*SHORT STORY. This is a true tale of France when it was still divided into Occupied and Unoccupied Zones. The names in the story have, of course, been disguised.

HOW THE PLAGUE CAME TO CAGNAC

By Paul L. Bowen

From Free World, New York.

The deceased must have been deeply beloved, for more than a hundred mourners escorted the coffin to the tiny burial ground of the village of Cagnac in Northern France. And Cagnac numbers but 735 souls, not counting the dead that lie beneath the sod. The priest, too, eloquently praised the departed, dwelling upon his outstanding contributions to the community. Nevertheless, as soon as the funeral service was over, the mourners dispersed quickly. They seemed to vanish from the scene in the autumn haze.

There was nothing untoward about the funeral. Nor did anyone comment on the fact that six more funerals followed in quick succession during the next three weeks. It was a dark and rainy autumn—the year was 1940, to be precise—and in the autumn theague seizes even the sturdy people of this harsh country.

"If you will pardon me, sir, who were the deceased, that they should merit such an outpouring of mourners?" asked the travelling salesman of the doctor who had driven over from the neighbouring village of Mandrague—for Cagnac itself supported no doctor. The salesman travelled out of Paris with a line of ladies' underwear, woven of ersatz fibre (made in Germany). According to his story, this salesman merely happened to come to Cagnac just in time to witness two more funerals on successive days. De-

NOTICE.

Owing to the unsettled condition of France, our Head Office continues to be at London, whence it was transferred after the German invasion of France.

By special arrangement, all French medicines for which we are Agents continue to be manufactured by reputable British firms (who have purchased the manufacturing rights for England and the British Empire for the duration of the war) until normal conditions are restored in France.

spite the cold weather—for it was now December—a large crowd had followed the hearse each time.

The doctor cleared his throat importantly and told the stranger the sad story. An aged farmer in his seventies had been so beloved by his young wife of seventeen that the girl had been unable to bear his death, taking her own life the following day. "Paul et Virginie," the old doctor nodded sagely, tears in his eyes. "Love is stronger than death!" To the salesman Paul and Virginie meant no more than the name of a rival underwear firm. He let it go at that.

But this was only the beginning. On Christmas Eve three funerals were held at once. Again at least a hundred weeping mourners escorted the three coffins. Many of them seemed to come from other villages in the neighbourhood. The mourners must have returned home that same night, for none remained in Cagnac. At the same time, word went around that more funerals would be held at sunrise on Christmas Day, for another travelling salesman—in tomato extract and powdered eggs (made in Germany)—had been asking too many pointed questions.

The plague seemed to gain ground. Twenty-seven times during January the cure's orotund voice rang out into deepening dusk, in eulogy of the departed's high standing in the community or the dead girl's surpassing virtue. Again and again the doctor from Mandrague came trotting over in his buggy and was seen deep in conversation with Cagnac's mayor—the biggest and richest man in the village—as well as with the cure and the sexton. Clearly, space in the little burial ground of Cagnac must have been getting crowded, but evidently a solution must have been found, for the funerals continued in a steady stream throughout February and early March. They were always held in the late afternoon, when the shadows began to deepen. Larger and larger grew the crowds that saw the good countrymen of Cagnac to their last resting-place. Yet the mourners now seemed to bear their grief with singular self-control. One seldom saw anybody weep, though they were all serious enough in mien.

These were hasty and rather ghastly funerals that took place there in the little graveyard of the village. Frequently they lasted till almost midnight, as in times of plague, or like the funerals of miners in some countries. Strangely enough, few of the mourners left the cemetery by the main gate after the sad ceremonies were over. They just seemed to fade away into the shadows. The priest would get home worn out and pale, a gruesome and diabolical grin on his plump face which, thank the Lord, no one could see. Strangers could find no explanation for these things.

But for the indiscretion of still another travelling salesman—salad oil from pulverized whalebone (made in Germany)—the dead might have continued on their wellbeaten course in Cagnac. On March 20, however, a small provincial paper printed a brief story about the mysterious plague that had afflicted the village. The Paris press (made in Germany) picked up the story, and one editorial characterized the epidemic as a scandal.

Many more virtuous women and law-abiding men had been put to rest in the Cagnac graveyard, escorted by crowds of mourners, when one day in April a venerable old professor from the Sorbonne arrived in Cagnac on a mission of inquiry, putting up for a single night in the only available guest-room over the little bistro—a room he shared with seven spiders and two hundred and twenty-three cockroaches.

The professor arrived on a Wednesday evening by the 7.10 train from Paris. Later that night he was seen successively in earnest conversation, first with the towering mayor, next with the cure and finally with the sexton. The next morning, when he hurried from the bistro to catch the 8.28 back to Paris, he was accompanied to the little railway station by the whole village, including old men, children, and even the village idiot, for some mysterious reason called Jacques the Soap Eater.

The little train arrived shrilling its whistle, and the famous professor smilingly waved his umbrella from the window.

Everyone cheered, Jacques the Soap Eater tossed his old felt hat in the air and the train disappeared around a bend...

Three days later, on Saturday—there had been four more funerals in Cagnac in the meantime—the old professor forwarded a document to the German Occupation Authorities. "A Report on the Plague Now Raging in the Village of Cagnac," ran the title. It was a long statement, but its chief findings were as follows:

The inquiry extended over a period of more than one week, during which more than two hundred (200) patients and other individuals were examined.

The results point unquestionably to an outbreak of a very rare epidemic disease of a highly contagious character which I would identify as a curious compound of Cemeteria eterna major and Fraudulozia pernicioza. Since medical science knows very little about this plague (which, however, seems to have become much more widespread since the war), I have been unable to do more than dispatch to Cagnac a large quantity of medicaments that seem indicated.

In brief, I prescribed that injection should be administered consisting of trimethylaminopyrazolonesulfate, combined with 4' diaminosulfoazobenzol and metanyturecophysostygmimobenzol ester. Of course, I also suggested the use of lozenges of trickogene, the well-known salt of 2' salicylate of stygmobenzodythylmalanytureon.

I am convinced that this simple treatment will succeed in the swift arrest of

GLANDULAR THERAPY.

By Dr. A. F. De Saint-Croix.

Journal of Medicine, Feb: '37.

In the light of modern researches and extraordinary rapid progress in the direction of the use of ductless glands in the treatment of various diseases much is said and has been discussed.

This new principle in medicine has completely revolutionised the old time tonics.

Glandular therapy, the application of which dates back from 1889 when the pioneer of this branch of medicine, Brown Sequard, administered to himself testicular extract, is well known. To the amazement of himself and other physicians, the experiment proved a great success and a new chapter was opened up in the modern book of therapeutics.

Since that day, good many eminent scientists, notably Banting, Best, Murphy, Minot, and Serge Voronoff have experimented on various organisms including human beings, taking help of every available ductless gland found in the body.

Recently the new system has been perfected to such a degree, that surprising results have been recorded in books of medical statistics.

A good deal of information about the subject can be obtained from an authoritative publication put forward by Dr. E. Retterar, a Parisian Professor.

It is also a truth that the most forward medical men whose opinions are valued by physicians of the whole world have personally carried out experiments, and have without reservation, put their stamp of approval on the system and advocated its tremendous possibilities.

It has been scientifically proved that the key to sexual weakness is Glandular Extracts obtained from the glands of bulls, and administered by the mouth in CAPSULE FORM.

Yet all the achievements of the system are reduced to nil if the glands selected are not of standard purity and if due care is not taken during the preparation of their compounds. The bulls selected must not be diseased and must be absolutely young so that all their ductless glands must be functioning with their proper physiological secretions. On strict and thorough pathological examinations, they should prove to be absolutely germ free and in a healthy condition.

The exact proportions selected from different glands is a matter of vital importance.

Another factor of great importance is the preservation and stability of these products. Absolute freshness is essential. The gelatine capsule is recognised as the best method of preserving freshness and therapeutic efficacy. The vital gland substances are completely sealed in the gelatine envelope, and all possibility of deterioration is eliminated.

SNAKES FOR HEALTH

Strangest of all military units among the Allied forces is the South African Medical Corps' Snake Catching Unit, which hunts in the kloof, the thick bush country and along the steamy river banks of the Eastern Transvaal near the Portuguese East African Border.

Three men total the force of this strange unit which hunts down and captures deadly snakes and vipers and brings them back alive to the snake farm at their headquarters in an abandoned jail. For the venom removed from these reptiles is used in the manufacture of antivenine snakebite serum.

All three men are experts at their job of catching and "milking" snakes, and those for which they search the most are the "yellow cobra" and the puff adder. For it is these most deadly of reptiles that yield the most valuable venom.

When the two corporals and one private comprising the unit have extracted, weighed and dried the venom they send it to the S. A. Institute for Medical Research, where the next steps are carried out under the supervision of Dr. E. Grasset, a pioneer of snakebite antidote in the first experiments at Pondicherry.

Selected horses are injected with a mixture of the two venoms—nerve poison and blood poison—in gradually increasing doses over a period of about seven months. Then the horses' blood is drawn off and scientifically centrifugated—that is, spun round at high speed.

That vital serum separates off and is carefully withdrawn from the solution and is then ready to go into hypodermic syringe outfits. These have helped to save many lives and are the answer to the Nazi seizure of the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

It is not only for the treatment of snakebites that the venom of snakes is prepared in the Komatipoort laboratories. For example, the crystals of the puff adder's dried venom find their way to the ends of the earth since they prove to be a very potent coagulant for the blood of haemophiliacs.

These unfortunate sufferers are afflicted with a dread bleeding disease that will not react to ordinary treatment. But now dried snake venom is saving many sufferers.

All the members of the unit are real experts and they handle deadly snakes with a confidence that is never at fault. They seriously affirm that if one is gentle and shows no fear, snakes are safe to handle and will never attack the human being who picks them up from the ground.

Certainly, they hunt their prey with nothing more formidable than an ordinary stick, and pick up the snakes with a sure grasp. But much practice has made them perfect, but theirs is not a practice that is likely to become generally popular.

TRIUMPHS OF TWO LONDON DOCTORS

Saved More Lives in Armies Than Anyone Else.

London, July 5: Lord Moran said last night that two doctors of St Mary's Hospital, London, had saved more lives in armies in the field than anyone else in the world—Almroth Wright, by his typhoid inoculations, and Prof. Fleming by the discovery of penicillin.

"I was called," he said, "to see a certain man, a great public figure, who was suffering from a form of meningitis from which in the past no one had ever recovered. We put penicillin into his brain and from that moment he never looked back. He is fit for work now and as good as ever."

Lord Moran was apparently referring to Lord Norman, former Governor of the Bank of England.

THE SCOURGE OF SYPHILIS AND GONORRHEA AND THE CURE.

From the Lancet. June 11, 1942.

Britain's figures of venereal disease have risen since the War. In 1940 the increase was 28 per cent over 1939. Proportionately this is better than the situation in World War I, when the V. D. rate doubled, but it is no occasion for complacency.

Treatment was woefully inadequate between 1914 and 1918.

The short courses of treatment then in use were responsible for tragic developments a generation later. If left untreated, syphilis has a tendency to clear up. This is disastrously deceptive. The disease may lie dormant for years, then suddenly break out again.

Syphilis is not a new disease. It has been treated a thousand different ways since 1493, when Dr. Diaz de Isla climbed aboard Columbus's ships at Palos to treat sailors loathsomely sick of the malady they had brought back from the West Indies.

Such things as China root and sarsaparilla have had their day, to say nothing of a medley of things like powdered serpents and even toad's spittle. It was not until March 1905, that science began to get at grips with syphilis.

In that year a bushy-bearded German named Fritz Schaudinn was ordered by Berlin's Imperial Health Office to make laboratory tests of a germ which was suspected of causing not only small pox, but the great pox. He got positive results, named the germ "the pale horror" because it could scarcely be seen, even under a microscope.

Another discovery in 1907 brought August von Wassermann's fixation test, which to this day is the doctor's quickest, most practical test for the disease: Three years later Paul Ehrlich made the discovery which beat syphilis down from astronomical figures to something within reasonable understanding. This was "606"—salvarsan.

In 1938, the new and improved formula of Dr. Pierre De Sadalan, made its appearance, that clinches the fight even in long-standing cases.

The rate of cures in primary cases is 86 per cent and in secondary cases 81 per cent, every cure is complete and permanent.

It is the best treatment and is convenient and absolutely safe to use.

Quick disappearance of symptoms often inclines the sufferer to believe he is cured, and he stops treatment with tragic results.

In its primary stage syphilis is not painful; the secondary stage includes a rash, which may cover the entire body. Loss of hair in spots over the scalp is common. The third and fourth stages can be anything from heart trouble to general paralysis and insanity.

Syphilis is generally regarded as the aristocrat of diseases, but gonorrhoea is considered a social disgrace. More prevalent in its ravages, but far less horrible in effect, it has been completely conquered by modern medicine.

The "MAGIC BULLET" in gonorrhoea's treatment is a Mixture and Injection, made to the formula of Dr. Edouard Pavy, the eminent specialist in venereal disease. This is the finest treatment and always effects a permanent cure.

With an Idea and Determination...
HE REVOLUTIONISED MEDICINE!

In 1889 Professor Charles Edouard Brown-Sequard, the famous scientist, made his epoch-making discovery, when he administered to himself glandular extract in his laboratory in Paris. To the amazement of himself and other physicians, the experiment proved a great success and a new chapter was opened in the modern book of therapeutics.

His life was a great one....most of it spent in a littered laboratory conducting ceaseless experiments. Never did a man work so hard—and succeed so brilliantly!

Professor Brown-Sequard's discovery is mentioned in authoritative medical books on the subject.

The harnessing of physical and chemical forces, which has produced our modern rapidity of travel and communication; steam, electric power, telegraphy, and the conquest of the air, affect our lives profoundly. And yet it may well be that biological knowledge and its many applications to the control and cure of disease and, above all, its elimination and prevention, have done far more to lighten the burden under which mankind struggles and to raise the level of civilization.

The great progress of medical science and the rapid strides it has made in the last hundred years have saved countless lives, prolonged and alleviated many others, and given us all a better chance of expanding what personal talents we have and of making the best of our time.

Humanity is beginning to see how to live.

All this is due to those men—Benefactors of Mankind—who have elucidated for us the immutable laws which underlie our functions. By no means the least of these was the immortal discoverer of Gland Therapy—Prof. Brown-Sequard, the famous French Scientist, for it is not difficult to see how he provided a sure basis on which modern science could build with confidence and success.

Although many lives have passed in the contemplation of Nature, attempting with infinite patience to solve the problems which she presents in such profusion, few philosophers have succeeded in making such a fundamental and far-reaching discovery as that of the function of the human glands.

It is not too much to say that enunciation of this principle revolutionised medicine and set it firmly upon a rational footing. So much was made clear and so many vistas were opened that it would seem that this conception was a lever powerful enough to set in motion those trains of scientific experiment and research which have brought us to our present state of knowledge and, still gathering speed and power, lead us confidently to hope for yet wider and deeper understanding of natural laws, in particular those which govern the great mystery of Life itself.

Gland Therapy is no myth. Some of the highest medical authorities in Europe and America believe in the curative efficacy of gland treatment for sexual weakness and other ailments.

DISCOVERY OF NEW CHOLERA VACCINE

Provides Immunity With One Dose

Conclusive Tests to be Made in India

New York. June 23: An important new medical discovery, a direct cholera vaccine which provides immunity with one dose instead of the normal 3 doses will very soon get its first conclusive practical test in areas of India recently affected by famine, it is disclosed here. Mr. J. Edgar Rhoads, President of the newly formed American Relief for India, Inc., announced that his organisation was rushing out supplies of the new medicine to American Quaker relief workers in Bengal, where a cholera epidemic is reported to be claiming 100 lives weekly.

Six teams, capable of inoculating thousands of persons daily, will dispense the vaccine, which is expected to prove superior in strength, as well as in other qualities, to other methods. Materials for its manufacture are said to be available almost anywhere, and it is also reported to be possible to manufacture it quickly, at the scene of the epidemic, without the skill of technicians—a fact which it is hoped, will permit of the inoculation of the entire area affected, especially the environs of Calcutta.

Dr Robert K. Jennings, of the Biochemical Research Foundation of the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, and the discoverer of the vaccine, is awaiting news from India, that he may leave immediately to help to develop the vaccine's use, as so far only laboratory tests have been made, and India is expected to prove whether such tests stand up in practice.

MEDICAL HUMOUR

Expert Diagnosis

A woman went to see a doctor. "Doctor," she exclaimed loudly, bouncing into the room, "I want you to say frankly what's wrong with me."

He surveyed her from head to foot.

"Madam," he said at length, "I've just three things to tell you. First, your weight wants reducing by nearly 50 pounds. Secondly, your beauty would be improved by freer use of soap and water. And, thirdly. I'm an artist; the doctor lives on the next floor."

Another Problem

A farmer visited his son's college.

Watching students in a chemistry class he was told they were looking for a universal solvent.

OR The Doctor's Funnybone

"What's that?" asked the farmer.
"A liquid that will dissolve anything."
"That's a great idea," agreed the farmer.
"When you find it, what are you going to keep it in?"

Business First

Doctor: "There goes the only woman I ever loved."

Nurse: "Why don't you marry her?"

Doctor: "I can't afford to. She's my best patient."

One by One

"When I was a boy," said a gray-haired physician, who was in a reminiscent mood, "I wanted to be a soldier but my parents persuaded me to study medicine."

"Oh, well," consoled his sympathetic neighbor, "such is life. Many a man with wholesale ambitions has to content himself with a retail business."
