OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Asylum Press Almanac, Directory, and Compendium of Intelligence for 1893.

Asylum Press Pocket Almanac and General Directory for 1893.

Asylum Press Sheet Almanac, 1893.

These publications, both in the amount and the nature of the information they contain, reflect great credit on the Lawrence Asylum Press and its energetic Superintendent, Mr. G. W. Taylor. Nothing is better calculated to show the progress that is being made in the City and Presidency of Madras than the increasing bulk of the large Almanac, to which in the last two years more than a hundred pages have been added. The only thing in it that is distinctly on the down-grade is the exchange table, but for this we can hardly hold the Press responsible. We shall hope that in the year on which we have just entered it will not be found necessary to use the first six or seven pages of this table.—Madras Christian College Magazine, 10th January 1893.

The Asylum Press Almanac.—We have the pleasure of acknowledging, with many thanks, the receipt of this admirable Almanac and Compendium of Intelligence for 1893, and we say, at once, that it is excellent and, as far as our experience goes, absolutely necessary as an adjunct to the study-table of all who have business relations of very considerable magnitude with the inhabitants of the Madras Presidency. That it is used also in England is proved by the fact that when we were appointed to a Chaplaincy on the Madras Ecclesiastical Establishment, and were anxious to learn something of the Presidency to which we had been appointed, we were given, by the Secretary of the London Institution, a copy of the Lawrence Asylum Press Almanac, from which we learned all that we desired to know. The fact that the book bears the imprimatur of Mr. G. W. Taylor is a sufficient guarantee of its excellence, and of the workman-like way in which the volume has been produced. The type is good and clear, and the arrangements of the various parts, of which there are no less than 12, is intelligible and lucid. The whole book is most useful, and will, we doubt not, be found a daily convenience to all those who possess it. Part viii, Ecclesiastical, is, of course, the part which most interests us; the information which it gives is most valuable, and full of matters of interest and importance. It contains a list of the Churches and Chapels in the Presidency town with the date of the consecration or erection of the Churches, together with full particulars of the Clergy, Lay Trustees, hours of service, &c. A table of lessons for Sundays and Holy days will be found to be useful, as will also the detailed list of the Services of Chaplains. The more important Government orders relating to the Ecclesiastical Department are printed in full, and there is hardly a point in connection with the Ecclesiastical needs of the diocese for which one would search in vain. We have examined the book in considerable detail, and we have nothing but praise to award as the result of our examination. We offer our warm congratulations to Mr. Taylor on the result of his labour, and we trust that the invaluable book which he has compiled with so much skill and talent, and with such commendable toil, will find its place in every study and office in the Presidency.—Bellary Magazine, 1st February 1893.

The Lawrence Asylum Press Almanacs.—We have received from the Lawrence Asylum Press their Almanacs for 1893. As usual, there are three varieties, the large almanac, the pocket almanac, and the sheet almanac. All are admirably got up, and contain a great deal of information. The Retrospect for 1892 in the large edition gives a comprehensive review of the events of the year. Both the large and the pocket editions contain a map of Madras and list of residents, and the latter includes spaces for a diary and memoranda. The sheet almanac is of a very convenient size, and neatly arranged.—Madras Times, 6th January 1893.

The Lawrence Asylum Annuals.—The Almanac, more properly designated a tome, the handy pocket vade mecum and the well known calendar fully maintain their standard of excellence. The retrospect, forming a little history in itself of the principal events of the past year, is compiled with that fidelity to detail and accuracy which has distinguished its predecessors. Regarding the general contents they are too well known to need recapitulation here. It will suffice to remark that information is afforded on nearly every conceivable subject. One addition we should like to see made if considered generally advisable. We allude to a street directory. It goes without saying that, especially in Madras, the compilation would be attended with considerable difficulty, but if this could be surmounted we are of opinion that the departure would further enhance the usefulness of this well-known publication.

The pocket edition of the more exhaustive work is in such general use that more than a passing reference appears unnecessary. It will probably suffice to say that it fulfils its mission in each and every respect, containing much useful information affecting matters, a knowledge of which is indispensable to one and all. Both the Almanac and Pocket Book are furnished with a map of Madras, drawn to scale and accurate in every respect. The Sheet Calendar is got up in the usual well known style. With reference to the letter-press and general get up it only remains to be said that the Lawrence Asylum Press fully maintains its well-earned reputation for fidelity to detail and outturn.—The Madras Advertiser, 7th January 1893.

* The Asylum Press Almanac, Directory and Compendium of Intelligence for 1893. No. xcii. Madras: Printed and Published at the Lawrence Asylum Press, by G. W. Taylor, pp. 1236 and Appendix. Calico bound Rs. 6.

The Madras Asylum Almanacs.—The Madras Asylum Almanacs for 1893 have reached us: the large handsome volume, entitled "The Asylum Press Almanac and Directory and Compendium of Intelligence"; the "Pocket Almanac and General Directory"; and the Sheet Almanac. All these are very familiar to all the dwellers in this Presidency. It has been our pleasing duty to praise each issue as it comes out year after year for many years past, and we have that duty to perform again. The "Compendium" is a compendium indeed: it has been built up upon a foundation of an accurate knowledge of what people want in the way of an Annual, until it is hard to say that it lacks anything. It is as near perfection as any work of the kind can be, both in contents and in get-up. It is a marvel of accuracy and good workmanship. The Pocket Almanac is an excellent publication,—a good and useful companion to an office man, and also to a man who has to move about the country. The Sheet Almanac is an old familiar wall reference, well fitted for office and for home.—Bangalore Spectator, 8rd January 1893.

The Asylum Press Annuals.—With the advent of the New Year, Mr. W. Taylor, the popular and enterprising Superintendent of the Lawrence Asylum Press, Madras, has presented us with three annuals, the Asylum Press Almanac, Directory and compendium of Intelligence, the Pocket Almanac and the Sheet Calendar. Year after year the Directory is growing larger and larger, and the present number is replete with information of every kind. The printing and binding will hold their ground with the best works turned out in England. The Pocket Almanac maintains its old reputation, and so does the Sheet Calendar. These publications, will, as usual, effect a ready and speedy sale.—Daily Post, 4th January 1893.

The Asylum Press Annuals.—Mr. Taylor of the Asylum Press has sent us the A. P. Almanac and Pocket Almanac. The former contains an exhaustive retrospective survey of the year 1892, besides the usual information, which furnishes at once very pleasant reading, and a standing reference for future use. The Pocket Almanac contains a vast amount of intelligence on all sorts of useful subjects compressed into a pocket book, with blank Memoranda, Cash Account, and Engagement pages. Like all the work turned out by the Asylum Press, the printing, binding, and general get-up, leaves nothing to be desired. We are glad to notice a greatly enlarged directory of Travancore and Cochin.—Western Star, 4th January 1893.

.... Now comes the Lawrence Asylum Press Almanac, last by no means least. We need not expend many words on an Annual which is a familiar friend. It is a vast store-house of useful miscellaneous information contained in a goodly volume bound and printed in its usual first-class style by the Asylum Press. It contains as usual a Map of Madras and an interesting review of the dead year, both of which are its standing features. The man who does not possess it may be looked upon as out of the world, so essential is the information it gives to all the busy workers in it. We heartily thank the publishers for thinking of us.—Law. Times, 25th January 1893.
