WE GUARANTEE TO CURE YOU Or Refund Your Money.

Such is the confidence we have in these remedies. Since introducing them into India, we have received hundreds of testimonials from cured patients and from the Medical profession, convincing proof of their marvellous curative efficacy. This has decided us to guarantee them to increase sales.

If the medicines taken do not effect a cure, the empty bottles and cartons should be returned for identification, on receipt of which the money paid will be immediately refunded.

THIS IS NO EMPTY GUARANTEE—BUT A BONAFIDE ONE IF A CURE IS NOT EFFECTED—WE KEEP TO IT.

THE STORY OF ROME

By Charles Richard Cammell.

The Eternal City! That exalted name is a prophecy—the presage of immortality for the ideals and laws and culture of Western Civilisation, all of which have their centre and their symbol in the Seven Hills of Rome.

The Gods of Greece came to Rome in the great Roman days, and they brought with them the arts and letters of Greece and something of the old Athenian spirit, till Rome became another Greece; if Greece had her Homer, Rome had her Virgil; if Greece had her Pindar, Rome had her Horace; if there were a Grecian Pericles, there was a Roman Tully; and the laurel crown of Caesar grew on the same tree as the bays of Alexander.

Rome was, and is, the eternal capital of the western world. Rome is not a part of Italy; for the greater cannot be part of the less. Rome does not belong to Italy.

Rome belongs to the world of Western Civilisation and, beyond it, to the world entire.

Men think of Rome as an Italian city. That pretence is a bubble of but seventy years inflation. Men think of Rome as the Papal city, but the Papacy, for all its centuries of rule, is but an episode in the story of Rome. Rome was before Popes were dreamed of. Rome was empress of the world when Italy was but a vassal in the ranks of her numberless retinue.

He is a blind man that has been in Rome and has seen no ghosts, a deaf man that has heard no voices of the dead. They are there, everywhere, those presences of an indestructible antiquity; in the Forum, on the Capitol, along the Appian Way; in the Coliseum, in memorial column and triumphal arch, in the baths of the Roman people and the palace of the Roman Caesars—these to the inner eye, are not reliques, but living symbols of the aspiring mind and quenchless spirit of man.

Rome, to the writer's eye (and no man can write honestly of what he has not seen with the mind's eye)—Rome, as he saw it, and sees it, is itself a twofold world. There is the world of ruins that are living symbols, the world of ancient Rome; and there is the world of art and splendour reborn, of life renewed, the world of the Roman Renaissance. Between these two lies historically a long period of time—centuries upon centuries—the Dark Ages—the Middle Ages—but in Rome the memory of them has been swept away, brushed aside by the hands of the Michelangelos and Berninis.

The outline of Roman history is familiar to every one. What images it has conjured; what dreams have risen in the minds of millions of boys, and girls too, when the story was unfolded to them! The legend of Romulus, the fosterchild of wolves, building with his own hand those rude walls on the Palatine hill, first of the seven that were to dominate the world; the still-legendary history of the seven kings of Rome—the exile of the Tarquins, the heroic exploit of Horatius and his comrades at the immortal bridge; the overthrow of Lars Porsena and the Etrurian powers at the battle of Lake Regillus—these epic tales are on the tongues of every English child in the rhymes of Macaulay.

The Republic is Born

And now the Roman Republic is born. Austere, haughty, inflexible, its growth is that of an oak, slow but inevitable, till it is come to its full strength and stature. And what strength, what stature, is this, before which the world trembles!

Hence Rome proceeds on her majestic way, now in the stately robe of tragedy, now in the tattered motley of burlesque, always vital, poignant, human. It is the story of the struggle of the Roman people, first for liberty, then for power. They won both, but with the winning of the second they lost the first; for the power of a State is ultimately inseparable from the power of individuals, and individual power, which is dictatorial, is incompatible with liberty.

So, after a pageant of half a millennium of victory, defeat, and triumph, the Roman Republic passed away, and a quarter of a century before the birth of Christ the Roman Empire was born.

The Republic had created the Roman army. It was to her arms that Rome owed her vast dominions; it was her arms that carried her Graeco-Roman culture to the confines of the known world. Europe, Asia, Africa, felt the tramp of her legions. Nation after nation shook and fell as the long, straight Roman roads crept on over mountain and desert, bringing to barbarous kingdoms and wild tribes, to ancient outworn civilisations and young races on the threshold of life, the inexorable march of Roman warriors.

But that march, for all its military monotony, bore with it something that no other march of armies, save those of Alexander, ever bore. The barbaric world, with its barbaric customs and religions, crumbled before those marching legions, and in their place Roman cities with Roman temples—which were Greek temples—arose, beautiful, strong, serene. Down the straight roads poured the arts and crafts and commodities of which western civilisation was to be compounded.

Huge aqueducts conveyed water to the new Roman cities—water for the great baths, pure water for the health of the new communities which grew up everywhere under the mighty shield of Roman dominion.

And Roman arms brought Roman laws in the great days of the Roman Republic. It was Republican Rome that framed abiding laws for the progress and preservation of mankind. All these things—cities and villas and baths, and Roman justice, came to Britain, the northern outpost of the Roman Empire. They went to Gaul and Spain, as they went to Asia and Egypt; and everywhere Roman names were dedicated to the Gods of Greece. Assuredly the loveliness of the old Gods is enduring, and he is wise who drinks of the well of their ancient wisdom and warms his heart with their beauty.

But with the dawn of the Christian era, a new wisdom, a new beauty came to Rome; a beauty so ethereal, a wisdom so spiritual that the old Rome could not comprehend it.

Which spot in all this wonder of Rome is the most wonderful? Marvel on marvel, memory on memory, arise as we thread the maze of its historic streets, as we pause in its fountained squares, as we tread the corridors of its superb palaces, gorgeous with the world's supreme masterpieces of painting and statuary, as we muse among the stately ruins of its republican and its imperial past. Which spot, of all the spots hallowed by fame, stirs the heart most deeply, strikes most potently upon the consciousness? If there be one among them all, the most impressive, the most imperious in its command to reverence, it is, we think, a rude imprint, a shadowy mysterious footmark in the Appian Way, without the walls of Rome. There it is in the rock, defying time, denying enquiry; a mute appeal to faith, a symbol of hope, an eternal record of charity. It is, so tradition says, so the legend runs, the footprint of Jesus—of the resurrected Son of Man, who met Peter the Apostle on that spot two thousand years ago.

Winter came all over the world. Rome the great was no more. She had aged, decayed and died, as all things earthly age, decay and die, and the barbarian, whom she had conquered and civilised, reverted to barbarism, trampled on her corse and rifled her heritage.

And with Rome, Greece had perished. Rome had swallowed Greece in her vast appetite, had absorbed her incomparable culture, and imposed it by her imperial arms on the world. With Rome's passing, Greece, too, was no more.

Fear governed the world. War, the pastime of the barbarian, scourged the world. Ignorance darkened the world. Superstition stifled the world. Here and there a wiser despot reigned; but the darkness gathered again. The spirit of man was fettered. Rome had bound him with golden chains, and when they broke, the Goth had bound him with iron and the Hun with brass. He was captive, and progress was ineffectual.

For centuries the history of Rome is a story of little strifes of baronial houses, like Colonna and Orsini. Here and there a spirit of the old Roman mould arose, like Rienzi, for a moment, to disappear, a meteor in the night.

Sleeping Giant Awoke

And then dawn came, and touched Europe and when it touched Rome the sleeping giant awoke and arose, and there was such a light of beauty and splendour in the world as has left its lustrous memory in the minds and hearts of everyone of us.

It began, this reawakening, with literature, back in the Middle Ages, first in Provence and then in Florence, when scholars like the poet Petrarch revived the ancient literatures of Greece and Rome; but it came to view visibly in the fifteenth century when men began to dig in Rome and about it, and all through Italy. Everywhere fragments of antique statuary were unearthed, and the conception of a new beauty, that was very ancient, dawned on Rome.

And sculptors arose with a new might, and carved glorious figures from carrara marble in the grand, ancient manner. And painters arose, and painted living human figures, forms of flesh and blood, as the Greeks had painted them. No longer did they paint "mannikins" and call them child-Christ. Here was a prodigy! It was the rediscovery of pagan Greece in Rome, which brought about the comprehension of the human Christ, and which gave the real child-Christ to Christian art.

So it was that Rome threw off her Gothic raiment and wrapped herself again in the Roman toga. She restored to art the outward beauty of the ancient Gods of Greece, but her art retained the spiritual beauty of Christianity.

At the Castle of St. Angelo, the Papal fortress on the Tiber, near the Vatican, the two worlds of Rome meet and are married.

This huge round tower was built by the Emperor Hadrian for his mausoleum. Fallen into ruin in the dark days that followed Rome's fall, its mighty walls later became the framework of a mediaeval castle. Lastly, it became a Renaissance palace, frescoed with bright paintings and surmounted by a church, above which, and crowning all, stands the colossal figure of an angel—Saint Angelo—who looks out and across a stately bridge flanked on either hand by sculptured angels.

Behold St. Peter's with its vast circling colonnades! How many great artists created this superb temple; the aged Michelangelo, whose last days were spent upon it, the young, glorious Raphael were among its architects; Bernini designed the great baldachino within, beneath the cupola. The classic inspiration of Rome triumphs in St. Peter's. There is nothing of the Gothic world about it; nor is there in that other Papal basilica, the Roman St. Paul's. Rather are they with their columns and coloured marbles, imperial Roman temples dedicated to Christ.

"School of The World"

Near by is the Vatican. Its galleries contain countless miracles of art; among the antique sculptures is the immensely famous Belvedere Apollo. In this palace is the Sistine Chapel; its vault seems to breathe as we gaze awe-stricken on the prodigious forms created by Michelangelo, while its altar-piece shows the Last Judgment by the brush of that same Titan of the Arts.

In the halls of the Vatican are the greatest works of Raphael, those frescoes which have been the "School of the world." Raphael's most sublime painting on canvas, "The Transfiguration," is in the Vatican gallery. To comprehend the pre-eminence of the world's most celebrated painter, one must see him in Rome. His influence on art has had no equal. Not one of us can conceive of a world without the pictures of Raphael.

But beyond the Vatican, all over Rome, are countless marvels. Churches and palaces and villas numberless are glowing with the subtlest creations of the world's genius. Not a ceiling nor a wall, not an altar nor a courtyard, that does not testify to the divine urge in man to create the beautiful. Even the fountains of the Roman squares are triumphs of flamboyant sculpture. Art is everywhere. History is everywhere. The heroic ideal of Rome is eternal. The blood of Christian martyrs sanctifies her vast Coliseum, and their bones hallow the subterranean labyrinth of her catacombs.

With the Renaissance, Rome purged herself of the Goth, who had razed her temples and desecrated the habitations of her poets. And after the Renaissance and its luxuriant aftermath, what has Rome to show? A chronicle of fluctuating decadence culminating in the ineffectual fatuity of the Fascisti. Despite the heroism of Garibaldi and the genius of Mazzini, that is the sum of it.

WHO WAS 'THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK'?

By C. R. Cammell

No historical figure is more mysterious, nor is there one whose identity has excited more curiosity than that nameless prisoner of the Bastille who has been known for two centuries and a half as the Man in the Iron Mask. The Bastille, the fortress of Paris, was swept away by the furious tide of the French Revolution, and July 14, the day on which, in 1789, its mighty walls were stormed, became thenceforward the national holiday of the French Republic. How many dark secrets were buried in that memorable overthrow! What fearful tales lie entombed beneath the pavements of Paris, where every trace of the vast ruin has been effaced! Of all the secrets interred with the Bastille, that of the Iron Mask has kept a special place in the consciousness of posterity. So strange and baffling a mystery could not be forgotten, and the fate of the veiled unfortunate has never ceased to stir the hearts of men, and to stimulate their inquiries.

Many theories have been advanced in favour of the identification of this or that historic personage with the Man in the Iron Mask, but, though much ingenuity has been exhausted to prove them, they have been found, one and all, to be false, and until recent years no confident verdict as to the masked captive's identity could be reached.

Name Remains A Mystery

Let us examine the principal documents relative to this sinister affair. The diary of an officer named Dujunca, who was at that time the King's Lieutenant at the Bastille, has been preserved. From it we learn that "On Thursday, 18th September, 1698, at three o'clock in the afternoon, M. Saint-Mars, the governor, arrived at the Bastille....from the islands of Sainte-Marguerite and Sainte-Honnat." He brought with him in his own litter a man who had long been a prisoner under his care at Pignerol, and whose name remains a mystery. "This prisoner was always kept masked, and was at first lodged in the Basiniere tower....I conducted him afterwards to the Bertandiere tower, and put him in a room, which, by order of M. de Saint-Mars, I had furnished before his arrival." Later, Dujunca's diary contains an entry regarding the death of the prisoner, who was registered at the Bastille under the name of "M. de Marchiel":—"On Monday, 19th Nov. 1703, the unknown prisoner, who had continually worn a black velvet mask, and whom M. de Saint-Mars had brought with him from the island of Sainte Marguerite, died today at about ten o'clock in the evening, having been yesterday taken slightly ill. He had been a long time in M. de Saint-Mars's hands, and his illness was exceedingly trifling." He was buried in the parish of St. Paul.

Further information is contained in a letter written by M. de Formanoir, grand-nephew of Saint-Mars:—"In 1698 M. de Saint-Mars exchanged the governorship of the islands for that of the Bastille. When he set off to enter on his new office he stayed with his prisoner for a short time at Palteau, his estate. The Prisoner arrived in a litter which preceded that of M. de Saint-Mars; they were accompanied by several men on horseback. The peasants went out to meet their seigneur. M. de Saint-Mars took his meals with his prisoner, who sat with his back towards the windows of the room, which looked into the courtyard. The peasants of whom I made enquiry could not see if he had his mask on when eating; but they observed that M. de Saint-Mars, who sat opposite to him at table, had a pair of pistols beside his plate. They were attended by a single valet only, Antoine Ru, who took away the dishes set before him into an antechamber, having first carefully shut the door of the dining-room. When the prisoner crossed the courtyard a black mask was always on his face."

Voltaire, in "Le Siecle de Louis XIV," published in 1751, corroborates these statements, and adds further particulars. The prisoner was young, of a stature above the ordinary, and of a noble figure. On the journey from Pignerol to Sainte-Marguerite he wore a mask of iron, the beaver of which had steel springs, so that the wearer might eat without removing it. The order was to kill him if he should uncover his face. Voltaire dwells on the respect always observed towards the captive. "The Marquis de Louvois went to see him in the island before he was taken thence, and spoke to him standing."

Taste For Fine Linen

He was lodged in the Bastille with all the comforts which the castle afforded, was provided with delicate food, and was refused nothing for which he asked. The governor rarely seated himself in his presence. The prisoner played the guitar, and "his greatest pleasure was his taste for linen of extraordinary fineness and for laces."

An old physician of the Bastille who had attended him in times of illness, declared that, though he had examined his tongue and the rest of his body, he had never seen his face; he was admirably well made, his skin rather dark, the tone of his voice interesting. "He never complained of his condition nor gave any indication of whom he might be."

The following incident occurred while he was at Sainte-Marguerite: Having written with a knife on a silver plate, he threw it from the window towards a boat which was by the shore at the foot of the tower in which he was lodged. The fisherman to whom the boat belonged picked up the plate and took it to the governor who asked him in astonishment: "Have you read what is written on this plate, and has anyone seen it since it was in your hands?" "I cannot read," replied the fisherman, "I have just found it; no one has seen it." This man was kept in custody until the governor had assured himself that he had never been able to read, and that the plate had been seen by no one else. "Go," said he to the fisherman, "you are very lucky not to be able to read." Voltaire concludes: "There yet remain many of my contemporaries who bear solemn witness to the truth of what I advance, and I know of no fact which is either more extraordinary or better proved."

This story gave rise to fantastic speculations. According to one theory the Mask was none other than a natural son, born in 1626, of the beautiful Anne of Austria, wife of Louis XIII, and of that magnificent Englishman, George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, who was ambassador to Paris in 1625. This is certainly false. So is the assertion in the 1790 edition of the "Memoirs of Cardinal Richelieu" that the captive was a legitimate twin brother of Louis XIV, "put out of the way by the great Cardinal to avoid the ills of a disputed succession," a story adopted by the elder Alexandre Dumas, and which, through the popularity of his romance "Le Vicomte de Bragelonne" (a sequel to "The Three Musketeers") became the generally accepted solution of the mystery.

More fantastic still are the theories that the prisoner was the English Duke of Monmouth who was beheaded after the battle of Sedgemoor, in 1685; that he was the Armenian Patriarch, Avedick, whose imprisonment dated only from 1706; that he was the Comte de Vermandois, a natural son of Louis XIV; or the famous Duc de Beaufort; or a son of Oliver Cromwell. Yet all these theories have been seriously advanced! Voltaire's suggestion that he was the fallen minister Fouquet is equally impossible, and Andrew Lang's suggestion that he was of humble origin, but possessed of dangerous information, may be dismissed in view of the deference always paid to the captive.

Mystery Has Been Solved

One theory remains; and a publication of recent date supports it in such a way as to leave little doubt that the mystery has at last been solved.

In 1770 it was first asserted that the Man in the Iron Mask was in fact a diplomatic agent of the Duke of Mantua, an Italian potentate of great wealth and influence. This theory was supported by several distinguished scholars. The evidence was, however, incomplete.

About 1935, a slender volume was published by Sequana, Ltd., London, entitled "Intercepted Correspondence," a book which, although of great historical importance, attracted little attention. It is a translation by Leonora, Countess of Tankerville of an extremely rare French book, "Correspondence Interceptee," printed in Paris in 1788.

The volume contains a series of letters exchanged, from 1782-8, between the Chevalier de B... and the Marquis de L... The Chevalier is travelling abroad—in Italy, Switzerland, Austria and he communicates his adventures to the Marquis in Paris, who in turn keeps his friend informed of what is passing in the Capital. Lady Tankerville succeeded in discovering the identity of the correspondents. The "Chevalier de B." is a very distinguished person, the Chevalier de Boufflers, poet, novelist, soldier, explorer, politician, which explains his easy entree into foreign courts. It is a curious

18th CENTURY PROPHECY

The time will come, when thou shalt lift thine eyes
To watch a long-drawn battle in the skies,
While aged peasants, too amazed for words,
Stare at the flying fleets of wond'rous birds.
England, so long the mistress of the sea,
Where winds and waves confess her sovereignty,
Her ancient triumphs yet on high shall bear,
And reign, the sovereign of the conquered air.

(Translated from Gray's 'Luna Habitabilis', Cambridge 1737)

Make it come true! Over two hundred years ago this remarkable vision of the war in the air was written down in Latin verse by the great English poet who composed the famous 'Elegy'. To make Great Britain 'Sovereign of the conquered air' is now our task. There is no time to 'stare at the flying fleets,' we must exert all our energies to increase them. Everyone must help. You can help with money.

BRITISH EMPIRE—Immense influence for good.

Cured By Machinery!

And a man who breathed artificially for two years!

Hundreds of apparently drowned people have been brought back to life by the first-aid methods taught to all ambulance pupils. Administering this kind of aid is, however, decidedly hard work, as anyone knows who has tried it for even ten minutes on end. Now a machine has been devised which does the work.

The patient is put to bed inside an airtight metal tank, his head projecting at one end through a closely fitting rubber collar. An electrically controlled pump attached to the tank works rhythmically, expanding and contracting the chest as in ordinary breathing.

A tank of very much the same kind is employed to save the lives of newly born babies suffering from asphyxia. In one case an infant did not begin to breathe naturally until it had been in the tank for a whole hour.

A man has actually been kept alive for more than two years by an artificial breathing machine. He suffered from a curious weakening of the chest muscles, so that breathing became more and more difficult until it began to cease altogether. The great chemist, Sir William Bragg, suggested a mechanical device, and a small hydraulic machine was devised which pumped air into a rubber bag fixed on the man's chest.

In 1933 Dr. Frank Eve, consulting physician to the Hull Royal Infirmary, rocked back to life a three-year-old child whose heart had almost ceased beating. He and others rocked her continually for two days and two nights, until her heart-beats became normal. Now Dr. Eve has produced a mechanical rocking machine.

The latest invention of the kind is a "fever machine" invented by a French doctor. The patient is wrapped in blankets on either side and a powerful high-frequency current is passed through his body. The result is to cause tremendous perspiration, but without any of the discomfort of ordinary methods.

fact that the "Correspondence Interceptee" was unknown to any of his biographers! The "Marquis de L." is the Chevalier's first-cousin, the Marquis de Levis-Mirepoix.

The Chevalier, whose account of his researches into the mystery of the Mask was sent to his cousin from Pisa, March 15, 1783, affirms that the Duc de Choiseul told him repeatedly that Louis XV had himself informed him that 'he (the King) was in possession of the truth concerning the story of the Man in the Iron Mask.' The Duke had "pressed the subject as far as he dared, even begging his Majesty to reveal it to him; but the King would never say anything more, except that of all the conjectures hitherto made thereon not one was true." Shortly afterwards, Mme. de Pompadour, having pressed the King on the subject, was told that the Man was the Minister of an Italian Prince.

Greatly Dreaded Person

Pursuing investigations from this point, the Chevalier discovered that in 1685, the Duke of Mantua sent his Prime Minister, a man of great subtlety, to the various Italian Potentates, inviting them to form a league against France. After persuading all the other powers to his views, he went last to the Duke of Savoy. The projected league must have constituted a very serious threat to France, and the Mantuan minister have been a person greatly dreaded by that country for his skill in negotiations; for the Cabinet of Versailles, being informed of his activities, sent instructions to the French Ambassador at Turin, the Marquis d'Arcy, who entered into friendly relations with him, sending him numerous invitations, "among others one to a hunting party which took them towards Pignerol, a town then belonging to France." Once on French territory, the minister of Mantua was ambushed and kidnapped. He was taken from Pignerol to the Isle of Sainte-Marguerite where he remained in the custody of M. de Saint-Mars, until that officer removed him to the Bastille. Vehement complaints made by the Duke of Mantua on account of his envoy's disappearance were met by "a positive denial, so as not to set against the Cabinet of Versailles all the sovereigns whose prerogatives and dignity were, so to speak, assailed by so flagrant a violation of the rights of man." The Chevalier also learned from the Marquis de Castellane, then Governor of Sainte-Marguerite, that the gaolers there had been led to believe that the Masked Man had died at Sainte-Marguerite at the time when Saint-Mars had actually taken him to the Bastille.

Discrepancy In Names

There is only one discrepancy: the earlier incomplete account of the Mantuan envoy gave his name as Ercole Mattioli; Boufflers "heard by letter from Mantua that the name of the Secretary of State of the Duke of Mantua in 1685 was Count Girolamo Magni"; but whatever his name, a comparison of the narratives leaves little doubt of the truth of the Chevalier's assertion that "there never has been, and never could be, an historical event established with more evidence than this:—that the 'Iron Mask' was the Minister of the Duke of Mantua, kidnapped at the Court of Turin in the manner that I have just described."

The sanctity of an ambassador's person explains the extraordinary precautions employed to disguise the prisoner's identity, and the respect with which he was treated; also the reason for his not being killed and thus finally disposed of; for the enormity of the French Government's crime in laying hands on a foreign plenipotentiary was already sufficient, even for the conscience of Louis XIV. We would appear to have reached an elucidation of one of History's darkest secrets.

With an Idea and Determination... HE REVOLUTIONISED MEDICINE!

Prof. BROWN-SEQUARD, making his great discovery.

In 1889 Professor Charles Edouard Brown-Sequard, the famous scientist, made his epoch-making discovery, when he administered to himself glandular extract in his laboratory in Paris. To the amazement of himself and other physicians, the experiment proved a great success and a new chapter was opened in the modern book of therapeutics.

His life was a great one....most of it spent in a littered laboratory conducting ceaseless experiments. Never did a man work so hard—and succeed so brilliantly!

Professor Brown-Sequard's discovery is mentioned in authoritative medical books on the subject.

The harnessing of physical and chemical forces, which has produced our modern rapidity of travel and communication; steam, electric power, telegraphy, and the conquest of the air, affect our lives profoundly. And yet it may well be that biological knowledge and its many applications to the control and cure of disease and, above all, its elimination and prevention, have done far more to lighten the burden under which mankind struggles and to raise the level of civilization.

The great progress of medical science and the rapid strides it has made in the last hundred years have saved countless lives, prolonged and alleviated many others, and given us all a better chance of expanding what personal talents we have and of making the best of our time.

Humanity is beginning to see how to live.

All this is due to those men—Road Makers of Science—who have elucidated for us the immutable laws which underlie our functions. By no means the least of these was the immortal discoverer of Gland Therapy—Prof. Brown-Sequard, the famous French Scientist, for it is not difficult to see how he provided a sure basis on which modern science could build with confidence and success.

Although many lives have passed in the contemplation of Nature, attempting with infinite patience to solve the problems which she presents in such profusion, few philosophers have succeeded in making such a fundamental and far-reaching discovery as that of the function of the human glands.

It is not too much to say that enunciation of this principle revolutionised medicine and set it firmly upon a rational footing. So much was made clear and so many vistas were opened that it would seem that this conception was a lever powerful enough to set in motion those trains of scientific experiment and research which have brought us to our present state of knowledge and, still gathering speed and power, lead us confidently to hope for yet wider and deeper understanding of natural laws, in particular those which govern the great mystery of Life itself.

Gland Therapy is no myth. Some of the highest medical authorities in Europe and America believe in the curative efficacy of gland treatment for sexual weakness and other ailments.

* Life in Lapland—by one who has just returned from there.

Jonas the Wolf-Hunter

By Frank Illingworth

It had been a long journey—thirty-six hours by boat, nearly a day and a half by express train up the spine of Sweden, seven hours by bus. And now I stood in Karasundo, roughly two hundred miles north of the Circle in Arctic Lapland, awaiting the arrival of Jonas the wolf-hunter with his two reindeer sleighs. It was cold, and despite the early hour almost dark.

Jonas was a typical Karasundo Lapp... a thick-set little man of about five feet four inches with the high cheek bones, broad forehead, and slanting eyes of the Mongol. A wide belt, from which hung a wooden cup and spoon and a knife, gathered in his coat at the waist; his trousers tapered to the ankles and disappeared within grass-lined boots; and as he greeted me with a bow, the crimson pompon atop his cap flopped over the other ear. He was to be my host, and I took an instant liking to him. I was welcome, but to be a social success I must know a little of Lappish etiquette.

I had learnt in southern Lapland that the Lapp's tent is his castle. By all means the traveller may enter uninvited, for to lack shelter in the Arctic winter is to risk frostbite and death itself; but he must not step across the two logs placed at an angle to each other just inside the entrance, for they mark the extent of the Lapp's "hall."

After a very long drive the pulkas (sledges) drew up amid a shower of snow by Jonas's conically shaped tent. Jonas's wife was busy. As I entered, she pushed aside a pile of boot-grass drying by the fire; stretched towards the crib hanging from the side of the tent her head. Within lay the youngest Jonas child, bound up like a mummy. No wonder, I thought, so many Lapp infants suffocate in their cribs. Mrs. Jonas breast-fed the child without removing it from the the crib (by the simple expedient of holding the crib against herself!) before placing the baby, satisfied and warm, over her head. Then she turned to other wifely duties; there was the fire to be fed, coffee to be brewed, a huge pile of priceless furs to be tidied, dogs to be kicked out of the way.

Life in Lapland revolves round the care of the reindeer. The animals provide the Lapps with clothing, bedding, thread; with a method of transport across a wicked tundra practically bare of roads; with bone from which to make implements; with a means of purchasing a wife; and, above all, with food and milk... though it is in comparatively recent times that the Lapp learnt to milk his reindeer. Without his reindeer the Lapp would assuredly perish. So it is that as the herds move from the mountains in the summer to the frozen marshes and forests in the winter, the Lapp must root up his tent and follow them. Day in day out the Lapp tends his reindeer; his wife cures the reindeer meat and pelts; his dogs protect them from the ravages of the wolf. It is not surprising, therefore, that, as the guardian of his herds, the Lapp should love his dogs.

In all seriousness I was told that centuries ago, in the days before animals lost the power to converse freely with Man, a Lapp dog watched a Lapp trying to round up his herd. Being hungry, the animal offered his help.

"Would you but make me three promises," said the dog, "I and my friends will serve you faithfully for ever, protecting your herds from the cruel wolf,"

"What, dog," queried the Lapp, "are those three promises?"

"That you feed us once a day, that you never beat us when we are tired, that you hang us when too old to work."

PANCRE-VITE

THE ORAL INSULIN COMPOUND
FOR DIABETES

MANY IMITATIONS - BUT NO EQUAL

Diabetes, a dread disease, was formerly considered to be incurable. But it can now be cured with Pancre-Vite, the New Scientific Oral Insulin Remedy.

Pancre-Vite is a powerful remedy for Diabetes. It is a combination of all the active derivatives of the pancreas which control carbohydrate metabolism together with the specific proteins necessary for regeneration of the pancreatic tissues.

Chronic cases have been successfully treated by the oral administration of Pancre-Vite. It lowers sugar to normal. Aids digestion—increases weight and strength—positively makes the patient fit and healthy, as no other remedy can.

Pancre-Vite is the rational and most effective remedy for Diabetes, as it is prepared to the formula of Dr. Armand Grimard the eminent Diabetes Specialist.

Try Pancre-Vite NOW and rid yourself of Diabetes for ever!

Dr. Armand Grimard
Diabetes Specialist.

MANY IMITATIONS but NONE EQUAL to PANCRE-VITE!

Insulin is not curative, but only has transient effects, besides the necessity for daily injections are extremely inconvenient and tend to become tiresome.

Pancre-Vite is the best Oral Insulin Remedy, convenient to use and very effective. Its powerful curative action strengthens and develops the pancreas which control the several phases of diabetic pathology.

Pancre-Vite easily supersedes Insulin as a specific for diabetes, as it contains the active derivatives of the pancreas with other substances necessary for the complete regeneration of the pancreatic tissues. Furthermore, it is prepared in Capsule form—specially hardened—to insure the passage through the stomach for immediate absorption in the intestine, with maximum curative efficacy.

This effective action cannot be obtained with preparations made in tablet or liquid form.

THE CHOICE OF THE EXPERT

READ WHAT CURED PATIENTS SAY.

These are a few of the many hundreds of testimonials Received during the past five years; which are genuine and unsolicited.

WONDERFUL CHANGE

Mr. A. F. Webb. "Palm Court" Ground Floor. Churchgate Reclamation. Bombay. ".....I was tired of having Insulin injections daily. My doctor advised me to take by mouth Pancre-Vite. I followed his advice and am glad to say that the course of treatment effected a wonderful change in my condition. I have never felt so fit as I do now, since I got diabetes. There is no sign whatever of the disease....."

Completely Cured.

Mrs. S. T. Davis. 8, St. George's Gate Rd. Hastings. Calcutta. ".....I suffered for over five years with diabetes. It robbed me of energy and vitality. The digestive organs were also impaired, so my food seemed tasteless and like lead in my stomach. I passed a dreary existence. Pancre-Vite was the only remedy that helped me. I began taking it in January and when the warm weather came I was completely cured. I felt like a new woman, full of life and hope.

Words cannot tell how pleased I am to have my health back. I have a keen appetite and enjoy my meals; digestion is perfect. All symptoms of diabetes have left me. I have gained twenty-five pounds in weight and feel in harmony with all the world because I am now perfectly well....."

Cured Thoroughly.

Mr. V. Thompson. 151, Keighley St. Rangoon. Burma. ".....I cannot fully express the thanks I owe for your Pancre-Vite. I have suffered from diabetes for so long that I did not think there was any cure for it as I had tried everything that was recommended to me. Finally, I gave Pancre-Vite a trial and to my delight it cured me thoroughly. There is no trace of sugar, and my weight and strength is much increased....."

Extracts from Commendatory Letters received from the Medical Profession. Most Valuable Remedy.

Dr. A. F. De. Ravnac. (Paris). writes:—".....Pancre-Vite was first called to my attention by a patient of mine. The man in question, Monsieur Gabriel Coulondre, told me that no other medicine did him so much good as Pancre-Vite, and after studying his case, I advised him to keep on taking it. He was suffering from chronic diabetes and told me that the disease was of twelve years standing. Monsieur Coulondre was perfectly cured after five months treatment.

Dr. De. Ravnac

I became fully convinced of the great value of Pancre-Vite after observing its beneficial results in a number of other cases. From the experience of a practice stretching over twenty years, I have no hesitation in stating that Pancre-Vite is a most valuable remedy for diabetes. I prescribe it myself now and shall be glad to add my endorsement to that of my brother physicians who are commending it....."

Positive and Permanent Cure.

Dr. R. C. Duhamel. (Paris). writes:—".....I treated a diabetic patient last year with Pancre-Vite. The first six bottles did not give any perceptible improvement and my patient became disheartened and wanted to stop the treatment. I advised him to complete the course, pointing out that even the best medicines are slow to give improvement in certain cases, and he followed my advice with excellent results. After twelve bottles had been taken, the sugar began to diminish and weight had increased by 5 lbs. At the end of the course no sugar could be detected, even by analysis, and his weight is now 10 st. 8 lbs. perfectly normal for his height.

Dr. Duhamel

To make sure that there would be no recurrence of the disease, I advised my patient to take the treatment for a month longer than the prescribed course. At the time of writing this letter, it is six months since the treatment was stopped and there is no trace whatever of sugar or any other symptom.

Unhesitatingly, I endorse Pancre-Vite as a positive and permanent cure for Diabetes....."

Harmony of Body And Mind Quite Essential For Health

Health means harmony and unless there is harmony between the body and the mind health is impossible of attainment, writes Health editorially.

While it is possible to diagnose bodily diseases and cure them by timely medical aid, it is very hard to probe into the mind and treat its malady.

It may be said without fear of contradiction, that most bodily ailments are due to mental causes. Irregular habits in thinking, losing of temper, lack of self-control, fears and prejudices lead to mental ill-health and disorder.

For example, worry and depression of spirits may cause loss of appetite and dyspepsia. Rage may bring on heart failure or apoplexy.

Our ancients have laid great stress on the proper cultivation of the mind. Their methods were self-control, right thought and calmness. Self-control confers strength, right thought mastery and calmness, power.

"Britannia Rules . . ."

While the captured German fleet lay in Scapa Flow, an English quartermaster was posted on each vessel. To one of these, leaning over the taffrail came a German quartermaster.

"I sink nosing of your ships," quoth he. The Englishman did not reply. "And I sink nosing of your officers, your Jellicoes, your Beattys . . ." Overcome by his feelings, the German spat over the rail. Whereupon the Englishman turned and said calmly:

"Now! Look'ere. I dont care wot you thinks about our ships, our sailors, and our officers But don't you go spittin' into our sea!"

Twelve Thousand Miles of Blood Vessels!

Your body contains, according to latest scientific computation, twelve thousand miles of blood vessels. Think of that, 12,000 miles! Sufficient to stretch half-way round the world. This wonderful pipeline of the blood consists of arteries, capillaries and veins communicating with that marvellous pumping station, the heart. By means of this vital pipe-line, the blood is carried to every one of the millions upon millions of the cells of the body, to nourish; to cleanse; and to renew. In all diseased conditions, no matter what the ailment may be, the blood stream is at fault, and no treatment can give lasting results if this all-important fact is overlooked. Keep the blood free-running, like a deep, fast-flowing river, enrich it with the necessary elements for cell building, and remove all toxic and acid waste materials, and health MUST result. This is precisely what Galaxin the Great Blood Cleanser is designed to do; it is actually what Galaxin does, surely and effectively. Galaxin Cures through the blood, unhampered, irresistibly!

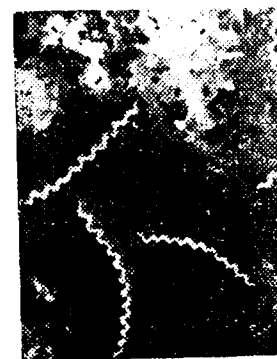

SYPHILIS—PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 1.

Its origin, symptoms, tests, consequences and cure.

1940	Millions of known cases of Syphilis all over the world

The pretty picture below is a microscopic portrait of a little creature whose name is Spirochaeta Pallida . . . or Spirochete, or Syphilis . . .

The Spirochete is a destructive medium with power beyond the wildest dreams of the most visionary munitions magnate. It has a kick like an express train; if it connects with your grandfather, your little daughter's teeth may drop out from the vibrations; it can cause anything from bright's disease to insanity in its victim; and today there are millions of cases all over the world.

Just in case the above seems vague, let me point out the relation of syphilis to other disease on a comparative basis as to prevalence—there is annually twice as much Syphilis as Scarlet Fever; 13 times as much as Typhoid Fever; and 1½ times as much as Tuberculosis . . . There is no disease on earth, except Leprosy, so transmittable, so dreadful, so loathsome as Syphilis. This terrible disease, unless scientifically treated, rapidly effects its dire ravages, permeating the very brain, nerves and muscles, even the marrow of the bones, and exhausting the vitality of the most robust constitution.

Although, many barriers have broken down, Syphilis is still an unmentionable in most homes. This, in spite of the

In the Wassermann test the blood is placed in a test tube instead of being prepared on a slide. After it is in the test tube an antigen is added to the blood. The test tube is then placed into a refrigerator where it is left overnight.

In the morning another reagent is added.

And the test tube is then immersed in a warm water bath.

It is only after these steps that the colour change (dark & clear is negative...light & cloudy shows infection) may be observed.

fact that on an average every family of seven contains at least one infected person. And what's more shocking is the fact that in a survey of a representative group of men and women it was discovered that four out of five of them could be infected and, so far as a knowledge of the symptoms goes, they wouldn't know it! There in a nutshell you have the purpose of this article.

Syphilis has a past; it has a present; and it has a future which is being built up at the rate of hundreds of thousands of cases yearly. All this when there is a cure! 86 % of primary cases can be cured, and in secondary cases the rate of cures with the chemical oral treatment,—Neo Sadalan, is 81 %. This is the best treatment for all cases of Syphilis and absolutely safe to use. It is guaranteed to effect a thorough and permanent cure.

The safety of society demands that every patient suffering with syphilis should be required to continue the treatment until the disease is arrested or cured. Without energetic treatment with Neo Sadalan, the patient with Syphilis may expect to become progressively worse until he is utterly incapacitated and fatally affected. He should not think of stopping the treatment until repeated blood tests indicate that the disease is probably cured or at least definitely arrested. Even after such a supposed cure, he should take blood tests at intervals and should be on the alert for the first signs of recurrence. He should not consider marriage unless he is advised by competent medical authorities that it is probably safe. In the event of pregnancy supposedly cured women should take another course of treatment in order that she may with certainty protect the child.

Symptoms And Stages.

From ten to forty-six but generally twenty four days from the entry of the germs into the body, there appears on the affected part a small red pimple. It goes on increasing slowly and within a week becomes watery vesicle with inflamed base. The vesicle bursts and leaves a sore with a hard margin elevated edges, and depressed centre. The sore is painless and there is a very small amount of watery discharge from it. This sore is called a hard chancre and it indicates the locality where the virus was first introduced. Generally the sores are situated on the genitals but they have been observed on every part of the body. In the males, if the infection takes place at the genital region, the sores appear on the glans penis or under the foreskin or just on the opening of the urinary passage. A week after the appearance of the sore on the penis the lymphatic glands swell up. They are hard with no pus or pain. This is the primary stage of syphilis.

SECONDARY SYPHILIS:—On average, secondary symptoms appear in about six weeks, but they may appear months later. The patient feels restless, dispirited, and weak in body. More often than not, he suffers from rheumatic pains, particularly in the skin bones and the region of ankles. Scaly eruptions of a light red colour appear on the body and there is acute sore throat with ulcers on the tongue or mouth. The mucous membrane of the nasal passages also gets affected and there is foul discharge from the nose. Eye troubles, too, are not uncommon. The above symptoms are all due to the dissemination of the organism in the blood.

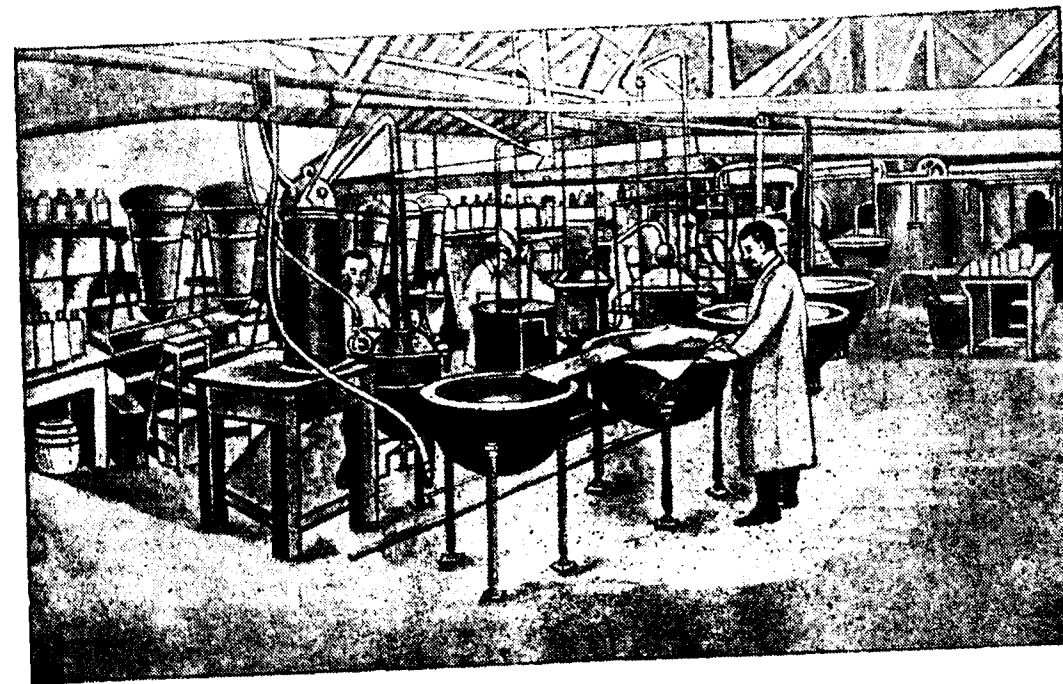

TERTIARY SYPHILIS is a disease of the bones and general diffusion of the poison through the system. It manifests itself in the inflammation of different glands of the body with severe pains in the bones.

The reason for this article is to show that there is hope; that there is a cure; that Syphilis is no longer an unknown assailant. It is a marauder whose habits and weaknesses are known to the extent that where he is found, he can be stamped out...annihilated...by Neo Sadalan.

THE GREAT SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF THE BERGERET LABORATORIES.

Progress in clinical medicine is gist; but, whoever or whatever he is, he dependent on progress in the ancillary must see the necessity of applying sciences, physiology, pharmacology, etc., scientifically-established facts to human new discoveries in pure science are the needs.

Chemists at work at the Bergeret Laboratories.

stuff on which clinical progress feeds. But between the discovery in pure science and its application to medicine, there must be an investigator. He may be a physician, a chemist, a bacteriolo-

When a clinical application has been found for a scientific discovery, the work has just begun. A method must be worked out by which a chemical process or a biological technique employed in the experimental laboratory can be applied in production operations. And a practical method of clinical administration must be worked out, for an effective remedy cannot be reserved for a few selected patients—it must be made available to thousands. Moreover, the first crude product, perhaps eagerly sought because of the imperative need for it, must be improved and refined so that its efficacy may be increased and its field of usefulness broadened.

The Discovery of Endophon.

The year 1931 saw the discovery of ENDOPHON. It was made possible only by preceding research. Dr. Gustave Leclerc, a chemist on the consulting staff was the first to discover the activity of certain glands. Dr. Louis Perrancourt, also on the consulting staff, was likewise working on the problem. He completed his work shortly after Leclerc's discovery, and assigned to the preparation its correct formula.

The discovery of ENDOPHON marked a new era in Glandular Therapy. Recently, a new Gland Extract has been discovered and embodied in ENDOPHON, greatly increasing its curative efficacy.

Reported in Eighteen Medical Papers.

A striking example of the achievements of the Bergeret Laboratories is illustrated in the work which led to the discovery of ENDOPHON. The course of this work was reported in eighteen medical papers.

Policy of the Bergeret Laboratories.

It has always been the policy of the Bergeret Laboratories never to offer a product to the world until it has been first subjected to the most exhaustive tests. Therefore; you may be sure that not only has a Bergeret Product been standardised, and made to conform to the highest degree of purity, and that the utmost demands of science have been utilized in its manufacture, but also that its therapeutic value has been demonstrated beyond any question of doubt.

The Great Criterion.

ENDOPHON is made in Capsule form—the great criterion in curative power, as the freshness and potency of the vital gland substances is fully preserved. There is no deterioration. Now manufactured by Howard Lloyd & Co; Ltd., Leicester, England in kinds, No. 1 for Partial Impotence. (Premature Ejaculation) No. 2 for Partial Impotence (Feeble Erection) & Complete Impotence & Sterility, and No. 3 & 4 for Female Impotence, ie., No. 3 for Premature Orgasm and No. 4 for Frigidity, Complete loss of sexual feeling, barrenness, etc.

SATISFACTION

The corner-stone of our business is the determination to satisfy our customers with the best products manufactured.

We wish to make you a regular customer and to deserve your recommendation, therefore we stock only remedies of proved curative efficacy—the best in the world and sold under our bona-fide guarantee.

Diabetes Mellitus and the Best Treatment.

Liver, defective Kidneys, pathological changes in the nervous system and worry.

The disease is as old as the Sphinx. Ancient Egyptian treatises on medicine speak of a disease called Polyuria, which is none other than diabetes.

The Cause of Diabetes.

The cause of diabetes is due to a disturbance in the chemical process of digestion, with the result that the sugar passes with urine, instead of undergoing the normal transformation into other substances before it leaves the organism. Defective Pancreas gland is the chief cause of diabetes. Other causative factors are defective Symptoms.

The Symptoms are Boils, Eczema and other skin affections. Excessive thirst, loss of weight and nervous prostration. Diabetes often leads to Impotence.

The Toll of Diabetes.

A rough estimate indicates that about 40,00,000 people in India, Burma and Ceylon suffer from this dreadful disease.

Types of Diabetes.

There are two types of diabetes, viz., (1) Diabetes Mellitus, where presence of sugar in the urine is indicated. This is the most common type. (2) Diabetes Insipidus—a condition where no sugar is present in the urine. This type is very rare. (Urine is passed in large quantities in both the conditions).

Diabetes Mellitus is one of the most dangerous, stubborn and treacherous of all diseases, if neglected. Any delay in treatment not only aggravates it, but leads to serious complications.

The Treatment.

The treatment at first was only a diet prescription. A revolution in the treatment was made by Banting of Canada, by the isolation of INSULIN. Insulin was hailed as a miracle, consummating the work started by Lancereaux in 1877. A new era was thus opened and was followed by intense research in the clinical field, the results of which have been published in many newspapers.

But Insulin, unfortunately, is not in any sense a "cure" of diabetes mellitus. Spectacular as is its news, the diabetic who started to use it in 1922, is still using it and in virtually the same dosage. The death rate for diabetes has not altered much in 20 years. In short, the causative factors of the disease are controlled, not eradicated or changed.

The transient effects of Insulin and the necessity for its repeated injections have led some Continental workers to search for an oral Insulin compound, which would obviate these two great drawbacks of Insulin therapy in Diabetes.

The Solution of the Problem.

Early in 1937, Grimard of Paris announced his oral Insulin preparation, which he named Pancre-Vite, a combination of Pancreas gland extract (Insulin in solid form) with enzymes, Steapsin, Myrtillin, Amylopsin, Suprarenal Substance, Hepatic Juice and Hormones.

The administration of Pancreatic gland extracts with other substances by the mouth has scores of clinical and laboratory reports in its favour. One of these reports are given below:

"In a long series of blood-sugar tests on patients, Pancreas extract was found to cause a profound blood-sugar fall in 82% of the cases observed within two hours after administration by mouth. Controls of about an equal number of patients under the same clinical conditions, as far as this was possible, showed a fall in less than 40%."—W. N. Berkeley, "Principles and Practice of Endocrine Medicine," Page 261.

Grimard's oral insulin preparation is a true, well-balanced remedy for diabetes, so definitely capable of restoring the lost functions to the defective pancreas.

Pancre-Vite is prepared in the form of capsules and when acting, they produce a progressive decrease in the urinary sugar, and a gradual disappearance of the morbid phenomena found in a person suffering from diabetes. This preparation is quite harmless to take.

A Grave Warning.

Hundreds of thousands of people die every year from diabetes mellitus in India. Most of them could have been saved if only rational treatment had been taken. If you feel run down and if there is loss of appetite, sleeplessness, frequent urination and excessive thirst, then it is nature's warning and you should have your urine examined at once. If it is proved that you are suffering from diabetes, do not neglect yourself, but take treatment promptly.

PATIENTS "FROZEN" FOR FIVE DAYS

Suspension of Life Amazes Medical World

Experiments in "freezing" sick patients into a virtually suspended state of life—which may prove to be of the utmost importance in the world of medicine—have been made by two Philadelphia doctors, Dr. Temple S. Fay and Dr. Lawrence W. Smith.

They have been experimenting with cancer victims and they want to try their "freezing" process on heart disease, insanity, tuberculosis and many other diseases.

The process, as outlined by them at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association, is as follows:

The patients are stripped and covered with cracked ice. An electric fan is turned on. In three hours their internal temperatures are forced down below 90 degrees.

The patients literally go into a sleep similar to that drowsiness experienced normally by a freezing person, except that in this case the patients feel no pain.

Their room is kept cold so that when the ice is removed they remain cold. They stay like that for five days.

Then they are roused with hot coffee and warm applications. They awake smiling, with no memory of what has happened.

Cancer Cells Killed

In the meantime, it is claimed, the cold has killed at least the young cancer cells which form from 10 to 90 per cent. of growing cancer according to indications from these experiments.

But it is not this that has amazed the medical world.

It is the suspension of life—of which admittedly no one seems to know quite how to take advantage—that has awakened doctors to the possibilities of this freezing process.

For in their "frozen sleep," the patients' pulse beat disappears. Only the electrocardiograph shows that their hearts are still beating and that surprisingly the rhythm is perfect, although very light.

Their kidneys and apparently all their digestive organs cease to work. But this, ordinarily a sign of approaching death, seems of no danger because at the same time analysis of the blood shows it has ceased to fill up with waste products. There is nothing to eliminate.

Metabolism—the process whereby nutritive materials is built up into living matter—is reduced to 10 per cent. from 20.

Prolonging Life

No frozen patient has ever caught pneumonia or a cold; the germs in their bodies apparently slow down along with the entire organism.

Previously, when a patient's temperature dropped even close to 90 degrees death was considered inevitable. But in these new experiments one woman's temperature was brought down to 82 for a short period with no ill effects.

What the experiments portend, doctors cannot forecast.

Some consider that they may provide a new weapon for Science. By freezing patients in this manner, they think, it should be possible to give the heart a complete rest, as nothing else can, and so, perhaps prolong life. Germ diseases too, may be susceptible to this treatment.

Human "hibernation" is in its infancy but its possibilities are being viewed with grave attention by the medical profession.

Gonorrhea—The Best Treatment

By A DOCTOR.

Gonorrhea is on the increase. In fact, the latest world statistics suggest that one out of five persons in capitals, like London and New York are stricken with the disease.

The common fallacy that it is no worse than a bad cold is exploded. It is now recognised by clinical and pathological evidence as a dangerous disease with serious complications. Therefore, it should never be neglected.

Gonorrhea is an infective process due to the action of a specific micro-organism known as Gonococcus. It is characterized by a discharge of pus through the urethra. The primary lesion is an acute catarrhal inflammation of the anterior portion of the urethra. It quickly runs to suppuration, and if neglected, it attacks the bladder and weakens it, causing bladder trouble, then the prostate gland, and passing through the sub-acute and acute stages, penetrates the circulation and organic parenchymata, producing complications like stricture, epididymitis, gonorrhoeal rheumatism, vesiculitis, prostatic, orchitis (swollen testicles) pyelitis, etc; and sometimes causes Impotence.

The symptoms of the disease usually start within 5 to 10 days after infection.

The patient may get some slight itching of the meatus and a burning sensation while passing urine. The lips of the meatus are congested and swollen. Gradually a serious discharge appears which though thin and mucoid in the beginning, soon becomes thick and yellow. There is sometimes a dragging pain in the back and some slight constitutional disturbances such as fever.

Occasionally the swelling inside the urethra is so great, that there is an hindrance in the flow of urine and on exertion haemorrhage occurs. The first attack is always more troublesome than the subsequent ones, though it responds easier to treatment. When this disease reaches the chronic stage it needs prolonged treatment.

The best treatment is a mixture and an Injection. Abortive treatment will aggravate the urethra and bring about complications.

The Mixture taken internally controls such distressing symptoms as pain, burning on urination, strangury and frequency. It does not upset the stomach. The Injection heals the ulcerations of the urethral mucosa or inflammation of the glandular structures and membranes in or about the urethra.

Mr. (Nagpur) ".....Endophon is all that you claim it to be. I have taken the full course and am now O. K. You have my permission to print this in a confidential manner, as I would like those who are in the same predicament as I was to benefit by using a really fine remedy....."

Mr. (Assam) ".....I have finished the course of Endophon No 2 and with much gratitude I inform you that it has cured me completely....."

Mr. (Calcutta) ".....When I first started taking Endophon No 2, it did not do me any good. I had taken it for two weeks and was disheartened. I thought of the old adage: 'A fool is born every minute' but my friend who recommended Endophon to me said that Rome was not built in a day, and I decided to complete the course.

I am now happy to tell you that it has cured me thoroughly. I am a wise man, indeed, to have taken your genuine remedy, Endophon....."

Endophon is not similar to Dr. M. Stopes different, and now recognised by

- (1). Gazette Medical of France.
- (2). Institute of Scientific Research and Development. (Berlin).
- (3). Journal of Medicine. Paris.

as the most efficacious remedy for the cure of Impotence, of functional origin. Moreover, it is now manufactured in CAPSULE FORM—the best method to preserve full curative efficacy.

CAUTION.

Because of the success of Endophon, many imitations are now been advertised, under various trade names.

Avoid them all. Endo-phon has stood the test of time, and is guaranteed to cure permanently.

Endophon is warranted
free from all substances against the Hindu or Muslim religion.

Now manufactured by Howard Lloyd & Co; Ltd. Leicester, England, by special methods, and correctly balanced, Endophon is of inestimable value in Sexual Weakness. Only 100 % fresh Gland Extracts are used, which directly after manufacture, are sealed in tasteless gelatine capsules.

These capsules are the only effective means for preserving the efficacy of the Gland Extracts. There is no deterioration.

* There is enough petrol in a small part of the Antarctic, according to Admiral Byrd, to supply the United States for a century.

Riches under the Polar Ice

By Luc A.-Gravier

—o—

We know practically all there is to know about the north Pole. The South Pole, on the other hand, remains a land of mystery, whose soil hides fantastic riches.

It is only about forty years since explorers began to investigate this desert country. Even now its shape is not completely known, but its area is estimated at roughly six million square miles.

The first man to spend any considerable part of the winter in the Antarctic was the Belgian explorer, Baron A. de Gerlache, in 1198. Since 1900 many expeditions have explored the region and annexed parts of it for the benefit of one country or another. England, Germany, France, Norway, Sweden, and Australia all sent expeditions before the Great War. In 1922 Shackleton left on the expedition from which he never returned.

Last on the scene were the Americans. In 1926 Admiral Byrd undertook the first aeroplane flight over the Antarctic. He renewed his attempt in 1928 with the explorer Wilkins, and between 1933 and 1935 established his quarters for a whole winter—that is, for nearly five months—at the north-eastern end of Roosevelt Island. He came back convinced that the Antarctic was and of the richest territories in the world.

He knew that Shackleton had found coal there, and that others had found iron copper. After his 1935 expedition he himself announced confidently that there was petrol there as well. A periodical devoted to polar exploration, the Polar Record, announced simultaneously that petrol was known to exist in large quantities in Spitzbergen and Arctic Russia, and that there were geological reasons for supposing that similar deposits would be found in the Antarctic.

A commission was appointed by Congress to consider plans for a large-scale expedition, estimated to cost more than a million pounds, compared with the mere £15,000 spent by Gerlache's expedition in 1898. Admiral Byrd told this commission that one group of mineral depositists, situated at the northern edge of the Antarctic, less than six hundred nautical miles from Cape Horn, would alone provide the United States with enough liquid and solid fuel to last a century.

It is expected that five countries will claim a share in the division of the Antarctic continent. The United States is claiming a million square miles at the north end of the ice-cap, south-west of Cape Horn, and about 5,000 miles from Tahiti. It also hopes to get the mountainous mass known as the American Highlands, on the other side of the ice-cap.

Germany, too, is in the field. Last summer she was preparing an expedition designed to get there at the same time as Admiral Byrd's. She claims territory already occupied by Norway and France, and disputes the possession of another area with Australia. And Great Britain may well contest the pretensions of the United States, since the mineral-bearing areas which Admiral Byrd plans to exploit are situated in an area over which she has a general claim. Even Spain and Portugal could, if they wished, find a pretext for intervention in a papal bull of the fifteenth century which divided the pagan world between them for the better propagation of the Christian doctrine!

Petrol provides the world with two-thirds of its transport, and remains the most convenient of all liquid fuels. The territorial ambitions of the totalitarian Powers disguise a single desire: the need for petrol. Already the United States controls more than 59 per cent. of the world's petrol production. As compared with its 123 million tons, the British Empire produces 3,000,000 tons annually, Germany 300,000 tons, and France 78,000 tons. It is easy to see what tremendous power will be in their hands if they succeeded in adding to their existing resources the vast deposits at the South Pole: that is, if these deposits really do exist.

The "mailomat," a sort of automatic letter-box, has appeared in New York.

To post a letter the user drops coins into a slot, twists a dial to select the postage value, and puts the letter in.

Deliver Us

Question: "Is life worth living?"

Answer: "It depends on the liver."

The doctor explains the matter to his patient in this way:

You see, the liver influences the liver by producing bile that acts favorably or not upon the liver and thus determines whether the liver who has that liver finds life worth living. In other words, the liver eats food to nourish his liver and enable the liver of the liver to supply the liver who has the liver with liver secretion that acts on the liver, and if this action of liver upon the liver is correct, the liver who owns this liver is a joyful liver. That is, if the liver of the liver is a standard liver and the liver with the liver is a low liver, though not necessarily liver'ied or running a livery, this low liver's liver will afford deliverance from liver troubles of the liver that a high liver's liver would not deliver. Or you can put it this way: If the liver who owns the liver is not a high liver and eats but little liver and treats his liver well, his liver will deliver bile and the liver's liver delivered of liver products decides if the liver with this liver wishes to liver die."

THE VIRILITY OF MANKIND

What Medical Science has accomplished.

By a Doctor.

How to maintain the virility of mankind? This knotty problem has engaged the attention of many famous scientists.

The chief causes of sexual weakness is the vicious habit of masturbation, sexual excesses, prolonged and frequent sexual excitement, which have been proved detrimental in the extreme. The sexual system is deprived of sufficient rest and recuperation and gradually loses its wonted energy. Other causes are excessive exercise, sedentary life, and excessive drinking.

Several attempts have been made to arrive at a formula which would bring about successful results. Commencing from the experiments of Brown Sequard in 1889 down to the recent findings of Dr. Serge Voronoff, the famous Russian Surgeon, it is a long history of laborious investigations by men of outstanding ability who dedicated their lives to the cause of medical progress and the alleviation of human misery.

The outcome of these extensive experiments and research established Gland treatment by the mouth, as best and most rational in the cure of Sexual weakness.

A very important factor in successful gland treatment is FRESHNESS of the vital Gland Substances. It is necessary that they are prepared in gelatine capsule form, to ensure freshness and maximum curative efficacy. Gland Substances in tablet or liquid form quickly deteriorate and become inert and worthless.

Writing: the Greatest Discovery

Many hold that the invention which has had most influence on the development of human society is the plough. Had not an unknown Chinese farmer contrived a wooden share to break up the soil on his land, where would civilisation be to-day?

So runs their argument. But what of the wheel? Without this invention, where would modern industry be, and communications? Yet the Mayas of Central America built up a flowering civilisation centuries before the Conquistadores came to destroy them, and they had not the use of the wheel.

A third opinion holds to the supreme importance of fire on the destiny of mankind. Whoever first tamed fire—fetched it, perhaps, from the red embers of a forest ignited by lightning and carried it to his cave—gave us our greatest boon. Surely the taming of fire was civilisation's most important milestone?

Abraham Lincoln thought not. In a newly found manuscript' he discusses the world's greatest discoveries—and gives his vote to the art of writing. His argument runs as follows: If we consider that the spoken word is merely a sound which disappears in a twinkling, and that no human brain can store up all the valuable information imparted to it through speech, then we must agree that the art of translating sounds into signs is the most important of all. Take writing away from humanity and we lose the Bible, history, science, and law. Through the written word past generations speak to us.

Writing, then, was mankind's greatest discovery, according to Lincoln. And next to it—printing. Gutenberg was the father of printing; but we shall never know who first translated speech into signs.

Cigarette History

Cigarettes have been in use in Europe for just over a hundred years. The custom is supposed to have been introduced by French soldiers returning from Algiers, where the natives smoked tobacco wrapped in maize leaves. Another theory holds that Spain was the first European country to popularise the cigarette, as a feminine counterpart of the already popular cigar and pipe. In 1830 Spanish women were adept cigarette smokers, and the art of rolling the slender cylinders was widespread. Ferdinand VII could roll a cigarette in either hand simultaneously.

The first known cigarette factory was established in France in 1843. In England the custom did not take hold till later. Dickens was a cigarette smoker.

He Saw the Mummy Move

By Ferdinand Reyna

The speaker is an elderly man with a long white moustache. He is dressed in dark uniform and on his chest is the number 84. He is keeper of the seven rooms of mummies at the British Museum where is to be found, among others, the sarcophagus of young Cleopatra, namesake of the fateful Queen, and whom many believe to be the Queen herself.

He can show you the papyrus on which are recorded the changes of fortune experienced by this young girl of royal birth. He can tell you of many other wonders, too, but it is about his job itself that you should hear him talk. He speaks calmly, in a soft, even voice.

"Perhaps you won't believe me, but my job is sometimes a terrible one. During the long winter days, when London is covered with a dismal cloak of fog, there is often not a living soul about, not a single visitor, not a voice. Around me are the mummies, who are beings of stone to day, but who once lived and loved, had their own joys and sorrows. Their silence is sometimes terrifying.

"Even the jewels that adorn them, with their dull gleam, and the strange animals that guard them—jackals, falcons, fishes, and bulls—everything seems to have a life of its own, born of the solitude. Behind the glass of the cases the scarabs glisten and still preserve their secrets of luck and ill-luck.

"One day—I was younger then—I was really scared. It was an evening towards the end of November. Seated on my stool, I was gazing at the mummy of Thu-Thu, wife of the scribe Ani, who is also here. After a time I found that I could not take my eyes off her. Suddenly—I honestly thought I was going mad—I saw a finger move, then a hand. . . .

"I gave out a fearful cry and collapsed unconscious. They found me later, lying on the ground, as pale as a sheet. I was ill for three months, but all the same I was intent on getting back to my work. I have carried on with it ever since, and I wouldn't give it up for anything in the world. My life is bound up with the mummies. I could retire on pension, but I don't want to. Perhaps my terror was a kind of test which I had to undergo before entering into their strange, uneasy world."

Medical examination of the mummies has revealed some curious things. For instance, we now know that the marriages between close relations that were traditional in the royal families of Thebes and Memphis were not sterile and did not cause any degeneration. We have also learned that the Pharaoh Menepthah, sworn enemy of the Jews, had an attack of smallpox; that Akhnaton had a weak heart; and that toothache was very common among the Egyptians.

Some strange stories have been told about mummified Pharaohs avenging themselves on those who shatter their repose. It is said that near the end of the last century four Englishmen one day broke their journey at Luxor to visit the ruins of the temple of Ammon Ra. During their short stay they were able to buy, from an independent searcher, a sarcophagus on which was painted a very beautiful woman's face, possessing a charm both disquieting and indefinable.

The four men then continued their journey. One of them was accidentally killed shortly after, while handling a revolver. Another died suddenly the following year. Six months later the third was seriously injured by a stray shot in the shoulder, and they had to amputate his hand. As for the fourth, he got into difficulties on his return to England and, finding himself ruined, shot himself.

This man owned the sarcophagus, and his sister, who inherited it, was soon in trouble herself. On the advice of a fortune-teller, she decided to get rid of the baneful object, but before doing so she had a picture taken of it. This was done by a well-known photographer—who died not long afterwards. Finally the sarcophagus caused the death of a British Museum official who was arranging for it to be moved, as well as a serious accident in which the man who was transporting it escaped only by a miracle.

Signor Gerolamo Segato, an Italian expert of the first half of the last century, closely studied the question of the preservation of mummies. He entered upon a deep study of Egyptology and the occult sciences, travelled in Asia and Africa, and, like Nostradamus, he penetrated to the heart of the pyramids. On his return he announced that he had made the great discovery, but a mysterious disease was soon to lead him to the grave.

Equally tragic was the fate of Dr. Efisio Marini. This man used to embalm bodies in the Egyptian manner. He would shut himself up in his apartment and refuse to see anyone. To the rare visitors whom he did admit, his laboratory, with all the strange instruments used in the various complicated processes seemed a place of madness. When Dr. Marini died his mind was completely unbalanced and he had not revealed the secret which he claimed to possess.

This same problem is being studied at the moment by the experts of the Egyptian Museum in Vatican City. One of them, Professor Tulli, summed up the whole question when he said to me: "Is there any discovery which has not claimed its victims? Consider the fact that, as far as evil spells—or, more simply, poisons—are concerned, the Egyptians, knew a very great deal. To touch a mummy is nearly always to take a mortal risk."

"I promise," said the Lapp, and instantly the dog ran off to gather together his friends.

That agreement has been adhered to strictly. The Lapp, on his part, is particularly kind to his dogs, and to this day in the hinterland unwanted puppies and old dogs are hanged; while the dogs are the faithful guardians of his herds against the wolf.

It is when the snow is powdery and the wolf flounders up to its lean, grey belly, that the Lapp ventures forth to slaughter with wolf-stick (or rifle, should he possess such a thing), for during such snow conditions a man on skis can easily overtake a wolf to break its back with a single smashing blow of the "stick."

As deeply as the Lapp hates the wolf so he loves his dog. He even takes it to church with him. Men sit on one side, women on the other; and the dogs at the back, and it is a common occurrence for a service to be interrupted while the men leave their paws to separate a heaving mass of snarling animals. A preacher told me how he had once returned to the pulpit with bleeding hands after such a dog fight in his church.

The same preacher it was who told me how he had married a young couple, baptized their child and buried the bridegroom's mother during one continuous service. During the summer two years past the young couple decided to marry but to postpone the actual wedding ceremony until the coming winter, when the journey to church could be made at the same time as the reindeer herds moved from the mountains to the marshes. In the meantime a child arrived, an influenza epidemic which struck the small settlement wiped out two complete families and killed the bridegroom's mother, many reindeer died, and, desperately poor, the young couple were forced to postpone the wedding until the following winter snows. The dead were placed on lake-islands or beneath cairns away from prowling animals until such time as the arrival of winter made it possible for their remains to be conveyed by pulka to church (a journey of several weeks) for decent burial. And with the ceremonies over, the newly-weds journeyed into the interior again to continue the struggle with Nature.

How the Lapps managed to find their way, watchless and compass-less, bewildered me until Jonas initiated me into the secret.

Where the north wind strikes stunted trees the bark is invariably darker and the longest limbs invariably point south: Arctic moss grows more thickly on the south side of boulders, and ants always shelter in the lee of hummocks which is on the side away from north winds. So it is that as the Lapp travels he is constantly reminded of two points in the compass, north and south, from which he can fix the quarters.

It was from Jonas that I learnt the etiquette to be observed in the borrowing of a boat. The traveller is welcome to use any boat to convey himself across river or lake when the twenty-four-hours-a-day summer sun has melted the ice. But should he row to the other side he must return the boat to the bank from which he took it; otherwise the owner, or some other traveller, may find himself stranded, and to be stranded in Lapland can so easily result in death. So it is that boats are always left in pairs, one on each bank of a lake or river, and the traveller must make three crossings (no small order if the lake is a mile or two wide) before finally stepping ashore on the farther bank!

While on the subject of water I should tell of the strange experience which befell me in this Arctic land. A Lapp remonstrated with me for drinking from the edge of a lake. Devils, he said, lived in the water, and should one get into my stomach it would eat away my intestines. He quoted case after case in which he had heard of folk dying in agony from this cause, pressed me the wooden cup dangling from his belt and, after searching the contents for a sign of a devil, I had my drink!

Never was I so sorry to leave a land as when I once more clambered aboard the bus and waved a final good-bye to Jonas-the-wolf-hunter of Karasuando-Lapland.

GLANDULAR THERAPY.

By Dr. A. F. De Saint-Croix.

Journal of Medicine, Feb. '37.

In the light of modern researches and extraordinary rapid progress in the direction of the use of ductless glands in the treatment of various diseases much is said and has been discussed.

This new principle in medicine has completely revolutionised the old time tonics.

Glandular therapy, the application of which dates back from 1889 when the pioneer of this branch of medicine, Brown Sequard, administered to himself testicular extract, is well known. To the amazement of himself and other physicians, the experiment proved a great success and a new chapter was opened up in the modern book of therapeutics.

Since that day, good many eminent scientists, notably Banting, Best, Murphy, Minot, and Serge Voronoff have experimented on various organisms including human beings, taking help of every available ductless gland found in the body.

Recently the new system has been perfected to such a degree, that surprising results have been recorded in books of medical statistics.

A good deal of information about the subject can be obtained from an authoritative publication put forward by Dr. E. Ketterar, a Parisian Professor.

It is also a truth that the most forward medical men whose opinions are valued by physicians of the whole world have personally carried out experiments, and have without reservation, put their stamp of approval on the system and advocated its tremendous possibilities.

It has been scientifically proved that the key to sexual weakness is Glandular Extracts obtained from the glands of bulls, and administered by the mouth in CAPSULE FORM.

Yet all the achievements of the system are reduced to nil if the glands selected are not of standard purity and if due care is not taken during the preparation of their compounds. The bulls selected must not be diseased and must be absolutely young so that all their ductless glands must be functioning with their proper physiological secretions. On strict and thorough pathological examinations, they should prove to be absolutely germ free and in a healthy condition.

The exact proportions selected from different glands is a matter of vital importance.

Another factor of great importance is the preservation and stability of these products. Absolute freshness is essential. The gelatine capsule is recognised as the best method of preserving freshness and therapeutic efficacy. The vital gland substances are completely sealed in the gelatine envelope, and all possibility of deterioration is eliminated.

New Uses of Blood from the Dead

The blood of the dead may soon be used to restore the living to health.

Experiments in Russia are stated to have disclosed these startling facts:—

Blood from corpses gives better results than that from live donors.

Red cell increase is higher after transfusion from a dead person than after transfusion from live donors.

Professor W. N. Shamor, outlining his remarkable experiments on animals and man in The Lancet declares that the transfusion of cadaver (corpse) blood has another definite advantage—notably the rarer and less conspicuous reactions on patients.

"PREJUDICE"

"In spite of the fact that there is a large body of supporting evidence for its value and that full sanction has been obtained for taking blood from cases of sudden death, medical men at the courts of justice were unwilling to allow the blood of bodies that are at their disposal to be drawn for clinical needs," writes the Professor.

He speaks of the strong prejudice in the majority of people at the bare thought of transfusing into a live person the blood from a corpse and the "holy awe" at the thought of "disturbing the repose of the dead."

From experiments on animals the Professor "confirmed our fundamental thesis that the blood in the dead body preserves its vitality for about ten hours after death."

CONSERVATIVE ENGLISH DOCTORS

A London hospital doctor declared

"The use of corpses" blood in the treatment of illness has been in vogue for some years in Russia.

"I saw it done at a big accident hospital in Moscow. Precautions are taken to ensure that the dead did not die from any disease.

It is claimed that very good results have been obtained.

"I have been trying to advocate this method in this country in order to relieve the strain on blood donors, but there seems to be very little enthusiasm for it among British medical men.

THE SCOURGE OF SYPHILIS AND GONORRHEA AND THE CURE.

From the Lancet. June 11, 1942.

Britain's figures of venereal disease have risen since the War. In 1940 the increase was 23 per cent over 1939. Proportionately this is better than the situation in World War 1, when the V. D. rate doubled, but it is no occasion for complacency.

Treatment was woefully inadequate between 1914 and 1918.

The short courses of treatment then in use were responsible for tragic developments a generation later. If left untreated, syphilis has a tendency to clear up. This is disastrously deceptive. The disease may lie dormant for years, then suddenly break out again.

Syphilis is not a new disease. It has been treated a thousand different ways since 1493, when Dr. Diaz de Isla climbed aboard Columbus's ships at Palos to treat sailors loathsomely sick of the malady they had brought back from the West Indies.

Such things as China root and sarsaparilla have had their day, to say nothing of a medley of things like powdered serpents and even toad's spittle. It was not until March 1905, that science began to get at grips with syphilis.

In that year a bushy-bearded German named Fritz Schaudinn was ordered by Berlin's Imperial Health Office to make laboratory tests of a germ which was suspected of causing not only small pox, but the great pox. He got positive results, named the germ "the pale horror" because it could scarcely be seen, even under a microscope.

Another discovery in 1907 brought August von Wassermann's fixation test, which to this day is the doctor's quickest, most practical test for the disease: Three years later Paul Ehrlich made the discovery which beat syphilis down from astronomical figures to something within reasonable understanding. This was "606"—salvarsan.

In 1936, Dr. Pierre De Sadalan discovered oral treatment, which he called after his name. Four years later, in January 1940, Neo Sadalan made its appearance, being the new and improved formula of Dr. Pierre De Sadalan, that clinches the fight even in long-standing cases.

The rate of cures in primary cases by Neo Sadalan is 86 per cent and in secondary cases 81 per cent, every cure is complete and permanent.

Neo Sadalan is the best treatment and is convenient and absolutely safe to use.

Quick disappearance of symptoms often inclines the sufferer to believe he is cured, and he stops treatment with tragic results.

In its primary stage syphilis is not painful; the secondary stage includes a rash, which may cover the entire body. Loss of hair in spots over the scalp is common. The third and fourth stages can be anything from heart trouble to general paralysis and insanity.

Syphilis is generally regarded as the aristocrat of diseases, but gonorrhoea is considered a social disgrace. More prevalent in its ravages, but far less horrible in effect it has been completely conquered by modern medicine.

The "MAGIC BULLET" in gonorrhoea's treatment is "505" Mixture and Injection. It is made to the formula of Dr. Edouard Pavy, the eminent specialist in venereal disease. This is the finest treatment and always effects a permanent cure.

A Remedy for Asthma

Asthma is a health trouble that launches sudden and serious attacks, often at times when the sufferer is unprepared with any means of defence. As every asthmatic knows, night attacks of asthma are the most feared. That is why any simple-to-take remedy that can be kept close at hand to give relief from the paroxysms that accompany asthma should be welcomed. Such a remedy is Matrone Specific, prepared in the form of little tablets, and Matrone Elixir in liquid form, taken in conjunction.

The Matrone treatment is the best in the world and has gained the endorsement of the medical profession, and there is ample evidence from actual users of the treatment that the claim to give quick relief and finally a permanent cure is justified. This treatment is prescribed for use in cases of asthma, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, catarrh and hay fever.

Brown bread is better for you than white. Do not start telling me you hate brown bread; you must eat it, and you will soon prefer it to the white variety. Porridge for breakfast is good for you. Tea is bad; take only one cup of a day, and that very weak. Tea on waking, tea at eleven, tea for dinner; tea for tea, and an extra cup because Mrs Brown popped in at half-past five, and tea for supper—all this is the best I know for promoting constipation. Anæmic girls keep themselves ill by tea. Cocoa made with milk is worth the money because it is real nourishment.

* Stout Cortes, it appears, was the father of the "penny bar."

Chocolate From Mexico

By A. E. Ballard

The most munificent gift one empire ever gave her bitterest rival was—chocolate. The British Empire literally owes every bean to the Spaniards who first discovered the tree in Mexico and later started plantations in their other colonies. From these came the trees which formed the nucleus of the British plantations. At the present time Latin America and the British Empire between them produce about 98 per cent of the world's supply.

Actually, Columbus was the first white man to see the cacao bean. He took some back with him to Spain. Cortes and the men who conquered Mexico with him in 1521 were the first Europeans ever to taste the new drink. One of them, Bernal Diaz del Castillo, recorded that "the emperor [Montezuma] took no other beverage than the chocolatl, a potation of chocolate flavoured with vanilla and other spices, and so prepared as to be reduced to a froth of the consistency of honey, which gradually dissolved in the mouth, and was taken cold."

The Mexicans themselves were very partial to it. At one banquet Montezuma's attendants brought in 50 jars of chocolate, which the Emperor and his Spanish guests drank out of golden goblets. Mean-while, the guards and attendants consumed 2,000 jars of what Linnaeus called, two centuries later, the food of the gods" (Theobroma cacao.)

Where or when the Aztecs, who arrived in Mexico City in 1324, acquired their taste for chocolate, is not known. Von Humboldt, in his account of his travels in South America, wrote: "We met no tribe on the Orinoco that prepared a beverage from the seeds of the cacao tree. The savages suck the pulp of the pod and throw away the seeds." His belief that the tree was indigenous to the forests of the Amazon and Orinoco seems to have been correct.

Cortes saw at once the commercial possibilities of the new drink, which was both stimulant and stand-by, and also a speedy remedy for scurvy.

The Mexicans, however, had never heard of sugar, which the Spaniards had already planted in the West Indies. When this was added to the chocolate it completely altered the nature of the drink. The Spaniards kept the secret of its preparation for over a hundred years.

Very soon cacao trees sprang up in other Spanish colonies. There were plantations in Trinidad as early as 1525, and from these came the first trees planted in Ceylon in 1834. In 1560 Spanish planters introduced cacao into the East Indies, and a little later they started plantations in Fernando Po. Trees were taken from this island to the Gold Coast in 1879 to found the British plantations which now yield 45 per cent of the total world export of cacao.

In Latin America the Spanish conquistadores found the cacao tree growing wild in Brazil, Ecuador, and Mexico. Plantations were started in Venezuela in the seventeenth century, and in Bahia in 1780. Today cacao is also grown in Colombia, Peru, and Central America.

From the first the unfamiliar Mexican words caused misunderstanding. The Aztecs called the tree cacauatl, and the drink chocolatl. From these two words come the English chocolate, cocoa, and the more unfamiliar cacao.

Cacao is the raw material which is produced when cacao beans are ground down into a semi-liquid mass. As this was too fatty to be pleasant a Dutchman, Van Houten, devised a process for pressing out about 65 per cent of this fat, which is known as cacao (or incorrectly, cocoa) butter. When this has been done, cocoa remains. To make chocolate, sugar and cacao butter is added.

From a distance an orchard of cacao trees does not look unlike an English apple orchard. The trees, planted 300 to an acre, grow 20-25 feet high. In Brazil there are over 100 million trees in area one fifth the size of Europe, producing in 1938 125,000 tons of beans.

Cacao pods are cut very carefully from the trees with a knife on the end of a pole, which is called a podadera, or cocoa hook. When the pods have been cracked, the beans and pulp are scraped out and left to ferment for three to five days. During this process the pulp turns to liquid and drains away. The beans are then dried in the sun for three or four days. In Venezuela clay is scattered over them, and they are dried and polished by the feet of the natives, who dance on them whilst they sing their traditional songs. In Ecuador the beans are dried on strips of matting made of split bamboo, called barbecues, while in Bahia most of the beans are dried by artificial heat. "Estufas," as these are called, fetch a high price because they are not subjected to the vagaries of the weather during the drying process.

Chocolate is made today in a bewildering variety of forms and flavours, but, apart from the extraction or addition of cacao butter, the process of manufacture is essentially the same as when Cortes watched it four centuries ago.
