have been interfered with in this way. It had been given out at first that religious Diwans would be allowed but ultimately that was banned and before anything could be done the matter was precipitated by the arrest of Master Tara Singh, and things could not be brought to a desirable conclusion.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: Is it a fact that the representative of the Sikhs gave an undertaking to the Chief Commissioner and the Chief Commissioner had made it perfectly clear to them that there would be no interference so far as religious ceremonies and diwans were concerned?

Sardar Hukam Singh: I have all the correspondence if he wants to see it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Let there be no discussion.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): This morning we had a very lucid statement of the achievements of the Home Ministry. If we keep in mind the history of the past fifteen months, no one can help paying the highest tribute to the great achievement of this Department under the leadership of the veteran, Sardar Sahab. In fact, Sir, the structure of the Services has been reorganized and the Administrative Civil service and the Secretariat services have been remodelled on a very good design, after it had undergone the strain of the transfer of powers as also the strain of partition. This was in itself a great achievement. That will go down in history as a bulwark that maintained the National Government. Without an efficient administrative service, no Government can stand.

The other achievement, and in no way less glorious, is the way in which the period of civil disturbances, of unprecedented character in the history of this country has been successfully tided over, consequent on migration and influx of refugees and mass communal disturbances on a very large scale.

Now, Sir, coupled with this there was a threat to disrupt and disintegrate the political unity of this country, inasmuch as no less than 562 States were let loose as the forces of disruption, and it was the unique statesmanship of the veteran Sardar Sahab that brought about the political unity of the country.

Now, Sir, these are the greatest achievements of this leader which will go down in history and which is unparalleled in the annals of the world.

With regard to administration of centrally administered areas, my friend, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, has already drawn the attention of the honourable Minister. In fact, Sir, the problem of these centrally administered areas is comparatively of such small importance to the Government as compared with problems of all-India wide importance, that they have not received due attention yet. Grievances have been ventilated from the platform of the Assembly as also from the platform of political conferences and Provincial Congress Committees held from time to time in these areas, requesting for the establishment of a responsible Government in these areas almost on democratic lines. But for one or other reason this has not been possible so far. It must be admitted that the regime that prevails today is of an autocratic and bureaucratic type and it does not differ in character much from the administrative machinery that existed in these areas during the British period. They are the conclaves of bureaucratic regimes and the advisory councils that were introduced in these areas for the first time on the advent of the Interim Coalition National Government has outlived the utility for which they were established. In fact, Sir, every criticism that has been levelled against the character of these advisory councils by my friend, Mr. Deshbandhu Gupta, has full and wholehearted support from me. In fact, Sir, the time has come when these advisory councils may either be ended or mended on democratic lines, otherwise there is no use in keeping them in the present form.

So far as Ajmer is concerned, in the booklet that has been circulated by the Ministry of Home Affairs, we find that the merger of Ajmer and Coorg and Panth Piploda is under consideration of the Government of India. I would like to place before the House and the honourable Minister the views of the people of Ajmer in this concern.

In the year 1947 as also in the year 1948, there have been a number of political conferences where this demand of the people of Ajmer-Merwara has been repeated in unequivocal and unambiguous terms that Ajmer is linguistically, culturally, geographically, historically and strategically a part of the province of Rajasthan. As such when the question of the formation of Rajasthan comes into the picture Ajmer should have its due place therein. I am not unaware of the great difficulties that stand in the path of the Ministry but all the same the question has to be tackled and it has to be considered as to what is the proper stage at which this question of merger is to be taken into consideration. So far as the pamphlet circulated by the Ministry is concerned it is already said that the matter of merger is under the consideration of the Ministry. Ajmer-Merwara admittedly is not a viable unit and its permanent exclusion from Rajasthan is an impossibility. The question arises as to what is the proper stage for the consideration. So far as the people of Ajmer are concerned, so far as the Provincial Congress Committee is concerned, so far as the successive political conferences held at three different places (Ajmer, Mhow and Beawar) are concerned, it is the definite view of the people that the question of merger of Ajmer should be taken in hand simultaneously with the formation and announcement of the

[Pandit Mukat Bihari Lal Bhargava]

Bigger Rajasthan, which we welcome and which is due to come into existence within a very short period. As I have tried to point out, if the question of the merger of Ajmer is not taken simultaneously with the inauguration of the Bigger Rajasthan the people of Ajmer will have no voice in the shaping of Rajasthan which is yet in the making. It is but just that from the beginning and commencement Ajmer should have its due share.

As regards Ajmer I might also be allowed to make another reference. Its geographical position in the heart of Rajputana can hardly be disputed. Col. Todd, the great and celebrated historian of Rajput History, has characterised Ajmer as 'the political key to Rajasthan'. It is strategically and geographically the heart of Rajasthan. If the Bigger Rajasthan is the heart of political India, as has been described by the honourable Minister in Jodhpur, in all humility may I point out that Ajmer is also the heart of Rajasthan. During the whole course of 2,000 years history, during the time of the Chauhans, during the period of the Pathans, during the period of the Moghuls and the Marathas as also during the British period Ajmer has been the pivot round which the entire political events in the surrounding states of Rajasthan have revolved. It has been the centre all through the course of history. I am confident that the case of Ajmer will have full justice at the hands of our veteran leader, Sardar Patel.

Shri V. C. Kesava Rao (Madras: General): Sir, I rise to congratulate the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister for his successful running of the Home Ministry during the period under review. His handling of the problem of R.S.S. satyagraha, the Akali agitation as also the Communist menace is really commendable. I want to point out only two things and they relate to corruption and bribery and the reorganisation of the Central Secretariat.

As regards corruption and black-marketing I want to say that during the last financial year there were 476 registered cases and out of them only 62 cases were disposed of. I find that the police is not doing their work properly. The public is not helping the Government in detecting cases of black-marketing and corruption. I would suggest that the Government should adopt the practice that is followed in the Customs Department. The person who gives information as regards black-marketing or corruption should be given a share in the fine collected from the convicted person. I think that if this system is followed many cases will be detected and it will help the police and the Government to a certain extent to curb black-marketing and corruption.

Another point I would submit is that the Central Secretariat Reorganisation is being done very slowly. The honourable the Deputy Prime Minister has stated in his speech that they are going to reorganise the whole secretariat within two or three months. I think this question has been before the Assembly for the last two years or more. During the war new posts were created to a large extent. In 1939 there were 10 secretaries and in 1949 there are 27: there were 10 Joint Secretaries in 1939 and 49 in 1949: as regards Deputy Secretaries the figure rose from 19 to 90 and as regards Assistant and Under Secretaries it has gone up from 40 to 248. I do not understand why there is this delay in organising the secretariat or even in reducing the strength of the secretariat. When the country was divided we filled up the vacancies created by the partition. When the country has been divided I do not know where is the need to fill up the gaps created by the people who opted to Pakistan. The Reorganisation Committee should complete its work as early as possible. Of course the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister has stated that there is a shortage of man power but this shortage will not be made good by increasing the number of officers in the secretariat. I do not think that by increasing these officers in the secretariat and by paying them more than what the Pay Commission has recommended it will help our reorganisation work.

As regards retrenchment I must say that the victims have been only the men from the scheduled castes. I have got a list and out of 150 who were given notice of retrenchment from the Central P.W.D., thirty are from the scheduled castes. I am glad that the Deputy Prime Minister has been helping the scheduled castes, who are backward in almost all respects, in getting them appointments and in throwing open to them every kind of appointment. There is something wrong in the machinery.

As regards recruitment I am sorry the figures are very poor with regard to the I.A.S., I.P.S. and other services. I am sorry that the Special Recruitment Board has not been able to select even a single candidate from this unfortunate backward community. I earnestly request the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister to give special attention to the problem of helping the Scheduled Castes who have throughout been at the back of the Congress and who have been contributing their mite in getting independence.

As regards efficiency in the Secretariat I want to say something. Every Ministry has got a Standing Committee. But the Standing Committee is not given any work. The members are not trusted, nor is any scope given to them to help the Ministries. The Standing Committees meet only once or twice in the year. If the Standing Committees are given a hand in the administration, in shaping the policy of Government, I think they will be able to help the Government and they will be able to help the Ministers who are overburdened with their Department's work and with the more important problems of the day. I find that in the Secretariat they are going to create new grades, that is, Assistant Superintendents. I do not see why these new grades are created and in what way these will help the country. On the one side they are going to abolish the grade of Assistant Secretaries and on the other they are going to create a grade of Assistant Superintendents. I think by reducing the strength of officers and by increasing the strength of the Assistants and clerks the Secretariat will become more efficient than it is now.

मास्टर नन्दलाल: सभापतिजी, होम मिनिस्ट्री एक ऐसी मिनिस्ट्री है कि जिसके गिर्द तमाम मिनिस्ट्रिया घूमती हैं। यही एक मिनिस्ट्री है कि जिसके हाथ में हिन्दुस्तान की ताकत है। मैं समझता हूँ कि जिस तरह से हमारे प्राइम मिनिस्टर ने इंटरनेशनल मामलात के अन्दर जो कार्रवाई की उससे हिन्दुस्तान का दर्जा दुनिया के सामने बढ़ा उसी तरह हमारे डिप्टी प्राइम मिनिस्टर ने इंटरनल एडमिनिस्ट्रेशन में जिस खूबी से काम किया उस खूबी ने हिन्दुस्तान का दर्जा दूसरे मुल्कों की निगाह में बढ़ाया है। दुनिया का कोई आदमी यह गैस भी नहीं कर सकता था कि जिन सैकड़ों रियासतों को अंग्रेज हिन्दुस्तान के अन्दर छोड़ गये वह इस तरह चन्द महीनों के अन्दर ठीक हो जावेंगी। आपने उनको चन्द महीनों के अन्दर साफ़ कर दिया। वह हमारे लिये खुशकिस्मती है यह कोई खुशामद की बात नहीं है बल्कि सच्ची बात है कि जो लोग कांग्रेस के नेताओं को जानते हैं वह यह मानते हैं कि हिन्दुस्तान में इंडियन नेशनल कांग्रेस के पास इन जैसा और कोई नेता न अभी है और न आसन्दा कभी मिलेगा।

अगर माफ़ किया जाय तो मैं तो यही कहूंगा कि इसकी जिम्मेदारी सिर्फ़ सरदार पटेल के सिर पर है और किसी पर नहीं। मैं यह समझता हूँ कि हिन्दुस्तान के अन्दर एक यह ही शक्ति ऐसा है जो हिन्दुस्तान की क़िस्ती को पार कर सकता है, जो हिन्दुस्तान के अन्दर ला एण्ड आर्डर कायम कर सकता है। हम लोग तो बच्चे हैं। अगर मां बाप बच्चों के सिर से तवज्जह हटा लें तो बच्चे तो खराब हो जाया ही करते हैं। सन् १९३६ में जब आप ने हुकूमतें संभालीं थीं तो आपके हाथ में उनकी लगाम थी। उस वक़्त हुकूमतें खराब नहीं हुई, उस वक़्त एम० एल० एज० खराब नहीं हुए, कैबिनेटें खराब नहीं हुई। उस वक़्त हाल यह था कि जिस कैबिनेट के मिनिस्टर ने थोड़ी भी ग़लती की तो आप ने उसको निकाल दिया। तो मैं समझता हूँ कि अगर आप थोड़ी सी तवज्जह स्टेड्स से हटा कर इस काम में लगावें और थोड़ा वक़्त इस तरफ़ दें तो आप इसको अब भी ठीक कर सकते हैं। इस काम को सिर्फ़ आप ही कर सकते हैं और दूसरा कोई नहीं कर सकता।

इसके अलावा दूसरा ऐतराज़ मेरा यह है जैसा कि आपने भी कहा था कि यह मशीनरी हमें बरासत में मिली है अंग्रेज़ से। गांधी जी ने जिस निराले हथियार से हिन्दुस्तान को आजाद कराया वह दुनिया के सामने निराले क़िस्म का स्वराज्य पेश करना चाहते थे और वह था रामराज्य। वह रामराज्य के लिये जीना चाहते थे और यहां रामराज्य कायम करना चाहते थे। तो क्या आप समझते हैं कि अंग्रेज़ों की दी हुई मशीनरी से हम रामराज्य कायम कर सकते हैं? क्या आप यह उम्मीद कर सकते हैं कि रामराज्य इस तरह से पैदा हो सकता है? क्या आप यह उम्मीद करते हैं कि जिस तरह से यह डिमाक्रेसी काम कर रही है उससे रामराज्य पैदा होगा? अगर रामराज्य पैदा हो सकता है तो वह इखलाक के आधार पर पैदा हो सकता है। हमारे राष्ट्र का बाप हमें बतला गया है कि अगर रामराज्य पैदा हो सकता है तो वह करेक्टर पर हो सकता है। यह डिमाक्रेसी मैटीरीलज़म पर चलती है। गांधीइज़म हमको इखलाक सिखलाता है, प्रेम सिखलाता है, दुनिया के साथ मोहब्बत करना सिखलाता है। तो आप इस कांग्रेस के तरीके पर चलने से हिन्दुस्तान में रामराज्य कायम कर सकते हैं, न कि इस डिमाक्रेसी के तरीके पर चलने से। हमें यकीन है कि महात्मा गांधी के जो पैरो हैं और उनके तरीकों पर चलने वाले लीडर हैं वह इस तर्ज़ हुकूमत को बदलेंगे। यहां इस हुकूमत में इन्सानों को बदलने की ज़रूरत नहीं। आदमी तो काम करने वाले हैं, जैसे आप चाहेंगे वैसे करेंगे लेकिन तर्ज़ हुकूमत को बदलने की बहुत ज़रूरत है।

Master Nand Lal (East Punjab: General): Sir, the Home Ministry is such a Ministry round which revolve all the other ministries. This is the only Ministry that has the entire power of India in its hands. I think that as the honourable the Prime Minister has by his exploits in the international matters enhanced the prestige of India in the eyes of the world, in the same way our Deputy Prime Minister so nicely handled the internal administration, that this excellence of administration has also raised the prestige and status of India in the eyes of the other countries. No one could even think that the problems of the hundreds of States, which the British left in India, would be solved in a few months time. You have squared them up within a few months. It is to our good fortune. It is not flattery. The reality is that the people, who know the Congress leaders, realise that in India the Indian National Congress has no other leader like him nor will there be in future.

But in spite of these things and in spite of all that the honourable the Prime Minister did, a great deal of restlessness pervades in the public and I have heard the people saying that you have failed to establish Ram Rajya. But I have heard them saying even so much that, "The present Government is British Government plus corruption minus efficiency and discipline." I do not agree with this view, but I have heard it said very often. This is the opinion of the public. We heard this very opinion in 1921 when Gandhiji made a promise to the people that he would get for them independence within a year provided India was to follow a certain line of action. But the Public did not indeed follow his line of action and in 1922 proclaimed that Gandhiji has failed. Today the condition is the same. When we told the public that this is a people's Government the people have begun to think that they are quite free to do anything. They may do whatever they like. In the same way those in service also have begun to think themselves free. Every child in the public has begun to think himself free and has completely forgotten that he also has some responsibilities. In these circumstances if demoralization sets in the public and if the Nation as a whole becomes demoralized, I do not think what the Government can do. But in spite of all this, Mr. Speaker Sir, our Honourable the Deputy Prime Minister dropped a hint in his speech today that the Congressmen should also introspect and see whether they have any virtues in them; do they still have the same enthusiasm by which they secured the independence of the country or have they gone down; if so I will feel ashamed. I think that the public is not at fault. The public can be led as desired. But it was only this organisation of Congress that had raised the morale of the public. But certain person in this organisation, I do not say all because there are still a large number of sincere workers in this organisation, but at least some persons have degraded their conduct below the standards of the organisation and for this reason only we had to pass a resolution in the Jaipur Session of the Congress I will draw the attention of our Sardar Sahib towards the resolution that had come from the Working Committee. The resolution referred to the M.L.A.'s but it was so amended as to include the name of the Cabinet also. After some discussion the amendment was rejected, but what this shows is that demoralization has set in the M.L.A.'s, and to some extent in the Cabinet also. We have become demoralized. But who is responsible for this? I may be pardoned, I would say that the responsibility lies entirely upon the head of Sardar Patel and on no one else. I know that he is the only person in the whole of India who can deliver the goods in India and can establish law and order in India. We are but babes. If the parents do take their attention off their children then the children indeed become bad. When you took up the reins of the Government in 1936 then you had them completely under your control. At that time the Governments did not go wrong; the M.L.A.'s did not become corrupt, the Cabinets did not get spoiled. At that time whichever Minister committed some fault you removed him. I, therefore, think that if you were to shift your attention from the States for the time being and devote some of your time to this problem then you can still set it right. You and only you can do this work and no one else can do it.

As the honourable Minister also observed my second point is that this machinery has been inherited by us from the British. Gandhiji liberated India and used a novel weapon. He wanted to present to the world a new type of Swarajya and that was Ram Rajya. He wished to live for this Ram Rajya and wanted to establish here Ram Rajya. Do you think that we can establish Ram Rajya with the help of the machinery handed down by the British? Can you hope that Ram Rajya can be created in this way? Do you hope that Ram Rajya will be established in the manner in which this democracy is working? If Ram Rajya can be established it can only be established on the basis of morality and ethics. The father of the Nation has pointed out to us that if Ram Rajya can be established it can be established only by force of character. This Democracy works on materialism. Gandhism teaches us morality and love and teaches us to love the world. Then by following these ideals of the Congress you can establish Ram Rajya in India, and not in the way this democracy is working. I am confident that the devotees of Mahatma Gandhi and the leaders who follow the Gandhian ideology will change this form of Government. Here in this Government it is not necessary to change the personnel. The persons are indeed sincere workers, they will do as you would ask them to do, but it is very necessary to change the form of the Government.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, I have heard several interesting speeches that have been made, the last of which was most important because the honourable gentleman attributes to me perhaps powers of which I have not ever dreamed—of possessing, powers of infinite capacity for taking decisions and controlling the machinery not only of the Congress, of the Government, but also of the fate of millions of people in this country.

I do not know whether he had got a vision or not, but I shall still think that his was more of a Congress platform speech than a speech in the Assembly.

I do feel that people should not assume that every virtue is confined to the particular kind of uniform that one puts on. Many vices are covered under certain kinds of dress, but it is too much to assume that all virtues are covered if you put on Khaddar dress. Therefore, to say that the bureaucracy or the service that has been handed over to us by the past Administration, because it does not put on a certain kind of dress must be full of evils, is a thing which has ruined this country and is going to ruin the country if we do not understand our limitations and our responsibilities. After all, we are not following the principles that Gandhiji laid down when we attribute all virtues to a particular kind of dress—in fact, it has been becoming a caste, and I must protest very strongly against Congressmen attributing all vices to people who do not adorn or imitate the dress that we, for certain reasons which we considered to be the best, have adopted.

I think it has been a habit amongst certain people unthinkingly to attribute all evils to the service. I assure you, unless you change that mentality you are not going to serve the country. Of course there are evil-minded people among the services as well as amongst us, but to condemn all because we have got a service from the foreign power which left it behind, and say that you cannot do anything unless you change this service—that idea is a thing which I cannot understand. As a responsible man sitting in this office, I advise young men who want to serve the country to open their mouth less wide and less often than I myself did for many many years before I learnt to open my mouth; and even now I do not know it really—when I want to speak, I tremble because I am afraid of making a slip. Any word that I would use would have considerable influence outside. Therefore, I rarely speak. But young men think that service is confined to using a platform and in oratory. That is not true. Service has no platform to defend. You must remember that our service people are not allowed to speak but many of them are worth their weight in gold and but for their service we would not have been able to achieve what we have achieved. We can achieve much more. I tell you, if we encourage them to do their duty, but if everyone who thinks himself important comes and has a dig at the service, take it from me that you cannot take work from the service. Let us have criticism, but let it be balanced criticism, criticism which would apply as well to us as to them. Therefore once again I make a plea before this House. Let the service people be criticised outside; on the floor of this House let the criticism be restrained and let it be helpful criticism. If you have any individual officer against whom you have a complaint, by all means send it to me and I will not fail to do justice in the matter. If my attention is drawn to any incident in the service anywhere, in the question of employment, promotion or favour or disfavour, you have simply to draw my attention and I assure you will not find me wanting. But I appeal to you: many of you have come in this House for the first time. Perhaps next election will give you no opportunity of coming in this House. Therefore do not enter into a competition of speech-making with the elder people who have passed many years of experience as to how to speak, when to speak and what to speak.

Now, on the question of my taking the responsibility for the Congress. The honourable gentleman thinks I can correct the Congress, and therefore it is my fault. I tell him that I am now 74 years and if the Congress entirely depends upon me that Congress is worth nothing. But I do not believe that Congress depends upon any single individual. It has many young men of ambition and strength who can even find fault with me. The Congress has a bright and good future and it has inherent strength. Let us look to ourselves and to our own shortcomings.

The first speaker who spoke was the honourable gentleman from Delhi. He has often spoken to me about the condition of Delhi, particularly the constitutional position of Delhi. Now, all of you will agree that Delhi has passed through very bad times. No city has suffered during recent years as much as Delhi. There has been a shift of population unheard of, and there are many newcomers in this City who have left their everything behind. They have either come from the Punjab or from Baluchistan, Frontier, Sind or from many other places. Some of them are full of anger, some of them have no roof, have nothing to look to. Now the population has already been doubled. It is difficult for me to conceive of a constitutional change that would fit in with the conditions of this City at the present. The only thing that I have to look to so far as Delhi is concerned is that it does not lose its reputation as the Capital City of India. Therefore it must conform to the standards of capital cities. I am afraid it is far behind at present because of this upheaval. Delhi's sanitation is abominable, is getting worse. Delhi's condition of a peaceful city is maintained to a certain extent, but occasionally we hear of theft, robbery or a dacoity which disturbs it. You heard only the other day of a lady going in a tonga whose purse was snatched by people who were arrested from Rothak. I heard that a gang of people who were employees in the Secretariat—because they were refugees, they were employed—raided the Supply Department, pointed a revolver at the treasury clerk and took away some lakhs of rupees.

This is the condition in which Delhi is, and if you ask me to have a constitutional set up under which Delhi will have a normal constitution, I find it difficult, really. Therefore, have patience. I advise you to keep a little more patient, till the Constituent Assembly is able to deal with this question. It is not far now when the Constituent Assembly will finalise its job.

You will remember that I introduced this Advisory Council, after my coming here. Before that there was nothing. I introduced the Advisory Council for Delhi and Ajmer, for both cities practically go side by side. One is a capital city and the other harbours the ambition of being the capital city of Rajasthan. Whether that is possible or not, I do not know. But I do know this that capital cities have capital responsibilities, and their citizens also have capital responsibilities. The citizens of Delhi at present need much training about their responsibilities. You see stalls growing up everywhere in Delhi. You never saw stalls on foot-paths in New Delhi. You never had flies moving about over you. New Delhi is fast becoming uninhabitable. But the Refugee Minister, if he wants to remove any stall-keeper will have a crowd of people at his door; if he does not listen, then they will go to the Prime Minister, or to the Deputy Prime Minister or to some other Minister. The police are in a fix, between the devil and the deep sea. If they want to help the Refugee Minister, they will come into trouble. It is not an easy situation. And Delhi, you see, has a double advantage so far as the legislatures are concerned, I mean as far as the representatives of Delhi in this House are concerned. They can represent the province in all matters and they can represent the Central Government also. They have got a double advantage. People of no other part of the country have such a double capacity as these gentlemen have.

Now, the only place in India where you may say there is Ram Raj is Coorg, where there is no complaint, nothing. Even if there is no constitution, they do not complain. Their Commissioner retires practically with death. Even after his death, they do not complain. Some retired officer from Madras is made the Commissioner there and he lives there and as long as he lives he is the Commissioner. There is no theft, there is no robbery, no crime. They drink merrily and are happy. My friend Mr. Modi, I think, would like to go and live there.

Now, so far as Delhi is concerned, I can ask the Commissioner to hold more meetings, and give more weight to the advice given by the Advisory Committee. But I would advise the Advisory Committee not to waste their time on their allowances and things of that kind.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: It has never done so.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Along with Delhi goes the question of Ajmer, and my friend Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal who is the sole representative of Ajmer says several Congress Committees have passed resolutions for the merger of Ajmer into Rajasthan. Now, Congress Committees were never expected, after so long a period of struggle for liberty, to learn the lesson of going under Indian Princes, after attaining liberty, and to merge free areas of the country into their territories. This seems to be a new lesson they have learnt after so much sacrifice. But I feel hesitation in persuading the Government of India to accept that position. Therefore, I have to say, for God's sake, wait a little. Let me see how Rajasthan and the new set-up there which is called Greater Rajasthan, and its machine, function. I have to say so, because it is not an easy thing. Greater Rajasthan is unknown in the history of India. We have seen bits of Rajasthan all over in history, but this kind of Rajasthan is a new experiment. It imposes a heavy responsibility on those who put their hand to it, and the people and the princes will watch with considerable anxiety how that machine functions, and how the people who will get power will discharge their heavy responsibilities. If you are interested, you can see some of the Rajasthan papers. They have already begun to attack me, and to dub me as a fascist, because I do not listen to them as easily as they expect. They expect that a particular place should be the capital, they expect that a certain city should be inside Rajasthan. They expect me to agree to what they say; otherwise I am either a fascist or I do not know what word they would coin for me. But Rajasthan you must agree—and not only Rajasthan, but many States,—had no democratic set-up before and had no experience. Many of our young friends ask, "What are the Provinces doing, and what are we doing at the Centre?" Many such ideas come into their heads. They think they have nothing to learn and everything to teach. But those who take on heavy responsibilities have much to think and much to consider before they can consider merger of free areas. Therefore, I would advise Mr. Mukut Bihari Lal and his friends to wait and see, and also help us in seeing that the machinery of Rajasthan functions effectively and for the interest of the people of Rajasthan, so that, then we can put in Ajmer or even any other area he wishes to be put in. My idea is to carve out as few provinces or units as possible and amalgamate as much of India as possible with neighbouring areas so that the whole of India may in future, for centuries to come, be a strong and powerful country in the world.

Now, the other question referred to was by my friend Pandit Kunzru. He has complained about discriminative treatment between the Communists and the R.S.S. I would assure him that it is not for the love or the hatred of either of the one or the two that we have made any discrimination. It is not easy for us to disclose in matters of law and order and to lay down our cards on the table, as to what we shall do in the future and why we have adopted a particular course in a particular case. I can tell him this, that I dislike the policy of the R.S.S. much more in once sense, that they should pervert the mind of immature youths. If only you can, help me in this—in persuading R.S.S. leaders not to commit this mistake of persuading the children of tender age to disown their own parents. When children are arrested for making ugly demonstrations, and the parents come and stand security, the children say, "They are not our parents". Is that the way Indian culture is to be taught to the rising generation? Therefore, I feel considerable sympathy for the young men whom I have to arrest at that tender age, and I try my best to persuade them.

But some how or other the secret pledges that they take or they are made to take, come in the way of these people and they refuse to listen.

Now, so far as the Communists are concerned, I do not know whether my honourable friend is aware or not, but that organization is already declared illegal in Bengal for a long time now. (Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru: 'Yes, I know it.') When the Prime Minister said that our policy is as far as possible to make individual arrests, it is not particularly with Communists alone; if our purpose can be served by individual arrests, we do not touch the organization, but if the organizations make it impossible for us to deal with them individually, then we are forced to take action. So far as the Communists are concerned, we feel that for the present we are able to deal with them by individual arrests and, therefore, we will not touch their organization, if we think it unnecessary. But if I feel it will be necessary, we will have no hesitation in declaring the whole organization illegal. Trust to our discretion; but do not think that we have a soft corner for them and we are hard on the R.S.S. people. To me Indians of any party or any organization are equal, so far as the machinery of law and order is concerned, it will function uniformly with the same respect, with the same regard, with the same fairness. Whenever I have to use this machine, I remember that I was in jail for ten years and the Prime Minister also has been in jail for many years. We know what it is. We know what we feel within the walls in spite of the facilities that we had. Therefore, when we put people in jail, we pass sleepless nights, but when we see that keeping them out will jeopardise the security and the safety of our country and there is a danger of losing what we have gained by immense sacrifice, then we have no other way left. Even now after putting them in jail, I am putting my best efforts to get them out of jail, if I can persuade them.

Another point that he has raised is about the Raksha Dhal in the U. P. Our friend Mr. Saksena has explained the objectives of the Raksha Dhal. Government does not allow any private army to function in this country, but so far as the Provincial Governments are concerned, they have openly and with the concurrence guidance and advice and perhaps with the help of the Centre started what is called the Home Guards, in other words called the Pranthia Raksha Dhal and by whatever name you call it. It is admitted on all hands and by those who have seen it that it is a very useful thing and it perhaps saves young people from going astray. They are being trained to be of help, of social service to the people in the villages in time of stress, in time of floods, famine, epidemic, distress or other accidents as well as of saving the people against attacks from robbers, dacoits and other people. The object is laudable and if there are defects, it is, of course, up to us to point out to the Provincial Governments the defects that may be remedied, but if the institution is good then it is worth encouraging. It is not in one province, but in several provinces that these Home Guard institutions have been started. It is in C. P., in Bombay and other places also, but if my honourable friend will point out that there is any danger in it, we shall certainly consider and see that no dangers come from such organizations that have been brought up by us.

Then there is another point which he raised and that is about the Central Intelligence Bureau. So far as this Department is concerned, I wish to inform the House that its functions are not of taking the responsibility over investigation. Its functions are simply to gather all possible intelligence or information. The Central Government get a lot of information from all over the country, in the States and even from outside and in the formation of its policy regarding law and order, it gets considerable help from the Central intelligence. It supplies information also to the Provinces in order that they may be warned or be kept prepared; they have got their own intelligence also. We co-operate with the provinces and the provinces co-operate with us and we have a co-ordinated policy. The head of the Central Intelligence went to England this year for about 3 or 4 weeks and he had his experience there; he got his information from there, whatever he wants to do. It is our idea to send him to America also, but I do not think it is advisable to send people at the lower level to outside countries. Therefore, unless we expand the functions of the present Intelligence Department, we must at present be content with the present situation. The Intelligence Department was a closed chapter so far as Indians were concerned. Even when I took charge, not only my own past record, but the records of every Congressman were destroyed, before I took office. I wanted to see my own picture of what they thought of me, but I could not find it. So also their own actions in the past as to how they managed secret things, they would not allow us to see, and particularly the Political Department of the Government of India, we cannot find its very existence in our records. It functioned for so many years over one third of India. Its very existence cannot be traced and there is no Political Department here. So we have to go on from a scratch, so far as the Intelligence Department is concerned, but you will be surprised to learn that our people when put to trial and given opportunities rise up to the highest level.

Now my honourable friend speaking about the question of the Akalis raised certain questions and attributed certain actions to the Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi. I can assure him that on not a single occasion he could take any action without consulting me and that I had not allowed any order to be passed by him except with my concurrence. When he wrote that letter, it was written under my direction and it was seen by me word for word. The Akalis, I must say, wanted to be too clever for us and they thought they were clever lawyers, but we with a little clever common-sense could not be deceived, and therefore, by the time Master Tara Singh came here in the train, at a certain distance, there was a complete proof of his determination to defy the order of not holding the Conference in Delhi. In the train itself, slogans were used and he was ordered to be arrested and that was also when the final order was taken from me. There was no scope left for us. So in all the correspondence where he finds any trickery, it was the trickery on the other side and in which we could not be taken in. Therefore, I would appeal to them that if they want to create trouble, let them give fair trouble; we will meet it.

But the use of Gurudwaras or religious places as a cloak for putting the Government in the wrong, we shall not allow. Therefore, my officers in Delhi in this matter are not to be blamed. I assure them that if any blame attaches to it, it must fall on me. They have not done anything without consulting me. In future also I will not allow them to do anything towards any organisation without consulting me. My shoulders must be broad enough to take the burden of any such action. It was not an easy action. To take Master Tara Singh and put him in jail is not a small thing because he is a life-long friend and comrade; he has made many sacrifices; he has suffered much; he is an acknowledged leader of a particular class of people who have suffered much and who are brave. But if I were to do the same thing that he did, I will pass the order for my own arrest. That is all. I would appeal to my friends the Sikhs and I would congratulate them for the restraint they have shown. I would congratulate my colleague who issued a statement giving the correct lead. Let there not be any impression in their minds that they will be able, by challenging the Government in any manner, to get his release. No man in jail under this Government will be able to get his release by challenging the authority of Government, because this is not a foreign Government. It has the will of the people behind it. I would not be worth my salt if I sit here with any hesitation in my mind about the public support behind me.

Now, Mr. Sen raised the question of prison reform. It is a good thing to do no doubt. I can assure him that those who have been in prison have greater experience of what prison life is than a man who has passed his life on the Judicial Bench can ever have. The conditions of the prisoners are never out of our minds. The House must be aware that in Bombay, the Government have taken an elaborate step in this matter. They are undertaking prison reform on an extensive scale, on a revolutionary scale. The other Provinces have already appointed committees to enquire into his question. It is not as easy as it is supposed to be. Now Mr. Sen wants us to open a central school for training warders, jailers and other officers. Well, I have done much in this direction. It is a difficult thing. I have experience of a friend who was a jailer under whose charge I was. Once I asked him whether he knew all the prisoners and he said 'Yes'. What crime have they committed, I asked him. He said that they had committed the crime of being detected and added: "Well, we have not been detected. That is the only difference between the persons who are out and the persons who are in." So, even the jail officers will be out till they are detected. Once they are detected they will be in jail. That is the only difference. It is difficult to start schools of all kinds and all at the same time. So if we have patience we can see that everything is done in good time.

I think most of the points that have been raised have been disposed of by me. But if anything remains I will request honourable Members to write to me and I will explain.

Mr. Speaker: First I shall dispose of the cut motions. May I know what the intention of the honourable Mover is?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: With the permission of the House I would like to withdraw the first motion which relates to the policy followed by Government with regard to subversive organisations in the country. But I would like the other motion to be put to vote.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable Member leave of the House to withdraw his first cut motion relating to the policy of Government with regard to subversive organisations in the country?

The cut motion was, by leave of the Assembly withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: Now I will put the Demands to the vote of the House.

The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Minister of Home Affairs and the States): So far as the Ministry of States is concerned its policy has met with almost universal approval and therefore I need not take the time of the House and prevent honourable Members from utilising the time for stating their views. I would like rather to hear them than give my own views at this stage.

What I have to say I have already said in the Review already circulated and in the White Paper about the States. Therefore I need not say anything on the subject at this stage.

Mr. Speaker: If the honourable Minister proposes to reply we may have a few minutes for the purpose towards the end. We may hold the sittings if necessary for 15 or 20 minutes after 5 P.M.

I suggest to honourable Members that the time limit may be shorter than ten minutes. It may be about 7 minutes.

Dr. Y. S. Parmar (Himachal Pradesh): Sir, it is a privilege to be allowed to speak on the Budget relating to the Ministry of States. If there is one Ministry which has enhanced the reputation of this country all over the world, it is the Ministry of States, which has handled the matter of the States in a very short period. When India was partitioned in 1947, the country was partitioned not only just in two bodies—India and Pakistan—but 562 other Pakistans had been created by the British to be left over as a legacy, to be dealt with by the Indian Government. But we find that within a short period of one year all this balkanisation which the foreigner had tried to bring about in this country had been frustrated and that it did not last even a couple of months. We are happy today that all the States in India have been either merged into the provinces or formed into Groups, Unions or independent States, which are now a part and parcel of the great Indian Union. It is an achievement worthy of any nation and for this credit must go to our worthy Deputy Prime Minister, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel.

At certain stages voices were heard that Hitlerian methods were used to make the princes part with power or that undue influence was exercised over them. We as the representatives of the people of the States feel that not only was there no question of undue influence, but the States Ministry has, in fact, due to the intervention of our great leader, saved many an ugly position for the princes in this country and a happy relationship has been brought about under his leadership and by his wisdom.

The one task which now awaits us after this integration is that constitutionally the States Unions should stand on a par with the provinces. This is an objective which has been before us for all these months and the reactions of the people of the States were conveyed to the States Ministry a couple of months ago. We feel, Sir, that this step should be hurried up. Of course, a committee consisting of representatives of Indian States and other eminent constitutionalists has been appointed to look into this matter and I hope that after their report is received, this matter will be taken up in hand speedily.

In this connection, we have only to mention that it is not our intention or demand that any covenants or agreements which the Indian Government has drawn up with the princes should not be honoured, but when the constitution is drawn up, it should not vary with the constitutions in the other provinces of India, it should be absolutely on a par with the rest of the country.

In the same connection, we will have to consider the separate armies which the Indian States have kept. It is high time that these Indian States Forces are integrated with the rest of the Indian Army. Some of them were used for specially reactionary purposes and I hope the honourable Minister is aware of them. They have been playing a specially reactionary role and with the integration of the States with the rest of the country some thing has changed, but all the same it has become necessary that there should be absolute absorption of the States Forces into the Indian Army and as far as possible the present personnel should be changed from the places where they were located to other parts of the country.

A word about the Advisory Councils which have been given only to areas which have been taken under Central Administration. The feeling is that their functioning is not at all satisfactory. Their powers should be enhanced as the honourable Minister has already suggested; otherwise, it will become difficult especially without the representatives of popular organisations to carry on with the administration. Not only is there no association, it may be surprising to know that instructions have been issued that members of the public services should not even approach members of the Advisory Council. That is certainly a situation which I believe the Government does not want. We the popular representatives are there, we only want to improve their lot and also to imbibe the spirit in which they would be able to do their duty more efficiently.

I might say a word about one small State which has been disturbing the States peoples' minds, and that was the small State of Bilaspur. But I am glad to find in the morning's paper that that State too has been covered by the States Ministry and we can expect happy relations there as well.

A word about Himachal Pradesh and I shall have finished. I am glad to find in the report that the matter of development of communications is in the minds of the Ministry. It is a matter which is very dear to us, for we can go ahead, we can improve and build the province of our dreams only when there are roads and communications. Only then can our mines and minerals, forests and forest products etc. can be explored and exploited, so that all the money would be sent to Government in the form of returns. I am glad that this point has already been noted.

I will finish with this word, that the people of the States are glad that they have merged into the Centre, that they have integrated into the provinces. They have no regrets whatsoever for the action which they have taken, which they took after long deliberation. They are confident of playing an important role in the things to come, so that they can make this country happy, prosperous and strong.

Shri V. Ramaiah (Madras States): Sir, the honourable Minister has left his policy and his work to us for comment without a speech. Coming from one of the merged States, I was particularly interested to meet all the representatives from the merged States in this Assembly. I had talks with them many times and I found that they all a bit dissatisfied with the arrangements they got from the time of the merger and the administration they are having today has created a little dissatisfaction. Representing Pudukottah, one of the merged South Indian States, I know that people are not satisfied with the present arrangements of just dragging on the administration without any definite decision as to what the State will be. I hope and I appeal to the honourable Minister to take steps to come to a final decision. I trust that in coming to that decision, he will take the wishes of the people and decide the future set up accordingly.

Sitting here for the last few weeks, I find that everyone has been talking something against the permanent services. I have come into contact with the States Ministry, especially with the Political Adviser of that particular Ministry, and I definitely feel that he has done a great service by bringing the whole policy to a great success. I wish all the Secretaries take up the lead that he has given by going out of the way to do things for the benefit of the people which they are convinced will be the best.

Sir, to meet the discontentment of the merged States, I wish the honourable Minister appoints a small committee from the representatives of these States to go into the matter and to point out how best a solution can be found to their difficulties.

Further, Sir, these States have had a certain pattern of Government for hundreds of years, and all of a sudden they have been forced into a Government of another pattern which they are unable to understand or carry on with at once. So if some time is given to them to come into this pattern and familiarise themselves with the new type of administration which they have been given, I feel much benefit will come to them.

سردار بہوپالندر سنگھ مان : صاحب صدر! میں مبارکباد دیتا ہوں کہ جہاں تک سارے ہندوستان کا تعلق ہے ہمارے قیامی پرائم منسٹر صاحب نے تمام ریاستوں کو اکٹھا کر کے ہندوستان کی ایک چھتی کو قائم رکھا ہے۔ اور اس طرح ہندوستان سے جاتے وقت کی انگریزوں کی اس چال کو نکما کر دیا جس کے ذریعہ سے وہ چاہتے تھے کہ پارٹیشن (Partition) کے بعد اور فوٹہ دارانہ فسادات کے بعد ہندوستان چھوٹی چھوٹی ریاستوں کے جزیروں میں تقسیم ہو جائے اور ہمیشہ کے لئے کمزور ہو جائے۔ باقی سارے ہندوستان میں بڑا شاندار کام ہوا ہے۔ مگر مجھے شکایت ہے کہ جہاں تک ایسٹ پنجاب کا تعلق ہے وہاں اس حکمت عملی کے ساتھ کام نہیں لیا گیا ہے۔ ایسٹ پنجاب ایک لٹا ہوا صوبہ ہے۔ اس کی بہترین زمین اور بہترین سڑکیں پاکستان میں رہ گئی ہیں۔ سرحد پر ہونے کے باعث اور بھی تقاضہ ہے کہ اسے مضبوط بنایا جائے۔ لیکن پنجاب کے عین درمیان میں ریاستیں ہیں جن کے ارن گروڈ ایسٹ پنجاب کا علاقہ ہے۔ قدرتی طور پر یہ طوق ہونی چاہیئے تھی کہ ان ریاستوں کو صوبے کے ساتھ مریج (Merge) کیا جاتا۔ خاص طور پر اس بات کو پیش نظر رکھتے ہوئے یہ اور بھی ضروری تھا کہ یہ صوبہ سرحد پر واقع ہے اور اسے مضبوط بنایا جائے۔ مگر ایسا نہیں کیا گیا۔ جو رپورٹ اریسہ کی اسٹیٹس (states) کے متعلق ہے اس کے صفحہ ۵ پر اریسہ کی اسٹیٹس (states) کے بارے میں یہ رائے دی ہوئی ہے :—

"The problem of integration was first faced in Orissa, where the States formed scattered bits of territory not linked to each other and with no geographical continuity. These States had therefore no future except that of merger with the provinces."

میں یقین دلایا گیا تھا کہ جب وزارت بمائی جائے گی تو تمام پارٹیوں کی وزارت بمائی جائیگی - لیکن یہ تمام چیزیں غلط ثابت ہوئیں - یہ واقع ہے کہ تین چار وزیر جن کا کہ کانگریس کے ساتھ تعلق تھا وہ براہ راست لے لئے گئے - ایسی چیزیں کبھی کبھی کانگریس اور کانگریس کے بیچ چلا کرتی تھیں - لیکن ہم اسے ناپسند کرتے تھے - انہیں چیزوں کو پتیالہ میں لایا گیا ہے - اور یہ پتیالہ کانگریس کے یونیونی مس ریزولوشن (unanimous resolution) کے خلاف کیا گیا ہے - دوسری پارٹی وہاں اڈالی دل کی ہے - وہ بھی اس کے خلاف ہے - تیسری پارٹی راجا صاحب کی ہے - ان کے چنچا وزیراعظم ہیں - ایک ایسی وزارت بنادی گئی ہے کہ پتیالہ کے مہاراج کو ایک ریاست کے راجا کے بجائے آٹھ ریاستوں کا بادشاہ بنا دیا ہے - اس کے متعلق سوال بھی ہمارے سامنے آئے ہیں - اسٹیٹ منسٹر صاحب نے جواب دیا تھا کہ اس میں کوئی شک نہیں کہ راج پرمکھ ایسٹ پنجاب کے صوبے کی سیاست میں داخل دیتے ہیں - کیونکہ وہ سکھوں کے نمائندے ہونے کا خواب دیکھا کرتے ہیں - ساتھ میں انہوں نے یہ بھی شکایت کی کہ پنجاب کے وزیر بھی ان کی ریاست میں داخل دیتے ہیں - میرا خیال ہے کہ دونوں طرف سے ایک دوسرے کے معاملات میں داخل دیا جاتا ہے - اس لئے اگر کوئی ایسی صورت نکالی جائے کہ دونوں کے درمیان کوئی حد نہ رہے تو زیادہ اچھا ہوگا - راج پرمکھ کی حیثیت ایک گورنر کی سی ہے - اور گورنر کو کسی سیاست میں داخل دینے کا حق نہیں ہے - راج پرمکھ دس ہزار روپیہ

میں اسٹیٹس منسٹری کو جہاں اور جگہ پر مبارکباد دیتا ہوں وہاں اس کی توجہ اس نہایت اہم مسئلہ کی طرف دلانا چاہتا ہوں کہ پتیالہ اسٹیٹس یونین ایک کمیونل (communal) اور فیوڈل ری ایکشن (feudal reaction) کا قلعہ بن چکا ہے اور جب تک آپ پنجاب کو کنسالیڈیٹ (consolidate) کرنے کی کوشش نہیں کریں گے اس وقت تک کوئی راستہ نہیں نکل سکتا کہ پنجاب اور پتیالہ اپنے پاؤں پر کھڑے ہو سکیں - آپ پنجاب کو دارالخلافہ بنانے کے لئے تیس کروڑ روپیہ شائد دینا ہے - پنجاب کا صوبہ سرحد پر واقع ہے - اس کی اسٹریٹجک (strategic) پوزیشن (position) ہے - اور یہ صوبہ لٹا ہوا ہے - اس کو نیا دارالخلافہ بنانا ہے - اگر یہاں کمیونل (communal) اور فیوڈل ری ایکشن (feudal reaction) رہا تو خیال کیجئے کہ یہ کتنا بڑا بوجھ ہوگا - ان تمام چیزوں کا ہل میں ایک ہی صورت میں دیکھتا ہوں - اور وہ وہی ہے جو کہ آریسہ کی ریاستوں کے لئے کام میں لایا گیا ہے - اسی طریقے کو ایسٹ پنجاب میں کم میں لایا جاوے -

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man (East Punjab: Sikh): Sir, I congratulate the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister that he has, as far as the whole of India is concerned, maintained the unity of India by merging all the native states; and has in this way rendered ineffective those schemes of the British with which they hoped India after partition and communal disturbances to become divided up into very very small groups of states and thus to become a weak nation for ever. In the rest of India splendid work has been done. But I have a complaint to make that, as far as East Punjab is concerned, the same tactfulness has not been made use of. East Punjab is a plundered province. Her best lands and best roads have fallen to the share of Pakistan. Being a frontier province it is still more necessary to make her strong. But in the very centre of the Punjab are situated some states, on all sides of which lies the territory of the Punjab Province. Naturally it should have been anticipated that these states were merged with the Province. Particularly taking into consideration the fact that this Province is situated on the frontier and has got to be strengthened, it was still more essential to do so. But this was not done. On page 5 of the report on Orissa States the following recommendation has been made about the Orissa States:

[Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man]

As far as the Punjab and the states in the Punjab are concerned this principle was not kept in view. Such territories, that have no connection at all with the states, have been merged with the states. Between the states of Patiala and Kapurthala lie Jullundur and Ludhiana. They have no connection at all with these states. But they have been attached to them. Dadri and Narnaul are situated near Rohtak and Gurgaon, they have no connection whatsoever with Patiala, but they also have been attached with the Patiala State. I think that in this way grave injustice has been done to the Punjab. Baroda, which has a population of 30 lacs, has been merged in the Bombay Presidency. Had these states also been merged in the same way with the Punjab then a strong unit would have been formed. If the Budgets of these states be examined then they get a major part of their income from the distilleries. At times I begin to think whether this is Patiala Union or else an alcohol union. The Union of Patiala has so many distilleries that they far exceed in number to those in U. P. or East Punjab. A greater portion of the budgetted income of these states comes from wine.

Besides this, so long this Union was not formed two representatives of these states used to sit in the Assembly, but after the formation of this Union these two representatives have ceased to be members. Nabha, Faridkot and Kapurthala used to send one representative each. But after the formation of the Patiala States Union they have been deprived of this right.

We were made to believe that when Ministry will be formed, an all-party ministry would be constituted. But all these things proved wrong. It is a fact that 3 or 4 ministers, who were in some way connected with the Congress, have directly been taken into the ministry. Such things sometimes used to take place between the British and the Congress, but we used to disapprove them. The same have been introduced in Patiala and all this has been done against the unanimous resolution of the Patiala State Congress. The other party there is of the Akali Dal. That party also is opposed to this. The third party is of the Maharaja himself. His uncle is the Prime Minister. Such a ministry has been set up that the Maharaja of Patiala, instead of being the ruler of one state, has been made the ruler of eight states. In this connection certain questions have also come before us. The honourable the States Minister had given a reply that there is no doubt about the fact that the Rajpramukh does interfere in the politics of the Province, because he always dreams of becoming the sole representative of the Sikhs. In addition to this he has lodged this complaint that the Ministers of the Punjab also interfere in the matters of the state. I think that from both the sides interference is being made in one another's matters. Therefore if some such means be found out that there may not remain any limitations between the two then it would be far better. The Rajpramukh has the status of a Governor, and the Governor is not authorized to make interference in any party politics. The Rajpramukh donates Rs. 10,000 to the Panthik Darbar and takes an active interest in the party politics of the whole of the Punjab, not only this, but he takes an active part in the shuffling and reshuffling of the Punjab Ministry. The explanation, that the Ministers of the Punjab also make interference in the matters of the state, is not enough. They are the representatives of political parties and they have full authority to make any interference they like in the political field. I do not in the least doubt that injustice has been done towards Dadri, Narnaul, and the hill tracts of the Punjab, which have no geographical connection whatsoever with Patiala. I have not even an iota of doubt in my mind that if a plebiscite is taken today then 99 per cent. of the people will not vote in favour of Patiala. But they have not been given this right.

Besides congratulating the States Ministry in other matters I wish to draw the attention of the Ministry towards this most important fact that the Patiala States Union has developed into a citadel of communal and feudal reaction, and so long you would not try to consolidate the Punjab till then no ways and means could be devised whereby the Punjab and Patiala may be able to stand on their legs. Perhaps you have given three crores of rupees to the Punjab for the new capital. The Province of the Punjab lies on the frontier. It enjoys a strategic position and in addition to this it is a devastated province. It has to build the new capital. If communal and feudal reaction were to persist here, consider what a heavy burden this would be. I see the solution of all these ills in one way only, and that is the same that has been resorted to in the case of the Orissa States. The same procedure may be adopted in East Punjab also.

Shri B. N. Munavalli (Bombay States): Sir, I rise to congratulate the honourable Minister for States for the gigantic achievement he has turned out within a period of 18 months. If we remind ourselves of the days, about 18 months ago, we can see that there were 562 bits of administrative units and the area of these states was about 45 per cent of the Indian Union, with a population of 93 millions. Fortunately, by the work and assiduous efforts of the honourable Minister, many of the states have been merged; he has brought many of them into unions; and only three bigger states remain. Of these three bigger states also, I have read in the papers, that Travancore and Cochin are going to be amalgamated into a union. The only question that remains is about Mysore. Even as regards Mysore some efforts are being made by the leaders of Mysore along with the leaders of Karnatak. It is a happy news to hear that a negotiating committee, appointed by the All Mysore Congress Committee has been touring since 9th March and it will complete its tour in Karnatak by the 18th, that is tomorrow. They are touring in order to explore the ways and means of how they can combine together and form a union of Karnatak as an administrative unit. On account of the merger of many states the area of many of the provinces has become unwieldy for administrative purposes. Under these circumstances the bigger provinces should be divided and homogenous units be formed, so that proper limited provinces will come into existence. In this connection I may bring to the notice of the honourable Minister that the Kannadigas, whose area was divided into so many bits, had cherished for a long time a desire to have the unification of Karnatak and this is the time when the Honourable Minister of states can help them to fulfil their desired object by unification of the Karnatak and thus having a separate province of Karnatak.

As regards the grievances of the people of the merged areas they are bound to be there, because even when there were states there were the grievances. After the merger also the grievances are bound to be there. But they should not be allowed to accumulate. I want to draw the attention of the Government to one thing and it is that in the states the assessment is higher. They have been made to pay the local cess which is higher in the other territory, so that the people in the merged states shall have to pay inordinately higher cess. This point may be taken note of to get it remedied.

[Shri B. N. Munayali]

There are other grievances too. The weaving class of people have a grievance that they are not given a proper quota of yarn. All these things can be remedied if there be representation for these people. In the Deccan States which have been merged, those people have neither an Advisory Board nor have they got any representation in the legislature. Anyhow by the amendment of Section 290A of the Government of India Act 1935 a provision has been made to give representation to such areas. I therefore request that as early as possible, these areas should be represented in the local and Provincial legislatures.

Last year I had brought to the notice of the Government that many people who in the movement for establishing responsible government, had lost their property. Their properties should be restored to them. The honourable Mr. Gadgil replied for the States' Ministry and said that he would look into the matter. But I am sorry to say that nothing has been done, up till now. I therefore urge the Government that the properties of the sufferers in the movement should be restored to them.

Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo (Madhya Bharat): Sir, at the very outset I offer my most respectful congratulations to the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister for his grand achievement in consolidating the Indian States. In the history of the world no single person has, in such a short period, achieved such a great result of consolidating a country which was broken and torn off into bits by a foreign government. He has done this with a view to enabling this country to achieve its own old cultural heritage and establish its political prestige in the eyes of the world. As a matter of fact, this single achievement of our honourable the Deputy Prime Minister is such that it justifies the confidence of the Father of the Nation, Mahatma Gandhi. And there is no other country in the world that has with truth and non-violence brought about a change in the hearts of its princes and thus brought about a bloodless revolution by unifying the country.

Here not with a view of complaining or criticising but in a spirit of only putting before the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister for his consideration, I would like to mention certain things. It is mentioned in the Report on the working of the States Ministry before us that a Committee has been appointed to look into the financial integration of the States as well, and it is expected that the Committee will submit its report by the end of April. But we have to fight inflation. Income-tax is already in force in the Indian provinces. And if something is not done in the States as well I am afraid inflation will not be fought adequately and efficiently in the country because some of the capitalists will divert their capital from the provinces to the Indian States. I am fully aware that the States Ministry is moving in this direction, but I would submit to the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister that if this thing is taken up at an earlier stage it will serve the purpose of the Government in dealing with inflation.

Another matter on which I am quite certain that the House will agree with me is that the Indian States, whether they are States Unions or separate State Units, must be brought on par with the Provinces in all respects. There are certain people who say that the States should not be brought on par with the Provinces in certain respects. But I feel, and feel strongly, that there is no other go-out for us than to bring the States on par with the Provinces in every respect, whether it is in respect of Federal finance or taxation. It is a matter for gratification that in the revised Covenants it has been mentioned that all subjects have been acceded to, to the Indian Union except the matters of taxation. I would submit that even that should also be considered. We feel that unless that is done the whole economic structure of the country cannot be brought on a sound basis, and for that purpose it must be considered. In that regard my suggestion is this. It is mentioned in the Covenants that there shall be separate Constituent Assemblies for all the Units. I submit that that provision should be deleted and whatever constitution is drawn up by the Constituent Assembly of India for provinces should be applicable mutatis mutandis to the State Units as well. I do not know the constitutional difficulties facing the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister. We have complete faith and complete trust in his sagacity, wisdom and statesmanship. We have firm faith in him and I expect that he will do whatever is necessary in this respect.

One word about the Indian States forces. The armed forces in Indian States should be absorbed into the Indian Union forces. Even in the regime of the British Government the Indian States used to feed the Indian Army. We had the famous Rajputana Rifles. The men used to come from the Indian States. Similarly, many of the Mahrattas from the south used to come from the Kolhapur State. So there is no question of any distinction between the worth of a man coming from one area and another. When our national government has already abolished the class distinction I hope that our people from the Indian States Armed Forces, if they are given the same facilities and opportunities, will prove worthy of the great Indian Military which we are going to have. They have got a record: they have fought on the Kashmir and Hyderabad fronts. For example, the Gwalior Army fought on the Hyderabad front and I do not think they were second to any other force.

As regards Administrative Services, it is a matter of pleasure that Indian States will be incorporated so far as these Administrative Services are concerned. But I would like to submit that Indian States people should also be given opportunities to enter the Administrative and other allied Services.

I would like to say that most of the Princes or Jagirdars who come before the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister speak here in a humble tone; but after their departure from Delhi they encourage all kinds of reactionary, anti-national and anti-social elements in their area. Perhaps our honourable the Deputy Prime Minister must be knowing these things and he may say—he will certainly say—that a young man has uttered this thing. But I wish to say that I have uttered this thing with complete trust and faith in him and I have come here in the spirit of a disciple with the teaching of the Gita.

“Tad Viddhi Pranipatena Pariprashnena Sevaya.”

In that spirit I put things before him and not in any kind of carping criticism or the like.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin (C.P. and Berar: Muslim): Sir, I was really tired of waiting to speak and I am therefore grateful to you that after all I have been called. Sir, I join in the chorus of praise for the Deputy Prime Minister regarding the integration of States in India; but I know he does not like praises but likes healthy criticism.

At the time of the police action in Hyderabad I was one of those who spoke on the Nagpur radio supporting the police action in Hyderabad. I want to discuss a few problems that have arisen after that police action. There is not the least doubt that the Government of India and the State Department under the Military Governor have brought peace to the people and stopped the communal movement which was going to be suicidal to the growth of society there and for the growth of democratic institutions in that part of the country. But I must tell the honourable the States Minister that the policy regarding the reduction of the number of Muslim government servants in Hyderabad State is not a very healthy one. I do realise that the minority cannot aspire to have 90 per cent of the service monopolised by them in the State as in the case of the Muslims they had occupied it. There is no doubt that the majority community will have to be represented to the proportion they occupy in the State. But today we find that on one ground or the other they are being ousted and the main charge that is levelled against them is that they were sympathising with the Razakar movement there. My submission is that as the honourable Minister has praised those government servants who arrested him once and arrested many nationalists of this country because they were supporting the government in power and obedient to them, in this case also these people should be treated in the same manner for they were supporting the government which was in power then. I fail to understand that while the Nizam who was carrying on the government and with whose connivance and consent the whole country was ruled is ruling today, those who were serving under him and carrying out his orders are being removed or dismissed.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Were Razakars part of the Government of Hyderabad?

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: I think so.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): They were goondas. What else were they?

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: The second matter I want to bring to the notice of the honourable Minister is this that there are more than three thousand persons who have been taken into custody. What I wish to submit is that those who are accused and found guilty of offences of violence and subversive activities must be prosecuted and punished. But during these five months no cases have been started against them. Those who are found to be innocent should not be detained any more and they should be released.

Another thing which I want to submit is regarding the question of the rehabilitation of Hindus and Muslims. There is not the least doubt that lakhs of Hindu refugees had come to the border districts. I come from Yeotmal district from where not less than one or two lakhs of Hindus had come. In the case of the Hindus it is necessary to rehabilitate them. Even in the case of the Muslims who after the police action left the Dominion or were displaced they have to be rehabilitated. The military government of Hyderabad had placed a sum of Rs. 75 lakhs for the rehabilitation of Hindus and Muslims. In my opinion this amount of Rs. 75 lakhs is insufficient because there is a large number of Hindus and Muslims who have been displaced.

In the end I wish to place on record the selfless services rendered by the Military Governor and the non-communal attitude he has exhibited. And it was because of his marvellous character that the Muslims in Hyderabad City have been safe. I congratulate the Ministry of States. It is because of its non-communal attitude that peace and security have been restored in the Dominion of Hyderabad.

ہیں جیسے کہ ایک معزز ممبر صاحب نے فرمایا کہ ریاستوں کی آرمی کو انڈین آرمی میں شامل کرنا چاہیئے اور دوسرے راج پریمکھوں کی تلخوہ کے متعلق بھی کچھ اعتراض ہیں۔ عوام کی خواہش یہی ہے کہ ان کی تلخوہ کم ہونی چاہیئے۔ لیکن جن باتوں کی ذمہ داری سٹیٹس منسٹری پر نہیں ہے ان کو سٹیٹس منسٹری کے ساتھ منسوب کرنا ٹھیک نہیں ہے۔ اور اس کے متعلق میں ایک دو باتیں ضروری کہنا چاہتا ہوں۔ یہاں پر ہمارے مانڈیہ ممبر نے کہا ہے کہ جو ایسٹ پنجاب سٹیٹس اور پٹیالہ سٹیٹ کی یونین بنی ہے اسکو ایسٹ پنجاب میں merge کرنا چاہیئے۔ جہاں تک پنجاب کو بڑا کرنے کا سوال ہے میں اس کی مخالفت نہیں کر سکتا ہوں۔ میں تو یہ چاہتا ہوں کہ بیشک پنجاب کو اتنا بڑا کر دیا جائے۔ کہ اس میں دہلی و میرٹھ اور آگرہ بھی شامل کر دئے جائیں تاکہ پنجاب ایک بڑا پنجاب بن جائے۔ مگر یہ کہنا کہ سٹیٹس منسٹری نے ایسٹ پنجاب سٹیٹس اور پٹیالہ سٹیٹ کی یونین اپنی مرضی سے بنائی ہے اس میں کوئی سچائی نہیں ہے۔ کیونکہ سکھوں کی طرف سے یہ آواز اٹھائی گئی تھی کہ پنجاب سٹیٹس کی یونین الگ بنائی جائے۔ گیانی کرتار سنگھ جو اس وقت شرومنی اکالی دل کے پردھان تھے انہوں نے اعلان کیا تھا کہ پنجاب سٹیٹس کی الگ یونین بنائی جائے۔ تو میرا جہاں تک خیال ہے شرومنی اکالی دل نے یہ ظاہر کیا تھا کہ وہاں الگ یونین بنائی جائے۔ اب جو اعتراض یہاں پر میرے دوست سردار بھوپندر سنگھ نے اٹھایا ہے وہ اس وقت شرومنی اکالی دل کے جنرل سیکریٹری تھے۔

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man: Sir, on a point of explanation. Since my name has been referred to, I want to point out that I was not the General Secretary at the time the demand was put forward.

دوسری بات جو انہوں نے فرمائی ہے کہ پٹیالہ میں جو نئی منسٹری بنائی گئی ہے اس میں میجر یارتیز کے آدمی نہیں ہیں اور ساتھ ہی یہ بھی کہا گیا کہ پٹھک دربار ایک فرقہ دارانہ جماعت ہے اور مہاراجہ پٹیالہ اس کو ۱۰ ہزار روپیہ ماہوار دیتے

تیسری بات وہاں کی کانگریس کے متعلق ہے - انہوں نے کہا ہے کہ وہ بھی اس سے متفق نہیں ہے - لیکن جہاں تک مجھکو علم ہے وہاں کے پراونشل کانگریس کے پریذیڈنٹ نے سیٹھ رام ناتھ جی کو جو کہ اس وقت وہاں منسٹری میں بھی ہیں کو ایک چٹھی دی اور کہا کہ وہ سٹیٹس منسٹری سے negotiations کرے اور اس کے بعد یہ منسٹری وہاں پر بنی - اس کے بعد جو کچھ اس بارے میں وہاں پر ہوا اس کے متعلق مجھے کو کچھ عام نہیں ہے - اس بات کو میں زیادہ نہیں بڑھانا چاہتا ہوں مگر میں یہ ضرور کہنا چاہتا ہوں کہ یہ جو کچھ ہوا ہے بہت اچھا ہوا ہے اور بالکل ٹھیک ہے - اب جو یہ کہا جا رہا ہے کہ وہاں پر جو سٹیٹس منسٹری ہے اس میں اکالی سکھوں کی نمایاں کمی نہیں ہے یہ ٹھیک نہیں ہے - ہاں اتنا ضرور ہے کہ وہاں پر ماسٹر تارا سنگھ جی کے گروپ کے اکالی سکھ نہیں ہیں اور موجودہ حالت میں وہ ہو بھی نہیں سکتے تھے - جو منسٹری اس وقت وہاں پر بنی ہے بہت اچھی ہے اور مضبوط اور پائدار ہے اس سے وہاں پر امن اور شانتی ہوگی -

Giani Gurmukh Singh Musafir (East Punjab: General): Sir, it is needless for me to eulogize the services rendered by the honourable Sardar Patel, as the Minister-in-charge of the States, and the political diplomacy exhibited by him in tackling the States problem. There may be some objections: as one of the honourable Members had stated that the States' Armies should be merged with the Indian Army, and, secondly with regard to the salaries paid to the Rajpramukhs. It is the general desire of the people that their salaries should be reduced. But it is not advisable to attribute things to the States Ministry for which it is not responsible. I should like to mention one or two things with regard to this. One of the honourable Members in this House has stated that the existing Patiala and East Punjab States Union should be merged with the East Punjab. So far as the question of making a 'Greater East Punjab' is concerned, I cannot oppose this. On my part, I would like that the Punjab may certainly be made greater to such an extent that Delhi, Meerut and Agra may be included in it. And thus a 'Greater East Punjab' may be formed. But there is no truth in it that Patiala and East Punjab States Union was formed at the instance of the States Ministry. On the contrary, a voice was raised on behalf of the Sikhs that a separate Punjab States Union should be constituted. Giani Kartar Singh who was at that time the President of the Shiromani Akali Dal had made an announcement that a separate Union of the Punjab States should be set up. Therefore, so far as I know it was the Shiromani Akali Dal who had expressed a desire that a separate union should be constituted there. Now an objection has been raised here by my honourable friend Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man who was at that time the General Secretary of the Shiromani Akali Dal.

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man: Sir, on a point of explanation. Since my name has been referred to, I want to point out that I was not the General Secretary at the time the demand was put forward.

Giani Gurmukh Singh Musafir: So far as I think, and, I would still affirm that Sardar Bhopinder Singh was the General Secretary of Shiromani Akali Dal. And in case he was not holding this office, I would withdraw my words. But I am sure that he was the General Secretary and Giani Kartar Singh was the President. What I mean to say is that it was the desire expressed by Shiromani Akali Dal that a separate union should be constituted. And it was as a result of compliance with their wishes that a separate union was formed. If they now raise any objection to this for one reason or the other, the States Ministry is not to be blamed for this.

Another thing which he has stated is that the Ministry which has been formed in Patiala does not include representatives of the major parties; and apart from this, it has also been alleged that Panthic Darbar is a Communal body and the Maharaja of Patiala is paying them Rs. 10,000 per month. So far as my knowledge of the Panthic Darbar goes, it is not a Communal body and the Maharaja of Patiala has even resigned from this and severed his connections with it. I do not want to go into the details of these arguments. With regard to the allegations made by my honourable friend that all the major parties there were not consulted and the Shiromani Akali Dal was also not consulted, I would say that the Shiromani Akali Dal is a communal body and Master Tara Singh is its President. It is good that it has not been consulted. On the one hand, my honourable friend has stated that the Shiromani Akali Dal was not consulted, and on the other, he reprehends the Panthic Darbar for its being a communal organisation. While on the one hand, he attaches importance to a communal body, he condemns the other by dubbing it as a communal organisation. So this is a contradictory statement.

Thirdly, he has referred to the Congress Committee there. He has stated that he too does not see eye with it. But so far as I am aware of, the President of the Congress Committee there wrote a letter to Seth Ram Nath who is at present included in the Ministry directing him to start negotiations with the States Ministry and it was after this that the Ministry was formed there. I am not at least aware of as to what actually happened there subsequently. I do not want to dwell upon this subject at any great length, but I cannot help saying that all that has happened is perfectly alright and quite justified. There is absolutely no truth in the allegations which are being made now that the States Ministry there does not include any representatives of the

Akali Sikhs. Of course it is true that the Akali Sikhs belonging to Master Tara Singh's party are not included in it, and it was not at all possible to do so under the existing circumstances. The Ministry which has now been formed there is sufficiently strong and stable and it will surely create peaceful conditions.

So far as the Congress is concerned, I am a supporter of this, and would urge that we should stand at its back so as to make it strong. With these words, I would, conclude and resume my seat.

Shri A. V. Thakkar (Saurashtra): Sir, I am taking the time of the House not to congratulate the honourable Sardar Patel—he has had enough of praise and his shoulders are very broad for the same—but I want to put some load on his shoulders, and it is this. Please take care of all the backward States that are merged in the Provinces and that are integrated into the Unions. I am specially talking to-day, for the first time. Talking of the two States which have been taken directly under the Central Administration, that is Cutch and Himachal Pradesh; both of these are very backward areas and it has been an excellent thing that they are taken directly under the Centre.

Next, speaking of those States, small or large, which have merged into the Provinces of Orissa, Central Provinces and Bombay. It is a very good thing for the subjects of those autocratic rulers who were there before. I myself come from one of the advanced States of Kathiawar, now Saurashtra, and I am proud to say that the Ruler of that State acceded and placed all his resources and all his area and the administration before the feet of Mahatma Gandhi and before Sardar Patel. However, let me plead a few words on behalf of those backward people of the States that have merged in Orissa, that have merged in the Central Provinces, that have formed the Union of Bundelkhand and Bagelkhand, now called Vindhya Pradesh they are all backward. Just as a civil servant whom I know well, a good administrator, has been placed as an Adviser to the Orissa Government for the Orissa States, similarly everywhere else good administrators, seasoned and senior officers, must be placed in charge of those States. Otherwise they will go very bad. At present it is said that the Vindhya Pradesh is going on in a very bad condition. I hope the administration of that area will be improved very soon. Moreover, there are very backward people also in these areas Adibasis are residing there in very large numbers—almost 50 per cent. of the population in some cases, in some cases more than 50 per cent. or say 75 per cent. of the people, are Adibasis. They are all backward and they are all ignorant and steeped in poverty. Unless the Centre comes to their help with men and money nothing will be done for them, I am sure of that. The resources of Orissa are very poor. The resources of C.P. are a little better I know, but those help either willingly or unwillingly in order to expedite their progress. Otherwise those people will remain in the same backward condition, in the same 18th century condition in which they are now.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): Sir, I did not wish to speak, but my friend Mr. Munavalli drew Mysore into the controversy and I want to make clear the position.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Never mind what Mr. Munavalli said. It won't affect you at all.

I have purposely not made my opening speech, because I thought the time was too short and if I spoke and made a review of the activities of the States Ministry during this period, it would take up the whole time. So I thought it was better to hear the criticisms or remarks that the Members may have to make. I shall take another opportunity, in some other session, when the Ministry's work is nearing completion, to make any speech, if I have to make one, to acquaint you in a consolidated form with the whole work. I am now in mid-stream, in the middle of the work, and therefore I hope you will watch the activities of the States Ministry with your usual sympathy and goodwill.

Now, taking the last speech of our seasoned leader, on the most suppressed, depressed and oppressed people—Thakkar Bapa who has passed all his life in this work, he has passed certain remarks. They are disinterested remarks coming from a man who has at his heart, the good of the people of the States. Sir, my friends the representatives coming from the States resent the least criticism of their administration. They feel they have nothing to learn. Thakkar Bapa now says that I must put good advisers. That is my policy. But some of the representatives of the Union who have to take responsibility, resent that, and they feel that in a democratic set-up, an adviser in an anachronism, and therefore, they should not have any advisers. I am trying to induce them or persuade them to agree, and say I myself need an adviser, and so they need not be afraid of an adviser.

Now, he has spoken about a Union—the Vindhya Pradesh. The Vindhya Pradesh has a Premier who has been the President of the Provincial Congress Committee for many years of the C.P. You cannot call him an inexperienced man. Another Minister has been the President of the Allahabad Congress Committee for some years. They are good experienced people, and what Thakkar Bapa has spoken here is a certificate which they have earned. I do not want to say anything. I have my fingers on the pulse, and I have told them that disruption of the Union and merger of the States into the adjoining provinces is the only alternative if there is no good administration. When I formed the Union on behalf of the Government of India, I took the heavy responsibility. Wherever I am forming a Union, my colleagues who are working in the States are tried friends who have made considerable sacrifices. But sacrifices and comradeship in jail and in struggle is a different thing from comradeship and struggle in building up a nation. Therefore, I am trying to persuade them to open the doors of the Congress wide open, and take all elements in the States and the Unions with them. Do not make it a caste system. Otherwise the burden will be too heavy on you, and when the elections come you will find out that you are nowhere. This ticket will not continually pay you unless you pay the premium. You must add to the premium by further sacrifices. That is what I am impressing on them. But it is not easy to have self-introspection, and therefore they find it difficult. But I have hope, because people who have made good sacrifices for a good cause will eventually learn that it is better to tread the path of sacrifice than to walk on the path of mere power. Now I will continuously endeavour to persuade and prevail upon the friends who are taking up the great responsibility of forming these Unions to do one thing. You have here a great opportunity, in making the history of India. We have got freedom, and if we want to make that freedom worth our while, we want to stabilise this country during our lifetime, and stabilise it in such a manner that India may be the envy of the world. Therefore, although we have changed the map of India, it is only the beginning. This is an opportunity. It is not the goal. We have got this opportunity to make India great, and in this work, I will want your co-operation. Therefore to the representatives from the States who have come here I wish to appeal that this House is not the place merely to learn dialectical tactics or the arts of debate. It is a good thing, of course, but Congressmen are past-masters in the art of debate and they have learnt that on many platforms. But the art of administration is a very difficult thing and therefore you who have got responsibility or will be getting responsibility will have sleepless nights. And if you do not remain awake and if you sleep, you will be doing injustice to yourself and you will be betraying the cause of the country. Therefore, friends, learn now that this is an opportunity which you have to put to the best use. Our friend from Patiala or the Punjab States every now and then pleads the cause, the cause of East Punjab and complains about the formation of its ministry. Other friends stand up from the other side and give him replies. The Union was formed at the desire of the vast majority of the Sikh population. They wanted a union of the States, and therefore it was formed. When I formed it, I was invited there to open, to inaugurate it. What happened? On the day I went there, just when I was going to inaugurate the Ministry, the leader who was supposed to be the premier-backed out; he said he did not agree to the formation of the Ministry. I tried to persuade him, for several hours, but he did not listen. Eventually I had to come, swallowing the insult, and come back here to Delhi. Coming here I gave them a warning that if they did not form a ministry in three weeks' time, I would put in an interim Government of the best men that I can find in the service. I said so because eventually the ministry will be formed by election. The people who claim to be representatives to-day, do so because they happen to be chosen Congressmen, not by the electorate. As a result of circumstances they happen to be there—they have been delegates, and therefore they claim to be representatives, more representative than I can claim to represent the country. Therefore, I was forced to form a Ministry called 'an Interim Ministry of Officials'. This official Ministry worked for a certain period and then several people came from the State several times and I told them: "It is open to you to form a Ministry. Bring a united formula for the formation of a Ministry and I will immediately ask the officers to hand over the power to you." Well, those people who claim to represent the bulk of the population came to me and they formed the Ministry. I asked the officers to hand over the power to the Ministry. But it does not suit the representative who is sitting here and every time he is raising this question in this Assembly. What am I to do? If this is the type of agitation in the forum of this Assembly, it won't help East Punjab, it won't help the Sikhs and it won't help you. It is for you to make up your minds, settle your differences; ask the Sikhs to settle their differences. Be united. What are you quarreling for? What is the use of all these? It is not my responsibility. I have no share in the Patiala State or in the other States. I do not want anything and my Government does not want anything. It is for you to serve the Sikhs, but not to do disservice by creating cliques and parties in that area. If you want a merger of all these States in East Punjab, you create public opinion for that. You create conditions for that. If I have created unions all over India, why should I not do that there? I have no particular interest there. I would be very glad if the Sikhs are willing and say we want to unite the Punjab, the rest of the Punjab and I shall be very glad, but if you quarrel amongst yourself, you will be doing a disservice to the community and to the country. Therefore, my appeal to you is if you cannot unite, do not raise these questions in the Assembly. We have suffered much by raising communal questions and making the Assembly a forum of communal controversy for many years. Do not repeat that here. It won't serve you and it won't serve the country.

Another friend has raised the question of Hyderabad. I do not know whether I should lay before you the whole question because there is no time and it is a very big story, but the limited question he has put before the House is that this personnel of the service should be kept in tact or the service that now exists should not be touched or some of them may be removed, but the large majority of them should be kept in tact. I must tell my honourable friends and I must tell the Members of the House that the Hyderabad arrangement is also a temporary one. It is a care-taker Government till the elections rolls are completed and the elections take place. When the elections take place, which we shall try to hasten and bring about as soon as possible, you will find that there will be elected representatives forming the Ministry; it will be a democratic set up. I have to see and it is the duty of this House or the responsibility of this House to see that you entrust the elected representatives the machinery which would function and which would work and not one which would break. There are 90 or 95 per cent. of Muslims in a vast and largely populated Hindu State and their relations in the past have been very bad. The Service has played a particular part in that set-up and apart from that many of them are useless, indifferent and unfit for service. It is the duty of the representative of the Government of India there to make a clean sweep of all these useless people and in the year's time at his disposal put an efficient service, so that the popular representatives may be able to run the Government efficiently. So instead of helping in creating an atmosphere of a smooth administration in that State, if you plead the cause of those who cannot fit in there, you will not be doing any service to the cause. You must remember that I am a plain speaking man and I will not conceal anything. Therefore, I have told them there also: "Weed out people who are unable to serve". They must go. If in the past there have been in the service a superfluous large number, because they belong to a particular community in the State, and the State belongs to that community—I will not punish them, I will not allow them to starve. I will make arrangements for either a proportionate pension or give them some gratuity or some compensation, which would be adequate under the circumstances; except those who will be found guilty of misbehaviour or misconduct, the rest will be treated as we have treated our own service generously when they left. We could not keep them, we could not run an administration, a popular administration, a democratic administration with a foreign service and we disposed of them. We had no hesitation and as such in Hyderabad also we must follow the same example. It is not a question of vindictiveness or a question of injustice being done to anybody, but a question of doing justice and fairness to all concerned. That is my position so far as Hyderabad is concerned. If there are prisoners in Hyderabad, we must remember that there were 13,000 people before and it has come now to 4,000. Their cases are being scrutinised and the atmosphere is being watched. If there are people who are not mixed up in any crimes of violence, it is not our intention to punish them or to detain them any longer, but we must see the reaction. I have, as my Administrator says, burnt my finger in releasing some responsible people, who went to Pakistan and made very damaging statements and false statements at that against the administration. I do not want to repeat that story. So I want to assure all friends, both Hindus and Muslims that the administrators in Hyderabad will deal with the administration and deal with every body with firmness, with justice and equity, but it will not allow conditions of chaos to be created or allow intrigue to take place again. There are people still who carry on propaganda. Hyderabad is still on the agenda of the Security Council; that agenda is too long and in any case the case is always there on the agenda, but Hyderabad is a settled fact which nobody can alter (Hear, hear). It is a domestic affair and in the domestic matter of India, India is powerful enough to resist anybody. Therefore, I would advise friends not to raise these questions here. It is an affair of the Hyderabad Administration, which is capable of dealing with it. When I went to Hyderabad, both Hindus and Muslims were full of admiration of that administration. The other thing that I found in Hyderabad was that nobody now there is under any delusion. Everybody, Hindus and Muslims, even officers have understood the position in which they are and what their future is, because I made clear everything of what the future will be and I have also disabused them of any expectations of any help from outside, or anywhere in the world.

Now, another friend has raised a question about the Army, in the levelling up of the States on a line with the Provinces. I can assure the House that nobody is more anxious than myself to level up the States or to bring up the administration of the States on a line with the provinces and to bring the administration as quickly as possible on provincial lines, but it is not an easy job. The States have enjoyed a certain amount of advantage over the provinces; there are certain agreements, certain conventions and many things that have been left in the past to us as a legacy. We are looking into that. We have practically no papers, no records nothing to trace, and therefore, we are doing our best under the circumstances to study the situation and bring about a situation in which the States could willingly and readily agree to come to the level of the provinces. If the States would not agree to that, we cannot coerce the people. We have the power or the authority, but we cannot exercise that authority or the power by coercing our own people. Have patience. In one year or 1-1/2 years, we have been able to persuade all those Princes to fall in line, but now it is not the princes who are the obstacles, it is our own people. So we have to deal with our own people. To persuade them is a difficult job. I want the co-operation of the House in creating the necessary atmosphere.

Now about the Army. The Army in the States are each different one from the other. Some States have very good Army. In some the army is not very efficient. Several States have poor armies which compared to our Police are much inferior. We have to look into these. We have appointed an officer for the purpose from our Defence Forces. He goes about visiting the States and tries to bring their forces into line with our Defence Forces in point of equipment, in point of efficiency, pay, conditions of service and so on. He tries to point out the defects and improve them. We shall tackle this question tactfully and carefully and obtain the approval and the consent of the Princes and the people. So far as the Princes are concerned, I have to tell you and I have no hesitation in saying that they will agree to whatever advice I give them. They have accepted me as their adviser and they have no hesitation in accepting my advice. I have often expressed my admiration of them and I have also congratulated them for rising to the occasion. I once more take this opportunity on the floor of this House to say that the Princes of India have done well by us and I assure them that we will do also well by them in future when our help may become necessary. But, to the people to the representatives of the people, I shall once more appeal not to be impatient. On the type of administration that you now put up will depend the future of India and if you resent the advice given by the officers sent to you and do not listen to my advice you will yourself come to grief. One day you will realise that my advice was right. Till the elections are over after the completion of the electoral rolls, take me as your guide. Do not resent the advice and do not consider the advice as an encroachment on your powers. Even if these officers make mistakes the people's representatives can come to me and I will correct those mistakes. I will always do my best to help you. It is up to you to accept that help and benefit by it. That is all I have to say.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will now put the Demands to the vote of the House.

The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 18th March, 1949.

K. V. VENKATACHALAM, Dy. Secy.

Explanatory Note

It is considered that the existing provisions of the Indian Aircraft Rules, 1937, with regard to flying tests of commercial pilots (B licence pilots) on multi-engined aircraft, whether employed on licensed air transport services or otherwise, are out of date and are failing to provide a sufficient standard of operational safety. The acute shortage of technical personnel of all grades in this country has created a state of intense competition between the Companies for the services of all available men, with the result that every “B” licence pilot—good, bad or indifferent is absorbed and the normal process of elimination of those who are of inferior ability has ceased to exist. This situation has tended to cause a lowering of the standards of safety and efficiency. The introduction into this country of aircraft of advanced design, e.g., Vikings and Constellations, makes it necessary that the crews operating them should have a high standard of operating technique. The operating Companies themselves have realised the necessity for the lightening up of the Aircraft Rules relating to flying tests for a commercial pilot who has to handle multi-engined aircraft and also for the introduction of flying tests of a much higher standard for pilots authorised to act as pilot-in-command of such aircraft when employed on a scheduled air transport service. The Government have accordingly decided to amend the Rules suitably, taking also into account the new regulations which have been approved for international adoption by the International Civil Aviation Organisation. The rules as amended will provide for stringent tests for as well as for periodic checks of the pilots by authorised examiners. The proposed amended rules have been accepted by the air transport companies.

PROTECTIVE DUTIES (MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS) BILL

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister of Commerce): Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to extend the date upto which certain duties characterised as protective in the First Schedule to the Indian Tariff Act, 1934, shall have effect, to determine or levy protective duties in certain other cases and further to amend the Sugar Industries (Protection) Act, 1932.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

“That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to extend the date upto which certain duties characterised as protective in the First Schedule to the Indian Tariff Act, 1934, shall have effect to determine or levy protective duties in certain other cases and further to amend the Sugar Industries (Protection) Act, 1932.”

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

GENERAL BUDGET—LIST OF DEMANDS—contd.

SECOND STAGE—contd.

Mr. Speaker: The House will take up today the Demands for Grants in respect of Health, Education, Labour and Transport. Obviously, all these four will be taken up one after the other and, looking at the time at our disposal, the allotment of time will be one hour for Health—I am not speaking of the time limit as to the speeches of honourable Members—Education one hour, Labour one hour and Transport 45 minutes. That is the allotment of time. I believe these are generally acceptable.

That means the time allotted for Health will be from 11-45 to 12-45. We will be left with 15 minutes before Lunch and Education will proceed in compartments and after we meet again, we will take up Education. Discussion on Labour will be one hour and Transport 45 minutes.

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State): May I suggest that the honourable Ministers in charge of these Departments should be requested not to make an opening speech, so that they may give an opportunity to other Members to speak?

Mr. Speaker: It is entirely a matter for the honourable Ministers and the House to choose among themselves whether the Ministers should or should not make a statement, but I believe the books have been circulated. So, I shall first place before the House the Demands for Grants in respect of Health.

DEMAND NO. 18—MINISTRY OF HEALTH

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

DEMAND NO. 51—MEDICAL SERVICES

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

DEMAND NO. 52—PUBLIC HEALTH

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

I do not know whether the honourable Minister proposes to address the House now or at the end.

The Honourable Rajkumari Amrit Kaur (Minister of Health): In view of the very short time that has been given, I think it would be better for me to speak at the end after the honourable Members have spoken.

Mr. Speaker: Shall I leave 25 minutes for her reply?

The Honourable Rajkumari Amrit Kaur: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: Very well. The time limit for members has to be in any case between seven to ten minutes.

Mr. Frank Anthony (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, I request your permission to move a cut motion.

Mr. Speaker: Is it a cut motion with reference to the Health Ministry? The honourable Member is perfectly entitled to do so.

Improvement of conditions of Nursing Services.

Mr. Frank Anthony: Sir, I move:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Health' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Sir, I have given notice of this cut motion in order to focus attention on the deplorable conditions, which in some parts of the country appear to be getting worse, conditions under which nurses today are having to live and to work. Sir, I know that our honourable Minister for Health will say that while she has the greatest sympathy for the terrible conditions under which nurses have to work and live, she will plead inability to intervene effectively, because nursing is essentially a provincial subject. I feel, Sir, that we must call a stop to pious declarations, pious promises, professions of sympathy. In spite of the fact that nursing is essentially a provincial subject, I feel that very much can be done if more drive and more initiative is shown from the Centre in order to make the provinces realize their serious dereliction of duty in this matter. Sir, the language I use or will use will perhaps be regarded as a little strong, but I feel that this is a subject which requires not only strong language, but equally strong measures.

Sir, we hear and read of frequent appeals by the honourable Minister for Health and persons like the Governor-General, pointing to the acute shortage of nurses, requesting the womanhood of India to make up this acute shortage. Sir, I am quite convinced that all these appeals, from whichever direction they are made will be still born. And I go further and say that these appeals deserve to be still born. No person in authority has the right to ask India's womanhood to join the Nursing Services unless he is prepared to take accompanying and corresponding measures to see that the present terrible conditions under which our nurses are made to work all over this country, to see that conditions where they are under-paid, under-fed, under-housed, and over-worked deliberately exploited to the extent of destroying the health of many of the women, to see that these conditions are immediately improved.

Sir, I feel and any one who knows something about the nursing profession must feel that the present scales of pay are not only niggardly, but that they are scandalously disgraceful. What does the probationary nurse get? She gets 20 or 22 rupees a month; she gets another Rs. 20 a month as dearness allowance. From this total figure of 40 or 45 rupees a month, she has to pay house-rent, for her food, deductions are also made on account of linen that may be destroyed, on account of breakages. She is left if she is fortunate with a paltry sum of Rs. 20 a month with which to meet all her requirements in the way of civilian clothes, toilet requisites, recreation and amusement. A nurse after she has completed her training, starts on an initial salary of about Rs. 45 a month. With regard to uniform, the allowances in some provinces are so scandalously low that I know of cases where two nurses share one single uniform. A girl as she completes her day duty takes off that uniform and hands it to her colleague who goes on night duty. Sir, the position with regard to food is equally bad. I receive almost universal complaints that the food is not only inadequate, but it is regarded as dog food, that this inadequacy and poor quality of food is leading progressively to the under-mining of the health of these girls who take up the nursing profession. And I say, Sir, that the exploitation with regard to work beggars description. I do not know whether honourable Members realize that a nurse is required to do at least eight hours regular duty a day. Unlike persons in other services, a nurse gets no day of rest during the week. A nurse is lucky if she gets one Sunday off in the month as a day of rest. And it is [Mr. Frank Anthony] with regard to the position concerning night duty, Sir, that I wish to draw particular attention. I consider this position as absolutely scandalous. In every three months, a nurse is required to do one month's continuous night duty. She is required to do 12 hours duty every night for 30 consecutive nights. This is a matter which I feel requires the immediate attention of the Minister of Health. And we must remember this also, that unlike other services, a nurse is required to undertake hard study. In addition to hard rigorous duties of work, nurses are required to pass severe and difficult examinations both theoretical and practical. Sir, I feel that much of the difficulties of the nurses in the country are due unfortunately to the attitude of contempt towards and deliberate neglect of our nurses in this country. Unfortunately there is a widespread feeling in India even in the highest civilian official circles that the nursing profession is ignoble, low and demeaning. In all progressive countries of the world, the nursing profession is regarded not only as a fine profession but as one of the noblest of all professions. And I feel that our attitude in this respect is largely responsible for the continuing neglect of the nursing service.

What is happening in Madras? I am told that the scales which were already inequitously low have been further reduced. I know that in Bangalore—in the Bowring and Lady Curzon hospitals—the scale of pay of the nurses has been reduced and that as a result even the probationary nurses are going out and the staff nurses also are leaving the hospitals. I feel that even in the Centre not enough is being done in the matter. We hear professions of sympathy for the Service. We hear views expressing approval for the need to improve the condition of the nurses. But what has happened in the Centre? I have heard complaints from the Irwin Hospital. The girls have complained to me that the food given to them is nothing but dog food. When I suggested to them that they should have made representations about it, they said that if they made representations they would be immediately victimised as agitators. I told them: 'You have a fine Christian lady as Minister. Why don't you complain to her?' The trouble is that the Health Minister is too good a Christian, with a superabundance of faith in human nature with the result that any cock-and-bull story is accepted as gospel truth. The girls said, therefore, that they did not go to the Health Minister, because their last condition would be worse than the first. When I asked them whether the Health Minister does not inspect the Hospital, they said that when she pays an official visit everything is put in top-notch condition but if only the Health Minister visited the hospital incognito and took her dog with her, that animal would refuse to take the usual fare given to the nurses. I know that the Health Minister is sympathetic and that her sympathy is active and real. But unless something is really done not only you will not get new recruits to the profession, but my own fear is that even those that are there will progressively go out.

Mr. Speaker: Cut motion moved:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Health' be reduced by Rs. 100".

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Mr. Speaker, the Health Minister is charged with the essential and very arduous task of nursing a sick nation back to health. The vital statistics in our country go to show that the state of health of the nation is alarmingly poor. Life expectation, infant mortality and maternity hospital returns show at what a low level of health the nation as a whole is. The primary needs of man include among other things, medical aid; and medical aid, to my mind, includes both preventive and curative aid. I would like to point out that so far as India is concerned, with our low per capita income, the only system of medical aid we can encourage today is the ancient science of Ayurveda the fifth Veda and the system of Yoga, especially Hatha Yoga and Yogic therapy. I am happy to note that the Chopra Committee has made a specific recommendation in this behalf. I shall with your permission read out an extract from that Report. It is this: "The approach to research should be more in accordance with the systems themselves" (The reference is to the Indian Medical system) 'That is, not only through observation and experimentation in the laboratory, but also through meditational and intuitional means as practised by ancient savants'. Obviously 'meditational and intuitional means' refer to Yogic practices as practised in India in ancient times.

It is a well-known fact that Magasthenes the Greek traveller who visited India during Chandragupta's time testified to the fact that "this nation is a nation of Gods." He visited India at a time when all our sciences were very much advanced. Among the sciences that had thus advanced, the foremost place was taken by Ayurveda and Yoga.

The other day, the Health Minister, replying to a question on Psycho-Therapy said that she was willing to advance it if it was conducted on modern scientific lines. I do not know what she meant by 'modern scientific lines'. You should not however make a fetish of science. Science is all right. But I wonder what exactly 'science' connotes. Science in the widest sense connotes knowledge, even the highest knowledge. Certainly the ancient savants referred to by the Chopra Committee did attain to a very high level of knowledge as regards the Science of health. As regards modern medical science, you may have heard of the common saying 'Operation was successful, but the patient died'. That is perfectly scientific! I hope that the Health Minister would pursue a truly scientific policy. I would not discard anything ancient, just because it is an ancient thing and has fallen into disrepute in some places in the hands of quacks. Yesterday, I believe in reply to a question on Naturopathy the honourable Minister said that no proposals had been received from Naturopaths in the country. I hope Government will not be so indifferent with regard to health, but will take the initiative in this matter and promote the system of Yogic Therapy as practised today in Bombay and Lonavala. When the Minister goes to Bombay, if she would take a stroll along Chowpatty, she would find an institute called Kaivalyadhama on Chowpatty. There they practise Yogic or Psycho-Therapy of a fairly high order. I hope Government will invite the founder of the institution, who is the chairman of the Board of Physical Education of the Bombay Government, and ask him to submit proposals for the encouragement of Psycho-Therapy, especially Yogic Therapy in this country. The two institutions in Bombay and Lonavala are doing very good work not only with regard to preventive aspects but also with regard to the maintenance of health. It is not enough to build up muscles of iron for health. The nerves should be of steel, as it is the nervous system that is the base of health. Yogic therapy and Ayurveda promote the healthy growth of the nervous system in man.

Now I want to say a word about the B.C.G. vaccine which has been lately introduced in this country. I hope Government will go slow with this B.C.G. vaccine. Opinion is not unanimous with regard to this and there is a very fundamental cleavage of opinion amongst experts and health authorities. One health authority goes to the extent of saying that—"the public should note that B.C.G. is a dangerous unstable product and other world experts and the Health Departments of many countries have not permitted its use because it is a live vaccine and should be used within a short period of its preparation. Moreover, the virulence of the B.C.G. is not fixed and harmful reactions may occur if it is too virulent."

I hope, therefore, that B.C.G. will not be used on too wide a scale in this country before its value and its harmlessness are ascertained beyond the shadow of a doubt.

[Shri H. V. Kamath]

Then, Sir, there is the other question of housing. A factory has been set up in this country for manufacture of pre-fabricated houses and the general problem of housing is looked after by the Works, Mines and Power Ministry and the Health Ministry. I wish that housing should be entirely under the Health Ministry and should be dissociated from the Works, Mines and Power Ministry. It must be looked after by the honourable Minister for Health as it is done in the U. K. In the U.K., I understand, the housing portfolio is part of the Ministry of Health. I hope that it will be done here too in our country.

As regards pre-fabricated houses, it is a novel experiment but I was sorry to note the other day that before the plan was finalised Indian housewives who are the most vitally interested in this problem,—in the housing problem and household management in general—were never consulted at any stage before the plan was finalised. I do hope that at some stage in the future, before the plans for pre-fabricated houses are finalised or before these houses are finally built housewives will be taken into consultation, will be taken into confidence, by the Health Minister.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): Housewives or midwives?

Shri H. V. Kamath: Lastly, Sir, there is the question of the medical licentiates and the medical graduates. I feel that the Indian Medical Councils Act has done an injustice to the Indian medical licentiates in our country. I hope that it will be revised ere long so as to bring the licentiates and graduates on a more or less equitable level, if not absolutely equal level.

Finally, Sir, I hope that the Ministry of Health will function in such a way that it will look after Health not merely in the Centrally Administered Areas, but also will have coordinating powers in regard to health matters in the provinces. I hope also that there will be an All-India Medical Institute in this country before long and I also wish and ardently hope that there will be a Central cadre to supply the staff needed for post-graduate teaching and research institutes in this country.

May I end with this observation that on the portals of the Ministry of Health must be inscribed the ancient motto of our country:

Shareera means bodily health, which is the pre-requisite of the higher life. I hope that we in this country will resurrect our ancient systems which maintained our nation in supreme health and that the sick nation that it is today will ere long be hale and hearty and—I would not say alive and kicking—but certainly restored to that state of health in which it can prosecute vital tasks of national reconstruction with greater energy and vigour. Our genius has always looked upon the health of man as only a means to an end, as a means to the performance of the highest Dharma and the achievement of Moksha for man.

Sreematty Annie Mascarene (Travancore State): Sir, of all the fundamental problems that await solution at the hands of Government, public health is the most important. Other problems like Industry, Commerce,—in fact, all development schemes—can wait, but problems like, Food, Health and Finance cannot wait, and if neglected, the nation will perish. If the health of the nation is the wealth of the nation, a grave duty devolves on the Government to look after the nation's health and build up the nation on sound healthy basis.

The hygienic aspect of Indian life, Sir, has been a long neglected subject. India has been a scene of famines, diseases, epidemics, all carrying a heavy toll of human life. The recent Bengal famine, and its consequent epidemics recorded in the annals of history is a lasting blot on British administration. Public health has baffled all administrators and in India it has been a standing problem. Poverty and disease—the twin sisters of destruction—have taken a long stride over the teeming population, carrying millions with them.

During the last twenty years, between the First and the Second World Wars, the population of India has increased by 85 millions. The present estimated increase of population is about 3 millions. If India has got the highest record of death rate, namely, 22 per thousand, it has the highest record of birth rate, namely, 34 per thousand. Over-population and under-feeding have characterised the socio-economic life of the Indian people. The present condition of health is very unsatisfactory indeed.

Statistics regarding diseases in India had been published in one of the American journals, the Readers Digest, in an article called "India—poor and starving" appearing in the 1949 January issue. In that article, they had given the statistics as follows. India is said to have only 45,000 doctors. That means an average of one doctor for every 7,000 citizens. In the C.P. there is only one doctor for every 14,500 citizens and one hospital for every 1 lakh 5 thousand people. The Health Ministry estimates the minimum need of the country to be 1 lakh and 85 thousand doctors. Look at the time we have got to make up for all this loss.

But what surprises me most, Sir, is the present policy of Government to throw the licentiated medical practitioners overboard. So many villages in India are in need of a midwife and a nurse. Would it not be better if we can provide them also with a licentiated medical practitioner? And what about the doctors' case? A doctor who spends so many years of his life in preparing himself to be fit enough to serve the nation, to fight with death and save men, women and children, he starts his life on a pittance of Rs. 150. A Radio announcer is getting Rs. 400 for his very voice. A clerk starts on Rs. 160. Why is the medical practitioner, the doctor, why is he so under-rated when his services are so very necessary for the nation? We have got to fight epidemics, not with Radio announcers, not with clerks, but we have got to fight epidemics with doctors and their skill. It looks from the statistics that we have at our hand that the country is badly in need of doctors. It looks as if the heritage that we are going to leave to posterity will be one of tuberculosis and malaria—malaria that eats like cankers into the heart of the nation, kills a million a year. 500,000 people die of tuberculosis a year and in the population there are about 2½ million people suffering from tuberculosis. Not to count the number of people who are carried away by small-pox, dysentery, and other epidemics and the weapon we have to fight with these is the inadequate number of doctors. I would like to make a few suggestions to the Government with regard to the weapons to fight the poor conditions of living and the want of sanitation all of which contribute to the growth of vice as well as to the growth of epidemics.

In order to enlighten people, whose literacy is not above 17 per cent., we have got to scheme how to teach them to fight against epidemics. Visual education, that is teaching the villagers through films, to live under sanitary conditions and to fight against epidemics, will be a proper scheme. It was adopted in Travancore and has been found to be successful. Similarly radio talks on health, will be another means of helping the villagers to fight against epidemics. Above all, the real cure lies not with the Health Minister but with the Food Minister. A country which is fed with food bought from the world pool cannot last long to continue in the health we are having now. The best thing is for India to produce as much food as possible, for the nation lives not by drugs but by food. Therefore, if the Food Minister and the Health Minister—and of course the Finance Minister—put their heads together I think we can solve the problem.

There is one more point I wish to deal with and that is with regard to maternity and child welfare. Even Delhi has not got a qualified Maternity and Child Welfare doctor: I mean one who has a diploma on Maternity and Child Welfare. It is a great pity that this nation cannot give sufficient medical help to women in labour. Our infant mortality is 176 out of every 1,000—the highest in the world next to China. Unless we take proper care of our women and children, the nation is not going to grow healthy.

I would suggest that the Health Minister will train as many doctors as possible in maternity and child welfare service so that our nation may be better looked after. The children's mortality should be fought out by clinics, established or organized all over the country in every village. Unless every village can afford a midwife and a nurse, I do not think that this problem can be solved.

With these words, Sir, I thank you for the opportunity you have given me.

Dr. V. Subramaniam (Madras: General): I take this opportunity of placing a few facts before the honourable Members in this House. The first thing is that the previous speakers have given some statistics and some facts about midwifery and nursing. As far as nursing is concerned, it will take at least 50 years or more if we want to train nurses in sufficient numbers for the villages and towns. So I will make one suggestion. If it is feasible, the honourable Minister can take it; or otherwise, after taking expert opinion reject it. After the age of 15 or 16 in the girls' curriculum of studies, a course can be taken in midwifery and nursing, so that when such a girl goes out and marries, she can become the nurse and midwife for her daughters and neighbours. If some such method is adopted and also village dhais or nurses or young ladies prepared to take some training for six months are sent to villages and settle there, then the profession of nursing and midwifery will be an easy matter. Even today nursing and midwifery is being practised by so many village women and respectable ladies, but some instructions must be given. Unless some such method is adopted, it will be a long time before this problem is solved.

The other thing is the medical profession, and the relief that is given by allopathic doctors, Ayurvedic and homeopathic doctors, and so forth. In the field of allopathic doctors, there are Licentiates and Graduates. In the matter of registration, Licentiates and Graduates in the provinces are registered under one Act and one Register and in the Centre they are not registered under the All-India Medical Register. In the case of Licentiates, there are anomalies and caste-distinctions. Those distinctions were kept by the foreign Government probably for some political motives. But now it is high time that all these caste-distinctions are abolished and one All India Medical Register is created, where all the Licentiates and the medical graduates can be registered. Unless this is done there will be some sort of bickering even in the allopathic profession and I hope this matter will be taken up and the Indian Medical Council Act amended accordingly. In this way the Licentiates can be given some encouragement. Fortunately, the provinces have closed the licentiate training schools and there is only one graduate course now.

The other thing is that the minimum qualification for registration must be fixed in the Act. It is said "maximum qualification". But unless the minimum qualification is fixed and registration is started, we need not fix the maximum qualification. People wanting the latter qualifications can go to America, and England and obtain the knowledge which is required.

The other thing is that by the allopathic field, or state medicine only 15 to 20 per cent. of the population are being given medical aid by the Government. What is happening for the rest of the 80 per cent. of the population? They are being treated by the local *Vaid*s under the Ayurvedic system, which is an indigenous system. Certain Provincial Governments have started their own colleges. It is the Central Government's duty, especially after the report of the Indigenous systems of medicine Committee has been published to chalk out a clear policy and give a lead to the provinces. I know medicine is a provincial subject and research alone is in the central field. Unless the Central Government gives a lead and takes measures to organise research institutions the indigenous system will not be able to become self-sufficient. In the matter of science, the Ayurvedic medicine is a science in itself. It has been in existence for 5,000 years and even today 80 per cent. of the people are treated effectively for all diseases. The question is whether the State is going to condemn that system or whether they are going to improve and encourage only the foreign system, however scientific the former may be. Even after all these thousands of years, the Ayurvedic system is based upon certain principles, though it has its defects and one such defect is in the field of surgery. As an Ayurvedic practitioner, I know where the shoe pinches because that system has been neglected for 200 years. Before the British came the Ayurvedic system was catering to the needs of the people including military. But after the Britishers came, the system was neglected. It is a perfect system though it has some defects. It is the duty of the civil Governments not only in India, but also in the medical world at large to encourage that system, which has stood up to the needs of people for generations to come.

The Ayurveda on the other hand has analysed all organic life as structures on the primal five called the Panchabootas, corresponding to the modern Nuclear theory, that is, the law governing matter. Deducting from this theory it has built up a wonderful system of medicine whose efficacy has been confirmed by experience of the past some 5,000 years. So medical relief and education as I conceive will be lopsided and partial if it does not take into account all the systems of prevention and cure applied by mankind till now.

Medical education to be complete in India should mean full knowledge of the ancient systems of the land combined with the modern conception of medicine and knowledge.

Medical colleges should be able to impart a synthetic knowledge of these systems Ayurved, Siddha, Unani. The practice may crystallise into any one of these channels but the knowledge of the other systems should be there. That is my candid opinion about medical relief in this country.

As regards the other point, fortunately a medical institute has been recommended by the Chopra Committee. There are so many other recommendations of the Committee which will take a long time to be implemented. But before all that a minimum qualification or a minimum knowledge must be insisted on in regard to all doctors who come into the profession. Unless a man has the minimum knowledge or qualification he must not be allowed to practise. That much I am prepared to admit. As I said the Central Government will have to take strong measures to see that some sort of lead is given not only in India but for the whole world, because Ayurveda is the science of life. It is a science which deals not only with the human body, the flesh and blood of it, but also with the soul of man. So both these aspects of man are combined in Ayurveda. There is no cure of the body unless there is also cure of the mind. The science of life or Ayurveda deals not only with the human world but it also recognises that man has also other duties to perform. It recognises that unless we have a strong mind in a healthy body we cannot fulfil our goal in life. I, therefore, request the honourable Minister to take proper steps for the organisation of medical relief in the country. Whatever may be the systems, every thing good in any system must be accepted and consolidated and a national medical system must be encouraged in this country. Sir, I support the Demands.

The Honourable Rajkumari Amrit Kaur: Sir, I have listened with considerable interest to the various points raised by the honourable Members who have spoken on the budget demand on Health and I only hope that the speeches they have made are indicative of the growing interest in this subject.

The brief report of the activities of the Health Ministry, which has already been circulated along with the Budget papers, must have given honourable Members some idea of the more important items of work which the Ministry of Health has undertaken in the current year and accomplished and which we have programmed to do in the coming year.

Before I reply to some of the suggestions that have been thrown out in the speeches made by honourable Members I would like briefly to dwell on the policy, as I conceive it ought to be, of the Central Ministry of Health. As honourable Members are aware most of the subjects in the field of health fall in the provincial sphere and the executive responsibility in the matter of sanitation, Public health and medical relief lies largely with the provincial governments. While saying this I do not for one moment wish honourable Members to go away with the impression that I take a narrow view of central responsibility in the vital matter of national health. On the contrary, my work and experience in the Ministry which I have the honour to serve, have left no shadow of doubt in my mind that health administration in every part of India is a matter of direct and deep concern to the Central Government and in the promotion of health in all its aspects throughout the country and in the enforcing of the maintenance of high standards of efficiency in teaching, in research and generally in medical institutions the Central Government must always play a big and positive part. This has always been my endeavour and it will continue to be so. Apart from subjects like International Health Organisations, port quarantine, central agencies and institutions for research, professional or technical training and health in the centrally administered areas, for which the Central Government have direct responsibility, the Central Government's functions in regard to the matters which are primarily a provincial responsibility can be stated in very general terms to be co-ordination, provision of facilities for discussion, the supply of information, competent advice and guidance and such other assistance as they can give to the provinces for the promotion of the health and wellbeing of the country. It is only by the Centre acting with imagination and sympathy and extending its help to bring together the different administrative units of the Indian Union, with their varying resources and different levels of health, that the past neglect of public health and particularly that of rural India, can be rectified and an improved state of affairs brought into being within a reasonable period of time.

Therefore the idea that some people seem to have that health is a provincial subject and there is not much for the Centre to do is not quite correct and such people are, in my humble opinion, taking a very shortsighted and narrow view and are following the path of evasion of responsibility. We have therefore endeavoured to take the initiative and given a lead wherever possible to the provincial governments and it was with the object of promoting active co-ordination in the promotion of health under local government administration that I convened a conference of Health Ministers, Ministers of Local Self-Government and Chairmen of Improvement Trusts last year. It was with the same object of promoting co-ordination of health policy throughout India and of providing the necessary advice and guidance to provincial governments and administrations that committees of enquiry were appointed to report on the indigenous systems of medicine, on environmental hygiene so intimately connected with rural medical aid, homeopathy, vital statistics, and leprosy and finances of local bodies also. Again, it was with the same idea of promoting coordinated development of certain important professions intimately connected with health that legislation to regulate the professions of pharmacy, nursing and dentistry were sponsored by the Central Government last year.

I mention all these instances in order to show that the general policy of my Ministry is to promote actively the cause of public health throughout the country to the maximum extent possible within the prescribed constitutional and financial limitations and here I would like to commend the keenness that has been evinced by the Provincial Ministers of Health and of Local Self-Government and Chairmen of Improvement Trusts throughout the country at the conferences held last year. I believe the provinces are forging ahead with their plans for health. They would forge ahead much more quickly but they too like the Centre suffer from financial disabilities.

It must be admitted, and I am sure the House will be at one with me when I say, that the money we spend on health is very much less than what is needed to provide an adequate health service for the country. Our hospitals and our health organisations are under-staffed. They are not always adequately equipped and unless more money is forthcoming progress must remain unsatisfactory. Sir, I stand before the House today with almost a guilty conscience when I am asking sanction for demands which do not go any length whatsoever towards fulfilling the needs of this vast land of ours in the field of health. None of the many plans we have in mind for increase of production can fructify if the health of the nation is not up to mark. Even armaments will be worth nothing if the men of the armed forces are physical weaklings. I am alarmed at the growing deterioration in the general health of the populace and particularly in the health of our children. We have to save them. We have to save our youth and all our people from mal and under-nutrition and disease, if we are to raise our stature in any sphere. But how can we do so if 50 per cent. of our revenues go towards defence and less than 5 per cent. is spent on health as a whole in the country and less than 1 per cent. in the Centre? I want the House to ponder very deeply over the figures that I am putting before it and I want to know how it expects me to do things if it does not give me the money wherewith to carry out my plans. I think sooner or later—and I hope sooner rather than later—the House will have to decide as to whether it is going to continue to starve this most vital Department: in other words, are they going to choose guns instead of butter?

There are schemes in the sphere of health which cannot brook any delay in being brought into action. The All-India Medical Institute must be brought into being. We have attained political freedom no doubt but we need well qualified men and women in every sphere of life if we are to obtain the fullest benefit from it. A handful of young men and women sent abroad for study will not suffice. We want to give every facility for post-graduate study and research to vast numbers in our own land. Those Members of the House who are anxious to have a Medical College in Delhi must join hands with me in pushing forward the scheme because it is only money that deters me.

[Rajkumari Amrit Kaur]

Meanwhile I would like to say for the benefit of those Members who are, I know, very agitated about the lack of medical education that can be provided in Delhi that in the Centrally administered areas and in Delhi steps are being taken to reserve seats in the Medical Colleges of neighbouring Provinces—at Agra, Indore, Jaipur, Gwalior and in the Glancy Medical College at Amritsar.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): How many seats?

The Honourable Rajkumari Amrit Kaur: I think we have got about twenty-five seats in all in these places, but I am trying to get more if I possibly can. But I entirely share the opinion of honourable Members that there should be a college here. For that, as I say, give me the money.

An honourable Member of the House has talked, and talked very strongly, about the nursing services. I need hardly say to him that I am in entire agreement with every word that he has said and I know how extremely badly staffed our hospitals are, how over-worked nurses are and how shockingly under-paid they are. I would like to assure him that no branch of the medical profession has had more not only of my keen sympathy but also of my active sympathy in bettering their lot than this one and I put Nursing specially on the agenda of the last conference of Health Ministers that I called. Even more than scales of pay I agree it is the unsatisfactory living conditions which stand in the way of many girls joining this profession. I would like to assure the House that we have proposals now for the provision of adequate living quarters for nurses near the Irwin Hospital. I have long since taken up the matter of the extra food allowance of the nurses in the hospitals in Delhi. It is not that I am not available to the nursing profession in Delhi. They come to me. They tell me their grievances and I take up their cause at once. But there again it is a question of finance. We have all along been drawing the attention of the Provincial Governments to the need of improving the conditions of the service of nurses, of raising the status of the profession and of improving facilities for training. I am glad to inform the House that many Provincial Governments have included plans for these purposes in their post-war development schemes. To raise the status of the profession gazetted status has been conferred on nurses of the rank of Nursing Sisters and above. The House is also aware that with a view to improving nursing education and to provide a highly trained class of nurses, who, it is hoped, will eventually provide the leadership for the profession, a nursing college affiliated to the Delhi University was established in Delhi two years ago. It has on its rolls at the moment 49 students studying for the B.Sc. degree in Nursing in the Delhi University. It also has 12 students undergoing training in Hospital Administration and other subjects. Selected nurses who have already undergone training in India are also sent abroad for post-graduate training. I can assure honourable Members that everything possible will be done to raise the status and efficiency of the nursing profession. But there again I have to plead as to how I can pay them adequately when we have not got the money, when health is not given adequate funds. The lack of funds for buildings even for the Nursing College here and the forcible occupation by the refugees of even some of the meagre hutment accommodation that I have for the Nursing College in Delhi is retarding the progress of this institution, and I say it is retarding the progress of this institution and adding to the detriment of the cause of nurses in India.

I agree that probationary nurses are under-paid, and their hours of work are too many. There again how am I to get more money for them and more food. But I assure the House once again that this is being sought to be done. I think that the attitude of contempt that the honourable Member referred to has now really vanished and that many nurses from very good families are willing to come forward if only we could give them the facilities for training and if only they could be assured of proper pay, proper living accommodation and proper food.

There is the question of the cause of the indigenous systems of medicine which is almost a hardy annual. I would like to reiterate every word that I said in regard to this on the floor of the House last year. It is not that Government is not anxious to give all the facilities that it can for research in indigenous systems of medicine and also indigenous drugs. I consider that it is extremely necessary. But I do want the House not to be guided purely by sentiment in this matter and not to think that because these systems are ancient and because they belong to India they are the only or the best systems of medicine.

Shri H. V. Kamath: They have stood the test of ages and proved their efficacy.

The Honourable Rajkumari Amrit Kaur: India can not, must not, dare not, run away from or not give every encouragement to modern science. We would belittle ourselves in our own eyes and in the eyes of the world if we did so. Only those methods in medicine can be accepted which can stand the test of scientific scrutiny. Therefore basic training in modern science and its methods is necessary for anyone who claims to cure human disease, be it by whatsoever method.

I am glad one of the Members has raised the question of registration of all medical practitioners. All medical practitioners must be registered if we are to banish quackery from our land. They must have the same minimum standard of training. This does not preclude research in our indigenous systems and indigenous drugs. Ever wider opportunity for such research must be provided so that we may see to what extent indigenous systems and homeopathy too can be developed and regulated for medical relief in the country but not, I say again, in any spirit of rivalry with allopathy.

Shri H. V. Kamath: In a spirit of co-operation.

The Honourable Rajkumari Amrit Kaur: Rural medical relief has been mentioned by certain speakers. That subject is very near my heart and I may say that in the Centrally administered areas I have given priority 'A' to rural medical relief and two primary centres, according to the recommendations of the Bhore Committee, have been sanctioned for the Delhi Province. The foundation stone of one has been laid and I hope that both of them will be functioning within a year. This is a definite step forward.

I may also say this for the Delhi Province. I would like to make it a model province before I leave this Ministry. We must have plans for providing health education for the people because I feel that prevention is better than cure and that we must teach people how to live properly. We could banish 50 per cent. of the diseases if they knew this art. I hope that the housing department under me will also function well, not only in producing houses which may come under the prefabricated housing factory but also in the entire matter of housing and in laying out proper plans for villages much more even than for our towns. I am also going to have for Delhi mobile dispensaries which will, at any rate, go out daily and serve the rural areas.

I have spoken enough about the lack of money. Being a spending department as health must be, it cannot make any real progress without adequate grants.

[Rajkumari Amrit Kaur]

The problem is too vast to be dealt with in a short time, and if honourable Members are at liberty to criticise the Ministry of Health, I think I may be permitted to say, Sir, that it is scarcely fair for subjects so vital as health, education and labour welfare to devote only one working day for discussion thereon with a fourth subject thrown into the bargain. These are constructive activities; in them and in their proper development lies the happiness, moral, mental and physical, of our people. We are passing through critical times. We have to begin to build from scratch in every phase of activity. Nothing can be given priority. It is often said that we must have this and that and that health and education can wait. I entirely disagree. Nothing can wait, nothing can be given priority; everything is inextricably bound up with everything else. Sir, I beg of the House not to ignore health. That way lie danger and disaster. May I inform the House that in the U.S.A., in spite of complete autonomy in the States, under the Federal Security Act the Surgeon-General of the Federal Public Health has a large amount of money placed at his disposal for assisting the States in the development of their health plans. These grants are given to the States with certain specific conditions attached to them. There is a Bureau of Health Services under an Assistant Surgeon-General with an adequate number of technical experts whose services are utilised partly for assignment to health organisations in the States whenever necessary, and partly for ensuring supervision over the execution of the schemes for the grants-in-aid that are given.

I would also recommend to honourable Members to study the latest national health programme of U.K. which makes available free of charge every medical amenity to everybody in the country. They have not counted the cost in terms of money; they have laid the greater emphasis on human health and happiness. These surely are the lines which we should also follow.

I ask the House Sir, not only to pass this Budget without altering one iota of it, but to press for more money for this life-giving and life-saving Ministry. I not only ask for money, but I ask for adequate and highly-qualified staff in order to carry out our plans for development on a scale worthy of our country and its fair name. Anything less would be unworthy of the millions committed to our charge.

Mr. Frank Anthony: Sir, in view of what the honourable Minister has stated, I would request permission to withdraw my cut motion.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable Member leave of the House to withdraw his cut motion?

The cut motion was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: I will now put the Demands to the House.

The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: We now take up the Demands in respect of Education.

DEMAND NO. 16.—MINISTRY OF EDUCATION.

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

DEMAND NO. 46.—ARCHAEOLOGY.

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

DEMAND NO. 49.—OTHER SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENTS.

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

DEMAND NO. 50.—EDUCATION.

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

प्रोफेसर यशवन्त राय : महोदय, Education इतना वास्तविक (vast subject) है, और इसके लिये इतना कम समय रखा गया है, इसके लिये मुझे बहुत दुख है। एड्युकेशन एक ऐसा Important Subject है कि जिसको इण्डिया (India) के Development Plans में First Priority मिलनी चाहिये। लेकिन दुख की बात है कि हमारा देश एक ऐसा देश है, जिसके अन्दर ८५ फीसदी लोग अनपढ़ हैं और फिर भी हम Education को इतना महत्व नहीं दे रहे हैं। दूसरे जितने आजाद मुल्क हैं, उनके अन्दर Education को बड़ी भारी importance दी जाती है इसलिये Education को discuss करने के लिये बहुत ज्यादा समय की जरूरत होती है।

दूसरा point जो मैं पेश करना चाहता हूं वह यह है कि हमारा जो मौजूदा education system है, वह पूरे का पूरा overhaul होना चाहिये। यह बिल्कुल western ideology जो हमने अपने education system के अन्दर रखी है, यह India को suit नहीं करती है। पंजाब केसरी श्री० लाला लाजपत राय जी कहा करते थे "Go back to the Vedas" Professor Maxmuller ने कहा है "Rig Veda is the earliest book in the library of the world"। यह चीजें साफ जाहिर करती हैं कि हमारा जो अपना Culture है और सभ्यता है वह बहुत पुराना है उसकी तरफ हमें आज जाना चाहिये। अगर हम चाहते हैं कि हमारा राष्ट्र मजबूत हो, एक भाषा हो, एक culture हो, और एक देश हो, तो हमें अपनी पुरानी ideology को अपने Education system में लाना होगा। एक विद्वान ने कहा है कि अगर हम यह चाहते हैं कि हमारे विचार सारे देश के अन्दर फैल जायें तो हमें उन विचारों को उस देश के स्कूलों में भर देना चाहिये। इसलिये स्कूलों के tone को बदलने के लिये और उनके अन्दर जो western ideology है, उसको बदलने के लिये यह जरूरी है, कि हम अपने Eastern culture की तरफ ध्यान दें जो इतना समय बीत जाने के बाद भी और इतने (Invaders) के आने के बावजूद भी आज कायम है, उसको आनायें। हमारा कन्चर इतने time

के बाद भी कायम है और हम सब tides को stand कर सके हैं यह हमारी पुरानी ideology बहुत अच्छी है और हमें फिर से उसे अपने education system के अन्दर लाना चाहिये।

Education का aim होता है सुख और शान्ति हासिल करना। जैसा कि शास्त्रों में कहा है :

“विद्या ददाति विनयं—विनयादयाति पात्रताम्।

यानी विद्या का aim है सुख को लाना। लेकिन आज हम क्या देखते हैं। आज स्कूलों में और कालेजों में विद्यार्थी आये दिन बिना सोचे समझे गवर्नमेन्ट के खिलाफ उठ खड़े होते हैं। उन्हें ऐसा करने से पहले इस बात को समझ लेना चाहिये कि यह उनके हित के लिये है यानी फायदे के लिये है जो सरकार उनके लिये कर रही है, या नुकसान के लिये है। उन्हें बिना सोचे समझे सरकार के खिलाफ खड़ा न होना चाहिये। मैं तो इसका यही सबब समझता हूं कि उनके अन्दर राईट टाईप Right-type की education नहीं है बल्कि वह western education की चीजों को लेते हैं जो कि हमारे देश के हालात के लिये Impracticable हैं। John Stuart Mill एक बड़ा भारी विद्वान हुआ है। उन्होंने इस चीज को discover किया है कि education जो है, वह तीन एच (3H's) की होनी चाहिये, यानी head, hand and heart (हेड, हैंड, एंड हार्ट)। आज के प्रचलित education system में head and hand की तो education है, लेकिन heart की नहीं है क्योंकि यह western ideology पर चल रही है। लेकिन हमारे पुराने आर्य समय में तीनों एच (3H's) की Education होती थी लेकिन जो western countries हैं, उनके अन्दर दो एच (2H's) की ही education है, तीसरी यानी heart की education नहीं है, जिससे कि उनके अन्दर एक दूसरे के प्रति प्रेम भाव नहीं रहता है और वह एक दूसरे को divide करती है और वह लोग एक दूसरे को वरबाद करने पर तुले रहते हैं। इसलिये हम चाहते हैं कि हमारे देश के अन्दर तीन एच (3H's) की education हो और heart की education भी हो, ताकि हम लोगों में एक दूसरे के प्रति प्रेम भाव हो और भाई भाई की तरह मिल कर रहना सीखें। पुराने समय में हमारे देश में बहुत बढ़िया technical education थी और पिछले जंग में अंग्रेजी सरकार ने भी टेक्नीकल एड्यूकेशन पर बहुत ज्यादा जोर दिया, और उनको भी इसके लिये Technical and Vocational Centres खोलने पड़े। इसलिये इस Atomic-Age में technical education को हमारे एड्यूकेशन सिस्टम में ज्यादा से ज्यादा स्थान मिलना चाहिये। मैं आप से प्रार्थना करता हूं कि हमें technical education पर बहुत ज्यादा रुपया खर्च करना चाहिये। हमें सिर्फ इस बात से खुश न होना चाहिये कि हमने इतना रुपया इसके लिये ग्रांट कर दिया है, और

हमारे विद्यार्थी Tailoring, तरखाना, लुहारा और साईकिल मरम्मत सीख रहे हैं बल्कि अपने स्कूलों में सही टेकनीकल एड्युकेशन, यानी अस्त्र और शस्त्र बनाने की शिक्षा देना चाहिये। मैंने इंग्लैंड में देखा है कि वहां पर स्कूलों और कॉलेजों में हवाई जहाज बनाने की शिक्षा देते हैं, मोटर बनाने की शिक्षा देते हैं और दूसरी मशीनों और पुर्जों के बनाने की शिक्षा देते हैं। हमारे स्कूल और कॉलेजों में भी इन सारी चीजों की शिक्षा का इन्तजाम फौरन होना चाहिये। Technical education के साथ साथ हमारी ज्यादा से ज्यादा तबज्जह physical education की तरफ भी होनी चाहिये, ऐसा नहीं होना चाहिये कि वेस्टर्न western philosophy के अन्दर हमने physical education को बिल्कुल ignore सा कर दिया है। हमें अपने विद्यार्थियों को बलवान् बनाना है और चरित्रवान् बनाना है। पुराने आर्य समय में जब विद्यार्थी सबसे पहले अपने गुरु के पास जाता था तो गुरु यह कहता था :— “अशमा भवतुः ते तनुः”—“तेरा शरीर वज्र (पत्थर) हो”। अर्थात् तेरा जो शरीर है वह वज्र समान होना चाहिये। और इसके साथ ही गुरु कहता था “आत्मा वै पुत्र नामोसि”। “तू आत्मा है पुत्र तो तेरा नाम है” दूसरे मानों में वह बताता था कि तेरी आत्मा बलवान् होनी चाहिये। इसलिये इन दोनों बातों का ख्याल रखते हुये कि आदमी आत्मा और शरीर इन दो चीजों का बना हुआ है, आत्मा और शरीर दोनों का development होना चाहिये। तभी एड्युकेशन ठीक हो सकती है। आजकल जो एजुकेशन हो रही है उसमें Students हमारे बखिलाफ हो जाते हैं और Interested parties आकर उनमें Indiscipline करा देते हैं। इन बातों से छुटकारा तभी हो सकता है जब कि हम इस बात को मान लें कि हमको थ्योरी और प्रैक्टिस (theory and practice) में अपने ideals को लाना है।

स्वं स्वं चरित्रं शिक्षेन् पृथग्या सर्व मानवाः ।

इसका अर्थ यह है कि भारतवर्ष में जो ब्राह्मण होते थे वह सारे जगत के गुरु होने थे। हम अपने विद्या मंत्री जी से यह आशा करते हैं कि वह ऐसा करें कि जिस तरह हमारे विद्यार्थी इंग्लैंड और दूसरे देशों में विद्या पढ़ने जाते हैं, उसी तरह सारे संसार के विद्यार्थी भारतवर्ष में विद्या हासिल करने के लिये आया करें। Lord Christ भारतवर्ष के एक सबसे बड़े विद्यार्थी थे जो कि नालन्दा आर तक्षशिला में पड़े थे। इसको जानने के लिये हमें “Unknown life of Christ” जो कि N. Notovitch ने लिखी है, पढ़नी चाहिये।

इस देश का सत्यानाश जब हुआ तब भी हमारे देश की शक्ति ब्राह्मणों के हाथों में थी और आजकल भी देश की शक्ति ब्राह्मणों के हाथों में है। मेरा ख्याल है कि जिन ब्राह्मणों ने इस देश का सत्यानाश किया था वही इसका पुनरुद्धार करेंगे।

Prof. Yashwant Rai (East Punjab: General): Sir, I am deeply pained to say that such a short time has been allotted for the discussion of a vast subject like Education. Education is such an important subject that it should be accorded first priority in All India Development Plans. But it is a matter of great regret that although our country consists of 85 per cent. of uneducated people, yet we are not giving the same importance to this subject as it deserves. Secondly, in all the free countries, great importance is attached to 'Education'. Therefore, considerable time is required to discuss this subject.

During the time of the British regime in India, a bureaucratic Government was in power and the Britishers aimed to rule India with the support of the illiterate people. But at present we have got a democratic Government. We should make maximum possible endeavours to spread education in our country. The Basic Education Scheme which has been presented by our honourable Minister for Education is likely to involve a lot of expenditure; and in my opinion, keeping in view the education imparted in the schools at present, it seems to be somewhat impracticable, and it is not considered expedient to incur a heavy expenditure in this direction. On the contrary, it is most essential that we should educate the masses keeping in view the fact that we have provided for Adult Franchise in our new Constitution, and there is hardly any necessity for spending such a huge amount for the purpose of educating the masses. May it be social or adult education; but we should give education in the three R's viz., provision should be made in respect of reading, writing and arithmetic. For this reason, I believe that we can reduce the huge amount which we are going to spend in respect of various items under the head 'Education'. Our first and foremost object at present should be that we should try to spread some sort of education among our masses by means of which they may be able to read the newspapers or at least understand the implications of the plans formulated by our Government for their benefit.

Secondly, I would like to suggest that our existing education system should be thoroughly overhauled. The entire western ideology which is imbibed in our present education system does not suit India. The Lion of Punjab late Lala Lajpat Rai used to say “Go back to the Vedas”. Prof. Maxmuller has observed “Rig Veda is the earliest book in the library of the World”. All these things amply prove that our culture and civilization are very old, and we should switch back to that direction at present. If we want that we should build a strong nation, have a common language and culture and unified country, then we shall have to imbue our education system with our old ideology. A certain scholar has observed that if we want to spread our thoughts throughout the length and breadth of the country, then we should infuse those thoughts through the schools of that country. Therefore, with a view to change the tone of the schools and the western ideology prevalent there, it is considered necessary that we should devote attention towards our Eastern culture, which still exists today even after the lapse of such a long period and the visitation of so many invaders, and adopt it. Our culture continues to exist even after the ravages of such a long period and we have been able to stand the tide that betook us from time to time. Ours is a high ideology; it is ancient, and we should try to assimilate this in our present education system.

The aim of education is to attain peace and happiness, just as has been laid down in this Shastras:

*Vidya dadati vinayam vinayadayati patratam

(Education imparts politeness; from politeness one becomes receptive; after that wealth follows. With the help of money, one can practice Dharma which leads to eternal happiness).

In other words, the aim of education is to achieve happiness. But what we find today is quite different. Now-a-days the students in both the schools and colleges make agitation against the Government in an irresponsible manner. Before launching upon such a course of action, they should realize as to whether what the Government are doing for their sake is likely to benefit them or not. They should not make any agitation against the Government without any cogent reasons. I would, on my part, attribute this delinquency not only to the lack of right type of education but to the fact that they are enamoured of the traits of Western education which are impracticable under the conditions existing in our country. John Stuart Mill was a great learned scholar. He has discovered this thing that the education should consist of the three "H's" viz., head, hand and heart. In the present education system, the faculties of head and hand do exist, but it is lacking in heart, because that is being run on the basis of the western ideology. But in our ancient Aryan age, education in the three "H's" used to be imparted whereas in the western countries, education is given in the two "H's" only. Education in the third direction viz., heart is lacking and as a result of this they cannot foster any mutual concord or harmony and it tends to divide one against the other, and those people are bent upon ruining each other. Therefore, we desire that education in the three "H's" should be imparted in our country which should include 'heart' also; so that we may be able to engender mutual love and should learn to work as members of One Brotherhood. In the olden days, very high standard of technical education existed in our country, and during the last war also, the British Government laid a great emphasis upon this matter, and for this purpose they had to open vocational training centres. Therefore, in the present atomic age, our technical education should be given a very conspicuous place. I would urge that we should spend a very large amount on our technical education. We should not feel complacent by the mere fact that we have sanctioned so much amount in this respect; and our students are getting training in the various trades, viz., Tailoring, Carpentry, Blacksmithy and Cycle Repairing, etc., etc., but we should also give technical education in our schools for the manufacture of arms and ammunition. In England, I saw that education in respect of building of aeroplanes, manufacture of motors and other machine tools and accessories is given both in the colleges and schools there. Immediate arrangements should, therefore, be made to give education in all these trades in our schools and colleges. Along with the technical education, we should also devote our maximum possible attention towards the physical education. This should not be allowed to happen that we totally ignore physical education under the influence of the western education. We have got to make our students physically strong and ideal in their character. In the primitive Aryan Age when the student went to his teacher for the first time, the latter used to say:

Ashma bhavtu te tanuh. ('May thy body be adamant') And simultaneously the Guru (teacher) also used to say: Atmavai putra namosi, i.e., "you are soul, son is thy name."

In other words, the teacher exhorted him that he should have a powerful soul. Therefore keeping in view both these factors that a man is made up of two elements, body and soul, these should be developed. It is then only that education can have true meaning. In the present day education system, our students rise against us and interested parties intervene and create a sense of indiscipline in their ranks. We can get rid of such malpractices only when we admit the fact that we shall have to act upon our ideals both in theory and practice.

I congratulate our honourable Minister of Education because he is a true follower of Mahatma Gandhi. He wants that there should be a classless society in this country. Therefore, he has sanctioned the grant of Rs. 10 lacs for the benefit of the backward classes. But I would like to say that the Harijan students coming from Punjab have not so far been awarded scholarships. This is the fault of the University because there has been a delay in the announcement of their results. The students are not to be blamed for this. Therefore, scholarships should be awarded to them.

There is a sloka from Manusmriti: Etaddesh prasutasya sakashadagrajan-manah. Svayam svayam charitram shiksheran prithvya sarvamanavah.

"(From the Brahmanas born of this land, learned their character and sciences, all the men of the world)" which means that the Brahmanas who were born in this country used to be the teachers of the whole world. We hope that our honourable Education Minister will so arrange that students from different countries of the world come to India for studies just as we send our students to England and other countries to receive training.

Lord Christ was the greatest scholar of India who had studied in the Universities of Taxila and Nalanda. To know this fact, we should read the book "Unknown life of Christ" which has been written by N. Notovitch.

This country was ruined at the time when the power vested in the hands of the Brahmanas and even today it is they who hold sway over this country. I hope that the same very Brahmanas who were responsible for the ruin of this country will resurrect it.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): Sir let me at the very outset.....

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U.P.: General): Sir may I ask you whether you will allow the general discussion first or allow me to move my cut motion first?

Mr. Speaker: Yes. As I said yesterday, the cut motion will surely be allowed to be moved. In fact, on the previous demands of the Health Ministry, I allowed Mr. Frank Anthony to move his cut motion. In case any honourable Member wishes to move a cut, it is better if intimation is given [Mr. Speaker] before-hand, so that I may call upon him first. In this case, I have asked Shrimati G. Durgabai to speak first and therefore after she had finished, the honourable Member can move his cut motion.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: Sir, let me at the very outset offer my congratulations to the honourable the Minister for Education for what he has been able to achieve with the limited resources available for the working of his Ministry. Sir, some of his schemes, like the establishment of a National Museum of Art, Archaeology and Anthropology and also the establishment of a National Cultural Trust for the promotion and fostering of Art, Painting and Drama and also a college of Carnatic music at Madras and an Academy of Hindustani music at Lucknow, they are all praiseworthy and highly commendable, but it is also gratifying to note from the report issued by his Ministry that the schemes of liquidating illiteracy and also universal social adult education have been placed as the first and foremost of the programmes. Sir, if we judge the provisions of this Education Budget in this background, we are sadly disappointed to find that hardly anything is done to achieve these ends. Sir, out of a total budget of 362 crores, only 4½ crores are provided for education, only 1¼ per cent. a very poor percentage indeed, in comparison to the sums allotted to various other Departments. Sir, the bulk of the money is earmarked for Delhi University and also help to the other universities, grants-in-aid to the scientific institutes and other educational institutions, leaving very little surplus for education proper as such. Scores of crores, could be found to all the other departments, but hardly anything is done for elementary education of our masses, 85 per cent. of whom could not even read or write. Sir, it is a very painful thing to talk of mass illiteracy in this country though we are talking boastfully of our Independence and also of international prestige. I consider that unless we launch upon a vigorous propaganda and a vigorous drive to liquidate this illiteracy, our boastful talk of our international prestige and also Independence of India will remain a mockery.

Sir, today, the chief object of my participating in this debate is to draw the attention of the Ministry to the fact that very little has been done to the women's education. Sir, I may not be accused of ventilating sectional grievances, but I have read the pamphlet detailing the activities of the Education Ministry from August 1947 to 1948, and except in a single instance where they have given a grant to the Indian Women's university at Bombay, they have done hardly anything either to encourage or promote the women's education.

Sir, women's education is a provincial subject, I know, but as all Education is a provincial subject this is also to be so, but may I ask what is the purpose in having a Central Advisory Board of Education and also a Bureau of Central Education working under the auspices of this Ministry? Sir, this problem of women's education is so stupendous that it deserves the attention of the Central Advisory Board of Education. In the report of 56 pages, issued by the Ministry, not a single line has been allotted to describe the efforts or the achievements of this Ministry towards promoting women's education. I know, Sir, this problem of women's education is a very old subject, but there is a new way of looking at it. When I am urging the Education Ministry to promote women's education, I am not supposed to be asking them to start more colleges or more schools or give more scholarships.

Mr. Speaker: May I point out to the honourable member that the subject is a provincial one?

Shrimati G. Durgabai: Yes, Sir, I know that it falls within the scope of this Ministry and I have read the report in which they want to liquidate illiteracy and also their programme seems to be to make 50 per cent. of adults literate within a course of five years. I am talking about the women's education, because women form more than 50 per cent. of the population and therefore, I am urging upon the Ministry to make a special note of this matter.

Sir, the problem of women's education is essentially a problem of adult education. You may start more schools; you may start more colleges, but you cannot make the generality of women school-minded or college-minded, because in the case of 99 out of 100 women, their education stops after the Secondary school and also there are ever so many difficulties coming in the way of a married woman. Now they have to prosecute their studies and they will have the leisure to prosecute what they have left at a school-age or at the age of 13 or 14 when they are 25 or 27.

Mr. Speaker: I may again point out that what she is speaking is not irrelevant. That is not my point, but the subject being provincial, any detailed criticism in this House will not be of much avail. I may remind that she has only two minutes now.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: My only recourse is the honourable the Minister for Education. I cannot raise my voice. I am urging him to advise the Provincial Governments to do something more.

This problem is not peculiar to India. England and America have solved this problem by encouraging private studies. But the Educationists in India think that education is education only when a student has put in 85 per cent. or 90 per cent. attendance at a school. Therefore it is that I am urging upon this Ministry to encourage private study. Here I want to pay a tribute to the Benares Hindu University. No University in India has done greater service than the Benares University which has allowed women to appear privately and has thus encouraged a number of private institutions to spring up for women's education. Women's clubs have started coaching students privately. Therefore they have done a great service. Here I am only drawing the attention of the Ministry to one fact. I urge upon the Minister to give incentive to women's education by allowing them to appear privately for all the University examinations. If this is allowed, with a little assistance women will complete their studies at home and appear for University examinations. This will bring university education within the reach of all.

The scheme of universal adult education with a view to make 50 per cent. of the adults literate in a period of five years is a very gigantic one. We require a number of teachers for this purpose and there is a very great demand for qualified women teachers also. But there is lack of incentive for women to go and work, because they have got various difficulties. In addition to the difficulty of transfers where the man and the woman are in Government employment, there is the difficulty of six-hours' compulsory attendance at school. Therefore I urge upon the Education Minister to create facilities for part-time service with a proportionate allowance for them. If this is done we can draw upon the services of a large number of women who are today available and willing to place their services at the disposal of the Minister who has to solve this mass illiteracy problem.

As my time is up, I sit down.

Transfer of Colleges in Delhi to the University Area.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: I move:

"That the demand under the head 'Education' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Sir, when the Delhi University was established, the first grade colleges in Delhi were in a very difficult position. The localities in which they were situated were such as to make the creation of an academic atmosphere almost impossible. Besides, the accommodation in the colleges was also limited and there were no grounds attached to them. It was therefore realised that they should be shifted as soon as possible to new sites. Accordingly, some years ago, new sites were allotted to them and in the Budget for 1947-48 a provision of 5½ lakhs was made to enable Government to give grants to the colleges to put up new buildings, and I suppose, new hostels. The colleges submitted their plans. Nothing was done and the budgetted sum therefore lapsed. In the Budget for the next year, that is for the year 1948-49, a similar provision was made for the same purpose. The Vice-Chancellor called the representatives of the colleges together in order to decide how the money given by Government was to be distributed amongst themselves and the scheme agreed to by the colleges was communicated to the Government. In May 1948 the colleges were asked to submit plans for their development on a five-year basis. This was done, but again the Government, for some reason that we are not aware of, took no action and the budgetted sum again lapsed.

Now, owing to the rise in the cost of building materials, the buildings that were originally expected to cost about 10 lakhs now cost Rs. 30 to 40 lakhs. At first negotiations were carried on between the Government and the University authorities on the basis that the colleges and the Government should share the cost of the new buildings in equal proportion. The Government never expressly agreed to this distribution, but as it did not express its dissent, the University authorities hoped that the basis suggested by them had the approval of Government. Now, however, owing to the increased cost of putting up new buildings, the colleges would find it impossible to collect 20 or 30 lakhs and they are therefore asking that 75 per cent. of the cost of the buildings should be met by Government. I do not know whether this question has been considered by Government. I realise what the financial position of the Government is, as well as any other person. But the University authorities do not want that the Government should find all the money that is required in one year. The Government themselves asked some months ago for plans that could be given effect to fully in five years. The matter still awaits their decision. In the meanwhile, the Delhi University, that was established with high hopes, is unable to carry on its work as efficiently as was expected. I hope, Sir, that the Government will soon arrive at a decision that would enable the four colleges, still remaining where they were, to plan their future development and thus enable the Delhi University to achieve the purpose for which it was founded.

Mr. Speaker: Out motion moved:

हासिल करने के लिये बाहर भेजा जायगा ऐसी तालीम जो हिन्दुस्तान में नहीं मिल सकती। आगे अब इस बात का ख्याल रखा जाय कि जब वह तालीम हासिल करके लौटे तो उनको यहां पर मुनासिब और ठीक जगह पर मुकद्दर किया जाय। इसमें शक नहीं कि गवर्नमेंट को बहुत से आदमियों की जरूरत है। इसमें शक नहीं कि कारखानों को भी बहुत से आदमियों की जरूरत है। इसमें शक नहीं कि पढ़ेलिखे और खास किस्म की तालीम पाये हुए और एक्सपर्ट्स की मुल्क को जरूरत है। लेकिन दूसरी तरफ देखने में आता है और मेरा जातीय तजुर्बा स्पेशल रिक्रूटमेंट बोर्ड के मेम्बर होने की हैसियत से है। मैं इस सिलसिले में मुल्क के मुखतलिफ हिस्सों में घूमा। बहुत से तालीवेइल्म जिनको एजुकेशन डिपार्टमेंट की ओर से बाहर भेजा गया था खास तालीम सीखने के लिये, वह हमारे सामने बेकार की हैसियत से आये। यह लोग इन्डियन सिविल सर्विस और इन्डियन पुलिस सर्विस के उम्मीदवार थे। मैं नाम तो यहां पर किसी का नहीं लूंगा मगर मैं एक मिसाल हाउस के सामने पेश करता हूं। एक साहब ग्रेस्टोलौजी की तालीम के लिये बाहर भेजे गये थे और वहां से वह आला तालीम पाकर आये। हमारे मुल्क में चरागाह की कमी है। हमारे मुल्क में चारे की कमी है। आये दिन इस असेम्बली में सवाल होते हैं कि हिन्दुस्तान का मवेशी क्यों गिर रहा है, क्यों उनकी तरक्की नहीं होती? लेकिन ये साहब जिनको ग्रेस्टोलौजी के लिये बाहर भेजा गया था वह अब एडमिनिस्ट्रेटिव सर्विस में भर्ती होना चाहते हैं। मैं समझता हूं कि वह मुल्क और हकूमत जहां इस तरह की तालीम पाये हुए आदमी बेकार घूमें और उनको जगह न दी जाय और उस तरह से उनकी खास तालीम को जाया करके उनकी खिदमात को हासिल न किया जाय, अच्छा नहीं है। आइन्दा इस बात का ख्याल रखा जाय कि इस तरह की काबलियत पाये हुये आदमियों को बेकार न रखा जाय। यह ठीक, मगर जो आज बेकार हैं उनके बारे में आप क्या करेंगे? इनकी आप फेहरिस्त बनवायें और काम पर लगायें।

माननीय मिनिस्टर ने अपनी रिपोर्ट में कहा है कि वह एक नेशनल म्यूजियम आफ आर्ट एण्ड आरक्यालाजी बनाने जा रहे हैं। उन का यह इरादा अच्छा है, और उस के लिये मैं उनको मुबारिकबाद देता हूं। इसमें संदेह नहीं कि स्कूल से शिक्षा फैलती है लेकिन देश में जागृति पैदा करने के लिये दूसरी संस्थाओं की भी आवश्यकता होती है। Picture Gallery, Museum, Art Collections, ये सब ऐसी चीजें हैं कि जिन से जन-साधारण को अपने इतिहास और नीति का पता चलता है। मैं समझता हूं कि माननीय मिनिस्टर साहब को ऐसी संस्थाएँ बनानी चाहियें कि जहां आर्ट, आरक्यालाजी और anthropology के खजाने इकट्ठे किये जाय, तस्वीर और पत्थर पर खुदाई की चीजें संग्रह की जाय जिससे कि जन-साधारण को कुछ दिलचस्पी भी मिले और उनकी शिक्षा भी हो। एक बात और याद आई, कुछ दिन हुए मैं तंजौर गया था वहां पर मरहूठा राजा की बनाई हुई एक लायब्रेरी है उसमें कई हजार मैनूस्क्रिप्ट हैं और जिन में कितने ही ऐसे हैं जिनका मिलना बहुत कठिन है, लेकिन वहां न तो ठीक जांच है न कोई खोज। सरकार की तरफ से थोड़ी सी मदद दी जाती है। आनरेबिल मिनिस्टर का मैं इस ओर ध्यान दिलाना चाहता हूं कि ये इस लायब्रेरी को सुसंगठित करें, इस से एक बड़ी कीमत वाली चीज बरबाद होने से बच जायेगी। बातें तो मुझे और भी बहुत कुछ कहनी थीं, पर मेरा समय पूरा हो चुका है, और मैं यह व्याख्यान समाप्त करता हूं।

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain (U. P.: General): Sir, I have seen the report of the Education Ministry. It contains a mention of this Ministry's plans and intentions. It tells us what they propose to do. It mentions what they intend to do with regard to basic education and social education. There is a mention of the proposals made by the University Commission and the Man-Power Committee. These are all good things but whatever has been done so far is not quite hope-inspiring. The report contains a mention of schemes but it makes very little mention of actual achievements made. I do not lay any particular blame on the honourable Minister or on his Ministry because it is only about a quarter less than two years that his Ministry started having an independent existence, and how was it possible, during that period, to educate 33 crores of people dispersed over such a vast country, extending far and wide. I hope he will try to carry out, with courage whatever highly planned schemes he has formulated in his report.

Now, I wish to draw the attention of the honourable Minister to a few matters. The honourable Minister must have seen the pamphlet about the Delhi University that has been issued by the persons elected by this Assembly as its representatives on the University Court. A copy of that pamphlet has been supplied to every Member. That pamphlet throws a strange kind of light on the affairs of the Delhi University. I wish to draw the attention of the honourable Minister to all the facts set down in this pamphlet. I do not claim that whatever allegations have been made in this pamphlet are all correct but I do assert that it contains a lot of such things as would warrant investigation.

[Shri Ajit Prasad Jain]

With regard to the last election for the office of Vice-Chancellor of the Delhi University, a complaint was made that a certain gentleman who was the Principal of the Agriculture College and was entitled to take part in this election was deprived of that right. It was said that the Principal of the Agriculture College could not take part in it. The reason advanced in this connection was that the Principal of the Agriculture College could take part in the election in the capacity of a Dean. The authors of the pamphlet have made the assertion that he used to take part in it previously in the capacity of the Principal. Similarly there is another complaint in regard to the office of the Dean of Medicine. The election of the Dean was made one day prior to the election of the Vice-Chancellor. The election was not made in the regular way. The quorum should have consisted of four persons but he was elected by three only. If it is correct that the election of the Vice-Chancellor was conducted with such irregularity then I would like the honourable Minister to give his attention to that matter because when such disorder exists at the top there is a probability of considerable confusion prevailing in the lower strata of the University. The honourable Minister should specially attend to these matters.

It is mentioned at page 26 of the report that has been presented on behalf of this Department that those scholars who are sent abroad for education would be sent out for special and specified purposes—to acquire technical and scientific education—such education as cannot be acquired in India. In future care must be taken that when they return after having acquired the education they should be appointed here on proper and suitable posts. There is no doubt the Government is in need of lots of men. There is no doubt the factories are also in need of plenty of men. There is no doubt the country is in need of educated people, persons with special training and experts. On the other hand, what do we find? This is my personal experience as a member of the Special Recruitment Board. I have had a round of the different parts of the country in that connection. Several scholars who had been sent abroad by the Education Department for acquiring special instruction appeared before us as unemployed persons. These people were candidates for the Indian Civil Service and the Indian Police Service. I am not going to name anyone here but I would cite one instance before the House. One gentleman had been sent out for studies in Grastology. He came back after receiving high education. Our country lacks pastures. Our country suffers from scarcity of fodder. Every time questions are asked in this Assembly why are the cattle in India deteriorating and why there is no improvement on that score. But this gentleman who had been sent out to study Grastology now wants to get into the Administrative Service. I think it is not a good country and it is not a good Government where men who have been so educated should go about unemployed and should not be provided with jobs, where their special education is allowed to be wasted and their services are not availed of. Care should be taken in future to see that such qualified persons are not kept unemployed. That being settled, what are you going to do about those who are unemployed today? You should have a list of such persons prepared and provide them with jobs. There is one thing more to which I wish to draw the attention of the honourable Minister; this relates to the National Library. The National Library in Calcutta is a national institution. But I think it will not do to have just one national library for such a big country. You should establish a large number of libraries which might be within the reach of the different parts of the country, so that those students who should desire to pursue higher education and carry on research work might be able to draw upon these libraries.

The honourable Minister has stated in his report that he is going to found a National Museum of Art and Archaeology. This is a good proposal for which I congratulate him. There is no doubt the school is an instrument for the spread of education but other institutions are also necessary for the sake of creating an awakening in the country. A Picture Gallery, Museum, Art Collections are the things whereby the common people come to know about their history and politics. I think the honourable Minister should establish such institutions where the treasures of art, archaeology and anthropology might be stored up and collections of paintings and sculpture might be kept which might not only serve as objects of interest to the public at large but also provide for their education.

Here I am reminded of something else. Some days back I went to Tanjore. There is a library that was founded by a Mahratta Raja. It contains several thousand manuscripts including many rare ones. But, there is neither a proper appraisal nor research. Some little aid is given by the Government. I wish to draw the attention of the honourable Minister to it and would ask him to have it reorganised. This would save a very valuable thing from being lost. There are many more things that I had to say but my time is over and so I close.

بیگم اعجاز رسول : جناب اسپیکر صاحب ! میرا مقصد اس وقت اس مباحثہ میں حصہ لینے کا یہ ہے کہ میں جناب وزیر تعلیم کا دھیان ایک خاص اور اہم مسئلہ کی طرف مبذول کرلوں۔ یہ ضرورت اس لئے پڑی کہ میں نے جب اس رپورٹ کا مطالعہ کیا جو ایجوکیشن منسٹری سے ہم کو دی گئی ہے۔ تو اس میں اس مسئلہ کے متعلق کوئی ذکر نہیں ہے۔ جناب وزیر تعلیم اس امر سے بخوبی واقف ہیں کہ اس پچھلے ایک سال کے عرصہ میں اس خاص ضرورت کی طرف جناب منسٹر صاحب کا دھیان دلایا گیا ہے اور وہ ہے اقلیت کے بچوں کی ابتدائی تعلیم کا مسئلہ۔ جناب والا ! چونکہ اس رپورٹ میں اس اہم مسئلہ کے متعلق کوئی گورنمنٹ کی پالیسی کا ذکر نہیں ہے اس لئے میں یہ کہنا چاہتی ہوں کہ یہ ایک ایسا مسئلہ ہے کہ جس کے متعلق ہمیں امید ہے کہ سرکار اپنی پالیسی کا بہت صاف طریقہ پر اظہار کر دیگی۔ آپ کو معلوم ہے کہ پچھلے کانستیٹیوٹ ایسبلی کے سیشن میں اس مسئلہ کے اوپر بحث مباحثہ ہوا۔ یہ امر قابل قبول ہی نہیں بلکہ دنیا کے تمام ملکوں میں یہ اصول مان لیا گیا ہے کہ بچے کی ابتدائی تعلیم اس کی مادری زبان میں ہونی چاہیئے۔ اس پر مجھے گورنمنٹ سے دوبارہ کوئی اصرار کرنے کی ضرورت محسوس نہیں ہوتی۔ لیکن مجھے ضرورت اس چیز کی اس لئے محسوس ہوئی کہ جناب وزیر تعلیم کے پاس اس کے متعلق بہت کافی مصالحہ موجود ہے کہ کس طریقہ پر پچھلے ایک سال میں اس مسئلہ کے اوپر صوبوں کی سرکاریں عمل کر رہی ہیں۔

ان کی مادری زبان میں ہو - جس وقت یہ مسئلہ کانستٹی ٹیوٹیلنٹ اسمبلی میں زیر بحث تھا اس وقت جناب وزیر اعظم نے مجھے ایک خط تحریر فرمایا تھا جس میں انہوں نے اس چیز کو قبول کیا اور اس اصول کو پورے طور پر مانا کہ یہ ضروری ہے کہ بچوں کی ابتدائی تعلیم ان کو مادری زبان میں دی جائے - اس لئے میں سمجھتی ہوں کہ گورنمنٹ کے لئے یہ ضروری ہے کہ وہ اپنی پالیسی کا صاف طور پر اظہار کر دے اور صوبوں کو ہدایت دے کہ پالیسی پر عمل کریں - ہمارے صوبے میں ۱۰۰ سالہ تجربہ پچھلے سال میں یہ رہا ہے کہ باوجود گورنمنٹ کے ان خیالات کے سب سے زیادہ نقصان مسلمان بچوں کو پہنچ رہا ہے - کیونکہ ان کے لئے کوئی انتظام اس سلسلے میں نہیں ہوا ہے - ان کے لئے یہ بہت ضروری ہے کہ ان کی تعلیم ان کی مادری زبان میں ہونی چاہیئے اور زبان ہی نہیں بلکہ Script کا بھی مسئلہ ان کے لئے بہت حد تک صاف ہو جانا چاہیئے - یہاں میں اس بات کو صاف طور پر ظاہر کر دینا چاہتی ہوں کہ ہم میں سے کوئی بھی ایسا نہیں ہے جو اسٹیٹ کی زبان سیکھنے یا اپنے بچوں کو سکھانے یا پڑھانے سے انکار کرے - میں سمجھتی ہوں کہ ہر فرقہ کے لوگوں کے لئے ضروری ہے کہ جہاں کہیں وہ رہتے ہوں وہاں کی اسٹیٹ کی زبان وہ اچھی طرح سے سیکھیں کیونکہ یہ انہیں کے لئے فائدہ مند ہے - جس سے کہ وہ آگے چل کر ملازمتوں میں اور ہر طرح کے کاموں میں پورا حصہ لے سکیں - اور اگر نہ سیکھیں گے تو انہیں کا نقصان ہے - لیکن جیسا کہ میں نے کہا بچوں کی ابتدائی تعلیم ان کی مادری زبان میں ہونا ضروری ہے اور یہ ایک ایسا مسئلہ ہے کہ اس پر جب تک سنٹرل گورنمنٹ کی طرف سے صاف طور پر اظہار نہیں ہو جاتا تب تک بہت سے لوگوں کو غلط فہمی ہونے کا اندیشہ ہے - میں نے جیسا کہا یہ صرف ہمارے صوبہ سے ہی تعلق نہیں رکھتا ہے بلکہ ہر جگہ سے تعلق رکھتا ہے - مثلاً اگر مدراسی یا بنگالی بچے اتنی تعداد میں ہوں کہ اگر وہ اسکول میں جاتے ہیں اور اگر اسکول میں ان کو ان کی مادری زبان میں تعلیم دینے کے بجائے کسی اور زبان میں ابتدائی تعلیم دی جاتی ہے تو اس سے بڑا نقصان پہنچتا ہے - یہ ضروری ہے کہ ان کو ابتدائی تعلیم انہیں کی زبان میں ملے اور اسی حالت میں ان کی تعلیم مکمل ہو سکتی ہے - اس لئے میں یہ سمجھتی ہوں کہ اگر ایسے بچے اتنی تعداد میں اسکول جاتے ہوں کہ وہاں مدرسوں میں ان کی مادری زبان میں تعلیم دینے کا انتظام ہو سکتا ہے یا ہونا ضروری ہے تو ان کے لئے یہ انتظام ہونا چاہیئے - وہاں پر ان کے لئے استاد مہیا کئے جائیں جو ان کو انکی مادری زبان میں تعلیم دے سکیں -

Begum Aizaz Rasul (U. P. Muslim): Sir, my object in participating in this discussion at present is that I should invite the attention of the honourable Minister to a very important and vital issue. This necessity arose 3 P.M. after I had gone through the Report which has been presented to us by the Ministry of Education and found that it did not contain any mention to this effect. The honourable Minister is very well aware of the fact that his attention had been drawn to this vital necessity during the preceding year, and that is, the problem of primary education concerning the children of the minorities. Sir, since this Report does not mention anything with regard to the Government's policy towards this important problem, I would, therefore, like to submit that we have every hope that the Government will elucidate their policy in this direction in a very explicit manner. You know that there was a heated discussion over this matter during the last session of the Constituent Assembly. Not only is this an admitted fact but this principle has been accepted in all the countries of the world that the primary education of a child should be imparted in his mother-tongue. It is, therefore, hardly necessary for me to emphasize upon this point any more. But I felt the necessity for the obvious reason since the honourable Minister has got sufficient data in his possession which would reveal as to how the various Provincial Governments have been acting upon in this direction during the preceding one year.

Sir, this problem does not affect any particular religion or community. On the contrary, this problem vitally affects almost all the religions and communities. It is necessary in the interest of the primary education of the children that that should be imparted to them in their own mother-tongue. When this matter was under discussion in the Constituent Assembly, the honourable the Prime Minister wrote to me a letter wherein he admitted this fact and accepted this principle in toto viz., it is essential that the primary education of the children should be imparted in their mother-tongue. Therefore, I feel that the Government should necessarily clarify their policy and issue instructions to the Provinces to follow this.

In our own Province, our experience during the past year has been that in spite of these views having been expressed by the Government, it is the Muslim children who are being hard hit, because no arrangements have been made for them in this respect. In their case, it is most essential that the medium of the primary education should be their own mother-tongue. Not only is the question of their mother-tongue involved, but the question of their script also should be decided to a very great extent. I should like to make it quite clear that there is none among us who could either refuse to learn the State language himself or let his children read and write it. I feel that it is essential for the people of every community, irrespective of the fact as to where they reside, to acquire sufficient knowledge of the State language in vogue there; because this will stand them in good stead, and also enable them to get full share in the services as well as other activities in future. And if they do not learn this, it is they alone who will suffer. But just as I have stated, the medium of primary education of the children should necessarily be their own mother-tongue. This is a vital issue and unless the Central Government elucidate their policy towards this aspect, it is apprehended lest it may not give rise to misunderstanding amongst a large number of people. Just as I have pointed out, this does not only affect our Province, but concerns every place, for instance, if there is a sufficiently large number of Bengali and Madras school-going children and they are imparted primary education in a language other than their own mother-tongue, then it is likely to affect them adversely. It, therefore, follows from this that it is most essential, that the medium of their primary education should be their own mother-tongue, and it is then only that their education can be complete. Therefore, I think that if arrangements can be made in the schools for imparting education to such a large number of school-going children in their mother-tongue, or in case it is considered expedient to do so, then this should be done. They should be provided there with the teachers who may be able to teach them through the medium of their mother-tongue.

Therefore, I feel that this problem does not only affect the Muslims alone, but the whole position should be clarified for the sake of the other minorities as well; and it is most essential that the Government should elucidate their policy in this respect; and it is all the more necessary to implement this.

Sir, I cannot dwell upon this matter at any greater length for lack of time. I would congratulate the honourable Minister for Education that the schemes which he has presented are worth accepting. I think the Report of the University Commission which has been set up will be presented to us as soon as possible. This is a very vital and important issue for which the whole country is awaiting very eagerly as what the future set up of the University education will be. For this, I would congratulate the honourable Minister.

Shri A. V. Thakkar (Saurashtra): I am speaking today as a common man in the street. I am not a highly educated man. I have not got any degree in Arts or Science. I was a mere working engineer, and therefore I speak like a common man in the street, in the village and in the field.

We are told, and it is dinned into our ears, that education is a provincial subject. If so, why should there be a Ministry of Education in the Centre? If this Ministry takes full interest—and I do not grudge that it is taking the fullest interest—in the colleges, in technical subjects, in Arts and Science, in anthropology, in Archaeology, even in museums and national art galleries, I welcome it but at the same time why do you give a go-by to the common man. The honourable the Education Minister has said in his report, and every one who is here knows it that a scheme of Rs. 540 lakhs for distribution in the provinces for advancing compulsory, basic and social education has been turned down. It has not been accepted by the Cabinet. I am making an humble appeal to the Finance Minister whether the axe of economy should have fallen on this poor Ministry of Education. Why should it be so? We are all pledged to adult franchise. Is this the way to carry out adult franchise by denying everything and every proposal of health to the Provincial Ministries, to the Provincial Governments and cutting it down? I was glad to see that a sum of one crore of rupees that was demanded by the Education Minister for social education has been accepted. That is one relieving feature of this Budget. But why has the whole of the grant of Rs. 540 lakhs been cut down altogether, except for a small item of Rs. 50 lakhs which is ear-marked for the training of ordinary teachers? And let me tell you, Sir, that elementary education, the compulsory education, has been delayed for decades and decades. The late Mr. Gokhale introduced the first resolution and the Bill in the year 1910 and 1911. Forty years have rolled by and nothing practical has been done. Excuse me, I am not misjudging the Provincial Governments that have done a part of their work. Bombay and Madras have advanced far in that respect. But the other provinces cannot do it for want of money. Unless we from the Centre help them in the starting of compulsory education, they will never be able to take it up. The Minister of Education set up the Kher Committee, and again, Mr. Kher, modest man as he is, recommended that only 30 per cent. of the expenses on compulsory education should come from the Centre and 70 per cent. will be contributed by the provinces but there is not a single pie in respect of that 30 per cent. coming forward, at least in the coming year 1949-50.

Mr. Sargent evolved a scheme for us, which when it was in full fruition would cost us Rs. 400 crores. That scheme, may I say, is almost being forgotten. The Kher Committee brought down, or tried to bring down the period from 40 years to 16 years. But I find that it is as far away as possible and I see no signs of its coming, not even of the first step being taken towards realizing compulsory education in the country. As it is known I am a man who even in my present state of life likes to go into the villages and find out their wants and needs and into whichever village I go—if it is a school-less village—the first thing they ask for, is a school. I roam in the Adibasi areas of Orissa, the Central Provinces, the Vindhya Pradesh, Rajputana, Madhya Bharat, etc., and even those Bhils, Gonds and Santhals ask for schools, schools and schools. How can the Provincial Governments with their limited resources give them the adequate number of schools? And in order to give them good schools, good teachers is the first requisite, and unless we have scores of training colleges, primary teachers' training colleges spread throughout the country, and that at the expense of the Centre alone, the number of requisite teachers will never come forward and the quality of their work will never improve. It is said that the army of teachers would come by conscription. It is easy to say that it should come by conscription but conscription itself is a very very costly process. You will have to give honorariums and T.As. You cannot go and simply paldo the people and make them teach in schools. So you must provide proper remuneration for the teachers. So the provision of teachers is the first necessity.

The provision of girls' schools is another very great necessity. I support the fervent appeal of sister Durgabai. She has made a very good appeal on behalf of women. Only 6 per cent. of the women in our country are literate and 94 per cent. are illiterate. Can we make any progress at this slow rate in the year 1949? I am afraid not.

I sympathise with the honourable Minister in charge of Education. This morning I was almost weeping with the Minister of Health who said that she had no funds, no funds and no funds. The same is the case with Education Minister. If the Finance Minister is not able to spare more than 20 crores out of a revenue budget of 322 crores, how can we go on? How can the nation build its future? It is not possible. It may be said that we are just now under the stress of economy and we must cut down every thing. But every thing is not cut down. It is only the poor departments of Education, Health and Labour, nation-building departments, which are cut down, ruthlessly, if I may say so.

People talk of adult franchise. Why do we give adult franchise to illiterate people? Better stop it. Let us say to the world that we are not ready for it yet. Two of our important leaders have said so already,—Dr. Rajendra Prasad and Mr. Harikrishna Mehtab of Orissa. They have said that we are not fit for adult franchise. Of course with our 80 per cent. of male illiteracy and 94 per cent. of female illiteracy how can we make progress? Therefore I make an earnest appeal to all of you, one and all, that unless we give much more attention to free compulsory, social and basic education we can never make any progress.

کے سامنے تھیں۔ ضرورت پڑنا ہوئی کہ پورے اسکیم کا نقشہ نئے سرے سے بنایا جائے۔ اور ہو کالج کے معاملہ کو نئے سرے سے جانچا جائے۔ بہر حال میں انہیں یقین دلانا کہ گورنمنٹ کی طرف سے اس کام میں غفلت نہیں ہوگی۔ پوری کوشش کی جائیگی کہ اسکیم جلد عمل میں آجائے اور اب زیادہ مدت تک لٹکی ہوئی نہ رہے۔

Shri Deshbandu Gupta : Sir, may I interrupt the honourable Minister?

شری دیش بندھو گپتا : کیا یہ امر واقعہ نہیں ہے کہ ہندو کالج دہلی کے ہوسٹل کی بلڈنگ دین سال سے پڑی ہوئی ہے اور اس پر گورنمنٹ نے کوئی توجہ نہیں کی ہے؟
آنریبل مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد : جہاں تک حالات میرے علم میں آئے ہیں۔ میں کہہ سکتا ہوں کہ اس بلڈنگ کے بارے میں ایک مقدمہ عدالت میں چل رہا ہے۔ جب تک اس کا فیصلہ نہ ہو جائے گورنمنٹ کچھ نہیں کر سکتی۔

شری دیش بندھو گپتا : جی نہیں۔ کیا یہ واقعہ نہیں کہ گورنمنٹ نے اب تک اسپر کوئی غور نہیں کیا ہے۔ اور نہ کوئی انکوائری کمیٹی بٹھائی ہے؟
آنریبل مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد : اس بارے میں میں کچھ نہیں کہہ سکتا۔

شری دیش بندھو گپتا : میں یہ دریافت کروں گا کہ کیا وائس چانسلر سے اسکے متعلق پوچھا گیا ہے کہ گورنمنٹ کس حد تک ذمہ دار ہے اور کیا اس پر تین لاکھ روپیہ خرچ ہو چکا ہے۔

آنریبل مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد : کیا ایجوکیشن منسٹری کے علم میں یہ بات لائی گئی ہے؟

شری دیش بندھو گپتا : جی نہیں۔

آنریبل مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد : جب ایجوکیشن منسٹری کے سامنے یہ معاملہ نہیں لایا گیا تو پھر آنریبل مینبر شاکیت کس بات کی کر رہے ہیں؟ کچھ معلوم ہوا ہے۔ وہ صرف یہ ہے کہ بلڈنگ کے متعلق ایک مقدمہ عدالت میں زیر غور ہے۔ اور اسکے فیصلے کا انتظار کیا جا رہا ہے۔

لالہ دیپن بندھو کہتا

Mr. Speaker: The time is already up for the other demands and let us not prolong this by further discussion.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: On a point of personal explanation.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member has already distributed the pamphlet.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: I only want to ask whether the honourable Minister has himself gone into the matter and whether he is satisfied.

آنریبل مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد: میں نے خود تحقیقات کی ہے اور اگر اب بھی معلوم

بیگم اعجاز رسول صاحبہ نے اس بات پر توجہ دلائی ہے کہ بچوں کی ابتدائی تعلیم مادری زبان کے ذریعے ہونی چاہئے اور گورنمنٹ آف انڈیا کو چاہئے کہ اس بارے میں ایک صاف فیصلہ کر دے۔ میں انہیں یاد دلاتا کہ اس بارے میں صاف اور قطعی فیصلہ ہو چکا ہے اور کوئی بات بانی نہیں رہی ہے۔ سنٹرل اتھارٹیز بورڈ آف ایجوکیشن نے صاف اور قطعی لفظوں میں یہ فیصلہ کیا ہے کہ بیسک تعلیم مادری زبان کے ذریعے ہونی چاہئے، کیونکہ تعلیم کا قدرتی اور صحیح ذریعہ یہی ہے۔ گورنمنٹ آف انڈیا بھی گزشتہ سال اگست میں ایک ریزولوشن کے ذریعہ اس اصل پر زور دے چکی ہے اور عام طور پر یہ بنیادی بات تسلیم کر لی گئی ہے۔ دراصل ایچ۔اے۔اے۔اے وقت پیدا ہوتا ہے جب ایک گروہ کی زبان میں اور صوبے کی حکومت کی زبان میں اختلاف ہوتا ہے۔ مثلاً بہار میں بدگالی زبان بولنے والی جماعتیں ہیں اس صورت میں سنٹرل اتھارٹیز بورڈ کی تجویز یہ ہے کہ ابتدائی تعلیم مادری زبان کے ذریعے ہو اور پانچویں درجہ کے بعد اسٹیٹ کی زبان کی پڑھائی شروع کی جائے، لیکن ذریعہ تعلیم مادری زبان ہی رہے۔

مولانا ابوالکلام آزاد: اگر ایک گروہ کی مادری زبان وہ نہیں ہے جسے صوبے کی حکومت نے سرکاری زبان قرار دیا ہے، تو اس صورت میں یہ ماننا پڑے گا کہ صوبے کے ہر باشندے کو اسٹیٹ کی زبان سیکھنی چاہئے ورنہ خود اسی کا نقصان ہوگا۔ یہ بات

بھی ظاہر ہے کہ یونیورسٹی درجے کی تعلیم مختلف زبانوں کے ذریعے نہیں دی جا سکتی۔ ایک ہی زبان ماننی پڑے گی۔ اور وہ سرکاری زبان ہو گی۔ اس کے سوا معاملہ کا کوئی عملی حل نہیں ہو سکتا۔

غور کرنے کے لئے ہتھائی گئی تھی - کمیٹی نے معاملہ کے سارے پہلوؤں پر سوچ بچار کیا ہے اور سولہ برس کی ایک مکمل اسکیم تیار کر کے پیش کر دی - دس برس جونیئر بیسک ایجوکیشن کے لئے اور پھر مزید چھ برس سینئر بیسک ایجوکیشن کے لئے - ایجوکیشن منسٹری چاہتی تھی کہ نئے مالی برس سے اس اسکیم پر عملدرآمد شروع ہو جائے - اس کے لئے پانچ کروڑ چالیس لاکھ روپیہ کی ضرورت تھی - مجھے سخت دکھتے ہوئے دل کے ساتھ کہنا پڑتا ہے - کہ اس کا انتظام نہیں کیا جا سکا اور اسکیم کا کام ملتوی کر دینا پڑا - مجھے یہ دیکھ کر نہایت خوشی ہوئی کہ تھاکر بابا صاحب بھی میرے دل کے اس دکھ میں شریک ہیں اور دوسرے ممبروں نے بھی روپیہ کی کمی پوری طرح محسوس کی ہے - لیکن میں آپ سے کہونگا کہ صرف اتنا ہی کافی نہیں ہے آپ کو پوری سنجیدگی کے ساتھ اپنی ذمہ داری محسوس کرنی چاہیئے اور غور کرنا چاہیئے کہ اس صورت حال کا علاج کیا ہے؟ کئی دوستوں نے فنانس منسٹری کی شکایت کی ہے اور اسے توجہ دلائی ہے کہ وہ نیشنل بانڈز کاموں کی اہمیت زیادہ محسوس کرے مگر میں کہونگا کہ فنانس منسٹری کی شکایت معاملہ کو حل نہیں کر سکتی - دراصل معاملہ کا اصلی حل خود آپ کے ہاتھ میں ہے - فنانس منسٹری آپ کے خزانے کا حساب کتاب رکھتی ہے لیکن خرچ کرنے کا اختیار آپ کو ہے - اگر آپ واقعی محسوس کرتے ہیں کہ تعلیم کے لئے زیادہ خرچ کرنا چاہیئے تو آپ کو ایک صاف اور چٹھی تلی تجویز اس ہاؤس میں منظر کوئی چاہئے کہ سنٹرل ریونیو کا کم از کم دس فیصدی حصہ تعلیم کے لئے نکالا جائے - جب تک اس طرح کی کرنی کارروائی نہیں کی جائیگی قوم کی تعلیم کی گتھی کبھی نہیں سلجھیگی -

(English translation of the above speech).

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad (Minister of Education): Sir, as I am not feeling well therefore I think you would kindly allow me to speak while sitting.

At the very outset I would submit a few words about the time that has been allotted this year for Education Budget. It has generally been complained that very little time has been allotted and not only for Education but for Health and Labour Ministries also an acute shortage of time has been felt. I am fully in favour of this complaint. Without the least doubt it is essential that we may take more active interest in those matters that pertain to the nation building activities and be able to scrutinise the matter in more details. I assure you that the treasury benches also, from where I am speaking, have also felt this necessity. We have decided that from next year one full day will be set apart for Education. As regards Labour and Health also I hope more time will be allotted.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): For Transport also.

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: Yes, sufficient time should be allotted for this also. In this connection only 6 speeches have been made. The object of the first speech, as far as I have been able to understand, was that while planning the scheme of national education we have not to copy the Western education only but have to plan our own particular scheme of education. I think that it is such an acknowledged fact that there can be no two opinions about it. Without doubt we cannot refrain ourselves from imparting instruction in modern sciences and knowledge. We have to go forward on the way of learning. We have not to recede. But besides this we have to keep in mind certain other facts also. We cannot forget them in any way. India has got a definite civilization of her own. India has a history of her own and has well developed philosophy and metaphysics. She has her own traditions about mental and spiritual life. She has taken a conspicuous and splendid share in the development and diffusion of human knowledge and civilization. Hence it is essential that we should preserve our splendid heritage and draw up such a scheme of our national education, in the outline of which the influence of Indian Culture and Spiritualism may be fully apparent. The outline of our national education should be modern but the spirit must be Indian. I will assure this House that the Education Ministry has before her such a plan and as far as this aim is concerned the Government is wholeheartedly with them.

My honourable friend has drawn attention towards one more point. He acknowledges the fact that for higher studies in scientific and technical subjects Indian students should be sent to foreign countries. But he likes this work to be done in such a manner whereby our objective may be achieved at the earliest and then after that we may not stand in need of sending any more students to foreign countries. I am fully in support of this view point. I would like to assure them that the Government have drawn up the new overseas scholarship scheme with this very objective in view and this scheme has to come into force from the new financial year. Under this scheme the Government wish to send every year a certain number of Indian students to foreign countries. But the object of sending them to foreign countries is that necessity of sending students abroad may at the earliest come to an end. For attaining this object it was essential to investigate the educational facilities that are available in all the existing institutions of the country and to ascertain their weak points also. Then in order to substantiate those aspects that may prove to be weak, particular educational subjects be selected, and for those subjects only students be sent to foreign countries. Besides this special help may be given to the existing institutions for making suitable arrangements for higher technical education and as far as possible new institutions also be started at the earliest. So the Education Ministry is working in this manner and the details you have read in the report of the Ministry.

As you know the over-seas scholarship scheme was started by the previous Government in 1945 and some batches of students had been sent to the foreign countries. But when I took charge of the Education Ministry on 15th January, 1947 then at once I came to know that the scheme has not been worked on proper lines and some defects of fundamental character are working therein. The first and foremost defect has been that the scheme was not planned in such a way whereby efforts may have been made to take into consideration all these important aspects. Special emphasis was laid on the fact that maximum number of students be sent to foreign countries for technical subjects but sufficient attention was not paid for the selection of the subjects for training for which students were to be sent abroad so that they might properly make up our present needs and deficiencies in the educational institutions. The result was that the sphere of benefit accruing from this scheme was considerably narrowed down and as much benefit the country was to have could not be had.

One more mistake was committed whereby a new type of complication has been produced, namely, a great difficulty is being felt in giving immediate employment to all the students who are returning from foreign countries after completing their studies. An honourable member has just given out in his speech that he has come to know of the case of a certain gentleman who was sent abroad under the over-seas scholarship scheme. He has now returned after completing his studies but is sitting idle. The honourable member has come to know only of one such case, but I would like to tell him that more than one such cases have come within my knowledge and I fear that in future more such cases will come to our knowledge, but this is the inevitable result of the defects of the previous over-seas scholarship scheme. As far as possible we are trying to improve the situation but we cannot escape the consequences of the past mistakes.

In that scheme it was decided that the various departments of the Provincial and Central Governments may be consulted as to what kind of persons they would require for their work in future and for which technical subjects they want students to be sent to foreign countries. So the Education Department of the past did likewise and questionnaires were sent to the different departments. It was war-time and it was generally thought that the development schemes would surely be started after war and for these schemes technical experts would be required. Keeping this imaginary plan of hope and expectation before them every department selected a number of subjects and referred them to the Education Department. The Education Department announced those very subjects and the selection board after selecting the students sent them to foreign countries. In the meantime the war came to an end but the financial and political condition of the country assumed such a trend that the development schemes, whose imaginary plans had been drawn up, could not be started and even now it cannot be said whether they can be started or not. The results is that when these state scholars return after finishing their courses of studies of 2—3 years then a majority of them come to know that the projects for which they had been sent have not so far been started and so they cannot be given immediate employment.

Now one more obstacle has also sprung up, about which no one could have the slightest doubt or suspicion, namely, the division of the country took place and a large number of Government servants migrated to this country from Pakistan. Besides this a huge influx of refugees had to turn its face towards India. It was the foremost duty of the Government to provide employment to these unfortunate persons. So we had to come to the decision that the refugees should be given first preference while making appointments for all those posts that might fall vacant. The result was that the vacancies that could be created for these state scholars in Government service, were to a great extent filled.

From what I have said to you I do not mean to say that the present Government wants to shirk its responsibility by laying the fault on the previous Government. The Government cannot do so. The Government are fully conscious of its responsibilities. The Government are making all possible efforts to give employment to these state scholars so that the maximum benefit of their education could be had. So a greater number of the state scholars, that have so far returned from foreign countries, have been given employments and the remaining ones also will be given employment in the very near future. Of course, the Government expects at least so much that it may not be held responsible for the state of affairs that has been created.

I am in full agreement with the motive behind the things upon which stress has been laid by Shrimati Durga Bai. No program of national education can be appropriate if it does not give full consideration to the education and advancement of one-half of the society, that is the women. The Central Government is doing whatever it can in this connection and is going to do it with an even greater speed. But with regard to those matters which concern the provincial governments or the universities I cannot say anything with absolute confidence at this time. The Central Government can give them its advice and can also exert pressure to a certain extent but the final decision has to be made by them. At any rate, I should assure her that the Government would certainly make whatever endeavours it can in that direction.

The Honourable Pundit Hirday Nath Kunzru has drawn attention to the fact that the scheme to shift the Delhi colleges to the university grounds has not been put into practice yet and the matter has constantly been deferred. In so far as matters have come to my notice I can say that the responsibility for that state of affairs does not lie with the Government. Matters had taken such a turn that the scheme could not be put into effect immediately. The scheme had been planned out several years back. The circumstances changed completely after the war. A building that could then be built at an expense of one lakh rupees cannot now be constructed even at a cost of five lakhs. Then the difficulties that have arisen in the matter of procurement of building material are also known to everybody. The necessity arose that a plan of the entire scheme be prepared anew and the case of each college judged afresh. At any rate, I would assure him that there would be no negligence on the part of the Government in this behalf. Full efforts will be made that the scheme be put into effect at an early date and that it should not remain in abeyance for long.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): Sir, may I interrupt the honourable Minister? Is it not a fact that the hostel building of the Hindu College, Delhi has remained as it is for the last three years and the Government has paid no attention to it?

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: In so far as matters have come to my notice I can say that a case is going on in court in regard to this building and the Government cannot do anything until this case is decided.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: No, Sir. Is it not a fact that the Government has paid no attention to it so far, nor have they appointed any enquiry committee?

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: I can say nothing in that connection.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: I would enquire whether the Vice-Chancellor has been asked about it. How far is Government responsible for it? Have rupees three lakhs been spent in this connection?

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: Has this matter been brought to the notice of the Education Ministry?

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: No, Sir.

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: If this matter has not been brought before the Ministry of Education what is the honourable member complaining about? Whatever I have come to know is just this much that a case about the building is pending in court and its decision is being waited for.

An honourable member has mentioned some irregularities of the Delhi University and has, in that connection, referred to a pamphlet. I feel that the facts have not come before him in their true perspective. When the true position comes before him he will be satisfied. The matter relates to that meeting of the Delhi University Council that was held in November last for the election of the Vice-Chancellor. The matter was brought to my notice on the very day this meeting was to be held. I made an inquiry without delay and duly called for a written reply from the University. The facts that emerged as a result of the inquiry did not contain anything so objectionable as to call for intervention on the part of the Government. The result was that the matter ended at that stage. I fail to understand what necessity has arisen now after four months to reagitate this matter all over again.

May I tell the House what the true position is? According to the rules of the University principals of colleges are appointed members of the Executive Council. The objection has been raised that the Principal of the Agriculture College was not called in his capacity as a member of the Council. The Vice-Chancellor, however, states that the Agriculture College has not yet become a recognised University college, that correspondence is going on in this connection between the University and the Ministry of Agriculture and that until this matter is decided and the college attains the status of a recognised institution its Principal cannot take part in the meeting of the Council in the capacity of a member. In reply to this statement it has been said that the ex-Principal of the Agriculture College did participate in the Council meeting. In reply to this the Vice-Chancellor has stated positively that he was not called in the capacity of a member but by special invitation and that, at any rate, he did not take part in the voting. Now the question is are both these facts true or not? If they are correct no irregularity of any kind is proved. No such thing has come to the notice of the Government as might cause them to doubt the correctness of these two facts and hence there appears to be no reason why it should interfere in the internal administration of the University.

Another case cited is that relating to the election of the Dean of Medicine. It has been alleged that his election was not conducted in a proper manner. I regret my time is over and I cannot therefore go into this matter in greater detail. The Vice-Chancellor's version is like this. The Committee consists of six members and that there is no specified quorum. Two of the members have already recorded their vote in favour of the candidate before the meeting and made a plea that they could not participate in the meeting. There was only one candidate. The question of a contest between more than one candidate did not arise. There was a meeting of the remaining members who gave their vote in his favour and elected him. Now, I should like to know, in view of this statement, what was the objectionable part of the business on the score of which the Government might have decided to intervene.

This fact should be kept in view that the University is an autonomous body, and so long as concrete instances are not brought to the notice of the Government, they cannot interfere in its internal administration.

The honourable member should consider the statement made by me in respect of these two points. If he has got any further information that would give a clear proof of the irregularities in the existing management of the University, then he should bring it to the notice of the Government. The Government can never suffer the presence of any sort of irregularities in the administration of the Delhi University, and that they should keep quiet over it.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: I would.....

Mr. Speaker: The time is already up for the other demands and let us not prolong this by further discussion.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: On a point of personal explanation.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member has already distributed the pamphlet.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: I only want to ask whether the honourable Minister has himself gone into the matter and whether he is satisfied.

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: I have myself made necessary enquiries and even if it is found that whatever I have stated is incorrect, then I am prepared to institute further enquiries.

The honourable Member Begum Aizaz Rasul has drawn attention towards the necessity of imparting primary education to the children in their mother-tongue and urged the Government of India to lay down a clear-cut policy in this respect. I would like to tell her in this connection that this question has already been decided once for all and there is nothing more to be done. The Central Advisory Board of Education have explicitly laid down that the medium of basic education should be the mother tongue, because this is the natural and appropriate medium for imparting education. The Government of India have already emphasized upon this principle through their Resolution of August, last year and this fundamental principle has generally been accepted. As a matter of fact, the difficulty arises only at that time when there is a difference between the language spoken by one group of people and the State language of the Province concerned, e.g., in Bihar there are Bengali speaking classes. In such a case, the Central Advisory Board have proposed that the medium of primary education should be the mother tongue, and after the fifth class the State language should be taught. But the medium of education should strictly be the mother tongue.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U.P.: Muslim): Why should not the entire education from the lowest to the highest be given in the mother tongue?

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: If the language spoken by a certain group of people is not the same which has been adopted by the Provincial Government concerned, then in such a contingency it shall have to be admitted that every inhabitant of the Province should learn the State language; otherwise he will himself suffer. This is also obvious that the University education cannot be given through the medium of different languages. One language only shall have to be adopted and that shall be the State language. Except this, there cannot be any practical solution of this problem.

In this connection, I shall also admit that complaints are regularly pouring in from certain provinces to the effect that this fundamental principle is not being fully acted upon. If these complaints are correct, then I must admit that this is really a deplorable state of affairs and it is most essential that it should be remedied. The Government of India are already in correspondence on this subject with certain Provincial Governments, and it is very likely that a conference of the Provincial Education Ministers may be convened in this connection. In any case, I shall assure the honourable Member, Begum Aizaz Rasul, that the Government are fully alive to the importance of this matter, and they shall do their utmost to remove genuine complaints.

Now, I shall say a few words with regard to the last speech delivered by my honourable friend Mr. A. V. Thakkar. As a matter of fact, the point raised by him is the crux of the entire subject of education. If the problem of education is treated as the fundamental basis for the uplift of the nation, then is it not necessary that more money should be earmarked out of the revenues of the Central Government for this purpose than what is being spent at present? The previous Government used to spend Rs. 2 crores at the most for the purposes of education which did not form even one per cent. of the Central Budget. It was hardly 5 per cent. After having put in strenuous efforts for the last two years, I have been able to get it raised to Rs. 5 crores, and now it can be said that 1 per cent. of the Central Budget shall be spent for the purposes of education. But I would like to know whether this amount is adequate for a country whose literate population does not exceed 15 per cent. even. And should our conscience feel satisfied after spending this amount?

Today, there is no other matter which more vitally affects the country than this problem. When will we be able to confer upon 85 per cent. of the subjects of the Indian Union their birth-right of learning 3 R's? The Sargeant Scheme had contemplated a period of forty years. But I do not think that today any-one of us shall be prepared to wait for such a long period. On my assuming charge of the Ministry of Education, I devoted myself towards this aspect; and prepared a fresh scheme for imparting basic education in the junior standards by means of which the basic education upto this standard can be made universal and compulsory during a period of ten years at the most. 'Kher' Committee was set up to consider this scheme. This Committee considered all the aspects of the matter and prepared a comprehensive scheme covering a period of sixteen years, viz., 10 years for junior basic education and again six years more for senior basic education. The Ministry of Education were eager to implement this scheme from the beginning of the new financial year. A sum of Rs. 5,40,00,000 was needed for this purpose. I am deeply constrained to say that this could not be arranged and the implementation of the scheme has had to be postponed.

I was rather much pleased to find that my honourable friend Mr. Thakkar shares with me in my present predicament, and other members too have seriously felt the paucity of funds. But I would like to tell you that this is not quite sufficient. You should realize your responsibility in right earnestness and think over as to how to remedy this state of affairs. Certain friends have complained against the Ministry of Finance and drawn their attention for attaching more importance to the nation-building programme. But I will dare say that the mere complaint against the Ministry of Finance cannot solve the problem. As a matter of fact, the real solution of the problem lies in your own hands. The Ministry of Finance merely maintains an account of your treasury, while you have got full powers to spend it. If you really feel that more amount should be spent under 'Education', then you should accept a plain and well-balanced proposal in this House that at least 10 per cent. of the Central revenues should be allocated to this head. So long as no such action is taken, the Gordian knot of the national education shall never be disentangled.

Shri H. R. Guruv Reddy (Mysore State): Sir, we could not follow a syllable of what the honourable Minister said. It seems to be a very interesting reply, and we have to ask for a translation of his speech.

Mr. Speaker: He will get it, in due course.

Now, what is the position about the cut motion of Pandit Kunzru? Does he want it to be put to vote?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: With the permission of the House I wish to withdraw it.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable Member leave of the House to withdraw his cut motion?

The cut motion was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: I now put the Demands to the House.

The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Speaker: We now take up the Ministry of Labour.

Motion is:

There is a cut-motion by Mr. Sahu. He will speak on his cut-motion and then Mr. Shastri will follow.

Unity of Trade Union Organisations

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साहु: वाचस्पति जी, मैं मिनिस्टरी आफ लेबर को डिमान्ड नम्बर २२, में यह कट मोशन मूव करना चाहता हूँ—

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Labour' be revised by Rs. 100."

अभी जो रिपोर्ट निकली है, उस रिपोर्ट में कहा जाता है कि अभी पन्द्रह परसेंट ज्यादा प्रोडक्शन हुआ है, यह कैसा प्रोडक्शन हुआ है, इसका ज्यादा जिक्र जब तक नहीं होगा, हमें विश्वास नहीं हो सकता। मैं देखता हूं कि यह जो हिन्दुस्तान में लेबर मूवमेंट है, वह मर सा गया है। Labour Movement का भीष्म पितामह का माफिक जो ये मिस्टर जोशी थे वह अब कहां हैं? उनको labour field से एक दम निकाल दिया गया है ऐसा मालूम होता है।

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Whose fault was it that Mr. Joshi was out of it? It is his own fault.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri: It was the S.I.S. who first expelled Mr. Joshi.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: Nobody, expelled him from the S.I.S. He resigned from the S.I.S.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: He resigned from the A.I.T.U.C. also.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: He is in the Mazdoor Sabha.

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साहू : मैं देखता हूं कि अब हिन्दुस्तान में चार ट्रेड यूनियन बन गई और उनमें ज्यादा से ज्यादा झगड़ा होता है। एक कांग्रेस के हाथ में है, एक सोशलिस्ट के हाथ में है, एक कम्युनिस्ट के हाथ में है और एक बिल्कुल अलग है। गर्वनमेंट को यह देखना चाहिये कि कैसे इन चारों में जो झगड़ा है, वह कम हो, खत्म हो और इन चारों जमातों को मिला सकें। लेकिन मैं देखता हूं कि गर्वनमेंट जो कांग्रेस इन्डियन नेशनल ट्रेड यूनियन कांग्रेस है उसके नुमाइन्दों को तो हर कमेटी और जगह में स्थान मिलता है और बाकी तीनों लेबर की जमातों का कोई स्थान नहीं होता है। इसलिये हम

लोगों का हाल बहुत खराब हो गया है। मैं ज्यादा नहीं कहना चाहता हूं। मैं कहता हूं कि ये जो चार कमेटीयां हैं (१) Central Advisory Committee, (२) Profit Share Committee, (३) Employees State Insurance Corporation, और (४) Standing Labour Committee इन में सिर्फ कांग्रेस के ही मेम्बर हैं हम अब तक यह कहते आये हैं कि हम डेमोक्रेटिक इन्स्टीट्यूशन बनाने की कोशिश करते हैं, जो जिसका हिस्सा है उसको देने की कोशिश करते हैं लेकिन हम वह देते नहीं हैं। हम सबका गला घोट देने हैं और अपना ही फायदा चाहते हैं। जिस तरह से आदमी घोड़े के लगाम पकड़ कर घुमाना चाहता है उसी तरह से हम लोगों की आंखों में blinds (पट्टे) लगा कर घुमा रहे हैं। जिधर जैसा चाहा वैसा कर दिया। इस तरह से हम डेमोक्रेटिक इन्स्टीट्यूशन नहीं बना सकते हैं जिसकी बनाने की हम सब लोग कोशिश कर रहे हैं।

अभी उस रोज हमारे सरदार पटेल साहब ने कहा कि अब आर. एस. एस., कम्युनिस्ट और सिक्ख सबको दबा दिया गया है और अब किसी प्रकार की अशान्ति का डर नहीं है। मगर मैं कहता हूं कि हमारा देश इस समय एक ऐसी अवस्था में है कि किसी समय एक्सप्लोजन (Explosion) हो जायेगा तो सब कुछ चकनाचूर हो जायेगा। इसलिये अभी हमको यह कोशिश करनी चाहिये, गर्वनमेंट को यह कोशिश करनी चाहिये कि जो यह चार बखेड़े हो गये हैं, चार भाग हो गये हैं वह सब एक हो जाय। हमारे श्रम मंत्री जी की और हमारे मित्र हरीहर नाथ शास्त्री जी की और जो वहां पर बैठे हैं सब को मिल कर यह बात सोचनी चाहिये। यह नहीं, कि हम उसको दबा देंगे - सबको दबा देंगे और हम बैठेंगे, इस तरह से यह काम नहीं हो सकेगा। इसलिये मैं ज्यादा नहीं कहना चाहता हूं। इतना कह कर मैं अपना कटमोशन मूव करता हूं।

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): I wish to move the following cut motion to demand No. 22 of the Ministry of Labour:

“That the demand under the head ‘Ministry of Labour’ be reduced by Rs. 100.”

[Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu]

In moving this cut motion before this House I wish to say that on the 14th February, 1948, Shri Keshva Rao asked a question in reply where to the Government stated that there were 76 trade unions that had been recognized by the Government, which included those pertaining to Railway workmen, and people employed under Works, Mines and Power, Industry and Supply, Communications, Defence, Finance and Health Departments. Let us now see what is the position of Labour. Just at present there are at least 10 lakhs of labourers employed in the Railways, 10 lakhs in Plantation and mining, 25 lakhs in factories and 5 lakhs who are employed otherwise. There is one thing here that requires to be considered. The All-India Trade Union Congress was formed in 1922 and it continued functioning smoothly. But, it so happened on a certain night that when we woke up in the morning, next day, we found that a body styled as the Indian National Trade Union Congress had come into existence and on that day we felt that the condition of Labour in the country had become very much deplorable. What was the reason for the formation of a second Trade Union Congress in 1947, with such haste, when the All-India Trade Union Congress was there since 1922? This leads to the conclusion that some discord has entered into the organisation of labour. We have today created four blocks in the labour camp, viz., the All India Trade Union Congress, Indian National Trade Union Congress, Hind Mazdoor Panchayat and the United Trade Union Committee and brought about dissensions for nothing. And, who started these dissensions? When I think of that I find that that person is the Government. When I look about to discover who is behind all this, I come to the certain conclusion that my Government pursued this matter and brought about this deterioration.

The report that has just come out says that there has been a fifteen per cent. increase in production yet. What kind of production is this? Until we are told more about it we are not inclined to believe this. I perceive that this labour movement in India has rather gone into decay. Where is Mr. Joshi now, who was a kind of Bhisma Pitamah of the labour movement? It appears as if he has been expelled from the labour field all at once.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): Whose fault was it that Mr. Joshi was out of it? It is his own fault.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri (U.P.: General): It was the S.I.S. who first expelled Mr. Joshi.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: Nobody expelled him from the S.I.S. He resigned from the S.I.S.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: He resigned from the A.I.T.U.C. also.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram (Minister of Labour): He is in the Mazdoor Sabha.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: I find that four trade unions have now come to be formed in India and that the greatest dissensions prevail among them. One of them is in the hands of the Congress, one is in the hands of the Socialists, one is in the hands of the Communists and one is quite unattached. It is up to the Government to see how the conflict that exists among these four might be reduced and resolved and all these four organisations united. But, I find that the Government assigns the representatives of the Indian National Trade Union Congress a place on every committee whereas the other three labour organisations have no such place. That is why our condition has grown so deplorable.

I do not wish to say more. I say, however, that these four Committees, viz. (1) the Central Advisory Committee, (2) the Profit Share Committee, (3) the Employees State Insurance Corporation and (4) the Standing Labour Committee, consist exclusively of members of the Congress. We have been proclaiming all this time that we are trying to evolve democratic institutions and that we are trying to give their share to those whom it is due but we are not doing so. We strangle them all and seek our own good alone. Just as a man holds a horse by the bridle and turns it in whichever direction he likes in the same way we have blindfolded the public and are turning them about. We turn them as and where we like. Not in this manner can we form democratic institutions to the formation of which we are bending our efforts.

There is also a good deal of discontent in the field of labour. I find that factory legislation has been framed for the benefit of the labour but I wish to enquire why it is not being put into operation at the earliest. What would be the good of enacting these laws if they are not to be enforced? I do not wish to say more on that subject at this juncture.

Only the other day the Honourable Sardar Patel stated that the R.S.S., the Communists and the Sikhs had all been suppressed and that there was no longer any fear of disorder of any kind. But, I say our country is at this hour in such a state that an explosion might occur at any time which might blow up everything. Hence, we should even now make an endeavour, the Government should make an endeavour that these four factions that have been formed, these four divisions that have been created might all unite into one. Our Labour Minister our friend Harihar Nath Shastriji and the others sitting there should all combine and think it out. It will not do to think that we will suppress all,—that we will suppress all but keep our position. That way this object will not be achieved. I do not wish to say more and, having said this much, move my cut motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Cut motion moved:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Labour' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri: Mr. Deputy Speaker, within the few minutes that you have been gracious enough to allow me, all that is possible for me is to offer my hurried comments on a few important subjects in regard to the labour policy. Before doing that, I wish first of all refer to the speech that has just been made by my honourable friend, Mr. Lakshminarayan Sahu. I mean no disrespect to him when I say that the views or the ideas that he has expressed betrays a colossal ignorance of the situation in the trade union movement in this country. It is a mistake to think that the Indian National Trade Union Congress was sprung up by any individual or set of individuals overnight. The real fact is with the advent of freedom and realization on the part of the working class of this country of their duty to the community, a realization came amongst them that the time has come when they must get rid of the anti-social, disruptive and opportunist elements in the trade union movement in this country, which have so far hampered their progress and it was due to this realization that we find that in the course of the last 18 months, the Indian National Trade Union Congress was set up. It has become by far the most representative organisation in this country and my honourable friend says that the Government should take steps to see that only one organization should exist in this country. I may assure my honourable friend that it will be due to any efforts on the part of the Government, but it will be due to increasing realization on the part of the working class of this country that in a very short time only one organisation and one alone will exist in this country and that will be the Indian National Trade Union Congress.

[Shri Harihar Nath Shastri]

Now, Sir, I come to a very important question and that is the question of industrial relations. As the House may be aware the Indian National Trade Union Congress ever since its inception has been continuously working for the maintenance of industrial peace in this country as a condition precedent to industrial progress and economic prosperity of our nation, and to realize that object, it accepted the lead of the honourable the Prime Minister when it accepted the three years Industrial Truce and it was in order to implement that resolution and that policy that the Indian National Trade Union Congress accepted and has been persistently following a policy of responsive co-operation in regard to the employers. I have no hesitation to admit that there is a class of employers in this country who are conscious of the objective situation in this country and who have been doing their best to explore all possibilities for amicable settlement with the labour and it has been our pleasure, and it has been our best efforts to work to the best of our capacity for the good of labour in co-operation with such employers, but on the other hand, Sir, I regret to say that there are elements amongst the employers, who by their narrow, selfish and short-sighted policy, have hampered industrial peace in this country. (Maulana Hasrat Mohani: "Have any of them been prosecuted or imprisoned as yet?") That is for the honourable the Labour Minister to answer. Now, Sir, so far as these set of employers are concerned, we have fought against them under the framework of the Industrial Disputes Act and while doing so, we have been faced with certain difficulties. We found that the Industrial Disputes Act is inadequate; it is dilatory and it is ineffective and it was, therefore, that 14 months back when the Industrial Conference took place, we insisted that a clause should be inserted in the resolution in regard to the Industrial Truce and that the Industrial Disputes Act should be amended and that proposal was accepted. I again raised that issue from the platform of the Indian National Trade Union Congress. The matter has already been unduly delayed, but I am glad to hear that a Bill is in the making and I hope it will be coming very soon and when it does, many of the defects in regard to the working of the Industrial Disputes machinery will be rectified.

Now, Sir, the other point that I desire to refer to is in regard to social legislation. So far besides many measures, three main important measures namely, the Factories Act, the Minimum Wages Act, and the Workmen's State Insurance Act, these three acts have been passed in the course of the last 12 months and I must say that at least the last legislative measure is a great landmark in the history of the working class movement in this country. But I might submit that there are two more measures that call for immediate attention. One of these is the provision for old age pension and the other is the unemployment insurance. Unemployment insurance has already come into existence in most of the countries of the world and I am sure that with a net-work of employment exchanges spread throughout the country, it will not be difficult to take in hand this most important measure.

Lastly I come to the question of housing. I raised the question of housing at the Industrialists Conference last year. I raised it at the time of the last Budget also when the Finance Minister assured the House that adequate funds will be found to start the construction of workmen's houses. I am grateful to the honourable the labour Minister who spoke at some public meeting in Bombay and said that the Government was planning to construct one million houses for the working classes of this country. Sir, these classes will be grateful if the honourable Minister would today give us an idea as to what concrete steps are proposed to be taken to implement this promise.

Shri A. V. Thakkar (Saurashtra): In how many years will these one million houses will be constructed?

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri: There are many other points to which I wanted to refer. There is the question of the working class employment insurance, the question of re-settlements; the question of the Labour Conferences, Ratification of International Conventions and agricultural labour. Owing to shortness of time I am unable to speak on them.

But before I sit down I must express my gratitude to the Honourable Sri Jagjivan Ramji. I hope that any criticism I have offered will not be taken as want of confidence in him. On the contrary I feel that in a critical situation like the one our country is passing through he has handled the labour affairs of this country with admirable skill and efficiency. My congratulations, the congratulations of the country and of the working classes are due to him.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would like to remind the House of the time table we started with. We started this Demand at 3-45 p.m. The Honourable the Minister for transport is waiting. One hour was allotted for Labour and one hour for Transport. We have just started the debate on Labour. If we can conclude this Demand by 4-30 p.m. and then take up the Demand for Transport, we can conclude by 5-30 p.m.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P. General): Sir, I am very thankful to you for giving me an opportunity to speak on this Demand. I have given notice of several cut motions, but I am not moving them. I will refer to the substance of those motions for the consideration of the honourable Minister.

I have just now heard the speech of my honourable friend Mr. Sahu as well as the speech delivered by Mr. Harihar Nath Shastri. I could not appreciate the manner in which my friend Mr. Shastri dismissed the earnest request made by Mr. Sahu that all the four Central labour organisations in this country should be merged into one Central organisation. Instead, he said that soon there would be only one organisation and that will be the I.N.T.U.C. So he is out to wage a war for the extermination of the other organisations. He feels that the Government and the employers' recognition and support to his organisation will ensure his victory in this war. As a Congressman, I wish the I.N.T.U.C. prosperity and success; but Mr. Shastri's present policies if persisted in by the organisation will certainly spell its doom. A labour organisation cannot prosper for long on the support of the Government and the employers. The history of the Indian Federation of labour is there to warn everyone. The I.N.T.U.C. has today a great opportunity. It can sponsor a movement for the unity of at least all the non-Communist labour organisations in the country into one single Central Trade Union Organisation in the country like the British Trades Union Congress. Such an independent non-Communist Trade Union Organisation will have a vitality of its own and it will not depend upon the support of the Government or the employers. Congressmen can predominate this organisation and keep it under their influence if they dedicate themselves to serve labour disinterestedly in their thousands. This was just what the honourable Mr. Ayyangar had in mind when he advised all the Railway Labour Unions in the country to unite under one single organisation. This would strengthen labour, and for the Government also there would be then one single organisation to negotiate with. Today the Congress Governments are accused of being partial to the I.N.T.U.C. I feel there is some truth in the accusation. That lowers Congress prestige, and damns Congress in eyes of labour.

Then, with regard to the appointment of representatives of labour on various governmental and international committees and conference, I would like to suggest that some definite principles should be observed. The other day I read of a gentleman being sent from our country to Italy to represent India on the Roadways Committee of the I.L.O. He has never worked in any organisation connected with the roadways. He has no knowledge of the problems of labour working on roadways (Interruption). I know the gentleman very well. I am President of the U.P. Roadways Federation. The gentleman sent is a textile worker and not of roadways. What I suggest is that in nominating people to such Committees or other International bodies, the Government should not lay itself open to the charge of favouritism or nepotism. It would add to the prestige of the Government if it asks those labour organisations in the country which are the most representative of that particular branch of labour in the country to elect representatives for such committees. That is the best way in which you can promote the welfare of each branch of labour. The real purpose behind those conferences will also be then fulfilled. I have to make a complaint against the delay in enforcing legislation passed by this House. Sir, the Dock, Workers' Regulation Act of 1948 has not yet been enforced in Calcutta and Madras. Rules under the Trade Union Amendment Act for compulsory recognition of trade unions have not yet been framed. I hope they will be framed soon.

In the end, I wish the I.N.T.U.C. people to change the spirit in which they work. Then alone it will become a great force; then alone it will become the one single labour organisation in the country.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Sir, I wish to congratulate the Labour Department upon the excellent work that they have done during the last year in bringing forward quite a considerable amount of labour legislation and getting it passed through this House and also trying to give effect to as much of it as possible. I should also like to congratulate our Government as well as the Labour Ministry on the fact that its distinguished Secretary, Mr. Lall, has come to be elected the Chairman of the Governing Body of the I.L.O. This is indeed a great honour done to an Indian and to India and I certainly take pleasure in congratulating him also personally.

Secondly, Sir, I am not able to agree with my two honourable friends, Messrs. Sahu and Shibbanlal Saksepa in regard to the remarks that they have made about the I.N.T.U.C. Let me assure them and the House that in truth not only the I.N.T.U.C. but also the Socialist Labour Organisation and the Communist Labour Organisation have come to be represented on a number of Committees which Government has appointed. Only recently, there was the Profit Sharing Committee, also the Fair Wages Committee, on which you will find representatives of the Socialist Mazdoor Sabha. What is the good of our closing our eyes to these facts and saying that the Government is favouring only the I.N.T.U.C.? My honourable friend Mr. Shibbanlal Saksepa says that he also has great love for the I.N.T.U.C., but most unfortunately for me, I am not able to find any evidence of it at all in practice.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U.P.: Muslims): Is the I.N.T.U.C. an officially sponsored organisation?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: It is true that he has recently fasted for the rights of our workers. I certainly congratulate him on that, for having put to the test, for having shown to the people how strongly he feels in regard to some of these matters, but I have felt for some time that he has not been taking a correct attitude at all in so far as the I.N.T.U.C. is concerned. On the other hand, he has been allowing some of his personal prejudices against some of the leaders of the I.N.T.U.C. to get the better of his judgment and there is where I feel very sorry indeed in regard to my own friend.

Thirdly, my honourable friend Mr. Sahu has said certain things in regard to our good old friend Mr. N. M. Joshi, which to my mind are not quite correct. Mr. N. M. Joshi has not been dropped by the Labour Department at all, nor has he been dropped by the Indian National Congress. Indeed, it was the Indian National Congress which was responsible for getting him into this House after the British Government had neglected to nominate him on the last occasion, and while he was here, every time he was free to criticise the National Government and he did criticise it. Nevertheless, none of us had resented, because of our own great respect for him, and I claim to be one of the disciples of Mr. N. M. Joshi in so far as the labour front is concerned, but at the same time I could not agree with him in the policies that he was pursuing in the latter days of his career in this House as well as outside. It was he who fought tooth and nail the I.N.T.U.C. while it was being brought into existence. It was he who tried his best to see that the I.L.O. would not recognise the I.N.T.U.C. at the San Francisco Conference, it was he who sent not one but many more representations to the Governing Body of the I.L.O. in order to throw dust in their eyes. In spite of all these things the I.L.O. continued to recognise the I.N.T.U.C. and upheld the judgment that the Government of India had come to that the I.N.T.U.C. represented the majority of the members of the organised trade unions in this country. And why has he left the trade union field, or rather the trade union that he had himself established? He at one time was faced with the threat of the Communists and therefore formed a rival organisation. My friend wants to have only one organisation in this country. The veteran trade union leader in this country has himself found through his own practical experience that so long as politics is allowed to come into play in the trade union world, there cannot be one organisation but there would be many and he was himself instrumental in forming a rival organisation known as National Labour Federation, if I mistake not. Recently he himself resigned from the A.I.T.U.C. which he thought was the best and the most representative in the country and I am afraid that he is joining the third organisation—Is that it or he has joined the third organisation. If this is the experience, if this is the view of the veteran labour leader in this country, then I can only say it is not going to be possible to bring into existence only one labour organisation. My honourable friend Mr. Shastri was saying that he was happy that the I.N.T.U.C. would come to be the only organisation in this country. I am afraid the facts are not going to be like that as long as you have a communist party in the country. As long as there is a communist party, it will see to it that there is a rival organisation. As long as you have got another party like the Socialist Party which is out to exploit trade unionism and trade unions in order to subvert the Government that there is and establish its own political regime there is bound to be a rival organisation. Therefore, let us not be afraid of the existence of any of these rival organisations at all. My friend was complaining that this Government was showing partiality to the I.N.T.U.C. On the other hand, for the last two years, I have quarrelled with the Railway Ministry for having shown too much partiality to this All-India Railwaymen's Federation and not recognising a number of other labour organisations that have come into existence in rivalry to the communist controlled organisations. There are the Unions organised by the Running Staff and also those organised by the Clerical Staff of the Railways, to mention only two, and these have not been recognised by my honourable friends—first Dr. John Matthai, now Mr. Santhanam. Mr. Santhanam was good enough to simply say that they would be given the privilege of corresponding with their high officials. Is that the kind of partiality which my friend is having in his mind when he says that this Government is showing partiality to the I.N.T.U.C.? My complaint is that this Government is too much afraid of these communist controlled trade unions which through threats of strikes are bent upon subverting this Government and are creating destructive and disruptive strikes for the purpose. Therefore, it is wrong for my honourable friends and it is rather late in the day for them to come forward and give this sermon to our Government that it should not show any sort of partiality at all to the I.N.T.U.C.

Then, Sir, I wish to make an appeal to my honourable friend to come together and walk in line and in step with all of us in building up the I.N.T.U.C. in such a way that it will be possible for our National Government to develop our industrial structure without unnecessarily being troubled and worried by constant threats of strikes. Strikes for what purposes?—Not for industrial purposes, not for wages, allowances and various other things, but for the purpose of subverting this Government. Let them make up their mind whether they want this National Government to rule in this country or they want a Communist Government to rule in this country. If they do not want a Communist Government to rule in this country, then we must be prepared to be indifferent about our own personal interests, our group interests, our individual, local, union interests, and make common cause with all those patriotic people in this country, among the workers as well as outside,—their friends—and see that this Government and its industrial policy are strengthened in every possible manner.

Lastly, I am glad my honourable friend the Minister for Labour has placed on the Statute Book the (Agricultural) Minimum Wages Act, and I sincerely hope that he will also see to it that the provincial governments try to give effect to it and bring into existence the necessary machinery that has been envisaged in the Act in order to prescribe minimum wages for agricultural workers. Once he is able to achieve it, it will certainly redound to the credit of this Government, because for the first time in the history of this country, more than 60 million workers will come to be protected in the most essential manner.

उन में दस दस और बीस बीस आदमी रहते हैं । उनके रहने के लिए कोई भी उचित प्रबन्ध अभी तक नहीं किया गया है जब कि सारे देश में मजदूरों के रहने के लिए अच्छे प्रबन्ध किये जा रहे हैं ।

जब मजदूर लोग अपना संगठन करते हैं तो ये पूंजीपति लोग उनको संगठित नहीं होने देते । उनके संगठन को तोड़ने की कोशिश करते हैं और नये आदमी उन संगठनों में अपने फायदे को चलाने के लिए रखने की कोशिश करते हैं । ऐसी हालत में वहां पर मजदूर लोग अपना संगठन नहीं कर सकते हैं । इस तरह की दयनीय हालत इस समय देशी राज्यों में मजदूरों की है । मैं यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि अभी तक देशी राज्यों में कम्युनिस्टों का होल्ड नहीं है मगर हाल में ही उनका प्रवेश होना शुरू हो गया है । अगर हम लोगों ने इस तरफ मजदूरों की दशा की तरफ ध्यान नहीं दिया तो कम्युनिस्ट वहां पर सब अपना होल्ड कर लेंगे । तो मैं श्रम-मंत्री जी का ध्यान देशी राज्यों के मजदूरों की ओर दिलाना चाहता हूँ कि जल्दी से उनकी दयनीय हालत की तरफ ध्यान देकर सुधार करें ।

दूसरी बात की तरफ मैं आपका ध्यान दिलाना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि वहां पर मजदूरों के लिये कोई कानूनी व्यवस्था नहीं है । तो यह भी लेजिस्लेशन के द्वारा ठीक हो जाना चाहिये और जो भी लेजिस्लेशन हम लोग यहां पास करें वह सब वहां लागू होना चाहिये । वहां पर बाज़ वक्त कोई ट्रिब्यूनल का अवार्ड होता है तो उसकी भी कोई पूर्ति नहीं होती । साथ ही उनको बोनस के लिये बराबर झंझट रहता है । उनको कोई बोनस नहीं दिया जाता और वहां की मजदूरी भी बहुत कम है । इस प्रकार वहां कोई भी इस प्रकार के कानून लागू नहीं किये जा रहे हैं ।

साथ ही एक और बात की ओर मैं आपका ध्यान दिलाना चाहता हूँ । वहां खेतिहर मजदूरों की जो दशा है वह बहुत ही खराब है । वैसे उनके लिये कम से कम कोई न्यूनतम वेजेज, जिनको मिनिमम वेजेज कहते हैं, होनी चाहिये । उसके लिये भी लेजिस्लेशन हो जाना चाहिये जिससे उनको राहत मिले ।

दूसरे वहां पर बहुत सी ऐसी ज़मीनें हैं कि जो रिक्लेम की गयी हैं । वहां पर उन लोगों को प्रेफ़ेरेन्स दिया जाना चाहिये और उनको ऐसी ज़मीनों के लम्बे पट्टे दे दिये जाय जो बहुत असें से पड़त भूमी है । इसके साथ ही वहां स्त्री लेबर की दशा बहुत खराब है । इसके लिये मैं आपको एक सुझाव देना चाहता हूँ और वह यह कि कोई स्त्री डाइरेक्टर मुकर्रर कर दी जाय । सेक्स रेशो भी ऐसी प्राब्लेम है कि जिसकी तरफ ध्यान देना बहुत जरूरी है ।

[श्री बलवंत सिंह मेहता]

इससे कई प्रकार की खराबियां पैदा हो जाती हैं। सोसियल इन्श्योरेंस का जो फ़ायदा है वह वहां पर नहीं मिल रहा है। इसके साथ ही वहां शिक्षा का भी प्रबन्ध होना चाहिये। वहां छोटे छोटे बच्चों को काम पर लगाया जाता है। उन्हें कतई बन्द कर देना चाहिये।

Shri Balwant Sinha Mehta (United State of Rajasthan): Sir, on behalf of the States I wish to congratulate the honourable the Minister for Labour for the splendid work done during this year, resulting in increased production in the country and more comforts to the labour-class. But besides this I wish to draw your attention towards the condition of the labour-class in native states. Many capitalists migrate to the States from here in order to evade the Income-tax, Super-tax and other taxes. They migrate to the States so that they may escape these taxes. Besides this there they get certain types of concessions and then you would see that the condition of labour there is indescribably bad. If the honourable the Minister or the honourable Members of this House choose to come there I can say with confidence that they cannot help weeping.

These days the labourers there do different kinds of labour work. There are many kinds of mines like zinc, mica, etc. and many kinds of mills and factories are there like sugar mills, textile mills, and all kinds of mills are running there. But generally everywhere the condition of the labour-class is very bad. There the labourers get as. 8, as. 6 and as. 4 also as wages. There no special arrangements are even made for providing drinking water to them. The buildings there are dirty and no proper arrangements are made there for ventilation and ingress of fresh air. Moreover the housing condition of these labourers there is such that perhaps animals even could not live under those conditions. Small cells are given to these labourers and 10-20 people live in each cell. No proper arrangements for their housing have so far been made, although good arrangements are being made in other parts of the country for the housing of the labourers.

When the labourers organise themselves then these capitalists do not allow them to organise themselves. They try to break up their organisations and try to inject new persons in those organisations in order to meet their own ends. Under these circumstances the labourers there cannot organise themselves. Such a pitiable condition is of the labourers in the States today. I wish to submit that as yet the communists do not have any hold in the States but since quite recently their infiltration in the States has begun. If we did not pay attention towards this and the condition of the labourers there then the communists will have a complete hold there. So I wish to draw the attention of the honourable the Labour Minister towards the labourers in the native states so that paying due attention towards their pitiable condition their lot may be improved at the earliest.

The second thing towards which I wish to draw your attention is that for these labourers there are no rules and regulations. This also should be set right through legislation and whatever legislations we pass here should be enforced there. There if at any time a tribunal gives an award then the conditions thereof are not fulfilled. Moreover they always have a tussel for the bonus. They are not given any bonus and there the wages also are very scanty. In this way no rules and regulations are being applied there.

Besides this I wish to draw your attention towards one more thing. There the condition of the agricultural labourers is very bad. So some minimum wages should be fixed for them. A legislation for this also should be passed so that they may get some relief.

The second thing is that there are many such lands that have been re-claimed. There they should be given preference and they may be given long term leases of such lands that have been lying fallow since long. The condition of female labour is still bad. For that I wish to submit a suggestion namely that some lady director may be appointed. The sex ratio also is such a problem that demands necessary consideration. This creates many kinds of difficulties. The labourers there are not getting the benefits of Social Insurance. Along with this arrangements should also be made for education. There small children are employed. This should definitely be stopped.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry there is no time for other speakers. I will now request the Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram to reply. I believe he will take fifteen minutes.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: No Sir. More than that.

A brief note enumerating the current activities of my Ministry has been circulated among the Members and most of the points that have been raised by the various speakers have been covered in those notes, and I do not propose to repeat them.

The Labour policy of the Government has at various times come in for criticism from both employers and labour—sometimes as being pro-capitalist and sometimes as too prone to placate labour. I consider the existence of criticism from both sides on the balance equal in intensity, as proof of the impartial and progressive labour policy which Government have been trying to follow, namely, a policy based not on the exigencies of the moment but on a long-term consideration of the economy of the country.

Our industrialists, nurtured in the atmosphere of laissez-faire of the pre-war period and protected, though undoubtedly controlled and regulated during the war years, have, I am afraid, been somewhat slow to realize the prodigious strength of the mass labour movements witnessed in practically every country in the post-war world. Whatever the political label of a country, labour movements throughout the world have asserted themselves in a manner they have never done before. It is, therefore, up to all who seek to understand and influence society—and I say this particularly to industrialists who have so much to do with labour—to realize the implications of the new consciousness aroused in labour as a result of the sufferings of two world wars. Sheer necessity, if nothing else, should, and I am sure will, convert our hitherto critical employers into willing partners in a game that can hereafter be carried on only through co-operation and not coercion. I am glad to say that some employers have already adapted themselves to the changing circumstances of the times but that is not true of many. These “no-changers” are still on the defensive in the hope that they will eventually be able to meet what they consider the new menace in their own way. To them I say that they will live and learn but only at the cost of much harm to themselves.

To my anxious labour friends I would counsel patience. The present Government stands committed to the unalterable course of improving the lot of the common man by steady, but by no means too slow, methods. We propose to proceed as fast as circumstances permit. Those who criticise Government for not doing enough to labour forget what Government have been able to do during the last two years. The one measure that has done the largest good to labour is the Industrial Disputes Act which, with all its admitted defects, has not merely settled disputes but increased wages and improved the working conditions of labour. Government propose to bring a Bill before the House to amend that Act comprehensively so that it may serve the purpose better. The Employees' State Insurance Act has yet to be implemented, but when its full effects are felt, it will be found to be a measure of fundamental importance to the working class. That Act is limited in scope for the present, but it provides a firm foundation on which any powerful edifice can eventually be built. The Bonus and Provident Fund Schemes Act applicable to collieries extend legislative protection to two important benefits which hitherto had been held to be mere ex-gratia payments liable to be terminated at the will of the employer.

With experience, we should be able to extend these benefits to other industries. I do not wish to take up the time of the House with a narration of the provisions of the various other enactments passed during the last two years, but certain current development deserve more than a passing mention. As honourable Members are aware, Government approved of a resolution last year accepting in principle the payment of fair wages to labour and the evolution of an equitable scheme of profit sharing. A scheme of profit sharing has been drawn up by a Committee set up for the purpose and will soon be finally examined by the Central Advisory Council of Labour. The question of fair wages is now receiving the attention of another Committee which is expected to submit its report within a month.

There have been criticisms that in spite of all that has been done for labour, labour has not implemented the Industrial Truce Resolution or responded to the call for greater production. I do not share this view. The total number of man-days lost in 1948 was 8 millions compared to 16.5 millions in 1947 and 12.7 millions in 1946. Out of the 8 millions, 1.6 millions were due to lockouts particularly in Bengal. If allowance is made for a further 1.9 millions caused by the continuance of the strike in the textile mills of Coimbatore in the early part of the year, i.e., before the Industrial Truce Resolution has had time to convince waverers, the statistics show a magnificent earnestness on the part of labour to respond to the call for greater production. I have tried to obtain corresponding figures for the U.K. and the U.S.A. While the number of man-days lost decreased in India by as much as 52 per cent since 1947, there was only a small decrease by 13 per cent in the U.K. and in the U.S.A. there was an increase by 3 per cent. Again, while the average duration of a strike was six days in India the corresponding figures for the U.K., U.S.A. and Canada were 4.6 days, 16.8 days and 22.3 days respectively. This shows that though we have had a number of lightning strikes, most of the strikes were settled promptly and only a few dragged on with any determined doggedness.

The return of better relations between employers and labour is reflected in the greatly increased production in 1948. The production of cotton yarn showed an increase of 9.7 per cent. over the 1947 figures and that of cotton cloth an increase of 13.6 per cent. Coal showed a slight decrease of less than one per cent. due wholly to transport difficulties. This is clear from the fact that the stocks at collieries mounted up to 2.2 million tons against a normal stock of 0.7 million tons. Steel production declined by 4.4 per cent. due to the breakdown of the machinery in the Steel Corporation of Bengal, but iron castings increased by 61.9 per cent. Salt production showed a welcome increase of 19.6 per cent. while sugar went up 8.1 per cent. It is in the electrical goods and chemical industries that the increases have been substantial, if not spectacular. The production of electric lamps increased by 20 per cent. and that of dry cells by 40 per cent. Electric motors and transformers showed increase of 58 per cent. and 248 per cent. Bicycles, however showed only a small increase of 6 per cent. The quantity of superphosphates manufactured increased from 5,000 tons to 21,400 tons. Sulphuric acid, caustic soda and plywood registered increase by 30 to 33 per cent. Those of us who look forward to the rapid development of the country cannot but feel greatly heartened by this upward trend in the production and I must sincerely congratulate labour on the magnificent way they have responded to the call of the nation. I take this opportunity to congratulate employers as well. The real significance of this decrease in strikes and loss of man-days and of the increase in production can be appreciated only if we take into consideration the condition of the working class in this country, and the restrictions that were placed on them during the war time, along with the fact that there are political parties in the country which try to stir labour unrest in order to advance their own purposes. In spite of all these the working class has not wavered from its path as has been demonstrated by the employees of the Railways and Posts and Telegraphs and hence it deserves all the more to be congratulated.

There is a complaint which I have heard from time to time that the efficiency of labour has markedly deteriorated and that though production in terms of the total quantity might have gone up, the labour force employed and the wages bill paid have not been commensurate but disproportionately large. If this is true, it is indeed a very disquieting feature of recent labour developments, for it will then show that in the struggle for better terms and conditions of work, labour has forgotten its duty, viz., the maintenance and improvement of its efficiency wherever possible. Where payment is by piece, the point to be examined is not whether the labour force has increased disproportionately but whether the wages bill has also risen disproportionately, for I know that in some industries at least, employees have generally been willing to share their work with others to reduce unemployment. The data available at present is not sufficient to lead to any definite conclusions and I propose to pursue the matter further.

With the growing deficit in our food requirements public opinion is focusing itself on the condition of the agricultural labour. It is being realised more and more that in order to make the country self-sufficient in food requirements it is necessary to improve the condition of the workers in the field. Complaints are made that so far Government has concentrated its attention on industrial labour and completely ignored the agricultural labour. This is largely correct. All our legislations and even administrative measure have been directed up till now towards the industrial workers.

The Minimum Wages Act, 1948, provides inter alia for the fixation, before the expiry of three years from the commencement of the Act, of minimum rates of wages payable to persons employed in agriculture. Although a large majority of people depend upon agriculture, it is a highly unorganised industry. The factual data available is inadequate to enable provincial governments to fix minimum wages. It is therefore proposed to hold an enquiry into agricultural labour conditions, particularly as regards earnings, employment, consumption budget and indebtedness of agricultural labourers. Besides enabling the various Governments to fix minimum wages, the enquiry will provide the foundation on which future labour legislation in respect of agricultural labour will be built.

In the Directorate General of the Resettlement and Employment, the foundation of a national employment service has been laid. Though this organisation was established with the sole purpose of resettling the demobilised war personnel, its scope is being gradually widened to cover civilian population also. The training wing is producing thousands of technicians and skilled artisans who are so badly required for the industrial development of the country. We are gradually building up this organisation with our eye on planned economy so that we may be in a position to take up the work of man-power budgeting, for the country.

Several points have been raised by my friends Mr. Sahm and Saksena and they have been effectively replied to by two other friends from this side. I want to make one thing clear, that the Government's attitude towards the representation of organisations of the workers in this country to various committees has been one of impartiality. We have been giving representation to those who are more representative or those who command majority of the workers in a particular industry and I challenge anybody to show that on any occasion we have been partial to any organisation in giving representation in any of our committee here or in the international organisation. If anybody says that we have given preference to any particular organisation I must say that he betrays colossal ignorance on his part. A specific mention has been made that on the Committee on Profit Sharing and Fair Wages no representation have been given to the All-India Trade Union Congress. I admit that there is no representation of the All-India Trade Union Congress on those Committees. The reason is this. In December 1947 we passed a Resolution here in Delhi on Industrial Truce. The representatives of employers and workers were parties to it. The representatives of the All-India Trade Union Congress were a party to that Resolution. But when their representatives went away from the Conference they brazen-facedly refused to accept that Resolution. Do you wish Government to nominate a person who does not believe in that Resolution to work out the details for the implementation of that Resolution? That will be a foolish Government which will nominate such a person on that Committee. And that is why the All-India Trade Union Congress has not been given representation on those Committees. Any person who will bestow any thought to this question will agree with me that Mr. Sahu is committing a mistake in raising these questions or that he has been badly briefed by those who brought these things to his notice.

As regards representation to the International Labour Organisation or to the Committees of the I.L.O. it has been our persistent policy to give representation to those Central organisations which are the most representative of the working class in this country. So long as the All-India Trade Union Congress was the most representative organisation we used to give representation to it. When the Indian National Trade Union Congress came into being and by its wise policy was able to command the confidence of the majority of the workers in this country Government has no alternative but to recognize this Central organisation and give representation to it.

The question has been raised that there has been a multiplicity of Central labour organisations in this country and my friend Mr. Sahu has been kind enough to blame the Government for it. I must say that he has not cared to read the working class movement in this country. The Indian National Trade Union Congress is not the first rival organisation that was formed, and one fine morning Mr. Sahu woke up and found it has been formed. Had he cared to read the working class movement in the country he would have found that the Indian Federation of Labour was formed long before the Indian National Trade Union Congress came into existence and that too was a rival organisation to the All-India Trade Union Congress of which Mr. N.M. Joshi, the friend of Mr. Sahu, happened to be the life-blood or the father of trade union movement. Time there was when Mr. Joshi claimed that the All-India Trade Union Congress was a genuine trade union movement and when I told Mr. Joshi that he was mistaken he challenged my view and my opinion. But Mr. Joshi has come to realise that what he was trying to ignore was a hard reality, and today Mr. Joshi has had to resign from the All-India Trade Union Congress because he found that it was dominated by Communist elements and it was impossible for others to work with the Communists in the All-India Trade Union Congress. Today what has happened? That veteran trade unionist has been instrumental in forming the third Central organisation—the Hind Mazdoor Sabha. Afterwards he may find, as he found, though too late, in the case of the All-India Trade Union Congress, that this Hind Mazdoor Sabha is also dominated by a political party with which it may be impossible for any genuine trade unionist to work. Time will show him that. But so far as Government is concerned our work becomes complicated no doubt when there is a multiplicity of Central organisations. But our attitude or policy in giving representations to these Central organisations is that we give representation to that organisation which is the most representative of the workers in the industry concerned. And we will pursue this policy.

The same accusation has been levelled by my friend Mr. Saxena that the Government encourages the Indian National Trade Union Congress. I have enunciated my policy or the attitude of the Government as regards the various Central organisations. But he is very sore about the U.P. Government. That is their local quarrel and the Provincial Assembly would have been the better forum for giving vent to his feelings or the grouse that he has against the U.P. Government. I do not hold any brief for the U.P. Government. But I may inform the House that anybody who has to deal with the difficult labour situation in the country at present will certainly see to it as to what organisation commands the confidence of the majority of the workers in a particular industry. If one organisation commands the confidence of the overwhelming majority of the workers and there is one rival Union in a small unit in that industry the question is whether it will be desirable or practical to give recognition to a small unit in that industry whereas the overwhelming majority of the workers in that industry are with another organisation. That is for the person on the spot to decide and the U.P. Government must have decided on these lines. I find nothing wrong in it.

Similarly as regards representation on the Works Committees that policy may be followed. If on a regional basis or an industry-wise basis one finds that 90 per cent of the workers are with one organisation and 10 per cent of the workers are in another organisation confined to one or two units of the industry, the question is whether in the interests of maintaining peace in that industry it is necessary to give recognition to the 10 per cent of workers or to the 90 per cent.

My honourable friend has drawn my attention to the delay in the scheme of decasualisation of dock workers. I am afraid my friend was too preoccupied in the U.P. affairs that he could not follow the trend in this House. Otherwise he would have found that I have already introduced an Amending Bill to give effect to the decasualisation schemes.

The condition of the workers in the Indian States has been worse than what it is in the Provinces. With the accession of a large number of States to our Union and with the integration of very many States in the Provinces I think we will try as soon as we can to bring the Labour Acts in those areas on par with those in the Provinces.

In regard to forced labour, as has been indicated in the notes that we have circulated, we have already appointed a special officer to study the various pieces of legislation regarding forced labour so that we may be in a position to undertake legislation if necessary or take such administrative action as may be called for to eliminate forced labour from the country.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): What about the Committee that was promised to be appointed in this House?

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: After we receive the report of the special officer we will be in a position to decide whether the appointment of a Committee to go further into the question of forced labour is necessary or whether we have sufficient data furnished by the special officer to proceed straightaway to take legislative or administrative measures as the case may be.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: The honourable Minister was not present then but the honourable the Minister of State made a statement that a Committee will be appointed and not an officer.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: I have already stated that we have appointed a special officer who is studying the various things. On getting his report, if we find that a Committee is necessary, we will appoint it, but if we find that we have sufficient data before us to proceed straightaway there is no necessity to waste further time by appointing a Committee or a roving Commission.

Sir, I must say one word about strikes. I am myself a firm believer in the efficacy of negotiation, conciliation and adjudication. It is only when all these avenues of a peaceful settlement of a dispute have been exhausted that the last weapon in the armoury of the labour may be wielded—and that also only for economic reasons. A strike as a political weapon is doomed to failure and will be resisted with all the energy and resources at the disposal of the Government. The large majority of labour realises this and is prepared to be guided by safer counsels but there are groups here and there whose object is not betterment of labour's rights and privileges but exploitation of labour's difficulties and weaknesses for purely political purposes. To them, Government's declared policy of protection and encouragement of labour will bring no succour. No Government can tolerate activities calculated to challenge and overthrow its authority, even if they be advanced in the name of labour. Let labour be on its guard against the machinations of such unsocial elements whether within or without its ranks. It has always been my earnest endeavour to make the worker responsible and stand on his own. So long as he is not conscious of his rights and obligations, unscrupulous outsiders will try to exploit him for their own purposes and there would be no end to the exploitation of the working classes. Therefore, it is my policy to encourage workers to run their own organisations without any outsiders interfering in their affairs. As for some time to come they will require help from outsiders, genuine trade unions may be permitted to assist them and they may be members of the trade unions, but in as small a number as may be possible. I hope labour leaders, if they have the real interests of the working class at heart, would not only welcome the policy but will help in making it a success so that we may achieve our cherished objective, the co-operative commonwealth.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I ask Mr. Sahu if he intends that I should put his cut motion to vote?

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साह : जो प्रस्ताव मैं ने दिया है अगर अनुमति मिल जाय तो मैं उस को withdraw करना चाहता हूँ ।

Shri Lakshminarayana Sahu: Sir, I beg leave of the House to withdraw the cut motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable member the leave of the House to withdraw his cut motion?

The cut motion was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

DEMAND No. 25.—MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Now we will proceed to the Demands relating to Transport.

I hope the House is agreeable to sit until we pass these Demands on Transport.

Honourable Members: Yes.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion is:

DEMAND No. 58.—DELHI TRANSPORT SERVICE

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion is:

DEMAND No. 70.—CENTRAL ROAD FUND

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion is:

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana (Madras: General): I have no intention to inflict any speech on a subject like this just at the fag end of the day. There are two points on which I would like to stress. It is said that we have freedom from foreign domination. We have got political freedom, we have got cultural freedom, but we are also trying to get commercial freedom. But when I look back to the history of the railways, I find these Railways are still being run on commercial lines. I am fully conscious that today we are discussing subjects other than Railways, but my intention in mentioning the Railways is that these Railways, when they were introduced, were introduced exclusively for the benefit of the commercial people of the British, and therefore they had given certain special advantages to them. When we discuss all these matters, my mind goes back to the old age when the transport system of this country was being solved by our people. We had our own roads, we had our own bullock carts, we had our own boats. Those two things, the bullock carts and the roads, which were responsible for building up a very great civilisation, which were responsible for building up great empires and liquidating great empires, now they are completely being forgotten by the modern Government, by the Swaraj Government. In my young days, we used to travel by boats from place to place. In my own Province, the Madras Presidency, people used to go from one end to the other for education, for commercial purposes or for any enterprise that they wanted to undertake, in countryboats. The Railways have completely smashed the possibility of the countryboat industry and the waterways.

Sir, I was just trying to look into the pamphlet and literature that was given to us for study, to see whether there is any mention there of one of our transport industries, namely the countryboats, but I see there is absolutely no mention, no encouragement given to it. Sir, if we go to the Malabar, countryboats play a very great role in transport and if we go to Bengal they have got a very important part to play in transport. But now I see that in Malabar in South India as well as in many other parts of our country the countryboats are being completely neglected. Therefore, I want specially to draw the attention of the Transport Ministry to see that there is a proper co-ordination for all the transport facilities, namely the boat industry, the bullock-cart, the railways and the motor cars. There are interests who take charge of the Railways because the coal industry is there and coal is supplied to run the Railways. There are people who take a good deal of interest in the motor cars because there is a good deal of foreign capital and foreign petrol and other things to support the motor industry and therefore it is being taken care of. But there are no people to take care of this boat industry on account of which thousands and lakhs of people get their maintenance. This industry was used not only for transport but for many other purposes. Therefore, it should be taken care of by this Government after getting Swaraj. It may be argued that this boat industry or transport by village roads are completely provincial subjects. But I see that the Centre is taking interest in Provincial subjects also. Recently it was said that in the matter of roads, the Central Government are taking part by subscribing a certain amount to the roadways. They have also subscribed to many of the enterprises the Provincial Governments have started, from railway funds. In the same way certain moneys from the railway funds, either from the Reserve Fund or from the Depreciation Fund or from any other Fund which the Railways have got, may be set apart for the purpose of encouraging these boats. Even today we find that wherever possible the Railways are blocking the canal traffic. Just to mention one case, in Madras near about the Basin Bridge, there is a bridge which is used by the Railways and it was mentioned that the Provincial Government as well as the Central Government were anxious that this bridge should be so re-built that boats could also pass under it. But the Railway has been putting all kinds of obstacles in the way and nothing has been done so far. In the same way, there may be several bridges like that where previously the Railway Companies deliberately blocked the bridges and therefore it is up to the present Government to see that wherever possible the inland navigation system is encouraged and the boat industry of this country is encouraged.

Generally it is said that in democracy, numbers always count, but in this country numbers do not at all count as far as the rural population and the rural interests are concerned. It is said that in our country we have got nearly 87,15,500 bullock-carts and we are spending for the roads on which these bullock-carts go only Rs. 30 crores. It is said that we have got 1,44,694 motor-vehicles and for them we spend nearly Rs. 320 crores. It may be said that these motor cars and motor-vehicles are being used for the rapid transport of produce. But if we take into consideration the total tonnage that is covered by the bullock-carts, that will certainly be much larger. Therefore their number should be taken into consideration and whatever support and help that is possible ought to be given to the villager for the purpose of using his bullock-carts. Generally, it is said that we have absolutely no funds at our disposal, and that all the funds are being used for our national highways and our provincial highways and for other roads, and for the big bridges. That may be quite true. But it is quite possible for Government to have a bias for the village roads also, and pay sufficient attention to see that the villager also gets his roads to transport his village produce to the market places, and that the necessary finances and facilities are provided for that purpose. The other day it was said that there is a huge quantity of gram lying idle in Punjab whereas Punjab gram is not getting any kind of facility to go either to the market or to other provinces. Therefore it is rotting. Therefore, in that way inflation of the price of foodstuffs goes on and the foodstuff rot. If we encourage village people to form co-operative societies and give them all the facilities, it is quite possible that with the aid and subsidy that Government gives, they will be able to form own co-operative societies for starting their own small transport industries, whether through bullock-carts or any kind of improved vehicles. In this way they can also do a good deal.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): The difficulty about the gram in the Punjab was due to the provincial prohibition against moving the foodstuff.

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana: I am very glad to hear that it was only due to some barriers on a provincial basis that that gram could not be moved, and I take it that there is absolutely no bottle-neck in the transport. But there is also good deal of difficulty in moving produces from place to place, especially from villages away from the towns. If there is no such difficulty in the Punjab, I am very glad to know that. But in other provinces there is a great deal of difficulty. The village man cannot take his produce to the market place, mainly for the reason that there is no transport facility, and the Government are not in a position to give the necessary support for putting up proper roads. I am however, very glad to see that our Government is now removing the obstacles, by providing bridges over the big rivers and canals, such as the Godavari and several other big rivers. I would like to mention that there is a big river over which there is no bridge, and the absence of a bridge is causing a good deal of difficulty, I mean the Krishna river. It is one of the biggest rivers and would like very much to draw the attention of the Transport Ministry to see that the proposal to put a bridge over the Krishna also is given effect to as early as possible.

With these words, Sir, I support the Demand.

Shri Satis Chandra Samanta (West Bengal: General): Sir, the Ministry of Transport deals with Railway transport, Road transport, Inland waterways and Ports. In the short time at my disposal, I want to deal with some minor points. As regards railway transport, as a result of partition, we are seeing that Assam is disconnected from the Indian Union. Our Transport Ministry is not inactive in the matter and there is under contemplation a scheme for running a railway line from Assam to Munihari Ghat. It is under construction but it should be expedited. It is proposed to be a meter gauge line, and at the point where it reaches the Ganges—the Munihari Ghat, the wagons have to be brought to the other side. Therefore a wagon ferry should at once be constructed there to avoid unnecessary delay in transshipment. We all know that 500 million tons of Tea come to Calcutta port from Assam and a huge quantity of forest produce also reach the Indian Union. For these reasons, the railway work which has been started should be expedited.

Another point in this connection which I want to mention is that wagon loads will be brought from Assam by a meter gauge line. But there is no meter gauge line from Munihari Ghat to Calcutta. So a meter gauge line should be constructed or a broad gauge line should be converted into a meter gauge for the purpose so that.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: These remarks would be more appropriate during the Railway Debate, I think.

Shri Satis Chandra Samanta: I only draw the attention of the honourable Minister to this subject in order to expedite the matter.

As regards road transport, the Ministry is trying to nationalise bus services in the Centrally Administered Areas. In Delhi the bus-service has been nationalised. Provincial governments are also nationalising their bus services at the instance of the Centre. Recently in Bengal the bus-service in Calcutta has been taken over by the Provincial Government and the other day we read in the newspapers that in the half-yearly accounts, a fair amount has been earned by that business. So I hope our Ministry will encourage the nationalisation of all bus-services, especially in the cities in all the Provinces and States, and issue necessary directions on the matter.

Then, coming to inland waterways, though this is a provincial subject, when inter-provincial waterway services are considered which pass from one province to another, they come under the jurisdiction of the Central Government. If these inland waterways services are expedited, we will be benefitted much and pressure on railway traffic will also lessen and communications as regards goods as well as passengers will be eased for the Indian Union.

Then I come to ports. There are five major ports in India, Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Vizagapatam and Cochin. There are minor ports and harbours. We are hearing about the congestion at Bombay and to relieve that congestion, our Ministry is constructing a major port at Khandla. To expedite the matter, survey work from Khandla to Ahmedabad and Khandla to Delhi should be expedited. To avoid congestion at Bombay, not only Khandla port should be constructed from the Centre but also other minor ports, harbours, such as the Kathiawar ports and some harbours in South India should also be taken into consideration to convert them into major ports.

As regards the Port Trust Act, the Honourable Minister in the last Budget Session gave us a promise that the Port Trust Act will be amended to meet the necessity of our time. (Shri R. K. Sidhva: "They have promised, but they have not got the amended Act.") That is not yet done. Perhaps the promise was given by the predecessor of the present Minister.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think honourable Members agreed to be in the House till 5-30 or 6 o'clock, but I find one member after another is leaving. As there is no quorum, I will have to close the debate.

(At this stage the bell was rung and quorum obtained.)

I do not want to make any aspersions, but I am exceedingly sorry that when an honourable member is speaking on a very important subject and when the Ministers are here, other members are going away. They should have said at 5 o'clock that they were not willing to continue, in which case, I could have adjourned the House to allow the Transport demand to take care of itself. It is not proper to the House itself. If it is the sense of the House, as soon as the honourable member who is now on his legs finishes his speech, I would call upon the Honourable Minister to reply. It does not seem to me to be right. It is an interesting debate and we are not only persons interested in it; there are persons outside and the world outside is very anxious to hear the many debates relating to this demand and I would request that honourable members will bear with patience and stay awhile.

Shri Satis Chandra Samanta: I was drawing the attention of the Honourable Minister to convert those minor ports and harbours into major ports. As regards Cochin, there is no Port Trust. I hope it will also come under the Port Trust. The Ministers entrust the work of the transport to a Central Board of Transport and its Standing Committee. As a member of the Standing Committee to the Ministry of Transport, I have come to know they are very active and they are doing their best. I hope they will try their utmost to expedite matters, to which I have referred. With these words, Sir, I conclude my speech.

Dr. V. Subramaniam (Madras: General): I do not want to take much time of the House, but I want the creation of a non-lapsing fund for the National Highways just as the Road Fund. I request the Honourable Minister to consider the point that a National Highway fund be created, like the Central Road Fund, so that the construction of National Highways may go on without interruption.

The other point that I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister to is regarding the sales tax on Petrol. The Central Government is taxing petrol once and the different provinces are taxing petrol again from 2 to 4 annas. To avoid different taxes on petrol, I think an agreement must be negotiated between the Provinces and the Centre for an overall tax limit to Rs. 1-5-0 per gallon and each province will get 6 annas and the Centre will get 15 annas and the basis of the negotiations would be as in America the tax will be spent on roads except for Central share for the general revenue. The expenditure for National Highways is now made from general revenue every year. Now the grant for the maintenance of the National Highways is sanctioned under Civil Works and we have sanctioned two crores and eight lakhs nearly, but we do not know what amount will be sanctioned next year. So, unless we have a definite income for the National Highways system, the maintenance and progress of these highways will not be satisfactory. These are the two points that I wanted to bring to the notice of the Honourable Minister.

दूसरी बात यह है कि आपने पांच बरस के लिये रोड डेवलपमेन्ट प्रोग्राम का फैसला किया है और इसमें तीस करोड़ रुपया खर्च का भी फैसला किया है। पंजाब में जो National Highways हैं उनमें से पहली देहली से लेकर अमृतसर तक है और दूसरी जालन्धर से काश्मीर तक। पारटीशन के बाद फ़ीरोजपुर और जालन्धर की हालत में बहुत अन्तर पड़ गया है। तिजारत के लिये आपस में सड़क की बहुत जरूरत है। दूसरी Highway देहली से फाजिलका तक है वह सड़क बहुत खराब रहती है, उसका जरा ख्याल रखें। देहली अम्बाला, कालका और शिमला सड़क पर बहुत से भाई गये होंगे, घघर पर बरसात के अन्दर बहुत तकलीफ़ होती है, वहां मेहरबानी करके सड़क ऊंची बनवाईये और पुल बनवायें। बिना बनवाये दिक्कत रफ़ा नहीं हो सकती।

[लाला अचिन्त राम]

तीसरी बात यह है कि अक्सर जब मैं सड़कों, जैसे ग्रेन्ड ट्रंक रोड पर जाता हूं तो मुझे उन सड़कों का नाम अभी भी अंग्रेजी में लिखा मिलता है, और मैं ऐसा महसूस करने लगता हूं कि मानों मैं इंग्लैंड में घूम रहा हूं। मेहरबानी करके सड़कों का नाम अब हिन्दी में या तो लोकल भाषा में चेन्ज कर दीजिये।

आखिरी बात यह है कि देश में ६८ हजार के करीब सड़कें हैं इनके दोनों तरफ दरख्त लगायें तो approximately 1½ लाख के करीब लम्बी सड़क पर दरख्त लग जावेंगे और देश की fuel की प्राबलम एक हद तक हल हो सकती है। मैं समझता हूं कि यह चीज भी बहुत अहम है और आप जरूर इसका ख्याल रखेंगे। वक्त थोड़ा है, इसलिये मैं और ज्यादा न कह कर समाप्त करता हूं।

Lala Achint Ram (East Punjab: General): I wish to say a few things briefly. The first thing is that some people have come from the Punjab who say that the Government's proposal to nationalize road transport is good but that they should not be involved in trouble, and that they should be allowed time—two, four or five years—so that they might, in the meantime, make some arrangements for themselves. It is right that before you introduce such schemes you must see whether or not the Government stand to gain thereby and also whether or not any benefit accrues to the public.

The other thing is that you have decided upon a five years' road development programme as also upon an expenditure of thirty crores of rupees in that connection. Among the National Highways in the Punjab we have first one from Delhi to Amritsar and the second from Jullundur to Kashmir. The condition of Ferozepore and Jullundur has been greatly affected by the partition. A road connecting the two is very much needed for the purposes of trade. Another highway is from Delhi to Fazilka. That road remains in a very rotten condition and some attention should be paid to it. Many of my brothers would have travelled by the Delhi-Amritsar-Kalka-Simla road. A lot of trouble is experienced at the Ghaggar during the rainy season. The road level at that point should kindly be raised and a bridge constructed. Unless this is done the difficulty will not be over.

Besides, your department needs a lot of petrol. About petrol everybody feels that there is a great deal of corruption. Although petrol is a controlled commodity, it is available in the black-market at eight or ten rupees per gallon. This should also be effectively looked into.

The third thing is this that whenever I travel along roads such as the Grand Trunk Road, as I do frequently, I still find the names of the roads written in English so that I start having a feeling as if I am roaming about in England. Kindly change the road names now into Hindi or the local language.

Lastly there are about 69 thousand miles of road in the country. If trees were to be planted on both sides of it there would be trees planted along about one and a half lakh miles and the fuel problem of the country could thereby be solved to a certain extent. I feel this is also a very important matter and that you would surely keep it in view. Time is short and accordingly I would not say anything more and close.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): It is a matter of great regret to me that the House should not have an opportunity to discuss more fully the important problems connected with this Ministry. There are no less than eight important matters, some of which may not otherwise come under discussion in one way or another in this House. For instance there is the tourist traffic which we are organising on which I hoped to get the views of the House. There are also such matters as Railway Priority Organisation and Petrol rationing on which I would have liked to get the views of the House. I do not want to test the patience of the House, but it is my duty to touch briefly on some of the important points mentioned by the Members.

Sir, the honourable Member Mr. Satyanarayana touched a most important topic on which I would have liked to speak at length. I yield to none in this House in my anxiety for the proper development of village roads and also the inland water-traffic by means of country boats. The entire system of National Highways and the Nagpur Plan on which they are based was aimed at the promotion ultimately of the village roads, because on the village roads depends ultimately the traffic not only of the National Highways but also of the Railways. The more they are opened up the better it will be for the country. But the opening up of village roads has to be a provincial responsibility. In order to provide the Provincial Governments with funds for this purpose, the Central Government have taken over the entire responsibility of the National Highways which was originally met from the Provincial revenues. Therefore I suggest that honourable Members should bring pressure on their own provinces that the money released by the Central Government taking over the National Highways should be exclusively devoted to the development of village roads. Through the Road Fund also the Central Government are continuously bringing pressure on the Provincial Governments towards this objective. I confess that the Transport Ministry has not done much for the development of the inland water traffic. It is a Provincial subject. But even there I think we should do more. We propose to take a survey during the coming year of the possibilities of development in this respect. As soon as that survey is completed, we shall devise some kind of machinery for co-ordination of measures in this respect.

Sir, Mr. Samanta as well as Mr. Satyanarayana spoke about the nationalisation of road transport. So did my honourable friend Mr. Achint Ram. This again is essentially a Provincial subject, but the Railways are taking an active part in the nationalisation of road transport. They are providing capital. In fact they have offered to provide as much capital as the Provincial Governments will take and they are co-operating with the Provincial Governments in every respect. So far as the Centrally Administered Areas are concerned, the Delhi Transport Service is being run directly by the Transport Ministry. Three months ago I thought it was going to figure in the debates of this House as much as the topic of third-class passengers. But I believe during the last three months such improvement has been effected in the Delhi Transport Service that it has ceased to be an object of interest to honourable Members. (Honourable Members) 'No, no.' At any rate we shall see that by the time the next Budget comes up, this subject ceases to be an object of debate.

Sir, so far as the East Punjab roads are concerned, about which my honourable friend Lala Achint Ram mentioned, if the East Punjab Government raises this point we shall be very glad to consider whether any change or diversion of those highways are needed. In this matter the Central Government wants to have the full co-operation of the Provincial Governments. In fact without their co-operation, the Central Government will be utterly powerless. Therefore, if the Provincial Governments want any kind of change in this matter, provided it does not commit us to more expenditure than that to which we are already committed, we shall always be very glad to consider. In these and other matters the Transport Ministry will try to satisfy the demands of the Provinces as much as possible.

Lastly about major ports. The point was raised that we have not taken up the amendment of the Port Trust Act. I may inform the House that the Secretary of our Ministry has gone to America on an International Committee and we have charged him with the task of studying the Port Commission of Canada and also of other countries so that we may be able to have a new system which will be based on the latest models. As soon as he comes back, and after considering his report, we shall try to take up this question.

So far as petrol rationing is concerned, it is said there is some black-marketing. But I feel that of all the controls, petrol rationing has been almost fool-proof against corruption. It is only when people who have been legitimately and reasonably given petrol ration sell it to others, black-market operation is possible. This is something which cannot be prevented at all. Petrol is easy of control and the accounts which are kept show completely that there is hardly any corruption. I would like to remove rationing of petrol altogether. But our supplies are not yet adequate and our capacity to move the supplies from ports to the interior parts is not also adequate.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (West Bengal: General): Can you at least liberalise the supply?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: The supplies have been liberalised recently and we shall go on liberalising them as much as possible. It depends upon the total supply and our tank wagons. We lost a large number of tank wagons in Partition and we have been trying to make up the deficiency by ordering new wagons. Unfortunately during the recent Calcutta troubles which affected the Jessop Workshops the building of tank wagons has been delayed. Therefore we are unable to get better supplies to the interior areas. We are trying to distribute the supplies as equitably as possible. I hope the Transport Ministry has deserved well of the House. I thank the House for the way the members have dealt with the Transport Ministry.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Saturday, the 19th March, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES.

(PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.)

Saturday, 19th March, 1949.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-50 A.M.

THE GENERAL BUDGET—LIST OF DEMANDS—concl'd.

Mr. Speaker: A request has been made that a large section of the House wishes to have time for discussion of Relief and Rehabilitation matters. Therefore, I will allot a day. I am allotting the Saturday the 26th of March for transaction of Government business. The House will now today take up the Demands for Grants in respect of Communications, Food and Agriculture. The Demand for Information and Broadcasting will not be taken up for discussion. I understand, some arrangements are being made to have some time for the discussion of that demand. This is arranged to give more time for Food and Agriculture, in respect of which it was the desire of a large number of honourable Members to have more time for discussion. Of course, honourable members will remember that they have had two days for these discussions. However, some more time will be allotted. Communications will be taken up, up to 1 and from 2-30 onwards, the Demands for Food and Agriculture will be taken. I will now place the demands before the House. In the new arrangements proposed, I understand, subject to agreement by honourable members, the honourable members are getting about an hour and a half. Originally, there being no meeting of the House on Saturday the 26th, there is no question hour. Therefore, we get a full day, a part of which they can utilise for the purpose of discussing Information and Broadcasting.

I believe the honourable Minister will require about twenty minutes for his reply.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai (Minister of Communications): Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The time-limit for speeches may be ten minutes.

Proposed increase in Postal Rates.

Mr. Frank Anthony (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir I move:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Communications' be reduced by Rs. 100."

I shall very briefly place before the House certain considerations in respect of this proposal—considerations which I believe have not hitherto been placed before the House. I say at the very beginning that I propose to press this cut motion. I would therefore ask my honourable friends for many of whom I have the greatest regard, to consider carefully what I have to say with regard to this proposal for the increase of postal rates.

Sir, an impartial analysis will disclose that there can be not one single reason with which any one, including Members belonging to the Congress party, will be able to justify this proposal to their thousands of followers in the country at large.

I read some weeks back a forecast of this proposed increased postal rate. Not only was there a forecast, but certain allegations were also there. That forecast and the allegations were all made in a paper of which an honourable Minister said the other day that the Government takes no notice. I myself was not prepared to take any notice of that forecast. To that extent I was surprised when that forecast materialised. I know that the honourable Minister and the Government will immediately repudiate the allegations. But I would ask them, in their own interests, since this forecast has proved correct, to publish the facts. Otherwise, the public will draw their own inference, the inescapable inference. Therefore I would ask the honourable Minister for Communications if he can, repudiate the following facts; if he cannot immediately to rescind this proposal:

Is it a fact that the present Air Lines are operating the night air mails?

Is it a fact that it is running at a huge daily loss involving many lakhs of rupees?

Is it a fact that this new increased postal rate will wipe out this loss? Wiping out this is it not in itself a reprehensible proposal?

Is it not a fact that in wiping out this loss, you are making the postal rates heavy for the Common man?

Is it not a fact that the overwhelming majority of postal users will not gain one iota by this new so-called all-up scheme, because the air line in the country today form a microscopic an infinitesimally microscopic proportion of all postal lines? Is it not a fact that 99 and 9/10ths per cent. of your postal mails will continue to be carried by rail? I would ask the honourable Minister to give a reply to these questions.

Is it not a fact that, in spite of your increased postal rates,—your air lines are so few that 99 and 9/10ths per cent. of your mails will have to be carried by rail?

Is it not a fact that, apart from giving no benefit to the vast majority, the real users of the air mail are not going to receive any benefit by this proposal?

Is it not inevitable that the present speedy and swift air mail service will be abolished?

Is it not a fact that with this all-up system you will have probably just one air mail service, subject to the general postal routine?

So you intend to maintain your special mail service. My own feeling is that, because of the increased mail that will have to be carried by air, you will have one kind of air mail subject to postal routine with the result that people who want to use the air mail will not get effective service.

For these reasons I would ask the Government to reconsider the proposal. Let them have an air mail service. Let them double, treble or even quadruple the present air mail charges in order to make good the loss which the Company is incurring. Let people who want to use the air mail pay for it. I am quite certain that the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister would pay 10 annas for an air mail letter to reach Madras or Bombay the next morning rather than pay for a brief telegram which will reach about 48 hours later and perhaps in a mutilated form. This is a serious matter. I am quite certain that if this proposal is carried through, it will create considerable discontent in the country. It is not sufficient to suggest that the post-card rate only should not be raised. I believe you will have to continue to carry more than 99 per cent. of your post by rail. That is why the whole proposal should be withdrawn.

Even if you cannot make up the loss of your Company by an increase in the air mail charge to the real user of the air mail, there is nothing inherently wrong in subsidising the concern. Progressive countries are subsidising their Air Companies, because they feel they deserve encouragement and in order to strengthen Civil Aviation. But I would ask you, not to subsidise indirectly and, in what many regard, dubious form, your present air lines.

Mr. Speaker: Cut motion moved:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Communications' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Shri A. Karunakara Menon (Madras. General): Sir, notwithstanding what my friend said, I might say that we, during the course of this long Budget session felt much pleased with the way we received our posts regularly from home. Therefore, thanks are due to the honourable Minister for that and thanks are also due to the postal authorities for the efficient work that, so far as I could see, they have been doing so far. I may also say that the general level of honesty in the Department—I do not like comparing or contrasting this department with other Departments—is much higher than in several other Departments under the Government. These go to the credit of the Postals and Telegraphs Department.

In this connection I may mention that most of the letters received by me come from rural areas. As regards these areas, therefore, I must bring to the notice of the honourable Minister the great injustice done to the postal officials thereof. The postal officials in the rural parts are the sub-post masters, branch post-masters, stamp vendors, messengers and mail carriers. They constitute the so-called extra-departmental officials. Why should they not be made intra-departmental officials and integrated into the Postal Department? Now their grievances are many. I shall speak only on one or two of them. While the rules, the responsibilities and the work are the same for the Departmental officials and the extra-Departmental officials of the Postal Department, the extra-Departmental officials are getting only a small remuneration for their work. Out of 17,169 officials belonging to this Department, about 1000 of them receive a pay of Rs. 2 to Rs. 4 per month. It is extremely unjust that they are made to do responsible work but are paid so low a pay as Rs. 2 and Rs. 4.

Besides this, they have no pension, no provident fund, no leave, no increments, no rent for the office building, no supply of furniture, no supply of stationery also. Moreover, they have no security of tenure. So their grievances are many. From the report of 1946-47 I find that these officials form about 20 per cent of the total Posts and Telegraphs staff of the whole of India and therefore they form the backbone of the Department. Still, the kind of treatment that is meted out to them is miserable. In addition, they have no way of ventilating their grievances to the Government, because they are distributed far and wide in the country. Perhaps if all their grievances had been known to the Government, some relief might have been given to them. They have now begun to form unions, but those unions still remain unrecognised by the Government. Therefore, I would submit to the honourable Minister that their grievances might be properly looked into and their unions might be recognised.

The second point that I would like to speak about is this. I am glad that in the report there is mention made of the expansion of developmental activities in this Department. Government say that they are going in future to concentrate on developmental activities of this Department, such as Civil Aviation, Telephone Factories and Agricultural Meteorology Stations. They are all necessary, because they are proving useful to the people at large. I wish to say one or two words with regard to aeronautical training. The demand for aeronautical training has been very great in South India. I think if you take an account you will find that during the war most of the people that distinguished themselves in this field came from South India. But it was not because that facilities were given to them, but because during the war opportunities arose and when they were drafted, they very soon learned this art and very soon equipped themselves in the line of aeronautics. That is how they were able to distinguish themselves during the war. Now, the demand is very great for aeronautical training, but there are no facilities for it in South India. I think there is only one aeronautical school or Club in Madras. There are no other places in South India where clubs exist. That is my information. So I request that more flying clubs may be started.

With regard to a site of this club, I might say that Cannanore possesses a very fine landing ground on the West Coast. Before the war it was used as a landing place for aeroplanes. Now mails are being stacked at Madras and we people of Malabar, South Kanara and Coorg do not get much benefit out of the Night Air Mail Service, because of this stacking of mails at Madras in the mornings which are moved in transit only late in the evenings. Supposing there is a flying club started at Cannanore or it is attached to the flying club at Madras—what they call being a "satellite" of the Madras Club—then there will be much more facility for the distribution of mails in these three places of Malabar, South Kanara and Coorg. This flying club is very necessary, because people in the West Coast are very desirous of flying in the air. Therefore, I appeal to the honourable Minister to consider the starting of such a flying club in some part of the West Coast; if possible at Cannanore where there is already a landing ground. The service of the trainees of this club may be utilised for carrying mails from Madras to the West Coast.

With respect to nationalisation of the Air Services, the honourable Minister stated last year in his Budget speech that he was going to appoint a Departmental Committee and something will be done in the line of nationalisation. I wish to know whether a Departmental Committee was appointed and if so, what was the kind of work that they did, what is the progress of the work and what are their recommendations.

The next subject on which I would like to speak within the few minutes allotted to me is with respect to the Telephone Factory that has been established at Bangalore. We have been depending upon foreign countries and much drain of money has been taking place. It is after considerable agitation that this factory has been started. Still from what little I understand from the Report and what I hear and what I learn from going to the place, I find that the work is proceeding very slowly. I do not know why. If we proceed at this rate, then it is doubtful if we would be able to be self-sufficient and self-dependent within the period of 15 years that has been allotted under the schedule. It has to be developed more quickly. Both the equipment and the recruitment of technical staff and organisational staff have to proceed at a speedier pace; otherwise, our expectations may be belied. I remember while I was here in 1946-47 as a Member of the Assembly, European members saying that "If you start such a factory, it is not going to succeed." There is a duty, therefore, on our part to see that their prognostications,—perhaps based on their self-interest—are proved false, and that we are able to manage things ourselves, and we are able to be self-sufficient with respect to these telephone and telegraph instruments.

Then I wish to say a few words about the Agricultural Meteorology Department. I have a great complaint, with regard to the weather forecasts that are being reported. These weather forecasts do not prove true. On the other hand, they are useful in one way. People have begun to think that if they are reversed they will be correct. For example if they receive a forecast saying it will be fine weather, people at once come to the conclusion that it will be cloudy weather or rainy weather. So these forecasts are not useful to the people. Perhaps, the reason might be that these forecasts have to depend upon meteorological stations situated in distant places, perhaps in Poona and Madras. But the climatic conditions and the hilly nature of the country and so on are so different that any forecasts made from Poona or Madras do not assist the people on the West Coast. So it is highly necessary that a station should be started on the West Coast which will suit the conditions there. Then, perhaps, the forecasts might be more dependable and would prove more useful to the tillers of the soil and the toilers of the sea.

With these few remarks which I bring to the notice of the honourable Minister I close. I hope that steps for reform will be taken in the directions mentioned by me.

Shri Basanta Kumar Das (West Bengal: General): Sir, the first point that I wish to make is regarding the rural post offices. The Government is going to set a target for the village post offices. It is said that the target that the Department has set before itself is that villages or a group of villages within two miles radius with a population of 2,000 people should have a post office. I welcome this decision of the Government. I hope that the Government will not wait till the initiative comes from the rural people. It is within our experience that till a demand comes from the local people, no post office is started in an area even though there is great need for it. It is said that Government is prepared to allow a loss up to Rs. 500 per annum in opening a post office meant to serve general interests. This limit will be raised to Rs. 750 in case it is expected that within the first year the loss will be reduced to Rs. 500. I would urge, Sir, that a more liberal policy is followed in respect of backward areas.

The other day one honourable Member tried to attract the attention of the honourable Minister to such a backward area.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): And Hill tracts.

Shri Basanta Kumar Das: In Hill tracts?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Yes.

Shri Basanta Kumar Das: But there are other areas also. In the Sunderbans in West Bengal there are areas which have no post offices at all. Within a radius of twenty miles we cannot have a post office there. I would request the honourable Minister to pay attention to those areas. I would submit, Sir, that a list of backward areas should be made and attempts should be made to establish post offices even at a greater loss than what has been aimed at.

I would also say that if the system of Dak Sevaks be extended to those areas, those areas may be served well.

The next point that I would try to make is about the weather services for farmers. I welcome the decision that greater attention will be paid to this service. The rural people are ignorant about what the weather forecasts are. In our villages we find that they depend on the sayings of Khona, Khona is believed to have been the daughter-in-law of a great astronomer, Baraha-Mihir who was in the Court of King Vikramaditya. It is stated that this daughter-in-law, Khona tried to be a greater astronomer than her father-in-law and as such her tongue was chopped off. There are sayings and couplets which give indications of the weather, and the rural people follow those indications. We do not know on what data those sayings have been based but often those data come true. But what I want to emphasize is that this should be placed on a more scientific basis and all the investigations we have in the Meteorological Department may be made available easily and in an understandable form to the farmers.

I next come to Civil Aviation. I would draw the attention of the honourable Member to the fact that the air passenger fare was raised when there was an increase of fares on railways. Now that a decrease has been effected on railways, a similar decrease has not been effected in the passenger fares for aeroplanes. Of course the passengers that generally board the aeroplanes are rich people. Still we have got to make air travel popular and for that reason it is necessary that the fare should be such as to compare favourably with the fares on railways. That will attract more passengers and it will be a more lucrative proposition.

In this connection I would request the Minister to examine fully the arguments that have been often advanced regarding the nationalization of the air services. Very powerful arguments have often been advanced in favour of nationalization. I do not like to recount all those arguments but I will only say that it is necessary that the whole question should be gone into and carefully examined by a Committee. Of course, a Committee was appointed in 1914 to go into the question and the decision was taken on the report of that Committee. But I would say that that Committee was appointed in different circumstances. Things have changed and in the present circumstances, it is necessary that a fresh examination should be made. When we see all around us that everything in connection with Civil Aviation is being maintained and organized by the Government, we cannot understand why the Government is not taking up the whole service into their own hands. It is to be examined whether it is possible to organize the whole thing by starting an autonomous Corporation. I would request the honourable Minister to see that a Committee is appointed and the whole matter is examined.

As regards the training of air personnel, I would only request the honourable Minister to see that more attention is paid to produce efficient Ground Engineers. Ground Engineers are most important in order to avoid recurrence of accidents and I cannot over-emphasize that fact that the question requires careful examination. Some proposals have been made about the extension of the air service to different centres. Proposals have also been made to extend these services to Rameswaram, Badri Nath and Dwarka. I would request the Minister to examine these points. The Andamans is going to be rehabilitated through the funds of the Central Government. We know that our system of communications to the Andamans is very poor. If an air service is arranged, and if it is possible to carry mails by air, I think there would be established an easy system of communication between the mainland and the Andamans.

[Shri Basanta Kumar Das]

I now come to the question of night landing arrangements. Between Delhi and Calcutta, there is only one night landing arrangement, and that is in Allahabad. I think other important aerodromes should have this arrangement. From personal experience I know that for want of night landing arrangements aeroplanes often get into danger, and I hope the honourable Minister will pay attention to this.

The next point is in connection with the telephones. I welcome the decision of the Government that they have taken up the question of the automation of the Calcutta telephone system and a target has been fixed that by 1953 37,000 automatic telephone connections will be established, and that by 1954 the number will go up to 54,000. But I would like to impress upon the honourable Minister that the public telephone system in Calcutta should be improved. If we go to Howrah Station, we shall find a great rush for the public telephone that is established there. I think there are stations which seldom have any visitors. If more telephones are installed at Howrah station the congestion would be avoided and more facilities will be given to the public. We are eagerly awaiting the results of the enquiry that is being made regarding the catastrophe that happened in the Calcutta Telephone Exchange and I hope that the results of the enquiry will give us data to go into the matter fully.

There is one point as regards teleprinters. A short time ago the privilege of using Indian languages in press telegrams was extended but the Morse Code that is in vogue is not suitable for the proper transliteration of the messages. Unless the message is transliterated into the Roman Script it is not possible to transmit it and the code in vogue does not give sufficient scope for accurate transliteration of the message. If some modifications are introduced into that code, then it will be possible for proper transliteration and transmission of the message. A professor at Calcutta is trying some methods in this respect and I hope that the attention of the honourable Minister has already been drawn to that point. I would request him to examine the endeavours of that professor as also of others in this direction and some modifications may be introduced, so that it may be possible to transliterate the messages that may be handed in vernaculars for transmission to other stations. Sir, I have done.

Shri G. S. Guha (Tripura, Manipur and Khasi States): Sir, I have read with great interest the notes supplied by the Ministry of Communications on the salient activities of the Ministry during the course of the present year and their plans for the next. I think we are indebted to the honourable Minister for the particular interest he has taken in the activities of all the departments under his care. As time is short I do not propose to go into many of the subjects dealt with in these notes but would confine myself to a few points relating to the areas with which I am acquainted and from where I come.

I have noted with great satisfaction the increase in the number of post offices in Assam during 1947 and 1948 but I do not know whether the increase has been effected in the outlying non tea garden areas. I hope the Minister will consider the difficulties of the villagers in the rural areas of Assam and also of Tripura State.

Most of the Members of this House probably are not aware that there is no internal communication between Agartala and the "divisions" of the Tripura State without going through Pakistan. I recognise that until it is possible to complete the construction of the road from Agartala to Kurti and the road is linked with other subsidiary roads from other areas of the "divisions."

it will not be possible to make much of an improvement. In the meantime I least some areas in the interior should be connected with Agartala without the least some areas in the interior should be connected with Agartala without the necessity of going through Pakistan.

Regarding telephone communication, I think some sort of arrangement should be made between Agartala and other parts of the Indian Union also without going through Pakistan. I think there is a wireless station at Agartala which can be connected with the telephone system in the other parts of the Indian Dominion. If that is so, it is all right until we get our own road and surface communication over the road to Silchar and from there to other parts of the Indian Dominion. In this connection I would also suggest that the honourable Minister may consider the question of having a telephone line on the north side of the Brahmaputra in the Assam Valley. For instance important towns like Tezpur are not connected with the Capital of Assam nor with any other place in India by telephone. I was there for about 5 years as a District Officer and during that time I had very great difficulty in communicating with the capital of the province and had at times to take the help of the military wireless during the war. I know that the people residing in those parts find very great difficulty, particularly in the tea garden areas, as there is no telephone system connecting the North bank of the Brahmaputra with the other parts of the province. I welcome the proposal for the establishment of a wireless station at Gauhati. I think one has already been installed at Shilong. With a new station at Gauhati I think most of the difficulties of Assam would be overcome so far as wireless communication is concerned.

At present most of the important mails are carried by air from Calcutta to Assam and from the 1st April we are going to have all first class mail carried by air from the Dominion of India to Assam. That is a very welcome proposal. There is one point about which I am not quite sure, viz., 'air letters'. Will the value of the 'air letters' continue to remain the same as at present?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: It is 2½ annas now and it will come down to two annas.

Shri G. S. Guha: An 'air letter' to England costs six annas and air mail letter 12 annas. The Ministry should consider the desirability of reducing the charge for inland air letters.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: We are dropping out 'air letters' completely.

Shri G. S. Guha: As regards civil aviation Assam is very much interested in its development, as also the States of Tripura and Manipur, which I have the honour to represent in this House. At present the air route from Calcutta to Assam goes via Siliguri. It takes a very long time but it does not cross Pakistan. In addition to this route, is it not possible to have another direct route to Assam via Gauhati and Tripura State from Calcutta? It will minimise not only the time taken in the flight but I think it will also be of great advantage to a large number of people because of the expected lowering of the fares.

I do not know whether there is a proposal of having a planned survey of the air routes throughout the country. If there is any, I think the question of developing the remotest parts of the eastern frontier including Manipur and Tripura and all other outlying parts may be taken into consideration. So far as my information goes most of the air services in several parts of India have to work at a loss. But those plying between Calcutta and Assam have always worked at a great profit. I therefore suggest that the possibilities of developing these air routes in Assam and North-Eastern India should receive the necessary consideration of the Ministry.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): Sir, my honourable friend Mr. Frank Anthony has thought it fit to speak in somewhat critical terms about the new arrangement of transport of all mails by air. I find that few friends have come forward to congratulate the honourable Minister for his new reform. For my part I not only congratulate him but I also envy him. This new arrangement of conveyance of all mails by air will not only gladden the hearts of my friends like Mr. Kamath and Mr. Sondhi who have yet to set a future home but of many married people also who even under the shadow of the Hindu Code have not already decided to cancel their marriages. In fact if the great poet Kalidasa, the author of Shakuntala and Meghdoot was alive to-day he would have certainly embraced the honourable Minister, and the separated Yaksh and Yakshni would have laid themselves prostrate at his feet and said "here is a solution of all our grievances". No longer need people pine for not hearing from their beloved ones or for not seeing their beloved ones for a long time. The development of civil aviation and the new method of transport of all mails by air will set that problem at rest and for that reason today all the youths of this country, both young men and women certainly think of the honourable Minister in a different light: he will be verily a hero and a benefactor to them.

The only doubt in my mind is whether it will be possible for him to carry out his plan into action. I have seen that even in these days when air mail surcharge has to be paid the mails are not delivered in proper time. It takes four days for a letter to go from Calcutta to Gauhati whereas it should have arrived there on the next day. I have brought this matter to the notice of the Postal authorities. It has been pointed out to me that the delay may be due to the R.M.S. By R.M.S. I understand the Railway Mail Service. But how in a straight air passage between Calcutta and Gauhati the R.M.S. men can shoot up and interfere with the delivery of the air mail is more than what I can say. I would only ask the honourable Minister to see that the letters which are posted in proper time are actually carried by air on that day, or, even granting an allowance, on the next day and that they are delivered on the day they arrive or at least on the following day. I have drawn the attention of the postal authorities to cases where letters have been lying in the post office for more than ten days and have not been delivered—they were actually lying in the post office and not delivered at all. Parcels have not been delivered for more than a fortnight. Criminal cases in courts have had to be adjourned because the records have not been delivered or have not arrived. So all that is necessary is to keep a watch to see that these letters are properly delivered, that they are not mis-delivered and that they are not delivered after a long lapse. I have been doing my part of the duty in order to help the honourable Minister and the Postal Department. A number of letters come to 23, Ferozeshah Road which are addressed to different persons. I think similar must be the case with other friends also. But for the fact that I have to re-post all those letters they would never have reached the addressees. I suppose these things are happening to everyone.

I think the general complaint of the Postal Department is that four classes of people complain against the Postal Department: Those who do not write letters and still expect to receive letters. They are great enemies of the Postal Department. Those who write letters to their selected friends more than twice a day and do not get reply because those selected friends do not like to commit their thoughts into writing for fear of disclosure. They are also disappointed. There are persons who receive a lot of value-payables, and they refuse them. And lastly those who do not get money orders. There was a time in my life when I used to receive a number of value-payables, (Shri Mahavir Tyagi: 'Did you?') but not a single money order and I had to take the postman to task "why do you bring only value-payables and not bring any money order?" So far as the V.P. is concerned you can safely refuse them; you do not suffer any loss. But so far as money order is concerned, the habit of signing for somebody else may be developed and complaint may be remote. On the whole I congratulate the honourable Minister for the new device because it has helped the province of Assam.

Mr. Frank Anthony: Only Assam.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: The province of Assam must be grateful to him. There was a time in the year 1948 when even the mails were forcibly snatched on the way between Darjeeling and Assam. It was done several times. Heaps of mails were lying in Ranighat and other places and they could not be carried. At that time the honourable Minister was pleased to help by carrying them by air without any extra payment or surcharge. Now, you might be accused of great partiality if you did not adopt the same method in respect of other provinces and therefore it is but right that he has adopted this method. It is wrong to think that the village people will suffer by the increase in postage because nowadays they won't receive the news of their relations long after some relation has died or receive intimation of a marriage long after the marriage has taken place. Instead of that, if the letters are carried by air and for the portion where there is no air communication they are taken by the ordinary method even, the news which the people want to have they will get much sooner than they get now. Therefore, this additional increase in the postage will not be minded by the people.

The only thing that I ask the honourable Minister is to introduce in Provinces like Assam the mobile post office system. It has proved a success and I think it should be developed.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: Sir, with your permission I will first take up the points made by Mr. Anthony about the raising of the postage rates and about the night air mail.

I think people are wrong in thinking that the postal rate has been increased simply because the mails will be carried by air. I want friends to see the last Annual Report which has been circulated and they will find therein that while in the past years the Postal Department was making a profit of about Rs. 4 crores a year, in the estimated Budget there is a loss of about Rs. 2½ crores. That is all due to the reducing of the post card rate by one pice in crores. I will give honourable Members the figures for the last ten years to 1946. I will give the number of letters sent and the number of post cards. In 1938-39 the number of letters sent was 516 millions and the number of post cards was 378 millions. It continued to increase proportionately and in 1946-47 the number of letters sent was 817 millions and the number of post cards was 691 millions. Then in 1946-47 the price of post card was dropped and it was found that while the increase in the number of letters was very small, that is only 3 per cent instead of 15 per cent, that was normal, and only 856 million letters were sent, the number of post cards rose by a huge proportion—from 691 millions it rose to 888 millions.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): That shows that the poor people took advantage of it.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: That is true, but what about the income of the post office?

Then, in 1947-48 in divided India, that is in the Indian Union, the number of letters was 720 millions while the number of post cards was in excess of that, that is 762 millions. In 1948-49 the number of letters sent was 781 millions while the number of post cards was 850 millions. In the next year it is expected that the number of letters will be 690 millions and the number of post cards will be 844 millions.

Now I would like you to look into the income of the Postal Department. From a profitable concern earning Rs. 4 crores a year, the next year's estimate shows a loss of Rs. 2½ crores. Last year we had to face the same problem. Then it was proposed that the price of the card should be raised, but we retained the price at two pice and increased the rates of the telephones. Now those Departments are making money and with that money we could have increased the facilities in other places but that was not possible because the Postal Department works at some loss.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What was it due to?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: Because the wages are going up while we are bringing down the prices.

Mr. Frank Anthony: But is not the main reason the running of your air companies at a loss?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: It has nothing to do with it because the air mails last year brought a good profit and that has reduced the loss to over 50 lakhs.

We are again faced with a similar situation. It will not be possible to raise the charges on telegrams and telephones; the charges are already too high and last year we had to make some concessions for Press telegrams. We will have to make some further reductions if we want to increase the telephone facilities to extend it to others with lower income.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Is that loss of Rs. 2½ crores due to the reduction of the rate of the post card from nine pice to half an anna?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: That is true. And in view of the increasing rate of literacy in the population the number of letters and cards has also increased and every additional card will mean more loss. If the present number of cards is doubled then all the income from telegrams and telephones will be eaten up.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: After you start this night air mail, will not the revenue from telegrams and telephones be reduced next year?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: I do not think so because we are trying to improve the efficiency of the telegram. I have already asked the Department to see that a telegram from Calcutta to Bombay is delivered there in an hour and a half and a reply handed back, if there is a reply, in three hours. I hope in time to come we will be able to do that.

Mr. Frank Anthony: How much has this company lost since the night air mail service has begun operation?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: I will come to that. That is about the increase of rates in post cards. I hope honourable Members will see that if we do not make this increase it will not be possible to increase the charge on letters because the proportion of letters and cards will again be upset and then there will be fewer letters and a larger number of post-cards. Therefore we will have to accept this increase if we want to finance our expansion schemes.

*The other point that was raised by Mr. Anthony was the special favour shown to a Company. I do not know where he got his facts from. A Question was put to me in this House and I gave a reply that when we thought of introducing this night air mail we contacted not one but two or three Companies. We offered them the same terms. All the other Companies wanted an enhancement of the present air mail rates. We said it was not possible because I told them that my scheme was to reduce the air mail rate after the new Budget, and that therefore it will not be possible to enhance the air mail rates. Then they declined the offer. The Postal Department entered into an agreement with the Company that accepted the offer. At the time it was understood that they will be allowed to take passengers also, but the Air Licensing Board said that till the night landing facilities have been provided on intermediary air halts they will not issue licences for carrying passengers. We had to drop the matter. But as night landing facilities were available on the Bombay route we proposed to another Company which is running a Delhi-Bombay air service to take up this night air mail service between here and Bombay, but in the mean time the Company offered to carry mails and to develop freight service. I know that in other countries like Australia, U.S.A. and even in a small country like the Philippines they have developed a good freight service by reducing their rates and instead of losing money they are making profits. Therefore I had encouraged this idea and they were given a licence. Although in the beginning their loss was high, now they have developed sufficient freight service between Calcutta and Bombay to make that trip without any loss. They are still suffering some loss on the Delhi-Madras route but I think they will be able to develop that route also. I may inform the House that, that route has been equipped with night landing facilities, therefore perhaps from the beginning of the next month we will be able to allow them to take passengers also, and in that case whatever loss they may have been suffering will be wiped out.

Another doubt which Mr. Anthony seemed to entertain is that all the mails will be confined to these two services. That is wrong. We will have mail for every service and I might inform the honourable member that since this proposal was announced—and I have had talks with the companies—there have been many proposals for new services for which these companies were not prepared before, because they were expecting that they would not get sufficient load. With the increase in the mail load, every company is prepared to run new services, and I may inform Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhury that I have already a proposal for running an air service between Delhi and Gauhati direct.

Mr. Frank Anthony: But is it not a fact that more than ninety per cent of the mail will continue to be carried by rail?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: That is wrong. We will carry about 25 per cent now, and with the help of flying clubs, we will be able, within a year's time to bring it up to about 50 per cent.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): On what basis was the cost of production of a post card fixed at 8.2 pice?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: I am just coming to that.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): May I know what is the total loss expected to be covered by this increase on the post card? Is it intended only to cover the loss or is it also expected to earn a profit?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: I am just giving the figures, and you will find it is not expected to cover up even all the loss.

The honourable the Finance Minister informed the House that the cost per post card would come to 8.2 pies. But since the increase of 10 per cent. in the dearness allowance, it has further gone up to 9.3 pies. I may tell you that envelope is the only thing that brings us any income. In the other items like money-orders etc. we are losing money. If you are interested. I may read out our expenses that we have to meet out of the revenue that we get. Per letter we are spending 10 pies and we get 18 pies. Per unpaid letter we spend 14 pies and we get 36 pies. These are the only sources of our income. On registered letter we are spending 8 as. 7 pies. and we get only 5 as. 6 pies.

Shri H. V. Kamath: What is the cost of production of a post-card?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: It is 9.3 pies. The rates were fixed when wages were much lower than what they are to-day. Therefore I may say that we are losing on every card and the number of cards is going up higher and higher and we are losing larger and larger amounts.

Mr. Frank Anthony: May I know how the honourable Minister arrived at the percentage of 25 and the likely percentage of 50?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: We have taken a census of the mails that go from city to city, from Delhi to Lucknow, to Banaras, Patna, Allahabad and so on. That is how we arrived at the figures.

Mr. Frank Anthony: What about the millions in the villages?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: All the mail for the United Provinces will go to aerodromes in the U.P. and distributed from there. That will save 24 hours.

Then I may tell you what effect it will have on our civil aviation. We were losing money. Every company was losing money. Two companies have gone into liquidation. There was the threat of another company also going into liquidation.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Still new companies are coming up.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: That is wrong. We are not giving licenses to new companies. The number of companies is going down. Even a company considered to be most efficiently run, has lost some money; there was some profit in the balance-sheet of that company last year. Therefore we have to think out some plan that will keep these companies running. There was the question of nationalisation. Last year I said a committee was appointed. That committee proposed that we should take over one of the existing operating lines and run it. But that was not found possible on account of the financial crisis that we had to pass, and therefore we had to give it up. Now the question before us was how to save these companies. I have met representatives of these companies and I have been impressing upon them the necessity of getting more economic planes. I am told that if they operate planes of 40 seats, then perhaps they can lower the fare and cater for the lower income people. Therefore, as an honourable member has suggested, I am advising them to lower their fares and then they will get full load. Some of them are trying to do it, and they are exploring the possibility of having new planes with 40 seats or 50 seats, and charging as low fare as the railways do. If it is possible to do so, without any loss. I am told it is done in the U.S.A., in Australia and in some other countries. But we have to give them some assurance as regards the I.P.M. load. Instead of paying them a subsidy, I have devised to give them more load.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: But then the railways will lose.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: There will be such an abundance of traffic and therefore our mails, parcels etc. will continue to be carried by trains.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): Cost of aviation petrol has been reduced.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: Yes, and on that account, I am also reducing the rates for the air-mails. At present we are paying every company, irrespective of the distance; at the rate of Rs. 1-8-0 per pound. If a letter goes from Kashmir to Assam, it has to be handled by three companies and therefore it has to be paid at Rs. 4-8-0 per pound. Now they will be paying them at the average rate of Rs. 1-8-0 according to distance.

Now, I will deal with the village post-offices. A point has been made about the pay of the extra departmental staff. These extra departmental staff are employed on the basis that they are doing other businesses and some payment will induce them to take up this work also. There was not much work, and village teachers or some persons doing business in the village, were paid a small sum as allowance for handling the mails. They would despatch and deliver the mails. In a small village, the people themselves would collect at the post office at the time of the arrival of the mail and take delivery. Otherwise we employ extra departmental staff for distribution also.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): But they have to work for six hours.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: No, they are not supposed to work for six hours. And they used to get a sum of Rs. 6 and the mail peon used to get something like Rs. 8 to Rs. 10.

Our rule was that in a village we can open a post office if our losses will not be more than Rs. 250. Last year I announced that we have raised this amount to Rs. 500. But we found that on account of the increases in the pay of the extra departmental men, even this sum of Rs. 500 would not suffice and therefore we were unable to spend the money that we had for opening new post-offices. We have recently raised the figure to Rs. 750 and we hope that on the present basis of pay we will be able to open new post offices. But if the pay of the extra departmental staff is further raised, then that may not be possible. As I said we were employing these extra departmental staff on the basis that they were doing other work. Now it happened that wherever a new post office was opened in a village, instead of giving the work to somebody who is doing something else also, somebody who is young and unemployed takes it up and then he starts demanding for more pay. Therefore I have directed the Department to see that only men who have got other work should be recruited for this work. We have also made a rule that if in any place one has to work for more than five hours, then he should be taken on into the departmental service and the post office departmentalised. But so long as it is only one hour, or two hours or three hours work, he will be paid according to the specified rates.

Shri Lakshminarayana Sahu: But your rule is that he should work one hour in the morning and five hours in the afternoon.

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: I have said five hours work will entitle him to come into the department. And that is why many of the stamp vendors in many places have been taken into the departmental service.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Since when has the cost of production of the post-card been 8.2 pies? How long has this abnormal figure remained? How many years has it been like that?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: With the increase in the expenses the cost has been rising. In 1932 it was 5.8 pies. In 1938 it went down to 5.2. When the war started there were several allowances and the rise started. And then we implemented the Pay Commission's Recommendations. We had to give an extra Rs. 97 lakhs to Postal Department, excluding the Telegraph Department, and that added to the cost. And now we have to add Rs. 13 lakhs just now. Therefore from 8.2 pies it has gone up to 9.3 pies. If there are further rises in the dearness allowances etc. it will go up further.

Shri H. V. Kamath: It will be one anna next year.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): What is the pay of a stamp vendor?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: The minimum pay in the department is Rs. 30 and anyone who gets into the department starts on this, with of course the dearness and other allowances.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Are the packers entitled to pensions?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: Yes.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena: Have stamp vendors been given the recent increase of 10 per cent?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: Yes, they have got all that the departmental staff have got.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Will the honourable Minister conclude the speech now or would he like to resume his speech in the afternoon?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: I will take only 5 minutes more. I will now refer to the Meteorological Department. Many points have been raised, but I want to say something about the Meteorological Department. We are doing all that is possible in order to supply to the cultivators information that is necessary for them. There might be inaccuracies in them now and then, but the Department is doing its best to increase its efficiency. It is one thing to get information and it is quite a different thing to supply it to the cultivator. That has been the difficulty. Several times the Department came in contact with Provincial Governments and had discussions as to how to popularise their forecasts, discussed the suggestion of having our community village receivers for receiving broadcasts and all that, but that is all taking time and unless we are able to devise some methods of convincing the peasantry, of their utility whatever information is supplied in these bulletins will not be useful to them and the Meteorological Department will not be able to do much service. An honourable Member has referred to the 'sayings' of some ancient sage which guide the agriculturist in his sowing and reaping etc. There are different ancient 'sayings' prevailing in different Provinces. The Department is experimenting and it is hoped they will be able to explain how far those 'sayings' are applicable under present conditions. The information will be made available to agriculturists through Provincial Governments. With these words I close.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): May I know from what date the Air mail service from Delhi to Gauhati will start functioning?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: I hope it will be some time next month.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Suppose, Sir, in view of the overall efficiency of your Department, if we agree to your Demands, are you prepared to reconsider the price of postcards?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: No. I thought I have convinced you, but you are.....

Mr. Frank Anthony: How much of these increased rates are due to the fact that you will have to pay so much more to the different Air Lines?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: When we thought of air-mail services, there was no consideration of enhancing the rates. As a matter of fact, we were making money on the air surcharge. Under the new proposal, we are doing away with that. Our earnings were 3-6-0 per lb. while we were paying to the companies 1-8-0. I have done away with that and all the money paid to the Air Services will be considered as an aid to Civil Aviation.

Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo (Madhya Bharat): Are the development schemes going to be undertaken in the States also?

The Honourable Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai: I think that whatever we are doing will benefit both the Provinces and states.

I may say a few words about the Flying Clubs. When I was in Madras, I had conversations with the Madras Finance Minister and I told him that they should take some interest in the establishment of flying clubs such as in Malabar and Andhra and other places and he has promised to look into that.

Mr. Frank Anthony: On the figures given by the honourable Minister that 30 per cent. (Some Honourable Members: '25 per cent') of mails will primarily be carried by air and 50 per cent. by next year, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my cut motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable Member leave of the House to withdraw his cut motion?

DEMAND No. 90.—CAPITAL OUTLAY ON FORESTS

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram (Minister of Food and Agriculture): Sir, I had no intention to take the time of the House by any introductory remarks. But, in view of the 2 days' debate on food at the beginning of this session and the promise I then made that the entire food situation would be reviewed at high level, I thought that it would be appropriate if I now inform the House as to what steps were taken subsequent to the debate and what has been the result of the review I had promised. Since the discussions in the House in early February, the whole programme of food production was thoroughly re-examined by me with the aid of my administrative and technical officers. The Grow-More-Food programme was also submitted to examination by a committee of economists attached to the Cabinet. I also had informal discussions with many Members of the House to have the advantage of their experience and local knowledge. Their sustained interest in the details of the various proposals discussed with them was of great help to me in finalising the line of action proposed to be taken. I have given the fullest consideration to the various suggestions made during the debate and thereafter, and have decided to accept several of those suggestions.

The Government also considered it necessary, before coming to final conclusions, to confer with the Provincial Governments and so, a week ago, representatives of the Provincial Governments were called to Delhi to determine what part the Provinces would play in dealing anew with the food problem.

As promised, the food situation was reviewed by the Cabinet on two separate occasions and the Prime Minister has been as you know, giving constant thought to the problem. I am now in a position to place before the House briefly the decisions of the Cabinet and the revised food policy of the Government.

The first and the basic decision which we have come to is that, except in the case of any grave calamity such as widespread failure of crops or for the purpose of building up a central reserve, as recommended by the Food Grains Policy Committee, the Government will not import any food grains from abroad after 1951. The second decision of Government is that, in view of the above definite goal of freedom from imports of food grains after 1951, the Provinces and States are to be asked to do two things. Firstly, to plan their programme of food production in accordance with the above announcement and secondly, to tighten up their procurement arrangements, so that the increase in food grains resulting from the measures to be taken also becomes available for meeting any food deficit in the country.

The Government have also reconsidered the whole scheme of Grow-More-Food Campaign and have replaced it by a programme of Intensive Cultivation of that part of our food acreage at present which has perennial or assured water-supply. Subsidised aid in the shape of improved seeds, organic manure, compost fertilizers, minor irrigation works will now all be concentrated on selected regions in this part of our cultivated land. Arrangements have also been planned for making a more reliable estimate of the results of this concentrated effort by the crop-cutting method of sample survey.

Government have also, as you know, large schemes of reclamation covering about 60 lakhs acres of weed infested and new land. We intend to concentrate on reclaiming about 8 lakhs of acres by the end of 1951. The efficiency of the work of reclamation and mechanical cultivation so far done by the Central and Provincial Governments has won praise from those who are familiar with this type of work in the West. This scheme is going to be the biggest reclamation project in the East outside Russia. Already the results and outturns achieved in the United Provinces and the Central Provinces have been beyond our expectations.

Government have also a project of tube-wells, the details of which are under fresh examination. When implemented, the land perennially irrigated by these deep wells will make a material contribution to meeting our food deficit. Government also intend pending the development of our indigenous resources of organic and chemical manure to secure from outside special quantities of fertilizers for use in irrigated rice areas to make a substantive addition to our rice crop. It is also the proposal of Government to save some extra acreage from surplus crops and divert it for the production of cereals. These are the several items in our programme up to the end of 1951. For the speedy implementation of the revised programme, Government have decided to set up at the Centre a small Development Board and will request the provinces and States to set up parallel Development Boards so that the normal Departmental procedure may not delay the progress of the programme. The Boards would have attached to them statistical sections to keep continuous contact with developments and assess periodically the results achieved in terms of the targets. All these parts of the revised food programme were fully discussed with the representatives of provinces only a few days ago and provincial plans for production were formulated which would wipe off our food deficit of only 10 per cent by the end of 1951.

The goal before us, therefore, is to achieve self-sufficiency in food by the end of 1951 and we must somehow achieve this goal. It gives me pleasure to state that the provincial representatives felt confident that the programme chalked out with their co-operation could be successfully achieved within the above time-limit of December 1951. They, however, needed and rightly the help of the Centre in the shape of more iron and steel, cement and coal and above all, proper transport facilities. The question of how the movement of these materials for food production could be upgraded is to be decided shortly by Government, but in the meantime Government have decided to have a special Liaison Officer who would keep the link between the Centre and the provinces and States in regard to these matters and see that no difficulty arises in the way of speedy implementation of the new programme.

Government have also felt the necessity of more frequent contact with the provincial and State plans for production and it has been arranged that there would be a monthly meeting of the officers of the Centre and of the provinces and States to ensure that the various production plans are being rapidly proceeded with and also to provide an opportunity for fullest inter-provincial co-ordination. There would be besides a six-monthly review of the progress made in terms of a six-month phased programme. I have no doubt that the provinces and States realizing the gravity of the situation will fully respond.

Apart from this programme of increasing the production of rice, wheat and other cereals so as to achieve self-sufficiency by the end of 1951, Government have also decided to encourage the development and use of such high-yielding non-cereal food crops as banana, papaya, sweet potato and tapioca. These have good food value and the yield per acre is many times more than in the case of cereals. Some adjustment also in our habits of diet is essential in the present times.

Government, however, realise that no plan of agricultural production can succeed unless it secures the co-operation of the agriculturists. It is therefore intended, apart from other steps that have to be taken, to organise farmers' unions under the leadership of progressive cultivators in each area, so that democracy in the field of production may achieve the greatest results. Public policy in regard to the rural areas needs to be re-orientated. With increased agricultural production is linked not only the cultivator's own purchasing power and therefore his own standard of living, but with it is linked also our country's economic freedom. All of us, Government no less than the House and the public, feel that we must end the crisis which faces us on the food front. We must be independent of food imports by the earliest possible date. A reasonably early date has now been fixed. It is a challenge to all of us, but the challenge can only be met if the food front is looked upon nearly as a war front and if the same sense of urgency and emergency which inspires a successful war effort also inspires our plans of food production.

It is not an easy task which Government have set for themselves. We may not take it lightly. It is a hard task needing continuous, persistent, patient, strenuous work. It would need the greatest effort of all of us—both Government and the people. The maximum co-operation between the Central, provincial and State governments on the one hand and the nation's producers on numberless fields on the other will alone enable the country to reach the goal we have placed before ourselves. I feel hopeful that that cooperation will be available.

In placing this programme before the House, I would have wished to say nothing which may be regarded as of a personal nature, but I cannot help saying only this much, that I wish to assure the House that every ounce of my energy will be devoted to seeing that we bring the programme to timely success. I may also, in conclusion, express the hope that the honourable Members of the House who have ample influence in their respective provinces and States will severally treat the programme as their own and give to Government their cooperation in reaching our goal by the target date of December 1951.

Mr. Speaker: I will just remind honourable Members that today is the last date for the voting of demands and therefore, under the rules, it is not possible for us to extend the time beyond 5. At 5 sharp the guillotine will be applied. So we have about an hour and a half, leaving about half an hour to the honourable Minister for reply.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: I will take twenty minutes.

Mr. Speaker: That means we shall have ten minutes more and there are a large number of speakers; so I have to curtail, again, the time-limit, and request members to strictly limit themselves to the time-limit and take care to see that they mention all points that they want to urge, without the embroideries to all those points.

Now, are there any cut motions which are going to be moved?

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): Yes, Sir. I have one.

Mr. Speaker: There is also another one, I think.

Sardar Hukam Singh (East Punjab: General): Yes, Sir. If I am given time, I will move others.

Mr. Speaker: If there is a cut motion, of course, I will have to give preference to it and the particular discussion will precede the general discussion. There are two cut motions. I think we will first have the one by Mr. Sahu:

Stoppage of Food Grains Import from Foreign Countries

श्री० लक्ष्मीनारायण साहू : मान्यवर वाचस्पतिजी, मेरा कट मोशन यह है :

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Food' be reduced by Rs. 100."

अब ब्लैक मारकेटिंग कैसे बन्द होगा। ब्लैक मारकेटिंग बन्द करने के लिये मैंने ऐसा सुना है कि जर्मनी में ओवरनाइट न्यू करेंसी बना दिया और जितने रुपये जिसके पास थे वह कोई काम के नहीं रहे। इसीलिये खाने की जितनी चीजें थीं सब देश को मिल गई। ऐसा मैं सोचता हूँ कि अगर फाइनेंस मिनिस्टर साहब कोई न्यू करेंसी कर दें या ऐसा कुछ सुभीता कर दें तो बहुत अच्छा हो। ज्यादा वक्त मैं नहीं लेना चाहता हूँ इतना ही कह कर मैं अपना कट मोशन पेश करता हूँ।

(English translation of the above speech)

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: I beg to move:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Food' be reduced by Rs. 100."

It is a matter of great gratification to know from the honourable Minister that no food-stuffs will be imported after the year 1951. But how can we do away with this? Therefore, we should make every endeavour to achieve this end. One thing which I thought of was that as long as black market continues to exist and transport facilities are not made available, we cannot get any food-stuffs even if these are available in this country. Therefore, I would urge the honourable Ministers concerned to do their best to provide transport facilities.

Now, how can this black-market be checked? I have been told that in Germany new currency was introduced over-night thus resulting in the demonetization of the entire existing currency in the hands of the people. This led to the whole stock of the food-stuffs being released for the country's use. I, therefore, feel that it would be much better if the honourable the Finance Minister introduces any new currency or affords some such facility. I do not want to take much time of the House.

With these words, I move my cut motion.

Mr. Speaker: Cut motion moved:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Food' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Co-ordination with Provinces and failure to meet shortage of Food

Sardar Hukam Singh: Sir, I beg to move:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Agriculture' be reduced by Rs. 100."

The second one also I will move with your permission.

Food shortage and policy.

Sardar Hukam Singh: I beg to move:

"That the demand under the head 'Ministry of Food' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Sir, it was heartening to listen to the honourable Minister today that our Government have laid down a definite date by which we shall stop food imports and our country will become self-sufficient in food. The honourable Minister and our country will become self-sufficient in food. The honourable Minister 3 P.M. to follow. If the results as expected, or as desired, are achieved, it would be a very hopeful thing. So far it is distressing to find that though India has all along been known as an agricultural country—apart from whatever else it might produce—it has not given us sufficient food and sufficient milk. 75 per cent of our people depend on agriculture and India has been dependent on imports, and is still dependent on that for another two years, even if we succeed according to the programme laid down by us. These imports have been rather increasing from year to year. In 1947 we imported 2.5 million tons while in 1949 we have provided for 4 million tons. That is also due to insufficiency of exchange: rather we are desiring more. We have been told in the report that certain places have been visited by famine. But we should be prepared for that because a country as large as ours must have some places here and there which may be afflicted by famine.

My first submission is that our policy of de-control and de-rationing has brought about a sharp rise in prices. The index number rose from 280 on 15th August 1947 to 393 on 15th August 1948. My own contention is that these are only book prices. Actually the wheat has been selling at much higher prices.

As I have said before, our Government has relied upon imports and on the 'Grow More Food' campaign. But these have not brought the desirable results. Our imports have eaten up most of our reserves that could have been better utilised for capital goods and machinery, and the grow more food campaign as discussed the other day has not given us the results that we expected. So the real need for the moment is a total campaign on this food front, and if we succeed in the programme just described, there should be some improvement.

I might clear up one point here. There is a general impression, that the ordinary agriculturist has gained considerably during the abnormal rise in prices. In reality, in my view, that opinion is not correct. The plight of the small peasant has rather worsened. The reasons for this may be stated as follows:

(a) the area under multiple crop is very small;

(b) 80 per cent of the holdings are uneconomic and the average peasant produces hardly enough for his own needs. For his other needs such as kerosene oil, cloth, matches, salt and sugar he has to pay high prices;

(c) these poor peasants have been the first to be affected by famines. What has been the result? The landless agricultural labour has been increasing very fast and according to I.L.O. in 1933 it was 35 millions, while in 1944 it had grown to 68 millions. The small landholder is parting with his land.

He is forced to sell it. During the war 13 per cent big landlords have been able to reduce their debts by 32 per cent and the middle-class peasant by 19 per cent. But these small land-holders had to sell their land to the above two classes to the extent of Rs. 30 crores.

There is the testimony of the Bengal Famine Commission to the same effect. In reply to the questionnaire circulated to the various provinces Bengal replied that the big landlords have more lands than they can directly cultivate themselves. Orissa said that there is a tendency for land to pass from small cultivators to persons who are men of professions. Similarly, the C. P. replied that there is an increasing tendency for ownership of land to pass out of the hands of the cultivating classes.

The conclusion that one can arrive at is that agricultural production has ceased to be worthwhile because the life of the actual producer has ceased to be worthliving.

With regard to the plan of Government to mechanise agriculture, I might submit that unless we can provide some alternate occupation for these cultivators, it would bring in more unemployment and our purpose would not be served. In fact it would mean importing of tractors and increasing unemployment. The abolition of zamindari also is not being done in a desirable way. I do not think it will bring the results that we anticipate. Still I am in favour of it. The real owner is getting compensation; the tenant under him is getting the land; but the actual cultivator who is there and just lower than the tenant, is not getting anything. If A is the proprietor and B is the immediate tenant, then in most cases B is not actually tilling it. C is recorded under B, but in some cases C may also have a tenant under him D who may be actually cultivating. But the actual tillers on the land would not get any benefit. So the programme of the Government should be that the actual tiller should get the land.

To sum up, if Government really intends benefiting the peasant, then the actual tiller should be the beneficiary and not the intermediary.

The grievances of the agricultural classes are mounting up and multiplying. They are clamouring for relief. There have been strikes and sporadic revolts in several parts of the country. If nothing is done to ameliorate the conditions of our agricultural masses India is sure to go the China way.

Shri T. Prakasam (Madras: General): Sir, I thank you for giving me an opportunity to say what I have to say on this very important subject. I shall confine myself, as you pointed out, to the few points which I shall take up before you and before the honourable Members of this House.

I congratulate the Food Minister and the Cabinet of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, for the decision they have taken that there would be no more imports from 1951. I would like to point out to them, if it is not impossible, that they should try and reduce that period and not to import from 1950. We are in 1949, 1950 would be the next year. Unless there is any difficulty, technical or otherwise in virtue of any commitments, I would request that, if it is possible, these imports from outside should be stopped from 1950. Sir, I may point out that the troubles during the last two or three years have been of our own making. After the first war the first economic depression started in 1924 and continued to 1934: that is 10 years or 11 years elapsed after the close of that war for any economic crisis to arise. But this time almost immediately after the war the trouble started. What is the cause of this? You may not be able to see it unless you go into the whole of it closely. What is the cause of this crisis immediately after the war? Why has the food famine and the cloth famine overtaken us so soon after the war? When I was the head of the Madras Government I had occasion to address the Assembly on this matter in the food debate. I pointed out then that our relationship with the International Food and Agricultural Organisation, our being tied up with them was responsible for this trouble of ours. I very much wished at that time that that relationship should cease to exist immediately. If we were free from that we will recover very much more quickly. That was the point I mentioned more than 2 years ago and I am now repeating it with greater strength on the basis of facts. Why has this trouble come upon us immediately after the war? It is only 3½ years since the hostilities ceased. This International Food and Agricultural Organisation came into existence three years ago. What is this organisation? Mr. Dodd, who is the Director General of this organisation was in Delhi and made a statement in a press interview the other day. He was very candid and he explained the position so far as the International F.A.O., of which he was the Director General, was concerned. He said that in this international organisation 58 countries have joined as members. He said that it had no executive power to execute, it is not a body that could sell anything or give anything or take anything. It is merely an organisation that came into existence with a view to regulate the distribution of food throughout the world as it were. It tried and it has failed and we have suffered very much on that account. Mr. Dodd himself stated in his press interview what the difficulties were in regard to our own country. He pointed out that we have not got the machinery or plant required for improving our agricultural production and making ourselves self-sufficient. He admitted the exchange trouble that has come into existence along with the close of the war. America is holding the sword against the rest of the world, dictating the dollar basis for everybody to adopt. Every country is forced today to purchase dollars at any cost and keep them or in the name of dollars to transact their business, either import or export. The whole country has been reduced to that condition. Mr. Dodd himself was plain and straight in stating that the exchange trouble was there. This International F.A.O. which has no executive power, which has nothing to give nor take is simply sitting at one place and regulating the whole thing and it has created all this trouble. Mr. Dodd is a gentleman who was the under-secretary of the U.S.A. Government a few years ago and he came out and became the Director General of this organisation. The sooner we sever our connection with this organisation the better. In anticipation as it were I feel thankful to the Government for their having stated that we would not import any more foodgrains from outside from 1951.

One other thing I would suggest by way of construction which the honourable Minister has already indicated to some extent. A decentralisation policy must be adopted. Each province must be made responsible, as it is already indicated in the statement of the Food Minister. Each provincial government can with the money of the people bring into existence co-operative organisations with the aid of which they can procure and carry out distribution all over the country. With your permission, Sir, let me tell you that in Madras our Government brought into existence within six or seven months 29,000 Village Food Committees, so that food may be distributed. Food procured will go into the hands of the committees so that those people in the villages may not starve or complain about distribution. The co-operative organisations in one district of Malabar collected over a crore of rupees from the people and they started both procurement and distribution for relieving the poor as it were and they proved a perfect success. In the coastal districts the people themselves came forward paying over 2 crores of rupees within less than two months. The organisation came into existence and it had a credit and debit balance sheet which was published. The organisation was flourishing and they were making small profits not merely for themselves but they were giving food to the poor also. There was such potentiality in it but it could not be continued. By some chance or other our Government was overthrown and another government came into power and they set their face against the whole organisation. The organisations are still there. There is the body of it, though the life is not there and they are not functioning. I suggest that those organisations must be restored. I therefore submit to the Members of this Government and to this House that co-operative organisation must be made the basis and Government need not spend any money. It has been pointed out by our capitalist friends that money has gone into the hands of the villagers. Assuming that it is so I would suggest the encouragement of co-operative organisations. If that is done procurement can be secured and every thing else could be done and Communism can be resisted. That was my point from the beginning. If these organisations had been extended throughout the Presidency we would not have had any Communism at all, whereas now we are in the throes of Communism on account of the wretchedness that has overtaken us. So this is for the constructive side and as for the other side I would suggest the cessation of our connection with the International F.A.O. and stop our imports of foodgrains from abroad from 1950 itself.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Sir, I wish to say a few words and they shall be only points. The statement made by the honourable Minister was somewhat reassuring. My part of the country has been stricken with famine for a number of years and we had to come to the Centre for import of foodgrains from foreign countries. I am thankful to the Centre and our province is thankful to the Central Government for having helped us. But I find that in recent years the incentive to produce more and achieve self-sufficiency is more and more lacking. Therefore the time limit which has been fixed as 1951 is good. It will create a sense of responsibility in the minds of the provincial governments.

I would make a few suggestions now. When I moved a resolution in this House regarding the methods which should be adopted to prevent famine recurring as also to circumvent or avoid famine conditions, I suggested at that time that there must be a permanent Famine Commission established in this country. Instead of a Famine Commission there must be an Agricultural Commission or an Agricultural Board established which will every week or every month—at least every month—issue a report that so many acres have been sown with this and so on and so forth. Such a kind of incentive and filip to industry and particularly to this industry is wanted. I am very sorry to find such a thing absent here. We find that England has made herself self-sufficient and that its balance of trade has increased, that it has a favourable balance of trade to the tune of pounds 18 million. It may be a little too much; it may be a matter of exaggeration. But that kind of effort, that kind of attack on all fronts, that kind of enthusiasm is lacking here. The honourable Minister may not be able to do everything. Therefore I would suggest that a kind of an All India Agricultural Commission or Board should be brought into existence which must address itself to the main problem of distributing seeds and implements, importing tractors, sending them to the required areas and directly taking up certain areas for extensive cultivation. There are large areas in Orissa which are water-logged and suffering from malarial conditions. The Agency tracts have millions of square miles of such land. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: 'Sixty-thousand square miles'). There the sixty-thousand square miles of land in the province of Madras infected by malaria. Otherwise they have natural sources of irrigation. If all these are cultivated there won't be any famine in the land. India will become surplus in cereals and we may be able to send our foodgrains to other countries also. That is one suggestion which I wish to make.

[Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar]

As I agree with my honourable friend Mr. Prakasam when he says this must be decentralised, after all we may talk from Delhi, another friend may talk from the capital of the various Provinces; but the man who has to produce is in the village. There is no question of responsibility so far as the village is concerned. Therefore, instead of entering into an argument, what I would suggest is that in every village there must be an Agricultural Council or a Farmers Council which must have the right to take up any particular land which is left fallow for any reason, for want of men or for want of implements. This Council must be able to take charge, by legislation, of that land, cultivate it, and after deducting the expenses of cultivation pay away the balance to the man concerned. We are giving subsidies in season and out of season. All right, let us continue the subsidies. If subsidies are given to individual ryots for sinking wells I know that old pits have been shown as newly dug wells and people have eaten away the money. Even half or 25 per cent of the money that is given by way of subsidies does not go for the sinking of wells. We give a sum of Rs. 300 or 400; the cost of sinking a well is about of 1,400. It is not easy for him to get the balance. He has to go in for a taccavi loan. The procedure takes a long time. Therefore give this subsidy to the Agricultural Council which has to be established on a statutory basis in every village, give them implements and the husbandry for the purpose of distribution to the various places. There won't be any nepotism here. It cannot be said that one district or taluk has taken away everything to the prejudice of other taluks. Seed grains must be distributed through that agency. It must be permitted to take charge of any particular land and cultivate it in case in spite of all facilities having been given that land is not being cultivated.

Another difficulty is this. I know there is a race for producing commercial crops; not that I want to deny the agriculturist the benefit of a commercial crop. I will come to it later. But so far as production of cereals is concerned, in the district from which I come at a time when jaggery was selling very high all paddy fields were converted into sugar-cane fields and there was such a lot of jaggery produced. On account of decontrol there was no market for the jaggery and it began to rot and became sour. And the people began to starve because they had not grown cereals. Therefore legislation must be undertaken in every province for enforcing crop planning everywhere. If a man has five acres of land let him not grow sugar-cane on all his land. Let him have 25 per cent. for commercial crops and let him grow cereals on the rest. I am not saying that this is a remedy for all time. Better times may come. But in the circumstances in which we are placed today, with hunger facing the people, when we have to spend Rs. 100 crores and odd for importing foodgrains from foreign countries... (Prof. N. G. Ranga: 'Put all the kisans in jails.') On the other hand I would give responsibility to the kisan, make him an important man in the village and make him responsible. I am making the suggestions to the Government. It is our party that is ruling. What is happening in my part of the Presidency is this. The villager does not produce sufficient foodgrains even for his own consumption. He goes to the nearest shandy, takes a car and goes there and he purchases it from the market. Even the agriculturist who can produce foodgrains for his own consumption utilises his land for growing cotton or groundnut seed or sugar-cane. He does not care because he comes along with me who is not a producer to the ration shop with a card and purchases his foodgrains. In spite of all my affection and the affection of my friend Prof. Ranga for the agriculturist, can we put up with this? It is practically a strike. A strike without our knowledge is going on in the villages. The strikes which take place in factories are known, they are advertised, and it is said that so many man-hours are lost. I ask if the agriculturists are not striking today.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): It is the Government which is on strike.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I am not throwing the blame on this or that person. I say the agriculturists therefore must be induced to do that. It is this agency which can accomplish it—the Agricultural Commission or Board and a Farmers Council in each village. There should be compulsory crop planning. And then there should be no sales of foodgrains except through a co-operative society.

Be it cereals there are other things also. There is for instance fish. I do not eat fish or meat. But in every well in a house you must have developed such kind of small fish as can grow in that particular place. Fish eaters should be encouraged to eat fish. (Interruption). My friend here can eat fish and also drink. Therefore he can digest it. Whoever can eat other kinds of food must be encouraged to eat them. Dairying, poultry-farming and such other things must be attempted. This problem has to be attacked on all fronts; a single front is not enough. Our co-operation is always there. But our co-operation is primarily for eating. The co-operation of the Government is for production. I am glad of the reassuring statement made. But it need not be merely a statement hereafter. We expect that some drastic action will be taken.

Shri Satish Chandra (U. P.: General): Sir, the honourable Minister of Food and Agriculture by the announcement of a new policy has taken much wind out of the sails of a score of speakers who are to take part in to-day's debate. I think the statement of policy which he has made to-day is the result of genuine heart-searching and reorientation in outlook. It indicates that we have come to the conclusion that immediate and tangible results are the need of the moment and that the long-term plans, for which we were making efforts up till now, could yield no results in the near future. Therefore the new policy that has been outlined is welcome and I hope, it will solve some complex problems facing the country at present.

Within the short time at my disposal I will make only one or two suggestions. The policy outlined to-day is based on the principle that definite results must be shown by the Provincial Governments to justify the subsidy or the grant that they receive from the Central Government. I think that this principle should be extended a bit further.

The Federal Department of Agriculture in the United States of America has introduced a system of 'Efficiency Audit' and 'Efficiency Rating' of the persons employed under it. Most of the staff there is appointed on a contract basis, say on renewable contracts for two or three years. The entire set up of the Department is essentially rational. The persons who show good results are given high promotions and those who fail to achieve a certain amount of success or reach a definite target are either demoted or dismissed. Though we cannot possibly in the near future spend huge amounts of money or extend our organisation like the Federal Department of Agriculture, this principle can be applied, I am sure, with good results at the Centre and in the Provinces. Agricultural officers can be periodically rated on the basis of their efficiency and on the basis of work and the results that they show. This practice is being followed in another country and I do not see any reason why it cannot be adopted here. Some beginning in this respect has been made in my own Province, the United Provinces, where certain members of the staff of the Agricultural Department are asked to appear before a Manpower Committee; their work is assessed and they are either promoted or demoted. I think the other Provinces may also be advised to adopt some similar practice.

[Shri Satish Chandra]

Another thing that I would like to say is that there are a number of Committees—Commodity Committees, Boards and Councils—under the Ministry of Agriculture. I had occasion once in the previous session to point out that these Committees were not well constituted. They were constituted several years before the attainment of freedom, and I think all of them need overhauling. Representatives of the people who can adequately voice their feelings should be taken on those Committees. I had given examples on the previous occasion and I do not wish to repeat them. Most of the Committees were constituted by persons who can not adequately represent the interests of the growers or the consumers. Some of them were nominated on those Committees simply because they enjoyed favour of the powers a few years back.

Sir, the fruits of research have not reached the cultivator. This is a point which has been repeated several times in this House and I do not want to take much time over it. The honourable Minister, only a few days ago sent us a small cutting in which he acquainted us with the activities of the agricultural extension service in another country. I would submit that there should be a well-organised field extension and demonstration service. Demonstration on a government farm or at a central place, I am sure, does not help. The need is that these demonstrations should be carried to the village. The villager should not be asked to come to Government farms, but the demonstrations should take place in every village. There should be mobile units which should proceed from village to village. The cultivator should be convinced of the benefits of application of improved methods on his own field in his own village. If mobile units are attached to every agricultural farm in the Provinces, I think the yield per acre can be substantially increased by demonstrating improved methods on the cultivator's field. An outstanding feature of our agriculture is the tremendous waste—waste of soil, water, manure, seed, livestock, labour, time, money—I do not wish to go on enumerating them. There is not sufficient time to take them one by one and discuss the details. But much of this waste can be avoided by proper training, proper demonstration, by imparting education to the villager in the art of economic cultivation and by acquainting him with the researches that have been carried out.

Sir, I feel there should be greater co-operation between the Centre and the Provinces. The honourable Minister of Agriculture, while presiding over a Conference of Ministers of Agriculture from the various Provinces and States, in September last said:

“The main common difficulties which have been experienced are inadequacy of supply of coal, cement, iron and steel, fertilisers and machinery, apart from the delays caused in transport and in securing the sanction of the Central Government to Provincial schemes”.

I would like to know if these defects have been tried to be remedied. I would like to know if something is being done to co-ordinate the activities of the various Ministries of the Government of India, and of the Central and the Provincial Governments, so as to expedite various schemes and to remove the difficulties which he had narrated.

In the end I will point out that we have to depend for our short-term plans largely on the utilisation of the indigenous resources. The other day a question was put to the honourable the Commerce Minister as to why oil-seeds are being exported and their export being encouraged. I would like to know whether the Ministry of Agriculture keeps in touch with the activities of the other Ministries in such matters. Oilcakes have great manurial value and value as cattle-food. The Commerce Ministry is encouraging the export of oil-seeds, we were told to earn some foreign currency. If we really wish to utilise our indigenous resources and if we want quick results we cannot wait for the Sindhri Fertilizer plant which will come into existence and operate several years hence. Why can't we utilise all the castor-cake as manure, and other cakes too, which are being exported in the form of oil-seeds without any regard to our agricultural requirements of manure and cattle-food. We earn foreign currency in order to get our food from abroad, while we are not utilising our own resources to reduce our requirements of imports from outside. I think the honourable Minister will kindly give his consideration to this problem.

एक बात और जिसकी तरफ मैं आपकी तवज्जह दिलाना चाहता हूं और जिसको मैंने आपके पैम्फलेट में नहीं पाया है, वह यह है कि देश के अन्दर अन्न की पैदावार को बढ़ाने से ही आपकी सारी दिक्कतें हल नहीं हो जायेंगी। पैदावार बढ़ाने के बाद आपको यह चाहिए कि आप अन्न की बरबादी को रोकें। मैंने देखा है कि इसके बारे में आपका विचार नहीं गया है। आपको मालूम होगा कि हमारे देश के अन्दर बहुत सी ऐसी सामाजिक कुरीतियां हैं जिनके अनुसार दो-दो सौ, चार-चार सौ आदमियों को दावत दी जाती है। मैं नहीं कह सकता कि देश के और किसी हिस्से के अन्दर यह रिवाज है या नहीं, लेकिन मेरी तरफ तो यह रिवाज है कि जब कोई मर जाता है तो उसके वारिसों को हजार-हजार दो-दो हजार आदमियों की दावत करनी पड़ती है। उसका फर्ज हो जाता है कि चाहे वह मकान बेचे पर उसे हजार दो हजार आदमियों की दावत देनी पड़ती है।

इसके बाद मैं यह कहूंगा कि आजकल देहात में लोगों के पास पैसा हो गया है। उसको खर्च करने के लिये समाज के लोग उनको मजबूर करते हैं और उनको एक तरह की दावत देनी पड़ती है जिसको 'गंगोज' कहते हैं। यानी 'गंगाजी' के नाम पर लोगों को खिलाया जाता है। इस तरफ मैं आपका ध्यान दिलाना चाहता हूं कि अन्न काफी बरबाद हो रहा है। आप जानते हैं कि लड़ाई के वक्त विदेशी सरकार ने ऐसे बहुत से कानून जारी किये थे जिनसे उन्होंने इस बात की रोकवट डाली थी कि दावतों में जहां तक हो सके कम आदमी आयें। लेकिन वह विदेशी हुकूमत थी, उसको जनता का सहयोग प्राप्त नहीं था, इसलिए वह कामयाब नहीं हुई। आपके पास

दूसरी बात जो मैं बतलाना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि आप देहात में जाकर देखें, मैं यह नहीं कहता कि आपको मालूम नहीं है, आप बखूबी जानते हैं, कि किसान क्या खाता है। किसान सिर्फ सिका हुआ आटा उस पर नमक मिर्च रख कर खाते हैं। इसका यह असर होता है कि ज्यादा रक्त खर्च होता है इसलिए इस समस्या को भी आपको जरूर सुलझाना है। मैं जानता हूँ कि इस मामले की तरफ आपकी तवज्जह है। मैं ने आपके पैम्फलेट में देखा है कि आपने लिखा है कि भोजन की न्यूट्रिटिव वैल्यू (nutritive value) लोगों को बतलाने के लिए आपने एक बुलैटिन (bulletin) निकालना शुरू किया है। लेकिन मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि असल गलती यह है कि इस अनाज की समस्या को हमारे गांवों के रहने वाले या शहरों के रहने वाले ठीक तरह से नहीं समझते हैं। आपको चाहिए कि आप इस चीज को लोगों को महसूस करायें और इसके लिए एक English बुलैटिन से काम नहीं चलेगा अब्बल तो हमारे देश में कितने पढ़े लिखे आदमी हैं, उनमें अंग्रेजी पढ़े कितने हैं और उनमें भी कितने ऐसे बुलैटिनों को पढ़ने की तकलीफ करते हैं। इसके अलावा लोग यह समझते हैं कि जो कुछ किताब में लिखा है उसको वह जानते हैं। गांवों के लिए आपका काम अंग्रेजी बुलैटिनों से नहीं चलेगा और हिन्दी के बुलैटिनों से भी नहीं चलेगा। मैं समझता हूँ कि अगर आप लोगों को यह चीज चलते फिरते सिनेमा के जरिये समझायें तो आपके कामयाबी मिल सकती है।

तीसरी बात जो मैं आपसे कहना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि आप बनावस्पष्टि की फौरन बन्द कर दें। आपको कुछ मालदार आदमियों ने इस गलतफहमी में डाल रखा है कि हमारे यहां फैंट की बहुत कमी है, इसलिए इसे जारी रखना चाहिए। लेकिन मैं आपसे कहना चाहता हूँ कि यह बहुत खराब चीज है, इसको फौरन बन्द करना चाहिए। मैं नहीं समझता कि इसके लिए किसी साइंटिस्ट की राय की जरूरत है। अगर आपने इसे नहीं खाया है और शुद्ध घी खाते रहे हैं, तो तीन महीने इसे खाकर देखिये कि क्या नतीजा होता है, तब आपको मालूम हो जायगा। आपने अपनी स्पीच में, अपने पैम्फलेट में और सवाल-जवाब के उत्तर में भी कहा है कि आपने कुछ साइंटिस्ट्स को इसकी जांच करने के लिए मुकर्रर किया है कि इस घी की क्या फुड वैल्यू (food value) है। मैं आपसे कहूँगा कि यह मालदार आदमियों का मामला है। इसका सुलझाना मुश्किल होगा। ये मालदार आसानी से आपको कामयाब नहीं होने देंगे। वह साल, दो साल या तीन साल तक रोड़े अटकाते रहेंगे और उनके पास ऐसा करने के साधन मौजूद हैं, और वह आपको असली नतीजे पर नहीं पहुंचने देंगे। अगर किसी एक आध साइंटिस्ट की राय मालूम करनी है तो इसे फौरन मालूम कर लीजिये और इसको फौरन बन्द कीजिए। इससे आप यही नहीं करेंगे कि आप लोगों के स्वास्थ्य को बढ़ायेंगे पर आप देश के पशु धन को भी बढ़ायेंगे। पशु धन के सम्बन्ध में मैं यह कहना चाहता हूँ कि जब लार्ड लिनलिथगो यहां आये तो उन्होंने कैटिल ब्रीडिंग (Cattle breeding) में काफी दिलचस्पी ली थी। लेकिन उसके बाद कैटिल ब्रीडिंग की हालत बहुत खराब हो गई है। आपकी थ्योरीटिकल (theoretical) स्कीम में कोई काम नहीं आ रही है। हमारी अलवर रियासत में दो ब्रीडें बहुत अच्छी होती थीं, एक मेवाड़ और दूसरी राठ। पर पिछले हिन्दू मुसलमानों के झगड़ों में यह बुरी तरह खराब हो गई और अब न आपको अच्छे बुल्स (bulls) मिलेंगे और न अच्छी गायें ही मिलेंगी। मैं कहूँगा कि आप इस तरफ खास तवज्जह दें और इस ब्रीड को बढ़ायें।

हुकूमतें हैं जो यह समझती हैं कि वह सब कुछ जानती हैं, उनसे ज्यादा कोई काबिल नहीं है। और ऐसी बातों के लिये कह देते हैं कि हमारे पास पैसा नहीं है। इसलिए मैं कहूंगा कि रियासतों के मामले में आप आसानी से कामयाब नहीं होंगे। इसके लिए आपको सरदार पटेल की इमदाद लेनी होगी। उनके लिए तो आप जितने स्ट्रॉंग स्टेप्स (strong steps) ले सकते हैं, तभी आपकी स्कीमें वहां कामयाब हो सकती हैं।

Shri Ram Chandra Upadhyaya (United State of Matsya): Sir, as far as the question of increasing the production of food-grains is concerned, I think the honourable Minister does not stand in need of knowing anything more than what he already knows. Whatever he knows is sufficient. But the fault is that it is not being acted upon. I have read your pamphlet. It shows that good schemes have been devised but the mistake is that they are not brought into operation. Therefore as far as the question of the increasing of the production is concerned, I would like to submit only so much that efforts should be made to put into practice all these schemes.

Another thing, about which I wish to draw your attention and which I did not find in your pamphlet, is that simply by increasing the production of food-grains in the country all your difficulties will not be solved. After increasing the production you should try to stop the wastage of food-grains. I have seen that you have not taken this thing into consideration. You might be knowing that in our country many such bad customs prevail according to which feasts are given to 200-400 people at a time. I cannot say whether this custom prevails in other parts of the country as well or not, but in my side a custom is that when some one dies then his heirs have to give a feast to 1,000-2,000 persons. He becomes duty bound to give a feast to 1,000-2,000 persons though he may have to sell his house for it's.

Next I would submit that these days the villagers have got pots of money. The people of their society compel them to spend the money and they have to give a kind of feast which they call Gangoj i.e. people are fed in the name of Ganges. I wish to draw your attention to the fact that substantial quantities of food grains are being wasted. You know that during the war time the British Government had enforced many such laws whereby they had placed a restriction that, as far as possible, the least number of persons may come in the feasts. But that was a foreign government. They did not have the co-operation of the public, therefore they did not succeed. But you have got the co-operation of the public. I think that if you would enact any such legislation you would surely be successful. But whatever measures you adopt, impose them strongly. Do not fix the punishment in the shape of fines of Rs. 10/- or Rs. 20/- but give deterrent sentences; and only then you would be successful. In our State the late Maharaja had made such a law that any one who would perform the marriage of a boy of less than 16 years of age will have to pay a fine of Rs. 500/-. The result was that people began to perform the marriages of even 10 year old boys, and used to say that when we spend thousands of rupees in the marriages, we would pay the fine of Rs. 500/- also. Therefore I would submit that the punishment of fine will not work. For this deterrent punishment should be fixed and the police be instructed to exercise fullest severity. I think that by doing so your difficulty will to a great extent be solved.

The other thing that I wish to submit is that if you were to go and see the rural areas, I do not want to say that you do not know, you would know what kind of food a peasant eats. The peasants eat only baked flour with salt and chillies. The result is that more food-grains are consumed. Therefore you have to solve this problem also. I know that you have this matter under consideration. I have read your pamphlet wherein you have mentioned that in order to tell the people the nutritive value of food you have begun publishing a bulletin. But I wish to submit that the main fault is that the people living in our rural or urban areas do not comprehend this problem of food grains properly. You should try to make the people realize this thing, and for this purpose only one English bulletin will not keep the work going. In the first place how many people in our country are literate, how many of them know English, and out of them how many take the trouble of reading such bulletins. Besides this the people think that they know all whatever is written in the books. As regards the villages your English bulletins will not work and even Hindi bulletins will not keep the work going. I think that if you would teach these things to the people with the help of mobile cinemas you can achieve success.

The third thing that I wish to submit is that you should at once stop the vegetable ghee. Some capitalists have created a wrong idea in our mind that there is a great dearth of fat in our country and so it should be continued. But I wish to submit that it is very injurious and should at once be stopped. I do not think the opinion of any scientist is necessary in this matter. If you have not taken it and have been taking pure ghee then take it for three months and see the result and only then would you know. You, in your speech, in your pamphlet and in the answers to the questions put to you, have said that you have appointed some scientists to test and ascertain the food value of this vegetable ghee. I would tell you that this matter concerns the capitalists. The solving of this problem will be quite difficult. These capitalists will not let you succeed quite easily. They will go on putting obstacles in your way for two or three years, and they have means to do so, and they will not let you come to any final result. If you have to ascertain the opinion of one or two scientists then do ascertain it at once and then directly stop its production. By doing so you will not only promote the health of the people but will also increase the cattle-wealth of the country. About the cattle-wealth I wish to submit that when Lord Linlithgow came to this country he took sufficient interest in cattle breeding. But after that the condition of cattle breeding has deteriorated very considerably. Your theoretical schemes are not at all proving serviceable. In our Alwar State, two very good breeds of cattle were to be found, one was called Mewar and the other Rath. But during the last Hindu-Muslim riots these breeds got spoiled a great deal and now you would get neither good cows nor good bulls. I would request you to pay special attention towards this and propagate this breed.

Next I wish to submit that whatever schemes you devise, you must bring them into operation in the States as well. The condition in my State is that even agriculture department is not there. The cattle-breeding department, that used to function during the days of Lord Linlithgow, has been closed down and a dairy has been started in its place. Therefore my humble submission to you is that you should pay special attention towards the

[Shri Ram Chandra Upadhyaya]

States. The States have such governments that think that they know everything and no one else is more capable than them; and for such thing they say that they have no money. Therefore I would submit that as far as States are concerned you would not succeed so easily. For this you will have to take the help of Sardar Patel. For the States you take as strong steps as you can and only then your schemes will be successful there.

Shri H. Siddaveerappa (Mysore State): Sir, I am glad the Government have decided to put a stop to the import of food grains from 1951. That is a silver lining that we see in the otherwise dark horizon. But in order to see that this policy of stopping imports altogether is satisfactorily worked out I would request the Government to consider the question whether the agriculturist is given sufficient incentive to produce the required quantity of food in this country itself. Sir, before the war nobody ever bothered about the agriculturist until a calamity like a famine occurred. But now the time has come when at last everybody's attention is drawn towards this neglected profession, and we have got to see that the agriculturist does not get into the whirlpool of another depression. Depression is bound to come, sooner or later.

After all in the last war after ten years the depression came. What happened then was, nobody bothered about the agriculturists, when they were selling their corn at the rate of Rupees Two per palla. Nobody ever cared to find out whether it was an economic holding, and whether agriculture was a paying industry and the time has come when the Government of India will have to take courage in both hands and try to secure by means of a legislative enactment on the model of the Agricultural Act, 1947, in the United Kingdom, wherein the State guarantees that if the price falls below a particular level it will step in and purchase that commodity. Sir, the present position is that so long as the profit motive is there in our economy, the agriculturist is promoted in to grow more, unless and until he is assured of a reasonable price for the commodity he grows. Of course, an honourable member suggested and rather complained stating that in India the agriculturist has taken to commercial crop and has started to strike by not producing food crop. Why is it? Every body knows how the agriculturist has suffered during this war. If at all there was anybody in the society who had to undergo all the sufferings that followed after the wake of these controls, it was the agriculturist. For other necessities of life like kerosene and any other thing he had to purchase in the black-market, whereas his commodity was taken away for a controlled rate. Nobody knows how the prices were fixed. The figure for 1939 was taken as a basis for 100 as the index number and whether that figure allowed for him anything in the way of a margin of profit, and whether that point was taken into consideration, nobody knows. Therefore when we take into consideration even in the year 1947 when rationing was at its maximum in 1,008 towns covering 148.3 millions of our population and the State had the monopoly of procurement and distribution, food crop was not available anywhere, at that time who fed the rest of the population? I would like to ask. Food was not available anywhere. Therefore, to say that the agriculturist has not played his part properly, seems to be the unkindest cut of all. Unfortunately he is the man who has not been able to stand on his own legs. He is the man who does not know how to safeguard his own interest. If only he had known how to safeguard his own interest, he could have taken proper care to see that his interest was also safeguarded. Therefore, in order to see the Government of India's ambition that no food grain is imported by the year 1951 is fulfilled, it absolutely essential that the Government should introduce a legislative enactment that for a particular period at least, the price that is to be fixed, an economic price, leaving him a margin of profit, is enforced.

Sir, I know it may be said it is a provincial subject. If need be, I should say that the Government of India Act will have to be amended with a view to see that the Centre takes the powers to pass that legislation, and I should submit that unless and until some incentive is given to the agriculturist by way of guaranteeing him at least a minimum price, the Government, I am afraid, may not get that co-operation and may not induce the agriculturists to give that amount of co-operation, which is absolutely essential to avert crisis in this food problem.

श्री ऐल० एस० भाटकर: सभापति जी, मैं मिनिस्टर साहब को उनके काम के लिये बधाई देना चाहता हूँ। मैं जो कुछ इस समय कहना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि इस समय खेतीहर लोगों की हालत अच्छी नहीं है और उनको जितनी सरकार से मदद मिलनी चाहिये उतनी उनको मदद नहीं मिल रही है। खेतीहर लोग अपनी तरफ से जितनी महनत करते हैं उतनी मदद उनको सरकार की ओर से नहीं मिल रही है। इस समय खेतीहर लोग कर्जों के भार से दबे हुए हैं। साहूकार लोग उनको बहुत दुख देते हैं जिससे वे लोग उनके भार से दबे चले जाते हैं। खेतीहर लोग जितनी खेती करते हैं वह सब उनको साहूकार लोगों के कर्ज उतारने में देना पड़ता है। इसलिये गवर्नमेंट को पहिले यह करना चाहिये कि जिस काश्तकार के ऊपर जो कर्जों का बोझ है उसको दूर करना चाहिये और काश्तकार की जो जमीन साहूकारों ने कर्जों में ली है वह काश्तकारों को वापिस दिला दी जाय। यह गवर्नमेंट का काम है कि जो पूँजीपति लोग हैं उनके पास जो ज्यादा जमीन है और जिस जमीन से वह पूरा अनाज पैदा नहीं कर सकते हैं वह काश्तकार को मिलनी चाहिये।

हमारे बरार में जमीन बहुत ही उपजाऊ है। जिस वजह से बरार को "सुन्ने की कराउ" कहते थे मगर आज उसकी हालत बहुत ही खराब है और काश्तकार अनाज का भी मोहताज है। अगर हमारी सरकार काश्तकारों को मदद दे, उनको पैसा दे और उनको जमीन ठीक करने के लिये ट्रैक्टर और पानी दे तो वहां की जमीन में बहुत भारी पैदावार हो सकती है। गवर्नमेंट की मदद न मिलने की वजह से वहां बहुत सी उपजाऊ जमीन बेकार पड़ी हुई है। इसकी वजह यह है कि जितनी अच्छी जमीन है उसके लिये काश्तकारों को जितना पैसा चाहिये, गवर्नमेंट से जितनी उनको मदद चाहिये, वह मदद उनको

गवर्नमेंट से नहीं मिलती है। इस वजह से जितना वहां गेहूं पैदा होना चाहिये उतना वहां पर नहीं होता है। गवर्नमेंट का यह काम है, उनको अच्छे बीज दिये जायें, और वहां पर जो कपास होती है उसके लिये भी सरकार को उनकी काफी मदद करनी चाहिये जिससे वहां पर काफी कपास पैदा हो सके। सरकार को काश्तकारों के लिये अच्छे से अच्छे बीज का प्रबंध करना चाहिये इन वजहों से जिन काश्तकारों की हालत कमजोर हो गई है, गवर्नमेंट का फर्ज है कि उनको हर तरह से मदद देनी चाहिये। उनकी हालत सुधारने के लिये गवर्नमेंट को हर प्रकार की मदद करनी चाहिये। मैं जो कुछ कहता हूँ सरकार को उसकी ओर ध्यान देना चाहिये। मिनिस्टर साहब ने जो अपने भाषण में कहा है उससे हम काश्तकारों को कुछ फायदा जरूर होगा ऐसी मेरी राय है मगर तो भी मेरी सूचनाओं की ओर श्री मिनिस्टर साहब ध्यान देंगे ऐसी मैं आशा करता हूँ।

Shri L. S. Bhatkar (C. P. and Berar: General): Sir, I wish to congratulate the honourable the Minister for his work. What I wish to submit now is that the condition of the agriculturists these days is far from good and they are not getting that much help from the Government as they ought to have received. As compared to the hard work the agriculturists themselves are putting in they are not receiving much help from the Government. At present the agriculturists are being crushed under the burden of indebtedness. The money-lenders trouble them very much with the result that their burden of indebtedness goes on increasing. Whatever produce these agriculturists raise they have to hand over the whole of it towards the re-payment of their debts. Therefore, in the first place, the Government should take steps to liquidate the indebtedness of the agriculturists and they should be restored all the lands that the money-lenders have usurped against the settlement of their debts. It is the duty of the Government to see that those extra lands that are in the possession of the capitalists and who cannot raise full complement of food grains from them may be given back to the agriculturists.

The second thing that I wish to submit is that the agriculturists do not get the full price of the food grains they grow. It is often seen that the agriculturists do not get the full price of their food grains. I belong to Berar. On our side cotton is mainly grown. About cotton the policy of the Government is, and I know it quite well, that for the cotton our Government purchases from Iraq, Iran and Pakistan a price double than that of Indian cotton is paid. In exchange for this cotton our Government exports cloth to all these countries. The price of the cloth given to them is fixed by taking out the average of the market rates of cotton in Pakistan, Iraq, Iran and India. This is just like the proverb which means that fools grind and the wise enjoy. The result is that though the agriculturist puts in hard labour yet he does not get a reasonable price of his produce. I like to submit that our agriculturists should be given a price of their cotton in accordance to the price of the cloth that is charged from the countries to which it is exported.

The second thing is that when the agriculturists take their produce to the market just at that time the Government imposes control. The food grains are taken from the agriculturists at the control rate. When the entire produce of the agriculturists is marketed and stocked by the stockists then the Government lifts the control. When the stocks held by the agriculturists come to an end they have to purchase back from the market their own produce at double the price. This is definitely an injustice to the agriculturists. It is a bad thing and the Government must consider itself duty bound to eradicate this. From this it would be clear to every body that the condition of the agriculturists is far from good. Not only this, but as far as education also is concerned the agriculturists get little help. In agricultural colleges the children of agriculturists do not get as much facilities as ought to have been given to them. It is often seen that these colleges admit only the children of those rich and the urban people only, who have no connection at all with agriculture. If a percentage be determined then it would be found that only one or two children of the agriculturist class are admitted. The money spent on these colleges comes from the agriculturists yet they do not derive any advantage from them. The Government should attend to this. The children of the agriculturists only should be admitted to these colleges.

In Berai the land is very fertile and for this reason it was called a gold field. But today the condition is so very bad that the agriculturists are dying for want of food. If our Government were to help these agriculturists, give them money, provide tractors and irrigation facilities for re-claiming the land, huge quantities of food grains could be grown there. For want of Government help vast areas of fertile land are lying fallow. The reason is that considering the vast areas of fertile land, the agriculturists do not get as much monetary aid and Government help that they ought to have been given. The result is that the production of wheat is far less than what it ought to have been. It is the duty of the Government to supply them good seeds; and as regards cotton the Government should give them enough help so that the production of cotton may go up. The Government should make arrangements for the supply of better kinds of seeds.

For the reasons mentioned above the Government is duty bound to give every kind of help to those agriculturists whose pecuniary circumstances have become worse. In order to better their conditions the Government should give them every possible help. The Government should pay attention to what I submit. I think that we agriculturists will surely be benefitted by the measures referred to by the honourable Minister in his speech. Still I hope that the honourable the Minister will pay attention to the facts mentioned by me.

Shri Kala Venkata Rao (Madras: General): Sir, I support the Demand moved by the honourable Minister for Agriculture and Food. In view of the shortness of time I do not propose to go over the whole question which has been partly traversed by many honourable Members.

I wish to speak only on two points and the first of them is about the need for having a better arrangement with reference to procurement. According to our economists, we have in India a food deficit of only 10 per cent. That being so I do not see any reason why the country should be upset over its food requirements. No doubt there is a great outcry from every corner of the country that they want more food. But the figures published by Government, the newspapers and the economists only show that there is a deficit of 10 per cent. Therefore I do not think it will be very difficult to solve this problem.

As far as the question of food is concerned, leaving the question of agriculture alone, we have to start a good policy of procurement. I am very sorry to learn from the debate that took place here some time ago that certain provinces are not at all responding to the request of the Centre with reference to procurement schemes. I think that we must blame the provinces for that. One province has fulfilled only 2.5 per cent. of its procurement quota. In Madras, though we had scarcity conditions prevailing for the last two or three years, the procurement figure was 20 per cent. and more. So I think that in the matter of allocation of food grains, the Centre is doing an injustice. My point is this: You ought to distribute your supplies on the basis of procurement in the provinces. Then alone the Provinces will respond properly. If this is not done, there will be laxity in procurement and there will be the difficulty of the provinces coming to the Centre asking for more allotment. It is due to this that there is laxity in procurement. It is only due to efficient procurement measures that certain provinces have been able to show greater procurement. As a matter of fact I can tell my honourable friends that provinces like the Central Provinces have not given their quota. I understand that even in the United Provinces procurement is a bit lax.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Neither is correct.

Shri Kala Venkata Rao: I am very glad to be corrected. But I want to know from the honourable Minister whether there is any Province in the country which has not produced its quota of procurement according to the scheme. If really there is such a province, it should not be given anything from the Central reserve till it procures to the limit to which it is asked to procure. That is my suggestion.

Now coming to the target fixed by the Government, I am very glad to hear that they are planning in such a way that by the end of 1951 there will be no more imports of food. It is very good. But we have to make the country self-sufficient in the meanwhile. For that, two things have to be done. First we have to improve the condition of the man who drives the plough. As every one knows he is not getting his due. We must pay speedy attention to the question of land tenures. There may be difficulties in the way. But we should not allow them to stand in our way. We should undertake legislation to that effect immediately and create in the man who cultivates the soil an interest in production and a contented life. If we do that, production will certainly increase.

The other point that I wish to speak upon relates to reclamation. Honourable Members have referred to this. The honourable Minister said that by 1951 he is going to reclaim 7 lakhs of acres. Reclamation work on a huge scale was done in Soviet Russia and also in Fascist Italy. Before the last War Mussolini brought under cultivation 70 lakhs of acres of swampy and marshy land. He spent large sums of money for the purpose. We have read reports about it which say that a town called Littoria was built in the course of this reclamation of the Pontine Marshes. Therefore, if we have the will we can do the same thing here.

Next I want to refer to the co-operative method of farming. I am one with my honourable friend Mr. Prakasam in thinking that co-operation should form the basis of decentralisation not only with reference to food and agriculture, but with reference to many other things also. I must confess, however, that I cannot agree with him in his advocacy of a hybrid type of society known as the Producer-cum-Co-operative Society. I think, on the other hand, that we must have in the country a number of multi-purpose co-operative societies which will deal with the needs of the common cultivator and then alone we will be able to produce more and distribute on an equitable basis and create non-scarcity conditions throughout the country. Therefore my request to the Honourable Minister is that in order to achieve his target in 1951, he should improve the condition of the agriculturists by legislation in the Provinces and by aid from the Centre and also introduce the system of multi-purpose co-operative societies as a decentralising factor. As I said, he should allot from the Centre food pool, quotas to Provinces on the basis of procurement made by each province.

I support the Demand.

Begum Aizaz Rasul (U.P.: Muslim): Sir, so much has been said on this very important subject that, knowing that I have only a few minutes time, I shall confine myself to two points.

First I want to ask the honourable Minister as to what they have done about drawing up a programme of balanced diet for the people of this country. No one can minimise the importance of the value of the food from the health point of view. We do not know the nutritive value in calories or vitamins of the food we eat. Even the educated people here do not know it. For a country in which millions of people live in the villages, it is necessary for the Ministry of Food to make special efforts to publicise according to the income groups of the people what the best diet is. I would suggest that different tables suitable to the different age groups and different income groups should be prepared and supplied. We should know what the growing children of this country should be fed on in order to build up healthy bodies and also what the grown-ups should eat. We have no idea at all in this respect. This point has been raised many times before and yet nothing has been done. We have been given a lot of literature by the Ministry of Agriculture and Food. I only wish that all the schemes laid down in these papers help in producing more food and improving the health of the people.

My second point relates to the productivity of the soil. In divided India it is estimated that 242 million acres are cultivated and we have about 89 million acres as cultivable waste lands. Due to some reason or other all these waste lands cannot be brought under cultivation. It will require a very long period of time in order to bring all these waste lands under cultivation. The Government's programme of ploughing 6.2 million acres by means of tractors over a period of six years will not make the lands suitable for proper cultivation, as most of these are in unirrigated tracts and have many other handicaps, that is, bullocks, labour, seeds, implements etc. Another vital problem is that the newly, deep, tractor-ploughed areas may become vulnerable to erosion if care is not taken.

Opening up of certain tracts by means of tractor ploughing and heavy machinery is good to a certain extent only. It will be several years before the major irrigation projects are ready. Their utility need not be over-emphasised for improving agriculture. Again, if there are no proper soil-conservation measures, the massive dams will silt up in a few decades. What we need is not only more food production for a few years, but maintaining increased production from the land over hundreds of years. The problem is to preserve our cultivated lands and increase production and maintain their potentiality by means of good varieties of seeds, manures green manuring, irrigation water, field embankments, fuel plantations, improving grazing areas and implementing all-round soil conservation measures. In the U.S.A., during the war, by adopting soil conservation practices, from less acreage and with fewer men they increased the yields from farm lands by about 25 per cent. We know that in a highly industrialised country like America, over 60 per cent. of the industries of the nation are dependent indirectly or directly upon agriculture. I may bring to the notice of the House that for the production of textiles, wool, dairy industry, tractors and agricultural machinery, lumber mills, sugar, chemical manufacture, plastics, nylon, paints, varnishes etc. America depends on agricultural resources. If America, in spite of its being so highly industrialised, depends upon these agricultural resources, how much more must India, which is an absolutely agricultural country depend upon them and how much more wealth can be produced if agriculture in this country is developed on proper lines. Therefore, I bring to the notice of the Government that soil conservation measures should be taken up immediately. The potential wealth and living standard of the nation depends on its natural resources of soil wealth. If, through carelessness and neglect, these resources are wasted beyond a certain point, the whole structure of our national achievement must be impaired.

Shri H. R. Guruv Reddy (Mysore State): Sir, I am thankful to you for having given me an opportunity to say a few words. I heard the statement of the honourable Minister and the policy that was adumbrated just now. But, Sir, I do not think he ever mentioned how he is going to win over the cultivator of India. He seems to have said everything else but that, in detail. He is all good and all kind. There is nothing particular against him, but he is himself perhaps labouring under a particular system or a policy which is conducive to all others. I would like to ask which of the members of the Cabinet do really represent the cultivator of India.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): None.

Dr. B. V. Keskar (Deputy Minister for External Affairs): Which of the members of this House represent?

Shri H. R. Guruv Reddy: I do not think there is any one who could put his hand on his heart and say that he is the one that represents him.

Dr. B. V. Keskar: Except the speaker!

Shri H. R. Guruv Reddy: Well, Sir, the charge is levelled against him that he takes to economic crops and does not grow food crops. The Deputy-Speaker himself said that when he spoke, but I would like to draw the attention of this House to the fact that he is driven to grow economic crop, because he has to meet his daily needs. You want him to produce food crop but you do not want him to thrive in this country. How else can he get on except by growing a little commercial crops? That is the only method if he has to maintain himself. If you want to divert him from growing commercial crop to growing food crop, give him the fair price for his product. What have you done so far? As some of the honourable Members have said, you have done nothing. I have been closely watching. Have you evaluated his own personal labour? Have you taken the value of his labour, of himself, his wife, his child or his servant? You have not done that. You have never cared to value the labour expended personally by him on his land. Have you taken care to see what is the value of the land that he has purchased or what is the market value of the land? You have not done that. What is the interest charge on that? What are his tools and plants? What is the manure? What is his seed? Have you ever taken into consideration all these aspects and then come to the conclusion that this is the cost of production of this unit? There is no scientific basis for price fixation in our country. As was stated, it was Rs. 20 or so year before last, it is now raised by a fish or a loaf being thrown at him, by Rs. 5 or 10. You call it an enhanced rate. Is that a fair price? Certainly not. You can never win over the agriculturist by these methods. The only true method, the only correct method, the only scientific method, by which you can call him to order is to evaluate his labour, to find out his standards of living, to improve his standards of living, by giving him facilities for his education, for his medicine, for his living and all the thing that he expects. Well, Sir, I should like to know whether you have at any time responded to his cries. You please compare the attention that you have given to labour on the one side and to that to agriculturists on the other. Every cry of the labour is satisfied by you. I would say at the same time that no cry of the agriculturist has so far been satisfied by you. Therefore, all this trouble has arisen. If you want that your demands must be satisfied, you should rise to the occasion and see that you pay the proper price and not just take away his produce under procurement. If you do not listen to his just cries, it is a moral crime for you to extract his produce from him. I know how the law of procurement has been working. I have seen it. I have seen the methods of procurement, I have seen how they are enforced through the police. So many atrocities have been committed against the villager, the agriculturist proper. Several instances must have come to your notice also as to the kind of methods employed to secure as much as you wanted. He too is intelligent enough now to know that you shall not get. What is the position? In our times, we shall not allow this class of people to go into destitution, to become what I may say "desperate". I am thankful to the honourable Member Shri Prakasam and another honourable Member for sounding a note of warning, and I would elaborate it, if you pardon me, Sir. Communism is at the border. Do not allow it to come into our country. Do not allow that sort of mentality to get into our society by driving people by these procurement methods and not giving them the ordinary facilities for his cultivation, for the education of his children, for curing his diseases, for his maintenance, for keeping his body and soul together. Unless and until we ensure these things to him, we have no right—no moral right—upon him. Therefore, I would plead: if you want to keep Communism away from the borders of our land, please do something for him immediately. Raise his standard of living. As you are responding to labour because it is organised, so you should also rise to the occasion and see that the cultivator is satisfied and not allow him to get into a sort of Guild and give such trouble as the other section is giving. Let us not expect this innocent section to give us any trouble. They will not. They are not anxious to give anybody any trouble. They are not known to give any trouble anywhere. Let us see that they rise a little above the level in which they find themselves today. I plead that you should do everything in your power and in your capacity for these people and see that the agriculturist surrenders, not only surrenders, but he wants actually to give his excess produce. Evaluate what he is expected to grow and give him his return. As my friend said, the price that you fix need not necessarily be a fixed price for years and years to come. It should be the price which will keep him going in those standards you set for him. The standards should not be below the standards of the other labour class in whose favour you have been yielding so much every day. Please keep him satisfied and I am confident that you will get all that you want from him.

“ग्रो मोर फूड कैम्पेन” को आप देखिये। वहां पर सब चीजें मौजूद हैं, मांस मौजूद है, मछली मौजूद है, अंडे मौजूद हैं, लेकिन घी का और दूध का वहां कोई जिक्र नहीं है। यह देश जो बहुत हद तक निरामिष है उस में घी और दूध की बात हम “ग्रो मोर फूड कैम्पेन” में न करें, यह लज्जा की बात है। घी की जगह वैजेटेबुल घी बढ़ता जा रहा है। सरकारी रिपोर्टों से पता लगता है कि यहां सन् १९३७ में २३० लाख मन घी होता था वहां सन् १९४७ में घट कर १११ लाख मन हो गया है और बनास्पति घी सन् ३७ में साठे छः लाख मन होता था वहां सन् ४७ में वह पौने बत्तीस लाख मन हो गया है। हमें इस समय तेल की भी जरूरत है। मैं बनास्पति घी के कारखानों को बन्द करने की बात नहीं कहता लेकिन मैं इतना जरूर कहूंगा कि उसका हाइड्रोजिनेशन, बन्द करके केवल तेल बनाने का काम रखना चाहिये इस देश में जितने ज्यादा तेल की जरूरत है उसको देखते हुए मुझे यह विश्वास है कि अगर उसका जमाना बन्द कर दिया जायगा तो इन कारखानों को कोई नुकसान नहीं होगा।

मैं कहना तो बहुत चाहता था लेकिन चूंकि समय की कमी है इसलिये मैं अपने सुझावों को एक एक वाक्य में ही रखूंगा। पहले मुझे यह कहना है कि यहां तक पशुओं के सुधार का मामला है वहां, तब स्थानीय नसलों की उन्नति करनी चाहिये। दधी गो सेवा संघ ने इस काम को करके बता दिया है। लाल सिन्धी और साहिवाल गाय के बारे में हमको पता लग चुका है कि उनसे जो बैल पैदा होते हैं वह खेती के लायक नहीं होते। सरकारी ब्रीडिंग फार्मों में नसलों का सुधार इस प्रकार होना चाहिये जिससे कि हमको अधिक दूध वाली गायें और खेती के योग्य बैल भी मिल सकें। स्थानीय अच्छी नसलों की कमी होती जा रही है। हिसार में अब अच्छी गायें कम होती जा रही हैं। वह बाहर भेजी जा रही हैं। इसका नतीजा यह निकलेगा कि थोड़े दिनों में हमको अच्छी गायें नहीं मिलेंगी। बड़े शहरों में बम्बई कलकत्ता मद्रास में इनका जाना रोकना चाहिये, क्योंकि वहां पर ये गायें दूध देना बन्द करते ही कसाइयों के हाथ बेच दी जाती हैं।

दूसरी बात चारे की है। एक तरफ तो इसकी इतनी इफ़रात है कि उसका उपयोग नहीं होता और दूसरी तरफ हमारे जानवर चारे की वजह से मर रहे हैं। जंगलों में साइलेज बना कर आप उसको रेल और ट्रकों द्वारा और जगहों पर पहुंचा सकते हैं। यदि और अन्न की ओर न देख अधिक रुपया देने वाली फ़सलें पैदा की जा रही हैं और लोग कहते हैं कि इससे हमको लाभ है। मैं कहता हूँ कि इससे हमको हानि है। एक तरफ तो हम करोड़ों रुपयों का अन्न मंगा रहे हैं और उसमें रुपया दे रहे हैं और दूसरी तरफ हमको इस बात से सन्तोष हो रहा है कि हम इस तरह की फ़सलें तैयार कर रहे हैं कि जिनसे हमको रुपया मिल रहा है। अगर हिसाब लगाया जायगा कि कितना रुपया हमें मिल रहा है और कितना रुपया हम अन्न की पैदावार न होने के कारण बाहर से अन्न मंगवाने पर खर्च कर रहे हैं तो हमें मालूम होगा कि हमें इसमें हानि हो रही है।

इसलिये मैं यह कहना चाहता हूँ कि हमको इस बात का ध्यान रखना चाहिये कि हमारे यहां पर खेती की उन्नति पशु पालन के बग़ैर नहीं हो सकती। इसके लिये पशु-वध बन्द होना चाहिये, और पशुओं की उन्नति होनी चाहिये। मैं माननीय मंत्री जी से कहना चाहता हूँ कि हम इस सम्बन्ध में इस समय बहुत कम काम कर रहे हैं।

Seth Govind Das (C.P. and Berar: General): Sir, in this country we cannot separate agriculture from animal husbandry. In the countries where tractors are used for agriculture and all the work is done with machines there the department of agriculture does not have any special connection with that of animal husbandry, and both the departments remain quite separate. But where the agriculture is dependent on bullocks there if we separate agriculture from animal husbandry, we cannot make any improvements in agriculture. Here we have 36 crores acres of arable land and after calculating the number of bullocks that we have at present, we come to know that we require one and a half crore more bullocks. While the population of our country goes on increasing day by day the number of live-stock is decreasing. Our country is short of bullocks and yet we wish to spend crores of rupees on tractors. I am not opposed to tractors. I acknowledge the fact that we do require tractors also, but tractors only are not going to serve our purpose. On the other hand while with very little prime cost and very little labour and effort we can prepare many kinds of compost manure from cow dung and urine, we are spending crores of rupees on fertilizer factories instead. I acknowledge the fact that we stand in need of the fertilizers also, but in comparison to the fertilizer we need compost manure more.

Just see the Grow More Food Campaign. All the things are there, meat is there, fish is there, eggs are there, but there is no mention at all of ghee and milk. In our country which is to a very great extent vegetarian, if we do not make a mention of ghee and milk in the Grow More Food Campaign then it is a matter of great shame. Instead of ghee the vegetable ghee is gaining ground. From the Government reports it is ascertained that while in 1937 the output of ghee was 230 lac maunds, the production in 1947 came down to 111 lac maunds; and while in 1936 the output of vegetable ghee was six and a half lac maunds in 1947 the production went up to 31-3/4 lac maunds. At present we require Oils also. I do not insist upon the closing down of the Vegetable ghee factories. But this much I would certainly say that stopping its hydrogenation, only the work of the extraction of oils should be continued. Taking into consideration how much oil this country requires I believe that if its hydrogenation will be stopped then these factories will not be put to any loss.

I wished to submit more, but as the time is short I will place my suggestions in one sentence. In the first place I have to say that as far as the question of the improvement of the live-stock is concerned, the local breeds should be improved. The Wardha Gau Seva Sangh has demonstrated it practically. About the red Sindhi and Sahiwal cows we have come to know that the oxen born of them are not fit for agricultural purposes. In the Government cattle breeding farms the improvement of the breeds should be done in such a manner whereby we may get cows yielding greater quantities of milk, and oxen fit for agricultural purposes. The local good breeds are gradually deteriorating. In Hissar the number of good cows is decreasing. They are regularly being exported. The result of all this would be that in very near future we would not be able to get good cows. Their export to Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and other big towns should be stopped because there these cows, no sooner they stop giving milk, are sold to the butchers.

The other thing is about fodder. On one side it is so abundant that it is not being utilized and on the other our animals are dying for want of fodder. After converting it into silage in the jungles you can send it to other places by trains and trucks. Ignoring the fodder and food-grain crops more and more cash crops are being increasingly produced, and the people say that they make more profits by them. I say that we are put to loss by this. On one side we are importing food-grains worth crores of rupees and paying for them in cash and on the other side we are feeling satisfied that we are raising such crops that are giving us more money. If a balance be struck as to how much money we are getting and how much we are paying to foreign countries in order to import food-grains as a result of decline in the production of food-grains, then we would come to know that we are losing money in this.

It is said that even human beings do not get food what to say of the cows. But the people who say so forget that the food of the human beings and the fodder for the animals are derived from one and the same thing. If we grow food-grains we get chaff. You can import food-grains from foreign countries but you cannot import chaff. Therefore whatever we are feeding to the cows with, we are not feeding them out of the food meant for human beings.

I submit that we should keep in mind the fact that in our country improvement in agriculture cannot be made without animal husbandry. Therefore the slaughtering of animals should be stopped and the live-stock improved. I wish to submit to the honourable Minister that we are doing very little in this respect.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C.P. and Berar: General): It is certainly gratifying and satisfactory for the House to realize that the honourable Minister has decided to change his Grow More Food policy, and if anybody deserves congratulations for this I think it is this House which told him in no uncertain terms that the way in which he was trying to seek more food was not the way to get more food.

It is also well to hear, Sir, of a scheme which is going to replace the old Grow More Food plan. I hope, Sir, that the scheme will succeed and all our ambitions will be realized. By realizing those ambitions we will be lifting a heavy burden off the chest of the whole of India and the Finance Minister. But at the same time I would like to suggest that the entire attention in the regard may not be confined only to irrigated lands. We have been spending such a large amount on the 'Grow More Food' that if we take that whole amount, and utilise it I think it should suffice not only to intensify the cultivation in those soils under irrigation, but it would leave a sufficient margin to assist cultivators who are dependent on dry farming. The whole amount is sufficiently big. I know that the proportion of our expenditure on agriculture is very small. Nonetheless what we may have been spending on Grow More Food would I think place in the hands of the Agricultural Minister sufficient funds which, wisely spent, should yield far better results even from non-irrigated lands. I would suggest that in the scheme that is now chalked out the expenditure should be reduced to the minimum and it should be seen from time to time that whatever the Centre is spending is realised in the shape of positive results. Then I am sure there would be a couple of crores of rupees at least easily available for financing the agriculturists in some of the provinces who have been very badly hit on account of bad crops during the last two or three years. That would be money which would not be lost and I for one am against making free gifts for any purpose whatsoever. Free gifts of anything have generally a demoralising effect. So it is better to keep an eye on the return. It may be that we will probably be disappointed in not getting the full return but at the same time money ought never to be given as a sort of mere Christmas gifts and distributed from province to province. We should of course insist upon getting some sort of return for the assistance that we give. In my opinion the main requirement in many parts is financial assistance to the agriculturists. Otherwise we would be spending crores of rupees in reclaiming waste land and on the other hand there would be lakhs of acres of land which would be lying fallow simply because the agriculturist is not in a position to keep cultivation going. That is exactly one of the problems that are staring in the face of the honourable Minister. I am told that the Central Provinces Government have reported that while we were trying to grow more food by reclaiming lakhs of acres of land in area 15 lakhs of acres have gone out of cultivation in another area. Where is then the sense in spending 150 crores to reclaim land when probably 1/10 or even 1/20th of it may have saved at least a portion of the 15 lakh acres of land from going out of cultivation. That is a serious problem to which I would like the honourable Minister to pay his earnest attention.

I cannot possibly touch any other important questions at length within the short time at my disposal and so I shall merely summarise my suggestions.

There was a proposal regarding crop insurance and I think some sort of investigation and training were going on. I am told that under the guise of economy the whole experiment is going to be dropped. I would suggest to the Minister that whatever little progress it has been possible to make should not be given up, because in the whole of India sooner or later there will have to be crop insurance on some scale or the other and from that point of view whatever assistance we can give, whatever information we can supply or trained personnel we possess will be most useful. The expenditure is not much and I hope whatever we have spent will not be permitted to go waste. It will certainly be wasted if we give up the scheme completely all of a sudden.

I would suggest that there should be an effort at wholesale cotton pooling. I come from an area where cotton is extensively grown. As I have said before either here or elsewhere cotton is not a commodity which an average man requires. There is a market for it only in the mills. So it should be possible for the Government to eliminate a very large number of middlemen, so that the cotton is purchased by the Government at the highest possible rate and supplied to the mills at a fixed rate, by which it would be possible to save the loss which the agriculturists incur on account of the presence of the middlemen. Only then it would be possible to get the agriculturists to grow more cotton.

My friend referred to the system in America by which inefficient staff is eliminated and efficient staff given rapid promotions. If the honourable Minister takes the suggestion rather seriously he will have to deal very drastically with his Ministry and with the people in the Agricultural Department. I think due to a wholesale incorporation of fresh blood there has been a considerable amount of inefficiency in his department and the suggestion which my honourable friend has made ought to be taken to heart, so that efficiency will increase and there will be better working of the department.

There is at least one more suggestion which I would like to make before I close so far as research is concerned. Research is done by younger men and I have known complaints that the men at the top often want to reap the fruits of the younger men's labours by getting the results of research published in their own names. I learn that on account of this the whole incentive for further research by the younger men is fast disappearing and there is more or less an end to any valuable research in the agricultural department. This is also another question which the honourable Minister should consider.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): Sir, coming at this late stage I can only refer to one or two difficulties that we feel. It is for the good that a target has been fixed within which we hope to be self-sufficient but I am very sorry to sound a note of warning that this goal is not going to be reached by the plans which the honourable Food Minister is proposing. There is absolutely nothing new in what he has said except the target. Every one of the matters which he referred to had been—what shall I say—given expression to but not acted upon in any province in India.

Taking first the question of making the agriculturists take to cereals what is the position? Take for instance my own district Coimbatore which depends on wells. If we ask the agriculturist to choose as between paddy and cotton, what will be the position? The yield is 8 podhies of cotton per acre which at the prevailing price of Rs. 140 per podhi will yield Rs. 1,120 per acre, whereas an acre yields only 20 salagais of paddy which at the rate at which Government is procuring from him gives him only Rs. 400 per acre. How are you justified in expecting any sane man to give up cotton which he can grow on the same land and go in for paddy cultivation? That is one question which the Government will have to consider seriously.

The second question is that if you are going to ask the man to do that, that is, to take to paddy what will be the position? Some of the agriculturists are going to be allowed to grow the costlier or more remunerative crops and you are going to force only some of them to undergo the sacrifice of growing paddy. Is it going to work? I do not think this sort of thing can work at all. There are only two ways of doing it. Either you ought to make the profit from paddy cultivation equal to that from other crops or you make the sacrifice equal and ask every cultivator on every land that grows any crop to grow at least one food crop once in 18 months or so. I do not think there is any other way of doing it. You cannot make a few agriculturists sacrifice and others reap all the profits they can, nor is it possible to give the same profit, for instance, which a cotton grower or sugarcane grower gets from his crop to the man who grows paddy. Unless the Government is prepared to face that problem I do not think they are going to solve this question of food at all. The only possible method if you are going to tackle the problem seriously is to make the sacrifice equal and you ought to insist.....

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Should it not be extended to other classes also?

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: I am coming to that: don't be in a hurry. So you will have to make the sacrifice equal and you ought to insist that on every acre of land there should at least be one crop of cereal in about 18 months. I say 18 months for this reason. The sugarcane crop wants 12 months and the next cereal crop would require five or six months. So in eighteen months a man can grow both a sugarcane crop and a cereal. In other lands probably there will be three crops: the man can have for instance two commercial crops, one of cotton and another of something else, and a third cereal. So there will be no room for complaint. That is the only way to solve it. In America also when the New Deal came the Government took power to regulate the rotation of crops and insist upon reduction of cotton or wheat as might be found necessary. There a question will arise when you are doing it, if there is any inequality. What America did was it imposed a sort of excise on the costlier or the more profitable crop and with that financed or subsidised the poorer crop. Some such system will have to be adopted if we are going to seriously deal with this question. That seems to me to be the only way.

I may also say in this connection that all that has been done for the Grow More Food Campaign in the shape of supply of manure and other things have gone not for the paddy crop or for any cereal but they have gone only for the industrial crops. A man who is able to get Rs. 1, 120 per acre will certainly use the manure for the land on which he grows the commercial crop and not for the cropping of paddy from which he gets only Rs. 400. So the system that the Government has been adopting with reference to manure has yielded no result whatever.

As you yourself said, Sir, with reference to wells, three things have occurred. One is, as you said, that some pit was shown as a well dug and the money that was paid was divided among the officials concerned and the agriculturist. That was one class of cases. The second class of cases was the man thought he could get water, started digging a well, but could not get water. What was done was when somebody went to supervise he was paid some money and he reported 'the well is all right'. That was the second class of cases. In the third class of cases there was really a well with water but the well was never used for a food crop; it was always useful for an industrial crop. So all the money that has been spent for this Grow More Food Campaign was spent for other purposes and it went in different ways and not one acre of land was benefited in the sense that cereals were grown and added to the food supply of the country. Sir, my time is up and I want to say only one word about the procurement policy which is adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Minister has to reply.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: This is a very important matter and it has not been referred to by anybody.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think it is too late.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: I am sorry I was not able to catch the eye of the Speaker at any discussion with reference to food. I have had some practical experience in working it for a long time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am so sorry.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: I want only one or two minutes. What is done is this. In the villages the Government goes to procure. It is procuring actually in my Province all the so-called surplus from the agriculturists. What happens is the poor man has to yield and give not only the surplus but even that which is required for his needs. He is forced to give it. All sorts of persecution and all sorts of trouble are given to him and he has to yield. What is the result? What is procured is taken away to an urban area. It is not left in the village. When the grain is exhausted in the village probably within one month of the harvest it has got no grain whatever. Even though the Government publish with headlines that the quota has been raised to 12 ounces I have heard cases in the villages where they could not get even 2 ounces, and an order has been issued in some of the districts that only 4 ounces can be supplied. But there are cases in which even that 4 ounces was not available and they were told that there was no stock. Is this a proper way of doing things? I have heard that there have been villages where for two and three continuous days people could not get any cereals and they had to go without food. They had to live on roots and things like that. Is that a sensible way of doing things? On the other hand the richer man is able to purchase the officers and go his own way.

I will only say this. When I came here for the meeting in January the price of rice was.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May we not now hear the honourable Minister?

Mr. T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Sir, I have finished. The price of rice was 2-1/2 measures a rupee in January. Now I went there last week. It is 1-1/4 measures a rupee at the present moment. What does it show? Any amount is available in the market in spite of the procurement about which we are boasting. But the price has gone up like that. How is the poor man to live and how is the labourer to live? We are talking as if we are doing everything for the poor man and safeguarding his interest. You can see exactly what the actual position is.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Sir, I am afraid I may not be able to cover most of the points that have been referred to in the course of this very instructive and educative debate. I am grateful for numerous constructive suggestions which have been made to me and I do propose to go into the more important ones of those suggestions and in the course of informal discussions and contacts with the Members of the House to thrash out the details of those suggestions with a view to be able to implement them. I rather feel at a disadvantage when references are made to details of provincial administration and to incidents and facts relating to certain distant places, cities or villages in different provinces. These are spheres of action in which the Central Government can only, on receipt of specific cases, go into them, examine them, give suitable directions to take the necessary action. It is not possible from here to administer in detail the entire running of the procurement system in all the villages of India. We can give directions and see that these directions are carried out and I will be certainly thankful to all Members of the House who give me specific instances of the violations of the rules of procurement and any other hard cases that have come to their knowledge.

There are one or two important things to which I think I must make a reference however brief it may have to be on account of lack of time. Our colleague Shri Prakasam made a reference to the F.A.O. organisation. I think in fairness to truth and also in fairness to that organisation I will place very

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry I have to interrupt the honourable Minister: 5 P.M. It is a very interesting speech, however it is five o'clock and we cannot proceed further.

REPORT OF REHABILITATION FINANCE ADMINISTRATION FOR HALF YEAR ENDING 31ST DECEMBER, 1948

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Sir, I lay on the table a copy of the Report of the Rehabilitation Finance Administration for the half-year ending the 31st December, 1948, in accordance with sub-section (2) of Section 18 of the Rehabilitation Finance Administration Act, 1948.

REPORT OF THE REHABILITATION FINANCE ADMINISTRATION FOR THE HALF YEAR ENDING THE 31ST DECEMBER, 1948

The Rehabilitation Finance Administration was set up with effect from the 1st June 1948 under the Rehabilitation Finance Administration Act, 1948, for the purpose of giving financial assistance on reasonable terms to displaced persons to enable them to settle in business or industry. The administration consists of a Chairman, three officials appointed by the Central Government, and three non-officials nominated by the Central Government. There is an Advisory Board, consisting of 13 members, to advise the Administration on matters of policy, and Regional Committees will also be formed shortly to advise each Branch of the Administration at Simla, Bombay and Calcutta. The Central Government advances money from time to time for the business of the Administration, the aggregate amount of which will not exceed ten crores of rupees. The Administration entertains applications for loans of Rs. 5,000 and over upto Rs. 50,000 except in the case of co-operative societies or joint stock companies where the maximum may be up to rupees one lakh. It is hoped that all the Branches of the Administration namely, at Simla, Bombay, Calcutta and Lucknow will be in full working order with effect from the 1st April 1949, when the average of the monthly loans sanctioned would be about 50 lakhs of rupees.

The details of the working of the Administration are given in the statement.

*Not printed in the day's debates. Copy placed in the Library of the House.—Ed. of Deb.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

Sir, the Select Committee on these three Bills and the Bill whose Report of the Select Committee I have just presented to the House, was the same. Though the meeting of the Committee on that Bill was held, the meeting on these three Bills could not be held on account of the absence of Dr. Ambedkar. Now he has come back and I hope the Select Committee will meet before the 25th and present the Report. So, I beg to move that the time be extended up to 25th March.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the time appointed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 3, 4, 5, 6, and 10), the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 2 and 4) and the Bill further to amend the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 (Amendment of sections 10, 11 and 13), be further extended upto the 25th March 1949."

The motion was adopted.

INDIAN FINANCE BILL

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Sir, I beg to move:

"That the Bill to give effect to the financial proposals of the Central Government for the year beginning on the first day of April, 1949, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Shri T.A. Ramalingam Chettiar, Shri Biswanath Das, Shri R.K. Sidhva, Shri Surendra Mohan Ghosh, Prof. N.G. Ranga, Shri Ram Nath Goenka, Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad, Shri Mohan Lal Gautam, Shrimati Annie Mascarene, Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt, Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka, Mr. Homi Mody, Shri Khandubhai K. Desai, Shri S.V. Krishnamoorthy Rao, Shri H.V. Kamath, Shri B.L. Sondhi, Shri Kala Venkata Rao, Srijiut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri, Shri K. Hanumanthaiya, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the 25th March, 1949 and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Sir, the financial proposals to which this Bill seeks to give statutory form are proposals which have been set out and explained in the Budget speech, and the proposals have also had the advantage of being fairly and fully discussed by the House during the General Discussion on the Budget and later during the discussion of the Estimates of the Finance Ministry. As far as the postal rates included in the Bill are concerned, they have also been discussed sufficiently during the discussion of the Estimates of the Ministry of Communications. I feel therefore, that it is hardly necessary, and possibly not worthwhile, for me to make a speech on the motion at this stage. If there are any fresh points raised in the course of the debate, then I shall of course try to the best of my ability to answer them when my turn comes for replying to the debate. For the present, Sir, with your permission, I would refrain from making a speech. I would simply commend the motion to the House.

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to give effect to the financial proposals of the Central Government for the year beginning on the first day of April, 1949, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Shri T.A. Ramalingam Chettiar, Shri Biswanath Das, Shri R. K. Sidhva, Shri Surendra Mohan Ghosh, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Shri Ram Nath Goenka, Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad, Shri Mohan Lal Gautam, Shrimati Annie Mascarene, Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt, Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka, Mr. Homi Mody, Shri Khandubhai K. Desai, Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao, Shri H. V. Kamath, Shri B. L. Sondhi, Shri Kala Venkata Rao, Srijiut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri, Shri K. Hanumanthaiya, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the 25th March, 1949, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Mr. Speaker: The House is already aware that today and tomorrow have been allotted for consideration of this motion. At 5 P.M. tomorrow, I shall put the motion to the vote of the House. I propose to call upon the Finance Minister at 4 o'clock tomorrow, to reply. I trust this will suit the House.

As regards time-limit on speeches, I propose to allot ten minutes to each speaker.

An Honourable Member: That is very small.

Mr. Speaker: There is a list of some twenty speakers before me, and I am sure some more who are not members of the Congress Party will also like to participate in the debate. So it is again the same old question, over and over again, of accommodating a large number of speakers. Of course it is entirely left to the House. But I am fixing the time limit of ten minutes, and in exceptional cases, I may extend it to 15 minutes, but under no circumstances for a period of time beyond fifteen minutes.

I am sorry I have to resort to this kind of thing, because I find a large number of people anxious to speak.

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State): What about those who are already on the Select Committee?

Mr. Speaker: As regards those who are already on the Select Committee—whose names are proposed for the Select Committee—the House knows my views on this matter. They will have a chance of discussing the Bill threadbare and so I expect they will give a chance to other Members.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): Sir, may I respectfully point out that fixing of time-limit for discussion of the Finance Bill is entirely unheard of? It is a question of voting of supplies and every Member has the right to air his grievances. It is his right, and this procedure is entirely unheard of, and I hope you will please take this into consideration.

Mr. Speaker: This point was considered when the old Rules were there, and the new Rules were made. I may invite the attention of the honourable Member to the specific rule, Rule 46, clause (4) which says—

"Subject to the proviso to sub-rule (2) the Speaker may, if he thinks fit, prescribe a time limit for speeches at all or any of the stages for which a day or days have been allotted under that sub-rule."

This procedure has been followed in this House in financial matters, because we have to finish the whole thing by a particular time. If I were to observe a rule of specifying no time-limit, the result will be that half a dozen or even two Members may go on and take up the time of the House till tomorrow evening, and the other Members will have absolutely no chance. That is the problem. But, Members are again going to have a chance when the Finance Bill comes from the Select Committee. That is the position.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): I understand there is a committee appointed for amending the rules?

Mr. Speaker: Yes, but so long as the rules are not actually amended, they hold good; and even after the committee has recommended a deletion or change, so long as it is not passed by the House, we have to follow the existing rule.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Will you please rule, that those who speak today and tomorrow are not allowed to speak next week?

Mr. Speaker: It is not possible to make such a rule.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): This rule says that the Chair will use its discretion so far as the question of time-limit is concerned. But here, you are not using your discretion, but following the wishes of the Members.

Mr. Speaker: I have exercised discretion, considering all the factors, including the desire of the Members, that being one of the factors.

Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan (U.P.: Muslim): You have just said, Sir that you do not approve of the Members nominated to the Select Committee taking part in the debate. Then why is the honourable Minister given an hour's time for replying to the debate? Surely he is a member of the Select Committee just like any other member.

Mr. Speaker: The answer is obvious, and I do not think I need go into the details. The honourable Minister stands entirely on a different footing from the other Members. The Bill is his child and he has to explain to the Members why he has resorted to particular provisions of the Bill. The matter is so obvious that I do not think the honourable Member who raised it is serious about it.

Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan: If he speaks now I have no objection.

Mr. Speaker: But the point is he should explain his point of view to the Members after he hears their points. Further, under the rules, he has also got the statutory right of reply which cannot be denied. Now, Shri Prakasam.

Shri T. Prakasam (Madras: General): Sir, I thank you for calling me to speak on this important measure.

It is impossible to speak within ten minutes what one may have to say on this measure. However, as you have fixed the time-limit, I shall just touch on a few points. First I deal with the question of conscription. I have been feeling that having regard to the conditions in our country, conscription ought to have been adopted, if not throughout the country, at least in the disturbed areas. But this has not been done, and with the explanation of the Prime Minister that it is not through conscription that the people can defend themselves, but that we should develop the technical side of it with regard to aeroplanes and by other scientific methods, I do not agree. Whatever may be said about the methods, the people must be trained and we should not have any fear that the people trained may turn against the Government or against themselves, as the English people had been feeling so long as they were in charge of this country for over 150 years. Now I submit, that conscription item should not be left out lightly, but it must be taken into account, having regard to the areas where this Communist menace has overtaken the country. Calcutta is said to be the centre in the country, and in the Calcutta report of the Communist organisation, it is said that Andhra organisation was the best of their organisations in India. I know how this Communism was three years ago and how it spread and how some of us were responsible for it. I have been hoping that there would be a commission to enquire into the whole matter to see how we were responsible ourselves and how we were not able to prevent it in proper time, how it started in some places and how it spread into Hyderabad and other places.

With regard to Industries and Supply, we have lost our friends ever since Independence was acquired by us. So long as the fight for freedom continued, we worked on proper lines and we were endeavouring to carry on a constructive programme laid by the Congress and Mahatma Gandhi and it was progressing through the cottage industries without any prejudice to the larger industries. That has been given up now. The Industries Minister has been taking considerable pains with regard to both of these items, but they have lost the whole thing, and it takes considerable time. In this connection, I would urge now that the village Republic Organization that has been recommended in the framing of the Constitution will be started immediately as it has been done in the United Provinces under the administration of Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant and he has made a beginning and the Assam Government also had made a good beginning already. Similarly, it would be in the best interests of the country that the Village Republic Organization should be undertaken from now without waiting until the Constitution is made ready and the new Constitution comes after the elections.

Taking Finance, the honourable Dr. John Matthai is a very able, accomplished friend with regard to this subject from his own stand-point and from his own ideals, but I would beg to point out to the honourable the Finance Minister that the policy must be changed from what is being adopted now. The policy must be not the policy which the British people had introduced and worked up and handed it to us to continue. That is what we have been doing and it is in that way that we have come to adopt the Constitution Act of 1935 as the basis of our Independence. Therefore, that policy must be changed with regard to finance. It must not be on the basis of competition and profiteering that we should go on in this matter of carrying on the administration. Those two things must be amended to give way to co-operative basis and non-profiteering basis. Whenever it is pointed out that co-operative basis must be adopted, great trouble is created by those interested who have been insisting on the capitalist system continuing. Therefore, I am suggesting, Sir, that co-operative basis should be adopted, as regards the other matter, as far as possible. Dr. Rajendra Prasad when he was the President of the Congress gave directions, with regard to the agrarian reforms and stressed that the co-operative basis should be adopted from the very beginning and so far as the International Agricultural Organization was concerned, of course, that co-operative basis was not there. The Managing Director of the International Co-operative Organization was himself a person owning 2,000 acres of land on which he grows wheat and other things and, of course, he himself suggested that co-operative basis might have to be adopted on a decentralization basis, having regard to the special conditions in which India stands at present. India can be made to resist Communism can be made to give food and cloth and can be made to prosper only when the co-operative basis is adopted by the Finance Ministry of this Government either now or in the future. Let us take a warning. We are in the danger zone now, because we have not been adopting this basis and we have abandoned the basis laid down by Mahatma Gandhi thirty years ago and train people on that basis. When we were in jail the Communists came forward saying that they would be helping the unfortunate agriculturists and the poor people in the country. They could approach them and they could tell them: "The Congress-men are in jails and how can they help you? We are here to help you." In that way they managed to get to the people. Therefore, it is this co-operative basis that should be adopted by us.

As regards Health, I may submit that the indigenous system of medicine should be adopted by this Government without waiting for the reforms. There are four systems prevailing in the country and each time we are told that we are continuing only the allopathic system. In the allopathic system, we know how many hospitals there are, how many institutions there are to give relief. We know the number of villages, but we also know that there are no people to help them in any respect. If you want to help them, you take all these four systems of medicine, train them within a short time and distribute them amongst the villagers without waiting until you come to a critical stage in the future. In that way lakhs of villages can be covered by giving training to our people in all the four systems of medicine that we have got and thus give relief to the people in the country.

I was talking on the question of food the other day, but I will point out the honourable the Prime Minister was good enough to refer to the grave situation with regard to food only yesterday or the day before while addressing students. He pointed out how we should make an effort to grow more food, at least ten per cent. more than what we are having today. With regard to this question of food, the seriousness cannot be understood perhaps by us and we will be forgetting also that in 1947, Sir, we had to import food stuff worth 100 crores of rupees. In 1948, it went up to 150 crores of food imports from other countries. This year a special officer has been appointed for this purpose and the figure comes to 280 crores. If this is the way in which we have to get food even for 1949 and 1950, we will be in a very serious position. Therefore it is necessary that we should make an effort to put an end to this by paying special attention ourselves within our own country. It is for that purpose I am submitting that a new Commission should be appointed to sit together and solve the whole food problem within the shortest possible time. Commissions take long time to make their investigations. I am not enamoured of such Commissions. We should have a Commission that would complete its labours quickly. I have nothing more to add.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Sir, I thank you very much for allowing me to speak on the Finance Bill in the beginning of the discussion. But I am sorry to say that I have again to raise my voice against the time-limit of ten minutes on speeches.

When the Finance Bill is under discussion, all Departments of the Government come under examination. It is therefore that the convention requires that all Ministers should be represented in the House while the Bill is discussed. I do not know how much interest the Ministers take in the speeches of Members. I say it is not proper that so many of them should be absent from the House.

Within the limited time allowed to me, I shall refer to two or three points. The honourable the Finance Minister, in his Budget speech as well as in his reply to the speeches made on the Budget, referred to the question of inflation and suggested some measures for fighting it. I may tell him that the steps he proposed to take are very mild and far-fetched and that he is not going to succeed in fighting inflation with those methods. The control of articles still continues. Unless the movements of articles are free throughout the country, the prices are not going to be adjusted.

It is unfortunate that India has been divided into two on political grounds. But this control policy has divided India into economic holdings in large numbers. There is abundance of food grains in the Punjab and they cannot be moved to the United Provinces or Bihar. I do not see how the prices will adjust themselves. Now there is starvation in one place and abundance in other places. When Mahatma Gandhi was living he came to the help of people in their sufferings. He raised his voice against control and control was removed. But Mahatma Gandhi is no more. There is nobody to control this Government now. They again imposed controls. On behalf of the suffering millions in the country I tell the Government that the re-imposition of controls was the most foolish act of this Government. As long as controls continue, there is no hope of prices coming down or the sufferings of the people being removed. Control has created corruption in the country and increased the miseries of the people. It has further degraded our national character. I am sorry that the Government have not taken note of these things. They re-imposed control because they did not know what to do in this matter.

It has been suggested that contraction of currency is one of the steps needed to meet inflation. I agree to it. I have two more suggestions to make in regard to this. I do not mind whether they are accepted or not. I suggest first that production has to be increased. With this I am sure the Ministers will agree. But if we have to increase our production of food we have got to improve the productive power of the nation. Unless the productive power of the nation is improved, there is no chance for production to improve. When we are considering this question of the productive power of the nation, we have to see what part of the nation is engaged in production. We have to find out how many people are consumers and how many are producers. We have to see how many are Khanewalas and how many are Kamanewalas. If we take the adult population we will find that the women-folk—I hope the Lady Members in the House will not take it amiss—do not produce anything.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): They are producing children.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I am talking of things which are meant for consumption. It will be said that women also work in the field and do some production work. But their number is so few that it can be left out of calculation. So, half the population of the country is only Khanewalas. Next we have to note that the children, old men and infirm people do not do anything so far as production work goes. Then we have the Brahmin class. They do not produce anything. Then we have the landlords, the big zamindars.....

Shri Mihir Lal Chattopadhyay (West Bengal: General): There is division of labour in the country.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: And lawyers also are there. Their percentage is also large. I am reminded of the merchant classes. They move things from one place to another, but so far as production goes they do not contribute anything. Last but not the least all the people engaged in the whole Government machinery are only consumers. I mean that they are Khanewalas. They also do not produce anything. In that way, if we calculate we will find that not more than 15 per cent of the population of this country are engaged in production work and all the rest are consumers. Sir, here I suggest that if we are anxious to increase production in this country, we have to do something by way of legislation. There ought to be some legislation enforcing upon each and everybody who is able bodied that he should work for some time in the field. Let there be a legislation that from Chowkidar to the Governor General, everybody should work for at least an hour a day either in the field or at least on the spinning wheel. If the nation takes this into head and if it be accepted and brought into effect, I think production will increase. Now-a-days, there is a lot of talk heard in the House and elsewhere—talk, talk and nothing else but talk—so far as production goes, but it is necessary that production has got to be stepped up by sincere endeavour, and this is not possible unless everybody does something in this direction. I tell the world, I tell the Government, I tell everybody in this country that if they want to check the Communist menace and the other parties in this country, we have to do something and this system which is prevailing in our society in which a lot of people who are only Khanewalas and only a small number of people who are Kamanewalas—this system must go.

Although the time is so very short, I wish to speak on the question of salaries of Government servants. I have spoken times without number before and I have to talk again on this subject. This salary has been fixed by the previous Government which was a foreign Government, which was an exploiting Government. But now this Government is our own and I again repeat—which I repeated last year—that it was resolved in the Congress at Karachi that the highest salary in the State ought to be not more than Rs. 500 a month. But so long as we go on increasing the salaries and the State expenditure, and yet we want to fight inflation, it would be only too foolish and rather ridiculous. We have to increase our productive capacity and at the same time we have to greatly reduce State expenditure. Having done these two things, it is possible that inflation may be fought. Otherwise, it is no good talking about how to fight inflation.

One more word about the salaries. I think the law demands that whatever is paid to the Government by way of taxes is to be returned to the people by way of services. Look at the whole of the Budget. You will find that a very small amount—I do not think more than five per cent—is to be returned to the people in the form of constructive work, and all the rest of the money is paid to the Government servants. It means simply that Government exists for the Government and the resources of the country are meant only to support and maintain the Government and nothing more and nothing less. This thing has to go.

Sir, one or two minutes more and I shall finish.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member has been given fifteen minutes already, so he may just finish that sentence.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: All right, Sir. Only one or two more sentences.

If the Government and all our leaders are anxious to meet the Communist menace and the Socialist menace, we have to reduce State salaries and at the same time increase our productive power. And I may say that if you are not going to do that, the charge of the other party that this is not a machinery of Government to serve the people but only to rob the people would be true.

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : मैं जनाब वाला का मशकूर हूँ कि मुझे इस वक्त मौका जनाब वाला ने अता फ़रमाया है। जब कि फाइनेंस विल पर बहस करने का मौका मिलता है तों उस वक्त फ़िनान्स विल को छोड़ कर बजट के सब मामलों पर बहस करने का फायदा उठाया जाता है और मेम्बरान बजट पर अपने नुक्ते निगाह का इजहार करते हैं। मैं इस बारे में हर मौके पर यह देखने के वास्ते फायदा उठाता हूँ कि आया इस साल के अन्दर हमने उन चीज़ों में कोई तरक्की की है जो नेशन विल्डिंग से ताल्लुक रखती हैं। इस सिलसिले में मैं सब से पहले जनाब वाला की तवज्जह अछूत जातियों की तरफ़ दिलाना चाहता हूँ जिन्हें हकूक नहीं हैं कि वह ज़मीन खरीद सकें और अपने मकानों को बेच सकें और इनहेरिट कर सकें। अरसे दराज से उनको यह हकूक नहीं हैं। और यह हक अछूत जातियों को अब तक नहीं दिया गया। सन् १९२७-२८ में जब मैं हाउस में आया तो मैं ने पहला सवाल उस गवर्नमेंट से यह किया था और फिर सन् १९४५-४६ में जब मैं आया तो फिर यही सवाल किया कि आया अछूत जातियों को ज़मीन खरीदने की इजाज़त दी जायगी या नहीं। जवाब मिला कि ज़रूर दी जायगी।

इसके अलावा एक खास बात जो मैं इस मौके पर अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि हिन्दुस्तान में आवादी की इनक्रीज बेहद होती चली जा रही है और इसकी तरफ़ गवर्नमेंट ने अपनी कोई तवज्जह नहीं दी है कि इसको किस तरह रोका जाय। अब वक्त आ गया है जब कि फूड का सवाल यहां रोज़ होता है और अगर इस पापुलेशन की कोई रोक नहीं की गयी तो मैं अदब के साथ अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि हम अपने फर्ज को अदा नहीं करेंगे। इसलिये मैं गवर्नमेंट और सिलेक्ट कमेटी दोनों से अर्ज करूंगा कि वह इस मामले पर गौर करें। वैसे मैं जानता हूँ कि सिलेक्ट कमेटी के अस्तित्वारात लिमिटेड होते हैं लेकिन मैं सिलेक्ट कमेटी और गवर्नमेंट दोनों से कहूंगा कि कम से कम एक करोड़ रुपया प्रोपेगेंडा के लिये और और ज़रायों के लिये इस पापुलेशन को रोकने के वास्ते ज़रूर सर्फ़ किया जाय। मैं इसको निहायत ज़रूरी समझता हूँ। मैं जानता हूँ कि इस बारे में जो तज़ावीज़ बतलाई जाती हैं वह इस किस्म की हैं जो हमारे देश की (Genius) ज़हनियत के खिलाफ़ हैं लेकिन चाहे वह खिलाफ़ हों या न हों यह ईविल हमारे यहां है और आगे चल कर इसकी वजह से बड़ी मुश्किल का सामना करना पड़गा। इसलिये मेरी अदब से गुज़ारिश है कि गवर्नमेंट ज़रूर इस चीज़ के लिये तज़वीज़ सोचे और इस का इन्तज़ाम करे।

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: May I interrupt the honourable Member and find out if he is advocating publicity of contraceptive methods?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Why not?

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : मैं जब यह चीज़ अर्ज करता हूँ तो सिलेक्ट कमेटी के मेम्बरान को अस्तित्वार है कि जो तज़ावीज़ मुनासिब समझें उन पर अमल करें। आनरेबल मेम्बर खुद इस सिलेक्ट कमेटी के मेम्बर हैं।

तीसरी बात जो मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि आज देश के अन्दर दो खराबियों की मैं बढ़ते हुए देखता हूँ एक चीज़ है प्राविशियलिज्म और दूसरी

जाति का भेद भाव। जब कहीं जाता हूं तो खबर मिलती है कि गांव के अन्दर अछूतों और दूसरी जातियों में लड़ाई हुई और अछूत बेचारे पीटे गये। जब कहीं जाता हूं तो देखता हूं कि जाट, ब्राह्मण और दूसरी कौमें अपने फिरके बना रही हैं और एक दूसरे से लड़ने की तजवीज कर रही हैं। यह एक ऐसी चीज है कि जिससे आगे चल कर स्टेट को बड़ा खतरा पैदा हो सकता है। इसी तरह प्राविशियलिज्म के बारे में यहां हाउस में मेम्बरान अपने दिल में रखते हैं या कभी कभी जाहिर करते हैं कि अगर किसी जगह का कोई मिनिस्टर है तो वह अपने प्राविंस वालों को नौकरियां दे देता है और कुछ ऐसी कोशिश करता है कि अपने प्राविंस का इंटरैस्ट एडवान्स हो। कुछ हद तक यह लाजमी भी है क्योंकि हम प्राविसेज के बेसिस पर यहां आते हैं और इसलिये चाहते हैं कि अपने प्राविंस का इंटरैस्ट एडवान्स करें। लेकिन ताहम अगर यह चीज ज्यादा बढ़ गयी तो इसके अन्दर डर है कि हमारी स्टेट को नुकसान पहुंचेगा इसके वास्ते मैं कई तजवीज अर्ज कर चुका हूं और वह यह है कि हमको एक सोशियल रिफार्म और सोशियल हारमोनी की मिनिस्ट्री की जरूरत है ताकि कास्ट सिस्टम और जात पांत से जो खराबियां हैं वह दूर हो सकें। इस के लिये (Inter marriage) अन्तर-जातीय विवाह बहुत आवश्यक है ताकि सब जातियों के अन्दर मेल मिलाप बढ़े और मुस्लिम जातियों में जो भेद भाव है और फर्क है वह दूर हो। यह बिल्कुल लाजमी चीज है। इसके बिना मुझे नजर यह आता है कि अगर हम इसी तरह सैक्युलर स्टेट, सैक्युलर स्टेट कहते रहे और इन चीजों की तरफ तवज्जह नहीं देंगे तो जो क्लासलैस सोसायटी हम बनाना चाहते हैं वह कभी नहीं बन सकेगी। इस लिये यह बहुत जरूरी है कि आप इस तरफ तवज्जह दें जिससे कि सारे झगड़ों की चीजें खत्म हो जाय और आप सुख और शान्ति के साथ आपस में मिल जुल कर रह सकें। यह सूरत पैदा नहीं की गयी तो यह डर है कि बहुत से इंटरैस्ट ऐसे निकलेंगे कि जिनसे देश को खतरा पैदा हो जाय। इसलिये मैं अदब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूं कि गवर्नमेंट को इस तरफ जल्दी तवज्जह देनी चाहिये और इस तरह की एक नयी मिनिस्ट्री कायम करनी चाहिये।

फर्ज फील करता, हर एक ग्रेजुएट फील करता कि जब तक वह कम से कम एक तादाद में अनपढ़ आदमीयों को पढ़ा नहीं देता तब तक वह अपना फर्ज अदा नहीं करता। लेकिन मैं देखता हूं कि हालांकि बहुत सी कोशिशें हो रही हैं पर जितनी होनी चाहिये उतनी नहीं। और इस तरह शायद पता नहीं हम कब तक इब्रतदाई तालीम को पूर्ण रूप से अपने देश में नहीं ला सकेंगे। विलायत के अन्दर आज के दिन हर एक लड़का और हर एक लड़की कम से कम ऐंट्रेस की तालीम पाते हैं। लेकिन हमारे देश में तो जो रफ्तार है उससे शायद यह चीज मुझे तोई पचीस तीस साल तक भी होती नजर नहीं आती कि जिसके अन्दर हर एक लड़का और हर एक लड़की को ऐंट्रेस की तालीम दी जा सके इस सिलसिले में एक बात और भी है कि पुराने दिनों में हम कहा करते थे कि गवर्नमेंट जो तालीम हम लोगों को देती है वह सिर्फ क्लर्कों को पैदा करने की तालीम है। लेकिन उस तालीम में अभी तक कोई फर्क नहीं हुआ। जहां तक सायन्स का ताल्लुक है मुझे अफसोस है कि कुछ नहीं किया गया। मेरे पास विज्ञान कला भवन मेरठ की मिसाल मौजूद है। मेरे मित्र चौधरी मुख्तार सिंह साहब ने उसको खड़ा किया और इसके ऊपर कई लाख रुपये लाला श्रीराम और लाला जसवन्तराए साहब ने लगाया है। गवर्नमेंट ने आज तक न तो कोई कोशिश की कि उसके लड़कों को रिकग्नीशन दें और न किसी और तरह की इमदाद दें। विज्ञान कला भवन आठवीं जमाअत के लड़कों को लेता है और उनको चार वर्ष के अन्दर इतनी तालीम दी जाती है कि वह सायन्स के एम० एसी० तक पहुंच जाय। लेकिन जब तक गवर्नमेंट रिकग्नाइज नहीं करेगी और लोगों को पता नहीं होगा कि हमें कोई डिप्लोमा या डिग्री ऐसी मिलेगी जो रिकग्नाइज हो तब तक ऐसे इंस्टीट्यूशन्स नहीं कायम हो सकते। और उसकी शाखाओं के खोलने का तो सवाल ही क्या उठ सकता है। मैं जानता हूं कि जब सायन्स में ट्रेड परसानल नहीं होगा उस वक्त तक देश सायन्स में तरक्की नहीं कर सकता। इस मामले में जब तक सेंटर तवज्जह नहीं देगा प्राविन्सेज तवज्जह हरगिज नहीं दे सकते।

इसी सिलसिले में फूड का सवाल आता है। फूड के बारे में हाउस में रोज सवाल आता है, इस बारे में मैं एक और चीज अर्ज करना चाहता हूं वह यह है कि फूड सीचुएशन पर वहस कन्ने के वास्ते दो दो तीन तीन दिन का मौका दिया जाता है। लेकिन इस सिलसिले में जो असली ट्रबल है उसकी तरफ मैं हाउस की तवज्जह दो एक मिनट के वास्ते दिलाना चाहता हूं। जब तक कि हम इस एग्रीकल्चर को कानकुरेंट सबजेक्ट नहीं बनावेंगे और हमारे मिनिस्टर साहब को अख्तियार नहीं देंगे कि सारे प्राविन्सेज में अपनी तबीयत के मुआफिक काम करा सकें तब तक यह फूड का प्राबलेम हरगिज हल नहीं होगा। सबसे बड़ी खराबी यह है कि हाउस के अन्दर डिसकशन तो होता है और मिनिस्टर साहब यहां से प्रोक्थोरमेंट के वास्ते

प्राविशियल मिनिस्टर्स को हुक्म देते हैं तो कोई प्राविन्स प्रोक्योर करने की कोशिश नहीं करता क्योंकि वह क्यों अनपापुलर बने। वह सारे इंडिया के प्वाइंट आफ व्यू से इसको देखता ही नहीं है। इसलिये मैं अर्ज करूंगा कि जब हम ने यह इरादा कर लिया है कि दो बरस के अन्दर हम इस कमी खूराक को खत्म कर देंगे और एक दाना भी बाहर से नहीं लेंगे तो हमारा फर्ज है, हम सब मेम्बरान का फर्ज है कि ऐसी तजावीज सोचें और प्राविसेज में हर एक आदमी सोचे, ज़मींदार और सब आदमी सोचें कि उसकी पैट्रियाटिक ड्यूटी है कि वह प्राविसेज को मजबूर कर दे कि वह सब अनाज अपनी ज़रूरत के लिये पैदा करें और सेंटर से एक दाना भी न मांगें। जब तक यह नहीं होगा हमारी यह प्रावलेम हरगिज़ तय नहीं हो सकती।

इसके अलावा मैं अदव से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि जितनी हमारी रोजमर्रा की routine चीजें हैं, उन सब में फर्क नहीं पड़ा है। जब कभी मैं हिस्सार जाता हूँ तो यह होता है कि बार रूम में, क्योंकि वह एक ऐसी जगह है जहां सारी गवर्नमेंट की और लोकल चीजों पर डिस्कशन आ जाता है। लोग इकट्ठा होते हैं और पूछते हैं कि बतलाइये आपकी गवर्नमेंट ने क्या किया। क्या यह दुरुस्त नहीं है कि ब्रिटिश गवर्नमेंट के ज़माने में जो खराबियां व करपशन थी वह अब नहीं है। मैं अदव से अर्ज करूंगा कि मिनिस्ट्री में, और कम से कम और जो इस हाउस के मेम्बरान हैं हर एक इसके जिम्मेदार हैं कि आजादी के स्वरूप का हिन्दुस्थान में इम्प्रेसन पैदा करें। और वह लोगों को यह झलक दिखलायें कि हम फ्री हो गये हैं। मैं जानता हूँ कि पहले से अब काफी फर्क पड़ा है, मैंने देखा है कि रिलीफ और दीगर बातों में काफी फर्क पड़ गया है। मैं देखता हूँ कि हमारे मिनिस्टर रात दिन देश की भलाई के फ़िक्र में लगे रहते हैं—अब हमारा सब का यह धर्म है कि अब हम सब ऐसी कोशिश करें कि जिससे मालूम हो कि स्वराज्य नजदीक आ गया है। सारी कोशिश के बाद

भी मामूली आदमी यह महसूस नहीं करता कि कोई फर्क पड़ गया है। मैं मानता हूँ कि यह ट्रान्ज़िशन पीरिअड है, लेकिन मुझे अफसोस है कि पिछले साल में भी लोगों ने महसूस नहीं किया कि हम कोई कदम आगे बढ़ा सके हैं इस बारे में हम ने कदम तो आगे बढ़ाया है लेकिन लोग इसे महसूस नहीं करते। हमारा फ़र्ज है कि हम कदम जोर से आगे बढ़ावें और लोगों को महसूस करावें कि सच्चे माईनों में हमें स्वराज्य मिल गया है।

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I am grateful to you for having given me an opportunity to speak at this time. At the time of the discussion on the Finance Bill, greater use is made of this opportunity to discuss all the aspects of the Budget proposals apart from the provisions of the Bill itself, and the honourable members express their view-point on the Budget. I, on my part, am always on the look out to avail myself of such an opportunity to find out whether we have made any progress in the sphere of our nation-building activities. In this connection, I would first of all like to invite your attention towards the Scheduled Castes who have not got the right to purchase land and sell their houses and seek inheritance. Since times immemorial, they have been deprived of such a right, and this has not as yet been conferred upon the Scheduled Castes. When I came to this House during the year 1927-28, this was the first question that I put to the then Government. And when again I was elected to this House in the year 1945-46, I raised this question for the second time whether or not the Scheduled Castes will be given the right to purchase land. It was stated in reply that it would surely be given. But I find that the same restrictions still exist in respect of certain persons and the Scheduled Castes so much so that they are debarred from purchasing land—the land which is the source of all wealth. Similarly restrictions exist in respect of houses. Those people can neither sell their houses nor inherit these. They are thus deprived of that right which a free man usually exercises according to his stature. And, moreover, they do not also exercise the right of 'Inhabitiveness' by which they may either be able to purchase or sell the land; or sell and inherit houses. I would submit that even this year no right in this respect has been conferred upon the Scheduled Castes. Perhaps some progress may be made in this direction after we have passed our constitution in the Constituent Assembly. But for the present no progress has been made in this respect.

Apart from this, another thing which I would like to submit at the moment is that the population in India is increasing abnormally and Government have not devised any measures to check this. Now the time has come when we are daily faced with the food-problem and if this increasing population is not checked, then I would respectfully submit that we are not fulfilling our duty. Therefore, I would request both the Government and the Select Committee to consider over this. I know it that the Select Committee have got limited powers. But I would request both the Select Committee and the Government that at least one crore of rupees should be spent for propaganda and other cognate matters so as to check this growing population. I consider it quite indispensable. I know that the suggestions which are put forth in this connection are of such a nature that these go against the genius of this country. But these may or may not be against it, this evil does exist here and in the near future we shall have to face a great difficulty. Therefore, I would respectfully submit that Government should think of some device and enforce measures to counteract this.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): May I interrupt the honourable Member and find out if he is advocating publicity of contraceptive methods?

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): Why not?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: While I make these suggestions, I leave it entirely to the discretion of the honourable members constituting the Select Committee to adopt whatever suggestions they like. The honourable member himself is a member of the Select Committee.

Thirdly, I would like to submit that I find that two evils are increasing in this country day by day. The first is Provincialism and the second racial discrimination. Wherever I go, I am informed that there arose a dispute between the untouchables and other communities in the village as a result of which the former were belaboured. Whenever I visit any place, I find that the Jats, Brahmans and other communities are forming their own sects and harbouring ill will among themselves. Such a state of affairs is likely to menace the integrity of the State in the long run. Similarly, with regard to Provincialism, there are some members in this House who have got the notion or even sometimes give vent to their feelings that in the matter of filling up posts, a Minister accords preferential treatment to the persons belonging to his Province and makes some such efforts so as to advance the interests of his Province. To some extent this is natural because we are elected to this House on Provincial basis and for this reason we want to advance the interest of our Province. But, nevertheless, if this evil gains further strength, then it is apprehended lest it should not prove harmful to our State. To check this, I have made many suggestions one of which is that we require a Ministry of Social Reforms and Harmony so that the evils inherent in the caste system could be removed. Inter-marriage is a sine qua non for tackling this problem as it will tend to promote inter-communal harmony and remove the social disabilities that are prevalent among various communities. This is absolutely essential. In the absence of this, it so looks to me that if we go on repeating for a Secular State in this manner and do not devote any attention to this, we shall never be able to evolve the classless society which we aspire after. Therefore, it is an absolute necessity that you should give attention to this aspect so that all the causes of dissension should be removed and we may be able to foster mutual concord and happiness. If this is not done, then it is apprehended lest many interests may not crop up which will involve a great danger to this country. Therefore, with all due respects, I would like to submit that Government should devote immediate attention towards this aspect and set up a new Ministry of this kind.

Apart from this, what I want to submit is that for long we have been harping on 'basic education.' During the time of the previous Government we used to complain against this, but now a period of one and a half years has elapsed since we took over charge of the administration. When we look to this and see how far we have progressed in this matter, then we find that we have not made any appreciable advance in this direction. This was the time when every one ought to have felt his duty. Every Graduate should have felt that he would be failing in his duty so long as he does not teach a minimum number of illiterates. But I find that the various efforts which are being made in this respect are quite inadequate. And thus we cannot say as to when would it be possible for us to introduce compulsory basic education in our country. In England at present every boy and girl get education at least upto Matric. But keeping in view the trend of events in this country, I cannot see any possibility of achieving this end even after the lapse of 25-30 years during which time every boy and girl may be given education upto Matric. There is one thing more worth mentioning in this connection. In the olden days we used to say that the education imparted by the Government is tended to produce mere clerks. But no change has so far been made in that system. So far as Science is concerned, I am pained to say that nothing has been done. I have in view the example of Vigyan Kala Bhawan, Meerut. It was founded by my friend Ch. Mukhtiar Singh and Lala Siri Ram and Lala Jaswant Rai have spent several lakhs of rupees over it. The Government have up till now neither thought of recognizing the students of this institution, nor have they given any sort of assistance. The Vigyan Kala Bhawan admits students who have passed Middle Class Examination and during the course of four years they are taught so much that they may be able to compete with M.Sc. students. But so long as the Government do not recognise this and the people do not become aware of the fact that they will be granted some such diploma or degree as would be recognised, such institutions cannot exist. And thus the question of opening its Branches does not arise at all. I know that so long as we do not have trained science personnel, our country cannot make any progress in this sphere. Until the Centre devotes its attention to this aspect, the Provinces will not at all be able to take any action in the matter.

Simultaneously, there is a question of food. The food problem is brought up before the House every day. In this connection, I would like to submit one thing more and that is, that two or three days are allotted for the discussion of food situation. But I would like to invite the attention of the House for a minute or so to the real trouble which is experienced in this connection. So long as we do not treat this "Agriculture" as a concurrent subject and vest powers in our Minister to enforce a uniform policy in all the Provinces, this food problem can never be tackled. The greatest trouble is that the orders which the honourable Minister issues to the Provincial Ministers in connection with procurement—as a result of the discussion held in this House—are not acted upon in any Province for the obvious reason as to why should they make themselves unpopular. The Provincial Minister concerned does not see the things from the All India point of view. Therefore, I would submit that when we have decided to put an end to this food shortage during the course of two years and not to import even a grain from abroad, then it becomes the duty of all of us that we should devise some such measures, everybody in the Provinces also should think of this—the zamindars and all other persons—that this is their patriotic duty that they should enjoin upon all the Provinces to produce foodgrains sufficient to meet their demands and do not ask the Centre even for a grain. So long as this is not done, this problem can never be solved.

In this connection, Sir, I would also like to invite your attention towards taxation. At present I do not want to dilate much upon the Joint Hindu Family, because I will be able to have an opportunity, at the time the Bill is brought up before this House. I know that the Select Committee are not likely to devote much of their attention towards this aspect; but I must move my amendments. I would only casually refer to it, because I do not want to spend any portion of my time over this. But I would refer to it briefly. With all due respects, I would submit that if you peruse the speech delivered by the previous Finance Minister and consider over the suggestions made by the Commission; the minimum relief which you can allow this year is that the exemption which you give at present to the co-parceners constituting the Joint Family should be given according to the number of co-parceners in the family. The real and honest solution lies in the fact that the tax should not be levied from the Hindu Joint Family. But if you accept the proposals of Sir Shanmukham Chetty, the Investigation Commission and other Finance Ministers, this should at least be changed. The number of co-parceners should be multiplied by the amount exempted and the exemption should be granted to that extent. There is no reason why this should not be enforced with effect from the current year. I admit that by reducing the tax, you have shown generosity; but before showing this generosity you should do justice. I mean to refer to those poor people who are subjected by you to undue taxation on account of their being members of the Hindu Undivided Family—whose condition is just like the labourers and ordinary persons—and no tax should thus be levied from them. I do not want to dwell upon this at any length at this moment.

With regard to general taxation, I stated that those who have got money, they are afraid of the Income-tax Department and the Investigation Tribunal. The Income-Tax Department and the Investigation Tribunal want to realize money from them. I do not want that they should be deprived of the entire money. But I am afraid that all the figures which you gave and the tax that was imposed by the Investigation Commission, its sum total has been stated to be Rs. 1 crore approximately. With all due respects, I would submit that there are thousands of evaders—their number shall at least be ten to fifteen thousands—you will not be able to detect them. Your Investigation Commission will not be able to go to that extent. The only way to realize money from them is that they should be given an opportunity to come forward as 'moralists' and pay the taxes. And, if they do not do so within the specified time limit, then you can, of course, impose penalty upon them. The difficulty is this that the money which they have got can neither be invested in industry nor can fresh income tax be recovered on it. If that money is invested in Industry, then tax would be recovered on it and Government would derive benefit out of it. And in this way, the money which you could not realize during the period of five years, you will not be able to recover it through the Investigation Commission even, and this will result in twofold loss to the country. Therefore, I would submit that such persons should be afforded an opportunity to behave as men—responsible, honest and moral—so that they may come forward to pay the money on their own accord. I hope the honourable the Finance Minister will consider over it in right earnestness.

Apart from this, I would respectfully submit that there is no change in our day-to-day routine and working. Whenever I go to Hissar, it so happens that in the Bar Room where the people assemble—because that is the only place where all matters relating to Government and local affairs are discussed—and they enquire as to what are the achievements of your Government? Is it not a fact that the evils and corruption rampant during the British regime do not exist now? I would respectfully submit that the Ministers or at least each of the members sitting in this House are responsible for giving an impression to the masses as to what is the real form of freedom and they should show them a glimpse that we have become free. I know that the conditions are much better now than what were before. I have seen that a sufficient improvement has been made in relief and other matters. I find that our honourable Ministers are day and night solicitous over the country's welfare. Now it is our moral duty that we should make such endeavours from which it could be evidenced that the independence has come within our reach. Even after putting in all such efforts, the common man does not feel any change. I admit that this is a transition period. But I regret that even during the last year the masses did not feel whether we have been able to move any step further. In this respect, we undoubtedly moved a step forward, but the people do not realize this. It is our duty that we should step forward at a tremendous speed and bring home to the masses that we have achieved independence in the true sense.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C.P. and Berar: General): The Budget discussion has brought out a very large number of points and the tone with which the Budget was received has, I am happy to say, undergone a change, because of certain explanations which were given by the honourable the Finance Minister at a later stage. I do not feel that the whole budgetary position of our country is at all satisfactory. Only on one item I would like to compliment the Finance Minister and that is so far as inflation is concerned. So far as my personal view is concerned I think there was a considerable amount of scare-mongering regarding inflation and I am glad that he has not allowed himself to be hustled into any precipitate action that may have really disturbed the economy of the whole country. The satisfactory reply that he has given in this respect, at any rate, I consider as the most welcome feature so far as the Budget is concerned.

But if we look to the figures of the budgetary provisions in the current year and the expenditure that was actually incurred, I think he will have to admit that there was hardly any working of the budget noticeable. The rise in the revenues was high and the expenses excessive. And yet I do not think there has been any very satisfactory explanation yet given. I make bold to say that the Budget as has been framed is also very much of the same kind and a vague budget and I am sure just as in the working of the present year there was a difference of as huge a figure as 85 crores, there may be a similar increase or decrease both in revenue as well as expenditure provided for in this budget also when we start working it out in the year 1949-50. Because I feel that the budget expenditure that has been provided for has hardly been calculated on any real or tangible basis. It is I believe merely a guess work; otherwise it is impossible that with all his expert staff there should have been so much difference in the working of one single year. Of course we know that there have been extraordinary circumstances. That does not afford any consolation to us and I am sure it does not even to the honourable the Finance Minister. There has to be more careful budgeting and more careful watch on expenditure incurred than is observable.

I also do not understand how such a competent and careful Finance Minister has allowed crores of rupees to be spent on various items. I for one would like that the defence of the country should be amply provided for but at the same time we must also look to our ultimate ideals. With the provision made in the budget is it possible to have in 50 years time a navy of any consequence or an air force of any size? I would much rather that the defence and Home Ministries thought on the lines of the ideals preached by Mahatma Gandhi instead of incurring such a large expenditure on defence and police which the country can ill afford. Even if you spend every pie of the revenues of the country for 20 years to come still your armaments and defences will not be of any consequence with which even a country like Belgium or Denmark or Holland could be frightened. I personally think that there is every possibility of reducing the defence expenditure to a certain minimum, so that in ten years time we will build up our industry and with the building up of the industries the defences will also be directly and indirectly strengthened. That is a view which is probably not popular in this House and as one claiming to come from a martial race it is not altogether congenial to me either. But taking stock of the financial situation of the present and looking somewhat far into the future I think we are perhaps going on a wrong basis. In any case I consider it would be worthwhile examining the very fundamentals of our policy and ideals in this respect.

As regards the police what is the position in the country? We have been told in the Home Affairs Ministry's report that everywhere the police has been increased. What is the ideal which we are striving to reach in this respect also? Are you going to make one constable stand behind every citizen of this country? I know there are the communists and I know there are many other people who are mischief-mongers or trouble-makers. In spite of all that I think it is time that our Government and the Cabinet search their hearts to find out if there are not some other more efficacious means by which it would be possible to govern the country with a lesser police force than has been possible so far. I do not think it is much of a compliment to us if we are to go in the way in which we are going. I can tell the House that there is dissatisfaction not only so far as the Central Government alone is concerned but also with respect to provincial governments. Every province is spending four or five times as much on its police force and they are trying to justify the expenditure. If you examine the efficiency of the police at the present moment you will find that merely by increasing their numbers their efficiency does not go up. The efficiency not being there merely by increasing their number, I am afraid we are not likely to enhance our capacity to control the country.

There are many other points which it is impossible for me to deal with within the ten minutes allotted but so far as law and order is concerned I think we ought to examine the whole position and frame some long range plan, so that we may govern the country by means other than the policy and the army, means which will be more in tune with the popular wishes. I am sure that there is such scope for revising our whole outlook so far as the popular demands are concerned and if that is done then we will be advancing the ideals for which Gandhiji stood all his life, not so far as to have a policeless and a militaryless society but at any rate we could have a government with a minimum of both these forces.

So far as controls are concerned—and the complaint was made by one of my friends also—they are very often imposed at the wrong moment. There is the experience of control on groundnuts. I know at least of two provincial governments who ordered and enforced controls exactly when they should not have. The representatives of all interests approached the Ministers and told them that they should wait for sometime before imposing them. But unfortunately they did not listen. The controls were in fact imposed at a time when the agriculturist was bringing his commodity to the market and when the merchants came in possession of the whole stock the controls were lifted so that they got enormous profits. This is what we must try and stop and the controls should not be permitted to be misused from time to time. I think the same thing has happened so far as cloth control and cotton control are concerned. There are many complaints against the control of cloth and the way in which the scheme is working. According to some, it is time that the cloth control is also lifted. I have been speaking about lifting of the control on cotton and raising the prices. I hope the honourable Minister will not commit the same mistake in this regard as has been committed in the past, viz., to raise the prices exactly when every bit of cotton has gone into the hands of the merchants.

The whole Indian economy is based on the welfare of the agriculturist and it is he and his well-being that should be the supreme consideration. I have been trying to impress upon the Agriculture Minister that just as in the Labour Department the labour organisations are managed, supervised and looked after by the Labour Minister through and by means of the labour welfare officers there should be welfare officers for agriculturists also. But so far in the whole country which is supposed to be a peasant's country and an agriculturist's country, not a single welfare officer has yet been appointed. I hope the needful would be done in this behalf at an early date.

The honourable Minister is said to have taken the proposal to the cabinet, but nothing very substantial has come out of it. One of my honourable friends had complained the other day that we were going further and further from our often repeated ideals and that we were out of tune with the popular aspirations. He challenged the treasury benches to point out if there was a single agriculturist who had been made a Minister in this Cabinet. He also complained that the position in many provinces was no different. The ideal that was preached by Mahatma Gandhi was that the place of the Prime Minister of this country should go to an agriculturist, to a peasant, and not to one who has other interests—not because he had love for the agriculturist as against every other profession but because therein lay the solution of many of our difficulties and the secret of the success and the prosperity of this country, because he alone could understand, appreciate and safeguard the predominant interests in the country as the predominant interests of this country lay in agriculture. That was the reason he preached that and asked people to act up to it.

So far as education is concerned we are told by the honourable Minister that he is trying his best to introduce basic education. But so far as the educational policy of the country is concerned I would like to give a word of warning, viz., that sometimes following faddists here and there spoils even our existing education. We have had the experience of a fad of 'Vidya Mandirs'. This was started with a great gusto in my province. This is an ideal scheme and is blessed by the Mahatma. It is so simple to work. Get hold of twenty acres of land from the village and give it to the school. The teacher will get his pay out of the produce of the school and the boys will also learn. What more do you want? Not a single pie is to be spent from anywhere. This experiment was tried and I regret to say has miserably failed. There were people who understood education better who said in so many words: "you have not had even a single successful experiment with a school of this sort." We think this novel idea should be first tried; its large scale introduction undertaken only after the trials succeed. But these cautions were disregarded. The same thing I fear may happen to the basic education also. I hope it also does not turn out to be a mere fad. I am sorry to say the reports of basic education so far are not encouraging and if proper care is not taken it may prove a colossal failure and instead of adding to the education that exists have the result of spoiling the education that there is in the country. I apprehend it may fail because we have not got money to do it properly. Basic education requires more expenditure, better equipment, better teachers. Wherefrom are we going to get all this? If we want to spend more on schools we will have to stop this huge expenditure on defence. The two things cannot go together.

We know that in the Provinces, in the districts, everywhere we are short of funds. We are short of funds because we have got such a huge defence expenditure. We are short of funds because in the Province of Bombay you are spending nearly rupees three per head of population merely on police. The Bombay Government has budgeted for a police expenditure of rupees 730 lakhs. I am sure it is at least three or four times what it used to be in former days even if you take into account the increase in population. If this is the state of affairs it is impossible to get any more money for education. It is also impossible to get funds to train sufficiently highly qualified staff that will be necessary for basic education. There are some of these schools in my Province and it is complained that the standard of knowledge which the boys acquire is lower than it was formerly.

Sir, if you will be kind enough to give me about five minutes after the Lunch recess I would like to close here.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: The honourable Member has already taken fifteen minutes. I am as much bound by the Speaker's ruling. Only one minute remains for the House to rise but if the House is willing to sit for about a minute after that I have no objection.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: Lastly I would like to refer to the much discussed problem of increasing our production of food. Of course I have indirectly touched that point and have already said that it is no use merely impressing upon the zamindars or the agriculturists that the country demands that they should produce more. This is not going to impress anybody or touch anybody's heart. Nor is this going to bring an ounce of more food. The whole thing, as I have already said, hangs on the question of prices. The only consideration that can and will weight with the agriculturist is whether it is profitable and economically possible for him to grow foodgrains. So long as there is no proper adjustment of prices there will be no good results because there would be no incentive. Recently I had the good fortune of going to America and I was amazed to see the extent to which the agriculturists control the market. Here the agriculturist is regarded as a sort of thief as if he has brought his produce after stealing from somewhere. It is for the dalal or adatyā in the market to say what price he will offer and the agriculturist has no say whatsoever. He has brought the goods all the way from his village and he has no capacity to wait even for a single day. He has to sell it at whatever price the blessed merchant is pleased to buy. This sort of thing ought to be stopped. If the Agriculture Ministry is worth anything it should tackle this big problem seriously and effectively.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Before we proceed, Sir, may I request you to be so good as to use your discretion to cut down the number of speakers and not shorten the time allowed to a speaker?

Mr. Speaker: I might inform the honourable Member that I have been allowing 15 minutes, not ten.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Sir, I was not present this morning when you quoted some Rules that we were supposed to have passed on the last day of the last session. But has there ever been any precedent at all for this kind of limiting the time of the Members, not only in regard to legislation but especially in regard to the Finance Bill? I want to safeguard not only the Party in power for the time being but also the Chair from any sort of criticism that might be made—charitable or uncharitable—both here as well as abroad that even on an exceptional thing like the Finance Bill, opportunity has been taken in order to stifle criticism, in order to cut down discussion, in order to turn the whole House into a sort of a mummy.

Mr. Speaker: Well, for people who are determined to criticise we have no remedy, but for people who are going to take a reasonable view of the matter, they will have the goodness to see that a large amount of time is given. There is general discussion of the Budget when Members have an opportunity of expressing generally on the entire Administration. Then they had about nine days for discussing the Demands when they had occasion, in respect of each Demand, to make such observations as they liked. Then this Finance Bill is going to the Select Committee, where again the Members will have, in the Select Committee, an opportunity of discussing threadbare the provisions. They have an opportunity now of two days for discussion which is nothing more or nothing different from the general discussion of the Budget or the Demands. So, two plus nine—11 days, plus these two days—13 days, and they will again have an opportunity for two days further when the Bill comes out. So, altogether 15 days. And for this year, again, one extra day has been allotted for further discussion.

Now, the real question is not what the others will criticise or say but what we ourselves feel in the matter. While I myself have expressed so many times, that I would prefer always a fewer speeches giving more points at the same time, what I feel is that I am bound to see that various Members of this House do get an opportunity of speaking and that the speaking does not go to the lot of a particular set of Members. It is not merely a question of satisfying the urge of a few people to speak, but I am bound to see that new Members who have come here have also to be given a chance and some new talent has to be tested also.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: It is in their own interests also.

Mr. Speaker: That is why I am particular to see that I call upon as many Members as I possibly can. But I have always seen the tendency that, even where I allotted ten minutes—of course I knew nobody was going to stick to ten minutes—seeing the circumstances I have allowed fifteen but in no case more than fifteen. And the last speakers had a full quota of fifteen minutes. Things are going that way. Whatever we do we are bound to be exposed to some kind of criticism, but on the whole if all sections criticise the Chair or the House it means we are in the central right point.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Question, Sir.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Now I request it may be fifteen minutes and in your discretion twenty minutes.

Mr. Speaker: That means I am on an inclined plane and I do not know where I shall be.

That is the position. I have also noticed one thing more—I do not blame the Members for that. Practically the same things are said over and over with this difference that different speakers speak a language which is different from the language of the previous speakers. The real points are not coming in such a great number. I do not carry the impression that any point which is worth making is stifled by this time-limit. By even the ten minute time-limit it is not stifled. But that is an individual view, the House may not accept it, but that is my view.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): Sir, it has been the privilege in all democracies for the Opposition to delay such sort of measures and it has been a very old and recognised privilege. I only want this. In this House there is no organised Opposition. I do not mind the present procedure but let it not be a sort of a precedent for the future.

And I object to the officials uninvitedly advising you in this matter. I think it is not to the dignity of the Chair that an official should be advising while a Member is speaking or while you, Sir, are speaking.

My submission is that in such matters where a Finance Bill or similar measures come forward for consideration, there has been a privilege which should not be denied. Just now I do not mind the present procedure, but for the future you might see that the privilege of the Opposition remains intact as long as you are in the Chair.

Mr. Speaker: I can understand, and appreciate also, the irritation of the honourable Member, if the Secretary gets up to say something to me. But then he does some injustice to the Chair also if he thinks that the Chair will necessarily accept what the Secretary says. Let there be some more confidence in the level-headedness of the Chair.

Well, the honourable Member says that delaying tactics are legitimate for the Opposition, but he himself has said that, in this House there is no Opposition—I was half-inclined to ask him whether he was one such; but I know there is no organised opposition—not that all Members agree, on everything that Government says. As to the future procedure when an Opposition comes into existence, all I can say is that today the position is hypothetical. When it comes the Chair will then adjust itself. Even today, honourable Members will see that, in the changed set-up I have been trying to adjust to the changed situation and have some changed procedure so far as it is possible. The old procedure in the Legislative Assembly, of opposing each and every measure of Government has now to be changed and Members must turn now on a different line. For the future I do not know which of us will be here; if I am here then it will be my responsibility. But that will be for the future, not now. Mr. Chattopadhyay.

Shri Mihir Lal Chattopadhyay: I did not give my name, Sir, I was not prepared to speak today.

Mr. Speaker: Very well, then he loses his chance.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor (U.P.: General): Sir, I am very happy that I have been called upon to speak during the course of this debate. I did not know that this rare good fortune would fall upon me so suddenly. (Shri B. L. Senadhi: 'I hope you are not shocked!') No, I am not shocked; but it is a very pleasant surprise to me that I should have this rare good fortune.

During the course of this debate, I think I should take up the question of the refugee. During the course of the general debate or general budget discussion, the question of relief and rehabilitation had to be put off because of want of time, and a separate day has been allotted to this subject. But I feel, even that one full day—and now I find it will be only half a day—will not be sufficient to meet the needs of the situation. Therefore, I think I might take up that question even now.

Sir, I would like, first of all to take up the question of the agreement that has been recently arrived at between the Union Government and the Government of Pakistan in regard to the exchange and sale of properties. That question, I think, has not been very satisfactorily settled, and that question has now been agitating the minds of the refugees to a very great extent. They are feeling very unhappy over it. The agreement that has been arrived at is that exchanges and sales of properties in both the Dominions should take place at an individual level. The refugees feel—and I think rightly feel—that this will bring absolutely no relief to them. They feel that it is impossible for them to go to Pakistan to bring about the exchange or sale of their properties there. In the first place, we know it only too well that the residents of Pakistan are creating a very hostile atmosphere against the residents of the Indian Union, and a great deal of propaganda has been going on there to the effect that people there should not purchase the property of those Hindus who have left property there. Secondly, the refugees here certainly do not find it secure for them to go there. The few that have gone there and have come back have narrated stories which do not inspire confidence in the people here. They said there is no proper arrangement for their boarding there and they do not think that once they go there it is easy for them to come back at all, not only because the Pakistan Government has passed an ordinance to the effect or made it a rule that nobody going there can come back unless he has cleared the income-tax or has been able to secure an income-tax clearance certificate, but also because they feel that once they go there, there may be hooligans there who might fall upon them. For these reasons they feel that this sort of agreement has brought them absolutely no relief. I fully agree with them that the sale and exchange of property should be effected on a governmental level. I think, that it is very necessary that this suggestion of theirs should be accepted so far as our government is concerned, and of course Government must insist on Pakistan Government also agreeing to such a procedure, that the sale and exchange of property should be effected on a governmental level. An Inter-Dominion Board should be set up whose duties should be to evaluate the value of the properties left behind in both Dominions. Each Dominion should purchase the properties of the evacuees at the value so assessed by the Board, and pay to the other Dominion the price of the property, either in bonds or in cash or some other method should be adopted for paying the value of the property. The persons residing in the Indian Dominion should get the value of their properties, from their own Government, and that Government should realise the value of the property so assessed, from the Pakistan Government. Similar should be the case with the other Dominion. Some such arrangement, I submit, must be arrived at if a satisfactory solution is to be found to this question.

There is yet another question and that is the question of the realisation of the rent of the properties of the evacuees. Over a year—in fact about eighteen months—have passed since the exodus of population from one Dominion to the other, but so far as I know, absolutely no amount of the rent realised in any Dominion has been paid to the proprietors of the immoveable properties. This, Sir, has resulted in great hardship to the refugees. I myself know that a very huge amount has been collected by the Custodian of Evacuees Properties in Western Pakistan, but so far not a pie has been paid by the Custodian to those to whom that rent is due. That is a question which must engage the immediate attention of our Government. If even a fraction of that huge amount which has been realised by Western Pakistan is paid to the refugees here, it will go a great way to reduce their sufferings and it will also go a great way to reduce the responsibility of our Government in looking after the refugees here.

There is yet another point and that is the question of paying compensation to the refugees. This is a question which has been the subject matter of some controversy recently. The refugees claim that it is their legal right to get compensation for all the losses they have suffered due to partition. Our leader the honourable Prime Minister, has questioned this, and said that he could not see eye to eye with them as to the legality of this proposition. I do not want to enter into any legal quibbles. It may be that the refugees have no legal right to get any compensation, but I do certainly submit, that they are certainly entitled to it, if not on legal grounds, at least on grounds of equity and on humanitarian grounds. Great problems are not solved by taking a merely legalistic view of things. Great problems have to be solved on a much higher plane. I do feel that this demand of the refugees that they are entitled to compensation for the losses they have had to suffer due to partition is quite just. After all, have they suffered this because of any fault of theirs? Certainly not. All their sufferings are due to the partition which we agreed to in the interest of the country. This is the latest price which we have had to pay to secure the emancipation of the country, to secure the freedom of the country and the question, therefore, arises as to when the whole country has gained thereby, when the freedom has been secured for the whole country, must the price for this freedom be paid only by a particular section of the country, or must it be shared and equitably shared by the whole country? I submit, Sir, that there can be no two opinions on this subject. If we have purchased the liberty of the country, which is enjoyed by every citizen of the country, there is no reason why every citizen of the country according to his capacity and in an equitable manner should not bear the price thereof.

I may also submit that this principle of compensation is not a new principle. It has been accepted in the past and not only has it been accepted in the past, it has been acted upon also and it is being acted upon even today. We know very well that the sufferers during the several non-cooperation movements in the past, and particularly during the Freedom Struggle of 1942, many a person who suffered heavily had been compensated for the losses that they suffered. Various Congress Governments in the different provinces compensated this loss which our political sufferers suffered and even today our Congress Governments in the various provinces are making good to some substantial extent the losses which were suffered by the political sufferers during the 1942 Movement. Now, when this principle has been accepted in the past and it is being acted upon even now in the case of the political sufferers of 1942 Movement, I see no reason why the losses that have been suffered by the refugees in the latest political movement of the country, a political movement which has resulted in much bitter results than our previous political movements, why these sufferers should not be compensated. I, therefore, submit, Sir, we must seriously consider this question.

I know, an argument might be laid against this suggestion, that this problem is a very big one, and that the financial implications of this principle may not be within the means of the financial resources of the Union Government. It may possibly be so, but the mere fact that this is a huge problem or that the money involved in the acceptance of this principle is beyond the capacity of the Union Government is no reason why this should be brushed aside summarily. Let us at least admit the Justice and propriety of this demand; let us admit, Sir, the propriety of this demand and claim and then tell the refugees that while we certainly, agree with them in their demand, while we have our fullest sympathy with them in this, we cannot go to a very large extent in meeting their demand because of the financial difficulties. That is one thing, but to tell them that they have neither the legal nor the moral justification for making this demand is certainly something entirely different and let us try to meet this demand to such an extent as we may, and once we begin to apply our mind, we may be able to find out the ways and means also. In this connection, I would suggest in all seriousness as to why we should not think of imposing a rehabilitation levy on the whole of the country excepting of course, the refugees. As I said at the very beginning, when the whole country has gained by the liberation of the country, there is no reason why every citizen of the country should not equitably bear the price of it, and therefore, I see no reason why a rehabilitation levy should not be imposed on the citizens of this country. In my mind, I have absolutely no doubt that the whole country will bear this burden willingly and cheerfully. This will

[Shri C. Subramaniam]

It was further suggested that the aircraft now in use are not economical and that the honourable Minister for Communications has asked the Air Companies to import aircraft which would have accommodation for 40 or 50 passengers. Sometimes we are told that foreign exchange is very scarce, that our balance of trade is very much adverse and that therefore we have to save as much foreign exchange as possible. If that is so, is it necessary that we should import huge aircraft from Dollar Areas like America and fritter away our foreign exchange? Cannot the development of civil aviation wait for sometime until we are able to manufacture our own air craft? It is not of such a national importance that it should be taken up even now.

This leads me to the question of the import policy of the Government of India. Aircraft has to be imported according to the policy laid down by the honourable Minister for Communications. After the war we have imported 35,000 motor cars. Now, many concerns are prepared to sell motor cars at a discount. If we are really short of Dollar exchange, why should we not restrict the import of motor cars from Dollar areas? Also, can we not manage with smaller machines of eight or ten horse-power? Is it necessary that we should go in for Buick cars and that of the best model? Even now Buick cars are allowed to be imported and Chrysler cars are allowed to be imported. And Oldsmobiles and Chevrolets are also there. I would suggest that if we are living on austerity standards and would copy the example of Great Britain, we should set up really austerity standards. Cannot the honourable Ministers move in Austin Tens? There should be a restriction of the importation of motor cars. Now that everybody has got his motor car replaced, there should be a complete stoppage of imports of motor cars from Dollar Areas altogether.

Then it was suggested that luxury goods and non-essential goods were allowed to be imported to fight inflation, to absorb the extra purchasing power in the hands of the people. I really fail to understand this policy of fighting inflation by importation of luxury goods. In certain quarters it is also felt that drinking is necessary to fight inflation and that too advocated by some experts. I am unable to understand how drinking is necessary for fighting inflation. I can understand people having no faith in prohibition. That is a different matter. But to say that for fighting inflation drinking is necessary is a thing that I cannot understand.

Shri H. V. Kamath: For fighting, not fighting inflation.

Shri C. Subramaniam: Then this import of luxury goods.

The honourable Minister for Commerce said that in the agreements, with certain countries, when we have to import certain capital goods, those countries insist that we should import a certain amount of consumer goods also. If you go into the imports, you will find that most of the imports—about 90 per cent. I suppose—are from U.K. and U.S.A. Certainly U.K. and U.S.A. do not insist for the import of capital goods that we should import consumer goods also along with them.

Then, Sir, I will pass on to another matter regarding the export policy. It was said by the honourable the Commerce Minister that after a great deal of thought they removed the export duty on oilseeds, so that our oilseeds might compete with foreign oilseeds. What is the effect? You find that so far as the internal price is concerned, it has been inflated to the extent of the removal of the duty. What did the foreign countries do? They have reduced the price to that extent of the duty, so that they may compete with Indian seeds, so much so in the Indian market the price has risen to the extent of the duty you have removed and in the foreign markets their prices have been reduced and there is almost a paralysis of trade in oilseeds, particularly groundnut. And in respect of oilseeds, our oilseeds export is mainly groundnut and not of others, and it was able to compete with other foreign oilseeds, even with the export duty on it. That being so, I still am unable to understand the policy by removing this export duty and merely hoping that internal prices would not be inflated to the extent of the removal of the export duty.

Only one point more and I am done. That point is regarding Grow More Food. The scarcity of food has created almost a national emergency. This House might realise it in its debates and discussions but the country has not been made to realise this national emergency. Nobody in the country feels that there is an emergency and that it has got to be met. Unless you create that psychology in the country, you are not going to improve the situation. For that, you should set up standards from the top. The giving of feasts, giving of parties and all those things should be stopped as during the war days and we should set up a standard here, so that the common man might know that we are passing through an emergency, not merely an emergency which is talked of in the House alone, but a real emergency. Therefore, in order to create that psychology, I would request real austerity standards in regard to food to be set up at the highest level and that should percolate to the lowest level, so that the people may feel the emergency and act up to it and we may get out of the emergency.

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साहू: वाचस्पति जी, मैं दो एक बात इसके बारे में पेश करूंगा। सब से पहले मैं यह बात कहना चाहता हूँ कि हम लोगों की जो नीति है और जो अवलम्बन हम लोग करते हैं, उस नीति के पीछे भीति-भावना है। हम जो कुछ करते हैं वह नरक्सन के तरीके से करते हैं। इसलिए हम लोग देखते हैं कि जितना Correspondence हम लोग पकिस्तान से करते हैं, तो पाकिस्तान हम लोगों को जवाब नहीं देता फिर भी हम लोग उससे पत्र व्यवहार करते चले जाते हैं। पाकिस्तान से जो झगड़ा हमारा अभी तक चल रहा है वह अभी अच्छी तरह से तै नहीं हुआ है।

दूसरी बात में देखता हूँ कि हम लोगों की पैसे की अवस्था खराब हो गई है तब हमको तुरन्त यह सोचना चाहिये कि हम लोग किस तरह से व्यवस्था करें जिससे हम लोग इतने पैसे से अपना काम चला सकें। जब मैं देखता हूँ कि डिपार्टमेंटों में एक सैक्रेटरी होता है उसके बाद एडीशनल सैक्रेटरी होता है उसके बाद डिप्टी सैक्रेटरी होता है, उसके बाद अन्डर सैक्रेटरी होता है तो मैं सोचता हूँ कि एक सैक्रेटरी रख कर और एक आफिस सुपरिन्टेंडेंट बढ़ा देंगे और कुछ ज्यादा क्लेरिकल स्टाफ बढ़ा देंगे तो इससे हमारा काम भी हो जायेगा और खर्च में भी हम लोग कमी कर सकेंगे। अभी सैक्रेटरी, डिप्टी सैक्रेटरी, एडीशनल सैक्रेटरी और स्पेशल आफिसर इतने बन गये हैं कि इन लोगों की भावना में बदलाव नहीं हो सकता। इसलिये किसी सिद्धान्त पर ये लोग ठीक नहीं आ सकते हैं। मैं चाहता हूँ, जैसा हम कहते हैं और एक छोटी सी कहावत है :— उसका अर्थ यह है कि “हम लोगों में जो महान इज्जत है वह हम लोगों को रखनी चाहिये और हम जब नहीं रखेंगे तो कौन रखेगा”। इसलिये हम देखते हैं कि जब हम लोगों के पास धन नहीं है तब फौरन हम लोगों को अपने खर्च में कमी कर देनी चाहिये। मगर हम लोग ऐसा नहीं कर सकते हैं। इसलिए जितने सैक्रेटरी और डिप्टी सैक्रेटरी आ गये हैं वे लोग कहते हैं कि इतने से हमारा काम नहीं चलेगा मैं तो यह कहना चाहता हूँ और जैसा कि अंग्रेजी में एक कहावत है “Too many cooks spoil the broth” यानी कुक्स बहुत हो गये, कुक्स काम कम करना चाहते हैं। यह मैं किसी के बारे में नहीं कहना चाहता हूँ। हमारे प्रधान मंत्री जी ने डिपार्टमेंट हैड्स की एक कान्फ्रेंस बुलाकर कहा था कि सब मिनिस्टरी में ५ परसेंट की कमी होनी चाहिये। आसानी से हो सकती है। मगर हम लोगों ने इतने मंत्री बना दिये हैं। मंत्री के ऊपर भी मंत्री और उसके नीचे भी मंत्री हो गये हैं। वे सब बात गड़बड़ करते हैं। इसलिये मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि हम लोगों के पास अर्थ नहीं है और इसका नतीजा यह होता है कि जो इतने सैक्रेटरी और डिप्टी सैक्रेटरी बन गये हैं उससे हम लोगों का काफी रूपया बरबाद होता है।

तीसरी बात जो मैं कहना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि हम लोगों का अभी तक इंग्लैंड वालों से ताल्लुक बना हुआ है जिससे हमारा प्रबन्ध ठीक तरह से नहीं हो रहा है। हमारा जो इंग्लैंड में गोल्ड रिजर्व रखा हुआ है उसको हमको यह

पर लाना चाहिये मगर हम उसको यहां पर ला नहीं सकते हैं। जब हम लोग स्वतंत्र हो गये हैं तो क्यों नहीं हम अपना सोना वहां से ला सकते हैं। जितने हमारे स्ट्रलिंग बेलेंस वहां पर है उनका हम अच्छी तरह से इस्तेमाल नहीं कर सकते हैं। मैं तो देखता हूँ कि जितनी भी हम चिन्ता करें उसका सिर्फ एक ही अर्थ है और वह यह है कि हम डरते हैं। हमको डर है कि अगर हम नेशनल मिलिशिया बनायें तो कम्यूनिस्ट और सोशलिस्ट उस पर अपना कब्जा कर लेंगे हम अपना सोना इंग्लैंड से इसलिए नहीं लाते कि हमको डर लगा रहता है कि अगर हम ऐसा करते हैं तो ब्रिटिश गवर्नमेंट कोई गड़बड़ न कर दे। जब पाकिस्तान हमको कोई जवाब नहीं देता तो हम उसको जोर से कहने में भी डरते हैं। यह जो पोलिसी हमारी सरकार की चल रही है वह डर की पोलिसी है। इससे बहुत खराबी पैदा हो रही है। मैं चाहता हूँ कि सब लोग इस बात की तरफ खास तौर से ध्यान दें।

एक और बात मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि सब काम में विलम्ब हो रहा है। हम लोगों को जल्दी से अपने कामों को करना चाहिये। जैसा कि हमारे दोस्त सुब्रमनियम साहब ने कहा है कि जो हमारी इकौनौमिक कमेटी है उसमें इतना खर्चा हुआ है और अभी तक उसकी रिपोर्ट तैयार नहीं हुई है। वह रिपोर्ट कुछ समय बाद आयेगी फिर उसके बाद स्टैंडिंग फाइनेन्स कमेटी के पास आयेगी और फिर वह डिपार्टमेंटों के पास जायेगी और वहां पर इस पर विचार किया जायेगा। वहां पर यह कहा जायेगा कि हमारे पास काम बहुत है हम कमी करने से मजबूर हैं। इस तरह से इस काम में एक दो वर्ष लग जायेंगे। तो इसलिए हमको सोचना चाहिये कि हमको कितना परसेंट यानी ५ परसेंट या १० परसेंट, कितनी कमी करनी चाहिये जिसके करने से हमारा काम अच्छी तरह से चल सकता है। एक और बात मैं कामर्स डिपार्टमेंट के बारे में कहना चाहता हूँ। इस डिपार्टमेंट से जो एक्सपोर्ट और इम्पोर्ट का लाइसेन्स दिया जाता है वह एक मुसीबत की बात है। हम लोग अपने बिजनेस के लिए इतना एक्सपोर्ट घटा देते हैं कि वह ठीक नहीं है। हम लोगों की जो भीति-भावना और अविश्वास है उससे हमारा बहुत काम बिगड़ रहा है। इस से हमारे व्यापार में बहुत देरी हो रही है और इसी देरी की वजह से मुल्क की दौलत में कमी हो रही है। हमारी जो यह भीति-भावना की पोलिसी है वह हमारा काम बिगाड़ रही है। मैं आप लोगों से और यहां पर जितने मंत्री बैठे हैं उनसे प्रार्थना करूंगा कि वे इस बात को अच्छी तरह से सोचें। मैं और ज्यादा नहीं कहना चाहता हूँ।

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): Sir, I would submit a few things in this connection. The first thing I wish to submit is that the policy we have adopted is based upon a sense of fear. Whatever we do, we do with some nervousness. The result is that we see that whatever correspondence we enter into with Pakistan, we do not get any reply of our correspondence and yet we go on corresponding with Pakistan. Our quarrel with Pakistan is still hanging fire and has not been settled as yet.

One thing more I submit to you all. I submit again and again that we have attained Purna Swarajya. But I see that we carry on our administration under the British Commonwealth. So long we will not forgo this sense of fear we would not be able to make any progress. So long the British Government will continue to be on our back and guide our policy the administration in India will not run smoothly. We spend nearly 250 crores of rupees on Civil and Military administration. I again and again think that so long this sense of fear will persist we cannot curtail our expenditure. As Shri Prakasam said we can raise a national militia in our country and thus a great deal of our military expenses can be curtailed. But we fear that when the national militia would be raised it would go to play into other's hands and our own position would become precarious. This fear should altogether be discarded. When we have attained independence then we should trust all the people who live in this country.

The second thing that I observe is that our economic condition has much deteriorated, so we must at once think out the ways and means whereby we may be able to manage our affairs within the monetary limit. When I see that in every department there is one Secretary, one additional Secretary, then a deputy secretary and then an under-secretary, then I think that if besides a secretary we were to appoint one more office superintendent and increase the strength of the clerical staff then these changes will not only keep our work going but we will be able to make some curtailment in the expenditure also. At present so many Secretaries, Deputy Secretaries, Additional Secretaries and Special Officers have been set up that their mentality cannot be changed. Therefore they cannot work up to definite ideals. I wish and as it is generally said and a proverb also goes meaning that we should maintain the grand dignity that we have and if we would not maintain our dignity then who else would do so? Therefore when we see that we have no money then we should at once curtail our expenses. But we cannot do so simply for the reason that these Secretaries and Deputy Secretaries submit that they would not be able to keep the work going. I want to say that according to an English proverb, "Too many cooks spoil the broth", the cooks have increased in number, but these cooks want to do less work. I do not want to say this about anyone in particular. Our Honourable the Prime Minister calling a Conference of the departmental heads had told them that a 5 per cent. reduction in the staff of all the ministries should be made. This can be done quite easily, but we have appointed so many Secretaries that there are Secretaries above the Secretaries and Secretaries under the Secretaries and they make a mess of the whole affairs. Therefore I wish to submit that we have not sufficient means at our disposal and the result is that money is wasted over so many Secretaries and Deputy Secretaries.

The third point that I wish to submit is that we are still maintaining relations with England, with the result that our administration is not running properly. We should bring here our Gold Reserve that is being kept in England. But we cannot bring it here. When we have become independent then why can we not bring our Gold Reserve from there? Whatever Sterling Balances we have there we cannot utilize them to our best advantage. I observe that however anxiety we may have the only explanation to all this is that we are afraid. We fear that if we raised the national militia then the Socialists and Communists will get hold of it. We do not bring our Gold Reserve from England because we are always in fear that if we were to do so then the British Government may not create some difficulties for us. When Pakistan does not care to give any reply then we are afraid even to address her in strong terms. The present policy of our Government is that of fear. This is creating a lot of mischief. I wish that all of you pay special attention towards this.

One more thing I want to submit that much delay is being made in all the matters. We should perform our tasks in the quickest possible manner. As my friend Shri Subramaniam has said the report of our Economic Committee, on which we have spent so much money, is not yet ready. The report will be available after sometime, then it will come to the Standing Finance Committee and then it will be sent to the various departments and there it will be thoroughly discussed. There it will be said that as we have too much of work so we are constrained to make any reduction. Thus some 2 or 3 years will elapse in this dilly dallying. Therefore we should work out as to how much per cent. of reduction, 5 per cent. or 10 per cent., we should make so that we may be able to carry on our work properly.

I wish to submit one thing about the Commerce Department. The licences that are granted by this department for Import and Export business are a source of constant trouble. For our business we diminish the exports to a great extent, and that is not proper. Our sense of fear and want of confidence are making a mess of our work. This is causing delay in our trade, and as a result of this delay the national wealth is diminishing. This fear policy of ours is making a mess of our matters. I would request all of you and also the Honourable Ministers who are here to think over this very carefully. I do not wish to submit any more.

Shri Kishorimohan Tripathi (C.P. and Berar States): Sir, I will confine myself in discussing the finance proposals to food and agriculture, agricultural economy, the capital gains tax, fresh taxation proposals, and if time permits, to public expenditure. It has been now agreed that we are passing through a great food crisis. This crisis it has been pointed out arose as late as 1920, and since then has been there in the country, although the then foreign Government took no notice of the crisis that existed. The disease has thus become a chronic disease and no matter with what amount of impatience we cry for a cure, the cure is going to take its natural course.

The problem of food is not a problem of merely feeding the people. It is a problem of reorganizing the entire rural economy of the country, and unless we take the problem in that light, it is impossible to fight the food crisis as it exists today.

The Government has in hand both a short-term plan and a long-term plan to fight this crisis. So far as the short-term plan is concerned, it consists of the Grow More Food campaign which, initiated in 1942-43, and having taken in grants more than Rs. 18 crores during the last five years, has not produced sufficient results to free us from the anxiety of food problems. What is the reason of the failure of the Grow More Food campaign? The reason is that we have not tackled the fundamental issue underlying the production of food in the country. Whenever we have talked of increasing production in the industrial field, we have always tried to give incentives to industry. The present budget in its whole outlook tries to give incentives to industry so as to increase production, but in the field of agriculture and food, these incentives are not being given to the agriculturist so as to bring him into a position where he can contribute his mite to the national call by producing more and more food for the country.

[Shri Kishorimohan Tripathi]

I have a few suggestions to offer in the matter of giving incentives to the agriculturist so that he might produce more and more food and contribute his mite in fighting this great national crisis. The first is that the Government must come out with a piece of legislation, as has been done in the U.S.A. for the same purpose, to provide for a fair price being paid for all agricultural commodities that are produced and to provide facilities for proper marketing of all agricultural commodities. I will appeal to the Government not to overlook this suggestion, as it comes from a younger Member. I discussed this problem with the Director-General of Food, Mr. Dodd, when he was here and he said that this measure would go a very long way in giving an incentive to the agriculturist to produce more and more food. Unless the agriculturist today knows that he produces in his own interest and for his own good, he is not going to come to the help of the country. The second suggestion that I would like to offer the Government is that it must take drastic measure to relieve the extensive indebtedness among the agriculturists. Then it must provide for credit facilities in the country.

These three measures, if taken up, would go a very long way in regulating rural economy to the advantage of the agriculturist, and unless in this country we regulate rural economy in the proper way so as best to adjust itself to the national pattern of economy, we are not going to solve the problem. The country, with all our efforts for industrialization and mechanization is going to remain primarily a country of agriculturists, and agriculture will remain the most predominant occupation of the people for the next 20 years. Therefore in any pattern of economy, in any set-up of economy that we want to develop for this country, this agricultural rural economy is going to be the pivotal centre. If therefore attempts are not made to adjust the industrial economy of the country in a way that would best suit the agricultural economy of the country, times will come when we shall find ourselves every now and then running into one crisis or another. Any other solution would be futile. Regulation of the present set up of the agricultural economy must therefore be an item on the short term plan of the Government to add to the Grow More Food campaign. Then the Government is fighting food crisis by a long term plan which consists of large scale reclamation of land, provision of irrigation facilities through the development of hydro-electric and multi-purpose projects, production of chemical fertilisers, etc. I find that even this long term plan of the Government is rather diffused and it is not well integrated to an entire and over all national plan. The Government must fix before itself an ideal of the living standard of the common man and must fasten its entire economy to achieve that standard of the common man within a specified period, say 15 years. Making allowance for the growth of the population at the rate of 40 lakhs per year during these 15 years we should know how much food we will require, how much jute, how much cotton and what acreage in the country should be set apart for each of these things. What I want to bring home to the Government is that there must immediately be set up a National Planning Commission to tackle the entire economic system of the country and to evolve an economic system wherein we guarantee to the common man an ideal living standard within a specified period. This is what is being done in almost every European country.

While I say this I must also warn the Government against over-mechanisation of agriculture and over-industrialisation of the country. I remember have seen a pamphlet I do not know from which quarter it came wherein a man of the eminence of Prof. Einstein has through Dr. Amarnath Jha warned the country against over-mechanisation in agriculture. India's agriculture at present, it is said, is such that over-mechanisation will not be of very great

I will now come to the capital gains tax. It is said that this tax is being abolished with a view to give an incentive to investors to subscribe their mite to Government loans that are floated from time to time and in this way help Government's borrowing programme and indirectly the industrialisation of the country also. I am a layman and I do not know the implications of the abolition of the tax in relation to the economy of the country. Looking at it as a layman I feel very strongly, Sir, that while on the one hand Government says that it will tax such income as is earned by people through hard labour, on the other hand it says that it is not going to tax such income as is not earned through hard labour but as comes through transfer of property or such other sources. That is how I view it and I see no moral justification for the abolition of this tax. If, however, the Government feels that the abolition is very essential and urgent and that without the abolition of the tax the whole borrowing programme of the Government is going to collapse, then there is no alternative. But I would like the honourable Finance Minister to explain it to the House whether there is any moral justification for the abolition of this tax in the present set up of things in the country, where wealth is distributed in such a way that there are now and then quakes to cause disequilibrium in our economy.

Before I finish I have to urge the honourable Finance Minister and also to request the members of the Select Committee to re-consider the financial proposals. In spite of all that has been said during the debates I have not been able to reconcile myself to the levy of a tax on coarse and medium cloth. This tax will directly hit the landless labourers to whom we have not been able to give the least advantage since the country became independent. There is no reason why we should go on taxing him both at the centre and in the provinces also. If it is not possible to balance the budget without this tax, I will request the Finance Minister to shift this tax to better income groups and not to leave it as a burden on the poorer classes of the country and the landless labourers. The coarse cloth produced by the mills is mostly consumed by the landless labourers and we have done nothing as yet to improve their living standards. So we need not tax them every now and then.

I will now come to the public expenditure. This has been discussed by several members and I agree with Shri Sahu and also with what Shri Subramaniam said that it is possible for the Finance Minister to set up a limit of economy and then try to achieve that rather than allow things to drift as they have been drifting now. During last year we had a limit set before us, that we should make an economy of 2½ crores as proposed by the previous Finance Minister. What happened was more and more income came in and along with that our expenditure went up, so much so that whatever we earned we spent. That was because the Finance Minister did not strongly enforce his desire to economise public expenditure. I would, therefore, request the Finance Minister to look into this matter more carefully and see if it is possible within the current year or budget year to reduce public expenditure as far as practicable and not leave it to be solved by the Economy Committee, as its report will take a long time to come.

लाख इन्सान भूख की वजह से मर गए, उनके पास अनाज नहीं पहुंच पाया। हमारे आजाद होने के बाद बल्कि जिस दिन हमें आजादी मिली उसी रोज से हमारे देश में हजारों आदमी बेघर होना शुरू हो गए और लाखों की तादाद में बेघर होकर इधर से उधर गए। मैं यह कहता हूं कि जो भाई यह समझते हैं कि परिवर्तन नहीं आया वह जरा शान्ति से इस बात को सोचें। आज से तीन चार साल पहले आदमी अपने घरों पर थे, वह बेघर नहीं हुए थे। इसके बावजूद भी देश की आर्थिक स्थिति के कारण या कुछ और भी कारणों की वजह से पच्चीस लाख के करीब आदमी भूखों मर गए लेकिन आजाद होने के बाद इस देश में क्या देखा? कि एक करोड़ से ज्यादा आदमी बेघर हुए। लेकिन उन में से एक इन्सान भी भूखा नहीं मरा। इसलिए मैं यह समझता हूं कि जो भाई यह कहते हैं कि देश के आजाद हो जाने के बाद गवर्नमेंट के ढंग में तब्दीली नहीं आई वह दरअसल गलती पर है। हमारे ढंग में, हमारे कार्य क्रम में बड़ी भारी तब्दीली आई और इसी तब्दीली के कारण यह हुआ कि हालांकि इतने हमारे भाई इधर से उधर गए या उधर से इधर आए और उनको आज भी बहुत सी तकलीफात हैं लेकिन इसके बावजूद भी कोई भूखों नहीं मरा। अब भी जो कई तकलीफात मौजूद हैं तो इस सिलसिले में क्लिक भाई यह भूल जाते हैं कि यह देश एक गरीब देश है जिसकी अपनी लिमिटेशन हैं। इस देश के अन्दर हजारों लाखों देहात ऐसे हैं जिनके अन्दर न कोई अस्पताल है न कोई स्कूल है और न कोई दूसरी आराम की चीजें हैं। लेकिन जो भाई बेघर होकर आए उनके लिए तकरीबन हर एक जगह स्कूल का इंतजाम हुआ हर एक जगह उनके लिए दवाई दारू का इंतजाम हुआ। मैं पिछले साल कुछ मंत्रियों के साथ सेंट्रल गवर्नमेंट का कैम्प देखने के लिए कुरुक्षेत्र गया था। मैं ने वहां पर अस्पताल की हालत देखी और डाक्टर से बातचीत की। डाक्टर ने हमको बताया कि देश की कोई ऐसी दवाई नहीं है कि जो हमारे जरूरत की हो और यहां न आती हो। इस देश के अन्दर लाखों देहात ऐसे हैं कि जहां कुत्ता भी नहीं पहुंचती है तो जिस देश का सैट-अप ऐसा हो, जहां की इकानामिक हालत ऐसी हो, उस हालत में जो कुछ काम हुआ वह कोई कम काम नहीं है।

लेकिन इस सब के बावजूद मैं भी कहना चाहता हूं कि यह देश एक कृषि-प्रधान देश है। इसके अन्दर ८५ फीसदी आदमियों की रोटी का वास्ता सीधे खेती से है। एक मिनट के लिए अगर आप नम्बरों को भी अपने ध्यान से छोड़ दें और अपने ध्यान से यह हटालें कि इसमें इतने आदमी लगे हैं और इस वजह से खेती को इम्पार्टेंस न दें तो भी आप यह मानेंगे कि इस देश के अन्दर आज ऐसी हालत पैदा होगई है कि अगर हमने अपनी कृषि की हालत को

नहीं सुधारा और प्रोडक्शन को नहीं बढ़ाया और ठीक नहीं किया तो हमारा देश जो आजाद हुआ है वह इकानामिकली आजाद नहीं रहेगा। इस नुक्ते निगाह से ही हमको अब यह सोचना होगा कि हमारे देश की इकानामी से एग्रीकल्चरल इकानामी होनी चाहिए या इंडस्ट्रीयल इकानामी। मुझे इस बात पर जरा भी विरोध नहीं है और मैं इस बात को मानता हूं कि यह देश जिस हालत में आजाद हुआ है और आज भी जो हालत है, इस अवस्था में अगर हमारे देश में एक मजबूत फौज नहीं हुई तो हमारी आजादी एक स्वप्न बन कर रह जायगी। मैं मानता हूं कि आजाद देश में बहुत से कारखाने होने चाहिए। लेकिन इस सब के बावजूद कुछ बातें हमें सोचनी पड़ेंगी। यह अब ऐसा वक्त आ गया है कि इस वक्त हमें कृषि, खेती को पहली इम्पार्टेंस देनी पड़ेंगी अपने देश की इंडस्ट्री की तरक्की के लिए, हर एक सूबे के अन्दर और सेंटर के अन्दर इंडस्ट्रियल फायनेंस कारपोरेशन चालू किए गए हैं। लेकिन मैं आपसे यह कहता हूं कि इस देश के अन्दर, जो कि कृषि प्रधान देश, सबसे पहले अगर कोई फाइनेंस कारपोरेशन बनना चाहिए था, तो वह एग्रीकल्चरल फायनेंस कारपोरेशन बनना चाहिए था। क्या आपने या किसी सूबे ने कोई एग्रीकल्चरल फायनेंस कारपोरेशन जारी की? अगर आप चाहते हैं कि आप जो १३० करोड़ या १३३ करोड़ रुपए सालाना का अनाज दूसरे देशों से मगाते हैं और जिसकी वजह से न आप कारखानों की मशीनें मगा सकते हैं न कोई और दूसरी चीजें, अगर आप चाहते हैं कि यह हालत बदल जाय, तो क्या आप समझते हैं कि खेती करने वालों के सेंट्रीमेंट को चोट लगाकर आप बदल सकते हैं? कई भाइयों ने कई ख्याल जाहिर किये हैं। हमारे एक भाई ने अपने वयान में जिक्र किया कि शुगरकेन की कीमत कम कर दी जाय ताकि किसान ज्यादा अनाज बो सके। लेकिन मैं उनसे और अपनी सरकार से एक नम्र निवेदन करना चाहता हूं कि कृषक मशीन नहीं है, कृषक एक इन्सान है, उसके सेंट्रीमेंट को अगर आपने चोट लगाई तो आप कभी अपने मसलों को हल नहीं कर पावेंगे। अगर आप चाहते हैं कि आपका देश अनाज के हिसाब से एक सेल्फ-सपोर्टिंग देश हो तो आपको कम से कम एक बात जरूर करनी पड़ेगी, वह यह कि आप एग्रीकल्चरलिस्ट को इनसेंटिव (incentive) दीजिए ताकि वह ज्यादा पैदा करे, और वह इनसेंटिव आप किस ढंग से दे सकते हैं। त्रिपाठीजी और मैं साथ थे जब हमने मिस्टर डाड से बातें की। मिस्टर डाड ने हमें बताया था कि अमेरिका में वह तब तक ज्यादा पैदा नहीं करा सके जब तक कि अमेरिका की गवर्नमेंट ने किसानों को यह यकीन नहीं दिलाया कि सरकार खास भाव पर अनाज जरूर खरीदेगी। मैंने कई एक दफा हमारे कृषि मिनिस्टर साहब से बातें की और उन्होंने बताया कि देश की आर्थिक हालत ऐसी है कि सरकार इस धान का ज़िम्मा नहीं ले सकती। मैं इस बात के लिए पूरा जोर देना चाहता हूं

कि अगर आप चाहते हैं कि देश के अन्दर ज्यादा अनाज पैदा हो तो आपके लिए यह जरूरी है कि आप इस जिम्मेवारी को लें। चाहे यह कितनी ही मुश्किल हो या चाहे इसमें कितना ही खतरा हो। अगर आप चाहते हैं कि ज्यादा पैदा हो तो आपको यह जिम्मा लेना होगा कि खास भाव तक अगर देश के अन्दर कोई दाम देने के लिए तैयार नहीं है तो गवर्नमेंट खरीदेगी।

इस सिलसिले में एक और सुझाव देना चाहता हूँ जिससे मैं समझता हूँ कि गवर्नमेंट को बहुत ज्यादा खर्च भी नहीं उठाना पड़ेगा। वह यह, देश के अन्दर मिडिलमैन की एजेंसी इतनी लम्बी चौड़ी बढ़ गयी है और बढ़ती ही जा रही है। यदि आप इस मिडिलमैन की एजेंसी को कुछ देर के लिए कम कर दें और मैं समझता हूँ कि चूँकि उनके पास कुछ अपने फायनेंसेज भी हैं इससे ज्यादा तकलीफ उनको नहीं होगी। कोआपरेटिव कंज्यूमर्स सोसायटी और कोआपरेटिव प्रोड्यूसर्स सोसायटी को तरक्की दें। आज हम क्या देखते हैं? लोग बड़ी आवाज से किसानों से मांग करते हैं कि ज्यादा अनाज पैदा करो। लेकिन हम देखते हैं कि अनाज की कीमत, जो मुकर्रर की जाती है तो तकरीबन वह पहले से कम की जाती है और कंट्रोल करते हुए कपड़े की कीमत जो मुकर्रर की जाती है तो वह २५ परसेंट ज्यादा मुकर्रर की जाती है। आज ही सौंधी साहब से बातें हो रही थीं। उन्होंने कहा कि हमारे देश में कपड़ा सबसे कम कीमत पर पैदा होता है। मैं मानता हूँ कि अगर हमारे देश के इंडस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स सबसे कम कीमत पर पैदा करके देश को और दुनिया को कपड़ा दे सकते हैं तो इसमें हमारे देश की भलाई जरूर है। लेकिन इसके बावजूद मैं यह समझता हूँ कि चाहे दुनिया में आपके यहां सबसे कम कीमत हो इससे आप आम आदमी को राजी नहीं कर सकते कि कपड़े की कीमत २५ फीसदी ज्यादा बढ़ा दी जाय और उसका किसान पर असर भी न हो। आसानी से यह चीज हल की जा सकती है क्योंकि मिडिलमैन को तकरीबन २५ फीसदी का मुनाफा दिया जाता है। मैं आपको यह भी नहीं कहता कि कीमत को घटा दीजिये। अगर घटा सकते हैं तो बेशक घटा दें। लेकिन अगर घटा नहीं सकते तो कम से कम मिडिलमैन को बीच में से हटा दीजिए और सब डिलीवरी कोआपरेटिव सोसायटी को दिला दीजिए। डिलीवरी डिस्ट्रिक्ट और प्राविंशियल कोआपरेटिव यूनियन्स को दिलाइए इससे प्राफ़िट एग्रीकल्चरिस्ट को पहुंच जायगा और देहाती यह समझेगा कि देश की जो सरकार है यह मेरे लिए है और सरकार का ध्यान अब कृषि की उन्नति करने के लिए लग गया है।

तो मैं आपसे यह नम्र निवेदन इन दो चीजों का करना चाहता हूँ। एक तो एग्रीकल्चरल फाइनेंस कारपोरेशन को आप जल्द से जल्द स्थापित करें, ताकि लोग यह समझ पायें कि गवर्नमेंट इस बात में कीन (keen) है कि ज्यादा से

एक छोटी-सी चीज और है। आप देखिये कि रेल तार और हवाई जहाज की वजह से यह हिन्दुस्तान का मुल्क एक छोटा सा देश बना दिया गया है। बम्बई के अन्दर जो कीमत है, और पंजाब के अन्दर जो कीमत है, एग्रीकल्चरिस्ट्स चाहते हैं कि उनकी कीमतों में एक दो रुपये मन से ज्यादा का फर्क नहीं होना चाहिये। मैं चाहता हूँ कि प्रोक्योरमेंट स्कीम अगर आप लागू करें तो प्रोक्योरमेंट प्राइस और ईश्यू प्राइस में इससे ज्यादा फर्क नहीं होना चाहिये जिससे रेल का और थोड़ा बहुत मिडिलमैन का खर्चा पूरा हो सके। मैंने प्रोक्योरमेंट प्राइस पढी हैं, आज मैं गलती से उसको लाना भूल गया, वरना मैं उसके आंकड़े इक्कठा करके यह बतलाता कि एक जगह जो प्रोक्योरमेंट प्राइस है, वह दस रूपया है, और उसी चीज की दूसरे मुकाम पर ईश्यू प्राइस उससे डबल है। अगर इतना ज्यादा फर्क होगा, तो आप कैसे एग्रीकल्चरिस्ट्स को यकीन दिला सकते हैं कि जो सरकार का सारा का सारा ढांचा है, वह उसकी मदद के लिये है और जब तक उसे यकीन नहीं दिला देते कि सारी गवर्नमेंट की मशीनरी उसकी मदद के लिये है, तबतक आप अनाज की पैदावार नहीं बढ़ा पायेंगे। आज देश के सामने सबसे बड़ा सवाल कृषि का है। और जब तक आनाज और कृषि की तरक्की नहीं होगी, अनाज का इम्पोर्ट बन्द नहीं होगा उस वक्त तक मैं समझता हूँ कि देश में कोई इन्डस्ट्री नहीं बढ़ पायेगी, और न ही दूसरी बड़ी-बड़ी प्राब्लिम्स (problems) हल हो पायेंगी। इसीलिये मैं प्रार्थना करता

हूँ कि आप आज ही इस का एलान कर दें कि आप एग्रीकल्चरिस्ट फार्मिनेन्स कारपोरेशन बनाने जा रहे हैं। देश के अन्दर ऐसी फार्मिनेन्स कारपोरेशन बन जायेगी, तो उसमें बड़ा फायदा है। गवर्नमेंट अगर इसी बात का जिम्मा लें ले कि जो उसकी प्रोक्वोरमेंट प्राईस है उससे नीचे कीमत नहीं गिराने देगी। अगर आप इतना भी कर लेंगे, तो भी आप काफी इन्सेन्टिव एग्रीकल्चरिस्ट्स को देंगे। मैं हाऊस का ज्यादा समय न लेते हुए यह विश्वास रखता हूँ कि मैंने जो हाऊस के सामने अपने सजेशन रखे हैं, उन्हें मन्त्री महोदय ध्यानपूर्वक गौर करेंगे।

Ch. Ranbir Singh (East Punjab: General): It is more than a year and a half approximately since our country got freedom. This brought about a change in the country and if anyone thinks that with this change there has been no change in the set-up of our Government, I would say, he is mistaken. This was such a country where a few years back not one but twenty-four or twenty-five lakh human beings died of starvation—no food grains could be made available to them. After the achievement of freedom by us, rather from the very day we got freedom, thousands of people in our country started becoming homeless and lakhs of them, having become homeless, started migrating from one place to the other. I say those people who think there has been no change should think over this matter a little calmly. Three or four year back people were in their homes, they had not become homeless, but, in spite of that, due to the economic conditions in the country as also because of some other causes about twenty-five lakh people died of starvation. But, what did we see in this country after the advent of freedom? More than one crore persons were rendered homeless, but not one of them died of starvation. Hence, I think that those people who say that there has been no change in the ways of the Government after the advent of freedom are in fact mistaken. A very great change has occurred in our ways, in our methods, and it was only because of this change that although great members of our brethren went from here to there or came from there to here and even today they are suffering considerable hardships, nobody has died of starvation. If some difficulties are still there the critics lose sight of the fact that this country is a poor country which has its own limitations. There are thousands and lakhs of villages in this country which have neither a hospital nor a school nor any other things of public convenience. But in the case of those of our brethren who came here after being rendered homeless schools were provided everywhere, facilities for treatment in illness were provided everywhere. Last year I went to Kurukshetra with some member friends to see the Central Government Camp. There I saw the condition of the hospital and talked to the doctor. The doctor told us that there was no medicine in the country which was of use to them and which was not received there. There are lakhs of villages in this country where even quinine does not reach. Then, where such is the set-up of a country, where such is the economic position the work that has been done under the circumstances is not so inconsiderable.

Yet, with all this, I wish to say that this is mainly an agricultural country where 85 per cent of the population depend directly on agriculture for their living. Even if you were to disregard numbers for a minute and also to become oblivious of the fact that so many people are engaged in agriculture and you therefore decline to give importance to agriculture on that account still you will have to concede that such a situation has come to arise in this country today that if we do not improve our agriculture and increase our production and do not set it on a sound footing our country which has become free will not remain so economically. From this very point of view we will have to consider now whether our country's economy should be agricultural economy or industrial economy. I would not in the least question but would rather concede that in view of the conditions under which this country has attained freedom and in view of the conditions that prevail even now unless we have a strong army here our freedom would end in a dream. I concede that there should be a large number of factories in a free country yet with all that, there are certain things that we will have to consider. A time has come now when we will have to give prime importance to agriculture. With a view to the industrial development of the country industrial finance corporations have been set up in every province as also at the Centre. But I would say to you that in this country which is predominantly an agricultural country if any finance corporation was to be established in the first instance it should have been an agricultural finance corporation. Did you or any other province start any agricultural finance corporation? If you want to change the present state of affairs under which you have to import food-grains worth 130 or 133 crores of rupees every year from other countries, on account of which you can neither import machinery for factories nor anything else, do you think you could do it by causing injury to the sentiments of the agriculturists? Several of my brothers have given expression to various views. One of our brothers has suggested in the course of his speech that the price of sugar-cane should be reduced so that the farmers might increase their sowings in food-grains. I would, however, make a humble submission to them and to my Government that the cultivator is not a machine, the cultivator is a human being, and if you cause injury to his sentiments you would never be able to solve your problems. If you want that your country should be a self supporting country in the matter of food-grains there is at least one thing which you will have to do, viz., that you should give the agriculturist the incentive to produce more. And, how would you give that incentive? Tripathiji was with me when we talked to Mr. Dodd. Mr. Dodd told us that in America they were not able to get increased production until the American Government gave an assurance to the agriculturists that the Government must purchase the food-grains at a specified rate. I have often talked to our Honourable Minister of Agriculture and he told me that the economy condition of the country was such that the Government could not assume responsibility in that behalf. You should take over this responsibility howsoever difficult it might be or howsoever risk it might involve. If you want that there should be increased production you will have to give the guarantee that up to a specified rate the Government would purchase if none else in the country is prepared to pay that price.

In this connection I want to make another suggestion under which I think the Government would not have to incur any great expenditure. The middle-man's agency in the country has assumed such proportions and still continues to expand. If you can you should for a while reduce the scope of this middle-man's agency—and I think since they possess some finances of their own this would not cause them much trouble—and give a fillip to co-operative consumers' and co-operative producers' societies. What do we find today? People make a loud demand upon the agriculturist to grow more food. But what we find is that in fixing the price of food-grains a rate lower than the existing rate is fixed whereas the price of cloth which is fixed at the time of imposing control is fixed 25 per cent higher. Even today I was having a conversation with Mr. Sondhi. He remarked that in our country cloth was produced at the cheapest cost. I admit that if our country's industrialists can produce cloth at the cheapest cost and supply it to our country as also to the world this is certainly to our country's advantage. But, in spite of all that, I feel that even if your prices be the lowest in the world you cannot convince the ordinary man that the price of cloth be raised by 25 per cent but that this should have no effect upon the cultivator. This problem can be solved easily because about 25 per cent profit is allowed to the middle-man. I would not ask you to reduce the price. Reduce it certainly if you can. But, if you cannot reduce it you should at least eliminate the middle man and make the entire delivery to co-operative societies. You should make this delivery to district and provincial co-operative units; in this way the profit would flow over to the agriculturist and the villager would think that the Government of the country is for him and that the attention of the Government is now devoted to the advancement of agriculture.

Thus, I would humbly make these two submissions. In the first instance you should, at the earliest establish an agricultural finance corporation so that the people might realize that the Government is keen on producing the maximum quantity of food-grains. That corporation should help in reclamation and in the purchase of tractors. Just yesterday I visited the Pusa Institute. There we saw a plough which could do double the normal job. I think that if the Government were to have them manufactured and supply them in the villages the village people would like them very much and they would feel that with the change in Government some improvements are going to be made which would tend to change their fortunes.

The other thing which I have mentioned already is the stabilization of prices. The Government should see to it that efforts are made to give the report of the Krishnamachari Committee a practical shape—as early as possible so that it might come into operation. Until you do these two things you cannot win the confidence of the agriculturists and until you give him an incentive you cannot expect him to produce more food-grains. Along with this I wish to make another submission, that if you cannot do anything for them at this time, you should not at least take any such step for the present as might cause injury to them.

There is one little thing more. You see how the railways, telegraphs and aeroplanes have turned India into a small country. The agriculturists want that there should not be a difference of more than one or two rupees between the prices prevailing at Bombay and the Punjab. I feel that if you enforce the procurement scheme the difference between the procurement price and the issue price should not exceed such an amount as might be enough to cover the expenses pertaining to the railway and the middle-man. I have read the procurement prices. I forgot, to bring it with me today otherwise I would have shown, by manipulation of figures, how while the procurement price of a certain commodity at a certain place is ten rupees the issue price of that very commodity at another place is double that amount. If the disparity is so great how can you cause the agriculturist to believe that the entire set-up of the Government is for his help and until you cause him the assurance that the entire machinery of the Government is meant for helping him you cannot increase the production of food-grains. The biggest problem before the country today is that of agriculture. Until there is an improvement in the production of food-grains and in agriculture and until the import of food-grains is stopped no industry in the country will be able to develop nor will the other major problems be solved. Hence, I would pray that you should make a declaration even today that you are going to establish an agricultural finance corporation. The formation of such a finance corporation will be of great benefit to the country. Even if the Government were to do only so much as to guarantee that the prices will not be allowed to fall below the level of the procurement prices you will provide a sufficient incentive to the agriculturists. I would not take any more time of the House and hope that the Honourable Minister would give his careful consideration to the suggestions which I have placed before the House.

श्रीमती कमला चौधरी: उपाध्यक्ष महोदय, इस हाउस के मेम्बरों ने जैसे अपने विचार प्रकट किये हैं उस से जाहिर होता है कि गवर्नमेंट की प्रगति के प्रति उन में असन्तोष है मैं भी मन में असन्तोष महसूस करती हूँ और सिर्फ इस हाउस के अन्दर ही असन्तोष नहीं है बल्कि मेरा ख्याल है हमारे देश की जनता में भी एक प्रकार का असन्तोष है। जब आज़ादी लेने के लिये हमारे देश में एक युद्ध एक इन्क़िलाब जारी था और हमारे राष्ट्रपिता महात्मा गांधी ने एक नक़्शा आज़ादी का, एक नक़्शा स्वराज्य का देश के सामने बना कर रखा था। उस समय हम लोगों के मन में बड़ी बड़ी आशाएँ थीं, बड़ी उम्मीदें थीं जिनको कई वर्ष तक हम स्वतन्त्र युद्ध के ज़माने में रामराज्य, के नाम से दोहराते रहे। हर एक का ख्याल था वह रामराज्य, वह स्वराज्य हमारे देश में होने वाला है। जिसमें सुख शान्ति सम्यता संस्कृति की वृद्धि होगी। आखिर वह ज़माना आया जिसकी हमने रामराज्य के रूप में कल्पना की थी वह आज़ादी एक दिन हमारे यहाँ आई। उसे पाये हुये लगभग दो वर्ष होने आये और इतने दिनों में किस हद तक उस स्वराज्य के ख़ाब को हमारी सरकार सफल कर सकी है यह सोचने का विषय है। यह सत्य है कि देखा जाय तो ब्रिटिश गवर्नमेंट जो कुछ हमारे लिये छोड़ गई वह टूटा फूटा खंडहर की तरह का देश छोड़ गई है जिसमें हमारी राष्ट्रीय सरकार को बहुत परिवर्तन करने की ज़रूरत है। बल्कि अगर ऐसा कहा जाय कि रामराज्य स्थापित करने के लिये कायाकल्प करने की ज़रूरत है तो अनुचित न होगा। जब इतनी बड़ी तब्दीली करनी है, इतना बड़ा परिवर्तन करना है, तो उसमें बहुत समय लगेगा इसमें सन्देह नहीं और ऐसा करने के लिये बहुत बड़ी धनराशि की भी ज़रूरत है। लेकिन कुछ विषयों में और कुछ विभागों में, मैं यह महसूस करती हूँ कि हमारी सरकार का जितना व्यय हो रहा है, उतने ही मैं समझती हूँ कि अगर प्रगति का कदम बढ़ाया जाये, तो हमारी सरकार एक सही नीति निर्धारित करके चले तो बहुत कुछ हमें लाभ और सफलता हो सकती है। मसलन शिक्षा विभाग, सरकार का प्रचार विभाग सही रास्ता निर्धारित करके प्रगति करे तो देश की करोड़ों की संख्या में अशिक्षित जनता का मानसिक और सांस्कृतिक विकास हो सकता है। देशवासियों के जीवन का मायदण्ड आज़ाद मुल्क के इन्सानों की भांति ऊँचा उठ सकता है। और जिस रामराज्य की हमने कल्पना की थी वह हमारा ख़ाब पूरा हो सकता है। यह विचार मेरा ही नहीं है बल्कि मैं जहाँ तक समझ सकी हूँ शायद समस्त देश की यह मांग है कि हमारी राष्ट्रीय सरकार का इस तरीके का इन्तज़ाम हो जिससे हमारे देश की जनता को तरक्की के रास्ते पर कदम बढ़ाने की प्रेरणा मिले और हमारा ख़ाब ख़ाब रह कर यथार्थता में तब्दील हो जाये। वह आज़ादी का ख़ाब जिससे हमने देखा था कि आज़ादी के आते ही हमारी भाषा का बोलवाला होगा, हमारी सभ्यता का बोलवाला होगा, वह हमारा ख़ाब शीघ्र

सत्य बन कर सामने आजाये। बहुत दिनों से हम लोग सुनते चले आये थे कि हमारे देशवासियों में जो कोई भी बुराईयें हैं जो भी अवगुण हैं वह विदेशी शासन का परिणाम हैं। हम लोग हमेशा उन पर यह कह कर परदा डाल देते थे कि हमारे देश में एक विदेशी हुकूमत है, विदेशी सभ्यता का प्रभाव है, हम लोग गुलाम हैं, इसलिये यह बुराईयां हम लोगों में आ गई हैं। जब हमारी अपनी सरकार होगी और हमारी सभ्यता की उन्नति होगी, हमारे देश का उत्थान होगा, राष्ट्र का पुनः निर्माण होगा, तो उस समय यह सब बुराईयां हमारे अन्दर से चली जायेंगी।

लेकिन मैं नम्रता से निवेदन करना चाहती हूँ कि इतने दिनों में हमारी गवर्नमेंट ने संस्कृति के उत्थान की ओर, अपनी सभ्यता के उत्थान की ओर, राष्ट्रभाषा के उत्थान की ओर, शिक्षा के विकास की ओर कितना कदम बढ़ाया है, यह सवाल अगर सरकार से पूछा जाये, तो मैं बहुत अदब से कहना चाहूंगी कि हमारी सरकार को निरुत्तर ही रहना पड़ेगा, हमारी हुकूमत को यहां पर संतोषजनक व्यवस्था न कर सकने का दोष स्वीकार करना पड़ेगा। जहां तक मैं समझ सकी हूँ गवर्नमेंट भी इस अव्यवस्था को महसूस करती है। कोई भी देश जब वह तरक्की करना चाहता है, राष्ट्र का पुनः निर्माण करके कल्याण की ओर अग्रसर होना चाहता है तो इसके लिये जरूरी है, कि सबसे पहले शिक्षा और भाषा संस्कृति का विकास करके जनता का जीवन ऊंचा उठाये तभी देश का नवनिर्माण और कल्याण हो सकता है। इस हाउस में बहुत बार अपने बहुत से योग्य मेम्बरों के मुख से मैं सुनती रही हूँ कि देश का उत्थान करना है तो सब से पहले अपनी एक भाषा की जरूरत है, भारतीय संस्कृति के विकास की जरूरत है। हमारे देश में देखा जाय तो एक बहुत बड़ा साहित्य का भंडार है। यह दूसरी बात है कि हमारे देश की जनता शताब्दियों विदेशी हुकूमत के मातहत रहने के कारण आज उससे अनभिज्ञ रह गई हो। लेकिन आज जब अपनी राष्ट्रीय सरकार स्थापित हो चुकी है तो शीघ्र ही उस अनभिज्ञता को दूर करने की कोशिश क्यों न की जाये। विदेशी हुकूमत ने अपनी एक काम चलाऊ राज्य भाषा को चलाया और हम लोग उस भाषा को पढ़ कर अपनी भाषा और साहित्य को भूल से गये। लेकिन आज क्या कारण है कि जब अपनी सरकार आ गई है, और हम लोग इस चीज को महसूस करते हैं, गवर्नमेंट भी इसको महसूस करती है कि हमें राष्ट्र का उत्थान करने के लिये सबसे पहले जरूरत है कि हम अपनी भाषा के प्रचार की योजना बनायें अपनी सभ्यता के विकास की योजना बनायें, तो फिर केवल योजना, स्कीम

बना कर ही कैसे संतुष्ट रहा जा सकता है। उन योजनाओं को कामयाब बनाने के लिये भी अधिक परिश्रम करना सरकार का फर्ज हो जाता है।

हमारा देश एक प्राचीन देश है, और जहां तक मैं समझती हूँ वह देश ऐसा नहीं है जहां के लोग बिल्कुल जंगली हों, या जहां के लोग इन्सान न कह कर हैवान कहे गये हों। बल्कि मैं तो यह कहूंगी कि भले ही हमारे ऊपर ऐसा जमाना गुजरा कि हम शताब्दियों तक गुलाम रहे, लेकिन उस गुलामी के युग में भी हमारे देश के साहित्य का, हमारी संस्कृति का बोलबाला रहा है। सिर्फ अपने ही देश में नहीं बल्कि और देश वालों ने भी इस देश की प्राचीनता का और महत्ता का लोहा माना है। अन्य लोगों ने भी हमारे साहित्य का, हमारे इतिहास का बड़ा आदर किया है। मैं यह कहूँ कि बहुत कुछ अन्य लोगों ने हमारे साहित्य से सीखा है, और संस्कृति से लिया है, तो शायद अनुचित नहीं होगा। भारतीय सभ्यता और संस्कृति का नाम बड़े आदर से चारों तरफ लिया गया है। आज जब देश में अपनी हुकूमत है, अपने पास अवसर है, तो मैं समझती हूँ, इस विषय में अभी जिसका मैं जिक्र कर रही थी अवश्य ही राष्ट्रीय सरकार सचेत हो कर पुरानी देश की महत्ता को फिर स्थापित करने में प्रयत्नशील होना चाहिये। कुछ विषय ऐसे हैं जहां पर यह कहा जा सकता है कि अभाव के कारण, चीजों की कमी के कारण हम बहुत तरक्की नहीं कर सके। लेकिन इस विषय में जिसका मैं जिक्र कर चुकी हूँ मैं समझती हूँ कि अगर हमारी सरकार प्रगति करना चाहे तो बहुत प्रगति कर सकती है। सरकार ऐजुकेशन विभाग के ऊपर जो पैसा खर्च करती है उसके लिये मैं समझती हूँ इतना ही पैसा खर्च करके वह बहुत तब्दीली कर सकती हैं। जिस प्रकार के परिवर्तन की जरूरत है, मैं बहुत अदब के साथ कहना चाहूंगी, अभी उसमें कुछ नहीं किया गया है। मैं यह देखती हूँ कि शिक्षा प्रणाली में भारी परिवर्तन की जरूरत है। जिस पर राष्ट्रीय सरकार को तुरन्त ही ध्यान देने की जरूरत थी। योजनायें तो सामने आईं लेकिन शिक्षा पद्धति लगभग अभी वही चल रही है। जिस प्रकार की शिक्षा संस्थाएँ हमारे यहां पहले थीं, उसी प्रकार अब भी हैं। स्कूलों में, हमारे विद्यालयों में उसी प्रकार की शिक्षा प्रणाली चल रही है। विद्यालयों में वैसी पुस्तकें नहीं पढ़ाई जा रही हैं जिनकी नितांत जरूरत अनुभव होती है। मेरा ख्याल है इस विषय में भारी तब्दीली की जरूरत है, लेकिन वह तब्दीली अब तक नहीं की गई। अपने प्रांत यू० पी० की बात मैं जानती हूँ जहां की मैं रहने वाली हूँ। वहां इस दिशा में कुछ परिवर्तन किया गया, लेकिन जैसी लम्बी चौड़ी सा कीम मने आई थी, जिससे हम लोगों को आशा हुई थी कि शायद जो

कुछ हम चाहते हैं उस प्रकार की तब्दीली होगी और हमारे बच्चों को, आज से हमारी लड़कियों को उस प्रकार की शिक्षा मिलनी शुरू होगी जिसकी हम जरूरत समझते हैं। जिससे हमारी सभ्यता, हमारी संस्कृति की छाप बच्चे बच्चियों के मन पर प्रारम्भ से ही पड़ेगी और उनमें राष्ट्रीय भावना का बाहुल्य होगा और सबसे बड़ी बात यह कि हमारी देश भक्ति की भावना जागृत होगी। लेकिन हमने देखा कि वैसा कुछ नहीं हुआ। यह बात जरूर हुई कि शिक्षा का क्रम कुछ बदला गया, कोर्स की कुछ किताबों में तब्दीली हुई, लेकिन अगर सचमुच उसका अध्ययन किया जाय तो मैं समझती हूँ कि वह तब्दीली कोई कारगर तब्दीली नहीं हुई। मैं उदाहरण के तौर पर बतलाना चाहती हूँ, मेरा एक बच्चा छठी जमात में पढ़ता है, मैंने देखा छठी जमात का कोर्स हमारी प्रान्तीय सरकार ने बदला। शायद इस ख्याल से कि हिन्दी भाषा का बाहुल्य करना है जो कि हमारी मौलिक भाषा है, पर मैंने यह देखा कि वह बाहुल्य जरूरत से अधिक हो गया। जो उस छठे दर्जे की किताबों में सूर, बिहारी, विद्यापति और तुलसीदास के पद रखे गये हैं, मैं समझती हूँ कि छठी जमात के बच्चे ही क्या, दसवीं जमात या इन्टरमीडियेट के विद्यार्थी भी उन पदों की अच्छी तरह व्याख्या नहीं कर सकते। अगर तब्दीली हुई है तो इस प्रकार की तब्दीली हुई है जो भविष्य में गलत साबित होगी। इसका कारण मैंने यह समझा कि तब्दीली तो हमारी सरकार करना चाहती है लेकिन क्या परिवर्तन करना है, इसकी ठीक ठीक व्यवस्था नहीं है। और उस व्यवस्था के ठीक न होने का कारण क्या है। मैं समझती हूँ, और मैं नम्रता से कहना चाहूंगी कि भाषा में गुलामी ही इसका एक मात्र कारण है। विदेशी राज्य में हमारे यहां जो पदाधिकारी रहे, जितनी इस प्रकार की कमेटियां थीं उनमें विदेशी भाषा का ही बोलबाला रहा और अब सरकार तब्दीली करके उनमें इस प्रकार के लोग लाना भी चाहे जो उन बातों को अच्छी तरह समझ सकें तो मैं समझती हूँ कि शायद चुनाव में गलती होती है। चुनाव जब ठीक प्रकार से नहीं होता तभी इस प्रकार की गलतियां होती हैं। मैं एक उदाहरण और देना चाहूंगी। संस्कृत के ऐम० ऐ० के कोर्स में और बी० ऐ० के कोर्स में, जब कि हमारे पास हिन्दी संस्कृत साहित्य का एक खजाना मौजूद है, क्या कारण है कि आज ऐम० ऐ० में कालिदास के कुमारसम्भव का चौदहवां सर्ग चलता है जो लड़के लड़कियां ठीक प्रकार से पढ़ नहीं सकतीं, उन्हें लज्जा आती है। प्रोफेसर्स को पढ़ाने में संकोच होता है। इसी प्रकार से बी० ऐ० के कोर्स में बिहारी तथा विद्यापति का वह साहित्य रखा गया है जिसमें ऐसे भाग हैं जिन्हें अश्लील साहित्य कहा जायेगा। इन सब चीजों का क्या कारण है। कुमारसम्भव, कालिदास का पढ़ना है तो ऐसा

तो नहीं है कि कालिदास ने केवल चौदहवां अध्याय ही लिखा है, एक ही चीज लिखी है? उस स्टैंडर्ड की कालिदास की दूसरी किताबें मौजूद नहीं हैं? बिहारी और विद्यापति की कितना ही साहित्य इस प्रकार का मौजूद है जो हमारे बच्चे अच्छी प्रकार से पढ़ सकते हैं। मेरे कहने का मतलब यह है कि इस प्रकार की ब्रिटिशों हो रही हैं जिस पर कुछ ध्यान नहीं दिया जाता और शिक्षा की दिशा में यह बहुत महत्वपूर्ण बातें हैं। मैं अपने विचार इस विषय में सरकार के सामने रखना चाहूंगी। सचमुच अगर हमें अपनी सभ्यता का उत्थान करना है, सचमुच राष्ट्रनिर्माण करना है, जिस बात की आवश्यकता हम अनुभव करते हैं, अगर वास्तव में हमें उसी प्रकार प्रगति करना है तो सब से पहले हमें इस दिशा में प्रगति करनी होगी। और उसके लिए यह जरूरी है कि इस विषय में उन लोगों की कमेटियां शिक्षा बोर्ड बनायी जायें जिनको इन बातों का अच्छी तरह ज्ञान हो, जो कि हमारे साहित्य को, हमारी सभ्यता को, अच्छी तरह समझें और समझ कर इस दिशा में परिवर्तन करें। मेरा अपना यह ख्याल है कि आज भी वही पद्धति चली आ रही है जो कि हमारी सरकार के जमाने से नहीं बल्कि ब्रिटिश हुकूमत के जमाने से चली आ रही है कि कुछ प्रकाशक लोग अपनी पुस्तकों को लेकर जाते हैं और जहां तक मैंने सुना है, मैं नहीं कह सकती कि ऐसा ही होता है, कि रिश्वतें चलती हैं, घूस दी जाती है और वह प्रकाशक अपनी किताबों को मंजूर करा लाते हैं। किसी को यह समझने की जरूरत नहीं होती कि जो किताब एक कोर्स के लिए वह पास कर रहे हैं वह वहां के लिए उपयोगी है या नहीं। मैं समझती हूँ कि जब तक यह पद्धति चलती रहेगी तब तक हमारी शिक्षा में, हमारी संस्कृति में, विकास और उन्नति होना असम्भव है। मैं बड़ी नम्रता से मंत्री महोदय के सामने अपना विचार रखना चाहूंगी कि जिस तरह वह अपने प्रचार के लिये पब्लिकेशन का काम करते हैं उसी तरह हमारी सेंट्रल गवर्नमेंट छोटे से छोटे दरजों से लेकर बड़े दरजों तक की किताबें खुद छापे और हमारे सूबे की सरकारों को भी ऐसा करने की हिदायतें दे, गम्भीरता से सोचकर एक बार यह निर्णय कर दें कि दस साल तक कोर्स में यही किताबें पढ़ाई जायेंगी, तभी उस शिक्षा का प्रभाव दृष्टिगोचर होगा, भविष्य के लिये प्रगति का मार्ग खुलेगा और फलाफल को हम भली प्रकार समझ सकेंगे और यह अन्धेरखाता जो प्रकाशकों की तरफ से हो रहा है मैं समझती हूँ समाप्त हो जायगा।

मैं एक बात और निवेदन करना चाहूंगी। हमारे यहां हिन्दी के जो लेखक हैं, साहित्यिक हैं, उन्हें इस बात की आशाएं थीं कि जब हमारी सरकार आयेगी तो हम लोगों का भी एक अपना स्थान होगा, उनका नाम होगा, जिस तरह

हम विदेशों में सुनते हैं कि अगर कोई नाटककार है, या लेखक है या कवि है तो किसी बड़े से बड़े सरकारी अफसर से या समाज के बड़े से बड़े व्यक्ति से उस की पोजीशन कम नहीं समझी जाती। उसका आदर होता है; उसका सम्मान होता है। हम लोग गुलाम रहे। इसलिए गुलामी के जमाने में हमारे साहित्यकारों का कोई स्थान नहीं बन पाया, उनकी कोई कद्र नहीं हो पाई। मैं समझती हूँ कि आज वह जमाना आ गया है कि हमारी सरकार को अपने यहां के लेखकों पर ध्यान देना चाहिये, पर मेरा मतलब केवल हिन्दी लेखकों से ही नहीं है, हमारे प्रान्तों में बहुत से प्रान्तीय भाषाओं के और प्रादेशिक भाषाओं के लेखक हैं और मैं समझती हूँ कि उनकी भारतीय साहित्य को बड़ी भारी देन है। सरकार को उनकी ओर भी ध्यान देना चाहिए। उनके साहित्य का विकास होना चाहिए और हमारे यहां के लेखकों का और साहित्यकों का एक स्थान बनना चाहिए। इसकी एक योजना सरकार को जरूर बनानी चाहिए। मेरे पास समय थोड़ा है इसलिए मैं विस्तार से कुछ नहीं कह सकती, लेकिन मैं सिर्फ एक मिसाल देना चाहती हूँ। गवर्नमेंट के पब्लिकेशन विभाग से पत्र निकलते हैं, एक हिन्दी 'आजकल' और दूसरा उर्दू 'आजकल' और एक अरबी का अखबार निकलता है। इसी तरह के और बहुत से पत्र पत्रिकाएँ निकलती हैं। मैं बहुत अदब से कहना चाहूँगी कि जब मैं इनको देखती हूँ तो मुझे ऐसा मालूम होता है कि यह सरकार का व्यर्थ पैसा बरबाद हो रहा है और व्यर्थ का परिश्रम हो रहा है। वही चीजें बहुत काम की बन सकती हैं और उन पर कोई अधिक रुपया खर्च करने की जरूरत नहीं है। जितना खर्च हो रहा है उतने ही मैं उन पत्रों को बहुत उपयोगी बनाया जा सकता है। हम सब लोग हिन्दी में, प्रादेशिक भाषाओं में, प्रान्तीय भाषाओं में, इस चीज की जरूरत महसूस करते हैं कि हमारे यहां एक ऊँचे स्टैंडर्ड के साहित्यिक पत्र का अभाव है। हमारे यहां की जो जनता है उसकी भी रुचि इस तरफ नहीं गई क्योंकि वह अंग्रेजी पढ़ती रही। इसलिए भारतीय भाषा में उसका अभाव रहा। अपनी भाषा का कोई ऊँचे दर्जे का सांस्कृतिक साहित्यिक पत्र आज नहीं है। मैं कहना चाहूँगी कि अगर आज हमारी सरकार इस तरफ ध्यान दे और बहुत योग्य विद्वान व्यक्तियों को इस विभाग में लाये, तो यही पत्र जो सरकार की ओर से निकलते हैं, जिनमें चित्र भी सुन्दर होते हैं, कामज भी अच्छा होता है, पर कमी साहित्य की होती है, संस्कृति की होती है, जिनका आज कोई ध्येय नहीं है, उनको हमारे साहित्य का उत्तम पत्र बनाया जा सकता है। अगर ऐसा हो जाय तो मैं समझती हूँ कि हमारे देश में जो पढ़े लिखे लोग हैं उनके लिए एक बड़े उपयोग की चीज बन सकती है। मेरा मतलब

सिर्फ पढ़े लिखे लोगों की प्रगति से ही नहीं है। सरकार के और भी बहुत से प्रकार के साधन हैं। कितने ही पैम्फलेट, इश्तिहार और नोटिस निकलते हैं और बहुत सी छोटी-छोटी पत्र और पत्रिकाएँ निकलती हैं, जिन पर अगर ध्यान दिया जाय और इन विभागों में एक योजना पूर्वक कार्य हो, कुछ और योग्य व्यक्ति चुन कर रखे जायें, तो उतने ही पैमे में एक बहुत उत्तम साहित्य का निर्माण हो सकता है और उसके द्वारा ही हम अपने देश की लाखों की तादाद में अशिक्षित जनता को भी सुसंस्कृत बना सकते हैं। अगर हमारी हुकूमत इस तरह का विचार करती रहेगी कि जब सब लोग पढ़े लिखे हो जायेंगे उसी दिन हमारी संस्कृति का विकास होगा, उसी दिन हमारी सभ्यता का विकास होगा तो मैं समझती हूँ कि एक युग बीत जायगा। हम लोग समाप्त हो जायेंगे, उसके बाद शायद वह समय आये जब भारतीय सभ्यता और भारतीय संस्कृति का उत्थान हो। अगर इस दिशा में हमारी सरकार कदम उठाये और अपने प्रचार विभाग, शिक्षा विभाग, पब्लिकेशन विभाग और अपन ब्राडकास्टिंग विभाग में परिवर्तन करे, और अपनी एक नीति निर्धारित करके उस दिशा में ठीक तरह से प्रगति की ओर चले, तो मैं समझती हूँ कि साहित्य निर्माण का काम, हमारी सभ्यता संस्कृति के उत्थान का काम बड़ी सफलता से होगा और सचमुच दुनिया देखेगी कि जिस राष्ट्र पिता के रास्ते पर चल कर हमने अपनी आजादी हासिल करने के तरीके से दुनिया की आंखों में चकाचौंध कर दिया है, जो कि दुनिया के लिए एक जादू है, उसी तरह दुनिया हमारी तरफ आश्चर्य से देखे कि हमने अपनी संस्कृति की प्रगति में भी उसी तरह का एक जादू कर दिया है। मैं बहुत नम्रता से मंत्री महोदय का ध्यान इस ओर दिलाना चाहूँगी कि इन विषयों पर विचार किया जाय और सिलेक्ट कमेटी को जो परिवर्तन करने का मौका मिलेगा उसमें इन चीजों पर ध्यान दिया जाय और सांस्कृतिक प्रगति के लिये भी कुछ धनराशि नियुक्त की जाये।

(English translation of the above speech)

Shrimati Kamala Chaudhri (U.P.: General): Sir, from the sentiments that have been expressed by the honourable members of this House it is apparent that they have a feeling of dissatisfaction against the progress of the Government. In my heart of hearts I also feel some sort of discontentment, and this discontentment prevails not only in this House alone but I think in the masses also a sort of discontentment prevails. When a conflict, a revolution, was going on in our country for attaining Independence then the Father of our Nation Mahatma Gandhi had set before the country a blue-print of Independence, a model of Swarajya. At that time we had a very high hopes and lofty aspirations. Everybody had the conviction that Swarajya that Ram Rajya, the names we had been repeating over and over again during the days of the battle for Independence, is going to be established in this country, and wherein peace, contentment, and our culture and civilization will rise to a climax. After all that time, whose conception we had formed in the shape of Ram Rajya, also came. That Independence smiled upon us one day. It is since two years that we have attained our goal, the question worth considering is how far our Government have been able to realize and give our dreams of Swarajya a practical shape. It is true that whatever the British Government had left for us was a sort of dilapidated ruin of a country wherein it is essential for our National Government to affect a great deal of changes. If it is said that for establishing Ram Rajya a thorough rejuvenation is required then it would not be improper. When we have to affect such drastic changes, make so many innovations then it can not be denied that all this will take much time and for doing so a great deal of money is also required. But in certain matters, in certain departments with whatever money the Government is spending if a step towards progress be taken, if our Government were to set and act upon some definite policy then I think we can attain a great deal of success and advantage. For example if the Education and the Publicity Departments of the Government after chalking out a definite line of action were to take a step towards progression, then the mental and cultural development of the crores of illiterate people of this country can be made; the standard of living of the people of this country can be raised to the level of those living in the free countries and our dreams of Ram Rajya, that we had conceived, can be realised. This is not only my contention but as far as I have been able to ascertain the demand of the whole country is that our National Government be so constituted whereby the people of our country may get an impetus to go forward on the way to progress and our dreams of Ram Rajya instead of remaining an empty dream may change into a reality. We wish that our dream of Independence, wherein we had conceived that no sooner we attained independence our language will hold a predominant position and our culture will prosper, may soon become a reality. Since long we have been hearing that whatever defects and vices the people of our country possess are the direct consequences of a foreign rule. We always used to draw a veil over our defects and vices by saying that our country is governed by a foreign power, we are under the influence of an alien civilization, we are slaves and so these defects and vices have crept in to the people of this country. When we will have our own Government, when our civilization will be revived, when our country will awaken, when our Nation will be rebuilt then at that time all these defects and vices will automatically vanish.

But I very humbly wish to submit that if a question be asked of our Government as to what steps our Government have taken for the progression of our culture and civilization, for the advancement of our language and for the development of our education then, I would very humbly like to submit, our Government will have to remain silent. Our Government will have to acknowledge her inability of making any satisfactory arrangements. As far as I have been able to make out our Government also feels this anomaly. Whenever any country wants to make progress, wants to go ahead towards prosperity after building the Nation, then for all this it is essential that first of all the language, education and culture should be developed and thus the standard of living of the people be raised, and only then the peace and prosperity of the Nation can be achieved. I have been hearing again and again from the eminent members of this House that if the country is to be emancipated then first of all a national language is to be developed and the progressive evolution of our culture is essential. Our country possesses a vast treasure of literature. It is another thing that as a result of foreign domination of centuries our masses may have remained ignorant of the same. But now when our National Government has been established why efforts should not be made to remove this ignorance? The foreign power introduced a serviceable court language and we on learning that nearly forgot our own language and literature. Then what is the reason that today, when we have our own Government and we feel this anomaly, the Government also knows that if we have to emancipate our country it is essential for us to chalk out schemes for the propagation of the national language and culture; then how can we be satisfied simply by chalking out of schemes. In order to make these schemes successful it becomes the bounden duty of the Government to make indefatigable efforts in this direction.

Ours is an ancient country and, as far as I understand, our country is not such whose people be savages or may have been referred to as animals instead of human beings. But I would submit that may such times have elapsed that we remained slaves for centuries yet in those days of slavery also the literature and culture of our country have always been dominating. Not only in our country but the other countries of the world also have acknowledged the supremacy of the antiquity and greatness of this country. The people of other countries also have always held our literature and history in high esteem. It would not be improper if I were to say that the people of other countries have learned much from us and have heavily borrowed from our culture. The Indian culture and civilization have always been highly praised. Today when we have our own Government in the country, we have means at our disposal then I think our National Government should be up and make efforts to re-establish the old glory of the country. There are no doubt certain matters about which it can be said that we could make no progress due to scarcity of basic materials. But as regards the matter I have mentioned before I think that if our Government were inclined to make progress then it can certainly make much progress. Even with the money that the Government spends on Education, I think, we can make a great deal of changes. I would very humbly beg to submit that so far nothing has been done to affect those kinds of changes that are necessary. I see that the system of education needs a great deal of change. Our National Government ought to have turned attention towards this. Though many schemes came before us yet nearly the same old system of education is continuing. We still have the same type of educational institutions as before. Our educational institutions are still maintaining the same old system of education. Such books that we sorely need are not being taught in our institutions. I feel that drastic changes are needed in this matter but these changes have not yet been made. I know much about U. P. my native province. There some such changes were made, but by the high sounding scheme that came before us we began to entertain hopes that perhaps the changes we desire would be made, and from today our sons and daughters will begin to receive that type of education that we consider to be necessary; whereby our children from the very outset will begin to imbibe a deep impression of our culture and civilization, they will have a more profound feeling of nationalism, and the greatest thing done would be that a deep sense of patriotism will be roused in them. But we saw that no such thing happened. But no doubt the courses of studies were somewhat changed, some alterations were made in the course books; but if the matter be critically examined then I think the changes that have been made are not of vital importance. For example I wish to submit that one of my children is a student of Class VI. Our Provincial Government have made changes in the course of Class VI perhaps with the idea of giving predominance to Hindi, which is our national language. But I noted that the predominance transgressed the limits of necessity. The verses of Sur, Bihari, Vidyapati and Tulsī that have been included in the Text book of Class VI are such that, I think, what to say of VI Class students even the students of matriculation and intermediate classes cannot explain them properly. If any changes have been made they are such that will prove wrong in the long run. The reason I attribute to this fact is that our Government does want to make drastic changes but what changes are to be made the Government is not clear on that issue. What is the reason of this mismanagement? I would like to submit that as far as

I have considered over the problem I think the slavery of language is the sole cause of all this. During the days of foreign domination among the Government officials and in all the meetings and committees the language of the foreigners mainly predominated, and now if our Government were to replace them with those who may well understand this problem even then I think that errors may occur while making selections. When a proper selection is not made then such mistakes do creep in. I would like to submit one more example. When we have a vast treasure of Sanskrit and Hindi Literature then I cannot understand the reason why in the courses of studies of M.A. Sanskrit and B.A. Hindi the 14th Canto of Kalidas's Kumar Sambhav is still prescribed, which the boys and girls cannot read properly, they feel ashamed, and the professors even feel shy in teaching it. In the same way in B.A. course that literature of Bihari and Vidyapati has been prescribed which consists of such portions as will be called obscene according to the canons of the modern society. What is the reason of all this? If the students have to read Kumar Sambhav of Kalidas then has Kalidas composed only the 14th Canto or has written this book only? Are other books of Kalidas of the same standard not available? A great deal of Bihari and Vidyapati literature is such that our children can read it properly. What I want to submit is that such mistakes are being made and no attention is paid thereon. As far as education is concerned these are of very vital importance. I would like to place my views before the Government. Strictly speaking if we have to raise our civilization, have sincerely to do the task of nation building, have to make progress on the lines that we feel necessary, then for all this we will have first of all to make a definite progress in this direction. In order to achieve this objective it is essential that education boards and committees of such persons be formed who may have a thorough knowledge of these problems and they, after fully taking into consideration our civilization and literature, should make well-planned changes in this direction. I think that the same old system is still persisting that was holding good in the days of the British Government. Some publishers submit their books and then, as far as I have come to know I cannot say if it really happens so or not, bribes are given, hush-moneys are paid and the publishers get their books approved. No body thinks it necessary to ascertain whether the book they are approving for a certain course of study is really suitable for that particular class or not. I think that so long this system will persist it is impossible to make any progression and advancement in our education and culture. I would very humbly like to submit my views before the Honourable the Minister that as he takes upon himself to do the publication work in order to have wide spread propaganda, in the same way our Central Government should herself publish all the books meant from the highest to the lowest classes, and direct the Provincial Governments also to do so. After careful deliberations it should be declared that only these books will form the courses of studies for the next ten years, and only then the effect of this education will be perceptible, the way for future progress will open, and we will be able to understand the good and bad effects; and I think this high handedness on the part of the publishers will also come to an end.

I would like to submit one thing more. Our Hindi authors, writers and men of letters had nursed high hopes that when our National Government will come into being then they also would have a position of their own and they would acquire a name. In foreign countries we hear that men of letters, dramatists, writers, poets, authors, etc. are not considered in any way inferior in position to the highly placed Government officials or top most official or non-official dignitaries. They are respected and honoured. We have been slaves and so during the days of slavery our men of letters could not form their status, they could not command any dignity and honour. I think that now the time has come when our Government ought to pay attention towards the men of letters and authors of this country. By this I do not mean the Hindi authors only. In our provinces there are quite a large number of writers in provincial languages and local dialects; and I think they have made valuable contributions to our Indian literature. Our Government should pay attention towards them also. Their literature should be developed and a definite status of our writers and men of letters be set. The Government ought to chalk out a scheme in this respect. As the time at my disposal running out so I cannot submit any proposals in detail. But I like to submit one example only. The Publication branch of the Government brings out some magazines, Hindi 'Aj Kal' and the Urdu 'Aj Kal', and a newspaper in Arabic are brought out. In the same way numerous other journals and magazines are published. I would very humbly like to submit that when I see them I feel that the Government money is being wasted and all this is nothing short of a wild goose chase. Those very things can be rendered very useful and for such a change it is not necessary to spend any additional sum of money. These journals and magazines can be rendered much more useful even by that much money that is being spent today. All of us feel that in Hindi or in the provincial languages or in the local dialects there is a complete dearth of some literary journal of a very high standard. Our masses also did not show any inclination in this respect because they went on reading English. Hence we find a complete dearth of such journal, in the Indian languages. Today we have no literary and cultural magazines of high standard in our language. I would like to submit that if our Government were to pay attention towards this matter and appoint some very competent and learned persons in this Department then these very magazines that are published by the Government, whereof the pictures are so beautiful, the paper so excellent, but which lack wholesome literature and cultural background, which today have no ideals and objectives, can be transformed into the best literary magazines of our language. If it were to happen so then I think it can become a thing most suited to the needs of the educated people of our country. I do not mean to refer to the progress of the educated class alone. The Government have many other means at her disposal. A lot of pamphlets, notices and advertisements are brought out and numerous big and small magazines and periodicals are published. If attention be paid towards them and work carried out according to some set and well-planned scheme and some capable persons be appointed after a sifting selection, then in that much money only a very good literature can be compiled and with its help alone we can make the millions of our illiterate masses progressive and cultured. If our Government were to go on thinking that when our masses will become educated only then our culture will develop, only then our civilization will be in full bloom, then I think scores of years will pass by. We will pass away from this world and perhaps then a time may come when Indian culture and civilization may develop and prosper. If the Government were to take necessary steps in this matter, re-organise the departments of Publicity, Education, Publication and Broadcasting clearly define and lay out the future policy, and working on those lines proceed towards the goal of progression, then I think the work of building a sound literature and the emancipation and development of our culture and civilization will be carried out most successfully, and the world would see that the Nation which, while attaining independence following the novel technique laid down by the Father of the Nation, dazzled the eyes of the world, has now become an enigma for the whole world. In the same way the world may look at us wonderstruck that we have been able to make phenomenal changes in the progression of our culture. I would very humbly like to draw the attention of the Honourable the Minister towards the fact that these matters be taken into consideration, and the Select Committee while making recommendations should also take this matter into consideration. Some amount of money should also be set apart for the cultural progress of the country.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): Sir, I thank you for the wind-fall that has come to me and it is a luck that I caught your eye, Sir, as I always do. I shall take you to a place which is very little known in India and to most of the Members and Ministers, except the Honourable the Prime Minister, the Deputy Prime Minister and Shri Santhanam. I think few people have seen the country and fewer Members have seen the place. I shall take you to a subject which is more interesting because it gave inspiration to De Quincy and others who wrote beautiful prose out of its effect. Then possibly, the whole country will be interested in a subject in which the Indian Union, when the British were here caused such havoc to the Chinese and we made as much money as 801 lakhs and much more. Somehow or other after a rebellion we had to understand their logic and whether it was due to public opinion or not, we actually reduced it gracefully when we almost sacrificed the entire revenue. All the same what we have been doing in our country is rather startling. In 1907-08 the acreage under poppy was 488,548 and in 1911-12, it was 200,672 and then in 1939-40 it was 4,898. I do not know whether this reduction was due to the spell and guidance of Mahatma Gandhi. Then we suddenly developed a love for this drug, we again increased our acreage in 1941-42 to 15,801 and then again in 1943-44 we have still improved it and the acreage was 36,415. Then again the production in maunds is also very startling. We have produced in 1907-08 to 71,340 maunds and then we reduced the acreage in 1911-12 to 31,473 and in 1943-44 our production is 9,870. Somehow or other our income was decreasing. In 1943-50, I do not know the reason, it has risen to 143 lakhs. Possibly, it may be due to increased expenditure or something like that, but we have been told that the honourable the Finance Minister is not interested in this revenue and he is prepared to sacrifice this sum, but somehow or other the province except Assam is entangled to the revenue to the extent of three to four crores of rupees. They are not prepared to sacrifice it and that is another reason why we have not been able to carry out prohibition in Assam and smuggling is continually present through Bengal, Orissa and other provinces and unless these provinces adopt prohibition and reduce their acreage under poppy, no improvement is possible. I am glad the honourable the Finance Minister has kindly assured that he is prepared to sacrifice the whole revenue. But then he is working in a vicious circle. The provinces are not prepared to sacrifice their revenue in spite of the willingness to reduce production by ten per cent. I trust that an all-India policy will be undertaken at the Conference which we have been assured will be convened. We should wipe out this evil as early as possible. We are now exporting 200 tons of opium to England. We should confine the production to our medicinal needs. The League of Nations index figure for Consumption of opium is 6 seeds for 10,000 population but that works out @ 9 grains per head whereas we consume only 8 grains. The index was fixed in 1926 and we are in 1949. We should not follow that index anymore.

I am one of those who desire that our defence expenditure should be reduced. But this is impossible in view of the Kashmir situation. All the same we should gradually demobilise the present standing army of 5,00,000 men and bring the strength down to the old standard of having a standing army of 1,25,000. Of course demobilisation should be done in such a way that people do not create discontent in the country. As regards the navy, I am for having a first class naval base in Andamans, Tuticorin, etc., with a good ship-building yard in Bombay. I regret to learn that we could not buy the training ship Nelson of 35,000 tons only for want of a good dockyard. We have to develop the Ports of Madras and Vizagapatam to suit our naval requirements spending money over them for a number of years. We must have a first class navy for our country. We should start creating it now. We cannot depend on our so-called Commonwealth friends. We should lay down a programme for 50 years of naval construction. We should also have a merchant navy comparable to that of Britain or other countries.

From this subject of ship-building, I wish to take the House to a disease called Kala-azar. Some years ago Dr. Brahmachari discovered a treatment for it but no planned research has been undertaken to find a suitable medicine for this terrible disease so far. Some people thought that it was a form of malaria and prescribed quinine. It was soon found that quinine only increased the disease. In Bengal, in the Burdwan Division this disease is prevalent to a high degree. I request that research should be done in Assam to bring this disease under control. I wish the Health Minister had been present in the House. As she is absent I shall send a note to her and request her to open a research institution somewhere in Assam to find a remedy for this bad disease. These are the two things which will give help to the people of Assam and Bengal and help humanity in general.

For leprosy also which is more prevalent in Madras and Orissa there should be a research institute in Assam as we come next best. Though it will cost a good deal, it is the duty of the Government to give relief to the people especially the hill tribes who suffer from these diseases. The tribes will be a menace to you if you do not give them relief in these directions. As I said, the Communist menace is on the eastern side. You can make these people your best friends if you open in their midst hospitals and educational institutions. If this is not done infiltrations will go on. They are already within 200 miles of the border near Lekhapani. Already Manipur is infested with Communist or Karen menace. I am not sure if the Raja himself is free from Communist ideas. It is said that he has the support of the Communists. I wish that our Prime Minister, the Deputy Prime Minister and the Minister of State would visit the place and see if the Defences there are properly organised. I am afraid if this is not done and personal contact is not established, we may have to go through the same scenes as we have in Burma. We are not combustible people. We are not volatile people. We take things in a tolerant way. Therefore, we do not lose our head. But things should not be allowed to drift. If you care for that Province, and if Dr. Matthai visits the place he would find the need for looking into these matters.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I have spent about six months in Assam.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha: Then I would ask the Members of the House to come and see things for themselves.

Shri O. V. Alagesan (Madras: General): These are days of planning and everywhere there is talk of planned economy. Nowhere is planning more necessary than in the field of industrial development in our country. There should be a balanced development of industries, taking into account the requirements and the possibilities of the various regions in our country. This balanced development of industry is necessary not only from the economic viewpoint, but also from the point of view of strategy in this atomic age. I would request the Government to look more towards the South. It has been looking to the East, to the North and to the West. It is high time they did a little looking towards the South, now that they have the planned development of the country in their hands. They should take Madras into the picture at this juncture.

It is common knowledge that there is no heavy industry or basic industry in Madras. It is understood that the Government themselves are going to establish two plants for manufacture of iron and steel with an annual production capacity of five lakhs tons each. I wish that at least one is established in Madras, and there are facilities for the same in Madras. On the floor of this House, you yourself have urged many a time the needs and necessity to provide for the famine area known as the Ceded Districts in Madras. This area may be poor on the surface, but it contains rich treasures in the bowels of the earth underneath. The Salem—Trichinopoly area and the Bellary-Sandur area, we are told, are very rich in iron ore and various other ores. The iron ore in the area of Bellary-Sandur contains as much as 65 per cent of iron. This compares very favourably with the 51/52 per cent for Lake Superior, 30/32 per cent for Lorainne and Luxemburg, 38 per cent for Alabama and 50 per cent in the Ruhr. The only difficulty is said to be coking coal. That can be easily brought from Hyderabad or even from Bihar, and the new project of Tungabhadra will supply enough power for this industry. I hope, Sir, the Government will see its way to establish at least one of these plants for the manufacture of iron and steel in Madras.

Again, there is a proposal for establishing a heavy power plant manufacturing concern, and I will plead the cause of Madras even here. There are various facilities which will enable the Government to run this industry profitably. Recently, an electric grid comprising Madras, Mysore and Travancore has been established and there are other hydro-electric schemes also on hand, which will supply the necessary power. Also essential raw materials like mica, rubber, silk, cotton, shellac, insulating oils and porcelain are available in sufficient quantities in Madras. You know, Sir, the Avadi Military Camp is a suitable area for the location of this industry and there are sufficient transport facilities—railway as well as port—which make the running of this concern easy. Here also, I would like that the Government takes into consideration the claims of Madras and does justice.

While on the subject of heavy industries, naturally I am led to another subject which is very important in Madras, and that is, the handloom industry. The honourable the Finance Minister has shown sufficient solicitude for the handloom industry. While explaining his proposals for imposing duties on medium and coarse cloth also, he said that he anticipates the need for protecting handloom industry against mill-made goods and this would be appreciated when a long range view is taken. He has also proved his solicitude in a concrete way when the case of cloth produced on power-loom was brought to his notice. There was a proposal to tax goods produced on power-looms also. He at once took action and I am glad to say that he exempted the products of power looms from the tax. So the need for protecting this very important industry which is next only to agriculture in Madras has been recognised. I come from an area which contains many thousands of looms and which gives occupation to many more. In taking into consideration the need for protecting this industry, I wish to urge upon the Government the necessity for allowing free export of handloom goods. Now, the policy of the Government with regard to the export of hand-loom goods is a sort of hide and seek policy. They allow free exports of hand-loom goods for a period in a year, say, for two or three months and then they stop it. Again, the handloom stock increases. There is a hue and cry. The Government have to yield and permit the export of handloom cloth for a stated period, only to stop it after that. In this case, I should like to draw the attention of the House to the unjust discrimination that is made against handloom cloth. While we allow export of mill cloth even to the extent of 10 per cent of the total production, we do not allow export of handloom cloth even up to two or three per cent. The other day, it was you, Sir, who put a question about the export of mill-made cloth to Middle East and the honourable Minister for Commerce answered that some millions of yards—I remember it was 20 or 30 million yards—are exported. This is exported not on a barter system, not to gain any other advantage, but simply to earn currency. Why not allow the export of handloom cloth to earn the same currency? There is great demand for our handloom goods in countries like Burma, Malaya, Indonesia and parts of Africa etc. In Pakistan there is great demand. Again, another excuse that is trotted out is that while entering into agreement with Pakistan and ourselves, they ask for mill-made cloth only and they do not want handloom cloth. Since we are in dire need of Pakistan cotton, we have to agree to what they say and we are not in a position to send our handloom goods. Why should not we insist that a certain percentage of our exports will be only in handloom goods? If we are in need of their cotton, they are also in need of our textiles. So they cannot easily flout our opinion in this matter. What I want to say is that the export of mill-made cloth to the Middle East and other countries can be stopped or reduced and that the same currency can be earned by allowing free export of handloom goods. Handloom cloth is produced to the tune of 450 million yards in Madras and I am informed that only a quarter of it is exportable and saleable in foreign countries. It will not work out to a very great percentage. So instead of sending away our cheap mill-made cloth to foreign countries and retaining for sale the dearer handloom cloth in our own country, it is better to send a good portion of our dearer handloom cloth to other countries and permit the circulation of the cheaper variety of mill cloth in our country. This free export of handloom cloth will go a long way to protect the handloom industry in this country and the handloom workers will be sure that their goods will be sold without being subject to the fluctuations of the export policy of the Government.

Again, Sir, I should like to say a word about the excise duty on sugar. Already our sugar prices are very high. They are double the Cuban sugar price and 50 per cent above the Brazilian sugar price. On account of the high price of sugar, Pakistan has ceased to be our market for sugar. It finds it more profitable to import Brazilian sugar than to buy sugar across its borders in India.

So the new duty on sugar will go to put up the price still further and there will be more stagnation, more stock accumulation, and people will not be able to purchase sugar at this high cost.

My friend touched on the want of co-ordination between the taxation policy in the Centre and the Provinces. In Madras they imposed a sales tax on the sale of cane. So that sales tax added to the excise duty of sugar will still more make the price of sugar rise up and people will be hard put to it to purchase their needs of sugar. Hence, there is every case for trying to reduce the price of sugar instead of trying to increase it by these duties.

One other point and that is with regard to economy. My friend has already touched upon it. The procedure which has been hit upon is a very ingenious one. I do not know who conceived it. I do not think such an innocent person as the honourable the Finance Minister could have conceived it. I am inclined to think it has come from some other source. It is tantamount to this. The House cries hoarse for economy. All right: here you are. We throw all our proposals before the various Standing Committees of the House. You consider them piece-meal and send us your opinion. This is hardly just. The various Standing Committees can look at these proposals only in an isolated way. They cannot have an over-all picture. That is a very serious handicap and every Minister is quite capable of persuading his Standing Committee (Shri T. T. Krishnamachari: 'Plenty of patronage;') not to effect a cut in his department. I am told that the various Ministers are vying with one another to see that the expenditure in their respective Departments is on no account cut down and they will summon to their support the various Standing Committees of the Legislature. Of course the honourable the Finance Minister may ask. Then why do you ask for economy? I do not think it is a correct procedure. It is for the Executive to deal with this. The honourable Finance Minister himself referred, on the floor of the House, to the need of cutting down the enormous defence expenditure. When he is convinced of it, why should the matter be placed before either the Defence Committee or the Standing Finance Committee? It is for the Government to cut down the expenditure in the Defence Department. So also is the case with the Civil Departments. It is for the Government to cut down the expenditure and there is no use throwing this responsibility upon the various Standing Committees. It is a wrong procedure and it will not be an answer to the persistent demand of both the House and the country to have a considerable reduction in the cost of the government.

श्री गीपीकृष्ण विजयवर्गीय : श्रीमान् अध्यक्ष महोदय, मैं जानता हूँ कि यहां पर जो बहुत हिन्दी भाषा में भाषण होते हैं और जिनको फाइनेन्स मिनिस्टर साहब और दूसरे मिनिस्टर साहब पूरे तौर से नहीं समझ सकते, तो यह चाहते हुए कि वे उनके नोट्स हासिल करके जो कुछ बातें कही गई हैं उनकी तरफ ज़रूर ध्यान देंगे, इस आशा से, मैं अपना भाषण हिन्दी में कर रहा हूँ।

अध्यक्ष महोदय, मैं इस बात से बहुत खुश हूँ कि आखिर यह फाइनेन्स बिल सिलेक्ट कमेटी में जाने के वास्ते हमारे सामने पेश किया गया है। वास्तव में इस बिल को सिलेक्ट कमेटी में ही जाना चाहिये था। इस साल बजट पर बहुत से मेम्बरों ने आलोचना की है, और इस बजट के बारे में कहा गया है कि यह बजट "रिच मैन" को रिलीफ देगा और गरीब आदमियों को टैकसेशन दिया गया है। इतनी त्रुटियों और आलोचना के होने पर यह लाजमी था कि यह बिल सिलेक्ट कमेटी में जाय। मुझे खुशी है कि यह बिल सिलेक्ट कमेटी में जा रहा है। इस कमेटी में ऐसे लोग हैं जो इस में काफी रद्दोबदल कर सकेंगे। सिलेक्ट कमेटी में जाकर मैं यह आशा करता हूँ कि वे काफी तरमीम और संशोधन करेंगे। अगर Finance Bill में देश के लिए अच्छी तरमीम नहीं होंगी तो यह देश के लिए अच्छा नहीं होगा। जैसा कि फाइनेन्स मिनिस्टर साहब को मालूम होगया है ये प्रपोजल किसी तरह से देश के लिए अच्छे नहीं हो सकते हैं। इसमें गम्भीर परिवर्तन और काफी परिवर्तन होने चाहियें तो इस दृष्टि से मैं समझता हूँ कि सिलेक्ट कमेटी अपने कर्तव्य को पूरा करेगी और हर प्रपोजल को नये सिरे से जांच करेगी और उसमें कुछ न कुछ संशोधन अवश्य करेगी, जिससे इस हाउस में जो आलोचना हुई है उसको दृष्टि में रखकर उसमें परिवर्तन किया जाय।

मैं फाइनेन्स मिनिस्टर साहब का ध्यान खासकर एक पाइन्ट की तरफ दिलाना चाहता हूँ। इसमें जो रिलीफ दिया गया है वह मालदार क्लासेज के लिए

है और उसमें भी खासतौर से जो कैपिटल गेन्स टैक्स है वह एक बड़ी खतरनाक चीज़ है। इस वर्ष में कैपिटल गेन्स टैक्स से कोई खास रिलीफ नहीं होगी, इस साल सिर्फ एक करोड़ रुपये का रिलीफ कैपिटल गेन्स टैक्स से मिल सकेगा। तो इस एक करोड़ रुपये को छोड़ भी सकते हैं, इस बात को देखते हुए कि कैपिटल गेन्स टैक्स से हमारे व्यापारियों को कुछ अधिक लाभ नहीं होगा। इससे खतरा यह होगा कि बहुत सी नई कम्पनियाँ अपने उद्योगों को बेचकर उनको नये कैपिटल्स के रूप में दुगने और तिगने दाम पर खड़ी कर सकेंगे, और इस पर कुछ डिप्रीशेशन एलाउन्स भी अधिक मिलेगा। आगे के लिए अगर हम इस देश में कभी किसी इनडस्ट्री को या कम्पनी को नेशनलाइज करना चाहेंगे तो वह हमारे लिए एक असम्भव जैसी बात हो जायेगी। क्योंकि इस समय जो पूँजी है उसका हमको काफी मुआवजा देना पड़ेगा। तो इसलिए मैं कहता हूँ कि बजट की इस खामी को दूर किया जाय। आखिर यह देश महात्मा गांधी जी के नतूत्व में आगे बढ़ा है और हमने जो कुछ भी हासिल किया है वह गरीबों के लिये हासिल किया है। नेशनलाइजेशन आज नहीं हो सकता है, यह बात सही है, लेकिन आगे करना पड़ेगा। आप सारी दुनिया की हालत को देखें। दुनिया के बहुत से देश आज सोशलिज्म की दिशा में आगे बढ़ रहे हैं। बहुत से देशों में एकोनोमिक क्रान्ति हो रही है। ब्रिटेन सोशलिज्म के रास्ते की तरफ जा रहा है। हमको भी अपने देश की हालत के अनुसार, उस हद तक जितनी कि ज़रूरत है, जाना पड़ेगा। इस दृष्टि से लैन्ड और इनडस्ट्रीज को काफी नेशनलाइज करना पड़ेगा।

इसलिये मैं इस तरफ मिनिस्टर साहब का ध्यान दिलाना चाहता हूँ कि जो इसमें एक करोड़ रुपये का रिलीफ है वह न दिया जाय। सिलेक्ट कमेटी इस रिलीफ को हटा दे और बाकी जो प्रपोजल हैं उन पर भी खूब गौर करे। जनरल डिबेट में इस पर काफी कहा गया है कि अगर इस रिलीफ को छोड़ दिया जाय, और ६ करोड़ का घाटा है उसको न उठाया जाय और नये टैक्स भी न लगाये, तो हमारा काम अच्छी तरह से चल सकता है। इस नये साल सिविल खर्च में १६५ करोड़ और डिफेन्स में १५७ करोड़ रुपया खर्च हो रहा है। दोनों को मिलाकर ३२२ करोड़ रुपया खर्च हो रहा है। अगर हम इस पर ५ परसेन्ट की कमी कर दें तो हमको नये टैक्स लगाने की ज़रूरत नहीं होगी। इसलिए इकौनौमी की भी तरफ ज्यादा ध्यान दिया जाय ताकि बजट बैलैन्स हो जाय। रिलीफ को भी कम किया जाय और टैक्स भी कम किया जाय तो हमारा संशोधन होना चाहिए, ऐसा करने से हमारा बजट बैलैन्स हो जायेगा। मैं खास तौर से ध्यान कैपिटल गेन्स टैक्स की तरफ मिनिस्टर साहब का दिलाना चाहता हूँ। इतना कह कर मैं अपना भाषण समाप्त करता हूँ।

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Madhya Bharat): Sir, I am quite aware of the fact that a good many speeches which are delivered in this House in Hindi are not susceptible of being fully understood by our Honourable Finance Minister and other Ministers. But I wish they should take down notes of the various suggestions contained therein, and, look into these. In this very hope, I am going to speak in Hindi.

Sir, I am very much gratified to see that after all this Finance Bill has come before us for being referred to the Select Committee. In fact this Bill ought to have been referred to the Select Committee. Many of the honourable members have criticized the budget proposals this year; and this Budget has been characterized as one tending to give relief to "rich men"; and the poor have been granted "taxation" only. In spite of all these shortcomings and criticisms, it was but necessary that this Bill should have been referred to the Select Committee. I am glad that this is being referred to the Select Committee. This Committee consists of such persons who will be able to make many amendments in this Bill. In the Select Committee they shall, I hope, make substantial changes. If no changes which are beneficial to the interest of the country are made in the Finance Bill, then it is not likely to prove useful to it. The Honourable Finance Minister has already become aware of the fact that these finance proposals can in no way benefit the country. Serious and major changes should be effected in it. With this end in view, I hope that the Select Committee shall come up to our expectations and scrutinize each and every proposal ab initio and surely incorporate some changes in it after keeping in view the trend of the criticism made in this House.

I would like to invite the attention of the Honourable Finance Minister to one particular point. The relief envisaged in this Bill is meant for the rich classes only and especially the Capital Gains Tax is a very dangerous measure. During this year, no substantial relief will be given in the form of the abolition of Capital Gains Tax. A relief amounting to Rs. one crore only is likely to accrue from the Capital Gains Tax. So, we can ignore this one crore of rupees after keeping in view the fact that our business community will not be able to derive any material advantage from the Capital Gains Tax. Such a course is fraught with risk, as it will induce many new companies to sell their industrial undertakings and float fresh concerns in lieu thereof with almost the double or treble of their existing capital, and this will also ultimately lead to more allowance being given on account of Depreciation Fund. It will thus become quite impossible for us, if at a future date we want to nationalize any industry or company in this country, because we shall have to give sufficient compensation keeping in view the present capital. Therefore, I would submit that this shortcoming existing in the Budget should be removed. After all this country has advanced under the guidance of Mahatma Gandhi; and whatever we have achieved it is for the benefit of the poor. It is true that nationalization cannot be enforced at present but we shall have to do this later on. You should have an overall view of the conditions existing in the whole world. Many countries of the world are at present drifting towards Socialism. Many countries are in the grip of economic crisis. Britain is treading the path of Socialism. We shall also have to move towards this direction at least to a certain extent which may be deemed necessary. With this end in view, we shall have to nationalize land and industries to a considerable extent.

Therefore, I would like to invite the attention of the Honourable Minister towards this aspect that the relief of Rs. one crore which is envisaged in this Bill should not be given. The Select Committee should do away with this relief measure and also carefully consider the other proposals. It has been amply emphasized during the course of general discussion that if this relief is ignored and the deficit of Rs. 6 crores is not made up, even then it can serve our purpose quite all right. During the ensuing year, Rs. 165 and 157 crores are anticipated to be spent under Civil and Defence Expenditure respectively. The sum total of this expenditure comes to Rs. 322 crores. If we reduce this by 5 per cent, then we will not feel any necessity for imposing new taxes. Therefore, more attention should be paid towards economy so that this Budget may be balanced. We should make necessary amendment in the Bill by way of reduction both under relief as well as taxation so as to have a balanced budget. I should like to draw special attention of the Honourable Minister towards the Capital Gains Tax.

With these words, I would resume my seat.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: Shri Raj Bahadur. He can speak from the seat where he is.

Shri Raj Bahadur (United States of Matsya): I should like to speak tomorrow, Sir.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: In that case the honourable member will lose his opportunity to speak.

Shri Raj Bahadur: I have got my notes on my seat on the other side. With your permission, Sir, I shall go back to my seat and speak.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: I would ask honourable members to be ready in their seats to be able to speak when called. In the morning there was a list of 15 to 20 speakers and the Speaker was hard put to find the time to accommodate them whereas now I find we have to go abegging for speakers.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: If you will permit there are many members of the Select Committee who would like to speak.

Shri Raj Bahadur: Sir, it has been a pleasant but uncomfortable surprise to have been called upon quite unexpectedly to speak at the fag-end of the day. However there are a few points to which I would like to draw the attention of the House and the honourable Minister in the course of my brief speech. I wanted to have a chance of speaking on the day when the Defence Demands were under consideration. What seems to me to be the prime necessity of the day so far as the younger folks are concerned is that there should be some provision or some arrangement by which the desire of the young mind for military training might be satisfied. We know that certain organisations exploited this urge in the young mind for ulterior motives. We also know that they misdirected the energies of the younger folk in our country and as is well known certain organisations, which grow up as mushroom organisations usually exploit such urge and misdirect the youth of the country. With the achievement of freedom naturally and inevitably this urge for military training in the youth has become more emphasised and they ask for military training. It is therefore very necessary that there should have been some arrangement or organisation on behalf of the Defence Department in this behalf initiated and controlled by the Government. In every village, town and city there should be provided a forum or place where the young men or the younger generation could meet and make their beginning in military training, so that this urge which is usual in the young mind is not exploited by interested parties.

Also there should have been some provision in the budget for the integration of the states forces into the overall setup of the Indian army. We know that the States have many an efficient regiment which are at present more or less controlled by the rulers of the States. It is true that under the new setup that control has to a very large extent come into the hands of the Defence Ministry. But even so the States' forces exist by themselves and do not form an integral part of the Indian army. When the States are integrated and the future of the Indian States' forces is in the balance it is but proper that in this Budget a beginning should have been made with the provision of some fund towards the integration of the amalgamation of the Indian States' forces with the Indian army. With the States' unions coming into being if they abolish their customs duties as there is a general demand of the people of the States to do so, it would be very difficult for them to meet the expenditure of the State forces. It would be very difficult even if income-tax is introduced to maintain the State forces by the Government of the States or the States Unions. As such it would only be proper that some provision should have been made in the Budget by which we could have made the beginning of the process of integration or amalgamation of the States' forces with the Indian army.

I now want to come to a point to which I have already referred to in my speech on the External Affairs debate. I pointed out then that there is a pagoda of superstition and prejudice about the customs, manners, culture and civilisation of India in foreign countries. This pagoda has been built by a line of interested writers, like the well known Miss Mayo of America. (An honourable Member: "notorious"!) Yes I should say notorious—But Miss Mayo is not the solitary figure in that line. We also know that during the British regime there had been a persistent effort on the part of the British to present to the world a completely distorted picture of India and the Indians. It is high time that that pagoda of prejudice is demolished completely and a definite effort is made in foreign countries whereby we can present a correct picture of India to the world.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: The honourable Member can continue his speech tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 22nd March, 1949.

PAPERS LAID ON THE TABLE

REPORT OF INDIAN RAILWAY ENQUIRY COMMITTEE

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister of Railways and Transport): Sir, I lay on the table a copy of the *Report of the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee, 1947.

BANKING COMPANIES (LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' CLIENTS' ACCOUNTS) BILL.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Sir, I beg for leave to introduce a Bill to restrict the liability of banking companies in connection with certain transactions by legal practitioners.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to restrict the liability of banking companies in connection with certain transactions by legal practitioners."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

INDIAN FINANCE BILL—concl'd.

Mr. Speaker: The House will proceed with the motion moved by the Honourable Dr. John Matthai yesterday, namely:

"That the Bill to give effect to the financial proposals of the Central Government for the year beginning on the first day of April, 1949, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru, Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar, Shri Biswanath Das, Shri R. K. Sidhva, Shri Surendra Mohan Ghosh, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Shri Ram Nath Goenka, Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad, Shri Mohanlal Gautam, Shrimati Annie Mascarene, Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt, Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka, Mr. Homi Mody, Shri Khandubhai K. Desai, Shri S. V. Krishna-moorthy Rao, Shri H. V. Kamath, Shri B. L. Sondhi, Shri Kala Venkata Rao, Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri, Shri K. Hanumanthaiya, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta and the Mover with instructions to report on or before the 25th March, 1949, and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

This motion will be discussed upto 4 P.M. or shall it be upto 4-30 P.M.?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): The discussion has been mainly with reference to general matters of administration and I do not know if it would be necessary for me to make a lengthy reply. Having observed the trend of the discussions yesterday and the kind of subjects the discussions referred to, if you could allow me half an hour, it would be as much as I would need in order to reply.

*Not printed in the day's Debate. A copy placed in the Library of the House.—
Ed. of D.

Mr. Speaker: The time limit is fixed up to 5 P.M. and at that time the question has to be put under the rule. So there will be no occasion for extending the discussions beyond 5 P.M. So these discussions will go up till 4-30 P.M. and then I shall call upon the honourable the Finance Minister to reply.

Shri Raj Bahadur (United State of Matsya): Mr. Speaker, Sir, before the House rose yesterday, I was expressing myself mainly on three points. With your permission, Sir, I will recapitulate briefly the points I made yesterday to get into a sequence.

I was referring to the necessity of a concerted effort on the part of the Government to devise and introduce a scheme by which the urge of the younger people of our nation for military training may be satisfied. The charm and fascination which draw the younger people, particularly boys of school-going age, for military drills and military discipline, for parades and manoeuvres, are well known. This, Sir, is a precious treasure of the Government and of the nation. It should be put to the best use by the country. Our experience in the past has, however, been that this urge unfortunately was exploited by certain interested parties for ulterior motives. But that it can be put to the best use for the nation cannot be denied, and as such I believe that if the Government devise a scheme whereby either through some suitable military officers or even through the police officers in the various provinces or other qualified persons, a drive is made to train our young people in the art of bearing arms and going in for military drills and discipline, it will be very fitting for the needs of the times.

Secondly, I referred to the integration of the States' Forces into the overall set-up of the Indian Army. After the accomplishment of the marvellous and almost impossible task of integration of as many as 562 States into the various provinces or into States' Unions, it is only to be expected that the States' Forces which are scattered over all these States, should be incorporated into the bigger unit of the Indian Army. They should form part and parcel of it. As such, it is only proper that there should have been some provision in the Defence Budget for that purpose so that a beginning could have been made in this direction.

Thirdly, I was referring to the mass of prejudice and superstition that prevails in certain foreign countries about our social customs and institutions. It has to be painfully observed that during the course of the slavery of two centuries, of our country a ruthlessly distorted picture of our country, especially of manners and social customs of the people was presented to the world. Therefore, it is only proper that all the harm and damage that has been done to our reputation by notorious writers like Miss Mayo should be undone now, and a concerted effort should be made that all the prejudice that exists in foreign countries about our manners and social customs, about our culture and civilization should be removed. It would be not only in the best interests of our nation and country and in keeping with our prestige, but it would pave the way for international peace and amity and goodwill. In this connection I would suggest that the Education Department should publish literature and do propaganda in order to remove all these various whims, fancies and superstitions that reign supreme today in foreign countries about us.

Coming to an other aspect of the function of publicity and information on the part of our Government, I would like to refer to publicity within our own country. In order that our democracy may prove successful, it is necessary that the common man must be made more intelligent: he must be made aware of his various responsibilities, rights and privileges. It is, therefore, very essential that from village to village and town to town there should be a network of our publicity organization which should be used to educate the masses. It is unfortunate that the few papers that there are in this country—I say few looking to the population of the country and the number of newspapers—are only available in the towns. Even the benefits and advantages of the broadcasting system are restricted to the towns and cities. It could have been planned that a number of radio sets, to begin with say 1,000 or 2,000, are distributed to make a modest beginning in the provinces of Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara, which are Centrally controlled. They could have been supplied free of cost to the villages and could have been so organized that all the broadcasting programmes meant for the rural population could be listened to by them. I understand that some steps have been taken in this direction. But it is only proper that if out of every four men in the United States or in the United Kingdom one possesses a radio or a motor car, it is necessary that in at least every village in our country there should be a radio set. We are looking forward to the day when this will be realized. Again our communication system also is hopelessly out of tune with the needs of time and with the interests of the population. With trade and intercourse increasing from day to day between the villages and the towns, it is only proper that the attention of the Works, Mines and Power Department is directed towards a betterment of the existing communications and transport facilities.

Lastly, I would refer to the immense problem of the refugees. It cannot be doubted that the problem of the refugees which was created by the influx of millions of people due to the exchange of populations on an unprecedented and inconceivable scale reaching up to the figure of 70 lakhs on either side was a gigantic one. It would have been impossible for any Government in the world to cope with such a mighty and huge problem. But it has to be admitted that the problem has not been solved up to this time completely. Out of the many areas from where populations have been exchanged I want to make a particular reference to the Matsya Union, from where about one lakh of people have migrated the refugees who come from Pakistan were only about 30 or 40 thousand. (Interruption). I stand corrected. About three lakhs of people migrated from the Matsya Union and only a lakh of people have come there. But these too have not been settled properly. I will give a small example. One of the industries which some of these refugees wanted to set up was the razor-making industry and another was the piercing-saw-industry. They wanted some protection and some financial assistance. These were not forthcoming. The problem of making them stand on their own legs and making them eke out their own living could not be solved in this manner. The result is that a large number of such people who went there to find shelter are returning from those areas. It is high time that the attention of the Government is drawn to this problem.

So far as taxation proposals are concerned, as is well known, the principle is "no taxation without representation." Nobody can doubt that this Assembly is fully representative of the people of India but the impression one gathers from a cursory perusal of the budget is that it is more a rich man's budget than a poor man's. The various proposals for relief relate mainly to those items which relate to those who are well to do and rich. As far as the poor man is concerned not only is his postcard taxed but his paper and stationery are also taxed. The coarse cloth which he wears is also taxed. I hope when the Bill is considered by the Select Committee they will see to it that the necessities of life of the common man are not taxed, so far as possible, or that the burden of taxation on such articles of necessity is not augmented. (An honourable Member: 'Where is the money to come from?') The tax can come from other things used by rich men. It is not necessary that you should tax articles like paper and stationery which are used by the students and the poorer classes also. Why do you not tax other articles (Interruption). I see only the "capitalists' cry" in this interruption. But I do not mean to cast any reflection on anybody.

I want to refer to certain industries which require special protection, for example the razor industry. In November last razors imported from foreign countries cost Rs. 27 per razor of superior quality and Rs. 15 per razor of inferior quality; whereas local made razors were obtainable at a price of Rs. 5 per razor in November last. Then there was dumping of these razors in the country and the result was that foreign razors could be obtained at Rs. 9 in February and the local made razors came down to Rs. 2. The result was that this industry which was coming into its own has been crippled by the dumping of these foreign imports. As regards the piercing saw industry—these saws are used by watch-makers—they were obtainable at Rs. 15/6 per gross and now they have come down to Rs. 2 because of dumping from Switzerland. The industry has, therefore, been completely paralysed. Lastly the shoe industry, which employed about 5 lakhs of people, and of which there are about 300 factories and 4,000 cottage industry centres, has suffered a serious set back on account of dumping of shoes and other leather goods from the U.K., Australia and other countries. About one lakh of people have been thrown out of employment consequently at and near Agra.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): On a point of order, Sir, when an honourable Member continues his speech on the following day is the time taken by him on the previous day taken into consideration?

Mr. Speaker: It is also taken into consideration but in view of the very short time of four or five minutes that he has had I am allowing him that time also.

Shri Raj Bahadur: Sir, I will not give another opportunity to my honourable friend to complain about my taking extra time. I shall conclude by saying that the industries which I have referred to will receive the special consideration of the Government by the imposition of protective duties as also other special assistance. I hope the Government will also consider the other points made out by me.

Mr. Homi Mody (Bombay: General): Sir, in my speech on the Budget I characterised the approach of my honourable friend the Finance Minister to the problems facing him as one of subdued optimism. And indeed when we look around us all over the world and find cities devastated, millions homeless, factories in ruins and the whole economy of countries disrupted, we have cause for profound thankfulness. It is true that India suffered a great deal too. She made a major contribution to the war in spite of the fact that she was in essentials ill-equipped for waging a major war; her capacity for munitions and major weapons of war was either non-existent or extremely limited. All the same she made a great effort and I think her contribution was equal to almost that of any other country if you take into consideration the totality of all that she did for the prosecution of the war. But it is also true that she escaped the major horrors of the war, horrors which countries subjected to bombing or enemy occupation went through, and to that extent I say there is cause for profound thankfulness.....

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (West Bengal: General): We in Bengal had some taste of it.

Mr. Homi Mody: Yes but if you had the taste which other countries had, you would not have forgotten it!

The situation, nevertheless, is one of difficulty and it would be foolish to disguise the seriousness of the problems that are facing us. In the first place, our productive machine while it is intact is worn out very badly. We have not been able to rehabilitate our industry because of difficulties of capital equipment and also of exchange resources, particularly in the hard currency areas. Our transport system has not yet achieved normalcy, in spite of the efforts which have been made in the last year or two and which I freely acknowledge. The transport problem is still very acute, and I take this opportunity of saying, without doing any injustice, I hope, to the Ministry concerned, that the transport system of the country is inadequate to the needs of trade, industry and agriculture.

Then there is the consideration that the middle classes have been impoverished, their savings have mostly disappeared and today that class on which governments in all countries generally depend for support to the investment market is almost non-existent. And finally, it is also a fact that confidence has been generally shaken, though here again I freely acknowledge that a great deal has been done by Government's spokesmen in recent months to restore confidence, both by word and deed.

There are two particular problems facing my honourable friend. One is the high cost of living. I am inclined to agree with him that we have seen probably the peak of the inflation. But I am not so sure that I can share his optimism with regard to any downward trend setting in. If you examine the budget carefully, you will find that beyond the fact that the programme of capital expansion is very modest, and may be regarded as anti-inflationary, there is little in the budget which can be said to induce a downward trend of prices. The effect of excises surely cannot but be inflationary, and to the extent to which cloth, sugar, petrol and other articles are made more expensive, to that extent, the cost of living of the middle and the lower middle classes is bound to go up.

Then you cannot possibly divorce the Central budget from the provincial budgets. In the Provinces because of the fanatical pursuit of ideals, and consequent abandonment of very substantial revenues, Sales Taxes are being imposed on all manner of necessities. I do not know what sort of taxation principles they are which entitle a Province to throw away crores of revenue in the pursuit of ideals and which at the same time imposes such burdens upon the poor and the middle classes. In this connection, I would like to ask my honourable friend whether the Central Government's authority over the Provinces rests merely in issuing directives and tendering advice. Provincial autonomy is there—nobody disputes that. But in the matter of prohibition—on which I hold just as strong views as Provincial Ministers hold theirs—there was advice tendered from the highest quarters to the Provinces, which advice was contentiously rejected. Has anything been done? I find that nothing has happened to the Provinces which have rejected this advice. They are being given loans and advances and grants without reference to what the Central Government's advice was with regard to setting their finances in order.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): Sober people will pay more taxes than drunkards.

Mr. Homi Mody: But so far as I am concerned, I am more sober when I have had a little!

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): Sir, does he want anything now?

Mr. Speaker: Let him proceed.

Mr. Homi Mody: The other difficulty which is facing my honourable friend is with regard to the financing of capital expenditure. He has provided in this year's budget, and very wisely, only Rs. 85 crores, of which Rs. 67 crores are by way of conversion, which leaves a very meagre sum of Rs. 13 crores for financing fresh expenditure. That undoubtedly is wise in view of the circumstances in which he finds himself. But it only shows that today we are not in a position to finance capital expenditure to any very considerable extent.

I would like to draw his attention in particular to the considerable reduction that has taken place in cash balances. If I remember aright, only three years ago they were of the order of Rs. 450 crores; they have substantially dwindled. What I want to know is whether this raid on the cash balances took place for financing current expenditure. Cash balances are generally built up for financing capital expenditure. I do not know whether they are intended to supplement the ordinary revenue resources of Government. It is a matter for my honourable friend to answer and I shall be happy to learn at his feet.

Sir, it would perhaps be idle to make any suggestions to my honourable friend who knows a great deal more about these matters than I do, but I would like to suggest to him, in view of the present state of the security market, the feasibility of floating short-term loans, leaving the long-term loan position alone. When I talk of short-term loans I mean for five or seven or ten years, in small denominations, and with a slightly higher rate of interest than the rate at which such securities can be had today. In other words, the yield on these short-term securities should not be such as to disrupt the whole structure of the security market. If you offer perhaps an anna or two more than the yield on short-term securities today, you may find a considerable response on the part of the investing public.

Then there is another question on which I speak with even greater diffidence, and that is the question of attracting capital from rural areas. My honourable friend, I think, knows something about co-operative societies and I was wondering whether with their help and that of rural agencies it was possible to draw up something out of the small savings of the agricultural and the artisan population.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): At the present moment, there is greater demand for money in the rural parts, and there is no money to be deposited so far as we know.

Mr. Homi Mody: What is the reason? More marriages?

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: For cultivation expenses.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): There is no money with them.

Mr. Homi Mody: I shall speak with all humility; my friends are experts, and I am not. But I am very surprised to hear that there is no money in the rural areas. I thought that over a period of years the high prices which the agriculturists obtained have enabled them to lay by a little and withstand the shock of lean years much better than ever before.

Honourable Members: No, no.

Mr. Speaker: Let him proceed.

Mr. Homi Mody: As a matter of fact, I think I am right in saying that agricultural indebtedness has been very substantially reduced. (Interruption)

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Mr. Homi Mody: Now it seems to me that what requires to be done, is that the procedure ought to be simplified a great deal—the procedure by which loans can be purchased and sold and the agencies through which purchases and sales can be effected. If some way was devised of making it simpler so that the poor ignorant agriculturist does not think that he is undergoing a heavy and, to him a complicated, formality, it is possible that the drive for rural savings may meet with greater success than it has done. Then again, I do not know whether my honourable friend will raise his hands in horror if I ask him to consider the feasibility of issuing bearer bonds. I do not know what the mechanics of that business are or the morality, but a short time ago some of the leading Indian banks in this country put up a scheme to the Government. I would like to know from my honourable friend whether he has considered that scheme.

I have one or two other small points. One is that I think there ought to be better estimating of the revenue and expenditure. I have been here for well over fifteen years off and on, and I have not known budget figures being out to the extent of Rs. 80 crores, both on the revenue and on the expenditure side. I grant that there are incalculables and imponderables, and budgeting is a form of guess work; but it should not be pure speculation. I suggest to my honourable friend that a better control over budgeting ought to be exercised than has evidently been the case.

Then there is the question of the Economy Committee. In view of the assurance given by my honourable friend that he is going to examine their recommendations very promptly and carefully, I do not need to say anything beyond that I hope he will find it possible, if the report is not an empirical document, to effect some substantial economies.

Lastly, there is the food problem, which is at the root of all our problems. The honourable Minister only a couple of days ago made a re-assuring statement, and evidently he and the Provinces seem determined to go ahead. I only want to say that my general reaction is that my honourable friend the Food Minister is being a little too optimistic. I am not also sure whether the Provinces are as energetic and as much in earnest as the Centre is with regard to the food problem; that is largely because of the comparative ease with which we have found it possible to import food from abroad.

Sir, I have nothing more to say at this stage.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Sir, I refer to this Budget as a balanced Budget not because the revenue and expenditure side has been balanced, but because it effects a balance between the rich and the poor. I expected a different speech from my honourable friend Mr. Mody than one of mere criticism of what has been done. If the appetite is satisfied the appetite grows by what it feeds on. The poor man has been ignored in this Budget, but he is prepared to take some more burdens upon himself merely to see that the industrialist and capitalist is put once again on his legs, to improve the industry of this country and the wealth of the nation. Sir, my friend has not given an assurance, in spite of all the concessions that have been given to him, that he will go forth to the country and ask the industrialists to put more energy into their work and see that everyone of them produces sufficient for consumption so as to bring down the inflation.

Mr. Homi Mody: May I just interrupt my honourable friend? If he will read my Budget speech I have stated there in the strongest possible terms and made a call on the industry and trading community to respond to Government's efforts.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Anyhow, Sir, till now there is no evidence of it. Now he has turned his attention; finding that he has not been able to persuade his friends, he has turned his wrath against the honourable Minister. My own feeling is that an erstwhile socialist has turned into a conservative, all in the interests of the country. When the time came and the need is there, I am glad the honourable Minister has given up some of his principles merely for the purpose of putting our country once again on its legs.

Now, let us understand the critical situation in which we are. India is essentially sound, there is absolutely no doubt about it. The British Government has not taken away all the rivers and lands from here. They are still here. But our balance of trade for the past nine months, ending with the year 1948, is adverse to the tune of 35 crores odd. To England itself our adverse balance is 17 odd crores; likewise to the United States of America and so on. Now, this adverse balance of trade has to be met. We have not been able to get sufficient from England by way of sterling releases in the hard currencies which we wanted for purchase of capital goods. We borrowed from the International Monetary Fund to the extent of 100 million dollars. 92 millions have already been drawn and 8 millions remain to be drawn. Evidently there is a lurking suspicion in the minds of the persons in charge of the Fund as to why we have been drawing these amounts and how we will be able to pay back. Certainly we will be able to pay, we have got enormous resources.

So far as food is concerned, now we are going to outside countries for purchasing food to the tune nearly of 130 crores. And then this food is subsidised. If the poor man says he has to pay something more for postage this year. I ask you wherefrom are we going to have money for subsidizing the poor man's food in which there is such a great shortage? Our food subsidies come nearly to 23 crores a year.

Next, it may be said that the poor man's cloth has been taxed. Over coarse cloth a quarter of an anna has been imposed, both over coarse and medium counts up to 34 counts. Situated as we are in this country and having regard to the scarcity of cloth, 12 yards per head per year is all that can be allowed. Taking five as the number of members in a family, each purchases 60 yards in a year. What does he pay per year as tax on these 60 yards? Sixty quarters, that is fifteen annas, less than a rupee. In these critical times it is hard for the poor man to put one more burden upon himself. He is not poor today, he has plenty of money but there is not much for him to purchase with that money; money has become so cheap. It is true in the villages they have plenty of money; the debts of erstwhile poor peasants who were groaning under indebtedness are all paid off. But there is not sufficient fluent capital today; money is not circulating as quickly and as swiftly as before. The only solution for getting rid of this inflation is by producing more and more consumer goods. We have tried to grease the wheels of industry, and the wheels of our honourable friend also, but they still creak. The only other remedy is for the State to take over the industry. Concessions have been given by the honourable the Finance Minister as soon as he took office. He took office at a time when no Minister.....

Mr. Homi Mody: But we have acknowledged all that.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: It is mere lip-sympathy, it is not sympathy for the poor man nor even for the honourable the Finance Minister. My friend is not trying to put his shoulder to the wheel. I would urge that if ever we do not improve within the course of the next year, I will certainly throw the blame entirely upon my friend and all the persons that he represents. As soon as my honourable friend the Finance Minister took charge of his office in October last, he gave a number of concessions regarding depreciation. Then he reduced the super-tax from fifteen annas six pies to fourteen annas. No doubt Liaquat Ali Khan's Budget was hailed as a poor man's Budget, but unfortunately it has helped neither the poor man nor the rich man. It killed the rich man and along with the rich man the entire community as a whole. After two years we are now wise. It is under those circumstances that the honourable the Finance Minister has taken over. To the industry or to the capitalist who has to pay super-tax to the tune of fifteen annas six pies in the rupee, concession of an anna and a hali is not much. In the critical times that we are in I would reduce it further. My friend Shri T. T. Krishnamachari can laugh. I have only one colour, my friend has two colours. He is a capitalist during the night and by day he is a socialist. I have been a socialist, but I am not a socialist in this sense that I stick to my guns and am a socialist through thick and thin even if the whole ground is washed away under my foot.

Sir, I find there is a peculiar situation arisen in this country today. There is no food, we are importing food. There are hundreds of rivers in our country but we are not able to produce sufficient food. Under these circumstances what are we to do? So far as cloth is concerned, ours was the one country which produced cloth from ancient times. It is said that when some people from Europe visited India in 300 A.D. they went back carrying tales of how they discovered a new thing, a kind of wool growing on the top of trees. But now we have come to look to Manchester and Lancashire for cloth. It is a disgrace that we are not able to make ourselves self-sufficient in food and cloth. What is the remedy? We cannot go on criticising the Finance Minister. An all-round burden has to be imposed. After all the quarter anna is not much for the poor man; if the postcard is raised from six to nine pies, it is for the benefit of the poor man—a larger number of post offices will be set up during the course of the next year.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): You are reversing your arguments!

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I am not reversing my argument. I started by saying that under the peculiar circumstances in which we are, you cannot have a better Budget. It is a balanced Budget, balanced between the rich man and the poor man, not between the right side and the left side of the income but between the rich and the poor. In the matter of reduction of the super-tax, I find that the Communist papers say that some 419 persons have been benefited by the reduction of super-tax from 15 as. 6 ps. to 14 as., and that they get the advantage to the tune of Rs. 2-1/2 crores. Well, it so happens that they are industrialists. It cannot be avoided.

In the matter of other concessions, the majority of persons who have benefited are the poor men. It is not the rich man who eats so much cereals as the poor man. My friend here, for instance supplements his food with liquor, not so the poor man, he has to depend on his cereals. So a number of concessions have been given so far as the poor man is concerned. But the rich man has to be helped, not to make him richer, but for the purpose of the industrialisation of the country, or for the purpose of producing the necessities of life in our country. I agree with these proposals and I have an absolutely clean conscience. I can go to the country and tell the people that they are for their good. They should not listen to those who want to destroy the Government or bring about chaos by saying to the people, "Look here, this half-anna post card has been raised to nine pies." I will tell the poor man that nine pies is not much because the price of money has now gone down. He has got plenty of money, because of the inflation, and we have actually to control inflation. The Finance Minister told us that he has not been able to attract savings. These have gone into the villages. And so far as the industrialists are concerned, their total cost, I mean the total cost of stocks and shares which was about Rs. 130 crores, on account of the various disturbances the heavy imposition of super-tax and so on, its face value now has come down to Rs. 300 crores. From 1,300 it has come to 300. It is no wonder that the Industrialists are not able to get the necessary finance, and the bankers want additional security.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Did they not experience an artificial boom during the rise?

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: If artificially we get fat by eating a lot of butter, and in one purgative the whole thing goes off, and you are back to the original state, what is the use? That is what I cannot understand.

Sir, I am glad this Bill has been referred to the Select Committee. There are certain things to be adjusted, so far as the middle-class man is concerned. He has not profitted during the war. He has not had any additional income, and some concessions have to be given to him. Instead of a reduction of a quarter of an anna here or there, the exemption limit may be raised from Rs. 3,000 to Rs. 3,500, particularly in the case of persons who have large families. I am not making any personal reference, but I would like this country to have a large number of people. Well, with the sweet reasonableness of the honourable the Finance Minister, we shall be able to make certain changes, and we do not think that irrespective of considerations of reasonableness, he will stick to the various proposals.

Now, I have to make a few suggestions. We have established a new convention this year. Some objection was raised during the earlier part of the budget debate that the Finance Minister does not take all and sundry into his confidence before he brings forward his financial proposals. Sir, this is impossible. He should not even talk to his wife regarding financial matters. He cannot talk to anyone, except, of course, the Prime Minister to whom he must entrust his confidence. Now, on this occasion, he has himself come forward to refer the matter to a Select Committee. There it can be discussed threadbare. Twenty-two Members of the Assembly are there on the Select Committee. That is a good departure. It was started last year and I am glad it has continued.

So far as the scanning of the budget is concerned, we spend about thirteen or fourteen days on it. Here I would like to make a suggestion. We need not have two discussions, but only one general discussion. As soon as the Budget is placed, the financial proposals also may be placed, and instead of starting a general discussion on the Budget, let us have the general discussion of the Finance Bill, where we can talk all things from China to Peru. In the Budget discussion we refer only to the taxation proposal, not of the expenditure, and then devote some five days to the second part. We had so many departments in one day, Health, Education, Labour and Broadcasting, all on one day, and then we had to guillotine. Whoever may be the Minister or Member, you make him sit down in the middle of his speech, when the clock strikes the hour. Instead of that, we may allot one day for each of the departments, and in this way we will have a very good discussion of all the Departments.

Another suggestion is that the Budget proposals must, first of all, be placed before the departmental sub-committees of this House, relating to each Department. They should scan the.....

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): You mean the Standing Committee.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I am sorry, I mean the Standing Finance Committee. The proposals must be scanned by the Standing Finance Committee. All the items may not be scanned in one year. They may be divided into three groups, and during the course of three years all the items may come under the scrutiny of the Standing Finance Committee. I made the suggestion a number of years ago. The present Finance Minister was not here during that period. I now request him to take this suggestion into consideration.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I take it that the honourable Member is suggesting something on the lines of the Estimates Committee of the House of Commons?

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: Yes. That is what I mean.

I would also urge that the Budget should not be a mere Central Budget or central finance proposals. I would say that before any Provincial Government or before any Provincial Minister introduces his budget he must consult the Central Finance Minister. Otherwise central financial assistance may be refused. As it is, we find over-lapping of taxes. After all, who pays? Whether it is Central tax, or provincial tax or local tax, it is the same community that has to pay it. These are only various agencies for the collection. So there must be some liaison. The Provincial Ministers must consult the Minister at the Centre. Take for instance the Health and Education Budget. There was some criticism here that we did spend enough. But have we got an idea of what the Provinces have spent? Therefore, in consultation with the Centre, their financial proposals and their budgets must be prepared.

Sir, I have done. I whole-heartedly welcome the proposals, though here and there they may require some modification, and I am sure the honourable Minister will be agreeable to these modifications, in the Select Committee.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): Sir, I want to raise one other important issue in the House to-day. Independence having been achieved, I do not think anybody should now grouse or complain against taxation. Tax is a better money. Money in the State coffers, according to my conviction, is a better money than any money in individuals' pockets. After all, this money comes from individuals to the exchequer of the State for the development of collective interests. I do not mind any tax. It may go to any amount. To me it will always be acceptable. I will never oppose any taxation. But at the same time, I want that the money which has been collected from each rich and poor, must be spent for the betterment of the people and must be usefully employed. I want to invite the attention of the House particularly to this matter. The time at my disposal is very short and I will not deal with many matters, though my points are many. Now, let us examine how this money is spent. A bulk of it goes to the Government Servants. In the old British days those who joined the State, including the Ministers, or rather they were advisers, or the I.C.S. people, joined because they wanted to make a living. So statecraft was also one kind of business. It also was an industry. People go to an industry to earn profit. So also they came to the State to earn a profit, and hence all this corruption in India. The British were here and they came to exploit our resources they therefore wanted to take home all that they could. Naturally those Indians too who served under them thought it to be their opportunity to keep from the British hands as much as they could, and for this they did not face any public condemnation. There is still a sort of the same feeling prevailing in the country. In the State people go in order to make their careers. I am not attributing any motive to the honourable Ministers. By State, I mean the whole structure of it. The people who join service do so just to have a career for themselves. Government servants come with the object of making their living as best as they can and their general tendency is to work less and expect more, i.e., take more advantage as is the case of the labourers in the factories. Just as Industrial labourers in spite of all reforms their unions, Syndicates and other organizations with the help of labour leaders have achieved for them, work less and demand more pay. The same is the case of Government servants, they are also labourers whether educated, technical or uneducated labourers. That sort of thing has to be changed now. Now since the State is a Nationalist State, every money which comes in to the state exchequer must be usefully employed in the common good of the society as a whole. My first objection is that we must, before demanding any increment in the taxes, first see to the items of expenditure and see whether it is being spent in the public good or is only benefiting individuals.

[Shri Mahavir Tyagi]

Now, Sir, as the honourable Sardar Ballabhbhai Patel in his note which he has supplied to us has mentioned, the strength of the Secretariat itself has increased by 468 per cent. that is, about 5 times as much as it used to be before the war. Sir, you can tax the people to any amount, but the tax-payer will also want to know why do you want an increase of 468 per cent. extra hands in the secretariat, when the British were able to carry on the administration with efficiency before the war with one fifth of the present strength. After all they wanted more vigilance, because the country for reasons of patriotism was set against them, they wanted more policing, because all of us were rebels, and they maintained quite a good order and carried on the administration of the State very efficiently with such a small number. Why then should we have such a big number?—Therefore, my first demand is that the strength of the Secretariat must at all costs be reduced to the pre-war level. That is the demand of the people, which I voice here. We have practically accepted every demand in the Budget. We have given what they wanted, but at the same time let them also give us what we want from them. I demand that they reduce their expenditure on Services to as much as it used to be before the war. Of course, dearness allowance and other things will be allowed as extra expenditure, but the strength of the Secretariat must be reduced. At present, there are in the Secretariat 7 rungs, the Secretary, the Joint Secretary, Deputy Secretary, Under Secretary, General Secretary, and Chief Secretary; there are so many categories, it is difficult to know what their different titles are, but no one will take final decisions. Files would pass from one table to another. I know of files and the Finance Minister may kindly contradict me, if I am wrong, because I am a man of 'contradictions' and I am always contradicted. My information is that the file goes from the Finance Department with an objection to a Ministry; it comes back again; then another one objection is raised and in that way files instead of getting finalised in the Finance Department go and come back some ten or 12 times. There are a number of files which have gone and come back 12 times. All the objections are not raised at the first instance. When one objection is clarified; then another Secretary raises another objection; it goes back and comes back and this is how the Secretariat offices work. My demand, therefore, is that their strength should be reduced and if you must have so many Secretaries—I may also understand that—then they should expedite the disposal of work. I think the proverb was not wrong that 'too many cooks spoil the broth' and this is what happens in the Secretariat. I do not attribute any motive or dishonesty or insincerity to them; they are good people but even good people become bad if they are not properly managed. Even the planets if they were without a method, I mean the Moon, Sun, Earth and stars would all clash with each other. The first thing that we have to do is to establish order in our Secretariat and reduce its expenditure. I do not want to dilate more on this subject. If you want more Secretaries, then give them the final authority to decide things, so that the business may be expedited.

Another submission is that the honourable the Finance Minister has been dealing with us slightly unfairly and when I say 'us', I mean the United Provinces. My constituency people are not satisfied with the treatment meted out to our province. As regards the distribution of income-tax, half is given back to various provinces. As everybody knows in this House, Sir, my province is the biggest as far as population goes and still more populations are being added to it but we receive only 19 per cent. of the pool and Bombay which is such a small province receives 21 per cent. of the pool. Bombay is luckier.

An Honourable Member: What is your contribution?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: If everybody is to receive according to contributions, then honourable members should not deny the waiving off of the taxes which the industrialists have contributed, and let the rich man who contributes more take more advantage. I believe in the ideal slogan of "from each according to his capacity, to each according to his need". My Province feels that it is being unfairly treated for a very long time. My province, I must say, has done much greater services to the people than other provinces have rendered. Today in my province there are thousands of republics, village republics organised. We have decentralised power on Gandhian lines. We have organized republics in all the places and then we have more than 5 lakhs of trained volunteers in villages; they are also trained in rifle shooting. This all requires expenditure. But when the question of money comes we are helpless. They also want us to procure more grains and give to other provinces. How can it be possible when you do not pay us our due share?

My third demand is that your accounts have not been audited. Why have the accounts not been audited so far? If they had been audited why a report was not placed on the table of the House? This is the responsibility of the honourable the Finance Minister. He has to explain to the House why he has not been able to do it. We are spending crores of rupees on the Audit Department (An honourable Member: 'You mean the Public Accounts Committee?'). I do not know whether it is the fault of the Public Accounts Committee or not, but they should have submitted a report, which should have been placed on the table of this House long ago. More than a year ago, it should have come before us. I therefore demand that the accounts must be audited and we must know and must be in a position to discuss the expenditure that you have incurred.

Then there is no planning. When we were in the Congress and fighting the British Government, we always said that our economy must be planned and our industries must be planned. I come from a hilly district where there are forests and jungles. The House therefore will excuse my 'forestry' manner of speaking. I submit that our industries and other activities are growing like the forests, a wild growth. Whenever it strikes to a Minister or a Secretary that such and such a thing should be done, it comes on the programme. For instance some Secretary has placed before the honourable Minister for Information and Broadcasting that there must be so many other radio stations. May be, some of my friends who are fond of good music have placed before the Minister their demands, and he has agreed to open a number of new radio stations. Is it time for music or radio or these luxuries? We must stretch our legs according to the length of the blanket. When we are hard up for money and we cannot borrow, why should we be spending people's money on things which could be avoided for some time? Our country can go on without broadcasting for the time being. When we become prosperous we can have radios and the like. At this stage what we have to do is to limit our needs and impose cuts in our expenditure. It is for the honourable Minister for Finance to tell his Colleagues that in the interests of the taxpayer extra expenditure should be reduced as much as possible. There must be a plan according to which every Department must expand. There must be a target fixed for every expansion in every Ministry. If a Department finds itself unable to reach that target within the time specified, the Minister in charge must have intellectual honesty enough to come before us and admit his failure and submit his resignation in all humility. The honourable the Finance Minister should put before this House, which represents the country, his five-year plan for every Department.

[Shri Mahavir Tyagi]

Another grouse of mine against the Finance Minister is that the villages have been totally neglected. We have not done anything for the villagers or for the improvement of the village industries while we do everything for the urban population. In such circumstances how can we expect the villagers to stand by us? My honourable friend Rafi Ahmad Kidwai has come out with a demand for crores for civil aviation. My opinion is that India must go slow. It is no use flying in the air when everything down below is slow. I can understand the development of aviation for military purposes. You may spend any amount for improving and adding to the air force. I have seen, during the war years, Chief Secretaries of Provinces and other I.C.S. officers—one among them is now a Governor in Pakistan—riding bicycles and freely moving among the people. Why should we suddenly develop higher standards of living for ourselves? We must set good examples for others to follow. If we here lay down high standards.....

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): You want to follow the example of Mr. Mudie? Do you know that gentleman?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Even 'gentlemen' sometimes do things which are really good and gentle!

Shri R. K. Sidhva: He was your United Provinces Governor once.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: In our province he was our servant. He was a Governor in your Province.

Sir, if we are to have peace in the land, we must either add to the income of the consumer so that he can go and purchase his requirements, or reduce his expenditure. If you reduce your own expenditure and set a good example of simple living, the humblest man can follow that example without fear of being laughed at. Simplicity must radiate from the honourable the Prime Minister and from the Treasury Benches. In this way we can give the poor people some relief. In many ways we can reduce State expenditure and if we do this, people will voluntarily copy us and be satisfied with less expenditure in their own homes.

Now I come to taxation. The provinces are going on increasing taxation in an unbridled way. Every little thing the ordinary man eats is being taxed. I request the honourable the Finance Minister to place before the House facts and figures relating to the incidence of taxation in the country. We ought to know that. In the absence of that information we are groping in the dark.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: The honourable Member has had 20 minutes.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Then, Sir, I will sit down now and take another opportunity to have my say.

Shri A. V. Thakkar: (Saurashtra): Sir, I was absent on the first three days when the general discussion on the Budget took place. Therefore I am taking this opportunity of drawing on the time of the House.

I thoroughly agree with you, Mr. Deputy-Speaker, in believing that the Budget is a balanced one between the rich and the poor. I do not consider that the additional taxation in postage as well as the additional taxation on coarse cloth is too much provided the poor man gets the benefit of it. At present Post offices are run on profit and therefore if the honourable the Finance Minister thinks that it is necessary to raise the price of post-cards from two pice to three pice I would not object on behalf of the poor man. But I am afraid I must say that our money is being spent in many other directions and is mis-spent or ill-spent in the directions in which it ought not to be spent. You are proposing to spend too much, as my friend Mr. Tyagi said, on civil aviation. You are proposing to spend money on the purchase of ships. Seven crores are reserved for the purchase of ships from abroad. You are spending money on adventures such as state trading which may result in loss. I am not a merchant acquainted with these things. But I must say that we are not spending enough on health and education and labour also.

The honourable the Finance Minister said in his Budget speech that he has 24.20 crores for the nation-building departments and enumerated five of such departments. He has included even the development of civil aviation among the nation-building activities.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): Is it not?

Shri A. V. Thakkar: I am afraid not, Sir, for this reason that it is meant for the rich only.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: The poor man also must have strong defence.

Shri A. V. Thakkar: I am talking of civil aviation.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: It has to be developed in order to make the air force strong for use when necessity arises.

Shri A. V. Thakkar: Our viewpoints differ. The motorcars were not subsidised by the State at all when they first made their appearance in the country and yet they have become very popular. Why should we subsidise civil aviation? Will not aviation develop in the country as did motoring?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: This is only a subsidy. Is it not better than maintaining the whole thing ourselves?

Shri A. V. Thakkar: We do not want to travel at 300 miles an hour. A speed of 20 to 30 miles an hour is good enough for us. It is a matter of opinion. I wonder why we are starving education and health? You have earmarked only 24.30 crores for the purpose of all the 5 nation Building Departments. This works out to 7½ per cent. of the total revenues of 322 crores. Is that enough? This 7½ per cent. I must point out, is for 5 departments, Education, Health, Civil Aviation, Scientific Subjects and Broadcasting. The poor man has only to hear, because you have not been able to make him read so he has to hear news on the radio. However, out of this 7½ per cent. on the total expenditure you have devoted only 1½ per cent. to Education. 1½ per cent. it is only one pice in a rupee; please bear it in mind. The other day our Education Minister complained that he would like to have 10 per cent of the Budget devoted to Education. I do not aspire as high as he does. I only aspire to 5 per cent—one half of what he aspires to. Instead of 5 per cent. even if you give 2½ per cent. the compulsory education of the poor man in the villages can get a start. At present it is kept at a standstill. It may be that the provinces are arranging for that. Yes, the rich provinces are, Madras, Bombay and other such provinces are. But the poor provinces can never go ahead with compulsory education without aid from the Centre. In fact, I go so far as to say that compulsory education must be made a concurrent subject between the Centre and the provinces; otherwise, there is no chance for universal education.

As regards the money devoted for health and medical purposes, you have already heard from our honourable Minister in charge of Health that she is working with a guilty conscience in being denied any money and still she is continuing working at it. It is a sad confession from a Minister in this House. Up to the day of independence, we were cursing the British Government for neglecting our nation-building Departments, but what are we doing now? Excuse me for saying this, it saddens me to say all this, but it is really so. If you raise the price of the postcard why did you not give a crore or two for health or education more than you have done? On the other hand, you have kept the same thing—almost the same thing, I would say. However, I leave the matter at that.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: Does the honourable Member know what is spent in the provinces, all told, on these two subjects?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Madras is spending Rs. 9 crores and U.P. Rs. 5 crores.

Shri A. V. Thakkar: Madras is spending 20 per cent of its income on education, still it is not able to meet the cost of compulsory education. Bombay is spending 16 per cent of its total Budget expenditure on education, still it is not able to meet it. But what are we doing at the Centre? We are giving lakhs and crores to colleges, universities, scientific institutions and all that, but we are giving not a single pie for compulsory education. That is my grievance, that is my rub and that is my anguish.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: Shri Arun Chandra Guha. It is now one minute to one. Does the honourable Member want to start now, or will he do so after Lunch?

Shri Arun Chandra Guha (West Bengal: General): I will speak after Lunch. My name is there.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: Yes, you will have your turn after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy-Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

Shri Arun Chandra Guha: Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, the budget proposals have been bitterly criticised by the members of the House. But, since the general debate on the proposals of this budget, the tone of criticism has somewhat gone down but the attitude of the Members of the House, I think, has not substantially changed. This is due not so much out of any lack of confidence in the Members of the Cabinet as out of a sense of frustration. For years we have been appealing to the people to strengthen the nationalist forces and to come and join the fight of national liberation; and Congress and these leaders have given them lots of promises. But Sir, we understand, we know that it is not so easy to achieve those ideals or to implement those assurances; but we are sorry to realize that there has not been any earnest effort to achieve those ideals which we have so long placed before us.

The Father of the Nation has taught us to think about the seven lakhs of villages of India. These budget proposals, particularly the alterations in the taxation proposals, suggests an outlook which does not look so much to the villages as it does to the upper classes living in urban areas.

Sir, the Finance Minister has told us that for finding more revenue he shall have to explore the avenues of internal excise, which means an indirect tax even on the essential necessities of life. I can understand that as the cost of production has increased, the rate of postcards may be increased. The excise duty on cloth is a different proposal; and the language in which the honourable the Finance Minister has put his proposals for excise duty even on coarse cloth, suggests that it has come to be something like a permanent factor in our economic structure. His argument seems to be that as cloth is of universal use; so it will be the easiest thing to tax and only in this way can our Government make up the loss accruing from the abolition of the salt tax. But in view of the fact that we have not been able to give any relief to the poorer classes in the villages of India, I doubt, Sir, if we have any moral right to tax them, even in the case of articles which are of the barest necessities for them. There is one political aspect of this also.

We know that there are some political parties in the country who are out to exploit all our deficiencies, all our weaknesses and failures, and to undermine the social structure that the Congress and the Government want to build up. These men will simply go to the villages and speak to the rural people there and tell them that their coarse cloth has been taxed, and the price of sugar and postcards raised, by their Congress Government I hope the Government will take note of this.

Another thing which has led to a sense of frustration is the costly nature of this Government. In the Jaipur Session of the Congress we have passed certain resolutions, and even after that the All-India Congress Committee office issued a circular that the entire nation should be conducted on the austerity basis. We take it that that is the standard which the Congress has set up not only for the people but also for the Government. But as a humble Congress worker, I would like to ask the Members here, if they can say that our Government machinery is really being run on an austerity basis. Sir, several speakers before me have put this feature in very eloquent terms and I would like the Government and our Ministers to try and see if they can really do something which can have at least some conformity between the ideals set up by the Congress and the works of the Central and Provincial Governments run in the name of Congress. There should be some conformity and consistency between these two. We have inherited this machinery from the previous alien Government. We have inherited along with this some practices also. The presenting of the Budget also is inherited from that government and the criticism that has been going on in this House, I am afraid, is also something like an inheritance which the Members of this House has got from the previous House. Some of the Members previously were sitting on the opposition side and I think most of us, whether new to the legislature or not, have not yet been able to overcome our natural tendency of criticism and opposition, for we have been so long conducting a bitter fight against the previous government, which after all we have been successful to remove. The Government that has stepped in has not just come up to our expectations and even though intellectually we may realise the difference in our emotion and sentiment, we do not.....

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): Sir, the honourable Member can speak for himself so far as his psychology is concerned but he cannot take the responsibility for the views of other Members of the House.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: You are also speaking for yourself.

Shri Arun Chandra Guha: Yes, I am speaking for myself as everybody does. In that way we have been moving in a somewhat vicious circle. The Budget, particularly the demands side of it, should have been subjected to greater scrutiny by the House. It is not possible for the whole House to scrutinise it but it can do it either in Standing Committees or in certain sectors or groups. All these demands should have been more minutely scrutinised. All the discussions have been more or less in the line of giving general ideas as to how the Government should frame their social and economic programmes.

[Shri Arun Chandra Guha]

I am a new Member of the legislature. This is the first experience of mine in a legislature and I was rather wondering when a Finance Bill was under discussion, how all sorts of things could come under it. From my experience of last year and the debate yesterday I can say that the discussion on the Finance Bill was not on proper line; it should have been particularly on the taxation proposals and the consequent financial condition of the country and the Government.

There is one aspect of the budget proposals not only of this Government but also of the provincial Governments. Every province has presented its own budget and the per capita expenditure varies from province to province—from Rs. 26 crores in Bombay to near about Rs. 4 or 5 crores in poorer provinces like Assam and Orissa. We belong to one country and we cannot create a sense of one nationality if such disparity is allowed to continue in the civil expenditure of the provinces. I do not know how that would lead to a sense of one country. One province may initiate the policy of compulsory primary education and another province may feel handicapped even to conduct the most ordinary routine work. I agree with Mr. Tyagi that it is not a question as to who contributes how much to the general revenue of the country as a whole; but there should be some parity between the provincial budgets, so that people of each province could have an idea of oneness of India and of having the same degree of amenities and same amount of nation building activities going on in all the provinces.

As for the taxation proposals as I have stated before they are framed too much from the point of view of city life and not from the rural point of view. This is reflected most pointedly in the disparity between the provincial revenues. There are provinces which have developed some big industries and which have developed more of urban life. They have greater revenues and the natural tendency would be that other provinces which are called backward will also try to emulate them and develop big industrial urban life neglecting their agricultural and rural life. Such an experiment was made in Britain and other European countries in the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries and they neglected their agriculture with the result that now they find themselves in a very difficult position. They are making amends for their folly. I hope our government will not make the same mistake and allow our agriculture to be neglected and the village life to be neglected. At the cost of village life if we build up an urban civilisation it would be a wrong policy and on the whole the budget proposals seem to me to be tending to that direction.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): Sir, in the years before the war one source of constant criticism both of the Central and Provincial Budgets was that the provision made for the nation-building activities was utterly inadequate not only from the point of view of the needs of this backward country but also from the point of view of the available revenues. With our present scale of expenditure where is the hope of building India after she has emerged out of her slavery and become free? But I do understand and I also realise that the internal and external security services have absorbed a good proportion of the expenditure in these difficult times during the last two years. Of course it may largely justify the undue pre-occupation with security but I fail to understand why a better place could not be given to these nation-building activities in this budget. My criticism is not so much with what has been but with what it to be. There is no indication even that we are going to plan for better things in the future—prevention of disease, medical relief, free compulsory education, etc. These are plans that would require our concentrated efforts. The realisation of even a modest standard in these things would perhaps take a quarter of a century and we have not even yet made a good beginning. We have chosen to give priority to a number of things. We never thought that due to our sheer inability to pool our food resources and distribute them equitably we have to enter into ruinous expenditure on subsidies and on imports. Nor did we ever think that our administrative services would consume more and more money and give less in terms of services. Sir, expenditure by itself would be no measure of our achievement. Social justice will have little meaning if it means equal poverty for all but not equal riches for all. During the debate on Demands I have heard practically every Minister appealing for larger funds for the activities of his Ministry. Specially two Ministers, the Minister for Education and the Minister for Health, have made appeals for larger funds. They expressed their inability and their helplessness. I only wish that their appeal would have fallen on the ears of the Finance Minister and that he would find his way to get the Committee agree to these proposals that a larger sum or a little more sum may be given for the activities of these Ministries. I have heard Thakkar Bapa who spoke before Lunch and he was also urging for the same. But my experience during the short time I have been in this House is that whenever we talk of education we hear Members and others saying that it is a provincial subject. The other day an honourable Member asked if really education is a provincial subject then why is it that a Ministry is there at the Centre and whether it is meant only for education in the Centrally administered areas. Our point is that though education is a provincial subject, the Provinces will come to the Centre very often for grants to Universities. We have seen how much money is earmarked in the Education budget for University education. Many backward regions like the States of Orissa, Chhatisgarh, Himachal Pradesh, Rajputana, Gujarat have all formed part of the Indian Union today. No thought seems to have been given for the education of these backward areas.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: But they have their own local resources. Their revenues do not come to us.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: It is the responsibility of the Centre. Also very little portion, a negligible portion, of this is being given to the education of the masses in the Centrally administered areas like Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Gujarat is not backward.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: It is. One point I wish to say in this connection is that we are giving so much money by way of aid and grants to the educational institutions and Universities. My primary quarrel is not why we are giving them. But when we have set apart so many lakhs of rupees for the purpose I wish that the Centre to the extent to which it makes grants should also have certain powers of control. If the Universities go wrong they should have a hand in and the power of setting right the policies or programmes followed by those Universities. We have been hearing so much about the Universities, that all is not going well with regard to several of the Universities. When the Centre is giving so much money by way of aid and grants to these Universities certainly we should see that the Universities follow a progressive course. I think the Universities which have become very orthodox in their outlook should be asked to keep themselves abreast of the times. I do not mind if the management of these Universities becomes in course of time a Central subject in the interests of several matters. (An honourable Member: 'It cannot be done').

In regard to the proposals in the Bill, so much has been said about the increase in postal rates. I think the criticism is right in a way. But the criticism is based mainly on two or three points. The first objection is that people who will not benefit by the air mail service will be paying for those who are getting the benefit. Another objection is based on a psychological ground. A third objection is raised on the point that this is a commercial concern and the suggestion is that it should take up the service mainly in the spirit of service and not in a commercial spirit with a view to making profits. These are the three objections raised. I think the psychological objection does not really matter very much because the villager's complaint is not that he is asked to pay much but that he is not having the amenities. If only we give an extensive service of the Postal Department I think he will have very little cause to grumble. But today we do not have the facilities and several villages have no post offices. There is lot of delay in the delivery of letters. My honourable friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri pointed out several difficulties of those Members who frequently write on several matters and I need not elaborate those difficulties here. I only wish to urge that the system should be extended with a view to giving more and more facilities from the point of view of the convenience to the villager. I understand that only 2,000 new post offices will be opened in the future. I do not think it will be adequate compared to the needs of the villager and the inconveniences caused to him. I appeal that the service should be undertaken mainly from the point of view of service and not from the point of view of making gains. Of course it can be said that several departments, say, the water supply department and other departments are making similar gains. But certainly this is the least that we can do to help the villager. The villager will not mind paying a little more if we are able to extend many of the facilities to the villager by arranging to have quicker delivery of his letters and also by placing adequate facilities and benefits of the post office at his disposal.

I have got to say one word about the duty on cigarettes. I am glad that it is a protective duty. But I understand that in last year's budget there was an import duty on tobacco and this year I expected that it would be enhanced a little more because I thought that it would minimize smoking, at least among juveniles. I know that there are Provinces which have enacted legislation prohibiting smoking by juveniles and the honourable the Finance Minister should have done some such thing.

An Honourable Member: What about women smokers?

Shri B. L. Sondhi: What about Begum Rasul?

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: Order, order. No personal references please.

Shri H. V. Kamath: To refer to women in general is no personal reference.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: It is not right to make a personal reference like that however humorous it is intended to be.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: I have particularly drawn the attention of the House that a little increase in the import duty on tobacco would have minimised smoking, at least among juveniles and I have made no particular reference to any section of the House. I know some Provinces which have passed laws prohibiting smoking among juveniles. It would have been a very good thing if only we had followed this.

Sir, I do not want to take more of the time of the House as there are other Members anxious to speak.

Prof. Shibban Lal Saksena (U.P.: General): Sir, I am very thankful to you for giving me this opportunity to speak on the Finance Bill. Before I commence my speech on the Bill I wish to say something about the manner in which we discuss the Budget. For the last nine days we have passed grants of about Rs. 340 crores, and as has been very clear to the House we have not been able to discuss the activities of the Government properly. In fact on one occasion, four Ministries were given only one day for discussing all of them. I hope that next time we will be able to see that each Ministry gets at least one day and that the Ministries of Defence and External Affairs get at least two days each. The Assembly should have full opportunity to discuss the budget proposals and to offer adequate criticism to the honourable the Finance Minister and other Ministers so that they may be able to give us next time a better picture of things. Besides, the present time limit of ten or fifteen minutes for each speaker is too short. No speaker should normally be pulled up unless he has exceeded half an hour.

ter and other Ministers so that they may be able to give us next time a better picture of things. Besides, the present time limit of ten or fifteen minutes for each speaker is too short. No speaker should normally be pulled up unless he has exceeded half an hour.

Coming to the Budget itself, I feel that much has been left for the Select Committee to do. As my friends here pointed out in the beginning, this Budget is not what we would like it to be. In my opinion the expenditure on 3 P. M. certain items should have been very much reduced. (An honourable Member: 'What are they?') I have already said that on Defence we can reduce the expenditure by about 37 crores because until we have a fully developed industrial supply behind our forces, it is no use spending too much money on the forces. Modern armies cannot be kept in the field by merely having a large number of men in a standing army. I would suggest the formation of more prantiya raksha dals and national militias as well as spending more money on developing the required industries so that we can at least to some extent realise our great industrial potential which alone can enable us to keep any large army in the field. So, there should be reduction in Defence expenditure by some 37 crores of rupees.

In the Civil Administration there should be a cut of at least 18 crores. From 7.5 crores before the war the expenditure on Civil Administration has increased to 48 crores, so that it is about seven times now. That obviously is too much. It must be reduced by at least 18 crores to bring it just to four times the pre-war figure, in order to equate it to the higher cost of living index.

I suggest we must stop food imports. I was glad to hear the announcement the other day that we shall have no food imports from 1951. I think even that date is too late. At best I can permit food imports for one year more and during this year we must make all efforts so that we can grow more food. We can give the amount spent on subsidies in helping cultivators to grow more food. We should also see that all other sources of food are fully exploited. I feel we are not making the most economic use of the food we have got. There are still so many dinners and parties and there are no restrictions on them. We are not trying to conserve our food in the manner we should. Seeing that these food imports upset all our projects and national plans, I think we should take special measures to see that food is not wasted and no food is imported after March 1950. In this way I think we can save about Rs. 100 crores from going out of the country in purchasing food, and we can reduce the subsidy this very year by at least 20 crores.

I also think that in taxes a large sum is evaded. If that is properly collected, I think we can easily increase our tax collections by 25 crores and thus have a saving of 100 crores in the present budget.

About the way in which the deficit has been met, I should say that some of the duties are such which a Congress Government at least should never have proposed. I cannot reconcile myself, in spite of all that has been said by the honourable Minister for Communications, to the increase in the price of post cards. It is the lower middle class who will have to suffer most; I don't think that we should raise the rate even if the service costs a little bit more. We are taxing the rich to help the poor, and if we have to give a subsidy for post cards I think we must do it and must not grudge the poor man's post card and raise the rate. I think this is a thing on which the whole country feels strongly. After all we do not get much; we hardly get anything by raising price of post card, and yet there will be a cry all over the country that we have raised the price of the poor man's post card.

There are two other things which are very much felt. Duty on matches is one. I would not mind the rise provided people got matches at control price. At present the blackmarket price is actually at least three or four times the actual price. The Finance Minister should see that matches are sold at controlled price. Then, of course, I would not mind this increase. But if it is to be added to the blackmarket price then it would be too much.

About the duty on coarse cloth; although I would not mind raising the duty on fine cloth, on coarse cloth it should not be raised. Blackmarket in cloth exists on a large scale and it should be abolished—though I know it cannot be done by the present policy of the Government. But if this increase is only to be added to the blackmarket price then it would be too much and too hard for the poor man and it should not be done.

About the other sources of income I have not much to say except that the amount of relief of about Rs. 6 crores given to the industrialists is really so much money wasted. From all the reactions of the industrialists and financiers we find they are not at all grateful for the relief given to them and yet we are losing a good amount of money for nothing. These measures could as well have not been taken and we should have continued to keep the taxes as they were.

Sir, I believe the Select Committee to which the Bill is going will try to see that its provisions are suitably amended and that we are able to present to the country a Budget which will be a Congress Budget and not what I think is at present an industrialists' Budget. This playing with our finances will not do. Our country has just emerged from slavery and we are still, in spite of our size, one of the weakest nations of the world compared to the great Powers like Russia and America. I have said before that our speed of development is too slow; when we compare the national programmes of other countries with our own, I am simply stunned. I read the speech of the honourable Minister for Transport and the promises which he made; I also read the five-year plan in Russia about transport. They are putting about 10,000 miles of new railways within the next five years. They will have reconstructed all the railway lines which they lost during the war and will increase them by about 7,000 miles by 1950. We have not yet probably been able to reconstruct the railway lines we dismantled during the war, not to say anything of increasing them. I feel that we must have a national plan as I said the other day, in which transport which is one of the bottlenecks, and industrial development, must have priority. It is really shameful that a country like India should be importing food worth 130 crores and that our yield per acre should be so low. The Food Minister stated that even though we are trying to increase the extent of our cultivation that is not the solution of our problems, that until we increase the yield per acre we will not be able to solve our problem. I know in our country the produce per acre is some times one-fourth or one-fifth of what it is in other countries. So, this is the most important problem to solve. Planning in food, planning in industrial development and planning in transport, these are the keys to our recovery. I want that the Finance Minister should try to do these things, formulate a plan and try to finance it. Even the Birla Plan had proposed 1,500 crores to be spent in the next fifteen years. Our Finance Minister was one of the authors of that Plan and I had hoped he would at least set apart that portion of the finances for development which he had proposed in that 15 year plan. But I find nothing. Instead he is spending away 100 crores out of the balances. In fact, our revenue is less than our expenditure by some 135 crores this year. I therefore think that until we try to take stock of our present position and determine the speed with which we want to proceed and attain our proper development. I do not think we will be able to live in this world. This is a world surrounded on all sides by men who are not very friendly to us. Unless we have got a strong army and a strong industrial potential and a higher income, we cannot exist.

I fully agree with what was said a little while ago that no nation can become great, unless every one of its inhabitants is physically and mentally healthy. But the amount of money spent on these development departments is far too low, and I think our Education Minister was quite right in asking that at least 10 per cent. of the money should be provided for Education, and similarly also for Health. Indeed, unless the nation's health and Education improve, our country cannot improve. Therefore I hope that next time when the Budget is prepared, it will provide funds for allround development according to a plan. The other day the Finance Minister told me in regard to my reference to the great advance made in Russia that it was also due to the profit motive. In reference to the Stokhanov movement also to which he referred, he said the achievement was due to the profit motive. But it is not so. There they have combined in a wonderful manner patriotism with extreme eagerness for national development and their own country's greatness in the world. I do not mind his analysis of motives if he tries to make our country also great in the same way, or if he tries to increase the total production, to increase the production of our workers, by using all the motives which other countries have made use of for increasing their output.

I hope all these suggestions will be taken into consideration and next time we will have a really good budget. I hope also that the Finance Minister will take advantage of the criticisms offered in this House in preparing his next budget.

I support the motion for reference to the Select Committee.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Sir, these are days of rationing, rationing of food, rationing of cloth, rationing of time and rationing of discretion and judgment, and I have been long standing in the queue in the hope of receiving my dose. I was nearly going to be starved, but for your generosity in calling me up now. I am not one of those who want to butt in during the discussion every now and then, because we have been long enough here enjoying the pleasure of listening to our own voices. Therefore, unless we feel that there is something about which we have to speak plainly and bluntly, we will not speak. Unless I feel that way, there is no urge for me to stand out and waste the time of the House.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: That is the case with every one.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I am speaking for myself only. I do not presume to speak for Mr. Sidhva of all my friends here. Mr. Sidhva is a party by himself.

Sir, the present administration is going on upon the force of and the velocity of the previous administration. That velocity cannot be resisted by the present set-up of the Government. Simply we are carrying on on the force that was generated by the Government in 1946. So there is no use blaming any set of individuals for the circumstances in the country. The Finance Minister is in a very difficult position. He is trying to lift the country out of the morass and the mess into which it has fallen. He wants money. But when the Government goes to the market, the public will not subscribe. The capitalists, the people who have hoarded large volumes of currency, they will not co-operate with the Government, they do not come out and subscribe for the loans. They have indeed beaten the Government and they have compelled the Government to show them concessions with a view to see that their huge hoarded money comes out. As I spoke in the opening of the general discussion on the Budget, Sir Archibald Rowlands gave Rs. 60 crores to these very financiers and he could not reap any profit out of it. Now the present Finance Minister has come out with a much smaller amount and it remains to be seen what response he gets, and how far his hopes and expectations will be realised from these very gentlemen who have not very much changed in their outlook. The Finance Minister has got large development schemes, but our money is all held up. In one respect it is blocked up in England, in regard to the sterling balances. You can only draw it out in certain amounts and over a small period of years. You cannot draw it out or make use of it for the purpose of raising a corresponding loan in the open market. Therefore we are obstructed in two ways. Internally we are not able to raise sufficient money, and externally we are unable to use the credit which we had built up by hard sacrifice. In these circumstances, the Budget is bound to be a sort of hand-to-mouth one, one which simply keeps things going on the rails without a break-down.

There is, of course, the taxation of the small man, but I do not want to dwell upon it because I do not want to repeat the arguments which have been already advanced. The Finance Minister is also helpless. He is seeking the advice of 22 wise men of the House, in the Select Committee to give final shape to his proposals.

Our present Budgets—both the Railway Budget and the General Budget—come to about Rs. 500 crores and the national income is over Rs. 2,500 crores. So nearly one-fifth of the income is collected by way of taxes. If we raise the standard of our country, and improve the national income by double, if you improve the national income to about 5,000 crores, the national budget will also correspondingly improve, and in the near future if we succeed in our plans, the budget may come to Rs. 1,000 crores a year. But to achieve that we require planning. The Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister told the House recently when their demands came up for discussion that they have rescued the country from the post-freedom perils, the unsettled state and the riots, and general disorders. The country is now internally safe, and perhaps also safe from any external trouble. Now is the time when we should consider how far we can advance on the road to progress.

Sir, all these Departments have been working in the usual old style. The red-tapism which everyone is condemning is still there. During the war, the administration has been carried on more by discussions than by files. But now you have got a tier of Secretaries, Superintendents, Assistant Secretaries, Deputy Secretaries and so on. The Secretaries and all of them noting one after another on the files, so much so that the quantum of service was the quantum of disposal of files and the Government of Madras has said that a Secretary must dispose of 6-34 files a day. Sir, is this the yardstick with which to measure the achievement or out-put of our high-paid officials? Not the amount of practical result that has come out, but the number of files disposed of. You have got man-hours for labourers, and you also have units for industrial production. But there is no unit by which you can measure the work that is turned out by these high officials of the Government except the number of files that they dispose of. I would suggest that there should be a Co-ordinating Minister for every two or three Departments, and this Minister should go about to other Ministries and see that it does not take more than five or six days for the final disposal of the files.

Shri Jaspat Roy Kapoor (U.P.: General): You want a new Ministry with secretaries attached to it?

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I want these ministers among themselves to redistribute the work and do it. Therefore, what I want to suggest is that there should be a thorough overhaul of the administrative set up of this Government. The Prime Minister cannot be burdened, situated as we are with any particular portfolio, especially the portfolio of External Affairs. He must be relieved of that. He must be a super-minister presiding over all the ministers, get into daily contact with each minister and see how results are being achieved in his department. I do not know why there is no Ministry for Planning. We have got a big Ministry for Industries and Supplies; it has got 27,000 people working in the Department, with Secretaries, Deputy Secretaries and Joint Secretaries, a whole paraphernalia of a huge establishment and what is the total achievement for the year? With regard to Sindhri Factory and a factory for making small mathematical instrument, the total expenditure is 20 crores of rupees. It is a mountain in trouble bringing in a mouse and with regard to other things, they are controlling cement, and iron and all these things; they have a number of purchasing missions in England and America; these are cushy jobs and eminent politicians have gone to America as leaders of purchasing missions and businessmen will always like to be on these missions and it is a very fine job. If you advertize in all the various papers, all the industrial producers will come here in quest of custom and there will be no need for these missions. I want to draw the attention of the honourable Minister to this that when there is a purchasing mission in America to negotiate for certain articles and goods that are required for a particular department, over and above the head of that mission, the Secretary of the Department goes and again negotiates and duplicates the same work that is being done. These are the things that have to be examined. This Department of Industries must be a real Department of Planning for this Government and for this country and see how far we will be able to achieve a 10 years plan in the matter of developing all the industries of the country. You have started an Industrial Finance Corporation and I see that is a mere technical Corporation which has disbursed a meagre sum of 1.8 crores during all these years.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: It is over 2 crores.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Of course, I am sorry, I have made a mistake of 2 crores in that. This is tinkering with the problem. We do not seem to have realized the liability. I do not blame anybody because we are hardly out of the troubles which were created for us by the situation of this partition. With regard to other Ministries also, I want to say this. The Ministry of Defence must be split up into the Ministry for Air, the Ministry for Land Forces and the Ministry for Naval Affairs. Do not mistake that we are creating a large number of ministries for finding jobs for people. I would like to impress upon my honourable friend Mr. Gadgil that there won't be division of power with regard to his Department; he can be the supreme lord of his Department, but what I suggest is that in a country like England, there are 62 Ministries, 24 ministers of Cabinet rank and 40 others, people who are taken out from the political life of the country, trained and fitted for public work. Here, our Government is a Government of the people run by the Bureaucracy for the people with the Heads of Departments as Ministers. I must tell you they are the real advisers and they have greater status than your Deputy Ministers; some of your Secretaries have greater status than your Deputy Ministers and have greater influence than your Ministers of State. (An honourable Member: 'England has no provinces.') Never mind that; they have got a big empire. What I want to say is that there should be a Ministry of States and Home. Home is a big affair. With the Communists in the offing, creating trouble all over India, is our Central C.I.D. fully developed and equipped to detect the crimes properly and to get at those leading communists who are underground today? All the leaders of the Communist Party have either escaped from the jails or have escaped from being arrested, and is the Central C.I.D. running them down to earth? We want to develop something like the Scotland Yard of England and such as those which are being developed in France and America by which we can deal with the criminals that are going to subvert our newly born State?

I do not want to take much time of the House, but I submit we should be thinking on these lines of re-organising the Government and look far ahead than merely to carry on the Government as we are doing for the past two years. When you go before the people and ask for a renewal of the confidence in us, what is the great achievement which we could show to our people? (An honourable Member: 'Nothing') It is easy to say 'nothing' but the country has been saved from internal trouble. Really the grit and the power and the strength shown by the Central Government has warded off many a danger to this country and now that we have achieved some stability with regard to our internal security, this is the time for planning.

We have been going about beating the word "Secular State" to death. Everybody has got his own interpretation of the word "secular", but have our leaders got any conception of what form this State should take? Has India got a culture, has India got a civilization, has India got a future role in history to play, and if that is that, it must be embodied in the actions, lives, ideas and thoughts of our leaders. Whenever you think of safeguarding the culture of this country, let us not forget that the culture is something which has to be preserved and handed down to future generations. (An honourable Member: 'Entrust it to Province'.) Sir, it required a Griffiths to translate our Vedas; it required a German Savant Maxmuller to discover the greatness of the Upanishads and when these Western Savants have told us that there is an imperishable glory in the religious lore of this country, it is our duty, as representatives of the people to preserve it, to enhance it and to hand it down as the greatest gift for civilization and humanity. What is this Government doing? The education of this country must be shaped by people who have got an inherent faith in the culture of this country and that has to be developed in all its aspects, both in its artistic as well as its cultural aspects. That is the duty which we should not forget. I find I have not directly dealt with the details of the financial proposals, which have been talked about all these days by all the Members of this House, but I hope I will be excused for taking this liberty of bringing these points before the Government and I wish—I do not know whether other Ministers would at least hear from others—that some of the Members have spoken like this, if they do not read our speeches.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Sir, I was really surprised when my name was called at the fag end of the day, though I have been waiting for long.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: The honourable member asked me not to call him at all.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: I am only thanking you, Sir. I do not think that I have got any new points and honourable Members have already covered many points. I want only to refer to certain observations made by honourable Members. Members referred that there is lack of co-ordination between the Central Budget and the Provincial Budget. You, Sir, also said that the Provincial Revenue Minister must come up and we must have discussions before the Finance Minister presents a budget. I for one am totally opposed to this idea of provincial budgets being subjected to previous consultations. There are many practical difficulties, Sir, and I do not think the Provincial Governments will agree to this course. After all, subjects are allocated specifically and there is no reason why the Provincial Governments should come before the Centre for any previous consultation. It will be cutting at the root of Provincial Autonomy if such a precedent is allowed to be practised. For one thing, Sir, in Madras they have gone ahead with the prohibition. I am glad and proud of that. Though not directly, the Central Government advised that they may go slow, but the Madras Government have gone ahead with prohibition with wonderful results, and therefore, oftentimes such conflicts might arise and it is not desirable or advisable that they should come up to the Centre for previous consultation.

Sir, in this Budget, I particularly welcome the abolition of salt duty once and for all. One honourable Member suggested that the salt duty might be revived. I remember Mahatma Gandhi stating that people might grow insane to think of reviving salt duty. I am happy, Sir, that the salt duty is discontinued, I hope, once and for all.

I particularly welcome the duty on cotton cloth. There is already 25 per cent. ad valorem on superfine cloth and 6½ per cent. on fine cloth and quarter of an anna per yard on coarse and medium cloth. You, Mr. Deputy-Speaker, supported the measure and I agree fully with you, Sir.

There is one other aspect which I wanted to stress and for this purpose I was anxious to have an opportunity to speak. The incidence of taxation is no doubt very small, as you rightly pointed out. It is only quarter of an anna per yard. But along with the idea of taxation, there is one other important fact which the honourable the Finance Minister has mentioned in his note, viz., that it will be a sort of indirect help to the handloom industry. I would like to dwell at length on this matter, particularly as South India is a centre of handloom industry. It is going through a great crisis and this quarter of an anna, a small duty on cloth, I am afraid, may not help to any great extent to save the handloom industry from total extinction. I understand that there are six lakhs handlooms in the Madras Presidency and about 10 people working on each loom. That means, 6 million people are working on handlooms. Already, there is a plethora of handloom cloth in Madras. In this connection I had a question put to the honourable Minister for Industries and he was pleased to say that handloom cloth was exported from Madras. That is so. Whenever people talked of scarcity of cloth, it was to scarcity of mill cloth that people referred to. But handloom cloth cannot face the competition of mill cloth. I am very glad that, very recently, they have allowed the export of handloom cloth to other countries. But what is the result? If anybody looks into our export trade figures, he will find that there is very little scope for handloom cloth. The markets are all closed for handloom cloth. Foreign countries have switched over to other varieties of cloths. The result is that we are unable to find demand for our handloom cloth outside India. In Madras they held recently a conference of co-operative societies dealing in handloom cloth. Large quantities of this cloth are lying unsold. People do not know what to do with them. The position has become almost critical. It is an obvious truth that handloom cannot stand competition with cloth from the mills. It is just this thing about which Mahatma Gandhi said that the life of all these people depends on the non-existence of mill cloth. Therefore, if you do not take sufficient measures in time, I can prophesy that within a short period of time the handloom industry will become totally extinct. Today, in Madras, there is already a large quantity of unsold handloom cloth. Not only that; there is plenty of mill cloth also coming to the market. There is no demand for that too.

Recently an official of a Bank told me that he was not able to clear a Bill from the Ahmedabad mills for a long time with the result that he had to pay demurrage ultimately. These facts must be taken into consideration by the honourable the Finance Minister and see the handloom industry is saved from extinction. I do not mind even a greater increase of duty on cloth. But then I may be asked, 'Will you not be hitting the poor man if you increase the duty on coarse cloth?' My answer thereto will be to direct attention to Mahatma's writings in a book called 'Cent per Cent Swaraj'. He wonders 'Why anybody should think of a cloth as dear, when we are taking into consideration only the actual wages of labour for 8 hours of honest work. After all, I am concerned with the poorer set of people who are without employment and therefore when you say that this cloth is dear, there is no point in that. No doubt, it is true from your selfish point of view of purchasing cheaper cloth, but for one moment think that there are thousands of millions of people who are working on looms to make the cloth you are purchasing and whom you are almost driving to starvation. Therefore this kind of duty will be justified on the ground that if people will be forced to purchase handloom cloth, that will be giving employment to those who are engaged in the handloom industry. It is only from that point of view that I support the duty on cotton cloth made in mills.

There is another matter to which I want to refer. The honourable Member Mr. Mody said that there was a lot of money in the villages. I do not know to which villages he was referring. I do not know the case with the villages in Bombay. But some ten days back I had been to my village and I can give the House the economic position as I found it there. My visit to the village was in connection with selling the little paddy I had to the Government. There was the procuring agent of the Government present; but he had no money to pay for the article and asked whether he could pass a pro-note to me. Look at the absurdity of the position? I waited for two or three days and then the official sent another procuring agent to me. Then I made enquiries and found that people were selling paddy at rates lower than the control price. Last year it was the other way about. The procuring agent was ready at my threshing floor with money to buy my paddy. The black-market price was then double the control price. But today, as I said, control price is higher than the prevailing rate. Therefore I think that the honourable the Finance Minister is right when he says that the prices are likely to fall in the near future. This shows that there is no money available in the rural parts. I cannot speak with authority about the other villages. But I know that the same thing is happening in the Tinnevely district. Then while at Madras an official narrated to me the same story; he told me that reports from Tanjore district also showed that control prices were higher than the market rates. Some three months ago there was plenty of money in circulation. But now particularly in the villages there is no money. That accounts for the low prices and prices below the control level. I may be asked: "What has happened to all the currency notes in circulation?" I am not a currency expert, but I feel that the reason is the fear of depression. On account of this fear people are wisely keeping the money in their hands tight.

It is not the total money that counts, but the velocity with which money circulates. That velocity has now stopped. That circulation has now stopped. The money is already there, but people—fearing the depression will be on soon—do not want to invest, they do not want to send the money again into circulation. They have stopped the circulation, with the result that the depression is coming on. Therefore, Sir, I would request the honourable the Finance Minister to take into account the downward trend and adjust his measures accordingly.

I would also like to refer to the postal rates. Really, psychology plays a large part in this. I see no reason why the surcharge on air mails should be abolished. For one thing, the richer types of people when they like to have their mails sent by air may like to pay surcharge. I do not mind if the surcharge is increased. I would like the Select Committee to increase the surcharge on envelopes or even on postcards. If anybody wants his mails to go quickly, let him pay higher charge. There is the other difficulty also. After all, Government have said that they would carry only 25 per cent. of the mails by air, and it is rather difficult to sort out which 25 per cent will be sent by air. So the surcharge idea is very good and there is no reason why it should be abolished.

There is one other aspect and I am done. There must be, as Mr. Tyagi said, economy in the administration of Government. The Economy Committee has already submitted its recommendations. Last year, if I remember aright, the then Finance Minister said that he proposed or intended to give effect to the recommendations as and when interim reports were received. That was the assurance he gave us. I see no reason why the change in Minister should be responsible for giving up the idea of giving effect to the recommendations as and when they are received. If that assurance had been kept up, it would have been well. The idea of submitting the recommendations to the Standing Committee is not, in my view, quite desirable or advisable. It is for the Government as a whole, and the Cabinet, who can come to quick decisions. I would therefore request that Government might take into consideration the Economy Committee's proposal and give effect to their recommendations as early as possible.

Shri K. M. Munshi (Bombay: General): Sir, though very late in the day, I may take this opportunity of congratulating the honourable the Finance Minister on the soundness of the outlook which has characterised his Budget this year. It may be that my view may not be shared by some Members in this House, but I know and I say this with my knowledge of the feeling in the country, that this Budget has done more to steady the panic in the country and to stop the rot in the economic structure than the last two Budgets that were placed before the House. I am not saying this for giving an ordinary compliment, but I know the feeling, the impression, particularly among those circles which have to deal with industry and commerce. If the honourable Member continues the course which he has adopted, with courage, I have no doubt that the country would have turned the corner in a year's time. I do not remember the facts and figures, but during the last six months even the inflation has received a set-back, and if the policy that he has been pursuing since last September succeeds, we would have turned the corner—if, of course, the food problem is ultimately solved. I do not want therefore to do anything more than draw the attention of the honourable Member to two or three matters which I consider of grave moment and to which I think the Government should apply its mind.

In the speech made by the honourable the Finance Minister—I find a reference to a legislation which he proposes to bring—about the power of the Income-Tax Investigation Commission to come to an agreed settlement. I think it is a measure which should find a place on the Statute Book as early as possible. Whatever the enthusiasm with which we ushered in this Commission, it had a most deleterious effect on the industry and commerce of this country. I hate black-market as much, if not more than, most of the members or anybody in this country. With my intimate knowledge of it...

Honourable Members: Your intimate knowledge of it?

Shri K. M. Munshi: Yes, my intimate knowledge of it as one who had a fair share of practice as an income-tax lawyer, as one having to do with crimes and as one giving advice even to officials, if you please, at some stage or the other, how to make black money white...

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Black-marketeers also?

Shri K. M. Munshi: Yes, certainly. But when I say this, I say it in this sense, that it is perhaps the greatest danger to the credit of the Government and the financial structure of the country, and therefore this new legislation, I submit, should be brought on immediately. If you go on holding long enquiries into 1,500 or 15,000 cases, nothing is going to come out of it. Most of the money that was being utilised in industrial development has already gone into diamonds and gold and what not, which neither the King's Army nor King's men will be able to pull out for you. It is therefore much better that the Treasury should gain a few crores immediately and people set going to do whatever they like with their money, rather than that this investigation should continue for endless time. I am very glad therefore that this proposal has been placed before the House and I would only request the honourable the Finance Minister not only to bring the legislation early—if possible, this session—but to see that the Commission is given wide powers of making settlement without going into detailed examination of books of account for ten or fifteen years, or looking into every conceivable penny which might be hidden somewhere in the country. That is my first submission.

With regard to the second one, one thing which I want to draw the attention of the House and the honourable the Finance Minister to is the growth of the black market in this country. If anybody believes or hopes or thinks that it is being restricted, I beg to differ. In the past, as the House knows very well, black market came into existence because of the heavy super tax and the excess profits tax and the policy of putting more money into the hands of industrialists that the late Government followed during the war. Later on came the controls and though we may have to keep the controls...

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: No.

Shri K. M. Munshi:.....I for one am of the opinion that black market will go on increasing every day that you maintain the controls.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Hear, hear.

Shri K. M. Munshi: I venture to say and I said it to more than one Minister, that if the process of black marketing is traced, at no stage is it possible without the active cooperation or willing acquiescence of somebody in authority or other. At the present time we are in the throes of what I may call a "national epidemic"—Members will forgive me if I use a strong word. The national epidemic is this: we want with frantic speed to cover all spheres of life by legislation, not here, but in the provinces. We want to deal all at once with all spheres of life which so far were not considered legitimate spheres for legislation. There is also added to it an exuberant enthusiasm to convert as many moral lapses as we can into crimes. I do not want to tire the House within the ten minutes that I have with a detailed list of legislations. If the House wants it, I can give it. But most of the legislation which comes out of the provinces day after day is not intended to do the legitimate work of legislating for the rights and obligations of citizens, but in some way or other to carry out moral reform, this frantic speed takes the shape of converting everything into a crime. If a moneylender's Bill is passed, it is therein prescribed that the interest charged shall not be more than say six per cent. But I am a needy man. My wife and children are hungry. The lender wants seven per cent. I will give him any amount of black-market money rather than carry out your law. That is happening every day in Bombay.

I can give you as many such instances from every province. The detailed control of life which we try to foist upon the people is leading to a huge and ever-increasing black-market. It will never come to an end, till the Central Government decides once for all that the controls must have a limit and that this limit must be scrupulously observed. If people have to be made morally reformed, it may be by educational methods, but not by turning them into potential criminals.

We talk of corruption in the police, among the other services. But has corruption ended in any service? With great respect, Sir, it has not. Only it is becoming a fine art and with every new feature of the fine art another black market comes into existence. You thus slowly destroy the economic structure of the whole country. I say this with a certain amount of solemnity because I see it every day more and more clearly unless the Central Government with all its moral authority and the tremendous influence it has in the country says that the legislative processes should be confined within legitimate spheres and that we are not going to convert this country into a reformatory by converting every moral lapse into a crime, we are going to head for an economic disaster, what a huge black-market involves and, which no legislation, no educational system and no pious speech is going to cure.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Is my honourable friend against all moral values?

Shri K. M. Munshi: I am not against moral values. But I am pointing out that converting a moral lapse into a crime, or rather what a Ministry considers a lapse from moral values into a crime is fraught with danger. The vigorous effort that is being made to do it is taking the country to a stage when there will be a complete black market functioning in the whole country, except of course in the legislatures where speeches can be made attacking black-marketeers and where every man can apply the healing unction to his soul that he has vindicated the moral values. But these are the facts. I repeat, it is only the Central Government, with its tremendous authority and influence, that can step in and say that our legislation shall be restricted to the proper sphere of adjusting the legal rights and obligations, may be for some time. Please reform the country but let there be priorities. Let us have food first. Let our Government recapture its financial credit: Let business and industry flourish: and then there will be time to convert the country into a reformatory.

There is one thing more, and I have done. It is a matter on which I would like to speak, in greater detail to Ministers. Sir, I do feel that our Army deserves—and I speak with a full sense of responsibility—a little consideration at the hands of this House and the Government. I am referring, Sir, to the reduction in the salary of the officers of the Army. I have during the last year and a quarter, come into close contact with many officers of the Army from Lieut.-Generals down to the ordinary private, and I know, and I am sure you will endorse my view that a better and a finer army does not exist in the world. It is this army which solved the problem of refugees: it is this army that maintained our reputation in Kashmir: it is this army that solved your Hyderabad problem: and I have a feeling—and I only speak it in public not for any other reason except that I feel overwhelmed with the responsibility for it—that there is a feeling among the officers with regard to the reduction in their pay. It is unfortunate. We might have fixed it from various valid considerations. But the psychological factors count today, and in the present condition of the country, if there is one service which has stood so far, and will stand in the future, between the country and chaos it is the Army: and I appeal to the honourable the Finance Minister—and I am glad to find that my friend, the honourable Minister for Defence is also here and I appeal to him too—to bring the fullest influence that they can upon the Cabinet. You cannot allow this splendid service of ours, or even a section of it, to remain under a feeling that their salaries have been cut down. It may be that looking to the various conditions in this country—the average occupation and the average income of the average man—the feeling may not be justified. That is not the question. The point is, is there a feeling or not? If there is a feeling that feeling ought to be removed.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: But is it justified?

Shri K. M. Munshi: It is not a question of justifiability. If you want their morale to be maintained and their efficiency to be maintained: if you want them to feel happy—the one service which stands between you and chaos—then you ought to have this feeling removed, whatever may be the price that we have to pay.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: My friend was not present in the House when the Budget was discussed and when this question came up.

Shri K. M. Munshi: I am very sorry if I am speaking outside my sphere. But as I say, we have tided over most of our difficulties, thanks to our leaders and our Members in Government. Our only two difficulties are with regard to food and Communism and both of them to a large extent are allied questions. In any future struggle that we may have for national existence, the Army is our valuable asset and I would appeal to the Treasury Bench and to my friend, the honourable the Finance Minister not to tighten his purse strings with regard to it. In some way this feeling must be removed, if possible psychologically and without making payments because he is a financial wizard and he might be able to do it—if not by other more substantial means. This feeling has been growing for a long time—at least for one year and a half—and it is I think high time it was removed.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I am sorry, Sir, that I am obliged to speak after my friend has just closed on a note on which I am not in agreement.

Shri H. V. Kamath: On a point of order, has the salutary rule of silence been broken once and for all?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: It is not a point of order. It is left to the Speaker, the presiding officer to decide.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: There is no rule either way.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I have very great respect and affection for my friend, Mr. Munshi but somehow or other unfortunately for me I have found that Mr. Munshi has been taking up rather a conservative attitude in regard to social matters in this country.....

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Which is necessary!

Shri K. M. Munshi: This is the first time I have had a compliment!

Prof. N. G. Ranga:with the result that my friend finds himself defending the champions of capitalists and the officers of the Defence department. It is time that responsible people like him should try and put in a word in favour of those decisions already taken by the Government, especially where the Defence Forces are concerned, because the Defence Forces as he ought to know are rather very sensitive to what is being said in this House, and if they are not made to feel that this House is extremely anxious to economise on every front in the interests of the common man, for whom my friend does not seem to have very much respect, the Defence Forces are likely to go on developing and nursing that psychological attitude which they at one time were helped to develop while others were in power in this country and might be unwilling to give up this even after freedom has come. At the same time I am not second 4 P. M. to him in my admiration for our defence forces or in my anxiety to keep our defence personnel in a proper mood of satisfaction and also feel that they are really performing a patriotic duty. I would certainly be the first man to try and accommodate my friends in the defence forces, not only the officers but also the ranks, even in regard to financial matters, the moment the country is in a position to make more grants to them or set apart more money for them. But as things are today we find ourselves in a financial morass. Member after Member has got up and said "What is it that you are doing? Why do you spend so much money?" There were many Members who were complaining against the huge amount of money that is being spent on the defence forces. Surely does my honourable friend Mr. Munshi seriously contend that we should set apart another ten crores for the defence forces in order that these officers might be contented and to satisfy this psychological feeling which they had developed in earlier days.

Shri K. M. Munshi: It would be 1/20th of it.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: My friend was rather strong against provincial ministries for having undertaken so much of social legislation. I would like to know what social legislation he had in his mind. I know of one piece of social legislation about which I was very keen and against which he had pleaded with all his vehemence and great abilities, both legal and otherwise, with the result that unfortunately in my province, our tenants, our kisans, were obliged to agree to our Government paying much bigger compensation to the zamindars, which they never deserved at all. I am obliged, in spite of my admiration for my friend, to be rather sceptical whenever he makes any such proposal.

Now coming to the budget itself, usually it has been the case with many of us to take the public into our confidence as soon as the financial proposals are published and say to the public whether the Budget was more for the poor, or for the rich. All these 16 or 17 years we had got into the habit of saying that the Budget is all for the rich and in those days it was always for the rich, because the British Government was beholden to the rich and so they had to satisfy them. We have followed the same practice and have also condemned this budget both in the press, through press statements, and also in this House by speeches that this budget is only for the rich and it has not made any concessions to the poor and so on. As the House knows I am always very keen on getting as many concessions as possible for the poor but at the same time I must also realise that every year if every budget goes on making concessions to the poor, peasants, workers and others, then what happens. We will come to a stage when the poor people—the working classes, the peasantry the industrial workers and others—need not have to pay anything at all to the State and only the others will have to maintain the whole of the State. Will that be possible? Anyhow as things are today in the kind of society that we live in, would it be possible for any Finance Minister to levy all the taxes upon the rich people only and no tax on the poor? Why do I say this? Because a concession has been made to the poor but it was made two years ago, because of the influence of the Indian National Congress. That was a big concession indeed. It meant six crores of rupees. (An honourable Member: 'Ten crores'.) I am sorry, it meant ten crores of rupees per annum. I refer to the abolition or the elimination of the salt tax.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: It is a concession to everybody, not only to the poor.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: It was in the name of the poor people that we always pleaded that the salt tax should go and it was for the sake of the poor people that it was abolished. It was for them that Mahatma Gandhi pleaded for its abolition and it has been abolished. What other taxes shall we think of? Year after year if we go on abolishing all these taxes what is it that we will be left with?

One of my friends has been saying this morning that the administration is top-heavy and so much money is being wasted. I would have understood the complaint if it had been made on earlier occasions, either during the general discussion or even at the time of the discussion on the demands for grants. When the grants were being discussed I dare say the House remembers how it reacted to the demands for the various Ministries. When the Home Minister came here what response did we give him? We were in a mood to give him much more money than what he wanted. When the Industry and Supply Minister was telling us what he was doing in trying to establish so many State factories for the production of iron and steel, synthetic dyes, petroleum and various other products, we were all admiration for him. When the Labour Minister came before us we were complaining that they have to do so many other things for which the House was prepared to give the money. When the Health and the Education Ministers came here no less a man than Thakar Bapa himself got up and said that he was weeping in his heart to hear their account and asked the Government why they did not give so much more money and why they were satisfied with so little. If we go on like that, it is certainly not open to us at this stage to go back and say that the Finance Minister should have been more vigilant over the public purse and should not have wasted so much money.

Let us take the Defence Department. Just now my honourable friend has spoken nicely about it. We also spoke in a similar vein on the Defence Demands except my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva who was able to make some detailed suggestions in regard to certain aspects of army expenditure. Every other member was all praise for the Defence Minister as well as his department and we were prepared to place more money. Let me tell you that I am myself in favour of strengthening our defences, not only the defence but also the police. One of my friends, Mr. Tyagi, was this morning criticising why there should be such a strong police in this country. Indeed I want a stronger police in this country. So I am one with Mr. Tirumala Rao as well as Mr. Munshi that the police should be strengthened. If we do not spend more money on the police then we will have to develop the Prantiya Raksha Dal and similar organisations through which we can get cooperative service from the masses and in that way strengthen the internal security of the country. The most important thing in the country today first of all is to help our people to be alive, so that they can enjoy civil liberties. Are there any civil liberties in any other part of the world nearby? Are there any civil liberties in Burma today? Are there any civil liberties in Malaya? Are there any civil liberties in China? There are no civil liberties, why? Because there is the Communist menace which is gradually spreading its tentacles over the whole world and gaining control over larger and larger population centres of the world. Do you want that our country too should become a prey to this Communist party which believes, not in non-violence, but in violence. So I say we must strengthen our defence forces as well as our policy force.

An Honourable Member: The Police will be the first to join them.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: I shall now take up this tax relief question. It is true, when I heard this, I thought that the tax relief was given to the rich people who did not really deserve it. My friend says it is not very much. It might not be very much; however I thought that they did not really deserve it. But the difficulty is that we have to pay to these people a kind of ransom in the last hope of winning their co-operation in our coming effort towards developing the productive resources of the country. My honourable friend the Finance Minister has already given them a warning but whether they are going to co-operate with and help the Government or not the future alone can tell. But certainly this concession is a thing which deserved serious consideration at the hands of the Select Committee.

So many complaints there have been, saying that we have not made any contribution to the developmental resources of the country. I want my honourable friend Thakar Bapa to take into consideration the moneys that the provincial governments are spending on health, education, housing sanitation and other public developmental services. It is on top of it that we have to consider what the Central Government is spending. If he only compared what the present Government is spending in regard to these matters with what the previous government was spending he would certainly find much indeed to his satisfaction. Even the Education Department has spread out its own protective wings, developmental wings, in many provinces. The same is the case with the Health Department. My honourable friend the Health Minister was keen on developing so many central institutes at the Centre that I am afraid in the provinces we need not have any institutes at all.

Shri A. V. Thakkar: May I interrupt the honourable Member for a minute? Has any Province in India introduced compulsory education up to this day—the richest, Madras and Bombay?

Prof. N. G. Ranga: My honourable friend Thakkar Bapa even if he was the Prime Minister of all the Provinces together and of the Centre would find that it is not possible for him to introduce compulsory education with the finances that he has got at his disposal unless he touches everybody's pocket. I am in favour of compulsory elementary education. But he himself scouted the idea of bringing in conscription for all the educated youths in this country, University students and others, in order to drive them to the villages and bring about compulsory education. We have to start a national campaign. It is not only the finances of the state but also the social resources and the contribution of the people that have to be taken into account in order to achieve it. It is not open to us here, burdened as we are with all these responsibilities, to come and attack this Government "Why have you not established it; if is sixteen months since you have been in office; why have you not introduced compulsory elementary education?" It is not possible. Otherwise certainly they would like and I would like to have it just as my honourable friend Thakkar Bapa would like to have it.

[At this stage Mr. Deputy Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shrimati G. Durgabai (one of the Panel of Chairmen)].

One more word and that is that this Government is subsidising food to the tune of Rs. 30 crores. Is it not a contribution to the poor people, the common people in the country? Of course it is a contribution against my people, the Kisans, because this Rs. 30 crores is bringing down the prices of our own food with the result that those people do not have the necessary inducement to raise it more and more.

Begum Aizaz Rasul (U.P.: Muslim): Madam, I did not expect to be called at this late hour, but I am grateful to you for giving me this opportunity of saying a few words. So much has been said on the budget as well as the Finance Bill during these last few days that I do not think I have anything new to add to it. But I might just say that I agree with those honourable Members who have expressed the opinion that there must be some sort of co-ordination in regard to taxation between the Provinces and the Centre. For instance I may say that in most of the Provinces there is a Sales Tax. This, as the House will realize, imposes a tax upon the consumer in everything that the consumer buys. Now, apart from that the Centre is imposing a tax on things like sugar, cloth and petrol. This means the consumer will be doubly taxed on these commodities of everyday use. This is unfair. I think it is up to the Finance Minister to let the House know what is the incidence of Income-tax in this country. We are not averse to paying taxes, but certainly we ought to know how we stand in the matter of taxation. Then the government has taken up the position of increasing land excise duty—why on consumer's goods produced in India? Tax on imports is also tax on consumers. This is justifiable if protection of Indian and indigenous industries is meant thereby. We can tax things like steel and iron and foreign cloth and other items mentioned by Tariff Board Report. We can also tax sugar from Java and Mauritius. But certain things that are the needs and requirements of the man in the street should be taxed only if it is absolutely necessary to do so. The cost of living is already very high and prices of commodities such as cloth, sugar, petrol etc. must affect the people. The raising of the tax on betelnut is also very unfair. Betelnut is a luxury that is enjoyed by the poor man. It will affect my Province very much because betelnut is very popular there and it is used by large sections of the people. In fact if I remember right tax on betelnut was raised a few years ago and therefore the additional tax is very unfair.

The honourable the Communications Minister made out a very good case as regards the raising of postal rates. As far as the postcard is concerned I entirely agree that the price should be three pice per postcard, but as far as the letter is concerned I think that the six pice rate per letter should be retained. All those who want to send letters by air mail can certainly afford to pay an extra sum. Therefore the postal rate on envelopes should not be increased except for those people who want to send by air mail, and there I think that one anna or two annas or even three annas extra may be charged for those letters that are to be sent by air mail.

I have also in mind the Agricultural Income-tax that has been imposed in most of the Provinces. This will not only affect, as some people think, the big landlords but will also affect the big farmers and the tenants and will to a great extent discourage the development of agriculture and largescale farming which is so necessary for our country today in connection with food production. When the Bill for the Abolition of the Zamindari which is on the anvil in most of the Provinces comes into effect and after the zamindaris have been abolished the tax will fall very heavily on the farmers and the peasants who will inherit all those lands that once belonged to the zamindars and will, as I say, discourage to a great extent the food production of the country. I hope that this aspect of the matter will be kept in view.

Then, Madam, there is one other point I want to make and that is with regard to the commercial undertakings of the Government. In the Limitation of Dividends Bill the Government has proposed six per cent as the highest dividend that is to be paid as profits. That means that it feels that six per cent is the minimum reasonable figure one should expect. But from the Government's own commercial undertakings like the Railways and the Posts and Telegraphs what are they getting? In the first place the businessman has to compete with others before he can make this six per cent. But in a State commercial undertaking you don't allow competition and so it is all a monopoly. The Government has invested about Rs. 720 crores in divided India as this year's account shows and the contribution that the Government is getting from the Railways is a little over Rs. 4½ crores, which means a little over half of one per cent. I should like to know why it is so. It certainly is a public utility concern but it is also a commercial undertaking of Government and I should therefore think that Government should expect a higher figure of dividend than half of one per cent. Even the British officers have stated that the Railways should pay more profits to the Government. But we see no evidence of this and even this rate is fixed after increasing about 50 per cent on rates and freights over and above the usual fares and war Surchage.

Madam, I have to say just a few words about Defence. Quite a lot of criticism has been made over the high expenditure on Defence. From the reports that we see in the papers, Pakistan has budgeted about 60 per cent of its revenues for Defence and India has budgeted about 48 per cent. Naturally these are very high figures, and we are entitled to ask why Defence expenditure is being raised so much. To my mind the only way to reduce this high expenditure is to evolve a common defence policy. The Cabinet Mission Plan said that it was impossible to divide the Indian Army, that the defence of India was built up as one unit. Well, as things turned out the Indian Army had to be divided up. But, it cannot be denied that the spirit of fraternity and comradeship still persists amongst the officers and men of the two armies and I should like to see the day, and I hope it is not far off, when India and Pakistan can join together in a common defence. After all, what are these feverish preparations for? I shudder to think of the possibility of these two Dominions going to war. It will be the unmaking and finishing up of both the countries and I do not think that the statesmen of either country can ever have this intention in view. Therefore, it is necessary that these two Dominions should come more and more together. If these defence preparations are for an enemy outside India, then it is more necessary for the two Dominions to build up a programme of common defence.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Is my honourable friend, Madam, prepared for a re-union of the two?

Begum Aizaz Rasul: I certainly feel that the defence of the country should be devised on a common basis as that is the only way to save these two countries from foreign aggression, from communism and from all those forces that are threatening civilisation. India and Pakistan together can fight these, much better than alone. And the money thus saved can be utilised for nation building activities. I would like not only a common defence but a common economy also, which will build up the prosperity of the two countries.

I was very glad to hear from the honourable the Home Minister the fact that the Muslims are settling down in India. Madam, it is with a feeling of great pleasure that I heard this. I can say with all the emphasis at my command that the Muslims of this country who form a very large section of the population, consider themselves as citizens of India. They do not want any preferential treatment either from the Government or from the people, they only want security for themselves to live happy and peaceful lives. They would be willing to lay down their lives for the honour and prosperity of the country and are absolutely willing and ready to make every sacrifice for the defence of the country. I only wish to reiterate that they do not want that any preferential treatment should be meted out to them because they are Muslims but that no discrimination should be made against them because they are Muslims. As citizens of this country we are willing to share in the responsibilities as well as in the benefits that accrue to any citizen of a country. I therefore feel that the words that came from the mouth of the honourable the Home Minister were most gratifying. I know that with leaders like His Excellency Rajaji as Governor-General and Sardar Patel and Pt. Jawahar Lal Nehru, at the head of the Government we can hope to get a fair deal in this country and conditions, already created, will be maintained which will infuse more and more confidence and feeling of security and contentment in the minds of the Muslims living here.

Mr. Chairman: I shall ask the honourable Member Mr. Sidhva to speak if he can finish his speech within five minutes because I want to ask the Finance Minister to speak at 4-30 sharp.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Thank you, Madam, for giving me five minutes. I am very glad that Prof. Ranga very effectively gave a reply to Mr. Munshi, particularly on the question of the salaries of officers of the Defence Ministry. I am mentioning this because it may not be misunderstood that this House, while considering the Defence Budget, was not considerate about their officers and the Army to which this House has unanimously given the best compliment and tribute. We have at heart their interests and we assure them that they are liberally paid. The Defence Minister himself and the Finance Minister also have stated that they are fairly well paid.

Having said that, as far as this Bill is concerned, I find that my honourable friend the Finance Minister has stated that some of the enhancements of duties and taxes he has proposed as an anti-inflationary measure. He has mentioned so in clause 4 of the Statement of Objects and Reasons. That is correct. But I fail to understand this. I want to know what is the definition of inflation. I do not know whether my honourable friend the Minister has got a special dictionary in his archives for the definition of this word inflation but in the common dictionary which I have got I find, it means "swelling", and if "swelling", as we know, happens on the human body, the surgeon immediately sterilises the knife and cuts that swelling so that the body becomes healthy. If that is the correct interpretation of the word inflation, then the first thing he should have done is to put a cut upon the various Departments which are superfluous. In his Budget speech he was rather reluctant to do it. He stated that he would examine this matter next year, but the House vociferously opposed that idea and I am very glad, and I congratulate him, that in deference to the wishes of the House, he replied on a cut motion that he is going to examine this case now and within three months he will see that the Economy Committee's proposals are carried out. I congratulate him from the bottom of my heart for this. Unless you cut down superfluous staff and superfluous expenses, you will not be able to cut down your expenses and your inflation will not to any extent be reduced.

There is an item in the Civil Budget under the heading, "Other charges", amounting to 5.63 lakhs. "Other charges" are not defined and in some cases very meagerly defined. I would request him that he must straightaway without going into details tell each Ministry to cut down by 10 per cent. That is the practice in many departments outside the Secretariat and it has been successfully carried out. I know the Secretariat will hesitate, but I am sure that with his persuasive tongue and impressiveness, if he were to tell all the Ministries that in this "Other charges" 10 per cent must be cut down, I am sure the efficiency will be maintained without any difficulty. I can tell you from my experience that I have made that experiment and carried it out successfully though with opposition which the ministerial staff offered at the earlier stage.

As far as taxation is concerned, it is not a question of taxation which this House alone imposes. We have to bear in mind, while discussing of the common man, as to what his own position is as far as his Province and village and district are concerned. He is being taxed from all round. What are the Provinces doing today? To balance their Budgets the Provinces are increasing the taxation on all sides. If you increase the burden on the poor man, the middle class man and the rich man to balance the Budget, with due deference to the honourable Minister I would say that that will not be called a balanced Budget. To meet your expenditure you might levy taxation up to 100 per cent and say, "I have balanced the Budget". Balancing the Budget should be real, not artificial. Now, what is happening in the provincial taxes? Madras has withdrawn the exemption of agricultural products from sales-tax, and they charge 50 per cent more on groundnut and cashew-nut. Bombay is levying 3 pies on exports from the Province. I would like to know whether provincial governments should be allowed to impose any kind of taxes on exports? That is very unfair. Madras levies 3 pies on cotton export. They also charge 25 per cent on property taxes. These are points which the honourable Minister should take into consideration very seriously.

These are matters which we should consider if we or the House want to do some real good to the people. In the last Budget discussion, I asked the predecessor of the honourable the Finance Minister "what kind of relief are you giving to the common average man, the man in the street? After freedom he wants to know what he has gained." And he told me that this was not the form for giving any kind of relief to the villager, and that I must go to the province for that. I am very glad, Sir, that the honourable the Finance Minister, in his reply to many of the Members did not share the views of his predecessor. This Central Assembly can do many things to bring relief to the common man. Sir, is not the common paying to the centre? Take the Third-class earnings in the railways. Out of the earnings of Rs. 81,66,25,000, Rs. 67,97,00,000 are paid by the third-class passengers. They are thus paying to the Centre and you cannot ignore them on the score that they do not pay you anything.

[At this stage Mr. Deputy Speaker resumed the Chair.]

Dr. Mono Mohan Das (West Bengal: General): On a point of information, Sir, what is the procedure adopted in this House for calling honourable Members to speak?

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: It is an academic question which I am not prepared to answer.

How much longer will the honourable Member take?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I have to say many things, but I do not want to do so now. I will only say that I am very glad that the honourable Minister in his recent speech has really developed the points which we wanted to develop, and also met the wishes of the House. In his Budget speech we were very much disappointed from the tone and the manner in which he presented the Budget. But that shows democracy. That shows the democratic nature of the House, he saw it and immediately he changed the view which he held originally, and to-day he has made a reference to the Economy Committee.

I really congratulate the honourable the Finance Minister. I will only say that if he wants to benefit the whole country and give relief to all, and if he wants to give relief, he should not cast his eyes on Dalal Street only. He must look to the whole country and on everybody alike. He may look to Dalal Street and give relief to its people. But he should not ignore the poor people and in future he should see that all are benefitted equally.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I find it a little difficult to reply to a debate of the kind that we have had yesterday and to-day because although it was the Finance Bill that was under discussion, most of the matters which came up for review by the House are matters which concern the Government as a whole. The greater part of the questions raised related to Ministries other than my own, and although I certainly share collective responsibility for the views and the decisions of Government, the House will appreciate that I do not have sufficient direct or immediate knowledge of what is happening in other Ministries, to be able to give the House considered and final views on many of these matters.

As regards the taxation proposals which are embodied in the Finance Bill, since all these proposals are coming up for detailed examination and scrutiny by the Select Committee, it does not seem to me necessary that I should weary the House with my views regarding them. Various suggestions have been made as regards these taxation proposals, the manner in which these proposals might be modified, the manner in which some of them might be replaced; all these suggestions, I have no doubt, will be taken into the fullest possible account by the Select Committee which the House is going to appoint.

There are, however, certain general problems regarding the financial and economic situation in the country to which reference has been made and on which, therefore, I would like to offer a comment or two during the short time that the House has kindly placed at my disposal.

There is one point which has been raised by more than one speaker. I think it was my honourable friend Babu Ramnarayan Singh who first raised it, and I think Mr. Tyagi, Mr. Thakkar and various other Members also raised it. What they say is this: "It is not so much to the level of taxation that we object. We are prepared to stand a reasonable level of taxation, a reasonably high level of taxation, provided, the proceeds of the taxation are expended in a manner which would be of direct benefit to the great mass of the people in the country; not merely of direct benefit to them, but would be demonstrably beneficial to them." That is a point with which I entirely agree. But then we are up against a serious practical problem there. In the way in which Government is organised in our country, the Centre does not come into direct contact with all those social and economic problems which concern the people most directly. It is only in an indirect manner that we can be of help. If honourable Members have scrutinised the Budget carefully, they will find that we have made provision for grants to Provinces of somewhere about Rs. 27 crores. We have made provision for loans to Provinces in 1949-50, somewhere about Rs. 58 crores. We have provided for food-subsidies to the extent of Rs. 33 crores. We have provided for the maintenance and settlement of the large population who have been displaced from their original homes and who are on our hands and are our responsibility. For them we have made a revenue provision of Rs. 10 crores and we have made a capital provision of nearly Rs. 20 crores. All these are provisions which we have made for the advantage and for the benefit of that individual whom in these discussions we have often described as the common man. But these have not been very demonstrably brought out, though they are all there implicit in the Budget. My own feeling is this, that if we are able to sail into more comfortable waters, as regards our financial position, it ought to be possible for us to provide for this expenditure that we undertake for the benefit of the great masses of the country, and we should be able to provide it in a manner and on a scale which would have a certain amount of psychological effect. I think it ought to be possible to do it, provided our financial position is slightly better than it is to-day.

I think it was my honourable friend Babu Ramnarayan Singh who at an early stage of the debate raised the question of salary scales. Frankly I am very uncomfortable about the salary scales that prevail throughout the country to-day, not merely in Government services, but in every walk of life. If it were possible for us to get the great bulk of our people to a plane where service and only service would be the motive, then we could, of course, do away with the kind of salaries to which we have got so used. I think Babu Ramnarayan Singh called our attention to the fact that before the War, when the Indian National Congress began to apply its mind to this problem, they fixed a certain limit. I think they said that the maximum salary should not exceed Rs. 500 and he put a very pertinent question to the Treasury Bench, "Why don't you adopt it? Why have you departed from it to this very large extent?" May I suggest a little practical consideration to Babu Ramnarayan Singh? This Rs. 500 that the Congress fixed as the maximum limit was fixed with reference to pre-war prices. The index number is now standing at 370 compared with pre-war prices. Direct taxation stands at a much higher level than it did in 1938-39. (Babu Ramnarayan Singh: 'Dearness allowances?') Yes, these figures take these factors, into account and today the equivalent amount would be somewhere about Rs. 2,000. I am not suggesting that as a final answer to the point that he made.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: But in that proportion you have not increased the salaries of the permanent services and the lower paid employees.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: If you take the dearness allowances, much the greater part goes to the lower paid employees of the Government and relatively little of it goes to the benefit of the higher paid employees, but I was going to say this is a matter that we have to take into account.

When I was an official of the Government of India, years ago—and those were spacious days, when we officials lived comfortably—we spent six months of the year in Simla and spent six months when the weather was comfortable and hospitable here in Delhi. Comparing now my experience as a Minister of the way in which the senior officers of Government now work and comparing that with the way in which I as a fairly senior official under the old regime worked, the number of hours that our senior officers work today and the enthusiasm and the consciousness with which they work today, represent a mighty higher standard. When we were in Simla, we went to the office at 10.

o'clock and it took very nearly 45 minutes before one could reach the office from the hotel. Coming back it took another 45 minutes; every day there was a lunch party for nearly two hours; every evening there was a cocktail party and every night there was a dinner party and moving about in Rickshaws, practically the whole of your time was absorbed in matters of that kind. If you take the way in which the senior officers of Government are working today, it is a marvellous transformation and I think it is but fair to our officers—and I am speaking of the senior officers with whom I come in contact in my day to day work—it is but fair that they should be given credit for it.

There is another point that I should like to mention. We are living in very difficult times not merely in our country, but in neighbouring countries. Has the House ever considered why it is that in India we have been able to preserve a fair degree of stability and how we have been able to save the country from, at any rate, the kind of serious collapse that has occurred in a neighbouring country like Burma? I would like to make two suggestions to the House. The most important reason is that in our country, unlike Burma, we have two or three men to whom the whole country owes loyalty. There is leadership of a kind that does not obtain in some other countries, but apart from that there is a very important reason, and that is this. If you take a country like Burma, the Englishmen who used to run the Civil Service and the administrative machinery, they have all departed. The rest of them were mostly Indians who have also departed and practically there is not even the remnant of a trained Civil Service there to run the machinery of Government. Here, fortunately for us, whatever may be the criticisms that we pass upon our officers, we have a body of trained men, trained in administrative work and be it said to their credit, entirely loyal to the new regime; these are the people who have stood between us and collapse.

I was speaking of the scale of salaries and let me get back to the subject. I am not one who believes that money is a useful thing beyond a certain limit. I was a fairly prosperous businessman before I joined the Government of India as a Minister and speaking in the presence of an old colleague Mr. Mody, I may say that the financial position in which I find myself today as a Minister is very different. (An honourable Member: 'Was your colleague in business or what?') None what I am going to suggest is that it is not that I want more money. From my personal experience, I find that life today is quite as interesting and quite as enjoyable a thing to me as in the days when my income was two or three times what it is today. The things that matter in life are, to have interesting work to do, to be able to have wholesome food to eat, the pleasure of family life and enjoyment of nature and art, reading a few good books—these are the things that after all give content to life and as far as these real things in life are concerned, it does not seem to me the difference between a high level of income and a moderate level of income makes any difference whatsoever. I am referring to this point because I think it ought to be our business as much the business of Government as of public leaders in this country to educate people to a proper sense of money values, but till we are able to reach that condition, I think we must reckon with the fact that men's ordinary motives must receive a certain amount of satisfaction. That is the problem with which we are all faced.

A problem that was raised over and over again in the course of the debate was the conflict and overlapping which have occurred between the Centre and the Provinces in the matter of taxation. That is a point to which I referred in the course of my reply to the General Debate. I will simply repeat this afternoon the reply I gave then, that I do admit that it is about time that we did something to remove the scope for conflict and overlapping that exists under the present system. How it is to be done is a problem. As I said, there are two ways of doing it. It is possible to reach some kind of agreement, some kind of settlement by agreement. If that is not possible, we have got to consider very seriously whether we should not put into the constitution financial proposals which will effectively meet the problem.

Another subject which about frequent reference was made is the question of Planning. It is perfectly true the Government have now reached a stage where to all appearances planning seems to have been thrown overboard, but that is not in reality so. I would like to take the House back to the days when the National Government was first formed, the interim Government of 1946. We assumed office at the end of August 1946. The Prime Minister was the Chairman of the National Planning Commission and that Commission had over a period of years been engaged in the very important task of drawing up a plan of development for the country. (An honourable Member: 'Was it a committee or a Commission?') Then along with the Prime Minister there were some of us who had also been associated with national planning and had also done a bit of planning in our own sphere and we were all immensely interested in the idea of planning. We assumed office in August. About the end of October, we were asked to form a Coalition Government with the Muslim League. The whole idea of National planning with which we were concerned at the time was planning based on the idea of a unified India. But everytime planning was mentioned in the Coalition Government it became an unacceptable idea, because unified India was not the basis on which half the Government was working. It was impossible then to make any progress. That position changed I think about August 1947. In August 1947 we had Partition. When Partition came, not merely did all the data collected become entirely out of date and out of relation to realities, it was a question simply of trying to preserve our economic structure from going to pieces. In other words, by the time the National Government found itself in the saddle, the problem before us was not to create a new order, but to preserve the existing order from going to pieces. That is the problem which has absorbed all our time till now. The Prime Minister is very actively considering at present the setting up of a Planning Commission with the idea that we may now tie up loose ends and piece together the fragments of work done in the past and see whether we cannot make some real progress.

Reference has again been made to the Economy Committee. I do not think it is necessary for me to say anything more than what I said the other day. There was a certain amount of criticism on the procedure I suggested. What I said was that the Ministries should first consult their Standing Advisory Committees and then the whole matter would be put before the Standing Finance Committee. It was suggested that that procedure might slow up the whole process and that it might make for delay. Now, there is no other way in which we can give satisfaction to the House, because if the Executive decided to take the sole responsibility upon itself and the conclusions that the Government of India came to were conclusions which were not acceptable to the House what would be done, especially in view of the fact that a great deal of suspicion has been expressed with regard to the real intention of Government with regard to economy. It is possible that when the Government announces its proposal the House might find them unsatisfactory and unacceptable. But if I am able, if the Government are able to carry the various Standing Committees of the House with it, then the proposals might probably receive better acceptance at the hands of the House. I have in mind also, when the Standing Finance Committee meets in order to consider the final proposals—and that would not be very long

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Are the proposals drastic enough?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: On that point I think I must ask the honourable Member to wait. When the proposals come before the Standing Finance Committee, for final decision, my idea is to invite the Chairman of the Economy Committee and one or two of his colleagues to sit along with us so that the Committee may have not merely the point of view of the Ministries, but also the point of view of the Economy Committee. What I am trying to suggest is that the House is not altogether justified in entertaining these deep suspicious feelings about the Government and particularly about me with regard to this question of economy. I am trying to put all my cards on the table. If, in spite of that, in spite of all this procedure we are adopting, it is ultimately found that the proposals for economy are not of the order that the House anticipates, the fault will not be entirely mine or of the Government.

On the question of National income, a suggestion was made that the enquiry might be linked up with the Census. I think it is based on a misconception. A census of population is one thing, and a census of production is an entirely different thing requiring a different technique.

My honourable friend Mr. Chaliha referred to opium again. I am conversant with the problem of opium and I know that his particular province, Assam, is greatly concerned with this question. As I told the House once, I am going to have, as quickly as possible, a conference of the people interested. But I do think I ought to invite my honourable friend's attention to this fact that if we restrict the consumption of opium to medical and scientific purposes, if the standard laid down by the League of Nations has any significance, then the average consumption per head of the population today in India will be found to be below the standard laid down by the League of Nations for medical and scientific purposes.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): That was laid down as far back as 1926.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I take it that the fundamental needs of human beings have not changed since 1926.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh raised the question of controls. We have resumed the policy of control, but I think it ought to be realised that we have resumed it only in regard to the most essential kinds of commodities. We have done so because we have realised the limitations of Government in this matter. We have a very defective instrument in our hands with which to deal with this problem of control. Therefore, it is only in regard to articles where the need for control is almost inescapable, it is only in relation to them that we have adopted it. After all, if you remember the way in which prices shot up from the end of December 1947 up to July 1948, during the period of de-control, it was difficult for any responsible Government to resist the feeling that there must be some kind of connection between the two happenings.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Sir, the stock of cloth in the bazar is more than enough for our requirements. Then why control cloth?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: My honourable friend the Minister for Industry and Supply is quite capable of looking after himself in this matter. I know he will agree with me that the question of distribution at present is not all that might be desired. But I have his assurance that things are progressing and that in a very short while we shall be able to see considerable improvement in the distribution of cloth.

Shri Dashbandhu Gupta (Delhi): May I request the honourable Minister to throw some light on the question of controlling the increase of population as suggested by my friend Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: That is one of the points I have noted. But I thought the interest of the House on this question was not sufficiently keen. But in case it is—I do not want to commit the Government on this question—I may express my personal reaction to this problem. It is this: we all complain of over-population in our country and that the food supply and the economic resources of the country are not sufficient for maintaining so large a population as we have today. My view is this: I would rather put myself to a fuller and more exhaustive examination of the potential economic resources of the country before I come to the conclusion that the population is excessive. If any of us are alive 25 years from now—you may take it for what it is worth—he will find that, if the economic resources of the country are properly developed, in the space of a generation or two, the population of this country, instead of being a liability, will be an asset.

I think it was Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava who raised the question of birth-control. I am all for voluntary intelligent control. But when it comes to birth-control by artificial methods, you are up against a serious problem: If you extend its use to the whole community, you are getting the community used to the satisfaction of the physical, the animal instincts of love without at the same time incurring the legitimate responsibilities which it carries with it. The result would be that in the course of a generation or two you will find the population of this country would not be sufficient to undertake all the responsibilities that fall upon it. Now, I do not commit the Government in any way on this question.

My honourable friend Mr. Modi asked me if the directive with regard to Prohibition has been at all observed by the provinces. The fact of the matter is that except the provinces of Madras and Bombay, all the other Provincial Governments have gone quite sufficiently, as far as their commitments permit, to meet the directive issued by the Government of India. They are doing it by stages, that is to say, in such a way that the strain on financial resources is limited to a minimum.

Mr. Modi again asked what my attitude was with regard to bearer bonds. I do not like it, and for the present I do not propose to encourage it for reasons I think with which my honourable friend is quite as familiar as I am. I am up against the problem of tax evasion and the introduction of bearer bonds is not going to help me in that matter.

I have been asked over and over again whether this discrepancy between the Budget estimates and the Revised estimates for 1948-49 does not cast a serious reflection on the Budgeting capacity of the Government of India. I think it is possible to reach a conclusion only on a careful examination of the position and I must say in all seriousness that honourable Members who have spoken on this subject have not done us justice. Now, the developments in Hyderabad, the very serious developments in Kashmir, the untoward developments in regard to certain refugee problems, the failure of the crops and the necessity for importing larger amount of foodgrains—these are not things which even the wisest Finance Minister and Finance staff could have anticipated early in 1948.

Mr. Homi Mody: That is only with regard to expenditure.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I am coming to the other side. On the revenue side, the largest single item of revenue is customs. It was somewhere in July that we decided to liberalise our import policy in view of the inflationary conditions which were prevailing. The Finance Minister in February 1948 could not have anticipated that. That gave us a large yield of revenue. As regards income-tax, what happened was, that when we found that we were faced with all this unanticipated expenditure under Defence, under food subsidies, under relief and rehabilitation etc. we thought that it was necessary to raise the revenues, available to us. One way of doing it on the direct taxation side was to step up the collection of arrears, to put more momentum into that work, and that, to some extent, increased our income-tax revenue. It was again for that reason that we decided, towards the end of the year, to introduce the system of provisional assessment, which again increased our revenue. It was again with the purpose of meeting this increased expenditure that we decided in connection with our anti-inflationary measures to levy customs duty on a number of fresh articles and this resulted in further increases. Therefore, when the expenditure increased for reasons which could not be anticipated, we as sensible, intelligent people tried to adapt ourselves in these various ways on the revenue side.

Then our friend Mr. Modi put me a question which surprised me. He told me, "You people are using your cash balances in order to meet your current expenditure." I was, frankly, surprised at this question, from a businessman and a banker at that. The whole basis of my Budget proposals is to balance revenue and expenditure. Therefore, the whole of my current expenditure I am meeting out of current revenue. I am not drawing upon cash balances in order to meet my current expenditure, which is met entirely by revenue. We are proposing a total capital expenditure of somewhere about Rs. 240 crores for 1949-50: out of that, we are meeting Rs. 134 crores by drawing on our cash balances. That is the real issue. Therefore, the cash balances which are our reserve are being used actually for capital purposes.

An Honourable Member: What about short-term loans?

Another Honourable Member: It is past five, Sir.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: There is no guillotine as far as these things are concerned.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I will finish presently, Sir.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: I am not hurrying the honourable Minister. I am sure the House will sit for some more time.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I think, you Sir raised the question of the Estimates Committee of the House of Commons, that is to say, that we must have a Committee of this House to scrutinise expenditure in much greater detail than our present Committees are able to do. A useful idea, theoretically. The difficulty about it is this. The Estimates Committee of the House of Commons is able to do its job because the House of Commons is a much more strenuous body than our legislature. They sit practically right through the year, and this Estimates Committee sits for nearly four months on end examining expenditure. They sit day after day examining it. It is possible for us in the new Constitution to arrange things in such a way that our legislature sits like the House of Commons practically over the whole year. But if that is not possible, an Estimates Committee would not work any better than our present Standing Finance Committee. Apart from that—I am speaking without any particular authority, but I have discussed this matter with people who are conversant with the working of the Estimates Committee of the British Parliament—my impression is that those who are directly concerned with the working of the Estimates Committee are of the belief that the Estimates Committee of Parliament does little useful work. It is not being eliminated because any institution in England which has become part of the traditional structure of the country is maintained for its traditional value. I think as an effective institution for the scrutiny of expenditure, the usefulness of the Estimates Committee of the House of Commons is slightly exaggerated.

I have been asked about the Public Accounts Committee. It is perfectly true that we have not been able to present reports for two or three years. Now, the trouble is this. Since the partition occurred in 1947, it has been very difficult for us to bring our figures at present into any sort of comparison with the figures before the partition. It has completely dislocated the continuity of our accounts. That I think is the reason which has made it very difficult. We have not been able to settle all our accounts with Pakistan and until we are able to finalise these accounts, public accounts for that period would not be complete. That is another reason. But we are trying to do our best. Personally, I am of the view—I am speaking subject to correction, I am in the hands of the House entirely on this matter—my own feeling is that the Public Accounts Committee's reports for 1945-46 and 1946-47 would have nothing more than a purely academic value.

Ch. Ranbir Singh (East Punjab: General): What about Agricultural Finance Corporation?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: On the Agricultural Finance Corporation, my feeling is this. I think there is something to be said for it, but I would much rather have the Agricultural Finance Corporation set up by the provincial governments and any assistance that they want could be given by the Centre through the co-operative agency. I think Agricultural Finance Corporations should be set up on the basis of co-operative institutions, either credit institutions of the ordinary variety or land mortgage banks. In either case, it ought to be possible for the Central Government, if their finances permit it, to make advances to the Agricultural Finance Corporation of the provinces.

Ch. Ranbir Singh: Stabilisation of agricultural produce.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I think, Sir, I have covered most of the points. It is rather late. I think one honourable Member—it was Begum Rasul—who complained that the general contribution of the Railways is not sufficient. I think the point to remember is that this 4.75 crores contribution does not include the interest which the Railways pay us on our investments; they pay us about Rs. 22 crores and this Rs. 22 crores must be added to this 4.75 crores in order to get the precise amount that we draw from our investment on the Railways.

My friend Prof. Shibbanlal Saksena reminded me of the Stakhanov method. I still adhere to my view that it is really a question of individual gain. I would suggest to my honourable friend, when he has time, to read a book by the famous French Socialist Andre Gide on Russia. He went with a party of French miners to see the way in which Russian planning was working and he was taken to a mine where the Stakhanov method had produced remarkable results. His French miners who were with him, also went into the mine for a day just for the fun of it and took part in the work. When they came out, the thing that impressed them was not that production had increased under the Stakhanov method but that it was so low before the Stakhanov method was introduced. In fact the extent to which the Stakhanov method has worked in Russia is exaggerated. As far as the system of Russian planning is concerned, the thing that makes their planning system work with such success and with such a sense of unity is that right through all the strata there is an element of strong, loyal, party-men who keep the strings in their hands. In fact it is not distinguishable from the most undemocratic type of Government that you can think of. If Prof. Saksena thinks that is the basis on which we should proceed, he is welcome to his idea.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: According to the honourable Minister, what are the favourable circumstances which will allow a removal of control, and when does he expect it?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: It is a little difficult for me to answer that question. The question of control is very closely bound up with the level of prices to the extent that the extent of prices indicates the degree of scarcity of foodgrains. To that extent this question is bound up with the level of prices. If we are able to increase the supply to such an extent that it is more or less equal to the demand, then that would be the time. When that time will come, is more than I can tell.

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): May I know whether the honourable Minister for Finance could give us any assurance or undertaking as to when he is going to place before us the report of the Auditor-General of India and when is he going to invite the Members of the Public Accounts Committee to deliberate over it?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Three months ago I tried my best to get a meeting of the Public Accounts Committee. As a matter of fact I sent a circular round for a meeting and when we met we found we did not have a quorum. Later we were unable to get an agreed date. As soon as the Members can attend a meeting, I am prepared to call one.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill to give effect to the financial proposals of the Central Government for the year beginning on the first day of April, 1949, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar, Pandit Hriday Nath Kanru, Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar, Shri Biswanath Das, Shri R. K. Sidhva, Shri Surendra Mohan Ghosh, Prof. N. G. Ranga, Shri Ram Nath Goenka, Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad, Shri Mohan Lal Gautam, Shrimati Annie Mascarene, Shri Gokulbhai Daulatram Bhatt, Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka, Mr. Homi Mody, Shri Khandubhai K. Desai, Shri S. V. Krishna-moorthy Rao, Shri H. V. Kamath, Shri B. L. Sondhi, Shri Kala Venkata Rao, Srijiut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri, Shri K. Hanumanthaiya, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta and the Mover with Instructions to report on or before the 25th March, 1949, and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 23rd March, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Wednesday, 23rd March, 1949

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (See Part I)

11-50 A.M.

NON-INCLUSION OF HINDU CODE IN ORDER PAPER

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The Hindu Code was to have been taken up today, and I do not find it on the Agenda. Has it been taken out by the Secretary himself or by some arrangement?

Mr. Speaker: As I have often said, in case honourable Members want to raise any points, it is better for them just to see me in my chamber and I shall try to explain to them as to how matters stand. The raising of points in the House by taking up its time leads us nowhere.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha: But then.....

Mr. Speaker: I am not going to deal with that now.
