"That in sub-clause (4) of clause 46 of the Bill, for the words 'who is knowingly a party to', the words 'who is charged with the duties prescribed under this Act and who contravenes or abets' be substituted."

The meaning of my amendment is very clear. The draft on this point is very loose and I should say it is a layman's language. Those persons who are charged with the duty as prescribed under this Act should be made liable. In the original draft it is written, "who is knowingly a party". This is not tenable.

Therefore my submission is that the legal language will be "who is charged with the duties prescribed under this Act and who contravenes or abets" and I hope the amendment will be accepted. I should very much desire that the Honourable the Finance Minister will give the reasons for his rejection or opposition, if he opposes it. As he said, he was practising at the bar 35 years ago.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Barred by limitation.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I rise to support this amendment. The whole sub-clause makes knowledge of a certain man of a certain contravention punishable. Supposing an offence is committed in our presence during a railway journey. We know it but we do not do anything to prevent it. We know it but knowledge is not enough. Shall we be held guilty? In this case mere knowledge of the offence is being punished. The amendment says "who is charged with the duties prescribed under this Act and who contravenes or abets", he will be held guilty. If a man has no duty or responsibility and if any offence is committed of which he is merely aware he should not be held guilty. If a master or superior officer commits a crime or makes a wilful default and his subordinate knows it, is he to oppose his master and lose his job? Supposing the honourable Minister makes a mistake and if his secretary pointed it out to him, he may not like it. Here you are punishing a man for something which it is not his duty either to do or to prevent. In this clause the law is made more strict but in other cases the law is loose and lax. In these circumstances I submit that the amendment should be accepted.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I think there is considerable force in the amendment that has been brought before the House by my honourable friend Kazi Syed Karimuddin. Unless in law a person is charged with the performance of a particular duty he cannot be lawfully or even morally or rightly brought to book.....

Mr. Chairman: May I bring to the notice of the honourable member that the words are not "who knows about it" but "knowingly a party to the contravention or default". Mere knowledge is not punishable.

Shri H. V. Kamath: This clause is silent on the point of the duties with which the officer is charged. My friend Kazi Karimuddin's amendment seeks to define this position in this fashion that any officer "who is charged with the duties prescribed under this Act and who contravenes or abets".

Another point is involved on which a little light may be thrown by the honourable Minister. In the clause it is stated "every director and other officer". May I ask the Minister whether he considers a director to be an officer of the banking company? If the words are read together a director is also an officer of the banking company. I am not quite clear whether a director should be regarded as an officer of the banking company. If that position is not acceptable it must read "every director and any officer of the banking company", if the sense is to include the director as well. So far as I am aware a director is not regarded as an officer of the banking company. Therefore some suitable modification is also necessary in this regard.

As regards the amendment of Mr. Karimuddin I think it seeks to define and clarify the position envisaged by this clause and therefore it may be accepted by the Minister and by the House.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: I do not think it is necessary to specify here "who is charged with the duties prescribed....." as mentioned in the amendment of my honourable friend Mr. Karimuddin, because the duties of a director or any officer are understood by implication. Therefore this amendment is completely out of place except to take away the time of the House and there is really no meaning in it.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I seriously object to it, Sir.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: I protest against it.

Shri H. V. Kamath: The honourable member is usurping your powers, the powers of the Chair. It is up to you Sir, to judge whether it is a waste of the time of the House or not. Nobody can usurp your powers.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable lady only said that this is mere waste of time if you persist in this amendment just to bring out that the amendment moved is not material.

Shri H. V. Kamath: It is left to you to decide whether it is a waste of the time of the House or not. Nobody can usurp your powers.

An Honourable Member: You cannot question the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. Chairman: She was only emphasising her own point.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: She says that the time of the House is wasted.

Mr. Chairman: Such phrases are usually used by those who emphasise their points.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: She has done it without emphasising any points.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I do not wish to follow my predecessor and my friend Shrimati Durgabai by trying to waste the time of the House...

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: On a point of order, Sir, can the honourable Member call another Member a 'friend'?

Mr. Chairman: It is quite parliamentary.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, I want to repeat that I do not wish to repeat or follow the example of my honourable friend Shrimati Durgabai, when she tried to waste the time of the House by giving.....

An Honourable Member: Is it necessary now?

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Sir, I feel that I am on very safe grounds when I rise to speak on this motion, because the honourable Minister has not yet declared his intention either of supporting or of opposing it. I have been a lawyer myself and I have to practise as a lawyer even now for my bread. But I will not pit my experience against the experience of the Honourable the Finance Minister in this matter. I have asked some lawyer friends also who agree with me that an expression like the one which has been used in this clause "knowingly a party" is very rarely seen in a legal statute.....

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It is unusual

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: And therefore when any honourable Minister takes up his experience of 35 years ago he must be perfectly satisfied that this expression is really a legal one. Incidentally I may mention that the Indian Companies Act was passed in 1913 and soon after the advent of this Act my honourable friend the Minister withdrew from his legal practice. Thirty-five years ago means 1913, when the Indian Companies Act was passed.

Mr. Chairman: This has got nothing to do with the amendment.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I am speaking about the expression "knowingly to be a party". That expression is not a legal one and it should be substituted.

Incidentally I might mention, if my legal knowledge is correct, there is a "knowingly to be a party". That expression is not a legal one and it should be substituted.

Incidentally I might mention, if my legal knowledge is correct, there is a great omission, in that no imprisonment is laid down for default and the payment of a fine. I do not know if the General Causes Act lays down that whenever there is no imprisonment prescribed for default there should not be any imprisonment or there shall be simple imprisonment for six months. I think there may be also a general provision somewhere that in case of any special or local law where any imprisonment in default of fine is laid down it may be presumed there that the imprisonment shall be simple and for a period not exceeding six months. This I am not sure of and I hope the Honourable Minister will look into this matter. If it is intended that there shall not be any imprisonment in default of payment of fine, because the offender shall be an indeterminate body of persons, he should clearly say so. If there is to be imprisonment in default of payment of fine the point is whether that has got to be gathered from any statute other than this.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I find that the first part of the amendment of my honourable friend, Mr. Karimuddin is good, that is, where he says "who is charged with the duties prescribed under this Act". After all to whom is the punishment to be given? Punishment is to be given to the person who is charged with the duties prescribed under this Act. But the next part of his amendment is in my opinion not correct—that is "who contravenes or abets". There is a world of difference between "who is knowingly a party" and "who contravenes or abets". "Who is knowingly a party" implies the knowledge and intention to do something whereas "contravenes or abets" may be by mistake—may be a bona fide mistake. Therefore if the amendment had been in the form "who is charged with the duties prescribed under this Act and who is knowingly a party to" then I would have agreed and supported the amendment. As it is, I am sorry I cannot support it. I must oppose it because the words in the original draft "who is knowingly a party" are better than "who contravenes or abets". A man may contravene or abet without the knowledge and you cannot punish a person who has not got the knowledge of his act.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I have always regarded my honourable friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri with respect, as a political leader and as a legislator. But if he is typical of the present generation of criminal lawyers I regret I cannot extend my respect to him in that capacity.

I think the point is quite simple. You cannot accuse a person of contravention or default in respect of a provision unless that provision imposes certain duties upon him. Therefore it seems to me quite unnecessary to add the words 'charged with these duties'.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (4) of clause 46 of the Bill, for the words 'who is knowingly a party to', the words 'who is charged with the duties prescribed under this Act and who contravenes or abets' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I move:

"That in sub-clause (5) of clause 46 of the Bill, for the words 'make a demand on the banking company', the words 'direct the banking company', be substituted."

While I was looking up my papers I heard a muffled remark from one of the honourable members, namely the redoubtable Bikram Lal Sondhi, the first part of whose name really indicates prowess, that I was having breathing time. Indeed he is very right and I was having a breathing time. There are so many amendments that I had need to have a moment's breathing time. So the breathing time should be excused.

I submit that the effect of the amendment is this. Instead of the original phrase "make a demand on the banking company" the words "direct the banking company" would be more appropriate in the context. I do not wish to elaborate it further but I desire the honourable Minister to read the passage himself independently as a lawyer that he was thirty five years ago and then give us his independent opinion.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I have considered it independently and very carefully. I cannot accept it.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (5) of clause 46 of the Bill, for the words 'make a demand on the banking company', the words 'direct the banking company', be substituted."

The motion was negatived

Mr. Chairman: There is an amendment to clause 46 given notice of by Mr. Alagesan.

Shri O. V. Alagesan (Madras: General): I would like to explain the position before I move my amendment. Section 22 requires a company for carrying on banking business to get a licence from the Reserve Bank. A contravention of that section is covered by sub-clause (3) of clause 46. But it provides only for fining the directors and does not provide for the winding up of the company which carries on business without a licence. That deficiency is sought to be covered by my amendment and it gives power to the Reserve Bank to wind up the company if it ceases to have a licence. As the clause stands it can continue to do business even without having a licence, by paying the fine. You should really provide for the winding up of the company in such a case. If the honourable Minister would accept the amendment I shall move it.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: In regard to matters of this kind the publicity that attaches to conviction would be such that you need not put yourself to the trouble of winding up the company. The people who are likely to place deposits in that company would refuse to do so.

Shri O. V. Alagesan: Then I am not moving it.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 46 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 46 was added to the Bill.

Clause 47 was added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I move:

"That in clause 48 of the Bill, for the words 'towards payment', the words 'towards the payment' be substituted."

As I submitted the other day, a simple word "the" created considerable amount of difficulty in the Federal Court amongst five learned Judges in which a respected member of this House, Mr. K. M. Munshi, had to take part.

They had considerable difficulty over the word "the". There is a tendency in this House to ignore commas or words like "the", "or", "of" as being beneath the notice of the respectable members of the House. I submit they are not to be ignored or jeered at in the House like that.

Mr. Chairman: May I ask what difference does it make whether the word "the" is there or not?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The difference is just like the difference in notes to a musician. A man who is a musician can see the difference between the notes. A man who is devoid of any sense of music does not see the difference.

In fact, it will not do to say that the meaning is clear; sometimes the meaning may not be clear.

Mr. Chairman: Sometimes it may not be but the question is whether here in clause 48 it would make any substantial difference.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The Honourable the Speaker once suggested that the elegance of language is also a desirable objective.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: As far as this is concerned, the insertion of "the" makes it much less elegant.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: That is a different point of view. My honourable friend has the advantage of being fed and supported by an array of experts, so whatever he says must pass as authority.

I would submit, the passage reads thus:

"A Court imposing any fine under this Act may direct that the whole or any part thereof shall be applied in or towards payment of the costs of the proceedings, or in or towards the rewarding of the person on whose information the fine is recovered."

I think the ordinary sense of grammar would indicate that the word "the" is appropriate: ".....shall be applied in or towards the payment of the costs....." The word "the" comes naturally. It is a question of first impression and of course if opinions differ then I shall respectfully differ.

I submit that these nice things may make a great deal of difference. Let us take one example, let us consider one sentence, "Begum Aizaz Rasul says Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri is a naughty boy". The meaning is clear. But suppose you put two commas in it, such as: Begum Aizaz Rasul, says Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri, is a naughty boy". The point is that without the commas, Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri is the naughty boy; but with the commas, Begum Aizaz Rasul becomes the naughty boy which is absurd. So the position of a comma makes a good deal of difference.

Mr. Chairman: There is no question of comma here!

Shri H. V. Kamath: May I speak on this amendment of my friend Mr. Naziruddin? He has said something about music and musicians. I believe he has got a good musical sense but here I think it has failed him. The two 'the's, if his amendment be accepted, would certainly jar upon any musical ear and certainly it does violence to canons of euphony. I think the House will agree with me when I say that "the" here will be entirely misplaced, and I would ask the House to reject this amendment.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I find myself in complete agreement with my honourable friend Mr. Kamath.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: You have used two dozens of 'the's in another clause.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I have got very important things to say.

Mr. Chairman: I am going to put the amendment to vote.

The question is:

"That in clause 48 of the Bill, for the words 'towards payment', the words 'towards the payment' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 48 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 48 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 49 to 51 were added to the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I wanted to submit something on amendment No. 263 and wanted to finish the question altogether. So long as there is no finality.....

Mr. Chairman: Yesterday this amendment was debated and you were pleased to say you will take some other time to ventilate it. So let us proceed.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, the Deputy Speaker himself later on told me that he would like to raise it once again. In these circumstances, I may be allowed to raise the point so as to finish it once and for all. I give a solemn undertaking before the House never to think of this any further. With that assurance, I may be allowed to develop the point.

The expression "Official Gazette" has been defined in the General Clauses Act. There the expression is used as a complete name. It seems to me, from a conversation with the draftsman, that the word "official" is regarded as a mere adjective and as no part of the name or the description. If it is merely an adjective without being part of the name, of course, it should be spelt with a small letter, not with a capital letter. But my point is that the Official Gazette is a compound name as, for instance, the Legislative Council. If we think the word "legislative" is merely an adjective and not a part of the name, then of course the word "legislative" should begin with a small letter, but if it is a part of the name, of course, both the words should be capitalised.

The reason which was given to me by the draftsman was that in the sentence the word "Official" stood at the beginning and therefore it began with a capital letter. But that is not so. In a large number of definitions given in the General Clauses Act words which should be capitalised are used in a capitalised way and words which should not be capitalised are not used in that way. I submit therefore that the General Clauses Act is a direct authority for the spelling which I am trying to press. The other reason given for ignoring my contention is that from 1940 onwards, "official" is spelt with a small letter. I admit this is so, but let us consider a large number of other and classical Acts: the Criminal Procedure Code, the Penal Code, the Transfer of Property Act, the Registration Act. There the expression "Official Gazette" appears and always the capitalised version is used so far as the word "Official" is used. It is a point in drafting that where a capital is to be used, it should be used uniformly; where a small letter is to be used, it should also be used uniformly. In this case the sample given in the General Clauses Act begins with the capital letter and in other cases where a small letter is indicated they are in small letters. It is not that because the word "Official" begins at the beginning of the sentence in the General Clauses Act it is used with a capital letter. That is not so. In the very definition itself where the capitalised version is used, it is always capitalised, but where it is not so the small letter is used.

So, an examination of the other definitions will also show that "Official" is a part of the name and therefore it should be capitalised. If we look to the classical enactments—probably the older Acts are examples of good draftsmanship—there always the word "Official" is used in capital letters. I do not wish the matter to be put to vote, but I should ask the Honourable the Speaker to look into these authorities and prevent us from trouble on this matter any further. I submit these are important matters. There should be uniformity. In some of the recent Acts, sometimes "official" is spelt with capital and sometimes with small letter. Why should there be this variation?

Mr. Chairman: I would request the honourable the mover of the amendment to kindly move the amendment, so that the point may be settled once for all. He has not even moved the amendment, yet he is speaking on it.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I beg to move:

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 52 of the Bill, for the words 'official Gazette', the words 'Official Gazette' be substituted."

Shri H. V. Kamath: May I ask my friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad whether it is his view that the word "official" here is used not in an adjectival sense but as a substantive? He says it is part of a name. For his information, I can tell him that the name of the Gazette is "Gazette of India" or Gazette of the U.P." or Gazette of C.P. and Berar" and so on. The name is not "Official Gazette". No gazette in India is called "Official Gazette" by name. To my mind therefore, the word "official" is used in an adjectival sense and not as a substantive. Therefore the 'o' here in the word 'official' need not be capitalised, but may remain small enough as it is.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): I have to say a word in this respect. Sometimes I find that people laugh at my friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad. When we were in the language, we learnt that articles 'a' and 'the' have got to be used and there is a rule for that. In the same way, there is rule as to where small letter is to be used and where capital letter is to be used. May I know whether these rules of grammar were to be taught and learnt and used when we were in schools and colleges or whether they are to be used here in this legislative chamber? I know Dr. Rash Bihari Ghose was interpreting law in the Calcutta High Court. He interpreted one particular section in one way and won the case, and after some time he interpreted the same section in a different way, and the Court asked him.....

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: Because he was paid by different clients?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Yes. When he was asked by the Court. "Dr. Ghosh, the other day you interpreted this section in that way and this day you are interpreting it in this way". Then Dr. Ghosh answered, "My Lord, that was a very good law when I interpreted it in that way, but this is the law". So, "the" has a significance. I do not like that honourable members should laugh at my friend. I think the Draftsman ought to be expert enough.....

Mr. Chairman: I must request the honourable member to address the House on the point at issue. We have heard the story from him and we have heard much more, but may I request him kindly to speak on this particular question?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Well, Sir, I am speaking on the amendment. Why the Draftsman should not be expert enough to know the rules of grammar and make a good draft of any Bill, so that such amendments may be impossible. Of course, so far as this amendment is concerned, I support it and I ask the honourable House and the honourable Minister to so arrange things that such mistakes will not be committed by the Draftsman.

Shri Jut Kuladhar Chaliha: We are very thankful to Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad for pointing out to us.....

Mr. Chairman: May I just request the honourable member to direct his attention to the particular amendment? The merits of Mr. Naziruddin's performances are not here in dispute but the point at issue is the amendment.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha: I am directing my attention to that. First, I am acknowledging with great gratitude Mr. Naziruddin's pointing out that our Draftsman are so loose that every time a Bill comes up we find such mistakes. We must be grateful to him for drawing our attention to this. We are standing on prestige and do not like to accept his good suggestion. We must admit our mistakes. It is no use standing on prestige when we know that it is a real mistake. Now, as regards whether it should be spelt with capital letter, we find in the General Clauses Act "Official Gazette" is always spelt with capital 'O'. It is not used in adjective sense, as my friend Mr. Kamath said. In every clause you will find other words are spelt with small letters but Official Gazette is always spelt with a capital letter.

Mr. Chairman: This has already been pointed out by the honourable mover.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha: I think it has been already pointed out and I think you will find that Official Gazette is spelt with capital 'O' and as Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad has pointed out, there are other deficiencies of our Draftsman. I think we should take note of this and accept this. We must not stand on prestige.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I think my honourable friend Mr. Chaliha—I do not think he meant it—did me much less than justice when he said that I was standing on prestige in taking the line I do on these things. My honourable friend will recognise that a Minister charged with the kind of portfolio that I have has several grave preoccupations at present. I have had to spend on these amendments of Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad—sleepless nights and sleepy days—and if I have come to these decisions it is because I believe that those are the right decisions in the circumstances. I must take exception to my honourable friend Mr. Chaliha's remark about me.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha: All right, Sir, I withdraw my remarks.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: As regards this question of 'official Gazette', we have gone into this question over and over and over again. I know the practice differs in various enactments, but for the present, since this has been used here, I suggest we might continue it.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha: I beg to withdraw, if my friend takes exception, though I did not mean it.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

... "That in sub-clause (1) of clause 52 of the Bill, for the words 'official Gazette', the words 'Official Gazette' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I move:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 52 of the Bill, for the words 'draft of the proposed rules was published', the words 'draft rules were published' be substituted."

We know draft rules, but the expression "draft of the proposed rules" is nothing but really an elongated version of the words "draft rules".

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I oppose it.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 52 of the Bill, for the words 'draft of the proposed rules was published', the words 'draft rules were published' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 52 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 52 was added to the Bill.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala (Bihar: General): I want clarification from the honourable Minister on one point. This is what the report of the Select Committee says in regard to this clause.

"This is a provision which we have added as a matter of caution. It is possible that exemptions may be needed in the case of industrial finance corporations, land mortgage banks, housing societies, and other like institutions which obtain deposits from the public. This provision would also enable temporary relief to be given in cases of emergency."

I want to know whether this Act applies also to these banks. The honourable Minister has said that it applies only to commercial banks. I want to get confirmation for it.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: If my honourable friend will refer to (b) and (c) of clause 5(1), the position will be clear. Item (b) says "Banking" means the accepting, for the purpose of lending or investments, of deposits of money from the public, repayable on demand or otherwise, and withdrawals by cheque, draft, order or otherwise." Then, item (c) says: "banking company", means any company which transacts the business of banking in any Province of India".

As the provision stands at present, if they accept deposits the institutions mentioned by him might be brought within the frame-work of the Bill.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala: Does not this Act think of only banks doing commercial business?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: That is so.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin: Before I speak on clause 53, I may assure Shri. mati Durgabai that I am not trying to waste the time of the House. I am saying this because it is just natural that the honourable member is angry with me under the impression that I am putting obstacles in the way of the consideration of the Hindu Code Bill. I assure her that I have every sympathy with the measure which proposes to confer rights and privileges on women. I am a father of daughters.

My submission as regards this clause is that it is very arbitrary. The provisions of law which are sought to be placed on the Statute Book are very unprecedented. I find from the Minute of Dissent appended to the Report of the Select Committee by Shri Ananthasayanam Ayyangar that he is opposed to any power being given to any Government to exempt any bank from the provisions of this Act as provided for in clause 53. Shri T. T. Krishnamachari too, at the far-end of his minute of Dissent, has said:

"Even though I have appended my signature to the majority report, I am of the opinion that the Committee has done little or nothing to improve the Bill and have thereby lost a valuable opportunity of helping to place on the Statute book a measure which would ensure the strengthening of the credit and monetary structure in the country."

I think this provision has not been very well considered by the Select Committee. This clause 53 gives very arbitrary and unprecedented powers to the Government of India which would act on the recommendation of the Reserve Bank. The clause provides:

"The Central Government may, on the recommendation of the Reserve Bank, declare by notification in the official Gazette that any or all of the provisions of this Act shall not apply to any banking company or to any class of banking companies either generally or for such period as may be specified."

According to the report of the majority, which my friend has read out, this is a provision which they have added as a measure of caution. It is possible that exemptions may be needed in the case of an industrial banking corporation which obtains deposits from the public. Clause 53 is of general application to any bank or class of banks. This would mean that the provision of this Act can be superseded by the Central Government on the recommendation of the Reserve Bank. This will be too much.

[Kazi Syed Karimuddin]

Bank, which would make the recommendation, would be open to very great Bank, which would make the recommendation, would be open to very great corruption. The banks are full of money and if exemptions are to be given on the recommendation of the administrative machinery of the Reserve Bank and accepted by the Central Government, there will be room for great corruption. Therefore my submission is that, the powers contemplated under this clause are sweeping and general and ought not to be given. The honourable Minister should have laid down the exceptions which have been mentioned in the report of the majority. Therefore my submission is that this is a provision which it brought on the Statute book will be open to many injustices and it will do great harm to banking system of this country.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: I support my honourable friend, because this clause 53 goes against the fundamentals of law. The law has always to be passed in general terms. You cannot say that if 'A' commits murder he should be hanged and say, at the same time, that if 'B' commits murder he may not be punished. If for a crime there should be punishment, it should be punishment for all who commit that crime. It should not be open to the Government to say that such and such bank will not come under the law and that such and such bank will be governed by it. I would have understood it if we had laid down that for such and such reasons the Reserve Bank may make recommendation to the Government to exempt such and such class of banks. But, without specifying such conditions, such reasons and the class of banks for which exemptions could be sought, if we adopt a provision of this kind, it would be an arbitrary provision. And an arbitrary measure is no law at all. It contravenes the fundamentals of law and therefore is not a desirable piece of legislation.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Mairta: May I put in a few words in connection with this clause, I think a very important point has been raised in as much as this clause seeks to preclude a particular class of banks from the operation of the provisions of this Act. I think, the whole purpose, as I have been able to understand from the previous speaker, is that there are certain organisations, banking in nature, which cannot be brought under the purview of this legislation and which if brought would inure more to the detriment of those institutions. I think, if the Honourable the Finance Minister has in view institutions like the Industrial Finance Corporation, the Rehabilitation Finance Administration and organizations like these, which might be brought into being in future, then of course, there is a good deal of force in it and force in the contention of the sponsor of the Bill. But one point has got to be made absolutely clear, whether or not the credit organisations which are essentially banking concerns,—not that there are transactions of the nature of banking, but they are essentially banking concerns in the sense that they receive deposits and they clear bills and things like that and also advance loans on approved securities,—the kind of course, the question would arise whether or not organizations like the industrial Finance Corporation or building societies or Rehabilitation Finance Administrations, whether these things should properly come under the definition of a banking company. It is, therefore, necessary for the Honourable the Finance Minister to make clear as to what are the particular kinds of organizations he wants to be excluded from the operation of this Act on the recommendation of the Reserve Bank. Speaking for myself, and I find that my view is shared by a number of honourable members in this House, it would be a violent departure from a very salutary principle that there should be no exception to the operation of this law, as is generally the case with all legislations. We cannot give a sort of carte blanche to the Reserve Bank machinery to make re-recommendations to the Government of India that these are the Banks A, B, C, D, E, which in our opinion should be excluded from the provisions of any or all of the provisions of this particular Act. The whole purpose of this Bill will be greatly defeated if this power—I must say it is a very wide and arbitrary power sought to be given to the administrative machinery of the Reserve Bank—is utilised by that body in a very large measure, then the very purpose of the Bill would be defeated. Therefore, instead of giving that sort of blanket authority to the Reserve Bank authorities, it is but meet and proper the Honourable the Finance Minister should indicate the terms under which certain organisations banking in nature would be excluded from the ambit of the operation of this Act. So long as that is not done, I think the contention raised by my honourable friends to the right and friends to the left are very substantial and they cannot be lightly brushed aside.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I rise to oppose this clause, and the reasons are plain. As Shri T. T. Krishnamachari has stated, the Bill has not been thoroughly considered. A man of his experience, who was a member of the Select Committee saying so, is a very serious thing. (An Honourable Member. "He was a minority of one in the Committee"). But he is an important minority. He is an able and a respected member of this House and his verdict cannot be brushed aside lightly. I submit instead of keeping a loop-hole just to excuse the Industrial Finance Corporation and certain other favourite banking concerns, we could have provided generally for such cases. There was no difficulty in framing the definition in such a way or to have incorporated exceptions with which we are very familiar in this Bill. If we leave a loop-hole like this, it only gives Government an enormous power, a power which is dictatorial in nature and although ministers at the highest level will be above influence, it is not impossible for us to see that parties will approach the Government through the back-door. Influence will weigh in favour of some parties and against certain others. It will depend on with what amount of energy and pluck a party puts its case. It may be that there will be no generalized standard for such cases; the standard should have been laid in the Act itself as to what things are necessary, what things are unnecessary and what exceptions should be made. It is rather a matter for drafting and in this the Bill absolutely fails. In these circumstances, I beg to submit that the clause should be withdrawn and suitable provisions should be made so as to apply all sorts of cases.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I can quite see the justification for the retention of this clause in the Bill. It will be in the recollection of the honourable members of this House that how a right of exemption given in favour of a Government can be at times abused. There is a necessity for exemption in every matter and if that exemption has to be exercised at one time or the other, experience of the recent events show that it is better that they are exercised by a body of persons who are not responsible to the Legislature, rather than have to be exercised by the honourable Minister of this House which may be at times liable to mis-interpretation. The House remembers very well how the exercise of such a power in the matter of investigation of income-taxes has caused one honourable minister his seat. My point is this, that if an exemption has to be made in respect of any clause or any provision of this law, it is better that right of exemption is exercised by the Reserve Bank rather than by the Government itself.

Then, coming to the question whether such an exemption is necessary at all or not, whether the grant of this exemption has totally spoiled the good effects of this Bill, I might immediately tell the House that rather than leave the provision of this clause relating to exemption in such a vague and indefinite way, it would have been perhaps better for the framers of this law to lay down clearly that they do not want the provisions of this Bill to apply to land mortgage banks or industrial financial corporations or something of that kind. I presume the way in which this law has been drawn up, the way in which this law has been passed, it should not be difficult to enumerate and illustrate the instances where exemptions should be actually granted. That being the position, I hope the Honourable the Finance Minister will agree with me that exemption should be granted in some deserving cases. Instead of leaving it in an undetermined way, or leaving it to the discretion of the Reserve Bank, it is better to lay it down here at once. I think, Sir, the exigency of the situation will be very well met if you only lay down and add to this clause the exemption which has been referred to in a general way in the majority report of the Select Committee. Otherwise, I am not quite sure that this clause is perfectly clear and that it would be interpreted in a manner in which the authors of this legislation want to. For one thing, the Land Mortgage Banks which are registered under the Co-operative Societies Act would not ordinarily come under the definition of a 'company'. A 'company' has been defined as a company which may be wound up under the Indian Companies Act. The Land Mortgage Banks cannot certainly be wound up under the provisions of the Companies Act. If that interpretation is correct, then the whole argument in favour of the Land Mortgage Banks which has been used in the report of the Select Committee falls to the ground. Similarly the Industrial Finance Corporation cannot by any stretch of imagination be declared to be a company which could be wound up under the Companies Act. In order to make the point clear, if it is the intention of the Government only to exempt this class of institutions, that should be made clear in the clause itself. Otherwise, the whole clause should be dropped.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala: I have no apprehension that any such power will be exercised under the present regime by which the interests of the people will be jeopardised. But, my past experience of such clauses is very sad. Such a clause was introduced in the Sugar Control Act where it was laid down that the provincial Governments will be entitled to fix the price of cane at a particular rate. Power was also given to the provincial Government to exempt any factory from the application of that Act. That power was badly used in favour of a certain factory to the detriment of all other factories and cultivators. As I said, I have no apprehension that under the present regime this will be done. But, as my honourable friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri pointed out, some condition should be laid down under which this power should be exercised.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): If I rise, to speak on this, it is because I apprehend very much that the Reserve Bank may play tricks with us. The Reserve Bank has not yet defined its attitude towards the Imperial Bank. It may be that the Reserve Bank may excuse the Imperial Bank under excuse of this clause. Nowhere is the Imperial Bank mentioned in this Bill. That position must be clarified. Mere assurances will not do. It is better that the Honourable the Finance Minister defined here what he means. The explanation that is given in the Select Committee Report does not seem to apply to the Imperial Bank. We know that the Imperial Bank happens to be the favourite mistress of the Reserve Bank. The other day, we heard the Honourable the Deputy Speaker make a statement that the Imperial Bank would be Indianised in two years. The Honourable the Finance Minister made no such statement afterwards, but he said that it will be controlled. I find a contradiction of that in a paper called Commerce published from Bombay. The report in this paper says:

"The report, however, seems to be incorrect, according to a telegram received by us from our Delhi correspondent, who states that Mr. Ayyangar has authorised him to contradict the reported statement. The two year period in his reported statement referred to the Dividend Limitation Ordinance and had nothing to do with the question of nationalisation of the Imperial Bank. All that Mr. Ayyangar said, it appears, was that the question of limiting dividends would be reconsidered after the expiry of two years."

I hope this is wrong. At the same time, I may point out that the Indian Finance of Calcutta, which reflects the Indian national view point, was very much perturbed at the statement of my honourable friend, the Finance Minister that the Imperial Bank will be controlled but not nationalised.

Mr. Chairman: May I just remind the honourable member, we have nothing to do now with the Imperial Bank?

Shri B. Das: I am coming to the point. In view of the suspicion of the patriots of the country and of this House, I do not want section 53 as introduced by the Select Committee. Either it should be thrown out or the Honourable the Finance Minister must make the point clear.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I want to say only a few words; I do not want to take up much of the time of the House. Section 53 tries to pass the whole camel of the Bill through the needle of the extraordinary powers of the Government. The Reserve Bank has been nationalised. It is absolutely a creature of the Government and the members are nominated by the Government. I do not know why the Select Committee has agreed to give such vast powers either to the Reserve Bank or to the Government to alter any section or all the sections of this Act, or give exemption from any or all the sections. If there is any emergency, there should be a time limit imposed, that the powers could be exercised for six months with regard to a particular type of banking institutions and if necessary, it could come before this House for a modification of the Act which by experience they may feel like wanting. To put such a section which gives such over-riding powers over all the sections is not democratic and is not quite fair to this House. I request the honourable member to consider whether a suitable amendment can be brought out so that the power is limited to a particular time beyond which he may have to come to this House for reconsideration.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, I quite appreciate the general feeling of apprehension which has been expressed by the House regarding the clause in a Bill of this kind which confers what is apparently an extensive scope for exercise of discretion by the Government. I quite appreciate that the House should feel apprehensive about it. But, the position is this. Banking institutions, of all kinds of economic institutions, are of a type that is most exposed to grave and sudden emergencies. In the course of the discussion of the various amendments, there was a case to which the attention of the House was drawn by an honourable member who asked me, in the case of that particular emergency, what the Government was going to do. The various provisions in the Bill were either inapplicable or if applied, would cause obvious hardship, and yet it was a case which it was impossible in the very nature of things to bring within the clear cut limits of a definition. I am speaking of the displaced Banks from the Punjab. They are placed today in a position which makes it extremely difficult for them to comply with the several provisions of this Bill and yet, it is my duty as a member of the Government to see that the interests of these people who have been placed in a position of this kind for reasons entirely beyond their control should be safeguarded. The only way in which I can safeguard their interests is—the House will not question the necessity for safeguarding their interests—is by having a provision of this kind. After all, in matters of this kind, there must be an element of trust somewhere. This world and its scheme of things will not function unless there is some repository somewhere where faith could be placed. I am quite alive to the criticism that as a Minister responsible to the Legislature, and for the time being a politician, I am possibly exposed to influences which may lead me to exercise my discretion contrary to the public interest. It may happen; but it is necessary in dealing with cases of this kind, to arrange for some discretion of this kind.

I was asked by my friend, Pandit Ma'tra, to define precisely, to categorise, the kind of institutions to which this Act would not apply, or in respect of which this exemption would be exercised. In the report of the Select Committee they have mentioned certain institutions. Now these institutions at present do not take deposits from the public. To that extent therefore at present they do not come within the framework of this Bill. But if a crisis arises when it is necessary for some of these institutions, in order to raise the necessary finance, to get deposits from the public, they would come within the provisions of this Bill and it is necessary that someone should have this discretion, because in the very nature of these institutions it is necessary that the provisions applicable to them should be of a kind which is appropriate in the circumstances.

I have given thought to this matter. The Select Committee also gave a good deal of thought to this. The Select Committee composed of non-official members of this House were apprehensive as the House is apprehensive, but in spite of that, because of the circumstances, they found it necessary to concede the case for a clause of this kind. I do not like to have to exercise a discretion of this kind. I would like to avoid being placed in a position where I have to exercise such discretion in individual cases. But if I am to discharge my duties as a Member of Government, I must accept the responsibility of exercising this discretion.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That clause 53 stands part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 53 was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I move:

"That after clause 53 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted, and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly:

'54. Protection of action taken under Act.—

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: We would like to adjourn now because there is a party at Government House.

Mr. Chairman: We must sit till 5 P.M.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I move:

"That after clause 53 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted, and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly:

'54. Protection of action taken under Act.—(1) No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any person for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act.

(2) Save as otherwise expressly provided by or under this Act, no suit or other legal proceeding shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any person for any damage caused or likely to be caused by anything in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act."

In the first place, I want to point out that a similar provision exists in many other countries in Canada, in Australia and in various countries. This particular provision follows the lines of a similar provision existing in these countries. It is also a provision which is common to many Indian Acts. If the House will look up the Damodar Valley Corporation Act, it will be seen that it was found necessary by the House that a provision of that kind should be inserted in it. The difference between the Reserve Bank and Joint Stock Banks—and I think it is a difference to which my honourable friend, Shri B. Das referred—is this. Here we have a Bill which places heavy responsibilities of supervision and control on the Reserve Bank. The Joint Stock Banks are not saddled with responsibilities of that kind. When you place special responsibilities on an institution, and the officers of that institution are called upon to exercise those responsibilities, if in good faith they do something which is likely to bring them within the mischief of the law, then it is in the public interest that they should be given a due measure of protection: otherwise public servants would not be in a position to discharge their duties fearlessly. So, I submit to the House that this amendment should be accepted.

Mr. Chairman: Amendment moved:

"That after clause 53 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted, and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly:

'54. Protection of action taken under Act.—(1) No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any person for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act.

(2) Save as otherwise expressly provided by or under this Act, no suit or other legal proceeding shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any person for any damage caused or likely to be caused by anything in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act."

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Before my friend starts may I suggest an amendment to the amendment, if that is possible? I think the honourable Minister will accept it because there cannot be a prosecution against the Central Government. The object of this clause will remain as good if we say "No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against any person". Prosecution should be against a particular person, whether an officer of the Government or not. There cannot be a prosecution of the Government or the Reserve Bank.

If I say no prosecution, the suit may be put in the second clause: "No prosecution shall lie against any person for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act". The second clause will cover the other cases.

Anyhow, there cannot be prosecution of the Central Government or of the Reserve Bank.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: A suit may lie!

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Legal proceedings can lie, but not prosecution!

Shri B. Das: That is a legal term. I think the Government of India can be prosecuted. Of course that is for Dr. Matthai to answer! I was filled with apprehension when the Honourable the Finance Minister tabled his amendment. Although at heart I do not like that the Government of India officers, who are following the traditions of the old I.C.S., should be exempt and should be condoned of their past follies and actions, and sometimes of their mismanagement and their exploitation and even corruption, still when I found that that was being done through the backdoor of the Reserve Bank Act, I was aghast. The honourable Minister has promised us, and the House has demanded it from the Government of India, that a complete Reserve Bank Amending Bill should be tabled on the floor so that we could examine it and see whether the Reserve Bank is true and loyal to my country. Up to date the Reserve Bank has been loyal to the United Kingdom Government. I am not going to condone any support to United Kingdom. My friend need not say.....

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I strongly protest against it.

Shri B. Das: You may protest. But what was the action of the henchmen of the Reserve Bank where millions of sterling of Indian money was sunk, and over which the honourable Minister it to make a statement on the 28th of this month. At that time the Reserve Bank did not help my country. The Reserve Bank, because it allowed the Imperial Bank to be its agent to bank all the taxpayers money has not worked in consonance with the country's national policy.

Mr. Chairman: May I inform the honourable member that this deals with future actions. It has got nothing to do with condonation of past action.

Shri B. Das: You must first be satisfied.....

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I should like to have an opportunity of saying that if my honourable friend is referring to the sterling balances, the Reserve Bank is not the body responsible for the problem but the old Government.

Mr. Chairman: Does the honourable member wish to continue his speech?

Shri B. Das: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Then he may continue tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 17th February, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES.

(PART II--PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Thursday, 17th February, 1949.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-45 A.M.

RAILWAYS (TRANSPORT OF GOODS) AMENDMENT BILL

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister for Railways and Transport). I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Railways (Transport of Goods) Act, 1947.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill further to amend the Railways (Transport of Goods) Act, 1947."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I introduce the Bill.

BANKING COMPANIES BILL—contd.

Mr. Speaker: The House will now proceed with the further consideration of the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to banking companies, as reported by the Select Committee.

The House was discussing the amendment for the insertion of a new clause 54.

[At this stage, Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar).]

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Before the House adjourned last evening I was opposing the new clause 54 which my honourable friend, the Finance Minister had tabled. I wish I had not been in opposition to him. Somehow, I find myself at variance, because these amendments are nothing but anti-national and anti-democratic. I feel that the time has not come to introduce such a measure, which gives such protection to the staff of the Reserve Bank. The Honourable Finance Minister is under an obligation to the House and to the country to amend the Reserve Bank Act properly. When that Reserve Bank amending Bill comes before the House, then the House will be prepared to consider whether such undemocratic protection can be given to the officers of the Reserve Bank.

Sir, I do not like the drafting of this amendment. My honourable friend Sri-jut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri had pointed out that the words "Central Government" should be dropped in the amendment. My honourable friend, the Finance Minister has taken his precedent from the Damodar Valley Corporation Act. When my honourable friend, Shri N. V. Gadgil referred that Bill to the Select Committee, I did raise objection in the Select Committee, but I then felt it was just to give effect to the practice that we have inherited from the former alien Government and that civil servants should be protected. In fact most of us knew a civilian would be the Chairman of the Damodar Valley Corporation. By taking that as a precedent, the Honourable the Finance Minister should allow this practice to permeate into every new Bill, as he has tabled, is the biggest surprise to me. We passed last year Bills for the Industrial Banking Corporation and the Rehabilitation Banking Corporation. In none of those two Bills such a protecting clause to the staff were given. Why are we in a hurry? That is what the House ought to know. Of course, my honourable friend, the Finance Minister may say that he did not table these two Bills; they were tabled by his predecessor, Shri R. K. Shanmukham Chetty.

I take this opportunity to welcome our friend, Shri R. K. Shanmukham Chetty to this House, and I am glad he is here and I am sure he will help us in coming to decisions on big and important financial and economic questions.

I was referring about the protection which the Central Government is to be given under this new sub-clause. Why should the Central Government need any protection by an Act of this House? It is a Sovereign Government; it has sovereign powers; it can exercise any moment those sovereign powers when the Cabinet, which is ruling over us, decides that certain sovereign powers will be exercised by the Central Government. Clause 57 of the Damodar Valley Corporation says:

"No suit, prosecution or legal proceedings shall lie against any person in the employment of the Corporation for anything which is in good faith done or purported to be done under this Act."

I do not know how within the short space of one year, perhaps due to the legal advisers or the banking advisers my honourable friend, the Finance Minister is enlarging the words in the proposed draft. The clause now reads:

".....shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any person for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act."

Perhaps the officials of the Reserve Bank want to protect themselves against all the absurdities they are committing. Unfortunately they have persuaded the Ministry of Finance to include in the draft the words "the Central Government." The Central Government as the sovereign authority, needs no protection under this Bill. I believe many eminent lawyers will argue the point about the Central Bank, the Reserve Bank, etc. I think it is very broad-based. On the whole I think the Ministry of Finance has been ill-advised and there are various points of law involved in this matter.

The question arises why the Bill that was introduced by my honourable friend Shri R. K. Shanmukham Chetty, his predecessor, last year, did not consummate. That Bill was referred to the Select Committee. Perhaps it was drafted by Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan. I do not find a minute of dissent from my honourable friend the Finance Minister that he referred to this matter in the Select Committee. There is no mention that the Honourable the Finance Minister had any intention of giving protection to so many people that have just entered the fold of nationalism. We have nationalised the money and structure of the Reserve Bank and we have handed over full control to my honourable friend over there. We have not nationalised the personnel of the Reserve Bank as yet. My honourable friend protested yesterday; but I do not agree with him that every Reserve Bank official works sincerely, and patriotically to the interest of the community. We have appointed no committee to look into the characteristics of every Reserve Bank official and see that he will suit the national structure of the Reserve Bank.

There is another thing. The Reserve Bank is an apex bank. It will control all banking concerns which are commercially managed. Why should the Reserve Bank officials, the bankers in the Reserve Bank have enjoy special privileges which the banks under my honourable friend Mr. Homi Mody will not have. My honourable friend Prof. K. T. Shah demanded at an earlier stage that all banking officials whether they are in a commercial bank or in the Reserve Bank should have similar privileges and similar status. Why should only the apex bank have these privileges? Apologising again for repetition, I again say that such privileges may be extended to the Imperial Bank officials, who are our public enemy number one, because I do not know what the Ministry of Finance will advise my honourable friend the Minister for Finance. We have transferred the Reserve Bank to the management of the State. That does not mean that it will depart from the principles of commercial management. If my honourable friend who, only before he assumed the Minister's position, was advising one of the biggest industrial concerns in India, says that all the privileges of the Government of India official should be introduced into the commercial concerns managed by Tatas, Birlas or that the employees of all the banks that are functioning in the national interests should claim the privileges as the Honourable the Minister is willing in a mood of benefaction to grant to the employees of the Reserve Bank, he will have to see himself if such a thing would be suitable, to the conditions in India.

My point is my honourable friend will see his way to withdraw his amendment. This can be introduced at a later stage; my honourable friend had no justification in bringing it forward when the Select Committee had not considered it. I am sorry, Sir, that you are in the Chair. I was anxious to know your views in the matter. There is no better upholder of democracy than you and I am sorry, at present you are confined in that Chair.

These are my views. I will bear my love to the Reserve Bank if it functions well. The Reserve Bank is mine. I will try to nationalise it. They need no protection. If we give protection to the Reserve Bank officials in one way or another, people of shady character will get into the Bank and do away with crores of Rupees. Then, my honourable friend or his successors 12 Noon will plead forgiveness of the House and of the country because, the House made a mistake by accepting the new clause 54. Sir, I oppose.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (West Bengal: General): I am sorry I will have to intervene once again in connection with this amendment even though it involves taking a little more time of my honourable friend the Finance Minister which could be profitably utilised for preparing his budget. With this little apology to him for taking a little of his time, I feel I should associate myself to some extent with what has dropped from my honourable friend Shri B. Das.

I think the House would do well to realise that it is now gradually passing into a sort of fashion with all sponsors of Bills of great magnitude or importance to tag on at the tail end a provision like this. I can well understand the psychology of those who have these important Bills to pass into legislation and who take a very long view, perhaps a far too long view, and try to give in advance all manner of safeguards to those who would be operating the provisions of the law against all possible, I may say, encroachment on their authority. It ought to be realised that the Bill as it is going to be enacted into law, is going to give very wide powers in the hands of the Reserve Bank and through it to the Government of India. I do not grudge it. I feel that in the present economic development of the country, unfortunately the credit organisations in the country have not been moving in the way in which they ought to move for the economic uplift of the country. Therefore, the case for wide powers is justified.

[Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra]

But, there is the other side of it. It has to be seriously considered whether we would be really serving the best interests of the community by giving protection not only to the officers or any person purporting to act under a particular law, in this case, the Banking law, in good faith; not only that, but with the intention to do it in good faith.

I feel this is stretching the law too far, giving protection far too wide. After all no human institution is perfect, we know. We have got to provide as best as we can against all possible contingencies. But this is an entirely different proposition from saying that the statutory body, the Reserve Bank, is to be clothed with such an authority that it ultimately becomes a body so sacrosanct that its activities cannot be called into question in a court of law. That I think is a very big dose for any democrat to swallow. It is for the Honourable the Finance Minister to consider whether or not this vast and onerous responsibility, these wide powers that are sought to be cast on the Reserve Bank would be exercised with due caution and utmost care as all such transactions ought to involve if they have got before hand an all-pervasive shield in the shape of the provision that we are enacting now, that they cannot be touched by any court. Still more surprising is this. The right of a citizen to sue even the State is a very well established right in this country. In a criminal proceeding we have no right. But certainly I fail to understand how the civil liability of a State in respect of any act done can be taken away or should be taken away under a specific legislative provision. In this particular case, as I say, the whole credit structure of the country is going to be determined by this Act. I welcome this Act. Many provisions in it are drastic but I feel that the time has come when these drastic powers should be in the hands of the Government or its agent, the Reserve Bank. But this is far from saying that this Government or the Reserve Bank or any person empowered to act under this Act should be a persona grata to such an extent that not even the highest court of Judicature can touch him. That is an absurd position I should say.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Only when it is done in good faith.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: 'Good faith' is a sacred expression which is prostituted so often. You know as much as I do, Sir, that good faith is easily turned into the worst possible faith and things done in malice prepenes and all manner of things have come under this spacious cover of good faith; and to establish good faith or bad faith is a Herculean task in any court of law. You, Mr. Deputy Speaker, can understand the tendency of law courts in this country. When a specific provision is made in an enactment ousting the jurisdiction of courts, naturally the courts will be most reluctant to entertain cases. They would hesitate many times before they enter into the question whether or not the bona fides is there or good faith is there. After all there are no golden scales to weigh to what extent this is good faith and it transgresses the border and passes into bad faith. It is very difficult. I can quite understand that some such provision is necessary but not to this wide extent. Certainly this is going far in excess of the real requirements of the thing. Apparently this amendment is an after-thought. Perhaps the Finance Minister thought that when he has been taking so much powers—while I am saying 'he' I say it impersonally and let him not therefore misunderstand; I am a great admirer of him and I have a high opinion of all his attainments; in fact he yesterday accepted an amendment which was in the normal course going to be defeated; but his appeal was so persuasive that even a strong mind like me had to accept it—perhaps he thought this power might also be taken. But I am asking whether he would be really serving the best interests of the community in this particular respect if he was going to provide this kind of a shield for all manner of people purporting to act under this Act—a shield for the Reserve Bank and ultimately the Government of India.

I can never reconcile myself to the position that a particular banking concern or body of persons who would be very adversely affected by any activities of the Central Government should not be unable to have the matter thoroughly gone into by any civil court to find out whether the provisions of the law have been properly applied or not. That will be the most salutary check. In most cases even in the absence of this provision the courts would be most unwilling to convict or penalise any public servant or any servant of the Reserve Bank if the court finds that he was really acting in good faith. Irrespective of whether there is any provision or not the court has the inherent right to go into the case whether he has done anything mischievously or maliciously. The court would automatically go into such a case and no specific provision is necessary. This simply helps the wrong-doers to get on in any way they like. This has got a demoralising effect which must be recognised. I will suggest to my honourable friend the Finance Minister to change it to such an extent that it could be acceptable very freely. Otherwise we have to swallow it, but we will have to swallow it with some pain in the stomach and in the throat.

Mr. Homi Mody (Bombay: General): I rise to support the principle underlying this amendment. I have been and shall always continue to be a strong supporter of private enterprise and I would therefore deprecate any sort of control either over industry or banking. It is not I who have asked for this measure. As a matter of fact my business here has been to try and soften the rigour of the Bill. It is with the support of my friends on this side that the Bill has been framed in the way in which it is placed before us. After empowering the Reserve Bank to carry out all manner of functions, if my honourable friend seek to take away from the Reserve Bank the protection to which it is entitled, I do not see how the Reserve Bank could ever exercise the functions entrusted to it.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: The Central Government as well.

Mr. Homi Mody: If they have to watch their step every time when they are dealing with any particular bank or group of banks and if they are not given this sort of protection—I am not saying that the full powers that are given here ought to be given, but some sort of protection for anything done by them in good faith—then they cannot function at all, and many of the provisions of this Bill would be completely meaningless. My honourable friends ought to realize that having given the Reserve Bank wide powers over banks in many of their operations, they cannot refuse Government the power with which they seek to clothe themselves as well as the Reserve Bank and their officers. Only on a matter of phrasing I was wondering whether the Finance Minister would agree to drop out the word "Prosecution". It was suggested by somebody yesterday that a prosecution cannot lie against the Government or an authority like the Reserve Bank. Suppose you were to say "No suit or other legal proceeding" I should have thought that would cover every conceivable case in which the Reserve Bank could be involved. With this suggestion I support the amendment.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Then it is a question of the extent of protection and I agree with you.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): I rise to support the amendment moved by the honourable the Finance Minister though I myself am not a banker. I shall be very brief. The position which has been described by my honourable friend Pandit Maitra is not so absurd as it is described to be. A provision of this kind is absolutely necessary to safeguard the interests of any individual or a body which is entrusted with the responsibility of discharging certain functions of this dimension which are required to be discharged by the Reserve Bank.

[Shrimati G. Durgabai]

The remarks made by Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra and also my honourable friend Shri B. Das might have been relevant to the position of the Reserve Bank previous to this nationalisation. Now they do not absolutely apply to the present position. I need not repeat all the points made by the Honourable the Finance Minister in his reply yesterday. In a matter of this kind as he has stated there must be some trust somewhere in a body which has been assigned with the definite functions of discharging such heavy responsibilities which the Reserve Bank is required to discharge...

Pandit Lakshmi Kantta Maitra: I fully agree but the trouble is one of putting trust everywhere.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: I do not understand. Certainly the Reserve Bank is directly responsible to the Finance Minister of this Government in whom we have confidence and I do not understand why honourable members should think it necessary to oppose the amendment, which is a salient amendment, that has been moved by the Honourable the Finance Minister.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U. P.: General): My honourable friend Mr. Mody has told us that his efforts in the Select Committee on the Bill were to soften its rigours. We may take it then that the Bill as placed before this House was a more rigorous measure than the Bill that has emerged from the Select Committee. Yet the Bill as introduced contained no provision of the kind that my honourable friend the Finance Minister wants us to insert in the Bill now. This measure went before the Select Committee. It was thoroughly discussed then. The Committee contained men competent to discuss every aspect of the matter but it made no recommendation supporting the insertion of a new clause like the one placed before us by the Finance Minister. The necessity of amending the banking law has been apparent to Government for years. The measure before us is the result of years of deliberation and yet when Government placed the fruit of their experience and thought before us it contained no such drastic provision as the Finance Minister wants us to accept. It is not enough therefore either for Mr. Mody or the Finance Minister to say that as this Bill is of a drastic nature it is necessary, if it is to be properly worked, that the officials of the Reserve Bank should be given the immunity that the new clause proposes to confer. The Minister of Finance must tell us what are the special reasons on account of which he has been compelled at this stage to bring forward such an amendment.

So far as I remember it was not the custom in the old days, even when drastic measures were considered by the legislature to confer immunity in advance on the officials that might be concerned with the administration of such laws. Usually, it is the general belief, such a provision is necessary only during a war or rebellion or in emergencies requiring Government to take special measures to maintain law and order. This was, I believe, the practice of the bureaucratic Government whom we criticised daily and severely for trying to restrict the liberties of the people. But now we have a national government which is asking for such a drastic power when the situation is normal. It is true that there is such a provision in the Damodar Valley Corporation Act but is that a precedent to be followed whenever important legislation is considered by this House? If it is desired that the officials should be safeguarded in advance against any action that might be taken against them for any act done by them in the exercise of their authority, a simpler thing would be to include such a provision in the draft constitution of the Government of India. If we have such a provision there we shall be saved the painful necessity of having to discuss such provisions again and again.

Sir, however wide the powers conferred by the Bill before us on the Reserve Bank officials or on other persons may be, we cannot allow the liberties of the people in any respect to be completely at the mercy of any class of functionaries. It has been usual to grant protection to officials by passing Acts of indemnity after emergencies when the servants of the Government might have been compelled, in view of the situation confronting them, to depart from the letter of the law. Here we are practically asking for a kind of indemnity act before any situation requiring it has developed.

We are not prepared to revise our ideas about the liberties and the rights of the people and to grant every kind of power to the present Government simply because it calls itself national. If it is to be a satisfactory reply to every objection that the Minister is a popular Minister, responsible to the Legislature, then this Legislature is not necessary at all. It was absolutely unnecessary to give so much time to the discussion of the Bill before us; we could have taken the Bill on trust from my honourable friend the Minister of Finance who is a popular Minister and pass it at once. If we have a Legislature—a democratic Legislature—its object must be to control the activities of a democratic Government. You cannot have a democratic Legislature with an autocratic executive; democratic Legislatures are associated only with democratic executives (Shri Brajeshwar Prasad: “Is the executive democratic here?”) to control their actions and their discretion. The existence of a popular Government, therefore, far from justifying any and every action taken by the Government, requires the Legislature to exercise the power that it enjoys, as carefully as possible. When a Legislature is democratic and possesses the fullest powers to pass any legislation and to control the executive in any manner it likes, its responsibility towards the public is in proportion to the authority that it enjoys, and it is therefore incumbent on it to scrutinise the acts of the executive persistently and watchfully so that the responsibility that it owes to the public might be fulfilled.

For the reasons that I have given, I support the protest of my honourable friend Mr. B. Das, against the amendment proposed by the Honourable the Minister of Finance.

Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao (Mysore State): With very great respect to the honourable members who opposed this amendment, I beg to differ from them. What would be the result of throwing out this amendment? It would lead to a plethora of civil suits against the Reserve Bank and its officials and the Central Government.

Under this Bill, very wide powers have been given to the Reserve Bank to control the banking system in the country; power of inspection; power to call for accounts, power to initiate liquidation proceedings. In fact, after the Banking Ordinance was passed, the Ordinance has worked very well and our banking system has turned out very good work during the last year. Perhaps it was expected that under the stress and strain of the last year, banking would fail in this country, but the Ordinance which gave powers to the Reserve Bank to control the banking system has worked wonderfully well, and if we do not give this protection and indemnity to the Reserve Bank and the Central Government, and to the officers who act under the authority given to the Reserve Bank, I am afraid it would nullify the very provisions of this Bill. In fact, criticism was levelled against the Government that greater powers were not given under the Bill, but if the powers that are given are to be enforced effectively, I think this indemnity is very necessary.

Sir, I support the amendment.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): I am very much surprised at the opposition to this innocent and very reasonable amendment that has been proposed by the Honourable Minister of Finance, and I am further surprised at the carping criticism, and very strong criticism, levelled by my friend Pandit Kunru.

We find this clause in all the important Acts which we have framed here. In fact, there is a Bill before me even now, a Bill relating to the transfer of properties. Therein there is a clause: "No suit, prosecution or legal proceedings shall lie against the Central Government". (An Honourable Member: "Has that Bill been passed?"). The Select Committee has passed it. But what I want to contend is that it is not correct to say that this provision is exceptionally provided in this Banking Bill alone. That is what I want to argue. If you are not going to exempt your own officers who are doing things in the best interests and in the best faith, I want to know how could there be a check over those banks, which we are demanding consistently and with great force? A similar clause is contained in the Transfer of Property Bill. The Select Committee has only omitted one or two words, but they have on the whole approved of it.

Then I only find this objection. If "any person" has connection with the bank or Government, then I have no objection, but the language to me seems to be a little loose and it should be stated that exemption should be given to the Central Government and the Reserve Bank and nobody else. An individual, in any capacity, functioning in the name of the Reserve Bank or the Government may go and do anything. I might draw the attention of the House to the fact that the Jawala Bank has filed a suit against the Government. The Government has acted in the best faith. On the contrary, I say that they are too late; they should have saved the money of the depositors, they should have taken more drastic action earlier. Nearly Rs. 2½ lakhs of the poor depositors' have been wasted. I know some of them; they are very poor people; some of the money was endowment money. They are liquidating these deposits by 60 per cent; they started from 80 and are now coming to 60 per cent.

My honourable friend who opposes the amendment does it for the benefit of the depositors. If you go on this way, then the Reserve Bank will have no power anywhere and the banks can do anything they like. What would happen in the Jawa Bank case if such a provision does not occur here? Anybody could go and sue the Reserve Bank. They have sued not only the Governor of the Bank but also the Central Government and probably the Government of Bombay also. Therefore, I contend that this provision is a healthy one. Where does the question of our independence come in here? After all, we are a sovereign body and the Reserve Bank is our Bank. If it does anything wrong we can always see to it; we can haul up the Minister if he does anything against the interests of the people. After all, there is no comparison between the previous Government and the present Government. Howsoever the Ministers are functioning, it is we who can control the Ministers. And if any officer of the Reserve Bank cannot take notice of such actions it is our fault. But we have got power under the Free Government and we can do as we like. If the Reserve Bank official goes and troubles anybody unnecessarily, the House will be alert; any Member can take action on this matter.

Therefore, I do not see the necessity of creating unnecessarily any strong opposition and heat in this matter. I welcome this. I do not know why it has escaped the notice of the Select Committee. I feel this is a very important provision and it is absolutely necessary to have it in the interests of the depositors.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): I rise to support this amendment on a much wider ground than has been done here. It is a most necessary provision and really desirable, without which the Bill would not work. We are placing large duties on the Reserve Bank in the interests of depositors and of banking generally. We also place large powers on the Government for the same purpose. What is complained is that the Government and the Reserve Bank are being invested with some new power. I submit that no power is being given to the Government or the Reserve Bank. What is being given is protection to the Reserve Bank or the Government of India or any person acting under the Bill. For what? For anything done or intended to be done "in pursuance of this Act" and all that "in good faith." If anybody does anything in pursuance of the Act,—a duty which is laid upon him under this Act—it is only meet and proper to afford protection to him and it is absurd to deny that protection. It is giving no powers but giving protection for a bona fide act. I submit this power is given in the Government of India Act and other similar Acts. There was a lacuna which somehow or other escaped attention, and it should be our duty to remove it.

There is only one point of drafting made by Mr. Mody. This may be considered by the Draftsmen.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): It was this humble self who, for the first time, suggested yesterday that this clause would be perfectly in order if only the Honourable Minister would agree to delete the No. 1 portion of his amendment. I think the House will welcome this new clause if he agrees to do that. If my suggestion is accepted, it will be a saving clause and would read:

"Save as otherwise expressly provided by or under this Act, no suit or other legal proceeding shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any person for any damage caused or likely to be caused by anything in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act."

This covers all that is wanted. I do not understand why any protection is necessary either to the Central Government or to the Reserve Bank so far as criminal prosecution is concerned. There should be the question of protection only when there is danger. I cannot conceive of any circumstance which would entitle any person to prosecute either an officer of the Reserve Bank or the Central Government so long as they carry out the provisions of this Bill. It is only, I repeat, when there is a sense of danger the talk of protection can come. When there is absolutely no sense of danger, how does it arise?

Then, again, there are various ambiguities in the clause itself. Take for instance sub-clause (1) which says:

"No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against.....any person for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act."

Now, what is meant by "any person"? Does it include a manager of a bank, an agent of a bank or an employee of a bank other than the Reserve Bank or a member of the public? You can protect any person connected with the Central Government or Reserve Bank. That I can possibly understand, but what is meant by "any person"?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Any person who acts "in pursuance of this Act."

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Who acts? What are the obligations left on the public to act under the provisions of this Act?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: They would not be protected.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: But what is the circumstance in which such protection may be necessary? My honourable friend who supported the Honourable Minister in respect of this clause suggested that the clause should be kept intact. But he has not given any reason or illustration whereby we could have come to the conclusion that protection might be necessary to any person who is acting in pursuance of this Act. My honourable friend Mr. Ahmad has supported the amendment because he belongs to the class of persons who give amendments and amender is acceptable to them, whether in the Government Bench or on the ordinary bench on this side. All are his dearest friends. Therefore, he is bound to support any class of amendments and I do not give any serious weight to his support.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab:General): Is that mala fide support?

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: That is his habit. My honourable friend knows very well how midnight oil has to be burnt in preparing these amendments, and he should naturally have sympathy for the Honourable Minister who said yesterday that he has to pass "sleepless nights and sleepy days" over his amendments. Talking seriously over this matter, I would again respectfully request the Honourable the Finance Minister to drop the first part of clause 54 and to go on with the second part and I suppose that will satisfy everybody in this House.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister for Finance): My task has been lightened by the speeches of some honourable members who have been good enough to support me in the matter of this amendment. I want to make it perfectly clear that for some time since this Bill was taken into consideration by the Select Committee, I myself was in doubt whether it was necessary to have a provision of this kind. But reports have been reaching me, particularly with reference to the working of the Banking Ordinance recently published, which contains provisions more or less similar to the provision of this Bill, that people are contemplating bringing suits on frivolous grounds against our officers who are taking action in pursuance of the provisions of the Ordinance. Having considered the matter carefully, I came to the conclusion that if you are going to place these very important responsibilities upon officers, and at the same time are not prepared to give them protection in respect of acts which, as Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad pointed out, they have done in good faith in pursuance of the Act, then the necessary result would be that officers would rather not do anything that might land them in embarrassing consequences. It gives us no pleasure to exercise these responsibilities, but because of the way in which banking has been developing in this country in recent years it is necessary that the interests of the large community of depositors should be properly safeguarded. It is really a question of balancing considerations. On one side is this very important consideration that no officer who has done a wrong should escape: on the other hand, an officer honestly, earnestly trying to discharge the duties that the Legislature places upon him should receive protection. Otherwise, the result would be not merely that you would be treating him unfairly but nullifying the purpose of the legislation.

Recently I have been having reports that unless something on these lines was enacted the result would be that the Executive upon whom the responsibility in the last resort rests, would be rendered impotent. I therefore beg the House to consider the need for a provision of this kind, if we are at all serious about the provisions of this Bill.

We are not doing anything unique in this matter. The provision that we have put in, in substance is the provision that occurs in very many other countries. I shall read the relevant provision of the Australian Banking Act:

"14. The Commonwealth Bank, the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Commonwealth Bank, and any officer of the Commonwealth Bank, shall not be subject to any action, claim, or demand by, or any liability to, any person in respect of anything done or omitted to be done in good faith and without negligence in the exercise or in connexion with the exercise, of the powers conferred on the Commonwealth Bank under this Division."

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Not the Commonwealth Government of Australia? This is the National Bank.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Yes, the Commonwealth.

In this matter we are not in a different position and it seems to me, if we are going to make any progress in matters of this kind, we must give some considerations to the action taken by other countries who have had experience in this matter and have been faced with problems of this kind longer than we have been.

The position at present is that we are not introducing anything drastically new. Looking at the problem from the point of view of our country, the case law that has developed on the subject practically gives this direction. All that we are trying to do is to give statutory form to case law. The House I think has recognised the principle more than once, and I do not see why the House should go back on it in this case. There is the Mines and Minerals Act, the Factories Act, and numerous other Acts, in which the House has given approval to this principle, and I do not see why in this particular case the House should go back on what they have done after due consideration. I implore the House and honourable members who do not find justification for this Bill, to reconsider the position. I have not introduced it lightly. I have given due consideration to the matter. Pandit Kunzru raised the very valid point that the matter has been before the House and before Select Committees for a long period and he asked, "Why did not you take steps earlier." I have the same kind of prejudice against provisions of this kind as Pandit Kunzru. But because matters were brought to my notice recently which made it necessary to re-examine the position I brought it up at this stage.

Certain suggestions for modifications have been made in the course of the discussion. In view of the fact that there is this widespread apprehension that a provision of this kind, in its actual working might result in abuses, I would like to give two assurances to the House. First of all, I will carefully watch the working of this particular provision in the light of the discussion which has taken place in the House today, and if I find in the actual working of it that consequences have arisen of the kind that are anticipated, I am quite prepared to have the matter reconsidered. The second assurance that I want to give is this. A certain amount of fear has been expressed that the wording of the provision as it stands now probably gives it an unduly extensive scope. In order to meet that point, I think it was raised by several Honourable Members,—I am prepared to have the amendment modified in this form.

"54. Protection of action taken under Act.—(1) No suit or other legal proceeding shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any officer for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act."

Shri B. L. Sondhi: Who is that officer? A Government officer?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Would be either! For part (2) of the amendment I would drop the word "person" and have the word "officer".

That to a substantial extent meets the objections that have been raised. I hope in that modified form the House would approve of it.

Mr. Homi Mody: Instead of "any officer" we may say "any of their officers."

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: "Any officer" is better. I have considered the point carefully.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Why not "any officer or servant"?

588 CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [17TH FEB. 1949]

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: No: "any officer".

Shri B. Das: I am dull enough. I do not appreciate why it is the Central Government. It has not been done in the Damodar Valley Corporation Act nor in any other such Act.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: The Central Government acts on the advice of the Reserve Bank in many matters and if there is any officer of the Government who is entrusted with this responsibility, he should also be protected.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U. P.: General): Instead of "pursuance of this Act" the words "under the Act" may be substituted, because in that case it would be known that it would not be a mistake of law but one of fact, if at all it is a mistake. Then under the Indian Penal Code and other Criminal Acts, it is generally deemed that if an offence is committed under a mistake of fact and not of law, that offence would be no offence provided there is good faith on the part of the man who commits it.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I think the amendment should be formally moved.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think the House has any objection to the modified amendment as proposed by the Honourable Minister?

The question is:

"That after clause 53 of the Bill, the following new clause be inserted, and the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly:

'54. Protection of action taken under Act.—(1) No suit or other legal proceeding shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any officer for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act.

(2) Save as otherwise expressly provided by or under this Act, no suit or other legal proceeding shall lie against the Central Government, the Reserve Bank or any officer for any damage caused or likely to be caused by anything in good faith done or intended to be done in pursuance of this Act."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That clause 54 (re-numbered as clause 55) stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 54 (re-numbered as clause 55) was added to the Bill.

Clause 55 (re-numbered as clause 56) was added to the Bill.

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साहू : मैं प्रस्ताव करता हूँ:

"That after clause 55 (re-numbered as clause 56) of the Bill, the following new clause be added:

'55A. Advisory Committee for Reserve Bank.—.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is a Board of Management already constituted for the Reserve Bank.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: It is a separate Advisory Committee that I want. I move:

"That after clause 55 (re-numbered as clause 56) of the Bill, the following new clause be added:

'55A. Advisory Committee for Reserve Bank.—(1) The Reserve Bank shall exercise supervision, control and direction over banks or banking companies under the guidance of the Advisory Committee in the discharge of these functions, as constituted in sub-section (2).

(2) The Advisory Committee shall consist of five members, namely,—

(a) three nominated by Indian Banks' Association;

(b) one nominated by the Central Government; and

(c) one nominated by the Reserve Bank of India.

(3) The meetings of the Advisory Committee shall be presided over by the Governor or in his absence by the Deputy Governor."

मिस्टर डिप्टी स्पीकर : क्या कोई बैंक्स एसोसियेशन है।

श्री लक्ष्मीनारायण साहू : जी, है। सिलेक्ट कमेटी की रिपोर्ट में यह लिखा है।

"We the undersigned members of the Select Committee, to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to banking companies was referred, have considered the Bill. The evidence tendered by the delegation of the Indian Banks' Association headed by Sir Homi Mody....."

इसलिए मैं समझता हूँ कि अगर हम इस एडवाइज़री कमेटी को रखेंगे तो यह एक क्लिक के माफिक काम करेगी, पब्लिक के साथ और बैंक और गवर्नमेंट के साथ। यह एक अच्छा क्लिक होगा और यह इंपैक्टिव भी होगा ऐसा मैं सोचता हूँ। इस बिल के लिए यह सन्देह हो गया है कि इतना पावर ले लिया है, इससे हम लोगों को खराबी होगी। तो मैं समझता हूँ कि अगर यह मान लिया जाय तो यह सन्देह आसानी से दूर किया जा सकता है। इसीलिए मैं ज्यादा समय न लेकर यही कहना चाहता हूँ कि इस एडवाइज़री कमेटी को फाइनेन्स मिनिस्टर मान लें तो बहुत अच्छा होगा।

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: I move:

"That after clause 55 (re-numbered as clause 56) of the Bill the following new clause be added:

'55A. Advisory Committee for Reserve Bank.—.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is a Board of Management already constituted for the Reserve Bank.

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: It is a separate Advisory Committee that I want. I move:

"That after clause 55 (re-numbered as clause 56) of the Bill the following new clause be added:

55A. Advisory Committee for Reserve Bank.—(1) The Reserve Bank shall exercise supervision, control and direction over banks or banking companies under the guidance of the Advisory Committee in the discharge of these functions, as constituted in sub-section (2).

(2) The advisory Committee shall consist of five members, namely,—

(a) three nominated by Indian Banks' Association;

(b) one nominated by the Central Government; and

(c) one nominated by the Reserve Bank of India.

(3) The meetings of the Advisory Committee shall be presided over by the Governor or in his absence by the Deputy Governor."

This Banking Bill has been discussed at great length. Several people suspect the Reserve Bank has taken so much power that like a wolf it would devour small banks. For this very reason I wish to put in this clause, whereby people in general would know how the Reserve Bank works. For this very reason I wish to provide for an Advisory Committee. We see that in several quarters where Advisory Committees exist no good work is done, but I think that in the case of the Advisory Committee which we provide for in the present case we should so frame the rules that in pursuance thereof there must be, at least, one meeting of the Advisory Committee every month or every two or three months. In other cases, where Advisory Committees exist their working is not good, the committee is not called, it holds its meeting perhaps once in a year. This shall not happen here. Rules should be made in such a way that, at least, one meeting of the Advisory Committee must take place every month, or if that is not possible, every two months or, at any rate, every three months.

One seat on this Committee has been given to the Reserve Bank and three to the Indian Banks Association. This, I feel, should give adequate power to the Banks Association and the banks.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does any Banks Association exist?

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: Yes, Sir, it does. The report of the Select Committee contains the following:

"We the undersigned members of the Select Committee, to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to banking companies was referred, have considered the Bill, the evidence tendered by the delegation of the Indian Banks' Association headed by Sir Homi Mody....."

It is for this reason that I think that if we provide for this Advisory Committee it will serve as a link between the public on the one hand and the Bank and the Government on the other. I feel it will be a good link and that it will be effective too. A suspicion has cropped up in regard to this Bill that so much power has been assumed that it would cause us harm. I think that if this proposal is agreed to this suspicion could easily be removed. Therefore, I shall not take any more time. I only wish to say that it would be very good if the Finance Minister should agree to this proposal for an Advisory Committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That after clause 55 (re-numbered as clause 56) of the Bill the following new clause be added:

55A. Advisory Committee for Reserve Bank.—(1) The Reserve Bank shall exercise supervision, control and direction over banks or banking companies under the guidance of the Advisory Committee in the discharge of these functions, as constituted in sub-section (2).

(2) The Advisory Committee shall consist of five members, namely,—

(a) three nominated by Indian Banks' Association;

(b) one nominated by the Central Government; and

(c) one nominated by the Reserve Bank of India.

(3) The meetings of the Advisory Committee shall be presided over by the Governor or in his absence by the Deputy Governor."

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): I rise to oppose this amendment. Firstly, I find that the wording of the first part is so vague that it would be impossible to discharge the functions if this is allowed. The honourable member has not been able to say what the Advisory Committee will do. He wants advice. The clause reads: "The Reserve Bank shall exercise supervision, control and direction over banks or banking companies under the guidance of the Advisory Committee in the discharge of these functions..." Now, what are the functions and are they to audit or advise on restriction of dividends or prohibition of charge of fee or restriction of commission? Unless these are defined, the Advisory Committee will be giving advice on every subject, which will be impossible for the Reserve Bank to carry out. The second part is that the Advisory Committee shall consist of five members, namely,—(a) three nominated by Indian Banks' Association; (b) one nominated by the Central Government; and (c) one nominated by the Reserve Bank of India. Then we do not know how many banking associations there are. There may be one Central Bank, non-scheduled banks Association and I think there may be trouble about the provincial Association of banks in Assam. In Bengal, there may probably be another association and we do not know how many representatives will have to be returned from each. Three nominated members are mentioned here, but they will be different in the different provinces and it will be difficult to know who will become one. I therefore think that if this amendment is allowed, it will be more unhelpful to the Reserve Bank than what is intended to be as such. I oppose this amendment.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I will oppose this amendment for this reason, that the main object of this Bill is to exercise control and supervision even to the point of discipline over banking companies, and I do not think it will conduce to efficient administration, if an Advisory Committee is set up, of which the majority would be composed of representatives of the very people whom this Bill is intended to supervise and control. Apart from that if it is conceded that there is a case for an Advisory Committee, I see no reason why the Advisory Committee should be composed only of people representing banks, because there are other interests which this Bill covers. I am against this amendment.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That after clause 55 (re-numbered as clause 56) of the Bill, the following new clause be added:

55A. Advisory Committee for Reserve Bank.—(1) The Reserve Bank shall exercise supervision, control and direction over banks or banking companies under the guidance of the Advisory Committee in the discharge of these functions, as constituted in sub-section (2).

(2) The Advisory Committee shall consist of five members, namely,—

(a) three nominated by Indian Banks' Association;

(b) one nominated by the Central Government; and

(c) one nominated by the Reserve Bank of India.

(3) The meetings of the Advisory Committee shall be presided over by the Governor or in his absence by the Deputy Governor."

The motion was negatived.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I have got an amendment.

Mr. Speaker: I think that might be put last or at the third reading.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I move:

"That in the First Schedule to the Bill, in column 4, in item (3) in clause (a) (iii) of the proposed sub-section (6) of Section 42 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934, the words 'or the Acceding States to which the Banking Companies Act, 1949, applies' be added at the end."

It is necessary here though in the body of the Bill it is not necessary. Wherever we use the word 'Province' according to sub-clause (2) of clause 5 of the Bill, we mean that the Acceding States are also included. But we are here concerned with an amendment of the Reserve Bank of India Act, where this definition does not apply. The word 'Province' means under this Bill, the Acceding States too. We are concerned with the amendment of the Reserve Bank of India Act and the passage occurs in page 19, item (iii) at the top:

"(iii) is a company as defined in clause (2) of section 2 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 (VII of 1913) or a corporation or a company incorporated by or under any law in the Provinces of India."

As this is part of the Reserve Bank of India Act the Provinces under that Act do not include the Acceding States. In fact, we want to substitute sub-section (6) to Section 42 of the Reserve Bank of India Act and in that Act 'Provinces' do not include the Acceding States. In case we have power to legislate, this provision should apply to the Acceding States also. We have adopted the principle that Acceding States are also included under the Bill by means of a special definition at the bottom of page 2 of the Bill under 'Interpretation' that in the application of this Act, all references to 'Provinces of India' shall be construed as including reference to the 'Acceding States' to which this Act applies. This special safeguard or special definition would not apply to the Reserve Bank of India Act, as we are going to insert a clause in the Reserve Bank of India Act by this amendment. We should, therefore, extend the area of the Provinces to include also Acceding States. If that is the intention, it requires this amendment. If the Acceding States should not be included in it, then the amendment is not necessary. The amendment is necessary if it is intended. It can not be implied. It could be implied in the present Bill, but not in the Reserve Bank of India Act. This, I submit, should be carefully enquired into and if necessary incorporated.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I do not accept the amendment for the simple reason that the Schedule is a part of the Act and therefore clause 5 sub-clause (2) applies equally to the Schedule.

Mr. Speaker: Is there any definition of "provinces" in the Reserve Bank of India Act?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: No. This is a later idea. When the Reserve Bank of India Act was passed, this was never thought of. It is on account of the accession of the States that this idea is growing up.

Mr. Speaker: I am not conversant with the provisions of that Act. The Honourable Minister may consider this position. The argument, as I understand it, of the honourable member is that as the schedule speaks of an amendment to the Reserve Bank of India Act, sub-section (6) of section 42, the wording in this should follow the wording in the Reserve Bank of India Act. If the 'provinces of India' are not defined there, then, what would be the position here?

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyanagar (Madras: General): The wording "outside the Provinces of India" will include Acceding States also.

Mr. Speaker: I cannot say anything of my own on this. If the honourable Minister thinks that it carries out the intention properly, then, I have nothing to say. I suppose he is clear.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I have examined this; I am clear on the point.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: My own feeling is this. There is no need for the amendment. Let us go back to page 18. It is stated:

"In section 42, for sub-section (6) the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely:

(6) The Bank shall, save as hereinafter provided, by notification in the Gazette of India,—

(a) direct the inclusion in the Second Schedule of any Bank not so already included..."

What banks are they? A Bank—

".....which carries on the business of banking in any province of India and which—

(i) has a paid up capital.....

(ii) satisfies the Bank that its affairs are not being conducted in manner detrimental to the interests of its depositors, and

(iii) is a company as defined in clause (2) of section 2 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 (VII of 1913) or a corporation or a company incorporated by or under any law in force in any place outside the Provinces of India."

Thus it must be a company satisfying one or the other of the conditions coming under clauses (i) to (iii). In those circumstances, it could be included in the second schedule. My own impression is.....

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: If I may interrupt for a moment, the Reserve Bank Act does not extend to the Acceding States. It applies only to the provinces.

Mr. Speaker: That is exactly the difficulty which the honourable the mover of the amendment has felt.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: The Reserve Bank Act applies only to the provinces. It applies to banks which carry on business within the provinces. Under the Reserve Bank Act the Reserve Bank can control in whatever manner it can control the indigenous banks which are both incorporated within the provinces and also carry on business, as also those banks, wherever they may have been incorporated, which carry on business within the provinces of India. What is said in clause (iii) is:

"is a company as defined in clause (2) of section 2 of the Indian Companies Act, or a corporation or a company incorporated by or under any law in force in any place outside the Provinces of India."

'Outside the provinces of India' will mean acceding States also. Therefore, there is no need to say, in any of the acceding States. As it is, without the addition, it is wide enough to cover not only the acceding States, but other countries also outside India, whether within the provinces or not.

Mr. Speaker: Is that clear to the honourable member?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It is not clear to me, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: He is inviting attention to the words in sub-clause (iii): "or a corporation or a company incorporated by or under any law in force in any place outside the Provinces of India".

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: If they carry on business within the provinces.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: In that case, I do not press my amendment, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the First Schedule stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The First Schedule was added to the Bill.

The Second Schedule was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I move:

"That in the Third Schedule to the Bill, in Form A, for item (i) under the head 'INVESTMENTS (stating mode of valuation, e.g., cost or market value)', the following be substituted:

"(i) Securities of the Central and Provincial Governments and Trustee Securities, including Treasury Bills of the Central and Provincial Government."

This is simply to make it clear that these securities include Provincial Government securities.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in the Third Schedule to the Bill, in Form A, for item (i) under the head 'INVESTMENTS (stating mode of valuation, e.g., cost or market value)', the following be substituted:

"(i) Securities of the Central and Provincial Governments and Trustee Securities, including Treasury Bills of the Central and Provincial Governments."

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I want to have clarification on this. Mention is made of the securities of the Central and Provincial Governments and trustee securities. Does the honourable Minister mean by 'trustee securities' port trust debentures, and all that? In what sense does he use the word 'trustee securities' here? Secondly, does he mean to include corporation debentures and municipal debentures that may be issued by big corporations and municipalities? Thirdly, I want to know whether 'trustee securities' mean properties created under the Trusts Act.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: All the securities classified under the Trustees Act.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Does he also include Municipal corporations?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I believe so.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: It is not a question of believing; you must make it clear.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I do not think I can give an answer to these questions straightaway. All the securities which the Government of India would accept as trustee securities under the provisions of the Trustees Act.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: He can refer to the Indian Trusts Act.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in the Third Schedule to the Bill, in Form A, for item (i) under the head 'INVESTMENTS (stating mode of valuation, e.g., cost or market value)', the following be substituted:

"(i) Securities of the Central and Provincial Governments and Trustee Securities, including Treasury Bills of the Central and Provincial Governments."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I do not propose to move my amendment unless the honourable Minister agrees to it.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I do not accept that.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Then I do not move that.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Third Schedule, as amended, stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The Third Schedule, as amended, was added to the Bill.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir I move:

"That in the heading of the First and Second Schedules to the Bill, for the figures '54' and '55', the figures '55' and '56' be substituted respectively."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in the heading of the First and Second Schedules to the Bill, for the figures '54' and '55', the figures '55' and '56' be substituted respectively."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Is it necessary to move these things in the House? They are only formal matters.

Mr. Speaker: In Bombay, the practice was these things were taken at the third reading stage. The draftsman used to watch the proceedings and carry out these things in the third reading of the Bill. Here, the practice seems to be a general authority given by the House to make such changes as may be necessary. We shall put that at the end.

The question is:

"That clause 1 stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

Prof. K. T. Shah (Bihar: General):

"That in the Preamble to the Bill, after the word 'Whereas' the following be inserted: 'banking is a public utility service, intimately concerned with the economic development of the country;'"

Mr. Speaker: The honourable member wants to insert these words after "Whereas" and before the words "it is expedient to consolidate and amend"?

Prof. K. T. Shah: Yes, because the Preamble epitomises the substance—the purpose and objectives—of the Bill in a very brief form. As such I have tried to bring out by my amendment that salient item in the purpose of this Bill which the Preamble as it now stands does not contain.

Sir, I have advisedly not moved the other amendments which are standing in my name on the Title, Preamble and clause 1 of the Bill, as the House has by its earlier decision shown a disinclination to accept the view point which I am trying to put forward; and therefore it would be inadvisable for me to take once again the time of the House by putting forward those amendments. But even accepting the view that this Bill is a Bill only confined to commercial banks, though that is not quite clearly stated by the Title or Preamble; and though it is not a consolidating Bill as is claimed in the first line, one may nevertheless point out the real function of banks as public utility service, and as concerns which are intimately concerned with the development of the country, its economic resources and potentialities. Even if you confine the Bill strictly—though it is not stated so—in all its operative sections to the commercial banks and commercial banks alone, it would be perfectly right and proper to say that even commercial banking is a public utility service; and that it is intimately connected with the development of the economic resources of the country and realisation of its potentialities.

I do not think this proposition could be questioned on the ground of its correct description. It may be questioned by those who would not like to recognize that banking is a public utility service, because the consequences of such a recognition may be more than they are prepared to accept. A public utility service has to be conducted primarily for the benefit of the public, and not for the benefit of the proprietors, if any. That is a view which may lead to many consequential changes or many consequential alterations and a radical reorientation of the provisions of the Bill, which may not be welcome to those people to accept.

I am not concerned, Sir, with combatting that attitude. If, as I hope, I have a chance to say a few words in the final stage, or what is called the third reading of the Bill, I shall point out why and how I consider the Bill, as I have so far considered it, to be objectionable and as such should not be passed. But at this point, at the penultimate stage of its passage, I am making a forlorn effort, trying to see if light would still dawn upon people who have sleepless nights and sleepy days. I know that light is absent at night: And if they happen to be sleepy in the day when the sun is shining, they miss the light even if it comes upon them.

That being so I fear I am carrying once again in the wilderness. But I may point out that those who are charged with the responsibility of piloting this Bill have themselves found out so many defects in its provisions that they are themselves obliged to change their mind even in the course of an hour. When an amendment was being moved they had given a positive declaration of their intention of not accepting it, but after hearing an honourable member more lucky than myself and finding some sense in that amendment than they had imagined at first, at least have accepted that. To me, Sir, this is an indication that the matter has not received the thought, attention, care and consideration that is due to such an organic measure as this. Though we may have every sympathy—I certainly have—with those who are charged with the heavy responsibility of preparing a Budget and having at the same time this great organic measure of economic reform so near at the budget time, I still feel that it was in their hands to rearrange the programme in such a manner that they might have had both a sleepful night and a sleepless day so that they might be able to attend more carefully, intelligently and closely to such matters as this; so that the House might be spared from giving a wide, large blank cheque—I am using banking language of course—to the Draftsmen to make, even at the last stage, on further consideration new alterations.

It is useless for me to plead at this stage any further in trying to open the eyes of those who will not see. I therefore, just commend my motion to the House for what it is worth.

Mr. Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That in the Preamble to the Bill, after the word 'Whereas' the following be inserted: 'banking is a public utility service, intimately concerned with the economic development of the country';"

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: It sounds like a fragment from an economic thesis. Firstly, I think it is out of place as a description in the Preamble. Secondly there is no recognized definition of 'public utility services'. Thirdly, if you take the commonly accepted definition, banking companies in the present set-up are not a public utility as such.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That in the Preamble to the Bill, after the word 'Whereas' the following be inserted: 'banking is a public utility service, intimately concerned with the economic development of the country'."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Title and the Preamble stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I move:

"That changes that may be necessary consequent upon the amendments accepted by the House may be made in the numbering and lettering of clauses and sub-clauses, punctuation and small and capital letters."

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That changes that may be necessary consequent upon the amendments accepted by the House may be made in the numbering and lettering of clauses and sub-clauses, punctuation and small and capital letters."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I move:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Mr. Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

From what fell from Prof. Shah it appears to me that there is a necessity to clarify the scope of discussion at the third reading stage.

All the principles involved in the Bill were fully discussed at the consideration stage. Each of the various amendments sought to be moved was discussed threadbare during the clause-by-clause consideration stage.

3 P. M. While it is perfectly competent for the House to throw out this Bill, even at the third reading stage and while therefore it is perfectly competent for any person who wishes to oppose the Bill to speak entirely against it, he may shortly state his grounds without further arguments in support of those grounds. The scope will be restricted only to the amendments carried out in the Bill during the clause-by-clause reading stage. That is the strict scope of the discussion at the third reading. Of course, other general matters may be referred to shortly and broadly but no detailed discussion on those matters will be permissible. When a measure of this type is being discussed, it is impossible to avoid all such references but there shall be no further detailed discussion of those references again. These are the general rules, and then of course things are left to the goodwill,—I do not use the word in "goodsense"—of the honourable members (Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: "We have both.") It will be seen now in the actual course of the discussion. I merely clarified the position so that I may not have any further occasions of reminding honourable members of the scope of the discussion at this stage.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): I was unfortunately absent from the general discussion of the Bill and I shall endeavour to bear in mind your very clear instructions that I should be brief as well as broad in dealing with the third reading of the Bill.

Mr. Speaker: I forgot to add that there shall not be irrelevancies and repetitions.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Irrelevancies are generally matters of opinion and you are in a peculiarly privileged position to judge what is relevant and what not and therefore I cannot claim to judge it for myself but try to strictly adhere.....

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Repetitions must not be tedious repetitions.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: If you refer to the report of the Central Banking Enquiry Committee which was made as early as 1931 they said in it that the banking legislation should be separately dealt with and should not be tagged on to the general Joint Stock Companies Act. Since then the course of this legislation has had a chequered career until now when it has fallen to the lot of the present Finance Minister to present a Bill which I think reflects the state of opinion in the country, although I cannot say that either myself or a substantial section of the people whom I know very well appreciate the measure in the sense that it has gone to the extent to which it should have gone. But dealing as we do with a market which is very sensitive with regard to the slightest pronouncement of any Minister or any opinion expressed in a slightly extreme way by any responsible member of the Government, it behoves the Minister-in-charge of Finance to see to all circumstances in the country and also to see that the banking structure of the country does not get into distress or nervousness when the Bill is being shaped. Nevertheless the Central Banking Enquiry Committee has drawn attention to certain evils which have to be remedied through a separate Bill and we shall see how far the provisions of this Bill have gone to remedy the defects that have been pointed out as early as 1931 and which are persisting even now in one form or another in the country's banking structure.

If you see the figures from 1934 to 1945 as many as 715 banking companies went into liquidation. The reasons why these banking companies have gone into liquidation have been many according to the Banking Enquiry Committee and according to the knowledge of people who are in public affairs.

The first is dishonest management. We have known how banking companies on account of dishonest management have gone into liquidation. Even before we were born, some of us the word Arbuthnot was a famous word; in the Telugu language the word Arbuthnot was associated with saving. Every one of the families in the South that had some little saving in that bank was affected by the failure of the Arbuthnot bank because of dishonest management and imprudent investments. Later on in the South the Travancore Bank and in the North the Alliance Bank which was entirely managed by foreigners indulged in so many unsound investments that, however, famous the banks may be their investments were not safe.

Now with regard to the incompetence of the directors we have seen banks being managed first by able directors and then creating vested interests for their sons and their near relatives, who are brought into them as managers or as directors and keeping the whole management of the bank as it were shrouded in mystery with regard to all their speculative investments. We have seen several banks ruined by speculative investments. The Alliance Bank was one such. When its history was revealed it was found that large sums of money, the depositors' money, were invested not only in India but abroad in very highly speculative ventures that ultimately brought about the crash of that bank.

Then I come to the question of unrestricted loans to directors. This is a malpractice that is in existence in several of the banks. We have heard of the Travancore National Bank's directors who wanted to use the bank for their political ends and to provide for some of their own relatives and sons-in-law and they were taking large loans without sufficient security. All these facts were brought to light and whatever, the cause of the downfall of the bank they also indulged in this malpractice by which a large number of depositors suffered heavily.

Very recently we heard of the International Bank of India and of the way they indulged in wide speculation and paying to other companies like insurance companies.....

Mr. Speaker: What is it that the honourable member is driving at except a general survey justifying this banking legislation?

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Generally I have not got much to say in criticism of the measure. But I would be brief in dealing with it. What I want to say is that the reasons that necessitate a separate banking Bill mentioned in the Banking Enquiry Committee Report have been met in this Bill. The remedies that were suggested to improve the tone of the banking system in the country, where banks have come to grief during a period of 10 to 12 years, have been sought to be provided here by this legislation.....

Mr. Speaker: While I appreciate all the information that the honourable member is giving, it will not be relevant to the third reading stage. All this would have been relevant in the first consideration stage and I regret very much that the honourable member was absent from the House at that time. But it will not be permissible now to go into this detail at this stage. Otherwise there would be repetition of the whole debate. The honourable member might, therefore, restrict himself to the scope which I have indicated.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Well, even with regard to the third reading stage of several Bills, Sir, my experience as a legislator was not so severely curtailed as you have been imposing now—in view of some more interesting legislation that is about to succeed this legislation, I think.

Mr. Speaker: No, no.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: But even in the third reading stage if we are to confine entirely..... Well, I do not want to argue, I will conclude my speech very soon.

Mr. Speaker: I might just invite the honourable member's attention to a ruling, as he referred to experience in legislation. Here is a ruling by the Honourable the President, so far back as February 1932 on a third reading motion.

A Member proceeded to go into great detail, when the President intervened and ruled:

"The Honourable Member has to speak to the motion that the Bill be passed. All these details have been fully thrashed out during the discussion which took place at earlier stages. The Honourable Member must now confine himself to supporting or opposing the Bill."

That is what I stated. The honourable member may say, "I support the Bill for these reasons", or, "I oppose the Bill for these reasons", and enumerate the reasons—1, 2, 3 and 4, etc.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Sir, I support the Bill for these reasons, namely that there have been so many failures of banks on account of dishonest management, and all those things have been taken into account and certain effective provisions have been made in this Bill to avoid those pitfalls. But the Bill is very severely restricted in its scope to commercial banking alone. If you see the figures, we see that the total national income in agriculture, industry and other activities of the nation—as given by some competent writers—is Rs. 2,942 crores for last year, and the total deposits in the commercial banks for the year 1948 comes to about Rs. 750 crores. Therefore, the economic activity of the nation is touched by these commercial banks only to the extent of nearly one-fourth of the total national income. The real banking which is done in the villages by the village moneylender and the sowcar and the chettiyar and all these people is left untouched by this Bill.

What I want to suggest is that if you want to control the banking activities of this nation and canalise it in more useful ways and see that the effect of the usury of the private moneylender is mitigated, Government must take a more comprehensive measure in order to control all the banking activity of the nation, which is a major portion than that covered by the present Bill.

With regard to the powers that have been given to the Reserve Bank, it has been invested with large powers. It has been made practically the instrument of action for the Government of India and the Reserve Bank has been called a nationalized Bank. For a nationalized Bank it must have a nationalist outlook and exercise its functions in the larger interests of the country. I was following the discussion on the clause which was specially moved at the end, granting indemnity to the officers as well as the Government of India for certain action which they might take with regard to implementing the several sections of this Bill. But it is strange in the free country. There are enough powers in the Bill itself. At every stage you impose certain conditions on the banks, that they must have a certain amount of share capital, that their accounts must be according to a standard type, that they must disclose their activities to the public, etc. And when you insist on all these powers that are given in this Bill, I did not understand why you require a special power asking for indemnity from the Courts for all that you do. I am glad that it was suitably amended by the honourable Minister.

But we hope that the drastic powers that are already given to the Reserve Bank will not be used in a manner that will give rise to any partiality or any complaint on the part of the smaller banks. It is the responsibility of the Reserve Bank now to control and order the whole banking system in the country, to put it in order where there are weak links in the chain of banking system and also to see that the provisions of this Bill are properly enforced.

Though the measure with regard to the limitation of dividends has been conveniently shelved for a future occasion, the time must come when we must effectively control banking dividends also. You see now certain shares costing Rs. 100 selling at the rate of Rs. 1,000 or even Rs. 2,000 in certain instances. These profits should be controlled, not only in the interest of controlling inflation but also for setting a limit to the profits that will be accumulated by these banks.

Fortunately, we have seen only one side of the activities of these banks. I wish there were some provision which will make compulsory certain minimum standards of service conditions as well as salaries for the banking employees. If they had taken that into consideration then there would have been greater satisfaction. I have seen the bank employees of the Reserve Bank itself and of the Imperial Bank itself, threatening to go on strike with regard to their emoluments and their conditions of service. I think it is within the scope of the Government to look into that aspect also whenever they brought a comprehensive legislation like this controlling the whole activity of the banking companies.

With these words, Sir, I have pleasure in supporting the motion.

Prof. K. T. Shah: Sir, I am deeply grateful to you for drawing attention to the proper scope of the discussion at this stage of the debate. Even, however, without the favour of this authoritative enlightenment, I have taken this measure in such deadly earnest, and with such profound gravity, that I would not have indulged in any needless diversion of any sort, nor—if I could have avoided it—the repetition of any argument or consideration that I have had occasion, or other Members have had occasion, to advance when several sections came up for discussion individually.

I fear, however, that, in my view, even today, even as the Bill has now emerged after the Second Reading, the Bill is so badly drafted, so ill-conceived, so ill-oriented, so inadequate to the needs of the country, that I have no alternative but to say the Bill be rejected. Sir, it is not because—I trust you will believe me—it is not because the several amendments that I have tried to put forward have been rejected, that I am making this plea even at this last moment that the Bill is in many respects not equal even to the Title that it gives itself, namely, “A Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to banking companies”. It neither consolidates nor amends; and therefore it is as defective as when it started; and as such the draftsmen as well as the author and sponsors of the Bill might take heed and bring before us a better, a more adequate, a more satisfactory measure than has been the case today.

The scope of the Bill is restricted, we are told, to commercial banks only. Yet, there is an argument which shows that the Bill even in the eyes of the authorities can be extended, or some provisions of the Bill can be extended to other kinds of banks, to all those corporations, like Land Banks or Industrial Banks which we were time and again assured will not be included in the scope of the Bill, if and when an emergency should arise.

Neither the Finance Minister nor any of his advisers can guarantee us against “emergencies” of the type for which section 53 provides. And if there is one case to provide for emergencies, for extraordinary powers, for extraordinary remedies, there is no reason to believe there may not be other emergencies which might also need some special provisions. But in the normal operation of the banks, in several other sections, you should have taken into account the other types of banking which are sedulously ignored in the Bill; and every time even when an attempt was made to bring to the notice of the authorities concerned, the question was deliberately side-tracked because we were told that the Bill does not apply to other types of banks than commercial banking. There is nothing which says anywhere in the provisions that this Bill applies exclusively to that type of banks, and actually there is something to show—I refer once again to Section 53—that it applies that the clause given to us by the Select Committee does apply, it is at least possible that it would apply to other types of banks as well.

Then, I pointed out there is a diversion, there is a conflict, there is an inherent contradiction, in the provisions of the Bill which those at least who had so many years to consider them, who have devoted such sleepless nights and sleepy days to these amendments, should have thought of, and brought before us a more mutually sympathetic internally consistent, coherent legislation than they have presented to this House.

I cannot conceal it from myself; nor can I conceal it from this House, that I view with the greatest misgivings this Bill and its several provisions, notwithstanding all the demand that the Honourable the Finance Minister has made upon this House for trust,—the House has no hesitation, I am sure, in trusting the Honourable Minister and the entire Ministry that is working under his supervision, authority and direction. But I do think that it is not too much to say that all men, all human beings are liable to err and even the Honourable the Finance Minister notwithstanding all his mature wisdom, alertness and foresight, will perhaps be sleeping some day. They say that even Homer nods. Is it too much to say, Sir, that Dr. Matthai may be sometimes sleepy both by day and by night and that he is so sleepy occasionally that certain things may slip through without his noticing them. Then it would be the country that would suffer; not the Minister or his underlings.

The provisions of this Bill gave us many thought provoking ideas as regards the possible mischief and harm that the Bill may do in the hands of those who are less careful, less alert, less conscientious than my honourable friend Dr. John Matthai.

[At this stage, Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar)]

I trust we shall be fortunate to have Dr. John Matthai always with us eternally and seriously serving the country. But Sir, may I say without any disrespect that even Dr. John Matthai is not only mortal; he is liable to seek rest and when at any rate after the overwhelming responsibility and burden of his office, he is no longer able to exercise the same sleepless days—now I call them sleepless days—on the conduct of his administration which we are happy today to have.

The provision that he himself pointed out, for example, which needed after the Select Committee stage an amendment by the Honourable the Finance Minister himself, so as to guard his officials of the Reserve Bank—or was it the officer of any bank?—against any possibility of damage or loss that may occur in the bona fide discharge of the duties or functions entrusted to him under this Bill? The very fact that there is this danger; the very fact that his attention has at the last minute been drawn to such possibility; the very fact that he is himself afraid that there may be such possibility, is, in my opinion, sufficient argument to show that the Bill is ill-conceived, ill-drafted, inadequate, and, therefore, ought to be rejected out of hand.

The point I am making is this I am not concealing my dissatisfaction at all with the Bill. I have no hesitation in saying that this is the Bankers' Bill, for the Bankers, by the Bankers, which will be administered through the bankers. Nobody else, no other interest not the workers, not the depositors, not the shareholders, not even the country, as a whole has any chance of success under this Bill. I am quite certain that my honourable friend the banker in the House will be very happy and jubilant and he may be very well advised—I know he is well advised—to keep his jubilation to himself. But if he should invite me to share that jubilation, I am afraid he would be sadly disappointed, because I cannot possibly share the jubilation which the masters of money-bags will have, after this Bill is passed and the shares may go up, not only of the Imperial Bank which has not yet been nationalised and is not to be nationalised, but also of the Central Bank which of course is not ever likely to be nationalised if this Bill holds good as imagined by him until he gets into his dotage.

We have been invited to wait till our dotage before we can pass or before we can think of banking as anything like a public utility which may be vested in the state or rather a bank may be regarded as a public utility service. I know it is a private monopoly, almost a closed monopoly, and one by which it is in the hands of the bankers to make or mar the growth of the industry of this country. Dr. John Matthai was modest and honest enough to ask us at least to trust him fully, trust him always. But the bankers do not even make that pretence. They are so certain of their success and their vested interests and roots are so deep in foundation that they do not care a hang whether or not you agree. They do not care for your trust, because they have it already in the shape of your deposits. And if they had not, it will be you who will be penalised, not they, because the Bill says, anything done in what they call "good faith" will not be liable. And who is to search the good faith of these people? After all, we must take them at their word; and "good faith" is one of those commodities which cannot be tested, nor measured, nor weighed, nor in any way found out in a laboratory that a human brain can invent.

Sir, let me give an illustration or two to show why the Bill is unacceptable. I have been pleading even for such a small thing as the revision of the position of the Exchange Banks in this country; and naturally I have felt very disappointed that even when I try to assist the Bankers by securing for them that section of the business which today the Exchange Banks take away from them, even then they distrusted me so much that they would not accept even that amendment from me. They would not have me even though I try to do good.

There is a saying, Sir, that people entertain angels unawares. I know bankers never entertain me, and I have no pretension to be angelic. But in this matter, as in many others, I have tried to fit myself into, not the logical, radical or revolutionary changes that I personally would desire; but in the framework of the society in which I am living. Hence it is that, though I may have exposed myself to being misunderstood, though I may have exposed myself to misconstruction, I can assure you the amendments I had proposed, the changes I had sought to make, were not dictated by any idea to invite or persuade this House to accept my own views, or what may be called revolutionary measures, to accept what may be called a complete transformation of banking into a real public utility service owned and managed by the State for the benefit of the country.

I had tried to take the House as far as I could go. But the influence of our banker friends, their wisdom no doubt, and their other persuasive powers are so considerable that unhappily my voice remains alone unsupported, melancholy and futile. I can only say this, that in suggesting all the several changes that I have put forward, I have had before me the interest,—strange as it may seem,—of the success of the Banking Service in this country; success by securing the fullest trust in the institutions of the community; success by securing the fullest co-operation of the workers and the ruling powers; success by securing the fullest measure of deposits, so that banking in this country which is, so to say, the key-stone of the economic arch, so to say, the foundation also of our entire economic structure, should flourish, and with that the country. I am afraid that was not acceptable; that was not perceptible even to those who I thought had better vision.

There is an ancient proverb, a classical proverb, which says, "Whom the Gods wish to destroy, they first make mad." I am afraid I am inclined to accept that proverb, and apply it to those interested in banks—those so confident of their power and influence and present position, so confident of the power of their purse, that they will not listen to the words of a friend, they will not think of the foresight and utter disinterestedness with which an advice like this is given, so that they may secure and enlist the fullest co-operation in their service of other sections.

Let this discontent remain, leave this resentment ferment. Let the people feel that this measure is inadequate. Let the people feel that you are only thinking of your own narrow interest, and not that of the country, and believe me, you will not have a long lease.

And let me add. This is not like the Limitation of Dividends Bill intended for two years only. I know you mean it to be a perpetual lease of monopolistic profit that may come to you. But believe me, Sir, that notwithstanding all efforts, you cannot—you cannot—stop light dawning upon the people some day, even though in the press of business some people may at some time feel sleepy.

This does not mean that you will not allow people to wake up at all. People will wake up. And then unfortunately, those like me, who are advising you today gratuitously for a moderate measure of reform may find that people go far beyond even what I would have suggested as right, and then you would have said that you are the harbinger of revolutions. Revolutions, Sir, are not made except by the selfishness, the pettiness, the meanness, the avarice, the greed of people who are in power at the time being. Therefore, Sir, you are laying the foundation for your own crime and your own destruction, if you do not listen to the words of moderation that I have tried time and again to lay before you. You are blinded by your present power. You are intoxicated by your present position. Therefore you will not listen to me. I know however loud, and often quite insistently I speak on this matter, you will think I have a screw loose somewhere. You are welcome to think so, and you are welcome to get any medical man to certify that I am fit for, not this Assembly, but another asylum! Sir, I am not saying it for all, and nobody need wear the cap to whom it does not fit. But, Sir,.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think anybody suspects it.

Prof. K. T. Shah: It may be so. But if any suspect it, I must give the evidence to make it certain because suspicion may have lack of proof. I am trying to give some sort of reasoning which may be called evidence if not proof.

I know that there are many here, angels without wings, who are feeling impatient at my prolonging this discussion. There are many who feel that I am trying to take up the time of the House to prevent another radical measure. (Honourable Members: "no, no. Go on.") But I feel I have to say these things, for not only the benefit of this generation, but for all generations to come. I am saying these things not for my own benefit, but to my great misfortune. Believe me, Sir, I also do not wish to be unpopular. I also do not wish to appear to be a lunatic. But I do wish to be taken a little more seriously than some people are inclined to do. Sir, at the risk of being misunderstood, at the risk of not being considered or taken seriously, I have to take this role of a Cassandra and I cannot help saying, if you do not take warning in time, if you will not see the writing on the wall, then please remember you will have to pay a bill, and a heavy bill—not the Banking Bill—when the time comes. The payment will not be all to your liking and then it may be perhaps too late even for me—why even for me—even for Christ reborn to save you.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: At the outset I am faced with some ironical cheers all over the hall:

I submit that I have tried my best, in my own humble way, to improve the drafting of the Bill. With the main purpose of the Bill I was always in agreement, but the reason why I persisted in moving all those amendments of mine is this: that in spite of the repeated attempts on the part of the Members to have Bills in a better drafted form in the House, our attempts have entirely failed, and it is by way of protest that I had to move some of those amendments.

With regard to the purpose of the Bill, as I have already submitted, I am in full agreement that the banking business of the country should be placed on a firm foundation.

Bank failures, especially in the province from which I come, that is West Bengal, have been many. But the failures are not always due to their being small banks, or their being mismanaged or because there was fraud. There were some cases where these reasons operated: but to a large extent they were also due to certain economic factors which were the direct result of the Government's monetary policy. In fact, this point to my mind cannot be overestimated. The Government's monetary policy, though it is in a much improved form today, has lent itself too much talk in the House and outside the House of expropriation, of nationalization, of limitation of dividends, or removing capitalists and all such things. These are, I submit, most mischievous pious wishes having disastrous consequences on the credit system of the country.

Shri B. Das: Why mischievous!

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It is not mischievous in intention but in its effect. These opinions are held by those persons whom I hold in high esteem. They are the great patriots of the country. But I submit they have not got the experience and the insight into the inner workings of the economic system of this country. In driving out the capitalists and the industrialists, we fail to realize that we are also driving out of existence a large number of middle-class investors in this country. In fact, this is not the time to dilate upon that subject in detail. But the disastrous effect of the Government's monetary policy was to seriously depreciate the share values all round of shares held by some small banks against which they had advanced monies to constituents. A number of first class shares were held by them as security for the money advanced. On account of the financial policy, the share values crashed, the banks wanted to realise their securities, large blocks of shares were thrown on the unwilling market and the result was further depression, and we find the market in a seriously depressed condition; and the banks failed.

There are honourable members in the House who are absolutely contemptuous of market conditions, market credit and such other things.

Shri B. Das: Not credit, but market gambling.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Here is one distinguished Member, famous for his economic knowledge, and a veteran, who says that it is market gambling! I submit that there are speculators and gamblers in the market but it is hardly realized that the middle class form 80 per cent of the holders who are investors. In fact, there are large numbers of middle class people who really are the investors in the share market. The confidence of these people has been shattered. Government have been certainly trying their best to restore this credit but one fact should be realized that it is easy to destroy credit but it takes a long time to re-build it. I think the little sops given out here and there are not sufficient to restore confidence. There is always the threat, there is always the talk of nationalisation, dividend limitation and expropriation which stagnate and depress the market. This is the direct result on our monetary policy as a result of which many small banks have failed.

I have pointed out that the bank failures are not necessarily due to fraud or mismanagement. True, there are many banking houses which failed on account of this. But this does not apply to all. I have a feeling that there runs through the Bill a policy to support big banks against the small banks. There has practically been an undeclared crusade against small banks which may not be very obvious. In fact there are conditions in the Bill requiring the small banks to capitalise themselves adequately. The more they want to extend the more handicaps are placed upon them that they must have more and more capital. So these conditions are so many handicaps imposed upon them at a time when they are heroically struggling for their business and trying to stand on their legs. This additional condition of requiring more capital cannot be and should not be indiscriminately imposed.

I submit, the small banks should also get the support of Government. If they are destroyed, the middle class people who require banking facilities will suffer very much. The great banks are like so many octopus institutions. They are gigantic institutions which will swallow up the smaller banks. That is a consequence which should be prevented. I request the Honourable Minister to keep a close watch on this tendency. He has a sympathetic heart and an understanding mind. I hope this advice—though it may look gratuitous in bona fide advice—will be carefully noted and the small banks saved. I hope this banking legislation would not be treated as a measure for enforcing discipline, and I am suggesting that this legislation should be applied with caution and with sympathy so that the smaller banks may be enabled to stand on their own legs.

There is a clause which empowers Government to make any changes they like in the application of this measure. That was objected to in the House. That is certainly a mischievous clause, but it could be applied to good purposes too. With regard to the small banks, if they are in need of some assistance and exemptions from the rigours of the provisions of this enactment, they should get it. Everything possible should be done to assist them. The Government should try to restore confidence which cannot be done, as has been found by experience, by mere sweet words. Continued efforts in this direction are needed and I hope such efforts would not be lacking.

I do not wish to take the time of the House any more. I submit there are many examples of wrong punctuations which would require adequate treatment at the hands of the draftsmen. I do not envy the work of the draftsmen. Last year we had something like 67 or 68 Bills placed on the Statute Book. We are working at high pressure so far as legislation is concerned. This imposes an additional strain on the draftsman. Although I have criticised their performance, I have not done so in any fault finding spirit. I have every sympathy for them. In fact, the work they have done should be characterised as heroic, in view of the difficult nature of work and the largeness of the output. But I submit, a little more care should be bestowed on the revision of the Bills. The Drafting Department perhaps suffers from dearth of hands. If so, the Department should be adequately strengthened. (An Honourable Member: "Retrenchment.") There should be no retrenchment of real ability. A little extra money, if it is needed, should be found for the purpose, as otherwise, one cannot imagine the amount of mischief that will be done. Legislation of the kind we are passing would increase litigation. The very lawyers in this honourable House, whom we look upon with some benevolent contempt, will reap the benefit of legislation of this kind. In fact honourable members can hardly realise the little dangers that lurk in the innocent-looking commas and the small words like 'the', etc. As I submitted the other day, a very great deal of trouble was caused in the Federal Court the other day by a simple comma and the word "the", and Shri K. M. Munshi had to fight hard to find the meaning of a provision. I submit that the High Courts and the Federal Court will have more and more to do with faulty drafting in future. In the interests of national economy and in the interests of good legislation therefore the drafting Department should be strengthened. With due respect to them I must say that that Department requires strengthening.

The Bill, as it is, well conceived, though I would have liked to introduce a few more changes here and there of a substantial nature. On the whole I must repeat that the Bill is well conceived.

At this stage I may say something about the liquidation of banks I have already submitted that the liquidation proceedings may give rise to difficulties. Reserve Bank under this Bill will be appointed liquidators when they apply for liquidation. But this does not follow when liquidation proceedings are started by third parties. I wanted to introduce an amendment providing that in cases where third parties start proceedings for liquidation, the Reserve Bank should normally appoint the liquidator. I was then met with the supposed difficulty of throwing more work on the Reserve Bank which this procedure would have involved. Thereupon I suggested as an alternative that a nominee of the Reserve Bank should be appointed liquidator. This too, for some unaccountable and insufficient reason, opposed. My object was very simple and it would have added nothing much to the work of the Reserve Bank. The House will see that the Reserve Bank is being given extraordinary powers and the entire responsibility of watching the development of banking in the country is placed in their hands. The provision in regard to this created so much emotion in the House. I submit the Reserve Bank has great duties and responsibilities. My suggestion was only to add a small additional duty of suggesting a suitable liquidator. The honourable Minister thought that that would put some responsibility on them of having a control over the liquidators. It is nothing of the sort. My idea was that they should select a panel of liquidators of competent men. It was said that there may be bogus applications. True, there may be; but that is not the point. The question of appointing a liquidator, even on a bogus application, lies with the Court. If the Court is willing to appoint a liquidator, all that I wanted was that the Reserve Bank should at least suggest a nominee or nominate somebody.

Shri B. Das: You are again on the question of liquidator?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member has referred to certain points which may be answered. But there is too much argument. I would ask honourable members to confine their observations to the salient points at this stage. I see that the honourable member is not objecting to the third reading of the measure.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am really surprised at the objection taken by Shri B. Das. My argument is at least more relevant than the argument of the nationalisation of the Imperial Bank and the crushing of the Reserve Bank.

Shri B. Das: Why do you not speak on that?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: If that was so relevant on the second reading, my speech is relevant at the third reading. In fact, that was absolutely irrelevant. I submit, I do not rely upon that kind of relevancy to justify my speech. I have suggested the points, and I submit that the Honourable Minister will carefully watch developments, and if necessary, bring in suitable amendments to bring the law into line with experience.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I think my honourable friend, Dr. John Matthai deserves the congratulations of this House for successfully piloting this measure in this House. I do not know if many of us realize the importance of the piece of legislation that he has successfully carried through. There have been for a very long, long time past, a crying demand in the country for effecting a thorough change in the banking law of the country, and my honourable friend, Dr. John Matthai has not come a moment too soon, when he brought this Bill before the House. No doubt, there are many things which could have been added to this Bill. No doubt, there are provisions, which I do not like, and over which I do not feel myself happy, but on a balance of considerations, I am perfectly prepared to say that this tentatively, at any rate, is a very good measure and it will, if worked in proper spirit and with due vigour, not only by the officialdom, but by those who give tender advice to the officialdom, will certainly inure to the benefit of this country.

I can well appreciate the amount of labour and patience bestowed on it by my honourable friend, Dr. John Matthai. Probably, we are making a fun of the fact that he has been passing nights sleepless, days sleeping. It is true his tell-tale eyes would tell you that, and those who know Dr. John Matthai will agree that he is a very serious-minded man, and wherever he sets his hands upon, he does not mean any rest, and from that point of view, I appreciate the labour, more so, that within less than two weeks, he will be called upon to tell to the country the fruits of his wise and mature experience as an economist of outstanding repute in this country. I do not know, his performance will be worth clapping at that time. But in any case, I have no manner of doubt that that will cause the remaining days his most anxious consideration.

[Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra]

Having stated that eulogistic part, which I feel is duly deserved by him, I would like to sound a word or two of caution. I had many things to say, but the formidable array in the right and left galleries make my heart shrink for there are more interesting things expected to follow. But may I tell you, Sir, that this Banking Bill, as it is going to be enacted into law, will be very carefully watched, not only by the commercial interests in the country, but also by the people at large, who have anything to do with the economic amelioration of this country.

Speaking for myself, I am that type of an unfortunate man who has always been a victim of indigenous banks. I refer as to how I lost a fortune more than 2½ decades ago. It was my father's property and victimised by a bank, which in the process of liquidation gave me two pias for every Rupee; also in recent times the bank clashes in Calcutta brought me misery in certain banks and I feel as an ordinary citizen that these banking crises could have been avoided if the Banking Bill had been introduced and passed, though in this form, at any rate, six months before. The ordinance was there; ordinances serve little purpose and the ordinance, perhaps, could not be fully worked in the letter and spirit in the way in which it was conceived. Members after members have pointed to the Honourable the Finance Minister that by this Bill enormous powers and responsibilities had been cast on the Reserve Bank. I admit that some responsibility is devolved on them, but the Reserve Bank itself must try to be worth of this responsibility.

My honourable friend, the Finance Minister seemed to resent an observation made by my honourable friend, Mr. B. Das, when he made a very unkind remark about the Reserve Bank. Well, I might tell my honourable friend, Dr. John Matthai that Mr. Das did not mean the interpretation produced in the way in which he did. My honourable friend, Mr. Das had in his mind the Reserve Bank of the previous days, not before its nationalisation when this Reserve Bank, like the Government of this country, was under foreign rule and under foreign control, and the Reserve Bank was simply functioning as an outpost of the Bank of England and until recently, it had been functioning like that and its past role, its first performance with all respects to my honourable friend.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: On a point of information, Sir, have the electors of the Reserve Bank since been changed?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Not being myself on the Reserve Bank or in any way connected with the Finance Ministry, my honourable friend has asked the information from a very wrong quarter.

I would like to suggest to my honourable friend that though it has been a major piece of legislation since he took over charge of the Finance Ministry, of which he might well feel proud, he should not allow his laurels to rest on this, if the provisions of this Act are to be operated properly, effectively, efficiently, then the next step he has got to take it to bring out an amendment of the Reserve Bank of India Act. The Reserve Bank of India Act should be modified, drastically modified to suit the changing conditions and to make it such as to accept the onerous responsibilities that are sought to be cast on the Reserve Bank. (At this stage Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair). In the past we know that the Reserve Bank could not discharge its duty which was enjoined on it by law, and with regard to financial accommodation to struggling banks or to agriculture or other things, the record of the Reserve Bank was not 4 P.M. bright. Today, the Reserve Bank has got to be developed in such a way and its staff has to be substantially increased, not only numerically but qualitatively. I am not talking of quantitatively only. A sufficient number of the staff has to be trained to cope with the work which this Act envisages for it. In the past, the inspectorate staff was not to be found in sufficient numbers to look after the Scheduled Banks. It is a pity that many of the Schedule Banks collapsed. The people have always the impression that the Schedule Banks have attained a certain measure of security; but the disillusionment came very soon that that was too weak a reed to lean upon. I, therefore, respectfully request my honourable friend the Finance Minister to take up the question of bringing in modifications to the Reserve Bank Act to bring it into line with the Act which has just been passed. I hope to see the day when the Reserve Bank would be the fountain head of all banking activities in this country and would, in the words of Bagehot, be the lender of ultimate resort in this country, a powerful monetary organisation, from which all the other minor credit organisations of the country would draw inspiration and guidance. I look forward to the day when my honourable friend Dr. Matthai would do it and I hope he will tell us something today that he has such a measure in contemplation in the near future. If that is done, I am sure, the Honourable Dr. Matthai will have taken the country a long way towards the stabilisation of the economy of the country.

Before I close, I should like again to convey to my honourable friend, Dr. Matthai my hearty congratulations on the very good performance he has made. He has every reason to be grateful to the house, for, the house has not taken an undue time. A Bill like this, in normal times, would have taken one full session, if we had not that kind of pressure from other quarters. I may tell you that this Banking Bill would have given us food for consideration for six weeks. Not that we would have taken the time on frivolous speeches; there are so many sides to the question.

We may have brushed aside whatever Prof. Shah has said. Unfortunately, my honourable friend Prof. Shah is the forlorn champion of all lost causes in this House and in the constitution Hall. I have every sympathy for him. But there are certain matters and certain points which would have to be fitted in. Of course, that is an absolutely different matter from the set up and present scheme of the Bill.

I hope Dr. Matthai would keep in view the few observations. I have made and keep a close watch with the eyes of an Argus on the activities not only of the Reserve Bank, but of all the Banks. Let the apprehensions of my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad that it is only the big banks that will be protected and fostered and that the struggling small banks would be smothered out of existence, be belied by his vigilance, by his superintendence and control.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I will take only five minutes. But for the fact that my honourable friend Prof. K. T. Shah, after all the labours that we have spent over this Bill, still struck a discordant note, a highly pessimistic note, I would not have cared to intervene in this debate at all. Far from saying that this Bill ought not to be passed or ought to be withdrawn, I will certainly urge upon the country that this is a landmark in the history of banking legislation in this country. I am aware that good banking is the soul of the commercial and economic life of any country.

Under this Bill, the Reserve Bank has been clothed with powers of superintendence and control in every form and shape over all the banks in this country. The Reserve Bank is a national Bank. Therefore, though not directly, but indirectly, we have got an absolute control over the entire banking system. Today, we have also passed another clause giving immunity to all the officers of the Reserve Bank and the Government also to intervene without any diffidence in appropriate cases. If they interfere in proper cases and in good faith, they will have all the support and they will be exempt from any of the damages for which they may otherwise be responsible. They may go ahead straightaway and with their rich experience, we may nationalise the entire banking system of the country. Before that, the Imperial Bank will have to be nationalised. But, this is not the time, when, according to the Finance Minister, we should take immediate steps for the nationalisation of the Imperial Bank. I would ask the Reserve Bank officers to be careful. We have made the Reserve Bank the master bank of all banks in this country and clothed the Reserve Bank with enormous powers. If they use these powers inadvertently, it may end in danger to the entire banking system of the country. With that note of warning, I would say that we have embarked upon a piece of legislation which will certainly be regarded as the first step towards the nationalisation of the entire banking system in this country.

Before I sit down, I would like to remove some misapprehensions that are lurking here and there that under this Bill, foreign banks are no longer safe to carry on their business. I have heard such reports. Far from that. In the previous Select Committee, the Managers of Exchange Banks and other Banks in this country were given full opportunity to lay their case before us. We considered that both in that Select Committee as also in this. There is nothing in this Bill which tries to put unnecessary restrictions on foreign banks. On the other hand, we are erring on this side. We want to make it convenient for all banks here and we have not made any discrimination between one kind of bank and another.

We have made an improvement over the Select Committee in that we have reduced the voting rights from ten per cent. to five. My honourable friend Shri T. T. Krishnamachari was not satisfied in that we inadvertently did not allow this restriction on voting rights to all banks irrespective of the question whether they came into existence before 1937 or after 1937. With all the effort, what we have done is to restrict the voting rights in respect of those banks which came into existence after 1937 and not before 1937. It applies only to new banks. We did not contemplate this, the other amendment having been rejected. It will be time for the honourable the Finance Minister, after some experience, to consider if this restriction ought not to be imposed even with respect to the banks which came into existence before 1937.

Sir, the reduction from forty to thirty per cent. regarding the amount which could be invested on pledges and other banks, is also a wholesome step that has been taken on the floor of the House after the Bill emerged from the Select Committee. Far from being diffident and pessimistic, I would congratulate myself, congratulate the House and congratulate the Honourable the Finance Minister for having introduced this legislation of which all of us can be proud. I am sure, with the careful working of this Act by the Reserve Bank, the entire economic system of the country, the trade and commerce of the country will once again be placed on their feet and we will inaugurate an era of economic prosperity in this country.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I also pay my humble tribute to the Honourable the Finance Minister for his safely piloting this Bill. Ministers have come and Ministers have gone during the last six years. It was left to my honourable friend Dr. John Matthai to bring us to the position of having a Banking legislation, after all.

The House will remember that in 1944, such a Bill was first introduced in this House. After the lapse of two years, in the budget session of 1946, Sir Archibald Rowlands introduced another Bill of an almost similar nature. That also was referred to the Select Committee. Then, the Finance Minister, Shri Shanmukham Chetty thought it best to withdraw that Bill and bring out a comprehensive Bill. That is how this Bill has come before the House.

I welcome this Bill in a somewhat limited sense. I am perfectly conscious that this Bill will, as has been stated by my honourable friend the Deputy Speaker, certainly enable our country to compete with other countries in so far as banking is concerned. To that extent I am proud of this legislation.

But I am afraid that a point which I had tried to make out for the last three years on the floor of this House and for which I had received diverse criticism as well as assurances from the treasury bench, has been entirely overlooked in this Bill also. If I may quote from the speech of my honourable friend the present Governor of Assam, His Excellency Sri Prakasa, he said in the course of a speech which he delivered on the Bill of 1946.....

Mr. Speaker: Is it a very long quotation?

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: No, Sir, it is just three lines. (An Honourable Member: "But you are taking five minutes to find it out.")

It is difficult to find it out. He says:

"The main objects of every piece of banking legislation in our land are only two so far as I can make out. One is that we should try to encourage small banks, and the other is that while encouraging small banks we should also protect the depositors' money and make sure at the same time that the indigenous banking system on which so much of our village economy depends, as borne out by the Reserve Bank report itself, is by no means destroyed."

Then he says. (An Honourable Member: "Go on, go on"). This is only two lines. He says:

"I had a long interview with Sir James Taylor whom I knew and who was then the Governor of the Reserve Bank. A sentence of his in the course of his conversation greatly struck me. He said 'with a Reserve Bank functioning in the country'—these are very important. I am quoting his words so far as I can remember them—'there is no chance for small banks'."

That is an opinion which has been expressed by Sir James Taylor, Governor of the Reserve Bank and his opinion is that with a Reserve Bank in this country there is no chance for small banks. My point is this. If that is the considered opinion of a Governor of the Reserve Bank, what chance have we now when in this piece of legislation we are giving so much powers to the Reserve Bank itself. It may be said that the Reserve Bank is no longer the Reserve Bank of some years ago. That is quite true and we have nationalised the Reserve Bank. But it seems to me that things continue much the same as before because there has not been any material change in the mode of management or in the Directorate itself. So I would only ask the honourable Minister to see that the power of the Reserve Bank is not abused and that on the other hand it is rightly exercised for the interests as far as possible of the small banks also.

I have to observe with great regret that so far as the past dealings of the Reserve Bank are concerned towards the small banks or the Provincial Banks, apart from big banks like the Imperial Bank or Central Bank, the attitude of the Reserve Bank has so far been unsympathetic. Let us for a moment turn to the events of the last few months. Not to speak of ordinary banks, even scheduled banks have closed the doors. It was expected that steps would be taken in proper time by the Reserve Bank to prevent such a catastrophe. I understand that the benefit of scheduling a bank is that you get a thorough watch over the affairs of that bank, that in case of an unforeseen emergency the Reserve Bank will always come to its aid either by granting momentary assistance or by taking steps to have a moratorium. But nothing of that kind was done in the last few months and four or five important scheduled banks closed their doors. So it is all very nice and creditable to have a legislation of a first rate order, but all the good intentions of the Honourable Finance Minister and his colleagues may entirely fail if the law is not faithfully carried out. Therefore I would ask the honourable Minister to give me an assurance, if possible, to have a close watch on the working of some of the clauses to which I had taken some exception, namely clauses 11 and 23. Both of them relate more or less to banks of undeveloped Provinces.

I had yesterday expressed some doubt about the utility of clause 53 and I thought it was better to mention such exemptions all at once. But having gone through the clause again and having considered the reply which was given by the Honourable the Finance Minister I revise my opinion which I had expressed yesterday with regard to clause 53. I would very much welcome the application of clause 53 so far as banks in my Province are concerned. I think the words "banks or class of banks" can also be interpreted to include an exercise of the power under clause 53 so far as small banks and banks of undeveloped Provinces are concerned. If my interpretation of clause 53 is correct and if the Honourable the Finance Minister gives me an assurance then I think this clause would rather be a boon to us than be a drawback.

It is not the first time that I have raised such points. In 1946 I had protested against this Bill for this very reason. Some of my honourable friends in this House have misjudged me. They consider the Hindu Code to be more important than this Banking Bill. I welcome them to their opinion. But so far as I am concerned, so far as the economic condition of my province is concerned—which honourable members of this House are very well aware of—we are trying to march with the rest of the progressive Provinces of India. We are far behind them, but still we are making our humble efforts. We want good banking in our Province, we want good indigenous banks, so that we may be able to emulate our more fortunate and more advanced brethren of India. In this attempt of ours let there be no cold water throwing. Let me do what I can for the benefit of my own Province in order to get economic advancement.

At that time the Government of Assam expressed a very strong opinion against the Banking Bill of 1946 in regard to these very clauses. They said:

"I am desired to emphasise the peculiar position of Assam which has not only not reached the stage of development in banking attained by other provinces but is peculiarly dependent on Bengal and Calcutta in particular in banking matters. For this reason it might be advantageous to reword the provisions of clause 11".

That is the very clause which I am referring to now.

"So as to impose the desired restriction not according to provincial limits but in respect of economic zones or Regions according to which Assam would be included with Bengal."

Shri B. Das: Were you a Minister there at that time?

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I was here at that time.

After this Bill of 1946 was referred to a Select Committee in the beginning of 1947 Budget Session a new Bill was introduced by Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan, who was then the Finance Minister. In that Bill he sought to restrict the opening of new branches. That is my quarrel. I am beginning in my province to develop banking. I am now beginning to open new branches. If at this stage you restrict the opening of branches in that province banking in that province would not be fully developed. I raised that objection also in the beginning of 1947. In reply to that the then Finance Minister said:

"There was another point which was raised by Mr. Sanyal and I think my honourable friend, Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri also referred to it: as to how the penal clauses of this Bill will be given effect to....."

The other point was that with regard to the future, the Capital Issue Department should be more liberal, so far as the issue of capital was concerned and I think Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri wanted to know with regard to his province of Assam in particular. It is the desire of the Government that banking in this country should expand and should flourish. It is the desire of the Government that banking business in this country is carried on on right lines and I can assure my friend that if any issue of capital will assist in that direction the people of Assam, the Department will not hesitate to help the people of Assam, in developing their banking facilities."

All that I can say is that the good wishes of the honourable Minister were never carried out. I had made several efforts to increase the issue of capital in some of my banks and I have never succeeded. My complaint is this. On one hand you are telling me that I cannot have any branches in Calcutta, a city with which we are directly connected. You say that I cannot have branches in Calcutta unless I have a paid up capital of ten lakhs. I know of one bank which is the best in Assam and it has only a paid up capital of five lakhs. I am prepared to have more paid up capital. If you will give me the opportunity the banks in Assam will be prepared to increase their paid up capital. If I ask for the necessary capital issue various suggestions and various difficulties will be thrown in our way and the ultimate result will be that no further capital issue will be granted. I am speaking from actual experience. I have branches in one or two places. I want to expand my business. The banks of outsiders in my province have ruined our poor villagers. There are no millionaires nor rich men in our province. There are few among us who have a lakh of rupees. During war time the poor villagers earned more than they usually did and they put their earnings in the banks but these banks were closed. The people who managed these banks had no public opinion of the province to fear. If these banks were managed by our own people they would have a sense of fear, they would have to fear public opinion. They would have realised that living among the people if they cheated them they will come down on them.

Now if the banks that are already there want to expand their business and have their branches in several parts of the province, what is the condition? I must have more money but where am I to get the money from? Capital issue will not be granted. Besides after the failure of so many banks in Assam people are naturally shy, at any rate shy of non scheduled banks. We want to make our banks scheduled banks. We want to raise more capital and what is the reply of Government? No. More capital issue cannot be granted. This is my difficulty.

I congratulate again my honourable friend the Finance Minister. He has been able to pilot a Bill of this momentous nature without a single harsh word to anybody. I admire him and I congratulate him for the fact that he has been able to get this Bill passed without a hitch. But I beg of him to hold his hands. I implore before him on bended knees that he should have some sympathy to the poor province of Assam.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I have no desire at this time of day to make a speech because I find most of the matters which have been raised in the course of the debate on the Third Reading are matters which have already received sufficient attention at the hands of the House. Various suggestions have been made regarding the working of the Bill when it becomes law. I should, of course, keep them carefully in mind when I come to deal with the problems that may arise in connection with the administration of the Bill. All that I want to do now is to thank the House for the patience and consideration which honourable members have shown me throughout the passage of this difficult Bill, and to express the hope that the Bill, when it becomes law, will mean a substantial step in forwarding the cause of progressive banking in India.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

HINDU CODE

Mr. Speaker: The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar.
Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava—rose.

Shri Jaspal Rai Kapoor (U.P.: General): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I have to raise a point of order which, if accepted, will bar any further discussion on the point of order raised in the previous session by my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad. I therefore submit that I be permitted to place my point of order for your consideration.

Mr. Speaker: As Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava was on his legs, I think I ought to hear him first. I do not anticipate what he is going to say; I have my own views on the point of order raised but I will consider what Pandit Thakur Das has to say.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Sir, on the last occasion when the motion was made by the Honourable Dr. Ambedkar, Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad took a point of order on the point that the Bill considered by the Select Committee was not the Bill referred to it by the House. While that point was being considered, I was submitting for your consideration some grounds why the point of order was of great substance. While that was being done, you were pleased to stop the discussion and shorten the matter, as would appear on page 778 of the Proceedings, dated 31st August 1948. At that time, Sir, you were pleased to tell us what was passing in your mind and you told us that you will consider at the proper time two or three questions which are given on page 779 of this report. The two questions which seemed to agitate your mind were, firstly, whether the Select Committee went out of its way and went beyond the scope, and secondly, whether the Select Committee has gone beyond the scope of the reference. These were the two questions. The debate was taking place when ultimately you decided as given on page 780, that you would study all the facts and then give a ruling. With regard to that, I beg to lay some points for your consideration in regard to the point of order raised by Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad.

Mr. Speaker: As I see from the report, what I stated there was this—I have not got the printed report but I have got the proof-sheets here. After the Honourable Member Shri Biswanath Das had raised a point, I stated as follows:—

“As I said, I am not deciding this matter at all. I am keeping open the whole thing including the point of order, because it will be seen that it involves large questions of fact and I must study all these things myself, which I have not yet done. Shall I leave the matter as it is?”

Therefore, I left it for me to study it and I can now say that I have studied it. Whatever may have been said by honourable members with reference to the point of order, I have studied the report of the Select Committee, I have studied the first Bill and I have studied, of course, the other draft which was alleged to have come before the Select Committee. If the honourable member has to say anything with reference to that he may.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: It is only with reference to that that I propose to speak just now. As a matter of fact, I also raised this very point of order, but Mr. Naziruddin was more fortunate in catching your eye. Therefore, I have something to say on this point.

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam (U. P. : General): On a point of order to this point of order, Sir, according to the Rules of Procedure, I do not find any provision for any point of order after a report has been presented to this House. I would request the honourable member to quote that rule so that I may consult it and see for myself whether the point of order raised by the honourable member is not out of order.

HINDU CODE

Mr. Speaker: These are obvious matters which need not be argued. If we differ on the substance of the matter, let us devote time to that substance rather than take up the time in the technicalities of the matter. If people are against the Code then it is a matter of substance. If they are in favour of it, even then it is a matter of substance. But let us not take the time of the House in technicalities.

Substantially, the point of order mentioned was that the Bill which was referred to the Select Committee was, on facts, not the Bill which the Select Committee considered and that therefore the report is based on something else. That is the point of order, put in short, and on that point of order arguments were addressed. If the honourable member Pandit Bhargava has to address or speak on facts, matters would stand differently; the matter is, I believe, covered amply by what Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad has stated. Has he to invite my attention to any other facts?

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: May I respectfully request you, Sir, to permit me to place my point of order before you? It relates to the competency of this House, in the present session, to deal with this question at all; also, whether the point of order raised by my friend Mr. Naziruddin should be discussed in this session at all? For, if my point of order is accepted it will shut out all discussion on the subject in the present session.

Mr. Speaker: I think I will go step by step. Let the first point of order be disposed of. Assuming that the first point of order goes in favour of the Bill, then the second point of order which the honourable member has raised is competent and therefore he may raise the point later on.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: My submission is that even the discussion of the point of order raised by Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad is a point which should be considered by this House and the question is whether it is competent to discuss the subject at all.

Mr. Speaker: I do not agree that I should take that point first. It will be for the Chair to decide whether the Select Committee considered the Bill that was referred to it or something else, and whether, therefore, its report should or should not be taken into consideration. After that is decided, it is perfectly competent for the honourable member to point out to me any points or any law or any practice by which this House is not competent to take into consideration the present Bill. That is the better way. Let us save time.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: May I say one word, Sir?

Mr. Speaker: No, no. Pandit Bhargava.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I only propose to lay before you some facts and some law as it would apply to those facts. For instance, I beg to point out that the proceedings before the Select Committee was an abuse of the rules of this House. The privilege of this House has been violated by the Select Committee and by the procedure of the Law Department. Secondly, if my facts are correct, another Bill was considered and not the Bill which was referred to it by the House. The question which arises then would be a question of law, whether such a procedure was justified and whether this House should consider this report as a report on this Bill which was referred to the Select Committee or whether it is a document which is not valid in law and is not a legal document. I will therefore confine myself to the two types of questions which I submit are quite related. In regard to the substance also, with your permission, I will subsequently have something to say provided your ruling is that this question is also relevant. In my humble opinion, the question divides itself into two parts. Number one, whether the report which has been presented to the House is a good report from the procedural point of view. Number two, whether the report has gone beyond the scope of the Bill. I propose to address the House on the second question subsequently.

First of all, with your permission, I will address the House on the first question before laying certain facts before the House. My humble submission is that according to what we have got in the Select Committee's report and from the papers which have been circulated to us and which are found in the Library, I have come to the conclusion that after the Bill was referred to the Select Committee, the Law Department just substituted another Bill for this Bill, and this Bill was considered by the Select Committee. I do not know whether these facts are absolutely correct, but I have consulted some members who were in the Select Committee and they have informed me about it and at the same time from the report of the Select Committee also it appears that as a matter of fact.....

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid the honourable member is practically repeating what the honourable member Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad has said. It is the same thing. I have gone through the report myself bearing in mind the points raised and while I would like to give the honourable member the fullest liberty to place any other facts not included in Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad's speech, I do not think we should go into the same repetition.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I do not like to repeat. I only want to know if these facts are taken to be correct. If ultimately another honourable member gets up and says these facts are wrong, then the whole argument would fall down. Therefore, I want to place before you how I have come to the conclusion that these facts are correct. If you take them as correct, I do not want to trouble the House and your goodness. I submit that as a matter of fact it appears from the report of the Select Committee itself that the substituted Bill was alone considered, because from the majority committee's report as well as the dissentient's report it appears that no other Bill was considered and the Bill which was referred to the Committee was not at all considered.

Now, Sir, Dr. Ambedkar has kindly placed before us a comparative statement. If you will kindly see these tables, there are two parts, one shows how from this Bill the original Bill was different. He has given another table showing the difference between the Draft Bill and the Select Committee report. This also shows that only the re-drafted Bill was considered and not the original Bill. Anyway, taking this to be the right thing, if it is accepted that the re-drafted Bill was only considered, the question arises before you whether the re-drafted Bill could be considered by the Select Committee or not, and if this action of theirs is not tantamount to the breach of privileges of this House as well as abuse of the powers that this House granted to the Select Committee. Now, Sir, I may not be taken to say that there was any wrong motive behind it; such a course may have been intentional or non-intentional; it may have been done with the best of motives or with the worst of motives; I am not concerned with that. I am concerned with one central fact that the original Bill which this House referred to the Select Committee was never considered by the Select Committee.....

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): On a point of order. I wish to know whether this House can go into the manner in which a Select Committee has dealt with a Bill. In that case, it would require verbatim reports of all proceedings in a Select Committee. We can reject the report or accept the report or do anything with the report, but how the Select Committee dealt with it is a matter which, I think is not relevant and it is not the practice of the House either to go into it. Otherwise, every future Select Committee will have to give us a verbatim record of its proceedings, so that we can judge of the propriety.....

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid various points of order are being raised and stated too widely. As regards the present point, if the position is that the Bill which was sent by this House was not considered at all by the Select Committee, I think it would be perfectly competent to go into the question as to whether the Select Committee did or did not consider. Then the question will arise as to how far it would be permissible to go into the proceedings of the Select Committee and to that my present reaction is that this House or myself will not be sitting as a fact-finding committee or court, but we shall take into consideration—we are entitled to take into consideration—what the Select Committee itself has stated in its report, and therefore, the matter will be more or less one for inference—coming inferentially to some conclusion as to what the Select Committee did and not by taking evidence of every member of the Select Committee and taking extra evidence. Now, I may point out to my friend Pandit Bhargava, that in spite of all that he has said the argument is not being advanced any further. Whether you call it a breach of the privileges of the House or abuse of procedure, the argument, in short, comes to this—that the Select Committee considered a substitute Bill; that it did not consider the original Bill sent by this House, and that this conclusion is based on certain remarks or observations in the Select Committee report—majority as well as the minority report—and therefore he infers—to state more correctly—from these documents that the original Bill was never considered. That, in short, is the point of order. The question of breach of privilege or abuse of procedure will arise, if we come to the conclusion that the Select Committee did as he infers, but if we come to the conclusion that the Select Committee was not guilty in the manner in which he infers it to be, then the question of breach of privilege or abuse of procedure does not arise at all. I can assure honourable members that I have carefully gone through every point that the honourable member is going to read from the report of the Select Committee and, perhaps, something more also, and I have my own conclusions about it. I think I can make the whole thing short by stating what I have felt about the Bill and decide the matter rather than take up the time of the House. That is my feeling in the matter. (Some Honourable Members: "Quite so, Sir.") Anyway, we are not going to finish this Bill today. We can just clear the ground and I think without further going into arguments, I may perhaps.....

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I do not want to go further into arguments after having heard from you how things have taken place, but I do wish to place before you some of the rulings which I have got which go to show that this Bill as emerging out of Select Committee is absolutely unwarranted, illegal and vitiates the entire report of the Committee and before the House there is no report at all. This is my submission. If you will permit, I will place some rulings before you.

Mr. Speaker: However, the rulings follow certain facts. In this case, it is alleged that, as a matter of fact, the Select Committee have failed to consider the original Bill. If that is established, then we shall have ample time to consider the rulings.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Nobody is denying this fact.

Mr. Speaker: That is just the point, as the honourable member will see, when I give my ruling which I have carefully prepared after reading all the papers. If any further points arise after the facts as stated by me are accepted, then those points of order may be considered.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): Before you give your ruling, is there no other method of knowing the truth except by inference?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister for Law): May I, with your permission, intervene for a minute to correct an impression which my friend Pandit Bhargava has sought to create in this House that the original Bill which was referred by this House to the Select Committee was never before the Select Committee? I think it is a gross mis-representation. If my honourable friend were to refer.....

Mr. Speaker: I have myself studied the position in great details. I shall clarify it by reading out my decision.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): I have additional facts.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: There is one additional fact which has not come to the notice of the Chair. I wrote a letter to the Law Department to find out whether any redrafted Bill was printed. The information given to me was that only a few copies were printed and they were available in the library of the House. I have referred to that Bill and it is a fact that a re-drafted Bill was printed in July 1948 prior to the meeting of the Select Committee. That Bill was considered clause by clause by the Select Committee and that is the Bill that has emerged from the Select Committee with its report. The report mentions this. Therefore my respectful submission is that that re-drafted Bill may be taken into consideration to find out whether the Select Committee applied its mind to the Bill that was referred to it or some other re-drafted Bill that was printed under the signature of Dr. Ambedkar, after scrutiny of the original Bill and absolutely in a different form. That is a very important material and additional fact which I respectfully bring to the notice of the Chair before the ruling is given.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I have got a copy of that Bill with me.

Mr. Speaker: I have some facts which honourable members do not have.

The Point of Order that the Honourable the Law Minister's motion for consideration of the Select Committee Report on Hindu Code is incompetent, as raised by the honourable member Mr. Naziruddin and supported by a few other members on 31st August 1948, is based on a narrow limit of facts. The objection raised is presented as a chain of reasoning in the following form:

"What the Select Committee considered was a 'substitute' of the original Bill in the form of 'a revised draft'. Therefore the Select Committee did not consider the Bill referred to it, but 'a new document', and the present report of the Select Committee, being a report on a new document, there is no Select Committee Report on the original Bill. The Honourable the Law Minister's motion for consideration of the Bill, as it emerged from the Select Committee, is, therefore, incompetent". That is the substance of the Point of Order. (Shri Mahavir Tyagi: "Is that your ruling?") I believe I have stated the point correctly.

None of the members, Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad, Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava and Sriji Biswanath Das, who raised or supported the Point of Order, were members of the Select Committee and naturally, therefore, have no personal knowledge as to what was considered at the meetings of the Select Committee. They, therefore, relied upon some statements in the report of the Select Committee and inferred that the original Bill, as referred to the Select Committee, was not taken into consideration by them.

The question thus raised is purely a question of facts, namely, whether the Bill referred to the Select Committee, meaning thereby the various substantive provisions thereof, as distinct from the form or sequence in which they were put, were or were not considered by the Select Committee; whether the Select Committee did or did not apply their mind to the substantive provisions of the Bill as referred to them.

It is not disputed that the Select Committee had a right to add to or to delete from or to improve upon the provisions of the Bill as referred, provided the additions, deletions or improvements, etc. suggested by the Select Committee are within the scope of the Bill. I need not therefore, enter into this aspect, as no such question about the Select Committee having gone beyond the scope of the Bill is raised before me.

I may now examine, in the light of the written as well as oral evidence before me, the statement of facts as formulated by the honourable members who have raised the Point of Order.

I may shortly state the facts as to how the Bill that was introduced came to be framed. As stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, the Central Government, by their Resolution dated the 20th January 1944, 'appointed a Hindu Law Committee for the purposes of formulating a Code of Hindu Law, which should be complete as far as possible'. This was done in pursuance of 'a growing public opinion in the country in favour of a consolidated and uniform Code dealing with the different topics of Hindu Law for all the provinces and for all sections of the Hindu Society'. It was also felt that, in view of the 'present conditions and trends in Hindu Society' there is a great need to alter the law so as to make it fit the new pattern, to which the Hindu society seems to be rapidly adjusting itself.

When the motion for reference of the Bill to the Select Committee was carried on 9th April 1948, there was hardly any time for honourable members to express themselves on the substance as well as the form and the drafting of the Bill. The Ministry of Law, having felt that the Bill 'as drafted by the Hindu Law Committee did not conform to the canons of a Code', decided to revise the draft of the Bill and to remove those defects, so as to enable one to have 'a full and complete picture of the provisions of the Code'. They, therefore, undertook the task of re-arranging the parts and divisions of the original Bill in consecutive sections and in a logical sequence, and also made some further suggestions as they thought proper for consideration by the Select Committee. The Ministry of Law simply placed before the Select Committee a sort of a proper form in which the original Bill could have been shaped by the Select Committee themselves at their meetings or they could have directed the draftsmen to carry out the changes.

It may be noted here that, while circulating the Code in a revised form, the Ministry of Law supplied to the members of the Select Committee an index also giving therein, for facility of reference, the place of a section in the revised Code with the corresponding section in the original Bill, as prepared by the Hindu Law Committee. The Members of the Select Committee had thus before them, at all times and at every stage, the provisions of the Code as contained in the original Bill. The Ministry of Law further invited the attention of the Members of the Select Committee to changes of substance suggested by them in the revised draft. It was, therefore, clear that at all stages of deliberations by the Select Committee of the provisions of the Bill, both the revised and the original were before them and the deliberations had proceeded on a comparative study of the original provisions and the provisions contained in the revision as suggested by the Ministry of Law.

Coming to the question of evidence as to the above facts, the only member of the Select Committee who spoke with reference to the Point of Order was, Pandit Balkrishna Sharma. Pandit Balkrishna Sharma stated in the House: "The Bill which the House asked us to consider was always before us." The evidence on record consisting of the main report, as also the dissenting minute, amply support this statement. The honourable members, who have raised this objection, relying upon passages in the Select Committee Report or the Dissenting Minutes seem to take certain passages out of the context and by themselves. This is what the main report says:

"We, the undersigned, having considered the Bill"—not the revised draft—"have now the honour to submit, etc." This is how they begin the Report.

They speak of having considered the Bill and not the revised draft. But further they say as follows:

"The Draft Hindu Code, as introduced in the Legislature did not receive any departmental scrutiny prior to its introduction and the Ministry of Law have now produced a revised draft, which, in our opinion, is more satisfactory in several respects. This revised draft does not make any substantial changes in the body of the original Bill, but within the framework of the original Bill, it has recast it so as to be in the form in which Bills are usually presented to the Legislature."

So it will be clear that the Select Committee had applied their mind to the original Bill and had come to the conclusion that there was revision thereof, not in substance but in respect of the form only.

They also mention the reasons why they considered the revised draft as better than the original one, and then they say:

"Consequently we decided to confine our deliberations to the revised draft of the Bill."

The word "consequently" is important. Having seen the substantive provisions of the original Bill and the revised draft, it was natural and more appropriate to deliberate on the revised draft, which was nothing else than the substance of the original Bill in an improved form. The Select Committee further say:

"References are given in the margin to each section indicating the corresponding section in the original Bill".

This is a further cogent proof that, though their deliberations were confined to the revised draft for finalising their conclusions, they had before them the view of each and every clause of the original Bill. This is made further very clear in the notes on clauses in which they deal with various parts and clauses of the Bill and state with reference to each part or clause the corresponding part or clause of the original Bill.

The joint minute of dissent of Dr. Bakshi Tek Chand and Pandit Balkrishna Sharma says, in passing at one place, that what the Select Committee considered was the revised draft and not the original Bill. This has to be interpreted in the light of what has been said above. The place where they make a mention of the revised draft being considered, the point of their contention is that the changes suggested by the revised draft were not merely changes of form, but related to matters of substance. It may be remembered that, in their detailed and able minute, they did not make any point that the original Bill was not considered by the Select Committee. Whether the changes suggested by the revised draft are good or otherwise, is the point they are making in their minute of dissent.

On the facts, therefore, as disclosed by records, I am clear that the Select Committee had given full and due consideration to the substantive provisions of the Bill that was referred to them, and the present motion of the Honourable the Law Minister is, therefore, competent, and in order.

Now, this being the decision on facts, what is the point of order of Mr. Kapoor?

An Honourable Member: We may adjourn now; it is past five o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: The House may now adjourn.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Friday the 18th February, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES.

(PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS).

Friday 18th February, 1949

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-45 A. M.

THE RAILWAY BUDGET—GENERAL DISCUSSION.

FIRST STAGE

Mr. Speaker: Honourable Members have already been informed by a Circular last night about the allotment of Monday, the 21st February for the General Discussion of the Railway Budget in addition to today which was already allotted for this purpose. The revised programme in connection with the various stages of the Railway Budget will thus be as follows:

Today and Monday the 21st February } General discussion

Tuesday, the 22nd and Wednesday the 23rd February. } Voting of Demands for Grants

The House will now proceed with the General Discussion of the Railway Budget. Before the General Discussion of the Railway Budget commences, I have to announce to the House that under Rule 83, I fix the maximum time-limit for speeches as 15 minutes for each honourable member excepting the Honourable Minister of Railways for whom 45 minutes or more will be allowed, if necessary. In view of the large number of speakers, I would request Members just to make their remarks to the point and see that they finish their speeches by about ten minutes time. Otherwise, so many honourable members desiring to speak will have to be disappointed.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, throughout the speech of my honourable friend Mr. Gopalaswami Ayyangar, there was a spirit of buoyancy and a tone of confidence which augurs well. I hope that when the time comes for the Honourable the Finance Minister to come out with his Budget, he will also speak in that tone of confidence saying that so far as public finances go all is well. That too will be a good augury for India. It will shew India public finances have turned the corner.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar)].

Sir, the Minister for Railways characterised his Budget as an austere Budget. Though the revenues have been underestimated, the provision made for the staff is not austere. The wages and salary bills amount in all to Rs. 67 crores for people who always threaten him with loaded pistol. They threaten to see that the entire transport system of India does not function. At this stage I express my thankfulness to God that Mr. Jaiprakash Narain has called off the strike and has condemned the communists for their attitude. Sir, I am glad that the socialist leader has considered the railways as a national asset and is not going to use the strike weapon for accession to political power. I hope the communists will take the warning given by Shri J. P. Narain and that the Members of this House...

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U. P.: Muslim): Who is he to warn?

Shri B. Das: The sole voice of a communist is heard here! Mr. J. P. Narain has stated that they must think of their country and not seek inspiration from outside.

Sir, there has been an under-estimate of receipts for the year 1949-50. It will not be less than 220 crores. The receipts will be much higher than 206 crores as estimated by my honourable Friend. I am sorry that my friend Mr. Santhanam, the redoubtable critic of the railway administration has been captured and elevated to his side by my honourable Friend Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar. He is caged here. I hope that from his place on the Treasury Benches he will add his voice in support of those who criticise the railway administration when necessary.

I notice that on the expenditure side the estimates are rather high. I hope that my honourable friend will see to it that expenditure does not go higher still and it should not. I also venture to hope that the trade union leaders on the floor of this House and outside will agitate and make the railway labour which is earning highest wages now give some adequate return and decent return to the State by improving production.

My hon'ble friend has been very apologetic when he referred to production and to the willingness of the workers to work and produce more. As a result of the Rajadhyaksha Report 74,000 more people must have to be given employment. The labour world should see the advantage they have secured and must make efforts to increase production.

I may at this stage refer to the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee and its recommendations and pay my warm tribute to the two Chairmen, veteran Members of this House Mr. K. C. Neogy who worked at the early stages of the Committee's labours and to my esteemed friend Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru for the historic report he has produced. For years this report will be the magna carta of railway finances and railway economics in India.

Whether there will be contribution to the general revenues from the Railway Budget is a moot question. In spite of the dissenting minute to the report of the Enquiry Committee by the labour representative in view of the heavy borrowings by the Government of India over these Railways, I agree with the recommendations of the Committee. I congratulate the Railway Enquiry Committee for coming to the decision that there should be contribution to the general revenues. I have always fought for it and I am glad that that principle has been accepted. As regards what that contribution should be, the Honourable the Railway Minister has announced that he will appoint a committee to look into it and also to look into the question of the depreciation reserve to be provided.

Sir, I am surprised and I think my Honourable Friend is ill-advised in thinking that the surplus should go for replacements because his predecessors in office under the Foreign rule did not provide for adequate replacements when they worked the locomotives and other things instead of 8 hours a day, throughout the 24 hours of the day during those fateful war years. Sir Edward Benthall knew all the time that he was quitting India and went on destroying and deteriorating our Railway assets. Sir, luckily his hope his pious wish has not been fulfilled! I am not going to subscribe to the theory that depreciation should be increased. There are other means by which deflation can take place. I must express my firm view whether the recommendation of supplying 22 crores of depreciation per annum for the next three years the House will accept. I say it is no use introducing anything like that in the Budget and if the Honourable the Railway Minister wants such definite assurances, let him bring a resolution and let us have a full discussion on the question whether the annual depreciation charges would be somewhere in the neighbourhood of 8 or 9 crores or 22 crores for the next three years.

The Railway Enquiry Committee has recommended a Statutory Railway Authority. I was one of those who have stoutly opposed it from 1930. Now that my Government is my own, there is no handicap on the Railways that every order should pass through the United Kingdom, unless we will it so. In the present world situation, we are bound to buy our locomotives from the U. S. A., the United Kingdom and Germany. I am not opposed to it and I think the Statutory Railway Authority should be set up at an early date. Perhaps my inclination today after studying those two huge volumes—though I have not been able to study them thoroughly during the two days that was available to me—is that there will be general economy if there is a Statutory Railway Authority.

That brings me to the controversial question whether audit and accounts should be separated. It was done by those former alien fellows, who wanted to have full play with Railway finances, but today to read in this report that the satraps of the different State Railways are chary to hand over their financial advisers and their Accounts Officers to the Finance Ministry or the Auditor-General I think, they have to change their attitude or life, and they need not think that they have inherited all the bureaucratic ideas and temper that the former railway bosses were accustomed to.

That also raises the other question: The Railway Enquiry Committee has pointed out that the Financial Commissioner has at times not exercised complete independent judgment and discretion, because he has no independent office and his staff is spread over the Railway administration. I noted somewhere that the Financial Commissioner should have independent research and independent attitude and I do hope the Finance Minister will note that and will allow the Financial Commissioner of Railways to have an independent office-room in the Finance Ministry apart from his office-room in the Railway Ministry.

I find that the Railway Enquiry Committee wants researches, statistical researches and other researches. But I want the Honourable Minister of Railways not to duplicate things, not to duplicate or multiply statistical researches in each Railway, not to duplicate them in the Railway Board and also in the different Ministries of the Government of India. We have heard that the Government of India want to introduce a Statistical Commission, where statistics should be correlated to the statistics of all the Departments of the Government of India by the various research Departments of the various Ministries of the Government. My honourable Friend, the Minister of Railways should bear that in mind and not go into extravagant expenditure.

I have one word about production. At an early stage, I have said labour is not producing what is required of it. Labour instead of being satisfied with the expenditure of 70 crores spent on salaries and wages, wants all the surplus money to provide for its welfare and comforts. It is high time all railway appliances, locomotives and everything else from a screw to a coupling—should be produced in India and for that labour in our workshops should work and do certain minimum amount of work. I am not satisfied that they are doing it. It is for my honourable friend to put to the labour leaders inside and outside the House, whether they mean India should completely manufacture the railway appliances and whether labour means to work instead of agitating for four hours of work, and as I said last year: "more pay and no work".

[Shri B. Das.]

Sir, talking about locomotives, my honourable friend the Railway Minister had changed the name of 'Mihijam' into 'Chittaranjan'. I do not know if the Congress Working Committee or the Cabinet decided it, but to me 'Chittaranjan' itself does not convey the name of the town, but, however, it is a very small matter, but if you want to honour the founder of the Swaraj Party and the great Swaraj leader, Deshbandhu Chittaranjan Das, there are other means for my Congress Government to honour him. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: 'This itself is very good.') I put a question why we should go in for manufacturing coaches and others from steel sheets and establish a new workshop. You simply forget that Tata Steel will not be able to supply sufficient steel. There is such a shortage of steel in the country nay all over the world: Have you not learnt the lesson of economy from the Indian States, which incidentally have merged into the Indian Union? I have travelled in most of the States and their carriages may be old-fashioned, but they are made of timber; they are made locally; they were not controlled by British Managers, who wanted to import everything from the United Kingdom. I would like my honourable friend to travel in Jodhpur State and see these first-class coaches; it may be of timber: it employs workmen here and built of Indian timber. What do we care for the highest efficiency when my standard of income is only Rs. 60 to Rs. 100 per capita, while the standard in U.S.A. is Rs. 1,200 to Rs. 1,500 per capita? These are things which have to be borne in mind before my honourable friend the Railway Minister—though I have called him my austere friend—should jump into expenditure and introduce extravagant workshops, which will only cater for certain high-class societies and which will only buy larger and larger amount of foreign goods, which we do not want in this country and for which we have to supply hard currency.

I am alarmed that the Railways employ nearly 900,000 men. Perhaps they are the largest employer in the world. I am alarmed and my friends the labour leaders, the socialists outside, the communists inside and outside, they must ponder what huge extravagance, in manpower there is by employment of so large number of men. How does it compare with the U.S.A. Railways? How does he compare with even U.S.S.R., from which country my reverend friend, Maulana Hasrat Mohani, draws his inspiration, whether they employ such a large number of people, who are always demanding minimum hours of work and put obstruction at every stage over production and Railway economy? While talking of economy, I may say that only recently the Railway Enquiry Committee recommended various measures of economy and these must be accepted.

When Swaraj came, the ticket collectors grew slack and never checked the tickets. It is no use saying that the crew system has been abolished. I have travelled widely these days; I have never been asked to show my ticket. If that is the general mentality of laxity on the part of the ticket checking staff, how can ticketless travel be checked and how can economies be effected. I am sorry to find that the United Provinces has the largest number of ticketless travellers and I hope my friends from the United Provinces when they speak will justify why their people violate such a moral law. I am glad that the United Provinces Government is doing everything in their power to check ticketless travel.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: Why are the trains so over-crowded? Is that not immoral?

Shri B. Das: The existing ticket checking staff should be made to work and they should not think that swaraj means no work, but more dearness allowances and more grain-shop allowances. I am glad that after one and a half years, we have got a true picture of the railway transport economy from my honourable friend, who, as I said in the beginning has brought us a tone of confidence. But, no railway, no transport company will succeed if it is only meant for pampering to the labour community and the employees. State Railways have proved disastrous, because, the moment a company managed railway becomes a State railway, it increases the salary of the employees to the Lee Commission level, something like thirty or forty per cent more than the previous level. This is a disastrous thing which my honourable friends the labour leaders will have to examine. I think the time is ripe when the labour leaders will have to answer the question whether State-owning is only to pay more money to Railway employees and thereby destroy the very nucleus of commercial management of railway economies.

सब से पहले मैं श्री गोपालस्वामीजी को उनके इस बजट पर बधाई देना चाहता हूं। उन्होंने एक बड़ी सीधी सादी स्पीच यहां पर दी जिसमें न कोई बहुत बड़ा आशावाद, आप्टीमिज्म, था और न कोई बड़ा भारी निराशावाद, पैसीमिज्म, था। सीधी सीधी बातें उन्होंने कहीं जो कि काश्मीर के भूतपूर्व प्रबन्धक के लायक ही थीं। दो बातों से हम लोगों को सब से बड़ी खुशी हुई। एक तो यह कि अब कम से कम इस साल किराए में कोई वृद्धि नहीं होगी और दूसरे यह कि अब हमारी रेलें ज्यादातर लेट नहीं होतीं, एक दो ट्रेनों को छोड़ कर जैसे ग्रांड ट्रंक एक्सप्रेस है, जो अभी भी बहुत लेट होती है। किन्तु ज्यादातर ट्रेनें अब ठीक समय पर चलने लगी हैं इससे इनकार नहीं किया जा सकता।

स्टेशनों से रिजर्व की जा सकती है जहां से ट्रेनें चलती हैं। ट्रेनें तो बहुत कम स्टेशनों से आरम्भ होती हैं। यह देश इतना लम्बा चौड़ा है कि ज्यादातर स्टेशन बीच में ही पड़ते हैं और बीच के स्टेशनों से दूसरे दरजे के मुसाफ़िरो के सोने का कोई रिजर्वेशन नहीं हो सकता। मैं यह कहना चाहता हूं कि इस सम्बन्ध में अवश्य विचार होना चाहिये और उन स्टेशनों पर भी रिजर्वेशन की कोई न कोई व्यवस्था होनी चाहिये कि जो बीच में पड़ते हैं, कम से कम उस दशा में जब कि रिजर्वेशन के लिये खाली स्थान हो। फिर दूसरे दरजे के मुसाफ़िरो के लिये सब ट्रेनों में सोने का प्रबन्ध भी नहीं है। माननीय मंत्रीजी ने इस बात का विश्वास अवश्य दिलाया है कि बाको की ट्रेनों में भी सोने की व्यवस्था की जा रही है। मैं उम्मीद करता हूं कि यह व्यवस्था जल्दी से जल्दी की जायगी।

नये डिब्बों के बनने की बात भी हम बहुत वर्षों से सुन रहे हैं। एक सिलवर एरो नाम की ट्रेन भी बनी थी। उसमें जरूर, मैं कहूंगा, बहुत अच्छी व्यवस्था थी। परन्तु वह तो नुमाइश में रखने की चीज़ रह गई और मुझे इस बात का भय है कि यदि हम 'सिलवर एरो' के सदृश ट्रेनों के बनाने के फेर में पड़े रहे और हमने मौजूदा डिब्बों की मरम्मत और तरक्की नहीं की तो 'सिलवर एरो' ट्रेनों के सदृश ट्रेनों कम से कम दो युगों तक, २५ वर्षों तक, तो बनने वाली नहीं हैं। इस-लिये मैं यह कहना चाहता हूं कि 'सिलवर एरो' के सदृश ट्रेनों को बनाने की कोशिश जरूर की जाय, परन्तु इसके लिये जो मौजूदा डिब्बे हैं खासकर तीसरे दरजे के उनका सुधार न रोका जाय। मौजूदा तीसरे दरजे के डिब्बों में बहुत सुधार आवश्यक है और मैं आपसे यह कहना चाहता हूं कि बहुत थोड़ी लागत से यह सुधार किया जा सकता है। उनमें अभी पंखे नहीं हैं। सरलता से पुराने डिब्बों में भी पंखे लगाये जा सकते हैं। दूसरे पुराने डिब्बों की लैवेटरीज़ बहुत ही खराब हैं। थोड़े से प्रयत्न से उनका सुधार किया जा सकता है। तो मेरा यह निवेदन है कि 'सिलवर एरो' ट्रेनों के सदृश ट्रेनों के बनाने के फेर में न पड़ कर हमें अपने पुराने डिब्बों की मरम्मत में विशेष ध्यान देना चाहिये। फिर तीसरे दरजे के यात्रियों के लिये

भी हमको सोने की जगह देनी चाहिये। जिस तरह दूसरे दर्जे के मुसाफ़िर अगर वह दस रुपया रात भर के लिये दे दें तो सो सकते हैं, उसी तरह यह जरूरी है कि तीसरे दर्जे के मुसाफ़िर भी अगर दस रुपया दे दें तो..... (माननीय सदस्य : और कम होना चाहिये। ज्यादा से ज्यादा पांच रुपया)। कम हो तो बहुत अच्छा है, परन्तु यदि कम न भी हो और इतना ही देना पड़े तो भी मैं आपसे कहूंगा कि जो तीसरे दर्जे के मुसाफ़िर लम्बी यात्रा करते हैं, क्योंकि यह बहुत बड़ा देश है, और जिन्हें दो दो रातों ट्रेनों में बीत जाती है, वह दस रुपया देकर भी इस व्यवस्था को स्वीकार कर लेंगे। उनके लिये सोने की उसी प्रकार अलग डिब्बों का इन्तजाम होना चाहिये जैसे दूसरे दर्जे के मुसाफ़िरो के लिये अलग डिब्बों का प्रबन्ध होता है।

स्टेशनों पर तीसरे दर्जे के यात्रियों के ठहरने के स्थानों को तो जरा देखिये। उनका आज भी वही हाल है जो पहले था। उनके भोजन और पानी की व्यवस्था को देखिये। उसका भी वही हाल है जो पहले था। स्टेशनों के तीसरे दर्जे के पाखानों को देखिये। उनकी वही गन्दी अवस्था है जो शुरू से चली आ रही है। कठिनाई यह है कि अब हमारे मन्त्री लोग जमीन पर चलने के स्थान पर हवा में उड़ने लगे हैं और इस हवा में उड़ने के कारण उनको जमीन में लोगों की क्या दिक्कतें हैं यह देखने को नहीं मिलता। जब वे जमीन पर चलते हैं तो भी सैलून में चलते हैं।.....

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Sir, may I know whether my honourable friend is speaking in Hindi or Hindustani?

सेठ गोविन्द दाम : इसे मैं हिन्दी कहता हूं, आप इसे हिन्दुस्तानी कह सकते हैं।

Mr. Tajamul Husain: There are no such words as 'Khushi,' 'Taklif' and 'Musafir' in Hindi.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, order.

सेठ गोविन्द दाम : तो मैं यह कहना चाहता हूं कि हमारे मंत्रियों को कम से कम हमारे श्री गोपाल स्वामी जी और सन्थानम साहब को हवा में उड़ना छोड़ कर जमीन में चलना चाहिये, और जमीन पर भी उनको मेहरबानी करके तीसरे दर्जे में चलना चाहिये, सैलून में नहीं। जब तक गांधी जी के आदर्शों के अनुसार हमारे

[सेठ गोविन्द दास]

मंत्रिगण व्यवहार में इन सब चीजों को नहीं लायेंगे, जब तक वह खुद लोगों की जो तकलीफें हैं उनको नहीं देखेंगे तब तक मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि सच्चा सुधार नहीं हो सकता।

केटरिंग के निस्वत मुझे एक बात कहनी है। इस केटरिंग को, भोजन की व्यवस्था को, अगर आप डिपार्टमेंटली चलाना चाहते हैं, महकमे को यह काम सौंपना चाहते हैं, तो बहुत अच्छी बात है, लेकिन जिस प्रकार आपने बंगाल नागपुर रेलवे में महकमे द्वारा पश्चिमी ढंग का खाना, योरोपियन केटरिंग, शुरू किया है उस प्रकार से अगर आप इसको डिपार्टमेंटली चलाना चाहते हैं तो मैं आपसे कहना चाहता हूँ कि यह सफल होने वाली नहीं है। मैं आपको बंगाल नागपुर रेलवे की बात बताना चाहता हूँ। वहां क्या होता है? वहां पर यह व्यवस्था जब से सरकार के हाथ में आई है तब से उसमें नुकसान होने लगा है। और यदि आप उसको खुद नहीं चलाना चाहते हैं तो लाइसेन्स के मामले में जो आपने फ्रीसें बढ़ा दी हैं उसको आप रोकिये। यह केटरिंग कोई शराब की आवकारी की दूकानें नहीं हैं कि जहां पर आप लाइसेन्स की बड़ी बड़ी फ्रीसें लें। नतीजा क्या निकलेगा इसका? इसका नतीजा यह निकलेगा कि यह सब थर्ड क्लास के मुसाफ़िरोँ पर पड़ेगा। आखिर ठेकेदार कोई अपनी जेब से देनेवाला तो है नहीं। वह जो कुछ आपको देंगे वह सब का सब मुसाफ़िरोँ से वसूल करेंगे। बंगाल नागपुर रेलवे में क्या हो रहा है? उसमें यह लाइसेन्स की फ्रीस इसलिये बढ़ाई गई है कि योरोपियन ढंग की व्यवस्था में जो नुकसान होता है वह इन लाइसेन्सों की फ्रीस से निकाला जाय। मैं इसके पक्ष में हूँ कि आप इसे महकमे से चलायें, किन्तु यदि आप महकमे से चलाना चाहते हैं तो उसे अच्छे ढंग से चलायें। यह न हो कि योरोपियन ढंग की केटरिंग का नुकसान तीसरे दर्जे के मुसाफ़िर भोगें।

एक बात मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कुलियों के ठेकेदारों की निस्वत। पहले कुलियों के ठेकेदार नियुक्त नहीं होते थे। मैं अपने प्रान्त के स्टेशनों का जिक्र करना चाहता हूँ, जबलपुर का जिक्र करना चाहता हूँ। वहां पहले ठेकेदारी नहीं दी जाती थी। हम हर जगह से मिडल मैन को, साहूकारों को, जमींदारों को अलग करना चाहते हैं, ऐसी दशा में यह कुलियों की ठेकेदारी क्यों कायम रखी जाती है? हमारे कुलियों के ठेकेदार बैठे रहते हैं और बेचारे कुली काम करते हैं। आराम से बैठे रहने वाले, जो कुलियों को मिलता है, उससे नाजायज़ फायदा उठाते हैं।

अन्त में मैं अपने प्रान्त के सम्बन्ध में कुछ बातें माननीय मंत्री के सामने रखना चाहता हूँ। मुझे कहना तो बहुत था, किन्तु समय नहीं है। हमारे यहां

नई रेलों की बहुत जरूरत है। जबलपुर स्टेशन का बड़ी हाल है जो पहले था जब कि वहां की आवारी साठ हजार थी। सागर स्टेशन पर जेट्टा हार्म ऐसे गलत तरीके पर बने हैं कि शहर आने के लिये लोगों को लाइन कास करके जाना पड़ता है। जबलपुर और नागपुर के बीच कोई ऐसी ट्रेन नहीं है जिनके द्वारा हम वहां जल्दी से पहुंच सकें। गोंदिया में, जो कि एक बहुत बड़ा व्यापारिक स्थान हो गया है, इस तरह से ट्रेनों के कारण रास्ते बन्द होते हैं कि बड़ी दिक्कत होती है। यद्यपि वहां एक नया पुल बनाने की योजना हो चुकी है लेकिन अब तक वह काम हाथ में लिया नहीं गया।

मैं फिर श्री गोपालस्वामी जी को, उन्होंने जिस प्रकार से इस बजट को यहां पेश किया है उसके लिये मैं बधाई देना चाहता हूँ और फिर से यह भी कहना चाहता हूँ कि यदि वे रेलवे की ठीक व्यवस्था करना चाहते हैं तो उन्हें हवा में न उड़ कर जमीन पर चलना होगा और तीसरे दर्जे के डिब्बों में यात्रा करनी पड़ेगी।

Seth Govind Das (C. P. and Berar: General): Today I will try to speak in such a language that may be quite intelligible to all the honourable members of this House. I well know the Honourable Minister's love for Hindi. The memorandum about Hindi that we had drawn up for presentation to the Constituent Assembly was signed by Sri Gopalswamiji in Hindi. So I am confident that if he would try he would understand every word that I would say here. I cannot say so about Honourable Sri Santhanam because his love for English is great, but I can very definitely say so about Honourable Gopalswamiji.

First of all I wish to congratulate Shri Gopalswamiji for his Budget. He delivered here a very simple speech quite free from high optimism or acute type of pessimism. The simple speech delivered by him befitted the former administrator of Kashmir. Two things gave us the greatest pleasure. Firstly that there would be no increase in the fares this year and secondly that the trains do not frequently run late. It cannot be denied that except for one or two trains like Grand Trunk Express, which still runs very late, mostly the trains have begun to run at the scheduled time.

The greatest thing done this year is the new classification. In this connection in the first instance I would like to submit that if the Honourable Minister be pleased to see then he would know that the demand was for the abolition of the I Class. But it is a matter of regret that for some alterations the I Class remained as before and in fact the II Class was abolished. We wanted to abolish the I class and not Second. The abolition of II Class has resulted in the fact that all those who used to travel in Inter and II Classes now travel in this new class with the result that at times the II Class becomes much more crowded than even the III Class. The second thing is that for II Class passengers sleeping accommodation is reserved only from starting stations. The starting stations are very few. Our country is so big that nearly all the stations lie en route and from these en route stations no sleeping accommodation can be reserved. I wish to submit that this fact may also be taken into consideration and some arrangements for reservation of sleeping accommodation should be made on the stations living en route and at least when accommodation for reservation be available. Beside; this in every train sleeping accommodation to II Class passengers is not provided. The Honourable Minister has assured that arrangements are being made to provide sleeping accommodation in all the trains. I hope that such arrangements would be made at the earliest.

Now if we look towards the hardships faced by the Third Class passengers I am compelled to say that there has been no change, they are same as before. The Honourable Minister himself has acknowledged this thing in his Budget Speech that the increase in the number of carriages has not been in proportion to the increase in the number of passengers. There is no doubt about the fact that now the III Class compartments in the trains are not so much over crowded as before. But still we will have to acknowledge the fact that overcrowding is still there and in some trains it is exceptionally high.

Since long we have been hearing about the building of new coaches. A train named "Silver Arrow" was even put on rails. I will say that in fact the planning and layout of the train was good. But it has come to be a thing fit for an exhibition and I am afraid that if we were to fall in the misfortune of constructing more trains like "Silver Arrow" and did not turn our attention towards the remodelling and repairing of the existing coaches then trains like "Silver Arrow" are not expected to be put on rails before two decades or say 25 years. Therefore I like to submit that efforts may surely be made to construct more trains on the pattern of "Silver Arrow" but for this the remodelling of the present coaches and especially of III Class, should not be held up. The present III Class coaches require a great deal of improvement and I beg to submit that these improvements can be carried out with very little expenditure. As yet these coaches do not have fans. Fans can very easily be fitted even in old coaches. Secondly the lavatories in the old coaches are very bad. With some slight effort these can be improved. So my submission is that instead of falling in the misfortune of making trains like "Silver Arrow" we should pay more attention towards the remodelling and repairing of our old coaches. Then we should provide sleeping accommodation for III Class passengers also. As the II Class passengers can get sleeping accommodation for the whole of the night by paying Rs. 10 extra, in the same way if Third Class passengers pay Rs. 10 extra then.....(Honourable Members: "It should be still less, at the most five rupees"), the lesser the better, yet if the extra charge cannot be reduced and the passengers have to pay as much then also I would submit that those III Class passengers who travel long distances, for our country is a very big one, and have to spend 2 nights continuously in the train they would very gladly accept this arrangement by paying Rs. 10 extra even. Arrangements should be made for providing separate sleeping compartments for them also as is provided to II Class passengers.

Just look at the waiting rooms at the railway stations for Third Class passengers. They are still in the same condition as before. Just look at the arrangements made for their food and drinking-water. They also are as bad as before. Look at the latrines at the railway stations meant for III Class passengers. They are still in the same dirty condition as has been since long. Now the difficulty is that our Honourable Ministers have begun to travel by air instead of travelling on land and due to their travelling by air they do not get a chance of seeing what difficulties are faced by those who travel on land; and when do travel on land they travel in saloons.....

Mr. Tajamul Husain (Bihar: Muslim): Sir, may I know whether my honourable friend is speaking in Hindi or Hindustani?

Seth Govind Das: I call it Hindi you may call it Hindustani.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: There are no such words as Khushi, Taklif and Musafir in Hindi.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, order.

Seth Govind Das: So I like to submit that our Honourable Ministers and specially Shri Gopalaswamiji and Shri Santhanamji instead of travelling in air should travel on land and on land also they should kindly travel in III Class and not in saloons. Till our Honourable Ministers following the ideals of Gandhiji will not put them into practice and will not see for themselves the hardships faced by people till then I would like to submit there can be no real reforms in the existing conditions.

I have to say a few words about catering. If you wish to run this catering business i.e. arrangement for providing food, departmentally and wish to entrust it to the Department then it is all right. But I would like to submit that this scheme would not be successful if you wish to run this catering business departmentally in the manner started by Bengal Nagpur Railway in respect of the catering of the European type of food. I like to tell you about Bengal Nagpur Railway. What is being done there? Since the time Government have taken over the management the scheme has been running at a loss. And if you do not wish to manage it yourself then put a stop to the increasing of the fees in respect of licences. Catering is not like wine and other excise shops where you may charge heavy fees. What will be the result of all this? The result will be that the extra burden of fees etc. will fall on the shoulders of III Class passengers. After all the contractors are not going to pay out of their own pockets. Whatever they would pay you they will realize every penny from the customers. What is happening in Bengal Nagpur Railway? There the licence fee has been increased in order to find money to make up the loss sustained in the catering of European type of food. I am in favour of running this catering departmentally, but if you wish to run it departmentally then run it efficiently, lest the loss sustained in European type of catering may be borne by III Class passengers.

I like to say a few words about coolie contractors. In the past no coolie contractors were appointed. I like to tell you about the railway stations in my province, more particularly about Jubbulpore. Once no contractors were appointed there. We want to eliminate the middle men, the capitalists and the zamindars from every walk of life then under these circumstances why this licensing of coolie contractors is being continued? The coolie contractors sit idle while the poor coolies toil and labour. These idlers get an undue share out of the money earned by these coolies.

In the end I would like to submit a few things about my own province. I had to say much but the time at my disposal is short. It is very necessary to lay some new lines. The condition of Jubbulpore railway station is the same as was in the past when the population of the town was sixty thousand. The platform at Saugor has been constructed on the wrong side with the result that for going to the town people have to cross the railway line. There is no fast train between Jubbulpore and Nagpur so that time may be saved. In Gondia, which has become a big commercial place, the roads are blocked in such a manner by the trains that it causes much inconvenience. Though a scheme has been approved for constructing an overbridge yet till the work has not been taken into hand.

Once more I wish to congratulate Shri Gopalaswamiji for the manner in which he has presented his Budget here and once again I wish to submit that if he wants to re-organise the railway system then instead of travelling by air he will have to travel on land and will have to make journeys in III Class compartments.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (C.P. and Berar; General): We have listened very carefully to the fine speech that was made by the Honourable Minister for Transport when introducing the Railway Budget. Besides being full of fine expressions and phrases it was also a very frank speech. He admitted the defects and regretted their continuance. He also embodied in his speech two good features. One was that the country was not going to be faced with any deficit but there was going to be a substantial surplus. The second feature was that there was to be no increase either in the freight or fare. But in spite of these two welcome features I am sorry to say that his speech does not afford any consolation or solace to the citizens of this country.

Transport has time and again been described as the bottle neck which is holding up the progress in so many ways and leading to so many difficulties and disasters. If a part of the blame for our foodgrains deficiency is to be placed at anybody's door it will be at the door of the Honourable Minister for Transport. The scheme to lift the controls has been negatived very largely because the required transport is not available. The great idea behind the lifting of the controls, has been defeated, so completely or to such an alarming degree, principally by the lack of adequate transport in the country.

The Railways for want of petrol, automobiles and cheaper rates, have achieved an importance which probably they did not possess before the war. At the present time they remain the sole means of transport not only for passengers but also for goods and therefore any lack of improvement in transport leads to so many calamities. If it was possible to move the foodgrains more easily and more speedily there is no reason why the prices should have gone so very high, because every time the prices of foodgrains or any other articles go up the only excuse and a palpably true excuse that is brought forward is that it is impossible to get the commodity at the moment the customers require. So although there are some welcome features in this budget on the whole it is impossible to say that either the House or the country will feel satisfied.

The programme of new works is almost absent. There is no improvement either in the third class or in the rest of the classes from the point of view of comfort and in fact even the slight overcrowding in the Ministry has failed to give us any relief. As luck would have it overcrowding in trains has actually become worse. Every one of us expected that there will be great things accomplished and great achievements communicated to us on which honourable members of this House would be in a position to congratulate the Honourable the Minister of State. We thought that he of all persons was more familiar with our woes. I wonder if with the saloons that he might be now travelling in has made him forget the third class passengers about whom he used to be so eloquent and forceful in his speeches here. Unfortunately we have not succeeded in maintaining even the status quo in this respect.

The whole system of classification has been altered and the Honourable Minister has told us that we wanted this change of classification and there it is. That was the only argument that he threw at our face. The printed material that has been given to us also indicates that this House had expressed once or twice its opinion that the old classification was out of date and that it should be altered or remodelled. What is the consequence? I do not think any person in this House can feel satisfied with the way in which the classification has been changed and the way in which the new classification is being worked. (Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: 'Quite right.') Besides this, this has not even brought us any enhanced revenue. Actually it is causing us a very heavy loss of revenue, if the figures given in the papers are not wholly incorrect. It appears that we are expected not to trust anything that is printed in the papers. I do not support that view and I do not think it would be correct for the House to take the attitude that anything and everything printed even in a particular paper is to be judged as untrustworthy. The reputation of a paper is no doubt worth something. I do not think it would be correct on the part of the members of this House to regard everything that appears in a particular paper with a constant and permanent suspicion. Much less would it be correct to regard everything appearing therein as definitely untrue. Moreover this would also increase our difficulties because what is the condition of the members of this House? What agencies or conveniences have they got so far as ascertaining correctness of any information is concerned. They cannot afford to have even a stenographer much less a secretary. They have thus perforce to depend to a considerable extent upon information that is published in the newspapers and that being so merely to stigmatise any set of newspapers as untrustworthy would not be proper. I was very much surprised to find the Honourable Member who has now joined the treasury benches getting up and saying that because he did not find a certain news item on a certain date he was not prepared to answer a certain question. He has been a journalist and we know that papers are printed with different dates although containing the same news. Or all persons that he should have chosen to reply in that way was not what I expected of him. Certainly he could have taken pains to see whether that particular news or information was contained on the issue of the 5th or 7th, because we know that daily papers like the Times of India of Bombay stamp the same issue with different dates.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): With your permission, Sir, I might explain that I did search the paper of the 7th.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh: In any case I was merely giving it as an illustration that we should not regard newspaper reports with so much distrust as has been opined in the House. My point was that a daily paper recently mentioned that in Delhi station alone we were losing to the tune of Rs. 27,000 per day as a result of the new classification that we have introduced. That was the average calculation given. In giving the above figure I have not exaggerated. If anything I have given the lowest estimate. So far as classification is concerned I am not prepared to say that because the House had asked for it, because there was some debate upon it, it must continue and could not be reconsidered. I would like to press that the whole question of classification should be re-examined as also the complaints of the people at the earliest moment.

Sir, I have only 15 minutes altogether at my disposal and I cannot therefore enter into any details of this matter. I will therefore conclude this point by saying that if there was less mismanagement and confusion, then the income from the passengers would have remained stationery and we would have had a far greater surplus to our credit. Actually even this surplus, as I said already, is a matter of no consolation; because at what cost are we having that surplus? At a very heavy cost, where the passengers are persecuted, and they continue to be harassed beyond forebearance.

One novel feature of the present day first and second class bogies is that they are supposed to be run on austerity standards. God alone knows what this austerity means. The only austerity that I could find was that there was no switch to switch off the lights with the result that the passengers have no alternative except to allow the lights to burn throughout the night. So they are consuming more electricity than less and I would like to ask the Honourable Minister if that was the austerity he had aimed at. I think there is something wrong somewhere.

Sir, there are many minor points and I have not even finished with the major points. I must however hurry up and at least making a passing reference to some of the more pointed difficulties to which I would like the Honourable Minister to pay his attention and which I have been agitating for some time so far as the Central Provinces are concerned. Probably many members do not like the mention of the Central Provinces too often because my friend Seth Govind Das refers to it occasionally. None the less I would be failing in my duty if I do not ventilate the grievances of the people of that area. There has been a great demand for connecting Amraoti with Narbhed and the project had even been started. But somehow it appears to have fallen into dis-favour now. I hope this would be taken up again as it would lead to considerable development of the North Eastern part of the agricultural province of Berar. There are some local improvements also towards which I hope the new Transport Minister will be more sympathetic. Such as broadening of the Badnera bridge and a bridge at the Amraoti level crossing. A system of attaching a bogey for Amraoti passengers at Badnera to the main line trains has recently been started. Instead of that if the mail and express trains are taken to Amraoti without halting both ways at Badnera there would be much more economy as well as much more convenience. That suggestion may kindly be examined.

It is a good thing that drinking water is being provided on the trains. I may, however, inform the Honourable Minister that no covers for the pots are provided for and a lot of dirt therefore gets into it. This is a small matter which can be easily remedied but which will be a valuable improvement.

So far as the manufacture of locomotives is concerned I congratulate the Honourable Minister in trying to speed up the matter. But the speed with which the manufacture of wagons and coaches is being done is not to my satisfaction. It should be possible to speed it up much more. In fact during the last eighteen months much more should have been possible.

Lastly, whatever dissatisfaction we express is amply and adequately supported by this Report and the 175 recommendations that have been made in it and the dissatisfaction is absolutely well founded. It is therefore not merely a layman's view. Most of our complaints find support and justification even in the studied document produced by the Railway Enquiry Committee which makes 175 recommendations. In their very first recommendation they observe:

"We make a broad financial and statistical survey of the Indian Government Railways since 1924. We conclude that the financial results so far cannot be considered satisfactory and the immediate future of the Railways can by no means be considered bright."

The Committee has also pointed out innumerable defects and with regard to every one of them the Committee have very strong recommendations to make. I hope in the course of the next few months all these recommendations will be attended to and more drive put in the working of the whole Railway system.

مسٹر تجمل حسین: جناب ذہنی! پیپر صاحب! آج میں نے اپنے لائق درست

سیٹھ گونداس کی بہت ثقیل ہندی کی تقریر سنی۔ مجھ کو نہیں معلوم کہ ہمارے دونوں آنریبل منسٹران جو کہ مدراس سے تشریف لائے ہیں ان کی اس ثقیل ہندی کو سمجھ سکے یا نہیں۔ کیونکہ اس ثقیل ہندی میں ثقیل اردو بھی تھی۔ میں تو نہ ضدی میں بولونگا۔ نہ اردو میں۔ بلکہ ہندوستانی میں بولونگا۔ جس کے معنی ہیں کہ کچھ ہندی ہوگی۔ کچھ اردو ہوگی اور کچھ انگریزی یہ پہلا اتفاق ہے کہ میں ہندوستانی زبان میں بول رہا ہوں۔

میں نے جب جذبات دیاوے۔ مسٹر صاحب کی تقریر (speech) سنی تو مجھ خوشی ہوئی اور صدمہ بھی ہوا۔ کیونکہ اس میں کچھ باتیں تو اچھی

تھیں اور کچھ بری۔ جو اجڑی باتیں تو اس نے تو خوشی ہوئی اور انکے لئے میں دونوں حضرات کو مبارکباد دیتا ہوں۔ نو کروز روپیہ آپے سرپلاس (surplus) دکھایا یہ بے شک خوشی کی بات ہے لیکن وہ کہاں سے آیا یہ جب میں رنج کی حالت دکھاؤں گا تو اس وقت بلاؤنگا۔ یہ بھی ضرور ایک خوشی کی بات ہے کہ آپ نے فرمایا ہے کہ دیکھو ہم ریل کے کرایہ میں اضافہ نہیں کرتے ہیں۔ گو میں بعد کو کہونگا کہ دیاوے کے کرایہ میں تو پہلے ہی استدر اضافہ ہو چکا تھا اور اب موقع تھا اس کو گھٹانے کا۔ ہمارے لائق منسٹر صاحب نے یہ بات بھی فرمائی کہ دیکھو میں نے معاملہ کو اس طرح سمجھایا ہے کہ اب اسٹریک (strike) نہیں ہوگا اور واقعی اسٹریک ہوا بھی نہیں۔ اس کی بے شک مبارکباد دیتا ہوں۔ کیونکہ اسٹریک (strike) بہت بری چیز ہے اور یہ گورنمنٹ کم بے قابو (paralyse) کر دیتی ہے۔ اور اس سے قومی تباہی بھی ہو جاتی ہے۔ معاف کیجئے کہ میری تقریر میں کچھ انگریزی الفاظ ہیں۔ مگر ہندوستانی کے معنے ہی یہ ہیں کہ کچھ ہندی ہو۔ کچھ اردو ہو اور کچھ انگریزی ہو۔

مسٹر ذہنی اسپیکر: انگریزی ہو یا ہندوستانی مگر گڑی تو چلتی رہے۔

مسٹر تجمل حسین: یہ بھی۔ حضور! خوشی کی بات ہے کہ گڑیاں یعنی جسکو لوکو موٹو (locomotive) کہتے ہیں وہ بھی اب ہمارے ملک میں بنائی جائیں گی۔ یہ بڑی لائق تحسین (creditable) بات ہے کہ آپ نے یہ بھی وعدہ کیا ہے کہ دور دراز کے سفر کے لئے آپ اسپیشل کوچیز دیں گے۔ آپ نے یہ کوشش کی ہے اور اس میں آپ کافی حد تک کامیاب بھی ہوئے ہیں کہ ٹریکس جو کہ کھنڈوں دیر سے آئی تھیں وہ اب بچے بچے وقت پر آنے لگی ہیں۔ ان سب باتوں کی خوشی ہے۔ اور آپ نے یہ بھی فرمایا ہے کہ باہر کے ملکوں میں آپ نے بڑے بڑے آرڈر دیئے ہیں۔

شری مہارویر تیلاگی: یہ برا کیا۔

پکڑا ہے - اس سے لاکھوں روپیہ کا فائدہ ہوا ہے - اور یہ اُمید ہے کہ اور روکیں گے - اس سے ثابت ہوتا ہے کہ ریلوے کا کام آسانی سے اور اچھی طرح سے چل رہا ہے اس میں شک نہیں کہ ریل کے تقسیم کی وجہ سے اور جنگ کی وجہ سے آپکو مصیبت تھی اور مسافر زیادہ چلنے لگے تھے اسکی وجہ سے ایک مسئلہ پیدا ہو گیا تھا - لیکن یہ سب باتیں اب دور ہو گئی ہیں - اور اس کا سہرا ہمارے منسٹر صاحب نے سر ہے - جب ہمارے لائق دوست منسٹر سندھانم منسٹر ہوئے تو انہوں نے ہم سب کو لکھا کہ دیکھو تم کو ہم secret سی - آئی - ڈی (C.I.D.) بتاتے ہیں - جہاں چاہو ریلوے کی برائی پکڑو - مجھے اس سے بڑی خوشی ہوئی - اس سے معلوم ہوتا ہے کہ جب آپ منسٹر ہوئے تو اسکا خیال بہت اُمید افزا تھا اور میں دعا کرتا ہوں کہ یہ خیال قائم رہے - لیکن کرسی عجیب چیز ہے - جب لوگ ہمارے ساتھ بیٹھتے ہیں تو ہمارا ساتھ دیتے ہیں - لیکن جب حکومت کی کرسی پر چلے جاتے ہیں تو ہمکو بھول جاتے ہیں -

وقت کم ہے اور باتیں سب ہندوستانی میں ختم کرنی ہیں - عادت پڑی ہوئی ہے اردو یا انگریزی بولنے کی اور اب ہندوستانی میں بولنا پڑیگا -
مولانا حسرت موہانی : کیا کوئی مجبور کر رہا ہے -

مسٹر تجمل حسین : ریلوے منسٹر صاحب نے کہا ہے کہ جو سربلس (surplus) ہوا ہے اس میں سے حکومت کو آدھا دے دیا جائے - یہ بات تو بہت اچھی ہے مگر حضور ! سوال تو یہ پیدا ہوتا ہے کہ اس سے مسافروں کو کیا فائدہ ہوتا ہے - یہ روپیہ کہاں سے آیا - یہ روپیہ صرف مسافروں سے آیا اور سب سے بڑی آمدنی جو ریلوے کی ہے وہ تھردز کلاس (third class) سے ہے - اس کلاس کو آپ نے کیا فائدہ پہنچایا ہے یہ ابھی تک سمجھ میں نہیں آیا ہے - اس میں شک نہیں کہ یہ روپیہ اس کرایہ سے آیا ہے جو کہ آپ نے پچھلے سال بڑھایا تھا - جس کا روپیہ ہے اسی کو آرام پہنچے یہ قاعدہ ہے - یہ روپیہ تو آپ نے ایک جیب سے نکالا اور دوسری جیب میں ڈال دیا - ریلوے منسٹر صاحب cabinet کورنمنٹ کے ایک جزو ہیں - وہ ایک ہاتھ سے دیتے ہیں اور دوسرے ہاتھ سے لیتے ہیں - اس سے ہم لوگوں کو کیا فائدہ ہوتا ہے -

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I listened to-day to the speech, in very high-flown Hindi, of my learned friend, Seth Govind Das. I am not aware whether or not both of our honourable Ministers who hail from Madras have been able to follow his high-flown Hindi, because this high-flown Hindi contained high-flown Urdu as well. As for myself, I shall speak neither in Hindi nor in Urdu but in Hindustani, which means that it will be partly Hindi, partly Urdu and partly English. This is my first chance to be speaking in Hindustani.

When I listened to the speech of the honourable the Railway Minister I was pleased and pained at the same time, because it contained some good points as also some bad ones. The good points caused pleasure and for them I congratulate both the gentlemen. That he has shown a surplus of nine crores is a matter for jubilation no doubt. But, where has it come from, I will show when I present the painful aspect. It is again a matter for rejoicing that he has stated that no increase in railway fares is contemplated, although I should be urging later that the railway fares had been increased a great deal already and that now was an occasion for reducing them. Our learned Minister also observed that he had tackled the problem in such a manner that there was not going to be a strike any more, and there was in fact no strike. For this I certainly offer my congratulations, because a strike is a very harmful thing; it paralyses Government and leads to national disaster. Pardon me for an admixture of English words in my speech, but then the very meaning of Hindustani is this that it should contain partly Hindi, partly Urdu and partly English.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Let it be English or Hindustani, so long as the car moves on.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: This again is a matter for rejoicing that trains, I mean locomotives, will also now be manufactured in our country. It is highly creditable that he has also held out the promise to provide special coaches for long journeys. He has made endeavours, and also succeeded therein to a great extent, so that trains which used to arrive hours late have now started coming in somewhat in time. All this is a matter for pleasure. He has also observed that he has placed big orders with firms in foreign countries.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): This was bad.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Bad it is, but there was no help. If they could they would manufacture them in India, but they are helpless because they cannot manufacture them. But we are confident that a time will come when they would manufacture them here and provide them for us. He has also promised that more travel comfort will be provided. Besides, he has made efforts to check the various evils of the Railway (Department) known as bribery and corruption, even though complete success has not been achieved. It is a matter for pleasure that the check has been effective to a certain extent. He has also mentioned in the course of his speech that he has checked ticket-less travel and caused those travelling without tickets to be caught. This has meant a gain of lakhs of rupees. It is expected this (check) would be pressed further. This proves that the administration of the railways is being carried on smoothly and satisfactorily. There is no doubt he was faced with difficulties because of the partition of the railways and the War. There was a great rise in the number of the travelling people and this had given rise to a problem. All this is, however, over now and the credit for this is due to our Honourable Minister. When my learned friend, Mr. Santhanam, became Minister he wrote to all of us, "We appoint you as a secret C.I.D., so that you might detect evils of the railway administration wherever you choose to." I was delighted by this. From this it appears that when he became a Minister his mentality was hope-inspiring. I pray he might retain this mentality. But, the chair (of office) is a wonderful thing. When people sit with us they side with us but when they go over to the chair of office they forget us.

Time is short and all the things are to be said in Hindustani. One is in the habit of speaking in Urdu or English but now one should have to speak in Hindustani.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: Does anyone force you to do so?

Mr. Tajamul Husain: The Railway Minister has stated that out of the surplus contribution should be made to the general revenues. This is a very good idea, but, Sir, the question arises what do the travelling public gain thereby. Where has this money come from? This money has come only from the travelling public. The biggest income of the Railway accrues from the "Third Class." What benefit have you given to this class, I have failed to understand so far. There is no doubt that this money has resulted from the increase in fares which you effected last year. The rule is that he whose money it is should have the comforts. This money you have taken out of one pocket and put into another. The Railway Minister is a part and parcel of the Government. What he gives with one hand he takes away with the other. What do we people gain thereby? I have to say a lot of important things. My time is up now, so I will do it at the time of the cut motion. I shall also make a few suggestions with a view to the improvement of the lot of the Third Class passengers. Our First Class passengers complain that at night passengers stand on foot-boards and travel while so perched. You understand how wrong this is.

Now I have to say something in which I am personally interested. The condition of the 'Servants Class' is such that the 'non-servants' get into it with the result that the servants can no longer get in. I have always seen this happening at the Kanpur Station. When I travel I ask the station master and the guard to eject these people (from there) so that our servants might be able to get in. You have accordingly to remedy this. My time is over otherwise I would have given my suggestion. Now, I will do so at the time of the cut motion, if I get the opportunity, and in the language which you will follow easily.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri (U.P.: General): In the few minutes that are at my disposal, I propose to confine myself to express the labour viewpoint on the Railway Budget.

I should like first of all, to deal with the appeal the honourable Minister made to labour leaders to unite in a common organisation and to confine its activities to the realisation of essentially trade union objectives. Even at the risk of being mistaken to indulge in self-exaltation, I may submit, Sir, that during the last 24 years since I joined the trade union movement, I stood and strove for trade union unity. It was in the year 1935, while I was the President of the All-India Trade Union Congress, that at my initiative and instance the Communists were admitted into the fold of the All-India Trade Union

Congress. But my long and bitter experience led me ultimately to the conclusion that a lasting unity was not realizable unless there was homogeneity in outlook regarding the objective and methods of work. This explains why we parted company with the Communists when, due to sharp ideological differences, it became impossible for us to work with them on a common platform.

Coming now to the Socialist Party, theoretically speaking, there is no appreciable difference between the Socialist Party and those of us who owe allegiance to the Indian National Trade Union Congress.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: It is a National Socialist Party, I suggest.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri: As I said, there is no appreciable difference between the Socialist Party and those of us in the Indian National Trade Union Congress. The Socialists too swear by truth and non-violence as instruments in furtherance of the trade union objectives. We have, however, noted with regret that in actual practice they have, particularly after seceding from the Indian National Congress, indulged in the same tactics that the Communists have been pursuing much to the detriment of the working class and the country as a whole. It has been my honest conviction that a conflict in the theoretical stand of the Socialist Party on the one hand and pursuit of a wrong and suicidal policy on the other resulted from political considerations, the details of which it would serve no useful purpose to discuss at this moment. As long as such considerations dominate their policy in the trade union movement, there could be no unity.

So far as Shri Jai Parkash is concerned, and certain other leaders of the Socialist Party, I have great esteem for them. For years I had the privilege of working with them and in fact it was the most painful period in my life when the call of conscience compelled me to part company with them. Even now, none will be happier than myself if it were possible that circumstances should so shape themselves that we could work together. But to me it seems that trade union unity is inseparably linked up at the present juncture with the broader national unity and if leaders of the Socialist Party realise the gravity of the explosive situation in the country, and if, in view of the present emergency, they subordinate their petty party interests to the larger national interests and merge themselves with the great national organisation in furtherance of a common goal, trade union unity can be achieved without the slightest difficulty.

Now I come to some actual problems of railway workers. In the course of the Budget Speech, the Honourable the Minister of Railways referred to the recent increase in dearness allowance. Sir, the recent announcement made by the Government in regard to dearness allowance is no doubt a clear proof of the earnest desire to relieve the hardships that the railway workers and other Government employees in this country are subjected to, due to rise in prices. Actually, however, it has given them very meagre relief as the increase in dearness allowance is still lagging much behind the excessive rise in prices. It is hardly an appropriate occasion to deal with the causes that have brought about the present economic crisis, nor shall I discuss ways and means to meet the situation. But I am convinced that no amount of dearness allowance can give any tangible relief to the working class or to the people as a whole unless and until steps are taken to bring down the prices to a much lower level, and in no case higher than about 150 above the pre-war level.

The second point referred to in the speech of the Honourable Minister is the Central Pay Commission scales of pay. The way in which these recommendations have been interpreted and implemented have given rise to innumerable anomalies and at the same time caused deep discontent among railway employees. As an illustration I will give only a few instances. There is quite a large number of persons employed in various Railways as ministerial staff who have to perform duties of a specialised nature; they have to prepare notes and to draft replies that require a thorough knowledge of the rules and regulations of the Railways. Now, these people have, without justifications and in a most arbitrary fashion, been put under a class termed as "routine clerks" with a much smaller salary than the commercial clerks. Then there are the store distributors. Their pay of post-1931 scale was Rs. 65. The Central Pay Commission recommended them a grade of Rs. 150 going up to Rs. 225, but the Administration has reduced even the existing pay by 16 per cent. Another important category of workers is that of travelling ticket staff. The Commission recommended only one scale of pay for them from Rs. 100 to 185. The Railway Board has split them into two grades and put the lower grade on a scale of Rs. 60 to 150. Another gross injustice has been done to this class by excluding them from the running staff, although the Central Pay Commission accepted them as belonging to running staff. The grades of guards have been multiplied without any justification. Besides, calculation of running allowances on the basis of new rules will give much lower total emoluments than hitherto earned by them. These furnish only a few instances out of the many that clearly prove that the recommendations of the Commission and the manner in which they have been implemented call for immediate examination with a view to removing the anomalies.

I am thankful to the honourable Minister for his assurance to deal justly and even generously with labour. I would invite his attention particularly to one question that has repeatedly been brought to the notice of the Government, namely, the security of service. It is really strange that whereas on the one hand at the instance of Government—Central and Provincial—suitable standing orders have been framed in regard to the security of service for private enterprise, today so far as the Railways are concerned, Section 3(e) of the Service Agreement still holds good wherein it is provided that the administration has full power and authority at any time, for any reason that it may consider sufficient to suspend or dismiss or remove from service without previous notice or otherwise punish the railway servant according to the rules of the service in which he is for the time being employed. Now, Sir, last year with the kind permission of the Honourable Speaker I referred to this question in the course of my speech on the Railway Budget. Since then, I have received a number of complaints in which the railway employees have been sacked without sufficient justification. The time at my disposal being limited, I would not now place those cases before you. I would simply repeat what I said last year that as long as this state of affairs continues, it is bound seriously to jeopardize the efficiency of the staff and hamper the growth of cordial relations between the employees and the administration. Some years back, an undertaking was given on the floor of this House, perhaps in the year 1942, that an appellate authority would be constituted. My own view and that of the National Railway Worker's Federation is that standing zonal Tribunals with equal representatives of the administration and the staff with an independent chairman should be set up to decide all cases of removal from service and other disciplinary measures.

There is just one other matter to which I would refer. The British evolved a system of appointment and promotion with one main background that the raw youth drawn from England.....

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): On a point of order. May we take this as a precedent for the future, that we would be permitted to read from manuscript?

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): He is referring from copious notes. He is not reading.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri: These are only some of the points.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sure the honourable Member would be more interested in the number of points the honourable Member is making than in mere eloquence in this House. He is referring to his notes. There is no point of order in this. Any honourable Member can make notes and refer to them and even read some extracts if that is necessary, because statements of such important persons would be studied with care.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri: The British evolved a system of appointments and promotions with one main background that the youth drawn from England should benefit at the cost of Indian staff. The Assistant Station Masters and Station Masters, who were Indians, were superseded in matters of promotion by junior and less qualified British personnel drawn from other categories. In this connection, I would refer to another pernicious principle. It is the practice in the major part of the railway system that when a member of the subordinate service cadre is appointed to fill the vacancy of a junior scale (class I) post in the superior revenue establishment of the Railway, he is classified as L.G.S. or Class II and is debarred from the pay and status which a directly recruited member enjoys. This discrimination has had no basis and it has been a source of acute discontent in the services. The Chief Commissioner of Railways in course of his evidence before the Pay Commission expressed his opinion in favour of amalgamation of the two cadres and the Pay Commission also favoured the same view. But I still find that these separate categories continue and I would most earnestly urge on the Government to take up this question and come to an early decision on this matter.

Sir, I have concluded. It is too well known to you to require repetition that the Indian National Trade Union Congress and the National Railway Workers' Federation, while firmly standing for fair deal to labour, has done their best to infuse a sense of discipline and responsibility among the workers and to keep them aloof from the path that was fraught with grave consequences to labour and to the community as a whole. I do not propose to take any credit for what has ultimately come out. We have only done our duty to the working class in spite of serious handicaps in our way from various directions and we assure you, we would persist with our policy, as long as we are satisfied that it serves the cause of the railway workers of this country. My esteemed friend Mr. B. Das has laid emphasis on increased production. There could be no two opinions on that point. I should however respectfully warn the House against the habit—which has become a fashion—to criticise in season and out of season the railway staff. Since the advent of freedom, there is increasing and marked realisation among the staff of their sense of duty to their work and if instead of criticising them, you deal with them with sympathy and appreciation, it will create increased satisfaction among the staff and also result in greater efficiency.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

*The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock.
Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.*

Kazi Syed Karimuddin (C. P. and Berar: Muslim): I congratulate the Minister in charge of Railways for presenting a Budget which is a straightforward statement of facts and figures with mathematical accuracy. There is neither and new thing in it nor is there any hope for expansion of the railways with a view to have ultimate industrial development of the country.

[Kazi Syed Karimuddin]

Shri B. Das stated that he very well appreciated the contribution made by the Railways to the General revenue to the extent of seven crores of rupees. I entirely disagree with this point of view. My submission is that the question will have to be decided whether the Railways are a public utility service or a commercial concern. This is not a new matter. It is being debated from year to year and yet the Government of India have not decided their policy as to whether it should be treated as a public utility concern or as a commercial concern. The result is that, whenever there is a deficit in the General Budget, more and more sums are being appropriated from the Railways to the General Budget and the same thing has happened this year. Originally, from 1924, the system was to appropriate one per cent. or one-fifth of the surplus. But last year the appropriation was about four crores and it is going to be about seven crores this year. This is due to the influence of the Finance Department over the Railways to the detriment of railway development and expansion in the country. The result is that since 1924, 221 crores of rupees have been given for General Revenues and there has been no great improvement either in the expansion of the railways or in the repairs thereof.

Another thing in this connection is that I do not really understand as to why the Railways are heavily indebted and why the rate of interest that is being charged is about 3.20 per cent. These debts are not being wiped out and at the same time contributions to the General Revenues are being paid. For these debts a high rate of interest is being paid by the Railways out of these public utility concerns. Still the contribution is being given to the General Revenue Fund. Therefore I very seriously object to this. This is a national service or a nationalised industry which has to be developed and which is not to be crippled or damaged, because there is a deficit in the General Budget of the country.

It is said that it is not necessary to have more reserve funds than the six crores which are at present there. It has been the opinion of experts and of the Ministers concerned in the past that fifty crores ought to be the amount in the Reserve Fund for the stable running of the railways in India. If this nationalised industry is not financed properly, if reserve funds are not maintained at a sufficiently high level, then there is no hope of its expansion in the near future.

Another point I wish to submit is that the food grains organisation ought to be closed down. The Honourable Minister of State for Railways, Mr. Santhanam, has clearly stated in his report that this organisation is open to great dissatisfaction among the workers and has brought to light abuses regarding procurement, inspection and distribution of food grains. When such serious things are happening in the grain shops, it is necessary to stop this system of grain shops. We have opened these shops for the benefit of the workers and if the workers are dissatisfied, they should not be continued merely because, as stated in the report, it is necessary to avoid bitterness between labour and the Railway authorities. Why is this face saving device in such circumstances? If it is to the detriment of the worker and if you can give him compensation in another form; why should this system of having grain shops continue, especially when you yourself think that it is open to grave abuses? Therefore this organisation must be stopped and not continue merely to placate a minority of labour.

In the speech introducing the Railway Budget, there is reference to corruption and inefficiency of the railway workers. In the report submitted by Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru and his colleagues it has been clearly stated that there has been slackening of discipline and deterioration of morale. Why should it be so after 15th August 1947? The country has been liberated. The workers should have the responsibility as citizens of India. If not, our Government should have enforced greater rigidity in discipline and avoided corruption. The House will be surprised to know that in the last year 131 cases of corruption were investigated. My submission is that the railways should be very strict about this and the Anti-Corruption Department should be asked to be vigilant.

The last but not the least important question is the problem of labour. The House must be satisfied with the way in which the Minister for Railways has handled this question. His handling of this question is most satisfactory. My submission is that under the present circumstances of the country, the attitude they have adopted is the proper attitude and we must unequivocally express confidence in them and warn the workers from the floor of this House that any demands which are not in keeping with the economy of the country and with the funds at our disposal will ruin the country commercially and industrially. We must also warn them that the movement for nationalisation of industries depends greatly on the proper working of the railways and that, if in any case there is a strike and industry and commerce are paralysed, the movement for nationalisation is bound to be retarded. Moreover, the speech delivered by the Minister in charge of the Railways shows that whatever could be given has been given and the fact that the authorities are prepared to have negotiations on other matters is, in my opinion, satisfactory. I must also warn from the floor of the House that from the speech of Shri Jaiprakash Narain it is clear that there are many in the labour organisation who are out to create chaos and paralyse the Government rather than secure better conditions for labour. I am one of those in this House who is a great supporter of labour, but that cannot be at the cost of the efficiency of the Railways and that cannot be at the cost of paralysing of the Government. Therefore, this is the occasion to tell labour outside from the floor of this House that the House is unanimous in expressing confidence in the Railway Ministry's policy, regarding labour. Therefore, I have got two suggestions to make in this connection and in regard to the workers: you should have a Committee or a Tribunal in regard to the disciplinary punishments and wrongful supersessions, about which there is great discontent among the workers regarding these two things, that the very officers who deal with the cases, they make a recommendation for disciplinary action. There must be independent tribunals dealing with questions of supersessions and wrongful punishments.

Then in regard to the workers, I have a suggestion to make and that is that there should be a joint standing machinery for settlement of disputes, on which the labour representatives should also be taken. If these two things are guaranteed, as in Australia, my submission is that with the co-operation of the workers who are genuine agitators but not belonging to those who want to paralyse the Government, labour would be satisfied.

There is one point which I wish to say about the amenities of the third-class passenger. Every year, we listen to the speeches of the Railway Ministers as well as those who are in charge of this Department, that they are doing all that is humanly possible for the improvement of the conditions of the third-class passengers and their amenities, but it is a dream which is unfulfilled. Now the highest amount that accrues to the revenues is from the third-class passengers and the least that is done is for the third-class passengers. There is a very good suggestion, which I wish to make, i.e., that the Railway Minister and also the State Minister for Railways should travel in the third-class, and particularly in those compartments where there is overcrowding and they should not inform the Railway workers that they are travelling; otherwise, the compartment will be unloaded and people will be removed from there. Unless this is done and unless they go at least once or twice in a year in a third-class compartment, they would not know to what great inconvenience the people are being put to. Of course, the Honourable Mr. Santhanam, before he became a Minister, knew and he was the man who was really doing a lot for the third-class passengers, and I am confident that now that he has become a Minister, he would do the same for the comforts of third-class passengers.

Therefore, my submission is that this is not a budget which can be said to be progressive. This is a frank and straightforward statement of facts and figures only. Next time we will have a budget which will be based on progressive schemes and expansion of the railways with a view to the ultimate expansion of our industries.

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana (Madras: General): I should have followed my honourable friend, Seth Govind Das, in making my observations in Hindustani or my honourable friend, Mr. Tajamul Husain. Seth Govind Das drew his inspiration for talking in Hindustani from a signature that he had seen of the Honourable Minister for Railways. Probably he mistook the signature in Sanskrit for Hindustani. I cannot persuade myself into the belief that I can place my views before the Minister for Transport with any intelligibility as Seth Govind Das did. Therefore, I choose the medium which is understood by the two Ministers before whom I want to place my views. I should have spoken probably in Tamil, which is our regional language, but it is impossible for me to make the Tamil speech understood by the other honourable members. Therefore, it is regrettable for me that I should speak only in English.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister of Railways and Transport): I do not mind Telegu.

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana: Well, Telegu is equally difficult for others. I was listening to the speech delivered by the Minister for Transport with very great attention and devotion in order to find out how he has been able to place before us any improvement or progress. I must state that I have been very much disappointed, but I must say that I was very much encouraged by the tone that he had introduced in the speech in order to keep the nerves of the members very cool and raised very great hopes in our hearts that something better is going to happen during the year. I do not know, what is going to happen; it has actually to be seen, because my disappointment is that we consider these railways are the utility concerns, service concerns, and great national institutions for the purpose of keeping the whole nation healthy and keeping away the famines and keeping away the accidents and keeping away any kind of difficulties, we are likely to be confronted with. These institutions today, I see, are being considered as commercial institutions and voluminous and phenomenal figures are produced by way of crores and lakhs and millions of rupees showing that these railways have earned 200 crores of rupees and the expenditure is 179 crores of rupees. In this way the phenomenal figures are produced. Are the figures good for us? What exactly is the quantity of service these railways are rendering for the country? If we just look into this matter, I feel very much disappointed. The railways also are contributing a good deal to the inflation of this country. It is said that the railways are not contributing to the inflation and that railways are acting as deflationary institutions. Now, take for instance, we get Rs. 210 crores of rupees on income on these railways out of which half is drawn through goods traffic. The Railways charge according to various classifications and these charges they make on what? On raw materials, on food-grains, on various types of goods that are distributed throughout India from place to place. According to these classifications there are certain charges made and the more charges you make, the more prices grow and the more prices grow, more charges are made. Therefore, it must be the first duty which the Railways ought to consider that the prices of any food-stuff, the price of important articles are not at all inflated.

It may be said, Sir that classifications are made generally to see whether any industry can bear a particular freight or not, whether an industry should have a better subsidy or better consideration. All these considerations are made, but we must also see whether all these freights that are now made for the purpose, which are the inevitable consequences of increasing prices are properly justifiable or not. If we have a consideration for fixing up these prices, probably the inflationary tendencies also will decrease and there is a further inflation with more you earn; you show figures in the railway income, but there are more accidents. It is because when there is so much of income, every railway employee feels as the railway is considered to be a commercial concern, he must get a lump of money from it; he must get as much as possible, because the railways are earning. They are not earning money; they are performing certain duties and functions. These functions are part and parcel of the Government. The Government are for the people and therefore, whatever is earned, it is for the people and not for the railway employees. Therefore, the Railway budget should be so adjusted so that all the income that the railway is likely to earn, the portion which is considered surplus, instead of being handed over to the Finance Department, should be made use of for the purpose of bringing down the charges, to bring down the charges within the capacity of the people, so that the railway may become a national service and a national institution. This is a very important point that I want to urge before the House.

When I look at the figures, I find that the expense ratio is very high. I am not very competent to state whether the expense ratio can be reduced or not. Probably, there are very competent financiers, accountants, administrators who must be looking into every pie that is being spent and they must also be trying to avoid as much waste as possible. But, with all that, when we look at the figures, we do not feel encouraged that this expense ratio is really necessary. It must be reduced and there are many items in which economy could be effected. There is an item called 'Miscellaneous'. I have not been able to understand what this 'Miscellaneous' means. It is a mystifying thing and it consumes nearly about 25 per cent. of the whole expenses. I do not know if this huge miscellaneous expenditure could not be avoided. If it could not be avoided, it must be properly scrutinised and every possible reduction should be effected.

It is said that these railways have got three sections in their finances. First, is the depreciation fund. They have built this up to the extent of ninety crores. This depreciation fund is said to be useful for the purpose of replacement of certain machinery when it gets out of use. But, this amount of ninety crores is for a capital charge of 678 crores. I am not competent to pronounce an opinion as a lay man. But many people who have got a just attachment for money and economy say that that it is too much to place at the disposal of the depreciation fund so much money as at present. If possible, this depreciation fund must be reduced and the money that is available as a surplus should be utilised for the purpose of bringing down the charges and to give better service to the people. It may be asked, if this depreciation fund is dissolved, what will you do? What will you do with the ninety crores of depreciation fund? Are you not adding this year ten crores? If you go on adding like this to the depreciation fund one-sixtieth of the capital at charge, then this will get further accumulated and you will have 150 crores. That will be a huge sum which the railways may not be able to spend. The more you work, the more you earn and you set apart a larger amount. If, therefore, it is considered to be an additional asset, it must be utilised for the betterment of the goods traffic, for the betterment of the industries and betterment of the passenger traffic.

There are one or two points which I would like to touch upon before I sit down, because the time at my disposal is very short. It is the common experience of every member, every citizen in this country that third class travelling is every day becoming more and more difficult and some people complain it is a hell. Anybody over forty, cannot get into a third class compartment. Only people who are good wrestlers, who can wrestle with others, who have got the dashing and daring spirit, who would not mind any inconvenience, who are prepared to quarrel, who are prepared to squeeze themselves somewhere near about the gate, or near about the door or near about the latrine can alone get into it. Yesterday, I was reading a newspaper where it is said that nearly seventeen people lost their lives in third class travelling. There is not only over-crowding inside the compartment; there is over-crowding outside the compartment. On account of over-crowding outside the compartment, people travelling on the foot boards, nearly seventeen of them lost their lives. I cannot imagine how this can happen. If there had been over-crowding of this nature, the train should have been stopped by the railway authorities and it should not have been allowed to move an inch. There are several such instances. If that is the case, I do not think that we can congratulate ourselves on the running of the railways. Probably on account of this we may increase the death roll and I do not know what will be the consequences of increasing the death roll like this.

It is said that the railway employees are very much hardpressed on account of the inflation and increase in the cost of living. A number of things are done for them and I hope that the present Minister for Railways will be able to do much better because nearly four-fifths out of the betterment fund will be available to the railway employees and only one-fifth to the third class passengers. There is also a good deal of other money. But, what exactly is going to be done? If you give more dearness allowances, more salaries, more emoluments, probably, all that would be spent away. I do not know what arrangements railways have got for the purpose of protecting the daughters and sons of the railway employees who are supposed to be low paid. I do not know whether the Government have got any kind of scheme to have a kind of compulsory insurance for the railway employees. It is said that there are nearly eight lakhs of railway employees throughout India. There are thousands of people who get forty Rupees or fifty Rupees a month. Their salary was Rs. 14 and 15 and recently it has been raised to Rs. 50 and 60. I do not know what they are going to save. Therefore, I would very much like that there should be some compulsory insurance for all the railway employees. This will not only help the railway employees, but the railway will get by way of premium a large amount of money which could be utilised for the betterment of railway passenger amenities and for many other useful purposes. Therefore, I would like to express my view strongly in favour of compulsory insurance for all railway employees.

I was recently associating myself with a railway union. There is a constant complaint that the superior officers in the railways do not treat kindly the inferior officers. This is perhaps a legacy that has been handed over to the railway officers by their previous masters. This officialdom of the old type must now go. They must be shown all courtesy, civility, gentility. I am very happy to find today one who is very well known for his gentility, urbanity, cordiality, greatness and nobility, occupying the place of Railway Minister. He is very well known throughout India for his great culture. My own feeling is this. I had the honour of associating myself with him in certain activities and I had also the honour of running three or four special trains when Mahatma Gandhi visited South India last time. My own experience at that time was that the railway officials are the best disciplined people, very gentle people, civil, very nice people. My own feeling is because Mahatma Gandhi was there, they all responded so well to his greatness. In the same way, if the highest official in the railway behaved in the same fashion, with the same amount of gentility, urbanity, with the same amount of kindness and cordiality, it is bound to produce the same results. Therefore, I want the railway officials to take a lesson from the Railway Minister and try to emulate his example and remove this stigma that they are unkind towards their subordinate.

One more word, Sir, with your permission. A good deal has been said about the third class passengers. I want to just give a small quotation from a speech of one of the illustrious members of this House who is very well known for his integrity and observation, for his capacity and hard work, for his greatness and lucidity of expression. This is what he says. "It is a fashion for railway officials to....."

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member need not read these long quotations.

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana: I was just quoting an interesting passage.

Mr. Speaker: No time now.

Shri Moturi Satyanarayana: This is no other person than our friend, the State Minister, Mr. Santhanam and he has expressed his views and I hope that he will try to fulfil the promise that he has made.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri (Assam: General): My honourable predecessor, that is my friend, Shri Moturi Satyanarayana, has paid a high compliment to the Honourable Minister in charge of Railways. He has spoken about his large-heartedness, his culture and all that. So far as I am concerned I had always kept aloof from him because of his stern and grim attitude. But, Sir, I shall be failing in my duty if I did not apart from the members of this House who seem to have been rather ungrateful in their speeches which had preceded mine, thank him most cordially for the tea which he gave on the afternoon when he presented the railway budget. But for that invigorating tea many of the honourable members would have collapsed before the end of the budget speech!

In this connection I should like to draw the attention of the Honourable Railway Minister to the great injury which has been done to his Catering Department on the railways by the unkind references which some honourable members made to tea at the time of discussing the Tea Committee Bill. If you could only divide the persons of this House into two classes—tea drinkers and non-tea drinkers—what would you find? My honourable friend, Mr. Biswanath Das, who has never taken tea, against my honourable friend, Mr. Lakshminarayan Sahu who is an inveterate drinker of tea: and Mr. Nandkishore Das who has never touched tea pitted against Mr. B. Das. That is the difference between the tea-drinkers and the non-tea drinkers. It is prejudice to say that the drinking of tea spoils one's health. It rather improves it. That is why I say it is a very healthy tradition that more and more encouragement is being given to the tea caterers and the hawkers of tea. These poor fellows, the hawkers of tea, do yeomen service to the public in the sense that if instead of tea they drank cold milk, or cold water, which is sometimes of very doubtful origin, there would be greater fear of epidemics and greater fear of persons dying of various diseases.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Tea is an Assam product!

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): It is propaganda for tea!

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I am speaking of the Catering Department! My honourable friend, the Minister in charge of the railways had said that, "it is not my purpose, however to read out anything like a fairy tale." That is how he began. But when he ended: "That brings me to the end of my story this afternoon." So all that he has said between the first and the last pages is nothing but a story and should be treated as a story.

My honourable friend, the Railway Minister, I am afraid, has no family and he has no grand-children. If he had grand-children he would have known that fairy tales are always referred to as stories. If he could not tell a fairy tale in his speech, I can tell actual facts which will sound like fairy tales in this part of the country. I am narrating facts on my own railway, which will sound like fairy tales in this part of the country, and that fairy tale has been kept alive from time to time, from year to year by the Railway Members and the Railway Ministers. My honourable friend, sitting in front of me, I refer to Begum Sahiba, was rather indignant the other day for the use of the words T. B. Railway. It is not the railway itself, nor any of the employees nor the passengers that are effected by that foul disease! "T" stands for Tejjur and "B" stands for Balipara: that is the Tejjur-Balipara railway. I would invite the honourable members who can afford to risk their lives to some extent to come and board a train on the T. B. Railway. I do not know why it has been kept open by the Government. That train has an accident when it collides with a straying goat. That is true. There is no fencing and the goats and bullocks can stray on to the railway lines. That train need not wait for a coming bullock. A fair-sized goat is quite enough to tumble down that train. No ticketless travelling is allowed on that train because very few passengers travel by that train but a passenger has to undergo a certain kind of forced labour of which my friend Mr. Sidhva has always complained. When you go up to three miles from Tejjur, there is a place called Hazrapura. You have to get down and push the train, unless you want to wait there for hours! You have to get down and push the train from the back. This is not a fairy tale. This is an actual fact which will be supported by my friend on the right, who was at one time the Deputy Commissioner of that District. Therefore I have from time to time brought this matter to the notice of the honourable Minister and I have asked him to scrap that railway. They say that it cannot be done because there is a contract up to the year 1952. So for another two years we have to suffer from this railway!

Recently they started another kind of mischief. They started teasing the labourers. They took the ration from Government but they did not give it to the labourers. They did not recognise the labour union and when pressure was put on them by the honourable Minister in charge of the Labour Department they said that they would stop the railway. That frightened the railway authorities and no action was taken. I would most humbly tell the honourable Minister that there is nothing to be frightened by their threat of stopping the trains. It would be a relief. I would suggest to the Minister that he should start railway buses. They used to do that during the war and carry passengers. Why cannot this be done in the case of the T. B. Railway. I hope the Minister will take a serious view and do something for the sake of humanity.

Shri B. Das: Why do you not invite the honourable Minister to visit your province?

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: I have not the hardihood to invite the honourable Minister in charge of the railways to my province. I think I can request the Minister of State Mr. Santhanam to visit the railway. Mr. Santhanam had the courage to come to Assam once. He had visited the different towns of Assam once and he had returned back unscathed. Therefore he will have the courage to visit Assam once again and see things for himself. If he comes he will find that in the government railway trains there is no light in the lavatory. He will have to take a specially powerful torch to travel in that train. Perhaps if he travels in the mail train or in his saloon he will have lights in his compartments but so far as passenger trains are concerned there is absolutely no lighting arrangement. Also there is no water in the lavatory or water closet. But that need not daunt my honourable friend Mr. Santhanam. Perhaps he has other devices. Sir, as you have said at one time, I have said enough for my province that it would frighten any distinguished gentleman from visiting the Province. So I should not like to dilate further on railway travel conditions in Assam.

I have a few specific suggestions to make. When we go back to Assam we have to make the journey through East Pakistan. There should be some arrangement, as I have suggested from time to time to depute our officers at Parbatipur station to see that our passengers are properly treated in the way that you treat Pakistan passengers in India. We ought to get reciprocity from the Pakistan Government. Even in the upper classes passengers are put in beyond the capacity of the compartments. As regards the third class passengers the less we say the better. The example of Pakistan is so contagious that even after you pass through Pakistan and come to Assam in India no attempt is made to increase the number of compartments. You have to wait for a number of hours for the checking of the passports. There you can very easily put in extra compartments and relieve the passengers who had already undergone 12 to 15 hours of travelling hardship.

There is one important point which I would like to mention, and that is about the carrying of passengers on the roof of trains. I have actually seen it myself. I can tell you that they are not ticketless travellers. They are persons with tickets but who could not find accommodation in the ordinary compartments. There is no justification for such travel from the starting station. I have seen it even at the starting stations, where the police on duty could have properly checked and got the people down from the roofs. I have drawn the notice of the local authorities to this matter but nothing has been done to stop it. It is a very hazardous thing to do and I hope the honourable Minister will issue strict instructions that no passenger should be allowed to travel on the roof of trains. This practice prevails not only in Assam but I am told also on the O. T. Railway.

As regards the staff I want to say a few words. It is indeed very graceful of the honourable Minister to say that this year there will be no increase of fares and freights. That is good so far as it goes. But I say if you want to have honesty in your staff you should pay them more attention. How can the clerk who draws Rs. 60 make both ends meet. His accommodation is neglected. Many officers of the railway who have come from Western Pakistan and Eastern Pakistan have been given no accommodation. They have been for a long time living in goods wagons with their wives and children and even now proper arrangements have not been made to accommodate them. They are living anywhere and everywhere. Government has not built for them quarters and attention ought to be given to them. There are other points, Sir, which I would like to mention but as there is no time I have done.

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): I rise to thank my honourable friend the Minister for Railways and also the Minister of State for the reason that I know that by their being in the Ministry, the Ministry gets the benefit both of experience and ideology. I have known my honourable friend Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar ever since he was a distinguished officer under the Government of Madras. He had made his mark in Madras and elsewhere and I have reason to think that he would do the same here. Mr. Santhanam is also a man for whom I have had admiration and therefore a combination of these two friends, I hope, will make a very great change towards improvement. The period that they have had at their disposal has been very small to effect any important or major change in the administration. Under the circumstances let me hope that the benefits of their experience and ideology will give us all that we want in the next budget.

Having stated so much, let me plainly and flatly tell them that I am not at all satisfied with the budget that has been presented to us. If I have congratulated them I did so for their past acts and for the fact that there has already been a departure from the old state of things. My honourable friend Mr. Gopalaswami Ayyangar's admission about the Betterment Fund is a major change in the approach to things. Having stated all this, let me state my objections.

A separate budget has been called upon to be presented in the hope, I take it, that the Ministry will have the benefit of our comments and criticisms of the administration and the handling of the railway finances. If that were so I do not think our criticism will be of any use. Let me state the facts. The introduction of the budget was done on the 16th evening. After 30 or 40 hours we are called upon to discuss the budget and then after two days we have to go on with the voting of demands. How on earth can we go through the volume of papers supplied to us. It will take some time for us to understand the facts contained in the huge volume of papers.

It therefore takes my breath away to see that my honourable friends either think that we have to run from the Himalayas to Peru, ploughing the sands or that our help is of little avail. Let me hope from next year some change will be effected in this regard so that the Budget will be presented in due time to enable the honourable members of this House to go through the papers and offer, need I say, their valuable, useful and brotherly suggestions to them as lie in their power.

I do not feel satisfied that the contribution that the general revenues have got from the administration of Railways is fair and just to the ordinary taxpayer. Our memories are not short. We have levied last year the heaviest, need I say, taxation or fare fixation by enhancing the railway fares and freights and all these without having corresponding benefits to the travelling public or amenities for the railway passengers. We naturally expected a better and bigger contribution than the one that has been presented. Though in name net profit is Rs. 15 crores in reality it is not so. It is only Rs. 7 and odd crores because the rest of it goes to the Betterment Fund and some other contributions which are, really speaking, the proper and legitimate purposes for which the Railway administration ought to contribute.

Having stated so far, I come to a statement which emanated from my friend Mr. Karimuddeen that it is a utility concern. The railway is not merely a utility concern. It is both a utility and a commercial concern. Under the circumstances I have a right to expect that not only utility activities will have to be undertaken by our Railways but also the commercial aspects of it should not be lost sight of. I, as a taxpayer and as a representative of the general taxpayer, do expect a good and substantial contribution from the working of the Railways. Under the old dispensation in undivided India we had invested over Rs. 800 crores on railways. I do not know what the figure is today in a divided India. You have allowed 6 per cent dividend in ordinary investments. Let it not be so much, but let there be a substantial contribution. Especially this year I expected as was stated a larger contribution than what has been shown. I therefore appeal to the Ministry and to my honourable friends to see that greater economy is effected in the general administration of the railways, that more amenities are afforded to the travelling public and that a substantial contribution is made to the general revenues.

Having stated so far about the finances of Railways I come to the useful purpose that a utility concern has to serve in this country. Agriculture is the biggest industry in India. What help is the Railway affording to this industry? As an agriculturist and as a representative of agriculturists all along my life I have found under the old set-up that our railways were more a hindrance to agriculture than help. Now conditions must change. It is a well known fact that railways are affording help to agriculturists in England, Australia and in other countries. Conditions must change here and I indicate the way. I think the time has come when you must give topmost priority to the needs of agriculture. What are the utmost needs of agriculture? Topmost priority has to be given for transporting seed, manure, etc. I have valid reasons to complain in this regard. Every agriculturist feels and I feel also that utmost attention should be given by the Railway administration to this important item. While I make this statement here I do expect that the tools of the machinery that my honourable friends have to manage will look to it that agriculture, our mainstay and the main industry of the country, has to be nourished and helped. In this connection I suggest to my honourable friends that they should think of giving travelling facilities and concessions to agriculturists who wish to go and see agricultural institutions and agricultural development projects in different parts of India as also of their Province. I press this view very strongly for consideration.

Then I come to another question which is equally important. That question is the need for opening railway workshops for training technicians in this country. If you keep your railway workshops as closed doors keeping them only for your workers, the generality of the masses of the country do not get the benefit out of them. As such you will not have the necessary number of technicians for your country at a time of need. In this view of the question, the Railway Ministry should consider the regionalisation of the workshops on railways. I have pleaded for this with the previous Minister for Railways—I mean Dr. Matthai—and I pleaded with the Ministry. In this connection let me state that I as a representative from Orissa am nowhere in the picture. We have been kept in the background during the British administration and we refuse to be kept out of the picture in the present set-up of the administration. I really congratulate my honourable friend the representative from Assam for placing his weighty grievances. We refuse to give any quarter to the Ministry and the honourable Ministers if they go on pursuing the old track. We are nowhere in the picture. The railway workshops are not within the reach of the people of Orissa. Recruitment to railway services is not done within our Province. We get absolutely no benefit from the railway services—I mean in the sense—in proportion to the contribution that we make to the Railways. (An Honourable Member: 'Do you want a workshop?') I want workshops on a regional basis—it may not be on a provincial basis, but it should be on a regional basis.

Mr. Speaker: The honourable Member can have one minute more.

Shri Biswanath Das: Then I would say that with regard to recruitment to the railway services, Orissa should also be a centre of recruitment. You have got a Public Service Commission for Railways. Why on earth should not Orissa have a Member in that Public Service Commission?

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Oh! So that is regionalisation!

Shri Biswanath Das: Yes. I know more of it than you do. Sir, Orissa should be a centre for recruitment to the railway services. As I have already said, railway workshops should be opened, in the re-organisation that you have been taking up, on a regional basis in Orissa, so that, people of different regions and different Provinces may have the benefits and advantages of getting the training as technicians or technologists in the railway workshops. Until and unless this is done the purpose for which this national industry has been started will be frustrated.

I come next to the question of catering. Why on earth should you give all the contracts on all the railways to one person and that continually for years?

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid the honourable Member's time is up. He has already taken his fifteen minutes. He can just mention the point if he likes, and then not dilate upon it.

Shri Biswanath Das: Then I come to the question of amenities for passengers in stations in Orissa. You go and visit the stations in Orissa—I had invited Dr. Matthai to visit Orissa and have a look at the stations there. You look at them and compare and contrast them with others in other provinces, you will see what we are getting. Not to speak of mofussil stations, even in important stations like the Khurda Road you do not have the necessary lights, the necessary latrine arrangements and the ordinary and minimum amenities for passengers. We cannot tolerate these conditions long.

Sir, I had to state other questions also, but since you have cautioned that I have no time, I will only touch on item, namely, arrangements for refreshments in railway stations. It should not be a question of making profits out of issuing licences to contractors. Either the Railways should themselves take up catering in the refreshment stalls or they should, with the help of the Provincial Governments concerned, lease out stalls to local persons so that the Provincial health staff and the Railway health staff could take care to see that good things, at a proper and reasonable prices, are being sold to railway passengers. You have increased the freight, you have increased the fares; are you going to make more profits out of the contracts, given only to monopolists, to benefit the pockets of individuals? Under these circumstances, I strongly press this point of view on the attention of my honourable friend.

As I had begun, I congratulate my honourable friends in whom I have got abundant confidence. Let me hope that they will try to impress their mark on the Railway administration and thus relieve our stress and strain.

[An this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar)].

گیانی گورمکھ سنگھ مسافر: سیہاپتی جی! اسمیں شک نہیں کہ پچھلے یا پچھلے سالوں سے ریلوے کی حالت اب اچھی ہے مگر disturbances اور war سے پہلے جو ریلوے کی حالت تھی اس level پر ابھی تک ریلوے کا انتظام نہیں ہو سکا ہے۔ بہت دوستوں نے ریلوے کے انتظام کی کمیوں کے متعلق بہت کچھ کہا ہے۔ کمیاں بیشک انتظام میں ابھی تک باقی ہیں مگر میں ان باتوں کو یا ان کمیوں کو جنکو میرے دوست پہلے لاچکے ہیں دھڑانا نہیں چاہتا ہوں صرف تین چار باتوں کی طرف ریلوے منتری صاحب کی توجہ دلانا چاہتا ہوں۔ میں صرف نام ہی کا مسافر نہیں ہوں بلکہ اسمبلی کا اجلاس نہ ہو تو مجھے مہینے میں ۲۵ یا ۲۶ روز تک سفر میں ضرور رہنا پڑتا ہے۔ اسلئے سفر کے حالات سے مجھے زیادہ واقفیت ہے۔ شاید مسافر نام کی وجہ سے بہت سے ریلوے یونین والوں کے ساتھ میرا سمبندھ بنا ہوا ہے۔ اسلئے اکثر شکایت کے بندل کے بندل میرے پاس آتے رہتے ہیں۔ مگر انکا ذکر یہاں کرکے ہاؤس کا وقت، میں نہیں خراب کرونگا۔ اگر ضرورت ہوئی تو میں کسی وقت ریلوے منسٹر صاحب سے انکا ذکر کر سکتا ہوں inefficiency کی صرف ایک ہی بات بتلا دینا چاہتا ہوں اور جسکا تعلق یہاں اسمبلی کے ایک پرانے ممبر سے ہے۔ بابو رام نرائن سنگھ جی ایک دفعہ میل گاڑی میں سفر کر رہے تھے۔ دہلی کے سٹیشن پر جب چیک کیا گیا تو پتہ لگا کہ انکا اپنا ٹکٹ میل گاڑی کا تھا مگر انکے نوکر کا ٹکٹ میل گاڑی کا نہیں تھا۔ اسوجہ سے انہیں خواہ مخواہ تین روپیہ penalty بھرنی پڑی۔ بات عجیب ہے۔ مالک کا ٹکٹ میل گاڑی کا اور نوکر کا دوسری گاڑی کا۔ ٹکٹ کلیکٹر سے اسبات پر جھگڑا ہوا اور وہ بیچارہ بھی discharge ہو گیا یہ ایک مثال ہے جس سے اندازہ لگایا جا سکتا ہے کہ ریلوے اسٹیشنوں پر صحیح ٹکٹ سپلائی کرنے میں کتنی inefficiency ہے۔ اسی طرح ٹائم کے بارے میں ہے جب ہم کوئی میٹنگ پانچ بجے مقرر کریں تو دوسرا پوچھتا ہے کہ بھائی یہ دیسی ٹائم ہے یا انگریزی ٹائم ہے۔ ابھی تک ہمارے ریل گاڑیوں کا انتظام بھی اسی طریقہ پر چلا آ رہا ہے یعنی ریل گاڑیوں کی آمدورفت میں punctuality نہیں ہے جس سے لوگ محمول کرتے ہیں۔

زیادہ مبارکباد کے مستحق ہیں۔ مگر سوال یہ ہوتا ہے کہ اس بجٹ کو خرچ کس طوع سے کیا جائے۔ جسوقت پچھلے سال کا بجٹ بنا تھا اور بجٹ کا اندازہ لگایا گیا تھا اُسوقت تو ت پھوٹ کے فنڈ کیلئے کوئی رقم اندازے میں نہیں رکھی گئی تھی مگر اب جو بجٹ ہوئی ہے اسکا زیادہ حصہ تو ت پھوٹ کے فنڈ میں رکھ دیا گیا ہے جو میرے خیال میں ٹھیک نہیں ہے۔ اس رقم کو تو ت پھوٹ فنڈ میں lock up کر دینے کے بجائے بیٹرمینٹ فنڈ میں رکھا جاتا تو زیادہ مفید تھا۔

چوتھے نئی ریلوے کے بنانے کا سوال ہے۔ یہ ایک اہم بات ہے۔ جسکو میں سبھاپتی جی! آپکی وساطت سے ذرا وضاحت کیساتھ ہاؤس کے سامنے رکھنا چاہتا ہوں۔ ہندوستان جتنا رقبہ کے لحاظ سے وسیع ملک ہے وہاں آبادی کے لحاظ سے بھی کم نہیں ہے۔ پارٹیشن سے پہلے یہاں فی مربع میل ۲۴۱ آدمی بستے تھے مگر اب پارٹیشن کے بعد فی مربع میل ۲۹۹ آبادی ہو گئی ہے اور یہ اندازہ ۱۹۴۱ کی مردم شماری سے لگایا گیا ہے۔ نئی مردم شماری میں ہو سکتا ہے کہ فی مربع میل آبادی اور بڑھ جائے۔

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I am not able to follow the honourable member, especially in this latter part. I would like to follow him if he could speak in English.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Can the honourable member speak in English so that the Honourable Minister may follow better?

Giani Gurmukh Singh Musafir: I cannot express myself in English better, Sir.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Either simple Hindustani at least.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: One word. The Honourable Minister will certainly have a translation later.

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha: Meanwhile I would try to help him.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When he said that the trains were late, I was afraid they may be late in Hindustani.

گجانی گورمکھ سنگھ مسافر: برطانیہ میں سو (100) مربع میل کے رقبہ کے لئے بیس (20) میل ریلوے لائن ہے۔ فرانسیس میں سو اسکووائر (sq.) میل میں بارہ (12) میل اور امریکہ میں آٹھ (8) میل ہے۔ مگر اس کے مقابلے میں اسی ایوریج (average) سے ہندوستان میں صرف تین (3) میل ہے۔ ہندوستان جیسے گنجان آباد ملک کے لئے یہ ریلوے لائن بہت ناکافی ہے۔ ویسے ریلوے لائنوں کی ٹوٹل (total) لمبائی کے لحاظ سے ہندوستان دنیا بھر میں چوتھے درجے پر ہے مگر گنجان آبادی کا خیال رکھتے ہوئے اتنی لمبی ریلوے لائن بھی ہندوستان کے لئے کافی نہیں ہے۔

پچھلے سال نیو کنسٹرکشن (new construction) پر ساڑھے تین کروڑ روپیہ کا اندازہ تھا مگر پانچ کروڑ سے کچھ کم خرچ ہوا۔ اس سال نئی ریلوے کے لئے چار کروڑ کا تخصیص رکھا گیا ہے جو بہت کم ہے۔

پارٹیشن (partition) کے نتیجے کے طور پر ہندوستان کی ریلوں پر دو اہم اثر ہوئے۔ سبھاپتی جی! یہ ایک بہت ضروری بات ہے۔ جس کے متعلق میں نے پچھلے سال ریلوے منسٹر صاحب کی توجہ دلائی تھی۔ مگر مجھے افسوس ہے کہ اس اہم بات کی طرف خیال نہیں کیا گیا۔ دو باتیں بتی اہم ہیں۔ ایک کی طرف تو خیال کیا گیا ہے کہ آسام کو ہندوستان کے ساتھ ملا دینے پر توجہ کی گئی ہے۔ شاید یہ چودھری رہائی کمار صاحب کی دہانے والی اچھی تقریر کا نتیجہ ہے۔ مگر بدقسمت پنجاب کے لئے کچھ نہیں کیا گیا۔ میں ایک پنجابی کی حیثیت سے نہیں بلکہ ایک ہندوستانی کی حیثیت سے کہتا ہوں کہ پنجاب میں ضرور نئی ریلیں بنانی چاہیئے تھیں کیونکہ ان سے ہندوستان کے ڈیفینس کے لئے بڑا فائدہ ہے۔ پنجاب کی ریلیں یورپ سے پچھم کی طرف چلتی ہیں۔ مگر پارٹیشن شمال سے جنوب کی طرف ہوا۔ جسکی وجہ سے ریلوے کا تمام انتظام درہم برہم ہو گیا ہے۔ ریلوے۔

Giani Gurmukh Singh Musafir (East Punjab: Snkh): There is no doubt about the fact that the present condition of railways is better than what has been for the last few years, but the efficiency of management has not yet reached the pre-war and pre-disturbance levels. Many of the friends have spoken a lot about the shortcomings and defects of railway administration. No doubt shortcomings and defects are still there, but I do not wish to recapitulate and repeat the defects and shortcomings mentioned by my friends. I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister for Railways towards three or four points. I am Musafir not only in name but I have to be on travel for 25-26 days in a month when the Assembly is not in session. So I have more experience about the conditions of travelling. Perhaps because of my name Musafir I have connections with many Railway unions. So I often receive bundles after bundles of complaints but I will not waste the time of the House by making here a mention of these complaints. If necessity arises I can at any time make a mention of them to the Honourable Minister for Railways. About inefficiency I like to mention only one instance, which concerns an Honourable Member of the House. Babu Ramnarayan Singh was, on one occasion, travelling by Mail Train. When a checking was made at Delhi Station it was found that his ticket was available for Mail Train but the ticket of his servant was not for Mail Train. So he had to pay a penalty of Rs. 3 for nothing. It is quite strange that the ticket of the master was for Mail Train and that of the servant for another train. He had a quarrel with the ticket collector on this point and the poor fellow was discharged from service. This is an instance by which the inefficiency of the booking clerks in supplying tickets at the railway stations can be well estimated. Same also is the question of time. Whenever we fix any meeting for 5 o'clock then some ask if the time was Indian Time or English. The arrangement of train timings is still going on in the same old fashion i.e. no punctuality is observed in the arrival and departure of the trains, with the result that the people joke about it.

As regards the surplus, so far as figures and calculations are concerned, our Railway Minister has very nicely presented it before the House and delivered his speech also very nicely. Therefore, I think that he has given a proof of his acknowledged ability. Last year a surplus of Rs. 9,83,62,000 was estimated but the actual surplus amounted to Rs. 15,82,15,000, and this year it has been estimated as Rs. 9,43,90,000. Last year the actual surplus exceeded the estimated one by 7 crores. As regards the surplus the Honourable Railway Minister has maintained the previous scale. Therefore he deserves more congratulations. But the question is how this surplus is to be spent? When the last year's Budget was drawn up and the surplus estimated then in the estimates no amount was set apart for the depreciation fund. But this year a major portion of the estimated surplus has been allotted to the depreciation fund, which I think is not proper. It would have been more useful to have placed this surplus in the Betterment Fund instead of locking it up in the depreciation fund.

The second thing which is obvious from this, and about which the Honourable Minister very proudly made reference in the beginning of his speech, is that maintaining the previous scale of surplus there arises no necessity for increasing the fares. I think there is no cause of taking a pride in this. Because last year the fares had been too much increased. The last Year's surplus is a clear proof of this. Therefore had the fares been reduced this year then it would have really been something to be proud of. No increase in fares is not a thing to be proud of.

The third thing that has been shown in the Budget is that it has been presumed that taking into consideration the last year's surplus the income this year also will be more. The Honourable Minister for Railways has given out in his speech that this surplus money would be spent for the workers. This is a good thing. Everyone has in view the welfare of the workers. But I like to submit to the Honourable Minister a proposal in this respect namely that these days a number of organisations are exploiting the workers and they have begun to give out that they negotiate for the welfare of the workers. So it is not enough only to do something for the welfare of the workers but they should have the satisfaction that the railway organisation is sympathising with them so that the other organisations may not be able to exploit them. For this it is necessary to have more publicity among the workers.

The fourth question is about the construction of new railway lines. This is an important matter and through you Sir, I wish to place it before the

[Giani Gurmukh Singh Musafir.]

House with fullest clarification. As much India is big in area it is in no way less as regards population. The density of population before partition was 241 per sq. mile and now after partition the density has come to be 299 per sq. mile. This estimate has been based on the 1941 census, it is just possible that in the next census the density of population per sq. mile may increase all the more.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I am not able to follow the honourable member, especially in this latter part. I would like to follow him, if he could speak in English.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Can the honourable member speak in English, so that the Honourable Minister may follow better?

Giani Gurmukh Singh Musafir: I cannot express myself in English better, Sir.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Either simple Hindustani at least.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: One word. The Honourable Minister will certainly have a translation later.

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State): Meanwhile I would try to help him.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When he said that the trains were late, I was afraid they may be late in Hindustani.

Giani Gurmukh Singh Musafir: In Britain for every 100 sq. miles of area there are 20 miles of railways; in France for every 100 sq. miles the mileage is 12; in America it is 8 miles. In comparison to these figures India has on the same average, only 3 miles of railways. For a densely populated country like India this mileage of railways is very insufficient. As regards the total mileage of railways India stands fourth in the whole world. But considering the density of population so much mileage too is not sufficient for India.

Last year it was estimated that 3½ crores of rupees would be spent on new constructions but the expenditure totalled to slightly less than five crores. This year it is estimated that 4 crores would be spent on new constructions, this amount is very meagre.

As a result of partition the railways in India had to bear two important effects. Mr. Speaker, Sir, this is a very important matter and about which I had drawn the attention of the Honourable Minister last year also. But I am very sorry to note that no attention was paid to such an important matter. Two things are very important. One of the matters has been taken into consideration that is attention has been paid to link Assam with India. Perhaps this is the result of the humorous but excellent speeches of Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri. But nothing has been done for the unfortunate Punjab. I wish to submit not as a Punjabi but as an Indian that new railway lines ought to have been laid in Punjab because these are a great help in the defence of India. The railways in Punjab run from East to West but the partition was done from North to South, with the result that the entire administration of the railways has become topsy turvey. The railway lines have abruptly stopped at the frontiers and these endings are not inter connected. There is no direct connection between Amritsar and Ferozepur. How important the problem of Kashmir is? But excepting Pathankot there is no other rail-road junction which may connect Kashmir with India that is there is no direct connection between Pathankot and the rest of India. If a small branch line is constructed there via Pathankot Kashmir can have a direct connection with India.

Now there is no other route except coming round via Amritsar. As regards the defence of the country, at present, there is no railway line in Punjab running parallel to the Indian Frontier. Although contrary to this in Pakistan there are several lines running parallel to the frontier. On account of partition the whole arrangement has become disjointed. But this year also in the present Budget no attention has been paid towards this and so I wish to draw your attention particularly to this point. The honourable Minister must go through my last year's speech in this connection. I do not wish to waste the time of the House as well as yours by repeating that speech in full. But I wish that due attention must be paid towards this important matter. It is proper to raise the issue of Defence at this stage because it is of vital importance. As regards industries also the whole arrangement has become disjointed. This aspect may be left aside yet at least from the view point of Defence this proposal must be given due attention and keeping this point in view the Budget may be revised so that such railway lines are constructed in Punjab and if it is done so then it would be something very good for the defence of the country. I had to say much more but I think I must not take more time of the House as Mr. Speaker has already sounded the bell two or three times.

Dr. V. Subramaniam (Madras: General): Only a few months ago our Ministers took charge of the Railways. It is too early to pass any remarks but with all their experience and intelligence they are for going ahead with so many programmes. Several honourable Members have spoken about the difficulties of the third-class passengers and I do not wish to speak on that, but one thing I want to stress is about the new classifications which require some alteration. Previously Class I and II passengers had some comforts; the only thing then was that the third-class passengers wanted some more convenience. But now even that convenience is required for Class II passengers. I think our Minister had promised some thing. And as regard the third-class passengers something must be done. It is no use saying every year in the Budget speech that something must be done, something must be done. At least additional trains must be run in certain sections, say Delhi to Agra. If this is done the local passengers will go in those trains and there will be relief in through traffic. This is the only remedy which can be done at present. Even with the coaching arrangements we have at present we can arrange these things. In certain cases double line is necessary. These things must be done without delay. These things not only give additional goods movement but local passenger trains can be run very easily. These are the simple remedies which we can do within a year or two and before we get so many new coaches and engines and wagoons.

My complaint is about the permanent way arrangements. To speed up trains, we are getting good engines, but as regards the permanent way we have no schemes. For the improvement of the permanent way we have no schemes. The relaying work must be done urgently. The safety of travel and the comfort thereof lies in the good condition of the permanent ways. As suggested in the report presented to the House yesterday there is need for removing the old rails in the tracks which are 30 and 40 years old and putting new rails. The defects in the permanent way are felt by all classes of passengers from the bad jolting frequently experienced by them and this is especially unbearable when people travel long distances such as from Delhi to Madras and beyond. Although I am a layman I may state the remedy is simple. The gangmen must be asked to do their work properly and the permanent-way inspectors must travel in the trains in their vans and trolleys and test the track. The distance which a gang has to maintain may if necessary be reduced from 8 miles to 5 miles or 6 miles and the P.W.D. Inspectors also may be put in charge of shorter distances. The engineers may be given longer distances, as they travel in saloons. So for the safety of the passengers the permanent way must be improved and strengthened.

Now I want to say a word about the burrow-pits along the railway lines. In municipal areas there is no provision that earth must be taken from outside for the maintenance of the tracks. After the construction of the lines in municipal areas the authorities should insist that the burrow-pits must be filled. These pits get filled with water and in those small ponds malarial germs find their habitation. If the railway authorities are asked to fill the burrow-pits, they refuse to do so and these ponds form the breeding ground for mosquitoes. In future constructions of tracks, wherever there are lines passing through municipal areas, the Government must take steps to see that these burrow pits are not left gaping.

Regarding the complaint about over-crowding in trains, I suggest that conductor guards may be appointed who may instruct the branch lines not to issue tickets over and above the prescribed number. This will save a lot of inconvenience now experienced by through passengers. I am glad to find that for through passengers and for those who travel more than 300 miles at one stretch, certain carriages have been set apart. Unless through these guard conductors the intermediate passengers are prohibited from entering those carriages there will be no relief to long distance passengers. The station masters and the station superintendents also must be made to take pains to see that long distance passengers are not inconvenienced even in the separate carriages.

As regards goods traffic, during the last year's Budget debate also I suggested that, in order to give facilities for fruits to be transported in good condition, some refrigerator wagons must be arranged as is done in foreign countries. For want of such an arrangement many millions worth of edible fruits get spoiled in transit. These perishable food items must be preserved in good condition in transit. If these facilities are given to our fruit-growers fruits grown at one end of the country can be safely transported to the other end in good condition and we can save a lot of money now spent on foreign imports.

Another point I want to mention concerns third class season ticket holders. There are only two or three stations in all India where such season ticket system obtains. Madras, Bombay and Calcutta are these three stations. I request that this system might be extended to Trichinopoly and other stations. In regard to this I wrote a letter to the authorities on 28th August and, after 5 months I got a reply to the effect that Madras, etc. had been given special consideration for historical reasons. I do not know what those historical reasons are. In any case, while we are making history here, I do not know why those historical considerations should not be extended to other places also and the traders, school-boys and others who require this concession granted the same. Another reason why this should be done is that our aim is not to allow big cities to grow. Overcrowding in big cities can be reduced and avoided if we enable people to live some distance away from them. There is also very great dearth of accommodation in cities. For that purpose this season-ticket concession may be made available to people living 30 to 40 miles of big cities. I request that a uniform policy may be adopted throughout India in this respect. We may be, by so doing, perhaps making history also in this House and give all conveniences to the public.

Shri Kishorimohan Tripathi (C.P. and Berar States): The first point I want to make is about the use of the Depreciation fund for the expansion of the railways or the replacement of such of the rolling stock or locomotives that go out of order.

So far as expansion of the railway lines are concerned, it has been found that the expansion scheme is not drawn in the right way and there 4 P.M. are more lines being laid out in certain areas of the country, where the need is not as great as in other areas, where expansion should take place. The result has been that whereas a section of our people in the country has the advantage of the railway system, there are others who, although they are indirectly paying in the form of goods freight, are not getting the social advantages of railways which come to people by contacts. Even today there are areas in the country where by expanding the railway lines, the country can progress and trade and commerce could be increased to a large extent; the potential resources of the country could be tapped and the people of the country could be served more distributively than it is now done. I hope, in the future expansion schemes a proper distribution of the railway lines that are to be laid out, will be taken into account.

I will then come to the question of wagon supplies—wagon supplies for goods. There have been very serious complaints about a lot of corruption in the Department of Wagon Supply. The complaints have been that there is not a single wagon available to the tradesman or businessman, unless he pays something by way of bribery or something like that or illegal gratification. (An honourable member: 'To whom?') To the staff. For example, at every station the Station Master registers certain indents. For every station there is a fixed quota of wagons to arrive and the Station Master has to register a certain number of persons who would avail of these wagon supplies at the particular station. In doing so, he always gives preference to the richer class of people, the richer class of businessmen, the richer class of tradesmen to the detriment of the middle-class tradesmen and middle-class businessmen.

Then, these wagons have been seen moving empty after having been unloaded at certain stations and that is one of the causes of shortage of wagon supply, for example, a wagon moving from a certain station to a destination having unloaded, goes back to the District Centre and while doing so although there is a need at the station where it has unloaded the goods, although there are goods to be moved to other directions the wagons move quite empty and no use of those wagons is made. Some way should be devised to see that our wagons do not move empty on the lines. There have been complaints of wagons moving quite in a haphazard way. I have come across an instance where petroleum was to move to a station towards the East from Chakradarpur and it was allowed to move towards the West to a station and lie there for a week or over, and this caused very great hardship to the people.

There have been instances, Sir, where it has been seen that trains have stopped at certain stations, the driver of the guard has either gone to take tea or to have a talk with a friend and although the time for the train to start has come, the driver or the guard has not returned and the train has been delayed. This is one of the reasons why trains have been delayed and the time schedule has not been maintained by them. This should be avoided. While we are all so sympathetic about the railwaymen's claim, we must not forget that, after all, what we are going to pay to the railwaymen is from the pockets of the poor villagers, and while on the one hand, we are going to raise the living standard and bring it to an adequate level in the case of railwaymen, we are doing almost nothing to raise the living standard of the poor villagers. We want to increase the salaries, the allowances, etc., of the railway employees at the cost of the poor villagers. This will be quite unjust. The living standard of the entire country must rise in a planned manner and one section should not go on getting a fair deal, while the other section of the population remains where it is or rather grows on poorer and poorer. This haphazard way of dealing with the problem, or raising the living standards will lead us to greater disparity in earnings, which will disturb the equilibrium of society and cause greater dissatisfaction every now and then.

Much has been said, Sir, to bring in more amenities for the third-class passengers and I do not think I have much to add, but I have seen that if the railway employees at stations take proper care, much of the inconveniences that come to the lot of the third-class passengers could be redressed. In fact, it is due to the outlook of the Railway Administration and particularly the employees that these poor passengers in the third-class compartments suffer greatly. If there were people at the spot to advise the poor third-class passengers properly, these congestions and overcrowding could be relieved. I have come across trains where particularly in the third-class compartments, while on the one hand, you will see that there is a compartment where third-class passengers are there like chattles or goods, there are other compartments which run quite empty. This so happens, because there is none to guide the poor villager at the spot or to give him instructions or to take care of him. There are social guides outside, but these social guides are there at big stations, such as Delhi, Cawnpore or Bombay, where they have not to deal with these poor third-class passengers coming from rural areas, who mostly suffer as a result of this overcrowding. So the scheme of social guides must be extended to such stations where their services may be greatly needed. My experience of social guides so far as I have come across is this: One day I went to Delhi Station and found that these social guides are in fact no help to the poorer section of the travellers, the third class travellers. They look after the comforts of the first and second class travellers and I actually came across an instance where a social guide was haughtily ordering a third class passenger to quit a queue that was forming. But I am not concerned with that aspect. The social guide scheme is a very new scheme and it could be improved. What I want to lay stress upon is that this scheme must be extended for the benefit of the third-class passengers and in such areas where these third class passengers suffer the most. If you are going to limit them at stations like Bombay, Delhi and Cawnpore, we are not going to serve the people. Let us change the whole outlook.

It has been said that the railways are a public utility concern. As I said in my last speech on the railway budget, if we want these railways to serve the people properly, we must see that they serve the third class passengers as best as they can rather than the first and second class passengers. Today, the outlook of the whole railway administration is to look to the comforts of the first and second class passengers who really form a very small proportion of the travelling public. If therefore the railways want to prove themselves to be a proper public utility concern, then, they must do their best to redress the grievances of the third class passengers and to so arrange the whole transport system as to be of the greatest service to the poor tax payer.

अभी तक भारतीय असेम्बली में रियासतों के लोग नहीं थे। रियासतों की तरफ पुरानी गवर्नमेंट बहुत ज्यादा ध्यान नहीं देती थी। रेल्वे लाइन और रेल्वे सुविधा ज्यादा रियासतों को नहीं मिला करती थी। लेकिन अब रियासत के लोग खुद हिन्दुस्तान के शासन में शामिल हो गये हैं, रियासतों का एकसेशन भी हो गया है, तो अब यह जरूरी है कि रेल्वे विभाग का ध्यान रियासत की जनता की सुविधा की तरफ ज्यादा जाना चाहिये। खासकर मैं यह बतलाऊंगा कि मध्य भारत यूनियन जो बना है वह Commercial Industrial और व्यापारियों को बैगन की कमी बहुत ज्यादा महसूस हो रही है। इस तरह से वहां बैगनों का बोटल-नेक (bottle-neck) जो बना है वह एक दम दूर होना चाहिये। इसकी वजह से वहां इन्डस्ट्री और व्यापार में बहुत नुकसान हो रहा है और वह उन्नति इस बैगन की कमी की वजह से नहीं कर सकते।

ट्रेन, ग्वालियर, भोपाल, उज्जैन और रतलाम चला कर। इससे वहाँ के लोगों को सुविधा होगी और इसकी बहुत ज्यादा आवश्यकता है। अगर स्पेशल ट्रेन नहीं चलती है तो कम से कम कुछ स्पेशल वोगीज रेल में लगा दी जायें मालवा और ग्वालियर के बीच वाली गाड़ियों में। यह एक बिल्कुल छोटा काम है जो रेलवे वाले वहाँ की जनता की सुविधा के लिये कर सकते हैं। इसी तरह से नई रेलवे लाइन बनाने में रियासतों की तरफ भी ध्यान दिया जाना चाहिये। अभी तक रियासतों की तरफ ज्यादा ध्यान नहीं दिया गया था। जब रेलवे सिस्टम देश में बढ़ाया जायेगा तो रियासत की जनता का भी ख्याल किया जाना चाहिये। देश में जो नई रेल की लाइनें बनाई जायेंगी उस प्रोग्राम में ग्वालियर, उज्जैन, इन्दौर और भुसावल तक नई रेल की लाइन बनाने का भी ख्याल रखा जाना चाहिये। रेल के नये प्रोग्राम में मध्य भारत को भी जरूर शामिल किया जाना चाहिये।

रेल में जो over crowding है, corruption है inefficiency है वह अब भी पाई जाती है तो इन बुराइयों को दूर किया जाना चाहिये और मुझे आशा है कि बजट के समय इन बातों का ध्यान रखा जायेगा। अन्तमें फिर यह कहूंगा कि अब तक जो पालिसी होती थी उसमें रियासतों की उम्मेदारी की जाती थी। अब रियासतों की जनता की सुविधा के लिये हर प्रकार की कोशिश की जायेगी और रियासतों की उम्मेदारी पहिले की तरह न की जायेगी। वस, इतना कह कर मैं समाप्त करता हूँ।

Shri Gopikrishna Vijayavargiya (Madhya Bharat): Mr. Speaker, Sir, I will not be taking much time of the House. I will make only one or two observations in regard to the Railways. This is indeed a matter of great felicitation that no increase in the rate of Railway fares has been made in the Budget presented to this House despite the fact that the wages of the Railway workers have been considerably increased. It is stated on behalf of a large number of parties and workers that they are still drawing low wages. But keeping in view the present-day conditions, whatever increase was possible, that has been made in the wages of the Railway workers, and it is a matter of great gratification that even then there has been no deficit in the Railway Budget. Although other honourable members have just now touched the various aspects of the working of the Railway viz., over-crowding, corruption and inefficiency, yet I would like to say only one or two things in this respect which are very important from the point of view of Madhya Bharat.

Uptil now the States were not represented in the Indian Legislature. The old regime did not devote much of its attention towards the States. The States were not usually granted any facilities in the form of construction of Railway lines. But now when the States' people have on their own accord joined hands with the Indian Government, it becomes all the more necessary that the Ministry of Railways should devote more attention towards the provision of facilities for the benefit of these people. I would tell you that in the newly formed Union of Madhya Bharat, the shortage of wagons is being acute.

ly felt in the commercial industrial and trading spheres and early steps should, therefore, be taken to remove the bottleneck of wagons which has thus been caused there. For this very reason the trade and industry there are running at a great loss and no development can be made in that direction on account of the paucity of wagons.

The second complaint is in regard to the unsuitability of the running timings of trains on both the B.B. and C.I. and G.I.P. Railways. There is no co-ordination between these two Railways on account of which the people have got to suffer. The people who have to go to Gwalior, Indore and Malwa only after the formation of the Madhya Bharat Union have to face a good deal of hardship for want of suitable train connections. Usually they have to wait for hours together either at Bhopal or Ujjain Stations. No regularity in the correctness of timings is observed there so that people could get trains in time. To remove this difficulty a special bogey should be run between Gwalior and Malwa. Not only that, but a special train named 'Malwa Special' should be run between Ratlam, Ujjain, Bhopal and Gwalior so that the public may be relieved of the hardship which they have to undergo under the existing conditions. This will not cost much to the Government. The running of a Special Malwa Train will render adequate facilities to the newly formed Malwa Union. Formerly it was not considered necessary as Gwalior and Indore constituted separate parts and there was not much traffic between these two places. But now-a-days traffic has increased on both the sides and it has become a dire necessity that a Special Malwa Train should be introduced between Gwalior, Bhopal, Ujjain and Ratlam. This would prove very useful to the people living in these places; and it has become a paramount necessity. If no special train is run, some special bogies should at least be attached with the trains running between Malwa and Gwalior. This is quite a minor thing which the Railway Department can do for the convenience of the public there. Similarly some attention should also be paid towards the construction of Railway lines in the States' territories. Uptil now the States have been neglected in this respect. While developing the Railway system in the country some consideration should also be shown towards the people living in the States. In drawing out the programme of the Construction of New Railway Lines in the country, the introduction of a new Railway line between Gwalior-Ujjain-Indore and Bhusaval should also be kept in view. Madhya Bharat should also be included in the programme of the Construction of New Railway Lines.

The overcrowding, corruption and inefficiency prevalent on the Railways are existing even to-day, and steps should, therefore, be taken to root out these evils. I hope that some attention would be paid towards these aspects during the course of the discussion on the Budget. To conclude, I would again submit that in the policy followed hithertofore the States had all along been overlooked. I hope that every endeavour shall now be made to provide adequate facilities to the States' people and no indifference is shown as before.

With these words, I resume my seat.

Begum Aizaz Rasul (U.P.: Muslim): I have much pleasure in associating myself with the congratulations that have been extended by the honourable members of this House to the Honourable Minister for Railways on his very lucid and balanced speech on the railway budget. He deserves more congratulations because he has been in charge of this portfolio for only four months and to have overcome all the difficulties of a new subject such as the railways, goes to his credit.

[Begum Aizaz Rasul]

As the time is very short, I shall confine myself to a very few remarks. I am glad that the consequences of the partition on the railways have, to a great extent been overcome and we hope that in the next year, the deficiencies that still remain will also be done away with. Financially also, the railway budget is sound and that is a very pleasing feature. It is also very gratifying to the public to hear that there is not going to be any increase in the railway fares this year. Of course, we have to remember that there was a substantial increase in the railway fares in the last year's budget.

The re-shuffling of the classes, thought it has mitigated to a great extent to difficulties that the passengers were experiencing, will certainly not help very much until more coaches and more engines are available. The overcrowding in the trains remains the same as before. As several honourable members have drawn the attention of the Honourable Minister to this fact, I need not dilate upon it. But, certainly, there is a great deal of need for more coaches, especially for the second and third class passengers.

I should like to deal with the question of compartments for women. I am not going to ask for any more accommodation or for any more separate accommodation for women than is at present provided, because I believe that when minorities are giving up their rights in other directions women should not claim any more separate accommodation. But what I wish to stress is the question of the safety and security of women passengers. Unfortunately, conditions have been prevailing in our country for the last year or so which have created more difficulties for women passengers as compared to men passengers. Even for this reason I do not want any more separate accommodation for women, because I believe there is more safety and security for women travelling in general compartments than there is in separate women's compartments. At the same time the fact remains that women travelling in women's third class compartments should have more facilities provided for them by the railway authorities: for instance, the providing of eatables and other such things for women passengers. Their men folk cannot go inside the compartment and that creates difficulties and confusion when food intended for a person's wife or sister is handed over to some other woman, and it gives rise to many squabbles and quarrels in the compartment. I hope that Government will give its attention to this very great need of the public and permit hawkers to go into the women's compartment or allow those men folk to go into the women's compartment who have their women there.

Certainly, Sir, I demand more waiting-room accommodation at stations for women. From personal experience, I find that there is very inadequate waiting room accommodation provided for women in the upper and lower classes at stations and that should be seen into as soon as possible.

There is one important fact which I wish to bring to the notice of the Honourable Minister. I know that he will deal with it sympathetically. He has not mentioned in his speech anything regarding the resumption of the Frontier Mail between Delhi and Lahore. I may draw the attention of the Honourable Minister to the views expressed in the columns of the Statesman. I entirely agree with those views and I would like the Honourable Minister to consider that this is a very important matter to which he should give his very serious attention. I do not think that this question should be shelved on account of the reason that commercially it may not be sound. It is not possible to say whether it will be so or not neither do I think is the Honourable the railway Minister in a position to say that commercially this resumption of the linking up of the train line from Amritsar to Lahore will be sound or not until it has been worked and the results seen. I really think that commercially even this proposition will be quite sound because the demand by the public for such a resumption of the railway link between the two Dominions is very great and I think that this matter should certainly receive the serious attention of the Government. Even if it is conceded that for some time to come this may not be commercially very sound and Government may have to undergo some financial loss on this account, still I think that the psychological consequences of this will be so great that a little financial loss on the part of the Government should not stand in the way of this resumption. It will go a long way towards improving Inter-Dominion relations, and I know that I can count upon the sympathetic consideration and support of the Honourable the Railway Minister who has done so much to create better relationships between the two Dominions. His work in connection with the Inter-Dominion Conferences is well known to everyone, and every credit goes to him for his efforts to create better relationships between the two Dominions, and the tact with which he deals with these questions. I feel that he will be doing a great service if he takes up this matter of the linking up of the railway line between Amritsar and Lahore, a distance of 35 miles. It will be a great boon to the public who want to travel between Lahore and Amritsar but who do not find it possible to do so now.

I should like to bring to the notice of the Honourable Minister one more fact, and that is about the railway grain shops. Every one is aware that the railway authorities give foodgrains to their employees. This in itself is a very laudable and praiseworthy arrangement and should be pursued always. But, Sir, there is unfortunately a tendency on the part of railway workers, when they draw their rations, to go and sell them in the black-market. This is very sad but we cannot close our eyes to the fact that this is giving rise to more inflation. In the first fortnight of the month, the worker goes and sells his rations in the black-market and then when he himself is in need of rations for his home, he goes and buys at a higher rate again in the open market or the black-market. This is giving rise to a great deal of not only inflation, but also of corruption, and therefore I hope that the railway authorities will try and do something in this direction.

So much has been said about the necessity of better transport as regards the movement of foodgrains that I need not dilate upon it. But I do wish the Honourable Minister will keep this fact in mind and try to do whatever he can to remove this bottleneck.

Regarding cleanliness in trains, I should like to bring to the notice of the Honourable Minister that the first-class compartments are very dirty. The third class and the second class are dirty too; but when people pay high fares and wish to travel in the first class it is generally not from the point of view of appearing superior but from the point of view of getting more comfort, but that is hardly the case. The fact that inspectors and the staff do not look to the cleanliness of these compartments, especially the bath-rooms, should be brought to the notice of the railway authorities. I think I am doing my duty in pointing out this need of the public.

Sreematty Annie Mascarene (Travancore State): Considering the short period of democracy that we have had, and considering the surplus budget, that the Honourable Minister has presented before this House, I must say that he deserves to be congratulated. But considering the expectations of the people during these fourteen months, the expectation of the man in the street, looking forward to the administration of the popular leaders in the Department of Railways, I must say that the expectation has fallen far short of its realization. Democracy as far the Railway Department is concerned is only skin-deep and I say this from the classification that has taken place recently. The majority of the people who contribute to the income of the railways—the man in the street, the common man, who forms the major population of India and who is the lifeblood of the Railway Department, its income, revenues and its surplus,—has had no benefit from the recent classification nor from the fourteen months of democratic administration of that department. The man who travels in it, the labourer who works in it, both are none the better nor wiser. So the Honourable Minister is fearful about the results of the agreement between the labourer and his contractor. Still I must say that as long as he is not given living wages and as long as the passenger or the labourer has not got the comforts and the facilities, the ordinary standards of facilities and comforts, then this Department's democracy is only skin-deep.

The Honourable Minister has further said in his speech that he and his Minister of State have turned the corner and are now planted firmly on the terra firma of the railway line towards progress, towards rationalisation and expansion. But the common man faces him and tells him "Sir, we are just in the beginning of that long long trail, a winding into the land of facilities and conveniences." That is the position after fourteen months of democratic railway administration. If the Railway Department cannot afford facilities and conveniences or rather if it cannot be a public utility concern, every attempt should be made hereafter to make it so.

I am a traveller of long distances; I am not a representative of the first class or the second class passenger. I am a representative of the third class passengers and as such I have seen the miserable condition of the female compartment.

[At this stage Mr. Deputy Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shrimati G. Durgabai (one of the panel of Chairman)].

Madam, mankind has great consideration for women and children all over the world except in the Indian railways and the conveniences which women with babes at their breasts have or rather the miseries they suffer from overcrowding etc., are not in conformity with or consistent with the chivalry of the Honourable Minister. I must say that it is not only not chivalry, nor want of sympathy but gross negligence. I am sorry I have to say this because I am myself a sufferer and during my last sojourn in the train from Trivandrum to Delhi I have noticed the sufferings of the women in the female compartments. The so called inter class compartment, which affords only one compartment in the whole carriage for the female population of India, had not got a separate arrangement for lavatory purposes where men and women shared the same closet. (Interruption) It is my experience. At least during this administration we the women of India expect, expect from Honourable Ministers like you, better treatment from our own country men.

The third class women's compartment all over India is the same. In the whole train consisting of miles of carriages there should be at least three or four compartments for women. Children who travel with women want as much protection as you yourself give to your own children and that much should be given to those that are helpless and have to travel in the third class compartment.

Considering the amount set apart for betterment, considering the income that is seen from the statistics, considering the revenue that is shown in the statistics, I must say, Madam, it is a miserable amount that is set apart for betterment—1.68 crores. Perhaps the Honourable Minister calculated on the betterment of the inter, second and first class compartments but the poor man, the common man has no share in it. I hope now that the people's government is administering the department, the Central Government will take adequate and deserving care to provide the women and children with better comforts not only in the second and first class compartments but also in the third class compartment.

Bharata is covered with a net work of railways, a net work which is as fine as the texture of silk when looked at in a map. When you travel towards the South you will find that the net work is widening and getting coarser and coarser till it evaporates in Travancore. The southern management of the railway shows a step-motherly policy from the northern Central Government. Travancore between the Sentinel Ghats and giarding seas remote from rattle and roar has got only 98 miles of railways. Travancore with adult franchise and with adult education, with 70 per cent. literacy and free and primary compulsory education, has got only 98 miles of railways. Travancore which is the most important maritime country in India, Travancore with its commercial products which yield dollar and sterling credit to the Central Government, has got only 98 miles of railways. Travancore, the most advanced state in administration, where democracy is working in all its fullness, has got only 98 miles of railways. This Travancore has entered into an agreement with the Central Government in 1926 when it was agreed that the Central Government will help the construction of more railways in Travancore. Today a memorandum has already been submitted to the Central Government (because railways and communications form part of the acceding subjects) that a railway from Quillon to Ernakulam should be constructed or had to be constructed or helped to be constructed, so that the dream of Travancore, the provincial dream of Travancore, Travancore which is dreaming of forming a province, a model or ideal province in India, can be easily realised.

The commercial products of the country that have to be carried to the Cochin harbour should be given all the facilities of easy carriage which will be a source of income to the Centre. I wish I had more time to speak on this Travancore project if the Chair will allow it.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member will have one minute more.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri: Is there a separate time-limit for lady members?

Sreematty Annie Mascarene: As only a minute is allowed I feel I will bring this question of constructing more railways down in Travancore in a cut motion and express my opinion then.

Shri Satish Chandra (U.P.: General): With the allotment of an extra day for the general discussion of the Railway Budget I hoped that we sitting on the farthest benches behind will have an opportunity to speak and express our views to-day and that the big guns will roar on Monday. But Madam, from the list of honourable members who have spoken to-day you will find that most of us were not able to catch the eye of Honourable the Speaker or the Deputy Speaker, and as I am lucky enough to catch your eye now, I am grateful to you.

The Honourable the Railway Minister has said that railways are progressively settling down to new and altered conditions. All of us who have some opportunity of travelling do notice some change and we find that conditions are improving and taking a turn for the better. Still the situation as it is, is not such that Honourable the Railway Minister may adopt a complacent attitude in the matter. We have to be alert and see that even if no further amenities can be provided in the next year, travelling conditions will at least be restored to the normal as they were before the war.

[Shri Satish Chandra]

The Budget is a surplus one. According to most of the surplus budgets there is one traditional feature in it, which is a feature of almost all surplus budgets, namely, that the revenue side, has been under-estimated and the expenditure side has been over-estimated. To support this statement I will quote a few lines from the speech of the Honourable Minister himself. The Honourable Minister has cleverly put in his speech that "a slight drop in passenger earnings has been assumed as a result of the introduction of the new three class accommodation in trains, though the recent trends of the results of this change do not altogether justify this apprehension and there might possibly be some increase under this head". In another paragraph he says that "the new freight rates which were enforced in 1948-49 for half the year would operate during the whole of the year 1949-50 and bring in an appreciable addition to goods earnings". Again, while referring to other coaching traffic, he says that "the revision of parcel rates introduced on 1st October 1948 will also bring in some addition." We find from the Budget Estimates that more than Rs. 6 crores will be the increase in freight income alone, and if the other two heads are also likely to increase, how there has been only an increase of Rs. 5 crores in the total revenues when all the three items are added? How these figures have been calculated passes my comprehension.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I can assure the honourable member that there is no attempt to camouflage anything in those figures.

Shri Satish Chandra: I do not mean it and I never said anything in that light. These are the figures quoted by the Honourable Minister himself in the course of his speech. I only feel as I have said, that it is a traditional feature of surplus budgets to under-estimate the revenues and over-estimate the expenditure. It is not only the case with this budget but has become the usual practice so that there might be justification for exercising more discretion in utilising the money that may be saved afterwards.

The net surplus revenue is estimated to be Rs. 9.4 crores against 9.84 crores of the last year, though the revised net revenue surplus is Rs. 15.83 crores. We are told that out of this Rs. 7.34 crores will go to general revenues and almost an equal amount to the Depreciation Reserve Fund and only 0.84 crores to the Railway Betterment Fund. According to a formula suggested by the Committee of the House which decided about the allocations of this money in the last budget session, about Rs. 6.8 crores should go to the Betterment Fund. I can quite understand the revision of those allocation in the light of the huge amount earned but I would submit that the sum that has been placed in the Betterment Fund is too small, and shows that Government are not prepared to spend sufficient part of those extra earnings over the amenities of passengers for which the Betterment Fund was specially created. The Betterment Fund has been progressively going down during the last few years, and if I may say so, some portion of it has been misappropriated in the past. It has been put to uses for which it was not meant at all, and instead of putting more money into that Fund and bringing it to the old level a very small amount is now being placed in that Fund. Rs. 0.84 crores is being added to it. Rs. 1.5 crores will be taken out of it this year for the amenities of passengers. I submit that the proposed amount, considering the inadequate amenities that the third-class passengers at present enjoy, and about which there has been too much critical expression today, is quite insufficient to provide the amenities and the standard asked for.

The Honourable Minister in his speech has stated that it will be for this House to consider whether the Railway finance should be kept separate or should be a part of the General finance as it used to be before. I believe that the present system has worked quite satisfactorily. Till the recommendations contained in the report of the Railway Enquiry Committee are considered, though many people may doubt the wisdom of creating an autonomous statutory railway authority as the Committee has recommended, I feel that the present system offers a good via media between an autonomous body on one hand and the amalgamation of the Railway finance in the General Budget on the other. The autonomous corporation is not likely to come into being in the near future, nor is it possible to disturb all the arrangements at this stage. With the coming into power of a popular Government deriving its authority from a sovereign Parliament, I think the reasons which prompted people to demand the creation of an autonomous authority have completely disappeared.

The Honourable the Railway Minister has said that there will be no enhancement of railway fares or freights in the coming year. I would respectfully submit that there has already been an increase in the railway fares by the recent arrangements. The first class passenger will now travel in air-conditioned coaches; the second-class passenger will go to the new first class, and in this manner the passenger fares have actually increased. They have not gone down or remained stationary. If, as the Honourable Minister has stated, the first-class passenger will pay less in the new Class I, and will get a benefit out of it, and similarly, the second class passenger by travelling in the new Class II will save his money; is it not a fact that only the poor third-class passenger will not be benefited in any way whatsoever? Though the rates for others might have been reduced, there has been no relief for the third-class passenger.

Before I conclude, I would like to quote a few sentences from an article which the Honourable the Minister of State for Railways, Mr. K. Santhanam, wrote sometime back in the Hindustan Times:

".....The third class passenger has not only to pay the cost of his travel, but he has to subsidise the cost of the passengers in the higher classes....."

He went on to say:

".....As it is a sacred principle of the Indian Railway Administrations that they should run on a commercial basis, it is the poor third class passenger that has to generously come to the relief of his richer countrymen."

I believe that these observations which the Honourable Minister made prior to the assumption of his present high office, he has not forgotten even today, when he travels in saloon cars and not in ordinary coaches.

Mr. Chairman: Shri T. Prakasam.

Honourable Members: There are only five minutes left for the House to adjourn.

Mr. Chairman: If the honourable member cannot finish his speech today he can continue it next Monday.

Shri T. Prakasam (Madras: General): I must be excused, Madam, because I am leaving tomorrow morning for Madras. I shall not be here on Monday.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member can speak at any rate for five minutes; but if the House is prepared to sit for five minutes beyond five, he can continue.

Honourable Members: Yes.

Shri T. Prakasam: This is a Budget presented by the Honourable the Railway Minister, Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar. He has been a very able administrator the whole of his life, in the service of the country. He has made the position sufficiently clear for us also to understand it, by stating facts and without mincing them so far as omissions are concerned.

[Shri T. Prakasam]

Having admitted that the third class passengers had not been served well, he failed to provide in his Budget for reduction of the rates which the third-class passengers are obliged to pay. Twelve crores of rupees are said to be outstanding which could be utilised for reducing the rate which the third-class passengers are paying. Within the few minutes allotted to me, I now raise the question that the rates which the third class passengers are paying now must be reduced in this Budget, before the Session is over, because there are enough funds available. Madam, that is the omission I referred to at the beginning. Third-class passengers, it is admitted, are the real paymasters of this greatest industry of ours, yet we collect money from them and we do not give them enough space even to sit in the trains that are running today. I have been seeing, whenever I turn my eyes towards the trains that are running or that are coming on the platform, not a single inch of space available anywhere. Even loads of goods would not be packed so closely. It is a pitiable case and the Railway Minister must note it and must take immediate steps to see that this congestion is relieved immediately. Dr. Subramanyam was mentioning some way out of it. If you wait for the opinion of experts and for the meetings of committees for getting something done in a scientific manner, as is being proposed here, it will take a very long time. And, if you wait until all the nine units are co-ordinated and are brought together on one map, many of us, even the younger generation, perhaps would not be able to see any change. The whole policy of the Railway administration must change.

There is no co-ordination. The Administration goes one way. The actual work goes another way, as is clear from the statement of the Honourable Minister himself. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary that the Administration must be completely overhauled in such a manner that real relief would be given to those unfortunate fellows who pay for all of us in this country. The amount paid by these people is as much as the revenue that is derived by the Union Government even today. What is the good of their paying? What is the good of our complimenting the Budget speech? The money is there. It is in your power to serve this man immediately. Reduce the rate so far as the third-class passenger is concerned. That would be one item of business on the spot. Again, with regard to the relief of tension and overcrowding, a description of which has been given by more than one honourable member here, it is an unthinkable, unimaginable position. Nowhere in the world under any Government do people have to travel like that day after day and night after night. Sometimes, I can never believe that they were feeling that they are human beings at all. The way in which they come to clash when they try to rush into these overcrowded compartments and the way in which they stuff themselves, it is a most miserable business. Of course, my honourable friend would excuse me if I say that immediate attention is required apart from technicalities, apart from the work of engineers and apart from the work of the technicians and all those people. Immediate things can be done with a little effort and with a little attention and a little visit to those places. Much has been said by my honourable friend Mr. Santhanam. He is one who knows everything. He is just new in his office. So also is the Railway Minister. In spite of all his experience in all other Departments, he is naturally bound to take a little time to jump into the whole thing and clear the matter. He has indicated the lines on which he would like to proceed in order to clear the whole thing. He has shown that he has a heart which beats and feels for the unfortunate sufferers in this country.

With these remarks, I conclude, Madam.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 21st February, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Monday, 21st February, 1949.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-45 A.M.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT

FAST BY PROF. SHIBBAN LAL SAKSENA

Mr. Speaker: I have received notice of an adjournment motion by an honourable member of this House in connection with the fast of Professor Shibban Lal Saksena who is a member of this House.

I am sorry, I cannot admit this motion as it has nothing to do with the responsibility of the Central Government; it is a purely Provincial matter.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): May I have my say, Sir?

Mr. Speaker: No say; it is disallowed.

DEATH OF SHRI KIRAN SHANKAR ROY

Mr. Speaker: I have to invite the attention of the House to the very sad and untimely demise of Shri Kiran Shankar Roy who was a member of the Bengal Cabinet and a member of this House. He was a prominent member in the Congress and rendered very valuable service to the country. We deeply mourn his loss at such a time as this.

The House might respect the memory of the deceased by standing in silence.

PAPERS LAID ON THE TABLE

INTERIM REPORTS OF MERCHANT NAVY TRAINING COMMITTEE

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister for Commerce): I lay on the table a copy of each of the five interim reports* of the Merchant Navy Training Committee.

PUBLIC COMPANIES (LIMITATION OF DIVIDENDS) BILL

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister for Finance): I present the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to limit the dividends which may be paid by public companies.

THE RAILWAY BUDGET—GENERAL DISCUSSION—Conclud.
FIRST STAGE—conclud.

Mr. Speaker: The House will now proceed with the General Discussion of the Railway Budget.

Shri A. V. Thakkar (Saurashtra): I wish to bring to the notice of this House the very great necessity of the railway under construction which is called the C.I.C., that is to say, the Central India Coalfields railways which connects the Katni-Bilaspur line with the East Indian line on the loop line passing via Daltonganj. This Railway is a very important Railway for two reasons: one is that it develops the coalfields of Central India, and the other reason is that it taps a very untapped part of the country—almost unknown part—I mean the two big areas called Surguja and Jashpur. I have recently travelled in that area for the purpose of examining the work of tribal welfare. I found that it was a part which has not been tapped at all for so many years in the past and it was almost terra incognita and people could not travel there both on account of the want of roads as well as railways.

Now the construction of a part of this Railway has already been started at the east end of that line. The amount of one crore of rupees which has been earmarked for that purpose is very inadequate in my opinion, and I feel that if the Honourable the Railway Minister can see his way to increase it, it will be a very good thing for the development of that part of the country.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar)].

That part of the country is inhabited by a very, very backward class of people. Again, there is a very large quantity of coal available in that area. Other minerals besides coal can also be tapped very easily, and I hope that necessary surveys have been made for that.

Another matter which I would request the House to attend to is amenities for third-class travel. One particular matter with regard to that is that almost all the railway compartments contain seats fixed longitudinally and not cross-wise. I mean to say that if the seats are arranged cross-wise instead of longitudinally, there will be a much better seating arrangement and there would be less overcrowding than at present. The two instances of Railways using such a sort of compartments are the G.I.P. and the B.B. and C.I. Railways. In all the trains which run between the Cities of Poona and Bombay, many of the compartments have got seats cross-wise which easily accommodate the crowds; the benches cannot be occupied by more than a fixed number of persons, or less, than the bench can accommodate. There is a central corridor passage all along the train, and thus overcrowding in certain compartments is reduced to a great extent and the number of vacant seats will be minimised altogether and nobody can occupy more seats than he is entitled to. The second train which uses such a kind of carriages is the B.B. and C.I. train running from Delhi to Bombay, called the Delhi Express or Bombay Express. That line also has got compartments arranged cross-wise and therefore it gives the number of seats that is required for the number of persons. It some times so happens that some bullies travelling in the compartment occupy the whole of the bench meant to accommodate five persons, thus adding to the overcrowding. Therefore, if the Railway management sees that it will be profitable to have seats cross-wise in the third-class compartments, it would add very greatly to the seating accommodation. If the seats are so arranged that one person cannot take more than one seat, then it will be to the comfort of the travelling public—at least the gentle class of travelling public who will not bully others or who will not elbow out others and who will not fight at the moment.

The question of third-class accommodation is a very old business and the criticism levelled against it is the same every year but all the same we should supply them more amenities in as much as they supply the real finance of the Railway passenger traffic. I hope that the question of third-class travel will be better attended to in the coming year.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U.P.: General): The honourable the Minister for Transport has presented us with a lucid and comprehensive survey of the working of the Railways during the year 1948-49. He has been anxious to examine the facts objectively. Every page of his speech bears witness to his desire to arrive at an impartial estimate of the efficiency of the railway administration. We all appreciate the pains that he has taken to arrive at an unbiased judgment on this matter and I think the House will agree that the views expressed by him in his speech show no kind of prejudice, in favour or against, any particular thesis.

My honourable friend has referred to two very important questions in the course of his speech, the financial position of the Railways, and their operating efficiency. I should like to deal with certain aspects of them that have been ignored by him. But before I do so I must refer to two other matters that cannot be passed over in silence in this debate.

The first point relates to the non-publication of the report of the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee. The honourable the Transport Minister told us that the report was sent to the Press soon after it was received and that it would be distributed to honourable members as soon as printed copies were received from the Press. This is a very inadequate explanation of the failure of the Government to make the report available to honourable members at least a week before the Railway Budget debate. Had any keenness been shown in the matter either by the Transport Ministry or by the Railway Board, I am certain that the report would have been long ago in the hands of honourable members. The negligence of the Government in this respect has greatly delayed a proper consideration of the Committee's main recommendations. They will be discussed by the legislature a year hence and it is obvious that this delay will in no small measure prejudice its consideration.

Sir, the honourable the Transport Minister has told us that a senior officer has been placed on special duty to obtain the orders of the Government on the Committee's recommendations. The officer is an able officer, but he is unaware of the background of the Committee's recommendations. He has not been given the assistance of anybody familiar with the evidence received by the Committee or the information collected by it, nor so far as I know could he have had the time to go through the records himself. It is obvious that this will prevent as full and impartial an examination of the Committee's recommendations as may have been expected, had the officer concerned received the assistance that he was entitled to.

My second point refers to the delay in the publication of the Annual Railway Report. Last year about this time only the Second Volume of the Report was available. This year only the first report is available. Some explanation ought to be forthcoming of this delay. It is very unsatisfactory that the Railway Board and the Railway Ministry should not make the Report available to the members before the Budget debate takes place. I hope that every care will be taken in the future that the Report comes out well before the Budget debate takes place.

[Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru]

I should now like to refer briefly to the operating efficiency of the Railways. Operation covers two questions—transportation and power. My honourable friend the Railway Minister has dealt only with the first question. It was a pleasure to the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee to find that an improvement had taken place in the utilisation of wagons and the punctuality of trains after July 1948, and it is a matter of great satisfaction to me to learn that this progress has continued. The running of block trains and the increase in the speed of goods trains is reflected in the improvement in the turn-round of wagons, the period for which has declined from about 15 days in June 1948 to about 12½ in December 1948. The Railway Board and the Railway Ministry are entitled to the credit due to them for the improvement they have brought about. I hope that they will make every effort to bring about further improvement. I do not want to criticise the Railway Board who have, it seems from the results, brought about an improvement, but so far as the wagon turn-round is concerned I think I should point out that when the Wedgewood Committee considered this matter, the then turn-round of B. G. Wagons was between 10 and 11 days and the Committee referring to the example of South Africa thought that this could be reduced to about 5 or 6 days. We have therefore a great deal of progress to make before we arrive at the target recommended by the Wedgewood Committee.

Again, I find that in one place in his speech the Railway Minister has compared the coal loadings in 1947 and 1948. I am very doubtful whether such a comparison can yield any useful results. The year 1947 was an abnormal year and the report of the Railway Board for 1948-49 shows that the total traffic carried in 1947-48 was about 8½ per cent. less than that carried in the previous year.

Now, I come to the very important question of the availability of power. The Railway Minister has referred only to, what I might call, the "physical causes" of the shortage of power. He has spoken to us of the age of the engines and the difficulty of securing spare parts and adequate steel supplies. I for one feel that the heavy reduction in the availability of engines is a more serious matter than the physical causes that he has referred to. I shall place two facts before the House to enable it to know how serious the deterioration in this respect is. The Railway Enquiry Committee have said in their report that the average number of days engines were in workshops increased by 37 per cent. on the Broad Gauge and by about 132 per cent. on the Metre Gauge. The Committee took full account of all the difficulties referred to by the Railway Minister. But it, nevertheless, came to the conclusion that better results could have been obtained had more supervision and better management been observed in the workshops.

Well, better supervision is difficult I admit at the present time with a depleted supervisory staff. But it was the Committee's considered view that, with proper organisation, direction and management, better results could be obtained. A great deal depends on the selection of the superior officers, particularly the chief mechanical engineers on whose keenness, efficiency and driving power, the working of the workshops and the running-sheds depends in no small measure.

There is another matter to which I should draw the attention of the House and that is the fall in the number of engine miles per engine failure. The Railway Enquiry Committee has pointed out that there has been a fall of about 66 per cent. in the number of engine-miles per engine failure in 1947-48 as compared with 1938-39. This shows that the maintenance of engines in the running sheds is very unsatisfactory and requires the serious consideration of Government.

Another factor that I may usefully mention is the deterioration in respect of engine utilization. The engine-miles per engine on the line on the broad-gauge decreased from 79 in 1938-39, just before the war, and 75 in 1946-47 to 72 in 1947-48. On the E. I. Railway, Sir, the figures has declined from 77 in 1938-39 to 56 in 1947-48. This is startling and is due to the inefficiency of maintenance work. Unless our mechanical workshops and the running sheds are made to work with greater efficiency, I am afraid that the renewal of the over-age locomotive stock and the availability of steel supplies and spare parts will not produce the full result that the Transport Minister seems to expect from them.

I should in this connection like to refer to one other important matter and that is the efficiency of the superior and subordinate staff and labour. The Railway Enquiry Committee, after making as careful an enquiry as it could, came to the conclusion that there was a reduction in the efficiency, not merely of the subordinate staff and labour, but of the higher staff as well. Judged by any reasonable test efficiency has fallen all round. There is undoubtedly an impression among the railway staff and labour that they are not being fairly treated by Government. I have no doubt that my honourable friend the Railway Minister is doing his best to create a feeling of contentment among them. There are many causes that lead to dissatisfaction at present. It is not possible for me to refer to all of them. But, generally speaking, I think that greater attention should be paid to the measures calculated to improve the efficiency of the staff such as better training, provision of better avenues of advancement and above all the creation of an esprit de corps and the spirit of national service among all ranks of Government servants.

Sir, I am about to close. While labour ought to receive the reward that is its due, and while the railway staff have a right to expect a living wage from Government, they must realise the moral obligation that rests on them to do what lies in their power to improve the working of our largest national concern.

I have painfully observed during my tour with the Railway Enquiry Committee that there was little keenness among the subordinate staff and labour to do their work efficiently. In regard to this matter, the superior staff too is to blame, because I am sure that with better management and better driving power on the part of the superior staff, better results can be obtained even now. But the railway staff and labour must themselves realise the duty that they owe to the country. Unless they are prepared to work for the railways in a spirit of national service, the task of the Transport Minister and of the Railway Board will continue to be difficult. We shall watch, Sir, during the next year with great interest the efforts of our leaders and of the railway authorities to infuse such a spirit into the railway staff and labour.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): The honourable Minister's speech was, I must say, very outspoken and he did not mince matters when he referred to the many subjects relating to the railway working. I could not go into the details, at the short time at my disposal, of the various figures of the working of the railways, but I will confine myself to three subjects for the consideration of this House, namely, the grievances of the public, the shortage of wagons and corruption. I shall hurriedly deal with these subjects and try to bring to the notice of the honourable Minister how far these three subjects have caused great discontent both amongst the travelling public and the trading public.

[Shri R. K. Sidhva]

The honourable Minister stated that there has been noticeable improvement in the arrival of trains. I am prepared to accept that compared with last year there has been an improvement in the punctuality of trains. He has stated in his speech that 60 per cent. of the trains arrived punctually. I will not call it 'a noticeable improvement' but I will call it a 'slight improvement'. The 60 per cent. Sir, which he has mentioned is also correct, but as to how this 60 per cent. is worked out and as to the alarming conditions of this punctuality, of the departure and the arrival of trains, I would like to enlighten the House. We will take for example our own home, namely, the Delhi Station. I will also not quote the previous times, but take the period from 1st February to 15th February. Now in the departure from the Delhi Station, Sir, except for four days, all the trains departed at a later time than the scheduled time. On four cases, the trains left at the scheduled time. The rest of the days, namely, eleven days, it was 90 per cent.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): All trains or some trains?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: All trains. You can very well understand what is the time of departure at which a train has to start punctually and to the scheduled time. There was no question of any intermediate stage where the delay might have been caused and as I stated in my speech last year, it is all due to the indifference and the negligence of the staff; they generally do not start at the right time from the terminus station. Sometimes when the driver is available, the conductor is not there and when the conductor is there, the driver is not available. These are factors to which I would like to draw the attention of the Honourable Minister and he has to give us an explanation as to why so many trains actually left the Delhi Station, the starting point so late. If you take the time of arriving of trains also at the Delhi Station during these fifteen days, you will find that in the E.P. Railway, none of the trains arrived at the right time and the minimum was 74 per cent. and maximum was 95 per cent. In the foreign Broad-gauge Railway the maximum was 73 per cent. one day at 67 per cent. one day 67 per cent. one day 47 per cent. four days 33 per cent. and the average comes to nearly 60 per cent. That the Honourable Minister's calculation is correct, I do not dispute, but I would only request him to bear this in mind as to how many trains come at a late hour. The Honourable Minister has stated that 251 coaches were received on the first of April from the Military authorities and 172 new coaches were introduced. Now, you can imagine that nearly 423 new additional coaches were introduced during the year. If you take the average capacity of one coach which varies from 100 to 110, then these new coaches would afford an additional capacity for 46,530 passengers.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister for Railways and Transport): Is it per day or for the year?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: It is per day. If you take an average of 100 as the carrying capacity for a coach and multiply that by 423 new coaches, it will come to 46,530 passengers carried per day. With all that, it is still a mystery to me, and I want to know why there is this overcrowding in spite of the increase in locomotives and increase of coaches. I am prepared to accept arguments such as shortage of locomotives and shortage of coaches, but that is not the only argument. The reason is inefficiency, indiscipline, irresponsibility, carelessness, negligence, lack of duty on the part of large number of officials, Sir. That is the main reason and unless the administration and the honourable Minister give this matter their serious attention, any number of locomotives you may introduce and any number of new coaches you may introduce, the condition is not going to improve.

Then I would like to draw the attention about the long distance passengers for which the Honourable Minister of State has taken a little interest in providing a special coach. I am very glad that he has made the arrangement, and I have noticed at the starting point the officials do take notice that only through passengers for the long distances are allowed in this coach. But my report is that at the intermediate stations, the ordinary passengers get into this compartment and there is no provision made to prevent this. I would like to draw his attention to this and to see that while these long distance coaches are introduced—it is welcomed by the public—it is really used by the long distance travelling public only. I also understand and I know that the special third-class which is called the 'Janata' train has been introduced from Delhi to Patna. It has become a very popular train and I would request him to see that such trains exclusively for third-class passengers are extended from Delhi to Amritsar, from Delhi to Ajmer, from Delhi to Jhansi. These are the three routes where there is a heavy traffic and I see no reason whatever with the additional coaches at their disposal and when they could manage to run one through train to Patna—this popular train, as I would call it—why should they not pay a little more attention to increase the number of such trains. It is no use waiting to watch what the result is going to be of this one track. The risk has to be taken and when it is noticed that the train is popular, 5 or 6 third-class through passenger express trains should be introduced immediately. You will then be able to popularise the third-class travelling. The Honourable Minister of State in reply to a question said that he was very anxious to introduce the touring coaches to attract foreigners. I have no objection, Sir, to that. I am also for introducing third-class touring coaches. But I do not want him to concentrate his attention to these matters until the third-class travelling has been made really satisfactory. When you are confronted with so many difficulties it is not proper to divert the attention of officials to other matters. Let me tell you if the officers are engaged on new matters, which they consider to be more important then the comfort of third-class travelling will be ignored. When I stated that this negligence is due over all these matters, I would only quote one paragraph which the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee, 1947, has stated in this connection. On page 511, paragraph 52, it says:

"In spite of the increasing number of locomotives and wagons, the tonnage of goods handled has declined. There has been a large increase in the number of passengers carried, but at the expense of serious overcrowding. The falling off in the railways' ability to move goods traffic at the war time level is to a large extent due to reduced efficiency and reduced output of work by staff, and partly to a lack of proper initiative, direction and guidance from the top."

This is the finding of a committee which was appointed by the Government. I do not want to go into the details of number of recommendations that they have made. This book was supplied to us very recently and I do not think anybody could do full justice to it in the very short space of time.

Sir, I crave your indulgence for a few minutes more, because I have to touch on some important matters. Coming to the question of wagons, as stated by the honourable the Minister in his speech, additional wagons have been put on the line: 2349 wagons up to the last March and 485 during this year. Despite that, the distribution of wagons has not at all improved. I have been receiving complaints from various commercial people saying that a great deal of favouritism goes on in the supply of wagons. Only three days ago, I have received a letter from Messrs. Muccadam Kalianji Bhanji and Co.; they have sent a copy of the letter written to the General Manager, B.B. and C.I. Railway. I should like to read the letter in extenso to enable the honourable Minister to find out how far this favouritism prevails in the matter of granting wagons. The letter runs as follows:

"The Goods Superintendent advertises inviting applications from the public for allocating wagons of different sections for different kinds of goods, but applications are not accepted from the persons or Muccadamis or their agents who were waiting for the whole day and night in long queue for submitting the applications being accepted without assigning any reasons whereas Messrs. Sakarchand G. Shah and one Manji Khatau doing business in his own name and also in the names of Bharatkumar Shivji and Kothari and Co. (carting agents) are greatly favoured, though such procedure is not announced for acceptance of applications in this manner."

"Our clients are able to prove that the Officers are accepting such applications from these persons and are one or the other influenced by these parties and some other parties. And our clients further submit that they have seen these Officers using the cars bearing Nos. BMX/1992 and BMX/8903 belonging to Mr. Manji Khatau for attending their private work. Our clients further suspect that even underhand dealings may be current. Our clients state that this favouritism needs special inquiries and investigations and our clients are prepared to afford all facilities. Our clients respectfully state that all the public should be equally treated without any favour and no priority should be given to any person or party."

I have given a concrete example to show as to how the public are prepared to co-operate with the Government in respect of this kind of favouritism and corruption, or whatever you may call it. Apart from this, I have got so many other instances which I am prepared to supply to the Honourable Minister if he wants.

I have to state one more important matter as regards the safety of the passengers. I have received a letter from Mr. P. C. Mukerjee from Calcutta. He has invented a kind of device whereby he says that.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That letter has been sent to all the members. The honourable member need not read that letter.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I made enquiries from the Railway Commissioner to find out whether the trial given to the device in Calcutta was successful. He told me, that the general manager's opinion is, that it is not satisfactory. But this gentleman is sure—I do not know if what he says is correct—that this device really prevents accidents and ancillary subjects relating to them. I should like the Honourable Minister to take an interest in this matter. That gentleman is prepared to come to Delhi and give a demonstration. I would suggest to the Honourable Minister that he should invite all the members to the Delhi station to see his demonstration and let us see for ourselves whether this device is really satisfactory or not.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I would only ask, if I may interrupt for a minute, whether honourable members would distribute themselves between the two trains which would come against each other in order to test the device.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I do not know. This gentleman calls himself a scientist, an expert; he has been supported by many newspaper editors.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister has received a copy of the letter. The honourable member's time is up.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I would, at the end, only submit one point about the Silver Arrow train to which some reference has been made.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member's time is up; he has taken more than fifteen minutes. Cannot he reserve these remarks to his cut motion?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: As I have stated, some locomotives have been introduced; but I asked a straight question how many of the 1476 locomotives which are under repairs since last year, have been repaired during the year so that we may have an idea of the question; but no reply as to the number of engines repaired is forthcoming. Similarly, I received a report that some so-called unserviceable wagons were lying at Halisharpur yard near Calcutta. The report of the Superintendent was that with a little increase, say 10 per cent., in the schedule rates, these wagons could be made serviceable. I am told that these wagons were sold at Rs. 250 each. I would request the Honourable Minister to look into this matter. I would suggest to the Honourable Minister that unless the inefficiency and irresponsibility which at present exists among the staff is removed, any number of locomotives and additional coaches which are proved by the figures, are not going to solve the problem of the travelling public.

Mr. Frank Anthony (C.P. and Berar: General): I feel that first of all I should welcome the Minister for Railways and his colleague the Minister for Transport to their new office. I am certain that the whole House unanimously wishes them the very best of luck in their difficult and responsible undertaking.

I know that I have always been regarded as a rather bitter critic of the railway administration; but my criticism has, in my opinion, always been based on sound reasons. I am the first person to be impatient of facile critics and would be magicians who think that by a mere wave of the wand or glib proposals the whole administration can be converted overnight into a perfect system giving equal satisfaction to the users and employees alike. Under the circumstances which face us today, I feel that the budget is, by and large, a good one.

Those who are inclined to be impatient about the railway administration should remember certain inescapable facts. They have got to remember the vastness of this administration with its inevitable complexities and attendant difficulties. We have got to remember the legacy of the war, a war which wore out and destroyed rolling stock which in 1939 was already outworn. We cannot forget the shock and dislocation of partition which practically denuded some of our railways of their running staff. I think I am right in saying that on the East Indian Railway, the running staff was depleted to the extent of almost fifty per cent. It is axiomatic that running staff cannot be replaced and cannot be trained overnight. I think the Railway administration, in the way that it has weathered these shocks deserves our commendation.

The decision to set up a locomotive building institution at Chittaranjan gives intense satisfaction to me and to those who have cried ourselves hoarse for many years for the recognition of this long overdue and vital need. My own feeling is, in spite of what Mr. Sidhva has just said, that the railways have done commendably well in the matter of the running and punctuality of trains. I think I can say that I do much more travelling perhaps than any member of this House; with my constituency, I have to travel throughout the length and breadth of the country. My own personal experience is based on travelling on many railways in this country. The trains are today running much more punctually than they have done for many years. I think that one of the main reasons for this increased punctuality is the dropping of the system of pooling of engines which I had asked for some time ago. I know the trains are still running late; but perhaps some of the reasons are unavoidable such as the need to use over-aged engines. On the other hand, I feel that there are one or two eliminable reasons for the continued late running of trains. For instance, I feel that unreasonable delays are often made because of the time taken in the un-loading and loading of freights and parcels.

I now come to what I consider to be certain major remediable items in the railway administration. The Railway Minister has told us that measures have been taken to eliminate ticketless travel. These measures have met with some degree of success. My own feeling is that measures have not been adequate or comprehensive enough. My own estimate is—and I am prepared to say that my estimate is as good as the Railway Minister's—that we are losing to-day on an average Rs. 5 crores a year from ticketless travel. I arrived at this estimate by remembering that we expect almost Rs. 85 crores as our passenger receipts. Rs. 70 crores of this amount will come from the third class passenger and I think this is an estimate which errs on the side of conservatism when I say that one out of fourteen third class passengers travels without a ticket. It is not enough, Sir, to have ad hoc measures applicable to certain provinces like the United Provinces. My own impression is that this problem is as acute in all the provinces in India. The other day I was travelling between Itarsi and Jabulpore, my home town. About 200 persons descended on this particular train like a swarm of locusts. They invaded all the compartments with equal impartiality. They travelled down several stops and got off very happy looking, apparently in the knowledge that they had travelled without a ticket. I feel that special measures can be introduced immediately for strengthening the ticket checking staff. You may consider the advisability of increasing your staff, but I think a great deal can be done by a better distribution of their present duties. I find that by and large there are very few travelling ticket inspectors. Then I have always regarded it as being pointless that at large junction stations you should have five or six ticket examiners lounging about. People who travel without tickets do not wait to alight at junction stations. If you have more travelling ticket inspectors I think the position can be remedied. My own impression is that on passenger and slow trains you do not find any travelling ticket inspectors and it is precisely on these trains that you get most of your ticketless travelling.

Then we have the notorious fact that ticket collectors do take consideration from people for allowing them to alight from or get on to trains. At certain junction stations today, ticket collectors in collusion with other staff are alleged to have pickings from this source which amount to more than the daily salaries of some of our Cabinet Ministers. Then I believe that some of this ticketless travel is forced on people, owing to the fact that they cannot get tickets from over-crowded ticket windows, at which the clerks dawdle about issuing tickets as if time had stopped to watch their lethargic movements.

These are some of the considerations which I put before the honourable Minister to help eliminate ticketless travel.

I now come to what I consider an important aspect of the budget which has tended to give it the false and misleading complexion of a surplus budget. On paper it is undoubtedly a surplus budget. But I would ask the Railway Minister, if this budget were more squarely based on a sense of morality and real democracy, could it be a surplus budget? I remind him of the fact that the expenditure programme contemplates Rs. 70 crores as expenditure. I remind him of the fact that of this huge amount, the miserable, niggardly paltry sum of Rs. 1-1/2 crores has been earmarked for passenger amenities. But that is not the whole story. Of the Rs. 85 crores of your estimated receipts from passenger traffic, Rs. 70 crores will come from third class travel, and of this Rs. 1-1/2 crores that you intend to earmark for passenger amenities, I do not believe that even Rs. 1 crore will go to the third class passenger. Most of this paltry, niggardly sum will be taken up in your cutting down, modifying and changing your first and second class compartments, because this decision to reorganise railway travel will tie you down to devoting all your time to first and second class compartments—enlarging them, cutting them down, rebuilding and modifying them. I regard this as a reckless, irresponsible and wanton decision. I do not blame my friend over there for they have nothing to do with it. I do not blame the railway administration. This decision was taken by the Central Advisory Council for Railways, of which I am a member. I say this in fairness to myself that I was the only dissentient member. I begged the railway to consider the psychological, physical and financial aspects of this step. I said you would lose financially and that it would create hardships for the middle and lower classes and resentment among your subordinate staff. But who listens to advice from persons who have not the halo of a particular political party. I blame the railway administration for accepting it. It should have been abundantly clear to a person of the meanest intelligence that this reckless step of unwarranted, unjustified reorganization would lead to what has happened. And what has happened? The only person who has benefited is the first class traveller. The second class person travels as one in sixteen in a compartment from Delhi to Bombay. The third class person still hangs out of doors and windows and gets killed with a monotonous regularity which is accepted by the public and administration alike in a spirit of resignation which is suggestive of primitive, oriental fatalism. What has happened to your subordinate staff? Men who were entitled to inter-class travel have been degraded to third-class travelling. Men who overnight and in comfort travelled to their work, today sit up all night in the second class compartment they arrive at their destination utterly worn out and exhausted, no good for their work.

I make an appeal to my friends. Have some courage and imagination. This thing has been a hopeless, miserable failure. Recognise your mistake and have the courage to recognise it. We have not the rolling stock to pursue hair-brained and high-falutin schemes. All our energies should have been concentrated on one thing, and that is the improvement of travel for third class passengers. What are you going to do with this reorganization scheme? You have to cut out servants compartments and rebuild coaches, for whom?

The next problem that I wish to touch upon is that which relates to the problem of railway labour. This problem is of paramount importance and overshadows the rest of the railway administration. All your budget calculations, the future of the railways and the future of this country to a large extent depends on whether the Railway Minister is able to approach this problem in a spirit of imagination and courage. I have pleaded earnestly in season and out of season to Members who held this portfolio for some imagination and courage. It is not that they have not been able but they have lacked imagination and courage. They have been led by their noses by their permanent officials. They have fed tamely out of their hands. I am not pointing a finger at my friends there. They are good fellows, able and as patriotic as anyone who has gone to jail for his political conditions. But I say to my friends, Mr. Gopalaswami Ayyangar and Mr. Santhanam, that while you must make the maximum use of their administrative ability, it is your business to humanise and democratise their psychology. If you allow them to bureaucratise and imperialise your outlook, then nothing can stop a clash between the railway administration on the one side and railway labour on the other.

My friend has spoken in his budget speech of an apparent conflict between officials on the one side and railway labour on the other. This is official escapism par excellence. There is no apparent conflict. Let us recognise facts. Let us be honest and having recognised this fact let us work from the presumption that there is a real conflict. I place the blame predominantly on the railway administration. I am not for one moment glossing over the fact that there is a section of railwaymen who have fallen under evil counsels and are committed to ideologies which are directed to creating chaos for chaos's sake. But I am talking from experience when I say that the bulk of railwaymen are bluff honest people. They do not want monetary relief. Why are you toying with this problem and giving Rs. 10 here and there? You do this because you single out some favourite union and make them the sole arbiters of the railwayman's destiny. I tell you, and I am speaking with authority, that railwaymen are not concerned with dolos here and there, of ten rupees here or twelve rupees there, which in the aggregate comes to a huge bill. They are concerned with more radical matters. They are concerned with their grievances which have galled their souls for many many years. I have told you over and over again that it is the railwaymen's other grievances that matter with them, and I have asked you to consider them. It will not cost you a rupee. But if you consult your friends over there, they will say it may involve some loss of alleged face but it will cost you nothing. You have not made, my friends there have not made, one iota of departure from the old highhanded undemocratic system of procedure which the British laid down. The mass of railway labour today will not tolerate the substitution of a white bureaucracy by a brown bureaucracy. They will not tolerate the perpetuation by their own people of British methods of arbitrariness and suppression. That is why I have asked, and I have asked it in season and out of season, that you should change your rules with regard to appeals. Is it asking too much? At present there is no security of service on the railways. This is the only department which has the despotic right to remove a man without any reason being assigned for such removal.

I have asked that you should do away with the system of selection which has become a ramp and scandal. The smug reply has been that the railway administration is run on a business basis and as such they could not do away with the system of selection which is accepted by all business houses. I tell you that today the basis on which selections to posts in the railways are made is a powerful source of favouritism, nepotism and corruption. Members of the Railway Board have even been accused of it. Officers of a particular caste want men of a particular caste to get this or that job. Why are you afraid? I have asked you to go back to the old system of seniority cum selection? Provided a man is suitable then promote him on the basis of seniority. But this present method is a canker and it is eating into the souls of the railwaymen.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member's time is up.

Mr. Frank Anthony: Sir, I will only take two more minutes.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): Let him continue, Sir: He knows his subject very well.

Mr. Frank Anthony: Sir, there were many things to which I would like to have referred but there are one or two practices to which I shall now advert. There is this corroding practice of making railwaymen officiate for two, three, four, five, ten or even fifteen years. It is fantastic, it is almost incredible. I know of cases where men have served for years in the senior cadre: they have gone through the junior cadre, and these men after having served many years in the senior cadre retire as drivers. It would be comparably to V. P. Menon who is Secretary of the States Ministry, who has risen from the ranks, after having worked as a Secretary is made to retire on the position and pension of a head clerk. Do you regard this as being fair to the railwaymen? This is the system which you have refused to interfere with and it has been the cause of creating an acute sense of frustration and bitterness. I also feel that you are not being fair to the older men. The older men today will not accept promotion. Promotion usually means Irish promotion. A senior subordinate getting about Rs. 600, Rs. 700 if he accepts promotion gets about Rs. 200 less in salary. The result is that you see the sight, referred to by my honourable friend Mr. Kunzru of a slackening administration. Beardless and bespectacled youths are getting accelerated promotion on the railways. Why is your railway administration slackening? It is because of these inexperienced young men, chokras, who have not the knowledge or capacity to keep your administration as strong as it ought to be.

Finally there is this cruel habit of taking away what the railwaymen already have. You have introduced these new scales for the running staff. My information is that several of the men are going to lose. Do not take away anything from your subordinate staff. If you do not want to give them anything extra I do not mind too much but I do plead with you not to take away anything from them which they already get.

Finally I conclude on this note. It is something which may be regarded as heterodox and will probably shock my friends over there. I feel that the time has come to take your courage in both your hands and really centralise the railway administration. I suggest for your consideration—I do not make it a dogmatic thesis—that you consider seriously the advisability of doing away with the system of General Managers of railways. This is an accident and a relic of history. As company-managed railways come under state management, the state took over the whole administration en bloc and continued the system, so that there is perpetuation of variety of scales, overlapping of authority and duplication of expenditure under an absolutely nerveless administration without any co-ordination. As a member of the Pay Commission I might tell you that we were shocked at the diversity of scales and the diversity of conditions obtaining in different railways—men getting different rates of pay for doing precisely the same types of work. We made recommendations with the specific object of introducing uniform scales all over. But what was done? The matter was left to the different General Managers who have perpetuated the same diversities: no two railway men doing the same type of work and under the same Government get the same scale of pay. I tell my friends that they have got a wonderful opportunity to display what I regard as a little courage and imagination. I have said it over and over again. Today you are working for an independent India. I believe that railway labour is today awaiting leadership from you. If you give them a fair deal we will not have all this talk of strikes and strike ballots. Give them a fair deal and I am absolutely confident that railway labour will rally to the Administration, because essentially they are as nationalistic as any other section of employees.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): I have been following the Railway Budget for the last sixteen years, first as a journalist and later as a member of this House and I have been following all the criticisms of this Assembly. I believe I am not exaggerating when I say that in no year has the criticism of the budget been so mild as this year. I say this even after hearing my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva and later the eloquent speech of my honourable friend Mr. Anthony. If the criticism has been mild I am under no illusions on that account. I know that many members of this House are deeply dissatisfied with many aspects of railway administration as it is, but the members have generally realised that the causes of this dissatisfaction are to a large extent beyond our control. They are aware that it is due to the fact that the previous government pursued a short-sighted policy and made the big railway system of India dependent on foreign industry for the purpose of locomotives, spare parts and for its machine tools. Then there followed the war and following it came the dislocation caused by Partition and communal conflicts.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U.P.: Muslim): Sir, on a point of order, can the Honourable Minister be allowed to reply at this stage?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: One Honourable Minister will intervene in the debate and another will round up the debate.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I think the mildness of the criticism is also due to the fact that we have taken all possible steps to overcome the existing difficulties.

Criticism naturally was concentrated on the position of the third class passenger. I agree with every criticism that has been made regarding the unsatisfactory position. It is true that there is shameful overcrowding. I shall just quote a few facts to show how it is inescapable. On the 31st March, 1939 there were 32.4 million passengers travelling every month on the Indian railways. On the 31st March 1948, 88 million passengers were travelling every month: that is 144 per cent. more passengers were travelling by the Indian railways on the 31st March, 1948 every month than on the 31st March, 1939. To carry these passengers there were on 31st March 1948, 10,630 carriages as against 11,639 carriages on 31st March 1939. If we have nearly 2½ times number of passengers and less number of carriages overcrowding is an inevitable mathematical result and nothing that anyone can say or do can change this fact unless of course we take the far more drastic alternative of controlling railway travel and rationing it. Sir, we have seen the evils of control in other aspects and I am sure the House will rather prefer the evils of overcrowding than that we should restrict the freedom of the ordinary peasant of India to go over the railways. The overcrowding itself can be relieved only when we have more coaches, when we have more locomotives and when, in certain instances, we have also increased the capacity of the track. We have taken steps to do everyone of these things. As you all know, we have ordered a large number of locomotives from abroad. In this connection I would like to utter a word of warning. For free India at the present stage there is a veritable conflict between the needs of the present and the needs of the future. The other day when there was the Food debate, many honourable members pointed out that by pouring out crores and crores of rupees abroad we are compromising the prospects of our future development, that for every ton of wheat or rice which we buy we lose valuable machinery with which we could build up our industry. The same is true in the case of locomotives, coaches and other material which we buy abroad. We must concentrate our resources for buying machinery with which we can build our locomotives and our coaches. Therefore, while we should try to relieve the immediate overcrowding I should like the House also to remember that in this process we should not squander away our foreign exchange resources too much and thereby handicap the future generations that will come after us. We have taken all possible measures to relieve overcrowding in the nearest possible future. We have not remained quite on that account.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): What are those measures?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: We have ordered locomotives. We are building coaches and we have also ordered coaches. We are doubling the track wherever there is congestion. All these measures put together will relieve overcrowding in the near future. Meanwhile we have taken steps to see that at least long distance passengers have a little more comfort than the general mass of third class passengers. Many honourable members have referred to the reservation which has been adopted at all the terminal stations for long distance passengers and the complaint has been made that though this works well at the terminal stations people crowd in at intermediate stations. It is true and I may promise the House that we shall take adequate measures to see that these passengers get uninterrupted passage to their destinations.

My honourable friend Mr. Anthony pointed out that only Rs. 1½ crores have been set apart for passenger amenities. That is quite true and I have no hesitation in accepting that it is not a big amount. But I do not think it is quite fair to compare the receipts from third class passengers with the amount provided for amenities, because out of the earnings from the third class passengers the bulk of it must go to the locomotives, coaches and all, and railway track also. Even third class passengers have the use of these.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: All passengers use them.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: All passengers use them and therefore the earnings cannot go merely for amenities but they have to go for the general working of railways. But so far as passenger amenities are concerned I am as anxious as any member that we should step up this expenditure. But we have got other difficulties which prevent us from going much further than we have done. There is the difficulty of getting material. For instance we want to put covers over platforms which is one of the great needs of third class passengers—they have to wait in sun and rain, in open hot or cold platforms. Covered platform is one of the urgent necessities. But we cannot get galvanized sheets, steel and other materials. Similarly we would like to electrify all the stations wherever electricity is available. Certainly we do not want our third class passengers to be groping in the dark. But it is difficult to get wire and other electrical materials. As soon as we can get them we shall try to step up the passenger amenities and see that as many amenities as possible are provided for them. I would like that within the next three years we should be able to exhaust all the amount that is available in the Betterment Fund. It is to enable the House to watch the progress of the amenities that we have separated the Betterment Fund from the rest of the budget so that every year you may be able to keep a close watch as to the progress made in this matter.

Shri H. V. Kamath (P. and Berar: General): Sir, is it not time for the House to rise?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Will the honourable Member take more than five minutes?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I think I will require another fifteen minutes.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Then he can continue his speech after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: The new classification came into operation on the 1st of January this year and it is too early to form a correct judgment regarding the results, but I differ altogether from the view expressed by Mr. Anthony that it was a mistake and that it should be rectified immediately. Sir, it is not an experiment which has been taken up in haste; it has been demanded for the last twelve years. In 1937, the Wedgwood Committee Reported:

"We have been impressed with the waste of accommodation involved in maintaining four classes of travel on Indian trains. We cannot help feeling that the whole question of upper class accommodation should be reviewed."

Since then, persistently, year after year, on the floor of this House member after member has demanded the abolition of at least one of the upper classes. To have two similar classes for the richer middle class passengers amounted not only to a waste of accommodation, it involved a concentration of attention on the convenience and comforts of the upper class passengers.

It has been asked, what has the third class passenger gained by this new re-classification? Immediately neither in accommodation nor in fares has the third-class passenger been affected, so it may be said that, directly, nothing has altered so far as he is concerned. But, Sir, as a result of this re-classification one of the castes which has been sitting over his head has disappeared, and I think it would be altogether reactionary to bring back that caste and re-introduce the four-caste system in the Indian Railways.

It has also been argued that the first-class passenger has benefited. Sir, if a gallup-poll is taken of the former first class and second class passengers, I am sure that one hundred per cent. of the first class passengers will ask for the restoration of the old first class, while I expect 25 to 30 per cent. of the old second class passengers will ask for the restoration of the old second class. The first class passenger paid a little more than the present Class I passenger, but often by paying a single fare he got the whole compartment. That was the advantage of the old first class—that it was a gamble; if you pay one fare or two fares you can probably get a whole four-berth compartment to go about from one end of the country to another. It is to stop that wastage of accommodation that we have amalgamated both the old first and second classes and introduced a middle class which is called Class I. The standard of accommodation in the new Class I is much inferior to that of the old first class and a little superior to the old second class. Therefore, to say that we have abolished the old second class and not the first class is a mistake. What has happened is that a new class between the two has been introduced for the convenience of those who have been accustomed to go in either the old first or the old second class. In other countries, ordinarily there is only a two class system and I do hope that before long India too will move towards that simple classification.

Seth Govind Das (C.P. and Berar: General): Have that. It is much better.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: But people who are very enthusiastic for change begin to protest and abuse when the change actually comes.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): This is not the change we asked for.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: People forget that while they now expatiate on the advantages of the old second class, for the last six years of war the second class travel has been as crowded as the new Class II. I have travelled often by the second class both at night and day, and I have found passengers rushing into the second class and there was no accommodation.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: When did you travel by railway? For the last six months you have been going by air.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: But he knows about it. The Minister may go on.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Well, I may inform the honourable member that probably even today I know more about all the classes than the honourable member.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: You were saying that you travelled by rail. I only corrected you—you never travel by rail now.

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai (Bombay: General): Has the passenger carrying capacity by the new classification increased?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: What has happened is that the old second class compartments have been partly annexed to the new Class I and partly have been handed over to the new Class II or the old Inter class accommodation.

Seth Govind Das: With your permission, Sir, I wish to interrupt the honourable Minister only once and ask him this question. Is it not a fact that now in the second class there is more crowding of passengers than there used to be in the past, because the Inter and second classes have been mixed together?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: My honourable friend Mr. Govind Das does not realise the full implications of his question. That means the new class II, is more popular than the old second class.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: There is no option—it is compulsory.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: According to the Minister the third class is the most popular way and therefore it is very comfortable!

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Let the honourable members reflect on the matter calmly. The third class passengers are there. The old inter class travellers have got the old inter class accommodation. The old second class passengers who have got Class II now have more accommodation than before. It is owing to the addition to the new Class II that more people are going from Class III to Class II. That is the process that is going on. That is why even the new Class II, in spite of more accommodation, is overcrowded. But if we find that the new Class I is not as overcrowded as it should be, then we shall go on transferring more and more coaches from Class I to Class II till we find that the passengers are suitably accommodated. That is the way in which we have to proceed—not to bring back the old four caste railway system.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: We do not want four classes. We want a comfortable class.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Provide sleeping accommodation; everything will be all right in Class II.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Let the Honourable Minister go on.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Sir, I quite sympathise with people who want sleeping accommodation. By paying 50 per cent. over the old second class fare they can get it today. We are, however, providing limited sleeping accommodation in the new Class II.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: There are no coaches.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: We shall put more coaches. An honourable member has done me the favour of reading a quotation from my own speech in the past. There I am reported to have said that the third class passenger is carrying the upper class passengers. I stand by that statement. Today, even at 24 pies, the first class passenger is being carried by the third class passenger. Supposing you give sleeping accommodation at 9 pies, then you can imagine how much the third class passenger will have to carry the middle class passenger. Everybody professes sympathy for the third class passenger, but when it comes to middle class interest versus third class interest, our reason goes and we stand for the interest of the middle classes rather than... (Interruption).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, order.

Mr. Frank Anthony: On a point of explanation. This is a misreading of what I said. I said, "Have your re-classification by all means when you have the rolling-stock. For the time being, every effort should be directed to third class reorganisation."

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: This re-classification, as I have said already, has added to the total amount of accommodation by five or ten per cent. in the various Railways. From that point of view, it is of great interest.

to the third class passenger, but what I am saying is that you can never have any change, especially in the Railway, where you have to make the change on a particular midnight, without some kind of inconvenience. We shall try to mitigate every inconvenience and see that progressively the third class passenger gets our first attention, then will come the class two and we will progressively eliminate the Class I passenger from the railway system.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: May I know what is the report of the General Managers on this classification? They have sent a preliminary report. I would like the Honourable Minister to enlighten the House as to what the opinion of the General Managers is.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: That report is premature, but if the honourable member reads it he will find that in the M.S.M., S.I. and two other Railways the shift has been from Class III to Class II. There has been a decrease in earnings in the East Indian Railway and in one or two railways there has been a temporary decrease in earnings. This is only for twenty days and how can we come to any judgment on figures for the first twenty days of January alone? So I think my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva must wait and see. We have got an open mind and when we find that things have to be mended, they will be mended. But again I want to emphasize that we should not allow the old railway system to come again, have four classes of coaches, four kinds of refreshment rooms, four kinds of waiting rooms—all that is too much of a burden on the common man. By the abolition of one class, a great deal of burden has gone, though there has been some inconvenience—I do not deny it—some inconvenience to those people who are rich enough to afford 16 pies but who are not rich enough to afford 24 pies. I would like every honourable member to reflect as to what tiny fraction is there in this country who can afford 16 pies per mile who can just not afford 24 pies per mile. There is a fraction and that is a very influential and vocal fraction, but I suggest that it is not such a big fraction that we should jeopardize an experiment made in the interests of the future generations owing to some temporary inconvenience. As I have already promised, we shall see that this inconvenience is also mitigated to the maximum extent possible.

Seth Govind Das: Have only two classes.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Well, I rather shudder to face an Assembly after abolishing the Class I.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: Why? We do not shudder at all. We do not mind provided the Ministers also come with us and do not go by air.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Will he allow the Honourable Minister to proceed?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I would request the honourable Mr. Sondhi to keep his soul a little in patience.

It has been a great pleasure to me to listen to the very constructive speech of my friend Mr. Shastri on labour relations in the Indian Railways. Some aspects of it will be dealt with by the Honourable Minister for Railways, but I wish to assure him that we are very anxious that labour in Indian Railways should be treated as model labour. I am particularly anxious that welfare work in the Railways should proceed as fast as possible. Unfortunately, a section of the workers even resent our improving the conditions. They are afraid that by improving labour conditions in Railways the revolutionary edge will be blunted. Therefore, on the one hand, when the Grainshop Enquiry Committee went about the country, they mobilised all the workers together and represented that the grainshops were mismanaged utterly, that there was no article supplied in the grainshops which was worthy of eating and that some thing must be done to alter the existing state of affairs, but when finally we did accept their advice and gave them option and produced a change, they made it the chief point of attack against the Railway Administration. The House may also remember that when, after mature consideration, the Government of India felt that though they could hardly afford the amount they should make a gesture and give an extra Rs. 10 allowance to each railway worker, they protested that this was a question of dividing the workers; that it was intended to wean away the workers from strike. Unfortunately, for the last four or five years, disintegrating elements have infiltrated into railway labour to such an extent that we are unable to run the railways efficiently. We are not able to attend to the workers' welfare itself efficiently. The whole thing is in a state which we cannot put up with much longer. I hope that the railway workers will listen to the wise lead of leaders like Mr. Shastri and cooperate with the Railway Administration, so that we can prove that in a nationalised industry the workers can be treated as model workers. In order to enable the House to watch the progress of labour welfare work, we are contemplating to bring all items under one demand head as in the case of the Betterment Fund, so that year by year the House will be able to see how we have progressed in housing, in hospitals and other aspects of labour welfare.

Some members referred to catering.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): We have more to say on the point.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Members may have more to say and there is the Honourable Minister for Railways to reply to them, and probably members may have some more points from my speech to speak on. Some members suggested that the Railways should take up departmental catering. In the S.I., M.S.M. and B. N. Railways there is departmental catering and on the point of quality I feel that Departmental catering has, on the whole, competed successfully with contract catering. Unfortunately, owing to the application of the Pay Commission's Recommendations, all the catering staff have had to be paid the pay, allowances and other perquisites according to the Commission report and the S. I. Ry. catering which was the most successful and the most economical has begun to be a losing concern. It is this fact that has made us pause a little and, as we have other more urgent work to do, we have decided, with the consent of the Central Advisory Council, to postpone this extension of departmental catering and look after other matters. I may assure the House that, at the soonest possible moment, the extension of departmental catering will be taken up. Till then we have to manage as best as we can and every effort will be made to see that those who do it on contract do their work properly.

One of the honourable members suggested that the railways are functioning from day to day and are not proceeding on the basis of planning. It is partly true. Railways cannot plan in a vacuum. They have to plan in the midst of national planning and when there is a national plan, I am sure that railway planning also will go into its place naturally. Still, at present a large part of our work is being done on planned basis. For instance, the building of the locomotive workshop, the proposed coach-building workshop and even the new re-classification are all projects the results of which will be seen much more in the future than in the present. It is in the interests of the future that these steps have been taken.

About the construction of new railways, a great deal of work has been done during the last 18 months. The Assam Railway link of 145 miles was sanctioned on 27th January 1948 and is to be completed early in 1950. The Rupar-Tilaura

[Shri K. Santhanam]

Railway has already been completed and members from the Punjab know its value for the Bakra dam. The Khirsodah-Ranwara in the Bengal Nagpur Railway sanctioned on 26th March 1947 is to be completed on 30th June 1949. Similarly the Barwadih-Sarnadhi line in the East Indian Railway with a length of 40 miles was sanctioned on 26th April 1947 and is to be completed early in 1951. Then there is the Bhimsen-Khaira line of the G.I.P. railway with a length of 73.82 miles sanctioned on 21st May 1946 is to be completed on 1st April 1949.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): What about the Satyamangalam-Chamrajnagar line?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: It has not yet been sanctioned. This constitutes a fairly good programme of construction. I do not, however, say that I am satisfied. I am sure that India wants probably a few more thousands of miles of railways, but unfortunately this is not the proper time to take up very big construction work. The cost of constructing each mile of railway is nearly four times the prewar cost. Therefore, if we make haste now, we shall have to spend a lot of money, while if we wait for a few years, we may be able to construct some lines much more economically. (Shri R. K. Sidhva: "Do you think the prices will go down?") Sir, I will conclude with a few words on fares and freights. I think it was Mr. Prakasam who suggested that we should reduce the third class fares. I have got some comparative figures. In India, the average passenger fare is 4.18 pies per mile and in the United Kingdom and in the United States of America it is 13.356 pies.....

Shri R. K. Sidhva: The honourable Minister must also compare the conveniences provided in the foreign trains.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: The honourable member will please wait. As I was saying, the average fare in the United Kingdom is 13.356 pies and in the United States it is 13.412 pies. What Mr. Sidhva said is quite true about the convenience provided for the passengers.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Also the average income per capita.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Yes, the average convenience provided is according to the average income per capita. We cannot have the cake and eat it too. If we want to reduce the fares, we can only do so at the cost of even the existing convenience. Today it is the overcrowding that has given you the surplus. If we can provide all the coaches and all the locomotives to carry the third class passengers at even third class comfort, we shall be working at a deficit. Third class fare before war was only three pies per mile. The railway fare has increased only 50 per cent while every other price has increased by 300 to 500 per cent. We can say that even this is high, but unless prices fall we will not be able to provide these comforts and run the railways on the present basis.

So far as goods freight is concerned, I have some instructive figures to supply to honourable members. India pays 9.1 pies per ton mile, while the United Kingdom pays 19.52 pies and the United States pays only 6.882 pies per ton mile. In the United States goods are being carried much cheaper than in India and the reason is that their cost is much less. They make their own locomotives. Coal is cheaper there and labour is more efficient. As a combined result of all these factors, the United States, in spite of its high standard of wages and cost of living, is able to move its goods at much cheaper cost. Therefore, in future, if we want to reduce our fares and freights, we have to increase our efficiency. It is to the extent that efficiency is increased that we can either reduce the fares and freights or carry them better.

My honourable friend Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru has made out this point and I need not labour it. He made a legitimate point that his report has not been published. Of course you know the printing difficulties in Delhi and how our own Assembly reports do not come to us for six months. I do not put this forward as an excuse. To some extent we must plead guilty to the charge that has been made. But I may assure him that every one of his recommendations is being scrutinised not only by the officers concerned, but by every member of the Railway Board and finally by myself, and by the Honourable Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar. We shall see that every recommendation which can possibly be accepted is given effect to.

Shri G. S. Guha (Tripura, Manipur and Khasi States): I rise to associate myself with the many tributes which came from different parts of the House to the Honourable the Railway Minister after the presentation of this 3 P.M. Budget. His speech covers a very wide range and touches important problems and show his keen interest and eagerness to do what is possible under the present conditions. It is also very satisfactory to know that he has given his very earnest consideration to the various recommendations of the Railway Enquiry Committee and also to the wishes expressed on the floor of this House during the debates on the Railway Budget last year. Among the points that he touched were the questions such as the allocation of the Betterment Fund, the Depreciation Fund and also the separation of the Railway Finances from General Finances. Then he also spoke on the performance and standard of efficiency, better trains, power position and several other such like things. As many of the members have already touched on these points, I do not think I shall go into them at present. The question of gauge in the different parts of India is also engaging his attention.

Coming from one of the eastern provinces of India, namely, Assam, I think I should concentrate on some of the difficulties that the people in those parts experience when travelling by train. My honourable friend, Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri has already spoken on the state of the T. B. Railway and also said that I have some personal experience of the difficulties of passengers in that part of the country. I was in Darrang district for five years, and during my stay at Tezpur, capital of that district, I think, I never took the advantage of travelling by that train for a single day because of the various difficulties and also of uncertainties of travelling by that Railway. I preferred to travel by road by motor from Tezpur to Rangapara, the farthest limit of the B.A. Railway. Things were very difficult during the war days, when as Deputy Commissioner I had to help the military authorities in regard to transshipment of material from the Indian side of the country to Darrang in order that they could do their best to fight the Japanese menace in Burma. I had very great difficulty at that time in finding the means to help the military forces to bring their different kinds of equipment including arms and ammunition from Rangapara, which is the farthest limit of the B. A. Railway, up to Saloni (Tezpur) air field towards the construction of which I had a hand. At that time I wrote to the Defence Department, after consultation with the Air Force and Military authorities, several times to see that the railway from Rangapara North to Tezpur was taken over by Government and also converted into a metre-gauge line. My honourable friend Mr. Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri has given an idea of how the line has been working. And I generally agree with what he has said. I have not personally seen passengers pushing the train on the T. B. Railway. But I know that the conditions were very difficult on account of the failure of the engines, and sometimes it was necessary for people to get down from the train and in that way probably to help a little; there are one or two places where the train has to rise above the ordinary level. I think personally, that it is very necessary for Government to consider this question of the taking over of the T. B. Railway as early as possible, and before 1952. On the other side of Tezpur on the south bank of the Brahmaputra River there is a railway branch line from Nowgong to Silghat. If the 18 miles of the T. B. Railway line is converted into a metre gauge line as an extension of the Rangiya—Rangapara line, I am quite sure it will be of great advantage to the travelling public and beneficial to trade.

In this connection I would also like to say that having travelled and having been in that part of the country during war time, I felt the necessity of the extension of the railway line from Rangapara up to the eastern most part of the province—up to Sadiya. There are many areas in that part of the country requiring development. Thousands of people had emigrated into some of those parts from Eastern Bengal as there are very fertile lands there, and the whole place is studded with tea gardens; and tea is one of the most important things which we export from our country in order to get Exchange from foreign countries. It is therefore an important question for consideration of Government whether it is not possible to construct the line along the bank of the River Brahmaputra from Rangapara North up to Sadiya in near future if not at present. I think it would be very good from the point of view of defence and carriage of things if this was done; because during the last war, I had very great difficulty in arranging buses and other conveyances for transport of such things from Tezpur onwards. The line suggested by me will not be over, say, approximately 100 miles. There is a proposal for constructing another line from the Garo Hills about which my honourable friend, Mr. Chaliha will speak as I have not much time at my disposal now.

I would also draw the attention of the Honourable Minister for Railways and Government regarding the difficulties of the travelling public through Pakistan from one part of the Indian territory to another, for instance, of people travelling from Calcutta to Assam. If in course of time the question of the conversion of the metre gauge to broad-gauge is taken up for consideration, I hope Government will also consider the question of extending the broad-gauge line from Parbatipur to Amingaon. This will afford great relief to the travelling public to Assam, and the consideration of the question can probably be arranged by having some sort of discussion with the Government of Pakistan.

As regards the increase of passenger trains, accommodation, etc., what the honourable members who have preceded me during the last two days have said equally applies to Assam but to a much greater extent. I have travelled in Assam, Bengal, this side of the country and also in C. P. and in Bombay; but I cannot compare the conditions prevailing on the Assam Railway with the conditions that prevail elsewhere. There are not only no lights and no water in the bath-rooms, but frequently there are also no cushions to sit on. I hope Government will give their earnest consideration to these matters specially because Assam is now a vital part of the country for the defence of the Dominion of India.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Mr. Khandubhai Desai.

Shri Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): May I have the good fortune to catch your eye, Sir?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Everybody will have the good fortune to catch my eyes. I would request honourable members to confine their remarks to ten minutes—I have got a list of thirteen members waiting still—so that I may be able to call upon the honourable Minister exactly at five of the clock to reply to the debate. May I ascertain the wishes of the House if they would be prepared to sit for half an hour more after five of the clock? There are a number of members who want to speak.

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai: Sir, I shall finish in ten minutes. First of all, I would like to thank the Honourable the Railway Minister for a candid and outspoken exposition of the job he has undertaken upon himself. He has placed before us his difficulties, his hopes and his aspirations. We do not know to what extent he will be able to carry through them all during the course of the existing year.

He has made reference in two or three paragraphs in his speech to labour questions. He has placed before the labour leaders his view that as far as railway men are concerned, politics should be kept out. The President of our National Trade Union Congress has very ably placed before the House the view point of our organisation. I need hardly assure him and the House that as far as the INTUC is concerned, we have nothing to do with politics, though politics may come incidentally, but primarily we are for the uplift of the working classes whether they are working in the railways, or in any other industry.

I would like to point out to the railway administration one thing. A simple negative policy or simple maligning railway employees as inefficient people will not achieve the purpose. A positive approach is necessary. The positive approach is, that the railway men, whether they are working in the workshops, or on the stations or working as gang men, should be considered as responsible employees working in the interest of the nation. A sort of initiative should be created in them; a sort of responsibility should be thrown on them and they must be made to realise that they are as much servants of the nation as anybody else. This can only be achieved if the railway administration at the top changes its whole outlook towards labour. Of course, there is not much difficulty. For aught we know, the men at the top may be good people; but they have been accustomed to treat the railway men in a particular way. Unless the red tapism goes. I think we will be in for difficulties. I would suggest for the consideration of the Railway Minister that even for the removal of small grievances, small discontent, small dissatisfaction, he must appoint Zonal Tribunals to which every railway man can go for the redress of his grievances. If the tribunal gives a decision against the railway man, he will know that his case was wrong and he will be satisfied. He should not be permitted to harbour feelings of discontent, dissatisfaction and resentment at the railway administration.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): What about our satisfaction about full production by labour?

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai: Last year, I had an opportunity of going round the country, on almost all the railways, and I must assure the House, as representing the nation, that at the core, railway men are sound and they would like to serve the nation. The charge of inefficiency, indiscipline, and what not, can immediately be removed if response comes from the railway administration at the top.

As far as the coordination of the different rival bodies among railway-men are concerned, my suggestion is let the railway-men manage their own affairs through their own office bearers. I would not object to it and nobody would object to it provided the railway men are assured that the office bearers whom they may elect from among themselves will get a square deal from their superiors and that if they place their case strongly before the railway administration, they will not be looked down upon and they will be made to suffer for it.

[Shri Khandubhai K. Desai]

Then, there is one point to which I would like to make a reference: that is regarding the railway finances. We are grateful to the honourable Railway Minister that he has realised that the railway finances are not in a happy position. We cannot have any complacency about the position of the railway finances. The depreciation fund is being depleted as he says, at the rate of eight Rupees for every Rupee we put into it, because of the high prices of renewing the locomotives, carriages and wagons. Even if the prices were to go down, you will have to take out of the depreciation fund at the rate of three or four Rupees for every Rupee you put into it. Therefore, the suggestion that a Convention Committee should be appointed is welcome. I think the surplus which has been shown is fictitious; it is not a surplus in any shape or form. I am definitely against any surplus from the railway going to the general finances. It is a crooked way, an insidious way, an indirect way of imposing even one pie from the railway surplus, in my opinion, is unsound finance. Now that the Honourable Dr. John Matthai, who fought for this principle, is the Finance Minister, I think the Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar would have better time in the future. I think not a single pie from the railway surpluses should be diverted to the general finances. If they want the general finances to be augmented, let them come before the House for more taxation and we will consider the taxation proposals. All the surpluses should go towards increasing the facilities of the passengers and satisfying the railway men.

Much has been said about the new classification. I think a right step has been taken. (An Honourable Member: "No"). Any right step will, in the first instance, be resented by the people who are accustomed to a different way of life. The very fact that the new classification has, according to the Honourable Mr. Santhanam, increased the passenger carrying capacity by ten per cent is proof of this. If the trains carried one thousand passengers before, they are carrying now a hundred passengers more. Some persons may have gone from the third class to the so called second class which is really the inter class. To that extent, congestion may have been removed. He has assured us that this is a transitional step towards the elimination of even the inter class and having only two classes, the upper and the lower. I think, if that stage comes, we will be happy. Any change as suggested by Mr. Anthony would be a retrograde step and this House must not allow it.

As far as the third class passengers are concerned, I think the time is shortly coming when, with the efficiency that the railway are bound to put in,—because they know the feelings of the House—the third class passengers will also get accommodation at night for sleeping on payment of an extra fare. So there will be two classes—I and II, or upper and lower, or A and B—or whatever you would like to call it. Today there is a misunderstanding. The class which is called second class today is not the real second class: it is old inter-class.

With these words I must again thank the Railway Minister for his candid and frank exposition of his position to this House.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor (U.P.: General): I have often been unlucky in not getting suitable accommodation in railway trains, but I had never thought that that ill-luck of mine would follow me even in the course of the debate on the railway budget, and that I would be called upon to speak at such a late stage in the debate. As it is, I must confine myself to the very few points that have been left untouched by the previous speakers. But even then, Sir, I must repeat one thing, and that is to congratulate the Honourable the Railway Minister, not only for the very able, lucid and frank speech which he delivered while introducing the Railway budget, but more particularly for the efficiency that he has been able to bring about in the railway administration during the short period that he has held this portfolio.

As a member of the Central Railway Advisory Committee, and also having had many occasions to travel during the last few months, I can say, Sir, with a certain amount of personal experience that there has been an all round improvement in the working of the railways. The trains have begun to run a bit more punctually, the railway staff is a little more courteous to the passengers, there has been an improvement in the goods traffic, and above all, Sir, I find an earnest desire and determination on the part of a large number of railway officials to improve matters. I know, Sir much more still remains to be done and I do not attach very much importance to the little that has been done. But I certainly attach a good deal of importance to this earnestness on the part of the railway officials to improve matters, and if this earnestness on their part continues, I hope, Sir, before long many of the grievances which we ventilate on the floor of this House will disappear. But, Sir the credit for all this must not go exclusively to the honourable the Railway Minister. It must be shared by his deputy the honourable the Minister of State for Railways, Mr. Santhanam.

We know what a close and critical study he used to make of railway problems when he was on the non-official benches, and I am glad to find that even now when he has been lifted to the Treasury Benches, he continues to look at the railway problems with the same angle of view as he used to look at them when he was on the non-official benches.

I was rather sorry to find some of the previous speakers the other day criticise him rather uncharitably when they said that now that he has to travel by air he has forgotten all the grievances of the public against the railways. I must confess, Sir, that I do not consider such criticism to be very dignified and responsible. This sort of criticism I often hear in the market place being levelled against our Ministers and our Government. But I had never thought that such irresponsible, and if I may be permitted to say, undignified criticism, should be levelled against any Minister on the floor of this House. Is it that any one of us does seriously want that our Minister should not travel by air and economise time thereby? Is it the intention of any one of us here that they should travel only by rail or by bus, or perhaps by bullock-carts?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member should come back to the rails! Already five minutes have gone.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: Well, Sir, I hope I shall have fifteen minutes.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am afraid that will not be possible.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: I have no objection but I will try to go over the various points as fast as the railway runs. But let us not forget that even though the speed of the railway has increased, the trains have not become absolutely punctual, and I hope I will have your consideration in view of this fact.

I was submitting, it is not fair on our part to suggest that the Ministers should not travel by air; in the interests of economy of time, they must do so: as a matter of fact, we would do well to give a directive that our Ministers should travel in the shortest possible time so that they may be able to devote more time to the substantial tasks that are before them.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: And also to the members of the Advisory Council!

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: Yes, thank you.

I must now immediately come to a very important point and that is with regard to the working of the Railway Finance Committee. Having been elected to the Railway Finance Committee by this House, I think I ought to tell them what my experience of it has been, and I must confess that my experience has not been a happy one. The Railway Finance Committee is supposed to be the watch-dog of Railway finances. But, Sir, the way in which its affairs are conducted prevents it from functioning as it should. Firstly, to go through these various points hurriedly, I may mention that the Standing Finance Committee has not been given the necessary facility.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Two minutes.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: I think I have now to travel by air.

The first point is that items relating to huge amounts of money are placed before us and we are expected to skip over those items within a period of only two hours. The members of the Committee are not experts, and I am sure even experts would not be able to deal with these big items in the short space of two hours. Secondly, we find that grossly wrong estimates are put before us. To quote one illustration—(Interruptions). My honourable friend, Mr. Sondhi is surprised, but if he will bear with me and help me to secure a few more minutes from the Deputy Speaker, I will be able to quote instances for the benefit of this House.

One illustration is this. In March last year, the Railway Finance Committee were told that five steamers could be had for only about Rs. 25 lakhs. Four or five months afterwards we were told that three steamers had been purchased at a cost of Rs. 60 lakhs; whereas in March we were told that one steamer would cost Rs. 5 lakhs, only a few months after orders were placed for three steamers at the cost of Rs. 20 lakhs per steamer. This is something which must be taken seriously by the House.

Then again, often no approval of the Standing Finance Committee is taken before huge orders are placed. To illustrate this. Two hundred engines costing Rs. 10 crores were ordered without any approval of the committee having been taken.

In another case, nine engines were purchased at a cost of Rs. 25 lakhs and this fact was brought to our notice after the entire transaction had been completed.

Fourthly, I may mention that very often the estimates are exceeded by very big amounts. To give you one illustration—the doubling of the Gaya Bridge. The original estimates were Rs. 32 lakhs: ultimately such a huge sum as Rs. 46 lakhs was spent over it, and it was not until the whole project had been completed that we were informed that the original estimates had been exceeded. This state of affairs, I submit, is not very agreeable to us and I am sure now that the Honourable Mr. Santhanam and the Honourable Mr. Gopalaswami Ayyangar are there they will see to it that the working of the Railway Finance Committee improves definitely and we are enabled to function in a manner which would give satisfaction not only to the members of the Committee but also to this House.

Sir, the time at my disposal is so short that I would only give two concrete suggestions with regard to improving the honesty and the efficiency of the Railway staff. Every body has spoken now and we have also been crying hoarse in different sessions of the House that there is a good deal of corruption in the railway administration and it is particularly so in the goods booking department of the railways. I have two definite suggestions to make in this regard. One is that an anti-corruption department should be established. It should be run not only by people who have experience of police administration but also by people who have experience of railway administration. These two sets of people must be such as are above suspicion: I have often found and particularly in my home province, U.P., that in the anti-corruption department some persons are employed who themselves had a very bad reputation regarding their honesty. It is no use having in the anti-corruption department persons who were themselves dishonest in their career. The personnel for this anti-corruption department must be selected with very great care and caution.

The second suggestion is that at every important industrial and commercial centre there must be a goods shed advisory committee and this committee must consist of representatives of the various commercial and industrial interests. Over it the station master might be asked to preside. Their meetings might be held once a fortnight or month and a meeting once in three months may be held at which the Divisional Traffic Manager or Superintendent may be asked to preside. These are the two suggestions which I have to make in this direction.

With regard to the newly established institution of social service guides I must confess that so far I have found this institution to be practically useless. It may be said that we have not had sufficient experience of it. I would on the floor of this House like to utter a warning to the social guides and tell them that if they continue to be useless as they have been so far we shall have to request the Ministry to discharge their services altogether. I remember that on the occasion when the special train was run from this place to the Congress Nagar in Jaipur a very large number of social guides was there. Their number was greater perhaps than the members of the Constitution Assembly who were travelling by that train. After that I have not found one social guide at the station, for almost every week I leave the Delhi station and every time I make it a point to inquire from the responsible official on duty as to where the guides are and I am told always that they are somewhere on the other platform. So every time I have enquired about their existence, I have invariably been told that they are on the other platform and not on the platform where their services are required.

About railway amenities I will not go into detail but I will say only one thing, that I am very much disappointed with regard to amenities of the passengers. It appears from what the Honourable Mr. Santhanam said that because of want of materials it is not possible to give more amenities. It is true in the case of putting up new sheds and so on. But where is the difficulty in having more booking offices or clerks, or providing electric lights at stations. We have just been told by the Honourable Mr. Santhanam that it is not easy to get electric wires. With all respect to him I would submit that electric wires and bulbs are available in the country in any quantity and I know of one important station, my own home station Rajakimandi, where the electric supply company is prepared to put up electric lights on the platform, but a year has passed since I moved in the matter and uptil now the electric lights have not been put up there and the ordinary oil lamps on the platform hardly burn. That is the case not only with regard to Rajakimandi station but with regard to many other stations also.

I have an important suggestion to make and because I think it is likely to be accepted by the Honourable Minister, I venture to make it. I find that many of our technical men are not being fully and properly utilised. I know that in the E.P. Railway some electrical and mechanical engineers are being given the jobs of storekeepers or store superintendents. My honourable friend behind me cries "What." He is surprised at it: So was I when I came to know of it. I hope it would be a surprise to the honourable Minister also, and that he will take immediate steps to see that these technical men are given such jobs for which they are qualified: It is a waste of national talent to put highly qualified technical men on non-technical posts.

I had a lot more to say but I am sorry that I have already exceeded the time limit, and I thank you, Sir, for the indulgence shown to me.

Shri A. Karunakara Menon (Madras: General): I congratulate the honourable Minister on the Budget that he has presented; on the improvements in Railway that have been already effected and for the promise of the several improvements to be effected in future. Our great disappointment is that we do not find any mention made with respect to future plans about the expansion of railways or the restoration of dismantled lines, which subjects used to find a place in budget speeches. There is no need for me to emphasise the necessity for expansion of railways. The railways act as a great contributor to the economic prosperity of the country. They also act as a great welder of the people into a nation. This expansion is also necessary for the convenience of the passenger public. For instance, it is very difficult for people on the West Coast to go by Rail to a place north of Mangalore, which is the terminus of the South Indian Railway on the West Coast. We have to go south, then turn to the east and traverse the whole peninsula to reach Bombay or any other place in the Bombay Presidency. On the other hand it would be very easy if Mangalore is joined to the Mysore station or the Hassan station on the Mysore Railway line. Still better it would be if the S. I. Railway Station Cannanore is connected with Mysore Ry. Station after passing through the prosperous territory of Coorg.

Even more important, according to me, than new lines is the restoration of the old dismantled lines. These lines were dismantled at the time of the war and on the understanding that they would be restored as soon as the war was over. These lines were built originally after a great deal of investigation regarding the necessity for them and as such I cannot understand why these lines which were dismantled on the implicit understanding or tacit promise that they would be restored soon after the war, do not form part of an urgent programme in the Railway administration.

I might mention one of the railway lines which I know of and which needs immediate restoration namely the Nilambur-Shoranur line. It was a line forty miles long, costing Rs. 80 lakhs and it was dismantled in 1941 or 1942. Its restoration is said to cost only about Rs. 20 lakhs. Nilambur which is at one end of the railway is an important station. It is at the foot of the ghats and is a great timber and fuel centre. This railway line, if taken out to Shoranur, will lead straight on to Cochin Harbour. Pykara electric scheme is to be introduced in this area soon and it will act as a great civilizing force in the explosive Moplah area of Malabar. Therefore the importance of this railway need not be emphasized.

The Honourable the Railway Minister admitted that there was a large increase in railway travelling compared to the number of trains and accommodation provided. In this area also if the railway is restored there is no doubt that it will not have to be worked at a loss. The Railway Minister stated on the 15th of this month that the restoration of this railway line had been recommended by the Madras Government and that the only question that remained to be settled was the question of guarantee. I know that the previous Railway Minister the Honourable Dr. John Matthai was also trying to get this guarantee question settled. I do not know why there is a delay of three years to settle this small issue. I do not think this railway when restored will ever be a loss. The areas between these two places, Shoranur and Nilambur have become very important after the war. Therefore, may I request the Honourable the Railway Minister to expedite this matter and earn the gratitude of the people by fulfilling a promise that was made at the time when these lines were dismantled?

I may be permitted to say a few words regarding the reclassification of accommodation in passenger trains. Whatever the Honourable the Minister of State for Railway may say, the present reclassification of accommodation in railway trains has created great dissatisfaction in the country. It has not satisfied the rich, it has not satisfied the middle class, and it has not satisfied the third class passenger also. It has not satisfied anybody. The chief objection to this reclassification is that the reform was attempted at the wrong end. What ought to have been done was to reduce the classes by approximating the third class as much as possible to the intermediate class, and then, when the third-class approximated to the intermediate class, the intermediate class ought to have been removed. No doubt the attempt is to introduce a classless travel by reducing the number of classes just as we all yearn for a classless society. But this object could have been attained by the removal of the intermediate class after the third-class approximated to it. The first-class should have been removed altogether. The previous second class with fares which then existed should have been continued. Credit has been taken now by the Honourable Minister of State that four classes have been reduced to three classes. It is not so. The four classes remain even now. There is the first class, the second class with reservation, the second class without reservation, and the third class. I submit that the position requires very careful reconsideration at the hands of the Government.

I may be permitted to mention one small point. There are now two trains leaving Madras for the West Coast within an interval of a few minutes or an hour. It would be an improvement which will be highly appreciated if one of them starts in the forenoon and the other in the afternoon. Not only will it increase the convenience of the travelling public but on account of the night air mail which has been introduced it would enable the air mail posts to be delivered earlier in important places. At present the air mails reach Madras early in the morning but remain there till evening waiting to be carried to their destinations.

With respect to labour I congratulate the Government on the strong attitude they have taken. At least one section of labour had been blackmailing the country and trying to exploit the Government in times of dire emergency.

Let me mention one more point. I read in the papers of a scandalous of twenty engines having arrived in this country from America in response to orders given by the Government and that they subsequently were found unusable and therefore are lying idle in the locomotive yards. The matter needs urgent enquiry. Each engine is said to cost about Rs. 4½ lakhs. Several of these engines are lying idle because they cannot be used on the railway track for the reason that the whole railway track will have to be converted and relaid if these engines are to be used.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: May I intervene, Sir, to say that so far as the locomotives are concerned there is no basis at all for that statement.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: In answer to a question that had been tabled, the answer was given which the honourable member probably did not hear. It was laid to the counter and they said they did not attach any value to such things in the paper.

Shri A. Karunakara Menon: The paper need not be attached any value to.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: To the matter contained in it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, order. Let there be no speeches across the benches. The honourable Minister has said that the allegation is absolutely baseless. He need not pursue the matter. He has already taken his time.

Shri A. Karunakara Menon: Sir, I apologize to the honourable Minister. I never attached much value to the particular newspaper containing the news but I thought it my duty to bring the serious allegations contained in it to the notice of the Government. Therefore, only I mentioned it and not with the idea of making any accusation against Government.

I come to the last point. Though it is a small point I would like to mention it. One of the lady members stated that there ought to be an increase in the number of ladies compartments. Increase of compartments is necessary, but I do not know why ladies compartments ought to be increased. They want equality with men and at the same time they plead for special reservation on the basis of being the weaker sex. Both can't go together.

Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo (Madhya Bharat): I avail of this opportunity to associate myself with other honourable colleagues of mine to congratulate the honourable Minister for Railways not only for his lucid and explanatory speech but for the straightforward and courageous speech he has made in admitting the short-coming and defects of the railway administration today. As a matter of fact he has stated further that he is conscious of the defects and fully alive to meet the situation as demanded by the country. While congratulating him on this I cannot refrain from making certain observations as regards the general feeling of the public that though the railway administration is now in the hands of our national Government, it is deteriorating in certain respects. I would not like to dilate on the inefficiency and corruption particularly because they have been mentioned by many speakers. I feel and feel very strongly that corruption is writ large on every branch of the railway administration today. One would have understood it in the foreign administration but it is a matter of great shame for us when we see that corruption is the only thing to be seen everywhere. When we reach the railway station, from the moment of purchasing the ticket down to the moment we reach our destination we find everywhere corruption and corruption and nothing else. If I want to purchase a ticket I must tip the railway man for it—the police constable or the booking clerk. For a seat in the train I have to tip him there also.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Not so bad as that.

Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo: Perhaps many of honourable members here come from those areas where the Honourable Ministers may have toured and the people are a little educated as well. But I come from an area which is very backward, and I feel that just as third-class passengers are the most neglected people, so the areas served by metre gauge are also neglected and there nobody can raise his voice against the administration. And if anybody raises his voice there is very little of response. I come from an Indian State, and refer here particularly to the area from Khandwa to Ajmer.

I have raised this question here to draw the attention of the honourable Minister to the state of affairs there. I am really very grateful to the Honourable the Deputy Prime Minister that he has consolidated and integrated our country. But unfortunately, our Railway administration has not been integrated and consolidated in such a way that the Indian States may be included in that. I am glad that the Minister has stated that a new map of the Railway administration shall be drawn up very soon, but I would have welcomed it had there been the slightest indication that even a survey had been undertaken in that direction. The Government of India has been very helpful to some of the States in developing their hydro-electric schemes, etc., but unfortunately the Railway Administration has failed to consider that many vastly populated areas are not linked up by railway as yet.

I come now to the question of amenities to the railway passengers. Much has been said as regards the third-class passengers' difficulties. So, I would like to draw your attention to another fact. Sir, the Betterment Fund is not fully utilised to the advantage of the passengers. It has been conceded by the honourable Minister that it is so. I would like to suggest that the Betterment Fund should be disbursed in consultation with an Advisory Committee.

On pages 22 and 23 of the Explanatory Memorandum, amenities for passengers have been mentioned. But for the B. B. & C. I. Railway—one of the railways paying the greatest amount of profit—unfortunately nothing has been done under the head "water-supply to passengers". The B. B. & C. I., serves the desert areas of Rajputana and only those who travel there know what scarcity of water means.

Similarly, I find that much has been said about carriages. But I do not see any provision for the improvement of carriages under this except on the O. and T. Railway. Does it mean that everywhere else the railway carriages are up to the mark? The third class carriages are such that the windows are shattered and the doors loose; we can have the pleasure of a sunbath in the summer and shower bath during the rains, and a cold breeze in the winter. So far as lavatories are concerned, they are so useless and dirty, that the less said about them the better. Taps inside them are either blocked or too loose so that anybody using the lavatory will be drenched; and if he happens to be a Sanatani or one having any scruples for hygiene, he would have to take his bath at the nearest station; but then he will not find third-class bath room and if he finds any water tap there it will be so much crowded, that he will not have sufficient time or sufficient opportunity to have even a glass of water to drink.

The Honourable Mr. Santhanam has said that he is thinking of electrifying the railway stations. May I draw his attention to the fact that today the third-class carriages are not electrified? There are no bulbs there. As regards the coaches you say improvement is being made. Even in the old second-class coaches I find on my metre gauge that the upper berths are being removed from the second-class.

On transport, I would like to speak on the goods traffic. The booking restrictions that are imposed at times are a farce. If there is a station nearby which is served by another Railway, you will find the Commercial community resorting to other devices; they take their goods there and if you grease the palms of the railway authorities it is very easy to have a booking permission under a different name. A particular commodity may be restricted for booking but you will find the same commodity booked under a different name.

That is the state of affairs, Sir. It is a very pitiable plight. The sooner we remedy these things the better for our country, for our nation. If we do not do it, I do not know where our transport system shall be, and where our other things shall be.

About claims, there is delay if we apply for claims. I am myself a sufferer; I applied for a refund ten months back and I have received no reply.

[Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo]

As regards grainshops, I do not grudge any facilities being given to labour class but I find the grain shops have become the gain shops for the few individuals. Those who procure these things smuggle them and profiteer on them. Even the authorities who have been purchasing them become a party to swindling the money of the poor taxpayer. I would like to draw the attention of the Government of India, most humbly, to the fact that these anti-corruption department people also do not listen to the complaints; the anti-corruption department has become a party to these corruptions. Formerly you had one or two persons corrupt, now there are a thousand and one persons who are corrupt and the anti-corruption department is only one more addition and shares the booty with others.

The honourable Minister says that the bottleneck of transport is being removed. It is not so on the metre gauge. My Provincial Minister told me yesterday that the primary necessities of life are not being despatched there because of the lack of transport facilities. In Madhyabharat we have not been able to send anything; cement quota we could not send because there were no railway transport facilities for the last nine months; kerosene and petroleum could not be sent; our sugarcane crops are standing in the fields and cannot be transported to the factories. What about wagons? If I go and grease the palms of the railway gods there, I can get the permits. The priority committee is all a farce.

Though there is no time at my disposal, I will emphasise with all the force at my command that these things should be improved.

I heartily congratulate our Honourable Minister because he is conscious of these things. He is fully alive to all these things. I hope he will surely consider the needs of the poor people, particularly the States people. He has referred to the launching of new open lines, but in the B. B. & C. I. we have certainly not seen any sign of any undertakings in open lines. Though we contribute the highest amount of profits, still ours is the most neglected area.

Dr. Y. S. Parmar (Himachal Pradesh): My task has been made easier by my friend the Honourable Mr. Santhanam by giving us assurances about the improvements to be made in third-class travel facilities as also on the present difficulty which we are facing regarding the re-classification on the Railways.

In this connection, I would bring a few facts to the notice of the honourable the Transport Minister so that the inconvenience which has been brought to his notice might be reduced in good time. One fact is that we find all these days that while there is some arrangement made for sitting accommodation for the Class II passengers, it is not only that the public do not know anything about the sleeping accommodation but even the railway staff is ignorant of this practice.

I was amused the other day to find that a whole compartment had been reserved and reservation fee for sleeping accommodation had been paid: yet the occupants were disturbed the whole night because some other passengers wanted to get in. They would not believe that there were such a thing as reservation of sleeping accommodation in the train. That was not all. What was more interesting was that the employee of the Railway Department itself would not believe it. He did not believe the reservation ticket. Of course, after satisfying himself by seeing the receipt for the payment, he persuaded the passengers from getting into the compartment. What I mean is this, that this fact that there is reservation of sleeping accommodation is not known to the general public; not only that, it is not known even to railway employees. This fact must be brought to the notice of railway employees; otherwise, this reservation will become a regular nuisance.

Secondly, the answer which my honourable friend Mr. K. Santhanam made about overcrowding was that it was due to more third class passengers coming into the second-class. In my opinion, overcrowding is due not because of more third class passengers coming into the second-class but because second-class passengers who have now been huddled into the II Class have to travel not in the accommodation which used to be available to the Inter and I Class before but 40 per cent. of that accommodation less. If my information is correct, 40 per cent. of the old II Class compartment have been up-graded to Class I, which means that the total accommodation available for the new II Class is 40 per cent. less. This raises another point, namely, that it is unfair to charge people three times the same rate for the same amenities and comforts. For those compartments which have been degraded to new II Class have the same comforts as those which have been up-graded to new I Class. But that is not all. While it has been attempted to give more facilities to the middle class man, the real beneficiaries of this scheme are the I Class passengers. They pay 20 per cent. less and enjoy practically the same comforts as before. So my suggestion is that all compartments which belonged to the old II Class should be reconverted into the new II Class. This will relieve the overcrowding. Of course, it is for the Minister to see whether it will do any good.

Speakers before me have pointed out the difficulty regarding transport of goods. Wagons are not available; if available, there are so many difficulties that people cannot get them, at least not get them till they can bend down to certain other practice, which must be done away with, and the sooner that is done the better for us.

One more point. People had high hopes, people who had lived in ignorance and isolation—I mean the hill people—we thought that it was because the foreigner did not want them to come up to the level of other parts of the country that he did nothing for them. I am talking of the hillmen right from Kashmir to Darjeeling. Even in this National Railway Budget there is no place for them. There is not a word about even survey work being carried out in those areas. What does that mean? Does that mean that those from the hills are not to expect any progress even under our National Government? Will nothing be done to open up this country, not only from the point of view of progress of the people inhabiting it but even for unearthing the hidden treasures which lie there waiting to be exploited and made available to enrich the treasuries of this great land? My humble suggestion is that these people cannot be ignored. We people have been looking forward not only to ordinary railways but we have been under the idea that as soon as power comes to our national leaders we might expect small electric trains throughout the hills. Unfortunately, there is no mention of anything of that kind in this Budget.

A word about labour and I shall have finished. It is gratifying to find that for the present our Honourable Minister has been able to bring pressure on railway workers and get the strike cancelled. But we must be alive to the necessity of solving this great problem of labour. Wages have of course to be paid and brought to the subsistence level, but one thing which has to be remembered, particularly the labour has to bear in mind, is that higher wages alone will not bring prosperity or productivity. To get better wages, to get better facilities, efficiency has got to increase; productivity has to increase; discipline has to improve. These are matters which concern not merely railway labour but labour all over the country. Labour has to see to it that productivity increases; that strikes do not disturb the production of the country, for at this sage to think of strikes is nothing else but sabotaging the growth of the country and any interest or body which wants to use labour for this purpose cannot expect any help or support from the Government and the people.

Shri R. Sankar (Travancore State): Speaking as I do at the fag end of the general discussions on the Railway Budget, I have had occasion to attend to the speeches made by very many honourable members of the House. I find that there has been a unanimity of opinion in respect of two things: firstly, in congratulating the honourable the Railway Minister for his very able and lucid Budget speech and secondly, in condemning the new classification that has been introduced. I think some of my honourable friends have been rather partial in trying to give the congratulations all to the Railway Minister and the blame for the introduction of the new classification to the Deputy Minister. I say it is very unjust. Perhaps, because the Deputy Minister took upon himself.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Not Deputy Minister. He is Minister of State—intermediate classification!

Shri R. Sankar: Perhaps because the honourable the Minister of State took upon himself the responsibility of explaining the whole matter, it is on that account that some of my friends thought he is responsible for introducing this damned classification. But it has been made amply clear that not one particular individual is responsible for this unhappy reform, and that the entire railway administration from the very top to a level below were opinions count must be held responsible. I would therefore say that the encomium and the criticism must be shared equally by the honourable Minister and the honourable Minister of State.

Many of the aspects of the Railway Budget have been dealt with in this House in some detail. I do not therefore propose to touch upon any of them. But there is something which is uppermost in my mind and I must mention it. Though the able speech of the Minister for Railways and the Budget presented by him have given us a fair idea of the working of the railways during the last year and of the expectations for the coming year, I think the whole railway administration lacks planned activity. What I wish to say is this: Our country now enjoys the status of an independent country and one would naturally compare it with the other free countries in the world. In the matter of railways, therefore, we would be tempted to compare our position with that of more advanced countries in Europe, United States and so on. But if one makes that comparison, he would be sadly disappointed to find that we are very backward in this respect. Even the mileage that we have in India does not compare favourably with the mileage in important countries of the world. Great Britain which is only big as or a little smaller than some of the bigger provinces of India, has a greater route mileage in railways than the whole of the Indian Union. Similarly, the United States of America has many times this length of railway, though she has a population which is only one third of the Indian Union. Canada also has a larger route mileage as also Russia. Even Argentina, which is a backward country with a population of only 10 millions or one thirtieth that of India, has nearly as much railway as India has. India, of course, is said to be backward country with a mainly agricultural economy. Argentina's national economy is nothing but agricultural, it must be remembered. They are one of the chief producers of wheat and foodgrains and we ourselves are importing foodgrains from Argentina. They have been able to develop their country on account of the vast net-work of railways. With the help of this vast net-work of railways they have constructed, they have been able to develop all the rural parts of their sparsely-populated country.

The United States of America, which till fifty years ago, was mainly an agricultural country, developed their country rapidly on account of the vast net-work of railways they constructed. It is said that in the Eastern States of U.S.A. such as New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan, there is no place from which if you walk in any direction you will not meet a railway line within three miles. They have such a vast net-work of railways there that there is no farm in any part of developed United States either in the Central States or in the Eastern ones which is not served by some side line. So we find that if our agriculture is to improve, the first thing we have to do is to expand our railways very considerably.

If we look at a railway map in India we find that in the Gangetic plain there is already a net-work of railways, but in the Deccan and in the South, railways have not been extended to any similar degree. Towards the southernmost end railways almost disappear. Honourable members will excuse me if I take the example of the State of Travancore from which I come. Travancore has a population of 6 millions. On the basis of population that State should have at least 500 miles of railway in that part of India. But there is not even 100 miles of railway there. It is admitted by all that Travancore is a very advanced part of India industrially, educationally and even otherwise. This being the case, there is no excuse whatever for this neglect. Travancore, Cochin, Malabar and some parts of south India have received very little attention in this respect. The broad gauge system, at its southernmost point, terminates at Ernakulam or Cochin. To the south of that region, there is no broad-gauge line. An area nearly 50,000 square miles to the south of Madras consisting of Trichinopoly, Tanjore, Madurai, Ramnad, Tinnevely and the State of Travancore is not served by any broad-gauge line at all. If any agricultural or other produce from this area has to be sent to upper India, two transshipments have to be made, once from meter-gauge to the broad-gauge at Madras or at Trichinopoly and the other at Poona or Munnar. If the broad-gauge line is extended to the south so as to reach the Cape, that will open up a very large industrially advanced and thickly populated area and the produce of that area will be available to the north. That land is particularly rich in many varieties of fruits. For instance we have the banana which only people from the south have tasted. It is nothing like the so-called banana of Delhi. It is far more delicious and far more nutritious. That banana never reaches any place north of the Vindhyas. It is because it gets spoiled due to overripening. The Airways companies do not accept it as freight, otherwise I would have taken some bananas with me. There is no railway transport which helps in transporting such perishable stuff as bananas. If there are refrigerator cars available one could take these bananas from Travancore and Cochin to any part of India in good condition. People in upper India now depend on tinned fruits from the United States for their fruit requirements. We get tinned pineapples also from the United States. The best variety of fruits from south India you cannot get here because the railways are undeveloped and we are not able to use our transport system to bring them here.

Another matter I wish to bring to the notice of the Government is that in Kerala about two million people engaged in the coir industry are now in very difficult circumstances. The foreign market for the coir industry has fallen and people engaged in this industry have been thrown out of employment. Coir is made from coconut fibre. Till recently coir goods enjoyed a sort of priority and coir ropes, mats and mattings and other coir products were being sent to northern India where they found a ready market. But the Railway Administration and the Government have taken the coir goods out of the priority lists and now the result is that hundreds of thousands of workers in Kerala have been thrown out of employment and they are very often a prey for dexterous Communist propagandists.

[Shri R. Sankar]

My humble opinion is that we are not looking at the problem of railways in the proper perspective. We should not consider that the railway is a commercial enterprise. The return is not the return as apparent from the Budget. The real return is to be judged from the increase in the national prosperity and the national wealth of the country. The Honourable Finance Minister should never expect a pie of contribution from the Railway surpluses. I think it has been a gross negligence of duty to have taken away much of the railway surpluses during the past 20 or 25 years and allow the railways not to be in a position to develop as they wished. Indian Railways have to expand considerably, in my opinion. We should immediately launch upon a ten or fifteen year plan with a view to attaining certain specific objectives.

I would like in this connection to make a reference to another aspect of the question of expansion. Now there is a vast meter-gauge system in the South. There is another big such system in the North but the two are not inter-connected. The northernmost extremity of the southern system is Mamad and the southernmost extremity of the northern system in Khandwa and the distance between the two stations is only 150 miles. But still our Railway administration has never found the means of constructing 150 miles of the meter-gauge railways and thus enable the trucks from the South to go up to the foot of the Himalayas and help in the commerce of the land. Even this year no provision is made for opening this line. Another meter-gauge line connecting Jubbulpore with Allahabad would also establish a similar connection between the Central Indian meter-gauge system and the northern and eastern Indian systems. These two things must really attract the immediate attention of the Railway authorities.

I think we must at least double our railway mileage in the coming 10 or 15 years, otherwise, we will be nowhere. I will just enumerate what the objects of our long range plan should be. It should be the aim of the 10 or 15 year plan, which we should begin to work from now to achieve the following objectives. Firstly we should link up the various isolated metre-gauge systems, secondly to extend the broad-gauge to the southernmost limit. Thirdly, the progressive electrification of the lines, so that within 10 years, electric trains run at least between the four main cities of the Indian Union, Madras, Calcutta, Delhi and Bombay. Fourthly the doubling of lines wherever there is too much congestion of traffic at present. Fifthly, the establishment of two more locomotive plants, one in Western India and another in the South, besides the one already contemplated. Sixthly remodelling of the railway carriages in such a way as to eliminate the present classification system and to have finally only two classes, namely, the lower class, having at least the present amenities of the inter-class and an upper class, with a little more convenience. Lastly rationalisation and standardization of wages, allowances and service conditions of the railway staff and railway labour with a view to evolve a contented staff and labour on whom the railway administration can always depend to make a success of all their plans and programmes.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I am very thankful to you for giving me an opportunity to speak after all. May I know, if I can speak in Assamese?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the honourable member want to hear only his own voice?

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha: I must congratulate the Honourable the Railway Minister and the Minister of State for presenting to us a Budget that is fair and sincere. We congratulate Mr. Santhanam for going into the Ministry from amongst us and trying to do good for the people, whom he represented while he was in these benches. It is a pleasure to see how he worked for the third-class passengers when he was here and I trust and believe he will strive to do his best for the good of the Railway and good of the people. His sincerity and his devoted attention to all matters concerning the people when he was on this side of the House was an example and inspiration and I am confident that he will now be able to improve the lot of the people whom he represents at present. It is not only a question of immediately improving the lot of the people. It is connected with the question of improving locomotives, improving coaches, improving wagons and also indirectly improving the lot of the workers and the staff. Now we find from the Budget and from other reports given to us that we have 1,290 disabled locomotives and we have not been able to repair them properly. The honourable Pandit Kunzru has given us a very good report which suggests that we should try the Belt System which was tried by the Crew Works of Midland and Scottish Railway Company of London in which the Engines are overhauled in six days. That system has been tried at Kharagpur with some success and it took 18 days in the pre-war days and now it takes about 30 days according to the report. We also find that in other railways it takes about 51 days for an engine to come out after overhauling. This is rather unfortunate. I think if we adopt the Belt System, more engines can be brought into the traffic. We find from the same report that about 60 B.G. engines and 15 M.G. engines can be brought into the lines, if we accept the Belt System. I trust the authorities will try that system—which I believe is under examination and if that system is successfully taken up, it will be a great source of help to the Railways.

Then as regards coaches, those need replacement is about 20 per cent and the workers are not working in the way same as before and it is said by the Ibeon Company which made a time-study of the workers at Jamalpur and some other places, they found that about 50 per cent of the workers' can be liberalised and it has been found also that about 2 hours of time being wasted by the workers and out of six hours the efficiency of the workers is only 40 per cent. So, if we can eliminate some of the workers, then the efficiency might increase and with stricter supervision, our workers will produce better repairs than what they have been doing. As regards coaches, the Railway Enquiry Committee has said that we should take up building more coaches, but in the meantime, as Mr. B. Das has pointed out we should adopt only partially wooden stocks as well and later on build all steel coaches and in this way there will be many more coaches for use of third-class passengers. It now depends on the experts to recommend if it can be used. It is said that when an accident happens, the wooden stocks get telescoped and therefore, they are not in favour of it, but in order to relieve the congestion of third-class passengers, I should like to suggest that they may try their hand in it. The B.B. and C.I. Railway has tried some of the wooden stocks; I suggest the same can be tried in other railways in order to relieve the congestion in the third class.

Coming to the surplus, I find it has been suggested by some that the entire surplus should be utilised for building coaches to relieve the sufferings of the third class passengers. We find that 4.7 crores have been taken to the general finances. It is not a great figure; but yet, I think it will be well if we take the entire surplus of nine crores for building coaches and to improve the amenities of the third class passengers. If we could draw up a plan for five years, about 45 crores or 50 crores will be available and I hope the Honourable the Railway Minister and Mr. Santhanam will take note of it and divert the entire surplus for the building of coaches. That is the only constructive way of doing things. Unless there is money and all the materials, the Ministry will not be able to do things; if a five year plan could be drawn up, I think much progress could be made.

[Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha]

Coming nearer to my province, we find that the railway link is going to be built within 1950. In the meantime, we are suffering for want of wagons for the transport of tea chests, textile goods, etc. This is a sort of a bottle-neck. The Government of Assam has been put in a rather awkward position; they have been abused for their inability to transport goods from Calcutta. I was told by the honourable Mr. Bardoloi that we have been found fault with for inability to transport goods from Calcutta. Textile goods are so much in want in Assam and we do not know where we will be in the next election. I think the Honourable the Railway Minister has got a proposal from the Government of Assam that the Garo Hills should be connected by rail. We find coal, cement, lime, petrol and kerosene in that area and if this area is connected by rail up to Dhubri in Assam, the Indian Union will be able to get sufficient petrol, kerosene, cement from here. The Railway Minister will do well to consider this proposal. It may be a distance of 50 miles or 100 miles. The distance to Dhubri is about 100 miles; the distance to Pandu may be a little more; I do not exactly know. It is absolutely necessary that this line should be constructed. My honourable friend Mr. Guha has already stated to Nordin Lakhimpur, about the Railway from Rangapura to that for meeting any emergency, for meeting the communist menace from Burma and other parts, it is up to us to have a railway connecting Rangapara and Sadiya. Unless we do this now, we will have to do it at a greater expense of men and money some time later. I would only say, you should take time by forelock and construct the railway from Rangapara to Sadiya, otherwise, the frontiers would be at a disadvantage and we will be in the same position as the British were when the war was on. Therefore, it is better that we take up the work in time.

There is another matter to which I should like to draw the attention of the House. The masses of Assam are imbued with the Gandhian ideology. They think that they should do their best to help the railway administration and to help production and to relieve suffering. I am sorry to find in the Assam Railway certain communistic elements which are trying to dislocate and disturb. They have extra territorial loyalty. You may know that some time back there were a threat to go on a lightning strike because a man was suspended for overstaying his leave. The drivers wanted to go on strike. The people said, we won't allow it; we will drive the engines. The loyalty of the low paid staff is doubtful. Therefore, unless you give a chance to the people imbued with the Gandhian ideology to do the work, I am afraid you will be in difficulty.

We have experienced congestion in the upper classes also in the Assam Railway. Nearly thirteen or fifteen people are seated in a first class compartment and in some cases, there are more.

There is another important matter to which I must draw your attention. In spite of all your representations, considerable difficulty is being experienced while passing through Pakistan. I would request you to change the timing at Calcutta. It is now one of the clock; it should be changed into seven or eight of the clock in the morning so that we reach Golakgunj about 10 o'clock where we could get more passenger bogies from the Indian Union Railway.

I find that 64 saloons are used by the officers. We do not find enough coaches for the upper classes. It is rather extraordinary that this should be so. I suggest they should be released for conversion as first and second class carriages. Formerly, I found only the Agent or the General Manager using the saloon; now, it is used by all officers. It is rather unusual for a distance of 1241 miles, there should be so many saloons for others.

There is another matter. About thirty lakhs of tea chests are today carried by the steamer companies and you are losing a revenue of three crores. I speak subject to correction. If only you could allot the necessary wagons you will be earning more and earning the gratitude of the tea industry, the gratitude of the people and also the gratitude of the Assam Government.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I am very deeply grateful to the House for the compliments they have showered upon me, compliments which, I think, were not by any means fully deserved. While compliments have been showered upon me for the manner in which I presented the facts or railway administration and finance, they have been tempered by a friendly criticism of the failings of which I must hold myself guilty. That is a matter about which I desire to make no complaint whatsoever. There was an attempt on the part of one honourable member to suggest that one section of the House paid me compliments while it reserved all the criticisms for my Minister of State. I may at once tell you that I am fully alive to the fact that whether it is credit or blame, we have to share it together. Let me say with reference to the particular matter in connection with which this remark was made that the entire blame of the thing—if blame attaches to the introduction of the reclassification of accommodation—is not to be heaped upon the heads of these two persons who happen to be responsible for the administration of railways today. I am afraid I cannot altogether absolve the House from blame for it.

And if I may, I would like to draw the attention of the House to another matter, and that is that we have elected and placed at the disposal of the Railway Ministry a Central Advisory Council whom we are supposed to consult on all important matters involving change of policy. This was a matter which was placed before them. I find that practically the entire set of members of the Central Advisory Council were present at the meeting at which the decision was taken. For instance, I find among those who did attend that meeting, my friend, Mr. Sidhva, Mr. Khandubhai Desai—who still supports the change—then we have Mr. Jaspat Roy Kapoor.....

Shri Jaspat Roy Kapoor: I opposed it then.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Does not appear so on the record. Then there were the Honourable Satyanaryan Sinha, Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri, whom I am sorry to miss here this afternoon Mr. Frank Anthony.....

Shri B. L. Sondhi: Probably they have gone wiser now!

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Mr. Ramnath Goenka—I hope he still supports this,— Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: It is time we replace them!

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: All these gentlemen were present at that meeting and the decision they took was in these terms:

“The Council.....”

Shri R. K. Sidhva: May I remind the honourable Minister.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister does not give way. There are very few minutes left.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: The resolution was:

“After some discussion during which the desirability of having only two classes in future was urged by some of the new members, it was generally agreed that Railways should plan for the provision of three classes when designing coaching stock for the post-war period. Air-conditioned Coaches should also be provided.....” and

And then:

“The basis of fares to be adopted for the three standard classes are Upper 24 pies, Inter 9 pies by Mail or Express and 7½ pies by other trains.....”

[Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar]

And in the interim period before the proper equipment is produced, it is suggested that temporary expedients should be adopted for making the present stock usable for these three classes.

On that basis the Railway Board went on to make these changes. No doubt, as I have said in my budget speech, it has evoked a lot of criticism. It is open to criticism from certain angles. But whether we should go back upon this decision now is a matter which you cannot decide on the basis of the experience we have up till now. We have to watch the thing for some time longer and if the system requires a change, it will be changed. But before it is changed, I hope I shall carry the House with me in ordering such changes as may be required.

That is only with regard to the reclassification of accommodation. But I did refer to the friendly criticism that was launched against what I have called in my budget speech, "railway performance" in special directions.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: May I make it clear that the objection of this House is not to the classification but to the lack of certain necessary amenities, for example, the lack of sleeping accommodation. It must not be understood that we are criticising the Railway Advisory Council's decision. We would support the recommendations of the Central Railway Advisory Council subject to this.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister has heard sufficient about this. He is now giving his explanation.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: With reference to the point of my honourable friend, I think I made it perfectly clear that even when that decision was taken it was anticipated that during the interim period, before we could provide all the amenities that were contemplated, a certain amount of inconvenience and discomfort was inevitable, and therefore we had to readjust such accommodation as existed for the purpose of carrying on the work while we went on with steps for the purpose of providing the amenities the honourable member has in view. As a matter of fact, all railway administration have been asked to provide sleeping accommodation and increasing sleeping accommodation as they get the rolling stock for such a purpose.

I was saying that it was friendly criticism of inadequate railway performance. That I have admitted already. As Mr. Anthony so eloquently pointed out, railways in this country are a big ocean and if you want to remedy all the defects that exist and produce a perfect system it cannot be done overnight. All that I want you to believe and appreciate is that those who are in charge of railways, not merely we two Ministers—that is a small matter—but those who actually run the show from the Railway Board down to the meanest railwayman, are anxious to give the best service that they can, and it is only by appreciating that in the proper way that we shall get more and more satisfactory work from them. That is why, while I quite appreciate the pointing out of all our failings, I should like a little more handsome recognition of the work that is being done by the permanent staff all over the country.

Seth Govind Das: May I interrupt? As far as amenities are concerned, has even a beginning been made so far as third class passengers are concerned?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: My honourable friend, Mr. Govind Das has referred to amenities. Perhaps I might take that up at once. It is a fact that the amenities which third class passengers now enjoy are very far below the mark.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There may be a cut motion on this matter.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I did not want to go into these details in this very general speech. I have told the House that I am going to institute an intensive drive to find out what amenities should be provided, and after getting them, fix a time limit within which to carry out those amenities. Therefore, I will ask the House to wait a little and see whether my performance will be acceptable to it, or more acceptable if I happen to be in my place next year.

So far as the financial portions of the Budget are concerned, I notice that there has been largely a lack of criticism and while I may take it that it means that the House is satisfied with the financial provisions, I must refer to one or two points which were raised in the course of the debate by one or two members. One was by the very first speaker, my honourable friend, Mr. B. Das. He took exception to my having provided for any increase in the appropriation to the depreciation fund. I do not know why he said that. I did not quite follow what reasons he gave for that opinion. I have given certain reasons why that addition was imperative at the present moment and I do not think he traversed those reasons in his speech.....

Shri B. Das: Not possible in the short time I had.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I hope I shall hear more about it in the course of the further debate.

Shri B. Das: What did your committee give?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: My committee? The Indian Railway Enquiry Committee actually recommended something by way of addition and my provision for increasing the appropriation to the depreciation fund falls substantially short of their recommendation. That is what I have to tell my honourable friend Mr. Das.

Shri B. Das: That I do not accept.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: There was one other point of a financial character which was raised. Certain honourable members and I was glad to find that they were a very small minority, objected altogether to any contribution from railway surplus to general revenue. They said not a single rupee—I believe one member said not a single pie—should be made over from the railways to the general finances. It was put to me that having a Finance Minister now who was a Minister for Railways before I took over, it should be easy for me to have resisted claims from general finances for an increased contribution. We in our respective places have to play our parts and it is no doubt true that during last year there was some controversy between the Finance Minister and the Railway Minister, there was a scramble for the surplus that was expected in the budget of the current year and that was set at rest by a committee of the House. But this year when I had to frame my budget and it was found that the surplus for the current year was about 60 per cent. above what had been anticipated and I was going to get another surplus next year, which was as good as the surplus for last year, if not slightly more, I put myself in touch with the Finance Minister. With all my enthusiasm for holding my end of the rope, with all Dr. Matthai's experience as Railway Minister now holding the charge of finance, it was not possible for the two of us to agree that there should be no contribution from railways to general revenues. On the other hand, we looked at each other's point of view and come to the conclusion that the proper way of dividing the surplus was the way in which it has been done in this budget.

[Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar]

There is one minor point to which I would like to make reference with reference to Mr. Das's speech. He challenged me to come forward before the House with a request that it should sanction the appropriation to the Depreciation Fund. I accept that challenge. Not only do I accept it now but I have already in anticipation accepted it, because you will find among the demands a demand for appropriation to the Depreciation Fund. I should welcome Mr. Das to raise a debate on that and I should be quite glad to abide by the decision of the House.

I do not know that you would like me to traverse the wealth of points that have been covered in the course of the speeches of honourable members, during this debate for two days. Many of them have been met by my honourable colleague and I should not like to cover any ground that he has already covered. But I should like to refer to one or two points. One is a point that my honourable friend Begum Aizaz Rasul made the other day. She very rightly pressed the need for an inter-dominion through railway connection between West Pakistan and India. She naturally pointed out the great advantages that would result from such a through link being reformed or revived. I entirely appreciate the reasons behind this suggestion of hers. I know that a prominent newspaper here is beating up a great deal of support for this view. On behalf of Government I wish to say that our fullest sympathy is with the restoration of this link at the earliest possible moment. There is no difficulty from the railways point of view in reviving this connection. The main reason is one of a political or law and order nature. If we can induce in the people who are likely to take advantage of this through connection on either side the feeling that their travelling will be perfectly safe and secure and that a man who goes from one dominion to the other for temporary purposes will get back to his own Dominion (the dominion of his adoption, it may be), then the conditions would have been created for the railways stepping in and producing the trains which would implement this policy. That is what we are looking out for and the moment we are satisfied, the moment the Pakistan Government are satisfied that this kind of link could be done in both dominions without any detriment to the law and order position, without any risk of upsetting things which have calmed down already, then we shall be in a position to do that. I only wish to assure the honourable lady that that is the present attitude of the Government.

There is one point about which I should like to say something and that is about our policy regarding labour. I was very happy to hear the speeches of Mr. Hariharnath Sastri and Mr. Khandubhai Desai. Those speeches made it perfectly clear that so far as their organisations were concerned in their dealings with labour, they have not and would not introduce anything like politics. They would be conducted on purely trade union lines. I have also to tell the House that the other organisation which perhaps has been connected with the railway administration for a larger number of years and which counts the largest number of members amongst railway men, that also happily has taken the same view. Mr. Jai Prakash Narain has made it perfectly clear to everybody that he does not favour trade unions being exploited for political purposes and the best evidence that you can have that he means what he says is the manner in which he had the courage to disaffiliate those railway unions which were dominated by a political party which is out to subvert order and create chaos in the country. That being so I have now amongst railwaymen representatives of these two organisations united in their view that labour is not to be exploited for political purposes. I can only express the hope which I did in a guarded way in my Budget speech that it might be possible that people who agree on fundamentals to that large extent might come together and have a united organisation for railway labour with whom Government can deal with perfect confidence in trying to remove all the grievances of railwaymen all over the country. I put it forward as an appeal from a responsible man who finds that that is the only way of solving labour troubles in this country. While I find there is an inclination on the part of my two friends here, there is also an indication in the speech of the President of the All-India Railwaymen's Federation to the same effect and it should not be impossible for them to come together and help the Railway Ministry and the Railway Board in their dealings with labour.

I have noted a good many points of the various speeches, but I do not think it is necessary for me to go into them all at this late hour and I should like, even if trains on the railways do not arrive or depart in time, that the House at least should rise in time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House now stands adjourned till tomorrow.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: On a point of personal explanation, Sir. My name was mentioned.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No. The House stands adjourned till 10-45 A.M. tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 22nd February, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS).

Tuesday, 22nd February, 1949.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Speaker (The Honourable Mr. G. V. Mavalankar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-50 A.M.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SALARY (EXEMPTION FROM TAXATION) BILL

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State) (on behalf of the Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for exempting the reduced salary of the Governor-General from taxes on income.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide for exempting the reduced salary of the Governor-General from taxes on income."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

DOCK WORKERS (REGULATION OF EMPLOYMENT) AMENDMENT BILL

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram (Minister of Labour): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Act, 1948.

Mr. Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to amend the Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Act, 1948."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

RAILWAY BUDGET—LIST OF DEMANDS

SECOND STAGE

Mr. Speaker: The House will now discuss the Demands for Grants in respect of Railways. I understand that a list showing the agreed Cut Motions which will be moved has been circulated to honourable members.

Mr. Frank Anthony (C. P. and Berar: General): Sir, may I know whether the discussion will be confined to the four cut motions which have been approved of by the Chief Whip or will other members be allowed to move their cut motions. I notice that all the four cut motions are in the names of Congress members and motions given notice of by non-Congress members have been shut out. This is a procedure which has never been adopted during the past eight years.

Mr. Speaker: Has the honourable Member himself given notice of any cut motions?

Mr. Frank Anthony: I have but every one of them has been shut out. I notice that there is not one approved cut motion with regard to railway labour which is to be moved from the side of the Congress Party.

Mr. Speaker: The procedure that we have been adopting is this. It is through the Chief Whip that all the parties of the House meet together and come to a certain agreement as to what motions they want to move and what they do not want to move. So it is an agreed arrangement and it is really a matter between the Chief Whip and the honourable members of the House. I do not think I shall be called upon to pronounce any opinion or adjudicate upon the merits or otherwise of an agreement arrived at between the parties here.

Mr. Frank Anthony: Does that mean, Sir, that the previous democratic practice would be departed from and no one except a Congressman can move a cut motion?

Mr. Speaker: So far as the Chair is concerned, it will allow every member who wishes to move a cut motion to move it. It is not the concern of the Chair to see that a particular motion is moved or not. It is for the members to come to an agreement if they so like and if an agreement has been come to and if it has been accepted by all as an agreement, then of course, the Chair may help in enforcing the agreement. The honourable member has every right to move any motion he likes.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Is not any duty laid upon the Government Chief Whip to consult all members who have tabled cut motions before an agreement is arrived at?

Mr. Speaker: That would be going into another question, namely the functions of the Chief Whip. It is a matter which honourable members should adjust among themselves: it is not the concern of the Chair at all. So it appears then, that there does not seem to be quite an agreement with regard to the motions to be moved?

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State): Sir, I consulted the organised parties in the House. I consulted individual members also. All of them told me, except Mr. Anthony, that they would like these four cut motions to be discussed which I had proposed to them. None of them objected to that yesterday. But I must tell you, Sir, that there is no organised party as such in the House; but I have consulted most of the members, including the non-Congress members of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Let us not take up the time of the House in this discussion.

We shall proceed with the business, but I might tell the House that whosoever wants to move a cut motion may do so but those who want to move them might have consultations with the Chief Whip and see if they can come to some agreement.

As regards the time-limit for speeches the usual practice has been to fix a limit of 15 minutes for all speakers including movers of the Cut motions and 20 minutes for the honourable Ministers replying. I trust this suit honourable members.

DEMAND NO. 1—RAILWAY BOARD.

Mr. Speaker: Motion is:

"That a sum not exceeding Rs. 32,58,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of the 'Railway Board'."

General Corruption on Railways

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): Sir, I move:

"That the demand under the head 'Railway Board' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Sir, corruption like man power is a problem which is perennially with us. It is a very difficult and painful task to talk about it, as it would be clearly doing injustice to a considerable body of honest public servants. But, Sir, not to talk about it would be unwise when we find a general slakening in the morale and efficiency of workers and also a gradual deterioration in the standards of civic morality. There has been a great deal of talk about it. Bribery and corruption are rampant. The Government of India has stirred itself off and on to do something to eradicate this evil and I need not detail all the Acts passed from time to time and also the various tribunals set up under these Acts to deal with these cases with special powers from time to time, and thus tackle this evil.

[At this stage Mr. Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar).]

The relevant law of the land in this regard is the Anti-Corruption Act though that is a belated legislation which has come in the year 1947. It has very stringent provisions but the powers are very inadequately used by the courts of law or the tribunals which are called upon to deal with these cases. So I think there is some truth in saying that they remain to a large extent paper laws. Let us examine the cases of corruption arising on railways. We are told that there is a special police establishment working under the Home Ministry to deal with cases of corruption on railways. We note from the figures of the cases handled by the special police establishment from time to time that it is only a fourth or fifth of the total number of cases taken to courts of law that have resulted in convictions, the rest resulting in acquittals. We are given an explanation that evidence is not forthcoming sufficiently to justify a conviction. The Honourable the Railway Minister in his speech last year appealed to the public for their co-operation in making evidence and information available to deal with the cases of corruption effectively. I consider that it is a very difficult task which the public are asked to perform because many sections of the public like businessmen or the staff of the various Departments of Government would not themselves volunteer information unless they are assured that the information passed on by them to the authorities concerned would be kept confidential and that the matter would be looked into and some speedy action taken on the basis of that information. If only this assurance is given by the honourable Minister I am sure the public would be quite willing to make information available for enabling the authorities concerned to deal speedily and also effectively with these cases.

I need not take the time of the House in discussing the various departments of railway administration where we see this evil being practised very much. One of them is wagon traffic and corruption is considerably visible in regard to wagon traffic. The methods of the railway staff in dealing with the public in regard to this are to some extent deplorable. It is said that wagons are not easily made available for goods traffic and the public have got to resort to many kinds of practices to secure priorities. And this evil is practised at every stage of this goods traffic. Even if it is assumed that the wagons are secured they do not reach their destination in time, and even when they have reached their destination are not traceable before some months have elapsed. That is the position. At all these stages the parties concerned are put to numerous difficulties and they have got to do many things, which they ought not to do, in securing the object with which they book the wagons. A high standard of work is expected here and the position could be remedied by strong supervision and also by stringent departmental action. The officials could deal with these matters very severely if only they have got a mind to do it have the intention to check these practices. But I see that the efforts of the officials in this regard are to some extent half-hearted.

[Shrimati G. Durgabai]

There is another place where this evil of corruption is quite rampant and that is the workshop. The position there has very much deteriorated. It is said that there is a surplus of working staff considering the quantum of work. But there is delay in effecting repairs and the output of the work is quite insufficient and also inefficient. A lot of material is wasted and the material is not put to use for the purpose for which it is intended. Here the authorities in charge of supervision could be a little more alert, and if proper attention is paid the position could be very greatly improved. The supervising staff may be men of honesty and integrity and if only they are empowered to deal with the minor offences occurring in the workshop from time to time in an effective manner things would improve. A strict watch and a little more severe action would improve matters here.

There is yet another place where this evil is very much practised and that is the booking office. It is really painful to talk about our own men but when we see this evil practised to a considerable extent we have to bring it to the notice of Government with a view to check it. I am told that a regular rate ranging from one anna to four annas is charged before a parcel is booked. In the goods booking offices regular monthly rates are fixed and all the moneys that are being taken either by way of illegal gratification or consideration are pooled in one centre and divided between the staff engaged on this work, from the highest to the lowest. This position also could be very much improved if only there is a section of intelligent and honest working staff with some stringent powers of supervision.

There is another matter which requires attention. We are told there is black-marketing in tickets. It is an open secret that ticket checkers and examiners take a considerable amount of gratification from persons for allowing them to get out or to get into trains. The ticket collectors at big junctions, I am told, make enormous sums of money. Here I suggest that surprise checks by inspecting officials and a little bit closer scrutiny of the applications for refunds of unused tickets, and also measures for the prosecutions of persons who are engaged in black-marketing of tickets, could improve the situation.

A word with regard to the selection of candidates. I need not say much about this because it is very much talked of in this House. The personnel of the Commissions who are charged with the task of recruiting people may be selected after a severe test. They must be men of honesty and integrity. I am told that a lot of favouritism is shown here. They may be given strict instructions to confine themselves entirely to the rules laid down for selection and not be influenced by any personal considerations. Having said this I would like to say that my task is made very much easier because the honourable the Railway Minister has already stated, and it is gratifying to note from his speech, that the anti-corruption drive will be conducted with the maximum of intensity hereafter and that this problem is engaging his serious attention. He has also given an indication of the various details of the scheme submitted by the Railway Board to effectively carry out this drive. Sir, I hope that they will not remain mere paper schemes but that they will be given effect to and that they will continue to engage the serious attention of the honourable Minister and also the honourable Minister of State for Railways who is there to assist him.

In addition to what the Railway Board has done and in addition to what the honourable Minister proposes to do to effectively carry out this drive, I would make a suggestion that it would be better if the Railways have their own intelligence department attached to the Railways to detect and prevent crime sufficiently in time in order to enable them to take speedy action.

Also, I feel that it would be better if some kind of ad hoc committees were associated with the task of investigating the crimes as and when they arise; they need not be courts of law. As and when a person makes an application or gives information, these committees should go into the matter, and also assist the courts of law if need be.

In the workshops also, a lot of improvement could be effected. We should not hesitate to give the maximum extent of deterrent punishment if a serious case comes to the attention of the Minister or the authorities concerned. Even the penalty of withholding increments and promotions, including stoppage at the efficiency bar, and such other improvements which the honourable Pandit Kunzru has suggested here and in his report, may also be given effect to and adopted.

Above all, the ultimate sanction in a democratic community, against corruption and evil is information and public discussion. The honourable the Railway Minister, in his last year's speech, had already said this; he had drawn our attention to how the public could co-operate in this matter. I remember him to have said that there cannot be any corruption unless there are two parties. Therefore, I feel that it is not only the railwaymen—to a small extent it may be the railwaymen—but also the public who are concerned, who should be very alert and sincerely make an effort to promote the standards of civic morality and contribute to discipline of the general public.

One more word and I have done. It is about the publication of administration reports. I do not know whether they are ever published or if they are, whether they are not out of date. The Government or their servants who have to deal with these matters would not be tempted to behave in a shabby manner if most of what they do is, in some form or another, open to public discussion. Therefore, I appeal to the Honourable Minister to see that something is done in this regard also.

I have already spoken on corruption. I have not more to say about it because, as I have already said, it is a very painful task to discuss it in detail, bringing to the notice of the House the various mean methods adopted in practising this evil; it would also be doing a clear injustice to a very considerable body of honest public servants. Therefore, I hope that the suggestions which I have made and the points that I have been able to bring to the notice of the Honourable the Railway Minister would be taken into consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Cut motion moved:

"That the demand under the head 'Railway Board' be reduced by Rs. 100."

جناب ڈپٹی سپیکر صاحب! مجھے اس بات کی خوشی ہے کہ پچھلے دنوں آنریبل ریواؤے منسٹر صاحب نے ایک تقریر broadcast کرتے ہوئے خود مانا ہے کہ ریواؤے میں corruption بہت عام ہو گئی آنکے الفاظ یہ تھے۔

“acceptance of illegal gratification are almost a tradition, deep sorted and of many decades standing”

ایک طرف اس بارے میں وہ یہ رائے رکھتے ہیں دوسری طرف انہوں نے اس سلسلہ میں سال بھر کی کارگزاری کی جو رپورٹ دی ہے اس میں بتایا ہے کہ

“of the total of 837 investigated cases, 389 were sent for trial to courts or tribunals. 282 persons were convicted and 188 acquitted.”

بہن درگا بائی نے بتایا ہے کہ کس کس طریق پر رشوت لی جاتی ہے اور کتنی دور تک پہنچتی ہے۔ میں یہ نہیں کہتا کہ ریواؤے کے سب اہم بالا اس میں شامل ہیں میں یہ جانتا ہوں کہ اسیں اکثر اسے روکنے کی کوشش کرتے ہیں لیکن جو facts اس بارے میں بہن درگا بائی نے پیش کئے ہیں انہیں بھی نظر انداز نہیں کیا جاسکتا۔

جو حکم رشوت خوری کو بند کرنے کی کوشش کرتے ہیں میں اُنکی قدر کرتا ہوں اور اُنکو مبارکباد دیتا ہوں لیکن پھر بھی یہ ماننا پڑیگا کہ یہ بیماری کم نہیں ہوئی

بلکہ بہت بڑھ گئی ہے تجربہ یہ بتاتا ہے کہ جتنے کنٹرول میں آتے جاتے ہیں اُنکی ہی corruption بڑھتی جاتی ہے۔

یہ سب کچھ آج دہلی کے انڈر وزیر صاحب کے سامنے ہو رہا ہے اور اس کیس کی تفصیلات میرے پاس موجود ہے۔

جناب قیومی سپیکر! میں اور زیادہ مثالیں دیکر ہاؤس کا اور وقت نہ لیتا ہوا دو ایک تجارتی اس سلسلے میں پیش کرنا چاہتا ہوں اور وہ یہ ہیں کہ جو Priorities Issue کیجاتی ہیں ان کی ہفتہ واری رپورٹ آنریبل منسٹر صاحب کے پاس آئی چاہیئے۔ اور یہ معاملہ ہونا چاہیئے کہ جو Priorities Issue کی گئی ہیں ان میں سے کتنی Honour کی گئی ہیں۔ میں اپنے دفتر ہی مثال دے سکتا ہوں کہ تقریباً ایک سال سے ایک Priority بمبئی جاتی ہے اور اس پر وہاں سے ریگن نہیں ملتا۔ انکو بار بار لکھا گیا۔ لیکن وہاں سے یہ جواب آیا کہ ایسی ایسی Priority یہاں ہزاروں پڑی ہوئی ہیں۔ جو Priorities Issue کیجائی ہے اس کا مطالبہ یہ ہے کہ وہ فوراً کام ہو لیکن اس سے پتہ چلتا ہے کہ اس کی تہ میں کوئی اور ایجنسی ہے۔ تو میں عرض کروں گا کہ اگر یہ Priorities System رکھنا ہے تو اس پر یہ کنٹرول ہونا چاہیئے کہ جو Priorities 15 دن میں Issue ہوئی ہیں اس میں سے کتنی Honour ہوئی ہیں جب تک اتنا زیادہ کنٹرول اس پر نہ ہوگا یہ اسی طرح سے چلتی رہیگی۔

اسکے علاوہ Complaints کا جہاں تک تعلق ہے میں عرض کروں گا کہ Complaints ہوتی ہیں جیسا کہ میں نے بتایا کہ چار چار مہینے کی Complaints پڑی ہوئی

حکام سے پوچھا گیا تو جواب میں ایک ڈیڑھ مہینے کے بعد لکھا گیا کہ یہ معاملہ G.I.P. کو Refer کیا گیا ہے۔ اس کے بعد ریلوے والوں سے پھر پوچھا گیا کہ وہ مال اب بھی روانہ کیا گیا ہے یا نہیں لیکن فروری تک کوئی جواب نہیں ملا کیا اس پر چراغ تلے اندھیرا کی مثال صادق نہیں آتی چار ماہ تک یہ مال نیو دہلی اسٹیشن پر پڑا رہا حالانکہ یہ مال گورنمنٹ نے خرید کیا تھا۔ اس کا RR بھی بن گیا تھا معاملہ ہوتا ہے ریگن کسی دوسرے کو allot کر دی گئی اور وہ مال وہاں پر ہی پڑا رہا اس کے متعلق آنریبل ریلوے منسٹر خود تحقیقات کر سکتے ہیں۔ جناب قیومی سپیکر! اس کے علاوہ اس قسم کی اور بہت سی مثالیں ہیں جو کہ اس بارے میں پیش کی جا سکتی ہیں۔

جہاں تک دہلی سے مال باہر بھیجنے کا سوال ہے۔ نئی دہلی اسٹیشن پر ایک مہینے سے زیادہ سے بہت سا مال پڑا ہوا ہے۔ حالانکہ اس مال کا چالان بن چکا تھا اب بھی اس کی طرف کوئی غور نہیں کرتا یہ مال بدستور پڑا ہوا ہے مال میں Mustard Oil For Bombay, Cotton Waste For Bombay شامل ہیں ابھی تک ریگن allot نہیں ہوئیں۔ اس کے متعلق بھی جناب منسٹر صاحب Enquiry کر سکتے ہیں ظاہر ہے کہ جب تک کسی ریلوے ملازم کی ہتھلی گرم نہ کیجائے! غالباً اس وقت تک اس مال کے لئے ریگن allot نہیں ہونگی اور یہ مال وہاں ہی پڑا رہیگا۔

جناب قیومی سپیکر! Corruption کے ایک اور دلچسپ کیس کا منجھ پتہ ہے وہ یہ کہ مراد آباد کے ایک Goods clerk نے ایک بیرونی کو تین بوری نمک منسٹر میں اندراج کرنے کے بغیر دے دیا دوسرے Goods clerk نے جس کے دل پر شاید آنریبل ریلوے منسٹر کے 'Broadcast' کا کچھ اثر ہوا تھا رپورٹ کی کہ اس کلرک نے تین بوری نمک بغیر اندراج کے دوکاندار کو دی ہیں۔ اس نے اس کیس کے بارے میں مزید لکھا پڑھی کی۔ اور جب اوپر سے جواب طلبی ہوئی اور Chief Goods clerk سے باز پرس کی گئی تو پھر اس کے کہ تحقیقات ہو سکے نہ صرف اسے hush up کر دیا گیا بلکہ جس کلرک نے یہ رپورٹ کی تھی اور اس کیس کو Pursue کیا تھا اس غریب کو وہاں سے Transfer کر دیا گیا جس کا نتیجہ یہ ہوا کہ اس نے استعفیٰ داخل کر دیا۔ مگر اس کا Resignation منظور نہ کر کے اسے بہت تنگ کیا گیا اور بالآخر غالباً اس کی برخاستگی کی نوبت آئی یہ کیس آنریبل منسٹر کی نوٹس میں لایا جا چکا ہے یہ ایک بہت ہی اہم اور ضروری کیس ہے۔ جس غریب نے اس کیس کو اتنے دن تک Pursue کیا اس کو بعد میں نقصان اٹھانا پڑا اور جس نے نمک کی بوریاں دی تھیں اس کو کسی نے نہیں پوچھا۔

ہیں اور اسکے آرپر کیا ایکشن لیا گیا۔ اس کی جب تک انالسیز نہ ہوگی کہ کتنی Complaints ہوئی ہیں اس وقت تک اس سے کوئی نتیجہ نہیں نکل سکتا۔

ایک چیز میں عرض کرنا چاہتا ہوں کہ Anti Corruption Measure کیلئے اس سے بہت فائدہ ہو سکتا ہے کہ ریپوے کے Goods Clerk جو کہ ریٹائرڈ آدمی ہوں ان کا کراپیشن آپ Invite کریں اور وہ لوگ آپکو Unemployed List پر بہت مل جائیں گے اور اس طرح آپر کا ہزاروں روپیہ بچ سکتا ہے۔ جناب صدر میرا یہ یقین ہے کہ ہزاروں من مال ہے لیکن ریپوے والوں سے ماہر ۶۰۰ من کن باقی بنا دی جائے گی ایسی ہی کئی چیزیں ہیں جن کا اندازہ نہیں ہو سکتا۔

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): What the honourable Shrimati Durgabai said in the course of her speech has rendered my task lighter. You might remember that on the last occasion too when I took part in the debate on this subject I placed before the House a few instances of corruption. Today again I wish to cite some instances.

It is generally alleged on behalf of the Administration, and it is even correct to a great extent, that until the public co-operates in this matter it is extremely difficult to uproot this evil. But, I wish to say that the state of affairs in certain places is such that, even when co-operation by the public is forthcoming, that amount of effort is not made to check corruption as one might desire.

It pleases me that the other day while broadcasting a speech the Honourable the Railway Minister himself conceded that corruption in the Railways had become wide-spread. His words were: "Acceptance of illegal gratification is almost a tradition, deep-rooted and of many decades standing." While, on the one hand, this is the opinion that he holds on this subject he has, on the other hand, stated in the course of the annual report that of the total of 837 investigated cases, 389 were sent up for trial to courts or tribunals and that 282 persons were convicted and 188 acquitted.

He has also expressed his satisfaction over this achievement. There is no doubt that keeping in view the previous state of affairs it can be said that there has been some improvement in this behalf and that the special police have done something after all. But, on the one hand, we see that this evil is so aggravated that the Honourable Minister for Railways himself says that acceptance of illegal gratification has become a tradition and that its roots are very deep, while on the other hand, the position is such that in the course of a year the special police have been able to secure convictions in 282 cases only. Does this not show clearly that the problem has not been given the amount of attention that was called for? When we see that a quarter less than nine 'akh, persons are employed in the Railways who have been brought up in an atmosphere of corruption the detection by the special police of just 282 cases during a whole year is not the kind of achievement that one might pride in. Nor is it something over which the Honourable Minister for Railways could be congratulated. In my opinion the special police that has been appointed by the Home Department on behalf of the Central Government has a better record of work to show for the year. Hence, I feel that greater attention is required to be paid to this side on the part of the Honourable Minister for Railways. The truth is that where the guard turns thief (the fence feeds upon the field) the field cannot be protected. Those people who are assigned the duty of detecting corruption instead of getting at it and finding out what things are happening at what places themselves turn abettors in that behalf and, in this way, instead of detecting corruption, intensify it.

Sister Durgabai has described the modus operandi used in the receiving of illegal gratification and also how far it reaches. I do not say that all the high officers of the Railways are a party to the game. I know that most of them make efforts to check it but the facts that have been adduced in this connection by Sister Durgabai can also not be overlooked. I esteem those officers who make efforts to eradicate corruption and I should felicitate them, yet it must be admitted that the evil has not abated but rather become aggravated. Experience has shown that with the appointment of more control-men there is a corresponding increase in corruption.

I am going to cite before the House, in this connection, a few instances which have come to my notice. They would reveal what things are happening even in a place like Delhi, before the very eyes of the Honourable Minister, proving the truth of the saying, the nearer the church the farther from God, and show what amount of corruption still prevails even at this place.

Recently I had a chance to attend a meeting of the Advisory Committee for the East Punjab Railway. There, on my questioning it was admitted that a consignment of about 500 bags which had been booked for the Old Delhi Station went to the New Delhi Station by mistake, that the consignee made an application that his consignment which had been booked for the Old Delhi Railway Station had gone over to New Delhi and was lying there and that he might be given delivery thereof there. It was further revealed that the Old Delhi Goods Clerk wrote down that the consignment might be delivered there but the New Delhi staff refused to do so, and that it took one month to get that consignment from New Delhi to Old Delhi. All this is happening today in Delhi before the very eyes of the Honourable Minister. The details of this case are forthcoming with me.

There is also something more that is going on in Delhi these days. If there is a large influx of any category of goods from Bombay or Calcutta some firms even manage, in collusion with the railway people, that the delivery of those goods be not made early, with the result that goods do not come into the market and they succeed in selling their own stock at high prices. All this is happening before the eyes of the Honourable Minister and he is not even aware of it.

I want to bring yet another incident to your notice. This is a very interesting case. A wagon was booked by the Delhi Cloth Mills for carriage of 800 tents. The goods were to be consigned to the Telegraph Stores, Jubbulpore. A railway receipt was also issued in respect thereof which bore the number: RR 5939/69, dated the 20th August 1948. Just consider, this wagon was booked in November but the Delhi Cloth Mills received a letter from Jubbulpore about a month later saying that they had not received the goods and that an enquiry might be made in that behalf. Accordingly correspondence was had about it which revealed in January that the goods had not reached Jubbulpore yet. One day, by chance, their representative happened to visit the New Delhi Station. He was amazed to find that the goods were lying there still, although a wagon had been booked for them two months back and R.R. had also been issued. When an enquiry was made from the officers the reply came after a month or a month and a half that the matter had been referred to the G.I.P. After that a further enquiry was made from the Railway people whether or not the goods had been despatched yet, but no reply was received up till February. Is it not a case for the apt application of the saying, 'the nearer the church the farther from heaven'? For four months the goods lay at the New Delhi Station although they had been purchased by the Government and the RR had also been issued. It appears the wagons were allotted to someone else and the goods remained where they were. The Honourable Minister might himself make an enquiry in this behalf.

There are a number of other instances of that kind which could be cited in this connection. In so far as it relates to the despatch of goods out of Delhi there is a considerable quantity of goods lying at the New Delhi Station although the chalan in respect of these goods has already been prepared. Nobody pays any attention to them even now and these goods are still lying as before. These goods include mustard oil for Bombay, cotton waste for Bombay, etc., etc. Wagons have not been allotted yet. The Honourable Minister can make an enquiry in that behalf too. It is apparent that until they grease the palm of some Railway employee wagons would not be allotted for these goods and the goods would remain lying where they are.

There is yet another interesting case of corruption that I know of. It is like this. A goods clerk of Moradabad handed over three bags of salt to a trader without entering them in the register. The other goods clerk, upon whose mind possibly the broadcast of the Honourable Minister for Railways had made some impression, made a report that that clerk had handed over three bags of salt to the shopkeeper without making an entry in respect of them. He also conducted further correspondence in connection with this case. When, however, an explanation was called from above and the Chief Goods Clerk was interrogated, not only was the matter hushed up, before an enquiry could be held, but the poor clerk who had made that report and pursued the case was transferred from there. This resulted in his submitting his resignation. His resignation, however, was not accepted and he was very much harassed, and, in the end, probably, the matter 'ed up to his dismissal. This case has already been brought to the notice of the Honourable Minister. This is a very important and serious case. The same poor fellow who pursued this case for so many days had ultimately to come to grief, while nobody questioned the one who had given over the salt bags.

What I mean to convey is this that if we were to feel happy today to think that corruption has disappeared it would be a great mistake. The truth is that today corruption has not gone down but has rather grown much worse than before. Whereas the Government of India gained great prestige by its police action in Hyderabad, by sending troops in time to Kashmir as also by securing the merger of so many States in the Indian Union, it is now, to the same extent, falling in the esteem of the public and the only cause of this is that ever since the National Government has taken over the reins of authority corruption is on the increase. I think if the Honourable Minister for Railways were to devote attention to this side and prepare a scheme for the eradication of corruption, which should, of course, not be merely a paper scheme, he would not only be preventing loss to the Railways but also render immense service to the National Government as a whole, because the efficiency of the Railways will be regarded as the efficiency of the Government as a whole. Hence, I should like the Honourable Minister for Railways not to look at it simply from the standpoint of profit and loss to the Railways but from the point of view of the country as a whole, for, in that case, he could achieve a stupendous object.

There is yet another avenue for corruption thriving in Delhi and possibly this too may be an all India affair. For small parcels wagons are allotted to some brokers who book goods for them. The Babus receive money from these brokers. The brokers, whenever they so wish, give priority in despatch to certain goods or delay the despatch of others. This fact can be verified from any commercial firm.

Not taking any more time of the House by citing further instances, I wish to offer one or two suggestions in this behalf and here they are. A weekly report should be received by the Honourable Minister in respect of the priorities that are issued and it should also be shown how many priorities out of those issued have been honoured. I could cite the instance of my own office. It is about a year since a priority was sent to Bombay but no wagon could be secured on the basis of it from there. They were written to time and again but the reply came that priorities of that kind were lying there in thousands. When priorities are issued this implies that the job is to be attended to promptly. This indicates, however, that there is some other agency working at the bottom. Hence, I would submit that if this system of priorities is to be retained it should be subject to such control as might disclose how many of the priorities issued in 15 days' time have been honoured. Until that much control is exercised in this behalf things would go on like that.

Besides, as regards complaints, I would submit that complaints are made. Just as I have stated complaints as old as four months just remain lying and then what is the action taken. Unless an analysis is made as to how many complaints were filed in all no proper conclusion can be drawn.

There is one submission that I wish to make. Much benefit can be derived for purposes of any anti-corruption measure by inviting the co-operation of retired goods clerks of the Railway and you will find plenty of such people on the unemployed list. In this way you can save thousands of rupees.

It is my belief that it happens that although goods come up to thousands of maunds in weight, a railway receipt for 700 maunds only is prepared through the collusion of the Railway people. There are numerous such cases which cannot be fully appraised.

In addition to the above, I wish to make another suggestion for the eradication of corruption. In so far as it relates to wagons the regions should be so managed that those which move a large number of wagons should be awarded prizes. It is not imperative that we should carry on the administration with the whip in hand. You could remove corruption by commendation of (deserving) persons. I feel that it would prove to be such a wholesome method that people would become helpful thereby and it would yield great benefit.

चौधरी रनवीर सिंह : सभापति जी, मैं गुप्ता जी के ऐतराज को नहीं मानता कि जब से हमारी सेंट्रल सरकार आई है, उसके बाद से करप्शन बढ़ा हुआ है। मैं आम तौर से थर्ड क्लास की बोगी में ट्रेवल करता हूँ और आम तौर पर लोगों की रोज़ाना की ज़िन्दगी से मेरा वास्ता रहता है। मैं तो यह मानता हूँ कि करप्शन भी घटा है और रिस्क लेने वालों

में क्वाराहट भी बड़ी है, लेकिन इस के बावजूद हम यह नहीं कह सकते कि हमारे जो नतीजे हैं उनसे लोगों में शान्ति हुई है या लोग यह समझते हैं कि इसमें कोई सुधार हुआ है। जैसे जमाना बदला है उसी के मुताबिक हमारे जो गवर्नमेंट सर्वेयर्स हैं वह भी बदले हैं और उन्होंने करप्शन करने के नये नये तरीके निकाले हैं। मैं आपको एक मिसाल बताना चाहता हूँ। चन्द्र दिन हुए हमारे आनरेबिल मेम्बर लाला अचिन्तराम जी दिल्ली से जलन्धर को जा रहे थे। लुधियाने में पहले एक सिख जेंटिलमैन, जो न जाने टिकट कलक्टर था या चेकर, गड्डे में दाखिल हुआ। वहाँ कुछ भाइयों से उसकी टिकट के बारेमें बातचीत हुई जिन्होंने कहा कि अगर हम इस गाडी में इस टिकट से ट्रेवल नहीं कर सकते हैं तो हमारा डिफरेंस ले लीजिये। डिफरेंस लेने के लिए वह सिख नहीं रहता। उन्नी बक्कत पता नहीं कहाँ से एक दूसरा हिन्दू आ जाता है। शायद उसे ही यह अथारिटी हो कि वह डिफरेंस ले सकता हो। वह आ जाता है और डिफरेंस ले जाता है उसके बाद उसने दो एक पैसिजर्स को और छोड़ा। उनमें से एक ने कहा कि मैं आपके साथ चलता हूँ। इस पर वह हिन्दू फौरन गायब हो जाता है और वह सिख उससे दो या तीन रुपये ले करके छोड़ देता है। वह आदमी उनके गड्डे में आता है और लाला जी के पूछने पर बताया कि सिख बाबू ने उसे रुपाया लेकर छोड़ दिया है। उन्होंने के० सन्थानम साहव के नाम चिट्ठी डाली, मगर कई महीने गुजर गये पर आज तक उस चिट्ठी का एक्नालिजमेंट भी नहीं मिला। एक तरफ तो यह है कि जिस आदमी को उन्होंने पकड़ा था उसके करीबी भाई उनके मकान पर आये और कहने लगे कि आप इसको छोड़ दीजिये, दूसरी तरफ मिनिस्टर साहव की तरफ से एक्नालिजमेंट तक नहीं आया। डिपार्टमेंट की तरफ से चिट्ठी आई कि हमें पता नहीं लगता है। आप आइये और उस आदमी को शनाख्त कीजिये। आप अन्दाज़ा लगा सकते हैं कि शनाख्त करना कितना मुश्किल है। इतने आदमी एक साथ ट्रेन में ट्रेवल करते हैं। टी० टी० ई० भी आते हैं। नयी नयी वर्दी पहन कर आते हैं। उनको पहचानना कितना मुश्किल है। लालाजी ने उस मुसाफिर से वह रसीद भी ले ली थी जिस पर सिख के पीछे आने वाले हिन्दू आदमियों के दस्तखत मौजूद हैं। इससे पता लगाया जा सकता है कि वह कौन आदमी है। यह सच है कि जिस हिन्दू ने दस्तखत किये उसी की मर्जी से करप्शन चलता था और वह सिख जिसने दो तीन रुपये लिये उसी की मर्जी से ऐसा करता था। पैसे तो सिख लता था और अगर

रसीद काटनी होती थी तो वह हिन्दू काटता था। इस किस्म की वारदातें होनी हैं तो आप समझ सकते हैं कि क्या डर हो सकता है। यह सच है कि आज उनके दिल में तो खौफ रहता है कि न जाने कौन गांधी टोपी पहने मेम्बर है और कौन मिनिस्टर है जो कि थर्ड क्लास में चल रहा है। मुझे दो एक दफा का अपना तजर्बा है। मैं रोहतक से दिल्ली आ रहा था। हमारे ईस्ट पंजाब के कुछ भाई आम तौर पर यह करते हैं कि एक मन या दो मन चाँचो का कट्टा या गेहूँ का कट्टा गड्डे में डाल लेते हैं। जिस स्टेशन से यह डालते हैं वहाँ के बाबू और वहाँ की पुलिस उनके साथ होती है। उनसे वह हर कट्टे पर चार आने या आठ आने लेते हैं। अगर कोई आदमी उनकी मर्जी के बगैर गड्डे में कट्टा के साथ बैठा जाता है तो सिपाही उस गड्डे में आता है। एक रोज एक गड्डे में जिसमें मैं बैठा हुआ था एक सिपाही आया। उसने एक आदमी से बातचीत की। मैं समझ गया कि कोई न कोई बात है। मैं ने उसका थोड़ा बहुत पीछा किया। वह सिपाही भी समझ गया। उस आदमी ने कुछ पैसे देने चाहे। सिपाही ने कहा कि मैं पैसे नहीं ले सकता क्योंकि यह खद्दरचारी बैठे हुए हैं। पता नहीं यह कांग्रेसी हैं या कौन हैं। जब मैं ने उस आदमी से पूछा कि क्या बात थी, उसने पैसे लिये या नहीं तब उसने यह जवाब दिया कि वह आप के कपड़ों से डर गया और उसने मुझ से कोई पैसा नहीं लिया। मैंने उससे पूछा कि तुम रोजाना यह काम करते हो तो किस ढंग से करते हो। उसने बताया। बहादुरगढ़ सापला के स्टेशन के बाबू हमारे साथ शामिल हैं और किशन गंज स्टेशन के बाबू भी और पुलिस भी शामिल है। हमें एक या दो रुपया कट्टा देना पड़ता है, फिर चाहे हमारे पास टिकट हो या न हो कोई नहीं पूछता। अनाज को पंजाब से लाना भी कानून शिकनी है, मगर कोई पूछता नहीं क्योंकि एक रुपया या दो रुपया मिल जाता है। यह बात तो मैं ने आपको आम ट्रेन्स के बारे में बताई।

नहीं होता है। इसलिये मैं आपसे कहना चाहता हूँ कि अगर आप चाहते हैं कि करप्शन दूर हो तो आप वह वैगन उन लोगों को दीजिये जो कि कोआपरेटिव या कंज्यूमर्स स्टोर्स के मालिक हैं। दूसरे आदमियों को वैगन न दिया जाय। अगर आप ऐसा करेंगे तो न कोई देने वाला होगा और न कोई लेने वाला। यह झगड़ा ही खत्म हो जायगा। चोर की माँ को अगर आप मारना चाहते हैं तो यह ढंग है। और अगर आप इसी तरह वैगन्स देते रहेंगे तो जब किसी को पांच हजार रुपये की आमदनी एक वैगन मिलने से होगी तो बाबू भी उससे हजार पांच सौ रुपया जरूर लेगा।

हमारे जिले से भैंस और गायें कलकत्ता और बम्बई जाती हैं। एक आदमी मेरे पास आया और उसने कहा कि हम परेशान हो गये हैं हमारी भैंसें १५ दिन से रोहतक में पड़ी हैं और दूसरे भाइयों को गड्डे दिये जाते हैं और हमको नहीं मिलता है। मैं बाबू के पास गया तो उसने रजिस्टर दिखाया। उसमें बहुत से आदमियों के नाम इससे पहले के मौजूद थे और बाबू ने कहा कि इतने आदमियों के नाम मौजूद हैं। इनको गड्डे देने के बाद हम इस आदमी को गड्डे दे सकते हैं। उससे मुझे तसल्ली हो गई मगर मैं समझ गया कि खराबी कहाँ है। मैं आपको बतला चुका हूँ कि हालत बदलने के साथ गवर्नमेंट के क्लर्क भी बदल गये हैं और उन्होंने करप्शन का दूसरा ढंग इस्तेमाल करना शुरू कर दिया है। वह ढंग यह है कि वह अपने आदमियों के नाम उस रजिस्टर में लिख लेते हैं। उसकी एप्लीकेशन हो या न हो मगर उसका नाम रजिस्टर में मौजूद रहता है। वह उस आदमी को जिसे की दरअसल में गाड़ी चाहिये लिस्ट दिखा देते हैं कि साहब देखिये यह लिस्ट है, हम क्या करें, हम तो आपको वैगन नहीं दे सकते। आप इतने दिन बाद मिलिये। और अगर कोई भोला भाला आदमी आता है जिससे उनको डर नहीं है कि पकड़ा देगा तो उससे कहेंगे कि फलां आदमी से बातें करो। वह आदमी उससे बातचीत करता है और उसको पैसे दे देता है और गाड़ी हासिल कर लेता है। इस तरह टेढ़े तरीके से वह पैसा बाबू के पास पहुँच जाता है। मैं इस सिलसिले में यह प्रार्थना करता हूँ कि इसको कम करने का एक और दूसरा ढंग है और वह यह कि हर एक गुड्स स्टेशन पर एक एडवाइजरी कमिटी बिठाई जाय जो नान आफ़िशियल्स की हो और जिसके अन्दर उस हलके का एम० सी० ए० हो। वह मेम्बर हो या उसका रिप्रेजेंटेटिव हो और इसी तरह से एग्रीकल्चरिस्ट्स का उसके अन्दर रिप्रेजेंटेटिव हो और जो ट्रेडर्स यूनियन वगैरह हों उनके भी रिप्रेजेंटेटिव हों। इस तरह हर एक स्टेशन पर इस तरह की कमिटी बेंठे और वह गाड़ी देने का फ़ैसला करे।

मैं दो तीन मिनट और लेना चाहता हूँ जिससे मैं, जो हमारी तकलीफ़ है और जनता को भी जिससे बहुत ज्यादा तकलीफ़ है, वह कहना चाहता हूँ। अब आप पिछले साल की बात लीजिये या इस साल की बात लीजिये। मद्रास में चना किसी भाव पर मिला नहीं या मिलता नहीं और पटियाला स्टेट्स यूनियन या पंजाब के अन्दर चना सड़ गया। भट्टजी ने कई मर्तबा बीकानेर के बारे में कहा है कि चने लादने के लिये गड्डा मिलता नहीं और चना स्टेशन पर सड़ता रहा है। गड्डा जब मिलता है जब कि वैगन के लिये पैसा दे और जो आदमियों के पैसे देते नहीं हैं उनको गड्डा नहीं मिल पाता। मैं यह फिर दोहराना चाहता हूँ कि हमें करप्शन को घटाना चाहिये। यह शायद सही बात है कि करप्शन कुछ दरजें तक घटा जरूर है लेकिन वह तसल्लीबख़श नहीं है। अगर आप चाहते हैं कि करप्शन घटे तो एक तो हर एक मेम्बर को चाहिये कि वह इस काम में गवर्नमेंट की मदद करें और मन्त्री महोदय उनका पूरा सहयोग लें। लालाजी ने बहुत अच्छा काम किया लेकिन बावजूद इसके अभी उनकी तरफ़ से कोई मदद नहीं मिल सकी। मैं भी सहायता करना चाहता हूँ कि अगर आप मुझको थर्ड क्लास या फ़ोर्थ क्लास में ट्रेवल करने को कहें तो मैं उसके लिये तैयार हूँ। अगर आप कहें तो मैं देहाती और मामूली ब्यौपारी बन कर लोगों को पकड़ा सकता हूँ अगर आप मेरी मदद करें। लेकिन फ़र्ज़ कीजिये कि मेरे ही खिलाफ़ वह रिप्रेजेंटेशन कर दे कि साहब मैंने यह किया और आप मेरी मदद न करें तो आप करप्शन को नहीं रोक सकेंगे।

बताते हैं हांलां कि ऐसी बात नहीं है क्योंकि उनके रजिस्टर वगैरह सही नहीं होते हैं, उनको सीधा ठेका देना चाहिये। इससे गवर्नमेंट को भी दो ड्राई करोड़ का मुनाफ़ा होगा और जो बीच के मिडिलमैन हैं वह भी किसी को लूट नहीं सकेंगे। इस वक़्त वह स्टेशन के अफ़सरों से मिल कर बड़ी आमदनी कमाते हैं। रेलवे एडवाइज़री कमेटी की रिपोर्ट में भी यह बात बतलाई गयी थी। इसलिये इस चीज़ को ख़तम करना चाहिये। उन्होंने देश को काफी लूटा है और उनको एक दिन का भी मौक़ा देना कि वह देश को लूटें नामुनासिब है।

Ch. Ranbir Singh (East Punjab: General): Mr. Speaker, I do not accept Guptaji's allegation that corruption is on the increase ever since the coming into office of our (present) Central Government. I generally travel in a third class bogey and I have generally to deal with people in their day to day living. I feel that there is a decline in corruption and also that there is increasing fear in the minds of bribe-takers. But in spite of this we cannot say that the results achieved by us have caused gratification to the people or that people have come to think that the situation has in any way improved. According as time has changed our Government servants have also changed and they have devised novel methods in corruption. I wish to cite to you an instance. Some days back our honourable member Lala Achint Ramji was travelling from Delhi to Jullundur. At Ludhiana, at first a Sikh gentleman,—who knows whether he was a ticket collector or a checker—entered the compartment. There he had talk about tickets with some people who said that if they were not competent to travel by that train with those tickets he might charge them the difference. That Sikh is not there for receiving the difference. Just then, another man, a Hindu, comes upon the scene, from God knows where. May be he alone has the authority to receive the difference. He comes and receives the difference. After that he tackled one or two other passengers. One of them said, "I would go with you." Upon this that Hindu disappears immediately and the Sikh lets him off after receiving two or three rupees from him. That man comes into Lalaji's compartment and on being asked tells him that the Sikh Babu had let him off after receiving money from him. He wrote a letter to Shri K. Santhanam but although several months have passed not even an acknowledgement has been received in respect of that letter. On the one hand, relatives of the man he had caught came to his house and entreated him to spare him, while, on the other hand, there was not even an acknowledgement from the Honourable Minister. A letter was received from the Department stating that they were unable to trace the case and that he might come along and identify the man. You can imagine how difficult it is to identify. So many people travel together in a train. T.T.Es. too come. They come with new uniforms on. How difficult it is to identify them. Lalaji had also taken over from that passenger the receipt which bore the signature of the Hindu gentleman who had followed the Sikh. It should be possible to trace out from it as to who that man was. It is true that the corruption was going on with the acquiescence of the Hindu who had signed and the Sikh who received two or three rupees did so with his connivance. The money was received by the Sikh but if a receipt was to be issued this was done by the Hindu. When incidents like this occur you can form an idea what fear there can be.

It is true that there is a lurking fear in their minds to-day lest the man with the Gandhi cap travelling in the third class compartment should happen to be a member or a minister. I have had personal experience of this on one or two occasions. I was coming from Rohtak to Delhi. Some of our brothers of the East Punjab generally follow the practice of shoring a one maund or two maunds bag of gram or wheat into the carriage. The Babu and the police of the station from which they shove it in are in league with them. They charge them four annas or eight annas per bag. If anyone gets into a carriage with a bag without their consent the policeman comes into that compartment. One day a constable came into the compartment in which I was sitting. He talked to a man. I smelt a rat. I pursued him a bit. The constable too grasped the situation. The man wanted to pay him something. The constable said he could not accept the money as there was a 'Khaddar-clad' sitting by and he was not sure if he was a Congressite or someone else. When I questioned the man what was the matter and whether he (the constable) had accepted the money or not, he replied that he had got frightened by the sight of my clothes and had not taken any money from him. I asked him how did he manage to carry on that kind of job every day. He said, "The Babus of Bahadurgarh and Sanpla stations are in league with us and the Babus of Kishanganj station as also the police are our confederates. We have to pay one or two rupees per bag and thereafter nobody questions us regardless of the fact whether we possess a ticket or not." The mere importing of foodgrains from the Punjab constitutes a breach of law, but nobody checks it as they get one or two rupees. This I have told you with reference to the ordinary trains.

I wish to say a few things about the wagons as well. I wish to make it clear that this giving and taking of wagons is also a veritable disease. I do not say that invariably all traders are dishonest. It is possible that there are honest people among them. What happens generally is this that a certain trader procures a wagon either by paying money or with the help of his influence and when he gets to another place with the wagon he is able, if the commodity is scarce there, to sell at 14 or 15 rupees a maund what is priced at eight or ten rupees (a maund). No good accrues to the people by such allotment of wagons. Hence, I want to say to you that if you wish that corruption be eradicated you should give those wagons to those persons who might be the owners of co-operative or consumers' stores. No wagons should be given to other people. If you do so there will be none to give and none to receive. The whole sorry affair would be over. If you want to kill the thief's mother this is the way. If, however, you go on allotting wagons in the way you are doing at present, then whenever a person stands to make a profit of five thousand rupees by the allotment of a wagon the Babu too is bound to receive a thousand or five hundred rupees from him.

Buffaloes and cows are taken from our district to Calcutta and Bombay. A certain person came to me and said, "We are in great distress. Our buffaloes are rotting in Rohtak for the last 15 days. Others are being allotted wagons but we do not get them." When I approached the Babu he showed me a register. It contained the names of several persons which were above his. The Babu said, "The names of so many persons are already there. We can provide wagons to this man after having provided them. This appeased me but I comprehended where the trouble was. I tell you that with the change of conditions the Government's clerks have also changed and they have started using a different method for corruption. That method is that they enter the names of their own men in that register. There may or may not be an application by him yet his name remains on the register. They show this list to the man who is really in need of a wagon, saying, "Look here, Sir, this is the list. What can we do? We cannot give you a wagon. You should come after so many days." And, if some simple-minded man approaches them from whom they have no fear that he would have them caught, they would say to him, "You had better speak to So-and-So." The man speaks to the person indicated, pays him the money and obtains the wagon. By this indirect means the money reaches the Babu. In this connection I submit that there is yet another way to reduce it, namely that an advisory committee be appointed for every goods station which should consist of non-officials, and which should have on it the M.C.A. for that constituency—he may be the member or his representative. Similarly it should contain a representative of the agriculturists and also those of traders' unions etc., if there be any. Thus there should be a committee of that kind at every station which should decide about the allotment of wagons.

I want to take two or three minutes more so as to state something which causes trouble to us and even greater trouble to the public. Now take, for instance, what happened last year or even this year. Gram was not available in Madras for any price while in the Patiala States' Union or the Punjab it was rotting. Bhattji has stated a number of times about Bikaner that no wagons are available for transporting gram and that gram is rotting at stations. The wagon is allotted only when money is paid for it and one who does not pay cannot get it. I repeat that we should reduce corruption. It is probably correct that corruption has decreased to some extent but this decline is not satisfactory. If you want that corruption be reduced then, in the first instance, every member should help the Government in this work and the Honourable Ministers should seek their full co-operation. Lalaji did an excellent job but, in spite of all that, no help has come forth yet from them. I too want to help. If you ask me to travel in the third, or even the fourth class, I am prepared to do so. If you like I could assume the guise of a villager and a common trader and have people caught, only if you help me. But, suppose some one were to make a representation against me alleging that I did this and that and you (on that account) withhold help to me you will not be able to check corruption.

I wanted to say a lot of things but the bell reminds me repeatedly (that my time is up) and I realize that there are other members too who would like to speak, but I want to say one very important thing, and should therefore like to have one minute more. Only yesterday Shri Mahavir Tyagi revealed that there was a contractor at the station who had, in collusion with the officers, obtained contract for catering at the station for Rs. 32/- per mensem, while he has a daily income of Rs. 300/- or 400/-, or an income of eight or ten thousand rupees a month. The proper thing to do in this case is to give direct contracts to the vendors, whom they allege to be their servants, which is not true, for their registers etc., are not correct. This would not only bring profit of two or two-and-a-half crores of rupees to the Government but the middlemen will also not be able to rob anyone. At present they make a huge income in concert with the officers at the station. This was also mentioned in the report of the Railway Advisory Committee. Hence, this must be put a stop to. They have robbed the country well enough already and it would be improper to let them do so a day longer.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U.P.: General): The question is not one of multiplying instances of corruption, but as to how it came into existence, how far it has taken roots and what are the possibilities of eliminating it and the methods to that.

I do not see eye to eye with my honourable friends who have preceded me, because I find corruption is not confined to this department or that department only, nor has it got its roots in the present system of administration. I come from a village; I have seen villagers taking sugarcane from the field of others. Go to the police sub-Inspector, go to the village shop-keeper, go to the money lender, anywhere you go, you find corruption is rampant. Unfortunately, we have been deprived of the human right of managing our own affairs and the pride of our own existence, pride in our past and the confidence in our present and our hope for the future. No community, no race, can have a sense of power and responsibility unless it has enjoyed the political power.

We in India have for long been deprived of this right and corruption came in. A slave has no other business in the world except the business of stomach. Stomach means money. Look at every corner of life, corruption is there. I put a simple question to you. Suppose a purse is lying in the street; do you see any other man running to the other man and say to him, 'your purse has fallen' and present it to him? The simple problem is that after the Great War, the situation has deteriorated because those who were the privileged people not only mismanaged the affairs, but they committed crimes against humanity, against society and became richer and richer while the poor people became poorer and poorer and as a result the sanctity for private power has gone. A man was dying for want of medicine; a child was dying for want of milk; a woman was dying for want of food; but the rich man was enjoying feasts, exuberating his wealth without any consideration whatsoever as how the things were going on. In 1943 there was a great famine in Calcutta. What happened? The Universities were going on; all the exuberance of wealth and big things all these went on, but people were dying in millions in the streets. Now you say that a poor clerk is not an honest man. You know that the poor clerk thinks himself a better man than the big merchant and how do you expect that the poor clerk getting Rs. 100 should honestly serve the demoralised merchant who is likely to get lakhs of rupees without doing anything. How can he say—I would serve you as an honest man? The poor clerk knows that this big merchant is a thief and he wants to take a share out of the loot and thinks this is not a crime. This is the position. The lower paid staff whom you call corrupt and whom you want to send to prison, they stand up and say that the people whom we are called upon to serve are the bigger criminals and in the very nature of things we cannot be expected by any moral law to serve these people to our own detriment. The remedy lies in a psychological approach, an appeal to the mind of man. Control the bigger people at fault and if you cannot control them, send them to the jails or shoot them down, because they are the privileged criminals. It is a crime to invite 500 people or 1,000 people at feasts and dinners and spend lakhs of Rupees. It is the poor clerk's money, the poor police constable's money, the poor labourer's money. If you join the parties, if you partake in their exuberance of their wealth, you have no business to condemn the poor man in the street or the poor clerk in the office. I tell you openly, search your heart and see how do you look at the bigger people at fault. Do you condemn them? Do you call them thieves? Do you take them to be criminals? If you dare not call them criminals, you have no more right to condemn these poor people. The Honourable Minister Dr. John Matthai said, "we have turned the corner". He might have turned the corner so far as the Railways are concerned. But, the question is have you turned the human mind? I read with pain certain recommendations of Kunzru Committee. It says: "it (corruption) can be held in check by deterrent and prompt punishment of proved offences amongst the railway staff." Are the police and the courts the only source of improving the position? After all, man is a man and he has got a mind; he has got a motive; he has something noble in him. The court is not the only thing that could ment him. The police cannot mend thirty crores of people; courts cannot send lakhs of people to jails. The only way of doing things is to approach the mind of the people.

How to approach? I will give two instances. I refer to the Knitty's book, 'Decadence of Europe' published in 1929 about the conditions in Germany. Never were a people so debased as the Germans after the First World War. Young girls and boys were prostituted; everything that was noble in Germany was trampled down. There arose a man who called them back to the pride of their race, to the history of their nation, who gave them confidence in their present, and opened the door of a great future before them. He gave a bible to every German and every employee a new mind.

Mr. Tajamul Husain (Bihar: Muslim): What happened to that man?

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: That man was killed; but Germany became great. Never has a great man, raised a country so high a great soldier is not likely to be born. Hitler may have died; but he gave a lesson to the world, a lesson that the world cannot afford to forget. He will always remain a great man in this world. Sir I will give another instance, Mr. Roosevelt. He would approach the gardener, the cooly, the miner, and say we are working for you. He gave a sympathetic heart to them. A strong feel, a strong will, a firm determination were Hitlers weapons. His ways were hard but effective.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Does my honourable friend want to follow Hitler?

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: I do not mean that. Hitler stands for an iron will, an iron discipline, a strong determination. (Interruption) I am not going to yield.

Shri Raj Bahadur (United States of Matsya): On a point of order, Sir, is the honourable member entitled to preach fascism on the floor of this House?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member has misunderstood.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: My purpose is, Sir, that the situation is deteriorating. A psychological approach is necessary. That is not a thing to look into the books or into the arguments or explanations. It has to come from a strong feel, a strong will, a strong determination. I have given two instances: I have given the instance of Hitler, I have given the instance of Roosevelt. I believe that by a strong will, a strong determination and by good organisation and by a new psychological approach, you can eliminate this evil. This evil is not confined to this particular department or that particular department. As the food problem is deteriorating, so is the case of this corruption. If for food it is necessary to have a high power committee, so for corruption it is necessary to have a high power committee to look into the various aspects of the question and to find out a way to eliminate this evil.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Mr. Deputy Speaker, I had only half a mind to speak, but my mind was fully made up when a suggestion was thrown across the House by no less a friend than the Honourable Mr. Goplaswami Ayyangar. I hope I am not divulging any State secret! He was afraid that I was going to give him the cold shoulder. I want to assure him that I am not.

The House has given a warm reception to his Railway Budget, and much as his visage deters friends from giving a cordial reception to him, as my friend, Mr. Chaudhuri said the other day, I have no doubt in my mind that his stern visage goes with a very warm heart. He has a cool head and a warm heart.

Therefore, Sir, I have risen to satisfy him no less than my honourable friends in this House. It is an old adage that power corrupts. But to my mind poverty also corrupts. Power and poverty are very great corrupting influences over the people.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): Though poles apart!

Shri H. V. Kamath: So long as our social and economic structure is based on this principle, with power at the top and poverty at the bottom, I believe that attempts at eradicating corruption will only go half-way: they will not prove effective in eliminating corruption entirely. A Sanskrit Sloka has it:

दारिद्र्यं जनतापकारनामहो केनापि दग्धं न ही

(Dauidryam janatapakaranamaho kenapi dagdham nahi). This poverty which has been the bane of most human miseries and afflictions has not been rooted out by anybody. The sloka goes on:

Burnt the golden Lanka by fire:

They burnt the Khandava Vana

But this Dauidrya has not been burnt by anybody.

That is the root of all evil. Poverty is perhaps the greatest crime on earth. All other crimes flow from it. All other crimes spring from it. If we root out poverty, we root out most crimes in this world. But, alas, poverty has been there. Christ has said: "The poor ye will always have with you." While I do not know whether they will be with us till the end of time, they have been there from the very beginning—from the very dawn of social creation, but we hope—through it is at times hoping against hope—at some time to eradicate poverty from our society.

Corruption to my mind therefore springs from both these sources—power and poverty. Most of the Governments of the day are based on this—power at the top and poverty at the bottom. Governments are more tolerant of what I may call material corruption than what might be termed moral, mental or spiritual corruption against the Government. I may cite only one classic incident. Socrates was made to drink the hemlock for corrupting the youth. It was because this corruption was against the Government that he was executed. He was made to drink the cup of poison. But there are grosser forms of corruption and most Governments, so long as they do not interfere with the normal working and day to day administration and so long as they continue to say "Gari chalti hai", they connive at these ordinary forms of corruption.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member can continue his speech after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

Shri H. V. Kamath: When the House rose for lunch I was on the point how corruption arises out of poverty no less than power. It has been said that power without justice amounts to tyranny and poverty when it is undeserved and when it forced on an individual, it is in my judgement a crime and whoever is responsible for this crime must to be taken at task by a fair, just and egalitarian society. I would like, Sir, to invite the attention and refresh the memory of the honourable Railway Minister by quoting an extract from a broadcast of his own, which was made on the 3rd November 1948 at 8-30 P.M. on all wave lengths. He said on that occasion:

"Of bribery and corruption which are so widespread it is not necessary for me to speak at length. On the railways among the station, goods train and such like staff, acceptance of illegal gratification and corruption are almost a tradition deep-rooted and of many decades standing. A determined drive is now on to combat this evil with firmness amounting to almost ruthlessness. The Railway Administrations are tackling this problem with energy and with commendable vigour with the help of both the special police and provincial governments."

[Shri H. V. Kamath]

And the Honourable Minister asked for full public co-operation. This was a very welcome statement of policy on the part of the new Railway Minister soon after he took over and we are entitled to ask him today in this House, considering that this broadcast was made more than three months ago, how his attempts in this direction of eradicating corruption in the railways have proceeded and what progress has been achieved.

May I, Sir, point out to him one instance of corruption, which was due to the exercise of power without justice. There has been a furore over this in that part of the country from which I come: I refer to the Central Provinces and Berar. Early this month there was the wedding of a police officer who is himself the son of a more highly placed police officer. I understand that the marriage party or 'Barath' as it is called, proceeded from Nagpur to Banaras via Jabulpore and Allahabad and my information has it that a saloon of the Superintendent of Railway Police (S.R.P.) was placed at the disposal of this police officer and his marriage party. The saloon of the SRP was to have proceeded to a place called Bhadhadaghat on the Bina Bhopal section where only the previous night the derailment of the 6 U. P. Punjab Mail had taken place. I do not know whether he proceeded promptly or because of his wedding party his departure on duty was delayed. This is not all. The story moves on towards the inexorable end. It appears that in addition to this saloon of the SRP one eight-wheeler third class carriage with accommodation for 112 passengers was also placed by the authorities of the G.I.P. Railway at Bombay to carry only 40 passengers from Nagpur to Allahabad. The carriage bore no mark of reservation and yet no passenger other than the members of the wedding party was allowed to enter into that lucky compartment. And the crowning glory of it all comes here, that the entry in the ticket sale register shows that on the night of February 2nd (the night of the occurrence) only 34 tickets of class III and one of class II were sold at Jabulpore, from Jabulpore to Benares, by the 27 Du, the train to which this saloon and third class carriage were attached. En passant I might mention that though this train passed through prohibition area the party were entertained very well to all kinds of refreshing drinks. I make a present of this to the Honourable Minister for such action as he may deem fit. We talk of corruption among the lower staff like gangmen or the railway ticket collectors. But here is a case of corruption at the top. Our sarvant and philosopher Dr. Radhakrishnan the other day, I believe in his Convocation Address at Cuttack before the Orissa University, stated that there is a tendency in government circles to compromise with corruption simply because that corruption is in high places.

Sir, I hope you will give me a little indulgence.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: He has already taken fifteen minutes.

Shri H. V. Kamath: No, Sir. We began late, at 2-35 because there was the quorum bell.

This is one instance where corruption arose from exercise of power without justice. Now I come to the other kind of corruption which is due to poverty. As I have already said unless we radically reform our social and economic structure that has power at the top and poverty at the bottom, and overhaul, even shatter its foundations and rebuild it to our heart's desire, we can never root out corruption from the poorly paid staff. Our railways as we are all aware are a completely nationalised industry. Such an industry must be worked, you will agree, first of all in the national interest. But the interest of the workers should come only next to the larger national interest. Yet we find sometimes—it is a matter for sorrow—that though the salaries at the top are so unconscionably high there is some agency at work somewhere which is always devising ways and means to take back from the lower paid workers whatever benefits they might have gained through collective bargaining. We appeal to them "Be patriotic, serve your country, why not sacrifice for the sake of your country?" Yes, Sir, I accept the proposition. But sacrifice must be equally shared. If there is no equality of sacrifice then it is vain, futile and even fatuous to call upon poorly paid staff to sacrifice. What are you doing at the top? Officers drawing Rs. 3,000 4,000 and 5,000—what are they doing in the matter of sacrifice? Are they bearing a portion of the sacrifice? With what heart or with what face can they tell the workers "sacrifice". Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones at others. Those at the top who also connive at corruption should not throw stones at those lower down who are guilty of corruption; only those who are without any sin in this respect can throw stones at the corrupt officials.

There is one other aspect which we should not forget. There are two sides to corruption—the giver and the receiver. Like mercy it is not twice blessed but twice cursed: it curses him that gives and him that receives. If we want to eradicate corruption from the railways I will only say this that first of all the exercise of power should be regulated by a sense of justice; and wherever cases of corruption at the top come to light they should be dealt with, to use the very word which the honourable Minister broadcast, in a ruthless manner as much against those at the top as those lower down in the scale. I would only suggest that with a view to detecting corruption not merely should the Watch and Ward section and the Intelligence Branch of the Railways be strengthened but also the Railway might consider this proposition of awarding certain prizes or rewards for those who bring to light or unearth cases of corruption. I would also suggest—it is a psychological matter—medals such as Mahatma Gandhi medal or Netaji medal or Nehru medal or Patel medal to be awarded to those people, either officials or non-officials, who succeed in unearthing and bringing to the notice of the railway authorities cases of corruption: he who detects the largest number of cases must be awarded the Gandhi medal and so on and so forth. (An Honourable Member: Why not a Kamath medal?) You propose it. Before I sit down I will only say this that corruption, as the honourable Minister has himself admitted, is widespread. The Minister are well aware of it and the officers of the Railway Board who are intimately associated with the two Ministers, I am sure, are also well aware of this evil and are doing their very best to root out this evil. But it is no use merely cavilling at the Ministers unless we, the people, on our part offer them our co-operation. Unless we do that there is no use our coming here and saying "root out this, root out that". I would therefore appeal to the people through this House to offer whole-hearted co-operation to the Government. The Honourable Mr. Santhanam soon after taking over wrote to us all a friendly letter requesting us to bring to his notice instances of corruption whenever they came to our notice. We welcomed it and I hope that we of this House and the people outside would not stint themselves in co-operating whole-heartedly with the railway administration. I hope that the ruthlessness of which my honourable friend Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar spoke in his broadcast would be applied at the top no less than at the bottom. Then only can we expect results. Otherwise as was the case in the days of control about black-marketing some smaller fry might be caught and the bigger whales would go scot free. The poorly paid get wages which are nominally high but their real wages in proportion to the prices and the cost of living index are very low, and I would only quote a Sanskrit sloka here:

"Bhuhukshitah kim na karoti papam"
(What crime will the hungry not commit?)

[Shri H. V. Kamath]

I have great pleasure in supporting the motion which has been moved by Shrimati Durgabai and I hope that ere long our Railway Ministers and the railway administration will have done a good job in rooting out this corruption as far as it lies in human power to do so.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): I am tempted to follow the footsteps of the last two speakers and raise the subject of corruption far above the level of the railways, but I should resist that temptation. I do not want to seek any escape in the fact that corruption is prevalent in other fields as much as, if not more than, on railways. I fully realise the gravity of the problem and share the earnestness with which Shrimati Durgabai, Lala Deshbandhu Gupta and others have pleaded for effective steps being taken against this evil. But I would like the House to have a sense of perspective. If you reflect on the functions of the vast number of workers engaged in the railways you will easily agree with me that probably not more than five per cent. of the subordinate staff and not more than ten per cent. of the superior staff have even the possibility of being corrupt. All the rest have cut and dried work—routine or other work—which they have to do and in which there is no chance at all of any kind of corruption. There may be inefficiency, there may be other defects, but corruption itself has to be confined, by the necessities of railway work, to a very small fraction of the total number of railway workers. Therefore, it would be altogether wrong to give the impression that the railway workers, or a large majority of them, are corrupt and are not honest, straightforward workers in a great national enterprise.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): A fairly good number are.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): They share the corruption.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Sir, I do not agree. I think all the sharing must be within this five per cent. and ten per cent. which I have indicated but even that amounts to a very large total, and I am not in the least anxious to minimise either the quantity or the magnitude of the evil.

It is also not true to say that things are at a standstill or that matters are getting worse. There are the old traditional ways of corruption in the railways, for instance, in the allotment of wagons, in the booking of parcels, among the ticket collectors and checkers. The war has brought in two new forms of corruption. Before the war there was hardly any corruption in the issue of tickets or in the booking offices.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: That is not correct. Corruption in the booking of parcels was there even before the war.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: With rare exceptions but not on this vast scale.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: So far as I am aware, before the war there was hardly any difficulty in getting tickets, but owing to the heavy overcrowding that has happened during the last six or seven years, this new evil has arisen. Again the grain shops form a bad centre for many forms of corruption. I am glad to say that we have nearly mastered the new forms of corruption. Though I cannot say that all corruption regarding the issue of tickets has stopped, it has diminished to a great extent during the recent months. So far as the grain shops are concerned, Sir, I think it is almost at an end. Under the new revised form there will hardly be any chance for corruption. Almost all the articles will be supplied by the Provincial Governments to Railway depots and only limited articles necessary for the consumption of the workers are to be issued. Therefore, we have more or less mastered the new forms and we are vigorously at work in tackling the old forms of corruption.

I do not think it is meant to make a distinction between the Railway Ministry and the Railway Board; we are both together in the same boat so far as this matter is concerned. It is not right to say that the Railway Board have not taken steps in the matter. I shall merely quote the testimony of the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee which I do not think you will suspect of any undue partiality to the Railway Administration. In this report, it says:

"It would be wrong to consider that the Railway Administrations and the Railway Board have not been alive to this evil or have neglected steps to combat it. Some Railways, notably the South Indian and the B.B. & C.I. Railways, have taken fairly effective steps to eliminate the seat reservation racket. We believe also that the E.P. have recently made certain changes at Delhi to curb effectively the exploitation of passengers by unscrupulous members of the staff".

I am not giving this quotation to say that our work is anywhere near the end. In fact it has just begun. But I wish to assure you, Sir, that the work is in full swing and we shall not rest till this evil is brought within limits which cannot be tackled before the human regeneration takes place of which my honourable friend Mr. Kamath has spoken.

It is not merely police action that has been taken. We had a meeting of all the General Managers in October 1948 when, in addition to the police and other action, it was decided to take drastic departmental action in all cases where corruption was not only established but was very strongly suspected. One of the resolutions passed in this conference was:

"Cases of departmental or procedural irregularities which resulted in preferential treatment to traders, travellers, contractors or any other individuals of firms should ordinarily be enquired into and disposed of by the Railway Administrations. If, however, there is a probability that it can be established that some consideration has been received by the railway staff concerned with the commission of these irregularities, such cases should be handed over to the Special Police Establishment without delay."

During my recent tours I made a direct offer to the assembled merchants at Kanpur, at Ajmer, at Jaipur and at Bombay and other places, that if they will only give me confidentially and privately names of high railway officials who are indulging in this I shall protect them but shall take immediate and drastic action against the officials concerned. I regret to say that not one name has been forwarded to me.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): They are also interested in this. Why should they expose them?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I am only explaining to the House the difficulties. Certainly the House does not want us to penalise innocent people without having any evidence of guilt. It will be altogether unjust and it will destroy the very basis of sound administration.

Mr. Tajamul Hussain: You cannot punish a man unless you find him legally guilty.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I go further than that. If the Railway Administration is convinced that a man is really guilty, though we are not able to have full legal proof, then we are prepared to take action in order to safeguard the purity of the Administration. But you do not expect us to go against innocent people merely on the basis of allegations which may often be malicious also. We have to be certain that we do not hurt any innocent and honest officer.

I want to repeat the offer which I made to you in my circular, that if at any time any Member of the Assembly or any prominent member of the public or any prominent businessman brings to our notice any serious cases, we shall try to investigate them with all the powers at our command and take drastic action against guilty people.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [22ND FEB. 1949]

[Shri K. Santhanam]

Mr. Tajamul Husain: And also against the person who gives.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Sir, some instances have been quoted.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: It is right that the bribe-giver is considered as guilty as the bribe-taker and should be punished, but many influential parties have represented to us that owing to the present scarcity of transport, merchants and businessmen have been put to the alternative of either ruin or giving bribes. Therefore, if they have to save their business by bribing, you cannot take them to task in the same severe fashion. Of course, morally this is not a right argument, but I am prepared to consider their difficulties also. If any one can prove that he was put to the absolute necessity of giving bribe in order to get things done, I am prepared to consider the circumstances and let the guilt lie on our officials, because I do admit the principle that the railway officials are to a far greater extent responsible than even members of the public, though morally bribe-giving and bribe-taking are in the same level. We are anxious to take all possible steps. Only we want reliable information and some degree of proof which will enable us to get at the individual persons. It is no use telling us that there is bribery but unless this bribery or other forms of corruption can be traced to particular individuals, we are utterly helpless. I appeal to the whole country, the House and everyone to assist us in this task, and I am sure they will not find the Railway Board or the Railway Administration wanting in this respect.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Is the honourable Minister prepared to investigate the cases which are cited here?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Yes. We got a complaint and in case which has been forwarded either to the honourable Minister for Railways or to me or to the Railway Board is being investigated and in many cases action has been taken. In every ten-day report there is a column "Any complaints received from the Members of the Constituent Assembly" and then they have to state what action has been taken. I think in recent months the rule has been that for every complaint the acknowledgement must be made within twenty four hours and as soon as possible after investigation and action, the members must be informed of the action taken. I think this rule is being followed.....

An Honourable Member: Not in all cases.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What about the specific instances quoted here? Will they also be investigated and members informed?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: We shall investigate this and every other instance. I would like to know what more assurance my honourable friend.....

Shri H. V. Kamath: On a point of clarification and information may I know whether the wedding party incident which I mentioned has been brought to his notice?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Yes. We got a complaint and immediate instructions have been issued for complete investigation and a report to be sent to us direct. Therefore, as soon as information comes, I am prepared to place the result of that enquiry at the disposal of the honourable member.

Lala Achint Ram (East Punjab: General): My complaint was not acknowledged within twenty-four hours, nor even twenty-four days.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: After all, you know that within the last six years the Administration has had to bear a very heavy strain and as a consequence it had to be run with all kinds of staff including a large number of temporary staff, many of whom could not even do the ordinary routine work and to that extent the Administration has become lax. We are tightening up discipline all over the Administration and if there are such instances, we shall look into them and see that they do not occur again.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Would the Honourable Minister of State tell us his reaction to my suggestion of rewarding people who give information about corruption and unearth such cases?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I was just going to refer to that suggestion.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I thought the Minister had finished. That is why....

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: That suggestion is worth considering and we shall see whether we cannot devise a suitable system of rewards, but there is also one danger. There will be people who pretend to give us information but do not help us to have it but go on claiming rewards and then publish complaints in newspapers.

Shri H. V. Kamath: My point is about not informers merely, but those people who help to detect and unearth such cases.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I am only saying that we have to be a little careful to see that we do not bring in a lot of complaints of people who claim that they have helped us to detect corruption but have not, but still the public will believe that they have been ill-treated. However, we shall see how far we can adopt the suggestion. Of course, it will be easy for us to give medals but I do not think they will be so fruitful as some more substantial rewards which we are prepared to give, if people will actually help us to trace culprits and stop corruption.

I believe I have covered the main points. The real difficulty is, as Lala Deshbandhu Gupta has said, regarding the wagons. There is an insuperable difficulty because each official concerned has got some discretion which cannot possibly be eliminated. There are 150,000 wagons going about the country every day and it is almost physically impossible to keep trace of every wagon at every place at every moment. Those of you who know mathematics will admit that the chance of our ability to detect it is infinitesimally small. It is only through tightening up of discipline all over the Administration, through bringing pressure upon the staff in general to feel that in this matter they have to work conscientiously, and occasionally if someone through blunder gets caught, through awarding deterrent punishments that this evil can be eliminated. Of course, it can be eliminated if the business community can wholeheartedly cooperate with us, but they have also a guilty conscience and therefore while they are willing to indulge in general charges of corruption, they do not want to come forward with specific offers of assistance. So there are really insuperable difficulties, but we shall explore all possible methods and try to root it out wherever possible and wherever it is not so possible, to reduce it to the least possible extent.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I seek clarification on a point which has been made by Lala Deshbandhu Gupta. It is that he suggested that the Government should encourage talented and experienced thieves to root out corruption. What is the reaction of the Honourable Minister of State to that suggestion?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be any reaction.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: My immediate reaction is to distrust all thieves.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: In view of the assurances given by the Honourable Minister, I beg leave of the House to withdraw the cut motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable Member leave of the House to withdraw the cut motion?

The cut motion was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Insufficient Provision of Amenities to Passengers

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): Sir, I move:

"That the demand under the head 'Railway Board' be reduced by Rs. 100."

I would not lag behind in offering my need of praise to the honourable Members who have come newly in charge of this Department. Shri Gopalaswami Ayyangar has been one of our experienced administrators who has spent all his life in the service of the country and his sage advice is at the disposal of one of the most important Departments of the Government. My friend Mr. Santhanam, whose experience as an Editor is generally confined to have only one opinion, that is, generally the right opinion which is his and that which is not his is not the right opinion has come as the Minister of State. I want him to shed a little of his iconoclastic fervour, which he has developed as an editor, and listen to the advice of his friends who admire him and are always willing to assist him in this task.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister has always been reasonable.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: It has been the privilege of the bureaucracy to trot out the traditional saying that it is only the Europeans that can manage the affairs of this country efficiently. They resisted for long the complete Indianisation of the Railway Board. It has now been proved beyond doubt that the all-Indian Board of Railways has been very efficient and not merely efficient but also dutiful and alert in enabling our Minister to say that the Railways have turned the corner and are on the road to prosperity, success and consolidation. Therefore, I cannot forget that the Indian Members of the Railway Board have got a double responsibility of not only justifying their ability but also of orientating the whole administration with a new and patriotic outlook.

The question of the amenities of passengers is as old as the railways and it cannot be solved until we take some drastic action. As the proverbial wail of Sita, it has been a hardy annual for those who speak about the difficulties of passengers to bring in this subject every year and yet this unremedied evil still persists.

Next I want to deal with the betterment fund which was mainly created with a view to have a separate source of revenue from which amenities to passengers could be provided. In the year 1946, in the Budget debate, when I expressed some doubt about the utility of the betterment fund, Sir Arthur Griffin said:

"The honourable Mr. Tirumala Rao was a little sceptical about the Betterment Fund, and he even went so far as to say that he thought it was a device to avoid betterments. It is I who have myself pressed for the Betterment Fund, because I believe it is the one thing which will help us and help the Railways to plan steadily and coherently in provision of betterments."

It is now nearly three years since then and we do not see any definite plan of betterment drawn up by the Railway Board. And when Dr. John Mathai your predecessor took charge of this administration under the newly-formed National Government, he also held the same view. He said:

"I do not think anybody can question this—If these are essential purposes and the meeting of which is an obligation which cannot be shirked, then it seems to me from a financial point of view the wisest thing to do is not to depend upon casual doles from your current revenues but to build up a Fund on which you can draw as and when it becomes necessary to expend money for these purposes."

I am very sorry to note that still we are in the realm of promises that efforts will be made hereafter to draw up a plan of effective action.

The question of overcrowding is the one problem that has to be adequately, resolutely and effectively tackled more than corruption and everything else. From the figures we have seen that there are altogether 9 lakhs of seats on all railways, according to the statistics supplied to us. Sir, one hundred crores of passengers are travelling on these 9 lakhs of seats. In the year 1937-38, about 50 crores were travelling on these same number of seats. Today the rush has doubled itself and the seating accommodation is only that much. Even if you make a calculation, with the number of coaches that have been recently put on the rails,—you have a coaching stock of 118 coaches—on this basis and take into account one lakh of extra seats, it comes to only 10 lakhs of seats for 100 crores of people. On each seat as many as 1,100 passengers are asked to travel.

With regard to second and inter-class passengers it is said that we have for the second class 12,667 seats and for inter-class 21,919 seats. In these 34,000 seats, the number of passengers who have travelled is 2,91,00,000 in the second class and 38,80,000 in the inter-class. This new classification has not helped the travelling public to reap any benefit. Even the psychological benefit which the Minister of State for Railways claims to the inter-class passengers that they have the satisfaction of travelling in the upper class for the same fare is not there. We have been saying that an additional difficulty has been introduced to the second and inter-class passengers, in addition to the great difficulty under which third-class passengers are groaning. I will give an example. When I travelled from Villupuram to Madras, in two second class compartments with eight berths, there were 24 passengers. Every one of them was sitting out the whole night and cursing the Congress administration. I was sitting in the corridor till the morning. I could not get accommodation in the first class even if I paid for it. So I preferred to travel second and travelled sitting the whole night.

The north-east line from Madras to Waltair is the most crowded line and one of the heavily paying lines. A large number of passengers travels in inter and in second and they undergo enormous difficulties, particularly the Government servants and army people who are pass holders. They travel from Trivandrum to Delhi in second class. I travelled with some such people once and they said that they had to sit up three nights and four days and that by the time they reached their offices in Delhi they were jaded and tired and took sometime to regain normal health. I request my honourable friend to take into consideration these miseries. He has not abolished inter-class. He has retained inter-class and the second class. All the four classes persist now as there is even a new class created by the arrangement that those who pay for sleeping-berth accommodation at the rate of Rs. 10 per night. This is perhaps the old second class and the old second class has become inter-class. He has not abolished any class altogether. From a recent cutting from 'The Statesman' from its Globe correspondent under the heading 'New Classes Cause Loss in Revenue' I may quote:

"The introduction of new classes on the Indian Railways has caused the income from passenger traffic of the Delhi main railway station to drop by approximately Rs. 32,000 a day.

The income receipts from passenger traffic before the introduction of the new classes on January 1 was on an average of Rs. 95,000 a day; goods traffic contributed approximately Rs. 10,000 per day, bringing the total income to Rs. 1,05,000 a day.

The present income from passenger and goods traffic of the station averages Rs. 63,000 and Rs. 15,000 per day bringing the total income to Rs. 78,000 a day."

Therefore I request the Railway Administration to review the whole situation. Let them not wait for further experience on this matter, because the experience which the honourable members have given him, was gained from first-hand knowledge and they have stated it in unmistakeable terms. They have given their personal experience and also the experience of a large number of passengers. This must be enough for the Administration to reconsider their attitude and modulate their policy.

I need not say much about a general inconvenience. The manner in which our Budget discussion has been arranged here has precluded us from dealing with a number of points that affect the local railways. There are seven important railways and the speakers could have been easily arranged in such a way that each of us would have been enabled to deal with the conditions and difficulties that pertain to our local or special railways. I want to deal with the M. and S.M. Railways particularly because I come from that area. I want to express my opinion that it is one of the most congested lines, the north-east line from Madras to Waltair. You cannot have a second express train. From Madras to Bombay you have two trains; but from Madras to Delhi you have only one express. From Delhi to Calcutta and from Delhi to Bombay there are two express trains. But from Madras to Calcutta, there is only one mail. It is one of the long journeys. We have made representations to the M. & S.M. Advisory Council about our requirements, but to no effect. I want you to consider there is so much overcrowding between Waltair and Madras that it requires immediate redress on your part. With regard to bringing Cocanada on to the main line, that is one of the worst handicaps under which large numbers of people roundabout Cocanada have been suffering. The alignment of the line which was laid in the beginning have now been diverted seven miles from Cocanada and the public and the public bodies of Cocanada have been agitating for it. In fact, I moved a resolution when the Council of State was alive and your Department has given an assurance that you will consider the matter sympathetically and I want you to consider it because I have not got sufficient time to bring out all the facts about the situation, but I may tell you that it will add to the comfort and convenience of a large number of passengers and it will add to the revenues of the Railway, because Cocanada is an import port doing export and import business to the tune of 5-1/2 crores a year. So I request you to consider this aspect also favourably and see that the long cherished desire of the local people is fructified.

Then there are a number of grievances, which I wanted to bring to your notice, Sir and generally with regard to the insanitary condition of the trains, we want the staff to be educated, to be public-spirited and to see to them, as it is a public concern where the health of a large number of people is concerned. With regard to the Betterment Fund, I think you should immediately plan and have a definite scheme for building up new stations. Bezwada Station through which nearly 20,000 passengers pass every day has not a decent third-class waiting hall. There is Tenali through which 10,000 to 15,000 people pass through every day and in addition it is a junction station; people there sleep in the open, in the rain and in the Sun and there is no protection whatever. You are now with great difficulty providing a new station for Vidadavole Anankapalle and Nellore. These are very important big stations which give you a good income and they badly require the elementary amenities. For instance, my own native town, Cocanada, is a cow-shed, I can tell you. It is one of the biggest station on the line which gives you the third largest amount of income and you are reluctant to improve that Station or alter it. I find that during the war the Military set up a piped water supply and after the war they have removed it and now people are without it. I have been pressing at the M.S.M. Advisory Committee for it all these years, but with no result.

I do not want to take much time of the House and I shall refer now about the catering system in the railways. I can say that the best catering in the whole of India is in the South Indian Railway; it suits the middleman's pocket and even the lower-middle-class man's pocket. He gets a square meal for the money he pays. We have lost in the last year 40,000 rupees by departmental catering in the S.I.R. Railway. M. & S.M.s have lost 1,200 rupees. I want to evolve a system of catering that will combine cheapness as well as health and good food for the people. Until this is done, please do not tinker with catering. I know that B.N. Railway and the E.I. Railway are the two railways that consume all their earnings and I brand them as the most inefficient railways of the whole railway-system. (An Honourable Member: 'Not the E.I. Railway'). The B.N. Railway lost nearly 2-1/2 lakhs of rupees on its departmental catering which it tried to make up in running hotels in Waltair and Puri. Therefore, you must see that until you substitute a proper agency for catering, you should not tinker with it; you may have a proper check and control with the existing contractors but do not try to make money out of it. I know the B.N. Railway are trying to auction the small shops in order to make up the losses which the departmental officials are incurring by their inefficiency.

There are so many things to be dealt with and there are other honourable Members waiting to deal with it. You have only 186 coaches on the wheels today. Two years ago the Chief Commissioner promised that he would get 800 coaches for the third-class passengers and now our progress during the last two years has been at the rate of only 94 coaches a year. I request you to take the members of the Central Advisory Committee for Railways into your confidence and appoint a Sub-Committee to deal with the betterment fund. Evolve a plan that will achieve definite tangible results within the next two years by spending a good amount of the betterment fund.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Cut motion moved:

"That the demand under the head 'Railway Board' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Recently I read in a Bombay Weekly a very serious allegation against the Railway Ministry. I could not believe it, Sir. The allegations were that the Ministry were guilty of wasting Rs. 13 crores by ordering 300 locomotives from the U.S.A. Out of this 300 about 190, it is alleged in the newspapers, arrived in India and after arrival, it was found out that they were absolutely useless for our purpose. (Interruption) I have got the paper with me here. Let me finish.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yesterday the same matter was raised definitely and the honourable the Minister of State repudiated that charges as baseless. No more reference need be made to that. The House cannot afford to lose any more time on that.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I am not going to tell you about the allegation, but I want to tell you that I went over to the Minister this morning in this House and he told me that the whole thing was false. I was fully satisfied, Sir, and I absolutely believed him. The whole point is this: I am satisfied but what about the people at large and what about the people who read the paper? What will they think about the Government? My only suggestion is to prosecute the editor of the paper. I make this suggestion seriously to the Government of India that they should take immediate action to prosecute those people who are responsible for this.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it a step towards the redress of grievances of third-class passengers?

752. CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [22ND FEB. 1949]

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister of Railways and Transport): I hope that when that paper turns its attention to Mr. Tajamul Husain himself, he will take that action.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I can assure you, that if any paper were to write against me, I would not wait one minute and I will not wait to ask for the Honourable Minister's advice; I will at once prosecute him. Now, I am afraid; If I go on in this way, I shall never finish my point and the bell will ring.

Now, there are general grievances of the passengers about which I wish to deal. Some of the grievances have already been discussed and I do not wish to repeat them. I only wish to make certain suggestions about them. For instance about passengers travelling on the roof of the train, I do not wish to deal with that. About overcrowding in the trains, I will tell you what actually happened with me. On the 28th of last month I was coming by 11 Up. from Patna to Delhi. My honourable friend Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala and I were traveling in the same compartment in one 1st class coupe. Somewhere in the middle of the night, somebody got on the foot-board and shouted, open the door. We were afraid; we did not know whether it was a burglar or a thief or ticketless passenger or bona fide passenger. We were only two of us in the compartment. We dared not open the door lest they should attack us. Myself and Mr. Jhunjhunwala discussed and we came to the conclusion that we should pull the chain. He pulled the chain so that if he was a thief we may catch him and if he was a bona fide passenger, we may let him in and give him some help. It took about half an hour for the train to stop. When the chain is pulled it takes half an hour to stop the train. When the train did stop, the gentleman who was on the foot-board ran away. The guard or somebody came. I was not sleeping; I was lying down. He came to my honourable friend Mr. Jhunjhunwala and was asking what his name and address were. He would not hear what the complaint was. Mr. Jhunjhunwala said, "hear my complaint." The guard said, "I want your name and address." This went on for half an hour; such things are going on. (Shri Mahavir Tyagi: 'All along you were asleep.') I never said I was asleep; I was lying down. I said we discussed the matter.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Did Mr. Jhunjhunwala pay the fine of Rs. 50?

Mr. Tajamul Husain: If my honourable friend Mr. Sidhva had been there, he would have had to pay the fine; at any rate, my honourable friend Mr. Jhunjhunwala did not.

Sir, whenever we travel, we find that people bring in their boxes, their suit cases, beddings etc. My honourable friend Mr. Santhanam gave us the instance of foreign countries when he said that there were only two classes, and not three or four as in India. In foreign countries, you will find the passengers never take their suit cases, beddings, etc., in their compartments. Sometimes, it happens that there are more luggages than passengers themselves and even the passengers cannot sit in the compartments. My suggestion is that every luggage should be left with the guard, and the Honourable Minister should give instructions to this effect, so that these passengers who have not reservation for the night, may have room to sit or lie down.

As regards waiting rooms, I have got certain points to make. The rule, I am told, is, that one hour before the arrival of a train and for an hour afterwards, the waiting room should remain open. In many places, I find the waiting rooms are never opened. When you go to the station master, he is either asleep or is not to be found. In many instances, difficulty is experienced even in first class waiting rooms. I may give a particular instance where the school boys were sitting in the first class waiting room and bona fide passengers could not get in.

The beggar nuisance in the railways has not been removed and something must be done towards this. I think it should be a very easy matter for the railway authorities to remove the beggars. There has been a lot of discussion about bribery and corruption. I am not going to discuss all that because I cannot discuss that and I do not wish to discuss that. I have always been of the opinion that no department can abolish bribery and corruption. It is not the fault of the railway department or any other Government department that bribery and corruption exist. It is the people who give. Unless you improve the morale of the people, and reform the whole country, bribery and corruption will go on for ever. No Minister can change the situation. But, beggary can be stopped. The swarms of people who go about on the platforms and trains and worry the people, they can be stopped.

In some stations, there are no lights. I am only giving my points, because my points alone will take more than fifteen minutes. I have said something about the general grievances; I shall come now to the grievances of the first class passengers. I am surprised that my time is up. When I started general discussion, I looked at the clock; it was half past three; now it is 3-35.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Member is not right.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Give me five minutes more; I shall finish; it is an important matter. While I was discussing the budget I said about servants' compartments. Every time I travel, I find that the servants' compartments are always full of people who do not hold servants tickets. Something should be done about this. As regards the introduction of three classes, the first class people have gained and I am thankful to the honourable the Minister on my behalf and on behalf of those who travel in first class. They have abolished the second class and fifty per cent. of the people who used to travel in the second class go in the first class and fifty per cent. in the intermediate, which is class two now. The result is, in the first class, the compartment is over-crowded.

Sir, one thing more and I have finished. I find in the way side stations—I am coming from Patna to Delhi and I can reserve my seat. If I want to change at Cawnpore and catch the same train next night, I cannot get reservation as Cawnpore is a way side station. You will see, Sir, that by the 11 up train, from Cawnpore to Delhi it is a whole night's journey and we cannot get reservation. The Railway Minister must do something so that the first class passengers may get some sleeping accommodation at way side or intermediate stations.

As regards the ex-second class passengers, their grievances are there. Some are happy about the intermediate class while some prefer to pay more and travel in the first class. As regards the old intermediate class, their grievances are there. Fifty per cent. of the second class passengers have come into that class and their compartments are very over-crowded. Finally about the third class passengers, the Government have introduced one Janata Express. It is a very good train from Patna to Delhi, all third class compartments. That is an excellent arrangement. Even this train is over-crowded. This matter has been well discussed on the floor of this House. My only suggestion is to run more Janata expresses and not to allow passengers to get into a compartment when that compartment is over-crowded. The Railway Ministry must do something in the matter. It is a very serious matter and sometimes people are actually packed to suffocation. Instead of giving so much money to the Central Government, to the general coffers, some thing must be done to improve the amenities of the people from whom the money is got. I have finished; I have nothing more to say. I will request that there must be some sleeping accommodation for third class passengers also. This is absolutely essential for long distance journeys, where passengers have to spend two nights in the train. Only one more point; I have finished. About catering, Sir.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member has had already sufficient time. There are other members who want to speak.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Mr. Kamath took so much time.

Shri H. V. Kamath: No reflections on the chair please.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member will please resume his seat.

Shri Satis Chandra Samanta (West Bengal: General): Many things have been said about amenities of passengers and those about all classes of passengers. There are difficulties, we know, and the honourable Ministers have put forward their own difficulties. Still we can do something for providing amenities.

When we travel in trains, we see so many ticketless travellers. The attention of the honourable Minister has been drawn to it and this has been done not only this year but for the past many years. Recently I had the good fortune to put forward some grievances to the Honourable Minister of State and I am to say that he tried his best to remedy them but not to my satisfaction.

I am speaking of the Bengal Nagpur Railway. There, most of the ticketless travellers are smugglers and they cannot be caught simply because the officers and the travelling ticket collectors there are in collusion with them. I have seen them taking bribes with my own eyes. They ask those smugglers: which bags are yours? They say: these are mine. These are left and others are taken out.

You will be surprised to hear about an incident which I myself had the privilege to witness. During October last I travelled in a train and alighted at Kola Ghat on the Bengal Nagpur Railway. I was travelling in a second class compartment. I went to the first class and found it locked from within. There were two compartments only and both of them were locked. I then went to the Guard and asked him to unlock the two compartments. He tried his best but did not succeed because there was someone within. We reported this matter of smuggling to the railway authorities. They took some steps but the smugglers adopted this novel plan,—in collusion with the railway authorities at Khargpur, they would enter into a first class compartment with rice and other things, bolted the doors from within and would come safely to their own places. I did not have much time so I asked the Guard to report the matter to the authorities. There were no travelling ticket collectors present at the time nor were there any railway police. I spoke to the Station Master. Fortunately, at the time, there were some cordoning officers of the Bengal Government—not of the railway. They were trying to detect the culprits. They were trying to help the railway authorities, but you will be astonished to hear that some honest persons of that Government cordoning party were being chastised and beaten by the travelling ticket collectors because these men stood in their way.

These things are happening. Government should look into the matter so that honest persons may come forward. If one honest person comes forward to ventilate these evils, you will find shoals of complaints coming in against him. On account of this no honest man can easily go on with his work. He is likely to be obliged to side with those men who are corrupt.

Under such circumstances, what should the Government do? That has to be considered. The railway authorities should take the help of local public institutions. Unless local public-spirited men and institutions are taken into confidence, this evil will not be eradicated.

It is alleged that in a certain place the Congress organization approached the railway authorities with a view to eradicate the evil of pilfering from trains. But the help was refused and cases of pilfering are going on. I referred a case of unlocking of wagons to the Honourable the Minister of State for Transport. He took some steps. It stopped for two months but now it is going on as usual. You will be astonished to hear that at nights the wagons are unlocked, the things taken out and again locked between intermediate stations. I have inquired into these incidents and I know for certain that officers at Khargpur and station masters in the intervening places, where these occurrences take place, are in collusion with these gangs of thieves. This cannot be eradicated without the help of the public-spirited men,—of whom there are many, and they should be taken into confidence.

Then you will be more surprised to hear that there is a place where the guard takes the goods train slowly for five minutes and during that interval of time everything is done!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member is referring to amendment 2 which has not been moved—cases of dacoity, burglary, smuggling and thefts on running trains.

Honourable Members: Let him go on. It is very interesting.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Anyhow the honourable Member may try and make his speech relate as much as possible to amenities to passengers.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Freedom from theft is an amenity!

Shri Satis Chandra Samanta: I had a mind to speak on item I, but I could not get any chance. However, with regard to amenities to passengers, if ticketless travel is checked, then third-class passengers may have some benefits. Government is trying for locomotives. They will come. They will be manufactured. Then those amenities also may come. In the meantime we should try to find out some other means, so that third-class passengers—we who travel in first or second can manage somehow though we may suffer something—may be looked after to the best of our ability. Every one of us legislators and I hope, including—those of the Treasury Bench is thinking about it. But unfortunately we have been unable so far to help them simply because there are some difficulties. But there must be one thing. The travelling public must be informed about the conditions on the railway. Leaflets should be issued about their duty while travelling on the railways,—to behave well and to keep the sanitary arrangements on trains in order. If the passengers are not educated in this, however much the authorities may try, the trains will not be maintained in a sanitary condition.

I will now come to catering in railway stations on the B. N. Railway. There is Ishardas Ballabdas; there is H. Khan and others. They are catering companies who are sucking the blood of the passengers. They get their contracts from the railway on condition that they will not sublet but I think there is no station which is not sublet. This has been discussed in the Central Advisory Council for Railways. Ishardas Ballabdas was found to be in fault and I hear that he has again been given 12 or 13 stations on contract and the contract has been given before the appointed time. On the 21st there was an advertisement in the papers that up to 21st February 1949 applications would be received; but before that, the contract has been given. If you look into the books you will see the date of 21-2. Other people approached but they have been told that it has already been settled. How can the catering be improved? Those who sublet have to earn something from it and those who take the sublease have to pay double and treble to the contractor. Therefore the food they supply is inferior. I would suggest that if departmental catering can be possible, it should be done. If it is not possible at present, individual caterers should be given contract for particular stations; so that the working the contract themselves, their income may be increased and the foodstuff will improve. In this connection the honourable Minister of State informed us that we should not take money into consideration in this matter. We want good food, but good food will not come from these contractors who are entrusted with so many stations. If we give one station to one person, we may demand from him and he will be able to give us better food. This is my submission and I hope it will be taken into consideration.

Lastly I thank the honourable Ministers for the good heed they pay to the grievances which we put before them and for the steps they are taking, though these are insufficient in our estimate. Yet I hope that they will try their best to do what we expect.

Shri Raj Bahadur: Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, for the last three days during which the Railway Budget has been under discussion we have had the opportunity of listening to a shower of complaints and compliments upon the august members who adorn the benches opposite. We who belong to the younger generation have listened to all the beautiful orations in this House sometimes in wonderment and at others in bewilderment. While we have been amused at the rollicking humour that has dropped on the one hand from Mr. Robin Kumar Chaudhury and on the other from Mr. Tajamul Husain, we have also been moved by the appeals in almost pathetic tones that fell from the lips of Dr. Deshmukh the other day and today from my friend Mr. Jaspat Roy Kapoor. Nevertheless I also want your indulgence to permit me to contribute my own share of complaints and compliments and before I do so, at the very outset I want to thank sincerely and heartily the Railway Minister and the Minister of State for Railways for the beautiful arrangements and the great cooperation they extended to us at the time of the Congress session. I am saying so not only on my behalf but on behalf of Mr. Gokulbhai Bhatt also, the chairman of the Reception Committee and I am sure he would join me in complimenting the good arrangements that the honourable Ministers were pleased to make for the session. Criticism has been levelled at the Government from some quarters to the effect that special arrangements were made only for the Congress at that time but I do not think there is any justification in such criticism. At the time of a great gathering, whether it be a Congress gathering or any other gathering, it is the bounden duty of the railway to look to the needs of the passenger traffic and as such though it was no favour from the government to us, we have yet to thank the Railway Minister for that.

Coming to my complaints against certain observations made by the Railway Minister, I have to say that I am not happy for a remark that he has made in connection with the Betterment Fund during the course of his speech. It is obvious that there is a direct connection between the betterment fund and the amenities to be provided for all classes of passengers, particularly for third class. He says:

"In view of this heavy balance and of the slow pace of expenditure from this Fund in the past, particularly on passenger amenities, it has been decided not to make any appropriation to this fund in the budget year. It will, however, be credited with the interest on the balance of the fund amounting to Rs. 40.33 lakhs. The expenditure provided for the coming year is only Rs. 1.5 crores and the whole of this will be spent on passenger amenities."

A little later he says:

"Out of a total expenditure on works from the Fund since its inception, namely Rs. 98 lakhs, the amount that has been spent on passenger amenities proper was only Rs. 13 lakhs up to the end of 1947-48."

My emphasis is on the words "slow pace of expenditure". These words unfortunately are symptomatic of the great negligence and callous indifference to which the passengers, particularly third class passengers, have been subject throughout the years and particularly they seem to smack of the story that we used to hear from the treasury benches before the 15th August. I would have been much better pleased if instead of these words the Railway Minister had come out with an encouraging assurance in his speech about the various amenities that are to come. But there is nothing specific about it. A little further in his speech we find:

"If, as a result of this intensive drive, it is found possible to spend in 1949-50 more on such works than the Rs. 1.5 crores provided for, I am sure, I shall be able, with the concurrence of my honourable colleague the Finance Minister and the Standing Finance Committee for Railway, to increase the amount to be withdrawn from the Betterment Fund for expenditure on such works."

I do not think it is impossible to spend 1.5 crores on amenities. We are spend much more on amenities and this brings me to the question of what these amenities can be which of them are most urgently needed. We have to consider the difficulties of a third class passenger from the time he comes to the railway station and reaches at his destination—particularly of a third class passenger belonging to the lower middle class. They are, unfortunately, the people who cannot afford to travel in higher classes and who have perforce to travel in third class. When they come to the station the coolies are a terrible pest. Though rates are fixed for them it is common knowledge that they charge much more. Sometimes it is most annoying. Just imagine the case of a man with his wife and children, who with an emaciated body cannot pull all his burdens with him and cannot by himself carry all the luggage he has got. He has to submit to the dictates of the coolies. It is unfortunate that he has got to be at their mercy.

When we come to the waiting rooms at any railway junction or railway station they are nothing better than cattle sheds. If cattle sheds or cattle pounds are compared with these so-called third-class passenger waiting rooms or waiting halls I do not think the former would stand very low in comparison. Is it not possible for the Honourable the Railway Minister to devise some means to bring some solace and relief to these people? We see in the second class waiting rooms cane chairs, cane benches, settees, teapots and every sort of comfort and even separate bath rooms. So far as physical comforts are concerned the poor man also wants these and there can be no difference between the classes. There is no justification for this disparity in such comfort simply for the reason of buying a lower class ticket, but it is unfortunate that in these waiting halls for third-class passengers there is not even a cane chair or bench or anything of that sort. It is very easy for the railway authorities to provide these. When we come to the construction of these buildings we see that in most cases they are only verandahs or opensheds. When it is winter season or rainy season it is almost impossible to stay in them. It is not possible for us to have good waiting halls with doors, windows and verandahs? I am sure it is possible. Also, there should be a bath room in each of these waiting halls. As regards drinking water we find that there are hardly one or two hydrants on the platform one at this end of the station and the other at the other end of the platform with the result that whenever a train arrives there is such a big rush on the hydrants for drinking water and it is impossible for any weak person to go and get his supply of water. In most cases there is a great inconvenience to the passengers. Is it not possible for us to make suitable arrangements for supply of water?

Coming to the compartments in the trains we find the same type of coaches are there which used to ply before 15th August 1947 and these eighteen months of Independence have brought no difference whatsoever. It has been stated by the Honourable Minister of State for Railways that in 1938-39 we used to have above 11,000 coaches and now there are only 10,000. During the few months that he has been in office he could do something to eliminate the differences in the seating arrangements in second, third and first class. Is it not possible for us to have the seats in all the carriages, whether third or second or first class, cushioned? All these things should definitely be done. We should have also proper arrangements for privys and bath rooms. I think it is not too much to expect that these amenities be provided for during the course of the next twelve months that lie ahead of us.

As regards the new classification the Honourable the Minister of State for Railways has been pleased to remark that this second class has become a popular class and that is why it is overcrowded. I fail to understand how this is so. When there was a fare of $7\frac{1}{2}$ pies per mile for the inter class it was not a popular class with the third class passengers. When the fare has been raised from $7\frac{1}{2}$ pies to 9 pies per mile it becomes popular! This mathematics definitely illudes my comprehension. I cannot understand how third class passengers take to second class travelling when the fare is raised from $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 9 pies. In the other case it is true that most of those people who used to travel second class are not travelling second but are travelling first class. And most of them who could not afford to travel first are travelling second class or perhaps third class because that is better. Why should they pay higher fare and be put to the same inconvenience as third class passengers? I therefore think that so far as the question of the new classification is concerned it deserves serious consideration of the railway authorities.

When we come to the refreshment rooms or the restaurant cars that run with the trains we find that the caterers do not even give the bills to their customers. And more often than not the food is most unwholesome and unfit for human consumption. Rotten stuff is given there, and I would be very grateful if direct attention is brought to bear upon these things.

In conclusion I may observe that we are all aware of the change of the times. So far as the common man, the down-trodden, the dumb millions of the country are concerned, they expect something big out of the Independence that we have secured. In fact they are no more dumb now. The impact of freedom has made them also vocal and conscious. They are now vocal and assertive. They think that with national government and our trusted leaders at the helm of affairs their lot would be better. I happened to talk to a simple villager. I said "you are going to travel seven or eight miles, how is it you cannot walk"? He said "it matters just half or one seer grain more; I would sell that and pay the railway; why should I walk". That is the psychology. They want more comfort and they want greater amenities. It is up to us and to this House as the guardians of the rights and amenities of the people to induce and persuade our Railway Minister and the authorities to look after the amenities that are so necessary and desirable in the interests of the people at large.

I may submit once again in the end that the amount that has been earmarked, namely Rs. 1.5 crores, from the Betterment Fund is rather incommensurate and disproportionate to the growing needs for the amenities that the third class passengers and other passengers stand in need of.

Shri B. N. Munavalli (Bombay States): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I congratulate the honourable Minister for Railways as well as the Minister of State for Railways, for having placed before us, a budget which is full of hope and promise. The Railway Minister has narrated before us the performance of the railways, and today I have got the opportunity of speaking about the performance of the passengers. Yesterday the honourable Minister of State for Railways gave figures as to the number of passengers the railway had to carry on 31st March 1939 and on 31st March 1948. He stated that the railways had to carry 144 per cent. more passengers and that the coaches in 1939 were 11,639 whereas in 1948 they were only 10,680.

This shows the number of passengers who have travelled with so much inconvenience, with so many difficulties and against such odds. It was great patience on the part of the passengers rather than any bravery on the part of the Railways.

Sir, If we look at the way in which the passengers have to take their seats in the compartment, it is really wonderful. Of course, some of the passengers do not get tickets at all, but those who do get the tickets find it highly impossible to enter the compartments. Under these circumstances, they have to take the aid of the coolies, and naturally the coolies will take a higher price for the bravery they are showing in order to get these people into the compartments. They take these passengers open their shoulders and push them in through the windows. It is a horrible scene, too difficult to describe. Women and children and old people, all are pushed in. And the cooly's charge for doing this job is more than the passenger fare. That is the trouble. Sir, I am not depicting a fairy tale but these are the facts. If the honourable Ministers will come to Poona and attend these mail trains from Poona to Bangalore and also the express trains, going from Poona to Sholapur, they will realise the whole position. (An Honourable Member: "It is everywhere the same.") Of course, as I am travelling from Poona to Hubli often, I have come to have this experience. I have seen it with my own eyes and I am narrating it. (An Honourable Member: "Have you got similar experience?") It amounts to that when I have seen it with my own eyes; though I have not been pushed or lifted by the cooly myself, I have seen other persons being pushed in.

That was as regards third-class passengers. As regards second-class passengers, there also it is a very difficult affair to get seats. What some of the people do is that they bribe the coolies; the bribing begins from the cooly onwards. They bribe the cooly in order to get some seating accommodation and the cooly does it for them. The cooly will enter the train and keep some upper berth and will be paid two rupees or three rupees and the passenger will have a comfortable seat there. All these things are going on in that way.

The same is the case while purchasing tickets. The tickets are purchased ahead by some agents and the booking office is closed. Then the tickets are sold outside and the blackmarketing goes on. The sooner this sort of practice is stopped the better it is for us.

The number of passengers in the year 1947-48 has increased by 150 millions as stated in the report submitted to us. But so long as the number is increasing and there is no progress in getting more coaches, it is highly impossible to remedy the difficulties of the third-class passengers. The only way is that we should try to get more and more coaches as well as locomotives. Sir, the troubles and difficulties of the passengers are going to increase hereafter because in the months of March and April there will be so many fairs throughout the country and during these occasions the devotees visit many shrines and many fairs. But we find that on those occasions the trains do not contain even two coaches more to meet the rush. So, I would suggest that whenever there are fairs and jatras, the honourable Minister should make arrangements to see that some more coaches are attached. In Hubli there is a fair of Shiddharudha Swami on Shivaratri day. But the number of coaches in the trains are the same though the people travelling on that day are ten-fold. You can imagine how the people have to travel huddled together. I therefore request that in order to mitigate the difficulties of the passengers, at least on such occasions, the railway should try to add more coaches to the local trains.

As regards the Betterment Fund it is a matter of shame to see that only Rs. 13 lakhs have been spent up till now, although the Fund stands at Rs. 12 crores. Every year promises have been made by the honourable Minister in charge that they would look into the matter and pay attention to the amenities of the passengers, but when we look to the facts they have not paid any attention at all. I hope the honourable Minister Mr. Gopalaswami Ayyangar will give his attention to this matter. He has stated in his speech that he will pay his utmost attention to the amenities and that he will not only spend the amount that has been proposed to be spent but much more if necessary. I hope, Sir, that he will keep his promise and see that something is done to mitigate the difficulties of the passengers and also to provide amenities for the passengers.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan (Madras: General): I shall begin with the new classification, the Class II compartments, which came into effect on the first of January this year. I think it is a new year gift given by the honourable Minister for Railways just as we got the cease fire in Kashmir. The second-class passengers were faced with, if I may use the word, a revolution in the railway system. Not realising what would be the effect of such a change in the classification, they were faced with an experience for which they were not at all prepared. I doubt, Sir, very much whether even the honourable Ministers had realised what would be the outcome of such a change in the railway system. We were told that attempts will be made to make provision for providing sleeping accommodation but even the sleeping accommodation that is provided at terminal stations at present is not at all giving any benefit to the passengers because any person possessing a second-class ticket is allowed to get into the compartment at any time on the long run.

I was told when some second-class passengers got into a reserved second-class compartment, the Guard was asking the Second-class passengers who were in the compartment why they allowed other second-class passengers to get into the compartment. He was unable to do anything himself. The Guard is a helpless spectator of the quarrels and disputes that arise between the passengers and even the second-class compartments are filled to the very top. If the Guard is asked to help, the answer is that he has no instructions to that effect; so he is helpless. As many honourable Members have pointed out, there is practically no difference between the Third Class and the present Second Class. The only difference is there is increased overcrowding.

The honourable the Railway Minister said that the old Second Class passengers if they wanted to get more amenities should now pay 50 per cent more and travel in First Class. We cannot expect the old Second-Class passengers to pay 50 per cent increase in the charge overnight. Practically, the only people who have benefited are the old First-Class passengers. That is what the honourable Minister told us and that is actually the result of the experiment. If we compare the advantages and disadvantages of this new classification, we will find that the balance is in favour of disadvantages and that is to the credit of the honourable Ministers. I said all these things just to point out that whatever measures Government are taking, the tendency is to give more and more benefit to the richer classes and no care at all is being taken about the ordinary people. This is what we find from the various legislations and Bills that we pass in this Assembly. The honourable the Minister of State said that he will not take into account the complaints that we place here; that he cannot care for the complaints that come from a certain number of people, but I hope that we here are voicing the opinions and the feelings of the general public and it is not for our personal benefit alone.

Just a word about third-class passengers. The proposed amenities for third-class passengers may take too much time to be realised. What I want to suggest is that even if the Honourable the Railway Minister could reduce a rupee in their fare, it will have a great effect on the third-class people. I do hope the Honourable Minister will consider if he can bring about any reduction in third-class fares.

Next, I wish to refer to overcrowding in the G.I.P. Railway. We find that from Madras to Delhi, there is only one train—the Grand Trunk Express. At all the wayside stations, this train is compelled to stop and we find scores of people getting into the compartments, and that too, ticketless travellers. These ticketless travellers get into these compartments because I think there is no other train for them and they have no time also for getting tickets and they mostly get into the train at night time. I wish to suggest to the Honourable Minister if he would consider whether it will be possible for him to have a train from Nagpur to Delhi and another from Madras to Nagpur to solve this difficulty.

The next thing is about want of waiting rooms for women in many of the railway stations. Even in small stations, though they are not important, the people who travel from them are very large in number. When compared to those who get into the trains from these stations, it will be better that such people are given waiting rooms separately. In many stations, I have seen a chair or two or a bench in a waiting room and if some men happen to be come, there first, they will occupy them and women who get into the waiting room will not be able to get even sitting space.

Then a word about the catering system. We from South India are used to eating rice. On the way, whatever we may get by way of rice, we are compelled to buy, but if we pay Rs. 1/8/0 for a meal, what we get is just a eighth of an lb. or I do not think it will even come to that, and that too will be full of paddy, stones and other undesirable things. The curry will be good for nothing. So we have to buy it simply to get a little of rice and nothing else. I think another honourable Member spoke about the S.I.R. The catering there is done better. The only motive of these caterers is money. They do not look to the interests of the travellers. I hope the honourable Minister will seriously attend to the requests that have been made.

Mr. Hossain Imam (Bihar: Muslim): I regret that I cannot join either in the whole-sale condemnation of the Ministry or even in the fulsome praise that may be given to them. I realize that the honourable Minister has been in charge of this Department for such a short time that it would be unjust to blame him for all the troubles that we are in for. Similarly, it will not be just if we say that the good fortune that has come to us is the result of their efforts. But I do appreciate and greatly appreciate the valiant efforts which they have promised to make to improve things. And it is because of my confidence that I have in the two Ministers, that I am going to ask something which may scandalise the House. I regard this occasion as a testing place for our fitness to be called "self-governing". Are we really working for the people when we are here, and see the way in which third-class passengers are being treated today? No doubt, they have been treated like this in the past, but in the past we were slaves and today we are free. Has the third-class man got his freedom? This is the question which is before the House. Is the way which has been suggested the proper way of dealing with the matter? I am extremely grateful to the honourable the Minister of State for the picturesque manner in which he has presented the problem before us in a nutshell. He told us the number of coaches that we had in 1939 and the number of passengers we had then.

And he told us what was the condition today. The number of coaches has gone down and the number of passengers has more than doubled. This results in overcrowding before our very eyes. Are the Government of India going to abuse their position? They hold the position in which no one can prosecute them for overcrowding. Is it justifiable that the Government of India in the Railway Administration should fill up the third class compartments with passengers as if they were not human beings but mere cattle? The real remedy for this trouble consists not in granting all the amenities that have been suggested so far. I realise that it is just as if a starving man comes forward and my friend says: 'Give him a new shoe', 'Give him a new Gandhi cap' and a third one suggests 'Give him a handkerchief'. These are not the things a hungry man wants. What he wants is food. Similarly, what we want is more coaches; not one hundred coaches or two hundred coaches, but ten thousands of them at least. Within a measurable period of five years you should carry out this programme. I think the honourable Minister of State correctly stated the position when he said that if we want to provide sufficient accommodation, there may be no surplus left. I think that is exactly what he should work for. It is not surplus that we want. It is humane treatment that I want for my own nationals. I wish to see self-respect created in the minds of third-class passengers. In the India of the future that I envisage we should create self-respect in our people and that can be done only if we treat them with respect.

Third class passengers are the mainstay of the railways. But what is the care which is bestowed on them? They are treated by all and sundry as if they are beggars. Everybody bosses over them and these simple folk bear with it. When I ask you to show them consideration and give more accommodation, I cannot advocate reduction in the fare. I feel that the fares are ridiculously low. If they have to be treated better, they must pay higher charges. I know, Sir, today the position is such that people can afford to pay higher fares. It is wrong to suggest that the increase in fares that has been made is telling heavily on the passengers. If it weighs heavily on them it is because they are not treated humanely. I therefore suggest that we must have a plan of building coaches outside the Government workshops. The Government workshops are not sufficiently equipped to give us 2,000 wagons per year. We should have 10,000 coaches more in five years. I suggest, Sir, if need be all imports of luxury articles from dollar countries should be stopped and we should import in the place of the luxury articles, under-frames for carriages if we cannot manufacture them here. We can do without motor cars; we can do without radios; we can do without toilet goods coming from America. But the Indian of the future will not stand this treatment of the third class passengers. Charge them half an anna per mile, as we do for the bus journeys; but treat them fairly.

In this connection I may mention that I was surprised to learn of the benevolence of the Railway Board when it decided to give 40 new coaches to the B.N.R. B.N.R. does not pass through thickly populated areas and that is one of the reasons why B.N.R. was showing deficit for years and years. My recollection is that from 1924 to even 1940 B.N.R. was running at a deficit. The 40 new coaches should have in fact gone to the E.I.R. or the B.B. & C.I. which pass through thickly populated areas.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): For pilgrimage to Puri.

Mr. Hossain Imam: Well, for pilgrimages to Puri you can have carriages diverted at the time required. I was surprised that the number of coaches promised was in the neighbourhood of 200 per year for the broad-gauge line. It is grossly inadequate. But I am sure that even this estimate would not be fulfilled. Because every year you find from the report of the Railway Board that you indent for 500 locomotives and get much less. It is what we get that counts. I agree that our capacity is such that you cannot possibly double or treble it in a year's time. For this purpose private building should be relied upon. I mean to suggest that just as these goods wagons are being manufactured, it is quite possible, in all the big towns of Bombay, Madras, Calcutta and Cawnpore for you to have privately built coaches of simpler designs provided you supply the builders with the requisite material. The bottle-neck comes in when steel is required. It is for this reason I suggest that steel should be imported at higher cost from America's but it should not be put to Capital Account. You have been collecting from the suffering third class passengers lots of money all these years. It is but right and proper that the cost on account of the purchase of steel should be written down to the revenues as you have done even this year with Rs. Seven crores. Or you should ask the Government to share the cost, because they have benefitted in the past from the surplus of the railways. They gained something 150 crores during the war years.

In this connection I should like to say a few words about the justice of the Government getting a share out of the surplus profit. We have during the last session discussed the subject that when the Government enters the industrial field whether it should be liable to pay income-tax or not. We decided that even Government concerns should pay income-tax. Similarly, Sir, if this big organisation of ours, had been a private organisation, it would have paid corporation tax. As such it is right and proper that it should share not only the prosperity but also the difficulty of ours. When we are in difficulty, I think it is the duty of the Government to contribute towards this thing.

Shri B. Das: You should not forget the 125 crores of capital which at an earlier period was merged into the Railway company without any interest charges.

Mr. Hossain Imam: I have not much to add. In conclusion, I should like to speak about catering. I believe, Sir, in the old saying that the known devil is better than an unknown saint. I have no grouse against the catering by the department. I have no experience myself. In the E. I. Railway, we have no departmental catering, but I should like that with the disappearance of the Englishmen, the dining car which is provided for in the Railways should also be Indianized. Every effort should be made to increase the train numbers and for that purpose it is necessary to have more doubling at certain points and it is as essential both from the point of view of amenity to the passengers as from the defence needs. India must be fully equipped and the India of the future will not be like India of the past. It will have more prosperity; we are working for it; it will have a greater population and we will have to face it; and with these before us, it is only proper that an effort should be made from now onwards to increase the capacity of the railways for the carriage of passengers as well as goods and increase the total trade of India. Without increasing capacity we will not have real prosperity in the country as we envisage and as we say that we are working for Railway is like a life-line; you cannot have any kind of life unless you have blood in your body and railways now are no longer a matter of luxury; they are a matter of necessity and without their proper upkeep we will be nowhere.

लाला अचित राम : माननीय प्रधानजी सब भाइयों ने वज्ररा सहिवान की तारीफ की है। मुझे भी थोड़ी करनी चाहिए। मैं समझता हूँ कि जिस तरीके से उन्होंने स्ट्राइक के मामले को हैंडल किया है उस पर उनका मुबारक बाद देनी चाहिए। और जिन जज्बात का उन्होंने इजहार किया है उनकी भी मैं तारीफ करता हूँ। दूसरी बात ट्रेन्स के वक्त पर चलने की है। यह एक ऐसी चीज है जिसको हर एक गवर्नर जो सफर करता है महसूस करता है कि ट्रेन्स अब ज्यादा वक्त पर चलती है। मैं इस की भी मुबारक बाद देता हूँ। मैं समझता हूँ कि यह पहली किस्त है स्वराज्य के स्वरूप की और लोगों ने महसूस किया है कि स्वराज्य आ रहा है।

लेकिन मैं चन्द एक बातें आपसे अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ। इस वक्त एक बहुत बड़ा मामला है थर्डक्लास पैसिजर्स की (Crowding) का और वज्ररा सहिवान ने कहा है कि हम मजबूर हैं क्योंकि लोकोमोटिव्स यहां नहीं बनते हैं। बात माकूल है। अप कहते हैं कि कोचेज कहां से लायें, लाइनें कहां से लायें। यह सब मसाला बाहर से लाना पड़ता है। मैं यह बातें मानता हूँ। लेकिन मुझे अफसोस इस बात का है कि जो बातें उनके बस में हैं वह क्यों नहीं। मैं कहता हूँ कि मामूली तौर पर स्टेशनों पर पानी क्यों न हो। पानी तो इंग्लैंड और अमरीका से नहीं आयेगा। गाड़ियों में बिजली क्यों न हो। यह तो उन के करने की बात है। मैं और आचार्य जुगलकिशोर दिल्ली से जा रहे थे तो बिजली जलते जलते बन्द हो जाती थी। जब फासला ३० मील रह गया तो बिजली बन्द हो गई। जब सामान उतारा तो अंधेरे की वजह से चीजों को देख नहीं सका और एक चश्मा रह गया और ५० रुपये का नुकसान हो गया। यह बिजली जो जलते जलते बन्द हो जाती है, यह तो यहां ठीक की जा सकती है।

गाड़ियों में पानी नहीं होता। यह तो बाहर से नहीं आयेगा। सफाई नहीं होती। हमें हर चीज की तरफ देखना चाहिए। भंगी तो बाहर से नहीं आयेंगे। यह चीजें हैं जो आपके बस की हैं।

हमारे एक भाई ने कहा कि पांच साल के अन्दर १० हजार कोचेज हो जानी चाहिए। अभी तक जितनी तकरीरें हुई हैं उनमें केवल ठक्कर बावा ने कंस्ट्रक्टिव सजेशन दिया है और वह ऐसा सजेशन है जिस पर आप अमल कर सकते हैं कि गाड़ियों में वजाय लांजीट्यूडीनल होने के सीट्स फास वाइज हों। मैं एक और सजेशन देना चाहता हूँ और उससे बहुत नहीं तो कम से कम ५० पर सेंट तो आपकी एकामोडेशन फौरन बढ़ जायगी। आपने देखा होगा कि मिलिटरी की गाड़ियों के अन्दर फासवाइज सीट्स होती हैं और साथ ही डब्बे के अन्दर ऊपर को दो और वर्थ होती हैं। अगर आप ऐसा कर सकें तो मैं समझता हूँ कि फौरन, ज्यादा से ज्यादा ६ महीने में आपकी एकामोडेशन ५० पर सेंट बढ़ जायगी। यह यहां करने की बात है। इसमें इंग्लैंड से कोई सामान नहीं आयेगा। लकड़ी यहां बहुत मिल सकती है। मैं समझता हूँ कि आप ज्यादा जानते हैं लेकिन एक लेमैन (Layman) की तरह मुझे यह मालूम होता है कि यह मामूली बात है जो आप कर सकते हैं। मैं आपसे अर्ज करूँ कि मुझे इस बात का दुख नहीं है कि जिन वेंचों पर चार आदमी की जगह है उन पर पांच या छः आदमी बैठ जायें। इसमें ज्यादा तकलीफ नहीं है। लेकिन तकलीफ भी बात यह है कि हिन्दुस्तानियों में, जब से स्वराज्य आ गया है, आपस की हमदर्दी कम हो गई है। जब कोई आदमी गाड़ी पर चढ़ने के लिए आता है तो जितने आदमी बैठ होते हैं वह समझते हैं कि हमारा दुश्मन आ गया। हर आदमी दरवाजा बन्द करने की कोशिश करता है। हिन्दुस्तानी हिन्दुस्तानी का दुश्मन हो गया है और आदमी से ब्रूट (Brute) होगया है। आम तौर पर बच्चे के लिए, बूढ़े के लिए और औरत के लिये इज्जत होनी चाहिए, लेकिन ओवरक्राउडिंग इतना ज्यादा होता है कि हम यह सब भूल जाते हैं। लड़कों को कुचल देते हैं, बूढ़ों और औरतों को कुचल देते हैं। मैं समझता हूँ कि अगर यह हालत ५-७ बरस रही तो यह जो हमको आजादी मिली है इसको हम गुलामी बना देंगे। और हम एक नेशन आफ ब्रूट्स (Nation of brutes) बन जायेंगे। इस ओवरक्राउडिंग की वजह से हिन्दुस्तानी हिन्दुस्तानी से नफरत करता है। अगर कोई आदमी बैठने आता है और गाड़ी में ५० आदमी बैठे हैं तो उनको उसे देखकर नफरत पैदा हो जाती है। हम इशारा करते हैं कि दरवाजा बन्द करो या थका मारते हैं। मुझे दुःख होता है कि हमारे अन्दर मोरेलिटी (Morality) कम होती जा रही है। मुझे इस बात का दुःख है।

दूसरी बात मैं क्रेटरिंग के बारे में अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ। मुझे क्रेटरिंग की ज्यादा परवाह नहीं है, पर बहुत बुरी बात तो यह है कि वहां खाना बासी मिलता है। शाम का आटा सुबह और सुबह का आटा शाम को बनाकर खिलते हैं। वह बदबूदार होता है और खिया नहीं जा सकता। मिठाइयां

[लाला अचिन्त राम]

बार बार बासी खोये की शक्लें बदल बदल कर बनाई जाती हैं। इसी सिलसिले में एक बात जिसकी तरफ मैं खास तौर से तबज्जह दिलाना चाहता हूं वह यह है कि अभी भी हिन्दू और मुसलमानों के खाने के स्टाल्स अलग अलग हैं। यह दुःख की बात है। महात्मा गांधी ने अपने प्राण हिन्दू और मुस्लिम यूनिटी के लिए दे दिये और हमारे सरदार पटेल भी देश को कन्सोलिडेट (Consolidate) करने में देश की भलाई कर रहे हैं। लेकिन मुझे दुःख होता है कि बावजूद आजाद हो जाने के मुसलमान और हिन्दुओं के दिल अन्दर से कनवर्ट (Convert) नहीं हुए हैं। मैं बम्बई से आ रहा था तो स्टेशन (station) पर एक स्टाल था जहां १५ या २० मुसलमान तुर्की टोपी लगाये खाना खा रहे थे और दूसरी जगह कुछ लोग गांधी टोपी लगाये खाना खा रहे थे। यह देखकर मुझे बड़ा शॉक (shock) लगा (I was cut to the quick)। अगर यही हालत रही और यह मेंटलिटी न पलटी, तो मैं यकीनन कहता हूं कि पहिले देश का (Partition) हुआ और अब यहां सिविल वार होगी। आप उसकी बुनियाद डाल रहे हैं। मैं दरखास्त करूंगा कि बहुत जल्द आप तमाम लैब्ररिस् को काट दीजिये। सब को एक तरह का कर दीजिये ताकि कोई फर्क ही न मालूम हो। कपड़े भी एकसे हों, वस्त्र भी एक से हों और आप नामुमकिन बना दें कि कोई फर्क कर सके। मैं ज्यादा वक्त नहीं लेना चाहता। आम तौर पर ज्यादा वक्त लेने की चाहत होती है पर मैं आठ मिनट ही लेना चाहता हूं। मैं उम्मीद करता हूं कि आप इन बातों पर अमल करेंगे ताकि कुछ फायदा हो सके।

Lala Achint Ram: All the honourable members have offered praise to the honourable Ministers. I should also praise them a little. I think they are to be congratulated for the manner in which they have handled the strike affair. I also praise the sentiments to which they have given expression. The other matter relates to the running of the trains in time. That the trains are now running more in time is something that is realized by everyone who travels. I offer my congratulations on that account too. I feel this is the first instalment of the advent of Swarajya and the people have felt that Swarajya is coming.

But I wish to say a few things to you. At this time crowding in of third class passengers forms a major problem. The honourable ministers have said they are helpless because locomotives are not manufactured here. The plea is reasonable. They say from where are they to bring the coaches, from where are they to bring the lines, for all this material has to be imported from abroad. I concede all that. What grieves me, however, is why should things not be done which it is within their power to do. I say why should there not be water available at the stations in the ordinary way. Water is surely not to be imported from England and America. Why should there not be electric light in the trains? This is something which they could do. While I and Acharya Jugal Kishore were travelling from Delhi the electric light would go out now and then. When there were 30 miles left to be covered the lights went out. When I took down my luggage I could not see things on account of the darkness, with the result that a pair of glasses was left behind which meant a loss of fifty rupees. This light that goes out at intervals can surely be set right here.

There are some other petty matters besides, such as the doors of carriages opening outward. My sister met her end from that very cause. Just recently when I started from Bombay I noticed that doors of carriages opened outward. It pained me very much. This is an ordinary matter which could be attended to here, viz., that doors should open inward and not outward.

There is no water available in trains. This will not come from abroad. There is no cleanliness. We should look to everything. Sweepers are not to be brought from abroad. These are things within your power.

One of our brothers has remarked that 10 thousand coaches should be manufactured within five years. Out of all the speeches that have been delivered so far only the one by Thakkar Baba contains a constructive suggestion, and this is a suggestion which you could act upon. This suggestion is that the seats in the trains should be cross-wise rather than longitudinal. I wish to offer another suggestion whereby accommodation would increase immediately by 50 per cent. if not more. You must have noticed that 3 military trains the seats are built cross-wise and, at the same time, there are one or two additional upper births inside the compartment. If you could do so I think that the accommodation at your disposal would increase by 50 per cent. immediately, or within six months at the latest. This is something that could be done here. No material is to be imported from England for doing it. Timber is available here in abundance. I think you know better but even as a layman I feel that this is an ordinary matter which you could attend to. Let me tell you that I am not grieved by the fact that five or six men should be occupying a bench that is intended to seat four. This does not cause much inconvenience. The thing that pains is this that, ever since the advent of Swarajya, mutual sympathy between Indians is at a low ebb. When a man appears with the intention of boarding the train all the people who are already in feel here comes an enemy. Everyone tries to close the door. Indian has become inimical to Indian and turned from man to brute. There ought to be regard for children, old men and women, generally, but the over-crowding is such that we forget all this. We trample down children, old men and women. I feel that if this state of affairs continues for 5 to 7 years we shall turn this freedom that we have got into slavery and we shall become a nation of brutes. Because of this over-crowding Indian hates Indian. If a man comes along to take his seat, and there are already 50 men sitting in the train they are filled with hatred at his sight. We make a sign signifying, 'shut the door' or give a push. I am grieved to discover a waning sense of morality in us. This pains me.

The other submission that I wish to make is with regard to the 'catering'. I do not mind the catering very much but the worst of it is this that stale food is served there. The dough left over from the previous evening is baked up and served next morning and that left over in the morning is done up and served in the evening. It gives a bad odour and cannot be taken. The same stale Khôya (condensed and thickened milk) is used over and over again in the preparation of sweets, the form only being changed. In this connection, something to which I wish specially to draw your attention is this that still there are separate eating stalls for Hindus and Muhammedans. This is regrettable. Mahatma Gandhi laid down his life in the cause of Hindu-Muslim unity and our Sardar Patel is also working for the good of the country.

in consolidating it but it pains me to find that in spite of the freedom the hearts of the Hindus and the Muslims have not been converted from within. While I was coming from Bombay I saw at Ratlam 15 or 20 Muslims in Turkish caps taking their meals at one stall and some people in Gandhi caps having their food at another place. This gave me a great shock. I was cut to the quick. If this state of affairs continues and this mentality does not change I can say with certainty that whereas formerly the country was partitioned this time there would be a civil war here. You are laying the foundation for that. I would ask you to obliterate all labels very soon. Make them all uniform so that no distinction be perceptible. There should be uniform dress and uniform utensils and it should be made impossible for anyone to make a distinction. I do not wish to take much time. There is generally a desire to take more time but I wish to take eight minutes only. I hope you would act upon these suggestions which might yield some benefit.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: The discussion on this cut motion has largely been an extension of the general debate. I do not think I should take up the time of the House by going over the same ground regarding overcrowding and re-classification. But, I wish to inform my honourable friend Mr. Hossain Imam who made such a passionate appeal for increasing the coaching accommodation that all the suggestions which he has put forward have already been acted upon. Besides, the railway workshops, the Hindustan Air Craft factory is actively engaged in the manufacture of coaches for railway. Some of the new designs have already arrived and they have been put into operation.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: How many, please?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: In the beginning of January, three coaches had been delivered to the M.S.M. Railway and by the end of the coming year, 65 coaches would have been delivered and they would be running over the various railways.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: During this financial year?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: During the next financial year. Probably fifteen or twenty would be delivered during the current year. I went and saw one of the coaches and talked to the passengers at Madras. They were all very glad about the design. But, one thing that struck me was, and it has been mentioned by one honourable member, that though the coach had been properly designed, the whole space was packed with luggage and people could not move about or do anything. I do appreciate the suggestion of my honourable friend Mr. Tajamul Husain that we should compel the people to put their luggage in the luggage vans.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Provided they are delivered safely.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: There is the rule. If we bring about that change also, there will be a lot of criticism. I do think that we should at some time or other take measures to see that at least a part of the luggage to which a passenger is entitled at present is compulsorily put in the luggage van and arrangements made to deliver them safely to the passengers at the other end if we are to make our third class travelling a little tolerable; otherwise, whatever coaches are supplied, they will all be more or less goods vans rather than passenger carriages.

I do not know whether we shall reach the target of 2,000 coaches a year in the next five years; but I do think that we may reach a target of 1,000 coaches a year within the next five years and that target may suffice at least for the present level of travelling.

Two valuable suggestions have been made in order to relieve the present overcrowding pending arrival of new coaches. It has been suggested that we should take steps to eliminate ticketless travellers and beggars. Measures are being taken to stop ticketless travelling. But, unfortunately, over-crowding is itself one of the causes of ticketless travelling. It is hardly possible to get into any of the third class coaches to check whether the passengers have tickets or not. Therefore, we are in a sort of vicious circle which we have to pierce on more than one front if we are to solve the problem. The problem is being tackled from all possible points. As for the beggars, I wish we could get rid of the old traditional sympathy for the beggar, especially when he puts on the robes of saintliness. If the honourable members will try to educate the public that every sympathy shown to the beggar in the train is sympathy taken away from the poor honest third class passenger, they will certainly be doing a great deal of public service.

Shri B. Das: Why do the station staff allow them into the station yards?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: In this as in the matter of travelling on the foot-boards, the railway staff are not allowing anybody. These things are happening in spite of the railway staff. Unless we can increase our railway police force to an extent which will become burdensome on the revenues of the railways, we cannot check this. It is only with active public co-operation that we could get rid of these two things. (An honourable Member: 'We have got a surplus budget.') In this connection, I may mention the valuable suggestion made by Sjt. Thakur Bapa that cross-wise seating may increase seating accommodation. I think in the new carriages, the seats are designed in this fashion. It will not be profitable for us to send all the old coaches with longitudinal seats to the workshops to reconvert them into cross seats. They have not been designed for that purpose. In designing new carriages, this suggestion will be kept in mind.

Some of the members have misunderstood the scope of the Betterment Fund. The Betterment Fund is not intended to provide coaches or new stations or such big capital works. They have to come out of the railway revenues. The Betterment Fund is intended to provide such minor amenities as are lacking now and which ought to be provided whenever we provide a new station. A list is given on page 22 of the Explanatory memorandum from which you will find that in the coming year, we propose to spend one crore and sixty-six lakhs on the various amenities. You will find that the major items are, raising, surfacing and covering of platforms,—46 lakhs, provision of waiting rooms, waiting halls and festival sheds—39.30 lakhs. Sir, if we have to cover all the platforms in all the stations in this country and provided waiting rooms

Shri M. Tirmuala Rao: On a point of information, Sir, was it ever considered by the Ministry what exactly are the purposes for which this betterment fund could be devoted?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What is the meaning of amenity?

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Different people have understood this to mean differently on different occasions. Have we got any definition of this, Sir?

An Honourable Member: Is construction of a platform an amenity?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I am sure this is not meant for station building.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: If we raise the platforms in the way side stations, it is an unremunerative expenditure which is intended for the benefit of the passengers. That is the meaning of passenger amenity: any unremunerative expenditure which is primarily intended for the convenience of the majority of the passengers, that is, third class passengers: that is the sort of rough classification we have made to concentrate our attention on these matters which affect the poor passenger today. Wherever the platforms are bad, if we raise those platforms, certainly the passengers are more comfortable; if we cover the platforms, the passengers get the convenience.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: This is a necessity.

Shri B. Das: That should be charged to capital expenditure.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: The difference is not between necessity and luxury; this is a method of financing. We get the Betterment Fund from the railway revenues. We have sorted it out in order to draw attention to the lack of these facilities which have normally to be provided. Because they have not been provided in the past, we have had to create the Betterment Fund.

Srijut Kuladhar Chaliha (Assam: General): Is not raising of platforms capital expenditure?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: We cannot put it to capital expenditure, because, thereby, the income of the railways is not increased. The present income will go on whether you raise the platform or not. It is not proper accounting to put such unremunerative expenditure on to the capital.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: You may then call it a necessity fund and not an amenity fund.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I do not know if my honourable friend, Mr. Sidhva, will call improvements to latrines a necessity or an amenity. 5 P.M. Sir it is a necessity and an amenity. All amenities are necessities which ought to be provided in normal railways and which have not been provided by the old railway system. I drew attention to this to emphasise this fact that it is not through unwillingness to spend money that we have made a budget allotment of Rs. 1½ crores. It is the difficulty under the present circumstances to get materials and the necessary equipment for the purpose that is limiting it. The honourable Minister for Railways has already assured the House that an intensive effort will be made to step up this expenditure and if we can spend more money we shall not hesitate to do so.

Many honourable members referred to the inadequate waiting rooms for third-class passengers, bad latrine accommodation and to other difficulties. Steps have already been taken to remedy some of these defects. I may mention briefly some of them.

All the railway administrations have been directed to provide at least 40 seats per 100 passengers for whom accommodation is provided in class III waiting halls. We do not want that the third class passengers should be sitting on the floor while seats are provided for the upper class passengers. Therefore arrangements are being made throughout the railway system to provide at least 40 per cent seats in waiting rooms.

Shri Raj Bahadur: Will there be any difference in the furniture provided in third class and second class waiting rooms? If so, why?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: The reason is that one pays 24 pies and the other 4 pies per mile. The numbers in the third class are so large that we cannot give them so much furniture. The idea is that it must be either concrete benches or good wooden benches so that people can sit comfortably.

Shri Raj Bahadur: The reply is not satisfactory.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Special efforts will be made to improve sanitary conditions and provide a better supply of drinking water. Some experiments will be made to supply iced-water to passengers.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): At least in Delhi.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Then we are prepared to withdraw these cut motions.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I think honourable Members will be glad to learn that electric fans are to be provided in all third class waiting rooms where there are the requisite equipments.

Shri H. V. Kamath: By what date?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: So far as third class compartments are concerned, the new coaches which are coming out of the Hindustan Aircraft Factory are already fitted with fans and all new coaches will be fitted with fans but it is not possible to do so to the old ones. Our engineers say that the whole thing has to be designed because all the wiring has to be made. We cannot send back the old coaches and have them fitted with fans at a cost which is worth while. Therefore, we must wait for the coming of new coaches for fans in the third class compartments.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Will there be a workable switch for the fans?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: So far as the third-class coaches are concerned, there will be only a common switch. It will not be possible to give a switch to each passenger.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Can you fit in radio receivers also? One radio receiver and all the rest supplied with loud speakers?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: When the coaching position has become easy, I am prepared to consider the possibility of having a sort of moving cinema equipped with all the necessary conveniences.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am afraid, the honourable Minister is going to take the House into fairyland!

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: About the catering facilities and other matters which have been mentioned, I have already dealt with them, and I may assure the House that every single suggestion which has been made will be carefully considered and wherever possible they will be accepted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In view of the reassuring assurance of the honourable Minister, does the honourable member wish to press his cut motion?

Shri H. V. Kamath: Is that a suggestion from you?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Not my suggestion.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: The purpose of the motion is to ventilate grievances and not to expect immediate redress. Therefore, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable member the leave of the House to withdraw?

The cut motion was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 23rd February, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE DEBATES

PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Wednesday, 2nd February, 1946

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-50 A.M.

ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES (TEMPORARY POWERS) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram (Minister of Food and Agriculture): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946.

This Bill is intended to replace an ordinance which was issued to strengthen our arrangements for controlling food offences. Under the Ordinance courts are empowered to impose sentences of imprisonment for food offences. This Bill is intended to replace that Ordinance.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill further to amend the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri Jairamdas Doulatram: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

RAILWAY BUDGET—LIST OF DEMANDS—concl'd.

SECOND STAGE—concl'd.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We shall now proceed with the Demands for Grants.
Mr. Shiva Rao.

Shri V. S. Sarwate (Madhya Bharat): Before the business for the day begins, may I request to be enlightened on one point? Yesterday, in the circulated agenda, the third item was regarding a cut motion and my name was there as a supporter. Anyhow, I do not know how it had been dropped and many other speakers got priority. May I know for future guidance, Sir, how I may be able to get priority?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am afraid the honourable member did not catch the eye of the Speaker.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Those members also did not rise in their seats; I noticed that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I did not see him stand up. When I wanted to call him, he went away. There was nothing intentional.

Mr. Frank Anthony (C.P. and Berar: General): Is it possible now, Sir, for any person who wants to catch the eye of the Speaker to do so by means of a list submitted in advance through the Whip?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Not necessary. Any honourable member can stand and he will take his turn.

In pursuance of the desire of the honourable members expressed yesterday and day before, I propose to allot the last hour today, 4 P.M. to 5 P.M. for moving such cut motions by unattached members, whichever motion they may like to move. At 4.45 P.M., as usual, the honourable Minister will be given fifteen minutes to reply, and then at five of the Clock all the motions will be put to the House.

DEMAND NO. 1—RAILWAY BOARD.

General administration with particular reference to Economy

Shri B. Shiva Rao (Madras: General): Sir, I move:

"That the demand under the head Railway Board be reduced by Rs. 100".

The object of this motion is, as stated on this paper, to discuss general administration with particular reference to economy.

In moving this motion after a long general discussion of almost every aspect of the general administration of railways, it will be rather difficult to avoid covering the ground which has already been traversed in the first stage of budget debate. I shall, however do my best not to take the time of the House with points which have already been discussed.

At the very outset, I would like to explain what I mean by the term economy. As I understand it, it does not necessarily mean reduced expenditure. It means, from my point of view, remunerative expenditure and avoidance of extravagance and waste. In the main, I shall confine my observations to two points, which, so far as I am aware, were not raised in the general discussion of the budget. One relates to research both economic and scientific, and the other to publicity.

In reviewing the general administration of railways, one inevitably comes up against the recommendations of the Kunzru Committee. One feels a certain disadvantage in discussing anything on this subject without the full report being in our hands. It is only within the last few days that we have received a summary of these recommendations. Having read that summary, I feel the House would agree with me that the tribute paid by the honourable Minister for Railways in his opening speech to Pandit Kunzru and his colleagues was eminently well deserved, for the care and comprehensiveness with which they approached their task and formulated their recommendations. It does not mean that one agrees with every one of these recommendations. A little later, I shall indicate at least one important matter in which I think the honourable Minister for Railways should not accept the recommendations of the Committee.

There is one other general observation which I should like to make before proceeding further. The Minister for Railways in his budget speech referred to the Railways as the biggest national industry we have at the present moment. There was a reference yesterday by the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister in a speech in Madras in which he put nationalisation definitely into cold storage for the time being. Our railways will continue to be the biggest nationalised industry at the present moment, and I take the view that if the Ministry for Railways can improve the efficiency of the railway system as a whole, if it can produce a large body of contented labour as the honourable Mr. Santhanam said was the objective of his Ministry, and make labour feel that it is a real partner with the Government in running this enormous undertaking, then, it seems to me, the success achieved would be worth much more than declarations made by members of the Cabinet, whether for or against nationalisation.

I want our railway system to be more than mere carriers of passengers and of goods. As I said in a recent debate on food about two or three weeks ago, I would like our railways to play a prominent part in fostering mass education of every type. I want our railways to be carriers of ideas and to form a link between research, whether economic, or scientific, or industrial, and the common man; it is from this point of view that I shall review the general administration of the railways.

First, Sir, I would like to say a word about research, both economic and scientific. There was not much in the speech of the honourable Minister for Railways dealing with these two important aspects of research, but I have no doubt that when the policy of the Railway Board has been formulated on the recommendations of the Kunzru Committee in this respect, we shall have more information given to the House. There are numerous recommendations in that report which obviously call for further investigation and research. Some of these problems will necessarily have to be dealt with departmentally, because investigation in regard to them will have to be undertaken by people with a good deal of technical knowledge and administrative experience on the railways. But I venture to suggest to the Minister for Railways that there are perhaps other problems which could be more usefully dealt with by universities, by research institutes and by organizations like the Indian Council of World Affairs, with financial encouragement from the Railway Budget.

While on this point of economic research, I would like to make one further point. When research is undertaken by a Government ministry, railways or any other, the results should be capable of immediate and practical application. I have with me an admirable example of how research should not be undertaken. There was this morning a question by Mr. Shrivastava about ghee. Now, I have a report with me on the marketing of ghee and other milk products in India published by the Agricultural Marketing Department of the Ministry of Agriculture. It is an interesting document, written in the usual style of all secretariat documents. But when I read it, while I found it interesting, I also found that it would be of little practical use because, Sir, the statistics were compiled between the years 1940-43; the report was drafted in 1944; it was sent to the Government Press in January 1945; and it was issued, Sir, in January 1949. That I think is an interesting record and incidentally explains why reports of proceedings of this House take five and six months to be sent to members.

So far as economic research is concerned, I agree with the suggestion made by the Kunzru Committee that care should be taken to avoid duplication, whether it be of machinery or of functioning; and I say this because more than one Ministry has at the present moment its own Economic Adviser and a fairly large staff attached to him. It would be well before the Ministry of Railways undertakes any large economic research that a preliminary effort should be made to coordinate all such research.

I now pass on to the suggestion of research on the scientific side. There is one passage in the report of the Kunzru Committee with which I emphatically do not agree, and that relates to refrigeration. I looked up the original report and I do not find much to support the suggestion that the time has not arrived for an intensive research in regard to the numerous problems of refrigeration. It seems to me that the railways can do a great deal to open up an all-India market for fruit, vegetables, milk, fish, eggs and other perishable goods, only by having refrigerator goods trains going all over the country. I have seen myself how fruit and vegetables are transported from coast to coast in the United States, a distance of almost 3,000 miles, and the fruit and vegetables arrive at the destination in almost as good a condition as when they were transported.

12 Noon So far as this is concerned, I would like to make a suggestion to the honourable Minister for Railways, and that is that he should try an experiment. Let one or two air-conditioned coaches be released for the purpose entirely as an experimental measure; and let fruit or vegetables be sent first in the ordinary way and then in these air-conditioned coaches, to note the difference and the amount of fruit which arrives at the destination in good condition. If he is satisfied that commercial possibilities exist for air-conditioned transport for these perishables, I think he would have done a great service to the producers of fruit and vegetables and dairy produce in this country. So much, Sir, for research.

I would like to say a word now about publicity. I do not know whether at the present moment the Railway Board runs any journals, not only for the benefit of the railway workers all over the country, but a journal which would collect information of interest and of importance to railway workers in the course of their duties. I would like to see a journal started as soon as possible which would collect together the results of research in different directions, so that railwaymen may improve their efficiency. I would like to see the formation of a Brains Trust in the different railways and at the centre in the Railway Board, so that railwaymen at all levels may be encouraged to make their own contributions for publication in these journals for the sake of higher efficiency in the railway system.

Yesterday my honourable friend Mr. Kamath made the interesting suggestion that there should be suitable recognition for railway workers who bring to the notice of the administration the largest number of cases of corruption. Sir, I would like to see that suggestion carried further. At the present moment there is competition between the different railways in the sphere of sport. There are, I believe, hockey and football tournaments between different railways. I would like also to see fostered a spirit of healthy competition between the different railway systems and a shield for instance presented to the railway which has to its credit the largest number of trains which run punctually to time, or an administration which has put into effective operation the largest number of devices to reduce the cost of working. Speaking of punctuality I would like to inform the House that I had a letter last week from Madras from a friend who has asked me to congratulate my friend Mr. Santhanam, because one day last week the Grand Trunk Express arrived half an hour before time. That I think is a far cry from the allegation made in Shankar's Weekly last year that a young man who wanted to commit suicide threw himself on the track of the Grand Trunk Express, but died of starvation!

Sir, I have in mind an intensive development of the programme of publicity, primarily for the purpose of encouraging tourist traffic. I have never been able to understand the past attitude of the Railway Board in this matter. When every country in the world, notably a country like Britain, does every thing possible to earn dollars by inviting tourist traffic, by placing their best ships at the disposal of American tourists who may go to South America during the winter, for instance: when these countries are doing every thing possible to earn dollars, the Railway Board in the past has adopted a surprisingly complacent attitude. I believe I am right in saying that at the present moment the Railway Ministry has under contemplation the setting up of a Tourist Traffic section. In England it is attached to the Board of Trade, but it is immaterial to which particular Ministry it is attached in this country so long as there is an active programme which is going to be taken up with vigour. I say this because I am confident that this country can earn a substantial amount of dollars by inviting American tourist traffic, which can only be between the months of October and April: but in order to attract such traffic steps will have to be taken almost at once. You will have to have photographs of places which tourists can see and pamphlets which can be displayed in our various embassies and legations. A great deal more will have to be done in order to attract such traffic to India.

I am not only thinking of tourist traffic from abroad. I would like to suggest to the Railway Ministry that internal tourist traffic also should be encouraged by every possible means. Last week I read that there are a number of health resorts in Bihar which deserve encouragement, and I think the Railway Ministry can do a great deal to encourage internal travelling to places of that description. I would particularly invite the attention of the honourable Minister for Railways to the necessity of encouraging traffic to Kashmir during the forthcoming summer.

Sir, one last word before I conclude. I made a suggestion last year and I repeated it in the food debate a fortnight ago, that the railways should undertake the running of Exhibition Trains. I do not know how far that idea has appealed to the honourable Minister for Railways, but I would like him to make an experiment in this direction. At the present moment there is the Gandhi Memorial Exhibition at Rajghat, and I would like him seriously to consider the possibility of having a Gandhi Memorial Exhibition train go round the country in order to afford millions of people who have not had the privilege of seeing this exhibition an opportunity of paying their homage to the Great man. I am certain that the results of sending such an Exhibition Train round the country would be so profound that it would not be necessary to argue the case for exhibition trains in general to carry the results of scientific research in fields like agriculture and public health and make them available to the common man.

I do also suggest the establishment of a chain of cinema houses at important railway stations, particularly at pilgrim centres. I would like to say this: that I have taken the trouble to consult those who are already in the trade and I am assured that such a proposition would be more than self-supporting.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Cut motion moved:

"That the demand under the head 'Railway Board' be reduced by Rs. 100."

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): Sir, unlike my other friends I am really not in a position to congratulate the honourable Ministers for the budget they have produced. I can only sympathise with them because they have taken to a thankless job which will never bring real thanks to them. It is a very unpopular job which they have taken on our behalf and I therefore sympathise with them. I know their difficulties and one of the biggest difficulties in their way is the Railway Board. The Railway Board was constituted under the British regime because there were so many railway companies operating in the country and they wanted to have a sort of co-ordination in their management and therefore they constituted that Board, so that British firms may get orders from them and British people who were in the employ of the railways could be secured in positions of vantage. It was to have British interests safeguarded that they constituted this Railway Board. Now the Board has outlived its time, and circumstances have changed, and this Board cannot serve the purpose now. I therefore submit that the suggestion made by my honourable friend Pandit Kunzru be accepted. Either this Board must be replaced by a statutory organisation which will take charge of the whole administration of the railways and run it on commercial lines, or it must be diluted into a mere secretariat. There cannot be a middle way.

[Shri Mahavir Tyagi]

Sir, I want to use this occasion to raise the question of the fat pays which all high officers of Government are in receipt of. It may be all right for the honourable Ministers because they know that without them they cannot go on, that whenever there is an occasion they sing the praise of those officers. I would call them unpatriotic if they cannot offer to reduce their pay voluntarily. Why should they stick on to the old scales of pay which they drew when the British were in power. It was for them in a body to come and say in a spirit of patriotism now that they would be prepared to accept a reduced pay. No man in the State has a right to demand more pay than what the honourable Ministers get.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): The Minister is getting more than what the Secretaries are getting.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: The Chief Commissioner of Railways is now drawing Rs. 5,000 per month. I submit that these highly paid officers are like old white elephants which our predecessors had tamed. We cannot carry on with this pay. All this disaffection in the Railway Department and the talk of strikes, whether it be in the Railway Department or in the Postal or Telegraph Department, is proof of the fact that these highly paid officials are of little use to us. They must run the administration in such a manner that the meanest in a Department may feel that the Department is his, and he has a patriotic relationship with the Department and has no doubts about his prospects and his prosperity. So long as the smaller man, the man in the lower rung is not satisfied it is not possible to achieve any success in the Railway or be it even in the Secretariat Departments. These high officials are mad with the authority that they have got. They want several Assistants to them: each member of the Board wants a Director, a Joint Director, a Deputy Director, because they do not want to work. They are people who are paid for no work. Now, for instance, I would directly attack the Chief Commissioner of Railways. Sir, what is his job? It seems he has already toured Europe and seen European countries. Now he is intending to go to America for purchase of spare parts. It means that he has no job to do here in India. He is practically being used as a purchasing agent, as a broker, between us and the foreign firms. This is not surely the job of a Chief Commissioner of Railways. He has a very important office here. But he absents himself from here. What is this? I think it is a glaring proof of the fact that he is not being fully applied for the job for which the office was created. I submit that this Board is the basic trouble of Railways and the sooner we do away with the Board the better it would be.

Then there are four other members of the Board. It seems to be a caucus of civil engineers. A civil engineer is the Chief Commissioner of Railways. I do not know what engineering he really does. Then there are other members—I am sorry for the Commercial or Financial member of the Board, they could have him also as an engineer but he seems to be a non-engineer—but the rest, even the member for Staff is a civil engineer. (An honourable Member: 'Is he?') Yes, that is my information. If I am wrong the honourable Minister is there to correct me. I will go by my information. Even he is a civil engineer. Then the gentleman who represents the mechanical side is also a gentleman of civil engineering talents, I suppose he must have privately gained some knowledge of mechanical engineering also. (An Honourable Member: 'By correspondence course'). So it is a caucus of civil engineers that controls the Board. It is not that alone. These highly paid officials do little because every Railway is being managed by its own managers and its own mechanical engineers. The Railways are run by the railway authorities locally, practically for all purposes. Then what are these people to do? To co-ordinate! Whom to co-ordinate? It is one machine now, and there are no private companies running railways; it is all Government railway now. Then whom are these people co-ordinating? I do not know. So co-ordination is not the job which is needed now. I therefore submit that we should do away with this Board.

Besides these four members they have got six Directors. Everyone of the members has a Director to work under him. What has he to do, I do not understand. Why does he not do that much work as a typist does in the Secretariat? He should really do more than that work: he should do both desk work and administrative work. But they go about touring in saloons; they move about the country like kings without doing the job which was expected of them. It is all right for the honourable Member to say he is thankful to them. You are thankful to them because you realise your helplessness. It was all right when the members were required to dominate and over-awe the department by their pomp and show. Now this domination was out of place. You feel that they are serving you and that they are quite loyal because they are so humble in talk to you. But when you turn your back they laugh at you, they know that they are technical men and they also know they have somehow or other charmed you and impressed you that you cannot do without them. They feel that they can befool you—pardon me for this word, I am sorry for it, in parliamentary parlance I should have said that they think that they can make you unwise.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister of Railways and Transport): I am very glad to have that certificate from the honourable member.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I am sorry. Please pardon me. You know I am weak in English. There is so much staff. What are they doing? Each one of them wants a Director. The Director has also become a boss now and boss means no work because the work has to be done by the clerks who will prepare bills and accounts and all that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member can have one minute more.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I am sure the House will be more generous to me than you are. Then, Sir, this is not all, there are six Joint Directors below them—all of them with fat pay doing no real work themselves. The actual work as I have said, is being done by the managers of the different railways and their mechanical engineering staff independently. They do the job. These people in the Board are not to do the job directly, but they give the policy or try to co-ordinate. Then there are twelve Deputy Directors. That is, six Directors, six Joint Directors and twelve Deputy Directors. Besides this they have one Secretary, one Deputy Secretary, four Assistant Secretaries, sixteen Superintendents, one Economic Officer, two Special Officers. And everyday the budget is swelling because the Board is swelling. It is getting fat every year. Last time their budget was Rs. 10,57,000, but actually it came to Rs. 11,17,000. How is it? If the Board swells like this they go beyond the sanctioned budget. Why should you charge the smaller fry to have spent more than the budgeted amount? Big bosses are going about the country in their saloons with their fat allowances and without enough work. The grant now demanded is Rs. 10,90,000. I am afraid we cannot go on at this rate. The same is the case with the rest of the staff. According to the reports I find that in March 1947 there were 7,71,000 men, this being the total of the railwaymen. Now, at the end of March 1948 the figure was 8,23,712 men engaged. It is going on increasing. And nobody wants to get rid of the work. How would they do the work when they have no love and patriotism for the Department? The junior people are not well paid and the senior people are being too well paid. That is the case. I would leave this point though I have a lot to say.

[Shri Mahavir Tyagi]

Then I would like to mention about the three hundred blessed locomotives which have been ordered from America. My information is—I am saying this to help the honourable Minister, who may contradict me if I am wrong, and to help him to clear the misunderstanding in the country—the three hundred locomotives that were ordered were designed by the civil engineers or others in the Board and the mechanical engineers were not consulted. The information goes that after the order had been placed—the order was placed for bar frame engines—the mechanical engineers met in a conference and they were mostly of the opinion that the design did not fit the requirements of India. It is a heavy power engine. Perhaps the proposal was that instead of drawing 50 wagons as they generally do, or 60 or up to 70, the new locomotives might draw 100 wagons. The objection was that the marshalling capacity of our railway yards was not enough for 100 wagons. There is shunting on the railway lines; when a wagon has to be taken out from the midst of a train, well, the train has to be cut into two or three parts, one standing on one loop line and another on the other—that is known as marshalling. The marshalling yard's capacity in India as they were constructed, is said to be just enough to meet the requirements of a goods train consisting of 60 or 70 wagons and not for 100 wagons. Sir, if these big power engines begin to play about the whole marshalling yards and break the train into three or four parts then the yards will be blocked as sometimes you see the road in Khari Baoli, packed. That is one objection.

An other objection is about the soil. The track is not fit to carry these engines. That is an objection which also I would like the honourable Minister to enquire into.

The biggest objection is that these engines could not be repaired in our workshops because our workshops were designed to repair the plate frame engines and not these bar frame engines. They are technical affairs; I am not a technical authority but, please look into this technical matter also.

Sir, then there is the shortage of wagons and coaches. Last time we were told that we were short of 1,000 coaches. But Sir, howsoever accurate this statement may be, I tell the honourable Minister, "Your information is wrong; you said you had only one thousand coaches short, but shall I tell you you are short of 7,000 coaches and not 1,000? Last year also you said that you were short by 1,000 but then also you were wrongly informed. You again repeat the same story that you are short only by 1,000. I submit that my information persists that you are still short of 7,000 and not 1,000".

Sir, shall I tell him that his wagons are also being pilfered? We are told that they are alert about it and that they have arrived at a good compromise with Pakistan and that we have also managed to save securities worth Rs. 20 crores from Pakistan. But Pakistan laughs at us. They are quietly making up their loss through wagons. Have you ever taken the account of the wagons you sent to Pakistan from Amritsar and the wagons that returned to you? Are you in a position to say how many wagons really went to the share of Pakistan and how many wagons and coaches came to your share at the time of partition? And how many you have today? If you enquire into it in details you will be as sad as I. Supposing if I were again to provoke you into enquiry, and say that hundreds of your wagons have been stolen into Pakistan and they are not being returned. There is low paid clerk at Amritsar who keeps the accounts of these incoming and outgoing wagons. Has the big bosses ever cared to look into this question? Will you please enquire into it?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Will the honourable member please put down a question on that and I will give him all the figures that he wants.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I am very pleased to hear that, Sir. I want to make a prayer to you and to the House as well. I am myself a loud speaker; I have been speaking, by habit, very loudly, always. My tone therefore may not be mistaken to be an obstinacy; I am otherwise very humble and faithful. I am putting my arguments forward slightly loudly because I am a little enthusiastic about these points. I do not use these loud-speakers. I want to approach you direct and not through the proper channels of loud speakers, therefore you may please take it that my suggestions are absolutely in the spirit of co-operation, and not in the least destructive.

Sir, we are short of coaches. How many people there are who travel standing? I do not believe in this first class or second class—I am proletarian. I believe in only the third class and if I were a Minister in his place—I am sorry they have not taken me there.....

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I am quite willing to exchange places.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi:.....I would make it a rule that there would be only one class—call it third, first or anything. Unless you Ministers and these big bosses drawing Rs. 5,000 sit with the humble man of the village, the villager will never realise that democracy has come; to him it is not the democracy, it is the 'cracy' of those who travel in first class and who fly in the air. The humble man does not yet know what is swaraj. He does not want money, he does not want big wages; he does not struggle for these. He wants self-respect and it can be given to him only if the Ministers talk and joke with him on equal terms. Why not give him that little privilege? Travel with him and share his humour. What about the Governor-General's special? Why should you not turn it into third-class carriages? You have got thousands of such other coaches standing on the sidings which you can easily convert and use for travelling purposes.

Let there be one class or, Sir, you can have two classes, one the sleeping class and another waking class. In the waking class people can travel in the day, those who want sleeping berths can reserve them and go into the sleeping class. It will still be one class with different kinds of accommodation.

There are many other points, but I crave your indulgence—I want to press one more point. One of my friends mentioned about catering. Sir, the caterers on the Railways are given contracts. One was given a contract of Rs. 31-4-0 per month about twenty or thirty years ago. That man is still continuing on the same rate. He has engaged sub-contractors; it is a fact which every body knows but these Railway Board members would not care to look into it unless their subordinates bring it to their notice and they would in most cases, not bring it into their notice because they probably have a share in the profits of the main caterer. Sir, when I was in jail there used to be with me late Babu Shiv Prasad Gupta, he was a great man of India. He had received a tin full of tasteful laddoos from his home. One night at about 1 A.M. we all decided—Shri Mohan Lal Saxena too was there—we decided that we should steal some. On my toes I quietly went into his room and broke open the tin lock and stole some 60 or 70 laddoos. They were very tasteful. While I was bringing those laddoos into our common room, another friend now a Minister of U.P., Shri Atmaram Govind Kher caught hold of my kurta and beckoned me low on his pillow, as I gave my ear to him he quietly whispered "Station master ka haq de ke jao." I gave him four and I was let off.

Sir, similar is the condition in Railways. I would submit that these caterers have sub-contractors. If you engage smaller contractors for selling pan directly there is no loss of prestige in dealing with a smaller man; there is loss of prestige neither of the Government nor of the officials. A pan man pays Rs. 5 a day to the contractor who pays Rs. 31-4-0 a month, at Meerut; and the halwai pays Rs. 8 a day to the contractor. In this way his monthly income goes to about Rs. 1,400 or something like that and he pays you only Rs. 31-4-0. Such is the case everywhere. There are caterers whose monthly income goes up to Rs. 15,000 and they are hardly paying you one hundred per month. You can add 30 or 40 lakhs to your income by means of giving direct contracts to the smaller vendors.

Sir, I do not want to take more time and deprive other honourable members the opportunity of giving their precious suggestions. My own suggestions, I know, are not so precious.

Shri Arun Chandra Guha (West Bengal: General): Sir, in rising to support the cut motion, I am not unconscious of the difficulties in which our Ministers have to work or of the achievements that we have got during this one year or eighteen months. I know these Ministers have to deal with a machinery which they have inherited from our foreign masters.

Sir, with all deference to our Ministers, I like to differ from them when they unreservedly speak words of encomium for the permanent services and the departmental men. Unless the permanent services and these departments are radically mended, or ended, it will be very difficult for our Ministers to achieve any spectacular success. The honourable member who preceded me, Mr. Tyagi, has spoken about the Railway Board in very effective language and therefore I do not want to say much on that point. I in general endorse the sentiment that he has uttered, and I would like to request our Ministers not to rely too much on the Railway Board and the permanent services and the departmental officers. They should instill a new spirit into the departments if they really want to achieve any success.

We have been supplied with a copy of the summary of the recommendations made by the Railway Enquiry Committee. The findings of the Committee and their recommendations are not very optimistic. They have suggested some drastic changes. Last year the fares and freights have been considerably increased. The volume of traffic has also increased; I think the passenger traffic has increased by about 17 per cent. But the net income of the Railways has decreased. During the course of their enquiry, the Committee have found that efficiency has deteriorated—efficiency has deteriorated not only in the lower ranks but even at the top. In two important workshops—Jamalpur and Kharagpur—there was some inspection by some expert firms and their finding is that labour utilisation is only about 50 per cent. These two workshops belong to two Railways which are running in deficit for some years. If this be the condition, I cannot endorse the view expressed by the honourable Minister for Transport that our future is bright and that we have turned the corner. I hope that he would take drastic steps to see that labour is utilised to the full—not only in the workshops but also those at the top including every officer, highly paid or low paid; their full labour power must be utilised and the country should get the benefit of the salaries they are paid.

Sir, about my own Province I like to say a few words. Calcutta is one of the biggest cities of India and is a highly congested city. Unless we develop suitable suburban transport facilities, it will not only injure the sanitary conditions of the town but it will hamper the industrial development of the Province also. Bengal has suffered from partition and from many other calamities; but in addition to all that the transport arrangements of Calcutta are a handicap for its development in industry and commerce. Sir, you will be surprised to know that Calcutta has got five or six terminus stations; apart from Howrah and Sealdah we have got three or four other sub-terminus stations for small lines running from suburban areas to the City. These lines are all privately owned. My honourable friend from Assam gave a graphic description of the T.B. Railway. I think these lines also can be compared with that Railway. Sir, I wish the Railway Board or our Ministers take up the case of taking over these small lines under Government control and improving the transport arrangements of Calcutta so that its full industrial and commercial potentialities may be exploited by the country. I would like to impress on the honourable Ministers the need for electrification of these suburban railways. For Calcutta some municipal railway—underground or otherwise—should be arranged. Of course, compared with Delhi the transport facilities in Calcutta are far better. The tram and buses there run more regularly and more quickly than in Delhi; yet the congestion on those lines is so very heavy that something should be done immediately to improve the conditions.

Sir, in India there are, seventeen—or, I think, about twenty small non-Government railway lines. The Railways are our biggest nationalised industry. Therefore, I think these small lines should be nationalised immediately. It will not be a great burden for the Government either financially or administratively. When these big Railways have been taken over, I do not understand why these small lines should be left to private enterprises. These lines often connect some industrial areas with the countryside; they carry raw materials to the industrial areas and finished goods from the industrial areas to the countryside. So, I particularly like to press this point before our Railway Department and the honourable Ministers that they may take over these private lines as soon as possible.

Sir, about catering many things have been said. It has also been discussed in the Central Advisory Council. Catering at small stations should be given to local men and there should not be any monopoly contract, nor even any near-about monopoly contract as regards catering. Sir, while appreciating the difficulties of our Minister in bringing the railways up to our expectations, I would say that I expect him to do something to restore the pre-war facilities such as the return-ticket system, concessional rates for ceremonial and religious occasions, special trains for religious journeys, etc. Before the war there was the system of conducted tours by trains running through certain parts of the country taking passengers for fixed amounts which were lower than the usual fares. Such conducted tours increased the revenues of the railway administration and served as a sort of education to the public. Mr. Shiva Rao has already spoken about this point that inland tourist traffic should be arranged as also foreign tourist traffic should be encouraged.

As I have said, though the railways are working under difficult conditions, the Minister should see that the pre-war standard of efficiency is restored immediately. Full utilisation of the man-power of the Department is of prime importance. In recent debates in this House the Department has been blamed for almost all the evils of economic dislocation. There have been bottlenecks everywhere in the railway administration and in communications. It is up to our Minister for Transport and his colleague the Minister of State to see that they remove the cause of the complaint that the Railways are blocking the entire economic development of the country. I admit that they have been working under very difficult conditions. The whole administrative system was brought to a chaotic condition by our previous foreign masters. Our Ministers have to face this situation and create new conditions. I know that after the November Revolution in Russia it required a Trotsky to be diverted from other important portfolios to the Commissariat of Transport to put the whole system in order. He took very drastic steps. He had even to take the extreme step of shooting delinquent officers found guilty of deliberate negligence or of dishonesty. Of course, I do not suggest that our Ministers should go so far. I would suggest, however, that whenever acts of deliberate neglect or of dishonesty come to their notice, they should take steps to root out the whole source of the evil.

Now I would say a word about the gauge in our Railways. I know that it will not be possible at present to transform the whole system into a one-gauge system. But the administration should keep in mind, while starting new lines, that the whole system has to be transformed in the near future into broad gauge line.

Another local matter I desire to refer which relates to the timings of the railway services. These are often arranged in such a way that journeys from one place to another take inordinately long time. For example, the journey from Daltonganj to Patna, which is the capital of the Province in which Daltonganj is situated, a distance of only 180 miles takes about 22 hours. There should be some re-arrangement of the railway timings so that the passengers can travel even to their capital city in reasonable time.

The contribution of 7 crores to the General Revenue from the Railways has been much discussed here. In my view there is nothing unusual in it. The railway system is not only a public utility service, it is also a commercial service in which the Government of India have invested about 700 crores of rupees. Had it been a private enterprise, it would have paid all the taxes due to the Government. I think the nationalised industries should all be subject to the usual taxes. Taking that view, this contribution of seven crores is a negligible amount. It should be at least four or five times more. With these few remarks I support the cut motion, though I appreciate the difficulties and the achievements of the Ministry.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Mr. Deputy Speaker, one of the previous speakers complained of the top heavy nature of the railway administration. From the report of the debate last year I find that the debate was opened by the Honourable Shri K. Santhanam and one of the grievances which he mentioned was that members were not supplied with "control" figures. Among the instances which he then gave one was of the expenditure figures. In 1938-39 this figure was 47 crores and had risen to 142 crores in 1947-48. His complaint was that the honourable Minister did not supply him with a statement showing the increased percentage under major heads. Compared with 1939 the increase in 1947-48 was found to be 323 per cent. In 1948-49 it has risen to 346 per cent. One expected to be furnished with those controlled figures at least this year. Unfortunately this has not been done. The inevitable result is, to use his own words: "We cannot have a grip over the Budget" and cannot be in a position to offer constructive suggestions or criticisms. Anyway, one must be content with the figures that have been furnished. Put my difficulty is: The railway Board Report was supplied a day prior to the Budget discussions. I found the figures there so very perplexing that I had difficulty in understanding the report. I would take one instance. On page 2, the earnings on passengers are given as 65.10 crores. On page 17 the same receipts are shown at 66 crores and on page 19 these figures are given as 70.38 crores. One can understand if there is some explanation about these. For a person who has to read a voluminous report in a short time, one would expect a sort of table by reading which, at a glance, one can find how the differences are to be adjusted. That is not there, but that is a general complaint, which I would like to bring to the notice of the House, so that it may be remedied next time.

I want to emphasize that economy must mean justice and proper distribution and allocation of the funds which are to be given for the various purposes and I find that the R.M.R. section, that is the section running between Khandwa and Ajmere has received all along a step-motherly treatment. In 1946-47, it had no new lines, no new works. I refer to the programme which was supplied to us i.e., the open line programme for 1949-50. There is absolutely no programme for new works in this, for the R.M.R. Section.

Economy further means timely redress of grievances, timely redress and timely removal of the long-standing grievances. I will give only one or two instances within my knowledge.

I come from Indore and there had been two questions which had been agitating the people there. The present station at Indore is on the side opposite to the town. The passengers therefore suffer when coming from the town; they have to pass once across the level crossing and then again to come back. So it was suggested that the platform and booking should be on the side of the town. I do not think this will take more than a few thousands of rupees, but this has been under consideration for the last 20 years in my remembrance. I then happened to be in the Foreign department of that Government. All these 20 years the matter has been under consideration and nothing has been done as yet. Again the question of constructing an over-bridge over the level crossing is still pending; this had been going on for the last 25 years; I was young then and I am old now and probably, I am afraid, all these grievances may not be removed within my life-time. It has been one of the grievances that the Railway Administration takes such an abnormally long time to consider and arrive at some decision. They say all the while that these things are to be done; they are very necessary, but years roll on and nothing is done.

Indore is the biggest commercial centre in Central India. It is also a textile centre. It has got 10 mills and several ginning factories besides. It exports a lot of cloth; it imports coal and several other things; it is a mercantile centre of that whole part. It stands on a meter gauge and there has been a proposal to connect it with a broad-gauge. The nearest station is Ujjain, which is about 35 miles. Now there is a meter-gauge and I am told by authorities on whom one can rely that this can be done by putting in one additional rail; the earth-work is already there and it should not cost more than a few lakhs of rupees. I would suggest for the consideration of the Government whether the Government would not be prepared to raise a loan for the purpose. I am sure the mercantile community at Indore would be prepared to subscribe to the loan to the fullest extent, even if it is a few crores. In this case I want to know is: would the Government be prepared to raise a loan when a particular community or a particular place is ready to contribute for the loan. Both the Government and the community would thereby benefit. I do not think that this proposal should be against the policy of the Government or would in any way be a loss to Government.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): If Mr. Hukum Chand would give a present to the Government, Government will accept it.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: It is not a question of a present, but whether a loan would be acceptable. That is the question at present.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the honourable member close his speech now?

Shri V. S. Sarwate: No, Sir. I shall have to take five or ten minutes more.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member may resume his speech at Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Mr. Deputy Speaker, when the House rose for Lunch, I was dealing with the step-motherly attention and consideration which the R.M.R. Section receives at the hands of the railway administration. I was making a specific proposal that the Government should consider whether it would not be advisable to raise a loan for converting the present metre gauge from Ujjain to Indore into broad gauge and I had assured the Government that the commercial community at Indore would be forthcoming to fully subscribe this loan. In this connection, I would bring to the notice of the honourable Minister the military importance of Mhow which is on the same line, thirteen miles south of Indore. It is admitted that strategically considered, Mhow is the second line of defence in India; but there is at present no broad gauge line connecting Mhow with any other broad gauge station. This omission would be rectified if Mhow is linked at Ujjain to broad gauge. The distance is about 50 miles and there is no bridge to be constructed. I am told on authority that the expenses would be at the outside of a crore and a half. If this loan is floated at the rate of three per cent., the interest charges would come to four and a half lakhs. The results would justify such an expenditure. Not only would it be directly beneficial and paying; but, any loss which may be suffered, would be more than made up by the indirect benefits, which would result to the commercial community and the people in general. Further, Indore being a textile centre, it would help the general supply of cloth to the whole of India.

I would like to mention the various present difficulties which the Indore people are suffering. There is no goods shed in Indore. The platform both at the goods yard and the passenger yard is not covered. In the report, there is a statement showing the percentage of covered platforms. On page 71, we find that the percentage is given as 3.26. It would have been better if the report had shown the progress made from year to year.

There is another grievance which I particularly want to bring to the notice of the honourable Minister. The Railway section in this part passes through States but the States have not been represented all along on the Advisory Board of this section. That is one of the reasons why the R.M.R. Section is suffering at present. I would particularly request the honourable Minister to make arrangements for the States to be represented on the Advisory Board.

I would like to draw the attention of the House to one more thing. Real economy would mean efficiency. In the report there should be statistics showing the increase in efficiency, not only the quantum of efficiency, but the progressive increase. That would give us a real indication as to how the Ministry has been working. Now, we are at a disadvantage. The report given to us is for the year 1947-48 whereas the present Ministry is concerned not with 1947-48 but with 1948-49. Naturally any remarks which the House may pass regarding the state of things revealed by this report might probably be not just. All the same, one has to rely on that Report. As regards efficiency, I find from the table, punctuality in the broad gauge has decreased. It has come down from 53 to 48, whereas in the metre gauge, the punctuality of trains has increased from 47 to 49 per cent. In this connection, mere averages won't do. If the broad gauge trains do not go punctually, the metre gauge passengers who have to change at certain junctions suffer all the same even if the metre gauge trains go in time. This morning I had asked a question whether the Frontier Mail reaches Rellam punctually; I was given certain statistics as to how it reached in the month of February. My question related to January; but that is another matter.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: We have improved.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: All the same, what I want to point out is, if the broad gauge trains run irregularly or unpunctually, no benefit accrues to the passengers even if the metre gauge trains run punctually. What I would suggest to the honourable Minister is this: let us have some statistics showing from year to year the progress that is made. That would give us an indication as to the real state of affairs. In this connection, may I ask the honourable Minister, would it not be feasible and practicable for the Ministry to give us the actuals for the current year ending December. The budget comes up for consideration some time in February. The actuals may be given for the year ending December.

I should like to raise one more point and I have done for the present. The receipt side has not at all been touched during this discussion; I do not know why it has been so. I think the receipt side is over sanguine. The receipts show an increase of six crores on account of goods transport. It is said that the freight structure that has been revised justifies this increase. We would certainly have been helped if the actuals during the last six months or three months from October to December had been given. Then, we would have been in a better position to appreciate the reasons for this increase. So I submit that if the budget is to be studied and studied effectively and with some benefit, then the actuals of the last year ending in December ought to be supplied to the House. That would be a real indication of the estimates for the current year and then we would be in a position to appreciate the remarks which the honourable Minister makes in his budget speech.

Mr. K. A. Mohamed (Travancore State): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I understand that the cut motion now before the House is intended to cover all subjects except those covered by the first and second cut motions. Under that impression, I may just raise a point of local importance. I would very much like to make my contribution of criticisms and suggestions to those that have already been made by honourable members of this House, but as my time is so short, I may confine myself to the raising of a very important local issue.

Sir, under Demand No. 15 proposals have been made for the investigation and the extension of new lines, but I am very much disappointed to find that no provision has been made for the extension of the South India Railway from Ernakulam, in Cochin State to Quilon in Travancore State. This question was considered in 1920 and the line was investigated and a detailed survey was conducted and an estimate was drawn up in 1927. All this was done with the concurrence of the Central Government. If my information is correct, the financial implications of this railway project were examined and approved by the then Railway Board. However, it did not materialise. Since then the Cochin harbour has very much developed commercially, and there have sprung up in Travancore very many new industries. Thus the importance of the proposed new railway was felt more and more and had been agitating the minds of the Travancore people for the last many years. But unfortunately Travancore declared her independence under the old regime and we were not able to take up this scheme before. But now we are a part and parcel of the Indian Union and we are here now to represent the Travancore State. The railway administration, especially communications, is now a Central subject, and I submit that this question may be now taken up by the railway administration.

The financial implications of this extension are fully assured because this route goes through a very densely populated area. I may inform the honourable members of this House that the density of population in those areas is 2,000 per square mile. It is more than the density anywhere in the world, and many of the industries now started along the route of this line will be very much benefited by this project. Here in Northern India, especially in the Gangetic plain, we see a network of railway lines and the reason given is that there the population is very dense and therefore there was need for this vast network of railway lines. But if that is to be applied to Travancore, I am sure there should have been 500 miles of railway. At present we have a very short line, something like 98 miles only. The project I propose is to cover only 95 miles and I think that the rural as well as the industrial economy of the country will be very much improved if this work is taken up.

One further extension which I may propose is from Trivandrum Central to Cape Comorin. Many of the members know that Cape Comorin is the Land's End of India and if that project is completed, then from the foot of the Himalayas to Cape Comorin we will have a through railway service. From the Defence point of view it would be of very great importance. It is also a very sound financial proposition because this line has to go through a plain and there are not so many rivers to be bridged and there is very dense population in that area, and even without taking into consideration the goods traffic, the passenger traffic will amply justify this extension, and if this is to be linked up with Tinnevely we will have a very convenient railway system in the south of this big continent. Many of the honourable members of this House might not have gone and seen Cape Comorin, which is a very beautiful place of all-India religious importance, and if this railway is to be taken up that will give easy access to people from this part of the country.

I am fully aware, that when I propose the extension of these lines the finances required are to be found. It is also to be considered whether the railway administration is now in a position to take up these lines at one stretch. But my submission is that the present complaint that has been voiced in this House, that there is too much overcrowding, is only a passing phase. I am sure that depression has set in and the tendency now is to travel less and less. Therefore, in the near future I do not think there will be so much pressure as is being experienced. So our attention must be diverted on extending the railways further and further. I will go to the extent of suggesting an increase in fares and in freights, as I do not wish for cheap popularity, as a reasonable proposition for collecting funds for the extension of new railway lines. Even under the present conditions this increase will not create any hardship. On the contrary, we may be earning a very good income and if we plan in that way I do not think there will be very much difficulty to extend the services.

I submit that the administration may kindly consider these matters and see their way to take up this work at an early date and satisfy the people at that end of the land.

पिछले जून में पंजाब गवर्नमेंट ने पंजाब के अन्दर रिश्वत का एक हफ्ता मनाया । पानीपत में भी यह हफ्ता मनाया गया । लेकिन इसका

नतीजा यह हुआ कि इसके बाद चीफ-गुड्स क्लर्क ने अपनी रिश्वत और भी ज्यादा कर दी और ये कहा चूँकि यहां पर रिश्वत के बारे में इन्कवारी होगी इसलिए अब एक आने के बजाय दो आना लिया जायगा । जिसमें से एक आना मेरा हिस्सा होगा और दूसरा एक आना उनको देना पड़ेगा जोकि यहां पर इन्कवायरी करने आयेंगे । हमको जब यह पता लगा तो हमने रेड का इन्तजाम किया । चुनावे २४ जून को मि० शाहनी, मजिस्ट्रेट दर्जे अव्वल ने उसको पचास रूपया रिश्वत लेते पकड़ा । पकड़े जाने पर उस क्लर्क ने कहा मेरा इसमें क्या कसूर है, इसका थोड़ा सा हिस्सा मेरे घर आयेगा और बाकी हिस्सा ऊपर के अफसरों के पास जायेगा ।

बाकी जगहों पर तो रिश्वत इनडिबिज्यूल तौर पर लेते हैं लेकिन रेल्वे में ऊपर से नीचे तक रिश्वत के हिस्से मुकर्रर हैं । यहाँ तक कि स्टेशनों का निलाम होता है ।

Shri R. K. Sidhva : Sir May I know from the honourable member whether that person has been prosecuted?

मास्टर नन्द लाल : मैंने अर्ज किया है कि वह पकड़ा गया है और मि० शाहनी, मजिस्ट्रेट दर्जे अव्वल ने उसको रिश्वत लेते हुए पकड़ा । दो माह तक उसके अफसरान इस मामले को छिपाते रहे और दो माह तक उसको मोअत्तल नहीं किया और बाद में पुलिस ने उसे मोअत्तल कराया और अब केस अदालत में है । इसके बाद हमने समझा था कि अब वहां ठंडक पड़ेगी और आयन्दा ऐसा नहीं होगा लेकिन फिर भी रिश्वत वहां चलती रही । पानीपत से दिल्ली, अम्बाला और जीन्द को गाड़ियां जाती हैं । अगर स्टेट-मिनिस्टर चाहें वहां पर जिस समय कि यह तीनों गाड़ियां चलती हैं देखेंगे तो उनको मालूम होगा कि वहां पर डाकाजनी होती है और कोई कानून की बात नहीं होती । सिपाही और टिकट-क्लैक्टर लोगों को लूटते हैं । टिकट देते वक्त बहाना बनाते हैं और अम्बाला के टिकट के बजाय वह मोरी का टिकट देते हैं क्योंकि मोरी का टिकट दो आने कम है । हमारा एक आदमी किशन लाल सोसियल वर्कर के साथ ऐसा ही एक वाक्या हुआ । वह मोम-बत्तियां ले जाता था । उसको अम्बाला जाना था लेकिन उसको मोरी का टिकट दिया गया उसने इस बात की रिपोर्ट की और इस केस की तारीख ८ फरवरी मुकर्रर हुई । लेकिन ७ तारीख को पानीपत के कांग्रेस कमेटी के प्रेजिडेंट और मेम्बर के पास बुकिंग क्लर्क और चीफ बुकिंग क्लर्क आये । उन्होंने मिन्नत की और कहा कि कसूर हमारा है और माफ कर दीजिये । उन्होंने कहा कि आपकी दखलि

[मास्टर नन्द लाल]

का एक-एक लक्ष भी ठीक है लेकिन आप हमको माफ कीजिये । कांग्रेस वालों ने कहा कि यह मामला माफ नहीं किया जाता । मुझे रहम आया और मैंने कहा कि हम देखेंगे कि अगर रेल्वे मुलाजमीन अपने आपको दुरस्त कर चुके हैं और पब्लिक सर्विस दियानतदारी से करेंगे तो हम यह सिफारिश करेंगे कि इनको माफ किया जाय । मैंने एक चिट्ठी इन्स्पेक्टर आफ इन्क्वायरी के पास भेज दी कि इस मामले को १२ तारीख तक मुल्तवी किया जाय । ताकि हम इस बात की कोशिश करें कि ये लोग ईमानदारी के साथ काम कर सकें और दियानतदारी से आगे अपना काम करते रहें । यह चिट्ठी उन्होंने इन्स्पेक्टर को नहीं दी । कांग्रेस वाले गैर हाज़र होंगे तो हम इन्स्पेक्टर साहिब को कह सकेंगे कि कांग्रेस वाले वदमाश होते हैं और खामख्वाह रिपोर्ट करते हैं । लेकिन उनको यह मालूम नहीं है कि कांग्रेस वाले कच्ची गोलियां नहीं खेले । वह स्टेशन पर हाज़र हो गये और अपना स्टेटमेंट दिया । इस समय स्टेशन स्टाफ वाले आगये और कांग्रेस वालों को दबाया और कांग्रेस वालों को गालियां देने लगे । मगर आखिरकार जब मामला बढ़ गया तो वह तमाम के तमाम इन्स्पेक्टर साहिब के पैर पड़े और माफी मांगने लगे । उस बुकिंग क्लर्क का अस्ली स्टेटमेंट फाड़ दिया गया और उसका एक नया स्टेटमेंट बनाया गया । इसकी रिपोर्ट मेरे पास किशन लाल ने भेजी । किशन लाल सोसियल वर्कर ने, स्टेट मिनिस्टर साहब को भी चिट्ठी लिखी है लेकिन यह ऊर्दू में है इसलिए शायद उनके पास न पहुंची हो क्योंकि वह लोग क्या करते हैं कि अगर कोई शिकायत करे तो वह शिकायत को बीच में ही दबा लेते हैं और उसको ऊपर तक नहीं पहुंचने देते ।

मैं मिनिस्टर साहब के सामने फिरोजपूर की एक मिसाल पेश करता हूं । वहां पर एक रेल्वे अफसर के बंगले पर गेना के आदमी काम करते देखे गये । और हमारे कांग्रेस के वर्करों ने उन लोगों को काम करते देखा और उनके फोटो भी लिये गये हैं । ये फोटो मेरे पास इस वक्त यह हैं । और उनके नाम भी इन फोटों में लिखे हुए हैं । और ये फोटो रजिस्टरी करके स्टेट-मिनिस्टर के पास भेज दिये गये । मगर वह कहते हैं कि ये हमारे पास नहीं पहुंचे । आजकल इस तरह के वाक्यात हिन्दुस्तान में हो रहे हैं । मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूं कि इन बातों का कुछ न कुछ इलाज होना चाहिये । अस्ल में चीज यह है कि हम लोग रामराज्य लेकर यहां आये हैं और डेमोक्रेटिक हुकूमत के बजाय हमको ब्यूरोक्रेसी (bureaucracy) की मशीनरी ने घेर लिया है । हमारे स्टेट मिनिस्टर साहब बहुत ही लायक हैं और एक फर्स्ट क्लास डिबेटर भी हैं । उनका फर्न है कि इन चीजों

को खुद देख लिया करें । उन्होंने जिस वक्त चार्ज लिया उन्होंने M. C. As. को लिखा कि वह हर काम करने के लिये तैयार है और जिन चीजों के मुताल्लिक रिपोर्ट करें उनके मुताल्लिक वह तहकीकात करेंगे । मैंने इनको तीन चिट्ठीयां इस वारे में भेज दीं लेकिन मुझे अभी तक एक का भी पता नहीं चला कि उनका क्या बना । यह शिकायतें रिश्वत के लिए नहीं थी । ये रेल्वे की एफीशेन्सी के मुताल्लिक थी ।

मैंने पानीपत से दिल्ली तक रेल्वे में सफ़र करना बन्द किया हुआ है क्योंकि रेल में फर्स्ट, सेकेंड या थर्ड क्लास में सफ़र करें लोग प्रश्नों की बोछाड़ कर देते हैं । हम से लोग पूछते हैं कि हमारी हुकूमत क्या काम कर रही है । मैं इनको इसका एक इलाज बताऊंगा । वह यह है कि स्टेट मिनिस्टर साहब को चाहिये कि वे प्राइवेट तौर पर M. C. As. को साथ लेकर रेलों में सरप्राइज-विजिट (Surprise visit) करनी चाहिये । इससे ऐसा होगा रेल्वे के मुलाजमीन को यह डर रहेगा कि हमारे ऊपर कब भेडियां पड़ता है । इससे बहुत हद तक यह चीज हट जायेगी । इसका नतीजा यह होगा कि ईस्ट पंजाब के रेल्वे स्टेशनों में काफी रिश्वत हट जायेगी ।

स्टेशनों पर तो इस तरह की रिश्वत बन्द हो जायेगी । दफतरो में रह जाये तो रह जाये । जो रिफ्यूजी कान्ट्रैक्टर पंजाब के थे, उनके क्लेमस अदा करने के लिए ७ जून में हुकम दिया गया था सितम्बर में फिर इस हुकम की वजात की गई कि उन्हें वे क्लेमस अदा किये जायें । लेकिन किसी भी कान्ट्रैक्टर को कुछ भी नहीं दिया गया है । इन चीजों में स्टेट मिनिस्टर और रेल्वे बोर्ड का कोई गिला नहीं हो सकता । क्योंकि यहां पर अव्वल से लेकर आखिर तक एक सी ही बात है । इसलिए इसको दुरस्त करने के लिए एक लम्बी ड्राइव (Drive) और कोशिश से काम करने की जरूरत है । अगर स्टेट मिनिस्टर साहब को कांग्रेस की कुछ इज्जत दिल में है, जोकि मैं जानता हूं कि काफी उनके दिल में है । तो उन्हें चाहिये कि वे खाली कागजात को देखकर अमल न किया करें बल्कि हालात को अपनी आंखों से देखकर अमल किया करें । अगर यह ऐसा नहीं करेंगे तो यह राम-राज्य नहीं कहलाया जा सकता । गांधी जी का जो स्वप्न था वह पूरा नहीं हो सकेगा । स्टेट मिनिस्टर साहब पर सब हालत जाहिर है और वह कई साल से इस असेम्बली में काम कर रहे हैं और अब जब कि यह इस कुर्सी पर आये हैं तो उनको चाहिये कि वह इन सब बातों का इन्सदाद करें । मैं इन अल्फाज के साथ अपनी गुस्ताखी के लिए माफी मांगता हूं और आप से फिर यह अर्ज करूंगा कि आपको चाहिये कि आप इस बात का इन्सदाद करें ।

Master Nand Lal (East Punjab: General): Before the establishment of our Government in the Punjab it was well known that Patwaris while realizing the land revenue used to charge ten per cent. of the same as their nazrana and on every railway bill of lading one anna was charged by the railway employees. But after the advent of our National Government the people expected that there would be Ram Raj and all this would come to an end. But this corruption has swelled to such an extent that I feel ashamed in mentioning it. Even after the Congress Government has come in power the dreams of the people have not been realized instead the conditions have still more deteriorated.

In June last the Punjab Government celebrated an anti-corruption week throughout the Punjab. In Panipat also this week was celebrated. But the result was that after this week the chief goods clerk increased the amount of the bribes taken by him on the plea that as an enquiry would be held here against corruption so instead of one anna two annas would be charged for every bill of lading. Out of this sum half would be shared by him and the other half given to the person who would come here to make enquiries. When I came to know of this fact I organised a raid, with the result that on 24th June Mr. Shahani, a First Class Magistrate, caught him red-handed while taking a bribe of Rs. 50. After being caught the clerk stated that he was not at all at fault because he would get only a small share of the money and a major portion would be shared by the higher officials. In other departments bribes are taken individually but in the railway department every one, from top to bottom, gets his proportionate share of the bribes, so much so that stations are even auctioned.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): Sir, may I know from the honourable member whether that person has been prosecuted?

Master Nand Lal: I have just stated that he has been caught and Mr. Shahani, First Class Magistrate, himself caught him red-handed. For two months his superior officers kept on hiding the facts and did not suspend him for 2 months, later on the police got him suspended and now the case is in the court. We thought that after this the conditions would improve and in future no such incidents would happen but bribery and corruption still went on. From Panipat trains go to Delhi, Ambala and Jind. If the honourable Minister of State were to see for himself the condition when these trains leave then he would find that regular robberies are committed there and nothing lawful is being done. The police constables and ticket collectors rob the passengers. While issuing tickets they make excuses and instead of issuing tickets for Ambala give tickets for Mori, because the fare to Mori is two annas less. A similar incident took place with Kishan Lal, one of our social workers. He used to take with him candles. He had to go to Ambala but he was given the ticket for Mori. He lodged a report about this and 8th February was fixed for enquiry. But on 7th February the booking clerk and the chief booking clerk approached the President and members of the Panipat Congress Committee. They made entreaties and acknowledged that they were at fault and requested to be pardoned. They said that the application was correct to the letter and requested us to pardon them. The congress people told them that such a matter could not be excused. But I took pity on them and told them that if it would be found that the railway servants have improved their behaviour and if they would perform their duties honestly then we would recommend that they may be excused. I sent a letter to Inspector of Enquiries asking him to postpone the matter till 12th so that we may make efforts that those people may work honestly and perform their duties truthfully. But they did not hand over this letter to the Inspector and declared that if the congress people absented from the enquiry then they would be able to tell the Inspector that the congress people are hooligans and make reports for nothing. But they do not know that the congress people do not play with mud marbles. They attended the enquiry and gave their statements. Then the station staff tried to over-awe the congress people and began to abuse them. But when at last the matter took an ugly turn then they all began to touch the Inspector's feet and begged to be excused. The original statement of the booking clerk was torn and a new one prepared in its place. Kishan Lal reported the matter to me. The social worker Kishan Lal has also sent a letter to the honourable Minister of State, but as the letter is in Urdu, so it is just possible it may not have reached him; because what the officials do is that if some one makes a complaint they intercept it and do not allow it to reach the higher officials.

I submit before the honourable Minister an example from Ferozepur. There some persons of the gang were seen working at the bungalow of a railway officer. Our congress workers saw these people working there and also took their photos. I have these photos here with me. The names of the persons are also written in the photos. These photos were sent to the honourable Minister of State under registered cover. But he alleges that they did not reach him. Such incidents are happening in India to-day. I wish to submit that some cure for these ills must be found out. The real fact is that we had come here with the ideals of Ram Raj but instead of the Democratic type of Government we have been encircled by the bureaucratic machinery. Our honourable Minister of State is a very capable man and a first class debater also. It is his duty to attend to these things personally. When he took charge he wrote to the M.C.A. that he was prepared to do everything and would make enquiries about everything that would be brought to his notice. I sent him three letters in this connection but I am still in dark about their fate and do not know what happened to them. These complaints were not about corruption and bribery but concerned the efficiency of the Railways.

I have stopped travelling by train from Panipat to Delhi because in whatever class I travel, may that be first, second or third, people begin to shower questions after questions on me. They ask me what our Government is doing. I tell you very simple way out. The honourable Minister of State along with some M.C.A.'S should privately pay surprise visits to the trains. The result would be that the railway officers would always be on the alert lest they might be caught napping. This would ease the situation to a great extent. The result would be that bribery and corruption would, to some extent, be eliminated from the railway stations of the East Punjab. In this way corruption and bribery on the railway stations will be stopped, but if it persists in the offices it may.

An order about the payment of the claims of the West Punjab contractors was issued on 7th June, and in September this order was again clarified that payment of claims be made. But so far nothing has been paid to any contractor. For this the Minister of State and the Railway Board cannot be exonerated, because here from top to bottom the condition is the same. So in order to reform this state of affairs it is essential to make real efforts in this direction. If the honourable Minister of State has in his heart any honour for Congress, which I am sure he has much, then he must not act only on seeing the reports but he must see the conditions for himself and then act accordingly. If he would not do so then this cannot be called Ram Raj. The dreams of Mahatma Gandhi would never be realized. The honourable Minister of State is in the know of all these things. He has been working in this Assembly for the last so many years and when he has occupied this Chair he should try to eradicate this evil. With these words I beg to ask pardon for my arrogance and would again submit that you should try to eradicate this evil.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I rise to support the motion to discuss the question of general administration with particular reference to economy. I would like to draw the attention of the honourable Ministers to the figures which will go to show that if a little better supervision is effected and if a little more push and drive is brought into the administration there will be a good deal of improvement even with the present number of wagons and the engines and locomotives that we at present have. The honourable the Railway Minister has in the statement shown that there has been an improvement from the position that the railways had come to. He said that the daily wagon loadings on the broad gauge have improved from 9,800 in June 1948 to 11,267 in December. In this connection I would like to point out that it is not fair—I do not suggest that he has done it deliberately but I would submit that the month of June 1948 is not a happy month for him to have taken for comparison. I will show from the figures published in the Eastern Economist recently that in 1945 the total monthly average of wagons loading in class I Railways was 6,52,000—that was of undivided India. Then in 1947 on account of partition and the aftermath of partition the figures went down—they went down so low as 3,40,000 in October 1947. But there is another month namely March 1948 which shows that even after partition and even with the depleted strength of the wagons and the over-aged engines 4,92,000 wagons could be loaded in March 1948. Then we find a gradual deterioration: in April it went down to 4,69,000, in May to 4,18,000 and in June 4,01,000. Therefore there is no justification for taking June 1948 as the basis and to state that there has been an improvement. You will notice that in March 1948, 4,92,000 wagons had been loaded. If that figure could be maintained the railways would be able to move about 20 per cent. more of goods than they have been doing in subsequent months and even now. There is no reason why that efficiency which was obtained in March 1948 cannot be maintained if a little more supervision is exercised and if a little more drive is brought into play. What is therefore necessary is that the officials of the Railway Board should examine these figures from day to day and pull up the station masters or the officers responsible for allowing inefficiency to creep in and to see that the rolling stock or the engines are utilised to their proper strength and in a proper manner.

Another matter to which I would like to invite the attention of the honourable Ministers is that on account of the system of priorities what happens is this. A large number of goods are in the priority list. For instance a number of wagons bring coal from the coal areas to different places. But when they return, because goods which are in the priority list are not available, I am told—I am not sure about the figures, nor will I be able to quote the figures, but that is my information—that the wagons are allowed to return empty and not allowed to carry goods which are not on the priority list. If that be so it needs attention. It may be that if those wagons are allowed to carry goods which are not in the priority list they may be delayed by a day or two. But certainly it will be more economical and it will bring in more money into the coffers of the Railways if these wagons are allowed to carry goods on the return journey even though they may not be in the priority list. That matter should be looked into and if the information I have given is correct some steps should be taken to remedy this defect.

Similarly I notice from an answer this morning that 64,500 claims were pending on 1st January 1949. I drew the attention of the honourable Minister of State for Railways to the delays in disposal and he was good enough to inform me that steps have been taken. This morning also he said that steps have been taken on and from 1st January to dispose of claims very speedily. So far so good. I can speak from my own personal knowledge that on account of the delay in the disposal of claims the railways have lost very heavily on account of the costs incurred on their own lawyers and on the lawyers of the parties who have had occasions to file suits. Now that steps have been taken I hope the disposal of claims will be attended to quickly and the Railways will be saved from spending money on lawyers, law courts and in having to settle claims at the point of the bayonet.

The Report of the Railway Enquiry Committee also shows that the staff strength is on the high side. I can speak from my own personal knowledge that a very large number of clerks in the different departments in the offices of the railway simply mark themselves present and do very little work. I have watched certain clerks for two hours not writing even a note of three lines. There also my point is that if more supervision is exercised this kind of inefficiency will go and that will save a lot of money in the number of clerks that the Railways have to engage and that will effect economy and save more money to the State.

The same remarks apply to the different workshops, running sheds and others. So far as the workshop at Lilloah is concerned my information is—I communicated it to the Minister of State—the capacity of the Lilloah workshop in 1935-39 was that it could produce about 200 wagons. Of course I find that it did not actually produce so many new carriages, but sixty new carriages were produced in 1938-39. The strength of the Lilloah workshop so far as labour is concerned has, I think, increased very considerably since then. Still you will find that in 1947-48 only thirty new carriages were built and some ambulance carriages and other carriages were reconditioned and reconverted. I think if proper supervision is exercised in the different workshops and the other running sheds and establishments under the railway administration much more work can be produced. If a job sheet or any other method is adopted—I am not a technical man and I cannot say what actually should be done—but if a little more check is exercised we might be saving a lot of money in these workshops and might be producing a lot of more work which will save the necessity of indenting from outside various parts which are required in the different railways. Therefore what I suggest is that the honourable Minister should see that the different officers whose work should be to supervise the different departments in the different Railways bring in more drive and more life into the work so that improvement and economy may be effected, thereby saving a lot of money to the coffers of the State.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala (Bihar: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I must confess I was rather disheartened by the disquietening warning given by the honourable the Minister of State when he said that it is due to the overcrowding and the troubles and inconveniences arising therefrom to which our citizens have got accustomed that we are in a position to present a surplus Budget; otherwise it would not be possible for us to present a surplus Budget; we would have had a deficit Budget. I say rather disheartening because this statement has come from one who has taken great pains in studying the question of Railway Administration both as a legislator of this House and as a journalist. With the scanty information contained in the papers supplied to us it is not possible and I would not hazard a detailed statement thereby showing that surplus Budget even without overcrowding is possible. But I wish to make the humble submission that even under the present circumstances, if little leakages and loopholes are set right and attention is paid and administration is carried on with more vigilance, economy can be effected and a surplus Budget presented even without this overcrowding and inconvenience and troubles to the passengers. Take the instances of the grainshops, last year a cut motion was brought and I understand a Committee was formed, of which the honourable Minister of State was a member, and after thorough enquiry, I understand, that in one year it has been found that there will be a saving of about Rs. 15 crores in this.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): May I inform the honourable member that his estimates are wrong. The actual estimates are Rs. 3 to 5 crores savings?

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala: I stand corrected. Let it be Rs. 5 crores. But the way in which the work is going on in respect of purchase of grains by the Railways is, I find from reliable information, such that the railway people go and raise the price of grain at every place with the result that they themselves get grain at a higher price and the market price is also raised. If these purchases are done in a more organised way, with proper vigilance, I am sure much more economy can be effected in this respect.

Then there is another very big item—stores purchases. I understand about Rs. 60 crores worth of stores are purchased every year. I do not know, the process by which these stores are purchased. If proper vigilance is exercised even here, it is not at all difficult to effect at least a saving of Rs. 4 to 5 crores. This morning I put an enquiry in a supplementary question as to the compensation the Railways paid last year against claims and I was told that notice was required for this. I understand this is a very big item and it is a result of corruption which should be checked.

Now, most of the Railways are nationalised and under the Government, I do not see the necessity for having so many headquarters at different places for different railways. These things must be organised in such a way that the headquarters may be located in one or two places so as to administer the railways for the whole of India. This will minimise overhead and other administrative expenses to a very great extent and shall be more efficient.

There are other small items. Yesterday Mr. Chaliha was saying that in coaches we are using steel. Instead of steel, if we use timber, we can save a lot. We shall have no need for importing so much of steel from outside and thus save also our hard currency.

The next thing is about production. We now take the work from the labourers on daily wages. If this is done on contract basis much more efficiency will result and the wage-earners will also get more.

From the statement I find that on the B. N. Railway there was last year a loss of 1.49 per cent. This year the loss is expected to be 3.96. On the E.I. Railway the loss was shown to be 1.5. This year it is expected to be 1.65. In G.I.P. the profits were shown last year as 4.45. This year they are shown to be less. On the M. S. M. Railway, the profit last year was shown as 3.05. This year it is expected to be 1.04. On the O. and T. Railway the profit last year was 2.32. This year it is shown to be 1.4. On the S.I. Railway the profit was shown last year as 4.6 this year it is expected to be 2.32. O. and T. Railway which was known as B. N. W. Railway, before used to make huge amounts of profit when it was under private management. I do not know why the profits of these railways are going down and down and losses are increasing every year though there has been no improvement as regards inconvenience and trouble to the public are concerned.

An Honourable Member: Rise in salaries.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala: Not only rise here, but everywhere. The loss is not so much due to increase in salaries, but want of strict and efficient administration to check leakages. Sir, there are so many other points which have been brought out by other honourable members of the House and I do not want to repeat them and take the time of the House. But I wish to impress upon the honourable Minister of State who is in a position that he should show that economy can be done in the present circumstances; that it can be done even in the present circumstances that we can run the railways with a surplus if the honourable Minister looks to different things. He is getting in desperate mood and say that it is on the necessary comforts required for a person that we can do.

Shri Lal Mohan Pati (Mayurbhanj State): Sir, I was rather bewildered to hear so many things against the Railway Department. But I must nevertheless congratulate the honourable Minister for Railways for showing in the short period that he has been in charge a profit of some Rs. 7 crores. He has efficiently managed the work in various directions.

I submit that new Railways have not been opened in many places where, for the sake of the public, for the sake of the society and for the sake of the Railway itself, it should have been done. I speak particularly with reference to Mayurbhanj which is a district of Orissa. Mayurbhanj is in a peculiar geographical position. In Mayurbhanj there are valuable mineral deposits. Iron deposits have been unearthed. Vanadium deposits have been discovered in enormous quantities. Kaynite deposits have been found in enormous quantities. Similarly China clay. Mayurbhanj timber has acquired a fame and a name in the Indian wood market. Mayurbhanj timber is exported annually to the tune of several lakhs of rupees. So also the oilseeds of Mayurbhanj have a market. Similarly, there is a cotton mill started and work will begin very soon. In various ways, Mayurbhanj may be described as the "Switzerland of Orissa". It is on account of the want of railway facilities that it is in a backward state now. The Metre Gauge railway is now from Baripada to Rupsa in the B. N. Railway. Another railway is from Tatanagar to Badampa. That is also connected with the B. N. Railway. Between these two lines there is no railway line, and again the Metre Gauge is causing great hardship to importers of goods. Goods consigned to merchants in Mayurbhanj passing through Rupsa junction Station to the metre gauge line are invariably found to be pilfered in the course of transshipment. It is a foregone conclusion. At the same time, if a claim is preferred to the Claims Superintendent, no trace is found of the goods nor is any satisfactory reply received from him.

I shall quote one instance. In 1947 an importer of cotton and cloth had consigned several bales of cotton cloth. One of the bales was missing when delivery was to be effected. He did not take delivery and wanted open delivery. Open delivery was given and the bale was found short. He preferred claim to the Claims Superintendent and also the Traffic Superintendent. For six months he did not get any reply. At long last he received a reply saying that the bale was stolen from a running train and the Railway was not responsible for that. You must remember that this bale of cloth was booked at railway risk; still the Railway said it was not responsible. I do not know if there is any authority, any person, responsible for these things. In order to obviate this difficulty, I suggest that a railway line may be opened from Baripada to Tatanagar—a distance of 100 miles. The only expense is, laying of lines. Lands would be available free of cost. In this connection a survey of the line was made in 1945 in the post-war reconstruction scheme of the Government. The members are still with the Department.

have been done, but in 1947 the Government in consonance with the importance of the place, the economic development possible, the new line in that area. This line would give an impetus to the minerals in that area. With these few words

(West Bengal: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I rise to support the motion moved by my honourable friend Mr. Shiva Rao and others. I am glad to have this opportunity of expressing my views on the subject. Sir, after the very outspoken and trenchant speech of my honourable friend Mr. Tyagi, there is hardly anything left for a speaker like myself to dilate upon the particular point of Railway Economy. In his wonderful speech, unique in its own way, Mr. Tyagi has given the Railway Ministry many things to think and act. His vigour and liveliness in oration, his sincerity and firmness of conviction have driven straight in to the hearts of his listeners his points, he wanted to emphasise. I endorse every word that he said and I submit that I have nothing to add to it.

But, Sir, there are some minor matters to which I would now refer. So far as the common man is concerned, travel by train in India has always been a travail. It has never been a very happy and pleasant experience either in the days when the railways were owned by private companies or now when they are owned by the State. The disadvantages and discomforts which were the inevitable accompaniments of a train journey 20 years ago are all still there. The condition of travel of the average Indian who cannot pay for higher class tickets has continued to be the same under a National Government as it was under foreign imperial rule. The same overcrowding of compartments, the same filthy condition of the bath-rooms, the same dearth of water and the same out of order arrangements of light are still to be found, as they were found before when Railways were manned and managed by a foreign people. I admit Sir that improvement in all these directions cannot be effected overnight. I admit Sir, that during the short period for which the present Minister has been in charge of the Railways, and due to the momentous changes through which this country has passed, it is not humanly possible to bring about improvement in any respect. But what drives us to despair and despondency, Sir, is the total absence of any drive or initiative along these directions. Not to speak of amenities and improvements, conditions have deteriorated to such an extent, that the very life and properties of passengers have been endangered. The occurrence of dacoity, murder, burglary and theft in recent months has rendered railway journey a veritable nuisance. About a few months back, a retired railway officer was travelling from Calcutta to Puri with his family. That unfortunate officer and his grown up son were both killed by ruffians, a dacoity was committed upon them, with firearms. Sir, the present Governor of Assam, when he was High Commissioner of India in Pakistan was relieved of his suit-case while travelling by train at night nearabout Allahabad. Again, in similar circumstances, one of the most distinguished members of this House lost his suit-case containing two thousand amendments to the draft Constitution of India, and it is known to every body in this House. Sir, the loss of such a large number of amendments caused much annoyance and disgust to the member, because those amendments were the result of 'many sleepless nights and sleepy days' to quote the phrase of the honourable the Finance Minister. That honourable member had in consequence to burn much of his mid-night oil to reproduce them from his brain. It is not known Sir, how far those amendments helped the burglars to frame their own Constitution. All these incidents have struck a great terror into the minds of the common people, especially the passengers of the higher classes. I would request our Minister to let us know what steps he is going to take in these directions to give protection to the passengers from these dangers.

Sir, the other day, the honourable Minister of State for the Railways referred to the criticism of the House this year as the mildest in the last 16 years. Sir, if the criticisms were mildest, it was not because of the high efficiency and integrity of the Railway administration; but because of the consideration and reasonableness of the members of this House, who took into account the short period during which the Minister has been in charge of the Railways, and the consequences of the last war, and the partition of the country.

My honourable friend, Hari Har Nath Shastri—he is not here—would give me a severe warning as he gave to our honourable friend, Mr. B. Das the other day, for criticising the railway employees in season and out of season. Sir, the reduction in efficiency and the lack of interest in their duties on the part of the railway employees have escaped the notice of nobody. The Indian Railway Enquiry Commission has not only mentioned it, but has made trenchant remarks about this. There is no doubt Sir, that so far as the efficiency and duty is concerned, the railway employees have suffered much. Sir it must also be said to the credit of the railway employees that this reduction in efficiency and lack of interest in duties is not only seen in the Railways, it is not only seen in other departments of Government, but it is found in all the spheres of activities of our national life. I think, Sir, this reduction in efficiency and duty is a feature, which is rather due to the peculiar psychology that has developed in the country with the advent of freedom. The national freedom which was denied to us for centuries and centuries has given rise to high hopes in our minds and not only high hopes but also ideas that, now as we are a full-fledged independent nation, we must have less work and more pay; we must have less responsibility and more right; we must have less duty and more leisure. Our national independence has led us to think that we need not exert ourselves any more, that everything which is necessary will come to us as a matter of course, without our working for it and without our asking for it. However, Sir, ideas have begun to change and it is a matter of great relief that our Government in its short tenure of office has been able to banish from the minds of the people such foolish ideas. It is true, that the process of reduction of efficiency among the railway workers has been arrested and we believe in the assurance that our Railway Ministers have given us, namely, that the upward process, the gradual and laborious process of increasing the efficiency of the Railways will now begin.

I congratulate the honourable the Railway Minister, Sir; he has given us so many verbal assurances and I earnestly hope that those assurances will be translated into action at a very early date.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): I thank you, Mr. Deputy Speaker for the opportunity you have given me. I have watched the discussions in this House and also the Railway Administration outside for the past several years, but, Sir, there appears to be no change whatsoever in any sphere of administration. It has been said with satisfaction and pride that the railway trains now arrive at their destinations in time. Yes, Sir, it is true I must admit it, but out of thousands of things, there is improvement in one thing, and for that there is satisfaction. This surprises me: I have with surprise watched this time that chorus of congratulations have been showered on the honourable Ministers for this or that thing, but I am sorry that I feel unable to join in the chorus. I feel doubtful whether they deserve any congratulation at all.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Why a doubt?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: But I am also tempted to congratulate them on the fact that they have received so many congratulations, deserved or undeserved. As I told the honourable Ministers in the beginning they must think of what the people want from them and I, on behalf of the people, want from them. The people want to see a change in the administration from the words and conduct of the local officials on the spot. Nobody hears, nobody knows who is the Railway Minister or who is the State Minister. Yet, people see the same kind of officers, the same kind of servants in the same uniform and with the same conduct. The aim of the honourable Ministers sitting here, ought to be felt throughout the whole administration. Sir, in order to frame the railway policy—I do not know what is their policy yet now—they have to study what was the policy of the past Government. The policy of the past Government was certainly the construction and expansion of the Railways in the country to keep people under control and to exploit the people for the good of the Britishers abroad. That was the policy of the past Government, and I do not know whether my honourable friends are following the same policy, because they have got no policy of their own. Sir, at present, I feel that our policy ought to be discussed in this very House, and then framed and followed. Our policy ought to be the provision for journey facilities to the people and for the development of the areas which have not been developed as yet. In short, all that would help to promote the general progress and prosperity of the people as a whole. As I said before, formerly all the Railways of the country were constructed for imperial purposes; local needs were never considered.

I take my own province. It can very well be divided from the point of view of communications existing at present, into North Bihar and South Bihar. North Bihar has nothing to do with South Bihar; so is the railway. I am glad that they are going to construct a bridge on the Ganges; I do not know whether at Patna or Bakhtiarpur; the site has not yet been selected. I know that the site was provisionally fixed at Bakhtiarpur because the cost would be a little less. I would like to tell my honourable friends here, on behalf of the four crores of people of Bihar, that the site must be near Patna and not near Bakhtiarpur. If we are going to satisfy a national need, the cost must not interfere in this matter. If the cost of constructing a bridge near Bakhtiarpur is four crores and if the cost of constructing a bridge near Patna would be six crores, the two crores is nothing; that must not come into account. However, I am glad that a bridge is going to be constructed and I say on behalf of my province that the bridge must be near Patna and the Engineering and other technical experts ought to be definitely ordered that the bridge must be there and not anywhere else.

As I said that my province could be divided into North Bihar and South Bihar, South Bihar again could be divided into two, Chota Nagpur on one side and the other districts of the province on the other side. It appears as if Chota Nagpur is not a part of the province. Just now, I think, my friend Mr. Guha said, it takes 22 hours from Daltonganj to reach Patna. Similarly, some time before it used to take two days from Jamshedpur to reach Patna; however, these days a train runs from Jamshedpur to Barkakhana, from Barkakhana to Gomoh then from Gomoh to Gaya and then to Patna in a roundabout way. It takes a lot of time. There was a proposal—I do not know what has become of that and I hope the honourable Minister would enlighten me on this—to construct a direct line from Patna to Ranchi. So far as I am aware, some survey also was made; I do not know at what stage that proposal is now. As I said before, the policy of the Government in railway matters ought to be to consult local needs and to satisfy them.

As regards the services in the railway department there are people who say, why do you talk of provincialism, and this and that. There is no question of provincialism. When there is a State concern, it is the duty of the State to provide the people with means of livelihood through that concern throughout the nation. I do not know what is the procedure in the matter of recruitment to the railway services. I say if there is a tinge of justice in the department, recruiting centres ought to be opened in every part of the country.

I shall not take up much of the time of the House; but I must say something about catering. The contract of catering is a glaring instance of bribery in high circles. A big contractor can afford to pay a big bribe; that is the only purpose in giving the contract to one person of Delhi or somewhere else to cater to passengers from Delhi to Howrah and on so many lines and stations. (Shri B. Das: 'Madras, Nagpur and other places.') I ask my honourable friends to change this system here and now. When a line passes through an area, some stations are built and some sort of trade and commerce develop. To enjoy that trade and commerce, I think it is the privilege of the local people there. If there is a station near Gaya, I think all the advantages there should go to the people of Gaya and not to a man from Delhi or from some other part of the country. So far as local vendors to supply to the passengers whatever they want, are concerned, the local people ought to be allowed to do that.

My honourable friend Mr. Nandlal has said a very good thing. I endorse every word that has fallen from his lips and I earnestly request my honourable friends, if I have the courage and strength to speak on behalf of the nation, I call upon them to do two things: to do something in the matter of corruption and to do something in the matter of over-crowding. I know that the railway system is something like a vast ocean and my honourable friends are swimming. Whether they will reach the shore or not, it has to be seen.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am glad that they are not drowned.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: As my honourable friend Mr. Nandlal has said, as Ministers they are big men; if they remain as big men, they will be useless. Let them behave as common men. In disguise like the Rulers of yore, they must go among the people, they must work with them, see with their own eyes what the people are doing and what the people talk about the railway department. Then, they would be able to do something. They must have the dash and the initiative; if they have not these things, they must get them from us today. Only then, they would be able to do anything. I may assure them that I cannot blame them for so many evils in the department. Unless they work with an extraordinary motive and capacity, they would not be able to do anything. As my honourable friend Deshbandhu Gupta told them yesterday, here in Delhi, below the very nose of the Ministers, so much of corruption is going on. I have seen many things in this connection. I shall be proud of them and their achievement if they root out corruption from Delhi. With these words, I would again request them to do something. I know they will do if they convert themselves to common men. If they think they are rulers, Ministers and this and that, they are useless for the country.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I believe Mr. Anthony and Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad do not want to move their cut motions, but would like to participate in the debate. After Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava speaks, both of them will speak and the honourable Minister would then reply.

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव : माननीय डेप्टी स्पीकर साहब, मैं आपको शुक्रिया अदा करता हूँ कि आपने आखिरी वक्त में मुझको कुछ अर्ज करने का मौका दिया।

जनाब चेयरमैन साहब, मैं आपको मुबारकवाद देता हूँ कि आप इस कुर्सी पर जिसको पहले बड़े बड़े आदमियों ने मुजय्यन किया है उस पर आज आप मौजूद हैं।

अब मैं बहुत अदब के साथ चन्द Suggestions आनरेबिल मिनिस्टर साहबान की खिदमत में पेश करना चाहता हूँ और उनमें से अब्बल यह है कि जो रेलवे रिपोर्ट हमको पढ़ने को मिली उसका दूसरा पार्ट तो अभी तक मिला ही नहीं जिसमें कुछ फ़िगर्स बग़ैरह दिये होते। लेकिन इसको जो पढ़े तो इसमें एक चीज़ हर मतवा हर एक मेम्बर के नोटिस में आती है। वह यह है कि फ़रवरी सन् १९४९ में जिस चीज़ को हम पढ़ते हैं वह मार्च सन् १९४८ तक की होती है और जो उसका immediate interest इन पिछले आठ दस महीनों का होता है उसका इसमें कोई ज़िक्र नहीं होता है। यह सारे मामले stale होते हैं, जो चीज़ हम देखते हैं उसमें immediate interest नहीं होता। यह मैं जानता हूँ कि जहाँ तक figures का मामला है वह इस साल के नहीं दिये जा सकते, और जहाँ तक फ़िगर्स का ताल्लुक है वह पिछले साल के ही दिये जा सकते हैं। लेकिन जो दीगर मामलात हों उसका ज़िक्र तो होना चाहिये, उसका ज़िक्र तो कम से कम होना चाहिये, क्योंकि उसके बग़ैर उनमें immediate interest पैदा नहीं हो सकता है। इसलिये मैं अदब के साथ अर्ज करता हूँ कि इसके अन्दर इन बातों का ज़िक्र होना चाहिये। इसके बारे में एक और चीज़ जो मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ वह यह है कि मैंने इस रिपोर्ट को तकरीबन शुरू से आखीर तक पढ़ा है लेकिन इसमें कोई ज़िक्र इस बात का नहीं है कि foreign travel के वास्ते यहाँ पर क्या रियायतें हिन्दुस्तान में मौजूद हैं। इसके अलावा इसके अन्दर जो internal travel के वास्ते कोई facilities मौजूद है या आयन्दा दी जावेगी उनका भी कोई ज़िक्र नहीं है। दुनियाँ के अन्दर सारे मुल्कों में सब से पहली चीज़ यह है कि उस मुल्क के रहने वालों को मौका दिया जाता है कि वे अपने मुल्क के मुस्तलिफ़ हिस्सों को देखें और उनके वास्ते facilities दी जाती हैं। मैं यह जानता हूँ कि आजकल यह मुश्किल चीज़ है जब कि इस तरह congestion है कि रेलवेज चाहती हैं कि लोग सफ़र न करें और मैं

चाहता हूँ कि लोगों को सफ़र की facilities दी जायें। तो यह चीज़ out of place मालूम होती है। लेकिन दर असल हमारा यह ध्येय होना चाहिये कि हिन्दुस्तान के मुस्तलिफ़ हिस्सों के लोग कम से कम हिन्दुस्तान को तो देख सकें। मुझे याद पड़ता है कि रशिया के मुताल्लिक एक वक्त मैंने पढ़ा था कि रशिया के अन्दर खास तौर पर कोशिश की जाती है कि मुल्क के वासियों को सारे मुल्क में ट्रेवल कराया जाय, वहाँ के inhabitants को वहाँ का मुल्क दिखाया जाय। मैं जानता हूँ कि हिन्दुस्तान के अन्दर ऐसे मुकाम मौजूद हैं, ऐसी जगहें मौजूद हैं कि जो दुनियाँ के सारे मुल्कों से भी ज्यादा खूबसूरत हैं। लेकिन बहुत लोग नहीं जानते कि हमारे हिन्दुस्तान में क्या क्या चीज़ें मौजूद हैं। जब तक आप यह फ़ैसीलिटीज इंटरनल ट्रेवल में नहीं देंगे और आयन्दा से इस रिपोर्ट में एक पैरा इसके लिये नहीं देंगे तो मैं समझता हूँ कि यह रिपोर्ट नामुकम्मिल रहेगी।

इसके अलावा अफ़सोस यह है कि जहाँ तक रेलवेज के वर्किंग का सवाल है वहाँ तक न तो मैं यह कहने के काबिल हूँ कि मैं मिनिस्टर साहबान को किसी तरह इसका ज़िम्मेदार इसकी खराबियों के वास्ते करार दूँ या इसकी खूबियों के वास्ते उनको ज़िम्मेदार ठहराऊँ। बहुत थोड़ा अरसा हुआ है जब कि मिनिस्टर साहबान ने चाज़ लिया है और उनका पूरा प्रभाव पड़ने का पूरा अवसर नहीं हुआ है। इसलिये मैं इसके बारे में तो कुछ नहीं कह सकता कि हमारे मिनिस्टर साहबान मौजूदा हालत के लिये ज़िम्मेदार हैं। लेकिन जब मैं इस रिपोर्ट में Stock usage, Engine usage and Wagon usage इन तीनों के बारे में पढ़ता हूँ ३२ पृष्ठ पर तो बेशक मैं यह कहने को तैयार हूँ कि रेलवेज से ठीक काम करने के बारे में मेरी तसल्ली नहीं हुई। ५८, ६०, ६१ पैरा के पढ़ने से जाहिर होता है कि रेलवेज का वर्किंग प्रापर नहीं है। मैं यह मान सकता हूँ कि लड़ाई के असर की वजह से आप कुछ नहीं कर सके। लड़ाई से जो नुकसान हुआ उसको पूरा करना आपके अख्तियार में नहीं है कि आप उसको इतने थोड़े अरसे में पूरा कर दें। मैं यह भी मानता हूँ कि इतने अरसे से यह रेलवेज foreigners के सातहत रहीं और उन्होंने अपने फ़ायदे के लिये नका इस्तेमाल किया। यह सब बातें मैं मानता हूँ। लेकिन ताहम मैं यह मानने के लिये तैयार नहीं हूँ कि हमारे वर्कशाप्स जो मौजूद हैं अगर हम उनका भी पूरा यूज़ (use) नहीं करते, बैगन्स जो मौजूद हैं उनका भी पूरा यूज़ (use) नहीं करते और एंजिन जो मौजूद हैं उनका पूरा रिटर्न per mile per day नहीं होता तो मैं इन सब बातों को देख कर यह कहने के लिये तैयार हूँ कि जो हमारे अशखास काम करने वाले हैं वह इन्हीं ज़िम्मेदार हैं। इसलिये मैं सब से पहले यह कहता हूँ कि जब एंजिन मौजूद हैं, जब बैगन्स मौजूद हैं और उनका पूरा रिटर्न

नहीं होता, जब रिपेयरिंग शाप्स में काम ठीक तरह नहीं होता और मरम्मत में ज्यादा देर लगती है इसके मानी यही हैं कि रेलवे में एफ़ीशियेंट वर्किंग (efficient working) नहीं है।

इसके अलावा जो चीज़ में अर्ज करना चाहता हूं वह यह है कि जो रिपोर्ट नक्कायरी कमेटी ने दी है उसके Summary of Conclusions के दूसरे और दूसरे पैरा को पढ़ कर मैं यही कह सकता हूं कि दर असल हमारे रेलवे सिस्टम में बहुत बड़ी खराबी है क्योंकि उस रिपोर्ट में लिखा है कि ब्राइट फ्यूचर (bright future) नहीं दिखाई देता और अगले पैरा में लिखा है कि लेबर और स्टाफ़ भी slack है। मैं इस चीज़ को कि लेबर slack है निहायत ही दुख व फिक्र से देखता हूं। आपने यह बात कई मर्तबा सुनी है कि लेबर का दिल काम में नहीं है, यह एक ऐसी चीज़ है जिसका अगर इलाज नहीं किया गया तो बड़ी खराबी होगी। इसी तरह अगर स्टाफ़ भी खराब है और स्लैक है तो मैं नहीं समझता कि वर्किंग किस तरह सुधर सकता है। मैं इस खराबी को मिनिस्टर साहबान को attribute नहीं करता। लेकिन ताहम मैं यही कहूंगा कि चाहे कितने ही अच्छे हों जब तक कि आप राइट (right) स्परिट (Spirit) इनफ्यूज (infuse) नहीं करेंगे, स्टाफ़ आपके साथ कोआपरेट नहीं करेगा तब तक आपके काम में प्रोग्रेस नहीं हो सकती। लोग शिकायतें करते हैं। लेकिन जब मैं इसमें देखता हूं कि लेबर स्लैक है और स्टाफ़ भी स्लैक है तो फिर मैं अपना दिल थाम नहीं सकता। मुझे ट्रेड यूनियन के एक शख्स ने कुछ फ़िगर्स दिये और कुछ बातें बताईं। मैं उनकी थोड़ी सी शिकायतें आपके सामने इस लिये रखता हूं कि वाकई उनके साथ कितनी ज्यादाती होती है। एक शख्स ने आ कर बताया कि अगर कोई शख्स जो उसकी वैजेज़ मुकर्रर हैं उनको उसी दिन नहीं ले लेता तो उसको फिर वह नहीं मिल सकती। उनको वैजेज़ फिर सात सात आठ आठ महीनों तक नहीं मिल सकती। उस गरीब आदमी की वैजेज़ के arrears क्यों अगले महीने की तनखाह के साथ नहीं दिये जा सकते। मेरे पास एक ट्रेड यूनियन का आदमी आया और उसने मुझे ७१ चिट्ठियां दिखाईं जो कि लिखी गई थीं लेकिन उनका कोई जवाब नहीं आया।

अपील्स के बारे में मिस्टर एन्थनी ने आपकी विदमत्त में पेश कर दिया है, जैसा कि हर साल जिक्र किया जाता है। जो शख्स कि सज़ा देता है उसी के रिमावर्स के साथ अपील आगे भेजी जाती है और अपील करने वाले की कोई सुनवाई नहीं होती। आप उस तरह क्यों नहीं करते, जैसा कि पोस्टल-डिपार्टमेंट में किया जाता है। आप चाहे इन्साफ़ करें चाहे न करें लेकिन हर

शख्स को यह महसूस होना चाहिये कि उसके साथ इन्साफ़ किया जा रहा है। आपके अपील्स के प्रावीज़न्स बिल्कुल ग़लत हैं।

एक किस्सा मैं आपको सुनाऊं। रिफ्यूजीज के लिये यह हुक्म हुआ था कि उनको तीन महीने की तनखाह एडवान्स दे दी जाय। पांच या छः रिफ्यूजीज ने १८ फरवरी को दरखास्त की कि उनको तीन महीने की तनखाह एडवान्स दे दी जाय। उनकी दरखास्त अगस्त में कन्सीडर (consider) हुई और उस पर हुक्म हुआ कि उनको एडवान्स दे दिया जाय और उनकी तनखाह से एक खास परसेंटेज के हिसाब से काट लिया जाय। उनकी सितम्बर और अक्टूबर की तनखाह से वह परसेंटेज तो कटने लगा मगर लोन उनको नवम्बर में मिला। हम लोग किस्सा सुनते थे कि कहीं आग लगी तो ६ महीने बाद हुक्म दिया गया कि आग बुझा दी जाय। यह वैसा ही किस्सा है। आप देखें कि इन रिफ्यूजीज की क्या हालत है। लोन तो पीछे मिलता है पर तनखाह पहले से कटने लगती है।

इसके अलावा आप देखें कि आपका स्टाफ़ के साथ क्या बरताव है। ई० पी० आर० के कुछ गाड़ों ने शिकायत की है कि उनके अलाउन्स में कोई फर्क नहीं किया गया। बहुत से गाड़ों को तो पहले के मुकाबले में कम अलाउन्स मिलने लगा है। क्या इस तरीक़े से आप लेबर के साथ खेलना चाहते हैं।

अभी हाल में हमारे मिनिस्टर आफ़ स्टेट साहब ने ग्रेन शोप कमेटी की रिपोर्ट के २९ पृष्ठ पर फैसला किया था कि ग्रेन शाप्स के सिलसिले में एक जाइंट बोर्ड बनाया जायगा और उसमें यूनियन के दो रिप्रेजेंटेटिव होंगे। लेकिन एक और बड़े अफ़सर साहब ने यह फैसला किया कि उन दो में से एक शख्स ऐसा होगा जिसे वह खुद मुकर्रर करेंगे। जब एक मिनिस्टर हुक्म देता है तो क्यों किसी अफ़सर को उसके हुक्म के साथ खेलने दिया जाता है। यह ऐसा सलूक है कि जिसको कोई भी मानने को तैयार नहीं हो सकता।

इसके अलावा जिन रेलवे मुलाजमों ने आउट आउट (opt out) होने का फैसला किया है उनको सिविल कंट्रोल रेट पर अनाज नहीं मिलता है। हालांकि यह इकरार किया गया था कि सिविल कंट्रोल भाव से मिलेगा।

इसके अलावा आप मुलाहिजा फरमायें कि जी० आई० पी० और ई० आई० आर० ने रिफ्यूजीज के साथ यह रियायत की है कि जिनके पेनशन व प्रावीडेंट फंड के कागज़ात अभी पाकिस्तान से नहीं आये हैं उनको सरविस

में रखा जाय जब तक कि वह कागजात न आ जायें। लेकिन ई० पी० आर० में जहाँ सबसे ज्यादा रिफ्यूजीज़ हैं, उनको इस रियायत से भी महसूस कर दिया गया है। यह चीजें दरअसल ऐसी हैं कि उस आदमी पर जिसको कि यह affect करती हैं जरूम का काम करती हैं। जब तक आप में और लेबरर्स में मुहब्बत पैदा नहीं होगी और जब तक आप उनके साथ इन्सानियत का बरताव नहीं करेंगे तब तक आप कितना ही अलाउन्स दीजिये, उसका कोई असर नहीं होगा। आप लेबर के साथ इन्सानियत, भलमन्साहत और generosity का सलूक कीजिय ताकि उनको यकीन हो कि लेबर और अफसर सारे एक ही महकमे के आदमी हैं। और तभी वह दिल लगा कर काम कर सकेंगे। आज हम कहते हैं कि सबको बराबर opportunities दी जाय। हमने कांस्टीट्यूशन में भी यह पास कर दिया है कि सबको बराबर अपाचूनिटीज़ दी जायेंगी। मैं आपसे यह अर्ज करूंगा कि अगर आप ऐसा करना चाहते हैं तो आप यह ख्याल करें कि हर आदमी को यह अपाचूनिटीज़ मिलें, सिर्फ बड़े आदमियों को ही नहीं। अगर आप सारी चीजों में डिमाक्रेसी को फैलायेंगे तो यह जो हालत है वह जाती रहेगी। आज हमारे मुल्क के अच्छे से अच्छे आदमी, मोस्ट डिस्टिंग्विश्ड (most distinguished) आदमी मिनिस्टर हैं। अगर अब भी यह नहीं हो सकता तो मैं नहीं जानता कि यह कब हो सकेगा। मैं इस उम्मीद के साथ बैठता हूँ कि अगले साल में हमको आपकी स्टीवार्डशिप (stewardship) के पूरे फायदे मिलेंगे और हम अगले साल आपको म्बारकबाद पेश करने के काबिल हो सकेंगे कि आपने बहुत अच्छा काम किया।

(English translation of the above speech).

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I am thankful to you for having given me an opportunity to say something at the fag end of the day.

[At this stage Mr. Deputy Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao (one of the Panel of Chairmen).]

Mr. Chairman, I congratulate you on your occupation of this Chair which has been previously honoured by very very prominent persons.

With all due respects, I would now like to place a few suggestions before the honourable Ministers. Firstly, we have not as yet been supplied with the second part of the Report on the working of the Railways already sent to us—which would have contained some figures etc. But whoever goes through this once, one thing surely comes within the notice of every member, viz. that what we read in February 1949 that gives information only upto the end of March, 1948, and it does not at all contain any mention about the immediate interest which crops up during the intervening period of the last eight or ten months. All these matters have become stale and there is nothing which is of immediate interest from our perspective. I know this that so far as the question of figures is concerned, these cannot be shown for the current year and could only be given in respect of the preceding year. But some mention should atleast be made so far as other matters are concerned because in the absence thereof no immediate interest can possibly be created therein. I would, therefore, respectfully submit that all such things should be dealt with in it. Another thing which I would like to say in this connection is that I have almost gone through this Report from beginning to the end. But this does not contain any mention about the amenities available here in India in respect of the foreign travel. Apart from this, it does not also contain any reference to the existing internal travel facilities or those that would be provided for in the future. The first and foremost thing which is done in other countries of the world is that the people living there are afforded an opportunity to visit different parts of their country and they are provided with necessary facilities. I do realize that now-a-days it is a difficult problem when such a state of congestion exists and the Railways want that people should not travel; whereas I urge that people should be granted travelling facilities. So this appears to be out of place. But as a matter of fact we must have an aim that the people living in different parts of the country should have an opportunity to see India atleast. I remember that once I read about Russia that special efforts are made there to ensure travel facilities to its inhabitants by taking them round the whole of their country. I know that there exist in India such places as surpass in their splendour and beauty those of any other country in the world. But many of the people do not know as to what things exist in our country. So long as you do not provide these internal travel facilities and include a para to this effect in the future Report, I take it that this report would be quite an incomplete one.

Apart from this, it is a matter of regret that so far as the working of Railways is concerned, I am not in a position to hold responsible the honourable Ministers in any way either for its merits or demerits. It has not been long since the honourable Ministers have taken over charge and they did not have enough opportunity to exert themselves. Therefore, I cannot say anything in this direction that the honourable Ministers are responsible for the present state of affairs. When I read about the usage of stock, engines and wagons at page 32 of the Report, I am undoubtedly prepared to say that I do not feel complacent with the proper working of the Railways. I agree that you could not do anything on account of the post-war effects. It is not within your power to make good the losses sustained during the war in such a short period. I also do agree that these Railways had remained under the control of foreigners for a pretty long period and they exploited them for their benefit. I admit all these factors. Still if we do not make full use of our existing workshops, wagons and engines and fail to secure their full return per mile per day, then I am prepared to say that our workers are solely responsible for this. Therefore the first thing that I would like to say is that when we have got engines and wagons which do not yield the full return, when work is not being properly executed in the Repair Shops and serious delays occur in carrying out the repairs, all this shows that Railways are not working efficiently.

Apart from this another thing which I would like to submit is that after going through Paras 2 and 3 of the summary of the conclusions contained in the Report of the Enquiry Committee, I can say that our Railway system is very much defective indeed, because it has been stated in that Report that there are no prospects of a better future. And it has been further pointed out in the next para that labour and staff are also slack. I am constrained to view with great anxiety and concern that labour is slack. You have heard so many times that the labour have got no heart in their work. If no steps are taken to remedy this state of affairs, it is bound to entail serious repercussions. Similarly if the fault rests with the staff also and they are slack, I fail to understand how can we improve the working conditions? I do not attribute this defect to the honourable Ministers. Nevertheless I would submit that however good you might be, until and unless you infuse the right spirit in the labour, the staff will not co-operate with you and you cannot make any progress in the realization of your object. The people do complain. But when I find that both the labour and staff are slack, then I cannot suppress my feelings. A certain member of a Trade Union supplied me with some figures and told me a few things. I would place before you some of their complaints just to show you that now much injustice is indeed done unto them. Somebody told me that if any person fails to receive his fixed wages on the very day, these cannot be disbursed to him again. The wages cannot thereafter be paid to them for a period stretching from seven to eight months. Why can't the arrears be paid to that poor man along with his pay for the subsequent month? A certain member of the Trade Union came to see me and showed me 71 letters which were stated to have been written, but none of these could elicit any reply.

In regard to the disposal of appeals, my honourable friend Mr. Anthony has as usual explained to you the whole position. The appeal is forwarded to the higher authority along with the remarks of the person awarding the punishment and the appellant is not heard. Why don't you follow the procedure observed in the Postal Department? You may or may not do the justice but everybody should have the consolation that he is being justly treated. The provisions contained in your Appeal Rules are quite absurd.

I may just relate to you a short story. Orders were issued that the refugee staff should be paid an advance amounting to three months pay. On the 18th February, five or six refugees applied for an advance of three months salary being granted to them. Their applications were considered in the month of August and orders were passed thereon that they should be paid the advance and the recovery towards its repayment made from their salary at the rate of a certain percentage. The recovery based on that percentage was enforced from their salary for the months of September and October, but the loan was actually paid to them during the month of November. We people had heard of the tale that a fire broke out at a certain place and orders were issued after the expiry of six months that fire should be extinguished. This is also the same story. You may just see what is the condition of these refugees. The recovery precedes the actual payment of the loan.

Apart from this, you should look to the treatment meted out to the staff. Some Guards on the E.P. Railway have complained that no increase has been made in their allowances. Many of the Guards are being paid comparatively lesser allowances than before. By adopting these tactics, do you want to exploit the labour?

Till recently, our honourable Minister of State had given a decision which is contained at page 29 of the Report of the Grainshops Enquiry Committee that a joint board should be constituted to run the grainshops and that would consist of two representatives of the Labour. But another big boss gave a decision that one of these two persons would be nominated by him. When any Minister passes orders, why a subordinate officer is allowed to meddle with it? Nobody is going to tolerate such a treatment.

Apart from this, those Railway employees who have decided to opt out are not being supplied with grains at the civil controlled rates although a decision to this effect was arrived at.

Further I would like to tell you that the G.I.P. and E.I. Railways have granted this concession to the Refugees whose Pension and Provident Fund Accounts papers have not as yet been received from Pakistan that they should be allowed to continue in service till such time as their papers are received. But on the E.P. Railway which employs the largest number of refugees, they have been deprived of this concession. As a matter of fact such things afflict the affected person like a wound. So long as you do not establish mutual concord with the labourers, whatever amount of allowance you might grant, it will not produce any lasting effect. You should treat the labour with humanity, gentlemanliness and generosity so that both the labourers and the officers may feel confident that they form part and parcel of one and the same Government; and then only they would be able to work in right earnestness. To-day we emphasize that equal opportunities should be afforded to all. We have also made provision to this effect in our Constitution that equal opportunities would be given to all. I would, therefore, urge that if you want to pursue this policy, then you should see that every person is given an opportunity and not only the big ones. If you instil the creed of democracy in all matters, then the present conditions will no longer continue. To-day, the ablest and the most distinguished persons of our country are working as Ministers. If this cannot be accomplished now, I really fail to understand as to when this will be done? Before I resume my seat, I express the hope that by the next year we would derive the full benefit of your stewardship and then be in a position to congratulate you on your having done excellent work.

Mr. Frank Anthony: Mr. Chairman, comparatively few of the grievances of railwaymen have been voiced before this House and in the few minutes at my disposal I propose to touch briefly on what I feel are the major grievances, legitimate grievances, which are agitating the railwaymen today.

I feel I ought in passing to offer a word of congratulation to the previous speaker. His was the first voice I have heard in this House asking for a fair deal to railwaymen. It is axiomatic that our chief problem today is to secure the willing cooperation of labour. I tell the honourable the Railway Minister here that if they desire that cooperation they must deserve it. Do you deserve the confidence of railway labour? I say it without any qualification that you have not deserved the confidence of railway labour and if you persist in these policies you will continue not to get their confidence or cooperation.

I would refer briefly to the urgent need of doing away immediately with the present prevailing abuse of the system of selection. I have begged of you and I ask you to listen to me that for the sake of the railway administration substitute for this system of selection the old system of seniority cum selection. The present system and the abuses to which it has lent itself has the most demoralising effect on the railway administration. I think it is true without qualification. As a result of this abuse of the present system the poor railway men are suffering under a sense of frustration and bitterness without any heart in their jobs. What happens? Ten men with equally good records have their names sent up for selection finally the man lowest on the list, a man the most junior on the list, who has not worked alongside the rest, is pitchforked over their heads. The other nine men who have been superseded are working today with a sense of bitterness and frustration without hearts in their jobs: they are just carrying on until they can earn their provident fund. This is what is destroying the railway administration. If you call for a ballot of some description today I can guarantee that 99 per cent. of the men who are subject to this system will ask you to abolish it immediately.

What is the obstacle? What is the reason why you are not abolishing it? Because your senior officers do not want a powerful instrument of patronage to be taken out of their hands. They do not want this opportunity to practise nepotism to be taken away from them: they do not want this convenient avenue of putting in their curly-headed boys, their relatives near and distant into plum jobs, to be taken away from their hands. That is the only reason why your senior officers ask you to continue the present system which is being increasingly abused.

I wish to say a word about railway labour organisations. I feel that it is a very unhappy habit for the railway administration to single out a particular railway labour organisation and to deal with it exclusively as if it was the sole spokesman for railway labour. It is an unfortunate habit, it is an unfair habit. By continuing this habit the railway administration places a premium on the trouble-making propensities of a particular railway union. I say it without any qualification that there is no union today which can claim to have the following of all railwaymen throughout the country. Do you think that because one particular railway union calls for a strike ballot, one particular railway union says that it will call for a strike that it will be able to implement that strike and paralyse the railway administration? No. But because you choose to single out a particular union because you practice favouritism you get jittery. The whole railway administration gets jittery, the whole country gets jittery because one particular union threatens to call a strike. I know that railwaymen are bitter and they are rightly bitter but the railwaymen are not anxious to go on strike. I can assure the Railway Minister that there is a hard core of railwaymen running into tens of thousands who are not anxious to strike. They only want a fair deal from you. Are you prepared to give that fair deal to them? I ask you, I plead with you not to try and adopt methods of bullying and intimidating them into giving up their legitimate grievances. I ask you also not to go in for this process of back-scratching a particular union. Railwaymen may not have much education but they have a robust common-sense in general and avoid like poison any union which they regard as a stooge of the Government. A railwayman will refuse to join it if he thinks that its leaders are backscratchers, toadies and stooges of the Government. But I find that this process is going on. I find, Sir, that the railwaymen are prepared to join unions which are not stooge unions. But what are you doing? You are all the time giving grist to the Communist mill: you are driving these railwaymen into the arms of extremists and Communists unions. It is because of that very recently I accepted the presidency of the oldest union in the country. I have found proof of what I am saying in the fact that railwaymen of all classes, of all communities, railwaymen of all sections are flocking to it, because they want a healthy trade union movement in this country. They do not want any stooge organisation: They do not want any irresponsible organisations, they do not want any mushroom organisations, organisations which are mere creatures of the Government, they want organisations which give them real trade union benefits, organisations which will not every now and then ask their men to go in for strike ballots or to threaten strikes. The railwaymen do not want these. They want healthy trade unions. Because Government should not encourage a stooge union or a mushroom union, which has a subscription of two or four annas as a membership fee. These two anna and four anna unions cannot subscribe to the basic principles of healthy trade unionism. They have necessarily to live on shrill, rancous promises and wild denunciation of the Government.

Sir, I shall refer to another matter which has caused a good deal of bitterness among the class II officers. I say this that the class II officer today without exception feels that he is being deliberately discriminated against. Formerly there was what was known as the Lower Gazetted Service. The men in the Lower Gazetted Service were in an anomalous and invidious position: they were officers with a permanent brand of subordination; they were branded as pariahs. The railway administration at one time decided to abolish the L.G.S. But what do we find today? The railway administration has virtually introduced the L.G.S. throughout the Railways. Even on such Railways as B.N.R., B.B. and C.I. and O.T., where there was no L.G.S. class II has been introduced. I say this without qualification that these officers, to brand him as a pariah—as a class II officer. Your class II officers I officer. They feel that the class I officer is making class I into a preserve for the class I officers and that he intends to keep the class II man as an inferior officer, to brand him as a pariah—as a class II officer. Your class II officers are the men who have been through the mill; they form the backbone of your administration; take them away and your administration will fall like a house of cards. I plead with the Railway Minister to do away with this class II immediately. By all means have a junior and a senior class. But don't justify it by saying that the Pay Commission recommended a class II. The Pay Commission did not suggest it. I have only had seven minutes.

Mr. Chairman: He has had twelve minutes

Mr. Frank Anthony: I started at quarter past four exactly. If the Pay Commission recommended a class II it did not mean that a class II should be inserted where it did not exist. The former system on the B.B. and C.I. and S.M.R. was working with good results. Have a junior and senior scale if you like—the direct recruit and the promoted man. The complaint is also made that not enough vacancies are reserved for the promoted man in class I. This is a direct violation of a recommendation of the Pay Commission. We ask that ample opportunities should be given to able subordinates to be promoted to the highest rungs. It is felt that the class I man is trying to keep the class I appointments as a preserve for the directly recruited man that he is squeezing out the promoted subordinate. I am not talking of persons belonging to any particular community when I say that Class II officers tell me the test would come if you give them the opportunity of premature retirement: they will retire en bloc. I was talking to a Madras officer on the G.I.P. Railway recently and he told me "I want to serve the Government of Independent India, but I do not want to be treated as a pariah. Today if I am given an opportunity I will retire prematurely". That is the feeling of all your class II officers.

I referred briefly two days ago to the position with regard to the revised scales and allowances of running staff. I mentioned in my speech at the general discussion of the budget that the application of these new scales has led to the lowering of emoluments in certain cases. I may tell you that I have received general complaints from every railway—the M.S.M., the S.I., the East Indian, the B.N.R., G.I.P. and B.B. and C.I. In all these Railways men have already drawn less under these revised scales than they were drawing formerly. I ask you to look into this matter betimes. The running staff today, because these revised scales are hitting them adversely, are forming their own organisations perhaps under Communist influence. They will hold the country to ransom if you do not look into what they regard as their legitimate grievances.

In this connection I want to draw pointed attention to one of the provisions in this revised system of rules. It is with regard to classification of recruitment and promotion between literates on the one side and illiterates and semi-literates on the other. I am sorry to say it but I feel it is a classification which was actuated by the motive to strike at members of my community. Those who have passed Matriculation, say, by one mark are to be regarded as literates and all others are to be regarded as semi-literates and given entirely different rates of pay and different avenues of promotion. Do you mean to say that a boy who has studied upto the Senior Cambridge is a semi-literate while a boy who has passed Matriculation is literate? Do you mean to say that a boy who has failed by one mark in Matriculation is semi-literate while a boy who has passed it by one mark is literate? In countries where standards of efficiency are the highest in character—in England, in Canada—they do not ask for Junior and Senior Cambridge qualifications for this sort of jobs. One of the reasons why the efficiency on railways has fallen is the fetish for paper examinations and paper qualifications. By all means ask for first-class Graduates for your Foreign Service. But do you expect people with first-class marks to fill successfully the jobs of firemen and drivers? What is happening today? You are getting men with clerical complex, men who cannot do practical work, hard physical work. You are pitchforking them into these kinds of jobs. A senior Hindu officer on the railway told me "A serious accident had taken place and I called a third class Graduate and told him 'Go immediately and report to me'. He said 'Sorry, I must have a bath first'. I told him 'If you don't go now I will give you the bath here and now'." That is the complex. You do not want these people with paper qualifications for these kinds of jobs.

I have two more points to cover. I will be able to do it in three minutes. At the time when railway employees were asked to opt for either Dominion—I have got the specific communique—they were told they could opt provisionally for either Dominion and they were also given specific guarantees that a provisional option would not affect their grade, posting and prospects in any way. But what has been done? Men who opted provisionally for Pakistan but finally for India, men who never left India but carried on working here, have been penalised today. They have been re-employed. A deliberate violation of this guarantee, a deliberate breach of faith has been perpetrated by the railway administration.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor (U.P.: General): That showed where their sympathies lay.

Mr. Frank Anthony: This remark from my friend shows a false mentality. When these men opted they were not given any powers of pre-vision, they were not to know that killings would take place. They opted long before August 1947. Thousands of Hindus, Sikhs and Christians who had their homes in Pakistan and who could not foresee the killings and the strained relations which ultimately supervened, opted for Pakistan not because of political sympathies with Pakistan but because of their homes being there. Before the division and killings took place they made this personal option. Now you penalise them. Some of their families have been driven out. They have come here. They finally opted for India and you are penalising them.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: That obviously shows that they subordinated the interests of this country to their personal interests.

Mr. Frank Anthony: My friend does not understand. They opted not for any political reasons at all. I have got one minute more.

Mr. Chairman: You have taken fifteen minutes.

Mr. Frank Anthony: It is only 13 minutes. I don't wish to differ from you. I would just refer to one other case. Persons who opted provisionally for Pakistan went to Pakistan and finally opted for India. In their case, by all means, investigate their antecedents. If it is found that their absorption into permanent service is undesirable, get rid of them. But be fair. Don't blindly accept police reports. To get rid of a Christian corrupt police officer may make false reports. Give them a chance. A case came to me and I dealt with it with one of the members of the Railway Board. He refused to disclose the facts. The whole career of the man has been destroyed. He was given no opportunity to vindicate himself. If the report is true dispense with him. But why not give him the same treatment which has been accorded to all other government servants. An ordinance has been issued that the Governor-General is empowered to discharge anyone found to be undesirable for security reasons. He is discharged and given compensation. Why do you single the railwayman out and remove him without assigning any reasons? All rights to compensation have been taken away.

There are one or two other matters but I have not got the time. I do plead once again that the Railway Minister will deal with all these matters that I have raised in a sympathetic manner.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal; Muslim): I would like to know how much time would be available to me.

Mr. Chairman: Ten minutes.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: At this far end of the day I will not tire the House by showering congratulations on the Railway Minister. He has done what was expected of him, namely to present a very honest, simple and a straightforward budget. But with regard to certain aspects of the Railway administration, I like to refer to briefly. One is corruption.

Sir, corruption is more deep-rooted than would appear on the surface; it is ingrained in the public, it is also in the public officials. There are many who like to co-operate with the administration, but then if any acts of corruption are brought to the notice of higher officials no serious notice is taken. If any information is given it is not pursued or acted upon. Few people have the opportunity of corresponding with the Ministers or with the Railway Board on corruption. Many businessmen are afraid that if they give information however confidentially they may be treated here, somehow or other it will leak out and they are unwilling and afraid to incur the displeasure of the officials.

Take the case of ticketless travel. I don't think any information is needed here. Any official—trustworthy official—may stand at the gate where tickets are collected at any station. He will be met with a familiar scene, namely that hundreds of people go out without giving any ticket, without anyone asking for the ticket; the man at the gate stands unconcerned in an attitude of benevolent neutrality; he is not concerned—men go and come without any let or hindrance.

I once was asked to examine this situation in the railway station at Burdwan. I found people were going out without giving any ticket, without anyone asking for it. Then I wrote to the Station Master and after a long waiting a surprise raid was arranged by the Police Superintendent and the District Magistrate, and the Station master checked the gate for one train for half an hour. Several hundreds were found without tickets; they were dealt with adequately on that day, but this vigilance was not repeated. That is why people get tired of giving information. This can be verified any day and I believe this has much to do with economy. If we can prevent ticketless travel it will be a great thing and honest people will co-operate. It is easy to tackle this but it is not being tackled properly. It will if tackled, solve your finances very easily and solve much of your difficult problems.

With regard to thefts a reference has been indirectly made to it. (An Honourable Member: 'Now you come to pour attache case'). Sir, I was the unfortunate victim of a burglary in a railway train. In fact, when I woke up during the early hours, I found the window which had been securely locked from within, was halfway down and through the small opening two bags were stolen including some draft amendments to the Constitution. (An Honourable

[Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad.]

Member: To our great relief. I believe that the theft had much to do with the shape of the future Constitution and had a constitutional significance.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: May I ask the honourable Member what value he places on the property he lost?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Not much, but they would have probably shaped in an insignificant manner the future Constitution. Sir, railway travel at night is a dangerous job at particular places. When I woke up, I gradually realised that I was the victim of a theft. Then I called several station authorities at stations where the train stopped; nobody was in a mood to take any notice. Ultimately I practically forced one constable to come to my compartment and then he travelled with me for some time. I gave him a written complaint and that was ultimately carried to the station concerned. There I gave a kind of threat that the bags contained very important papers relating to the Indian Constitution and the Constituent Assembly and if possible they should be sent to me. I got back some waste papers and a torn bag were sent to me. They were found near the outer signal of Madhupur on the E.I.R. But the valuable papers were lost. It is suspected that the thieves were hired by the Government in order to remove the amendments!

With regard to railway workers and officials, a word is due. I think railway labour to a large extent, is exploited upon. They have grievances, but that is magnified and much capital is made out of them. I believe, as Mr. Anthony has said—he has large experience—that they should be dealt with fairly and squarely. It is by this means that you can make them come under the influence of desirable persons. Labour is a very delicate problem today, and I do not desire to say anything today which might prejudice the issue. In fact, one must congratulate the railway labour in having decided not to strike at this critical moment, but I believe their case should be sympathetically dealt with.

With regard to other officials, guards, drivers, and firemen etc., I am informed that the revised pay scale has been so manipulated or so constituted that their former pay has in many cases been reduced. They have a grievance in this matter and I think it deserves the sympathetic attention of the honourable Minister.

With regard to economy the expenditure is mounting. The pay scale is very high at the top. There is no sign of any attention being paid to reduce them to proper proportions. I believe that the pay scale should be revised on an all-India basis. They should not be considered as the pay of certain classes of railway officials. In fact, there are many public servants who are underpaid—some are overpaid. They should be revised throughout India on one uniform scale. The Government should try to set different standards for different classes of people and pay them a basic pay and then make further pay dependent upon the extra labour or extra efficiency. It should be tackled on a long-term basis.

With regard to third class coaches, I listened to the speech of the honourable the Minister of State with some amount of nervousness. The honourable Minister has said that he was taking good care to build more third class coaches. But the honourable the Minister of State struck a very doubtful note that it was by overcrowding, by a shortage of third class coaches, that the railway makes a profit. Somehow or other he stopped there, and it seemed to me that the policy, the real internal policy of the railway is not to build third class coaches so that they would profit by overcrowding. Otherwise I find no reason.....

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I made it clear that we are taking all possible steps to increase the production of coaches and I stated that we are aiming at a target of a thousand coaches per year in the next five years.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Those are the usual promises but in view of the threat uttered from a responsible quarter that the railways are making a profit only because they don't utilise sufficient number of coaches, overcrowding becomes a benefit to the railway finances. It was this emphasis on the profit side that made me a little nervous. Sir, I submit that the different aspects of these questions should be carefully attended to. As a simple, straightforward gentleman, an honourable member of the House, namely, Babu Ramnarayan Singh, has plainly put it to you, "Do something; remove corruption from Delhi or from one station." It is not a proper thing to wait till some information reaches you. That was the attitude of the foreign government. It should not be the attitude of our own popular Government. I think any Minister, any trusted man can trace corruption and take drastic action. In this way alone we would be able to get rid of corruption.

Before sitting down, I should like to congratulate the honourable Minister for the excellent beginning he has made and I hope that at the next time the Budget is presented, we shall hear of no corruption, more efficiency and a more surplus Budget.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Mr. Chairman, I am sure the House will agree that within the few minutes that are at my disposal it will not be possible for me to traverse all the points that have been taken by honourable members in the course of the debate which has taken place since this morning. The Cut Motion itself was one for discussing general administration with particular reference to economy. So far as I have been able to gather, there has not been much of suggestion in the way of economy. The attack has been on the general administration.

I wish, at the outset, to draw attention to one observation made by an honourable member referring to a remark which was made by the Minister of State in one of his speeches before the House namely, that the criticism of the Budget has been of a mild description. The honourable member said that, if that criticism was mild, it was not because of any things of which myself or the Minister of State has been guilty in the way of improving administration to which we may have laid claim; it is rather due to the kindness and the graciousness of honourable members in overlooking our faults. I wish straightaway to make it clear that if there is a vote on this Cut Motion, I shall not expect a vote which proceeds merely from the hearts of honourable members; I should insist on a vote which comes from their heads also.

In trying to traverse some of the points that have been raised, perhaps I might begin with the suggestions which were made by the honourable the Mover of the Cut Motion. He referred mainly to two points—research and publicity. Both these matters are being very actively considered at the present moment. We are re-organising the whole of the research set-up in Delhi and elsewhere—not merely the scientific research side but also the economic research side, and in this work of research we are associating on the scientific side representatives of the Council of Industrial and Scientific Research; we are associating people connected with the National Physical Laboratory; we are also associating engineers of all kinds and experts of various kinds. That is a set-up which will be elaborated and in connection with that we are making arrangements for obtaining advice from expert quarters in London, if that becomes necessary.

As regards publicity, a certain amount of publicity is being done on the different railway system. Honourable Members are perhaps familiar with the publicity side of Railways working within their areas, but it required a great deal of coordination and guidance and the new Tourist Traffic Section which is proposed to be set up in the Railway Ministry will take this up actively and organise publicity on better standards. It strikes me that, in evolving this organisation, it would be greatly helpful if prominent members of the journalistic profession could be associated with the working out of details and policies.

There was one point which my honourable friend Mr. Shiva Rao made. That was that he did not agree with the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee in giving the cold shoulder to the investigation of refrigerating arrangements in trains and carriages for the transport of perishable articles like fruit, vegetables and fish. I greatly sympathise with him and in a small way we are trying to do something in this direction. Only two or three months ago, I directed that an officer of the East Punjab Railway should be deputed to the Kulu Valley and Kashmir for the purpose of investigating the fruit trade there; and also investigating the question how that fruit could be transported to markets all over India. His report has not yet reached me, but we are not altogether forgetting this matter. If the experiment that we propose to make is successful, we shall probably proceed further in this matter.

Another suggestion of his which attracted me a great deal was the question of exhibition trains. He particularly instanced the case of our using what has been collected by the Sarvodaya Exhibition here, transport it all over the country, so that people in different parts of the country might see the life of the Father of the Nation in all its various aspects during his long life or service to the nation. Perhaps, it might be possible for us, in consultation with the organisers of this Exhibition, to see whether anything can be done in this connection. I promise that I shall have the matter looked into.

The next speaker for whose frankness and even vehemence I have always considerable respect over reached himself in the course of this debate. I am referring to my honourable friend Mr. Mahavir Tyagi. He launched a tirade against the Railway Board and he also deflected some of it, though in a mild form, to the Ministers. Now let me say at once that if he takes the view that the people who are now in the office of the Railway Board are idle, doing no work, cooling their heels and drawing their pay, to put it very mildly he is very much mistaken. I should like him to come over to the Railway Board's Office when I shall give him an opportunity of sitting by the side of every one of these officers—provided of course he is prepared to stay there from 9 A.M. to 8 P.M.—and see what they are doing. I am prepared to throw out the challenge that the amount of work that each one of them does, he will not be able to do in thrice the time that they manage it. I wish to be rather strong on this question because I think strength must be met by strength. I think he was not quite fair to those officers when he said that they were people sitting idle and drawing their salaries for doing nothing. I think it is an insult to them. If he is under the impression that they are able to fool me, it is an insult not merely to them but it is paying a very poor compliment to me. This is the first time that I shall be acquiring the reputation—I have in my time dealt with officers at the level for many years—and he told that I have allowed myself to be fooled by people of that description. (Babu Ramnarayan Singh: "Is it impossible?") It is perhaps not impossible from Mr. Ramnarayan Singh's point of view. I am sure he apprehends that if he were in my place he will get fooled. That probably is his own fear. But I can tell him that so long as I am here I shall not allow myself to be fooled by anybody.

(At this stage Mr. Deputy Speaker resumed the Chair.)

Then, Sir, there was talk about the salaries at the top. That raises a very large issue. It affects not merely the salaries in the Railway Board; it affects salaries all over the country, in the various Departments. If you are going to touch the salaries of those who are now on the Railway Board, you will have to touch the salaries of many other officers in the country. Of course, I remember that Mr. Mahavir Tyagi did not suggest the Government should touch their salaries but that the officers themselves should have the good sense to forego a part of their salaries.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: No Sir, I expect the Government officers themselves should do it and if they fail then the Government should do it.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: So far as the Government are concerned, I am afraid that no Government which wishes to respect contracts and agreements entered into in the past will embark upon any such step. It is possible that officers, out of their excess of patriotism, might be willing to say, 'Well, we will take only three-fourth or two-thirds of our salaries, though we are entitled to the full salaries.' But human nature being what it is, and being also aware of the fact that even honourable members of this Legislature have not yet voluntarily offered to forego some of their allowances...

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Because Ministers draw more than the members did against the wishes of many of the members.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: That is all right. Ministers at least did one thing. They did take a smaller salary than they were getting previously. I think, human nature being what it is, it is too much to expect this sort of thing. I cannot see how that can be a ground for attaching a body of men who work night and day for long hours and do the work that they have to prepare for us. I think it is unfair. I have been throughout these debates insisting that the more you recognise their work the more efficiency you can extract from the railway system, not merely in the case of manual labourers like the pointsmen, the porters and so on, but also in the case of the men who are officers. It is only from them that you have to extract work which would conduce to greater efficiency. Unless you treat them with courtesy, with ordinary goodness, kindness and so on, it will be impossible for you to expect willing, enthusiastic work from that sort of people. And I think it is a mistake on the part of any honourable member of the House to indulge in this sort of invective against a body of public-servants. I say that with great regret, because I have learned to appreciate Mr. Mahavir Tyagi, I believe he let himself go in the exuberance of the moment.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I still hold on to what I said. I do not appreciate your views in the matter.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Thank you. I hope honourable members here will give some appreciation to what I have said.

Honourable Members: Yes; yes. Absolutely that is so.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: There is another point I think Mr. Mahavir Tyagi waxed eloquent upon and that was the case of these 300 W.P. engines. Now, various criticisms were levelled against this placing of orders for 300 locomotives in America. He said that mechanical engineers were not consulted, that marshalling yards were inadequate, that the soil could not carry these engines, that if anything went wrong with them they could not be repaired in our workshops and so on. Well, every one of these points is familiar to me, because these points were brought to my notice some weeks ago by somebody. I do not wish to say who it was. But I hope the House will understand me when I say that this is not a new thing. It shows that someone has been going round and spreading this particular story. The criticisms levelled against these locomotives are that they are a type that will not give satisfactory performance in India; they are too heavy for the track in India; that there have been no effective tests for this type of engines; that some of them had developed mechanical defects and others were not working satisfactorily; and that the number ordered is too large for requirements. Not one of these propositions could be supported by facts. The W.P. type, the Passenger engine, was evolved by the Railway Board in 1946, as an express passenger locomotive designed to burn inferior grade coal to replace the older type—the X.C. type which, however had an axle load of 19.8 tons. The axle load of the W.P. is only 18.5 tons. Now, 16 of these were ordered to be sent to India for trial. These were first ordered to be manufactured in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Deputy Speaker. It is now five o'clock. We cannot go on.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Let the honourable Minister go on with his speech. It is very interesting.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would call the guillotine at five. I am exceedingly sorry the interesting speech has to be curtailed.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): Is it not possible by leave of the House to proceed with the speech?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The rules do not permit it. It is five o'clock. I cannot do anything now.

Shri B. Shiva Rao: I beg leave of the House to withdraw the cut motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Has the honourable member leave of the House to withdraw his cut motion?

The cut motion was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the respective sums not exceeding the amounts shown in the third column of the Order Paper be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of Demands entered in the second column thereof."

The motion was adopted.

[As directed by Mr. Deputy Speaker the motions for Demands for grants which were adopted by the Assembly are reproduced below.—Ed. of Deb.]

DEMAND NO. 1—RAILWAY BOARD

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 32,58,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Railway Board'.

DEMAND NO. 2—AUDIT

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 21,77,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Audit'.

DEMAND NO. 3—MISCELLANEOUS EXPENDITURE

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 46,70,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Miscellaneous Expenditure'.

DEMAND NO. 4.—WORKING EXPENSES—ADMINISTRATION

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 22,21,37,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Administration'.

DEMAND NO. 5—WORKING EXPENSES—REPAIR AND MAINTENANCE

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 49,93,08,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Repairs and Maintenance'.

DEMAND NO. 6.—WORKING EXPENSES—OPERATING STAFF

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 33,64,31,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Operating Staff'.

DEMAND NO. 7.—WORKING EXPENSES—OPERATION (FUEL)

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 24,28,65,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Operation (Fuel)'.

DEMAND NO. 8.—WORKING EXPENSES—OPERATION OTHER THAN STAFF AND FUEL

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 8,64,55,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Operation other than Staff and Fuel'.

DEMAND NO. 9.—WORKING EXPENSES—MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSES

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 20,31,34,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Miscellaneous Expenses'.

DEMAND NO. 10.—PAYMENTS TO INDIAN STATES AND COMPANIES

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,67,39,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Payments to Indian States and Companies'.

DEMAND NO. 11—WORKING EXPENSES—APPROPRIATION TO DEPRECIATION FUND

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 16,19,33,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Appropriation to Depreciation Fund'.

DEMAND NO. 12—OPEN LINE WORKS—REVENUE

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 7,65,16,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Open Line Works—Revenue'.

DEMAND NO. 15—CONSTRUCTION OF NEW LINES

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 4,23,52,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Construction of New Lines'.

DEMAND NO. 16—OPEN LINE WORKS—ADDITIONS

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 17,65,34,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Open Line Works—Additions'.

DEMAND NO. 1.—OPEN LINE WORKS—REPLACEMENTS

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 40,46,49,000, be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Open Line Works—Replacements'.

DEMAND No. 18—OPEN LINE WORKS—BETTERMENT FUND (PASSENGER AMENITIES)

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950 in respect of 'Open Line Works—Betterment Fund (Passenger Amenities)'.

DEMAND No. 19—CAPITAL OUTLAY ON VIZAGAPATAM PORT

That a sum not exceeding Rs. 14,65,000. be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1950, in respect of 'Capital Outlay on Vizagapatam Port.'

Shri R. K. Sidhva: May I submit, Sir, in view of the great importance of the matter, the honourable Minister may be allowed to proceed with his speech. Otherwise I feel that it would create a bad impression on the public. I therefore, submit either let us hear the honourable Minister completely or let him issue a statement. It is a very important matter—these 300 engines—and the public feel that they are rotting and they are useless and public money has been wasted. You can understand the feelings of the House.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: If the House so desires, I will issue it in the form of a statement.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Minister has assured the House that he will issue a statement. Nothing more can be done now. The House stands adjourned to 10-45 A.M. tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 24th February, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

[PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS]

Thursday 24th February, 1949.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-45 A.M.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will proceed to the consideration of the Hindu Code.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor (U.P.: General): May I raise a point of order?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar rose—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: A point of order has been raised by Mr. Kapoor.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister of Law): I was going to refer just to that. Sir, the Order Paper contains sixteen different motions. Some of them raise points of order and some of them are substantive motions. I was going to express myself on them before I actually spoke on my motion. However, if my friend has to say something, let him do so.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Let us hear his point of order.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: Sir, on the previous occasion when the motion was being taken up I stood up to raise a point of order. I was then directed by the Honourable Speaker to wait until the point of order raised by my friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad had been disposed of. That point of order was disposed of that day exactly at 5 P.M. thereafter the House rose for the day. I hope you will be kind enough to allow me to raise that point of order now. But before I do so I want to assure the House that my object.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member will kindly state his point of order. There need be no apology or argument. I should like to hear the point of order.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: My point of order relates firstly to the rights and privileges of the members of this House and secondly to the competency of this House in the present Session to deal with such an important and controversial measure as the Hindu Code Bill when a large number of members of this House are not attending and cannot attend, not for personal reasons, or party reasons, but for reasons of state and in the interest of the country as a whole, being at present busy in the provincial legislatures with the budget sessions, although they are very anxious and eager to attend this House and participate in the discussion of this motion which materially affects the whole Hindu society.

Honourable Members: This is not point of order at all.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am here to decide whether it is a point of order or not. You will kindly bear with me. I expect he will conclude his sentence soon.

Shri Jaspal Roy Kapoor: I know many of my friends here are very impatient to proceed with the Bill. It was therefore, Sir, that I at the outset wanted to assure the House that my object is not to sabotage the Bill with many provisions of which I am in agreement. My object is that things should be done constitutionally, the right thing should be done at the right time and in the right manner. As you are aware.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have heard the point of order. The honourable Member feels that this House is not competent to proceed with this Bill. This is number one. Number two is that certain members, whom he would like to have in this House, are not here. Neither is a point of order against the motion for consideration being taken up. This is a sovereign Legislative Assembly fit to pass any legislation it likes. I have heard the point of order and do not want to hear any more arguments in favour of it. As regards the absence of some members, it is no doubt true that a number of members could not be here both from the Provinces and the States. But it is always open to them to come here and take part.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): May I say,.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: So far as the Chair is concerned and so far as this House is concerned, no such direction has been given and therefore the House is competent to proceed with its business. Honourable Members can come in at any time and take part in the debate. I rule out this point of order.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: With all respect to you.....

Honourable Members: Order, order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would not hear anything more.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: The previous ruling given by your.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have considered all the previous rulings. I have got them here

Shri V. S. Sarwate (Madhya Bharat): I wish also to raise one point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it any point of order?

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Yes.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Member will kindly briefly state the point of order.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: I shall be very brief. My point of order is this: That for the purposes of this Bill the provisions regarding publication have not been satisfied. It is due to the Chair to see that those provisions are observed. I refer to rule No. 20 which says: "As soon as may be after a Bill has been introduced, the Bill, unless it has already been published, shall be published in the Gazette." There is also a provision that a report of a Select Committee has to be published with the amended Bill. My submission in this case is this: that the Bill was published originally sometime in April 1947 before the Independence Day. The political set-up of India has since changed and changed for the better. What I wanted to draw your attention to is this: that the Indian States which were not a part of the then British India were not to be affected by this Bill. Subsequently some States have merged and some have acceded to the Union in all subjects in August 1948. This is subsequent to the publication. There has been a Covenant of these States as the Chair may know sometime in August 1948. The result of that Covenant is that the States would now be automatically governed by any legislation which the Centre passes either in its powers of exclusive jurisdiction or concurrent jurisdiction. I therefore submit that it is the duty of the Chair to protect and guard the rights of the people of these States concerned who are affected by any Bill. I submit that the object of this is two-fold. Such provision enjoining publication enables the constituencies or the people affected by any Bill to express their re-actions, their opinions and their feelings about it. I believe this is a fundamental principle of democracy that no Bill shall be passed unless the people affected thereby are given an opportunity to express their opinion thereon. Secondly, the object of this publication is that the members of this Assembly may have an opportunity to ascertain what their constituencies feel about it. I need not say that it is the duty of the members here not to represent their individual views. They have to represent the views of their constituencies when important matters are concerned. As far as details or minor matters are concerned they may have discretion to express their views. But when a measure affects the whole life, the whole structure of society, then in such cases, in such vital matters it is the duty of the members to ascertain the views of their constituencies and represent them here correctly. They should not state what they feel. They should state what their constituencies feel. For this purpose, it is necessary that the Bill should be published. I submit that the Bill was published in the Gazette, but it was not published at the time when the people of the acceding States and merged States were in a position to give that serious consideration to this Bill, which this Bill deserves. Therefore I submit it was not a proper publication, as far as those people are concerned and now, since the Chair is here to guard their interests, I appeal to the Chair to order that the Bill be published before it is taken up for consideration.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: My reply to the point of order raised by my honourable friend is two-fold. In the first place, there is never any obligation cast upon this House for circulating any Bill for publication before the House can take the matter into consideration. It is only in special cases, when the House by a Resolution or the Government by any executive action desire that the Bill is so important that public opinion might be invited; that public opinion is invited. There is no such right, no obligation at all on the Legislature or on the Government and therefore, from that point of view, the point of order is no point of order at all.

My second submission with regard to the point of order is this, that we have deliberately confined the operation of this Bill to the provinces of India, and so far as the Provinces are concerned, the opinion has been canvassed three times, and I do not think any more purpose would be served by canvassing public opinion for the fourth time. When the occasion comes for the extension of the Bill to the Indian States, no doubt, this Legislature when a proper motion is placed before it, or the Government of the day, will take care that the wishes and the intentions of the States which have come into the Indian Union, will be consulted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I agree with the Honourable Law Minister that inasmuch as the scope of this Bill is confined in the first instance only to Provinces of India and it is highly problematical whether it will be extended to the acceding states and if so, on what terms and conditions of accession, it will be time for them to consider whether they can come in or not. As regards the other one, it is not obligatory to send the Bill for circulation unless by a motion accepted by the House. The Select Committee has considered this matter and has found this has not been so materially altered as to necessitate a re-publication in the official Gazette. For these reasons I rule out the point of order.

12 NOON

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, before I proceed to speak on my motion, I think it would be desirable if I.....

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): There is obstruction everywhere. Every-body rises to a point of order. Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad rose six months ago.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): It is a different point of order. My honourable friends should have a little patience.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I can only state that honourable members will kindly consider well before they raise a point of order. I also expect they will consider that if it should turn out to be a dilatory motion, they will invoke upon themselves the criticism of the House.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: My point of order is not dilatory.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is open to any honourable member to raise a point of order. An honourable member can take as many points of order as are reasonable and proper.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The objection to the point of order is dilatory. My point of order is this: the Honourable Minister for Law has already spoken on this motion. He completed the first part of the motion and then the subsequent stages began. He has a right to reply at the end of the debate. Now the motion has been made that the Bill be taken into consideration and a speech has been delivered on the 31st of August, 1948. We have on the agenda a list of amendments. We have to proceed straight to the agenda and then when a motion is made the Honourable Minister certainly has a right of reply, and in the end a general right of reply. At this stage, the Honourable Minister cannot make a second speech on the motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I find from the proceedings on the 31st of August, 1948 the following:

"The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister for Law): Sir, I move:

"That the Bill to amend and codify certain branches of the Hindu Law, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I shall hear the Honourable Minister first and then take the point of order.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, in view of the urgency of other Government business which is on the agenda and to which Government feels it must give precedence, I do not propose to make a speech in support of my motion, because it is quite obvious that if I were to make a speech in support of my motion, that is bound to give rise to a debate which will result in the consumption of a great deal of the time of the Government. We have already few days left before the House is due to rise, and I, therefore, request you to allow this motion to stand over for further consideration in the next session of the Assembly."

In view of this, the Honourable Dr. Ambedkar is entitled to proceed. I am exceedingly sorry that this point of order has been raised. It is only a dilatory motion.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: As I was going to say, it would facilitate my work a great deal if I were to know from you what procedure you propose to adopt with regard to the 16 motions that have been tabled as against the motion which I have made, and about which I propose to speak during the subsequent period. These 16 motions fall into three different categories. There are certain motions which propose that the Bill be further circulated for eliciting public opinion. There are certain motions which propose that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, which is different from the Select Committee which already reported on the Bill. And there are motions which propose that the Bill may be re-committed to the same Select Committee which has already reported.

There was one other or rather two other motions, one standing in the name of my honourable friend, Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka and the other standing in the name of my honourable friend, Shri Biswanath Das, which propose that the Bill should be circulated to people residing in the acceding states, before the Bill could be taken into consideration. With regard to these two motions, a point of order was raised recently by my honourable friend, Shri V. S. Sarwate, which you have been good enough to dispose of and I therefore take it that motions Nos. 7 and 8 must be taken to have been deleted from the agenda of today. The other motions remain and I want to know whether it is your desire that these motions may be put simultaneously along with my motion, so that all of them may be debated together and ultimately each motion may be put to the House separately, or whether you propose to have these motions taken up before my motion, so that they may be disposed of and the ground may be cleared for my speech on the motion, which I have tabled.

I might say one or two points with regard to the motions that have been made. There are certain motions which you are bound to put, I agree, unless the movers of these motions by themselves voluntarily desire not to move these motions. There are certain motions which are within your discretion, and unless you are satisfied that these motions are not dilatory motions but have behind them certain points of substance, it would not be open in accordance with the rulings which have been given by previous speakers, who have dealt with these questions, to put these motions to the House, because the Chair must be satisfied that they are motions behind which stand substantial grounds and they are not purely dilatory. For instance, the motion that the Bill should not be taken into consideration now, but should be taken into consideration at some later stage is one of those motions, I submit, which according to the rulings of the Chair heretofore could fall within your discretion, where you are satisfied that the reasons advanced by my honourable friends are substantial reasons, and therefore, you should put the motion to the House. For instance, the motion for recommitment is one such motion, because if you will kindly refer to these two volumes of Rulings,—I am sure you have.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: What I propose to do is this.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I should like to have your guidance in this matter.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have considered this matter and the number of motions that have been tabled. So far as motions 1 and 2 are concerned, motion 1 is that the Bill as amended by the Select Committee be withdrawn.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): I do not propose to move it at this stage: not that I am not entitled to move it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Then it is not necessary to go into the question whether it is in order or out of order. The second motion is.....

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am not moving it at this stage.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Then there is the amendment by Master Nand Lal that the consideration of the Bill be postponed to the Budget Session of 1951.

Master Nand Lal (East Punjab: General): I am not moving it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: These three withdrawals clear the ground. By whatever name they may be called, these three motions, substantially are for adjournment of the debate. I thought that, before the Honourable Law Minister, the mover of the Bill proceeds the movers of these motions must have risen in their seats and pressed for the taking up of these motions, because, before their motions are disposed of, the Honourable mover could not be allowed to speak. Inasmuch as they were not moved, I kept quite. Now it is clear they are withdrawn. The other motions viz., those for re-circulation or for reference to Select Committee, whatever their nature might be, they are motions which under the Rules any person is competent to make. It is a question for the House to deal with them. So far as the Select Committee motions are concerned, I must be satisfied in the first instance, about their need. Apart from that, there is a motion for re-circulation with respect to which some such requirements have not been laid down, so far as I can see in any rule or rulings. Therefore, I propose at this stage to allow the mover of the Bill to make his speech and after he concludes his speech, allow the motions for Select Committee and Circulation to be moved without any speech. Then, the discussion will go on on all the motions and I will put them one after another to the House.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I am obliged for your guidance, Sir. As usual when presenting a motion for the consideration of a Bill as reported by the Select Committee it is the duty of the Chairman of the Select Committee, in the first instance, to draw the attention of the House to such changes as may have been made by the Select Committee in the original Bill which has been referred to the Select Committee. I propose to follow that procedure in the first instance.

Sir, the first part of the Bill deals with marriage and divorce. So far as this part of the Bill is concerned, the Select Committee has added two clauses which relate to the restitution of conjugal rights and to judicial separation. These provisions specifically were absent from the original Bill. The draftsmen of the original Bill felt themselves content by reference to the Indian Divorce Act of 1869 which contains provisions relating to the restitution of conjugal rights and judicial separation. The original draftsmen of the Bill felt that a reference in this Bill to the Indian Divorce Act would be quite sufficient to invoke these two provisions which were contained in the Indian Divorce Act and consequently it was not necessary expressly to mention these two matters in the Code. The Select Committee felt otherwise. The Select Committee felt that as this was going to be a complete Code of Hindu Law, it was wrong to leave the code incomplete, and so to say, legislate by reference. They therefore thought that, instead of leaving this matter to be invoked by reference to the Indian Divorce Act, it would be desirable to embody in the Code itself the provisions contained in the Indian Divorce Act relating to these matters and consequently the part dealing with marriage and divorce has been expanded by the Select Committee by the addition of the clauses relating to these two matters. The House will see that there is no change as a matter of fact between the original Bill and the Bill as drafted by the Select Committee. All that is done is that what was done by reference to the Indian Divorce Act has been done expressly and positively by the inclusion in the Code of specific sections relating to these matters.

With regard to adoption, the Select Committee has introduced a few new changes. The first change that they have made is that when a father is disqualified by reason of the fact that he had changed his religion and ceased to be a Hindu, the mother has been given the right to give a boy in adoption. In other words, change of religion by the father from Hinduism to some other religion has been introduced as a disqualification in the matter of the right to give in adoption. Consequently, a mother in those circumstances has been empowered to give a boy in adoption. Similarly, if a widow was there and there was a boy, that boy certainly could be given in adoption by the mother when the father was not living. There again, a disability has been introduced to the effect that if the widow ceased to be a Hindu, she would lose her right of giving the boy in adoption, which she would otherwise have.

Another change which has been made by the Select Committee is with regard to the different modes of taking a boy in adoption. Hitherto, as the House knows, there are various forms of adoption. The main form of adoption which is recognised by the Smritis is what is known as the Dattaka form of adoption. In addition to the Dattaka form of adoption, there have prevailed in the various parts of India, customary forms of adoption such as Godha Adoption, Kritrima Adoption, Dwyamushyayana Adoption. The Select Committee felt that as they were codifying the law, it is desirable not to allow any room for customs to grow, because the effect of custom being permitted would be to eat into the Code and make the Code after certain time null and void. Therefore, the Select Committee decided that if anybody wants to adopt under this Code, nobody can make any adoption except in accordance with the provisions of this Code, and Dattaka shall be the only form and no other.

Then, Sir, we come to the question of the right of the adopted boy to divest the persons in whom property has been invested before the adoption takes place. As every member of this House, who is aware of the provisions of the Hindu Law, will know, under the existing Hindu Law, it is permissible to a boy who has been adopted, no matter at what stage he has been adopted—he may have been adopted forty years after the death of the father—time makes no change at all in his rights—to file a suit to set aside any alienation or transfer of property made by the widow who has adopted him. Any amount of litigation goes on on this particular point. In fact, if anyone were to examine the total amount of litigation among the Hindus on the various points of Hindu Law, I am sure they will find that litigation on the question of divesting the property by the adopted boy would be the largest volume. It is therefore desirable that this matter should be settled once and for all. The Rau Committee adopted the procedure of dividing adoption into two categories—adoption made three years before the death of the father and the coming into operation of the Code; and adoption made after the Code. They laid down that a boy, if he was adopted three years before the death of the adoptive father would be entitled to the original rights which an adopted son had under the Hindu Code. But if he were adopted three years after he would not be entitled to set aside alienation.

The second thing that happened as a result of adoption under the Hindu Law was that he completely divested the widowed mother who made the adoption, with the result that the entire corpus of the property passed into the hands of the adopted boy, who, in a certain sense was a stranger, and notwithstanding the notional change that he entered into the family of the adopted father, he practically continued his affiliations with the members of the natural family. The result was that after the adoption had taken place, instead of the adopting mother getting any kind of security for herself as a result of adoption which a natural mother would get from a natural son, she found that this new adopted boy ran away with the property and left the mother with nothing but the right of maintenance. We thought that that was not a desirable state of affairs from the point of view of giving security to women, and consequently certain changes were made. The original distinction that was adopted in the Rau Committee was deleted and a provision was made that the rights of the adopted son shall accrue to him not from the date of the death of his adopting father but shall accrue to him from the date of his adoption, so that any alienation that may have been made prior to his adoption were beyond his reach, were unchallengeable by him.

[Dr. B. R. Ambedkar]

The second provision that we have made was that the adopted son shall not as a result of adoption deprive the adopting mother completely of her right of property. What the Bill says in its altered form is that only one half of the property of the widow will go to the adopted son. The other half, notwithstanding the fact that the widow has adopted will continue to be in the possession and enjoyment of the adopting mother. The result is that the Committee has permitted adoption which the Hindu community feels is a necessary thing for the purpose of perpetuating the family. But at the same time we have taken care to see that the adoption does not beggar the mother altogether.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is not that the result under the Deshmukh Act?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: No. As I say, she gets only the maintenance.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: She gets half the share of the property.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: As soon as the adoption takes place all that passes to the son.

Shri Prabhu Dayal Himatsingka (West Bengal: General): According to the 1937 Act she is a co-heir with the son.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): The son comes later on.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: That may be so. Now I am coming to minority and guardianship. Here there are only two changes made by the Select Committee in this part of the Bill. The first change is that the power of the Hindu father as a natural guardian of his minor son has been taken away if he renounces the world or ceases to be a Hindu. The original law was that the father was the natural guardian and no matter what change took place in his condition either by his religion or in any other way, he still continued to be the guardian of his minor son. The Committee felt that as this was a Code intended to consolidate the Hindu society and their laws, it was desirable to impose this condition, namely, that the father shall continue to be the natural guardian so long as he continues to be a Hindu. The Code in its altered form also has introduced another change, namely, that a Hindu widow has been given power to appoint a testamentary guardian if her husband has not appointed anyone. She had not any such power and this power has been given to her by the Select Committee.

Now, Sir, I come to the part of the Bill which deals with succession and I will first refer to changes made in the succession to males. Now so far as what are called the compact series of heirs under the Hindu Law, which are placed in category I by the Rau Committee is concerned, the Select Committee has made no alteration at all. The compact series remains as it is, both in the line of heirs as well as in the order of heirs. That matter has not been altered at all. But with regard to persons which are included in clauses 1 to 4 of the Rau Committee, certain changes have been made both in the matter of the line of succession and also in the matter of priority of succession. The Committee has followed both the principles, namely, propinquity as well as natural love and affection, and it is on that basis that the Select Committee has made certain alterations in the heirs set out in clauses 1 to 4 of the original Bill. The Select Committee has also done one thing more: it has curtailed the number of degrees of agnates and cognates who can become heirs to the deceased, and also it has removed the other heirs, such as for instance, heirs which are not related, such as Sam Brahmchari Guru and so on. The reason why the Select Committee has curtailed the number of heirs as provided for in the original Bill is this. We are under this code giving the right to make a will to every Hindu. A line of criticism has been levelled in a very important journal, namely, the Journal of Comparative Legislation, in which a very eminent lawyer has made the point that when you give the right to make a will, it is unnecessary to provide such a long list of heirs, which extend to the fourteenth degree from the deceased. If the deceased is interested in a man which is related to him in the fourteenth degree and is alive at the time of his death, it is open to him to make a will and to give a part of his property to the particular person in whom he is interested.

If the deceased himself during his lifetime has not chosen to remember a relation who is related to him by the 14th degree there is no particular reason why because of mere intestacy he should be permitted to come in for a share. That is one of the reasons why the Select Committee adopted this provision.

I might also draw the attention of the House to the fact that with regard to widows a disqualification has been introduced by the Select Committee which says that a widow on remarriage shall lose her right of inheritance.

Then with regard to the daughter's share, which of course existed in the original Bill itself, the Select Committee has made a somewhat important alteration. The original Bill said that the daughter shall get a share equal to half the share of the son and in order to make equity equitable in devising the line of succession to the Stridhan property of the woman they had also provided that in that case the son will take one half of what the daughter takes, so that the daughter will take one half in the father's and the son will take one half in the mother's property. I cannot say that that was an inequitable proposition but somehow the Select Committee and I believe I can say against the best part of their judgment increased in their enthusiasm the share of the daughter in father's property from one half to one full share, equal to that of the son. (An honourable Member: "The son is also given.") I am aware of that. With regard to succession to females there are only two changes which the Select Committee has made. Under the existing rule the husband of a woman in the case of succession to females comes much later under the Hindu law and that provision was included by the old Rau Committee. The Select Committee felt that that was rather unjust, because it may be (it is often possible) that much of the property which is called Stridhan property or property which comes into the hands of a woman may, and perhaps does, to a very large extent come from the husband and if the husband is the principal source of the property, that comes into the hands of the woman, it is not proper that it should be postponed to other heirs. Consequently the Select Committee altered the provision and brought the husband in line with the other Stridhan heirs, so that the husband now shares simultaneously with the heirs of a woman, who share in the Stridhan property. As I said that because that increased the share of the daughter in the father's, they also pari passu made the share of the son in the mother's Stridhan property equal to that of the daughter.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: They balanced the son and daughter.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: No change has been made in the law relating to maintenance which is worthy of requiring any mention to this House.

Then I come to the question of the joint family. It has been said that the provisions contained in the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee contained provisions relating to joint family which are absolutely new. I would like to take this occasion to repudiate that suggestion. No change has been done by the Select Committee. The provisions of the Mitakshara joint family were originally contained in the Bill as drafted by the Rau Committee and it was placed before this House on the 9th August, which the House accepted and sent to the Select Committee. (Honourable Members: 9th April.) Therefore my first submission is that no new change has been made by this Select Committee. All that the Select Committee has done is to add two new clauses—clause No. 88 and clause No. 89. Clause 88 deals with the doctrine of what is called pious obligations. Clause 89 deals with the liability of the joint family to pay joint family debts. It was unnecessary to include these clauses, because once you break up coparcenary property it is not necessary to make any express provision with regard to the doctrine of pious obligation, because the doctrine of pious obligation is necessary where there is survivorship property: because by survivorship where A takes the property of B and the property of B is encumbered with debts, no special doctrine is necessary to impose an obligation upon B; because in hereditament which a person gets, he takes both the profit and the burden of it. But in view of the theory of the Mitakshara that every coparcener gets the property by survivorship, which does not belong to the deceased, the Patna High Court, if I may say so, as well as the Bombay High Court Bar pressed upon us very strongly that it was very desirable that these two things which were implicit, so to say, in the Mitakshara doctrine of joint family, shall be stated expressly in the Code, so that when the question of judicial interpretation arises there may be no occasion for any kind of dispute, doubt or controversy. As one of the objects of the Code was to make the law clear not merely to the lawyers but to the ordinary citizens and as it is a suggestion which came from such a weighty authority as the Patna High Court and the Bombay High Court Bar, we thought it desirable to introduce these two things, namely no obligation to pay debts on the original ground of pious obligation and the liability to pay primary debts which belong to the family. Besides that there has been no change at all. If my friends have some doubt still on the subject that we have made fundamental changes in regard to the joint family of the Mitakshara, I would like to draw their attention to section 86 (Part V: Joint Family Property). Section 86 of the new Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee is the same word for word, except for ordinary verbal changes, as part III-A section 2, on page 12 of the original Bill as drafted by the Rau Committee. Similarly section 87 which also deals with joint property is word for word the same as part III-A, section 2, page 12. Anybody who compares the two I am sure will accept the proposition which I have enunciated in this House that this is not an innovation by the Select Committee at all but they form part and parcel of the original Bill as drafted by the Rau Committee.

I should like to dispel any further doubt that may exist on this point by referring to the Rau Committee's Report (page 13). This is what the Rau Committee says (paragraph 51):

"Turning now to the contents of the Draft Code the main proposals on which differences of opinion have manifested themselves in varying degree are the following:

- (1) the abolition of the right by birth and the principle of survivorship and the substitution of the Dayabhaga for Mitakshara in the Mitakshara Provinces;
- (2) giving of half a share to the daughter;
- (3) the conversion of the Hindu woman's limited estate into an absolute estate;
- (4) the introduction of monogamy as a rule of law;
- (5) the introduction of certain provisions for divorce".

I think honourable Members will see that the Rau Committee in setting about its work made it perfectly known to everybody in this country that the Code that they had framed and which subsequently was embodied by them did contain the specific provision. I have no doubt about it that anybody who has read the volumes of evidence which have been collected by them previously by the Joint Select Committee appointed by this House, by the Rau Committee and by this Government by an executive order—would find that there is no person either in this House or outside, who has paid any attention to this part of the Code, who will be under any wrong impression that the Rau Committee had decided or proposed that this co-parcenary should not be abolished. It is therefore not a new innovation of the Select Committee at all.

The Select Committee has made some changes with regard to the application of the Hindu Code. The Rau Committee's Bill contained a provision that the Bill should not extend to areas to which the Marumakkattayam and Aliyasanthanam laws apply. Somehow the Select Committee in its enthusiasm transgressed, if I may say so without any disrespect, the bounds of reasonableness and came to the conclusion that there ought to be no area which ought to be exempt from the operation of this Code. Consequently they deleted the provision.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In the interests of uniformity.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I do not know whether it was done rightly or wrongly; that is a matter which the House will consider at a later stage.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): May I ask whether the honourable speaker was dissenting from that view?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I will dissent at a later stage perhaps. I have no empty mind but I have still an open mind.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Not a vacant mind!

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: On every question I hope.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, in the ordinary course a speech of the sort which I have made is generally regarded not only appropriate but sufficient for the occasion. But it would be futile on my part to disguise the fact that there is a section—if not a large section, a section in the House—which feels a certain amount of compunction over certain parts of the Bill. Neither can I disguise from myself the fact that outside the House there are many people who are not only interested in the Bill but, if I may say so, very deeply concerned about it. I therefore think that it is only right, if you will permit me, to add a few general observations with regard to the points of controversy which I have noticed in several newspapers which I have been perusing ever since the Bill has been on the anvil. I will take this matter also part by part and section by section. I will deal only with what I regard have been considered as points of controversy. Let me take marriage and divorce. Here I find that there are three points of controversy. The first point of controversy is abolition of castes as a necessary requirement for a valid marriage; the second point of controversy is the prescription of monogamy; and the third point of controversy is permission for divorce.

I will take the first point of controversy, namely—abolition of caste restrictions. So far as this Bill is concerned, what it does is to arrive at a sort of compromise between the new and the old. The Bill says that if any member of a Hindu community wants to follow the orthodox system which requires that a marriage shall not be valid unless the bride and bridegroom belong to the same varna, the same caste or the same sub-caste, there is nothing in this Code which can prevent him from giving effect to his wishes or giving effect to what he regards as his dharma. In the same way if one Hindu who is a reformist and who does not believe in varna, caste or sub-caste, chooses to marry a girl outside his varna, outside his caste, outside his sub-caste, the law regards his marriage also as valid. So far as the marriage law is concerned there is therefore no kind of imposition at all. The vydhikas, the orthodox, are left free to do what they think is right according to their dharma. The reformers who do not follow dharma but who follow reason, who follow conscience, have also been left to follow their reason and their conscience.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): Are they permitted to marry outside their religion also if their conscience directs them in that manner?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Well, we will have another Bill for that. I do not know whether my honourable friend Mr. Tyagi is unmarried. If he is I will hurry it up.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I want to make way for others.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Consequently, what will happen in Hindu society so far as marriage law is concerned if there will be a competition between the old and the new. And we hope that those who are following the new path will win subsequently. But, as I say, if they do not, we are quite content to allow two parallel systems of marriage to be operative in this country and anyone may make his choice. There is no violation of a shastra, no violation of a smriti at all.

With regard to monogamy it may be that it is a new innovation. But I must point out that I do not think that any Member in this House will be able to point out having regard to customary law or having regard to our shastras that a Hindu husband had at all times an unfettered, unqualified right to polygamy. That was never the case. Even today, in certain parts of South India there are people who follow this, a section of the Nattukottai Chettiyars—the case has been reported in the Reports of the Privy Council itself, I am not depending on mere hearsay evidence—but among the Nattukottai Chettiyars there is a custom that a husband cannot marry a second wife unless he obtains the consent of his wife. Secondly, when a consent is obtained, he must allot to her certain property which I think in the Tamil language is called moppu. That property becomes her absolute property so that if after her consent the husband marries and ill-treats her, she has a certain amount of economic competence in her own hands to lead an independent life. I cite that as an illustration to show that there has not been an unqualified right for polygamy.

A second illustration which I would like to give would be from the Arthashastra of Kautilya. I do not know how many Members of the House have perused that book, I suppose many of them have. If they have, they will realise that the right to marry a second wife has been considerably limited by Kautilya. In the first place, no man can marry for the first ten or twelve years because he must be satisfied that the woman is not capable of producing children. That was one limitation. The second limitation imposed by Kautilya on the right of second marriage was that the husband was to return to the woman all the stridhan that she had acquired at the time of marriage. It is only under these two conditions that Kautilya's Arthashastra permitted a Hindu husband to marry a second time.

Thirdly, in our own country, in the legislation that has been passed in various Provinces, monogamy has been prescribed. For instance in the marumak kathayam and the aliyasanthanam law both of them prescribe monogamy as a rule of marital life. Similarly, with regard to the recent legislation that has been passed in Bombay or in Madras, similarly in Baroda, the law is the law of monogamy.

I hope the House will see from the instances I have given that we are not making any very radical or revolutionary change. We have precedent for what we are doing, both in the laws that have been passed by various States in India, also in the ancient shastras such as Kautilya's Arthashastra. If I may go further, we have got the precedent of the whole world which recognises monogamy as the most salutary principle so far as marital relations are concerned.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): What about the Mohammadan law?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: We shall come to Mohammadan law when we discuss the Mohammadan law.

Coming to the question of divorce, there again I should like to submit to the House that this is in no way an innovation. Everybody in this House knows that communities which are called shudra have customary divorce and what is the total of what we call shudra? Nobody has ever probably made any calculation as to the total number of shudras who go to compose the Hindu society, but I have not the slightest doubt in my mind that the shudras form practically 90 per cent of the total population of the Hindus. What are called the 'regenerated' classes probably do not fill more than ten per cent of the total population of this country, and the question that I want to ask of honourable Members is this: are you going to have the law of the 90 per cent of the people as the general law of this country, or are you going to have the law of the 10 per cent of the people being imposed upon the 90 per cent? That is a simple question which every Member must answer and can answer.

So far as the 'regenerated' classes are concerned there was a time, if one refers for instance to the time when the Narada smriti or the Parashara smriti were written, when the smritis recognised that a woman can divorce her husband when he has abandoned her, when he died, when he has taken parivrija, and she was entitled to have a second husband. Consequently, it may be that at a later stage I shall read to you some extracts from your shastras to show. (An honourable Member: "Your shastras") Yes, because I belong to the other caste.

I shall read the extracts to show that what has happened in this country is that somehow, unfortunately, unnoticed, unconsciously, custom has been allowed to trample upon the text of the shastras which were all in favour of the right sort of marital relations. My submission, therefore, to the House is that so far as any new principles have been introduced in the law of marriage or divorce, whatever has been done is both just and reasonable and supported by precedent not only of our shastras but the experience of the world as a whole.

With regard to adoption, there are again three points of controversy. One point of controversy with regard to adoption is this, that like the old Hindu law we do not make similarity or identity of caste a requisite for a valid adoption. We follow the same rule that we have followed with regard to marriage. Here again, I may say that if a Brahmin wants to adopt a Brahmin boy, he is free to do so. If a Kayasth wants to adopt a Kayasth boy, he is free to do so. If a Shudra wants to adopt a boy of his own community he is free to do so. If a Brahmin is so enlightened as not to adopt a boy belonging to his own community but adopts a Shudra he is also permitted to do so. There is therefore no kind of imposition.

Seth Govind Das (C. P. and Berar: General): Why do you consider such a Brahmin enlightened?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Well, I do not know. From my point of view certainly he is enlightened; from your point of view he may be a very dark man, but that is a difference of opinion.

With regard to the question of the limitation on the right of an adopted son to challenge all alienations made by the widow before adoption, I do not think that there can be any controversy at all. There is no reason why we should continue the notion that a boy when adopted becomes the son of the adopted father right from the time when the adopted father died. This is a pure fiction. It has no value at all. It is not merely a fiction; it is a fiction which gives rise to tremendous litigation and tremendous difficulties. It is therefore right that the adoption should be simultaneous with the vesting of the property. I do not think any member of the House will think that this is a proposition which we ought not to accept at this stage. (Shri B. Das: "We all accept".)

Similarly, as I have stated, the limitation upon the right of a boy who is adopted to divest the mother completely and to make her nothing more than a dependant waiting for such maintenance as the adopted boy may give, I do not think that there is any member of the House who will think that such a situation can be justified on any ground whatsoever. I think it is right that we preserve the right of adoption which the orthodox community cherishes so much, but, Sir, I do not understand why there should be adoption. Most of us who make adoptions have no name to be recorded in history. Personally, I myself certainly would not like my name to go down in history, because my record is probably very poor. I am an unusual member of the Hindu community. But there are many who have no records to go down and I do not understand why they should indulge in adopting a son—a stupid boy, uneducated, without any character—not knowing his possibilities and fastening him and fathering him upon a poor woman, whom he can deprive of every property that she possessed. Therefore, my submission is this, that if you do want to cherish your old notions with regard to adoption, at any rate make this provision that the adopted boy does not altogether deprive the mother of the property which is her mainstay. I do not think that that limitation can be at all a point of controversy.

With regard to the question of the abolition of customary adoption, I would like to say two things. There is a general argument which the House will be able to appreciate. It is this. A Code is inconsistent with customary law. That is a fundamental proposition. If you allow a Code to remain and at the same time permit custom to grow and custom to plead against the Code, there is no purpose in having a Code at all, because a custom can always eat into the Code and make the Code null and void. With regard to this particular matter of customary adoption such as Krithrim adoption, Godha adoption and Dwaimushayan adoption, my submission is this, that these are really not adoptions at all. As the Privy Council in one of its rulings has definitely stated, adoption is purely a religious affair. The getting of property by the adopted son is a secondary matter. He may get property; he may not get property, and even though he may not get property his adoption from a religious point of view may be valid. Therefore, my submission is this, that all these customary adoptions are nothing else but devices to keep property within the two families which enter into this bargain, and in my judgment, since we have passed the Constitution and included in the Directive Principles one article saying that the State should take steps not to allow property being concentrated in the hands of one or a few, such devices like the Dwaimushayan where two parties merely agree to share the property and keep it with them ought not to be tolerated. Besides, there is no reason why parties who want to make a genuine adoption should not conform to the rules and regulations regarding the Dattaka adoption which is permitted by the law.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is now one o'clock. The Honourable Minister may continue after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I want now to take up the points of controversy relating to the topic of co-parcenary law. The question is raised: Why does the Bill wish to seek to abolish the co-parcenary which is prescribed by what is called the Mithakshara law? Now, Sir, having applied my mind in the best way I can for the proper exposition of this subject, I think this is a question which required to be considered from three different points of view. One is how large a volume of property is included within the ambit of what is called co-parcenary property. If the volume that is comprised within what is called co-parcenary property is a very large part of the property which a man in these days holds, then no doubt some serious attention will have to be paid to this question. Therefore, that is the first aspect of the question that one has to examine.

The second aspect that we have to consider with regard to the retention of what is called co-parcenary property is whether any co-parcener had individually the right to alienate property. Thirdly, whether any co-parcener has a right in himself to break up the co-parcenary. Obviously, if the property included within the class of property called co-parcenary property is a small part of the property, different questions will arise. Similarly, if any co-parcener, under the present existing Hindu law, has already got the right to alienate his share in the property, then obviously, the question whether this law or this Bill is abrogating co-parcenary property would stand on a different footing. Similarly, if under the existing Hindu law a co-parcener has an inherent right to break up a co-parcenary, then my submission is that the question that this Bill breaks up the co-parcenary becomes very much less momentous than is thought of by most Members of the House as well as people outside.

Let me therefore take the first question: What is the extent of the non-co-parcenary property which a co-parcener may hold, notwithstanding the fact that he is a member of the co-parcenary? Now, my friends, who have paid attention to this subject and know what the position is under the Hindu law, will know that there is no disqualification upon a co-parcener to hold separate property while he continues to be a co-parcener. A co-parcener may have capacity to hold two different sorts of property—property which belongs to the co-parcenary and property which does not belong to the co-parcenary, but belongs to himself and does not go by what is called survivorship.

Let me give the House some idea of the extent and nature of the property which a co-parcener can hold, although he is a co-parcener. I have taken from the existing text books on the Hindu law, the following categories of property which a co-parcener can hold, notwithstanding the fact that he is a co-parcener. Firstly, property inherited by a Hindu from a person other than his father, grand-father and great grand-father. If a Hindu gets property from a person who is not his father, grand-father or great grand-father, that property is in his hand and is separate property and does not belong to the co-parcenary. Secondly, property inherited by him from his maternal grand father, thirdly gift of ancestral moveables made to him by his father and fourthly property granted by Government to an individual who is a member of the co-parcenary becomes his personal property and not the property of the co-parcenary. Then fifthly we have ancestral property lost to the family and recovered without the aid of the family property. That also, although originally co-parcenary property, becomes his private property. Then sixthly, there is the income from separate property and purchases made from the income of such property. They are also private property. 7, share of a co-parcener by partition if he has no male issue. 8, property held by a sole surviving co-parcener when there is no widow with the power to adopt. 9, separate earning of a member of a joint family co-parcenary and 10 gains of learning. Such vast amount of property included in these 10 categories is today under the Mitakshara law the private property of a co-parcener. It does not become the property of the co-parcenary.

Let me illustrate this by one plain illustration. There are hundreds and hundreds of clerks in our Secretariat, some drawing small salaries, some drawing huge salaries, more than the salaries of the Members of the Cabinet—Rs. 4,000. (Honourable Members: "Clerks? Are they clerks?") I mean officers. In a certain sense they are glorified clerks.

The point I want to put to the House is this: that such large income as gains of learning, which come up in individual cases to Rs. 4,000, if there was a joint family in the true sense of the word, ought to go to the joint family for the joint maintenance of that family. What happens? Under the Gains of Learning Act passed only a few years ago, this very Assembly not I mean the Members, passed a law that such gains of learning, which form, as I say, the principal part of the income of a joint family and which a member is enabled to earn by reason of the education that was given to him out of the family income, have now been made his personal and private income. My submission to the House is this: when so large a property, as I have mentioned, included in these ten different categories have already been made a modification of the original laws of Mitakshara private property, what is the balance of property that is left which can be said to comprise the co-parcenary property? My submission is that really very, very small volume of property is left to comprise within what is called the co-parcenary. Let me take the other question. It is said that the co-parcenary—I hope Members understand that co-parcenary is something very narrow and very limited and it is not the same thing as a joint family, which is quite a different matter—system enables the Hindus to conserve the property, to retain it, that there can be no break-up, there can be no squandering of money so to say on the part of any member of the family. A question that I want to put to the House is this: Is it true under the existing law of the Mitakshara that this property cannot be alienated, cannot be squandered? The answer is completely in the negative. Let me give you one or two illustrations. I am taking the case of the father. The father can alienate joint property for antecedent debt. All that the father has to do is to first of all create a debt, say one thousand or two thousand rupees on a personal promissory note. Subsequently, after six months he becomes entitled to sell the whole of the co-parcenary property, if that becomes necessary for the purpose of meeting that antecedent debt. Now, a submission that I want to make to the House is this: Does the lodgment of such enormous power in the hands of a father to sell the property for purely antecedent and personal debts? I want the House to bear in mind that the Mitakshara law makes a distinction between the father and the manager so far as the alienation of property is concerned. True a manager cannot alienate a property belonging to the co-parcenary unless and until it is proved that there is a family necessity for which alienation is necessary. But with regard to the father, there is no such obligation at all. A father can create a debt personally for himself and he becomes entitled to alienate that property for a purely personal debt which has not been incurred for the purposes of the family. The only limitation that is imposed upon the right of the alienation of the father under the Mitakshara law is that the debt must not be impious, must not be for an immoral purpose and if it is not immoral, then the father can alienate the whole of the property of the co-parcenary. There is no limit at all.

Similarly, take the case of the son. It is also under the Mitakshara law within the competence of a son to demand the partition of the family property at any time he likes. I could have well understood the argument for the conservation of the co-parcenary property if the rule of Hindu Law was that no co-parcener was entitled to alienate the property, that the property must remain the property of the co-parcenary, but that is not the case. The root of dissolution, the root of destruction of the co-parcenary property is in the co-parcenary itself, because it is the co-parcenary law that gives a vested right, a right from the very birth to demand partition of the property and disrupt the whole of the society.

Thirdly, even if a son does not alienate his property, he can create a debt on the property for his own personal purposes and the creditor who has advanced that money under Mitakshara law has a perfect right to sue for the partition of the co-parcenary in order to recover his debt. A stranger, therefore, under the Mitakshara law has a right to break up the co-parcener. I would like to ask my honourable friends, who are worried about this matter, where a large part of the estate, of the assets lies outside the co-parcenary property and so far as the co-parcenary property is concerned, the father has a right to alienate without any kind of limitation except the immorality of the debt, the son has a right to break up the property at any time he likes and the son has a right to create a charge on the property enabling the creditor to sue for partition, is it something which might be called a solid system, which is fool-proof and knave-proof? My submission is this, that the co-parcenary property law as it stands, contains within itself the elements of disruption. Therefore, the Bill is doing nothing very radical in saying that the share shall be held separately. As we all know to-day the condition is such that everybody wants to live separately. The moment a father dies, the sons claim that there shall be partition and that they shall live apart and what the Bill is doing is to give a legal recognition to facts, as they exist to-day. There is nothing that is radical at all in this part of the Bill.

[Dr. B. R. Ambedkar]

Of course, I should say one thing which I think is generally not realized. I started by saying that a distinction has to be made between co-parcenary and joint family. This Bill while it does away with co-parcenary, maintains the joint family. It does not come in the way of the joint family being maintained. The only thing is that the joint family in the Mitakshara law will be on the same footing and of the same character as the joint family under the Dayabhaga law. It must not be supposed that because the Mitakshara law does not prevail in Bengal that there is no joint family. There is a joint family. The only distinction will be that the members of the joint family instead of holding their rights as joint tenants, will hold them as tenants in common. That will be the only distinction that will be between the existing law in the Mitakshara and the future law in the Mitakshara.

Now, I come to woman's property. I do not know how many members of this House are familiar with the intricacies of this subject. So far as I have been able to study this subject, I do not think that there is any subject in the Hindu Law which is so complicated, so intricate as the women's property. (An honourable Member: "As the woman herself"): As the woman herself. If you ask the question, what is stridhan, before answering that question, you have to ask another question and find an answer for it. You must first of all ask, 'is she a maiden' or 'is she a married woman'. Because what property is stridhan and what property is not stridhan depends upon the status of the woman. Certain property is stridhanam if she has obtained it while she is a maiden; certain property is not stridhan if she has obtained it after marriage. Consequently, if you ask the question what is the line of inheritance to the stridhan, you have again to ask the question whether the stridhan belongs to a maiden or the stridhan belongs to a married woman. Because, the line of succession to the stridhan of a maiden is quite different from the line of succession to the stridhan belonging to a married woman. When you come to the question of succession to married women's property, you have again to ask the question, does she belong to the Bengal School or does she belong to the Mitakshara School. If you ask the question whether she belongs to the Mitakshara school, you will never be able to find a definite answer unless you probe further and ask whether she belongs to the Mithila School or the Benares School or some other School. This is a most complicated subject. At the same time, I should like honourable members to bear two things in mind. One is this: so far as women's property is concerned, generally speaking, it falls into two categories. One category is called her stridhan and the other is called widow's property. The latter property is property which she inherits from a male member of her family, and according to the existing law property which she owns only during her life time and subsequently that property passes to the reversioners of the male heir. That is the position.

Therefore, so far as women's property is concerned, we have two different sorts of inheritance and two different sets of property, stridhan property and widow's property. The heirs to stridhan property are quite different and distinct from the heirs to the property she inherits from a male member. The question, therefore, we have to consider in codifying this particular branch of the Hindu Law is this. Are you going to maintain the two principal divisions which exist at present, namely, stridhan property and widow's property? Secondly, are you going to maintain the double line of succession, one line of succession for the stridhan property and another line of succession for widow's property? These are the two principal questions which arise when one begins to codify this law. The Committee came to the conclusion that so far as codification was concerned, its purpose would be defeated if we allow the present chaos to continue. We must either decide that a woman will not be entitled to have absolute property or we must decide that a woman should have absolute property. We must also decide what should be the line of heirs for a woman; whether they should be uniform or they should be different. The Committee came to the conclusion that so far as right to property is concerned, there should be uniformity and uniformity should recognise that the woman has absolute property.

I know a great deal of the argument that is always urged against women getting absolute property. It is said that women are imbecile; it is said that they are always subject to the influence of all sorts of people and consequently, it would be very dangerous to leave women in the world subject to the influences of all sorts of wily men who may influence them in one way or another to dispose of property both to the detriment of themselves as well as to the detriment of the family from which they have inherited the family property. The view that the Committee has taken is a very simple one. In certain matters or certain kinds of property which is called stridhan property the Smritis are prepared to invest women with absolute right. There can be no question at all that a woman has an absolute right over her stridhan property. She can dispose it of in any way she likes. My submission to the House is this. If the woman can be trusted to dispose of her stridhanam property in the best way she likes, and nobody has ever raised an argument for the obliteration of that rule of Mitakshara, the burden of proof lies upon the opponents who say that the other part of the property, namely, widow's estate, which the woman has inherited, should not become her absolute property. It is they who must prove that while the women are competent to dispose of a certain part of the property which they possess, they are not competent to dispose of a certain other part. The Committee, on a very careful examination, failed to find a satisfactory solution of this dilemma. The Committee, in my judgment, very rightly, came to the conclusion that if in certain cases women were competent and intelligent to sell and dispose of their property, they must be held to be competent in respect of the disposal of the other property also. That is the reason why the Committee have made this rule that women should now possess absolute property.

The other question that arises on this issue, namely women's property, is the share of the daughter. I know it would be a very great under-statement to say that this is a ticklish question; it is a very anxious question. There are many people in this world, in India today, both orthodox and unorthodox who cannot help producing daughters; they do. I do not know what would happen to this world if daughters were not born. At the same time, they do not want to extend to the daughter the same love and affection which a parent is bound to extend both to the male and female issue. But, I am not going to use any such high level of argument in favour of the proposition which has been enunciated by the Select Committee; I am going to speak on a much lower tone. The first thing that I would like to address myself to this House is this. The inclusion of the daughter among the heirs is not an innovation which is made by this Committee. Honourable members who are familiar with the law of inheritance as it prevails both under the Mitakshara and Dayabhaga, I am sure, will admit that the daughter is included by both of them under what is called the compact series. As members will know, Hindu heirs are divided into several categories. The first category, is called, compact series. After that, there is a series of heirs spoken of as Sapindas, then comes samanodakas. After that comes the bandhus. Bandhus are divided into three categories: Atma bandhus, Pitru bandhus and Matru bandhus. The compact series is really a special class of heirs which does not conform strictly to the basic principles of heirship surrounded round gotraja, samanodaka and bandhus, because it is a mixed category. It is a category which is based on double foundation. It is based on propinquity; it is also based on religious efficacy. They do not conform to any of the criteria which have been laid down for determining the categories of sapindas, samanodakas and bandhus.

If you take both the laws, the Mitakshara as well as the Dayabhaga, you will see that the daughter is included within the category known as compact series. The only distinction between the Mitakshara and the Dayabhaga is this. According to the Dayabhaga the necessary element in heirship is the capacity to offer oblation. Consequently the Dayabhaga makes a rule between a daughter who is unmarried, a daughter who is married, a daughter who is married but has a son, and a daughter who is a widow. They give preference to a daughter who is married and has a son. Next to that they give preference to a daughter who is married. The unmarried daughter comes third. But it is within that category, the reason being that a daughter who is married and has a son, is ready there to offer oblation, because her son can offer oblation. A daughter who is unmarried, has no son, and therefore his possibility of offering an oblation does not exist. That is why she has been kept down. But the point I want to emphasize, and which I want the House to bear in mind is that there is no innovation as such in the inclusion of the daughter in the category of compact series. She has always been there both according to the Mitakshara and according to the Dayabhaga. The only innovation which the Bill seeks to make is to raise the status of the daughter. Under the Bill she becomes simultaneous heir, along with the son the widow, the widow of the predeceased son, son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son, widow of a predeceased son of a predeceased son.

The point is this that originally, and particularly according to the Mitakshara Law, no female was entitled to any kind of share at all. This law was changed in the year 1937 whereby the widow of the deceased, the widow of the predeceased son and of his grandson and great-grandson—they were all made simultaneous heirs along with the son. The only omission that was made was in respect of the daughter. The Government at that time was not prepared to lend its support to put the daughter on the same level as the widow and the widows of the predeceased son and the predeceased son's son. This is therefore the only innovation that the Bill makes. It merely raises it up in the order of heirs. It is not that for the first time she has been made an heir.

Now I come to the question of her share. As the Rau Committee has pointed out, and as many of the witnesses who know the Shastras have pointed out, that it is impossible to deny the fact that the daughter according to the Smritis was a simultaneous heir along with the son and that she was entitled to one-fourth share of her father's property. That has been accepted as a text from the Yagnavalkya and also from Manu. I once counted 137 Smritis and I do not know why our ancient Brahmins were so occupied in writing Smritis and why they did not spend their time doing something else it is impossible to say, assuming that that occupation was a paramount occupation of the day. There is no doubt about it that the two Smritikars whom I have mentioned—Yagnavalkya and Manu, rank the highest among the 137 who had tried their hands in framing Smritis. Both of them have stated that the daughter is entitled to one-fourth share. It is a pity that somehow for some reason custom has destroyed the efficacy of that text: otherwise, the daughter would have been, on the basis of our own Smritis, entitled to get one-fourth share. I am very sorry for the ruling which the Privy Council gave. It blocked the way for the improvement of our law. The Privy Council in an earlier case said that custom will override law, with the result that it became quite impossible to our Judiciary to examine our ancient codes and to find out what laws were laid down by our Rishis and by our Smritikars. I have not the least doubt about it that if the Privy Council had not given that decision, that custom will override text, some lawyer, some Judge would have found it quite possible to unearth this text of Yagnavalkya and Munismriti, and women to-day would have been enjoying, if not more, at least one-fourth of the share of their property.

The original Bill had raised the share of the daughter to one-half. My Select Committee went a step further and made her share full and equal to that of the son.

I am not entitled to disclose what happened at the Select Committee and how this provision came to be made. I am perfectly...

Shrimati Renuka Ray (West Bengal: General): Unanimously!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Was it a compromise between twice the share of a son claimed and half the share provided in the Bill?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It was not a compromise. My enemies combined with my enthusiastic supporters and my enemies thought that they might damn the Bill by making it appear worse than it was.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Have you any enemies.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: However, this is the position, namely, so far as the daughter's share is concerned, the only innovation that we are making is that her share is increased and that we bring her in the line with the son or the widow. That also, as I say, would not be an innovation if you accept my view that in doing this we are merely going back to the text of the Smritis which you all respect.

I might also say that in discussing this question about the share of the daughter, myself, and the members of the Law Department examined every system of inheritance. We examined the Muslim system of inheritance: We examined the Parsi system of inheritance: We examined also the Indian Succession Act and the line of succession that had been laid down and we also examined the British system of inheritance, and nowhere could we find any case where a daughter was excluded from a share. There is no system anywhere in the world where a daughter has been excluded.

Now, Sir, one question has been brought forth constantly—that the giving of the share to the daughter means disruption of the family. I must frankly confess that I cannot appreciate the force of that argument. If a man has twelve sons and one daughter, and if the twelve sons on the day of the death of the father immediately decide on partition and obtain a twelfth of the total property of the father, is the partition going to be much more worse if there was a daughter, the thirteenth, who also demanded a share?

Twelve shares or 12 fragments is not a better situation than 13 fragments. If you want to prevent fragmentation we shall have to do something else, not by the law of inheritance but by some other law, whereby property shall not be fragmented so as to become less useful from a national point of view for purposes of national production.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): Is the Hindu Code applied to agricultural land?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It is not. I am saying generally.

I think I have, so far as I know, exhausted what I have to say on the various points of controversy which I had seen raised both by members of this House as well as by the members of the public. I hope that the clarification which I have given on the various points will allay the fears of members who are not well disposed towards this measure. They will realise that this is in no sense a revolutionary measure. I say that this is not even a radical measure and I should like to draw the attention of the members of this House to one important fact, namely the constitution and composition of the Rau Committee. There were four members of that committee but I should like to point out that two of them who have signed the report are far from radical members of the Hindu community. My friend Mr. Gharpure, whom I have known for a long number of years, is one of the most conservative members I know.....

Shri H. V. Kamath: Politically or Socially?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Politically and socially also. In fact I have no hesitation in saying that he may on certain occasions find it very difficult to touch me even with a barge pole. He is so conservative. My friend Mr. T. R. Venkatarama Sastri is no doubt a liberal but he is certainly not a radical so far as I know. If these people conservative in their attitude have signed the report I think we can take it for granted that the measure to which they have put their signature could not be revolutionary and certainly could not be destructive of the foundations of the Hindu Society. So far as I am concerned I am a very conservative person: Although some people may not accept that fact, I am indeed very conservative. All I say is that I am a progressive conservative and I should like to tell the House one important fact which I think every one of us must bear in mind, particularly the conservative members of this House. The great political philosopher Edmund Burke who wrote a big book against the French Revolution because of its radicalism and revolutionism did not forget to tell his own countrymen who were very conservative one very important truth. He said that those who want to conserve must be ready to repair and all I am asking of this House is this: that if you want to maintain the Hindu system, the Hindu culture, the Hindu society, do not hesitate to repair where repair is necessary. This Bill asks for nothing more than repairing those parts of the Hindu system which are almost become dilapidated.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, on a point of reminder, the Honourable Dr. Ambedkar promised some citations from the Smritis. Will he keep his promise?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I shall do so at the end. Fortunately for me I have secured a copy of Mr. Dwarkanath Mitter's own book "Rights of Hindu Women". I was going to cite certain texts which show that the rights which the Vedas had given to women were taken by the Smritis in the meantime and some other smritis tried to restore those rights. I shall cite them in the course of my speech.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: Could the Honourable Minister enlighten the House as to the evidence which was produced before the Select Committee?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: As honourable Members know two bodies came to us and asked for evidence to be taken. The Committee decided that their evidence be taken. One body came and one body sent in a written reply. That body was the Dharma Nirṇaya Mandal. In general they are absolutely in agreement with the provisions contained in the Bill. The other gentleman who came obviously was not.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion moved:

"That the Bill to amend and codify certain branches of the Hindu Law, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration".

Two amendments were not pressed. What about the next amendment?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I am not in a position to move any of my amendments.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: As I have already stated in answer to the suggestion made by the Honourable the Mover of the Bill I shall allow these motions to be made without any speeches at the time of moving the motion. After all the amendments are moved whichever are relevant and are admitted, there will be discussion on them as also on the original motion.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta: On a point of order, Sir, is it open to an honourable Member to say that he is not in a position to move his amendments?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I am directed.....

An Honourable Member: By whom?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am directed to move my amendment without a speech at the first instance. (An honourable Member: "Who has directed you?") I am directed by the Honourable Deputy Speaker. I find that honourable members are extremely impatient.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): No, we are not. Proceed.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I have been directed, I repeat, to move my amendment without a speech. On account of the eloquence of my honourable friend the Law Minister I was already speechless...

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: You are already disobeying your mandate.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: There are the bright ladies who have also created a profound impression upon me and just before I stood up Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, a very powerful member, said that he was not in a position to move.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is this preamble necessary for moving his amendment?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I was already rendered speechless and that is why I was expressing my gratitude for suggesting that I should not make any speech.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member will speak later.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move with considerable amount of nervousness:

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon by the end of 1949".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon by the end of 1949".

Shri B. Das: Sir, as this is a dilatory motion I suggest it may be ruled out of order.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: On a point of order; in the morning also there was some ruling about dilatory motions. I submit, Sir, that they are the privilege of a Member. Although I stand by Dr. Ambedkar in many respects with regard to this Bill, I submit that dilatory motions are the privilege of those Members who are not in power—of individual Members as well as parties. Let it not be tabooed. It is a democratic right of Members to delay business if they choose to do so. Therefore a motion should not be disallowed because it is considered to be dilatory. Dilatory motions are the privilege of a House of democracy.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not see any point of order in what Mr. Tyagi has said. He wants full discussion to be allowed on this. As regards the point raised by Mr. B. Das I am not able to understand it. Does he mean to say that under any of the Rules such a motion is not allowable? If so he Report is presented, the procedure is this. (An honourable Member: "What Rules are they?") The Rules that we adopted last session.

The Rule says:

"If the member in charge moves that the Bill be taken into consideration, any member may move as an amendment that the Bill be re-committed or be circulated or re-circulated for the purpose of obtaining opinion or further opinion thereon".

Therefore under the Rules this kind of motion is allowed. I want to know how I am expected to disallow this motion.

Shri B. Das: I am aware of that Rule. But I was guided by the ruling of this morning that no dilatory motions would be allowed. I therefore raised the point of order.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: May I be permitted to say something? I think the point raised by my friend Mr. B. Das is a perfectly correct point of order, because of this...

Honourable Members: No.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: When the Deputy Speaker has given a ruling it cannot be questioned.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Members will not speak all together. They will rise in their seats and also speak one at a time. Let me hear the Honourable the Law Member. I will allow an opportunity to every Member to speak on this point provided he is able to make a proper contribution to the debate. Nobody need be impatient.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, as you will recall the motions which are permissible under the Rules of Business fall into two categories: one set of motions are such that the Speaker must put them to the House; the other set of motions are such that the Speaker must first be satisfied that they are proper motions before he can put them to the House. Let me illustrate this by reference to a motion for adjournment. Under the Rules every honourable Member is permitted to move an adjournment motion. But merely because a certain member has tabled an adjournment motion that in itself does not authorise, enable, or empower the Speaker to put it to the House, because it is laid down that unless the motion is held to be admissible by the Speaker the motion shall not be put. I can give various other illustrations. With regard to a motion like this, namely, the adjournment of the consideration of the Bill and circulations for further opinion, my submission is that such a motion falls within that category of motions where the Speaker is required to be satisfied before he can put the motion to the House. It has been the universal practice in this House that any such motion for the postponement of the consideration of the Bill or for circulation, made after the Select Committee has made its Report, is prima facie dilatory. Unless the member who makes the motion advances substantial reasons for such a motion and the Speaker is satisfied that the reasons advanced are substantial such a motion will not be admissible. There are many rulings in these books but I should like to draw attention to ruling No. 1 in book No. 1. In regard to this motion no substantial reasons have been given.

An Honourable Member: But he has not spoken at all.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Let the Honourable the Law Member conclude.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I was only drawing your attention to a ruling (No.1) in this book. There are various others also. It says:

"During the discussion on the Cotton Excise Duty Abolition Resolution a motion was moved to adjourn the debate on the Resolution. (Which practically means sending it away for circulation or to leave it up.)

"The President while accepting the motion on this particular occasion without creating a precedent remarked:

"The Chair cannot allow a motion to adjourn consideration of a proposition to be moved merely in order to enable another item of business to come forward. It must be supported on substantial grounds."

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The ruling says it is not a precedent but you want to make a precedent of it.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: The President says 'I am ruling but I am not creating a precedent'.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: In this matter I would call your attention to page 81 of 'Decisions of the Chair' which says that there are certain motions which can be stated to be of a dilatory nature. The question of circulation is not certainly one of such nature. But there are motions of a dilatory nature and it is in the discretion and power of the Chair to allow them or not to allow them. One page 81 of this book in regard to re-committal of motions it has been held that though to start with, it may be regarded as a dilatory motion, if something happened in the Select Committee or some events have transpired since, the Chair is perfectly authorised to say that it is not a dilatory motion. Now the honourable Member has not been asked what the reasons are and before that my honourable friend gets up and says that it is a dilatory motion. It is absolutely wrong for him to suggest at the very outset that it is a dilatory motion. A circulation motion is not a dilatory motion. Unless the Speaker comes to the conclusion that nothing has transpired in the Select Committee or no further events have taken place which justify him to retard that motion I think the Speaker is not entitled to say that any of the motions are also dilatory. Ordinary motions countenanced by the rules cannot be regarded as dilatory motions.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I think matters can be cut short in a minute. The precedent relied upon by the Honourable the Minister of Law does not apply to this situation at all. The heading is, "Adjournment of Debate",...

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: This is an adjournment of debate, if the motion is carried.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: No, it is entirely different as I shall show. The sub-heading is, "Adjournment of Debate: Motion when allowed to be moved:". I do not move for an adjournment of this debate, which certainly could be done under amendment No. 2, that is:

"That the consideration of the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee be postponed."

My object is continuance of the debate, consideration of the motion, and I want the consideration to be taken along with my motion. A further reading of the ruling relied upon by Dr. Ambedkar will make it absolutely clear:

"During the discussion on the Cotton Excise Duty Abolition Resolution a motion was moved to adjourn the debate on the Resolution."

"The President while accepting the motion on this particular occasion without creating a precedent, remarked: The Chair cannot allow a motion to adjourn consideration of a proposition to be moved merely in order to enable another item of business to come forward. It must be supported on substantive grounds."

As I understand it, there was at the time one motion before the House and there was another perhaps more interesting or more important in advance. A Member proposed the adjournment of the discussion of a resolution which was under consideration so that another more interesting Motion may be taken up. It was the attempt to adjourn the first Motion that was said to be unacceptable. Here I do not propose adjournment of the debate.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It all comes to that.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Here we are concerned with the interpretation of Rule 52. The plain reading of this rule would show that the motion is in order. Without abrogating the rule it cannot be held that it is out of order.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U.P.: General): This Bill admittedly has created a great deal of feeling and it would be most undesirable to add to it by restraining the discussion in any way. I think the only way of making every section of the House feel that full opportunity was being given to it to express its opinion on this and to allow the discussion. Whatever our individual views regarding the merits of the Bill before us may be, that should be no ground for opposing the Motion of my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad.

Dr. Ambedkar quoted a ruling of the Chair in regard to a matter that is not on all fours with that under consideration now. In the first place the ruling was given in regard to a Resolution and not in regard to a Bill. In the second place, the rules lay down clearly that so far as a Bill is concerned a Motion may be made not merely that the Bill be circulated but that it may be re-circulated, not merely that it should be referred to a Select Committee but that it should be re-committed to it. The language is therefore absolutely clear. If, whenever a Motion is made for the re-committal or re-circulation of a Bill, it is opposed on the ground that it is a dilatory Motion, the clear rights, the rights most unequivocally given to Members by the Rules will be completely null and void. We may feel impatient that a Motion like that of Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad may be ruled out. We may be ready to turn it down, but that is no reason for not allowing it to be moved. In my humble opinion, it is most assuredly in order and we shall be doing a great injustice if in order to pass a law in which we are keenly interested we whittle down the rights of Members and try to interpret the Rules in a manner convenient to whatever may happen to be the majority at any particular time.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Sir, the only point is that under Rule 52(2) no doubt every Member has a right; but the important point is that it is subject to admissibility which is at the discretion of the Speaker. All that Dr. Ambedkar said was, that we have no doubt the right to ask interpellations, but that certainly does not mean that all interpellations should be put on the Agenda Paper; it is subject to admissibility. There being the discretion, all that you have got to decide now is, whether it is in the nature of a dilatory Motion. You may ask Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad to give his reasons. If you are satisfied that he has a good ground to move his Motion, then you have got the discretion to allow him to move it. Therefore, it is now for you, Sir, to ask him and be satisfied; and if you are satisfied that he has valid grounds, certainly he can move the motion. That is a point which Dr. Ambedkar raised. Every Member is entitled to speak and take his chance. All that you are concerned with, is a matter of procedure; the procedure being that a Motion is subject to admissibility, which is within your discretion. I may suggest that you may ask Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad to give his grounds and it is ultimately for you to decide whether it is in the nature of a dilatory motion, in which case you have to rule it out of order; but if you are satisfied about the grounds then you may allow the motion to be moved.

Mr. Tajamul Husain rose—

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Sir, I have something important to say.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On the point of order?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All right.

Mr. Tajamul Husain (Bihar: Muslim): Sir, I caught your eye first. I have also got a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: After this point of order is disposed of Mr. Tajamul Husain's point of order will be considered.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Sir, you have already quoted the rule. I am sure no ruling can be given by any President against a Rule. The thing is this: there may be a subject under discussion in the House on which opinions may be divided—it is quite natural. One section of the people may look upon the subject as a boon, and the other section may look upon the subject as a danger, as a plague, as a curse. That section of the people who look upon the subject as a curse has the right not only to delay the Motion, but even to kill it. Here also, I think this section has the right to move the Motion and I think justice demands that they may have all the privileges and all the rights.

Mr. Tajamul Husain rose—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is another point of order which the honourable Member is raising, I will come to it next.

I am afraid the honourable Member Mr. Naziruddin has himself invited all these points of order because he started one this morning. Apart from any technicalities we may ask Mr. Naziruddin what his purpose is and what important points he has in view in making his motion for circulation.

848

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [24TH FEB. 1949]

[Mr. Deputy Speaker]

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I think this question.....

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: May I ask you, before Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad replies, whether you have come to the conclusion that the right of the member to move the re-circulation of the Bill is subject to the discretionary power of the Chair?

Honourable Member rose—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, order. Members must respect the Chair. When I stand up, they will kindly sit down. I think I have heard sufficiently. Is it not open to the Chair to ask for reasons? It does not mean that I have come to a conclusion one way or the other. I am trying to make up my mind. I have heard Mr. Bharathi's point. Apart from the question as to whether the Chair, under the rules, has got the right to allow or disallow, I want to know on what grounds—if there are any—this motion should be accepted. After hearing that, I shall give my ruling.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: My reply to that is two-fold. The first is the admissibility of the motion as a matter of law, and secondly as to the reasons for the motion, they are matters of merit. At present, I have been asked by the Chair not to make a speech and I have been entirely prevented from giving the arguments on the merits as to why this motion should be accepted. I submit a distinction should be made between the legality and admissibility of the motion and the grounds on which it is based for the acceptance of the same by the House. I submit that at this stage, in order to admit the motion which I have made, I think, Sir, I may not say anything at all.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have heard sufficiently on this matter. So far as Mr. Das' point that this motion is one of a dilatory nature, I consider that this motion differs materially from the one referred to by the Honourable the Minister for Law. He quoted the rulings of the Chair and gave the instance of ruling No. 1 on the postponement or adjournment of the debate. When motions for postponement for which there are no particular rules of procedure are made, it is open to the Chair to treat them as dilatory motions and require to be satisfied on what substantial grounds an adjournment of the debate is necessary. So far as the present motion for circulation is concerned, it is one for which provision is made in Rule 52(2). The Honourable the Minister for Law referred to the analogy of adjournment motions, but regarding adjournment motions there are specific rules laid down here, giving power to the Speaker to come to a conclusion as to whether prima facie a motion is in order or not. I am referring to rule 36. The right to make adjournment motions depends upon certain conditions as in the case of questions. Unless a question comes under one or other categories provided for under the rules it is open to the Speaker to disallow it; similarly, with respect to adjournment motions also, there are six conditions which must be satisfied. There is provision also for asking for leave. First of all, it is open to the Chair, if it so chooses, to say that a motion is not in the public interest, it is old and so on. Secondly, even if he chooses to admit it, he must ask if the motion has the support of at least twenty-five members of the House; then leave is granted. In such cases special provisions have been made. This present motion for circulation does not fall in the same category as the others.

As regards ruling 120 on page 81, it refers to Select Committee motions. I do not find any ruling of the Chair till now, in either of these two books "Decisions of the Chair" in point stating that a motion for re-circulation is a dilatory motion. In these circumstances, I do not want to curtail the powers of the House. It does not mean, if I allow the motion, the House is obliged to accept it. Even if it is moved, the House may reject it after debate if it is not satisfied. Under these circumstances, inasmuch as the rulings are not clear on this point, I do not want to throttle this motion. The honourable Member may proceed. I have already said that honourable Members will first move the motions standing in their names and then there would be a debate on all the motions together. The next amendment stands in the name of Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava and Shri Jhunjunwala.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: The motion moved by my honourable friend Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad is substantially the same. Therefore, I would like to support his motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: He need not give his reasons for not presenting. What about Mr. Jhunjunwala?

Shri B. P. Jhunjunwala (Bihar: General): I join my friend Mr. Bhargava.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: So he does not press. Nos. 7 and 8, I have already said are out of order. The scope of the Bill is confined to the provinces and not to any acceding State.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: In regard to States which have entirely united themselves within the Indian Dominion, they stand on a different footing. The Eastern States have combined with the province of Orissa. They are now part of India. The Bill will apply to them.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I can understand it only this way,—whether they have become part of a province or not if they are parts of a province, the Bill will apply. It is not necessary that a copy of the Gazette should be sent to every village and every corner of the country. If the State has become a part of province, it takes all the rights and liabilities of the province. I do not see any reason why the Bill should be once again circulated. Therefore I rule amendment No. 7 is out of order. No. 8 is also out of order. No. 9, does Mr. Bhargava move?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I have already said that I do not propose to move

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Then the next amendment. Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I beg to move as an alternative to the one which I have already moved:

"That the Bill be re-committed to the same Select Committee, to which it was sent, for a further report thereon with reference to the original Bill which was referred to it on the 9th April, 1948."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Amendment moved:

"That the Bill be re-committed to the same Select Committee to which it was sent for a further report thereon with reference to the original Bill which was referred to it on the 9th April 1948."

Shrimati Renuka Ray: In view of the Speaker's ruling, it is out of order. It goes against the Speaker's ruling.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The re-circulation motion is before the House. Why should the House not consider this motion also after all?

Shrimati Renuka Ray: It goes against the Speaker's ruling of the other day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I ask the Lady Member how it goes against the Speaker's ruling?

Shrimati Renuka Ray: The Speaker ruled that the Bill is the same as committed to the Select Committee and therefore there cannot be a motion for recommitment to the Select Committee. There has been no substantial change in the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: There are many substantial changes as I shall show.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No speeches across the benches please. So far as the arguments advanced by the Lady Member are concerned, what I feel is this. The Speaker certainly said that the Bill considered by the Select Committee is not different from the one committed to it. But recommitment may be on various other grounds. Therefore, unless any objection is taken on other grounds.....

Shrimati Renuka Ray: The words "original Bill" are there.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Original Bill is the same as the other Bill. Therefore, he has said "original Bill". We will drop the word "original".

Shrimati Renuka Ray: I would humbly submit that the word "original" is there. Therefore, we cannot drop it now from the motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Speaker ruled that the Bill that came out of the Select Committee was the original Bill and therefore there is no harm in using the word "original". The objection taken was that the original Bill was not considered by the Select Committee. Hon'ble the Speaker ruled that it was the original Bill itself that was considered by the Select Committee. Therefore, the honourable Member has stated in his amendment that the original Bill be recommitment to the Select Committee. The argument advanced by the Lady Member is against her own objection. I find there is nothing wrong in this motion.

Shri R. K. Sishva: The Mover's intention is quite different. He does not consider this Bill as the original Bill and therefore he wants this to be sent to the same Select Committee.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Though the intention of the Mover is clear, I think my honourable friend Pandit Naziruddin Ahmad, in drafting the amendment has slightly over-reached himself. I would suggest to him that he may reconsider the whole matter and bring it up again sometime later.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not consider that the use of the word 'original' affects the position at all. On the other hand, the Speaker's ruling was that it was the original Bill that was referred to the Select Committee and that it was that Bill that came back in a modified form. I cannot accept that as an objection. There is no good, spending more time over this matter.

Amendment No. 13 may be moved.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava: My amendment is substantially the same as the one moved by Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad. I will speak in support of it and not move mine.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member will then have to take his turn after that of the Movers of the other amendments.

Amendment No. 14 is not moved.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I intend moving my next amendment if my amendment No. 10 is passed.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: I rise to a point of order. Amendment No. 15 goes against the Speaker's ruling.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Speaker's ruling does not cover this point. This House may not be satisfied with the re-arrangement made by the Select Committee. Therefore the original motion that it be referred to the Select Committee can stand. There is no point of order so far as this matter is concerned.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Then, Sir I move:

"That the Bill be re-committed to the Select Committee with instructions for report on the original Bill as presented to the House restoring the original arrangement of self-contained separate Parts and Chapters for enactment separately".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am afraid, I must disallow this amendment. As there can be no objection to the re-arrangement of Parts and Chapters, I rule this amendment out of order.

Shri B. Das: Sir, before the next amendment is moved, I want your ruling as to whether one Member can move five amendments?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Alternative amendments can be given notice of. The honourable Member has been sufficiently long in this House to know this.

In the next amendment of Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad, the only addition is of the words "31st December 1949". I do not think he need move amendment No. 16.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The Select Committee referred to there is a separate select committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think I can allow this amendment to be moved. The honourable Member must have given the names of the Members for the Select Committee at the time of giving notice of the motion.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I have divided it into two parts. First of all there is the idea of the Select Committee. If it is acceptable.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House cannot be asked to give its opinion first in a matter of this kind. As the honourable Member has not given the names of the Members for the select committee to the Chair earlier, his amendment is ruled out of order.

Discussion on the general motion may now be resumed. I call upon Seth Govind Das to speak now.

Seth Govind Das : Sabhapathiji.....

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: During general discussion the honourable Member who has moved an amendment has the first right to speak.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member will leave it to the Chair. The Chair knows the procedure.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I have been trying to raise a point of order for a long time. Sir, I shall be very brief. The honourable Member Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad who is very keen on punctuation, on commas and full stops etc. has given notice of this amendment that this Bill be circulated. This is absolutely out of order. The honourable Member should have worded his amendment thus: This Bill be re-circulated. That is my point of order. This is what the relevant rule says: 'any member may move as an amendment that the Bill as reported by the Select Committee be re-committed or re-circulated as the case may be for the purpose of obtaining opinion or further opinion thereon'. Therefore, the honourable Member who is very keen on commas and full stops etc. should have put the words "re-circulated for further opinion." My point of order, therefore, is that as the wording of this amendment is not according to the rules, it may be ruled out of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is true that the honourable Member who has tabled this motion, who is ordinarily careful with reference to punctuations has committed there error of not putting the word 're'. I ought not to decide it as a matter of form, but as one of substance and this motion for circulation comes after the report of the Select Committee has been received.

1 P.M. Therefore, it means under the circumstances only 're-circulation'. I have already given the ruling. The ruling will stand. The debate will be continued by Seth Govind Das.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, I want to bring to your notice that I have already given a motion for re-circulation and it is based on those two motions. I do not know, why it was omitted in the consolidated list. These two motions are dated the 21st August 1948. I do not wish to take further time of the House. I will read the motion so that it can be taken up for further discussion. The motion stands thus:

"That the Bill as reported by the Select Committee be re-circulated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Have honourable Members got copies of this notice? (An Honourable Member: "Yes, Sir") I will ask the honourable Member to read it out.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: The motion runs as follows:

"That the Bill as reported by the Select Committee be re-circulated for the purpose of obtaining further opinion thereon".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When was this notice of amendment given?

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Notice was given on 1st August 1948. The amendment forms part of Supplementary List No. 2.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion was made on the 1st August and the 12th of August is the date of the Select Committee's report and possibly a week later it was presented to the House.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: The motion was made on 31st of August.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion need not be made. It is after the presentation of the report. But all notices laps after the session is over. A fresh notice should have been given. I do not know if honourable Members have got copies of this.

Shri Jaspat Roy Kapoor: I have got a copy of this. It is a consolidated list: Notice of Amendments... This was sent from the office on the 28th August 1948. There are twenty-four amendments mentioned in this list and Mr. Sarwate's amendment stands as the fourth on this list.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: These notices were all for the last session. These notices have all lapsed at the end of that session. Only those amendments, copies of which have been placed on the table before each honourable Member now, these only will have to be taken for consideration. The other notices have lapsed. Therefore further debate will be continued by Seth Govind Das.

सेठ गौविन्द दास : सभापतिजी, मैं यह देखता हूँ कि इस बिल का विरोध करने वाले और इसका समर्थन करने वाले दोनों ४ समूहों में बाँटे जा सकते हैं। विरोध करने वालों में एक समूह उन व्यक्तियों का है जो इसका विरोध उसी दृष्टि से करते हैं जिस दृष्टि से सती प्रथा को उठाने के लिये जो कानून बनाया गया उसका विरोध किया गया था; ईश्वरचन्द्र विद्यासागर ने विधवा विवाह के सम्बन्ध में कानून बनवाया उस समय जिस दृष्टि से उसका विरोध किया गया था; श्री शारदाजी ने बाल विवाह रोकने के लिये कानून बनवाना चाहा उस समय जिस दृष्टि से उसका विरोध किया गया था। शारदा बिल के समय में कौंसिल आफ स्टेट में था और उस समय के उस बिल के विरोध का हाल मैं स्वयं जानता हूँ। यह वह समूह है जो यह मानता है कि हमारे वेदों में, हमारे शास्त्रों में, हमारी स्मृतियों में, जो कुछ लिखा गया है, उसमें कोई भी परिवर्तन नहीं हो सकता। मैं उस समूह का नहीं हूँ। हमारे धर्मशास्त्रों को भी यदि देखा जायगा तो पता लगेगा कि समय समय पर अगर एक ऋषि ने कुछ कहा तो दूसरे ऋषि ने दूसरी बात कही। यदि यह बात न होती तो आज एक सौ से ऊपर स्मृतियाँ हमारे ऋषियों ने न बनाई होती। अगर उन स्मृतियों को देखा जायगा तो मालूम होगा कि एक स्मृति जो कुछ कहती है दूसरी स्मृति वही बात नहीं कहती। दूसरी स्मृति दूसरी बात कहती है तो जैसा मैंने आपसे कहा कि जितने सुधार हुए हैं उन सब सुधारों के विरुद्ध जो समूह आवाज़ उठाता है, उस समूह में मैं नहीं हूँ।

जो इस कानून के पक्ष में हैं, वे भी, जैसा मैंने कहा, दो समूहों में बाँटे जा सकते हैं। एक तो वे हैं जो हमारी किसी भी प्राचीन परम्परा को देखना ही

नहीं चाहते, जो इस बात पर भी विचार नहीं करना चाहते कि यह देश एक प्राचीन देशों में से है, इस देश का एक विशेष इतिहास है, इस देश की एक विशेष संस्कृति है, इस देश की एक विशेष परम्परा है। इस प्रकार के सुधारक लोग हैं वह इस बात की परवाह नहीं करना चाहते कि हमारे यहां पहले क्या था और आज हमको अपने देश का निर्माण कैसे करना है। इस प्रकार के सुधारकों में पश्चिमी शिक्षा का बहुत बड़ा प्रभाव है और यह समाज के सुधार में न प्राचीन इतिहास का ध्यान रखना चाहते हैं और न प्राचीन संस्कृति और प्राचीन परम्परा का ही। मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि, यदि इस प्रकार का सुधार इस प्राचीन देश में हुआ तो यह भारतवर्ष, भारतवर्ष नहीं रह जायगा, यह और कुछ ही हो जायगा।

इस समय जब कि हमारा विधान बन रहा है, जब विधान के मौलिक अधिकारों को और निर्णायक अधिकारों को हम पास कर चुके हैं और जब यह आशा की जाती है कि अगली १६ मई और १५ अगस्त के बीच हमारा विधान पूरा बन जायगा तब यदि यह कानून नये विधान के अनुसार आता तो उपयुक्त बात होती। आज जब हम इस देश को 'सैक्यूलर स्टेट' (Secular State) कहते हैं, आज जब हम यह मानते हैं कि इस देश के नागरिकों को, हर एक धर्म मानने वाले को,—हर एक जाति को चाहे वह हिन्दू हो, मुसलमान हो, सिक्ख हो, पारसी हो, कोई भी क्यों न हो,—समान रूप से नागरिक अधिकार होने चाहियें तो मैं यह कहता हूँ कि डाक्टर अम्बेडकर साहब को एक ऐसा विल यहाँ पर लाना चाहिये था जिससे हिन्दुओं का ही सम्बन्ध न होता बल्कि जो इस देश के रहने वाले सभी लोगों पर लागू होता। अपने देश को 'सैक्यूलर स्टेट' (Secular State) मानते हुए एक हिन्दू कोड विल को लाना मुझे एक असंगत बात मालूम पड़ती है।

सेठ गोविन्द दास : अब यदि इस विल को हम देखें तो हमें मालूम होता है कि इस विल में कई धाराएँ ऐसी हैं जिन धाराओं को स्वीकार करने में कोई आपत्ति नहीं होनी चाहिये और यदि यह विल नहीं रुका और पास हुआ ही तो, मेरा विश्वास है कि हम उन धाराओं को बिना किसी विशेष वाद विवाद के स्वीकार करेंगे। परन्तु इसी के साथ हमें यह भी दिखाई देता है कि कई धाराएँ इसमें ऐसी भी हैं जिन्हें स्वीकार करने में बड़ी आपत्ति हो सकती है और स्वयं डाक्टर अम्बेडकर साहब ने आज बतलाया है कि कई धाराएँ विवादग्रस्त धाराएँ हैं और उन विवादग्रस्त विषयों पर उन्होंने पूरा प्रकाश भी डाला है। पहला विवादग्रस्त विषय है विवाह और तलाक। यदि हम विवाह और तलाक को लें तो मैं एक बात को तो स्वीकार करने को तैयार हूँ कि हमें अपने कानून में इस प्रकार का परिवर्तन करना चाहिये जिससे जात-पात की समाप्ति हो जाय। और यदि कोई ब्राह्मण किसी शूद्र से विवाह करना चाहता है, या कोई शूद्र किसी ब्राह्मण से विवाह करना चाहता है तो उनको विवाह के सम्बन्ध में, या ब्राह्मण और शूद्र छोड़ दीजिये, कोई हिन्दू किसी मुसलमान से विवाह करना चाहता है, या कोई मुसलमान किसी हिन्दू से विवाह करना चाहता है, कोई भी जाति के लोग यदि किसी दूसरी जाति में विवाह करना चाहते हैं तो कोई आपत्ति नहीं होनी चाहिये। हमारे यहां जात-पात ने हमारे देश को नष्ट कर दिया है। इस देश और समाज के टुकड़े, छोटे से छोटे टुकड़े, हो गये हैं। और आज विवाह के सम्बन्ध में उन टुकड़ों के सबब से जो दिक्कतें होती हैं वह हम सब जानते हैं। पुराने लोग भी जानते हैं और आज जब उन्हें इस प्रकार के विवाह करने पड़ते हैं तो उनकी नाक भौं सिकुड़ती है। वह कहते हैं कि हम अपने लड़के की शादी अपनी इच्छा के विरुद्ध करते हैं या हमें अपनी लड़की की शादी अपनी इच्छा के खिलाफ करनी पड़ती है तो इस आजादी के मैं बिल्कुल पक्ष में हूँ। मैं तलाक के भी पक्ष में हूँ। मैं कहना चाहता हूँ, कि यद्यपि अब तक संसार में कोई ऐसी विवाह पद्धति नहीं निकली है जो सब आपत्तियों के निवारण करने की चीज़ मानी जाय, परन्तु इसके साथ हमें यह भी देखना है कि यदि पति पत्नी एक दूसरे के साथ सुख से नहीं रह सकते तो उन्हें तलाक का अधिकार होना चाहिए। डाक्टर अम्बेडकर साहब ने यह कहा कि इस देश के नव्वे प्रतिशत लोगों में अब भी तलाक की प्रथा है। ये नव्वे प्रतिशत शूद्र कहलाते हैं, मैं तो शूद्रों और ब्राह्मणों में कोई फर्क नहीं मानता और उन्हें शूद्र कहना सबसे बड़ा जुल्म मानता हूँ.....

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: Does it not cut at the root of Hindu religion?

सेठ गोविन्द दास : नव्वे प्रतिशत शूद्रों में तलाक है, उनमें भी मुझे ऐसा लगता है कि उनके जो रीति रिवाज हैं उनको न मान कर यदि हमने इस बिल को पास किया तो नव्वे प्रतिशत लोग.....

श्री राज बहादुर : अध्यक्ष महोदय : क्या मैं माननीय सदस्य से प्रार्थना कर सकता हूँ कि तलाक के स्थान पर कोई हिन्दी का शब्द प्रयोग करें ?

सेठ गोविन्द दास : मैं समझता हूँ कि माननीय सदस्य हिन्दी भाषा का अर्थ नहीं जानते। जितने शब्द हिन्दी में ले लिये गये हैं वे हिन्दी के ही हैं वह चाहे 'तलाक' ही चाहे और कुछ। फिर भी यदि वे तलाक के लिये शब्द सीखना चाहते हैं तो मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि ऐसा शब्द विवाह-विच्छेद हो सकता है। हाँ, तो मैं यह कह रहा था कि उन नव्वे प्रतिशत लोगों के रीति रिवाज को हटा कर अगर यह कानून पास किया गया तो इसका यह अर्थ होगा कि वह अपने रीति रिवाज के मुताबिक तलाक नहीं दे सकेंगे और उसमें उन्हें बहुत अड़चन पड़ेगी। इसलिये अम्बेदकर साहब की जो इच्छा है कि लोगों को विवाह करने की पूरी आजादी हो, लोगों को तलाक देने की पूरी आजादी हो तो उसमें भी बड़ी भारी अड़चन आ पड़ती है। औरतों और मर्दों को, सबको मैं इस प्रकार की पूरी आजादी देने के पक्ष में हूँ।

अम्बेदकर साहब ने जो यह कहा कि हम जो दस प्रतिशत उच्च वर्ण के लोग कहे जाते हैं ब्राह्मण, क्षत्री या वैश्य, वह नव्वे प्रतिशत के लोगों पर कुछ चीजें लादना चाहते हैं। मुझे ऐसा लगता है कि हम जो दस प्रतिशत पढ़े लिखे लोग हैं वह नव्वे प्रतिशत लोगों के ऊपर कुछ चीजें लादना चाहते हैं। लादते ब्राह्मण, क्षत्री वैश्य नहीं हैं, लादते वह लोग हैं जो किसी प्रकार से इस ऐसेम्बली में आ गये हैं। मैं अपनी बहनों से भी कहना चाहता हूँ कि मैं इस बात को स्वीकार करने को तैयार नहीं हूँ कि मेरी बहन दुर्गाबाई और रेणुका और यहां जो स्त्रियां हैं वह स्त्रियों का प्रतिनिधित्व करती हैं, या यहां जो बहनें विजिटर्स गैलरी (visitors gallery) में आती हैं वह स्त्रियों का प्रतिनिधित्व करती हैं। मैं मानता हूँ कि जो यहां नहीं मौजूद हैं, जो विजिटर्स गैलरी में नहीं आती हैं वह इस देश की स्त्रियों का अधिक प्रतिनिधित्व कर सकती हैं बनिस्वत उनके जो यहां पर मौजूद हैं। हमें स्वीकार करना होगा कि जो आज यह बात कही जाती है कि कुछ उच्च वर्ण के कहे जाने वाले लोग निम्न वर्ण के कहे जाने वाले वर्णों पर अपनी राय लादते हैं यह सही नहीं है, पर सही बात यह है कि दस प्रतिशत पढ़े लिखे लोग नव्वे प्रतिशत पर अपनी राय लादना चाहते हैं। इस देश की जनता क्या चाहती

है, इस बात को न जान कर वह अपनी राय इस देश की जनता पर न ला दें में यह नहीं चाहता कि यहां पर इस प्रकार का कोई कानून पास हो जो जनता की राय के खिलाफ हो।

Shrimati Renuka Ray : Do 90 per cent. of the people know that you are drawing up a constitution ?

Seth Govind Das : We know that the people are with us. To talk as if this is your own concern is not correct. We have come with a mandate from the people in that respect.

दूसरी बात उत्तराधिकार के सम्बन्ध में यहां पर कही गई है। यह कहा गया कि उत्तराधिकार के मामले में हमको बहुत से सुधार की आवश्यकता है। मैं मानता हूँ कि उत्तराधिकार के सम्बन्ध में भी बहुत से सुधार की आवश्यकता है। और मैं यह भी मानता हूँ कि स्त्रियों को कोई उत्तराधिकार न दिया जाय और वह सम्पत्ति न ले सकें तो वह उनके प्रति बड़े से बड़ा अन्याय है। स्त्रियों को उत्तराधिकार का अधिकार होना चाहिये। अब स्त्रियों को उत्तराधिकार का अधिकार कहां तक होना चाहिये यह सवाल है। डा० अम्बेदकर साहब ने मनु और याज्ञवल्क्य की स्मृतियों की बात यहां कही और यह कहा कि उन स्मृतियों में भी लड़कियों को चार आने तक उत्तराधिकार दिया गया है। मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि जहां तक उत्तराधिकार का सम्बन्ध है वहां तक यदि याज्ञवल्क्य और मनु की यह राय है तो भी मेरे मत से इसमें सुधार होना आवश्यक है। इस देश में या इस संसार में एक जमाना था जब मातृ-गृह थे पर आज के समाज में मातृ-गृह न रह कर पितृ-गृह हो गए हैं। जब तक इस देश में तथा संसार में मातृ-गृह थे और विवाह के पश्चात् वर कन्या के यहां आ कर रहता था उस समय तक कन्या को पिता की सम्पत्ति में अधिकार होना ठीक बात थी। परन्तु अब जब पितृ-गृह हैं और कन्या पिता के यहां से स्वसुर के यहां जाती है उस समय पिता की सम्पत्ति में कन्या को अधिकार देना मेरी दृष्टि से उचित बात नहीं है। मेरी दृष्टि में बड़ को स्वसुर की सम्पत्ति में अधिकार होना चाहिये। ज्योंही विवाह हो जाय त्यों ही बड़ को सम्पत्ति में उतना ही अधिकार मिलना चाहिये जितना लड़के को मिलता है। आज जो लड़के को पूरा अधिकार है और यदि कोई स्त्री विधवा हो जाय तो उसे खाने और कपड़े का अधिकार ही रहता है मैं इसके बिल्कुल खिलाफ हूँ। इसलिए मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि स्त्रियों को अधिकार तो होना चाहिए सम्पत्ति पर, पर उनका अधिकार होना चाहिए स्वसुर के घर की सम्पत्ति पर, पिता के घर की सम्पत्ति पर नहीं।

श्री मोहन लाल गौतम : यदि पति न हो ?

सेठ गोविन्द दास : तो लड़के के घर में ।

श्री मोहन लाल गौतम : और अगर लड़का न हो ?

مسٹر تجمل حسین : اور اس کی شادی نہ ہوئی ہو تو کیا کریگی ؟

सेठ गोविन्द दास : वह अलग बात है। उनको कहीं न कहीं से मिल ही जाता है यहां पर जो यह दृष्टान्त दिया गया है कि अगर १२ लड़के हों और तेरहवीं लड़की हो, तो यदि १२ लड़कों को पिता की सम्पत्ति में विभाजन करने का अधिकार है तो तेरहवीं लड़की को क्यों न हो। मैं कहना चाहता हूं कि १२ लड़के अपने पिता के घर में रहते हैं १२ लड़कों का जो विभाजन होता है वह उसी स्थान पर होता है।

श्री कृष्ण चन्द्र शर्मा : अगर लड़की भी पिता के घर रहना चाहे ?

सेठ गोविन्द दास : और लड़की दूसरे के घर जाती है, इसलिए लड़की के लिए यह बात लागू नहीं हो सकती।

एक बात सम्पत्ति के उत्तराधिकार में और हुई है और वह यह कि अब उत्तराधिकार का अधिकार वसीयतनामे से होगा। जहां वसीयतनामे नहीं लिखे जायेंगे वहीं झगड़े पड़ेंगे। यह नहीं, पर जहां वसीयतनामे लिखे जायेंगे वहां भी झगड़े पड़ेंगे। डाक्टर अम्बेदकर साहब, जो बहुत विख्यात वकील हैं, इस बात को जानते हैं कि जितने वसीयतनामे आज तक लिखे गये हैं उनमें से कितने प्रतिशत वसीयतनामे कचहरियों में आये और कितने वसीयतनामों पर मुकदमे चले। मुझे भय है कि जो अधिकार आप सम्पत्ति के उत्तराधिकार का लड़कों और लड़कियों को इस कानून के मुताबिक देना चाहते हैं, उसमें ज्योंही वसीयतनामा आया त्यों ही वह सम्पत्ति न लड़कों को मिलेगी और न लड़कियों को मिलेगी। वह सब वकीलों के यहां चली जायगी।

फिर एक बात और होगी। डा० अम्बेदकर साहब चाहते हैं कि लड़कियों को भी सम्पत्ति में उत्तराधिकार का अधिकार दिया जाय। तो मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूं कि जिस तरह का आज हमारा समाज संगठित है, उसमें जो पिता वसीयतनामा करेंगे वह लड़कियों को कुछ नहीं देंगे, वह लड़कों को ही देंगे और जो स्त्रियों को उत्तराधिकार देने का आपका उद्देश्य है वह इससे पूरा नहीं होगा। मैं उत्तराधिकार के सम्बन्ध में यह कहना चाहता हूं कि उत्तराधिकार का विषय बड़ा जटिल है, जैसा कि डाक्टर अम्बेदकर साहब ने भी खुद कहा है। हमको तो ऐसा लगता है, चाहे हम साम्यवादी या समाजवादी न हों, कि एक तरफ से इंडस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स (Industrialists) की आवाज उठी हुई है कि इस देश में उद्योग धंधे नहीं बढ़ रहे हैं, दूसरी जगह उत्तराधिकार का प्रश्न उठा हुआ है, अतः सबसे अच्छा तो यह हो कि आप व्यक्तिगत सम्पत्ति को ही समाप्त कर दें। यदि यह व्यक्तिगत सम्पत्ति समाप्त होकर एक नई सामाजिक रचना हो, वह सामाजिक रचना साम्यवाद और समाजवाद के सिद्धान्तों पर हो यह मैं नहीं कहता, पर इस व्यक्तिगत सम्पत्ति का नाश होकर एक नये प्रकार की सामाजिक रचना की जाय मैं इस पक्ष में हो गया हूं। यदि हमारे सम्पत्तिशाली लोग देखेंगे तो उनको मालूम होगा कि यह सम्पत्ति उनके भी कोई कल्याण की चीज नहीं है मैं उसी वर्ग में से आता हूं कि जो सम्पत्तिशाली कहा जा सकता है। परन्तु हम देखते हैं कि आखिर इस सम्पत्तिसंग्रह से सच्चा सुख किसे मिल रहा है। मैंने किसी भी ऐसे श्रीमान् को नहीं देखा कि गरीब आदमी का पेट तो आध सेर या तीन पाव में भरता है तो श्रीमान् का पेट १० या २० सेर खाकर पचा सकता हो। मैंने कोई भी ऐसा श्रीमान् नहीं भी देखा कि अगर गरीब आदमी का शरीर पांच या सात गज कपड़े से ढकता हो तो श्रीमान् सौ, दो सौ या चार सौ गज इकट्ठा पहन लेता हो।

सेठ गोविन्द दास : और मुझे तो महलों में रहने का अभ्यास है और मैं कहना चाहता हूं कि अगर किसी श्रीमान् को उनके महल में किसी बड़े हाल में सुला दिया जाय तो उनको नींद नहीं आती। सोने के लिए तो १२ या १४ फुट का कमरा ही चाहिए। आजकल सम्पत्ति एक दुख हो गया है और सम्पत्तिशालियों के लिए भी जिन लोगों को यह नहीं मिलती उनकी इच्छा होती है उसको पाने के लिए और जिनके पास है उनको उसके मारे इतनी मुसीबत है कि वह चैन से रह नहीं सकते।

श्री सीताराम एस० जाजू : उसको त्याग या दान कर देने वाले को भी तो इज्जत की दृष्टि से देखा जाता है।

सेठ गोविन्द दास : हमारे साम्यवादी और समाजवादी कहते हैं कि जितने सम्पत्तिशाली हैं वे सब चोर हैं, डाकू हैं और उठाइगीरे हैं। कुछ साम्यवादी और समाजवादी इससे भिन्न हो सकते हैं, मैं सबके लिए नहीं कहता, लेकिन बहुत ऐसे हैं कि यदि उनको यह सम्पत्ति मिल जाय तो वह समाजवाद और साम्यवाद छोड़ दें। सम्पत्ति के संग्रह करने वाले आज भी समाज में इज्जत की दृष्टि से देखे जाते हैं, हमें समाज की भावनाओं का, और मूल्यों का इस प्रकार परिवर्तन करना चाहिए कि सम्पत्तिशाली सचमुच चोर, डाकू और उठाइगीरे माने जाने लगे और तब मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि कोई भी सम्पत्तिशाली इस तौक को अपने गले में नहीं रखना चाहता। तो यह उत्तराधिकार का झगड़ा सुलझाने के लिए मैं तो यह चाहता हूँ कि हमारे ला मेम्बर (Law Member) डाक्टर अम्बेदेकर साहब एक ऐसा बिल ले आवें जिससे व्यक्तिगत सम्पत्ति की समाप्ति ही हो जाय और उन लोगों का भी उद्धार हो जाय जो कि इसके चक्कर में पड़े हुए हैं।

श्रीमती जी० दुर्गाबाई : क्या आप इसका विरोध नहीं करेंगे ?

सेठ गोविन्द दास : मेरा यह ख्याल है कि यह दो ही ऐसे विषय हैं इस बिल में जिनके सम्बन्ध में बहुत वादविवाद उठाया जा सकता है। और मेरा यह भी ख्याल है कि समय को देखते हुए यदि हम इस वादविवाद में न पड़कर इस बिल को हमारी जो अगली धारा सभायें हैं उन तक मुलतवी कर दें और उस समय हम इस देश में इस सम्बन्ध में लोगों की राय ले लें और लोगों की राय लेकर चुनाव के पश्चात् इस विषय को हम यहाँ पर लावें और इस विषय को हम हिन्दू कोड के रूप में न लावें परन्तु जिस प्रकार हमने विधान पास किया है, जिस तरह इस देश के प्रत्येक समाज के व्यक्ति के लिए लावें तो उचित होगा.....

Dr. Mono Mohan Das (West Bengal: General) : Point of order, Sir. Is there no time limit for allowing this kind of discussion ?

Mr. Deputy Speaker : There is no time limit.

सेठ गोविन्द दास : तो मैं कहना चाहता हूँ, और इन शब्दों से मैं अपने इस कथन को समाप्त करता हूँ, कि मैं यह आवश्यक मानता हूँ कि हमारे सामाजिक कानूनों में सुधार आवश्यक है। मैं यह भी मानता हूँ कि जो लोग इसका विरोध

उस प्रकार करते हैं जिस प्रकार उन्होंने सती प्रथा के सम्बन्ध में जो बिल आया था उसका, या विधवा विवाह के सम्बन्ध में या बाल विवाह के सम्बन्ध में जो बिल आया था उसका विरोध किया था, वह ठीक नहीं कर रहे हैं। पर इसी के साथ मैं यह भी मानता हूँ कि यह बिल इस समय ठीक अवसर पर उपस्थित नहीं हुआ है और हमें इस समय इस पर विचार न कर लोगों की राय लेकर आगे इसको पेश करना चाहिए। इतने ही शब्दों के साथ मैं न तो इसका समर्थन करता हूँ और न इसका विरोध करता हूँ।

Seth Govind Das: Mr. Deputy Speaker, I find that the supporters and opponents of this Bill can be divided into four groups. One of the opponent groups consist of those persons who oppose this measure with the same viewpoint as was exhibited by certain antagonists at the time of enactment of law for the abolition of Sati, the law which was got passed by the late Shri Ishwar Chandra Vidyasagar for widow-remarriage and the measure put forth by Mr. Sharda for the prevention of child marriages being brought on the Statute Book. At the time of Sharda Bill, I was a member of the Council of State and I personally know the opposition that was then meted out to this Bill. This group is of the opinion that no change can be made in that what has been prescribed in the text of our Vedas, Shastras and Smritis. I do not belong to that group. It would be noticed even from reference to our Dharmashastras that if one Rishi (Sage) said something from time to time, the other said something else. Had this not been the case, our Rishi would not have written Smritis numbering more than one hundred. If you go through these Smritis, you will find that the tenets laid down in one Smriti differ from those contained in the other. Each of these Smritis enunciates a different principle. Then just as I have stated, I am not one of those groups who have opposed almost all the reforms that have been introduced hithertofore.

The second opposing group is that which on the one hand believes that there is obviously a necessity for making reforms in these affairs, but on the other hand, it holds that this is not the proper time for the enactment of such a legislation. This should be brought forth only after the new elections have taken place, and when our new representatives have been elected. I would like to say that there will not be any harm if instead of making any change in the Hindu Law at present, we do this even three years hence. This is a subject over which the whole country has got to think; all of us have to think, all of those who are sitting here have to think and those who are likely to occupy these seats in this House in the future shall have to think. Therefore, I feel that there is a good deal of force in the arguments advanced by the second group that it is neither the proper time nor the place to bring forth such a measure, and for this reason, I would urge that we should consider this aspect.

Just as I have stated, even the supporters of this Bill can be divided into two groups, one which does not at all like to see any of our old traditions, and does not want to recognise the fact that this country is one of the ancient countries having a brilliant past, glorious history, high culture and great traditions. Such type of reformers do not at all care as to what our past heritage is and how are we to reconstruct our country today? These reformers have been considerably influenced by the Western education, and have scant regard for the ancient history, culture and even the old traditions in the sphere of social reforms. I would like to say that if such sort of reforms are introduced in this ancient country this Bharatvarsha (India) will no longer remain as Bharatvarsha—but it would become something else. The other group of reformers is that which believes in the necessity of reforms being introduced but after having due regard to our ancient history, culture and traditions. I do not belong to the first group but to the second. I admit that it has become absolutely necessary to introduce reforms, but in spite of all this, we should carry out the reforms after keeping in view our old traditions, ancient culture and civilisation.

At this time when we are framing our Constitution, when we have already passed the clauses relating to the fundamental and justiciable rights and when it is hoped that our Constitution will be finally adopted sometime during the period intervening between the 16th of May and 15th of August next, it would have been quite in order had this measure been brought forth in consonance with the provisions of the new Constitution. Today when we call our country a 'Secular State', when we admit that all the persons in this country—whatever religion they believe in, to whatever community they may belong, may be Hindu, Muslim, Sikh, Parsi—whoever he may be—he should be given equal rights of citizenship. Therefore, I would say that the Honourable Dr. Ambedkar should have presented to this House such a Bill which would have concerned not the Hindu's alone; but would have been made applicable to all the citizens of this country. While admitting this country as a 'Secular State', the idea of introducing a Hindu Code Bill seems to me quite inappropriate. Then again if we now see this Bill, we shall have to admit this that it.....

Shri R. K. Sidhva: The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar referred to the ancient Shastras. You may also point out which of the Shastras go against the provisions of Hindu Code?

Seth Govind Das: Now if we see this Bill, we find that it contains many such clauses to the acceptance of which there should not be any objection. And if at all this Bill is not postponed but is passed into Law, I am sure we shall accept these clauses without indulging into any sort of controversy. But along with this, we also feel that it contains many such clauses the acceptance of which is susceptible of being considerably harmful. The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar has himself admitted today that many of the clauses are of controversial nature and he has also thrown sufficient light on these controversial issues. The first controversial issue is 'marriage' and 'divorce'. If we take up the 'marriage' and 'divorce', I would be prepared to accept one thing at least that we should make some such change in our legislation which would do away with the Caste System. And if any Brahmana wants to marry a Sudra or a Sudra a Brahmana; or setting aside the case of a Brahmana and a Sudra, if any Hindu wants to marry a Muslim or any Muslim a Hindu, or if the members of any community want to have inter-communal marriages, there should not be any bar to such marriages being solemnized. This Caste System has ruined our country. It has resulted in the ramification of our country and society into small parts—nay even the smallest sections. All of us are very well aware of the disabilities that exist in the marital sphere today and which are the outcome of this dismemberment. The old people also know this and even today—they look upon the solemnization of such marriages with abhorrence. They say that they have to marry their sons as well as daughters against their wishes. But I fully support such a freedom being given. I am even a supporter of 'divorce'. I would submit that notwithstanding the fact that no 'Marriage Code' has so far been invented in the world which may be regarded as the panacea for the removal of all ills, still we have got to see that if the husband and wife cannot live a harmonious life, they should be given the right of divorce. The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar has stated that the system of divorce already prevails among 90 per cent. of the people in this country. These 90 per cent. are called Sudras. I, on my part, do not find any difference between the Brahmana and Sudras, and feel that it would be the greatest crime to call them Sudra even.....

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram (Minister of Labour): Does it not cut at the root of Hindu religion?

Seth Govind Das: Divorce exists amongst the 90 per cent. of the Sudras. In this case too, it so looks to me that if we pass this legislation in utter disregard of their customs and usages, then 90 per cent. of the people.....

Shri Raj Bahadur (United State of Matsya): Sir, may I request the honourable member to use any Hindi equivalent for the word "Talaq" (divorce)?

Seth Govind Das: I feel that the honourable member does not understand the implications of the Hindi language. All those words which have been included in Hindi belong to Hindi alone—may it be 'talaq' or anything else. If he still wants to know the Hindi equivalent of 'talaq', I would tell him that this can be substituted by the word "Vivah Vichehhd" (विवाह-विच्छेद) (dissolution of the conjugal rights).

I was just telling you that if this legislation is passed after brushing aside the customs and usages prevalent amongst those 90 per cent. of the people, then it would mean that they would not be able to divorce in their traditional manner and they would thus be confronted with many difficulties. Therefore, it is bound to give rise to a very great difficulty inasmuch as it runs counter to the wishes expressed by the Honourable Dr. Ambedkar that every body should be given the full liberty to marry and divorce. I am in favour of such sort of liberty being completely given to all the men and women.

The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar also pointed out that 10 per cent. of the people amongst us who are called Caste Hindus viz., Brahmana, Kshatriyas, or Vaishyas want to thrust some thing upon those who form the 90 per cent. It so looks to me that those of us—who are ten per cent. in number—who form the intelligentsia want to load a few things on those comprising of 90 per cent. It is not the Brahmana, Kshatriyas and Vaishyas who put the burden, but this is done by those people who have managed to come to this Assembly in some way or the other. I would also tell my sisters that I am not prepared to accept this view that my sister members, Shrimatis G. Durgabai and Renuka Ray and other lady members who are sitting in this House represent the women; or those sisters who sit in the visitor's galleries represent them. I admit that those who are not present here, those who do not come in the visitor's galleries can represent this country better than those who are sitting here. We shall have to admit that the allegation which is being made today that some high-caste people want to thrust their opinion upon the low-castes is not correct. But in reality the position is that the ten per cent. educated people want to thrust their opinion upon the remaining 90 per cent. Without knowing anything as to what is the will of the people in this country, they should not thrust their opinion upon them. I do not want that any legislation should be passed in this House which is against the wishes of the people.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Do 90 per cent. of the people know that you are drawing up a constitution?

Seth Govind Das: We know that the people are with us. To talk as if this is your own concern is not correct. We have come with a mandate from the people in that respect.

The other thing which has been mentioned here is in regard to 'Succession'. It has been stated that we are required to carry out drastic reforms in the law relating to Succession. I agree that there is a great scope of reforms being made in the Succession System. And I also admit that it would amount to the greatest possible injustice being done to the females if they are not conferred upon the right of succession and thus precluded from inheriting the property. The women should be given the right of succession. Now the question arises as to what extent should such right of succession be vested in the females. The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar has in support of this quoted from the Smritis of Manu and Yagnavalkya and pointed out that these Smritis also confer upon the females the right to inherit property to the extent of one fourth. I would like to say that in my opinion some improvement should necessarily be made in the domain of succession even if these are the views held by Manu and Yagnavalkya. There was a time when the matriarchal system existed in this country or even in the world. But in the present-day society, the matriarchal system has been replaced by the patriarchal. So long as the matriarchal system existed in this country as well as in the world and the husband used to come and stay at the bride's house after marriage, it was quite appropriate that the daughter should have a share in her father's property. But according to my viewpoint now when the patriarchal system is in vogue and the girl leaves her father's house for that of her father-in-law; it would not be proper to give her any share out of the father's property. In my opinion the daughter-in-law should be given the right to share her father-in-law's property. As soon as the marriage is consummated, the daughter-in-law should be given the share equal to that of the son. Today the son enjoys the full right, and if any woman becomes widow, she is entitled to the right of maintenance only vis., food and clothing. I am totally against it. Therefore, I would urge that the women should undoubtedly be given the right to share in the property, but that should be restricted to her father-in-law's property only and not that belonging to her father.

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam (U. P.: General): If there is no father-in-law?

Seth Govind Das: Then in the husband's house.

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam: If there is no husband.

Seth Govind Das: Then in the son's house.

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam: And if there is no son?

Mr. Tajamul Husain: And if she is not married then what would she do?

Seth Govind Das: That is a separate thing. They do get from some source or the other. In the example which has been cited here that when there are twelve sons and thirteenth a daughter, and the twelve sons have got the right to distribute their father's property, then why should not the thirteenth daughter be given the same right? I would say that all the twelve sons live in their father's house. The distribution which the twelve sons make is made at the same place.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U. P.: General): If the daughter also wants to live in the father's house?

Seth Govind Das: Since the daughter has got to adopt another house, this cannot be made applicable in her case. Another thing that has been added in respect of succession to property is that the right of succession will now be governed in accordance with the contents of the will. In cases, where the wills are not executed, disputes will arise. Not only this, disputes will arise even otherwise. The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar who is a renowned lawyer is aware of the fact as to what percentage of the wills executed hitherto were brought up before the Courts and on how many wills were the suits instituted? I am afraid that as soon as the will comes in, neither the sons nor the daughters would be able to share the property under the provision of this law which seeks to confer upon them the right of succession. All that property will be grabbed by the lawyers.

Then again another thing will happen. The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar wants that the daughters should also be given the right of succession to the property. Then I would submit that in our society which is undivided at present, when the fathers execute the will, they will not bequeath anything to their daughters, but would give to the sons alone, and thus this would defeat the very object with which you want to confer the right of succession on the women. In regard to succession, I would like to say that just as Dr. Ambedkar has himself admitted, it is a very intricate subject. It so looks to us—we might or might not be Socialists or Communists—that on the one hand the industrialists have raised the voice that the industries are not being developed in this country and on the other hand the question of succession has been mooted out. Therefore, the best thing would be that you should abolish the system of private property. If after the liquidation of this private ownership, a new society is evolved—I do not say that the structure of that society should be based on the principles of Socialism and Communism—but I have since formed this opinion that a new class of society should be built after the liquidation of the individual holdings. If our capitalists see to this they will no doubt find that this wealth is no longer a source of solace to them. I belong to that very class which can be termed as capitalist. But we see who is deriving the real pleasure out of this hoarded wealth? I have not come across any such capitalist who can fill his belly by eating and digesting 10 or 20 seers, while a poor man can be satiated by taking half a seer or three quarter of a seer. I have also not seen any such capitalist who puts on about 100, 200 or 400 yards of cloth at a time, while a poor man can cover his body with only five or six yards.

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad (Minister of Education): Some people do wear!

Seth Govind Das: I am accustomed to live in palaces, and I would like to say that if any capitalist is made to sleep in one of the large halls of his palace, he cannot enjoy the sleep. For sleeping purpose, only one room measuring about 12 or 14 feet is required. Now-a-days wealth has become an affliction—for the wealthy too. Those people who do not get this, they desire to acquire it and those who have got it suffer great hardships and on account of that they cannot live peacefully.

The Honourable Maulana Abul Kalam Azad: And they do not want us to give up also!

Seth Govind Das: They do not want to give up because the man who hoards that wealth is looked upon with great esteem in the society.

Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo* (Madhya Bharat): The man who renounces this or gives it in charity is also equally respected.

Seth Govind Das: It is alleged by our Socialists and Communists that all the capitalists are robbers, dacoits and wayfarers. Some of the Socialists, Communists might differ from this. I cannot ascribe this to all of them. But many of them would renounce their Socialistic and Communistic creed if they can acquire this wealth. The hoarders of wealth are even today held in esteem by the society. We should try to overhaul the conceptions and values of the society in such a manner so that the capitalists may in reality be treated as dacoits and robbers; and then only I would say that no capitalist would like to wear this collar around his neck. Therefore, with a view to tackle this knotty problem of succession, I would urge that our Honourable Law Minister Dr. Ambedkar may bring forth such a measure which should seek to abolish the system of private ownership and thus ameliorate the condition of those people who have fallen a victim to this.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): Will you not oppose that?

Seth Govind Das: In my opinion these are the only two points in this Bill which are subject to good deal of controversy. I am also of the opinion that keeping in view the trend of the time and without indulging into any sort of controversy, we postpone the enactment of this Bill till the formation of the new Assembly and in the meantime invite the opinion of the people in this connection; and after ascertaining the wishes of the people, we should bring forth this measure as soon as the fresh elections are held. We should not present this measure in the form of a Hindu Code but the proper course would be to pass it in the same manner in which we have passed our constitution which provides for the rights of every citizen in the country.

Dr. Mono Mohan Das (West Bengal: General): On a point of order, Sir, is there no time limit for allowing this kind of discussion?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is no time limit.

Seth Govind Das: With these words I would conclude, and say that I feel it absolutely necessary that reforms should be made in our social laws. I also admit this that those people who oppose this Bill in the same manner in which they behaved at the time of the enactment of laws relating to the abolition of Sati, widow-marriage and prevention of child marriages are not following the right course of action. But along with this I also admit that this Bill has not been moved at the opportune time and we should postpone its consideration at the moment. We should present it only after ascertaining the public opinion. With these words, neither I support this, nor oppose this.

Shrimati Sucheta Kripalani (U.P.: General): Sir, ever since we had a sovereign legislature no piece of legislation has given rise to greater excitement and controversy than this Hindu Code Bill. If all this controversy had been based on reason and on the merits of the changes proposed in Hindu Law it would have been to the good but much of the controversy is clouded by irrelevant issues. The argument of Religion in Danger has inspired much of the propaganda against the Code. It is urged that it will shake the foundations of the Hindu religion. Those who put forward such argument do a great injustice to their own religion.

Hindu religion is primarily concerned with the spiritual emancipation of the individual, his progress towards self-realisation. The self-fulfilment of an individual stands in need of certain moral and spiritual principles as truth, justice, non-violence, etc. These are embodied in our scriptures. These are unchangeable and fundamental. The social arrangements, institutions, conventions and customs that have evolved through the ages are not religion. The Hindu Code does not seek to disturb the Hindu religion but to amend and modify the Hindu civil law. The law has changed from time to time. It is different from religion and has never been unchangeable and static. The authors of the Dharma Shastras changed the law from time to time according to the consciousness of the community at the time. The right to make changes was well recognised by the Dharma shastras. The Hindu law became rigid and static only after the advent of the British.

It has been the boast of Hinduism that while the fundamentals have remained unchanged, the Hindu social institutions have changed to suit changing circumstances. Continuous adaptability has been the strength and essence of Hinduism. Unless Hindu society is to remain static and dead the law must change to fit in with the changing circumstances. We also know that the Smritis have not remained unchanged. The smritis did include other branches of law besides those of succession and marriage. These have been dealt with by the Indian legislature and some of them have been superseded. Hindu religion did not flounder. Hindu religion has survived that shock. If Hindu religion could survive the shock of these changes I am sure Hindu society and religion can survive the shock of a little more change.

We have also brought in social legislation of great importance. We have abolished the Sati; we have abolished child marriage; we have also abolished to a great extent untouchability. Hindu religion is a very catholic and liberal religion. So the argument of religion in danger does not behove us. Within the fold of this liberal and catholic religion people of various views customs and manners have found shelter and lived. Today what has happened? Why have we lost our faith in our own religion that we are raising the cry of religion in danger? It does not mean that I want to say that all those who oppose us are orthodox and are reactionaries. I only want to point out that in forcing your point of view you are only doing injustice to your religion when you put forward this argument.

Another argument is this that this Bill should not have been taken up for consideration now and that we have not given the country sufficient opportunity to get acquainted with the provisions of the Bill. As far as I know this Bill has been before the House and before the country for about the last ten years. Some of the measures embodied in the Bill as Succession Bill and Marriage Bill, I think, were introduced in the House in 1943. The Hindu Law Committee was appointed in 1944. Its Report was published, I think, in 1945 or 1946 and the draft Bill has been translated into thirteen Indian languages. Thousands of copies of this draft Bill have been circulated. Even after this if we do not know the provisions of the Hindu Code Bill then it is our fault and not the fault of the Government. Besides that the Bill won't be passed in a day here. We will take a lot of time to consider it. It will take a good deal of time when we consider it in detail. At that time we will have enough opportunity to go to the public, to acquaint them with the provisions of the Bill and also to ascertain their opinion. There is a whispering propaganda, a very strange propaganda, that this Bill should be postponed till after the next general election. Why should it be postponed. Because this may adversely affect our party's popularity? Is it befitting or worthy of the Congress to put forward such arguments? Have we ever considered our popularity before our duty? If we think that a Bill is just, if we consider that a Bill is for the good of the people then it is our duty to go ahead with it. To shelve a Bill just in order to catch votes for the next election is not right. I think it is not even honest. For us the good of the people has always been the supreme consideration. If we don't take this point of view, if we don't keep this attitude before us, we will never be able to sponsor any radical change. Whatever be the field of our life when a radical change is sought to be made we are bound to come against some vested interests and some established custom. There is always bound to be a cry against such changes. If we give up reform on that score then we shall never change anything.

I would like to say this. Much has been said about the volume of opinion against the Hindu Code Bill. I would like to say with all humility that there is also a very good group—an intelligent, thoughtful group—supporting the measure too. And that intelligent, thoughtful group does not consist of women alone. We have a lot of brothers with us in this measure. We have also seen in history in other countries whenever a radical change was introduced, whenever any reform was sought to be brought into being, it was a small conscious minority that forms up the cause, that educated the public, that did propaganda and after some time public opinion veered round it. So I am sure though it may be that there is a volume of opinion against the Hindu Code, if what we are trying to do is just and right, I am more than sure that public opinion will come with us. Not only will it come with us but it will bless us after a time for the good (An Honourable Member: "It is already with us") measure that we have passed. They say they have got the majority with them. So this is my answer.

In the heat and controversy many times we forget that the Bill does not consist of merely the Succession and the Marriage provisions. We have tried to make a uniform and entire system of law. In this entire system of law or Code we have tried to put right a lot of discrepancies, inequities, and injustices. For instance this morning Dr. Ambedkar in his learned speech told us how the provisions regarding guardianship, maintenance, adoption etc. are going to be beneficial to the society. Those who are totally opposed to the Bill have been forgetting the good side of the Bill, the non-controversial side, and have concentrated all their attack on the entire Bill.

Let us come to the question of Succession itself which is greatly opposed by large sections of the people.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: It is opposed by vested interests only.

Shrimati Sucheta Kripalani: It is opposed by large sections. They had levelled two points—against the breakage of the joint family and the grant of absolute rights to women. I will take the second point first. We are seeking to have a society where men and women should be equal, where people of all castes will be equal. We are trying to bring about a perfect democracy of which we have dreamed all these years. We are pledged to give women equal status in society. We are pledged to do away with all sex discrimination and this pledge does not start from the time when we bring into effect the New Constitution. I would like to remind you that in the Karachi resolution these pledges are embodied. After that when we accepted office, then also we again reiterated that there shall be no discrimination on the basis of sex. If men and women are to work equally, if they are to function as equal citizens of the state, if they are to fulfil their obligations towards the state, how can we have such discriminatory rules in the matter of property rights of women? Unless woman gets her full share of property you cannot expect her to fulfil her obligations to the state. Of course whenever we make any changes, established custom and established rules are disturbed. It causes a certain amount of dislocation and inconvenience, but we have to tolerate them and take them as inevitable. We must not try to enlarge the importance of the inconvenience that is caused to us. Dr. Ambedkar and others have told us that the smritis recognize the right of property of women. What law gave us practice denied us. In practice the right was abrogated. What we are trying to do today is only this.—We are not going against the fundamentals of Hindu religion or Hindu custom or Hindu law; what was granted to us by Hindu law but which was arbitrarily denied to us; we are now trying to take back—or rather you are giving it to us, this right which has been denied to us by society all these years. It is merely justice done—long deferred justice.

If you come to modern times, by the Act of 1937 you have given property right to the wife, to the daughter-in-law, to the grandson's wife and so on and so forth. The only person who is left out is the poor daughter. It is but in the fitness of things that now it should be included here. Therefore I do not see what is there to argue much about it. If we have given to other women this right, if women can inherit from the husband's side let her inherit from the father's side which is very natural and right.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: They want her to develop to the other stages.

Shrimati Sucheta Kripalani: In regard to joint family there is a very great feeling about it. I do not know why there is such a feeling. Most of the people I come across are anxious to get out of the joint family. The sons do not like to stay with the father. I see most of the families distributed all over the country. So joint family is a very rapidly crumbling institution according to me. Even the legal position of the joint family is very faulty as Dr. Ambedkar has pointed out to us in the morning. Even under Mitakshra system a member of the joint family merely by expression of his will can bring about a partition.

I would therefore like to ask you where is the joint family about which you are crying so loudly?

Much was said about the protection that is given to the unprotected women in the joint family. I know in the past in the joint family unprotected women did get protection. Even now some of them do get protection but at the same time we know hundreds of women who, failing to get any shelter in the joint family, having no economic resources of their own, are hounded to a life of degradation and shame. Many of us women, who are doing social work, come across innumerable such cases. Therefore, not only is it right, not only is it just to give woman her portion but it is absolutely essential to give her the share if you want to safeguard the Hindu society about which you speak so loudly.

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: And something more.

Shrimati Sucheta Kripalani: So much the better. Give us a little more. You have denied us in the past, make it up now.

As regards marriage, the Bill merely seeks to introduce uniformity of practice to avoid confusion and uncertainty. This may entail a little difficulty to those classes which are governed by the customary law but the proposed sacramental and civil marriages are such that it can be put into practice by the poorest and the most backward classes. So I do not think it will create any great difficulty. There is some objection to the registration of sacramental marriages. I think it is purely sentimental because registration is only permissive. If you do not want to avail of the registration you are free not to avail of it.

An Honourable Member: It is compulsory.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: No compulsion.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: No compulsion, either would do.

Shrimati Sucheta Kripalani: If I am wrong, Dr. Ambedkar will correct me. It has been put there as a safeguard; that is all.

We come to the question of inter-caste and sagothra marriages. I was hearing my friend who preceded me. I do not know how we can wax eloquent over the objection to sagothra and inter-caste marriages because I find a very large number of such marriages taking place in the society. If we did not have such marriages it was all right, but when a very large number of such marriages are taking place, either we compel them to have an irregular marriage or we drive them out of the Hindu fold or we make them go somewhere or they have to go to the civil registration office and get it done. When it is there, why not accept the fact? When it is a practice why not recognise it and give it legality? Therefore, it is but right at this stage, when Indian society has changed so considerably to allow inter-caste and sagothra marriages within the Hindu fold.

About monogamy, here also I feel that the society has on the whole accepted monogamy. Polygamy is looked down upon; polygamy finds no favour in our society, though cases do occur. Again, we recognise the current practice amongst an overwhelming majority of Hindus and we legalize it. Moreover as we are trying to bring about a society where men and women are equal, we cannot afford to have a double set of morality for men and women and I should think the men should be happy to have this introduced because by the provision of monogamy we are levelling up the standard of men's morality to that of women. I should think that the men should be thankful to us.

An Honourable Member: Very thankful. We can get easy divorces and marry again.

Shrimati Sucheta Kripalani: As for divorce, though we do not deny the sentiments of the orthodox, men and women, analysing it, we find, that divorce did exist in our ancient scriptures. The grounds of divorce that we have allowed are extremely reasonable and just. We have not allowed any divorce on frivolous grounds as it has been in some parts of the Western world. Care has also been taken to formulate such a procedure that divorce would be resorted to only under very grave circumstances. If we see the records of Baroda, Travancore, Cochin and Malabar where divorce is allowed, very few people have availed themselves of the law. Only under exceptional circumstances it comes to help the people to get out of a very difficult situation. Hindu social tradition is such that we will not on flimsy grounds rush to the court and break up a marriage. The people who fear that the grant of the right of divorce may amount to disruption of the family life of the Hindus are absolutely unjustified.

Then I take Dr. Ambedkar's argument of the morning that divorce prevails among 90 per cent. of the Hindus, so why not extend it to the other 10 per cent. It will be very right and just when we see that among these 10 per cent. divorce cases are occurring. If there had been no divorce cases then I would have understood it, but we see that whenever our men and women want a divorce they leave the Hindu fold and become Muslims or Christians and by doing so they insult those religions of which they make a mere utility. Therefore, we should recognise the existing circumstances and allow divorces.

Sir, I have nothing more to say except that I want to tell my brothers here that we women even when we pressed for our rights have never forgotten the greater good, the larger good. We have been very conservative in this matter. You know even for our political rights we have never encouraged things which we have considered wrong. Even when the British were there we have always stood for joint electorates. Even in the new Constitution we have never pressed for separate rights for ourselves. We would have pressed for these if we did not think that they go against the benefit of the entire society. If Hindu women benefit, I am sure the Hindu society stands to benefit. This is for the larger good; that is why we are pressing this point.

Here, I would also like to say that our men on the whole have been very co-operative and helpful to us. They have not stood against our progress. It may be that this is due to the benevolent influence of Mahatma Gandhi. You all know that Gandhiji was one of the greatest supporters of women's rights. The tradition that he has established has been followed by our men; because of Gandhiji's influence, because of the sympathetic attitude of our leaders, we have never had to fight for the political rights as women of other countries had to fight. Therefore, I am more than sure that now we will follow the good traditions, we will keep up the spirit of co-operation that we have had all these years and all my brother Members will support this Bill and consider this Bill not as a measure of right for the women, not a measure of justice that you are giving to the woman, but as justice done to the society. This is a measure by which we are trying to make Hindu society healthy and wholesome. The Hindu society is full of defects. We are now independent. If in the world we have to take our status, we have to set our house right; unless we do it we cannot take our position in society. Therefore, let us get together and remedy the defects that are in the house. I only appeal to you and I am sure we will have the support of all of you for this good measure.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Friday the 25th February, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE)

11.50 A.M.

DEATH OF MIAN MOHD. RAFI

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Before I proceed further with the business of the day I want to make a reference to the demise of Mian Mohd. Rafi who was Secretary of this Assembly. He started as Deputy Secretary in 1931 and in 1947 he retired. He had a glorious record of work and assisted this Assembly ably with his services. He was a barrister. I would request the honourable Members of the House to stand in their seats in silence for a minute in memory of the deceased.

ESSENTIAL SERVICES (PREVENTION OF STRIKES) BILL

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the prevention of strikes in certain essential services.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U.P.: Muslim): Sir, I beg to oppose the motion for leave to introduce the Bill.

Honourable Members: Order, order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member will have an opportunity in his turn. I shall first put the motion to the House. Then I will hear him.

Motion moved:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide for the prevention of strikes in certain essential services."

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: Sir, I beg to oppose the motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Normally it has been the practice not to oppose a motion of this nature at this stage. In some other places as in Provinces the Bill is published in the Gazette without this formal leave and as soon as it is introduced it is taken into consideration. But a different procedure is adopted in this House. A motion is first made asking for leave to introduce a Bill. It is normally granted. It is only the first stage. Even the papers are not circulated. There will be opportunity for the honourable Member to express himself fully at the second stage when the motion is made to take it into consideration. I leave it to the honourable Member.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: Will it not be a waste of time and energy?

An Honourable Member: This is waste of time.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: I have very serious reasons for not granting the leave.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I know the honourable Member is always ready, but unfortunately the other Members are not ready.

Honourable Members: It is waste of time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Honourable Members will kindly leave it to me to guide the deliberations of the House so long as I am here. They need not remind me again and again that it is a waste of time. I would like to give all honourable Members an opportunity within their legitimate limits. Honourable Members will kindly bear with me. I am only suggesting to the honourable Member that while he may be prepared other Members may not be and they do not have even the copies. Now I will put this motion without any further discussion. The honourable Member will have ample opportunity; other honourable Members also will have an opportunity at the proper stage.

The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide for the prevention of strikes in certain essential services."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

HINDU CODE—Contd.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House will now proceed with the further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar on the 31st August, 1948:

"That the Bill to amend and codify certain branches of the Hindu Law, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): Sir, I have moved amendments and I think it will be proper for me to advance arguments and for others to speak. Instead of that if I have to listen to them now and then speak, where would be the scope for them to reply?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think the honourable Member who has moved an amendment to the motion will be in a better position if he speaks later because as he knows he won't have an opportunity to reply.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I do not wish to reply.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In that view it will be right that the honourable Member should hear certain speeches for and against his motion so that he may be able to reply and he may speak once for all. I have called Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava. (Interruption) The duty of regulating the order of speakers is with the Chair. I feel it right to call upon Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव : माननीय डिप्टी स्पीकर साहब, इस हिन्दू कोड बिल के बारे में जिसने सारे हिन्दुस्तान को

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In English please.

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव : चूंकि यह मामला बहुत अहम है इसी वजह से मैं हिन्दी में बोलना चाहता हूँ ।

Dr. Mono Mohan Das: We can understand the Hindustani speaker by the Honourable the Minister of Education. It is entirely different from the Hindi or Hindustani spoken by Seth Govind Das or Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava. As beginners we do not know which is Hindustani.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is no set standard which is copied here. Whatever is spoken is Hindustani.

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव : पेशतर इसके कि मैं अपनी तकरीर को शुरू करूँ (Honourable Members : English please) चूंकि बहुत से मैम्बर साहिबान की स्वाहिश है कि मैं अंग्रेजी में अपनी तकरीर करूँ मुझे उनकी इस स्वाहिश का अहतराम करने में किसी किस्म की कोई हिचकिचाहट नहीं है लेकिन सारे मैम्बर साहिबान जानते हैं कि अपनी ज़बान में अपने आपको ज़ाहिर करना ज्यादा आसान है बमुकाबले अंग्रेजी के । इस वास्ते अगर वह मुझे इजाजत दें तो मैं हिन्दी में ही तकरीर करना चाहता हूँ । लेकिन अगर वह ज्यादा इस्तरार करेंगे तो मुझे हरगिज़ किसी किस्म का इसमें भी इन्कार न होगा कि मैं अंग्रेजी में ही अपनी तकरीर शुरू कर दूँ । (माननीय सदस्य : हिन्दी ! हिन्दी !) चूंकि मैं समझता हूँ कि बहुत सारे साहिबान इसमें इस्तरार नहीं करते हैं इस वास्ते मैं हिन्दी में ही बोलना पसन्द करता हूँ ।

श्रीमती जी० दुर्गाबाई : आप सहल हिन्दी में बोलने की कृपा करें ताकि हम भी समझ सकें ।

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव : मैं कोशिश करूँगा कि निहायत सहल हिन्दी में बोलूँ ।

मैं इस हिन्दू कोड बिल पर आज जब इस हाउस के सामने तकरीर करने खड़ा हुआ हूँ तो मेरे दिल में बहुत से मुस्तलिफ़ ख्यालात एक दूसरे से लड़ाई कर रहे हैं । मैं शुरू में ही अर्ज कर देना चाहता हूँ कि मैं उन लोगों में से नहीं हूँ कि जो हिन्दू सभ्यता का, इस देश के हिन्दू कल्चर का इस कोड से खातमा होने का इकरार करते हैं । मैं चाहता हूँ कि हिन्दू कल्चर और हिन्दू सोसाइटी और हिन्दू सभ्यता हमेशा तक, जब तक जमाना कायम रहे, उस वक़्त तक रहे । मैं इसका हर्गिज़ मुस्तलिफ़ नहीं हूँ । न मैं डरता हूँ कि इस बिल से या किसी और बिल से हिन्दू सभ्यता या कल्चर को कोई नुकसान पहुंच सकेगा । मैं यह चाहता हूँ कि वह खराबियाँ जो बहुत असें से हिन्दू सोसाइटी के अन्दर आ गई हैं और जिन के वास्ते डाक्टर अम्बेदकर साहब ने अपने आखिरी अल्फाज़ में इस हाउस से अपील की थी, वह दूर हों और उस अपील पर बड़े ठंडे दिल से गौर किया जाय । अगर दरअसल हिन्दू सोसाइटी को कायम रहना है तो इसमें कोई शक नहीं कि अगर रिपेयर करने की जरूरत होगी तो इसकी रिपेयर करनी ही चाहिए । मैं उन लोगों का सख्त विरोधी हूँ कि जो यह कहते हैं कि इस बिल से हिन्दू कल्चर खत्म हो जायेगा । मैं एक मिनट के वास्ते भी यह मानने को तैयार नहीं हूँ कि इस असेम्बली को या इस सभा के अन्दर ऐसे आदमियों को, जो पुराने स्मृतिवादी की तरह की ही काविलियत रखते हैं, हमारे शास्त्रों में या हमारे क़ानून में कोई तबदीली करने का हक़ हासिल नहीं है । मैं समझता हूँ कि हर समाज के लोगों को अपने जमाने के मुवाफ़िक़ अपना क़ानून बनाने का पूरा अख्तियार है । अगर आज कोई शख्स यह अपील करता है कि यह पुराने जमाने का कायदा है, हमको इसी के मुताबिक़ अमल करना चाहिए, तो मैं उसके मुताबिक़ यह अर्ज करूँगा कि कोई भी ऐसा कायदा नहीं है जिसका तजर्बा हिन्दुस्तान ने न कर लिया हो । हिन्दुस्तान के अन्दर ऐसे इलाक़े मौजूद हैं जहाँ 'सिस्टम आफ़ इनहेरिटेन्स' हिन्दुस्तान के दूसरे हिस्सों से बिल्कुल मुस्तलिफ़ है । क्या हम नहीं जानते हैं कि खासी ट्राइब्स में और सदरन (Southern) पंजाब के कुछ हिस्सों में सारा इनहेरिटेन्स का इन्स्टीट्यूशन इस बात पर इनहसार करता है कि लड़कों के बजाय लड़कियों को सारी जायदाद मिलती है । हिन्दुस्तान के अन्दर ऐसे इलाक़े भी हैं जहाँ लड़की के सुसराल जाने के बजाय खाबिन्द को बीबी के घर ले जाया जाता है यह मुल्क ऐसा मुल्क है कि जिसके अन्दर सब तरह का क़ानून रह चुका है । कौनसा ऐसा सोशल सिस्टम है जिसको हमने ट्राई नहीं किया । कल ही डाक्टर अम्बेदकर साहब ने फरमाया था कि कुछ स्मृतियों में दर्ज है कि लड़कियों को लड़कों

के साथ एक तरह से heir हेयर करार दिया जाय। इसलिए यह तो पहले से मौजूद ही था। इसके अलावा भी मैं नहीं जानता कि कौनसा ऐसा कानून है जो आज नया कानून कहलाया जा सकता है। डाइवोर्स आज बहुत सी जगह मौजूद है। पुरानी स्मृतियों के देखने से मालूम होता है कि उनमें भी डाइवोर्स का जिक्र है। सिर्फ इसी वजह से कि यह उसूल पुरानी स्मृतियों में मिलते हैं मैं यह मानने को तैयार नहीं हूँ कि हमको उन्हीं उसूलों पर वापस चला जाना चाहिए। अगर वह उसूल हमारे ख्याल में आज के लिए ठीक नहीं हैं तो उन उसूलों को क्यों कायम रखा जाय। मैं जानता हूँ कि हिन्दुस्तान के अन्दर ऐसा भी जमाना था जब शादी का इन्स्टीट्यूशन ही हिन्दुस्तान में नहीं था और लोग शादी को नहीं जानते थे। हिन्दुस्तान के अन्दर नियोग का सिलसिला पहले असें तक जारी रहा। हिन्दू ला (Law) में आठ तरह की शादियों का जिक्र है। इन शादियों में से कुछ को तो शादी के नाम से मसूब भी नहीं किया जा सकता। क्या कोई कह सकता है कि उन उसूलों को इस जमाने में वापस लाया जाना चाहिए। मैं समझता हूँ हर्गिज नहीं। मैं इस वास्ते इस सवाल को जो आज हमारे सामने पेश है इस नुक्ते ख्याल से नहीं देखना चाहता हूँ कि पुराने जमाने में क्या चीज मौजूद थी और किस तरह हमारे बुजुर्ग अपने कानूनों को बना कर अपनी सोसाइटी को रेग्युलेट करते थे। मेरे सामने सवाल यह है कि आज के जमाने में हमारी नीड्स (needs) के मुताबिक, हमारे लीगल कन्सेप्शन (legal conception) के मुताबिक, हमारी जरूरियात के मुताबिक हमें किस चीज की जरूरत है। इस कोड के मुतालिक मुल्क के अन्दर एक बड़ी सकत कशमकश रेस्टलेसनेस (restlessness) और अनईजीनेस (uneasiness) पैदा हो गई है। कुछ औरतें यह कहती हैं कि हम मर्दों के बराबर हक लेंगी। यह औरतों का कोड है। कुछ लोग यह कहते हैं कि नहीं हर्गिज औरतों को कोई हक नहीं। मैं इस हाउस में निहायत आजिजी से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि जब तक इस बिल का सवाल पेश है हमें हर्गिज किसी स्लोगन (Slogan) पर या किसी ऐसी बात पर ध्यान न देना चाहिए कि यह औरतों के हक में है या मर्दों के हक में है। हमें ठंडे दिल से देखना चाहिए कि क्या यह रवैया ठीक है। कौन आदमी यह कह सकता है कि वह एक मां के पेट से पैदा नहीं है, और कौन औरत कह सकती है कि वह एक मर्द की बेटी नहीं है। इस वास्ते क्या ऐसे मामले में हम अपनी बहनों के साथ, अपनी लड़कियों के साथ और अपनी माओं के साथ ठीक सलूक नहीं करेंगे। क्या आज हमारी माएँ, वहन और लड़कियाँ यह डिमांड करती हैं कि वह मर्दों के साथ, अपने भाई, बाप और लड़कों

के साथ ठीक सलूक नहीं करेंगे। इसलिए इस मामले में किसी सख्त (bitter) कंट्रोवर्सी (controversy) के लाने की जरूरत नहीं है। मैं समझता हूँ कि यह एक बड़ा नाजुक सवाल है। इसे हम ठीक तरीके से और ठंडे दिल से देखें।

पेशतर इसके कि मैं इस के ऊपर आगे चलूँ एक सवाल के बारे में दो एक बातें अर्ज कर देना चाहता हूँ ताकि कम से कम हाउस के मेम्बरान और खुसूसन मरी बहिनें इस बात को न समझें कि मैं किसी खस ख्याल को लेकर इस बिल की मुखालिफत करता हूँ या सपोर्ट करता हूँ। मैं शुरू में ही अर्ज कर देना चाहता हूँ कि मैं उन अशखास में से हूँ जो जानते हैं कि जब तक औरतों को जायदाद मनकूला वगैर मनकूला में हुकूक नहीं मिलेंगे उस वक्त तक औरतों की परसोनेलिटी (personality) का पूरा डेवेलपमेंट (development) नहीं होगा। मैं औरतों के इकानामिक डिपेंडेंस (economic dependence) का सख्त मुखालिफ हूँ। मुझे सीता जी का वह श्लोक पसन्द नहीं, जिसमें उन्होंने कहा है :

मितं ददाति हि पिता मितं भ्राता मितं सुतः

अमितस्यतु दातारं भर्तारम् का न पूजयेत् ॥

मैं रामायण की परसितिश करता हूँ लेकिन मैं इस उसूल को एक मिनट के वास्ते भी मानने को तैयार नहीं हूँ कि औरतों को हमेशा के लिए डिपेंडेंट (dependent) रखा जाय। जैसा कि चन्द स्मृतियों में लिखा है कि जबतक औरत की शादी न हो तब तक वह अपने बाप के काबू में रहे, शादी के बाद अपने खांविद के काबू में रहे और अगर वह बेवा हो जाय तो अपने बेटे के काबू में रहे, मैं इसके मानने के लिए एक मिनट को भी तैयार नहीं हूँ।

इस वजह से नहीं कि यह औरतों के वास्ते दुःखदाई है। मैं जानता हूँ कि जबतक इस देश के अन्दर औरतें जवर्दस्त परसोनेलिटी हासिल नहीं करेंगी, जबतक औरतें इकनोमिकली (economically) अपनी हालत ठीक न करेंगी और जबतक हर तरह से उनकी हालत ठीक नहीं होती तो हमारी नसल की तरक्की नहीं होगी। औरतों को हर तरीके से मर्दों की तरह तरक्की का मौका दिया जाय। मेरा ख्याल है कि छोटे नुक्ते ख्याल से देखना इस सवाल को हरगिज जायज नहीं है। हमें दूरदर्शी बनकर सारी जाती व देश के भले के दृष्टिकोण से इसको तै करना है। हम हजारों वर्षों से हिन्दुस्तान में जितनी चीजें रायज हैं मानते चले आये हैं और आज भी हम उनको (preserve) प्रिजर्व किये हुए हैं। लेकिन साथ ही हमें यह देखना होगा कि हम कैसे इस दुनिया के अन्दर जो slogans चल रहे हैं कि औरतों को मर्दों के बराबर हकूक मिलें उन पर अमल करें। अगर इस उसूल को पूर्णतया न

भी मानें तो भी हम committed हैं कि मर्दों के बराबर कम से कम उनको तरक्की की गुंजाइश व मौका दें। इस असूल को हमको अपने सामने रखना होगा। इसलिए मैं साफ तौर पर कहना चाहता हूँ कि औरतों को जायदाद मनकूला और गैर मनकूला में जरूर जायज हकूक मिलें।

मैं इस बात के बेहद हक में हूँ। मैं डाक्टर अम्बेदकर साहब को मुबारकबाद भी देता हूँ कि उन्होंने एबोलिशन आफ कास्ट (abolition of Caste) का असूल शादी व एडोपशन (adoption) में इस बिल में मान लिया है। मेरी जवान में ताकत नहीं है कि मैं यह अर्ज करूँ कि मैं इस सवाल को कितना जरूरी समझता हूँ। मैं इस सवाल को इस तरह से देखता हूँ कि यह एक नेशन बिलडिंग सवाल है। यह हमारी जिन्दगी और मौत का सवाल है। यह असूली चीज है। अगर किसी चीज ने हिन्दुस्तान का सत्यानाश किया और पाकिस्तान बनवाया और हिन्दुस्तान को आगे न बढ़ने दिया वह यह caste system है। अगर कोई नक्स सोसाइटी के अन्दर है, जो इसको घुन की तरह खा रहा है जिसने ब्रह्मणों को दूसरों का दुश्मन बना दिया है, जाटों को गैरजाटों का दुश्मन बना दिया है और क्षत्रियों को तीनों को दुश्मन बना दिया है तो वह यह जात का सवाल है। मैं नहीं चाहता कि हमारे देश में जो महात्मा गांधी देश पिता रास्ता बतला गए हैं कि Classless society बने हम कैसे इस को मानने से इन्कार कर सकते हैं। दो सवाल हैं एक तो रोटी का और दूसरा बेटी का। लोगों को एक करने के लिये बेटी के सवाल का जहाँ तक ताल्लुक है जब तक यह सवाल हल नहीं हो जाता तब तक हिन्दुस्तान की नेशन बिलडिंग का सवाल हल नहीं हो सकता। इस वास्ते मैं, जहाँ तक इस सवाल का ताल्लुक है, इसके बेहद हक में हूँ।

जहाँतक मानोगमी monogamy का सवाल है इसके बरखिलाफ़ शायद ही कोई मेम्बर हो। मैं जानता हूँ कि जहाँतक इस मानोगमी के असर का सवाल है, जिस इलाके से मैं आता हूँ वहाँ इसके पास करने से खराब असर पड़ेगा क्योंकि आज भी जरूरत के मुताबिक ऐसा होता है कि जब कोई शख्स मर जाता है तो उसकी बेवा रह जाती है तो उसके छोटे भाई के साथ उसकी शादी हो जाती है। मैं जानता हूँ कि इस आने वाले जमाने के अन्दर हमें यह दकियानूसी रिवाज जो कायम है इस रिवाज को नहीं रखना चाहिये। मैं समझता हूँ कि जिन लोगों को यह एफेक्ट (affect) करेगा अगर उनको अच्छी तरह से इसकी खराबियों को बतलाया जायेगा और समझाया जायेगा तो वह इस चीज को छोड़ने को बिलकुल तैयार हो जायेंगे।

यह जो सवाल आता है मानोगमी का और जिन लोगों के मुताल्लिक में जिक्र कर रहा हूँ, मैं यह कहना चाहता हूँ उन लोगों का ख्याल था कि जिस जमाने में हिन्दुस्तान में विडो मैरेज (widow-marriage) न थी, उन्होंने अपनी जरूरत के मुताबिक इस असूल को माना और इसी हिसाब से बनाया। इसलिए जहाँ तक मानोगमी का सवाल है, जहाँ तक एबोलिशन आफ कास्ट (abolition of Caste) का सवाल है, और जहाँ तक औरतों को हकूक दिये जाने का सवाल है, मैं साफ तौर से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ मैं उनके हक में हूँ।

जहाँ तक डाइवोर्स (Divorce) का सवाल है, मैं जानता हूँ डाइवोर्स का रिवाज बहुत बड़े हिस्से हिन्दुस्तान में मौजूद है। कुछ लोगों की निगाह में, आज के दिन डाइवोर्स कुछ बुरा नजर आता है। दरअसल इस मुल्क के अन्दर जिसके अन्दर हमारे रिवाजों के मुताबिक औरतें सती हो जाती थीं डाइवोर्स की मुखालफ़त कोई ताजुब की बात नहीं। हमारे ख्यालात के मुताबिक शादी अटूट रिवाज कायम करती है और इस मुल्क के ख्याल से डाइवोर्स का हक हमें नहीं देना चाहिये। लेकिन मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि इस मुल्क के अन्दर डाइवोर्स हमेशा से मौजूद रहा है और आज के दिन भी मौजूद है। अगर लोग अपनी आंखें बन्द करके चलना चाहते हैं, नहीं देखना चाहते हैं कि आज दुनिया के चारों तरफ क्या हो रहा है तो उनकी मर्जी है। डाक्टर अम्बेदकर साहब ने हम को बतलाया कि यह रिवाज हमारे यहाँ ९० प्रतिशत है। मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि इससे कुछ थोड़ा ज्यादा है कम नहीं है। जहाँ तक डाइवोर्स का ताल्लुक है और जहाँ तक हिन्दुस्तान में इसका अमल किया जाता है। मैं इसके हक में हूँ। इस वजह से नहीं कि यह आजकल की सोसाइटी में मौजूद है बल्कि इस वजह से कि यह हमारे कस्टम में मौजूद है। इस वास्ते मैं डाइवोर्स के हक में हूँ।

सवाल यह पैदा होता है कि इस हिन्दू कोड बिल में जो सलैक्ट कमेटी से आया है सब से बड़ी मुश्किल यह है कि यह काफ़ी दूर तक नहीं जाता। दरअसल बात यह है कि जो कस्टम हमारे यहाँ मौजूद है और सलैक्ट कमेटी ने जो रिफार्म किये हैं वह बहुत थोड़े हैं, पंजाब के लोग इतने पिछड़े हुए नहीं हैं। पंजाब के लोग हिन्दुस्तान के लोगों से सोशल रिफार्म में बहुत आगे बढ़े हुए हैं। यह कोड उस हद तक नहीं जाता। यह एक तरह से सोशल रिफार्म उनके लिए नहीं है बल्कि उनको पीछे की तरफ ले जाता है। अगर इस कोड को पंजाब के किसी दहात में हिन्दू या सिक्ख को दिखाया जायेगा तो वह कहेगा कि "अरे साहब आप यह क्या कर रहे हैं हमको तो आप बहुत पीछे फेंके दे रहे हैं। हम तो इससे बहुत आगे बढ़े हुए हैं। इससे तो आप हमको पीछे की तरफ ले जाना चाहते हैं"। इससे पंजाब के लोगों को फायदा नहीं होगा।

श्री मोहन लाल गौतम : कोई मिसाल दीजिये।

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : मिसाल तो मैं अभी अर्ज करता हूँ। मैं जनाब की इज़ाज़त से इस तमहीद के बाद यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि मुझको इस बिल के बारे में क्या क्या ऐतराज करने हैं और किस हद तक इस बिल को सपोर्ट करना है। बहुत सारे प्रावीजन्स इस बिल में ऐसे हैं कि जिनके बारे में शायद कोई खिलाफ़ न हों। बहुत ही कम ऐसे आदमी होंगे जो यह कहें कि हम इसके सारे प्रावीजन्स के खिलाफ़ हैं। लेकिन जनाब वाला, आप इस बिल को पढ़ें तो इसमें १७ में से ११ मेम्बरों के नोट्स आफ़ डिसेंट हैं और वह लोग कौन हैं। वंह हैं मिसेज़ अम्बू स्वामीनाथन, और श्रीमती रेनुका रे। इन दोनों के नोट्स आफ़ डिसेंट हैं।

Shrimati Renuka Ray : These notes are not on fundamental principles.

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : I am coming to that. सच पूछिये तो जो इन ११ आदमियों ने नोट्स आफ़ डिसेंट लिखे हैं वह खुद इस बिल की, जैसा कि यह सिलेक्ट कमेटी से आया है मुखालिफ़त करते हैं। मैं अर्ज कर रहा था कि इनमें किन किन के नोट्स आफ़ डिसेंट हैं। इनमें नोट आफ़ डिसेंट हैं बरूशी टेकचन्द जी का जिन्होंने सारी उम्र सोशल रिफ़ार्म का काम किया है और जो बहुत हद तक सोशल रिफ़ार्म के लिये आगे जाने को तैयार हैं। जब वह भी नोट आफ़ डिसेंट लिखते हैं तो हमारे लिये सोचने की बात है कि हम कहाँ जा रहे हैं। अगर इन नोट्स आफ़ डिसेंट को पढ़ा जाय तो मालूम हो जायगा कि दर असल यन् जो बिल सिलेक्ट कमेटी से आया है इसकी कम अज़ कम पूरे तौर पर १७ में से ११ आदमी मुखालिफ़त करते हैं। अब मैं इस तमहीद के बाद यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि क्यों इस बिल के लिये इस सूरत में मैं ऐसे मोशन्स को मूव करने को तैयार हूँ जो आम तौर पर यह ख्याल किये जाते हैं कि डायलेटरी (Dilatory) हैं।

मिस्टर टिचमल حسین : میں حضور! ایک پوائنٹ آف انفارمیشن چاہتا ہوں۔ میرے انریبل ممبر فرماتے ہیں کہ ۱۸ ممبر جو سلیکٹ کمیٹی کے تھے انہیں سے ۱۱ نے نوٹ آف ڈسینٹ لکھا ہے۔ اگر وہ اس بل کے خلاف ہیں تب میں یہ جاننا چاہتا ہوں انریبل ممبر سے کہ یہ بل سلیکٹ کمیٹی سے کیوں کر دکیفٹ ہو کر آیا کہ ہم لوگ اسکو پاس کر دیں۔

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : मेरे ख्याल में डिप्टी स्पीकर साहब, यह सवाल न इनफ़ार्मेशन का है और न कोई पाइन्ट आफ़ और्डर ही है। अब आप इस बिल को देख लीजिये। इसमें मिस्टर भारती ने भी नोट आफ़ डिसेंट लिखा है।

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Mine is a little ahead of the Bill. I want to enlarge the scope of the Bill. That is my dissenting minute.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Should honourable members go on explaining every remark and every sentence? It is not necessary.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: No, Sir, I was.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member's note of dissent is in print. He will have his turn if he wants to offer any explanation. It is no good going on interrupting a speaker and other honourable Members also be simultaneously standing up.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: May I say, Sir.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have heard the honourable member sufficiently.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: On a point of personal explanation, Sir?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, order.

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : जनाब वाला, मैं भारती साहब को तकलीफ़ नहीं दूंगा कि वह अपने नुक्ते ख्याल को हाउस के सामने रखें। मैं खुद ही रखे देता हूँ जो नोट मिस्टर भारती साहब का है वह यह है कि वह इस बिल के उसूलों के मुखालिफ़ नहीं हैं। वह चाहते हैं कि लाजिकली (Logically) सब औरतों को यह अख्तियार दिया जाय, कि जिनकी लिमिटेड एस्टेट है उन सब को वह चाहते हैं कि एक्सोल्यूट ओनर (absolute owner) फ़ौरन बना दिया जाय।

I am correct, I think.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: I am not permitted to reply.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member Pandit Bhargava may go on.

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : इसीलिए मैं जनाब से अर्ज कर रहा था कि यह बिल जिस तरह से आया है इसके अन्दर बहुत से मेम्बरान ने जो सिलेक्ट कमेटी

मैं थे डिसेंटिंग नोट्स लिखे हैं। यह नोट्स किस स्थान से लिखे थे यह मैं आयन्दा आगे चलकर बयान करूंगा और मैं चाहता हूँ कि मुझे बीच में इंटरप्ट (interrupt) न किया जाय।

मैं, जनाब वाला, अर्ज कर रहा था कि वावजूद इसके कि यह बिल जितना दूर जाता है उसके आगे मैं सोशल रिफार्म में जाने को तैयार हूँ, फिर भी मैं इस काबिल अपने को नहीं पाता कि मैं इस बिल की पूरे तौर से सपोर्ट करूँ। और यह नैचुरल (natural) है। आखिर डाक्टर अम्बेदकर साहब जिनकी मेहरबानी से यह बिल इस शक्ल में आया है और जिन्होंने एक ऐसी तकरीर फरमाई है कि जिससे हर एक हिन्दुस्तानी, हिन्दू का सिर ऊँचा होता है, वह भी इसके सारे प्रावीजन्स के सपोर्ट में नहीं है। इसीलिए उन्होंने फरमाया कि कई जगह सिलेक्ट कमेटी रीजन (reason) के बाहर चली गई है। मैं इससे ज्यादा सख्त लफ्ज़ इस्तेमाल नहीं करना चाहता। लेकिन मैं यह कहता हूँ कि वह भी इसके खिलाफ हैं और इस तरह १२ नोट इसके डिसेंट में हैं। तो मैं यह अर्ज कर रहा था कि जब १७ में से १२ इसके खिलाफ हैं तो ऐसी सूरत में हाउस को ताज्जुब नहीं होना चाहिए अगर मैं मजीद-दीन साहब ने जो अमेन्डमेंट पेश की उसकी ताईद करना चाहता हूँ।

वजह साफ है मैं नहीं चाहता कि मुझे कोई साहब मिसअंडरस्टैंड (misunderstand) करें। इस बिल में बहुत से ऐसे सेक्शन्स हैं जिनके लिए मैं नहीं चाहता कि उनके पास होने में एक मिनट की भी देर लगे। अगर उनका यह मोशन डाइलेटरी (dilatory) होता तो मैं ताईद नहीं करता। मेरे भी बहुत से मोशन्स डाइलेटरी नहीं थे। मैं जानता हूँ कि यह बिल इस असेम्बली में यानी इस सेशन में पास होने वाला नहीं है। इसको पास करने के लिए इस असेम्बली का एक और स्पेशल सेशन करना होगा। वह अगले ६ महीने तक होगा। मैं जो एतराज कर रहा हूँ वह इस ६ महीने के अरसे में आसानी से तय हो सकता है।

मैं जनाब की इजाजत से यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि मैं यह नहीं चाहता कि यह बिल वापस सिलेक्ट कमेटी के सुपुर्द न किया जाय और इसके वास्ते वजूहात बिल्कुल डिफरेंट हैं। शायद कुछ अशख्वास के दिल में यह हो कि मैं यह चाहता हूँ कि यह बिल किसी तरह खत्म हो जाय। मैं इस बिल को खत्म करना नहीं चाहता। मैं चाहता हूँ कि यह बिल पास हो। मैं यह चाहता हूँ कि इसके अन्दर जितनी अच्छी अच्छी चीजें हैं उन सब को कबूल कर लें। इसलिये इस बिल को ठंडे दिल से देखने की जरूरत है। इसमें होट पैदा करने की जरूरत नहीं है। इसलिये मैं जो कुछ अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ उसे मैं चाहता हूँ कि आप ठंडे दिल से सुनें और मैं समझता हूँ कि डाक्टर अम्बेदकर उसे मिसअंडरस्टैंड नहीं करेंगे।

मैं निहायत आजजी से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ, लड़ाई के तौर पर अर्ज करना नहीं चाहता। लेकिन जो कहना चाहता हूँ उसको कहने की मुझे ज़रूरत होनी चाहिये और मैं चाहता हूँ कि दूसरे शब्द उसको कम से कम जनरसली (generously) नहीं तो फेयरली इंटरप्रेट (fairly interpret) करें। मेरी गुज़ारिश अदब के साथ यह है और मैं इसको कम वक्त नहीं देता हूँ। मैं अब यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ, जैसा कि हाउस के हर एक मेम्बर को मालूम है कि नये इलेक्शन्स होने वाले हैं। जो कोई मेम्बर यहां आये है यह इनडाइक्ट इलेक्शन से तशरीफ लाये हैं, डाइरेक्ट इलेक्शन और अडल्ट सफ़रेज (adult suffrage) से हमारे वाद लोग आने वाले हैं। कांस्टिट्यूएंट असेम्बली में हमने एक रिज़ोल्यूशन पास किया था। उसके मुताबिक सन् १९५० में इलेक्शन हो जावेंगे। तो उस वक्त मैं यह कहने को तैयार हूँ, जैसा कि जनाब वाला ने फरमाया था कि यह बिल्कुल सावरेन (sovereign) बाडी है। लेकिन ताहम प्रोप्रायटी के असूल पर मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि ऐसे मसले पर जिसके अन्दर ३० करोड़ आदमियों की रोज़ मर्रा की जिन्दगी के सवाल पर हम फ़ैसला करने वाले हैं। तो यह बेहतर होगा कि जो लोग डाइरेक्ट इलेक्शन से और अडल्ट सफ़रेज से आने वाले हैं वह इस पर फ़ैसला करें। मैं अर्ज करूंगा कि यह मुनासिब होगा।

मैं प्रोप्रायटी के असूल पर अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ। कुछ लोग यह महसूस करते हैं कि यह असेम्बली सिर्फ कांस्टिट्यूशन बना सकती है। यह वही आर्गुमेंट (argument) है जो कल दिया गया था कि जब बारह लड़कों में जायदाद तकसीम होने पर फ़ैगमेंटेशन (fragmentation) नहीं होता है तो एक लड़की में और तकसीम करने पर भी नहीं हो सकता है। मैं कहता हूँ कि, 'one wrong cannot justify another'। श्री मोहन लाल गौतम फरमाते हैं कि असेम्बली को कांस्टिट्यूशन बनाने का अधिकार भी नहीं है मैं इसको नहीं मानता लेकिन अगर आप मानते हैं तो आप, उस गलती को दोहरा क्यों रहे हैं। यह बहुत ग़लत है। अगर यह असूल आपका नहीं है तो दूसरी बात है। मेरी राय में कांस्टिट्यूशन फ़्रेम (frame) करने वाली यह असेम्बली सावरेन बाडी है। यह बिल्कुल लीगल है। और इसी तरह इस हाउस को पूरा अख्तियार है कि वह जो चाहे आज कानून पास करे। लेकिन ताहम सिर्फ प्रोप्रायटी की, सिर्फ इसी चीज़ की मुनासिबत का तकाज़ा है कि हम इसमें जल्दी न करें। हजारों बर्षों से हम इन्हीं असूलों पर चलते आये हैं और मेरा इस वास्ते यह कहना है कि छः महीने के अर्से में आसमान नहीं गिर पड़ेगा कि हम अभी जल्दी करके फ़ौरन इसको पास कर दें। इसलिये मैं निहायत अदब से अर्ज करूंगा कि जैसा कि जनाब वाला ने अपने डिसेंटिंग नोट में लिखा है, इसमें बारह आदमियों, बारह राशियों में से एक राशि आपकी है और आप के साथ बाबू रामनारायणसिंह ने इसके अन्दर सफ़ह ११ पर लिखा है।

"The members have been elected indirectly and have no mandate from the electorate. The mass of opinion and the majority is against most of the provisions of the Bill and the Bill seeks to alter the fundamental structure of the Hindu Society."

मैं अदब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि इन्साफ़ यह चाहता है कि डाइरेक्ट चुनाव के प्रतिनिधियों को मौका दिया जाना चाहिये कि वह ऐसेम्बली में आकर इसका फ़ैसला करें। हमारे निहायत मोहतरम और हमारे देश के सच्चे लीडर डा० राजेन्द्र प्रसाद ने भी इस उसूल को मान कर एक लेटर लिखा था कि यह सारे का सारा बिल आने वाली ऐसेम्बली के सामने आये।

مسٹر تعجل حسین : گورنر جنرل نے جو لکھا تھا وہ کیا تھا ؟

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव : हुजूर, गवर्नर जनरल साहब की निस्वत जो आप कहते हैं उसका जिक्र यहां आचुका है। लेकिन मैं निहायत अदब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि मैं वुजों की राय की पूरी वक़्त, पूरी इज्जत करता हूँ। इस मामले में आज मेरा ताल्लुक है, हर एक औरत का ताल्लुक है जो गांव में रहती है। हर एक इन्सान इससे मुतासिर होगा इसलिये हर एक को अपनी राय देने का हक़ हासिल है। मैं जो नहीं मानता हूँ वह यह है जो कल मेरी बहन सुचेता कृपलानी ने फ़रमाया था कि इस ढंग से सदियां बीत जायेंगी। दस बरस से यह कानून बन रहा है। सन १९४८ में यह बनाया गया था। यह आर्गुमेंट मुझे अपील नहीं करता। क्या मैं पूछ सकता हूँ कि इस देश में कितनी लिट्रेसी है? क्या मैं पूछ सकता हूँ कि इस देश के अन्दर औरतें कितनी लिट्रेट हैं? मैं कहना चाहता हूँ अपनी बहनों से जो यहां की मेम्बर हैं, जो मेरी बहनें यहां पर हैं उनकी राय का मुझ पर असर है, लेकिन मैं अर्ज करूंगा कि इस मामले में उनकी हज़ारों बहनें जो गांव और शहरों में रहती हैं क्या उनको राय देने का हक़ हासिल है। इस वास्ते मैं अर्ज करूंगा अपनी बहनों से कि उनको इस बारे में अपने ऊपर थोड़ा सा सत्र से काम लेना चाहिये, थोड़ी रिस्ट्रेंट से काम लना चाहिये। अगर मैं अर्ज करूँ कि उनकी राय भी इसमें शामिल की जाय जिन्हें अपनी राय देने का पूरा हक़ है, तो उसे जुर्म न समझा जाय। मैं अदब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि इस मामले में हरगिज़ हरगिज़ गांव वालों और शहरवालों को यह पता नहीं है कि यह क्या बिल है और उसकी क्या प्राविजन्स हैं। लोग कहते हैं वाह वाह। मैं अदब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि उन लोगों को जिन्होंने इस बिल की प्राविजन्स को नहीं देखा है, बहुत से मेम्बर इस हाउस के हैं जिन्होंने इसको महसूस नहीं किया है कि इसकी अहमियत क्या है।

Shrimati G. Durgabai When you consider women of this country fit enough to understand the provisions of your other Bills for reform, don't you think they will be able to understand the provisions of this Bill?

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव I welcome this interruption, because it gives me an opportunity to explain the real point.

जनाबवाला, एतराज किया गया है कि किसी ज़माने में सती का बिल पास हुआ, किसी ज़माने में विडो मैरिज (Widow Marriage) बिल पास हुआ, शारदा ऐक्ट पास हुआ और इस मर्तबे भी इस हाउस की खिदमत में जो बिल रखा हुआ है, वह इस नौईयत का है जिसके अन्दर मिसेज़ दुर्गा धाई के मुताबिक किसी कदर इस लेवेल (level) से ऊंचा है जो आम आदमी के रायों के मुताबिक पास हो।

Mr. Tajamul Husain: May I be allowed to move a point of order?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: What is the point of order, please?

Mr. Tajamul Husain: My point of order is this, Sir, that the contempt of the whole House has been committed by my honourable friend in this way; you heard him out and he says that there are members of this House who have not understood the Hindu Code Bill. This amounts to a contempt of the House and I want a ruling on this.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think that there is anything in this point of order. All that the honourable Member means is that the full implications of the Bill may be understood differently by different sections of the people. According to him they have not been understood in the manner in which he would like honourable Member to understand it.

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव : इसके अलावा मेरा हरगिज़ जनाबवाला, यह क्लेम नहीं है, मैं हरगिज़ यह अर्ज करने को तैयार नहीं हूँ कि मैंने इस बिल की प्राविजन्स को और मेम्बरों से ज्यादा समझा है। मैं अपनी वावत यह अर्ज करने को तैयार हूँ कि इस बिल के सारे इम्प्लीकेशन्स (implications) सारे क्लाजेज सारे मेम्बरों के खसूसन मैं, अपने बारे में कह सकता हूँ कि मैंने इसके प्राविजन्स को पूरी तरह नहीं समझा है। और जो साहबान यहां वकील नहीं हैं वह कह सकते हैं कि उन्होंने सारा समझा है लेकिन जो यहां वकील मौजूद हैं वह अपने दिल पर हाथ रख कर नहीं कह सकते कि यह जो सेलेक्ट कमेटी से बिल आया है उसके पूरे प्राविजन्स को समझा है। इस हाउस के अन्दर मुझे इजाजत नहीं है, लेकिन अगर मुझे इजाजत दी जाय तो मैं मिस्टर तजम्मूल हुसैन से दो तीन सवाल करना चाहता हूँ और वह जवाब दें कि वह समझते हैं या नहीं। मेरा हरगिज़ मन्ना नहीं है कि मैं हाउस की बेइज्जती करूँ। मैं निहायत अदब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि मेरा हरगिज़ मन्ना नहीं है...

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Every citizen is presumed to know the law, every honourable Member is presumed to have read this Bill. The honourable Member can go on with his speech.

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव: मैं जनाबवाला की खिदमत में अर्ज कर रहा था इस तमहीद के बाद मैं अर्ज कर रहा था कि क्यों मैं नज़ीरउद्दीनसाहब के ऐमेन्डमेंट के हक में हूँ। मैंने कुछ बातें जनाब की खिदमत में अर्ज कीं कि चूंकि हाउस उतना रिप्रेजेन्टेटिव नहीं है जितना कल होना है, और इसमें बहुत दूर का वक्फ़ा नहीं है, चन्द महीने के बाद नया हाउस आजायेगा। इस लिये बहुत मुनासिब होता। लेकिन इससे भी बड़ी जो वज़ह है वह यह है कि जनाबवाला को यह साफ़ ज़ाहिर है कि आज Properties में दो तरह की चीज़ें हैं। एक लैंड्स (Lands) और दूसरी हाउसेज़ (Houses). जहाँ तक लैंड्स का ताल्लुक है वहाँ तक यह बिल लैंड्स को हाथ नहीं लगाता। हर एक शरूस् का सक्सेशन, इनहेरिटेन्स खुसूसन हिन्दुस्तान में जो एक ऐग्रीकल्चरल कंट्री है जिसके अन्दर नब्बे फीसदी लोग गांव में रहते हैं उसके अन्दर क्या इसका नतीज़ा होगा। अगर एक शरूस् मर जायगा तो उसकी ज़मीन एक कानून से गवर्न (govern) होगी और मकान जो गांव के अन्दर है वह एक दूसरे कानून से गवर्न होगा। आज मेरे साथ क्या होगा। मैं दिल्ली में थोड़ी सी ज़ायदाद अगर रखता हूँ तो मेरी यह ज़ायदाद एक कानून से गवर्न होगी और बहादुरगढ़ की ज़मीन की ज़ायदाद दूसरे कानून से गवर्न होगी। मरा मकान बहादुरगढ़ के खेत में बना हुआ एक कानून से गवर्न होगा और दिल्ली का मकान दूसरे कानून से। क्या यही युनिफार्मिटी (Uniformity) है? अगर इस किस्म की चीज़ रखी जाती है तो इसका नतीज़ा क्या होगा। बहादुरगढ़ में एक अप्वाइन्टमेंट आफ हेअर (appointment of heir) होता है जिसको हिन्दुकोड रिक्गनाइज़ नहीं करता तो वह लड़का जो अप्वाइन्टेड हेअर (appointed heir) है वह ज़मीन का मालिक तो होगा जो बहादुरगढ़ में है, लेकिन मरने वाले के मकान पर और आदमी का दावा होगा। लड़का ज़मीन पायेगा लेकिन मकान पर उसका दावा नहीं रहेगा तो आखिर वह लड़का कहाँ जायेगा।

इस बिल का असर यह होगा कि यह लैंड्स को अप्लाई नहीं करेगा। मैं समझता हूँ कि डाक्टर अम्बेदकर चाहते हैं कि एक नया कानून पास करें जिसमें इकानमिक होल्डिंग बनाये जा सकें और मामूली आदमी की ज़मीन के टुकड़ न हों। लेकिन वह कानून कब आयेगा, अवलीशन आफ ज़मींदारी कब होगा, इसका मुझे पता नहीं।

Shrimati Renuka Ray: You can introduce such a Bill immediately.

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव:—मैं अदब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि दुनिया में इरादे ऐसी आसानी से पूरे नहीं होते जैसा कि मेरी बहिन का ख्याल है कि महज बिल लाने से यह इरादा पूरा हो जायगा। यह एक ऐसा बिल है जो कि देश की भलाई के लिए है, पर इसमें कितनी अड़चनें पड़ रही हैं। जो ज़मीन का बिल होगा जिसमें कि सबके हक छीने जायेंगे उसमें कितना असां लगेगा और वह कहाँ पास होगा। यह तो प्राविंशियल गवर्नमेंट के अख्तियार में है। मैं चाहता हूँ कि हम अपने कांस्टीट्यूशन में ऐसा चेंज करें कि जहाँ तक लैंड का सवाल है वह भी कांस्टीट्यूशन के ज़रिये सेंट्रल गवर्नमेंट के अख्तियार में हो। अगर यह बिल पास होगया तो मैं यह खराबी देखता हूँ कि सिकनी ज़ायदाद तो इसके अन्दर आती है और ज़मीन इसके अन्दर नहीं आती। यह एक सस्त कनफ्यूजन (confusion) है। पहले बिल में अब यह चेंज कर दिया गया है कि अब यह बिल सेंट्रली एडमिनिस्टर्ड एरियाज़ (centrally administered areas) की ज़मीन को भी एप्लाई करेगा, यानी अजमेर मेरवाड़ा और देहली के मकानात और ज़मीन दोनों पर यह लागू होगा। और बाकी प्राविंसेज़ में यह ज़मीनों को एप्लाई नहीं होता। देहली और अजमेर मेरवाड़ा में यह गावों की ज़ायदाद और शहरों की ज़ायदाद को एप्लाई होगा। इसका यह बड़ा भारी नुक़स है जो इसके बोटम bottom को निकाल देता है।

अभी लोगों को मालूम नहीं है कि इस बिल का उन पर क्या असर होगा। इसी लिए मैंने अर्ज किया था कि इसका पूरा पब्लीकेशन नहीं हुआ है। मैं जानता हूँ कि अगर आज लोगों को पता लगे कि इस कानून के ज़रिये उनके ला आफ इनहेरिटेन्स (Law of inheritance) में इतना सख्त और फंडामेंटल चेंज किया जा रहा है कि जिसका असर हिन्दुस्तान के हर एक खानदान पर पड़ेगा, तो एक दफा सारे हिन्दुस्तान से लोग दिल्ली में आकर अपनी दरखास्त पेश करेंगे और चाहेंगे कि यह कानून पास न किया जाय। बहुत से लोगों को इल्म नहीं है। इसका इल्म मेम्बरों को है, बार एसोसिएशन्स (Bar Associations) को है और कुछ अखबार पढ़ने वालों को है। आप समझ सकते हैं कि इन लोगों की तादाद कितनी कम है। इस किस्म का बिल जो सारी हिन्दू सोसाइटी पर असर रखता है, इस का काफी सर्कुलेशन नहीं किया गया और न इस पर राय ली गई है। एक कमेटी बनी थी, उसने बहुत जगह गवाहियां लीं और उसकी रिपोर्ट मेरे हाथ में है। अगर आप देखेंगे कि वह कहाँ गये, उन्होंने क्या किया और किसकी राय ली, तो मालूम होगा कि उसने सिर्फ़ कुछ बूढ़े

बड़े और पढ़े लिखे लोगों की राय ली है और देश के ज्यादातर हिस्से की राय नहीं ली है। इस में पढ़े लिखे होने का सवाल नहीं है। इसके बारे में तो हर बाप और मां जो अपनी जिम्मेदारियां जानता है राय दे सकता है। इससे तो हर एक आदमी एफेक्टेड (affected) है और हर एक आदमी राय देने के काबिल है। इसके अलावा मैं अर्ज करूंगा कि जो तबदीलियां असली बिल में सिलेक्ट कमेटी ने की हैं उनका तो इल्म किसी आदमी को नहीं है। सिर्फ असेम्बली के मेम्बरों को इसका पता है, बाकी किसी को इसका पता नहीं है कि सिलेक्ट कमेटी ने क्या क्या तबदीलियां की हैं। तो यह सवाल पैदा होता है कि चूंकि सिलेक्ट कमेटी ने इसमें तबदीलियां कर दी हैं इसलिए इसका सरकुलेशन बहुत जरूरी होगया है। उस पुराने सवाल को छोड़िये कि कोई कानून भी कस्टम में बहुत जल्दी तबदीली न करे, जबतक कि उन बहुत से लोगों की राय न ली जाय जो कि उससे एफेक्टेड होते हों। आज जो कानून लाया जा रहा है उसमें सिलेक्ट कमेटी ने ऐसी तबदीलियां कर दी हैं जो कि वाइटल (vital) हैं और जिनका कि इल्म हर एक शख्स को होना चाहिए। इसी लिए सरकुलेशन और भी ज्यादा जरूरी है।

पेशतर इसके कि मैं उन तबदीलियों के मुतालिक कुछ जिक्र करूं मैं हाउस की तबज्जह एक चीज की तरफ दिलाना चाहता हूं। मुझे अफसोस है कि ला डिपार्टमेंट जो कि कानून का पुतला है क्योंकि उसका नाम ही ला डिपार्टमेंट है, वही लोग कानून की परवाह नहीं करते। जब वही लोग एक ऐसा प्रोसीड्योर कायम करते हैं जो कि उनको नहीं करना चाहिए था तो मुझे कहना होगा

گو کفر از کعبه خیزد کجا بود مسلمانے

मैं उस सवाल को टच (touch) नहीं करना चाहता जिसका फैसला आपके प्रेडिसेसर ने कर दिया है। वह सवाल फैसल हो चुका है। वह रूलिंग मेरे वास्ते फाइनल (final) है। मैं उसको क्वेश्चन (question) नहीं करता। मैं उस रूलिंग की बहुत इज्जत करता हूं जो कि मैं जानता हूं कि उनका वह रूलिंग मेरे ब्याल के मुताबिक दुरुस्त नहीं था। लेकिन मैं उसको क्वेश्चन नहीं करना चाहता।

Mr. Tajamul Husain: No one can say inside the House that the ruling of the Chair is wrong.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry the honourable Member has not understood Mr. Bhargava at all. What he says is that he does not agree with the ruling but he cannot question the ruling here. It is open to any member to think for himself and also to say that in his opinion he does not accept it, but he is bound by the ruling. I think there is nothing wrong.

पंडित ठाकुर दास भार्गव: जनाववाला, मुझे अफसोस है कि जब मेरे लायक दोस्त तजम्मूल हुसैन कोई पाइंट आफ आर्डर उठाते हैं तो वह एक मिनट भी कायम नहीं रहता। मैं चाहता हूं वह कोई ऐसा पाइंट आफ आर्डर उठाये कि जिसका मैं भी जवाब दे सकूँ। मुझे मालूम है कि वह इस वक्त एक दूसरे मेम्बर नाहव से यह पूछ रहे हैं कि यह बिल लैंड्स पर एप्लाइ होता है या नहीं और दिखाते और कहते यह हैं कि मैं इस कोड बिल को समझता हूं। तो मैं यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूं कि मैं बिल्कुल अपने राइट्स में हूँ कि मैं यह कहूँ कि मैं उस रूलिंग से मुल्खलिफ राय रखता हूँ, मैं चन्द एक दूसरे उमूल पेश करना चाहता हूँ जिनको स्पीकर साहब की रूलिंग ने टच भी नहीं किया है। मैं हाउस की तबज्जह निहायत आजिजी के साथ खास तौर पर इस तरफ दिलाना चाहता हूँ कि यह हाउस जो कि कानून बनाने वाला हाउस है यह अपने कानून का मालिक है। हमारा कोई मामला मुल्क की किसी कोर्ट के सामने नहीं जा सकता। अगर यह हाउस एक कानून के बनाने में अपने उमूलों को छोड़ देता है तो हम एक ऐसी गलती करते हैं कि हम उसकी जिम्मेदारी से बरी नहीं हो सकते। मैं अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि अभी जो यह रिड्राफ्टेड (redrafted) बिल सिलेक्ट कमेटी की रिपोर्ट में आया है उसमें हमने जो गलतियां की हैं वह तीन तरह की हैं। अब्बल यह कि जब एक बिल हाउस के सामने आ जाय, हाउस के पोजेशन (possession) में आ जाय, और हाउस के अन्दर इंट्रोड्यूस हो जाय, उसके बाद सिवा हाउस के कोई मेम्बर, खाह वह कितना ही बड़ा हो, कितना ही अच्छा हो, वह वगैर हाउस की मर्जी के एक कामा (comma) को भी तबदील नहीं कर सकता। अगर कोई क्लेरिकल मिस्टेक हो तो और बात है, और वह भी अगर कोई मेटेरियल मिस्टेक हो तो उसको फिर प्रिंट करना पड़ेगा और सरकुलेट करना पड़ेगा और हाउस में फिर पेश होने के बाद किसी कमेटी के सुपद किया जा सकता है। मैं जनाववाला की खिदमत में निहायत अदब के साथ अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि मैं जनाव की खिदमत में दो तीन टेक्नीकल मामले पेश कर रहा हूँ। उनके बारे में मुझे अदब से अर्ज करना पड़ेगा और लोगों की खिदमत में, डाक्टर अम्बेडकर की खिदमत में नहीं क्योंकि वह टेक्निकल रूल्स और टेक्निकल बातों में बाकिफ हैं और वह जानते हैं कि इन टेक्निकल रूल्स को छोड़ देने से कितनी बेइन्माफी हो सकती है। तो मैं अर्ज कर रहा था कि उन टेक्निकल रूल्स को छोड़ देने से सिवा बेइन्माफी के और गैर कानूनी चीज के होने के फायदा होने की कोई चीज नहीं हो सकती। मिस्टर औसलो हाउस आफ कामन्स के एक बड़े मशहूर स्पीकर हो चुके हैं। उन्होंने फरमाया था कि

टेक्निकल रूल्स के खिलाफ कोई काम न हो। टेक्निकल रूल्स माइनारिटीज के प्रोटेक्शन के वास्ते बने हुए हैं, और सारे हाउस के प्रोटेक्शन के वास्ते बने हुए हैं और वह इतने फंडामेंटल हैं कि जब भी उनके बाहर निकला जायगा तो सिवा गलती के और कुछ नहीं हो सकता। यह उसूल मेज़ पार्लियामेंटरी प्रैक्टिस (May's Parliamentary Practice) में दिया हुआ है जो कि मदर आफ पार्लियामेंट्स का उसूल है। वह उसूल यह है कि एक बिल इंट्रोड्यूस होते ही वह इंट्रोड्यूस करने वाले मेम्बर के हाथ से निकल जाता है और हाउस के हाथ में आ जाता है। मैं मेज़ पार्लियामेंटरी प्रैक्टिस (May's Parliamentary Practice) के अल्फाज़ का तर्जमा कर रहा हूँ जो कि मैं पढ़ कर सुनाऊंगा।

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think anybody in the House doubts that any honourable Member even though he may be the mover has got the right to change the Bill when once it has been placed before the House. As I understand it, the Honourable Speaker's ruling is that the very same Bill was considered in the Select Committee. Therefore, there is no good canvassing that position. The Honourable the Law Minister did not say that another Bill was considered in the Select Committee though the other draft which he placed before the Select Committee was considered along with the original Bill. As any honourable Member is entitled to place amendments before the Select Committee, instead of sending piecemeal amendments, according to him, he printed all his amendments and placed them before the Committee. That is the ruling of the Honourable the Speaker. Barring that, the honourable member can go on. Nobody doubts the position stated in May's Parliamentary Practice that it is not open to a member even though he may be the mover of the Bill, to change the Bill when the House is seized of it. The Honourable the Speaker has said this has not been done. We are bound by that; otherwise the honourable Member may go on.

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : मैं सिर्फ इतना अर्ज करना चाहता था और मैं जनाब की राय को सुनकर और भी इस चीज़ पर मजबूत हो गया। आपने फैसला कर दिया है कि अगर किसी तरह यह साबित हो जावे कि फिलवाकेई कोई तरमीम इस मसले पर सलेक्ट कमेटी के खबर नहीं आई और तो मानना चाहिये कि Redraft Bill को कंसिडर नहीं करना चाहिये था। इस वास्ते मैं अर्ज करूंगा कि मुझे फिर जनाब की खिदमत में रूलिंग पेश करने की जरूरत नहीं है। Hansard Vol. 215 जो १८७३ की रूलिंग मेरे पास है जिसके पृष्ठ ३०२ के अन्दर करार दिया गया है कि अगर एक मेम्बर बिल पेश करने का नोटिस देता है और बिल छप जाता है तो दूसरी रीडिंग से पहले वह मेम्बर उस बिल में तबदीली नहीं कर सकता। अगर करता है तो फैसला स्पीकर का यह हुआ कि बिल वापिस लिया जावे—बिल आगे नहीं चल सकता।

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The position of law is accepted; there is no need to canvass that. I do not think the Honourable the Law Minister denies the position of law that he is not entitled to change.....

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker:any comma or semi colon except as accepted by the Select Committee. But, it is open to him to place matters before the Select Committee. I think that was the ruling of the Chair. The honourable Member may go on.

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : जनाब वाला मैं अदब से अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि दूसरा जो ओरिजनल बिल था उसको हाउस के सामने रखा जाय तो मुझे कोई एतराज नहीं होगा। इस तरह से यह बिल हाउस के सामने कनसिडर किया जाता तो किसी को भी एतराज नहीं होता। इस तरह से पेश होने के बाद जो बिल क्लोज वाई क्लोज और वर्ड वाई वर्ड टेक्निकली कनसिडर किया जाना चाहिये था। अगर यह चीज़ नहीं हुई और अगर कोई बिल सलेक्ट कमेटी में भेजा गया और वर्ड वाई वर्ड और क्लोज वाई क्लोज सलेक्ट कमेटी में कनसिडर किया जाय तो मैं उसे अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि अगर महज यह पहला बिल मेम्बर साहब के सामने था, या उनके जेब में था या घर से पढ़ कर आये थे। मैं जनाब का ध्यान पार्लियामेंटरी प्रैक्टिस की तरफ दिलाना चाहता हूँ। किसे सलेक्ट कमेटी के मेम्बर का यह कलेम नहीं है इसके बरखिलाफ। मेरे पास तो मजबूत बज्जुत है और उनकी तरफ मैं जनाब का ध्यान दिलाना चाहता हूँ। सब से अब्बल तो गालिवन मेजरटी रिपोर्ट में लिखा है।

"We confined our deliberation to this redrafted Bill."

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: May I interrupt? This is not correct.

पंडित ठाकुरदास भार्गव : तो इस सेंस में इस सेंस में कहने हैं कि क्लोज वाई क्लोज और वर्ड वाई वर्ड उस सेंस से इस original बिल को कनसिडर नहीं किया है। जिस पापूलर सेंस से हमारे स्पीकर साहब ने इसके ऊपर फरमाया और लोगों के सामने जिस सेंस में मिस्टर बालकृष्ण शर्मा ने हाउस के सामने अर्ज किया, वह बिल हमारे सामने था। मुझे उस पर कोई एतराज नहीं। मैं यह मानने के लिए तैयार हूँ कि जो मिस्टर बालकृष्ण शर्मा और स्पीकर साहब ने फरमाया.....

(English translation of the above speech).

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, the Hindu Code Bill that has throughout India.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In English please.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: As this matter is of vital importance so for this very reason I wish to speak in Hindi.

Dr. Mono Mohan Das (West Bengal: General): We can understand the Hindustani spoken by the Honourable the Minister of Education. It is entirely different from the Hindi or Hindustani spoken by Seth Govind Das or Pt. Thakur Das Bhargava. As beginners we do not know which is Hindustani.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is no set standard which is copied here. Whatever is spoken is Hindustani.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Before I begin my speech, (Honourable members: "English please") as a number of honourable members desire that I should speak in English I have not the least hesitation in paying deference to their wishes. But all the honourable members know that it is easier to express oneself in his own mother tongue rather than in English. So, if they allow me I wish to speak in Hindi. But if they would insist on my speaking in English then I would not have the least objection in commencing my speech in English. (Honourable members: "Hindi, Hindi"). As I think that a majority of the honourable members do not insist upon my speaking in English so I like to speak in Hindi.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): Kindly speak in simple Hindi so that we also may be able to understand.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I will try to speak in simplest Hindi. Today when I have stood up to deliver a speech before the House about the Hindu Code Bill a number of conflicting thoughts are clashing with one another in my heart. At the very outset I beg to submit that I am not one of those people who declare this Hindu Code Bill to be the death knell of the Hindu culture, and Hindu Civilization. I wish that the Hindu culture, the Hindu Society and the Hindu Civilization may survive till eternity till the end of this world. I am, in no way, an opponent to this. I am not at all afraid that this Bill or any other Bill would in the least be able to put the Hindu Culture or Civilization to harm. I wish that those evils that have crept in the Hindu Society since long, and about which Dr. Ambedkar made an appeal before the House in the concluding parts of his speech, may be eradicated; and the appeal may be considered over very thoughtfully with a cool heart. But in fact if the Hindu Society is to be preserved then there is no doubt that if necessity would be felt for repairing the society then repairs will have to be done. I strongly oppose those persons who hold that this Bill would put the Hindu Culture to an end. I am not prepared to acknowledge even for one moment the fact that this Assembly or the honourable members of this House, who have the same ability as the Smritikars of the old, do not have the right of making any changes in our Shastras or Laws. I hold that the members of each and every community have got the fullest rights to frame laws according to the needs of the time. Today if some one makes an appeal that this being an old custom so we must act accordingly; then about such an allegation I would submit that there is not a single custom that India has not experimented with. There are certain places in India where the system of inheritance is quite different from the other parts of India. Do we not know that among the Khasi tribes and in some parts of Southern Punjab the entire institution of inheritance depends upon the fact that the entire property devolves upon the daughters instead of sons. There are certain parts in India where instead of the girl going to her father-in-law's place the husband of the girl is imported into the wife's family. India is such a country where every type of custom and law has been in vogue. Is there any such social system that we have not tried. Only yesterday Dr. Ambedkar told that in some Smrities it is mentioned that daughters should be declared similar heirs along with sons. So this provision was present since long. Apart from this I do not know of any other law that can be called a new one. Divorce is customary in many places even today. On going through the old Smrities it is found that divorce is mentioned there also. I am not prepared to accept that we must revert to those old ideals simply because for the reason that they are mentioned in the old Smrities. If we think that those ideals do not suit our present day society then why should those ideals be kept up. I know that in India there was a time when even the institution of marriage itself was not in vogue in India, and the people did not know anything about marriages. In olden days the system of Niyog continued for a long time in India. The Hindu Law mentions 8 kinds of marriages. Some of those kinds of marriages can not even be called marriages. Can anyone assert that those ideals should be re-introduced in the present times. I do not think there is any. So I do not want to consider the question that is before us today from this view point as to what was in vogue in the olden days and how our ancestors used to regulate the society by framing laws of their own. The question before me is that in the present times what things we require after fully taking into consideration our needs, our legal conceptions and our necessities. This Code has created throughout the whole country a great deal of unpleasantness, restlessness and uneasiness. Some women declare that they would have rights equal to those of men. This Code favours the women. Some declare that women have no rights. Very humbly I beg to submit to this House, that, till the time the Bill is under consideration here, we must never pay any attention to the various slogans or any such things like the allegations that this Bill is favourable to women or it is favourable to men. With a cool heart we must think over whether this Bill is appropriate or not. Which man can say that he has not been born of a woman, and which woman can say that she is not the daughter of a man. So in a matter like this will we not treat our sisters, our daughters, and our mothers with kindness. Do our mothers, sisters and daughters demand that they will not behave properly with their husbands, their brothers and sons. So it is not necessary to introduce any bitter controversy in this matter. I know that this is a very delicate problem. We ought to consider it in the proper manner and with a cool head.

Before I discuss this point any further I wish to submit a few things about a question so that at least the honourable members of this House and my honourable sisters in particular may not think that I oppose or support this Bill with some set ideas. At the very outset I wish to submit that I belong to that school of thought who believes that till the women are not given their proper rights in both the immovable and movable properties their personality will not attain full development. I very strongly oppose the economic dependence of women. I do not like that shloka of Sitaji wherein she has said;

अमितस्य तु दातारं भर्तारं का न पूजयेत्॥

I hold Ramayana in a very high esteem but I am not, for one moment, prepared to accept the principle that the women should always be kept dependent. I am not, for one moment, prepared to accept the verdict of a few of the Smrities that a woman till she is not married must remain under the control of her father, and after marriage under the control of her husband, and if she becomes a widow then under the control of her son. I oppose this verdict of the Smrities not for the reason that it is painful to women. I know that till the women of India will not attain a strong personality, till the women will not improve their condition economically and till they will not have an all round development our genealogy will not improve. Like men the women also should be given all kinds of opportunities for their development. I think that it is not at all justifiable to look at this question from a narrow angle of vision. We have to decide this question very prudently and keeping in view the welfare and advancement of our entire nation and country.

Since thousands of years we have been believing in certain prevailing customs and rites and have also been preserving them. But along with this we have also to decide our line of action as to how we should act upon the slogans that are being raised in the present day world like "women must have rights equal to men". We may not accept this principle in toto but we at least stand committed to afford them scope and facilities equal to men for their development. We will have to keep this principle in view. Therefore I wish to submit without any reserve that women must get their lawful rights in the movable and immovable properties. I am strongly in support of this. I also congratulate Dr. Ambedkar for his accepting in this Bill the principle of the Abolition of Caste in marriages and adoption. I do not possess sufficient eloquence to let you know how important I consider this question to be. I look upon this question in this light that it is question of nation building. It is a question of our life and death. This pertains to basic principles. If any thing has ruined India, marred her progress and became an instrument in creating Pakistan it is this caste system. If there is anything that has entered our society and is eating into the vitals; that has made Brahmins an enemy of others, the Jats enemies of non-Jats and the Kshatriyas the enemy of all other communities, it is this caste system only. I do not know how, can we refuse to follow the path of formation of a class-less society, the path pointed out to this country by Mahatma Gandhi, the father of the nation. The two things, that are instrumental in uniting the people of this country, are inter-dining and inter-marriages. As far as the question of inter-marriages is concerned, till this question is not resolved the problem of nation building in India can not be solved. Therefore as far as this question is concerned I am strongly in its favour.

As far as the question of monogamy goes there may not be a single member against it. As far as the consequences of monogamy are concerned I know that its passing would badly affect the area I come from. Because even today, according to the circumstances, it generally happens that when some one dies leaving his widow, the widow is re-married to the younger brother. I know that in the coming times we should not continue these out of date customs. I think that if the defects of this out of date system would be told and explained to those people whom it will affect then they would also readily agree to renounce it.

As regards the question of monogamy and the people about whom I am talking I wish to submit that these people according to their needs and intelligence thought out and adopted this principle in that time when widow re-marriage was not in vogue in India. Without any reservation, I wish to submit that as far as the questions of monogamy, abolition of caste system and giving of the fullest rights to women, are concerned I am fully in support of them.

As regards the question of divorce I know that the system of divorce exists in a major portion of India. These days to some people this system of divorce appears to be bad. In fact in a country like ours where according to our customs the women used to commit Sati, the opposition of the system of divorce is not a thing to be wondered at. According to our beliefs marriage constitutes an indissoluble relationship, and from this point of view the right of divorce should not be given. But I like to submit that the system of divorce has always been in our country and is still present to this day. If the people wish to walk with their eyes closed, if they do not want to see as to what is happening in the world around them, then it is upto them to do so. Dr. Ambedkar told us that this system is found in 90 per cent. of the people of this country. I beg to submit that these figures are under-estimated rather than over-estimated. As regards the question of divorce and as far as it is in practice in India I am entirely in support of it, not for the reason that it is in vogue in the present day society but for the fact that it is one of our own customs. Therefore I am in favour of divorce.

The question arises that in this Hindu Code Bill, as it has emerged from the Select Committee the main defect is that it does not go far enough. In fact the customs prevalent in our country and the reforms suggested by the Select Committee fall far too short. The people in Punjab are not so backward. As regards social reforms the people of Punjab are far ahead than those of the rest of India. This Code does not go to that extent even. For them this Code is not a kind of social reform but it draws them back instead. If this Code would be shown to any Hindu or Sikh of the rural areas of Punjab then he would say, "Oh Sir, what are you doing? You are retrogressing us to a great extent. We are far ahead of all this. You want to take us still backward." The people of Punjab will not be benefited by this Code. The present Code has emerged from the Select Committee in such a form that the needs of the people of Punjab have lagged far behind; the needs have not only been left behind but certain things in this Bill compel us that we will have to throw this Bill out if it remained in the present form. If we want to preserve our institutions then they cannot be preserved in the present form of the Bill, and thus this Bill becomes annoying.

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam (U.P.: General): Quote any example.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I just give an example. After this introduction, with your permission Sir, I beg to submit the objections that I have to raise against this Bill and say to what extent I have to support this Bill. There are many such provisions in this Bill about which no one may have any objection. There would be a very few persons who would say that they are against all the provisions of the Bill. But Sir, if you were to go through the Bill you would find that there are notes of dissent from 11 out of the 17 members of the Select Committee, and who are they? Shrimati Ammu Swaminadhan and Shrimati Renuka Ray are among them. Notes of dissent from both of them are there.

Shrimati Renuka Ray (West Bengal: General): These notes are not on fundamental principles.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am coming to that. To tell the truth these 11 members who have written notes of dissent, themselves oppose this Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee. I was submitting as to who have written notes of dissent. One of the notes of dissent is from Bakshi Tek Chand who has worked for social uplift throughout his life and is prepared to go to any extent for social reforms. When he also writes a note of dissent then it is for us to think as to where are we going? If these notes of dissent he carefully lead then it would become clear that out of 17 members at least 11 strongly oppose this Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee. After this introduction I beg to state why I am prepared to move such motions, which are generally considered dilatory, against this Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee.

Mr. Tajamul Husain (Bihar: Muslim): Sir, I beg to raise a point of information. The honourable member has stated that 11 out of 17 members of the Select Committee have written note of dissent. If they are opposed to this Bill, then I would like to enquire from the honourable members how this Bill came to be recommended by the Select Committee so that we may pass it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Mr. Deputy Speaker, Sir, in my opinion this question is neither a point for information nor a point of order even. You may go through this Bill yourself Sir. Mr. Bharathi has also written a note of dissent.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): Mine is little ahead of the Bill. I want to enlarge the scope of the Bill. That is my dissenting minute.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Should honourable members go on explaining every remark and every sentence? It is not necessary.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: No, Sir, I was.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member's note of dissent is in print. He will have his turn if he wants to offer any explanation. It is no good going on interrupting a speaker and other honourable members also by simultaneously standing up.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: May I say, Sir.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have heard the honourable member sufficiently.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: On a point of personal explanation, Sir?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, order.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I would not give Mr. Bharathi the trouble of explaining his view point before the House. I myself present his view point. The note of Mr. Bharathi is that he is in no way against the fundamental principles of this Bill. He wants that as a logical consequence the women must be given the right that all those women who own limited estates, he wants that they at once be made absolute owners. I am correct, I think.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: I am not permitted to reply.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member Pandit Bhargava may go on.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: For this very reason Sir, I was submitting that a number of members of the Select Committee have written notes of dissent on that form of the Bill as has emerged from the Select Committee. With what intension these notes of dissent were written. I will submit later on, but I wish that I may not be interrupted in the course of my speech.

Sir, I was submitting that although this Bill does go to a certain extent and I am prepared to go even beyond that in social reforms yet still I do not find myself in a position to fully support this Bill. And this is quite natural. Even Dr. Ambedkar himself, by whose kindness the Bill has taken this form and who has delivered such a speech of which very Indian and especially every Hindu must feel proud, is not in support of all the provisions of this Bill. Therefore he told that at places the Select Committee has gone out of reason. I do not want to use harsher words. But I say that he also is against this Bill and in this way there are 12 notes in its dissent. So I was submitting that when 12 out of 17 members are against this Bill then in such a condition the House should not feel astonished if I wish to support the amendment moved by Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad. The reason is quite clear. I do not wish that any of you may misunderstand me. There are many such sections of this Bill about which I do not wish that their passing be delayed even by a minute. Had his motion been dilatory I would not have supported him. Many of my motions also were not dilatory. I know that this Bill is not going to be passed in this Assembly i.e. in this Session of the Assembly. A special session of the Assembly will have to be called to pass this Bill. The next session will come off after about 6 months. The objection that I am raising can very easily be decided in this period of six months. With your permission Sir, I wish to submit that I do not want that the Bill may not again be sent back to Select Committee; and for such a move my reasons are quite different. Perhaps some of the honourable members might be thinking that I wish that this Bill may anyhow come to an end. I do not want to kill this Bill. I wish that this Bill be passed. I wish that all the good points of this Bill be accepted. So it is necessary to look upon this Bill with a cool heart. It is not necessary to infuse heat. Therefore, I wish, that whatever I want to submit, you must hear it with a cool heart and I think that Dr. Ambedkar will not misunderstand it. I wish to submit all this very humbly and not with the spirit of antagonism. But I must have the courage to say what I want to say and I wish that others must interpret it at least fairly if not generously. I submit all this very respectfully and attach no less importance to this. Now I wish to submit that as each and every honourable member of the House knows that new elections are to be held. All the present members have come here by indirect election. The members that are to come after us will come from direct election and adult suffrage. According to the resolution passed by us in the Constituent Assembly the elections will be held in 1950. Only then I would be prepared to call that, as you yourself Sir, had said, an absolute sovereign body. Yet still on the principle of propriety I beg to submit that instead of us deciding a matter that concerns the daily life of 30 crores of people it would be better that those people, who are to come from direct election and adult suffrage, should decide this issue. I would submit that this will be the proper course. I wish to submit on the principle of propriety. Some people feel that this Assembly can frame the constitution only. This is the same argument that was advanced yesterday that when fragmentation does not take place on dividing a property among twelve sons then there cannot be any if it is further divided so as to include a daughter as well. But I say that 'one wrong cannot justify another'.

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam has said that this Assembly is not also competent to frame the constitution even. I do not agree with his views but if you do agree then why are you repeating the mistake? This is quite wrong. If you do not hold this view then it is another thing. In my opinion this constitution-framing Assembly is a sovereign body. It is perfectly legal and in the same way this House is fully authorised to pass today any laws that it likes. Yet still the sense of propriety, the sense of proportion, demands of us that we must not make haste in this matter. We have been following these principles since thousands of years and therefore I wish to submit that in the next 6 months the sky will not fall down upon our heads, so that we may pass the Bill immediately with undue haste. Therefore I would very humbly submit that as you Sir, have written in your dissenting note; out of these twelve persons, the twelve signs of the Zodiac—you are one of them; and along with you Babu Ramnarayan Singh has also mentioned on page 11:

"The members have been elected indirectly and have no mandate from the electorate. The mass of opinion and the majority is against most of the provisions of the Bill and the Bill seeks to alter the fundamental structure of the Hindu Society."

I very humbly beg to submit that justice demands that the representatives of direct election after being elected to this Assembly should be given the opportunity of deciding this matter. Our much respected and a true leader of the country Dr. Rajendra Prasad, agreeing with this principle, had also written a letter that this Bill as a whole be presented before the coming representative Assembly.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: What it was that the Governor-General had written?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, whatever you say about the Governor-General has been mentioned here. But I very respectfully beg to submit that I highly honour and esteem the opinion of the elders. This matter today concerns me, concerns every woman who lives in any distant village. Everybody will be affected by this and so every one has got a right to express his opinion. Why I do not agree is that yesterday my honourable Sister Shrimati Sucheta Kripalani had said that in this manner centuries would pass. This Bill has been on the anvil for the last ten years. It was drafted in 1941. This argument does not appeal me. May I ask how much literacy is there in this country? May I ask how many women of this country are literate? I wish to address my honourable sisters here, who are the members of this House and whose opinion I highly esteem; but I would say whether thousands of their sisters who live in villages and towns have the right to express their opinion in this matter. For this reason I would urge my honourable sisters here that they should have patience in this matter and exercise some restraint. If I were to submit that the opinion of those also be included, who have full right to express their opinion, then this may not be considered a crime. Very respectfully I beg to submit that the people living in towns and villages are not at all aware what the Bill is and what its provisions are. Some honourable members say "Hear" "Hear". Very respectfully I beg to submit that those people who have not studied the provisions of this Bill and a number of members of this House have not at all realized what its importance is.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: When you consider women of this country fit enough to understand the provisions of your other Bills for reform, don't you think they will be able to understand the provisions of this Bill?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I welcome this interruption, because it gives me an opportunity to explain the real point. Sir, an objection has been raised that once upon a time the Satta Bill was passed, widow marriage Bill was passed, Sharda Act was passed; and the Bill that is before the House today is also of the same category which, according to Shrimati Durgabai, is something higher in level from those that can be passed taking into consideration the opinion of the common people.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: May I be allowed to move a point of order?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: What is the point of order, please?

Mr. Tajamul Husain: My point of order is this, Sir, that the contempt of the whole House has been committed by my honourable friend in this way; you heard him out and he says that there are members of this House who have not understood the Hindu Code Bill. This amounts to a contempt of this House and I want a ruling on this.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think that there is anything in this point of order. All that the honourable member means is that the full implications of the Bill may be understood differently by different sections of the people. According to him they have not been understood in the manner in which he would like honourable members to understand it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Besides this Sir, I do not claim and I am not at all prepared to say that I have understood the provisions of this Bill any more than the other honourable members of the House. About myself I am prepared to say that I have not understood fully all the provisions, all the clauses and all the implications of this Bill and this I can say about all the honourable members and myself in particular. The honourable members here, who are not lawyers, can say that they have fully understood the Bill; but the lawyers present here can not say with confidence that they have understood all the provisions of the Bill as has emerged from the Select Committee. I am not permitted in this House but if I be permitted then I like to put two or three questions to Mr. Tajamul Husain and he should give an answer whether he understands or not. It is not at all my intentions to commit contempt of the House. Very respectfully I beg to submit that it is not at all my intention.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Every citizen is presumed to know the Law, every honourable member is presumed to have read this Bill. The honourable member can go on with his speech.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I was submitting Sir, after this introduction I was submitting why I am in favour of Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad's amendment. Sir, I submitted some facts for your kind consideration, that this House is not so representative as it is to be tomorrow and this is not to take much time, in a few months the new House will come into being and therefore it would have been proper to (postpone the discussion on this Bill till the new House comes into being).

A still stronger argument in favour of my submission is that you, Sir, are well aware of the fact that today property includes two different types of things. One is lands and the other houses. As far as the landed property is concerned this Bill does not affect it. What will be its effect on succession in a country like India which is mainly an agricultural country and where 90 per cent of the people live in villages. After the death of a person his lands will be governed by one law and his house in the village will be governed by another law. What will happen to me? If I have some property in Delhi then this property will be governed by one law and my landed property in Bahadurgarh will be governed by another law. My house built in my fields at Bahadurgarh will be governed by one law and my house at Delhi by another law. Is this uniformity? If such a thing is being maintained then what the result would be? The appointment of an heir takes place at Bahadurgarh whom the Hindu Code does not recognise, then that boy, who is the appointed heir, will of course inherit the landed property at Bahadurgarh but on the residential house of the deceased some one else would have a claim. The boy will get the landed property but will have no claim on the house, then after all where the boy will go? The effect of this Bill would be that it will not apply on landed property. I think that Dr. Ambedkar wishes to pass a Bill whereby economic holdings could be made and the landed property of average man may not be partitioned. But when this Act will come into being and when the abolition of zamindari takes place, I am not aware of this.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: You can introduce such a Bill immediately.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Respectfully I beg to submit that intentions are not so easily fulfilled in this world as my honourable sister thinks that simply by introducing a Bill this intention will be accomplished. This is a Bill for the benefit of the country, but how many obstacles this Bill is encountering. How much time the Land's Bill, whereby the rights of everybody will be usurped, will take and where will it be passed? This is under the power of the Provincial Government. I wish that we may make such changes in our constitution whereby, as far as the question of lands is concerned, under constitution, this may also be within the powers of the Central Government. If this Bill is passed then I see in it the defect that it does affect the residential property and does not include the landed property. This is a great confusion. A change has now been made in the original Bill that now this Bill will also apply to the lands in the Centrally administered areas, i.e., it will be applicable on both the residential and landed properties of Ajmer-Merwara and Delhi. In other provinces this Bill does not apply to lands. In Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara this will apply to both the rural and urban properties. This is a great defect of this Bill and which knocks out its bottom.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

As yet the people are not aware how this Bill would affect them. For this reason only I had submitted that full publicity has not been given to this Bill. I know that if today people were to know that through this Bill such far reaching and fundamental changes are being made in their law of inheritance, changes which will have affect on each and every family of India, then at one time the people of the whole of India on coming to Delhi would present their applications that this law may not be passed. Many people are not aware of this. The knowledge is shared by the members of this House, Bar associations and a few of those who read newspapers. You can well understand how small the number of such persons is. Such a Bill, which affects the entire Hindu Society, has not been given sufficient circulation and no opinions on this have been taken. A committee was set up, it took evidences at many places and the report of the committee is with me. If you would see as to where the members of this Committee went, what they did and whose evidences they recorded; then you would find that the committee has asked the opinion of some well placed and educated persons only and they have not taken the opinion of a major part of the country. In this there is no question of education. For this Bill every mother and father, who fully realize their responsibilities, can give their opinions. Everybody is affected by this and so every person is competent to give his opinion. Besides this I would submit that nobody has the knowledge of the changes that have been made by the Select Committee in the original Bill. Only the members of the Assembly have information of these changes, the rest of the people do not know what changes the Select Committee has made. Now the question arises that as the Select Committee has made changes in this Bill so its circulation has become very necessary. Leave aside the old question that no law should make rapid changes in the customs of the people till the opinion of a majority of those people, who are to be affected by it, be not taken. The Bill that is being introduced today is one wherein the Select Committee has made such changes as are of vital importance and about which everybody must have full information. For this reason only its circulation is all the more necessary.

Before I submit anything about these changes, I wish to draw the attention of the House towards one point. I regret to say that the Law Department itself which an embodiment of law because its name even is Law Department, these same people do not respect the law. When these people themselves establish such a procedure that they must not have established, then I will have to say—

گر کفر از کعبہ نیز کجا بود مسلمان

I do not want to touch the question that has been decided by your predecessor. That question has been decided. That ruling is final for me. I do not question it. I highly honour that ruling although I know that this ruling according to my opinion was not correct, yet I do not want to question it.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: No one can say inside the House that the ruling of the Chair is wrong.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry the honourable member has not understood Mr. Bhargava at all. What he says is that he does not agree with the ruling, but he cannot question the ruling here. It is open to any member to think for himself and also to say that in his opinion he does not accept it, but he is bound by the ruling. I think there is nothing wrong.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am very sorry that whenever my honourable friend Mr. Tajamul Husain raises any point of order it does not survive even for a minute. I wish that he may raise such a point of order which I may also be able to reply. I know that at this time he is enquiring from another honourable member whether this Bill applies to lands or not but he pretends and says that he understands this Code Bill. Then I like to submit that I am perfectly within my rights if I say that on the ruling I hold a different opinion. I wish to submit a few other fundamentals that have not at all been touched by the Honourable the Speaker's ruling. Most humbly I beg to draw the attention of the House particularly towards the fact that this House which is a constitution making House, is a master of her laws. None of our matters can be referred to any court in the country. If this House forsakes its principles for the sake of passing a certain act then we commit such a mistake that we cannot be absolved of its responsibilities. I beg to submit that in this redrafted Bill, reported by the Select Committee, the mistakes that we have committed therein are of three types. Firstly when a Bill comes before the House, comes in the possession of the House, and is introduced in the House, then after this except for the House no member of the House, however big he might be, however good he might be, cannot even change a comma therein without the consent of the House. If there be any clerical mistakes then it is another thing; and if that also be a material mistake then it will have to be printed again and re-circulated and after again being introduced in the House can be referred to any committee. Very respectfully I beg to submit Sir, that I am presenting two or three technical points for your kind consideration. About these points I will have to submit very humbly to the other honourable member, but not to Dr. Ambedkar as he is familiar with technical rules and things and he knows how much injustice can be done by forsaking these technical rules. So I was submitting that by forsaking these technical rules except injustice and unlawful things nothing beneficial can be accomplished. Mr. Ouslow has been a very famous speaker of the House of Commons. He had said that no work should be done in contravention of the technical rules. For the protection of minorities, for the protection of the House as a whole, there are technical rules, and these rules are of such a fundamental character that whenever the limits will be transgressed nothing except mistakes can be accomplished. This principle has been laid down in the May's Parliamentary Practice, which is the convention of the Mother of Parliaments. The convention is that as soon as a Bill is introduced it passes out of the hands of the member introducing it and comes within the power of the House. I am translating the words of May's Parliamentary Practice which I will soon read out to you.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think anybody in the House doubts that any honourable member even though he may be the mover has got the right to change the Bill when once it has been placed before the House. As I understand it, the Honourable Speaker's ruling is that the very same Bill was considered in the Select Committee. Therefore, there is no good canvassing that position. The Honourable the Law Minister did not say that another Bill was considered in the Select Committee though the other draft which he placed before the Select Committee was considered along with the original Bill. As any honourable member is entitled to place amendments before the Select Committee instead of sending piecemeal amendments, according to him, he printed all his amendments and placed them before the Committee. That is the ruling of the Honourable the Speaker. Baric—that, the honourable member can go on. Nobody doubts the position stated in May's Parliamentary Practice that it is not open to a member even though he may be the mover of the Bill, to change the Bill when the House is seized of it. The Honourable the Speaker has said this has not been done. We are bound by that; otherwise the honourable member may go on.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I wanted to submit only this much that after hearing your opinion I have become still more staunch on my belief. You have decided that if it is somehow proved that in fact no amendments on this controversy came before the Select Committee then it should be accepted that the redrafted Bill should not have been considered. For this reason I would submit that I have no need to quote the ruling again before you. Sir, I have got a ruling of Hansard Vol. 215 of 1873 wherein at page 302 it has been laid down that if a member gives notice of introducing a Bill and this Bill is printed then that member cannot make any changes in the Bill before the second reading, and if he makes any changes then the Honourable the Speaker gave the ruling that the Bill be withdrawn—the Bill cannot be further discussed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The position of law is accepted; there is no need to canvass that. I do not think the Honourable the Law Minister denies the position of law that he is not entitled to change....

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister of Law): No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: ...any comma or semi colon except as accepted by the Select Committee. But, it is open to him to place matters before the Select Committee. I think that was the ruling of the Chair. The honourable member may go on.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, very respectfully I wish to submit that if the other original Bill is placed before the House then I will have no objection. Had this Bill been considered in the House in this manner then nobody would have any objections. After being introduced in this manner the Bill should have been technically considered clause by clause and word by word. If this procedure has not been adopted, and if the Bill was sent to the Select Committee and in the Select Committee it was not considered word by word and clause by clause then I would like to ask if the first Bill was before the honourable member or was it in his pocket or had he come after reading it at his house. I wish to draw your attention Sir, towards Parliamentary Practice. No member of the Select Committee has any claims against this. I have with me strong reasons and I wish to draw your attention Sir, towards them. In the first place perhaps in the majority report it is written:

"We confined our deliberations to this redrafted Bill."

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: May I interrupt? This is not correct.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The original Bill has not been considered clause by clause and word by word in the actual sense of the term. In the popular sense as the Honourable the Speaker said before and in the sense in which Shri Balkrishna Sharma submitted before the House, the Bill was before us, then I have no objection against the Bill. I am prepared to accept that whatever Shri Balkrishna Sharma and the Honourable the Speaker have stated.....

Shrimati G. Durgabai: On a point of order. He is questioning the ruling of the Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I understand the honourable Member, though I do not understand every word that he says. I am bound to safeguard the ruling of the Speaker. I am not interested in seeing that what I may have said today may be upset by a Chairman who follows me. The ruling of the Speaker is there. Though the honourable Member speaks forcibly on one or two points, I understand that he wants to persuade the House to allow the country an opportunity to consider the Bill. That is all that he means (Honourable Members: "No, no"). I may say immediately I do not intend to go behind the ruling of the Speaker. Any arguments that may be advanced for consideration by the House or the country at large is welcomed but not in a spirit to question the ruling of the Speaker.

Dr. Mono Mohan Das: On a point of information. I want to be informed whether the next ten minutes will be taken up by the honourable Member so that we who do not understand Hindustani could return to our hotels.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Since you have been pleased to say that you do not follow me and I want every word to be followed by the House and by your goodself I will speak in my broken English.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): Hitherto you have had no consideration for those who did not know Hindi. There is a large number of them here and if you do not care for them and you do not want them to listen, it is your own look out.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I had already decided to speak in English and my friend's orders are only supplementary. But after what you have been pleased to say, I will continue in English.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Whatever has been heard has been heard in Hindustani.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am not going to repeat all that I have said as it will not be possible. In future I shall submit to you what I have to say, so that I may not be charged for attempting.....

Mr. Tajamul Husain: There should be no repetition.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I do not want to be ordered by Mr. Tajamul Husain. If he does not want to.....

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I am addressing the Chair.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I do not want Mr. Tajamul Husain to make unintelligent interruptions.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry that Mr. Tajamul Husain goes on interrupting repeatedly. I am here to protect the House so that there is no repetition. It is unfortunate that we are spending much time in this way.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I do not want to repeat. I submit that the manner in which the Honourable the Speaker gave his ruling I respect it and I will not say a word against the ruling, though I maintain, Sir, that that ruling is not the last word.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: It is the last word in this House.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am not going to be taunted by these things. I think the House can revise its own order. I can quote a ruling to this effect from the book 'Decisions of Chair.' At the same time, let the House not think that I am asking the Deputy Speaker to review that order at this stage. I am not doing so. Let the House not be impatient. But may I ask where is the rule that a ruling once given cannot be revised? There is no such rule. Since I am not attempting to get the ruling revised, this does not arise. What I was saying was that the ruling of the Speaker was to this effect that the Bill was considered along with this redrafted Bill not in the actual sense nor in the technical sense in which we understand what "consideration" is. I submitted for your consideration that in the technical sense in which we use the word "considered" this Bill was never considered.

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam: I beg to state that this is a repetition of what he spoke in Hindustani.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In so far as to enable me to understand the full implications.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Without these preliminary remarks I could not make myself understood and those who know would have realized that I could not do more than this.

I was submitting with a view to convince you that as a matter of fact the real consideration, technically so called, was only given to the redrafted Bill. I said that I wanted to submit certain arguments: firstly, the report says that "we confined our deliberations to the redrafted Bill". Secondly, Sir, the dissenting note of Bakhshi Tek Chand as well as of Balkrishna Sharma says the same thing. I do not want to read further because the Members have read it and it will be waste of time to read it again. When Mr. Balkrishna Sharma spoke the Honourable the Speaker was pleased to accept his statement. He again repeated in his speech that "we confined our attention to this redrafted Bill": and when you see the report you will find that in the report itself there are some indications for instance in clause 99 that only the re-drafted Bill was considered in the technical sense.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am not able to follow what the honourable Member is driving at so far as this is concerned.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am sorry I have not heard what has fallen from Mr. K. C. Sharma.

Honourable Members: Order, order.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Sit down!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: If you will permit me I will try to get along. There are two questions. If it is a question that we ought not to proceed with this Bill, then that point has been decided. The Bill has been taken into consideration. The Speaker has said that this Bill was before the Select Committee and with the other amendments that have been tabled. Therefore, so far as that matter is concerned, I may immediately say I am not in a position to go beyond the ruling of the Speaker. Apart from the question of a similar case in the Civil Procedure Code, a ruling has been given and it is not desirable to go over it in the same case. It may not be a precedent for some others. When it comes up in any other connection it will be open to the Chair or members of the House or whoever might occupy the Chair for the time being to go behind the previous ruling. At this stage in the same proceedings I am not prepared to go behind it. In these circumstances I would like to ask the honourable member for what purpose these arguments are raised. If as I understood sometime ago, it is only for the purpose of persuading the House to accept the motion for circulation in view of the fact that the Select Committee did not look into the original draft but the other one, both of them were before the House. So it is not as a point of order but for the purpose of persuading the House, which I can understand. For that reason May's Parliamentary Practice and other rulings need not be referred to. So far as the matter of law is concerned enough has been said and I would request the honourable member, if possible to conclude this portion of his argument and proceed to some other matter.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): Sir, the previous speaker, Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava said that the Speaker's ruling is not final. May I, Sir, draw your attention...

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not want any further arguments on the matter. I have already given my ruling that so far as this proceedings is concerned the Speaker's ruling is final. I cannot allow any questioning of that. It is therefore unnecessary to reinforce the argument or to strengthen my hands.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, it is far from my mind to invite you to give a ruling contrary to the Speaker's. I am not going to request you to do that. I can quite understand that it is not desirable to review a ruling when it is given in the same case, though I know according to law you are perfectly competent to give another ruling. The law is not so narrow as not to provide for cases in which injustice is perpetrated. So I shall desist from speaking any further on this subject that the ruling of the Chair may be looked into. What I am submitting is that there are several motions before the House and it is not the only motion for circulation. This Bill could go before the same Select Committee and it could come back to the House in 15 days. As I submitted already it is not a matter of dilatory tactics. All that I want is that the House should adopt a procedure which is according to law and which is fundamentally right. I am a member of this House and as such I have a right to see that the Bill sent to Select Committee is considered in a manner which the law requires. There is no escape, therefore, from its recommittal to the same Select Committee. This is the reason which I want to submit before you. After all the taxpayer has to pay for every minute of the time taken in this House and I hate to take a dilatory or obstructionists attitude. All the same.....

Mr. Tajamul Husain: You are doing it all the same.

An Honourable Member: He is again on the Speaker's ruling.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I hope the House will bear with me for a little more time....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the honourable Member likely to take more time?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Yes, Sir.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock.

*The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock.
Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayandam Ayyangar) in the Chair.*

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, when the House rose for Lunch I was submitting for your consideration that the functions of a Select Committee are to go through the text of the Bill word by word—the function of a Select Committee is to go into the text of the Bill clause by clause, and if necessary, word by word. I would refer to May's Parliamentary Practice.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I request the honourable Member to proceed to another point because I have already given a ruling?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I respect your ruling. You were pleased to say that you are not going to reverse the ruling given by the Chair and I do not want it to be reversed. As a matter of fact I am unfortunate that I have not been able to make myself fully appreciated. The ruling of the Chair says that this Bill was with the Select Committee at the time when the draft was being considered. I do not dispute that at all. My dispute is that the functions of a Select Committee were that they should have gone through the original Bill clause by clause and word by word. It is not only this. As the House is bound so is the Select Committee bound to consider the Bill clause to clause and word by word.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will assume that under the ruling both the original Bill and the amended draft were there and they looked into it clause by clause. What follows next? Is it the question that we ought not to go into this and it is not competent to do so? If that is so, it has already been ruled. When once it has been ruled how is it open to go into it again?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: On a question of fact I would still request the Members of a Select Committee, to kindly enlighten the House whether both the Bills were taken and considered together. Assuming that this is correct my contention is that unless and until every clause of the original Bill was taken, unless and until it was considered clause by clause and word by word the requirement of law and procedure is not complied with.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Has not the question of competence of the Select Committee been disposed of by the Speaker once for all?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am trying to meet that point myself. Whenever I find it difficult I will ask the honourable Member, Mr. Kamath, to help me.

I have already said I am anxious to know what follows. I will assume for the moment that both the Bills were there and that the other draft Bill was considered clause by clause. What next? What is the legal objection?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I request you to give me two or three minutes to explain my position. There is another aspect of the case also. Besides this being a fundamental rule that the original Bill should be taken clause by clause and word by word the way in which the entire Bill is to be considered is that each clause must be considered of the original Bill, then the new clause, then the Schedule, then the new Schedule. Parliamentary Practice gives that. The next question is what is the effect. What follows—this is the question before you. I beg to call your attention in this connection to the general principles of practice and law as well as the particular point involved. In regard to the general practice the rule of law is absolutely clear that when any law or any practice or the general principles require that a certain procedure is to be observed, unless and until that procedure is observed the thing cannot be regarded as having been validly done. For this principle I will quote another authority of the Privy Council itself which is 1936 Privy Council Page 253.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am assuming the next step also. I am only taking the honourable Member's argument step by step. Let us assume it is so—that the Select Committee did not consider this or considered something else. Then the honourable Member evidently wants to say that I have no jurisdiction to go into the matter. It is with respect to that I want to say that it has already been ruled by the Speaker. I shall hear the honourable Member if he is able to satisfy me that that ruling does not cover the point he has stated. So far as I am concerned I have considered it carefully and I believe the same has been covered. I would therefore suggest to the honourable Member to proceed further without taking any more time. Already we have taken much time on this. There are other speakers also waiting to speak. I would like the honourable Member to dispose of this point as early as possible and go to any other point if he wants to.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: My humble submission is that the previous ruling of the chair did not consider this point. The only point raised by Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad was that the motion cannot be allowed to be made as only the redraft was considered. That was the simple point. This point which I am urging in regard to taking up clause by clause was not even argued. The effect will be this that a Bill will be sent to Select Committee and if you don't observe this fundamental rule any other Minister may alter the Bill, put a redraft, get it considered and the real purpose of this fundamental rule that it should be considered clause by clause will be defeated. This is sufficient ground that no person had a right to make any alteration whatever in the Bill—for this I would refer you, Sir, to the ruling of the Speaker in the Commons (page 301 of Hansard, Volume 215). If you agree with me in this and in the Committee being required to go through it clause by clause then the position is absolutely clear that this Bill must be recommitted to the same Select Committee. Let the Select Committee devote two hours—I do not want that the Report should not come in this session—I want them to devote two hours and consider the original Bill clause by clause, and we will consider it then. This point I may submit was never-considered by the Speaker and I beg of you kindly to consider this point.

Leaving aside this point as you have asked me not to spend any more time on it I would take up the other points. Now the question is what is the effect of this. One fact as I have already submitted is that we must abide by the rules, and the rules in a matter of this kind are fundamental rules which cannot be disobeyed. Then what is the real effect of it? That I am submitting to you. Now the differences or discrepancies between the provisions of the original Bill and the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee relate not only to matters of procedure but to matters of great substance. In the Dissenting Note given by Bakshi Tek Chand and Pandit Balkrishna Sharma it has been pointed out that as a matter of fact in the redrafted Bill very drastic changes were made and they have given examples of the changes. I am not satisfied that they have exhausted all the substantial changes in the minutes and I would beg of you to consider it from my point. When I began my speech I invited your attention to the fact that in this measure, as it has emerged from the Select Committee after the redrafted Bill was considered, many changes have been made which are certainly destructive of the institutions which we have got in the Punjab. I will first of all call your attention to the institution of appointment of an heir. In regard to the appointment of an heir we know the views of the Honourable Dr. Ambedkar. He himself stated that he thought that the adoption of heirs is an artificial affair. I also think so. We remember the speech made by Mrs. Hansa Mehta at the time when the Bill was sent to the Select Committee. She also made certain remarks. Now, according to the present measure, no person could adopt an heir in any form except in the Dattaka form, whereas according to the original Bill the Kritrim and Godra forms were also allowable. So far as adoption is concerned, adoption of a son is a mere fiction. How can such a son become a real son? But the Hindu law provides for it and I have no quarrel with those who believe in it. But in regard to appointing heirs to property, just as the Romans did by way of Nominis Hereditio, if the people in the Punjab had got practices like that nobody has the right to touch them. According to our institutions, in the appointment of an heir, though it is in effect just like an adoption, there is no religious efficacy, there are no particular ceremonies, there is no question of age. The son is not engrafted in the family of the adopter but he continues in his own family. There are various rules and the Punjab High Court has given hundreds of rulings over this point. That institution is too strongly fixed in the public mind and you will be tampering with the custom of at least a crore of people if you are not allowing it in this Code. According to the Hindu Code no other form of adoption will be allowed. That is the provision in the present code; it does not go far enough. I understand that so far as custom is concerned, custom has been ruled out except to the extent which has been recognised.

When I read the speech of Dr. Ambedkar himself which he was pleased to deliver at the time when the Motion was referred to Select Committee, I found that his attitude was very reasonable and he made certain statements in regard to custom which are very much opposite to the provisions of the Bill. Sir, I doubt very much whether this Law Department Committee had on its personnel our Law Member himself. I do not know who those persons were who tampered with the Bill, but at the same time I can certainly say that I very strongly suspect—though I do not know it—that Dr. Ambedkar must not have been there because he is very anxious to see that the customs of the ninety per cent of the people are not affected—as I am anxious to see. Either this thing missed him—he may not have appreciated it—or some other persons might have been there who were not Members of the Select Committee. They entirely changed the face of the Bill, which they had not the right to do; then it was the other Bill which was considered—it is a fiction that the original Bill was there and considered. Sir, I would refer you to page 3652 of the proceedings (9th April, 1948) in which Dr. Ambedkar said:

"His second comment was that the Bill had not taken into consideration the customary law. He cited some ruling of the Privy Council. I should have thought that at this hour of the day it was unnecessary to cite the authority of the Privy Council because it has been well established by a long course of decisions, that so far as the Hindus are concerned custom would override the text of the 'Smriti'. We all know this. But what are we doing? What are we doing is this. We are shutting down the growth of new customs. We are not destroying existing customs. The existing customs we are recognising because the rules of law which are prevalent in Hindu society are the result of customs. They are born out of customs and we feel that they have now grown so sturdy that we can indeed give them flesh and life in the body politic by one legislation."

Dr. Ambedkar was referring to the speech of Srijiit Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri; He also said:

"that we had not taken into consideration the question of the tribal people, whose life is undoubtedly governed in a large measure by customary law. If my friend had read the definition in this code as to who is a Hindu and who is not and to whom this Code applied, he would have seen that there is a clause which merely said that persons who are not Muslims, Parsis, or Christians, shall be presumed to be Hindus: not that they are Hindus. The result is that if a tribal individual chooses to say that he is not a Hindu it would be perfectly open to him under this Code to give evidence in support of his contention that he is not a Hindu, and if that conclusion is accepted by the Court he certainly would not be obliged by anything contained in this Bill."

The position is this: if I accept my institutions as good, if I appoint my heirs according to the custom which governs me, then according to Dr. Ambedkar I am not a Hindu. That is my difficulty. Either you must provide for these one crore of people and accept their customs or.....

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister of Law): I have no desire to interrupt my friend, but I must say that I do not accept the interpretation that he puts upon that part of any speech. It refers to quite a different matter.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am very glad that I am wrong. It gives me satisfaction that Dr. Ambedkar did not want that the one crore of people should go out of the pale of the Hindu law. But all the same, the argument

I was submitting was this. If this custom was good—and I claim it is good, because according to the definition given in this very code, the custom is ancient, reasonable and not opposed to public policy or morality—I claim this custom should have been recognised by the Code. But this custom is not recognised. To a certain extent the kritrima form was adopted as a good form by the original Bill but the present Bill says that no adoption will be recognised except this kind of adoption which according to Dr. Ambedkar is governed by certain rules. What are the rules? A man must not be more than 15 years of age. He must be given by somebody in adoption. He must not have married. Even according to the present law of adoption these rules are not there. Supposing a Hindu's daughter and son-in-law have died then the daughter's son cannot be adopted; the sister's son cannot be adopted, even the nephew cannot be adopted if the parents are not there. It is common knowledge that even today this rule that if a person is married he cannot be adopted, is not in practice and according to law in vogue, it is not necessary that a person should not have married before he is adopted. Similarly about age. So, all these measures have been changed in such a way that they cannot fit in with the present conditions, or they cannot be useful to us or cannot govern us.

We passed in the Constituent Assembly that we want a Civil Code. Even if this were not the Hindu Code and if Dr. Ambedkar was charged with the duty of framing a Civil Code, (I think he will be so charged after the Constitution is passed), he will certainly include this civil institution—the nomination of an heir—in the Civil Code also. A man may be able to help, in their old age, those who appoint him the heir. My submission is that this point alone is sufficient to see that as a matter of fact the re-draft is much worse than the original Code and full attention was not paid to the original Bill. If full attention had been paid this thing would have been considered. Had it been considered clause by clause you would not have arrived at this.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: This part of the Bill was, if I may say so, very much considered.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am very glad, Sir, that the original Bill was considered. Then the only technical point remains, that it was not considered clause by clause. There is intrinsic evidence that it was not so considered. What is the effect? Supposing there are provisions omitted. How were those provisions considered? When the entire attention was on the draft of the other Bill those clauses could not have been considered. This is not a technical matter.....

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member is aware that the House is not bound by whatever the Select Committee has done. The Select Committee have sent a recommendation; it is open to the honourable Member to accept or not to accept it; if he does not accept it, he can persuade the House not to accept it. We need not go into that again. After all, some Members were there. It is not right to go into what they considered or what they did not consider. The honourable Member would do better in addressing the House as to why we ought not to accept a provision or why we should accept it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I will accept your advice, Sir. I will not refer in future to what happened before the Select Committee. I will only say this point, with your permission. Even if the Select Committee acquiesced in this fraud that the original Bill is not to be considered and the substitute Bill is to be considered, we are not bound. An accused, before a criminal court, acquiesces in a certain procedure which is illegal; then it does not bind him. May I quote some rulings? A Court is required to go into a question and find out for itself whether there is good evidence or record to bind an accused under section 107 Criminal Penal Code. The accused says, "I agree to be bound in that evidence". The Court says, "You are bound". But the appellate Court still rules that the right procedure was not observed and the acquiescence of the accused in a wrong procedure does not make the order legal.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is not the honourable Member satisfied with tearing the report of the Select Committee to pieces? Should he also say they are "accused"?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Those who are guilty of disregard of the fundamental rules of procedure which govern a Select Committee are today accused before the House. I am sorry I have to say something which may not be wholesome to some of my friends, but I do so in all humility and with a view to safeguarding the rights and prestiges of the House. I now leave this point and come to the second point.

In regard to marriage and divorce which are very important questions, what does the Code say and what are the facts at present? In Punjab no specific ceremonies are required for marriages which are called Karewa and Chadar Andazi marriages. The woman puts on the bangles supplied by the husband or the husband puts the Chadar on the wife and there the matter ends. (Shri Mahavir Tyagi: "Charming marriage"). It is very easy for Mr. Tyagi to avail himself of such a procedure. It is not a sacramental or civil marriage. Again, in the original Code there was a loophole. Such persons could come to court and get themselves registered. The changed rule is that unless the marriage is sacramental, it cannot be registered. There are other points on which I shall have occasion to speak before you, but I wish to make certain general observations in regard to what is happening in regard to many persons and what has not been considered from the point of view of the common man.

In the mofussil areas, the people are illiterate. They are poor. They do not know the intricacies of the law. On the question of divorce, when Dr. Ambedkar said that he was speaking for ninety per cent. of the population, I know that he was saying nothing but the truth. In regard to this ninety per cent., how does the divorce take place today? They go to a petition writer and get a letter of release. Another way is they congregate together and put a white sheet on the woman.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: And supply a good deal of liquor to the fellows assembled!

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: That may be so, but it is not part of the ceremony. What is the present law, Sir? What have our leaders done for us? I am a representative of those poor people. I include myself in them. But when Dr. Ambedkar just by his finger indicates that he is one of those he will excuse me if I do not agree. Dr. Ambedkar lives here in a paradise.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I have lived in Improvement Trust chawls for several years who charged me rupees three as rent.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: You can crush them under your feet; you can crush them under your thumb, but Sir, do you think that any poor villager getting about Re. 1 or Rs 1/8/- a day could go to a district judge without the help of a lawyer? Dr. Ambedkar is a lawyer. He wants that this world may be peopled by lawyers alone like me and by nobody else. What would happen to these people? Will they go to a district judge for dissolution of marriage or divorce? (An honourable Member: "Impossible") And this is not sufficient. Even if he obtains a decree, it should be confirmed by a High Court, which so far as Punjab is concerned is the High Court at Simla. Now, this procedure is unknown to people. It is a great tyranny upon those people. You are legislating for those who live in the Marine Drive in Bombay or in the palaces of Calcutta and Delhi and not for these poor people for whom you have such a soft corner in your heart.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: He wants to make it difficult. Do you want to make it easy?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Another answer is that they want to make it difficult. I do not want to make divorce easy. Absolutely not. I am in favour of divorce on one condition only, that you enact laws in which it may be very difficult to bring about conditions in which divorce may take place. Chastity and continuity of family life are the very pivot of our culture. But if I agree to divorce, it is because I see so many deserted women. It is on account of that that I agree. How can a poor man who is absolutely illiterate be able to engage a lawyer and go to a district or high court? It is impossible to accept this. This old Act of 1869 was enacted, not for the poor people of the Punjab or any other part of India, it was enacted for Christians who were of the same caste as the then rulers. There is a world of difference between them and these people. If you go through the provisions from article 38 to 50 of the Bill, you will come to the conclusion that such a complicated and intricate procedure has been laid down that it is very difficult to follow it. If you think deeply, you will find that the whole Hindu society will rebel against you if you pass those provisions. According to your law, if a man marries his aunt's (father's sister) daughter, that marriage is good; if he marries the daughter of his maternal uncle—it is in vogue in certain parts of Bombay, I understand.... (An honourable Member: "And Madras.") But so far as we are concerned it is regarded as highly incestuous. There is a very great difference. (Shri Mahavir Tyagi: "The man may be killed.") Mr. Tyagi is not very far from being correct. It is a fact that in all the villages of East Punjab—and I speak with such feeling not because I want to speak with force but I regard it as true if you allow this thing to be done, that man shall be killed and nobody will associate with him. (Mr. Tajamul Husain: "Is there any compulsion?") If a man marries his sister or mother, is there any compulsion? Is this an enabling measure? This is going into the very vitals of the society. It is intolerable. It is impossible for us to be reconciled to this situation simply because in regard to some people there is such a custom. I do not say that those people should not be protected, but for them provision can be made.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Exactly that has been provided if you refer to clause 7(5)—the parties should not be sapindas of each other.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: May I humbly enquire if a daughter of the aunt can be married to a man? I have seen the rules. I submit for your consideration that in these matters the law has been changed, and unless the law is brought to suit our conditions it is difficult for us to support this measure. That can be done in the Select Committee amendments can be moved. I do not want that the Bill should be throttled or killed.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It can also be done by an amendment in this House.

An Honourable Member: I hope you will accept it.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I shall be prepared to accept any reasonable amendment.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I am very glad, and to that extent I am agreeable to support this Bill.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Does the honourable Member intend to finish today?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member seems to be interested in this than other person, who are affected by this Bill. I have been noticing it. I cannot ask the honourable Member when he proposes to finish. It is open to him to take a reasonable time without repetition.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: It is not my intention to take one more minute than is necessary. If I am repeating, I may be called to order. If a Bill is there which affects the lives of thirty crores of people, it is not too much to consider it for several days.

Now I come to the provisions made by the Select Committee and to the most crucial questions in this matter. They are, whether in regard to succession and maintenance, what should be our attitude. I feel strongly on these. As I submitted in my earlier observations, I am in favour of giving to the women of India rights over property, movable as well as immovable, so that they may be economically independent. But, at the same time, I am opposed to giving the daughter a share in the property of the father. I want that, so far as an unmarried daughter is concerned, she may be given full share like the son as long as she does not marry. But as soon as she is married the position becomes different. I see that there is a lacunae in our law, but it may be met by enacting that, as soon as a woman marries a man, then the man and woman, when they are united in love, they may be united in property. Ultimately the man and woman may be joint owners and, when the father of the husband dies, both of them may succeed equally. Further on, the devolution of the property may take place in a particular way. I know that perhaps the demand for equality may not be fully met thereby. But in a matter of this kind, I do not think our sisters are well advised in weighing every question in golden scales. The yard-stick employed by them is not correct.

May I submit that, in regard to maintenance, they have such laws and such provisions the equal of which is not to be found anywhere else. Sir, the question of succession and the question of maintenance must be considered together. If they are not considered together, the difficulty will be that the full implications of the provisions will not be realised. Now, in regard to maintenance the duties of a husband or a man are quite different from the duties laid upon women. According to the Chapter on Maintenance, the wife has a right to be maintained by the husband, but has the husband a right to be maintained by the wife? I am only saying that the rights are not equal. I maintain that the rights cannot be equal. They are diverse. Ladies and men have to do different work in life and on this basis it should be so arranged that the woman gets her full right and not an absolutely equal right.

Then again, Sir, a father has a right to maintain a minor son; but, so far as the daughter is concerned, what are the rights of a daughter. Sir? If a daughter is widowed or is married or unmarried, in every case and whatever the age of the daughter, her maintenance is absolute obligation. As a matter of fact, so far as the provisions for maintenance are concerned, I certainly want to congratulate Dr. Ambedkar for proposing that the ladies should be protected in every way and that they should be well provided for. But while this useful provision is there, there is also the other thing that the ladies should get a share in the father's property.

The Honourable Dr. Ambedkar told us yesterday that in times of old there was simultaneous devolution of property and that the daughter got about one-fourth according to Narad. I do not know what was the basis of social existence in those days and whether the family was then constituted as it is today. I do not know whether this point has been dealt with in some texts of Hindu Law. That is not an accepted proposition. Some say that this provision of simultaneous heirship refers only to unmarried woman. But, leaving that aside, I submit that, if in these times it was considered right, the question of questions is whether today, as we are situated after having observed the theory of Agnacy for a thousand years or more, are we justified in accepting the proposition that the daughter should get a share? What happens in a family? As long as the father is alive, the sons work with him in his business or in the field and they combine together to produce wealth. When the father dies of old age, that property which goes in the father's name is thus the result of the joint efforts of the sons and the father. Now, to say that the daughter should get a share of such a property which she had no share in producing—perhaps she was in some other place producing children is not fair. Let me not be misunderstood. I do not want that the daughter should not be given full rights. She may have them. But I do not want that this innovation, which is of such a fundamental character that it will affect every home in our country, should be made. I know my people all right. Choudhari Rambir Singh who is a Jat knows how his son-in-law will be received in the family. I have been a practising lawyer for forty years and I know that in the case of self-acquired property, the daughter gets a share when there are no sons. If this innovation is introduced in the villages, in regard to entire property the result will be endless trouble. In every home if you let the son-in-law and the father and the mother of the son-in-law to live together with aunt's son and his family, it will create an impossible situation. This is not because we do not love our daughters. We do everything for them. In our place, if a daughter comes home to her parents, something is always given to her by way of love.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Daughters should not be born in this country.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: To that I know what Dr. Ambedkar will say. He will say, 'Instead of sons, daughters should be born. Do we not know that among many Rajputs, the daughters were killed? I do not want that to be done. It is necessarily wrong. What I am submitting is that for hundreds of years we have lived in such a society. We have regarded the son as the very pivot of the family. Without a son the daughter does not count in the family. It is the son which protects a man from hell (पतात त्रायते). If we were like the Muslims, we would certainly accept it, but it is very difficult. This interruption by Renuka Ray only brings into relief my argument that so far as the conceptions of the people are concerned and their mental outlooks are concerned, such an innovation would spell nothing but disaster. This is my humble submission and Mrs. Renuka Ray only supports me in this.

Mr. Krishnaswami Bharathi: I do not know which part of the country he comes from, but it appears that he does not know the custom in the Punjab. In no other province I can say the conditions are the same. What are these conditions due to? They are due to the fact that for thousands of years, our policy and our theory and our conception about the family has been exactly what has been in the Punjab. Sons-in-law are not all bad. Sons are not equally bad.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): It is the brother-in-law which matters.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: There is a proverb which runs as follows:

کوڑی کاٹے گھر کرے اور گورے نوانہ کہیت
جمائی ہسارے گم میں نیت لڑائی ہییت

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

The following are the efficient causes of strife:

- (1) Construction of house in the place meant for deposit of village refuse;
2. A field in the vicinity of village common; and 3. The habitation of son-in-law in the village.

Another proverb.

ہم جوئی بھانجے رھیاری سناں
کدے نا ہووے اپنا کر دیکھو عیتبار

(The yama, the son-in-law, the maternal nephew, chowkidar and the goldsmith can never be yours. You may try them if you please.)

This is the truth. Let me say: Ask any person to go to the Punjab and find out among the Sikhs and Jats.

So far as this Bill is concerned, when this Bill was introduced, I remember that in the Objects and Reasons, this thing appeared:

"The Bill aims at providing uniformity in all branches of Hindu law for all provinces and for all sections. The old complex, intricate and different provisions of Hindu Law have also been simplified. Most of the provisions in the Bill are of a permissive or enabling character and impose no sort of compulsion or obligation whatever on the orthodox section of the community. Their only effect is to give a growing body of Hindus, men and women, the liberty to lead the lives which they wish to lead without in any way affecting or infringing the similar liberty of those who prefer to adhere to the old ways."

Now, Sir, in this very spirit, Dr. Ambedkar spoke yesterday. We want to see both the sections, the enlightened and the non-enlightened are accommodated. My humble submission to him is that so far as that is concerned, he is right; but for those humble people, whom you will neither regard as enlightened nor non-enlightened on the path of social life, you have not given the right provisions in the Bill and my humble request to Dr. Ambedkar is: Let him also kindly allow them to live on this earth.

Now, Sir, the very essence of a codification is that it includes certain enabling measures to accommodate the progressive and recognises customs which have grown in spite of texts to the contrary. It was never intended that established rights and provisions of law should be changed in this ruthless manner, which will create bad blood in the whole of the society. All our customs and all our cherished institutions are being crushed by this Bill.

When I come to the other provisions, as regards the succession, the position will be still more astounding. Now, Sir, so far as the Mitakshara is concerned, we know the consanguinity is the basis and so far as the Dayabhaga law is concerned, religious efficacy is the basis of inheritance. Dr. Ambedkar has been kind enough to give us another basis of inheritance. I do not want to say that he is far from wrong in what he is doing. He is doing the right thing, but I do not know what is the barometer for weighing this natural love and affection. Love and affection may also be perhaps understood. What is natural love. I do not know. According to our conceptions the brother is very dear to us. In our Sacred Ramayan, in Lakshman, brotherhood is enshrined. Sir, 'Uncles' who are just like parents are very dear to us. But what is the position of 'uncles and brothers' in this Hindu Code. If I were to tell you how that position has been affected, where they have been relegated, where they have been put, in the list of heir you will simply be astounded. If you kindly see the Seventh Schedule which has been sought to be made applicable to a Hindu in regard to inheritance, you will find that the first clause includes seven kinds of people and I want to know, Sir, how this new principle of natural love and affection is affected by this provision. In the first place Son: widow; daughter: This I can understand very well. Then you find 'son of a predeceased son': Even there I will allow it. Then comes 'widow of a predeceased son'. Sir, I do not understand how under the law of natural love and affection she is preferred to a daughter, son or an uncle. I do not think that so far as the question of natural affection is concerned, the widow of a predeceased son, or son of a predeceased son of a predeceased son can be accepted. My opinion is that the Bill is based on a wrong stand-point if it provides for them. I can understand if this is only for providing for ladies, if they were not provided elsewhere. If they wanted not a widow, but the wife or a predeceased son or the wife of a son, I can understand it.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: This is by statute. If my honourable friend will read the Women's property Act, 1937, he will understand why these people have been put in the category simultaneously.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The friend of Dr. Ambedkar knows it quite very well. But in that 1937 Act when that provision was made, the 'daughter' was not included.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I have said so.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: You want to add this to enable the daughter to succeed a father and succeed the father-in-law too. This is absolutely unfair. I do not see why you do not provide for this when you are making a new Code. You were making laws in which all claims should have been satisfactorily met, how should you have put in these provisions, because the Act of 1937 was there. I do not think this committee was justified in doing this. They ought to have given a full code in which every claim was satisfied. You cannot justify it otherwise. Therefore, you took protection under that Act. That is the position, Sir.

When I come to clause 2 of the original bill the 'mother' was considered as the better heir, because the 'mother' was a class by itself and the mother succeeded alone. Here I can understand natural love. Now the father has been placed along with the mother and they both come together. But if you proceed further what I maintain will be better understood. When you come to the second case, you find son's daughter, daughter's daughter. The son's daughter has got a special place in Mitakshara law and according to Mitakshara, she is one of the favourite heirs. What happens now, Sir, is that in the original bill in the first class, the daughter's son preceded mother and father. Now the daughter's son is sent on to the bottom. Then if you proceed further, Sir, in class IV, the brother and the sister come. And in class V, brother's son, sister's son, brother's daughter all come in. I can only state that a brother's son is made equivalent to a sister's son and a sister's daughter. Now, this is equality run mad, I should say. In our families, we know what is a brother and a brother's son. This is the result of the system or the institution of a family as we have been observing for the last 1,000 years. We cannot get away from this violent conflict. You are introducing provisions in this Bill which will make every person rebel against you, because these innovations in practices cannot be made by order. According to the provisions of this Bill, every Hindu, male and female has got an absolute right of making a will and every male and female in future will be absolute masters of their inheritance. You have given in my hand a power to the detriment of the ladies and I do not want that it should be used to the detriment of the ladies. After all, a father when dying will be within the power of the sons and the sons will see that the father disinherits the daughter by will. While I am saying this, I may tell you, I have a daughter and I have provided for her when I provided for my sons. In the house in which I have been living with my sons and in the house in which my sons' wives have been living, I do not want that the daughter and her husband, her father-in-law and mother-in-law, her elder-brother-in-law should all come and occupy some rooms. That would be an impossible proposition.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Under the Bill there is not much chance of the father-in-law and mother-in-law being protected.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: They can come with the son-in-law. I will show there is a very good chance of a thing like this taking place. The father who does not want to touch even water at the house of the daughter, will get the property of the daughter, and her husband. I am coming to that subsequently.

I am only submitting that the ladies will be under a greater jeopardy of losing their rights in this way. The father will disinherit the daughter. She is not a heir according to class I; she does not succeed to the property of the father-in-law as wife of the son; but she succeeds only as a widow. Where is she then? I do not understand. She will be put to a great loss. I want, Sir, that the women should get their full rights. The theory which I have propounded,—I have not given very great thought to it—I have only submitted it for the consideration of the entire House and for the consideration of Dr. Ambedkar—I do not know how it will affect other interests—there may be flaws and I do not vouch for it—but I consider, at the same time, that it will be a better arrangement than the present arrangement. The theory is that an unmarried daughter succeeds simultaneously equally with the son. The woman on marriage becomes joint owner in husband's property as husband would be joint owner in her property, then both succeed in husband's family.

Then, again, Sir, what would happen to the brother's son? and the sister's son? They are both on the same level. The brother's son lives in the same house probably or next door and does service everyday; the sister's son lives at Allahabad or Madras or some other place. How will they be equal. In regard to other provisions also,—I want to be brief—if the House wishes me to go into the other provisions also, I am perfectly prepared and I have got full notes about the changes and how they affect us—but I would be taking up the time of the House in such a manner as to deprive the other members of their opportunity.

Honourable Members: You may go on.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: There are many other considerations which go to show that this provision in clause (2) is not well founded either from the point of view of consanguinity or religious efficacy and even from the point of view of natural affection and love.

Next, I come to the succession of the female. After the Hindu Code Bill comes into vogue, the lady succeeds to the property of the father as well as to the property of the husband. Suppose the lady dies leaving husband and children, it is clear that the husband has been given the right and the children also succeed. So far so good. Then, when the husband and the children are not there, who succeeds? The father and mother of the lady. These people—there are lakhs like them—who do not even want to touch water from the house of the daughter, will get the property. (Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: "Why" You cannot understand this; it is my difficulty. You cannot realise this. May I submit, Sir, that as soon as the father gives away the daughter to the son-in-law, the father never goes to the house of the daughter, never takes his food in her house and never even drinks water in her house, so that the purity is maintained that no daughter may be given in marriage for mere consideration or any other material gain. That is the basis. There are many people who would not even go to the village where the daughter is married. We must recognise facts as they are; it is no use saying that they do not know. It is quite possible that they do not know. It will happen that the father-in-law would get property bequeathed by the lady. That will be an intolerable position. Supposing a lady does not leave a husband and children and neither a father nor a mother, what happens? This is a crucial point. The property has been inherited by the lady from the father. The property, in the absence of husband, children, father or mother will not go to the son of her father. Let me put position clearly. The property belongs to A's family. The property will not go to A's family, the brother of the woman, the real brother made of the same flesh and blood, but the property will go to hundreds of people of the husband's family of the list that you have given here. Since the woman is dead, leaving no husband and children, father and mother, in that case, the property is not inherited by her brother or brother's son or others, but it goes to the family of the husband. Why is it so. Because your Select Committee have not been able to shake themselves from the considerations which have been influencing the entire community for a very long time. (Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: "What is the present position?") We are not concerned with that. You know the present position very well. It is stridhana; it is not inherited by the daughter; the position is different. I was submitting the property of one family is not inherited by the brother of the lady, but it goes to other people. This is a position which I cannot understand. But, you must realise that this is the position. You may remedy it; I beg of you to remedy it. This is a question on which you will be well advised to review. This is one of the points which I submit for your consideration. I will leave this question of succession at this; there are many other considerations which could be placed before you.

Then, I come to the power of disposal. I quite understand the very great hardships when there were restricted rights in regard to women's property. So far as the joint family is concerned, it is sought to be crushed under this Bill. The joint family is mouldering away; it is crumbling. From a very long time, certain circumstances have so arranged the fate of the joint Hindu family that it cannot survive. Sir, I do not want to shed tears over its going away. The Income-tax Act is the greatest monster in killing this joint Hindu family. I know that the joint Hindu family cannot stay for long. But, so far as this Bill is concerned, if it says that in future they will be tenants in common, I have no quarrel. This was given in the other Bill and this is also given in this Bill. I am too much of a realist to cry that my sacred ancient joint Hindu family goes away. There were days when there was great use for the joint family. Now we are turning back to co-operative forming, co-operative holding of properties, etc. At the same time, we are providing social insurance, etc. We are doing all these things in such a manner that we are reverting back to the principles on which the old joint Hindu family was doing. That is beside the mark; so far as the law goes, so far as the general circumstances of the country go, so far as this joint family is concerned, I do not think that it must be said.....

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram (Minister of Labour): It is a lost cause.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Whatever you may say, Sir, there is no question of cause here, I do not like the idea that legislation should kill the joint Hindu family.

In regard to marriage, Sir, I have to submit a few considerations more. It is a very difficult matter.

An Honourable Member: That has been dealt with before.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I have placed some considerations before.

An Honourable Member: This is second marriage.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I find myself in very good company when I make.....

The Honourable Shri Jagjivan Ram: You are, with the Law Minister himself.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Shrimati Ammu Swaminadhan, Mr. Shiva Rao and Shrimati Renuka Ray wrote as follows:

"Regarding clause 6 of Part II of the Code on 'Forms of Hindu Marriage', we would point out that there are, in certain parts of the country, long-standing customs or usages which recognise as valid marriages which would not come under the category of either sacramental or civil marriages in accordance with the provisions of this Part. We would therefore suggest a proviso at the end of clause 6 to confer validity on such marriages."

What is this? I understand that the trouble is the same in that part of India from which Mr. Bharathi comes.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Luckily I do not come from that part. I come from Tamilnad and they come from Malabar.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: So far as the question of adoption is concerned I find a similar thing in this dissenting note. So it is not the Punjab alone. It is also in other parts in which the rules of marriage and divorce and adoption are different from the orthodox rules and all of them should be protected, and I am very glad that these dissenting members represented their constituencies too well in making this observation.

I was speaking of sacramental marriages. So far as the non-sacramental marriage is concerned I have not said a word about it. I want that to be protected. In regard to sacramental marriages, the havoc played by the Committee is inexplicable. I do not understand for once how the civil marriage should be included in this chapter. If it is a civil marriage, it is a subject for the civil code. We have the Act of 1872. It is a very defective Act and I have submitted a Bill to put it right, and the Bill which I moved a few days back in this House for validating the marriage of all others, that would protect us much more than the inclusion of this civil code here. I am in favour of a civil code for the whole of India and I want the rules to be the same for all. It is our duty to do so but why should we include the civil marriage here? If it is to take away the evil effects of that law, then the other course is open. What happens in this civil code and the new kind of marriage which is neither sacramental nor civil but a registered sacramental marriage in which though the marriage takes place by virtue of a sacrament, yet if it is originally incestuous, then you go to a registering officer and you get it validated?

Shrimati G. Durgabai: It is only optional!

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I have replied, it may be optional but does it conclude the matter? The Hindu Code says that there are five conditions when the marriage takes place otherwise the marriage will not be permitted. The words are "conditions relating to sacramental marriage". That means in fundamental matters, as soon as one of the provisions is contravened, you allow the law to secure you to get away from the effects of that flaw. As regards the prohibition of the sapinda relationship, I beg to submit the difficulty is that the uniformity of law which we aim at is very difficult to secure in a country like India. It has been said that bringing about such a uniformity will be miraculous. I congratulate Dr. Ambedkar in working out that miracle and I am for this miracle being worked out. But when there are legal difficulties in local matters in which the conflict from the present position to the position that we want to see enacted is very great and very violent, I would ask of the House to so arrange matters that this conflict is avoided.

Now, Sir, I come from a place in the Punjab where there are villages upon villages having the same gotra and they believe that they are descended from the same common ancestor. You know this sapinda relationship which restricts the line of ascent and descent to three or five is not sufficient so far as those people are concerned. I do not want to say that you broaden it further. At the same time this will be unacceptable and a thing with which we could never reconcile ourselves, if you ask us to allow a marriage of sapindas. This is an impossible position so far as we are concerned, and if you allow this then you are really cutting at the very root of our social system as is enjoyed in the Punjab for a very long time. This is my feeling also for the whole of India. Of course, I do not speak for the rest of India because there are certain gentlemen who question it. My view is that in the whole of India the position should be the same. Well, I am not dogmatic about it, but this is a very wrong rule that we are enacting and that the requirements of section 7, that marrying couple should not be sapindas should be waived in so far as registered sacramental marriages are concerned. So far as the Sarda Act went, a marriage once celebrated according to the Hindu Law and our notions, was always indissoluble. We are making a break from this rule in so far as we are providing for disrupting marriage by codes or customs. Otherwise when rule 3 has been abrogated, you can convict a man and send him to jail. I have submitted to the House through a bill that where a person not of proper age is married instead of a fine he should be imprisoned and the law should not be vested with the discretion that he should be allowed to go free. The whole country was against the Sarda Act and the present provision shows that if Rule 3 is followed, then the marriage will become avoidable. This is going against principles which we have not accepted for more than 20 years.

So far as the main provisions in the Hindu Code are concerned, I have dealt with them in brief with a view to bring them to the notice of the House and since my feeling is that the Bill is not going to be throttled out, I will deal with those matters when the clause to clause stage is reached.

To sum up, I want to say that so far as this House is concerned, it will be well advised in either sending this Bill out for circulation, because in that case nothing will be lost—as a matter of fact much will be gained: public opinion will be consulted and the public will feel that they are not being ignored. As a matter of fact many amendments have been made even after it has come from the Select Committee: even before the Select Committee the people in general did not know anything about it. In spite of all that has been said, I am convinced that people know about it. Dr. Ambedkar referred us to the two gentlemen who drafted this report and said that they were very good people and not such people as could be regarded as very much advanced in their views. I have got with me so many opinions of high court judges and more opinions are pouring in every day. All these people are against it. I did not want to read them out from the evidence that is printed in the report of the Hindu Law Committee. I would with your permission refer you to page 139 of this report, where there is the evidence of a lady, Miss Subrul, Principal, Patch Chand College for Women. She said:

"The unmarried daughter, one who is not fit for marriage, or one who has made up her mind not to marry should get the same share as the son and she should also be subject to the same obligations as the son. A married daughter should not have any share in the property. If an unmarried daughter marries, her share should go back to her brothers."

When the Committee was in Lahore to record the evidence, it is said in the report.

"As a matter of fact in the Punjab where I was presiding over the meeting of this committee some 500 women entered the Commercial Museum Hall, Lahore, where the meeting was held said with folded hands 'Do not bring son-in-law into the family and ruin our business.'"

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava]

In regard to business if you kindly consider what effect this will have on the business people you will simply be scandalised. A prosperous business conducted by a father and his sons is going on. The father dies and the business is run by the joint efforts of all and then the son-in-law gets in. What will happen to the business? It will go to dogs. I would refer the House to page 139 of the report. It is wrong to say that all the ladies are in favour. Thousands of enlightened ladies did not favour this, not because they did not want the daughter to be given any rights. I reiterate that so far as I am concerned as also those persons who think in the same way as myself, we do not want to see that the daughter is not given the full right or that women are not given their full right. We want women to rise to the same stature as man and to have the same rights. I am one with Dr. Ambedkar. I am like him a progressive conservative. I like that expression very much. I do not belong to the advanced school of thought. This Bill is not either revolutionary or radical, as Dr. Ambedkar said. This Bill deals with certain matters but the Bill has to be improved. Today there is in the Hindu society some sort of introspection and it is able to see that there has been decay. It is our duty to see that the dilapidation is repaired in the words of Dr. Ambedkar. I therefore submit that from this point of view let no body run away with the thought that we do not want to do justice to our sisters and daughters. If our sisters and daughters carry an impression like this they are entirely mistaken. I know about your good self, Sir. You are also in favour of this view that their rights should be secured. I therefore submit that this should not be looked at from this point of view. I want this Bill to be circulated and it may be taken up after the next elections when we have a more representative House. I do not maintain that this House is not fully competent or sovereign. If the House persists in proceeding with this measure there is no wrong in it but I would like to see that this Bill is considered and that justice is done to every interest concerned. At the same time what I do want as a lawyer and as a member of this House is that this Bill should be considered again by the Select Committee, even if it be for two hours, so as to remove all these defects and to legalise the original Bill being considered clause by clause and then this very Bill may be substituted if the Select Committee so pleases. I maintain that it is absolutely wrong to say that the original Bill was considered in the way in which the law required it to be considered or that the amendments were moved or accepted in the usual manner as is done in every Select Committee. This was not done. We should be quite cautious that we do not allow the thing to be done in a way which is fundamentally wrong. I would beg of Dr. Ambedkar to consider the question if he is satisfied that my objection is right. I would beg of him kindly to consider the point of view of the poor Punjab people who had no representation on the Hindu Law Committee.

Honourable Members: What about Dr. Bakshi Tek Chand?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava. If you speak of Dr. Tek Chand who was on this Select Committee I will be very glad if you will give him his due. If he had not written this dissenting note where would you have been? If you accept him as a man whose views ought to be respected then go by his views. This is my submission. I am only a mouthpiece or a loudspeaker of what Dr. Bakshi Tek Chand has written. He has said in his note that you should allow nomination of an heir, that you allow divorce to take place in the same manner in which it is taking place today and he has also mentioned about non-sacramental marriages. In all these points when you take his name I beg of you kindly to follow him in what he has said in his dissenting note.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shrimati Renuka Ray.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, my grievance is not being heard.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member's grievance will not go unheard.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: May I submit that I had certain points and I would like to have got the advantage of those points being made and the replies given to them.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member will have the advantage of his observations going unchallenged.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I do not like it; Sir.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have already ruled that the honourable Member will not have his turn now. I have called Shrimati Renuka Ray.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: The Bill that is under the consideration of this House now, or rather the principles embodied in it, have been on the anvil of this legislature since 1943 and the insistent demands for these changes that are embodied in this Bill have been before the country for a very much longer time. It was more than 100 years ago that Raja Ram Mohan Roy wrote a treatise called "The Rights of Females to inherit property and their rights of marriage", and this matter was first brought to public attention. Since 1931 and 1932 there has been an insistent demand throughout the country, and at that time the need for the removal of legal disabilities of women and the need for a uniform and comprehensive code of legislation was made manifest in this country. Due to the fact that on the anvil of the legislature there were a number of Bills dealing with this subject, due to the fact that piecemeal legislation was leading to anomalies in law and because of this insistent demand, the Government of that day was forced and compelled to appoint the Hindu Law Committee better known as the Rau Committee on Hindu Law. It was as a result of the report of this Committee that the two Bills on intestate succession and marriage were introduced in 1943. At that time the opposition that has now again reared its head also came to the forefront. The substance of the opposition was the same as it is now but the approach was a very different one. The approach was naturally different because it was made to an alien government. The approach was made on the lines that they were the loyalists who were the ardent supporters of the Government, that it was the Congress, which was agitating, that was behind this demand which the women of India had brought forward and that the Government should not give any credence to it. I am not making statements without foundation. It is true that the nationalist press of this country did not give that opposition much chance. Yet the opposition did bring out many pamphlets wildly abusing our national leaders, not even sparing our beloved leader Mahatma Gandhi. There was a weekly paper produced called 'Hindu' in which these Bills were attacked and they were attacked on the basis that the national leaders of this country were behind it and it was due to their advice and under their influence that this was being done. Coupled with this factor, when the Government found that the women of this country were not willing to agree to those machinations which wanted to further divide and bring discord among them, when they realized that women were against separate electorates and that they stood behind those who were in the vanguard of the freedom movement of this country, then there was not much hope that a legislation of this type to improve the lot of women and to give them their rights would go through with the alien government in power. It was then that we realized that it was necessary to wait till a national government came in. Later the Government appointed the Hindu Law Committee, and the Bills were re-circulated. This Committee as the House knows, presented its Report after touring the country, taking the opinions of thousands of individuals and organisations in 1946 after the

[Shrimati Renuka Ray]

Interim Government came in. I will not recapitulate the subsequent steps when this Bill was reintroduced after 1947 in the present Legislature as these are well known to the Members of this House. But I merely want to point out that the opposition which is in substance the same, in character the same, has a new approach. I would like to know who are they who were opposed to the Congress in those days to say today to the Congress 'You will lose your elections if the Hindu Code Bill goes through' I would like to ask them when they were deliberately against the movement for freedom—when they neither supported it nor sympathised with it—when it was in spite of them that the Congress won the elections and the country's freedom, who are they today to tell the Congress that they will not win the elections. If anyone of them comes into the legislatures of the country today it is by the grace of the Congress and so it shall be tomorrow also.

This opposition that has reared its head and which is similar in character as before, has resorted to many devices. It has resorted to various types of tactics. The House is aware of the fact that the Governor-General's name was used and this was found to be a fraud. Only two or three days ago in a newspaper in Calcutta I saw the name of Shyama Prasad Mookerjee after that of two or three other well-known oppositionists and I was a bit surprised until I saw in small brackets the words "(of Uttarapara)". Sir, it was obviously intended to mislead, and if questioned they would have pointed out "of Uttarapara." These are the devices, these are the tactics that are being used by the opposition. As you know, we do not question those who have genuine differences of opinion. But this type of tactics that are employed today.....

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: On a point of information, is it not Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee?

Shrimati Renuka Ray: No. It was not the Minister of the Central Cabinet. I do not know which Shyama Prasad Mookerjee he is.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I thought the description was "Dr. Shyama Prasad Mookerjee, President of the Hindu Mahasabha".

Shrimati Renuka Ray: That is not so. It was "of Uttarapara". Such are the tactics adopted by them that even Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad is taken in by them. The orthodox opposition has found its greatest champion from amongst the members of a community which recognizes the daughter's rights of inheritance. It is extremely surprising that the honourable Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad would deny to his Hindu sisters the rights that his own women have.

I would further say that there are some people who have asked "How is it that telegrams, circulars, and posters are being displayed by the opposition all over—at least in Delhi—and that M.C.A's are being flooded with wires; and how is it that those who are in support of the measure do not do the same?" Sir, those who support this Code are also representatives of social welfare organisations; they are people who work for the good of this country. Today when there is a national emergency in regard to any funds that they have, they would not consider it right and proper that they should use such funds in sending wires and letters when they can be used for the rehabilitation of refugees. One wire to M.C.A's in this House costs Rs. 165. With that money for three months a refugee woman can be given vocational training for rehabilitation. Do you want that these wires should be sent to you? I think it would be wholly wrong for such a procedure to be adopted. If we have not issued posters and circulars and wires it does not mean that the demand for the changes does not continue to exist.

I will not go into great detail on the provisions of the Bill after the brilliant and masterly analysis of the Honourable Law Minister. It is quite unnecessary. Unity is something we desire in this country, and a uniform and comprehensive Code of law for Hindus who are the majority in the country is surely a necessity in that case.

Turning to monogamy I would like to ask is there any one in this House or in the country who would contemplate with equanimity the fate for his own sister or his own daughter of being the first wife of a man who has married again. It is true that polygamy is not very customary: It is on the whole rare in the country. But in recent years we have seen that polygamy has become more frequent, and to the eternal shame of Indian womanhood there have been women who have knowingly and willingly agreed to become the second wives of such men. I do not think that I need elaborate the point that law must come forward to redress the grievances and the miserable plight of the women who are first wives of such men.

Turning to inter-caste marriage and sagotra marriage, when in the Fundamental Rights of our Constitution we say that all discrimination on account of caste and sex and other such things should go, surely inter-caste marriage which is a permissible measure will be only the very first step towards it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Caste can go; how can sex go?

Shrimati Renuka Ray: I said 'discrimination on account of caste and sex'.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member may go on.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Turning to the divorce provision in this Code, I concede that these are restricted conditions. The home is the nucleus of society and I do believe that the primary reason for marriage is that it is for the protection of children and as such divorces should not be allowed on flimsy grounds, but for genuine cases of hardship we have to provide. Since 1943 when the Marriage Bill was first introduced I have had scores of letters and scores of people have come to me with their daughters who have shown to me how grave and how terrible is the hardship which the women do suffer. Unless there is such a provision, both for men and women, it will not meet genuine requirements.

Sir, let me dilate for a moment when I speak on this point, because the opposition about which I spoke have been going round telling many women who do not understand law or the provisions of a Code, that their own women were trying to bring in laws by which they will be divorced. They do not realise that it is only a permissive measure, that it is only the aggrieved person who can claim divorce, and for whom alimony is provided. These things are not mentioned. At hundreds of public meetings these matters were brought to me and I had to explain the point, and I think the women Members of 4 P. M. this Assembly can also say the same thing.

Turning to the joint Mitakshra family, I do not think there is any need for me to add one word to what the honourable the Law Minister has said on the subject. It has been fully amplified by him.

So far as the daughter's right of inheritance is concerned, it is the focus of the opposition. It is only natural because that alone proves that it is not bigotry so much, not blind prejudice so much, but it is the vested interests that are up in arms. The honourable the Law Minister has already spoken on this point, but I should like to say one or two more things. The economic status of a woman can only be established by the recognition of the daughter's right to inheritance. It was a point that was brought up by my honourable Friend

[Shrimati Renuka Ray]

Seth Govind Das yesterday. He said—I do not know how far he believed in it—he said, “Why should we have inheritance?” Certainly, I do agree that a time will come and must come—if we want and believe in equality of opportunity for all, if we believe that disparity of wealth shall go—a time must come when inherited property must go out. But until such time, if there is a difference between the daughter and the son, then that difference means a difference in the status. It is the daughter’s status that has to be recognised; she as a daughter, as a woman, is a natural heir. It is not merely from the theoretical point of view that I mention this. We are dealing with intestate succession and it is far more natural that a father will not disinherit his daughter, than a father-in-law would, in spite of what my honourable friend Pandit Bhargava said. A woman’s rights in the joint family, which in years gone by may have served a very useful purpose, have not under the existing conditions been so sure in recent years. My honourable Friend Sucheta Kripalani made a point yesterday which I would like to endorse. Those women or men who are social workers know that an analysis of the inmates of rescue homes in this country will go to prove how many of these women are those who have been turned out of the joint family. Without having the training to earn their own living, turned out of their homes these women have been forced to live a life of shame. That is a question which the Hindu society must face. I am sure those who propounded the Hindu laws would never have contemplated such a state of affairs.

Women are the mothers of the race. No race can advance till its women can be responsible mothers and conscious citizens. There has been a good deal of propaganda done about educated women. A handful of educated women, it is said, want this Hindu Code or want this very halting and mild measure of reform. Sir, so far as women are concerned, it must be a handful because after all the educated element of this country is 15 per cent and the women who are educated are about 3 or 4 per cent even now. So, so far as the women are concerned it must be a handful, but behind them are, not today only but from decades past, the large mass of enlightened and progressive men who stand behind them. It is not the women of this country who alone are responsible for the fact that there is no suffragette movement, no feminist movement in this country—it is because their champions have been enlightened men, for decades past. Today the same state of affairs exists and I am sure that the majority in this House are also behind us. It is not a demand from the educated women of this country but a demand from all those who want that India shall progress. For, without women becoming conscious citizens taking the rightful place in society, it is not possible for us to progress.

Sir, it is well-known that slaves have resisted when the Shackles of their slavery were removed. It is a fact that serfs have objected to freedom. What is more, coming to our own country, it was held by the British that it was only the wretched Congress agitators who wanted freedom but that the mass of the people were quite willing to remain in the pathetic contentment of thralldom. If you speak today of pathetic contentment amongst the women, it is true, it is perfectly true that many women are not yet conscious. But is that a reason that you will not awaken them, that you will not make them conscious, that they should not become equal with men in the joint enterprise that is before us today of building a new India in an atmosphere of freedom? I ask, is there anyone who feels that it is possible to go ahead without the women of this country?

Before I conclude, I will say a word or two about what my honourable Friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava has said: I must say that I could not quite follow him. This morning he called into question the competency of this Legislature, and in the afternoon just before he sat down he said that he...

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I never questioned the competence of this Legislature.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: So, I suppose what he said last is what goes. He spoke a good deal about the eleven notes of dissent. But as he knows and as the House knows, many of these notes of dissent were on minor issues and such notes of dissent are usually attached to all Bills and it does not mean therefore that a Bill should be re-circulated. This morning Pandit Bhargava said that two wrongs do not make a right when he said that this Constituent Assembly obviously is not fitted to draw up the Constitution of India. I wonder, considering that it is such a wrong thing, how he remains in that wrong Assembly. I am not going to contradict him or speak again on all that he has said this afternoon, because I think it was very ably answered before he ever spoke by the Honourable the Law Minister and Pandit Bhargava contradicted some of them himself.

There is one last point that I would like to make. The cry has been raised that Hindu society is in danger because of this mild, halting measure of reform. I too think that Hindu society is in danger. It is in very grave danger—danger from those who would bind and fetter it; danger from those who would not allow out-worn customs to be changed but would allow them to choke up the life-blood of our society. If those who today appear to be so concerned about Hindu society would give a little thought, they would agree with what the Honourable the Law Minister said, namely, that you must repair if you want to survive. I do not know who has given a prerogative to some people to stand up for Hindu society. I do not consider those who wish to bind and fetter Hindu law which has been changing with changing times throughout the centuries to be the exponents of Hindu society and Hindu law and those who wish to improve it and bring it back once again to the culture and heritage of our forefathers as people against it. I think it is those who would bind and fetter it, who are not the friends but the enemies of Hindu society. If Hindu society is to regain all that it has lost during the many years and the many centuries of decadence when Hindus were slaves, it has to come in line with the atmosphere of freedom that prevails in this country today. Men and women have to come forward equally to work for the country and there cannot be equality if there is no equality in the social laws of this country. Therefore, I plead that those who today are opposing this Code should give it a little more thought. If they do not, it may be that Hindu society and Hindu law may be left behind, for the march onwards must go on and India is not going to go back to slavery or domination by others.

Shri V. S. Sarwate (Madhya Bharat): I would offer my congratulations to Dr. Ambedkar for his learned and lucid exposition of the Bill, becoming as it was to a professor and an advocate that he is.

As regards the several provisions of the Bill, one would necessarily find himself in agreement with some and in disagreement with others. This is not the occasion to dilate much either on the points of agreement or on the points of difference. I would, in the general discussion, confine myself to certain broad principles and I would try to show that in these principles the Bill goes in a fundamentally opposite direction to the notions which have all along, in my humble opinion, been lying behind Hindu law.

[Shri V. S. Sarwate]

There has been a considerable section of Hindu society against this measure. It cannot be denied; it cannot be concealed. Some may say that it is a cry of "Religion in danger"; it is sentimental; it is reasonless. All the same, those who are bent upon making legislation which vitally affects a society of more than 20 crores would do well to pause, ponder and consider its substance. They should consider what is there in the Bill which makes so many people—intelligent, educated people—to be against the Bill.

[At this stage, Mr. Deputy Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao (one of the Panel of Chairmen)].

I submit that there are two reasons for this. The first point that I would refer to is the change in the nature of the joint property. I would submit that the co-parcenary aspect of the joint property has certain very noble ideas behind it. The co-parcenary means that there is a community of interest, as every member of the House knows. It means that every individual has the fullest right of enjoyment but he has no individual share nor the right to alienate the property. The whole trend of modern society, the progress of thought of the society, in my opinion, is in this direction. We may condemn Communists, but Communism in its pure form, pruned of certain things, is bound to come and would come. What does Communism mean in this aspect? As I understand it, it means "From each man according to his ability and to each man according to his necessity". In other words, a man is to enjoy the property in his hands to the minimum. He has to divest himself of individuality. He is never to consider that he has an exclusive individual interest in the property. If this is the basic understanding and if the world of progressive thought is moving towards this direction, I believe it would be admitted that it would be wrong to go into an opposite direction. Every effort should be made to promote such an idea and to promote such institutions as foster this idea. Dr. Ambedkar in his speech showed at length the attempts which have been made so far by the Smritikars and others to fritter away this idea of co-parcenership. Assuming that this is so, the effort now should have been in the opposite direction—not to complete the process of frittering but to restore the co-parcenary property.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Impossible.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Impossible? Yes, everything that is not attempted is avoided by saying it is "impossible."

Nothing is impossible in this world if you try. Now therefore I submit that the idea behind the co-parcenary property system is admitted. Each individual member or co-parcener has to enjoy in full the common property, though he has no exclusive individual interest in it and he cannot alienate his interest in it. So when you attempt to deal with it, this co-parcenary you should take the idea as a whole. The idea of the joint property, as conceived by Mitakshara, seems to be this: that there is right of survivorship, and that each family is a unit and not an individual. It means also that the family continues though the individuals in it pass away and whether one is a male or a female one has a right of equal enjoyment. There is equality of sex in this sense. Therefore it follows that whatever is the property of the family has to go to those persons who constitute the family. Therefore if a daughter does not constitute the family, if she is the member of another family, she would necessarily not enjoy any right in that family. It is not neglect or unfairness or want of affection for a daughter. The very idea of a joint family is this: that whosoever is the member, whether widow, male or female, as long as he or she continues to be member of the family, he or she enjoys the property of the family which nobody has a right to alienate. I would have welcomed a provision to the effect that there would be no partition of joint family property and that no person or individual of the joint family has any right to alienate the family property. That would have been very welcome and in the right direction. That would have been according to the idea which is fundamentally behind the joint family system. It is the family which is taken as a unit of society and not an individual. Conceived from this point of view, no sister of mine need think that she has been ill treated, because she and her brother enjoy equal rights in this respect. I would therefore submit for the consideration of the Honourable Dr. Ambedkar that in such a vast country like India, nothing would be lost if there are separate experiments on social units. If it is wanted that an individual should be a unit, let that experiment be tried somewhere. If the joint family should be the unit of society let that experiment also be continued in some places. We are a sufficiently large country to have different experiments in society. Let both continue and let the persons choose the law or system they want to follow. So, instead of having one codified uniform law for the 20 crores of India, nothing would be lost if we have more than one system prevailing in this country.

I may in this connection refer to one of the observations made by Dr. Ambedkar. I admire him for his erudition. I heard him with respect, because in the course of his arguments he never descended to have a fling at somebody. His attacks were heavy, but they were straight and level. But, in the course of his remarks the other day, in the course of his otherwise lucid speech, he said that he did not know why the Brahmins of old were engaged in composing so many as 137 Smritis and enquired whether they had no better engagement. I believe when the Honourable Minister said this, his historical perspective left him for a moment. I may remind him that these 137 Smritis were not written simultaneously. They were written in a period covering more than 250 years at the least. Thus on the average it took them about 20 years to write each Smriti. That means one for every generation. But here what happens is that during the space of one year the Honourable Doctor prepares more Smritis than one. So he need not have indulged in that unedifying observation. It was also very unnecessary for the development of his argument.

Sir, I was dealing with joint family property. I submit that the basic principle of joint family property is this: that it allows restricted enjoyment.

Sir, the question is often asked, what is Hindu culture; what is Hindu religion as such? Where angels fear to tread it is difficult for others like me to rush. All the same one has sometimes to make provisional attempts and I shall make that attempt. I think, as far as the present topic is concerned, the fundamental points which the Hindus have kept before themselves are that there should be restraint on enjoyment all along. Not encouragement of enjoyment but restraint on enjoyment was their rule and, according to them, for the community of interest, the individual should lose himself.

Now, applying this principle of restraint, I submit that the whole Chapter on Marriage has to be recast. In this respect it has been stated that because ninety per cent. of the people by custom have this right of divorce, what are you going to do? It is asked, are you going to impose this custom of ninety per cent. on the remaining ten per cent? I submit an argument of this sort is a very good piece of rhetoric, but not of logic. What we have to consider and what the Honourable Doctor has to consider is not what is the custom, but what is good and what is beneficial. We have to consider what ought to be there. That has been the criterion all along and that should be the criterion. There will otherwise be anomaly. For instance, among ninety per cent. of the people there is the custom of drinking. We are certainly not for the matter of that prohibiting prohibition. It cannot be denied that there is the custom of drinking.

[Shri V. S. Sarwate]

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: It is not a custom.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: All right, you may think so. I am at liberty to express the thing in that way. (An honourable Member: "There are not ninety per cent. drunkards.") It is one thing to call it a custom in the community and another thing to call them drunkards. That is the difference. It is no argument to say that a certain custom is there and therefore it should be continued by law. The argument should be whether it is beneficial and if we consider from this point of view, and if a certain section of the Hindu community says that marriage is indissoluble, why force them and say that there shall be a dissolution, if the parties so choose? Argument may be advanced, that there is in this Bill no necessity, there is no compulsion, but there is an option. The option is always there. The option to a drunkard is he may or he may not go to the drinking shop. There is always the option, but he does go all the same when there is a drinking shop and a drinking shop has therefore to be closed by law. If it is to apply to a certain portion of the society, I would have welcomed it. In law of marriage, there should be monogamy. I admit it. I would go further and say that if you consider that from the point of view of restraint, there should be no second marriage either of the women or of the men. That would have been a welcome provision, but instead of that we are going to the other extreme and providing that every marriage should be if so chosen liable to be dissolved. This is not desirable to my mind. No doubt Divorce was allowed by ancient Hindus at a certain point of time. It was prohibited later on whatever may have been the historical conditions first. The reason appears to me is this that the unity of the family was to be kept intact. They wanted that the marriage once performed should not be dissolved so that no other woman should come in; and that the woman who was in the family should not go away and another should not come in. That contingency should be avoided as far as possible. To my mind this was one of the reasons why a marriage was not allowed to be dissolved. Therefore, my suggestion is this: Let there be two parts in the section of 'marriage'. Those who want that their marriages should be dissolved, let them marry according to civil marriage and let there be free dissolution of marriage for them according to the provisions which you make here. Let the other part be there, which may be sacramental, and in that part let there be no dissolution of marriage. This would, I think, satisfy both the parties. My humble submission is this: Why should dissolution be forced?

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: In that case they will have to decide for separation before they marry.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: I believe my honourable friend has misunderstood me totally. What I say is that those males and females who want that their marriages should not be dissolved should marry according to the sacramental rights and those who wish that their marriages should in future be dissolved let them marry according to civil marriage.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Does my honourable friend mean that there should be divorce before the marriage?

Shri V. S. Sarwate: Civil marriage does not mean divorce. It neither means separation nor divorce. When I say civil marriage, it means marriage; it cannot mean divorce.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: It does not mean even marriage.

Mr. Chairman: Order, order. Let the honourable member proceed with his speech.

Shri V. S. Sarwate: My submission, Sir, is this: Let us get clear in our minds whether we are going to force certain things which certain sections of the people do not want? I go further and say when you once admit that sacramental marriages are sacramental, then let religion be the test for providing the conditions for such a marriage. If religion allows child-marriage and marriages of minors, let it be allowed. It is a contradiction in terms first to say that a marriage should be according to religion and then to add that it shall be according to religion and also according to what is provided in this Bill. That is contradiction in terms. Either allow sacramental marriages or do not allow sacramental marriages, if you do not like that. In that case, say that all marriages will be civil. If you say sacramental marriage is to be allowed, then the marriage has to be performed according to the sacraments. This is my humble contention and in so far as the provisions of section 7 of the Bill are concerned, they are not according to sacraments. There are certain other things added to sacrament. That should be strictly according to the religion, if religion is to be allowed. This is the second thing which I bring to your notice and this can be very easily done. This would satisfy and may to a great extent remove the causes of dis-satisfaction which at present exist. Dealing with principles only, my simple suggestion is this, that in this very Act there should be provision which should allow society and the joint family in co-parcenary form to continue. Nothing would be lost thereby. In this country there are Muslims, there are Christians, there are Parsis—Parsis are a very small community—and still if they are allowed to have their own law of succession etc, what would be lost if a certain larger section is allowed to have co-parcenary, if they so chose. If this principle is once accepted then changes can be made in the whole draft according to that principle.

My further submission is that the Bill may be re-circulated for opinion. Here I do not touch on the ruling which has been already given by the Chair. The question that then arose was whether for purposes of the rules publication was sufficient and the ruling was that it was sufficient. That does not however preclude me from raising the point whether it is desirable that the Bill should be re-circulated. My submission is that it has been lost sight of that the Bill if passed would be automatically applicable to states whatever Dr. Ambedkar may say to the contrary. My humble opinion is that it would apply to all those territories of states which have merged in the provinces and all those areas which have agreed that the Centre would have the power to legislate for them.

Shri Sita Ram S. Jajoo (Madhya Bharat): What is the objection if it applies to Indian States as well?

Shri V. S. Sarwate: What I am saying is that it should apply. I am in favour of it. I do not understand, why honourable members without allowing me to speak, go on anticipating me and pass certain remarks. I was submitting that the Bill should apply to the Indian States. I was only submitting that if it is to so apply and that is very much my wish, then there arises a fundamental right, which you ought in justice grant to every large area which is to be governed by your bill, to express its opinion. This Bill was not published in these large areas and therefore the peoples there were not in a position to give to the Bill that serious consideration which they would otherwise have given. Now when they know that the Bill would apply to them, and the Bill is published, they would be in a position to express their reaction. It is a fundamental right of every person to be given an opportunity to express his opinion regarding any legislation which is going to affect him. It is further the duty of every representative of theirs to ascertain their views before he gives his vote here. Therefore, both from the point of view of the representatives of the States and from the point of view of the people of the States, it is only just that some time should be allowed to them to give their opinion. Therefore, I suggest a via media, that if in any case this Bill is not going to be finished in this session, if that be the contingency, which I think it may be, the honourable the mover of the Bill may consider whether it would not be desirable to take this up in a special session later on; the time that may intervene, namely two or three or four months would be quite sufficient to get the reactions of those people. I think this would be just and would also be in accordance with the spirit of the publication provisions. I appeal to the House to see whether justice does not require this. It should not be presumed that the last word has been said on the Code. It may be that the humblest of the humble may come forward with suggestions which may be useful to the learned Doctor. If opportunity is thus given, it would both satisfy the ends of justice and may be useful also.

With this appeal, I have finished, Sir.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Mr. Chairman,.....

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): On a point of order, Sir, can a bachelor who has not married and has not begotten a son too offer pind to his forefathers make a speech on this Bill and contribute to the discussion?

Mr. Chairman: There is no point of order in this, as long as he is a Hindu, he can speak.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I shall also answer the point of order, Sir, rising, as I do, after two lawyer friends and a woman friend, I fear I am labouring under a handicap. I have neither the legal acumen of my honourable friends Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava and Mr. Sarwate, nor the sweet reasonableness of my honourable friend Shrimati Renuka Ray. As far as the lawyers are concerned, I am sure that my honourable friend the Law Minister will take care of them and will reply to the arguments that they have raised in the course of their speeches today. As regards Shrimati Renuka Ray, I am broadly in agreement with her and so there is no need for me to take up any of her arguments with a view to counter them.

My honourable friend Mr. B. Das raised a point of order when I stood up. That very point of order, I think, goes in my favour. I feel that my only claim to speak on this measure before the House is that because I have neither a wife, nor children nor property worth the name, I can bring to bear a dispassionate mind to bear on this subject, unswayed by emotions of the heart. Most of the provisions of this Bill relate to marriage and property, adoption and succession, provisions regarding matters which could be summed up in two words of most of our philosophers, namely, kamini and kanchan. Not having been so far encumbered with either, I hope I will have your indulgence and the indulgence of the House in making a few remarks on this Bill in a more or less disinterested manner, not uninterested, but disinterested manner.

This century, the 20th Century after Christ has, as we all know witnessed the emergence of women upon the stage of history, in Asia, as well as in Europe and America. India and our Hindu society have been no exception to this world movement. Fatefully interlocked with all the revolutionary upheavals which in our own time have been ripping open and transforming old societies inherited from the nineteenth century and its long past are the relations between men and women. Our age has been marked by the dynamism of women who, with men, have set the world on fire. (An honourable Member: "But you are an exception.") and have also helped to frame plans for the world's reconstruction. Breathes there, I ask, a man with soul so dead, who does not recall with pride and a certain elation of the heart, the remarkable and heroic achievements of women—aye, poor, ignorant illiterate women—on the field of non-violent battle called Satyagraha, and ever on that more sanguinary field of battle, of blood and iron, of fire and steel. The hand that rocks the cradle has shown itself strong enough to wield the sword and gentle enough when necessary to raise itself in benediction against the aggressor. Leaving aside other lands and other climes, in our own India, we all know how women, along with men, though quite ignorant of modern warfare and though quite unimured to the lathi, the bullet and the prison, how they have flocked in thousands to the banner of Mahatma Gandhi and Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose. This story is too well known; for me to recount at any length. It is in this context of fast developing social and economic change that we have to view the measure that has been brought before the House. For, no law can function or can be made in a vacuum and no law can be divorced or viewed apart from the social milieu in which it has had its birth. In short, this age can be summed up in the facetious remark of a wag who said that today, women sit in Parliament and stand in buses. This in a nutshell, is the revolutionary change that has overtaken the present age, Sir, I feel that I am more or less a political Parivrajaka परिव्राजक and I set forth a few observations on this Bill.

I am glad that my honourable friends in this House who are not immediately affected by this measure have taken such great interest in this Bill. My honourable friend, the redoubtable Pandit Naziruddin—I feel, Sir, that the titled is not entirely unreserved. If, Sir, Mountbatten could be called a "Pandit" on the 15th August 1947, I feel that Mr. Naziruddin has a greater claim to be called a "Pandit" than Lord Mountbatten of Burma. Many such friends have been taking an interest in this measure and I welcome it as a happy sign of the times and a good augury for the future, for thus we are going in the right way of being one unified society, and ere long we will have one uniform civil code for the whole of our country.

Those Members, within and without the House who are not wholly in favour of the Bill and who do not want to go the whole-hog in this regard, take their stand—at least some of them—on the Smritis the Shastras and our Dharma. Well, Sir, what is Dharma? Unless we decide that question, we cannot appreciate or reject the stand that some people in this country are taking with regard to this measure. Dharma! Is it merely a code of ritual and externals and ceremonies, or is it something deeper, that pertains to the soul, the heart, the mind and the spirit? Dharma! The etymology of this word in Sanskrit is—Dharma is that by which the world is supported, yenedam dharyate jagat. That by which the world—"jagat"—is supported is Dharma.

Now are we not to ask whether the observance of a few ceremonies, rituals, and formal conventions constitute Dharma, or whether it is something deeper?

As regards the Smritis which are interlinked or interlocked with Dharma, my honourable friend Dr. Ambedkar said the other day that there are perhaps 137 Smritis. If I am wrong he will correct me. I believe he has counted them: Of the Upnishads it is stated there are 108 and so many other unknown and unearthed Upnishads. There may also be many more

[Shri H. V. Kamath]

Smritis, unknown and unearthed. Of the Smritis known to Dr. Ambedkar there are 137. And now we have got the 138th Smriti. He will pardon me if I refer to this, not in a light-hearted fashion, because this is also a measure, which although not revolutionary, has introduced changes in our Hindu social relations. So I can apply the same term as has been applied to the other Hindu social codes and social texts that have been already written for us. This we may call the 138th Smriti. I may call it the Bhim Smriti. I hope Dr. Ambedkar will pardon me if I refer to this as the Bhim Smriti. If I have got to include the name of the other protagonist of the movement, which has culminated in the drafting and the presentation of this Bill, I would refer to it as the Narasimha Smriti. It is the Rau Committee which has led to this Bill. Ultimately I will not refer to it as the Bhim Smriti but the Bhim Narasimha Smriti.

Coming to the measure before us: though the Smritis are well-known, still they differ among themselves. The same Smritikara at times differs in different texts of the Smriti. It is very well known that even a poet is not consistent in his poetry. Shakespeare referred to women in one play as "Frailty, thy name is woman": in other play he goes on to describe a woman who was strong enough to inflict wounds in her own thigh: I mean Portia of Brutus! Coming to our own country, the great poet and philosopher, Tulsidas has said: dhori ganwar Shudra aur nari yah sab tadana ke adhikari. For the benefit of my friends who do not know Hindi, it means that a rustic, an illiterate man, an animal, a shudra and a woman—these all deserve a beating.

Shri Raj Bahadur (United States of Matsya): I would inform the House that the interpretation put by Mr. Kamath upon this well known couplet is absolutely incorrect.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I hope my friend will give us his interpretation when he has to speak.

Shri Raj Bahadur: It means that a Shudra who is like a Dhol or is uncivil and a "nari" (i.e., woman) who is like a pashu (beast) deserve admonition. It means that Dhol, (hollow) Shudra pashu, (beastly woman) deserve chastisement.

Shri H. V. Kamath: But our law-giver Manu says: yatra naryastu puyante ramante tatra devatah.

It means that where women are respected, there the gods are happy.

Leaving aside the various Smritis and the Shastras, what does our own—the greatest Shastra to the Hindu—says? At the time when the Gita was preached by Srikrishna to Arjuna, there were so many customs among the Hindus which were derogatory to certain sections of the people that Srikrishna categorically told Arjuna in one of the well known texts on the highest goal of any human being:

STATEMENT RE LOCOMOTIVES IMPORTED FROM U. S. A. AND CANADA

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister of Railways and Transport): During the discussions on the Railway Budget, the Honourable Shri Mahavir Tyagi expressed misgivings regarding the order recently placed by the Railway Board for 300 locomotives in the U. S. A. and Canada; certain criticisms have also appeared in the press. In my speech at the close of the debates on the 23rd instant I commenced to reply to these but was unable to complete it for lack of time. At the request of the honourable members present and with the concurrence of the Honourable the Deputy Speaker, I undertook to make a statement to the House giving the real facts, and with your permission, Sir, I now make this statement in compliance with that undertaking.

2. The criticisms levelled against these locomotives are broadly—

(1) As regards design—

- (a) that they are too heavy for Indian track;
- (b) that they are not intended to run on track supported by wooden sleepers;
- (c) that they are of a type suitable only to American conditions, and will not give satisfactory performance in India;
- (d) that they are designed to draw heavier loads which will require considerable alteration in the existing yards; and
- (e) that they are provided with bar frames which cannot be repaired in our Workshops.

(2) In respect of placing the orders—

- (a) that no effective tests of this type were conducted;
- (b) that the number ordered is too large for our requirements; and
- (c) that orders were not placed on the Continent of Europe.

(3) In general—

- (a) that Mechanical Engineers were not consulted in drawing up the design and that, when consulted later, they were of the opinion that it did not fit in with Indian requirements;

[Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar]

- (b) that Government had to incur considerable expenditure on deputing experts to America to investigate this question; and
- (c) that a large number of locomotives of this type which had arrived in India, are idling as being unsuitable.

3. The recent orders for locomotives include 300 broad gauge WP type with one firm in the U. S. A. and two firms in Canada; 20 metre gauge YP type engines with one firm in the U. S. A.; and 150 metre gauge YG type with two firms in the U. S. A.

4. The WP type was evolved by the Railway Board in 1946 as an Express Passenger locomotive designed to burn inferior grade coal, with a tractive effort almost exactly that of an older type with a heavier axle load. As a first step, orders were placed for producing 16 locomotives of this type as prototypes for trials in India. Owing to the inability of the U.K. Manufacturers to produce these prototypes quickly, the order was transferred to a firm in the U. S. A. The first of these locomotives arrived in India in October 1947, and was put immediately through tests which, besides the usual ones, included boiler performance, fuel consumption with varying loads and on varying gradients, oscillation and hunting. The locomotive was also tested under "worn condition". The results were examined in the Central Standards Office for Railways and by the Railway Board, and the design was finalised in consultation with our Consulting Engineers, a British firm, whose expert personally visited India for the purpose. The WP type was also examined by the Locomotive Standards Committee, who raised no major objection. Whatever modifications were considered necessary as a result of the tests were incorporated in the final design before bulk orders were placed.

5. The WP locomotive has an axle load of 18.5 tons as against the axle load of 19.8 tons for the XC type Pacific locomotive with the same tractive effort which has been in use in this country. The total static plus hammer blow loads under the driving wheels total 12.4 tons for this type of engine as against 14.5 tons for the XC type, which means a reduction of 15 per cent. We have at present in use in India for goods traffic a certain number of locomotives of the XE type with an axle load of over 22 tons. The WP design is therefore very much lighter than a number of types which we have in the country including even the type in use with the same tractive power. This locomotive is considered safe for use on 80 lb. track, and most of our main lines are laid with 90 lb. rails and some sections with even heavier rails, namely, 100 lb. and 115 lb. The factor ruling the weight and type of engine that can run on any track is not the type of the sleeper on which the track is laid but the weight and type of the rail. The statement that the new WP engines are too heavy for the track has therefore no justification. Reference has also been made in the criticisms to the engineering works in progress in the Ghats near Bombay. These works have been undertaken as measures of safety and have nothing to do with the WP engine. I may mention that the WP engine has passed over the Ghats on the existing track on its journey from Bombay to Bhusaval.

6. I have already mentioned that, before the bulk order for WP engines was placed, extensive tests were conducted on the prototypes and the results analysed in consultation with the Consulting Engineers. The performance of the WP prototypes was so good that Railway Administrations specially asked for them. The 16 engines are operating on the E.I., G.I.P. and B.B. & C.I. Railways, working Mail and Express links very satisfactorily. The General Managers of all the three Railways have throughout expressed satisfaction at the performance of these engines, with the exception of minor defects, steps to rectify which have already been taken in the bulk orders. In view of the apprehensions voiced in the House, I discussed the matter on the 24th with the General Managers of the three Railways on which these locomotives are now in use—who happened to be here for another conference—and they have since submitted to me written reports stating they are fully satisfied with the suitability and performance of these locomotives.

7. The provision of bar frames has come in for severe criticism on the ground that our Workshops are not equipped for undertaking repairs on them. It is correct that we have not yet done this kind of work, but there should be no difficulty in obtaining at once the necessary equipment for doing it and in training the staff for it in a short time. Steps are being taken towards this end. Workshop adjustments of this nature are inevitable in the adoption of any change in design. Every country in the world except the U.K. has adopted the bar frame and this design has been regarded by the Consulting Engineers, a British firm, as an improvement on the plate frame.

8. The reference to heavier loads in the design of the engine is probably to the WG type which is a goods locomotive with a bar frame. It is not dissimilar to the American and Canadian built engines which were imported during the war. The reason for evolving this new type was that the boiler design was the same as that for the WP and therefore more suitable for the use of inferior grade coal. The WP and WG boiler being similar, a greater degree of interchangeability and standardisation will be achieved, and this is expected to assist considerably in maintenance.

9. I have also already mentioned that, in drawing up the design of the WP engines, the Locomotive Standards Committee consisting of Chief Mechanical Engineers of Railways were consulted, and such minor points raised by them were considered by the Railway Board in consultation with the Consulting Engineers. But before placing bulk orders for the WG type, "trial before purchase" was not regarded as necessary. The British firm of Consulting Engineers, who examined the proposals, were however fully consulted. The WG is a high tractive effort, but slower speed, locomotive of a wheel arrangement known as 2-8-2 and not of the Pacific or 4-6-2 type. The 2-8-2 type is inherently one which is not sensitive to developing hunting or other dangerous tendencies. It was on the considered advice of our Consulting Engineers that a bulk order for 100 WG locomotives was placed with a firm of loco manufacturers in the U.K.

10. The number of locomotives becoming overage, and due replacement by March 1950 is about 1,470 and by February 1948 orders had been placed to cover only 489. It was necessary to bridge the large gap and, after investigation by the Chief Commissioner of Railways, orders were placed for an additional 390. Including these, the total orders placed so far cover only 879 locomotives, against the replacement requirements of about 1,470 by March 1950. The fear expressed that the orders so far placed by the Railway Board for locomotives are in excess of our requirements is therefore unfounded.

11. Our need for locomotives is urgent. The deciding factor in placing orders has been the price, delivery dates and the willingness of the manufacturers to produce in accordance with Indian designs. Orders for these locomotives were placed in the U. S. A. and Canada as the locomotive builders in these countries offered terms most suitable to us.

12. The criticism that Government had to incur expenditure in sending experts to America to investigate this question of design of locomotives is not correct. No expert has been sent out to America for this purpose.

[Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar]

13. Of the WP locomotives, so far only the 16 prototype engines have reached India. Therefore, there is no question of locomotives idling because they are "unsuitable". The first batch of the 300 WP locomotives is to be ready ex-Works in February/March 1949, and all the 300 should be in service on Indian Railways by the end of 1949.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): Sir, on a point of personal explanation...

Mr. Chairman: No questions now.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I do not want to ask any question, but I only wanted to say a few words by way of personal explanation.

Mr. Chairman: Order, order. The honourable member will remember that this Statement has been made in response to the request of the House that a statement might be made on the question. Therefore no questions arise on this Statement. Copies of the Statement will be distributed immediately to the honourable members.

PAPERS LAID ON THE TABLE

BUDGET OF DAMODAR VALLEY CORPORATION

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil (Minister of Works, Mines and Power): Sir, I beg to lay on the table the budget* of the Damodar Valley Corporation for the years 1948-49 and 1949-50 under sub-section (3) of section 44 of the Damodar Valley Corporation Act, 1948.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (West Bengal: General): This also may be circulated to the Members.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: It is being done.

HINDU MARRIAGES VALIDITY BILL

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): I move:

"That the time appointed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide that marriages between Hindus, Sikhs, Jains and their different castes and sub-castes are valid, be extended upto the 25th March, 1949."

The date given here on the order paper is 11th March, but with your permission I would like to amend it to 25th March as the honourable the Law Minister will be out of Delhi and he will not be able to devote much time to it. Therefore I move the motion with this amendment.

I want to say that I am very anxious that this Bill may be put before this House this session and therefore I request the honourable the Law Minister and the authorities in charge of this Bill to kindly see that the Select Committee makes its Report by the 25th March. I also beg the House to supplement my request to the authorities so that, as the Bill is a very important one, it may be passed this session.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): The matter is entirely in the hands of the Select Committee. What has the House to do in this? My honourable Friend should request the Select Committee to expedite their Report and I think they will be pleased to do it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: I want an extension of the date. I want to urge that it is my anxiety that the Law Minister should see that the report is made in time and the House should support me in this.

*Not printed in the day's Debate. A copy placed in the Library of the House.—ofDED

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the time appointed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide that marriages between Hindus, Sikhs, Jains and their different castes and sub-castes are valid, be extended upto the 25th March, 1949."

The motion was adopted.

HINDU CODE—contd.

Mr. Chairman: The House will now proceed with the further consideration of the Hindu Code.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Mr. Chairman, when this House adjourned on Friday afternoon the name of Shri Krishna was on my lips I was saying that even so far as the highest goal of human existence is concerned man and woman have been placed on an absolute footing of equality by Shri Krishna in the Gita. The Gita to the Hindus is the sacred smriti, the supreme shastra, the quintessence of all philosophy and all religion. In that, very well-known verse, Shri Krishna says—

"Streeyo vaishyastatha sudrastepe yanti paramgati."

Women, Vaishyas and the Shudras who were apparently the down trodden and the suppressed classes or castes of that age, even they—Krishna says—are on a par, on a footing of equality, with Brahmins and the others.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): You are right, Mr. Kamath.

Shri H. V. Kamath: So far as moksha and the paragati are concerned, there is absolutely no bar to the attainment of the same by women. I am sorry that at the present day there are some men, and even certain swamis—so called religious or spiritual heads—who believe that man and woman should be placed on an unequal footing. I agree that they are not identical in all respects...

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U. P.: General): How are they equal?

Shri H. V. Kamath: But to say that they are unequal and to buttress that argument by fantastic reasons is to my mind shocking. The other day I had the good-luck—or the ill-luck—of listening to a swami saying that man and woman are unequal. And, pray, what were the reasons for that statement? He said—fantastic, the House will agree—he said that man grows a moustache and women does not. I am not joking, Sir, many of my friends were present at the meeting which the swami addressed, and he said it in all earnestness, in all seriousness, that man grows a moustache, woman cannot grow a moustache, and the woman at most can bear three, four or five children in a year.

An Honourable Member: In a year?

Shri H. V. Kamath: Depending upon whether she produces triplets, quadruplets or quintuplets. Sir, he went on to say that man, however is potentially capable of being the father of a hundred or more children. This, Sir, to my mind is a fantastic argument.

When we talk of equality of man and woman, we regard that on a spiritual basis which has been envisaged again by Shri Krishna in the Gita. He says:

"Sarvabhutasthamatmanam sarvabhutani chatmani."

That is the basis, that is the yardstick, that is the measuring rod for equality of human beings or between man and woman.

"Yo mam pashyati sarvatra sarvam cha mayi pashyati."

This is the test, this is the criterion, this is the standard, this is the yardstick for equality of human beings, whether high or low, rich or poor, man or woman.

[Shri H. V. Kamath]

Well, Sir, I do not subscribe to that notion of inequality propounded by the swami. On the other hand, I also do not believe that woman—as some of them do today—attain equality with men by taking to smoking and drinking. That again, Sir, is something which is to be deprecated if by that they seek equality with man. Nor do I subscribe to the progressive conception of woman—progressive in the Western sense—who, perhaps in imitation of the West and so trying to be progressive, take to ball-room dancing and other Western habits. This, Sir, is also to my mind no way of securing equality with man.

Shrimati Purnima Banerjee (U. P.: General): It is not included in the Hindu Code. Does she dance alone without a partner?

Shri H. V. Kamath: I know that but we are talking of the equality of man and woman. And here, Sir, our great savant and philosopher, Dr. Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan who is an authority on Hindu dharma and Hindu way of life, says:

“The modern women, if I may say so, is losing her self-respect. She does not respect her own individuality and uniqueness, but is paying an unconscious tribute to man by trying to imitate him. She is fast becoming masculine and mechanical.”

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): What about the modern man?

Shri H. V. Kamath: I hope, Sir, our women will take this to heart and will not undertake such attempts at equality with man.

Shreemati Annie Mascarene (Travancore State): May I ask the question whether modern man is in any way better than that?

Shri H. V. Kamath: That is for women to answer.

Well, Sir, when I therefore talk of equality between man and woman I have before me the historical examples of Sita, Savitri, Damayanti, Gargi, Maitreyi and Ubhayabharati. Will you permit me to read from our own ancient history about these women and the place these women occupied in our ancient Vedic times and even later, on which so many of our opponents to the Hindu Code depend today? It is said that in the Vedic and Upanishadic age, woman occupied a very high place in society. Among the exceptional women of Upanishadic times the name of Maitreyi stands out in bold relief. The lustre of her spiritual mind illumines the world even today. For sheer intellectual acumen two women stand out in singular brilliance. An all-India religious conference took place—it has been the tradition in this country to have conferences of all sorts and religious conferences were not an exception—an all-India religious conference took place in the pre-historic age and another in the post-Buddhist age. They had been summoned not for mere academic debate but for the establishment of principles that should govern the spiritual life of the nation. The former was championed by the sage Yagnavalkya, the same as our law-giver, and the latter by the great Shankaracharya. The first conference, Yagnavalkya's conference, was convened by King Janaka, the great Janaka, the karma yogi, when the sages assembled from all quarters of India, from Kashmir to Kanya Kumari and I suppose from Khyber to Cherapunji, are silenced. Gargi boldly rises on behalf of the women, championing the cause of the humiliated. That, Sir, is the ideal towards which our women ought to be progressing and which they will, I hope, attain ere long. Gargi is defeated, but only after putting up a tough fight.

In a second Conference, Sankara Acharya's Conference, the task of presiding over this momentous meeting falls upon Mandanamishra's wife, Ubhayabharati. Now, it is very important—and I would like my women friends to mark this—that in the history of the world there is not a single instance of a woman being chosen as a judge of an important meeting and making such an exceptional demand on her intellectual ability as well as integrity. She gives—Ubhaya Bharathi—gives the verdict in favour of Shankaracharya. (Honourable Members: Hear, hear.) With the result that her husband becomes a monk and a disciple of his opponent, whose view henceforward becomes acknowledged as the paramount creed of the country. “In fact”, the author says—I am reading from the “Cultural Heritage of India” published by the Ramakrishna Mission—“it is not the original authors”—mark these words “it is not the original authors”—“with the emancipated mind of creative thinkers but the mechanically minded commentators”—Tikakars, not the smritikars, but those who wrote tikas—“who worked for the suppression of the rights of women, whom they bluntly assumed to be in league with ignorance and illusion.”

Now, Sir, many of our friends who are opposing this measure,—I do not mean in the House but those who are outside—they take their stand on Dharma. The other day I posed this question, “What is Dharma?”. One of the pamphlets issued by the Anti-Hindu Code Committee presumes to give us some advice, and what is that? They quote the old sloka—I do not remember exactly where it occurs—but the Panchathantra quotes it:

“Nasasabha Yatra na Santi vridhdah, vridhdinateye na vadanti dharmam.”

That is not a Sabha or Assembly where there are no vridhdahs.

An Honourable Member: But we have so many of them here!

Shri H. V. Kamath: That man is not a vridhdah who does not talk of Dharma. I, Sir, am sorry that our friends of this Anti-Hindu Code Committee have not exactly understood the meaning of “vridhdah”—who is a vridhdah and who is not. In the Mahabharata there is a story: Saraswata Muni, a young boy of twelve, when there was famine in the country and all the old rishis who were fasting and doing penance on the shores of the Saraswati river fled for fear of their lives—they wanted to save their lives—this young boy at that time stuck to his post and his mother Saraswati fed him on fish in the morning, fish at noon and fish at night—that is why Saraswat Brahmins even today eat fish. This Brahmin boy, in spite of the famine, stuck to his post. The story goes on to say that the famine raged for many years in the land—twelve years—but our young boy, Saraswat Muni—the progenitor of all Saraswats in the world—continued to stay. After the famine was over, the rishis who had fled for their lives started coming back in dribblets, one after another, to the shores of the Saraswati river to resume their tapasya interrupted by the famine and they tried to boss over this young boy of 24. He was 12 when the famine started, and he was 24 when the famine ended. They started bossing over him. They said, “You sit at our feet; take instructions from us; learn from us; become our disciple.” He said, “Fie on you. Shame on you. You pretend to be munis, rishis, tapasvis, and you fly for your lives; you fly for fear of death. You have got to sit at my feet and learn from me.” Thus said the young man of 20 to those old men of 70 and 80. The Mahabharata goes on to say:

“Na tena vridho bhavati yenasya palitam shirah yo vai yuvapyadhyastam devah sthaviram viduh.”

(A man is not a vridhdah merely by virtue of his grey hair. Even a youth who has studied well is called a wise man by the gods.)

That man is a vridhdah who has attained vriddhi. Actually the word “vridhdah” is wrongly translated as old. It means that man who has attained vriddhi, you call it, wisdom, growth, development—that is vridhi...Here our friends say:

[Shri H. V. Kamath]

"Na sa sabha yatra na santi vridhdah—

Vridhdha na te ye na vadanti dharmam."

I think that even in that sense of "vridhhi" or wisdom, there are a number of my friends here who will live up to that standard. But my friends have stopped short of quoting the whole shloka. They start by saying:

"Na sa sabha yatra na santi vridhdah

Vridhdha na te ye na vadanti dharmam."

But what is Dharmam? The sloka goes on to say later on what is Dharma. These fellows conveniently omit that portion of the sloka. The sloka goes on to say:

"Dharmah sa na yatra na satyamasti"

That is not Dharmam where there is no satya. Therefore, my quarrel with those who take their stand on dharmam is that they have not understood what is Hindu Dharma.

I will again crave your indulgence to tell the House what our great savant and philosopher, Dr. Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan has to say on this subject, especially Hindu Dharma: He tells us:

"There has been no such thing as a uniform stationary, unalterable Hinduism whether in point of belief or practice. Hinduism is a movement; not a position; a process, not a result; a growing tradition, not a fixed revelation. Its past history encourages us to believe that it will be found equal to any emergency that the future may throw up, whether on the field of thought or of history. . . ."

We are happy that today the prediction is coming true. It was Swami Vivekananda who said fifty years ago that Vedanta will become the religion of humanity—the vedanta which has been given to the world by our seers, rishis and munis. Radhakrishnam goes on to say:

"We are beginning to look upon our ancient faith with fresh eyes. We feel that our society is in a condition of unstable equilibrium. There is much wood that is dead and diseased that has to be cleared away. Leaders of Hindu thought and practice."

I hope, Sir, that most of our friends here are in their own way leaders of Hindu thought and practice, I am sure of that—

"Leaders of Hindu thought and practice are convinced that the times require, not a surrender of the basic principles of Hinduism, but a restatement of them with special reference to the needs of a more complex and mobil social order.

"Such an attempt", he says, "will only be the repetition of a process which has occurred a number of times in the history of Hinduism. The work of readjustment is in process. Growth is slow when roots are deep. But those who light a little candle in the darkness" will help to make the whole sky aflame."

I would commend this statement of the Hindu Dharma to those of my friends who oppose the Bill, even the consideration of the Bill, on grounds of Dharma. Who does not know and who does not recollect that this cry of 'Dharma in danger' or 'Society in danger' was raised by those that wanted to block every reform of Society attempted in the past? Is it not a fact that twenty-five years ago, when the movement against asprishyata (अस्पृश्यता) untouchability was started, some of our men, even high-class orthodox Hindus, said that Hinduism was in danger, social order was in danger and that disruption of society was coming? Yet, did we not persist in that much-needed reform? Did we not help to accelerate the evolution of Hindu society on an egalitarian basis? As a culmination of these attempts have not we adopted an Article in the draft Constitution prohibiting untouchability and banning it in any shape or form? If we could do that in spite of what the orthodox pandits claim for Hindu Dharma, surely I do not see any reason why we should not proceed to legislate or provide for the regulation of social relations and personal law.

Again, Sir, honourable Members will recollect the opposition that was started against the Sarda Act, which tabooed child-marriage, on the ground that Hindu Dharma was in danger and that Hindu religion and Hindu society were in danger. In the last century when the custom of sati, cremation of the widow with her husband, was sought to be abolished, these same reactionaries who block the road to progress denounced the attempt stating that the Hindu Dharma sanctioned sati and that it granted the highest salvation to women and therefore it should be continued. In spite of their agitation and obstruction, much-needed reforms like that were put through.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava said the other day that this Bill had not reached the rural population and that the rustics, the people in rural areas have not seen or read or considered it. He expressed anxiety to know their reactions to the Bill, before it was proceeded with in this House. When he said so, he forgot the fact that some of the Bills he himself had introduced had not been seen by the peasants of his own Hissar. I wonder if on his advice we are going to circulate copies of our Bills to every village and hamlet and homestead in the country.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): Peasants do not count these days.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I am astonished to hear from Mr. Tyagi that peasants do not count in these days. If they do not count, who does?

Honourable Members: You.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I am indeed grateful for the compliment. I hope, Sir, in the near future, not merely I, but all my friends in the House will count equally with me.

Sir, while I have every sympathy with certain observations made by Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava, I do not think that his opposition to the Hindu Code Bill on the ground that there has been no circulation or proper publication among the people affected, can stand scrutiny. That argument is absolutely untenable. In that way, every Bill sought to be passed here, which affects the lives of millions, would have to be sent to them, in order that they may register their approval or disapproval of the same.

Now, Sir, this vexed question of equality, I hope I have disposed of in a satisfactory manner. Sir, men and women are equal on a spiritual basis. The Gita, the Smritis and Sri Krishna himself have preached this doctrine of equality.

Coming, Sir to the question of property, property has been, according to most philosophers, political, social or otherwise, the root of almost all evil in the world. In this regard I subscribe to the proposition made by Seth Govindass—he is not in the House now—that it would be best if private property were abolished. Even litigation will decrease a good deal if this is done. One of our greatest law-givers and statesmen of ancient times—not Manu or Yagnyavalkya—but a warrior statesman, Bheeshma Pitamaha has expounded his doctrine in two parvas of Maha-Bharatha, viz., Shanti Parva and Anusasana Parva. There he tells Yudhistira about property: akinchanasya shuddhasya na tulyamihia lakshyaje akinchanyamcha rajyamcha tulaya samatolayam atyarichyate daridryam rajyadapi guradhiksm nityodvignohi dhanavan mrityorasyagato yatha. He tells Yudhistira that this kingdom and voluntary poverty he has weighed in the balance. He says that this akinchanya voluntary poverty has proved more than the other. Because, he said, nityo nityodvignohi dhanavan mrityorasyagato yatha. The nearest equivalent to this in English is "Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown". If a man has property he is afraid of death.

[Shri H. V. Kamath]

I am in agreement with Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava when he says that a wife and husband should become one not merely in love, but in property as well. Sometimes it happens that love is their only property: Husband and wife may have no property at all. Their only property may be their mutual love. But, Sir, we should face the stark reality of life to-day. It was, however, refreshing to hear Pandit Bhargava's personal experience in this respect. This world would be a happier place to live in, if men and women, husbands and wives are in the same happy position as Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava and his wife are. There are, however, hundreds of cases today where the relations between the wife and husband are not as happy as they should be, or as we wish them to be. (Interruption) I am speaking, Sir, from facts narrated to me by friends like my honourable friend, Mr. B. Das and I have come in possession of these facts, as told to me by my honourable friends, who have got experience in this direction.

Our Hindu Code Bill provides in this respect that a woman should be entitled to an absolute right in her property. In the Vedic ages and in the ancient ages, upon which our opponents of Dharma and the Hindu Code Bill take their stand, it was only in medieval times, when Hinduism was on the decline that women's rights to property came to be restricted—in the Vedic period the social position of women was generally high.

Mr. Chairman: There are a number of speakers, who want to speak. I appeal to the honourable Member kindly to be as short as possible.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I will try to be short, but I am afraid, the subject is so vast that it is difficult to be short.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister of Law): There will be plenty of occasion for Mr. Kamath to speak. There are at least 180 sections.

Shri H. V. Kamath: But I do not want to let some things remain unsaid today. Now in the Vedic period, I was saying that the social position of the women was high. An unmarried daughter was offered a share in her father's property, and the married daughter was given no interest therein, but she got ample dowry at the time of her marriage. So the argument advanced by my honourable friend, Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava, in this respect, I think, may be considered by the House and by the honourable Minister sympathetically; because fundamentally being opposed to property myself, I do not think that any purpose would be gained by making the property position worse than it is today: Dr. Ambedkar referred to an instance of the property of a Hindu family consisting of 12 sons and one daughter. That is very well for him to quote that instance, but may I quote the other instance where there are 12 daughters and one son. What will happen if the Hindu Code Bill as it stands is applied in this case? The family property will have to be divided among all the daughters and one son. The son will be left in a little corner of the house, and if the daughters get married, they have got the right to bring their husbands and they have the right to dispose of the portion of the House to a stranger. Therefore the one little son like a little mouse will creep here and there and he would not have even a comfortable cosy corner to live in.

Therefore, Sir, this question of property is a very vexed question and we might consider whether a daughter instead of getting the property herself, whether she might not be allowed an equivalent share of the property in cash or jewellery, or whatever she might choose to have, as it was done in ancient times and in Vedic times. There was no property share at the time of marriage but she was given ample dowry in lieu of the share of the property.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Chairman (Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao) in the Chair.

Mr. Chairman: Before we begin the debate, I would like to make a suggestion. There are about 25 names on the list. This is a very important measure and as many speakers as possible would like to give their views on the Code. Therefore, I would request honourable Members to be as brief as possible and refer only to the relevant points for or against the Bill.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): Sir, my name also may be included in the list.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): I did not know that I had to send in my name; I thought I would catch the eye of the Speaker.

Mr. Chairman: That is why I am telling honourable members to be as brief as possible and refer only to the salient points for or against the Bill. Members who want to speak may kindly send chits.

Mr. Tajamul Husain (Bihar: Muslim): May I know, Sir, whether my name is in the list? I spoke to the Deputy Speaker yesterday on Friday last.

Mr. Chairman: No harm in sending a fresh slip.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sir, before I resume the thread of my little speech, I may assure you that I shall take much less time than my honourable friend, Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava did.

Mr. Chairman: You have already taken an hour.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I said less time than my honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.

I was speaking about property: the basis for the allotment of property, was the principle which was expressed by Kanwa after he bade farewell to Shakuntala. Kanwa said:

"Artho hi kanya parakiya eva tamadya sampreshya parigrahituh jato mamayam vishadah prakamam pratyarpitaryasa ivantaratmo."

The first line, "Artho hi kanya" does not mean, as has been literally translated, that a girl is somebody else's property. It means that a girl separates herself from the father's home when she gets married. It was on this basis that she goes into another household that in olden times, Vedic and later times, that a daughter was given no interest in the property, but ample dowry was given. Again, in the Vedic and later Smriti times, only when a father had no son, he appointed his daughter as the Putrika and such a daughter was equal to the son. This principle can very well be considered by our new law makers. They may try to incorporate the gist of this principle in the Code.

I wish agricultural property were completely excluded as it has been already excluded so far as the Governors' provinces are concerned. I refer to Part VII Chapter I. Section 94 says: "This Part shall not apply to agricultural land in Governors' Provinces;" Already, there is a cry against the fragmentation of land. We may hasten slowly in this regard so that this may not lead to further aggravation of this evil. As a matter of fact, if the entire land is nationalised, then no difficulty will arise; so long as this question is hanging fire and is not finally settled, we may decide to exclude agricultural land not merely in the Governors' provinces, but also in the Centrally administered areas from the operation of this Part.

Now, I come to the great question which has agitated humanity from the dawn of time: I mean that of marriage and divorce. On this question, the principle that we should go by, that should be accepted in legislating on this subject must be, to my mind, "Marriage should be easy, but divorce difficult." I think if this sound rule were adopted for law making, it would solve many of our troubles.

Sardar Bhopinder Singh Man (East Punjab: Sikh): In your case, marriage is more difficult than divorce.

Shri H. V. Kamath: There are always exceptions to a rule; I suppose I am one of them.

If I may be allowed to quote a recent historic instance, der Feuhrer Herr Hitler in Germany, when he fought the election in 1932, one of his election slogans was, "a job for every German man and a husband for every German woman". This slogan brought him, I understand, millions of women's votes, when he promised a husband for every German woman. This proves to the hilt the principle that I have sought to place before you that marriage should be easy and divorce difficult. My honourable Friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava; the other day, while speaking on this subject referred to this and said that there are usages and customs in various parts of the country according to which divorce could be effected. There is even this simplest custom, I am told, according to which the man says 'Talak' three times and the wife is divorced. It may be that or some such custom; I do not know; that is why I said, I am told. I personally think that divorce should not be easy. One of the modern States, Soviet Russia, at its inception in the early twenties of this century, made marriage as well as divorce equally easy. But, by experience they have learnt that family as a social unit has got to be preserved and strengthened even in a communist State and therefore, now, though marriage is easy, divorce is next to impossible. I therefore think, however, much I am inclined to agree with Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava that certain usages and customs must be given currency and must be kept alive, as regards divorce, I think that the procedure adopted must be very difficult, so that, the family as a social unit may be strengthened and preserved.

There is one more observation that I would like to make on this subject. There are instances, Sir, where due to certain causes, a dissolution of marriage may not be quite desirable or may not even be agreed to by one of the spouses: by the husband or by the wife. In such cases, where the wife agrees that the husband may marry another wife, herself also living in the same or another house, I do not see any reason why, in spite of the reasons mentioned here, permission should not be granted to either of the spouses to marry when the other consents, without dissolution of marriage. In Delhi, we are aware of one notability who has got several wives living at the same time, though perhaps in different houses.

An Honourable Member: Who is that?

Shri H. V. Kamath: No names here please.

Mr. Tajamul Husain: I have not been able to understand; does my honourable friend agree with polyandry?

Shri H. V. Kamath: I will only say that.....

Mr. Tajamul Husain: Only an unmarried man can say so.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Sometimes, where a couple has been married for a long time, the Hindu mind cannot reconcile itself to the breaking of marriage ties with the wife even though the purpose of marriage is being frustrated. Therefore from the standpoint of love and humanity the new Code should provide, in my mind that on such an occasion a husband can get permission from his wife to marry another wife, and if she consents then the Court should not stand in the way. But the ideal of marriage as has been stated by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava should be one in property and love. I shall go further and say that there should be two minds with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one.

Shrimati Hansa Metha (Bombay: General): In Polygamy there will be more than two hearts.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I am not against polyandry if the husband does not mind it.

Shrimati Purnima Banerjee: Very liberal!

Shri H. V. Kamath: I take my stand on the principle of equality and I go to the extreme limit for both man and woman. It has been a regrettable incident or development of our history—our long and ancient Hindu history—that whatever rights women enjoyed in the early Aryan Age—the Vedic, Upanashad and Smriti age—these rights fell into disuse and were not given effect to in the later medieval age. I hope that this Code will so work that women, whose paradise was lost in the dark medieval age, paradise they will regain in the modern age.

I have received a little warning from a friend outside, telling me in the name of God, in the name of Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of the Nation, in the name of Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose, please do not vote for this Bill. That very argument, I think, very well applies to a vote in favour of the Bill. I can say.....

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): Is that friend male or female?

Shri H. V. Kamath: I can say, I make bold to say that in the name of God who has created man and women equal; in the name of the Mahatma, the Father of the Nation, who stood for the complete equality of man and woman; in the name of Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose, who sought and accomplished the complete emancipation of man and woman to the extent of calling women to battle if need be; in the name of God, in the name of Gandhi, in the name of Subhas, I think this Bill is a forward measure which will lead to the greater glory of Hindu society.

I have only one more remark to make. My honourable Friend, Dr. Ambedkar, said the other day in his peroration that either repair betimes or perish. We have to repair. Indeed we are repairing. I think the time has well-nigh come when, if we do not repair, then society will be rent in twain. A stitch in time will always save nine: otherwise the rent will grow more and more till society will be rent in twain.

I began, Sir, on Friday, the day before Maha Shivaratri and I am closing my brief remarks on the day after Maha Shivaratri. This day is sacred to the memory of one of the great women of the age—Mahasati Ma Kasturba and it is sacred to the memory of another great man—Swami Dayananda Saraswati. I hope their spirits—the spirits of Ma Kasturba and Swami Dayananda Saraswati—will inspire us in our work and help us in our difficult task. It is my hope and prayer to God that man and woman may travel together as pilgrims of life, dedicating themselves and consecrating their lives to the achievement of artha and kama, the artha and kama which are rooted in Dharma and which lead to the goal of moksha, the liberation from bondage, the goal of the Living God, in whom we live and move and have our being, and in whom all men, all women, all Creation, are equal, free and divine.

हरिओश्म् तत्सत् । ब्रह्माण्मस्तु

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): May I point out that I am getting more and more like an anachronism? I have undertaken the task of opposing the original motion but I have not spoken up till now. It may be that at the proper time I will be squeezed out. There are too many speakers to come. To-morrow at four o'clock I understand the closure motion will be put.

Mr. Chairman: It is impossible to squeeze out Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad. The honourable Member will have a chance. Mr. Jhunjhunwala.

Shri B. P. Jhunjhunwala (Bihar: General): I would like to speak at another time.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: He either speaks now or he does not. According to the rules, if a Member is asked to speak, he must speak; otherwise, he loses the chance to speak on the subject.

Mr. Chairman: Babu Ramnarayan Singh.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for the opportunity you have so kindly given me today to do my part to oppose the obnoxious measure which has come on the floor of the House for discussion. Sir, at the outset I must tell the House that I am not an orthodox man.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: You are not orthodox. I know you are not!

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I am one of those who wants that all that is old must be broken without delay. But everything must be done with wisdom. When a thing is to be done, wisdom demands that we should judge when it is to be done and how it is to be done. I tell my honourable Friend Dr. Ambedkar that I am one of his admirers. I feel that he is the pride of the country: he is my pride also. But I do not understand why such a learned man is engaged in such a useless and pernicious job. Sir, this is a government measure. I do not know what they understand by law. Law is nothing but the will of the people expressed in terms of law. I am sorry that the Government does not understand what is law. I say that a majority of the people of this country feel that this measure should not have come on the floor of this House.....

An Honourable Member: No.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Take a plebiscite and you will find it.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: We are here representing them.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Apparently it appears that there is a measure called the Hindu Code Bill and a discussion is going on in this House but in fact a conspiracy is being hatched to disrupt the Hindu society. I feel that it is something like a preparation to invade the Hindu society. Nobody can say how long this Hindu Society has lived and flourished in this world. I can say that since the very creation of the world, since the creation of the sun and the moon, since the very creation of the human race the Hindu society has lived and flourished and during all these periods there have been innumerable invasions of all descriptions against this Hindu society, Buddha came first. At one time it looked that Hindu Society would be no more but the world Guru Sankaracharya came and exported Buddhism from this country and re-established the Hindu society. Then Islam came. That was also an invasion like Buddhism but it was also a military one but I must say that Islam also failed in this country.....

Dr. Mono Mohan Das (West Bengal: General): Islam has become the Saviour and you have taken the protection of Islam.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Islam could not become the saviour but Islam too failed in this country. According to Islam there is no caste system in the Koran but some sort of caste system developed among those who followed Islam. In the same way Jainism, Sikhism all came in and originally they were all invasions against Hinduism but in course of time they became tolerant and tried to develop and flourish side by side with the Hindu society and religion. This time this is also a sort of invasion but this invasion is a democratic one, though the force behind it is a dictatorial one.

Some of my friends have already said that there has been a discussion in this House as regards the authority of this House to enact this measure. It is true and I feel confident that this House is not competent to enact a measure of this kind. This is not a constituent assembly even.....

An Honourable Member: What is it?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: It is a part of the constituent assembly. A large number of members of this House either by order or by convention have been asked not to attend this Assembly.....

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: With that the House is not directly concerned. The Speaker has already said that that is not a matter for the House.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Whatever may be the ruling of the Speaker I am not talking against that. I bow to the ruling of the Speaker but I am bound to speak for the world about the competency or authority of this House to enact this measure. The mandate of the country to the Assembly is to frame the constitution of the country. But so long as that constitution is not complete or has not come into force the Government must go on. It was by a hotchpotch agreement with the foreign rulers that this arrangement had been arrived at in order to pass the budget and any other important legislation necessary for the administration of the country. But such a measure like this against which there is a lot of hue and cry throughout this country should not have come before this House for discussion or enactment.

When I hear in this House as well as outside the cry about the equality of women with man I fail to understand it.....

Mr. Tajamul Husain: May I ask the honourable Member why he accepted membership on the select Committee when he is opposed to the constitution of this very honourable House.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: There are many people who are confounded. The measure was sent to the Select Committee. This means that the House accepted the principle of the measure but this does not mean that every member has accepted the measure or accepted the principle of the measure. There are so many principles involved in this measure that so far as the House is concerned nobody can say that it has accepted anything and everything.....

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: If it was sent to the Select Committee, it means that it accepts the principle.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: I was talking about the equality of man and woman. According to our Shastras man is not complete; nor is woman complete. According to our Shastras woman is called Ardhangi and even so man is not complete.....

An Honourable Member: What is man called?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Man is also half. I may tell you.....

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra (West Bengal: General): Sir, it is impossible to speak in the House when an honourable member addresses it on an important measure like this and there are innumerable criticisms, and running commentaries, and laughter going on simultaneously. It is not in the interest of the dignity of the House. Members who do not like the speech may at least keep quiet so that those who want to listen may at least listen.

Mr. Chairman: Honourable Members will kindly allow the speaker to proceed.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Sir, I thank my honourable friend Pandit Maitra for the encouragement he has given me. I was talking about equality. So far as the purposes of the world are concerned and so far as the continuity of the human race is concerned there is no question of equality or inequality 3 P.M. between man and woman. Nobody can compare the hand with the feet, whether the hand is more useful or the feet are more useful, whether this eye is more useful or that eye. Man and woman are one and nothing more than one. As regards law I tell my sisters throughout the country that law cannot help them. What can help everybody and also the womenfolk is love and nothing but love. Love between the pair is the only thing which can make the pair happy. Well, they may get the right of divorce. One woman may be divorced today; other women may be coming for—marriage the next day. Monogamy may mean many-gamy: you won't allow a man to marry a second wife. The first wife will be divorced and he will marry the second day. The third day he will divorce that wife also and on the fourth day he will marry again. The process will continue. So far as pure love is concerned for that I think character of the people is most important. We must realize that in this country the people lost their character first and then anything afterwards. So, whatever we have to do in this matter we have to regain our character. As I say that the importance of hand cannot be compared with the importance of feet, so the importance of man cannot be compared with the importance of woman. I can rather say one thing. According to our shastra they are the goddess Lakshmi—Women are called in our society Lakshmi, Saraswati, Grihalakshmi. They are anything and everything. If I may compare man with woman I can say woman is much more important in the world than man. I can explain this further. If we remove or kill all men from the world the world will still go on. (An honourable Member: 'Except one man.') Not even one man. I say if all the men in the world be killed, the world will still continue and the human race will continue. (Honourable Members: 'Question'). I can explain it. There are my friends who question my statement. Well, Sir, if you kill all men today there will be millions of men in the womb of the women. Women are therefore certainly more important so far as the world is concerned. But those who talk of equality between man and woman want really to separate woman from man. Instead of helping the pair to be happy they are really destructive. As I say their importance is there; they are the Lakshmi. But at the same time it is very difficult to compare man with woman. Nature has created man and woman. Their tasks are different, their duties are different and their functions are different. What is the use of comparing the two? No comparison can really stand in this case.

My friends have talked about the provisions of the Bill. I shall touch only one or two points as regards the daughter's share in the father's property. First of all I was a son, then a brother, then a husband and then a father and so on. Not without exception, I cannot say, but I say that almost every Hindu father—I am also a Hindu father and I also have married my daughters here and there—every Hindu father is anxious to marry his daughter in a family which is superior in status, in wealth and in many other things to his own family. Now there is a talk of share of the daughter in the father's property. There have been jokes also. The daughter is respected in every way and is also given a share—you may call it a share—in the father's property by way of dowry and so on and so forth. When the question of share comes what will happen is this. Ordinarily if you come to my place as a guest I may show you hospitality as my friend or this and that. But if you come by way of right I do not think you will receive any hospitality from me. I tell my friends that law will not help anybody, as soon as the right for the daughter will be created in the father's property I think all question of love will go. My friend Mr. Kamath—although he suggested many things with which I do not agree—said one thing. Here is a family in which a man has got one daughter and two or three sons. The daughter will be married several miles away. The property may be small and after the marriage when the son-in-law, the damad, will be coming to his father-in-law's place for a share of the property, or as a share-holder, he will not be respected. Everything should develop in a proper manner and in a natural way. If this measure is enacted there may be a lot of complications and litigations and the principle of pure love will be killed in our society.

I therefore appeal to every Member in this House to consider the matter in a calm and quiet manner. As it has been suggested from several quarters in the House, and as I also said before, this House is not competent to enact the measure. How is it that they are so very anxious that this measure may be passed today? Why have not the courage to wait for a year or two? May I say they are afraid of the new elections?

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: No; not at all.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: The Hindu society has lived and flourished so long according to the same customs and same everything else. Then, heavens will not fall if we send the measure for circulation as my friend Mr. Naziruddin has stated. I appeal to each and every Member of the House to consider the measure in a calm manner. People may be afraid of the next elections, that we Congress people may not get votes. That question does not arise. We must be true to ourselves and to the constituency and people who have sent us.

So, I oppose this measure with all the emphasis at my command, and support the motion of my friend 'Pandit' Naziruddin Ahmad that the Bill may be circulated for public opinion.

Shri H. Siddaveerappa (Mysore State): I congratulate the honourable the Law Minister for the very lucid expression of the speech he gave while moving this Motion. Sir, a lot has been said that this measure vitally affects the Hindu society. I come from a part of this country, namely Mysore, where some of the fundamental things, this measure wants to introduce, are already in force. We have, for instance, got the law of adoption as also the law regarding the daughter's share, and several other things, though they are not on all fours with the present measure. But the principle is there. We have enacted a Bill as early as 1934, called the Hindu Women's Rights Regulation and for the last fourteen years that Bill is law in Mysore, but we have not found there any general upheaval. There is not much litigation nor is there any disruption of the Hindu society as has been feared by some of the honourable Members here. As a matter of fact, by our experience we have come to understand that the measure which is now in force is not of the extent that is needed and another Committee has been formed with a view to see that there is further improvement in the existing measure.

It was said that the measure before the House affects the caste system or some other fundamental beliefs or principles of the Hindu society. Well, Sir, my reading of some of the Hindu literature is that if we study the Vedic period, that is from 2000-1400 B.C., and study the Hindu society then in existence, we do not see any of these four castes in the Hindu society then in existence. Every man born, according to his guna or karma had to go through all the varnas or ashramas in his life time. A boy, until he attained the age of twenty, had to perform the household duties and obey his guru and do all the other acts that were assigned to him, and he was called a shudra. After the age of twenty he was allowed to be married and he had to take the responsibility of maintaining the family. Then, according to the duty that was imposed on him he was called a vaishya. After he enjoyed life for some time and after he reached the age of 40 or so, when there was need for every man to defend the State, he had to do the duty of a kshatriya. After he attained a particular age, say 60, when he had seen so much of life, and on account of his experience and learning, he undertakes the task of teaching the disciples and doing other duties of wisdom, and he was called a Brahmana, a man who has got the guna of Brahman.

Therefore, this caste system in this country originated in a different way, and developed in a different way. But today we understand that there are nearly 13,000 castes and a much larger number of sub-castes which have got different traditions, different customs and what not.

We find today that we are one so far as political unity is concerned. If we want to have any uniform standard of rules or any uniform standard of our laws, it is absolutely essential that there must be some Code which gives a certain standard. May be if necessary at the consideration stage we may consider which of the clauses are necessary and which are not necessary; but if we say there is no need at all for a Code, I do not think any of us, if we apply a little commonsense, can accept that position. We see in this country there are people who profess different beliefs—Dvaita and Advaita. There are people who practise monogamy and polygamy and in some places there is polyandry also prevailing. Under these circumstances, is it not necessary for us to see that we have got a uniform code for purposes of inheritance, marriage and several other things? During the time of the Britishers we found that in the guise of religious neutrality or non-interference, they never cared to see that any evils in the Hindu society were wiped out; they never attempted any reform in that direction. As a matter of fact, when Warren Hastings was impeached by Burke, it is said that one of the charges levelled against him was that he used those caste codes for purposes of his personal aggrandizement. The Britisher saw that the caste system was ideally suited for his own advantage. Therefore he never interfered to bring about any needed reforms in the society. But that is no reason that at a time when we are free, we should not aim at bringing about this much-desired reform. Somebody said, we are proceeding further, why should we take up this measure so early as this and why should we not wait for some more time? My point is this: this reform was long overdue; it ought to have come much earlier but for the fact that we were a dependent nation and that we were not masters of our own destiny. My submission is that it has not come a day too soon.

So many other objections were raised regarding the competency of this House etc. As a matter of fact, the honourable the learned Mover has given a clear exposition as to how we are competent to bring about this desired result; So I do not wish to take the time of the House especially as there are many other speakers.

With regard to the principle of divorce, it is in my opinion a very much debated point. It is a thing which really agitates a large number of people in the Hindu society. Whether it be sacramental marriage or any other form of marriage, I do not wish to see that there should be under any circumstances an indissoluble tie of marriage. Instead of giving unfettered discretion to people, I would request the honourable the Mover to consider this point, namely, that a time-limit may be imposed—say five years or three years, whichever is approved by this House—within which the married people may be able to round off their angularities, having time to study each other, and if in spite of it they are badly off, it may be necessary that the marriage tie will have to be snapped.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Marriage on probation, you mean?

Shri H. Siddaveerappa: Not marriage on probation, but before anybody can have the benefit or advantage or whatever you call it of divorce, a particular period should be prescribed within which no married couple may be allowed divorce.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: That is the English law. They have three years there.

Shri H. Siddaveerappa: Let us consider the experience in the Western countries; for instance, let us take America. We have the experience of a famous divorce court judge, Lindsay. Whenever anyone went to him for a divorce, he used to tell: "You people will live together for one or two months and then come to me again. Even in spite of it, if you feel that you must get yourself divorced then you may apply." He says that invariably his experience as a judge is that whenever people try to separate each other, it is because that they have not tried to understand each other. If there was occasion to judge each other, there may not be recourse to this extreme form of separation. Therefore, I suggest that some such period should be prescribed in regard to divorce.

Regarding the theory of fragmentation of property, we find that agricultural land is not at all affected by this measure. It is a good thing in itself.

Ch. Ranbir Singh (East Punjab: General): It is affected, in Centrally Administered Areas.

Shri H. Siddaveerappa: No, it is not. Only the Centrally Administered Area is affected, which is a very small area. So far as this agricultural land is concerned, I think the time has come when we should undertake agrarian reform in the interests of our own agriculture and our own existence so far as food is concerned. Not only that, with regard to inheritance the time has come when we shall have to have some such thing as the law of primogeniture. In view of the fact that 90 per cent. of the people of this country are living in the villages and their property is mostly agricultural, and in view of the fact that this property of the 90 per cent. of the people is taken away from the operation of this Act, I believe the theory of fragmentation does not stand to logic or reasoning.

[Shri H. Siddaveerappa]

With regard to custom, some of my friends submitted that custom overrides law, therefore any custom having the sanction of law should be accepted. I think many of us, who have experience as lawyers, can easily see how custom conveniently comes in, handy to take away the effect of any benevolent law. I may give one instance. There is a provision in the Indian Penal Code under which if any girl is dedicated for an immoral purpose it is an offence. The marks of dedication are the tying of some beads round the neck of the girl. Now the ingenuity of a lawyer was able to invent the custom of tying of beads and apply that custom even in cases where the dedication was done for immoral purposes. Apart from this, we also know how on account of custom litigation sets in and how enormous amounts are spent in it, at least it was so in the previous regime. People used to spend enormous amounts in getting a decision on any particular point and squander money over judges distinguishing between two different judgments. Today this Bill is so simple, so lucid, that without recourse to any lawyer, any man can for about four annas ascertain what his position is with regard to law.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: He can manage everything with four annas, you mean?

Shri H. Siddaveerappa: It is quite possible. A day will come. We will have to try for that also. As a matter of fact, we have been seeing how these judicial decisions affect some of the property rights and other things. A judge comes to one decision and that will be law for some time. Tomorrow they may find out some other law, some text or smriti or some such old document, and we will be told that this law is overruled, with the result that nothing is settled in Hindu law. As a matter of fact, we have been seeing under the British regime, for the last 150 years, there have been so many decisions after decisions, any number of them, and still they say nothing is settled in Hindu law. I want to ask when we will have a settled form of law wherein the ordinary man can understand what exactly is his position. As a matter of fact, when a creditor wants to give some money, he has to satisfy who are his heirs, who have shares and all that, with the result that on an agricultural land on which he can give Rs. 1,000 loan, he gives only Rs. 500 or so. Therefore, taken from any angle of view, I believe this is a very healthy measure, so I give my wholehearted support to it.

Mr. Chairman: The debate will continue tomorrow after Question Hour.

DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS FOR 1948-49—RAILWAYS

Mr. Chairman: The House will now proceed with the demands for supplementary grants to be moved by the Honourable the Minister in charge of Railways.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C. P. and Berar: General): Before the Minister proceeds with his motion, I want to ask if it is your desire that we should close before 5 o'clock and what time will be allowed to consider these supplementary grants extending to Rs. 19 crores. It will be most unfair to this House if for discussing these supplementary grants which are over and above the Budget sanctions the House is only allowed an hour and a half. I submit that sufficient time should be given to the House to discuss and scrutinise this Budget. I have seen these items; some of them are certainly most objectionable. I therefore plead and appeal to you to give sufficient time—tomorrow or the day after—to discuss this supplementary Budget.

Mr. Chairman: We have got other business set down for tomorrow and the day after. General discussion of the General Budget will have to be begun. No further time can be given for this subject. We can discuss these supplementary grants till 4-15 p.m. when we adjourn for the presentation of the General Budget at 5 p.m.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Then we may postpone consideration of this.

Mr. Chairman: There is no other time allotted for this. If we postpone this, it will upset the whole programme.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: It may be so. But I want to enter here my protest that you are devoting only 20 minutes for the discussion of a demand which involves as much as 19 crores.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): May I request that at least in future the business may be arranged more wisely, and with greater fairness and respect to the House.

Dr. P. S. Deshmukh (Bombay: General): May I suggest, Sir, that the discussion of the Hindu Code Bill may be postponed to a later date and tomorrow's time may be given to the discussion of this subject?

Mr. Chairman: All these points of view will be kept in mind.

Now the House will proceed to the Demands for Supplementary grants in respect of Railways.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister of Railways and Transport): Is it the wish of the House that I should move all these supplementary grants together or one by one?

Honourable Members: All together.

Mr. Chairman: The practice is that they are taken as moved and put to the House.

DEMAND NO. 1.—RAILWAY BOARD

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 2,62,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Railway Board'."

DEMAND NO. 2.—AUDIT

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 3,25,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Audit'."

DEMAND NO. 3.—MISCELLANEOUS EXPENDITURE

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

DEMAND NO. 4.—WORKING EXPENSES—ADMINISTRATION

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 33,34,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Administration'."

DEMAND NO. 5.—WORKING EXPENSES—REPAIRS AND MAINTENANCE

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 4,42,65,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Repairs and Maintenance'."

DEMAND NO. 6.—WORKING EXPENSES—OPERATING STAFF

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 24,68,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Operating Staff'."

DEMAND NO. 7.—WORKING EXPENSES—OPERATION (FUEL)

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 3,25,33,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Operation (Fuel)'."

DEMAND NO. 9.—WORKING EXPENSES—MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSES

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 63,22,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Miscellaneous Expenses'."

DEMAND NO. 10.—PAYMENTS TO INDIAN STATES AND COMPANIES

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 9,28,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'payments to Indian States and Companies'."

DEMAND NO. 11.—WORKING EXPENSES—APPROPRIATION TO DEPRECIATION FUND

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 7,75,24,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Appropriation to Depreciation Fund'."

DEMAND NO. 14.—A—WITHDRAWAL FROM RESERVE

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 5,11,030 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Withdrawal from Reserve'."

DEMAND NO. 15.—CONSTRUCTION OF NEW LINES

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,99,78,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Construction of New Lines'."

DEMAND NO. 16.—OPEN LINE WORKS—ADDITIONS

Mr. Chairman: Motion is:

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor-General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Open Line Works—Additions'."

There are two sets of cut motions, one set is from Seth Damodar Swaroop and the other set is from Shri M. Tirumala Rao. Of these only the first cut motion of Seth Damodar Swaroop and the first cut motion of Shri Tirumala Rao are in order, because the other cut motions could have been moved at the time of the general debate and they have been moved and they have been discussed. So, even if these two cut motions.....

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): Before you give your ruling, may I say a word?

Mr. Chairman: I want to know which of these the honourable member desires to move.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Sir, these cut motions are intended to elicit information on certain topics which could not be discussed during the general discussion. Supplementary demand is a deviation from the main Budget for the current year. Therefore this is the only occasion on which we can raise points about the administration.

Mr. Chairman: Perhaps the honourable member knows that he can move only one cut motion.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I may be allowed to deal with all the three motions in a brief speech not extending more than 15 minutes to which the Minister for Railways may reply. I will not press the motions to a division.

Mr. Chairman: Will not that object be achieved if the honourable member speaks on the Demand and touch upon all the three cut motions?

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): The practice and the convention of the House....

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): I rise to a point of order.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Santhanam is on his legs.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Sir, I am rising to a point of order. It is not the practice in this House that anything may be taken as moved or passed. I think this is irregular. I do not know if there is any convention even like that.

Mr. Chairman: It is not a point of order.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Sir, I simply want to draw the attention of the Chair and of the House to the practice and the convention that under Supplementary Demands only the particular Demand is discussed. General questions of policy should always be confined to the general Budget Debate. Therefore, if there is any particular objection to the Demand or any item included in it, a cut motion may be moved. It is the privilege of the House to do so. But questions of policy should always come under the General Debate.

Mr. Chairman: That is what I wanted to point out to Mr. Tirumala Rao. The cut motion has to be confined to the Demand in question before the House. General questions of policy cannot be discussed under Demands for Supplementary Grants.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: You can listen to my speech and then come to the conclusion whether it is covered by Mr. Santhanam's objection. Sir, I move:

"That the demand for a supplementary grant of a sum not exceeding Rs. 2,62,000 in respect of 'Railway Board' be reduced by Re. 1."

Sir, you are aware how the Budget discussion took place for nearly four days on the floor of the House and how the Honourable the Railway Minister had to cut short his speech in the middle of an important statement he was making. He has today the ear of the House to make that unfinished speech.

[Shri M. Tirumala Rao]

I do not want to discuss any particular general principal except that is allowed to me confining myself to the four corners of the cut motion. The purpose of my motion is this: that any extra expenditure involved in payment for the Railway Board is not justified. I want to say that the salaries of those incumbents have been already high and they are higher than the salaries of the secretaries of big Departments supposed to be above the Railway Board. This question has been mooted year after year and we have not had any specific reply from the Minister in charge whether this question is being reviewed at all or whether it will be reviewed in the near future in a manner to effect economies in the high salary bill. In spite of the amount already sanctioned for this purpose, I do not understand why the Government have come forward with a supplementary demand for Rs. 2,62,000. No doubt the purpose of this is mentioned in the proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee dated 3rd February. I am not satisfied whether this expenditure is necessary in view of the large establishment that this Department has. You have the Chief Commissioner, you have a Financial Commissioner, three Members, six Directors, one Secretary, all of them drawing salaries from Rs. 2,500 up to Rs. 5,000. The Commander-in-Chief of the Army in India, who is supposed to be in charge of the safety of this country controlling a huge land army, does not get Rs. 5,000 a month. The Secretaries in the Ministries do not get Rs. 5,000 a month. I want an assurance from the Minister that, after August 15th 1947, a new set of principles are governing this country with a view to economise as much as possible consistent with efficiency. No doubt there may be agreements and covenants and certain rules protecting the emoluments and privileges of certain high officials. But this cannot go on for ever. A beginning must be made now and these officials must be told that they cannot have enormous salaries which the general economic condition of the country cannot afford any longer.

I anticipate that I will not be permitted to move the other cut motions. But I wish to say a few words in this connection on the fuel operations. We are paying nearly 10 crores of rupees for freight alone on coal which cost only Rs. 10 crores in 1947. I drew the attention of the Chief Commissioner to this in 1947 and asked why he was unable to produce all the coal needed by the Railways. The total quantity of coal which the Railways consume is 80 lakhs of tons out of which coal lifted from the collieries of the railways comes to only 28 lakhs of tons.

Over nearly 60 lakh tons of coal is produced from private collieries which costs you a good deal and the carriage of this coal to your various railways has cost you nearly 10 crores of rupees. There must be an effective control and a long range plan of minimising the use of high-grade coal. Of course, we are thankful to your Railway Minister for the statement which he has made that they are designing engines which will also use low-grade coal. That is not enough. We are going to have a large scale scheme of electrification. We are going to have big multi-purpose schemes costing 400 to 500 crores of rupees. Two days ago the Electric Power Engineers have met in a conference and our Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil, Minister for Works, Mines and Power has stated that the next five years will see a programme of electrification of the country costing 300 crores of rupees. I want to know whether the Railway Board has sent up see how far the Railways can get electrification schemes on a large scale. We some of its own engineers, technicians and high officials to that Conference and must minimise the use of high-grade coal. The total quantities of high-grade coal that is available in India is limited, and after 60 years from now, you may be exhausting all the coal resources of this country, if you go at this rate.

Shri Ramnath Goenka (Madras: General): I suppose the honourable member has read the Railway Board's report for 1947-48. It tells you that 1,800 miles are.....

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I have seen it. What I suggest is that there should be a large scale planning of electrification. You have started, no doubt I am glad, with only 1,500 miles of electrification out of a total length of nearly 35,000 miles in the country. That is not enough. What I suggest is that there must be a co-ordinated plan of not only conserving our coal. A small piece of information is given saying that experiments are being carried with regard to the gas turbine engines. The Railway Board has got its Standards Office as well as their Research institutions to get at this job and see that coal is substituted by other fuel. Therefore, I wanted to draw the attention of the House to this matter. As regards the third item the construction of new lines, I am afraid, the programme is very disappointing.

Mr. Chairman: May I point out to the honourable member that his remark will be out of order.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I submit that the Railway Board assumes responsibility for the whole administration, and I do not want to allow this opportunity to pass their extra demand, unless I see whether all the supplementary demands which include their activities, are quite just and reasonable.

I want to say one word with regard to that. With regard to the open lines also I suggest that there should be a comprehensive programme prepared by the Railway Board and they should see that more railway lines are opened and the country is opened up for traffic as well as for trade and commerce.

With these words, Sir, I move my motion.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Sir, I rise to second the motion moved by my honourable friend, Mr. Tirumala Rao. I wish, Sir, that the House took a little serious view of these supplementary demands when they are presented to them. This is a supplementary demand asking the House to vote ninety-nine crores and some odd lakhs of rupees.

Shri Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): What is it?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I do not know whether my honourable friend, Mr. Krishnaswami Bharathi has studied it and whether he knows what these items refer to. I say this because he was interrupting me.

Shri Krishnaswami Bharathi: It is a reflection on the House to say that we are not taking a serious view of all matters.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable Member will see that he does not cast any reflection on any honourable member.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I am very glad, Sir, that the House has taken a very serious view of it. I wish that the House should have been given an opportunity to discuss this thoroughly and given more time for study of these supplementary grants that have been brought before this House from time to time.

Sir, in this demand, the item relating to the dearness allowance I can understand. If for emergency purposes supplementary grants are demanded, I can quite appreciate, because the Ministry could not have anticipated it when they framed their budget last year, but I fail to understand why crores of rupees under publicity, suspense account and the miscellaneous expenditure, which are ordinary expenses, should have been brought under the supplementary demands. There are no specific reasons given in the Standing Committee meetings which has been circulated to the members as the reasons for which these demands have been sanctioned.

Shri Ramnath Goenka: These are in the revised estimates.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): We have not received the book mentioned in the note to the agenda paper.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: In the explanatory memorandum every one of these items have been explained as to the causes for the increased expenditure and the revised estimates were put before the House and discussed.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: This is all right, my point is this.....

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: May I draw the attention of the House to the fact that this Volume of Demands for Grants was circulated to honourable Members when the Budget was discussed. The fullest explanation of the variations between the revised estimate and the budget estimate are contained in pages 1 and 2 of this document. If the honourable Member had read it, he would probably not have raised the point that he could understand only the increase in the dearness allowance and not other matters.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: Pandit Bhargava raised the point. I stated that we received it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: There is a note on the agenda paper circulated today which says: Book of Demands for supplementary grants giving detailed information will be circulated to Members in due course.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: It has been circulated.

Shri Ramnath Goenka. This is dated the 18th of February.

Mr. Chairman: It has been circulated.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I have received this, I must admit. I did not say that I did not receive it. My point is that the House has not been given sufficient opportunity and time to discuss this. I therefore submit that on important items like this, the House should be at least given one day. In the Provincial Assemblies, Sir, on a supplementary demand, one day is always given. I fail to understand why an hour and a half and an hour and a quarter should only be given for such supplementary grants. That is my complaint.

Then, Sir, I was mentioning that I could understand supplementary demand for emergency purposes in items of expenditure which have been incurred by the Ministry being brought before the House and these are items which they could not have anticipated when they framed the budget for last year, but for the other ordinary items such as I mentioned just now, I see no reason why this additional amount should have been spent and merely four lines are given over each item by the Standing Committees. In fact the House is not aware as to what are the specific reasons for the increase under these items. We demand that economy should be maintained, but on the contrary the miscellaneous items such as publicity, suspense account and miscellaneous expenditure are such items where details are not given. Under miscellaneous items, crores of rupees are shown; but no details are given under many heads. Therefore, I desire, in the future, the House should be given a fair opportunity to discuss this amount.

Sir, I want a little information. On page 12, it is stated: "The increase under 'Miscellaneous charges' is due mainly to payment to Messrs. Hindustan Aircraft Ltd. for the first experimental prototype coach (1.13 lakhs)". We know that new coaches were under the consideration of the Railway Ministry for the last three years and some provision has been made for the Silver Arrow; but we do not know what has happened to the Silver Arrow: whether the Ministry has absolutely dropped the construction of the Silver Arrow type which was in exhibition and on which the opinion of the House and various local Advisory Committees were invited. I want to know whether the Railway Ministry has decided to substitute this prototype of Hindustan Aircraft Ltd. one of the coaches of which is now running in the Grand Trunk Express. I would like to know the definite policy of the Government as regards the new type of coaches. On the floor of the House, various times, it has been stated that there are no facilities in the third class carriages. This Silver Arrow type was more or less recommended by the various local Advisory Committees.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: Have we not discussed this question of accommodation to third class passengers to the maximum possible extent during the other debate?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: When there is a Demand before the House.....

Mr. Chairman: I request the honourable Member to confine his remarks to the Demand before the House.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I am discussing the demand. There is an item, prototype coach and I am entitled to seek information on this point.

What I was saying is, there is no clear-cut policy from the Railway Board regarding these third class new coaches: I want to know whether the Silver Arrow type is under consideration, whether this new type is also under consideration, if so, how many will be constructed, where they are constructed; but no definite answer to that is forthcoming.

As regards the Railway Board, my honourable friend has stated that the high expenditure on the Railway Board and the other item should be cut down. May I tell the honourable Minister that after the separation, the Pakistan Government has abolished the Railway Board in their country and appointed a Secretary to the Ministry and other officers? May I appeal to him to consider this question seriously whether the Railway Board, which is an antiquated one, which might have been necessary in the olden times for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the British people, is still necessary. I would like him to go into the question whether there is not any overlapping of certain functions with the Railway Ministry, whether the Chief Commissioner has not an overriding power over the Railway Board, as to how the General Managers of the various Railways are functioning under the Railway Board and whether some of the defects in the present administration are not due to the antiquated rules that prevail in the Railway Board. If it is necessary for him to continue this Railway Board in the interests of the country, I will certainly support him.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: May I remind the honourable Member that he has already supported the continuance of the Railway Board for the year 1949-50? We are dealing with 1948-49 to-day.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I am sorry that such a poor and lame answer has been given to my argument. If the House today decided to abolish the Railway Board, I know they are not going to abolish it tomorrow. It will take more than a year to abolish the Railway Board. I have only asked the honourable Minister to bear this in mind and consider the question whether there is necessity to continue this Railway Board. If there is no necessity for this Board to continue, if the House decides to abolish it, I think it could be done only in 1951 because so many formalities have got to be gone through and there has to be a substitute for the Railway Board. The House knows its duty and the House has already raised that point in the general discussion on the budget. I therefore submit in all seriousness that this matter should not be lightly treated by the honourable Minister; he may look into the question. I may assure him that I have an open mind; if the honourable Minister comes and tells me that he has investigated into this matter and is convinced that the Railway administration will not be efficient and satisfactory without the Railway Board, I shall support him. I only want definitely to know whether he has investigated into the question. I want to know, what are the powers of the Railway Board, and whether the powers overlap or not. From the information that I have got, these things happen and the result is Ministerial orders are not properly carried out. If the Pakistan Government—it may be a small Government compared with us—have successfully abolished the Railway Board, I want to know why we require it here.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Whatever we may do or may not do, should we copy Pakistan?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: There is no question of copying Pakistan. I am only giving an illustration for consideration. I see no reason why it should not be considered if it is good from the point of view of economy and better administration consistently with efficiency. If somebody does a good thing, why not copy it?

As regards the cost of fuel, my honourable friend Shri Tirumala Rao has stated about the quantity of coal that exists. I am taking an absolutely different points as regards fuel. If the report of the Enquiry Committee is pursued, you find they have made a very serious structure of the question. They have given the illustration that the Nizam's State Railway has got a certain system of checking coal which is very satisfactorily working. There is no reason why, the Enquiry Committee says, that system should not be investigated and introduced here. I may tell my honourable friend Mr. Kamath, that Hyderabad is a small State and their railway is a small one when compared with us. The Enquiry Committee presided over by Pandit Kunzru has recommended that system. It does not mean that because a small Government has introduced something, we should stand on our prestige and say, we should not do it. I therefore say, that here is the recommendation of the Enquiry Committee.

Shri H. V. Kamath: On a point of explanation, Sir, I did not say that because Pakistan was a small State we should not copy it. England is a small State and we copy it in many respects.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What I was saying is, this matter also requires consideration, from another aspect. There is today a three per cent leakage from the place where coal is loaded from the colliery to the place of termination and it is weighed. I want to know whether this coal evaporates during the transit, and where this coal goes. I am sure the Ministry knows, and if the honourable Minister does not know, his officers know, because there has been a reference to it that there is a great deal of leakage in transit. Whether this coal is smuggled or whether it really evaporates is a matter for consideration of the honourable Minister.

An Honourable Member: It is only a guess about leakage.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: It is not a guess; there is the report over this question.

As regards certain other items, under working expenses, I shall not go into the details, I shall only invite the attention of the honourable the Minister, to the suggestions made by the Enquiry Committee. The honourable Minister has been good enough to say that the House will be given an opportunity one day to discuss the Enquiry Committee's report and we are thankful for that. We were told that this report will be examined by the Ministry and then will be placed before us. We were not told whether it would be placed before the Standing Finance Committee and the CAC for Railways. We would request him to place the report before these two committees and then bring it before the House so that the House may have the advantage of knowing their views. I am sure even if some of the recommendations are to be carried out, it will take a very long time; I know how the machinery moves. Therefore, I submit that this report should be examined by the Special officer that has been appointed, as has been stated to us the other day, and the examination by the Ministry should be expedited.

As regards, electrification, Sir, I may only state that the recent Engineers Conference which met only three days ago have very strongly emphasised that if the coal situation is to be saved, in the interests of economy and in the best interests of the country's transport, electrification of railways should be expedited.

They have given the five railway sections which should be electrified immediately and machinery should be indented without the least possible delay. In the interests of the railways themselves and in the interests of fuel economy they have given the suggestion. I do not know whether that suggestion which has been made only two days ago has come to the notice of the Railway Ministry, but when it comes I am sure that there are certain sections of the railway where already electrification is there and electric trains are running and steps should be taken to extend this electrification with the least possible delay. Some of these electric railways have been introduced since the last fifteen years and no effort has been made to indent for more electric trains or extend their route. In Bombay the largest section is served on the G.I.P. and the B.B. & C.I. and the conference had made very strong recommendations to extend one section from Virar to Ahmedabad and the other from Poona to Bhusawal, and similarly in South India and in Bengal and Bihar. I am confident that the amount of security and the amount of facility that these electric trains give to-day to the passengers will be borne out by the passengers, who travel by these trains. I feel that no serious attention has been paid by the previous Ministry or the Railway Board in this matter, but for what reasons it is best known to them. Probably the question of war may have come in and so many other things. But I want to know whether they have placed orders for the importation of many more coaches and the extension of the electric installations. These electric trains give suburban passengers a very great deal of relief and this matter should receive the attention of the honourable Minister.

I have many more things to say but as time does not permit, I shall with these few words resume my seat.

The Honourable Shri Satyanarayan Sinha (Minister of State): Sir, I move:

"That the question be now put."

Mr. Chairman: The question is:

"That the question be now put."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: I shall take a few minutes, referring simply to the points that have been made by the two previous speakers. As you yourself pointed out, Sir, much of what they said had been covered by the debates that had already taken place on the railway budget for 1949-50 and they raised questions of large policy which are not supposed to be proper matters for discussion on supplementary demands. All the same, as certain points have been raised I wish only to say one or two words about each point.

[Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar]

Taking the points in the reverse order, I will tell Mr. Sidhva at once that the Railway Board and the Railway Ministry are as keen about pushing electrification of railways as he is. The resolution of the Power Engineers Conference which will be duly communicated to us will be given all the consideration it deserves, and, wherever it is possible for us to expand electrification, we shall do our best to push it.

The question of fuel raises a large issue which I am afraid I cannot deal within the few minutes at my disposal. As the Honourable the previous speakers have already pointed out, the matter has been dealt with by the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee and the Government are giving their recommendation the best consideration possible. Whatever they have said on this question will be fully investigated and whatever economy can be secured on fuel by giving such effect to such recommendations as can be given effect to will be done.

A big point that was raised by Mr. Sidhva was the abolition of the Railway Board. As I have said, it does not arise on this supplementary demand. But he has appealed to me that, if I think the particular issue he raises is good in itself, I should give effect to it whether that issue was relevant to the present debate or not. I am quite prepared to consider the merits of whatever he has said, and I think I indicated in the speech I made in introducing the budget for next year that the question of what the set-up in the Centre should properly be is a matter which is receiving the consideration of the Railway Ministry consequent on the attention that the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee has already given to this question. That is a matter which requires very careful investigation, and we will give it the best consideration that is possible. I do not say that the Railway Board as it exists today is the last word in the matter of centralised administration of railways. There may be changes that are required. There may be proposed a modification in the set-up altogether which may be considered necessary. But all that will come in good time and it will require legislation of a comprehensive character. It cannot be done by a mere stroke of the pen today. If I did so I would simply upset the transport service of the country.

The other point was raised by Mr. Tirumala Rao about the high salaries that people in the Railway Board draw. I may tell him that as a result of the consideration of the recommendations made by the Central Pay Commission, Government did take this matter into their consideration and they have prescribed certain rates of salary for the Chief Commissioner and Members of the Railway Board, the Directors and Joint Directors, the Deputy Directors and Assistant Directors. They are well within limits which I think both Mr. Tirumala Rao and even Mr. Sidhva would appreciate. The Chief Commissioner's salary has been fixed at Rs. 3,250 instead of Rs. 5,000, and the salaries of other Members of the Board have been fixed at Rs. 3,000. Similar reductions have been made in the salaries of other Members of the Board's office. But all this can be given effect to only when the opportunity occurs for doing so. There are certain people who have come down to us from the old days with certain scales of pay guaranteed to them and, if they elect to retain those scales of pay, we cannot as a Government get out of our commitments in any cavalierly fashion. The main thing we have to take note of is that we should respect our commitments to our employees and officers, and to that extent we have to respect those commitments. For some years to come, certain people will be receiving higher salaries than we consider to be adequate for new officers occupying some positions.

As regards the particular matter in respect of which the cut is moved, let me tell the honourable Mr. Sidhva that, when he said he could understand the increase on account of dearness allowance, almost the overwhelming part of the increase we are asking for is covered by dearness allowance. If you look at page 2 of this document—Demands for Grants—you will find that against the supplementary demand of Rs. 2,62,000, Rs. 2,11,000 are accounted for by dearness allowance, and while we have created a few temporary posts of Directors, Joint Directors and Deputy Directors, we have kept vacant other posts already sanctioned in the cadre because we did not feel the need to fill them or men were not available to fill them. So this Rs. 2,11,000 as well as odds and ends in the adjustment of the various items constitute the Rs. 2,62,000, for which we have presented a supplementary demand.

Sir, I will not take up more time of the House

Shri R. K. Sidhva: What about the Hindustan Aircraft Factory?

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: We have given you the fullest possible information during the Railway Budget debate as to our programme for building coaches.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: I would like to know whether the Silver Arrow type of carriage is going to be continued.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar: We have placed an order for 100 coaches of 10 ft.-8 in. Of the Silver Arrow also we have ordered 50. We are trying to substitute all-metal coaches wherever possible. I hope the House will be satisfied with this very brief statement of mine on the speeches that have been made and will vote the supplementary grants.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Sir, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my cut motion.

Mr. Chairman: Has the honourable Member the leave of the House to withdraw his cut motion?

The cut motion was by leave of the Assembly withdrawn.

Mr. Chairman: If it is the wish of the House I shall put together all the demands for supplementary grants.

The question is:

"That the respective supplementary sums not exceeding the amounts shown in the third column of the Order Paper, be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of the corresponding heads of Supplementary Demands entered in the second column thereof."

The motion was adopted.

[As directed by Mr. Chairman the motions for Demands for Supplementary Grants which were adopted by the Assembly are reproduced below.—Ed. of Deb.]

DEMAND NO. 1.—RAILWAY BOARD

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 2,62,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Railway Board'."

DEMAND NO. 2.—AUDIT

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 3,25,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Audit'."

DEMAND NO. 3.—MISCELLANEOUS EXPENDITURE

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 13,95,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Miscellaneous expenditure'."

DEMAND NO. 4.—WORKING EXPENSES—ADMINISTRATION

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 33,34,300 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Administration'."

DEMAND NO. 5.—WORKING EXPENSES—REPAIRS AND MAINTENANCE

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 4,42,900 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Repairs and Maintenance'."

DEMAND NO. 6.—WORKING EXPENSES—OPERATING STAFF

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 24,88,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Operating Staff'."

DEMAND NO. 7.—WORKING EXPENSES—OPERATION (FUEL)

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 3,25,33,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Operation (Fuel)'."

DEMAND NO. 9.—WORKING EXPENSES—MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSES

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 63,22,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Miscellaneous Expenses'."

DEMAND NO. 10.—PAYMENTS TO INDIAN STATES AND COMPANIES

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 9,28,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Payments to Indian States and Companies'."

DEMAND NO. 11.—WORKING EXPENSES—APPROPRIATION TO DEPRECIATION FUND

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 7,75,24,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Working Expenses—Appropriation to Depreciation Fund'."

DEMAND NO. 14.—A—WITHDRAWAL FROM RESERVE

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 5,11,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Withdrawal from Reserve'."

DEMAND NO. 15.—CONSTRUCTION OF NEW LINES

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,99,78,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Construction of New Lines'."

DEMAND NO. 16.—OPEN LINE WORKS—ADDITIONS

"That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000 be granted to the Governor General to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending the 31st day of March, 1949, in respect of 'Open Line Works—Additions'."

The Assembly then adjourned till Five of the Clock in the Afternoon.

The Assembly re-assembled at Five of the Clock in the Afternoon, Mr. Chairman (Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava) in the Chair.

THE BUDGET FOR 1949-50

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Sir, I rise to present the Budget for 1949-50.

Review of Economic Conditions

2. Although this is the fourth year since the cessation of hostilities, the return of normal conditions, without which it is impossible to expand production and develop trade, seems still as far off as ever. Over large parts of the world, conditions remain disturbed and the progress of recovery from the ravages of the war is painfully slow. In Europe the impasse in Berlin, the civil war in Greece and the emergence of two rival camps among the countries that fought the war as allies are symptomatic of the abnormal conditions which still prevail. The Palestine question, which is a serious threat to peace and stability in the Middle East, is still unsolved. Nearer home, the continuance of civil strife in China, the disturbances in Burma, which concern us deeply in view of our close economic ties with that country and the large interests our nationals have in it, and the unprovoked assault of the Dutch on the Indonesian Republic, all these retard the economic recovery not merely of this largely under-developed area of the globe but of the whole world. Prosperity, like peace, is indivisible and while these conflicts are going on in various parts of the world involving a tragic waste of men and material, the common man in all countries, particularly the less developed countries, continues to pay a heavy price in want and suffering.

3. In our own country, as in most other countries in the post-war period, the major problem has been that of keeping the inflationary trends under control. It is not necessary for me to dilate on the causes of the emergence of these trends since the end of the war. While as a result of the war the purchasing power in the hands of the community increased considerably, the available supply of commodities in the post-war period was not sufficient to meet the increasing demand for them. The shortage of essential commodities, particularly food and clothing, aggravated the situation owing to the rise in the money income of some sections of the community who in the past never competed for food and consumer goods on the same scale. Difficulties in transport and distribution accentuated the shortages while the partition last year and the economic dislocation caused over considerable parts of the country by the movement of population between the two Dominions made the position worse. A steady rise in prices occurred throughout 1947 the general index number of wholesale prices rising from 290.5 at the beginning of the year to 314.2 at the end of December. In the first seven months of 1948 there was a further steep rise in prices, the index number of wholesale prices rising by as much as 76 points to 390.1. Since then the prices have slightly dropped and as a result of the various measures taken by Government prices have remained more or less steady.

4. The answer to the problem of inflation and high prices is to increase the supply of commodities to meet the existing demand and until this position is reached to control the distribution of the available supply of the essential commodities. In the matter of food the supply position still continues to be difficult and last year owing to the poor crops in certain parts of the country we have had to import 2.8 million tons from overseas at a cost of Rs. 130 crores against an estimated import of 2 million tons at a cost of Rs. 110 crores. The position is expected to be still more difficult this year owing to the floods in Bihar and the United Provinces, the damage caused by the recent cyclone in Bombay and the outbreak of famine in parts of Gujerat, Saurashtra, Rajasthan and Cutch and imports may amount to 4 million tons. As the House is aware, it has already been decided to re-introduce food control and it is hoped that this will secure an equitable supply of food grains throughout the country at fair prices. In respect of other commodities the position in regard to interna-

production has, I am glad to say, been encouraging in recent months although it has not been possible in many cases to reach the peak production of the war years or the target that has been set. Last year the production of coal at 29.73 million tons and of steel at 854,000 tons just fell short of the production in the previous year while the production of salt rose from 49.6 million maunds to 59.3 million maunds, of cotton yarn from 1,315 million lbs. to 1,442 million lbs., of cloth from 3,816 million yards to 4,338 million yards, of art silk fabrics from 85 million yards to 114 million yards, of plywood from 28.6 million sq. feet to 38.63 million sq. feet and of soap from 80,000 tons to 190,000 tons. The flow of raw materials to industry has also improved with the improvement in the transport position while with the relaxation of import controls there has been a larger flow of imported goods. Production has also been greatly assisted by the occurrence of fewer strikes and labour disputes. If the present favourable trends in production continue, I have no doubt that it will be possible not merely to arrest the rise in prices but to bring them down gradually.

5. The state of the capital market in the year under review has been a matter of concern to Government. While there is obviously a large amount of money in the country competing for the limited supply of goods, the investment market has been stagnant and there has been little flow of money into either Government loans or into industrial concerns. This stagnation is due in large measure to the prevailing uncertainty in regard to matters affecting industrial development and prospects. My own view is that with the huge potential demand in this country for both consumer and capital goods, there is bound to be for many years a wide field for private enterprise and that in this matter no one who invests money is taking a greater risk than in any other country in the world.

6. As I mentioned a while ago, the fight against inflation has been one of Government's main pre-occupations this year. As Honourable Members are aware, Government consulted various interests and sections of public opinion regarding the measures necessary to deal with this situation. In a matter of this kind, it is obviously not possible to expect complete unanimity of opinion as to either the causes of inflation or the remedies to be adopted. But it was clear that immediate action should be taken to prevent, as far as possible, the further creation of purchasing power in the hands of the community and to take all steps possible to stimulate production and instil a spirit of confidence in industry. With this end in view, in the field of taxation additional duties on certain articles of luxury such as liquor, tobacco, motor cars, silk and art silk fabrics were imposed and an excise duty on super fine cloth was levied. Power was taken to make provisional assessments of income-tax on the basis of returns submitted by the assesseees. A system of interest bearing deposits for income-tax introduced in 1943 was also revived and it was decided to postpone for a further period of three years the refund of deposits of Excess Profits Tax except for approved purposes. A temporary limit was also placed on the amount that may be distributed as dividend by public companies, by an Ordinance, the enactment of which into law is now under consideration by the House. Among measures taken to stimulate industrial production, I would mention the reduction in the import duty on machinery and certain industrial raw materials and the abolition of the import duty on cotton yarn. New industrial undertakings commencing production in the next three years have been given exemption from income-tax for the first five years up to a limit of six per cent. per annum on their capital. The rules regulating depreciation allowances have also been liberalised. In the field of Governmental expenditure a rapid review was conducted of all capital and development schemes including the Provincial schemes. As a result the total provision for capital and development schemes and loans has been substantially reduced. It was also made clear to the Provinces that in the present financial situation they should not count on Central assistance for implementing their schemes of social or agrarian reform. The House will realise that it was not without regret that we decided to hold up even temporarily the various schemes of development the execution of which is necessary for the well being of the country. But the need for economy was imperative and we had to postpone all avoidable expenditure. But this has not led to the slowing down of any productive scheme or any scheme really essential for the national interest. I would like to take this opportunity to express my sense of gratitude to the Provincial Governments for their ready co-operation in this matter.

Balance of Payments

7. The main features in the external financial position of the country in the year under review have been the sharp decline in the sterling balances held by the Reserve Bank of India, the growing difficulty in the financing of imports from the hard currency areas and the emergence of Pakistan as a foreign country for currency purposes with the separation of its currency from that of India. The sterling balances which reached the peak figure of Rs. 1,733 crores at the end of 1945-56 declined by Rs. 121 crores to Rs. 1,612 crores during 1946-47. This reduction was due mainly to the large imports of food but there were also substantial imports of other goods in satisfaction of the pent up demand of the war years and also a certain amount of repatriation of British capital. During 1947-48 the reduction was somewhat smaller due to the restrictive import policy which was introduced towards the close of 1947 and the balances fell by only Rs. 67 crores to Rs. 1,545 crores. In the first ten months of the current year there has been a (further) drop of Rs. 556 crores in these balances. This heavy reduction is due to several causes. The first is the payment to the United Kingdom Government in accordance with the agreement reached with them last July, of Rs. 284 crores for the purchase of annuities for financing the payment of sterling pensions and for the acquisition of the Defence installations and stores left behind in India by the United Kingdom at the end of the war. The second is the payment to the State Bank of Pakistan of Pakistan's share of these balances following the separation of its currency from that of India. This payment is still continuing as the sterling and other assets of the Issue Department are handed over in instalments as Indian notes are withdrawn from circulation in Pakistan and handed over to the Reserve Bank. Sterling to the extent of Rs. 1,77 crores has so far been transferred to the Pakistan State Bank. The third factor responsible for the decline is India's adverse balance of payments on current and capital account.

8. Government's import policy is largely determined by the trend of the balance of payments. The aim of this policy is so to regulate trade that while it is kept at the highest possible level consistent with the needs and requirement of the country, India should not have an overall deficit in her balance of payments on current account during any particular period of time of more than the amount by which it has been agreed with the United Kingdom Government that India's sterling balances should be drawn upon. Under the present agreement signed last July it has been agreed that India's free sterling account which had a balance at the end of June, 1948 of £ 80 million will be credited with an equivalent sum during the period July, 1949 to June, 1951. In pursuance of this policy and also with the immediate object of reducing the inflationary pressure in the country, import controls were relaxed during the course of the year, and I am glad to say they have resulted in substantially increasing the available supply of goods in the country.

equipment and munitions had to be met by fresh procurement. In addition to our own forces we had to take in service larger forces from the Indian States and the Government of Nepal also loaned us some of their troops for purposes of internal defence. All these measures entailed additional expenditure for which there was no provision in the budget.

17. The increase of Rs. 48.14 crores in civil expenditure is mainly due to three causes. First, the revised estimates include a new provision of Rs. 20.75 crores for meeting pre-partition liabilities for which no provision was made in the budget. At the time the budget was framed, sufficient data regarding the outstanding liabilities were not available and the arrangement with Pakistan for meeting and adjusting these had not also been settled. It was hoped that these liabilities would be met and shared currently by the two Dominions but the Pakistan Government declined to meet these liabilities on the ground that they were initially those of India and that Pakistan would take its share only through the debt settlement. The Government of India do not accept this view as, in their opinion, after the division of the available cash balances between the two Governments, the outstanding liabilities should be paid and currently shared by the two Governments. But in order to avoid hardship to those who had made supplies or rendered services to the undivided Government, the Government of India have agreed to meet the liabilities in the first instance. Certain outstanding payments relating to the pre-partition period, such as the Provincial share of income-tax, are also due to the Provincial Governments now located in India which the Government of India propose to meet. Secondly, the expenditure on the relief and rehabilitation of refugees which has always been difficult to estimate and for which a provision of Rs. 10.04 crores was made in the budget is now expected to amount to Rs. 19.45 crores. This increase is partly due to the carryover of certain liabilities from the previous year, mainly payments to Provincial Governments, which could not be made before the close of the year; partly also to increased expenditure on relief which has to be regulated with reference to the constantly changing requirements of the situation. Thirdly, the expenditure on the subsidising of imported food grains and the payment of bonuses to Provincial Governments on internal procurement is now expected to exceed the original estimate by Rs. 12.05 crores. The House will remember that after a review of the food position last October it was decided that with effect from the 1st October 1948 the Central share of the loss on the supply of imported food grains to deficit areas should be raised from two thirds to three quarters and that a similar concession, limited to the Centre meeting half the loss, should be extended to the Indian States. Part of the increase is also due to the fact that while the budget provided for subsidies up to the end of the calendar year, provision has now been made for the full financial year.

I should also mention a further reason for the increase in civil expenditure. The House will remember that in the budget for the current year my predecessor made a lump cut of Rs. 2.5 crores for economies likely to result from the implementation of the recommendations of the Economy Committee. The work of this Committee has taken somewhat longer than was originally expected and its report on a number of Ministries is still under examination. No savings are therefore likely to be realised this year. For next year I am not making any provision at this stage as it is not possible, until firm decisions have been taken on their recommendations, to estimate the savings likely to be realised. But I may assure the House that this does not mean that I do not expect economies to result from the Committee's recommendations. On the contrary it is my intention to secure the utmost economy possible in public expenditure and the House may rest assured that the recommendations of the Committee will be most carefully and earnestly considered by Government and the resulting economies enforced during the course of the year.

Income-tax Investigation Commission

18. Before I pass on to deal with the estimates for the coming year I should like to mention the progress made in the work of the Income-tax Investigation Commission. Honourable Members will remember that the Act constituting the Commission assigned two duties to it, first, to investigate and report on all matters relating to taxation on income, with particular reference to the extent to which the existing law relating to and procedure for the assessment and collection of such taxation is adequate to prevent evasion and secondly to investigate specific cases referred to the Commission by the Central Government. On a study of the working of the Income-tax law and its administration during recent years, the Commission came to the conclusion that on a long-term view the first task was no less important than the second, and as work on the second had for various reasons necessarily to be slow, the Commission devoted a great part of its time till recently to the first task. This involved the examination of voluminous evidence tendered in reply to a comprehensive questionnaire which was issued, and the Commission has recently submitted a long report in which it has made recommendations on many points of law and of administration. These recommendations are now being examined with a view to the necessary legislation being introduced, and it is hoped that it will be possible to place a Bill before the House at its next session. Copies of the Commission's report, I may say, will be distributed to Honourable Members along with the Budget papers before the House rises today.

19. As regards the investigation of specific cases referred to it by Government, the Commission has completed a few cases. Greater progress was not possible for a variety of reasons. Firstly, it was only in April 1948 that the necessary staff for investigation work could be placed at the disposal of the Commission. This was because it was not possible for the Income-tax Department to spare their more experienced officers for this work before April, 1948, in view of the shortage of officers in the Department and the large amount of arrears that had to be collected. However, this difficulty has now been overcome to some extent, and the officers authorised by the Commission are working in different cities carrying on investigation under instructions and directions given by the Commission. It is the material gathered by them that will form the basis of the Commission's further work.

Another factor which has delayed the disposal of specific cases taken up for enquiry is that it has been found that a good deal of general enquiry and collection of facts and figures is a necessary preliminary to the investigation of the specific cases. These general enquiries and the collation of the materials collected have taken a considerable time, but the work is proceeding apace. Once this is completed, it may be hoped that the disposal of specific cases will be expedited.

In this connection I may add that the possibility of disposing of the referred cases by agreed settlement is being explored, and a Bill will shortly be placed before the House for vesting the necessary powers for making such settlements in the hands of the Commission.

Financial Year, 1949-50

20. I now turn to the estimates for the next financial year. At the existing level of taxation, I place the total revenue at Rs. 307.74 crores and the expenditure charged to revenue at Rs. 322.53 crores leaving a deficit of Rs. 14.79 crores.

Revenue

21. The total receipt from customs is estimated at Rs. 107.25 crores. This provides for a full year's effect of the changes in the tariff in the course of this year as part of the campaign against inflation. Central excises are expected to bring in Rs. 57.75 crores, including Rs. 7 crores from the recently imposed excise duty on superfine cloth. Receipts from income-tax, which include Rs. 11.22 crores on account of Excess Profits Tax and Rs. 12.01 crores on account of Business Profits Tax have been placed at Rs. 155 crores. Honourable members will remember that it was decided last year that advance payments of tax should be taken direct to revenue instead of being treated initially as a deposit and, as a first step in the process of changing the accounting procedure, advance payments of Corporation Tax were taken direct to revenue in the budget for the current year. Next year, as a further step in the process, I have taken credit in the revenue estimates for Rs. 12.5 crores for a part of these advance payments that will be received during the year. I hope that the change will be completed over the next three years. The divisible pool of income-tax is estimated at Rs. 90.7 crores of which the Centre will retain, Rs. 46.85 crores leaving Rs. 43.85 crores as the Provincial share. The profits from Currency and Mint, after allowing for the share of Pakistan are estimated at Rs. 9.7 crores.

The revenue from the Posts and Telegraphs Department is expected to amount to Rs. 30.26 crores and working expenses and interest to Rs. 28.63 crores, leaving a surplus of Rs. 1.63 crores. As in the current year this surplus will be shared equally by general revenues and the department which will get a rebate of interest on its share of the accumulated profits, expected to amount to about Rs. 10 crores at the end of the budget year.

The contribution from the Railways for next year has been taken at Rs. 4.72 crores, the amount provided in the Railway Budget.

Expenditure

22. The total expenditure in the coming year is estimated at Rs. 322.53 crores of which Defence Services will account for Rs. 157.37 crores and civil expenditure for Rs. 165.16 crores.

23. Defence Services.—Following the customary procedure I shall first deal with the Defence estimates. The Defence Budget for the coming year shows an increase of Rs. 1.94 crores over the revised estimate for the current year, the excess in which I largely ascribed to the operations in Kashmir. The House may well ask why with the cease fire in Kashmir there is no decrease in the Defence Budget. The main reason for this is that the reduction in the strength of the armed forces cannot be made over-night and the process of demobilisation has necessarily to be spread over a period similar to the recruitment and training of the forces. The current year's revised estimates reflect the expenditure on the gradual building up of our strength while the budget for next year would reflect the gradual reduction in that strength. Since both the processes take time, the average strength of the troops during the budget year is unlikely to differ materially from that in the current year. In framing the budget for next year we have taken into account the improvement in the Kashmir situation following the cease fire and our hope that this cease fire will eventually lead to a peaceful solution of the problem. The House will naturally not expect me to go into greater detail in this matter but I must utter a warning that if for any unforeseen reason these hopes on which we have based our estimates are not realised, it may be necessary to exceed the provision now proposed. It has also to be remembered that the recent grant of an ad hoc earnings allowance to employees of the Central Government has added Rs. 4 crores to the Defence Budget next year. The budget for next year also includes additional provision for the expansion of the Navy and the Air Force. As the House is aware, our Navy till recently consisted of only a few sloops and frigates designed primarily for port defence but with the achievement of independence the Navy has been called upon to shoulder greater responsibilities than before, for which it is necessary to have a balanced force, complete with aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers and submarines. With this end in view, Government have recently approved the first phase of a 10-year plan for the Navy, confined mainly to the recruitment and training of the personnel in the various branches of the Navy. The last war proved conclusively the overwhelming importance of the fleet air arm and the House will be glad to know that a beginning has already been made in this respect and that the budget includes provision for the establishment of a fleet air arm. With regard to the Air Forces also, plans for their expansion and development are going forward. It is hoped to train sufficient technical man-power to make it a more balanced and effective force.

24. Before I pass on to civil estimates I would like to refer to a change in the preparation of the Defence Demands for next year. The provision for supplies and stores which was previously pooled together and included under one Demand for all the three Services, except for certain Naval and Air Force stores, has now been split among the three Services—Army, Navy and Air Force. This change will make the estimates for each Service self-contained to a greater extent than before and enable the Defence authorities to exercise a closer and more efficient control over the expenditure in their respective Services.

25. Civil Estimates.—I now come to the Civil Estimates. Details of the estimates under individual heads are, as usual, given in the Explanatory Memorandum circulated with the budget papers and it is unnecessary for me to deal with them at any considerable length here. I should like, however, to refer briefly to certain special items for which provision is included in these estimates. The budget next year includes Rs. 9.35 crores for the relief and rehabilitation of refugees. In addition, a provision of Rs. 23.27 crores has been made for the same purpose in the capital budget, Rs. 21.34 crores for loans for rehabilitation including loans to Provincial Governments and the Rehabilitation Finance Administration and Rs. 1.93 crores for buildings. The expenditure on food subsidies and the payment of bonus on procurement under the revised policy is estimated at Rs. 32.97 crores next year. The estimates also include Rs. 10 crores for the meeting of pre-partition claims and Rs. 12.83 crores under the various heads of expenditure for development schemes.

26. Of the total expenditure of Rs. 165.16 crores provided in the budget for next year, Rs. 52.82 crores are accounted for by the expenditure on refugees, the payment for food subsidies and pre-partition payments, leaving Rs. 112.34 crores for normal expenditure. This includes Rs. 10.06 crores for tax collection, Rs. 41.97 crores for obligatory expenditure on payment of interest and pensions and provision for debt redemption, Rs. 2.04 crores for planning and resettlement. Rs. 2.23 crores for expenditure on Currency and Mint, Rs. 2.95 crores for grants-in-aid to Provincial Governments and Rs. 24.20 crores for expenditure in the nation building spheres such as Education, Medical and Public Health, Broadcasting, Aviation and on Scientific Surveys and institutions in which the Central Government largely supplement the work of Provincial Governments. The balance of Rs. 28.89 crores represents the provision for administration, Civil Works, etc. and represents only 17.5 per cent. of the total civil expenditure. In addition to Rs. 24.20 crores in the nation building spheres mentioned above, provision has also been made for the grant of Rs. 26.81 crores to Provincial Governments for development and 49.25 crores for loans.

27. Honourable Members are aware that in recent months a large number of Indian States have been merged in the neighbouring Indian Provinces or taken over for administration direct by the Centre as part of the policy of unifying the country under the guidance of my distinguished colleague the Deputy Prime Minister. Ultimately the revenue and expenditure of these States have to merge in those of the Provinces or the Centre depending on the subject to which they pertain. But the process of integration is still incomplete and for the present the transactions of these States have been kept separate in a deposit account and not included in the revenue and expenditure of India. If, as may be hoped, the integration is completed in the course of the coming year, these transactions will be included in the revised estimates for the year.

28. On the basis of the estimates of revenue and expenditure that I have explained so far, the anticipated deficit for next year is Rs. 14.79 crores. I shall return to the question of how I propose to deal with this deficit in a later part of my speech.

Post-War Planning and Development

29. I mentioned earlier that as part of the campaign against inflation, Government had to review their whole programme of expenditure and reduce the outlay both in the capital and in the revenue budgets. Even so, substantial amounts have been included in the budget for grants to Provincial Governments and for Central schemes of development. So far as the Provinces are concerned it is not the intention that the scale of assistance promised to them by the Centre for their development schemes and on which they have formulated their plans should in any way be reduced. All that is happening is that the pace of this assistance is being temporarily slowed down in view of the urgent need for economy and in so doing special care has been taken to see that the progress of productive schemes and schemes of long range importance essential for national development is not held up. The House will remember that last year we laid down the policy that the grant each year from the Centre should be limited to half the amount spent on the approved schemes. Some of the smaller Provinces whose resources are limited asked for the waiver of this condition and in spite of our own difficulties we have agreed for this year and for next year to allow them grants up to the total amount they may spend on approved schemes. The budget for next year includes a provision of Rs. 26.81 crores for grants and Rs. 49.25 crores for loans to Provinces for development.

30. For Central schemes of development including resettlement a provision of Rs. 12.83 crores has been made in the revenue budget and Rs. 24.97 crores in the capital budget. Details of the provision are given in the Explanatory Memorandum and among the important schemes I would mention the expansion of the Forest Research Institute, Dehra Dun, the development of the forest estate in the Andamans, the preliminary work on a number of river projects like the Kosi, the Assam Valley, the Narbada, Tapti and Sabar-mati schemes, investigations in Coorg, Central Provinces and Bastar, the re-organisation of the Central Waterways Navigation and Irrigation Research Station, the expansion of the Indian Agricultural Research Institute and the development of basic education. The budget also provides Rs. 2.19 crores for the Central Government's share of the expenditure on the Damodar Valley Scheme, Rs. 90 lakhs for buildings for development schemes, Rs. 4.93 crores for the Fertiliser Factory under construction at Sindri, Rs. 2.92 crores for the expansion of civil aviation and Rs. 96 lakhs for the expansion of Broadcasting.

In the sphere of industrial development a beginning is also being made in the starting of basic industries essential for national development. Among these I would mention the Government Telephone Factory for the manufacture of telephone equipment, the setting up of a Shipping Corporation in which a total sum of Rs. 6.98 crores is expected to be invested this year and next year, the setting up of new steel works and factories for the manufacture of wireless equipment, synthetic oil, machine tools, cables, Diesel engines and heavy electrical equipment. A beginning will be made in the establishment of these industries which will be developed in subsequent years.

Capital Expenditure

31. With regard to capital expenditure I have just mentioned the provision included in the budget for development schemes. The House will doubtless be interested in the provision made in the budget for normal capital expenditure. But before I describe this, I must mention certain special transactions which have been entered in the capital budget this year. The first is the payment to the U.K. Government for the purchase of annuities for meeting the sterling pensions which accounts for a net debit of Rs. 215.68 crores this year and a recovery of Rs. 7.42 crores next year for which credit has been taken. The second is the payment, again to the U.K. Government, as part of the Sterling Balances Agreement of Rs. 133.33 crores for the Defence stores and installations taken over from them against which Rs. 51.57 crores will be recovered this year and Rs. 11.8 crores next year from Pakistan and from the sale of surpluses. The third is the outlay of Rs. 5.93 crores on the acquisition of the shares of the Reserve Bank of India this year. Lastly, there is a provision of Rs. 5.08 crores this year and Rs. 92 lakhs next year for payment to Pakistan for setting up Ordnance factories and other unique institutions. As part of the partition arrangements it was agreed that as most Ordnance factories and institutions like the Security Printing Press and the Currency Note Press were located in India and it was not desirable to break up these institutions, a sum of Rs. 6 crores should be made available to Pakistan for setting up similar institutions in Pakistan. This payment will be added to Pakistan's partition debt to India. Excluding these special items and the provision for development schemes and grants to Provinces the provision for normal capital expenditure amounts to Rs. 44.09 crores this year and Rs. 62.42 crores next year. Of the provision this year, Railways account for Rs. 27.15 crores and the Posts and Telegraphs Department for Rs. 2.91 crores. Next year's budget provides Rs. 28.49 crores for the Railways, Rs. 3.82 crores for Posts and Telegraphs and Rs. 7.9 crores for schemes of State Trading, mainly for the purchase of foodgrains the cost of which will be recovered in the following year.

The House will remember that a provision of Rs. 14.99 crores was made in the budget for the current year for capital outlay on Defence. The actual expenditure is now estimated at Rs. 9.91 crores, the decrease being mainly due to the delay in the completion of certain plans for major works and the procurement of aircraft. For next year a provision of Rs. 15 crores has been included of which Rs. 7.24 crores will be spent on the Army, Rs. 2.79 crores on the Navy and Rs. 4.97 crores on the Air Force.

Ways and Means

32. I now turn to a brief consideration of the ways and means position. The current year's budget provided for a total borrowing of Rs. 150 crores from the market and to a net receipt of Rs. 31.25 crores from small savings. For a variety of reasons to which I have referred in another part of my speech the gilt edged market remained inactive throughout the year with very little investment demand. It was not therefore possible to borrow on the scale originally contemplated. For next year I have made a modest provision of Rs. 85 crores for market loans. But if, as I hope, conditions improve the scale of borrowing will be raised. Next year Government have the option, of repaying the 3 per cent. loan 1949-52 with an outstanding balance of Rs. 67 crores. I have assumed that this amount will be repaid and in my estimate of borrowing next year I have taken this return of money to the market also into account. In the present inflationary conditions, it is of the outmost importance for the economy of the country that the community should save as much as possible and lend its savings to the State. I trust that the recent measures taken by Government to meet the inflationary situation would help in restoring public confidence and that this time next year I shall be in a position to give a more heartening picture of public co-operation in the Government's borrowing operations. As regards small savings, there has been in recent months some improvement in the net receipts from Savings Banks and in the sale of National Savings Certificates. The House will remember that last April Government issued two new series of certificates with a currency of five and seven years to cater to the smaller investor and also raised the maximum limit of investment in both Postal Savings Bank and National Savings Certificates. It is too early to assess the result of these measures but Government are doing all in their power, in co-operation with the Provincial Governments, to stimulate and sustain the small savings movement. It is hoped that the budget anticipations in regard to receipts from this source will be exceeded this year by Rs. 1.6 crores. For next year I have allowed for some further improvement and taken credit for a net receipt of Rs. 37.56 crores.

33. I now pass on to my proposals for dealing with the deficit of Rs. 14.79 crores anticipated in the coming year.

34. The prospective deficit is substantial and I am sure that the House will agree with me that in the present inflationary conditions it should not be left uncovered.

35. The problem before me is not merely that of raising the additional revenue to cover this deficit. I have also to consider the adjustments in taxation necessary in the light of the experience of the working of the tax system in the period since the House passed the budget for the current year. Fiscal policy is not an end in itself but has to subserve the ends of national policy and in a transitional period like this it is essential to keep the working of the taxation system under constant review and readjust it in the light of changing circumstances.

Apart from inflation, to which I have referred in detail elsewhere, the most disconcerting element in the economic life of the country today is a deep, underlying fear of the future, of which the stagnation in the capital market is an index. In my view one of the most urgent tasks before a Finance Minister today is to concert measures designed to remove this fear and to secure a revival of confidence. It is clear from recent experience that the formation of capital in this country has been seriously affected, with the result that investments in both Government loans and industry have been falling off. Unless this stagnation is checked and conditions are created in which the incentive to save and to invest is revived, the industrial expansion of the country and the execution of the plans for raising the living standards of the people are bound to be delayed. In formulating the proposals which I shall place before the House, I have kept this requirement prominently in mind.

Reliefs in Taxation

36. I shall first deal with the various measures of relief which I propose to give.

In the field of direct taxation, my first proposal is to abolish the Capital Gains Tax. At the time this tax was introduced it was expected to yield a large revenue, but it synchronised with a period of falling values and the yield from this tax has, in consequence, been small. Its psychological effect on investment has, however, been markedly adverse and it has had the effect of hampering the free movement of stocks and shares, without which it is hardly possible to maintain a high level of industrial development. In present circumstances, I consider the retention of this tax ill-advised. The loss of revenue is estimated at Rs. 1 crore.

My second proposal relates to income-tax. Here I propose to give some relief to income-tax payers in the lowest and medium income groups. The tax on incomes upto Rs. 10,000 a year will be reduced by a quarter of an anna from one anna to nine pies in the first slab and from two annas to one anna nine pies in the second slab. This class has been severely hit by the rise in prices and a certain degree of relief in their case is justified. The loss is estimated at Rs. 3 crores.

My third proposal relates to super-tax. Here I propose two reliefs designed to meet the criticism that the existing level of taxation leaves little incentive for saving and investment and that it is illogical to ignore the differentiation between earned and unearned income above Rs. 1½ lakhs. In respect of earned income I propose a reduction of an anna and a half in the rates charged on incomes above Rs. 1½ lakhs, leaving the maximum rate of tax for income-tax and super-tax together at 14 annas. For unearned income, I propose a reduction of 6 pies in the maximum rate of super-tax. The cost of the two concessions will be Rs. 2.1 crores.

Of the total loss of Rs. 6.1 crores involved in these concessions, Rs. 3 crores will fall on the Provinces by reducing the divisible pool of income-tax and the balance on the Centre.

37. Before I leave the subject of direct taxation I would like to mention two changes which I propose to make. The House will remember that in the budget for the current year my predecessor gave a concession to companies with an income of Rs. 25,000 and below by reducing their income-tax to half the usual rates. This concession was meant to encourage the growth of smaller companies but the reduction, which was allowed in income-tax, has given rise to considerable administrative difficulties, wholly out of proportion to the amount involved or the benefit accruing to the companies. I have carefully reviewed the position and come to the conclusion that while the concession should be continued it should take the form of a rebate of half the Corporation Tax, and should be limited further to public-controlled small companies which are not branches or subsidiaries of bigger companies. The result of this change will be that the entire cost of the concession will fall upon the Centre, and the Provinces will not have to share it. The amount involved is likely to be small and I have therefore made no specific provision on this account in the estimates for next year. The second change relates to the taxation of incomes of privately-controlled companies which do not declare their dividends in India. It may be recalled that there was a serious anomaly in the administration of income-tax law relating to the recovery of super-tax from shareholders, in respect of the dividends paid out of Indian profits, by companies incorporated outside this country. It was difficult to obtain from these companies information concerning the names of their shareholders and the amount of dividends paid out of Indian profits and consequently there was a considerable loss of revenue. The problem of plugging this leakage was considered last year and my predecessor introduced a scheme whereby an extra tax of one anna was imposed on all such companies with a view partially to recouping this loss. As part of the scheme, an amendment was made to the Income-tax Act so as to confer personal immunity from further taxation upon the share-holders of such companies. The amendment, however, had the effect of conferring immunity from super-tax not merely upon the dividends actually received, but also upon the dividends which under the operation of section 23-A of the Income-tax Act could be deemed to have been received from privately-controlled companies. Therefore, if the matter had been left there, the profits of these companies would have escaped with an overall impost much lighter than that to which they were subject under the previous law. This point was met by applying to this category of companies the rates of income-tax and super-tax prescribed for individuals or associations and the definition of "company" was altered to permit of this being done by executive action. The arrangement, however, has not been satisfactory, and after a careful review of the matter I have decided that instead of attempting to tax each such privately-controlled company as an individual, the principle of applying an average rate should be adopted. I accordingly propose that all corporations, whether Indian or non-Indian, should continue to be treated as companies but a further super-tax of one anna should be paid by those privately-controlled companies that do not distribute their profits in India. I propose to apply this method commencing with the current year. It will not involve any change in the revenue estimates.

38. There is one aspect of the complaint about the high taxation in relation to industry to which I would like to make a passing reference. Owing to the steep rise in the level of prices of raw materials, wages and working costs, large amounts of working capital are needed to maintain production. Replacement costs are also higher, and there have been complaints that the calculation of depreciation allowance for purposes of taxation on the original cost of the asset involves great hardship. It has been suggested that industries should be allowed to revalue their existing fixed assets at the present day prices so that future depreciation allowance may be given on the basis of the revaluation. The Government of India considered this problem in all its aspects last October and came to the conclusion that while the difficulty complained of was real the solution proposed was not practicable. It would give no assistance to those who have immediately to replace their worn-out assets and there was no point in giving a concession to others who, at some future date, may not be required to pay the high prices now prevailing. It was, however, realised that some relief should be given to those who were prepared to renew and re-equip their capital assets immediately, in spite of the prevailing high costs. It was decided that for all new plant and machinery installed during the five years from the 1st April 1948, depreciation allowance at double the ordinary rate will be allowed. It has also been decided that if by 1st April 1953 there is a drop in the general level of prices, the difference between the written down value of the assets and the corresponding value at the reduced price will be allowed as an additional depreciation allowance. For existing plant and machinery, it has been decided to grant extra depreciation allowance for increased wear and tear if triple shifts are worked. I trust that these concessions will go a long way in meeting the complaints of industry in this matter. In addition, the concession given last year of a reduced rate of income-tax to companies which do not distribute a part of their profits as dividends, and the recent limitation, for a temporary period, of the amount that may be distributed as dividends will also enable industrial concerns to accumulate reserves for meeting the increased cost of replacement.

39. I now turn to the reliefs in indirect taxation.

The House will remember that in the budget for the current year an export duty was levied on oil seeds and vegetable oils. This was justified at the time by the wide disparity between the internal prices of these commodities and their export prices and it was then felt that the levy of this duty will not affect our export market. The effect of this duty has since been carefully reviewed, and it is now clear that its continuance hampers the maintenance of our exports, particularly to the dollar countries, where we have to meet severe competition. In the interests of the export trade I propose to withdraw this duty altogether. The loss in revenue is estimated at Re. 1.5 crores.

As a measure of assistance to civil aviation and to foster the development of flying clubs and the training of Indian pilots, it is proposed to give a rebate of half the duty on aviation spirit used by air companies, flying clubs and others. This concession is estimated to cost Rs. 40 lakhs.

Honourable Members are aware that it has been the policy of Government to give relief in respect of customs duty on raw materials imported for industry. In pursuance of this policy it is proposed to give relief next year in the case of a number of imported articles, the total cost of such remissions being estimated at Rs. 35 lakhs.

40. The net effect of all the reliefs mentioned so far is a reduction in revenue of Rs. 5.35 crores, raising the prospective deficit to Rs. 20.14 crores.

New and Additional Taxes

41. Before I deal with proposals for new taxation I would mention certain changes proposed in the postal rates. With the rapid development of a network of air services over the whole country, it has been decided to utilise this facility for accelerating the delivery of mails and transmit all first class mails, namely, letter and post cards as far as possible by air. The existing surcharge on air mails will accordingly be abolished and as all mails will hereafter be carried over as much of the distance as possible by air, it is proposed to revise the existing rates for letters and post cards. The rate for letters will be raised from 1½ annas to 2 annas for the first tola or fraction thereof the rate for each subsequent tola or fraction thereof remaining unchanged at 1 anna. For post cards the present charge of six pies will be raised to nine pies, the rate which was in force prior to the 1st July 1946. The net additional revenue from the revision of these rates and the abolition of the surcharge on air mails is estimated at Rs. 2.84 crores.

42. I now come to the problem of covering the remaining deficit of Rs. 17.3 crores. It is obvious that at the present level of taxation there is now no scope for raising additional revenue by an increase of direct taxes. As regards customs duties, the level of our import duties is, in my opinion, so high that no substantial increase in revenue is likely to result from enhancing them. The levy of export duties has to be carefully regulated with reference, not so much to our revenue needs as to be the need for maintaining and developing the country's export trade which earns the foreign exchange necessary for financing essential imports. While some adjustments may be found possible in respect of import duties and export duties could be utilised to some extent, we can no longer rely on customs duties for raising substantial additional revenue and we shall have to depend increasingly on developing excise duties.

43. I shall first deal with customs duties. I propose to retain on the tariff next year the changes made by ordinance in November last as part of the campaign against inflation and complete the process of raising the duties on luxury items, which was then begun, by a number of further changes in the tariff. To this effect I propose to levy a surcharge on liquor equivalent to the basic duty, to raise the surcharge from one-fifth to one-half on fabrics containing silk, artificial silk, woollens and their mixtures and cotton knitted apparel, to double the surcharge on artificial silk yarn and thread, earthenware and china, and to raise the duty on paper (other than newsprint), stationery articles, glass and glassware including sheet and plate glass, cutlery, metal furniture, flashlights, photographic appliances and clocks and watches. The additional revenue from all these changes is estimated at Rs. 2.4 crores.

I also propose to raise the import duty on motor spirit from 12 annas a gallon to 15 annas a gallon. The excise duty will also be similarly raised. This will bring the duty on motor spirit to the level of 1945-46, when consumption of this article was regulated by more severe austerity standards, and bring in an additional revenue of Rs. 2.55 crores, taking Customs and Central Excise together. I have considered the implications of this course on transport and am satisfied that it will not retard the development of transport or add materially to the cost of road transport.

My next proposal is to raise the import duty on betelnuts from 5 annas a lb. to 7½ annas a lb., with the present preference of 6 pies a lb. for imports from British colonies. This will bring in additional revenue and will also be in the interests of the indigenous grower. The yield is estimated at Rs. 1 crore.

In the sphere of export duties I propose a new duty of 15 per cent. ad valorem on exports of cigarettes, cigars and cheroots. I am satisfied that this will not affect the export market for these goods. The estimated yield is Rs. 60 lakhs.

44. I now turn to changes in Central Excise Duties. I have already referred to the increase in the excise duty on motor spirit as complementary to the increase in the import duty. I propose further changes in respect of sugar, tyres for motor vehicles and cotton cloth. I propose to increase the duty on sugar from Rs. 3 per cwt. to Rs. 3-12-0 per cwt. which will yield Rs. 1.5 crores. The duty on tyres used for motor vehicles will be raised from 15 per cent. ad valorem to 30 per cent. ad valorem, which will bring an additional revenue of Rs. 70 lakhs. As regards cotton cloth, as the House is aware, a duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem was levied on superfine cloth with effect from 1st January 1949, as one of the measures against inflation. This duty will be continued next year and in addition, it is proposed to levy a duty of 6½ per cent. ad valorem on fine cloth and a quarter anna per yard on coarse and medium cloth. The duty will be confined to mill-made cloth and will not be applicable to cloth woven on handlooms. The revenue from this additional duty on cotton cloth is estimated at Rs. 9 crores.

45. The excise duty on cloth has a long and bitter history behind it and I must explain to the House my reasons for introducing it. In the first place, the circumstances in which we are levying the duty today are different from those in which it was levied by a foreign Government in the interests of a foreign industry. In the second place, it is necessary to replace the heavy loss in revenue resulting from the abolition of the salt duty by developing some other equally stable source of revenue. Cloth, with a large internal production and as an article of universal consumption, offers itself as the most obvious choice for a tax on consumption. Thirdly, in the present conditions, as the price of imported cloth remains high and the import duties thereon have been enhanced considerably, the proposed excise duty is not likely to affect the indigenous industry. I would also mention that this duty is likely to assist the handloom industry. During the war years when there was no control on handloom cloth and supplies for civilian use were restricted the handloom industry had an assured market for its products. With the Indian mills steadily expanding their production and imports from overseas also tending to increase, the advantages which the handloom industry had during the war years will gradually disappear. The excise duty now proposed, which adds slightly to the cost of the mill product, will, in some measure, help the handloom industry to retain its market. From the point of view of the consumer the incidence of this duty, particularly on the middle and lower middle classes using coarse and medium cloth, will be negligible and in view of the substantial revenue that is expected from it I trust the House will accord its approval to it.

46. While on the subject of Central excises, I may mention the question of rationalising the duty on matches, which I have had under consideration for some time. The ideal arrangement will be to have one standard size of matches but owing to practical difficulties in production it is not possible to achieve this. I have therefore decided that two sizes, namely, 40s and 60s should continue in production and I have made some slight readjustment in the rate of duty. Factories whose annual output is less than 5 lakhs gross boxes will now benefit by the levy of a somewhat lower rate of duty. Necessary amendments to the tariff will be made through the Finance Bill but this will not involve any change in the revenue estimates. With the provision of the two sizes I hope that the retail prices will not exceed 6 pies and 9 pies per box and that the consumer will get the benefit of the partial standardisation without any loss of revenue to the exchequer.

Net result of proposals

47. I may now summarise the net effect of all the proposals that I have placed before the House. The various measures of relief which I have suggested in direct taxes will result in a loss of revenue of Rs. 8.1 crores; the abolition of the export duty on oil seeds and vegetable oils will involve a loss of Rs. 1.5 crores; and the rebate of duty on aviation spirit and industrial raw materials will cost a further sum of Rs. 75 lakhs. As I have already stated, this will bring the total loss of revenue to Rs. 5.85 crores, raising the prospective deficit from Rs. 14.79 crores to Rs. 20.14 crores. The increases in customs duties and, the new export duty on cigarettes and cigars will yield Rs. 6.23 crores the net increase in Postal rates Rs. 2.84 crores, and the increases in Central Excise Duties Rs. 11.52 crores. The final effect of these proposals is to convert the prospective deficit into a small surplus of Rs. 45 lakhs.

Conclusion

48. Sir, I have come to the end of my story. It is not pleasant for a Finance Minister to appear before the House with a record of deficits and proposals for additional taxation but a Finance Minister is as much the creature of circumstances as any one else. Part of the heavy expenditure which Government have now to meet is due to extraordinary circumstances and but for these special demands, the budget would have shown a substantial surplus. As I have mentioned earlier, the present economic conditions in the country make it an imperative necessity to balance the budget. In laying fresh burdens of taxation the House will accept my assurance that I have done my best to secure that they are equitable and that no section of the community is made to pay more than its fair share.

[Dr. John Matthai]

49. On a survey of world conditions today, I feel that we have good reason for taking a hopeful view of our financial position. We are not alone in having to fight scarcities and inflation. These problems confront most countries in the post-war world. We can, however, take comfort from the fact that, unlike some other countries, our financial position is intrinsically sound. We have only a moderate public debt in relation to our national income and we have considerable external reserves with practically no external debt. We have weathered the storm and stress of the partition and its terrible aftermath. In spite of the heavy demands on our resources for the relief and rehabilitation of refugees, the import of food on an unprecedented scale from overseas and the defence of Kashmir against aggression, we are in a position to balance our budget, without sacrificing any of our essential schemes of development. We have made some headway in the fight against inflation. The curve of production is slowly rising and we have plans in hand for increasing the food production of the country. I do not wish in any way to minimise our difficulties or suggest that we can take a complacent view of the situation. A balanced national budget may, and often does, cover a multitude of ill-balanced family budgets. In this respect, we have still a formidable task ahead of us, the task of fighting want, sickness and poverty and raising the living standards of the millions to whom the emancipation of the country will be a mockery unless it is translated in terms of opportunities for a fuller, freer and better life. This task is not beyond our resources but it requires the co-operation of all classes and sections of the community in a spirit of partnership in a high adventure. I have no doubt that this co-operation will be forthcoming and I pray that my stewardship of the finances of the country may contribute in some degree to the accomplishment of this task.

Mr. Chairman: The Budget papers will now be distributed before the Honourable the Finance Minister moves the next motion standing in his name. One of the papers now distributed is the Report of the Income-Tax Investigation Commission. This has been marked confidential and not meant for publication. Any breach of the obligation by the members of the Press will be regarded as a breach of the privileges of the House.

INDIAN FINANCE BILL, 1949

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to give effect to the financial proposals of the Central Government for the year beginning on the first day of April, 1949.

Mr. Chairman: The question is:—

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to give effect to the financial proposals of the Central Government for the year beginning on the first day of April, 1949."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I introduce the Bill.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday the 1st March, 1949.

Part II

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE)
DEBATES
(PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Tuesday, 1st March, 1949.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I).

11-50 A.M.

REPEALING AND AMENDING BILL.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister of Law): Sir, I beg leave to introduce a Bill to repeal certain enactments and to amend certain other enactments.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to repeal certain enactments and to amend certain other enactments"

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

CANCELLATION OF MEETING FOR 2ND MARCH, 1949

Shri H. V. Kamath (C. P. and Berar: General): Before we proceed to other business, may I bring to your notice the fact that to-morrow's meeting of the Assembly has been cancelled, but we are meeting on Saturday. In view of this may I request you that the questions tabled for to-morrow may be taken up on Saturday.

Mr. B. Paker (Madras: Muslim): May I know why the meeting for yesterday was cancelled?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I shall refer the honourable member to paragraph 19(a) regarding the allotment of question time during the Budget Session:

"When the question-hour is eliminated owing to the cancellation of a meeting of the Assembly or its adjournment without transacting any business, all the questions, both starred and unstarred, originally entered in the lists of questions for that day will be treated as unstarred questions for the next meeting, and will be printed along with their answers in the Official Report of the latter day. No fresh lists of such transferred questions will be printed but at the next meeting the original lists, marked as unstarred, will be placed in the House in the sets of agenda papers for that meeting."

Shri H. V. Kamath: May I point out another rule: that the first hour of every day shall be devoted to the answering of questions?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is true. That is being complied with so far as Saturday is concerned, because we have no questions tabled for that day.

CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS BILL.

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister of Commerce): Sir, I beg to present the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make provision for the regulation of the profession of accountants.

TEA COMMITTEE FOR INDIA BILL.

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

The Honourable Shri K. C. Neogy (Minister of Commerce): Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the development of the tea industry under Central control, and for that purpose to establish a Tea Committee for India and levy a customs duty on tea produced in, and exported from, India.

INDIAN JUDICIAL PROCEDURE BILL.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): I move:

"That the time appointed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to clarify and modify the law in practice hitherto followed in Criminal applications for special leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council for Criminal cases decided by the Indian Courts, be extended up to the 25th March, 1949."

In the original motion before the House the date is 11th March. With your permission I want to amend this to 25th March.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the time appointed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to clarify and modify the law in practice hitherto followed in Criminal applications for special leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council for Criminal cases decided by the Indian Courts, be extended up to the 25th March, 1949."

The motion was adopted.

TIME FOR STUDY OF BUDGET PAPERS.

Begum Aizaz Rasul (U. P.: Muslim): Sir, I want to bring to your notice the fact that the two days that have been allowed to the Members of this House to study the Budget is a very short period and I should like to request you to allot more time for its study before the general discussion of the Budget takes place. In the provinces four days are given to the Members to study the Budget papers before the General Discussion takes place.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Two days have already been allowed—one is a holiday and the other is a working day; all the same honourable members will have two days technically. But I am sure such honourable members as have not been able to study the papers sufficiently will take part in the discussions in the end.

Shri Biswanath Das (Orissa: General): In this connection, may I make a submission, Sir? Even in provinces Members are given more time to study the budget than is given here. This is a very complex budget. We just have one working day and one holiday. Some of us will have to attend committee meetings even on the holiday. Under these circumstances, I would request you to consider the position and extend time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am afraid I am unable to do anything in this matter. This matter has already been decided by Mr. Speaker. However, I find that three days have been allotted for General Discussion—we are all accustomed to the General Discussion. So far as voting of Demands for Grants is concerned, more pointed attention may have to be paid to it and I find that nine days have been allotted for it. Therefore, I do not think that the present time table need be altered.

HINDU CODE—contd.

Shrimati G. Durgabai (Madras: General): It is with great pleasure that I rise to support the motion made by the Honourable Minister of Law. I also feel that I should express my deep debt of gratitude to Sir, B. N. Rau and his colleagues on the Committee who have bestowed great labour on the report which forms the basis of this Bill.

The Bill to codify the Hindu law when it goes on the Statute Book, will be a great landmark in the social history of this country. Before I go in greater detail into the main provisions of this Bill I would like to stress one point. Honourable Members are aware of the fact that the provisions of this Bill are of a permissive or enabling nature. They impose no sort of obligation or compulsion on the orthodox section of the Hindus. Their only effect is to give the growing and clamant body of Hindus, men and women, the freedom to live a life which they wish to live without in any way affecting or infringing their liberty to adhere to the old ways.

I wish to confine my remarks only to one or two main objections that have been raised against the Bill. The first objection is against the attempt at codification itself. It is urged that many of the principles of the Hindu Law are now well-settled, and as it would unsettle the settled law, a code is not called for at all. The other objection is that far from preserving the principles of Hindu Law which have been handed down from generation to generation, an attempt at codification would tend to introduce principles which are quite alien to Hindu society. It has been said that the Legislature has no right to alter the law of smritis, shrutis and sages of great repute. At 12 Noon other charge against the Hindu Code Bill is that it seeks to introduce changes of a revolutionary character and, therefore, it will destroy the law laid down by smritis and Dharma. My answer to all these objections is that it is just because many of the principles of the Hindu Law are now well-settled, that an attempt to set down all these principles into a systematised and easily understood code should be made.

Hindu Law as it exists today is rigid without being certain. Many judicial decision and precedents have outlived their usefulness. As an English writer puts it, the case law on the subject has become a luxuriant jungle where it is not possible to see the wood for the trees. There are frequently conflicting decisions of various High Courts given from time to time. Even the decisions of the Privy Council on some of the intricate questions of law are widely felt to be out of accord both with ancient authority and also modern spirit. A uniform and unified law will prove a boon to Hindu society, because it would save considerable time of law students and also practitioners who have otherwise to take a considerable number of years to get to acquire a full grasp of the law. Even the ordinary citizen will also be able to read the code and say to himself, "Within this cover is the whole basis of my rights, privileges and obligations." A code will also minimise the time and labour of Judges and it would also induce the speedy administration of justice. To be without a code is, in my opinion, to be without justice.

The objection that it has introduced changes of a revolutionary character is mainly voiced by vested interests. The subordination of some of the present interests to secure the future interests of the country is always a thing to be welcomed. As a matter of fact, this Code does not really go far enough in that direction and that is my opinion.

The bulk of the agricultural property is excluded from the operation of this Code. Therefore, it is urged that your object to have a uniform law is frustrated. Why attempt a Code at all if this object is defeated? My answer to that objection is this. What is aimed by this Code is to have a uniform law for all Hindus, but not a uniform law necessarily for all kinds of property. In the interest of agriculture itself, if not for anything else, separate laws and special laws will be enacted by appropriate legislatures which may include a special law of succession which is quite different from the law of succession applying to other forms of property.

Now I come to what I consider as the main objection, that is, the giving of a share to the daughter. This was opposed on many grounds that it would lead to disintegration and fragmentation of property, besides introducing a foreign element in the shape of the son-in-law. And also it is objected to on the ground that the simultaneous heirship of a daughter with a son would simply shatter the Hindu society. Also it is said that if the daughter takes away a share the love of her brothers is lost. It is also said that sons in many families would simply be ruined under the double burden of marriage expenses and also a share to the daughter. May I ask what sort of affection it is of the brothers if only it would involve putting a little more strain on their own self-interest? May I also ask if no share is given to the daughter the sons' love will be greater?

With regard to fragmentation I fail to understand how this question can be raised, as it has already been said that agricultural property is excluded from the purview of this Bill. This point was raised by one of the honourable members of this House and we are all aware that the bulk of agricultural property is excluded from the operation of this code. It would only apply to urban and movable property. What they mean, I feel, by fragmentation is diminution of the share which they will get if the daughter is also given a share. The daughter being of the same flesh and blood should there be so much uproar, I ask, if a share is sought to be given to her?

With regard to the introduction of a stranger into the family my answer is that the property which the daughter takes from her father, if necessary, by legislation may be made to form as part of her separate property. The evil or the good resulting from the legal provision depends also on the particular individual i.e., son-in-law concerned. I do not want to say much about this.

It should be noted that the daughter, as do the sons, demands a share if need be only after the death of the father and there is absolutely no question of her demanding a partition when the father is alive. Therefore I do not see why some honourable members should object to this. As the Law Minister has already dealt with the matter the smritis themselves have recognised the share of the daughter to her father's property and therefore there is nothing revolutionary about this and the attempt to exclude the daughter on the ground that she does not contribute to the spiritual benefits of the father or her ancestors is I say unjust and unfair.

In this connection the argument is put forward, why not the daughter take a share in her husband's property and not come to ask for a share in her father's property? This appears to be a compromising formula. I may say straightaway that this compromise formula is not or will not be acceptable to women. We say that we should be recognised on a basis of equality. This code proposes to abolish the distinction that exists on the basis of sex and that should be removed. The daughter should be recognised as an heir and should enjoy her property in her full right as a daughter and as an heir to the father. As regards the question of disintegration I have already dealt with the matter. The evil could be met by different ways. Fragmentation can be stopped and consolidation could be secured by special laws. If the property goes down to a certain extent that could be sold and the shares could be adjusted. There are different ways how this problem could be tackled and the argument on that score could not be advanced that the daughter should not get a share. Hence the Select Committee has recommended, based on this principle of equality that she should be given an equal share with the son. I appeal to the honourable members of the House to support the recommendation made practically unanimously by the Select Committee in this regard.....

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): Dr. Ambedkar was not in sympathy with that.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: Therefore when it is said that the daughter takes a share both from the father and from the husband and the husband takes nothing, how about this? The Select Committee has recommended that the man also can inherit the wife's property in the same way as the wife inherits the husband's property and also the son will be given a share equal to that of the daughter's in the mother's property just as the daughter claims a share in her father's property. Therefore there should be no difficulty even in this regard. For those who oppose this Bill on these grounds there is one answer given. I do not want to quote because the time is limited and other members are anxious to speak (Honourable Members: 'Go on. Take your time'). Mr. V. V. Srinivasa Iyengar pointed out in this connection that those who oppose this legislation on religious grounds labour under a misunderstanding that Hindu law has remained static from the time of Manu. That is not the position.

This takes me on to another subject and that is about the status of women with reference to the holding of an estate absolutely and not in life. The Bill seeks to remove this disqualification attached to woman's estate and it gives her the right to hold property absolutely and not for life only. The main argument in favour of limiting the estate in the case of women is that they are incapable of managing it and also that they are likely to be duped or exploited. Also it is said that they are illiterate and they do not understand the principles of management and hence there will be a strong inducement to designing male relatives to take away her right. My answer to all this is this. The House is aware that the daughter has an absolute estate in Bombay today. Therefore on that ground I do not think they are exposed to any risk. The other argument is that we have scores of instances where women have proved better managers than men. Also there is one more argument. No doubt I agree that women are illiterate but may I ask you how many men are literate? Three out of four men continue to be illiterate today. (An honourable Member: 'Nine out of ten'.) Therefore the relative advantage enjoyed by men is confined only to one in four of the male population (An honourable Member: 'They are the sons of their mothers'.) and it should also be remembered that the percentage of literacy among women is rising very much faster today than it is among men. (Shri H. V. Kamath: 'Question'.) With regard to the quantum of her share I have already stated the position of the Select Committee. We have recommended an equal share to the daughter. I appeal to you that you should be generous enough to endorse the recommendation made by the Select Committee without any hesitation on your part. I will now come to another subject, namely monogamy. However much I wish to speak on this subject, I do not do it because of the limited time at my disposal. Not only that, but this has been dealt with amply by the honourable the Law Minister and also by several other speakers. Many arguments have been put forward on economic and social and other grounds; even religion and spiritualism have been sought in aid to support their arguments. But feelings were expressed in a very light-hearted manner; if only a man is healthy and wealthy, why not he marry and marry again! Also, that if the rule of monogamy is enforced many Hindus will become Muslims in order to secure the benefits of polygamy! I need not answer this question because I have found one lady witness very ably and effectively answering this point. She said that if the rule of monogamy is not enforced, it may be that women will become Christians in order to secure the benefits of monogamy. But neither of them I think is serious.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Do you think a Christian woman is happier than a Hindu woman?

Shrinati G. Durgabai: As the honourable the Law Minister has already stated, the force of world opinion and the practices prevailing in the whole world are there and they are in favour of monogamy. Therefore I need not deal with this matter any more.

Neither have I time nor is it desirable for me to take the other aspects of the Bill because there are other Members who will deal with the questions like marriage and divorce, but I only wish to say something on co-parcenary. The distinction between mitakshara and Dayabhaga came as a result of the different interpretations put by the commentators and other interpreters. Fundamentally, the basis of joint family is there common to both. The right by birth and the principle of survivorship is a distinctive feature of Mitakshara. The Dayabhaga system has in actual experience proved very satisfactory and the Bill therefore seeks to replace the Mitakshara system of inheritance by Dayabhaga. It is said the greater prosperity of the people in Bengal and their increasing commercial enterprise is due to a large extent to the Dayabhaga system. I am told that the commercial enterprise of Nattukottai Chettiyars in Madras is largely due to their ideas of legal relations of the members of their families which approximate more to those of partnership than is the case in Brahmin joint families.

Much has been said on this subject, therefore I do not want to labour this point. I feel that the opposition is more due to their love for this ancient institution, but those who oppose it I think oppose it because they forget the fact that Hindu Law and Dharma on these matters remain static and no changes have been made. Various judicial decisions have made changes from time to time into this system and the institution has been simply shorn of its characteristics. This point has been very ably answered by a very great lawyer like S. Srinivasa Ayyangar, who said that under the Hindu Law, as authoritatively interpreted by the Privy Council, the unity is broken by any member at any time by a unilateral declaration of his intention to separate from the family. This is quite sufficient to answer that charge against the breaking up of the co-parcenary or the replacement of the Mitakshara by Dayabhaga.

I do not want to take more time of the House. Many things have happened since the achievement of freedom and India has been participating in international conferences and pleading for human rights and also for equal treatment of Indians in foreign countries. It will be a great misfortune if at this juncture we fail to enact a Hindu Code within our own borders, in which there will be no discrimination and where there will be equality for men and women to move, to develop and to contribute to the re-building of our India. Our Constitution is in the making, we have already passed the Chapter on Fundamental Rights, and recognised the principle of equality of everyone before law. We have also passed the provision enabling ourselves to have a uniform Civil Code. Therefore, I make this appeal to you. Let us not be wanting or halting in having a Code of Hindu Law for ourselves which will prove a great boon to our own society in the way in which I have already stated.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Ma tra (West Bengal: General): Sir, I am thankful to you for giving me this opportunity to put in a few words what I feel regarding the motion before the House, namely the consideration of the Hindu Code. I know I am in a position of great disadvantage inasmuch as I could not be present when the Motion was debated during the first two days, as I had to be away from this place. I had, in the few moments I could snatch in the midst of my preoccupations, noticed Press reports that my honourable friend the Law Minister, Dr. Ambedkar had, made a magnificent speech in support of his motion. Also, that an equally powerful speech—I am not making any comparison, I rely on reports, though there is a divergence of opinion even among the reporters that an equally powerful speech was made on the other side by Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.

I listened with considerable attention to the four speeches that have been made in favour of the motion and the one against it. As the debate was going on yesterday, I could see the mood of the House—sometimes hilarious, but when a Member sought to differ from the main provisions of the Bill all manner of gibes and ironical cheers greeted him all through. (Honourable Members: 'No, no.') I am glad it is not so. Well, I think it will give me some encouragement because most members know—I think every single member knows—which way I will speak. I do not know how I came to attain this sort of notoriety—I could not say, fame—that I do not support the provisions of this Bill. I will make no secret of it. (An Honourable Member: Why should you?) because I will speak out my convictions. I know what a delicate task it is for me to be addressing this House, constituted as it is and in the mood in which I find it. I know that I may have to rue the temerity which I have shown by taking courage in both hands to say what I feel. It is rather helpful that immediately before I address this House, I have had the opportunity of listening to my honourable sister, Shrinati Durgabai, who has made a closely reasoned speech in support of this Bill.

I must apologise to my sister for not being able to agree with her in the theories which she has so confidently assumed as being almost accepted by all. She finished her speech with a peroration, appealing to the House to give effect to the principle in the Draft Constitution providing for equality for all in the eye of the law. Yes, we have done that. She also reminded us that we have already passed, as one of the Directive Principles of the Constitution, that there should be a uniform Civil Code for the whole of this country. I am glad she gave me the starting point of my speech today. When this subject was debated a couple of months ago in another place and when it was brought out elsewhere informally, I registered a vehement protest against this provision, as I felt that it was nothing but an outcome of shibboleths and slogans—a uniform Civil Code for a country inhabited by 32 to 34 crores of people professing all manner of faiths: Hinduism, Sikhism, Jainism, Buddhism, Christianity; and last but not the least, Islam! I tabled amendments that the personal law should be secure and that this was an encroachment by the State on the personal law of a person which the State had no right to make.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani (U. P.: Muslim): Hear, hear.

Shrinati Renuka Ray (West Bengal: General): That is the reason why you should support this Hindu Code.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: The honourable sister in front of me says that it is the reason why I should support the Hindu Code. May I say that that is the very reason why I am going to oppose the Hindu Code—one of the main reasons. You must be logical. I can understand the feelings of my sisters. Do not think that I am a hater of women, that I am a misogynist, or that I have no feeling for women. (An Honourable Member: 'He is a married man'.) Yes I am a married man. I have a humble wife—married according to Hindu shastric rites,—a simple, unsophisticated lady, bred up and nurtured in the ideals of our Hindu homes. (The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: 'What a pity') It is a pity! May be, but I have not much of love or liking for the lavender, lipstick and vanity bag—variety of that sex. I am happy, and I am sure out of every hundred Hindu homes, 98 have got these types of wives and are quite happy. (An Honourable Member: 'Why 98? 99.9 per cent, are so') I am glad, a friend says it is 99.9 per cent, recurring. That enforces my argument. So I can tell my honourable friend Dr. Ambedkar that I have not felt the necessity for the drastic changes that he has sought to introduce in this Bill. (The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: 'Neither did I feel any'.) My honourable friend says he also did not feel the necessity. If he did not really feel any necessity for these sweeping changes, then do I take it that it was due to his megalomania that we have got this Hindu Code Bill? I have very great admiration for my honourable friend Dr. Ambedkar, with whom I had the privilege to work for a number of years before this Assembly. I respect him. I know the performance he has been daily putting in in connection with the Constitution Act. (Honourable Members: 'Hear, hear') I appreciate him. I admire him. But I will never appreciate what he has been doing in connection with this Social Legislation which is sure to disrupt the Hindu society by the revolutionary changes which very few of us can now realise. (Honourable Members: 'No revolution. No, no') Yes, I am glad it is "No, no." If this Bill is passed into law.....

Babu Ramnarayan Singh (Bihar: General): No.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: What no?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: It would not be passed into law.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I see. If this Bill is passed into law as it is I will then see who is a better prophet—myself or those who say "No, no."

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): You wait and see.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Well, wait and see. Posterity will judge, and I do not think you will have to wait till posterity. You will have to wait only till the next General Election to see what the country has to say about you and your work.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: Hear, hear. Well done.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Sir, the first point raised by my sister Shrimati Durgabai was that having passed that Directive Principle, you should not now object to the Hindu Code. When that Directive Principle was accepted by the House, I thought that the snake had been killed—the Hindu Code Bill,—but I now see that the snake was only scotched; it has reared its head again and will in time spread out its fangs of venom. If you are true to your Directive Principles, if you mean to act on them, then why bring the Hindu Code Bill. Bring a Universal Civil Code applicable to Hindus, to Christians, (Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: 'Will you support it?') to Parsis, to Sikhs, to Jains, to Buddhists, to Muslims. You dare not touch the Muslims but you know that Hindu society today is in such a bad way that you can venture to do anything with it. Only a few ultra-modern persons, who are vocal, but have no real support in the country, are interested in this Bill. (Interruption).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Let him proceed.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Millions of dumb people, ignorant but not the less intelligent or sensible simply because they do not have the collegiate education, or are not members of the legislatures, think that such a radical change in their personal law is not called for. They are not to be ignored.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Then do not draw up the Constitution.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I therefore feel that there is no sincerity in the acceptance of the principle of one uniform Civil Code for the whole country; or else, how could you, within two months of it, come out with this Hindu Code Bill which seeks to govern only the Hindus, Sikhs, Jains and Buddhists?

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Hindu Code came much before.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: You have omitted Christians, Muslims, Parsis.

Maulana Hasrat Mohani: Muslims will never accept any interference in their personal law.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: You need not have reminded me. I know that. I perfectly appreciate the proposition of my honourable friend Maulana Hasrat Mohani. But all the same, I think this is a fundamental departure from the accepted principle in the Constitution.

When my honourable friend Shrimati Durgabai said that codification is justified. She tried to prove that an irresistible case had been made out for codification. With all respect to my sister Shrimati Durgabai I submit I stand unconvinced. I can understand the necessity for codification when the law is in a state of flux or that there is much diversity of opinion, or a good deal of vagueness or uncertainty about it. Codification should in such a case be undertaken by the best legal brains in the country sitting together to give shape to the various principles of law which are more or less in a confusing or uncertain state. Is that the case with regard to Hindu law in this country?

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U. P.: General): It is.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I accept your statement, but I feel deep regret for the colossal ignorance you have exhibited. Hindu law, if my honourable friend is a lawyer and holds that view, he has not practised. He will please excuse this friendly retort. I can stand interruptions. If you interrupt me you will be only adding ginger to my speech. After the advent of the British to this country, the Hindu law got gradually crystallised. They did not dare to touch the personal law of the people of the country.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: They brought in limited estate for women.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I am coming to that straightaway. If I forget to reply to that point, kindly remind me. Hindu Law is such a vast subject that I can talk for hours on it, if the Chair permits me to do so. I assure you, Sir, I am not going to do that.

I protest in the first place against the manner in which this Bill has been sought to be smuggled into this House and through this House. It is an extraordinary procedure, Mr. Deputy-Speaker.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: I object, Mr. Deputy-Speaker, to this insult to the House.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: It is not a point of order.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: This is a point of order, Sir. I object to the remarks made against the House.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: 'Smuggling' I have never understood to be an unparliamentary word. If the honourable member thinks that there is any stigma attaching to it, I would use another word in substitution thereof. I would say that the haste with which this Bill is sought to be passed in the House is extraordinary. Is that also an unparliamentary word? If so, give a parliamentary expression for that. You cannot find a substitute for it. (An Honourable Member: 'Commendable speed'). It is a most extraordinary procedure that has been adopted in this House. I have some little experience of parliamentary activity in this House. I have never known an occasion when a Bill of this importance and magnitude has been sought to be passed in the way it is done now.

Shri Brajeshwar Prasad (Bihar: General): It will never be passed. (Interruption)

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I like interruptions but I could not catch what he said. If the honourable members think that by constantly interrupting me in this way the effectiveness of my speech will be marred they are mistaken.

The Bill was introduced on the last day of the last Budget session.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: Last hour.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: You know very well how a Bill of this importance and magnitude, a Bill which seeks to regulate the life and conduct of Hindu society was introduced on the last day of the last session; how at the end of the day's work we sat beyond 5 o'clock for two hours and the honourable the Minister for Law was allowed to make a speech committing it to a Select Committee only three or four speakers, under a rigid time limit were allowed to speak and at 7 o'clock after a short session the motion was carried. Thereafter what happened? It went to the Select Committee. The Select Committee reported on it and on the motion for consideration of that report points of order were raised in this House. I am not going to enter into the merits of those vital points of order. They were disposed of. So great was the impatience that in the last session the honourable the Law Minister wanted to simply say that the Bill be taken into consideration and there was no speech. It was somehow got into the agenda. Very well it was done. Points of order were ruled out and it was found that it was within the competence of the House to go on with the measure as reported by the Select Committee. Now look at the way in which it is being dealt with now. In the short interlude between the Railway Budget and the General Budget this is sought to be pushed through. There is no seriousness about it. Nobody feels its importance. The country at large is bewildered by the way in which we are dealing with a piece of legislation of this far reaching importance. If you attach real importance to it, if you really mean business, if you want that something should be done by way of revising the Hindu law as it is today, this is certainly not the way to do it. Keep the Bill for a special session. For small Banking Bills and the like you are devoting days and days. That being the case, do you mean to say that a Bill which seeks to regulate the life and conduct of the Hindu community should be dealt with in the haphazard way in which it is sought to be done? I enter my emphatic protest against the way in which this important legislation is being considered. You know how at 3 o'clock yesterday there was the Supplementary Demand for Railways and later in the day the General Budget came in. I wish to submit, Mr. Deputy Speaker that I have not been accustomed to this kind of procedure with regard to Bills of this nature. I ask the old Members of the Legislature to recall a single precedent for this.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: There is none.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Sir, the question is, is there any real necessity for codification. I see absolutely none, because, as my learned friend Shrimati Durgabai said, the Hindu law is well settled and it has held the field for about hundred years. The ancient Hindu law, when the Britishers came here, was interpreted with the help of Indian Pandits. They used to call them Judge Pandits who ransacked all the Smritis and Dharma Shastras and interpreted the law. This process continued till they succeeded in evolving from the vast mass of Smritis and Nibhandhanas and usages a system of judicial principles constituting the Hindu Law which now hold the field.

Sir, it is well known that the Hindu Law has the oldest pedigree of all the known systems of jurisprudence in the world.

Dr. Mono Mohan Das (West Bengal: General): It is unjust.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Yes, the Hindu law is unjust! Hindu society is unjust! Hindus are unjust! It is not possible for anybody to reply to an interruption that the Hindu law is unjust. It took only three words to compose that interruption. I do not know if I have the capacity to reply to a sweeping charge like that made in three words 'It is unjust'. Whether a system is good or bad, it is for the society to judge; it is not for disappointed or disgruntled persons to judge. But I may say that the one surest proof of its soundness is that it has been able to stand the test of centuries. No system which is intrinsically bad, unsound or unjust can endure for a long time. Hindu law and the Hindu social system governed by it have been able to withstand the shocks and revolutions which have swept over the country during the ages past. Historic cataclysms have swept off the feet ancient civilisations of countries like Greece, Rome, Assyria, Babylonia which have all crumbled down—whereas Hindu culture or community, which cannot date its origin, still continues to function with all the vigour and vitality, and I am sure, Providence will allow it to function, till we set about to undermine its very foundations, by legislating in these reckless and light-hearted ways. If there was anything essentially weak in the foundations of Hinduism it would not have been able to survive the upheavals that overwhelmed it throughout its long and chequered history. This country has been subjected to foreign rule for over a thousand years. History will tell you how she has shown her wonderful adaptability, reflection will reveal to you that the Hindu law has had in it the germs of flexibility and adaptability which have enabled it to adjust itself at all times to the changing needs and to meet the challenges of the times.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: Hear, hear.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: There is a change now. (Interruptions).

100

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [1ST MARCH 1949]

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I am glad that I get a spate of interruptions, which gives me breathing time. Please do that singly. Mr. Deputy Speaker, I am not so big a fool as to hope that many will be convinced by what I say, but I do hope that someone of us at least, may give some little thought to what I say. I earnestly plead that Hinduism, the Hindu Law; the Hindu Culture have got immemorial traditions, age-long moorings, which it would not perhaps be wise for us to sweep away by one stroke of the pen. I make this appeal to my friends to the right and to the left. Sir, I am apprehensive this is just what the present Hindu Code Bill is going to do for us. I do not find anything Hindu about it. It can be more properly called an 'un-Hindu' or 'Anti-Hindu' Code.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal; Muslim): Muslim Code.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Whatever else it may be, it is not a Hindu Code. It does not breathe the spirit of Hinduism; it reeks of un-Hindu ideas; a spirit of supreme contempt for anything Hindu permeates the whole Bill from the beginning to end.

Shri H. V. Kamath: What is the Hindu spirit?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Sir, do you call that Hinduism? You please think over your system of marriage and inheritance which form the cornerstones of Hindu system or Hindu society; are you going to undermine it in the way in which you are going to do? That is the question that you will have to answer not only to us here but to our countrymen outside and to the posterity.

Sir, I do feel that if we codify the law in the way it is sought to be done, as a simple intellectual pastime, codification for the sake of codification, I will plead with my honourable friends that it is unwise to do that. It is not necessary. No need for it has been felt by anybody. Look at the opinions of the judges of the different High Courts and the district courts. They are the people who have to administer the Hindu law. Has the Government got a vast volume of opinion embodying the demands from the judiciary that Hindu law requires codification and that also in the way in which it is sought to be done? No. Has there been such a general demand from the people who have to guide themselves, guide their lives and conduct by the provisions of this law? Have they demanded it? Has there been that kind of demand? My honourable friend to the right says: No. It is perfectly correct.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: He supports you.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: My honourable friend says: he supports me. He supports truth. The country will be taken by surprise at what we are doing. Let us not lay the flattering unction to our souls that we are doing a wise thing. I know I cannot deceive myself in the way in which you are doing. Even if it were wise, I would not have thought it necessary to attempt that codification, because of the reasons I have given. You cannot give any uniformity to it whatsoever; and if Hinduism is anything, it is because of its fundamental unity in the midst of diversity. That constitutes the essence of Hinduism, Hindu law and Hindu culture. In a vast country like this you cannot expect a uniformly standardized sort of life ignoring the natural variety. If you did it, it is no wonder that you would come to grief. You may not realize it just now, but realization would come when the time comes. After all even after this codification, is it going to serve your end? I say: no. The honourable member from Mysore yesterday made a speech. He said: Now the work has been made so simple that by buying a publication worth four annas or six annas you could know exactly what the Hindu law stood for. So many friends shout 'quite right', 'quite right', but do these enthusiasts realize that even the sponsor of the Bill does not pretend that he is going to codify the whole law of the Hindus? In the preamble he makes a modest claim, not that kind of preposterous claim; he says:

"Whereas it is expedient to amend and codify certain branches of the Hindu law now in force in the Provinces of India."

Therefore what is proposed to be done is to codify certain branches, such as the law of marriage, law of inheritance and law of adoption. Broadly speaking these are the main things.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: What is left?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: My honourable friend asks what is left in the Hindu Law. Does my honourable friend think that this is all that the Hindu Law stands for? These three branches cover the entire field of Hindu life and activity in this country? I can only sympathise with his ignorance. What about joint family property, partition, joint family business, religious and charitable trusts, gifts, transfer inter vivos, and other things? They constitute a much vaster field which is left uncovered.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Wills is also referred to.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: A mere reference to Wills does not mean that it has received a full and comprehensive treatment. In any case, I am grateful to Dr. Ambedkar. He is modest; he never claims to have brought forward an exhaustive Code. If my honourable friends on my right think this is all the Hindu Code, they are out Ambedkaring Ambedkar. Sir, even if this Hindu Code is adopted in the form in which it has been brought before us, it will fail of its purpose for another reason also. My honourable sister Durgabai and my honourable friend from Mysore said yesterday, well, why do you worry about this: this will not lead to fragmentation of agricultural property. I do not know whether they realised that they were furnishing one of the strongest arguments for rejecting this Bill. Unconsciously, my sister and brother have furnished one of the strongest arguments for the rejection of the Bill outright. You are going to regulate the disposition of property. It is now generally accepted that 90 per cent. of the immovable property in this country is in the villages, in the provinces, leaving aside the Centrally administered areas. Therefore, they would be out of the purview of this Code. To house or other immovable property inside the Centrally administered areas, directly under the Government of India, this Code will apply. Then, how is this claim satisfied that this Code applies to all the Hindus in all provinces? This is a very strong argument for throwing out the Bill; throwing out on the ground that it fails in its objective. Besides the three categories I have mentioned, there are so many things which have yet to be covered. The argument would be that provincial agricultural land is purely a provincial subject according to the Constitution Act; so also are religious and charitable trust properties, so also joint family property, and partition, self acquisitions, etc. When this vast field would lie uncovered, I ask the House seriously whether they are really satisfied with the claim of those who think that this is going to be an exhaustive Code or an all embracing Code and that it provides the panacea for all the social and economic ills to which Hindu flesh is heir to. Do they really believe that the 139 sections will be the vitamin tablets which will go to vitalise the whole Hindu society? You may hold that view; the House may hold that view; I do not hold that view. On the other hand, I think this is premature, absolutely premature. Even if the Hindu Code be passed into law, it could not come into force until all the provincial Governments pass similar legislation in their own provinces for devolution of agricultural land. Every single province will have to do it before this Act could come into force in all the provinces. I am not now talking of the States; I am talking of the provinces. Besides, it is not inconceivable that the provinces may be taking different decisions. It is not for the Central Government to force the Provincial Governments to legislate on a particular line of succession, a particular line of devolution of agricultural property according to its dictates. Then provincial autonomy will fail to the ground and I am certain that the provincial Ministries will not touch such a proposal from the Centre even with a pair of tongs if such direction went counter to their own views.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I state for the information of the House that there are as many as 37 members—I have received chits, letters, and so on from them—who are all anxious—most of them, if not all—to put forward their view points on this Bill. I would therefore suggest, however interesting the speech of the honourable member might be, that the points that have been raised on one side in support of the Bill may kindly be answered by others. Thus, all the points would be threshed out and this will contribute to the richness of the debate as well. Dr. Ambedkar has given a clear analysis of the Code with arguments. Of course, the House would like to know how those points are wrong and how they are met on the other side. Therefore, greater attention may be paid to that and also regard may be had to the number of speakers that are in the waiting list.

Shri H. V. Kamath: May I request you, Sir, to consider, in view of the vital importance of this Bill, that two or three days time is hardly adequate and that at least a week or two should be allotted for general discussion?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: With great respect to the views which were expressed by you, Sir, if I have given the impression that I was filibustering, I am sorry. I may tell you, Sir, that this Bill is of such great importance that it would be utterly unfair to the House if you ask us to conclude this general discussion thus. Because, in the first stage, we had not the slightest opportunity to make a speech; this is the stage after getting us committed to the principle of the Bill, in which we have to see how best we can serve our country, even within the limited sphere. If there are 36 speakers, there is the clearest possible indication that the Bill has now attracted serious attention and they want to give their viewpoints. Therefore, there is no particular sanctity to the period that is laid down for debates of this kind.

If we do not conclude the discussion today, certainly more days must be found for further discussion of this. This honourable the Law Minister is very zealous about it; he can give another additional session for this; if not, even in this session four or five additional days could be found. The matter must be thoroughly debated. I hope the House will not accept closure; nor do I think that a closure will be moved by the Chief Whip, and a motion of this kind cannot be close by whipping without ascertaining that there has been a full and sufficient debate.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Another point. May I request you, Sir, that the provincial MLAs who are not present here may also be invited to come and participate in the discussion?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will now adjourn....

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I have not yet finished, Sir. I take it I may resume after Lunch.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes. We will now adjourn for Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembl y re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Shri S. V. Krishnamoorthy Rao (one of the Panel of Chairmen) in the Chair.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Before the House adjourned for the recess, I was trying to explain to it how this Code was bound to fail of its purpose in some of the material particulars. I explained that there was no necessity for codification as the Hindu law in all its aspects was not only well-established but well understood by the people who were governed by it. I also explained that those who are to administer this Act—I mean the Judges, the judiciary of the land, including the highest—have never demanded that the law should be codified, and I also explained that the scope of the Bill was very very limited, and that besides providing for marriage, adoption and inheritance there was a vaster field which was left uncovered. While referring to the agricultural land, I may also point out to the House that according to the series of judicial decisions in this country, the question of land involves and embraces, a vast variety of interests and subjects, from the landlord of the topmost grade down to the tiller of the soil, the man behind the plough; and if the Provincial Governments of the different countries were to regulate the distribution of their property in different ways other than that indicated by the Central Act there was bound to be confusion worse confounded.

Then, Sir, I would like to mention that the Code has not only tried digesting the existing Hindu law within its limited sphere, but in that process of collating and digesting, a number of things have been introduced; a number of subjects, particularly in the matter of marriage and inheritance, which go diametrically against the established notions of the Hindus. Therefore, it is not merely a case of digesting, collating; not also merely a question of amending—because amending is a very mild expression: it does a good deal more than that. It introduces innovations, far-reaching changes, not only in the law of marriage but also in the law of inheritance. Sir, I wish I could explain to the House the full implications of the changes involved. But I am physically unequal to the task. I will try rapidly to explain how I look at these changes.

The two categories of changes which in my opinion and also in the opinion of the vast majority of my countrymen are very radical and sweeping, are those that relate to marriage and inheritance. Sir, my honourable friend has no doubt provided for sacramental marriage in his Code. I do not know if in this country, up to the moment the Bill was drafted and given the shape it has now had, people really demanded of the Government of the land to prescribe a procedure by which marriages in this country are to be contracted. I think it is nobody's case that prior to the introduction of this Bill, people had not been marrying or there was a good deal of difficulty in getting ourselves married. But how the question of marriage would be improved I do not know. My fundamental objection to these marriages is, that while on the one hand it characterises one form of marriage as sacramental marriage, inside this sacramental cover there has been introduced a number of things which cannot conceivably be called sacramental or sacred ceremonial marriage. Look at the prohibited degrees: Look at the character of the parties. It can easily be an inter-caste marriage, a marriage outside caste, marriage of sagotras, and at the same time it would be sacramental marriage. It is rather curious, Sir, that while a sacramental form of marriage is being prescribed, along side with it there is a civil marriage. I do not know how it finds a place in the Hindu code itself. However, they provided an entirely different thing but a most objectionable thing is that while in the sacramental form of marriage one particular class of prohibited degrees is put in, in the civil marriage an entirely different category is put; the ambit of the prohibited degrees is narrowed down, so much so that the marriage in many cases becomes purely incestuous marriages. I do not understand, Sir, what necessity was there for this unless we by this measure, want to give direct encouragement to all manner of moral looseness and lawlessness, which unfortunately is invading the youth of this country. Are we here going to give this the imprimatur of our sanction? That is the question I would ask my honourable friend very seriously to consider and answer, not in a spirit of banter or levity but with all the seriousness that a difficult social problem demands.

I feel that the basic conception of Hindu marriage has suffered the rudest possible shock by introduction into it of the matter of divorce which is so repugnant to Hindu notions of marriage. Hindu marriage, as ought to be known to every one who professes himself to be a Hindu, who honestly takes pride in calling himself a Hindu, as I myself do, is a sacrament and not a civil contract and as such it will not be difficult for him to admit that divorce is absolutely foreign to its concept. Union by marriage, according to the Hindu Shastras is sacred and absolutely indissoluble (Interruptions). If you want me to cut short my speech you will kindly interrupt me only on important matters. I am not afraid of interruptions—I know how to answer them, I can answer them in my own way. But if you keep on interrupting me, my speech will be unduly long and you also may not feel happy over the replies I will give.

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: It ought to be so:

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: The institution of divorce in this country, or in any country for the matter of that, has not been found to promote the well-being of the community for whose benefit it exists. As an humble student of sociology, I have had occasions to read reports of matrimonial courts. An honourable Member referred to Judge Lindsay and I believe he also had in view the "Revolt of the Youth". I do not know whether my honourable friend realised that he unconsciously provided one of the stronger arguments for opposing this form of marriage when he referred to that great Judge. I want honourable members carefully to consider if within the family circle we should permit matrimonial alliances to spring up between a person and his mother's brother's daughter or his father's sister's daughter, as has been provided in this Hindu Code.

Shri H. V. Kamath: It is common.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: It may be common in South India, but South India is not the whole of India. My whole point is that if there is a particular form of practice in a particular part of the country, you should not go out of your way to see that it is provided for the whole country.

I come from a province which is not in the South. It is a backward province, educationally, culturally—call whatever you like that benighted backward province of Bengal. I know of the domestic conditions of the families inhabiting there. Go to any Hindu household in Bengal, you will find that besides the sons, daughters and other natural heirs, all manner of relations, sisters, sons, nephews, nieces, maternal uncles' sons, uncles' daughters all knit together and maintained in the joint family system. They are all regulated and restrained by moral and religious influences. You will find it in almost every household.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar (Minister of Law): What is the difficulty?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I shall tell you where the difficulty is. There is no difficulty for those who have no family of their own. The difficulty happens in this way. For dividing trouble here I shall illustrate with reference to myself. If in my family my sons, daughters, father's sisters' daughters and sons, mother's daughter's sons and daughters etc. sister's daughters were to live together, and if one of my sons contracts intimacy with his first cousin even when he is a minor or an adolescent, knowing human nature being what it is, do you eliminate the possibility of this attachment growing up and culminating in marriage? If you do, you are poor students of history, poor students of sociology and poor students of psychology. After all, the call of human flesh is there and no legislation, however omnipotent can root out this natural and powerful impulse in mankind. If you sanction matrimonial unions between blood relations,—between closest relations in the household, I shudder to think what would happen to society?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Nothing.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Nothing of course, if you do not care for society; nothing, of course, if you believe in a kind of society only where there are only social butterflies sucking honey here and there and making merry; but I am for a society which has attained or will attain for India the position which is her own, the position for which she is respected all the world over. If you throw away all these things, if you put up a sort of Vademecum, a Hindu Code, where you find all sorts of marriages, between first cousins and blood-relations sanctioned, if you legalise all these incestuous marriages the society will be a sink of moral degradation.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: We protest against the use of the word 'incestuous'. It is very wrong to condemn outright a system which is prevailing in large parts of the country. It is a reflection on a whole province.

Mr. Chairman: Order, order.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Therefore, I cannot but raise my voice of protest against such a system, because I believe that marriage between first cousins is not conducive to the well being of society from the biological and eugenic points of view and is opposed to the notions of Hindu Law.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: No, no,

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Thus, not only from the point of view of society, but also for the peace and purity of family life, I want that this should be condemned. It is immoral and outrageous.

Sir, my honourable sister, Durgabai, said quite rightly, that monogamy should not be opposed. I do not know of any honourable Member in this House who really does not want monogamy. Monogamy everyone of us want, not for our mere likes; circumstances have forced us to accept this monogamous marriage. It is a fact. Polygamy has passed away completely from the upper classes of this country not by legislation. That is my main contention. If you want to eradicate a social evil you should work up from within not from above. If my honourable friends look to the history of this country, they will find my position amply proved. We all know the miseries and sufferings of Hindu widows. There are so many cases of child and young widows which break our hearts or at any rate it ought to break our hearts. In fact, in the past generation, the late Pandit Vidyasagar of hallowed memory was so much moved by it that he got passed the Hindu Widow Remarriage Act. But the country was not prepared for it and what was the result? The Act virtually became a dead letter and has remained so till now. That is bound to be the fate of all social legislation which have not originated from a demand from within the society.

[Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra.]

I was telling the House that polygamy has virtually disappeared from the country for a variety of reasons such as a growing sense of responsibility in conjugal life, growing consciousness among womanhood and above all the interplay of all manner of forces, most important of which is economic, which makes it impossible to indulge in the luxury of having many wives at the same time. Therefore I say there is no necessity for any legislation for it. It has automatically died out: the custom has fallen into disuse. It may be argued that there are some strata of society where it prevails. There also I want to sound a note of warning. You cannot stop it by force or compulsion. You have got to create public opinion and when these unfortunate brethren of ours come to realise the evils of this system they will discard it. If, on the other hand, without bringing up their standard, without creating a consciousness in them by education and public opinion you try to thrust your legislation down their throats, I would request you to realise the effect that it will have on them. Just as my honourable sister was telling us they will say: This is our society; it is such a castiron mould and they would not allow us to have another wife. We will go to another form of society, embrace another religion where this is permissible. Any sociologist, any man interested in social reform will have to pay heed to that as well. The fear is not altogether an unfounded one. Anyway I feel that if you codified the Hindu law, all that should have been done was to prescribe the essentials of marriage,—the requirements on the part of the contracting parties, their ages, their mental and physical capacity, prohibited degrees of relationship and things like that. Those who believe in social ceremonies and functions, may go through the form of ceremonial marriage but the essentials of marriage should not be allowed to vary between civil marriage and sacramental marriage. If there is a demand in the country for inter-caste marriages I will not stand in its way. If people want to marry outside their castes let them by all means invoke the provisions of the Civil Marriage Act of 1874. There is nothing at present to stand in the way of people who are anxious to marry outside their castes. If there are bona fide attachments among intercaste boys and girls it is not that we want to stop or prevent them. They have got the facilities open to them even under the existing law, the law to which I referred earlier. You can change that law. You can repeal or modify certain provisions so that people marrying under that Act will have their children governed not by the Indian Succession Act as at present but by the Hindu Law. I have no objection to that but I fail to understand why in a Hindu Code side by side with the sacramental marriage you are allowing civil marriage. This must be completely taken out of the Code which should have nothing to do with it. There may be a separate civil marriage law for all.

Sir, I personally feel that if you insist on having the question of divorce in it, then you will have to face the music of it everywhere in the country and unless as public men you have your ears stuffed with cotton, as most public men among us have, you will have to pay very very dearly for it. In any case as a Hindu I emphatically protest against the introduction of this heterodox concept of divorce into the scheme of Hindu marriage.

Now let us come to the question of inheritance. There has also been an innovation in this regard though I do not want to go into very great details. But there also I would like to tell my honourable sister, Shrimati Durgabai, that we are firm believers in the judgment of the Hindu law-givers of old; we are firm believers in the equality of the sexes, though not in the sense in which she talks or her friends talk. Equality must be in the sense of equality of opportunity. You cannot make physically man and woman the same.

Equality must therefore have some other meaning. There is no feeling of inferiority attached to women, there is no discrimination with regard to the education of daughters or their marriage. Our shastras have provided:

“Kanyapyeavam Palaniya, Shikshaniyatigatnat Deya Boraya Vidusha, Dhana Ratna Samanvita.”

It means that the daughter also should be educated in the same way as boys, and, in the fullness of time, given over in marriage to a proper groom with dowry including rich jewellery. And in my society, in the Hindu society it is enjoined:

“Yatra Naryastu Puhyante, Ramante Tatra Devata.”

It means that Gods bless the households where women are honoured.

Women folk has been accorded such a high and exalted place in Hindu society. I do not deny that there may be hard cases: there are hard cases, where women are not treated in the way they ought to be. But if you have fallen off the ideal of your sages, your saints, your law-givers or your leaders they are not to blame for they have not let you down. The blame attaches to us. If you cannot approximate to the ideals of Mahatma Gandhi in your conduct but preach them in season and out of season or take his name in everything but not follow in his footsteps, the fault is not Mahatmaji's; the fault is ours. Similarly you cannot impugn your Hindu Shastras or law-givers. They have set the standards quite high and it is for you to act up to them. Notwithstanding our best efforts it is not possible to eliminate every case of injustice or hardship. Human institutions are imperfect. No human ingenuity can devise any procedure, any machinery or any agency by which all possibilities of social injustice can be completely eliminated. Let us be frank about that and let us try to realise that.

My honourable friend said in connection with the management of property that she knows of women who are better managers of property.....

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil (Minister of Works, Mines and Power): Of men also!

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Exactly, of men also. I do not think there is any single married man in this House who will dispute that proposition. In the household she is the ruler; she is all in all. The tallest of us. The Law Minister or his honourable colleague will have to crouch before her; however much he may thunder here. There you are ruled not by the rod, but by a strange sort of a whip, a soft, sweet silken cord made up of filaments of love which takes off all harshness and roughness, and menfolk have cheerfully submitted to her rule. She is the queen of the household. Many married people, I think most married people, would frankly admit that.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: That is how we have cheated them.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: We are now going to cheat them by this Code. Do you think the greatest justice will be done to them if you simply give them right to property. Mr. Chairman, according to the Hindu notions, a girl has a distinct position, a role entirely different from that of a son. Any honourable member who has read Sanskrit literature or has any knowledge of it—I cannot make any presumption either way, whether most people know it or no one knows it.....

An Honourable Member: The Law Member knows it.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: He may know it, he is a scholar. Well, in Sakuntala of our immortal poet, after the marriage of Sakuntala and her departure to her husband's place, there occurs a Sloka which is classical and which gives you in a nutshell how the Hindu law-givers and the Hindu society look upon their girlhood. Immediately after Sakuntala left the hermitage for her husband's place, sage Kanwa said, "Today I feel relieved":

"Artho Hi Kanya Parakiya Eva Tam Adya Sampreshya Pratigrahita. Jati mamayang Bishadah Prakamam. Pratyarpit Nyasa Ivantaratma."

This my heart, my inner self today has been relieved of a heavy burden and I get that inner pleasure of relief." What was that burden? A daughter in the family is like a trust deposit of somebody else's money and just as one feels relieved as soon as that trust or deposit is made over to his rightful owner. So do I feel today having made over Sakuntala to her husband (Interruption). Not in these days of law of limitation but I am talking of those days. "Nyasa", means a deposit, trust. If my honourable friend Dr. Kamath wants further interpretation, I am perfectly willing to give that outside the Chamber.

Shri H. V. Kamath: But I am not a doctor?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: More than a doctor; you are doctor, philosopher, lawyer, and legislator. I have great respect for you; you are a nice chap and above all a great patriot.

Sir, that is the conception of girls. So, if the Hindu law-givers did not give them a right of ownership equal to that of the son in the family, it was not because of any aversion, not because of any dislike but because of the simple reason that the girl is made for her husband's family; she is not to become a part and parcel of the family where she is born. That is the whole thing. And therefore no question of injustice or inequality arises. I do not know of any school of Hindu law prevalent in any part of the country where a daughter has been given a distinct share equal to that of the son in the property of her father.

Shri A. Karunakara Menon (Madras: General): It exists in Malabar.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I am glad that in the South they have got so many things.

Sreematty Annie Mascarene (Travancore State): In Travancore too, sons and daughters share equally.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I am grateful for this information but all such information emerges from the South; and if my friends from the South ...

Shrimati Hansa Mehta: (Bombay: General): Are they not Hindus in the South?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Yes but if they are proud of all that in the South, let them not deny us our legitimate right to feel proud of our manners and customs in the North and North-East. That is my humble submission to them. I do not like this type of argument. Because some order of succession, some order of inheritance prevalent in Bombay or some other part has been found suitable there, therefore it must be bodily transplanted into Bengal and elsewhere regardless of all considerations whether it is a plant which can grow and thrive in that particular soil. If a particular institution has been found to work very satisfactorily in the South, it must be allowed to work there; But if it is not found suitable for the soil of the North or the soil of the East or the soil of the West, I do not see any reason or justification for forcibly transplanting it there.

In fact my one very serious objection to the Hindu Code is this: for this craze for theoretical uniformity you ignore completely variety; you have got these things in this part and those things in that part; that itself shows that in this vast country of ours, peculiar social manners and customs have developed according to the needs of particular places or areas. They must be left undisturbed. In clause 7, however, the Bill provides an overriding power by which all usages, immemorial customs which have the sanction of law should be scrapped. I think it is clause 7.

An Honourable Member: It is clause 4.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I will take it on my friend's authority. Sir, this in my opinion, is highly objectionable. Clear Proof of usage outweighs the written text of Law. This is a well established dictum.

There are diversities of customs and manners because of the diverse needs of the people that compose this vast continent. And therefore:

*Veda vibhinna Smritayah vibhinna,
Nasau munir Yasya matam Na Bhinnam.
Dharmasya Tattvam Nihitam Gulhayam.
Mahjano yena Gatah Sa Pantha*

An Honourable Member: Let us all be mahajans.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Mahajan does not mean a moneylender.

That is the most unkindest cut of all. That indicates the depth to which society has fallen. We cannot think except in terms of rupee or dollar or shilling or pence. Mahajan has been variously interpreted: as great men; or majority of men. Take it in whatever sense you like:

Veda khila Sadachar Swashya cha Priyamatmana, Yasmin Deshe Yadachara.....

I do not want to weary this House with a lot of other quotations but this is such a subject that I cannot altogether avoid it if I am to convince honourable Members of the justice of my Contention based on Hindu shastras. I have to make myself clear before the House. It may reject what I say; it does not matter; but I represent a constituency—not a purely territorial one—but the constituency of a vast body of men and women who believe in Hinduism and Hindu Society governed by the injunctions of Hindu sages of old. Sir, I represent for the time being the views of that constituency. It is true that I have been returned to this Constituent Assembly by indirect election—with four or five votes only, but I may assure the House that I have fought some of the most contested elections in the country from some of the most important constituencies. Immediately before coming to this Constituent Assembly I was representing the city of Calcutta in the Central Legislature. Before that, I was representing the Presidency Division composed of several districts with lakhs and lakhs of people, and the Presidency Division is admitted to be one of the most cultured divisions in India. I know the people. I know their pulse. My native town is a famous seat of ancient classical learning. It is my district Nadia, in Bengal, that gave the new schools of smritis, Tantras, Naya, Baishnava Philosophy etc. I am not digressing but I shall be failing in my duty to the inheritors of this great culture if I did not try to place before the House their views and ideas with regard to these matters of the Hindu Code. I owe it to myself and to my community to give my views so that judgement may not go against us by default. Anyway, Let me hurry on.

I have shown you the place, the honour, which our Shastras have given to our women. The famous queen Indumati was dead and King Ajah was bemoaning her death thus:

Grihim Sachiva Mittah Sakhi Priya Shishya Lalita Kalavidhan, Karuna Bimalkhena Mrityuna Harata vade King Na Ma Hritam

"Oh ruthless God of Death! What have you not taken away from me? What mischief have you not done to me? By one blow, you have taken away one, who was my Grihini—you know what Grihini means, the queen of the house—who was my Sachiva—Sachiva means Minister. She was my minister. Not only was she the queen of my family but my minister, my bosom friend in privacy and my devoted playmate in love.”

That, Sir, is the position which our womenfolk used to occupy in our society. Therefore, it cannot be said that out of sheer greed, grouse, animosity or jealousy or whatever you call it, the womenfolk has been relegated to a position of inferiority. If she has not been given a district status in respect of inheritance co-equal with the son, it is because she is meant for some other family than her father's and that the property is to be settled with the persons who will keep up the family, who will maintain the lineage and preserve the sanctity of the family traditions, manners and customs and who will continue the practices and the ceremonies of the family. As soon as a girl is married she becomes integrated into another family; and according to the Hindu conception the status of a wife in the husband's family is a most respectable status—far more respectable than the status of the girl in her own father's house. I will again quote Kalidas' Shakuntala. When Queen Shakuntala could not be recognised by King Dushyanta, who said: “I do not remember to have married you.” Thereupon Shakuntala was exhorted by the Rishi to remain in her husband's House even as a maid as that was a more honourable position than to be in her father's place.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: That is how men behave!

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): He was suffering from loss of memory.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: No, he was not suffering from loss of memory. It was because King Dushyanta was under a curse by which he was to forget everything connected with his marriage; not that he was guilty of a deliberate moral lapse. Amazing ignorance!

Shri B. N. Munavalli (Bombay States): What an excuse!

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I am not the author of Shakuntala. Call it an excuse or whatever you like, I do not mind. But I quoted Shakuntala because its author Kalidas is a world Poet commanding respect all over the world; and notwithstanding all your disparagement of Shakuntala, it will remain the ideal literary master-piece of the world for all time. There ought to be some limit to which disparagement of our national institutions, culture and traditions can be tolerated. Mr. Chairman, I am reminded of a very famous passage in Plato—I cannot recall his words exactly now—but he said, in effect: “Anybody who is false to his nation's traditions, to his glorious heritage and culture is a traitor and is a person who should be given capital punishment”. I do not understand the patriotism of those, the nationalism of those, who have nothing but contempt and jeer for anything that is their ancient culture and heritage.

Shri H. V. Kamath: You have misunderstood. Nobody is against our ancient culture.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: We might differ on many matters in connection with this Code, but nobody's purpose will be served—neither mine, nor yours—by trying to belittle our great ancient sages. They are not coming here for your applause. They do not care for your radio propaganda and newspaper flashes. They did what they considered to be in the best interests of the Community. If today you are going to make a daughter co-equal with the son in regard to inheritance, I am afraid a good deal of complications would arise. When the girl knows that she is getting a share in her father's property, when her brothers know that their sister is a cosharer and as such the property will pass off to some other family with her marriage, whose interest would it be to marry off the girl? I want to know.

Shri H. V. Kamath: Her own.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: My honourable friend says it will be the girl's own interest to marry as quickly as possible. I feel, Sir, that such a girl will find many a pitfall lying about her way.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: You distrust her?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Not a question of distrust. The Hindu sages have provided that marriages should be negotiated in the best interests of the pair by the guardians of the pair.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: What did Shakuntala do?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I know that Shakuntala did not marry that way, but my friend and sister's interruption reminds me of a story. A man had the Mahabharatha and the Ramayana recited in his house for six months. Thereafter, he asked his daughter: “You have heard the story. What is the lesson you derive?” “Well,” replied the daughter, “from the Mahabharatha I learn that I can have five husbands as Draupadi had five husbands.” Enquired from the whole of the Mahabharatha this is all that she learnt. The daughter in law replied, about the lesson she derived from the Ramayana, the daughter in law replied, “It is very clear. As soon as my husband dies, I can be married to my husband's brother.” “You know what happened after Ravana died, his widow Manbandari married his brother Bibhisana.” Sir, according to Hindu law there have been several systems of marriage. There was the Gandharva form of marriage for which we have not provided here, though we have the provisions in the Code for Civil Marriage to cover all manner of such cases. So, I say that in an ordinary Hindu house-hold, under this codified Hindu Law, you are going to bring about a change in the relationship between the various members. Is this going to make for the sweetness of relationship or peace in home life?

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: By no means.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: There is not going to be that sweet relationship between brothers and sisters and sisters' husbands that now exists, because after a girl is married, she will have her husband or her son or somebody else in her father-in-law's house to control the property of her father's family and there is bound to be bitterness, bad blood and jealously litigation and all the rest of it. Ultimately the family will break up. Are we going to enact a Code which will facilitate the breaking up of our households? Will the summum bonum of Social life be reached when every single family is broken up and domestic peace driven away? It is for you to consider whether this should be done. I feel that these things are bound to happen.

Sir, a girl may be educated. But after her marriage when she goes to her father-in-law's house she is being guided and dictated in all matters either by her husband or by some relation of his and it will not be in her interest to endow her with a share in her father's property by legislation here. You will say you will pass another legislation to prevent her from being dictated in respect of the property she has got from her father. If you are going to endlessly legislate in that way, in order that you may have the intellectual satisfaction of having a Hindu Code, I would leave you alone. I therefore think that this is a revolutionary change and this should not be introduced. This does not mean that I am against making provision for girls. By all means make provision for them. Make any provision for unmarried girls. Make her marriage and her education the first charge on her father's property. Make it absolute charge on that property so that on her marriage when she will be absorbed in the family of her husband she will be divested of her interest in her father's property. But that is not what you are doing. You talk of equality of sex justice and fairness but are allowing the girl the right to inherit not only her father's property equally with the son, but also to share her husband's property or father-in-law's property. This is equality with a vengeance. The girl should not get property from both sides. This will also lead to further fragmentation of property.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: The boy will get a share of his mother's property?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: A daughter whether married, unmarried or widowed will get her mother's property. Let my honourable friend read the Hindu Law. Even as it is under the Hindu Law, all categories of daughters are entitled to Striedhana property.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: No, no, no, no.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I say, yes, yes, yes, yes. Thus the daughter is provided according to the present Hindu law. I cannot go on correcting the misapprehensions of others. The Hindu law is there. The members of the legal profession know it. I need not labour the point, I believe, that there is sure to be more fragmentation. This will inevitably lead to increased testamentary disposition and consequent litigation and ultimate ruination.

An Honourable Member: Already there is fragmentation.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Yes, but two wrongs do not make one right. Because there is fragmentation already, is no argument for making provision for further fragmentation in the shape of more shares to property.

Sir, in this field of inheritance, another innovation has been introduced and I think that is the most devastating of all changes.

Shri B. Das: That is not the principle of the Bill. You can drop it.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: What is the principle of the Bill?

Shri B. Das: I am referring to partition and that is not the main principle.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: The system of inheritance is the backbone of the Bill. Under this Bill you are going to scrap the Mitakshara law. Make no mistake about it. The right to property by birth and survivorship, which is the basic foundation of Mitakshara law, is going to be swept away. This Mitakshara system of law has been governing the country for hundreds of years till there was evolved in Bengal the Dayabhaga law founded on the principle of natural justice and affection. Many of my friends who are supporters of the Bill have told me that I should be the last person to oppose it inasmuch as it introduces the principle of inheritance enunciated in the Dayabhaga law of my province. My reply to them was that that was no satisfaction to me. I do not want, even if the well-meaning Social Reformers in India wants that that system should be adopted. Even if a superman or dictator comes and tells me: Look here, the law of inheritance in Bengal should be made applicable to all India, I would be the first man to raise my voice of protest against it. The old system has stood the test of time. The change might suit my province, but not all India. I do not want that this Mitakshara law of inheritance should be scrapped in favour of one which is neither the Mitakshara law of inheritance nor the Dayabhaga law. It is a hybrid mixture of both which is conducive to the welfare of none, tending to bring about the disintegration and downfall of Hindu society as it will completely unsettle a well settled order of things.

I think I have exhausted the patience of the House and must bring my speech to a close. (Honourable Members: 'No, no') I have dealt with inheritance. I have dealt with marriage. I feel that these two branches of Hindu law which are sought to be drastically amended should get fuller consideration. But it will be a tragedy for India, for the Hindu society, if in the name of reform you uproot the Hindus from their safe and ancient moorings which have protected them from the stress and storm of centuries. Let me again repeat that our Shastras, besides making elaborate provisions for all matters of social life, left a wide field to well-established local customs and usages. They have been very salutary in their effect, as stabilizing forces in society. If we ignore them and make a fetish of codification we will cast Hindu Law into a mould absolutely inflexible, rigid and cast iron; we will be importing into it unnecessarily a character which never belong to it. We will be transforming it into some thing, which will never be able to adjust itself to the needs of times, as it has been in the past.

Sir, before I conclude, I will touch on the argument which has been advanced here also, but which has been very lightly brushed aside by those who do not like it. It has been argued—and I believe perfectly rightly—that this Legislature is not competent to deal with it.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Legally incompetent?

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Yes. I feel that it is not competent. In any case, if you take shelter behind legal formation, I will tell you, morally you have absolutely no justification for passing this Code. I know this objection was raised not only from people like us, but by people very highly placed in the political life of this country, by people with high political stature; for instance, by a man of the eminence and standing of the Honourable Dr. Rajendra Prasad, the President of the Indian Constituent Assembly, the sovereign body by which in season and out of season, we are all swearing. I want to know whether or not his views deserve our best consideration. Personally, I have very great respect for him. He is not only the uncrowned monarch of Bihar, but he is one of the undisputed leaders of India. Dr. Rajendra Prasad has given the clearest possible indication. He knows not only the people of Bihar but Bengal as well and also other provinces. He set up his practice in Calcutta and up to the middle of his life he lived in Calcutta. It is not for nothing that he gave the warning that the Constituent Assembly, constituted as it is to-day, ought not to discuss a legislative measure of this nature. I can speak for myself. I cannot speak for others. I honestly feel that I have absolutely no right, legal or moral to be a party to any measure, any legislation, which is not absolutely necessary for the day to day administration. I was returned to the Constituent Assembly with four votes only. I can honestly declare here and now that when I sought all those four votes from the Members of the West Bengal Legislative Assembly, I never promised them that I would give them the right of divorce. Neither did they ask for it. I declare that I never promised them that I was going to scrap up the law of inheritance. I never told them that I was going to the Constituent Assembly to create a fresh Portfolio and a Ministry of Marriage, because I feel that such an institution will be necessary here in the Central Government, if this Bill goes through. Look at the formalities that have been provided here. So personally, speaking, I feel that I have no right to give my assent or dissent to this. I can only tell the House that I am not competent, because I had no specific mandate from my Constituency to do it. When I came in through the General Elections there were clear issues before the Country such as the attainment of the freedom of the country and all the rest of it; and the last time we came here, we were enjoined only to draw the Constitution of India. Therefore, it might gratify our vanity that we as members of the sovereign legislature of the land are competent to enact such a legislation but the claim is shorn of all moral content whatever. Nothing would have been lost if we had deferred the consideration of this Bill to some future date after the next General Elections. I emphatically maintain, Mr. Chairman, that the time chosen for its passage through this House has been most inopportune. After the attainment of independence, problems after problems have been confronting the National Government. Have we been able to solve them? we have not. Are we in the country very popular? By we I mean 'all' including that side. No. Frankly, because we raised expectations which we have not been able to fulfil. That may be due to a variety of causes over which we have had no control; that may be due to an interplay of forces, which took us unawares, absolutely unprepared. But throughout the country you find simmering discontent. As a matter of fact, I do not feel inclined to disclose my identity as a member of the Legislature, of the Constituent Assembly, when I travel in a railway compartment, because the moment they come to know that, they start vigorously criticising us.

Shri B. L. Sondh: (East Punjab: General): Then go by air.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I have started going by air. Quite true. There also I fare no better. I am not joking. I really feel that the country has become sick of us, disappointed of us because of our failure to do anything real for the common man. Hitherto there had been the Kashmir question. There is the question of commodity prices. Yesterday we had a brilliant performance with the unfortunate—enhancement of post-card rate and the price of cloth.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable Member may confine himself to the Bill.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: I am only saying that the rise in prices of commodities, labour strikes, the Communist menace, refugee problem etc. have been too much for the Government. Is this the time for us to go on with this luxury of Social reform legislation, and a very highly controversial legislation at that? It is sure to give rise to the bitterest acrimony; and as a matter of fact, it has already brought about a lot of acrimonious controversy. I believe honourable members have been already flooded with literature (Interruption). Of course, from the Anti-Hindu Committee, and similar societies and associations from Calcutta and elsewhere. I have got protests from the Women's Association in Poona. I have got protests from Women's Association in Bengal, the members of which come from the highest aristocracy in the land. I have not known of any Bar Association in Bengal which has not protested against this. I have not known any Bar Associations which have supported this Bill. I have in my possession perhaps the whole literature that has been circulated so far in connection with this Bill. I have classified it and the dead weight of opinion is against it, qualitatively and quantitatively. I again say that the time is not opportune. At a time when, according to our Prime Minister's appeal we should close our ranks, put our heads together, devote all our time and energy and work in amity and concert so that we may solve the problems of the land, we should not give another cause for disruption, another cause for discord or grouse or discontent in the country. I do feel nothing is to be lost if we shelve this Bill for the time being. If that is not done, then, of course, I promise that I will have to oppose this Bill at every stage. I oppose this Bill, because I feel that it is a wholly unwarranted measure and that there has been no demand in the country for a legislation of this kind. I oppose it because I feel that in all social legislations we must go slow and that we cannot bring about large scale social reform by legislation alone. The reforms will have to come from within, by force of public opinion which has to be created inside the society. Thirdly, I oppose because of the most irregular manner in which this Bill is sought to be passed in this House. I oppose because I feel that I am not morally competent to discuss this Bill and pass it in the Legislature as it is constituted at present. I oppose this Bill because I feel that it has brought in radical changes in the concept of marriage, in the scheme of Hindu Law including the law of inheritance and succession. I oppose it because I feel that it will create end-ness and needless complications including such things as Civil Marriage Register, Sacramental Marriage Register, Marriage Notice Book, Director General of Marriages, Registrar Generals of Marriages, Ministry of Marriages, and so on and so forth. I oppose it on the further ground that it would give rise to bitterness, disunion and discord in our families leading to the disintegration of society. I oppose it on the further ground that it is undemocratic inasmuch as a vast body of opinion in the country is against it. In view of all these, I feel I am morally called upon to oppose this Bill with all the force at my command.

With these few words, yes, these are few words in view of the enormity of the legislation, in view of the gravity of the issues involved; these are few words in view of the opposition it has roused and the repercussions it will have on the society. Anybody who really wants society to be protected against this menace coming from the legislature cannot but be articulate and discursive; he has to devote time to the full and dispassionate consideration of things; he must give his humble bit of advice of caution to the legislators so that they may not drive us along the wrong path and that the society may not slip down the declivity into ruin.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: I have been somewhat provoked to participate in the discussion on a Bill which undoubtedly is revolutionary. I have heard with the greatest respect the speech of my honourable friend with whom I had the honour to work in this House for more than ten years. If there is anything which distinguishes him most, it is his earnestness which is only equalled by his great eloquence. I entirely agree with him that in matters of social reform one must go slow. On that point, I have not the slightest doubt. But this Bill has proceeded so slow that some of us have rightly complained that it has not been passed much earlier. As far as I know, this Bill or at least the main provisions of this Bill have been before the House or its predecessor and before the country including the members of the Bar for nearly eight years. It cannot be said by any stretch of imagination that this Bill has taken either this House or the country by surprise.

I well remember in 1945, at the time of the general elections, I was opposed by certain groups precisely because I stood for social reform, because I stood for the codification of the Hindu Law. The very fact that I was elected and I am still here is an indication that I carry the views of my constituency.

A point has been made by any honourable friend Pandit Maitra that this House is not competent to pass a legislation of this character. I think this objection I have heard so often in the course of the last fifteen years that every time when a social reform Bill was before the House, the same objection was raised. With what result, everybody knows. If this House is competent to pass the Constitution for free India, I fail to see how it is not competent to pass this legislation. As if to reinforce the argument with a personal appeal, my honourable friend Pandit Maitra referred to the views expressed by Honourable Dr. Rajendra Prasad. I have, and, in fact, every person in this House has, every respect for Honourable Dr. Rajendra Prasad. Yet, there is a duty which every member of this House owes to his conscience and to his constituency and to this great country in which he lives above everything, not merely as a legislator, but as a person who visualises the reconstruction of Hindu society and he would be failing in his duty if he were to take into consideration only the personal views of one eminent person or another eminent person. When I say this, I say it in no spirit of disrespect, but because I feel duty is higher than any respect for any individual.

The main point is, has the time not come for the codification of the Hindu Law; has the time not come for the introduction of certain reforms in the system of marriage, adoption, inheritance and all other things which go to constitute what is generally known as the Hindu Law. The sources of Hindu Law are so many. I do not want to dilate on this and I do not want to take much time of the House. But there is a clear case established that there must be some uniformity, some definiteness about the interpretation of the law. If the law is not clear, if the law is not uniform, the stability of society suffers. If we have different interpretations of a particular text by half a dozen High Courts, I think the time has come when all this must be put an end to.

Further, my honourable friend suggested that we are attempting to destroy Hindu Society. My own feeling is that here are about 290 persons who are in close contact with Hindu Society; here we can come together, ventilate our views and come to some agreement and adjustment and pass a legislation calculated to secure the further progress of Hindu Society. When Manu, Parashara and Yagnyavalkya wrote their smritis, they had not the benefit, I should say, of any legislature. They were undoubtedly great men; but I do not think that the race of great men died with them. On my left, I find a person so great in scholarship and character that it would not be wrong on my part to compare him with some of the old Rishis and law givers. If today in addition to his own deep wisdom and learning he requisitions the help and co-operation of all the 290 persons, I think his hands are strengthened and his views ought to appeal to us.

The main point, as I said was: Has the time come for certain reforms and has the time come for the codification of Hindu Law? If the time has come, it makes no difference whether one man promulgates a Code and the country accepts it, or whether it is accepted by the process of discussion in a democratic manner and the country accepts it. The main point is to judge it without passion, without prejudice and without entering into any extremist considerations. We have in this House to judge it purely on merits and not on sentimental grounds.

After all, what is it that is in this Code? Except for the question of inheritance, there is nothing to which we have not listened so often and to which we have not agreed substantially. My own view is that there are two important things on which the controversy is centred. One is marriage: the other is ending of the co-parcenary in Hindu law. So far as marriage is concerned, there is nothing revolutionary in this. In these days, when everything is pointing towards State control more and more, and when we are talking of nationalization, I think the only sphere for private enterprise is marriage.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Let that also be nationalized!

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: Now in this Bill a golden mean is struck. The entry and exit in this sphere is so regulated that a modern man coming from the west would certainly laugh at our backwardness. He would say if marriage is a matter which is calculated to secure the highest happiness for both, then one of the grounds for divorce must be incompatibility of temperament. Have you gone up to that? The grounds in the Bill are very narrow. In fact, I say that this is a very moderate measure. You do not expect a wife to carry on with a lunatic, a leper etc. and there is nothing in this Bill which runs contrary to the provisions of the Smritis or which is inconsistent with the genius of Hindu society and culture. Most of us know the Smriti.

नष्टे मृते प्रव्रजिते, कलिवेच पतिते पतो । पतिः अन्यत् तु नारीणाम् विधीयते ।

These are the grounds given in the ancient text and if something approximating to that is not available today in Hindu society, it is because we have become stagnant and all those dynamic urges for progress have ceased to operate. After all whom, and to what extent of Hindu society will this effect? Speaking for my own province, 95 per cent. have already some sort of divorce, not as a matter of law, but as a matter of custom. It is only the two or three per cent. of people of the upper classes who are opposed to it. But taking a fair view, the educated section is completely for it.

On the one hand I agree that divorce must not be made very cheap and that incompatibility of temperament should not be one of the grounds. But at the same time, marriage should not be considered a life sentence, if it virtually comes to that. After all, just as marriage has an individual aspect, it has also a social aspect. If the two spouses do not agree, then the bickering and the bitterness and the lack of harmony is not confined merely to the precincts of the family but it has wider application and effect, and society and the general atmosphere roundabout also suffer. If it is the desire of any law giver that whatever piece of legislation he wants to get through it must have the capacity of securing the results contemplated then we have to judge whether what has been all along with us has really given us the result we have asked for. It is a matter for introspection. If today we are providing some way out from wedlock in order to make people, who are really not happy to get out of it, we are only doing what I think is our social duty.

So far as marriage is concerned, I fail to see how we can object to marriages between persons belonging to different castes. In the year 1949, it would be a sad commentary on our progressive outlook if a single person should stand up here and say—well, marriages between persons belonging to different castes should not be legalised. In free India, I think there is only one caste, the caste of free men: and one religion and that religion of humanity. (Shri H. V. Kamath: 'And free women!') This reform has been before this country so long that those who feel that this means dissolution of Hindu society are enemies of progress; such a Hindu society in my opinion ought to be dissolved. What is this that a man should be called untouchable because he is born in a particular caste. I have never seen a boy born with a broom: I have never seen a boy born in a Brahmin family with a Yagopavita, nor a boy born in a Marwari family with a jarajut.

जन्मना जायते शूद्रः । संस्कारात् द्विजोच्चते विद्यया याति विप्रत्वं त्रिभिः श्रीत्योच्चतो च ।

All are born Shudras and after Sanskara a man attains higher status and when he has gone through the different stages of learning and accomplishment he becomes a Shrotriya. Here is the real spirit of Hinduism, not the spirit which is evinced by some of our old Sanatanic friends here and outside. If the object of this great country, as has been often given out to be is to make a classless society, then we must see to it that proper institutions, both social and political are evolved and enlarged. I therefore consider that whatever recommendations are made in this Code as regards marriage are not only absolutely necessary, but they do not go far enough. But as I agree with my honourable friend, Pandit Maitha, that in social matters we ought to go slow, I am willing to accept this position for the time being.

[Shri N. V. Gadgil]

The most controversial part of the whole thing is the elimination of the coparcenary from Hindu society. Something was said of public opinion. Something was said of the press and the bar. In my own province there is an association called the 'Dharma Nirnaya Mandal'. In this Mandal are to be found. महामहोपाध्याय तर्कतीर्थ विद्वाचस्पति—men of high learning and scholarship. Very recently they have passed a resolution and expressed views on the proposed Hindu Code:—

"The Dharma Nirnaya Mandal takes this opportunity, when the Hindu Code is on the anvil for consideration in the present session of the Assembly, to express its appreciation of the general liberalizing influence which is brought to bear in the frame-work of the present code. The Mandal sees this influence clearly in the removal of—

- (a) distinction regarding joint-ancestral and self-acquired property;
- (b) different treatment of sons and daughters;
- (c) technical difficulties in the interpretation of Woman's Estate; and
- (d) distinctions between Mitakshara and Dayabhaga rules of inheritance.

The Mandal believes that the above reforms will go a great deal to minimise court litigations and foster national spirit and engender a feeling of oneness by this one Hindu Code being made to apply to all Hindus in the whole of India. The Mandal notes this as the first attempt ever made in this direction within historical memory.

This is the reason, why in spite of several differences in minor details, the Mandal heartily supports the present measure as it is."

Babu Ramnarayan Singh: What people do they represent?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: They are most learned and orthodox men.

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: But enlightened orthodox.

Now, I come to the question of joint Hindu family. The House will no doubt agree with me that a progressive society ought to change with the change in time and that it should evolve appropriate institutions both of property and of laws. The time has now come to assess dispassionately the merits of the joint family system, both as an institution to secure family happiness and as an institution of property. Even today if somebody gives me convincing arguments about the benefits of the joint Hindu family I am prepared to hear him, for I am not dogmatic—I feel that truth is the real thing, not prestige for one's own views.

Now, taking the first point, has the joint family system secured happiness for the individual members of the family? I am not speaking what the daughters-in-law feel when they have to live in a big family. What I have seen and heard definitely goes to show that so far as happiness and harmony are concerned, this institution has ceased to be of any use or value. After all there is nothing new in this. If out of 32 crores of Hindus nearly 5 crores are already governed by Dayabhaga and if that system has worked well at least one cannot say that it is absolutely bad and that we must not even think of it. (An honourable Member: 'It is absolutely new.'). That it is new there is no doubt. But what is the society that we are visualising for the future? Is it of a patriarchal type? What is exactly the nature of the society you want to reconstruct? As I understand, that society is going to be one in which there will be equality of status and equality of opportunity because those are the two phrases we have incorporated in the preamble of the Draft Constitution. I think with that Preamble the joint family property system is not consistent.

The real trouble seems to me to be—after having listened to the speeches of various members—what is being given to daughters. But as an institution of property the joint family system must go, because it concentrates wealth. People will ask me, "Well, has it or has it not done something good?" I at once agree that it has done some good. But so far as property aspect is concerned, so far as social credit aspect is concerned, other alternatives have already come into existence, such as co-operative societies and the joint stock companies. Therefore, there is no need of this institution so far as the creation of social credit is concerned. As a mechanism for business other alternatives have come into existence and by experience we have found that they give better results. Therefore, we are not destroying anything without putting something in its place; we are not leaving the whole society in a sort of vacuum as it were. What has outlived its usefulness is being liquidated, so that new India will go ahead with greater speed and may attain greater progress.

Now, the real trouble as I said is about some share being given to the daughter: whether it should be half or whether it should be something less are details which can be discussed later on. But one point is certain and that is that the daughter must get some share. In free India if you are only going to say that—and then say that she should either go to a court of law or ask for maintenance, I say it is not fair.

My own feeling is that some difficulties may arise at the beginning; when new institutions come, when new thoughts generate; society does take some time to adjust itself. The question is not whether these difficulties are great or small; the relevant question is whether the new arrangement proposed is good or bad. If you are convinced that it is good, naturally there will be some difficulty in adjustment. We must not mind the difficulty at all.

It has been suggested that as soon as the marriage is over the bridegroom will start trouble, by suing or otherwise, for the share which his wife has got from her parents. It would be welcome to lawyers. Well, when we are trying to nationalise as much as possible, what little will be left will not be of great consequence, that people would go to the court for a small share of it. In times to come there will be little left both for the boy and the girl. Even if it leads to litigation, does it mean that we should not do justice? Because a good thing may be abused by a few, does it mean that it should be denied to all? It is for the House to decide. It is high time that the general talk of equality of sex must be followed by equality of ownership of property. If we do not do that we will have to face the charge of hypocrisy.

My honourable friend Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra has prophesied all sorts of trouble for the great Hindu society. Such prophets have always been there in the past and they have always proved false. I have not the slightest doubt that Hindu society has got such a flexible nature that it has absorbed various cultures and if it has lived through the ages successfully it is because those who guide the affairs of the society had in time suggested changes suitable to the times. That is the reason why it has survived till now. Here is an attempt to bring the law in line with public opinion. What the law does is that it consolidates the public opinion but public opinion being dynamic by its very nature it goes ahead every now and then. It is like a horizon which recedes the nearer one goes to it. Modern society by its very nature progresses very quickly. Therefore, we have to adjust public opinion and the law of the land. There are other means by which it can be done, like legal fiction or equity but the best and the honest way is to do it by a piece of legislation. I think here is an attempt in that direction. Although I agree that it is revolutionary it is a planned revolution and therefore it is going to be a success.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I have but a short time at my disposal, (Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: 'Why? You have your own time'.) I mean comparatively short time for the enormous subject which I have to deal with and I hope the House will give the subject that amount of thought and attention which I have given to it. (An honourable Member: 'What have you to do with it?') At the very outset I am asked what I have to do with it. I say I have every thing to do with it. Two very enormous changes have taken place in the country. One is that we have decided to shed our communal character and the other is that we have decided to impose upon ourselves the benefits of joint electorates. Can any honourable gentleman in this House deny the right of a Muslim to think in the same way as a large part of the Hindus think? After all we have to live with Hindus. In West Bengal they form 80 per cent. and we have to live with them and think with them. Come with me to West Bengal. Pandit Maitra put the case of the opposition in Bengal very mildly when he said that there is serious opposition to this Bill.....

Shrimati Renuka Ray: There is equally and more serious support.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Come with me to West Bengal. I am not speaking on behalf of the orthodox section. With regard to that aspect of this legislation I have nothing to do. I have certain serious questions to raise before the House which have not been raised up till now. The objection in Bengal is so serious that if anybody undertakes a journey to ascertain public opinion—(Interruption) I mean intelligent and advanced public opinion,—if anyone will go there, if anyone will make a journey from town to town in West Bengal he will be faced with opposition to the Bill from the most intelligent section, the most enlightened section (An honourable Member: 'Which the Honourable Member has not done'). I believe the interruption is not based upon a thorough consideration of the subject. I submit that it will be agreed that the members of the bar are not very conservative people.....

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Most of them are orthodox and conservative.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: They are not perhaps the orthodox section.....

Shrimati Renuka Ray: What about the opinion of Mr. Atul Gupta recognised as one of the most eminent lawyers and chosen by Congress for the Partition Committee?

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma: Does the lawyer line on precedents:

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: In spite of these interruptions I submit they are not the orthodox section. You go to any bar library and you will find that this Bill is opposed tooth and nail.....

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharati: Because their occupation will be gone.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I do not agree that you eliminate the profession of the bar by this Bill. You are introducing complications which you can not think of. On the other hand I submit that the lawyers in a different capacity, in a professional capacity, will thank this House for introducing this controversial measure. Four judges of the Calcutta High Court, four advanced Hindu judges of the Calcutta High Court—one of whom now adorns the Federal Court, Mr. B. K. Mookerji have said—that the law is already well settled. The law is well known. The law may be different here and there but that is due to various reasons into which I need not now go. The law is well known.

Shri A. Karunakara Menon: If the law is so settled why Law reports every week?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: It is because I feel that my honourable friend does not realise the subtleties which underlie the law. In fact precedents are necessary. You cannot cover any possible case in anticipation by legislation. So precedents are necessary. They illuminate difficulties and they are helpful in deciding cases in future. The moment mankind gives up precedents, specially in the domain of law, they will cease to be intelligent animals. That is why I submit that lawyers who are not orthodox people are opposed to this piece of legislation, not because it will deprive them of their food.....

Shrimati Renuka Ray: What happens when limited estate for women goes out in regard to litigation in Bengal?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I only hope that my honourable sister Shrimati Renuka Ray did represent the ladies of Bengal. (An Honourable Member: 'She does.') She is only one star in the whole of West Bengal. I will cite at least a dozen stars in opposition who are equally well known as Shrimati Renuka Ray. She is only one guiding star leading the case of the Hindus.....

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): The only star.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: There are hundreds of women who have gone to Noakhali and other places. There are many guiding stars in Bengal: these women social workers are all leading stars, but they all support the Hindu Code.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that my honourable sister has not the experience of litigation. He has not lived in the law. If he had lived it he would have seen the enormous possibilities.....

Honourable Members: Say 'she'

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad:.....for a good thriving business. There is no difference between he and she. According to the latest standards 'he' includes 'she'.

I submit ladies should no longer be called "she", but they should be called "he".

The lawyers are against this measure. Their family system will be seriously disturbed. They are very much averse to the Bill. (An honourable Member: 'Are they afraid about their profession?') No, they will get more cases. I assure the House on behalf of the lawyers to which profession I have the honour to belong, that for their personal interests they should all welcome it. (Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: 'You are mistaken.'). I am not mistaken, I have lived in the law much longer than my honourable friend has done. I have taken part in litigation. The divorce provisions will introduce endless litigation and will lead to endless complications and endless difficulties for many families and more misery for women than men.

Coming straight to a very important point, I have to submit before the House a very serious state of affairs in connection with this Bill. The Bill was hastily rushed through the Legislature on the 9th of April last. We were asked by our fair sisters not to oppose the Bill at that stage; it was considered to be so important that no detailed attention need be paid to it—it should be passed. So, at the last hour of the last day we agreed to allow it to be considered. I raise my feeble objection from the Hindu point of view. Am I raising any objection from the Muslim point of view? Certainly not. So, my declaration that the objection was from the Hindu point of view should not have elicited any surprise or any laughter. It is from the Hindu point of view that I am speaking. My learned sister the other day asked me, "Why is it that you are denying to your Hindu sisters rights which you are giving to your own sisters?" That is a very cardinal question. May I reply? My reply is this, that you cannot give the same kind of food to different kinds of persons. You have got to judge the position of a Hindu woman as the Hindu law conceives of it. You have got to consider the position of a Muslim woman as the Muslim law conceives it. We are not here to question the wisdom of one system or the other. I find there are two kinds of Members here: some vegetarians and some non-vegetarians. Would you give meat food to a vegetarian and if anybody gives vegetable food to a vegetarian would you accuse him of partiality? (An honourable Member: 'Is it logic? Very strange logic.') The argument is as logical as the question put to me by my sister Shrinati Renuka Ray—it was not logical. You cannot give the same kind of food to two different kinds of persons; they were indeed born and bred differently.

The Bill was rushed through the House on the 9th of April. The Honourable the Law Minister has given us a revealing passage in the Report of the Select Committee. He has made a plain admission that the Bill had not received any consideration on its merits before it was taken to the Select Committee. That was a very wonderful statement to make. Originally the Bill was supposed to be well-drafted—a good Bill—it passed through the Legislature on the 9th of April and was taken to the Select Committee and then comes the realisation that it had not received technical or departmental consideration. Why is it, may I ask, that although it had not received technical or serious departmental consideration at the hands of the Law Ministry, it was rushed through at that stage? (An honourable Member: 'We were very near 1st April'). That may be; it was very near the 1st of April and that probably has something to do with the rush. Probably no serious business was meant, some sentimental piece of literature had to be passed through in order to satisfy our fair sisters. The Bill is driven more by "lady sentiment" than by a consideration of the necessities of the case. The Department then undertook a most unprecedented task. They came to the conclusion that the Bill was not properly drafted, that it had some defects, that it had to be re-cast. The Bill was composed of several individual chapters with separate numbering and separate definitions, entirely separate from each other. The Legislative Department thought that this was a blemish and that the Bill should be re-cast with continuous numbering and the whole blended into one complete whole.

I submit that the moment the Legislative Department came to that conclusion, then was the time to withdraw the Bill and to frame a new Bill which the Ministry was able to accept; and present that as a new Bill. Instead of that, the Department went through a process of legislative drafting with which I was never familiar. The whole constitutional history of India and abroad will never offer an example of a departmental Bill being prepared after a Bill is presented and after sending it to the Select Committee. Shri Ramnarayan Singh yesterday asked as to what authority the Drafting Committee had to make a new Bill altogether. (An honourable Member: 'It is not a new Bill.') I shall be in the unfortunate position of being able to show that very substantial changes have been made. Although the Honourable the Law Minister yesterday tried to avoid answering the question, still he had to admit in the end that he did not make any changes, that it was the Select Committee that made the changes. I am in a position to demonstrate before the House that the changes were very serious, very radical, and not unsubstantial changes.

Shri L. Kishnaswami Bharathi: Sir, on a point of order. If the honourable member wants to base his argument for re-committing the Bill to the Select Committee on the fact that it was some other Bill that was considered and not the Bill sent to it, that point has been covered by Mr. Speaker's ruling; he need not emphasise on that point. If he has other reasons, he is welcome to do so; he is speaking on his amendment for re-committing the Bill to the Select Committee. But if he stresses his argument, namely, that the Bill considered by the Select Committee was not the Bill sent to it by this House, then that has been covered by the ruling of the Chair which declared that it is the same Bill.

Shri T. T. Krishnamachari (Madras: General): That might be an argument for rejecting consideration.

Shri L. Kishnaswami Bharathi: If that is so, then that point has been thrashed out so much that if he were to argue it again it will merely be taking the time of the House. That aspect has been so thrashed out and arguments have been advanced. He is merely repeating them. I would submit to you, Sir, that we can hear any new arguments but we are not prepared to hear the same arguments being repeated by him.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: May I put in a few words in connection with the point of order raised by my friend Mr. Bharathi? He said that the honourable member Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad in his amendment for re-committal to the Select Committee had been raising the grounds which had been covered by Mr. Speaker's ruling. I do emphatically maintain and the House would also agree that every honourable member is entitled, without disrespecting the ruling of the Chair to give the reasons which lead him to recommend the Bill for re-committal to the Select Committee. There is no point of order as such involved in it. It is a member's legitimate right to place all arguments which he can for making a motion for re-committal to Select Committee.

Mr. Chairman: I think there is no point of order in this, because he is speaking on his amendment that the Bill be re-circulated for purposes of obtaining further opinion thereon and he is just advancing arguments how the Bill has changed; how the original Bill has been altered in the Select Committee.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit the real difficulty of my honourable friend is not there. I believe that an intelligent man as he is, Mr. Bharathi of all persons is well aware of the real difficulties of the situation. That is why I submit he most intelligently wants to intercept me by Mr. Speaker's ruling. I must make a declaration at once here that of all persons in the House I have the greatest respect for the decision of the Chair.

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: Why do you go into that?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am merely saying that I accept the decision of the Chair. I am not going into that.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): You must go into that. Why not?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: But what was the ruling? The ruling was that the consideration of the Bill was not out of order; in fact, the ruling was that the members of the Select Committee had the old Bill and the Departmental Bill and they must have taken the whole thing into consideration and on that basis the technical objection which I had raised that the Departmental Bill alone was taken into consideration and not the original Bill was not well-founded. That is the effect of the ruling, and that is the ruling. My present purpose would be now to show that although the members of the Select Committee had the original Bill before them, although they had the Departmental Bill before them, although they had both, although they had the opportunity of comparing the two and seeing what glaring interpolations were made in the Departmental Bill, they did not do so. They discharged their duties, I should say with respect in consideration of the importance of the subject, in a somewhat hasty manner and imperfectly and rather perfunctorily. This was the point of view that I was emphasizing.

[Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad]

An Honourable Member: You are inciting the Law Minister to violence!

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I would not do any such thing, because I have plenty of arguments to meet Mr. Ahmad.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit the Honourable the Law Member is fully conscious of the situation, I have a little suspicion, that he knows by this time without any doubt what serious changes have been made in the Departmental Bill.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I do not know. I am waiting to hear, though.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The Honourable the Law Member said, "There have been certain serious changes, but I did nothing. It is the Select Committee that did so. The Departmental Committee did not make any changes." In fact, yesterday I put a pointed question which he kindly answered, namely, whether the Departmental Committee that was set up was instructed not to make any substantial changes. That was due to the fact that I find in the report of the Select Committee a definite declaration by the majority of the Select Committee: "This revised draft does not make any substantial changes in the body of the original Bill." It was this declaration which I understand was also given to the Select Committee by him that no substantial changes have been made; it was on this basis that, although they had the original Bill with them, they did not look very carefully and compare them with a view to finding out whether any substantial changes have been made.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman. Are matters which happened in the Select Committee, are those details allowed to be brought up in this manner?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: With regard to this point of order, I have already to submit that.....

Shrimati Renuka Ray: It is a point of order which I would like you, Sir, to decide.

Mr. Chairman: I think there is no point of order. It is only Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad's inference that the Select Committee did or did not do such and such a thing. I think the honourable member will not cast any aspersions on either the Select Committee or the members of the Select Committee. He may advance his arguments.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: The manner in which the Select Committee behaved is certainly open to the criticism of the House.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit.....

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra: You are right, Mr. Chairman. Without casting aspersions he may advance arguments.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: But he is casting aspersions.

Mr. Chairman: They are at best inferences.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, my inference is that members of the Select Committee were definitely assured by the Honourable Minister.....

Shrimati Renuka Ray: I object to this Sir. This is casting aspersions. These inferences are casting aspersions.

Mr. Chairman: Every honourable member is at liberty to draw his own inference.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit, Sir, it can be contradicted at once by any member of the Select Committee.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: No, certainly we cannot contradict. But since you are inviting a contradiction, I as a member of the Select Committee, do contradict. I say that we went through the whole thing and we were satisfied that.....

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: You are making a statement.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: You wanted a contradiction. And I contradict.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that because inferences are made and aspersions are cast, the members of the Select Committee are put in a very awkward position, because then we have to bring forward all that happened in the Select Committee, which we are not supposed to do here?

Mr. Chairman: Order, order. I would request the honourable member not to make any aspersions against the members of the Select Committee; he may address arguments as to how the Bill has been changed.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I would not willingly make or cast any aspersions on any honourable member unless it is involved in the very exposition of the point. If anything was badly done which affects the fate of 30 crores of people and if any mistake or slip has been done by members of the Select Committee, then I should respectfully but frankly criticise that. This amount of privilege should be given to a member of the House. I submit, Sir, this is a right which every one enjoys and everybody should enjoy. I should stand corrected if I am wrong. I should not cast any aspersions merely for casting aspersions, but I will confine myself to pointing out certain serious changes and errors of procedure affecting the merits of the Bill and the discussion of the same may necessarily involve me in a criticism of the members of the Select Committee. Why should the members of the Select Committee be afraid of a discussion.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: We are not afraid of discussion. Then we must be given the right of speaking on what happened in the Select Committee.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The so-called sanctity of the Select Committee has been broken in this connection so many times.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U.P.: General): There is no sanctity about it. We can discuss it.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: We are prepared to discuss it.

Shri Mihir Lal Chattopadhyay (West Bengal: General): Should members be allowed to carry on conversation like this, Sir?

Mr. Chairman: Order, order. I have been seeing it happening. I hope honourable members will kindly allow the speaker to proceed with his argument.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: The Honourable Deputy Speaker the other day asked Dr. Ambedkar to explain why certain things took place. Dr. Ambedkar said that it was due to the influence of his enemies getting the better of his friends, they combined together and did it. Is it not giving out the so-called secrets of the Select Committee?

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I did not want to interrupt the honourable member at all. But now I think it is my duty to draw your attention and also the attention of the speaker that his motion is that because certain changes have been made in the Bill, it ought to be recirculated. I think what is most germane to that motion is that he should straightaway without and kind of preliminary discussion proceed to point out what changes have been made. I was waiting to know that from him.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: That is what I was going to do when side-issues were raised.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: On a point of order; I beg to submit that this question affects the privileges of the Members of the House. The question at issue is: are the members of the House not entitled to criticise the wrong behaviour or the wrong conduct of the members of the Select Committee in regard to procedure? Supposing a Bill is placed before a Select Committee and that the Bill considered by the Select Committee was not the one referred to another Bill is substituted in its place. Are not the Members entitled to say them by the House? You may give a ruling on the point whether the members of the House cannot criticise this conduct of the Select Committee? Whatever has happened in the Select Committee may not be allowed to be divulged. But the manner in which the proceedings were conducted is open to criticism, otherwise it will mean that the members of the House have no sort of control on a Bill. If a Bill is introduced in the House it becomes the property of the House and every Member has a right to point out the irregularities in the Select Committee.

Mr. Chairman: This is not a point of order. The speaker will go on.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): May I submit that while the House is entitled to criticise the Select Committee and even censure it, it is not entitled to say that the Bill before it is not the Bill that was referred to it. It is not open to the House to say that this is not the Bill referred to the Select Committee. The House may condemn the Select Committee if it thinks that the Select Committee has not done its duty. Whenever a Bill is presented to us and is under consideration it is not open to us to say that this is not the Bill that was presented to it.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that I was only going to condemn the Select Committee and nothing more.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member will be perfectly right if he criticises the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee and points out the changes made. He will confine his remarks to the changes that have been made in the Bill.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am going to submit to the House that some changes have been made, some serious changes have been made.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: Point them out. I am awaiting to know the changes made. The honourable member may take his own time, but let him tell us what the changes are.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I will proceed in my own way.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: He cannot go on in this manner.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that the original Bill was introduced by Mr. Jogendra Nath Mandal. It bears the printing date 1st August 1946. This was the Bill which was sent to the Select Committee. A Bill printed on 16th August 1948 is the Bill that came out of the Select Committee with the report.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: What is the point on that?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am coming to that. There are serious discrepancies between these two Bills.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: That is what we are waiting to know.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: If this is accepted I will proceed to the vital points. There are serious discrepancies between the original Bill and the Bill that has been appended to the report of the Select Committee. (Interruptions) This is not the best way of quickening my pace. I submit that in between these two Bills, a very interesting document came in. It is a departmental draft which was printed on 17th July, 1948. It is this draft which came in between the two. All the points of order raised and argued were about this departmental draft. Even in the present discussions, if I understood the Honourable the Minister of Law rightly, he mentioned nothing about this departmental Bill, but said that all the changes were made by the Select Committee and not by him. I am referring to the Bill dated 17th July, 1948.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: That was before the date of the Select Committee meeting.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am grateful to my friend Mr. Tyagi for pointing out that the date of printing, viz., 17th July, 1948, was before the Select Committee was first called to meet. I submit that this Bill.....

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: I would like to curtail this argument of my honourable friend by saying that it is bound to be so. The re-draft was sent one month before the meeting of the Select Committee.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: That is the point I was mentioning. I am grateful for the admission. This draft was complete before the Select Committee met. I should like to state at this stage that the House was not informed about it. The authority of the House was not taken to completely change the original Bill.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Is the middle one exactly the same as is appended to the report?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: There have been some changes. The changes made by the Select Committee were slight, but serious changes were made by the Department which the Select Committee never knew.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: It is the Select Committee that has introduced the changes and not the Department.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that the most important thing is that they never made a detailed examination of the Departmental draft. In fact my contention is that—I would sit down if my honourable friend Shri Santhanam can quote a single example in the whole legislative history of India or in other countries for this—a Bill that has been sent to a Select Committee has been substituted by another completely re-casting the whole thing and put along with it.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: I have been on many Select Committees and in many cases the original Bill has been completely re-drafted by the Select Committee.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: That is another matter.

Mr. Chairman: May I point out to the honourable member that Mr. Speaker has given a decision that it is the original Bill that was considered by the Select Committee along with the draft given to it by the Honourable the Law Minister? In view of that decision, the honourable member may confine his remarks to the point as to how the original Bill has undergone a change in the Select Committee. All the other remarks about what happened in the Select Committee are beyond the purview of the honourable member.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: My point is that, although the Select Committee must be deemed to have considered the original Bill and the departmental draft and to have come to this conclusion, that was done most perfunctorily and imperfectly. My point is this, that although the Select Committee considered or must be deemed to have considered the original Bill and the departmental draft and came to this conclusion and although that is so, my point is that it was necessarily done most perfunctorily and most imperfectly. They must have been, I submit, dominated by the serious changes introduced into the departmental Bill and they must have been completely under the hypnotic influence of a revised draft, a convenient ready made thing, which was placed in their hands. It must have made a tremendous psychological impression on the Members of the Select Committee, so that the Select Committee, although they had the right, largely depended upon the departmental draft and this affects the merits though not the legality of the final Bill.

My point is that any Select Committee has the right to make enormous changes, but it has never happened that a new Bill, completely changed, was placed at the hands of the Select Committee and then they would begin consideration on the new Bill. Although, technically, they had also the original Bill, still they proceeded clause by clause with the new Bill. That was a matter of merit. I submit, that the introduction of this departmental Bill has created considerable amount of prejudice to a fair and impartial consideration of the Bill. I submit that the clauses of the original Bill should have been begun one by one and changes should have been made gradually on the body of the original Bill. Instead of that it seems to have necessarily followed that the departmental Bill was taken up, although there was in them marginal references to the clauses of the original Bill. Still, I beg to submit without any disrespect to the members of the Select Committee, it was impossible for any member to really see readily what enormous changes had been effected in the departmental Bill and it is this, I submit which has affected the merits of the final Bill. I never suggest that the Members of the Select Committee had no right to make any changes or to adopt the departmental Bill or to proceed with the original Bill. I submit that the work was speaking again with respect, necessarily done perfunctorily and considerable responsibility in the work of the Select Committee must rest upon the departmental draft. On a consideration of the departmental draft, therefore, the merits of the present Bill should be considered.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Let us see all the points of difference.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that the entire legislation began with a blunder and it proceeds from blunder to blunder until we come to a capital blunder, namely, the present Bill. I submit that the mistake first arose in the year 1937. The mistake arose there and I shall show at once that one mistake led to another mistake and that mistake led to other mistakes and all these mistakes led the Select Committee and then ultimately (Interruption) I ask Shri Krishnaswami Bharathi in all seriousness, should I be disturbed like this?

Mr. Chairman: If the honourable member addresses the Chair, I think the disturbance will be much less.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Sir, I submit, you will be pleased to consider that in the year 1937, a Bill was passed into law and that is the Hindu Married Women's Right to Property Act, 1937. That, I submit, was a hasty legislation. It contained within itself ill-digested, little understood law that has led to all this trouble. In fact the author of the Bill was Dr. Deshmukh. So, Dr. Deshmukh—I am happy to find it is not our present Dr. Deshmukh—unconsciously with the bona fide belief of doing good to Hindu society, introduced that Bill. The effect of the Bill was to introduce some change in the law of Succession in the Compact series. According to Hindu Law, as I have understood it, when a man dies his heirs are son, grandson and great-grandson. In the presence of the son the grandson by a pre-deceased son inherits—the grandson represents his deceased father and takes his father's share. So in this way the son, grandson and the great-grandson in three generations inherit the property. Dr. Deshmukh was enthused with the idea that the widow must be given a definite status and a definite right. So he made the widow of the propositus a share-holder, and not only the widow of the propositus, but the widow of a deceased son, the widow of the deceased grandson and the widow of a deceased great-grandson. They were also included within the ambit of the shareholders. That, I submit was most ill-considered, although the author was imbued with the highest sense of patriotism and welfare of the community. I submit, that this was then.....

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam: Would my honourable friend like me to inform him that this Bill was actually accepted by the late Sir N.N. Sircar, who was the greatest authority on Hindu Law?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am in a position to show, although not only he, but there was a time when I also accepted it. (Interruption). I beg to submit that I am in possession of the House.

Mr. Chairman: The honourable member is going into the history of the amendments to Hindu Law.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit, that the Hindu Married Women's Right to Property Act was the first mistake and I shall show that this contained within it seeds of other blunders culminating in the present Bill.

Shrimati G. Durgabai: That was a serious reflection of the legislature then existing.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit that the mistake was admitted by that legislature itself and I can quote passages that that legislature admitted that that was a mistake. (Interruptions).

Mr. Chairman: Order, order.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I submit, I should show how the mistake came about. In fact in providing for the widow of the propositus of the deceased son, grandson and of the great-grandson, the position of the daughter became absolutely uncertain. Nobody knew what the position of the daughter was at that time, under this Act.

The Honourable Dr. B. R. Ambedkar: An undertaking was taken from my friend Dr. Deshmukh by Sir N. N. Sircar that the Government will support the measure only if he agreed to drop the word 'daughter' and he promised that he would drop the word 'daughter'.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: I am as much familiar with the history of that law as the Honourable Dr. Ambedkar.

Mr. Chairman: Is the honourable member going to take more time?

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad: Yes, Sir.

Mr. Chairman: In that case, he may resume his speech later and we may now adjourn.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 3rd March, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART—II PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Thursday, 3rd March, 1949.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-45 A. M. DEATH OF SHRIMATI SAROJINI NAIDU.

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): It has become my painful duty, Sir, as Leader of this House, to refer from time to time to the passing away of the illustrious sons and daughters of India. Recently I referred to the passing away of a very eminent son of India, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru. Then the Governor of a Province suddenly died. He was a very distinguished servant of the State. When we refer to these distinguished sons or daughters of the country, we say often enough that it will be difficult to replace them, that they are irreplaceable, which may be true enough in a partial manner. But, today, I with your leave would like to refer to the passing away early yesterday morning of one about whom it can be said with absolute truth that it is impossible to replace her or to find her like. She was at pains for the last year and a half or a little more as the Governor of a great Province with many problems and she functioned as Governor with exceeding ability and exceeding success as can be judged from the fact that every one in that Province, from the Premier and his Ministers and Government to the various groups and classes and religious communities down to the workers and the peasant in the field, had been drawn to her and had found a welcome in her heart. She had succeeded very greatly as a Governor and as a great servant of the State in an exalted position. But it is not as a Governor that I should speak much of her; for she was a much greater person than Governors are normally supposed to be. What exactly she was, it is a little difficult for me to say, because she had become almost a part of us, a part of our National heritage of today and a part of us individuals who had the great privilege to be associated with her for a multitude of years in our struggle for freedom and in our work.

Sir, it is a little difficult to see persons with whom you have been so closely associated in proper perspective, and yet one can feel that to some extent. And thinking of her one sees a person to whom any number of epithets and adjectives might be applied. Here was a person of great brilliance. Here was a person vital and vivid. Here was a person with so many gifts, but above all with some gifts which made her perfectly unique. She began life as a poetess. In later years, when the compulsion of events drew her into the National Struggle and she threw herself into it with all the zest and fire that she possessed, she did not write much poetry with pen and paper, but her whole life became a poem and a song. And she did that amazing thing: she infused artistry and poetry to our National Struggle. Just as the Father of the Nation had infused moral grandeur and greatness to the Struggle, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu gave it artistry and poetry and that zest for life and indomitable spirit which not only faced disaster and catastrophe, but faced them with a light heart and with a song on her lips and smile on her face. Now I do not think, being myself a politician which most of us are, that hardly any other gift was more valuable to our National life than this lifting it, out of the plane of pure politics, to a higher artistic sphere which she succeeded in doing in some measure.

Looking back upon her life, one sees an astonishing combination of gifts. One, here is a life full of vitality; one, here is 50 years of existence—not merely existence but a vital, dynamic existence—touching many aspects of our life, cultural and political. And whatever she touched, she infused with something of her fire. She was indeed a pillar of fire. And then again, she was like cooling running water, soothing and uplifting and bringing down the passion of our politics to the cooler levels of human beings. So it is difficult for one to speak about her except that one realises that here was a magnificence of spirit and it is gone.

We shall, no doubt, for generations to come, remember her, but perhaps those who come after us and those who have not been associated with her so closely will not realise fully the richness of that personality which could not easily be translated or transmuted into spoken words or records. So she worked for India. She knew how to work and she knew how to play. And that was a wonderful combination. She knew how to sacrifice herself for great causes. She knew also to do that so gracefully and so graciously that it appeared an easy thing to do and not anything entailing travail of spirit. If a sensitive person like her must suffer from tremendous travail of spirit, no doubt she did, but she did it so graciously that it appeared that that too was easy for her. So she lifted our struggle into a higher plane and gave it a certain touch which I cannot think anybody else can give or is likely to give in future.

Sir, I said she was a curious combination of so many things; she represented in herself a rich culture into which flowed various currents which have made Indian culture so great as it is. She herself was a composite both of various currents of culture in India as well as various currents of culture both in the East and the West. And so she was, while being a very great national figure, also truly an Internationalist, and wherever she might go in the wide world, she was recognised as such and as one of the great ones of the earth. It is well to remember that specially today, when through stress of circumstances we may occasionally drift into a narrow nationalism and forget the larger objectives that inspired the great ones who laid down the foundations of our National Movement. The Great Father of the Nation and this great woman who has also shaped our National Movement so powerfully, not so much on the direct political plane, although she functioned there and adequately functioned, but in those invisible planes, which are so very important, because they shape the nation's character, because they mould ultimately its mental and aesthetic and artistic outlook and without that mental, moral, aesthetic and artistic outlook, any success that we may gain may well be an empty success; because, after all, we seek freedom, to gain which, is good in itself, but we seek freedom to achieve something else. We seek freedom to achieve a good life for our people. What is the good life? Can you imagine any good life which does not have an artistic and an aesthetic element in it and a moral element in it? That will not be a good life; it will be some temporary phase of existence which is rather dry and harsh, and unfortunately, the world grows drier and harsher and more cruel. In our own experience of the last two years political life has become a little harsh, cruel intolerant and suspicious and in the world today, we see suspicion and fear all round, fear of each other. How are we to get over this? It is only through some experience of moral heights that we might overcome it, and that was the way shown to us by the Father of the Nation, or else the other way is to approach it from the human point of view, from the artistic and aesthetic point of view, and the human point of view is the forgiving point of view, is the point of view full of compassion and understanding of humanity and its failings as well as its virtues. And so Sarojini brought that human point of view, full of understanding, full of compassion for all who are in India or outside.

The House knows that she stood more than any single human being in India for the unity of India in all its phases, for the unity of its cultural content, the unity of its geographical areas. It was a passion for her. It was the very texture, the warp and woof of her life. It is well to remember that when we sometimes fall into narrower grooves, because greatness has never come from narrowness of mind or again greatness for a nation as for an individual comes from a wide vision, a wide perspective, an inclusive outlook and a human approach to life. So, she became an interpreter in India of the various phases of our rich cultural inheritance. She became an interpreter in India of the many great things that the West has produced, and she became an interpreter in other parts of India of India's rich culture. She became the ideal ambassador and the ideal link between the East and the West, and between various parts and groups in India. I do not myself see how we are to find the like of her now or in the future. We shall have no doubt great men and women in the future, because India, even when she was low in the political scale, has never failed to produce greatness in her children. And now, that India is free, I have no doubt that India will produce great men and women in the future, as she has done in the past and in the present, before our very eyes, we have seen these great figures, and yet, that while India produces great men and women, whether she will or can produce just another like Sarojini. So we think of her as a brightness, as a certain vitality and vividness as a poetry infused into life and activity, as something tremendously important and rich, and yet something which in terms of the material world is rather insubstantial, difficult to grip and difficult to describe, as something which you can only feel, as you can feel beauty, as you can feel the other higher things of life. May be some memory of this may go to other generations who have not seen her and inspire them. I think it will, but I do not think we can ever feel that as we poor mortals who had the privilege of being associated with her have felt.

So, in making this reference to this House, I can only recount various ideas that come into my mind, and perhaps I recount them in a somewhat confused way, because my mind feels afflicted and confused as if an intimate part of it was cut off from it and because it is difficult to speak or to judge of people for whom one has a great deal of affection. It was the affection of unity. It was the affection of one who even in his younger days was tremendously inspired by her speech and action and who during the succeeding decades ever grew more and more to love her and to admire her and to think of her as a rich and rare being. That rich and precious being is no more and that is sorrow for us, inevitably, and yet, it is something more than sorrow. It is, if we view it in another light a joy and triumph for us, that India of our generation has produced such rare spirits which have inspired us and which will inspire us in the future.

Sir, it is customary when making such a reference to say that the sympathy and condolence of this House might be conveyed to the relatives of the person who has passed away. I say so and yet, really the bond that held Sarojini to all of us here and to thousands and tens of thousands in this country was as close and great as the bond that held her to her own children or to her other relatives and so though we send this message of condolence on behalf of this House all of us really require that message to soothe our hearts.

Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan (U. P. : Muslim): I associate myself with every word that has fallen from the lips of the Honourable the Prime Minister. Many of us who had the privilege and honour of the friendship of Shrimati Sarojini Naidu feel deep sorrow at the passing away of this great Lady of the land and the feeling is so deep that it is not capable of a verbal expression. She will be mourned not only in this country but in every part of the world where she had a host of admirers and friends. The Prime Minister put a question, as to what made her so great? I also have been wondering, and I feel it was the irresistible charm of her personality, her human qualities and her broad mindedness and catholicity of outlook. Even when the country was in the grip of bitter political controversies, there was no group in this country which did not admire and respect her. She took a leading part in the battle for the freedom of this country, and like her brothers, her distinguished brothers, she also cheerfully underwent all the sufferings and trials in freedom's struggle. The very people who put her in prison admired her and no sooner was she out, the ready people entertained. Surely a lady with such a personality is irreplaceable, as the Prime Minister has said. I call her incomparable in her qualities.

She was an orator of a very high order and she kept her audiences spell bound and bewitched them by her elegance of diction and sonorous phrases. Who is there in this House who has not been bewitched in a similar manner some time or other or who has not been inspired by her speeches? It is too early to form a true appreciation of the services which she has rendered. I know, coming as I do from the province of which she was the Governor, how great is our grief at her passing away, and how difficult it will be to replace her with a Governor with the same qualities. It is almost impossible. I do not think her memory can ever be effaced. I feel she will remain for ever an example to the womanhood of India, a source of inspiration to coming generations.

With these words, I associate myself with the sentiments already expressed, and join the Prime Minister in conveying our condolences to the bereaved family. I almost feel I am as much a member of her family as her own sons and daughters.

Mr. Homi Mody (Bombay : General) : Sir, I desire to join in the tribute which has been paid by the Prime Minister to the memory of Sarojini Devi. I can but feebly echo the feeling and eloquent terms in which he referred to the truly great and amazing personality which has just passed away. I had the privilege of knowing Sarojini Devi for over thirty years, and to know her was to love and admire her versatility and tremendous personality. She was, without doubt, one of the most remarkable women of the age, and it is not surprising that her death should have come with a sense of profound personal sorrow to millions of her countrymen.

Reference has been made to her many-sided gifts, and to her infectious charm. I would only add that she was equally at home in the hut of the peasant and the worker as in the palaces of the mighty, and wherever she went, she infused happiness and good-humour all round. Sir, she has left a fragrant memory behind, which will long be cherished by not only those who had the privilege of knowing her in person, but by the millions who had heard of her and admired her brilliance and personality.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: I wholeheartedly associate myself with all that has fallen from the Leader of the House and the other members who have spoken. In Sarojini Devi Mother India has lost one of her greatest and noblest daughters. She lived a rich and glorious life. Whatever department of public life and activity she touched, there was none which she did not adorn. When she presided over the Asian Conference all of us felt that it was Mother India who was represented, and it was Mother India who spoke. She raised the level of the discussions to a height of which all of us were proud, and we felt that India had at last regained her lost glory and once more attained her position in the comity of nations. She was essentially human. She was the simplest of the simple, and she made no difference between the rich and the poor, or the high and the low.

I have heard many of her comrades and friends call her 'Akka'—elder sister. She was really an elder sister to all; and with her charming manners and affection to all, she enlivened our history over a period of thirty years and more. She was a poet, a patriot and also a stout fighter. These qualities are rare, in one and the same person. She was one of the truest followers of Mahatma Gandhi. We can never forget her. In the last generation, whenever a daughter was born in the house, ten to one, that daughter was called Sarojini. Though Sarojini Devi has left us, she has left her name almost in every house from one end to the other of this great continent. She has indeed, not left us at all. She has implanted herself in our hearts. May God bless her. I am quite sure she has acquired an abiding place in Heaven. May her soul rest in peace! I wish to convey the message of goodwill and condolence to the members of the bereaved family on your behalf and on my own.

As a mark of respect and reverence I request honourable members will kindly stand in their seats and observe silence.

THE GENERAL BUDGET—GENERAL DISCUSSION FIRST STAGE

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: We shall now proceed to the discussion of the General Budget. But before doing so I have to announce to the House that under Rule 93, I fix the time limit for speeches as 15 minutes for each honourable member excepting the Honourable the Finance Minister for whom 45 minutes or more will be allowed, if necessary.

Though the time limit is fixed as 15 minutes, if it is desired by the House that a large number of honourable members should be allowed to participate in the debate, each honourable member wishing to speak, will strictly confine himself to relevant remarks and will avoid repetitions and try to close his remarks within ten minutes. Pandit Kunzru.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (U. P. : General): The wide departure of the revised estimates from the budget estimates of revenue and expenditure for the year that is coming to a close offers a tempting subject for criticism; but the budget for next year raises such important issues that I must resist this temptation and pass on to a consideration of these issues.

Our economic situation of which our financial position is only a part requires us to pay close and immediate attention to a number of problems, the most important of which seem to be four.

In the first place our food resources must be increased largely by more food being grown in the country. The root cause of many troubles that we suffer from today is the inadequate production of food and this must receive the first attention of everyone who takes an intelligent interest in the public affairs of this country.

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.]

The second question that seems to me to require our constant attention is the need for increasing our exports in order to be in a position to obtain all those things that we cannot get except from abroad. The Finance Minister has told us that our foreign exchange resources are extremely slender. It is necessary for us therefore to attend to this question as clearly as possible. But this can be done only if we consider the different parts of our economy as a balanced whole.

Apart from this, this question is intimately connected with two other questions, namely, those of greater production in general and of lower prices. The connection between increased exports and lower prices must be clear to everybody who notices the difference between the price levels in this country and the price levels, say, in the United Kingdom and the United States of America. There is a great disparity between the level of prices ruling in India on the one side and these countries on the other. Unless we can bring about a proper parity between our prices and foreign prices the outlook for us cannot be regarded as bright. I am sure that everyone expected that the Honourable the Finance Minister would place these matters in the forefront in his budget speech, but on the first two of the subjects that I have referred to the Honourable Minister is almost entirely silent. On the other two he has had something to say, but it is not of a very reassuring character.

Sir, before I deal with these matters I should like to refer very briefly to some smaller questions—questions that are big in themselves but appear somewhat insignificant in comparison with the issues to which I have ventured to draw the attention of the House. It is very disappointing to know that the economy expected from the labours of the Economy Committee has not so far been realised at all and that the position is so uncertain that the Minister of Finance has thought himself justified in omitting any provision for making a cut in the expenditure as a result of the reports already submitted by the Committee. Sir, the matter, as I have said, is in itself important and I hope that the inability of the Finance Minister to effect any economy so far, or the rather depressing outlook for the future, is not due to the refusal of the various Ministries to give effect substantially to the recommendations of the Committee. I know that the matter rests with the Government as a whole and not with the Finance Minister. But I trust that considering the inflationary forces that are in existence and the need for controlling even development expenditure at the present time, he will cast his influence firmly on the side economy.

Now a word about the taxation proposed by him. The specific measures to which I want to draw the attention of the House are the proposed increase in the rates for letters and postcard, the levy of a duty of a pice per yard on coarse cloth, and the increase in the sugar excise duty. The Honourable Minister has been perfectly frank with us and has told us that the position is such that he has to try and find out ways of making up for the loss of the salt revenue. But there is this difference between the salt tax and the increase in the postal rates for letters and postcards, that however undesirable a tax on the necessities of life may be, the salt tax was paid by those who purchased salt and who therefore benefited in some measure; but so far as letters and postcards are concerned, I do not think that the ordinary man is anxious that their delivery should be accelerated. The poorer people would be satisfied with the present arrangements for their delivery if they were more efficient. It seems to me that such arrangements as have been made for speeding up the delivery of letters have been made in the interests of more fortunate people. I therefore regret the proposed increase in the rates for letters and postcards.

The duty on coarse cloth will certainly be paid by those who purchase the cloth. I do not know what the yield from it is expected to be, but I wish that my honourable friend had thought of some other source of revenue and left the poor man's cloth un-taxed.

These matters would in normal times have required a fuller treatment than is possible today because I should like, after referring very briefly to our Defence expenditure and our Defence requirements, to pass on to the consideration of our capital budget which raises issues of far-reaching importance. Sir, though the Honourable the Finance Minister spoke in cautious terms about future Defence expenditure; it seemed to me, reading between the lines, that he hoped, like his predecessor, for a substantial reduction in it. I have been a strong critic of Defence expenditure for years, but considering the present international situation I do not think that the level of our Defence expenditure is very high. Whatever reorganisation may be made in future, in order to have a more balanced force, I doubt whether it would be possible to reduce this expenditure in any appreciable measure in the immediate future. The burden may seem to be heavy but it is the price that we pay for insuring the life of the nation against aggression from without.

Indeed, Sir, are certain elements that might tend somewhat to increase rather than reduce the Defence expenditure. The first question I should like to refer to in this connection is that of the future of the troops maintained by the Indian States at the present time. Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel has done a magnificent piece of work in integrating the States with India; it is a work for which he will be remembered for ever in Indian history; the vigour and speed with which he has dealt with matters relating to the future of the States deserve our admiration and gratitude in the fullest measure. I hope that he will complete his work by making the first class troops maintained by the Indian States an integral part of the Indian Army. And if this happens, as I hope it will before long, it is possible that the expenditure on the Army instead going down might go up a little.

The second question that I shall deal with in this connection is the dissatisfaction, deep and genuine, among Indian Commissioned Officers with the present rates of pay. The Government of India have fixed their scales of salary after a consideration of the whole matter including the relation between the salaries of Indian Commissioned Officers and the officers employed in the higher Civil Services. But the military officers are in a special position. To mention only one special factor, I would ask the House to bear in mind that the mess expenditure that they have to bear has no counterpart in the family budgets of the civil officers. Then, the life that they lead owing to frequent transfers makes it very difficult for them to educate their children properly or to bear the other household expenses that are apt at times to be heavy because of the need of maintaining two establishments. In view of these considerations, I plead for more sympathetic attention being paid to this question. I do not propose that the scales of salary should be raised, but I think that the military officers should be provided with certain amenities that would make a military career popular and produce contentment among the officers. The suggestions that I would make in this connection are that, say, half the expenditure on the education of the children of officers up to the rank of Lt.-Colonel should be borne by the State. Again some provision should be made in the Defence Budget for the reduction of the house rents and other incidental charges like payment for light and water that the military officers have to pay. I hope that these amenities will not lead to heavy expenditure but in my opinion their provision is necessary if we want to recruit young men of a proper stamp to our Defence Forces.

[Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru.]

Lastly, Sir, I should like to refer to the Royal Indian Air Force. We have recently been informed of a plan for the development of the Royal Indian Navy. But we are not aware of any such plan for the development of the Indian Air Force. The Honourable the Minister of Finance has said that this matter is under the consideration of the Government. I do not know what Government intend to do, but I hope that the measures that they take now will be such as to enable a speedy expansion of the Force so that, it may at least be doubled very soon.

Now I wish to refer during the few minutes that remain to me, if my time is over, I shall not refer to it. Is my time over, Sir?

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: Two minutes left.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: I do not think that in two minutes I can deal with the subject that I propose to discuss. Perhaps I shall choose some other occasion for discussing it.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: The honourable member may have five minutes.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: Perhaps I could touch the fringe of the subject in five minutes.

Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad (West Bengal: Muslim): We have no objection to his speaking; we shall curtail our own speeches.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: Sir, I do not want to give rise to any feeling in this House. If any honourable member thinks that having exceeded my time-limit, I should sit down, I am perfectly prepared to do so.

Honourable Members: No, no.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: They all seem to be anxious to hear the honourable member.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: During the war we saw the phenomenon of grossly unbalanced capital Budgets and it is these unbalanced Budgets that were responsible for the severe inflationary pressure that existed then in this country. Now, though the war is over, unbalanced capital Budgets continue. Take, for instance, the year that is drawing to a close. Eliminating the special transactions due to the arrangements made for the payment of sterling pensions and the acquisitions of Defence installations and surplus stores, the revised figures seem to show that the deficit was of the order of Rs. 158 crores. Now, in the coming year the deficit will be, according to the Budget figures, about Rs. 134 crores. These deficits have naturally affected our cash balances. They amounted to about Rs. 275 crores on 31st March 1948. On the 31st March, 1949, they are expected to be reduced, according to the Budget figures, to Rs. 163 crores. On the 31st March, 1950 they are expected to stand only at Rs. 58 crores. I am as keen on the development of our moral and material resources as anybody in this House, but we can provide money for these much-needed development plans only to the extent that our economic situation at present allows. The inflationary forces that existed in the past have not ceased to exert their pressure. It is true that so far, the notes in circulation have not increased since July 1948, but if business activity grows as speedily as we all wish it to, it seems to me inevitable that private and public expenditure in the aggregate should have an inflationary effect and should tend to raise prices. The rise in prices of all things except, I believe, raw materials has been checked, but unless Government consider private and public expenditure on development at one and the same time, there is a great danger that the forces that have been to a certain extent brought under control may get out of hand and place us in an extraordinarily difficult situation.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): If I may interrupt for a minute, I should like to know on a point of information if the honourable member is suggesting that the reduction in capital expenditure which Government has proposed must be intensified?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: I did not hear what the honourable Minister said.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: I said, if we go in for heavy capital expenditure at this stage, there is likely to be a spending force created which might intensify the inflationary forces. On that ground we have reduced the capital expenditure. Is the honourable member suggesting that that capital expenditure should be reduced further?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: The honourable Minister is right in saying that the revised estimates of development expenditure are lower than the Budget estimates, but taking, say, the grants and loans to the Provincial Governments in the coming year, the total seems to me to be higher than it will be in the current year and it is in that sense that I feel that a better control over capital expenditure is necessary. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: There is a depression now.) I may mention, in this connection, that the net deposits in the Reserve Bank during the calendar year 1948 increased by about Rs. 13 crores and that the outstanding loans and bills of the commercial banks have increased by about Rs. 38 crores. These facts have to be taken together in a complete survey of the situation. I do not want to be an alarmist; I do not want to be a carving critic of the Finance Minister or of the Government, but it seems to me, in view of the position in which we have been for years, that we ought to be more careful in regard to our capital expenditure.

The honourable Minister has tried to increase production in this country by several measures proposed by him—the abolition of the capital gains tax, the reduction of super-tax, specially on earned incomes and provision of higher depreciation allowance for machinery. Are the steps that he proposes to take in order to instil greater confidence in the business community going to bring about an increase in productive activity? I wish him well and I hope that the steps taken by him will prove effective. But I should be false to myself and be a false friend of the Finance Minister if I did not express my doubts on this subject. At the present time it is very difficult to judge how far these measures will produce the effect that they are intended to. But frankly speaking I think that a stage has been reached when we ought to decide whether we are to give enterprise a free hand or whether we are to go in for a socialistic economy. The contrast may seem unduly sharp to my honourable friend the Finance Minister, but I have to state the question in that way in order to compel the attention of those in authority to this matter. Unless the present uncertainty disappears and the question is handled with greater precision and firmness I frankly doubt whether the measures suggested by the Finance Minister will lead to the desired results. I do not want to dwell any more on this subject though it is a matter of cardinal importance. I shall only say that so far Government have met the increase in capital expenditure over capital receipts by drawing on their balances. It is a piece of good luck that they have been able to do so without increasing the note circulation. But, as I have already said, next year we shall have only Rs. 58 crores left in our cash balances. Unless we take steps to put our economy in order I am afraid that Government may have to ask the Reserve Bank to put more paper money in circulation.

I am conscious that I have not developed the subject as fully as I should, but it is not possible within the limited time allowed to us to do full justice to any subject. I hope, however, that what I have said will be sufficient to indicate to the House and my honourable friend the Finance Minister the purpose of my remarks and the great need I feel for this matter being dealt with more comprehensively more precisely and with greater determination.

The economists consulted by Government last year recommended that the banks should be compelled to keep a portion of their deposits in the shape of government securities. The bankers consulted by them suggested that Government should resort to a system of selective lending. But Government so far have not given any indication of their mind on these subjects, but the time has come when they must take these matters more fully into consideration than they have done lest the worst should befall this country.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, I want your ruling on a certain matter. We thought that on the second year of our national Budget discussions the whole Cabinet will be present in the House to listen to the discussions. Although a few Ministers are present in the House now, the Minister for Development and the Minister for Defence are not present and the weighty observations of my honourable friend Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru went astray. Although my honourable friend the Finance Minister will reply to the points raised, I think, Sir, the House must be assured that the Cabinet listens to its criticism.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: I am sure, the majority of the Ministers are here and arrangements have been made for taking down notes relating to other Ministries. I am sure no honourable Minister would like to leave the House and it is only for unavoidable circumstances or reasons they may have left. They are bearing that in mind and we need not remind them about it.

Shri B. Das: What arrangement is being made in the House to take down those notes?

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: I believe there are arrangements. Unless I call upon any particular Minister.....

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: Sir, if I may say so, my honourable colleagues had not the slightest intention of being discourteous to the House on this matter, and it is really the exigencies of work that have forced some of them to leave the House. But I will have the suggestion made by my honourable friend conveyed to my colleagues and as far as possible see that their desire is fulfilled.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar (Madras: General): I must first congratulate the Honourable the Finance Minister on the approbation he has been able to secure from the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry. That Chamber which has been grumbling about the Congress Government and the socialistic trend that was perceivable in their actions has chosen to extend to the Honourable the Finance Minister its support to all his proposals except one. That probably is a feather in his cap, but unfortunately many of us here are not able to take the same view as the Federated Chamber and we are more likely to look into the Budget that has been presented to us from a different angle than which the Federated Chamber has done. As regards the relief he has given to the industries by way of exemption from customs for raw materials, increase in the depreciation allowance to cover losses on account of falling prices of machinery, and also what was done some time back, namely, exemption from duty on machinery that is imported—they are all for the good and I can wholeheartedly support all of them. I can also support the repeal of the capital gains tax. That is a tax which has failed to achieve anything. It has only led to fraud, to corruption and things like that. I can give a small instance from my own experience. A money lender purchased a house in a semi-urban area near Coimbatore for Rs. 2,000. I wanted it for a charitable object. I fixed the price at Rs. 5,200. I negotiated with his agent and the document was written. It was sent to the principal. The principal said that the consideration should be shown as Rs. 2,000, the price for which he took it in auction. The transaction fell through. That is how this tax is working. It only leads to fraud. It only leads to misrepresentation of the transactions and their value. So the sooner it is repealed the better it will be for everybody concerned. If, for instance, at the time it was passed, retrospective effect had been given to it for a couple of years, probably Government could have got a fairly good amount. But now, having enacted the law and making it applicable to future transactions, it only leads people, as I said, to fraud and makes people dishonest and also leads to corruption.

Having said that I will also say that the Honourable the Finance Minister has not touched the real reasons for capital not flowing into industries, want of enterprise in starting industries and things like that. He has made us believe—I hope he did not intend it—that it is simply because of the direct taxation or over-taxation as people put it that capital does not flow into industries and enterprise is not coming forward. In my humble opinion it has nothing to do with that. The real reason is that people are talking in all sorts of ways. They say there will be nationalisation, they say there will be acquisition of all the properties on a value to be fixed at random. A person who wants to invest money in an enterprise will not be prepared to part with the money if he is not sure that the enterprise is going to last for some time, that he is going to get some return for it and also that he will get back the capital he has invested when or if it is going to be taken over by the Government. Now what happens? In the first place there is all sorts of talk about nationalisation. My friend the Honourable Minister for Industries says he is going to nationalise a certain number of industries but with reference to others he is going to have control. Control in what matters? I cannot see very much difference between control proposed and nationalisation. The number of items in which he wants to have control practically amounts to taking over control of the whole field of industry. Pointed reference has also been made to the provision that has been proposed in the Constitution Bill, namely, that any commercial or industrial enterprise can be taken over at any price that may be fixed by the Provincial or the Central Legislature as the case may be. What has happened with reference to the zamindaris may or may not be justifiable. It is a matter in which much can be said on both sides. But so far as industrial and commercial concerns are concerned you cannot say the same thing. Money is going to be invested—not only is it already invested but you expect people to go in and invest money in the new enterprises and in the expansion of the present enterprises. Will anybody do it with his eyes wide open that at any moment these concerns may be taken over at any price that may be fixed? Just two or three days back I was looking at The Hindu of Madras. There the Honourable Minister for Finance is reported to have said in the local Legislature that he was going to take over the electricity concerns in the Province at a certain valuation which would not be the market value. He was asked what will be the price. He was not prepared to give it out. He said it is a matter which is under negotiation between him and the Central Government. If such is the state of affairs how can you really expect anybody to come and invest capital in enterprises. That is the main reason why capital is not prepared to come in. Not only that. There is the Dividend Limitation Bill which is pending before this Assembly.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: The honourable member may continue after Lunch. The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy-Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: I was saying that the help which the industry wanted is not of the sort which the honourable Minister for Finance is proposing. I said that apart from the relief we want to give with reference to machinery, raw materials and depreciation, what is necessary is an assurance with reference to certain matters. I mentioned two of these matters, one is the question of nationalisation and control and the other is the question of compensation that has to be given in cases where the concerns are taken over. There is also a third matter about which some assurance will be necessary before private enterprise can be expected to function satisfactorily. This concerns the managing agency system. This system is needed for starting new enterprises. You want somebody to plan, make the necessary arrangements, get the capital necessary and start the new enterprises. Once the concern is started the necessity for the managing agent may not be apparent. There is therefore necessity for the system of managing agents. And yet there is a demand that this system should go. The Trade Unions have asked for ending the system. The shareholders or investors do not want the agency system. The Stock Exchange does not want the Managing agency system. In these circumstances the managing agents want to be certain of their position in the new set-up. If they are not assured of their future, you cannot expect them to start new enterprises. As somebody says, their future is very dark. Hence they want to be assured of their position in the future before they start new enterprises. I submit it is these things which stand in the way of the development of industries, the industrialisation of the country and proper economy being established between agriculture and industry in this country.

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: On a point of information, may I ask if the honourable member is suggesting that we should give some indication of the lines on which we propose to deal with the managing agency provisions in the Companies Act or is he suggesting that the existing provisions are sufficient for managing agents?

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: It is not that. Unless and until some sort of assurance for the future that they will be allowed to continue for some time or that some compensation will be given to them, they would not exert themselves. Everybody wants some reward for his services. If they are not going to have any reward for their services and if they are going to be sent away bag and baggage out of their business, you cannot expect them to undertake a complicated business like bringing into existence a commercial or industrial concern. That is the position, Sir. I am sorry I have spoken only for five minutes in the forenoon before we adjourned for lunch. Now after re-assembling I have spoken only for another five minutes.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: The Honourable Member spoke for ten minutes before we adjourned for lunch.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: A few more minutes, Sir. Let us consider the relief which the honourable the Minister for Finance wants to give these people for the purpose of getting share capital for industries and other enterprises. The relief offered consists of two parts. Under the first part he wants to give relief of three pies in income-tax to people whose income is up to Rs. 10,000. How does it work? According to the figures supplied in the 'Explanatory Memorandum' itself, up to Rs. 3,500 there will be a saving of Rs. 20 a year. At Rs. 4,000 it comes to Rs. 26; at 5,000 it comes to about Rs. 35 and at Rs. 10,000 it comes to about Rs. 120 or so. Does he seriously expect that by giving this relief from Rs. 20 to Rs. 150 he is going to make these people save a lot of money and put them in new enterprises? I consider this is merely a sort of eye-wash, or a token if you like. It is not a token we want now. We want actually something substantial by which we can attain what we want. On the other side, let us see what these people are put to. I may say these people who belong to the middle class go to the mills and buy fine cloth for their apparel. If you calculate the cloth which they purchase for their use paying the excise duty that is proposed, it will come to about half the relief that is given. In addition they will have to pay higher prices for sugar and betel-nuts which are commonly used by many in our part of the country. Then they have to share in the higher duties on motor spirit and tyres. In these days when people have to live far away from their place of business, motor transport is very important. Travel in buses will become costlier and transport of goods by lorries will also become costlier. If we add up all these additional charges I do not think the relief the honourable Minister proposes to give will mean anything. As a matter of fact, the burden that is going to be thrown on these people will be more than the relief proposed.

But that is not all. These are people who are not very badly off. The relief that is sought to be given is to people who are getting Rs. 3,500 and upwards. In other words, these people have an income of Rs. 300 a month and upwards. But the burden which he proposes to impose falls not only on these classes, but also on those whose income is very much less. This is a proposal which in calmer moments we cannot accept. Not only that. If, as I said, the Federated Chamber of Commerce approves of the Budget, it is partly because of the relief they get and partly because of the trend that is shown or the token, as he himself puts it, about the future of the tax-set-up of our country. The choice has always been between direct taxation and the indirect taxation. If we mean anything by what we have agreed upon in the other Assembly that income ought to be fairly distributed and wealth should not concentrate in a few person's hands, it can only be done by direct taxation. If you are going to have indirect taxation, the burden will fall on every body, the rich as well as the poor. Everybody has got to contribute; there is no question of equalising income or wealth. Equalisation of wealth and income can only be done by direct taxation. To reduce direct taxation and replace it by indirect taxation is a method, which I do not think ought to be accepted, after we accepted what we did in the Constituent Assembly.

On other matter about Dividend Limitation Bill. I said the other day that I do not at all consider the limitation as unfair. Six per cent. for new companies and average of two years provided for the older companies is very fair indeed. But my objection is with the incidence who is suffering and who is affected by this limitation? Ninety per cent. of the people who have got shares in these companies are small men who have a few shares. I may in this connection state one experience of mine in a mill in which I happen to be connected. I found, there were five representatives of the Managing Agents and two outsiders including myself on the Board of Management. I said it was very unfair and there ought to be at least a majority of outsiders. After some arguments, they accepted. We went through the list. What did we find? Except us two, there was nobody else qualified to be a director. That shows the way in which the shares are distributed. The shares are distributed among a large number of small men, men with small incomes. If you are going only to touch them, what happens? It is only they who will suffer and you would not get on the other side, the managing agent in whose hands all the money will be free to play with and to expand the business or use the money in any way he likes. That will be the position to which we have come. (Interruption). Just one or two words about the controls and I will close. As I have said the proposals only lead to the substitution of indirect taxation to direct taxation. Also the other proposal with reference to the bigger income is also very objectionable, for these reasons. I find from a list that has been published by one of the Chambers of Commerce that incomes above a lakh and a half come to only 499 persons and the amount of two crores and odd is to be distributed among these people. As my honourable friend was saying, if those people with this huge income are a few, how are they going to invest their money; they will have to invest them somewhere; they cannot take it away. It seems to me.....

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): Five hundred persons getting more than a lakh must be much more than five crores. You said two crores?

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: I said the total relief is two crores. For those people who have got an income of 1½ lakh and upwards which come to only 499 persons according to the figures supplied to me by one of the Chambers of Commerce, two crores of rupees are going to be distributed among them. What I am asking is. Is it fair? Is it necessary? I am opposing it. It is quite unnecessary that relief should be given to these 499 people at probably the rate of about 1 or 2 lakhs each with the result of throwing the burden on the poorer people from whom in the shape of cloth excise and sugar excise and other things are taken. It is very unfair.

As regards the controls what has the control led to? Let us take these two cases of sugar and cloth with reference to which these proposals regarding excise duties are proposed. Well, within the last eight months of last year, I am told the mills in Ahmedabad alone have made something like 75 crores of rupees in profits and incidentally, they have put in about ten crores of rupees in the pockets of the managing agents. Speaking for Coimbatore about which I know better; about three or four crores of rupees have gone to the mills and about 75 lakhs of rupees have been earned as commission by the Managing Agents. This is what the controls have led to. What happens? The prices are put up. Even with regard to the sugar factories, we saw this morning an answer was given in which it was stated the profits which were eight lakhs last year have increased to 17 lakhs on account of this control this year. That was the answer given by the honourable Minister in charge. Well, these huge incomes have been accumulated at the expense of the consumers. I will say one more thing and that is if you are going to limit the dividends, in many cases it will happen that not only the small investors will be affected, but also the workmen, because according to the award given by many of the arbitrators, there is a link between the dividend that is given and the bonus that will be allowed to these workmen. So, if the dividend is restricted, automatically the bonus is also restricted. So, the sufferer is not only the small shareholder, but also the worker. That is how it is affecting them.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: May I remind the honourable member, it is very embarrassing to me. Already the honourable member has taken 27 minutes. From 2-30 to 2-47 it is 17 minutes and before lunch he had ten minutes and in all he had 27 minutes.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Just a minute or two, Sir.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: I might myself be liable to this temptation possibly after I got down from this Chair. But it is rather inconvenient. I am thus preventing other members from having their due share. Honourable members will therefore bear this in mind. Personally I have the least objection to allow any length of time.

Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: Only a minute or two, Sir.

Then the question may be asked how the gap is to be filled. For that, if only honourable members will look at the budget that is presented, in several matters, the revenue is under-estimated with reference to the revised estimates and in one or two other matters, expenditure is over-estimated. Not only that; as my honourable friend, Pandit Kunzru stated, no credit is taken for the economies that are bound to be effected as a result of the labours of the Retrenchment Committee and also the need there is for retrenchment in the expenditure of the Governments. If these things are taken together, they will probably cover the whole of it. If as I say, the income-tax relief of five lakhs and odd is not given and if on these three items the savings are effected, it will more than cover the deficit that is expected. There will be no need for any increase of these indirect taxes, and thus throwing the burden so much on the poor people.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: Professor K. T. Shah.

I should like to enforce strictly the time-limit. I am giving sufficient information of this in advance, to every honourable member. Let me not be misunderstood.

Prof. K. T. Shah (Bihar: General): There is a custom of commencing such remarks as one has to offer on the budget with a volley of congratulations presented to the Honourable the Finance Minister on having submitted a brilliant budget. I am afraid I am no great believer in such a convention. Even so, if I were called upon to concentrate attention on his manner of delivery, on the comprehensive survey he has placed before us, and on the frankness with which he has admitted of having passed "sleepless nights and sleepy days". I must say I would have no hesitation, not only in congratulating him upon himself passing sleepless nights and sleepless days too, but on making me and others pay sleepless attention to what he might be saying on the proper day. Now that the day has come, now that he has put forward his long awaited expose of the country's financial position, and the economic situation, on the contents of that speech, on the detailed material and information presented to us, I am unable to follow that sacrosanct convention of presenting my compliments on a golden salver to the Honourable the Finance Minister. (An honourable Member: 'Gold is costly'.) Gold is made costly by inflation by themselves. If it is costly, I am all the more willing not to have gold or even silver for the matter of that, in this exchange of compliments.

Sir, the speech of the honourable Finance Minister is replete with assurances in a heavily pontifical style, and with remarks like, "I am satisfied" "I have convinced myself". In the remarkable passage in the peroration, for example, of his budget speech, he has said, that in laying these various burdens upon the various classes, he is satisfied, and the House must accept his assurance, that he has laid them on proper shoulders, and that he has made equitable demands upon all classes. I am not quoting the exact words of the honourable Minister, but I think he will not dispute that I have given here the sense of those remarks. But such assurances ex cathedra,—how much are they worth, speaking for myself, I find that the budget speech, like the Curate's egg, is good in part, not on the whole. (An honourable Member: 'Question: Not even in part?') If that is so, then it is not good at all. But I would be charitable and admit that it is good in parts.

It is a melancholy spectacle that, so many years after the war has ended, the excuse of the war is still trotted out to tell us why the situation is so depressing, and why deficit is inevitable, and has continued, to the extent that it has continued all these four years after the end of the war. I am aware, that democracy is a costly proposition; and democracy of the type that we are having is bound to be more of a luxury than elsewhere, because, perhaps, we are not experienced, because perhaps we have commitments suddenly thrown upon us, perhaps we are faced with problems which no forethought could have prevented. I am willing to make every one of these concessions. Also, in my great regard for the principle of democracy, in working political institutions, I agree certain expensiveness or extravagance is inevitable especially when all interests have to be satisfied. But when all claims have been met, and therefore, a steady growth of expenditure has become inevitable, are we simply to resign ourselves to the inevitable? India to-day has a great leeway to make up in a good many directions, in social reform and in economic re-building. The present Government has launched on a variety of schemes, which will, no doubt, yield results at a convenient moment.

For all that I am grateful, and I fully recognise the necessity for increased expenditure such as the Finance Minister and his predecessors have had inevitably to provide for. But even after making all these admissions, and even after giving the fullest recognition to the circumstances that be set them, and the problems that faced them, I am afraid that that close scrutiny to economy, that full attention that we should have expected from a seasoned economist of the ripe standing of Dr. Matthai is not visible in this presentment of the budget that he has placed before us.

On an earlier occasion Dr. Matthai was pleased to tell us that if he went back to his old profession, and had to put forward his old views and doctrines of economics, he would have hardly any conviction to present. I am sorry to note that at so early an age he should have been so utterly disillusioned, that he should have to say that he will not be able to teach doctrines that he once had at heart with any degree of belief or conviction. I do not know whether I should congratulate him, or condole with him. But I am myself unable to shed those convictions, however, impracticable they may sound. Ministers, and particularly Finance Ministers, are but the creatures of circumstances. That, Sir, is a fruitful excuse. But I should have thought that lesser man might trot out that as an explanation of his own lack of ability, but not men of the level of Dr. John Matthai. I should have thought that men of his stamp should have been able to mould circumstances to meet their requirements, rather than be victims of those circumstances, and hold that the circumstances have been stronger than themselves.

Sir, I have no desire to trespass upon the time of the House or its patience. But if you look at the various items and estimates presented to us; if you scrutinise the figures that have been given to us with regard to the various items of revenue and expenditure, you will find there is hardly any art of budgetting visible, any foresight noticeable in estimates that the Honourable Dr. Matthai has presented. Take the single item of Customs and Excise Revenue, or take Income-tax, or the Corporation tax. Take any item you like, on the revenue side. And I may add, it is the same position on the expenditure side also. In Customs Revenue, the budget estimate and revised estimates show a variation from 87 crores to about 117 crores. In a single year, in about ten months, you have the budget estimate thrown out of order by something like 47 per cent., or more. This you will find throughout, and we find again and again, on the expenditure side. And what is the explanation? "This thing was not foreseen," "that thing could not be attended to", "this was forced by circumstances". I tell you, if that be the prevailing tune, if that is the rule of conduct for Ministers in administering their departments, if that is the standard by which they are to be judged, they and their performances, I am afraid that the Ministers will not be doing their best by the country.

Circumstances are strong, no doubt. Circumstances are very powerful, and may make it impossible in spite of the best of efforts, to make the estimates correspond very nearly to facts. This may be an excellent excuse when the war was on. But with war gone West these four years, without any famine, without any sudden cataclysm, to upset their calculations, the present budget with such wide variations, does not, I am afraid, give any evidence of good budgetting. There seems to be lack of prevision, lack of close attention, lack of careful calculation in sufficient to tell you that there is at least a watchdog's attention to the finances of the country,—I mean no disrespect—which makes you feel that all is not for the best in this kingdom where Dr. Matthai reigns.

I could take up hours in pointing out the lack of any art of budgetting in preparing this budget, that one would have expected from an economist of Dr. Matthai's standing. I have personally not the slightest doubt about the close attention and careful study that Dr. Matthai is capable of giving to a task like this. I have known him in other connections. I have worked with him in other subjects, and over problems requiring no less attention to details. But I must say that the Matthai of those days who used to be so painstaking, so laborious and meticulous in regard to details, seems to have been changed in the "sleepness nights and sleepy days" that it has been his fate to undergo. (An honourable Member: "Age"): I do not think that I can call myself a younger man; and, therefore, it is not for me to say that he is o'd. Nor do I feel that Dr. Matthai is one who would submit to the ravages of 3 P. M. age to the extent of ignoring or neglecting his duty. I personally am quite sure that if, as I hope, he is spared for twenty more years, age will not tell itself on him. And whatever may be the substance of my remarks hereafter, I certainly and sincerely say here and now, that as far as his ability is concerned, I have not the slightest doubt in his capacity.

Let me now come to a few salient points in the actual Budget that is now before us. On the expenditure side, Sir, you find that it is steadily growing. There are several items in which the excuse has been put forward—this could not be foreseen, that could not be noticed, that there was a sudden calamity and we had to meet it, and so on. A good many of these may be quite true; a good few of these have some substance, but consider this, I think. On the Army side, an increase of 25 or 30 crores of rupees as between the Budget and the revised estimates on the Defence Stores side there is another increase of 21 crores. The explanation that the Honourable the Finance Minister has been pleased to give us is: the Kashmir operations. I could not find from the various papers supplied to me what exactly is the actual cost of the Kashmir operations. I have not been able to discover that even by putting questions; for in answer it is said that it is a matter of high policy, and that it is not in the public interest to give this information to this House. It may be true!

But I do not think that the whole of this increase in the revised estimates—an increase of something like 46 crores—is ascribable to the Kashmir operations alone. The Honourable the Finance Minister may, of course, be "satisfied" about the assurances he has given us; but for my part, I remain somewhat sceptic about these explanations.

The Kashmir operations were, in fact, going on for four months before the Budget was presented. And if that is so, is it for the Honourable the Finance Minister to tell the House that no provision could be made because the "extent and duration" of this could not be foreseen. I do not think it is treating this House with sufficient respect; I do not think it is treating the country with sufficient respect, to come here and tell us that this could not be foreseen, even though the operations were going on for four months before the Budget was presented.

What is this budgeting, Sir, again I ask? In Stores and Supplies alone, in a total budget of Rs. 25 crores, there is a sudden increase of something like 80 per cent. or more, raising it to 46 crores. I am not sure that I will be voicing the sentiments of a majority in this House if I were to say that the whole Defence expenditure needs very close scrutiny. We were given to criticising the Defence item of the Budget year in year out when there was foreign rule. The presence of our own Ministers, the presence of our own Government, does not essentially change this fact, in my opinion, however, much I may be in a minority in thinking so.

I am a pacifist, and make no secret of it. I feel also that, situated as we are, if we desire to maintain our independence, it is necessary to have some Defence provision. But let our provision not be such, as to make it appear in the least degree to be a menace to other, or expose us to the hostility of others who may have aggressive intentions.

This is a very serious matter of policy into which I do not wish to go just now. But there is one characteristic of our Defence expenditure, in contrast with that in other countries, which I would like this House to think seriously about; and I would beg my honourable friend the Finance Minister and his colleagues in the Cabinet also to think over very seriously. In all countries of the world, the last war and the one preceding it—so called war to end war—have left an aftermath of increased unproductive expenditure on the maintenance of the defence forces. And we, perhaps, being in the situation in which we are, cannot be an exception to it.

I fully recognise that. But at the same time, in other countries, they have resources and equipment by which they can meet all their requirements by their own efforts. They are able to meet all their Defence expenditure by a mere transfer of money from one pocket to another within the country itself. On the other hand, we have to import a great deal of our requirements from other countries. The danger of it does not lie merely in borrowing, or getting the things by other means. The danger is much greater and lies deeply buried. In this age of standardised production, once you import a machine from a country, you will have to be dependent upon that country for all the parts and accessories of that machine. As honourable members know, present day Defence is a highly mechanised affair, and too complicated for me to deal with. But we stand on an entirely different footing from other industrially advanced countries like America which during the war used to put out a ship in two days. For us, therefore, the burden of the Defence expenditure lies not only in the budget figures, but in the insidious character of that expenditure in that we are dependent on foreign sources. It inevitably draws us into the vortex of world politics. It inevitably draws us—whether we like it or not—into alignments of two warring camps, one of which may be for the present sympathetic towards us. But who knows how long we may be friendly with them hereafter? Who knows at what time the call of blood may become stronger than all the other ties?

I will try to be as brief as possible in bringing out the facts. I will now pass on from the expenditure side to the revenue side, which is the really dictating factor for the revenue side has to meet the expenditure side. The various sources of taxation, or the various means to make up the gap which the Honourable the Finance Minister has suggested to us make me wonder if the honourable gentleman was speaking to us with his heart in the right place, or in the wrong. He is actually admitting that, on the current estimates he would have a deficit of 15 crores. And yet he is giving further relief to the industrialists and to those people who have super-abundant income. And this in addition, to those who do not earn through the sweat of their labour. These are the people to whom he gives relief. And to counter-balance this large relief, he is laying a 50 per cent. increase on postcard and 33-1/3 per cent. increase on envelope. How can the Honourable the Finance Minister tell us that he is satisfied with these proposals, that he has done justice to the poor, that he has been equitable and fair to everybody? I for my part refuse to admit it. Without charging Dr. Matthai with any lack of intellectual honesty, I do believe that Dr. Matthai himself does not believe that this is an equitable budget which he has presented to us.

Consider these figures, Sir. He expects 15 crores of revenue from the postcards at three pice a postcard. At the present rate you will get 52 postcards for a rupee, and he expects that for 15 crores 480 crores of postcards will be sold, which means that for a population of something like 35 crores in this country each person will write about 15 postcards at most a year. This means a little over one a month or if you distribute this between letters and Postcards in proportion of 1 to 2, this would give perhaps one letter every two months. This increase has been made to be able to give relief of ten per cent. to people who can afford to pay super-tax on an income of 2-1/2 lakhs and more a year.

I have never been able to understand the justification for this, in a country which has been led by Mahatma Gandhi till now. It may be said that they have been forced by circumstances to do this, and that the circumstances have been stronger than they expected. Even circumstances cannot justify, in my opinion, the laying of a duty on cloth, the laying of a duty on food, the laying of a duty on tobacco, the laying of a duty on communications, the laying of a duty on any kind of instruction and education or whatever they can get hold of.

It is not only the Central Government which is responsible for laying such burdens or which is the only sinner in this regard. It is the provincial governments also, and the Municipalities or District Boards. The Central Government sets the model for the provincial government, so that, if you are tired at the end of the day and seek some relaxation or recreation in a cinema house, there you will have to pay the entertainment tax. If you want to turn on the electric light and have a little reading enlightenment or amusement you must pay the electricity tax. You have got in many provinces even a sales tax, so that if you buy two rupees worth of anything, there is a sales tax on it. So that where the Central Government gives up, the Provincial Government comes in, where the Provincial Government gives up, the Municipalities come in; and where the municipalities give up the District Boards come in. There is a whole series of taxation, and one does not know where one authority ends and another comes in.

One could have expected such a Budget from the hands of the Finance Minister whose great sympathy for the capitalist or industrialists class is known. But from a former Economist, this Budget is unacceptable. He has also increased the depreciation allowance which they never use; and on their super abundant income he is unwilling to charge the maximum supertax. It means a relief of two crores to the richest class consisting of a few hundred individuals, at the expense of the poorest class consisting of hundreds of millions. This is a kind of budget which I confess I cannot excuse in a Liberal of the standing of Dr. Matthai. This is a kind of budget, even in spite of expectations which the Government of the country, led by such large-hearted, warm-blooded, deep thinking nationalists and liberals, and other members more extreme than the Liberals, cannot ask us to accept, on the simple grounds that they have "satisfied" themselves, and that nothing could be more equitable, nothing could be more just than the proposals which they have placed before us.

I would rather have expected or welcomed that they should have left a certain portion of the deficit uncovered, than that it be covered by such burdens. There is no need for them to charge the postcard extra to get the two crores out of that, for it is getting blood out of stone, pennies out of the poor man. There are today only five crores of people in the country, who can lay claim to the barest literacy; and they do not write on an average more than ten or twelve letters a year. And yet the Honourable the Finance Minister asks them to pay 50 per cent. extra on their postcards, and 33 1/3 per cent. extra on their envelopes. And to add insult to injury, he tells us that they are going to be conveyed by air. As if there were aeroplanes enough, as if there were runways enough, as if there were personnel enough for every village to be connected by air. I ask Dr. Matthai to tell us whether in this country, where there is hardly 5,000 miles of air route, where there are 700,000 villages or is it now 500,000 and there are many thousands of towns,—I ask him whether he is prepared to say that, within 12 hours every letter posted anywhere in India will be delivered at its destination. The facts are quite to the contrary. If write to the Prime Minister by air, with an express delivery stamp, on a Friday from Bombay the Prime Minister does not get my letter till the following Monday, and that by air mail with an express delivery stamp. I am not concerned just now with the great efficiency or the lack of it of our postal, telegraph or telephone services. I dare say that these increased charges will make them more efficient. But that efficiency if it is going to be helpful, will help Big Business who have urgent communications to make by sending their letters by air-mail. They will also be helped by the removal of the surcharge on the air mail letters, whereas the poor man is made to pay an extra quarter anna on the postcard and an extra half anna on the letter. Our nationalist Finance Minister is not content with what Raisman did but he out-Matthai's himself when he restores war time post-card of 9 pies, even enough Raisman had introduced the six pies post-card. This increase to nine pies, even though he has no excuse for war-time needs is indefensible. Raisman had it in a war-time budget. My honourable friend the Finance Minister has no other excuse beyond saying "I could not foresee this. This is unexpected. It is circumstances which have forced me." If you are going to plead circumstances to that extent, I for one have no alternative but to say that, if your budget is to be judged by the contents with which you have presented it, and not by your personal knowledge, and integrity, I am afraid it will be condemned unreservedly.

Shri T. Prakasam (Madras General): It is an unbalanced Budget at a very critical time. It is not called an unbalanced budget in plain terms but it is unbalanced. There are two topics which have to be dealt with as the burning topics of the time. One is the high prices and the other is what is called inflation. Each is dependent on the other. Inflation is known proverbially as making the rich richer and the poor poorer. This Budget instead of trying to get over inflation is also calculated to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. That is the position in which the budget stands.

I am anxious to place a few facts before you, before the honourable Minister and the honourable members of this House so that they might consider them having regard to the conditions under which this inflation has been brought about and into which the millions of this country have been plunged and whether there is any little chance of getting over it by the remedies provided by the Honourable the Finance Minister. I do not think the situation can be saved by any mild measures. If you wish to save this country, if you wish to save the millions of all classes your policy must be a different one altogether. Let us go to the root cause of this inflation. Who is responsible for the higher prices, who is responsible for this inflation? I say it is the Government that is responsible for the high prices and it is the Government that is responsible for this inflation.

Inflation has come along with the war into our country. Inflation gave the opportunity to the English people who were in charge of this country to enhance the circulation of currency notes by printing them in a most unwarranted manner and under most unjustifiable circumstances. I shall just give figures of the currency notes printed before the war.

In 1937-38 the notes in circulation were 182.19 crores.

In 1938-39 the notes in circulation were 174.39 crores.

In 1939-40 the notes in circulation were 198.13 crores.

The general index number of prices was 125.6.

In 1940-41 the notes in circulation were 223.03 crores.

The index number was 114.8.

In 1941-42 the notes in circulation were 287.48 crores.

The price index number was 137. ...

In 1942-43 the notes in circulation were 513.44 crores.

The price index number was 173.

In 1943-44 the notes in circulation were 777.17 crores.

The index rose to 236.5.

In 1944-45 the notes in circulation were 968.69 crores.

The index number was 244.2. ...

In 1945-46 the notes in circulation were 1162.64 crores

The index number was 244.9. ...

In 1946-47 the notes in circulation rose to 1212.52 crores.

The index number was 266.4.

In 1948 the notes in circulation were 1214.20 crores.

The index number rose to 390.1.

Thus it will be seen that from 174.39 crores in 1938-39 the notes in circulation have come up to 1214.20 crores. Year after year there was such an enhancement in the printing of these notes that from 174.39 crores in 1938-39, when the war broke out, by 1948 it has come to 1214.20 crores. I put the question to you and to the Honourable the Finance Minister when the circulation of notes has increased to such an extent, by over Rs. 1,000 crores, that is a liability that has been cast upon this country. How to discharge this debt? What is the good of simply talking of grow more food, this one and that one and similar things? (An honourable Member: "Growing more notes"). The other day one question was put to the Honourable Minister on the floor of this House whether he could not cut off this note circulation in one lump as it had been done in other countries, so that the root cause of this inflation would be first removed and the country would become free. The reply came straightway "No". So lightly it was disposed of. When currency notes had been printed and put into circulation in the manner in which it had been done before 1948, seeing that the persons who did it were going to leave the country, it is a legitimate demand of the people of this country to ask as to who is responsible for this debt. And what is the value of these currency notes I am asking you.

In 1930-31 it was that the gold standard was declared off. Before that time the currency notes of India had the backing of the gold behind them and there was a guarantee. The English Government was very clever to get over the trouble that was impending upon them at that time. That was the time of the first world economic distress. With a view to meet their own troubles there they first wanted to get rid of this gold standard liability. The reason was well known. It was not only Britain that did it. Germany did it. Gold had disappeared from their vaults. They had to pay to America the debt which they had contracted for the first world war and so their treasury became empty. If the notes were presented before them they had no backing and the country would be declared insolvent. So Germany put up a notice at the Reich Bank gates "Don't present the Reich Marks which we have issued until now; we have no gold in our treasury; all that has been transferred to America; do not present them because they will be dishonoured". So the German Marks became useless. Hundreds and thousands of the German Mark notes were flying in the streets of India in those days.

With regard to Great Britain she was on the verge of ruin along with Germany. Germany became literally bankrupt. England was about to become bankrupt. At that time they had this weapon of forging anything at any time to save themselves as against the poor people of this country. It was Sir Samuel Hoare or some other person who introduced the Gold Ordinance. It was declared in that Ordinance "so far as India is concerned we would give not 20 shillings as usual but 28 to 30 shillings for a pound". That was a temptation thrown before the unfortunate millions of this land and the millions were thirsting to sell away the little gold they had. What was called distress gold with the labourer, the agriculturist, with the women was all collected by some of the magnates, by the rich men of the land, and exported to Britain so that it reached them in time. Otherwise England also would have put up the same notice board which Germany had put.

These currency notes were brought into existence by the British people who have left us. This liability is one which must be repudiated by the people of this country. I for one would repudiate it. I will call upon my people to repudiate this liability. I tabled a Resolution in this very House for the repudiation of the liability of the country with regard to these currency notes. But the Rules of this Government and the Prime Minister's convention that those Members who sit in the Provincial Legislatures should not come here shut me out. I do not know what happened to that Resolution until now.

Therefore, this is the way in which this inflation has been brought about in this country. In all fairness, the Honourable Dr. John Matthai and his Government headed by the Honourable Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru should repudiate this debt. They should claim this amount from the English people who brought these notes here and foisted them upon our head.

The next point that is known to every one of us but to which we have become so blind and so inconsiderate to ourselves and our country's interests is that growing expenditure is primarily responsible for adding to this inflation. Instead of doing anything to remove this inflation, to reduce its course, they have been adding to the expenditure. To military expenditure which was already top-heavy, over 34 crores and odd have been added and to civil expenditure 48 crores and odd. When can there be a chance, I ask the Finance Minister and every one of the Ministers on the Treasury Benches, when can we have a chance of getting rid of these liabilities, when can we have a chance of giving food and cloth to the unfortunate people who are suffering, whose name we mention here every time? What are the poor people left with? Not a ghost of a chance. I am talking as a friend. I am giving constructive proposals in order to meet the terrible situation in which the country is drifting.

There should be no mistake about this matter. What is being done now? We have some balances, what are called "sterling balances", in London. What are we doing with the sterling balances now? I have got a very serious complaint about the method that was adopted for dealing with the sterling balances. Sterling balances accumulated in our favour. We were debtors to Britain until the war was declared. After the war was declared it was that their imports into this country decreased; our exports increased; the balance came to our side. The whole of that account was treated as Sterling Balance to our credit. It was our hard earned money—468 crores or some such thing it comes to. It was our hard earned money that is mixed up with war debt, converted into sterling. This country was called upon to pay that war debt. We repudiated—you remember; you must have been one of those who walked into jails—uttering the words of that departed soul Mahatama Gandhi, "This war is not people's war; the cause they are fighting for is not people's cause; they are not liable to pay for any of these things". Uttering those words, after resigning the Ministership and coming into the streets, we walked into jails. Now, what is it that has happened that the war debt has come to us? We repudiated it and we went into jail; we suffered; we made sacrifices. Now that war debt is claimed by the English people as also partly our debt. Their claim is that we must pay half the debt and they will pay half the debt. They had our accounts in their hands. Two accounts were opened: No. 1 and No. 2. In number 2 account our own earnings were entered. We were fully entitled to those things—426 crores—the value of the goods supplied by us. Instead of that being paid to us, they mixed up all that and the whole thing was converted into what was called a "war debt" and a "sterling loan debt". This has been forgotten altogether by the two officials who had gone all the way from here to London to settle this sterling balances dispute. One was Narahari Rao and the other was Shaumukham Chetty. These two gentlemen went there and they would not refer to any of the points I have been stating to you and to the honourable members in this House. They went and entered into one agreement. That agreement was extended by three months first; six months later; now they stand adjourned till 1951. I am glad that has not been closed and that has not been accepted by us as a final binding. The whole of that has to be reopened and re-settled on the basis on which we are claiming. Until that is done, how will we become liable for anything at all here and what is this Budget which the Honourable John Matthai is preparing? I am requesting him; I am appealing to him to go into all these things closely, item by item, and examine whether the steps taken until now are correct ones and whether this Budget can be called a Budget of this country, a Budget of this Government, for the benefit of the people, on behalf of the people. It is not. I respectfully request the Honourable John Matthai and his Cabinet of Ministers and the Prime Minister to examine the whole situation and discover the truth at least now and then give relief to the unfortunate people in a different manner altogether. People are holding their breath, waiting for your Constitution, waiting for your elections, for justice to come some day or other. Those days are receding everytime, because we have been indulging in our own ways, taking our own time. That is the position so far as the Budget is concerned.

[Shri T. Prakasam]

I would not wish to ask for extension of time in this matter, but there is one point I must refer to. The Finance Minister was good enough to say that our Sterling Balances were declining. He pointed out how 121 crores decline came up first; he pointed out how over 17 million declined secondly; and thirdly he pointed out how in one stretch over 553 crores decline came up. The decline is coming. The decline is coming, with a vision which I can command I am telling you. Decline would be coming, perhaps in the same manner in which decline came upon Dalton, the Chancellor of the Exchequer of Great Britain. On August last year or the year before last, he said: "I declare suspension of the agreement between America and ourselves and suspend all our engagements." He said for one day they were losing 13 million dollars; he said for five working days it had gone to so many millions. So, I am telling you we cannot continue this. You will be facing that situation if you continue to go on in this manner.

With all the ignorance that all of us could command here, we have become helpless; we cannot reach you; we cannot convince you. You have got a contempt for those opposite to you. That is why I am trying to put it in the best manner possible, to enable you to understand, with these figures, constructively, so that you will save this country. A country's honour can be saved only by doing the right things in proper time and also by commanding the confidence of the country. The confidence of the country you cannot command unless your administration in the country, not only in Delhi but in the provinces also is properly carried on. If you allow mal-administration to be carried on in the provinces, knowing pretty well that things have gone wrong there, all that would affect upon you and you would be held responsible ultimately for the sufferings that the people have to undergo for years together.

In the Madras Presidency there has been a charge pending against the present Ministry for over a year now. Throughout the year no redress could be got for any of the charges. No reply could be got. Even the Provincial Congress Committees and the Working Committee passed resolutions demanding an enquiry into those charges, but no enquiry was forthcoming. But I may tell you that the one feature of this whole administration, the Prime Minister, he is there. In spite of all his troubles, in spite of all his burdens, he is so quick to understand; he understood the thing; he condemned both in Madras and here the administration in that particular place, but yet he has not been able to do anything.

Do you think that people will be dead for all time to come? You must not think so. You must make the administration pure; you must clear the atmosphere; you must command the confidence of the people in the country. Until you do so, you cannot ask them to confide in the budget.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): The Budget that has been presented by the Honourable the Finance Minister is the second Budget of free India. Its merit has, therefore to be judged from a common man's point of view, the point of view of the man in the street. It will not be an exaggeration to say, that the first reaction of any person studying the Budget is that the common man is being hard hit by it. It is a rich man's budget; it is the Budget of an industrialist, of a businessman. It is not the Budget of a poor man.

Now, in order to cover the deficit in the Budget certain taxation proposals have been incorporated and we have to see how these taxation proposals hit the poor man. By the imposition of a duty on coarse and medium cloth the poor and middle-class man is affected. It may be said that is a very small amount, but you can imagine what one pice on every five annas means to a poor man. Again, the imposition of petrol duty will lead to retardation of movement of goods. If I have not misunderstood the custom and excise duty imposed is six annas a gallon which is very heavy. As you know, transport is one of the bottle-necks and today one of the factors which is responsible for the inflationary situation in the country is lack of adequate and suitable transport facilities. In fact, it is the motor transport that is serving the major portion of this country, both in the matter of conveyance of passengers and the transport of goods. The imposition of this levy on petrol is bound to tell on the poor man's pocket. Again take the case of betel-nut. It is not a luxury item. It is the necessity of the average man in the street. It is said that the imposition of the duty on betel-nut will not affect the grower. But there is somebody else besides the grower.

The raising of postal rates from one anna six pies on covers to two annas, and from six pies on post cards to nine pies, is a measure which is certainly bound to tell on the poor man. This enhancement of rates has been done, not to cover the deficit, but to give some relief to the industrialist and businessmen. Why? Because, as the Honourable the Finance Minister, said the business world, the capitalist the industrialist has got no confidence to invest in the undertakings. But what has been our experience for the past two years. This is not the first time that relief has been given to the industrialist. In fact, the policy that was inaugurated by Mr. Liaquat Ali was reversed by the first Chetty Budget and substantial relief was granted to the capitalists. But what is the response? Has the money market situation improved in any respect on account of these concessions? We find that the Government's calculation was that it would be able to get Rs. 150 crores on loan from the market. It found that it could not get more than Rs. 55 crores from the rich investors. On the other hand, look at the middle man's savings. Response to investment in the Postal Savings Banks and National Savings Certificates has been beyond the expectation of the Honourable the Finance Minister. The inevitable conclusion, therefore, is that the capitalist and the rich man will not help the cause of Government.

How, then, does this Budget help to fight the monster of inflation? Shri Prakasam just now gave us an approximate idea of the currency in circulation in the country. In 1939, the total quantity of currency in circulation was Rs. 174 crores. By 1948 it had expanded to over Rs. 1,200 crores. What does this expanded currency represent? In fact, it is the purchasing and the lending power of the community. By what method can you fight inflation. Either you must increase production or you must contract your currency. So far as increasing production is concerned, it can be done only on a long term plan. You know what food imports mean to this country. During 1947 we had budgeted for import of two million tons of food grains at a cost of Rs. 110 crores, but we were compelled to import 2.8 million tons, at a cost of Rs. 130 crores. What is the Budget provision for food grains in the present Budget? It is said to be four million tons. Calculating at the price at which imports were made in the last year, we will find that we will have to pay about Rs. 180 crores for food grains. How does that affect our international position? We are daily consuming more and more dollars and the dollar deficit has been of a very alarming character. We find that in 1948, in the six months April to September the dollar deficit was to the extent of 45 millions and out of these 35 million dollars we had to pay for food grains. In the last 3 months of the year 1948 our dollar deficit is expected to the tune of 48 million. Out of these, 40 million dollars are on account of food grains. The situation therefore is gloomy. How can you meet it? At home you can intensify the food production campaign which will bring about a short term improvement in our international position. But are we doing so? We have the spiral of rising prices here. In regard to this the Honourable the Finance Minister has stated that the rising tendency has been arrested by the anti-inflationary measures taken by the Government since October 1948. But are these measures sufficient? Is there any certainty that the inflationary tendency will not recur in a very alarming form in the near future?

Therefore, the question is how are you going to counteract it. Either you must contract your currency or you must produce more. So far as production is concerned, it is a long-term affair. So far as the contraction of currency is concerned it is for the Government to consider what steps it should take. In reply to my question on this subject the answer given was that the Government had no intention of resorting to such measures. We have to look far ahead. If the industrialists or the capitalists are reluctant to put the black-market money in circulation and are adamant, the question arises whether you will allow the present alarming position to drift or whether you will try to meet the situation by some approved methods? My respectful submission is that we have before us the experience of several countries which have successfully tided over an economic crises of this character in a short time. Look at Belgium; look at Norway and look at England. What was the position of Belgium. In 1946 the deposits in her banks and the currency in circulation were three times what they were before the war, in 1939. The Belgian Finance Ministry took certain anti-inflationary measures which included an order that all currency notes of the face value of 100 francs and above should be surrendered and thus stabilised the prices and the wage-level commensurate with the purchasing power of the people. The Finance Minister also blocked 60 per cent of the deposits in banks and allowed the transfer of the remaining 40 per cent to the current account. The result was that in 1947, production shot up to the pre-war level and in 1948 the financial condition of Belgium improved to such an extent that she refused to accept Marshall Aid in favour of the countries who were worse hit. A similar situation existed in Norway and there also similar steps were taken by the Finance Minister. All currency notes over the value of one or two crowns were declared invalid and the Government froze 40 per cent of deposits allowing 60 per cent to be used for production. Some such step must be taken here in India if we are serious about counter-acting inflation. Otherwise, inflation will create big problems and it would be difficult for us to meet them.

There are so many labour disputes in the country. Why is it so? The wages of the labourers are not able to keep pace with the rising prices and that is the cause of the disputes.

[At this stage Mr. Deputy-Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shrimati G. Durgabai (one of the Panel of Chairmen)]

If you stabilise the prices at a particular level, then it will be possible to meet the labour situation and if there are no strikes and no disturbances, production will increase under industrial peace. The position which exists in India today is identical with that which existed in Norway or Belgium. Here also the figures show that the bank deposits are swelling. The demand liability of Scheduled Banks which was nearabout 150 crores has risen to 634 crores in December 1948. Similarly the time liability has also risen from 103 crores to about 300 crores in December 1948. Similarly again currency which was in December 1939 standing at 241 crores has risen to 1188.20 crores in December 1948. The ratio of currency and deposits in the banks is thrice the pre-war level. Here also there is similarity to the conditions which prevailed in Belgium and Norway. It is for the Government of India to consider whether the time has not come to take some steps in the direction of successfully meeting the inflationary conditions in India. Without such drastic steps I do not think it will be possible for India to fight this monster of inflation which has invaded the economic condition of the country. With these remarks I resume my seat.

Mr. Chairman: Before I call upon the next speaker, may I request honourable members to strictly confine to the time limit laid down?

Shri C. Subramaniam (Madras: General): We have heard the third Budget speech. The first was an interim budget and this is the second full fledged budget. In my view, merely looking at the Government finances alone would not give us a correct idea of the conditions in the country and therefore in order for the House to appreciate the real situation in the country, it is necessary to give us what I would call a 'National Budget' along with the Government Budget. Government is, after all only a means to an end. The entire Government system is only for the purpose of enforcing the national policy. If that be so, first we have to understand the national situation before we give our judgment regarding the instrument which is controlling these national resources. So I would request the honourable the Finance Minister and the Government to give to this House and to the country at an early date, a complete picture at what position do we stand regarding our national life, regarding our productions in the various industries and in the various sectors of national activity. Only then, we will be able to know what we have what would be our requirements and in what way we have got to improve. So, in that view, I feel that we will not be competent to pass judgment on the real situation in the country with only the figures given to us regarding the Governmental finances.

It has been stated that the fight against inflation is the main preoccupation of the Government. I agree, but I am sorry to say that we are not at all satisfied with the way in which inflation is being tackled. Experts in various fields were consulted for the purpose of eliciting their opinion in regard to the fight against inflation and one of the recommendations made was that there should be a drastic economy in the Governmental expenditure. All avoidable expenditure should be avoided. The Government accepted that recommendation, but have they implemented it? They did not look into their administrative expenditure and they did not care to find out what are the expenditures which could possibly be cut out. As a matter of fact, an Economy Committee has been appointed and it has submitted its report also. But as far as that is concerned, they have completely ignored it but the first thing the Government did was to find out which are the developmental schemes which could be postponed or dropped. I submit, they have started at the wrong end. It is not as if those developmental schemes are not necessary for the welfare of the country. On the other hand, the honourable the Finance Minister himself has stated. 'The House should realize that it was not without regret that we decided to hold up even temporarily the various schemes of development, the execution of which is necessary for the wellbeing of the country'.

If these schemes of development are necessary for the welfare of the country, did the Government take care to find out in what other matters and to what extent there could be economy in the administrative sphere? Without going into that matter at all, useful schemes of development have been held up, simply because they did not care or did not want to bring about economy in other fields. So I say the wrong end has been chosen and even now, no assurance has been given to us that economy will be effected in the administrative field in the near future during the next year. We have got to see that the Government tackles this problem of inflation properly.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [3RD MARCH 1949]

[Shri C. Subramaniam]

One other factor, I wish to mention with regard to this fight against inflation. It is stated over and over again that it is a matter of surplus spending power in the hands of the people which is the cause of all this inflation and rise in prices. I have gone to the rural parts in my province and I can say that the surplus amount of money in the hands of the people is restricted only to a very few people, but the vast majority of the people in the rural areas and also the poor people in the urban areas, they are as before. It is not a question of their having any surplus money in their hands. Even now they are unable to purchase their daily rations, their weekly rations and they have to borrow even for that sometimes. They have even to forego the rations which they have to get every week. That being so, this question of surplus money power is only in the hands of a very few people. I would say, perhaps one or two per cent. of the population. With the rest of the 98 or 99 per cent. of the population, it is not a question of surplus money in their hands. This inflation is merely the result of paucity of goods. Therefore, if you want to tackle this problem of inflation, it is not a question of surplus money in the hands of the people, but one of scarcity of goods, one of production and there is not sufficient production in the country. The Government should tackle this problem of production before they think of withdrawing the surplus money in the hands of the people and in that way that problem could be tackled and that is the only way. If the Government is merely taking measures to withdraw the surplus money in the hands of the people, without tackling the problem of production I am afraid, they will not be solving the problem at all. For the purpose of increasing production, the Honourable the Finance Minister has given in this Budget various reliefs. Are not these reliefs enough to the capitalists, in whose hands the means of production are today. They are not content with these reliefs, but they want further assurances. It was said that assurances are wanted regarding the nationalization policy of the Government, regarding compensation which would be paid in case of nationalization and also control. Have not sufficient assurances already been given? The Deputy Prime Minister, speaking the other day in Madras, categorically stated that even if we wanted to nationalise it would not be possible to nationalize the industries in the near future. What further assurances the capitalists want, I do not know. Is it that we should take out the word "nationalization" altogether from our programme? Even if we give this assurance now to them still they should remember that we are committed to a democratic system of Government. Suppose we give this assurance, is it binding on our successors? Certainly not. As long as the capitalists live in a democratic India, they would be bound by the decisions of the majority in a democratic country with a democratic legislature. Even if we give an assurance that there will be no nationalization and that they will have not only just compensation, but something more than that even then, will it be binding on our successors in this legislature or in this House? It is further said that there is something in the new constitution which frightens the capitalists. This Constitution is not unalterable and with a certain majority it could be altered. Therefore, if the capitalists agree to live under a democratic Government, they will have to face the situation as it is. They have got a free hand in the industrial field now. It is not possible for the Government even if they want to, to nationalize the entire industry. Therefore, having regard to these existing circumstances, is it not the duty of every capitalist in this country to see that production is increased? Should they be insisting on further assurances, imaginary assurances, which may not help them at all and continue saying: "We are shy." We are facing a great crisis. We want strong men and therefore, I say, if they feel shy, we have to replace them, that is all. It is not as if because we have love for these capitalist or we have faith in the capitalistic system that we have allowed these capitalists to operate in the industrial field; but it is because under the existing circumstances, it is not possible and desirable to displace them. That being so, it is necessary that they should fulfil our expectations and if they do not fulfil those expectations but go on saying: We are shy because you are talking of nationalization; we feel shy because nationalization is your ultimate ideal, then the only course for the Government is to see whether these shy creatures should continue to hold the field or it is time to get them replaced. After all an agency has got to be judged by the results. The private enterprise in this country is on its trial. If private enterprise does not fulfil the promises, does not fulfil the expectations, we would be justified in replacing that agency by some other agency which might give us what we want.

In this connection I would like to refer to the attitude of labour also. Labour, it is said, is discontented. But who is not discontented in this country now? Everybody is discontented. The capitalists think that their discontent should be attended to first. Labour think they are entitled to priority. And between these two, they want a monopoly. It looks like a husband and wife quarrelling when the creditor comes to collect his dues. We should not forget that every industry is for the good of the nation as a whole it is not merely for the capitalist, nor is it merely for the benefit of the labour. It is for the entire country. Therefore the Government should take up a policy which would be beneficial to the country, and not merely one of sharing of the profits between capital and labour. I do not mean to say that labour is not entitled to its rights. Most certainly it is entitled to its rights, and Government is granting labour its rights. But in spite of that, it is being formented in certain labour circles that labour is not getting its dues and, so labour must fight for those rights, even go to the extent of paralysing the nation. That kind of thing is not desirable and should stop.

If we want to fight inflation, the only course to do is to increase production and for that you must have a firm policy and say that capital and labour must co-operate and work together. Till we pass the crisis, there should indeed be no question of dispute between capital and labour.

I have only one more point to mention, I will leave off the rest, since time is short. The next point I have to mention is about the controls that are in existence now. We should see if these controls increase production, and whether they are for the benefit of the country. Taking first, the food control, as far as its working in my part of the country is concerned, I can say that it is working to the detriment of the country, and against good production. In my own district, because the cost of production is so high and the controlled price so low many landlords find it uneconomical to grow food grains. I have heard many landlords saying that they will not grow any food grains as long as the controls last. It is quite a different thing when we have state-farming or co-operative farming. But as long as the present conditions continue, we must see that there is as much production as possible. There could not be as uniform policy for all India. We must have some system by which freedom is given to the provincial governments to adjust things as far as the provinces are concerned. When we approach the provincial Government they say that the Centre is very strict about it and that they must enforce the procurement as laid down by the Central Government. Under the present circumstances, food control and the total procurement system prevalent in various parts of the country stand in the way of greater production. It has to be looked into and adjusted so that there is more and more production by landlords, whether big or small. As the Deputy Prime Minister remarked, in Madras, corruption follows control. It may look all right on paper, but in actual working there is a lot of difficulty and corruption. A certain degree of autonomy should be allowed to the provinces in working the procurement and rationing policy. Once the allotment of quota of food grains is made to them, the provinces should be able to work out distribution and procurement according to plans best suited to them.

Shri B. Shiva Rao (Madras: General): Before I proceed to offer a few observations on the budget, I would like to deal with a preliminary point. A few days before the presentation of the budget, we were led to believe that with the budget papers would be circulated reports from the different Ministries giving the salient features of the administration of each Ministry during the current year. These papers, I am sorry to say, have not yet reached the Members of the House, and I am bringing up this point in the hope that before we give notice of cut motions at any rate, these papers will reach us.

In the course of the speeches which have already been made, there has been reference to one striking point in the budget speech, and that is the striking variation between the original budget estimates presented last year, and the revised estimates contained in the budget presented now. Pandit Kunzru, somewhat briefly, and Prof. Shah more elaborately dealt with this point. And if I refer to it, it is only to remind the honourable the Finance Minister of a promise which was tentatively made by his predecessor last year, and that is, to set up, with as little delay as possible, a research and planning section in the Finance Ministry. That is I think of the utmost importance. I know that the Chancellor of the Exchequer in England is willing and indeed would be glad to provide facilities for training three or four promising young men from the Finance Ministry in this country, and I hope that Sir Stafford Cripps' offer will be accepted by the Finance Minister promptly and gratefully. I am referring to this variation between the original estimates and the revised estimates for another reason, and that is to indicate that there is nothing sacrosanct about the forecasts for the coming year, contained in the budget, more especially because my honourable friend has made no allowance at all for economies as a result of the working of the Economy Committee, nor for reduced expenditure under the heading "Defence". So far as the work of the Economy Committee is concerned, I think the proper costume which the Finance Minister should have worn is not a lounge suit, but sack cloth and ashes. If he had been candid to this House, he should have come forward and told us that this Committee has been a complete flop. Last year when his predecessor made a token cut of Rs. 2½ crores, Pandit Kunzru very properly took him to task for unduly under-rating the possibilities implicit in the work of the Economy Committee. This year, profiting perhaps by the experience of his predecessor, Dr. Matthai has been discreetly silent on that point. I am referring to this matter because I think it high time that he did something positive about it. I would suggest for his serious consideration that the various interim reports of the Economy Committee, referring to the several Ministries should be submitted to the respective Standing Committees of the Legislature, and a prompt decision taken, after the House has risen for the Budget session. If necessary, let these Standing Committees sit day to day until the task has been completed.

On the subject of Defence expenditure, I would remind Dr. Matthai of the promise, also made by his predecessor that as soon as normal conditions began to develop, with the cease-fire in Kashmir, he would have the defence expenditure scrutinised, possibly by a separate Committee; and I would like Dr. Matthai to consider whether the defence estimates could now be submitted to a subcommittee of the Standing Finance Committee. I think that would be a very useful practice and would lead to the development of a full-fledged estimates committee of this House. I am laying stress on this point because while previous speakers have spoken on it only from the standpoint of economy, I am looking at it from the standpoint of the work that is being done in the Secretariat.

Anyone who goes round the different Ministries at the present moment would be struck with one fact that is the steady and serious deterioration both in the quality and the quantity of work done in the Secretariat. There are many reasons for this but I think the situation is much more serious than the House has realised. I know that several officers, senior officers, of ability, experience and integrity, are only looking forward to the time when they can retire from the Government of India. I am afraid it is true that there has been a tendency on the part of more than one Ministry to set at naught the established practices in regard to recruitment and promotion of people in the Secretariat. Men who have been thrown out for proved misdemeanour by the findings of the Public Service Commission have been brought back and given responsible positions. The effect of all this is devastating on the morale of the thousands of people who are working in the Secretariat. This is an aspect of the problem which I think members of the Cabinet would do well to ponder over.

Shri B. Das: They have no time.

An Honourable Member: Which are the Ministries?

Shri B. Shiva Rao: I could not give the details.

Let me now pass on from the work of the Economy Committee to the allied subject of which my honourable friend the Railway and Transport Minister is in charge and that is the reorganisation of the Secretariat from the standpoint of work, not excluding, I believe, even the Cabinet. Last year at this time several of us had suggested that there should be a redistribution of portfolios among the members of the Cabinet and that leading members of Cabinet and in particular the Prime Minister should release themselves as much as possible from the routine problems of administration in order that they may concentrate on the co-ordination of work inside the Government and on the expounding of policies outside. That, I think, is a point which deserves the urgent attention of my honourable friend Mr. Gopalaswami Ayyangar and since he has not completed his task I would venture to put before him and before the House one or two concrete suggestions.

It seems to me that the time has arrived for the separation of Works from Mines and Power. That was a recommendation of the Coalfields Committee two or three years ago of which my honourable friend the Commerce Minister was a distinguished Member. The report of the Coalfields Committee has argued in a convincing manner a case for the separation of Works from Mines and Power including in the latter category, viz. Mines and Power, (as has been done more appropriately in England where the Ministry is labelled Fuel and Power) Coal, Oil, Electricity and Hydro-electric Power. I think the Ministry of Works should be reduced in size and I feel I would be failing in my duty if I did not express the very general dissatisfaction felt by many members of this House with the present functioning of Works, in the W.M.P. Ministry. I think the time has come for infusing into it a new spirit of research, possibly through new personnel.

Attention has been drawn during the last few months, at question time particularly, to the scandalously slow disposal of surplus stores and on this matter

[Shri B. Shiva Rao]

I would like to say this: that although disposals is a part of the Ministry of Industries and Supplies the Minister himself in charge of that subject is not the only culprit. He is not even the principal accused; because on the one side there is the Defence Ministry which takes an unconscionably long time to declare such stores as surplus to their own requirements and on the other side is the Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation. I took some pains to collect some figures in regard to the working of the Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation so far as disposals are concerned and the figures are astonishing enough. During the last twelve months the Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation has imposed a ban on the sale of surplus stores covering goods, I am told estimated at anything between 50 and 80 crores. But what has been the actual purchase by this Ministry during the first three months of 1948-49? Their purchases amounted to Rs. 14,000 and I believe that during the rest of the year the total purchase does not aggregate even a lakh or two. Therefore I would suggest that the disposals, where there has been a criminal waste of most valuable capital goods worth crores and crores of rupees, should be taken out of the Ministry of Industry and supply and possibly amalgamated with the Board of Scientific Research. (An Honourable Member: "With the Board of Scientific Research?") That is a very small section at present administered by the Prime Minister. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: "So that at least the unopened parcels will be opened!") So far as food is concerned we have already had a debate in this House about three or four weeks ago and it is not necessary to cover the same ground again. But the only point I would like to make on this occasion is that since a policy has been laid down and it is hoped that it will be carried out firmly without any vacillation, Food may best be entrusted to a Board of senior and competent officers with much greater powers than the Ministry of Food has over the Provinces. I refuse to believe that the Food situation is quite so desperately serious as we are often made to believe. I have a shrewd suspicion that provincial governments in order to escape the embarrassment of procurement deliberately understate their production. Speaking for myself, I take the strongest exception to 33 crores being set apart in the coming year as subsidies for the importation of food and as bonus on procurement. I would like the Minister for Food and Agriculture to consider whether it is wise to embark on such large expenditure and hand over 33 crores to the provinces unconditionally. If a subsidy is to be given, I would link it up with the measure of co-operation that is really forthcoming from the provinces in rationing and in procurement.

So far as the Ministry of Relief and Rehabilitation is concerned I think it is psychologically wrong and financially ruinous to let the Ministry continue in its present state. I would rather combine it with the Resettlement Directorate of the Labour Ministry and call it by a different name—the Ministry of Social Welfare or some name of that kind—because I think it is wrong to perpetuate the term 'refugee' for all time. (Shri R. K. Sidhva: "They have substituted the word 'displaced' person.") That is as bad as the word refugee.

There is one last point which I would like to make before I sit down. I do not feel that the Finance Minister has taken a sufficiently serious view of the position ahead of us or it may be that he has considered it prudent to conceal his fears regarding the immediate future. I feel that financially and politically the situation is extremely serious at the present moment and we cannot afford to live indefinitely on our dwindling resources. We must do every thing possible to reduce and stop the import of food from outside and we should do all we can to build up our Dollar resources. During the Railway Budget I emphasised a point which I had made last year that every thing should be done to stimulate tourist traffic into this country and I feel the Ministry of Industry and Supply can also do a great deal by encouraging the export of cottage industry products to countries like America. I mention this because unless you reverse present tendencies both in the financial and in the political fields, next year or the year after we shall feel we are dangerously near the precipice.

India at the present moment is undoubtedly the most important country in Asia and just for that reason we are at the present moment inviting to ourselves the attention of subversive forces from outside which would like to make administration as difficult as possible. The present Government, both at the Centre and in the Provinces, came into power after an era of preaching disaffection against the established order. On the other hand our present leaders have held out great hopes of a speedy betterment of the social and economic conditions of the people on the achievement of independence. If we are frank with ourselves we must admit that while on the one hand the mentality of criticism of the government persists, there is also widespread discontent and disappointment that the higher standards of life which have been promised do not seem to be round the corner. I feel that these subversive influences of which I have just spoken are doing everything possible to exploit discontent for their own ends. And the point to remember at the present moment above all other points is that we cannot think of any better set of men to take charge of the administration of this country, whether at the Centre or in the Provinces. If the confidence of the masses in the present administrations is rudely shaken, the alternative is not another set of men to take their places because, as I have said, there can be no better set of men, but the alternative I am afraid is complete loss of faith, not only in this Government, but in all constituted governments. That, I suggest, is not the mood to encourage in the people on the eve of the introduction of a permanent Constitution.

Sardar Hukam Singh (East Punjab: Sikh): Several eminent economists have spoken on the subject and I must confess I have no pretensions for that status. I will speak as a layman and tell the House the reactions that an ordinary man must have got about this Budget. The first reactions of a layman to this Budget are as have been stated by one or two honourable Members here, that it does not give any relief to the poor though it extends certain concessions to the rich. But we have to understand the difficulties that our Finance Minister has described and view the whole thing in the circumstances that exist at present. In our own country, as has been observed by our Finance Minister, as in most other countries in the post-war period the major problem has been that of keeping the inflationary trends under control. These trends, we have been told, were due to the surplus purchasing power in the hands of the community. My friend, Dr. Subrahmanyam, has doubted that and he has told us that it is not so so far as villages and other places are concerned. But I believe that it is one of the greatest factors that is causing this inflation. As a result of the war, purchasing power increased considerably while the available supply of commodities in the post-war period was not enough to meet all those demands. This Budget, so far as I can understand, has been framed with that object, that is, to fight those tendencies. We have been told that during the year 1947 there was a steady rise in prices and during 1948 there was a steep rise of about 100 per cent. It is agreed that the only solution to this inflation is to encourage production, to bring in more commodities that are required and to reduce expenditure. We will just see from this Budget whether we are really proceeding towards the desired goal.

During the last war we were told that a substantial increase in production was not possible in the near future, and from the present Budget as well we do not think the prospects are so bright. At such a moment those who are experts and economists tell us that we should try to increase our revenues and curtail our expenditure and that spending power should be decreased. Several methods have been suggested in this connection by so many speakers. One of them is the contraction of currency. The gentleman suggesting it also gave the answer of the Government that it was not possible to do it just at present. The other two methods, that is, encouraging production and reducing expenditure, are being tried for the last two years. This is the third Budget which is being presented here with this end in view. The first one of 1947-48, it is advocated by certain gentlemen, had an adverse effect on our production. That has also been doubted by some gentlemen, but I believe that that Budget was presented with a proper motive, and that hit the business community most. The level of taxation in that Budget was so high that it retarded the growth of industries and stunted our development altogether. This was realised when the Budget of 1948-49 was being presented and certain reliefs were extended to the industrialists and to other concerns. Some of these reliefs were that the abatement level was raised from one lakh to two lakhs, the tax rate was reduced in the case of the Business Profits Tax, and certain other concessions were also given. But the desired effect could not be achieved in spite of that.

As has been said, we wanted money and Government floated a loan but that was not subscribed to. The capitalists and those who had money did not come up voluntarily and part with the surplus money they had. I believe this has also been affected by the partition of the country. I can say with confidence that the part that has been taken away from India was very rich, very flourishing. We had great businessmen there, large concerns and factories, though so far as Sind and West Punjab are concerned numerically Pakistanis were in a majority, but so far as business was concerned it was entirely in the hands of non-Muslims, who have now left those homes and come over to this side. Now, you can very well imagine what a refugee's Budget would be like. It would be a zero Budget. So you cannot expect such a man to contribute anything towards any loan. The other citizens also have very little to spare, because the ordinary man's economy is such that he has to spend most of his income on buying, I should not say food, because that would include ghee, vegetables, pulses and other things, but cereals alone. Ninety per cent. of his income is consumed in buying wheat or rice. Very little is left with him to spend on other things. If I may say, ghee is a luxury now for an ordinary man. So you cannot expect such a man also to contribute anything towards loans or savings schemes. The concessions, as I said, that were given during the last Budget did not produce the desired result and I am afraid the temptations now offered may also fail so far as our object is concerned.

How then could the Finance Minister make up his revenues—by taxation, direct or indirect? He has given certain reliefs and those have been criticised by honourable members that this is rather giving more concessions to those persons who do not deserve at all and it is on the other side and the Budget does nothing for the poor man at all.

As my time is up, I shall come to taxation directly. The first encroachment made is in postal rates. It is certainly very offensive and directly hits the poor. It is no consolation to the poor man that his postcards and covers would be carried by air. In the first place, very few places are connected by air and there would be no significant reduction in the time taken. Secondly, the ordinary villager is not so much concerned with the time taken as with the cost incurred. So this change cannot be welcomed by anybody. If salt duty can be abolished on sentimental grounds, the postal rates should not have been increased on psychological grounds. The surcharge on liquor is quite welcome and even increase of surcharge of fabrics containing silk or other luxuries may not be grudged, but the raising of duty on furniture, clocks and watches may affect the middle class people. The increase in import duty on motor spirit from 12 annas to 15 a gallon and the raising of the excise duty as well would adversely affect the poor man, because the combined effect of the duty on tyres would be to make travelling more costly. Not only that. The duty on sugar is increased. Additional duty on cloth is imposed and even coarse cloth is not spared. What is the result for the poor man? He is already groaning under heavy prices of food. We have not given him any relief, nor is there even a ray of hope of our doing so in the near future. We have to offer him apologies and excuses, but this cannot save him.

Shri Krishna Chandra Sharma (U. P.: General): I have great pleasure in congratulating the honourable the Finance Minister for presenting a surplus Budget, because it was an unavoidable necessity in the time of inflation to avoid a deficit Budget, but this is only the equilibrium of expenditure and revenue. The story does not end here.

There are some definite features of modern society and any activity—political or otherwise—has to be judged in relation to them. I am not an experienced man in life like my learned friend Pandit Kunzru, nor have I a profound knowledge of the theories of economics like Prof. K. T. Shah. My task is one of taking the facts, marshalling them, adjusting them to the accepted principles and judging how far they are in consonance with them; how far they do not fulfil the essentials of conforming to accepted rules and therefore defective.

Two constructive forces are working in the modern world. Firstly, there is immense production of articles of consumption. Secondly, humanitarianism, namely, the cry of the common man, the care, the feeling, the concern to uplift him. Any activity—political, social, economic or otherwise—has to be judged from the standpoint of these two outstanding features of modern society.

Taking the production side, the Finance Minister has done well to help industrialists in so far as capital goods, starting of new machinery, new factories and new productive methods are concerned. It will help to produce articles of consumption of which we are greatly in need and we might be able to meet inflation much sooner than expected.

So far as humanitarian aspects are concerned, I am sorry to say that the Budget is defective in that respect. In other progressive countries the tendency of late has been to impose more of direct taxes than indirect, because money is centred in the hands of a few. They are not its rightful owners. It is the very large number of people who work in the field, who work in the factory and who work in other capacity, who are the legitimate owners of this money. But on account of maladjustment of economic forces, one tenth of one per cent of the population have with them the major portion of the wealth of the country. The tragedy of the situation is that those who have got the smaller share of the wealth contribute the utmost for its production. The tendency, therefore, in the progressive countries of the west has been to impose direct taxation on the monied classes with a view to rectify the maladjustment of distribution of wealth. The money realised by such taxation is spent in subsidising articles of consumption of the poor, such as food, and in affording them free education, medical relief and such other things. It is also utilised for giving gratuities to those whose income fall below a certain level and with which it is not possible to live with a minimum standard of life. Of course, we cannot expect the Finance Minister to work miracles. But what is wanted and what should be aimed at is a slow and steady progress in the direction I have indicated. In that way alone you can win the confidence of the common man. One has to remember that gradual progress does not mean standing still.

The greatest need of the hour is the winning of the confidence of the peasant on the field and the worker in the factory, because they are the people who are to build the future of this great country, not the millionaire on whom these concessions are bestowed. Nor is it the intellectuals like my respected and learned friend Professor K. T. Shah. What he can do is to draw up a plan; but the man who can contribute to give shape to it is the worker. Unfortunately, the confidence of the common man, I respectfully submit, has been rudely shaken. It is not the imposition of a small duty on cloth or the enhancement of the import duty on fine cloth that really matters. I for one do not share the view of people who say that the peasant has been hard hit and that he is starving; nor do I agree with them when they say that the worker is under-clothed and under-fed. Nothing of the sort. The peasant is the happiest man in India today. What was the state of affairs before the war? Hardly 60 per cent. of the working classes could secure employment on rupee one per day. Now, a worker earns Rs. 2/8 per day. While he was finding it difficult to get employment for himself, all the four members of his family are employed now. That means, as against his pre-war family income of Rs. 2½ per day he is now earning rupees ten per day. Even taking it for granted that the cost of living index number has gone up by 400 per cent, the manual labourer is now definitely better off. So, neither the peasant nor the worker has suffered in any way by inflation.

Nor am I worried about inflation as such. On account of expansion of currency, prices have gone up. This would not have happened had there been a corresponding increase in production. At any rate the inflation has not in the least affected the peasant or the worker, and they are not in any way worse off to what they were in 1939. By raising the duty on cotton, on post-cards and envelopes you laid an extra burden on the common man and to that extent your budget is defective, because in the present day we want a dynamic economy, not merely an equilibrium of expenditure and revenue. This could easily be adjusted by any clerk in an office. The need of the hour is a dynamic economics of social purposes. But the Budget is not designed in that direction and the common man will feel bitter against you, because you have broken his confidence, the confidence with which he looked to a Free India. The greatest danger is that the Budget has given a handle in the hands of those whose intention and determination it is to break your organisation, your present structure of the State.

Taking the question of inflation it is not so nerve-racking a matter as it has been shown to be. I shall cite the instance of France after world war I. In the beginning money was increased and the Franc lost 4/5 of its value. But the testing point is not whether the prices have gone up but it is whether the people are hoarding the commodities as against the money. So though the Franc went down 4/5 in value the French Finance Minister held out and France passed through the currency crisis easily. So this crisis in our country will pass on. The country is not going to be ruined and the only thing to be done is to rally the people round you, so that they can work in the fields more honestly and consciously and in the factories with greater vigour and make your social programme the success that you desire it to be.

The Assembly then adjourned till a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 4th March, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) DEBATES

(PART II.—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS)

Friday, 4th March, 1949

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(See Part I)

11-45 A.M.

PAPERS LAID ON THE TABLE

REPORTS OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY DEPARTMENT, PETROLEUM DIVISION, GEOLOGICAL SURVEY OF INDIA, INDIAN SCHOOL OF MINES AND APPLIED GEOLOGY AND CENTRAL ELECTRICITY COMMISSION

The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil (Minister of Works, Mines and Power): Sir, I beg to lay on the table a copy of each of the following Reports,* namely:

- (1) Administration Report of the Printing and Stationery Department, 1941—47,
- (2) Administration Report of the Petroleum Division, 1942 to March 1948,
- (3) General Report of the Geological Survey of India for the year 1947,
- (4) Annual Report of the Indian School of Mines and Applied Geology for 1947-48, and
- (5) Annual Report of the Central Electricity Commission for the year 1941—47,

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Sir, the honourable Minister in charge of Works, Mines and Power has laid on the table five thick volumes of over 500 pages. That means that it will have to be published in the daily Proceedings. It is the practice of this House that whenever any papers are laid on the table by any Minister of the Government, they are published in the day's Proceedings and if a Minister lays all his departmental annual Reports on the table that means considerable expenditure to the Government in printing the Proceedings. Of course they can lay their Ministry's Reports. This is a point of view which I would like you to consider.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I shall consider that question later.

ESTATE DUTY BILL

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): Sir, I beg to move.

"That the time appointed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the levy and collection of an estate duty in the provinces of India, be further extended upto the 31st March, 1949".

*Not printed in the day's debates. Copies placed in the Library of the House.—Ed. of Deb.

[Dr. John Matthai]

A few days ago, I asked the House for permission to submit this Report by the 4th of March, but since then we have had two more meetings and we found there are still certain matters that require further consultation and further examination. I hope, therefore, that the House will agree to the Motion that I have made.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That the time appointed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the levy and collection of an estate duty in the provinces of India, be further extended upto the 31st March, 1949".

The motion was adopted.

THE GENERAL BUDGET—GENERAL DISCUSSION—con'd.

FIRST STAGE—cont'd.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao (Madras: General): The Budget presented by the Finance Minister has received a mixed reception in the country. Though he is a creature of certain circumstances over which he has no control, being a leader of a Government charged with the duty of stewarding its finances, he is expected to control the circumstances instead of becoming a creature of it. He has to canalise the difficult influences that assail a Finance Minister in enabling him to balance a Budget. One cannot but come to the conclusion that he is too much influenced by the orthodox way of balancing his Budget.

With all the assistance which the Finance Department has got of expert advice, which is a very costly advice seeing from the salary bill, the Revised Estimates for the current year show such an amazing disparity between the budgeted amount and the estimated amount. With an occult capacity to somehow find the expenditure for any windfall that may have fallen to them, the Department have very wisely shown the expenditure to the tune of Rs. 80 crores for which they had not originally budgeted at all. I will not imagine that their estimate has gone off the other way about; instead of having a surplus of Rs. 80 crores, the Budget has gone down by Rs. 80 crores of deficit. What would have happened to the Government of India and how would they have faced the deficit? Therefore, I want to say that in these estimates, which seem to be empirical by the results, one should not be carried away by the feeling that a small deficit of Rs. 20 crores should be somehow or other filled by taxing the poor.

The Finance Minister has been very kind towards the industrial and capitalist class who have struck work since 1946. In the year 1946, when Sir Archibald Rowlands presented his Budget, he presented a lump sum, a decent amount of Rs. 80 crores, of the excess profits tax to these industrialists with a view that they will plough back that amount in industry and improve the standard of life of the masses. But it was a disappointment. The figures have shown that hardly Rs. 20 crores have gone into new investment. They have not come into new investment but the financiers and industrialists tell us the reason why they have not been able to re-invest their money into the industry. They throw the blame on the statement of the Ministers, on the disturbed conditions of the country in the year 1947-48, and say that there is no clear policy for the Government of India, that some members speak of nationalization, some others speak of socialization of all the key industries of the country, and that therefore the investor has not got a sense of security in ploughing back the present, made by Sir Archibald Rowlands of the Rs. 80 crores, into industry. Even with that amount you can see how far the production has fallen. I would quote from the figures that have been recently supplied by the President of the Federation of the Indian Chambers of Commerce which is holding its session since yesterday. He says:

"Production of cotton textiles which had reached a figure of 4800 million yards in the peak year declined to 3600 million yards. The production of steel from 1.2 million tons came down to .9 million tons and in 1948 it has further gone down to .85 million tons. The production of cement has come down from two million tons to 1.5 million tons in 1948."

How far the industrialist have co-operated and have made good the opportunity that has been given by a previous Finance Minister, these figures amply prove. The tax reductions which the honourable Member has promised in the coming year to these industrial magnates have to be properly availed of and the goodwill shown should be cashed properly by these industrialists. The Resolutions passed by the Federation of the Chambers of Commerce yesterday have accepted the offer in the spirit in which it has been made but they have not got one word to say about the tax burdens which have been imposed upon the poor in this country. I want to say that it is not necessary for you to increase all the small duties on the poor people. The excise duty on cloth, on sugar, on motor spirit, and the import duty on betel nuts, are not necessary because cloth is a commodity which is used universally, especially medium and coarse cloth—but it has not escaped the notice of the Finance Minister.

With regard to sugar, it is considered an article of diet which is absolutely essential for the caloric heat content of the body. You say you want to improve the standard of living of the toiling masses. A larger number of the people of the lower grade incomes are coming to use sugar. The very fact that your railway grainshops give a compulsory ration of a certain quantity of sugar per head for every member of the railway staff argues that the Government have realised that sugar is being considered as an important article of diet among the lower income groups.

With regard to motor spirit, the tax was lowered in the year 1946 by three annas; now you have restored that tax. I want you to realise how it affects the poor man. The majority of the people in the country use motor transport in the villages and now they will be hard hit. Every gallon of petrol is expected to carry over about 15 to 20 miles by bus and for every journey made by a passenger of 15 to 20 miles he has to pay an extra duty of three annas for his travel. Not only that; a large quantity of goods are carried by motor trucks over long distances, distances covering 400 to 500 miles at a time. All these commodities will now have to pay a higher price in proportion to the duty that has been imposed on motor spirit. Therefore you are hitting the ordinary consumer who has to depend for his travel on the motor lorry and for his consumer goods on motor transport.

With regard to postal rates, that is a psychological thing that will tell very badly upon the Government. You might have created an advantage of quick delivery of mails for only a very limited number of people belonging to the business community, who will again transfer that surcharge to the consumer direct in their expenses. But the poor village people who depend on a postcard will at once say that this is not a Government which is being carried on in the interests of the people. Every little item of tax that has been newly imposed hits the poor man in such a way that it will give a handle (Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: "They will think Government lives in the air!") it will give a handle to every discontented political agitator in the country to go about and proclaim that this is not the Congress Government, that this is not the Government intended to help the people, but this is the Government of the rich people, by the rich people and for the rich people. Therefore, I want you to consider this aspect.

[Shri M. Tirumala Rao]

No doubt, you have given a subsidy by way of reducing the tax on aviation petrol. Development of aviation is absolutely necessary for strategic and defence purposes of this country, but you cannot tax the poor man and transfer that tax to the relief of the rich who are the main users of the air-lines, both as passengers as well as for transit of their freight.

I suggest one concrete measure. Apart from the sentimental attachment which you have for the abolition of salt duty, I want you to consider the point whether you cannot revive the salt duty. We are consuming 500 lakhs of maunds of salt and even if you put a tax of Rs. 2 per maund you will get nearly Rs. 10 crores. There is no use of protesting always by the revered name of Mahatma Gandhi. We have modified our plans, we have changed our principles even, when we thought that it is in the best interests of the country. Was it not Mahatma Gandhi who insisted on all this control being lifted? He argued with the Government of India and saw that the controls were lifted early last year. But now, in the light of experience gained, in the light of the universal effort of black-marketeers and greedy merchants to defeat the controls, the Government of India and the Provincial Governments have come to the conclusion that they cannot act by the advice of Mahatma Gandhi. Therefore, you are now re-imposing all the controls in the best interests of the country. So also on 500 lakhs of maunds of salt consumed by 35 crores of people, if a tax at the rate of Rs. 2 per maund is levied for the whole year, the incidence of the tax will be so light, so invisible that it will not be felt at all by the people.

Shri B. Das (Orissa: General): Thank you for your courage to say that; and I agree with you.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Yes, Sir.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi (Madras: General): It is post card psychology.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: My friend Mr. Bharathi says it is post-card psychology. He and I are neither rich nor poor; we are hanging in mid-air, but our lot is more with the poor who are in the majority than with the rich who are in the minority. Therefore, I say that the salt duty can be revived without any violence to Mahatma Gandhi's tenets or feelings or ideologies.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Question. He said when he became insane he will revive it.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: Then there is no coordination between the provincial taxation and the central taxation. Provincial Governments are going in their own way. For instance, Madras which has taken an unduly enthusiastic interest and adherence and attachment to prohibition has adopted prohibition at one stroke, losing a revenue of Rs. 17 crores! They want to benefit the poor man by abolishing drink, but in a direct way they are now putting their hands into the pockets of every poor man by taxing his pepper, by taxing his chillies, by taxing his coconut. Coconut is an article of food in the extreme south, where people use coconut oil in place of til oil. They eat coconut in their food and now coconut is being sought to be taxed. In Bombay electricity is being sought to be taxed. They are going to tax the primary article of cloth again by way of sales-tax. Cloth produced in Bombay will have to pay sales-tax in Bombay. When it is exported to Madras it has to pay another item of sales-tax in Madras. Again, when it goes into another province, sales-tax is collected for third time. It is taxed thrice and the ultimate burden is borne by the poor man who wears the coarse and the medium cloth.

Therefore, provinces, in order to balance their Budgets are having recourse to these injurious ways by taxing the poor people. The Central Government has also done the same thing. Are you not indirectly helping the augmentation of inflation which you are trying to control today? The Government of India has not taken any concrete steps so far to control inflation. On the other hand, you can rest assured that your policy is going to add to the inflation. In our Constitution we have provided for a Centralised Government for purposes of safety, for purposes of defence. Now for purposes of economic safety and even distribution of the tax burden on the whole population, you should immediately bring into existence a Taxation Enquiry Committee which was envisaged as early as 1946 and was not acted upon by successive Finance Ministers. I want you to see that the provinces are not going in their own way with regard to taxation, but should have a coordinated plan, so that the incidence of taxation is not felt by the poor, especially now, when in the formative stages of our country's Constitution, in the early stages of our freedom, Governments cannot easily estrange the poor people, nor can they allow a sort of glaring misunderstanding to be created in their minds that these Governments do not care for their welfare. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: "Hear, hear") With regard to Defence expenditure which is a huge item of 150 crores, the books that are given are a maze of figures which it is not possible to understand for anybody. We have developed the system of Standing Committees. The Standing Committee for Finance is capable and competent to look into the general expenditure on Budget, but the Budget figures are so vast and complicated that we should not be burdened with the task of going into the Defence expenditure also. The Standing Finance Committee for Railways is quite competent and it has developed a sort of tradition behind it that looks to the Railway Budget and scrutinises all the items of expenditure year by year. Why not have a similar Standing Finance Committee—I want to make a concrete suggestion—for Defence composed of members of this House, which will look into the Budget of 157 crores or so and scrutinise what is happening? I may honestly tell you that one Defence Minister cannot bear the burden of this huge Department. This is an important Department, as important as the Ministry of Home Affairs or the States Ministry or Ministry of External Affairs. Therefore, leaders of front rank, people with following in the country, leaders of big political parties with a past and a high political status in the country, must handle this portfolio with the assistance of a Standing Finance Committee to which the Defence estimates and Budget of every year should be submitted for scrutiny and examination.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable Member's time is up.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I am coming to a close. One more minute, Sir.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have given sufficient time. The honourable Member must conclude.

Shri M. Tirumala Rao: I am coming to a close, Sir.

One more suggestion I want to make. The history of the Food Department is not quite happy. On the food debate many of the honourable Members have spoken out their minds. I do not know what is in the mind of the Cabinet, but I do think that they are seriously considering the giving of a new orientation to the Departments of Food and Agriculture and see that the huge drain of our resources by way of subsidy to the tune of Rs. 40 crores is stopped by producing more food.

Shri Ramnath Goenka (Madras: General): The honourable the Finance Minister has rightly enjoyed a reputation for honesty, integrity and sincerity and for being a friend of the common man. So far as his reputation for honesty, integrity and sincerity goes, it is fully justified by this Budget, but so far as its reputation for being a friend of the common man is concerned, it has been belied by this Budget. The budget, I regret to have to say, lacks inspiration and it does not give a definite lead to the country. It does not indicate either the present economic or financial plans, or the future plans in relation thereto.

The budget has been said to be a surplus budget; but when I go to the capital budget, I find that there is a deficit of 134.10 crores in the capital budget. This 134.10 crores has been arrived at after allowing for all the loans which the Government of India can raise. They have allowed for new loans to the tune of 85 crores; they have allowed for Post office Savings Bank Deposits to the tune of 24.71 crores; they have allowed for National Savings Certificates to the tune of 18.40 crores. Allowing for all these, there is still a deficit of 134.10 crores. The intrinsic position of the finances of the Government of India is absolutely sound; because our total debt is only 2408 crores and our interest yielding assets are 1527 crores and only 800 crores are the non-productive obligations on the Government of India. This sum of 800 crores is very nearly a year's income of the provinces and the Centre put together. Even with this position, how is it that we are not able to raise any loans? How is it that we are not able to raise the capital that is necessary? The reason according to me is that we have not tried to get money from the quarters where the money is. According to me, the money has gone to the rural areas, for the time being. (An Honourable Member: "No, no.") There may be difference of opinion on that matter. I make a suggestion to the honourable the Finance Minister in this respect. What has happened to the Reserve Bank? You have nationalised the Reserve Bank. What has the Reserve Bank done? The Reserve Bank has been a good authority for policing purposes; but it has not been an authority for the expansion of Banking in this country. I would suggest to the honourable the Finance Minister to ask the Reserve Bank to open 1,000 branches in the rural areas, and also ask four or five big banks to open branches in various rural areas so that the money which is there in the rural areas will come to the Banks and then could be put in circulation. (Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: "There is no money in the rural areas"). There may or may not be money in the rural areas. But, you have got sooner or later to find out ways and means of bringing that frozen capital into circulation, and the only way in which you can do that is by opening banks, because, in banks you can put your money and take it back the next day if you require it, whereas in the case of the National Savings Certificates, you have to wait for five or seven years and the rural people cannot afford to wait.

If our deficit is 134.10 crores, and if we are not going to raise that money, what should we do? We should effect economies. I find in the whole of the Government of India extravagance instead of economy. I have gone through the whole of the explanatory memorandum for the budget; I see hardly any item in which the expenditure has been reduced. All the Economic Advisers of the Government of India, all the economic Advisers whom the Government of India called from the various parts of the country unanimously suggested that there should be compulsory saving. Has the Government of India attempted compulsory saving at all, in any department? There is, Sir, one figure which is very peculiar. It is on page 27: Anjuman-e-Tarake-e-Urdu 40 lakhs.

Shri B. L. Sondhi (East Punjab: General): No; it is 40,000.

Shri Ramnath Goenka: No; it is 40,000 for Hindi Sahitya Sammelan and 40 lakhs for this.

Shri B. L. Sondhi: I enquired from the Department concerned; they said it is 40,000. It is wrongly printed here.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Is it not possible for the Finance Minister to say whether it is 40 lakhs or 40,000?

The Honourable Dr. John Matthai (Minister of Finance): 40,000.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is said to be Rs. 40,000 for each.

Shri Ramnath Goenka: I am glad to hear this, Sir. There are so many other figures which I can quote in which no economy has been introduced; in fact, there is extra expenditure in all the departments. It was the unanimous advice of all the Economic Advisers that there should be a scheme for compulsory saving; that scheme has not been resorted to at all. It was also said that they should try to see that economy was introduced in the various departments of the Government of India. It was also suggested that the provinces should be given the bare minimum of their requirements. But, the result is that we are giving by way of loans and by way of grants to the provinces more than what we did last year. In no department of the Government of India do I find any economy. If there is no economy, if there is no compulsory saving, what do we find? We find 500 lucky people being left out of taxation to the tune of 2.1 crores. It was only 437 people last year; this year it may be 500 people. (Shri T. A. Ramalingam Chettiar: "499"). In the case of these 500 people whose income has been more than a lakh and a half, Government have lifted taxes to the tune of 2.1 crores. Is it economy? You do not want to economise or tighten your belt; but you want everybody else in India to tighten up their belt and also to pay more. Because, the incidence of all this taxation falls on the poor man. The provinces go on taxing the poor man; the Centre goes on taxing the poor man; but you do not do anything to economise. This is part I of my proposition.

The second point which I want to take up is the abolition of Capital Gains Tax. According to me this is a most dangerous abolition, which the honourable the Finance Minister has done. Now let me go back to the history of the case in 1920-21 when there was no Capital Gains Tax. The cost of the plant and machinery of all the Bombay Cotton mills was 18 crores. They reconverted it into 42 crores for the purpose of getting a higher depreciation. The result was, that in 1929-30, the state of affairs of the Cotton Mills was such that they could not maintain themselves and many of them had to close down. What happened after the war? Immediately after the war, the big firms began to reconvert them and over capitalise themselves to get more profit into their pockets without paying any tax upon them. At that time, the then Finance Minister decided to levy the Capital Gains Tax so that the amount of money which was going into the coffers of these big industrialists at the cost of the industry could be checked. The process was immediately checked after the Capital Gains Tax was introduced. It is not a question here whether you get a crore or whether you get five crores out of this tax. The question is whether you should mortgage your industry for all time to come. Take the case of an industry whose plant and machinery were got before the war for, say, one crore of Rupees. By the process of depreciation, the plant and machinery has been written down to ten lakhs. To-day if you value the plant and machinery, they will be worth a couple of crores more because the prices have inflated. If the Capital Gains Tax is abolished, I am warning the Finance Minister to take note that, in the next few months, you will find hundreds of big companies being over-capitalised without paying any tax at all. What is the other ground except psychological ground by which you are justifying the abolition of this tax? This tax is being abolished without assigning any reason. What is the advantage of this abolition? The disadvantages are that immediately the Capital Gains Tax goes the companies will be overcapitalised and the plant and machinery will be sold to somebody else. You will have to take depreciation at that price. The Finance Minister has decided that he would double the depreciation. I welcome that but what will be the result? In the next 5 years all the capital which has been invested after the 1st April 1948 on these plant and machinery will be written off and the Finance Department will not get any income out of these companies because they will be writing off large sums for depreciation. After five years when it is written off, one fine morning the company is sold to somebody else and the price again is inflated and depreciation claimed thereon. Do you think that it is in the interest of this country, it is in the interest of the industry and in the interest of anybody to allow this tax to be abolished?

Then again there is a proposition that labour should participate in the profits. If you allow them to over-capitalize and if you allow large depreciation on it, there will be nothing for labour to participate in. The participation of labour will come in only if there is a profit. By this process there is no profit left and no participation of the labour in the profits of the companies arises. This is a very big question and I would request the Finance Minister to look at it from the angle I have given him just now and see whether there is any justification for the abolition of this tax. Then all the other taxes which have been laid down, as Mr. Tirumala Rao has pointed out, the incidence of those taxations was on the poor men and the rich men getting all benefit out of it at the same time. I don't know how far the honourable the Finance Minister who, as I said, is reputed to be the friend of the poor and the common man, justifies all this in the budget which he has now presented.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi (U. P.: General): This is an occasion when the voice of the people as it is—it may be sometimes even in a crude form—must be expressed so that the Ministers, those who have the power of administration in their hands, may know how the people of the country are reacting to their Governmental activities. Therefore, I have chosen not to go deep into the figures and not to repeat the arguments which have already been put forward by my honourable friends on either side. I have to submit only one thing with regard to the budget figures and it is that, the honourable Minister for Finance himself has confessed that he got a revenue of 84 crores more than the expenditure we sanctioned for the current year. The whole of this amount ought to have been shown as surplus. This was more than the incidence we had sanctioned. In fact by chance or by whatever means not by unfair ones—there were more exports or imports. And he got more money which meant that the country was taxed to the extent of 84 crores more than we sanctioned last year. This money should have gone towards savings because we never sanctioned the expenditure of that extra money; and this money has been spent and some more has been spent over and above. But there are reasons for that extra expenditure. There were so many problems—we had to fight our wars in Kashmir and then again rehabilitation and famine—all this expenditure had to be incurred; but we don't want to make this expenditure recurring for good. If this 84 crores were extraordinarily spent this year, we don't want this to form part of our usual budget. So this extraordinary expenditure should not have gone into the scheduled expenditure. Most of the money spent last year even for items which were only of a temporary nature goes into the permanent budget just like the practice in the Secretariat to appoint a man temporarily in the first year and to confirm him the next year. What I wanted to warn the honourable Minister about is that once the budget gets inflated, it goes on at the same rate for ever. All the taxes—whether they be by excise, income-tax or customs or postcard all come from the poor.

The country is already being badly taxed. The reaction of the people is not quite like what my friend Mr. Goenka has said. Money has not gone into the villages. In fact the villagers themselves are dissatisfied. The country has got frustrated and the basic complaint is scarcity of foodstuffs. There are so many other things conspiring together. I leave it at that. Indirect taxes hit everybody equally. For instance Tax on salt hit all equally. Cloth, you sanction everyone say 10 yards, it hits all equally, rich and the poor. If you reduce the income-tax, you give benefit to the rich and supplement the loss by indirect taxes, which means that poor are equally taxed with the rich which is not fair. Same is the case with regard to the excise duty on sugar. It is very good for honourable Mr. Kidwai to say that he will fly the post cards, but the card reaches the villager once in eight or nine days. It is no use telling the villager that his card will be flown in the air. In selecting the items of taxation we must also take note as to how it will react on the psychology of the people at large. It is not only that we are required to tax people, but we are also required to tax them in a manner so that the people may not mind the taxes. If you have come out with a proposal that cards which Mr. Kurshed Lal or his boss Mr. Kidwai will fly in the air shall bear more postage, I would not mind. Why tax me. I want to write only to a village a long way off from your aerodromes and I do not mind how it reaches. I don't want to dilate on this.

The Congress party, the biggest party in the country has contributed its best to the Government. The country has given its best to the administration, but still it looks as if there is not necessary appreciation of the achievements of the government. We have our two big leaders sitting to-day on the treasury benches, and they have done a great deal to raise the prestige of our country. It is only due to them that we have come up so far and that we have won the war—our battle for freedom. But the Congress organisation has to that extent become poorer. The towering personalities having come to the Government, the Congress party—I mean the party outside the legislatures has become much less effective. We have lost Gandhiji too. And unfortunately we have no healthy opposition in the country now. Suppose there is something wrong in Pandit Jawaharlalji's administration, where are the people to go to? There is now no equally balanced important party in the country to which they can go. Opposition is the privilege of the people. If the voters were at any time dissatisfied with, say, the Nehru Government they could challenge the Government and say "either agree to our demands or we would join the opposition and throw out your Government." There is no Mahatma Gandhi to whom they could take their complaints. We, as juniors cannot sit on judgement over our seniors. The people, therefore, feel frustrated. People at large are without any vocal capacity. They cannot express themselves. The success of the Government does not really depend on the Budget alone. The real success lies in the street. The index of their success is 'public opinion'. If we are truly democratic, we should see that the people are rallying round us. Let us now see if we have the people rallying round us. According to my judgement, I am afraid, we have failed, judged by this standard. This is so, not because we have not done enough, but because of other reasons. Indeed, we have done too much. In fact, the gains which Pandit Jawaharlal has got for us in foreign lands are exceptional. In such a short time we have become a real nation and have found a place on the map of the world. Sardar Patel, our Deputy Prime Minister has really achieved too much. There is no parallel to it in history. These two leaders are, if I may say so, earning too much for the nation and it seems, as if, the nation is not in a position to keep pace with them and consume their earnings from year to year. But may I inform both these leaders that your public relations department has absolutely failed you. This department has not made the people realise and to appreciate your achievements, how great and important these achievements are. The publicity department has been a failure because the public at large do not really appreciate what you have achieved for them. And therefore they are full of criticism. The public is very critical. May be, it is because of scarcity all round. May be because people do not get enough to eat, and so they are critical. It is for you to find out the reasons.

Now that the Congress has come into power, the people want to have access to the Ministers, at least through the proper channels. But this is not found easy because of red-tapism and also because of the 'steel-frame.' The steel-frame, instead of remaining a frame, has now become a steel ceiling. Therefore freedom is not able to filter through down to the common people the old red-tapism is still there, and it has not been controlled at all. We have the same old structure of Governmental machine and the same old speed with which it moves. The Secretariat people are very clever people. They are experienced persons and get very big salaries too. They come before you and talk nice things and they really want to behave as the courtiers did to King Canute. They tell you what is necessary for respectability, what is urgent for dignity, and this and that. They do not really do the work that is expected of them. First of all, they get too much pay, Government of India Secretaries get about Rs. 1,000 more than their contractual pay which they would have got in provincial Government. One Minister told me that they are on contractual pay and so their pay cannot be reduced. But I cannot understand the position. If in the Province, an officer who would at least be only a Commissioner on Rs. 3,000, here in the Secretariat, he gets Rs. 4,000 Rs. 1,000 more as extra. In the olden times when the Britishers were here, they organised a sort of committee in the Secretariat, to control the staff and establishment, and it was with a view to see that the posts of vantage and importance all went to Europeans. The same thing is going on even to-day, I am told. Whether that is true or not, it is for the Minister to say. When Mr. Gopalaswami Ayyangar was without any portfolio, he was deputed or requested by the Prime Minister to look into the whole organisation and see if he could effect any retrenchments or reorganisation. I understand Mr. Ayyangar made a number of proposals. And I am also told that when the Honourable Minister made his report, he said that there are two or three die-hard Secretaries of the Secretariat, and unless they are turned out, the Secretariat cannot improve.

The Honourable Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Minister of Railways and Transport): May I intervene? I am afraid what the honourable Member has been telling the House is absolutely without any foundation. I have made no report yet.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: I see. Somehow or other things have so filtered out like that.

The Honourable Shri Jawaharlal Nehru (Prime Minister and Leader of the House): The remark just made by the speaker that somehow things filtered out, I think, deserves some notice in this House. Many times things are said here which have no foundation at all; and such statements which have no basis or foundation are not in keeping with the dignity of the House. Honourable Members should not make suggestions or insinuations which have no foundation whatever.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: This has often been stated on the floor of the House. As the Prime Minister said, such remarks do not add to the dignity of the House. Therefore, before making any observations, honourable Members will kindly verify if they have any basis or foundation for their observations. If it is only a small margin of difference, there is no harm, but if it is wholly without foundation, it does not add to the dignity of the House.

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, my request was only to make an enquiry, whether such things are true or not. If they are all baseless, it is all the better, because hereafter nobody need talk about them. I have, indeed helped the Prime Minister in giving him a chance to contradict these rumours. So he must be thankful to me rather than be angry with me.

Then there was an Economy Committee set up. It made certain recommendations, but the Secretaries would not agree to accept them. The Secretaries are too big. I hope the Ministers concerned will agree to look into the matter, and see if the whole Secretariat does not require a regular and drastic overhauling. I understand there is a Committee in the Secretariat consisting of some Secretaries, called Establishment Committee, and without the sanction of this committee no transfers can be effected. Previously a Secretary after spending some three years or more here, used to go back to his Province. But at present they are kept on here. And as I said, this Establishment Committee controls all transfers and postings. I do not commit my previous mistake of mentioning the name of the Minister, but I understand that one Minister made a request that such and such man should be given to him, and this Committee refused to do so. Sir, it is this Committee which really holds the key of the whole organisation. It is just like the old days when the British were here. I therefore say that this should be changed and in the Staff or Establishment Committee there must be one or two Ministers to see to it that positions of vantage do not go to undesirable persons.

And then, there is a lot of nepotism in the Secretariat, and I wish the Ministers would make enquiries from every one of their officers as to how many of their relations are employed there. I am informed by men in the Secretariat that there are three sisters married to three different husbands and all these three are Secretaries of Government. And there are a many other relations of one or the other Secretary.

Therefore, Sir, firstly, we must look into the organisation of the Secretariat. I have a lot more to say, but the time is up and I shall do so during the cut-motions. I am sorry I could not have my full say.

Kazi Syed Karimuddin (C.P. and Berar: Muslim): I congratulate the Minister in charge of Finance for his admirable speech. He is one of the ablest of men in the country but the Budget that he has presented to the House does not contain those proposals which were greatly needed. Because of his administrative experience, many of the theories he has advocated have been given up now.

The most important problems facing the country are food, industry, taxation, sterling balances, borrowings and defence. The honourable Minister of Finance while speaking at the Associated Chambers of Commerce, Calcutta, said:

"The present slump in the investment market is due to high rate of taxation, diminished margin of savings and shattered confidence of investors and uncertainty of Government policy".

As a result of that speech, and as a result of the conclusions to which he has arrived, he has abolished the capital gains tax, given a reduction of tax for incomes up to Rs. 10,000 and in super-tax on earned and unearned income. In 1947 the honourable Finance Minister was the Minister for Railways. While advocating these very taxes he had said that a lower rate of profit had to be considered sufficient under present conditions of the proposals providing incentive to investment. If those who are in charge of great concerns are looking for a rate of return higher than that, then we are going to be faced with a problem which involves serious issues of national policy. The question arises whether the kind of economies you expect from competitive initiative and those pledges associated with private enterprise will not be wasted by increase in capital charges which private investment would employ. If that issue is to be raised in connection with the Budget, the country will have to face the serious question whether it is worth while to continue private enterprise and whether capitalism should have a longer lease of life.

[Kazi Syed Karimuddin]

While these taxes were imposed in 1947, the honourable the Finance Minister was of the opinion that if the capitalists demanded more reduction, then the question before this country will be whether to nationalize the industries or to stop the capitalist system in the country. The conclusion I come to is that he finds that after 1947 the investment was not forthcoming; that the investors did not take advantage of the proposals made even last year and instead of adopting a national economy in this country he has reduced taxation to such a great extent that the poor man is hit by new taxation on sugar, cloth and postage.

Sir, even last year taxes were reduced. We have seen that mere reduction of taxes does not serve the purpose. This may be an incentive to capital but not to labour. The present unsatisfactory position is only due to the theory of mixed economy that has been advocated for the last two years. On the one hand the Government want to tell labour that they will have a share in the profit-sharing. The capitalists either do not agree to this or are reluctant to accept it. On the other hand, the Government pats the capitalist and says that he should go on with private enterprise. This creates an uncertainty in Government's policy and everything is uncertain. The only test is whether by the theory of mixed economy we have been able to solve the conflict between labour and capital. Between capital and labour, the gulf is being widened every day, and unless labour is satisfied, in my opinion it is very difficult to have stabilized industry in the country. Now we are seeing the developments in China and other countries: whereas labour in our country is making growing demands and making slogans of surplus value, unearned increment and profit-sharing. What is the remedy against this? The question is that unless the essential industries are nationalized, labour cannot be satisfied, and if industries are nationalized and if labour is still not satisfied, the entire country will be on the side of the Government. Railways being a national industry, we have seen that in spite of the demands of the railway workers, the country was entirely on the side of the Government. So, in my opinion, the only solution to this problem is that the industries which are essential, should be nationalised, otherwise this problem cannot be solved. Though all taxes are being withdrawn, even then the capital would not flow.

The next question is the agricultural policy of the Government of India and whether any measures have been adopted in this Budget for the improvement of the food position. Sir, I have heard many debates, many discussions and many speeches regarding the improvement of the food situation in India. But I find that while we discuss, and the more we discuss this problem, the more we find ourselves in a whirlpool of confusion and perplexities. Every year there is a shortage of food. Every year all our schemes for the production of more food are failing miserably. In my opinion the only remedy that could have been adopted in the Budget was that this subject should have been made partially a Central subject, and agricultural banks ought to have been opened in every corner of the country, and Government farms and co-operative farming should have been introduced on a very huge scale. It is futile to give a paucity aid to the agriculturist unless you introduce agricultural banks: and unless there is co-operative and collective farming, it is impossible to satisfy the food demands of the country. Therefore I do not find any concrete proposals in the Budget to satisfy the people that there is some chance of improvement in the food situation. In the event of an international war, if this shortage of food continues, it is inevitable that the country will starve.

Another point which I would like to touch is Defence. There can be no two opinions that we want an impregnable military might. As has been remarked by another honourable Member on this side 157 crores out of a total budget of 322 crores in abnormal times may be reasonable but in normal times an expenditure on defence of 157 crores is exceptional and it seems to me that there is a race for armaments, because I read in today's paper that even in Pakistan out of a total of 111 crores budget they have provided for a defence expenditure of 47 crores. Therefore in my opinion if there is a non-aggression pact between the two countries it will be to the betterment of both the countries. The proposal for joint defence on the east and west will be much more advantageous; the expenditure on defence will be reduced and the internal problems with which we are faced will be tackled much better.

I want to say a word about the sterling balances and our borrowings. On the basis of the figures given in the Budget I find that the sterling balances are being exhausted on account of capital repatriation and on account of pensions and commutation of pensions and also on account of import of consumer goods. We are also short of dollars. I submit that in case the Finance Minister incurs a loan from the International Bank of America for reconstruction and development an assurance to this House should be given that no consumer goods will be purchased from America. Otherwise America's present policy is to capture the commercial markets of the world and to advance loans with the ulterior motive of commercial gains. If India were to be benefited by loans taken from America an assurance ought to be given to this House that the money will be spent on the purchase of capital goods. Therefore my appeal to the Finance Minister is that in view of the speech he made in March 1947 the economy of this country should be changed. Sir, I have done.

Shrimati Renuka Ray (West Bengal: General): I would yield to none in my high regard for the outstanding ability and integrity of the honourable the Finance Minister and it is perhaps for this reason that I am all the more disappointed with the budget that he has presented to this House.

A reference has already been made by previous speakers to the capital expenditure which runs into a huge figure and that has been left uncovered. Perhaps the honourable the Finance Minister has the hope that he will be able to cover this by borrowings during the year but I do think that it would have been better for him not to have said that he has presented a balanced budget under the circumstances. I do not think that there is any particular sanctity or merit in a balanced budget, particularly in a country which has so much leeway to make up in nation-building services and in development plans. It is impossible for us to break through the vicious circle which now confronts us unless we make at least a first attempt in this direction and, there is little or no indication at all in this Budget of any kind of provision for these basic and fundamental needs. I fully realise the difficulties and the anxieties of the honourable the Finance Minister when he is faced with this inflationary situation in the country; but the problem of inflation in this country is mainly a problem of shortage of goods and commodities as against effective demand and therefore the rising prices are the consequent result. Hence it is at this end that this problem must first be tackled. Production and development in its many phases is the way out.

Now there are two very fundamental factors that we have to cope with. The first is the immediate need for capital formation, to meet the requirements of development expenditure. Large scale borrowing is not possible also, unless there is some capital formation and the prospects in that respect are better but new steps have to be taken. It is no use for the Government to follow the beaten track when we are faced with a national emergency. It is no use for the Government to wait on the sweet pleasure of the capitalists for the formation of capital in this country. Last year the previous Finance Minister made many concessions to the capitalists. He reduced the business profits tax and also gave relief to the higher incomes. This year the Honourable Dr. Matthai has done the same. He has abolished the capital gains tax. I won't dwell upon it but I think it was quite unjustifiable. But even so I do not think that the hope which the honourable Dr. John Matthai has, viz., that it will bring the capital in the market will be realised, for the simple reason that the more the concessions made, the more is the bargaining to be expected. I think that the speech of the President of the Indian Federation of Commerce and Industries yesterday is a very good indication of this. The kind of feeling amongst them is that the Government is being forced to its knees and so why not we hold on until it is absolutely at our feet. That is the kind of feeling among the capitalists. I do not say that there are no notable exceptions amongst them but this is the brand of capitalists that we have in India today and Government has to cope with that situation. Therefore it seems to me that other ways of capital formation can be brought about. If it does not come voluntarily there may be compulsory savings on deferred payment basis for higher incomes. That is the first essential.

I think the yield from the sale of national savings certificates has remained pretty steady. It is something about 34 crores. I think that if a drive is made throughout the country through Congress organisations in the districts and even in the villages, using their services for the sale of national savings certificates, at least 50 crores could be raised by that step alone. Also compulsory savings for agriculturists and others over a certain income level should be introduced. This proposal I think has been recommended to Government and it was the scheme of my honourable friend Mr. Khandubhai Desai and I do not understand why none of these schemes have been given any effect to as yet. I think that if some of these measures are introduced then capital which is very shy just now will be forthcoming. Particularly when it is found that there is no likelihood of very high profits I am quite sure that this capital which will come forward will be satisfied with a little less profit.

Turning to the other fundamental factor, I have already said that the nation-building and development services are the very basis of our economy. I am not speaking from the point of view of social justice or the need for equality of opportunity but from the material point of view alone how can you increase the level of your efficiency and thereby the output in this country unless those on whom rest the basic services are able to cope with them. If you do not have health, if you do not have education, if you do not have food, if you do not have housing, then how can we increase the level of efficiency in this country or of output? It is from that angle that I would ask the honourable the Finance Minister to look at this picture. It is indeed a shame that no beginnings on this seem to have been made in the Budget for this year.

The Finance Minister is waiting for the Report of this Economy Committee. So far as we can understand, it has been rather disappointing for the Finance Minister himself. Development grants in the Centre and the Provinces for the much needed services have been held up for these schemes that have already been sanctioned. Such is the state of affairs in what I consider the most important and the most basic of all services. I am not speaking at all about social justice but speaking only from the point of view of raising efficiency in the country so that our output can be increased.

I will not dwell on the subject of food because we have already had much discussion on this subject before, but I would like to make one suggestion. I think that if the Central Food Ministry is not to remain for ever in the clutches of the Provincial Governments in regard to food subsidies, the first step that they might take is to have a statistical survey—a sample random survey would do—which may not be absolutely correct but which will give the picture of what kind of procurement can be made in the Provinces. It must be the Centre which lays down the terms of that procurement and if the Province refuses or cannot procure as much, then the food subsidies must be refused to them. I think that would be a very effective method of dealing with this matter.

I will not go very much into the taxation side, many people have already spoken on it. I have given my opinion of the Capital Gains Tax. It is very reminiscent of the budgetary devices of the earlier days, of the old regime, such as that of Sir Jeremy Raisman when we hear of the enhancing of these postal rates and perhaps one or two other items. I feel sure that the honourable the Finance Minister will make these concessions to the views of the House as was done last year in the case of tea and sugar.

Shri B. Das: Please be ready to announce it.

Prof. N. G. Ranga (Madras: General): It is for the Select Committee to consider.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: I will now turn to the expenditure side and dwell only on two important items. Defence has already been spoken about. It is almost half of our expenditure, about 47 and 48 per cent. The U.S.A. spends 25 per cent. of its budget on defence, the U.S.S.R. 17 per cent. and the United Kingdom 13 per cent. We spend 48 per cent. That is one side of it. The other point is that even supposing you do not want to bring down your expenditure on defence, why has no move been made to re-adjust it? I can understand a huge army of occupation in a country under occupation, to subjugate the people, but what right or justice is there in keeping a huge land army in a country which is free? Is it so in any other country? Should we not have instead voluntary or auxiliary forces and National Cadet Corps and such things—You do not keep huge standing land armies in countries which are not under subjugation.

Shri R. K. Sidhva (C.P. and Berar: General): What about our borders?

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Whatever be the problem of our borders, when the people of the country can be armed—and it is not the question as in the old days when the people of this country could not be armed—it can be solved by voluntary or auxiliary forces.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: Wait until they are raised. We ourselves passed Rs. 6 crores in the Standing Finance Committee the other day.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: Sir, 20 per cent. of the money could have been cut on land forces and could have been spent perhaps on the Air Force and the Navy, or it could have been used for re-settling the demobilised soldiers and agriculturists on reclaimed land.

I had something to say about general education but as others have spoken on it I will not reiterate this point at all as there is no time.

Before I conclude, there are two points which I want to make. One is with regard to the general corruption in the country as a whole, in all walks of life. I think it is the clear duty of the Government to make some really exemplary examples of people who are highly stationed in life and to go in all out against corruption and blackmarketing so that it becomes an effective deterrent for the country. If no other way will bring us to honesty at least let us try that way.

Then, we are facing a very grave national crisis and in such a crisis there is need for the closing up of all the ranks who are opposed to the communists who want to disrupt the State and bring India under a new type of imperialist domination. Therefore, there must be a close-up, first of all, in Congress ranks, and group politics should not be allowed. Secondly, there is an absolute necessity for consolidation in the leftist ranks who are all opposed to the communists. I would appeal to my honourable friend Mr. Harihar Nath Shastri and Mr. Khandubhai Desai that it is time that the Socialists and the I.N. T.U.C. came together in this matter. The recent speech of Shri Jai Prakash Narayan on the Railwaymen's Federation and many of his subsequent statements show that so clearly—if a proof were needed—that the Socialists do not want disruption, that they are as much opposed to the Communists as anybody in this House. Therefore, in this national emergency it is necessary that there should be consolidation in the labour front and in the Government. (An Honourable Member: "But it is the Socialists who have deserted us.") It has been said that it is they who have gone out. I am quite willing to concede that the Socialists have shown a very unrealistic approach. Many a time they have done many things that they should not have done and left many things undone that they should have done, but the Congress is the older Party. They were your comrades during the days when you were fighting for freedom; these were the men and women who stood shoulder to shoulder with you in the struggle of 1942. Surely, when the Congress has shown so much generosity towards those who were clearly outside its ranks before and who today are on the Ministerial Benches, to these people who may have made many mistakes, it is for the Congress to show again that generosity.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: They have gone away on their own account.

Shrimati Renuka Ray: They have gone away, but it is surely for those who are older with more experience, those who are wiser, to ask them to come back today and help in this national emergency. It is only responsibility that can teach a realistic approach to anyone and I feel certain that if today men of the calibre of Shri Jai Prakash Narayan and Acharya Narendra Deo and women like Kamla Devi Chattopadhyaya were associated in helping the country in this emergency, it would be all to the good.

Sir, I am sorry I have taken up so much time. I would merely like to say to the honourable the Finance Minister again that we all have great faith in him, but we are extremely sorry that his Budget this year is not up to the mark.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch, till Half Past Two of the Clock.

(The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Mr. Wilson.

Mr. T. J. M. Wilson (Madras: General): Sir, I do not wish to speak now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Honourable members who have given their names, but are not prepared to speak, will lose their turn.

Shri Mihir Lal Chattopadhyay (West Bengal: General): Sir, after hearing the speeches of so many honourable members who have spoken so ably it is but natural, to expect that the honourable the Finance Minister will sympathetically consider the various proposals that have been made. I do realise that it is really a difficult task for the honourable the Finance Minister to shape his Budget as he would like, with a heavy load of about Rs. 158 crores on defence expenditure. The defence expenditure is a constant headache for a country like India which is so poor and has got so many problems to be solved. But looking at the mounting tendency of the defence expenditure, I feel the time has now come for us to think very furiously as to how it might be possible to reduce that expenditure. It is really a matter for great concern to a poor country like ours that even in peace time defence expenditure should be as high as Rs. 158 crores.

The honourable the Finance Minister has presented a Budget which has no characteristic, no speciality, of its own. It runs in the same old humdrum fashion and really there is nothing in it to encourage the common man. Whatever praise the mercantile community and commercial interests of this country might shower on the Finance Minister for the consideration that he has shown them in the matter of abolition of capital gains tax and reduction of supertax, the common man has not felt enthusiastic over this Budget; and if consideration is not shown to the extent the common man deserves, I am afraid the day is not far off when it will be difficult to keep him happy and contented.

The revenue is estimated at Rs. 307 crores. I can quite understand that leaving aside the defence expenditure the honourable the Finance Minister has to cut his coat according to his cloth, and that he has hardly Rs. 149 crores to cover the Civil expenditure. Now let us see how this amount is distributed among the various nation building departments, because the common man does not bother so much about defence as he bothers about matters which directly concern him most. Looking to the expenditure side, we find that under heads like Medical, Education and Agriculture, the Finance Minister has not been able to place much money. So far as Education is concerned in the revised estimate of 1948-49 there is an expenditure of Rs. 162 lakhs. In this year there is provision of only Rs. 194 lakhs. For a country where only ten per cent. of the people are educated, for a country which has taken up the responsibility of making one hundred per cent of the population literate at least in 10 years, which is a stupendous task, this amount of Rs. 194 lakhs is very meagre.

Shri C. Subramaniam (Madras: General): Is it not a provincial subject?

Shri Mihir Lal Chattopadhyay: Does not matter—even the Centre has got a responsibility in the matter. Looking into the Budget we find that in 1948-49 there was provision for Rs. 146 lakhs under Medical, but unfortunately this year it has been reduced to Rs. 112 lakhs. For a country which is so much in need of medical aid, where people die in lakhs for want of proper medicine and treatment, in parts of which there are no hospitals even within a distance of ten or twelve miles, there the most essential need is to reach medical aid to the rural areas. But, unfortunately, we find that the provision under this head has been reduced. This, in my opinion, is an extremely regrettable step. Recently I had the opportunity of visiting some rural parts in West Bengal and I found the extreme eagerness on the part of the people to have dispensaries in the rural areas. The Government there was, however, insisting on contribution from the people for starting dispensaries in the Unions and thanas. In one district it was brought to my notice by the District Magistrate himself that nearly a lakh of rupees had been deposited by the people, and in some cases people had made gifts by registered deed of as much as six bighas or two acres of land. Some of these things have been done as late as November and December 1947. There has been no hospital in 1947, there has been no hospital in 1948 and during the time that I was there there was no hospital, even though the people had co-operated in such large measure for the establishment of hospitals in those areas. (Interruption) That is the most unfortunate part of it. We have a doctor Minister and a doctor Secretary in West Bengal.

Coming to agriculture I find in the budget estimate of 1948-49 there was provision for 192 lakhs. I do not know the reason why this amount has been reduced to 112 lakhs in this budget of 1949-50. While we are always under the expectation that the Government will be devoting more and more attention to the improvement of agriculture in this country to tide over the food shortage is most unfortunate that there has been a reduction in the budget under this head as compared with the budget estimate for 1948-49. On the contrary I find from the figures available here that whereas in 1948-49 there was a provision under the head External Affairs for an amount of 208 lakhs, in this Budget which is under consideration the amount has been increased by 50 lakhs. This shows how the administration has been moving. For most essential needs in the country money in adequate quantity is not being spent but more money is being spent on External Affairs, Embassies and other matters. This is a thing which is not understandable by the common man. The common man wants food, the common man wants medical aid and he wants education. If we have to effect hundred per cent. literacy in this country within a period of ten years I do not know how it would be possible if there is only an increased provision of only 32 lakhs under the head Education as compared to last year.

The Finance Minister has been well appreciated by the commercial community, the reason being that he has been to some extent partial to them or it might be that he wants to placate them to a certain extent in order to get them produce more in the interest of the country.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: He has gone back to his old love.

Shri Mihir Lal Chattopadhyay: I have not much quarrel with him on that matter. If really by showing some amount of indulgence to them he is able to show better results, the future will judge it but the amount of indifference, callousness and to some extent cruelty—I should say—that he has exhibited towards the common man in the country was not expected of a Finance Minister under the present regime. I am really shocked at his proposal to put an additional tax on paper. Ours is a poor country, where only about ten per cent of the people know how to read and write and if it is contemplated by the Finance Minister that paper also should be made more costly it means nothing but a taxation on knowledge, a taxation on learning and education. I think it will adversely affect the spread of education in this country. People in the rural areas who demand free compulsory education will be shocked. They have not got the money to bear the cost of education of their children and if paper is also made more costly by further imposition of duty then the common man who sends his children to the school will find their education even more costly than now. Of all the taxes that he has proposed this is possibly one of the worst.

So many other speakers have spoken about the enhancement of rates on postcards and envelopes. I need not labour that point. If speaking in this Assembly has any value, if expression of opinions by the members of the Assembly have any respect, I earnestly hope that the Finance Minister will consider this matter very seriously. Things are said here not in fun or just or merely for the sake of speaking. Each and every member has spoken very violently on this measure and I feel that the method by which the Finance Minister has attempted to enhance the rate on postcards and letters is not certainly a very straightforward one. He knows in his heart of hearts, he knows absolutely without any doubt in himself that letters in rural areas are not going to be carried by air. He knows that letters are written from one village to another, from one district of a province to another district in the same province and what is the necessity for the honourable Minister to take cover under the false pretext that all letters will be carried by air transport. (Babu Ramnarayan Singh: "Cheating!") It is, I should say, not befitting a man of the type of Dr. Matthai. He ought to have spoken quite plainly:

that it is for the convenience of those people who write their letters by air mail that he is doing it. It may be that some losses are being borne on that account and that is to be made good by taxing the people who live in the rural areas and whose letters are never likely to be carried by air mail.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (East Punjab: General): The surcharge also has been removed.

Shri Mihir Lal Chattopadhyay: Yes. Finally I would like to say that I am very much distressed at the budget. If the amount of money that we are getting as revenue is not sufficient to cover the expenditure let the ministers think hard as to how to balance the budget without drawing upon the reserves very much.

There is another regrettable feature which I would like to touch upon. So much has been said about sugar. But I am astonished to see under the head D.—Statement on the capital disbursement by the Central Government—there is an item Reserve Fund for the protection of the sugar industry. About 77,000 were spent last year from this account and again 151 lakhs are likely to be spent this year and this has been provided for. I do not know why this amount is necessary after the industry has made huge profit.

I would request the Finance Minister to devote some attention to the financial condition of the provinces and the States as well and do something to help them in any manner that is possible.

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai (Bombay: General): Sir, while speaking on this budget, there is a mental conflict. As everybody in this House knows, Dr. John Matthai is straightforward, honest and sincere. It is also admitted on all sides that his intellectual attainments are also of no mean order. But, when I scrutinised the budget, there was in store for me disappointment and despondency. I do not know how to describe the budget. The budget has not got in it anything which will strike the imagination of the common man. Neither has the budget got any foresight in it.

There has been a wide disparity between the estimates which were placed before us last year and the revised estimates. Of course, Dr. John Matthai is not responsible for it, as far as the estimates were concerned; but, Sir, he has been responsible certainly for the last six months for the expenditure side of it. The revised estimates as they have been placed before us both for income and expenditure are wide off the mark only to the extent of 33 per cent. I think it is not a budget. And, as everybody knows, if the income continues pouring in, extravagance increases. While scanning through the figures, I found that in one item 'Miscellaneous' the amount for this year has gone up from 35 crores to 59 crores. I do not know what this item 'Miscellaneous' means.

After all, he has not given us any hope for the future economy in the administration. The Economy Committee presided over by a businessman of the calibre of Kasturbai Lalbai is hanging fire, so to say for the last year and a quarter. The last Finance Minister, as a token of his earnestness and sincerity to effect economy, put in a token economy of two and a half crores. But what do we find? Instead of that we have got expenditure mounting up to 33 per cent more. Where is the question of economy? Even today, no hope is being held out that there will be any economy in the administration. This much as far as the estimates are concerned.

Sir, relief has been given. To whom? To persons who never deserved any relief. In the hope that capital will be flowing in industry, that there will be development, that there will be more production, the last Finance Minister gave relief to the tune of six crores. Now, he has given relief to the extent of additional six crores; altogether about twelve crores and this money is being taken out from the common man. What have we seen? During this year again, there is the cry from the rich that they are ruined, they are ruined, they are ruined and the Finance Minister is affected by this slogan. The same cry persists till Doomsday. You will never get them to invest anything in this way. There has been increase in production. But, that is due mainly to the industrial peace that has been there in the year 1948. Even with the increase in production, the prices have not come down. There is something wrong somewhere in the monetary mechanism of the State, of which the Finance Minister himself is the custodian. We are suffering from high prices, inflation. Have we seen anything in the budget which is going to fight this inflation? Nothing, in any shape or form. But, on the contrary, my fear is that the cost of living during the next month or two might go up by at least 15 points. There has been indirect taxation in the shape of excise. Sugar has been taxed; even the coarse and medium count cloth has not been spared; betel nut has been taxed. That is not all. A slogan has gone round, rightly, from the honourable the Finance Minister to the Provincial Finance Ministers—you balance your budgets, do not have any deficits. Let us see how they have balanced their budgets. Most of the provincial budgets are out. They have also gone to the extent of imposing a sales tax on chillies, spices, tamarind and what not.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: One has put a tax on food also.

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai: Tamarind itself is food, I think.

Shri R. K. Sidhva: No; there is some grain also.

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai: All these things are going to come out of the poor consumer and raise the cost of living. I would like to know when are we going to get a reduction in the prices. I am afraid we are in for difficulties during the next year. I certainly expected something better from Dr. John Matthai; but we are disappointed. Inflation has not been fought as he ought to have done with a brave heart and a firm mind. He has not done this as is apparent from the budget.

There is one other point to which I would like to make a reference and that is the abolition of the Capital Gains Tax. If the honourable the Finance Minister thinks that it is quite good after I have placed before this House and before him the implications thereof, he is welcome to have his own views. The Capital Gains Tax is a sound tax on all economic grounds. It is a tax on unearned increments. It is not in the nature of getting money as much as a deterrent and a preventive tax. Immediately this tax is abolished, I am afraid the old companies will go in for recapitalisation. The present paid up capital will go up and you and I would have to pay through our very nose for the next generation the return on that inflated capital. Our future Income-tax return will, in my opinion, be depleted, because depreciation on that inflated amount would have been charged and exempted from taxation. Then all this talk of profit-sharing and fair wages also will go into scrap. If the present companies are permitted to recapitalize and they are bound to do it otherwise why should they insist on the abolition of this tax, then there will be nothing left after giving them even 3 or 4 per cent. on the new paid-up capital and the depreciation on the new capital. Then I would like the honourable the Finance Minister to enlighten us in his reply one point which I could not understand. He has given depreciation at double the rate on all machinery that has been erected after 1948. Naturally the machinery erected upto 1948 would have paid 4 times the normal prices and if the rate of 5 per cent. is made 10 per cent. and if those plant will work 3 shifts then they would have paid 30 per cent. It will mean within 3 years they would have written off the whole of the account and what will happen then. If that is the implication, it is very dangerous and risky and it is a great burden on the community. Because to that extent the income-tax returns will be depleted.

There was a full-fledged food debate and I did not want to say anything much about it but now that the figures have come before us, there is a loss about 32 crores of rupees in food. In rationed areas the food is sold to consumer at the same price as imported price. Same amount is also being spent out from the Provincial Budgets and therefore if 32 crores in addition to the amount that is spent out by provinces is altogether the food subsidy, then I am afraid there is something wrong somewhere and it does call for a very close scrutiny and investigation.

The principle of going in for excise duty increasingly is a very serious proposition in a capitalistic society. If the society is based on profitless motive, excise duty may be probably the only source of income but in a society where there is profit, where there are higher incomes, excise duty certainly is a very bad principle and one should think hundred times before advancing this sort of economy.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: What about handloom weavers? Should they not be protected from your textile mills?

Shri Khandubhai K. Desai: That is a different proposition. If I have time I will discuss it in much detail.

The honourable the Finance Minister will perhaps ask me "you said there should be no taxes imposed, then how I am going to balance the budget." My suggestion is that the relief which he has given to the vested interests has not satisfied them and so let him withdraw that. Six crores are saved and the additional taxes of 14 crores he need not impose, and he must ask the various Departments to economise to that extent and it will not be more than 4½ per cent. Then I think the budget will be balanced and there will be time enough for the honourable Minister to think what to do during the next six months to fight inflation to bring down the prices. With these words, I commend my suggestions to honourable the Finance Minister.

Shrimati Ammu Swaminadhan (Madras: General): I hope the Finance Minister will forgive me if I also start by saying that with the great faith that we in this House and people outside had in him, we were looking forward with great hopes to the budget he was going to present. But after his Budget speech and after reading all the details in it, we find it is a very disappointing one as far as the common man is concerned. I feel the budget of Dr. Matthai will appeal more to the businessmen and to those who are of a higher income level. What has he done for the poor man, who is already burdened with very heavy prices which is prevailing in the country. Every essential commodity has gone up in price and now they will go up still more because of certain indirect taxations. It is true that the lower income man does not pay an income-tax but that is no relief to him at all. I would first like to take up the question of cloth. Every man in this country or in any other country needs cloth and it is an absolutely essential commodity. I have no quarrel with the Minister when he puts up the excise duty on fine and superfine cloth but I would say that he was wrong in putting up the duty on coarse cloth which is what the poor man wears. I wish he could have balanced the budget by raising the duty still more on the fine and super-fine cloth and left the poor man's wearing apparel alone.

[Shrimati Ammu Swaminadhan]

I know many members have already spoken about the second point I want to raise viz., the case of postage charges. I feel very strongly about this and I don't mind repetition of this point and though it has already been mentioned by most of the members I feel that we must really protest against the raising of the postal rates on post cards. The Finance Minister and perhaps members of this Assembly including myself may not feel any hardship because to begin with we hardly ever write on a post card. By all means make the postal rate on air mail letters higher and those who write by air mail do not mind paying a little more for airmail letters. But why make it compulsory for everyone to send letters by airmail. Surely those who write post cards are people of the category of teachers, clerks, villagers, domestic servants and even though the additional cost is only three pies which sounds very small to us when we talk in terms of crores, to a poor domestic servant getting a very small pay three pies is a great deal. So I do feel that if it was a question of increasing the finances and getting more duty on the different commodities, surely more charges could have been put on airmail letters. I entirely agree with Professor Shah when he said that the man in the village does not care whether his letter goes by train or by air and in any case all villages are not touched by airways.

Regarding other commodities, the poor man is already paying very high prices for essential commodities and today when the Central Government does not tax the poor man, the Provincial Government steps in and the prices of such things as chillies, coconuts, oil and lots of other necessary food commodities have also gone up very high due to enhanced taxation on these articles. So while you are having indirect taxation and while the provinces are taxing the lower income man, is it right for the Finance Minister in order to balance the budget to put more burden on the poor man. If you want more taxation, what about the Estate Duty that we have been hearing of for such a long time. Is not the Finance Minister going to introduce Estate Duty and get more money from the rich? This duty will touch only the rich and not the poor man. I find in looking through the estimates for the coming year that there is a great deal of increase in every Ministry. Apart from the Health Ministry and Education Ministry where I don't think any economy should be introduced, I think every other Ministry could have had certain economy introduced.

But instead I find there is a great deal of increase proposed in every Ministry, and I do not think this is the right thing to do. Why have we had this Economy Committee? Why do we have their proposals? As it is, one does not see any economy introduced anywhere. It is always enhancement of taxes or decrease of taxes with regard to business people that we find. Sir, other Honourable Members have already spoken about other taxes which could have been imposed and which would have touched only the rich man. But all those taxes have been left out and again and again the poor man has been burdened with more and more indirect taxation.

Sir, though we have had a food debate, I would like to say a few words now about the food policy of the Government. We seem to be spending enormous sums of money in getting food from other countries. How long are we going to do this? At this rate, will there be any currency left in the foreign countries, to our credit? Will there be anything left with which to buy the machinery so badly needed in our country? We cannot afford to go on at this rate. We must get the Government to do propaganda to the effect that each province should become self-sufficient. Each Province should be told that the food subsidy given to them would be very much more limited. We are not living in war-time. It may be that we are not living in normal times either, but if we allow this policy of getting food from abroad to continue, I am afraid it will never come to an end. It is also making the provinces feel that whenever there is shortage, they may appeal to the Centre and get more grain. I do not think that is a right attitude to develop. We should not encourage such attitude. I think, the provinces should be a little more severely dealt with and told that they must make their own areas self-sufficient in the matter of food.

In this connection I would also add that though the people may be used to mono-diet, the Government must do propaganda and make them go in for different diets. Coming from the South as I do, I may say that I am used only to rice and dal or certain other grains, but it is time that the Government did sufficient propaganda and made the people understand that in the interest of economy of the country it is absolutely necessary for us to take to other varieties of food. We must also encourage the establishment of dairies all over the land so that people may have more nourishing food, like milk and milk-products.

I do not think it is necessary for me to go into all the detailed proposals in the budget. I do hope that the honourable the Finance Minister when he finally considers his financial proposals he will take into consideration the views expressed by us all here, which I am sure is for the benefit of the common man of our country who forms the greatest part of the population. While I congratulate him for certain reliefs that he has given, I feel they have not been given to the men who really deserve them. Once more I would tell him that in spite of having great faith in him, and great faith in the budget which he was going to present, I am sorry we have been disappointed to some extent, and I hope this disappointment will be rectified to a great extent before we finish with the Budget.

Shri O. V. Alagesan (Madras: General): The criticism against this budget is not confined to this House, and the main critics are not represented in this House; they are outside. That is all the more the reason why that opposition should have been taken into account while framing the budget. But I am sorry to say that that aspect of the matter was not looked into. There is misrepresentation in the country that this is a capitalistic Government. Of course, all of us know that that is not true. But I am forced to admit that this Budget gives a handle to that argument. I am sure the leadership and the rank and file of the Congress are quite sound and they will scotch all harmful influences that may be at work for the time being. This is a famine budget and the provision for the importing of as much as 4 million tons of food grain from other countries and of more than Rs. 32 crores for subsidising distribution bears this out. We are going through a famine and critical period. In a famine period we usually take from those that have and give it to those that have not. But the honourable the Finance Minister has perhaps chosen to follow the Biblical precept, namely that to those that have, more will be given and from those that have not, even the little they have will be taken away.

Sir, I do not want to join the chorus of condemnation that has been going on in this House from yesterday, but I may tell the honourable the Finance Minister that if this budget had come from his predecessor it would not have occasioned any surprise or disappointment. He was careful—I mean the other gentleman—and because he suspected that his budget would be branded a capitalistic budget on the slightest pretext, he was anxious to take into account the other side. Hear, in the present year, the opposite has happened. Our Finance Minister, being a socialist by conviction, has gone out of his way to appease the capitalists of the country. I do not think he was justified in that, and as one of the previous speakers pointed out, he has helped those that did not deserve help. I would like to know whether they have played the game so far. They have not. The honourable Finance Minister has acknowledged in his speech that labour has played its part. There has been fewer strikes and there has been greater production. But what did the capitalists do? The Governor-General advised them; the Prime Minister appealed to them, the Deputy Prime Minister assured them, and the honourable the Finance Minister has been coaxing and cajoling them. But with what result? Our loans, the loans floated by our National Government were not subscribed. The response has been next to nil. When a loan of Rs. 150 crores was floated, Government got only Rs. 55 crores. What was the position when an alien Government was ruling this country? Their loans were over-subscribed within a very short time. Does this not show that that section which is being appeased is perhaps the most unpatriotic section in the country today? So, this policy of appeasement, I fear, may not bear fruit; it may on the other hand lead to greater demands. After all, they have had everything they wanted from the honourable the Finance Minister. Having practised successful non-co-operation against the Government they have had their pound of flesh, true to their Shylockean tradition.

Sir, all this has been done in the name of greater production. We want more and more investment and so we have to appease this section. That is the argument running through the speech of the honourable the Finance Minister. Since there exists a national emergency today we are going to have a Bill tomorrow asking labour not to strike. We are going to say to labour, "if you strike you will be punished," but what has capital been doing? Was it not tantamount to strike—I should like to ask the honourable the Finance Minister. They have been all the while striking. Will there be a Bill to say to them that they will be punished if they don't co-operate? If they don't invest up to a certain limit and if they don't subscribe to our loans, will this Government say to them that they will be punished? I am sure the honourable the Deputy Prime Minister is capable of doing it—perhaps he is the only force today who is capable of doing that. Many people misrepresent him as being lenient towards capital. I don't think it is true because he is the one person who has seen the last of the feudal relics in this country. It is not too much to expect from him to deal with these capitalists in his own way.

I leave it at that and pass on to the other object of this Budget, namely bringing down the high prices prevailing in the country today. It may seem paradoxical for the Government to speak of high prices when they themselves are regulating the prices. They regulate prices to a very great extent. My excuse for bringing in the question of food prices now is that I was unfortunately not present here when food was debated in this House for two days. Going through the food prices index you will find that when control was there last, that is in the month of December 1947, the index price for cereals alone, which were being controlled by the Government, was 329. Then control was removed and again re-imposed. Now, in the month of January 1949 it is 478. The increase is 149 points. But, pulses which are not controlled have registered a fall in prices. Their index price has come down by 138 points; it stood at 583 in December 1947 and has come down to 445 in January 1949. So also in the case of other food articles. When the combined index of food articles shows only a rise of 64 points, the prices of cereals which are being controlled by Government show a rise of 149 points, that is 2½ times the general index. I may tell you, Sir, how this is caused. Many people may be under the wrong impression that all this goes into the pockets of the producer, the tiller of the soil or the man who owns the land; it is not so. I shall give you some figures which will explain the position. Paddy is procured in the District of my friend Mr. Wilson sitting next to me—Krishna District of Andhra Desh—at about Rs. 127 per cart load. It is sold in my District (Chingliput district), of course after converting it into rice, at Rs. 189. The difference is about Rs. 62 and, that is a difference of 48 per cent. This wide disparity between the procurement price and the retail price is the main reason and the breeding ground for blackmarket. I will rather go to the extent of saying that the Government does blackmarketing in its ration shops because the present disparity in prices enables both the consumer and the producer to make the transaction between themselves which will be profitable to both the parties. That is the position. But where does this difference of 48 or 50 per cent go? It goes mostly to the pockets of the middlemen, the whole sale dealer; whether he is a single individual or a co-operative society it does not make any difference. My friend Prof. Ranga may take exception to it but if he goes into details of the accounts of these producer-cum-consumer co-operative societies, he will find that they get not less than twenty-five per cent.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: But they have not mulcted it.

Shri O. V. Alagesan: Not only that, I shall tell you another fact which is startling. A maund of rice should be equivalent to 24½ measures and so a bag which contains generally 2 maunds of rice should contain 49½ measures. The Civil Supplies Department of Madras says that it would be enough if the wholesale dealer gave 46 measures for 2 maunds. They allow him to take 2½ measures of rice every bag. What does it mean? They say it is due to the Railwaymen—perhaps they accuse Mr. Santhanam for it—they say the railway men pilfer and so we have to make this margin. Sir, this is what a high-placed official told me and I cannot hide it here because I feel that this is a very serious question and a drastic remedy should be found for it in the very near future by the honourable the Food Minister and by the Government as a whole. It comes to this. You procure 4 measures of paddy from the producer. You should give at least 1-7/8th measures of rice to the consumer whereas you give only 1-3/8th measures to him; that is, one seer of rice is taken away from every man who purchases rice for one rupee and he has to pay a tax of 5½ annas in the rupee for this luxury of rationing being run by the Government. That shows the highest limit of inefficiency of the control organisation and of the distribution organisation of the Government and it requires thorough overhauling. The maximum margin that can be allowed need not be more than 15 per cent. That way you can bring down the prices of cereals by 25 per cent and the food price index will show an automatic fall by more than 40 or 50 points. When the government controls the prices, what is the use of the Finance Minister saying that we are fighting prices? You need not fight them, you can bring them down. Food is the biggest item of expenditure for the majority of our countrymen.

I believe this point will be borne in mind by the Food Minister and will be attended to at once because the other day while answering a supplementary question of mine, he said that the Central Government are responsible both for the wholesale and retail prices. I think the responsibility stops with just approving the prices put up by the Provincial Governments. The Central Government should do a little more scrutiny and see that the over all margin between the procurement price and the retail price at the other end never exceeds 15 per cent. That way you can bring down the prices. I should like to press this concrete suggestion for the attention of the Government.

Sir, I have a few more points which I shall make if you will permit me.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am afraid the honourable Member has had his time.

[Mr. Deputy Speaker]

I have got a list of nearly 32 speakers. I find that some of them when I want to call them are not in their seats and others when I call them are not ready. That is what I find. To avoid any inconvenience to honourable Members I propose to call speakers in the following order so that they need not be taken by surprise: Mr. Barman, Shrimati Dakshyanami Velayudhan, Mr. Kesava Rao, Shri Deshbandhu Gupta, Mr. Vijayavargiya, Mr. Siddhaveerappa, and if time permits Mr. Naziruddin Ahmad, for today.

Shri Deshbandhu Gupta (Delhi): Sir, I would like to take my chance tomorrow.

The Honourable Shri K. Santhanam (Minister of State for Railways and Transport): The convention is that no one who is called upon by the Speaker or Chairman may decline—if he does so it is a sort of disrespect to the House and the Speaker or the Chairman. I think this convention may be followed by all the Members.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: That is very important. There may be so many other Members who are really anxious to speak but wish to sit down for the convenience of other speakers. I think everyone of us must keep himself ready any moment the Speaker calls upon him to speak. The House is not supposed to be aware of any list.

Pandit Mukut Bihari Lal Bhargava (Ajmer-Merwara): Does the convention referred to by my honourable friend apply before the Speaker has actually called an honourable Member to speak?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am afraid honourable Members have misunderstood the position. I receive chits after chits and for my own convenience I have prepared a list of all the gentlemen who stand from time to time so that I may not lose sight of them. Therefore they need not be standing up and down every time. It is only for that purpose I have prepared a list. But when I begin to call the speakers, some of them are not in their seats. At other times I am calling they are not ready. It is not entirely their fault. They cannot be on the tip-toe expectation of being called all the hours of the day. Therefore they may say 'I may be called next'. It is not that they decline. Therefore for the convenience of the House, I do not want to spring a surprise on honourable Members who are really anxious to speak. Therefore, without taking any more time, I have prescribed this order for today. I will call other Members tomorrow. If it is the desire of the House that they must stand up as often as necessary until they catch my eye—I shall follow the other procedure. But until it is found inconvenient the procedure I have already suggested will be followed today. I call upon Mr. Barman.

Shri Upendranath Barman (West Bengal: General): Sir, previous speakers have spoken about the Budget and have criticised it in all possible ways. They have not left out even the slightest defect on the part of the Government that they have detected. But I suppose that the honourable the Finance Minister is not the only person responsible for all the ills that we find in our body politic today. If there is corruption in our system are we not responsible for it directly and indirectly? Is it not our responsibility to co-operate with the Government and also to devise constructive means and offer suggestions to the Government? And if after that Government fails to do that, then we who are part and parcel of the Government in an indirect way may legitimately accuse the Government.

I fully endorse one thing in that criticism, namely, about the proposal to raise the post-card and letter rates. It is a valid criticism why those whose letters and cards won't be carried by air should be asked to pay those rates. That is the unanimous opinion of this House and I hope the honourable the Finance Minister will consider it and reconsider the policy of raising the rates as proposed in the Budget.

When we criticise our Government for their shortcomings here and there we should at the same time remember that only before this Budget session we were praising our Government that have done so many things. There were so many distresses and calamities heaped one upon another, and it is to the credit of our Government for having handled them successfully which any other Government might well imitate and might be proud of. They have averted all those calamities. Not only that. They have piloted the affairs of the State in a most praiseworthy manner. Therefore, when every day practically we were praising our leaders it is not fair to condemn the Budget in the way that we have done. We expect of course that with the advent of independence in this country, not only our leaders but we ourselves also should be conscious of the fact that the down-trodden masses who had been suffering so long from all sorts of tyranny and want should now get relief. We hope that after our calamities have passed away our leaders, assisted by us, would be able to divert their attention and pay full attention to the question as to how relief in all possible ways can be given to the masses. During the British rule all sorts of defects entered into our body politic. Our masses are illiterate, ill-clad, half-fed and they have no medical relief. These are the crying needs of the country today. Now that most of our ills and calamities are overpowered, our Government, assisted by us, should divert their attention to these matters.

[At this stage Mr. Deputy Speaker vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Shrimati G. Durgabai (one of the panel of Chairmen).]

Within the few minutes allotted to me I shall mention only two facts. But before doing so I shall make one general observation regarding the food policy and the running of the Agriculture Department of the Government of India. Whenever any question about the amelioration of the masses is raised, it is said that it is the Provincial Government that are responsible. It is really so. And if our Provinces, or we ourselves, do desire to maintain provincial autonomy it is high time for us to be alive to our responsibilities. But this food problem is entirely a different matter—at least for the time being. It may be that it shall be the entire responsibility of the Provinces some years after when you have solved the food crisis. But during this critical time I think the Government of India should assume all the responsibility and all the authority over the whole of the country so that they can tackle this problem in the way they think fit.

In our New Constitution, so far as industries are concerned, we have adopted, or propose to adopt a provision that where the Central Government considers necessary, it should have the power to assume responsibility for the industries, irrespective of the power or responsibility of the provinces or states. My own view is that in Agriculture also this is a very essential provision at a time when the country is passing through a grave crisis, when we are actually begging for our daily bread from other countries and when we are wasting our foreign exchange resources on the import of vast quantities of food-supplies from foreign countries. All of us know that in the rural areas there are places where people cannot get even a square meal a day, even though they have the money to purchase it. This being the state of affairs, the Centre cannot absolve itself of its responsibilities by saying that Agriculture is a provincial subject. Whatever might be the future structure of our Constitution, the

[Shri Upendranath Barman]

Centre must immediately assume responsibility for Agriculture. Take for instance, the case of the United States of America. It is, perhaps, the most highly industrialised country in the world; but the Agricultural Budget of the U. S. A. is only next in importance to the Defence Budget, because food is the first and foremost necessity of any country. I am not for a moment trying to compare the Budget figures of the two countries. What I am aiming at is that adequate importance should be given for the development of Agriculture and that the Centre must take responsibility for it.

There is one aspect of agriculture for which the Centre has assumed responsibility—I mean scientific research. There are several agriculture research institutes. But, unfortunately, the fruits of the research are not carried to the peasant, with the result that these institutes serve no useful purpose. The agriculturist is now completely ignorant of what is happening in these institutes; consequently the 'Grow More Food' and similar campaigns have come to nought. Every year, every day, every second, the best part of our soil is being washed away. Our agriculturist does not know what is meant by soil conservation. Instead of preserving the available soil, we are trying to solve the problem, by importing more and more of ammonium sulphate, and starting fertiliser factories. My humble submission, therefore, is that in every divisional town arrangement should be made for demonstration of soil survey and soil conservation. The agriculturist will then naturally be interested in growing more, thereby benefitting himself as well as the whole country. At present the Government of India have certain land reclamation schemes, but according to the confession of the honourable the Food Minister himself, hardly 5 per cent. of the agricultural land has been touched.

Another important reason why I feel that the Centre should take upon itself the responsibility for agriculture is that the provinces with their limited resources and multifarious problems that face them with the advent of freedom, are not able to look after agricultural problems properly.

As regards relief measures so far as West Bengal is concerned, my humble submission is that we are not satisfied with what has been done for the rehabilitation of refugees from East Bengal and the Centre should make more provision than it has done at present. We feel that the way in which the income-tax divisible pool has been distributed has not been fair to West Bengal.

Shrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan (Madras: General): Madam the Budget presented to the House by our able Finance Minister gives us the various aspects of our national economy in terms of the administration of the State. A new feature of this year's Budget is that it is free India's second Budget, for which we can naturally take some pride. I was a critic of last year's Budget in the sense that it showed a trend to pamper the rich at the expense of the poor. Looking from that angle this year's Budget is not in any way better. I must frankly express my feeling that I see no item of the Budget to improve the lot of the common man. The fault does not wholly lie either with the Finance Minister or even in the Government as constituted today. But the fault lies in the whole system which was transferred to us with the Transfer of Power. We have changed the bottle, but not the wine. It is the same old wine in a new bottle and it is for us to see whether there is any change in the wine as well.

India is in a state of transition and without the guidance of the Father of the Nation we are left to shoulder more responsibilities. If we do not bring out a new order on the basis of Mahatma Gandhi's precepts and practices India will have to face a violent revolution. This is my candid reading of the atmosphere in which we are living today. There is every sign of a revolution from Assam to Amritsar and from Cape Comorin to Himachal Pradesh. We cannot ignore the facts and if we ignore the facts, we will be only following a negative attitude. How are we going to canalise the tempo of the people? I wish that the state should proclaim openly that India will organise a state on the basis of truth and non-violence. We have a psychological advantage in forging ahead in this line because we were following it in one way or the other in the past. I have no doubt that India will have to accept Gandhiji's creed not as a philosophy of life but as a philosophy of the state in the end. If we have foresight we can avoid the conflicts, the signs of which are seen in our neighbouring countries. Our ministers are proclaiming the ideal of Mahatma Gandhi in their day to day utterances. I want to see it practised not only by the Ministers but by the whole Government. The love that the people of the country show to the Father of the nation is spontaneous and this spontaneous outburst is due to their desire to have a peaceful and happy life. The common man does not exploit the name of Gandhiji either for position or for any personal interests.

The real achievements of the Government in the last year can be measured only in terms of the satisfaction gained by the common man. Many schemes, including the one on insurance, were passed in the legislature and they are lying in the files of the secretariat and no actual work has been commenced. Lakhs of villages in India have not been affected in any way by the achievement of our freedom. They know more about Gandhiji than our Government or the working of it. They have more admiration and attraction for the personality of our Prime Minister than for his Government. They are all on the wake up and alertness is seen everywhere.

The high cost of living for which the common man is not responsible has given him a shake up in his attitude. He is ill clad, he is ill-fed and nothing more is done for his education or health. We cannot call any government a good government if it is not going to improve the conditions of the common man and in this direction nothing has been done. Our ministers are going here and there for ceremonial functions and speeches. They speak many things, more irrelevant than relevant. This has become the common talk of the intelligentsia of this country. A minister goes to Bombay and speaks about the budget for 1949-50. This gives to a lot of writing and counter-writing in the papers. Another minister goes to a meeting sponsored by the R. S. S. and thereafter goes to a Congress meeting and addresses them on nonviolence. Yet another minister says that in ten years he will introduce socialism in the country, whereas the Government has said that they are not going to do anything of that kind. The Government has declared their policy that they are not going to nationalise any of the industries in the near future. The same Minister has said that labour should be loyal and humble as he is. Even in small things the ministers interfere and the working of the secretariat has been made a bungling affair. To get a reserved seat in a train from Wardha to Delhi one will have to put through a trunk call to the Premier of the province. Is it not fun if ministers are going to issue chits for reservation like booking clerks issuing tickets for the passengers? A minister had the audacity to speak at a public meeting that ministers are open to corruption and bribery because the people give it.

There is noticed in circles that support the Government a spirit of violence. It is spreading into the vitals of our national life and if the situation goes on I fear of great danger to the future. Newspapers and the press try to make the people believe that the R. S. S. movement has fizzled out, but those who know the truth will say that it is still a strong fascist organisation which has got support in influential quarters both inside and outside the Government.

[Sbrimati Dakshayani Velayudhan]

Government should set an example to develop the national character which we have inherited from the Father of the nation. When there is discipline and national character at the top the people will follow it. The intelligentsia in the country have taken to think that dishonesty has taken the place of honesty.

Coming to the budget proper the status quo of the Imperial bureaucratic government is continued. Look at the manner in which the Finance Minister has tried to balance the budget. He has done it by taxing the poor and coaxing the rich industrialists and businessmen. Who are the greatest enemies of this country. Who are the enemies of this country? Are they the Communists or the much dreaded socialists or the workers who strike? Who are the enemies of this country, if not the industrialists or the businessmen who hoard all the money that they have without doing any benefit to the country? In my opinion they are the greatest enemies of the country and the Government, because they are not extending a helping hand to the Government and in my opinion the industrialists and the capitalists have succeeded in bringing the Government kneeling at their feet. Did not the first Finance Minister make many concessions to the capitalists in his first budget? In his speech he said that these measure would bring confidence into the capitalists and industrialists which were shattered by the Liaquat Ali Budget by its taxation proposals. Still they did not try to help the Government. They did not shed their fear complex and come forward to help the Government in their production drive. Why should they still insist on getting more and more help from the Government? They are today trying to get the same amount of profit which they were making during the war time. Madam, they are not the type of people who have got the interest of the country at heart. They are all hoarding money and that by sucking the life-blood of the nation and leaving the Government and the people half dead. They are not at all satisfied and they will never be satisfied whatever concessions Government may give them. They had amassed wealth like anything during the war time and if it is taxed it is only to build up the economy of a new infant state. To leave the progress of the country into the hands of the industrialists will be the greatest blunder that the Government is doing today. To hope to raise the standard of life of the people with the help of the industrialists and the capitalists will be like entrusting the lamb to the wolf. I shall just cite one instance to show how the industrialist is giving too much trouble to the people. Take the case of sugar. That industry is a protected industry and people are left at the mercy of the industry by the Government and now the industry has begun to say that it is not the industrialist that needs protection but the Minister for Agriculture who needs protection. That is how they have brought their demand. The introduction of the duty on sugar will aggravate matters. Sugar is not a thing of luxury: it is an essential commodity and it is most essential for children. Some economists say that money has passed from the hands of the industrialists and capitalists to the people in the rural parts, viz, the agriculturists. It is a fact that money has gone to the hands of the agriculturists but it is wrong to identify the agriculturists with the poor workers in the field. The economists blame that the poor people are not in the habit of putting money in the bank. They have got their own indigenous method of saving money. If they are not going to the bank to deposit money it is because they have nothing to deposit in the bank. If you want to see the truth of this statement, go to the villages. We can see there people who even sell their ration to get a meal for the day.

I am glad that the honourable the Finance Minister has made provision in the Budget for opening a new radio station in Malabar and also that he has imposed a duty on liquor which I advocated last year.

श्री शान्तनु कुमार दास : अध्यक्ष महोदय, हमारे अर्थ मंत्री ने जो बजट पेश किया है, उसको देखने से ही यह माहूम पड़ता है कि यह बजट भारतीय जनता का बजट नहीं है। साधारण जनता का बजट नहीं वह बजट पूँजीपतियों और उद्योगपतियों का है। इस बजट की कीमत जनता नहीं समझती है। जनता को यह एतराज होता है कि चीजें महंगी न पहुँचें। वह चाहती है कि किसी तरह चीजें सस्ती उन तक पहुँचें। बजट घाटे का है या वचत का है जन्ता इस बात में फ़िक्र नहीं करती।

चीजों में कर बढ़ रहा है, करों की वृद्धि होती रहेगी। लेकिन मैं इसके बारे में कुछ कहना नहीं चाहता। क्योंकि कल से आज तक सदस्यों ने इसके बारे में बहुत कुछ कहा है। पोस्टकार्ड, लिफाफा और शक्कर आदि चीजों पर कर की वृद्धि होती है। मैं पोस्टकार्ड के बारे में एक बात कहना चाहता हूँ कि पोस्टकार्ड की कीमत बहुत आन्दोलन के बाद दो पैसे का हुआ था। हमारी सरकार के समय में जो सुविधा दी गई थी उसको छीन लिया गया, और हमारे अर्थमंत्री ने पूँजीपतियों और उद्योगपतियों को तीन करोड़ की राहत दी है। कंपिटल टैक्स पूरा माफ़ कर दिया। सुपर टैक्स में उल्लेखनीय कमी की है। पिछले बजट में पूँजीपति बढ़े हुए करों की शिकायत करते थे। उनका यह कहना था कि सरकार जब मदद नहीं देती तो पूँजीपति तिजोरी से रुपया नहीं निकालेंगे, और नये पुराने जो धन्य हैं उनका विकास नहीं हो सकेगा। हालाँकि सरकार ने पिछले बजट में इस किस्म की राहत दी है, लेकिन इसका खास नतीजा क्या हुआ, कुछ नहीं। हमारे अर्थ मंत्री ने इस विषय को जानते हुए भी कैसे यह राहत दी है। मैं एक बात कहना चाहता हूँ। हमारे देश में खाद्य की परिस्थिति संकटापन्न है। खाद्यमंत्री की आवाज़ कोने कोने में गूँज रही है, लेकिन इसका नतीजा कुछ नहीं हुआ है। गलती कहाँ है। मैं समझता हूँ कि 'शो मोर फूड डिपार्टमेन्ट' में जो अकसर लोग रहते हैं वह कृषि के बारे में कुछ नहीं जानते हैं। कालेजों से पढ़ कर जो युवक आते हैं और युद्ध से फिर कर जो युवक आते हैं वह इस डिपार्टमेन्ट में घुस जाते हैं। कृषि के बारे में वे कुछ जानते ही नहीं। मैं यह अदब से अर्ज करता हूँ कि जो भी लोग इस डिपार्टमेन्ट में आते हैं वह कृषि के बारे में जानकारी रखें तो आप देखेंगे कि फिर से पैदावार ज्यादा हो जायगी। और सब के मुँह में हंसी की लहर दौड़ जायगी।

मैं एक और बात कहना चाहता हूँ कि अर्थमंत्री ने प्राकृतिक दुर्घटनाओं का जिक्र करते हुए कहा कि प्राकृतिक दुर्घटनायें हमारे देश में बढ़ती जाती हैं। पिछले वर्ष में बिहार में बाढ़ हुई, गजुरात में अकाल, बम्बई, मैं

[श्री शान्तनु कुमार दास]

साइक्लोन और मदरास और बंगाल में आंशिक अकाल हुआ है। यह दुर्घटनायें तो जरूर होती रहीं और होती ही रहेंगी। इस लिये मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि प्राकृतिक दुर्घटनायें के सिवा और भी कुछ अप्राकृतिक दुर्घटनायें होती रहती हैं। यह होता है कि रेल्वे हड़ताल, मिलों में हड़ताल, और डाक तार की हड़ताल तो रोज की चीजें हो गई हैं। यह हड़तालें जब सरकार के कब्जे में आजायगी तो सरकार को सुख मिल सकेगा। मैं इसी लिये कहता हूँ कि चीन और बरमा का सबक हमारे सामने है। जब हम लोग गांव गांव में काटेज इन्डस्ट्री का विकास करेंगे तभी हम अभाव को कम कर सकेंगे। आज प्रान्त में जहां ज्यादा मिलें नहीं ज्यादा कारखाने नहीं वहां काटेज इन्डस्ट्री बढ़ाने के लिये हमारी सरकार कोशिश करे। मैं जानता हूँ कि उड़ीसा में बहुत गरीबी है। काटेज इन्डस्ट्री के बारे में उड़ीसा के लोग काफी अच्छी तरह जानते हैं। काम जानते हैं। जब उड़ीसा में काटेज इन्डस्ट्री शुरू करने के लिये हमारी केन्द्रीय सरकार मदद देगी तभी अच्छा होगा। उड़ीसा में विलीका नामक एक, (Lake) है। हंटर साहब ने एक रिपोर्ट में लिखा है कि यहां पुराने जमाने में ज्यादा साल्ट होता था। यू० पी० और बिहार में उड़ीसा साल्ट सप्लाई करता था। अगर अब यह आमदनी बन्द होती है तो कैसे काम चलेगा। इस लिये मैं बड़े अदब से अर्ज करता हूँ कि यह साल्ट इन्डस्ट्री उड़ीसा में किसी तरह बढ़ाई जाय। उड़ीसा समुद्र के किनारे है उड़ीसा में दो बन्दरगाह हैं। गोपालपुर और चांदवाली। पुराने जमाने में वाणिज्य अच्छी तरह चलता था उड़ीसा की बदकिस्मती से वह वाणिज्य बन्द हो गया है। मैं केन्द्रीय सरकार से बड़े अदब से यह अर्ज करता हूँ कि कैसे इसका जल्दी इन्तजाम किया जाय।

मुझे यह खेद है कि हमारी सरकार का खर्च अर्थमंत्री ने नहीं कमी कर दी है क्योंकि इसके लिये उन्होंने यत्न नहीं किया। और मैं कहना चाहता हूँ कि हमारी सरकार में जो बड़े आफिस होल्डर हैं उनको तीन हजार से ज्यादा तनखाह नहीं लेनी चाहिए। जो तीन हजार से ज्यादा तनखाह पाते हैं उनके हाउस को मैनटेन करने पर ज्यादा खर्च हो जाता है। मैं कहता हूँ कि राजाजी ने एक दफा कहा था कि मैं गवर्नमेंट हाउस में रहता हूँ तो जब मेरे मेहमान आ जाते हैं तो बाहर निकलने के लिए राह नहीं पाते हैं। उनकी यह इच्छा है कि जैसे हमारे पंडित जी और सरदार साहब रहते हैं उसी तरह उनके रहने का प्रबन्ध हो जाय। मैं चाहता हूँ कि उनको उसी तरह रहने के लिए हमारी सरकार प्रबन्ध करे तो अच्छा होगा। कुछ खर्च की भी कमी हो जायेगी।

मैं यह कहकर अपने वक्तव्य को खत्म करता हूँ और उसके साथ साथ मैं यह कहना चाहता हूँ कि मैं इस बजट को पसन्द करता हूँ, पर हार्दिक समर्थन नहीं देता क्योंकि जनता उसका स्वागत नहीं करती है।

Shri Santanu Kumar Das (Orissa: General): By merely looking at the Budget presented by our Finance Minister one finds that this is not a budget of the Indian people. It is not the budget of the common people. It is the Budget of capitalists and industrialists. The value of this Budget is not appraised by the people. The people raise the plea that commodities should not come dear to them. They want that somehow commodities should become available to them at cheap prices. The people do not worry about the fact whether the Budget shows a deficit or a surplus.

Tax on commodities is increasing; taxes will go on increasing. But, I do not want to say anything about it because yesterday and today the members have said a great deal. The prices of post cards and envelopes are raised and tax is increased on commodities like sugar. I want to say something with regard to the post-card. The price of the post-card was brought down to two pice after a good deal of agitation. The relief that had been granted has been withdrawn during the rule of our Government, and our Finance Minister has provided a relief of three crores to our capitalists and industrialists. The capital tax has been wholly remitted. Considerable reduction has been made in the super-tax. In regard to the last Budget the capitalists complained about the increased taxes. It was said by them that, when the Government was not prepared to help, the capitalists would not loosen their purse strings, with the result that the new and old industries would not be developed. Although relief of that kind was granted by the Government under the previous Budget, what special results were achieved thereby? Nothing. How has our Finance Minister granted this relief even when he was aware of this position? I wish to say one thing. The food situation in our country is distressing. The voice of the Food Minister is ringing in every part of the country but this has not yielded any results. Where does the fault lie? I feel that the officers of the Grow More Food Department do not know anything about agriculture. Youngmen fresh from colleges and others returned from war service forge their way into this Department. They simply know nothing about agriculture. I respectfully submit that if the people who enter this Department possess knowledge of agriculture you will see that production would increase once again and there would be smiles on every face.

I want to say something else. While talking of natural calamities the Finance Minister said that natural calamities were on the increase in our country. During the last year there occurred floods in Bihar, a famine in Gujrat, a cyclone in Bombay and partial famine in Madras and Bengal. These calamities have no doubt been occurring and will keep occurring. What I want to say is this that besides natural calamities there are also some unnatural calamities which keep occurring. A strike in the railways, a strike in the mills and a strike in the posts and telegraphs have become things of daily occurrence. The Government will be able to find some respite when they will have acquired some control over these strikes. Hence, I say that the lessons of China and Burma are before us. We would be able to remove scarcity only when we start cottage industries in every village. Our Government should make efforts to develop cottage industries in that province which does not at present possess enough mills and factories. I know what great poverty there is in Orissa.

1100 CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [4TH MARCH 1949]

[Shri Santanu Kumar Das]

The people of Orissa know a great deal about cottage industry. They know how to work. It will be good only when our Central Government renders help in starting cottage industry in Orissa. There is a lake in Orissa called Chilka. It is mentioned in a report by Mr. Hunter that more salt was produced there in the old times and that Orissa used to supply salt to U. P. and Bihar. How will it be possible to carry on now if this income stops? Hence, I submit very respectfully that this salt industry in Orissa should be developed somehow. Orissa is situated on seashore. It has two ports, Gopalpur and Chandwali. Commerce flourished here in the old days. To the misfortune of Orissa that commerce has ceased. I very respectfully appeal to the Central Government that something should be done in this behalf at an early date.

It grieves me that the Finance Minister has effected no reduction in the expenditure of our Government—he has not endeavoured to do so. I wish to say that the holders of high office in our Government should not receive a salary exceeding three thousand. It costs even more to maintain the houses of those who are in receipt of more than three thousand as salary. Rajaji once remarked, "I live in the Government House, but the guests who visit my house are unable to find the way out. It is his desire that similar arrangements might be made for his residence as exist for the residence of our Panditji and Sardar Sahib. I think that it would be good if our Government could make similar arrangements for his residence. This would also effect some reduction in expenditure.

With this I close my speech. I wish to say incidentally that I like this budget but I do not give it a hearty support because the people have not hailed it well.

Shri V. C. Kesava Rao (Madras: General): This is the second budget after India got independence. All these years, the common man has been thinking that he will be happy when we get full Swaraj; but I am surprised to find that the budget aims at giving relief to the richer man but not to the poor man. I don't know why the super tax on the capitalist has been reduced. It is a wonder to me why the Finance Minister is going to help those tax payers who have made crores of rupees profits during the war, about whom, even the Finance Minister cannot say that they have paid their taxes. Even the expenditure incurred on the Income-tax Investigation Commission has not been realised. I am sorry to find that there is not even a single scheme which would help the common man. The common man wants a house to live in, cloth to wear and food to eat. We, Congress people, have been telling them for more than half a century that they will be happy when independence is attained; but we have now framed a budget for the rich man, and not for the common man.

Speaking about the defence expenditure I am sorry to say that before the war, the defence expenditure was 47 crores whereas now it has gone up to 157 crores. I do not know whether we are aiming at any war. Naturally, last year there was expenditure due to the Kashmir operations. This year, I do not think that there is anything which we can expect. Such being the case, I do not know why we are spending such a large amount as 157 crores for our defence forces. Even during the war, we Congress people have been criticising the British Ministers for spending a lot of money for defence. Another point, I would like to point out in this connection, is that our military is not so efficient as it ought to be. Now, promotions in the military are so rapid. A man who is not even thirty years old has become a Colonel and a Brigadier. I do not think in a country there is a Colonel or a Brigadier who is less than forty-five years of age.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Should we get the Britishers again here?

Shri R. K. Sidhva: We have got an efficient army.

Shri V. C. Kesava Rao: Comparing any country, the United States of America or the United Kingdom, there is no country where people have attained this rank before forty-five years of age.

Prof. N. G. Ranga: That is not a good thing.

Shri V. C. Kesava Rao: Especially in the military, I think, experience is more necessary than anything else.

Another point I would like to point out is that there is no provision in the budget for observing economy. The Central Pay Commission had suggested not to give any dearness allowance to people getting more than Rs. 1,000. But, the Central Government is not prepared to reduce the dearness allowances for its highly paid officers. Even officers getting Rs. 3,000 are allowed to draw dearness allowances. In this connection, I would like to state that one-third of the postal officers have gone to Pakistan. Even though we ought to have only three fourths of the prepartition number, the number of the officers have increased considerably well beyond this mark and the expenditure has automatically gone up. I want to point out that we are going to establish many Embassies in many foreign countries. As a measure of economy, I say that we should not establish any more Embassies and we should even go to the extent of reducing the staff in the present Embassies.

Then every Ministry has got lump sum grants for miscellaneous expenditure. In every Ministry there is provision for all kinds of expenditure and this miscellaneous expenditure is at the discretion of the Officers to spend in whatever way they liked. If we cut down this miscellaneous expenditure, we will be able to save some money.

The Retrenchment Committee's work has become a farce. They have recommended for retrenchment of officers who were recruited during the war. Till now no Ministry is prepared to retrench even one officer. I understand in the C.P.W.D. one clerk getting 60/- was retrenched. Had they have only one to retrench from the staff? If the proposals of the Economy Committee and the Retrenchment Committee are put into practice, I think we can save a lot of money and by that the inflation may be curtailed.

We have been spending lot of money for imports of foodgrains and last year we spent 130 crores and this year we are going to spend more and I think if we spend a few crores or even a few lakhs for improving our fertilizers or our natural manure like cow dung etc. I think we will be able to produce more. A farmer who wants to produce more is not able to get fertilizers or manure. I wish the honourable Food Minister will spend some money in providing these manures to the farmers. To curtail this expenditure on food some money should be spent on developing the fish industry. We have vast coastlines. If we develop the industry, we can supplement food with fish to a larger extent. I wish that a portion of this money spent for purchasing grains from other countries may be diverted to the development of this industry.

Shri H. Siddaveerappa (Mysore State): Madam, the measuring rod by which we have to see whether this Budget is a Budget for the good of the common man is to see the amount of good it does to the common man. I don't wish to enter into the details as to how far the Budget will help to improve the economic good of the common man. I wish to touch only the general lines regarding that. If you bear in mind that in this country 70 per cent of the people live in villages and most of them—if not all—are agriculturists, you will have to see how far this Budget helps to improve the common man. In the first instance I would like to thank the Government for having helped the agriculturists by increasing the import duty on betelnut and I find that this is the only redeeming feature so far as the indigenous grower is concerned in this Budget. Regarding other points as to how it has become the burden on the common man we will have to say, taken as a whole, this budget is not so bad as is depicted to be and I would like to touch upon one or two points regarding agriculture. We have been seeing that ever since the war there is a chronic disease of food shortage. If we take the period in which we had an economic depression, I think in the years 1930 to 1935 we found that agricultural economy was the worst affected. Nobody ever cared to see whether the crop the farmer produced was sufficient to meet his cost of production. Many stuck to agriculture because they had no other vocation. It is only during the war that this question of food loomed so large with the result that even to-day we are still in the same circle. It baffles the Government. Every year we find that at a time when we want our dollar resources for purchasing capital goods, we are spending enormous amounts for importing our food products. How is it in an agricultural country we are reduced to the pitiable position? You will have to say at least here is a time when we will have to consider our economy in a different way and find out whether in a given time it is not possible for us to see that we are made self-sufficient within a minimum period regarding food. Taken from that standard, in a budget wherein we see that the expenditure estimated is to the tune of about 322 crores and odd, what do we find so far as agriculture is concerned? For the Ministry of Agriculture and Food we see that barely a sum of 80 lakhs has been allotted in this budget. Is it sufficient I would ask. The other day when we had a full-dress debate on Food, the honourable Minister for Food was pleased to tell us that in other countries agriculture is given a proper yard and we find that in America a good deal of money is spent. What are we doing in this country? Have the Government in view any reorientation of policy to see that agriculture is taken as a paying industry and agriculture is encouraged by all means possible by importing machinery, necessary agricultural manure and other goods? The present subsidy does not reach all the cent percent of population. In this country at no time cent percent of the population were on the ration basis. I think only about 5 per cent—mostly townsmen—were under the ration and we should consider that agriculturist, in spite of all his difficulties, was the man who fed the entire population. Most of the people could not be fed on the rationed article. What is it that the Government have done with a view to improve his lot or with a view to importing foreign machinery. We find Governments of other countries have been encouraging starting of several industries for the manufacture of agricultural implements. But here we don't seem to be doing anything to increase the output of fertilizers. It is but natural that we will have to think of this problem and reorientate our policy with a view to seeing that in the minimum period we get the food crops produced in our own country alone and that we are made self-sufficient in food. An honourable member said that surplus money has flown into the rural Parts. I do not believe that the surplus money has ever entered the villages. If the Government want to convince themselves of it, let them start an enquiry and find out what was the agricultural indebtedness before the war and what is the present agricultural indebtedness. Unfortunately in our country there are no banks who would advance money to the agriculturists. Recently we had to go through a banking Bill which was mostly a bankers' Bill, for about eight or ten days. These banks never lend any money to the agriculturists. Under these circumstances I do believe that if at all there is any class in this country—and they form a majority—who were the most hard hit during the war, it is the agriculturists class. They never had any opportunity to make money by easy methods like permits or any other method. They had to till the soil and raise their crops by the sweat of their brow. They are the persons who were most hard hit, and it is high time that the Government formulated a proper policy with regard to food crops, for the next three or five years. Let them not be left in the lurch, as they were left during the days of depression, when the agriculturists were reduced to such hopeless straits that many of them had even to sell their cattle in order to meet the bare necessities of life.

The next point I want to touch upon is about reduction in governmental expenditure. Before we think of imposing indirect taxes to the extent of about Rs. 14 crores, we must consider the question of rigid economy in all our governmental expenditures. I have with me the figures from 1938 to 1947—for undivided India. In 1938-39, the total figure for governmental expenditure was about Rs. 10,90,00,000. In 1946-47, the figure was Rs. 35,00,00,000, and coming to the present year, 1948-49, it is as much as Rs. 48.14 crores per year. I would request the honourable the Finance Minister to find out whether this poor country is capable of bearing this burden, this unduly heavy burden. In this whole budget of three hundred and odd crores of rupees, the encouragement given to agriculturists amounts to only about eighty lakhs. Of course, I may be told that agriculture is a provincial concern. But the Government of India has undertaken to see that this country is self-sufficient in the matter of food. Therefore, it is absolutely essential that before the financial year runs out, some drastic economies are visibly shown in the budget, with a view to increase the confidence of the country.

With regard to food prices, I would like to say just a few words. We find whenever we ask the Provinces or States about this subject, we are told that it is a Central subject. But we find that in the different places there is not even uniformity with regard to food prices. Between Bombay and the Mysore border, for instance, within about a distance of five miles there is great disparity in the price. Food is sold at a higher price in Bombay and at a lower rate in Mysore border. The result is that smuggling is encouraged. Therefore I would request the Government to see that some sort of uniformity in prices, at least in the border areas is brought about.

Sreematty Annie Mascarene (Travancore State): Madam, it is my peculiar privilege to speak when a lady is presiding. Hitherto, we have been hearing discussion on the Budget, and the Finance Minister there, bearing the brunt of the blows was a pitiable sight to see. I wish to paint another picture. The Finance Minister's speech is an economic survey of public finance and expenditure of free India which is just a year and a half old. The aftermath of the war, the unsettled political and economic conditions having their repercussions in the East and the Middle-East, have culminated in the presentation of a deficit budget, the deficit being to the extent of Rs. 14 crores. Some people state, feeling perhaps the pulse of the nation, that millions have waited with throbbing hearts for the promises of the Finance Minister for the future, and fell back in despair when they were told that they had to pay more for sugar, postage and more for cloth. Other state that this is a capitalist budget, and industrialists beamed with a smile when they were told that there is a reduction of super-tax and income-tax, and the capital gains tax is abolished altogether. But I, as a student of history and politics, take an altogether different view. I take this opportunity to congratulate the honourable the Finance Minister for the consummate skill with which he has steered the economic destiny of this young nation, through perilous times. If such a budget had been presented in normal times it would have been scandalous, and scandalous to a professor of economics, and to a nation with such resources and reputation. But we are living under very different conditions. We are living under peculiar circumstances, in a transitional stage, when the last drama—the peroration of the Imperial drama dropped its curtain, and the preamble of the national government entered the arena with a flourish of communal conflicts, when the last stroke of British diplomacy dealt a fatal blow to Bharat Mata resulting in a vivisection and the disastrous consequences resulting from it, in death, dishonour, and damnation, driving us to the deepest depths of degradation, and defiling the fair name of the nation. It is under such circumstances the national leaders of the Congress have undertaken the reins of Government to shape the destiny of this young nation—nay, to sway the rod of an Empire. At this juncture the country stood just on the verge of economic crisis. The capitalists who stood by the agitators expected the agitators to become administrators; the labour which organised itself ever since the national government took up the reins of administration also expected very many things to happen and organised itself as a challenge to the capitalists. Placed between the devil and the deep sea, the leaders of the nation had to shape the destiny of this State with great difficulty. They had to deal with distempered Kashmir; disorganized Hyderabad and to provide for food, clothing and shelter to lakhs and lakhs of refugees rendered homeless by the vivisection of India. Under these circumstances I ask, Madam, whether any administrator however great his genius may be could have devised a Budget much better than this. The present need of the nation is to establish democracy on a sound basis. The present need of the nation is to feed the people, to clothe them and to produce as much of consumer goods as are required just now. Who are the agents of production in India today? Has the nation, I ask, the capacity to nationalise all its industries at one stroke? In that case this Budget is not suitable. As we have had only eighteen months before us we had time only to muster our strength together and lay the foundations of future democracy. Under these circumstances it is but natural to look to the capitalist to give as much of production as is required by the nation. But the capitalist, fearing the several 'isms' facing him and fearing the prospects of his capital, had gone underground. The only magic which could bring him out is the magic of abolishing the Capital Gains Tax and reducing the Income-tax and the Super-tax. We need not think that this is going to be for ever the condition in India. No, the present demand must be satisfied; the life of the nation should be maintained and nurtured so that a better life and a better democracy can be shaped hereafter. If the Budget is a desperate one I wish to invite the attention of the House to the desperate character of democracy. Democracy as a form of government never thrived for long in any country in the world. Democracy has been a difficult political form of government. It could not transcend the walls of the city of Greece without half slavery; it could not remain in Rome for long without converting itself into Imperial autocracy. For 1800 years democracy disappeared from the world till it appeared in the Magna Charta, nurtured by Edward I, Rym. Hampden and culminated in 1688 under the Glorious Revolution, reformed itself in 1832 and perfected itself in 1917 with the women's suffrage. That was the history of democracy in England. The history of democracy in America took 150 years and Lincoln 4 years and a million lives to give it the present shape. The history of democracy in other countries was just the same. After the lurid display of revolution in France it disappeared for a time and came back only in 1878. In China in 1911 there was democracy established, but where is China today? We have to take the lessons and the experience of democracy in other countries before we can establish democracy in our own State which is three times as big as the United States of America and half the size of Europe. Today the administrators, the leaders of the people at the helm of the government, are trying to shape the democracy of India for the time to come, in this transitional period. At this juncture no amount of imagination or political philosophy can help them than to make the best of what the time can afford and build on it the later perfection of democracy. Therefore, if the Budget at the present time looks a bit desperate you cannot help it. The nation has paid heavily for the freedom of India. The nation has to pay still more for the establishment of democracy. Every citizen has to pay for establishing that form of government which has been found from political experience to be the best form of government—the government of the people by the people for the people. Hence I think that the Budget as framed by the Finance Minister is a Budget that was forced upon him by the force of circumstances. If this nation has to be led hereafter, if the administration is to be run on a sounder basis hereafter, this timely budget, this Budget for this year, is necessary and I take this opportunity to congratulate the Finance Minister again.

The destiny of the future is not in our hands. It is true that the proposals in the Budget in respect of postage rates and the sugar tax etc. are the most unkind cuts of all. But we have to remember that every citizen has to pay for his privileges. And who knows what the future is? We are faced with so many difficulties. Time will prove where we are. Many a secret lie hidden in the womb of time like many a gem in the caverns of the sea.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri (U. P.: General): Madam, the honourable lady member who has just preceded me has paid eloquent tributes to the honourable the Finance Minister. I do not propose to criticise the various points made out by her. I wish that the honourable Minister should have this much satisfaction that he has got at least one member, and that too of the fair sex, who has supported him. There was another honourable member who unfortunately is not present in the House just now who sits by my side—I mean Shri Ramalingam Chettiyar—who remarked yesterday that the honourable the Finance Minister had earned the applause and congratulations of the various Chambers of Commerce in this country. That may be a matter of jubilation for the honourable Minister but let me frankly state that I cannot congratulate him, nor can he expect congratulations from the class of people whom I represent. It has been stated in the course of the various speeches delivered yesterday as well as today that there is no departure in this Budget from that of the previous year's budget. I must say that it was a profound shock and disappointment to me inasmuch as Dr. Matthai has had the reputation of being an economist of progressive, or shall I say, socialistic ideas in spite of his close and long association with the Tatas. I think he said in the course of his Budget speech that the principal motive behind his budget proposals was that he wanted to check or arrest inflation by giving numerous reliefs to the Industrialist. If it were possible, I would have congratulated him, but I must express my grave doubts over his hopes. Today I feel that the profit motive is ruling supreme in the minds of the capitalists of this country and as long as this profit motive lasts there is no likelihood of inflation being checked. I regret that the Budget that has been presented before this House is calculated to accentuate the profit motive and my humble submission is that it is a wrong policy to try to step up production by appealing to the narrow selfish instincts of the capitalist class. And if you persist in doing so there is no justification on your part to appeal to the patriotism of the masses and their high sense of duty. The common man of this country has made great sacrifices in the cause, of the community and it is because of him that you are here and we of course are also here. But let it be clearly understood that the common man of this country will resolutely refuse to make sacrifices in the interests of a handful of men who have thrived on the exploitation of the masses. Even today he is capable of making sacrifices and to put up with hardships if those sacrifices and hardships are meant to advance the interests of the community as a whole and the sufferings are shared by every class of the people.

The honourable the Finance Minister has consoled himself by the assertion that even in other parts of the world conditions are disturbed and progress towards recovery from the ravages of war is slow. Yes, Madam, it is true. It was only about six or seven months back that I had an opportunity of visiting the European countries, in the course of which I was in England for about ten days. The people in England even today are living on austerity diet; they are passing through very hard times. But there is one factor that must not be lost sight of. The sufferings are common to every section of the community. The same quantity of restricted sugar, the same number of cigarettes, the same restricted number of one egg per week are available to a worker in a factory as well as to a mill magnate and that too at a price which is within his easy reach.

Shri B. Das: But black-marketing exists even in England and Russia.

Shri Harihar Nath Shastri: In England black marketing is not even one-tenth as rampant as it is in this country. Today the prices in England are hardly twenty-five per cent above the pre-war level and wages have gone up by about fifty per cent. On the contrary, what is the position today in our country? You introduced rationing, nay, your predecessors, the Britishers, introduced rationing. Swayed by sentiments on the one hand and influenced by vigorous propaganda by interested capitalist classes on the other you gave up the control policy, with the result that prices have shot up in the course of the last six or seven months by about 80 points. The mistake was realised when it was too late to mend it and even now I regret to say that no planned policy is being pursued. In fact, planning is lacking in the whole of our economic policy.

Now, let me submit for your consideration and that of the House two or three salient points that still remain to be dealt with. The one question which of course has been dealt with in great detail is the food problem and various honourable Members have explained the gravity of the situation in this country as a result of food scarcity. It is really a matter of grave anxiety that at the present moment about Rs. 30 to 32 crores are spent on subsidies. A few days back, when unfortunately I was not present in the House, there was the debate on the food problem and the honourable the Food Minister was subjected to a lot of criticism. May I make my own observations on that question? I personally feel that if you put in this office a Food Minister who is a hundred times more qualified person (I know there is none more qualified than the present Minister), if you put in a person who in your estimation is a hundred times more qualified, you cannot solve the food problems of this country by a mere Grow More Food Campaign or some such devices. In my opinion the root cause of the food scarcity and the root cause as to why the food problem in this country is not being solved is that planning is needed in regard to agriculture. What I mean by planning is that it is necessary that you rationalise the production of food and its distribution and that rationalisation in production and distribution is possible only if you tackle the basic problem of the abolition of landlordism in this country. It was about two or three years ago when the Congress came into power in various provinces that the question was taken up and in some of the provinces legislation was also passed and in others it is on the verge of being passed, but that is not yet put on the statute book. I understand that there are certain difficulties and hindrances which I need not go into. But I must submit that unless you tackle and that too speedily the question of the abolition of landlordism, you cannot satisfactorily and on a lasting basis solve the food problem of this country. If you do that, you will pave the way for cooperative farming, a system in which the peasants shall have full right on the soil and at the same time there will be more produce and the produce can be pooled together and utilised without any chance of hoarding or profiteering for the good of the entire community.

The other point which I would like to finish in the five minutes which you, Madam, has kindly allowed me is in regard to industrial expansion of this country. The other day our great leader, the Deputy Prime Minister in the course of his speech in Madras deprecated loose talks about nationalisation. I am in complete agreement with him and I need not go into the reasons why nationalisation is not feasible much though one may like it at the present moment. But I do make a difference between nationalisation and control. The other day my friend Mr. Ramalingam Chettiar said that there was no difference between control of capitalism and nationalisation. I should like to observe that control is the method through which on the one hand capitalism can have a lease of life in this country and on the other hand the interests of the community also can be guaranteed. So it is necessary that controls should be introduced and that too in a rational manner. The wartime drama must not be repeated now. During that period, as the House is aware, the community made tremendous sacrifices and at its cost the capitalists made enormous profits. There is no time to cite instances, though I have many but I would just in one minute cite the instance of the iron and steel industry, with which my honourable friend the Finance Minister has been connected for a number of years. When iron and steel were controlled during the war this industry was selling defective materials and cuttings of iron and steel at three or four times the price of first class material and was making huge profits on that account. On the other hand articles manufactured from such materials which were of daily use to the common man were sold as they are being sold now at exorbitant prices. This state of affairs must be put an end to. Production, management and profits and distribution must be regulated by the state in the larger interests of the community. Only such commodities should be allowed to be produced that will primarily fulfil the necessities of life of the common man. As for management the time has come when I say, in spite of what was observed the other day by Mr. Ramalingam Chettiar, that the Government should revise its attitude and take a definite decision in regard to the much abused and highly condemned system of managing agency. I need hardly say anything in regard to distribution. The flagrant abuse of the latitude given to industry through the abolition of control has by now convinced the Government that control must be reimposed. Here I should like to make a passing reference to the proposed legislation in regard to the control of industries that is engaging the attention of the Department of Industry. I do hope that when the proposed Bill is put on the statute book it will go a long way in putting the industrial development of our country on a sound basis.

The Assembly then adjourned till Quarter to Eleven of the Clock on Saturday, the 5th March, 1949.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE)
DEBATES.

(PART II—PROCEEDINGS OTHER THAN QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS).

Saturday, 5th March, 1949

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber of the Council House at a Quarter to Eleven of the Clock, Mr. Deputy Speaker (Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

(No questions: Part I not published.)

COFFEE MARKET EXPANSION (AMENDMENT) BILL

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee (Minister of Industry and Supply): Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Coffee Market Expansion Act, 1942.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is:

"That leave be granted to introduce a Bill further to amend the Coffee Market Expansion Act, 1942".

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Dr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee: Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE GENERAL BUDGET—GENERAL DISCUSSION—concl'd.

FIRST STAGE—concl'd.

Shri K. Hanumanthaiya (Mysore State): The Budget presented to this House has been called by different names. I for one would call it the "incentive-to-industrialists" Budget; I would give it another name, "agriculturists-nowhere-in-the-picture" Budget. The most serious question that is facing the country and agitating the mind of this House is the problem of food. That problem has in no way been tackled in this Budget. There is not a single proposal, there is not even a word of sympathy for agriculturists. Every proposal made, every sentiment expressed, is for the industrialists. Not that I grudge the concessions made to them, nor do I grudge the incentive given to them—I want this country to prosper industrially. At the same time I want the most serious of the problems that India faces today, namely agricultural production, to be tackled with as much seriousness and with as much earnestness as has been displayed in the case of industrial production. No doubt the learned Professor who happens to be the Finance Minister for the time being dwelt upon food production and its problems indirectly. He says the problem is serious, we are importing food grains worth Rs. 130 crores every year, that our sterling balances are being depleted, and that our balance of trade is upset. He looks at it from the wrong point of view; he does not look at the problem from the point of view of its inherent merit. Sir, this reminds me of a story where a wife began to cry on the deathbed of the husband. She was crying, "Who will hereafter give me jewels, who will hereafter provide me house and comforts and car and cosmetics?" That were the arguments used over the deathbed and profusely was she crying too. So also, here agriculture is sympathised with and wept over by the Finance Minister because it has upset the balance of trade, depleted the sterling balances and caused an expenditure of Rs. 130 crores a year.

[Shri K. Hanumanthaiya]

But what has he done really to see that this agricultural production is stepped up? What is the amount he has allotted for the purpose? What is the incentive he has presented towards that end? He weeps over agriculture in the fashion of the wife in that story. Here he weeps over agriculture for his own reasons, not with a view to give it the incentive it deserves, it needs, and it demands.

Why has agriculture been neglected in this fashion? The primary reason I attribute to the very psychology, the very composition of this Cabinet. This Cabinet consists of people who never had occasion to go to a village and see things for themselves—at least the majority of them—I concede there may be very honourable exceptions, but the majority of them know nothing of the rural areas, their conditions and difficulties. They sponsor Bills to fix minimum wages for industrial labour. Have they ever thought of fixing the minimum wages or the minimum price that we have to pay to the producer of foodstuffs? The honourable Minister for Industry and Supply fixes the margin of profit for the various merchants who deal in controls; take for example cloth, he wants the procurer to have about two per cent. profit, the wholesaler about three per cent. and the retailer about nine per cent. Has any Minister in this Cabinet, including the honourable the Leader, ever thought that the agriculturist also requires an incentive and margin of profit? It is a sad thing to recollect that the father of the nation who led us to freedom had always two things in view, the village and the villager and it is a sad commentary upon the formation of the Cabinet and the policy pursued by our Leader, the Prime Minister, that these two things have gone completely out of the mind and consideration of the Cabinet. I have not seen during these two years of the working of this Cabinet system of government, a single measure introduced in this House for the benefit of agriculturists and for stepping up agricultural production. We no doubt make fiery speeches saying that if we do not produce more food we will perish. All the grievances of the rural population are met with by the speeches, by lip-sympathy, and not by solid concrete action. What is it that impedes agricultural production? The figures show that our deficit is only about 10 per cent. and we were importing that 10 per cent. But now we are importing to the tune of Rs. 130 crores worth of foodstuffs. When Rs. 60 crores worth of cloth was being imported, Mahatma Gandhi saw what a drain it was and he invented khadi. He preached the spirit of swadeshi. We had to buy the coarse khadi cloth at higher prices in order to stop this drain and in order to see that this spirit of swadeshi took root in the country. Now the travesty of things are that we are paying a higher price to an agriculturist in America or Argentina and not the same price to the agriculturist in our own country. This is a sad state of affairs and nobody, no Minister including the Prime Minister has paid attention to this aspect of the matter. We have to do three things in order to step up agricultural production, and I shall make three concrete suggestions. Let us consider, who is to produce? After all, the villager has to produce. (Babu Ramnarayan Singh: 'Why not these people') These people will get by way of ration whatever they want, leaving the agriculturist halfstarved. They know how to manage for themselves.

So after all, the villager has to produce. Now, every man who gets educated in a village drifts to the town. Every able-bodied man goes to a factory. The educated and the able bodied go into the town, into the urban area, where the incentive to earn and the means to earn are far greater than what are available in the rural areas. A man who cannot earn Rs. 20 a month in the village if the same man goes to the town, and if he works as a coolie in the railway station, he will earn Rs. 20 a day almost. That is the state of things. In order to see that agriculturists get incentive, we must first fix the price, not what is called the "fair" price, which is fixed by the whims and fancies of Government officials or Ministers as the case may be. But we must go about it in a methodical manner; we must appoint a Committee composed of consumers, purchasers and impartial people to fix up what is required to produce a given quantity of grain and allow a margin of profit such as you allow to the retail cloth dealer—nine per cent. or so. I would even go to the extent of requesting Government to allow not even nine per cent. but to allow six per cent. net profit to the agriculturist. You have fixed the dividends at six per cent. show the same consideration to the agriculturist. I do not want more consideration than that, fix the margin of profit at six per cent. and then fix the price. You use arguments, what are called the "spiral of inflation" and are arguments of theory which you have learnt from books. But these arguments won't help us in the matter of production of food or in stopping this drain of Rs. 130 crores on food imports.

It is good that Government is making a determined effort in order to solve the agricultural problem. They want more agricultural machinery to be imported and manures to be purchased. For that purpose, they have applied to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Very good. I hope they will be able to get what they want. I am told that the International Bank has got only about 400 million dollars of money and I do not suppose we will be able to get much out of it. We will have to depend upon our own growers than upon external help. Now this Bank and this International Monetary Fund deserve some attention. The International Monetary Fund was constituted in 1945 and the then representatives who went on behalf of the Government of India were not representatives of Free India or of this responsible Government. Sir Jeremy Raisman led the Delegation and he fixed the quota for us. The other day I ask the Finance Minister whether, after the advent of our freedom, he has made any efforts to revise the quota already allotted to us, and he was pleased to say, whether we got independence or not, it did not matter from this point of view. This is the psychology which is holding up the present Government. If we have not been able to satisfy the people, if Congress ideology and psychology have not been implemented in this country, it is because the Ministers entertain such notions about our hard-won independence—"it does not matter" to them—yes, because many of them were careerists in the previous regime and they are careerists now. I am sorry if it hurts the feelings of people. It has become the fashion of the Leader of the Party and the Deputy Leader of the Party to woo people who were either silent or active collaborators of the British imperialism. They think all the first-rate brain is concentrated in the heads of those people. Congressmen are feeling as if they are strangers in their own house. Unless the people who fought for freedom, who know the Congress ideology and who know what Mahatma Gandhi stood for, unless they come into the picture and implement the ideology of the Congress, this Government will continue to be what it is. It will become more and more unpopular, with the result that some of us, poor people, innocent people who have nothing to do with the working of this Government, will ultimately find that we lose our deposits in the elections.

Again, Sir, I was referring to the International Monetary Fund. Even the Raisman delegation has agreed to the present quota with the reservation that they will be able to press their claims later. The International Monetary Fund, which is a very important international organisation is dominated by America. There are three well known principles in fixing the quota—population, national income and volume of trade. None of these principles have been taken into consideration. It is the power politics that has counted in the matter of composition and the fixation of quota of the I.M.F. Has Government of India ever paid one moment's attention to this aspect of the matter? They go on as merrily as the previous Governments were doing. They think that what has already been fixed by a previous regime is sacrosanct for ever. This is the psychology which they have to change in the interests of the country and in the interests of the Congress and in order to give a good name to the leaders who have chosen these men. That is my humble opinion.

Mr. Homi Mody (Bombay: General): I hope my honourable friend the Finance Minister is not unduly depressed (The Honourable Dr. John Matthai: 'No, no.') over the criticisms which have been lavished on his Budget. If he will look up the Budget debates of the last twenty or thirty years, he will find much the same things have been said without doing any damage to anybody. (Prof. N. G. Ranga: 'August 15 is the only change.') There never was a perfect Budget, and there never will be. May be that in some age when men have learnt to live without the Army, the Police, the Secretariat, and above all, Cabinet Ministers (The Honourable Shri N. V. Gadgil: 'Hear, hear; and members of the House!') then a Budget may be produced which may be carried with universal acclamation, but till that time.....(An honourable Member: 'Then there will be no Budget!') But till that time the Finance Minister must make up his mind that he is there to be criticised and condemned and that no consideration will be shown to him.

Speaking generally, the Budget speech is characterised by vigour and lucidity the sort of statement which one would expect from a person of my honourable friend's ability and knowledge of economics. But there are several gaps which I think I ought to point out. The thing that stands out is that in the course of the whole Budget statement, there is no exposition of the monetary policy of Government and that is a defect in an otherwise admirable performance. What sort of policy Government are going to pursue in the matter of regulation of currency and credit is a matter which is of fundamental importance, and I hope, at any rate in the course of his reply to the Budget debate, my honourable friend will say a few things about the way in which he looks at the whole question of monetary policy. Then, again, I wish that my honourable friend had referred in a little more detail to the failure of the borrowing programme of Government in the last year or two. There is a huge deficit in capital account which has duly found mention in the Statement and the Explanatory Memorandum. I would like my honourable friend to dilate a little on that and tell us exactly how he proposes to finance the capital programme of Government.

One other criticism, which is not a criticism so much of my honourable friend as of his predecessors, is that some attempt ought to be made to provide more accurate budgeting. A budget which on the expenditure and income side is out by 60, 70 or 80 crores is not a budget. These are abnormal times and I recognise that what was possible in the happier days of old may not be practicable these days. Both the expenditure and revenue side may show considerable differences from the budget estimates; but, by and large, I think it is necessary that the Estimates should be more accurately framed.

Taken as a whole, I regard the budget proposals as sound. Despite the criticisms which have been made and the criticisms which will continue to pour in for the rest of the month, looking at the present position and the economic malaise from which the country is suffering, the need for restoring confidence, the need for balancing the budget and the need for taking off taxation which proved to be detrimental to progress and production, I say the budget as a whole is sound. My friends say, it is all very well for you to say this for the simple reason that there are several features which are of help to you. (An honourable Member: 'That is true.') That may be true; but there are quite a few which are not of help. So far as I am personally concerned, I do not stand to benefit by the reduction of taxation on the top incomes, whereas I may have to pay a lot more for my cigars, wines and the other little things with which I solace myself in a world in which everybody is so harassed and unhappy. Whatever budget my honourable friend may produce, he must make up his mind that there will be plenty of critics who will say that he was friendly to the rich, callous to the poor and indifferent to the middle classes. These criticisms have to be taken with a grain of salt. Incidentally, salt, in spite of the fact that the duty has been taken off, has not been made any cheaper.

There are various types of critics in this House. There are economists; there are lay critics. The only difference between an economist and a lay critic is this: an economist is right on his facts and wrong in his conclusions, while a lay critic is wrong on both. There again, my honourable friend has much reason for comfort when he feels particularly depressed by some virulent criticism of his economics.

My friends are in the habit of thinking, at least they have said so,—what they think is a different matter,—that this is a rich man's budget. What do they want? Do they want direct taxation to go up to 100 per cent? Do they realise that in 1938-39, just before the war, direct taxation bore to the revenues a proportion of 23 per cent. and that has gone up today to 51 per cent. even with the reductions proposed by my honourable friend? Fifty one per cent by way of direct taxation of income, I should say, was good enough for anybody. It will interest my honourable friends to know that this ratio of direct taxation to general taxation is higher in this country than in the United Kingdom and in the Dominions. Take also the incidence on incomes above Rs. 25,000. It is glibly said that the rich man escapes. First of all, I do not know who is exactly rich, barring a few blackmarketeers and profiteers, a very exclusive class to which I do not belong. In fact, I belong to the very happy class of people who are generally not affected by the budget; I live on over-drafts, and if there is a capital levy in the country, they can attach them for all I care. I was saying that if a man is rich who enjoys an income of Rs. 25,000 and over, the rate of taxation is higher actually than in the United States and Canada, two of the leading industrial countries of the world.

The general reactions to the budget, as the Government may have seen, are favourable. But, I must confess that I am disappointed at the reaction of the Stock Exchanges. The prices have actually receded since the budget was announced; but that is not the fault of the budget. I think there is a general malaise which lies too deep for most people to comprehend. I think one reason why this has happened is that a great many people, after the reassuring speeches made by my honourable friend the Finance Minister and other members of Government about the economic position of the country, expected miracles to happen. Some of us did what we could to sound a note of caution. While I do not hold with the pessimism of the stock exchanges and also to a certain extent of the business community, the capital position of today must be fairly assessed. First of all, the great change that has taken place in the last few years is the shift of income from the richer classes to the lower income groups. Unfortunately, Government have not found it possible to tap these sources for contribution to their loans. I think a concerted attempt made for a savings drive or an attractive issue placed on the market for the particular benefit of the smaller man, would bring out considerable sums of money. There is also the naturally will not come out unless you devise some method of protection. That is a thing which we have to face up to. There are these two reservoirs into which a lot of capital has flown in the last few years, which are not being tapped and cannot be tapped for one reason or another.

Having said this, I would urge, as I have urged over and over again in the last twelve months, the business and the industrial community to shed its fear, and relying upon the growing realism of the Government and their new approach towards the problems of the day, to go ahead and give to the country what the country has a right to demand from it. I repeat the industrial community has a duty towards the country which has too be fulfilled. After all, we are not fair-weather sailors; we have to take the lean with the fat. This is precisely the time when the country wants the industrialist to shed his doubts and come forward boldly to make his contribution to the country. In spite of what has been very recently said about the business and industrial community, it has a proud record behind it. At a time when every conceivable kind discouragement was given to capital and enterprise in this country, a few people came forward and established an industrial structure which, in spite of its deficiencies, still ranks as the eighth largest in the whole world. That has been achieved in spite of Government discouragement and in spite of discouragement from the capital market as it is ordinarily understood. I hope, Sir, that the business and industrial community may have an even prouder role to play.

Now, the key-note of the budget is subdued optimism. I am an optimist and I would like to look at the rosy side of things even in spite of what I hear from these benches off and on. But optimism must be in its place, and I think the time has arrived for jolting the country into a realisation of the situation with which it is confronted. The country must be made to face facts and I would suggest to my honourable friend that, as a preliminary to that an Economic Survey such as is issued every year in the United Kingdom be issued by this Government setting out all the salient features of the Nation's economy, so that economists and laymen would equally understand what the position is. So, Sir, I hope that, before the next budget is out, the country will be prepared for what is coming by a proper knowledge and appreciation of the true economy of the country. So much is glibly said about what is right and what is wrong, with the country altogether, the mass of the people including people in this House—if I may say so without any offence—are not sufficiently instructed in the true facts of the situation.

There are certain salient features of the country's economy which I would like to briefly touch upon before I go on to one or two points which I wish to make about the trend of Provincial and Central taxation. In the forefront stands inflation, and I should say in spite of all that has been done in the last few months that it is still far from controlled. It is true that prices have stabilized themselves. So far so good, but that is not the end of it all; the time has come when they must start receding. I find from the figures that the wholesale prices which have steadied since June last year are still very high, and so far as the cost of living is concerned, which means really the retail price, there has been a longer time lag between it and the wholesale price than is ordinarily the case. Retail prices must start receding and it is only when that happens that we can say that we have seen the end of the peak of inflation. (Shri B. Das: 'What do you suggest?') Increased production.

It has been recognised, and it is a truism, that increased production is the only remedy and when we met in the Central Advisory Council so ably presided over by my honourable friend Dr. Syamaprasad Mookherjee, figures were given which tended to draw a somewhat optimistic picture. Figures can be made to say anything almost, but looking at them in the right way, I should say that while it may be true that there has been an improvement in production, progress has been disappointing. The real favourable factors are an improvement in the relations between capital and labour resulting in the reduction of strikes and lock-outs and also an improvement to a certain extent in the transport situation. I don't want to give a glowing certificate either to the Labour or Transport Ministry, but it must be acknowledged that there has been some improvement in the situation. So far as the measure which was intended to combat inflation viz., dividend limitation is concerned, it is really ineffective, and as a matter of fact I think it is recognized by the Finance Minister himself that its value is only psychological and as a matter of fact whatever value Dividend Limitation had, has been more than offset by the wage increases which have been subsequently given.

Then I come to another aspect of our economy—the food situation. Regarding production I do not know whether there are any reliable statistics; I don't think there are, and so, whatever I may say is subject to that qualification. So, also, what the Food Minister has to say in that connection should be subject to that qualification. So far as I can judge, the production of foodgrains in 1948-49 was actually less than in the preceding year. I don't know which of us is right, but the fact remains that more and more foodgrains have to be imported; as the Prime Minister observed yesterday it is the very ease with which we are able to import foodgrains from abroad that is coming in the way of our taking drastic steps in the restoration of our own foodgrain economy. We are apt to think that the mere dumping of tractors and enormous quantities of fertilizers is going to do the trick. It certainly is not going to do that. Unless we have trained the agriculturist in the proper use of tractors and fertilisers, they are going to be an expensive luxury and are not going to result in any substantial increases. The truth is that while there has been a great deal of propaganda for growing more food, it has not penetrated to the countryside, and what we need is, some agency set up in the villages whereby the cultivator can be induced to grow more and better varieties of food. In a volume recently issued by one who can speak with some authority—Dr. Burns—he estimates that by improved seeds and improved manure, certain foodgrains can be increased 10 per cent. and others 20 per cent. Let us not therefore think exclusively in terms of tractors and chemical fertilizers. Let us try and see what the agriculturist even with his primitive ways can do and for that I say propaganda has to seek down to countryside.

Then there is the refugee problem which is sadly affecting our economy. The other day, in the course of a Supplementary question, I asked whether any effort was going to be made to come to some understanding with Pakistan over this problem because otherwise I see it is going to be insoluble. There is neither housing nor employment nor food for all the millions of refugees who have been uprooted from their homes. The Prime Minister's reply was an emphatic 'No' there was going to be no approach; later on the Prime Minister qualified this reply. I would say without fear of contradiction that Government will come to a stage very soon when they will have to make some arrangement about repatriation at least of those people who may be said not to have been permanently displaced.

There are one or two other points. We have been fighting inflation, but I hope the honourable the Finance Minister realises that the trends of both Provincial and Central taxation are inflationary—excise on cloth of the Centre, and excises in the provinces on articles of necessity like chillies, turmeric etc. How is the cost of living to come down? Such taxation of necessities arises purely from the reformist zeal of provincial governments, which makes them throw away large sources of revenue, and tax the necessities of the poor. And I wonder whether my honourable friend realises also that there is a conflict between the policies pursued by the Centre and those pursued by the Provinces. The Centre gives subsidies for food, but items of daily consumption are being taxed by the Provinces. There are also, encroachments on the sphere of central taxation by some of the Provinces. In one province, there has been a capital gains tax imposed on immovable property. Is that in consonance with the general policy of Government? This is a matter which my honourable friend might look into.

I shall now refer to the question of external trade. I would say that the value of barter arrangements has not been sufficiently realised. It is true that most of our trade has to be by bi-lateral or multi-lateral exchanges, but I think in order to make sure that this country receives in actual quantities what it needs most, namely, foodgrains, it is essential to have some barter arrangements. I believe there was some such barter arrangement in the case of Russia only very recently. We are importing enormous quantities of foodgrains from the Middle-East and South East Asia, in exchange for consumer goods which are just as essential to them as their foodgrains are to us. I hope my honourable friend in the Commerce Ministry will consider the necessity of diverting some of the ordinary channels of trade to barter arrangements with specific countries in respect of specific commodities.

Finally, if I take a peep into the future, I will say I am full of hope and confidence. This country has vast resources in materials. Its human material is rich and in abundance. It may be that the mass of the people are illiterate and superstitious. But considering the mass of people in other countries, there is a considerable degree of intelligence in our masses, which with a proper system of education would produce first-class citizens, citizens who can compare with those of any other country. Then, our credit is high, and our debt position is sound. And above all—and I say this because I have often criticised the Central Government and I hope to keep on criticising them till the end of time—above all, I say Sir, the Central Government has got an inestimable asset in its possession to-day namely, the general confidence of the people of every section. And speaking for an important section of the people, though not numerically, I would say that our Government is more and more pursuing policies which command our confidence and which entitle them to our fullest support. I say that this asset is of inestimable value, and I hope that under the leadership of the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister, and under the able men whom they have gathered round them, this country will go ahead, in spite of the fact that to-day there are a great many rocks and shoals ahead. I am however, quite certain that when the present economic storms have been weathered—and we are by no means alone in encountering economic storms—our country will have forged ahead and placed itself amongst the leading powers of the world.

Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya (Madras: General): I had observed scrupulous silence all these days, and coming at the fag end of the debate, I really find myself in an unenviable position. Because I have great regard for Dr. Matthai, therefore my commiseration for him is quite in proportion to that regard. Like most of us in this House, we are unable to locate ourselves between our convictions and our affections. We are democrats to the core; but sometimes aristocrats, at least intellectual aristocrats, or plutocrats or even capitalists. In my home, though by annual income does not average over Rs. 3,000, I am supposed to be a capitalist. My wife is a socialist. My one son is fast becoming a communist. And thus we are representing the tendencies of the times, and perhaps stand to profit which ever party comes into power. This process of transition is inevitable, whether it be in the family or in society or in the legislature. Whom do we represent in this country? We are the representatives of three and a half crores of population; out of thirtynine crores, and therefore do not represent even one-tenth of the total population. Naturally our tastes and tendencies have been moulded by what we learnt of economics and politics in the last generation, and Dr. Matthai is the brightest representative of that generation. At the same time, he has culture enough to see what is coming ahead. His difficulty, like our difficulty is, to reconcile the past with the future, thus making the present a mere void. In fact, there is no such thing as present, because the present at which I began to speak has already receded into the immeasurable past, and we are facing the future. Apparently Dr. Matthai's colour is coming and going, between a tendency to help the capitalists and draw the fugitive capital into the markets of India, and at the same time to play the part of a democrat. He is playing the parts of a political Hyde and Jekyll. Dr. Jekyll tells the capitalists, "I am doing you a favour" and Mr. Hyde tells the democrats, "I have not been very partial to these people; after all 14 as. as against 15½ as. is not much of a reduction in regard to income-tax." Neither would believe him, and they both have assailed him. It is no wonder, because he who tries to please all, pleases none. This is the position that I see now. Accordingly we have got a budget in which the very members of the party to which the honourable the Finance Minister belongs have assailed him, and assailed him as if they were members of the opposition. This is a most incongruous situation that I see, and I am afraid I may have to take note of it in some other capacity, because either there is party government or there is no party government. If there is no party government, let it be said that there is none, and nobody would be more pleased than myself. But if there is party government, there must be discipline also along with party government. Responsible government is always based upon party principles. This means, unfortunately, that there must be lot of secrecy about the preparation of the budget. The Minister preparing the budget does not break it even to his colleagues till eleven o'clock the day on which it is being presented. Therefore the Ministers themselves are not able to advise him, and even if they do advice, it is perhaps too late, for he has already prepared his speech and it cannot be mended. So this position requires to be looked into and it does not present a very edifying spectacle that members of the Party should descend upon him like a wolf on the fold. But at the same time it requires also that this Budget, to the extent to which secrets can be shared with colleagues, should be prepared in consultation with a certain number of people who can be trusted to keep confidence: in which case all this criticism would not be present. I am only concerned to know that anyone who has watched the proceedings of this House would be over borne by the fact that this House has been cent per cent. arrayed against the Finance Minister. Even those who have given compliments have given left-handed compliments. Our honourable friend, Mr. Das of Orissa has said that he cannot give hearty (हार्दिक) congratulations and the honourable Miss Annie Mascarene, with true Christian sympathy for the Finance Minister, has showered ample encomiums on the Finance Minister.

Now I do not wish to speak on many matters but I would confine myself to a point which has not been stressed by other friends, and that relates to Accounts and Audit. I have been rather proud of making myself unpopular by looking into accounts in every situation, particularly with fellow-Congress men who are not very advanced in the matter of keeping accounts. I am rather meticulous about these matters. I bring the same mind to bear on the events relating to this House and I regret to say that the Appropriation Accounts have not been presented to this House and the Public Accounts Committee has not met for three years. This is a sad story to relate before you all. Mr. Deputy Speaker, whatever be the institutions that one may manage in this world, it is ultimately the cash book that tells. Now I am only proceeding from the cash of the budget to the cash book of Government and from a general criticism of the Budget to the ledger side of the accounts. Be it an insurance company, a bank or any concern whatever, ultimately the accounts must be correct and the audit must be there in time. So long as these things are not taking place correctly, you may be absolutely certain that something is going wrong, a rot has set into that Government and you cannot avoid it. Supposing a bank has not produced a balance sheet for three years and it is always taking the sanction of the Board of Directors with regard to the Budget and the items of expenditure which should be incurred but it does not produce the vouchers and when it exceeds the limits of expenditure it does not present a supplementary budget. If, what my honourable friend Mr. Tyagi has said is correct—that Rs. 83 crores have been over-spent the mere fact of a surplus having unexpectedly accrued, does not justify the Government spending it unauthorisedly, and this would not have taken place if the system of audit and accountancy had been as perfect as it ought to be. It is the duty of the Public Accounts Committee to inspect the audit notes and the Appropriation Accounts, and then having made an examination to make its notes which ought to be presented to this House for careful re-examination: otherwise, this presentation of the Budget, these sanctions, these voluminous figures—which no one understands nor has he the time to study—all these are but a semblance of democracy which must be looked into more carefully. This House is naturally jealous of this right which is the ultimate safeguard of all democracy and without which democracy itself would become a zero.

This brings me naturally to what the British used to do till 1938-39. The British Government had an unassailable reputation for correctness in accountancy and in preparing the manuals in regard to every department of administration. They had a Manual of Accountancy, a Manual of Forests, a Manual of Jails, a Manual of Revenue, a Manual of Local Self-Government, a Manual of Police, a Manual of Civil Disobedience and a Manual of Lathi charges. Thus they made the administration foolproof and their audit and accountancy was perfect till the year 1939 when the war began. With the commencement of the war, their morals as well as their meticulousness in accountancy declined. There was a laxity of morals. The British Government were not only the abettors of bribery but also accessories to the affair. All they wanted was participation in the war and counteracting the efforts of the Congress in regard to the resistance to war effort. Therefore although they knew that high-placed men were taking bribes they supported and patronised them and they have left a legacy of moral laxity which we now find it difficult to combat. If, in addition, there is a laxity of accountancy and audit, then I say things are worse. You all know, and we all know that public expenditure has increased to well nigh a thousand crores during these years. While the expenditure has increased so many times, the Audit Department was considerably weakened during the time when the best officers were depleted and taken over to the War Department. I do not know whether they have been replaced. All that I know is that there are volumes and roomfuls of paper waiting to be sorted out in the Accountant-General's offices where there is neither the accommodation nor office furniture to sort all this out. Whatever that may be, one high placed gentleman has been complaining that his provident fund account has not been settled. Well, if Bismarck said that the pulse of the British nation must be felt in the stock market, I say the pulse and the correctness of accountancy must be assured by the celerity with which provident funds are settled either on transfer or retirement of officers. For months together these accounts are not settled and what is the reason of this laxity in regard to this accountancy? That is a point which we have to look into.

Hitherto, we have had a European Auditor-General. For the first time our Finance Secretary has been transferred as the Auditor-General. He is a gentleman of established reputation, who has done yeomen service in London as Assistant to the Finance Minister in the settling of the sterling balances and various accounts with England, and also in paving the way for such settlement by earlier visits. I hope his position will be strengthened by the new Constitution. He must be above all criticism. He is a supreme authority in himself. He is the financial guarantor of all correctness of accounts and he must be looked up to and assisted. His needs of establishment must be met. If this is possible then you will have an Auditor-General of unexceptional ability, who will also be able to have excellent opportunities of overhauling—and not merely overhauling—this Government, but also clearing the Augean Stables in accountancy which I dare say have begun to form.

In the end I will say that the Auditor-General will have to audit the accounts not only of India but also foreign accounts. Our Embassies and our foreign expenditure has grown up to some crores. One does not know what is taking place. One hears fantastic stories. Our delegations go abroad and on more than one occasion the expenditure incurred has become the subject of adverse comment in this House and it is up to the Auditor-General to extend the scope of his investigation to, and to look into, these matters and bring his eagle eye to bear upon the examination of these things. We really want an Indian Exchequer and Audit Act here as in England.

Lastly, Sir, I wonder why the Auditor-General's headquarters is still Simla. When all other people are able to bear the heat in Delhi, I do not see why he alone should be ensconced in Simla and left there to be out of touch with all the progressive departments of the day. If it is possible, his office must be brought down to this city.

Sir, I wanted particularly to confine myself to this one point, because it is a point which seldom appeals to the emotional temperament of members of the legislature. It is a thing which is not popular with any of us and I thought I had better incur the odium of referring to this one aspect.

श्री मोहन लाल गौतम : इस बजट पर जब मैं मोदी साहब को उसकी तारीफ करते देखता हूँ और बहुत से मंत्रियों को इसको क्लिटसाइज करते देखता हूँ तो फिर मेरे दिल में सवाल यह पैदा होता है कि आखिर यह बजट किसके लिये बना है और किसके खिलाफ है। किन लोगों पर इसका बुरा असर पड़ेगा। बजट जो इन वक्त पेश हो रहा है वह मामूली अकाउन्टेन्सी का, इनकम और एक्सपेन्डीचर का हिसाब नहीं है। उसमें बहुत बड़े बड़े उसूल पिन्हां हैं। इन वक्त जब कि स्वराज्य हासिल करने के बाद वह गवर्नमेंट उन लोगों के हाथ में आई, इस गवर्नमेंट के वह लीडर बने जो हमेशा सोशलिज्म का प्रचार करते रहे थे। जब ऐसे लोगों के हाथ में यह गवर्नमेंट आई तो कुदरती था कि जो लोग अब तक अंगरेजों के साथ यहां पर मुनाफा कमाते रहे थे, ब्लैकमार्केट करते रहे थे, टैक्स एवैड (evade) करते

[श्री मोहन लाल गौतम]

करते रहे थे उसको यह डर लगा कि यह पंडित जवाहरलाल नेहरू की हुकूमत आखिर हम को कहां ले जायगी। यह सवाल बड़ा भारी उन लोगों के सामने था जो कि इस वक्त इस मुल्क में अपने को एक नई फिजा में पाते थे।

दूसरी तरफ वह लोग थे जो पंडित जवाहरलाल नेहरू के साथ कंधे से कंधा मिला कर आजादी की लड़ाई लड़े थे और वह वादे करते रहे थे जो पंडित जवाहरलाल नेहरू के मुंह से और कांग्रेस के रेजोल्यूशनों से निकलते थे। मैं इस वक्त पहले वादे और पहले कांग्रेस के फ्रैमले दोहराना नहीं चाहता। लेकिन जो हाल में ही, जो पिछले तीन महीने पहिले जैपुर में, दिसम्बर महीने में कांग्रेस हुई थी उसने भी यह ऐलान किया था कि कांग्रेस का यह सन्देश है, यह मेसेज है जिसे कांग्रेसवालों को गांव गांव में ले जाना है कि यहां क्लासलेस सोसाइटी बनेगी। यह हम से खास तौर से कहा गया था और हम जो यहां पर आये हैं तो इसीलिये आये हैं कि इस चीज को पूरा करें जो इस रेजोल्यूशन में कांग्रेस ने पास किया है।

अब देखना यह है कि यह जो क्रिटिसिज्म हो रहा है, जो कांग्रेस मेम्बर इस तरह के क्रिटिसिज्म कर रहे हैं उसकी क्या वजह है। वजह यह है कि उनको रास्ता साफ नजर नहीं आता। उनको यह नजर नहीं आता कि जो यह बजट बना है वह हमें क्लासलेस सोसाइटी की तरफ ले जाता है या नहीं। अगर नहीं तो कांग्रेस वालों को कूदरतन परेशानी होनी चाहिये अगर नहीं होती तो वह अपना फर्ज पूरा नहीं कर रहे हैं। दूसरी तरफ जो प्रोपोजिज्म आये हैं वह इस तरह के हैं, मैं एतराज नहीं करता अगर इस मुल्क को आप इन्डस्ट्रियलाइज करने की तरफ ले जाते हैं। मुझे एतराज नहीं अगर आप एक प्लैन बनायें और उसमें उन जरूरी चीजों को इस मुल्क में पैदा करें जो कि हमें मजबूत बनाने के लिये जरूरी है। लेकिन आज कैपिटलिस्ट्स ने, इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स ने इस मुल्क में एक कान्स्पिरेसी करके, एक प्रोपेगन्डा करके एक एंटेमास्फियर पैदा कर दिया है जिससे जाहिर होता है कि यह मुल्क तबाह होने वाला है, जिससे जाहिर होता है कि इस मुल्क में कोई अमन नहीं है। वह चाहते हैं कि यहां अमन हो जिसमें यहां इन्डस्ट्रीज पनप सकें। मैं पूछता हूं कि जब लड़ाई चल रही थी, यह पता भी नहीं था कि अंगरेज हारेगा या जीतेगा, उस वक्त इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट को ज्यादा उम्मेद थी अपने सिक्योरिटी की कि आज है। उस वक्त क्यों इन्डस्ट्रीज बढ़ रही थीं। जिस वक्त हिन्दुस्तान में अंग्रेजों के खिलाफ लड़ाई थी उस वक्त ज्यादा खतरा था इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स को या आज है। जब जापान से हवाई जहाज आते थे उस वक्त खतरा नहीं था और आज जब स्व-राज्य हो गया, अमन हो गया है तो आज हमसे कहा जाता है कि सिक्योरिटी नहीं है। इन्डस्ट्रियल पीस हो गई है, लेबर को कांग्रेसवालों ने कोशिश करके स्ट्राइक से

रोका। जगड़े कम हो गये हैं यह बात भी मानते हैं फिर भी इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स को इसमें तसल्ली नहीं है। उनका फिर भी यही कहना है कि यह बात काफी नहीं है, इससे भी ज्यादा होना चाहिये। मैं तो आपसे कहूंगा, फ़ाइनेन्स मिनिस्टर से आपकी मारफत यह कहना चाहता हूं कि इस तरह की छोटी छोटी बातें उनको खुश नहीं कर सकतीं। वह जो चाहते हैं वह बहुत ही मुश्किल चीज है, जो बात चेम्बर के प्रेजिडेंट ने कहा वह यह था कि जब तक आर्टिकल २४ के तमाम एमैन्डमेन्ट्स को विट्द्रा (withdraw) नहीं किया जाता, जब तक आप प्रापर्टी को अक्वायर करने के लिये पूरा कम्पेन्सेशन देने की कोशिश नहीं करते तब तक वह खुश नहीं हो सकते। असलचीज यह है। इस तरह की छोटी छोटी चीजें देने से इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स को तसल्ली नहीं होगी। और यही वजह है कि इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स इससे मुतमैयन नहीं हैं। फिर भी वह क्रिटिसाइज करते रहते हैं, इसलिये मैं पूछना चाहता हूं कि यह बजट जब हम पढ़ते हैं तो हमें इसमें कोई प्लान नजर नहीं आता, कोई पालिसी नजर नहीं आती, कोई स्कीम नजर नहीं आती जो हमको उस जगह ले जाय जहां हम वादा करके आये हैं, अपने चुनने वालों से, कि हम आपको वहां ले जायेंगे। हमने बहुत दिनों से प्रचार किया कि हम जमींदारों को अवालिश करेंगे। तमाम प्राविन्शल गवर्नमेन्ट्स से इतने हद तक चली गई, बहुत से कानून बन गये और आज वह कानून एके हुये पड़े हैं। लेकिन इस तमाम बजट को देखने से भी यह मालूम नहीं होता कि जमींदारी को अवालिश करने के लिये आपने कोई प्रावीजन किया हो, या आप उस तरफ जाना चाहते हैं। कोई चीज इस तरह की मुझे इसमें नजर नहीं आई। आपने इस तमाम बजट में यह कहीं नहीं बताया कि आखिर यह जो हमारी स्कीम है वह इस तरफ आपको आगे ले जायेगी। पहिले भी मिनिस्टर साहब ने जो ज़बान इस्तेमाल की है वह यह है कि : "No man, who is investing money, is taking greater risk than in any other country in the world."

मैं आपसे पूछता हूं कि क्या बरमा से भी ज्यादा खतरा आपको यहां नजर आता है। क्या चाइना से भी ज्यादा इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स के लिये खतरा यहां नजर आता है। योरप तमाम कम्युनिज्म की तरफ जा रहा है वहां से भी ज्यादा खतरा आपको यहां नजर आता है।

तो फिर क्यों यह साइकालाजी क्रिएट (psychology create) की जाती है कि इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स (industrialists) के लिए बहुत बड़ा खतरा है। मैं आपसे कहता हूं कि अगर हमको इस खतरे से बचना है, अगर हमें अपने मुल्क को कम्युनिज्म के मिनेस (menace) से बचाना है, तो उसका यह तरीका नहीं है कि हम इन्डस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स को खुश करें और गरीबों की फिक्र न करें। इस

बजट में जितने टैक्सेज लगे हैं सब गरीबों पर है। आप कहते हैं कि प्राइसेज स्टेडी (steady) हैं, प्राइसेज स्टेबिलाइज (stabilize) हो गई हैं। लेकिन मैं यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि चाहे कैपिटल गुड्स (capital goods) की प्राइसेज कम हों, लेकिन जिन चीजों से गरीब आदमी को ताल्लुक पड़ता है, जैसे क्लाथ (cloth) और फुड (food), इनकी प्राइसेज काफी ऊँची हैं और ऊँची होती जा रही हैं। फिर आपका इंडेक्स (index) क्या जाहिर करता है? वह शहर के थोड़े से खान्दानों की हालत जाहिर करता है। गावों की प्राइसेज का डाटा (data) आपके पास नहीं है। इसलिए यह कहना कि प्राइसेज को हम कंट्रोल कर पा रहे हैं यह काफी नहीं है। और अगर यह सही भी हो तो भी आप ने जो टैक्सेज लगाये हैं उनसे कास्ट ऑफ लिविंग (cost of living) का इंडेक्स (index) बढ़ जायगा, और अगर वह इंडेक्स बढ़ा तो फिर वही चक्कर चलेगा। फिर मजदूरों की यही मांग होगी कि उनको ज्यादा भत्ता दिया जाय और फिर वही चक्कर चलने लगेगा। इसलिए मैं यह कहना चाहता हूँ कि यह तरीका कम्युनिज्म को या उसके मिनेस (menace) को रोकने का नहीं है। अस्ल में जो तरीका होना चाहिए था वह यह है जो कि हमारी कांग्रेस के रिजोल्यूशनों में है और जिसका ऐलान कांग्रेस करती रहती है और जिसका थोड़ा सा इशारा कल पंडित जवाहरलाल नेहरू ने अपनी स्पीच में किया था, कि आप यह कोशिश करें कि गरीबों की तकलीफ दूर हो। लेकिन उस तरफ आप नहीं जा रहे हैं। मैं आपसे अर्ज करूँ कि जो चीजें आपने यहां रखी हैं उनसे दिमाग पर क्या असर पड़ता है। आपने नये टैक्सेज क्यों लगाये? क्यों आपको ज्यादा खर्च की जरूरत पड़ी? पिछले साल जो आपने बजट पास किया और उसमें जो रकम रखी उससे आपको ८२ करोड़ रुपया और ज्यादा मिल गया। कुछ रुपया आपने फौज पर खर्च कर दिया इसलिए कि काश्मीर में लड़ाई चल रही थी। उस पर मैं इस वक्त बहस नहीं करना चाहता। लेकिन मैं पूछना चाहता हूँ कि क्या जरूरत थी ४८ करोड़ रुपया सिविल एडमिनिस्ट्रेशन (Civil Administration) पर ज्यादा खर्च करने की। क्योंकि आपको ८२ करोड़ रुपया ज्यादा मिल गया इसलिए आपने सिविल एडमिनिस्ट्रेशन पर ४८ करोड़ रुपया ज्यादा खर्च कर दिया। अगर वह रुपया आपको न मिलता तो आप क्या करते? क्या आप उतने ही रुपये में अपना काम न चलाते? और अगर उस रुपये में आपका काम नहीं चल सकता था तो आपने बताया क्यों नहीं? जो रुपया आपके पास आता है वह खर्च कर दिया जाता है और आप इकानामी (economy) की तरफ नहीं जाते हैं। मैं इस में नहीं पड़ना चाहता

कि आप दो करोड़ कम करें या तीन करोड़ कम करते, मगर आप कुछ तो कम करते चाहे दस पैसा ही कम करते, और फिर आप कहते कि इतने में हमारा काम नहीं चलता। पर आप उस तरफ तो जरा भी नहीं बढ़ते। अगर आप उस तरफ बढ़ते तो यह कहा जा सकता था कि आपने जितनी इकानामी हो सकती थी वह की और उसके बाद आपने टैक्सेज लगाये। लेकिन यह नहीं हुआ। एक कमेटी बनी। लेकिन कमेटी अपना काम कैसे कर पाये। हर मिनिस्टर चाहते हैं कि जितने आदमी हैं उनसे और ज्यादा बढ़ जाय स्टाफ बढ़ता चला जा रहा है। यह आखिर कौनसा स्टाफ है। यह कितना गुना बढ़ा हुआ स्टाफ है। आप मुलाहिजा फरमायें कि लड़ाई में पहले जो स्टाफ था उससे कितने गुना बढ़ा हुआ यह स्टाफ है। लड़ाई के वक्त यह समझ में आ सकता था और इसके अलावा अंग्रेज को लड़ाई लड़नी थी, उसे इस बात से बहस नहीं थी कि इस मुल्क का कितना रुपया खर्च होता है, उसने इतना स्टाफ बढ़ा दिया। लेकिन क्या जो लड़ाई का स्टाफ था उससे ज्यादा स्टाफ की अब जरूरत हो गई। स्टाफ अब भी बढ़ता चला जाता है। दूसरी बात यह है कि लड़ाई के वक्त जो स्टाफ रखा गया था वह छोट कर नहीं रखा गया था, इसलिए कि उस वक्त मौका नहीं था। उस वक्त कम्पिटिटिव (competitive) इम्तहान नहीं लिया जाता था। जो आया उसको ले लिया गया। लेकिन आज आपने उसमें कमी करने की जरूरत क्यों महसूस नहीं की। कमेटी ने अपनी रिपोर्ट सार्त आठ मिनिस्ट्रियों के बारे में दी है लेकिन आपने एक पैसा भी कम नहीं किया है। मैं यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि करोड़ दो करोड़ रुपये की बात नहीं है। इस मुल्क का बजट ३२२ करोड़ का है, उसमें करोड़ दो करोड़ कम करने से कोई फर्क नहीं पड़ता। लेकिन आप गरीबों पर टैक्स क्यों लगा रहे हैं? क्या आपको टैक्स लगाने की ताकत हासिल है इसलिए आप यह टैक्स लगा रहे हैं। एक तरफ आप फिजूल खर्ची भी किये जाते हैं और दूसरी तरफ आप टैक्स भी लगाते जाते हैं। इसलिए मैं यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि इसका साइकालाजीकली बहुत बुरा असर पड़ता है। आपने पिछले दफा ढाई करोड़ इकानामी के लिए रखा था, पर इस दफा आपने एक पैसा भी नहीं रखा, इसका बहुत बुरा असर पड़ा है। इसका मतलब यह है कि आप इकानामी की तरफ नहीं गए हालांकि जो बजट आपने पास किया था उसमें आपने इसकी कोशिश की थी। कमेटी ने अपनी रिपोर्ट पेश की है लेकिन फिर भी हम इकानामी की तरफ नहीं जा रहे हैं। मैं आपसे पूछना चाहता हूँ कि जब आप यह साइकालाजी पैदा करेंगे तो उसका क्या नतीजा होगा। नतीजा यह होगा कि लोग समझेंगे कि आप गरीबों का ख्याल नहीं करते हैं आपने गरीबों की जरूरत की चीजों पर टैक्स

लगा कर यही असर पैदा कर दिया है। मैं आपसे कहना चाहता हूँ कि कांग्रेस वाले जो सबसे बड़ा वामवशेल (bombshell) इस असेम्बली में फेंका करते थे वह पोस्टकार्ड और लिफाफे का होता था। उस पर बहुत ज्यादा शोर मचा करता था और मुल्क में जितना तहलका इस चीज से फैलता था उतना और किसी चीज से नहीं फैलता था। ११४ और ११६ के एक्स्चेंज को कोई नहीं समझता था और पोस्टकार्ड की बात सब समझते थे। आज आप यह कहते हैं कि एक गांव वाला जो कि दूसरे जिले में अपना खत भेजता है उसका खत चूँकि अब हवाई जहाज से जायगा इसलिए उसे ३ पैसा पोस्टकार्ड का देना चाहिये। आम तौर से पोस्टकार्ड की कीमत से लिफाफे की कीमत दूनी हुआ करती है। जब पोस्टकार्ड की कीमत एक पैसा थी तो लिफाफे की कीमत दो पैसा थी। लेकिन अब लिफाफा दो आने का होगा और वह इसलिए कि वह हवाई जहाज से ले जाया जायगा। कितने सालों में एक जिन्हे से दूसरे जिन्हे को हवाई जहाज जाया करेंगे। मैं समझता हूँ कि इसमें तो कम से कम पचासों साल लग जायेंगे। आज आपने लिफाफे का दाम दो आना करके उन लोगों को कनसेशन (concession) दिया है जो कि बड़े शहरों में रहते हैं जिनकी डाक शाम को कलकत्ता, बम्बई, मद्रास और दिल्ली से जाती है। वह डाक रात को १२ बजे नागपुर में एक्स्चेंज होकर सुबह सूरज निकलने से पहले चारों शहरों में पहुंच जाती है। उनके लिए आपने डाई आने से लिफाफा दो आने कर दिया और पोस्टकार्ड की कीमत भी घटा दी। आप क्यों नहीं कहते कि हमने इन बड़े शहरों में रहने वालों को कनसेशन दिया है और उसमें जो घाटा होगा वह गरीब किसानों को पूरा करना होगा? अगर आप यह कहें तो उसका जो असर होगा उसे आप समझ लीजिये। आपने जितने टैक्स लगाये हैं वह जरूरत की चीजों पर हैं। इसलिए मैं आपसे अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि जो कनसेशन आपने अमीरों को दिये हैं वह गरीबों से पूरे किये हैं।

मुझे कोई ऐतराज नहीं कि इंडस्ट्रियलाइजेशन हो। मैं समझता हूँ कि मुल्क में इंडस्ट्रियलाइजेशन करने की जरूरत है। मैं यह भी समझता हूँ कि अभी इंडस्ट्रीज को प्राइवेट हैंड्स (private hands) में रहना पड़ेगा। लेकिन मैं आपसे एक सवाल पूछना चाहता हूँ और वह यह है वह लोग जिन्होंने बड़े बड़े मुनाफे उठाये, जिन्होंने ४०० और ५०० परसेंट प्राफिट (profit) किये, जिन्होंने ब्लैक मार्केटिंग किया, उन्होंने न सिर्फ अपने आपको बदनाम किया बल्कि उन्होंने कांग्रेस को और गवर्नमेंट को बदनाम कर दिया, जिन्होंने टैक्स को इवैड (evade) किया, जिसके लिए आपको एक कमेटी विधानी पड़ी, वह इन्क्वाइरी कमेटी भी

इन्क्वाइरी इवैड कर रही है। मैं इस बहस में नहीं पड़ना चाहता, लेकिन जिन लोगों ने हमारे साथ इस तरह का बरताव किया क्या आपने उनसे कोई गारंटी ले ली है कि आगे मुल्क को इंडस्ट्रियलाइज करने में वह तीन या चार परसेंट से ज्यादा मुनाफा नहीं लेंगे, वह ब्लैक मार्केटिंग नहीं करेंगे और वह चीजें पैदा करेंगे जिनसे मुल्क मजबूत हो, यह नहीं कि कास्मेटिक्स (cosmetics) वगैरह पैदा करें। अगर आपने ऐसा प्रावीजन नहीं किया है तो इंडस्ट्रियलाइज करने के गलत मानी भी लगाये जा सकते हैं। इस के लिए आप का कोई प्लान (plan) होना चाहिए और हमारा उस पर इतना कंट्रोल होना चाहिए कि वह प्लान हमारे मुल्क को मजबूत बनाने की तरफ ले जावे। अगर यह चीज नहीं है तो मैं आपसे अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि यह बजट वह कमी पूरी नहीं करता जोकि इसे करनी चाहिए। तो जब इस तरह की चीज है तो मैं आपसे यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि आपने उनको क्यों कनसेशन दिया है। एक छोटी सी चीज है, कैपिटल गेन्स टैक्स (Capital Gains Tax)। इस टैक्स को जो मैं समझा वह यह है कि आप इंडस्ट्रियलिस्ट्स से यह कहना चाहते हैं कि नेशलाइजेशन नहीं होगा। क्योंकि आज जिस कारखाने की कीमत ५ लाख है, एक दूसरी कम्पनी फ्लोट (float) करके एक बोगस ट्रांजेक्शन (bogus transaction) करके उसको २० लाख में कनवर्ट (convert) किया जा सकता है।

और जब २० लाख का सवाल पैदा होगा, तो कल सवाल पैदा होगा कि ५ परसेंट मुनाफा दीजिये। ५ परसेंट मुनाफा ५ लाख पर तो एक चीज होती है और वह २० लाख पर कुछ परसेंट देना पड़ेगा। जब मुनाफा देने की बात आयेगी तो वह मजदूरों के प्राफिट शियर के साथ आयेगा। तो आपने उनको चौगुना मुनाफा दे दिया तो वह कहां से आयेगा। वह मजदूरों के उस हिस्सों से कटेगा जो उसको प्रौफिट शेयर से मिला है और जो पिछले साल इंडस्ट्रियल ट्रस के वक्त आपने फैसला किया था। और सब से बड़ा सवाल यह है कि कुछ दिनों बाद जो आप Nationalise करेंगे, उस इंडस्ट्री को खरीदने लेंगे तो उसकी कीमत ५ लाख नहीं देनी पड़ेगी बल्कि २० लाख देनी पड़ेगी ऐसा मुल्क के लिए ना-मुमकिन होगा। इसलिए आप फरमा रहे हैं कि बहुत स्कीमें इंडस्ट्राइजेशन की नहीं होंगी।

मैं यह अर्ज करना चाहता हूँ कि इस तरह की चीजें आपके सामने है और यही वजह है कि आज कांग्रेस का लोग इतना क्रिटिस्जम करते हैं। क्योंकि उनकी समझ में यह बात इस बजट से नहीं आती कि आम जनता की भलाई इस बजट से क्या होगी। जयपुर कांग्रेस में जो प्रस्ताव पास किया गया था उसको कांग्रेस वाले किसी तरह से पूरा करेंगे। हमने जनता को जो वादे किये

[श्री मोहन लाल गौतम]

हैं उनको किस तरह से पूरा करेंगे वह इस बजट में नहीं दिखाई देता है। हम जनता की ओर से इस असेम्बली में आये हैं। जब हम यहां से बजट पास करके अप्रैल के महीने में गांवों में जायेंगे तो हम वहां गांव वालों को किस तरह से कहेंगे कि हमने जो वायदे किये थे उनको पूरा कर दिया है। जनता के जो कष्ट हैं उनको दूर कर दिया है। इस बात को जरूर फाइनेन्स मिनिस्टर साहब को बतलाना चाहिये। जब हम लोग गांव वालों को बतलाने से कासिर रहेंगे तो हम लोग कांग्रेस वालों को यहां रहने का अधिकार भी नहीं है। हम यहां जनता के दुःखों को दूर करने के लिए आये हैं। इसके लिए गवर्नमेंट को जरूर कुछ न कुछ करना चाहिये ताकि हम उन लोगों को बतला सकें कि हमने तुम्हारे दुःख को दूर करने के लिये यह २ काम किये हैं।

Shri Mohan Lal Gautam (U. P.: General): When I find Modi Sahib speaking in praise of this Budget and a number of members criticizing it the question arises to my mind for whom at last is this Budget meant, whom does it go against and whom it is going to affect adversely. The Budget that is being considered at present is not just an account of income and expenditure involving simple accountancy. It involves very great underlying principles. Now, when, after the attainment of swarajya, the reins of Government fell into the hands of those people who had always been preaching socialism and they came at the helm of affairs it was natural that those people who had up till now been making profit here in collusion with the English, who had been carrying on blackmarketing and who had been evading the taxes began to feel frightened and wondered whether this Government of Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru might take them. This was a great problem facing those people who now found themselves in a new atmosphere in this country. On the other hand there were those people who had been fighting the battle of freedom shoulder to shoulder with Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru and who had been holding out promises which emanated from the mouth of Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru and from the resolutions of the Congress. I do not, at this time, want to repeat the old promises and the old decisions of the Congress. But even at the Congress session that was held just recently—three months back, in the month of December—at Jaipur it was declared that it was a message of the Congress which the Congress people had to convey to every village, viz., that a class-less society was going to be formed. This was something conveyed to us in particular and we, who have come here, have come for just this purpose that we might fulfil the mission behind the resolution passed by the Congress.

Now, what is to be seen is this, what is the reason behind this criticism that is being made—the criticisms of this kind that are being brought forward by members of the Congress. The reason is this that they cannot see the way clearly. They are unable to see whether or not this Budget that has been prepared takes us towards a class-less society. If not, the Congress people must naturally feel perturbed and if they do not they are not doing their duty. On the other hand, the proposals that have been received are of this kind. I have no objection if you want to take this country towards industrialization. I have no objection if you prepare a plan and thereby produce in this country those essential articles which are necessary for making us strong. But, today, capitalism and industrialism have, by forging a conspiracy, by raising a propaganda, created an atmosphere which shows that this country is going to be ruined, which shows that there is no peace in this country. They want that peace should prevail here so that industries might flourish. I ask, did the industrialist have a better expectation of security at the time when the War was going on and it was not known whether the British were going to lose or win or has he got it now? Why were the industries going ahead then? Were the industrialists in greater risk at that time when there was a War going on against the British in India or is it now? There was no risk at the time when there were air raids from Japan, but now that Swarajya has come and peace prevails we are told there is no security. Industrial peace has been brought about. The Congress people have, by their efforts, checked the labour from resorting to strike. Disputes have lessened. This too they admit. In spite of this the industrialists do not feel satisfied. They still persist in saying that this is not enough and that still more is required to be done. I would say to you—I would say to the Finance Minister through you—that such small things cannot please them. What they want is something very difficult. What the President of the Chamber said was this that they could not be satisfied until all the amendments to Article 24 were withdrawn, until you made endeavours to award full compensation for property to be acquired. That is the real thing. The industrialists will not be satisfied by getting these small concessions. And, this is the reason why the industrialists are not satisfied with this. Still they keep criticizing. Hence, I say that when we study this Budget we see no plan in it. we see no policy, we see no scheme which might lead us to that goal which we have promised our electors. For long we preached that we would abolish the Zamindari. All provincial governments have gone so far that a number of enactments have been passed, but those enactments are held up today. But even a study of the whole of this Budget does not reveal that you have made any provision for the abolition of the Zamindari or that you intend making a move in that direction. I have not seen anything of that kind in it. You have not mentioned anywhere in the whole of this Budget whether this scheme of ours would take us forward in that direction. The language used previously by the honourable Minister is this: "No man, who is investing money, is taking greater risk than in any other country in the world."

I ask you if you perceive an even greater risk here than there is in Burma. Do you see an even greater risk here for the industrialists than there is in China? The whole of Europe is marching towards Communism. Do you see an even greater risk here than there? Then why is this psychology being created that there is a very great risk for the industrialists? I say to you that if we have to avoid this risk, if we have to save our country from the menace of Communism the way to do that is not that we should conciliate the industrialists and have no care for the poor. Whatever taxes are proposed to be levied under this Budget all apply to the poor. You say the prices are steady, the prices have been stabilized. I wish to submit, however, that even though the prices of capital goods might be low the commodities that a poor man has to do with, as, for instance, cloth and food, are priced fairly high and are soaring still higher. Now, what does your index show? It indicates the condition of a few families in the city only. You do not have the data of prices prevailing in villages. Hence, it is not enough to say that prices are being controlled. And, even if that be correct the taxes that you are levying would lead up to a rise in the cost of living index and if that index rises the same circle would start. Again the labourers would clamour that they should be given increased allowances and again the same circle would be set going. Hence, I want to say that this is not the way to check Communism or its menace. The proper way should have been that which is shown in the resolutions of our Congress, which the Congress keeps declaring and a slight hint whereof was given yesterday by Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru in his speech—that we should make an endeavour to resolve the difficulties of the poor people. You are not going that way. Let me tell you what impression is created on the mind by the things that you have provided herein. Why have you imposed new taxes? Why should you have come to feel the necessity for extra expenditure? The Budget that you passed last year and the amount that you provided therein brought you an extra sum of 82 crores of rupees. Some of it you spent on the army because there was a war going on in Kashmir. I do not wish to argue about it at this time. But I want to ask where was the necessity to spend 48 crores of rupees extra on civil administration. Since you happened to get an extra amount of rupees 82 crores hence you incurred an extra expenditure of 48 crores. What would you have done if you had not got that amount? Would you not have met your requirements with that much money you had? And, if you could not pull on with that much money why did you not say so? You spend whatever money comes to you and you do not turn towards economy. I do not wish to enter into a discussion as to whether you should have made a reduction of two crores or three crores but you should at least have effected some reduction even if it was just ten pice, and then you could have said that you could not carry on with that much. But you do not make the slightest move in that direction. Had you made a move in that direction it could have been said that you effected whatever economy you could effect and thereafter you resorted to taxation. But this was not done. A committee was constituted. But how could the committee function? Every minister wants that there should be an increase in the number of men already working. The staff goes on increasing. Which staff is this after all? How many times is this staff increased already? Just consider how many times is this staff increased as against the staff that existed prior to the War. It was understandable at the time of the War, and, moreover the British had to fight out the War and he did not feel concerned what expenditure that involved to this country. So he made this increase in the staff. But, has a necessity arisen now for an even greater staff than there was at the time of the War? The staff is still on the increase. The other thing is that the staff that was employed at the time of the war was not appointed by selection because there was no opportunity then for doing so. No competitive examination was held at that time. Whosoever came up was taken. But why have you not felt the need, today, of effecting a reduction in it? The committee has made its report in regard to seven or eight ministries but you have not reduced a single penny. I wish to submit that it is not a matter of one or two crores of rupees. This country's Budget amounts to 322 crores; not much difference would be made by the reduction therein of one or two crores. But why are you imposing taxes on the poor? Are you imposing these taxes because you have the power to levy taxation? On the one hand you go on spending extravagantly while on the other you go on levying taxes. I wish to submit that this has a very bad effect psychologically. Last time you reserved two and a half crores for economy's sake but this time you have not reserved a penny. This has had a very bad effect. This means that you did not proceed towards economy although you did make an effort in that direction in the Budget which you had passed. The committee has submitted its report but in spite of that we are not moving towards economy. I wish to ask you that when you create that psychology what would be the result? The result would be that people would think that you have no regard for the poor. You have created just this impression by levying taxes on commodities which form the necessities for the poor. I wish to say to you that the biggest bomb-shell which the Congress people used to throw into this Assembly was that of the post-card and the envelope. Considerable agitation used to be created thereby.

Nothing else could create the kind of stir that used to be created in the country on that score. Nobody understood the controversy over the exchange ratio being 1/4/- or 1/6/- but everybody understood the matter relating to the post-card. Today you say that since now the letter which a villager sends to another district would go by air he should pay three pice for a post-card. Ordinarily the price of an envelope is double that of a post-card. When the price of a post-card was one pice the price of an envelope was two pice. But, now the envelope has come to be priced at two annas and this for the reason that it will now be carried by air. How many years will it take for aeroplanes to go from one district to another? I feel that this would take at least fifty years. Today, by fixing the price of the envelope at two annas you have made a concession to those people who live in big towns, whose mail goes out in the evening from Calcutta, Bombay, Madras and Delhi. This mail is exchanged at Nagpur at 12 o'clock in the night and arrives in all the four towns in the morning before sunrise. For their sake you have reduced the price of the envelope from two and a half annas to two annas and also reduced the price of the post-card. Why don't you say that you have given a concession to the inhabitants of these big towns and that the loss thereby would have to be borne by the poor peasants. If you say that you can understand what would be the effect caused thereby. Whatever taxes you have imposed apply to articles of necessity. Hence, I want to submit that the concessions which you have allowed to the rich you have made good from the poor. I have no objection to your pursuing industrialisation. I feel that there is need for industrialisation in the country. I also feel that industries would, for the present have to remain in private hands. But I want to put you a question which is this: have you taken any guarantee from those people, who made large profits, who got profits up to 400 and 500 per cent., who practised black-marketing and thereby not only disgraced themselves but also brought a bad name to the Congress and the Government, who evaded the taxes, for which you had to appoint a Committee,—which Enquiry Committee is also evading the enquiry, but I do not wish to enter into that discussion—from people who treated us in that manner, that in future they would not charge a profit exceeding three or four per cent in industrialising the country, that they would not practise black-marketing and that they would produce those commodities which might go towards making the country strong, not that they would engage in the production of cosmetics etc. If you fail to make some such provision a wrong interpretation might also be given to industrialisation. For this you should have some plan and we should have such a control over that plan that it might lead our country to strength. If this thing is not there then I want to submit to you that this Budget does not make up the deficiency which it should make up. When this is the position I want to ask why you have given concessions to them. Take the capital gains tax—a small thing. From what I understand about this tax is that you want to say to the industrialists that there shall be no nationalisation because a factory which is at present valued at five lakhs could be converted into one valued at 20 lakhs by means of floating another company and by going through a bogus transaction. And, when the question of 20 lakhs arises, a demand would arise tomorrow, 'Give us five per cent. profit'. Five per cent profit on 5 lakhs is one thing but on 20 lakhs it will be a different story. When the question of giving the profit arises the question of profit share for the labourers would also come up. If you give them four times the profit where will the other thing come from? It would be deducted from the share of the labourers which falls due to them one of the profit-share which you decided last year at the time of the industrial truce. And, the biggest problem is this that when after sometime you are going to nationalise and are going to acquire that industry you will not have to pay five lakhs as its price but 20 lakhs. This it will be impossible for the country to do. Hence, you say that there will not be many schemes for industrialisation.

[Shri Mohan Lal Gautam]

I wish to submit that this is the kind of things you have before you. This is the reason why today people criticize the Congress so much. They are at a loss to understand what good would result from this Budget to the common people. How will the Congress people fulfil the object of the resolution that was passed at the Jaipur Congress Session. How we shall fulfil the promises which we have made to the people is not indicated by the Budget. We have come to this Assembly on behalf of the people. When, after passing this Budget, we return from here to our villages in the month of April how shall we be able to say to the villagers there that we have fulfilled the promises that we made to them and that we have removed the grievances of the people. This the honourable the Finance Minister must tell us. When we people fail to bring this home to the villagers we, of the Congress, should also have no right to continue here. We have come here to have the grievances of the people redressed. The Government must do something to that end so that we might be in a position to tell those people that these are the things we have done with a view to the amelioration of their lot.

Acharya J. B. Kripalani (U.P.: General): Sir, I have remained silent in this House but friends have told me that I am neglecting my duty as a Member of this House and that I must speak. I had thought that they also serve who sit in silence and listen to the wisdom of others. (An honourable Member: 'Partly'). And I have always thought that there were many veteran legislators here who can put things better than myself, and when I see that people can do things better than myself I do not bring myself forward.

I have very little, Sir, to say upon the Budget because I realise that Dr. Matthai has to act under certain circumstances. What are these circumstances? We threw out the foreign yoke, but while we did that we pledged ourselves to continuity and we have often said that this revolution is not to break the continuity that has been going on. It is useless then to blame Dr. Matthai for having presented a usual Budget which is in continuation of the old Budgets. That is not his fault; this is our policy and he could not possibly deviate from that policy. Another thing which we have to take into consideration is this, that recently through our best spokesmen we have assured capital that their interests would be safe. You will say that we gave assurances to the poor man also. But they were 19 years old; I think they were given in the Karachi Congress and I think they are time-barred. First we must fulfil the pledges that we have given now and Dr. Matthai has done it and I think I should congratulate him.

I also am inclined to congratulate the Government as a whole. Our independence coupled with partition made us face many critical and delicate problems and the Government has tackled them well and efficiently. We have been able to consolidate the innumerable States in which the country was divided; we have further produced a few more Provinces which are more likely to increase in number when the question of linguistic Provinces is decided. Our reputation in the international world is very high: it would appear that we have achieved more of swaraj in foreign lands than in our own country. Our representatives are everywhere and if they are able to spend a little more than this poor country can afford, it is also very necessary because only by these means can we become the bulwark of international peace and security. If we are isolated and look only to our country, we will not be as philanthropic as we would be if we spent a little more and sent our representatives to every possible country, from China to Peru and from the North Pole to Timbuctoo.

Then, we have also made the United Nations Organisation respectable. Not only international but even national questions are referred to it. I thought that action in Kashmir was only a 'police action' because the Ruler as also the people had consented to join the Union. Yet, in order to enhance the respectability of the U.N.O. we referred this purely domestic matter to that body. So, I think we have done very well and I would have congratulated the Government upon all these achievements were it not for the fact that the Ministers themselves do it more copiously and more eloquently. We are always told that they have delicate problems to face and they have done better than could have been possible in any other country. So, you will agree with me that when they and their publicity departments—and I hear each Ministry has a publicity department, whose production is so great and so fine that the ordinary Press may as well disappear—pay such high compliments to the Government, I should not waste my feeble words upon that. But one thing I want you seriously to consider. Whether you are a capitalist or a socialist of the western brand or of the Gandhian complexion, how are you going to build this country? Our foreign masters told us that they were carrying on the Government of this country by means of the 'steel frame'. We have it on high authority that we need this steel frame. I have absolutely no doubt that the steel frame is needed. But what we have unfortunately today is the frame and not the steel. The steel has got corroded. It was corroded during the war. The foreign government was interested at the time in winning the war. It did not matter how much money was spent. It did not matter how the administration went corrupt. This corroding of the steel frame, as we want to have continuity, has been continuing. We could have brushed up this steel frame if we had so desired—and in many countries it has been possible—but as we were pledged to continuity, so we were obliged to carry on this corrosion also. Everybody knew that the services were infected by corruption; they were also lax and inefficient. We kept them as they were and have been carrying on with them. Everywhere we go, in the bazar or in the club or in the market place, we hear of the corruption and inefficiency of the administration. Of course, the Ministers may not be hearing all this. It is quite possible, because they have no time to move in the public. They had time before, because they had not the responsibility of Government, but today they are hard worked individuals. Some of them I know actually work up to 2 A.M. and even beyond. You can understand what the person who works beyond 2 A.M. can produce. So we have continuity, and things going on as they were going on. I cannot see how things in India can improve unless what we hear in the bazar, in the market place, is listened to and due credence given to it. We hear it often said that you need not go to high officials and the lower ones can get things done for you for a consideration. An American friend who came to see me told me that he wanted a First Class reservation from Calcutta to Delhi, and the reservation clerk told him that there was no accommodation. But when he threw a ten rupee note at him the clerk said, "Wait a while. There is some little accommodation" and he got his reservation. When he went into the compartment, the compartment was empty but for himself. All this is from hearsay. I have no personal knowledge for I have no occasion to offer bribes to any official. He will be a bold official who would come to me to be bribed. He knows that for long years I have been a satyagrahi and I have fought with powers that be and I have suffered for it. For him to ask a bribe from me would be difficult. Nor have I the necessity to go to the black market. I generally accept very few invitations and issue even fewer. So all that I can say would be from hearsay, Sir, I read in the papers that we should not base our talk here on hearsay and rumours; but there are certain rumours which you cannot ignore, which come so repeatedly to your ears, which come so often and which come from such honourable quarters that you have got to listen to them. If I were to wait to give a bribe to an official, I think I will never discover the truth, because there will be no such occasion for me. If I have to discover that there is black market only through personal experience I would be never aware of its existence. So I have to rely upon rumours and if rumours are persistent, I must give some credence to them. In politics it is not sufficient that you are right but it is also necessary that people must know that you are right, and I say that this administration of ours is considered by the general public to be not right, to be not efficient, to be corrupt. It is also supposed by the public to be top heavy and is becoming heavier and more expensive. I say, this is the instrument with which we have to work, this is the only instrument by which we can bring about reform, and 'if the salt loses its savour where with shall it be salted'. I say, if the present state continues there cannot be even a prosperous capitalism in this country. I would not mind if there was capitalism here like that in America and if there were prospects for the poor man to increase his standard of living. Nor would I have any objection to socialism; nor even to Communism. But what are these 'isms' to be based upon? How are we to succeed? We can only succeed if we have an honest and efficient administration which, I am told, we have not. Not only has it to be honest and efficient, it has also to be economical, because Government has to set the standard. If the Government is extravagant or if it is supposed to be extravagant, if the common man believes it is extravagant, then it cannot be effective. Many of my socialist friends say that we are pledged to socialism. I have no quarrel with that, but on what is socialism to be built? The administration which even in the narrow field of political administration is inefficient and corrupt, how can it be entrusted with the whole economic life of the country! When there is nepotism, when, as I hear, even the recommendations of the Public Services Commission are sometimes set aside on some technical ground or other, when there is chit system, how do you expect that there can be nationalisation in this country? It is impossible; it is not scientific; it is not mathematical. Those who cannot do their particular narrow job efficiently, honestly, how can they undertake the whole economic life of the country, I cannot understand. We must make up our minds that as long as we are not able to clear the stables of administration, nothing will be possible. We have spent millions of rupees upon the refugees and yet, I can say with knowledge that we have not been able to rehabilitate even five per cent of the refugees, and I say, the fault is with the administration. The funds that have been spent, have been spent without any plan. We could have accomplished much more even by voluntary agency if we had encouraged that agency. The whole crux of the problem is that we must purify our administration. It pains me to refer to another matter, which however, I must: The Father of the Nation was shot dead. The Judge, on undisputable evidence, has told us that the administration failed, that this life could have been saved. We would have been saved the dishonour, and humiliation of having killed our great man. May I know what has been done in order to bring to book those people who were responsible for this culpable negligence? (An honourable Member: 'The matter is sub judice'.) You cannot say it is sub judice, because the Government has not preferred an appeal about this portion of the judgment. It is sub judice in other matters; it is not sub judice in this matter. We must take the judge's findings based as they are on evidence, as conclusive. Any way, there should have been an enquiry. Even if there was the least bit of suspicion, there should have been some enquiry and the people should have been taken into confidence. There were rumours that the administration had failed. In order to give a quietus to those rumours, there should have been an enquiry, whether the judgment was delivered or not. This was the least that was necessary. I see it has not been done. I do not know when it will be done. If such a thing had happened in England, I know what would have been done; if such a thing had happened in Japan, I know what would have happened. Some responsible person would have ripped open his stomach and committed harakiri. This is no ordinary matter. Therefore, I say, as the basis of all our reformation, of all our budgets, of all our schemes, of our becoming a democratic society, of our ever establishing a new social order—which it was the dream of the Father of this Nation—if we are to do anything great in the national field, I say we must improve our administration. We must make it really the steel frame that the British people said it was in their days—whether it was or was not. This administration must be like Caesar's wife—above suspicion not because Caesar was Caesar and therefore his wife must be considered above suspicion but because she was really so. Even so our administration should be above suspicion not because our leaders are honourable and they are honest, but because the administration itself is honourable and above suspicion.

Shri H. V. Kamath (C.P. and Berar: General): It is a melancholy fact that the first two budgets of free India have come in the wake of national sorrow. Just a month before the first budget was presented, India and the world were stirred to their very depths by the martyrdom of the Father of our Nation, the architect of our freedom, the prophet of peace and the apostle of non-violence. A day after the second budget was presented, we have lost our bard of freedom, and the hot-gospeller of Mahatma Gandhi's creed. I hope, Sir, that their spirits will continue to guide our activities here so that Daridra Narayan for whom they and we of the Congress have worked may come into his own at last, in spite of budgets, in spite of surpluses, deficits, balancing, and what not.

My honourable friend the Finance Minister, through the vicissitudes of his life, from a lawyer, about which he told us a few days ago, to the nation's Treasurer, must have seen life in its many aspects, the bright side as well as the seamy side. I think here was an opportunity for him to have become what I may call Robinhood, not of the old highway type, but a constitutional Robinhood, of robbing the rich and paying the poor and thus redressing the imbalance of our social order. But, unfortunately, he has not come quite up to our expectations, and therein, I must say he has failed us and the country to that extent. Engraved upon the heart of modern society, to a depth reaching to its inmost core, is the motto of an old Birmingham Bank. The motto was, and is, perhaps, "He who has, is". To my mind, this is not all. Today, "He who has, governs." It is a sad reflection upon the economy of modern times; not only of India, but of the whole world, that most governments are under the grip of big business, and finance—capital. That is a world phenomenon to which India is no exception.

It has been said that in India capital is shy today. There is an old Sanskrit Sloka about the son-in-law—

"Sadā vakraha, sadā rushthah, sadā pujām apekshate

Kanya rashisthito nityam jamata dashmagrahaha."

It means: "Always perverse, always angry, always wants to be worshipped or appeased or adored." As you all know, there are twelve rashis in the heavenly zodiac and one of the Rashis is Kanya Rashi. The son-in-law is the 10th planet of everyman, the 9th planets being, Sun, etc.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there any chance of the honourable member becoming one?

An Honourable Member: Looks forward.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I will only say, Sir, there is a destiny that shapes our ends, rough-hew them how we may. To my mind, capital is not shy, but capitalists are perverse. The Indian capitalist has cultivated studiously, deliberately, the mentality of non-cooperation with the Government, and Government—we have got some of our very best men in the Government—must make up its mind as to how to deal with the capitalist as they threaten to deal with labour if they go on strike. The reaction of big business was brought home to me by reading a pamphlet published by the All India Investors' Association, Calcutta, before the budget was presented. An appeal to the Finance Minister and Government—the pamphlet is entitled 'The economic crisis and the plight of investors' and strangely enough, the remedy suggested by them are among the remedies adopted by my friend the gallant Finance Minister. The remedies they suggested are to the following effect:

Substantial reduction in income-tax and super-tax rates,

Abolition of capital gains tax.

Expedition completion of the investigations by the Income-tax Commission.

Other remedies suggested are—

Grant of large statutory depreciation allowances, particularly in view of the high replacement costs.

Encouragement of import of raw materials for industry and progressive introduction of decontrol.

When I read this, it was strangely reminiscent of the speech of my honourable friend the Finance Minister. It appears to me that business is on the whole pleased with the budget; and I do not know whether there is a tendency on the part of Government—constituted as it is, creature of circumstances and of destiny—towards appeasing them, as said in the Sanskrit Sloka—

"Aho rupam aho dhvani"

Mutual admiration, one saying how nice you are and the other saying what fine concessions you have given. But, Sir, we should not blame the Finance Minister far too much. After all he is human and if he has erred, he will confess that he has erred and he will try to redress whatever wrong he might have committed. I do not propose to go into the various new burdens laid upon the common man because they have been touched upon by my friends already—the various taxes such as increase on postal rates, excise duty on sugar, cloth, paper, stationery, motor spirit and tyres and the import duty on betelnut. The increase in postal rates coupled with the assurance that mails will be carried by air if possible reminds me of a story. I hope I have your indulgence to tell the story and I am sure that Finance Minister will relish it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member will have only fifteen minutes. The whole time may be occupied in the story also, I have no objection.

Shri H. V. Kamath: In America or England—I don't know where—there was an Undertakers' Firm. They were facing some competition from rivals. They advertised one day to the following effect:

"Our disposal is very quick, we will send our own transport and a floral wreath if possible. Give us a trial."

This promise of sending mail if possible by air reminds me of the same. Because the community which will benefit by this promise of air-carriage, is mostly the urban and business community. So I would have liked it very much if the postal rates had been retained as they were for envelopes and post cards and airmail rates increased to three or even three and a half annas. Let the businessman pay through his nose. That community can very well afford to pay that rate, but don't increase the rates for envelopes and cards. I hope this would receive some attention at the hands of the Finance Minister and he will try to revise this unjust scheme of taxation regarding postage. There were other things which he could have taken into account without giving undue relief in the matter of higher income-tax rates.

He could have certainly expedited the measure which has been before the House for the last so many months—the Estate Duty Bill—Death Duties. I am afraid there is a feeling in the country that we are not doing the right thing. It is being postponed session after session and I don't know whether it will come up in this session at all. I venture to say that if prohibition was going to land us in so much difficulty as regards revenue, we might have held it in abeyance as a lesser evil instead of resorting to so much indirect taxation. The price of salt has not been lowered in spite of all our efforts and I do not see why we should not impose a little duty, if necessary.

The other avenues are—

The blackmarket money must be ploughed back somehow and I leave it to the ingenuity of the Finance Minister to grab this money. I am sure he has the gift of the grab, as he has the gift of the gab. Unfortunately I don't know how our Government is moving in this matter, because some time ago our Governor-General is reported to have recently said in Bombay as follows:

"We may fret now about the black-market but who knows whether this evil will not serve some useful purpose and ultimately work out towards a good we know not of?" A philosophical concept perhaps, but I hope the Government will not follow a policy which is in consonance with this dictum. Regarding inflation, I feel the anti-inflationary policy could be carried out either by reducing expenditure or by raising more revenue by direct taxation or both. If you increase indirect taxation on consumer goods, it will only increase the cost of living and aggravate the inflationary spiral.

Then I come to one point which has been very well made out by my friend, the suave and debonair Mr. Shiva Rao. He referred to the Secretariat in general terms. I would like to bring to the notice of one of the Ministers a concrete instance which took place only recently, and I hope he will ruthlessly deal with the slackness and inefficiency which was brought to my notice only a few days ago. I am glad the Honourable Minister too is present here, the Honourable Shri Jairamdas Daulatram, as this relates to one of his Joint Secretaries whose name I shall give outside if he asks for it. A friend of mine went to the Joint Secretary armed with a letter from the Food Minister himself and the Minister in that letter had asked the Joint Secretary to discuss a particular matter with my friend and put up a note. That letter was given to my friend over two months back and he tried to see the Joint Secretary not once but four times but he put him off on some ground or other, and ultimately yesterday the Secretary told him "I am sorry I am going on leave and what is the use of discussing with me. My successor is coming and you might discuss with him." I hope that this sort of thing will not be allowed to go on in the Secretariat, and that when such concrete instances are pointed out to the Ministers stern action will be taken so that the good officers—and there are many—may not think that officers are pushed up or not pushed up just as the Minister likes or does not like them, and that merit does not count. This sort of attitude should not be countenanced. Ministers must take action when there is inefficiency or slackness of their Secretaries and when these are brought to their notice.

Then there is the other point referred to by Dr. Sita Ramayya—the expenditure on foreign embassies. Looking at the figures I find certain disquieting facts.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The honourable member's time is up.

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY OF INDIA (LEGISLATIVE) [5TH MARCH 1949]

Shri H. V. Kamath: I will take only two more minutes, Sir, if you do not mind, and the House does not mind. Well, Sir, on page 104, of the Demand for Grants, I find that for the Embassy in America, the budget estimate for the pay of officers and establishment is Rs. 1,70,000; for the Embassy in Russia it is Rs. 93,000, and for the Embassy in China whose strength is going to be increased in the current year from four to six, it is only Rs. 97,000. Last year it was Rs. 99,000 and this year's figure shows a decrease, in spite of the fact that its strength is going to be increased. In America and Russia the officers and the establishments are going to be decreased, in America from ten to eight, and in Russia from seven to four. But we do not have a corresponding decrease in the expenditure. And it is a disquieting fact—a disconcerting fact that some ambassadors receive representation allowances more than their salaries. And some ambassadors, I am constrained to say, have not remained at their post—whichever be their headquarters—for any considerable length of time. They have been roaming about, I do not know how much of it was done at the cost of the exchequer, or whether the cost was met out of their own pockets. But certainly it will be very wise to enquire how long during the last eighteen months, each one of them remained at their posts, and how many months they spent in other lands.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I remind the speaker that our Ambassadors in foreign countries are official representatives and must be held in very high honour. And as I said yesterday, we should not make remarks without seeing whether they have some foundation. There is no good making allegations that our ambassadors are roaming about, whether at their expense or at state expenditure. The honourable member certainly is at liberty to ascertain the facts from the Honourable Minister, and if no relief is obtained, then this forum may be used. Such allegations, I ought not to allow in this House. I look on these allegations with disfavour.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I am sorry, I was perhaps slightly misunderstood. I only wanted to say that...

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is no good saying that an ambassador was roaming about in the continent or elsewhere. Unless the member has verified his information, it is wrong to make such allegations.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I personally know of one or two instances. Lastly, I have only to make a concrete suggestion with a view to increasing efficiency to effect as much economy as possible and to root out corruption wherever it may be. With this object, I would insist upon a new Ministry—a Ministry of Vigilance or a permanent Vigilance Tribunal, or whatever you may call it, being constituted. I would say that it should be composed only of tried public men, with no officials on its personnel, but only tried public men with service to the country to their credit. This Ministry must be in charge of the duty of attending to complaints of corruption, slackness, inefficiency, misdemeanour, and also go into the question of appointments made without reference to the Public Services Commission when any recruitment is made by any Ministry. The Ministries have no time to go into these complaints that they receive. So I urge that this Tribunal or Ministry must be constituted at an early date, and all complaints in all the Ministries must come to this Tribunal for disposal.

Before sitting down, I only want to add this. The times are out of joint, and I would only read out from a recent speech of Dr. Radhakrishnan the following, with your permission, because it is very pointed, and it applies with great appropriateness. He said:

“Our leaders have had a stupendous task in these fifteen months in rehabilitating hundreds of thousands of refugees, in getting Indian States into our political framework in tackling the great social and economic problems. They require the assistance of young men and women of enthusiasm, of earnestness, of integrity of spirit. They have been complaining in bitter terms of the large-scale corruption from top to bottom, of the lowering of standards of administrative efficiency. They deplore the manner in which merit is overlooked in public employment and passed over to satisfy other interests. Our independence seems to have intoxicated and unbalanced us. Success has exposed our weaknesses more than failure. Our country is today on its trial and the great qualities which won us freedom require to be developed if freedom is to be consolidated. Things which are happening in the neighbouring countries of Burma, Malaya and Siam must be a stern warning to us. The attraction of Communism is not due to the intrinsic merits of the Marxist creed. It is due to the fundamental deficiencies of our social order. Poverty and hunger are the fertile soil for the growth of wild fanaticism. If our society is sick, if our youth is frustrated, if there are wrongs and injustices in the social order which are not corrected, if we compromise with corruption simply because it is in high places, if we are weak in defending democracy, if people are filled with despair and seek escape in new evangelists, we cannot complain. Shortages of essential goods, high prices, the failure of the Government to check profiteering to control inflation, produce discontent and loosen the bonds of authority. If we drift toward chaos, it will not be of deliberate intention but because of our weakness and inaction. The...”

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We can take the extract as read.

Members: ‘He may finish it.’ I am sorry, but I have to call upon the honourable member to stop here. It is open to me to curtail a speech to the time fixed, or allow some time more. I do not want the House to go on, reminding me that this thing must be read, or so much more time must be given and so on. I am watching events here, and I am also aware that there are many more members waiting to speak. I call upon Mr. Sondhi to speak now.

Shri H. V. Kamath: I hope that the Finance Minister and our Government in spite of the adverse circumstances that are prevailing will be able to work in such way that Davidra Narayan will come into his own and that Government of the people, for the people and by the people will become a reality and the common man will have a life and have it more abundantly.
