The Miracle of the Pituitary

By Dr. Gerhard Venzmer, P.h. M.D.

The discovery that the pituitary is a ductless gland, secreting its hormones directly into the bloodstream, is hardly half a century old; detailed knowledge of its influence is partly quite recent. Science calls this organ, smaller than a bean, the "hypophysis"—a growth beneath—for it is an appendage on the lower side of the brain. It is composed of three lobes. By far the majority of its endocrine secretions are produced by the anterior (front) lobe, which has become well known for its decisive influence upon procreation. This connexion is easily proved by a biological experiment: animals deprived of this front lobe lose the activity of their procreative glands; in their ovaries no eggs ripen, the males produce no sperm, and the organs of reproduction shrink.

Modern pharmaceutical science is able to extract the sex hormone of the front lobe, the disappearance of which causes such phenomena, and medical science uses it in manifold ways. It has two effects in the female sex, one to stimulate the ripening of the egg, and the other the creation of yolk; apart from that it is "unspecific"; that is, not sex-differentiated, for in both sexes it increases the activity of the procreative glands. It is therefore employed for many of the disturbances of inner glands, and for retarded development of procreative organs and of growth in general. Often such disturbances are accompanied by intellectual backwardness, sometimes confused with the lesser forms of congenital idiocy. In such cases the extract of the front lobe sometimes brings a welcome improvement.

If, for some reason unknown to us, the hormones determining sex and those responsible for circulation and metabolism are both defective, children show curious symptoms of disease—increase of fat, laziness, and sluggishness. In other cases this disturbance produces only rapid fattening, especially on the stomach and posterior and thighs, while the ankles remain thin. Female figures, for instance, become like those painted by Rubens. Perhaps the queerest phenomenon is that irreconcilable contrasts appear together: besides the fattening there is a thinning process, connected with feebleness, shivering, headaches, and so forth, the reason for which is often not recognised, but which can be successfully fought with pituitary hormones.

One of the first qualities discovered in it was that it contained the hormone controlling growth. Since the end of last century we have known that certain alterations of the pituitary cells are responsible for strange diseases of the growth of extremities, such as the bones at the ends of the fingers, toes, nose, and chin. Dogs deprived in youth of the front lobe of the pituitary grow much less than their normal brothers; sometimes it is possible to cure human retarded growth and to give it a new impulse. A few years ago it was discovered that the front lobe of the pituitary produces another secretion, which stimulates the thyroid activity and increases the whole metabolism. It is employed in medicine to prevent clots occurring in blood vessels during operations. Another effect is a stimulation of the adrenal gland, which in turn regulates the amount of sugar in the blood.

For women, furthermore, besides procreation, another secretion of the pituitary is responsible for the activity of the mammary glands after childbirth. This milk-producing hormone has been found not only in mammals like cows, pigs, rats, and so forth, but, funnily enough, even in certain birds, as, for instance, pigeons. In order to understand this it should be known that towards the end of the breeding season their crops secrete a milky mass which serves as the first nourishment for the chicks.

The medial (centre) and posterior (back) lobes of the pituitary produce secretions which constantly influence many vital functions. One increases the blood pressure, another diminishes the secretion of water from the body. There is a well-known secretion of the back lobe which helps to increase contraction of the womb during childbirth, and yet another which has curiously altered its functions during the evolution of our life history. For instance, in frogs it regulates the change of colour, while the higher vertebrates, such as human beings, need it for the adaptation of their eyes to the dark, and probably for varying their body temperature.

As nearly all the secretions of the pituitary pass through other ductless glands, it is probable that the pituitary is the supreme director of all these glands. It may be concluded from this that variations in the activity of the pituitary influence not only the body but also the mind and the temperament. People with slow activity of the pituitary, recognisable to the trained eye, are particularly phlegmatic, indifferent, dependent, torpid, and lacking in self-confidence. A subject exhibiting this "hypopituitarism" is sometimes improved by supplying the appropriate pituitary hormones. This also upholds the popular belief in the energetic chin; such a clever judge of men as Napoleon only promoted soldiers with big noses, because he was convinced that there was a connexion between the size of their nose and their courage. A strong development of the jaw, the nose, and the chin is a common sign of the Dinaric race, the representatives of which are well known for their battling spirit and their sturdy temperament.

It is just as great a miracle that all these effects are contained in an organ of seven and a half grains weight as that such a small quantity of matter produces more than a dozen secretions so different to their chemical properties that they produce in the living organism absolutely different effects.

K. O.

A knock-out is caused by a hard blow on certain sensitive parts of the body, disabling the boxer. These dangerous spots are: the point of the chin, the angles of the jaw, the spots below and above the ear, the jugular vein, the heart and stomach cavities, the liver, and the kidneys. These blows can cause concussion of the brain, or they can disturb the equilibrium, which creates a vacuum in the brain and the state called "shock."

As for the harm of these knock-out blows, it can be stated that they usually have no further dangerous consequences. In the 40 cases of death thus far recorded in the ring, the cause was haemorrhage between the brain and its membrane.

Special treatment of the knocked out is usually not necessary, as consciousness and movement return as a rule after a short while, although exceptions are not unknown. In view of them constant supervision of boxers by sports doctors is necessary.

French peasants' cure for a cold in the head: Plaster the nose with pork fat or tallow, and put several drops of lemon juice up the nostrils. For the "collywobblers" they advise leg-of-veal soup and stewed quinces or quince jam.

GLANDULAR THERAPY.

By Dr. A. F. De Saint-Croix. Journal of Medicine, Feb. '37.

In the light of modern researches and extraordinary rapid progress in the direction of the use of ductless glands in the treatment of various diseases much is said and has been discussed.

This new principle in medicine has completely revolutionised the old time tonics.

Glandular therapy, the application of which dates back from 1889 when the pioneer of this branch of medicine, Brown Sequard, administered to himself testicular extract, is well known. To the amazement of himself and other physicians, the experiment proved a great success and a new chapter was opened up in the modern book of therapeutics.

Since that day, good many eminent scientists, notably Banting, Best, Murphy, Minot, and Serge Voronoff have experimented on various organisms including human beings, taking help of every available ductless gland found in the body.

Recently the new system has been perfected by Dr. Serge Voronoff, the eminent Russian Surgeon, to such a degree, that surprising results have been recorded in books of medical statistics.

He had organized a regular monkey hospital where one could find every type and breed of monkeys, whose natural habits and tendencies were regularly studied, since the testes is also concerned in the development of mental faculties and physical phenomenon, the implantation of a suitable testicular gland of a good breed of monkey becomes essential and inevitable.

A good deal of information about the above subjects can also be obtained from an authoritative publication put forward by Dr. E. Retterer, a Parisian Professor.

It is also truth that the most forward medical men whose opinions are valued by physicians of the whole world have personally carried out experiments, and have without reservation, put their stamp of approval on the system and advocated its tremendous possibilities.

Yet all the achievements of the system are reduced to nil if the glands selected are not of standard purity and if due care is not taken during the preparation of their compounds. The animals selected must not be diseased and must be absolutely young so that all their ductless glands must be functioning with their proper physiological secretions. On strict and thorough pathological examinations, they should prove to be absolutely germ free and in a healthy condition.

However, it has been scientifically proved that the best and most rational treatment for the cure of sexual weakness is Glandular Extracts obtained from the glands of bulls, and administered by the mouth.

The exact proportions selected from different glands is a matter of vital importance.

Another factor of great importance is the preservation and stability of these products. Absolute freshness is essential. The gelatine capsule is recognised as the best method of preserving freshness and therapeutic efficacy. The vital gland substances are completely sealed in the gelatine envelope, and all possibility of deterioration is eliminated.

The Scientists of Bergeret Laboratories have discovered after years of research and experiment a glandular extract of unusual efficacy in the treatment of sexual weakness. This preparation is Endophon, which is available in two different kinds. No. 1 is for Partial Impotence and No. 2 for complete Impotence and Sterility. This Great Product has won tremendous success, and this has led to its widest medical recognition. It is different to the usual run of Glandular preparations, being the Star Product of Bergeret Laboratories, who have for more than a quarter of a century manufactured Organotherapeutic products for the medical profession.

What Do Dictators Eat?

Have dictators time to think of food? For the most part they live soberly, but, of course, there are exceptions. Napoleon, for instance, had a passion for roast chicken, which he would demand of his chef at the most curious hours—even late at night—and he would not eat it warmed up, either! Hitler, however, is more or less Spartan in his daily life. Breakfast at 6.30—a plate of oatmeal porridge and milk. Lunch just before noon, an old-fashioned German meal with steaming meat dishes for his collaborators, while he himself only takes oatmeal porridge once more (this time flavoured with melted butter as well as milk), with a pear or apple for desert. For supper, an egg dish and some sort of fruit, about 6.30.

Mussolini always has a big basket of fruit on his desk and eats at it as he works. He used to be a hearty feeder, with a liking for good food and wine, but years ago the doctors forbade him meat and alcohol and his wife makes him stick firmly to their ruling.

After all these years away from the South, Stalin still prefers the Georgian dishes of his youth. His favourite dish is a mutton chop prepared in Georgian fashion, washed down with half a bottle of Caucasian wine.

Kemal Ataturk was the man to really appreciate the pleasures of the table. He was both gourmand and gourmet; there can surely have been no one in Ankara with his capacity for eating and drinking. The laws of Mahomet may forbid the drinking of wine, but Ataturk quaffed it none the less merrily for that! The story goes that his appetite has embarrassed many a diplomat, for Kemal used to press them to eat and drink at every turn, and etiquette then compelled them to drink! As a rule the Americans could stand up to it, but the sober English often found themselves in trouble. The Turkish dictator had a great liking for the French embassy. He felt that the French knew the meaning of culinary delights—and indeed they entertained him to many a special reception: veloutine aux champignons, homard Thermidor, wild duck steeped in Moroccan wine, and the like.

Nature Notes

Many apes, who are terribly afraid of snakes, are unable to get away from them. Instead of fleeing the object of their horror, they follow it and remain near it, even though filled with dread. This may have started the legend of the snake's hypnotic eye. Professor Antonius, of Vienna, has written a report about the anthropoid apes at the Dusseldorf Zoo which has contributed to the understanding of this "mental attitude." The apes' enclosure there is surrounded by a rail charged with a high tension current, and the attitude of the gorilla, chimpanzee, and orang-utan towards it shows the typical difference between the temperaments of the three apes.

The gorilla only once had an electric shock, and ever after avoided the rail completely; it did not exist for him. The chimpanzee, however, who had the same experience, seemed unable, despite his fright and horror, to stop playing with the danger; again and again he approached the rail and, although showing every sign of terror, was not satisfied until he was fixed to it, screaming loudly, so that the current had to be disconnected. That happened nearly every day. Quite different was the attitude of the orang-utan, the level-headed anthropoid of the Asiatic islands. He would sit, quiet and unafraid, close to the rail, and, to amuse himself, extract electric sparks from it with his finger-nails.

Ants wage war in very much the same way as humans. The military tactics and strategy of a colony of ants is the basis of our own. So far as natural weapons are concerned, the ant is very much better off. The poor human has no protection, and a pair of fists are of very limited value in attack. The ant, by contrast, has a strong suit of armour, and powerful mandibles. But that's only the beginning of their armaments.

The worst gas known to human warfare is mustard gas. Nature has provided the ant with a very similar weapon—fluid which some species can throw for a considerable distance. When it touches another ant, the victim is paralysed and soon dies. Even much larger creatures—spiders and small birds—cannot survive such an attack.

Real Power

If I had to select four men who have had more power than any others, I should mention Buddha and Christ, Pythagoras and Galileo. No one of these four had the support of the State until after his propaganda had achieved a great measure of success. No one of the four had much success in his own lifetime. No one of the four would have affected human life as he has done if power had been his primary object. No one of the four sought the kind of power that enslaves others, but the kind that sets them free—in the case of the first two, by showing how to master the desires that lead to strife, and thence to defeat slavery and subjection; in the case of the second two, by pointing the way towards control of natural forces. It is not ultimately by violence that men are ruled, but by the wisdom of those who appeal to the common desires of mankind, for happiness, for inward and outward peace, and for the understanding of the world in which, by no choice of our own, we have to live.

Mussolini's Horoscope

The Ascendant of Signor Mussolini is in the Scorpion, which gives him his inflexible will-power and his rudeness towards people he dislikes. Mars occupies the Eighth House in the Twins, whence the dictator derives his captivating eloquence. The sign of the Lion, in the Middle of the Heavens, testifies to his fight for success and against political liberty. At the same time, one finds in this House the Sun, which makes the Duce independent and authoritarian; Mercury, which signifies pride, and Jupiter, which has given him his high political position. It must be noted that Mercury is "in combustion," which means too near the Sun; this discloses impetuosity and lack of balance. The same peculiarity was recorded for Savonarola. Finally, Uranus occupies the Tenth House, which is the Lion. Is one to conclude that Signor Mussolini has revolted against convention, or that a revolt will cause his downfall? In any case, there is here an indication of revolution. It is rather alarming to notice the same position of Uranus in the horoscopes of persons who have come to a bad end: Marie Antoinette, the Czar Nicolas II, to say nothing of Charlotte, Empress of Mexico, and Louis II of Bavaria, who both died insane.

Gonorrhea—The Best Treatment

By A DOCTOR.

—o—

Gonorrhea is on the increase. In fact, the latest world statistics suggest that four out of five persons in capitals, like London and New York are stricken with the disease.

The common fallacy that it is no worse than a bad cold is exploded. It is now recognised by clinical and pathological evidence as a dangerous disease with serious complications. Therefore, it should never be neglected.

Gonorrhea is an infective process due to the action of a specific micro-organism known as Gonococcus. It is characterized by a discharge of pus through the urethra. The primary lesion is an acute catarrhal inflammation of the anterior portion of the urethra. It quickly runs to suppuration, and if neglected, it attacks the bladder and weakens it, causing bladder trouble, then the prostate gland, and passing through the sub-acute and acute stages, penetrates the circulation and organic parenchymata, producing complications like stricture, epididymitis, gonorrhoeal rheumatism, vesiculitis, prostatitis, orchitis (swollen testicles) pyelitis, etc: and sometimes causes Impotence.

The symptoms of the disease usually start within 5 to 10 days after infection.

The patient may get some slight itching of the meatus and a burning sensation while passing urine. The lips of the meatus are congested and swollen. Gradually a serious discharge appears which though thin and mucoid in the beginning, soon becomes thick and yellow. There is sometimes a dragging pain in the back and some slight constitutional disturbances such as fever.

Occasionally the swelling inside the urethra is so great, that there is an hindrance in the flow of urine and on exertion haemorrhage occurs. The first attack is always more troublesome than the subsequent ones, though it responds easier to treatment. When this disease reaches the chronic stage it needs prolonged treatment.

The best treatment in all cases of Gonorrhea and Gleet (Chronic 'G') is "505" Mixture and Injection. It is endorsed by the medical profession and widely used in hospitals and private clinics in France. The Injection soothes and heals the inflammation of the anterior portion of the urethra, and stops the discharge within a week. The Mixture, taken internally, removes symptoms such as pain, burning sensation after urination and eradicates the Gonococcus (Gonorrhea germs) from the system. The cure is complete and permanent.

* Many are the aerial "forerunners"—from Icarus to the Tailor of Ulm. Leonardo da Vinci probably never tried out his flying machine himself. Damian did . . .

Scotland's First Aeronaut

John Damian, Abbot of Tunland

In handing down to us the names of those men who attempted flight in the past, tradition makes it plain that they were magicians; the "scientists" of their age. The ordinary man then believed that they alone were capable of contending with so capricious and unsubstantial a stuff as the air. Many of those magicians paid dearly for their little knowledge. Time and time again they failed. But they persisted.

A legendary king of Britain, Bladud by name, lost his life in 852 B.C. when trying to fly. After his attempt we pass over pages of the endeavours of others until we come to the year A.D. 1020. Then an English monk, Oliver de Malmesbury, essayed flight. He attributed his failure to the lack of a tail, which he had forgotten to make and fit. In 1507 John Damian, Abbot of Tunland, startled Scotsmen by setting a day when he would fly from off the wall of Stirling Castle. He is rightly termed "Scotland's first aeronaut, since he is the first man recorded who tried to fly in that country. His nationality, however, is obscure.

John arrived in Scotland about 1495, when he was appointed Physician to the Court of King James the Fourth at Edinburgh. He played many parts in his day. An various times during his sojourn in Scotland he is written of as a "feigned" friar, "quack" doctor, alchemist, apothecary, boon companion, and aeronaut. He ended his career as a mining engineer.

Damian must have been a remarkable man. In spite of all his poses, he never really lost the support of the King, though tongues got wagging and he was referred to as the "Deceiver." The Court came to hate him and his ways. In January 1504, he was provided with funds by the King to continue his work as an alchemist. From then on until the autumn of 1507 he was left alone to fulfil a promise he had made to "multiply" gold, but as time passed funds were diminished. He was shelved, in fact.

On September 5, 1507, the King decided to send his Ambassadors to France. Damian was not asked to accompany them. Here was a sign significant enough of how the King regarded him. But Damian was equal to the occasion. Something extraordinary was needed to bring him back into the light of the Royal favour. So he did an extraordinary thing. He spread a rumour, and set a day—September 22, 1507—when he would fly from off the wall of Stirling Castle. By this means, he asserted, he would be in France long before those Ambassadors of the King. And then he set to work and "caused to be made for himself a pair of wings of feathers from divers foulis—cocks and capons."

The hour came. At ten o'clock on the morning of September 22, 1507, rain was falling. The whole canopy of heaven was leaden. It was ominously calm.

But in spite of the inhospitality of the weather, great crowds had gathered in the grounds of Stirling Castle. His Majesty was there with his Court, and no doubt many amongst it hoped the "Deceiver" would end his deceptions for ever on that morning. The mob, at first, was noisy and excited, but became silent when Damian was seen on top of the old wall that protected the vulnerable approaches to the castle. His wings were fastened across his shoulders. He bowed to the King, who, we must believe, still had faith in his favourite. And then, without further ado, he bent his legs, straightened them, and sprang into the air. But—alas! his voyage ended almost before it had begun. He crashed. He struck the foot of the wall immediately below him with a thud. He had not flown a yard. There he lay in agony on his wings, crumpled and broken. His thigh-bone was fractured. He writhed in pain, but uttered no word.

All ran to him to ask what had happened.

"I will never gang agane," he replied

The crowd laughed loudly at that remark of his. And then, in spite of his pain, Damian spoke.

"My wings," he said, "were composed of various kinds of feathers. Amongst them were the feathers of dunghill fowls, and they by a certain sort of sympathy were attracted towards the dunghill. Now, if my wings had been made of eagles' feathers alone, then that same sort of sympathy would have attracted them towards the skies."

Then he swooned.

THE GREAT SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF THE BERGERET LABORATORIES.

—(o)—

Progress in clinical medicine is gist; but, whoever or whatever he is, he dependent on progress in the ancillary must see the necessity of applying sciences, physiology, pharmacology, etc., scientifically-established facts to human new discoveries in pure science are the needs.

Chemists at work at the Bergeret Laboratories.

stuff on which clinical progress feeds. But between the discovery in pure science and its application to medicine, there must be an investigator. He may be a physician, a chemist, a bacteriolo-

When a clinical application has been found for a scientific discovery, the work has just begun. A method must be worked out by which a chemical process or a biological technique employed in the experimental laboratory can be applied in production operations. And a practical method of clinical administration must be worked out, for an effective remedy cannot be reserved for a few selected patients—it must be made available to thousands. Moreover, the first crude product, perhaps eagerly sought because of the imperative need for it, must be improved and refined so that its efficacy may be increased and its field of usefulness broadened.

The Discovery of Endophon.

The year 1931 saw the discovery of ENDOPHON. It was made possible only by preceding research. Dr. Gustave LeClerc, a chemist on the consulting staff was the first to discover the activity of certain glands. Dr. Louis Perrancourt, also on the consulting staff, was likewise working on the problem. He completed his work shortly after Le Clerc's discovery, and assigned to the preparation its correct formula.

The discovery of ENDOPHON marked a new era in Glandular Therapy. Recently, a new Gland Extract has been discovered and embodied in ENDOPHON, greatly increasing its curative efficacy.

Reported in Eighteen Medical Papers.

A striking example of the achievements of the Bergeret Laboratories is illustrated in the work which led to the discovery of ENDOPHON. The course of this work was reported in eighteen medical papers.

Policy of the Bergeret Laboratories.

It has always been the policy of the Bergeret Laboratories never to offer a product to the world until it has been first subjected to the most exhaustive tests. Therefore; you may be sure that not only has a Bergeret Product been standardised, and made to conform to the highest degree of purity, and that the utmost demands of science have been utilized in its manufacture, but also that its therapeutic value has been demonstrated beyond any question of doubt.

ALBERT NEISSER

Discoverer of the cause of Gonorrhoea

BY ADOLPH BEILIN

The name of Albert Neisser will be perpetuated for his discovery of the causal agent of gonorrhoea. However, gonorrhoea is still one of the most prevalent infections. This disease and other sexual diseases have existed since the dawn of civilization.

Health authorities have estimated that one out of ten persons in the United States suffers from some form of venereal disease. Despite all the modern prophylactic measures and the knowledge of effective prevention of gonorrheal infections after exposure, nevertheless indifference, ignorance and false prudery are still largely responsible for the undue prevalence of this disease. Gonorrhea is entirely a human affliction. In adults it is almost invariably transmitted through sex contact, but in some instances the gonococcus may remain alive on towels, clothing or bedding for short periods of time and thus infrequently prove infective. The disease has been known to spread rapidly through schools and orphan asylums in which infected attendants have been employed. Sterility in women and blindness in new-born babies are frequently produced by the gonococcus; but in recent years the prevention and treatment of gonorrheal infections have undergone considerable progress. A 2 percent solution of silver nitrate in the eyes of a new-born infant is a positive preventive of blindness from this disease. This preventive measure is now used throughout the civilized world.

The cause of gonorrhea remained unknown until 1879. In that year Albert Neisser, following the bacteriologic methods of Koch, poured a watery solution of methyl violet over a bit of gonorrheal pus and then examined it under high power magnification through a microscope. In this manner he was first to discover the gonococcus.

Neisser was born at Breslau, Germany, January, 22, 1855, and he lived until 1916. For many years prior to the discovery which brought him into world prominence, he was successively professor of skin and venereal diseases and occupant of the chair in dermatology at the University of Breslau. His studies embraced almost the entire field of dermatology and syphilology, and he was first to observe the tuberculous. An indefatigable research worker and writer, he was particularly active in studying the prophylaxis of venereal diseases in general and the prostitution problem from the sociologic, national economic and ethical points of view. Like his father, who was a practising physician at Breslau before him, Neisser was held in high esteem by all who knew him. For his isolation of the gonococcus, numerous researches on various pathogenic microbes and incessant warfare against infectious disease, he rose to immortal leadership in the cause of medical progress and human welfare.

Complications of Gonorrhoea

The causative organism of gonorrhoea, micro-coccus gonorrhoea was first described by Neisser in 1877. It is an acute infection with a primary lesion which is usually urethritis. It is usually followed by numerous secondary and systemic manifestations of which the most common are epididymitis, salpingitis, arthritis, synovitis and endocarditis.

It is not a killing disease in itself, but looking to its far-reaching consequences, it does not fall very far short of syphilis. It should never be neglected.

Its organism is biscuit-shaped which occurs in pairs, usually within the leucocytes. It occurs in adults due to impure sexual intercourse, in the new born child due to vaginal contamination and in elder children due to accidental infection.

Regarding the systemic gonococcal infection, the most important is gonococcal septicæmia and pyemia. Thayer and Blumer were the first to cultivate gonococci from the blood of a patient. The death rate though not very high, is of considerable high ratio.

Next in importance comes, Gonorrheal arthritis, which in many respects is the most damaging and disabling of all the complications of gonorrhoea. It occurs in 2 to 5 percent of cases. It occurs more frequently in males than females. As a rule it is found when gonorrhea is in an acute stage but, it can also be seen when the attack is subacute or even chronic. A gonorrheal arthritis of great intensity may be found in a woman newly married, being infected by the old gleet in her husband. As a rule, many joints are affected together. Clinically the variability and obstinacy are two main features.

In certain cases wandering pains are detected near the joints, without redness or swelling. In others hydrarthrosis spondylitis and painful heel are found.

Iritis is another complication which is not infrequently found and which has a tendency to recur with every attack subsequently. Sometimes meningitis, myelitis and true neuritis occur.

The search for the primary lesion and a thought of the possibility of gonorrheal infection are the best safeguards. The most common blunder that one can commit is to mistake gonococcus arthritis for rheumatic fever. The persistence of trouble in one or two joints should put one on guard. In gonorrhoea the swelling often extends more above and below joints than in other forms of arthritis. The complement fixation test is sometimes of value.

NOTE.

The best treatment for Gonorrhoea and its complications is "505" Mixture and Injection. This scientific treatment has been tested on thousands of cases and proved a thorough and permanent cure.

Essence of Thought

The true genius nearly always intrudes and disturbs. He talks to a temporal world out of a world eternal. And thus he says the wrong things at the right time. Eternal truths are never true at any given moment in history. The process of transformation has to reassert itself in order to digest and assimilate the utterly unpractical things that the genius has produced from the storehouse of eternity. Yet the genius is the healer for his time, because anything he betrays of eternal truth is healing.

There is room for some decentralisation of culture as well as of politics. The point about a decentralised or local culture is that you must make it yourself. You cannot have it purveyed to you from the big stores. It is fundamentally for that reason—not because it is local, but because it is freshly created by a personal initiative—that I want to see a community-culture developed by each community in its own community centre.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC

Dear Sir / Madam,

What can be more disappointing than a worthless product—apart from the monetary loss?

The products for which we are Sole Agents are GENUINE—selected from different manufacturers—and represent the BEST that Medical Science have produced. This, we feel confident in stating, as before accepting each Agency, we have obtained from the manufacturers authentic evidence of the curative efficacy of each product—numerous testimonials and published opinions by Doctors. Moreover, we have used each product on many cases with convincing success.

The reputation and good-will of a firm is based on the goods they deal in. We have complete confidence in the goods we advertise, as our business policy, in fairness to our customers, is not to deal in anything that is unsatisfactory in the slightest degree. We reject agencies for products that do not reach our high standard of efficacy.

If you should require anything Medical, obtain it from us—it's GUARANTEED—and will give you the satisfaction you naturally expect.

Sincerely yours,

The Anglo-French Medical Agency.

5. IT RESTORES
NORMAL GLAND ACTIVITY.

ENDOPHON is a true physiological restorative in lowered virility of functional origin, being prepared from fresh Glandular Substances, obtained from the glands of healthy bulls. It supplies the enfeebled, worn-out glands of the sexual organ with those essential restorative substances, with the result that Impotence is soon replaced with Perfect Virility.

ENDOPHON changes a Weak Impotent man, lacking Manly Power and Competence, into a Virile Man, with full sexual Vigour and ability.

Those men who are sexually weak and cannot have a proper union, should take ENDOPHON. It is 'different' to other preparations for Impotence, as it does not give mere temporary benefit, but cures permanently, by its direct restorative action on the sexual organ. PREMATURE EJACULATION gives place to perfect normal union with ejaculation occurring after-not before full indulgence. FEEBLE PARTIAL ERECTION is replaced with erection, full and regular and COMPLETE IMPOTENCE is replaced with natural "feeling" and full ability. ENDOPHON creates a healthy, sexual system.

Conclusive EVIDENCE.

- (1) The Faculty of Medicine of Paris, after clinical trials has pronounced ENDOPHON to be the only efficacious Glandular preparation.
- (2) Numerous letters have been received from the Medical Profession, testifying to its marvellous curative efficacy.
- (3) It is regularly used by many Doctors, and in the Curtius Clinic for Private Diseases. (Hamburg)
- (4) It has obtained three Gold Medals for Purity and Curative Excellence. Paris (1922) Brussels (1924) and Rome (1926).

These are your assurances that ENDOPHON is a genuine remedy. A trial three bottles will afford convincing proof of its efficacy, by the benefit received.

THE VIRILITY OF MANKIND

What Medical Science has accomplished.

By a Doctor.

—o—

How to maintain the virility of mankind? This knotty problem has engaged the attention of many famous scientists.

The chief causes of sexual weakness is the vicious habit of masturbation, sexual excesses, prolonged and frequent sexual excitement, which have been proved detrimental in the extreme. The sexual system is deprived of sufficient rest and recuperation and gradually loses its wonted energy. Other causes are excessive exercise, sedentary life, and excessive drinking.

Several attempts have been made to arrive at a formula which would bring about successful results. Commencing from the experiments of Brown Sequard in 1889 down to the recent findings of Dr. Serge Voronoff, the famous Russian Surgeon, it is a long history of laborious investigations by men of outstanding ability who dedicated their lives to the cause of medical progress and the alleviation of human misery.

The outcome of these extensive experiments and research established Gland treatment by the mouth, as best and most rational in the cure of Sexual weakness.

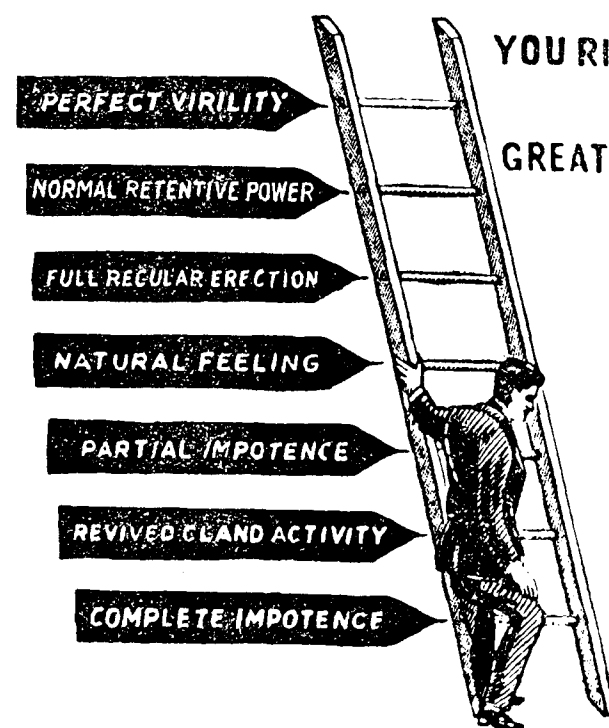

A very important factor in successful gland treatment is FRESHNESS of the vital Gland Substances. It is necessary that they are prepared in gelatine capsule form, to ensure freshness and maximum curative efficacy. Gland Substances in tablet or liquid form quickly deteriorate and become inert and worthless.

THE CHOICE OF THE EXPERT

ENDOPHON is recommended for under-sexed men (deficient virility). It gives increased virility with greater retentive power.

It is also recommended as a wise safeguard against sexual weakness. If a few doses is taken each time, before or after sexual intercourse, the well-being of the organ will be maintained. This precautionary measure is especially advised to those men whose sexual ability is not quite normal.

ENDOPHON is non-injurious, and can be taken any time. Its action is beneficial and restorative,—not stimulating. It tones, strengthens, and maintains the healthy condition of the organ.

NOTE:—It has been conclusively proved that the only rational cure for Impotence is Glandular Treatment. This is strongly recommended by Dr. Marie Stopes in her book "Enduring Passion"

Treatment, in order to be successful, should be carried out regularly. Efficacy of the Gland Substances depends on FRESHNESS. It is important that they are, when taken, perfectly fresh. This difficulty has been overcome, as ENDOPHON is now made by the manufacturers in CAPSULE FORM, which fully preserves the freshness and potency of the vital Gland Substances.

Glandular Substances in tablet or liquid form lose freshness in a short time, and become stale and ineffective as a treatment for Impotence.

Treatment of Chronic Gonorrhea in the Male.

According to Dr. F. A. Lafonte (Gazette Med. France) gonorrhea in the male becomes chronic when the acute symptoms have subsided and there persists a slight or moderate discharge which contains gonococci.

Chronic gonorrhea implies that the previously generalized inflammation has become more or less localised to areas of erosions or ulceration of the urethral mucosa or to inflammation of the glandular structures or membranes in or about the urethra.

In cases of chronic gonorrhea the best treatment is a mixture and an Injection. Abortive treatment will aggravate the urethra and bring about complications.

"505" is the best treatment for chronic gonorrhea. The Mixture taken internally controls such distressing symptoms as pain, burning on urination, strangury and frequency. It does not upset the stomach. The Injection heals the ulcerations of the urethral mucosa or inflammation of the glandular structures and membranes in or about the urethra.

Gonorrheal Urethritis in the Female.

The urethra is by far the most common seat of primary infection in the female. The cervix is next in frequency. In children the vagina is chiefly involved. The female urethra is a straight short tube about $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches in length and can readily be inspected endoscopically but instrumentation is contraindicated in acute cases. Its internal sphincter usually acts as a barrier to upward extension into the bladder.

Acute gonorrheal urethritis seldom comes under observation. The discharge which occurs is usually interpreted as being due to "catching-cold" or it is erroneously explained as a "leucorrhea" which has become worse. Or some times it is interpreted as "bladder" trouble. Injections and instrumentation are not to be used in the acute stage. The patient should secure rest in bed and mild permanganate douches may be prescribed. Internal medication with balsamics, like "505" will insure relief from the distressing "bladder" symptoms.

The disease tends to become chronic because the infection penetrates into the deeper glandular structures especially in those glands situated near the external urinary meatus. On endoscopy the prominent and swollen openings of these glands may be seen. By stripping the urethra with the finger in the vagina a drop of pus may be expressed. The urethra itself feels like a hard cord. Sometimes on endoscopic examination one may also observe a diverticulum of the urethra which in addition to the infected glands may also act as foci of infection. These foci may be the cause of gonorrheal arthritis.

Put Your Tongue Out 30 Times a Day!

By Dr. Gaston Durville

From Je Sais Tout, Paris

"A man is as old as his arteries." That is an old saying but there is an essential medical truth in it; a man is old when his arteries are old—and, in particular, when hardening and thickening of the arteries affect the head. There are many dangers arising from this condition—rupture of an artery, causing blood to flood part of the brain; obstruction of an artery, causing the starvation and atrophy of a part of the brain; and degeneration of cells, causing a reduction in the mental powers.

Symptoms of bad head circulation are headaches, congestion of the nose and back of the neck, eye trouble, noises in the head, hardness of hearing, giddiness, throbbing in the head, incapacity for prolonged work, and rapid mental fatigue. The superficial temporal artery becomes prominent.

Fortunately, Nature foresaw the dangers that man might run into through leading an unnatural and sedentary life, and endowed his head with a wonderful system of veins for "emptying" it when it becomes dangerously overcharged with blood. But it is essential to keep this system in a healthy state, and this is possible by means of appropriate exercises which anyone can practise, and the outlines of which are given here.

1. "Yawning."—Open the mouth as wide as it will go, then close it—just like a yawn. Begin with 7 or 8 yawns a day, increased gradually to 30 a day.

2. "Blowing."—Puff out the cheeks as if to blow out a candle or play a trombone. Begin with a few "blows," increasing to about 30 a day.

3. Putting out the tongue.—Open the mouth wide and put out your tongue as far as possible—like a rude small boy. Take at least 10 days to get up to 30 times a day.

4. "Nodding."—Standing like a soldier at attention, thrust the head forward and down until the chin touches the chest. Same number of times as for the first three exercises.

5. "Eyes Right."—Standing to attention as before, turn the head to one side as far as it will go, and drop it until the chin touches the collarbone; if you can't do this at first, lift the shoulder slightly until the chin and collarbone touch. Then do the same on the other side. Gradually increase the number of times until 20 or 30 each side is reached at the end of a week.

6. Neck-stretching.—Throw your head back and contract the muscles of the throat and front of the neck so that they stand right out under the skin. This is a very difficult exercise for most people, but is very effective because it creates a "vacuum" in the depths of the neck, opens the veins there, and so draws the blood from the head.

Cause:—The duct is weakened and relaxed through masturbation or prolonged excesses or sexual excitement.

Male Sterility

In the event of childless marriages, the entire responsibility cannot be placed on the woman: men must take his share of the blame.

The stigma of barrenness is an ancient one. And throughout the ages it has been the woman that has borne the blame for a childless marriage. Many are the tales in the Bible of the scorn and degradation heaped upon the barren woman. Rachel, the wife of Jacob, unable to bear him any children, gave him her handmaid, Bilhah, who soon "conceived and bore Jacob a son,"

For it has always been assumed, and still is among the laity, that if the man is capable of performing the sexual act, he cannot be responsible for his wife's failure to become pregnant. And so even today the woman of a childless marriage is looked upon with mingled pity and contempt. But since the discovery of the microscope and the resulting advances in our knowledge of mechanism of reproduction, we have learned that the man can be and often is the sterile member of the marriage. The woman no longer need assume the complete responsibility for being childless.

A recent study of 1070 childless unions showed that the male was responsible in 197 instances, the female in 619 cases, and both in 816 cases. It is evident that the man is completely responsible in at least one-third of the cases of childless marriages.

To answer the question of how it is possible for a man to be potent and yet absolutely unable to become a father requires a brief discussion of the male sexual organs and their workings. We shall then be in a position to consider what may interfere with the normal function of the man in reproduction, aside from the matter of impotence.

At the climax of sexual excitement, the orgasm, the male ejects a glairy, sticky liquid with a characteristic odor. This is called semen (seed). If a drop of this material is examined under a microscope, a truly astonishing spectacle is seen. The fluid is teeming with rapidly moving objects which look like tadpoles. These are the sperm or spermatozoa, the male sexual cells. They have oval heads, short bodies, and long, tapering and very active tails. They are about one five-hundredth of an inch in length. It is these fish-like sex cells which unite with the egg of the female to create a new individual.

Where do the sperms come from, and how do they reach the outside? Within the scrotum of the male there are two oval bodies about one and a half inches long and one inch thick from front to back. These are the testicles or testes, the male sex glands. They are made of enormous numbers of greatly coiled tubes, which are called the seminiferous tubules. Within the walls of these tubes, the sperm are formed.

From the testicles the sperm are brought to the outside by two long thin tubes, the vasa deferentes, one from each testicle. These tubes run up in the groin and finally enter the abdominal cavity through a space in the wall. They then empty into the tube, which comes off from the base of the urinary bladder and carries the urine to the outside after running the entire length of the male organ or penis.

Just before the vasa deferentes empty into the tube at the bladder base, they expand into two sacs called the seminal vesicles. Here the sperm are stored until they are thrown forth during intercourse.

The semen consist mainly of the secretion of the prostate gland, whose ducts open into the tube leading to the outside from the urinary bladder. The semen, therefore, consists of the prostate gland secretion in which a tremendous number of sperm are swimming. It has been estimated that the semen expelled during one orgasm contains 200,000,000 sperm. Since of this number only one can unite with the egg or ovum, it is obvious that nature is very lavish and even wasteful in her efforts to secure her ends, the reproduction of the species.

The sperm, when deposited in the vagina, swim up the mouth of the womb, the entire length of the womb and into the tubes, a distance many thousand times their own length. Within the woman's tubes one sperm, having made its long and difficult journey, will unite with one egg, if it is present, and form a new being.

It is important to understand the difference between sterility and lowered fertility. Sterility means complete inability to reproduce, while lowered fertility refers to diminished, but not completely absent, ability to reproduce. We know that individuals vary in their capacity to reproduce just as they vary in many other respects such as growth, strength, etc. In addition, poor nutrition, bad hygiene, and anemia may lower the ability of the man to reproduce. His sperm may be diminished or too weak to make the long and difficult journey to meet the egg.

In some cases the testes from the very beginning are unable to manufacture spermatozoa. But usually the absence of sperm in the semen is due to some blockage in the passages leading from the testicles to the outside. The most common and widespread cause for such obstruction is gonorrhea.

In an attack of gonorrhea, a common venereal disease, the testicles may become inflamed and swollen. When they heal, the scar tissue formed may seal the tube leading from the testicle. If both testicles are damaged in this way, the male will be absolutely sterile. Many complicated and delicate operations have been devised to open up these tubes, but they have been failures in the great majority of cases.

But even when gonorrhea does not attack the testicles and their ducts, it may still make the man sterile. The prostate gland and the seminal vesicles may become infected, and this infection, may make the sperm inactive. Such a condition is not hopeless however, since by treatment of this infection (gonorrheal vesiculo-prostatitis) the man's fertility may be readily restored.

There are other conditions which may permanently damage the testicles. Tuberculosis of the testicles is not uncommon. In such cases they may be so greatly damaged as to require their removal, resulting, of course, in sterility. Syphilis can also attack the testicles. They become enlarged and stony hard, and then a discharging sore may form. It is easy to see how the victim may become sterile.

Mumps is a very common disease in childhood and of little importance as a rule. But in boys past the age of puberty and in adults mumps may be serious. In about twenty percent of such cases one or both testicles as a result may lose their power to make sperm. If both are damaged, the individual will be completely sterile.

There is an error in development which may cause sterility. The testicles originally develop within the body. Just before or soon after birth, they descend and enter the scrotum. If they do not and remain within the body, they lose their ability to make sperm, and are also more likely to develop cancer. It is important that such cases be treated early to prevent these consequences. During the past few years it has been discovered that the injection of the sex hormone found in the urine of pregnant women can cause these testicles to enter the scrotum. If these injections are unsuccessful, then they must be brought down by surgical methods. It seems that the heat within the body is too great for the testicles. This accounts for their presence in the sac on the outside, the scrotum.

It has been found that in some cases where there are no sperm in the semen (aspermia) or where they are present in decreased numbers (oligospermia), the injection of the hormone from the urine of pregnant women, may restore the function of the testicles.

It is evident that it is necessary for the physician investigating a childless marriage to obtain a specimen of the man's semen for microscopic examination. That he is potent, that is, able to perform the sexual act, does not mean he may not be sterile. All men contemplating marriage should have their semen examined to determine their ability or inability to have children with a normal, healthy woman.

There are cases of couples who, as far as medical science can discover, are perfectly healthy, and who yet cannot have children together. Such individuals have remarried and then have had children. No good explanation has been made for such cases, beyond the idea of "individual incompatibility."

Sterility has a legal significance, beyond the personal one. For sterility has been and remains sufficient grounds for divorce in some parts of the civilized world.

Medical science has at least removed from woman the entire blame for childlessness. Man must take his share of the blame.

Can Sex be Determined?

Several interesting facts and fallacies concerning sex determination.

From time immemorial the riddle of sex has fascinated the minds of many. Numberless are the fables and myths that have grown up surrounding this great mystery. The facts have been very few until but recently with the development of the modern theory of sex determination.

The physician is often asked by the pregnant woman and her mate: Can you predict whether our child will be a boy or a girl? Can the sex of the child be influenced? What is the cause of the sex of the individual? In what follows we shall consider the many fables, and then present the most modern scientific theory of sex determination.

We have all heard our parents tell of their or others uncanny skill in predicting the sex of a child before birth. And we have listened to their serious recommendation of this or that rough-and-ready method of discovering the sex of the unborn child. These favorite signs have been the fruit of generations of "guessing."

The most favorite method is based upon the shape of the abdomen of the expectant mother in the latter months of pregnancy. If it is pointed, then the child will be a boy. It will be a girl if the belly is rounded, while there is a prominence in the back.

Another means of arriving at a decision takes into consideration the movements of the child within the womb. If the mother is disturbed by active movements of the child, and even awakened by its forceful kicks, then the child is a male. The male of the species is more active, of course. And it follows that if the movements of the child are few and weak, the child will be a girl, since the female is the meeker and gentler sex.

The time of day during which the mother vomits, if at all, is the basis of still another favorite method. Vomiting in the morning means a boy, while vomiting in the afternoon means a girl. The logic of this decision has been lost in the ages; if indeed it ever had one.

Sleepiness, the presence of skin eruptions, changes in the facial features, these and other criteria have been employed in the guessing. Greatest faith is displayed among the less gullible in the heart rate of the unborn child as an indication of its sex. In fact, many physicians claim that they can predict a child's sex in this manner before birth. A girl is supposed to have a faster heart rate than a boy, which is generally true after birth. But the foremost obstetrician in America commenting on this method says: "The patient is to be advised that any prediction thus made is a pure guess." We know that there are many things such as drugs, the mother's condition, pressure on the navel-cord, etc., can increase or decrease the baby's heart rate while in the womb.

Lay people have not been alone in inventing many fancy theories. Quacks, pseudo-scientists, and even serious scientific men have added to the folklore on the subject. Many of these older ideas have been recently revived by pseudo-scientists as I shall show later. The Father of Medicine himself, the great Hippocrates, taught that the right ovary forms boy-producing eggs, while the left gives girl-producing eggs. This idea was retained for centuries. As late as 1786 a German doctor advised intercourse on the right side in order to have a boy, and on the left for a girl.

Two theories, that have never been proved, stated, first, that the older the father, the more boys would be born, and, secondly, the weaker member of the mates would produce his or her opposite. A German scientist during the unusual conditions of the Great War, when the soldiers returned to their wives only on short furloughs, studied the relationship between the time of conception and the sex of the child. He found that when the woman became pregnant closer to the time of her menstrual period, the child was more likely to be a boy. If she became pregnant soon after the menstrual period, the child would be a girl in 84% of the cases.

A study of more than ten million births showed that boys are more common in the winter months. Another survey tended to show that the higher the altitude, the more male children born. None of these observations and theories are accepted by modern science.

Recently a certain Dr. S. A. Shaffer revived many of the discredited theories mentioned above. For example, in his book he says: "... the left ovary is the one which creates the ovum which will develop into a female child and the right ovary discharges an ovum, which, if impregnated, will develop into a male child..." We recognize this as the belief held by Hippocrates in the year of 400 B.C. Modern surgery has completely exploded this idea. Women who had one ovary removed at operations have later given birth to children of both sexes. Obviously then the single remaining ovary was able to produce eggs which could develop into either male or female. As a matter of fact, the modern theory of sex determination recognizes the male cell or sperm as the carrier of the sex determining factor, as we shall see.

The highly imaginative Dr. Shaffer contributes other rich myths. "Female passions are comparatively mild during the boy time . . . they are far stronger during the girl period and reach their highest intensity during the barren period." Here is another gem: "A woman sleeping on her right side, especially immediately after intercourse, is more apt to bear a boy, while sleeping on her left side is likely to bear a girl." This is all the sheerest of nonsense.

Attempts have been made to devise chemical tests to predict the sex of the unborn child. A recent test used the urine of the woman. This was injected into a male rabbit, who was later killed for the examination of his testicles. This test failed to be confirmed and has been abandoned. It must not be confused with the well-established and highly accurate test for the early diagnosis of pregnancy, which uses female and not male rabbits.

Many patients will ask: why can't the X-Ray be used for predicting sex? This is not possible, however, for the simple reason that the soft tissue sexual organs do not appear on the X-Ray plate. Only the bony skeleton can be detected, and there is not any difference at this stage in life between the skeletons of the opposite sexes. But the X-Ray has a definite use in the diagnosis of twin pregnancy; and in the detection of abnormal position of the child within the womb.

Scientists have always believed that there must be some natural law which can explain the birth of males and females. The proportion between the two sexes in live births in almost all countries is 105 to 100. It is true that more miscarriages are with male children. Nature apparently is more generous in its production of boys.

Thus it is seen that it is the sperm that is responsible for sex, and the woman is in no way accountable for the sex of her child. Disappointed fathers should bear this in mind.

Since it is a matter of chance whether a female—or a male—producing sperm will unite with the egg, we can understand why approximately equal numbers of boys and girls are born.

It is interesting to note that much of this fascinating knowledge of chromosomes and sex determination, was discovered by work with the humble fruit-fly (Drosophila). Amazing results have followed attempts to modify the chromosomes of this fly by means of X-Rays, etc. This is, however, a very complex and technical subject.

Despite our newest knowledge of sex determination, "nature still holds the secret of sex production, and it is a question if it is desirable, even if it were possible, for man to interfere in the matter."

A HALF CENTURY

These products have been at the service of Medical men and the public for over half a century. During that time the advertisements of these preparations have been found mainly in medical journals. That these preparations have become standard and are now being largely prescribed by Doctors in France, Belgium, Austria and practically all English speaking countries of the world is our reward for "Keeping the Faith." The testimonials and voluntary reports we have received from physicians run into thousands. Reports on one product alone—"505"—now number nearly eighteen thousand. We only publish a few of these reports in abbreviated form with the consent of the physician. However, they are filed by number and can always be referred to when necessary.
